U.N. condemns Israel's bombing on PLO base

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — With the United States abstaining, the Security Council adopted a compromise resolution Friday that condemned Israel's bombing of PLO headquarters in Tunisia as an act of aggression, but did not threaten Israel with sanctions.

The vote was 14-0 on the resolution that also upheld Tunisia's right to appropriate reparations as a result of the loss of human life and material damage.

Unlike previous drafts, the final version of the resolution did not make an outright demand that Israel pay the damages, nor did it threaten the Jewish state with possible sanctions if it repeated such attacks.

Israeli Ambassador Benjamin Netanyahu, addressing the council before the vote, warned that "passage of this resolution would be a victory for terrorism" and a "profound setback in the war against terrorism."

"We in Israel shall not accept it," Netanyahu declared.

Tuesday's raid, carried out 1,500 miles from Israel in a suburb of the Tunisian capital, claimed at least 61 Palestinians and 12 Tunisian lives, according to the reports from the area.

Israel contended it had carried out a "surgical" air strike on the headquarters of the Palestine Liberation Organization where hundreds of acts of terrorism had been "initiated, planned, organized and launched," including last week's slaying of three Israelis aboard a yacht anchored at a marina in Larnaca, Cyprus.

Labib Terzi, said that the air raid was "another manifestation of state terrorism" and vowed that the Palestine Liberation Organization would continue its struggle against Israel "until we end the occupation of our country."

Terzi repeated the PLO's charge that the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean had provided radar assistance to the Israeli jets involved in the raid and had jammed Egyptian radar to prevent its monitoring of the raiders. He also accused the United States of allowing Israeli tanker planes to take off from "some U.S. bases in the Mediterranean" and of providing Israel with satellite photos of the target area.

U.S. Ambassador Vernon Walters denied that the United States had any foreknowledge of the raid or had participated in it.

"I have listened to a cascade of anti-American rhetoric accusing us of everything under the sun, except the recent earthquake in Mexico, and I'm surprised that I haven't heard my country blamed for that," said Walters, who is presiding over the council this month.

In explaining his abstention, Walters said, "Despite our deep and abiding friendship for the Tunisian government and people, my government cannot support this resolution disproportionately placing all blame for this latest round of the rising spiral of violence in the Middle East onto only one set of shoulders while

State trooper leaps aboard runaway boxcars, sets brakes

Haire
Trooper David Haire, 38, managed to set the brakes and stop the box cars after the crushed car had been dragged about a mile. One of the crash victims later died.

"I saw them coming at me but it was hard to say how fast," Haire said after Thursday's accident in the Detroit suburb of Northville. "And I saw the man waving at me out of his window and he seemed to be shouting, but I couldn't hear what."

"I ran up as fast as I could and at the right moment I reached out and leaped for the ladder on the lead car

"I don't remember if it hurt or not but when I grabbed it, it just seemed to pull me right aboard."

Haire said he found a wheel that looked like it might work the brakes, and began turning it.

"It took a while, but we started slowing down and coming to a halt," he said.

The boxcars, belonging to Chessie Railroad, apparently broke away at a railyard in Novi west of Detroit and rolled downhill about five miles before being stopped. Investigators estimated the cars reached 30-40 mph as they rolled through several crossings.

The freight cars rumbled through a busy crossing at Seven Mile Road and slammed into two cars, knocking one aside but dragging along one belonging to George Yokich and his wife Calene, both 68, said Trooper David O'Dell.

Haire said he was in his patrol car when he spotted the runaway cars dragging the Detroit couple's vehicle. He said the Yokichs' car was on its side, wedged under the lead freight car which was loaded with auto parts.

He said he raced after the cars because he knew they were headed for an overpass "and I was afraid the automobile would fall off the tracks there and hit the street below."

Haire began a four-day leave after the accident, which he called "the worst experience" of his 12 years as a state policeman.

"I don't know how he was able to do it all," said Sgt. Leonard R. Gorsetski. "I'm very proud to have him as a Michigan state trooper."

Chessie general foreman H.J.

Bowles said the railroad would investigate how the cars rolled out of the railyard.

Mrs. Yokich died after being cut from the crushed car. Her husband was in stable condition Friday at St. Mary's Hospital in Livonia, hospital spokesman Audrey McConachie said. She said Yokich was being treated for contusions and tested in case of more serious injury.

The driver of the car that was pushed aside at the crossing was treated and released, O'Dell said.

Midland following overtime law, official says

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Although city and county governments have been given an extra month to comply with the Fair Labor Standards Act and pay overtime to its employees rather than give compensatory time off, Midland's city officials changed their policy during the summer to comply with the law.

Assistant City Manager Mike McGregor said the overtime provision in the act had applied only to private industry. But the case of Garcia vs. San Antonio Transit Authority was taken to the U.S. Supreme Court, which ruled the law applies also to government employees.

Originally, the law was to become effective Oct. 15, but the U.S. House voted Wednesday to delay that until Nov. 15. Some Republican congressmen said they are trying to get Congress to pass a bill that would overturn the high court's ruling.

The complaint by numerous government officials has been the additional employee pay that will have to be tacked onto the budget, and the fact the Supreme Court said it would be retroactive to April 15.

According to a report by the Texas Municipal League, the city of Midland will have to put out another $50,000 a year. Odessa is listed as putting out another $200,000 from Oct. 15, 1985 through Oct. 15, 1986. Abilene is expected to pay out $100,000 extra for fiscal year 1986.

U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, who represents Midland in his 21st District, unsuccessfully submitted an amendment to a Department of Labor appropriation which would have exempted state and local governments from having to pay the overtime wages.

"Because enforcement of the court ruling will be retroactive to April 15, it's going to result in huge back pay liabilities," he said, "and many local governments may have to dip into cash reserves to come up with the money. In order to meet future overtime pay requirements, large local tax increases will be needed."

The State of Texas has estimated its overtime costs will amount to $20 million.

McGregor said the city's employees are divided into exempt and non-exempt categories. To be judged non-exempt, a person must make at least $250 a week or $13,000 a year and supervise at least two other persons. Personnel Director David Hunter said Midland hires 970 persons with 715 classified as non-exempt.

Prior to the law, said McGregor, city officials had allowed the employee to take comp time later. Although he's not had any complaints about the overtime pay instead of comp time, McGregor said, "I would say the employees hated to give up the comp time. It was flexible for the employee and the supervisor."

The law has forced supervisors to watch their employees closer, he said, and try to keep the amount of overtime down. If a particular area shows a continuous amount of over-

FCC OKs AT&T, Bell companies to have long-distance discounts

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. on Friday was granted new flexibility in offering consumers discount long-distance pricing options.

The Federal Communications Commission voted 4-0 to allow AT&T and the local Bell operating companies to develop discount packages for interstate long-distance calling if they can show the plans pay for themselves.

The commission had been insisting that all optional plans also absorb a portion of a company's general costs of offering long-distance service. The companies will be required to demonstrate only that revenues will increase and that customers who don't use the plan do not face rate increases or lose rate reductions because of the optional plans.

The commission said if an optional plan loses money, it will come out of profits and will not be made up by customers not using the plan.

FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler said the order would increase "the ability of AT&T to compete on a fair basis through the offering of price cuts to its subscribers."

Because the rules are more specific, proposals can be drafted by the companies faster and won't take as long for the FCC to consider. AT&T officials now say the new rules will make it possible for them to get plans in place in 45 to 60 days.

The most recent AT&T optional plan took eight months for the commission to consider before rejecting it.

AT&T's long-distance competitors are not required to get FCC approval for rate changes.

The regulated phone companies hope to increase overall revenues by using the discounts to induce customers to make more phone calls.

The rules require that all customers be offered the plans to make sure rural users, who cost more to serve, will benefit from competition for long-distance business.

Rescuers say they heard boy's voice

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Rescuers said a boy they believed has been trapped for 15 days beneath concrete and steel rubble from a killer earthquake called out a single word Friday as they tunneled toward him.

But Mexico City Police Chief Gen. Ramon Mota Sanchez, who had visited the scene in the afternoon, questioned that account.

He said there was "a series of noises that the rescuers considered to be from the child." But when he was asked if there had been voice contact he said, "There has not."

Jorge Negrete, a coordinator of the rescue effort, had said earlier that when workers asked the boy at 10:45 a.m. if he was there, the child responded, "Si." ("Yes").

Rescuers said they believe the boy is 9-year-old Luis Ramon Navarrete Maldonado, who was at home in his apartment with his grandfather, Luis Maldonado, 57, when the three-story building collapsed in the Sept. 19 quake.

They said they believe only the boy is alive. The workers have been tunneling toward him since Sunday, guided by occasional taps, but say they don't know exactly where he is.

Negrete said workers discovered a cistern in the rubble Friday and believed water from the cistern may be trickling down to the boy, buried under 30 feet of rubble in a patio area of the colonial building near the National Palace.

Family members, including the boy's parents, paternal grandfather and cousins, maintained a constant vigil at the site.

Young soccer players from the family's hometown of Chilcoapan brought a 2 1/2-foot stuffed yellow lion to the site Thursday. The toy bore a ribbon that read, "The soccer players of Chilcoapan wait for you, Luis."

A Miami, Fla., rescue team that had returned home Tuesday came back Friday with equipment including a heat detector they hoped might help locate the boy by tracing the heat from his body.

Raul Chavez of the Metro Dade Fire and Rescue Squad said the four team members would make an initial assessment "and then we're going to get our gear...We're going to find out where the weak points are."

"We'll check the tunnels out and then we'll get the equipment."

He said the squad members had not confirmed any signs of life in their brief time at the scene, but they were told by others that tapping and a very faint voice were heard. The squad had checked the site before it left Tuesday, because it had been told about the possibility the boy and his grandfather were there. But at that time, no signs of life were detected, Chavez said.

U.S. Ambassador John Gavin visited the site and offered further American assistance in the search.

President Miguel de la Madrid told the nation Thursday night that reconstruction of the shattered capital must begin immediately.

"We still have not completed the emergency stage, but we must immediately begin with national reconstruction," he said in the nationally televised speech.

Rescue squads from the Mexican Red Cross and the government oil monopoly Pemex and a team of Algerian earthquake rescue specialists joined in tunneling toward the boy.

Rescue workers said they made periodic contacts with the boy through the night, as they shouted to him and heard tapping noises in response.

Oscar Pardo, chief of the Red Cross team, said one such contact was made at 3:30 a.m.

"We yelled, 'Monchito, answer our cries. Give four knocks.' He gave four knocks," Pardo said.

He said they tried again at 4:10 a.m. but were not sure if they heard knocks. Another try at 5:30 a.m. drew no response because "probably he went to sleep," Pardo said.

"We managed to drill a little hole through the rubble and we believe it is bringing some air," he said.

Pardo said rescue crews were concentrating on three of five tunnels in the rubble.

Workers moved slowly for fear of collapsing the tunnels. For the same reason, they worked by hand and with picks and shovels rather than heavy equipment. Blowtorches were used to get through pieces of steel.

The boy's father, Mauricio Alberto Navarrete Lopez, said during the night that rescuers were getting closer.

"In the beginning we had to cup our hands and shout. Now it is not necessary," he said.

"We asked if he was a child or an adult. Two knocks would be an adult, one knock would be a child and he responded he was a child," the father said.

Dr. Emiliano Murillo Navarrete, a cousin of the boy, said he doubted the grandfather was still alive.

"There are no signs of life from him, only the boy," the doctor said.

"It is probable he (the boy) is still alive," he said. "If there is water, and it is probable there is water, and if there is oxygen and he can have a little movement of the body, he could live for a month."

De la Madrid did not announce any change in the official death toll, which has stood at 4,600 all week. But the newspaper El Universal, which is keeping its own count, said more than 8,000 people were dead.

Astronomers may have spotted most distant galaxy

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A team of astronomers said Friday they were just playing around with a combination of light filters when they found what may be the most distant galaxy ever seen, more than 14.5 billion light years from Earth.

The image spotted on July 18 appears to be 2.3 billion light years farther away than the previous record holder, said University of California-

Berkeley astronomy professor Byron Spinrad.

"It may not sound like much, but it's substantial," said the leader of a National Science Foundation-funded, 10-year program analyzing light from distant galaxies and "looking at the universe when it was young."

A light year is the distance light travels in one year, so light just now reaching Earth from that faraway galaxy started out around 14.5 billion years ago.

"Eventually, we're going to get back to the time where galaxies are just forming. I don't think we're there yet," Spinrad said.

He predicted it will take another year of research to fully assess the discovery, and decide whether they found a new galaxy or some other distant object.

Details of the discovery at UC's Lick Observatory on Mount Hamilton above San Jose will be published in the December edition of the Astrophysical Letters professional journal.

Spinrad said the find was something of a fluke.

Three cars burglarized

From Staff Reports

A string of three burglaries were reported to the Midland Police Department on Friday.

Teddy Ashley of Stanton reported the burglary of a $75 tool box and assorted tools worth $400 from his vehicle parked at 720 West Storey. The incident occurred between Thursday and Friday, according to reports from the Midland Police Department.

Kim Kridler, 601 W. George, reported to the police department the burglary of a $250 car stereo and $50 speakers from her auto. She said the incident occurred at her residence.

Edward Bolger, 2808 Sentinel, also reported the auto burglary of a $300 car stereo and $150 worth of miscellaneous property from his auto on the 1000th block of Ohio.

In other law enforcement reports a Midland-area resident notified authorities about his truck not being returned after lending it on Sept. 23.

Jack Mayhem, of Interstate 20 and 1788, reported his 77 Ford truck valued at $900 stolen after the borrower did not return it Tuesday.

also not holding at fault those responsible for the terrorist acts which provoked it."

Arab and Soviet sources said a U.S. veto was averted after Tunisia agreed to a number of amendments in the more strongly worded original draft. On past occasions, the United States has voted for condemnation of Israeli actions, such as the 1981 bombing of a nuclear reactor in Iraq and the incursions into Beirut in violation of a September 1982 truce.

Tunisian Foreign Minister Beji Caid Essebsi, whose government had requested the urgent council meeting, told reporters after the vote, "This (resolution) was the absolute minimum and we expected more from the United States as a great power."

A well-placed Arab diplomat, speaking privately, said he had been told by Americans that Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba had ordered his ambassador in Washington to "pack his bags" in case of an American Security Council veto.

Instead of condemning Israel itself, the final version of Friday's resolution "vigorously condemns the act of armed aggression perpetrated by Israel against Tunisian territory in flagrant violation of the Charter of the United Nations, international law and norms of conduct."

In the resolution, U.N. member states are urged to request "to take measures to dissuade Israel" from repeating such a raid. An earlier draft had used the word "deter" instead of "dissuade."

Also dropped from the resolution's preamble was reference to a heavy toll among "Palestinian civilians."

Before the vote, the Tunisian foreign minister repeated his charge that the raid was "a criminal act that nothing can justify."

The target, he said, was "not a military staff headquarters but a clearly defined urban area." He said Tunisia had not become a "terrorist base."

In explaining his abstention, Walters said the United States deplores violence "from whichever quarter."

But he added, "We strongly support the principle that states subjected to continuous terrorist acts may respond with appropriate use of force to defend itself against further attacks. This is an aspect of the inherent right of self-defense recognized in the United Nations Charter. We support this principle regardless of attacker and regardless of victim."

"It is the responsibility of each state to take appropriate steps to prevent persons or groups within its sovereign territory from perpetrating such acts."

The commission gave as examples pricing options that might offer long-distance calls priced the same, regardless of distance, or blocks of calling time at reduced costs.

The companies would not be allowed to abandon traditional long-distance rates priced by length, distance and time of day.

J. R. Billingsley, AT&T's senior vice president for federal regulatory matters, said, "Customers were clearly the winners today. They have paid a price in the breakup of AT&T, it's about time they start seeing some of the benefits of competition."

"Unless AT&T, which is the largest long-distance company, is allowed to compete," Billingsley said in a statement, "its customers will not receive the benefits that a competitive marketplace is supposed to offer. Many people do not have access to services offered by AT&T's competitors and even when they do, the situation exists that without effective competition from AT&T, competitors' prices are higher than they need to be."

Fowler said the order was crafted to rule out "predatory pricing," that is temporarily cutting prices so low that competition would be forced out of business.

GTE-Sprint and MCI Communications, Inc., AT&T's biggest long-distance competitors, both said it was difficult to comment on the FCC's action prior to reading the final document, which will not be released for several days.

However, the Sprint statement, while acknowledging that some concerns of the company had been addressed in the order, said, "Based on our initial understanding of the commissioners' discussion this morning, the order appears to contain provisions that will not contribute to the development of full effective competition in the long-distance industry."

Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee which has responsibility for telephone matters, was skeptical of the flexibility offered by the commission, and said the committee will watch to make sure benefits of competition in the long-distance industry are long-term ones.

"I do not want to see lower rates offered to one group of consumers at the expense of other consumers, particularly small and rural customers," he said.

Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., chairman of the House telecommunications subcommittee, said the commission action "seems to invite cross-subsidization and predatory pricing schemes."

Bandy, Stampley will perform

ODESSA — Moe Bandy and Joe Stampley bring their antics and song to Ector County coliseum's newly remodeled Building G beginning at 8 p.m. today. The show closes at 1 a.m. Sunday.

The building has a big dance floor and seating for 3,000. Tickets are priced at $8 in advance and $10 at the door. They may be purchased in Odessa at Luskey's Western Wear and in Midland at Wells Boots City.

The two country entertainers have just recently been given by CBS a Gold Album Award for their "Just Good Ol' Boys" album which surpassed 500,000 in record sales.

Kerrville man makes 2,000-mile cycle trip to promote hospices

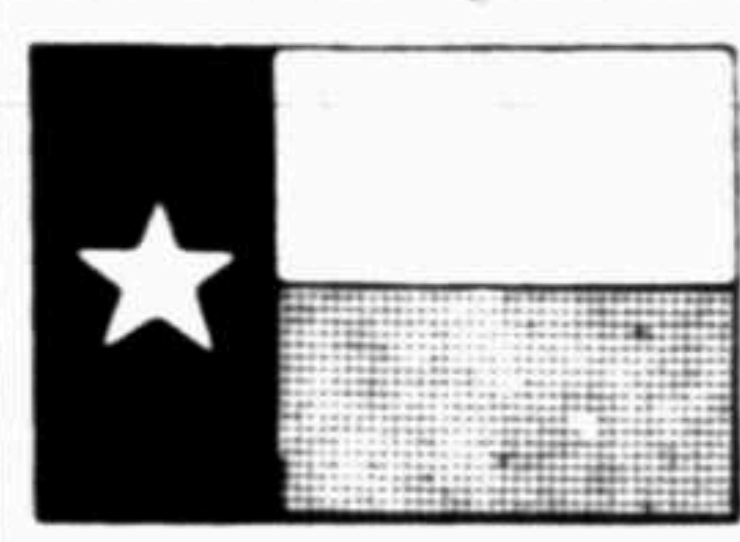

NEW YORK (AP) — The three flat tires, the severe rainstorms and even the broken leg couldn't keep Michael MacDougall from completing a 2,000-mile motorcycle trip from his home in Texas to Manhattan.

MacDougall has terminal brain cancer, and he made the trip to promote the hospice movement, which stresses death with dignity.

He left Kerrville, Texas, on Sept. 16 and reached the Cabrini Medical Center Hospice on East 19th Street on Thursday.

"At times I was down in the dumps and I wondered why I was doing this," said the 31-year-old Army veteran. "I had to remind myself that I love life too much to give it up."

MacDougall traveled on a self-designed three-wheel Harley Davidson with his crutches strapped to the back. He had broken a leg before starting the trip.

STATE

Larry Black, a friend, accompanied him on another motorcycle.

The trip was originally planned as a ride to see parts of the country he never saw," said Black. But it took on new meaning for MacDougall in April when doctors discovered he had a brain tumor. The tumor was removed in March and he underwent radiation therapy. Doctors have given him a prognosis of two years at the most to live.

However, MacDougall, who has had brushes with cancer in the past, doesn't believe the end is near. "I'm not planning on dying," said the 6-foot-2, 230-pound man, who has a red beard and mustache but is bald from radiation. "I'm a survivor and I'm going to fight this."

"I've seen too many people in hospitals give up," he added. "And I've seen how the hospice concept can help by letting terminally ill people stay home to be cared for by the people who care about them."

WASHINGTON — Not all taxes are all bad, according to Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin, who said Friday that the country's anglers and boaters are now seeing the benefits of federal taxes on their activities.

"A total of $125 million has been earmarked to enhance boating and fishing areas nationwide over the next year," said Wilson. That includes about $6 million for Texas.

The money comes through an Aquatic Resources Trust Fund created in 1984 by Congress with the active support of boating and fishing interests.

The fund, also called the "Wallop-Breaux Fund" after sponsors Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., and Rep.

John Breaux, D-Crowley, La., draws its income from an existing tax on new fishing and boating equipment as well as the federal tax on motorboat fuel.

Texas has more than two million anglers and close to one million boaters, Wilson said. "By supporting the tax on equipment and fuel each is helping to ensure a bright future not only for their sports but also for important lakes, rivers and coastal areas. It has been an honor to work with state and national boating and fishing leaders to make this program possible," he added.

Robert J. Kemp in the Austin regional office of the U.S. Department of the Interior's Fish and Wildlife Service, said the new money will be used in Texas to improve sport fish habitat and access to public waters, among other projects.

EARTHQUAKE HITS JAPAN

An earthquake registering 6.7 on the Richter scale hit the Tokyo area Friday morning. The arrows indicate the movement of the Philippine Plate which caused the quake.

AP Laserphoto Map

Two earthquakes hit Japan; 13 people hurt, no damage reported

TOKYO (AP) — Two earthquakes shook central Japan Friday, injuring 13 people and frightening millions who live in this region, which experiences hundreds of tremors a year.

There were no reports of damage. The second and greater quake, at 9:26 p.m. (8:26 a.m. EDT), registered 6.2 on the open-ended Richter scale and was centered 32 miles northeast of Tokyo in coastal Ibaraki prefecture, the Central Meteorological Agency said.

It rocked the vast metropolis for nearly a minute during the dinner hour.

The meteorological agency said that, according to a seven-point scale that measures quake intensity horizontally, the second quake was the strongest to hit Tokyo since 1929. (The Richter scale shows the energy released by an earthquake, as measured by the ground motion recorded on a seismograph.)

Kyodo News Service said 13 people were hurt, two of them seriously, in Tokyo. It gave no details.

There were scattered reports of people screaming and shouting as subways and high-speed intercity "bullet trains" abruptly halted. But traffic in downtown streets moved with its normal evening congestion, and most pedestrians seemed oblivious to the vibrations.

In rooftop restaurants, customers felt a series of sharp vertical jolts, followed by a swaying of buildings that caused hanging lamps to swing wildly. Waiters froze with trays of food and drink in their hands. Elevators in many buildings shut down automatically.

Some trains resumed service within an hour or two, but even early Saturday, anxious people chose instead to wait in long lines for taxis.

The first tremor, at 6:28 a.m. (5:28 p.m. EDT Thursday), registered 5.6

on the Richter scale, indicating a quake capable of causing considerable damage. But no damage was reported and the quake apparently went unnoticed by much of the sleeping populace.

The meteorological agency said it was centered beneath the Pacific off the Boso peninsula east of Tokyo.

Don Finley, a spokesman for the U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., reported a similar epicenter northeast of Tokyo for the second quake, but said it measured 5.8 on the Richter scale, considerably weaker than the Japanese agency's reading.

A quake measuring 6 or greater is considered capable of causing severe damage. Each increase of one on the Richter scale indicates a tenfold increase in ground motion.

Bill Gaither, 43, an American artistic designer living in Japan, said he was riding the "bullet train" from Nagoya to Tokyo when "the damn thing started doing the hula. It was like an angry giant hit the side of the car."

Gaither, originally from Ludlow, Ky., said the train coasted to a stop on a 100-foot-high trestle and the conductor announced there had been an earthquake, but "everything was all right."

He said train workers walked the tracks to check for damage before it continued to Tokyo at 12 mph.

"Dogs were barking and the windows and cupboards rattled terribly," Yukiko Mikami, a housewife, said in a telephone interview from Yokohama, 20 miles south of Tokyo.

New Tokyo International Airport at Narita, 40 miles northeast of the capital, was closed briefly while the runway was inspected for cracks, Japan Broadcasting Corporation (NHK) reported.

Mayor's wife reaches out to aid poor, underprivileged of Juarez

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Hortencia Barrio says she never thought a person could change so much in such a short time.

"Three years ago, I was committed just to taking care of my home, my children and my husband," she said recently. "Now, I am also committed to helping others and to making DIF projects work."

Mrs. Barrio and her husband, Ciudad Juarez Mayor Francisco Barrio Terrazas, work as a team.

She joined him in a recent hunger strike to protest alleged fraud in a congressional election and agreed to move their family to one of this city's outlying colonias to help residents.

Mrs. Barrio also has taken an active role as head of Desarrollo Integral de la Familia (DIF).

The agency, which can be described as the Ciudad Juarez version of the Texas Department of Human Services, always has been directed by a mayor's wife. But some have been more active than others, and Mrs. Barrio has brought under its wing the city's social services for the young and families, including a shelter for abused and abandoned children, a day care center and a reform school for youths age seven through 18.

DIF also oversees a school breakfast program, distribution of food packages to poor and community centers geared to improving family.

Mrs. Barrio said that though at first unexpected, the change in her life was bound to happen once her husband decided to run for mayor of this border city.

"Both of us made a commitment to God and to the people of Juarez to try our best to eliminate the corruption and the abuses of power of past administrations," she said. "The good thing is that some of the people also are changing. Whereas before few would risk their jobs to protest what was happening, many are doing so now. Some are even working with us."

Mrs. Barrio's husband was elected on the opposition National Action Party, or PAN, ticket two years ago. He is the first mayor to win that office in Ciudad Juarez from an opposition party. The Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, Mexico's ruling party, had controlled this city for more than 50 years.

In the beginning, the decision to buck the system was difficult, Mrs. Barrio said.

"When my husband was approached to run for mayor on the PAN ticket, I was more than apprehensive," she said. "I was afraid of what would happen. We knew winning the election was no problem. But would it be recognized by the federal government, and at what cost to us and to our family?"

The deciding factor in accepting the challenge was

"It was a matter of fighting now or leaving them a country in ruin for their future. The worst thing was to do nothing."

— Hortencia Barrio

their children, she said.

"It was a matter of fighting now or leaving them a country in ruin for their future," she said. "The worst thing was to do nothing."

But Mrs. Barrio said she still worries about how the changes in their lives will affect their children. She and her husband have four daughters, ages three, seven, nine and 11.

The children also have had many difficult experiences in the past two years, she said.

"God knows the fears and anguish they must have felt during the hunger strike and the months we lived in the colonia."

But those experiences also have been good for them, she said.

"They have learned to be more compassionate and to develop priorities other than those of material value," she said. "They also have come to understand that if you love your country, you have to work to improve it."

She said their move to the colonia was the only solution to what she called abuses by the "lideres," neighborhood bosses, of another opposition political party.

Those bosses were threatening to turn people out of their homes unless they paid protection money, Mrs. Barrio said.

"With us there, the people felt protected and secure enough to refuse to pay," she said.

Mrs. Barrio said the main problem in this city of more than 1 million people and the underlying cause of all other problems is the disintegration of the family unit.

She blames the economy and the rapid growth of the twin plant industry and its practice of hiring more women than men as among the culprits.

"By working outside the home, women forsake the family for that second income," she said. "Unfortunately, the salary they get is not enough to cover any of their needs. Yet, the children are left alone to fend for themselves or what is worse, to get into trouble."

Texan in Egypt receives bottled message from U.S.

TIoga, La. (AP) — Two Louisiana girls who launched a bottled message in the Gulf of Mexico said they received an answer from a Texas woman who found it while vacationing in Alexandria, Egypt.

Penny Bonnette, 13, and Sarah Barber, 10, were vacationing themselves in mid-June at Holly Beach, La., when they launched the bottle containing their names, ages, addresses, phone numbers and an explanation that it was an experiment to see how far the bottle would go and how long it would take to get a reply.

The response arrived Thursday via air mail from Zagazig, Egypt, in an envelope containing an Egyptian postcard signed by Anna Thibodeaux of Houston. It was postmarked Sept. 16 and said:

"Hi Penny and Sara: We found your letter in the bottle at the beach in Alexandria, Egypt in the Mediterranean Sea. Wow, what a surprise because we're from the USA — Houston, Tx. and have been to Holly Beach, La. often. Your friend, Anna Thibodeaux."

Penny said she and Sarah will try to contact Ms. Thibodeaux and intend to launch another bottled message next year from the same beach.

Connor said the money will be added to the county's general fund to pay for the "various parts of county government — the sheriff's office, clerks, tax assessor and jail."

Norbeck said the Brewster payment was the largest received by any Texas county.

Oil doesn't tee off golfers

GALVESTON (AP) — An oil exploration company plans to drill a well on the city's municipal golf course, but golfers aren't teed off since they'll be getting a new green.

The Galveston City Council granted the drilling permit after Mitchell Energy Corp., which owns the mineral rights to the course, agreed to put in the new green and two tee boxes before sinking the well.

Company officials assured golfers that they would be able to play 18 holes without interruption.

"We're tickled to death," said Albert Choate, president of the county Golf Association.

The company hopes to tap a reservoir that experts believe could produce up to $9 million worth of oil in the next seven years. The city could receive from $750,000 to $1.5 million in revenues, Mitchell officials estimated.

Fifth inmate has AIDS

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Texas prison doctors have confirmed a fifth inmate is being treated for the deadly disease AIDS.

The inmate contracted AIDS before he was sent to prison several weeks ago, said Dr. Michele McDermott, chief of the Texas Department of Corrections medical staff.

Four AIDS cases and four AIDS-related cases have been diagnosed within the state's prison system since August 1983.

Since 1984 four Texas prisoners have died from the disease, which destroys the body's immune system and leaves the victim vulnerable to infections and other diseases, including cancer.

County gets federal funds

ALPINE (AP) — Almost $300,000 in recent federal payments to Brewster County were provided in lieu of property taxes the county loses yearly because of Big Bend National Park, Brewster County Judge Tom Connor said.

A spokeswoman for the federal Bureau of Land Management, Murray Norbeck, explained that the payments are sent to counties each fall because the federal government pays no property taxes on federal land.

About 403,000 acres of national park land in Brewster County qualified the county for the payments, she said.

Donations coming in for FarmAid

DALLAS (AP) — FarmAid concert promoters say they have received thousands of telephone calls and letters and have raised $9 million so far in their efforts to help struggling farmers.

"It's still coming in," Jim Nicholls, executive vice president of PLC, The Media Corp., said Friday. "We'll make $10 million, there's no doubt about that."

As of Friday, $9 million had been donated to help farmers, Nicholls said.

Public service ads featuring Willie Nelson and other entertainers are being credited with an outpouring of mail and money to aid needy farmers. The ads are being broadcast on 260 television stations.

"What we're finding is whenever these go on the air, the needle is going right up and people are calling with donations," Nicholls said.

In addition to Nelson, Jessica Lange, Sissy Spacek, John Denver, Bill Cosby and several others stars appear on the public service ads.

Nicholls said concert promoters have received 400,000 calls and more than 50,000 letters since the Sept. 22 benefit concert. Many of the calls and letters included donations, while some are simply from concerned farmers and other people.

Although initially hoping to raise $50 million, promoters later scaled that figure back to what Nicholls called "a more realistic" $10 million.

Nelson's 14-hour concert at the University of Illinois football stadium featured more than 50 top rock, country and blues stars and attracted 78,000 fans.

Nurse advertises husband for sale, gets so many calls, prints retraction

WESTMINSTER, Md. (AP) — A woman who put her husband up for sale as a joke says she got about 60 telephone responses to her classified ad, some of them serious. Now she's printed a retraction.

"I had no idea we would have any reaction like this," said Louise Horner, 40, a nurse at a Baltimore area hospital.

The notice, "Husband for sale, cheap," appeared in the Carroll County Times for three days this week. It included the following description: "Comes complete with hunting and fishing equipment, one pair jeans, two shirts, boots, black Labrador retriever, and 50 pounds venison. Pretty good guy, but not home much from October to December and April to October. Will consider trade."

The volume of calls Mrs. Horner received prompted her to run the following ad in Friday's newspaper: "Retraction of husband for sale cheap, everybody wants the dog, not the husband."

Mrs. Horner said one woman told her she should not complain. The caller said her own husband was having an affair. She also heard from a woman who is raising her children alone without the financial and emotional support of a spouse.

But three-fourths of the phone calls were from people who got such a good laugh from the ad they wanted more information, Mrs. Horner said. "Many callers were laughing so hard you couldn't understand what they were saying," she said.

Her husband, Charles Horner, appreciated the joke, she said, noting he is used to searching for his annual Valentine's Day message in the classified ads.

Cranston wants Mexican oil for SPR

Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Sen. Alan Cranston (D-Calif.) Friday called on President Reagan to buy $1.5 billion in Mexican oil to be placed in the U.S. Strategic Petroleum Reserve (SPR).

Cranston said the purchase would give Mexico "vitaly needed economic assistance" and, at the same time, enhance U.S. national security by increasing the strategic oil supply.

Cranston, who is the Senate Democratic Whip, said there is a clear need for long term aid to Mexico, beyond the immediacy of the recent earthquake relief efforts.

The senator noted that the S.P.R. "will be of critical importance in an energy crisis" and said it is only a little more than half full now. "We need to fill it, and what better time than now when the price of oil is relatively low."

The U.S. has an existing agreement to buy Mexican oil for the reserve. This resolution would call on the president to increase the amount purchased in order to help Mexico's economic recovery.

Couple allegedly deprived animals

SPENCER, Mass. (AP) — A University of Connecticut veterinary medicine professor and his wife face charges of failing to give adequate feed to two dogs and a small herd of goats, a spokesman for a state animal agency says.

Dr. Harland W. Renshaw and his wife, Susan J. Renshaw, were each charged Wednesday in Spencer District Court with depriving the dogs and goats of necessary sustenance, according to Cpl. Richard LeBlond of the enforcement division of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

After a five-hour hearing, Judge Stan Strogoff released the couple on their own recognizance and moved the case to Oct. 23.

According to LeBlond, the Renshaws kept the animals on land they leased. Two beagles and three Irish setters were found in small cages in a horse trailer, he said.

Fruit, nut mixes being recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Illinois candy company is recalling fruit and nut mixes distributed nationwide because the products contain sulfite preservatives but do not carry a required warning label, the Food and Drug Administration said Friday.

The FDA said the mixes, being recalled by the Farley Candy Co. of Skokie, Ill., are sold in five-ounce cellophane packages under the "Really Natural" brand name and include "Fruit and Nut Mix" and "California Mix."

Some 17,000 of the retail packages were distributed nationwide, the FDA said, and an additional unknown quantity of treated mixes were distributed in 11-pound bulk containers.

Sulfite preservatives are not illegal, but packaged foods containing them must be specially labeled. Farley is relabeling the packages to note the presence of sulfites, the FDA said.

The label is intended to alert the estimated 500,000 to 1 million people in the country, most of whom are asthmatic, who are sensitive to sulfites. Sensitive people could suffer allergic reactions that, in severe cases, can result in suffocation.

Man dies from yellow jacket stings

WESTOVER, W. Va. (AP) — A city employee died after being stung about 10 times by yellow jackets as he installed equipment along a suburban road, officials said Friday.

Fred J. Dick, 43, of Morgantown died Thursday about 11 a.m., less than two hours after he was stung all over his body, said Westover Mayor Tom Chaplin.

The incident occurred as Dick and another worker attempted to install a mirror at a blind curve, Chaplin said. Dick had positioned a ladder next to the road in a spot that had just been cleared of brush by another worker.

"He stepped on the ladder, disturbed the yellow jackets in the ground, and that was it," Chaplin said.

Dick became nauseous and had trouble breathing, Chaplin said. An emergency medical team took him to Monongalia General Hospital, where he died.

Cease-fire silences guns in Tripoli

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (AP) — A cease-fire arranged by Iran silenced the heavy guns in Tripoli on Friday and halted a savage 19-day battle between Syrian-supported leftists and pro-Palestinian Moslem fundamentalists.

But bursts of automatic weapons fire and scattered rocket-propelled grenade blasts echoed in the devastated city. At least 515 people have been killed and more than 1,100 wounded since Sept. 15 in the battle for dominance among the rival militias.

Iran, an ally of both Syria and the fundamentalist Tawheed militia, stepped in to mediate a settlement. It brought Tawheed's leader, Sheikh Saeed Shaaban, out of Tripoli for talks in Damascus with Syrian officials.

The truce went into effect at 2 a.m. and the militia tanks and field artillery that had been pounding the city fell silent. More than a dozen cease-fires have been broken in Tripoli, and it was not immediately clear if the latest truce would succeed.

The nine-point cease-fire agreement was underwritten by President Hafez Assad of Syria, who has a strong voice in Lebanese affairs.

Tripoli remained isolated from the rest of Lebanon with Syrian troops and their militia allies poised around the port city, encircling fighters of the Tawheed Islamic, or Islamic Unification.

The gutted city was like a ghost town.

Edgy gunmen and shell-shocked civilians emerged from bunkers and basements.

Reporters who entered the city for the first time since the siege was imposed seven days ago, saw vast devastation, a hospital filled with hungry wounded and swarms of Moslem militants who said they were "ready to fight against the Syrians to the end."

In one street lay the bodies of a middle-aged couple apparently dragged out of their van and shot in the head.

At the crowded Islamic Hospital, the city's largest, at least 100 patients and wounded militiamen, many of them in beds set up in bloodstained corridors, waited to be evacuated by the International Red Cross.

"I don't know how they survived," said an ashen-faced surgeon. "We've had nothing to feed them but canned sardines and tuna fish for more than a week."

Municipal officials estimated that two-thirds of Tripoli's 850,000 population fled during the fighting. Those who stayed lived in shelters or joined Tawheed to stop the Syrian-backed thrust.

Black-scarved Tawheed fighters regrouped near the Crusaders citadel of St. Gilles vowing to crush the Syrians if they tried to enter the city as provided by the cease-fire agreement.

"They're lunatics if they think we'll ever surrender our weapons," said a young fighter, his left arm swollen from a shrapnel wound.

The latest round of fighting broke out in Tripoli on Sept. 15 between Tawheed and the Arabian Knights of the Syrian-backed Arab Democratic Party.

Tawheed's sympathizers in Beirut kidnapped four Soviets on Monday, seeking to force Moscow to exert pressure on Syria, its main Arab ally, to end the Tripoli conflict.

The kidnapers, members of the newly proclaimed Islamic Liberation Organization, killed one captive, Soviet cultural attaché Arkady Katkov, on Wednesday.

They threatened to execute the other three captives, commercial attaché Valery Mirikov, press attaché Oleg Spirin and embassy physician Nikolai Sversky, if the offensive was not halted.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Americans drinking less coffee, report indicates

LONDON (AP) — Promoters of coffee said Friday that Americans not only drink less of it than before, but prefer soft drinks.

The report by the London-based International Coffee Organization said all age groups in the United States drink less coffee now, but the decline is sharpest in the 20-29 age group, based on figures collected in the winter of 1984-85.

It said tea, soft drinks and fruit juices have gained from coffee's decline, and 30.9 percent of Americans now prefer tea compared with 24.7 percent in 1982.

For soft drinks the rise was from 32.6 percent in 1982 to 50.4 percent.

Americans who drink coffee consume 3.33 cups a day, compared with 4.17 cups in 1982. Per capita, that amounts to 1.83 cups daily against 3.12, said the organization, which began keeping records in 1950.

Garment workers protest

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — About 60 garment workers demonstrated for more than two hours Friday at the U.S. Embassy to protest a bill in Congress aimed at reducing U.S. textile imports.

"You Americans keep lending us money but now you're preventing us from earning the money with which to pay you back," Aida Alday, a leader of the garment workers, said in a speech.

Protesters carried signs denouncing Rep. Ed Jenkins, a Georgia Democrat who is a sponsor of the bill, and asking President Reagan to veto it.

A dozen riot police watched but took no action.

The protesters said more than half the nation's 114,000 textile and garment workers would lose their jobs if the bill became law.

The Philippines exported more than $19 million worth of textiles and garments in the first half of 1985, mostly to the United States.

Book details coup attempt

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The army issued a glossy booklet Friday that says its commander ordered the suppression of the attempted coup last month, and denounces rumors that he was involved in the insurrection.

Gen. Arthit Kamlangek, also armed forces commander, was visiting Sweden during the Sept. 9 takeover bid, and the booklet says he issued the order from there.

It accuses unidentified individuals "both in and outside Thailand" of seizing the opportunity to defame various institutions in the country, especially the military, by spreading rumors in various forms with the intention of twisting the truth."

The version of events outlined in the 68-page booklet does not basically differ from that given by the government and police. The military issued an ultimatum to rebel soldiers, and the takeover bid collapsed within 12 hours. But five people were killed and 60 were wounded in two shootouts near army compounds in downtown Bangkok.

According to national police chief Gen. Narong Mahanond, 39 suspects have been arrested on charges of sedition. They include former and current top military officers, and former prime minister Kriangsak Chomanand.

Weekend to be sunny

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders are in store for a sunny and mild weekend with a high today in the low 70s, according to the National Weather Service. Winds today will be northeast 5 to 15 mph, becoming southeasterly by the afternoon.

This evening and Sunday are also expected to be fair with a low in the upper 40s and a high in the mid 80s. Friday's high of 69 degrees was 27 degrees below the record high of 96 degrees in 1937. Friday's low of 42 degrees missed the record low by 6 degrees. The record low for this date is 36 degrees in 1932.

STATE

A cold front raced through the state Friday and by late afternoon had pushed to the coastal plains with winds gusting at about 20 mph to 30 mph.

A mild airmass behind the front kept temperatures in the 70s and 80s in the south and in the 60s in the Panhandle and plains. Skies were clear north of the front.

Amarillo was the state's cool spot at 59 degrees while Laredo was warmest with 97, the National Weather Service said.

In the forecast, today should be fair with highs in the 70s and low 80s with lows Saturday night in the 40s and 50s in northern Texas.

West Texas should be mostly fair through Sunday with Saturdays highs in the mid 80s in the Big Bend region to the upper 60s in the Panhandle. Lows should be in the mid 40s in the far west and in the north, but the lowlands of the southwest lows should be in the 50s.

Today should be sunny, windy and cooler in South Texas with highs in the 70s and 80s. Tonight should be fair and cool with lows in the 50s and 60s and in the 40s in the Hill Country.

NATION

Strong winds buffeted much of the country Friday, as high winds that accompanied thunderstorms in South Carolina killed a 9-year-old girl when a house trailer overturned.

Thunderstorms were scattered over the nation's midsection, while the south Atlantic coast received rain.

Wind gusts over 50 mph hit several Kansas communities, with wind gusts around 60 mph reported in Nebraska.

In South Carolina, the girl was killed when she was pinned under furniture in a mobile home that was blown about 30 feet and overturned, said Clarendon County Coroner Randy Stephens.

A few strong thunderstorms developed over north central Illinois, with small hail reported at Rockford.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Crane, Upton, Reagan, Greenock, Andrews, Garza, Howard, Martin, Borden and Dawson: Today sunny, not so cool and high in lower 70s. Wind southeasterly 5 to 15 mph tonight and Sunday: fair, warmer, low upper 40s and high mid 80s.

Tom Green, Sterling, Irion and Coke: Today, sunny, not so cool and high mid 70s. Wind southeasterly 5 to 15 mph tonight and Sunday: mostly fair, warmer, low near 50 and high mid 80s.

Bulldogs find Warbirds are no fairy tale

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

If all the good fairy tales were written in 1985, the Big Bad Wolf would have eaten Little Red Riding Hood and snatched the pigs.

Abilene High's nasty defense played the role of the villain for the fifth straight week, giving fairy tales a bad name. These guys in Black and Gold eat offensive machines like humans take to chocolate icecream. Just ask Midland High, a 14-7 victim Friday night in a key District 4-5A sour Homecoming battle at Memorial Stadium.

Through five games this year, Abilene High has given up a meager 16 points to go 4-0-1 on the season and 1-0-1 in loop play. This fairy tale culprit is beginning to open eyes around the league. And they do it by bopping heads of their opponents with knockout punches.

The Bulldogs, now 3-2 and 1-1, managed only 59 yards rushing and 83 passing against the stingy-minded Eagles, who don't fly but look like the Great Wall of China. The Bulldogs had scored more than two touchdowns per outing going into the contest, but couldn't get one in against the Eagles.

The Eagle offense is nothing to brag about, but with this defense, spearheaded by linebacker Abelardo Jasso and defensive ends Doug Ice and Steve Outlaw, they don't need to score — just survive. And they've done that quite well. The 7-7 tie with Odessa Permian was no defensive fluke if you were wondering.

In the first half, the Bulldogs managed only 47 yards total offense, but managed a 3-0 lead without even gaining a first down.

Charles Comer jumped on a Gerald Bailey fumble on a punt return to give MHS the ball at the Abilene nine. The Bulldogs got to the four where Bobby Williams was called on for a 22-yard field goal for a 3-0 lead.

The Eagles scored what they needed for the win in the second period by marching 63 yards on 10 plays as Junior Bell got the last yard for a 7-0 lead. Bell ended the night with both Abilene touchdowns and 120 yards rushing on 24 carries. His 34-yard run set up the first score.

Abilene didn't put the Homecoming spoiler away until the fourth quarter when Bell scored from nine yards out with 1:03 left in the game as the Eagles ate the clock against a desperate MHS squad on a 42-yard, eight-play drive.

For Midland High's offensive unit, the game turned into a display of missed opportunities and that concerned Bulldog coach Doug McCutchen.

"Our defense played a whale of a game, but we sure missed on a couple of golden opportunities to win the game. We had two defensive goal line stands, but we didn't get the ball in the end zone when we had our chances."

MHS quarterback Matt Marcum misfired on all eight pass attempts in the first half and missed Michael Eaden, who was open at the Abilene 15. However, Marcum rallied the Bulldogs on a long drive to open the third period, hitting on five straight passes before tossing an interception to Abilene's Artie Brailsford at the Eagle four. Later Marcum missed Eaden again on a wide, open play that would have scored if connected to cover 71 yards.

"Our kids were a little hesitant on offense in the first half because they knew Abilene had a good defense, but we came back in the second half and began to move the football. We just missed great opportunities to put points on the boards," said McCutchen.

In the second quarter, Abilene got to the MHS two before the Bulldog front wall turned the Eagles away on fourth down. Mark Johnson intercepted a Michael Keith pass at the five-yard line on a first and goal at the five to turn away another threat.

Midland High's Steve Pruitt also had a big interception in Bulldog territory and Marvin Mitchell recovered another fumble.

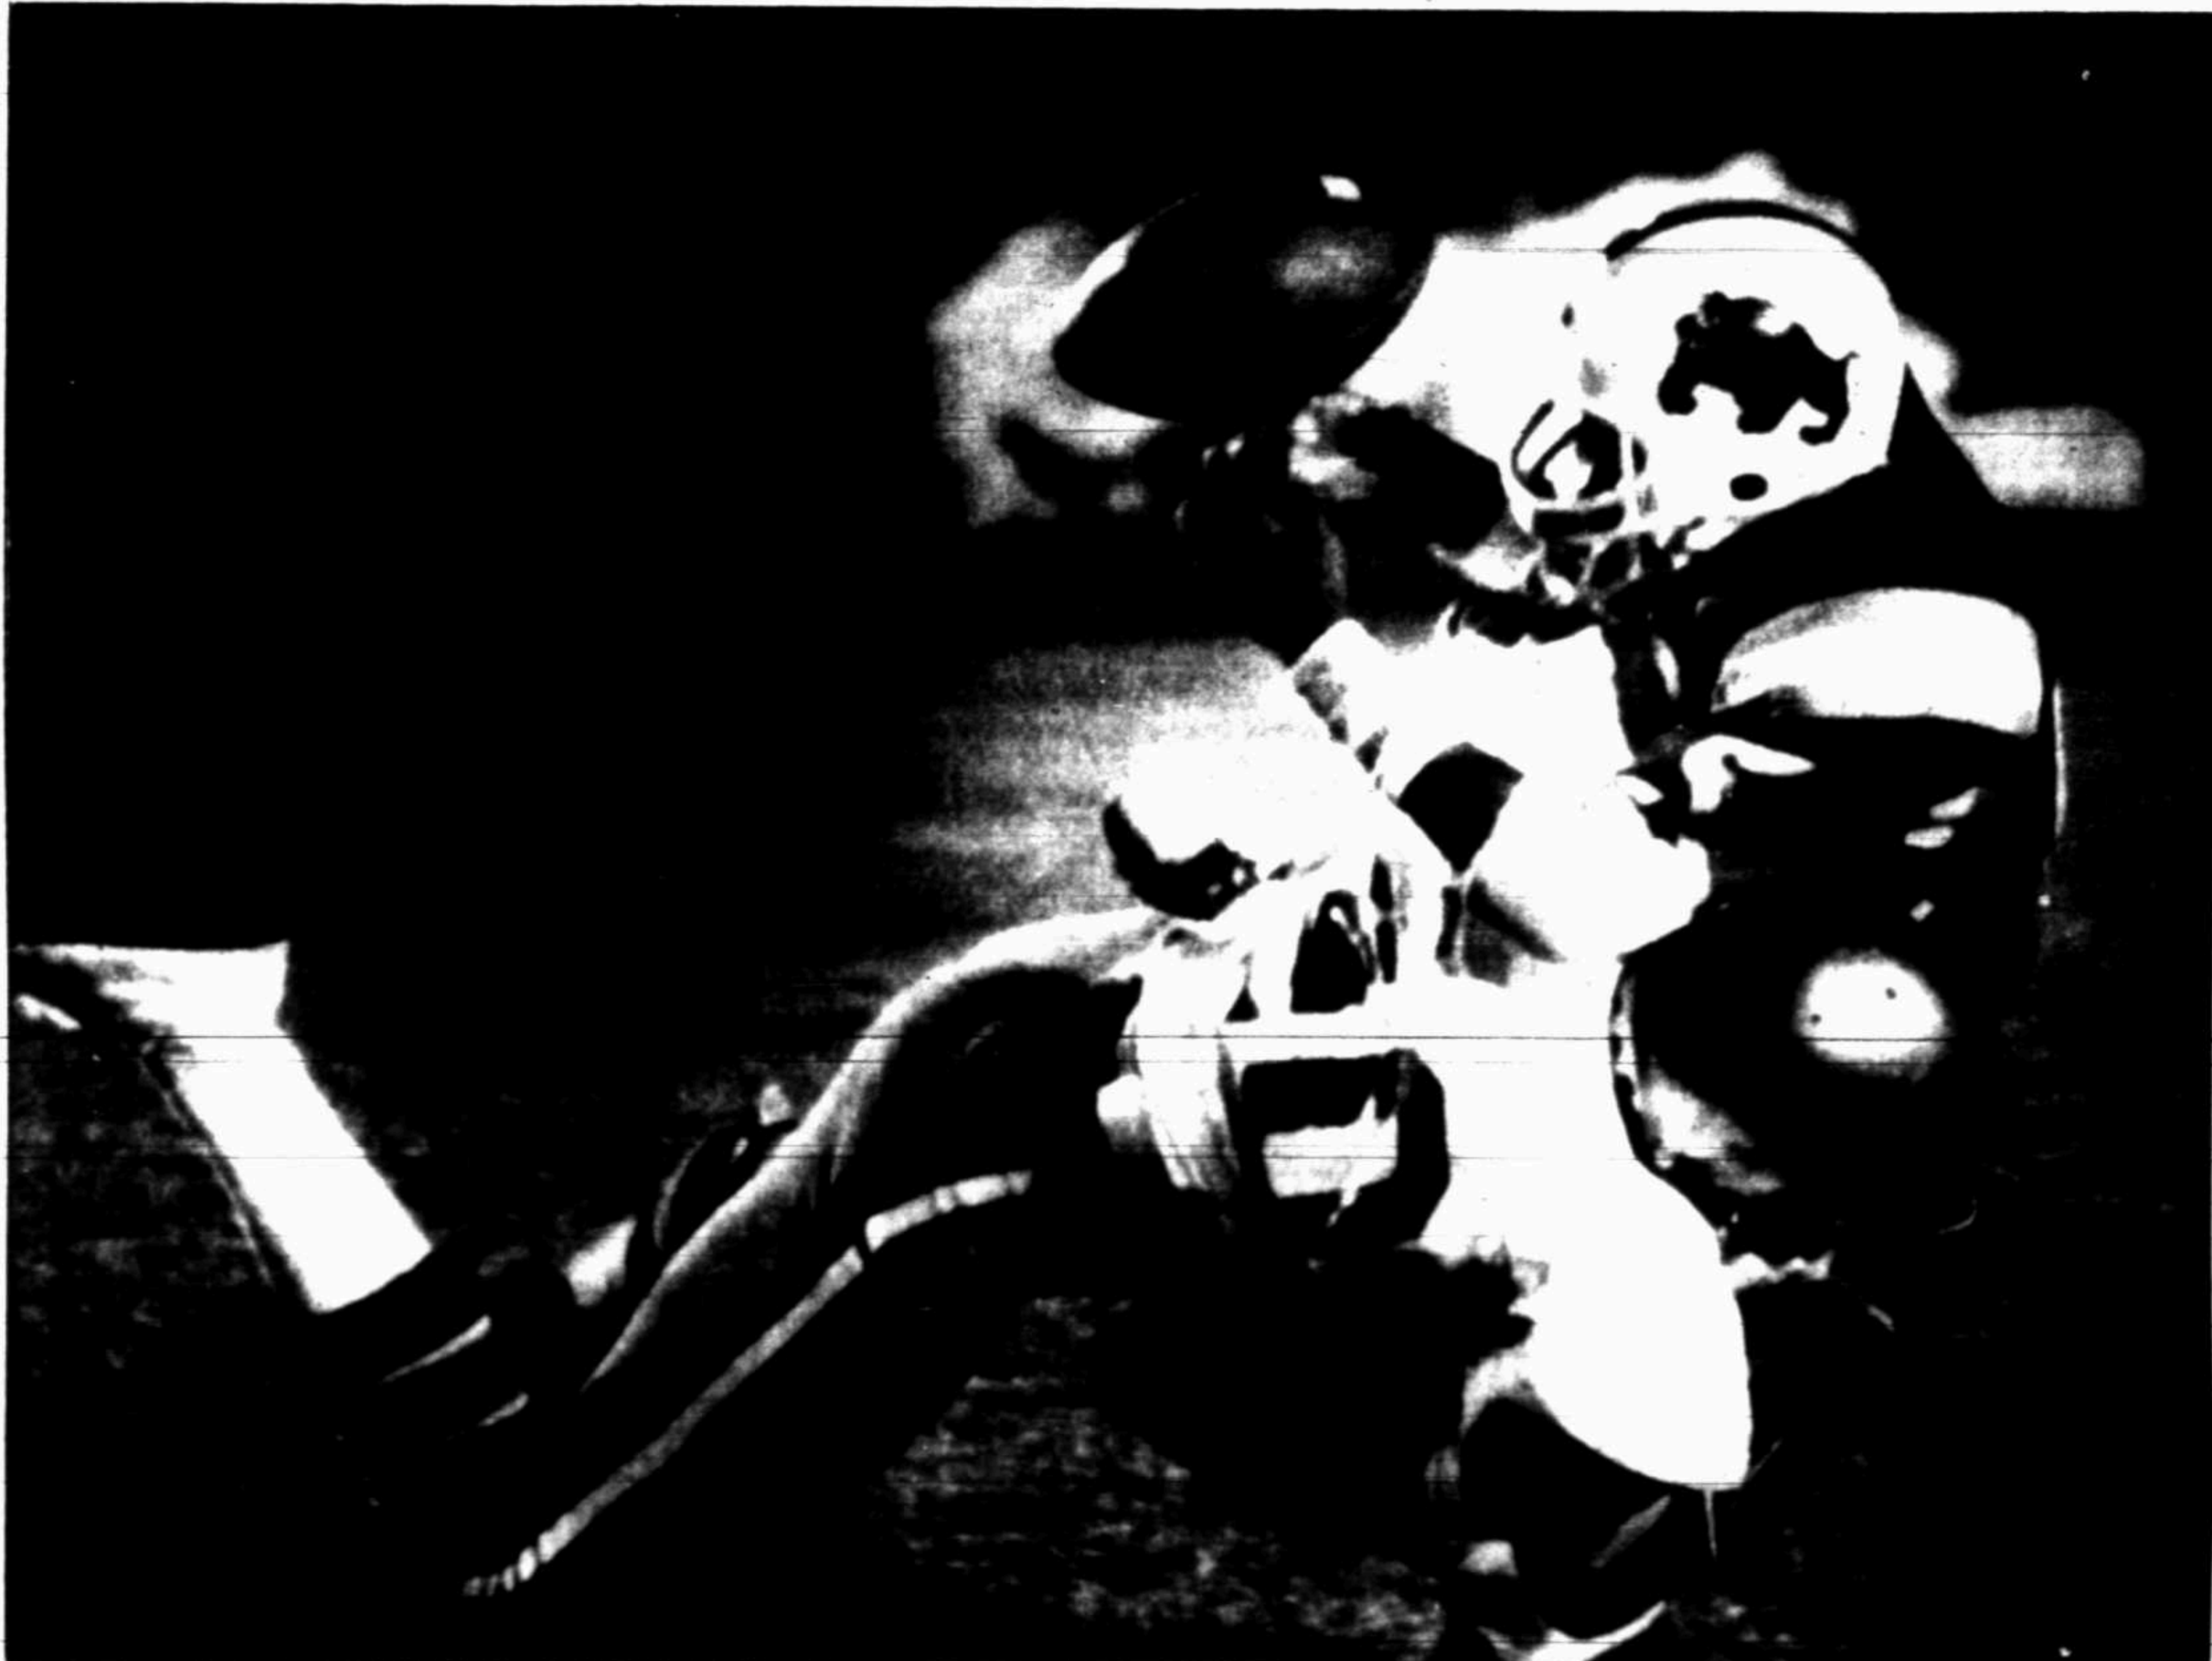

Abilene had interceptions by Brailsford and Terrance Stevenson, but Stevenson fumbled it back to Mitchell.

The Bulldog defense gave up 245 yards rushing and another 61 passing. They bent, but seldom broke down. The Bulldogs figure if they can hold the opposition to 14 points, they should have a shot at winning with the offense they have shown this year.

But this was the first time that MHS had faced a defense like that of Abilene High. And other district teams better be prepared to face that same mean streak as the Big Bad Wolf is beginning to take some headlines.

Midland High travels to Odessa High Friday for a Ratliff Stadium shootout. Both teams are 1-1 in league play. Abilene High faces the 1-1 San Angelo Bobcats in another key game Friday.

Andrews runs to 21-15 thriller

LAMESA — Coach David Visentine and quarterback Danny Neighbors of Andrews refused to follow the script here Friday night in a 21-15 district-opening win.

Neighbors, better known for his aerial ability, engineered a pair of second half touchdown drives on the ground to give the Mustangs, 1-0, 2-2, a win in the first weekend of District 2-4A play.

Visentine, who expected to throw 20-25 times in the ball game, only called four passing plays for the entire ball game.

"We came in with the plan to run, but of course we wanted to throw the ball, too," said Visentine. "They just took away so much from our passing game and the timing of our running game was so good, we felt like we could get three or four yards a pop."

ANDREWS, LED by fullback David Criswell's 134 yards and three touchdowns, did better than that, totaling 235 yards on the ground.

But in the end, it was the Mustangs defense that made the difference. First, executing a perfect goal line stand early in the third period to halt a Tornado scoring drive, then coming up with a big sack of quarterback Keith Bryant led by Bobby Kimbrough and Kurt Willems, as Lamesa drove toward the end zone in a frantic comeback effort with less than 20 seconds to play.

"They really had the momentum and our defense just came up with some great plays," Visentine said. "This is just a big win for Andrews coming off two losses back-to-back." The loss left the Tors 0-1 in district, 3-1 overall.

Criswell, a junior was carrying the bulk of the load for Neighbors and the Mustangs, scoring all three touchdowns and bulging his way to 135 yards in 22 carries.

"Criswell did just a fantastic job running the ball," Visentine said. "He's a talented runner, but we hadn't used him well enough. We thought all along we'd get some yardage for him."

AFTER A see-saw first half which saw the score knotted at seven, Lamesa took the ball from their own 14-yard line all the way down to the Mustangs' seven with four chances to punch the ball in. First Bryant went two yards to the five, then tailback Kenneth Williams went four more to the one.

Then in the biggest two downs of the game, Williams was stuffed short of his mark by the Mustang line. On fourth down it was Neighbors and Cayetano Rios making the stop on the Tors star back. "It was a great goal line stand, what can you say?" said Visentine.

Immediately after taking the ball over on downs at their own two, Andrews marched all the way down for the go-ahead score. Criswell took them well out of trouble, breaking his longest run of the night, a 52-yarder to the Tors 36. Four plays later, Criswell was in the end zone.

THE MUSTANGS' winning touchdown came on their next possession when Mundy Hernandez came up with the only turnover of the game, intercepting a Bryant pass to give Andrews good field position on the Tornadoes 29 yard line. Six plays later, Criswell again punched it over

Backup Johnson helps Lee do job on CHS

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

ABILENE — Not being a starter doesn't mean a player can't get the job done. Ask Midland Lee coach Jack Tayrien or Rebel quarterback Rodney Johnson. Both felt the junior backup was capable of stepping in. Both were right as Lee pounded out a 39-7 District 4-5A victory over Abilene Cooper at P.E. Shotwell Stadium Friday night.

"I always said if Toney Rankin, Lee's starting quarterback, went down that I'd be ready to do my best," said Johnson. "I feel I can do better."

But, according to his statistics, there isn't much room for improvement. Johnson connected on 7-of-11 passes for 149 yards, two touchdown passes and no interceptions. From the wishbone option, add another 95 yards rushing and a TD. In all, Johnson led the Rebels to all but 10 of their 449 total yards.

"We really didn't have any question about Rodney," said Tayrien. "Rodney is a competitor and he's been working at it a long time and we had confidence in him. He did an excellent job."

The only problem Johnson seemed to have was with the ground game but, considering the 340 yards nine Rebels accounted for, it's easy to overlook a few miscues.

Most of Johnson's trouble came when he occasionally bumped into one of his running backs, or lobbed out a bad pitch. However, he hasn't been working with the starters all that much.

"He's only worked out three days with these guys," said Tayrien. "Timing is what makes it work and it takes time to work it out."

Greenwood-Rankin, Page 2B

"Maybe my lack of working with the first team was part of the problem, but we got together and got it going."

Things seemed a lot smoother in the second half despite a shutout third quarter by both defenses. That also didn't matter much because Lee held a 19-7 lead at the half and outscored the Cougars 20-0 in the final quarter.

On Lee's second and third possessions of the game, Johnson and company were clicking like a well oiled machine. Johnson tallied the first TD with 4:22 left in the first quarter on a 37-yard run, capping a three-play, 56-yard drive. Terry Baxter booted the extra point for injured

Mike Little, 7-0.

Eight plays later, Johnson guided the Rebels on a second three-play scoring drive. After a three-yard run by Rodney Sims, Johnson hit tight end Anthony Dickens for a 17-yard gain to the Lee 36 and followed with a 64-yard TD pass to split end Dexter Traylor. There was no time left on the first quarter clock when Traylor scored and Baxter's missed PAT made it 13-0.

The Rebels kept their shutout going for two more Cooper possessions before the Cougars mounted their only scoring drive of the night, a five-play, 24-yard drive after Baxter shanked a punt from his own end zone.

Cougar quarterback Bill Dehlinger capped the drive with a seven-yard run and then followed with the extra point to cut the margin to six. A short-lived spread.

The Rebels answered with their first long scoring drive of the night, a 10-play, 85-yarder capped by Johnson's second TD pass of the game. After breaking two runs for 22 and 13 yards, Johnson hit Anthony Dickens for 13-yard gain and Baxter for another 29 yards to the six. Three plays later, David Almand caught Johnson's pass and scored from three yards out. The run for two failed but Lee held a 19-7 advantage.

Two plays after the ensuing kickoff, Rebel Tony Brown picked off the first of four Dehlinger interceptions at the Cougar 19 with seven seconds left on the clock. The Rebels ran Tommy Wood for two yards and called a time out with one second left in the half. Baxter missed the 35-yard attempt.

After the shutout third quarter, Lee got scores from Sims on a 37-yard run, Kirk Thurman from four yards out and Durian Jenkins from the three. Baxter hit 2-of-3 PAT attempts for the final 39-7 margin.

Baxter, who also handled the kickoff and punting chores, was pressed into service this week after Little injured his kicking foot in practice Tuesday.

"Mike has a slight sprain to his kicking foot," said Tayrien. "It's not bad enough to keep him from playing but it hurts when he extends his foot. Terry never kicked before but did a good job in practice Thursday so we put him in there."

Royals, Cardinals clinch flag ties

Associated Press

The Kansas City Royals and St. Louis Cardinals, Missouri's teams, clinched ties for their respective division titles Friday night, while the Toronto Blue Jays blew a chance to win the American League East by bobbling away a ninth-inning lead.

George Brett's fourth home run in five days powered Kansas City past Oakland 4-2, moving the Royals two games in front of California with two to play. The Angels were blanked 6-0 by Texas.

St. Louis beat the Chicago Cubs 4-2 to move two games ahead of the New York Mets in the National League East with two games remaining. The Mets took the Montreal Expos 9-4.

Toronto grabbed a 3-2 lead over the New York Yankees in the eighth inning when Lloyd Moseby scored from second base on an infield single. But Butch Wynegar homered with two outs to tie the game in the ninth and Moseby dropped a routine fly ball to let in the winning run as the Yankees stayed alive with a 4-3 decision. New York is two games back with three to play, including the next two in Toronto.

In other American League games, it was Chicago 7, Seattle 5; Baltimore 5, Detroit 2; Cleveland 8, Minnesota 6, and Milwaukee 8, Boston 7 in 12 innings.

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Pittsburgh 7, Philadelphia 2 in the first game of a doubleheader. Houston was at San Diego, Atlanta at San Francisco and Cincinnati at Los Angeles in the late games.

Royals 4, A's 2

The Royals, who are gunning for their sixth title in 10 years, got Brett's fourth home run and second inside-the-park shot since Monday night off A's starter Jose Rijo in the seventh inning for a 4-2 edge. Brett hit a slicing line drive into left field that eluded Jose Canseco and rolled to the wall. There was no play at the plate.

Mark Gubicza won his 14th game, while Dan Quisenberry finished for his league-leading 37th save.

"I may turn on the television to-morrow afternoon," Kansas City Manager Dick Howser said, referring to the Angels' game in Texas. "I'll bet a lot of our players will have their sets on, too. They can all afford nice TVs."

Rangers 6, Angels 0

Dave Schmidt scattered seven hits for the first shutout of his career and Steve Buechele hit a two-run homer in Texas.

"I just don't get used to this club not scoring runs," said California Manager Gene Mauch. The Angels have managed only six runs in the last five games, four of which came in a 4-2 victory over the Royals.

Cardinals 4, Cubs 2

Bob Forsch pitched a five-hitter through eight innings and Andy Van Slyke belted his 13th home run to pace the Cardinals. Ozzie Smith smashed an RBI triple and Forsch also had a run-scoring double in St. Louis' major league-leading 100th victory of the year.

"It was very typical of what we've been doing for 160 games now," Van Slyke said. "People are just starting to take notice."

Mets 9, Expos 4

Keith Hernandez continued his torrid hitting with a two-run triple and a single, setting a team record with eight straight hits. New York lost a 4-0 lead as Montreal's Tim Lincecum hit two homers, but the hosts rallied in the bottom of the fifth. Gary Carter delivered the go-ahead run with a squib single for his 100th RBI of the season and Darrell Strawberry then hit a sacrifice fly.

"It would take a miracle for us to win it now," said Hernandez.

Yankees 4, Blue Jays 3

The Blue Jays were within two strikes of clinching their first division title, then Wynegar belted a long home run off Toronto relief ace Tom Seaver. It was his first homer since June 5.

Bobby Meacham followed with an infield single, Rickey Henderson walked and left-handed rookie Steve Davis was brought in to face Don Mattingly, who leads the major leagues with 144 RBIs. Mattingly hit an easy fly to center, but Moseby apparently lost the ball in the lights and it trickled off his glove and fell to the ground, allowing Meacham to score the winning run.

White Sox 7, Mariners 5

Tom Seaver moved into third place on the all-time strikeout list, passing Gaylord Perry, as he notched his 304th career win. Seaver, 16-11, struck out seven and has 3,537 strikeouts. Dave Wehrmeister earned his second save with four innings of hitless relief, and Ron Kittle, Carlton Fisk and Jerry Hairston each drove in two runs.

Orioles 5, Tigers 2

Fred Lynn's three-run homer helped the hosts pull within one game of third-place Detroit in the AL East. The Orioles finally beat Dan Petry after seven straight losses to the Tigers right-hander.

Brewers 8, Red Sox 7, 12 innings

Rookie Billy Joe Robidoux's two-out double knocked in the go-ahead run and another scored in the 12th on a bases-loaded walk to Rick Manning.

CRANE — The McCamey Badgers used a tenacious defense, capitalizing on turnovers and a potent running game to shutout the Crane Golden Cranes spoiling their homecoming, 16-0.

It was the first loss for the Cranes, 4-1, and McCamey's fourth straight win after an opening night loss. McCamey opened the scoring with 7:36 left in the opening quarter by tackling Crane's Gerald Mitchell in the end zone for a two-point safety. In the second quarter, after a Crane punt, the Badgers took the ball 53 yards in nine plays, including a key fourth and two deep in Crane territory. Oscar Rodriguez went three yards for the score. The point after was good and it was 9-0 McCamey. Crane drove the ball into McCamey territory late in the half, but time ran out on the Cranes, leaving the score 9-0 at the half.

McCamey's defense was impressive, allowing Crane only two first downs and 31 yards in the entire half. Both teams exchanged punts through the third quarter and as the fourth quarter wound down, Crane went for two fake punts, both of which failed. The Badgers completed the scoring when Danny Venegas intercepted a pass by Crane quarterback Abel Sena and returned it 24 yards for the touchdown. McCamey ran out the clock on its next possession to preserve the shutout. "This is by far the best we've played all year," said Badger coach Buster Leaf. "This is a really big ri-

TCU, Tech leave friend in rags

The rags you see this prognosticator wearing are what happens when you take Texas Tech and TCU plus the points against Baylor and SMU. Although Baylor's victory over USC the previous week was tarnished somewhat by the Trojans' 24-0 demise at the hands of Arizona State, it was obvious last Saturday that Tech just wasn't in the same league as the Bears. And didn't full-back Ralph Stockemer break the very same play for the game-busting touchdown against the Raiders last year at Lubbock after Tech seemingly had the game in hand in the fourth quarter?

TCU's squeaker against Kansas State should have been a warning that the Frogs just didn't possess the depth to withstand the dismissal of seven regulars from the squad and what SMU did to the Frogs was humbling.

It may be that next week's SMU-Baylor game at Texas Stadium, just may be the SWC's Game of the Year, but then we thought that about last week's SMU-TCU game.

The SWC... Baylor minus 5 1/2 over Houston — With SMU coming up for BU next week, beware of the Cougars. Arkansas minus 16 over TCU — A week ago I couldn't see TCU taking that many points from anybody.

Texas Tech plus 6 1/2 over Texas A&M — Aggies should win, but this should be a different breed of Raiders at Lubbock. Rice plus 24 over Texas — Longhorns score a lot of points, but they also give up a lot. But Rice plus 24...now that's gambling.

Arizona plus 6 1/2 over SMU — Mustangs away from home and maybe looking a week ahead.

The others... Notre Dame plus six over Air Force — Irish backed into a corner and desperate for a win, therefore may be a good bet to keep Falcons within reach, at least.

Florida minus two over LSU — Saturday night fever in Baton Rouge.

Iowa minus 17 over Michigan State — If Spartans couldn't keep Notre Dame within 17, how are they going to cope with Hawkeyes?

Michigan minus 14 over Wisconsin — I get the feeling I'm giving points in too many games. And is that a hot foot I feel.

Ohio State minus three over Illinois — Buckeyes should handle the season's highest bust so far.

The pros... Dallas plus two over the Giants — But Cowboys are going to have to score some points.

Houston plus 8 1/2 over Denver — Broncos coming off a big one against Miami and may let Oilers get closer than they should.

Tampa Bay plus 8 1/2 over Bears — It's at Tampa Bay and Bears can't be fired up every week.

from the one. Ruben Salcido added the two-pointer.

The Tors mounted their comeback late in the fourth quarter, sparked by a long run by Williams and some tough yardage by Bryant on the ground. The final 23 yards came on a desperation fourth down pass from Bryant to fullback Greg Hogg with 4:58 left.

After a slow first half, Williams totaled 141 yards on the night, 105 after intermission, scoring one Lamesa touchdown and a two-point conversion on the other.

In the first half, both coaches stole a page from each other's playbook. Andrews opened the scoring using a typical Lamesa-like scoring drive, chunking out a 13-play, 57-yard drive, all on the ground.

Neighbors steered the Mustangs from his own 43, eating up the first eight minutes of the second period. The most surprising point of the drive was that Neighbors didn't throw a pass in the 13-play drive.

Criswell finally put the ball in the end zone on a two-yard run — his first of three.

LAMESA CAME back with an Andrews type drive going the aerial route, on their next possession. Tors' quarterback Keith Bryant tossed the first play from scrimmage following the Andrews score with a 75-yard bomb to Leonard Woodberry. A clipping penalty turned the pass into just a 50 yard gain, but put the Tors in position to score their only six-pointer of the half.

Wood wins No. 400

CROWLEY, Texas (AP) — Gordon Wood, the 71-year-old with more career wins than any other football coach, won his 400th game when the Brownwood Lions defeated the Crowley Eagles 15-9 in Class 4A high school play Friday night.

After an 86-yard drive and a come-from-behind victory, players lifted Wood into the air, and carried him off the field.

Wood has lost only 85 games and tied 12. Nine of his teams have won state championships.

"It's nice to win 400," said Wood, "but it's nicer to win against a fine team like Crowley."

After Friday's district season opener both teams hold 3-1 records.

Wood, who except for a three-year stint in the military has coached since 1940, said: "Of course it's important to win, but it was a team victory. It was a big, big win for us as far as the district race is concerned. These are the kind of kids I'd take to war with me."

Former Cleveland Browns coach Paul Brown, who retired with 351 wins, holds second place for the most career victories in the game of football.

From Staff Reports

BIG LAKE — You couldn't tell it from the statistics, but the Reagan County Owls fell to Sonora, 22-20, here Friday night in a big non-conference football battle.

The Owls had 337 total yards on offense while Sonora had 253, but the Broncos owned the scoreboard after jumping out to a quick 9-0 lead in the first quarter. Sonora is now 4-1 on the year while the Owls are 3-2.

Sonora's Steve Love led the Broncos with 96 yards rushing on 16 carries while Tim Tatum led Reagan County with 71 yards on 15 carries.

Tatum's 20-yard run with 4:28 left in the game and Scott Lipsey's two-point conversion run narrowed the gap to 22-20, but the Owls couldn't get on the board again. Esau Ramirez scored 10 of Sonora's points with a touchdown, field goal and extra point.

Hogs, Longhorns, Aggies favored

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Arkansas, Texas and Texas A&M are heavily favored to open their Southwest Conference football seasons on a successful note Saturday but Baylor could have some problems with defending Cotton Bowl representative Houston.

While No. 3-ranked Southern Methodist tries to enhance the SWC's gaudy 17-8 ledger against outside competition, the 10th-ranked Arkansas Razorbacks begin their run at the league title along with the 20th-ranked Texas Longhorns, unranked Aggies and Houston.

SMU, which has the nation's longest winning streak at eight games, visits Arizona in a Saturday night clash which finds the Mustangs seven-point favorites.

"We just have to forget our big victory over TCU because Arizona has a tradition of upsetting ranked teams," said SMU Coach Bobby Collins.

SMU and Arizona have met only once with the Mustangs prevailing 29-7 in 1938.

Arizona Coach Larry Smith said, "When you play people like this you have to play super football. They have a lot of firepower. However, in college football I think anybody can beat anybody."

In a full slate of SWC action on Saturday, unbeaten Arkansas is at Texas Christian in a noon regionally televised game. Baylor is at Houston. File is at Texas, and Texas A&M is at Texas Tech, all night games.

Arkansas, even though starting noseguard Tony Jerico will not play for disciplinary reasons, is a 16-point favorite over Baylor in the Astrodome. Texas A&M is a six-point selection over Texas Tech, and Texas is a 24-point favorite over the Rice Owls.

TCU upset Arkansas with a 32-31 victory last year, setting the stage for the Frogs' 8-4 season which included a trip to the Bluebonnet Bowl.

"The SMU game is no indication of what our game with TCU will be like," said Arkansas Coach Kenny Hatfield. "SMU is one of four or five teams in the country that is capable of physically dominating a team."

Their quarterback, Scott Ankrum, has outstanding speed and is a tough player. He's poised for a sophomore.

Texas Tech has won three straight games over the Aggies.

"We have had some very unfortunate days against Tech," said A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill. "Our players have not beaten Tech. They will play extremely hard against us."

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said, "Houston always gets it together when they play us. It's a typical Houston team. They score a lot of points and they have great athletes on both sides of the ball."

Texas Coach Fred Akers has gone through another September unbeaten. Akers' teams are now 21-0 in that month historically, following a 38-34 victory over Stanford last week. Texas has beaten Rice 19 straight times.

Chapparals take first in WJCAC tourney

Led by Randy Winn's medal 71, Midland College took first place in the Western Junior College Athletic Association tournament at Green Tree Country Club Friday.

And while things were going great for Coach Delnor Poss' Chapparals, things didn't go so well for South Plains Coach Larry Roberts suffered a heart attack during Thursday's practice round and was in Midland Memorial Hospital as his team shot a 315 Friday.

The Chapparals, after two tournaments, lead the team standings with 11 points, shooting a 302, to beat out New Mexico Military Institute by one stroke. NMCI was third at 306, while the others were Odessa College, 308; Western Texas College 311 and South Plains 315. OC is second overall with nine points and NMJC and NMCI are tied with eight.

It was 34 degrees as the golfers teed off and wind gusts reached 54 mph. Winn sank a birdie putt on 18 to give MC its thin margin of victory.

MC's Raymond Cole shot a 74 to tie Tord Nilsson of NMJC for second. Other Midland scores included Leon Van Rensburg 76, David Pritchett 81, Steve Alexander 84 and Eddie Valdes 86.

Simpson's 64 good for lead

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Veteran Tim Simpson, seeking his first triumph in his eighth year on the tour, battered par Friday with a second straight 64 to take a two-shot lead after two rounds of the $350,000 Southern Open golf tournament.

Simpson's 12-under-par 128 over the par 70, 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club course, was the lowest on the PGA tour since Jim Colbert's 128 in the 1983 Texas Open.

It also set a 36-hole tourney record, breaking the previous mark of 131, set last by defending champion Hubert Green in winning here in 1984.

Kermit romps to fifth win

EL PASO—Kermit's Yellow Jackets scored 29 first period points on the way to a 56-6 victory over El Paso Cathedral here Friday night.

The win gives Kermit a 5-0 record.

Y's Doug Grosso practices what he preaches with 17th in Triathlon

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

A $100 bet in a Michigan bar in 1976 eventually led Midland's Doug Grosso to last weekend's United States triathlon Series National competition in Hilton Head, S.C., where he finished 17th in his age group and 122nd overall out of 1,200 competitors.

Grosso, the physical fitness director of the Central YMCA, was competing in the 20-29 age division. He is 29, which makes his feat even more special since he is only a year away from moving into the 30-39 division.

Grosso started his training in Michigan. He moved to Midland 10 months ago.

"In 1976, I weighed 240 pounds. I used to win a few six packs by making bets on running a mile. I used to run around a five-minute mile and because of my weight, it was easy to make bets," said Grosso.

"One night in a bar in Ironwood, Mich., I bet this kid $100 I could beat him in a marathon. I finished, he didn't, and I still don't have my money. But that eventually led me to trying triathlons. I compete at around 165 pounds now. I've lost nearly 80 pounds since I started."

To qualify for the prestigious USTS national competition, Grosso had to place in the Top 10 of a triathlon Federation sanctioned event or finish in the top five of his age group in a USTA sanctioned event. He accomplished both by finishing in the Top 10 on May 5 in Angleton and first in his age group in Houston on Sept. 1.

ClayDesta Communications sponsored Grosso in his national bid, making it possible for him to travel and train properly. Grosso won the Tall City triathlon this year to gain the sponsorship.

"Overall, I competed in eight triathlons this year, but it has been difficult. In Michigan, the triathlon season runs June through September, but in Texas, the season is April through June and then August through October because the summer heat is too much," said Grosso.

Grosso says he really doesn't have a best event in the triathlon.

"When I started, swimming was my strongest event followed by running, but through training that has switched completely around. You really have to be pretty good in all three events to be competitive. You can't be real weak in any one," he said.

The national event consisted of a 1,200-meter swim, a 40-kilometer bike ride and a 10-kilometer run. Grosso says he would like to try an Iron Man-type triathlon at some point, but has not set that as a major goal.

"It gets tougher and tougher to train for this type of event with job and family responsibilities, but I would like to try an Iron Man-type distance and maybe someday the Iron Man itself in Hawaii."

The Iron Man consists of a 2.4-kilometer swim, a 112-mile bike ride and a full marathon of over 26 miles. Grosso downplays the fact that it is rough to be a 29-year-old in the 20-29 division.

"The sport is so new that I don't think anyone has figured out what an optimum age is. Now it seems that competitors in the mid to late 20s do the best. It is true that the 20-29 division is the toughest to compete in, but I don't think there is a great deal of a dropoff when you hit the 30-39 division."

Grosso's 122nd finish overall in the national event also came against the nation's top professionals. He placed quite high among the amateurs and would have been around 70th without the pros in the competition.

Grosso says his immediate plans include rest. "I'll probably run another marathon this year, but I've already had eight triathlons, and to be quite frank, I'm pretty burned out."

Spartans test Hawkeyes as Robinson eyes No. 1

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Iowa tries to stay No. 1 in the college football rankings Saturday while Grambling Coach Eddie Robinson tries to become No. 1 all by himself. Both are expected to achieve their objectives.

The Iowa Hawkeyes not only are on top of the Associated Press poll for the first time in 24 years, but they also lead the nation in scoring (54.3 points a game), total defense (154.3-yard average yield) and rushing defense (in three games, they have surrendered just 53 yards on 119 rushes).

With Michigan State, a 17-point underdog, coming to Iowa City for the Big Ten opener, Iowa Coach Hayden Fry is hoping the No. 1 ranking isn't as he fears, the "kiss of death."

Fry explained that he was "really talking more about last year. It seemed like every team that got to be No. 1 got beat the next week."

"I have no idea whether we should be ranked first, second, third, fourth, fifth or 10th. There are too many good teams across the country. It's not a ranking to be believed. At the end of the season it will be much more accurate. All I know is we're 3-0 and our youngsters are playing well."

Michigan State's George Perles, as you might expect, says that "Iowa, according to all the things I've seen, is well deserving of being the No. 1 team in the country. When you talk about Iowa, you're talking about a great program, you're talking about a great football team and you're talking about a pro playing quarterback. Chuck Long has thrown for more than 700 yards and 10 touchdowns already.

"They are a senior team, the type of team we hope to be in a couple of years. They are primarily fourth- and fifth-year people, and that's the type of team you need to win in the Big Ten."

Grambling State, which has played two of its three games in Shreveport and one in New York, will be at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas for a night game with Prairie View A&M, which is 1-4 after going 0-11 a year ago. Robinson and the late Bear Bryant are tied with 323 coaching victories.

"I'm not thinking 324. I'm thinking Prairie View," Robinson insists. "This is no contest between the Bear and me. I've had the chance to learn a lot from the Bear."

Iowa is the third team to be No. 1 this season. Oklahoma, the preseason choice but runnerup in the past four polls, visits Kansas State while Auburn, which plummeted from first to 14th after losing to Tennessee last week, entertains Mississippi in a night contest.

In the only game between Top Twenty teams, No. 11 Florida plays at eighth-ranked LSU under the lights. Meanwhile, third-ranked Southern Methodist is at Arizona at night, No. 5 Ohio State visits Illinois, sixth-ranked Oklahoma State plays host to Tulsa, No. 7 Michigan entertains Wisconsin and 10th-ranked Arkansas is at Texas Christian.

In the Second Ten, the schedule finds New Mexico at No. 13 Nebraska, No. 15 Brigham Young at Colorado State, Wake Forest at No. 16 Tennessee, Notre Dame at No. 17 Air Force,

Church Calendar

MEN DON'T CRY

Society adopted the rule that men aren't supposed to cry outwardly. So they cry inwardly. You'd be surprised how often!

They say there's nothing wrong with a good cry — outward or inward. That's true as long as you wipe away your tears ready to carry on with courage and a good idea of what God wants you to do.

The Bible makes many references to tears and weeping. But it keeps pointing to God as our source of comfort and guidance in every trial.

Search every day your Bible's answers to the challenges of life. This week study Revelations 21:4 for its assurances of strength and hope.

Each Sunday in Church join the millions for whom faith is replacing the crying towel.

C

Is it true that 'God sides with the poor?'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

It has become a standard phrase in church preachers about economic justice — "God's bias for the poor." It has become almost a modern ecclesiastical cliché — that "God sides with the poor."

But is it the case? An Episcopal chaplain at the University of Chicago has stood up to question that line, and his doing so brought a wave of protests from those who cling to it.

The challenge to the pet current phrase was raised in the ecumenical weekly, the Christian Century, by the Rev. Sam A. Portaro Jr. He says the catchphrase is "plain old inflammatory partisan rhetoric," and adds: "The message of the Gospel is not that God loves any one of us more than another. The painful beauty of the Gospel statement is that God loves each of us without partiality."

Portaro arrays the biblical prophets, Jesus and his apostles behind that "divine equivoque" toward humanity and says:

"The sooner we move beyond the limiting notion of God's bias toward the poor and the oppressed, the more quickly we may recover the message of God's grace and love for us all."

That counterbalancing thesis stirred "a great deal of reaction, much larger than usual" says the Rev. James Wall, editor of the Christian Century. "Most of it was critical."

That is typical, he notes, when somebody "doesn't follow the line." One letter-writer suggested that even though Portaro was basically correct, it was bad politics to say it amid church efforts to preserve federal programs for the poor.

The assumption that God has a preference for the poor has run through much church teaching and theological analysis lately, from liberation theology to Pope John Paul II.

"A preferential option for the poor," the pope called it, and the U.S. Catholic bishops cite the phrase in their controversial draft of a pastoral letter on the U.S. economy.

"The idea that God has a special affection for those who suffer injustice is certainly old and honorable," Portaro concedes.

"The psalmists, the prophets, the evangelists and the first apostles all found God's compassion for the underdog worthy of comment and consideration."

It is sprinkled through biblical passages and events, from the delivery of the enslaved Jews from bondage in Egypt to the birth of Jesus to an humble, peasant family that had to flee persecution.

"The paradox of strength made manifest in weakness is one of the cornerstones of our faith tradition," Portaro admits. But he stresses another side to the story.

"The greatest difficulty with the image of God's bias toward the poor and the oppressed is that it simply does not jibe with the whole of the evidence."

"Yes, there are plenty of citations to indicate that God favors the down-trodden, but Scriptural criticism has made us aware that the Bible's every word is conditioned by context."

"It is the record of oppressed peoples whose perspectives naturally incline them toward such an interpretation... Yet we must also see in Scripture the equal claim that God is God of all the universe, and sometimes even uses the rich to oppress the poor."

Portaro notes that the prophet Jeremiah, in Jeremiah 25:9, was "not too thrilled with the idea that God might declare the king of Babylon to be God's servant, but he acknowledged that reality."

"The biblical prophets acknowledge the possibility that God's servants did sometimes come rather sumptuously arrayed and powerfully armed."

Also, Portaro notes that Judas, the betrayer of Jesus, was the one who complained loudest when a woman poured expensive perfume on Jesus' feet, protesting it should have been sold to provide money for the poor. But Jesus rebuked him.

"It was the scandal of Jesus' inclusiveness... that led to his arrest and execution. Jesus would not take sides but struggled always to affirm the wholeness of God's people," Portaro says.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

LDS church gets dish

Members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the Midland area have a new way of keeping in touch with other members of their church. A satellite dish was recently installed at the Midland chapel, 2101 Tarleton St.

"The purpose of this satellite dish is mainly to allow members to view programs broadcast from church headquarters in Salt Lake City," says Royce Griffin.

Today and Sunday church members throughout the world will be able to view, via satellite, the semi-annual general conference of the church. The satellite dish will allow members in Midland to view all four sessions of the conference at the chapel. The sessions today and Sunday are at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.

There are 1,100 members of the church in this area who will benefit from the satellite installation," Griffin says.

Members and visitors have already been able to view a number of broadcasts, including the annual women's meeting broadcast Sept. 28 to the women of the church throughout the world.

The church leases space on the Telstar and Westar TV communication satellites when broadcasting programs to its chapels.

Women's luncheon set

A women's Fellowship Luncheon, sponsored by the Presbyterian Women of First Presbyterian Church, will be held at 11:30 a.m. Oct. 22 in the church's fellowship hall, 800 W. Texas Ave.

A program will be presented by Mrs. Shackelford Reeder.

September marks the beginning of a new year for Presbyterian Women at First Presbyterian Church.

Officers for this year are Mrs. Gene Bartus, president; Mrs. David Grimes, vice president; Mrs. Pat Holub, secretary; Mrs. Brandon Buchanan, historian; Mrs. John Kennedy, personal faith and family life chairman; Mrs. Russell Forest, Christian community action chairman; and Mrs. Joe Nobles, leadership and resources chairman.

Dellwood sets revival

Dellwood Baptist Church, corner of W. Ohio Avenue and Midkiff Street, will host an "Old Fashion Revival Meeting" Sunday through Friday. The meeting will be conducted by the Mark Cole Family Evangelistic Ministry.

"The Lord called Mark Cole to this ministry in a very unique way," says a spokesman for the ministry. "In the summer of 1976, Brother Cole was involved in a serious boating accident that was to eventually put him through 28 major operations and numerous stays in the hospital. Eventually, it led to the loss of his right leg. Brother Cole believes that God has allowed him to survive death in order that he might share what the Lord did in his life with others."

His family is involved in the ministry. His wife Lana plays vibraphone, glockenspiel or the piano for the services. Other members are working behind the scenes.

Services will be 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. A supervised nursery will be open for all services.

The public is invited to attend.

Midweek programs set

Trinity Presbyterian Church is having a Wednesday Night Dinner and Programs and special topics during Sunday services.

Church school begins at 9:30 a.m. and the worship hour at 11 a.m.

The Wednesday Night Program starts with children's choirs from 4:45 to 5:30 p.m. Dinner is from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Then from 6:45 to 8:15 p.m., activities include adult choir rehearsal, Kerygma Bible Study, an on-going class, adult program, junior and senior high class, and children's classes. A nursery is provided.

The adult program through Oct. 16 is the Charles Swindol film series, "Strengthening Your Grip." Also, on Oct. 2, a four-week course on "Peer Pressure" for third through sixth graders will begin.

In addition, Moreau began a five-week course Oct. 6 for those who have questions such as: What is a Presbyterian? What do Presbyterians believe? What does Trinity Presbyterian offer to those seeking a church? The course will be held at 9:30 a.m. in the church parlor. The public is invited to attend.

Musical to be presented

ABILENE — "Cotton Patch Gospel," the triumphant musical that was seen by close to 80,000 in Dallas and almost 50,000 in Atlanta, is now touring the United States. The musical will play at Hardin-Simmons University's Behrens Chapel at 7 p.m. Monday.

The show, noted as the city's longest-running musical in both Dallas and Atlanta, features an all-new cast and a fresh interpretation.

Based on Clarence Jordan's popular "Cotton Patch Versions of Matthew and John," the musical was written by Tom Key and Russell Treyz. Musical score is by the late Harry Chapin.

Tickets may be purchased at the door or at HSU's Moody Center, the HSU Bookstore, corner of Hickory and Ambler; the Bible Bookstore and Love Shop, all in Abilene. Tickets may also be purchased by calling 1-677-7281, extension 326.

Bible study continues

The second session of Church Women United of Midland's fall Bible study is set for 9:30 a.m. Oct. 25 in the Fellowship Classroom of First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave.

Teacher for the study is Marie Coleman from First United Methodist Church. She will be teaching from the 119th Chapter of Psalms.

All interested women are invited to attend. For more information call Dorothy Vaughan, 694-3193, or Jerry Sloan, 682-7204. Kay Sprecher is Church Woman United president.

Solicitation authorized

Members of the Guadalupanas Organization have been authorized by the Rev. James R. Foelker to ask for donations for the church's Oct. 12 fair which will take place at Our Lady of Guadalupe fairgrounds from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Those members authorized to ask for donations are Manuela Baeza, Maria Jimenez, Delores Duran and Angelita Martinez. For more information call Our Lady of Guadalupe.

Communion service set

The Rev. Jean Pierre Meshew, archdeacon of the Diocese of the Southwest of the Anglican Catholic Church, will celebrate Holy Communion for St. Paul's American Episcopal Church at 10 a.m. the first and third Sundays of each month.

Services are held in the Chapel at Ellis Funeral Home. The 1928 Book of Common Prayer is used by the congregation for all services.

Hispanic ministers meet

The Hispanic Ministerial Alliance of Midland will meet at 8 a.m. Oct. 12 at El Jalisco Restaurant, 414 W. Texas Ave., for fellowship and a business meeting.

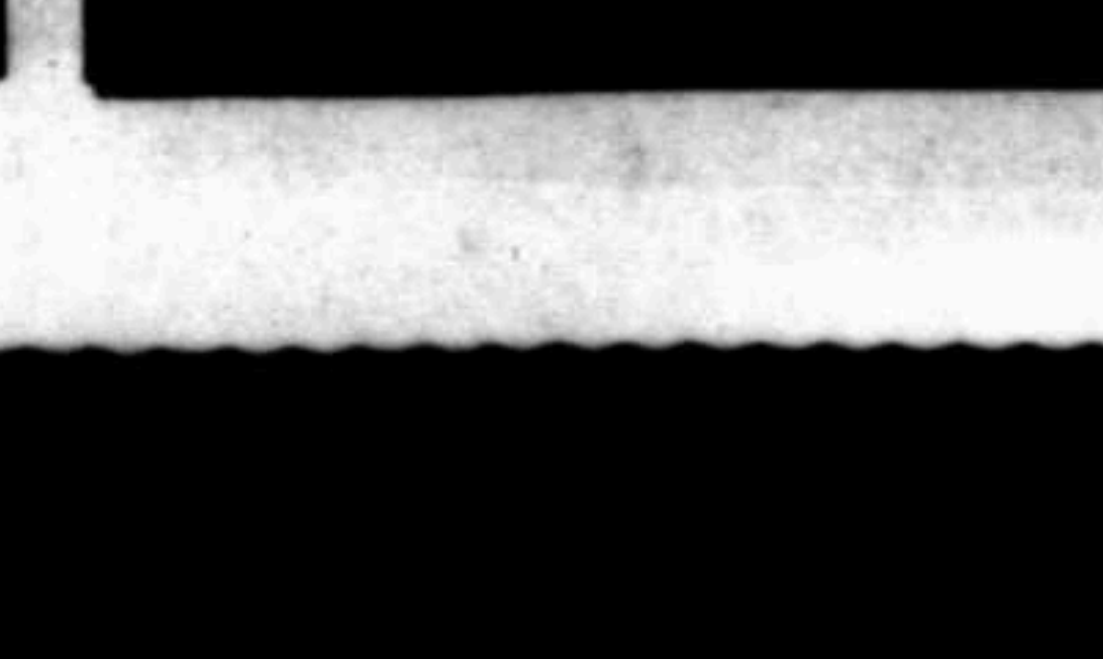

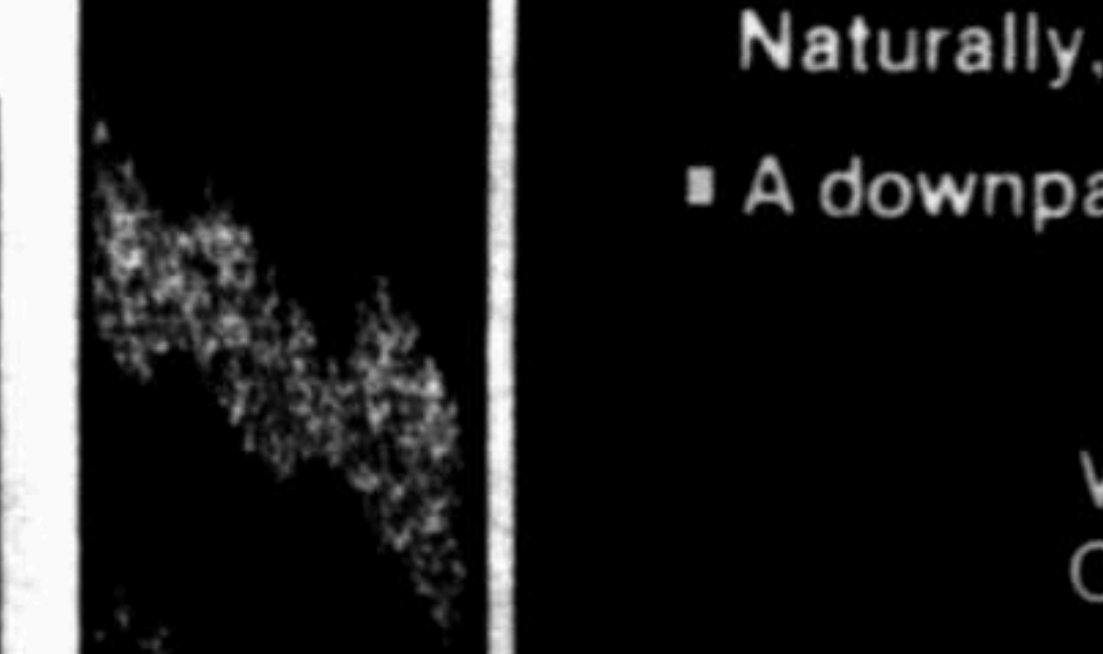

All ministers and priests from Hispanic churches and ministries in Midland are invited to attend. For more information call the Rev. Hector Gonzales Sr. at 684-5533.

The Rev. J. Allen Lowe

Dr. William Justice Jr.

Former Midlander on youth council

The Rev. J. Allen Lowe, associate minister at First Christian Church, Corpus Christi, has been elected to the general Youth Ministry Council of the Christian Church, Disciples of Christ, in the United States and Canada.

Lowe, a Midlander by birth, was associate minister at Midland's Memorial Christian Church.

Lowe is one of three adult advisors from the two countries who will plan and implement youth ministry programs and directions for the 1.2 million-member Disciples of Christ in their international youth ministry program.

Lowe is a member of the Youth

Ministry Council of the Christian church in the Southwest, which includes Texas and New Mexico, as well as past chairman of the Central Area Youth Ministry Council. He is immediate past director of the International Affairs Seminar, held yearly in New York City and Washington, D.C. During this seminar, youth who have been selected from Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma meet with international leaders to discuss global issues and the Christian's responsibility.

Lowe had directed and been keynote speaker at youth camps and conferences throughout Texas, Missouri and in New York and Washington, D.C. He has served on the training staff of regional and bi-regional leadership seminars for youth and youth leaders for the past six years. He will lead numerous area and regional events in Texas as well as an international youth congress to be held in Los Angeles this coming year.

Lowe is married to the former Shirley Christy of Midland. The couple has three sons, Robert, a student at Texas A&M, and John and Scott, high school students in Corpus Christi.

Seminar will center on changes occurring 'When Your Parents Die'

Dr. William Justice Jr. of East Tennessee Baptist Hospital, Knoxville, Tenn., will be the featured speaker during a seminar, "When Your Parents Die," sponsored by Midland Memorial Hospital and Hospice of Midland.

The seminar will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday in the Community Room at the hospital. Topics to be discussed include "What Happens to the Caregiver When the Patient Dies," "How Can We Care for Ourselves as Caregivers," "Building Communication with Terminally Ill Patients and their Families" and "Follow Up for Families After the Patient Dies."

Justice received his master of divinity degree from the School of Theology at New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary and his doctor of ministry degree from Luther Rice Seminary, Jacksonville, Fla. In 1964, he graduated from Oxford Graduate School with a doctorate degree.

During his ministry, Justice has written approximately two dozen free-lance articles and five books, including, "When Death Comes: Pastoral Care of the Bereaved" and "When Your Patient Dies: A Handbook for Doctors and Nurses."

Mormon women told not to seek priesthood

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A leader of the Mormon church warned recently that women should not seek ordination to the priesthood because it was up to God to change the practice of ordaining only males.

"Only the Lord, through revelation, could alter that situation. He has not done so, so it is profitless for us to speculate and worry about it," said Gordon B. Hinckley, second counselor in the First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Hinckley has directed the day-to-day operations of the 3-million-member church since 1981 for its ailing president, Spencer W. Kimball. He made the remarks in an address prepared for delivery during the church's annual Women's Meeting in the Tabernacle here.

Hinckley said he was pleased by the greater professional and vocational opportunities becoming available to women, but added that it had led some Mormon women to complain about being denied membership in the church's priesthood.

The Mormon Church has two priesthood organizations: the Aaronic Priesthood, which consists primarily of young men between ages of 12 and 18, and the Melchizedek Priesthood, which is for adult males.

All key leadership positions within the church require membership in the Melchizedek Priesthood.

"Spare yourselves from the indulgence of self-pity," Hinckley told Mormon women. "It is always self-defeating. Subdue the negative and emphasize the positive. Count your blessings and not your problems."

Hinckley noted that women are allowed to volunteer for 18-month missions after turning 21 years old.

Cigarette ad withdrawn after Indians protest

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — A Virginia Slims cigarette ad showing a totem pole of Indian women doing menial tasks was withdrawn by the Philip Morris Co. after a complaint from the publisher of the nation's largest Indian-owned weekly newspaper.

"I thought it was nice that they would respond to us, and in a way they would admit they were wrong, and they would pull the ad, which was all we wanted them to do anyhow," said Tim Giago, who publishes and writes a column for the Lakota Times in Martin, S.D.

Giago, 51, a member of the Oglala Sioux tribe, last month won the H.L. Mencken Award presented annually by The Baltimore Sun for distinguished writing by a newspaper columnist.

His column appears in seven newspapers in South Dakota and other states.

The Virginia Slims Lights ad, printed in several national magazines in the past few months, is apparently the first one the company ever withdrew after receiving complaints, company spokesman Guy L. Smith IV said this week.

"Our intention is that advertising is not to offend anybody," Smith said in a telephone interview from his New York office. "We learned it was objectionable to American Indians, so we removed it."

The ad showed a totem pole of eight Indian women, who each bear such titles as "Princess Wash and Scrub," "Little Running Water Fetcher" and "Woman Who Plucks Feathers for Chief's Headdress." Above the totem pole the ad said: "Virginia Slims remembers one of many societies where the women stood head and shoulders above the men."

The totem pole stood alongside a smiling, well dressed woman smoking a cigarette with the Virginia Slims advertising slogan, "You've come a long way, baby."

Giago said the suggestion that Indian women have come a long way neglected the fact that Indian women in the 1800s had many more rights in their society than white women enjoyed.

In addition, the use of a totem pole desecrated a religious artifact used by Indians in the Northwest, said Giago, whose columns appear in seven newspapers in South Dakota and other states.

The ad is typical of misconceptions many people have of Indians, Giago said. "I've seen it happen time and time again. Huge corporations and large newspapers feel they can do anything about Indians, whether it be advertisements or news stories, with total impunity."

The naked truth is, these rare, fragile-skinned chickens, a male and a female, were hatched without feathers by their fully-feathered mother in Pateluma, Calif.

Chickens have no 'pluck'

PETALUMA, Calif. (AP) — What do you say to a naked chicken? Jane Gianini says she was speechless when she first spotted her two featherless fowl.

"I thought, 'Oh, my God, they don't have any feathers,'" she said. "They sure are ugly, aren't they?"

The chickens, a male and a female, were hatched 15 weeks ago.

Such creatures are pretty rare, according to Ed Keys, assistant manager of H&N Hatchery and a 23-year veteran of the chicken business.

"I've only seen one before," he said.

The pair will be kept for breeding, although they are quite delicate because of their lack of feathery protection.

Artificial insemination may have to be used because of the danger of scratches if the chickens were allowed to do what comes naturally.

Ms. Gianini, who was considering whipping up some little coats for her charges, said, "They sunburn easily."

Francine Bradley, Northern California poultry advisor at the University of California-Davis, made a special trip to see the chickens. She told Ms. Gianini the mutation was quite rare and that, if bred, the pair should produce featherless offspring.

She also told Ms. Gianini that the birds have little value as far as supermarket sales are concerned.

Reviving the spoken wit of 'vituperation'

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — The fine art of hurling a devastating insult just isn't what it used to be in this television age of clichés and four-letter words, says a society dedicated to slaying enemies with a well-turned phrase.

The International Society for the Revival and Promulgation of Vituperative Speech is looking for someone worthy of the name Vituperator of the Year. There are few candidates.

"More and more people are drawing their styles of writing and speaking from television," the society's archivist, W.B. Rabe, said Wednesday. "They are not adept at using words, and they have a smaller and smaller vocabulary."

The organization was formed as a joke to poke fun at euphemisms and poor use of a vast language. But Rabe said the society, based at Lake Superior State College, seriously wants to encourage expanded and better use of English.

"I guess it's really kind of a serious joke," he said. "You can't get anyone involved without humor. But the student who started it was really serious about it as a way of improving language."

"Now, it's used as an exercise on campus," he said, and "has been a very good way of getting people interested again in words."

Each year, the group looks for the person who can insult someone with the most flair.

But in its history of nearly a decade, Rabe said the society has been hard pressed to come up with suitable entries for Vituperator of the Year.

In fact, it had only one winner, former Michigan State University trustee Peter Fletcher, named in 1983 for his riposte to a bureaucrat's complaint about something he said.

"Only the mentally limited, emotionally insecure and professionally indolent would have the time or inclination to take umbrage at my comments," Vituperator Fletcher wrote.

The society thinks Dr. Samuel Johnson, the 18th-century writer and critic, was the master of the disguised insult.

"Your manuscript is both good and original," he wrote to a fellow writer. "But the part that is good is not original, and the part that is original is not good."

Bar association honors Royko for criticizing Nebraska court

FREMONT, Neb. (AP) — Chicago Tribune columnist Mike Royko's criticism of the Nebraska Supreme Court for overturning a death sentence has gotten him an honorary membership in the Dodge County Bar Association.

The nationally syndicated columnist recently blasted the court for overturning the sentence of convicted murderer Robert Hunt Jr., who was accused of killing a woman for sexual gratification. The court said the murder didn't meet the state's death penalty standard because it wasn't "especially heinous."

After Nebraska Chief Justice Norman Krivosha criticized Royko, he wrote another column sarcastically apologizing.

Joe Twidwell, county bar association president, said last week's vote to make Royko an honorary member was a "tongue-in-cheek type of action" aimed at Krivosha. "The question on some of our minds is whether our Supreme Court justices should be getting down in the mud with a newspaper reporter," he said.

Royko assistant Paul Sullivan said Royko was honored by the vote.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — British singer Cliff Richards has been removed from the U.N. list of artists to be boycotted for performing in South Africa, a Danish concert tour organizer says.

Arne Worsoe, in charge of the pop star's imminent tour of Scandinavia, West Germany, the Netherlands and Belgium, said Thursday he had worked through South African church leaders, including Bishop Desmond Tutu, to clear up what he called misconceptions about Richards' attitude toward apartheid.

He said a telefax from the U.N. special anti-apartheid committee said Richards had been removed from the list on the basis of his pledge not to perform in South Africa again until the apartheid system is abolished.

"Cliff made the pledge not to make commercial appearances in South Africa long ago," said Worsoe, who also is European agent for such black anti-apartheid artists as Harry Belafonte, Diana Ross and Stevie Wonder.

DAWLISH, England (AP) — British drummer Rory Blackwell has claimed a world record Thursday by beating 191 separate drums in succession in 33.18 seconds before an audience of 1,000 at a holiday camp.

Blackwell, 52, said the previous record — beating 100 drums in one minute — was set by American Gene Krupa at the Detroit Motor Show in August 1939.

"It's all a matter of technique," said Blackwell, who was a drummer for the Lord Rockingham band whose "Hoots Moon" became a No. 1 hit in the British pop charts in 1958.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Lead singer Brian Johnson made a few obscene gestures, teen-age girls tossed bras onto the stage, a few fights broke out and guitarist Angus Young dropped his black knee pants to moon the audience.

But Thursday's concert by the Australian "heavy metal" band AC-DC was rock as usual, according to officials at the Prairie Capital Convention Center.

"It's much louder, but it's more composed" than most concerts, said Chico Bell, a center security officer and off-duty sheriff's deputy.

"Everybody's jumping up and having a good time, but nobody's fighting and throwing beer on each other," Bell said. No beer was sold at the concert.

Fearing protests by groups accusing the band of satanism would lead to clashes with concertgoers, police stationed additional officers around the hall and center officials hired six off-duty officers to bolster security.

But the only protesters were a man and woman who stood outside quietly handing religious pamphlets to concertgoers.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — More than 1,000 friends and colleagues of Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton gathered at a hotel to honor the statesman, who is retiring after 30 years in politics.

Eagleton, 56, told the near-capacity crowd at the $300-a-plate dinner Thursday about the rigors of political life and the important role his family played during trying moments of his career.

"Sacrifice means placing a political life ahead of other things that should have come first, a family for example," said Eagleton, a Democrat. "The frantic, indeed often frenetic pace of politics sometimes puts first things second."

Eagleton, a senator for 18 years, said he was looking forward to joining the faculty at Washington University in St. Louis after he leaves the Senate.

"Teaching is something I want to do," he said. "I've learned a lot in 30 years."

BALTIMORE (AP) — The state attorney general Friday cleared the way for publication of H.L. Mencken's diaries by the city library, which had sharply restricted access to the material because of a 1954 memorandum by the author and newspaperman.

Attorney General Stephen Sachs held that the memorandum, which limited access to the papers to students engaged in "critical or historical investigation," does not have the legal effect of a will.

Mencken, who was known as the "Sage of Baltimore," once called lawyers "obscurantists" and described himself as a "congenital disbeliever in laws." Sachs noted. But "in this case at least," the attorney general wrote, "the law is clear and permits no other conclusion."

Publication of the some 2,100 pages of material, covering 1930 to 1948, "should be of great interest" to Mencken scholars and other students of American literature, said Fred Rasmussen, a former editor of "Menckiana," a quarterly magazine published by the library.

"I have been waiting for this for years," said Rasmussen, one of about a dozen people who have read the diaries, but have been prohibited from quoting, paraphrasing or making any other reference to the material.

The diaries, which even scholars were not allowed to view until 1981, "are certainly illuminating about the people he knew," Rasmussen added.

Among the best-known works by Mencken, who was a writer for The Evening Sun, are "The American Language," "Prejudices: A Selection," and an autobiographical trilogy, "The Days of H.L. Mencken."

The attorney general issued his opinion in response to an inquiry from Michael J. Kelly, the dean of the University of Maryland Law School and chairman of the library's trustees.

The library wants to publish an edited version of the diaries "largely because of our institutional role of encouraging the dissemination of important materials to a wider public," Kelly said.

Following Mencken's death in 1956, his papers, books and other writings were delivered to the Pratt Library by his executors, the Mercantile-Safe Deposit and Trust Co., as ordered in his will.

Sachs held that the separate memorandum to Mencken's executors, in which the author detailed his wishes regarding the disposition of his books and papers, "does not in itself have the legal effect of a will because it was not executed with the formalities required for wills."

LONDON (AP) — Mary Hopkin, a 1960s pop sweetheart whose record "Those Were the Days" was produced by the Beatles' Paul McCartney and sold 8 million copies, has been divorced from American record producer Tony Visconti.

Miss Hopkin, 35, and Visconti, 41, had been married 14 years until Thursday's divorce.

Louvre masks age with cosmetic surgery

PARIS (AP) — Soldiers clad in helmets are getting nose jobs. Fierce lions are gaining brand new snouts. And fleshy Cupids are having their bottoms rounded once again.

The current renovation of the Louvre's 300-year-old exterior, including its ornate statuary, is more than a facelift: It's major, reconstructive surgery.

More than 100 of France's best sculptors, stone masons and metal-smiths have been working for the past 16 months to beautify, repair and preserve the thousands of priceless sculpture that adorn the museum's facades. The estimated cost is around $24 million.

The walls of the Louvre were cleaned some 15 years ago. However, the ornate busts, heads, statues, capitals, friezes and columns fashioned over three centuries in the Cour Carré (square courtyard) had been left to darken and crumble. There are no plans to repair the facade of the Louvre's other courtyard, the Cour Napoleon, a large horseshoe formed by the palace's north and south wings, because of the high costs.

Experts blame auto exhausts for the sorry state of many of the statues. Pollution has covered the gray granite with black grime that eats its way into the stone like a slow cancer. This combines with vibrations from heavy city traffic and the subway under the Louvre to crack and destroy the carvings from without and within.

Most visitors to the Louvre, once the home of French royalty, pay little attention to the curious creations overhead.

Some are beautiful; some downright outrageous. Critics say that because each generation of architects sought to outdo its predecessors, the sculptures are a jumble of styles that often poke fun at earlier architectural trends.

The massive repair job is being done in conjunction with archeological excavations in the Louvre's two courtyards. The Cour Napoleon has revealed treasures from 17th, 18th and 19th century Paris; the Cour Carré offered up the base of the keep of the first Louvre, built as a walled fortress in 1200 by Philippe Auguste.

Most of the excavation sites will be plowed under to make way for the Louvre's new entrance — a tall glass pyramid designed by celebrated architect I.M. Pei, but the site of the 600-year-old keep which will become part of the Louvre's permanent display.

Dozens of prize-winning sculptors trained at the respected Beaux Arts Academy currently are putting finishing restoration of the earliest, and least fragile, sculpture designed by Jean Goujon in the 1500s.

Extra-wide scaffolding gives workers easy access to the statues, many of which are considered too fragile to move. In some cases, the sculptors work from drawings, paintings and photographs of similar creations to make sure the new features, flower petals, arms, legs, tongues or noses duplicate the original.

Usually, blocks of uncut granite are fixed onto the statue and the sculptor chisels a new feature exactly where the old one was.

Renovation of the Louvre's exterior, expected to be completed by the end of the year, is but one facet of French President Francois Mitterrand's vast plan to restore the Louvre as the world's greatest treasure house.

The cornerstone of the $250 million project is the creation of a new museum entrance to be capped by the 90-foot-tall pyramid leading down to two underground levels for storage, administration, library and restoration facilities.

Badly needed exhibition space will be gained when the French Finance Ministry vacates the museum's northern wing, and a subterranean corridor will transport priceless art objects from one end of the museum to the other — now almost a mile apart.

'Time greatest enemy' to Palestinian Arabs

By CHARLES P. WALLACE

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BETHLEHEM, Israeli-Occupied West Bank — "Time," said Elias Freij, the mayor of Bethlehem, "is our greatest enemy."

"With every passing day, the Israelis are digging in," the 66-year-old Palestinian said. "While Arabs are chatting, Israeli bulldozers are working, building settlements."

Surveying the sun-bleached hills of the Holy Land from the steps of his office, Freij sounds almost desperate in his desire to see talks open between the Arabs and Israel.

"Otherwise, 20 years from now," Freij adds, pointing to his town, "all of this will be Jewish. My loyalty is to the ground, to Arab land."

Perhaps now more than at any time in the last few years, there is rising optimism that negotiations will take place to finally settle the Middle East crisis. But, beneath the optimism, there is a familiar layer of disbelief and doubt. After all, the Middle East is as littered with failed peace initiatives as it is with the debris of war.

"Either the Arab peace efforts are met on the Israeli side and supported by Western Europe and the United States," said Cheddi Klibi, secretary general of the Tunis-based Arab League, or "Israel can continue to reject all peace settlements and continue its policy of force. In this latter case I can only envision darkness, for Israel as well as for the Arabs. Lebanon has given us a taste of this darkness."

The Arabs and Israelis have fought five major conflicts since Israel was established by United Nations mandate in 1948. The wars have cost thousands of lives and billions of dollars, and each of the conflicts, while different in a number of respects, had the "Palestinian problem" at its roots.

IT HAS seemed an intractable problem. How to reconcile Israel's desire to live secure from the threat of Arab attack with the demands of more than 4 million Arab refugees, the Palestinians, for the vaguely defined right of "self-determination" — usually interpreted as meaning an independent Palestinian state. Much of the current optimism is based on a new initiative launched last November by Jordan's King Hussein.

Hussein appeared before a meeting of the Palestine National Council, a sort of parliament in exile for the Palestinians, and offered to pursue with the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization a joint approach to peace with Israel.

In February, the process moved a step further when Hussein and Yasser Arafat, chairman of the PLO, agreed to a "joint framework" for peace that included a call for an international conference to settle the conflict and a solution that envisaged a "confederation" between Jordan and the Palestinian West Bank.

Gone was the rhetoric about driving Israel into the sea. While it is far from clear that the new initiative will have any success, Hussein was reported to have found a sympathetic response in Washington, whose support is generally regarded as crucial in reaching an accommodation with Israel.

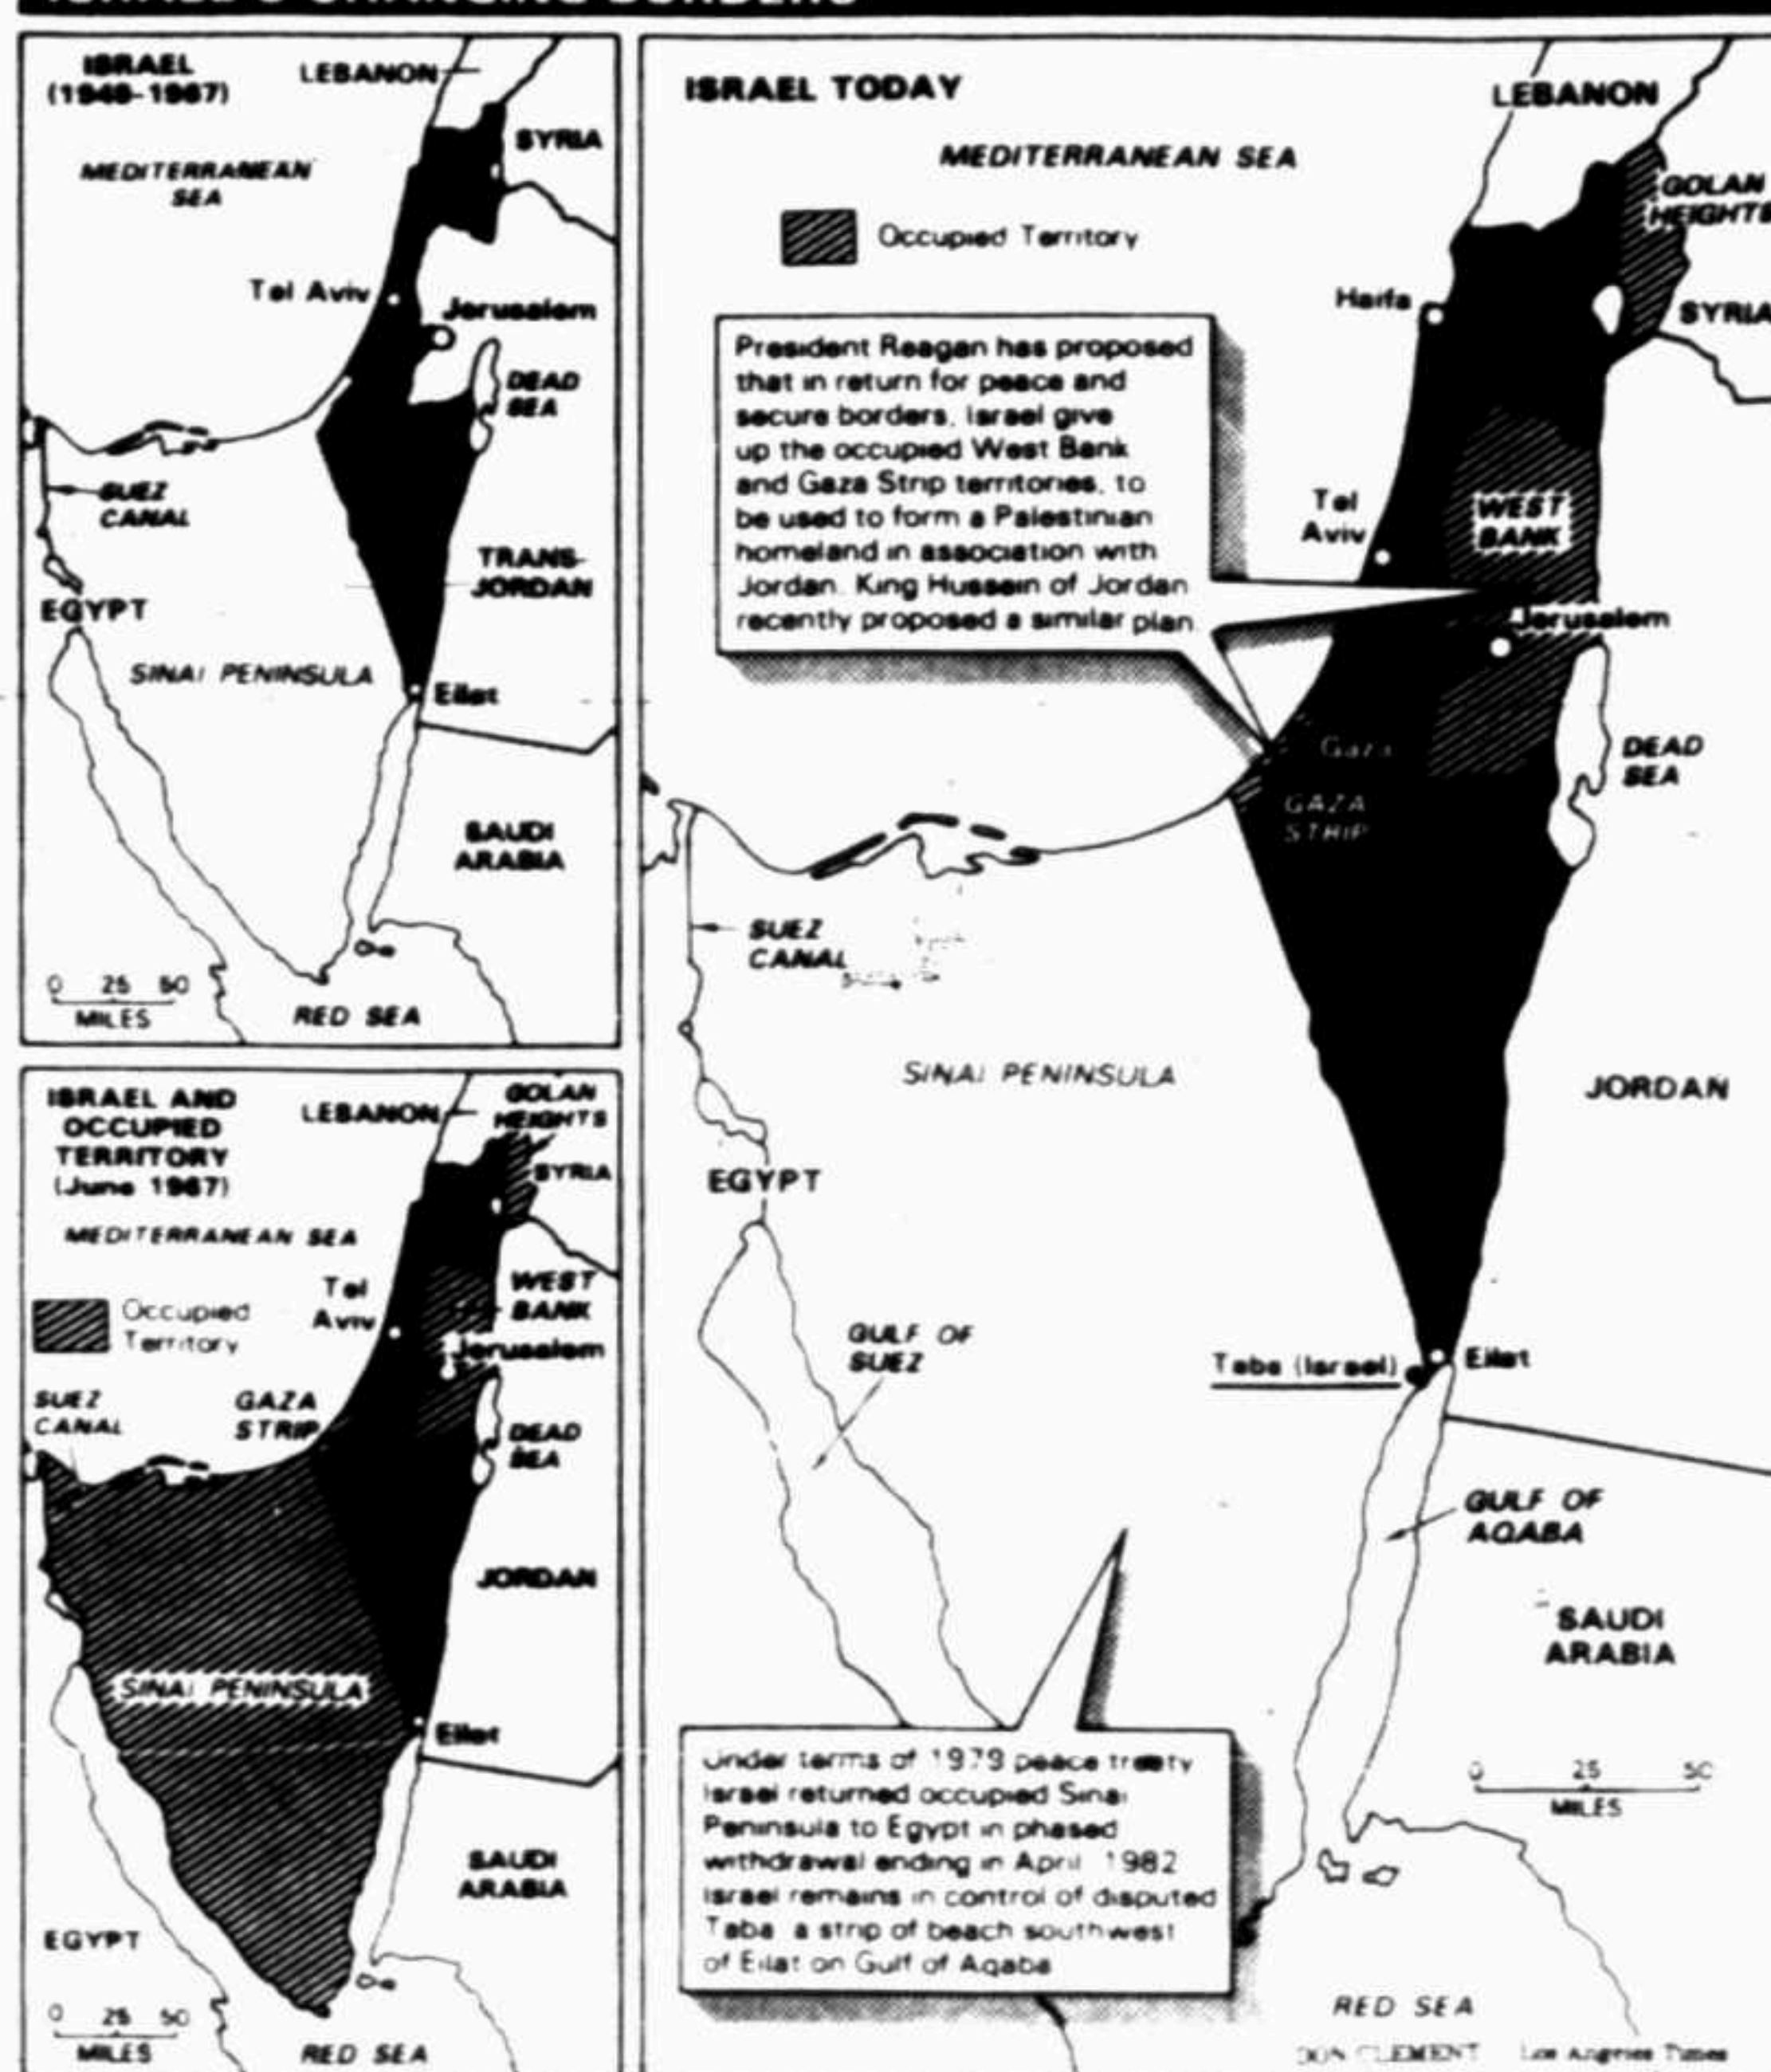

"There certainly seems to be some movement," said one Western diplomat who has studied the peace process. "But keep in mind that all the movement has been over procedural matters, such as who will take part in the talks, and they haven't addressed any basic issues. That's where the headaches begin."

THERE HAS been little progress toward peace in the Middle East since March 26, 1979, when Egypt and Israel signed a treaty that put an end to hostilities between the two countries and provided a timetable for Israeli withdrawal from occupied Egyptian lands in the Sinai Peninsula.

The treaty also provided for beginning negotiations, which Jordan was invited to join, with the aim of creating a self-governing entity in the West Bank and in the Gaza Strip, areas that Israel captured from Jordan and Egypt, respectively, during the 1967 Six-Day War.

In retrospect, it is difficult to see how any of the parties genuinely expected the negotiations to succeed. "The Camp David treaty assigned roles to both the Palestinians and

ISRAEL'S CHANGING BORDERS

King Hussein without ever consulting them. It was a complete non-starter," noted one Arab academician.

Hussein, whose grandfather had been crowned King of All Palestine in December 1948, acidly described the Egypt-Israel peace treaty as "a separate peace which cannot lead to a just and comprehensive peace."

Arafat prophetically speculated that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, one of the architects of the treaty, would meet a violent end, and he called for a complete boycott of the United States because of President Jimmy Carter's role in helping negotiate the treaty.

In Damascus, 500,000 Syrians marched to protest the signing of the treaty and tried to get the matter placed before the U.N. Security Council.

Pundits at the time recalled Henry A. Kissinger's famous epigram: "There can be no war without Egypt, but no peace without Syria."

A SENIOR Western military analyst in the region said: "Not only is Israel strong, but Israel is now stronger than ever before. Sure, Syria has a lot of arms, but when it comes right down to it, the Israelis could whip the pants off them, and the Syrians know it. Behind the rhetoric, the Syrians have a healthy respect and understanding of Israel's military strength."

That strength has been tested, as never before, in Lebanon. In the second week of June, the Israel Defense Forces announced that it had completed its formal withdrawal from Lebanon, three years after invading the country in an effort to forever rid Israel's northern border of the threat from Palestinian guerrillas.

Five hundred Israeli "military advisers" remain in a security zone along the border, so the withdrawal is not complete. But the Lebanon war is still generally regarded in the Arab world as Israel's first defeat.

The Israeli retreat was brought about largely as the result of attacks by Shia Moslem extremists who carried out a series of suicide attacks, such as driving cars laden with explosives into Israeli convoys at a great loss of life.

While the Israelis have shown little sign that they are prepared to make significant concessions for a settlement of the crisis at this time, a combination of factors has given the appearance, at least, that the Arabs are taking a more flexible position.

The creation of a "moderate axis" in the Arab world — of Egypt, Jordan, Iraq and the PLO — may produce sufficient strength to resist efforts by Syria and Libya to undo any peace talks that leave them out of the equation.

HUSSEIN IS SAID to believe that the reelection of President Reagan has for the first time in two decades left a stable U.S. administration in power for a second term, thus presumably less concerned — at least for the first two years — with election worries. The theory is that Reagan may be able to pressure Israel now while he couldn't before.

In fact, Reagan proposed a peace initiative of his own in September, 1982, after the evacuation of PLO forces from Beirut.

The Reagan plan, in fact, was remarkably similar to the plan put forward by Hussein. It called for autonomy for residents of the West Bank and Gaza Strip in confederation with Jordan. Hussein rejected the Reagan initiative the day after it was announced.

A major obstacle to peace talks has always been the PLO's refusal to accept U.N. Security Council Resolution 242, which assures the nations of the region the right to exist within secure boundaries.

The Palestinians say they have refused to accept Resolution 242 because it refers to the Palestinians simply as refugees.

But even that stance appears to be changing, with Hussein remarking during his recent trip to Washington that Arafat is now prepared to accept the resolution as the basis for talks.

The PLO has even dropped its demand for recognition by Israel as the Palestinians' sole legitimate representative, demanding instead a far milder commitment from Washington to work for the right of self-determination.

The Palestinians have frequently been accused of accepting "last year's peace plan," meaning that by the time the PLO gets around to accepting Israel's conditions, the conditions have changed.

THERE ARE elements of this problem present at the moment. Asked during a recent radio interview about Hussein's agreement to negotiate on the basis of exchanging peace for territory, former Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon remarked that the Arabs would only get one thing in exchange for peace — peace.

Other Israeli officials have taken a similar hard line. In March, 1979, Prime Minister Menachem Begin predicted: "Israel will never go back to its pre-June 1967 borders. Israel will never allow the creation of a Palestinian state in the West Bank. Reunited Jerusalem will eternally remain Israel's capital and will never again be divided."

Among Western observers, too, there is the conviction that the Arabs will never be able to win Israeli agreement to withdraw entirely from the areas occupied during the 1967 war, especially Jerusalem, and that without that withdrawal, there probably would not be much chance of a settlement.

"It may be too late already," Hussein said in a recent television broadcast. "We hope and pray it isn't. This is the 11th hour..."

Elegant Cairo has seen 'glory days'

By DAVID LAMB

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

CAIRO, Egypt — Overlooking Cairo's main downtown square is a 13-story government building known as Mogamaa (the Gathering). It is an arc-shaped, cheerless structure, full of dark corridors and filthy offices, and in wandering its upper floors, one feels one has entered a slum.

Rubbish tossed from the offices litters the hallways. Discarded furniture and garbage hurled into the courtyard stand nearly a story high. The windows' glass panes are either broken or caked with grime. Dirt clings to the walls, turning the faded blue paint earth-brown, cobwebs dangle from light sockets that have no bulbs.

The public relations officer of Mogamaa, Saleh Moshref, refuses to say how many people work in the building or even when it was constructed. "That's a secret," he declares.

But surely there are thousands tucked away in the dim crannies of six ministries, each drawing his $40 a month and enduring his daily drudgery with a stoicism that is inherent to all Egyptians.

In a sad way, Mogamaa symbolizes Egypt itself. Once it was an imposing structure and rather grand, standing taller than anything in sight. That was some time ago, however, and today the building is noteworthy primarily because of its deterioration.

As for Egypt, it, too, is gripped by decay, economic and intellectual, and is in danger of becoming, in the words of one Cabinet minister, "Bangladesh on the shores of the Mediterranean."

"For 5,000 years, people have come to Egypt to learn," said Salah Zoufoukai, a successful character actor. "We were so much once. Now we are not. What can we teach anyone any more?"

ZOUFOUKAI's comments seem to reflect the general mood of Egypt in the post-Sadat era. It is one of resignation and indifference, a sense that control and direction have been lost and that everything is in decline.

With too many people (46 million) and not enough money (per capita income $460), the land that gave birth to one of the world's first great civilizations increasingly dwells on what it was rather than what it will be.

"Just surviving in Cairo is so exhausting, there's no time for creativity," said Amin Hosni, a university professor. "And as things get worse, people have become cynical. They've lost their friendliness, their cheerfulness. A lot of this, I think, goes back to '67 and the war against Israel. Egypt was like a balloon then, high on Arabism. Then, with the defeat, it collapsed."

President Hosni Mubarak, 56, an air force general who succeeded the assassinated Anwar Sadat in October 1981, has tried to restore the Egyptian's sense of national esteem. He has offered steady leadership, overseen Egypt's skillfully executed foreign policy and guided the country back into the Arab orbit. On all fronts he has moved cautiously, giving top priority to security concerns born of Libyan meddling and Islamic fundamentalism.

A less exciting, more plodding performer than his predecessors, Sadat and Gamal Abdel Nasser, Mubarak runs a non-ideological, authoritarian regime that functions with some trappings of democracy. He deals with the opposition — particularly the Islamic fundamentalists — through a policy of appeasement, but seems to have run into difficulties on that score because the more he gives, the more they demand.

"MUBARAK HAS lowered the temperature of the country, and he is doing all right in preventing day-to-day problems," said Mohammed Hassanein Heikal, an Egyptian writer, who was a critic of Sadat. "He's not a great visionary, but then, things could have been worse. Sadat would have led us into civil war. Or suppose we had gotten a crazy dictator after Sadat?"

Statistics alone suggest that Mubarak is fighting a difficult battle. With half the population under 21, nearly 400,000 Egyptians enter the job market annually to compete for positions that do not exist. The nation's 13 universities are turning out 40,000 graduates a year, many of whom end up driving cabs or waiting on tables. In the Ministry of Agriculture, there are 2,000 Ph.D.s, most sit at empty desks without telephones or typewriters.

Food production is growing at the rate of 2 percent a year, but consumption is rising 5 percent, and Egypt's daily bill for imported food has reached $10 million. Energy use is increasing 16 percent a year, and unless Egypt curbs consumption, its oil reserves — currently worth $3 billion a year — will run out before the end of the century, said Oil Minister Abdel-Hadi Kandil.

But $3 billion worth of annual government subsidies for fuel and essential food items keeps prices artificially low and thwart any attempts to encourage public conservation.

Egyptians, for example, pay only 28 percent of the average world market price for gasoline, and the pricing structure has gotten so out of control that a quart of gas cost 12 cents, a quart of milk 17 cents and a quart of drinking water from the Nile 32 cents. Teachers earn $40 a month, about half what an illiterate maid can make working part time.

"It's pretty obvious something has gone wrong," said Agriculture Minister Youssef Wali. DESPITE THE grim state of Egypt's economic health, the High Dam at Aswan has spared the country the drought suffered by its neighbors, and Egypt's extended-family system and bountiful vegetable crops ensure that no one starves here.

Golden days of power end for Arabs

By DAVID LAMB

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

CAIRO, Egypt — The golden days of moneyed power have ended for the Arabs as suddenly as they began. Today, their influence is on the wane, and Arabs have entered a period of disillusioned self-examination, asking, "What went wrong?"

Just a few years ago, in the 1970s and the early 1980s, the Arabs were widely regarded as an emerging world power. Egyptian troops had crossed the Suez Canal. Oil sheikhs had humbled Western economies. The Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini of neighboring but non-Arab Iran had treated both the U.S. and Soviet governments with contempt and gotten away with it. The Lebanon-based Palestine Liberation Organization had become the world's best-known, best-armed, most-prosperous guerrilla organization, a law unto itself.

The 167 million Arabs embraced their decade of destiny with a cocky exuberance. Their history was one of men and deeds, not ideas, their dream one of power more than unity, and from the deserts of Arabia to the cities of the Maghreb, there began a frantic dash toward the 21st Century. It was a revolution of the spirit that cried out for ideas and unity. Without them, the dream built on money and religion was to be elusive and perhaps, it seems now in 1985, illusory.

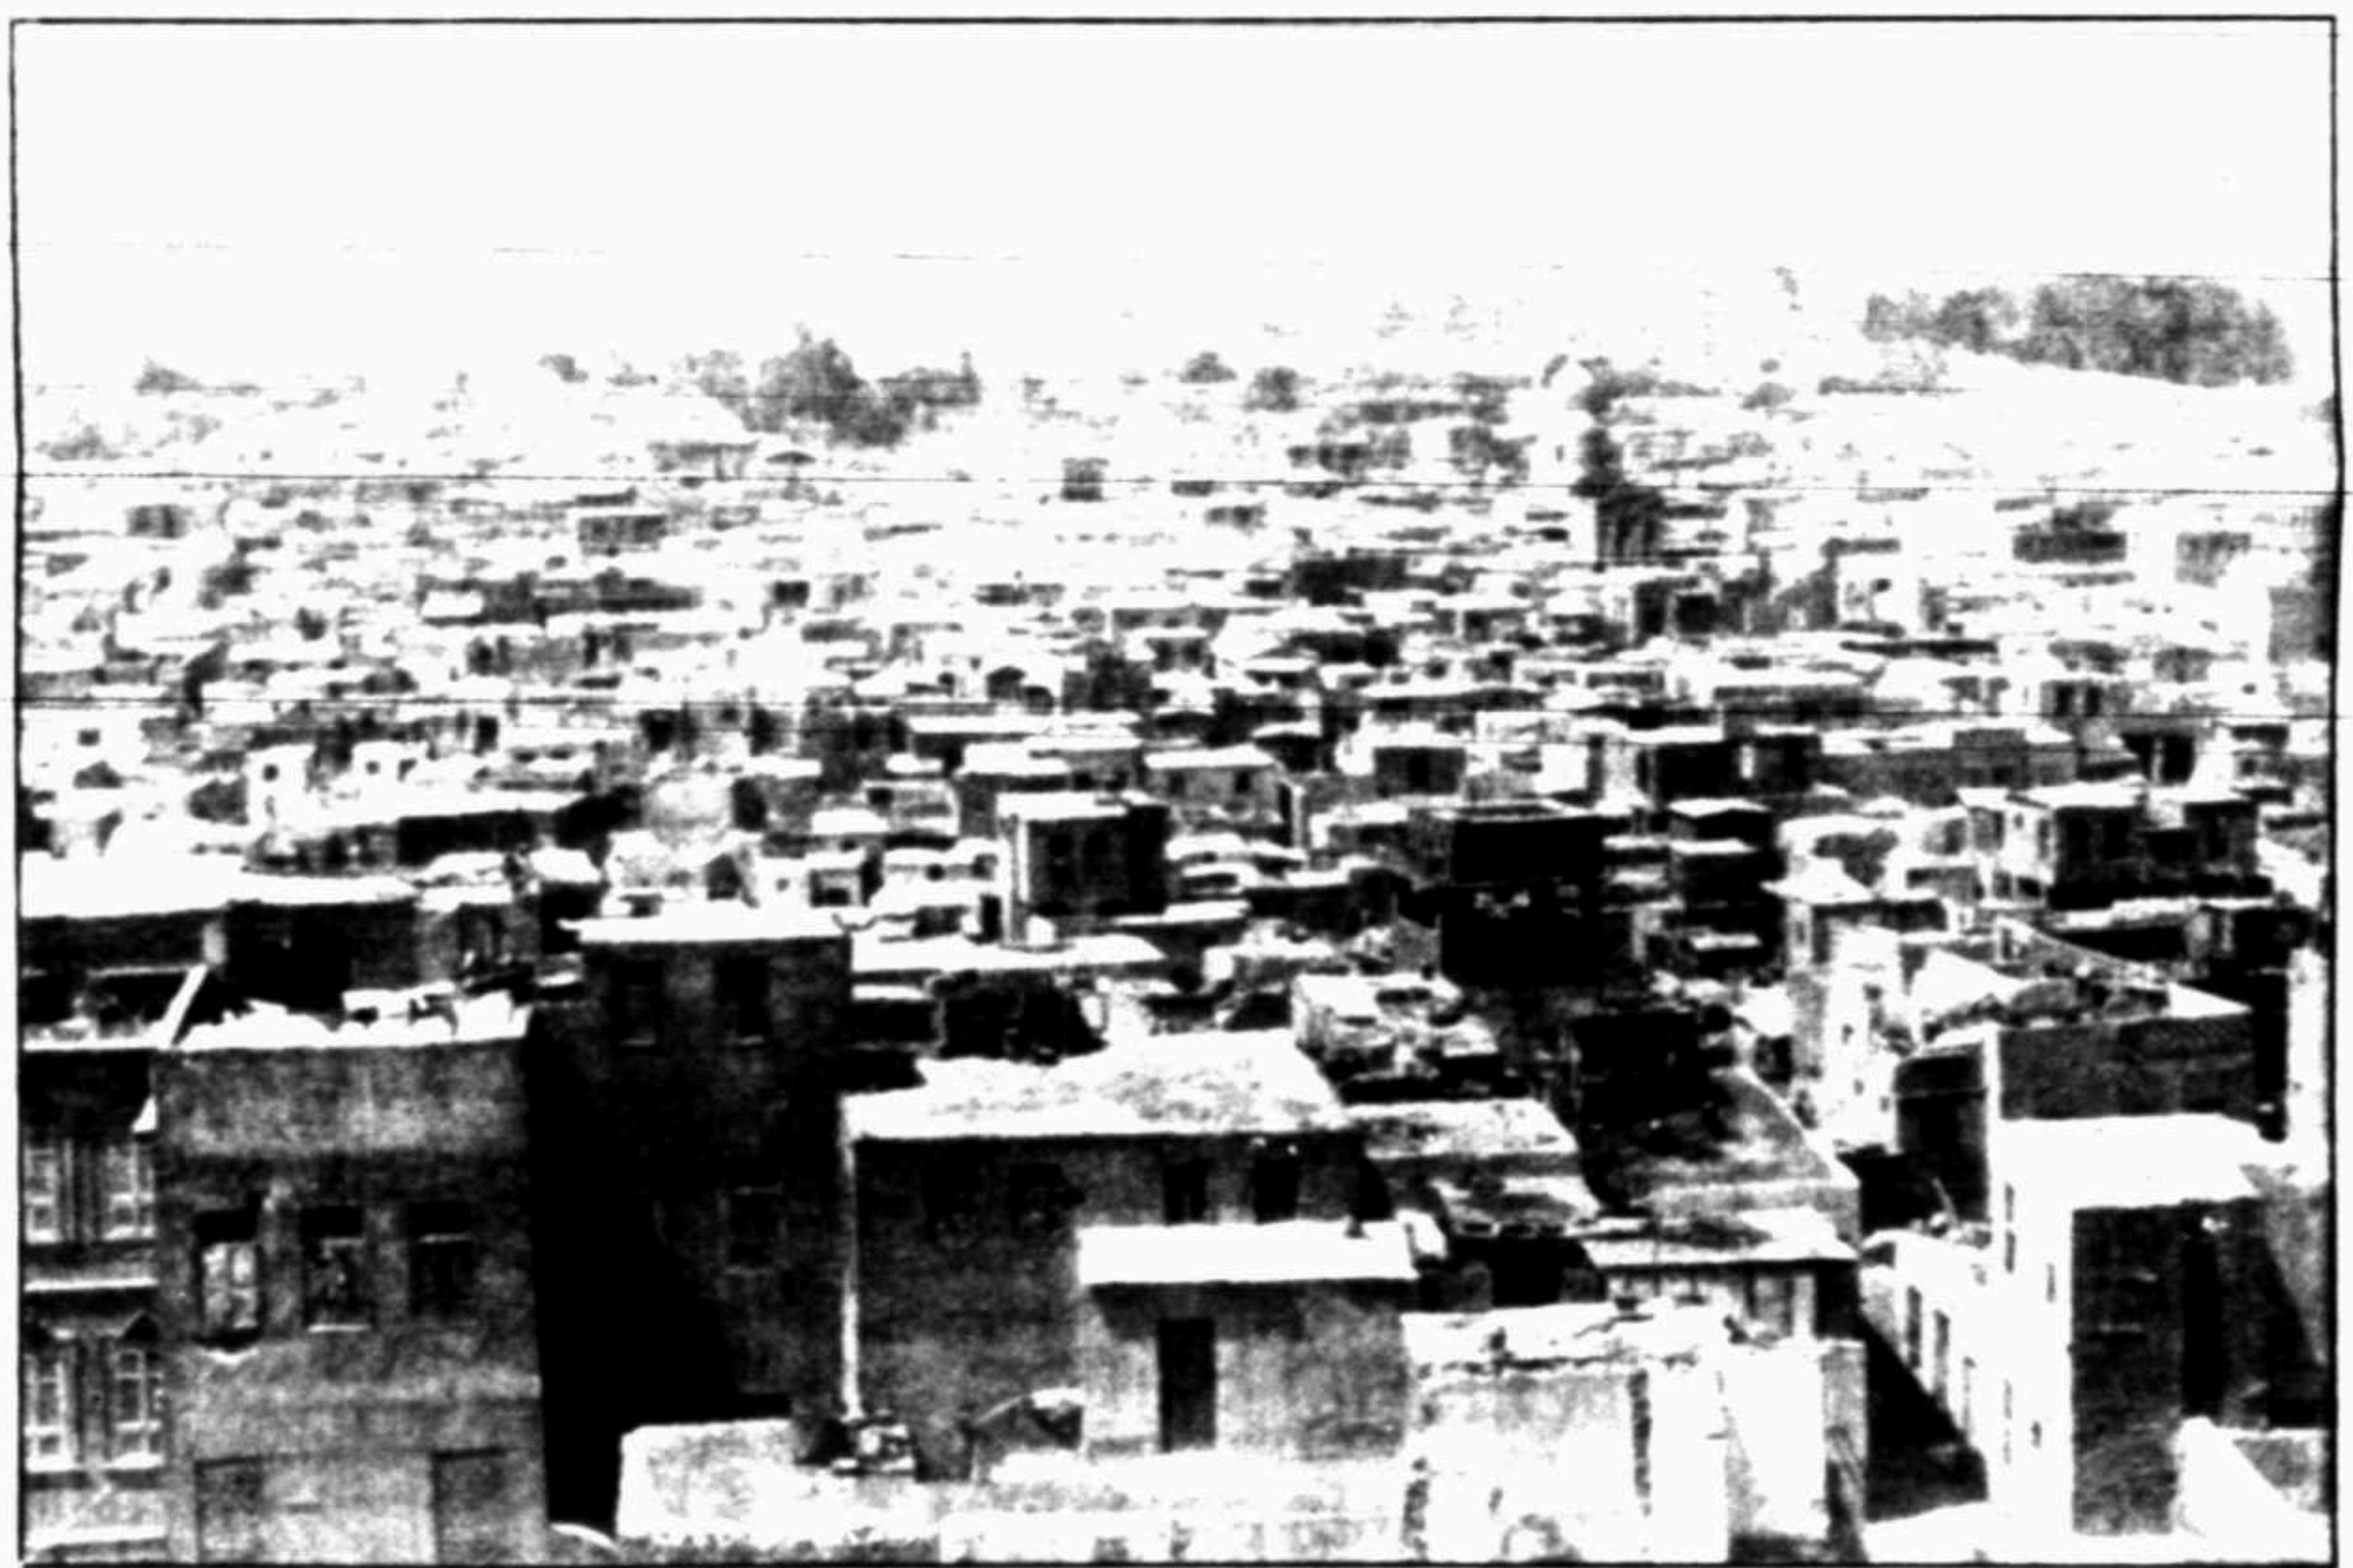

Oil did not produce political power. The Camp David accords and other initiatives did not bring peace to the Middle East. Today, Lebanon is engulfed in self-ignited flames. Iraq and Iran are using poison gas and aerial bombardments to destroy each other. The Palestinians are in their third diaspora — first expelled from Israel in 1948, then from Jordan in 1970 and from Lebanon in 1982. Five wars with Israel have brought 3,000 square miles of Arab land under Israeli occupation but yielded not an inch of Palestine for Arabs. Khomeini, who briefly symbolized the hope of the Islamic revival, has become, in the eyes of most Arabs, little more than a scoundrel, a brutal old man who manipulates religion for political purposes.

AND THE Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, dominated by the Arabs, is unable even to agree on how to shore up world oil prices or how to maintain its own slipping share of the market.

"Nobody was ready for all the money that descended on us, and right now the Moslem world is a mess," said Bahrain's minister of development, Youssef Shirawi. "We accepted the manifestations of a modern civilization but refused its rulings. We accepted technology, for instance, but not science. People became confused, and they ran away to find comfort in Islam."

The Arabs, a tradition-bound people who prize conformity more than individuality, forgot that only two things made their region important to the Western community — oil and the presence of Israel. They had little else to export, culturally or otherwise, that the world wanted, and when they lost control of the oil market and proved unable to destroy Zionism, a piece of their dream — and some of the world's attention — slipped away.

Today, all too often, it is only the religiously inspired fanatics who capture the headlines. Yet the crimes of terrorists — including the murder of at least 280 Americans in the Middle East in the last three years and the hijacking in June of TWA flight 847 over the Mediterranean — do not reflect the tenets of Islam or the character of the vast Arab majority. Such actions, produced by the frustration and ignorance of a tiny minority, are regarded by many Arabs as a stigma on a society that values justice, compassion and tolerance as fervently as any other.

Once-elegant Cairo, a city of more than 5 million people, provides a tattered backdrop to Egypt's modern problems.

FOR MOST ARABS, this fanaticism represents further proof that the secular system has failed them. What they wanted was Western technology, but not at the cost of losing their Eastern identity or culture. They now see it as an Arab world drifting away from its heritage, awash in materialism and selfishness, and the vision makes them uneasy.

Confronted by the pressures of a Western-style, oil-induced modernity that challenged traditions and values, many Arabs are doing what other people have done in times of crisis: They are turning to religion. The muezzins' call rolls from the mosques like thunder, summoning the multitudes with a message of hope.

God is great.
I testify that there is no God but one God.

I testify that Mohammed is His Prophet.
Come to prayers.
Come to success.
God is great.
No God but one God.

What the call to prayer promises is a return to simpler times and "perfect" life for those who abide strictly by the revelations that Mohammed, then an illiterate merchant, is said to have received from Allah 13 centuries ago and set forth in the Koran. For the believers, coping with modernity does not require intellectual development or imaginative solutions. Indeed, in Islamic institutions, the very word innovation is heresy.

because nothing is new; all knowledge is in the Koran, and even modern science is viewed as something of an atheistic tool.

"THE THEORY OF knowledge for Moslems in the Arab world is different than that in the West," said Hussein Amin, a senior Egyptian diplomat and a writer on Islamic affairs.

"With you in the West, knowledge is the means to conquer the unknown. With us, it is a collection of material embodied in books which you can possess by reading — and the older the books, the better. True Moslems believe that what Mohammed left is perfect for all countries and all times, so developing Islam is out of the question."

The Arabs were — and still are — desert people, shaped by the harshness of their environment. Their poetry celebrates endurance and survival, not the joyfulness of love and life. They cherish tribe and family, offer hospitality to friend and foe alike and consider it a grave crime to leave the path of one's father. They refer to the practices of Mohammed as the "Sunna," meaning "the road," and refer to good behavior with an expression that translates as "the known." Walking the known road is always best.

Traveling the Arab world today, one is struck by the sameness of social behavior and, except for the boisterous Egyptians, by the lack of levity and gentle tones. No frivolous fads take hold here, and moods are the color of the earth. Life, like the atonal Arabic music, has a rough edge, forged from struggle.

"We have a sense of humor, but we are not a gay people," said one Tunisian painter.

But neither are the Arabs defeatists or pessimists. Despite the frustrations of the oil era, there is an overriding faith that Islam and Arab righteousness will somehow prevail in the end, that patience will be rewarded. Arabs are solemn without being downbeat. They view the turbulence that shakes their region as a temporary obstacle on the road to peace, power and prosperity. Yet only Egypt has dared execute national policies that ended a generation of warfare with Israel.

"EVERYONE knows what he wants, and everyone wants peace and everyone knows how to go about it," said Ashraf Ghorbal, the former Egyptian ambassador to the United States. "But we haven't collected the courage to do it, to take the steps, and that is the tragedy."

The Arabs, in fact, cannot take the steps collectively because they are held hostage by the myth of Arab unity. Pan-Arabism — which at its core is also anti-Zionist — was born early in this century but was articulated most forcefully in the 1950s and 1960s by Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser. Under his leadership, pan-Arabism became the foundation of Arab dreams for a homogeneous region sharing one language, one religion, one heritage, one common purpose. No leader would dare dismiss such noble sentiments today, so the myth lingers that the interests of the whole are greater than those of the parts.

But, in fact, the 21-member Arab League is so paralyzed by intra-Arab strife that the heads of state have been unable to hold a summit since September 1962. The league's charter — based on the unity myth — dictates that decisions must be made unanimously rather than by the majority. Thus no controversial decisions are made, and no nation can move faster than its brethren, particularly if its economic survival depends on the Saudi Arabian and Kuwaiti subsidies that many political analysts regard as a form of fraternal blackmail.

The oil states have underwritten Iraq's war effort against Iran with an estimated $30 billion. They have provided a third of Jordan's 1981-82 development budget, kept the PLO alive with an endless infusion of cash and subsidized the economies of poorer countries from Bahrain to Morocco.

Today is deadline to pre-enter derby

From Staff Reports

Deadline for pre-entering a car in the Super National 2 Demolition Derby, sponsored by the Midland Suburban Lions Club, is today. Those who are not pre-entered may drive in the derby by bringing their cars to Twin Cities Speedway, east of Odessa Country Club's golf course on Highway 80, beginning at noon Sunday. The derby is set for 2:30 p.m. at the speedway.

Entry fee for a car in the derby is $25 per car. Individual or team entries are accepted. A cash prize of $500 is being given for the most cars entered in a derby team as well as a 6-foot trophy. No experience is necessary. The derby is open to anyone who wants to test his or her skill in wiping out the competition.

To pre-enter go by A-Quick Signs, 2917 W. Industrial Ave., or call 683-8541. The office will be open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Total prize money is $2700. Special awards, including three 6-foot trophies and 10 2-foot trophies, also will be awarded.

Capacity crowds have attended the previous derbies. Gates open at noon Sunday. Cost of admission for spectators is $6.50 for adults, $2 for ages six to 11 and those younger are admitted free.

John O. Gillum, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gillum, has received the Eagle Scout award. He is a member of Troop 211, which is sponsored by the Optimist Club of Midland.

Jeffrey A. Gillum recently received his Eagle Scout award. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gillum and is a member of Troop 211. The Optimist Club of Midland is the sponsor.

Aaron Mills, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Mills, recently received his Eagle Scout award. He is a member of Troop 211, which is sponsored by Optimist Club of Midland.

Musical group

Together, Jeff Watson, from left, Jack Blades, Brad Gillis, Alan "Fitz"gerald and Kelly Keagy are known as Night Ranger, the band headlining today's 8 p.m. rock concert at Ector County Coliseum. The group, which evolved from the California funk-rock band Rubicon, first received national recognition three years ago with "Don't Tell Me You Love Me." The group's second album, "Midnight Madness," produced "You Can Still Rock in America," "When You Close Your Eyes" and "Sister Christian." The LP spent over a year on Billboard's Hot 100 Album Chart, sold two million copies and produced the above three ARO No. 1 tracks. "Sister Christian" was also a Top Five Pop single. Night Ranger's latest album is "7 Wishes." Also performing on the same venue is Cheap Trick. Tickets, priced at $13.50, may be purchased at the door.
