Man Known Here Subject of Story

"Whaling in the Antarctic is pretty good sport."

Such was the opinion voiced by Captain Allen Innes-Taylor, formerly of the British Flying Corps, prospector, explorer and soldier of fortune, a personal friend of Harold Byrd, of whom he was a guest in the Dallas Athletic club recently.

The occasion of the visit of Captain Innes-Taylor, well known in Midland from his regular visits here on scout check days, resulted in the following story in the Dacian magazine, published by the athletic club, a marked copy of which was mailed "The Reporter-Telegram."

"Captain Innes-Taylor was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, the highest award that can be bestowed by the United States, for his work in the frozen regions of the Antarctic with Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

"It was a little difficult to picture this tall, slender, quiet-mannered man, impeccably groomed, as a polar explorer or a whale fisher, yet, as he related his experiences, his eyes glowed with the enthusiasm of a man in love with adventure. Captain Innes-Taylor was, until his removal to Dallas with an oil company, and more recently to Pecos with the same company, a resident of Whitehorse, Alaska, and is a Canadian by birth. After the war he joined the Canadian Royal Mounted police, which he left later to prospect for gold.

"My work with the Byrd expedition was that of superintendent of transportation," he said when asked for a story, "I had charge of all the dogs, about eighty-five. Some of the dogs had been brought from Alaska, others from Labrador; all were fine, strong, well-trained animals.

"Yes, I have had considerable experience handling dogs, and it is interesting work. I have driven dogs in Alaska, Labrador, and in the Antarctic regions. The Alaskan sled dog is a highly intelligent animal, very faithful, a hard fighter, and grows greatly attached to his master. Experience is necessary in handling dogs, for it is hard work to take a team of dogs off on a long trip and bring them and yourself through successfully. One of the features of the Byrd expedition was the dogs, as they were vitally essential, and the combination of sled dogs and airplanes for polar work has proved to be ideal.

"Our largest single transportation achievement in the expedition was the transporting of all supplies and equipment, including planes, from the ship, which lay in the Bay of Whales, to the base twelve miles away, a total of 685 tons, and was accomplished in three weeks.

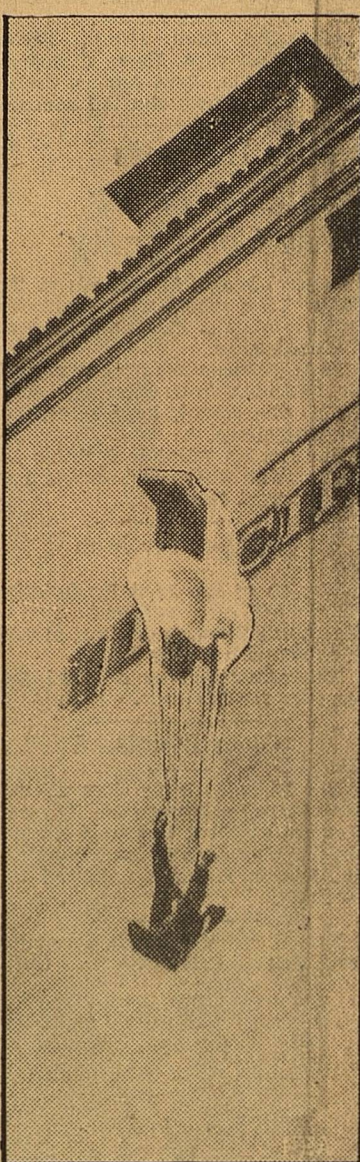

"I thoroughly enjoyed my stay in the Antarctic region. There it is barren waste, nothing but rocks and ice and snow, but it is never dreary or monotonous. One might think it a place without color, but it is filled with color.

"In the south you get the Aurora Australis, an electric display similar to the Aurora Borealis. The colors are vivid and very beautiful, particularly during the winter time. During the summer months, December, January and February, there are 24 hours of daylight a day, with the sun always shining. The colors you get then are the vivid blues and greens of the sun shining on the ice and through the icebergs, the coral waters of the Ross sea, and the wild, riotous crimson and golds and purples of the sunsets. I have never seen anywhere sunsets like those of the Antarctic. They are wild with color, strikingly beautiful.

"The Antarctic region monotonous? Never. It is a country in one moment there will be a clear sun and everything is still. The next moment a terrific wind may be blowing. You don't mind the cold; it is exhilarating. Our living arrangements were very comfortable, taking into consideration the remoteness from civilization and the fact that we had to carry everything needed for the entire time we were there. Yes, indeed, I would go again, and hope I may on the next expedition.

"One of my most interesting experiences in the Antarctic was whaling from a whale chaser, a small boat about 110 feet long, 1,000 h. p., carrying a crew of thirteen men and (See MAN KNOWN HERE page 4)

Strange Reactions As Matches Go off

A coating of phosphorus next the head of a match is known to produce queer results when a series of firecracker-like explosions volley near one's eyes just as he is about to light his cigarette.

Ray Cochran managed to distribute a few of these matches among the smoking fraternity. T. D. Tyler, proprietor of the Llano drug store, knocked off over a pile of merchandise when he started to smoke.

A. Wadley almost wrecked a counter of glassware, and Harry Tolbert and Dick Frazier did the nearest thing to climbing a counter in the coffee shop. Tom Patterson merely jumped.

Cochran goes in for novelties, and has anything from loaded cigars and cigarettes, tiny watch-charm revolvers and squirt-gun flowers to racket contrivances of all kind.

Would You Donate Tree Or Shrub to Park?

If Midland people wish to donate a tree or shrub or anything else to beautify or improve the John Haley park, which will be officially dedicated with a Washington Bicentennial birthday program Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock, they may notify the chamber of commerce, or members of the park committee, Homer Epley or T. Paul Barron, a statement said.

One tree will be ceremoniously planted Monday, and if other Midlanders wish to have trees started as their official gifts, so that, in a manner of speaking, they may be "charter" trees or shrubs or if anyone wishes to donate playground equipment so as to have it included in the dedication Monday, the chamber of commerce should be notified, an official said.

It is believed likely that the Federated Women's clubs will take over the beautification work, and these details are to be worked out later. Mrs. Haley and Mrs. Leon Goodman, who has been asked by the Federated clubs to superintend the beautification program, will determine on what part of block 104 the first work will be done.

King Refuses to Let Girls Marry

PARIS. (UP)—King Alfonso, exiled monarch of Spain, and several women have almost come to blows in the family quarrel over the King's continued refusal to authorize the marriages of his daughters, Princesses Beatrice and Christina, to their cousins, Princes Alvaro and Alfonso de Bourbon-Orleans.

Several months ago it was believed that the influence of the King's elderly aunt, Infante Eulalie, was sufficient to gain his consent to at least one of the marriages. Plans were made quietly for the Spring marriage of Infante Beatrice with Prince Alvaro.

Now the King has made it known that his attitude is unchanged and that for reasons which he refuses to state, he does not want the marriage to occur. His friends insist the King's opposition is based on medical reports which specialists have given him after treating the two Princesses for hemophilia—the dread disease of Bourbon males.

Under the direction of British specialists the Princesses have been receiving inoculations.

It is now whispered among the Spanish exiles that Beatrice, who will be 23 June 22, will defy her father and marry in spite of his ban.

In doing that she will risk being cut off without the 1,000,000 peseta dowry that was planned for each of the princesses, but since hers is a love match and not a royal marriage she is said to be considering the step.

ULTIMATUM BY JAPAN REJECTED

50,000 Chinese and 30,000 Japs Set For Battle

LONDON, Feb. 18. (UP)—The foreign office announced that the British minister in Shanghai had informed both the Chinese and Japanese that they would be held responsible for British lives and property.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 18. (UP)—The Japanese delivered an ultimatum to the Chinese tonight demanding the withdrawal of their armies from the city by Saturday.

The Chinese began preparing a reply to be delivered shortly, rejecting the demands in every detail.

The result is expected to be a final battle.

The Chinese were estimated to have 50,000 men in position. The Japanese force is thought to be between 20,000 and 30,000.

Artillery thundered throughout the night while both armies threw fresh troops into the lines.

Silent khaki-clad Japanese fully accoutered marched toward the trenches in long streams.

The ultimatum was delivered to the mayor of Shanghai and Chinese General Ting-Kai, commander of the nineteenth route army, by Japanese military and diplomatic leaders, while the artillery battle was in progress.

MOBY DICK AGAIN

A collector of rare books paid $1675 the other day in New York for a copy of an old book entitled "The Narrative of the Shipwreck of the Whale-ship Essex, of Nantucket"; and the interesting thing about it is the fact that this book was owned by Herman Melville and seems to have contained the original thread upon which Melville's great novel, "Moby Dick," was hung.

This book told how the ship Essex, about a century ago, was rammed and sunk by a huge sperm whale off the coast of Chile, and how the crew made its way to shore, 1000 miles away, in small boats.

If you've read your "Moby Dick"—and if you haven't you've missed something—you'll remember that something like that was the climax of the novel, when Moby Dick, the white whale, rammed Captain Ahab's ship and sent it to the bottom with all hands.

This business of digging back to see where an author "got his idea" is always interesting. But the striking thing about it is the way it proves that the actual skeleton of the plot is the least important thing about a book.

Old Skipper Owen Chase, who wrote this story of the shipwreck, built up a book on the yarn of a whole that sank a ship, and so did Melville—but what a difference! The one book was forgotten generations ago, but every one except Melville; the other is one of the masterpieces of American literature. With one writer the yarn was just a yarn, exciting but unimportant; with the other it became the basis for a deep, moving tale in which humanity's spiritual adventures are summed up.

One is reminded of the way Conrad wrote "Nostromo" after reading in a Central American newspaper a brief account of how a native decamped with a lighter full of bar silver. There again an insignificant little anecdote was expanded into a book of universal significance.

And that is what the creative artist is for; to see, in incidents that the rest of us would not think about twice, the chance to reveal the universe to us. The basis of his plot may be interesting, but it is unimportant. It is what he does with it that counts.

SMALL BONDS NEEDED

One of the most interesting suggestions made in connection with the anti-hoarding campaign is the proposal that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation offer a good block of its $1,500,000,000 debentures in denominations small enough to attract the general public.

It is foolish to assail the practice of hoarding cash without realizing that it reflects a very widespread and deeply-rooted public distrust of many of the available mediums of investment. The best way to pull hoarded money back into circulation is to offer an investment about whose perfect safety there can be no possible argument.

Small-size bonds issued by the Corporation would provide such an investment; and it is easy to believe that, if they were made available, a perfect flood of hoarded money would come out to take advantage of the situation.

PROSPERING INDUSTRY

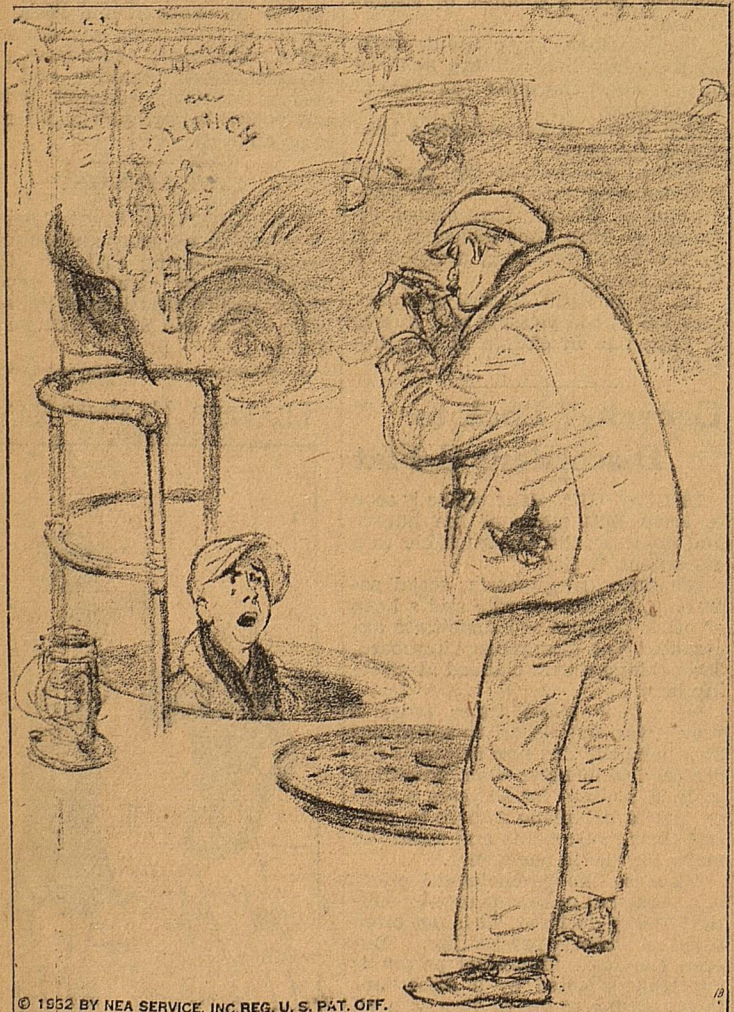

A survey of the airplane industry in 1931 indicates that it withstood hard times about as well as any industry in the nation, despite the fact that only $49,000,000 worth of airplanes were built as compared with planes worth twice that much in 1929.

To begin with, all the ships that were built last year were sold—which was decidedly not the case in 1929. Production was off, but it was accurately geared to consumption, which is the important thing. Furthermore, the excess stocks built up in 1929 were largely disposed of.

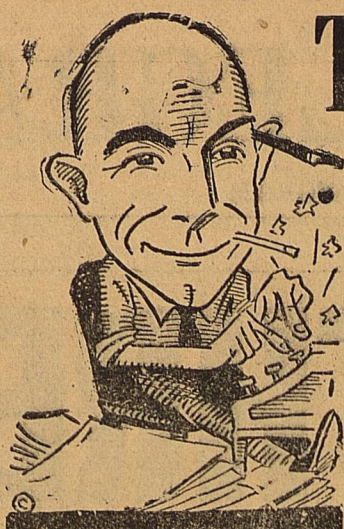

In addition, the air transport business showed striking gains. More planes were in operation last year, more miles were flown and more passengers were carried than ever before.

Aviation, evidently, has become a firmly-established business. Its position now is far stronger than it was before the depression began.

"Honestly," said Ellen in an awed voice, "I've never seen so many people before. Never!"

"You mean so many that you wouldn't like to know," Larry amplified thoughtfully.

"Shob," she accused him.

"Certainly," he agreed. "So are you. Confess it—don't you think we're the nicest people at Coney Island this afternoon?"

"Certainly we are," she agreed demurely, delightfully conscious of his hand on her bare arm, delightfully conscious of his nearness when the crowd pressed them together.

"Still want to swim with all of New York for company?"

"I still do."

They reached the bath house. Larry moaned when he perceived the long queue of sweltering men and women lined up for suits.

"My God," he said plaintively. Then he demanded, "Can't we do something about this? Buy somebody's place or something? There's a man, near front too, looks as if he'd be glad enough to sell."

MIDKIFF AND PINNELL CHOSEN TO PILOT THE THINLY CLADS OF THE HIGH SCHOOL; TRIANGULAR MEET SEEN

At a meeting of the Midland high school track squad Tuesday afternoon, Frank (Fanchio) Midkiff and Whitten (Ham) Pinnell were elected co-captains of the 1932 track team. When asked how the election suited him, Coach Barry said: "While I was careful not to cast my influence in their favor, these were the two boys I had in mind as most worthy and capable of the job when I called the meeting and suggested the election of two captains."

Good Elevators At Caverns Now

CARLSBAD, N. M. (UP)—The second longest elevator in the world is now in service carrying weary sightseers from the bottom of the Carlsbad Cavern to the surface, 754 feet above. Only the Empire State building in New York has an elevator with a longer lift.
Although 12 tons of powder were used in blasting the shaft, 8 by 16 feet, cavern ceiling formations were not disturbed. Six crews worked from both ends during the period of construction, from Dec. 29, 1930, to Dec. 28, 1931. The work cost $91,000.
The shaft accommodates two elevators and is lined with concrete to prevent falling rock. At each 10-foot level steel beams were placed across the shaft. The elevator cages are of the type used in office buildings, have a capacity of 12 persons each and a speed of 700 feet per minute.
Once in motion the elevators will stop at the top or bottom automatically. Telephone communication may be had from the cage to the surface at all levels.
Use of the elevator is optional and a charge of 50 cents is made by this National Park service. Able and young visitors are encouraged to use the old entrance.

DR. RYAN RETURNS
Dr. W. E. Ryan, surgeon and hospital owner, returned to Midland Wednesday evening from Dallas, where his infant son is recovering from illness.
The condition of the child will warrant his being brought home within a few days, the surgeon said. Mrs. Ryan remained in Dallas.

The exact length of a year is 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, 45.51 seconds.
"Will you go dancing in town," he went on. "That'll be more fun and way. This place was beginning to get tiresome."
Ellen could not understand him at all. Just a moment before he had been eager to stay.

As Larry predicted, Salomon was willing enough to accept Ellen's confused excuses, willing enough to permit her an evening away from the dance hall when he was able to profit as much by her absence as by her presence. But Ellen found herself uncomfortable over the arrangement. She knew the other girls thought it odd. Anise in particular turned to Tony to make what Ellen was sure was a spiteful remark.
She forgot all that as she and Larry danced the night away on the roof of a small, smart hotel. She forgot everything except that she was dancing with Larry and that Larry—liked her. In a thousand ways girls understand so well, he had told her so.
What Ellen drove home through the night when the stars had begun to fade and the east was beginning to lighten and that still, cool hush just before dawn enveloped the city.
When they arrived in Brooklyn the sun was beginning to break over the house tops. They paused to look at the brightening east and to breathe the delicious coolness before they crept into the quiet house and slowly up the stairs.
Larry hesitated at the door a long time, as unwilling to go as Ellen was to have him. It had been such a perfect evening they told each other again and again. In hushed, surreptitious voices they whispered of what they had seen and done; whispered of future meetings. What fun they would have.

Gradually there crept into the air a tenseness that made their very gaiety inappropriate.
Larry's sentence trailed into a brooding silence. He was holding Ellen's hands in his own. One of them loosened and then the other. With a feeling of pure ecstasy and a painfully beating heart she felt his hands at her shoulders. She was trembling and her eager lips were parted.
She was almost in his arms when he muttered huskily that it was time for little girls to be in bed and, without a backward look, ran down the stairway.

Started Making Skis With Simple Kettle

NEW RICHMOND, Wis. (UP)—Martin A. Strand, owner of the world's largest ski factory here, began business from a tea kettle.

Wary from job hunting in Minneapolis in 1896, Strand stopped to watch some boys sliding down hill on skis made of barrel staves. Then he recalled the difficulty he had experienced previously in trying to buy a pair of regulation skis.
Going home he sawed out some lumber and bent the ends over his wife's steaming tea-kettle. He sold them to the sporting goods department of a Minneapolis store.
His future business was begun. Strand recently shipped several pairs of jumping and racing skis to Lake Placid, N. Y., for the Olympic games.

Lavish Sets Lend Glamor at the Ritz

A Russian village, complete in every detail, the ornate palace of a Czarist baron, a lavish and dazzling Moscow cafe, these are but a few of the large and costly sets which were built at the Beverly Hills studios of the Fox Film corporation for Raoul Walsh's dramatic photoplay production, "The Yellow Ticket," which is at the Ritz theatre with Elissa Landi, Lionel Barrymore and Laurence Olivier in the principal roles.
The cafe presents one of the most brilliant scenes ever brought to the screen, blending the colorful uniforms of the Russian army officers and the police with the civilian costumes of handsome men and beautiful women into a fascinating background for some of the most virile action of the picture.
To add to the atmosphere of the village sequence hundreds of extras, men, women and children were employed, not to mention the many horses, geese, dogs, cows and other domestic animals.
Expense was not spared, either, in completing the palace setting, period furniture, almost priceless rugs and antiques being included in the furnishings.
"The Yellow Ticket" is a dramatic story of Imperialistic Russia and details the adventures of a beautiful Russian girl, played by Elissa Landi, who, by circumstances, is forced to pose as a scandalous woman in order to accomplish an errand of mercy that involves her father.
She is persistently persecuted by the head of the secret police, a role portrayed by Lionel Barrymore, and is eventually saved from a shameful fate by a handsome young newspaperman from the United States, a role enacted by Laurence Olivier, talented young actor from the speaking stage.
The featured players are supported by a cast that includes Sarah Padden, Walter Byron, Arnold Korff, Mischa Auer, Boris Karloff, Edward Maxwell and Alex Mellesh.
It is the picturization of the famous stage play by Michael Morton of the same name and was adapted for the screen by Jules Furthman who also wrote the dialog in collaboration with Guy Bolton.

The boat was called the Kosmos, a 23,000 ton ship, and cost a little over $2,000,000 to build. She had with her seven whale chasers. "These whale chasers work through the ice floes along the ice pack which crosses the Ross sea between King Edward's land and Murdo sound. The whales are very plentiful there, and of enormous size. The largest we killed was 110 feet long and weighed about one ton to the foot. One day we killed seven whales in twelve hours, which was our record catch.
"The catch is taken back to the factory ship, a complete oil refinery on board a ship. The whales are cut up on the meat deck and rendered into oil which is refined and put into tanks. An 85-foot whale will average about 70 to 90 barrels of oil. The oil is valued at $130 a ton and runs about six barrels to the ton, approximately $21 per barrel. The total catch of five months' fishing was 134,000 barrels of oil, $2,000,000 clear for five months' work. The first season's catch paid for the cost of building the ship and cost of operation.
"Most of the whale oil goes into the manufacture of oleomargarine, and is sold in European countries. Some quantities of the oil come to the United States and is used in the manufacture of silk. The whaling industry is practically controlled in Norway.
"Yes, whaling in the Antarctic is pretty good sport, I think. Captain Innes-Taylor absent-mindedly played with a spear-shaped letter-opener. He was looking dreamily out of the open window to the south where big cumulus clouds were piled, like icebergs against a cobalt sky. $18.70 Per Capita Cost of Government

AUSTIN, (UP)—Financial statistics of the cost of Texas state government for the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1930, forwarded here by the U. S. census bureau put the total at $108,776,396. This is $18.70 per capita.
Operation and maintenance of the departments, exclusive of outlay for permanent improvements and interest, totaled $70,505,710, or $12.12 for each man, woman and child in the state.
This was an increase over the flat $12 per capita of the preceding year. It was nearly three times that of the $4.59 per capita cost of state government in Texas in 1917.
Income was greater than the outlay. Total revenue was $111,408,561, or a per capita of $19.16. The difference went into purchase of securities.
The total debt of the state on Aug. 31, 1930, was $4,372,267 per capita.

Bullfight Without Horses to Be Held

PANAMA, (UP)—Sidney Franklin, the Brooklyn bullfighter, will appear in the Panama bull ring at an early date, according to announcement here.

But when the American matador shows his wares there will be no horses used, his advance representatives have declared.
This is due, they say, to the fact that many American Canal Zone women desire to see the fights, but cannot stand the sight of seeing the picadores' horses goled.
Panama bulls will be used. Franklin recently has been fighting at Bogota, Colombia.

Prosperity Key In Suggestion

TEMPLE, Tex. Feb. 18. (UP)—Exemption from taxes of new construction begun now has been proposed by D. B. Boyd, business man here, to create jobs and stimulate prosperity.

Levying new taxes on any construction project in effect penalizes the man who wants to help develop his community, and offers an incentive for hiding money away in government bonds, Boyd declared. He is willing to back his prosperity plan with $25,000 worth of work in Temple.
Boyd's plan patters many state laws which grant complete tax exemption for five to 10 years on new industries.

"These whale chasers work through the ice floes along the ice pack which crosses the Ross sea between King Edward's land and Murdo sound. The whales are very plentiful there, and of enormous size. The largest we killed was 110 feet long and weighed about one ton to the foot. One day we killed seven whales in twelve hours, which was our record catch.
"The catch is taken back to the factory ship, a complete oil refinery on board a ship. The whales are cut up on the meat deck and rendered into oil which is refined and put into tanks. An 85-foot whale will average about 70 to 90 barrels of oil. The oil is valued at $130 a ton and runs about six barrels to the ton, approximately $21 per barrel. The total catch of five months' fishing was 134,000 barrels of oil, $2,000,000 clear for five months' work. The first season's catch paid for the cost of building the ship and cost of operation.
"Most of the whale oil goes into the manufacture of oleomargarine, and is sold in European countries. Some quantities of the oil come to the United States and is used in the manufacture of silk. The whaling industry is practically controlled in Norway.
"Yes, whaling in the Antarctic is pretty good sport, I think. Captain Innes-Taylor absent-mindedly played with a spear-shaped letter-opener. He was looking dreamily out of the open window to the south where big cumulus clouds were piled, like icebergs against a cobalt sky. Somewhere down there at the bottom of the world were icebergs, blue water—adventure."

Prosperity Key In Suggestion

TEMPLE, Tex. Feb. 18. (UP)—Exemption from taxes of new construction begun now has been proposed by D. B. Boyd, business man here, to create jobs and stimulate prosperity.

Levying new taxes on any construction project in effect penalizes the man who wants to help develop his community, and offers an incentive for hiding money away in government bonds, Boyd declared. He is willing to back his prosperity plan with $25,000 worth of work in Temple.
Boyd's plan patters many state laws which grant complete tax exemption for five to 10 years on new industries.

DRIVER NOT HURT

A Viking automobile overturned a mile east of Midland Wednesday afternoon. The owner, whose name was not given, was understood to have escaped injury.

A LESSON LEARNED

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Joseph Weiman won't be so careless in playing with fire after this. Weiman, restaurant owner, turned on a gas stove in his place of business. Not finding a match about, he went in search of one. When he returned, he struck a match and—BOOM! He had left the gas on during the time he was match hunting.
