Democratic-Republican Primaries Set for Saturday

Council Session Lasts 4½ Hours

The City Council met in regular session Monday night. They discussed a city judge, waterlines at Cove Harbor, annexed a new development, granted a request for a couple of street lights, appointed a park board and set the terms of its members, and approved purchase of two lots in the Denver Heights addition.

Three men applied for city judge, including incumbent, G. D. Johnson, who is also Justice of the Peace in Precinct No. 1, E. B. Crawford, Sr., who was recently defeated in his try for City Councilman from Precinct 2, and who is now Justice of the Peace in that precinct, and Lawrence Miller, local realtor.

After some discussion, Johnson was reappointed to the place, with Councilman Charlie Garrett voting against, while the other three on the council were for the appointment.

A park board ordinance was approved, and the following members, many of whom have been serving on the board, were appointed:

James Little, James Adams, Mrs. Byron Bushart, Mrs. W. A. Ormand, Paul Clark Sorenson, Charles Roe, Jr., and Thomas Rogers, Little, Adams and Rogers were appointed for two years; the other four were appointed for one year. Roe was appointed chairman.

The council approved purchase of two lots in Denver Heights.

The council approved annexation of a new subdivision being developed by George K. Taggart of Corpus Christi, near the high school; also installation of two street lights on Magnolia street intersections in the 800 and 900 blocks, after presentation of a petition by C. W. Lenhart.

Councilmen also discussed with John Chupe possibilities of furnishing water at the baseball field, and with James Little, a method whereby water could be furnished drilling barges at his dock in the Cove.

SAN ANTONIO MAN KILLED FRIDAY IN HIGHWAY 881 WRECK

Funeral services for a San Antonio advertising executive who was killed in a Highway 881 wreck near Sinton Friday were held in San Antonio.

Bill Newcomb Yancy, 37, was found beneath the wreckage of his car, a 1963 convertible, at 6 p.m. Saturday by H. D. Perkins of Sinton. Yancy's watch had stopped at 12:05 a.m., and police believed that was when the wreck occurred.

Ed Harper, of Key Allegro, said Yancy had been there earlier in the evening and was not supposed to have left for San Antonio until the following morning. Apparently, however, he decided to leave when he completed his business.

Harry Mills, highway patrolman who investigated, said Yancy had apparently been traveling at a high rate of speed and fell asleep at the wheel. The convertible overturned four times and landed on Yancy, who had been thrown out. A seat belt in the car had not been fastened.

Yancy was co-owner of Yancy-McGee Advertising Co. in San Antonio, which numbered Key Allegro Island Estates among its clients. He had been employed by WOAI-TV before starting the advertising agency.

ARANSAS COUNTY DEFEATS GOLIAD

Mike Jeffers allowed only five hits as ACHS of Rockport defeated Goliad 6-3 in a District 18AA baseball game here Friday.

Andy Everett collected two singles and scored a run while Ray Brown was driving in a single run with a triple to lead the Pirates.

Cancer Education To Be Instituted In Local Schools

In cooperation with the American Cancer Society and as a regular part of the course of study in local schools an organized cancer program will be started in the 1964-65 school year.

As a part of the science-health classes all sixth grade classes in Fulton and Rockport will use the film strip "I'll Choose the High Road" which has the aim of alerting younger students to the dangers of cigarette smoking. Along with this a pamphlet of the same title will be distributed to each student.

In junior high school a similar but more advance film, entitled "To Smoke or Not to Smoke" will be shown. This film is designed for use in educating teenagers and particularly students in junior high school.

The growing seriousness of lung cancer is graphically presented; research studies showing the relationship between smoking and cancer are explained and the effect of the lung are shown.

The film also points out the importance of early detection in lung cancer, and emphasizes the best prevention is not to smoke.

In high school, physical education classes will see "Is Smoking Worth It." This discusses the adult side of smoking.

Even the faculty will see a film entitled "Life Story." This film encourages regular medical examinations for cancer as the best protection.

Art Show to Be At New Offices Of Security, Inc.

Mrs. James A. Jarboe, vice president of the Chamber of Commerce and Public Relations Director for Aransas Natural Gas Co., is also chairman in charge of the art show to be held in connection with the Sea-o-rama on June 19-21.

This year, however, the show will have a new setting, as the exhibits will be set up at the new offices of Security, Inc., which Emory M. Spencer, local oil and real estate owner, has under construction at this time.

The building presents some unusual features which make it ideal for such a show, according to Ed Harper, chairman of the arrangements committee.

"The huge expanse of roof, extending far beyond the building itself, will furnish a splendid setting under which the painotings can be hung," Harper said. The roof protrudes far past the building walls, furnishing covered parking for many customer's cars once the business gets underway.

This year's show, said Mrs. Jarboe, will be confined strictly to art.

Beauty Contest Rules Given

For the second straight year, the winner of the Miss Sea-o-rama Beauty Contest, to be held Saturday, June 20, will go on to compete in the Miss Texas Beauty Pageant, and, if she wins there, will go on to Long Beach, Calif., as one of the contestants in the International Beauty Congress.

With these things in mind, and with a larger purse to draw against this year, there will be some changes made, according to Mrs. Sandra Petrilli, chairman of the event.

There will be a reception honoring and welcominf all beauty contestants, to be held in the Sea Gun Sports Inn on Friday night, June 19, and the Sea-o-rama will provide a place for all out-of-town contestants to spend the night.

The contest will be held Saturday afternoon, at the east side of the new work done in Little Bay, which Governor Connally has been asked to dedicate, and earnest effforts are being made to persuade him to be the person who crowns Miss Sea-o-rama at 10 a.m., the second will be at 2 p.m.

Admission is 25 cents; popcorn is a dime; candy is 5 cents. The film, designed for young people, lasts an hour and a half.

Special Classes Scheduled For Non-English Students

Special classes have been approved by the Texas Education Agency to prepare non-English speaking children for entry into the first grade for next year. These classes will be held at the Rockport Elementary School, beginning on June 8, through July 31. Classes will begin at 8:30 and end at 11:30 each day. Registration for these classes will be held on May 6 at both the Rockport and Fulton Elementarytary school than those who do not. In state wide studies it has been found that at the end of the first grade 7 per cent of the students taking the summer course fail, while 40 per cent of students attending classes during the past three years shows that a much greater percent of the non-English speaking children are completing the first grade in one year than before the program was instituted.

Recently attending an area meeting for teachers who will teach the course this summer were Cepha Jesse, Bertha Gilley, and T. E. Dannelly, Director of Instruction. At this meeting new State bulletins were distributed and teaching methods and materials discussed.

SHERIFF'S OFFICE MAKES TILL TAPPER ARRESTS QUICKLY

Quick work on the part of the Sheriff's department last Thursday resulted in the arrest of three till tappers from Houston within less than 45 minutes after they were accused of taking $15 from the cash register at Wyatt's Drive In and $45 from that at Dutch's Drive In.

Wyatt's Drive In called the sheriff's department at 4:05 p.m. with the first complaint, and this was followed almost immediately by another complaint from Dutch's Drive In. Both complained that three negroes in a large white car had been in their stores and alleged that while one of the men attracted the attention of the store keeper, the others had abstracted cash from the till.

Sheriff Virginia Shivers called the Aransas Pass police department, asking them to intercept anyone answering to this description and also contacted Deputy Joe de la Garza.

Within 20 minutes, the Aransas Pass police called back and said they and officers of the State Highway Patrol had arrested the men. In the meantime, de la Garza had picked up Wyatt and Mrs. Leet and he left immediately for Aransas Pass, where the two store owners identified

Cancer Crusade Collections Record

Cancer Crusade collections here were the highest ever recorded from this county, according to Mrs. A. L. Bachman, who received a telegram from Attorney General Waggoner Carr congratulating her on the fact.

Mrs. Bachman said:

"I want to take this opportunity to thank all the wonderful Crusaders who worked on the Cancer Drive in Aransas County this past month.

"This has been my most successful drive, and, of course, the Crusaders who gave of their time, and the people who gave so generously of their money, are responsible.

"Much credit is due to all the school officials. Without their full cooperation and that of all the civic clubs, we could not have collected the all time high of over $1,700.-00. There are a few who ordinarily give that have not sent in their checks. If these checks would come in, we could easily make the total $1,800.00.

"The slogan this year for the drive is "Tell It to Your Neighbor", and everyone should keep in mind the seven danger signals of cancer and tell them to your neighbor.

"Again many thanks.

"Your County Crusade Chairman,

Mrs. A. L. Bachman"

Crews operating out of National Geophysical Combranch office in Rockport had Corpus Christi all shook up this week as they starting blasting in Corpus Christi Bay off Cole Park.

Blasts set off throughout Tuesday afternoon caused tremors of several sorts at City Hall and vibrations in homes south of Lousiana Parkway. Corpus Christi Attorney I. M. Singer warned the crews that they were operating illegally, as they had no permit from the city fire marshall for transporting explosives within city limits.

Company spokesmen assured him this would be done immediately, he said.

The blasts, of about the intensity of those of a 40 mm cannon, were set off at widly-spaced intervals from two seismograph boats about 500 to 800 yards offshore from Cole Park and brought immediate protests from residents in the area, who complained that the foundations of their homes shook. Caranchua Indians Had Many Names

The Carancahua or Karankawa Indians have acquired almost as many names as there were Indians in the tribe. Others were spelled Koienkahe, Korenkake, Clamcoet, Quelanhubeches, Caranchahauzes, Coronks, Kronks. Besides these, there are at least 24 names used by various French, Spanish and English explorers.

They composed a group of linquistically related tribes that lived on the coastal islands and along the mainland opposite. The Carancahua and related tribes represented the most primitive level of native culture among Texas Indians.

They were nomads, with a loose and mobile tribal life. They were cannibals, but it is generally supposed that their cannibalism was recently acquired and even learned from the Spaniards. By the 18th century it was a means of dealing with prisoners of war and was accompanied by an elaborate ritual.

A mission was established at the present site of Goliad, partially for the Carancahuas, and in a further effort to congregate these Indians, the college of Nuestra Senora de Guadalupe de Zacatecas built still a second mission, Nuestra Senora del Rosario a little farther up the San Antonio River in 1754.

In the early 19th century the Carancahuas fought Jean Lafitte and his men on Galveston Island. They were defeated in encounters with the Austin colonists in the 1820's and 1830's, but supported the Texans at the time of the Texas Revolution. By 1844, most of the remnants of the tribe had fled to Mexico, and mingled with other tribes.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Jones of Houma, La., left Wednesday, after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. James A. Jones and family. Little Misses Lisa and Rhonda Jones went home with their grandparents for a visit. They were also here to welcome a new grandson.

Largest dinosaur known from fossil remains was a 130,000-pound brachiasaurus whose leg bone was recently found in Colorado.

Kenedy Is City Where They Shot Black Diamond

One of this city's claims to fame is that it was in Kenedy the man-killing elephant, Black Diamond was shot, although in recent years citizens prefer to point with pride to a highly diversified economy springing from cattle, oil, cotton, flax and a hot mineral spring.

The city had its beginnings in the 1880's, when Uriah Lott, South Texas railroad builder was laying rails for the old San Antonio and Aransas Pass Railroad, better known as "The SAP."

He was backed by Mifflin Kenedy, fabulous rancher, and when the new road reached a point a mile south of present-day Karnes City it was decided to lay out a town site to be named after the South Texas cattlemen and financier, and this was the first of two locations for the city. An old box car, lifted off it's wheels and set down alongside the tracks was called "Kenedy Station," but before the railroad could obtain clear title from the owner he was killed and Lott looked elsewhere for a site, fearing that he could not obtain clear title to the first.

Ranchers in the area, friends of Captain Kenedy, persuaded him to locate it on the banks of Escondido Creek five miles south of where the town was first projected, on 677 acres of land acquired from George W. Little.

First known as Kenedy Junction, because two railroads met at that point, the name later became Kenedy by elision, and thousands of cattle were shipped from this point, where saloons and gambling and dance halls were almost as plentiful as the longhorns. Today, these are gone, but cattle still form the basis of a lot of Kenedy money.

The elephant episode occurred in the early part of this century, when the Al G. Barnes was still touring the country, and was unloading for a stand at Corsicana. Barnes, in his version of the tragedy, says that Curley Pritchett, a former trainer, stood on the street talking to Mrs. Eva Donahoe, on whose ranch he was then employed. As the elephants passed, with Black Diamond chained between two others, Pritchett called to him.

"As he did so, Diamond rushed forward and caught him in the back with his tusks and tossed him over the parked automobile, where he landed on his hands, sustaining a broken wrist in the fall. Diamond started after him, trying to drag Babe and Ruth, the two female police elephants to whom he was hitched."

The elephant's attention then turned to Mrs. Donahoe, and in spite of all everyone could do, he struck her, either with his tusks or the iron bar that held them. Despite efforts by Pritchett, W. M. Cannon (a bystander) and others, including his new trainer, Jack Grady, the maddened elephant continued lashing about, bellowing and trying to get away from the two females who, with mighty butts of their heads, were trying to subdue him.

In the melee he was able to reach Mrs. Donahoe twice more, slamming her against the ground before she could be extricated and rushed to a hospital where she died. Barnes ordered the elephant shot, and in Kenedy, where the show moved shortly after its Corsicana stand, the sentence was carried out.

A bystander later reported that the circus men led all the elephants to a mesquite pasture near the circus lot, and that the moment they started to chain Black Diamond to some oak trees he apparently realized something terrible was going to happen. He trembled and whined and moaned, kneeling down, and there, on his knees, they shot him. His mounted head later found it way to Houston, where for some years it was in the Hermann Park clubhouse.

In these days, however, citizens of Kenedy depend for their excitement on TV instead of circuses, and flax and cotton supplement the income from cattle. The area once led the state in cotton production, with some 64,000 bales ginned in 1930. Although production of this crop has declined since then, the city has one of the few inland cotton compresses in this section of the state. More generally these are located at key rail and port shipping points.

In 1963 there were approximately 50,000 acres planted in flax, or only about half the amount planted in 1961, and in a fair year, as much as 80,000 bushels or more of this grain may be shipped through the port of Corpus Christi from the Kenedy area. Much of it goes to Belgium and the Netherlands, and some times it is shipped overseas and stored until it is sold.

Oil is also vital to Kenedy business, even though there are no oil fields in Karnes County, in which Kenedy lies, and since oil was first discovered in the county in 1930 many oil field supply houses have located in the city. Annual production is around 1,900,000 barrels for the county.

Bank deposits rose from $5,852,545 in 1960 to $6,062,348 on Jan. 1, 1963, while new homes are being built constantly. Three residential additions are new being developed. Electrical connections have risen from 1484 in 1960 to over 1500 at present; during the same period, gas connections increased from 1100 to more than 1200.

A sizable federal low-rent housing facility, a modern high school and a 26-unit motel built early this year are among up-to-date developments, and plans are being discussed for utilization of a hot spring located when the railroad was drilling for water in the World War I era. At that time a hotel and individual brick cabins were built for those who wanted to take advantage of the hot water, loaded with all sorts of minerals. The resort prospered until about 1950 then fell into desuetude, even though analysis proved that the water was richer in minerals and better adapted to curing certain ills than many of the world's famous spas. Now some citizens are talking of reviving the resort.

OREGON MAKES ANOTHER CRUISE IN TEXAS WATERS

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Exploratory vessel, Oregon has been engaged for the past 18 days in exploring the Western and Southwestern Gulf of Mexico.

According to Harvey R. Bullis, Jr., Base director of the Gulf and Atlantic Fisheries Exploration, the principal objectives of the cruise were to make a preliminary, systematic survey of the previously unknown fauna of waters from Brownsville to Latitude 23° N.; to obtain motion pictures of the fish and shrimp in the 200-225 fathom range; to spot check the seasonal abundance of Royal Red Shrimp resources off the Mississippi Delta and Brownsville; and to continue off-season investigation of the menhaden occurences along the Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas coasts.

Twenty-four deep water faunal transects were made at 100 fathom intervals from 100 fathoms along the Continental Slope off Mexico, Bullis said. Large catches of deep water red snapper (Pritipomoides andersoni) dominated the catches from 100 fathoms. Hake and a member of the codfish family were dominant in the 200-300 fathom range, he said, while grenadiers were prevalent in water deeper than that.

Because of the unexplored nature of offshore waters south of Brownsville, Bullis said, all specimens collected in this area constituted new distribution records. Four 400-foot rolls of 16 mm film, two in color and two in black and white, were exposed in the royal red shrimp habitat.

Only light catches of royal reds were made off Brownsville; the best catches, 340 pounds of heads on shrimp from three 3-hour drags in 220-225 fathoms, were made off the Mississippi Delta, Bullis stated.

While on the trip, the Oregon made 12 gill net sets, six on the bottom in depths from seven to 20 fathoms, and six on the surface. Thirty large-scale menhaden were caught in the surface sets, and 23 in the bottom sets.

Personnel from the Beaufort Biological Laboratory along on the cruise also made 25 plankton tows to supplement current studies on Gulf menhaden. In addition, 18 readings were made with the bathythermograph in connection with the deep water transects off the Mexican coast. A series of mud samples was also collected from royal red shrimp depths for evaluations of viscosity, adhesiveness, and friction by the gear research unit from Panama City, Fla.

Six tumblers dredge stations were also made in depths of from two to 70 fathoms, to collect live molluscs for Dr. Paul Zagl, of the National Geographical Society.

Swedish Visitor Likes Rockport's Bird Residents

"I have a feeling the cranes are about to start north," said Major Sven Wahlberg, of the Royal Roden Artillery Regiment, of the Swedish Army, here visiting Mrs. Doris McGuire and other friends.

"I know cranes in Europe," he said, "and all of them act pretty much alike. The whoopers were restless today; they didn't stay on their feeding grounds too well, but were moving around and one pair made an extended flight while we watched. I believe that some of them will be gone in a week or so."

Wahlberg, who is chief of staff of the Roden-Jokmokk Military District, Swedish Staff College, is also a naturalist of more than ordinary distinction. He is chairman of the Morbotten Society for nature conservation, and a member of the Board of Swedish Nature Conservancy for Morbotten, the large, far-north portion of Sweden at the head of the Gulf of Bothnia.

He is author of a large number of articles on nature and birds that have appeared in Swedish papers and journals; and has also published a number of articles on birds in English in various British journals.

He has been in this country for several weeks, and during that time he has swung from New England through central United States, then to the West Coast, and back again through the Big Bend and the Lower Rio Grande Valley to Rockport.

During his journey he has been impressed with two things: the friendliness of people in this country and the pridgality with which we have wasted our natural resources. And he deplored the fact that in our urban developments too little room was left for people to live.

At home, he said, parks are one of the prize considerations and are generally provided before development starts. But in this country, Major Wahlberg pointed out, subdivisions and additions frequently ignored them entirely, being placed helter skelter, without planning.

A wonder that impressed him was the great Muir Woods of California, and the land that he has seen since arriving, he likes New England and Texas best.

Characterizing his trip to see the whoopers as an experience that he would always remember, the Major said that a trick of the lighting had made it especially memorable.

"There was a great flock of long billed curlews in the air," he said, "when the wind changed and a black cloud came. The light turned those curlew to gold before a background of black, and it was beautiful."

Since coming to America, Major Wahlberg has seen 316 species of birds with most of which he was not previously familiar, and he termed it a great experience. His favorite of them all, because of its grace and beauty, is Texas' own scissor tail flycatcher, although he feels that the roadrunner would be worth knowing, if it wasn't such an elusive bird. "You see him," said the major, "and then, pf-f-f-t and he's gone. Like that."

During his tour of this country, Major Wahlberg has lectured before Audubon Society members, at universities, and informally. On thing he thought especially noteworthy was the greater interest of women in this country in nature and conservation societies. In Europe, he said, members of such societies are mostly men.

He will remain in the United States for another week or 10 days before returning to his home in Sweden, near the Arctic Circle.

The False Live Ook Point Treasure

Lafitte, not to be outdone by the Spaniards and their fort at Aranzazu, on Live Oak Point, maintained his own fort on St. Joseph's Island, about where the Sid Richardson boat docks are now. As late as 1836, John Crittenden Duval, early Texas historian said "on the island the embankments around his old camping grounds or fortifications were still visible, and along the beach were many posts yet standing with iron rings affixed to them, which had undoubtedly been used to secure the small boats that plied between the vessels and the shore."

And the tale was told by Will Bickford, a local resident that "Grandma" Frank, who lived and died at False Live Oak Point, claimed to have been a witness of the final business meeting of the pirates, of whom her husband was one.

Chased by naval vessels, Lafitte ran the bar at Pass Cavallo in the midst of a terrific storm. When it was safe to do so, he and his other vessels assembled at False Live Oak Point, now on the Aransas Wildlife Refuge. He told the men that he was going to Campeche and that the profits of their long association would be equally divided. Lafitte, as captain, received a far larger share than any other individual and decided to cache most of it on False Live Oak Point. His Share was so great that it took three nights to bury it all. During the progress of the work, Lafitte came to Mrs. Frank's house and took refreshments.

She watched the men go into the woods with the chests and boxes, and once Lafitte exclaimed "There is enough treasure in those woods to ransam a nation." When the last trip was made into the woods, Mrs. Frank said that no one returned but Lafitte, who she never saw again. So, if her tale was true, somewhere on Aransas Wildlife Refuge, around False Live Oak Point, there is a vast treasure of gold and jewels that some lucky man may find.

LOCAL RADIO HAM MAKES CORRECTIONS

Joe Wright, who furnished most of the material appearing in last week's Pilot on radio hams, makes the following corrections, "just to set the record straight."

'W5AQN is not coordinator of the South Texas Navy Mars Code Net. This should have read 'is assistant Net Control for South Texas Navy Mars Code Net.' Navy Mars call sign is NTRG.

"J. P. Hanway's call should have been W5MWN. Anthony Del Rocco's call should have been WN5GQP. Other hams in this area include Louis Peine, W5AE, and Bob Prince, WA5HIW.

"K5IXH is net control station for the S.T.E.N. single sideband phone section, and is Assistant Emergency Communication Chief for the South Texas Navy Mars Code Net. His Navy Mars Call Sign is NTTB.

"W5AQN is also a member of AREC (Amateur Radio Emergency Corps) which is the emergency division of ARPSC (Amateur Radio Public Service Corps.)"

Mrs. R. Y. Ayers, III and son, Bob, left last week for Port Sulphur, La., to join her husband who is working down there.

ELECT A
Qualified
Man as Your Sheriff

I am deeply honored by the class of people that is supporting my candidacy for the office of Aransas County Sheriff.

It is with great sincerity and humbleness that I take this opportunity to express my heartfelt appreciation for the wonderful encouragement, compliments and best wishes received by me during my campaign.

On another note, I have been asked about my poll watchers. Let me say that I have too much faith in our democracy to show distrust in it. There will be no poll watchers appointed by Joe Earl Hunt.

I sincerely feel that we have one of the better counties of Texas and as your sheriff, I know that I can uphold this standard.

Briefly, let's review my qualifications: I am 28 years of age and a lifelong resident of Aransas County. I am also a property owner and I am active in several civic organizations, including the Rockport Chamber of Commerce, the Rockport Volunteer Fire Department and the Aransas County Emergency Corps.

I have almost 3 years law enforcement experience, 10 months being on the Rockport Police Department and over 20 months on the Aransas County Sheriff's Department, under both the late Arley C. Shivers and his successor, Mrs. Virginia Shivers.

The Sheriff's duties require full time devotion and I have no other source of income or business to keep from giving my full time to your county-wide protection.

Your sheriff should be a qualified and experienced man. I am both.

All applicants must be of good health, good character, possess charm, poise, personality and beauty of face and figure. None should have been married.

False Alams Should Stop, Say Firemen

Firemen, police and sheriff's officers are all on the lookout for persons turning in false alarms recently.

"Every time we get a late alarm," Cecil Cole said, "we always take at least three pieces of apparatus, as we never know what we'll run into late in the evening, and it's better to go prepared."

False fire alarms greatly increase the possibility of accidents late at night, and also can lead to some fire getting out of control.

"Suppose," said one fireman, "that we're all out in the country on a false alarm and there is a real fire somewhere downtown. We'd have no way of knowing about it until we could be reached by messenger, and in that time the real fire could get loose and cause lots of damage.

"It might even," he said, "burn down the home of the person who turned in the false alarm that we answered."

Recently, an alarm was turned in which called firemen and three pieces of apparatus out in the country to a place where there was no phone, and in a case like this, such an accident could happen.

Mrs. O. W. Brymer reports that her nephew, Jon Paul, is steadily improving. Jon, son of Mr. and Mrs. K. L. Paul of San Antonio and former residents of Rockport, was in a serious car mishap Saturday night a week ago. He has been removed to his home from the hospital and is doing very well. He is very grateful for all the cards and prayers sent in his behalf.

Outdoors In Texas

By Vern Sanford

A pair of binoculars is invaluable to the outdoorsman. Yet few sportsmen know what to look for in binoculars. This whether the binoculars are used in hunting or boating or maybe just to watch a football game.

With telescope sights coming more into vogue, you see fewer hunters lugging binoculars about the woods. But have you noticed that a great majority of the blue-ribbon hunters usually have a pair handy?

There is a good reason, of course. The top notch hunter is a meticulous individual. He spends more time looking and less time traveling.

Get on a knoll or hillside or even up in a tree — with a pair of binoculars—and just spend your time looking. You'll be surprised how much more you can see.

A high quality pair of binoculars has the ability to almost penetrate brush. The lenses capture and intensify the light, making it easy to see under feeble light conditions.

Today's binoculars come in many different sizes and price ranges. There has been an increased output from Japan.

Most of Japans binoculars are economical and acceptable. But like anything else, you get just about what you pay for.

The big idea is to know what to look for before you purchase binoculars. Most people simply wander into a sporting goods store, put a pair to the eyes, adjust the focus, look around for a moment, and then say, "I'll take them."

But later you might find that you can't look through the glasses for any length of time without your eyes protesting. Although everything may appear all right, the glasses may be out of alignment and put a strain on your eyes.

A quick check for alignment is simple. Focus the glasses on some distant object, such as the top of a building, and slowly push the binoculars away from your eyes. As the glasses get toward arm's length, if you see two distinct images, the glasses are not aligned properly. With good alignment, both images will merge into one even when the binoculars are at arm's length.

A pair of binoculars has many advantages over the scope sight of a rifle for the job it is intended to do.

For one, it is tiring to hold a rifle up to your shoulder for any length of time. Binoculars are much lighter.

For another, binoculars have a wider field of view, thus permitting you to study a larger area at one glance.

For instance, a good six-power binocular will have a field view of at least 450 feet wide at 1,000 yards. A seven-power job won't be far behind, something like 400 feet.

Compare this to a six-power scope which has a view of roughly 200 feet at the same distance.

Contrary to popular belief, a number such as 6x30 and 7x35 does not in any way indicate the field of view of that particular glass. Instead, the first number indicates the power of the binoculars while the second is the diameter of the objective, or forward lens. The larger the number, the larger the objective lens.

A larger objective lens will permit the entrance of more light and consequently you'll be able to see better in weak light conditions. A 7x50 pair of binoculars, for example, will permit much more light to reach your eye than will a 6x30 glass.

In a few instances, the field of view may be indicated on the binoculars. Usually it is indicated with a figure like 7° x 12, which, of course, is an angular measurement. Since one degree field of view is 52½ feet at 1,000 yards, you can compute the field of your instrument by some simple mathematics. In the above case, it would mean multiplying seven times 52½, then adding 12 more feet.

Binoculars are focused to the user's eyesight in two ways. With the center focusing unit you can adjust both eye pieces at once. Individual focus is achieved by adjusting the focusing knob on each eyepiece.

There are several things which determine the price of any particular pair of binoculars.

Power of magnification and size of the objective lenses combine to make one. The stronger the power and the larger the objective lenses, of course, the higher the price.

Durability and type of construction also have a lot to do with price, along with the quality of the lenses.

Important to consider, however, is that the stronger the power and the larger the objective lenses, the more the instrument will weigh. A pair of 6x30 binoculars will be considerably lighter than the 8x50 size.

If you're going to carry a pair slung around your neck all day, it may be wise to sacrifice some power for lighter weight. This again is a matter of choice. So pick a pair that suits your own individual needs and desires.

Callender House At Victoria First Pre-Cut Structure

Awarded a citation by the Historic American Buildings Survey conducted some years ago by the Department of the Interior, because of its exceptional historical and architectural interest, the stately old Callender mansion at 404 West Guadalupe Street in Victoria is thought to be the first pre-cut home ever built in Texas.

Planned as a hunting lodge at Green Lake in 1854, by an early Presbyterian minister, the Rev. Dr. Stephen F. Cocke, there are two versions of where the lumber came from. One is that the house was built of pine and oak shipped by boat from New York to Indianola. The other is that the lumber was cut in Florida and shipped overland to the building site.

The present occupant of the home, Mrs. Eloise Callender Watson, granddaughter of William L. Callender, a prominent attorney who bought the home on 1871 and occupied it until his death in 1895, supports the latter version.

Mrs. Watson recalls tales that the house was actually erected in the San Antonio River bottoms, then taken down in numbered pieces and re-erected at the present location. In any event, Dr. Cocke died after the material arrived in Victoria and his brother, Dr. Thomas R. Cocke, used it to build a home for his niece, Mrs. J. M. Cochran. Her sister, Mrs. Thomas J. Sterne whose husband founded the Victoria Advocate, one of the State's oldest newspapers.

Reverend and Mrs. Cochran were the first occupants of the home, whose age was established some years ago when a Presbyterian paper dated 1857 was found in one of the window casings that was being repaired.

Reverend Cochran, also a Presbyterian, was transferred to Huntsville during the Civil War, and officiated at Sam Houston's funeral. Houston was a Baptist, but at the time of his death there was no minister of that denomination available, according to Dr. J. F. Estil, former president of Sam Houston State College.

William Larrabee Callender, who bought the house, was long a resident there. Born near Harrisburg, Penn., he arrived in Victoria in 1855 and for a time was principal of the Victoria Male Academy. This occupied a red brick building on South William Street, on the site later occupied by the first Our Lady of Lourdes Church. Afterwards he practiced law for a number of years in partnership with William S. Glass. He died in 1855.

Following his death, his daughter, Mrs. Lloyd M. Stevens and her husband lived in the house. Mrs. Stevens, who was a half-sister to Mrs. Eloise Callender Watson's father, died in 1952, and her husband died in 1955. On his death the house and the square block of land on which it stood until recently—half the original lot—became the property of Mrs. Watson.

Two years later a bulldozer showed up in West Guadalupe Street one morning and pushed a big pile of Victoria traditions all the way from Moody Street to Vine. It passer right through Mrs. Watson's front yard, cut the Callender estate in half, and changed the address from 1505 Moody Street, which it had been for over a century to the present one of 404 West Guadalupe.

Mrs. Watson still resides at the family home, and in recent years has been encouraging Robert W. Shook, history instructor at Victoria College to do research on the family's history, using the voluminuous records that various members had been accumulated over the past 100 years.

She also gave him an ancient desk—a tall piece of furniture dating far back in the last century and containing pigeonholes for the storage of papers. When Shook moved the desk, the top was jarred loose and revealed a secret cache of documents predating anything the historian had previously seen.

They were the financial papers and letters of David Irwin, a bacheolor born in Virginia in 1798, who was a territorial judge in Wisconsin appointed by President Andrew Jackson, and who came to DeWitt County about 1852 to administer a plantation he had bought near the site of present Thomaston.

Irvin pre-dated William L. Callender as owner of the home, for he bought it in 1870, when it was already old, and he died there in 1872, after suffering a stroke.

Shook, already in high historical cotton with the Callender papers, greeted the new papers with delight.

"They are virgin material," he said at the time. "I am taking my time sifting through them. What would interest historians most would be the personal correspondence of Judge Irvin. It reflects the judge's strong Southern inclinations after the Civil War. He denounced reconstruction policies in the south.

"Second most important I believe are the economic receipts. They provide a good picture of a fortune made in land speculation, and also reveal the costs of maintaining a plantation from 1856-69."

MEDALIST PLAY SLATED SATURDAY IN CLUB TOURNEY

Golfers at Live Oak Country Club will compete for medalist honors Saturday, May 2, as the men's annual club tournament gets underway.

Speck Howery, club professional, said pairings will be made late Saturday for the tournament and that matches will start Sunday.

Finals in all fights will be played Sunday, May 17. All playoffs will be for 18 holes except the championship flight which will be a 36-hole match.

SHERIFF MAKES ARREST

the three men as those who had been in their stores.

At 4:42 p.m., only 40 minutes after the first complaint, de la Garza headed back for Rockport with the three men who were placed in jail here, charged with misdemeanor theft.

The three men were: John Callicoatte, Jr., 43, of 4206 Emanuel, Houston; David Whitley, 24, 3547 Blodgett; and J. D. Taylor, 33, of 2821 Oakdell.

A call to the Houston police department disclosed the fact that Whitley had recently made bond there in a case where he was charged with aggravated assault, and that Taylor was a parole violator.

Both these men made bond here Wednesday morning and were released. Callicoatte still remains in the local jail.

Deputy T. A. Kilgore, of the sheriff's department, who assisted with the investigation, said that merchants in the area should be particularly careful, as there appears to be an influx of short change artist, till tappers and hot check artists in the area within recent weeks.

"There have been a number of shoplifters, too" he said. "One thing everyone should insist on is some sore of permanent identification before cashing any checks for any strangers."

Merchants should be most alert around noon, Kilgore said, as many of these thieves and grifters prefer that time to carry out their schemes.

"Most stores are short handed during the noon hour," he said, "and they sometimes work in pairs. One will keep the attention of the person in the store, the other will pilfer from the cash register or carry out some other nefarious action."

Strangers acting in a suspicious manner should be reported immediately to the police of sheriff's department Kilgore pointed out, and suggested that it would be a good thing if their car license could be obtained.

Canoes Leave Monday Morning

Fifteen canoe teams left here at 5:55 a.m. Monday, after spending Sunday night on the local beach. A Coast Guard spokesman said the boatmen found exceptional weather conditions both Sunday and Monday.

Two Michigan canoeists who took an early lead in the Texas Water Safari when it left San Marcos eight days ago, were still out in front, as the stretch from Seadrift to Rockport, Sunday, the first salt water of the trip, took out seven entries.

Albert C. Widing, of Holly, Michigan, and Bob Gillings, of Lansing, Michigan, had never been in Texas before joining the safari.

From here, the safari teams went on to Ingleside Monday, and ended their 480 mile trek down the San Marcos and Guadalupe Rivers and across the bays of Texas at Corpus Christi.

Greeted at the Rorkport waterfront by a curious crowd along with race officials, newsmen, and others, the boaters beached their craft, cooked a meal and spread their sleeping bags on the sand.

Widing who races canoes for a hobby in Michigan, said the longest race he has been in before now was about 250 miles. "This is a rough one," he said, "but the people sure have been nice to us."

Teams have come from as far away as Virginia and Michigan to compete in the race.

Prizes to the winners include a $3,000 moose and bear hunting trip in Alaska and $1,750 in cash prizes. Trophies will also be awarded by Argosy magazine and Gruman Canoes.

JOE WRIGHT TELLS STORY OF HAMS

Joe Wright, one of the most enthusiastic radio hams in this area, says that the recent disaster in Alaska left it with virtually no communications except by amateur radio.

Police, fire departments, civil defens, citizens band are all geared for short range radio contacts, he said, and only amateur radio can cover both the short and long distances. With over 265,000 amateurs, Joe said, "we are everywhere."

"We spend a lot of our time and money preparing ourselves for catastrophes like this. Thousands of ham groups drill every week so that they will have the equipment ready for emergency use and have the experience necessary to effectively use it.

"Hams make the headlines frequently with little acts of public service. Just recently an amateur in New Jersey received a call from Venezuela for Myeleran a drug used to treat Leukemia, which was needed desperately there. Within two hours the drug was on its way from the manufacturer by air express to Venezuela.

"Many other such classes are happening every day.

"The radio amateur is handy to have around."

Amateur radio, largest scientific hobby in the U. S., interests youngsters in electronics, combats delinquency, furnishes instant communications anywhere in time of disaster, provides a stockpile of trained radio operators and technicians for time of war, builds international good will through people-to-people contacts, and improves the state of the electronics art through important technical discoveries.

ELECT

RAY LONGINO

County Commissioner Precinct 1,

Aransas County

I have lived in Aransas County for the past twenty-five years. I graduated from Aransas County High School and my wife and I have been in business here for over seven years.

My business can be left in the very capable hands of a trusted employee and will in no way hinder me in the work as your Commissioner.

Our democratic form of government provides the opportunity every two to four years to change the officers of our government. This system recognizes that no one has a permanent claim to the office. The office belongs to the voters and they can elect the person that they feel is best qualified for our growing community. (MY opponent has held this office for 18 years.)

I will appreciate your vote and support and will serve you to the best of my ability.

Signed:

Ray Longino

Views From Hewes

By Police Chief Robert Hewes

After the column of two weeks ago appeared in the paper I received many requests to place more Views From Hewes in The Rockport Pilot. I would like to thank the publishers of The Pilot for allowing me to let my views be known. Many of them will be discussed as to their merits but I promise to try to write about things that are good for all.

Friday, April 24, I was asked to speak to the children of the second grade, taught by Mrs. Curry, on the subject of duties of the City Police and safety for the children. Mrs. Curry asked for five to ten minutes, but after starting to speak, it was almost impossible to get away without staying nearly 30 minutes.

It is quite remarkable how quickly these 2nd graders take to things that interest them. Many of them asked questions concerning safety zones, cars not stopping and which side of the road to walk and ride their bikes on. I was very gratified and was honored to be asked to talk to them. I believe that if everybody was as interested in safety as these 2nd graders I would not have any problems concerning this subject.

I hope that all parents of younger children going to the beach in the near future will caution them on the safety aspects of swimming. These will include always having a buddy with you so that if help is needed, and not going too far into the bay to swim, and paying attention to the directions of the lifeguards. It is very important that the lifeguards be obeyed, because they are at the beaches to make them a safe place to play for all people.

Well, guess that this is all for now, but please remember, have a wonderful vacation or summer season, but have a safe one. It it the little things that count up fast.

A watch was reported missing from a trailer at Taylor Oaks Trailer Park but the next day it was reported found by the sister of the loser. It had been placed in another position in the trailer.

A man from Corpus Christi, on his way to Houston for a visit, was found at the Seaire's Drive Inn by off-duty Texas Highway Patrolman Ray Brown and was taken to the Aransas Hospital by Police Chief Robert Hewes where he was examined, treated and released.

A very valuable item to the police department was authorized by the city council at its meeting Monday night. It is an electronic siren, public address system and radio amplifier combination. Police Chief Hewes feels that the addition of the above described equipment will be a great asset to his department in any type of an emergency for the control of crowds and traffic.

FIDELIS CLASS ENTERTAINED MONDAY

Mrs. J. V. Ferguson and Mrs. Roy Mullinax were hostesses of the month to the Fidelis Class of First Baptist Church on Monday in the educational hall of the church.

A pot luck lunch was enjoyed at the noon hour, followed by the monthly class social.

The social hour began with prayer led by Mrs. R. F. McKnight. A devotional Scripture message built around the thoughts of God's creation of spring time, was presented by Mrs. Mullinax.

A contest of spring colors was held in which each lady compiled a list. Mrs. Roy Ferrie made the longest list in the allotment time, after which she played some of the songs on the piano.

The climatic point was a spring hat show in which each lady modeled a hat she had made before the party, the stipulation of the program committee having been that the hats were to be created of something not regularly used in hat making.

After viewing the colorful array of hats, a vote was taken, and awards were given to Mrs. McKnight for the prettiest hat; Mrs. C. O. Lutz, the cutest; Mrs. A. F. Dervage, the most practical, and Mrs. John Hays, the most unique hat.

Mrs. Lutz had charge of a short business meeting, and after a prayer of thanks to God members ended a very enjoyable day.

RE-ELECT

Leroy J. Wieting

YOUR

STATE REPRESENTATIVE

DID YOU KNOW???

Rep. Wieting passed the House or Senate version of all the bills he introduced, including 3 local, but major bills for Aransas County.

1. Copano Bay Causeway creating the longest fishing Pier in the world. Two piers (each end of present causeway.) Then he worked for the $10,000.00 approximate that will convert this old causeway into a first class Tourist Attraction.
2. Maneuvered the Aransas County Reclamation and Conservation District Bill to final passage. The District is now in operation making the survey for fresh water supply. Rep. Wieting passed this bill through the House of Representatives on his first attempt after it failed in two prior legislative sessions.
3. Introduced and passed the Pilot Bill placing this County under Regulatory Authority. The first of its kind in Coastal Waters of Texas, as it was recommended and requested by local Sportsmen and Commercial groups.

Representative Wieting immediately after being elected in 1962 got Aransas County approved for Federal Assistance. Prior to this time the County was not eligible for any assistance. This opened the way for the Rockport City Council with assistance of Rep. Wieting to apply for the $200,000.00 Federal Grant on the Water and Sewer improvements now in progress for the City of Rockport.

The Approval of Aransas County under this Federal Act will make it possible also for the new Aransas Reclamation-Conservation District to deal with the the San Patricio Water District for water from the 36" Fresh Water Line, if necessary. Representative Wieting started the process by which 1.1 million grant was received, to make possible the raw water line across San Patricio County.

We believe you will agree that Representative Wieting's record in his first term in the legislature merits him a vote for re-election for a second term.
