Freight trains collide; Five dead

WIGGINS, Colo. (AP) — Two Burlington Northern freight trains collided head-on "in a big ball of flame" early Friday near a spot where one normally would be waiting on a siding. Five crew members were killed and two injured.

Four others escaped injury in the collision, which railroad officials said involved 149 cars and 10 locomotives traveling at a combined speed of 55-65 mph.

Schools were closed because of the smoky fire but no residents were evacuated from this small farming community about 60 miles northeast of Denver.

"When those cars started banging, you could hear a boom, boom, boom," said Jim Vance, a Wiggins resident. "It woke me up. I didn't know if I was dreaming or what. There was a big ball of flame and black smoke rolling up. It looked like the whole side of Wiggins was on fire."

The two "hot shot" or high priority trains meet at Wiggins every morning along the main track between Chicago and Denver, said Bill Joplin, a Burlington Northern spokesman in Denver.

Normally, one will pull into a siding, but Friday the two collided at 3:55 a.m. about 1,000 feet from the siding, said Pat Stafford, a spokesman for Burlington Northern Railroad in St. Paul, Minn.

"There is some conjecture (the eastbound train) was traveling slowly to take the siding," said Stafford. "The collision occurred 700-1,000 feet west of the west switch of the siding."

Gordon Ingils of the National Transportation Safety Board in Denver said the eastbound freight had slowed to about 15-20 mph in anticipation of stopping at the siding.

The westbound train was "going full speed" and failed to stop at the red signal light, colliding with the eastbound train about 800 feet west of the siding, he said.

The speed limit on the Burlington Northern tracks is 60 mph, railroad officials said.

"We do know the signals were functioning properly," said Joplin. "We know the westbound No. 163 went through the switch but we don't know the reason."

A preliminary investigation of tapes did not indicate any communication between the crews or between the crews and the regional Burlington Northern dispatcher in McCook, Neb.

"You can't even tell they were engines anymore, they are so brown," said Vance. "It just wiped the whole top of them out."

The fiery collision occurred on the western edge of town, several hundred yards from a scattering of mobile homes and houses, officials said.

Freight cars were stacked on top of each other on each side of the bent and broken rail, and a string of derailed cars stretched through town.

Mike Martin, a Burlington Northern supervisor from Denver, said that in addition to the 10 engines, a total of 36 cars derailed. The westbound train lost 33 cars and the eastbound train lost three along the 1.5-mile stretch of track, he said.

Krueger, Doggett condemn mining of Nicaraguan ports

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Democratic Senate candidates Bob Krueger and Texas Sen. Lloyd Doggett condemned the mining of Nicaraguan ports in separate campaign appearances Friday in the Midland-Odessa area.

"We shouldn't be mining international waters," said Krueger in a brief stop at Midland Regional Airport. "It's dangerous to the ships of our allies."

Doggett, in an Odessa press conference, called the mining "essentially an act of war." He said that Sandinista influence in Central America should be contained, but that the Reagan administration was leading the country "into another no-win war."

Krueger also reiterated his support of social security, which had been questioned by recent ads for U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, and accused both his two leading opponents of ignoring the issues and concentrating on personal attacks.

"Their negative approach is hurting them," said Krueger, citing polls which he says give him 46 percent of the potential vote to 15 percent for Doggett and 8 percent for Hance.

Krueger said he opposed the bill extending price controls on natural gas which was approved this week by the House Energy and Commerce committee.

"It's counterproductive," he said. "We need less regulation, not more."

Doggett also said he opposed the gas bill, which he called "bad policy."

"I favor deregulation of gas, but not because Exxon is for it," said Doggett. "It will help create jobs."

Doggett attacked Krueger for "flip-flopping" on the issues and for his congressional attendance record.

"In Bob's absence, $1.5 trillion worth of expenditures were considered," said Doggett. "You can't do anything about the deficit when you're not there on the job."

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower appeared with Doggett to support his candidacy.

"Out here in the countryside, people are flat on their backs due to Reaganomics," said Hightower. "Lloyd would protect that constituency in Washington. A new farm bill will be written in Washington in 1985, and I want a guy like Lloyd Doggett up there to help write it."

Jury condemns Henry Lee Lucas to death

By MIKE COCHRAN

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas, who claims to have killed 360 people nationwide, was condemned to death Friday night by a jury that convicted him of the 1979 murder of an unidentified hitchhiker.

It was the first such verdict for Lucas, who previously received a life sentence and a 75-year prison term in two other Texas murder cases.

The State District Court jury deliberated for only about 40 minutes before deciding Lucas should die by lethal injection for the slaying.

Lucas, 47, who had indicated he expected the death penalty, smiled as he was led from the courthouse in handcuffs after the jury's decision.

"I still feel the same as I did. I haven't changed," he told reporters.

"I didn't do it, but I'm happy anyway," defense attorney Don Higginbotham said. "I think Henry is crying out for help, no matter what you think about him. He's had such a tormented life, there's nothing else of much import anymore."

In final arguments before the jury's penalty deliberations, Lucas' lawyers pleaded for mercy.

"I can't tell you Henry is not a killer," said defense lawyer Max Parker. "But Henry Lucas is not an animal. He's a human being."

Higginbotham told the jurors, "You've been asked to kill Henry Lucas for retribution. It's pure and simple."

"Send him off for life," Higginbotham said. "Get him out of society. Give him the help he's asking for."

Woman rescues infant as trapped gasses ignite

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin woman was described as "a hero in the true sense of the word" after pulling an 18-month-old infant from a burning apartment Friday just moments before trapped gasses exploded.

"She braved the flames and rescued a child who would no doubt have died," Fire Department Capt. Danny Stamper said of Janice Ray, 24, a neighbor who pulled the infant through a bedroom window.

The fire was reported at 1235 a.m. in a south Austin apartment complex.

Miss Ray said she was in her apartment when she heard an exploding noise. She looked out the window and saw flames. She ran toward the burning apartment, passing a man who said the unit was on fire and a baby was inside.

Millionaire race car driver kills himself

COLEBROOK, N.H. (AP) — Christopher Bernard Wilder, a millionaire race car driver suspected of kidnapping and murdering young women, shot himself to death Friday when police confronted him near the Canadian border after a nationwide manhunt, authorities said.

Wilder, 39, a Florida resident with dual U.S.-Australian citizenship, had been wanted for questioning by the FBI in a nationwide string of 11 abductions of young women, including four who were slain.

Wilder's identity was confirmed in Washington by FBI spokesman Lane Bonner, who said the agency had made positive fingerprint identification.

He was a millionaire electrical contractor from Boynton Beach, Fla., who raced sports cars as a hobby.

The abductions started Feb. 26 and reached from Florida to California and back to upstate New York, where the body of Beth Dodge, of Phelps, N.Y., was found Thursday and a teen-age Indiana girl was found walking along a road with multiple stab wounds.

It was "definitely one of the most (intense) and to the recent memory of many agents it is the most intense manhunt ever conducted," said Chris Mazzella, a spokesman for the FBI's Miami office, which was in charge of the Wilder investigation.

Deputy Assistant FBI Director Floyd Clarke said in Washington that FBI agents were continuing to search for four young women still missing in the case and added: "By no means is the case closed."

Wilder was driving a gold Firebird automobile owned by Ms. Dodge, 33, whose body was found in a gravel pit in Victor, N.Y. The FBI had put out an all-points bulletin for that vehicle, Clarke said.

New Hampshire state police spotted it and approached the vehicle, Clarke said.

Wilder, who was alone in the car, pulled a gun from the glove compartment after two state troopers identified themselves. He shot himself, and the bullet passed through his body and hit trooper Leo Jellison (See NATIONWIDE, Page 2A)

Lubbock bank declared insolvent, closed by comptroller

From Staff and Wire Reports

A Lubbock bank was declared insolvent and closed Friday at 6 p.m. by the acting Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. was appointed receiver.

Security National Bank of Lubbock, one of more than 10 banks in the West Texas city 120 miles north of Midland, was closed when losses finally exhausted its capital funds causing the institution to become insolvent, said H. Joe Selby, acting comptroller.

"Over the past year Security National Bank experienced substantial deterioration in the quality of its loan portfolio," Selby said.

However, the institution will reopen under a new charter Monday morning, according to FDIC spokesman Bill Olchesky. The new bank will be City Bank, N.A. and is owned by B.E. Loyd.

"Checks drawn on Security National accounts will continue to be honored and customers who had interest bearing accounts at Security National will continue to earn interest on such deposits," Olchesky said.

Officials said insured deposits in Security National Bank amounted to $40.6 million dollars in 10,800 accounts and that the bank had $3.4 million in accounts placed by deposit brokers in bearer form.

Olchesky said deposits in the failed bank, up to the statutory insurance limit of $100,000, would be immediately available to their owners.

He said almost $1.1 million in about 60 accounts exceeded the $100,000 limit and were not secured.

"Owners of these deposits will share proportionately with the FDIC and any other uninsured general creditors in the proceeds realized from liquidation of the bank's assets," Olchesky said.

In what is referred to as a modified payoff, he said, the FDIC would make advance payments to uninsured depositors next week based on an estimate that the liquidated assets would be equal to 40 percent of the claims.

"The estimate for the advance is believed to be conservative and it is hoped that actual collection will be higher," Olchesky said.

If the value of the liquidated assets is less than 40 percent, the FDIC will absorb the shortfall, he added.

Olchesky said City Bank is paying the FDIC a premium of $3.5 million for the right to receive the transferred deposits and will purchase Security National's installment loans and certain other assets totaling $11.7 million.

Bruce Brown, FDIC liquidator-in-charge of the failed bank would not say if the failure was because of loan losses in any one specific area nor would he say if it had been caused by participation loans with any other failed banks in the area.

Approximately 70 FDIC officials arrived in Lubbock Friday to accomplish the transfer of ownership, according to Art Lorentzen, senior liquidation specialist for the FDIC's division of liquidation in Dallas. In addition, he said, the FDIC along with the failed bank's 60 employees will be working through the weekend to "wind up the affairs of the failed bank as quickly as possible."

In this type of situation, the FDIC has the responsibility of verifying the assets and liabilities of the failed bank. They, along with bank employees, must come up with a beginning balance for the new bank when it opens its doors on Monday.

Over the past year the bank had been unable to remedy problems with its loan portfolio.

On April 11, 1984, the bank, which was chartered Nov. 29, 1963, reported deposits totaling about $46 million and assets of about $50 million. In early 1982, the bank reported deposits of $46 million and about $26 million in total loans. One year later, in early 1983, deposits had grown to $85 million and loans totaled about $65 million.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Forecast For 7 p.m. EST

Saturday, April 14

High Temperatures

The National Weather Service predicts for Saturday rain in Washington and Oregon. Rain also is expected in the Great Lakes region.

Sunny skies remain, but temperatures cool slightly

From Staff and Wire Reports

The National Weather Service forecast calls for cooler temperatures today, with a high in the low 70s. Winds will be northerly at 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

The low tonight is expected to be near 40. The high Sunday should be in the upper 70s.

The record high for Friday's date was 97, set in 1972. The record low was 29, set in 1983.

STATE

Sunny skies and warm temperatures were reported across Texas on Friday, and little change was expected over the weekend, despite a surge of cool air that was headed toward the state from the north.

Texas was clear of clouds Friday afternoon except for a few between Laredo and Del Rio and along the upper coast. The leading edge of the cooler air was along a line from Wichita Falls to Lubbock.

Temperatures were in the 60s and 70s in the Panhandle and generally in the 80s elsewhere on Friday.

Winds were generally blowing at 10 to 20 mph, but were from the south in the south half of the state and from the north in the north half.

Light rain showers were falling in the Panhandle late Friday afternoon, moving toward the south at 15 mph.

The National Weather Service said Saturday's outlook is for temperatures of around 70 throughout West Texas, in the 80s in South Texas, and in the 60s in North Texas. But lows should be near 40 statewide Saturday night. Temperatures on Sunday should be in the 60s and 70s, the weather service said.

NATION

A storm system that spawned six tornadoes, marble-sized hail and 60 mph winds flooded rush-hour streets Friday in south Florida, while the central Plains braced for gusts that hit 40 mph in Omaha, Neb.

Light rain fell in a broad band of the Midwest from the Great Lakes to the northern Plains while much of the West and Southwest basked under sunny skies.

Scattered thunderstorms were reported in the Southeast with partly cloudy skies throughout much of the Northeast.

Staffers at the National Weather Service's office in Coral Gables, Fla., spotted three tornadoes from their windows, and three others were reported elsewhere. Forecasters also saw a waterspout near the Coral Gables Waterway.

Winds up to 60 mph were recorded, but probably reached near 100 mph in some of the tornadoes, officials said. Minor damage was reported, including loosened roof tiles and broken tree limbs.

Hail and funnel clouds also west seen west of Boca Raton early Friday afternoon, officials reported.

The storm dumped almost 3 inches of rain on downtown Miami within an hour and caused a 30-minute power outage in Coral Gables.

Low clouds over Florida forced the diversion of space shuttle Challenger's landing from Cape Canaveral to California.

The weather service, meanwhile, issued a high wind warning for much of western Nebraska through Saturday from west of Valentine through Kearney to McCook with gusts of up to 60 mph forecast.

Midland statistics

Sunny and cooler today. High in the low 70s. Winds northerly at 10 to 20 mph and gusty. Low tonight near 40. The high Sunday in upper 70s.

Citizens 'shocked' to learn of 'Pizza Connection'

OLNEY, Ill. (AP) — Joe's Pizza Parlor, across from the high school, is a popular spot where the Lions Club meets every Thursday.

But federal officials say Joe's also was a crucial link in an international heroin smuggling conspiracy that smuggled more heroin into the United States than the notorious French Connection. The case, which involves a group of Sicilian-born pizza shop operators in several Midwestern communities, has been dubbed the "Pizza Connection."

Residents of the town of 9,100, about 115 miles east of St. Louis in southeastern Illinois, said they were shocked by the news. Until the Pizza Connection, Olney was known mainly as one of the few places in the country to have a population of albino squirrels.

The Pizza Connection is definitely getting top billing in coffee shop and other gossip, said editor James Small of the Olney Daily Mail. Small printed a few hundred extra copies of the paper Tuesday to tell his readers about the federal officials' announcement in New York.

Joe's, a three-room, red-brick cafe, has stayed open for business but the owner, Giuseppe "Joseph" Trupiano, is in jail after failing to post a $1 million bond.

On Monday, federal authorities in New York accused Trupiano and 30 others with participating in a ring that smuggled $1.6 billion worth of heroin into the country from Sicily over a five-year period. The heroin allegedly was shipped through three pizza parlors in Illinois and one in Wisconsin.

Small, who called Joe's Pizza Parlor "a nice, small, out-of-the-way place," said Trupiano was known as "a good Catholic" who "never missed Mass."

Trupiano, 33, even agreed to close his parlor until 4 p.m. each weekday because school officials complained that pupils were missing classes to play pinball at the cafe, Small said.

Robert Malone, a leader in the Chamber of Commerce, called fellow member Joe Trupiano "a very personable young fellow" who had lived in Olney about 10 years.

"It just looked like a little old country town restaurant," Malone said.

Olney wasn't the only small-town link in the Pizza Connection.

Officials said other suspects included Giuseppe "Joe" Vitale, 42, owner of Joe's Pizza and Italian Food in Paris, Ill., population about 10,000; Pietro Alfano, 57, who runs Alfano Pizza in Oregon, Ill., population about 4,600; and Emanuele Palazzolo, 37, who operates a pizzeria in Milton, Wis., population about 4,000.

Law enforcement officials said discussions about cleaning pizza tables and delivering flour became codes for drug deals. "Oven," for example, was said to be a code for a kilogram of heroin.

Sometimes, the white heroin was distributed in pizza boxes, said Bob Long of the FBI in Chicago, who suggested that the small-town pizza parlors were chosen because they were inconspicuous.

In New York, Associate U.S. Attorney Dennison Young said the parlors generally became "way-stations," or trans-shipment points, for the heroin, not selling points.

In Oregon, high school senior Joy Balcom described Alfano Pizza as one of the town's teen-age hangouts. "We have two pizza places," she said. One is "more for the wild, rowdy type," but "the cheerleaders, jocks, everybody hung out at Alfano's."

"No one really expects a small town like that to have a big drug ring," she said. "When you think of drugs, you think of the city, New York and Chicago. When you think of Oregon, you think of sweet, cutesy, small town, nothing happens, real dull."

But the FBI in Chicago said Monday it seized "automatic weapons, handguns, ammunition, bulletproof vests and a large sum of cash" at Alfano's.

In Paris, across the street from Vitale's restaurant, people at the Moss Grain Co. said they were puzzled about the news concerning the neighbor they call Joe.

"He's an excellent neighbor. He's a family man, very concerned about his children," Mary Moss, 46, said. "I like Joe and his family very, very much."

Customers knew Vitale as a man who made sure they were served promptly and treated well. "He'd just about take your coat and get you (seated)," Darrell Spencer, 25, said.

"He'd make his rounds and talk to people," Moody said. "If something went on, he'd put a stop to it."

They said business improved since Vitale opened the shop in 1970, replacing the original pizzeria with a new, sit-down Italian restaurant.

In Milton, Wis., high school teacher James Polarski said of Emanuele Palazzolo's restaurant: "We certainly didn't see any activity. There was no street peddling."

Alfano's Pizza and Spaghetti restaurant in Oregon, Ill., is one of several pizza parlors in the state allegedly involved in a $1.6 billion international heroin-smuggling ring.

Man dreams up round skyscraper

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Perched atop his refrigerator is Charles Salloum's $10 million dream.

That's where the frustrated inventor keeps the 3-foot models of the round skyscrapers he thinks are sure to catch on one of these days. He's been waiting 27 years to be discovered.

"Can you imagine living in something like this?" he asks, proudly displaying a Rotovator, filled with model cars and tiny elevators. "All I have to do is show this to the right people. When the right people see this, the rest will take care of itself."

So far, the only place Salloum's Rotovator has been built inside his one-room apartment in the seedy Tenderloin, three floors above a chili-dog stand.

The Rotovator is a round skyscraper with a 20-story parking garage. It contains a hotel, shopping center, helicopter pad and a rotating rooftop restaurant. It has 345 apartments, 695 parking spaces, 12 elevators and a candy shop. Salloum likes candy.

He figures his invention could fetch $10 million from some far-sighted developer.

"It would be a real bargain," he said. "The man who builds these buildings is going to make millions and millions of dollars."

He sees his invention as a way to solve big-city parking problems in areas where there are too many cars and not enough spaces.

"The Rotovator is something that will help people," he said. "Otherwise our cities will drown in cars."

Salloum doesn't take the inventing business lightly. The 66-year-old retired hotel worker said he had borrowed $250,000 from his family to invest in the Rotovator. Much of that money has gone to patent attorneys who have obtained reams of documents, schematic drawings and seven U.S. patents.

The heart of his Rotovator idea is the automated car-parking concept. He says the problem with other parking garages is that they're never built high enough. The reason for that, he says, is that drivers get dizzy going up all those circular ramps.

The Rotovator's elevators would whisk cars to upper levels, where a computer would locate an empty parking space. A giant circular platform of parked cars would rotate to direct the driver to the empty stall.

Salloum said his structure could fit about twice as many cars into the same space as a conventional garage.

A native of Lebanon, Salloum grew up in Egypt. He came to New York in 1962 with $1,000 in his pocket and visions of Rotovators whirling in his head.

For years he worked by day and developed his skyscrapers at night.

"I don't understand why someone hasn't bought me out by now," he said. "These things work like a Swiss watch."

In a 10-page illustrated brochure about his invention, Salloum summarizes his own plight.

"Strange and shocking as it is," the brochure says, "this extraordinary project has met (with) nothing but deaf ears and blind executives."

Man's cleaning business bowls over with customers

DALLAS (AP) — The czar, another Southern Methodist University success story, was in conference, so his assistant momentarily stood in. He guided his guest toward a training restroom in the back of the office. Somebody had taped a sign to the door: Out of Order.

"OK," Therrel Lawler began, pulling out a pamphlet that illustrated in clean, blue lines the Fikes Chemical three-step formula to safe, sanitized restrooms.

He pointed a meaningful finger to a pie graph sliced several ways, each slice representing one of those steps. "We clean. Sanitize. And deodorize fixtures," he explained, his finger eventually circling the whole pie before it stopped at a commode drawn with a wide smile. "By fixtures," he went on, "I mean commodes, urinals and some wash spaces. A lot of people say, 'OK, you clean restrooms.' We don't. We service fixtures."

"We do not," he then emphasized, his dry tone widening, as though wiping up a common misconception before it had a chance to run, "mop floors or put in paper towels."

Then the Czar walked in. Leo Fikes, self-proclaimed Potty Czar, Prince of Potties, King of Commodes, Baron of the Bowl. For the guest, the possibilities blurred.

Lord of the Ring. Fikes walked from the restroom and to his own handsomely appointed office. A sign hung on one wall read: "Stand Closer, It's Smaller Than You Think."

Fikes sat in a chair behind a long desk. "Next May 1," he said proudly, "I'll be a 30-year man."

He picked up a glass toilet seat in which two snakes were encased on a gravel bed. "I went to it like a duck."

Fikes, who at 55 runs one of the most successful toilet and urinal cleaning services in the Metroplex (he also sells franchises of his service nationwide), is a tanned, realistic man both proud of his success and conscious of obnoxious odors. In that respect, he says, he is not alone.

"In our country today," he at one point noted, "we are all conscious of obnoxious odors. So when we walk into a restroom, we think if it smells nice, it's safe. But that's only part of it. There are different problems with each potty."

Fikes might seem an unlikely Potty Czar. Raised in Dallas' affluent Park Cities, educated at Highland Park High School and SMU, where he graduated with a degree in business administration, he did indeed head for a career in restroom maintenance. After receiving his degree, Fikes immediately went to work for an uncle who ran a service in San Antonio.

"My uncle had done an excellent job," Fikes explained. "I always admired him."

Mostly, Fikes worked at the sales end of his uncle's business. But on days when a serviceman didn't show up, he says, "we grabbed a kit and did the work." He describes his feelings during those early days spent in restrooms as "comfortable." But he says the feeling was not always shared.

"I can only relate it to my Daddy," he explained. "I had just finished college, and he came to visit me in San Antonio. At midnight I was in a restroom mopping floors. He walked out and cried."

"But I enjoyed it," he added. "I can sell, I can operate the office. But my first love is the service."

"I was good at it."

Then Fikes said, "My early philosophy was to be the biggest and best in my field. Of course, I have a narrow little field. In fact, you can hardly see it." He leaned back. "You don't have a lot of people around who want to clean potties."

Church of Nazarene official to organize new Midland church

The Rev. James Blankenship, district superintendent of the San Antonio District of the Church of the Nazarene, will be in Midland Sunday to organize a new church.

The Permian Basin Church of the Nazarene, temporarily meeting at 2813 W. Loop 250 North, will have its official organizational service Sunday. The first Sunday the church met was Jan. 15 of this year. The pastor, the Rev. Ron Luthi, and his family moved here from Olathe, Kan.

"The Church of the Nazarene is a Holiness denomination," Luthi says. "The primary goal is introducing people to Jesus Christ. We believe that the atonement through Jesus Christ is for the whole human race, and that whoever repents and believes in the Lord Jesus Christ is justified and regenerated and saved from the dominion of sin."

"The spiritual thrust of the church is emphasized in the direction of people who are not just Christians in name only, but who reflect the spirit of Christ each day of the week."

Midland residential cancer crusade to begin Sunday

From Staff Reports

Focusing on educating the public about prevention and early detection of lung, colon and rectum cancer, the Midland residential cancer crusade will begin Sunday.

More than 600 volunteers will begin knocking on doors in Midland neighborhoods, armed with information and quick tests to determine cancer risks of interested residents.

"It is encouraging to learn about the enormous progress that has been made in the fight against cancer," said David Kalish, chairman of the Midland residential campaign. "Close to three million people alive today have been cured of cancer. The battle isn't over, but we are winning."

This year, about 450,000 people will die of the disease. About 148,000 of those might have been saved by earlier diagnosis and prompt treatment.

"That's why it's crucial for everyone in Midland to learn how they can lower their cancer risk," Kalish said. "The folder volunteers will be distributing is a self-test on cancer risks for the two most common and deadly forms of cancer — lung and colorectal cancer. We urge everyone to take this test and then practice the cancer safeguards described in the folder."

About $35,000 is expected to be raised during the Midland residential drive, according to Jim Chase, president of the American Cancer Society Midland unit. "This money will be used to support programs in the Midland area for the prevention, early detection and treatment of cancer, and to provide assistance to cancer patients."

"Another important goal is to help save lives," Chase said.

Dr. Raymond Showery, left, is led away from his downtown El Paso medical clinic Friday after being arrested on a charge of involuntary manslaughter in the death of a woman who reportedly went to his clinic for an abortion and died later in a hospital.

El Paso clinic's doctor charged in woman's death

EL PASO (AP) — A doctor who was convicted last year of drowning a fetus was charged Friday with involuntary manslaughter after a woman who reportedly went to his clinic for an abortion died later in a hospital, authorities said.

Dr. Raymond Showery is in El Paso County Jail in lieu of $1 million bond in connection with the death of Mikey Apodaca, 28, who died at Providence Memorial Hospital Wednesday night after being admitted to the hospital's emergency room from Showery's clinic.

Showery, who was convicted last year of drowning a 6-month-old female fetus, was arrested at his office Friday morning after a warrant was issued by Court-at-Law Judge John Fashing, said police Detective Jimmy Apodaca, who is not related to Mikey Apodaca.

He appeared before a grand jury Thursday after three subpoenas were issued for him and for records from his El Paso Southside Family Planning clinic.

Showery declined to answer questions at the grand jury appearance under the Fifth Amendment, said his attorney Michael Gibson, who filed a motion to quash the subpoenas with State District Judge Jerry Woodward. The judge has not yet ruled on the motion.

An employee of the clinic, Carmen

Ayala, also appeared before the grand jury, Gibson said.

According to police reports, Mrs. Apodaca, a divorced mother of four, said she was brought into the hospital at 5:35 p.m. from the Southside Family Planning clinic and was bleeding extensively.

She was pronounced dead at 7:15 p.m. by assistant medical examiner Manny Diaz. The cause of death was listed as hypovolemic shock or loss of blood.

An autopsy performed on Mrs. Apodaca's body Thursday revealed her uterus was torn, according to county medical examiner Dr. Juan Contin.

He said it appeared Mrs. Apodaca was in the process of having a medical procedure performed, "which I assume was an abortion" when she started bleeding.

He said no fetus or baby was found in her body.

Showery was convicted in September 1983 of drowning a 6-month-old female fetus during a 1979 abortion at his clinic, which then was called the Family Hospital.

He was sentenced to 15 years in prison by the same jury that convicted him of killing the fetus, which never was found.

He was free on bond pending an appeal of his conviction.

Paralyzed woman makes new life for herself

HOUSTON (AP) — More than three years ago former model Barbara Piotrowski took the alias of "Jennifer Smith" and made a new life for herself, fearing further death threats.

Ms. Piotrowski, 31, who claims her former lover conspired to kill her in a 1980 shooting that left her paralyzed, says her way of hiding "has been out in the open." The Houston Post reported Friday.

But her whereabouts and identity were disclosed in a Santa Monica, Calif., newspaper article and photographs published in July 1983 and recently sent anonymously to her attorney, the Post and the attorney of a man accused of trying to arrange her death.

The Santa Monica article describes how she participates in wheelchair marathons across the country and receives computerized medical treatments that she hopes will help her walk again.

Ms. Piotrowski was shot four times in the back outside a Houston doughnut shop in October 1980. Two California men pleaded guilty in the shooting and received 35-year prison sentences.

A former private investigator, Dudley Bell, is charged with soliciting the murder of Ms. Piotrowski and is awaiting trial in Houston.

Ms. Piotrowski has filed a lawsuit seeking $220 million in damages from the two California men, Bell and her former lover, flamboyant health spa owner and millionaire Richard Minns, alleging they conspired to kill her.

Minns, who has denied he tried to have Ms. Piotrowski killed, reportedly is out of the country.

Ms. Piotrowski told the Post in a telephone interview Thursday that she took an alias because she feared her life might be threatened by Minns or his associates.

"A real hardship in my life has been living with the fear," she said. "At first, basically, I was hiding and not letting people know who I was."

She said she was disturbed to learn that the article revealing her whereabouts and identity was sent to several people.

Dick DeGuerin, Ms. Piotrowski's attorney, said Thursday that his client was living near Los Angeles when the Santa Monica article appeared. He said she has participated in wheelchair marathons in California, Boston, Honolulu and Japan and is under the care of an Ohio doctor who is a pioneer in computer-assisted walking and exercises for paraplegics.

Judge jails paper's photographer

DALLAS (AP) — A state district judge held a Dallas Morning News photographer in contempt of court Thursday for refusing to turn over negatives of a nuclear protest scene.

Judge Robert G. Moss, presiding over the trial of one protester, ordered photographer Randy Eli Grothe jailed for refusing to release negatives of last September's demonstration in front of Dallas Power & Light Co.

Grothe was released after posting a $1,000 bond about an hour after the judge issued the contempt order.

"It's all part of being a photographer," said Grothe, 32. "I was a little nervous, but I kept thinking that everything would turn out all right."

The defendant, Mavis Belisle of Dallas, is charged with obstructing a passageway, a misdemeanor.

Man kills old girlfriend, two men, self

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Fort Worth man spurned by his former girlfriend apparently shot and killed the woman and two men Friday and then took his own life about three hours later as police closed in, authorities said.

Robert Graham, 34, apparently shot himself with a shotgun about 6:50 a.m. while police waited outside his house, said police spokesman Doug Clarke.

A witness who survived the shooting by hiding in a closet told police where Graham could be found, Clarke said.

Police believe Graham is the man who three hours earlier burst into a house in the city's southeast side and killed Rebecca Hammill, 23, Donnie Dawson, 22, and Russell Gregg, 21.

Police believe Graham was Ms. Hammill's ex-boyfriend and was upset because of Dawson's and Ms. Hammill's relationship. Gregg was an innocent victim, Clarke said.

Ms. Hammill was pronounced dead at the scene. Dawson and Gregg were pronounced dead at John Peter Smith Hospital.

Clarke said each was shot once in the head with a large-caliber pistol. Ronnie Thompson, who was in the house at the time of the shooting, hid in a closet and alerted neighbors.

A neighbor, Terry Klapperich, said Thompson woke him up about 3:30 a.m.

"I was asleep and Ronnie knocked on the door yelling 'I need help, Donnie's been shot,'" he said.

Klapperich said he walked back to Dawson's house and found Gregg bleeding on a living room couch and Dawson and Ms. Hammill in a bloody bedroom.

"I opened up Donnie's (bedroom) door and saw all the blood and I called the operator that I needed help," Klapperich said.

Klapperich said Thompson told him Graham was Ms. Hammill's ex-boyfriend.

"He told me she was fixing to move out of the house — she had had lots of problems," he said.

"Ronnie said (Graham) stepped in the door and said 'I'm not taking any more of this' and he heard one shot. He hid in the closet and heard two more shots. He stayed in the closet until he heard the car leave," Klapperich told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Paulette Wingo, another neighbor, said she heard the shots and then saw Thompson run for help.

HHS secretary halts disability reviews

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler, calling it "the only fair thing to do," ordered a temporary halt Friday to Social Security's disability reviews and preserved or restored benefits for 40,000 people fighting cutoffs.

She said the moratorium on the so-called periodic disability reviews will last until Congress enacts legislation to restore uniform, nationwide rules for the review program.

The reviews, which are carried out by state disability agencies, already have ground to a halt in more than half the states due to judges' orders or governors' refusal to abide by Social Security rules.

"The disability program cannot serve those who need its help when its policies are splintered and divided," Mrs. Heckler said in a statement. "For that reason, we must suspend the process and work together with Congress to regain order and consensus in the disability program."

The periodic reviews, which have led to 190,000 benefit cutoffs in the past three years, have left a trail of horror stories and headlines. The White House and Congress have been flooded with complaints and reports of dozens of people who died or committed suicide after they were told they were fit to work.

Since Social Security began periodically rescreening disability recipients in March 1981, some 312,121 people have been ordered off the rolls and 449,971 told they were still eligible. After appeals, about 190,000 have lost benefits, according to Lou Enoff, Social Security's acting deputy commissioner for programs and policy.

Last month, the House passed, 410-1, over the Reagan administration's objections, a bill that in most cases would require the government to show evidence of medical improvement before cutting anyone off the disability rolls.

The administration still opposes a medical improvement standard, Enoff said.

But Mrs. Heckler pledged her department's "full cooperation" in working with the Senate Finance Committee to try to pass a disability reform bill next month. Despite the lopsided House vote, the legislation faces tougher sledding in the Senate, where Sen. Russell B. Long, the top Democrat on the Finance Committee, has resisted efforts to make the disability rules more lenient.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., one of the Senate sponsors, said, "I think it is obvious the secretary has seen the handwriting on the wall. Congress is determined to act." Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., a cosponsor, said, "I think the administration is reacting to the imminence of congressional action, court decisions that go even beyond what Congress would do and a realization that without addressing this...there would be a growing and deep wound to the president on the fairness issue."

Mrs. Heckler's action will immediately affect 40,000 people who have administrative appeals of their cutoffs pending, said Social Security spokesman John Trollinger. He added that "a good many" of those people would have been getting their last check on May 3 if Mrs. Heckler had not acted, and some have already exhausted their benefits.

But the action does not affect the nearly 36,000 people who have suits pending in federal courts to obtain or regain their disability benefits.

Social Security will hold up 210,000 reviews it had expected to conduct during the last six months of fiscal 1984, Trollinger said.

Former Stanford grad student's parole revoked

VACAVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Officials revoked parole Friday for a former graduate student who murdered his Stanford University mathematics professor and refused to promise he would never kill again.

Theodore Streleski, who spent 19 years unsuccessfully seeking a doctoral degree, had been paroled March 8 after serving 5½ years in prison for the 1978 hammer slaying of professor Karel deLeeuw. But his parole was revoked the same day after he refused to cooperate with parole procedures.

Parole officials said then that Streleski, 47, had refused to sign routine parole documents, refused to accept $200 in "gate money," and told authorities he intended to violate his parole "in a non-violent way" when he arrived in Orange County in southern California.

A two-member state parole panel ruled Friday that Streleski had violated his parole conditions during the one-day release by telling authorities and news reporters that he planned to violate parole.

"When a parolee expressly states he will violate the conditions of parole...this board is not required to wait until a parolee actually commits a crime," said the Board of Prison Terms panel.

In imposing the maximum six-month term for parole violation, the panel said Streleski "represents a significant danger to others."

"It is not possible to predict his future acts," the panel said. It described Streleski as "more than a little grandiose...He feels he is a person with a mission or a message."

Although Streleski told the panel his anger at Stanford University "has been worked off by the murder," the parole panel said he "still feels a great deal of anger at Stanford."

On Monday, Streleski told a two-member panel of the Board of Prison Terms that he would rather stay behind bars than be released to Orange County. He said his acceptance of parole in southern California "makes me look insincere" in his criticism of Stanford.

Streleski has said of the killing that he was protesting Stanford's treatment of its graduate students and the "power and arrogance of Stanford." He was convicted of second-degree murder in the slaying.

The panel heard more than four hours of testimony Monday, then continued the hearing until Friday.

Reagans pay $128,639 in federal income taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Reagan, reporting a combined income of $422,834 in 1983, paid $128,639 in federal income taxes and will get a $50,526 refund from the Internal Revenue Service.

The return, signed April 3 and made public by the White House on Friday, shows the Reagans' tax bill dropped from 39 percent of their income in 1982 to just over 30 percent last year. This was due in part to the final increment of the three-year, 25 percent income tax cut enacted during the president's first year in office.

The first family's income also declined sharply, from $741,253 in 1982, when they realized a quarter-million-dollar capital gain on the sale of their home in the Pacific Palisades suburb of Los Angeles, to $422,834 last year.

Also in 1983, the return showed, Reagan's blind trust suffered some economic reverses, perhaps as a result of falling stock prices that hurt many investors last year.

Reagan reported a net capital loss of $11,425 in the blind trust he set up to manage his assets during his presidency, but he could deduct only $3,000 of that loss, the legal limit, from his taxable income.

Just before taking office, Reagan put all his holdings, other than his California home and ranch, into two short-term certificates of deposit totaling $740,000 and turned them over to a blind trust.

The trustees are instructed to keep all subsequent transactions secret to ensure that the president is not aware of any personal financial interest he may have in the policy decisions he makes.

The tax return shows the trust produced interest last year of $86,192 and stock dividends of $28,830. Long-term capital gains of $38,818 were wiped out by short-term losses of $50,243, indicating the trust's managers engaged in some stock trading.

French steelworkers march through Paris

PARIS (AP) — More than 30,000 French steelworkers, joined by Communist Party head Georges Marchais, marched through Paris and rallied near the Eiffel Tower on Friday to protest the government's plan to slash jobs in money-losing industries.

About 3,000 riot police and gendarmes were mobilized for the demonstration, the largest show of Communist and worker discontent with President Francois Mitterrand since the Socialist was elected to office with their backing three years ago.

The last time French steelworkers converged on Paris in 1979, anarchist groups went on a looting and wrecking spree that ended in 169 arrests. But Friday's march was peaceful.

The workers were protesting a plan announced this month by Mitterrand that would eliminate 25,000 of the 90,000 jobs in the state-owned steel industry and shut several major mills.

France's steel industry costs the government about $1.25 billion in annual subsidies. All national subsidies to steel plants must end in three years, under Common Market rules.

The demonstrators said Friday that the government's plan would mean "the scuttling" of French heavy industry and of the regions where they live.

Under a brilliant April sky, ranks of hard-hatted workers from France's steel heartland, the Lorraine, started out peacefully along Right Bank boulevards to the echoing chants of "Mitterrand, do you hear us?"

Towering above the marchers was a 19-foot Cross of Lorraine, the symbol of the French Resistance during World War II. Union organizers wearing yellow armbands and carrying walkie-talkies kept the demonstrators on course.

Police estimated the crowd at 30,000 to 35,000. Organizers said 35,000 had signed up to take part in the 5.4-mile procession.

The march ended near the Eiffel Tower, an iron landmark built in the Lorraine for the Paris Exposition of 1889.

The protest was a "clear, massive and justified refusal" from French labor to Mitterrand's steel plan, said Henri Krasucki, head of the Communist-led Confederation Generale du Travail.

Communist leader Marchais called the government's steel plan "no good." He was applauded as he joined marchers' ranks, and many shouted "Marchais for president!"

Friday morning, the Communist organ L'Humanite published the party's own plan for industrial revitalization. It would keep open two mills slated for closure, build a new rolling mill the government has opted against and build a new electric-arc basic steel plant.

Mitterrand pledges that all job cuts will come from natural attrition or include the possibility of retraining, and he is sticking to the three-year plan. His advisers have said France must cease subsidizing unproductive industry and use the savings to promote a post-industrial revolution.

Other cutbacks are planned in the coal, automobile and shipbuilding industries.

Heavy fighting ushers in 10th year of war

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Heavy Moslem-Christian fighting ushered in the 10th year of Lebanon's civil war Friday, and President Amin Gemayel began consultations with political foes on a proposed national coalition government.

Shell blasts rocked the Lebanese capital overnight, at midday and at dusk, when major artillery barrages struck residential neighborhoods on both sides of the "green line" separating mostly Moslem west and Christian east Beirut.

Local radio stations blared warnings to residents to take cover in basements and bomb shelters. Ambulances raced through the streets with sirens wailing.

Police had no immediate casualty report on the sundown bombardment, but the state radio quoted hospital sources as saying four people were killed and 13 wounded in west Beirut.

Earlier, police said one person was killed and nine were wounded in Beirut and in fighting that broke out in the suburbs south of the capital and in the mountaintop town of Souk el-Gharb to the east.

Most Lebanese consider April 13, 1975, when the attempted assassination of a Christian leader prompted a retaliatory attack against Palestinian refugees, as the starting date of the civil war.

Gemayel met in northern Lebanon with ex-President Suleiman Franjeh, a Maronite Christian allied with Syria and Moslem factions fighting the government. Neither man made a statement after the meeting.

Administration sources said Gemayel, also a Christian, planned to meet with other former presidents, ex-prime ministers and Parliament leaders within the next two days.

"The purpose of the consultations is to reach a consensus on the main guidelines of a reform program and the suitable prime minister who will be designed to carry out the reforms," one source said. He declined to be named in keeping with government regulations.

Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan's nine-man Cabinet resigned Feb. 5 to make way for a coalition government. It was reinstated about a month later for the sole purpose of scrapping Lebanon's troop withdrawal pact with Israel, a step demanded by the Syrian-backed opposition before any peace talks could be held.

Walid Jumblatt, leader of Lebanon's Druse opposition, took issue Wednesday with what he said was Gemayel's position that only a coalition government can prevent the nation from being partitioned into sectarian mini-states.

"I have received a letter from president Gemayel that says: 'Either government or partition,' the leftist newspaper As-Safir quoted Jumblatt as saying in an interview. 'That means no solution. We might have another 10 years of civil warfare.'"

Tamil extremists use violence to press demands for state

JAFFNA, Sri Lanka (AP) — Tamil extremists are waging a new campaign of assassinations, firebombings and ambushes to press their demand for a separate state on the northern peninsula of Sri Lanka.

The attacks by the minority Tamils and the retribution of troops — from the Sinhalese ethnic majority — have raised fears that this island republic is heading for a repeat of the ethnic bloodbath that claimed hundreds of lives last July.

"It's like a boulder coming down a mountain," no one can stop it," said Gamini Navarantne, editor of the weekly Saturday Review newspaper in this capital of the Tamil heartland.

At least 43 people have died in the past three weeks of violence in the Jaffna district, about 180 miles north of the capital, Colombo.

Suspected Tamil "Tigers," the militant nationalists, in the last week bombed an army convoy, set fire to a Sinhalese school, firebombed a Buddhist temple and police station and attacked government offices.

Residents said vengeful troops burned dozens of Tamil-owned shops.

Curfews were imposed Tuesday. President Junius R. Jayewardene, a Sinhalese, says he will never allow the country to be divided. He charged last week that the separatists were trying to incite a "communist revolution." Police say they believe some separatists received PLO training in Lebanon.

Eighteen percent of Sri Lanka's 15 million people are Tamils, most of whom are Hindus of south Indian origin. Most of them live in the Jaffna region, where they predominate, and many people hope to win an independent homeland called "Eelam."

Tamils claim they have been victims of discrimination in jobs, education and language policies by Sinhalese-dominated governments since the country, formerly known as Ceylon, gained independence from Britain in 1948.

Rosalynn Carter says she was bitter about husband's losing to Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former first lady Rosalynn Carter says that when her husband was defeated by Ronald Reagan, "I was bitter enough for both of us," and that she now misses the world of politics.

"I would be out there campaigning right now if Jimmy would run again," she said. "Nothing is more thrilling than the urgency of a campaign...and the tremendous energy it takes that makes a victory so sweet and a loss so devastating. I'd like people to know that we were right..."

Mrs. Carter made her comments in her new book, "First Lady From Plains," an account of her life with Carter to be published next month by Houghton Mifflin Co.

"I am much more political than Jimmy and was much more concerned about popularity and winning re-election," Mrs. Carter wrote.

"But I have to say that he had the courage to tackle the important issues, no matter how controversial — or politically damaging — they might be."

"Often during his term, we used to sit around and try to think of something he was doing that was popular."

Throughout the book, Mrs. Carter offers personal anecdotes about the people and policies that marked the Carter presidency. She also describes her frustration at a news media more interested in her decision not to serve hard liquor at the White House than in her mental health commission; and she described the family's anguish at losing the election.

One the eve of the election, Mrs. Carter wrote, Carter's pollster Pat Caddell told her his figures showed they would lose. But the next morning, she received a call at the White House from an aide.

"I ran into the bathroom to tell Jimmy, who was changing, but he just sat on the edge of the tub and said, 'Pat knows,'" Mrs. Carter wrote. "I know he does," I replied, and I sat down on his lap and put my head on his shoulder and cried. We clung together as the realization sunk in further."

Describing a gathering of close friends in the Oval Office that night, Mrs. Carter quotes herself saying: "I'm bitter enough for both of us."

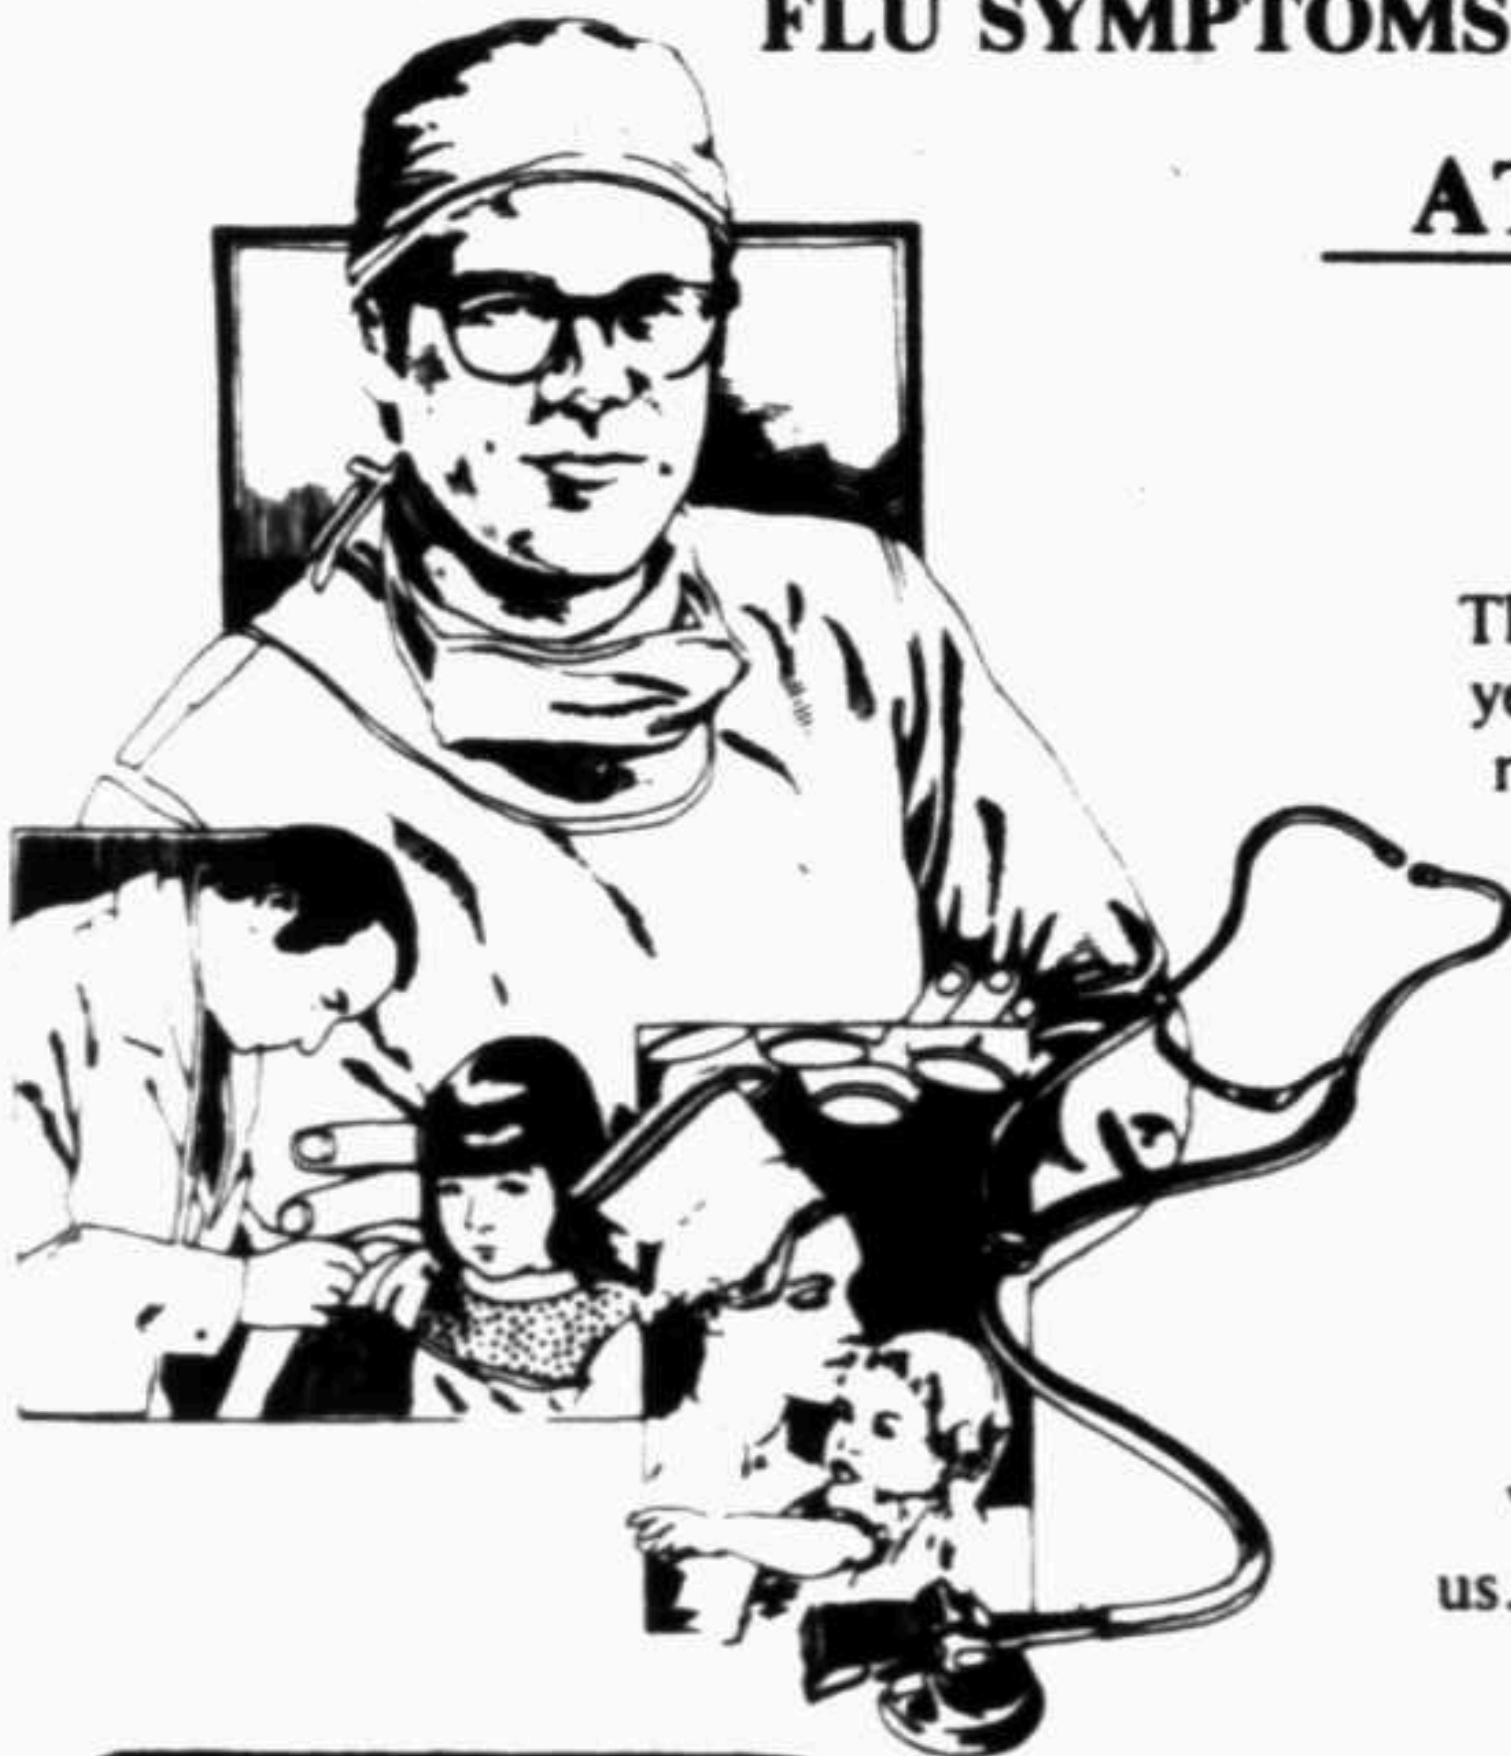

Of her feelings, she wrote: "I meant it. I was bitter at what I had seen on television for weeks that I thought was so unfair to Jimmy; bitter about the (Iranian) hostage situation dominating the news for the last few days before the election as the media 'celebrated' the anniversary of the hostage crisis."

Governments returning to civilian control

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Democracy has a new Latin beat, one echoing up and down a continent.

You can hear it in the clatter of pots and pans in Chile, in the samba drums of young Brazilian marchers, in the chants of election crowds in Argentina and demonstrators in Uruguay.

Across South America, the military lockstep is breaking down.

Where only two elected civilian governments existed five years ago, a half-dozen now debate and decide their nations' future in the open light of parliaments and the press. And pressure is mounting on four remaining military governments to hasten their withdrawal to the barracks.

"Civilization" is contagious. Last October's elections in Argentina inspired democrats in nearby Uruguay and Chile. And those movements now encourage others, even raising faint hopes in Paraguay, ironclad domain of strongman Gen. Alfredo Stroessner.

sounds exasperated.

"The political differences are very deep," he said in an interview. "It's not for labor leaders to try to resolve them."

The divisions keep the multi-party opposition from offering their countrymen a coherent view of a post-Pinochet Chile.

Jaime Insunza, an intense, 38-year-old Communist who is secretary-general of the Marxist bloc, says it is ready to discuss its program with the Democratic Alliance, "but always with the conviction that our program corresponds with the needs of the country."

Would a post-Pinochet Chile revert to Allende-style Marxism?

The leftists are well-organized in the squatter camps and shantytowns that ring this 443-year-old city. And the unemployed slum-dwellers are bitter, complaining about Chile's $21-billion debt to U.S. and other banks, and claiming their country has been "stolen" from them.

But Chilean analysts suggest that the Marxists, who even in Allende's day could garner little more than one-third of the vote, would not try to revolutionize the Chilean system on such a narrow political base.

"That was Allende's mistake. They won't repeat it," said political scientist Manuel Antonio Garretón, a socialist.

The protest movement, meanwhile, drives on toward its immediate goal — toppling Pinochet. The underlying strategy: Step up disruptive actions, draw harsher repression, attract additional support.

But Valdes cautions: "If the government takes a tough position ... I think the protests will move toward radicalization. Very dangerous."

Extremists are already at work. Gunmen and bombs of the outlawed Leftist Revolutionary Movement are blamed for the slayings of seven policemen since late last year.

Elsewhere on the continent, the clash is not so bloody, but the anti-military fever runs as high:

BRAZIL

By the tens of thousands, to a Brazilian samba beat, T-shirted protesters are parading and rallying in Rio de Janeiro, Sao Paulo and other cities to demand "Diretas Já!" — "direct elections now" for president.

They reject the 30-year-old military government's plan for the presidential choice to be made next Jan. 15 by an electoral college dominated by the pro-military party. As elsewhere, debt-burdened Brazil's economic woes feed popular anger at a leadership the people did not choose.

URUGUAY

The 11-year-old military government promises national elections for next November, but the traditional parties in this historically democratic country oppose the armed forces' efforts to retain a political role indefinitely. Dissident Uruguayans turned recent soccer-victory celebrations into anti-military protests.

PARAGUAY

Stroessner, who has held power for three decades, has allowed two dozen old political foes to return from years of exile. But the dissidents' activities are tightly controlled, and few Paraguayans expect any quick liberalization.

"WE HAVE TO unite all the opposition around a single, peaceful action plan, just as the Chileans are doing now," Paraguayan opposition leader Juan Manuel Benítez Florentin told a reporter visiting Asunción.

South America's new democracies may operate in the shadow of a military that reserves a "right" to intervene again. But South American politicians, academics and others say growing public awareness, international condemnation of military repression, and the armed forces' own weariness of grappling with society's ills may slow the historic cycle of military coups.

The most bitter showdown is here in Chile, the beautiful land of 11 million people strung slenderly along the continent's Pacific coast.

Democratic roots may run deepest here — Chileans claim a 130-year electoral tradition. But the military ruler — the glowering Gen. Augusto Pinochet — may also be the most immovable.

The Chile story shows the forces at work as South America transforms itself.

A protest movement to topple the authoritarian president sprang to life a year ago in the dusty slums and on the stately boulevards of this Old World-style capital. Developments in 1984 may determine whether the Marxist left or capitalist center leads the opposition, and whether strikes and demonstrations can force the army to abandon the general.

THE BATTLE LINES are clearly drawn.

"We will never have a dialogue with Pinochet," Gabriel Valdes, leader of the centrist Democratic Alliance coalition, said in a recent interview.

"The public keeps saying, 'Enough! Enough!'"

A Pinochet spokesman, Alfonso Marquez de la Plata, government secretary general, said the regime is willing to discuss changes in Pinochet's long-established plan for a slow return to democracy.

"But the opposition says, 'We are the only ones who have the truth, everything we say is right,'" Marquez de la Plata said. "This is the antithesis of dialogue."

Not all the opposition is free to protest or make dialogue, however.

From his 17th-floor office suite, Marquez de la Plata can see the grimy city prison where one key anti-Pinochet figure — Marxist opposition front leader Manuel Almeyda — has been jailed since Feb. 15 for calling publicly for Pinochet's ouster.

The 68-year-old president mixes repression with concession as he maneuvers to maintain the power the Chilean military seized in a bloody coup Sept. 11, 1973, when they brought down the elected government of President Salvador Allende, a Marxist who was pulling Chile sharply leftward. Allende and as many as 10,000 other Chileans died in the coup and its aftermath.

THE PINOCHET decade has lurched from boom to bust.

As the economy soared in 1980, "El General" went to the people with a referendum on his plan for returning Chile to democracy — over a 17-year period. Chileans approved it two to one.

Within a year Chile slipped into a disastrous depression — unemployment reached 25 percent — and many Chileans' apathy gave way to anger, finally overflowing into "National Protest Days" of strikes and rallies staged monthly beginning last May, protests orchestrated to the rhythmic banging of household pots and pans in the smoggy Santiago evenings.

The demonstrations were costly — 62 people were killed in 1983, most shot by police in clashes with protesters. But Pinochet ended some harsher authoritarian measures and opened indirect talks with the Democratic Alliance, comprising Valdes' Christian Democrats and four other centrist parties.

Those talks collapsed. The Alliance demands Pinochet's resignation and full democracy within 18 months. The general, for most Chileans just a distant, white-uniformed figure on television, counters with a vague scheme for future plebiscites to endorse the Pinochet way to democracy.

But the demonstrations continue and so do the president's concessions. After protests March 27, Pinochet dismissed his economic team and pledged to relieve unemployment.

The opposition is weakened by distrust — legacy of the Allende years — between its two political blocs, the Democratic Alliance and Almeyda's Democratic Popular Movement, a coalition of Communists and other Marxists.

POPULAR YOUNG labor leader Rodolfo Seguel, a key anti-Pinochet organizer, has sought to draw the two factions closer together, but he

U.S. ambassadors carry little weight in Central America

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — As the United States tries to guide events in turbulent Central America, its ambassadors get much the same response that King Carlos V of Spain encountered more than 400 years ago.

In 1548, the Spanish king decreed the "nuevas leyes" (new laws) governing the lands of the Spanish conquest in America.

Remarkably progressive for their time, the new laws were largely ignored by the Spanish colonists, who saw them as meddling from afar by a ruler who didn't understand their problems.

Now in the troubled countries of El Salvador, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Honduras and Costa Rica, U.S. ambassadors are sometimes ignored, occasionally scorned and seldom heeded as much as they'd like. They even, at times, run afoul of their own government.

Perhaps nowhere outside of the Middle East is the role of the American ambassador more critical as the Reagan administration attempts to prop up fragile governments, halt human rights abusers and stem the spread of communism in a backyard area it views as being of vital strategic importance.

"IT IS AN extremely delicate balancing act," said one U.S. official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

"They (ambassadors) are faced with the problem of maintaining good, strong relations while forcing Washington-prescribed medicine down governments, and government leaders, who find it distasteful for ideological and other reasons, many of them bound in long tradition."

Here is a rundown of U.S. ambassadors in the region:

EL SALVADOR
Beset by civil war for more than four years, El Salvador has had four U.S. ambassadors in that time, each of whom has preached moderation to a succession of rightist governments.

The latest, Thomas R. Pickering, a career diplomat who came to the country last September, has taken up the cudgel against human rights abuses.

But Pickering, while forceful, has avoided the strong language of his predecessor, Deane Hinton, who in a speech to Salvadoran businessmen linked the nation's ultra-rightists to a "mafia" dominated by "gorillas." Hinton's comments were received with anger in El Salvador and didn't sit too well in Washington, either. The White House quietly disavowed his speech through press leaks and he was relieved of the post a few months later.

GUATEMALA
Ambassador Frederick Chapin left Guatemala late in February for reassignment, hastened on his way by a parting snub from the nation's military leader.

"Mr. Frederick Chapin ... does not fill the requirements necessary to be decorated with the Order of the Quetzal," Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores said in a speech three days after Chapin's departure.

Mejia Victores did not elaborate, but the government medal named after a tropical bird has been rather freely given to other departing diplomats, including Chapin's predecessor, Frank Ortiz.

Spokesmen for both the U.S. Embassy and the Guatemala government denied reports of friction between Chapin and Mejia Victores.

But during Chapin's tenure, there was unquestionable tension between the United States and Guatemala over resumption of military aid. It ended in 1977 because of Guatemalan reluctance to accept human rights conditions.

HONDURAS
John Dimitri Negroponte is known as the "proconsul" in Honduras, which the Reagan administration has turned into a nerve center in a psychological and clandestine military struggle against leftist-led Nicaragua. Negroponte and Gen. Gustavo Alvarez Martinez, until March 81 the nation's military leader, had been widely viewed as Honduras' two most powerful men — much more so than President Roberto Suazo Cordova, a civilian.

Reports had persisted that Negroponte and Alvarez shared a strained relationship. Although they agreed on the goal of neutralizing the influence of Nicaragua's Sandinista government in the region, both were strong-willed men who apparently disliked consulting one another.

Asked in an interview before he left office if Honduras was taking orders from the United States, Alvarez snapped: "No gringo gives us orders."

Jaffa Arabs complain of housing

JAFFA, Israel (AP) — A five-minute car ride south from the sparkling new skyscrapers of Tel Aviv's tourist and business district, some 15,000 Iffhli Arabs live in crumbling and decayed buildings.

The Arabs of Jaffa, remnants of a once-flourishing Palestinian community, complain of discrimination and neglect. One leader warns of the area is a "time bomb" waiting to explode.

Shlomo Lahat, mayor of Tel Aviv and Jaffa, admits the problem has been ignored too long. So does Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's Arab affairs adviser, Binyamin Gur-Aryeh. Both say efforts are being made to rectify the problem.

Jaffa, a Mediterranean port that once served King Solomon, was not always the collection of tin huts and disintegrating stone houses it is today. It was a major gateway to the Holy Land and wealthy Arab merchants built rose-colored mansions overlooking the sea.

But during the 1948 Israeli war of independence, most of Jaffa's 75,000 Arabs fled. Their houses were occupied by Jewish immigrants and the town became a predominantly Jewish suburb of Tel Aviv.

Most of the Arabs who stayed behind drifted to abandoned buildings on the western side of Jaffa, where their numbers swelled through childbirth and an influx from Arab villages to the city.

Years of governmental neglect contributed to a high crime rate, substandard education and an acute housing shortage.

Arab leaders charge that although they have equal rights in the eyes of the law, the neglect is in keeping with government policy of appropriating Arab lands and pushing Arabs out of Jewish centers.

"They took a beautiful Palestinian city and turned it into a refugee camp," said Nahla Shaker, 37, a Maronite Christian engineer born in Jaffa who works for the Ministry of Transportation.

Shaker, who describes himself as a Palestinian Israeli, is active in a neighborhood welfare association. He is regarded by the authorities as a troublemaker. Driving along alleys patrolled by the Israeli border police, Shaker claimed that "every time there's any trouble, the (security police) visit me."

Standing by one of the seven enclaves of Arab slums that dot the Jewish section of Jaffa, Shaker warned that his neighborhood association was "fast getting to the point where we'll have to take the politically extreme road, because we're facing a blind wall. This place is a time bomb."

Strangers are not welcome in the Arab sectors. Shaker cleared the way for this reporter to visit Hassan Daka, who lives with his parents, 14 siblings, wife and three children in a five-room house.

The building was built without a license. Its inner walls are peeling and the outer ones are cracked. The smell of sewage and cooking is overwhelming. A color television is the centerpiece of the main room, which serves as Daka's bedroom and living room.

Across the street, Jews live in modern apartment blocks — an average of two people to a bedroom.

Daka, speaking broken Hebrew, said the city refused to grant him permission to open a garage by his house "and I don't want to work in some industrial area. I want to work by the house; it's our tradition."

"They want to force on us their fancy American urbanization plans," Shaker complained.

A police source who spoke on condition he not be named claimed the slums housed weapons caches and stolen goods, "and it would take three border police platoons to clear them out."

The head of intelligence in the Jaffa police, Avi Bar, estimated in an interview that 8 percent of Jaffa's Arab residents had criminal records. Drugs are a major source of income because Jaffa offers easy access for drug dealers; it is a fishing port and the main taxi depot for the thousands of Palestinians from the occupied Gaza Strip who work in Israel.

The police source said Jaffa Arabs were not involved in subversive activity. "They leave terrorism to West Bank and Gaza Arabs and allow themselves to deal exclusively with crime," he said.

Bar said joint Jewish-Arab gangs do a thriving drug business. "It's just crime," he said. "There's no national element involved." Mayor Lahat conceded in a telephone interview that "everything concerning the infrastructure and the housing (in Jaffa) is a disgrace. I admit it took me longer to deal with it than I thought."

British rock star fined for assault

HENRIETTA, N.Y. (AP) — British rock star Billy Idol has been fined $250 after pleading guilty in an assault of a 20-year-old woman in his motel room here.

A lawyer representing the 27-year-old Idol entered the plea to a harassment violation Thursday in town court.

Idol was accused of assaulting a woman in his motel room on Dec. 17, 1983, after a concert that night at the Rochester Institute of Technology. The woman said that during an argument Idol threw her against his motel room wall and then against a hallway wall when she left his room.

The reduced charge in the guilty plea was recommended by the Monroe County district attorney's office and accepted by Town Justice Joseph Marticelli.

LONDON (AP) — A day before his 80th birthday, Sir John Gielgud returned Friday to the theater where he began his acting career to celebrate the occasion.

Gielgud played a herald, a one-line part, in a 1921 production of Shakespeare's "Henry V" at the Old Vic.

Gielgud was feted by a theater crowd that included Trevor Howard, Glenda Jackson and Christopher Reeve of "Superman" fame, who carried in a cake with 80 candles.

Gielgud recalled his early days at the theater with the late Sir Ralph Richardson. "We had a little dressing room which was absolutely filthy and full of trash. There was a half-empty bottle of plonk (cheap wine) and an old couch, but we both said 'Isn't this wonderful, it's the real theater.'"

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Billy Graham has received an invitation to preach at several Soviet churches from the All-Union Council of Evangelical Christians-Baptists of the U.S.S.R.

The evangelist said Thursday that the exact timing and duration of his visit are yet to be decided but he expects to tour several major Soviet cities.

Graham visited Moscow in May 1982 to speak at an International Peace Conference.

"It is an official invitation," Graham said at a news conference Thursday. "Dates and all other things have not been decided, but some of my people are going over next week to talk with them and decisions will be made."

He said the invitation is for him to preach in several Soviet cities and in large Russian Orthodox Cathedrals.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Former Mayor Frank Rizzo and City Councilman Thacher Longstreth, longtime political foes, have put aside their differences to plug a local cut-rate airline — but they still couldn't agree on argyle socks.

Longstreth, a Princeton graduate and a Republican, and Rizzo, a Democrat who worked his way up from a beat cop to police commissioner and then mayor, will appear in two spots for American International Airways.

Rizzo, whose political comeback effort was thwarted by W. Wilson Goode in the mayoral primary last year, claims in one of the 30-second blurbs that he never wanted to be a policeman or mayor.

"I wanted to be a pilot for AIA," Rizzo says. "I wanted to wear the wings of Philadelphia's first low-cost airline."

In the other ad, Rizzo and Longstreth say that although they have never agreed on anything before, they now agree on which airline to use.

Jury finally chosen in De Lorean trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jury of six men and six women were sworn Friday to judge the cocaine-trafficking case of automaker John Z. De Lorean, ending a grueling, five-week interrogation of prospective jurors.

"I love them all," the silver-haired De Lorean told a reporter seconds after his attorneys announced, "We accept the jury as presently constituted."

Most of those chosen for the panel have said that their lives were too active to allow them to read newspapers or watch TV news regularly. The majority voted they had little or no knowledge of De Lorean or the circumstances that brought him to trial.

In a tense, hour-long session, defense lawyers and prosecutors used peremptory challenges, taking turns excusing from the panel those they thought might not favor one side or the other.

They were not required to give reasons for these challenges.

The defense exercised 11 such challenges and the government used 5. After the jury was seated, four alternates were selected, two men and two women, with each side using one challenge on that group.

The 12 regular jurors include a scientist from the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena, a woman who works in the personnel department of the Los Angeles Board of Education and a young woman who described her occupation as "workshop facilitator."

The jurors' names have never been released and they have been identified only by numbers to protect their privacy. Their ages range from young adults to retirees.

One of the panelists, a woman, served earlier this year on a trial in which the chief defense attorney was Howard Weitzman, now De Lorean's chief lawyer.

After the panelists rose and swore to listen to the evidence and "render a true verdict," they were excused until Wednesday morning when they will return to hear opening statements by attorneys.

Earlier, prosecutors gave U.S. District Court Judge Robert Takasugi a sworn statement from a government informant in which he declares he never erased tape recordings of conversations with the automaker.

But defense attorneys said they were not satisfied with the explanation and demanded a hearing at which the informant would be required to testify. The prosecution opposed the motion, saying the matter was a subject that could be raised during cross-examination of witnesses at the trial.

James Timothy Hoffman, a convicted drug dealer who will be the star witness against De Lorean, 59, conceded that at times he did erase what he called "non-contact" conversations.

Professor: Better to be nominated for Oscar than actually win one

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A professor who studied 10 years of ticket sales says being nominated for an Oscar is worth more at the box office than winning one, and some films even lost audiences after winning.

"By and large, the big impact on the American public is at the time of the nominations. I think that's what brings people out to the theaters," said professor Paul Sommers of Middlebury College in Middlebury, Vt.

"Since 1974, the effect of winning an Oscar nomination has provided a bigger shot in the financial arm than has winning the award itself," he said.

Sommers analyzed box office receipts going back to 1970 as reported in the movie trade publication Daily Variety, comparing ticket sales at theaters a month before and after the nominations, then again a month before and after the awards ceremonies.

"I found that there was a statistical difference before and after the nominations but not a statistical difference before and after the awards," Sommers said.

"I thought that the awards ceremony and so much fanfare and so much that goes into that ceremony would actually pay dividends," he said. "I was surprised that it does not really matter for very many films."

Permian claims track title, Lee finishes in second

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

District 4-5A Track

ODESSA — Odessa Permian dethroned the Midland Lee Rebels as the District 4-5A track king here at Ratliff Stadium Friday night in what may have been the fastest ring-around-the-roses meet in loop history.

Permian ran away with the title by scoring 166 points behind the heroics of senior Jason Leach, who set records of 10.10 in the 100 meters, 20.85 in the 200 and running a leg on the record Permian sprint relay team, which recorded a 41.62.

Lee did finish second with 110 points and qualified for the Region I meet in seven events. Midland High, who some thought might be left out of the Region I hunt, came up with two big surprises to earn region honors from Ross Petree in the 800 and Darrell Davis in the shot put.

IN ALL, six running records fell in the meet, headed by Leach's performances in the 100 and 200. Those two records may stay on the books for a long time.

One of the big surprise records came from Lee sophomore Quintus Hampton, who blazed to a record 38.29 in the 300 hurdles. He was not a favorite to even win a region berth.

"I was a little disturbed before the race when San Angelo's Mike Fanning told me he wasn't even concerned about me beating him. I think he placed fourth," Hampton said.

Lee junior Marc Brackens was the only other individual winner from the Tall City, winning the 400 with a record 48.78.

"It didn't feel like my fastest race," said Brackens. "I would have believed a 49.9 if someone had told me. But I guess it was fast. I've never run that kind of time before."

Lee's other victory came from its 1600 relay squad with a 3:18.

The Rebs won that in easy fashion.

One of the biggest surprises in the meet came in the shot put where Lee's Isaac Garnett failed to earn a region berth. Garnett went into the meet unbeaten, but both Permian's Britt Hager and MHS' Davis beat him. Hager had a 59-8 1/2 while Davis had a 59-5, both throws better than Garnett's season best.

"I felt I was going to do it in the preliminaries when Garnett wasn't throwing very well, but Hager was the one who surprised me. I didn't think he would throw that well," said Davis. "I've got two weeks to improve and I think I will be over 60-feet easy."

Garnett ended up third in the shot put with a 58-8 and the senior, who was a region qualifier last year, will miss this year's trip.

MHS COACH Johnny Williams said, "Davis did a superb job. We still haven't come down to earth. He got behind after one throw and came back. That's competing."

Lee's Walter Jones led the region qualifying sweepstakes, earning a region berth in four events. He was second in the long jump (22-2), 200 (21.54) and ran on both of Lee's qualifying relay teams. Lee's sprint relay was upset by Permian's record 41.62 while Lee finished at 41.90.

"I'm pleased to get four events for the regionals, but I was concerned about the relay teams because I didn't think we were performing very well. We all need to improve."

Lee's other region berth came from David Jackson in the discus with a second place behind Hager with a 151-10. Jackson, a left-hander, didn't have a good win to help him, but he made it anyway.

thanks to the fact that Odessa High's Joe Terry couldn't compete because of hepatitis.

Midland High's Petree was another extreme surprise in the 800 with a second place 1:58.91 behind Permian's Bruce Bennett, a region qualifier last year.

Petree finished seventh in the Tall City Relays only one week ago, but came back strong.

"He's never run under two minutes," said Williams. "He hasn't been all that good this year like we thought he would. This is a real surprise. We thought he might be in the 1:50 range, but 1:58 is great."

"I just stayed in control and knew I could do it when I hit the last curve. I've had three knee operations and the knee swelled on me after the Monahans meet. I hadn't done anything since then," Petree said.

THE OTHER meet record came from Odessa High's Reggie Jones, who had a 13.43 in the high hurdles, another mark that may stay for a long time.

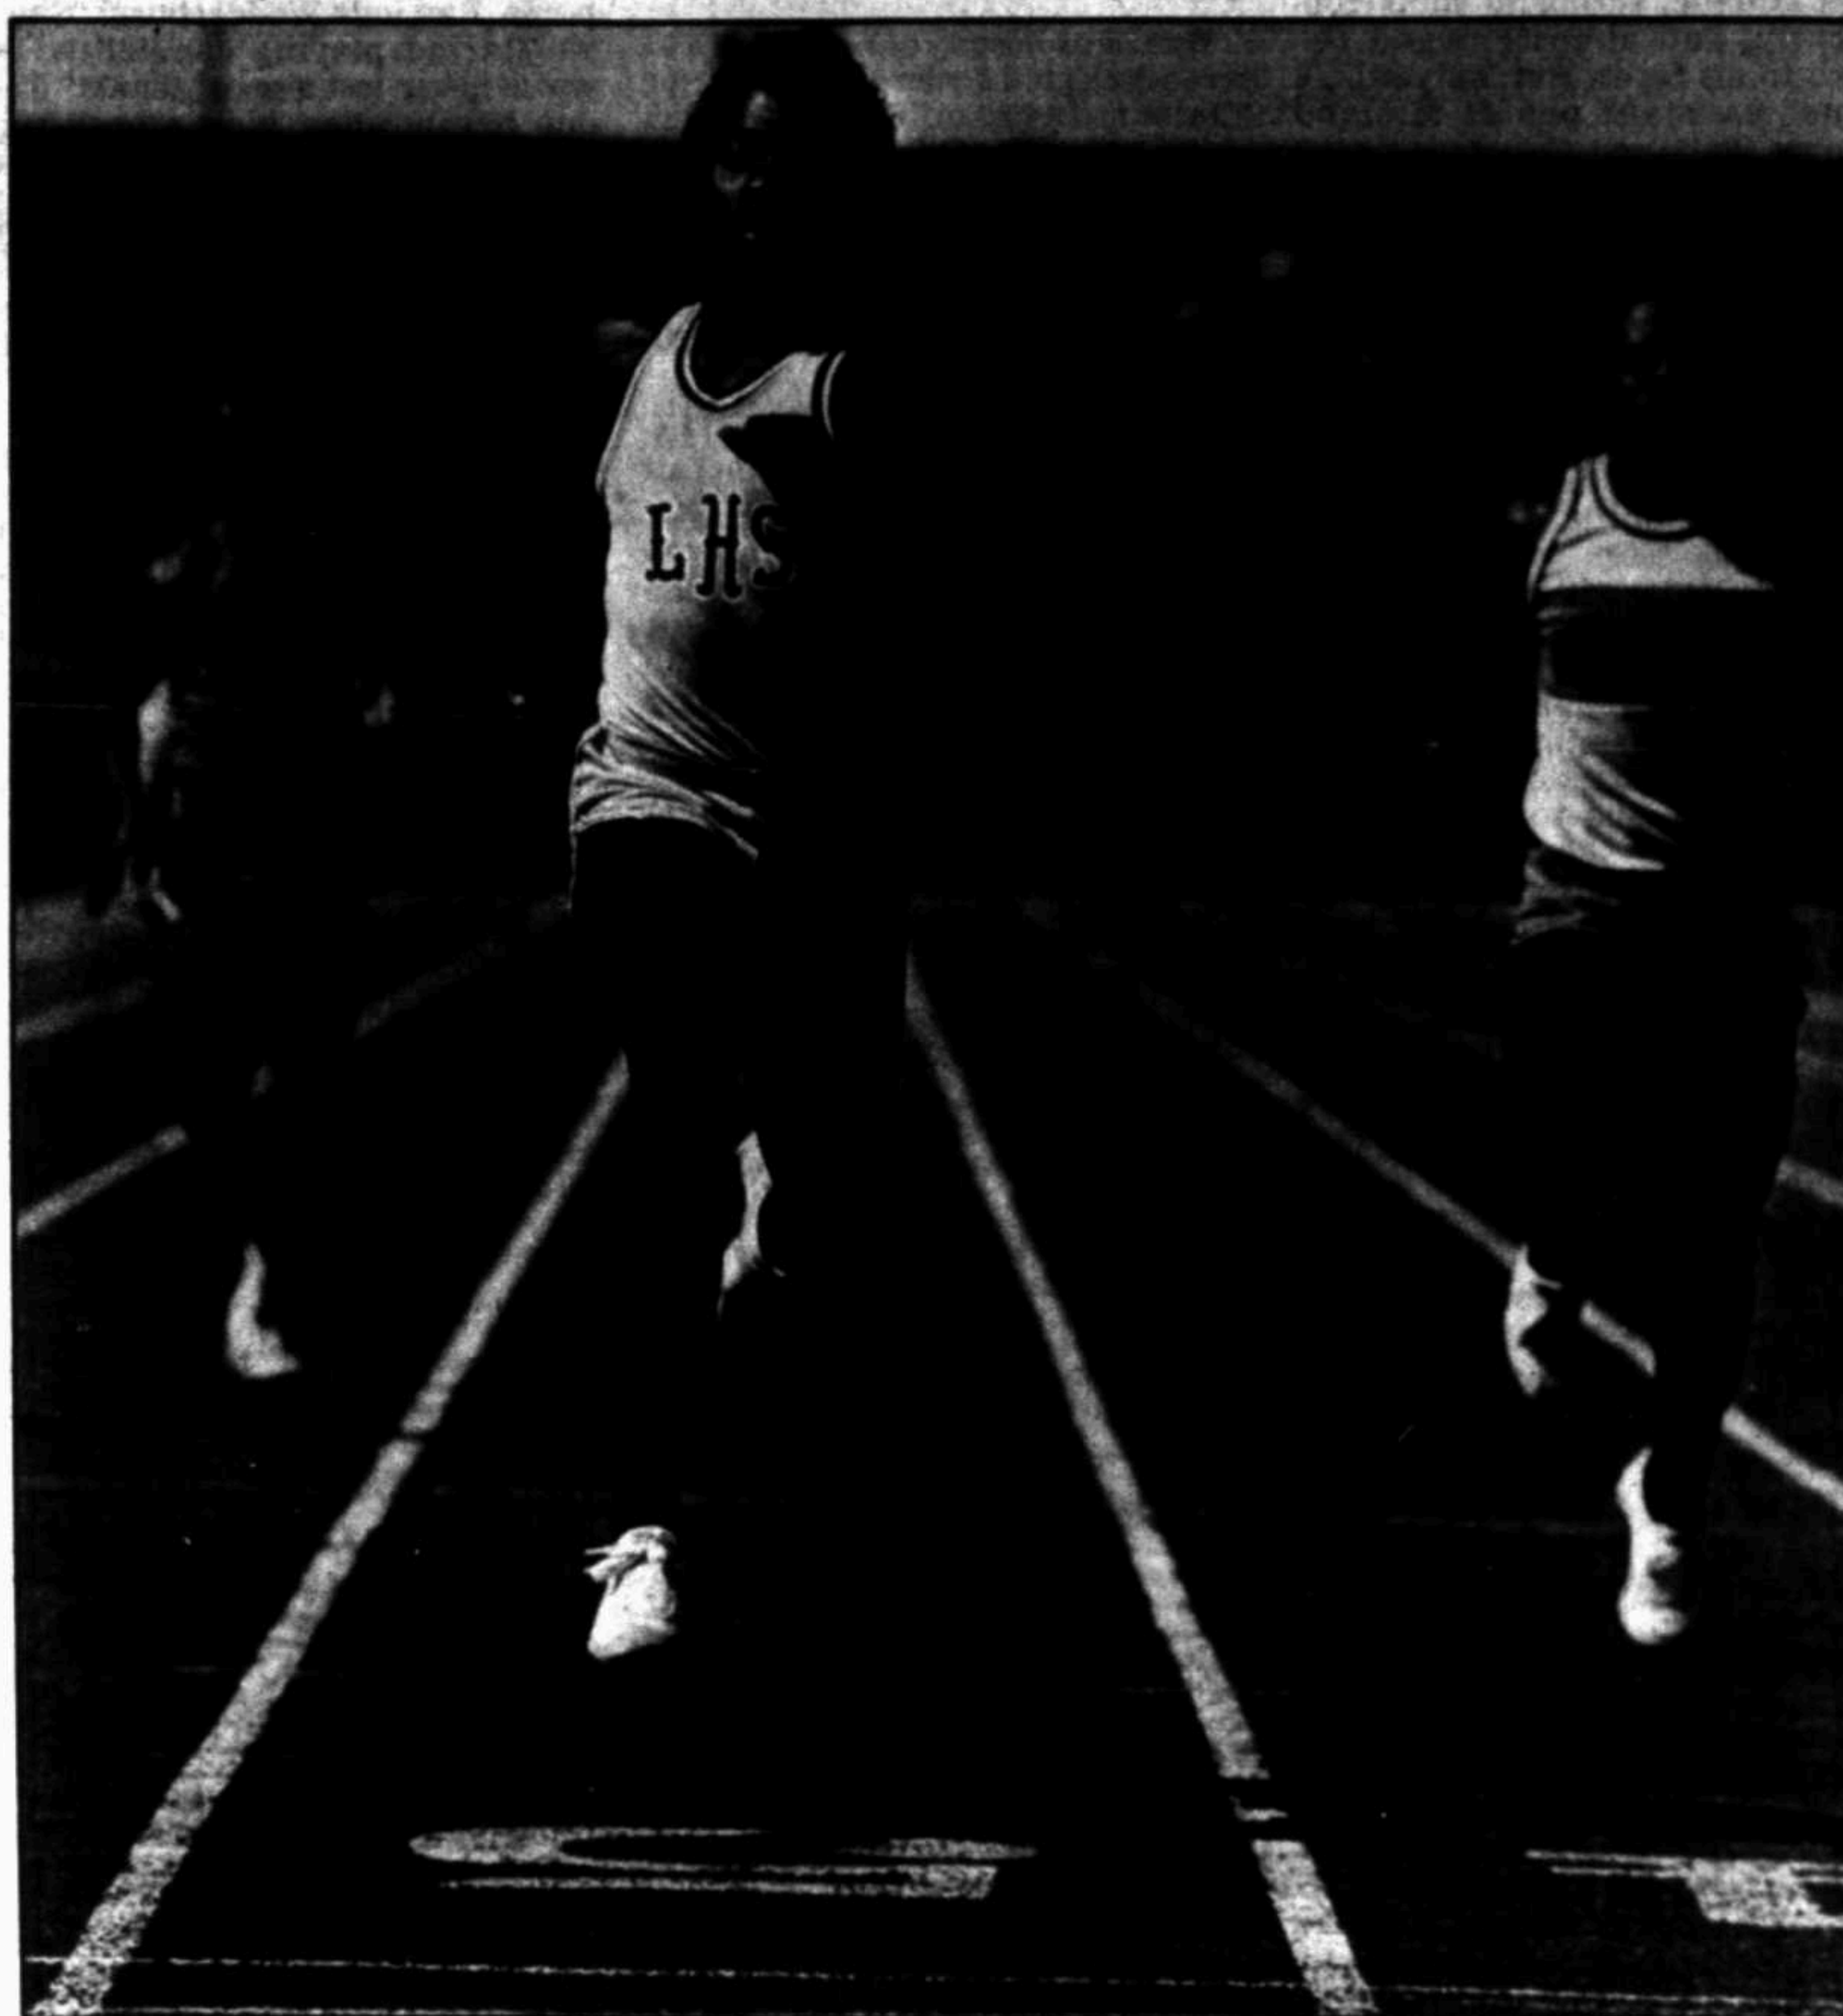

The future looks bright for both MHS and Lee. MHS won the junior varsity division with 113 points while Lee was second with 86 1/2.

MHS got victories from Greg Holmes in the pole vault (10-9), John Fernandez, 3200 (10:39.33); Randy Simmons, hurdles (15.32); and Marcus Hurd, 200 (22.84).

Lee got victories from Brad Cooper, 400 (51.22) and both relays.

Permian coach Waymond Griggs was well pleased with his team that won 11 Region I berths. "I thought we competed very well. It was fun seeing this meet and all the records that fell."

Both MHS and Lee have youthful teams with very few seniors and both should be very competitive next year. Only Jackson for Lee and Petree for MHS are not back next season. All of the other region qualifiers will be back.

Midland Lee's Walter Jones finishes a preliminary event in the 200 meters Friday at Ratliff Stadium. Jones qualified for the Region I meet in four events.

Unlucky day has no effect on top seeds

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY

Friday the 13th proved to be bad luck only for non-seeded teams in the First Bankers Trust-Southwest Airlines USPTA Love Doubles Championships at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Of the seven seeds that advanced to Friday's second round, all managed to keep bad luck and the upset bug away to set up the quarter and semi-finals today at 9:00 a.m. and 3:00 p.m., respectively.

In Thursday's opening rounds, fourth-seeded Robert Trogolo and Gary Seymour were sent packing by unranked Carlos Alvarado and Roland Ethienne. That represents the only upset thus far of a seeded team.

TOP SEEDS Randy Crawford and Bill Matyastik withstood a serious challenge from Glenn Williams-Greg Manning to advance to the quarter-finals today at noon against eighth seeds Rick Myers of Abilene and Dave Bryant.

Cubs beat Dodgers, 14-10

By TED BATTLES

The way things have been going, it looked as though the Midland Cubs might score in every inning and still lose.

As it turned out, they didn't score in every inning and they didn't lose. After pulling even at 10 in the seventh inning, Midland scored four eighth-inning runs to win a wind-buffed 14-10 slugfest over San Antonio at Cubs Stadium Friday night.

A crowd of 1,638 showed up, but few were left at the finish as an ideal night turned ugly early in the game with first strong winds and then plummeting temperatures.

MIDLAND'S FIRST win of the Texas League season, after three losses, was featured by Danny Norman's second inning grand slam which gave Midland a 6-2 lead. Norman knocked in six runs and shortstop Shawon Dunston made two errors in one inning, but made up for it with three hits, including a two-run single in the winning eighth inning rally. He had three RBI for the night.

Manager George Enright was grateful for the win in any shape or form. Before the game, he learned that he had no bullpen. Ray Soff went home because of personal problems and Joe Housey came up with tendonitis. Doug Poteetio and Jorge Carpio had combined for five appearances in the first three games. So things didn't look bright.

AS A result, Enright was counting starter Ron Richardson for six or seven innings. The 6-5, 230-pounder from Albany, Ore., had to be relieved during a six-run fourth in which the Dodgers took a 10-7 lead. Seven of the 10 runs off Richardson were unearned.

However, Carpio was equal to the occasion, throwing 4 2/3 innings of four-hit shutout relief to pick up the win as the Cubs kept pecking away to finally gain the upper hand. The sixth inning was the only inning in which Midland didn't score.

Norman, who had a long drive go foul Thursday, drilled a low-trajectory missile down the left field line for his grand slam, the Cubs' first homer this year. Midland scored almost five times as many runs Friday as it had in the first three games combined.

Stu Pedersen was responsible for the Dodgers' comeback after the slam. He hit a run scoring triple in the third and came all the way around on an errant throw as he rounded third. He then doubled home a couple of more runs in the big six run fourth.

In the eighth, it was a pinch hit single by Antonio Cordova into left that plated the go-ahead and winning run. It came after walks to Jeff Rutledge and Don Hyman.

THE CUBS combed four Dodger pitchers, who gratuitously threw in 10 walks, for 14 hits. Carlos Granillo, the third pitcher lasted 2 2/3 of an inning, long enough to be saddled with the defeat.

Rebs improve hitting, need more

Bulldogs expecting tough game from Cougars

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

After a brief stay in second place, the Midland Lee Rebels are once again tied for first with Abilene Cooper with a 7-2 record.

Today, the Rebels hope to at least hold that position when they host Abilene High, 4-5, in a 2 p.m. meeting at Lee Diamond.

After suffering back-to-back losses to end the first half of the District 4-5A season, the Rebels snapped the skid with victories over Odessa High and San Angelo by reviving a slumping hitting attack.

In their last two victories, the Rebels collected 17 total hits, a far cry from the five they managed in losses to Cooper and Midland High.

Still, Lee coach Ernie Johnson isn't satisfied. "We're not hitting much," he said. "If a good pitcher comes at us, we could be in trouble. We're coming along, but it's very slow."

Of the Rebels that are hitting, Steve Woodlee is leading the way with a .444 average and is tied with Rob Walker and Dennis Matta with nine runs scored. He is tops in RBIs with 10.

Bryan Willis, who will start on the mound against Abilene High, is second with a .440 average and has scored eight times while knocking in nine. Jimmy Phillips is hitting .393, Walker .310 and Matta .304.

Willis has been Lee's busiest pitcher this year with 32 1/3 innings of duty. He has a 4-1 record and one save in 4-5A play and has a 2.17 earned run average.

"We're going to pitch him as much as we can," said Johnson, who is worried about the Abilene lineup. "Abilene has a very tough offense and are a streaky type of team with a few good hitters in the lineup. They helped us the first time by botching everything we hit at them but then came back on us like gang butters. They're the kind of team that scares you because you never know what to expect."

WHILE THE Rebels are fighting to hold on to first, Midland High is looking for a repeat victory over Abilene Cooper. In the first meeting, the Bulldogs started the trend that has accounted for Cooper's only district losses.

Trailing in the bottom of the seventh inning, both MHS and Odessa High managed rallies against Cooper that tied the games at five. Each team went on to beat the Cougars 6-5 in the 10th inning.

This time, the Bulldogs will be playing on Cougar turf and Coach Tim Whalen sees it as a hard road to travel for another victory.

"They're definitely going to go for our throats but we're going to go for theirs too," said Whalen. "This is down to the nitty gritty and we need it."

Midland High, 6-3, is currently alone in third place behind Cooper and Lee. If the Bulldogs should lose, they would still be in third but, more than likely, with company as fourth place Odessa High, 5-4, takes on winless Big Spring and should have little trouble winning.

When Midland High played the Steers on Wednesday, Whalen started Mike Timlin and then pulled him after four one-hit innings (his second straight one-hit outing) to keep him available for the Cougars and they will see the Bulldogs' two best pitchers.

"We're going to start Timlin and relieve with (Steve) Wootan," said Whalen.

Ex-MCC pro advances

After winning the opening set 7-5, Crawford and Matyastik got tough in the stretch and downed Manning-Williams 6-3 in the second.

It was not an easy task. Williams made athletic, acrobatic shots consistently, and almost turned the crowd to his favor. But Matyastik, a former assistant pro at Midland Country Club, and Crawford began to smash winners to polish off the upstarts.

Crawford and Matyastik now work in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, so it wasn't jet lag that caused the duo to get off to a slow start Friday. "We did the same thing yesterday," Matyastik said. "We started kind of slow. I had a hard time getting a feel for the game, but it came as we got into it."

Indeed, Matyastik and Crawford suddenly became supermen with the score even at 3-3 in the second set. Reverting to strength and power, they started jamming shots at the smaller opposition. Almost through force of will, the top seeds delivered.

Matyastik is a former Trinity All-American, and Crawford is a TCU All-American product.

STEVE WEDDERBURN and Brian Lussion, seeded second, had an easier time in advancing. They defeated the local crew of Joe Don McBeth of Odessa Country Club and Derek Edmonds of Green Tree Country Club, 6-2, 6-3.

McBeth-Edmonds almost made headlines with an upset chance after a dramatic win to stake an early 2-0 lead in the second set. Wedderburn lost his service after the game went to seven deuces.

But Edmonds was broken in the next game. McBeth held service the next time to go up 3-2, but that was it as Wedderburn, an Australian, and Lussion, of Kalamazoo, MI., rallied.

Wedderburn-Lussion meet seventh-seeded Brian Cheyney-Dave Kanter at 10:30 a.m. Today's winners in the quarterfinals will need to win in the 3:00 semis to make the finals, and both are glad for the opportunity. With the late afternoon match Wedderburn and Lussion had scheduled Friday, their attention wandered.

"I'm not complaining," said Lussion, "but when you sit around all day you get a little tired."

Wedderburn agreed. "We had no rhythm. We were going off into the clouds today. It got so bad we went out driving around with some friends (Dave Sivertson and Craig Kardon, who lost to Cheyney-Kanter). It got so nobody was saying a word after a while, we had to get out of the car and run around it to get going."

While that act isn't necessarily characteristic of Aussies, it epitomized Friday's results: people were going bonkers for awhile until something came along to shake them up. While only four of the 23 matches played (there was one default) thus far have gone to a third set, only three can be called definite blowouts.

"All the guys here have been good, they just don't play as much anymore," said Lussion. "In their day, they weren't as good as Connors or somebody, but they were maybe a step down. Every point from now on will be a big point."

And Wedderburn-Lussion are in position to make a run for the first place prize money in the $15,000 purse. Reminds Wedderburn: "Since we started playing competitively, we've never lost a set of tennis." The duo began when Wedderburn suggested the partnership in a Mexican food restaurant in Houston that they both happened to be in. "He said, 'Let's play some doubles,' and we entered a tournament in Austin. Unseeded, they won. The outcome is evident."

THIRD-SEED Peter Doerner-Chris Sylvan disposed of Rob Castor-Ken DeKonig 6-4, 6-4 to qualify for the quarterfinals against sixth-seeds John Holladay-Paul Fineman. Holladay-Fineman advanced with a 6-2, 6-0 drubbing of Joe Hignight-David Bennett. Doerner, another man from Down Under, and Sylvan have the breakfast match at 9 a.m.

Jai DiLouie-Bill McGowan, seeded fifth, eliminated Jim Bochte-Bob Stock 6-4, 6-2 to gain a slot opposite the tournament dark horse. Alvarado and Ethienne took three sets to keep their surprise showing active, knocking off Venezuelans Jorge Andrew and Victor Reimer, 6-2, 4-6, 7-6. Dallas' DiLouie, an ex-SMU All-American, and McGowan, paired for the first time, try to avoid the upset-minded non-seeds in a 1:30 p.m. match.

Sunday's finals match is slated for a 3:00 p.m. start.

Spurs sneak past Rockets in OT

HOUSTON (AP) — Artis Gilmore's free throw with five seconds left in overtime offset a "triple-double" by Elvin Hayes in the final home appearance of his career as the San Antonio Spurs defeated the Houston Rockets 129-128 Friday.

Hayes, who played all 53 minutes of the game, will close out his 16-year career at Kansas City Saturday as the National Basketball Association's third all-time leading scorer and rebounder and the career leader in games, minutes, fouls and field goal attempts.

Hayes scored 16 points, grabbed 17 rebounds and passed out 11 assists. Houston held a 96-90 lead after three quarters, but John Lucas scored 12 points and passed out four assists in the fourth quarter as the Spurs fought back and forced overtime on Edgar Jones' 18-foot jumper that tied the game 118-118 with 54 seconds left.

Gene Banks, who led all scorers with 28 points, and Ron Brewer each scored four points for the Spurs in overtime.

Banks and Mike Mitchell each scored 10 points as the Spurs took a 38-34 first quarter lead and San Antonio built a 68-58 halftime bulge as the Rockets shot 32.3 percent from the floor in the second quarter.

Cubs, Dodgers wind up series

Joe Huey nailed it down with a hitless ninth in relief of Carpio, who last year was a starter. After the game, a fight almost broke out along the third baseline. Trouble was quickly headed off as both clubs detoured to separate the combatants.

The Cubs and Dodgers wind up their series at 7 p.m. today. It is Miniature Bat night with the first 1,000 youngsters receiving the bats.

Lee's Farias wins qualifiers' meet

Twin Towers say no to Olympics

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Melvin Turpin and Sam Bowie, Kentucky's "Twin Towers," have turned down invitations to participate in the Olympic basketball trials next week, the Amateur Basketball Association of the United States of America announced Friday.

They declined because of personal reasons, ABA-USA said.

Both are seniors. Turpin is 6-foot-11 and Bowie 7-1.

Tim McCormick of Michigan and Blair Rasmussen of Oregon have been added to the trial roster and more players may be added, ABA-USA said.

The tryouts will be held at Indiana University from Tuesday through Sunday.

Batboy stable

after being hit

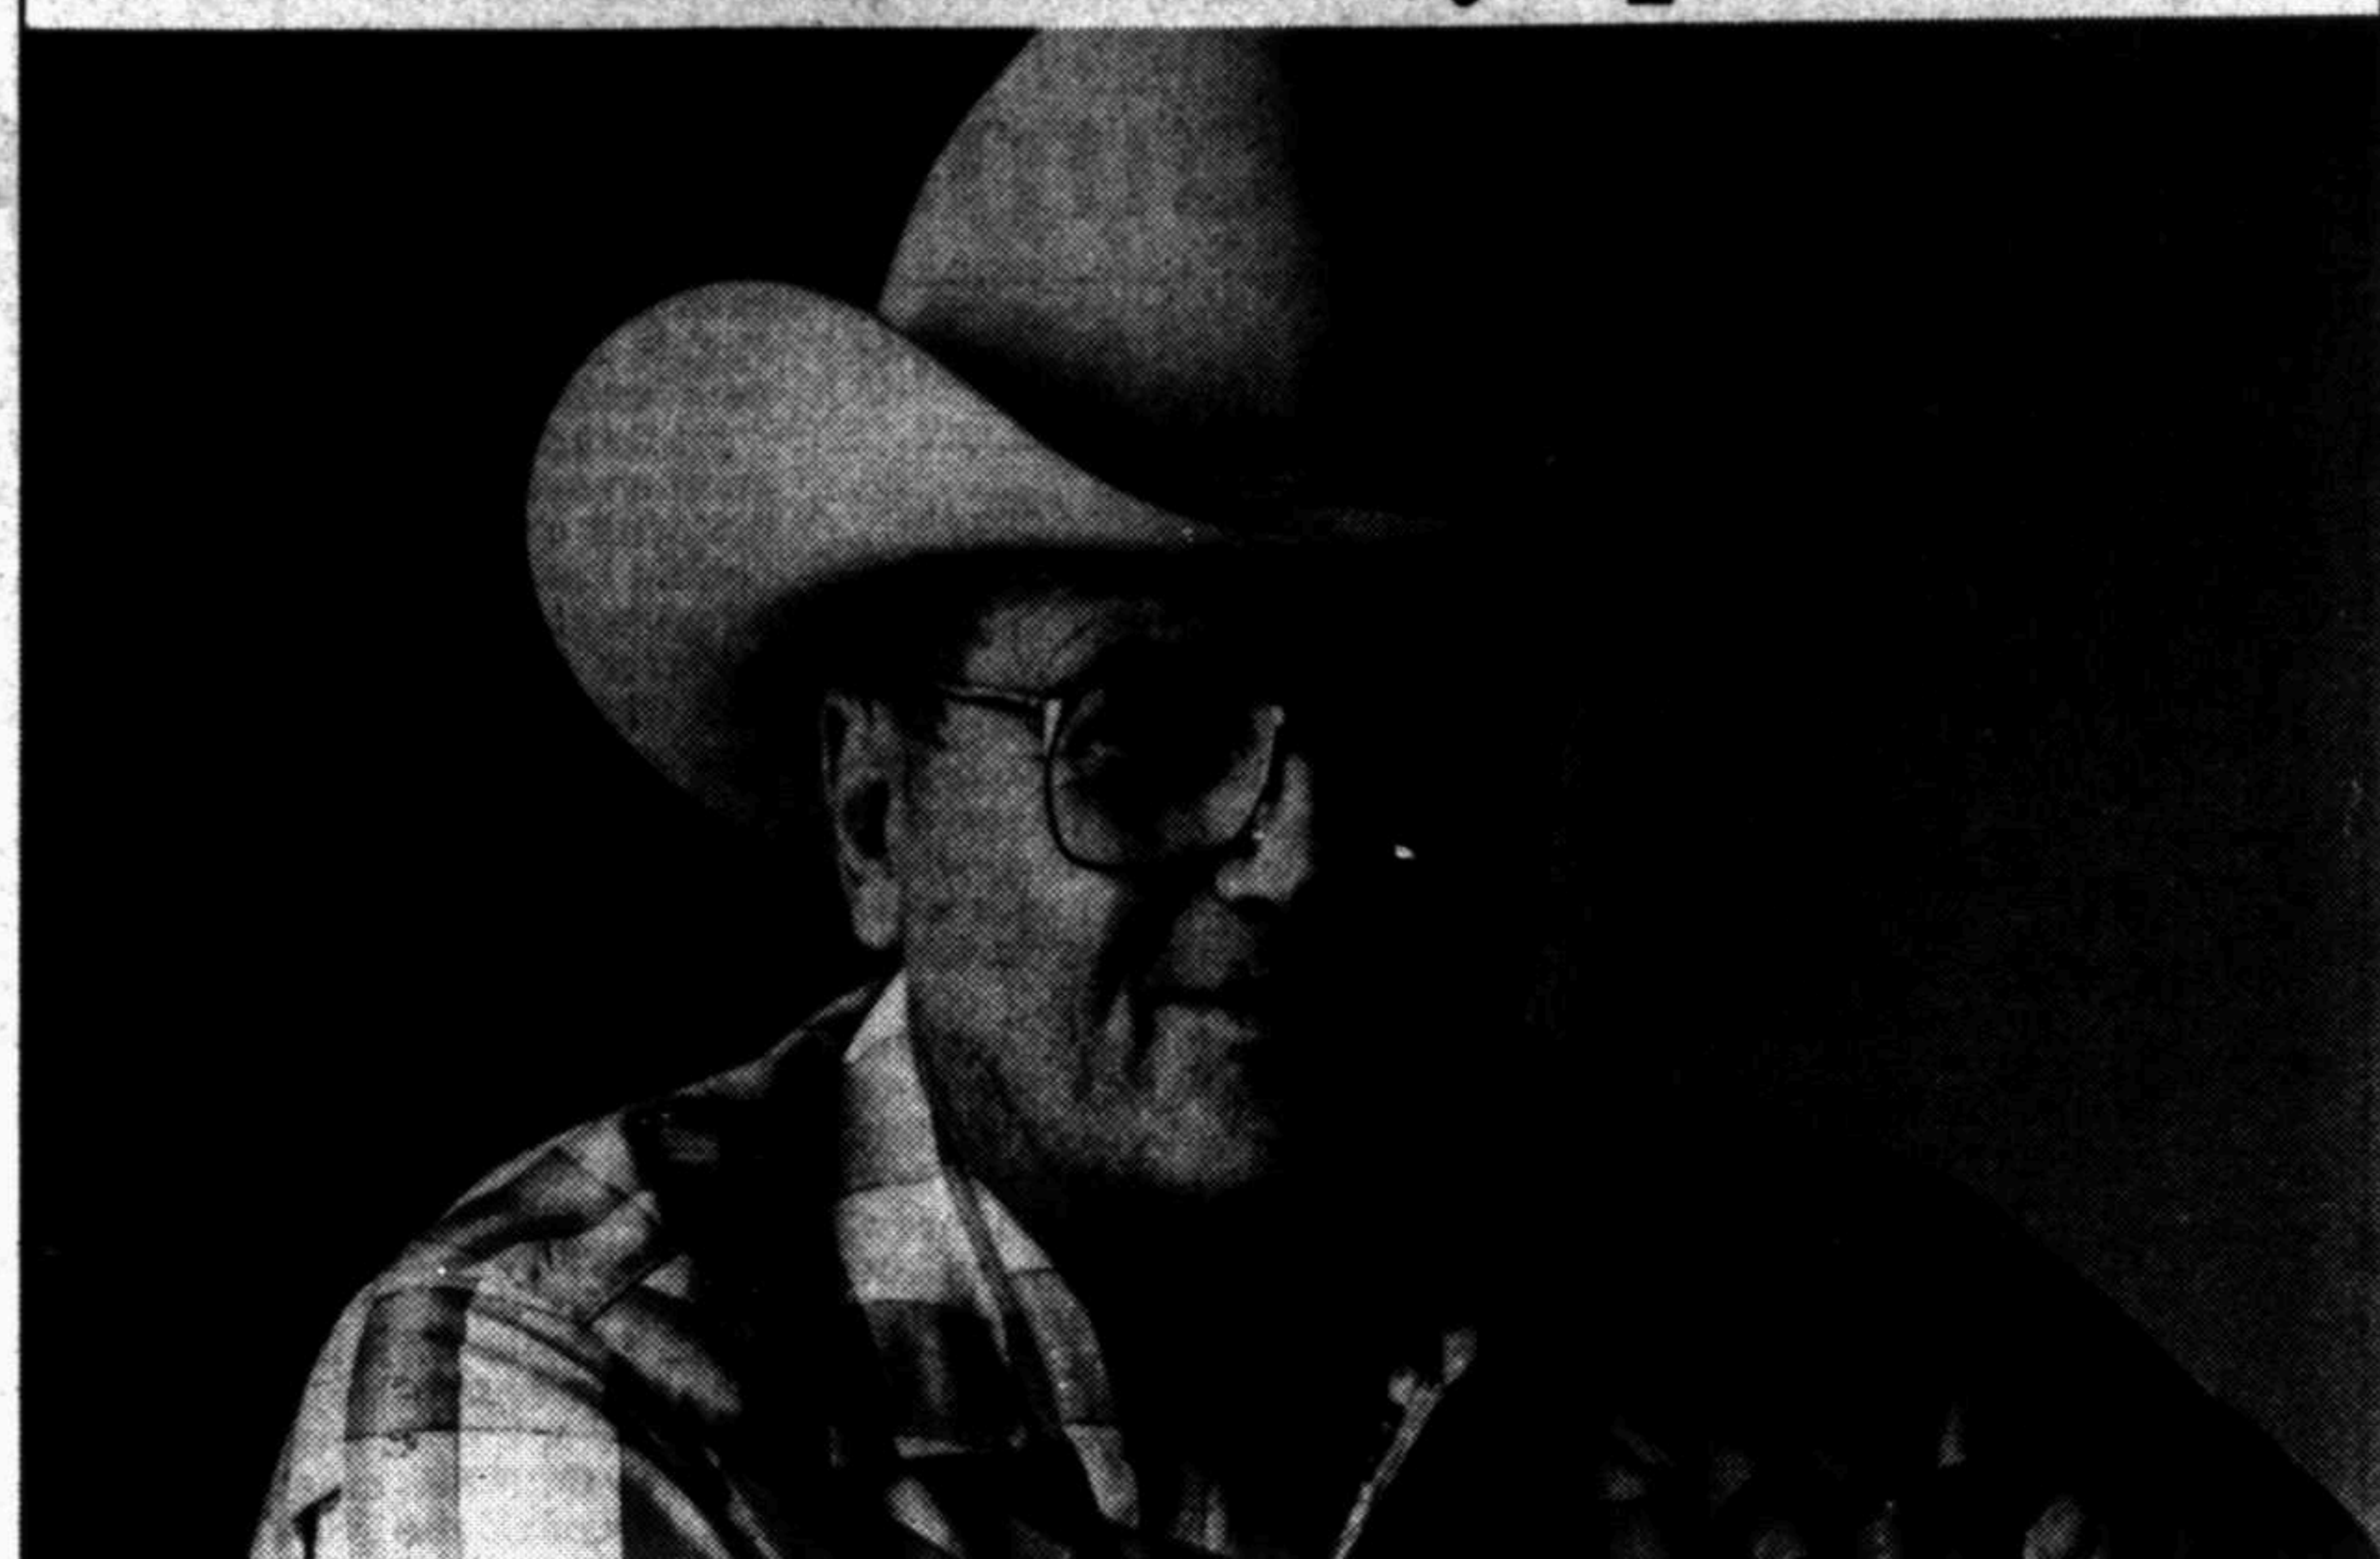

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A 13-year-old batboy, who was struck by a bat during a Texas League baseball game in Jackson, was listed in critical but stable condition Friday in the intensive care ward at St. Dominic Hospital.

Ricky Foster underwent surgery Wednesday night for a fractured skull, officials said.

Foster, of Jackson, was hit on the face with a bat swung by a player with the Tulsa Drillers as the athlete warmed up Wednesday night during the second inning of the Mets-Drillers game.

A hospital spokesman said the youth suffered fractures to the right side of the face above and around the right eye.

Lye grabs three-shot Masters lead; Kite in second

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Mark Lye, a long-legged man with a peculiar gait and pizze personality, stalked to a three-shot command of the 48th Masters tournament Friday, then grinned at the assembled sports writers of the world and beat them to the punch.

He had the first question. "Are you guys as surprised as I am?" asked Lye, a decided longshot and a Masters rookie who left an international field of the finest players in the game staggering somewhere in the wake of his brilliant, 6-under-par 66.

"I had my own ballgame out there, my own tournament. I'm still way up in the ozone," Lye said after compiling a 36-hole total of 135, nine shots under par for two trips over the rolling hills of the Augusta National Golf Club course.

And, after a 31 on the front that included a sand shot for an eagle, it appeared he was going to put even more distance between himself and the more familiar names of the game.

"Mark was nice to the rest of the field because he didn't run away with it. For a while, it looked as if he might shoot the course record," said Tom Kite, who birdied all the par-5 holes on the way to a 68 that lifted him into second alone at 138.

"Mark is playing well. He's got a lot of confidence. He's on a high. He's got it going," Kite said.

"Whether he can sleep tonight, well, you'll have to check with him."

And Lye was much too wrapped up in his second round performance to consider the third round.

"I can't remember when I hit so many good golf shots. I was just hitting it in the teeth," said Lye, who gained a position in this invitational field after scoring the first victory of his seven-year tour career last season.

The critical shot in his effort, he said, was the 20-foot sand shot he holed for an eagle-3 on the second.

Tom Kite, who tied for second here last year, shot a 68 and moved into second at 138.

Ben Crenshaw, Kite's old University of Texas teammate and the first-round leader, had a share of the No.

2 position until he bogeyed the 18th hole and finished with a par round of 72.

He was tied for third at 139 with David Graham, a former winner of the U.S. Open and the PGA national title, and Nick Faldo of England.

Graham, an Australian now living in Dallas, birdied three of the last four holes for a 70. Faldo, now a regular on the U.S. tour and the leading player in Europe last season, had a 69.

Tom Watson, twice a winner here and a five-time British Open champion, elbowed his way back into the race with a 67 and a 141 total, three under par.

"Three under might not be right there, but it's close enough," Watson said.

He was tied with two-time U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin, Lee Trevino, Andy Bean, David Edwards and Japanese star Isao Aoki.

Trevino, one stroke off the pace at the end of the first round, opened up with a 3-putt bogey on the first, bogeyed the next two and had to rally for a 73. Edwards and Bean, each a winner on the PGA Tour earlier this season, each had a 70 in the muggy weather. Irwin shot a 71 and Aoki 72.

Jack Nicklaus, the 44-year-old Golden Bear who counts five Masters crowns among his record collection of 17 major professional titles, had to work hard to qualify for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Nicklaus played the front side in a fat 40, played indifferently for the next six holes and went to the 16th tee needing a birdie-birdie-birdie finish to make it. And he finished birdie-birdie-birdie, chipping in from 50 feet on the final hole to complete a second 73 and a 146 total.

"As far as ball-hitting is concerned, that's probably the worst round of golf I've played since I turned professional," Nicklaus said.

U.S. Open champion Larry Nelson, with a 69, and Calvin Peete, with a 66, also rallied to qualify with totals of 145.

But defending champion Seve Ballesteros was not so fortunate. The Spaniard, who was disqualified after missing his tee time in the 1980 U.S. Open, again ran afoul of the rules.

A rules official called him for grounding his club in the confines of a hazard — Rae's Creek — on the 13th hole and assessed a two-shot penalty. It gave him a double bogey-7 on the hole, 74 for the round and a 147 total, one too many.

Hal Sutton the 1983 PGA champion and Player of the Year, also missed at 73-147.

So did Arnold Palmer, who 3-putted six times on the way to a 76 and a 153 total.

Lye, a diabetic who carries a supply of candy bars and food supplements in his bag, started out two shots off the lead and made it up in a hurry, holing the sand shot on No. 2.

"The most important shot of the day," he said. "That got me moving." And he never slowed down, striding quickly to a total of five birdies, an eagle and one bogey.

Lye birdied the second from 15 feet, hit a wedge shot 18 inches from the pin on the fifth and holed an 8-foot birdie putt on the sixth.

A 7-iron shot on the long, tough 10th, nestled some three feet from the flag and Lye tapped it in.

He bogeyed the par-5 13th after driving into a bush. He called it an unplayable lie, took his drop, made his bogey and went about his business.

Completely unshaken, his concentration undisturbed, he hit his approach 18 inches from the cup on the next hole, and went back to nine under par.

"I was watching the leader boards, and nobody was doing anything," he said.

And he was right. None of the other contenders could make a move at him. Crenshaw, at one point, got to within two strokes, but bogeyed the 12th from a bunker, then backed off another shot on the 18th.

Lye, meanwhile, got routine pars on the 15th, 16th and 17th, then saved par on the final hole with a chip and a six-foot putt.

Only then did his face, which was showing signs of strain, relax into a smile as the huge gallery gave him a standing ovation.

Kite, a winner at Doral earlier this season and a frequent contender here, built his effort around a domination of the par-5 holes. He birdied them all, and hit none of them in two.

"I hit some great wedge shots," he said. "It's a nice feeling to have four 4s there."

Soviets pull Olympic tennis team

By The Associated Press

The Soviet Union has pulled out of the tennis competition, a demonstration sport at the 1984 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles, it was revealed Friday in what could be the first step toward a Soviet boycott of the Games.

In Moscow, Soviet officials were not available for comment. They previously charged anti-Soviet bias by the United States and have scheduled a news conference for Monday concerning the Olympics.

In a conference call from Monte Carlo to reporters in Washington, Philippe Chatrier, president of the International Tennis Federation, said the Soviets had submitted names of athletes to enter the tennis competition, but withdrew the names before the April 12 deadline for participation in the event.

"The U.S.S.R. has just withdrawn the names they put forward," Chatrier said.

Chatrier said he did not know the specific reason the Soviet Union withdrew, but said he didn't think it signaled a pullout from the Games.

"I don't think the withdrawal from the tennis is an indication," Chatrier said. "We can't be pessimistic."

The Soviets have called on the International Olympic Committee to consider charges against the United States for alleged violations of the Olympic charter. The deadline for official entry into the Games is June 2 and they have not yet indicated whether they will participate.

The United States boycotted the 1980 Olympics in Moscow because of Soviet intervention military in Afghanistan.

Earlier this week, the Soviets complained to the IOC that the 1984 Games are badly organized and claimed the Reagan administration is playing politics by denying an entry visa to a Soviet athlete.

A statement released this week by Tass, the official Soviet news agency, warned that the move "jeopardized" Soviet participation in the Games. Hungary, Czechoslovakia, East Germany and Bulgaria have joined Moscow in alleging anti-Soviet bias in preparations for the Summer Games.

Tennis was added as a demonstration sport this year and will be a full competitive sport in the 1988 Games. Professionals are being allowed to participate in the Los Angeles Games, with the field limited to players under 20.

In Rome, IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch called for the Games to be held in "brotherhood, friendship and peace."

In Los Angeles, Peter V. Ueberroth, head of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, declined comment Friday on what the withdrawal might mean regarding Soviet participation in the Summer Games.

Paying big bucks doesn't mean victories

By The Associated Press

The newly sold Denver Gold, a low-priced roster with a high standing, head to Pittsburgh Saturday to take on the high-priced Maulers in a United States Football League game.

Denver was a playoff contender much of last season and is running away from the rest of the Pacific Division with a 6-1 record this year despite a bargain-basement payroll. Conversely, the Maulers, an expansion team with millionaire rookie Mike Rozier, are stumbling along at 2-5.

In Saturday's other USFL games it's Oklahoma at Washington, Memphis at Los Angeles and San Antonio at Jacksonville. On Sunday it's Birmingham at Michigan, Chicago at Philadelphia and Arizona at New Jersey. Monday night it's Tampa Bay at New Orleans and Houston at Oakland.

Ron Blanding, who acquired the Gold as a charter USFL team for a $1.5 million letter of credit, told the team it has been sold to a group headed by Denver auto dealer Dug Spedding, pending league approval. Spedding has put the price at about $10 million.

"I don't think it will make a whole lot of difference, because all I do is take care of my own business on the field," said wide receiver John Arnold. "And we're all just going to keep on taking care of business."

Up to now, Gold Coach Craig Morton has given Blanding a great return on his investment. Denver holds a three-game lead over Arizona as the season's halfway point arrives. Pittsburgh, meanwhile, is two games out of last place in the Atlantic Division, leading only winless Washington.

USFL Roundup

"We don't have any of real dissension that I think (you get) when you have one guy making a million and the rest of them making 30 or 40 (thousand dollars)," Morton said, a reference to Rozier, the Heisman trophy winner from Nebraska who signed a $3 million contract.

"I think it would be nice to have somebody like Rozier, but I think we have players as good as he is ... at this point. He's going to be a great football player, there's no question about it. I'm just against going out and spending all that money on one guy. I just don't think it's fair."

In Washington, the Federals try for the eighth week in a row this year to break into the win column. "We may be a little down but there are no quitters here," said Coach Dick Bielecki.

Oklahoma is 5-2, the best record of any of the six expansion teams, and is coming off a 20-17 victory over previously unbeaten Michigan, the defending champion.

Quarterback Steve Young of the Express makes his third start, still in search of his first pro victory. His chances of picking it up are better this week. Memphis, like the Express, is 2-5 and has lost four of the last five games. Young's previous games were against the Gold and New Jersey, two division leaders.

SMU's James changing leagues?

DALLAS (AP) — Tailback Craig James may be on the verge of getting out of his $2 million contract with the Washington Federals of the United States Football League and jumping to the New England Patriots of the National Football League, the Dallas Morning News reported Friday.

James played for Patriots head Coach Ron Meyer his first three years at Southern Methodist in Dallas. He teamed with running back Eric Dickerson, now with the Los Angeles Rams, in SMU's "Pony Express" backfield.

The newspaper quoted an unnamed source as saying the deal is contingent upon the 17 other USFL teams allowing James to pass through waivers, which is not expected to be a problem.

Earlier this week, James was put on waivers by Washington.

A source told the newspaper that NFL attorneys have requested in writing that James would be considered a USFL free agent and free of his obligations to the league before the Patriots would be allowed to sign him.

James, who has not played since suffering ligament damage to his right knee in the first game of the season on March 4, has reportedly been unhappy with the Federals, who signed him to a four-year, $2 million contract on Jan. 12, 1983.

Washington, 4-14 last year and 0-7 this season, have been experiencing severe financial problems and "want to unload him in the worst way," a source told the newspaper.

James could not be reached for comment.

Meyer, who recruited James to SMU, selected him in the seventh round of the NFL draft last season. By doing so, the Patriots retained James' NFL rights for four years, officials said.

"We have had discussions relating to that, but it's not something that is at all a done deal," said New England Vice President Chuck Sullivan.

A source said the Patriots would agree to pay James the remaining $1 million left on his contract over the next three NFL seasons.

In a statement released by the Federals in Washington Friday, Federals General Manager Dick Myers said James has been given permission to talk with the Patriots.

Bad news sparks stock market rally

NEW YORK (AP) — A little bad news for the nation's retailers helped provide the spark the stock market was longing for this past week, analysts say.

They say Thursday's report that retail sales fell 2.2 percent in March, its biggest decline in more than a decade, was viewed as a potential sign of slower economic growth and relief from the threat of rising interest rates.

It wasn't the only cause of the late-afternoon rally.

But it helped set the stage for the burst which carried the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials up by more than 30 points from midday lows in the last two hours of Thursday's session.

But Thursday's rally demonstrated the potential strength of the stock market should the economy slow to a pace which can be sustained without straining credit markets, analysts said.

Fleming hoping to take advantage of weak field

BOSTON (AP) — With the top American runners skipping Monday's Boston Marathon because of its proximity to the Olympic Trials, veteran Tom Fleming is hoping to take advantage of their absence for his first victory in 12 tries in the prestigious 26-mile, 385-yard test of endurance.

Nothing would make the 32-year-old Fleming happier than to win.

"People say to me, 'You wouldn't want to win Boston in a weak year,'" said Fleming. "The heck I wouldn't. I'll win it anytime I can!"

"To do well at Boston would make me so happy I would stop running the next day."

Fleming, in fact, has done well in the annual Patriot's Day race, which will be run for the 88th time Monday, but he still is looking for that elusive first victory.

He was second in 1973 and 1974, third in 1975, fourth in 1979, sixth in 1977 and 10th in 1978 — six finishes in the top 10.

"I've always wanted to do well there," said Fleming, winner of the New York City Marathon in 1973 and 1975 and winner of the Los Angeles Marathon in 1981.

"I think Boston is the greatest road race in America. I'm glad some of the other runners aren't getting as motivated about it as I am this year. I guess everybody has their own priorities."

Fleming's priorities did not include the U.S. Olympic Marathon Trials at Buffalo, N.Y. May 26.

"I'm being very realistic," he explained. "I don't think I could make the Olympic team. I'd be foolish to think that. I'm just not fast enough."

"So Boston is my top priority."

Fleming thinks it will take a clocking of about 2 hours, 10 minutes to earn one of the three places on the U.S. marathon team. His personal best is 2:12:05 at Boston in 1975.

He does not, however, consider that his best race.

"My perfect marathon was in 1981 at Los Angeles," he recalled. "It was a $25,000 pro-am race. I finished in 2:13:15, but that was an extremely hard, hilly course."

Boston also is a hilly course, and that is one factor on which Fleming is counting on Monday.

The favorite is Geoff Smith of Britain, but he has run only one marathon, last year's New York City Marathon, and that is not a hilly course. Nevertheless, Smith tired badly in the closing stages, and after leading from the 16th mile through the 26th mile, he was overhauled by Rod Dixon of New Zealand and finished second, collapsing at the finish line.

"I have nothing but respect for Smith," said Fleming, "but Boston is very different from all other marathons. Things happen out there on those hills."

Having run Boston's hills 11 times gives Fleming a distinct advantage, he believes.

Working out with Greg Meyer, last year's Boston winner, and Bill Rodgers, four-time Boston champion, also will be to his advantage, says Fleming.

Fleming has been staying at Rodgers' house for about 10 days, and training daily with the two former Boston winners.

A.C.A. is an anonymous fellowship of adult children of alcoholics, (although all are welcome). Many of us grew up in alcoholic homes or are at the present time faced with dealing with the consequences of this disease in a parent, relative or friend. In this fellowship we have come to understand that alcoholism is an illness which we did not cause, cannot cure and cannot control. We have found by sharing our experience, strength and hope and by following the 12 suggested steps of AA we can live our lives in a more meaningful manner and can change our attitudes, old patterns and habits to find serenity, even happiness. Adult Children of Alcoholics meets Mondays at 8 p.m. at St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, 2900 Princeton St. For more information, call the Midland Council on Alcoholism, 682-4721.

The evening will consist of personal readings and discussion of how these insights can be used in your life. The instructor has been involved with the Tarot for 20 years. Wednesday, April 18, 7:10 p.m. Fee: $30.

ASTROLOGY - TOOL FOR KNOWING THE REAL SELF AND OTHERS — Astrology, as an ancient science, can teach you much about people and their psychological aspects that is not available in a psychology curriculum. It gives you a planetary consciousness and a planetary knowledge about individuals, and ties the knowledge of individuals together in a spiritual bouquet. Fran Hillin, a former skeptic, has been a student of astrology and other metaphysical subjects for twenty years.

Wednesday, April 25, 7-10 p.m. Fee: $30.

A SEMINAR ON RELATIONSHIPS — What makes love stay? How do you make a relationship work? What gets relationships in trouble and what about some of the specific problems such as sexuality and power structures? The central theme of this seminar will be "how to connect" — because there is never a lack of connection or communication, just the wrong kind. The seminar will be taught by Steve Thomas, full-time faculty member in the Behavioral Sciences Department, Midland College. Steve is also a licensed Marriage and Family Therapist in private practice. Thursday, May 3, 7-10 p.m. Fee: $30.

... AND ABOUT MEN! — Today when the roles of men and women are questioned, it is unusually within the context of the Women's Liberation Movement. We make little effort to examine problems resulting from the normal upbringing of a man. What about understanding how men change? Or why they might want to? How about men who think there must be more to life than a wife, kids and mortgage? Is being a "success object" any better than being a sex object? What's all the talk about the "Peter Pan Syndrome"? How about some time devoted to understanding men, states Sam Guyton, R.N., M.A., and licensed professional counselor in private practice in Midland? Tuesday, May 8, 7-10 p.m. Fee: $30.

"Jesus" is directed by Gail Storrer, drama director of the church, in coordination with James Nance, minister of music.

The public is invited to this free presentation.

The Jehovah's Witnesses will memorialize this event at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at the kingdom halls, 505 W. Parker St. and 1406 Westcliff Drive.

"Last year more than 6,767,000 persons remembered Jesus Christ by attending the memorial of his death at special meeting places sponsored by 46,000 congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses worldwide," Davis says.

"April 15 after sunset corresponds with Nisan 14 on the Bible's lunar calendar, the date the annual Passover was celebrated."

No collection will be taken.

Fannin Terrace Sanctuary Choir to give musical

The Sanctuary Choir of Fannin Terrace Baptist Church will present an Easter musical drama "Jesus of Nazareth" at 7 p.m. Sunday.

"Jesus of Nazareth" is a new Easter musical, noted by the publishers as a "musical tribute to the King of Kings and Lord of Lords." Composed of contemporary choral anthems, the work was arranged and edited by Christian composers Tom Fetteke and Vann Trapp. Its purpose is to relate the significance of the Easter story by recounting the events of Jesus' birth, life, death, resurrection and promised return.

The music includes "Easter Song," "The Majesty and Glory of Your Name," "For Our Sin (Isaiah 53)," and "He Was Born to Die." Included in the presentation is a drama written by Craig Sundheimer, minister of music and youth at Fannin Terrace, and performed by the Darrell Roberts family.

The public is invited to attend. A nursery will be provided for preschool children. The church is located at the corner of Fannin and Mogford streets, one block west of Garfield Street.

THE POWERFUL LIVING LORD'S SUPPER

The script for the "Living Lord's Supper" was written, based on much research of Bible scripture and history. As a result, many interesting facts were discovered.

The program begins with special singing, followed by narration and pantomiming as Christ and each apostle is introduced. The table is prepared to resemble and portray that night as near as possible. This is an informative program. It is also a program of deep emotions, that awakens in the human heart a refreshed view of the price Jesus paid at Calvary. You will feel the intensity of each moment and will feel as if you are actually there.

Book by feminist trail-blazer in heart of controversy

LONDON (AP) — Germaine Greer is back in the heart of controversy in the feminist movement.

Her new book, "Sex and Destiny: The Politics of Human Fertility," is a sweeping condemnation of family life in Western society, a sharp critique of modern birth-control methods, a warm look at the old-fashioned extended family with many children and a loud call to stop the West's "cultural onslaught" on traditional societies.

It has some people hopping mad, not unlike the reaction in the early 1970s to her first book, "The Female Eunuch." That book, in which she said women suffered discrimination and had better ways of handling some problems than men, established her as a spokeswoman for the feminist movement.

Harper & Row has given her new book a U.S. publication date of March 14, and it will be available in stores in about two weeks. "Sex and Destiny" was officially released in Britain Monday but had already roused a furor in January when the author compressed some of her major ideas into three essays in the Sunday Times of London.

THE ESSAYS brought a rash of letters, as well as comment in other British newspapers, with many complaining that a feminist guru had made a U-turn.

Some said her sociology and anthropology were selective or inaccurate. A few said that a woman who was a radical when she was in her 20s and 30s had become a conservative in her 40s.

Eight British feminists wrote a joint letter to emphasize that Ms. Greer, a native Australian who has made her home in Britain for 20 years, "has never involved herself in the women's movement in this country."

Some people found evidence of change in her hairstyle, no longer a youthful frizz. Sometimes she puts it in a bun, sometimes she just combs it back.

"I am 45 years old. My father died last year, which is the reason I put my hair up," she said in an interview with The Associated Press. "I figure I'm not 16 anymore. I can't go around with my hair in my eyes. I'm not a waif. It's not attractive anymore, so I might as well look like an intelligent grownup."

ABOUT CRITICISM of her book, Ms. Greer retorted that she was "not at all conservative."

"Anyone who thinks I'm conservative is making a mistake," she said. "They think I'm in favor of chastity. I'm not. I'm in favor of perversty. I think we're having extremely dull sex. ... It was more fun in the back of a Pontiac. ... It was more surprising and interesting. ...

"I think that some young kids have sex these days instead of conversation. It's easier, especially with the pill. Before you had to talk like fury because you weren't going to get there unless you did, so you had more time to find out who you were and who the other person was."

One chapter, entitled "Chastity Is a Form of Birth Control," covers practices in traditional societies where men and women are segregated, or the women are veiled, or parents stop having intercourse when their eldest children reach puberty.

Western efforts to limit population growth in traditional societies should have concentrated on such practices, Ms. Greer argues. "It is fatally easy for Western folk, who have discarded chastity as a value for themselves, to suppose it can have no value for anyone else," she writes.

THE MAJOR theme of her book is to urge the West to stop imposing its mores on traditional societies. But the biggest controversy came from her approval of the practice of coitus interruptus, or male withdrawal before ejaculation. "Where can you find the one man in a thousand who can do it?" asked an irate woman when Ms. Greer went on a radio phone-in show.

The Sunday Times printed one protest letter which accused the author of "asking young women virtually to hand over control of reproduction to men ... There were hundreds of thousands for whom the method failed with tragic results."

Star scouts developed for new age

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Don and Diane Weiner initiated their "new age scouting organization" two years ago and now Star Blazer troops are set to blast off in at least three more states in the next few months.

Star Blazers is an unusual variation of traditional scouting and a humanistic approach to child development, Weiner said.

In addition to camping, hiking and other classic scouting activities, Star Blazers learn about holistic health, meditation, and space, special interests of the Weiners.

"We place more emphasis on developing creativity, sensory awareness, assertiveness and an understanding of the emotions," said Weiner, 34, a psychologist.

"Regular scouting emphasizes leadership skills, skills related to nature and cooperation which are very positive things as well."

"We're not trying to compete with scouting, we're just offering a different approach."

The idea for Star Blazers "started as an inspiration my wife, Diane, got during a meditation — a new program for kids. She teaches special education. We sat down and brainstormed about it for a long time and finally put the original group together two years ago," he said.

The organization is not associated with the Boy Scouts or Girl Scouts of America.

The first two Star Blazers were the Weiner's sons, Orion and David. Now two troops of 10 children each are meeting and another 10 children are on a waiting list.

Star Blazers pay no fees except $1 per weekly meeting to cover the costs of materials. They do have uniforms and badges, similar to other scouts, but mother ship numbers replace troop numbers on patches.

Inquiries have come from parents in Oklahoma, New York and Wisconsin wanting to start Star Blazer troops and asking the Weiners to send copies of a program guidebook they compiled at the end of the first year.

"We're hoping eventually this will turn into a nationwide organization," he said. "I hope we have 20 or 30 troops by this time next year."

During its earliest meetings, Star Blazers imagine themselves as space ships with each part of the ship corresponding to an aspect of a human being.

For example, the motor is the body with food and breathing corresponding to fuel. The control computer is the human brain. Children work on developing and maintaining their "ships."

Spacecraft, like people, have guidance systems that give a sense of direction and goal.

In working on these guidance systems, "We try to give children an internal sense of control rather than having to be told something is wrong," Weiner said.

Seated in a circle, children are asked to "think about something you know you shouldn't do. How does that make you feel?"

Some scouts say imagining that gives them a tight feeling in their stomachs. Recognizing this feeling gives children a "guidance system" for determining when they are doing something that is wrong for them, Weiner said.

Another exercise helps children explore and develop their sense of hearing. They are told to go outside and write down all the things they hear.

"They usually get stuck after about five things, and then they really listen and hear a lot of sounds they've never heard before," Weiner said.

Similar exercises are done with all the senses.

The lessons learned as a Star Blazer affect other aspects of a child's life.

"For instance, when they're doing homework that's not too exciting, they think of it as a test of their willpower. When the kids tell us how they are applying the Star Blazer formula to different situations, it's very exciting for us," Weiner said.

Star Blazers also participate in "normal" scouting activities, like camping and playing games. There are scheduled activities, like skating parties, for Star Blazers and their families.

"Lots of parents say, 'I want to be a Star Blazer,'" Weiner said. "That might not be such a bad idea."

Networks ratings slipping

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — Even with three miniseries and the Winter Olympics, the commercial networks' ratings were down for the important February sweeps month. Surprisingly, the beneficiary was not pay-cable as much as basic cable services and independent commercial stations.

The slippage continues a gradual deflection of network audiences to cable that began several years ago and was only temporarily halted in early 1983 by huge ratings for "Winds of War," "The Thorn Birds" and the "M*A*S*H" finale.

"The decline is consistent with cable growth (now 40 percent of all TV homes)," said David Poltrack, CBS' vice president for research. "It's not a dramatic reduction, although it's certainly higher than we would have liked."

The audience fluctuations mean "the concept of loyalty to the networks is dissipating," said Seth Abraham, senior vice president for program operations at Home Box Office, the No. 1 pay-cable network. "The loyalty now is to the program, to the title."

According to the A.C. Nielsen Co., the commercial networks attracted 5 percent fewer viewers in February than they did one year ago. The 1984 combined prime-time rating was 52.6, well off the 55.7 a year ago and even lower than 52.9 in February 1982.

A rating reflects the percentage of the nation's 83.8 million TV homes watching during any prime-time minute. Ratings are crucial to stations in sweeps months, when audience levels are exhaustively sampled to determine advertising rates for succeeding months.

Poltrack said that this year's February specials couldn't match the 1983 "lockbusters: eight nights of "The Winds of War" and the concluding episode of "M*A*S*H," the highest-rated program ever.

Poltrack said that ABC's two-week coverage of the 1984 Winter Olympics did not do well, while the miniseries "Celebrity," "Master of the Game" and "Lace" did better than series programming but were far less successful than "Winds of War."

THE NETWORKS still say miniseries, series programming and made-for-TV movies are the best responses to pay-cable's theatrical films. CBS' three-part "George Washington" is on this week. In May, another sweeps month, ABC and NBC each will broadcast two miniseries — "The Last Days of Pompeii" and "Mystic Warrior" on ABC, "The First Olympics" and "V" on NBC.

The networks' decline also applied to January and March. The average three-network prime-time rating for 1984's first quarter was 50.6. One year ago, it was 52.8, meaning ABC, CBS and NBC were attracting 4 percent fewer viewers.

HBO, with 13.5 million subscribers, also lost audiences, dropping 10 percent in prime time from February 1983 to February 1984.

Nielsen's ratings for the independent commercial stations (non-network, non-cable) increased from a 7.9 rating one year ago to an 8.9. Pay cable went up slightly, from 3.3 to 3.5, which likely meant increases for Showtime-The Movie Channel, which had "Flashdance" in February (HBO did not), and the pay-sports channels. Ratings for public TV stayed the same — 2.5.

Basic cable, which carries commercial-supported services that don't require extra fees from subscribers, had an average prime-time increase from 2.1 to 3.0. Those services include MTV, ESPN, Cable News Network, USA Network, the Christian Broadcasting Network, the Nashville Network and Lifetime.

"THE BASIC-CABLE increase is spread out over so many services that you can't pinpoint it," said William R. Behanna, a spokesman for Nielsen.

Only recently, HBO has released special Nielsen reports to answer network figures showing that HBO's ratings had declined.

Hart, Mondale pan for 'gold'

By The Associated Press

Gary Hart and Walter F. Mondale panned for gold and votes in California on Friday and the Rev. Jesse Jackson aimed his "Rainbow Coalition" at Ohio as two smaller states prepared to allot delegates this weekend in the continuing numbers game that will decide the Democratic presidential nomination.

Mondale said Hart had voted "wrong" on women's issues while Hart countered that the 1984 election could not be won "by refighting the election of 1980." And Jackson urged Congress to show some "backbone" in opposing the Reagan administration on the mining of Nicaraguan harbors.

The weekend delegate prizes were small compared to contests past and future. Arizona carried the biggest delegate bundle, with 33 up for grabs in Saturday caucuses. And North Dakota Democrats prepared to divide 14 delegates at the state convention Sunday.

Additionally, South Carolina Democrats were holding a state convention where some of the 30 unpledged delegates determined earlier may express a preference for one of the three remaining candidates.

Hart and Mondale made a few public appearances in California to bid for votes in the state's June 5 primary finale, but they also went heavy on fund-raising events in a state that traditionally provides a big share of campaign money for Democratic candidates.

Mondale finished the first half of the primary season with a commanding delegate lead, 1,045.8 to Hart's 579 and Jackson's 153.2. Even though Mondale is over the 1,000 hump toward the 1,987 delegates needed for nomination, a determined Hart said Friday, "I expect to go into our party's convention with a majority of the delegates."

And Hart's campaign manager, Oliver Henkel, predicted that a second half surge in remaining caucuses and primaries would give the Colorado senator the impetus to overcome Mondale's big margin by the time the last delegates are selected June 5.

"Our expectations now, given what we believe to be reasonable expectations in those states, would have both Mondale and Hart at around 1,500 delegates at the conclusion of the primaries on June 5," Henkel said.

Mondale, for his part, said there was a possibility he would have enough delegates for nomination when the convention opens in July, but "not even that is clear."

In Cincinnati, Ohio, Jackson accused President Reagan of trying to override Congress with CIA support for Nicaraguan rebels and once again denounced the harbor mining as "state-sponsored terrorism."

"The point is that right now, the president is expressing extreme contempt for the Congress," Jackson said. "The Congress must show some backbone. It must resist any effort by the executive branch to undermine its authority."

Vice President George Bush, campaigning in Pennsylvania, said the administration policy toward Nicaragua is colored by that nation's friendliness toward Cuban President Fidel Castro.

"When (Reagan) looks at Nicaragua, he says one Castro is one too many in this hemisphere," Bush said.

Both Hart and Reagan got a tongue-lashing from Mondale Friday for their records on women's issues. In Los Angeles, Democratic presidential hopeful Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado signs campaign posters for children at the El Rio Neighborhood Center on the westside of Tucson, Ariz., Friday.

Mondale charged the Reagan administration with "sheer meanness" toward women and children with budget cuts which he said have accelerated "the feminization of poverty."

As for Hart, Mondale told 300 women supporters, "sometimes he votes right, but he hasn't been out there leading that fight."

Mondale also decried what he said was a "body blow to millions of Americans" who own homes. He said the administration is considering a proposal to eliminate income tax deductions for interest on home mortgages and went on to say, "I suppose we shouldn't be surprised Ronald Reagan would propose such an unfair proposal. This president doesn't seem to care about people who aren't rich."

The administration has no specific proposal, although dropping the interest deduction has been mentioned in various administration and congressional studies as one possible way to raise revenue to reduce budget deficits.

Before moving on to California, Hart campaigned briefly in Arizona on Friday, telling a university crowd that the Reagan administration is not committed to cleaning up the environment and declaring, "Let's throw the rascals out."

Hart said he would do well in Arizona caucuses Saturday because he is well known as a senator from neighboring Colorado. But Hart runs up against labor unions supporting Mondale and his chief supporter, Sen. Dennis DeConcini, a major political power in the state.

South Carolina Democrats were to decide whether to endorse native son Jackson, who already has won 14 of the 41 delegates at stake. But the county conventions ended last month with 43.5 percent still uncommitted and Jackson second with 29.4 percent.

Judge's corruption trial ends in mistrial

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The political corruption trial of federal judge Harry Claiborne ended in a mistrial Friday, with jurors saying they are hopelessly deadlocked on all seven counts against the judge.

Trial Judge Walter E. Hoffman declared the mistrial midway through the eighth day of deliberations. Both sides agreed to a retrial, which was set to begin July 31.

Claiborne, 66, Nevada's senior federal judge, was indicted in December on two counts of bribery, three of income tax evasion and one each of obstruction of justice and lying on his judicial disclosure report.

He was only the second federal judge ever indicted for alleged crimes committed while on the bench. In the other case, Alcee Hastings of Florida was acquitted last year.

"I had a lot of confidence going into this case," Claiborne said after the mistrial was announced. "I have the same confidence going back to trial because I know I'm right. I'll win. I know I'll win."

Steven Shaw, the chief government prosecutor in the case, said, "At this stage it wasn't a surprise, but still it was a disappointment." He said the prosecution decided to agree to a new trial because the jury's convictions were stronger than expected.

The jury's decision came shortly after Hoffman gave them 24 hours to bring in a verdict or declare an impasse. The jurors were then whisked from the federal building before reporters were released from the courtroom.

The jury reported itself deadlocked on all charges Wednesday.

day, but Hoffman told them to keep trying. Jurors have spent about 50 hours in deliberations since they received the case last Thursday.

Claiborne said: "Judge Hoffman will never be accused of whitewashing me in this trial. I'm disappointed, of course, I wanted an early resolution to get back to work."

The judge voluntarily stepped down from the bench in December until the charges against him were resolved.

Defense attorney Oscar Goodman said he would ask Hoffman to excuse himself from the retrial and added of his client, "It's a darn shame that the system permits a judge to be put through this."

Claiborne, of Las Vegas, could face up to 39 years in prison if found guilty on all charges.

He is accused of accepting $30,000 from brothel owner Joe Conforte to stop a 1978 federal investigation into voter fraud involving prostitutes at Conforte's Mustang Ranch brothel. The probe eventually was dropped.

He also is accused of fraud in accepting $55,000 from Conforte in exchange for Claiborne's promise that he could influence judges of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to overturn Conforte's income tax evasion conviction. The appellate court upheld the conviction.

In addition, Claiborne is charged with not reporting almost $157,000 in income on tax reports for 1978 through 1980, failing to report a $75,000 loan on a financial disclosure form and attempting to prevent Conforte's attorney from testifying in a federal grand jury investigation of Claiborne.

California nuclear plant wins NRC approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — A California nuclear plant delayed for nearly a decade because of earthquake fears and design flaws won approval Friday from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to begin operating next week.

On a 4-1 vote, the commission lifted its 2 1/2-year suspension of a low-power operating license for the first of two reactors at the $4.9 billion Diablo Canyon nuclear plant on the Pacific coast near San Luis Obispo.

The commission, however, delayed order's effective date until next Thursday to give opponents of the plant an opportunity challenge the decision in court.

Mothers for Peace, a San Luis Obispo group that has mounted most of the legal challenges to the giant facility, said it would ask the U.S. Court of Appeals here on Saturday to issue an emergency stay forbidding a start-up of the 1,084-megawatt Westinghouse reactor.

Attorneys for Pacific Gas & Electric Co., the nation's largest utility and the owner of the problem-plagued plant, said they will file their answer to opponents' request for a stay on Monday.

The court traditionally has granted emergency stays upon receiving such challenges until a three-judge panel can review the written briefs, a process that normally takes less than a week.

The San Luis Obispo group filed a similar suit last November, when the NRC allowed PG&E to load uranium fuel into the reactor. At that time, the court granted an emergency stay, but lifted it several days later after deferring to the NRC's judgment.

The low-power license would allow the utility to operate the plant at only 5 percent of its capacity while the NRC continues to investigate hundreds of allegations about quality assurance breakdowns in the plant's design.

The plant actually received the license in September 1981. But the commission suspended it two months later after PG&E discovered that blueprints for its reactor earthquake supports had been reversed.

Since then the plant has gone through intense reviews, inspections and modifications costing more than $1 billion to assure that it can safely withstand a large earthquake.

Tennessee troopers continue hunt for Fort Pillow inmate

FORT PILLOW, Tenn. (AP) — Troopers hunted a fifth day for a fugitive inmate at Fort Pillow State Prison officials conducted a shakedown for weapons Friday, the day after an investigation revealed that inmates have easy access to guns and drugs.

The investigation report, which accuses guards of selling weapons and drugs to inmates, was prepared by the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation following the Feb. 18 escape of five prisoners. The last of those fugitives was captured 19 days later after three people were killed, including one escapee.

Four other inmates bolted from a prison work detail Monday, but three have been captured.

Garry Bernard Sanders, a 30-year-old Memphis man serving life for the 1974 slaying of a retired policeman, was still at large Friday.

Dolls' creator files lawsuit

ATLANTA (AP) — Xavier Roberts, creator of the soft-sculpture creatures that became the Cabbage Patch Kids, has filed a copyright infringement suit against Richway Inc. over its Pumpkin dolls.

Roberts, of Cleveland, Ga., created the Little People dolls, which now are marketed by Coleco Industries Inc. as the Cabbage Patch Kids that were hot items last Christmas.

In his suit filed in federal court Thursday, Roberts said the Pumpkin dolls bear a marked similarity to his dolls.

Children may get state aid

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Children who watched or were wounded as a sniper fired on a schoolyard in February, killing a 10-year-old girl and wounding 13 other people, may get state aid for psychological counseling, the city attorney says.

Students, parents and teachers are eligible for grants of up to $23,000 each from the state's Victim-Witness Assistance Program, City Attorney Ira Reiner said at a news conference Thursday.

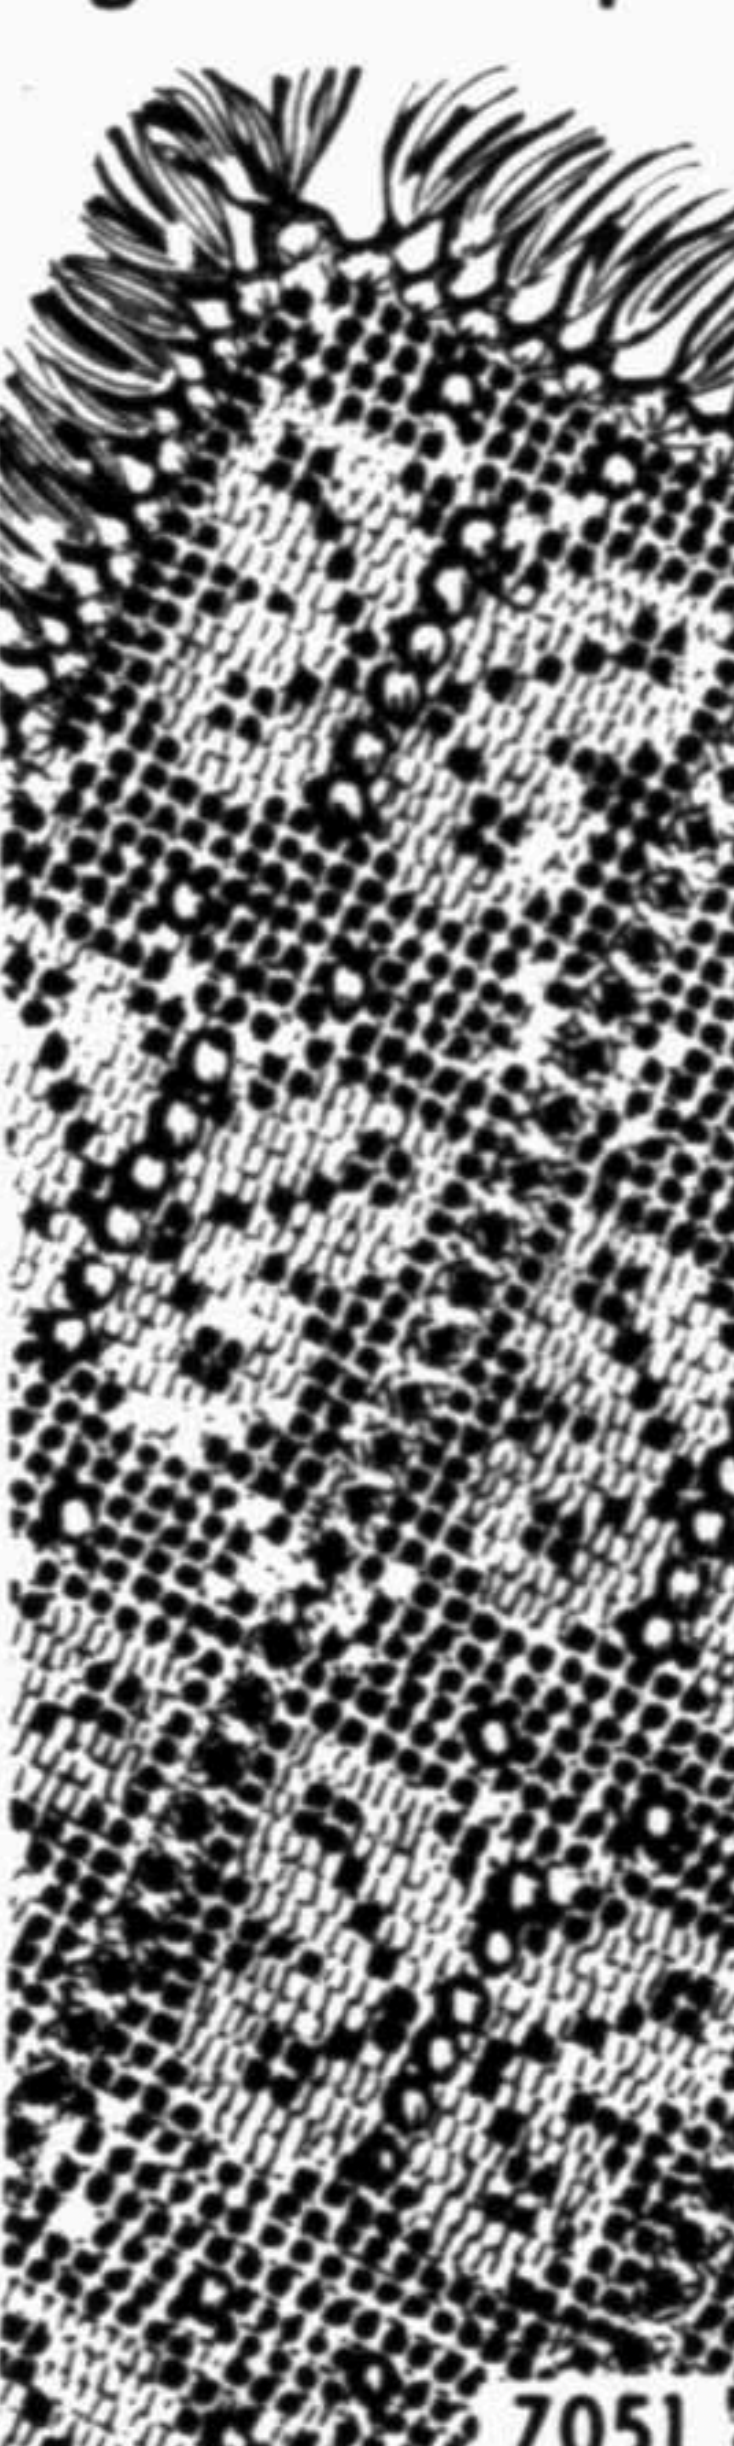

The sniper, Tyrone Mitchell, committed suicide after the siege at the elementary school on Feb. 24. Officials have said he was troubled by the deaths of relatives at the Jonestown compound in Guyana in the 1978 mass murder-suicide of more than 900 followers of the Rev. Jim Jones.

Firm offers teachers bonus

ANNANDALE, N.J. (AP) — The Burroughs Corp. has announced plans to counter the lure of higher-paying jobs in industry by offering three Hunterdon County math or science teachers $7,000 bonuses each.

"As a corporation seeking high-tech people ourselves, we see where we are competing with the school systems," said Vincent Gallenti, Burroughs' human resources manager in Flemington.

"COMPROMISE HAS NEVER BEEN MY STYLE..."

"...So when I moved to Midland, Oakridge Apartments was the only logical choice. As far as I'm concerned, there's not a better community around. Oakridge is brand-new. It's in an ideal location. It's very well-managed. Plus, it has the extras other communities don't. I love the indoor spa and sauna, and the community clubhouse and pool. And the custom kitchens with built-in microwaves, woodburning fireplaces and great storage are features I simply don't want to be without. The quality, of course, is uncompromising. Like me!"

1- and 2- bedroom and 2-bedroom studio apartment homes are available now. Take Loop 250 to N. Holiday Hill Road and look for the giant American flag.
