Was air battle a 'targeted mission?'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tapes and exchanges of messages indicate Libyan pilots "were on a targeted mission" when they attacked U.S. jets in the Mediterranean last week, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. says.

"I think it was a testing incident," deliberately ordered by the regime of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, Haig said Sunday.

The U.S. reaction in shooting down two Libyan jets, he added, should deter any similar episodes in the near future.

"I don't believe it was the spur-of-the-moment pilot accidental action," Haig said on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

"I think the tapes that have been revealed and the exchanges that ocurred after the event would suggest that the (Libyan) pilots were on a targeted mission," he said. "They clearly announced the fact that the one aircraft had released its missile.

"I'm not one that believes these kinds of things in a disciplined organization, even one of varied nationalities such as may be the case in Libya, are not pretty carefully managed and controlled," he continued.

While saying "we can't discount" the possibility that the clash was accidental, Haig said other harassing and provocative actions by Libyan aircraft over the past five years lead him to believe that last Wednesday's dogfight in the Gulf of Sidra 60 miles off the Libyan coast was a premeditated test.

Libya claimed most of the gulf in 1973, although the claim is not generally recognized. The United States says a country's airspace extends only three miles beyond its coast.

Meanwhile, the official Libyan news agency reported Sunday that Khadafy, who has admitted a Libyan plane fired the first missile, has called for the closure of all foreign military bases in the Mediterranean area.

He specifically urged Turkey, Spain, Greece, Italy and West Germany to expel U.S. personnel, the agency JANA said.

JANA said Khadafy made his comments in a speech Saturday in Ethiopia, where he also accused President Reagan of ignoring international law and "playing with fire."

Haig said the United States "must be prepared, of course...for some additional challenges or provocations" but added: "I am inclined to believe that the action taken...will be an effective termination of similar events in the near future."

"It is in our interest and the American people's interest and in the international community's interest to no longer overlook these illegal activities whether they come from Libya, Cuba or the Soviet Union," Haig said.

The secretary used the Libyan incident to rekindle his criticism of Soviet military policy.

"One must bear in mind that Libya today is armed far beyond its defense needs, and it is the Soviet Union that provides the means to permit this situation to develop," Haig said. "It is a situation in which the time has long since passed where the free world, and the United States as a leader of the free world, must stand up and be heard on this issue.'

Haig said an improvement in U.S.-Soviet dialogue "can only follow some reigning in, some restraint if you will, of what has been six years of unacceptable Soviet international behavior."

He said that "Soviet proxy interventionism" is one of the topics he will discuss late next month with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko at the U.N. General Assembly.

"I don't anticipate we're going to have any wowing breakthroughs in a meeting of this kind," he said.

Swedish police storm embassy

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Riot police stormed the Iranian Embassy today to end its occupation by 30 Iranian students who were holding the ambassador and his wife hostage to protest "fascist executions" in Iran, authorities said.

"No one was hurt," said police spokesman Lennart Lindgren. "The students gave up without a struggle but they had caused considerable damage to embassy facilities."

He said "some 30 students" were arrested after the police — helmeted, armed and accompanied by police dogs — took back control of the embassy. The charges were not immediately disclosed.

A spokesman for the students earlier had phoned The Associated Press from the occupied embassy and said, "We want to protest against the fascist executions that have been going on in Iran the last weeks."

Iran's Islamic fundamentalist regime has executed hundreds of government foes in recent weeks in a crackdown on leftists and other supporters of ousted President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

Police said the students stormed into the embassy and residence at Lidingo, an island suburb of Stockholm, at about 9 a.m. — 2 a.m. EDT — taking Ambassador Abdol Rahim Gavahi and his wife hostage.

The students' spokesman said the group represented Peykar and Fedayeen, two Iranian Marxist-Leninist groups opposed to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime.

"We are 30 unarmed students," the spokesman said. "The ambassador and his wife are in another room. We told them not to leave and they did not protest."

A spokeswoman for the students later called The Associated Press to read a communique which included the following four demands:

— Freedom for all political prisoners in Iran.

— An immediate halt to all executions.

— A Swedish government protest against the Iranian regime.

— Dispatch of an international judicial delegation to Iran to investigate prison conditions and alleged torture of prisoners.

The students said they planned to hold a news conference later today to "tell about conditions in Iran," but they gave no indication of any other plans.

Police said after storming the embassy that the students would be allowed to hold a news conference later in the day but did not specify the time.

A recent occupation of the Iranian Embassy in Oslo, Norway, by Iranian leftist students from Sweden ended peacefully after the students held a news conference.

That group called on Norway to support their struggle against the Tehran regime, and then surrendered to police which sent them back to Sweden. No legal action was taken against them.

Studying the scene

Police detectives and funeral home employees study the scene of a shooting death early today at Ulmer Park, 2800 W. Kentucky Ave. Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry has ordered an autopsy on the body of 21-year-old Roy Ellis Cruse. Cruse, who lived at 200 S. Norman St., suffered a gunshot to the head. A .25-caliber auotmatic pistol lay near the body, which was discovered by a citizen about 7 a.m. today. Cruse's body was taken to Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

For the Polish, it's a life filled with long lines

By DUSKO DODER
The Washington Post

WARSAW — Long lines that are formed every morning for almost everything Poles need in everyday life create a world that seems to belong to photographs of Europe after World War II.

For six months now Poles have had to wait in lines, armed with ration cards that entitle a citizen to monthly rations of two pounds of flour, one pound of cereal, five pounds of meat products, three-quarters of a pound of rice and so on.

But rationing, which the government introduced to combat food shortages, has become a somewhat theoretical matter. It does not mean one can count on using the coupons, and the monthly card expires on the tenth of the next month.

Things have gotten worse in the past four weeks and the country now seems to be following the rule: "Buy whatever is available even if you don't need it. You can later exchange it for something else."

Rumors of a currency devaluation have fueled such buying, produced a run on savings accounts and made people buy everything — even tea — as an investment. According to a study made by Warsaw's Academy of Economics, the shops should be empty by October, when the crisis should hit rock bottom.

After the relative scarcities of Moscow, one is stunned by the harsh privations of Warsaw. Moscow shops offer sufficient quantities of bread, fish, rice, milk, butter, coffee, canned goods and so on, but Warsaw food shops seem to be drowning in huge quantities of tea and little else.

Lots and lots of tea from China, Turkey, India and other places is everywhere. Stacked neatly, these differently colored tea cans and packages from a distance create an illusion that there is more to be had.

While Moscow still has restaurants with caviar, vodka and at least a few hot dishes, finding a place for a business meal in Warsaw these days is a nightmare. Last week food scarcities hit the elite Forum Intercontinental Hotel, which is patronized mainly by foreigners.

"There is no food," Forum's maitre d'hotel explained sheepishly. "Only for hotel guests and no one else."

A Polish colleague and I went to several other restaurants. "Niema," there isn't any, was the answer. Finally we stumbled upon Shanghai, the city's sole Chinese restaurant.

"Now," the waitress began, somewhat embarrassed to explain the menu. "There isn't any meat or fish but we are using sausage instead. It's good, very good." So we had sweet and sour Polish sausage and Polish sausage Szechuan style.

In the lopsided logic of food scarcities, Hanna Rulewska has come to like food lines. On her way to work, the sight of lines along Marszalkowska Street makes her feel optimistic.

Someone suggested loudly that a way to improve the Polish economy is to drill two holes in 1-zloty coins and sell them as buttons. There was disagreement whether such buttons should cost 2 or 4 zlotys.

"The trouble is when there are no lines, because that means there's nothing in the shops," she explained.

By afternoon, lines are gone, as is food from the shops. So working women — and they constitute over 50 percent of Poland's labor force — are allowed to take a couple of hours off in the morning to shop. What this does to labor productivity is another matter. Occasionally entire offices are suddenly emptied when word reaches someone about the appearance of meat in the neighborhood.

One day last week, Ms. Rulewska began her routine shopping tour with a call on the only store where she is entitled to buy sugar. Niema.

"Not a tragedy," Ms. Rulewska said, "I have some sugar stored inside my piano."

After seven city blocks of brisk walking she strolled through a meat shop, making a despairing wave toward some sickly looking sausage on sale. Then on to a private market five blocks away. There was no meat there either, but Ms. Rulewska was cheered by a long line for feta cheese. It was sold out before she reached the head of the line.

"I haven't seen cheese in three months," she said.

At a vegetable stand — and here the line was shorter — Ms. Rulewska bought four small chili peppers at 70 cents apiece. Fruits and vegetables at the private market were of better quality, but cost roughly double the price charged in state shops. A pound of apples was $1. Meat, when available, is much more expensive than in state shops. A pound of pork costs $7.

For a resident of Moscow, even these prices seemed reasonable, since a pound of apples, say, at the private Soviet market runs about $4. The average wage in Poland and the Soviet Union is said to be roughly the same, just under $200 a month.

(In the United States a pound of apples costs between 59 and 89 cents depending on the place and the season.)

Ms. Rulewska's 2½-hour shopping tour was crowned with success when she came to a store selling chicken, Krakow sausage and bread.

"Bread has not been on sale for a week, although it is not rationed." she said.

It seems in the nature of a crisis such as this that there should occur moments of madcap comedy. While we were waiting in the line for chickens and sausage, a stentorian voice from somewhere behind us suggested loudly that a way to improve the Polish economy is to drill two holes in 1-zloty coins and sell them as buttons. Everybody smiles. There was disagreement whether such buttons should cost 2 or 4 zlotys.

Another controller arrives; Passenger load still 'scanty'

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

The Midland Regional Airport control tower received another employee today from Plainview and, although the flights may be running fairly close to schedule, airline managers are reporting that the passenger load is scanty and unpredictable.

Bill Hill, control tower supervisor, confirmed that another air traffic controller joined the tower's workforce today, bringing the total to 14.

Only four short of the original crew prior to the Professional Air Traffic Controllers' strike on Aug. 3, Hill said the contingency plan for rebuilding is going smoothly with air traffic experiencing very few delays.

However, the airlines are experiencing highs and lows with the passenger loads.

While Jim Weeks of Southwest Airlines reported passenger loads are just about back to normal, A. Jack McAdams of American Airlines said the loads are usually less than prior to the PATCO strike.

"Passengers are getting to their destinations," Weeks said. "It doesn't feel like there's a strike anymore."

"Our passenger loads are kind of off and on with some days heavy and others light," McAdams said.

He added that it has been difficult to predict, but "bit by bit, they (the public) are finding out that they have to travel and can no longer put it off and are coming back.

"Each succeeding week the public's confindence is returning," McAdams said.

Most of the airlines are reporting an increase in "no-shows." George

Polish mill manager fighting union's attempt to oust him

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The manager of Poland's largest steel mill, bucking an attempt by the independent labor federation Solidarity to oust him, has demanded the government crush the move against him in a bid to "rebuild strong state authority."

"It is high time the institutions that deal in observance of the law start executing the law," said Stanislaw Bednarczyk, manager of the Katowice steel plant in southern Poland.

"To build a strong state authority is a necessary condition for overcoming the current economic difficulties," the official PAP news agency said Bednarczyk told a meeting of Poland's top 70 industrial managers.

Solidarity, claiming to represent 17,500 of the 20,000 workers at the Katowice plant, has called for a referendum on Bednarczyk's ouster to protest his backing of local prosecutor's shutdown of Free Unionist, the steelworkers' union bulletin, for printing allegedly anti-Soviet cartoons.

The government has said the referendum would be intolerable. But Jacek Ciellicki, a Solidarity spokesman at the plant, said union officials are to meet Tuesday with crew foremen to plan the vote.

"They will not be able to block it," said Solidarity spokesman Janusz Oyszkiewicz. "The only question is what will happen if they vote to throw the director out."

Bednarczyk picked up support Sunday from Poland's government-run unions, which accused Solidarity of "provocations" and "sowing discord" at the steel plant.

Midland weather to stabilize

The thermometer should stabilize for Midlanders with no important temperature changes throughout the Permian Basin according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

A high in the mid-90s is expected for the next couple of days with the overnight lows slipping to the low 60s.

The comfortable 94-degree reading Sunday did not threaten the 106 record set in 1977, and the overnight low of 57 set in 1966 is within range of the low 60s for tonight.

Winds should be light, traveling south to southeast at 5-10 mph tonight and are expected to pick up Tuesday moving southerly at 10-15 mph.

No rainfall is forecast for the near future. The yearly total has reached 10.34 inches.

Scott of Continental Airlines said these are people who make reservations and fail to show up for the scheduled flight.

"We're averaging about 30 percent of no-shows," Scott said. On the other hand, he added that the loads are "holding up fairly well."

Braniff Airlines also is experiencing a 25-30 percent rate on no-shows according to William Thurmon, airline's manager, but he reported that Braniff's passenger loads are "fairly good" because only two flights are scheduled as opposed to the original four.

Many of Southwest Airlines' night flight passengers travel stand-by, expecting no-shows, according to Weeks.

"We're back to the pre-strike levels on no-shows," he said.

And Texas International, which canceled its one daily flight at the beginning of the strike, has resumed a regular schedule. A spokesperson for the airlines reported that passenger loads are up.

Officials investigate stabbing

ODESSA — Ector County sheriff's deputies are investigating the weekend stabbing death of a young Odessa woman whose body found on an oil lease 15 miles northwest of here Sunday afternoon.

A sheriff's spokesman this morning said 18-year-old Carmen Croan had been stabbed numerous times but would not divulge details of the case. Justice of the Peace Jimmy Harris pronounced her dead at the scene. It's estimated she had been dead about 24 hours when her body was discovered on the Cowden Lease near FM roads 1936 and 158 about 1:30 p.m. Sunday.

The woman was unemployed and lived with her parents, according to the spokesman. Her body was taken to the Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home, where services are pending.

$900 taken from residence

In complaints to city police over the weekend, Solomon Bunton of 1608 N. Edwards St. told officers a bag containing $900 in assorted bills was taken from his residence sometime Sunday.

Carmela Hamilton, 2404 Bellechase, said a kitchen range valued at $800 was stolen from her residence Friday afternoon.

Donna Breeding of 2003 Douglas St. reported a burglary in which assorted currency, a tape recorder and four 8-track tapes were taken.

And Dallas trucker Wendall Agnew told police he was asleep in his rig at Lee Street and Industrial Avenue early Saturday morning when someone entered the locked vehicle and stole $160 in cash from the sleeper compartment. Also taken was a $1,600 check made out to the Mayflower Moving Co.

Postal unions predict OK of contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — Union leaders representing a half-million postal workers predict that votes being counted today will ratify a new three-year contract with the government.

Th result is expected to be announced Tuesday.

While a vote for ratification would mean three years of labor peace on the Postal Service, rejection by members of the American Postal Workers Union and the National Association of Letter Carriers could lead to new negotiations, binding arbitration or even a mail strike.

"I think most of the votes are going to be in favor of ratification," said Dan Driscoll, spokesman for the 300,000-member postal workers union.

However, APWU local leaders representing about 100,00 members in nine Northeastern states recommended rejection of the tenative agreement reached July 22 after all-night bargaining and threats of a strike.

'We are just not happy with it," said Jerry Monzillo, leader of the dissident local leaders. "We don't want a strike, but we want them to go back to the bargaining table."

The Postal Service, however, is unlikely to agree to more negotiations.

Federal law makes a postal strike illegal and requires binding arbitration if no settlement can be negotiated.

The unions went to arbitration three years ago after a tentative agreement was voted down, but the APWU has passed a resolution ruling out arbitration this time.

The tentative agreeent would give the average postal worker a pay increase of $2,100 over three years, plus unlimited cost-of-iving increases. According to the Postal Service, the average postal woker now earn $23,-300 a year — $19,915 in base pay and the rest in fringe benefits.

The contract also would give the workers a one-time, 150 bonus upon ratification. The Reagan administration has taken a hard line in bargaining with federal employees. When air traffic controllers voted down a tentative agreement, leaders called a strike Aug. 3 and President Reagan fired about 12,000 of them.

Driscoll said he doubted the controllers' situation would have much effect on the mail vote.

"There are two schools of thought," he said. "One is that our people will be reluctant to vote against because of the way the air controllers have been bounced around. The second is that they may vote to reject because they are angry about the government's hard-handed tactics.

Carters on way to China visit

TOKYO (AP) — Jimmy Carter, heading for his first visit to China, arrived here today aboard a chartered jet for a brief stopover, airport officials said.

The officials said Carter was met at Tokyo's Narita Airport by Mike Mansfield, the U.S. ambassador to Japan.

Before leaving the United States, Carter said he planned to spend his first visit to China "learning about the nation and seeing what we can do" to strengthen diplomatic ties established during his presidency.

"I was proud to have normalized relations with that country," Carter said during a short stopover Sunday at a private airfield north of San Francisco International Airport.

Carter, relaxed after a family vacation in Yellowstone Natioal Park, departed for Peking accompanied by his wife Rosalynn and several aides.

The former president's visit is expected to be handled delicately by Chinese officials wary of the current administration.

The Chinese have criticized President Reagan's pledge to uphold the U.S.-Taiwan Relations Act, which provides, among other things, for sales of defensive arms to Taiwan.

But with U.S.-China trade growing, the Chinese still hope to dissuade Reagan from doing anything to upset what both countries see as an important strategic relationship.

Carter went on national television in December 978 to announce the establishment of diplomatic relations with China after 30 years of U.S. refusal to recognize the communist government.

In January 1979, he was host to Deng Xiaoping, the Chinese Communist Party vice chairman recognized as China's top leader.

During the 1980 presidential campaign, China's government controlled press strongly criticized Reagan for statements perceived as indicating plans to restore official relations with the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan.

However, government officials declared neutrality in the campaign. After Carter lost, Chinese press commentaries suggested he had not been tough enough in dealing with the Soviet Union.

China has appreciated Reagan's hard line toward Moscow, but warned that this will not excuse him from living up to commitments to keep Taiwan ties strictly unofficial.

Carter's talk with Chinese officials are to begin Tuesday, followed by a grand welcome banquet in the Great Hall of the People that night. Premier Zhao Ziyang is to be host. On Thursday night, Carter will throw a banquet for his hosts, also in the Great Hall.

Reagan launches battle over foreign policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, launching his first major foreign policy battle in Congress, is ready to end months of delay with official notification of his plan to sell sophiticated radar planes to Saudi Arabia. "We intend to win," Secretary of State Alexander Haig says.

Under the administration timetable to be sent to Capitol Hill today, the Congress that left on vacation after giving Reagan his budget and tax cuts will return next month to deal with his request to sell the Saudis five Airborne Warning and Control System — AWACS planes.

Today's notification was a procedural matter.

The countdown for congressional action won't begin until Sept. 9. On that day, a 20-day informal notification period begins, followed by a 30-day review.

Israel is adamantly opposed to the deal, and a majority of both houses of Congress has expressed opposition to it. The administration first decided to go ahead with the sale last spring but has delaying sending it to Congress in an effort to build support. To defeat the deal would require a majority vote of both the House and the Senate.

"We intend to proceed and we intend to win," Haig said Sunday on ABC's "Issues and Answers." He said the sale would mean a "fundamental improvement in the United States' strategic position in the Middle East."

The AWACS planes are capable of monitoring the movements of hundreds of aircraft and are capable of directing friendly aircraft in warfare against enemy planes.

Israel contends the modified Boeing 707s would enable the Saudis to monitor its aeriel moves and limit the possibility of a surprise Israeli attack in a future Mideast crisis.

"We know the facts and we are convinced that the AWCS, in the hands of the Saudis, will be dangerous in the end to Israel," Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzak Shamir said Sunday.

The decision to go ahead with notification today, instead of Sept. 9, was described by the State Department as a courtesy to the Congress.

However, Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin opens two days of talks with Reagan on Sept. 9, and informed sources said notifying Congress on that day could have been interpreted by the Israelis as a calculated insult.

As it is, the AWACS issue is expected to be one of the dominant topics Begin will take up with Reagan and Haig in the September meetings.

On Sunday, Haig appeared to rule out speculation that the Israelis would be offered security guarantees in return for a lessening of their opposition to the sale.

"I think it would be wrong to suggest that we are indulging in rewards or payoffs for Israeli acquiescence in a decison which stands on its own merits," Haig aid.

"It is going to be an enhancement of our ability to control events, and it is going to be a profound improvement to our allies' ability to preserve and protect the vital oil resources of that region," he said.

Saudi Arabia is the world's largest oil producer and is the major supplier of foreign oil of the United States.

In late June, 224 repesentatives co-sponsored a resolution to veto the deal and 54 senators signed a letter urging Reagan to drop it.

But administration officials, who asked not to be identified, said their position has improved since then. They cite the Saudi role a month ago in persuading the Palestine Liberation Organization to agree to the ceasefire that ended two weeks of PLO-Israeli hostilities across the Lbanese border.

There has been speculation that the United Staes might attempt to control the Saudis' use of the AWACS to prevent that country from using the aircraft against Israel.

But on Sunday, the New York Times reported that American officials said the United States would have no explicit or legal control over their use.

Texas to deposit checks to workers electronically

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Payday won't be the same for a lot of state employees beginning Sept. 1.

Instead of waiting in long lines before a bank teller or a drive-in window to deposit pay checks, their wages will be electronically deposited in their accounts by the state comptroller.

And if the employee wants to be sure the money is there, he can call a special number at his bank for confirmation.

Anyone unfortunate to be caught in downtown Austin on a monthly state payday will remember it. Cars are lined up, two abreast, for several blocks, waiting to go into the drive-in entrances of every bank in town. It's not unusual for some motorists to run out of gas while waiting.

Inside the banks there are long lines before each teller.

Electronic deposits for state employees were aproved by the 1981 Legislature. If employees agree and sign a limited power of attorney, the comptroller can use computerized tape to make direct deposit of paychecks and travel expense reimbursements. The tape also can be used to deposit benefit checks for retired state employees and public school teachers.

Currently, each month the comptroller writes about 70,000 payroll checks and sends retirement checks to 72,000 retired teachers and 17,000 retired state employees.

John Keel, who made a special study of direct deposits for the cmptroller, says a survey shows that about 20 percent of state employees will take advantage of the system initially — and participation is expected to grow to 40 percent in six months.

"The most significant benefit will be related to the gaining in employee productvity associated with time savings," Keel said.

"Assuming that 30,000 state employees participate, as much as 360,-000 hours of lost time could be saved each year with an associated reduction in cost to the state of $3 million a year." The reduction in writing warrants or state checks would save about $18,000 a year in paper and printing time.

Actually, the direct deposit system is only a small part of the system first proposed by the comptroller. Under the original plan, the electronic system would allow direct payments to bank acounts for commercial vendors, construction contractor, cities, counties and school districts.

However, protests from the 17 big banks that handle state warrants caused changes in the proposal. The banks claimed the electronic system would take away a considerable amount of interest money they were making in handling state funds, particularly during weekends.

Whether the direct deposit system is ever expanded beyond state employee paychecks depends on future legislators, and the way Texas bankers react to the new system.

Still another new system for paying state employees will go into effect Sept. 1, or soon afterwards.

A bill carried by Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, would allow employees of the state's four largest agencies who make $12,000 or less a year to say if the want to be paid monthly or every two weeks.

"A lot of the reason for the big turnover we have in lower-paid employees now is that they cannot wait a whole month to get paid," Mrs. Delco said. 'As a result, they will leave the state and go to a job that pays the same amount of money, but gives them a paycheck every two weeks or weekly. They like that better."

Austin will be most affected because about 27 percent of all state employees live in the capital city, she said.

The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, Department of Human Resources and Department of Health are taking surveys now.

Trial draws cult victims

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — It's been three years since he mass murder-suicide at the Peoples Temple, and now those who lost loved ones are flocking to the murder-conspiracy trial of Larry Layton hoping to find out why the tragedy occurred.

Perhaps, for some, the graphic retelling of the death of Rep. Leo Ryan, which preceeded the murder-suicide of Jim Jones and 912 followers will help them understand events that drew friends and relatives away from the United States to the South American jungle.

For others, like Jynona Norwood, Layton's trial in federal court is a chance to feel that some justice is being done.

Her mother, Fairy, and 26 other relatives followed Jones in the grotesque death rite in November 1978.

The trial of Layton, 35, was scheduled to resume today after a weekend recess.

A four-count indictment charges Layton with conspiracy to murder California congressman Leo Ryan and conspiracy in the attempted murder of Richard Dwyer, then deputy chief of the U.S. Mission in Guyana. Dwyer was injured in an airport ambush that left Ryan, three journalists and a cult defector dead.

Ryan was visiting Guyana to investigate claims that members were being brainwashed and prevented from leaving.

Hours after the ambush at the Port Kaituma airstrip outside of Jonestown most of Ms. Norwood's family took a poisoned drink.

"Somebody should pay for that," Ms. Norwood said in a break during the first days of testimony last week. But she wasn't sure if Layton should bear the burden.

'I feel sorry for him. At first I felt angry. You can see he's scared, and he seems to be a gentle person. But this is something he's going to have to live with for the rest of his life," she said.

Ms. Nowood's uncle, Fred Lewis, who regularly visits family graves in Oakland, said he sits in the courtroom to seek the truth. "I think it's possible to find," said Lewis, a soft-spoken supermarket butcher.

Williams has no plans to resign

WASHINGON (AP) — Sen. Harrison A. Williams says that although he made "foolish, meaningless mistakes," he has no intention of resigning from the U.S. Senate becuse of his Abscam conviction.

The New Jersey Democrat made the statement as he said that he was told by reliable sources that the special counsel to the Senate Select Committee on Ethics would recommend his expulsion.

The committee's three Republicans and three Democrats were scheduled to meet today to consider the report of Washington attorney Robert S. Bennett, who conducted the panel's inquiry into Williams' conduct.

Sources close to the inquiry said that Williams, a 22-year Senate veteran, was correct in saying Bennett would recommend he become the first senator expelled since 1862.

Under committee rules, four votes are needed to send a disciplinary resolution to the floor.

Cubans claim 13 exiles die

MIAMI (AP) — A band of Cuban exiles is waiting on a remote island to rejoin the fight against communism as officials argue whether the Cubans' boat broke up or was bombed — and whether any of the "freedom fighters" are missing.

Wilfredo Navarro, head of the anti-Castro group Cubans United, claimed Sunday that 13 men are missing and presumed dead followig a mysterious weekend explosion in the Turk and Caicos Islands that blew the group's shrimp boat "into tiny, foot-long pieces."

But police on Providenciales Island said that 67 men from the 71-foot Franklin and Ian are safe— many of them sleeping on the ground around the police station.

Police said an island fisherman rescued the last 10 aboard the shrimper Friday just as waves broke apart the vessel, which was grounded on a sandbar.

Navarro, leader of the group that has plotted for weeks to establish a "free" Cuban government at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, disagreed that the vessel merely broke apart.

"The fact is there was an explosion, the men have disappeared and you can find pieces of a boat, which was flying an American flag, all over the place," Navarro said.

He said the group's military adviser, Watergate burglar Frank Sturgis, was on the island two miles from where the Franklin and Ian had been aground since Tuesday when he heard an explosion. "Everyone on the island heard the explosion," Navarro said.

Officials suspect spy in robberies

SEATTLE (AP) — FBI agents have found evidence that captured spy Christopher Boyce had disguses, fueling suspicion that he might have committed bank robberies while a fugitive, sources say.

Boyce, captured in a Port Angeles, Wash. resturant after eluding athorities for 19 months, was to appear today before a U.S. magistrate before being returned to California.

FBI spokesman Roger Young in Washington, D.C. said agents with a warrant searched Boyce's efficiency apartment in Port Angeles on Sunday. They searched his automobile the day before, he said.

Young declined to say what was found, but the federal law enforcement sources — who asked not to be identified — said there was evidence of the use of disguises.

The sources said the evidence added weight to suspicion Boyce, 28, may have supported himself after fleeing Lompoc Correctional Institution in California Jan. 21, 1980 by committing crimes.

"There are at least 16 unsolved bank robberies in the state of Washington," Young said. "We are not saying Boyce did them, but we're studying the bank security films and other evidence to see if there could be any linkup."

The sources said robberies in Montana and Idaho also are being checked for involvement by Boyce, who was serving a 40-year sentence for selling satellite secrets to the Soviets.

Meanwhile, some people in Port Angeles, on the north side of the Olympic Peninsula, said they couldn't believe their friend was a spy.

"I was so shook up last night I got drunk, but it didn't do any good," said Maggie Johnson, 62. "I have a horrible feeling in the pit of my stomach."

Boyce worked with her husband, Gordon Johnson, as a fisherman at La Push, a Quillayute Indian Reservation village on the coast of the remote and rugged peninsula.

Kaye Sullivan, who heads an anti-domestic voilence program in the logging town of Forks, said Boyce has values "out of the 1960s"and shared her concern about political violence around the world.

When he learned Boyce, who she knew as Anthony Lester, was a spy, Mrs. Sullivan still insisted he "was not anti-American. He cared about this country. I don't think he was against the government."

Boyce may have hoped to further his escape by air. He took flying lessons at Pearson Aicraft in Port Angeles and soloed a week ago, said Valerie Stenberg, the flying service's office manager.

After his capture Friday, Boyce reportedly told federal agents, "I would have had my (private pilot's) license in five days and then I would have gone"

Father and son arrested

ST. PAUL, Minn.(AP) — A father and son who allegedly offered to avenge the 16-year-old slaying of a young girl have been arrested after accepting a phony payment for the job, police said.

Ramsey County sheriffs arrested the pair Saturday at a suburban restaurant as they met the victim's brother and sister and collected a $500 down payment on the $1,500 contract, thy said.

The meeting was arranged by police after the family contacted them about the offer. Investigator William Thompson said the two men proposed to avenge th death of Barbara Iveron, who was slain in 1965.

Dennis Linehan, who confessed he kidnapped and strangled the 14-year-old girl, pleaded guilty only to kidnapping. He was sentenced to 40 years in Stillwater Prison.

Clarity, at last!

When American pilots conducting maneuvers last week above the Gulf of Sidra shot down two Libyan fighter planes that had fired on them, they were merely expressing a change of attitude in America that extends to the inner reaches of the Reagan administration.

What that change translates into, Reagan said late last week, is that the United States is not going to be taking what the world has spent the last few years dishing out. When American pilots are fired on, they're going to shoot back.

It came as no surprise, really, that the skies above the Mediterranean Sea were the location and the renegade government of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy was the principal culprit in Mr. Reagan's first international test of courage. Khadafy has such a reputation. But Reagan, and the involved American pilots, performed admirably and, for the most part at least, rallied the free nations of the world.

Mr. Reagan said he wants to show the world that "America has the muscle to back up its words." That is probably the most important challenge facing the president — renewing some of the flagging respect for the United States among the nations of the world and asserting the American committment, including the use of force if and when necessary.

The American will has been tested time and again under a number of presidents; the responses to these tests have varied, but usually have lacked the crystal clarity of the Reagan response to the Libyan incident. That response, translated loosely, is that the United States will not knuckle-under to the demands of terrorists, such as Khadafy, and it will respond to force with force.

That clarity has been lacking from the United States all too long. It's important the distinction between President Reagan and his predecessors has now been made. The nations of the world should have a pretty good idea of just how far Mr. Reagan can — and can't — be pushed.

Perils of peace-making

The Reagan administration's lifting of the embargo of jet fighter shipments to Israel did not please the Arabs any more than imposition of the ban pleased the Israelis 10 weeks ago. Washington did its diplomatic best to spread the displeasure around equally while at the same time strengthening ties with both sides.

Tightrope-walking is nothing new to those concerned with maintaining stability in the Middle East. Every time the United States is asked to give economic or military aid to Israel, or to Saudi Arabia, or to Egypt, the administration has to wrestle with two questions:

How does America maintain its long-standing friendship with and support of Israel without alienating the Arabs? How do we show sympathy for, or at least a degree of understanding of, problems of Araby without discomfiting the Israelis?

These are questions that give American presidents gray hairs. President Carter first learned this as he mediated differences between President Sadat and Prime Minister Begin. As history will show, he walked that tight rope with great skill.

President Reagan is off to his own auspicious start. He could not let Israel's attacks on Iraq and Beirut go unnoticed, as Secretary of State Haig was careful to point out in his embargo-lifting statement. As Mr. Haig was equally careful to point out, the cease-fire deserved a conciliatory response, as did the state department's satisfactory talks with Israel about the motives of its bombings.

Aware of the political perils, the Reagan administration sought to serve the cause of peace, and did so with conspicuous respect for the obvious conflicts of interest between Arabs and Israelis.

AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLERS CONTROLLER

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Rickover charged with reckless seamanship

WASHINGTON — Adm. Hyman Rickover is the father of the nuclear Navy. He fought long, hard and successfully to drag his beribboned Pentagon colleagues into the nuclear age. Now, it is alleged, he almost sank a nuclear sub during a test run.

Jack Anderson

Rickover is an acerbic man who doesn't suffer fools gladly. He knows how to cultivate the media and how to use his political clout in Congress. In the process, he has made a lot of enemies, both inside and outside the Pentagon.

Now the sharks are circling the crusty old admiral once again. At 81, he is long past retirement age, but he is "reactivated" every two years by special nomination of the president and approval from Congress. His current two-year hitch ends next January, and pressure is building to get him beached permamently this time around.

The latest ammunition provided to critics of the old seadog has come from one of the nation's biggest defense contractors, General Dynamics Corp., whose Electric Boat Division manufactures our nuclear submarines. Rickover has never been shy about criticizing contractors who don't meet his exacting standards.

In a private letter to Adm. Thomas Hayward, chief of naval operations, Electric Boat's general manager, P.T. Veliotis has now accused Rickover of reckless seamanship while at the controls of the new nuclear sub La Jolla last month.

Every submarine delivered to the Navy is given a personal test run by Rickover. A routine part of each shakedown cruise is a maneuver called the "crashback" — a means of braking the sub quickly by throwing the engine into reverse.

Once the sub is stopped dead in the water, the "crashback" exercise is over — or at least it should be. But according to Veliotis, Rickover left the engine in reverse too long. For a full three minutes, the La Jolla went backwards at 11.6 knots, plunging down at a 40-degree angle. It sank 240 feet before Rickover finally took it out of reverse.

"At the time of the incident," Veliotis wrote, "the ship's basic safety system had not been tested under at-sea conditions and a large percentage of the crew had not had experience in operating a submarine at sea. Given these circumstances, a relatively minor personnel error under what can only be described as a highly stressful situation could have resulted in disastrous consequences."

Despite an untested safety system and a green crew, there were no disastrous consequences. But a source at General Dynamics told my associate John Dillon, "This is not the first time a sub has gone out of control during this maneuver" with Rickover at the helm.

A big part of the problem, apparently, is that no junior officer is going to challenge the fearsome Rickover. Last January, Rickover's seatrial coordinator gathered ship's officers together and explicitly authorized them to countermand the admiral if the sub was going out of control.

"He very clearly advised the skipper and the executive officer if they had any concern relative to safety ... that they should feel no hesitation in giving an order prior to or countermanding Rickover's," an internal Electric Boat memo states.

But overruling Rickover is easier advised than done. One Navy officer told a company official that "nobody can control Rickover," according to the memo. By the time someone did summon enough courage to countermand the old admiral, "the time available for recovery may be insufficient," the memo states.

Fear of Rickover's wrath apparently extends to the upper echelons of the Navy as well. Adm. Hayward's response to Electric Boat's complaint said only that the Navy is "taking steps to insure improved communications in future sea trials whereby ship's speed will be more closely monitored."

That hardly addressed the company's complaint.

DANGEROUS DEMONSTRATION: The air traffic controllers have complained for years that their reports of unsafe conditions have fallen on deaf ears at the Federal Aviation Administration. Here's an example that shows FAA officials themselves added unnecessarily to the controllers' burdens.

Last January 16, over protests from controllers on duty at the busy Washington Control Center in Leesburg, Va., supervisors insisted on demonstrating a new backup radar system to a few visiting officials.

The new system, called "Direct Access Radar Channel," or DARC, was in the testing stage — and still is. According to the controllers, DARC has a crucial flaw: When two planes overlap on the radar screen, important information on speed and altitude of the aircraft is lost. The Leesburg controllers on duty pointed out the risks involved in switching to the DARC system on a Friday evening with moderately heavy traffic.

But the FAA officials insisted on their demonstration for the VIPs. One controller told my reporter Donald Goldberg that because of DARC's inadequacies, he momentarily "lost" all of the five planes he was trying to direct to safe landings.

But when the controller turned in a report on the episode, all he got for his pains was a reprimand.

Footnote: FAA officials say the DARC system has been improved since then.

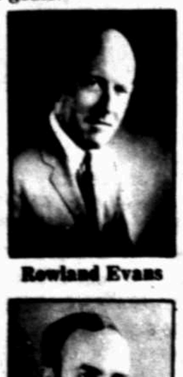
INSIDE REPORT:

Shaken faith in supply-side theory brings defense cut plan

WASHINGTON — As Washington's August doldrums began, budget director David Stockman crossed the Potomac to tell Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger that future military spending must be cut deeply — a shocker forcing a policy crisis for Ronald Reagan that threatens his principles and his goals.



Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Stockman's visit to the Pentagon signalled political retreat on substantial short-term reductions in Social Security costs. But his desperate search for other ways to cut the budget connotes a more basic abandonment: loss of faith that President Reagan's tax cuts can generate additional revenue, as prescribed by the Laffer Curve.

Indeed, Stockman is bracing himself for $70 billion budget deficits, not much smaller than those projected by his Democratic critics. They are predicated on continued double-digit interest rates that escalate debt service. So, Stockman may be tempted by the lure of enormous budgetary savings to seek lowered interest rates by a radical route: the gold standard.

Slumbering here is a witch's brew of seemingly unconnected problem issues: defense, Social Security, budget deficits, interest rates and, most important, overall economic policy. Splitting wood on his California mountaintop in the glow of his tax triumph, Reagan has yet to signal his interest in it all. But serious policy decisions await him and senior aides when they return to Washington in September.

Stockman is the principal brewmaster. No member of the Reagan team has been more steadfast in pursuing a radical economic policy, including tax rate reduction. But the bookkeeper's mentality pervading the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) is taking over. Abandoning supply-side faith, he has accepted Keynesian dogma that the Laffer Curve — higher revenues from lower tax rates — will not work in an inflationary climate.

It was those inexorable budget deficits that caused Stockman's premature advocacy of Social Security reform that probably cost the Republicans a congressional seat in Mississippi and have given the Democrats their only political leverage this year. Stockman has come to the reluctant conclusion that the administration cannot embark on any short-term Social Security scheme ambitious enough to remedy the budget plight.

That isolates the huge Pentagon budget as Stockman's obvious target. The defense community for weeks has expected the OMB director to drop the shoe, and he obliged in his Aug. 7 meeting with Weinberger. Stockman argued, ingeniously, that the "get well" boost in real defense spending this year was 19 percent, meaning that future spending boosts are 9.4 percent a year above the anemic Carter years, not the 7 percent Reagan target.

Consequently, Stockman proposed a $100 billion defense cut between now and fiscal year 1984, which would devastate Pentagon plans for modernization of non-nuclear forces. A listless Weinberger made no response, but he is expected to resist strenuously.

So also may Ronald Reagan, who has not concealed vastly greater affection for defense than Social Security. On the 1980 campaign stump, Reagan specifically gave defense a clear priority over budget balancing. But condoning the $70 billion deficit raised by Stockman is another matter.

A few insightful Reagan administration officials are desperately seeking an exit from this trap marked "lower interest rates." Defenders say the Laffer Curve surely will work if only interest rates would fall quickly enough and low enough to let reduced tax rates do their job. In any event, a 9 percent interest rate today would save $30 billion a year in the future — enough by itself to finesse the defense cuts.

But Reagan policy today is so rigidly focused on regulating the money supply that the Treasury does not even hope for 9 percent interest rates but, on the contrary, offers 30-year bonds likely to yield 15 percent. The same policymakers, headed by Treasury Under Secretary Beryl Sprinkel, abhor the thought of seeking a quick drop in both inflation and interest rates by making dollars convertible to gold at a fixed rate.

The Reagan administration is filled with closet gold bugs (including Stockman). Whether the administration seeks to reopen the gold window, closed 10 years ago on Aug. 15 by Richard M. Nixon and John B. Connally, depends on Ronald Reagan.

Earlier this summer, Professor Arthur Laffer stressed the urgency of gold at a regular meeting between the president and economic wisemen outside his administration. All forcefully rebutted Laffer, but Reagan himself commented that he knew of no government able to maintain a stable currency without tying it to a commodity standard — presumably gold.

"Art," ex-Treasury secretary George Shultz told Laffer, "if you're only going to have one man agree with you, you've got the right one." What remains to be seen is whether the president connects his own inclinations about gold to Dave Stockman's assault on the Pentagon.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

That was quite a scene when Jimmy Carter greeted Anwar Sadat on the old softball field down in Georgia. Sadat has come a long way — from the ancient tombs of Egypt to second base at Plains.

●

Carter gave Sadat the key to the city — which is really a beer opener.

●

Do you realize that during Sadat's evening prayers, when he bowed to the east, he was really facing Mecca?

●

Anwar really enjoyed himself and when he left, he was in high spirits — and Bibb overalls.

●

At one point, Sadat said to Carter, "Those people over there in the sheets, are they Bedouin tribesmen?" Carter said, "No, they're Klan rednecks."

CHARLEY REESE

U.S. allies not pulling their weight

When President Reagan turns his attention to foreign policy, he should consider taking a hard look at allies who aren't allies and at treaties which have long outlived their usefulness.

Charley Reese

Western Europe and Japan are taking the American people for a ride. They claim to be our allies. What that means is that we spend the money to provide for their defense. In the meantime, they go their own merry way in foreign policy matters and beat the socks off us in economic matters.

In Vietnam, the Europeans and the Japanese didn't help us one bit. In fact, they criticized us. The Europeans and Japanese almost never observe the trade embargoes we impose. While we spend billions for American soldiers in Europe, presumably to protect them from the Soviet Union, those allies do billions of dollars worth of business with the Soviet Union. They vote against us in the United Nations. They undercut our policy in the Middle East. They undercut our efforts to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons technology.

We shouldn't put up with this. If the Europeans are so confident of Soviet friendship that they're willing to prop up the Soviet economy and to spend only a pittance on their own defense, then wonderful. Let's scrap the NATO Treaty and bring the American divisions home.

The Soviet Union isn't going to invade Western Europe anyway. Why should it? It gets what it wants just by intimidating them. Western Europe is no threat. The combined NATO armies, excluding the American forces, couldn't muster the strength to invade East Germany, let alone the Soviet Union. Furthermore Europe is in the process of voluntarily moving toward communism; it's only a matter of time.

The threat of war is between the United States and the Soviet Union. If the Soviets pulled a surprise nuclear attack on the United States, you don't really believe Italy and Great Britain are going to declare war on the Soviet Union, do you? Do frogs sing arias?

It's amazing how many smart people get caught in the trap of living in the past. The world of 1980 is not the world of 1946. Great Britian, God bless her, is a fifth-rate power. Let the British, the French, and the Germans dream their old dreams of past glory. In 1910, they were riding high; by 1946, they had destroyed themselves with their stupid, greedy rivalries that produced two world wars. Thanks to the American taxpayer, they have recovered somewhat economically, but they were only powerful as long as they had empires and their empires no longer exist.

The future belongs to the Americans, the Russians, the Chinese and possibly the Latin Americans. We should be focusing our attention on Asia, Africa, the Middle East and Latin America, not on Westen Europe.

As for Japan, it has enjoyed an artificial existence since 1945, protected by American arms, aided by American money, and left entirely free, by American weakness, to pursue its own policies. We need to strike a harder bargain with Japan. If we are going to be allies, then alliance must work in two directions; otherwise, let them devote some of their profits to their own defense.

If I were president, I would put all our mutual defense treaties on a table and go over them one by one. As I picked up each one, I would ask myself? "Would I be willing to send my sons off to die for this country?" If the answer was, no; I'd scrap it.

Time reports Nixon protected Fitzsimmons from investigators

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Fitzsimons, the late Teamsters president, told IRS agents that former President Richard Nixon had ordered him protected from government investigators, Time magazine says.

Fitzsimmons worked for the Internal Revenue Service as a government informer against Jimmy Hoffa, his predecessor, Time said in its current issue.

The magazine says Fitzsimmons, William Presser, then boss of the Ohio Teamsters, and his son, Jackie, met regularly with IRS agents between 1972 and 197, to inform on Hoffa, St. Louis Teamster leader Harold Gibbon and Las Vegas casino builder Jay Sarno.

THe magazin, quoting Internal Revenue Service documents, says the three sought to save themselves from criminal investigations by informing against their enemies. Fitzsimons, allegedly feared that Hoffa, who later disappeared, would seek to regain power in the union.

Sarno was tried on charges of attempting to bribe an IRS agent, but was acquitted. The informers were not successful in their attempts to get the governent to charge Hoffa and Gibbons.

The magazine says Fitzsimmons told IRS agents he asked for a meeting with Nixon in late 1972. "At that session the President allegely summoned Attorney General Richard Kleindienst and personally ordered him to make sure that government investigations of the Teamsters then in progress did not harm Fitzsimmons or his allies," the magazine said.

Fitzsimmons died in May and the elder Presser died in July. The younger Presser, now an international vice president of the Teamsters, was a senior labor adviser in President Reagan's transition team.

"So, I'm a fink?" Jacie Presser told the magazine. "I can't be responsible for what's in government reports."

Time quoted him as admitting he, his father and Fitzsimmons met with IRS agents once in 1972, but denied meeting with them more than once.

Kleindienst denied that Nixon told him to go easy on Fitzsimmons.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer also reported that Fitzsimmons and the Pressers served as informants. The newspaper also said in a copyright story that the younger Presser received kickbacks of $16,500 a month for years from a Las Vegas public relations compny hired to improve the Teamsters image. The newspaer says it obtained the information from a civil suit filed in Los Angeles against Hoover-Gorin & Associates Inc., the public relations firm. Duke Hoover, who headed the company, declined comment, the newspaper said.

Kleindienst is on trial for perjury in Arizona in connection with a $7 million insurance scam involving a Teamsters Health and Welfare fund.

Kleindienst, a Tucson lawyer, is accused of lying to the state bar association about his role in the choice of an alleged mobster to administer the insurane contract as well as his role in two attempts to siphon off the premiums.

He has testified in prior proceedings that he received $125,000 for about seven hours of work using his influence with Fitzsimmons to get the insurance contract for his clients.

Dallas youth sent to psychiatric center

DALLAS (AP) — The 14-year-old son of a former oil company president has been committed by a juvenile court judge to a psychiatric hospital for killing his parents with seven blasts from a shotgun.

Family Court Judge Craig Penfold ordered David Keeler committed Saturday to Timberlawn Psychiatric Center until his 18th birthday.

The youth had pleaded guilty last Thursday in the July 12 shotgun slayings of his parents, former Arco Oil & Gas Co. president William Keeler and his wife, Anita.

Keeler told psychiatrists he had started thinking about killing his parents about two years ago.

The youth told a psychiatrist he fired seven shots at his mother and father in the bedroom of their fashionable Dallas home "because his parents kept getting up."

Penfold agreed to commit Keeler after both prosecutors and defense lawyers greed to the move. The judge could have sentenced the youth to the Texas Youth Council, a juvenile detention center. That sentence, too, would have been only until his 18th birthday.

Under Texas law Keeler was too young to stand trial as an adult. Juvenile jurisdiction would end at his 18th birthday.

Penfold also orderd the youth to write a letter to the court every 90 days to tell the judge of his progess and said Keeler's case would be reviewed every four months by hosptal officials.

During the 30-minute sentencing hearing Saturday Judge Penfold twice asked Keeler why he killed his parents. The youth did not respond to the first question and replied "I don't know" when the judge repeated the question.

Keeler had told psychiatrists he shot his parents because they had complained about a number of things, including his school performance and the length of his hair.

Four psychiatrists testified that the boy was emotionally disturbed and could commit further acts of violence without proper treatment.

New Orleans police beat witnesses to win peer approval, patrolman tells grand jury

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A New Orleans grand jury looking into complaints of police violence was told by a patrolman that officers won peer approval by beating witnesses, transcripts of the proceedings disclosed.

"The officers, the other people, are not going to let you see what's going on until you hit somebody..." New Orleans patrolman Oris Buckner said he was told by a superior.

Buckner's testimony was contained in transcript delivered by civil rights prosecutor Michael Johnson to a federal grand jury. After the Orleans Parish grand jury refused to indict anyone, the federal grand jury indicted six city policeman and a former officer.

The seven were to have gone on trial today for allegedly violating the civil rights of people they questioned about the murder of anoher officer. The trial was postponed indefinitely, however, and defense motions are now scheduled for Sept. 1 and 2 in U.S. District Court.

Johnson recounted Buckner's testimony to Orleans Parish grand jurors that Sgt. John McKenzie warned him last November to get tougher with potential witnesses.

McKenzie, a 12-year veteran, headed an investigation into th slaying of fellow officer Gregory Neupert.

"...All you do is holler at people, and they (the other officers) don't trust you," Buckner allegedly quoted McKenzie as saying.

Buckner has received immunity from prosecution in return for testimony against McKenzie, five other officers and a former policeman fired from his job for violence.

The transcripts were filed Friday at the request of defense lawyers.

The federal indictment said the seven allegedly beat potential witnesses with heavy books, laced plastic bags over their hads and threatened to kill them.

Buckner allegedly admitted beating Johnny Brownlee and Robrt Davis. But he also told the grand jury he stepped in once when one of the indicted officers, Thomas Woodall, allegedly got too brutal.

Buckner said Woodall had beaten Brownlee with a book until Brownlee fell to the floor. Woodall then kicked Brownlee "until Buckner interceded and held his body between Woodall and Brownlee's so Woodall would stop hitting him," Johnson told the federal grand jury.

Police have said Brownlee and Davis were possible witnesses to the Neupert murder.

New Orleans police subsequently shot to death two black men, identified as suspects in Neupert's death, and the girl friend of one of the men. A report said the three all pulled pistols when police raided their homes in the middle of the night.

Voyager 2 prepares for Saturn rendezvous

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Voyager 2, sailing within 700,000 miles of Saturn on the eve of its rendezvous with the golden, ringed world, adds another moon to its trophy case tonight when its cameras focus on the little satellite, Hyperion.

The robot ship's cameras and 10 instruments are casting about in all directions, revealing new details of the churning and weaving clouds, probing mysteries of th shimmering rings and watching moons grow larger as the ship prepares for mankind's best look at Saturn on Tuesday.

"We are bewildered explorers," photography team leader Bradford Sith said during the weekend. Nearly 10 months after sister ship Voyager 1 cruised the planet, he said, "we have made very little progress" in untangling the many riddles it revealed.

The flight plan for Tuesday's encounter was extensively rewritten to look more deeply at some of those puzzles. Now, Smith said, scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory "are just...hoping the answers to some of these questions are going to be found in some of these Voyager 2 data."

Voyager 1, on it tour of Saturn in November, saw Hyperion as little more than a fuzzy ball as it came no closer than 550,000 miles. Scientists should see a lot more as this second Voyager comes 250,000 miles closer today. The radio signals need 86 minutes to cover almost a billion miles to Earth.

Just 180 miles across, Hyperion is the third most-distant of the 17 known moons scattered about the Saturnian nighborhood. The ship flew past the strange, two-toned moon Iapetus on Saturday night.

By far the biggest puzzle found last year was the astonishing complexity of the fabled rings, a vast sheet of snowy particles that circle Saturn's equator

Old explanations fell apart when Voyager 1 found the broad rings filled with hundreds of thin ringlets and saw a narrow ring that seems composed of braided ringlets, several eccentic or out-of-round ringlets and broad smudges reaching across part of he rings.

A popular theory suggests many tiny moons — ranging in diameter from perhaps half a mile to 20 miles — may be sprinkled through the rings, acting as shepherds as their gravities mix with Saturn's to herd the particles into the little ringlts.

So Voyager 2 is aiming its cameras at several likely spots in search of the theorized moonlets.

Chief Voyager scientist Edward Stone said Sunday, "A little moonlet buried in the rings...will form a gap" by sweeping out its orbit. One large gap is about 300 miles wide and if the moonlet theory is accurate, he said, it should hold a moon 12 to 18 miles across and Voyager should be able to spot it.

Smith said scientists have examined about one-third of the moonlet-hunt pictures taken so far and "we have yet to detect one of these embedded satellites."

He also said an explanation for Iapetu's bizarre surface, as dark as anything in the solar system on one side and shiny as now on the other, will haveto wait for more detailed analysis of Voyager's Saturday night probing.

An initital look "has not given us any clues," he said. "It's not something that's coming right out and staring us in the face."

Saturn's own surface of wind-churned clouds continues to display finer details of the swirling storms and wavy jet streams.

One region pictued by both Vogagers about a year apart, shows a 1,550-mile oval — a gigantic storm — "that is basically the same after early a year," Smith said, "(proving) Saturn...has its own very stable features." Other twirling features, howevver, "change somewhat from day to day."

Fiber analysis gains attention in murders

ATLANTA (AP) — he slenderthreads that ied Theodre Bundy to the sex slaying of a 12-year-old girl and may link Wayne Williams to the kiling of a young black man are almost too tiny to be seen by a juror's naked eye.

But to microanalysts such as Larry Peterson and Lynn Henson, fibers are momentous finds — clues that may betray a criminal when all else fails.

Their craft is notnew. Fibers removed from carfenders and corpses' scalps have been used for years to help identify culprits in hit-and-run, robbery and murder cases. But recent ensational cases have brought new fame to fibe analysis and raised new questions about its validiy. Can jurors evaluat similarities they cannot see? How conclusive can fiber matchups be?

eterson, a Georgia Crime Lab technician, has analyzed fibers in the murdrs of 28 young blacks in Atlanta. As the death toll rose, he carefully mounted fibers from victims' hair and clothing on slides and peered at them through microscope.

Ms. Henso, a Florida Department of LawEnforcement microanalyst, assembled the fibers which helped convict undy of murder in the 1978 slaying of Kimberly Leach near Lake City, Fla.

Both scientits say their craft is oten misunderstood and ssumed to be a new, unpoven discipline.

'Fibers have been used i court for ages," Ms. enson said in an interview. "Most people don't unerstand that, and some investigators only go afterthings like fingerprint.

"When you don't have fingerprints, you've got to fall back on something. That's where we come in."

Described in detail in Sherlock Holmes novels of the late 1800s, the analysis of fibers at crime scenes dates to the middle of the 19th century. But the discipline had no real recognition until the 1950s, when manmade threads were produced in mass quatities.

Unlike cotton or wooleen strands, each of the thousands of synthetic fibers has characteristics which can be measured precisely.

Scientists can look at a synthetic fiber with six kinds of microscopes. They can bombard it with neutrons and X-rays. They can tell whether it's permanent press and how its molecules are shaped.

They can measure its density, weight, melting point and solubility and tell exactly where it was made.

Ultimately, however, the microanalyst can testify only that a fiber could, might, may have come from a prticular piece of material.

Williams is charged with murder in the strangulation of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and the asphyxiation of Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of the 28 dead youths.

In a June 23 preliminary hearing, which dealt only with evidence in the Cater case, Peterson testified that a green fiber and a violet fiber found in Cater's hair showed "no significant microscopic differences" when compared with fibers in Williams' green crpet and violet-and-green bedspread.

"Three or four" dog hairs found on Cater's head were similar to hairs taken from Williams' German shepherd, and "two or three" other fibers in the victim's hair corresponded to carpet sweepings from the Williams family car, Peterson also testified.

But Peterson had to admit his science was inexact. Wen presse by the defense, he acknowledged he couldn't say the fibers in Cater's hair were "identical"to those rom Williams' bedroom and dog.

"Identical is not a word I use,"Peterson said in court. Other sources could have produced the purple fibe, the green fiber and the three dog hairs.

Jurors in a crimina case nonetheless "can more or less form an opinion based on common sense," Ms. Henson said.In the Leach case, Ms. Henson produced 98 fibe matchups which she said formed a "probable link" between Bundy and the murdered girl.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ3 ♡A8752 ◇Q107 ♣6
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—Your hand is too strong for a jump raise to three spades, which has an upper limit of 15-16 points, counting high cards and distribution, but not quite good enough for a jump shift to three hearts because your suit is ratty. So, for the moment, just temporize with two hearts, then offer a vigorous spade raise at your next turn.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ854 ♡84 ◇K92 ♣A83
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—You have one of those in-between hands that prove awkward to bid. You are not strong enough for a jump to three spades and too good for a simple raise to two spades. The solution is a temporizing bid of two clubs, to be followed by a spade raise at your next turn.

Q.3—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ87542 ♡A ◇QJ98
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—Normally, you should avoid making a jump shift when you are void in the suit that partner has opened. However, trump support for partner is not a prerequisite for a jump shift. Here, your spade suit is self-sustaining, and you can play in the suit even if partner is void. The important thing is to advise partner that you are interested in slam, and the way to do so is to jump to two spades now.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K105 ♡83 ◇107 ♣Q109532
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	Pass	2 ♣
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Even though you are not vulnerable, partner must have a reasonably good hand to raise you freely to the three-level when you might have nothing. Since you, in fact, have a reasonable six-card suit, which is a source of tricks, and a stopper in the enemy suit, we suggest you try three no trump. If partner's raise was based mainly on distribution, he can remove to four clubs.

Q.5—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK10 ♡KJ76 ◇K4 ♣8652
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You don't need a pocket calculator for this—simple arithmetic will do. Partner has shown 19-20 points with his jump to two no trump, and you have 14. That gives you at least 33 points in the combined hands which is enough for a small slam. Since there is unlikely to be a better spot to play than no trump, you should jump to six no trump.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J7 ♡AQ108 ◇A98 ♣AJ109
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—You have the right strength but the wrong shape for a jump to three no trump, which shows specifically a 4-3-3-3 pattern. Here, there could be a slam in either of your suits or even in partner's spades, so you don't want to crowd the bidding until you find out more about partner's hand. Start with two clubs—a two heart response to a spade opening guarantees either a five-card suit, or the ability to correct to spades at the appropriate level.

Oak Ridge Boys, Terri Gibbs forecast as CMA finalists

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Oak Ridge Boys, a flashy quartet whose hit "Elvira" peppered the music charts this summer, and blind newcomer Terri Gibbs are likely finalists for multiple Country Music Association awards.

The Oak Ridge Boys, former gospel singers, are regarded as certain finalists for entertainer of the year, group of the year and top single when the 5,800-member association announces this year's finalists at mid-week.

Miss Gibbs, whose "Somebody's Knockin' " became a No. 1 hit this year even though it was only her first record, has a strong chance to be a finalist for No. 1 female vocalist, single of the year, album of the year and for the horizon award honoring a promising newcomer.

The association will announce five finalists in each of 11 categories. Winners will be announced on the nationally televised live awards show Oct. 12.

Likely to join the Oak Ridge Boys as finalists for entertainer of the year, the top award, are perennial finalist Kenny Rogers, mellow Canadian Anne Murray, the harmonizing Larry Gatlin and the Gatlin Brothers Band and rock-country star Eddie Rabbitt.

Top picks for single of the year appear to be "Elvira," "On the Road Again" by Willie Nelson, "Somebody's Knockin'" by Miss Gibbs, "I Love a Rainy Night" by Rabbitt and "Lookin' for Love" by Texan Johnny Lee.

Others possibly will be "I Believe in You" by Don Williams, "Could I Have This Dance?" by Miss Murray, "Smoky Mountain Rain" by Ronnie Milsap, "What Are We Doin' in Love?" by Dottie West and "9 to 5" by Dolly Parton.

Strong candidates for finalists for top album are "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" by Nelson, "Somebody's Knockin' " by Miss Gibbs, "Tenth Anniversary" by the Statler Brothers, "Out Where the Bright Lights are Glowing" by Milsap and "I Am What I Am" by the legendary George Jones.

A mix of veterans and new faces could mark the finalists for female vocalist of the year. They are established stars Miss West and Miss Murray and new faces Rosanne Cash, Lacy J. Dalton and Miss Gibbs. Miss Cash is the daughter of Johnny Cash, who last year was inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Strong contenders for top male vocalist are Rabbitt, Rogers, Lee, T.G. Sheppard and Hank Williams Jr.

Competition appears to be the strongest ever for group of the year. The Statlers have won this award every year but once since 1972 and likely will be finalists this year along with the Oak Ridge Boys, Alabama, the Gatlins and Dave Rowland & Sugar.

Other categories are song of the year, honoring a songwiter or songwriters; vocal duo of the year; instrumental group of the year; instrumentalist of the year; and the horizon award.

Finalists are picked by singers, songwriters, musicians and others who are involved professionally in the country music business.

Hamill's dreams don't fulfill his dreams

Hamill

NEW YORK (AP) — Mark Hamill, the kid hero of "Star Wars," is about to turn 30 and has an identity crisis.

Hamill had said by the time he turned 30 on Sept. 25 he wanted to star in a movie, be in one nominated for an Osar, make a million dollars and appear in a Broadway play.

He did.

"Star Wars" was nominated for an Oscar; its sequel "The Empire Strikes Back" made him a million, and he appeared on Broadway in "The Elephant Man."

"But having done all that, it's not what you imagined," he says in an interview in the current issue of People magazine. "I must still prove myself as an actor."

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A state Republican fundraiser is the only public appearance slated for President Reagan in his final week of vacation on his mountaintop ranch.

Reagan returned to his home in the Santa Ynez mountains Saturday after five days in Los Angeles. "He's excited about getting back to the ranch," said Deputy White House Press Secretary Larry Speakes.

The fundraiser is scheduled for Thursday in Santa Barbara. Speakes said Reagan may meet this week with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger on strategic defense systems and with budget director David Stockman on federal spending.

Reagan will return to Los Angeles next Sunday and arrive at the White House Sept. 3, ending a four-week vacation.

Nixon

PARIS (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon is in the French capital on the start of a two-week private visit to Europe, but does not plan to meet with foreign leaders.

Nixon, who resigned as president eight years ago, made no comment after his Sunday night arrival at Paris' Charles de Gaulle Airport.

A spokesman at the U.S. Embassy said the former president had flown from New York on a regularly scheduled Concorde flight. He said Nixon went immediately to the Carillon Hotel across the street from the embassy off Place Concorde.

Nixon, 68, last visited France after the publication of his book, "The Real War." He was given a warm reception on that trip by the French media and public.

An embassy spokesman said Nixon would be giving no interviews this time and had not scheduled any meetings with foreign leaders.

The former president, who is traveling with his friends Charles "Bebe" Rebozo and Nick Ruwe and secret service agents, is schduled to make a day trip to Reims in the French Champagne region on Tuesday.

Nixon is scheduled to leave Paris by train Wednesday for the wine region of Bordeaux, where he will spend two nights at a private chateau, the embassy spokesman said.

He will leave Bordeaux by train Friday for Lausanne, Switzerland. Nixon also is scheduled to visit Vienna, Flensborg, West Germany, and possibly Denmark before his return to New York on Sept. 4 or 5, the embassy spokesman said.

Nixon has been supervising the redecoration of his new house in Saddle River, N.J., his friend Ruwe said before their departure.

Mrs. Nixon decided to remain in the United States to continue preparations for the move while her husband is abroad, Ruwe said. He said he expected the Nixons to move to New Jersey in mid-September. The Nixons' New York townhouse has not yet been sold, Ruwe said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jazz great Lionel Hampton will be saluted for his 50 years in music with a celebration next month in Washington featuring President Reagan.

Hampton will be a guest at a White House reception Sept. 10. Then he will be honored at the anniversary celebration of the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

Among those expected to attend, according to the New York Daily News, are Count Basie, Woody Herman, Stan Getz, Pearl Bailey and Dave Bubeck.

The proceeds will help establish a school of jazz in Harlem for the Lionel and Gladys Hampton Foundation.

Souvenirs as tacky or tasteful as American pocketbook allows

Oh, beautiful, for specious buys, for Mickey Mouse key chains.
For purple-hearted New York T's, above the Georgia Plains.
America, America, souvenirs for a fee.
To gather dust from vacationhood, we'll buy anything we see.

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

They can be tacky, tasteless trinkets or refined reminders of times gone by, but whatever the style, Americans and foreign visitors are spending record amounts this year on souvenirs.

Gold-plated cockroaches in Hawaii. Peanuts in Plains, Ga. Elvis belt buckles in Memphis. Bags of salt in — where else? — Salt Lake City.

Revere bowls and models of Old Ironsides in Boston. Tri-cornered hats in colonial Williamsburg, Va. And parchment-like copies of the Declaration of Independence in Philadelphia.

And, of course, the ever-popular Statue of Liberty thermometer or the bronzed Empire State Building model in New York City.

U.S. gift shops sell about $2 billion worth of souvenirs each year, says Scott Borowsky, publisher of Souvenir and Novelties Magazine, and the business is growing.

Consider that 4,005 people work in Pennsylvania's 889 novelty, gift and souvenir shops. That souvenirs accounted for $386 million of the $3 billion tourists spent in Hawaii last year.

Or that Americans mail more than a billion postcards each year — and buy more for mementos of their travels, according to Harry Lambeth of the Post Card Manufacturers Association.

And how about these figures:

Charles Promilo, a Philadelphia manufacturer, turns out 500,000 tiny metal replicas of the Liberty Bell each year.

Disneyland sells 560,000 pairs of Mickey Mouse ears annually.

"Our souvenirs tend to remind us of the pleasant things on vacation," said psychologist Joyce Brothers. "But we also use them to impress the people back home. They are a way of showing off."

But the things people choose to show off:

In Alaska, "moose nuggets," delicately described as the result of the moose's digestive process, are a current rage.

"We have moose nugget tie tacks, moose nugget earrings, moose nugget swizzle sticks," said May Jefford, manager of an Anchorage trading post. "It's been sprayed, but it's not all that encased. We sell them by the gross. Can you believe it?"

And in California, where such things are taken seriously, the latest fad is the canned earthquake — a windup soupcan-sized temblor. The manufacturer says it's guaranteed to shake up the folks back home, and orders are rolling in like aftershocks — 10,000 a day.

Bangup souvenirs are available in South Carolina, the only Eastern Seaboard state allowing fireworks sales — 30 million a year, 80 percent to tourists who smuggle them home as contraband.

"If they're not legal in other states, I hate to say it, but that's their problem," said Richard Neley, director of the state Pyrotechnic Safety Board.

Often, souvenirs are special to their place of sale.

In the Ozark Mountains, it's whet stones for sharpening knives, handmade white oak baskets and local delicacies such as honey.

In Washington state, the serious traveler may return home with fresh salmon packed in dry ice, a basket of fancy apples — and "Mount St. Helens" T-shirts and jars of volcanic ash.

Such is the stuff of souvenirs. In Nashville, just about anything that says "Music City, USA," sells: savings banks, cedar chests and little picnic tables for the salt and pepper. One hit is a $5.25 slab of wod bearing the moon, a seagull, the ocean — Nashville is 350 miles from the sea — and the words "Music City."

"Hey, I don't ask them 'Why do you want to buy this?' I just tell them how much it is," said J. Henry Cooley, owner of the Country Corner USA shop.

America's taste in souvenirs runs wide — and wild. Everything from T-shirts to Alaskan "moose nuggets" is reported selling big this summer.

Orientation session set

An orientation session for Lee High School sophomores and new students will be held Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the LHS auditorium.

Pope John Paul II salutes the cheering crowd gathered below the balcony of his summer residence at Castel Gandolfo, Italy, during a noon blessing Sunday. The pontiff is vacationing at the retreat overlooking Lake Albano, about 18 miles south of Rome. It was his first message following his recent release from a Rome hospital.

Police fire to disperse rioters; Another prisoner joins fast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Police fired plastic bullets to disperse rioters who hurled gasoline bombs at a police station in Northern Ireland early today, officials said.

Police said volleys of plastic bullets turned back a crowd of about a dozen people who came to the Royal Ulster Constabulary station in Coalisland, about 30 miles west of Belfast. No injuries were reported.

The trouble broke out in the early morning hours after an appearance in Coalisland by nationalist Owen Carron, newly elected to Parliament. Carron, who wants to drive the British government out of Northern Ireland, said over the weekend that he wants to meet with Prime Miniter Margaret Thatcher on behalf of the hunger strikers.

Last week, he won the seat left vacant by the death May 5 of Irish Republican Army guerrilla Bobby Sands, the first of 10 fasters to die in the Maze prison hunger strike. All 10 were members of the outlawed IRA and the Irish National Liberation Army, a splinter faction of the IRA.

Sands, who launched the strike March 1 in an effort to win political prisoner status for nationalist guerrillas, was elected to the British Parliament from Fermanagh and South Tyrone in April. He never took his seat.

Britain's Northern Ireland Office, which administers the province, said jailed guerrilla Bernard Fox refused breakfast today to join the fast.

Fox, 30, was sentenced in 1979 to 12 years in prison on charges of planting bombs and possessing timing devices for explosives. He is a Belfast native who once worked or the same bus manufacturing company as Sands.

He replaced Patrick Quinn, 29, whose family authorized doctors to save his life after he slipped into a coma July 31 after 46 days on hunger strike. Quinn later decided not to resume the protest.

With the addition of Fox, six inmates were participating in the fast. A seventh, Patrick McGeown, 25, was given emergency medical treatment at his family's request last Thursday, and it was unclear whether he would rejoin the hunger strike.

Carron said he would submit a formal request today to meet with Mrs. Thatcher.

An official source said the request would be "considered when it is received." Mrs. Thatcher is on vacation until later in the week. But she has refused to meet with any of the guerrilla leaders "under duress," that is, while the hunger strike was continuing.

Relatives critical of crash aftermath

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — About 500 weeping and shouting relatives of the 110 victims of Taiwan's worst air disaster confronted aviation officials at the funeral home today, challenging circumstances surrounding the mid-air explosion.

The relatives condemned Far Eastern Air Transport for allowing its Boeing 737 to take off after it had experienced mechanical problems, for failing to notify the families of the victims and for what one called the "improper, inconsiderate and inhumane" way the bodies were being handled.

The bodies of the 67 passengers who have been identified were placed in coffins at the funeral home. But others too badly burned or mangled to be identified were still laying exposed on the ground outside, forcing relatives and officials to cover their noses with handkerchiefs because of the smell.

The jetliner exploded Saturay morning at 22,000 feet, while flying from the capital to the southern port of Kaohsiung. All 104 passengers and six crew members were killed. Four Americans, a Canadian and 18 Japanese were among the victims.

Investigators have been unable to determine the cause of the crash, and said today that no evidence of chemical explosives had been found. A police spokesman said the plane apparently "disintegrated in mid-air."

Airline officials refused to rule out sabotage but said they have no evidence of that. The line refused all cargo for its six other 737s because of suspicions the crash was caused by a bomb, officials said without elaborating.

Two American experts from the Boeing Co. arrived from Seattle, Wash., headquarters today to help investigate the crash.

Authorities said there was no emergency signal from the plane before it blew up over rugged terrain near the small town of Sanyi, 94 miles southwest of Taipei.

Foreign cultures inspire fall fashions

This is the look of fall '81. Patterns and textures, inspired by coutries all over the world, are mixed together for a cross-culture spirit. There will be a shift away from the straight and narrow, as this outfit from the August issue of Seventeen demonstrates.

In a spirited departure from the conservative, preppy look of last year, back-to-school fashions this fall will draw on fantasy, folklore and foreign cultures for a decidedly festive feeling, says the August issue of Seventeen magazine.

Storybook characters like Heidi and Robin Hood, romantic buccaneers and foreign folklore are offering their own brand of style to this fall's fashions. Made to be mixed together, these new clothes can be combined imaginatively with fashions from past seasons.

There will be a shift away from the straight and narrow, and more toward softness and romance, with lots of puffed sleeves, peplums and soft pleating. Even classic menswear will have a softer, more feminine feeling with shorter jackets, ruffled blouses and pants of varying lengths. Colors are more subtle with loden greens, rusts and ambers important. Pattern and textures, inspired by countries all over the world, are mixed together for a cross-culture spirit. Pants, more important than ever, will show up in all lengths and shapes, with knickers the big fashion item of the season. And occasional minis are cropping up as kilts, skimp sweaterdresses and double-flounced skirts.

Among the major fashion messages of fall 1981 are:

● FOREIGN INFLUENCES, from around the world. Heavy jacquard knit sweaters with combinations of Nordic patterns top rugged, mountain-climbing knickers from the Alpine slopes. From the American frontier: flounced skirts in prairie fabrics, teamed with Aztec-patterned sweaters. And from Russia and Eastern Europe come gypsy patterns, border print skirts, big challis scarfs and touches of sherpa. Best bet: Mix the cultures together for a very American look!

● STORYBOOK FANTASY, with fashions inspired by Heidi, Robin Hood and swashbuckling pirates. Straight from the Swiss Alps come sweet, Tyrolean embroidered blouses with puffed sleeves, bib-strapped lederhosen and eidelweiss knee socks. From Sherwood Forest: woodsy outerwear in suede and leather with touches of trapper fur. For a buccaneer spirit, billowy white shirts with large collars top knickers or loose, ankle-banded pants. And poetic, Elizabethan touches also will turn up in leg o'mutton sleeves, peplums and high neck-tickling ruffles.

● PANTS, The most important item this fall. Variety is the reason. They will show up in all lengths and widths, all fabrics, and with a lot of detail: buckles, tabs, buttons and knit bands. There is a general softness of shape, with knickers and jodhpurs making a strong impression. Plus-four knickers ending just below the knee, drop yoke pants with soft gathers at the hip, and fuller, looser walking shorts are among the new shapes this season.

● CAMPUS CLASSICS, SOFTENED WITH A NEW FEMININITY: ruffled blouses, shorter blazers, all lengths of pants, and muted plaids. Even classic grey flannel gets a sweet, schoolgirl look in dresses with soft pleats and white collar and cuffs.

● BELTS AND SCARFS, grown in importance. Belt widths will range between two and four inches. Watch for buckles in natural materials like horn, wood hammered brass, and sashes in all fabrics and leathers. Scarfs and shawls will tie up asymmetrically over the shoulder, knotted at the neck or in the hair. They will be found printed in rich folkloric florals or Victorian paisleys, fringed and tinged with gold threads.

● SHOES, stepping out in three distinct categories: classic, romantic and rugged. As for the classics, tasseled loafers are narrowed in shape, more feminine in feeling, and T-strap Mary Janes return in suede, complete with tear-drop cutouts. Romantic shoes turn up as simple ballet flats in all colors of leather, metallics and wovens. Folkloric fabric shoes are brightly embroidered. In rugged footwear, the desert boot comes complete with lace-up front and low-down heel, and riding boots return with Western details. The newest boot is also the shortest, in soft leather with cuffs and rubber soles.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Banish smoke odor

DEAR HELOISE:

We loaned our car to friends who smoke. When it was returned, the smell of stale cigarettes was just terrible.

I got out my can of carpet deodorizer and sprinkled it on the entire carpeted area, then later vacuumed it up.

The cigarette odor was completely gone and the carpet stayed fresh-smelling for weeks. Now I do this on a regular basis and our car alaways smells so nice. — Mrs. B. Clary

+ + +

Baking soda works well for this purpose and is less expensive. When using either product, be sure the carpet is dry as it's difficult to vacuum when wet. — Heloise

COVER UP

Dear Heloise: Don't throw an old fitted bed sheet away. Put it on the underside of your box spring to help keep dust off it. Rather hard to do — hubby will have to help — but it sure helps to keep box springs cleaner. — Norma Lott

LETTER WRITING TIPS

Dear Heloise: Writing letters to someone? Clip items from the daily newspaper that would interest your friend — as well as chuckles that would amuse him or her.

Keep an envelope on your desk marked with the person's name and when you next write, add the clippings. Makes letter-writing and letter-receiving more interesting! — Reader

EARRING CARRIER

Dear Heloise: Earrings for pierced ears are usually small and a real problem to pack properly when traveling.

I cut a piece of grosgrain ribbon (as long as needed) and attach the earrings to it, then place the ribbon with my other jewelry.

No searching for a lost mate. — D. Kahn

SEE THROUGH

Dear Heloise: I buy clear, adhesive-backed plastic by the yard and laminate clippings, etc. that I want to save. It's especially good for recipes cut out of newspapers or magazines. — Dorothy Kroeger

FROZEN TREAT

Dear Heloise: For a nutritious snack for the kiddoes, freeze half a banana on a wooden ice cream stick.

These make a soothing teether for baby. — Kristin Downer

CATCH THE CULPRIT

Dear Heloise: Each member of our family has his own color towels.

It's easy to know who didn't hang his on the rod. — M. T.

TUBS FOR STORAGE

Dear Heloise: Eight-ounce margarine tubs are great for storing ice cream in the freezer, especially when there are little folks in the house. Easier than having to open a messy cardboard carton each time.

My grandchildren love to get their own serving from the freezer. — Betty Kastner

DEAR ABBY

Unhappy he is glad to be she

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I recently read an article in the Los Angeles Times about "Kris," an accomplished young San Francisco woman lawyer. She is a transsexual who, prior to her sex-change operation, was a male who graduated from Berkeley and served in the Peace Corps in Ethiopia.

Kris (formerly Ken) said that although she'd been born male, since the age of 5 she "knew" he should have been female. Ken turned to psychiatry and finally had a sex-change operation and began living a new life as a woman. Now she says, "I'm sorry I had the surgery."

Abby, I am also a transsexual, having lived as a woman for 16 years after having lived for 37 years as a man — and a miserable one at that. I could not have gone on living had I not had the sex-change operation. I thank God every day for those doctors who make this change possible. For every transsexual you read about who is "sorry," there are thousands who owe their lives to the operation that made them free to be themselves. Many marry and adopt children. But you don't hear about them, because they want to forget their past. They change their names (legally) and refuse to be interviewed. I'm not blaming them. They just want to be left alone.

Today there are many transsexuals who desperately want a sex-change operation, but when they read about only those who regret having had the surgery, they become discouraged. I am only one happy, successful, "born-again" transsexual, but I speak for thousands. Sign me — ELIZABETH

DEAR ELIZABETH: I know. Through this column I have heard from a surprising number.

DEAR MISS VAN BUREN: Your answer to NEEDS TO DANCE which appeared recently may have confused some readers who contacted local IRS offices for clarification.

In the answer you indicated that the cost of an evening of dancing could be counted as a medical expense for tax purposes because dancing was good therapy. While there is little doubt that dancing may be a therapeutic pastime, as well as good exercise, unfortunately the expense generally does not qualify as a medical expense deduction under the federal income tax law, even when recommended by a doctor. — A. Tanning pills are available in US

By MERRY NYE
Hearst Feature Service

There are pills to help you sleep, pills to get rid of a headache, pills to keep you from getting pregnant and now pills to make you tan.

Tanning pills contain a color additive substance that goes straight for the fatty tissues under the skin and gives off a color that can be seen through the thin layer of translucent skin.

They've been available in Europe and Brazil since 1977. Until recently, the only place to get them on this continent was Canada. Now they're here.

The Federal Drug Administration, and some researchers, urge consumers to be cautious.

Tanning pills got a lot of publicity in a recent issue of People magazine and it wasn't the kind public relations people dream about.

A few people who were taking pills called Hawaiian Tanning Tablets were turning orange.

One orange South Carolina woman was also experiencing liver toxity that cleared up when she stopped taking the pills.

According to Stan Swanson, who sells tablets called Golden Tan, the pills that were causing liver problems contained something not found in the pills he sells.

The Hawaiian Tanning Tablets, which used to be called Riviera Tanning Tablets, contain beta carotene, a substance found in large amounts in carrots and squash, and in smaller amounts in other foods.

The pills that Swanson sells contain canthaxanthin, an organic food color additive found in edible mushrooms.

Swanson, a thermal balance technician, was introduced to Golden Tan by his neighbor, an airline stewardess. He started selling them because he could get the pills at a discount that way.

"The pills are great for people who want to look good," he says, "but not everyone can use them the same way. Everyone is different and has different reactions to the sun and different reactions to the pills," he says.

He advises users to take one pill a day for every 37 pounds of body weight. Pills should not be taken on an empty stomach and should be taken with food and-or liquid.

The norm, he says, is four pills a day for about 20 days until a saturation point is reached. He says it took him a month to reach it, but others reach it in less than two weeks.

The saturation point is not hard to identify. When the palms of your hands or the soles of your feet turn orange, you've reached it.

That's the time, Swanson says, to cut back to one or two pills a day. Nearly everyone will experience orange stools during bowel movements while taking the pills, he says.

Swanson says he would not recommend the pills to pregnant or nursing women and would talk to parents before selling them to adolescents.

Swanson has not been out in the sun very much this summer and is as tan as if he had been lying on a beach in Hawaii for a month. Except he has no tan line.

A bottle of 80 Golden Tan tablets sells for $29.50 The label states the substance is used for food coloring. A new label yet to be affixed to the bottles will contain this "warning:"

"Excessive intake by humans, more than 120 milligrams per day for 20 days or more may cause a bronze or tan coloration in the skin. . ."

Each reddish color pill contains 30 mg of canthaxanthin, so four pills -- the recommended dosage to reach the saturation point -- would contain 120 mg.

The Food and Drug Administration has not approved canthaxanthin as an additive to color the skin. It has been approved as a food color additive.

Sue Hutchroft, consumer officer with the FDA, says "We advise consumers not to use tanning pills. We will take regulatory measures whenever needed to keep them off the market.

"Beta carotene and canthaxanthin have not been approved for use in oral tanning preparations," she says. "They have been approved at some levels for coloring some foods and drugs. The FDA considers neither chemical appropriate for coloring the human body," she savs.

Dr. Thomas Franz, associate professor of medicine (dermatology) at the University of Washington School of Medicine, says he would not advise anyone to take pills to get a tan. "These things are not without side effects," he comments.

Substances permissable as food color additives are not necessarily safe as body coloring additives, he says. "It's like saying that drinking a glass of water and living at the bottom of a swimming pool are the same thing," Franz says.

Irwin claims Buick playoff

GRAND BLANC, Mich (AP) — It was a very trying experience for Hale Irwin, but it was almost inevitable that he would have to go through a playoff to win the $350,000 Buick Open golf championship.

If Irwin, the two-time U.S.Open champion, had looked in the record book, he would have seen that the Buick has been decided by a playoff four times including three of the past four years.

Irwin, who was 14-under at one point Sunday at Warwick Hills, let it all slip away on the last six holes to finish in four-way tie with Gil Morgan, Bobby Clamptt and defending champion Peter Jacobsen.

THE 36-YEAR-old Irwin finally sealed the triumph — his second on the PGA Tour this year — with a 20-foot birdie putt on the second sudden-death playoff hole, the 185-yard, par-3 No.17.

The victory, worth $63,00 to the winner, was the 13th of Irwin's PGA Tour career which started in 1968. The former University of Colorado football star, who captured the Hawaiian Open earlier this year, now has won $248,649 this year — the fourth time he has gone over $200,000 — and puts him fifth on the all-time money list with $1,938,523, only $1,002 behind Tom Weiskopf.

All four golfers in the playoff finished the regulation 72 holes at 11-under 277 at the 7,001-yard course, three strokes off the tournament record set in 1963 by Julius Boros.

Ayala's record now 13-0

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Tony Ayala Jr. stalked a retreating Nicanor Comacho for 10 rounds Sunday and staggered the South American with bruising right hands to score a unanimous decision in the nationally televised bout between two previously unbeaten light-heavyweights.

The decision for Ayala, the World Boxing Association's eighth-ranked light heavyweight, snapped his consecutive knockout string at seven, but raised his record to 13-0.

Tolbert leads Roughriders

REGINA, Saskatchewan AP) — Emanual Tolbert caught second-half touchown passes of 13 and 30 yards from quarterback John Hufnagel Sunday to lead the Saskatchewan Roughriders to a 38-14 Canadian Football League victory over the Toronto Argaunauts.

Joe Barnes, the other half of Saskatchewan's quarterbacking team, tossed a 12-yard touchdown pass to Dwight Edwards in the second quarter, while Lester Brown, the game's leading rusher, scored on an 8-yard run and John McCorquindale ran one in from the one.

Jockeys injured in spills

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Three jockeys were injured, one badly enough to require hospitalization, in two separate spills at Saratoga Race Course Sunday, marring the next-to-last ay of the track's record-breaking 1981 thoroughbred meet.

In the second race, Native Truth, with Jorge Velasquez aboard, fell down in the stretch. Velasquez, who rode Pleasant Colony to victories in the Kentucky Deby and Preakness earlier this year, was taken to Saratoga Hospital but released after treatment. Native Truth had to be destroyed.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

McEnroe wins title, crowd

(Compiled from R-T wire services)

John McEnroe defeated Chris Lewis, New Zealand, 6-3, 6-4 to win the ATP title while delighting the crowd by giving Lewis several points. At one point, McEnroe told a line judge, "If you can't see that, what are you doing in the chair?" The judge responded, "First serve." McEnroe looked back at the judge, swatted the tennis ball away and said, "Here's my first serve." The crowd cheered.

The crowd had not given McEnroe much support during his previous matches at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center at Kings Island. The only time during the week that the crowd seemed to be behind McEnroe was during a Friday match against Bob Lutz. "They weren't behind me, until it looked like I might lose. It's not fun when you double-fault and people applaud. Just once I'd like to know what it feels like to have people on your side."...

Tracy Austin upset Chris Evert Lloyd 6-4, 6-1 to win the Canadian Player's Challenge tennis title, handing Chris her second loss of the year in 48 matches. The win represented the final step back after a 4 1/2 month absence from tennis due to a back injury. The 18-year-old, now 8-6 against Lloyd lifetime, said, "Now I feel that I'm totally back. I get the most satisfaction out of beating her because we play similar styles. It just becomes a question of who's going to be stronger on the court."...

Third-seeded Mel Purcell topped unseeded Gilles Moretton of France, 6-4, 6-2, Sunday to win the Atlata Journal-Constitution Tennis Open...Pam Casale beat Marjorie Blackwood of Canada, 6-0, 6-1 Sunday in the first round of the Volvo Cup tournament at Mahwah, N.J. Sports counts on stupidity of loyal fan

By BILL DWYRE
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

It is somehow fitting that, in this summer when major league baseball lit a cigar that exploded in its face, major college athletics is about to give itself a hotfoot.

The recent vote in Atlanta by the College Football Association, making the future of college athletics as big a potential mess as the fishline snarl that baseball still hasn't unraveled, seems to be just one more indication that much of sports these day is on a path to self-destruction.

Baseball's problem was a players' strike. College athletics' problem is a dispute over how the huge revenues from television football games should be apportioned.

BUT DON'T be fooled if those issues seem widely divergent. Take away all the fancy legal language and the self-serving statements and you've got one basic issue: Greed.

The greed of the CFA, a group of big-time football schools, is that it doesn't want to split any of the network television pie with the little schools. They play the game, too, but don't have 5 million alums beating down their doors for season tickets.

The NCAA's greed is that it doesn't want a new kid on the block, the CFA, getting a seat around the table where it has been playing its own game of monopoly with real network TV money for years.

And the TV networks' greed is that they all have, long ago, committed themselves to a blind bidding war where sports are concerned. It doesn't seem to matter whether it's the Super Bowl or the World Taco Eating Tournament. TV wants it and is willing to pay like three billionaires at an art auction to get it.

PUSSED TO the background by all this money grubbing is the issue of the public's interest in college athletics.

All along, the colleges have gone out of their way to preach to us that the young men and women who compete under their banners are student athletes. The implication is that this is a lot like high school, that you go to school, work hard all day and then hit the practice field for some welcome and therapeutic recreation that just happens to draw 85,000 fans to the stadium on Saturday afternoon.

Well, all along we have sensed that, at least on the Division I level, that is mostly a sham. For every Pat Haden who successfully handles the academic and athletic load with a high degree of perspective, 300 Joe Smith's go to school only because the building happens to be located between the parking lot and the practice field.

All along, we have sensed that the main differences between the guys who block and tackle for good old State U. and the guys who block and tackle for the Rams have a heavier beard to shave in the morning and a heavier check to pick up on payday.

BUT TO SWALLOW a situation such as the CFA is attempting to shove down our throats, to swallow the weak excuses of the NCAA over its inability to compromise, and to swallow the ongoing money-rules-all tactics of the TV networks may be a bit difficult.

The sports-following public is more of a sleeping giant than the CFA, NCAA and the networks choose to admit or recognize. The baseball strike left wounds with many fans that may never heal, and the knee-jerk, back-to-the-game reaction that baseball expected of fans has not quite been that knee-jerk.

A fan, already tired of the baseball hassle, may go past the toleration point when he is told that he cannot see USC play Notre Dame on TV because of the CFA-NCAA hassle; or that his school's track team is not eligible to compete for an NCAA title because of the same hassle.

JUST AS THE people who administer baseball have been their own worst enemy, so too might the people be who administer college athletics.

Thankfully, there is a fail-safe. CFA members who voted in Atlanta Friday may change their minds and vote in a scheduled session Sept. 10.

Although it must be assumed that those voting Friday — mostly athletic dirctors — had detailed conversations with key faculty personnel such as school presidents, it also must be assumed that the reaction to Friday's vote will prompt deeper thinking by higher authorities.

Ideally, these higher authorities will realize that, as currently constituted, the CFA plan represents one more sellout to TV, one more sellout of the ideal that college athletes are really students, and one more sellout to today's trend in sports. Greed.

12-foot putts bury Jan Stephenson

Daniel hits golf jackpot

SHAKER HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — Beth Daniel may own her second straight World Championship of Women's Golf title and a record $50,000 payday for the sport, but she believes the mental aspect of her game could use some polishing.

"I still don't have the confidence. It was obvious coming down the stretch. I hit some bad shots. But I just kept faith in myself," Daniel said Sunday after her closing 71 gave her a total of 284 and a one-shot margin over runnerup Jan Stephenson.

Daniel's errant shots came on the 13th and 14th holes. Her approaches landed in bunkers and led to bogeys, temporarily costing her a share of the lead with Stepenson.

HER FAITH paid off on the next hole, however. She sank a 50-foot putt for a birdie that regained her a share of the lead. A two-foot putt for another birdie at 17 clinched the victory.

A year ago Daniel collected $46,500 with her third straight victory in the first year of this elite tournament of 12 golfers. "I had so much confidence then. I thought I was unbeatable. In golf, you don't reach that plateau very often. This year, I'm not nearly there," she said.

STEPHENSON MUFFED an excellent chance to win her second straight tournament. She missed three birdie putts of 12 feet or less and another from 25 feet on the last four holes.

"Those last holes I stroked the ball on the line I read. I guess they weren't meant to go in. I shouldn't be as disappointed as I am. I feel I got punished," said Stephenson, who earned $26,000 with a final-round 71.

Stephenson said she was not surprised by Daniel's victory.

"She's just got so much talent. I knew it was a matter of time before she won again," said Stephenson. "She has one of the best putting strokes. She never loses her rhythm under pressure."

A shaken Donna Caponi, the leader or co-leader after each of the first three rounds, thought the length of this 6,225-yard Shaker Heights Country Club course was the difference. Caponi shot a 75 for a 288 total and $17,000 that left her $479 shy of the $1 million career earnings mark.

"I'VE SAID ALL ALONG that this course favored the long hitters. She (Daniel) had the advantage. Unfortunately, I'm not long enough to put pressure on her," said Caponi, wiping tears from her eyes.

JoAnne Carner broke the women's course record with a 6-under-par 66 that lifted her into a fourth-place tie with Kathy Whitworth at 289.

Whitworth, the LPGA's only career millionaire, closed with 70.

Sally Little of South Africa had 75 for a 90, Pat Bradley closed with a 72 for a 291 to tie Amy Alcott, who carded a closing 69. Nancy Lopez Melton also carded a 69, but finished nine shots behind Daniel. Jane Blalock closed with a 74 or 299, Jenny Lee Smith of Great Britain had 74 for a 302, and amateur Juli Simpson Inkster had was at 303 following a 79.

FRIDAY—El Paso vs. Midland 7:30 p.m., San Diego Chicken, final home game.

With the red tail lights of the second half Texas League West pennant disappearing into the distance, the Midland Cubs open a five-game homestand at Cubs Stadium tonight against El Paso, still hopeful that something can be rescued from the season.

Amarillo's Gold Sox completed a seven-out-of-eight torpedoing of the Cubs with a 2-0 win Sunday afternoon, giving Midland a 2-11 record for the El Paso-Amarillo swing.

IF THERE'S a prayer left, it's that San Antonio can cool off the red hot Gold Sox, winners of 16 of their last 20. But even that won't be enough. The Cubs would have to catch fire against the Diablos and carry it through the season's final series at San Antonio.

Stranger things have happened, but not the way the Cubs have been swinging the bat, squandering perhaps the best pitching the club has received all year.

On the road trip, Midland scored four runs or less in nine of the 13 games. Midland pitchers held the opposition to five runs or less in 10 games. In five of the games, Cub opponents scored three runs or less. Six of the last seven losses have been by two runs or less.

Sunday's game was typical of what Manager George Enright has been suffering through. Lefthander Craig Lefferts, who has completed four of his last five games, was a route-going loser when the Cubs could muster only three hits off Troy Dixon, 8-12.

BOTH THE Gold Sox runs came after two were out in the sixth. Lefferts walked Dan Gausepohl, who stole second and rode home on Terry Tingley's triple to left. Aaron Cain then singled to center for the insurance tally.

That was all the help Dixon required. The Cubs only threat came in the sixth after Dixon had mowed down 11 in a row. Carmelo Martinez walked with one out and raced to third on Jim Tracy's single. Dixon then made his biggest pitch of the day when he fanned Fritz Connally and Randy LaVigne then lined out to center.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Dixon complete game was Amarillo's 60th...Of the Cubs' 11 road losses this trip, five were by one run, two by two runs...Thursday will be 25-cent Beer Night while the San Diego Chicken will be here for Friday's final home game of the season...Before the last trip, Midland was 11-5 on the road the second half, after a 10-27 road record the first half...

Tigers streak to 9th in row

By Associated Press

Rick Peters' ninth-inning pinch-single off the glove of first baseman Bill Stein scored Steve Kemp from second base Sunday to give the Detroit Tigers their ninth straight victory, 5-4, over the Texas Rangers.

Texas went into the bottom of the ninth with a 4-3 lead, but Lynn Jones opened the inning by tying the game with a homer off Rangers starter Jon Matlack.

Kemp greeted reliever Jim Kern, 1-2, with a single, took second on a bunt and scored on Peters' hit off Steve Comer, the Rangers' third pitcher of the inning.

The victory maintained Detroit's two-game lead over Milwaukee in the American League East with a 10-3 record.

In other AL games, Greg Luzinski led Chicago's 21-hit attack with a three-run homer and pinch-hitter Bob Molinaro slammed a two-run shot as the White Sox defeated Toronto 13-2.

Tony Perez's pinch-hit bases-loaded single carried the Boston Red Sox to a 7-5 victory over the Seattle Mariners. The RBIs were Perez's first since May 25 and it was his first game-winning RBI of the season.

LARRY MILBOURNE hit an inside-the-park home run off Willie Wilson's head, Graig Nettles and Oscar Gamble belted over-the-fence homers and Ron Guidry continued his scoreless "Second Season" pitching as the New York Yankees pounded the Kansas City Royals 8-0. Giudry, 8-3, scattered five hits in seven innings to win his third start since the season resumed, hurling 18 1-3 shutout innings.

Ted Simmons slammed a three-run homer and Paul Molitor and Robin Yount hit bases-empty shots to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to an 8-5 victory over the slumping Minnesota Twins, who have lost eight of their last nine games.

Right-hander John Denny allowed three hits in seven innings and Andre Thornton hit a two-run homer as the Cleveland Indians beat the California Angels 6-3.

Two-run homers by Gary Roenicke, Ken Singleton and Eddie Murray powered the Baltimore Orioles past the Oakland A's 7-4.

IN THE National League, rookie outfielder Brett Butler drove in the go-ahead run on a sixth-inning infield grounder, then threw out Montreal's potential tying run at the plate in the seventh as the Atlanta Braves edged the Expos 2-1.

Mike Schmidt hit a third-inning grand slam homer and Steve Carlton and Tug McGraw combined for a three-hitter as Philadelphia beat the Houston Astros 6-0, the Phillies' third straight victory.

Rod Scurry blanked San Diego on five hits for eight innings and Phil Garner drove in three runs to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 5-2 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Bob Bailor knocked in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the 10th inning, then made a leaping, over-the-shoulder catch in left field to end the game as the New York Mets edged the Cincinnati Reds 3-2.

Keith Hernanndez had four hits, including a homer and a double, and scored three runs to pace a 20-hit attack as the St.Louis Cardinals defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 11-7.

LEON DURHAM drew a bases-loaded walk from Gary Lavelle on a 3-2 pitch with two outs in the ninth inning to force Ivan DeJesus home with the winning run, giving the Chicago Cubs a 6-5 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Charlies tie baseball mark

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Charleston Charlies accomplished a baseball rarity Sunday, hitting three sacrifice flies in one inning en route to an 11-2 victory over the Tidewater Tides in the first game of an International League doubleheader.

Special Effort is special horse

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. —An undefeated colt who stands a big chance of winning the Quarter Horse Triple Crown, Special Effort, has been syndicated for $15 million.

The deal makes the Special Effort syndication the biggest in quarter horse history, so far as horses in training are concerned. The industry's all-time syndication record was the $30 million package on the sire, Easy Jet.

The announcement was made by Don Tyner, a thoroughbred and quarter horse agent of Oklahoma City. Tyner put the syndication package together for both Easy Jet and Special Effort.

Special Effort is owned presently by Dan and Jolene Urschel of Canadian, Texas.

The syndication started with an invitational list of 100 names, the most prominent owners in the quarter horse industry. With only one or two exceptions, every person on the list bought into the syndicate, he said.

Tyner and his crew signed up all shareholders in only nine hours.

Special Effort, with only one out to his record (a victory at Goliad, Texas), shipped to Ruidoso Downs at the start of the season as the property of Allen Taylor of Beeville, Texas, and Mrs. Inken Willis of San Antonio, Texas.

The colt set the top qualifying time for the $787,350 Kansas Futurity, the first leg of the Triple Crown.

On the eve of the Kansas Futurity, Special Effort was purchased by the Urschels for $1 million. Special Effort won the Kansas Futurity by a length, then came back to set the top qualifying time for the Rainbow Futurity, the second leg of the Triple Crown.

Special Effort then won the Rainbow by 1 1-2 lengths, earning $232,500 of the gross purse of $567,389. Only one other horse, Tiny's Gay (1974), has won the first two legs of the Triple Crown.

On Aug. 13, Special Effort boomed to a 5 3-4 length win in the first round of the All-American Futurity trials, and that triumph put momentum into the idea of a syndication deal prior to the All-American.

Each share in the syndicate cost $100,000. There are 150 shares. A hundred were sold, and fifty were retained by the Urschels. The terms of each share were $10,000 down, $10,000 on Dec.15, and $20,000 per year for four years, plus annual interest of 14 percent.

Each share is worth one breeding per season to Special Effort. The syndicate members do not share in any of the colt's track winnings.

Tyner indicated the Urschels plan to race the colt at least through next summer, aiming at the three major three-year-old races — the Kansas Derby, the Rainbow Derby and the All-American Derby.

Brother-in-law arrested in kidnapping

DALLAS (AP) — Police have arrested the brother-in-law of a 12-year-old girl who says she was held captive in his attic for seven weeks and raped daily at gunpoint while her efforts to summon help by banging on the floor went unheeded.

The man allegedly told his wife — the girl's sister — that he noise she heard was made by a cat, but she said she became convinced someone was in the attic. The woman, who had been hospitalized most of the time with a troubled pregnancy, also claimed she was held prisoner by her husband for several days after returning home from giving birth.

Charles Grayson, 21, was arrested at his fater's home Sunday night and held without bail, said police Sgt. William Huffman. Police were seeking a second suspect early today. They would not name the young girl or the second suspect.

Huffman said aggravated rape charges were being prepared and that Grayson, who denied the charges, would be arraigned in municipal court today.

Police found the girl in the attic of Grayson's house Saturday, 20 pounds lighter and still wearing the green and whitr nightgown she wore when she disappeared June 26.

"She's still kind of weak, but she's doing a little better," said the girl's mother, who was not identified. "She can't sleep, though. She just jumps when anybody comes into the house. It'll be a long time before she stop being so jittery."

The girl told police in a signed affidavit Sunday that she had been raped daily at gunpoint.

YOU'VE GOT TO GET TURNED AROUND

So Jesus used this illustration: "If you had a hundred sheep and one of them strayed away and was lost in the wilderness, wouldn't you leave the ninety-nine others to go and search for the lost one until you found it? And then you would joyfully carry it home on your shoulders. When you arrived you would call together your friends and neighbors to rejoice with you because your lost sheep was found. Well, in the same way heaven will be happier over one lost sinner who returns to God than over ninety-nine others who haven't strayed away! Or take another illustration: A woman has ten valuable silver coins and loses one. Won't she light a lamp and look in every corner of the house and sweep every nook and cranny until she finds it? And then won't she call in her friends and neighbors to rejoice with her? In the same way there is joy in the presence of the angels of God when one sinner repents." (Luke 15:3-10)

Now change your mind and attitude to God and turn to him so he can cleanse away your sins and send you wonderful times of refreshment from the presence of the Lord and send Jesus your Messiah back to you again. (Acts 3:19-20)

I have had one message for Jews and Gentiles alike - the necessity of turning from sin to God through faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. (Acts 20:21)

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Bulimic patients eat compulsively

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard of people who refuse to eat to the point where they have to be hospitalized, but my daughter has written me about a reverse situation. One of the girls she rooms with in college goes on food binges where she eats unbelievably large amounts of food. To top it off, she will then often cause herself to vomit. Can you explain what's involved in this condition? I assume that people who act this way are emotionally disturbed, but couldn't such behavior cause serious physical problems as well? — Mrs. B.H., Coatesville, Pa.

Dear Mrs. H.: The type of behavior you describe is called bulimia, an abnormal increase in the sensation of hunger. Some doctors have termed it an addiction. The overwhelming majority of these patients are female, either adolescents or young adults, white, and upper-middle class in background.

Unlike my anorexic patients who may be extremely thin, my bulimic patients are normal or near-normal in weight. Their eating is compulsive, and the amount of food they can consume in a relatively brief period of time is extraordinary. Much of what they eat consists of carbohydrates or junk food. Since such a large intake of food over a short period of time creates discomfort, patients are prompted to induce vomiting, take laxatives, or use enemas in order to relieve themselves.

This practice can have a number of serious consequences, including impaired metabolism, potassium deficiency, and fluid imbalance. The development of ulcers is another possibility. I would hope your daughter's roommate is receiving counseling for this very distressing disorder.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband has had pneumonia a few times. He used to smoke three packs of cigarettes a day, but he gave that up over a year ago. His only bad habit, if you want to call it that, is that he drinks a little too much. Would you have any advice for him? — Mrs. B.Y., Macon, GA

Dear Mrs. Y.: The first suggestion is that your husband place himself in the hands of a competent physician if he has not already done so. Anyone suffering repeated bouts of pneumonia should be getting expert medical care.

Second, your husband should be commended for overcoming a serious smoking habit, and should be encouraged to do the same with his drinking. One study, by Dr. Michael D. Lebowitz, of the Arizona Health Sciences Center, has shown that the use of alcohol, even by former smokers, aggravates respiratory problems.

While the combination of heavy smoking and heavy drinking is the most dangerous, heavy drinking alone is still a serious risk factor. Since your husband had the willpower to break the smoking habit, possibly he can do the same with his drinking.

Dear Dr. Solomon: The earlier amblyopia (vision problem) is identified, the more responsive it is to treatment. Since amblyopia can be detected in infancy as well as in verbal children, it can also be treated in infancy. — Linda K. Angell, M.D., Houston, Texas.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Reye's syndrome, like school, will soon be back 'in season'

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Later this year, when school is back in session and the weather turns cold, kids will start coming down with sniffles — colds, maybe flu or the chicken pox. The usual litany of childhood.

Some children, however, will get much sicker. And some of them will die — from Reye's syndrome, a mysterious illness that's recognized as a reportable disease in only 18 states despite its being among the 10 leading causes of death in children aged 1 to 10.

The cause and cure are unknown, and until recently, little study was made of Reye's syndrome. But today, the new National Reye's Syndrome Foundation Research Laboratory opens officially at Ohio State University.

Scientists at the laboratory say they're prepared for an anticipated influx of Reye's cases this fall. "We're gearing up and waiting. We're getting ready," said Dr. Brian Andreson, the laboratory's director and a professor of medicine who specializes in chemicals and diagnosis.

The facility is funded by Ohio State's College of Medicine and the National Reye's Syndrome Foundation, based in the northwestern Ohio town of Bryan. The foundation was established by John and Terri Freudenberger in 1974, a year after their 5-year-old daughter died of Reye's syndrome.

Reye's syndrome was first identified in the United States in the mid-1960s. "You could speculate many things, whether a new chemical was made industrially or whether a new virus mutant strain predisposed some children," Andreson said.

"The problem...is that it doesn't have the priority that a lot of other diseases have," Mrs. Freudenberger said of research efforts to date.

Since the 60s, thousands of Americans under age 18 have contracted Reye's syndrome, as many as 517 last year alone, according to Dr. David Morens of the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Statistics show that slightly more than one person in every 200,000 up to age 18 can contract the non-contagious disease, primarily during colder months when viruses are more rampant and children are back in school, Andreson sad.

That was the case in the winter of 1979-80, when influenza swept the country and Reye's became a dreaded threat to families with young children.

According to Andreson, cases of Reye's syndrome are "initiated by some sort of sniffles...or chicken pox."

"Somthing happens in that initial infection that sets these particular children up for future problems, and these future problems occur within days," he said. "They appear well from the initial cold or flu, then the next week it hits again. This time, it's really devastating.

"If nothing is done for Reye's syndrome...some get very disabled, go into a coma, then die." Symptoms include uncontrollable vomiting, listlessness, personality change and, in the cases of more seriously afflicted victims, liver and brain troubles.

Egypt near $1 billion annual market for farm goods

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egypt probably will become a $1 billion annual market for U.S. farm commodities within two years at the rate it is going, an Agriculture Department analyst says.

James E. Ross of the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, a former U.S. agricultural attache in Cairo, said farm exports climbed to $770 million last year, a six-fold increase from $123 million in 1973.

Concessional sales of U.S. farm products under the Food for Peace program and disbursements by the

AGRICULTURE

U.S. Agency for International Development have accounted for much of the increase, "but commercial sales also have been significant, amounting to more than $300 million in 1980," Ross said.

Ross' report was included in a new issue of "Foreign Agriculture," published monthly by his agency.

Egypt's entry into what is sometimes called "the billion-dollar club" of top foreign buyers probably would boost membership to an even dozen or possibly more, assuming exports will continue to increase generally.

The others and the value of U.S. farm products bought last year include: Japan, $6.1 billion; The Netherlands, $3.4 billion; Mexico, $2.5 billion; China, $2.2 billion; Canada, $1.85 billion; West Germany, $1.83 billion; South Korea, $1.8 billion; Spain, $1.13 billion; Taiwan, $1.1 billion; Italy, $1.09 billion, and the Soviet Union, $1.05 billion.

"As Egypt's private sector develops — fostered by the Egyptian government's open-door policy — and as that government's purchasing power increase as, sales of U.S. processed food and bulk agricultural products will expand further," the report said.

"Factors affecting U.S. concessional sales of food to Egypt largely are political and are intertwined with American overall Middle East policy," it said. "Political factors also have an impact on non-concessional sales, but so do a myriad of others."

Among the other factors are Egypt's limited area of useable farmland, water for irrigation and population growth.

"With a continued growth rate of 3 percent (a year), Egypt's population could increase from its present level of 43 million to approximately 80 million within the next 20 years," the report said.

Second California county quarantined in medfly fight

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A second agricultural county faces quarantine and the sale of one of its major crops is in jeopardy today as experts try to check the spread of Mediterranean fruit flies.

Federal and state experts planned to enlarge a zone of aerial pesticide spraying by at least 150 square miles.

An aerially sprayed zone of 700 square miles will probably grow by at least 150 to 200 square miles this week as a chunk of farm-rich San Benito County is added, Bill Pope of the Medfly Eradication Project announced Sunday. A larger portion of that county, the sixth county known to harbor fertile medflies, will be placed under quarantine.

USDA already has quarantined Alameda, Santa Clara and San Mateo counties and portions of Santa Cruz and Stanislaus counties. The designation prohibits removal of any of more than 200 medfly-host fruits and vegetables without fumigation or other treatment.

Stanislaus County is the west central edge of the Central Valley, California's agriculturl heart.

The fumigaton stipulation poses a particular problem for San Benito farmers who are ready to harvest bell peppers, a $5.5 million crop with a world-wide market. Bell peppers spoil too quickly for marketing when fumigated, farm spokesmen say.

An estimated $4.7 billion in California crops can host the medfly — more than a third of the state's $14 billion-a-year agriculture industry.

A fertile female medfly was discovered in a walnut orchard trap four miles northeast of Hollister in San Benito County over the weekend.

Much of the county's bell pepper crop grows within three or four miles of the medfly find, said Jack Edmondson, San Benito County agriculture commissioner.

As fast as aircraft pilots spray pesticide over infested areas, the blue-eyed fly seems to crop up in outlying regions. Experts say the pest flies only about one mile in its lifetime so the spreading plague is evidently carried by motorists hauling host produce.

Among the California counties under quarantine in an effort to halt medfly infestation are San Mateo, Santa Clara, Alameda and portions of Santa Cruz and Stanislaus.

Ruling due this week on fumigation of California produce entering state

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. District Judge Patrick Higginbotham has promised to rule this week on Texas' request to have incoming California fruits and produce fumigated to quash the spread of the Mediterranean fruit fly.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown asked the judge either to lift an earlier order barring Texas from restricting California produce shipments or direct the federal government to expand its own California medfly quarantine.

Higgonbotham said he would announce his decision Tuesday morning.

Oil company profits reported down slightly during first half of 1981

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Oil company profits were down slightly in the first half of 1981 compared with the same period in 1980, but second-quarter income was up over the same quarter last year, says a well-known petroleum industry magazine.

Decontrol of crude oil prices early in the year boosted income from exploration and production operations, the Tulsa-base Oil and Gas Journal said in its Aug. 24 edition. But the windfall profits tax, which wasn't in effect for the first two months of last year, partly offset those gains, according to the magazine.

"Products prices increased, too, but not enough for refiners to recover increased costs of crude oil, and demand continued to sag," the Journal reported.

"Early reports from 27 of the country's largest oil companies show profits down by 4.5 percent during the first 6 months of the year," the journal said.

However, second-quarter net income for the sample group was 8.1 percent above net income for the same quarter of 1980, according to the magazine.

The publication said profits reported by the group of companies totaled $15.2 billion in the first half — $7.6 billion in the second quarter.

Companies in the group ranged from Exxon Corp., with first-half earnings of $3.4 billion, to Clark Oil and Refining Corp., with earnings of $8.5 million through June, the weekly magazine said.

The Journal forecast that the group's profits for 1981 would increase by 2.8 percent from 1980 levels, to about $31 billion.

The increasing strength of the dollar created foreign currency gains for most companies with major oversea operations, but it reduced profits for foreign affiliates of some companies, the magazine said.

"High crude prices and weak products demand contined to sqeeze refining operations during the first 6 months of 1981," the Journal said. "Composite refiner acquisition cost of crude in the U.S. was 17 percent above its level in the comparable 1980 period.

"And refineries operated at less than 70 percent of capacity because of slack demand, which increased unit product costs."

The magazine said 14 companies reporting expenditures in its survey had outlays through June 1980 of $21.4 billion 47 percent more than expenditures in the first half of 1980, "showing that company mangers remain optimistic about the industry's prospects."

Energy conference comes up with plan, no money

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Although its plan is big and its finances nil, the first U.N. Conference on New and Renewable Energy Sources will have "a tremedous impact in the long term," the conference secretary-general says.

"I am satisfied that the elements are there to move ahead," the secretary, Uruguayan economist Enrique Iglesias, said after two weeks of meetings ended Friday.

Industrialized nations and international institutions are being asked to come up with billions of dollars to back the plan to end world dependence on oil and fossil fuels.

Several Third World delegates were not happy, however saying that without guaranteed money or a permanent coordinating body, the program of action was a hollow statement. "It's the Nairobi plan of inaction," said one.

Delegates from 125 countries set up a United Nations commitee with one-year lifespan to launch the program, an appealed to industrialized nations and international institutions to expand financing for alternative energy.

At the end of the year, the U.N. General Assembly will decide whether to establish a permanent committee.

"I'm very, very thrilled at the outcome," said James Stromayer, the U.S representative to the conference. "The notion that this conference should endow renewable energy with a large amount of money is not a legitimate question," he added.

The developing nations won a small victory by getting the conference to urge "all interested parties" to consider the establishment of an energy affiliate of the World Bank. The Eropean Common Market, the Scandinavian countries, Canada and some of the industrialized nations are backing creation of a special World Bank energy fund.

Washington strongly opposes a new energy affiliate and Stromayer entered a reservation after the plan of action was adopted be a consensus vote. He told a news conference the United States supports an expansion of energy lending by the World Bank, but not a new fund.

"If the Americans stand on that position against the World Bank affiliate, the Nairobi plan of action cannot progress," said Manuel Perez Guerrero of Venezuela, had of the Group of 77 representing about 120 Third World countries.

'This conference is not only about one institution and one fund," Iglesias said. "The world is in a bad financial mood. It is concerned with more efficiency than with more funding. I prefer firm (bilateral) commitments rater than a target that would not be achieved."

A communique on financing, worked out in round-the-clock negotiations, quoted studies by World Bank experts who said annual energy investment needs in the developing world between 1981 and 1985 will be about $54 billion, including "a substantial and growing proportion" for alternative energy sources.

The conference concluded, however, that Third World countries will continue to bear the main financial responsibility for their own development.

Residents downwind from test site check radiation

SALTLAKE CITY (AP) — Twenty years of exploding nuclear devices near here — causing radioactive fallout across four Southwestern states — have filled residents with mistrust in the federal government.

Now, the Department of Energy has launched a public relations effort in which residents downwind from the Nevada Test Site will measure radation levls themselves.

Aove-ground nuclear tests were banned in 1962, but thee is skepticism bout the government's insistence that radiation from continuing undergound testing is not leaking into the atmosphere.

Fiften residets of Utah, Nevada, Arizona and California communities that ring the est site last week completed a two-week training course at the University of Utah in measuring radiation.

The trainees now return to their desert towns to man small alumnum stations built o detect the level of radiation coming from the test site, said the course's instructor, Dr. Gary Sandquist, director of the university's Nuclear Engineering Department.

However, people judged by the government to be especally bittr about nuclear testing were not chosen because ofthe possiility th equipment could be adjusted to give false readings, Sandquist said. He said people who had a onnection to the testing site also were avoided.

"The Environmental Protection Agencyhad developed a similar program after Three Mile Island," Sandquist said. "People were not believing the data on the nuclear plant from Washington, and some people said, 'Look, let us get our own data.'

"It had a tremendus impact on the people around Three Mile Island. It was so successful that it's been picked up in Nevad."

At least one community leader as cautious about program.

"It's the first effort the government has made to upgrade its system," said Jack Sawyrs, mayor of Cedar City, Utah. "I wonder how much of it is scientific and how much is display.

"I think the people who have had family members die will say it is too little, too late," Sawyers said. "But for other people's view of the government now, yes, it will be a good thing"

Most of the owns contain residents wholived there between 1951 and the end of the Atomic EnergyCommissio's 93 nuclear test that sent fallout drifting in a wide arc across parts of southern Utah, Nevada and northern Arizona.

About 1,000 o those residents have fild a $500 million lawsuit gainst the fedeal government, claiming a high incidence of leukemia, cancer, birth defects and other illnesses were cased by the radioactive fallout.

Ranchrs have claimed in a lawsut that the fallout killed thousands of their sheep.

The main role of the stations will be ublic relations, although they will give the Department of Energy information on radiatio, said Jack Hepple, a St. George, Utah school teacher trained to man a station there.

"They're hoping to gain some public trust back," Heppler said. "It could do a tremendous thing in restoring people's confidence."

The stations will be set up wherever a community decides it wants them,Sandquist said. Operators will b paid $150 to $200 a moth.

"They usually tried to get people in whom the other residents had confidence," Sandquist said. "Many of them are very long-term rsidents. Some of them semed to be a little antagonistic at first, but none seem to be terribl hostile to the goverment."

The stations will supplement small, unmanned DOE radiation detectors that have been used for two decades.

Dallas judge investigated by FBI

DALLAS (AP) — The FBI is investigating an allegation that a Fort Worth district judge solicited a $10,000 bribe from an employee of Rex Cauble, a Denton rancher recently indicted on drug racketeering charges, a Dallas newspaper reported Sunday. That allegation is only one part of he FBI's nvestigation of the financial relationship beween Judge Byron Matthes and Cauble, the Dalls Morning News said in copyright story.

Matthews, recently empowered to authorize wiretaps in state drug cases, denied the allegation in an interview with The Dallas Morning News. But he acknowledged that the FBI and a Beaumont-based federal grand jury have questioned him about the alleged bribe.

A federal grand jury in Tyler indicted Cauble Aug. 7 on 10 counts of conspiracy and racketeering. The indictment alleges Cauble financed six shipments of mariquana totaling 47,000 pounds from Colombia to several ports along the Texas and Georgia coastlines. The shipments allegedly occured between January 1977 and November 1978.

If Cauble is convicted, The News said, as many as 13 of his business — including two in which Matthews was a participant — could be seized under federal racketeering laws.

Matthews acknowledged to The News that he has received more than $700,000 in loans and loan guarantees from Cauble. The judge told The News he repaid some of the loans, but only by using other loans from Cauble and never with funds of his own.

Matthews said he did not know he was a target in a federal investigation.

"As a matter of fact, I asked them (federal investigators) and they said, 'Absolutely not,'" he said.

Matthews also said he was unaware of a grand ury subpoena that requests all of Matthew's banking records at Fort Woth's Ridglea Bank.

Matthews said other financial records of his have already been subpenaed — along with Cauble's — from the Western State Bank of Denton. Cauble owns the Denton bank.

Matthews, 69, was named Aug. 1 by Judge John F. Onion of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals as one of nine judges designated under a new state law to review wiretap requests in Texas drug cases.

Matthews has been a state district court judge since 1962. He has announced plans to retire on Oct. 31.

Study reports smaller prisons, private cells cut down violence

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — At a time when the Reagan administration wants to put more criminals behind bars, a new federally financed study says private cells and smaller prisons would curb rising inmate violence.

The study, done for the Justice Department's National Institute of Justice, found that long-term inmates of overcrowded prisons die, are killed, commit suicide, become ill and create disciplinry problems more freqently than those confined in private cells of at least 50 square feet. The study by the Universiy of Texas at Arlington was released Sunday.

In addition, large prisons produce much more severe physical and psychological ill effects than small institutions, the researchers said.

The study concluded that the ideal prison for avoiding these problems would house about 500 inmates in single rooms or cubicles.

The report comes in a year in which violence has erupted in state prisons in Florida, Hawaii, Michigan, Nevada, New Jersey and New York and a year after 33 inmates were killed in a New Mexico prison riot. Twenty-four state prison systems are so overcrowded they have been ruled in violation of constitutional guarantees against cruel and unusual punishment.

But the Supreme Court ruled earlier this year, in a case involving Ohio prisons, that it is not automatically unconstitutional to put two prisoners in a cell designed for one.

Despite sharp fedral budget cuts, Attorney General William French Smith's task force on vioentvcrime recommended last week that the federal government provide $2 billion in aid to help build state prisons over the next four years.

Illinois Gov. James Thompson, the panel's co-chairman, identified this recommendation as 'the lynchpin" of the group's proposals, most of which were aimed at putting more violent crminals behind bars.

The panel recommended that the new prisons house no more tha 750 inmates rather than the thousands often locked in old-style, three-tered penitentiaries.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., has proposed spending $6.5 billion over seven years on prisons and other criminal justice facilities.

The study was based on several years of data from the Oklahoma and Texas prison systems. The Texas system, now the nation's largest with more than 31,000prisoners, until recently had up to 3,000 inmates who did not have beds to sleep on.

Data also was collected on 1,400 prisoners in six federal prisons — Atlanta, an old-style penitentiary; Danbury, Conn.; El Reno, Okla., and La Tuna, Fort Worth and Texarkana in Texas.

Between 1968 and 1978, the Texas inmate population nearly doubled while bed space increased only 30 percent. The study found that the rate of violent deaths, suicides and disciplinary problems rose more sharply than the inmate population, and that the problem was greater in larger prions.

Between 1973 and 1976, the Oklahoma inmate population dropped, and the study found an even-greater percentage drop in the rates of violent death.

The study said most inmates functioned better in single cells with fewer square feet per person than they did in two-man cells or dormitories where they had more square feet pr person.

"Double-occupant housing is a common response to increases in prison population," the study aid. "We found that double cells ... had measurably greater negative effects than single-unit housing."

The study found no detrimental effects for an inmate after confinement in a least 50 square feet of private space.

During the Carter administration, the Justice Department set a standard for federal prisons of at least 60 square feet per inmate in single cells. Federal officials say 70 percent of prison cells — virtually all of them in state facilities — are more crowded than the federal standard, and they estimate it would cost $10 billion to bring them to that standard.

The Carter Justice Department said it would not use its statutory authority to sue state prison systems so long as they were moving toward meeting the federal standards.

But in the Reagan administration, Smith has said the government will only sue to enforce constitutional miimum standards.
