Bush signs batch of bills

Measures include insurance-rate rollback, budget reduction

■ Governor beats deadline to act on remaining legislation at close of 1995 Legislature.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Gov. George W. Bush closed out the 1995 Legislature on Saturday by signing a last batch of legislation, including one to roll back insurance rates, and by removing about $14 million from the state budget.

Facing a deadline today to sign or veto all remaining legislation from the session, Bush signed more than 200 bills Saturday.

Among them was a bill mandating lower insurance premiums.

Supporters, who herald the law as a coup for consumers, say liability insurance costs will fall because of the state's sweeping tort reform laws and that the savings should be passed on to consumers.

Under the new law, Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer will have the power to set consumer premium rollbacks, starting Jan. 1. Without such action, automatic cuts will occur.

Opponents of the bill agreed that consumers should see savings, but they contended it is too early to tell what effect the civil justice reforms will have.

"Insurance is a highly competitive business, and the forces of the marketplace will result in rate adjustments when the impact of tort reform becomes apparent," said Jerry Johns, president of the Southwestern Insurance Information Service.

Bush also signed bills to bar the state from factoring race and ethnicity into adoption decisions and require a criminal background check on those seeking to adopt children.

The first bill prohibits state agencies and child placement agencies from presuming that a child would be better off with a family of its race or ethnicity. In addition, it forbids agencies from denying or delaying an adoption so that families of the same race or ethnicity can be sought.

The bill also sets up similar standards for foster-care placement.

The latter bill requires background checks on prospective adoptive parents and on both parties in a child-custody battle.

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia — In a diplomatic slap, Western leaders lectured Boris Yeltsin face-to-face Saturday to stop Russia's bloody war in Chechnya. Writing awards

Reporter-Telegram staff writer Tonie Miller-Uzzel is to receive two state awards from the 1994-95 American Cancer Society's 14th Annual Texas Media Awards program for excellence in cancer coverage. Ms. Miller-Uzzel took top honors among community newspapers in both news and opinion categories. She won the news category for a story on a local program that helped provide mammograms to underprivileged women. The opinion piece was a first-person account of Ms. Miller-Uzzel's joys of being a cancer survivor and of the beginning of motherhood after an unexpected pregnancy. The winners were selected by a panel of communicators and ACS volunteers, who rated each entry based on its accuracy, originality and effectiveness. The American Cancer Society's Texas Division Inc. established the Texas Media Awards to reward good writing about cancer as a disease, the ways it is treated, the ways it is detected and the effects it has on the lives of the people it touches. Ms. Miller-Uzzel will receive her awards at an upcoming Midland ACS board meeting.

City plunges ahead on its plan for pool

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The city is moving forward with plans to construct a new community swimming pool in time for next summer. The planned pool — with features more attractive to youngsters — will replace two smaller pools built about 40 years ago.

"It's not just going to be a big hole filled with water. It's going to have features," said Assistant City Manager Rick Menchaca.

City officials are looking at building a zero-depth pool — similar to a shore line from zero depth to 4 feet — and possibly having a circular slide and one-meter diving board in a deeper area.

"Kids don't go necessarily to swim but to play in the water," Menchaca said.

A child dives into Ulmer Park pool, one of three across the city where residents can cool off.

The two neighborhood pools slated for closure — because of problems associated with aging — have shown dwindling attendance in recent years. On average, only about five to 15 youngsters use the Washington Park pool, daily, while about 50 to 100 youngsters visit the Ulmer Park pool.

A survey of some other cities with pools revealed an increased attendance with feature-oriented pools, local officials said.

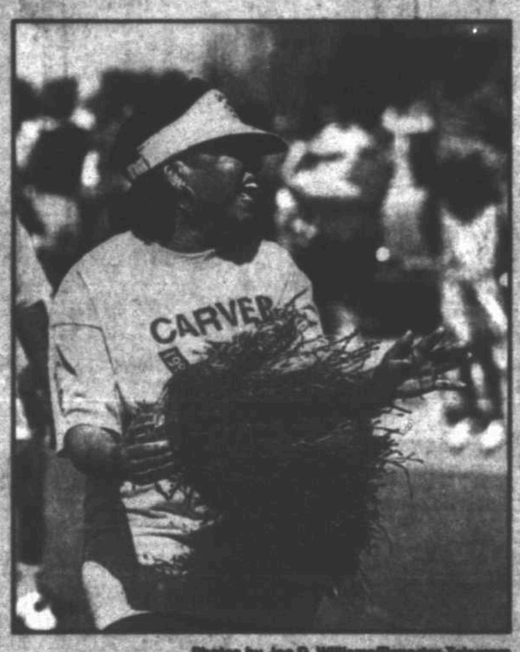

"I don't have any question in my mind that will make a tremendous difference," said Brad Swendig, swim coach at Mabee Aquatics Center, which manages the city's three pools.

Once the new pool opens next year, it will complement another community pool: Doug Russell Pool, which attracts about 400 people daily.

After the planned pool begins serving the public, city officials will access the

Juneteenth parade turns streets into celebration

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Hundreds of Midlanders lined Lamesa Road Saturday morning to watch the Tall City Lions Club's Juneteenth parade in observance of the freedom of African-Americans from slavery in Texas.

Juneteenth commemorates the emancipation of black slaves in Texas on June 19, 1865. A community celebration of Juneteenth has been staged in Midland for the past 23 years.

This year's events at Washington Park will wrap up today with an awards ceremony and recognition of graduating seniors and retiring teachers.

Other events during the celebration included a food-tasting contest, Juneteenth pageant and Hats on Parade. Saturday's parade kicked off day-long events, including drill team performances, athlete recognition, a talent show and a fashion show and dance.

A Carver school reunion began Friday night and will conclude this morning with a worship service.

Juneteenth is a time for families to gather and appreciate their freedoms, one woman watching the parade said.

Many of the spectators — young and old — remembered the reason behind the festive event. Each interprets Juneteenth to mean something a little different, but along the same lines of freedom.

"It's a time to enjoy the freedom of the black people and it's a time for a bunch of black people getting together and enjoying that freedom and being one

Father's Day comes 14 years late for one dad

By Amanda Covarrubias
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — On the morning of Nov. 11, 1980, on the way to the baby sitter's house, Bill Kennedy and his 3-year-old son David chatted.

"Daddy, are you a bad daddy?" David asked.

"No, I don't think so," Kennedy replied. "Why do you say that?"

"Mommy thinks you're a bad daddy," David said.

In the years that followed, those words would torment him. The next day, his ex-wife, Ann, visited her son at the baby sitter's. The sitter went to the kitchen to answer the telephone, and when she returned, Ann was running out the door, saying, "Call the police if you have to, but I'm taking David."

And then she — and the boy — vanished.

So began Kennedy's search. He hired private eyes who got nowhere. He struggled through the law enforcement bureaucracy. An electrical engineer, he worked 90-hour weeks to divert his mind from the never-ending pain of the loss of his only child.

Fourteen Father's Days came and went without David. But this Sunday will be different — Bill and David plan to be together, celebrating the boy's 15th birthday and seeking to reclaim a relationship that was aborted nearly 15 years ago.

David was an infant when Ann and Bill Kennedy came apart; Bill won sole custody when the boy was less than a year old. He says a family court judge determined that Bill would be the more likely parent to abide by the court's order to let the other parent visit with David.

Ann did not accept the ruling.

She abducted David three times, once for as long as a year. One time, she said she would return only if Bill dropped charges against her and

Organized racism spreads throughout Europe

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Last weekend's slaying of a young black by skinheads rampaging through the streets of racially tolerant Lisbon is a worrying sign of the spread of organized racism across Europe.

European cities, even ones where racial harmony has been the rule for years, are struggling to deal with racist extremism that feeds on the continent's lingering economic troubles and other social tensions.

France, Britain, Belgium, Austria and Germany have all experienced racially motivated violence by organized groups. Racist attacks by individuals also have grown in those and other nations in Europe, and authorities are concerned about the threat of more incidents in the hot summer months ahead.

Alcindo Monteiro, a 27-year-old black Portuguese citizen of Cape Verdean origin, was bludgeoned to death June 11 by a group of 50 skinheads who raced through Lisbon's busy nightlife district, lashing out at any blacks in their path. A dozen people were injured.

The attack, labeled "paramilitary" by Lisbon Mayor Jorge Sampaio, was the city's first case of organized racist assault. It shocked Portuguese who like to consider their capital one of Europe's oldest ethnic melting pots and their country a "land of gentle customs."

President Mario Soares expressed "repugnance at this aggressive, racist assault." Prime Minister Anibal Cavaco Silva condemned the attack as "contrary to our values, traditions and legal order."

But despite such traditions, xenophobia is rising in Portugal. As in the rest of Europe, it is fueled by cutbacks in social welfare and a recession that has brought rising unemployment, deprivation and crime.

A recent survey by the National Defense Institute found that nearly half of Portuguese think there are "too many" blacks and Asians in Portugal. About four of every 10 people polled blamed foreigners for growing unemployment and increasing crime and juvenile delinquency.

"If this is happening here, where there is a tradition of racial tolerance, it's a bad sign for Europe," said Maria Carrilho, a sociologist who organized the survey.

In a sign of the worsening tensions in Portugal, blacks youths retaliated for the killing of Monteiro by beating two groups of whites after his funeral Thursday, an anti-racism group reported.

Across Europe, cities with ethnic minorities have seen racist violence recently:

n At the same time the skinheads rampaged through Lisbon, about 300 Asian youths in Bradford in northern England hurled fire bombs and bricks at police to protest alleged mistreatment of minorities by officers.

n Arson attacks in France fueled fears of an upsurge of unrest in low-income, heavily immigrant suburbs ringing major cities. During a May 1 rally of France's right wing National Front, a group of skinheads pushed a young Moroccan into the Seine River and he drowned.

n Ten people were injured when riots erupted in an immigrant district of Brussels, Belgium, on April 5 after police injured a suspect in a shooting incident.

n A spate of letter bombs mailed by right-wing extremists in Austria spread to Germany, where a black television news reader was targeted.

"World War II ended 50 years ago," said Jose Barros Moura, a Portuguese deputy in the European Parliament. "Who would have thought then that today we would have ethnic cleansing in Bosnia and blacks, Gypsies and Muslims being persecuted in European cities?"

Bosnian government battles to secure advances against Serbs

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Flushed with success after a two-day offensive, government forces battled Saturday to secure ground gained against Serbs near Sarajevo and crack the 38-month encirclement of the city.

The Serbs moved 12 U.N. hostages to Pale, their stronghold outside the capital, amid signs they would be released shortly. French President Jacques Chirac, speaking at the Group of Seven industrialized nations summit in Halifax, Nova Scotia, said Saturday afternoon that the last hostages would probably be free "in the next few hours."

Bosnia's president brushed aside international appeals to stop the fighting. His Serb foes also talked tough, declaring a "state of war" around Sarajevo.

Government troops will "liberate" Sarajevo, Bosnia's Muslim President, Alija Izetbegovic, told state television. He scorned world leaders' calls for fighting to stop.

"I can tell you openly that we don't care much for those appeals," he said. "We are not obliged to care about what the world thinks about this, the world that did nothing for Sarajevo."

AP Laserphoto

A French U.N. peacekeeper escorts a woman and her two children across Sarajevo's "Sniper Alley," Saturday.

He claimed government gains along 60 miles of front lines.

Bosnian army forces, having cut a key Serb supply route southwest of the city, battled Saturday for control of a high hill that would seal their mastery of the road and remove its exposure to Serb guns, said U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Gary Coward.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic denied the government had severed any key Serb supply routes on Friday.

Firefights flared in and around Sarajevo on Saturday after both Serb and government forces raided U.N. weapons collection points overnight.

But nothing matched the intensity of Thursday's or Friday's battles, when the Muslim-led Bosnian army pounded Serb opponents with artillery, missile and infantry assaults. In retaliation, the Serbs turned tanks and artillery on Sarajevo.

"The Bosnian army has made some fairly significant gains around Sarajevo," said U.N. spokesman Chris Gunness.

In some places, the government army narrowed the Serb ring around Sarajevo, said a senior U.N. official, insisting on anonymity. It is now just 2.5 miles wide at its narrowest point west of the U.N.-controlled airport.

"It's certainly the most ambitious, the most complex" operation launched by the government since war erupted in April 1992 with a Serb rebellion, Coward said. More than 200,000 are dead or missing.

Government leaders, concluding that they alone can save their people, have warned for months they would try to break the siege of Sarajevo before a fourth winter passed.

The situation has grown steadily more critical since April, when the humanitarian airlift that has kept the city alive was suspended because Serbs were firing on planes. Warehouses were virtually empty in the city last week.

The most important government gains were made on Mount Trebevic above Sarajevo, where the Bosnian army cut through Serb lines and severed the road linking Serb-held parts of Sarajevo to Pale, Coward said.

Mostly cloudy skies in store

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies becoming partly cloudy by noon with a high in the mid-80s and southeast winds at 10-20 mph and gusty, according to a spokesman for the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight should be partly cloudy, becoming mostly cloudy after midnight with a low in the mid-60s.

Monday should be mostly cloudy, becoming mostly sunny with a high in the upper 80s.

After a high of 87, compared to the record high of 106 set in 1977, the low was 64, some 15 degrees warmer than the record low of 49 for the day set in 1981.

STATE

Father's Day weather in Texas should be a carbon copy of Saturday in most areas — warm and mostly sunny.

In North Texas, low-level clouds in the western areas will burn off by mid-morning as the entire region becomes partly cloudy to mostly clear. Temperatures will be in the mid to upper 80s, with a gentle southeast breeze.

Saturday, skies were partly cloudy to mostly sunny. Temperatures ranged in the mid- to upper 80s across the region as a moderate, occasionally gusty, breeze prevailed.

West Texas will be partly to mostly cloudy regionwide today and Monday. Highs today, as they were Saturday, will be in the 80s and lower 90s, except for around 100 in the Big Bend area. Lows will be in the 50s and 60s.

South Texas will see partly cloudy skies today. High temperatures will reach into the upper 80s. Lows will be in the 60s and low 70s.

On Saturday, the region saw a few showers and thunderstorms across the Coastal Bend area. A cool dome of high pressure continued to persist across the region as temperatures were mostly in the 80s.

NATION

Unseasonably chilly weather and rain covered much of the West on Saturday, while thunderstorms broke out over parts of the Southeast.

Temperatures in the West were held down by an upper-level storm system centered over the Arizona-Nevada state line.

Northern Nevada had freezing temperatures, including a record low of 29 at Ely. Saturday's lowest temperature in the lower 48 states was 25 at Eureka. Las Vegas cooled to a low of 51, less than a week after highs above 100.

Rain fell over Northern California and Nevada, and showers were scattered over the Northwest along a fast-moving cold front. Quillayute, Wash., got 1.25 inches of rain during the morning.

On Friday, snow fell in the Sierra Nevada along the California-Nevada state line, and chains or snow tires were required for motorists crossing Donner Summit on Interstate 80.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were possible from Arizona and New Mexico north to Idaho and from western Texas to the Dakotas.

In the Southeast, strong thunderstorms developed Saturday across Georgia and western North Carolina, with the potential for high wind and large hail.

Showers and thunderstorms also developed along the eastern coastline of Florida from Jacksonville to Miami.

Breezy weather spread across the Midwest, with wind gusting to 30 mph across parts of Kansas.

Saturday's highest temperature in the lower 48 states was 94 at Grand Forks, N.D. The highest heat index, a rating calculated from humidity and temperature, was 108 at Kingsville, Texas.

Lotto Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — One ticket bought in Houston correctly matched all six numbers drawn in the Lotto Texas game Saturday night.

The jackpot is $10 million.

The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were 11, 12, 15, 18, 24 and 46.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $4 million.

BILLS: Bush beats deadline to act on legislation

(From 1A)

Parents fretting over the ever-rising cost of higher education will have an opportunity to freeze tuition and fees at current costs under another bill made law by Bush.

Two-year and four-year state contracts to prepay college tuition and fees for children under age 18 will be offered to Texas residents or their children.

The bill is the brainchild of State Comptroller John Sharp who has said the "pay now, learn later" plan is a way to cheat inflation.

The state would invest the prepaid funds until they are needed for a student's education. If students decide they don't want to go to college or want to go out-of-state, their money will be refunded minus the interest accrued while invested.

Students in the program will still be required to meet all college entrance requirements.

In another action, Bush vetoed about $14 million in line items from the state's $79.9 billion appropriations bill.

All but one of the vetoes were appropriations for bills not approved by the Legislature or vetoed by the governor.

The other veto will allow Bush to review some state contracts and fund the amount needed to fulfill them, rather than automatically renewing them.

In other notable bill signings, the governor approved:

■ A bill to require developers selling land in border areas called colonias to provide water and sewer services to their customers.

Colonias, the number of which are growing in Texas, are unincorporated towns often characterized by conditions similar to Third World countries. A lack of clean water and proper sewer services often makes them fertile breeding grounds for infectious diseases.

■ A bill to transfer all responsibilities of the State Treasury to the state comptroller's office. The bill will take effect if voters approve the abolition of the Treasury in November.

■ A bill to prohibit anyone under age 18 from getting a tattoo unless it would cover an existing tattoo deemed obscene, gang-related or drug-related by the child's parents and a court.

POOL: City moves ahead on construction plans need for a third pool based on any gaps in the community not serviced, Menchaca said.

Doug Russell Pool is located at 900 N. Midland Drive. The planned pool is expected to be situated on a 2 1/2- to three-acre site somewhere on Midland's east side in the vicinity of Lamesa Road, south of Golf Course Road and north of Cloverdale Road.

"We are still negotiating with (property) owners for a potential site," Menchaca said.

City officials anticipate presenting a purchase approval to the City Council by mid-July and seeking construction bids in September.

The City Council recently gave the go-ahead to solicit proposals from architectural/engineering firms to design the new pool.

Cost for a new pool is estimated at between $800,000 and $1.3 million.

The planned pool follows the closure of two neighborhood pools — Hogan Park and Hidalgo Park pools — in the 1980s, and another — Halff Park pool — two years ago.

The operating pools opened this year the day after school let out and will close when classes resume.

Admission at Ulmer Park and Washington Park pools is 60 cents for youngsters and $1.20 for adults; at Doug Russell pool, youngsters are charged 80 cents while adults pay $1.70.

"We've been running those pools for 10 years and haven't increased the gate fee or lessons," Swendig said.

JUNETEENTH: Residents come out to see parade

big family," said 24-year-old Tracy Dedrick.

The young mother said she tries to teach her children values related to the theme of Juneteenth — respect for other people and "your kind" and to stand up for themselves.

"It means the coming together of black America," said 47-year-old Lois Hillary.

Ella Mae Gibson, 69, spoke of a time when she lived overseas and said she is grateful to live in a country where "we are given the rights to say what you want to say ... Juneteenth means freedom. We are living in a free country where we can praise and serve the Lord any way we want to."

The theme of many of the vehicles in the parade was "let freedom ring." Groups of children, teens and adults marched down the streets singing in cadence, much to the delight of the spectators.

With the Carver school reunion, a group of Carver High School cheerleaders sang their former school's praises.

One Midland man wants to make sure his child is educated about the meaning behind Juneteenth and its celebrations.

"He's too young to understand now, but I want him to know on the 19th of June slaves in Texas were freed. I want him to know I was an heir of a time we would like not to repeat," said 39-year-old James Ramsoure Jr.

"We'll stress he needs to educate himself and not put himself in a situation to enslave himself, especially with things today like gangs and drugs. I'll encourage him to strive to keep himself free of that mire and build mentally and spiritually," Ramsoure said.

shared custody; he agreed, but later took sole custody once again.

He always managed to track her down or she returned voluntarily.

Then she took David away for good. Ann has said she took her son away to save him from the emotional turmoil of constant custody battles; the day before his abduction, David told his father that his mother said he was a bad daddy because "You won't let her see me."

Bill's struggle to find his son took its toll. He sought therapy. When things got really bad, his friends put him on a suicide watch.

His saving grace was church, his second wife, Jessica, whom he met five years ago, and his six stepchildren. He also found salvation through working with kids. For two years, he visited terminally ill youngsters at Children's Hospital San Diego.

"I got to the point where emotionally I couldn't handle it anymore," Kennedy said during a recent interview at his home. "I had to give up the idea of ever seeing him again. There was a point where I had to do that because the pain was so great."

He didn't know it, but David and Ann lived less than 100 miles away, in a small house on the edge of San Bernardino. By all accounts, David and his mother led a quiet life; he attended school and Ann worked as a bookkeeper, using the alias Emily Trevino.

"Once, we had driven right by his house almost," Kennedy said. "That's got to make you feel sick inside."

Then, in March, Ann's nephew was arrested in Chicago on theft charges. Police there already had been involved in the Kennedy case, as investigators chased down leads, and they knew whom they had arrested. They asked him, innocently, to list his relatives; he mentioned his aunt, Emily Trevino, who lived in San Bernardino with her 17-year-old son.

Ann Kennedy, 44, was arrested on March 27, and charged with child endangerment and kidnapping. No trial date has been set. Her attorney, Mike McDonnell of Santa Ana, declined to be interviewed.

The day of Ann's arrest, Bill Kennedy met the son he had not seen in a decade and a half; at 5-foot-10, he was unrecognizable as the tot Bill dropped off at the baby sitter's that day.

"He looked at me and I looked at him," said Kennedy, 48. "We kind of broke down a little bit. He put his arms around me and called me 'Dad.'"

But that was not the end of their problems. Ann was released on $25,000 bail, and David continues to live with her while he finishes high school. He blames his father for his mother's legal troubles, though Kennedy says the prosecutor is pursuing criminal prosecution independently.

"It's not going to be an easy time for these people," said Dr. Saul Levine, the head of psychiatry at Children's Hospital San Diego.

"It's tragic that he was kidnapped and more tragic ... that his father is seen as responsible for his mother's punishment. I'm sure he will feel extraordinary resentment."

Kennedy has visited David every weekend for several weeks. He says he will wait patiently for the skittishness and resentment to subside; a man who waited all these years to see his son knows all about patience.

"I'm hoping, after all this is over with and after the dust settles," he said, "that things will be a lot better."

Alexander sets pace for '96 campaign with first TV ad

WASHINGTON (AP) — Before running for president in 1988, Rep. Richard Gephardt called on Jimmy Carter, looking for the secret to winning the Iowa caucuses. For all Iowa's lore of hand-to-hand campaigning, Carter said simply, "Be the first one on TV."

Gephardt considered it sound advice, but didn't get the chance to follow it: Bruce Babbitt surprised everyone in the Democratic field with a $250,000 Iowa ad buy in the spring of 1987. But he got nothing to show for it, and was gone from the race 10 days after a lousy Iowa showing.

So was Carter's advice off the mark?

Lamar Alexander doesn't think so.

The former Tennessee governor is gambling this week, starting the 1996 TV campaign with 60-second biographical ads in Iowa and New Hampshire, the leadoff states in the nominating contests.

The spots begin with a 30-second glimpse at the Republican hopeful's political career, casting him as a conservative, reform-minded governor who kept Tennessee's taxes low while improving its economy and schools. In the second half, Alexander speaks directly into the camera, telling viewers he's looking forward to campaigning in their states this summer.

"Let's get to know each other," he says.

At a cost of $300,000, the ad will begin Monday night and run for seven weeks. The average New Hampshire viewer will see it 10 times over that period, according to Alexander media consultant Mike Murphy.

"The idea is simple," Alexander said in an interview Friday. "I am not as well known as the candidates from inside Washington and this is a chance to introduce myself in those two key states."

As he goes first, Alexander finds himself in a predicament similar to the one Babbitt faced in 1987.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole is the big early favorite in next year's Iowa Republican caucuses. But Alexander, as Babbitt was seven years ago, is banking on a surprisingly strong Iowa showing to propel him into New Hampshire and beyond.

So far, however, the voters aren't cooperating.

An Iowa poll released early this month showed Alexander with just 1 percent support, and he hasn't fared much better in New Hampshire.

Such disappointing numbers reverberate far beyond state borders. Alexander expects to report raising about $8 million in the first half of 1995, on track to reach his goal of $20 million by year's end. But fund-raising is unlikely to remain strong if Alexander's poll numbers stay so weak, which is one reason his campaign is trying to jump start itself with early ads.

Pete Wilson is another reason.

After a stumbling start, the California governor is beginning to raise his profile in the Republican field, and is viewed as a serious threat to Alexander's self-styled "outsider" image.

"All of our polling shows that there is a thirst out there in the Republican Party for an alternative to Bob Dole," Murphy said. "We need to go get out our message and our name identification up, and TV is the way to do it."

Most of Alexander's rivals shrugged off the decision, predicting it would prove a waste of money. But a Democratic consultant who helped Gephardt to his 1988 victory in the state applauded the move.

"Alexander's problem is nobody knows him and while TV late in a campaign is geared toward getting a message across, TV early is very useful just as a way of introducing yourself," said David Doak. "Now when he shows up in a shopping center, he suddenly is going to be the guy they saw on TV last night, and if you are on TV, you are a star."

Not that the strategy doesn't carry risks.

In the 1987-88 race, Gephardt didn't get on TV first. But he did use a big December 1987 ad blitz to build a lead there, and hung on to win. But he had little money left for New Hampshire and the states that followed, and was soon gone from the race.

"First on TV and the most shoe leather is a good combination," Doak said. "But if you spend too much money early, you can disappear in the stretch."

Reports: Sides reach tentative pact for most hostages' release

BUDYONNOVSK, Russia (AP) — Chechen rebel gunmen holding about 2,000 hostages in a hospital repelled two Russian commando attacks Saturday while captives waved white sheets from smoky windows and shouted, "Don't shoot!"

The violence, which reportedly killed dozens of people, was followed early today by reports that Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin and rebel commander Shamil Basayev, speaking by telephone, had reached a tentative agreement to release most of the hostages and end the three-day standoff.

Details were to be worked out in another call later this morning, Russian news agencies reported.

The Interfax news agency said the government was ready to suspend military action in Chechnya — a key rebel demand — in return for the hostages' release, but rejected new rebel demands. The ITAR-Tass news agency reported that the tentative pact would let most hostages go free, with some remaining to ensure the rebels' safety. Neither report could be immediately confirmed.

The impasse has been a huge embarrassment for President Boris Yeltsin, who endured demands Saturday for an end to the war in Chechnya from other leaders attending the Group of Seven economic summit in Canada.

Yeltsin has been criticized at home for leaving during the crisis, and his government was taken to task for allowing Chechen rebels to carry out their first major attack outside Chechnya. The rebels, who have long threatened to spread guerrilla war beyond their republic, have been driven from strongholds inside Chechnya during six months of battles with Russian troops.

The fighting Saturday left dozens dead and wounded, according to hostages who were released later in the day by the Chechens. Some hostages screamed at Russian soldiers, saying they had killed innocents.

At dawn on Saturday, troops backed by helicopters and armored personnel carriers fired machine guns, grenades and rockets at the hospital. Authorities said the troops freed 227 hostages — although it appeared many were released by the Chechens after the fighting — and accused the Chechens of using hostages as human shields.

Other troops ringed the hospital. "Surrender. Resistance is useless. You shall not leave here," one officer yelled over a megaphone.

Flames shot from the second floor of the main building Saturday evening, and the rebels kept firefighters out. One hostage sent out to negotiate accused the Russian military of endangering prisoners needlessly.

"The Russians are shooting and killing us. The Chechens are not touching us. They are more dear to us than brothers," the man, Yuri Krykhov, yelled at officials.

By dusk, an eerie silence broken only by sporadic sniper fire had settled again over Budyonnovsk, a southern Russian town of about 100,000 people that was stormed Wednesday by scores of Chechen gunmen.

Leaders condemn violence on both sides of Chechnya war

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia (AP) — In a diplomatic slap, Western leaders lectured Boris Yeltsin face-to-face Saturday to stop Russia's bloody war in Chechnya. But an unrepentant Yeltsin insisted he had to "destroy those terrorists and bandits."

Summit leaders balanced their criticism of Yeltsin with a strong condemnation of Chechen rebels' taking of 1,000 hostages in a southern Russian town.

Concern about the widening war in Bosnia also hung heavily as the leaders of the world's seven largest industrial nations wrapped up their three-day economic summit in this eastern Canadian seaport.

But in the end, the leaders merely renewed calls for a cease fire, urged a diplomatic settlement and condemned Serb forces for taking U.N. hostages and shelling civilian populations.

Yeltsin at first took the criticism of his Chechnya crackdown impassively, fiddling with the sound volume on his headset as Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chretien expressed concern on behalf of Western allies about the loss of life and urged a political settlement.

Later, however, during a meeting with President Clinton, the burly Russian leader scowled in rage at the Chechen rebels. Waving his arms and speaking forcefully, Yeltsin denouonced the rebels as "horrible criminals with black bands on their foreheads."

"Chechnya today is the center of world terrorism, of bribery and corruption and mafia," Yeltsin said angrily. "We couldn't act otherwise. We had to destroy those terrorists and bandits."

Yeltsin said he explained the situation to summit leaders. "They now much better understand that this is really the only way that we can deal with these criminal elements." He suggested that Clinton, in particular, was sympathetic with his views.

Clinton appeared impatient at Yeltsin's lengthy outburst. Clinton said he agreed with other leaders "that sooner or later — better sooner than later — the cycle of violence has to be broken and ultimately in any democracy there has to be a political solution to people's differences."

Yeltsin's tirade and slurred speech raised speculation he had been drinking. But a U.S. official well acquainted with the Russian leader said, "He was very much on top of his game."

After talks with Yeltsin, Clinton squeezed in a golf game with Chretien before returning home.

Despite the summit's rebuke, Yeltsin could take satisfaction from the summit's strong condemnation of "the terrorist attack in Budyonnovsk," the southern Russian city where Chechen rebels hold more than 1,000 hostages.

"We call for their immediate and unconditional release," Chretien said in a closing statement from the summit of the United States, Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Japan and Canada.

"There was a great deal of sympathy for the hostages and the terrible predicament President Yeltsin finds himself in," British Prime Minister John Major said.

For his part, Yeltsin said, "The storming of the hospital is continuing. We have liberated 200 hostages. the operation is going on. I am in constant contact with our commanders."

"I'm in complete control of the situation," Yeltsin said, rejecting domestic criticism of his trip. "I myself become a hostage to these very same bandits by having to go back there," he said in explaining why he didn't cut his visit short and return to Russia.

Yeltsin said "I'm very glad that my friend, Bill, understood" his position.

While the annual economic summit of Western powers is usually a celebration of Western harmony, there was an unusual amount of bickering this year.

European leaders expressed displeasure with Clinton about his auto trade dispute with Japan, suggesting instead that it be dealt with through the newly created World Trade Organization.

France's new president, Jacques Chirac, was criticized by Chretien and others for his decision to resume nuclear weapons testing. The summit communique urged speedy completion of treaties to ban testing.

Dad's role

Programs seek to help fatherless men connect with their children

By Tamar Lewin
N.Y. Times News Service

Charles Ballard was talking to a roomful of teen-age boys at an inner-city high school in Cleveland years ago when he had a stunning revelation about their view of fatherhood.

"I asked, 'How many of you are dads?' and only three hands went up," he said. "That didn't sound right to me. So later on, I asked, 'How many of you guys have kids?' And almost every hand went up. These guys made a distinction. Fatherhood meant taking responsibility, providing security and affection, being there, which they'd never seen. Having a kid just meant they'd had sex with a girl, and she had a baby."

Ballard, now 59, understood that distinction: he himself had walked away from a baby he fathered as a teen-ager, but later returned to build a close relationship with his son.

And since 1982, when he founded the Institute for Responsible Fatherhood and Family Revitalization in Cleveland, he has made it his mission to help young men reconnect with their children and become real fathers.

Ballard's institute, now expanding to five other cities, is one of a mushrooming crop of programs nationwide that preach, and teach, the importance of fatherhood.

Across the country, foundations, social-service agencies, churches and policymakers are putting new emphasis on the role fathers can play in improving their children's lives. In many cases, they are trying to coax young dads to play a role they never saw in their own childhoods.

"We are experiencing a new phenomenon, young men who are from second-or third-generation father-absent families, and have no model of fathering to follow," said Ralph R. Smith, director of planning and development at the Annie E. Casey Foundation, which supports family programs.

"Across the country, we are seeing more and more neighborhoods where father-absent families are the norm. There are 180 neighborhoods where at least 90 percent of the families are father-absent. Young men there, when they have babies, may not know what their role can be."

While fatherless families are concentrated in the nation's poorest areas, the soaring divorce rates of recent decades — and the many families in which fathers are emotionally or physically absent — have produced a generation of young men, cutting across all social strata, for whom fatherhood is uncharted territory.

"In 1965, Lyndon Johnson said the disintegration of black families was such a crisis that we needed a new national policy, a war on poverty," said David Blankenhorn, president of the Institute for American Values, a family research group in New York.

"The rate of fatherlessness among white Americans today is almost exactly what it was among blacks 30 years ago. We don't have a subculture of fatherlessness anymore, we have a culture of fatherlessness, and it's spreading faster among whites than among blacks, among people over 30 than under."

Since the 1950s, the share of children living in mother-only families has quadrupled, from 6 percent to 24 percent of the nation's children. In 1994, about 19 million children lived in households without their father present.

Some of those children do have men in their lives, often their mother's new husband or boyfriend, or an "underground father" who brings occasional gifts, but does not provide reliable support.

Over all, children in homes without fathers are more likely to be poor, to drop out of high school, and to end up in foster care or juvenile-justice programs than those living with their fathers.

Girls from single-parent families have a greater risk of bearing children as unwed teen-agers. Boys with absent fathers face a higher likelihood of unemployment, incarceration and being uninvolved with their own children.

Nick Rocque, a Minneapolis youth whose father left home when he was too young to remember, was headed for trouble — by his own account, "running on the streets, feeling like nobody cared about me" — at 15, when he learned he was about to be a father.

His initial reaction was sheer terror. "At first I just wanted to run away from it, I was so scared," said Rocque, who is now 18. "But I decided I didn't want to be like my dad and I would do the opposite of what he'd done."

So, Rocque became an involved father, visiting his daughter, Victoria, regularly, and going to weekly support meetings at MELD for Young Dads, a local program for fathers aged 15 to 25 that he discovered at a teen-parents fair where, as one of the few fathers in a sea of teen mothers, he was spotted by Dwaine Simms, a MELD leader.

"It's a lot harder to recruit teen fathers into parenting programs than teen mothers," Simms said.

"Moms come for the three hours when someone else takes care of their babies, and they can talk to their friends. But the dads usually don't have custody, and a lot of them still see fatherhood as a shaming thing and haven't even told their friends about their babies. They don't get a lot of reinforcement. We may be the only voice helping them be fathers."

But for those who take the role seriously, as Rocque did, fatherhood can be transforming.

Jury convicts mother in death of newborn

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — A mother who said she stood by while her husband buried her newborn daughter alive in their back yard was convicted of second-degree murder and faces up to life in prison.

A jury rejected Urbelina Emiliano's defense that she was a battered wife.

Emiliano, 24, was convicted Friday. She said her husband, Fortino Perez, considered the child an embarrassment because the infant was fathered by another man.

Perez, 29, also was convicted of second-degree murder and was sentenced in December to a prison term of 25 years to life. Emiliano faces the same when she's sentenced July 19.

Emiliano told hospital workers of the burial in 1993. Authorities found the decomposed body of the six-pound infant in a shallow grave at the couple's home in Hempstead. A hospital bracelet was still attached to her wrist and a pacifier was found where her mouth had been.

Investigators probe foster care of prison-born babies

LOWELL, Fla. (AP) — Linda Orsini was five months' pregnant and in prison. She knew she couldn't keep a baby there, but with the help of a volunteer prison ministry, she found a couple to be her child's foster parents.

That couple, Jeff and Rhonda Lewis, exchanged letters with her, visited her at the Florida Correctional Institution here and accepted her regular collect calls.

David Orsini was born in May 1994 and the Lewises began caring for him two days later. After nearly a year, they wanted to adopt him.

Now Orsini and the Lewises are preparing for a custody fight. And three state agencies are investigating how the prison ministry arranged foster care for Orsini and dozens of other babies born to inmates at Lowell.

The Lewises say the conservative ministry they contacted about becoming foster arents, Concerned Citiens of Florida, told them adoption sometimes becomes possible in such cases.

They say they knew David would be in their care only temporarily, but after raising and nurturing him for a year they can't bear to give him up.

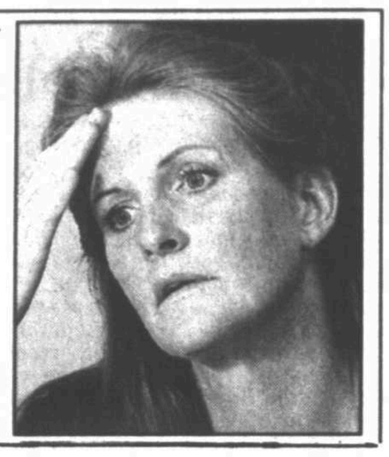

Orsini, 38, who has a record of arrests for drugs, burglary and car theft, says she never intended to give David up for adoption and only wanted temporary care until she's released Aug. 1.

"I feel like the Lewises are stealing David from me," Orsini said. "I know my history is bad. I've got 23 years of ... addiction behind me. But I've got a life ahead of me. I love David with all my heart. He's given me my strength, my sobriety and a whole new life."

The ministry's top official denies any wrongdoing. But investigators are trying to determine if the group's prison ministry — Temporary Christian Volunteers — was illegally operating as an adoption agency and misled foster parents into thinking they could adopt.

'I know my history is bad. I've got 23 years of...addiction behind me. but I've got a life ahead of me. I love David with all my heart. He's given me my strength, my sobriety and a whole new life.'

— Linda Orsini
prison inmate, mother

Investigators have temporarily suspended the group's prison activities. They say they believe as many as 70 newborns, including Orsini's son, were placed in foster homes through the Concerned Citizens group.

Social workers for the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services have tracked 38 of these infants so far and taken custody of seven, some from foster homes cited previously for child abuse.

So far, however, the dispute between Orsini and the Lewises is the only custody battle that has surfaced.

The health department, the state Department of Corrections and the state attorney's office are investigating whether the group illegally placed prison babies in unregistered or unlicensed foster homes.

University offers academic grant to victim, hopes to sign attacker

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Washington University officials insist a scholarship offer to a 17-year-old student is not related to her sexual assault by a basketball player the college is recruiting.

"We want to emphasize that the university's decision is based solely on the particular circumstances relating to this young woman's academic potential, and is in no way related to or contingent upon any other recruiting situation currently being pursued by the university," Bob Chernak, the university's vice president for student services, said Saturday in The Washington Post.

"Her courage and resilience have made a deep impression on administrators who have come to believe she represents qualities that everyone can admire — scholarship, fortitude and the ability to rise above adversity," he added.

The girl, whose name has not been made public, agreed Thursday to drop an $11 million civil lawsuit against Richie Parker, 19, a New York City basketball star and her former classmate, said her attorney, Michael S. Feldman.

The decision came after Parker, a 6-foot-5 guard, called her to apologize and agreed to share with her any basketball earnings or sign another financial deal if he doesn't play professionally.

The girl, who was valedictorian of her junior high school class, will be a high school junior this fall. The school and her lawyer said the scholarship offer was conditional upon her meeting the university's regular admissions requirements.

As for the $100,000 scholarship, Feldman said, "She plans to accept it. She doesn't come from a wealthy family and I think a private university is best for her."

Parker pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of felony sexual abuse after the January 1994 incident at Harlem's Manhattan Center High School for Science and Mathematics. The girl was 15 at the time.

Parker was sentenced to five years of supervised probation.

Lawsuit claims autographs by 'The Gipper' are foul balls

By Larry Tye
N.Y. Times News Service

The Secret Service agent did it partly to make a few extra bucks, but mainly because it seemed to make the ex-president happy.

The agent's job was to protect Ronald Reagan, yet every time he'd get the former head of state alone in the limousine, or anywhere else away from Nancy, Reagan would offer to sign a few balls, bats and, best of all, Notre Dame helmets he'd inscribe with "The Gipper." At some signing sessions, the agent took Reagan's picture, in case anyone questioned the autograph's authenticity.

Or at least that's the way Richard Schwartz told the story when he was peddling the memorabilia to collectors, who eventually resold it on television and at auctions for $350 or more an item.

Problem is, lots of folks now insist Schwartz made it all up.

"I'm madder than hell right now ... It's one of the most numbing experiences I can imagine," said Michael Standish, the middle man in the deal who Friday sued Schwartz, saying he lied about the Secret Service, forged or had someone else forge signatures of Reagan and other ex-presidents, and hired a Reagan look-alike to pose for the signing photos.

What do the experts think about Schwartz' Reagan signatures?

"I THOUGHT it was joke," said Lloyd Brock, a nationally known handwriting analyst who works for the US Treasury Department in Los Angeles. "The 'R' is much too large, he never makes his 'O' like that and the 'L' is never that large. It just was totally inconsistent with all the Reagan signatures I've seen, and I've seen hundreds of them."

James Snodgress, a California collector who specializes in presidential autographs, is equally certain about Schwartz' version: "No way, that's not Ronald Reagan's signature ... It looks less like his signature than anything I've ever seen purporting to be his signature."

Reagan chief of staff Joanne Drake says she is "aware of the situation and we've referred it to the authorities."

As for the authorities, Secret Service spokesman Lt. Marty Ratchford said "an investigation is being conducted right now by the FBI, but it does not entail any Secret Service employees." John Hoos, FBI spokesman in Los Angeles, would say only that "if there was an investigation, my comment to you would be that we would neither confirm nor deny it."

'I'm madder than hell right now ... It's one of the most numbing experiences I can imagine.'

— Michael Standish, the midlle man in the deal

SCHWARTZ, MEANWHILE was asked in a telephone interview last night about the allegations. "I can't go through that with you; we can't go through that with you people," he said. Then he hung up the phone.

Richard Phillips, Schwartz' partner in Buena Ventura Jewelry and Loan in California, also was asked last night about the lawsuit, which names him as a codefendant, along with Schwartz' wife, Beverly. "You're going to have to talk to my partner; he's the one who was handling that," Phillips said. "And he says he can't talk to you."

The autograph affair started early this year, when Schwartz offered to sell baseballs autographed by Reagan to Standish, co-owner of the Sports Alley memorabilia business, based in Laguna Niguel, Calif. Schwartz allegedly said he knew Reagan and, even better, had a neighbor who was on Reagan's Secret Service detail and could get lots of signed sports equipment.

Standish, who says he has "a great love in my heart for Ronald Reagan," insisted on a "certificate of authenticity" signed by Reagan, and when Schwartz provided it, Standish bought about 200 baseballs, 70 bats, 25 footballs, several Notre Dame helmets and a pair of cowboy boots — all supposedly signed by the ex-president, who once played the role of George Gipp in "The Knute Rockne Story." He later bought bats allegedly signed by George and Barbara Bush and Gerald and Betty Ford; a ball signed by ex-presidents Reagan, Ford, Nixon, Carter and Bush; and other items he now is sure were forgeries.

MUCH OF that memorabilia was offered to the public, at prices ranging from $350 for a Reagan and Bush ball to $650 for a Ronald and Nancy bat. Standish says he's buying back anything he can find, leaving him with losses of at least $150,000. And Al Curcio, president of Center Field Collectibles, which ran national ads on the material, says he pulled the equipment from his ongoing auction as soon as he heard it may be forged.

As for the pictures purporting to show Reagan penning his name, Standish's suit says that was a "celebrity impersonator" and Scott Souders, Standish's attorney, says he has hired an investigator who "is trying to track this person down through the Screen Actors Guild and other agencies that book presidential impersonators."

Standish's lawsuit, filed in California Superior Court, charges Schwartz and his associates with breach of oral contract, intentional and negligent misrepresentation, and intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress. In the last charges, Standish alleges that in a phone conversation, Schwartz implied he would physically harm Standish if he refused to pay for the sports memorabilia.

EVEN WHILE he was threatening him, Standish says Schwartz recently offered him documents Reagan supposedly signed as part of his Star Wars defense program.

Standish says what upsets him most about the whole episode are stories Schwartz told him about Reagan, stories that supposedly came from his Secret Service protectors and that disparaged the ex-president, who is suffering from Alzheimer's Disease. "It hurts like hell," Standish said, "that this guy (Schwartz) abused the credibility of President Reagan."

19-year-old feline dies; city inherits $250,000 estate

TANGENT, Ore. (AP) — She was, perhaps, the fattest cat in Oregon — in terms of her inheritance, that is.

Now Kitty Cat, the 19-year-old feline who inherited her owner's $250,000 estate in 1983, has died. And the city is the new heir.

Longtime caretaker Dale Clark said Kitty Cat stopped eating, so he took her to the veterinarian.

"She just wasn't coming out of it," Clark said.

The city will gain ownership of the 1916 five-bedroom farmhouse, once owned by Kitty Cat's owner, John Bass. The former restaurateur had no children by either of his two wives. Both women died before Bass.

The city will gain ownership of the 1916 five-bedroom farmhouse, once owned by Kitty Cat's owner, John Bass.

City recorder Georgia Edwards was unprepared Friday for the news of Kitty Cat's demise.

"I don't know what we're going to do," she said.

Bass' will requires that the city maintains the property as a historical site.

Clark, 71, the caretaker who looked after Kitty Cat, lived in a mobile home on the property for 16 years and will be allowed to stay, said attorney Roger Reid, who handled the estate.

Kitty Cat was put to sleep on Tuesday and her remains were cremated. A cat-sized wooden casket was made in 1990, and Kitty Cat has long had a marble tombstone that reads "Kitty Cat: A True Friend."

Simpson's legal woes may not end with verdict

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When the O.J. Simpson trial finally ends, the defendant's days in court won't necessarily be over — regardless of the murder case's outcome.

Lawsuits filed by the families of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman could go on for months, even years.

The Goldman lawsuit accuses Simpson of killing the 25-year-old waiter with "vicious and outrageous savagery," while the Brown lawsuit alleges that Simpson "brutally and with malice aforethought stalked, attacked and repeatedly stabbed and beat" his 35-year-old ex-wife.

While the lawsuits are essentially on hold until the trial and any retrials are over, they can ultimately proceed whether Simpson is found innocent or guilty. And unlike in the trial, Simpson could be forced to testify in the civil cases — possibly twice if called in each case.

Last week, Ms. Simpson's father, Louis Brown, filed a "survival action" lawsuit on the one-year anniversary of the slayings and the final day under the statute of limitations. Goldman's father, Fred, ar ' sister, Kim, filed a wrongful death lawsuit on May 4 seeking unspecified damages and funeral expenses.

A wrongful death lawsuit, the more common of the two, is filed by heirs of a victim for loss of support, love and guidance. A survival action is filed in the name of the deceased or the victim's estate, legal experts said.

"The claim of survival is for punitive damages incurred by the victim between the date of the injury and the date of death," said lawyer Larry Feldman. "If someone is injured and lives a day, they'll have medical bills, ambulance bills — those economical losses survive the death."

In Ms. Simpson's case, her survival time was brief, "but in those few moments she would have had the right to seek punitive damages based on the assault and battery had she survived," said attorney John Quinlan Kelly, who filed the Brown lawsuit.

As executor of Ms. Simpson's estate, Brown opted to proceed with the case after recent testimony indicated that Ms. Simpson probably faced her ki ler for several moments before her death, Kelly said.

The estate's only beneficiaries are her two young children with Simpson, Sydney, 8, and Justin, 5.

The lawsuits could be combined by the plaintiffs, but that's unlikely because of the significant differences between the lawsuits, said Professor Robert Pugsley of the Southwestern University School of Law.

As a result, two back-to-back civil cases could take months or even years before they are resolved, Pugsley said. "Civil litigation can go on forever in this town."

Civil actions against a murder defendant aren't all that common, legal experts said.

If Simpson is found guilty of murder, the plaintiffs would enter that judgment as "res judicata," meaning it's already been decided, and thus Simpson would probably opt to settle the lawsuits out of court, Pugsley said.

If Simpson is found innocent, the lawsuits could go forward in civil court, where the burden of proof is less rigid, although the criminal acquittal would certainly be used as powerful evidence by the defense.

In the end, the lawsuits may not recoup a dime. Once the murder trial is over and Simpson's legal dream team is paid, there might not be any money left.

"All of the money that Simpson's been generating since he's been in jail is being put into an involuntary trust," Pugsley said. "The first obligation is to lawyers, and the second is families of the victims in case of any civil judgments."

Phony lawyer keeps secret from wife, boss, almost 2,000 clients

By William Kates
Associated Press

WAMPSVILLE, N.Y. — Steven Welchons went to work every day with a secret.

He kept it from his wife. He kept it from the man who was his boss, best man and close friend. And he kept it from as many as 2,000 people he represented in criminal court.

The 32-year-old up-and-coming assistant public defender was, by most accounts, a decent lawyer.

But he did not have a license to practice law. He never went to law school. He didn't even have a college degree.

"You have to understand, he was a very, very bright person," said David Gruenewald, the Madison County public defender who was the best man at Welchons' 1990 wedding and hired him in Wampsville, 25 miles east of Syracuse. "Too bad he just didn't really take the time to put his nose to the grindstone and get the qualifications."

With the attorney general's office closing in on him in recent weeks, Welchons took an overdose of nonprescription drugs. He was listed in serious condition Friday.

No charges have been filed. But impersonating a lawyer is punishable by up to a year in jail, and falsely signing legal papers as a lawyer carries up to seven years.

Welchons' deception unraveled earlier this month with a complaint from a disgruntled client — the only one filed against him in nearly two years of handling cases, a fact that impressed even the investigators on the case.

> 'His skills were at or above that which one would expect from someone two years in practice. No question. He had a great deal of potential.'
> — District Attorney Donald Cerio

Madison County District Attorney Donald Cerio predicted that as many as 100 cases might have to be reprosecuted because they will be overturned on the grounds of inadequate representation.

Nevertheless, Cerio praised the competence of Welchons, a friend and frequent adversary in court.

"His skills were at or above that which one would expect from someone two years in practice," Cerio said. "No question. He had a great deal of potential."

Welchons' father-in-law, William J. Besaw, a town justice in Ellisburg, said the family had no comment. Welchons and his wife, Kelly, lived at the Besaw home.

The family, like everyone else who knew the affable and energetic Welchons, is feeling a mixture of shock, anger and disappointment, Gruenewald said. "I know I'm still shellshocked," he said.

Utica College records show Welchons took criminal justice classes there from fall 1985 to the summer of 1986. But authorities said he never received a bachelor's degree or went to law school.

Welchons began his ersatz law career in 1985 as an intern in the Oneida County public defender's office.

Gruenewald, who was a lawyer there, said they "hit it off right from the start." In 1988, Gruenewald moved to Watertown to open a public defender's office for Jefferson County and hired Welchons without checking out his claim that he was attending Syracuse University law school.

While working as a student, Welchons did paperwork and some legal research.

Gruenewald moved to Madison County in 1993 and again hired his friend. He said he never doubted his friend's claim that he had finished law school and passed the bar exam. Later, Gruenewald hired Welchons' wife as a secretary.

"We just never had a clue. None of us," Gruenewald said.

In retrospect, Gruenewald can understand how Welchons pulled off his trickery. Welchons handled mostly routine cases.

With a population of about 66,000 and three colleges located within the county, most of the cases handled by the public defender involve low-level crimes, such as underage drinking, disturbing the peace and petty larceny.

Most of Welchons' work involved plea bargains, Gruenewald said. He handled one high-profile rape case in which the defendant plea-bargained for a seven-to-21-year sentence, he said.

Only twice did Welchons step before a jury. One of those was an "open-and-shut" trial for an escaped inmate. The other was a sexual abuse case in which Welchons won an acquittal.

Any "fairly intelligent lay person" could have handled many of the cases, Gruenewald said. "They would have to be personable, intelligent, understand things, be organized, be able to take notes, educate themselves," he said.

Welchons, apparently, was all those things, and more.

When authorities investigating a client's complaint against Welchons found his name missing from the state registry of licensed attorneys, they also learned that no other complaints had been filed against him.

"It's a field where clients are often disgruntled," said Peter Dunn, chairman of the Madison Legal Defense Fund, which refers poor people to the public defender's office. "I would imagine there would be a lot of grievances. The fact that he didn't get one ... leads me to believe he was doing OK and had a good rapport with his clients."

OPEN HOUSE AND PUBLIC MEETING

TxDOT ROUTE STUDY - LUBBOCK TO IH-10 AND AMARILLO NORTH

The Texas Department of Transportation is hosting an open house and public meeting on July 18, 1995 at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center, 1501 Sixth Street, Lubbock, Texas. The open house will be held from 4:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. and the public meeting will begin at 7:00 p.m.

The purpose of this open house and public meeting is to discuss the TxDOT Route Study from Lubbock to IH-10, and from Amarillo north to the state line. The main topic will be the selection of the five most feasible 10-mile wide corridors within the study area. Three of the corridors begin at IH-27 in Lubbock and terminate at points along IH-10 between Fort Stockton and Junction. Two additional corridors begin at IH-27 in Amarillo and terminate at the state line.

TxDOT's consultants, headed by HDR Engineering of Dallas, are in the process of selecting the five corridors by evaluating transportation, environmental, economic and engineering considerations and by reviewing public input from the first round of public meetings held in March. Over 800 citizens attended the March meetings and many provided constructive comments, both verbal and written, that will assist the study team in their final selections.

The public is invited to attend the July 18th open house anytime between the hours of 4:00 p.m. and 7:00 p.m. Exhibits and maps will be displayed at the open house and members of the study team will be available to discuss the project leisurely with members of the public. Comment forms will be provided at the open house and a court reporter will be available to take private comments.

The formal public meeting will begin at 7:00 p.m. A brief presentation will be given by the study team followed by public commenting. Verbal comments made at the formal public meeting will be limited to 3 minutes each. There will be no responses to comments at the public meeting. Citizens with questions for the project team are urged to attend the open house prior to the public meeting.

Written comments may be submitted at the open house and public meeting, or mailed to the District Engineer at the local Texas Department of Transportation District Office up to 10 days following the public meeting date. Comments will also be accepted on the Route Study Telephone Hotline by calling 1-800-661-3234.

Worker accidentally cuts off oxygen,1 woman, 55, dies

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) — A woman died four days after a maintenance worker accidentally shut off her oxygen and put her in a coma.

The mistake also left 58 other patients without backup oxygen for up to 15 minutes. None of them suffered ill effects.

The 55-year-old woman died Friday at Holmes Regional Medical Center after her family requested that life support systems be disconnected, hospital officials said.

The woman, who was recovering from orthopedic surgery, went into cardiac arrest Monday and never regained consciousness after the worker accidentally turned off a valve that cut off her supplemental oxygen supply.

Her name was withheld at her family's request.

The mistake also left 58 other patients without backup oxygen for up to 15 minutes. None of them suffered ill effects, said hospital spokeswoman Valerie Davis.

Davis blamed an unidentified veteran maintenance worker who misread part of a construction project plan. No immediate disciplinary action was taken against him. His boss resigned.

The accident happened four months after doctors at University Community Hospital in Tampa amputated the wrong foot of one patient and another patient died when a technician mistakenly removed him from a ventilator.

Midland Community Theatre provides the stage this week for theaters from across the country to present their award-winning shows during the American Association of Community Theatre's Festival (AACT-Fest).

"The 10 shows represent the best of the best, and we're going to see some outstanding theater here in Midland from all over," said Don Bachmann, executive director of MCT.

Hosting AACT-Fest '95 provides a showcase for MCT as well.

"We will be having representatives from all over the United States come to our community to see our operations and to see us in action," Bachmann said. "We know that we're one of the best in the country, and we want to be able to say to all these folks — 'Hey, we know what it's all about.'"

The public has the opportunity to see the 10 hour-length productions, which begin Thursday afternoon. Davis Theatre I at Cole Theatre has a capacity of 515 seats. The number of registrants is not expected to exceed 350.

"We will be putting 150 seats on sale, and people the day of the performance may come in and obtain ticketing to see these shows," Bachmann said.

Four shows will be presented Thursday, four will be presented Friday and the final two will be Saturday.

"It's going to be a diversity of theater as well," Bachmann said. "We're going to see comedy, drama , musicals, revues. We're going to see it all."

The following productions are on the venue:

■ 1:30 to 5:15 p.m. Thursday: Region 5, "The Love Course," Lakeshore Players, White Bear Lake, Minn.; and Region I, "A ... My Name is Alice," Harvard Community Theatre, Harvard, Mass;

■ 7:45 p.m. to 11:30 p.m., Thursday: Region 4-B, "Falsettoland," Oak Ridge Community Playhouse, Oak Ridge, Tenn.; Region 8, "A Few Good Men," Chino Community Children's Theatre, Chino, Calif.;

■ 1:30 to 5:15 p.m., Friday: Region 4-A, "Talk Radio," Theatre Winter Haven, Winter Haven, Fla.; and Region 7, "Falsettoland," Lewiston Civic Theatre, Lewiston, Idaho;

■ 8:15 p.m. to midnight: Region 3, "Dancing at Lughnasa," Kalamazoo Civic Players, Kalamazoo, Mich.; and Region 9, "The Mommy Dance," Out North Theatre Company, Anchorage, Alaska;

■ 1:30 to 5:15 p.m., Saturday: Region 2, "The Problem," Burlington County Footlighters, Hadden Heights, N.J.; and Region 6, "Strange Snow," Muskogee Little Theatre, Muskogee, Okla.

"These 10 folks are already winners; not only state champions, they are regional champions," Bachmann said. "So, there is no one, particular winner. Each of them will be receiving an international invitation." The adjudicators are to be Ron Cameron from Ontario, Canada, Kent Brown, from the University of Arkansas and Gresdna Doty from Baton Rouge, La.

The first festival was held in 1969. The national festival has been presented every two years since 1971. Every four years a participant represents the United States at the International Festival, which was started by the late Princess Grace of Monaco.

In addition, all national finalists are offered the privilege of representing the United States at international festivals in Ireland, Finland, Japan, Canada, the

Flag business owners want banners to fly all across town

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

If a Midland oilman and his secretary have their way, Midland may soon become one of the most flag-draped cities in the United States.

Richard Gaddy and his secretary, Lu Parker, have formed D&L Flag Service and their ambition is to put a flag or flags in front of every home and business in Midland when the occasion calls for it.

For only $35 a year the new company will put up a flag on Memorial Day, Flag Day, July 4, Labor Day and Veterans Day. For $60 a year, they'll put up a Texas flag and an American flag.

"We put them up the night before and take them down the day after each flag date," Gaddy said. "We feel there are a lot of people out there who want to be patriotic, but just don't want to be bothered with the process of owning, storing and trying to remember to put a flag out."

"It can be quite a hassle to buy a flag, store it, keep it clean and put it up on holidays, especially if you have to get a ladder and mount in on a bracket attached to the house," Ms. Parker said.

She said she got the idea for the service after visiting a small town in which a service club put flags up at residences on each holiday.

"It really makes you feel good about America and your community when you step out in the morning and see flags all up and down the street at every home. We think Midland is a proud town that will take to something like this."

She said a lot of people like the notion of putting out a flag, but not the idea of messing with it. "Just like a lot of people like a pretty lawn, but don't want to mow it."

To erect the flags, D&L Flag Co. will come to your home, drill a 2-foot hole and fit it with a piece of PVC pipe. The flags, which are mounted on copper poles, are

New Loop 250 ready for traffic, engineers say

From Staff Reports

Loop 250 is ready to open, or at least three miles of it. The Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) has announced that a section of Loop 250 — located just west of Midland Drive to just east of Midkiff Road — will open Wednesday.

"Even though we have not completed all the landscaping work and clean-up, the driving lanes are ready for traffic," said Mike Chetty, the TxDOT engineer in charge of the project.

"The opening will proceed a section at a time while the contractor stripes the frontage roads to direct traffic, but we expect to have the entire section open by the day's end," Chetty said.

He said the final phase of road work on the loop — paving and signing — was completed last week.

The second phase of the six-stage project is expected to relieve congestion at two of Midland's busiest intersections — Midkiff Road and Midland Drive at Loop 250.

Through traffic on the loop will now cross over both intersections on new overpass structures. Entrance and exit ramps allow motorists to enter or exit the loop near both Midkiff Road and Midland Drive.

Landscaping on the adjacent right-of-way will continue and drivers are urged to observe warning signs and exercise caution.

The major contractor on the project was Jones Bros. Dirt and Paving Contractors Inc. of Odessa.

A third phase of the Loop 250 project, which includes the Wadley Avenue and Holiday Hill Road interchanges, is under way.

A fourth phase, from Interstate 20 to north of Thomason Drive, will be contracted in July. A fifth phase, which includes the Garfield and A streets interchanges, will be contracted in September.

The final phase of the project is to be let for bid in September 1996 and is expected to be completed by late 1998.

Mireles murder trial to begin in 142nd District Court

■ Rogelio Mireles is charged in the shooting death of Catalina Mireles.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A man charged with the murder of his estranged wife and then fleeing the country after being released on bond will be tried this week in 142nd District Court.

Rogelio Flores Mireles Jr., 20, will be tried for the Dec. 13, 1993, shooting death of Catalina Chavez Mireles. According to police, the defendant and victim had separated a week before and the woman and her small child were staying with her parents when Mireles came to the house and shot the woman.

The victim's father, Tony Chavez, chased Mireles; Chavez was shot at also. Mireles is charged with attempted murder for that shooting.

Mireles fled the scene, but turned himself in three days later.

After a bond-reduction hearing, he was released on special conditions that included an electronic monitoring device. Mireles removed the device from his leg and fled.

Chavez tracked Mireles down in Mexico and after nine months, Mireles was returned to Midland's custody in January.

142nd District Court Judge George "Jody" Gilles had originally reduced Mireles' bond from $150,000 to a total of $75,000. Following his arrest and subsequent return from Mexico he has been held without bond.

John Westbrook will prosecute the case for the state.

A jury panel will be qualified Monday and voir dire — questioning of the jury panel — will begin Tuesday.

Westbrook said he anticipated beginning the trial either late Tuesday morning or following the lunch break Tuesday.

Defense attorney David Martinez of Lubbock will be defending Mireles.

Letter provides closest thing to Father's Day sentiment

Maybe it is appropriate that the letter arrived in the Thursday morning mail, just a few short hours before Father's Day. It is, after all, as close as I am likely to get to receiving a Father's Day message of any kind.

Ott

It came, interestingly enough, from a former reporter here at the newspaper — one I had hired several years ago right out of the University of New Mexico and who has since moved on, as the old saying goes, to bigger and better things.

His letter was postmarked, "Atlanta, Ga.", and on the bottom lefthand corner of the envelope was scribbled the word, "Personal," though there was nothing terribly "personal" about its contents, at least nothing particularly scandalous that could be passed on to the handful of employees still here who would have remembered the reporter in question.

Instead, his note merely thanked me for having given him a recent job recommendation.

My lies must have been convincing, he said, because he had just begun his new duties that very day with a financial publication in, yes, Atlanta, Ga.

At the bottom of his note he had joked, "You should feel like a proud father. You have former employees working all over the country."

He was right.

Of just those who have remained in contact over the years, one is based at her newspaper's capital bureau in Sacramento, Calif., another is employed by a U.S. senator in Washington, D.C., several are headquartered in Austin, two or three more have good-paying jobs in San Antonio, one has become the editor of a weekly newspaper and at least two others have become reasonably successful free-lance writers, having had their work published in several national publications.

In almost every case I had provided a glowing recommendation during the course of their job hunt, trying to give the impression that only — and I quote — "a dang fool" would pass up the opportunity to hire one of my sterling former staff members.

So, yes, I suppose I do feel a bit of fatherly pride when word gets back to me that one of my children, uh, I mean, staffers has successfully landed a new job.

Maybe the "feeling" doesn't rank up there with seeing your kid hit a home run during a critical Little League game or make you swell up with pride when he (or she) brings home a perfect report card, but witnessing an accomplishment of any kind does make a — quote, unquote — "boss" feel proud, nonetheless.

It's as though you have had some positive impact on another human being, even if deep down inside you know you didn't have a thing in the world to do with his or her success other than getting out of the way and occassionally saying, "nice job, keep it up."

Still, you can pretend.

And like a proud father, you can brag to others about how successful your "kids" have become. Instead of making comments like, "My son just got

"The one who wins No. 1 gets first pick and so on down the line," Bachmann said.

Tickets will be $5 a performance, except for those who have registered for the conference. Full registration, which includes the plays, workshops and dinners is $85 for members and $110 for non-members. For more information call 682-2544.

'These workshops will be on a wide variety of topics from acting to singing and dance. Some will be done with local people and some with nationally recognized leaders in theater.'

— Don Bachmann, executive director of Midland Community Theatre

Workshops will be presented Thursday through Saturday beginning at 8 a.m. and ending at 12:05 p.m.

"These workshops will be on a wide variety of topics from acting to singing and dance," Bachmann said. "Some will be done with local people and some with nationally recognized leaders in theater.

"Keith Martin will be here from North Carolina Repertory Theatre. David Young, who runs the Theatre at Kennedy Center, will be here. Annette Procunier from Canada will be here doing the adjudication workshops. There's a list of 12 other workshop leaders that are nationally recognized."

The founder of this national festival is also the founder of MCT, Art Cole, for whom Theatre Midland was renamed this spring during the 50th anniversary.

Several years ago in anticipation of MCT's 50th anniversary, the theater began the process of applying for the national festival.

"We decided what we wanted to do to help celebrate the 50th anniversary was to do some kind of event that would bring national attention to Midland Community Theatre," Bachmann said. "There's no better way of doing it than by hosting the national championships."

"We got a lot of help from the people at the Chamber of Commerce. Anita Rogers and I went to the national board meeting two years ago. And we were selected over eight other proposals."

Hosting AACT-Fest has another benefit for the theater.

"It gives us a yardstick that we can measure our own theater with," Bachmann said. "And, hopefully, that will give us some incentive to be better at what we do — better productions, better programming."

Library's presentation focuses on detectives, investigation

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

All you have ever wanted to know about detectives and were afraid to ask will be the topic of a special presentation at the Midland County Public Library on Tuesday.

As part of its summer programs aimed at Midland youngsters, the library will host Sgt. Victor Rivera, who will conduct a presentation on detectives and investigations at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Children's Department.

The presentation will be for children ages 6 through 12.

"The Texas State Library comes out with a manual each year that outlines its summer reading programs for libraries across the state," said Denise Agosto, children's librarian. "This year, the focus was on the community and I thought it would be fun and informative to involve the Police Department in this program."

Rivera, who works in the department's detective division, said he will focus mainly on detectives and their work, but will also talk about other police activities.

"I would like to give these kids a general overview of the Police Department," he said.

Rivera said he was approached by Ms. Agosto to do the presentation and said he found it an excellent way let children know about the realities of police work.

"I want to get rid of the misconception of police work that many kids have from watching television," he said. "Problems in the community don't get solved in 30 minutes."

Rivera said children should be more educated about their law-enforcement officials so they can be more informed and involved citizens later on.

"This builds the foundation for better community relations later on," he said.

The Midland library conducts its summer programs twice a week, for children ages 3 through 5 and 6 through 12.

placed into the holes. The holes are capped when not in use. The sidewalk or driveway is marked so flag installers can locate the holes.

Ms. Parker said all the flags are purchased at Imperial Flag and Banner in Midland. The operation is a garage business, but Gaddy thinks it has franchise potential.

The potential in Midland County alone is sizable. There are 27,453 single-family residences in the city and 30,286 in the county; plus, there are 3,484 businesses. The secretary and boss think the fee is affordable enough that they can gain enough customers to make it profitable.

"We have been through a lot of ups and downs and booms and busts, and seen a lot of deals come and go, but we are very optimistic about this project," said Ms. Parker, who has been Gaddy's secretary for the past 21 years.

She said she is taking care of the nuts and bolts of the new business, while Gaddy is handling the financial aspects, as they gear up for the Fourth of July.

"In all the years we have worked together this is the first time we have entered into a business venture together," she said.

"I think it will be one of those businesses that will grow a little each year, until we have a very sizable business," Gaddy said.

Homeowners file lawsuit to stop building of public housing project

DALLAS (AP) — A group of far north Dallas homeowners fighting a public housing project planned for their area have sued the city housing authority, alleging violations of the Texas Open Meetings Act.

The Public Housing Steering Committee Inc., which represents 14 homeowner associations, alleges the Dallas Housing Authority illegally purchased an eight-acre site for the project without properly notifying the public.

The lawsuit, filed Friday, asked that the $1.3 million deal be voided.

The housing authority has denied the allegations, insisting that it has complied fully with the state law.

"We have not done anything wrong," housing authority President Alphonso Jackson told The Dallas Morning News. "If they want to waste their money on a lawsuit, they are welcome to go ahead and file one."

Chief operating officer Lori Moon and other members of the housing authority board said they informally approved the site in a closed session about a month before the May 2 purchase.

A formal vote on the site will occur after a public hearing, probably in August, she told the newspaper.

Ms. Moon said the housing authority was careful to ensure the land purchase complied with open meetings laws. The posted agenda for the meeting where the site was discussed listed a possible closed-door discussion of real estate transactions, she said.

"It has not been secretive and kept from the public," she told The Morning News.

However, the homeowners argued in their lawsuit that the DHA disclosed no details about the deal in public notices or meeting minutes.

"By failing to notify the public of its negotiations, acquisition and $1.3 million funding of the property, the DHA and its representatives knowingly circumvented the well-established policy of open government," the lawsuit says.

The open meetings law requires government agencies to give advance notice of official activities. The notice must include items permitted to be discussed in closed sessions, such as real estate deals and personnel matters.

"I don't think there's any question the Open Meetings Act has been violated," said Larry Friedman, the homeowners' attorney.

The housing project was planned in response to a federal court order placing 3,200 low-income families in predominantly white, middle-class areas around Dallas and its suburbs.

U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer issued the order in February after declaring that public housing in Dallas was segregated and inferior.

Opponents have said they fear the project will lower their property values and increase crime.

Jackson said those worries were unfounded and fueled by racism. The lawsuit, he said, was an act of desperation.

"It clearly shows that they have not been persuasive with any of the arguments they have made against the project," he told the newspaper.

Final verdict on base closings is due soon from commission

WASHINGTON (AP) — The verdict will be handed down in the next eight days — death knell or deliverance for the dozens of military bases nationwide being reviewed for closure or realignment.

Texas is anything but an idle bystander in this fourth round of base closings, with eight major defense installations under intense scrutiny.

At this point, it's anyone's guess whether the state will emerge from the process with superficial nicks or serious trauma.

"With so many bases on the list, I just think it's going to be very difficult to come out totally whole," said Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas.

"I think that we are going to have to take some pain, but I just don't know where it's going to be."

That's the quandary.

During endless public hearings, members of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission have given tantalizing glimpses of their thoughts. But predicting how they will vote during final deliberations beginning Thursday is akin to reading tea leaves.

One thing that does seem clear is that the commission is likely to buck the Air Force's recommendation to keep open its five depots. The Air Force is publicly insistent that downsizing the five is economically preferable to any closures.

But the commission estimates that the Air Force has excess capacity amounting to 1 3/4 depots — leading observers to conclude that the panel will recommend the closure of at least one, and possibly two, of the huge depots.

The future of Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio hangs in the balance. With an estimated 10,400 civilian jobs and 1,600 military jobs at stake, Kelly's Air Logistics Center is the biggest Texas target.

"The commission is struggling with should they close one or two depots. It is very serious, no question about it," said retired Air Force Brig. Gen. Paul Roberson, who is leading San Antonio's save-the-base effort.

Under a one-depot closure scenario, Mrs. Hutchison and others predict that McClellan AFB in Sacramento, Calif. — the lowest rated among the five ALCs — would be the loser. Defenders of Robins AFB in Georgia, Tinker AFB in Oklahoma and Hill AFB in Utah have urged that McClellan and Kelly be closed and the spoils divided.

Mrs. Hutchison won't contemplate a two-depot closure scenario. "I don't believe they will do it," she said.

San Antonio's focus isn't uniquely on Kelly.

The Air Force also wants to close Brooks AFB and shift most of its assets to Ohio and Florida. The city has countered with an innovative plan that would allow Brooks' closure but keep its key missions — and some 3,000 jobs — on the Brooks campus under the management of nearby Kelly or Lackland AFBs. Several commissioners have appeared receptive to the plan, which San Antonio estimates would save $100 million more than the Air Force plan.

Although the Air Force is fighting the proposal, Roberson said: "There still are very good chances the commission could seriously consider it."

The Air Force hasn't been the only service plagued by nagging depot questions. The Army is confronting its own excess capacity questions.

Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana lawmakers have been fighting the Army's decision to close Red River Army Depot near Texarkana — the largest employer in the four-state corner. Its closure, costing more than 7,000 direct and indirect jobs, would cause unemployment to skyrocket from 8 percent to nearly 22 percent.

Texans argue that Letterkenny Army Depot in Pennsylvania, rated lower than Red River, should be closed instead. Shuttering Red River and keeping only one heavy-equipment depot, at Anniston Army Depot in Alabama, could prove foolhardy in times of war, they contend.

Bush vetoes bills for tobacco, regulation of health maintenance organizations

'We made our decisions based on my core philosophy of local government control and limited government.'

— Gov. George W. Bush

AUSTIN (AP) — Twenty-three proposed laws were killed Friday by Gov. George W. Bush, including a tobacco bill opposed by health groups and a measure to regulate health maintenance organizations that was backed by consumer advocates and doctors.

Bush said he used his veto power to further his philosophy of less state government control.

The tobacco measure, he said, would have interfered with local communities' ability to restrict tobacco sales to minors. Groups such as the American Cancer Society said it would have made cigarettes more easily available to children.

"We made our decisions based on my core philosophy of local control and limited government," Bush said. "We put it to the test that I outlined in my inaugural address: government if necessary, but not necessarily government."

The governor also vetoed the Patient Protection Act, which would have imposed some regulations on HMOs.

The bill, among other provisions, would have required more disclosure about benefits and restrictions in managed-care plans and an appeals process for doctors dropped from plans and for consumers denied coverage.

Opponents said it would have raised health-care costs and lowered the quality of care.

"Gov. Bush's veto ... demonstrates his concern about making health care more accessible for more Texans," said Dane Harris, president of Texas Association of Business & Chambers of Commerce.

The governor's office, in a statement explaining the veto, said, "The title of this legislation is a misnomer. Gov. Bush concluded this legislation imposes too much government regulation and unfairly impacts some health-care providers while exempting others."

Instead, Bush said he would ask Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer to develop regulations to protect patients and doctors.

"These regulations should give patients access to the information they need to make quality health-care choices and should ensure fair treatment and due process for health-care professionals in managed-care plans," he said.

John Hildreth, director of the Southwest Regional Office of Consumers Union, said the veto means a missed opportunity and a potential headache for the next Legislature.

"Keep in mind that a lot of the better managed-care companies in Texas are already doing these things," Hildreth said. "It is the other ones — particularly new companies and fly-by-night operations relocating in Texas — that we are most concerned about."

Dr. Mark Kubala, president of the Texas Medical Association, said the vetoed legislation "would have set a national example for patient protection."

Another bill vetoed by Bush would have made it illegal for minors to have spray paint. Bush's office said the measure had good intentions of addressing the problem of gang graffiti but could unfairly subject law-abiding youths to prosecution.

In wading through the bills passed by legislators in their regular session this year, Bush said he found one where "the interests of local control have collided" — a measure creating a special water district, with a board appointed by the governor, to oversee the Circle C Ranch development in southwest Travis County.

The measure, which was sought by developer Gary Bradley, was opposed by Austin Mayor Bruce Todd and the Greater Austin Chamber of Commerce.

Bush said he would allow the measure to become law without his signature. He said lawmakers have made a commitment to change it in the next legislative session to make the governing board an elected body, a move he supports.

The governor also urged cities, counties and developers to work together "to develop guidelines which will ensure people who live and own property in extraterritorial jurisdictions are treated fairly."

Vehicles won't need retesting for emissions, officials report

FORT WORTH (AP) — Motorists who submitted their cars and trucks to emissions testing at now-defunct centralized stations in December and January will be exempt from further tests for 1995 and 1996, the Texas Department of Public Safety said.

"We will work something out in the next couple of days with the TNRCC (Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission) so that we will honor that inspection and won't make the individual pay twice," said Maj. David McEathron of the Department of Public Safety.

Responsibility for the testing was passed from the state environmental panel to DPS in recent legislation that scrapped the centralized program.

The measure calls for motorists to return to the testing program used in previous years until the governor's office can negotiate a new system with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The previous program called for emissions testing to be done during annual safety inspections. In January, the short-lived central program involved testing at a separate location in months when license registrations were due, with certification lasting for two years.

"I went because they were affordable. I stayed because they're wonderful."

I first went to Planned Parenthood because I really couldn't afford a gynecologist. I was young. And nervous. And didn't know what to expect. But now I can afford to go anywhere. And you know what? I still go to Planned Parenthood.

From my very first visit, I felt they sincerely cared about me. They took the time to know me and answered all my questions in plain talk. Every time I go, they're as kind and understanding as ever.

I also feel their medical staff is professional, knowledgeable and very up to date. They're extremely sensitive to a woman's special medical concerns, and everything is kept confidential. I'm glad they offer such a wide range of services. As far as I'm concerned, Planned Parenthood is like family and will always be an important part of my health care.

Court's decision sets course for minorities

There is no question that opponents of affirmative-action programs are pleased with the Supreme Court ruling that curtailed the federal government's freedom to give special help to racial minorities. Or that proponents of affirmative-action programs are disappointed. The ruling last Monday essentially will mean the federal government will have to use the more rigorous "strict scrutiny" standard when mandating affirmative-action programs.

While the judicial mood obviously is away from affirmative-action programs, we think the high court was wise to stop short of actually abandoning the use of affirmative-action in all instances. Despite all the impressive strides made on racial discrimination in the past couple of decades, there likely will be particular situations in the future in which use of affirmative-action could make a positive difference.

Although affirmative-action advocates saw the Supreme Court's two controversial decisions last Monday — the one requiring the federal government to use the "strict scrutiny" standard to order affirmative-action programs and a second that made it more difficult for judges to order city school desegregation plans to attract white students from the suburbs — as a setback in their quest for racial equality, opponents of governmental intervention in racial matters have argued convincingly for years that if the federal government is giving ANY minority group special status, the nation is moving away from rather than toward the day when our society is truly "color-blind." That argument has merit, and apparently has found a degree of favor with the high court justices.

Of course, abandoning programs specifically designed to promote racial equality potentially could encourage more divisiveness although that result is not as likely now as in the past. As a nation we must never abandon the goal of racial equality. But there is a major difference in the United States in 1995 and the nation 30 years ago when affirmative-action programs were being designed to permit racial minorities a degree of civil rights. In terms of civil rights and equal opportunity, the nation today looks nothing like it did 30 years ago.

Yet to get to that truly color-blind society, the nation must be willing to step aside from any form of racial discrimination — even government-sanctioned discrimination. Monday's Supreme Court ruling was the start down that road.

JACK ANDERSON

Ex-congressman wants campaign reform

WASHINGTON — If war is too important to leave to generals, political reform has become too important to leave to politicians — at least incumbents.

That's the lesson of the Claremont covenant — the handshake agreement between President Clinton and House Speaker Newt Gingrich in Claremont, N.H., to appoint a blue-ribbon panel that would tackle the thorny issue of campaign finance and lobbying reform.

Anderson

What neither man knew at the time was that a blue-ribbon-style panel was already open for business, though it has yet to issue its first press release or fire off its first fax. Instead, the 2-month-old Campaign for America Project is quietly conducting polls and focus groups and enlisting political and corporate luminaries from across the ideological spectrum to serve on a board.

This nonpartisan blueprint is the brainchild of former Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., who was Mr. Clean during his eight years in Congress and now bears the scars to prove it. Synar topped the hit list of special interests ranging from the National Rifle Association and ranchers to industry lobbyists for tobacco, oil and insurance. He played no favorites by rejecting money from political action committees friendly to Democratic causes he had championed. He also received the 1995 Profile in Courage Award from the family of President John F. Kennedy.

Synar's sidekick may be former Rep. Vin Weber, R-Minn., a highly respected conservative who voluntarily dropped out of the congressional rat race in 1992 to spend more time with his family. A close friend and adviser to Gingrich, and vice chairman of the conservative group Empower America, Weber is said to be se iously weighing an offer of partnership from Synar. Between Synar and Weber, who bridge the ideological divide and have powerful friends in high places, this commission could have the chance to succeed. Weber would have his work cut out for him, given the GOP's resistance to change and the fact they are enjoying the cash machine that comes with majority status.

Gingrich himself understood the bottom-line implications of last November's election when on the eve of the midterm elections he threatened PACs who might donate to Democrats: "For anybody who's not on board now it's going to be the two coldest years in Washington." (Is this the same Gingrich who in 1990 blasted the congressional "system of corruption in which money politics is defeating and driving out citizen politics.") In February, Gingrich headlined a Republican National Committee gala that raked in over $11 million — the most money ever collected in a single fund-raiser.

In addition to Gingrich's dubious commitment to the cause, some Republican senators are threatening to filibuster the creation of the kind of commission endorsed by Clinton and Gingrich. "This is the dumbest idea I've heard since the 104th Congress was sworn in," said Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., the GOP's top strategist on campaign finance reform. Like most Republicans, McConnell opposes all reforms that cap the amount candidates can spend in an election, and he thwarted Democratic attempts to do so in the last Congress.

Unlike many of his Democratic colleagues, Synar didn't back away from political reform after Clinton was elected. While others argued that reform had to wait lest it disrupt the peace and interfere with Clinton's agenda, Synar pressed on to no avail. Both Democrats and Republicans talk a good game on campaign finance reform, yet both retreat when it means goring their own special interest oxen.

WILLIAM MURCHISION

Clinton's rhetoric is just like Pound's poetry

WASHINGTON — Robert Frost dismissed Carl Sandburg as the only poet to gain in translation. That is approximately the disdainful reaction of many Democrats to Bill Clinton's five-minute minihomily on the budget Tuesday night.

Will

Distilled to its essence, his volte-face — five months ago he proposed large deficits; now he proposes balancing the budget — suggests a slogan for his re-election race: "Me too, only slower." That is not a bugle call calculated to send a frisson through friend or foe, but perhaps it would sound better in some other language. Besides, Clinton's intervention in the budget process at least serves the purpose of proving that his presidency still has a pulse.

In just five minutes the president repudiated the budget he sent to Congress in February, and he promised to balance the budget in 10 years rather than the Republicans' seven years. As a candidate he promised to do it in five years but now he considers the Republicans' seven-year timetable a reckless endangerment of the economy. He did not say how a $7 trillion economy can be discombobulated by cutting the deficit $60 billion in a year, which is the largest yearly cut in the House Republicans' plan. Laura Tyson, his chief economic adviser, says a seven-year goal is "arbitrary" but a 10-year goal is not. You figure it out.

Joseph Epstein, the essayist, wishes someone would invent a clock that tells both real and psychological time — how long something is and how long it seems it is. Clinton's five-minute talk must have seemed of Castro-like length to Democrats who for many months have been having such fun saying things like, "Our proposed 5.2 percent annual increase in school lunch spending is sublimely just, but the Republicans' proposed 4.7 percent annual increase is fascistic." Clinton's talk washed away, like so many sand castles, the congressional Democrats' claims to be more than a merely reactive party, and to be operating on a higher moral plane than Republicans.

Until Tuesday night the congressional Republicans' stance toward the president regarding the budget was Samuel Goldwyn's stance toward subordinates: "If I want your opinion, I'll give it to you." Tuesday night the president said, in effect, "I'll take it."

His decision to trudge along in the van of Republican government-cutters, muttering "not so much, not so fast, cut there rather than here," comes during a spring punctuated by 5-4 Supreme Court rulings in important cases. (They have concerned term limits, affirmative action, school desegregation, the reach of the federal government's power under the commerce clause. More 5-4 decisions are possible i the next few weeks concerning church-state relations, racial gerrymandering, freedom of association and gay rights.) If presidents did not nominate Supreme Court justices, it might be hard to believe that next year's presidential election was important, at least concerning domestic matters.

There are now two parties committed to the propositions that government is too big and that people are not entitled to all the current entitlements. Perhaps most Democrats are not really committed in their broken hearts. But a party with a president is largely defined by him, absent an insurrection, and Clinton has until now seemed on his way to becoming the first Democratic president since FDR to run for re-election without a challenge from within his party. But now if Jesse Jackson does not run, he must forever hold his peace. Forever is a long time and holding his peace is not Jackson's specialty.

Harold Ickes, deputy White House chief of staff, says of Clinton's re-election campaign, "The overall message will be the change of direction. Here's what you had for the 12 years before 1992; here's where we have moved the country." But those denoted by the pronoun "we" — Clinton and his appointees — are being moved by those who are moving the country by controlling Congress. No one believes Clinton has cheerfully chosen the direction he is now moving.

In 1992, for the first time since 1964, a Democrat won the White House without running against Washington. But in 1995 he is more committed than Ronald Reagan was, as a practical matter, to an agenda that actually will result in curbing and cutting government. Perhaps he is now positioned to offer himself to the country as the person best suited to the task of tempering Newt Gingrich. But is the country ready to regard the presidency as a mere weight in the saddle of the speaker of the House?

George Will's column is distributed by Washington Post Writers Group.

ANOTHER VIEW

Curious should keep O.J. trial in overall perspective

The O.J. Simpson case has been called "the trial of the century." Perhaps so. Not because of its relevance to anyone, but for its expense, its hype, its sensationalism.

Some would say the trial in the kidnap of Charles Lindbergh's baby outweighs the O.J. trial for that title. Maybe so. That, at least, had an international audience.

(June 12) was the first anniversary of the murder of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman. Judge Lance Ito, Marsha Clark, Johnnie Cochran ... are all household names, now in what appears to be a daily sitcom.

It's possible the trial expense is approaching $10 million, counting prosecution and defendant expenses, and it's not even half over. Given the number of jurors excused, it could easily end in mistrial with not enough jurors.

If that occurs, expect a backlash about the state of criminal justice in America, where the rich, such as O.J. (see, initials alone tell you who he is) can draw out a trial and bring justice to its knees, while the poor get sent up to the Big House in mere days.

If O.J. Simpson were some out-of-luck drifter on trial for murder with a court-appointed attorney or public defender, it's said, he would have been tried and sentenced in a week.

These are questions worth exploring. As Jimmy Carter once said, life isn't fair. But, we do expect a semblance of fairness in our public institutions.

The O.J. trial is an odd prism with which to view our justice system, to be sure. It gets curiouser and curiouser.

Americans should not forget that this is not a daily soap opera. It's a life-and-death, for-real trial. It's hard to forget the hype and drama, but we should try to keep it in perspective.

Jackson, Miss.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, June 18, the 169th day of 1995. There are 196 days left in the year. This is Father's Day.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 18, 1983, Astronaut Sally K. Ride became America's first woman in space as she and four colleagues blasted off aboard the space shuttle Challenger.

On this date:

In 1778, American forces entered Philadelphia as the British withdrew during the Revolutionary War.

In 1812, the United States declared war against Britain.

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte met his Waterloo as British and Prussian troops defeated the French in Belgium.

In 1873, suffragist Susan B. Anthony was fined $100 for attempting to vote in the 1872 presidential election (however, the fine was never paid).

In 1928, aviator Amelia Earhart became the first woman to fly across the Atlantic Ocean as she completed a flight from Newfoundland to Wales in about 21 hours.

Family values leave much to be desired today

Which family are we talking about in this debate about family values? Is it the Gambino family? Of course not. Could it be the House of Atreus? Don't be absurd.

Baker

I don't think it is the Oblonsky family either. Too unhappy, the Oblonskys, so distinctively unhappy that they made Tolstoy say that "every unhappy family is unhappy in its own way."

When Americans say "family values," I think it is a happy family they have in mind. The marriage of the words "family" and "values" practically forces you to think of happiness.

Remember Frankenstein's monster happily puffing a cigar while the blind hermit entertains him on the violin? The poor abused monster, enjoying a rare moment of bliss, says something like: "Smoke good. Music good."

Same with me when I hear "family values." I feel an urge to say, "Family good. Values good."

So I very much doubt that this much-discussed family of the enviable values is England's Royal Family. No, not Charles and Di; not Fun-loving Fergie and Randy Andy.

What of William Faulkner's Snopes family? Insufferable.

The Addams family? They're a barrel of ghoulish fun all right. They are also a family that ruins the neighborhood. Family values or no family values, real-estate values must be revered. Real-estate values speak of capitalism, moolah, the bottom line, scratch, the big jack.

When I hear "real-estate values," I think: "Capitalism good. Moolah good. Bottom line good. Scratch good. Big jack good."

What about the Adams family? Presidents John and John Quincy, scrappy Abigail, Ambassador Charles Francis, scholarly Henry. Some family, no? No. Not in the Age of Noot. Despicable elitists all. They probably want to save public broadcasting.

I am trying here to explain why I spent 141 minutes watching "True Lies" the other night. Having read in the paper that Senator Bob Dole recommended "True Lies" as a movie expressing family values, I thought seeing it might help me identify the mysterious family whose values so delight politicians.

Alas, I was misled, for Dole later declared he had never recommended "True Lies" as "family friendly." By then, however, I had already spent an evening with it and thought of several families who might find it rich in the values they admired.

These included Ma Barker and her boys, the Borgias, and Mark Twain's Grangerfords and Hungerfords. In "Huckleberry Finn," all the Grangerfords and all the Hungerfords murder each other for a good reason that none of them can remember.

In "True Lies," the indestructible Arnold Schwarzenegger slaughters whole battalions of people for one obvious reason: to keep America laughing. It is death as hilarity. The murdered villains are Arabs, apparently the last people except Episcopalians whom Hollywood feels free to offend en masse.

I want to be outraged but am amused anyhow. Thus can evil movie magicians corrupt the noblest American.

I argue with myself: If the classic "Huckleberry Finn" can use the murder of two entire families for humor, surely Schwarzenegger is entitled to slaughter multitudes for a laugh. It is a weak case. Twain is preaching an acidly funny sermon about human foolishness; Arnold is killing thousands to help millions kill time.

Even here, though, I feel a touch of hypocritical self-righteousness. The truth is, I am amused by the Bugs Bunny insouciance with which Schwarzenegger can wipe out dozens of heavily armed, highly trained killers, usually without even bothering to aim his vast armory of weapons.

Actually, the movie is nothing more than a cartoon. Everything is mindless fluff. All life is falsified to clear the way for jokes, none of which is half as funny as the often ingeniously amusing ways in which assorted villains are killed.

The fake violence takes me back to Moe, Larry and Curley, whose physical brutality to each other in ancient "Three Stooges" shorts once seemed joyfully funny to me. Do I harbor a brute within?

The Stooges let it drop after 10 or 12 minutes and made way for Bette Davis. The tireless Schwarzenegger's hour-after-hour killings wear out your smile. My own family values seem clear during all this: Fake violence is good clean fun, but two hours of it is vulgar, immoral and disgusting.

Young thief should return stolen pistol to owner

To the thief who stole my pistol, I hope you didn't miss the account of your act of burglary last Friday night in last Sunday's Reporter Telegram. You know what act of burglary I'm talking about, where you "ripped off," actually the word is stole, a sports firearm from my car.

I'm concerned about you. One of my concerns about you is: What is your motive for wanting just my pistol? You could have had the whole car; you left a set of keys under the driver's seat. Where did you get them? This indicates to me that you are a young person, if so, this might be an early criminal act on your part. Maybe you are not yet ready to accept the responsibility of getting rid of a car you have stolen. But, is that what's going to happen the next time the opportunity presents itself?

Being a young person, you might possibly be impressed with the power that the possession of the stolen pistol might give you. How does it make you feel? Important? Macho? Powerful? Better watch out, it's just a .22-caliber, therefore at the bottom of the scale of firepower. If you put it up against someone else's larger caliber weapon, you could easily come out the loser.

Being a law-abiding person, I felt I had to report the theft to the police. The police cannot just forgive you like I can; if you are caught, it is the people of the state of Texas you will stand trial before, not me. Then, someday you will be judged by a Power bigger than me or any government; what are you going to say to the Almighty when you stand before Him?

All is not lost though. I'll tell you what I'll do. If you will find a way to return my pistol to me (you were smart enough to steal it, you should be able to figure out how to get it back to me), I will tell the police I do not want you prosecuted under the complaint I filed, then no black mark will be written beside your name to follow you from now on.

Then, if you will get together with me, I will try to help you learn about the satisfaction it gives a person to earn the money to buy what you want, instead of stealing it from someone. And I will find work for you to do for me so that you will earn your own money to buy what you want.

I believe what I have proposed to you is good for me too. It will make me feel good, instead of feeling hurt and resentful because of something bad, and possibly harmful to others, you did to me and to yourself. I hope you'll take me up on this; you know where I live and you can figure out how to contact me.

City's animal control policy needs change

In March 1994, I acquired an abandoned bobcat kitten. I bottle fed him and cared for him and he grew into a fine, healthy, beautiful cat and was as gentle as a common housecat. Bobby slept with my wife and I or our children and played all the time and actually became part of the family.

On June 3, Bobby got out of our house and Animal Control of Midland was alerted when Bobby was spotted by a neighbor. The officer from Animal Control captured Bobby with our help, put him in a cage and took him to Animal Control. The officer told us that they would keep him until Monday and then the person in charge would make a decision about what to do.

We called Animal Control and were told that Bobby would not calm down and that they might put him to sleep that day. We asked them about the game warden making a decision on Monday and were told that he did not usually get involved with these situations. We gave them the phone number to the Feline Foundation and asked if they would please call them. Several hours later, Animal Control called and told us they had decided to go ahead and put Bobby to sleep and that they could not transport Bobby anywhere else.

The following Monday I contacted the game warden and told him about all of this and he told me that if he had been called he could have taken Bobby and placed him in a very appropriate accommodation within the county where we could have even gotten to visit him.

I sure wish the city's policy on animal control could be looked into. I realize that I should not have kept Bobby in the city limits, but I do not believe there was any reason for Bobby to be killed. I wonder how many other animals have been needlessly killed because of city politics!

Headline epitomizes young pilot's testimony

I'm not sure who wrote the headline in today's (Sunday, June 11) Reporter-Telegram ("Pilot: God protected me"), but I am so grateful and pleased that you epitomized the testimony of the young pilot O'Grady!

My husband was a fighter pilot in World War II and when he saw the headline with God's name the first thing you saw, tears came to his eyes and he said "Praise God for a paper that will use His name in the headline."

My husband could identify with this pilot and he is so happy he gave God the credit for his being rescued.

Article dispels myth of Texans' free spirits

My wife and I read in the New York Times (June 11, 1995) that neighbors want the Erskine family in Midland to clear their land and stop rehabilitating wildlife because of unsightliness. I couldn't believe that this complaint was coming from, of all people, many Texans — the Lone Star people we in the East associate as the last of the free spirits, the get "government off our backs" descendants of pioneers with a long tradition of support for the rights of the rugged individual. I also thought one of the things most of us detested about communism was that it produced conformers.

Finally, the article also revealed that it was still another myth that all Texans loved wildlife and nature and believed in the biblical charge to be good stewards of the land. Instead, many Texans, it seems, prefer rows of artificial-looking green lawns requiring seeding, feeding, weeding, watering and cutting with lots of herbicides and pesticides.

Cemetery vandals need to do something positive

I have returned home for the summer from college. After work one day my mom and I planned to run some of our errands together. She listed what we planned: lunch at Taco Villa, Midland College, the cemetery, Hobby Lobby...The cemetery? I asked her why we were going to the cemetery. We didn't have any flowers to put out. She told me why. The cemetery has been vandalized.

When I found out about the cemetery, I was upset. They picked on people who couldn't help themselves. It is enough that they are dead, but now their families are grieving once more over the broken headstones and other damaged property. Even the head of my Lord and Savior had been broken off of a statue in the area where my family is buried. Who has that kind of time to waste? For the past two semesters, I worked two jobs and attended school full-time. This summer, I am working and attending school and still don't have enough time to do what I need to do.

To whomever did that, if you have so much energy, why don't you do something positive for your community? There are plenty of elderly people who need their houses repainted and fences repaired. Volunteer at the hospital or at Midland Soup Ministries or the American Heart Association. Do something positive with your time. It will help your community now and you in the future. Vandalizing, even a cemetery, brings down the value of your city, directly affecting you.

I would like to thank the Midland law enforcement officials for bringing the inmates for the cleanup of this thoughtless and selfish act against our city. This world may not be perfect, but with consideration and cooperation, it is livable.

Those who don't vote abdicate sovereignty

I thank those of you who voted and especially those who voted for me. Much has happened since I was last able to get a letter printed in this paper. To those who voted in the City Council elections, my respect and acknowledgement; to those of you who did not see fit to be bothered with controlling the government that may crush you and your rights, backed by law and overzealous enforcers — you are already a slave of those of us who vote. You have abdicated your sovereignty and placed yourself in bondage.

I am greatly disturbed by the rhetoric after the bombing. So many are willing to give up their freedom for the promise of security when it is the very infringement of our liberties that has placed us in the precarious position we find ourselves. As to the proposals of less liberty and more government power to intrude, investigate and subvert, I quote Patrick Henry, "When we see men of such talents and learning compelled to use their utmost abilities to convince themselves there is no danger, is it not sufficient to make us tremble?" William Penn said in 1783, "Necessity is the plea for every infringement of human freedom. It is the argument of tyrants; it is the creed of slaves." Limiting freedom to the elite few is not a new argument.

George Washington said once, "Government is not reason, it is not eloquence, it is fire and like fire it is a dangerous servant and a terrible master." When the fire is in the fireplace, we are served but the fire of our government has grown too high and is about to burn down our house. Barbara Boxer, socialist senator of the Peoples' Republic of California, said of rabble-rousers like myself that it is not lawful to shout fire in a crowded theater: That is true only if the theater is not burning down. We have now the situation where not only is there fire in the theater, it has been started by the theater management and is being fanned by the ushers. Voters must be the bucket brigade. Our house is burning down with us in it. Not voting is like staying inside the burning home and watching it consume you when the water to save you rests in your hands.

It's time for Midlanders to stand against violence

I have lived in Midland all of my life! I know Midland's getting to be more of a large city, but I find it rather sad that Midlanders can't walk, jog, or be out late at night for the fear something might happen to them!

I don't like what Midland is turning into. It's like a dark hideous monster that's coming out of the dark and sickening depths. I don't think I or other Midlanders are going to stand or let our city turn into a more violent and fearful place to live! With what's happening locally, in the state and nationally, I think it's time Midlanders take a stand to this kind of violence — whether it be assaults, robberies or murders or any kind of violence!

I would hope that Midlanders, if they see anything suspicious going on, get involved. I think we should take a stand and interest for our fellow men or fellow women that live in this great town.

Hilton van provides solution to cab problem

The letter by Gwen Parker in the June 11 edition has prompted me to comment on the same subject. Ms. Parker wrote concerning her problems in finding a cab at Midland International Airport on a recent Saturday. I returned to Midland International about 4 p.m. on a Saturday in May. After I collected my luggage and looked for a cab, the only one in the "stand" had a fare and was departing. This was not a great disappointment as this vehicle appeared to be falling apart.

I charged back to the terminal building and called information (no phone books in sight) for the number of the "big" cab company in Midland. I was told "not to worry, one of our cabs will be at the airport in just a few minutes." Thirty minutes later an independent, poorly maintained cab came into sight. This one never made the "cab stand" because it stopped for a party who hailed it as soon as it rounded the curve approaching the airport.

At this point I was beginning to get a little upset over the prospect of having to rent a car just to get to the house. The happy ending to this story is that the van from the Hilton suddenly appeared to pick up arriving hotel guests. I was able to hitch a ride into Midland with them. Thank you, Hilton and driver.

Let's hope the city can improve cab service by the time the new airport opens.

People are responsible for government's success

Recent events have led the public to once again question the federal government's actions. I have heard one woman comment that we, the people of the United States, should not question our government's actions, especially the president. She believes that once a president is elected the people should have enough respect for him and his position to let him do his job.

I agree that we should have and show respect for the president of the United States, and I think we do. We must also remember that he is an elected official of the people. If we do not show approval or disapproval of his actions, then we are not being fair to him or our country. This pertains to all elected officials.

We finance the government by paying taxes, we choose the members of our government by election, and it is also our responsibility to pay attention to the elected officials' actions and respond to them. How else will they know what we, the voters, want and need in our individual communities? This is how our government was designed and we, the people, are ultimately responsible for its success or failure.

Steroids, other drugs are never 'easy way out'

By Loralea Knox

Loralea Knox is 14 years old and currently attends Midland Freshman High School. She has one brother, Jacob Knox, who also attends Midland Freshman. Loralea's parents are Joel and Karalea Knox. Most people know Miss Knox by her ability to talk 24 hours a day, but she also loves to play softball, hang out with her friends, go shopping, and sing (another form of talking). She participates in speech at school and is a very strong debater, probably because she loves to argue with anyone who will respond to her. But she does, however, love to win the argument.

The "easy way out." Sounds good right? The "easy way out" is what every fast-paced-but-lazy human is looking for. See if you fit into this category: Sometimes you don't even care about what you have to do, how it might hurt you, the sacrifices you'll make, or what you're putting at risk to achieve the "easy way out."

If you were in a tremendous hurry to get home and you had to choose between a street that takes 30 minutes or a street that takes 15 minutes to reach your house, which one would you choose? Of course you'd choose the one that takes 15 minutes, because it's the "easy way out." Or let's say you're standing in line at the supermarket and there are five people in front of you. The check-out line right next to you opens up. What would you do? Obviously you would jump into the next line. After all, it's the "easy way out."

So, if you had to choose between being a wimpy, small, skinny athlete, or taking only three pills a day and being a "Superman" athlete, which one would you choose? Sounds like an easy question, right? Indisputably, human nature tells us to take the three pills. After all, it is the "easy way out."

Sadly, though, these aren't just three little harmless pills. They're the illegal, dangerous, and devastatingly harmful drugs steroids. And, unfortunately, 6.6 percent of male high school students nationwide have used, or still are using, steroids and taking the "easy way out."

You're probably thinking right now, "Oh, everyone knows about steroids and the harmful things they do to your body." And you're probably right. Everyone should know about steroids. After all, it seems that every major-league sport has had at least one superstar athlete who has ruined his career by using steroids. We've heard about people like Steve Michalik, the 1976 Mr. Universe. Disastrously, Steve's universe came crashing down when it was discovered that he was using steroids.

Yet, even though it's common knowledge that steroids hurt, not help, there are still over 500,000 senior high school students who are using these drugs. "Why do they do this?" you might ask. Why? Because at the time, these students don't think about things like shrinking kidneys, anxiety attacks, severe acne, cancerous liver tumors, and high blood-cholesterol levels. The only thing these young athletes can think of is the bulging Terminator bodies that they will soon have. But, are these bodies really theirs? No, they're not. These bodies no longer belong to the unlucky students. They belong to steroids.

We've all learned through the years that the harder people work for something, the more they will respect it. If something is just handed to most people on silver platters, usually it's easier to take such gifts for granted. So, wouldn't you rather have a huge, muscled, beautiful body that you worked hard to get, than a huge, bulging, aching, sore, tense, and tight body that you don't even deserve? After all, it's not a real body, it's just a bunch of skin pumped full of steroids.

How do steroids "pump you up?" Steroids act like the male hormone testosterone. Some users start with three little blue pills and work up to nine a day in eight-week cycles. Some users forget the cycles and just increase the dosage. Some "stack" for quicker results. "Stacking" means users mix different types of steroids together. But the most popular way to take steroids is by injections because this procedure works the quickest.

Not only do steroids hurt the body by causing abdominal pain, liver enlargement, severe dysfunction of the body, growth of the breast and shrinkage of the testicles in men, but it also causes damage to mental health. Users begin to think they are all-powerful. They become aggressive, moody, depressed, irritable, and they receive an intense anger known to steroid users as "Roid Rages." Most importantly, all users suffer from severe aggression-depression cycles.

Perhaps you'll now understand that the "easy way out" is not always the best way out. A final thought to remember is that "what is popular is not always right, and what is right is not always popular." You only have one body. Treat it right. Don't take the "EASY WAY OUT!"

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish "open" letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702, or you may fax to 682-3793.

Coast Guard Commander Ben Thomason, a 1965 graduate of Midland High School, recently received the Coast Guard Distinguished Flying Cross while serving at the U.S. Coast Guard Air Station in Houston.

He received the award for his courageous actions as detachment command and copilot of an HH-65A Dolphin helicopter during last year's flood evacuations in Houston. In response to emergency calls in the wake of Hurricane Rosa, he and his crew launched their aircraft despite torrential rains and poor visibility.

Flying close to the ground, Thomason and his crew located and evacuated survivors before they could be swept away by rising flood waters. Flying at night in total darkness, he maneuvered around trees and flew into makeshift landing zones to rescue flood victims.

Before it was all over, he rescued a total of 58 survivors.

With the Distinguished Flying Cross, he joins a select group of men and women who have demonstrated their outstanding ability to excel while serving with the U.S. Coast Guard. The award is given to coastguardsmen in recognition of their heroic and extraordinary achievements while participating in aerial flight.

Thomason joined the Coast Guard in March 1975. He is a 1970 graduate of the University of Texas, Austin, with a bachelor of arts degree and a 1988 graduate of American University, Washington, D.C., with a master of science degree.

Michael Petrie, son of Michael Petrie of Midland and Brenda Sloan of Ponca City, Okla., recently enlisted in the U.S. Navy for guaranteed training in the Navy's Radioman program.

He enlisted under the Delayed Entry Program and will report to Recruit Training Command Great Lakes, Ill., in June 1995 for active duty, where he will undergo basic training.

Upon completion of basic training, he will begin 13 weeks of schooling at San Diego, Calif., in the radioman field. Radiomen operate radiotelephones and radioteletypes, prepare messages for international and domestic commercial telegraph, in addition to sending and receiving messages via the Navy system. After successfully completing school, he could be assigned to any one of the Navy's duty stations around the world.

Quarry find prompts scientists to revise theories

By Anita Baker
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH — If a group of geology professors and students hadn't wandered through a West Texas quarry four years ago just as sunlight angled off the rocks in a special way, they would never have spotted the tiny squiggles.

Sometimes "you can just be lucky. You can be there when the sun is just right," said geologist John Breyer in his Texas Christian University office.

Captured in stone in a 30-foot bluff were miniature rows an inch or two long, connected with hairpin turns.

Now, after an exhaustive investigation, three TCU geologists who were on the trip have concluded that the markings were probably left by a wormlike multicellular animal — a theory that challenges conventional wisdom about when such creatures first appeared.

"If we are right, it will really change the thinking of multicellular life on Earth," TCU geologist Richard Hanson said.

Although precursors to today's plant life existed 1.3 billion years ago, multicellular animals were not thought to have appeared until hundreds of millions of years later. The markings in the quarry were made more than 1 billion years ago, when the West Texas rock was an oozing floor of a shallow sea.

Scientists have long wondered why animals took so long to evolve after plants, Hanson said. Now Breyer, Hanson and a third TCU geologist, Art Busbey, suspect that early forms of animals did develop about the same time.

Breyer likened it to finding a Roman sword in Canada "that proves they came to North America and you have to rethink history."

The trio published their theory in the March issue of Geology magazine and are awaiting responses from fellow geologists.

"What makes this discovery so exciting is that this might prove that multicellular life originated twice," Breyer said. It's possible that complex animal life existed more than a billion years ago, became extinct and reappeared 350 million years later, when evidence of multicelled animals became abundant, he said.

Breyer said he almost dismissed the find of former TCU student Ed Roy of San Antonio, who pointed out the markings in the talc quarry on a ranch near Van Horn.

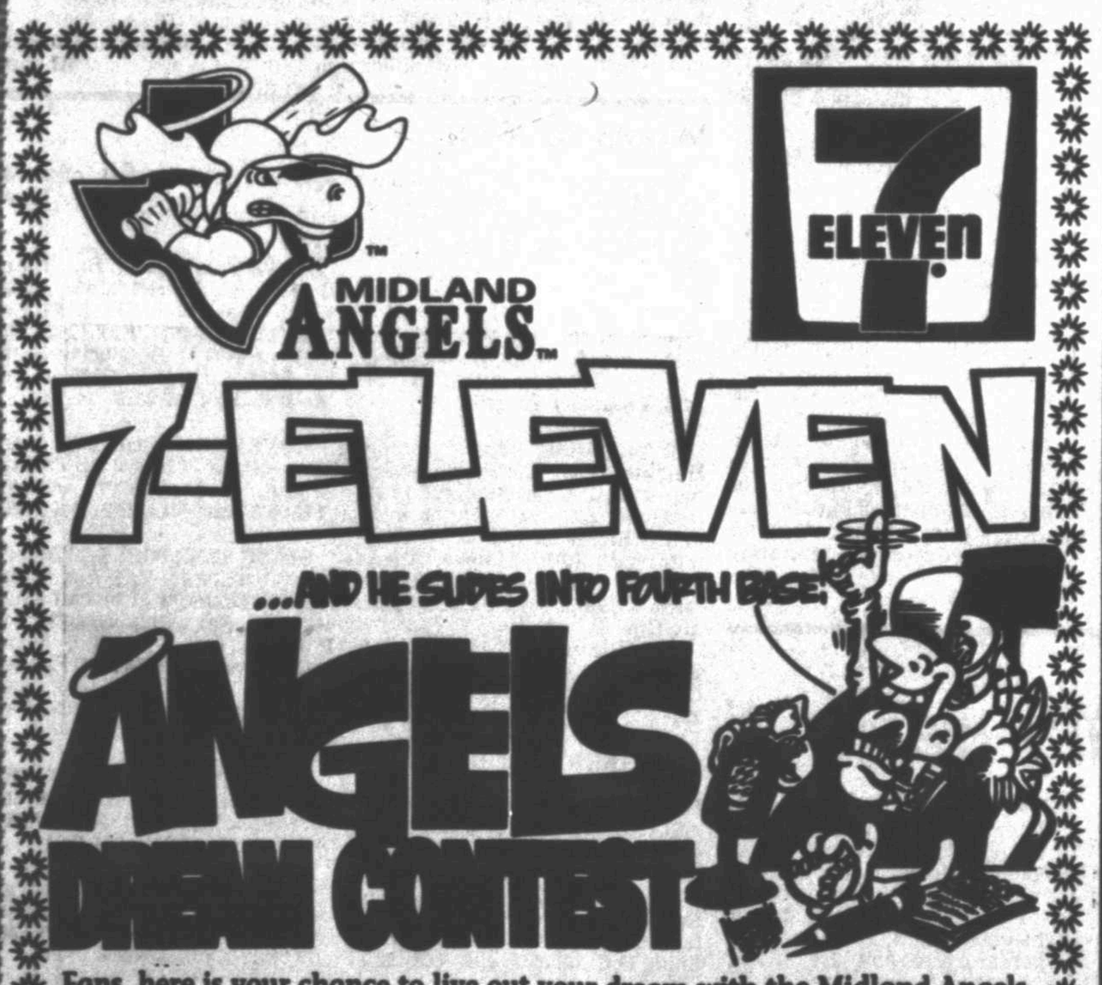

But as the group of 20 from TCU and the University of Arkansas started to leave, they went back for another look.

When they found 11 bumpy patches at the site, they became more excited.

Using duct tape to keep the stones intact, the geology group removed them from the cliff and brought them back to TCU.

Hanson said the trio began an intense investigation to verify the rocks' age and make sure that what they saw was not the result of ripples made by water or marks made when the Earth's surface was bent and folded.

"I am convinced," Breyer said. "I don't see how it possibly could be anything else."

Austin closes in

PHOENIX — The Triple-A Firebirds are one step closer to moving to Austin, Texas.

The National Association of Professional Baseball leagues has given its approval, subject to completion of a stadium lease agreement between Austin and the Pacific Coast League team by the end of the year.

"Everything legal has been approved. This clears the way for Phoenix to come to Austin," Firebirds general manager Craig Pletenik said Friday.

Newton innocent

DALLAS — A municipal court judge has found Dallas Cowboys guard Nate Newton innocent of misdemeanor assault in a case stemming from allegations that he fondled a woman in a bar.

Municipal Judge Gustavo Gonzales granted a defense motion for a directed verdict of innocence on Friday, said Howard Shapiro, Newton's attorney.

"We denied from the onset that any such contact ever took place, and today (Friday) he has been found not guilty," Shapiro said.

Norman scrambles, holds lead

Tom Lehman waves to the crowd after making a putt for par on the 14th hole in Saturday's U.S. Open play.

By RON SIRAK
AP Sports Writer

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. — Somewhere in the knee-high rough of Shinnecock Hills, or perhaps on a windswept rolling fairway or on a slick, sloping green, Greg Norman found the resolve that wins the U.S. Open.

Fighting the course, the weather and himself, Norman scrambled from every conceivable corner of Shinnecock to shoot a 74 on Saturday and go into the final-round tied for the lead with Tom Lehman at 1-under-par 209.

Now Norman just has to close it out with the kind of Sunday round he's lacked so often in major championships. If his determination and lack of quit in the third round was any indication, he just might do that.

His round, in which he made 10 one-putt pars, was one of the best bad rounds ever. "Shooting 74 was the equivalent of shooting 62," Norman said.

"He shot 59," Norman said of Lehman's 3-under-par 67. Lehman, as steady as always, looked every bit the match for Norman in a final-round duel.

U.S. Open Leaders

Greg Norman	68-67-74—209	-1
Tom Lehman	70-72-67—209	-1
Bob Tway	69-69-72—210	E
Phil Mickelson	68-70-72—210	E
Ian Woosnam	72-71-69—212	+2
Corey Pavin	72-69-71—212	+2
Steve Stricker	71-70-71—212	+2
Scott Verplank	72-69-71—212	+2
Nick Price	66-73-73—212	+2

"I played extremely well," Lehman said. "It's playing very difficult because the wind is a two-club, maybe three-club, wind."

The last time the Open was played here — in 1986 — Norman also led going to Sunday and faded to 12th with a final-round 75.

But this might be a different, tougher Norman.

"I couldn't come up with a course that was as difficult as Shinnecock played today," Norman said. "I really can't remember a day when a course was so tough. I really can't remember a day when such great players were humbled."

On this day, Shinnecock Hills was so exclusive not even par was allowed in.

Phil Mickelson and Bob Tway, who both shot 72, were a stroke behind at even-par 210. Nick Price, Steve Stricker, Mid City Angel Jayson Nix delivers a pitch in his teams' 7-5 Little League city championship win over the North Central Astros Saturday at Bluebird Park.

Mid City Angels new LL champs

■ Fairy tale season ends in come-from-behind Midland city title.

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

Folks who followed the Mid City Angels Little League baseball team's season said it resembled a fairy tale.

So it was only fitting that the story would get a happy ending as the Angels won the Midland Junior Baseball Association's City Championship 7-5 over the North Central Astros Saturday in a dramatic nine-inning affair at Bluebird Park.

"It's a relief," said Angel pitcher-shortstop Jayson Nix. "At some points I thought it would slip away. We've come a long way."

The Angels scored three runs in the top of the ninth inning to defeat the Astros for the second time this week. Angels' center fielder Joey Rigney started off the third extra inning with a line drive single up the middle off Astros reliever Charlie Vaughn. Angels' reliever Mason Manulak followed with a walk, setting the stage for left fielder Matt Young.

Halos fall into first place tie

Staff Report

EL PASO — After blasting 11 runs in their series-opening win over El Paso, the Midland Angels have managed only four runs in games two and three of the six-game stint and missed a great opportunity to take a two-game division lead with a 6-3 loss to the Diablos here Saturday.

After the last-place Wichita Wranglers won their third straight game, 5-2, Saturday over San Antonio, a Midland win would have given the Angels a two-game lead in the Texas League Western Division with three games to play in the first-half pennant race.

Instead, the second straight win by the Diablos ties them with the Angels for the league lead and the Missions, despite the loss, were still only a game back in second. Midland continues the series today with a 7:30 p.m. CDT start.

Cone held Texas hitless until Benji Gil singled with one out in the ninth inning, pitching the Toronto Blue Jays past the Rangers 4-3 Saturday.

The Rangers went on to score three unearned runs before Cone struck out Ivan Rodriguez with runners on first and third to end it.

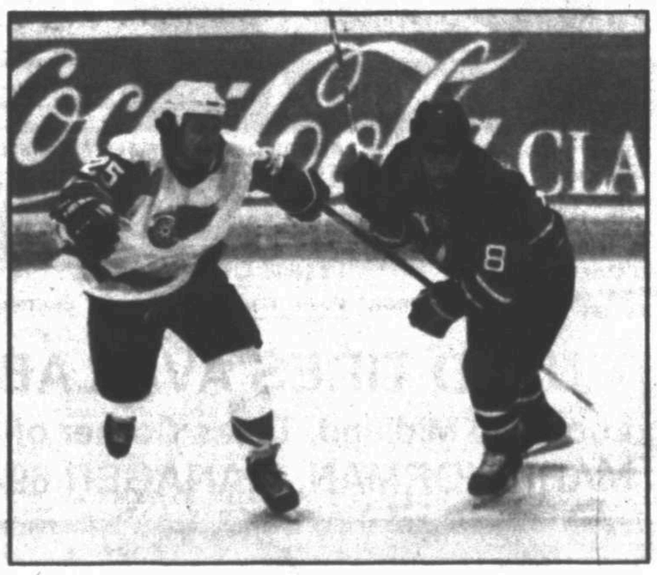

"It was close to a no-hitter, but it was close to a loss, too," Cone said.

Lemieux's late score gives New Jersey win

By Mike Nadel
AP Sports Writer

DETROIT — It was the third period of a tied playoff game. It was time for Claude Lemieux.

Lemieux, an ordinary regular-season player who becomes a postseason hero, snapped a tie at 3:17 of the third period Saturday night as the New Jersey Devils opened the Stanley Cup finals with a 2-1 victory over the Detroit Red Wings.

The Devils' patient trapping defense limited Detroit's vaunted attack to a season-low 17 shots on goalie Martin Brodeur.

The Red Wings outshot opponents 508-288 and averaged 36.3 shots a game through the first three rounds. Detroit's previous low for shots this season was 22 back on Jan. 24.

New Jersey set an NHL playoff record with its ninth road victory. The Red Wings lost for the first time in nine home postseason games, and another loss in Game 2 on Tuesday night would make it very difficult for them to win their first NHL title since 1955.

Lemieux has 12 playoff goals, including three game-winners, after scoring just six in 45 games this season. A tough player better known as a checker during his 10-year career, he has 51 goals in 133 postseason games. As a rookie in 1986, he scored 10 playoff goals — including four winners — to help Montreal capture the Stanley Cup.

Johnson on course for sprint double

■ USA-Mobil

Johnson, winner of the national 400-meter title Friday night in 43.66 seconds, the fourth-fastest ever, began his chase for the 200 championship by winning his opening-round heat in a wind-aided 20.21, then zipping to a 1995 world-leading 20.04 clocking in the semifinals to move into Sunday's final.

The only male runner to sweep the two long sprints at the national championships was Maxey Long in 1899.

Johnson also plans to run both events at the World Championships at Goteborg, Sweden, Aug. 4-13 — a meet in which no man has even attempted to win both in the same year. Johnson won the 200 world title in 1991 and the 400 in 1993.

He has expressed a strong desire to compete in the two events at the 1996 Atlanta Games, if the schedule was favorable.

The International Amateur Athletic Federation tried to accommodate him by adding 50 minutes between the 200 semifinals and the 400 final at Atlanta, giving him 2:35 between races.

"He can run easily," IAAF president Primo Nebiolo said in announcing the schedule change at Budapest, Hungary. "If he runs backwards, he can still do it. The schedule is very good for him."

Johnson, who is still hoping that the schedule could be adjusted, was not satisfied.

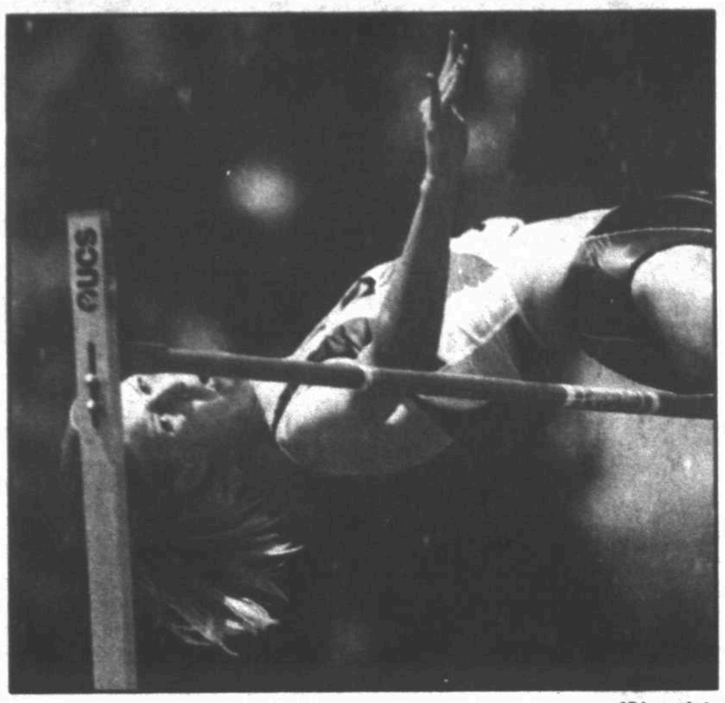

"It's not what I'm looking for," he said. "I appreciate what they're trying to do, but I need the events completely separated.

"I'll have to finish all four rounds of the 400 before I start the 200. If that's not done, then I can't do it."

Phil Henson, the competition manager for track and field at Atlanta, agreed with Johnson that the IAAF's decision was not sufficient.

"It solved part of the problem, but I don't think it's the day Johnson and his coach (Clyde Hart) were really concerned with," Henson said. "It didn't solve the problem."

In the 200 semifinals Saturday, Johnson was pitted against Mike Marsh, the 1992 Olympic gold medalist and the winner of Friday night's 100, and again he made it look easy. After surging into the lead around the curve, Johnson slowed about 10 meters from the Woman runs marathon 16 days before due date

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — Sue Olsen, just 16 days short of the due date for her first child, ran the entire Grandma's Marathon on Saturday and finished in 4:00:50.

The 38-year-old Olsen, who received permission from her doctor on Wednesday to run the race, didn't have her worst fear come true. Before the race, Olsen said she wasn't worried about finishing, but, rather, about going into labor during the run to Duluth.

Just in case, her husband, Tom, drove parallel to the course with a cellular phone.

Mark Curp won the marathon, surging over the last 5 miles to beat Neji Makhlouf by 32 seconds.

Curp, 36, of Lee's Summit, Mo., finished the race from Two Harbors to Duluth along Lake Superior's North Shore in 2 hours, 15 minutes, 23 seconds for his first marathon victory.

Makhlouf, a Tunisian now living in Broomfield, Colo., was timed in 2:15:55. Kevin Collins of Cicero, N.Y., was third in 2:17:37.

Irina Bogacheva of St. Petersburg, Russia, held off hard-charging Andrea Ratkovic-Bowman of Norman, Okla., to win the women's title in 2:34:11. Ratkovic-Bowman was nine seconds behind. The 1993 winner, Lorraine Hochella of Newport News, Va., finished third in 2:36:07.

ANGELS: Midland tied for 1st with El Paso

manage only two runs — both solo home runs by the league-leader in that category, Todd Greene — in 13 innings of play starting with Friday's game. Greene got his 20th homer in the ninth inning on Friday in the Angels' 3-1 loss and then added his 21st in the fourth to pull the Angels to within 2-1 on Saturday.

Down 6-1 to start the seventh, the Angels began a rally but it was not enough. Tim Harkrider and Basilio Ortiz walked to start off the inning but J.D. Ramirez, who was pinch-hitting for Orlando Munoz, grounded into a double play. That sent Harkrider to third.

George Arias then drove in his league-leading 57th RBI on his only hit of the night, a single, to pull the Angels within 6-2. Greene then doubled to drive in Arias, 6-3. Pedro Guerrero then grounded to the shortstop and the Diablos managed to catch Greene in a run down for out number three.

El Paso did most of its damage in the fifth, when the Diablos batted around to score four runs and take a 6-1 lead.

But Midland blew two big chances to take the lead in the third and fifth innings.

In the third down 2-0 with one out, Michael Wolff got an infield hit. Harkrider then hit into what looked like an easy double play but Wolff slid into Diablo shortstop Wes Weger and while he was forced out, he broke up the throw to first allowing Harkrider to reach base on the throwing error. Ortiz then reached base on another Diablo error and Munoz walked to load the bases.

But Arias continued his struggle since heading west when he stroked a ball to center but was out to end the inning when Diablo center fielder Brian Banks came up with the diving catch.

In the fifth with one out, Ortiz singled to left center and Munoz drilled the ball across the mound into center. But the threat ended when Arias flew out to right and Greene was out on strikes.

El Paso opened up the lead with two runs in the second, one unearned against Hancock. The Diablos loaded the bases with no outs and the damage could have been worse except for Arias' diving stop on a shot down the left field line to start a double play. Todd Landry, however, scored from third on the play to give El Paso a 1-0 lead.

With two outs, Lauro Felix reached base on a throwing error by Angel shortstop Harkrider and Weger scored from third to boost El Paso's lead to 2-0. The Diablos still had runners at the corners with two outs but a Banks' grounder to first ended the inning.

Greene pulled the Angels within 2-1 with his fourth-inning homer. Leon Glenn then got on with a double but was stranded.

The Angels had more chances in the sixth when they led off against Brown with two walks. But Glenn grounded out and a Diablo double play ended the threat.

NHL: Game opens up in 2nd period stealing the puck from defenseman Nicklas Lidstrom in the left faceoff circle. MacLean took a shot but the puck hit defenseman Paul Coffey and deflected right to Lemieux at the high point. Lemieux then beat goalie Mike Vernon between the pads with a slap shot.

Detroit, making its first appearance in the finals since 1966, is trying to end the league's longest Stanley Cup dry spell. The Devils, who joined the NHL in 1974 as the Kansas City Scouts and had a six-year stint in Denver before settling in New Jersey in 1982, are in their first title series.

Though Detroit captain Steve Yzerman on Friday asked fans to buck tradition and stop throwing octopuses, the Red Wings used pregame ceremonies to emphasize the creature. A giant purple octopus was lowered from the rafters, and light images of octopuses — along with the slogan "A Call To Arms" — were projected onto the ice.

Shortly thereafter, about a dozen of the creatures were hurled from the stands, mostly during the national anthem.

The eight-legged octopus became a Detroit playoff symbol in the 1950s, when it symbolized the eight victories needed to win the Stanley Cup.

As expected with two good defensive clubs, there was little open ice in the scoreless first period. The teams, which didn't meet during the lockout-shortened regular season, obviously were trying to get used to each other's styles.

Detroit had the best opportunity 7:44 into the game, but Yzerman's shot from the high slot hit the crossbar. In the closing seconds of the period, Brodeur sticked aside Dino Ciccarelli's deflection from in front.

The game opened up considerably in the second period, when New Jersey's Stephane Richer and Detroit's Dino Ciccarelli scored power-play goals.

At 9:41, Neal Broten beat Yzerman cleanly for a faceoff deep in Red Wings ice, drawing the puck back to Tommy Albelin at the right point. Albelin passed to the left point for Richer, who slapped the puck off the inside of Vernon's right leg and into the net.

Chaps' Pursley wins golf tournament

PINEHURST, NC — Midland College's Derrick Pursley won first place at the Collegiate Tour event at the Deercroft Country Club.

Pursley, a member of the Junior College National Champion Midland College golf team, shot 71-71-70 during the three-day, 54-hole event (Par was 72).

Pursley finished second at the NJCAA Championships in May, earning All-Amercian honors in the process.

Wargo stays hot, leads Seniors

The Associated Press

DALLAS — Tom Wargo can't remember ever shooting as low as 12-under-par 128 for 36 holes. And he's never led a tournament by as many as six shots.

But the former ironworker won't settle for merely protecting his lead in Sunday's final round of the Dallas Reunion PGA Senior Pro-Am.

"I won't play conservative," said Wargo, who holed a 50-yard pitch for an eagle-2 on No. 16 and shot a second straight record-matching 64 Saturday. "This is the kind of course that can get you in trouble if you do that.

"It's nice to have a sizable lead but there are some good players behind me. If I can shoot a 64, so can they. I can't get caught coasting."

■ Golf Roundup

Wargo's 12-under 128 is the second-lowest total for an opening 36 holes in Senior PGA Tour history following Saturday's 6-under round.

Dave Eichelberger shot a 68 and is at 6-under 134, and Dave Stockton is a shot further back after shooting a 68 over the 6,579-yard par-70 Oak Cliff Country Club course.

Stockton entered the tournament third on the tour money list, $8,918 short of Jim Colbert's list-topping $697,591. Colbert and Ray Floyd, No. 2 on the list, skipped the Dallas tour stop, with Floyd playing the U.S. Open.

LPGA Rochester

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Although still rusty from a two-week layoff, Patty Sheehan sank six clutch putts Saturday to keep on course for a record fourth win in seven years at the LPGA Rochester International.

Her only problem with the putter in the third round came on the last hole, where a double-bogey narrowed her lead to one.

"I know it sounds really kind of weird from the leader in the clubhouse, but I'm really not hitting the ball like I like to," Sheehan said. "A one-shot lead is kind of nothing. I just hope I can hang on."

Sherri Steinhauer had her share of grief on the green before sinking three straight 25-foot putts to retain second place, one ahead of Helen Alfredsson of Sweden and Alice Ritzman, who has had 28 top-10 finishes since 1989 but no wins in 17 years on tour.

Bowe wins by knockout

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Riddick Bowe, cooly efficient instead of boiling mad, bolstered his claim of being the best heavyweight in the world with a devastating performance against Jorge Luis Gonzalez on Saturday night.

Avenging an amateur loss to Gonzalez, Bowe battered the 6-foot-7 Cuban for five rounds and then knocked him out with a crashing right to the head at 1:50 of the sixth round to retain his WBO championship at the MGM Grand Garden.

"I'm sorry for him," Bowe said. "I'm not mad anymore."

It was sweet revenge for Bowe, who had been knocked down and beaten by Gonzalez in a Pan American Games bout in 1987.

At that time, Gonzalez was a much more experienced amateur than Bowe. But this time, Bowe showed he was a much better professional fighter than Gonzalez. Gonzalez came into the ring gesturing and shouting while Bowe stayed businesslike. After the fight began, the champion dominated from the opening bell.

Bowe never let Gonzalez into the fight. The champion landed 99 of 120 left jabs, many of them hurting Gonzalez and two of them sending him reeling across the ring late in the fourth round.

Bowe connected on 188 of 302 punches, while Gonzalez landed only 52 of 161.

One of the jabs Bowe missed was just before he threw the right hand that dropped Gonzalez face-down near his corner, where referee Mills Lane counted him out. There was never any doubt Gonzalez was down for good.

"I knew if I would use my jab he would fold when he did,"

Odd man out Daly plays lonely third round

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Since an uneven number of players made the cut for the U.S. Open and twosomes are used for the third and fourth rounds, one player had to play the third round with a marker playing alongside.

John Daly was the one from 73 players chosen to go off alone and he played the third round Saturday in a brisk 2 hours, 49 minutes, about an hour faster than the average twosome plays in tournament conditions.

He shot a 4-over-par 74 and was at 220 after 54 holes, 11 strokes behind co-leaders Greg Norman and Tom Lehman.

"I'd have played a little quicker if it was a regular tournament," he said. "I didn't really rush or anything."

Jim Holtgrieve, a USGA committee member, played with Daly and the 47-year-old former Mid-Amateur champion was only three strokes behind the pro.

■ U.S. Open Notebook

"I had always heard how far he hits it and it was a big thrill to see how he goes at it and how he manages his game," Holtgrieve said.

Did he ever come near Daly off the tee?

"I got close to him once on No. 5, maybe within a couple of yards," he said. "I thought I hit it good on No. 9 and he outdrove me by 75 yards."

DALY DOINGS: Daly seems to make news wherever he goes and whatever he does. The gallery around the 18th green roared in delight when his second shot landed on the platform used for the television camera.

Daly was given a drop behind the green in some deep grass and got up and down for the par. Did he ever give a thought to going up on the platform to play the third shot?

"Three years ago I would have gone up there," he said.

FIRST ACE: Gary Hallberg had a hole-in-one on the 182-yard 7th hole Saturday, the first ace Shinnecock Hills has surrendered in six USGA events held there over the past 100 years.

"It was an unbelievable experience to make a hole-in-one in the U.S. Open," Hallberg said of his sixth career ace. "The gallery was hollering and screaming."

Hallberg's 1 and Scott Verplank's birdie were the only sub-par scores recorded on the par-3 hole in the third round.

It was the 27th hole-in-one in a U.S. Open and the first since Mike Hulbert and Sandy Lyle each had one in 1993 at Baltusrol.

ABSENT AMATEURS: There were three amateurs in the field for the 1995 U.S. Open and none made the cut, the fifth time that has happened. Tiger Woods, who had an opening-round 74, appeared to have a chance to make the cut, which was at 146, but he was forced to withdraw after injuring his left wrist while trying to hit the ball out of deep rough.

The amateur-less Opens in the final rounds were in 1963, 1969, 1987 and 1992.

Tuur retains WBO championship

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Regilio Tuur of the Netherlands retained his World Boxing Organization junior lightweight title Saturday with a fifth-round technical knockout of Pete Taliaferro.

Tuur (39-3-1) hurt Taliaferro, of Mobile, Ala., with a right to the head, then caught him with a combination before referee Johnny Femia stepped in and stopped the fight at 2:43 of the fifth.

The announcement of the TKO was greeted with loud boos from the crowd, which felt the fight was stopped prematurely.

"WBO rules don't allow a standing eight count, and that would have really helped me," said Taliaferro (27-5).

Shinnecock wind doesn't get to Lehman

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Tom Lehman thought back nine years to when a 27-year-old had just completed his first two rounds in a U.S. Open.

The course was Shinnecock Hills and the Open rookie was Lehman.

"I shot 78 and 77 and said this course was way too much for me," Lehman said Saturday after shooting a 3-under-par 67 on that same course in the third round of the U.S. Open.

It was a great round on a day the wind had Shinnecock living up to its reputation as one of the toughest courses in the world. Only two other players managed to break par Saturday, and they both did it by just one stroke.

It was also a round that brought Lehman into the picture for his first major title. He was at 1-under 209 for 54 holes, tied for the lead with Greg Norman.

It won't be Lehman's first brush with a major title. He was right there in the 1994 Masters before losing a stretch duel with Jose Maria Olazabal.

"I think that will help," he said of the Masters' experience. "I think having won twice since then will definitely help. You know there are still 18 holes of golf to be played on an extremely tough golf course."

Lehman's most recent PGA Tour win was at the Colonial two weeks ago. That came after some time off following a procedure to remove polyps from his colon.

"It cleared my mind," he said of the clean bill of health.

OPEN: Crenshaw among course victims

(From 1C)

Verplank were three back at 212.

Still in the hunt at 3-over-par 213 were Vijay Singh and Davis Love. Frank Nobilo, Lee Janzen and Mark Roe were five strokes back at 214.

Among the victims of Shinnecock were Ben Crenshaw and Nick Faldo with 79s, Tom Kite with an 82 and Jumbo Ozaki, who started the day in second place, with an 80.

"You can't tame this course, you just survive," Lehman said after his four-birdie, one-bogey round. "It's very, very easy to shoot 75 on a day like today."

That's almost what Norman did. The second-round leader, trying to win his first major championship in the United States, shot a 74 and it was anything but easy. In fact, it was par on a course that averaged 74.2 in the third round.

If not for some very good putting and rather incredible chipping, Norman would have shot an 80, or worse.

"I'm proud of myself," Norman said. "Today was a real test of your character."

Shinnecock showed its meanest side yet. The wind blew, scores soared and of the 73 players in the field, only Lehman's 67 and 69s by Ian Woosnam and Gary Hallberg broke par.

Norman had a chance to hold the lead alone going into Sunday's final round but missed a 4-foot birdie putt on the last hole.

This round was a truly gutsy survival test by Norman. He missed fairway after fairway and hit only five greens, making a 20-footer on No. 1, a 4-footer on 2, a 7-footer on 11 and a 12-footer on 17 — all to save par.

"I probably haven't putted as well for as many pars as I did today," Norman.

It seemed like every time you looked up, there wa0s Norman knee-deep in rough, blasting back to the fairway and then scratching out a par with an incredible chip or gutsy putt.

"I was working so hard, rarely in my career have I worked so hard," Norman said.

"She was an absolute bitch," Norman said about the course.

The already difficult Shinnecock layout was made even tougher by wind that dried the course into a lightning-fast track and knocked around shots with 22 mph gusts.

"It was such a hard, steady wind that it was affecting the ball on the greens," Mickelson said. "There is a really good chance no one will make par for the tournament."

Norman, who on Friday expressed admiration for a scrambling round by Raymond Floyd, held together a round that could have easily fallen apart.

"Raymond Floyd did not play very good golf at all and he shot 72," Norman said Friday. "That is what patience is all about. That is what is keeping control of yourself."

Norman, who said he has spent the last year working on controlling himself, showed great patience on Saturday.

"I just felt like I needed to work a little bit harder on my mental approach," Norman said after taking the second-round lead. "I feel pretty good with it. "I am extremely happy with my patience now."

By keeping a potentially bad round within reason, Norman has kept himself in the hunt to win his first U.S. Open. It's a position he's been in before.

CITY: Angels overcome two deficits

(From 1C)

Arkansas following the game, took a one out pitch and singled to right-center scoring Rigney. The runners would move to second and third on the throw home, but the damage was already done.

"I thought 'just hit the ball'," said Young. "I didn't know where it was going. It's a feeling I've never had before."

The Angels would score two more runs thanks in part to an Astros' error to make the score 7-4. A lead that would be secure despite the one run by the Stars in the bottom of the ninth.

"When I hit the single into center, I knew we would win the game," said Rigney. "Getting a hit psyched up the team. Our mental attitude wouldn't let us lose."

Now like every great story the Angels almost let this game slip away. The Astros got on the scoreboard first leading 1-0 after two innings and 2-1 after three innings. The Astros wouldn't go away without a fight. The team from North Central would score two runs in the fifth and sixth innings to tie the game and force it into extra innings. It was the run in the sixth that stretched the emotions of the fans.

The Angels, who beat the Astros 11-9 Wednesday to reach today's game, had the Astros down 4-3 going into the bottom of the sixth inning. With two out, Jacobe Kendrick belted a ground-rule double over the right field fence. Vaughn followed with a single to center off Nix that would score Kendrick despite a great throw from Rigney that appeared to have Kendrick gunned down.

The Angels, who finished second in their division to the defending city champions, the Mid City Pirates, did receive excellent pitching from Nix and reliever Manulak. The Angels allowed only those five runs on eight hits and six Angels' errors. The Astros' Joey Guerrero had two hits as did Vaughn. But the Angels did force the Astros to leave 10 runners on base. In fact, only two of the Astros' runs were earned.

Offensively, the Angels pounded out 11 hits on the way to scoring seven runs. Nix, who scored twice, Rigney, Young and Owen, who drove in two runs, had multi-hit games for the Astros. They did leave 12 men on base, but it didn't matter as they took home the Midland city championship.

Good not enough for Gordon

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Being good isn't enough for Jeff Gordon. He wants to be smart, too.

Gordon, who will start from the pole in Sunday's Miller Genuine Draft 400 at Michigan International Speedway, comes into the event trailing Dale Earnhardt in the Winston Cup standings by two positions and 123 points.

■ Miller 400

That isn't much of a deficit with 18 of 31 races still to be run. But the 23-year-old Gordon understands he and his constantly learning Hendrick Motorsports team have a considerable way to go in the face of the experience brought to bear by Earnhardt and team owner Richard Childress.

"It's still tough to beat 'The Man in Black' because of his experience," Gordon said. "I'm trying to get smarter in my experiences. I need to keep learning and keep working and not make the same mistakes more than once."

Despite his youth and this being only his third full season of Winston Cup racing, Gordon hasn't made too many errors. But he and his team have made a couple of glaring miscues in recent weeks.

After a broken suspension relegated him to 33rd place last month at Charlotte, Gordon's crew chief, Ray Evernham, was assessed a record $60,000 fine for using lightweight hubs not approved by NASCAR.

"This is my Charlotte car," Gordon said after his record-breaking qualifying lap of 186.611 mph on Friday. "It's a good car and we are out to prove it has nothing to do with the stupid hubs."

Last week at Pocono, Gordon's Chevrolet Monte Carlo dominated the race until he missed a gear on a late restart, damaging his engine. The kid wound up 16th and embarrassed again.

"Everybody does it (misses a shift) when you're running 15th or 16th, but you don't do it when you're leading," the youngster said. "It's something that shouldn't have happened. Hopefully, it'll never happen again.

"It's been a tough last month for us. We've gone through a lot of growing periods, a lot of pressure situations.

"We've fought right back, and that just shows the strength of this team. We've got a good bunch of guys, and a lot of hard-working guys, too. They're behind me 100 percent and I'm behind them 100 percent."

Even with all that support, Gordon could really use a strong finish on Michigan's two-mile, high-banked oval to get him reignited after cooling off a bit in recent events.

Since running off five consecutive top-three finishes, Gordon has finished 33rd, sixth (at Dover) and 16th.

"We need to get the same kind of consistency that Earnhardt and Childress have," he said. "At Dover, they had a 15th-place car and he finished fifth with it. We need to be able to do that, too."

Sunday's race will feature the fastest field in the history of the Michigan track, competing on a repaved surface that offers plenty of questions.

"With the speeds so high, there will be a lot of drafting and it could cause cars to get loose," said Gordon, who led led 41 drivers who surpassed the previous track qualifying record, including three who had to revert to season points to earn starting positions in the 42-car field.

The biggest concern for track owner Roger Penske and his staff is the heat, with the temperature expected to reach the low 90s Sunday. With the new asphalt pavement completed on May 17, a combination of the intense heat and the 3,400-pound stock cars with big, sticky tires could cause the surface to come up in places.

"Last year, they patched it going into (turn) three and these things stick pretty hard going in there," Gordon said. "We kind of tore up the pavement.

"I'd much rather it be cool, but that doesn't mean we're going to get it. "We're going to go out there and do whatever it takes."

Andretti escapes injury at Le Mans

LE MANS, France (AP) — Mario Andretti escaped injury when his car slammed into a wall during the rain-soaked 24 hour of Le Mans today, but the American lost ground in his bid to add the endurance race to his list of victories.

The Courage-Porsche C34 in which Andretti was sharing the driving with Frenchmen Bob Wollek and Eric Helary was in the top three until the mishap four hours into the race.

Andretti skidded while coming up behind a car, spun and hit a wall. He was second at the time, just over a minute off the lead. His car had damage on the right side and rear wheel and lost its rear wing.

He made it back to the pits and gave the driving over to Helary. It took nearly 30 minutes before the car was back in the race and, by then, it trailed by more than six laps and was running 27th.

McLarens were leading the way.

Denmark's Johnny Nielsen and Germany's Thomas Bscher and Jochen Mass were driving a McLaren BMW F1 GTR and were in the top spot with 48 laps or 405.72 miles.

Britain's Andy Wallace and the father-son team of Derek and Justin Bell were second, about four minutes 37 seconds behind.

McLarens have dominated the Global Enurance GT series this season, winning six of seven races.

Soccer fades back into U.S. sports background

By Barry Wilner
AP Sports Writer

Soldier Field is quiet this weekend, not even close to the focal point of sports in Chicago, let alone for the rest of the world.

Giants Stadium is emtpy instead of filled with Irish fans, their faces painted green, and Italians decked in blue from head to toe.

The Rose Bowl isn't rocking to the soccer beat. There are no Brazilians doing the samba at Stanford Stadium.

One year after the most successful World Cup ever, the echoes are not just faint, they're nonexistent.

In many ways, so is the World Cup's impact on the United States. Soccer once more is a minor sport in America.

"It seems like soccer has disappeared again, just like it was before the World Cup was here," says U.S. national team player Tab Ramos. "I think we have lost momentum, there's no doubt about that."

And apparently lost the way, too. There is no major professional league in the United States — it is supposed to get going next spring, far too long after the World Cup. The U.S. team lost its miracle-working coach, Bora Milutinovic, in a power struggle that could have been avoided.

Few sponsors have been attracted to help finance the national squad. Television ratings — the few times soccer is even on the screen — are dismal. The U.S. Soccer Federation, with a budget of about $12 million this year, is expected to lose nearly $2 million.

Compare that with the financial impact the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles had on amateur sports in the United States. The windfall from those Games — and the manner in which it was dispersed — helped dozens of sports.

But one year after a World Cup that filled the vaults of FIFA, soccer's world organizing body, at an unprecedented rate — and provided the USSF with a profit in the neighborhood of $2 million — soccer again is a foreign sport everywhere but at the grass-roots level.

"Soccer's there," says U.S. star John Harkes, one of the few Americans to make a mark overseas (currently with Derby County of the English Premier League). "It's an untapped thing. There's so many kids that want to play. We just want to play."

Not having a home league in which to play is the biggest problem. Major League Soccer, developed by Alan Rothenberg, the mastermind of World Cup USA '94 and the USSF president, has been plagued by start-up woes. The cautious approach MLS has taken, while laudable in a business sense, has killed any carryover from the World Cup.

"It would have been a folly to rush in a try to start up a new league," Rothenberg says. 'It is important that people understand that we are trying to build a league that has permanence, and the foundation is a vital part."

MLS already is having difficulty attracting the top U.S. players, who can earn more money and international acclaim in Europe. The 10 teams — Dallas; Denver; Kansas City, Mo.; Los Angeles; San Jose, Calif.; Boston; Columbus, Ohio; New York-New Jersey; Tampa Bay; and Washington — have a $75 million bankroll.

By the time MLS begins play, will the American public remember Alexi Lalas, Cobi Jones and Tony Meola?

"I am disappointed that after the World Cup, we didn't have a league right away to continue this enthusiasm that was experienced after the Cup," says Steve Sampson, who took over on an interim basis as national coach when Milutinovic was fired.

"From a financial standpoint, if we can't pay the players, if we can't play in a suitable stadium, if we can't attract foreign players, then we're better off holding off."

But the delay also gave U.S. players more opportunities to sign with foreign clubs, which aren't about to simply release them to play back home. Especially if, like Harkes and Lalas, they've played well and become popular.

"If you're going to do a professional league in the United States, like we had back with the NASL, you have to do it right," Harkes says. "But there is a time gap there to fill, and it's very difficult."

It also has been difficult to attract sponsors for the national team.

Maddux on pace for fourth Cy Young

By Tom Saladino
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — With an unprecedented fourth consecutive Cy Young Award within his reach, Greg Maddux continues to baffle National League hitters and amaze even his manager.

"It's all been said about Greg," says Atlanta Braves manager Bobby Cox. "There's nothing more you can say about the guy. He's just the premier pitcher in all of baseball."

Maddux doesn't do it with a 90-plus mph fast ball, nor a sharp, snapping curve ball. He makes it happen with a fast ball in the mid-80s, a slider, a changeup and astounding control.

"He does everything super good," Cox says. "His stuff is above average and he's so consistent. That's why he's so good. He never varies. Every start is basically the same. If it's not — which is seldom — the results are the same. He wins."

In his ninth season in the majors and third with the Braves, Maddux has a 136-92 career record. More impressive are his major-league-leading numbers over the past three seasons for wins (56), innings (737) and ERA (2.08).

But control is perhaps the key element for Maddux. Since the start of the 1992 season — when he won his first Cy Young, for the Chicago Cubs — Maddux has walked only 161 batters in 712 innings.

That's an average of one base on balls every 4.4 innings. And, after walking just 31 in 202 innings in 1994, Maddux has allowed an incredible eight in 75 innings this year. His average since the start of last season is one walk per seven innings.

Steve Carlton is the only pitcher to have won the Cy Young Award four times. No one had won it three straight seasons until Maddux, although Sandy Koufax, Jim Palmer, Tom Seaver and Roger Clemens did it three times.

Maddux, who pitched six seasons with the Cubs before signing a free-agent contract worth $28 million over five years after the 1992 season, prefers not to think about awards.

"That's something that's really out of your control," he says. "All you can do is pitch."

This season after 10 starts, Maddux is 5-1 with a 1.91 ERA. In six of those starts, he's allowed one run per game. In another, he gave up only two runs.

The slightly built Maddux, who appears smaller than the 6-foot, 175 pounds listed in the Braves' media guide, also wins by being a student of the game. But he isn't giving out any hints.

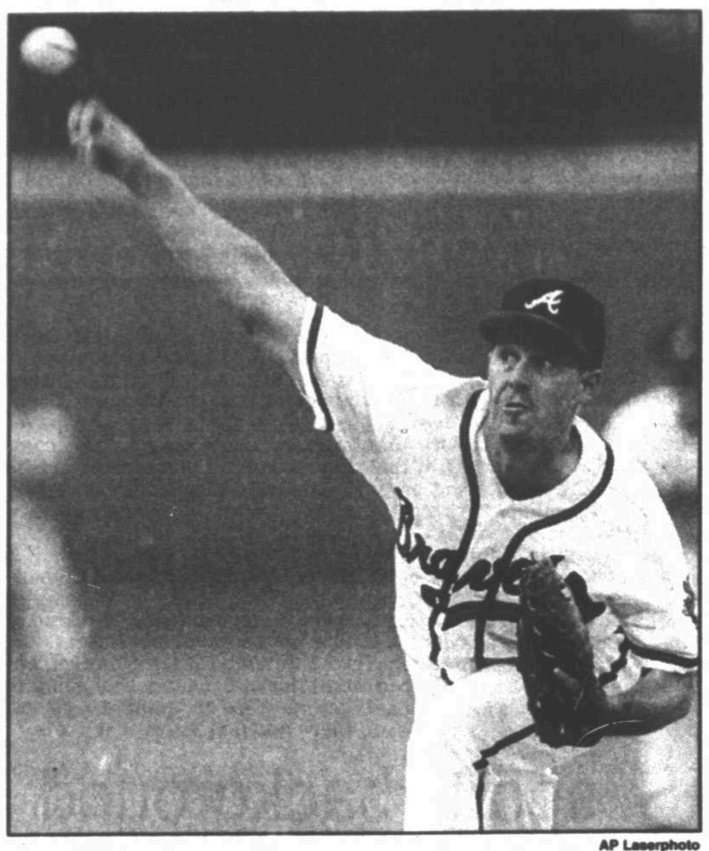

"I just pitch. That's all I do," the 29-year-old right-hander says. "You go out and do well, it looks easy. I think any time you do something well, it looks a lot easier than it is.

"I believe the biggest thing is having an idea about yourself. Trust yourself."

He wears contact lenses when he pitches and rimless eyeglasses when he's not on the mound, peering studiously from the dugout to study opposing hitters.

"For instance, you sometimes get caught up in the hitters," he says. "Forget about them. I think the bottom line is I can go out and select the wrong pitch to throw, but if I throw it in a good spot, I'm going to get away with it.

"On the flip side, if I select the right pitch and throw it to the wrong spot, I'm probably going to get away with that, too. As long as you make a quality pitch, it really doesn't matter who the hitter is."

the fans."

Cone, the 1994 AL Cy Young winner with Kansas City, was bidding to pitch the first official no-hitter of the major league season. He finished with a three-hitter in his third complete game of the season.

Gil, the ninth-place batter, lined his hit through the hole between shortstop and third base on a 1-2 fastball.

"I thought it was a pretty good pitch," Cone said. "He just did a good job of hitting it."

Gil said he was simply trying to make contact.

"Obviously, we didn't want a no-hitter thrown against us. I just wanted to hit the ball hard. After he got two strikes on me, I just tried to put the ball in play and didn't swing too hard," he said.

Cone, who pitched a pair of one-hitters with the New York Mets and one with the Royals last season, struck out seven. All three runs against him were unearned, and he threw 114 pitches.

"I'd be lying if I said there wasn't dissapointment," Cone said. "But that's a pretty good lineup over there and they came after me in the ninth and almost won the game. The way things have gone for us this year, we might have lost the game today."

Pedro Martinez of Montreal pitched nine perfect innings at San Diego on June 3. But he was not credited with a no-hitter because the game went into extra innings, and Martinez gave up a hit in the 10th.

The complete game was Cone's third of the year. Cone, traded by the Royals back to Toronto for three minor leaguers on April 6, has one shutout this season for the Blue Jays.

Cone came close to pitching the second no-hitter in the 19-year history of the Blue Jays. Dave Stieb did it against the Indians 3-0 at Cleveland on Sept. 2, 1990.

The only no-hitter at SkyDome, which opened in 1989, was by Dave Stewart of Oakland on June 29, 1990.

Indians 7, Yankees 4

CLEVELAND — Rookie Herbert Perry hit two of Cleveland's four home runs — the first of his career — as the rampaging Indians beat New York 7-4.Manny Ramirez and Albert Belle also homered for the Indians, who bounced back from a 4-2 loss the previous night. They have not lost two in a row since April 28-29 in Texas, the second and third games of the season.

Winners of 17 of the last 20 games, Cleveland improved the best start in franchise history — and the best record in the majors — to 34-12.

Brewers 9, Red Sox 1

BOSTON — Rookie Steve Sparks nearly had his first major-league shutout, but settled for a victory over struggling Roger Clemens as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the slumping Boston Red Sox 9-1 Saturday.

Mo Vaughn spoiled the shutout bid with his 16th homer, with one out in the ninth inning.

Athletics 7, Royals 5

OAKLAND, Calif. — Craig Paquette and Terry Steinbach each hit three-run homers and Oakland beat Kansas City, stopping the Royals' season-high seven-game winning streak.

Dennis Rasmussen (0-1) was roughed up in his first start of the year for Kansas City. Rasmussen, recalled from Triple A-Omaha on June 5, was tagged for seveMike Harkey (3-4), taking his turn in the rotation a day early to allow Steve Ontiveros more time to recuperate from a sore neck, allowed three runs on three hits in 5 1-3 innings. Dennis Eckersley worked the ninth for his 11th save.

Paquette's fourth home run put the A's ahead 3-2 in the second. Scott Brosius walked and Brent Gates singled before Paquette homered over the wall in left-center field.

Tigers 5, Orioles 3

DETROIT — Pinch-hitter Juan Samuel's double snapped an eighth-inning tie Saturday night, leading the Detroit Tigers to a 5-3 victory that extended the Baltimore Orioles' losing streak to six games.

The victory was the 2,157th for Detroit manager Sparky Anderson, tying him with Bucky Harris for third place on the all-time managers' victory list.

David Wells (4-3) allowed only three hits and two walks in seven innings for the victory. He struck out four to increase his team-leading total to 40.

Astros spoil rookie's major league debut

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Pitcher Doug Drabek's RBI single capped a five-run first inning off prized prospect Bill Pulsipher, and sent the Houston Astros past the New York Mets 7-3 Saturday.

Pulsipher, a 21-year-old left-hander, lost in his major league debut. He lasted seven innings and allowed seven runs on nine hits, striking out three and walking six.

Pulsipher was called up this week from Triple-A Norfolk, where he was 6-4 with a 3.14 ERA and an International League-leading 63 strikeouts.

Brian Hunter drew a walk to start the game, and stole two bases. The Astros took advantage of three walks and four hits in taking a 5-0 lead. Scott Servais hit a two-run double, Jeff Bagwell had an RBI double, Orlando Miller drew a bases-loaded walk and Drabek singled home a run.

Dodgers 12, Cubs 5

CHICAGO — Billy Ashley hit two home runs, and Mike Piazza, Raul Mondesi and Eric Karros also connected, leading Los Angeles over Chicago.

Todd Zeile, acquired Friday in a trade that sent Mike Morgan to St. Louis, hit a two-run homer in his first game for Chicago. Zeile, who went 2-for-4, started in left field, but later moved to third base, which is where the Cubs want him to play.

Rick Wilkins and Sammy Sosa also homered for the Cubs.

Ramon Martinez (7-4) pitched seven innings, giving up eight hits and striking out one.

Giants 4, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Jose Bautista settled down after a wild-but-lucky first inning and came within one out of a two-hitter night as San Francisco beat St. Louis.

Mark Carreon hit a two-run homer for the Giants, who handed Mike Jorgensen his first loss as manager of the Cardinals. He took over Friday after Joe Torre was fired.

Bautista (2-3) walked three, hit a batter and threw a wild pitch in the first, but the Cardinals got just one run on a bases-loaded balk. From the second inning on, only two St. Louis batters reached second base.

Bautista, who was 0-2 with a 6.43 ERA in his three previous starts, gave up a double to Ricky Jordan in the third, a single to Tom Urbani in the fifth and a two-out single to Scott Cooper in the ninth.

Ron Beck relieved after Cooper's hit and got his 11th save. Beck and Bautista combined for a four-hitter.

Padres 11, Pirates 8

PITTSBURGH — Fernando Valenzuela hit his first homer since 1990, but couldn't pitch long enough for the victory despite an 11-run lead as San Diego beat Pittsburgh.

Valenzuela's three-run shot came in an eight-run third inning. It was the ninth homer of his career — tops among active pitchers — and his first since May, 15, 1990.

The homer helped San Diego build its 11-0 lead, but Valenzuela promptly gave up eight straight runs and had to be bailed out by reliever Bryce Florie in the fifth.

Phillies 11, Marlins 4

PHILADELPHIA — Philadelphia rallied from a four-run deficit by scoring five runs in the sixth and six more in the eighth to defeat Florida.

Darren Daulton and Jim Eisenreich hit back-to-back two-run doubles in the sixth and Mickey Morandini had a two-run double in the eighth when the Phillies had their highest-scoring inning of the season.

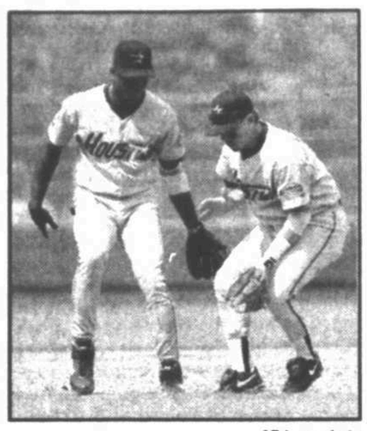

Reds 5, Expos 4

CINCINNATI — Jeff Branson singled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning, helping Cincinnati beat Montreal after blowing a late three-run lead.

The Reds ended a three-game losing streak by rallying in the eighth against Luis Aquino (0-1). Eddie Taubensee walked with one out, Bret Boone singled and Branson lined a pitch to right to snap a 4-all tie.

Hector Carrasco (2-3) got the final out in the seventh after the bullpen blew a 4-1 lead, and Jeff Brantley pitched the ninth.

Alomar sets errorless mark

TORONTO (AP) — Roberto Alomar figured he'd find his way into the record book sooner or later. He just wasn't sure whether it would be his bat or glove that got him there.

Alomar set an American League mark for second basemen Saturday with his 90th straight game without an error in Toronto's 4-3 win over Texas.

Jerry Adair held the AL record of 89 for Baltimore in 1964 and 1965. Ryne Sandberg holds the major league record with 123 for the Chicago Cubs in 1989 and 1990.

"I feel very proud of what I've done," Alomar said. "I take a lot of pride in my defense. People talk about hitting all the time, not defense, but now I'm in the books because of my defense."

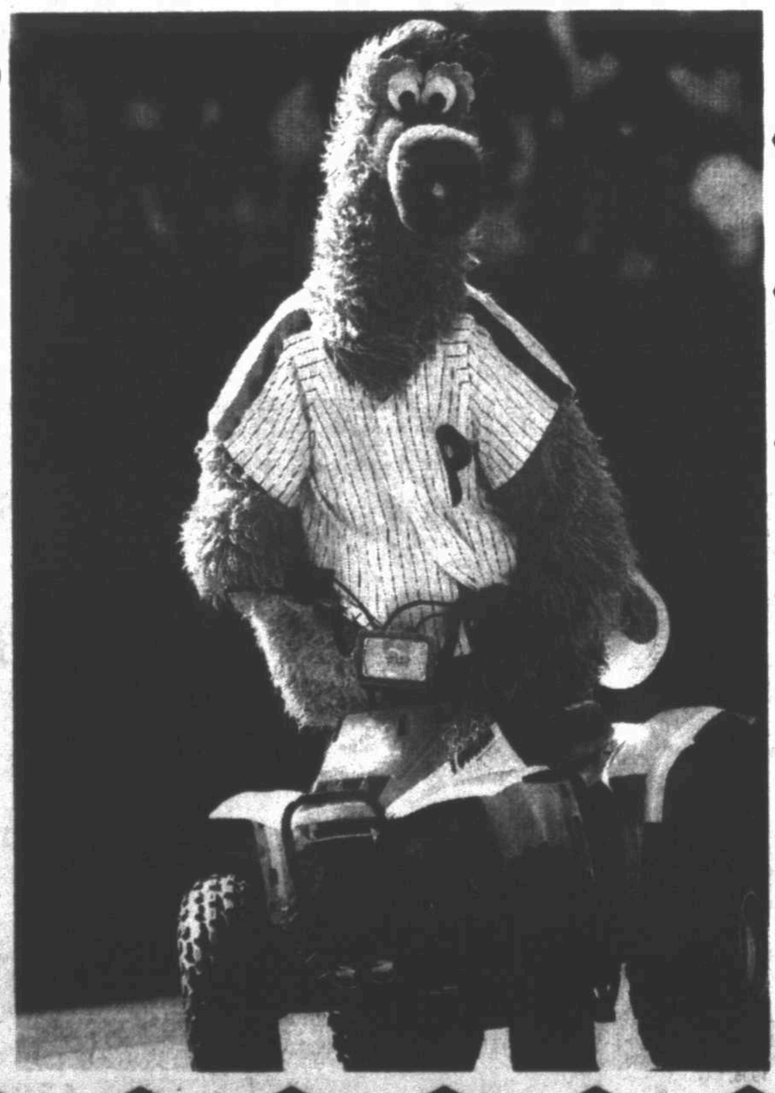

Alomar, a five-time All-Star and career .299 hitter, made his last error on July 24, 1994. He handled six chances on Saturday.

CONVENIENCE STORES

Why join TEAM KENT?

What turns you on about your job? For most people, these thoughts focus on several different areas. How does your current job stack up against TEAM KENT?

SALARY

Our minimum starting salary is $5 hour, Manager trainees can start at $300 a week or more (depending on experience.) We also give you a SIGNING BONUS ($200 for full-timers and $100 for part-timers) at the completion of your first week!

SECURITY

Our company offers stable employment year-round. If you aren't getting enough hours (at least 40) at your current job, WE CAN GIVE THEM TO YOU! If you want to work part-time, we can work with you to tailor-make a schedule that meets your needs! Our Kent Kwiks are open 7 days a week, with most open 24 hours a day. Our Avis Lubes are open daytime hours only.

BENEFITS

We offer medical, dental and life insurance to our full-time Team Members. We have paid vacations, a sick pay plan, college tuition reimbursement, and a profit sharing plan. There are also incentive programs available that allow you to earn extra money on a quarterly basis!

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

95% of our Managers started at the entry-level and received the training necessary to become successful at running a small business. We offer continual classroom education in customer service and personal leadership skills. You can tell the difference high-quality training makes when you come into one of our Kent Kwiks or Avis Lubes!

SO HOW DO WE MEASURE UP?

Where will you be one year from now if you stay with your present company? With Kent, the chances are very high that you could be running one of our locations, making in the mid to upper $20's, plus bonuses! If all of this interests you, the first step is to pick up an application at any one of our Kent Kwiks or Avis Lubes, complete it, and bring it to our Midland area office (3314 No. Loop 250) between 8 A.M. and 3 P.M. Monday - Friday. If you live in Odessa, we take applications at 809 So. Crane Hwy. On Tuesdays at 9 A.M. and Saturdays at 10 A.M. You will then take a battery of tests and questionnaires which give us the information we need to determine if you have the customer service attitudes, math skills and work ethics required to be successful in our business. We also do criminal and credit background checks, and a drug test is required. Relocation within our operating areas may be available.

HOMES

COMING HOME

Built in a horseshoe design around a central courtyard, this large three bedroom, two and one half bathroom town home echoes design elements used by the Romans. A very private house, most of the rooms look inward across the patio and benefit from the dappled light and shady corners.

Absolutely the heart of this interesting property, the courtyard is landscaped with large trees, flowerbeds and shrubs which create the feeling of a quiet, cool oasis. It is, of course the perfect place for al fresco dining and relaxing, particularly so thanks to the sizeable, decked hot tub at one end.

The kitchen, which like the other family rooms, overlooks the patio, offers a tremendous amount of both working and storage space within its hardwood clad cabinets and surfaces. Two large pantries and a utility room add to the practicality of the suite, as does the built-in desk which looks out over the side yard. Like many of the other rooms, the kitchen opens out onto the patio making entertaining that much easier.

Although the house has its central courtyard, which is very much the essence of the property, great attention to detail has been paid to its drive-up appeal. A circular driveway, and landscaped mature trees and shrubs add a Mediterranean touch to the warm toned brick exterior.

Listed at $139,900, the house boasts rooms that all tend to be on the large side, particularly the master suite which is so big that there is plenty of room for a sitting area as well as bedroom. The master bathroom offers a separate shower and tub and large wrap-around closets.

Another useful aspect of the house is the combination of large garage and parking pad. The later is big enough to park an RV out of sight of the main house and is accompanied by a fenced in dog run.

Extras such as built-in bookcases and fireplace in the family room, tiled floors and a storage/work room in the garage help to make the house a practical, and comfortable place in which to live.

For more information about, or to arrange an appointment to view, this charming home at 3204 Haynes Drive (in the Emerson Heights sub-division) call Sandy Scott of RE/MAX at 682-8820.

What is a CMA?

Norma Pine
Chaparral
Realtors

Comparative Market Analysis is a valuable tool in selling your home It is a must for determining the price to ask for property since most sellers do not want to pay for an appraisal. To get a loan, the buyer will have to have an appraisal anyway, and market conditions change.

CMAs, like appraisals, compare your home against other homes that have sold recently and homes that are currently for sale – all similar in size, condition, style and location. Number and size of rooms, square footage, lot size and any special features are all taken into consideration.

Homes in the immediate neighborhood are considered first because similar homes in neighborhoods further away may not be selling for the same amount due to aspects such as school districts, home owner's association fees, direction of city growth and of course current market interest rates and conditions.

The time frame in which you need to sell your house is also a big consideration. The quicker you need to sell affects your price. Adjustments are made for all of these.

Not only do sellers use CMAs but today's more educated transferee buyer is likely to use the CMA process to buy a home he may have to resell in a few years.

How sellers can overcome obstacles

It has been said that location location, and location are the three most important factors of a real estate sale. But the reality is that most homes don't qualify for top billing in the location department.

Whether your home lacks the best location, or simply contains other undesirable traits, don't despair. To sell your home there are numerous things which can be done to overcome even the most undesirable of obstacles. Let's take a look at some of the things you may want to consider.

The proper condition of a home can often overcome the most negative of obstacles to a sale. Begin with an analysis of the outside of the home, paying attention to details. Look for, and fix, things such as warped shutters, dirty doors, cracked windows, untrimmed shrubs and anything else that could make the house feel abused and uninviting.

Landscaping can create a major improvement in the look of a home and its salability. Keep the lawn mowed, trees and shrubs trimmed and flower beds kept clean for an inexpensive and immediate improvement. Try concrete cleaner to remove oil spots in the driveway, and hose down the driveway and walkways for a cleaner look. Consider decorative items such as a brass kick plate for the front door, or planter boxes filled with flowers for a colorful splash.

Inside the home, clean house like you've never cleaned before. That includes tossing out unwanted clothing and other items that crowd your closets. A "too full" closet gives the impression there's not enough storage room in the house.

As a seller, you'll also want to utilize the expertise of a real estate professional to analyze your home in comparison to others in the area. A no-cost, no-obligation property t evaluation can be presented to you to help you determine your next step.

SALES STRATEGY

by Kay Sutton

One of the most important things you can do to help sell your home is to make it impeccable. Make sure your home has every advantage; minor repairs and cosmetic makeovers generally will result in a quicker sale.

To add a feeling of openness, you may want to put excess furniture in storage. If your home contains a lot of personal decorating touches, you might consider rearranging the decor into a more conservative scheme, or storing some of it with the excess furniture. Remember that your goal should be to make it easy for potential buyers to see themselves living in your house.

Consider who the potential buyer might be; a first-time home buyer looking for a starter home, a family wanting to trade up to a more luxurious one, or a buyer being relocated due to employment.

First-time buyers are often swayed by an offer to pick up part of their closing costs. or you may consider helping a potential first-time buyer qualify for the mortgage by paying discount points, or a set amount, to lower the interest rate on the buyers mortgage for the first years. This is referred to by lenders as a "buy down" because payments are actually being "bought down" for a period of time.

You may consider spending money on a homeowners warranty, if your primary sales competition comes from new homes. Such warranties often pay for, or assist with repairs to a home's plumbing, air conditioning and heating systems and may give prospective buyers the incentive they need. Looking at different incentives such as this one helps you to adapt your sales strategy.

The Facts. And Nothing But The Facts.

What's going on in our industry?
Who is winning? Who is restructuring?
Who is going to lose?
Who do you believe.
One thing is for sure. For over 2 decades, Grandy's has been cooking up famous family-style fun -- and great opportunities.

Management Opportunities

We're looking for experienced managers with the willingness to start as a "hands-on" Assistant Manager to join our management team. You'll get in on our terrific compensation program and top-notch benefits package, all backed by the strength and stability of corporate ownership. No graveyard shifts, none of the hassles of dealing with alcohol. And we will never, ever require you to relocate.

There are still a lot of facts to be considered. But quite simply, we can't do it all in an ad.

We'd like to give you a good understanding of Grandy's and the management opportunities we can offer you. To learn more, stop by either of the following Grandy's locations:

3201 Andrews Highway, Midland
3805 E. 42nd Street, Odessa

If you are unable to stop by call 1-800-844-8156 to speak with a representative or send resume to Grandy's Recruitment, 997 Grandy's Lane, Lewisville, TX 75067-2599. 24 Hour Fax (214) 317-8190. EOE M/F/V/D.

Women of childbearing years need folic acid every day. Because you never know who'll be stopping by.

That's why the March of Dimes recommends getting .4 milligrams of folic acid every day before and during the early weeks of your pregnancy. This helps reduce the risk of certain birth defects.

March of Dimes

Think ahead for a healthy baby. For more information contact your health care provider or call the March of Dimes.

It is extremely difficult to describe a home in the paper. It's even more difficult to have to look at 100 houses to find the 1 home you are looking for! Why search the paper when you can call a REALTOR? Like you know the inventory where you work, I also know the inventory of the housing market in Midland. I can save you time, money and hassle and hopefully make your buying or selling a fun and pleasant experience! The homes listed above are all unique in their own respects and are wonderful places to call home. A quick phone call will tell you all you need to know! I am here to help and assist you in the purchase of your home, not to pressure you into buying somewhere to hang your pictures and your clothes.

WHERE'S THE FIRE

Text by Linda Anderson

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram
Firefighter Hilario Gutierrez, who works at Station 2, makes flautas for the B shift. He has served for 13 years with the Fire Department. His cooking skills, which he says are a part of his family heritage, seem to be popular and his co-workers seem to love it when he draws cooking duty.

With the scream of a siren and a blast of a horn, traffic parts to make way for the units of the Midland Fire Department on their way to the scene of an emergency.

Whether it's fire, accident or natural disaster, firefighters and their neon-green fire-fighting trucks and/or flashing ambulances have the responsibility and the dedication to help rescue and protect the citizens of their community.

Fire trucks and other emergency vehicles are linked in most people's minds with disasters or emergencies of some kind.

So it's always a little startling to see one of these disaster-rescue vehicles parked in front of the supermarket, where two or three fire fighters are cruising up and down the aisle, grocery shopping.

Eddie Klatt, assistant fire chief for Midland Fire Department, said the fire fighters work in three shifts — A, B and C — which then rotate times of duty. Each shift works three out of five days, 24 hours on, 24 hours off, followed by four days off. That works out to about 56 hours per week, per person, he said, and assures that a crew is always on duty at any hour of the day or night.

And what that means is, fire fighters, unlike many of the rest of us, don't get to go home after their eight hour shift — but they do get to sleep on the job. When they are on duty, their assigned station is home.

And during these shifts, at least three times every 24 hours, a person has got to eat.

Necessity being the mother of invention the way it is, many fire-fighters are also terrific cooks. The City of Midland supplies its fire fighters with most of the comforts of home, including a place to sleep and shower — and eat. But when it comes to meal preparation, they're on their own — the firefighters have to do the cooking themselves.

They also do the shopping. And, contrary to what some people think, they pay for their food out of their own pockets, not from taxpayers' dollars.

David Smith works the C shift at Station 2, and as of May 24 has been with the Midland Fire Department for 21 years. During that time he has developed the reputation of being a good cook.

"I cook once every three shifts, unless I can get out of it," he said. "We pay $5 per shift per person" for groceries, and "whoever is cooking goes to the store — sometimes it's whoever has the list. If we get called (on an emergency) we just leave the groceries in the store and come back later."

Sometimes, Smith said, people will see fire fighters grocery shopping and accuse them of wasting taxpayers' money on food, but that's not the way it works. When you see firefighters in the supermarket, "we're spending our own money, we pay for our own food," he said. "The City furnishes utensils and a place to cook."

Smith himself likes to bake Oatmeal Cookies ("There's usually some around here," he said.), and is such an expert at it that he can recite the recipe from memory:

OATMEAL COOKIES

MIX:
1 cup granulated sugar
1 cup brown sugar
ADD:
1 cup shortening
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups flour
¾ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
3 cups oatmeal
½ cup raisins
½ cup pecans

Drop by rounded teaspoonsful on ungreased baking sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for about 10-12 minutes until edges start browning. Makes three to four dozen cookies (depending on size of the cookies).

Chocolate chips can be added if desired.

Hilario Gutierrez, who also works at Station 2 but on the B shift, is another long-time firefighter, serving 13 years with the Fire Department. His co-workers seem to love it when he draws cooking duty.

His cooking skills may be part of Firefighter Mike Pardue seasons meat he is preparing for his co-workers in the A shift at Central Fire Station. He has been with the department for five and a half years and got the duty of cooking because he has always been interested in it.

Unprecedented crowd attends first Summer Sunday Lawn Concert

By Marilyn McKnight-Harrison

An unprecedented crowd of approximately 1,400 persons turned out last weekend for the opening of the Museum of the Southwest's Summer Sunday Lawn Concert Series.

McKnight-Harrison

Entertainment was provided by The Pulsations, a group which in 1964 at San Jacinto High School with brothers Doug and Robbie Christensen, Mike Cunningham and Mike Austin. In addition to the original four, the band now also includes Bill Clifton, Mary Ann Oakley, Lynn Renaud and Louis Renaud.

The band, composed of a group of young professionals, has become a favorite with Midlanders and can be seen performing around town at charitable and civic events, as well as private parties and wedding receptions. Its repertoire includes classic rock, rhythm and blues, country-western and pop.

Among those spotted in the huge throng were Nancy and Chuck Henderson, Les Ackerman and his mother, Audrey Ackerman, who was visiting here from Wrightsville, Pa., Patti and Watson LaForce, Susan and John Nichols, Lynn Prieto, Courtney and Chris Renaud, and Kris and Greg Thagard.

The concert goers are encouraged to come early and enjoy picnic suppers on the grounds before each concert. Tonight's program at 7:45 p.m. will feature Silver Creek playing country dance music.

TWO-YEAR-OLD Shannon Nicole Young, daughter of Billie and J.B. Young, recently was crowned Supreme Queen of the Permian Basin Area Baby Pageant at the Midland Civic Center. She also won first place in the Beauty Division for her age group.

Shannon, one of the more than 1,000 contestants, raised over $2,000 for the Shriners' Burn Centers, of which there are 22 nationwide. One of them is located at Galveston.

JAZZ LOVERS are anticipating the appearance of singer Lisa Thorsonat 8 p.m. Thursday at the Club at Mission Dorado. She is the granddaughter of MidlanderMrs. Johnnie Lovelady.

Sponsored by the West Texas Jazz Society, the event will feature a young lady, who has overcome adversity due to an injury and subsequent confinement to a wheelchair and forged ahead to find a new outlet for her creative expression.

Lisa studied jazz and received her master's in jazz —vocal performance in 1994. Since then, she has recorded and performed in clubs and concert halls. Her singing has been described by the Boston Globe as "grand. . .sassy and seductive."

FORMER MIDLANDER Mark Hubbard and Pilar Creveling exchanged vows in one of the season's loveliest weddings on June 3 in Tulsa's First United Methodist Church.

The old and very beautiful church, renowned for its gorgeous mosaic windows, was filled with the magnificent sounds of the Oklahoma Sinfonia's String Ensemble, which provided all of the wedding music.

The bride and groom left the church with their attendants in a trolley car decorated with white tulle and balloons and supplied with champagne.

The reception, which included cocktails and dinner, was held on two floors of the Summit Club, with the Sinfonia String Ensemble on one floor and a rock band on the other.

The day after the wedding, the bride's parents, Jan and Dwight Creveling and Mrs. Ginny Creveling, all of Tulsa, hosted a champagne brunch in the Summit Tower as a send-off for the couple, who were headed for Zihuatanejo, Mexico, for their honeymoon.

The groom's parents, Midlanders Sherry and Jerry Hewett, hosted the rehearsal dinner, a Mexican buffet, at Southern Hills Country Club.

Among the wedding guests were the groom's maternal grandmother, Lilith (Mrs. John) Adams of Jasper; former Midlanders Marcie and Mike Bray of Dallas, and from Midland, Sue and Dan Secker, Jean and Wes Pittman, Bennie and Bob Bledsoe, Karen and Tim Thompson, Ann and Dick Dunbar, Charlene and Doug Bunnell, Claire and Jim Woodcock, and Donna and Don Hewett, with their daughters and sons-in-law, Hollee and Barry Lofquist and Heidi and D'Nard Arthur.

To begin the weekend, out-of-town guests were invited to a welcoming cocktail party at the Tulsa home of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Hawkins.

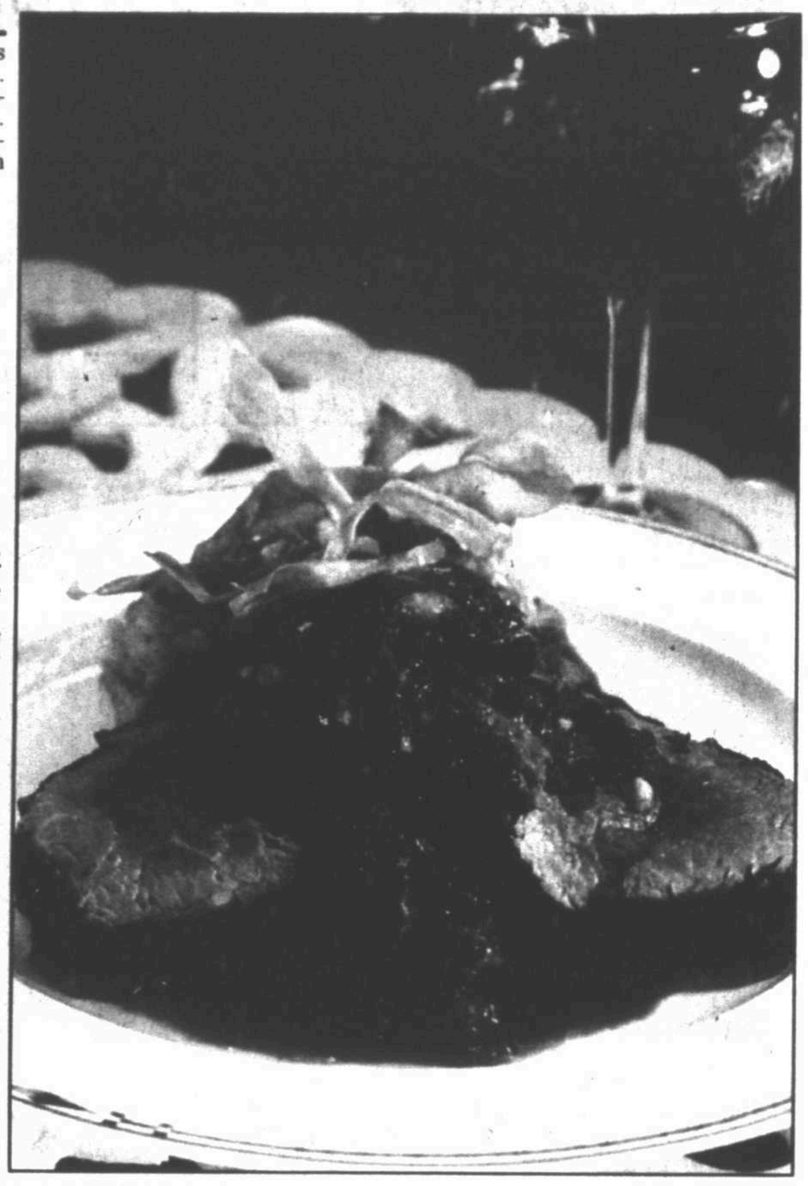

A number of prenuptial festivities in both Midland and Tulsa also honored the couple, who are now at home in Dallas.

Beef tenderloin is perfect for grill

Associated Press

Bring home the taste of New Orleans with chef Susan Spicer's recipe for grilled smoked beef tenderloin, stuffed with spinach. Spicer, owner of Bayona restaurant in New Orleans, uses an eclectic mix of ingredients to create distinctive one-of-a-kind dishes. The beef tenderloin is served over a bed of mashed potatoes, tinted green from the unusual addition of turnip greens. Serve with a molasses-bourbon sauce.

Spinach-Stuffed Smoked Beef Tenderloin is served with mashed potatoes that have been tinted green with turnip greens. Top the tenderloin with smoked vegetables and serve with bourbon-molasses sauce. The recipe is the creation of Susan Spicer, chef-owners of Bayona Restaurant in New Orleans.

GRILLED SMOKED BEEF TENDERLOIN

Charcoal: Indirect
Gas: Indirect-Medium heat
1 head garlic
Olive oil
2 tablespoons butter
4 cups fresh spinach, stemmed, washed and drained
2 to 3 tablespoons flour
½ cup cream or milk
Salt and pepper
2- to 2½ pound centercut beef tenderloin
Marinade (recipe below)
2 cups wood chips, soaked
Molasses-Bourbon Sauce (recipe below)
Mashed Potatoes and Turnips (recipe below)

Cut head of garlic in half across cloves, brush with olive oil, wrap in foil, place on cooking grate over medium heat. Cook for 30 minutes or until very tender. Remove from grill. Squeeze the soft garlic out of the halves; discard skins.

In a saute pan, melt butter, add spinach, toss to wilt. Sprinkle in flour, stir, then slowly add the milk or cream. Cook 2 to 3 minutes until mixture thickens. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Stir in the roast garlic, transfer mixture to a bowl; chill.

Take the beef tenderloin and make a hole through the center with a long knife. Try to expand the hole a bit with your fingers or the knife. Stuff the spinach mixture into the hole from both ends until filled. Coat meat with marinade (see below); season with salt and pepper. Sear on grill. Place wet wood chips on coals, lower lid, smoke meat for about 45 minutes, turning once halfway through cooking time. Remove from grill and let rest before slicing. Serve 2 slices of the stuffed tenderloin with the Molasses-Bourbon Sauce and ½ cup of the Mashed Potatoes and Turnips. Makes 4 servings.

FOR THE MARINADE:
3 tablespoons brown sugar
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup bourbon
1 teaspoon coarse-grind black pepper
1 teaspoon minced garlic
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ cup balsamic vinegar

Mix all ingredients. Marinade meat for as little as 10 minutes or for as long as 8 hours.

MOLASSES-BOURBON SAUCE

1 smoked large white onion, finely chopped (see below)
1 teaspoon minced garlic
½ cup smoked mushrooms (about 4 to 5 large mushrooms), finely chopped (see below)
2 tablespoons butter
2 smoked tomatoes, cored, peeled and finely chopped (see below)
2 tablespoons molasses
2 tablespoons red-wine vinegar
1 teaspoon soy sauce
2 tablespoons ketchup
2 tablespoons bourbon
¼ cup rich beef stock
½ teaspoon chili powder
Salt, pepper and cayenne

In a small saucepan, saute the onion, garlic and mushrooms in butter for 2 to 3 minutes. Add all the other ingredients; simmer over low heat for 15 minutes. Season to taste. Adjust consistency with water or stock, if necessary.

FOR THE SMOKED VEGETABLES:
1 large white onion, peeled and halved
2 whole tomatoes
4 to 5 large mushrooms

Place soaked wood chips on coals, arrange vegetables on cooking grate. Cover grill and smoke for about 15 minutes. Use in the recipe for molasses-bourbon sauce above.

MASHED POTATOES AND TURNIPS

2 potatoes, peeled and sliced
2 turnips, peeled and diced
2 cups turnip greens or mustard greens, washed and chopped
1 tablespoon minced garlic
2 tablespoons butter or olive oil
Salt and pepper
Hot pepper sauce

Boil potatoes and turnips in lightly salted water. Drain and mash. Place in a saucepan; keep warm. Saute the greens and garlic in butter for about 10 minutes, until wilted. Puree in a food processor; stir into potato mixture. Season to taste with salt, pepper and hot pepper sauce. Makes 4 servings.

his family heritage. "Most of my recipes come from my dad," Gutierrez said. "He used to be a chef in the Army. My baking (skills) came from my wife."

He specializes in "about any Mexican food, it doesn't matter," he said. This recipe is one of his fellow firefighters' favorites:

CARNE GISADA

7-bone steak or Swiss steak cut up in chunks
½ onion, chopped
½ bell pepper, chopped
1 16-ounce can tomatoes
Seasonings: garlic, cumin, salt and pepper

Saute the meat in 1 teaspoon oil. Brown the meat, then add the onion and bell pepper. Simmer, adding water if necessary, until done. Season to taste. Add water, flour and tomatoes to make gravy after the meat is done. "There's nothing to it," Gutierrez said.

Mike Pardue works the A shift at Central Fire Station, and has been with the department for five and a half years. As far as his cooking skills, "I've always been interested in it," he said. "Somebody suggested that I ought to do it (cooking) all the time, and I said I would do it during the week and somebody else could do it on the weekends."

Central Fire Station has an outdoor grill, and Pardue said he likes to "cook outside a lot — barbecue brisket, ribs, chicken." The grill, he said, is small and "I'm fixing to try to build a new one."

Pardue does a lot of cooking at the fire station, but he doesn't often use recipes. "I just usually fix something off the top of my head," he said.

These are his directions for pork ribs cooked on the grill:

PORK RIBS

"I buy pork spare ribs or country style ribs, whichever are on sale. Salt them down with ... creole seasoning on both sides and let that set all day in the refrigerator. Then I build a fire with oak, hickory, pecan or mesquite."

Pardue's preference is to slow cook the meat at about 200 degrees to 250 degrees for three to four hours so it develops a nice smoky flavor.

While the meat is cooking, he bastes it frequently with a mixture of:
1 cup butter
2 cups water
2 to 3 fresh garlic cloves, mashed
Juice of ½ lemon and ½ lime
2 tablespoons chili powder

Heat together and let it cook down; use as basting sauce.

The last few minutes of cooking time, coat the meat with barbecue sauce, either homemade or bottled.

Even though they are great cooks and like to make tasty meals for themselves and the rest of their crews, these men are firefighters first. And what happens if the alarm goes off while dinner is being prepared and they have to leave on an emergency call?

If the whole crew doesn't have to go on the call, someone else tends to dinner, Pardue said. But if everyone has to go, "we have to shut everything off" and go.

CLUB NEWS

WOMEN OF COLOR

Women of Color Civic and Social Club met in the home of Cynthia Conally. Shirley Howard presided. Loree Clay read the minutes and Billie Mason gave the treasurer's report. Planned Juneteenth Parade and '70s party were discussed. Two prospective members and 15 members attended.

PRECEPTOR EPSILON DELTA CHAPTER, BSP

Preceptor Epsilon Delta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met at the Plaza Club for Preceptor Day. Secret sister gifts were exchanged and secret sisters were revealed. Ritual ceremony was presented for new members. New officers were installed. Attending were Judy Jehring, Jan Acker, Pauline Heidel, Diana Henderson, Ann Poteet, Nan Sublett, Rozanne Curtis, Nancy White, Barbara Adams, Suzy Arnold, Jean McGilvray and Donna Fulgham.

PRECEPTOR EPSILON DELTA, BSP

Preceptor Epsilon Delta of Beta Sigma Phi met in the home of Pauline Heidel in Lamesa for a salad supper. Suzy Arnold called the meeting to order. Diana Henderson read the minutes. Ms. Heidel gave the treasurer's report. Pat White was welcomed as a new member. The group voted to send a check to the family of Tyler Strickland to help with his medical expenses.

Others members present were Jan Acker, Judy Jehring, Nancy White, Donna Fulgham, Jean McGilvray and Nan Sublett.

PERMIAN BASIN GEOLOGICAL AND GEOPHYSICAL AUXILIARY

The Permian Basin Geological and Geophysical Auxiliary met for a couple's barbecue at the home of Tracy and Jane Clark. Hostess were Pam Suttles, chairman; Cathie Party, co-chairman; Charlene Bolden, Mim Curry, Sharon Farmer, Somita Fekete, Norma Hetzel, Laura Klauss, Molly Williams and Billie Young. Jackie and Earl Gaertner and Ann and Clem Roberts won the door prizes.

ALTRUSA INTERNATIONAL CLUB

Altrusa International Club met at the home of Madge Wallis for a catered breakfast and white elephant sale.

Guests and members were welcomed by Betty McMullan, and the invocation was given by Jean Reid.

Marti Seaton was the auctioneer for the event which is the club's operating fund-raiser.

During the brief business meeting, the budget was presented, to be balloted at the next meeting. Ms. McMullan announced that a new Altrusa Club had been organized in Hernando County, Fla.

New members welcomed were Karla Kelly and Marlene Bruce, staff members at the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children; and Martha Lou Atkinson of Abilene was a guest.

DR. JOHN WOODSON CHAPTER, COLONIAL DAMES XVII CENTURY

The Dr. John Woodson Chapter, Colonial Dames XVII Century met for a luncheon at the home of Mrs. Bruce Pearson. Officers for 1995-97 were sworn in. They are Mrs. Jerry V. SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Hot weather creates many questions about lawns

By Deborah Benge Frost

We are well on our way to full blown summer, and that's when the questions about lawns start rolling in. Yellow spots, dry patches, poor growth and many other symptoms begin to display themselves. If you had a lawn question, take a look at these ... they may be the same problems you are experiencing.

Benge

Q? I've had a terrible time getting the grass to grow well in a four-foot strip next to the street and a narrower strip next to the drive way. In an attempt to get the grass looking better, I've spent extra effort in trying to water it well, but it tends to run off into the street. There is a slight slope, but not that bad. I want my lawn to look good, but yet I don't want to water the street either. Any suggestions?

A. This it a common problem and not an easy one to solve. First of all, it's hard to water any area next to a straight lined paved area, so there are some logistic problems right away. Another fact about growing grass next to paved areas ... they absorb and hold heat releasing it way into the night and they also reflect light. All of these add up to drier soils and more heat stressed grass next to the paved areas. Another factor might be soil compaction caused by increased foot traffic in these locations, resulting in runoff.

OK, now for some suggestions. Water as usual until run off occurs, stop the water for 10 to 30 minutes, and then turn it back on. In commercial agriculture, this is called surge irrigation and it can make a big difference in how well soils absorb water.

If soil compaction is the cause, aerate with a core aerator or use some type of aerating tool.

If a slope is the cause, think about putting in a terrace bed or retaining wall. These are expensive but could be very attractive, low maintenance solutions that could add to your landscape appearance, function and reduce turf maintenance, saving water and labor. A temporary solution might be to irrigate the area with a soaker hose and a more permanent solution would be to install underground drip lines.

Q? My lawn is a mess. The grass is thin, there are lots of weeds and it just looks bad, even when it is freshly mowed it looks singed. What can I do?

A. Let's start with the problem noted at mowing. If your lawn is looking brown right after mowing, it could be mowing practices. If the look is green but a brown cast, the blade on your mower may need sharpening. Blades need to be sharpened whenever you see a white, ragged cut. Dull blades can increase disease problems and make your lawn look bad.

If your lawn looks brown and stemmy after mowing, you are mowing too infrequently and that scalps the lawn. No more than a third of the leaf blade should be removed at a mowing. Mowing more than a third can remove all of the leaf blades, leaving behind only stems. When this occurs it sun scalds the grass stems and crowns, allows weed seed to germinate and weakens the grass. Pretty quick you can have a weed riddled, sad looking lawn.

'Before long, due to environmental legislation, we probably will not be able to put any type of yard greens in the city dumpsters.'
— Deborah Benge Frost, Texas Agriculture Extension horticulture agent.

The more frequently and consistently you mow, the better the lawn will respond and look. Try to mow on a five to seven day basis. Mow slightly higher to shade the soil, reducing weed seed germination. Higher mowing heights also slow grown rates which can mean lower water and nutrient requirements, but still maintain a good looking lawn.

Q? What about not catching the lawn clippings? Won't that eventually build up higher and higher causing all kinds of problems? It just seems to be too dry for it to work in the Permian Basin.

A. Allowing the grass clippings to fall on your lawn will work in West Texas. By never removing more than ⅓ of the leaf blade, mowing on a four to seven day basis, watering with an inch of water every five to six days (during June through September) and using slow release fertilizer, you can let the clippings fall where they may and still have a beautiful lawn. Many lawns in the area have adopted Don't Bag It lawn care practices and have been following the guidelines for several years. Parks, golf courses and many large turf areas have never caught clippings and have good quality turf. And, if you can,, remember back to the days when mowers didn't have bags ... uhuh.

Now, if thought of leaving clippings is too much for you, they can also be used to mulch beds and gardens, put in a compost heap, applied to garden paths, or incorporated directly into garden soil with the addition of a little nitrogen.

Before long, due to environmental legislation, we probably will not be able to put any type of yard greens in city dumpsters. So, you can be ahead of the game, by learning how to use this "garden gold" before it is banned.

Q? I would like to ward off grub worms before they become a problem. Can I apply insecticides now? Or is there something else I can do?

A. There is something you can do right now, but it isn't applying a chemical. Recommended pesticides need to be used in mid- to late July or even early August. Used at any other time you are wasting time and money and endangering the environment. Try to avoid a grub worm infestation by limiting water and fertilizer this time of year. Female June beetles (adult form of grub worms) are attracted to the lushest, greenest, moistest lawns because the soil is easy to dig in (females dig in soil to lay eggs) and lush lawns will make a good incubator/nursery for hatching grub worms.

By stretching out your irrigation frequencies, the soil surface will dry and harden between irrigations ... making digging more difficult. Slightly stressed lawns will be less appealing to the discerning Momma June beetle and she'll pass your lawn up for greener pastures. The type of lawn I am describing is not a dead lawn. It is still green and healthy ... it's just not as brilliantly green and lush as you may normally keep it.

This should work well on buffalo, Bermuda, St. Augustine and possibly tall fescue, which is very attractive to the June beetle and often devastated by it.

Q? I am looking for a landscape maintenance company that will do a good job of taking care of my lawn and landscape in all respects. Mowing, edging, pruning, fertilizing and controlling pests. Do you have any suggestions on questions I should ask when approaching a company?

A. one of the most important questions I'd ask would be whether they follow a standard lawn care program or do they employee IPM, integrated pest management practices. The use of insecticides and herbicides has become a standard approach to pest management and it has resulted in several problems: environmental contamination, pest resistance, destruction of beneficial organisms and outbreaks of secondary pests.

IPM is a combination of pest control strategies that involve scouting, identification of pests, evaluating pest damage levels, determining the best control measure for this situation, whether that be cultural, biological or chemical control. If chemical control measures are selected, they should be the lowest impact chemical to control the pest and it should be spot treated.

I would also ask about their pruning techniques and practices. If they top trees, I would keep looking. Ask about shrubs as well, especially if you don't want the sheared, boxy look and desire a more natural appearance.

One more suggestion. Ask for references, follow up on the references and go look at these landscape sites.

Q? A day or two after mowing my Bermuda grass lawn has lots of seed heads sticking up. I know it is a small thing, but it makes the lawn untidy looking. Can anything be done about this?

A. The appearance of seed heads means your lawn is low in nitrogen. Adding more will eliminate the problem. Bermuda can be fertilized two to seven times a year, depending on how intensively you want to maintain your grass. Two to three times is generally adequate and gives a good looking, healthy lawn. When you fertilize, apply one pound of actual nitrogen per 1,000 square feet of lawn.

For example. If you have a 20-3-4 (N-P-K) fertilizer, divide the nitrogen (N) content (20) into 100. (100 divided by 20 equlas 5 pounds.) Apply 5 pounds of 20-3-4 per 1,000 square feet of lawn space.

These are just a smattering of questions we receive in the Extension office concerning lawns. Keep in mind when striving for the picture perfect lawn, don't do something for the sake of the lawn that will hurt your precious trees, shrubs and other landscape plants. Remember, you can establish a lawn in a season, but it takes years to grow trees.

For more information about lawn care or landscapes, call or come by your County Extension office.

GIVE READING AS YOUR SUMMER GIFT

Join the ReadAmerica Summer Campaign!!

IT'S EASY: Pledge to read with a child 15 minutes a day, 5 days a week, for 5 weeks.

IT'S FUN: Nothing motivates a child to want to read more than an adult reading to a child. Children enjoy reading to adults, especially when they can read about 85% of the words with understanding and limited adult help.

IT'S IMPORTANT: Reading with children can become a family tradition, generations reading together. Early success in reading is the single best prevention for the drop-out problem.

Grill Dad's dinner for Father's Day

Associated Press

For Father's Day, plan a backyard barbecue that gives every chef in the house some responsibility for the meal.

"The casual atmosphere of the grill is a great place to get the whole family involved in cooking," says Robin Kline, a registered dietitian and director of the Pork Information Bureau. "Let the little ones shuck the corn and have older kids slice and cook vegetables."

Both Kline and Donata Maggipinto, food and entertaining specialist for Williams-Sonoma specialty stores, suggest adding flavor to grilled foods by using rubs, which are dry mixtures of herbs and spices.

Maggipinto also likes pastes, which are savory mixtures of herbs and a bit of moisture such as water, oil or juice. "Pastes penetrate food better than liquid marinades because they're drier," she says. "Once placed on the grill, they mix with food's natural juices to provide a baste when cooking."

Kline suggests a Father's Day menu featuring whiskey-pepper chops with molasses butter, grilled summer vegetable kebabs and toasted French bread.

For the more ambitious outdoor cook, there's Lone Star spareribs, a recipe from "Smoke & Spice, the Real Way to Barbecue," by Cheryl Alters Jamison and Bill Jamison. This cookbook, published by Harvard Common Press ($14.95 paperback, $29.95 hardcover), is devoted to wood-smoked barbecue.

For grilled lamb, chicken or fresh tuna, Williams-Sonoma suggests a five peppercorn, rosemary and garlic rub. For fish or chicken, there's a Key lime herb paste.

WHISKEY-PEPPER CHOPS WITH MOLASSES BUTTER

¼ cup butter, softened
1 tablespoon molasses
½ teaspoon freshly squeezed lemon juice
¼ cup whiskey
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons coarsely ground or cracked black pepper
4 bone-in pork chops, 1¼ inches thick

To make molasses butter: In a small bowl stir together butter, molasses and lemon juice with a fork. Cover and refrigerate.

In a small bowl, combine whiskey and salt. Place pepper in another small bowl. Dip both sides of each chop in the whiskey mixture, then evenly coat with pepper. Place chops on a kettle-style grill directly over medium-hot coals. Lower grill hood; grill for 12 to 16 minutes, turning once, until just done. Top each chop with molasses butter. Makes 4 servings.

LONE STAR SPARERIBS

FOR BARBECUED RIB RUB:
¼ cup ground black pepper
¼ cup paprika
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon salt
1 tablespoon chili powder
1½ teaspoons garlic powder
1½ teaspoons onion powder
BASIC BEER MOP (optional):
12 ounces beer
¼ cup cider vinegar
¼ cup water
¼ cup oil, preferably corn or canola oil
½ medium onion, chopped
2 garlic cloves, minced
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon Barbecued Rib Rub
Plus:
3 full slabs of pork spareribs, trimmed of the chine bone and brisket flap, preferably 3 pounds each or less

The night before you plan to barbecue, combine the rub ingredients in a small bowl. Apply the rub evenly to the ribs, reserving about half of the spice mixture. Place the slabs in a plastic bag; refrigerate them overnight.

Before you begin to barbecue, take the ribs from the refrigerator. Pat them down with the remaining rub, reserving 1 tablespoon of it if you plan to use the mop. Let the ribs sit at room temperature for 30 to 40 minutes. Prepare the smoker for barbecuing, and bring the temperature to 200 degrees to 220 degrees.

If you are going to baste the ribs, mix together the beer, vinegar, water, oil, onion, garlic, Worcestershire sauce and rub in a large saucepan. Warm the mop liquid over low heat.

Transfer the meat to the smoker. Cook the ribs for 5 to 6 hours, turning and basting them with the mop about once an hour in a wood-burning pit, or as appropriate in your style of smoker.

When ready, the meat should be well-done and falling off its bones. Allow the slabs to sit for 10 minutes before slicing them into individual ribs.

Makes 6 servings.

FIVE PEPPERCORN, ROSEMARY & GARLIC RUB

4 tablespoons chopped, fresh rosemary
3 teaspoons salt, preferably kosher salt
2 tablespoons cracked five peppercorn mix, available at specialty food stores
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon dry thyme
1 teaspoon garlic powder

Place all ingredients in a blender, spice mill or electric coffee grinder. Grind to a coarse powder. (There should be a bit of texture.) Store in an airtight jar.

The mixture may be rubbed into food immediately before grilling. For maximum flavor, rub into food, wrap tightly in plastic wrap and allow to marinate two to four hours. Makes ¼ cup.

KEY LIME HERB PASTE

¼ cup fresh thyme
¼ cup fresh cilantro leaves
¼ cup fresh parsley leaves
1 tablespoon lime zest
1 tablespoon kosher salt
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
3 to 4 tablespoons Key lime juice, available at specialty food stores

Strip the thyme leaves from the stems. Place all ingredients in a food processor; puree to a smooth paste. If you desire a lighter consistency, add a bit of olive oil. Store, covered, in the refrigerator for up to one week.

The paste may be brushed onto food immediately before grilling. For maximum flavor, brush onto food, wrap tightly in plastic wrap and allow to marinate two to three hours.

DEAR ABBY

'Real' or otherwise, hats off to all dads

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Today is Father's Day, and I hope you will find it in your hearts to forgive me for repeating what I consider my very best Father's Day message. Here it is:

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Happy Father's Day to all you fathers out there!

This year, let's pay special tribute to those men who are (and have been) "just like a father" in a family whose "real" father has died, deserted, or simply hasn't been in evidence for one reason or another.

A garland of orchids to stepfathers — the men who married women with "ready-made" families. They have had to overcome countless obstacles that only men in that situation have had to endure. ("You're not my REAL father, so you can't tell me what to do!")

Let's not forget the uncles, older brothers, cousins and friends who have stepped in to be the "father" in homes where there were none. And God bless the generous men who found the time to join Big Brothers, an organization of men who have volunteered to be surrogate fathers to fatherless boys.

A 21-gun salute to the divorced father who has never uttered an unkind word about the mother of his children, and who has always been Johnny-on-the-spot with the child-support check.

A championship trophy engraved with a heart of gold to the single father who is head of the household, juggling the duties of child-rearing and breadwinning, with few (if any) role models to guide him.

Happy Father's Day to all you men (and women) who have been positive role models for boys who need them.

And, Dad, if you should get another necktie for Father's Day, be sure to wear it immediately, so the kids won't ask (around Christmastime) "Say, how come you never wear that tie we gave you last Father's Day?"

Readers, for those whose father is deceased, and who want to say a special prayer today, I offer the following:

Thy memory, my dear father, fills my soul at this solemn hour. It revives in me thoughts of the love and friendliness that thou didst bestow upon me. The thought of thee inspires me to a life of virtue; and when my pilgrimage on earth is ended and I shall arrive at the throne of mercy, may I be worthy of thee in the sight of God and man. May our merciful Father reward thee for the faithfulness and kindness thou has ever shown me; may he grant thee eternal peace. Amen.

DEAR ABBY: When I saw all those letters about beards, I had to write. The issue of my husband's beard got to be a bone of contention between his mother and me.

I loved his beard, but his mother hated it. You see, Stan has a very weak chin, and his beard covers it nicely, so I prefer the beard. When he started to let it grow, his mother gave him a hard time.

The issue was settled when Stan decided to keep the beard during the winter months and shave it off for spring and summer. — STAN'S WIFE

AT WIT'S END

Remember, there's nobody like your Dad

By Erma Bombeck

Fathering carries with it a reverence and respect that comes with the job. Maybe it stems from viewing a man so tall he doesn't need a stool to get to the toilet, watching an individual so smart he can get a car started by rolling it down a hill, or seeing a person so brave he will go into a dark basement by himself to change a fuse.

Bombeck

For most children the mystique of dads carries on into their adult lives. Mothers? Kids got their number early. They spend a lot of time with them and know what buttons to push, how to manipulate them and what they can get away with. Not fathers.

For example, don't even think of buying your dad a cup of coffee and a danish. He will snatch that check away faster than you can say, "But Dad, I'm vice president of Microsoft, for crying out loud." I'm willing to bet that Ross Perot and Barry Diller can't buy their dads a cup of coffee and a danish.

Never tell your dad what kind of a car to buy. This is because when he looks at you, he doesn't see a 36-year-old man; he sees a 9-year-old kid who couldn't change a bicycle tire. Why should he take advice from you? You are still wet behind the ears and don't know anything.

No matter how old the child becomes, he will never catch up to his father.

Some kids try to top them. That's a big mistake. You think you've endured hardships? They're nothing compared to the blizzard of '32, when dads walked 12 miles (this increases during the years) in the snow and nearly froze to death to get to school.

Never drop a high fly ball. Ever. Dad may not remember what he had for lunch, but he will recall in great detail the day you kept saying, "I got it! I got it!" and you didn't have it.

Criticizing your father is not smart. Even though you are right and he is wrong, you'll be the one who ends up feeling rotten. He can criticize your friends, neckties, major in school, hair, where you spend your money and your eating habits. But just happen to mention to him that he's getting a spare tire and maybe a little exercise would help, and you're out of the conversation and out of the will.

Why are dads like this? From the moment you were born they have known their roles — to be a strong force in your life. That's why they must remain larger than you, smarter than you and give you someone to emulate — if they do it right.

Female firefighters

San Diego's all-woman crew is one of 6 across United States

By Adriana Alcaraz
Associated Press Writer

SAN DIEGO — At first glance, there's nothing unusual about the firefighting crew at Fire Station 3 — until you see the braids hanging down their yellow-suited backs.

Linda Morse, Lisa Blake, Leilani Cerruto and Carol Ringe make up the only permanent female firefighting crew in the nation. Although they have been working the same shift for less than a month, the women are out to prove that firefighting is not just for men anymore.

"When someone's home is burning, they don't come out to check if we're men or not," said Morse, the 33-year-old crew captain. "They just want help."

Although about a half-dozen other all-female crews have been formed around the country, the assignments are usually on a temporary or rotational basis and the crews later disband, said Terese Floren of Women in the Fire Service, a Wisconsin-based national organization for female firefighters.

The women said there are advantages to being in a job traditionally occupied by men. For example, a woman about to give birth or has just been raped tends to feel more comfortable around female firefighters.

'When someone's home is burning they don't come out to check if we're men or not.'
—Capt. Linda Morse.

"What's unique about this crew is we're real young and motivated," said engineer Blake, a 12-year veteran of the San Diego Fire Department.

The women said there are advantages to being a woman in a job traditionally occupied by men. For example, a woman who is about to give birth or has just been raped tends to feel more comfortable around female firefighters, Ms. Morse said.

Before she joined the crew, Ms. Morse said she would respond to an emergency call with a male partner and people would be more likely turn to him for information.

Now, the situation has changed. "They have no choice but to come up to me, a woman," she said.

In 1978, San Diego became the second U.S. city after Seattle to hire women at its Fire Department. Now it has 71 women working full-time among its 850 firefighters, said Captain Chuck Marshall.

The all-female crew was formed three weeks ago when Ms. Ringe and Ms. Blake, who had already been working together for three years, were joined by Ms. Morse and Ms.Cerruto, who had sought transfers from other stations.

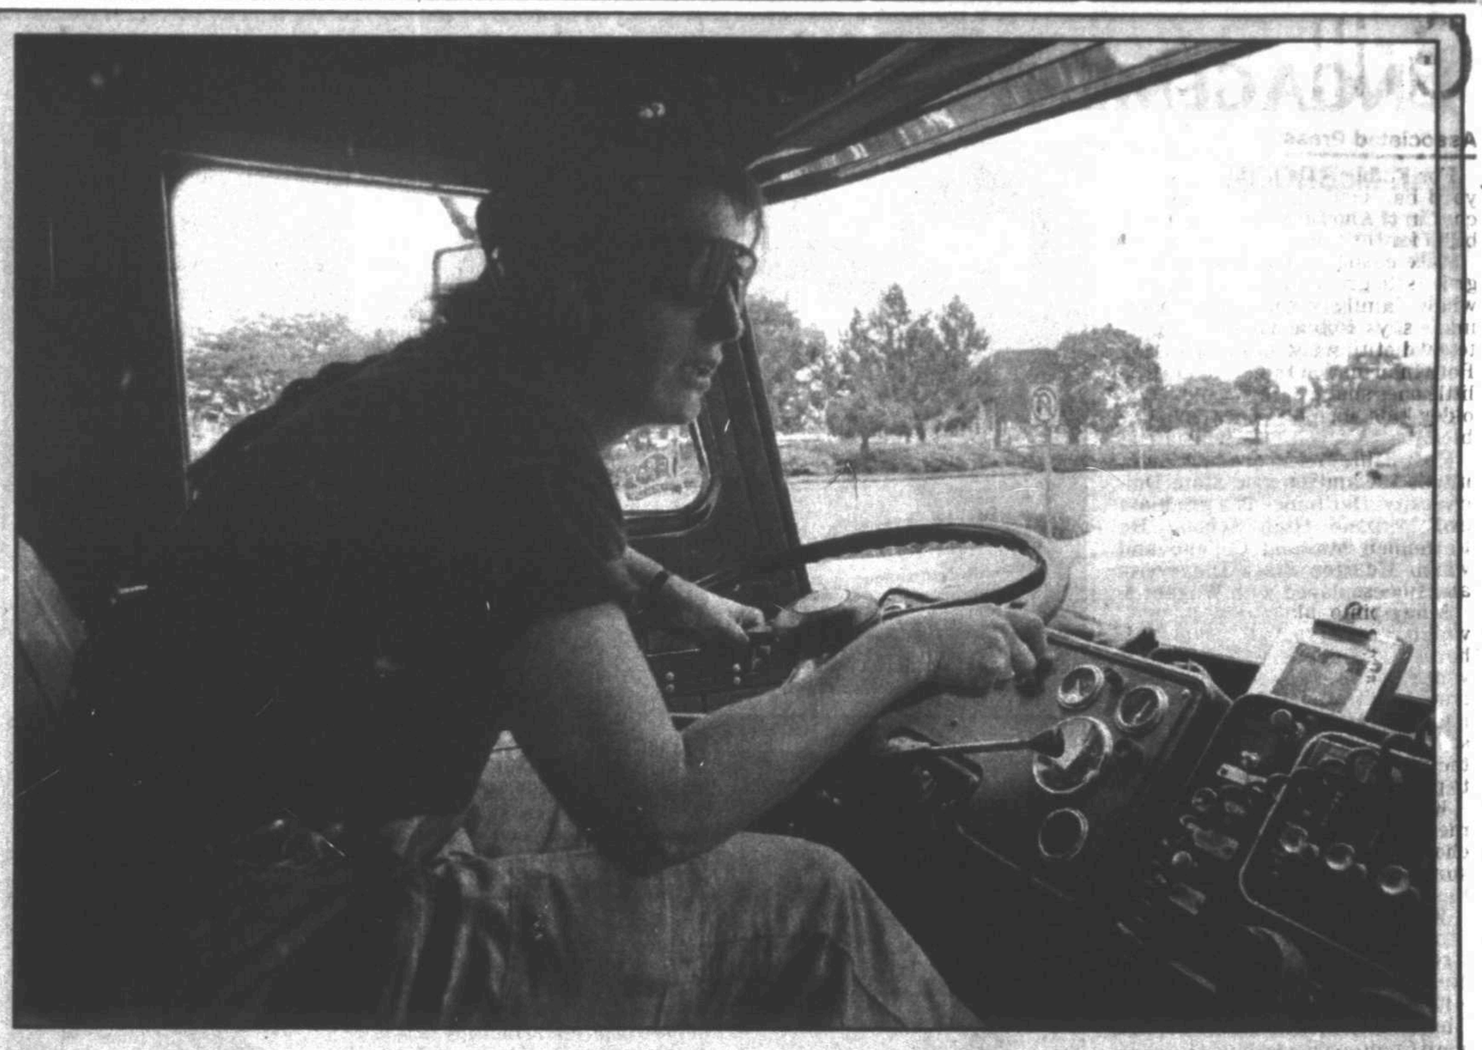

The crew, which occupies one of 42 stations in San Diego, works a 24-hour shift beginning at 7:30 a.m. before getting the next 24 hours off. The schedule allows them some flexibility, with four to six consecutive days off and about 10 days of work each month. That type of schedule fits well with motherhood and family, the women said. Ms. Blake, 38, is a single mother of a 3-year-old boy; Ms. Morse and her husband have an 18-month-old son; and the Cerrutos have a 3-month-old girl. Ms. Ringe, 31, is married with no children.

At the firehouse, much like their seven male colleagues, the women juggle a daily schedule of meetings, housework, grocery shopping, workouts and drills around the emergency calls.

They also make some changes in the firehouse while they're on duty. Sports are eliminated from the television lineup, meals are lighter than those prepared by the men and there seems to be more talk about children. "Guys talk a lot about sports, that's a big difference," Ms. Blake said.

Although proud of her groundbreaking role, Ms. Morse is concerned about the fallout that's sure to come should the crew falter.

"There's a lot of pressure," she said. "People pay more attention because we're women. We are as practiced and polished as we can be."

Beginning bird watchers need to know what to take

Good pair of binoculars, introductory guide to bird watching are important items

By Veronique de Turenne
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — If you've ever glanced out your window and said, "Look, a bird," you're among the 80 million or so Americans the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service counts as having an interest in birding.

You can make it "Look, there's a Cooper's Hawk" with a minimum investment of time and a moderate cash outlay.

Of the more than 800 species of birds who make their homes in North America, 500 live, breed or pass through Southern California.

Beginning birders need a good pair of binoculars and a local birding book.

A good beginning guide, "Introduction to Southern California Birds," by Herbert Clarke, (Mountain Press; 11.95) is available at many local bookstores, and from the Audubon Society Store, 7377 Santa Monica Blvd., inside Plummer Park in West Hollywood.

The book is organized by habitat; the beginning birder can choose a city park, a meadow or a marsh, and turn to the chapter needed to identify the birds.

Good binoculars start at about $150, experienced birders say. You can start with a cheaper pair, but if you get hooked on birding, you will invariably set those aside and spend the big bucks.

Sporting goods and hunting and fishing stores are good sources, as is the Audubon store, which is open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Money still considered best wedding gift

By Julie Hatfield
N.Y. Times News Service

You don't have to go any farther than your wallet to shop for the most popular wedding gift of all. Our informal telephone poll of newlyweds reveals that they want money.

Of all the gifts our interviewees received for their weddings, cold hard cash was the most appreciated. It was also used immediately, for expenses that money really came in handy," said Stephen O'Toole, 28, a newlywed. "We had bought a two-family house and were renovating it before the wedding, and we canceled our honeymoon to Hawaii because it was going to be too much money. We're $5,000 in debt, so the money ... really helped."

His wife, Jennifer, agreed. "Money was the best gift," she said. "The special items, such as plates that we could use at holiday time, were nice, too, (but) the things people picked out themselves, without knowing our taste, were the worst gifts."

Stephen Smith, 29, noted that "the first thing you do after you get home from the honeymoon is pay for it. So the money we got as wedding gifts helped a lot. When my wife, Kathi, and I, went to about 20 weddings in recent years, we gave money, knowing that's what they could use.

"I'd already owned a house," added Smith, "and we both had showers given for us, so with all the gifts from those, all we needed were the big-ticket items, such as a stove, and that takes money."

Jemma and Charles Freeman, who were married last May, recently bought a house. They both agreed that cash was the wedding gift they most appreciated. "We used it to buy things we needed for the house," she said.

COUPLES SAY that family members often know just what they want and need. When Allison and Eric Bernstein married in August, her parents gave them a washer/dryer and his parents gave them a honeymoon in Hawaii.

Lisa and Thomas Rocereto were married last July, and her favorite gift was the 12 settings of silverware that the couple received from her grandparents.

The best gifts for newlyweds Susan and William Kopecky were "the practical ones. Our kitchen is packed. There are food processors and machines that we haven't even used yet," she said.

Newlyweds Suzanne and William Schineller, who were married in September, categorized their wedding gifts into Most Useful, Most Creative and Worst. Under most useful, money was high on the list.

Their most creative wedding gift, Suzanne Schineller recalled, was the half-year membership in a Wine of the Month club, which sends them two bottles of wine every three months. High on the list of their worst gifts, she said, was a piece of Japanese jade.

Others favor more traditional wedding gifts. "Even though I've been cooking as a single person for years, the wedding gift I most appreciated was my 12-piece set of Cuisinart cookwear," said Peg Buske, 31. "For the first time, everything matches."

Cheryl Siegel Berkowitz was married in October. Her favorite gifts were china and cookware.

For Christina and Tony Ogden, who were married in September, the best gift was "our gas grill," he said. "A couple of friends in the wedding party gave it to us. We used it all winter; I even cooked on it last night in the rain."

If cold hard cash seems cold and hard as a gift, author Nancy Dunnan suggests giving the newlyweds stock in a company with products popular with young people. Three that she suggests are Reader's Digest, William Wrigley & Co. and Kellogg Co. Or "check with one or two discount brokers to compare commissions," said Dunnan, who wrote "Your First Financial Steps; How to Manage Your Money When You're Just Starting Out" (Harper Collins, $12). "Then gift-wrap the company's stock certificate or annual report.

"You can get EE savings bonds at your bank with no commission or fee, for as little as $25. Remember that to put them in someone else's name you'll need their Social Security numbers," she said. "Give them mutual fund shares. Pick a no-load (no sales charge) fund with a good track record. Among those with a low minimum investment ($250) are the MIM Funds (800-233-1240) and the Berger Funds (800-333-1001).

Dunnan suggested a visit to the nearest stock or commodity exchange or bank. "Top off the day with lunch or dinner, and, if you can't go along, give a gift certificate for the meal," she said.

An easy way to take the cash theme one step further, Dunnan said, was to give the newlyweds an easy-to-use financial software program, "which will balance your checkbook, prepare a budget and track investments."

Wealth of advice can be found at bookstore

By Mary B.W. Tabor
N.Y. Times News Service

In Moliere's comedy "Les Femmes Savantes," Martine, the kitchen girl, warns, "Books and marriage don't go well together."

That nugget of kitchen wisdom has clearly been lost on bookstores, which are stuffed with every kind of marriage-advice and how-to book imaginable.

For those who need a little nudge toward marriage, "2,002 Ways to Say 'I Love You'" by Cyndi Haynes (Bob Adams), "Hot Monogamy" by Patricia Love (Plume) and "Emily Dickinson on Love" (Barnes & Noble) are there.

If you need some help getting down to the personal questions, there are two workbooks, "Getting Ready for Marriage" by Jerry D. Hardin and Dianne C. Sloan (Thomas Nelson) and "The Marital Compatibility Test" by Susan Adams (Citadel Press), in a multiple-choice format.

In addition to forcing couples to answer questions about religion, housework and sex ("Foreplay should last: a. what's foreplay? b. about 2 to 5 minutes c. 15 to 30 minutes," etc.), Ms. Adams pursues topics likely to cause the big fights.

Dozens of books are available to guide couples through a minefield of organizational details.

And if "Martha Stewart's Weddings" (Workman) with its country-chic photos or "Emily Post's Wedding Planner" (Harper-Perennial) are too ambitious, there's always Teddy Lenderman's "Complete Idiot's Guide to Planning a Perfect Wedding" (Alpha Books).

For husbands-to-be, Michael R. Perry has written "The Groom's Survival Manual" (Pocket Books,), with tips like "Finding an Honest Jeweler" and trimming the guest list ("If you have a 'Fatal Attraction' girlfriend in your past, don't invite her").

The real fun begins once the "I do!" turns to "I did?"

The bulk of marriage-advice books deal with the post-honeymoon couplehood. This year, bookstores offer as many as 50 titles on how to mix marriage and children, marriage and in-laws, marriage and people who don't want to be married and so on.

If you can't stand suspense, there is "The First Year of Marriage: What to Expect, What to Accept and What You Can Change for a Lasting Relationship" by Miriam Arond and Samuel L. Pauker M.D. (Warner Books). "If you yell and scream, you may be trying to scare your mate into giving in to you," they write.

Squabblers can check out "After the Honeymoon: How Conflict Can Improve Your Relationship (John Wiley & Sons) by Daniel R. Wile, who suggests ways to avoid conversational booby traps and accusatory tones.

For those who want steam but not squabbles, there's the explicit "Mars and Venus in the Bedroom" by John Gray (HarperCollins), that includes 20 suggested "sexual turn-on phrases" and tips on how to write a "sex letter."

From the authors of "Second Chances," Judith S. Wallerstein and Sandra Blakeslee, comes "The Good Marriage" (Houghton Mifflin). The authors detail secrets of happy couples and slip their marriages into four categories: the romantic, the rescue, the "companionate" and the traditional.

For bewildered brides looking for a good laugh, there is always some good comedy for late-night reading. "Dave Barry's Complete Guide to Guys" (Random House) advises: "Never assume that the guy understands that you and he have a relationship."

Finally, Paul Reiser, who stars in the NBC series "Mad About You," adds his own bit of wisdom in "COUPLEHOOD" (Bantam): "It just so happens that in life there are the exact same number of people who like olives as people who don't. And they usually end up together."

Couple observes silver anniversary

Wilton and Gloria Youngblood of Midland were guests of honor at a surprise 25th anniversary reception June 2 at Alamo Heights Baptist Church.

Youngblood and the former Gloria Lloyd were married June 2, 1970, in Pecos. They have one child, Trichelle Barber of Midland, and one grandchild.

The couple lived in Weatherford, Okla.; Spearman and San Angelo before moving to Midland. Youngblood is a pharmacist in Odessa. The couple are members of Alamo Heights Baptist Church.

Mermaid Tavern is poetic place

LONDON (AP) — The Mermaid Tavern was a famous Elizabethan inn and a meeting place for writers and poets. Located on Bread Street in Cheapside, its name came from the painted sign of a mermaid hanging outside. English literary figures who frequented the inn include Shakespeare, Ben Johnson, John Donne and Robert Herrick. It was commemorated by poet John Keats in his "Lines on the Mermaid Tavern."

Publisher finds success

NEW YORK (AP) — Publisher Frank Andrew Munsey, born in 1854, began his career as a telegraph operator. When he was 28, Munsey published his first juvenile weekly magazine in New York, The Golden Argosy. This was followed by Munsey's Magazine, the nation's first popular 10-cent, mass circulation magazine.

Eventually, Munsey owned five New York newspapers and various magazine ventures. He also wrote several books about American life, among them "Afloat in a Great City" and "Derringforth."

Munsey died in 1925 and left a fortune of $40 million, much of which he bequeathed to New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art.

At top, getting acquainted are, from left, Juell I. Forth (J.D. Webster), Lum Medlin (Roger Barnes), Sally Forth (Connie Barnes) and her companion, Bertha D. Blues (Sue Hannaman) in the melodrama "Catawamped Among the Cacti." Above, are J.D. Webster, from left, Roger Barnes , kneeling, David Odom as Peso D. Value, Darrell Ward as the fiendish Phineas E. Lickpenny, Tim Rosenborough as the hero, Justin D. Nickatime, Connie Barnes, Tod Mathis as Chuck Upsomegrub and Sue Hannaman. At left, this scene features from left, Bertha D. Blues, Chuck Upsomegrub , Peso D. Value and one of the employees (Kyndall Esslinger) of the "Stumble On Inn." Below, Darrell Ward plays the villainous, Phineas E. Lickpenny, in the annual melodrama. Connie Barnes is the heroine, Sally Forth.

Mischief and mayhem abound at the Yucca Theatre beginning Friday when the 47th annual Summer Mummers opens. "We needed to have the show ready for AACT-Fest," said Barbara Slaton, president of the Mummers board. "We felt we might as well open it for the public." Midland Community Theatre hosts the American Association of Community Theatre's Festival this week. The participants, who are from throughout the United States, will be treated Wednesday to a special performance of this year's melodrama — "Catawamped Among the Cacti," written by former Midlander Randy Hicks.

"And that's going to be really their only chance to see any products from Midland Community Theatre," Ms. Slaton said.

Most West Texans are familiar with the annual summer madness generated at the presentation — popcorn battles and verbal barrages between the audience and the actors. Thus, the idea of an audience of the uninitiated at Summer Mummers is a novel one.

"We hope that they'll have a really terrific time," Ms. Slaton said. "We are going to make sure that lots of Mummers people are in the audience to help them catch the spirit of the show, kind of coach them on the audience participation aspect."

The presentation will give these visitors the opportunity to learn about Midland and its illustrious history.

"This year's production is a repeat performance of a show that we did back in 1985," Ms. Slaton said. "We try to use a lot of local humor, and this storyline is very local because it is the story of the founding of Midland and was originally written for the Midland Centennial."

The story opens in the small frontier town of Midway Station, inhabited by a buffalo hunter known as Lum Medlin (Roger Barnes and David Wade).

Hero Justin D. Nickatime (Tim Rosorough and John Briggs), and his trusty sidekick, Chuck Upsomegrub (Tod Mathis and Paul Fiorella) have come to Midway Station in search of the legendary Pool De Blistex so they may bring its fabled healing lotions to the chapped lips of West Texas.

They are destined to meet the lovely Sally Forth (Connie Barnes and Heidi Hargrove) and her traveling companion Bertha D. Blues (Sue Hannaman and Caitlin Pause). The ladies have come to Midway with Sally's uncle, Juell I. Forth (Mark Wornell and J.D. Webster), to help him establish the Rancho Chicago.

An evil land baron and Indian provocateur, Phineas E. Lickpenny (Darrell Ward and Mike Harrell), and his henchman, Peso D. Value (David Odom and Curtis Roys), are pursuing the young and desirable Miss Forth.

Alas! What will become of her?

The answer to that question will take the better part of two hours to tell. In that time, cast members will be seen live on stage and captured in the frames of the melodrama's movieola. Some of the faces will be familiar to West Texas audiences. Others won't.

"We have about half and half — half new people to the old experienced veterans," Ms. Slaton said.

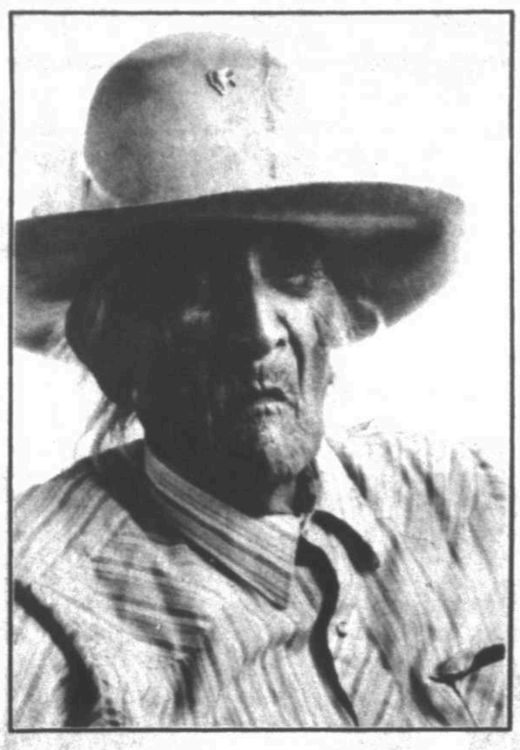

Since its inception, the Mummers production has been a major fund- raiser for MCT.

"We are one of the biggest contributors to the theater's operating budget," Ms. Slaton said.

Directing this year's melodrama is Doug Pike; Ronnie Williams directed the movieola. Light and sound design are by Edward W. Taylor. Sets are by Paul Fiorella. Costumer is Mae Dawson. Set construction is

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Frank Fools Crow of Kyle, S.D., a Sioux medicine man, was born in 1891 and died in 1990. His story is among those captured by Robert Alan Clayton on his journeys through America. His works form the "Quiet Pride, Ageless Wisdom of the American West" Exhibition at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

College students to exhibit work with award-winning photographer

From Staff Reports

"Educated Exposures: Photography by Students of Midland and Odessa Colleges" is on display through July 23 at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

The museum is exhibiting 47 photographs by students of photography instructors Kent Moss and Steve Goff. Moss, of MC, and Goff, of OC, selected the top works done by students this year.

The photographs include silver prints, hand-colored prints, Polaroid transfer, collage and infrared silver prints.

The works are shown in conjunction with "Quiet Pride, Ageless Wisdom of the American West," an exhibition of photographs by Robert Alan Clayton.

Clayton spent three years going down 40,000 miles of back roads in the western states photographing people along the way.

His selenium toned black and white photographs honor age, its beauty, and the living of dreams, while documenting the lives of 36 rural, western Americans ranging in age from 57 to 114. Each photograph is accompanied by text relating the kernel of the life, values and world view of its subject.

Clayton, an award-winning photographer from Colorado, is also an illustrator and designer who uses his camera to catch fleeting emotions, dignity and character. Traveling from the high plains of the Dakotas to the hill country of Texas to the vineyards of California and on up to the vastness of Alaska, Clayton sought out the people at the end of the road.

Each subject was interviewed on tape with Clayton's comments added. The video with the interviews and commentary is being shown during the exhibition.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Nelson to perform

Nelson

Legendary singer and songwriter Willie Nelson is to perform 8 p.m. July 9 at Twin Cities Speedway.

Nelson is touring in support of his latest release on a new label SBK/Liberty Records titled "Healing Hands of Time."

Produced by Jimmy Bowen, who also worked with Frank Sinatra, George Strait and Reba McEntire, the disc features, in addition to Nelson's own numbers, classics by American songwriters as Oscar Hammerstein and Jerome Kern. It also features a 60-piece orchestra arranged by David Campbell, who has arranged recent projects for Elton John and Aaron Neville.

This summer, Nelson also is touring with the Highwaymen — Kris Kristofferson, Waylon Jennings and Johnny Cash.

Information on ticket prices is not yet available.

Contest scheduled

STAMFORD — A fiddler's contest will be held beginning 9:30 a.m. July 4 in the Roundup Hall here.

Prizes of $75 for first place, $50 for second place and $35 for third place will be awarded.

Fiddlers 45 years old or older are eligible and are invited to enter. Registration begins at 9 a.m. that day. For more information call 1-817-997-2680.

Rehearsals start

ODESSA — Rehearsals have started for Center Stage Theatre's first production, "Young Lovers in Chains!"

Dick Wiles (Marvin LeMaster of Midland) and Beulah Goldbottom (Kristy Partridge of Odessa) escape to a lakeside cabin to finalize wedding plans. Their planning s interrupted when Officer Dumas Bruce Bogart of Midland) comes to the cabin to warn the couple that there are two escaped convicts on the loose.

After Beulah has gone to bed, one of the convicts, a woman, bursts into the cabin. Angel Amore (Carla Palma of Odessa) has been on the run from the police since her wedding was raided. To keep Dick from telling Beulah about her, Angel handcuffs herself to him. Therein lies the first humorous situation as Dick tries to hide Angel from his fiance, all the while handcuffed to her.

Then, A. John Doe (Brian Gilmore of Odessa) makes his way to the cabin, and with the help of Officer Dumas, finds himself handcuffed to Beulah.

Performances are July 5-8, 13-15 and 20-22. Curtain is at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $6 for Wednesday and Thursday performances and $8 for Friday and Saturday shows. Reservations may be made by calling 1-915-335-[illegible]881.

Musical set

The children's musical "Pinocchio" will be presented by the Pickwick Players July 6-15 at Theatre Cole, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Curtain is at 1:30 p.m.

This is the classic tale of a puppet (Cheryl Martin) who turns into a real boy.

In his journey, he encounters many delightful characters, such as the crafty Fox (Will Coombes) and the cunning Cat (Amy Mills), the Carleton Owl and Crow (Ryan Britt and Reid Merritt), the sinister Coachman (Justin Evans) who carries Pinocchio and Candlestick (Candace Settle) to the Land of Ease. There they learn a couch potato is not what they want to be.

With the help of kindly characters like the marionettes Arlecchino (Clayton Cross), Columbina (Morgan Merritt) and Pulchinella (Whitney Lanier) and their master, Fire Eater (Clark Hodge), Pinocchio learns the value of honesty and the dangers of selfishness. With the help of the loving Blue Fairy (Katie Hinterlong), he is returned home to Antonio Cricket (Stephanie Biernbaum) and to his compassionate father, Gepetto (Doug Heintz).

The ensemble doubles as everything from circus performers to a sea monster to furniture. Members are Michael Bain, Calvin Bogart, Becky James, Alexis Lane, Melissa Leeper, Amber Loftis, Ashley McWilliams, Peter Mills, Jerrod Moore, Marcus Nunn, Charles Renaud, Ambika Sirnivas, Justin Tate, Tiffany Turner, Amy Willey and Jeremy Wood.

The musical director is Jeff Fentem. Director for the musical is Jane Burgess. Choreography is by Monica Cambron. Sets are by Paul Fiorella, costumes are by Mae Dawson, lights are by Edward W. Taylor and Greg Alexander is in charge of set construction.

Tickets are $5. For reservations call 682-4111.

Season scheduled

ALBANY — The 57th season of the Fort Griffin Fandangle is set for Thursday through Saturday and June 29-July 1.

The nationally known musical history show will begin 8:30 p.m. at the Prairie Theater outside of town. The Fandangle Parade will begin at 6 p.m. June 29.

Barbecue suppers are served each evening on the courthouse square.

Fandangle tickets, $10 for box seats, $8 for all other chair seats and $3 for bleacher seats, may be purchased at the office on Main Street or by mail to Fandangle, P.O. Box 155, Albany, Texas 76430. Tickets may be ordered by phone by calling 1-915-762-3642 or 1-915-762-3838.

Works on display

Works by Manuel "Manny" Rivera are on display at Norwest Bank, Texas Avenue at Marienfeld Street, through June.

A native Midlander, Rivera has taken courses at Midland College. Prints of his work are available.

Evening planned

An Evening of Romance is set for Summer in the City's Thursday offering from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at Centennial Plaza.

Violinist Amanda Stark will perform accompanied by Vilia Walter. Bob's Floral designs and Michael's Flowers will supply flower carts reminiscent of the streets of Paris from which people can purchase fresh cut flowers.

Artist Charlotte Seay will demonstrate her technique of painting flowers.

"For several years I have focused on preservation and conservation," Ms. Seay said. "Our earth is wondrous, and I love it. I strive to convey that feeling in my paintings and invite the viewer to share that love.

She works in watercolor, mixed water media, oil, acrylic and pastel.

Active in the arts community, Ms. Seay has arranged for all the artists who are participating in the Summer in the City series. She is a member of numerous art organizations as well as a signature member of the West Texas Watercolor Society. She conducts workshops, has shown in many juried shows and solo exhibitions and has received several awards.

Eight of history's most romantic couples will be part of the crowd that evening. Cynthia Wadleigh of Ann's Dressed in Time has made costumes for local residents who will portray the historic couples. The person who guesses the historical identities of all the couples will win a prize.

Loraine Street and Texas Avenue will be closed for in-line skating and a children's area will be provided.

This week's Summer in the City is sponsored by Nancy and Buddy Anguish. General sponsors are the Reporter-Telegram, Executone, the Arts Assembly of Midland and Marathon Oil.

All Summer in the City events are free and open to the public. Food will be available to purchase at Sonny's in the Plaza.

For more information call Texas Best, 685-5050.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, JUNE 18, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A new business or romantic alliance could lead to a change of residence. Lay the groundwork for career advancement by going back to school. A home computer makes it much easier to launch a small enterprise. Count on family and friends to be supportive. Events early in 1996 give you a clever idea for boosting profits. A long-desired reconciliation occurs early next spring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: model Isabella Rossellini, film critic Roger Ebert, actress Carol Kane, rock legend Paul McCartney.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keep your ears open! You could hear about an exciting job opening. Avoid arguing with relatives about possessions. Time is on your side. Someone tries to convince you to take financial risks. Say "no."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Jot down original ideas before they evaporate. An older person wants to make amends. Be receptive. Juggle your schedule in order to spend more time with your children. Entertain at home to save money.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A change of lifestyle will lead to new rapport between you and a loved one. Look for larger living quarters. Two hearts beat as one tonight. Follow your intuition -- it is right on target.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spending more time outdoors will give you new vim and vigor. An older person looks to you for guidance. Verbal conflicts can be avoided if you exercise tact and patience. Count to 10 before replying.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Make spiritual growth a priority now. Setbacks will be easier to handle when you are able to put them in perspective. Soft music soothes frazzled nerves. Listen to a favorite tape or CD tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not take on more than you can handle: Others may press you hard if you are in any way indebted to them. Get together with loved ones and discuss ways to reduce expenses.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Proceed carefully if you encounter traffic detours or opposition to your plans. Losing control of your temper will only cause complications. This evening, support comes from an unexpected quarter.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be glad of a chance to get in some extra sleep. You need to build up your energy reserves. If you enjoy cooking for guests, invite a few friends for a cozy meal. Laughter abounds.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be careful of which family member you confide in first. Otherwise, a loved one's feelings could be hurt. Expect the unexpected in romance. Someone could act completely out of character.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Those who work at home will enjoy using a neglected skill now. You may be able to do a professional-looking repair job on certain items. Catch up on world events this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A domestic problem can be solved if you get cracking. Work with a will! If you get together with friends this evening, make it an early night. A busy week lies ahead. Rest up.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Difficult choices -- involving love vs. duty, career vs. pleasure -- await you. Think about your long-range goals. A group get-together promises companionship plus lots of good food.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
2♠	3◇	Pass	Pass
6♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇

There are two ways to attack a problem hand. Cash all your winners and hope that the opponents make a mistake, or check whether there is a legitimate line for your contract.

Any money player would love to pick up a hand like that of South's [illegible]. There is no textbook way to bid it. South's method is as good as any, since it might provoke the opponents into taking a phantom sacrifice on some hands where six spades would not make.

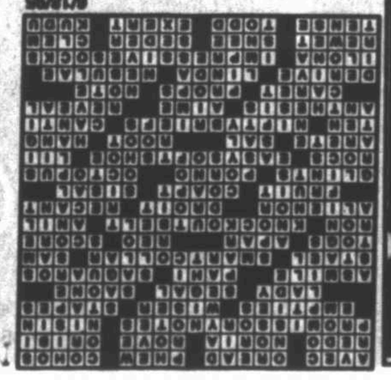

West led the king of diamonds and, when that held, shifted to the ace of clubs. Declarer ruffed, and realized that the fate of the contract hinged on dropping the jack of hearts in no more than three rounds. In an effort to coax some heart discards from the defenders, declarer ran all the remaining spades. However, the hand was an open book.

Since declarer had ruffed a club, East cheerfully discarded three clubs and two diamonds. West let go all the clubs and clung to a high diamond just in case declarer had a loser there. Now declarer tried three rounds of hearts, but nothing good happened. Down one.

A good technician would have no trouble with the slam. After ruffing the club, South would cash just one round of trumps, then start on hearts. If the jack appeared on the first or second round, declarer would revert to trumps and claim the contract. When the knave does not appear, declarer plays a third high heart, with happy results. Although the suit doesn't split evenly, the defender with four hearts also has the second trump. Declarer can ruff the fourth heart and the slam is home.

What if the third heart gets ruffed? Then declarer still goes down only one.

Christian bands change tune on rock 'n' roll

By Chris Vaughn
N.Y. Times News Service

Despite much of its underground status, Christian alternative music is growing exponentially in popularity, with a generation of believers who prefer to glorify God with guitar feedback than with a Hammond organ.

IRVING — A long line snakes around the Salvation Army building in Irving.

The teen-agers, with their requisite curtains of hair, thrift-shop clothes and ears full of earrings, clump together, talk about music and school, waiting for the thunder of sound checks to abate.

It is a chilly, spring Friday night, and it is definitely teen-scene rock 'n' roll. But at this rock show, there is no profanity, no beer, no marijuana and only a few smokers.

What there is plenty of is Jesus.

This is Christian rock, the '90s child of the Jesus rock of the early 1970s.

The genre is every bit the twin of its secular counterpart: Industrial, dance, rap, death metal, punk and grunge are all represented. But the lyrics ... Well, you won't hear any of it on MTV or FM radio:

"And if you're certain
"Certain that faith is some know-nothing mask
"Why do you still ask?
"They don't grade here on the curve
"We both know what we deserve
"Just as you are
"Just a wretch like me
"Jesus is for losers"

The singer is Steve Taylor, an acerbic and acclaimed Christian songwriter in Christian underground circles, on a tune called "Jesus is for Losers."

Many Christian rock and pop groups are well-accepted, and well-known, in the Christian community. But a subculture of Christian musicians and music fans exists on the fringe, and it scares and shocks some people inside and outside the Christian world.

Despite much of its underground status, Christian alternative music is growing exponentially in popularity, with a generation of believers who prefer to glorify God with guitar feedback than with a Hammond organ.

"We're taking a sound that is associated with evil and making something good out of it," said Josh Watkins, a long-haired, goateed 19-year-old who plays guitar in State of Grace, a Seattle-influenced band of four friends from Haltom High School.

Watkins, his band mates and the hundreds of young Christians who play or listen to Christian rock music say their message is the same as that of contemporary Christian artists, even the same as that of singers of gospel or praise and worship. It's just louder, and hipper, and more relevant to a generation that recognizes Kurt Cobain and Trent Reznor.

"We might be saying the same thing as (contemporary gospel singer) Sandi Patty, but there are people who won't listen to her. They'll listen to us," said Scott Porter, the lead singer of State of Grace.

A parent taking a break from working a concession stand in a church hall stands against a wall, seemingly befuddled at what she is witnessing: the four members of State of Grace frenetically pounding out a song as a group of teenagers mosh, or, for the clueless, dance with total abandon.

Porter, a mop of sweaty red hair drooping in his face, urges the crowd to have fun with their dancing but to also reach out to God.

"It doesn't make us a lot of fans, but that's what we're about: Jesus and God. That's it, man," Porter says to the 75 people on the floor, some of whom begin to wave their hands in the air.

Their show takes place in a church youth center in Cityview. Many of those in attendance are not familiar with the band, including the parents, some of whom initially objected to the show because they were unsure of the band's motives.

It is a rather common problem for Christian alternative bands: where to play. Most churches are out, for fear of offending someone. Most clubs won't book them. And Christian clubs are rare: there are around two dozen in the country, none in Fort Worth or Dallas.

Locally, Christian rock fans usually catch special programs at the Irving Salvation Army, the youth center at Restoration Church in Arlington and Dry Bones, a nonalcoholic nightclub in Addison. A move is also afoot by a concert promoter to lease a warehouse somewhere in the Mid-Cities for use as a Christian teen hangout and a more permanent venue.

Teen-agers who are starved for live Christian rock regularly drive into Fort Worth and Dallas from several hours away to catch rock acts.

Shows in the Salvation Army, the church halls and the church auditoriums attract mostly Christian audiences. But most alternative bands — from national acts such as Mortal, Starflyer 59, Poor Old Lu, and Blender Head, to local bands such as State of Grace, Glisten, Grace Thirsty Souls and Tendril — prefer to play secular clubs, where they feel that their mission lies.

At secular bars and clubs, Christian rock bands can reach a segment of the population that does not respond to sermons or church, a population that envisions Christians as uptight and narrow-minded.

"The church has put up big walls around it and they're pouring all the water on their own people," said Chris White, the 25-year-old son of a minister and the owner of a concert promotions company. "Meanwhile, there's a desert outside the walls where nothing grows. They're not willing to go outside their comfort zone. Where did Jesus go? He ate with the sinners, the tax collectors. He didn't try to save the saved. He hung out with the sinners. How can you spread the gospel inside the church building?"

SUMMER: Mummers prepare to take stage

by Greg Alexander.

In addition to the melodrama, the Mummers includes an olio — a series of short sequences or acts. "We have several new acts in the olio, as well as some of the old favorites," Ms. Slaton said.

Directors for this year's olio are Ann Semple and Jed Barker.

The event requires 75 to 100 people nightly to present. "That's a lot," Ms. Slaton said. "And we are an all-volunteer organization."

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Band to perform

Silver Creek band is to perform at the Museum of the Southwest's Summer Sunday Lawn Concert Series 7:45 p.m. today.

The quartet members are Truman Ivison, lead guitar; Randy Elliott, guitar; Bob Korner, bass guitar; and Doug Hartman, drums. All are vocalists.

Lawn Concerts, sponsored in part by the Reporter-Telegram, features free family entertainment for all ages held on the front grounds of the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. Audience members are invited to bring seating and picnic suppers or snacks.

The concerts continue Sundays through Aug. 6. The June 25 program features Joseph and Theresa playing ballads and blues.

Child's Day set

BIG SPRING — A free Pioneer Child's Day is scheduled at the Potton House, 200 Gregg St., from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. July 15.

The grounds of the historic Potton House will be covered with booths and individuals demonstrating the old-fashioned ways of the pioneers. Children and parents will be able to practice their skills at each of the special areas dealing with food, play, folk medicine, everyday tasks and farm chores.

The pioneer philosophy of "never waste of throw away anything that can be put to use" will be demonstrated in the making of corn husk dolls, wooden stick toys, cloth dyes and herbal health remedies.

In the folk medicine tent, children will visit the herb doctor with pretend illnesses and be shown what pioneers considered the cures for their ailments.

Standard hours for the museum are 1 to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Performance set

Lisa Thorson performs for the West Texas Jazz Society at 8 p.m. Thursday at Mission Dorado Country Club.

General admission is $15 for non-WTJS members. Members will be admitted free. Reserved seats are $10 extra, for members and non-members. Mail checks to West Texas Jazz Society, P.O. Box 10832, Midland, 79702.

Artists featured

Gallery 1114's summer show features artists Charles Evans of Waco, Dianne Greene of Roanoke, Kate Sartor Hilburn of Choudrant, La., and Jeanne Johannes-Tempelton of Carmel, Calif.

This show of contemporary photographs, which will remain at the gallery through July 20, includes a variety of images and techniques, such as collage, painting and other manipulation of the image.

Gallery 1114, 1114 N. Big Spring St., is a co-operative center for modern and contemporary art. Gallery hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Thursday through Sunday.

ELISE COOMBES

Contributors to endowment fund recognize MC's importance to area

A recent report by the Texas Association of Community Colleges states the state appropriations for community colleges have declined 27 percent since 1986. Recognizing that Midland College would be asked to do more with less funds from the state, the Chaparral Circle Endowment Fund was established to maintain the quality of education at Midland College. More than 75 percent of the $5.75 million goal has already been reached with contributions from businesses, foundations and individuals—including more than $50,000 from Midland College employees—all of whom share the belief that Midland College is one of the community's greatest resources.

Coombes

Here are only a few of the school's contributions to the community:

—In 1969, there were 688 students enrolled in degree programs. Today more than 3,500 students are enrolled in credit classes with more than 13,000 enrolled in Continuing Education programs.

—Initially MC offered 11 courses every semester. Now the college offers more than 600 credit courses from math to music to auto mechanics every semester.

—The Associate Degree Nursing (RN) program graduated its first class in 1984 and boasts a 99 percent pass rate for the program's 263 graduates. Ten ADN graduating classes have had a 100 percent pass rate on the state licensing exam since 1984.

—Sixty-two percent of the students who have graduated from the college's Radiography program are working in the Permian Basin. Almost 30 percent of the program's graduates have gone on to advanced education in radiation therapy or advanced imaging modalities such as MRI, CT scanning or ultra sonography, all courses taught at Midland College.

—Midland College is one of the largest employers in Midland with more than 550 full- and part-time employees.

To become part of the circle of giving between the college and community, remember that a commemorative gift makes a meaningful contribution to the excellence in education provided by Midland College. It's a gift that makes a difference. For more information on the Chaparral Circle Endowment Fund, contact Eileen Piwetz, Executive Director of the Midland College Foundation, Inc. at 685-4519.

PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, JUNE 18, 1995 SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

BRIEFING

Pins dot a map of Eddy County indicating the high level of drilling in New Mexico.

Drilling slumps

Drilling activity continued to decline during the week ended June 9, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

The Permian Basin rig count fell six rigs to 110 for the week, just above the year-ago tally of 108.

Lea County, N.M. remains the most active in the Basin with 19 rigs.

Nationwide, the count slipped three rigs to 674 for the week, below last year's count of 752.

Natural gas drilling continues to outpace oil drilling, with 350 rigs drilling for gas and 303 drilling for crude.

No one knows exactly when the Westbrook field will hit 100 million barrels, but it will probably be some time this month.

The folks at Westbrook had a homecoming Saturday that marked that event. Over 475 registered for the homecoming and listened to Brent Lowery, Fina's senior production engineer for the Westbrook area give a presentation on the field.

The Abrams Number One was drilled in June of 1920 as the field's discovery well. The field in 1922 led to the building of the Basin's first pipeline, and in 1924 to the building of the first refinery at Colorado City.

The training rig at the Oilfield Training Center in Roswell plays a role in keeping New Mexico rigs going.

Prices steady

Oil futures traded in a narrow 25 cent range this week with little news to move the market strongly up or down.

Prices briefly went above the $19 level at mid-week, boosted by a gain in gasoline prices. Late in the week, however, West Texas Intermediate on the New York Mercantile Exchange closed at $18.94 a barrel. The posted price closed at $17.25 a barrel.

Natural gas futures trended lower, closing at $1.67 per thousand cubic feet on the NYMEX.

Amoco CO2 plan

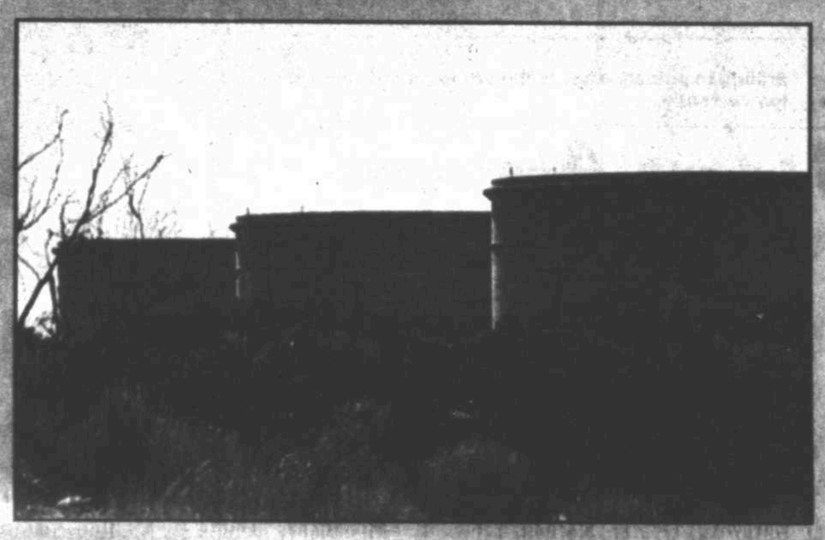

Amoco plans to increase CO_2 production from its Bravo Carbon Dioxide Unit by 65 million cubic feet per day to 400 million cubic feet. The oil company says it will spend $17.8 million on the expansion program and will drill 31 wells in the CO_2 unit. The wells will be drilled to an average depth of 2,200 feet.

Amoco says it will also make improvements to the inlet, compression and dehydration systems in the field.

Permian Unit Vice President Jim Posey said Amoco confirmed the development potential of the field in Northeast New Mexico following a technical study of the productive limits. The development will be used to meet demand in the Permian Basin.

NEW MEXICO REVIEW

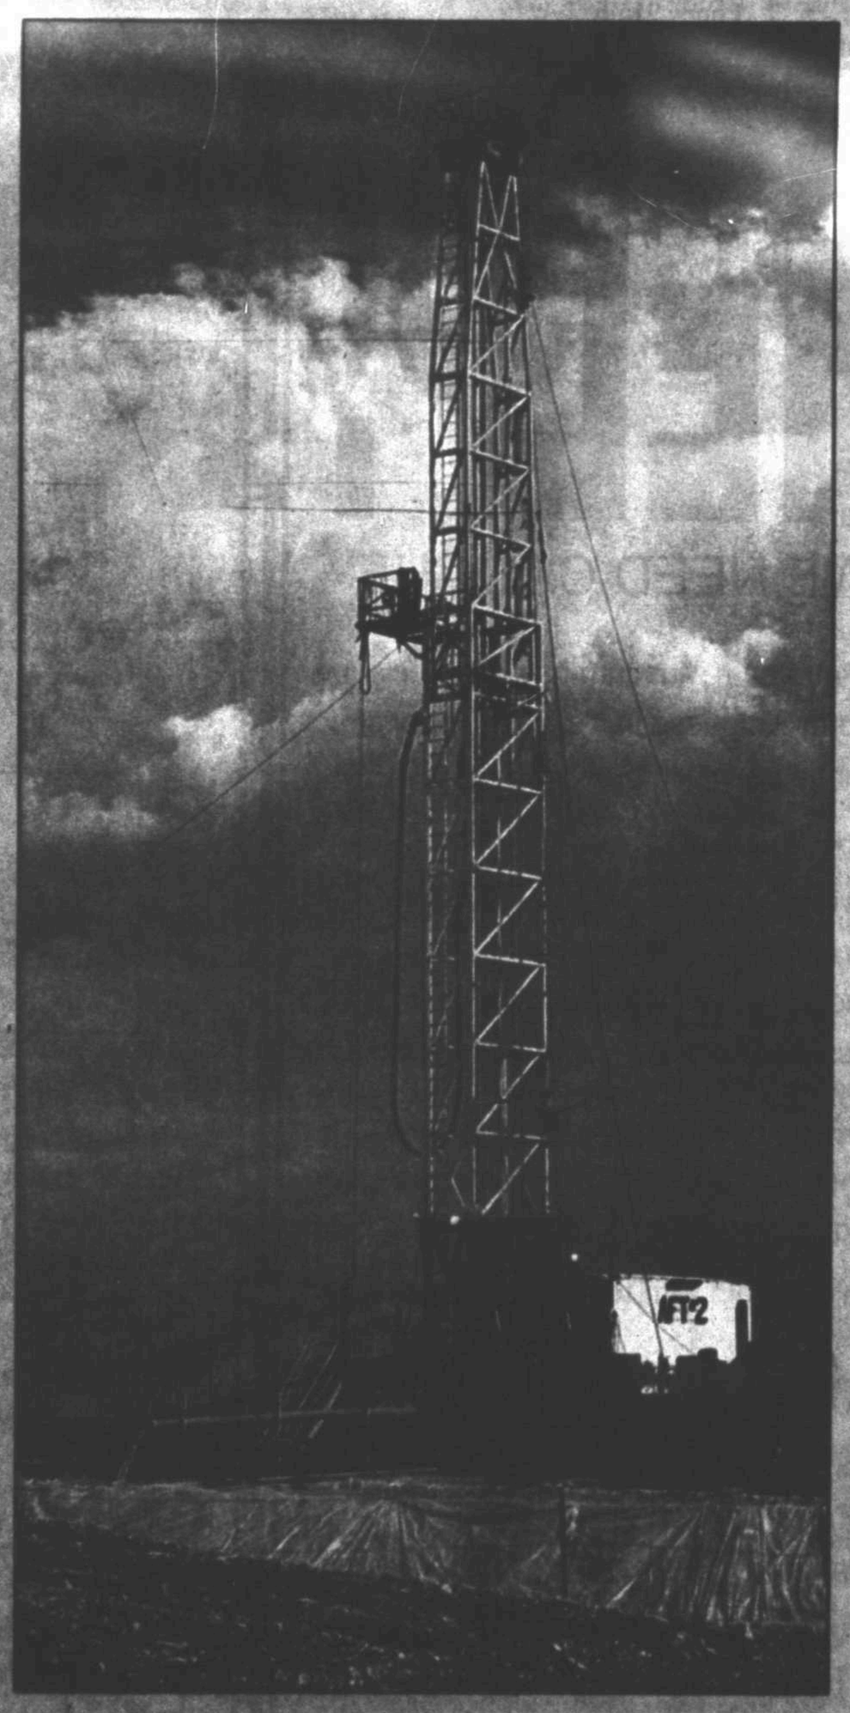

Top, a cloudy sunset falls on an oilfield near Hobbs, as a tank battery near Jal stands as a reminder of New Mexico's prolific petroleum history. Left, a rig for ATF drills away near Loco Hills and Enron's Hobbs plant is a major employer for the city. Whether in oil or gas New Mexico has always been a n active part of the Basin, and on most weeks accouts for the largest percentage of the Permian Basin rig count.

New Mexico plays heats up activity

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

If the annual review of activity in New Mexico sounds like a broken record, maybe it should. For the past three years the activity levels in Southeast New Mexico have gotten better each year.

When compared to the Texas side of the Basin, New Mexico comes out ahead. Last week, for instance, 32 of the 116 rigs working in the Permian Basin, or about 25 percent, were in Chaves, Lea and Eddy counties of Southeast New Mexico. For the same period, Mike McDermett, president of Association of Oilwell Servicing Contractors and president of Cobra Industries in Hobbs, reports that there 211 well service rigs working in two counties: Eddy and Lea.

"Activity levels seem to be higher than last year, and is spread evenly across completions, workovers and maintenance," said McDermett. While capital is still a problem with many of the small producers, McDermett feels the mood of the New Mexico oil industry is generally higher this year than last year, and matches the activity increase.

The reasons for higher well service activity include: new drilling from exploration and development plays and the fact that independent oil companies are buying and upgrading major oil company assets.

There are several good exploration plays in Southeast New Mexico, and one reason behind them is geology.

The Delaware sand, the Devonian and Penn are still strong plays and seem to be getting stronger due to new technology that includes horizontal drilling and better frac and completion jobs.

Marathon, which utilizes horizontal drilling and is working a Penn play in the Indian Basin field — just a stone's throw from the South Dagger Draw field — notes that it is getting some world class wells. Its best well to date is 1,600 bopd on initial potential. To date the company has drilled 25 wells in the Penn play.

Bob Kukla, regional manager for Marathon in Midland, points out that Marathon's increased activity in New Mexico is probably a function of under development in the past. He noted that the Indian Basin field was discovered in the 1960s, but is just now reaching record high production.

He says Marathon has had mixed success in the Devonian, but intends to continue drilling it.

The Delaware sand, pervasive in New Mexico, is still a strong play with Meridian, Pogo, Devon and Enron some of the dominant players.

The Morrow, which has consistently been a target in Southeast New Mexico, is one of those trends that various companies have had mixed results with, but keep playing nonetheless. Almost everyone who works New Mexico drills Morrow wells from time to time.

Along with the Morrow, the Atoka is still a popular target in Eddy County, and is drilled when the prospects merit it. Ray Hedman, a spokesman for Compressor Systems Inc. notes that Atoka-Strawn natural gas drilling in New Mexico, along with the Pecos Slope and Abo have become real hot spots for the company, which sells compressor packages to new gathering systems. Combined with large compressor units for the Four-Corners

Energy, mining industries clash over drilling in potash area

■ Both industries have done massive amounts of work on cases.

By Ellen Hopkins

The oil and minining industries have clashed head on in New Mexico over the environmental aspects of drilling.

Over 100 drilling permits are in litigation in an area of New Mexico designated as the Known Potash Area (KPA) by the state of New Mexico and U.S. Bureau of Land Management (BLM). Walter Case with New Mexico Potash Corp. said the individual appeals may be heard together as one case and that the Department of Interior Board of Land Appeals (IBLA) is attempting to clear its docket to hear the case.

In the interim, a massive amount of work is being done by both the oil and gas companies and the potash industry. Lawyers have been hired and expert witnesses are developing their testimony.

One group of oil companies involved in the potash dispute includes Yates, Pogo and Devon which have appealed directly to the IBLA.

Randy Patterson with Yates Petroleum in Artesia said although no date has been set, the evidentiary hearing has been granted and will be heard by an administrative law judge. He added that the evidentiary hearing is part of the regulatory process that takes place when appeals such as these are filed.

Patterson said this legal action has been on-going and was actually begun prior to the New Mexico Oil and Gas Association's (NMOGA) attempt to negotiate with the potash industry.

Ed Hall, vice president of public affairs for Santa Fe Energy Resources in Houston, is on the executive committee of the NMOGA and chairman of a potash task force. Santa Fe and at least a dozen other companies have tried unsuccessfully to acquire drilling permits in the KPA.

The attempted solutions to the potash issue are many, and Hall said a concentrated effort has been made to resolve this dilemma during the last 18 months. Committees, task forces and the NMOGA have worked on the state level, federal level, with elected officials, appointed officials and with the potash industry.

Along with the NMOGA, the BLM has tried to negotiate with the potash industry and been unsuccessful.

The KPA consists of approximately 500,000 acres, most of which is federal land; between 10 and 20 percent of the area is state land. It extends across the Eddy and Lea County borders, and is situated west of Hobbs and east of Carlsbad.

Just outside this area and overlapping into it is the highly productive Delaware play including Livingston Ridge and other fields.

Oil and gas reserves in the area have been off-limits to development because the potash industry is concerned that natural gas drilling will cause methane gas to migrate through the formation and enter the five potash mines.

From the mining perspective, Case said the issue is one of underground workers' safety due to this possible wellbore leakage of methane into mining areas.

The oil and gas industry's position is that this migration won't happen, but the federal BLM has been steadfast is restricting industry operations to the edge of the KPA.

"There is extensive opportunity here," Hall said.

To date Santa Fe has drilled 80 wells in the Delaware without a dry hole. Santa Fe among others has numerous locations yet to drill in the KPA and Hall believes many of the locations are drillable without endangering anyone.

"Santa Fe has no interest in endangering any miner in the Potash Area or in putting any of the mines out of business," Hall said.

He added that the industry feels it is the government's responsibility to agree to the development of resources in the area for all concerned.

Case agrees that reserves such as potash or oil and gas should not be wasted. And he knows the oil industry doesn't want to risk injury to miners or anyone's safety. He said potash can be recovered first and oil and gas can be recovered later, but the reverse is not true.

Patterson said he understands the potash industry's contention that escaping wellbore gas can migrate through the Salado formation, but he strongly disagrees with it.

"We have scientific evidence that will conclusively show there is no danger of gas migration," he said. "The Salado formation is salt, plastic and impermeable. And the Salado tends to encapsulate material. That makes it impermeable so gas can't migrate through it and kill miners."

He said in years past potash companies have mined to within a few feet of existing wellbores and no safety problems have occurred.

Yet Case contends, "We understand that the underground pressure in these areas has enough driving force to move the methane."

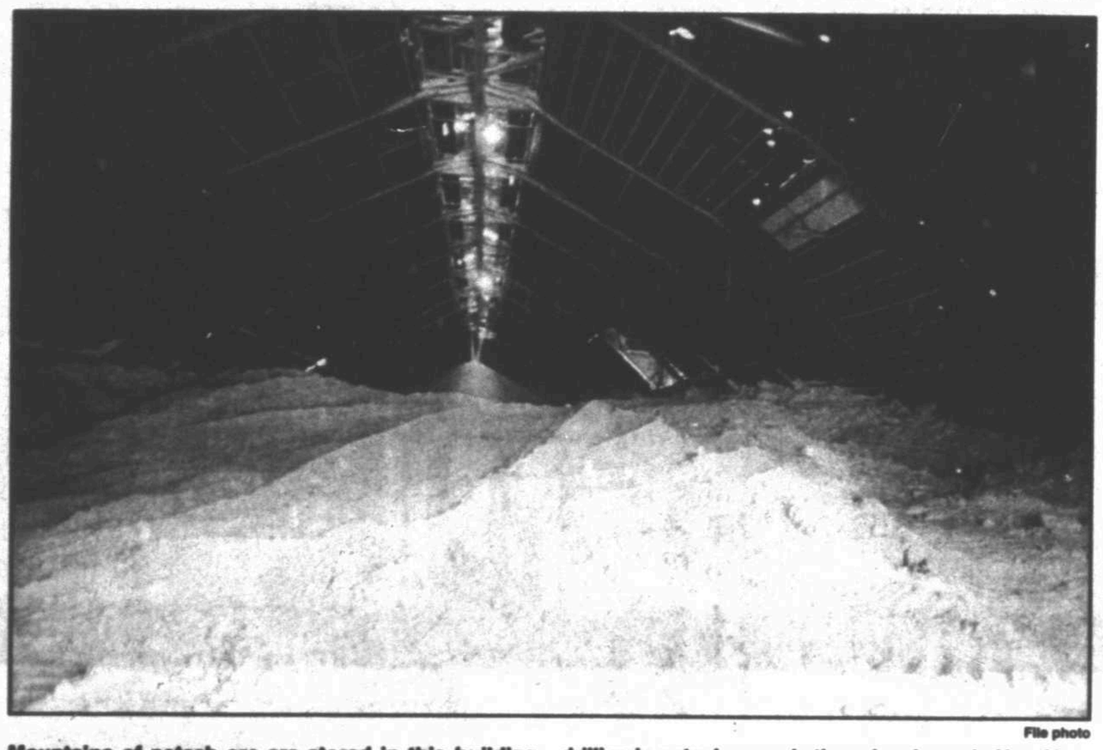

He explained that mining creates a void in the earth that underground rock tends to fill. This "subsidence" is a naturally occurring process and Case said the underground rock movement runs the risk of rupturing a casing string.

He said protecting against subsidence and reducing the likelihood of methane migration requires an off-limits area depicted as a circle around a well with a radius equal to the depth of a mine.

"Our mine is approximately 1,650 feet deep," Case explained. "That means this circle area needs to be 3,300 ft. across."

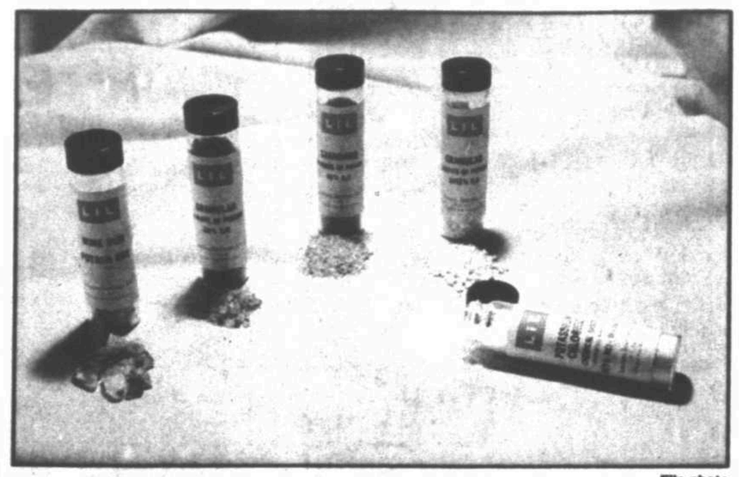

He added that the ore wasted by one well invading this area (3,300

Enserch completes Dalen acquisition for $340 million

DALLAS—Enserch Exploration Inc. has acquired for cash 100 percent of the Dallas-based affiliate of Pacific Gas & Electric Company, Dalen Corporation. The purchase price was $340 million. Additionally, EEX repaid DALEN's bank debt of $115 million.

The purchase price was funded through Enserch Exploration lines of credit and the bank debt was funded by a bridge loan.

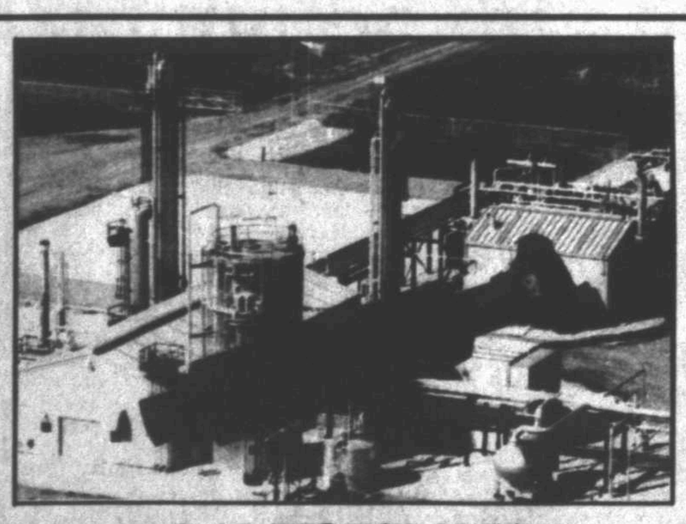

The company intends to repay the bridge loan later this year by an asset-based financing. Proceeds from an offering of common shares of Enserch Exploration later in the year will be applied toward EEX's debt.

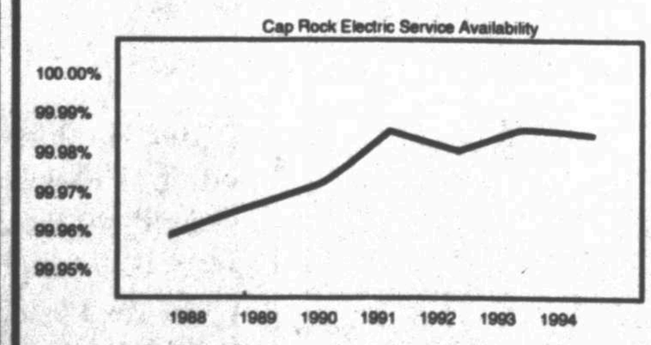

Enserch Exploration Inc. is a natural gas and oil exploration and production company with activities focused primarily in Texas and the Gulf of Mexico.

HELP!
WE NEED CALICHE
The Petroleum Museum has reached a temporary impasse in it's plans to construct a rotary rig exhibit.
Since this is to be a permanent well site that will be used for decades to come, both as an exhibit for the public and an instructional facility for the industry, it is necessary to build an extra strong pad.
We need another 35-50 loads of clean, caliche to be donated for this purpose. We cannot move the rig in until the pad is built.

POTASH: Safety, economics main disagreements in dispute

ft. by 4-1/2 ft. thick) represents over a half-year's life off his reserves.

Hall is anxious for science to step in and pinpoint the location of the potash ore and whether methane can migrate through the Salado.

"We believe that science should be the resolution," Hall said. "Because if there is a safety concern, studying the science will determine it."

From the potash industry's perspective, migration causes more than safety problems.

Case said because the potash industry doesn't encounter methane naturally in its mines, the mines are classified as non-gassy. This classification provides for a considerably less expensive setup of equipment and mine ventilation.

In contrast, coal mines commonly encounter gas and as such have different ventilation systems, enclosed flame paths, non-sparking equipment and are substantially explosion proof.

"Our overriding concern is for the safety of people," said Case. "But the cost issue is also of concern. It's an industry threatening situation because having to replace our equipment to meet the standards of a gassy classification would be cost-prohibitive." The mining law is written such that if just one mine has contact with gas, all five mines will be classified gassy.

"This would create a life-threatening financial burden on the potash industry to have to replace what we now use."

He said the potash industry's financial investment in this area has already been substantial. Replacement value of each of the processing plants, underground equipment, buildings and structures would run between $100 and $200 million.

Economics affect both sides of the dispute as well as state and federal coffers.

"The drilling opportunity doesn't just involve money for the operators but also millions of dollars in revenues that will go to the state and federal governments," said Hall. "Not to mention the number of additional jobs that could be available in New Mexico and on the Texas side of the border."

The state of New Mexico stands to receive additional revenue from wells drilled on state and BLM lands. Case said all things considered, the state revenue from potash is higher, but longer in coming.

"Looking at 'per productive section' income to the government, revenue is five times higher from potash reserves than from oil and gas reserves," he said.

He added that the direct royalty dollars are about equal for potash and for oil and gas.

Another economic consideration in the potash dispute involves optional drilling techniques.

Case said the potash industry is aware of outside experts that have determined oil and gas reserves are recoverable using directional drilling. He's also aware that local producers don't agree this technique is an option.

"Directional drilling was a consideration, but the horizons we're drilling to are so shallow that the bend must occur in the salt formation," said Hall. "This is extremely expensive and results in the production not being economic."

Hall said some producers tried horizontal drilling, but it didn't work. Optional completion techniques, such as using extra casing through the Salado formation, have been considered.

Hall said the potash industry will use only about one-third of the 500,000 acres involved in this dispute, and that leaves a lot of room for oil and gas development.

"We don't question that there are good oil and gas reserves in these areas," said Case. "But we have no where else to go for reserves."

He said this case is vital to the potash industry's future, as this area produces 85 percent of the nation's potash. The other 15 percent comes from California and Utah.

Case said because potash reserves are limited, the Secretary of the Interior prohibited drilling in the KPA during the 1950s. The State Oil Conservation Commission regulates state leases via Order R111. He added that the potash industry's off-limits land has shrunk over the years through revisions to these regulations.

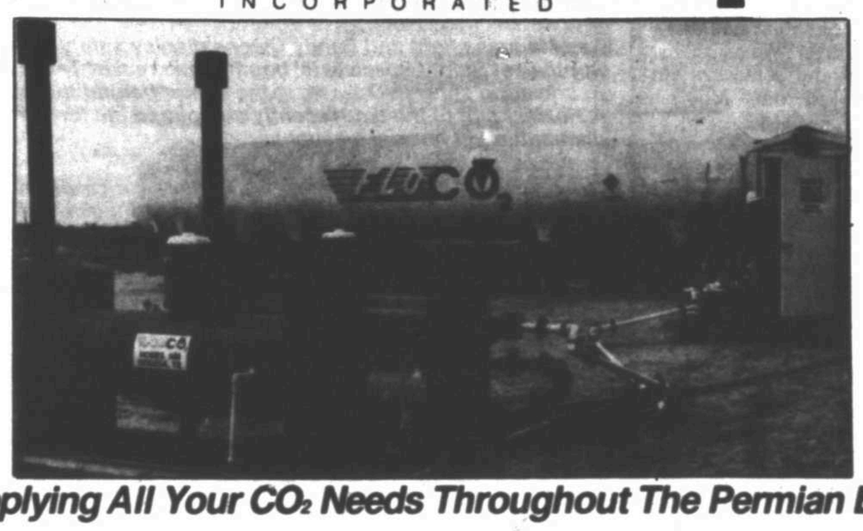

He said the revisions began with letter "A" and are now up to "P" or "Q" and it's time to stop before there is no more land protected for the recovery of potash.

Hall said, "The oil and gas industry is behind us, and those at the state level who can see the financial benefits are behind us. All we want is to develop this area, and do it safely."

'The oil and gas industry is behind us, and those at the state level who can see the financial benefits are behind us. All we want is to develop this area, and do it safely.'

FYI Around the Oil Patch

Expert says safety training can more than pay for itself

Safety company takes cue from military

Keeping up with OSHA regulations, some of which change two or even three times a year can be a nightmare. Many oil companies consider safety training and OSHA compliance to be a necessary but costly evil. Scott Magness, founder and President of Southwest Safety Specialists in Hobbs, is convinced that safety training actually saves money.

Magness explained, "It has been proven that with good training and good equipment a company can increase production and cut insurance losses, lost work time and damaged equipment. Training that improves the safety of a workplace involves teaching people to be proactive, to work together to prevent accidents. We find this teamwork attitude usually spills over into job attitudes."

"We have adopted many of the techniques proven effective by the United States Military. We have found these methods to be highly effective and to result in higher retention and test scores. They also improve attendees' attitudes,"

Scott Magness
Founder and President
Southwest Safety Specialists

"We've seen situations where a small company has grown larger after having safety training. This training can be a real attitude building experience," Magness said.

Extensive hands-on methods are the best way to accomplish this, according to Magness. "Some companies attempt training by simply showing a few videos and putting in a little classroom time. Then when a real emergency happens employees can be unprepared for handling it safely."

Southwest's concept is to combine video, hands-on drills and personal instruction. "We have adopted many of the techniques proven effective by the United States Military. We have found these methods to be highly effective and to result in higher retention and test scores. They also improve attendees' attitudes," said Magness.

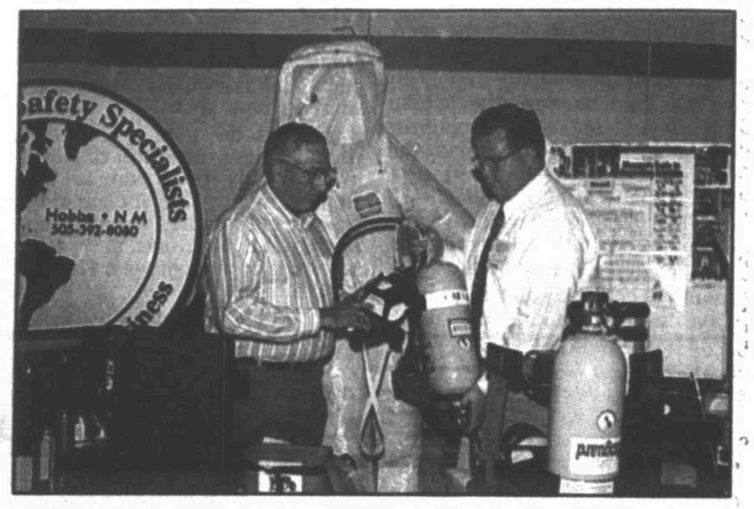

"We tailor our presentation to each specific company. Our company will spend time on-site and create a video and some overheads that are site-specific," Magness related. This tailoring gives context to the hands-on drills.

Because the trainers at Southwest Safety Specialists actually perform the duties in the field(s) in which they train, they don't simply teach theories. Magness said an instructor teaching a class today may have actually worked a hazardous situation the day before. His information will be actual experience.

Southwest also makes their experience available in consulting, on-site auditing and assistance in real emergencies, not only in the Permian Basin but internationally. They are currently involved in nuclear dismantling procedures in the former Soviet Union.

Almost as big a task as disarming the Soviet weapons, is keeping up with OSHA rules. Southwest subscribes to several information services such as the Bureau of National Affairs (BNA). The BNA records workman's compensation filings, industrial fines and other vital regulatory information. Southwest is also tied in by modem to Federal regulatory agencies for the latest updates in rules and rulings. "We constantly go to schools and seminars ourselves to stay current," Magness said.

"Almost all accidents are preventable, with proper training and equipment. It is our intention to prevent all accidents possible," Magness concluded.

Ray Magness (left) and Danny Owens display safety equipment at Southwest Safety Specialists' booth in the recent Texas Safety Association show in Odessa. In the center behind them is a Level A HazMat suit of the type recently shipped to the former USSR for dismantling of nuclear weapons.

Southwest Safety Specialists, where "Your Safety is Our Business," is located in Hobbs, NM. Safety training can be done at the customer's site or in Southwest's complete training facility in Hobbs, which includes a working HazMat (hazardous materials) center. Southwest can train and work with a company's own safety department as well. They also sell a huge inventory of safety equipment and supplies. Call them at (505) 392-8080.

Roving barbarian tribes are no longer a daily threat at windows; however, the sun is relentless in its attack on summer cooling bills. Mid-West Door and Window General Manager Mike Smith and Assistant Manager Tom McDaniel say the displayed sunscreens can reduce the sun's heat penetration and glare by 70%.

Windows have been a target for thieves since ancient times

Since ancient times windows have been both a blessing and a curse. They do let in light and fresh air, but, especially before the invention of glass in the Middle Ages, they also let in rain, temperature extremes and the occasional invading enemy.

Even today we know the plusses and minuses of windows. The same windows that invite in a cool evening breeze allow the hot summer sun to rob us through higher utility bills.

It would be nice if there were a way to get in more light, including large windows and skylights, without risking a full-scale heat invasion.

Surprisingly, there are several ways to accomplish exactly that. Sunscreens present a simple and economical way to reduce the effects of the hot sun, especially for skylights. Mike Smith at Mid-West Door and Window said sunscreens block out up to 70% of the sun's heat and glare. "They pay for themselves in about two years. If electricity costs keep going up, they'll pay for themselves even faster," he said.

Sunscreens for regular windows simply replace the regular screens. For skylights they work differently.

Skylight sunscreens are made of a special anti-tear vinyl-coated polyester. They are woven so that the yarn is interlocking. Then they are heat-treated to bond the material for strength and durability.

For curved glass skylights, the screens are held on by shock cords. For the flat glass variety, snaps allow for easy installation and removal when the seasons change.

Mid-West's Smith said storm windows are another option. "Storm windows mount over existing windows to create a pocket of dead air around the window. This keeps hot air out in summer and cold air out in winter," he explained. Storm windows also help eliminate drafts which make a house uncomfortable.

"It's amazing how much storm windows also cut down on dust and noise. The neighbor's barking dogs may not bother you as much when you install storm windows," Smith said. Could it be that storm windows could improve neighborly relations?

In older houses with windows whose caulking is cracked, the best solution may be to completely replace the windows with a double-pane variety. That's because storm windows' effectiveness is limited if the regular window does not seal tightly. Double-pane windows also come with a thermal break that keeps the metal frame from conducting heat or cold. Smith said these windows insulate as well as storm windows do.

"Anything you put in must be installed right, caulked, sealed and insulated. At Mid-West, we do the installation ourselves. We don't sub-contract to anybody for door or window installations," Smith assured. That way, if there ever is a question about the job, Mid-West is ready to stand behind their work.

These sound like much better solutions for West Texas than the ancient Eskimos' windows. They would insert a block of fresh-water ice into an opening in the igloo. This would let in some light, but they were pretty hard to see through. This kind of window wouldn't have the chance of a snowball in West Texas, either.

Mid-West Door and Window, in business since 1976, sells and installs all types of doors and windows, as well as siding. They are located at 2400 W. Front, and their phone number is 682-4632. Their hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

New Mexico's Brushy Canyon major play for Basin producers

By Ellen Hopkins

Eddy, Chavez and Lea Counties in southeastern New Mexico have been particularly active areas for several oil and gas producers since 1990. Much of the attention is drawn to the Dagger Draw and Livingston Ridge areas, and other fields producing from the Brushy Canyon play.

Drilling and especially workover budgets have been planned based on the multiple pay sequences in the area where producers plan to continue activity for at least the next several years.

Pogo Producing is one of the most active producers in southeast New Mexico. Pogo Vice President Jerry Cooper in Midland said the company has been drilling in the area for over 15 years, but the activity level has been steadily increasing over the last six years.

Activity during this time has been concentrated in five fields, all part of the Brushy Canyon play. Development is on-going, but Cooper said some of the fields are beginning to mature. Since 1990 the company has participated in around 230 wells.

Brushy Canyon wells vary from 6,000 ft. to 9,000 ft. in depth and can run around $0.5 million to complete depending on the number of pay zones and the corresponding number of fracs.

Pogo was instrumental in its fracturing techniques in southeast New Mexico, and Cooper said the company adapts each frac to each completion based on what is seen in the reservoir.

Pogo discovered the Livingston Ridge Field in late 1988. Cooper said with its discovery well, the Pogo Producing Neff 13 #1, the company started developing the field. Yates and Phillips are also active in this area.

The West Sand Dunes Field was discovered by Pogo early in 1992. It's located approximately four to five miles southwest of Livingston Ridge. The Mobil Federal #1, a deep gas well, was plugged back and recompleted up hole in the Brushy Canyon. Pogo has an active development program in this area which is also seeing intense activity from others such as Santa Fe, Enron and Yates.

Cooper said along with the West Sand Dunes Field, Pogo is simultaneously drilling in the Ingle Wells Field about one mile due east and has been active there since '92. Santa Fe and Devon also are drilling in this field.

Additional Delaware activity is taking place in the Loving Field area of Eddy where Oryx is also drilling. Cooper said Pogo is drilling other Brushy Canyon prospects in Lea County in the Red Tank Delaware Field. This field was discovered in 1992 with the Red Tank Federal 27 #1 well. Meridian is also active here and Cooper said Pogo will continue developing this field into next year.

Pogo and Marathon are both drilling in the Indian Basin, located north and west of Carlsbad. Marathon has been finding record class producers in this Eddy County field, according to R.F. Unger, Midland operations production manager for Marathon.

"Marathon has found some prolific oil wells with initial rates in excess of 1000 bopd, and with high gas rates as well," said Unger.

He said several years ago Indian Basin was thought to be a mature field. Now that Marathon is 25 wells into this development phase, Unger considers it more a "moving target."

Unger said other areas in southeast New Mexico have been considered mature in development in past years, but Marathon's experience has been a continued discovery of new reserves as determined by running new logs, conducting additional evaluations of old logs and paying closer attention to detail.

"The multiple pay sequences offered in New Mexico are the reason a large portion of our budget has been set aside for workovers and recompletions," he said. Unger added that Marathon was instrumental in pushing for tax relief in the state regarding workovers and recompletions.

Marathon has participated in drilling 50 to 60 Eddy and Lea County wells in the last several years including the Brushy Canyon play. Unger said the company is pursuing deeper horizons also such as Pennsylvanian, Ellenburger and Devonian gas and oil reserves.

Some of the drilling is predicated on one of the several 3-D seismic shoots Marathon has instigated or worked in unison with others.

"3-D is not a panacea, but we've been pleased with our success," Unger said.

He added that Marathon has been able to export a lot of the horizontal drilling technology learned from the Yates Field, and apply it to other areas.

"You can take adaptations of this technology and move to other reservoirs," he said. "With the right experience and with significant adaptations you can be successful."

Phillips Petroleum tried adapting horizontal well technology to the Delaware formation, but the results were disappointing according to Jack Pickett with Phillips in Odessa. The company has found success with the pipeline frac technique in Delaware completions.

Pickett said Phillips is the number three oil producer in southeast New Mexico. The company's production comes from the Vacuum Field, Cabin Lake Delaware and Livingston Ridge.

Although Phillips is not currently drilling in the area, the company plans to drill some wells in the San Andres, Morrow and Delaware yet this year.

Yates Petroleum Corp. is another active producer in southeast New Mexico, drilling hundreds of wells in Dagger Draw, east Indian Basin, and Pecos Slope Abo in Chavez County.

Randy Patterson with Yates said the Dagger Draw is becoming fairly mature and said there are not too many spacing units that don't contain more than one well.

"The east Indian Basin is in the early stages of drilling because of the area's infrastructure," Patterson said. "The cost of pipelines was a factor and we had to run electricity to the area because there wasn't any."

He is hopeful there will be infill drilling in the Pecos Slope Abo and said he's excited about the new workover well legislation.

"That's going to help the state of New Mexico," he said, and added that he'll be participating on the committee to draft the regulations.

Kelley Oil completes two producers in strategically critical Louisiana pay

HOUSTON—Kelley Oil & GAS Corp. announced the completion of the Louisiana Minerals 5 No. 1 well in the Sailes Field of Bienville Parish, Louisiana.

The well encountered productive Hosston A and B sands and tested at a daily rate of 6.8 million cubic feet of gas and 40 barrels of condensate through perforations from 7,231 to 8,868 feet.

The flow rate was achieved through a 27.5/64 inch choke at a flowing tubing pressure of 1,635 pounds per square inch. The well will begin flowing to sales next week.

Kelley Oil & Gas owns a 32.64 percent working interest in the well.

Another well in the Sailes Field, the Barr et al No. 1, encountered productive Hosston A and B sands and tested at a daily rate of 4.671 million cubic feet of gas and 30 barrels of condensate through perforations from 7,805 to 9,311 feet.

The flow rate was achieved through a 34/64 inch choke at a flowing tubing pressure of 1,000 pounds per square inch. The well began flowing to sales on May 22, 1995.

Kelley Oil & Gas owns a 32.69 percent working interest in the well.

This completion brings the number of successful wells drilled by Kelley since January 1994 in north Louisiana to 28 of 28.

The company is pursuing a balanced drilling strategy emphasizing low risk development drilling in north Louisiana combined with both development and high potential exploratory drilling in south Louisiana utilizing 3-D seismic analysis.

"These successes in north Louisiana are strategically critical because they allow us to replace our production regardless of the success of the high potential exploratory drilling we also undertake in south Louisiana," said David L. Kelley, Chairman and CEO of Kelley Oil & Gas.

Dresser finals acquisition of Italian company

DALLAS—Dresser Industries Inc. announced that it has completed the acquisition of Grove S.p.A., an Italian-based manufacturer of valves and regulators for natural gas and crude oil pipelines, petroleum products and power generation. The addition of Grove S.p.A. makes Dresser one of the largest manufacturers of oilfield valves in the world.

NEW MEXICO ISSUES

Environment focus in New Mexico

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

It is good news, bad news for the oil industry in New Mexico when it comes to political issues.

On one hand, legislation passed earlier this year providing production incentives was a clear sign that lawmakers are concerned for the future of the oil and gas industry and its contribution to the state.

On the other hand, New Mexico is still a state that suffers from acute environmentalitis. It has too many environmental laws and too many environmental studies, nearly all of which are aimed at the oil and gas industry.

Part of the problem may be that there are too many government agencies controlling the affairs and resources of the state. Another part of the problem is that the two oil and gas producing regions are in remote corners of the state with the population centers in the middle of the state.

That's why when the state legislature passed two bills this year to reduce the severance tax it was a pleasant surprise to the industry. One bill would decrease the severance tax on marginal wells; the other would decrease taxes on new production as a result of workovers.

It is still too early to tell, but the bills could have a positive impact on activity in the state. The bills, which go into effect July 1, have now been turned over to the New Mexico Oil Conservation Commission to work up the rules.

"It's a good feeling to know that the state government realizes the importance of our industry and are working to make it a more viable industry," says Mike McDermett, president of Association of Oilwell Servicing Contractors.

"It is encouraging that there were no set backs to the oil and gas industry in the last session," said Bob Kukla, vice chairman of the New Mexico Oil and Gas Association.

That does not mean, however, that the industry is out of the environmental woods. Democrats have been in control of the state for many years, and where Democrats are in power environmentalists build strong holds, observed one New Mexico oil industry member. Now with a new Republican governor and a legislature that considers itself veto-proof, interesting dynamics are at play in New Mexico politics.

At issue now is a state-driven endangered species act that the oil industry supports. "We are behind the act, because it would require public hearings. It means lawmakers would have to go to Hobbs and listen to the people tell them why they can't make a living," said Ruth Andrews, who handles environmental affairs for the New Mexico Oil & Gas Association. "To my knowledge we are the first state to require peer review and public hearings in areas affected by an endangered species listing."

That bill could have some impact on the new proposed Resource Management Plan, a thick volume of Bureau of Land Management ideas, notions and proposals that could withdraw several million acres of New Mexico land from public exploration.

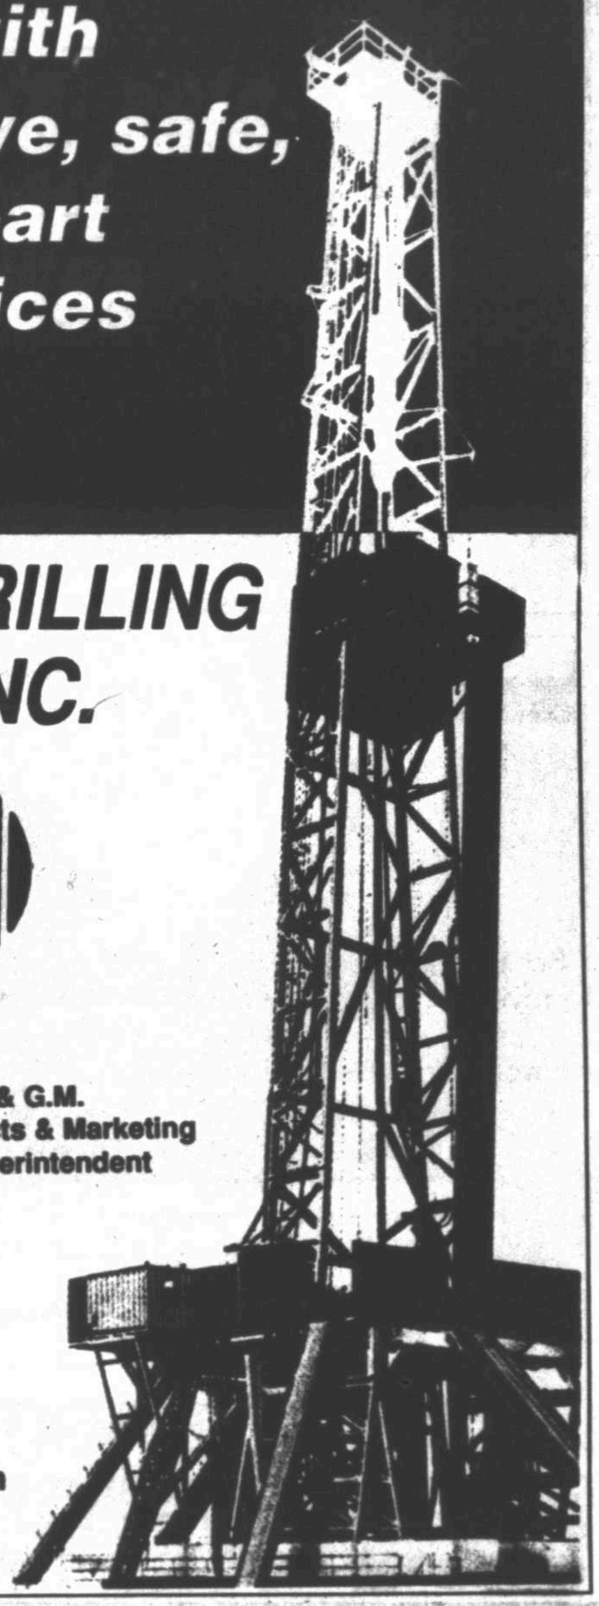

"The reasons for withdrawal of the lands are myriad," said Andrews. "This is a thick, complicated document that is still under review, and we are not very optimistic about the outcome."

Please see FOCUS/9G

Barren New Mexico land is the focus of an environmental struggle between the New Mexico oil and gas industry and the government.

FOCUS: New rules to get public hearing

(From 7G)

One of the reasons the industry is skeptical about environmental affairs is the Dune Sagebrush Lizard that has become the Spotted Owl of New Mexico.

The State Environmental Dept., New Mexico Fish and Game and BLM officials are now engaged in a study to determine where the little lizard lives and how endangered it. The outcome of that study could paralyze the drilling industry in the state or leave it free to drill. "We hope it will not close down drilling," said Andrews.

Environmental regulations that impact economics are a concern in New Mexico, but so is access. "It doesn't matter if it is economical to drill, if you can't drill," says Bob Kukla.

In another issue. The oil and gas industry in the state is trying to get the state and federal regulators on the same page. In a recent case, a team of three state environmental regulators made an inspection of a facility and required $1,500 of testing of soil and chemicals on the site. A short time later, a five man team from the Environmental Protection Agency appeared made the same inspection and required the same tests for $1,000. When asked why they could not accept the state tests, the owner of the business was told that they were separate entities and did not cooperate.

"If we can get the state and the federal authorities to have nearly the same rules and eliminate over lapping of regulations, it would create less confusion and more compliance," said Kukla. A lot confusion is generated, says Kukla, when each one has different standards for water and air quality and drilling compliances.

Normally Occurring Radioactive Material is another environmental concern the state is addressing. The state has now adopted new regulations which provide for measurement and disposal of radioactive oilfield materials that allow operators to measure NORM only when soil is being removed or when equipment is being worked on. This eliminates an all-encompassing rule that would require measurement of all facilities through which product passed. At the same time, the New Mexico Environmental Dept. is leading a multi-faceted task force to determine disposal procedures and rules.

"I think the new NORM regulations will be reasonable and something the industry can live with," said Andrews.

In addition to the NORM disposal NMOGA is also working on adoption of a generic tracking program for oilfield waste, that was developed by Texaco and recommended by the Interstate Oil and Gas Compact Commission.

Air quality, spills and leaks and the playa lakes are other environmental issues the oil and gas association are monitoring.

"We have no shortage of environmental issues," said Andrews.

Tuscarora Gas gets permit to build new gas pipeline

RENO, Nev.—On June 2, Tuscarora Gas Transmission Company accepted a Certificate of Public Convenience and Necessity (CPCN) and will begin construction June 19 on a 229-mile natural gas pipeline between Malin, Oregon and Reno, Nevada. The U.S. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) issued the CPCN on May 31, 1995. The planned in-service date is scheduled for November 1, 1995.

Tuscarora customers will benefit as a result of pipeline competition, improved reliability from two interconnected pipelines servicing the area and direct access to the natural gas reserves in the Western Canadian Sedimentary Basin, according to Ed Miller, Tuscarora general manager.

Tuscarora will become the second interstate natural gas pipeline serving northern Nevada and will provide communities and customers in northeastern California with access to natural gas service for the first time.

The $125 million (U.S.), 20-inch pipeline will deliver up to 111 million cubic feet of natural gas per day to customers in the cities of Alturas and Susanville, California, to Reno-based Sierra Pacific Power Company and to a number of large commercial/industrial users along the route.

"The FERC order culminates a three-year planning process and we are grateful for the cooperation and work effort put forward by all the agencies involved in the review of our project," said Miller.

Tuscarora Gas Transmission Company is a Nevada-based partnership of Sierra Pacific Resources (NYSE: SRP) and TransCanada PipeLines Limited.

Sierra Pacific Resources, headquartered in Reno, is an energy holding company with operating subsidiaries engaged in energy production, transmission and distribution.

TransCanada PipeLines Limited of Calgary, Alberta is one of North America's leading transporters of natural gas. TransCanada also operates significant complementary businesses in energy marketing, gas-fueled electric power generation, gas liquids extraction and carbon black manufacturing in North America, and is extending its operations internationally.

PLAYS: Geology has role in growing activity area, CSI says New Mexico now accounts for about 30-35 percent of its business.

The three counties in Southeast New Mexico, invariably account for a lion's share of the Permian Basin rig count, even though the geology of the nearly 50 counties in Texas is not that much different.

Many say that is because it is simpler to put a drilling deal together in New Mexico, because landownership has not been fractionalized down to the third generation, and because New Mexico has forced pooling that allows up to one section for drilling projects.

Midlander ROBERT LEIBROCK has been named a distinguished graduate by the University of Texas at Austin's Engineering Foundation Advisory Council. The selection was based on outstanding professional records, public service, support of education and other significant achievements.

Leibrock and his son Robert have operated Amerind Oil Company Ltd., conducting exploratory drilling in West Texas, New Mexico and Queensland, Australia. He graduated in 1943.

DON BIZZELL has been named northern region sales manager for Energy Industries. His region encompasses the areas served by Energy Industries service centers in Midland and Perryton, Texas, Farmington, N.M., Oklahoma City, Fort Smith, Ark. and Colorado, Kansas and West Texas.

An 18-year veteran of the natural gas compression industry, Bizzell will be responsible for coordinating, directing and monitoring sales efforts for new compressor units and rental compressor packages within the outlined areas. He will be based in Dallas and comes to Energy Industries from Halliburton Compression Services.

GARY DEAN has been appointed marketing manager of Producers Assistance Corp., a provider of project staffing services to the oil and gas energy industry.

Dean is a 14-year veteran of the energy services industry, formerly working as vice president of marketing for City Pipe & Supply Corp. in Odessa.

CURA Inc., an environmental consulting and engineering firm with offices in Midland, Dallas, Atlanta and Houston, has named two new staff additions.

DAVID A. POMERANTZ has been appointed asbestos program coordinator, responsible for the design and implementation of asbestos abatement project specifications and asbestos operations and maintenance programs.

ANDREW I. COMBS has been named to the environmental engineering staff, serving as a project engineer responsible for management of general engineering services focusing on the real estate, insurance and financial industries.

KEVIN PALEY has joined Williams Energy Services Co. as a trader, facilitating natural gas trades and structuring futures, swaps and options for dealers.

Before joining Williams, Paley worked as an independent options market maker on the American Stock Exchange.

LARRY HIBBARD has been appointed vice president, marketing for Sedco Forex, part of Schlumberger Oilfield Services, and will be based in Paris. He most recently served as vice president and general manager, North and South America, for Anadrill.

Noble Affiliates Inc. announced the resignation of GUY C. SPENCE as president of its wholly owned subsidiary, Noble Gas Marketing, Inc.

Spence, who has been president of the company since its formation in January 1994, will step down from his position, effective June 30, 1995, to pursue other business interests.

ROBERT K. BURLESON, vice president of marketing, will succeed Spence as president of Noble Gas Marketing, Inc. Burleson, 38, joined the Noble Affiliates subsidiary in March 1994.

National-Oilwell has appointed GREGORY A. MATHER as vice president, operations for the distribution business unit of National-Oilwell. He will be oversee the day-to-day operations and distribution of supplies through more than 120 distribution centers worldwide.

Chesapeake Energy updates drilling activity

OKLAHOMA CITY—Chesapeake Energy Corp. released production information for the first two months of its fiscal 1995 fourth quarter and provided an update on its drilling activity in Oklahoma and Texas.

Oil and natural gas production for April and May, the first two months of Chesapeake's fiscal 1995 fourth quarter, totaled 7.7 billion cubic feet of gas equivalent (BCFE), or 85 percent higher than the 4.1 BCFE produced during the entire fourth quarter of fiscal 1994.

During April and May, the company completed seven wells in the Navasota River portion of the Giddings Field. Chesapeake now has 35 producing wells in Navasota River. Through June 9, 1995, Chesapeake's cumulative gross production from these wells exceeded 62 BCFE.

Chesapeake has five rigs dedicated to drilling approximately 20 additional Austin Chalk locations by the third quarter of fiscal 1996.

In the Independence portion of the Giddings Field, the company completed three wells during April and May. Chesapeake now has eight producing wells in Independence, three wells shut-in waiting on additional pipeline capacity, and three rigs drilling new wells.

Through June 9, 1995, Chesapeake's cumulative gross production from its Independence wells exceeded 8.1 BCFE. The company intends to keep three rigs dedicated to developing its Independence leasehold in fiscal 1996 in anticipation of a significant increase in pipeline capacity during the next six months.

In the Knox area of the Golden Trend Field in southern Oklahoma, Chesapeake completed one additional well during April and May. Chesapeake now has eight producing wells in the Knox area.

Through June 9, 1995, Chesapeake's gross production from its Knox wells exceeded 3.5 BCFE. The company has six rigs dedicated to developing its inventory of approximately 100 drillsites in Knox.

In the Sholem Alechem area of southern Oklahoma, the company has completed three horizontal Sycamore wells during the past 18 months and is currently drilling two additional horizontal wells. Through June 9, 1995, Chesapeake's gross production from its Sholem Alechem wells exceeded 1.3 BCFE.

In the Ouachita Overthrust portion of the Arkoma Basin of eastern Oklahoma, the company is drilling three vertical wells in the Jackfork Mountain area to depths of 9,000 to 15,000 feet.

In the Iola area of the Giddings Field, the company has completed eight horizontal Buda and/or Georgetown wells and has dedicated one rig to further developing this 30,000 gross acre leasehold.

Also in Texas, the company is currently drilling a 21,000' exploratory vertical well to test the Atoka and Ellenberger formations in the Haley Deep area of the Permian Basin in west Texas. Chesapeake is operating this well with a 30 percent working interest with Mobil as the major non-operating working interest partner.

MEETINGS

WTGS schedules Tuesday luncheon meet

William DeMis of Marathon Oil Co. will be the guest speaker at Tuesday's luncheon meeting of the West Texas Geological Society. The meeting will be at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

DeMis will speak on "The Effects of Cross Basinal Hydrodynamic Flow on Mississippian Carbonate Reservoirs in the Williston Basin."

Cost is $7 and reservations can be made by calling 683-1573.

Oil, gas financing topic for SIPES meeting

The Midland chapter of the Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists will meet Wednesday at the Midland Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker Richard T. McMillan will present a talk on "How to Raise Money for Oil and Gas Projects the Right Way, or Don't Believe Everything You Hear at The Spot."

McMillan received a bachelor's degree and J.D. degree from the University of Texas at Austin and has practiced oil and gas securities and general transactional law in Midland since 1971. In 1974 he was one of six attorneys who founded the Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe & Dawson law firm.

Nice, France to host geological convention

Over 1,600 are expected to attend the 1995 International Conference of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists September 10-13 in Nice, France.

The program includes 140 oral sessions and 250 poster presentations, with special invited speakers for the Opening Session and the September 11 oral sessions.

The invited speakers, who are executives of the Institut Francais du Petrole, Elf Aquitaine, Exxon, Chevron, British Petroleum and others, will be making presentations on "Hydrocarbon Research and Development in a Low-Cost-Per-Barrel World." Over 100 exhibiting companies are expected.

Ten field trips are planned, with excursions to Spain, the French Alps, Albania, Tunisia, Hungary and Greece. The conference is co-sponsored by AAPG and IFP.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Ward plugback nets Woodford gas strike

Staff Reports

A plugback operation in Ward County has yielded a Woodford Shale gas discovery, three miles northeast of Monahans.

SHELL WESTERN EXPLORATION & PRODUCTION INC. reentered the No. 83 Sealy & Smith Foundation, testing it for a calculated absolute open flow of 184 Mcfd from perforations 7,244 to 7,484 ft. The interval was fractured with 46,000 gallons of gel and 145,000 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Originally drilled to 8,390 ft., the well was plugged back to 7,595 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,387 ft.

The well topped the Devonian at 7,593 ft. and Fusselman at 8,224 ft. on ground elevation of 2,710 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and 100 ft. from west lines of Section 22, Block A, G&MMB&A survey, Abst. 76.

The well was originally completed as a producer in the Monahans (Devonian) field.

MARBOB ENERGY CORP. has completed a Siluro-Devonian discovery in Chaves County, N.M.

On potential test, the No. 10 State "CF" to flow 160 barrels of 36.9 gravity crude and 30 Mcfd from open hole interval 6,532 to 6,545 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,000 gallons of 20 percent NeFeHCL acid.

Total depth was 6,545 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,529 ft.

Location is 847 ft. from north and 1,765 ft. from west lines of Section 12, T11s, R27e.

Unidentified gas strike has CAOF of 111 Mcfd

CONOCO INC. has completed an unidentified gas discovery in Terrell County, 26 miles west-southwest of Sheffield.

The No. 1 Independence "39" was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 111 Mcfd from perforations 10,394 to 10,560 ft. The interval fractured with 205,000 lbs. sand.

Permitted as a 14,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 11,000 ft. and plugged back to 10,883 ft. with five inch casing set at 10,897 ft.

The well topped the Base Cretaceous at 816 ft. and Wolfcamp at 5,890 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 2,927 ft.

Location is 2,400 ft. from north and 600 ft. from west lines of Section 39, Block 2, CCSD&RGNG survey, Abst. 165.

Crockett field gets new Canyon pool

A new Canyon Sandstone gas pool has apparently been opened in the Block 38 field of Crockett County, 30 miles northwest of Ozona.

RK PETROLEUM CORP. tested the No. 1 University "C" for a calculated absolute open flow of 98 Mcfd from perforations 7,541 to 7,551 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,000 gallons of 7.5 percent acid and fractured with 15,436 gallons of gel and 23,744 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Drilled to 8,342 ft., the well was plugged back to 8,160 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,338 ft.,

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,513 ft., include the Andover at 3,740 ft., Dean at 5,446, Wolfcamp at 5,548, Canyon Sandstone at 7,540, Pennsylvanian Detrital at 8,150 and Ellenburger at 8,198 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and 1,320 ft. from east lines of Section 14, Block 38, ULS survey.

Martin field gets northwest extension

The Hill Ranch (Fusselman) field of Martin County has gained a northwest extension, 19.9 miles north of Stanton.

BLAIR EXPLORATION INC. completed the No. 1 Hill to flow 408 barrels of 39 gravity crude from open interval 10,836 to 10,869 ft. The interval was acidized with 250 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid.

Total depth was 10,869 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 10,836 ft.

On ground elevation of 2,636 ft., formation tops include the Yates at 2,124 ft., San Andres at 3,433, Upper Spraberry at 6,940, Lower Mississippian at 10,487, Woodford at 10,766 and Silurian at 10,817 ft.

Location is 651 ft. from south and 639 ft. from west lines of Section 64, Block A, Bauer & Cockrell survey, Abst. 340.

Exxon deals to sell West Texas oil pipeline

DALLAS- Axis Gas Corp. and The Beacon Group Energy Investment Fund, L.P. announced it has entered into an exclusive agreement to negotiate with Exxon Pipeline Co., a subsidiary of Exxon Corp., towards the purchase of EPC's Crane to Baytown, Texas crude oil system.

The agreement includes approximately 550 miles of pipeline, including an 18 inch crude oil trunk line which is currently used for crude oil transportation from West Texas to the Houston area.

The Axis Group plans to reverse the line and add an extension to El Paso, Texas, where it would connect to existing pipeline systems. The system would be capable of transporting refined products from the Gulf Coast to markets across the state of Texas, other southwestern states and Mexico.

Axis Gas Corporation is a Dallas-based energy company.

Texoil to spud exploratory well

HOUSTON—Texoil Inc. is completing location work and will spud an exploratory test well next week on the company's Buras Landing Prospect in Plaquemines Parish, La.

The well has been christened the H.E. Barrois No. 1 and will be drilled to a total depth of 11,600 feet with multiple pay objectives.

Texoil is the operator and has a 14 percent cost share in the well increasing to 31 percent upon a successful completion. Texoil expects to reach total depth in the well about 30 days after spudding.

Separately, Texoil also announced that it has reached a seismic option agreement with a mineral fee owner covering 7,200 acres in Lafourche Parish, La.

Negotiations are also underway with other owners to secure options on an additional 4,000 acres in the area. Terms of the option agreement grant Texoil the right to undertake a 3-D seismic survey in the area and to conduct exploratory drilling operations, if warranted by the results of the survey.

Texoil's proposed 3-D seismic survey will cover over 60 square miles of an area which thus far has produced in excess of 27 million barrels of oil and condensate and 175 billion cubic feet of natural gas.

PENETRATORS

This well had been producing at 1000-1200 BFPD, 98% water, when it was squeezed then reperforated and acidized. There was no change in production.

Penetrators cut 5 tunnels after the well was squeezed again, using light acid as the cutting fluid. The well returned to production with 750 BFPD and a 50% oil cut. The well has maintained this level for several months now.

If you have a similar well condition, ask how the Lance™ Penetrator System could improve your results.

Lomak completes two acquisitions

FORT WORTH—Lomak Petroleum Inc. recently completed two oil and gas property acquisitions for $6.7 million of consideration. The properties are located in Lomak's core operating areas of Texas and Oklahoma.

The company assumed operations of both properties. Including the two purchases, Lomak has completed $8 million of acquisitions in 1995 which are estimated to contain 1.8 million barrels of oil and 3.3 Bcf of gas. The acquisition cost equates to $3.44 per equivalent barrel of oil.

Lomak also announced that the initial well drilled by its recently acquired Oklahoma operating unit was successfully completed and placed on production. The Lomak operated Avery No. 3, located in Haskell County, Oklahoma was completed in the Hunton formation at a depth of approximately 6,000 feet. After testing the well at a calculated absolute open flow of 11 million cubic feet of gas per day, it was placed on production June 1st at the state approved allowable of 2,200 Mcfd. Lomak owns a 37.6 percent working interest and a 28.2 percent net revenue interest in the Avery No. 3.

In addition to the Avery No. 3, Lomak has successfully recompleted two wells in Oklahoma increasing their combined production from less than 100 Mcfd to a stabilized rate of over 1,000 Mcfd. The company owns a 100 percent working interest and, on average, a 75.5 percent net revenue interest in the two recompleted wells. The Avery No. 3 and the two recompletions have increased the company's Oklahoma production by approximately 30 percent and represent three of nearly 30 development projects Lomak is planning to initiate in Oklahoma during 1995.

Lastly, the company announced two additions to its board of directors. The new members are Mr. Anthony V. Dub, a Managing Director of CS First Boston, and Mr. Ben A. Guill, a Managing Director of Simmons & Company International.

Hadson FlexAbility. Where there's a well, there's a way.
Producing. Gathering. Processing. Marketing. Transporting. Storage. Risk Management. The fluid nature of the natural gas industry exposes you to all the elements. Making best use of your resources is paramount to managing the flow.
Since deregulation, Hadson has emerged as one of the nation's premier marketers of natural gas. Our success is based in part on our full complement of services and total quality assurance, and more importantly, our willingness to adapt our resources to meet your needs. We call that FlexAbility.

Hadson FlexAbility Gathering
Production needs vary; Hadson FlexAbility optimizes your well's production by offering both high and low pressure connections.

Hadson FlexAbility Processing & Purchasing
Our liquid extraction operations give you the opportunity to maximize your wellhead dollars. And since needs change from well to well, Hadson purchase contracts are custom fit, including fixed price, indexed based, percentage of proceeds and NYMEX based contracts.

Hadson FlexAbility Transportation
Operating over 1,000 miles of pipeline, Hadson has total FlexAbility to provide firm and interruptible transportation.

Hadson FlexAbility Storage
Hadson FlexAbility means responding to adverse swings in pricing and demand. Hadson's storage services is your physical hedge against the ebb and flow of natural gas.

Hadson Price Risk Management
Hadson Price Risk Management is the FlexAbility resource to control and mitigate price risks to meet your financial needs. The Hadson Price Risk Management team has a full array of financial tools to protect and maximize your profits.
