Foreign oil cutbacks could create crisis

By MICHAEL WINES
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Despite the current world oil glut, a sudden cutback of foreign oil shipments to the United States later this decade would trigger a national economic crisis that could make the 1982 recession seem puny by comparison, a congressional study warned Wednesday.

The report, by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment, also concluded that U.S. reliance on oil imports will rise sharply in the early 1990s unless the nation increases conservation measures and turns to other energy sources.

And it urged Congress to consider a number of moves, including new incentives for investment in alternative-energy technologies and the deregulation of natural gas prices, to gird for what it said could be a "permanent" oil crunch in future decades.

The congressional report estimated that a reduction of 3 million barrels a day in oil imports could trigger an economic slowdown that would rekindle double-digit unemployment and cause a steep decline in the gross national product.

The United States imports about 4.9 million barrels of oil daily. Only 900,000 barrels come from the Middle Eastern nations that are regarded as most likely to reduce oil production during a war or other crisis, but the United States could lose fully 3 million barrels a day, the study stated, if it honored agreements to share its oil with allies who depend more heavily on Middle Eastern producers.

Even if the nation reacted swiftly to head off the effects of such a decline, the report concluded, the GNP — the value of the country's output of goods and services — would decline by 1.3 percent in the second year after the cutback began and unemployment would rise by more than 4 percentage points. A slow response would cause GNP to drop by 5.2 percent and unemployment to jump by 6 percentage points.

By comparison, the GNP fell 1.7 percent during the 1982 recession, the deepest since the Great Depression.

The report's principal authors, Thomas Hull and Richard Rowberg, said the nation eventually would recover from those economic shocks as the economy adjusted to higher oil prices and business and homes gradually shifted to new energy sources.

But they indicated that the chances of a more severe economic shock grow greater as the country delays taking steps to reduce its dependence on oil from potentially unstable foreign lands. Rowberg said oil imports will probably rise to about 7 million barrels a day by the late 1980s or 1990 as domestic oil wells peter out and consumption continues to rise.

The OTA report said the country could voluntarily erase an import cutback of slightly more than 3 million barrels a day within five years even without government action as rising oil prices forced users to conserve. Savings could come from converting furnaces and boilers from oil to gas and coal, using more fuel-efficient means of transportation and adopting residential and industrial conservation techniques.

Midland woman seeks state GOP vice chairmanship

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

"...I truly feel that I have the qualifications and the experience to represent all Republicans in this state effectively."

— Lou Brown

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Lou Brown will be turning the State Republican Convention into a hotbed of politicking with her announcement this morning she is seeking the post of state vice chairman.

During a news conference at Midland County Republican headquarters, Mrs. Brown said she decided to try for the post "because I truly feel that I have the qualifications and the experience to represent all Republicans in this state effectively." This marks the first time in more than 20 years that someone from West Texas or the Panhandle has sought one of the two top positions in the Republican state hierarchy.

The state vice chairman ranks second in line behind the state chairman, who is George Strake of Houston.

Mrs. Brown said she "perceives this position differently than it has been in the last few years." In addition to assisting the state chairman, she wants to go into the counties and build a stronger Republican organization.

She already has mailed letters to 9,500 state Republicans, seeking their support. But in those letters Mrs. Brown didn't mention her opponent — incumbent Diana Denman of San Antonio, who has come under fire in the past month for comments made during an interview with a Houston television station.

In that interview, Mrs. Denman said the Southwest Voter Registration and Education Project was "registering people in the left wing area of the church." Johnny Mata, state president of League of United Latin American Citizens, called for her ouster in an Aug. 25 issue of The Dallas Morning News.

Mrs. Brown said that incident won't be an issue in her campaign for state vice chairman, but she expects someone to raise it at the state convention Sept. 21-22 in Corpus Christi.

"I don't wish to make it an issue," she said. "The Hispanic vote is very important to the Republican vote in Texas. They have essentially the same values as the Republican Party."

Her decision to seek the post came as a result of pressure from other Republicans at the national convention in Dallas last month. It was a coalition of county chairmen, Republican Women's club officers and members of the State Republican Executive Committee that lobbied her to seek the job, she said.

At that time, Peggy Rodgers also had considered the job, but Mrs. Brown said she believes Mrs. Rodgers has decided not to run.

Mrs. Brown has contacted Mrs. Denman about her decision. "She accepted it quite calmly. She said, 'OK. We have a race.'"

Since making her decision about a week ago, Mrs. Brown has assembled Midlanders and written a game plan. She has been on the phone calling people in each of the 31 senatorial districts, trying to find supporters and someone willing to place her name in nomination in each senatorial caucus. She must win 21 senatorial districts. However, if Mrs. Brown comes up with fewer than 21 districts but as many as seven, she can bring a minority report to the floor, and a roll count vote can be taken.

"I could win all the rural caucuses and not have the number of votes," she said. "It's like the electoral college; you can win more in popular vote," but not enough in the senatorial districts.

"It's a matter of politicking," she said of her plans.

Not only is she gathering supporters in each district, but she also is drawing in whips who can work the floor and supporters. If one district appears weak, more workers will be sent in to encourage them to vote for Mrs. Brown.

She has no campaign promises, she said. "If elected it is my intent to work throughout the entire state assisting county organizations in building a firm base of support for the state party, Republican candidates and Republican office holders," she said. "It is at the grassroots level that we can be and must be visual and effective."

Southern governors critical of offshore offering

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Refusal of the Reagan administration to give coastal states a better deal on offshore oil lease revenues could have political ramifications in November, three southern Democratic governors said.

The three were among officials from seven states meeting in Austin Wednesday to discuss the federal government's offer to the states on oil lease money, an offer all said was too low.

"This particular issue is going to be very important in Louisiana, and I can see now that if Louisiana doesn't get some indication of justice by the Reagan administration I intend to use that as the justification for taking a strong position against Reagan's re-election," said Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards.

"I think the people will understand the amounts of money involved. They understand the issue could become a political issue. I'm hopeful it won't. I'm hopeful we can get a settlement and not have it involved in the presidential campaign," said Alabama Gov. George Wallace.

Texas Gov. Mark White said Republicans are engaged in "a flim-flam" in which state GOP leaders criticize his recent tax hike while the Reagan administration fails to give Texas all the money it deserves.

The three, plus Alaska Gov. William Sheffield, accused the federal government of selfishness over oil revenue and asked for a quick meeting with Interior Secretary William Clark. Clark, in a phone call to White, promised to arrange the session.

Clark last month proposed that states get one-sixth of bonus revenues from federal oil and gas leases on tracts within three miles of state boundaries on the Outer Continental Shelf.

Wallace termed that amount "absolutely ridiculous," and White said the administration refuses to negotiate.

"This so-called fair and equitable offer (made by Clark) was nothing of the kind. It's not fair and it's not equitable," White said.

"Every step of this whole process has been a charade. I was hopeful at the beginning that we were going to see meaningful negotiations. This administration has failed to enter into meaningful negotiations. They have issued ultimatums. They have issued non-negotiable positions," White said.

Sheffield said the states are only seeking what is rightfully theirs.

"The whole Outer Continental Shelf program was formed so the states and the federal government could work cooperatively ... to produce more oil for the United States of America, plus cooperatively share in those revenues. They're not wishing to share," Sheffield said.

The governors' meeting included officials from Mississippi, Florida and California. White said all the states but California agreed to seek a session with Clark within two weeks. California's governor has scheduling conflicts and may not participate, White said.

Until 1978, the federal government kept oil and gas revenues produced from tracts outside state limits. But Congress that year required a split of revenues from sites adjacent to state tracts, on the grounds that oil pools often overlapped the boundary.

Congress said only that the split should be "fair and equitable," and did not specify a division.

Mondale precedes Reagan in addressing Jewish group

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

Walter F. Mondale, criticizing Ronald Reagan for mixing politics and religion, told a national Jewish organization today that "most Americans would be surprised to learn that God is a Republican."

Hours before Reagan was to address members of B'nai B'rith himself, Mondale said: "No president should attempt to transform policy debates into theological disputes."

"He must not let it be thought that political dissent from him is un-Christian. And he must not cast opposition to his programs as opposition to America...."

"I don't doubt Mr. Reagan's faith, his patriotism and his family values. And I call on him and his supporters to accept mine," Mondale, the son of a minister, said in his prepared remarks.

"Most Americans would be surprised to learn that God is a Republican," Mondale said.

Reagan aides said the president's address to B'nai B'rith would focus mainly on U.S. Middle East policy and his administration's strong ties to Israel.

The two candidates on Wednesday ended their coast-to-coast fall campaign kickoff trips in which Mondale seemingly bird-dogged the president, following him in appearances in California and before the American Legion convention in Utah.

Wrapping up his trip with a speech to the American Legion in Salt Lake City and at a rainy rally in Portland, Ore., Mondale invited a comparison with Reagan on the issue of war and peace.

"I have been involved in every arms control fight over the last 20 years. I understand, I know," Mondale said. "My opponent has opposed every arms control effort over the last 20 years. Let's elect a president who will lead us toward a safer world."

Mondale was speaking to a second religious group today, the National Baptist Convention in Washington, before heading to Atlanta. Reagan was heading to Camp David for the weekend and planning to venture out on another political foray Sunday at a Polish festival in Doylestown, Pa.

Aides to the two candidates, meanwhile, planned another meeting today to negotiate presidential debates.

Reagan's last stop on his political trip was Chicago, where he offered the defense of his civil rights commitment before a mostly white audience of the Economic Club of Chicago.

Bear may have been protecting food source

Associated Press

GLACIER NATIONAL PARK, Mont. — No action will be taken against a grizzly bear that mauled two hikers if it is determined the animal was trying to protect its food — the huckleberries that the hikers had been picking, officials said.

Campers and hikers were urged to clear out of the area Wednesday after the attack, which left the man and woman bleeding and "screaming and yelling" as they searched for help.

The mature silvertip grizzly startled the couple picking berries Tuesday afternoon and pulled them down from the trees where they scampered for protection, said Alan O'Neill, assistant superintendent of Glacier National Park.

The victims were evacuated by helicopter Wednesday to a hospital in Kalispell, about 40 miles away.

The woman was severely bitten on one leg, a shoulder and her back, received numerous puncture wounds and possibly suffered several broken ribs, said O'Neill. The man received a puncture wound on his right heel and scratches on his back, he said.

It was the third bear attack this year in Glacier National Park, a 1 million-acre preserve that is home to an estimated 250 grizzlies, among the world's largest carnivores. Bears killed three people in the park in 1980.

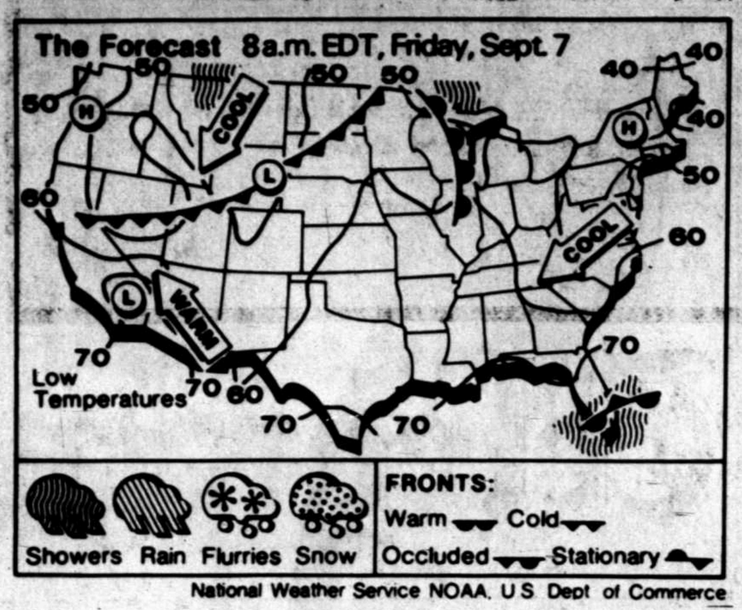

Meanwhile, crews in northwest Wyoming have been installing bear-proof food storage boxes and suspension poles in the Shoshone and Bridger-Teton national forests to prevent confrontations between grizzlies and humans when big game hunting opens Monday.

"We know how volatile the situation has been this year," said Stephen Meale, supervisor at Shoshone. Since July, four people have been mauled, one of them fatally, by bears at Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming.

In the latest attack in Glacier National Park, O'Neill said the hikers were about 1½ miles from a wilderness campground picking huckleberries when they were surprised by the huge animal.

Two killed in Kansas oil firm blast

Associated Press

ANTHONY, Kan. — An explosion ripped through an oil company building, damaging homes and businesses and killing two people as it hurled debris two blocks away and sent up a fireball visible for 10 miles, authorities said today.

More than a half-dozen people also were injured, two of them seriously, in the explosion at around 9:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Farmer's Oil Co. in west Anthony, officials said.

The blaze that gutted the building raged out of control for nearly three hours, a police dispatcher said. Residents in a four-block area were evacuated from their homes until the blaze was brought under control about 12:30 a.m.

The cause of the blast was not immediately known. It occurred as a propane truck was backing up into a wash bay at the company.

Police Chief Richard Happ said he was at home on the opposite side of town watching television when the explosion shook "the house real good."

Jeff Bogen and his father were hanging a garage door at their home next door to the building.

"The building was there and then, it was just gone," said Bogen. "There were just some beams standing there where the building use to be. A big force blew the door down on top of us. We just scrambled out of there as fast as we could.

"The concussion was really great....and then there was just a big ball of flame and stuff falling," he said.

A fireball that soared into the air following the explosion, police said, was visible more than 10 miles north of Anthony, a town of 2,600 people 45 miles southwest of Wichita in south-central Kansas.

The walls of the oil company's two-story brick building, on a corner on the west edge of downtown Anthony, were blown out, Happ said. Bricks were hurled up to two blocks.

A house just north of the explosion scene caught fire and was extensively damaged, Happ said. Three other homes were damaged by flying debris, one extensively, he said. The roof on a combination gasoline station-convenience store, also owned by Farmer's Oil across the street caved in and large plate glass windows in the building were shattered, Happ added.

The oil company building also included an optometrist's office and the district soil conservation office.

Ray Graves, 51, president of the oil company was backing a propane truck into a wash bay in the building, Happ said. Fire officials said the propane tank itself did not explode and remained intact following the explosion and fire.

Fire officials said barrels of antifreeze and diesel additives were stored in the building.

The company is a rural co-op that sells — wholesale and retail — a variety of fuel supplies, tires, and some farm and truck equipment.

The bodies of two males were found at the scene. Authorities withheld the identities pending notification of relatives.

Graves was treated at the Anthony Hospital and later transferred by helicopter to the burn center at St. Francis Medical Center in Wichita. Authorities said he was in critical condition with second-and third-degree burns over 70 percent of his body.

Larry Gaug, 17, suffered a head injury when he was struck by flying debris, police said. He also was treated at the Anthony Hospital and later transferred to the Harper Hospital, where he was reported in good condition.

Four people were treated at the Anthony Hospital for cuts and abrasions. They were released after treatment. Happ said, several other people were treated for minor cuts by emergency medical units at the scene.

A nine-mile segment of Kansas 2 between Anthony and Harper and a 12-mile stretch of the K-2 west of Anthony were closed for traffic control, said a dispatcher in the Wichita division of the Kansas Highway Patrol.

Temperature drops to 50s again; High not near record

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders awoke to cool 50-degree temperatures again this morning but according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, the 58-degree temperature was not cool enough to break the record of 56 set in 1973.

Tonight will also be chilly with lows in the upper 50s accompanying winds from the south at less than 10 mph. Fair skies will continue through Friday with highs in the middle 90s and winds from the south increasing to 10 to 20 mph.

The 1948 record high was 104, well above the Wednesdays high of 87.

STATE

Clear skies and cool temperatures once again dominated the Texas weather picture early today as a weak high pressure system continued its steady stroll across the Lone Star state.

Some widely scattered thundershowers dotted the southern tip of the lower Rio Grande Valley. Otherwise, no rain was detected in Texas.

Pre-dawn temperatures were generally in the 60s. But readings in the 50s registered in far West Texas, while readings in the warmer 70s persisted in the deep South and western half of North Texas.

The National Weather Service reported the extremes at 4 a-m ranged from a cool 55 degrees at Amarillo to a mark of 74 degrees at McAllen.

NATION

Thunderstorms rumbled over the northern intermountain region today and scattered rain brushed the northern Pacific coast.

Skies were cloudy from the northern Rockies across the upper Mississippi Valley, with scattered showers over Florida.

Skies were generally fair over the remainder of the nation.

More than 550 firefighters battling the 3,400-acre Napi Peak blaze — the last of fires that burned 250,000 acres in Montana last week — were keeping it contained despite winds that gusted to 30 mph.

Meanwhile, hundreds of acres of grassland meanwhile burned out control Wednesday night in Barber County in south-central Kansas, authorities said.

A line of amphibious armored personnel carriers prepares to move into the desert for Gallant Eagle training exercises.

Desert war games begin in California

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

TWENTYNINE PALMS, Calif. — Artillery thundered in the desert and hundreds of paratroopers leaped from planes 300 miles away as the 50,000-player war game Operation Gallant Eagle began in earnest across Southern California.

Howitzers hurled 95-pound shells at targets on the Marine Corps Air-Ground Combat Center on Wednesday as armored vehicles carried thousands of troops to positions for today's live-fire maneuvers on the 932-square-mile Mojave Desert base 120 miles east of Los Angeles.

At Camp Roberts, in the coastal foothills midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco, 528 paratroopers of the Army's 82nd Airborne Division streamed from six Air Force transport jets Wednesday.

One soldier suffered a sprained foot and two others complained of back pains after the drop, Army Col. James Strachan said.

But the major enemy was heat exhaustion, which felled at least one Marine as others sought shade from tanks, trucks and camouflage tents in 101-degree heat, said Col. Hank Stackpole.

"Heat is the biggest problem," Stackpole said. "The other problem we have is making them eat. In the hot environment, they don't feel like eating."

Gallant Eagle involves 50,000 troops, and the cost just for transporting personnel and equipment was put at $33 million.

"They are full of ready-to-go," Marine Lt. Col. Jim Teixeira said of his battalion. "It's an opportunity to drill with live fire. It's like the total experience."

Today's live-fire exercise involved two battalions of Marines from Camp Pendleton battling dummy targets to seize an objective in the Bullion Mountains. The maneuver includes aerial and artillery bombardments and firing of real ammunition, Marine Maj. Bob McLean said.

POLITICS

"I was fighting for civil rights before they called it civil rights," he said.

"I know that there's been a lot of criticism that somehow I am opposed to civil rights," Reagan replied when asked in a written question about his commitment to affirmative action. "...I was raised to believe that there's no sin greater than prejudice or bigotry. And I grew up that way."

Referring to his days as a young radio sportscaster, Reagan said he was "one of a handful of sports commentators throughout the country who was even then campaigning for elimination of the rules that had kept minorities out of organized baseball."

Mondale's appearance before the American Legion in Salt Lake City followed Reagan's appearance by a day, and it came with recognition that the group's members would be more receptive to the Republican's defense program than his own. But his visit was another attempt to underscore his differences with Reagan for a national audience.

"Yesterday, Mr. Reagan appeared before you and spoke of his desire for a world without war," Mondale said. "I do not challenge the sincerity of that desire.

"That is not the issue. The issue is whether he has set us on a course toward peace and a safer world. In my judgment, he has not."

He pledged to seek a summit meeting on nuclear weapons with the Soviet Union within six months of his inauguration.

He also renewed his pledge to order a temporary moratorium on the testing of all nuclear weapons, and he said Reagan has failed a "crucial test of leadership" on arms control.

Mondale's running mate, Geraldine Ferraro, joined in accusing Reagan of failing to reduce the risk of war.

Appearing in Portland, Ore., with Mondale, she said, "This president never saw a weapon he didn't like." She added: "He's not had a single diplomatic success in 3 12 years."

Ms. Ferraro was on her own again today in Kansas City, speaking to high school students before returning home to New York and heading to New England on Saturday.

Vice President George Bush, meanwhile, wound up a three-day campaign swing, insisting the world is further from war now than when Reagan took office and accusing Mondale of using scare tactics.

Bush defended the president on the war and peace issue in some form at nearly every stop on his trip and acknowledged that the issue is a problem for Reagan.

"I know people are concerned about this," Bush said in Lexington, Ky. "They've been scared by a year's worth of rhetoric out of our opponents talking about we're closer to war.

"I don't believe it," Bush added. "When you have this kind of propaganda being dished out, it's very important to give some kind of factual — say nothing of emotional — response."

Bear-proof food boxes, poles installed

By LYNN HORSLEY
Associated Press Writer

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — When big game hunting season opens Monday, officials want to prevent unplanned encounters between bears and humans like the ones that have left four people mauled, one fatally, in Yellowstone National Park this year.

They are hoping the installation of bear-proof food storage boxes and suspension poles in national parks in northwestern Wyoming makes the food of hunters and hikers less accessible to the huge roaming carnivores.

"We know how volatile the situation has been this year," Stephen Mealey, supervisor for the Shoshone Natonal Forest, said Wednesday. "It's predictable that the bear population will increase, and more bears mean more encounters."

About 70 steel boxes and more than 100 poles have been installed in the Shoshone National Forest, while 16 boxes and suspension poles should be in place in the Bridger-Teton National Forest by this weekend.

The forest service is providing the boxes and poles "to properly secure the things that man brings with him: food, game meat, horse feed," Mealey said. "We agreed last spring that the Shoshone Forest would take the lead in implementing this program on a trial basis."

Since then, the need for the program has been undescored by several confrontations in which bears got the better of humans.

A Swiss camper was mauled to death July 30 by a grizzly bear in Yellowstone National Park, and less than a week later a young boy was injured while sleeping in his tent. On Aug. 20, a female grizzly injured a ranger and her husband who were scouting an area for a hike.

In a turnabout, on Tuesday two hikers raiding bear food apparently provoked a grizzly to maul them in Glacier National Park in Montana. An unidentified man and woman were pulled from a tree by the bear that startled them as they picked huckleberries, a main food source for bears. Neither was injured critically.

Yellowstone officials are looking at ways to improve food storage and camping sites in areas roamed by bears and have been hanging poles in the backcountry to make food less accessible.

Fred Kingwill, supervisor for the Bridger-Teton forest, said the situation is especially critical during the hunting season. "People are armed and there is a higher chance for encounters," he said Wednesday. "The bears roam more widely, searching for food before they hibernate in winter."

The boxes and poles were put to the test, he said, by the 1,200-pound bear used on "The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams" TV show. The forest service rented the bear and rubbed the boxes with grease to entice the beast, but he could not penetrate the steel frames.

"The bear jumped all over them but couldn't get inside. He also tried to reach meat that was properly suspended," Kingwill said.

The 8-cubic-foot boxes are equipped with two chains, and the forest service anticipates installing about two in every campsite. Each of the suspension poles is a minimum of 16 feet from the ground and all are located at least 100 yards from sleeping areas.

The Bridger-Teton National Forest will hold a demonstration camp this weekend at Turpin Meadows, the popular trailhead to the Teton Wilderness, to alert hunters to the safety measures.

BEAR

"Both attempted to climb trees but the bear succeeded in pulling both down," O'Neill said.

After the bear left, he said, the couple made their way to the campground, in the central part of the park, about 12 miles from the Granite Park Chalet.

"They were screaming and yelling and trying to get help," he said.

People at the campground heard the two and escorted them to the campground, but it was getting dark, so they didn't go for help, O'Neill said.

At daybreak Wednesday, two hikers left for help and found a park crew about eight miles down the trail, O'Neill said. The trail crew summoned help at Granite Park Chalet.

O'Neill declined to identify the victims, who are from out-of-state, until their relatives had been notified. He said the woman's injuries did not appear life-threatening.

Typhoon moves from Philippines to China

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Typhoon Ike whirled over China's Hainan Island and slammed into the southern coast of China today, leaving behind in the Philippines a mounting death toll and more than 200,000 homeless.

Government officials and news reports said 1,011 bodies of people killed in the typhoon had been recovered in 12 central and southern provinces, but local officials in the hardest hit areas claimed a higher death toll. A Manila newspaper reported 1,842 deaths.

Qin Zhuyi, an official of the Chinese meteorological office in Nanning, Guangxi Zhuang autonomous region, said the storm, with winds between 64 mph and 82 mph, hit Guangxi's port of Qinzhou on the Gulf of Tonkin and was moving slowly northwest.

He told The Associated Press in Peking by telephone that it was not known whether Ike had caused casualties or damage because telephone contact with Qinzhou had been disrupted.

Earlier, the Meteorological Office in Canton, China, said it was impossible to communicate with Hainan Island because of the storm.

The Canton newspaper Nanfang Daily reported that the storm traversed the northern part of the island, 30 miles south of the Lei Zhou peninsula of the autonomous region, and buffeted its major city of Haikou with torrential rain Wednesday.

Greg Bourne, an assistant manager of British Petroleum Co. Ltd. in Canton, one of four foreign oil firms with drilling rigs near the island, said by telephone that all workers had been evacuated by Tuesday. His company had started sending people back to the rigs, he said.

Deaf school wouldn't mind closing doors

WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Schools nationwide throw open their doors this week to millions of students, but the American School for the Deaf, which has been educating the handicapped since 1817, wouldn't mind closing down for good.

Enrollment at the tuition-free school, which says it is the nation's oldest school for the disabled, has dropped from a peak of more than 500 about 20 years ago to about 275 this year. But that's just fine with school officials, who say that a declining enrollment means that less children are being born hearing impaired.

"We would love to be out of business, but that won't happen in the foreseeable future," school spokeswoman Jane A. Lennox said.

The last graduating class marked the beginning of the decline brought about by the end of the rubella epidemic of the mid-1960s. The class of 1984 had 53 students; the class of 1985 is expected to have about 30.

Realistically, though, as long as no cure is found for deafness, the school will remain open.

"We don't want to foster our existence for the sake of existing," said Ms. Lennox. "We are just learning to respond to the needs of the entire deaf population in the state."

Despite the end of the rubella babies, various forces seem to be keeping the school's population "treading water," executive director Winfield McChord Jr. Changes in federal law have forced public schools to provide education for the handicapped, but more children are also being diagnosed at a younger age.

"We're seeing a sudden rise in 5- and 6-year-old referrals, which I suspect is because of changing attitudes," McChord said. "Parents are referring kids at a younger age. Kids were usually referred at 10 or 12, when parents realized their deaf child's language level was miserably poor."

Ms. Lennox said financially troubled public schools are finding it cheaper to refer hearing impaired students to the school.

"If a school has four hearing-impaired students and 900 regular students, it can't afford to hire a guidance counselor who knows sign language and can handle the deaf students' special needs," she said.

The school also has been getting more referrals because it has a better public image and is no longer viewed as an asylum, McChord said. The school shortened its name from the American School for the Deaf and Dumb many years ago, Ms. Lennox said.

Some public school teachers "came to a meeting here last year with the image of a rainy day — thunder and lightning and children tied to trees, and I'm Boris Karloff," McChord said. "Before the end of the day, we had six referrals, and subsequently got more in the following weeks."

The Hartford public school system went so far as to drop its deaf education program and sent all its students to American School for the Deaf, McChord said.

Declining enrollments are not unique to the American School for the Deaf, said Ms. Lennox. "It's an issue at all special schools, because of better vaccinations, better prenatal care."

Ms. Lennox said the school has a variety of programs which have tended to stabilize the enrollment decline, such as accepting multipally handicapped students who are hearing impaired and offering parents of newborn deaf children a network of counselors who teach parents how to develop their child's speech as early as possible.

"Only 10 percent of deafness is hereditary; the other 90 percent of deaf children are born to hearing families," Ms. Lennox said. "Sometimes the families of a deaf child are so traumatized by the birth that they spend the first five years looking for a miracle cure. That can dramatically slow down the progress of a deaf child.

"The parent outreach program attempts to help the parents and the child through the most critical years."

House Democrats advise women on campaigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some Democratic congresswomen are taking it upon themselves to help women who are candidates for House seats representing other districts.

For instance, Rep. Patricia Schroeder of Colorado is advising three female candidates in Oregon: Ruth McFarland, Larryann Willis and Margie Hendrikson.

"We don't really have a name for it — 'Adopt a Candidate' or 'Big Sisters' are as good names as any," Mrs. Schroeder commented.

She and other female House members are helping women candidates with problems such as fund-raising and answering questions about their personal lives.

"From Pat, I learned the difference in perceptions between men and women. I asked her, 'Surely they don't think my Ph.D is in cookie baking,'" Mrs. McFarland said.

There are 22 women in the House and two in the Senate. More than 40 women are candidates for the House, compared with 28 candidates at a comparable time in 1982.

Peres, Shamir agree to joint government

JERUSALEM (AP) — Experts from Israel's two rival political parties worked through the night to draft a coalition agreement on a bipartisan government that could be installed as early as next week, spokesmen said today.

The all-night session followed an agreement Wednesday by Prime Minister-designate Shimon Peres and caretaker Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir to build a joint government.

The two leaders planned to meet later today to study the draft and continue talks on dividing Cabinet posts in Israel's first national unity government in 14 years, said Shamir's spokesman, Yossi Ahimeir.

Shamir, of the Likud bloc, and Peres, of the Labor Party, said problems arose in two meetings they held Wednesday on how to apportion Cabinet positions to smaller parties who join the ruling coalition.

But Peres said he hoped "we will resolve the composition of the Cabinet" by tonight.

The agreement will require approval by the central committees of both the Likud bloc and the Labor Party before the new Cabinet is brought to the Knesset, or Parliament, for a vote of confidence.

Likud's David Levy, deputy prime minister in the outgoing Cabinet, said each large party would have 10 seats in the new Cabinet. But it had not been decided which smaller parties would be represented or how many seats they would have, Levy said in a television interview Wednesday night.

Shamir and Peres have agreed to serve alternately as prime minister for half of a 50-month term, with Peres serving first. Each would be foreign minister when the other has the top post.

The key Defense Ministry will go to Labor's Yitzhak Rabin, who was prime minister from 1974-77. Likud will appoint the finance minister.

The talks nearly collapsed Sunday over differences Shamir and Peres said were too broad to bridge.

"I do not think that there are any such obstacles in our way, but you can never know," Shamir said Wednesday.

Both parties were under pressure to end the deadlock that has frozen efforts to cure Israel's economic problems, including an annual inflation rate of nearly 400 percent, since July 23 elections that failed to give either the Labor Party or the Likud bloc a decisive victory.

Labor narrowly won the election with 44 votes to Likud's 41, not enough to form a majority in the 120-seat Knesset. Neither party was able to form a coalition without the other.

There also was concern that if the talks failed, the country would be forced into new elections.

The breakthrough came Tuesday when Shamir backed down from a demand that Peres hand over the prime ministership after a year.

The Labor Party and the Likud bloc remained philosophically at odds over the future of Jewish settlement building in the West Bank, but reached a compromise.

Labor has advocated a freeze in new settlements while Likud wants to build more. In the compromise, Labor has agreed to uphold previous government decisions to build 27 settlements, but will delay their construction because of economic considerations.

Many Israelis fear the joint government will be unable to make strong foreign policy initiatives, including moves toward peace with Jordan.

Chernenko appears at medal ceremony

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

MOSCOW — Soviet President Kostantin U. Chernenko was shown on Soviet television Wednesday night at a medal-awarding ceremony at the Kremlin, dampening speculation about the state of his health.

His appearance after an absence from public view of more than seven weeks put to rest questions about his whereabouts by portraying him in one of the traditional ceremonial roles of the Soviet leader.

Chernenko, who turns 73 on Sept. 24, looked tan and somewhat thinner as he presented awards to three Soviet cosmonauts and read a three-minute speech from a prepared text.

While not appearing to be in worse health than before, Chernenko again exhibited the shortness of breath and slowness of movement that have led to the conclusion that he suffers from emphysema.

After reading his speech, Chernenko stood stiffly during the rest of the ceremony. Instead of pinning the medals on the cosmonauts, he handed them over in their cases, smiling woodenly as he shook their hands.

The ceremony took place Wednesday, according to the official Soviet news agency Tass. The medals were awarded to three crew members who took part in a mission to the space station Salyut-7 last July.

In his speech, Chernenko reiterated the Soviet view that there is a need to prevent a "military rivalry" in space and he challenged the United States to "display political foresight and appraise the Soviet Union's constructive approach at its true worth."

"An accord on this roblem would be vitally important to all mankind," he said. "Besides, it could in a measure infuse Soviet-American relations with elements of mutual trust they need so badly."

Chernenko last appeared on Soviet television July 13 during a meeting with U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar. Shortly afterward, it was announced that he had left Moscow for a vacation in the Crimea that was expected to last until September.

Speculation about his health began when only one announcement in his name appeared in a five-week period — a gap considered unusual even while a leader is on vacation. It culminated in reports from informed Soviet sources that Chernenko had returned to Moscow Aug. 7 and was placed under medical supervision for heart trouble. His status was unknown until his appearance Wednesday.

After the report about Chernenko's ailment was published in the Western press late last month, the Soviet press issued a series of items under his name, including an "interview" with him that appeared in Sunday's edition of the Communist Party daily Pravda.

The sudden spate of news items issued in Chernenko's name only heightened the speculation, since they resembled similar pronouncements — including a Pravda "interview" — issued last January in the name of then-President Yuri Andropov, who died in February.

Chernenko's health has been closely watched since he succeeded Andropov in February. He has needed help walking on several occasions and his speech has been halting, marked by the same shortness of breath and tendency to swallow words heard Wednesday night.

The first indication that Chernenko would make an appearance at the previously unannounced ceremony for the cosmonauts was reported Tuesday by Soviet journalist Victor Louis in accounts published in Britain and West Germany.

Chernenko's return to work had not been announced here. Asked about the leader's whereabouts at a press conference Monday, a spokesman for the Foreign Ministry said only that he was "carrying out his duties as general secretary of the Central Committee and chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet" — his formal titles as party leader and president. The answer did not address the question of whether Chernenko was in Moscow, which only a public appearance could satisfy.

Israel's ex-defense minister sues Time magazine

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Israeli defense minister Ariel Sharon says he decided to file a libel suit against Time magazine over an article implying he encouraged the massacre of Palestinian civilians because the report was a "blood libel" against Jews.

The Feb. 21, 1983, article was "one of the most terrible things that had been done to the Jewish people, to the state of Israel and to myself," Sharon said at a pretrial hearing Wednesday in his $50 million suit against Time Inc.

Sharon said he decided to file the lawsuit because, "As a Jew, I knew that it is something that will not be left because the Jews are too well experienced already with blood libels."

Blood libel is an ancient phrase used to describe accusations that Jews once killed gentiles to use their blood for Passover rituals.

Time said it based the article on a secret appendix to a report by the Kahan Commission, an Israeli panel that investigated the Lebanese Phalangists' September 1982 massacre of Palestinians in refugee camps following the murder of Lebanon's Christian president-elect, Bashir Gemayel.

Sharon was the Israeli defense minister at the time of the massacre.

Sharon contended in U.S. District Court in Manhattan that he was libeled because Time errantly quoted the undisclosed appendix as saying "Sharon also reportedly discussed with the Gemayels the need for the Phalangists to take revenge for the assassination of Bashir."

Sharon, who became a Cabinet officer without portfolio after the Kahan report was released, acknowledged that he met with Bashir Gemayel's brother, current President Amin Gemayel, and their late father, Pierre Gemayel.

Increased rents spark rioting

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Authorities today reported scattered skirmishes between police and crowds of black demonstrators who stoned and burned vehicles in several townships. Police said a total of 31 blacks have died in three days of rioting.

Lt. Henry Beck said blacks also set fire to a cafe and hurled a gasoline bomb at the house of a local black council member overnight.

Police in armored personnel carriers patrolled the boulder-littered street leading into Sharpeville township. Two thousand blacks, many of them youngsters, gathered about 250 yards away, chanting and holding placards denouncing the rent hikes that sparked the rioting.

The government is raising rent by about $3.10 on a monthly rent of about $18.60 for a four-room, cinder block house.An average black laborer makes about $12 a day.

Beck said police found the body of a black man in Sebokeng overnight and that a high school student allegedly stabbed another student to death Wednesday during unrest in Vosloorus, west of Johannesburg.

The worst rioting took place Monday in the black townships of Sharpeville, Sebokeng and Evaton, 42 miles south of Johannesburg, leaving 29 dead, thousands homeless and scores of shops destroyed and plundered.

The rioting was the most serious by blacks since the Soweto riots that spread across the country in 1976, leaving hundreds dead.

Black nationalist guerrillas called for more demonstrations later this month. South Africa's 22 million blacks are refused the right to vote, own property and travel freely.

AP Laserphoto

Blacks in Sharpsville, South Africa, protest rent hikes, which have led to rioting.

A delegation of community leaders met for eight hours Wednesday with government officials in Sharpeville over demands that the rent hikes be scrapped. The outcome of the talks was not clear.

Two bombs also exploded Wednesday, one at a power sub-station in northeastern Transvaal Province that knocked out power to thousands of homes as well as the Sun City gambling resort.

The Rand Daily Mail said a cleaning woman found the bomb at 6:45 a.m., but the device was first thought to be a part of an elevator mechanism. Two hours later, guards brought the bomb onto the lawn outside, where police detonated it at 10 a.m.

The other bomb was detonated on the lawn of the provincial Rand Supreme Court building in downtown Johannesburg in mid-morning after a security guard carried it down from the seventh floor. Police said it was timed to go off moments after courts convened at 10 a.m.

An African National Congress spokesman in Lusaka, Zambia, said in a telephone interview Wednesday that the guerrilla organization awaited word of responsibility for the courthouse bombing from its units in South Africa.

Pope: Abstinence not 'morally correct'

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Natural family planning — abstinence from sex when a woman is fertile — is not always "morally correct" for Roman Catholic couples, Pope John Paul II says.

The pontiff, in his weekly general audience Wednesday in St. Peter's Square, delivered the eighth in a series of a dozen planned lectures aimed at reinforcing the church's stand on birth control.

Citing "Humanae Vitae" (Of Human Life), the 1968 encyclical banning artificial birth control, the pope said:

"In no way was (the encyclical) unilaterally aimed at limiting or even excluding offspring. It signifies the willingness to accept even more numerous offspring..."

"The use of infertile periods in married life can become the source of abuses if the couples seek in such a way to avoid without just reasons procreation, lowering procreation below the morally correct level of births for their family," John Paul told several thousand tourists and pilgrims.

The pontiff added, "This level (of procreation) must be established not only by taking into account the good of the family and the health and financial opportunities of the married spouses, but also the good of society they belong to and the good of the church and even all humanity."

The Roman Catholic Church bans other methods of birth control, including birth control pills, condoms and interuterine devices.

Archbishop Edouard Gagnon, the head of the Pontifical Commission for the Family, told reporters the pontiff had made in-depth consultations before delivering his lectures on birth control.

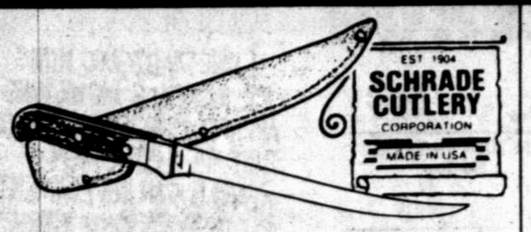

"The pontiff has looked into this question very deeply and consulted many specialists and married couples," the archbishop said.

Selling tourism

There's an ageless saying that goes something like this: "That person's really a salesman. He (or she) could sell an icebox to an Eskimo."

Along that line, researchers at Texas A&M University say the state simply doesn't have enough Eskimos. That's obvious.

It's not that tourism isn't a big industry in Texas. It is, in fact, Texas' second leading industry, coming in right behind the oil industry by contributing $13.7 billion a year to the state's economy.

But there's a lot of room for improvement. The state's tourism industry may be missing a bet by not capitalizing on the penchant of Texans and visitors to travel throughout the Lone Star State.

Carlton Van Doren, an A&M researcher, said in an Associated Press story earlier this week, "We take tourism for granted, yet in spite of two energy crises over the last decade and an inflationary economy, we are riding the crest of a spending spree that is without precedent in the world."

Van Doren's point is clear: the Texas tourist industry needs to reorganize in order to better coordinate efforts to take full advantage of the tourism boom. Almost every community in the state has tourism potential — recreational offerings such as rivers, lakes or forests, cultural events, county fairs, heritage galas. The list goes on and on.

Texas is a big state with a lot to offer, not the least of which is a beautiful and diverse landscape, extremely favorable weather conditions and friendly people. It obviously has the potential to do what numerous other states have done in the tourism field.

Van Doren has made a valid point. The state is missing the boat on tourism. It's time to change that fact.

Aquino blockbuster

The commission investigating the assassination of Philippine opposition leader Benigno Aquino Jr. is expected to release its report soon, and there is indication that it will be a blockbuster.

The report is said to charge Gen. Fabian Ver, Philippine Armed Forces chief of staff, with plotting the Aquino death. It also is said to accuse Gen. Luther Custodio, former chief of the Aviation Security Command, with passing along Ver's orders to a five-man security guard that met Aquino at the Manila airport and escorted him from a China Airlines plane to his death on the Tarmac.

Aquino was gunned down Aug. 21, 1983, as he returned to his homeland from three years of self-imposed exile in the United States. He was the strongest and most popular of those who oppose the government of President Ferdinand Marcos.

The murder of Aquino has resulted in hundreds of mass demonstrations in the Philippines. Because of the death, a visit by President Reagan to that country was canceled. And since the Aquino affair, the Philippine economy, which already was in bad shape, has taken a nosedive.

Presumably, Marcos and his wife, Imelda, will not be implicated. Many Filipinos believe that the military secretly arranged the slaying because they considered it in the best interests of Marcos, seriously ill at the time.

Marcos, 66, seems to have recovered his health and still, after 19 years as president, holds on to his office with a tight grasp. Opposition candidates won about a third of the assembly seats in the spring elections, but their success seems not to have taken power from the Marcos administration — in fact it has gained a more democratic appearance.

Marcos is still the strongman. He even talks of running for reelection in 1987. If he is serious, what he must do at the moment is see to it that the Aquino commission report is made public and those accused brought to trial quickly.

Another View:

Protecting people

People should be able to live without having to constantly worry about personal safety.

But the results of a recent Media General/Associated Press survey indicates that the contrary is the case for some Americans. Forty-four percent of the people questioned in the survey said they kept guns in their homes for protection, and one of every 10 said he carried a weapon. Thirty-five percent said they were afraid to go out after dark in downtown areas.

Such fear diminishes the quality of life. It hits hardest among groups most vulnerable to crime, including the elderly, minority groups and some people with lower income and less education.

Implicit in such findings is the feeling that government — local, state and federal — has not been doing enough to ensure that innocent, law-abiding citizens are adequately protected from criminals.

Citizens who feel so threatened by crime that they alter their lifestyle cannot be expected to look with much favor on programs that appear to expand the rights of criminals.

People working in the criminal justice system should be aware that there is a deep-seated resentment of the disturbance of citizens' peace by criminals. Rightly or wrongly, many people want more attention paid to protecting people from being victimized.

Public officials who ignore this sentiment run the risk of being out of touch.

Aspens axed for lumber firm

WASHINGTON — Louisiana Pacific Corp. is nuzzling up to the public trough again, with a friendly nudge from the U.S. Forest Service. The giant lumber company buys more government-owned timber than anyone else, and has a long history of preferential treatment from the Forest Service, which happens to be headed by Louisiana Pacific's former general counsel, John Crowell.

Jack Anderson

I've reported in the past how Crowell lobbied successfully for a $600 million bailout of the big lumber companies, allowing them an interest-free extension on overpriced bids that turned sour in the housing-industry recession.

Not long after this act of corporate welfare, Louisiana Pacific posted record profits.

The Forest Service also stalled a congressional investigation into charges that the company fixed prices and rigged bids on government timber in Alaska. The Justice Department dropped a criminal case against the company despite a federal judge's finding in a civil suit that Louisiana Pacific and another lumber company "conspired to restrain trade and to monopolize the timber industry in southeastern Alaska."

The latest chapter in the history of Louisiana Pacific's cozy relationship with the federal government involves its ambitious expansion into the production of waferboard, a plywood substitute made of wood chips bonded with resin. The beauty of waferboard is that it can be made out of trees that are otherwise commercially worthless, and thus cheap.

One such tree is the aspen, previously valued chiefly for its brilliant autumn foliage. With the potential boom in waferboard, aspens have now become well worth harvesting.

The Forest Service had a modest plan to harvest 2 million board feet of aspen in national forests in Colorado, cutting down mature trees that could be a fire hazard.

According to internal Forest Service documents seen by my associate John Dillon, the 2 million board feet ballooned to an astounding 50 million soon after Louisiana Pacific told the agency of its plan to build a waferboard plant near Montrose, Colo.

In one internal memorandum, a Forest Service official candidly acknowledged that the 25-fold increase in the harvest was "in response to Louisiana Pacific's request for aspen."

He wrote that the cost data justifying the increase "is based on information as developed from recent contacts by Louisiana Pacific regarding possible new markets for aspen and expansion into this area with construction of a new mill facility."

A Louisiana Pacific spokesman painted a different picture of the company's role in the increased aspen harvest, saying: "The company is in there not to maximize an asset but to carry out an aspen management plan for the Forest Service. We are in there in response to a Forest Service need."

Two environmental groups in Colorado don't buy this benign view of wholesale aspen cutting.

"By claiming a need to manage aspen, the Forest Service is disguising the real project, which is to provide wood to Louisiana Pacific," they wrote in an appeal for a full environmental impact study.

TAXPAYERS' QUIZ: I have prepared a small quiz for taxpayers, whose annual contributions to the Treasury are being massively wasted. The title of today's quiz is, "Who Said That?" You'll find the answers at the end.

1. Who said: "It is almost subversive not to want to spend government money. The real pressure we get is to undertake more projects to spend more money"?

2. What president warned that higher taxes provide "relief not for the needy but for the greedy"?

3. What group issued this statement: "National security rests partly on economic strength, which is threatened by the deficit"?

4. Who described the effects of the projected $200 billion annual deficit in this language: "After two years, you've added $400 billion to the national debt. So that's $40 billion in annual interest payments. Three years, it's $600 billion and $60 billion — and I haven't even done the compounding"?

5. What famous American denounced "the doctrine that a national debt is a national blessing"?

6. Who said: "We citizens are the ones who elect America's powerful leaders, representatives and senators. We can blow the whistle on their actions and become citizens against waste"?

Answers: 1. Adm. Hyman Rickover; 2. Franklin D. Roosevelt; 3. a corporate group called Bipartisan Budget Appeal; 4. Charles Schultze, President Carter's chief economic adviser; 5. Daniel Webster; 6. Peter Grace. (To join, write to Citizens Against Waste, P.O. Box 1000, Ben Franklin Station, Washington, D.C. 20044).

LEMONAID UPDATE: Dozens of car buyers who feel they got stuck with "lemons" and are trying to get their money back have joined the ranks of "LemonAid," the consumer information network I first wrote about last April. It was started by David and Minka Goldstein of Bethesda, Md.

The Goldsteins succeeded in getting General Motors to buy back their lemon for $10,300 through an arbitration program run by the Better Business Bureau.

They decided to pass on the lessons they learned with an information packet on the arbitration process. Updated with the experience of others, the LemonAid guidelines are now in their third revision.

Readers interested in further information should send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Goldsteins at 9307 Linden Ave., Bethesda, MD 20814.

EDWIN FEULNER

Lawmakers should abide by law

It's not all unity within the ranks of Democratic party faithful, Rep. Dante B. Fascell (D-Fla.) demonstrated recently, when he broke with party standard-bearer Walter Mondale and House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill on U.S. aid to Latin America.

Edwin Feulner

In an interview with the Washington Times, the chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee said he viewed Soviet and Cuban intervention in the region a serious threat. "... The Soviets have not slowed down one bit in building their military" machine, the 30-year House veteran said.

"There is no question that the existence of Cuba as a Communist state backed by the Soviet Union is a political and a military problem for all the countries in the hemisphere," he said. "And when you add to that the support for organizations that are trying to undermine democratic institutions throughout the area, then you have a problem of considerable concern."

Rep. Fascell said he does not favor U.S. military involvement in Central America, but added: "I have supported sending advisers to El Salvador. I supported military assistance to Honduras. I supported the military advisers in Honduras. I supported assistance to the Contras."

Candidate Mondale isn't as easy to pin down, and Speaker O'Neill has been instrumental in orchestrating the on-again, off-again money-and-aid game that has kept anti-Communist forces in Nicaragua and El Salvador living like charity cases.

The U.S. government has fully and dramatically documented the extent of Soviet and Cuban involvement in El Salvador, Grenada, and other Latin hot-spots. That's no longer the issue.

The issue is what we do about it.

And on that, let me suggest that the lawyers in the U.S. Congress instead of spending all their time gussying themselves up for the boob-tube cameras open their law books. Because there they will find Public Law 87-723, approved Oct. 3, 1962, and signed into law by President John F. Kennedy.

This law binds the president:

"(a) to prevent by whatever means may be necessary, including the use of arms, the Marxist-Leninist regime in Cuba from extending, by force or the threat of force, its aggressive or subversive activities to any part of this hemisphere;

"(b) to prevent in Cuba the creation or use of an externally supported military capability endangering the security of the United States; and

"(c) to work with the Organization of American States and with freedom-loving Cubans to support the aspirations of the Cuban people for self-determination."

The Cuban- and Soviet-backed Marxist regime in Nicaragua already has the largest army in Central America, with more than 102,000 men in uniform. In addition, Cuba maintains approximately 9,000 advisers in Nicaragua, including 3,000 military and security personnel.

Isn't it time for U.S. lawmakers to stop their Made-for-TV grandstanding and start obeying the law of the land?

ART BUCHWALD

Honoree doesn't feel that way!

After a quiet summer, the "Man and Woman of the Year" dinner invitations are starting to roll in again. Honoring a distinguished man or woman is now one of the most popular ways of raising money for a worthy cause. The only trouble is that there are so many causes that it is hard to choose which one you want to get involved with. The people who run charity functions don't take rejection easily.

Art Buchwald

Last spring I got a call from a guy named Marty, who said he was telephoning for Jonathan Leverage, president of the International Chewing Gum Wrapper Corp., who was chairman of the dinner committee to honor Woody Wonderful as "Man of the Year" for what he'd done for the Princess Di Disabled Polo Players Retirement Home.

Marty wanted to know if I would serve on the honorary dinner committee with Dinah Shore, Howard Cosell, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kissinger and the ambassador from Sri Lanka, along with 100 of Woody's closest friends. He assured me there was no work or obligation involved.

I agreed and stupidly believed that was the end of it.

Three weeks later I got the call from Marty, who said the tables weren't moving and was wondering if I could possibly unload a number of them at $2,500 each as a favor to my buddy Woody.

"You said there was nothing I had to do when I allowed you to use my name on the dinner committee," I yelled.

"Woody's not asking you to do anything but make a few phone calls to friends to insure the dinner doesn't go into the red."

"I'm not going to sell any tables."

"Well, what about taking one for yourself?"

"I don't want to take a table for $2,500. I'll buy two tickets and that's it."

"All right, but I can't promise who you'll sit with, because if you don't take an entire table you could get stuck with some awfully tacky people."

"For 500 bucks, I'll have to take my chances."

"Okay, now you want to talk about the program?"

"What program?"

"The printed program honoring Woody Wonderful which will be handed out at the dinner. A full gold page tribute costs $5,000, a silver page $3,000, and a black and white page $1,500."

"I don't want an advertisement in the program."

"If you don't take a page we can't invite you to the Platinum Circle reception after the dinner in Woody's suite."

"I don't care about going to the reception. I'm not even going to the dinner."

"If you don't show up Woody's going to be terribly hurt. He told me personally he was hoping to see you there."

As luck would have it I ran into Woody the next day and said, "I'm sorry I can't be at your dinner next week at the Waldorf."

"What dinner?"

"The one where they've made you 'Man of the Year.'"

"Holy smoke, did my staff get me into another one of those deals without telling me?"

"Didn't you even know you were doing a benefit for the Disabled Polo Players Retirement Home?"

"Who can keep track of what my stupid manager lines up for me?"

"Marty said you told him it was the greatest honor you had ever gotten in your life."

"Who's Marty?"

"The guy who called and said you'd never talk to me again if I didn't come to your dinner."

Reagan to address B'nai B'rith

President Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, home from his first formal fall campaign trip, prepared today to address U.S. policy in the Middle East, a subject he never mentioned on the road.

Reagan was scheduled to speak to the B'nai B'rith convention in Washington, and aides said they expected him to stress his administration's strong ties to Israel and a willingness to work with the new Israeli government.

The president also was expected to make some mention before the socially conscious Jewish organization of his recent remarks regarding the relationship between politics and religion.

Democratic candidate Walter Mondale was preceding Reagan by three hours in speaking to the Jewish group.

Reagan's telling an ecumenical prayer breakfast in Dallas two weeks ago that opponents of school prayer are guilty of intolerance and that religion and politics are historically and necessarily related prompted charges by Democrat Walter F. Mondale that Reagan had failed to keep church and state separate.

That is a particularly sensitive issue among Jews, who constitute a small but influential minority in the United States and sometimes see their interests as being jeopardized by the Christian majority.

One official, speaking on the condition he would not be named, said the administration is quite pleased with the present state of its relations with Israel, but because of the sensitive problem of balancing U.S. relations with the Arab world, "it's not something that we go around talking about a lot."

Reagan, the official said, hasn't talked about the Middle East in part because the United States has been careful to avoid any appearance of partisanship in Israel's elections and the lengthy negotiations that have followed in an attempt to form a new government.

On the campaign trail, Reagan often boasts of foreign policy successes, including his dispatch of U.S. troops to Grenada to oust the strife-torn leftist government there and bring home American medical students on the tiny Caribbean island.

But he ignores the Middle East, to the point that in one speech, when he talked about the Marines being diverted to Grenada, he said they had been on their way to the Mediterranean — without mentioning they were on their way to Lebanon.

During Reagan's four-day campaign trip to California, Utah and Illinois, the president stressed his optimism for the future and repeatedly told his audiences he foresees a time of prosperity, progress and peace through strength.

He never mentioned Mondale by name and rarely referred to his Democratic opponent, leaving it for Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and Vice President George Bush to challenge the Democratic contender's platform and political record.

On the last leg of his trip Wednesday in Chicago, Reagan defended his commitment to civil rights by saying his parents raised him to believe "that there's no sin greater than prejudice or bigotry."

"I was fighting for civil rights before they called it civil rights," the president said in a speech to a mostly white audience of the Economic Club of Chicago.

"I know that there's been a lot of criticism that somehow I am opposed to civil rights," Reagan replied when asked in a written question about his commitment to affirmative action.

Teachers in seven states on strike

Associated Press

Striking teachers returned to work today in at least two school districts, but contract disputes kept more than 10,000 educators out of classrooms in seven states, giving 150,000 students an extended summer break.

A Rhode Island judge was expected to rule today on a request for an injunction to force 56 stiking teachers back to work in the Exeter-West Greenwich school district. About 950 students have been on extended vacation since Aug. 29, when classes were to have begun.

Illinois continued to have the most striking teachers today — 5,192 — even though 24,700 teachers in Chicago began the school year for 400,000 students Wednesday while working under an expired contract and 94 teachers in the LaSalle-Peru district ended a week-long strike.

More teachers opted to stay away from schoolrooms Wednesday in Illinois, Michigan, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Nicholas Vanderbilt

Memorial planned for Vanderbilt

NEW YORK (AP) — A memorial service will be held Saturday for Nicholas Vanderbilt, who was believed dead after disappearing on a mountain climbing expedition in western Canada.

Vanderbilt, 25, of Austin, Texas, son of racehorse owner and breeder Alfred G. Vanderbilt, and Francis Glenhill, 29, of Berkeley, Calif. were last seen Aug. 22, one day after they began their ascent of Mount Robson, according to the Vanderbilt family.

The two, described as expert mountain climbers, were reported missing Aug. 25.

The route was described as "highly technical" requiring special climbing gear. It is the most often used path to the top of Mount Robson, but not the most difficult.

Search efforts were hindered by heavy snow on the mountain in the Canadian Rockies. Constable Hugh Menzies of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in Valemont, British Columbia, has said chances the men remained alive were "remote."

An aerial search Sunday failed to turn up any trace of the men, and heavy snow has forced cancellation of ground search, he said.

The official search was joined by a private team of climbers sent to the area by Vanderbilt's family, said Jim Parlatore, a family spokesman.

Vanderbilt, a 1980 graduate of Harvard University and a descendant of Cornelius Vanderbilt, founder of the New York Central Railroad, was a freelance writer.

Vanderbilt's father a resident of Oyster Bay, N.Y., was voted chairman of the New York Racing Commission in 1970. His stables have produced many leading race horses, including Native Dancer, who won 21 of 22 races in the early 1950s.

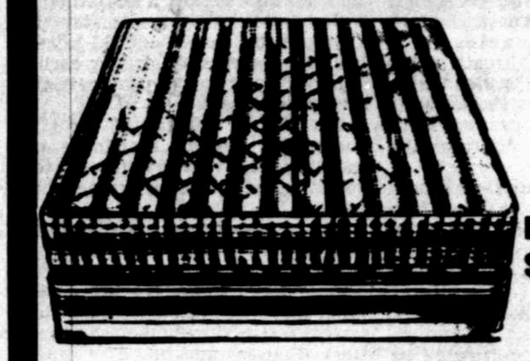

The memorial service will be held in Bayville.

Anti-terrorism agency reports evidence of plots against athletes

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The director of a new U.S. anti-terrorism office says agents collected substantial evidence of terrorist plots against Olympic athletes this summer.

Robert W. Dubose, director of the Global Issues Office of the U.S. State Department, said Wednesday, "We had something like 200 separate pieces of intelligence indicating threats to various athletes and various people at the Olympics."

Dubose, speaking to a reporter after addressing a current events club, added: "That's my own personal estimate. Nobody will come out with an official figure because nobody counted them up. That's a guess."

There were no attacks at the Olympic Games in Los Angeles because of "pro-active measures" by intelligence and law enforcement agencies, Dubose said. Such tactics commonly include "elaborate defenses" and letting terrorists know their plans are known, he said.

Intelligence agencies have revealed little about threats at the Olympics, which the Soviet Union and some of its allies boycotted amid claims the United States would be unable to assure the safety of athletes.

Dubose said the State Department formed the Global Issues Office four months ago, in time for the Olympics, as part of a U.S. counter-terrorism "wave" following attacks abroad.

He said the Global Issues Office is assembling a data bank on international terrorist groups, drawing on its own sources and U.S. and foreign agencies.

The office passes its information to other departments and to policy makers, Dubose said. It not only provided useful information at the Olympics, but helped end the hijacking of a Venezuelan airliner earlier this year by providing profiles of the terrorists, he said.

The 20-year veteran of the U.S. foreign service said that in recent months he has viewed numerous terrorist training camps from a distance.

"As we're sitting here...they're training all over the world," he said.

The well-organized facilities in the Middle East, Spain, Northern Ireland, Cuba and elsewhere, provide quality instruction on the use of military weapons and bombs.

De Lorean's bankruptcy proceedings will start

DETROIT (AP) — Lawyers for John De Lorean, who said they would be tied up by a new federal investigation into the former automaker, lost a plea to continue a postponement of bankruptcy proceedings against De Lorean.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Ray Reynolds on Wednesday lifted a stay he issued March 6 because De Lorean was about to be tied up in court by cocaine conspiracy charges. De Lorean, 59, was acquitted on all counts Aug. 16 after a four-month trial.

De Lorean's attorneys confirmed Wednesday that he faces a second investigation, by a federal grand jury here, over his handling of company funds.

Creditors of the failed De Lorean Motor Co. allege that De Lorean diverted more than $17 million from the company.

Judge's wife sentenced

Sara Sharp

HAMMOND, Ind. (AP) — A judge rejected a defense plea for a suspended sentence and ordered a woman who pleaded guilty to passing probation information to a parolee jailed for up to 18 months.

Sara Roberts Sharp, the wife of U.S. District Judge Allen Sharp, admitted she gave Michael J. Weatherford information on 15 different occasions about investigations into his affairs.

Mrs. Sharp, 43, was not married to Sharp at the time when she gave out the information while she was a clerk in the U.S. Probation Office in Lafayette in 1980 and 1981.

Family sues religious group

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A family that sold its dairy herd and farm equipment for $95,000 and turned over the money to an Arkansas religious commune has filed suit to get their money back, lawyers for the family say.

Carl and Diane Bredberg say the Realife Ranch also paid them and their two children a total of $8 a week for their labor and are suing for back wages, attorney Elton Kuderer said in opening arguments Tuesday.

Union talks to resume

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service and its two largest employee unions will soon return to the bargaining table in a fresh attempt to negotiate a new contract for a half million postal workers.

The Postal Service signed an agreement with the American Postal Workers Union and the National Association of Letter Carriers on Wednesday that waives further fact-finding and commits the parties to new face-to-face negotiations.

Leaders of the two unions, which have been working without a contract since July 21, have said they don't anticipate calling a strike, which would be illegal.

Gay to forgo hearing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Saying it was "in the best interest of our client and his family," a lawyer for the father of slain singer Marvin Gaye said Marvin Gay Sr. has waived his right to a preliminary hearing on charges of shooting his son to death after an argument.

The father, who is recovering after doctors removed a walnut-sized tumor from his pituitary gland, was ordered to appear in Superior Court on Sept. 20 to be arraigned.

Man indicted fourth time

MINNEAPOLIS — John Clark Donahue, the Minneapolis Children's Theatre founder already charged with molesting three male students, now faces a grand jury indictment accusing him of sexually abusing a fourth boy.

A Hennepin County grand jury on Wednesday indicted Donahue, 46, on one count of second-degree criminal sexual conduct allegedly involving a 15-year-old student in 1982.

McCutchen's beaded brow just false sign

Monterey's Odom remembers last year's 30-7 score

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — New Midland High coach Doug McCutchen shuttles his Bulldogs into Lowery Field here at 8 p.m. Friday night for his MHS coaching debut against an angry band of Monterey Plainsmen and McCutchen was seen sweating as early as Tuesday.

Well, McCutchen really wasn't dropping beads of prespiration over the Plainsmen. He had just finished his daily run around the Memorial Stadium track. The real truth is that McCutchen is looking forward to Friday.

"I'm really pleased with where we are at this point in time," said McCutchen. "Our defense is playing very well at this point. Our offense has executed at times, but we've got to do a better job at reading and catching the football. But with no more repetition than we've had, I'm pleased with where we are. It's time to play a game."

BUT JAMES Odom's Plainsmen may not be in a very receptive mood for McCutchen's debut come Friday. There is that matter of losing to Midland High last year by a 30-7 margin. Odom is entering his 21st season at the Monterey helm and owns a 148-57-9 overall record. He hasn't lost many by a 30-7 margin.

"Yea, I remember last year," says Odom. "It wasn't much fun and I hope our kids remember it. The only trouble is that we don't have many people back from last year to remember it."

McCutchen countered, "I've talked with James several times since I've come to Midland and he never fails to mention last year. I don't think he liked getting beat like that. But he has a typical Monterey team this year, which means they will be very physical and pretty big. The one thing I've noticed is that they shift much more and run a one-back offense some and those are things that are different for an Odom team from in the past."

Monterey has three returning starters on offense and five on defense, but Odom says, "We are still very inexperienced because we have so many new people in the skill positions. We have five sophomores on the varsity this season and one is starting."

That starting sophomore happens to be 185-pound tailback James Goolsby. Junior quarterback David Coleman, senior wingback Tyson Hodges and senior fullback Greg Rowe were not starters last year either.

"Goolsby is going to be a good back for us at some point in time, but he's young," said Odom. McCutchen said, "Goolsby ran an 11.1 as a freshman last year, so he has some great speed."

McCUTCHEN, however, would just as soon Monterey run with the football.

"We must keep our defense aware of the pass because Monterey can throw the football. I would rather make them drive for anything they get, and if that happens, I think we'll be OK. Our offense needs more consistency and needs to control the ball more since our kicking game is a question mark right now. The defense will have to take up the slack until the kicking game is where we want it to be."

Odom is also worried about the MHS passing game and rightly so.

"They have a new quarterback (Matt Marcum), but he can throw and they have those three great receivers in (Allan) Foret, (Darrell) Davis and (Darren) Thorpe. They can kill you in a hurry. I remember," said Odom.

Foret, a wide receiver last year, led District 4-5A with 41 catches for 665 yards and six touchdowns. He also completed one of two passes for 61 yards and a TD and ran for an additional 54 yards. As a flanker this year in McCutchen's new Veer attack, he may get a chance to run more.

Tight end Davis caught 22 passes last year for 250 yards and five TDs while Thorpe caught three for 69 yards.

But eyes Friday will be on the MHS running backs. Halfbacks Keith Byrd and Jake Madrid didn't carry the ball in 1983 and neither is a speed burner. Much of the MHS success this year may hindge on how these backs perform in 1984, but both had excellent outings against Lubbock Coronado in a scrimmage.

MONTEREY WON its last five games last year to earn a first place tie in District 3-5A, but missed the playoffs on a four-way coin flip.

"I wish that the way we ended last year had some carryover value, but our backs weren't running for us during that stretch," said Odom.

McCutchen isn't making a big deal about his coaching debut at Midland High.

"I'm excited. Anytime you come into a new district, you're a little anxious, but I'm more concerned about how our kids perform and not what Monterey does. We can workout only so long and then you have to play. And that's where we are."

For MHS fans who are making the Lubbock trek and can't wait for the 8 p.m. season opener, they might consider taking in the Lowry Field doubleheader. Lubbock Dunbar will play Lubbock High at 4 p.m. Friday.

Franco Harris arrives in Seattle to join the NFL Seahawks and will now set sights on the 360 yards he needs to break Jim Brown's all time rushing record.

Harris gets chance for 363 yards

SEATTLE (AP) — Franco Harris, only 363 yards shy of breaking Jim Brown's National Football League career rushing record, reached an agreement for a contract with the Seattle Seahawks Wednesday, just two days after the Seahawks lost star running back Curt Warner with a severe knee injury.

The announcement was made at a hastily called news conference at the Seahawks' offices in Kirkland, after Harris, 34, flew into Seattle-Tacoma International Airport with his agent, Bart Beier of Pittsburgh.

"This was the worst-kept secret in football," said Mike McCormack, president and general manager of the Seahawks.

"We're just real happy to have Franco here," said Seattle head Coach Chuck Knox. "I've been a big admirer of his for many years."

"I hope I look good in blue," a smiling Harris said. "I'm real excited about being here. I like the enthusiasm and attitude here."

Asked whether he would be able to play Sunday against the San Diego Chargers in Seattle's second regular season game, Harris replied, "hopefully. I feel good. I feel in good shape and ready to go."

Harris played all 12 of his previous NFL seasons in Pittsburgh, where he amassed 11,950 yards rushing and 91 touchdowns on 2,881 carries in 165 games.

But Harris, caught in a contract squabble with the Steelers, was released by Pittsburgh on Aug. 20. None of the NFL's 27 other clubs picked him up on waivers.

"That thought did pass my mind," the 6-foot-2, 225-pound Harris said when asked whether he thought he wasn't going to get a chance to break Brown's all-time record. "Will I get a chance to play? I didn't know for sure."

Neither the Seahawks nor Beier would disclose terms of the contract.

Harris said he signed a one-year contract with the Seahawks. Beier, a lawyer, said he worked out the deal in a 90-minute meeting with McCormack Wednesday.

"The contract I negotiated was comparable to the one I just about negotiated with the Steelers," Beier said.

The Steelers reportedly offered Harris $557,000 to play football with them this season. Harris was in the option year of a contract that would have paid him $385,000.

"As it turned out, I'm playing football and I'm happy playing football," Harris said. "Our goal here now is to go to the Super Bowl."

Beier said, "I always thought Franco would get a chance. Why wasn't he picked up on waivers? Well, a lot of teams were set already and the word was he had a good salary offer from the Steelers. You're talking a half million dollars. If the Steelers weren't going to give him that kind of money ...

"But everything did work out, didn't it?"

Beier said he initially talked about a two-year contract with the Steelers, but then it became clear to him that his client did not fit in the Pittsburgh picture for the 1985 season.

"The Steelers wanted to give us a one-year contract with an option year, but my client felt he didn't want to sign it based on the fact he didn't figure in their plans for 1985," Beier said.

The Seahawks' offense received a shattering blow in Monday's 33-0 regular season opening victory over the Cleveland Browns when Warner suffered ligament damage to his right knee on the Kingdome's AstroTurf.

He underwent surgery at Seattle's Swedish Hospital Tuesday.

Warner, Seattle's first-round draft choice from Penn State in 1983, led the Seahawks to the American Football Conference title game last season and captured the AFC rushing championship with 1,449 yards.

Perez thinks days are numbered with Reds

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds first baseman Tony Perez thinks his loudly applauded return to Riverfront Stadium will be short-lived.

Perez, acquired by the Reds before the start of the season, thinks he can still hit at age 42, and he wants to continue his career with a team that can use him. Perez has been relegated to part-time duty and pinch hitting, and doesn't think he fits into the Reds' rebuilding plans under player-manager Pete Rose.

"I'm on my way out here," Perez said. "I don't think they will offer me a contract. Maybe some other teams will, maybe in the American League as a DH (designated hitter) or something.

"I know Pete and he knows me. He is trying to build something for the future. I don't know where I can help right now."

Perez and Rose helped direct the Reds to World Championships in 1975 and 1976. The Reds traded Perez to Montreal after the second World Series title, and reacquired him from Philadelphia last December.

Perez always has been popular in Cincinnati, receiving standing ovations when he returned with opposing teams. His return this season was hailed by Reds fans who talked about "old times." Perez said he doesn't want to talk about past feats, but create new ones.

"The good old days," Perez said, scornfully. "To hell with the past. To hell with the old times ... I'm here because I still think I can play. I'm here because I want to contribute. I can still play. I can still hit."

He doesn't mind being reminded of the "Big Red Machine" of the 1970s, but he doesn't want to live in the past. Perez said he'd rather talk more about the present, such as his game-winning homer in a Reds' victory over Pittsburgh last Saturday.

"Even the other night when I hit the home run, it was the same thing. Everyone was saying, 'That's just the way you used to hit.' Used to? I had just done it."

Alcorn wins, so will Permian

There has already been one major mistake heading into the 1984 high school football season as Midland Lee fan Scotty Alcorn will tell you. And here it is time to pick the winners and losers before the teams even take the field.

Since this is a no-win situation at best, it's time to get Scotty off my back. He has good reason to shout for a retraction.

It seems that I mentioned that Scotty blew a fact recently at Lee's barbecue rally. He said that Lee had not lost a game in Odessa's Ratliff Stadium. I had the nerve to say Lee lost a game by a 9-7 count to Permian. Right score, wrong year.

I got confused somewhere down the line, but Lee didn't even play in Ratliff in 1982 when the stadium opened. The 9-7 loss to Permian was played at old W.T. Barrett Stadium. Sorry, Scotty. You were right and that's what makes it so hard to swallow. I thought I had you where I wanted you and you come out smelling like a rose...well, maybe not a rose.

Anyway, Lee has won all three games played in Ratliff and Scotty wins again. But I'll win in the end. The man with the typewriter always does.

So now, on with another losing effort. Preseason picking in District 4-5A is at best treacherous. Since I hit the 1983 winners on the nose by picking Permian and Lee in order of finish, the chances of repeating are even more slim. But the job carries certian hazards, so here goes.

1. Odessa Permian: Old Mojo doesn't look like the best on paper, but the Panthers have played very few games on paper. Until someone can prove differently, Permian is the district favorite. Permian is always the district favorite.

2. San Angelo: Now the Bobcats do look best on paper. Just look at the names back for San Angelo — Rodney Anthony, Tim Reibe, Bevins Hoffman, Scott Ledet and Brian Ross. Add in an unbeaten JV unit and you see why Bobcats now have wings. Still, the Bobcats have to prove their worth on the field.

3. Midland Lee: The Rebels were the surprise team in the state in 1983, but 55 seniors are gone from that state finals march. For anyone else, this would be a rebuilding year, but with Walter Jones and Tyrone Thurman, Lee will score points. However, the schedule says Lee is in trouble. They will have to face San Angelo and Permian in first three district games on the road. Another playoff berth if they can win those.

4. Midland High: No one is picking the 'Dawgs to finish this high, but Doug McCutchen's new approach may be what MHS needs to start flirting with playoff hopes. Receivers, who can catch baseballs bare-handed, are the strength, but where are the running backs? That will be the overall key.

5. Abilene High: Coach Don Cumpton has now had a year of experience in 4-5A and everyone expects the Eagles to be improved. Good skill people return and many are thinking AHS will be a real thorn to all title hopefuls.

6. Odessa High: The Bronchos have gone 20 years without a title, but everyone will tell you that coach Jerry Millsapps' teams are never a pushover. OHS is physical, but young this time around. They'll wait at least another year.

7. Abilene Cooper: I can't help but pull for new Cooper boss Mike Garrison since he was once an assistant at Midland Lee, but the Cougar schedule is tough. Still, quarterback Doug Hadley, who threw for just under 1,300 yards last year, is back and deadly. Defense may be lacking, so you'll have to outscore the Cougs.

8. Big Spring: The Steers play Snyder Friday night and that may be the season for Big Spring. However, defense is the big plus and that should keep the Steers in a lot of games. Still, there are too many guns ahead of them.

So much for preseason picks. If it turns out this way, let me know. Otherwise, tell Scotty Alcorn. He'll let me know.

McCamey, Iraan battle in area's first shootout

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

The guessing game used to be called 20 questions. The modern man has Trivial Pursuit.

But Friday, the game will be show and tell. The high school football season kicks off in Texas, and as usual each team has concerns as the time to put up or shut up approaches.

Three of the eight teams covered by the Reporter-Telegram earned playoff berths a year ago. Only one, the McCamey Badgers of District 8-AA, are favored to return to post-season competition.

The Badgers have a stern test awaiting them Friday when they meet the Iraan Braves. Entering the tiny town 70 miles southwest of here, an ominous sign reads: "You are now entering Badger Country. Proceed with caution." While class A Iraan won't be afraid of the Badgers, they will be respectful of the team that rolled to an 11-4 year before losing to eventual state champion Boyd in the playoff quarterfinals.

Iraan enters the game ranked sixth in the state by Texas Football magazine.

McCamey's district includes four of the schools in the area, the others being Stanton, Reagan County/Big Lake, and newcomer Greenwood.

Little Greenwood is growing. The Rangers claimed their first-ever football district title a year ago in District 7-A, but the University Interscholastic League has passed them to the next grade. Consequently, Greenwood is an underdog in its first year of AA ball.

Area Football Roundup

The Rangers return to All-District players in quarterback Chad Longley and Fullback Roger Smith, who stampeded to over 1,500 yards rushing in 1983. Both will adequately carry their weight and then some. But the Rangers still have an entire front wall of linemen that aren't experienced. Greenwood starts the 1984 campaign at Ozona. Ozona was only 3-7 in District 6-AAA last year, but the Lions did trounce McCamey at McCamey by a 46-21 count. The Rangers are all having a birthday party Friday night.

The Stanton Buffaloes shuffled offenses a season ago and had an inconsistent 4-6 record. The Buffs this year have a little team, but the Buffs have settled into the program guided by coach Dale Ruth. The Buffs and Greenwood will gun for McCamey and pre-season favorite Big Lake.

Stanton opens the year with Tahoka, who the Buffs beat last year. Tahoka suffered through a dismal 1-9 record last year and dropped down from the AAA classification. The Buffs should start off with a positive attitude.

Big Lake was 2-8 last year, but had a very young team that suffered a string of one-point losses. The Owls are talent-laden, but have yet to win big. Coach Ronnie Reeger's first Reagan County squad enters the year with the District's watchful eyes staring at them.

The Owls are traditionally late bloomers, and things appear to be set up for more of the same. Big Lake has four AAA schools on their non-district schedule, but Robert Lee isn't one of them and that is who the Owls host Friday.

ANDREWS AND Lamesa are two schools in the same district and in the same boat. Both look to be better than the units that finished near the bottom of the standings in the rough and ready District 2-AAAA.

Andrews compiled a 6-3-1 seasonal showing, but that was only good enough to garner a fifth place finish in the loop. Lamesa was 2-8 a year ago after a horrendous 1-19 effort the two seasons previous. Second-year coach Clyde Noonkester has righted the ship, apparently, although the Tornadoes will have to do a lot of huffing and puffing to blow anyone's house down in the 2-4A.

The Tors open with Levelland, and the Lobos have steadily improved after a winless year in 1981. Last year they were 4-6, so Lamesa will be tested.

Andrews has a bunch of new faces in the lineup, and one of them could be sophomore Louis Clay. Clay and Danny Neighbors have split time working at the quarterback slot, but Neighbors has the edge thus far. Neighbors is a veteran of the Scar Wars that typify the district, and has shown the most consistency running coach David Visentine's option offense.

The Mustangs start the year at Brownfield.

IN CRANE, coach Rickey White has packed away the mementos from a sterling 11-1-1 year in 1983. The Golden Cranes lost its' most productive crop of seniors in a long time, but they still have enough weaponry to make a run for the District 7-AAA crown.

The Cranes open at Fort Stockton, and the jump in classification coupled with a renewed feeling in Fort Stockton is a deadly mix. Ft. Stockton had a down year last year after being picked for the favored role in District 2-AAAA. But the talent remains. Crane has a tough road ahead, at least this week.

Rankin started the 1983 campaign as if football was an intramural sport. But coach Dwayne Turner's Red Devils regrouped and grew up in time to win three of their last seven in District 6-A. The most impressive aspect of that off-year total is the fact that Wink and Iraan are two of the district's best teams and two of the best class A schools in Texas.

Rankin opens at Eldorado, and even though they are moving up to play an AA school, the Devils could be ornery. At least this crew will put up a fight.

Canada's Carling Bassett hits a winner against Hana Mandlikova Wednesday in U.S. Open.

Youngster stuns Mats Wilander

U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Young Pat Cash of Australia continued the rash of upsets that struck the U.S. Open Tennis Championships Wednesday, shocking fourth-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden 7-6, 6-4, 2-6, 6-3 and moved into the men's singles semifinals.

Earlier, Canada's Carling Bassett upset third-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia and Australia's Wendy Turnbull ousted No. 4 Pam Shriver in the women's singles.

Also reaching the semifinals was six-time women's champion Chris Evert Lloyd.

Lloyd, seeded second this year, defeated Sylvia Hanika of West Germany 6-2, 6-3, while No. 13 Turnbull upset Shriver 2-6, 6-3, 6-3 and No. 14 Bassett surprised Mandlikova 6-4, 6-3.

IN THE semifinals, Lloyd will play the 16-year-old Bassett, while Turnbull, 31, will face Martina Navratilova.

In another night match, Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl, the No. 2 seed, defeated fifth-seeded Andres Gomez of Ecuador, with the winner moving on to play Cash.

Cash, at 19 the best prospect from Australia in more than a decade, kept the pressure on Wilander, taking the net at every chance, forcing the Swede to thread his passing shots down the line.

Cash also was able to trade ground strokes with Wilander, the 1982 French Open and 1983 Australia Open champion who entered this tournament after recovering from a wrist injury.

Cash took the opening-set tiebreaker 7-3, winning six of the first eight points, then broke the 20-year-old Swede in the 10th game of the second set to take a 2-0 lead.

But Wilander, who won nine tournaments last year — more than any player on the men's tour — was not about to quietly go away. He found the range with his lob shots and his passing shots off both sides, taking a 3-0 lead. Then, after Cash won two straight games, Wilander won the next three games to capture the third set.

The two battled evenly in the fourth set, with the 15th-seeded Cash finally breaking Wilander's service in the eighth game. It was the only break he needed to wrap up the victory and a semifinal berth — the first for an Australian since 1974 when both John Newcombe and Ken Rosewall reached the final four.

John McEnroe, the men's top seed, and defending champion Jimmy Connors were scheduled to play their quarterfinal matches Thursday — McEnroe against Gene Mayer and Connors against Britain's John Lloyd.

Seeking her seventh championship in America's premier tennis event, Chris Evert Lloyd raced to a 3-0 lead against the unseeded Hanika. And, although Lloyd lost her serve twice — in the fourth and sixth games — Hanika was unable to hold her service in the first set.

In the second set, Hanika, a lefthander, took the first two games, breaking Lloyd in the second. But Lloyd won the next four games, held serve in the eighth and broke in the ninth to close out the match.

"I really never think of my achievements," said Lloyd, who never has failed to reach the U.S. Open semifinals, beginning in 1971 when she was 17 years old. "I never have been the one to dwell on these things because if I did I feel I would never be able to hit another tennis ball."

But hit tennis balls against Hanika she did, controlling the match from the baseline and closing out points when she ventured to the net.

"I'm pleased (with Wednesday's victory)," she said, "and my next match will be a real test for me because Carling will really test my ground strokes."

BASSETT BEGAN Wednesday's program by ousting Mandlikova, the 1980 runner-up in this tournament on the hardcourts of the National Tennis Center.

The two took turns breaking each others' service in the second through the fifth games, then Bassett broke Manlikova in the 10th game to close out the first set.

Playing in her first tournament since Wimbledon because of a bout with mononucleosis, Bassett took a 3-0 lead in the second set, then lost her service in the fifth game. But she broke back in the sixth, then held serve in the seventh and ninth games to win the match and advance to the semifinals and a meeting against Lloyd.

"I like playing Chris because we get into a groove," said Bassett, who also is a baseline player. "She plays the same game I do, and you always feel well when you play her."

Bassett said her illness probably helped her in this tournament.

Cubs' farm makes move

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs' farm team in the Class A Midwest League will move from the Quad Cities to Peoria next season as part of a trade that will send the Peoria Chiefs of the California Angels back to Davenport, Iowa.

Pete Vonachen, new owner of the Quad Cities Cubs, said Tuesday he believes his club's dismal 1984 season (50-87) will be overlooked by Peoria area fans elated by the parent team's exciting year.

"Cub fans are traditionally loyal," said Vonachen, a Peoria businessman. "They have to be. The parent club hasn't won a pennant since 1945."

The Peoria Chiefs played as the Quad Cities Angels until 1978, when California dissolved its Midwest League franchise. An Angels spokesman said the Chiefs might reclaim the Angels name.

The Davenport team produced winning records until the last two years, prompting fans and management to complain about the quality of players furnished by the Cubs.

Vonachen said the Cubs management assured him it is committed to a winning Midwest League team. Cubs minor-league director Gordon Goldsberry said the major-league team's success came at the expense of the farm teams, which had top players traded to benefit the parent club.

Padres bunt way past Reds, 15-11

Associated Press

The San Diego Padres, who have used their share of home runs to stay atop the National League West, decided to use the bunt against the Cincinnati Reds.

And the result was the highest-scoring game in the major leagues this season.

A seven-run outburst in the seventh inning — keyed by three straight bunts —came after a five-run burst in the sixth inning and led the Padres to a wild 15-11 victory Wednesday night.

"That was the most exciting game we won all year," Manager Dick Williams said after his team overcame an early 7-0 deficit to remain 10 games atop the NL West.

With the score tied 8-8, San Diego's Kevin McReynolds — who went 5-for-5 — and Terry Kennedy led off the seventh inning with singles.

Then, Carmelo Martinez bunted for a single that loaded the bases. Pinch hitter Champ Summers, batting just .171, followed with a bunt single that put the Padres ahead. And then Alan Wiggins drove in another run with a sacrifice squeeze bunt.

Steve Garvey's three-run double, an error, and an RBI single by McReynolds capped the seven-run inning.

"We tried a different attack," Williams smiled. "We used the bunt instead of the home run."

Summers liked his manager's approach.

"That was my first bunt base hit in the majors," said Summers, a 10-year veteran. "It was the hardest ball I hit in a month."

Each team finished with 17 hits and the Reds had the game's only home runs —two-run blasts by Eric Davis and Cesar Cedeno in the second inning that made it 7-0, along with a three-run shot by Dave Parker in the ninth.

Craig Lefferts, 3-3, the fifth of six San Diego pitchers, got the victory while Tom Hume, 4-13, the fourth of five Cincinnati hurlers, took the loss.

"It was just one of those wacky games," said Reds player-manager Pete Rose.

NL Roundup

Mets 4, Pirates 2

New York had not made up any ground on National League East-leading Chicago since Aug. 22. The Mets did something about that in Pittsburgh as they beat the Pirates and pulled within six games of the front-running Cubs.

Pittsburgh starter John Candelaria, whose left elbow tightened, departed after five innings with a 2-1 lead and New York quickly went to work against reliever Lee Tunnell.

Keith Hernandez led off the sixth with a single and Hubie Brooks drew a one-out walk. A groundout moved the runners up before Ray Knight hit an infield single in the hole that drove in the tying run. When shortstop Ron Wotus threw wildly to first, Brooks scored to make it 3-2.

The Mets got an insurance run in the ninth when pinch-hitter Mookie Wilson led off with an infield single and later scored on an error by third baseman Jim Morrison.

Bruce Berenyi, 11-13, earned his first victory in five career decisions against Pittsburgh. Doug Sisk, making his second appearance since being activated from the disabled list last week, allowed just one hit over the final three innings for his 15th save.

The Mets take on the Pirates again tonight before returning to New York to play host to the Cubs in a three-game series beginning Friday night.

Expos 3, Cubs 1

The Cubs showed signs of fatigue after arriving in Montreal at 2:30 a.m. following a two-game sweep in Philadelphia.

Montreal's David Palmer pitched six scoreless innings of three-hit relief after taking over for starter Dan Schatzeder, who left after one inning with an inflamed left elbow.

Palmer, 6-3, who had been on the 15-day disabled list, was making his first appearance since July 27. Palmer also singled home a run as the Expos scored twice in the fourth inning to take a 3-0 lead.

Gary Carter's RBI single in the first gave him 99 runs batted in this season.

Cardinals 6, Phillies 5

In St. Louis, Willie McGee's fifth hit of the game was an RBI single that capped a four-run rally with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning.

McGee's 5-for-5 performance was his first five-hit game in the major leagues.

Philadelphia starter Jerry Koosman took a 5-2 lead into the ninth, but left after allowing his eighth hit, a leadoff single by Terry Pendleton. Reliever Larry Andersen got Lonnie Smith to bounce into a fielder's choice, but Smith then stole second.

Smith took third on a groundout, and after Steve Braun walked, Al Holland replaced Andersen. Bill Lyons, an .080 hitter, singled home Smith and Darrell Porter's single loaded the bases.

Andy Van Slyke followed with a two-run single, tying the score, and McGee then singled home the game-winner.

Astros 4, Giants 1

Winner Nolan Ryan leapfrogged ahead of Philadelphia's Steve Carlton for the all-time major-league strikeout lead by fanning eight against San Francisco.

Ryan, 12-9, allowed six hits in eight innings while raising his career strikeout total to 3,862, five more than Carlton. It was the third time this season that Ryan had regained the lead.

Dodgers 4, Braves 3

Dale Murphy, a Gold Glove center fielder for Atlanta, made a rare mistake that enabled Los Angeles to win in the eighth inning.

Pedro Guerrero led off with single to center and when he rounded first base, Murphy threw behind him. But the ball went into the dugout, allowing Guerrero to reach third. Greg Brock then singled home Guerrero for his third RBI of the night.

"It wasn't a very smart play," Murphy said.

Wild AL West gets even tighter

Associated Press

While the Minnesota Twins and Kansas City Royals have been shooting it out for the lead in the American League West, Fred Lynn has been pulling the trigger for the California Angels.

Shooting mostly blanks, the Angels were trailing the Twins by five games on Aug. 28. But the steady hitting of Lynn, who had been carrying the club through some tough times, became contagious.

Today, the Angels, who have scored 50 runs in winning six of their last eight games, trail the division's co-leaders by just a half-game. And by no strange coincidence, Lynn has driven in at least one run in all eight games.

"Right now, I'm just worrying about getting base hits, and if runners are out there, trying to score them and trying to help us win the pennant," the 32-year-old Lynn said after going 4-for-4 and equaling a club record for RBIs in consecutive games in an 11-4 rout Wednesday night over Cleveland.

"I figure if I don't get them this at-bat, I'll get them the next at-bat," said Lynn, who has driven in 35 runs in his last 36 games. "The guys are getting on base in front of me and hitting well behind me. If you can't relax in that atmosphere, you never will."

Winning pitcher Bruce Kison, 4-3, yielded 10 hits and four runs while striking out five and walking five in seven innings as the Angels evened their record at 69-69.

Lynn doubled home Juan Beniquez, who had been hit by a Steve Farr pitch, in the sixth, giving California a 9-2 lead. Former Angels Lee Stanton and Bobby Bonds also had RBI streaks of eight games.

Elsewhere in the AL, it was: Kansas City 4, Minnesota 1; Detroit 1, Baltimore 0; New York 4, Toronto 3 in 10 innings; Milwaukee 7, Boston 5; Oakland 5, Chicago 4; and Seattle 6, Texas 5 in 10 innings.

AL Roundup

Royals 4, Twins 1

Frank White's two-out, two-run double off Ron Davis in the eighth inning gave Kansas City a 2-1 edge in the showdown series and left the Royals and Twins tied with 70-69 records.

Davis relieved Mike Smithson, 13-12, after Pat Sheridan blooped a one-out double. With two out, Jorge Orta was intentionally walked, and both scored on White's hit.

Winner Charlie Leibrandt, 9-6, scattered eight hits through eight innings. Dan Quisenberry pitched the ninth for his 38th save.

"I don't ever remember being associated with a team slump like we're going through," said Minnesota Manager Billy Gardner, whose Twins have lost seven of their last eight games. "We got 10 hits, but none when it counted and no extra-base hits to speak of.

"I'm not sure if it's the lack of hits that bothers me more, or the lack of extra-base hits. Mike Smithson had thrown over 100 pitches and I thought it was a good time to bring Ron Davis in."

Tigers 1, Orioles 0

Juan Berenguer and Willie Hernandez combined to blank Baltimore on three hits, and Detroit scored its only run on a first-inning error by Oriole shortstop Cal Ripken.

Berenguer, 8-9, gave up just two hits in 7 1-3 innings, struck out seven, walked three and allowed only one runner as far as second base. Hernandez finished up to collect his 28th save. Mike Flanagan, 11-12, went the distance for the Orioles, allowing just six hits, striking out four and walking one.

Alan Trammell started the Tiger first with a double, went to third on Barbaro Garbey's infield hit and scored when Ripken threw wildly to first base.

Yankees 4, Blue Jays 3

Don Baylor's two-out home run in the 10th inning and three innings of one-hit relief by Dave Righetti led New York over Toronto, which dropped to 8½ games behind Detroit in the East.

Baylor smashed Roy Lee Jackson's 3-1 fastball over the wall in left for his 25th home run this season. Jackson fell to 7-7.

Righetti, 5-5, the third Yankee pitcher, struck out four and walked none in gaining the victory.

Brewers 7, Red Sox 5

Rookie outfielder Doug Loman, who joined the Brewers on Monday, stroked a bases-loaded double to key a five-run fifth inning as Milwaukee beat Boston.

Moose Haas, 8-10, gave up five runs on seven hits, walked three and struck out seven before leaving with one out and bases loaded in the seventh. Ray Searage came on to earn his second save.

Boston's Jim Rice had three hits, including a bases-loaded triple, and four RBIs.

A's 5, White Sox 4

Tony Phillips belted a tie-breaking homer in the ninth inning off Richard Dotson to give Oakland its victory over Chicago.

Phillips slammed a 1-0 pitch from Dotson, 13-12, into the right-field seats for his third homer of the year. The A's scored their final run on Mike Heath's single, which scored Rickey Henderson, who had tripled.

Rookie Daryl Boston had three hits for the White Sox and threw out a runner at home plate.

Mariners 6, Rangers 5

A 10th-inning leadoff triple by Phil Bradley and a sacrifice fly by Alvin Davis lifted Seattle over Texas.

Paul Mirabella, 2-5, pitched 4⅓ perfect innings for the victory, striking out three, in relief of starter Salome Barojas. Dave Geisel came in to get the last out and pick up his second save after Pete O'Brien had a run-scoring single off Dave Beard in the last of the 10th.

Loser Dave Stewart, 5-13, gave up three runs on three hits in 4⅔ innings.

Hendrick faces hospital tests

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals right fielder George Hendrick is scheduled to enter a hospital today for tests and probable surgery to correct a thyroid problem.

If surgery becomes necessary, Hendrick will probably be lost to the team for the remainder of the season, the National League club said Wednesday.

Published reports said Hendrick had contemplated having the surgery in August and returning to the team in September, but that he had decided to play until it became obvious the Cardinals no longer had a realistic chance of winning the pennant.

A simple explanation of Frontier's new fare structure.

Just about every airline advertises low airfares. Airfares that are just about impossible to get on short notice. Or for the length of your trip. Or to the city you want to visit.

Instead, you're offered a multitude of other fares that get higher as they get easier to use.

Frontier's new fare structure is a very simple alternative. Every seat on every flight will be available for one low fare during peak hours. Or an even lower fare during off-peak hours.

No restrictions. No switcheroo. So call your travel agent or Frontier Airlines at 561-5156.

Want a quarterback? Head for Provo, Utah

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

You get singers out of Italy. Actors, you go to England for. Lovers come from France, soldiers from Germany, comedians from the Lower East Side, violinists are gypsies and dancers are Spanish. And Swedes are blond and pie is round.

In sports, golfers come from Texas, fighters come from the ghetto, swimmers come from Mission Viejo and tailbacks come from the University of Southern California.

And quarterbacks come from Provo, Utah.

NO ONE seems to know quite how or why these things happen, but they do. If you want a rug, you go to Persia. If you want cut glass, you go to Ireland. Steel is Swedish and automobiles are Japanese. You want someone who can throw a football 75 yards on the fly and hit a running squirrel in either eye with it, you dial the Brigham Young University campus and ask to speak with the resident quarterback, whoever he is.

It all began with Virgil Carter in the early '60s and it continued until BYU and forward-passing became synonymous, or at least complementary like apple pie and ice cream, coffee with Danish, or Laurel and Hardy.

The BYU Cougars lead the nation in forward passing so regularly (six of the last seven seasons, for example) that you think the only time they carry a football is in a bag. You played BYU and, by the second quarter, you thought it was raining footballs. The way they played the game, you kept looking up expecting to see a net.

It didn't really matter who the coach was. Or the personnel. The air is thin in Provo. The ball carries nicely. USC had its "student body right" and BYU had its "student body out for a long one."

The forward pass was probably invented by Walter Camp. But it was brought to full flower by Knute Rockne. Still, most college coaches regard it as an aberration to this day. They doubt it the way admirals used to doubt the bombing plane. "He who lives by the pass, dies by the pass," the late Red Sanders used to say. "Any time you have to throw more than 40 times a game, you lose," Pop Warner used to warn. Or maybe it was Woody Hayes.

TEAMS THAT used to roll out of Texas with Sammy Baugh or Davey O'Brien on them came to be known, not altogether admiringly, as "Coach So-and-So and his Aerial Circus." It was considered a sign of weakness.

The Wild Men of the Wasatch paid no attention. It was nothing for a BYU quarterback to put the ball in the air 65 times a game or 445 times a season, which Jim McMahon did in 1981. If the Cougars weren't throwing the ball, they didn't have it.

They threw the ball for 4,571 yards a season. They threw the ball on first down, fourth down and everything in between. They threw from their own 1, the other guy's 1; they threw on third and long, first and short; they threw from punt formation, field goal formation. "They throw in the team bus," one shell-shocked coach once complained.

The quarterbacks rolled out like cookies. There was Carter, Gary Sheide, Gifford Nielsen, Marc Wilson, Jim McMahon, Steve Young. The statistics were always the same, only the names had changed -- thousands of yards, dozens of touchdowns.

They were America's most entertaining team. They went to a Bowl game every year, the Fiesta, Tangerine, and every Holiday Bowl that's ever been played. Their games would end up 38-36, 38-37. Conference games ended up 70-46, 56-28, 39-25, 46-45. Pro scouts had standing reservations at nearby motels. They brought their adding machines.

Marc Douglas Wilson was Model No. 4 in this cookie cutter. He came after Gifford Nielsen and before Jim McMahon. But, the L.A. Raiders, who seldom make a mistake on this kind of thing, consider that Nielsen came before Marc Wilson and that McMahon came after Marc Wilson. In 1979, Marc Wilson threw the ball 427 times in 11 games. He had 250 completions, 29 touchdowns and 3,720 yards, an NCAA record at the time. He once threw for seven touchdowns in a single game, and 571 yards in one game, also a college record.

BUT EVEN though he is a Mormon, he almost didn't go to Brigham Young. He broke his jaw his senior year in high school at Seattle. Before that he had been tickeeted for USC, where he would have been as out of place as Marcus Allen at BYU. When he broke his jaw, USC — and a dozen other schools — dropped out of the bidding. Wilson may owe the guy who broke his jaw his career.

Wilson looks less like a quarterback than a vicar. Ichabod Crane handing off. He is 6 feet 6 and may weigh 200 pounds after eating. His arms are so long he can complete short passes without letting go of the ball.

He may not be on the team Brigham Young himself would have chosen — the Raiders sometimes seem to have been recruited from post-office wanted posters — but he is on the right team for a guy who's not used to winning games by fumbles, interceptions and a whole bunch of field goals.

"I went to BYU because I didn't want to spend my career handing off 58 times a game to a tailback," he says.

But, to throw the ball, first you got to get it. And the trouble with Wilson's rival, Jim Plunkett, is not only that he has the ball but he keeps going to the Super Bowl with it.

So, as the 1984 season starts, Marc Wilson is in an awkward position. He's in a line of great quarterbacks any way you look at it. But will he come to be known on the Raiders merely as the what's-his-name who came after Ken Stabler and Jim Plunkett and thus be remembered as the BYU quarterback who came before Jim McMahon and Steve Young? Or will all of the above simply prove that any team that doesn't have a BYU quarterback with the ball is a victim of circumstances, bad planning and 20 years behind the times?

Cowboys eye Carmichael

DALLAS (AP) — Wide receiver Harold Carmichael, a 13-year National Football League veteran with the Philadelphia Eagles, worked out with the Dallas Cowboys Wednesday.

Carmichael always had big days against Dallas for the Eagles, where he was the leading receiver eight years. He was cut by Philadelphia during training camp. The 6-foot-8 receiver out of Southern University was then signed by the New York Jets, who released him recently.

The Cowboys are desperate for wide receiver help.

Veteran Drew Pearson retired during the off-season after being seriously injured in an automobile accident and Tony Hill suffered a shoulder separation in Monday's 20-13 victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

Also working out with the Cowboys was Waddell Smith, formerly with the Edmonton Eskimos of the Canadian Football League.

Smith was the last cut by the Los Angeles Raiders. Smith, who played collegiately at Kansas, was an eighth-round draft pick by Kansas City of the NFL in 1977.

Cook replaces McHale as Montreal's GM

MONTREAL (AP) — Murray Cook, a former New York Yankees general manager, was named general manager of the Montreal Expos Wednesday, succeeding John McHale.

Cook said his first priority would be to find a new field manager for the National League team.

"I have a person in mind, but I haven't talked to him yet," said the Canadian-born Cook.

McHale, the club's chief executive officer who relinquished his general manager's duties, then interjected with a laugh, "That would be tampering."

Bill Virdon was fired as Expos manager last month and Jim Fanning is managing the team for the rest of the season.

Cook comes to Montreal two weeks after resigning as the Yankees' scouting director. He had been general manager with the American League team from June of last year until Clyde King replaced him several months ago.

Previously, Cook was in the Pittsburgh Pirates organization as director of minor leagues and scouting.

Cook was born in Sackville, New Brunswick.

Hurricanes find encore touch

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

What can the Miami Hurricanes do for an encore?

If you're thinking about an encore to their 1983 national championship, that remains to be seen, although they're off and running — make that passing — with victories over Auburn, the preseason No. 1 team, and Florida.

But if cliff-hangers whet your appetite, the Hurricanes are on a stretch of five consecutive games that weren't over until, as Yogi Berra would say, they were over.

—Nov. 5, 1983 — Miami 12, East Carolina 7: With time running out and their quest for a major bowl bid in jeopardy, Bernie Kosar drove the Hurricanes 80 yards for the winning touchdown. The big play was a 52-yard pass from Kosar to Eddie Brown, which helped set up Kosar's 1-yard run with 1:04 left to play.

—Nov. 12, 1983 — Miami 17, Florida State 16: Trailing 16-7, the Hurricanes began their comeback when Kosar teamed up with Brown on a 37-yard scoring pass late in the third period. But they didn't score the winning points until Jeff Davis, who missed two earlier attempts, kicked a 19-yard field goal on the game's very last play.

—Jan. 2, 1984 — Miami 31, Nebraska 30: In one of the most exciting games in college football history, Miami completed its storybook climb to the national championship in the Orange Bowl. The Hurricanes led 17-0 only to have Nebraska tie the score early in the third period. They led again 31-17 but once more Nebraska battled back with two touchdowns, the second on Jeff Smith's 24-yard run with just 48 seconds remaining.

The Cornhuskers, ranked No. 1 and needing only a tie to win the national championship since they would have been the only unbeaten team in the country, then kicked away the title by not kicking the extra point. Coach Tom Osborne ordered a 2-point conversion pass from Turner Gill to Smith, but strong safety Kenny Calhoun batted it away.

This year, with Jimmy Johnson at the coaching helm replacing Howard Schnellenberger, Miami has not lost its flair for the dramatic. The Hurricanes opened the season by upsetting No. 1-ranked Auburn 20-18 in the Kickoff Classic, scoring the winning field goal with 6:09 left — a relative laugher.

But last Saturday night they really cut it fine, falling behind Florida 20-19 with 41 seconds left and then marching 72 yards in five plays, using all of 29 seconds, and taking a 26-20 lead on Kosar's 12-yard pass to Brown with seven seconds remaining. Tolbert Bain's 59-yard interception on the final play was just icing on the cake.

Meals on Wheels rolls out wagon for shut-ins

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

At 11 a.m. Wednesday, Juanita Arreguin pulled away from Midland Memorial Hospital with a car full of hot meals for 14 Midland shut-ins.

Route X, which curls through northwest Midland, is usually driven by volunteers, but Meals on Wheels is one volunteer short today, so the program's director must fill in.

First stop, Cecil Ramsey. Ramsey is a diabetic who is cared for by his sister in the evenings, but depends on Meals on Wheels for a specially prepared hot lunch each Monday through Friday.

"It's a mighty good deal for guys like me," he says.

Ramsey's meals are prepared at Midland Memorial Hospital, which sells them at a discount to Meals on Wheels for distribution to Midland shut-ins, most of whom are senior citizens living alone. Financed by the Department of Human Resources and contributions from individuals and community organizations, Meals on Wheels has been serving Midland since September 1973 under the auspices of Midland Senior Citizens Inc.

"In Midland we have a really good system — we have a good volunteer program," says Mrs. Arreguin. "Some of the volunteers are mothers who take their children with them on the routes, some are retired people who want to stay involved, and some are ladies who don't have to work but want to do something for the community."

Mrs. Arreguin was a Meals on Wheels volunteer before she became the program's director.

"I love it," she says. "I could go into other fields and make more money, but I just feel needed in this job. There's nothing more rewarding to me than helping people like Cecil Ramsey."

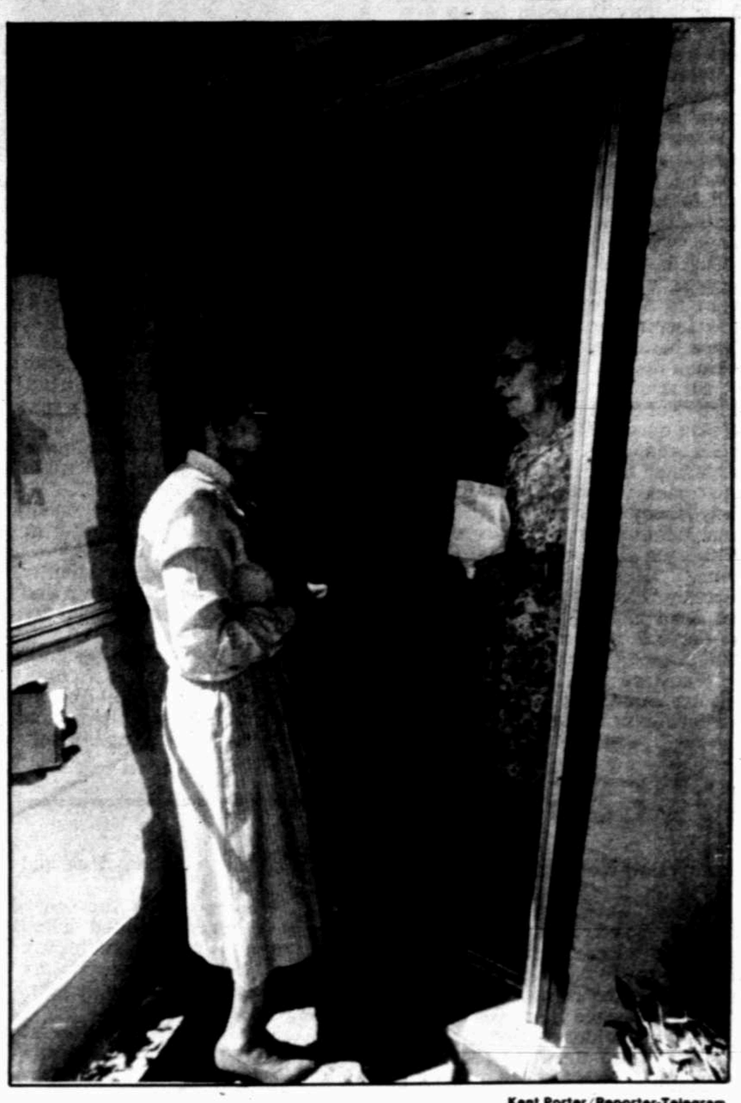

Some of the meal recipients are with the program permanently, "But a lot are short-term — people who are right out of the hospital and don't have anybody to take care of them."

Many of the short-term people are on the Need-A-Meal program, which is just like Meals On Wheels except they pay for the meals. But whether they pay for the meals or get them free, the shut-ins welcome both the food and the visit from the volunteers.

"They're real appreciative," says Mrs. Arreguin.

Any Midland senior citizen who is unable to prepare meals due to illness, disability, recent surgery or other causes is eligible for Meals on Wheels, subject to the approval of a Department of Human Resources caseworker. And those who don't qualify for federal support can still sign up for Need-A-Meal, where they pay for the service themselves.

Anyone interested in finding out more about Meals on Wheels, or in volunteering to help prepare or deliver the meals, can call Mrs. Arreguin at 683-4912.

Midland County Commissioners approve 1985 redistricting plan

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners on Wednesday approved a redistricting plan to equalize the number of voters in the four county commissioners' precincts.

The new plan is to go into effect next year and will have no bearing on the upcoming Nov. 6 general elections.

"It doesn't affect anything until March 1, 1985," said Janeice Builta, elections administrator.

In their shifting of some voting precincts, deleting others and adding a few, the commissioners created Voting Precinct No. 107 in Mission Dorado within the city limits of Odessa but in Midland County. The residential development is eight miles from the outskirts of Midland's westward city limits.

"These people will vote in the April elections for mayor and council in Odessa," Mrs. Builta said. "In all other elections, they'll vote in Midland County."

The commissioners deleted Voting Boxes 303 in two windowpane areas, in southeast Midland, annexed by the city of Midland, and combined them with Voting Precinct 304.

The area encompassing Midland Air Park, Midland Polo Club and Midland Country Club and a section bordered by Loop 250, Midkiff Road, Wadley Avenue and Garfield Street just west of Midland Air Park was switched from Commissioner's Precinct 4 to Commissioner's Precinct 2.

Among other changes was the switching of voting boxes in Commissioner's Precinct 2 to Commissioner's Precinct 3 in central Midland.

Voting Precincts 406, 405 and 403 were re-aligned, and Precinct 406 was moved a half section west across Loop 250. That precinct is flanked by Wadley Avenue and Texas Highway 158 — an extension of Golf Course Road.

The redistricting will result in the following changes in the current number of registered voters the commissioners' precincts.

— Precinct 1: Remains unchanged at 10,395. Commissioner is Durward Wright.

— Precinct 2: From 11,907 to 13,430. Commissioner is C. Wallace "Wally" Craig.

— Precinct 3: From 7,504 to 9,895. Commissioner is C. DeWayne Davis.

— Precinct 4: From 16,421 to 12,514. Commissioner is Win Brown.

The number of registered voters in Midland County now exceeds 46,200 but could "easily" reach 50,000 prior to the presidential elections, Builta said.

The deadline for unregistered voters to register for the Nov. 6 election is midnight on Oct. 7 — 30 days prior to the election.

The Midland County Elections Administration office is at 709 W. Washington Ave. Mrs. Builta or a deputy may be contacted by dialing 687-0231 or 687-0232.

Odessa assistant district attorney to take same position in Midland

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — First Assistant District Attorney David Rosado is making an $11,000 move down the road to Midland, where he will take the same position in the Midland County District Attorney's office.

Rosado, 41, declined to talk about exact figures, but made it clear he was leaving Ector County because of the salary difference. According to budgets both Commissioners Courts have tentatively approved for their counties, the 20 mile trek means a raise from about $30,000 to $41,000.

"The opportunity was over there," said Rosado. "It's not here."

"There is no significant pay raise coming here for a long, long time," he said.

His exit is the second this summer by a prosecutor, with fellow prosecutor Jud Weatherly having left District Attorney Mike Holmes' office for a judgeship on Odessa's Municipal Court. Weatherly's main reason for leaving was economic.

District Judge Gene Ater also referred to the wage disparity, noting this was the third first assistant the office has lost because of "low pay."

"Rosado will be sorely missed because he's been very diligent in his work and has tried a lot of the hard cases," said Ater.

Ector County's wages have been frozen during the county's economic hard times. Included in their tentative budget for the coming year is a 5 percent pay hike starting in January 1985.

David Rosado

Holmes noted the pay problem was a "double-edged sword," with the recently set salaries after last year's wage freeze making it doubly difficult to get more money for his prosecutors.

"I don't see how the commissioners would do that right off the bat," Holmes said.

Rosado is to be a Midland County employee beginning Sept. 15. He looked forward to working with a legal system he felt was better provided for financially.

"The whole criminal justice system (in Ector County) is having to do without," he said. While Midland traditionally has a lighter criminal case load, it also has a larger staff of prosecutors.

Rosado brings experience to the Midland office, which is expected to be three attorneys short when Al Schorre takes over for Vern Martin in 1985.

In addition to his Ector County experience, Rosado served as a prosecutor in El Paso and has tried about 200 jury trials. Between his time in the two DA's offices, he worked as a defense attorney.

Public school enrollment still growing in Midland County

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

While Midland's population is not increasing as rapidly as it has in past years, it is still growing steadily.

As a result, public school enrollment is up by about 4 percent in Midland County, according to the latest statistics compiled by Midland College and Midland and Greenwood independent school districts.

MISD's enrollment Tuesday, a week after classes began, was 18,026. That is 428 more students than attended last year at this time and 835 more than were in class at the end of school in May, according to Assistant Superintendent Garland Chapman.

The figures have already surpassed what administrators last spring predicted maximum attendance would be. "We think we may get another 100 before our peak enrollment in October," Chapman said. "Then it should start leveling out."

The growth appears to be evenly distributed throughout all grades, he said.

Midland College expects to exceed all previous attendance records when late registration ends Sept. 19. By the second day of classes Wednesday afternoon 3,201 students had registered for fall semester, not counting enrollment for some off-campus courses offered in Fort Stockton and Big Lake. That is 68 more students than were signed up at this time last year.

"The way it looks, we're going to surpass last fall's enrollment" of 3,357, MC spokesman H.A. Tuck said. "We're looking for somewhere between 3,425 and 3,500 before we finish registering.

"I think we're up because there are more people in the community, and I think a lot of people are retraining," Tuck speculated. "I also think economic conditions are causing more high school graduates to stay in the community."

Greenwood ISD has been in session for 2½ weeks. Current enrollment is 12,072, three more than what was predicted, according to Superintendent Sam Martin. "It's roughly 112 more than last year," he said, "but 60 of those are full-day kindergarten (which was not offered last year), so it's actually about 52 students."

"I'm not certain where the growth is coming from," Martin, who recently moved to Midland County, said.

Humans ignore 'live and let live' philosophy

The old cliche "live and let live" abounds. Yet we humans, the vain masters of a tiny niche of the universe, mostly ignore it.

We are inclined to be intolerant.

We are prone to snub other cultures. They are either too primitive or too sophisticated. They are either so crude that we are appalled or so refined that we think their actions are mere form and circumstance. Who is the more pompous?

We, the educated intolerants, fail to understand.

The truth is that we are so ignorant of their cultures that we are naive, we fail to appreciate their universe, and we, tragically, became callous to their ways of life.

White man has destroyed, decimated or utterly crippled aborigines in distant islands and in our own land as if they were lemmings or mere curiosities. On this very continent more than a century ago, we proclaimed the Manifest Destiny and usurped the land of the natives. We were intolerant; we deemed the American Indians as savage and hostile; they lived in huts and tepees, wore the skin of the deer and bison, and resisted our efforts to take over the Great Spirit's land which they roamed.

We persisted; they resisted. They had no deeds, no courthouse records and no trial courts, to prove "ownership." We had those papers and courts, the "laws" and the cavalry.

And once we prevailed, we praised and thanked our God for His blessings. All the while, we failed to recognize that "our" God and "their" Great Spirit were the One and the Same. We were blinded by our vanity. The wisdom of Solomon escaped us though we recited his proverbs.

We could not acknowledge that we are all the same; we are all God's creatures. Our backgrounds vary, sometimes radically. We all are capable of being one with the universe, yet we stay behind our cloaks and masks because we don't know otherwise or are afraid to come out. Ours is the same land, oceans, sun, moon and stars. We just wear different tinted glasses.

We call them heathens, pagans, "animals" or uncivilized "life forms" only because they do not fit into our realms of experience; we do not understand ourselves and how our — or their — very cultures evolved.

That is intolerance. And we, the paradoxes that we are, are even intolerant of our own kind. We look closely and perceive nuances within our own societies. If something doesn't "fit," we mentally cast it aside.

We are so vain and limited; we cannot see merit.

"A person's worth," said a wise one, "should be judged by the warmth of his heart."

Good performance 'gives you goosebumps'

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

"It gives you goosebumps and you can really go to bed with a smile," Marc Storace says of the feeling he gets from a performance done well.

Storace, known for his 3½-octave range as The Voice of Swiss rock group Krokus, left his Malta home when he was 19 to pursue a career in music. The journey has brought him via Krokus on several tours to the United States and Texas as the opening act for Sammy Hagar. Both groups will be on stage Saturday at Ector County Coliseum for an evening of heavy metal inspired rock'n'roll.

Storace had been performing "as a hobby" while "living from exam to exam" since he was 14.

When he made the decision to "go for it" at 19, he says, "I went to London, England, with a back pack and found a job to keep me going during the day and sang in the evenings with various musicians."

That lasted a year before Storace became "fed up with London" and went to Switzerland looking "for new inspiration." There he joined Tea, a basic rock 'n' roll band which became the top Swiss group of 1972-74. He also met and became friends with Fernando Von Arb when Krokus opened for Tea one night.

Six years and three European tours later, the teabag burst, Storace flew back to London and formed Easy Money. He received a call from Von Arb of Krokus two years later. With such albums as "Metal Rendevous," "Headhunter" and most recently "Blitz" to its credit, Krokus has been melting a place for itself on the U.S. rock music scene since 1980.

"We were practically unknown and we came over on the wave of the success of the album 'Metal Rendevous,'" Storace says. Then, the group was a supporting act in the United States, although it was, Storace says, "already headlining status in Europe." The "Headhunter" album moved Krokus to "special guests" status in the U.S.

Fernando Van Arb and Marc Storace of Krokus

"We'll go out special guests with Sammy Hagar until it's time to headline and that could be a few weeks after we hit the road with him. Right now, there's 116 U.S. radio stations playing our single ('Midnight Maniac') off the album ('Blitz')."

Storace describes Krokus' music as "high energy, hard hitting rock music," which is "very melodic."

"We have established our identity for being very entertaining and inspiring loads of audience participation."

Storace says the sets are designed with a buildup "not just in volume, but in the interest of holding an audience and manipulating that energy to bring it to a complete high without being over aggressive or destructive about it."

Members of Krokus have recently become aware of the importance of the lyrics in rock music.

"There's a lot of kids who go to rock concerts and buy albums and follow the lyrics and they're very dedicated. Some of them are even to an extent gullible. Maybe they haven't experienced life that much yet, and they might believe a lot of the wording which is in some songs.

"We've watched other bands create such an atmosphere of aggression and violence in an audience that the kids — instead of being elated and having fun — become angry at the music.

"That's not what we want," Storace says. "We want to be positive and just have fun, like going to a carnival. We don't inspire taking drugs, drinking and driving or beating up your neighbor."

The music this rock musician listens to when he isn't playing runs the gamut from rock to classical. However, Storace says, "I don't spend the whole day listening to music because I need to leave a space in my brain for my own music, and keep a fresh space there because we don't like to copy."

During his free time, he enjoys jamming with "other musicians whether they're big stars or not," and quieter endeavors, such as scuba diving, lying on the beach and being out in nature. Often, his inspiration for his music comes during these times.

"When you come to a standstill, your brain is the last thing to stop. When you're out in the quiet doing something else, then you switch on something else in your head and this makes you objective to your own work.

"That's very important in any job, any field, any walk of life, for people to take a break and not become workaholics. I thinks it's good to take breaks and look back and see things as they really are."

For Storace his "highest high" comes from performing.

"You can write a good song one afternoon and feel totally happy, like you've taken something out of your chest and put it down on tape. You think, 'God, where did that come from?' I think that's a great feeling to have.

"And the other feeling is to be in the studio and take that song again and be able to reproduce it on tape, just how you heard it when you wrote it and to come with good results that make you feel really happy.

"And then when you go onstage and you take the same song again and perform it and get the reaction that you expected or even a better reaction from the public. Then that is the ultimate."

Seventeen students transferred out of A&M corp unit after death

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Seventeen juniors and seniors have been transferred out of a unit of Texas A&M's cadet corps after one cadet was forced to exercise until he dropped dead of heat stroke, officials said.

All the upperclassmen in Company F-1 were moved to other units because F-1 lacked "sufficiently strong and effective leadership," corps commandant Col. Donald Burton said Wednesday.

He said the leadership vacancies were filled with two seniors and four juniors from other outfits.

"This is not in lieu of anything that may happen in the future," Burton said. Four different investigations are under way. Bob Wiatt, director of security and traffic for the university, said he expects to present evidence to a grand jury Sept. 27.

Bruce Goodrich, a 20-year-old sophomore transfer student, died Aug. 30 after collapsing during an early morning run.

Since joining Holmes' office, Rosado has tried most of the county's murder cases. He and Holmes prosecuted the Mendoza brothers in the recent trial involving two teen-aged Hispanics gunned down in an incident linked to a long-standing feud between southside families.

Rosado was one of the officials working with the families in attempts to stem the continuing bloodshed and took part in meetings with southside bar owners after which violence at these clubs has been reduced.

A recent court victory for Rosado and Holmes was the July conviction and 75 year sentence for aggravated sexual assault received by Thomas Lee Capps, reportedly a member of the Bandidos motorcycle club.

James Reyos, the American Indian from Mexico who killed a Denver City priest, was sentenced to 38 years in prison after Rosado's prosecution last year. He has also seen through several key drug and prostitution trials.

On the other side of the courtroom, Rosado has defended criminals in about 40 trials, including Fred Bella, one of the conspirators allegedly involved with the Chagras in drug smuggling in El Paso.

While Martin officially hired Rosado, he and Schorre apparently worked together to bring the prosecutor to Midland. "We're just tickled to death to get someone with his experience," said Schorre, who faces no opposition in November after defeating Martin in the Republican primary.

Dennis Sadra, former first assistant DA under John Green, recently joined Holmes' office, but Holmes said he plans to seek another experienced prosecutor.

Holmes does face opposition in November, but discounted the political implications of losing Rosado and Weatherly. "That's the way it goes," he said.

Rosado, his wife, two daughters and one son live in North Midland.

Texas land office seeks advice from Israeli agency

AUSTIN (AP) — The General Land Office, hoping to find ways to transform arid West Texas wasteland into productive farmland, is talking with an Israeli consulting agency.

The office is awaiting cost estimates from Tahal Consulting Engineers Limited of Tel Aviv for a water development project on state land, said Mike Connolly, an aide to Land Commissioner Garry Mauro.

The land office last week submitted a blueprint to Tahal, a government-owned agency that manages water resource development in Israel. Connolly said the land office expects to receive a reply on projected costs for the project "within a matter of days."

If the land office decides the services are affordable, a contract between Texas and Israel could lead to the establishment of several demonstration farms using irrigation methods.

Mauro's office manages 800,000 state acres in West Texas.

"This is one thing we are looking at to see if we can't make state land more valuable," Connolly said. "That will bring in more money for the permanent school fund, and make a little down payment on our fiscal problems.

"The more money we can raise by good management of state land, the less money the taxpayers have to worry about. We're hoping we can make an investment in the future of West Texas by exploring this technology."

Mauro decided to approach the Israeli agency after a trip to the Mideast nation during which he toured several large-scale water development projects related to farming. Connolly said the Israeli engineering consultants are recognized as world experts in enhancing agricultural production.

School openings call for caution from motorists around state

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — School openings across the state call for caution from Texas drivers.

"The increase in traffic will cause more accidents involving school buses and school children. One way to help reduce these accidents is by following safe operating procedures as well as the laws pertaining to passing a stopped school bus," said State Department of Highways and Public Transportation District Engineer Bill Lancaster.

State law requires drivers on the same roadway as a school bus that has stopped to load or unload school children to stop and remain stopped until one of three things happens:

— The bus driver signals to go by.

— The bus driver turns off the flashing red lights.

— The bus moves ahead.

The law applies whether the motorist is meeting the bus or going in the same direction as it is, whether or not the bus is traveling inside city limits. The only exception to the law is when the bus is stopped on the other side of a divided highway. Failure to stop for a school bus can result in a $200 fine.

Archaeologist to present program

Midland Archeological Society will meet at 7 p.m. today in the Planetarium at the Museum of the Southwest. Dr. Ed Staski will present a program on the excavation of the early El Paso area around the site of the Del Norte Hotel, which was torn down.

The excavation recovered a large amount of material from the early days of El Paso, including artifacts of the Chinese laborers brought into the area to work on the construction of the railroad through Texas. The Chinese established an area (China Town) in old El Paso, which is the area Dr. Staski and his crews excavated.

Dr. Staski is the assistant college professor-senior research archeologist for the Cultural Resource Management of New Mexico State University at Las Cruces, N.M. He received his B.A. from City College of New York, his M.A. and his Ph.D. from University of Arizona.

Dr. Staski will use slides to illustrate his program.

Eight-foot python reunited with 11-year-old owner

AUSTIN (AP) — An 8-foot-long Burmese python, captured after killing a duck in a pond at a subdivision last week, has been reunited with its 11-year-old owner, Seth Robuck.

The snake, named Ka after the python in Rudyard Kipling's "Jungle Book," escaped from the family's southeast Austin home last May when the Robuck family was getting ready to move.

Mrs. Shirley Robuck said the python "got too active" when the weather got warm and pushed his way through a glass cage on the porch.

She speculated that Ka slithered down the creek to the duck pond where it was caught last Thursday and taken to Wildlife Rescue. The Robucks claimed it after learning of the capture.

Ka is being kept by family friends because the Robucks moved to a neighborhood near downtown now, and large pythons do not have an urban nature.

At one time, Mrs. Robuck said, her son had 60 snakes.

"I'd be making a bed and find a snake. I'd open a drawer and find them. I'm not terrified of them like some people, but I'm not fond of them."

Seth said he started bringing home garter snakes and other small varieties about four years ago. He read about snakes until he could identify most by their markings.

White says child abuse is community problem

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says child abuse is a community problem "and preventing it is a community responsibility."

"It is a responsbility that must be shared by public and private sectors alike, professional, and volunteers, law enforcement and human service agencies, community organizations and individual citizens," White said at the Thursday opening of a Conference on Child Abuse and Neglect.

The conference, the first ever held in Texas, is sponsored by the governor's office, the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers and the Texas Department of Human Resources.

"We have learned, and are still learning, that one key to prevention is to bring the problem out in the open," White told the conference. "We must teach the children to tell. We must teach them how to overcome the fear of victimization...and we must encourage teachers, members of the medical profession, parents of other children, babysitters and anyone who might frequently spend time in the presence of children how to identify the signs and symptoms of an abused child."

At another session on child abuse Thursday, a spokeswoman for Dallas day care centers said some reports of child abuse in such centers are being exaggerated and "are scaring parents to death."

"While we recognize that abuse does exist, there are many innocent people out there and their civil rights are being infringed upon," said Diana Flowers, Dallas, chairman of the Child Care Protection Association, which she said represented 53 centers.

"We are almost declared guilty until proven innocent," she told the joint legislative Committee on Child Abuse and Pornography.

Ms. Flowers said there were instances of day care centers being put on probation by investigators of the Department of Human Resources as a result of an anonymous telephone call.

"Johnny complains to his mother that he had beans all last week or he has a scratch above his eye and the DHR gets a phone call," she said.

Ms. Flowers said there were 372 proven incidents of physical harm or sexual exploitation last year.

Former president Ford recalls Reagan victories

SUGAR LAND (AP) — Former President Gerald Ford, recalling Ronald Reagan's victory over him in Texas in the 1976 primary, predicts the candidate who carries Texas will probably be the nation's next president.

Ford said at a news conference Wednesday Texas will be "critically important" in the battle between Mondale and Reagan. Ford made his remarks after appearing at a fund-raiser for Republican congressional candidate Tom DeLay.

"I don't see how Mr. Mondale can become the next president if he doesn't carry Texas," Ford said. "It's critically important for President Reagan to win this state. It's a big state. It's sort of a forerunner of many other states in this region. It's got a lot of electoral votes."

He said Reagan can ensure victory by winning Texas. Ford recalled Reagan has always done well in Texas, pointing to Reagan's victory over him in the state's Republican presidential primary in 1976.

"And he did well in 1980 against Mondale and Carter," Ford said. "From my point of view, if he wins Texas, it's probably indicative that he'll win the election."

The former president, who debated Jimmy Carter three times before the 1976 election, said he believed two debates between Reagan and Mondale and one between the vice presidential candidates, George Bush and Geraldine Ferraro, would be sufficient.

"Carter and I had three and it was a little too much," he said. "Two are adequate to expose the issues."

Ford's appearance before about 150 people at a breakfast at the Sweetwater Country Club raised between $40,000 and $50,000 for DeLay, who hopes to succeed Ron Paul in Texas' 22nd District. The district includes southwest Houston and most of Fort Bend and Brazoria counties. Paul ran for the GOP nomination for U.S. Senate and lost to Rep. Phil Gramm.

DeLay, 37, a Laredo native who owns a Houston-area exterminating firm, has served in the Texas House since 1979. He is running against Democrat Doug Williams, a Houston political consulant.

On other matters, Ford said that while Republicans were warned against complacency after their convention last month in Dallas, "I don't see much evidence of it. It's always a concern, always a worry."

He termed the controversy over Reagan's comments on government and religion as a "misinterpretation."

"Mondale's trying to exploit it for political purposes," he said. "I would resist mixing organized religion with government. But that's not what Ronald Reagan is talking about."

He also criticized Mondale's opposition to the B-1 bomber and MX missile projects.

Eight firms settle suits stemming from building collapse

BEAUMONT (AP) — Eight companies involved in the $2.5 million construction of Jefferson County's airport terminal have settled a 15-month legal battle following the building's collapse by agreeing to pay $3.8 million to the county and several individuals.

Dorothy Mae Vela, widow of a man killed in the collapse, settled for more than $1 million, the Beaumont Enterprise reported.

Jefferson County will take $2,568,000 of the $3,850,000 announced settlement, with Mrs. Vela and the others sharing $1,282,000.

Jefferson County commissioners voted unanimously to accept the settlement offered by the defendants, all of them contractors and subcontractors involved in the construction of the terminal, which opened in February 1980 and was operated by the county.

Arthur Bismark "Pete" Vela, 53, died when falling debris from the roof collapse on May 20, 1983, crushed him. Vela, a foreman at Arco Polymers, was driving travelers to the Bum Phillips Celebrity Golf Tournament. The roof collapsed after a violent wind, rain and hail storm.

Mrs. Vela and her late husband's mother, Theodora C. Vela, sued the defendants. So did Larry McMillan of Dallas, Brenda Johnson of Groves and Ida Atkins of Port Arthur.

El Paso to proceed with permits to drill wells

EL PASO (AP) — The El Paso Water Utilities Board says it will proceed with the 326 applications to drill wells in New Mexico in hopes of taking care of the city's water needs through the next century.

This comes after the board voted Wednesday not to appeal a federal judge's ruling because "we have nothing to appeal," said Clifton Wolf, board chairman.

"He (the judge) told us we could go ahead with well application proceedings. We want to work with the state," said Wolf

U.S. District Judge Howard Bratton ruled Aug. 3 that New Mexico can limit export of ground water to El Paso as long as it doesn't create "an unconstitutional burden on interstate commerce."

He said a 1983 law passed by the New Mexico Legislature isn't unconstitutional in the way it sets up criteria for new appropriations of water to be used outside the state.

But the judge ruled that using the law's criteria on applications for domestic wells and transfers of existing rights where the water is to be used out-of-state is unconstitutional because it hinders interstate commerce.

Bratton also ruled that a 1984 state law setting a two-year moratorium on water export from southern New Mexico while the state studies the hydrology there "has an illegitimate protectionist purpose and is facially unconstitutional."

New Mexico officials did not indicate Wednesday whether the state would appeal any portions of Bratton's ruling.

Attorney General Paul Bardacke said that although New Mexico lawyers have not had a final meeting to discuss the decision, "we have no plans to appeal" at this time.

Sept. 19 is the deadline.

El Paso can pursue the applications for wells, but it now must prove to the New Mexico state engineer that the city's use of the water would not violate the criteria for new appropriations.

Farmers may give up on cotton crop

BIG SPRING (AP) — Cotton prospects in a six-county area of West Texas, hit again in 1984 by drought, are so bleak that some farmers are considering giving up on their crops rather than go to the expense of harvesting it, according to a survey of farm officials.

"It's better to plow under than to strip," Paul Hopper, president of the Howard County Farm Bureau, told the Big Spring Herald.

"I can't put another $12-to-$13 of chemical and then $38 a bale for harvest when what you harvest won't pay for what you just did," said Hopper, who farms near Knott.

The newspaper said about 650,000 acres of cotton were planted in a six-county area around Big Spring. Only about 425,000 acres of that are expected to be harvested, and a production of a bale or less per acre is anticipated.

Tim Hall, director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in Howard County, said most farmers don't feel they can afford their usual harvest operation, which would include using chemicals in October to kill the cotton and force bolls open.

Instead, Hall said, many farmers plan to wait until the first frost to kill the crop for them, even though that probably won't be until November and they risk hail damage or of having color and quality deteriorate significantly.

"Except for Knott, most Howard County farmers won't start harvesting until a little before Thanksgiving," Hall said. "Normally, they start killing the cotton in October, when it has reached full maturity."

"If we get an early freeze, we could pay (adjustments to) 85 to 90 percent of everyone with crop insurance," said Federal Crop Insurance Corp. district director Dottie Sampley.

Agents for the FCIC district are doing field estimates now on the cotton remaining, she said.

"All of the counties are still reporting dry conditions," Mrs. Sampley said. "None are in good shape."

"If it's good weather, the boll worm pressure lets up, the aphid situation clears up, and everything else is good," Howard County farmers might produce more than 5,000 bales, Hopper said.

Cold and drizzle in the fall could cut that considerably, he said.

Howard County farmers planted 90,000 acres in cotton this year; only 35,000 are expected to be harvested, Mrs. Sampley said. Hall and Hopper have estimated a possible harvest of 5,000 bales this year, compared to an average of 75,000 bales in a good year.

In Howard County, as elsewhere, the cotton is a very poor quality, Hall said, and all crops are adversely affected by drought conditions.

Newlyweds face severe setback in San Diego

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Navy seaman Rick Duggar and his wife, Dottie, heard wonderful things about San Diego and were anxious to start their life together in the city. But the theft of their moving van and car parked in a hotel parking shattered their hopes.

The newlyweds drove into San Diego County last Friday night. When they walked out of National City motel room Sunday morning to get items from a U-Haul truck they had used to move their belongings from Texas, the truck was gone.

Inside the truck were living room and bedroom furniture, appliances, clothing and wedding gifts. Hitched to the truck was Rick Duggar's 1978 Toyota with Texas license plates.

"Whoever took the truck took everything," Mrs. Duggar said in a telephone interview with the San Diego Tribune from Rosenberg, Texas, her hometown about 60 miles southwest of Houston.

"Rick just kept saying, 'I can't believe they took everything,' over and over again. About two hours later, I finally broke down and started crying."

The Duggars, who met while they were attending Sam Houston State University in Huntsville, Texas, married Aug. 25 in Rosenberg.

Duggar, 25, recently completed 19 weeks of Navy radar school in Virginia Beach, Va. He had orders to report for duty Sunday aboard the fast frigate Hepburn, moored at the San Diego Naval Station.

"We'd heard nothing but wonderful things: how friendly everybody was, how beautiful the weather is," Mrs. Duggar said.

Braniff joins cut-rate fare market

DALLAS (AP) — Braniff Inc., saying "our success depends on this basic change in our philosophy," has announced it will become a cut-rate airline by slashing fares and laying off 25 percent of its employees.

The reorganized Braniff, which resumed service in March after bankruptcy proceedings with high-quality service and fares that matched existing levels, acknowledged Wednesday its strategy hadn't worked.

The airline said it was scrambling to find its "niche" in the crowded skies over Dallas-Fort Worth.

"Braniff is changing its direction in a few weeks toward becoming a low-cost carrier with unrestricted low fares," said Patrick Foley, Braniff's vice chairman.

Braniff will offer one unrestricted fare for every seat on weekday flights and a lower price on weeknights and weekends. The airline said its new peak-period one-way fare from Dallas to New York will be $129, less than half the current standard full-coach fare of $324 each way.

The fares will take effect Saturday, Braniff said.

In addition to laying off about one-quarter of its 2,500 employees — "from management down to line workers" — over the next 30 days, there will be some furloughs, spokeswoman Barbara Potter said.

"They're (Braniff) still in a tight cash flow situation and it gets tighter at this time of the year as traffic begins to tail off," said analyst Dan Wewer of Rauscher Pierce Refnes Inc. in Dallas.

Chief competitor American Airlines "will do whatever it takes to remain competitive," American spokesman Joe Stroop said, adding that a decision on whether to match Braniff's fares won't be made until Fort Worth-based American examines the new fare structure.

Fare cuts preceded Braniff International's 1982 grounding and bankruptcy proceedings, but Foley said "Braniff will succeed, and it will continue to provide the type of service the traveling public needs and can afford."

Foley said in a statement the move indicated a "major shift" in Braniff's philosophy of top-notch service because "to date this concept has failed to generate sufficient business at a fair price to produce the profits necessary to support this level of service."

"We know we have enough cash and places to obtain new cash — $30 million to $40 million range — to make this program work," he said.

Braniff has gained only about 9 percent of the traffic at its Dallas-Fort Worth hub, and began resorting to fare reductions this summer to stimulate interest in the carrier.

In addition to the latest fare cuts, hot food service to "economy cabin" passengers will be replaced by cold sandwiches, Ms. Potter said. Hot dishes still will be available to the carrier's "business cabin" passengers, who will be charged a premium of between $15 and $40 over the low fares for extra service.

Braniff, which used a $70 million investment by Hyatt Corp. to resume service 22 months after filing for bankruptcy protection, reported a $30.6 million loss in its first quarter. It hasn't yet reported results for the period ending last month.

Braniff International fell into a $1 billion debt in 1982 and grounded its fleet, fired its 7,000 employees and filed for reorganization and protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

The airline resumed service as a smaller, low-cost carrier of 30 airplanes and 2,000 employees.

William Slattery, president of Braniff announced in February that the company would have a 'brand new image', that of a 'smaller, leaner airline'. The new changes announced this week will place Braniff into hot competition with the expanding cut-rate airline industry.

Auto boom continues

DETROIT — New car sales rose a healthy 10 percent in August, according to company reports released Wednesday, as both import and domestic models continued to sell strongly in what is normally a sluggish sales month for the auto industry.

With the Oct. 1 opening of Detroit's 1985 model year less than a month away, analysts said that they see few signs that the boom in auto sales, which has displayed surprising resilence in recent months, will end soon.

The domestic automakers said that they sold 603,469 cars during the month, up 13.7 percent from sales of 530,960 in August 1983.

On a seasonally adjusted annual basis, the August sales of domestic cars equaled an annual rate of 7.8 million units. The seasonally adjusted rate reflects the number of cars that would be sold if the August pace were to continue for 12 months.

For the Big Three, Ford sales were up 22.9 percent for August; Chrysler Corp.'s were up 9.6 percent; and General Motors Corp.'s were up 9.3 percent.

In August's final 10 days, domestic industry sales were up 11.6 percent from the year before.

Meanwhile, August sales of imported makes were estimated at 211,000, up 0.9 percent from last year's 208,995, thus giving the foreign producers their first year-to-year monthly increase since May. That gave the imported makes a hefty 25.8 percent of the U.S. market in August, which some analysts attributed to continuing shortages of some U.S. models and the effects of plant closures for annual model changeover.

The sales improvement for the importers seemed to indicate that a relaxation in import quotas on Japanese cars, which took effect in April, is finally beginning to have an effect at the retail level, where shortages of popular models have persisted throughout the summer.

Most analysts are expecting the industry to turn in healthy sales increases for the rest of the year unless a major strike disrupts domestic production. And while many are forecasting a slight dip in car sales in 1985's second half because of a predicted rise in interest rates, most observers expect total 1985 model year sales to equal or exceed the expected 10.4 million sales during the 1984 model year, which ends this month.

"The rate of growth will probably slow, but I don't see a decline in 1985," said David Healy, automotive analyst with Drexel Burnham Lambert, a New York-based investment company. "I think we will just have a leveling off close to the 1984 rate."

Healy is forecasting 1985 model year sales of about 10.6 million units, up only slightly from his estimate of 10.4 million units for the 1984 model year.

"We're looking for some improvement next year," said Robert D. Lund, vice president for sales and marketing at General Motors Corp. "But even if 1985 is flat with 1984, it won't be a bad year, since this has been the best year since 1979."

Nestle buys Carnation

LOS ANGELES — Nestle S.A. began its $83-per-share, $3 billion tender offer for Carnation Co. on Wednesday and revealed in a Securities and Exchange Commission filing that it has arranged for a $2.5 billion credit line to finance the deal.

Nestle, the giant Swiss food conglomerate, also revealed that merger talks with Carnation, a Los Angeles-based diversified food company, began in mid-July. That revelation could spark some controversy since more than four weeks later Carnation persistently denied rumors about takeover discussions.

In the SEC filing, Nestle said it would provide $525 million of its own cash to pay for the acquisition, the largest ever of a non-oil company. The remaining $2.5 billion, Nestle said, will be drawn from a five-year revolving credit arrangement provided by a 19-bank consortium led by New York-based Citibank.

Because of the heavy debt involved, Standard & Poor's, the major credit-rating firm, said Wednesday that it had placed the AAA-rated senior debt of Nestle and Carnation on its Creditwatch list for possible downgrading.

Nestle said in the SEC filing that it initiated discussions with Carnation about a possible merger on July 19. It said it made its first formal offer on Aug. 30, for $82 per share, although sources close to the negotiations say Nestle originally offered only $75 per share, which Carnation rejected.

However, as late as Aug. 21, Carnation continued to deny that any takeover discussions were taking place, even though months-old rumors of a possible takeover had pushed Carnation's stock up almost 25 percent since the end of June.

The rumors were sparked by reports that Dwight L. Stuart, who resigned as president of the firm last November, was seeking to sell the 20 percent stake he partially controlled as trustee of various family trusts for the descendants of Carnation founder E.A. Stuart.

Dwight Stuart, who is grandson of the founder, and other descendants retained the investment banking firm of Salomon Bros. on Aug. 16 to explore the possible sale of their stock, according to a separate SEC document filed by Carnation on Wednesday. The group eventually agreed to sell its 27 percent stake to Nestle. Stuart could not be reached for comment.

A New York Stock Exchange spokesman said Tuesday that the Big Board is looking into the events surrounding the stock price rises, including Carnation's repeated denials of merger talks.

Carnation spokesman George Wilkins said the firm has no comment on the stock situation.

In launching its tender offer, Nestle said it will accept tenders from Carnation shareholders through Oct. 2. Carnation has recommended that its shareholders accept the offer.

However, many other Carnation stockholders appeared to be impatient. The price of Carnation stock fell 87.5 cents per share to close at $78.625 in heavy NYSE trading Wednesday, possibly indicating that traders chose to take profits rather than wait for the conclusion of the deal, said analyst Dan B. Williams of the San Francisco-based brokerage of Sutro & Co.

Panhandle gas dispute continues

WASHINGTON — Attorneys are making no predictions on the outcome of a lengthy hearing before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to determine whether Panhandle oil producers tapped into natural gas reserves that belonged to a gas company.

"I never make predictions on the outcome of legal cases, but I thought the hearing went reasonably well," said Philip Ehrenkranz, a Washington attorney representing Dorchester Oil Co.

Dorchester owns the gas rights to 50,000 acres in the Panhandle. But it says that 37 oil producers have tapped into its gas reserves, depleting the gas by about 8.6 billion cubic feet and violating federal interstate gas marketing regulations.

The oil producers maintain that the gas is "casing-head" gas, a normal by-product of oil drilling. Dorchester says no oil is being produced, so the gas is not casing-head gas.

The FERC could force the oil companies to relinquish millions of dollars in gas revenues, but its decision also could also call into question the Texas Railroad Commission's system of evaluating wells. The 37 producers say the Railroad Commission ruled their wells are oil wells, not gas wells.

Dorchester has also sued the oil companies in state court.

The company won a jury judgment of $460,000 in damages plus about $240,000 in attorneys fees in one of those cases last week. District Judge Robert Montgomery, presiding in the Lubbock case, did not allow Railroad Commission rulings and standards to be used on the issue presented during the trial.

At least two other court cases are still pending, Ehrenkranz said.

Dorchester asked the FERC to decide whether there have been violations of federal regulations. The case is now before FERC Administrative Law Judge Brenda Murray, who ordered attorneys for both sides to supply legal briefs by Sept. 17, and reply briefs by Oct. 9.

Ms. Murray's ruling, along with the hearing record, then goes to the commission. A remedy phase will follow if the commission finds there have been violations of federal rules.

Ehrenkranz said if Ms. Murray rules in Dorchester's favor, there might be an interim injunction halting oil production on the 50,000 acres in question.

Eventually, he said, the commission could rule that the oil companies have to return revenues from the gas they produced. No one knows exactly how much money would be involved, but Charlie Moore, a Washington attorney representing the oil producers, said he had heard estimates of up to $100 million.

Both Moore and Ehrenkranz predicted a decision by Ms. Murray before Christmas.

The hearing, which began July 24, had been expected to last three months, but abruptly ended on August 17.

The quick wrap-up was discretionary on the part of both sides, who agreed to waive cross-examination and appearances by many of the 47 witnesses scheduled to testify, Moore said.

"Without saying she was going to hold anybody's feet to the fire, the judge indicated she had vacation plans for August 19th," Moore said. "Nobody wanted to mess up that vacation."

TRC fines Hobbs man for violation

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has assessed a $45,000 administrative penalty against Don H. Wilson for injecting salt water into a well near Sinton without a permit.

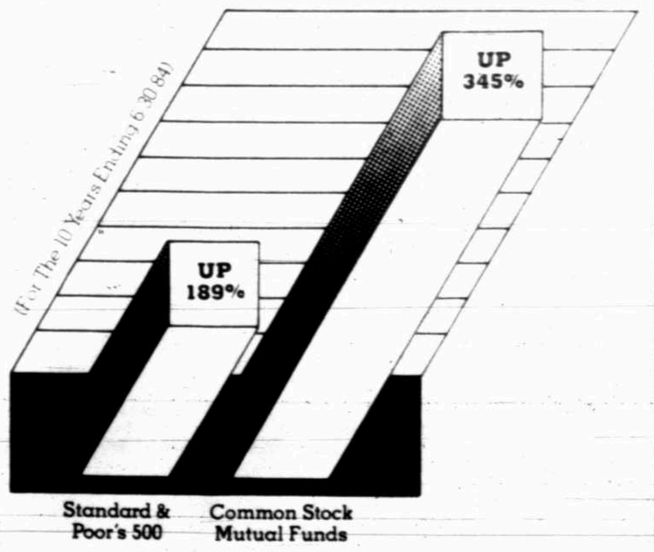

Wilson, whose corporate address is listed as Hobbs, N.M., declined a public hearing on the violation and agreed to the penalty in the case. Wilson has already paid the $45,000 to the commission.

An agent for Wilson filed an application with the commission September 1, 1983, for a permit to dispose of salt water through the M. Gibson Well No. 2 located about two miles west of the town of Sinton in San Patricio county. The commission's underground injection and control section denied the application later that month because surface casing in the well only extends down 240 feet. Texas Department of Water Resources records show fresh water in the area can be found as deep as 900 feet.

The city of Sinton draws fresh water from formations located near the well.

On April 10, 1984, the commission received a complaint from a representative of the city of Sinton indicating the well was being used for salt water disposal despite the commission ban. On-site inspection by commission personnel witnessed the illegal salt water injection and the well was shut in and sealed by the commission April 12.

Mutual Funds Outperform Market

Mutual funds outperform common stocks market

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Over the years mutual funds that invest in common stocks have significantly outperformed the stock market as a whole. In the ten years ended June 30, the Standard & Poor's index of 500 stocks was up strongly, by 189 percent. But common stock funds rose on average almost twice as much - 345 percent. The figures include reinvestment of capital gains and dividends and represent the actual return to the investor after all charges have been deducted.

Yet of 1,500 consumers questioned in a recent national survey, only one in four knew that the funds had beaten the market in recent years.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose for its fifth straight, closing at 244.20 yen compared with Wednesday's 243.90 yen. Later, in London, it also was quoted at 244.20 yen.

The British pound steadied at $1.2837, just above its record depth of $1.2825 reached late Wednesday.

Best Products reports August sales increase

RICHMOND, VA. — Best Products, the nation's largest chain of catalog showrooms has reported increased sales for the month of August. Preliminary sales results for the four weeks ended Aug. 25, were $137.9 million for an increase of seven percent. For the year to date, an increase of 11.7 percent above the sales of $890.5 million was reported for the same period last year.

Agricultural variable rate loans increase

DALLAS—The use of variable-rate agricultural loans by Texas banks has jumped at least six percent - to 63 percent from 57 percent - in the last six months, according to economist Hilary Smith in the August issue of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas' Agricultural Highlights. Smith's data show that - compared to banks that make variable-rate loans - banks that extend only fixed-rate loans generally are smaller in terms of assets and make less use of federal funds and large certificates of deposit to fund their loans.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Eddy well finals for 37 Mmcfd

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

The best Strawn well in Southeast New Mexico may have just been completed by SANTA FE ENERGY CO., Midland.

The firm's No.1 Weems gas well, the third well in Santa Fe Energy Company's Indian Draw prospect near Carlsbad tested 37 Mmcfd of gas from perforations at 10,510 ft. to 10,556 ft. in the Strawn and 5.4 Mmcfd CAOF in the Morrow Sands at perforated intervals of 11,578 ft. to 11,586 ft. While final production rates have not been established as yet for the well, it is now choked down to flow 5 Mmcfd gas with 80 barrels of condensate per day.

The prospect contains approximately 1,800 acres obtained when Santa Fe Energy purchased 65,000-70,000 net acres from Coquina about 1980. The first well drilled was the No.1 Walker which completed July 1983 for 3 Mmcfd in the Morrow and is currently producing approximately 800 Mcfd.

The second well in the prospect was the No.1 Neely, which completed February 1984 for 16.5 Mmcfd in the Strawn but came up dry in the Morrow. It is now producing at the rate of over 2 Mmcfd.

The geology of the area consists of typical meandering Morrow Sand channels with carbonate bank buildups that come and go in the Strawn. The difference between a good well and a dry hole most often depends on hitting the middle of the channel and coming up with enough porosity. Anything less than 8 percent frequently means the well will not be completed. The most common completion treatment is a light acid treatment with a fracture of the formation as a last resort.

"Our exploration philosophy in the area," said Santa Fe Exploration Manager, Bill Schaffer, "is to make the Morrow or primary objective and hope for whatever we get in the Strawn or Wolfcamp, which is present in the area."

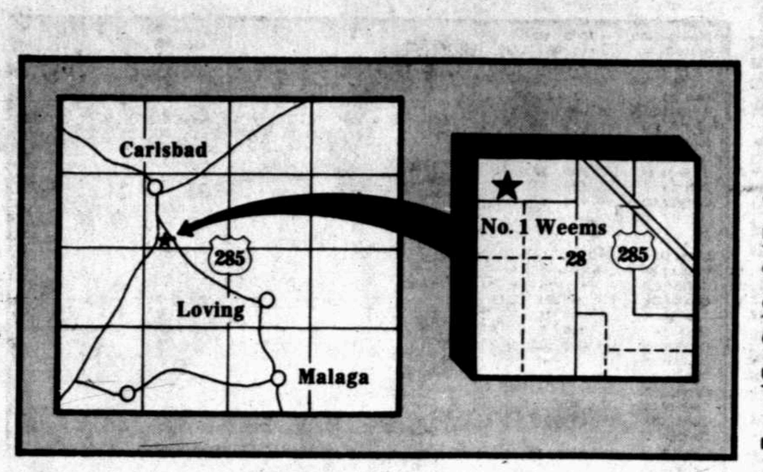

He says that well control is good in the prospect area and that drilling is sometimes predicated on dry holes.

"We found the Walker well by offseting two dry holes," informed Schaffer. "It takes a lot of nerve to drill between two dry holes, but sometimes that's the best way. The dry holes tell you where the channel isn't."

Santa Fe Energy has planned an offset well to the No.1 Weems one location to the south and will make the Strawn the primary objective in the well. The firm feels it may have another two or three wells of comparable quality on the prospect.

Santa Fe Energy Co., and operating company of Santa Fe Southern Pacific Corp. has a 49.9 percent working interest in the well, Kriti Exploration Inc., Houston, also has a 49.9 percent working interest in the well, with the remainder being held by Read & Stevens of Roswell.

Location for the No.1 Weems is 990 ft. from north and east lines of Section 28, T-22-S, R-27-E.

Reagan strike finals for 138 bopd

An Ellenberger oil discovery in the Spraberry trend has been finaled by EXXON INC., Midland, for 138 bopd of 52.3 API crude and 75 bwpd with a GOR of 1,630:1 on a 21/64 in. choke from perforations at 10,526 ft. to 10,683 ft.

The No.1 T.S.R.H. "B" was drilled 10,729 ft. with 5 1/2 in. casing being set to that depth. Formation tops in the discovery well were picked on a ground elevation of 2,637 ft. as 5,778 ft. on the Spraberry; 7,204 at the Dean; 7,363 ft. for the Wolfcamp; 9,550 ft. at the Strawn; 9,677 for the Bend lime; 9,834 for the Chester; 9,974 on top of the Woodford; 9,991 ft. to the Devonian; 10,178 Silurian; Fullesman 10,401; Sylvan, 10,472 ft. and Ellenberger 10,520 ft.

The well is located 1,742 ft. from the south and 839 ft. from the west lines of Section 14, Block A, R.W. McGrew survey, 6.5 miles northeast of Stiles.

Consultant says oil shortage predictions are wrong

HOUSTON (AP) — Forecasts of shortages in U.S. energy sources are wrong and could be "devastating to the energy industry," a Houston energy consultant said Wednesday.

Dale Steffes, president of Houston-based Planning & Forecasting Consultants, said his forecasts, which he calls trend discontinuities, show energy consumption will decline for the next 20 to 30 years.

"This consumption, this demand is shrinking now and it will be shrinking for the rest of the decade," Steffes said."And there's nothing the energy companies can do unless they get back into marketing."

Consumption of oil is down 2 percent a year, Steffes said at a news conference, and total energy consumption could drop to the lowest levels in more than five years.

"Most of the decrease is going to come in the gasoline market," Steffes said."This is not going to help the energy companies. It's going to hurt them to put it bluntly."

Steffes recommends energy industries, such as utilities, might consider dropping incentives offered to consumers to conserve energy because such incentives hurt company revenues and make the demand for energy even less.

Revenues for the U.S. energy industry could drop as much as $50 billion by the end of the decade, from $395 billion to $345 billion, Steffes said.

A 60-page report prepared by the company shows current conservation efforts are "structural in nature," and will "take place with a good economy as well as a poor economy."

"Even with the world glut of energy today," the report said, "they (energy companies) are still talking conservation and scarcity. They need to stress adequate energy and positive talking."

The amount of money Americans spend on energy as a percentage of their total consumer spending has declined from a peak of 10 percent in 1980 to close to 8 percent today and should not go above 10 percent again, the report said.

"Many of the multi-national companies talk about the shortage to keep prices up," Steffes said."The majority of people today still think we're going to run out of energy.

Frosting just icing on cake

By LINDA ANDERSON

The frosting on cakes I make never looks like the frosting on cakes in TV commercials.

Getting frosting to that "just-right" stage is difficult. When I spread homemade frosting on the cake, it is either so stiff it rips off half the layer, or it is so limp the plate gets more frosting than the cake.

Betty Crocker's frosting-in-a-can commercials show a smooth, creamy, easy-to-spread frosting gliding perfectly over a luscious cake, making the entire creation a work of art.

I decided I had to try canned frosting so I, too, could attain perfection in my baking and impress family and friends.

We tested Betty Crocker canned vanilla frosting ("Creamy Deluxe," according to the label) against Duncan Hines canned vanilla frosting (also "Creamy Frosting," according to its label) for taste, texture, price and advertising accuracy. In the group of taste testers were adults, teenagers and children.

Both frostings are identical in price — Betty Crocker frosting cost $1.49 for a 16-oz. tub, and Duncan Hines frosting cost $1.49 for a 16½-oz. tub. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Both products' labels describe the frostings as "creamy," although cream is not listed as an ingredient in either. (Duncan Hines frosting does contain some non-fat milk.)

Betty Crocker frosting is advertised as containing butter. According to information on its label, not only does it contain butter but margarine as well. In fact, magarine is listed second in the list of ingredients and butter is listed fifth — which means the frosting probably contains a respectible amount of both.

Most of the adult taste-testers preferred the Betty Crocker frosting over the Duncan Hines. One adult tester said Duncan Hines frosting had a "metallic" taste. Several described the Betty Crocker brand as "buttery" before they were aware the frosting actually contains butter.

One adult tester preferred Duncan Hines, which he said was "creamier and not as sweet." He said Betty Crocker frosting was "too sweet."

The teenage testers also thought the Betty Crocker frosting was too sweet. One preferred it over Duncan Hines, but the other said, "(Betty Crocker frosting) is too sweet and I can't taste the other at all."

The 3-year-old tester is a great fan of frosting of any kind. She usually eats the frosting and leaves the cake. This taste test was no exception — she ate both frostings and said "M-m-m-m!" The 1-year-old tester enjoyed squishing both the cake and the frostings between her fingers but expressed no preference.

The general consensus was the Betty Crocker frosting tasted good for a canned frosting, and is highly recommended to people who want to make pretty cakes with fool-proof frostings.

But homemade — even when it gets mushy or slides off the cake — tastes much better.

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. In addition to washing my wooden cutting board, I also scrub it with a salt solution. I am concerned, however, about wooden spoons and utensils. My husband likes to cook and he'll use nothing but wooden utensils to stir all types of food.

These utensils are rough textured and I feel the food goes into the wood and so they're not safe to use, even though they are thoroughly washed. He says I'm crazy, and he'll think I'm crazy for sure for writing, so don't use my name. Name Withheld, Decatur, Ill.

A. Wooden utensils used for cooking offer minimum risk. So says Linda Garcia, home advisor with the cooperative extension of the University of California. Garcia says thorough washing and drying will remove most of the food and bacteria. Secondly, the heat used in cooking will kill any survivors.

Garcia explains that the main concern with wooden utensils and cutting boards is cross-contamination to foods that will not be cooked. Even then, the foods need to be low acid and must stand at room temperature for a sufficient time (four hours) to really become a food poisoning risk.

After washing, rinse the utensils or board in a dilute chlorine bleach solution. Two tablespoons of liquid laundry bleach in a gallon of warm water is an effective sanitizer all around the house. The salt scrub done on the wooden board helps remove soil and grease and inhibits microbial growth, but doesn't kill all organisms.

Q. Is there any way to restore brown sugar after it has turned hard as a rock in my kitchen cabinet because the package was opened? I've thrown out more pounds of brown sugar! C. Dubee, Santa Rosa, Calif.

A. "If brown sugar should dry and harden," writes R.J. Masie, manager at California and Hawaiian Sugar, "empty it into a rust-proof container. Place a wad of dampened (not dripping wet) paper towel or paper napkin on a small piece of plastic wrap or foil on top of the sugar. Cover tightly. The sugar absorbs the moisture and becomes soft in a day or two. When softness is restored, remove the paper towel and keep the container tightly closed."

Incidentally, to measure brown sugar, always remember to pack it into a measuring cup. If you don't, you'll be using less sugar than the recipe requires.

Flea powder inventor 'ticked off'

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — A Georgia entrepreneur has developed a product that he believes a lot of people are itching to get their hands on — a flea and tick powder that is free of potentially dangerous chemicals and safe enough to use on the puppy that the baby likes to cuddle.

But after four months of getting what he considers a regulatory runaround from the federal government, the inventor is plenty ticked off.

"I talked to a guy from one of the major chemical companies and he told me I was going to have to hire a consultant to hand-carry it through," said C.L. Cantrell, who developed the flea potion at a tiny firm called American Organics in Orchard Hill, Ga.

The plight of American Organics demonstrates what promoters of natural pest control have long contended is a bug in the formidable registration system set up by the nation's pesticide law and the Environmental Protection Agency.

A regulatory scheme designed to deal with chemical weapons and proprietary interests, they argue, is bound to produce a bias against a product that typically doesn't kill and sometimes can't even be patented.

YOU CAN brew up all the garlic-and-hot-pepper spray you want for your backyard vegetable patch, in other words, but you'll play hob trying to sell it premixed in the garden supply store.

Cantrell, for example, has been nipping away at the EPA since early February, trying to get an official go-ahead for the flea powder and another all-natural product that he says will repel snakes.

So far, his efforts have produced little more than a stack of EPA requests for toxicological profiles and safety data. A bit heavy, perhaps, for concoctions that Cantrell said are made of "completely harmless foodstuffs and natural products that have been around since the beginning of time."

"There isn't a thing in there that you couldn't buy in a grocery store or off a shelf in the drugstore," said the bewildered inventor, and the EPA generally agrees.

LAT Photo

C.L. Cantrell of Greeneville, S.C., has invented a flea powder he says is safe, but he's had trouble getting federal approval.

"The stuff he's got in it probably isn't hazardous," said Tim Gardner, an official in EPA's pesticide registration division. "But he's going to have to comply as if it were some extraordinarily toxic chemical."

Gardner attributed Cantrell's problem to a 1983 court order, in a case filed by the Monsanto Co., that prohibited the EPA from using corporate data in its files to process registrations from competing firms. That meant that new applicants, such as Cantrell, either had to provide their own health and safety data or agree to reimburse a competitor for the use of existing data.

THE SUPREME Court nullified that court order in June, but it isn't clear that the decision will help American Organics get its flea powder registered. The EPA just doesn't have a bank of data on foodstuffs.

While he is as protective of his formula as any Fortune 500 chemical company, Cantrell said that the active ingredients in his products include "things like yeast."

According to Gardner, "Yeast has never been registered as a new chemical. There is nothing similar to it anywhere (in the agency's registration files). You can sell it in the grocery store all you want, but he's going to have to get all that data. If it kills fleas, it's gotta be toxic."

DEAR ABBY

Child molester's wife tries to forgive, forget

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have learned after 30 years of marriage that my husband is a bisexual and a molester of young boys. He is a professional person and a pillar of the church.

I also learned that he molested our oldest son during the boy's teen-age years.

Our four children are professional people. If my husband gets caught by the police, he will disgrace us all. He says he loves me, and begs me to accept this weakness of his. My children want me to forgive him and do nothing about it, but I find this hard to do.

Should I try to stick it out? I am 60 years old. Please don't mention my city. This is ... A FAMILY AFFAIR

DEAR FAMILY AFFAIR: When a known child molester is allowed to go free to molest more children, it is NOT a family affair, it's a crime against society.

Your husband has more than a "weakness"; he is sick and in need of treatment. It is your obligation to do whatever is necessary to get him to a doctor. Insist upon it. If he refuses, you must turn him in.

DEAR ABBY: My in-laws are super people, but a few years ago they started a practice that I found objectionable. We have two sons, 3 and 5, and on the birthday of one grandchild they bring two gifts — one for the birthday boy, and another for his brother so he wouldn't feel left out.

I think a birthday is a very special day for a child, and he shouldn't have to share it with anyone else. Each child will have his special day, so it's not as though one child is being favored over the other.

When my in-laws started this, I hinted that it wasn't necessary, but either they didn't get the hint or they chose to ignore it.

How do you feel about this, Abby? — MOTHER OF TWO

DEAR MOTHER: I think it's a very considerate gesture. It shouldn't diminish the joy of the birthday boy if his brother receives a small gift.

DEAR ABBY: This is in reference to the older woman, "Mrs. Eastman," who took great offense when a dental hygienist addressed her as "Gertrude." In all fairness, I think you should print a professional's point of view. I work for a dentist, and I mean no disrespect when I address people by their first names.

I put my foot in my mouth when I went into the waiting room and announced, "Mrs. Walker." Mrs. Walker turned to me and abruptly said, "It's ANN Walker — I'm divorced!"

Having learned my lesson, in calling the next patient I announced, "Mr. Edwards." Mr. Edwards turned out to be 4 years old!

Another time I announced, "Mrs. Brown," and a man stepped forward. (His first name was Connie.) That's when I decided to glance a little more carefully at the patients' charts. — DENTAL ASSISTANT

Towns honor Olympic medalists

Retton

FAIRMONT, W.Va. (AP) — U.S. Olympics gold medal winners Mary Lou Retton and Jerry Page will be immortalized in their home towns, where a street and school corridor were named after them, respectively.

The Fairmont City Council on Tuesday reconsidered its earlier rejection and voted to rename a section of Beverly Road to Mary Lou Retton Drive.

Some residents of the road, where Ms. Retton's family also lives, had opposed the change, saying they would be inconvenienced by the address switch. They also said there was historic significance to the road's original name, the Fairmont-Beverly Turnpike, which connected Fairmont to the town of Beverly.

But Councilwoman Faith Bowyer said those claims were irrelevant.

"This is new history," she said of the Fairmont native's becoming the first U.S. woman to win a gold medal in gymnastics. "It is something very special."

And in Columbus, Ohio, the main hallway of Windsor Elementary School is now "Page Hall," in honor of the school's most famous alumnus, who won a gold medal in boxing in the Summer Games.

Page dropped by his old school in an impoverished section of town Tuesday to emphasize to students the need for a good education.

Principal Don Leake was delighted by the 23-year-old boxer's presence.

"He had all the odds stacked against him, and he went out and did it," Leake said. "We have a lot of children here who have traditionally had the odds stacked against them."

Prince Charles

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles will make his debut later this month as a children's storyteller on TV, the British Broadcasting Corp. announced Wednesday.

The 35-year-old heir to the British throne will read his own best-selling story, "The Old Man of Lochnagar," on the Sept. 26 edition of the BBC's children's show "Jackanory," said Edward Barnes, the network's head of children's programs.

Charles wrote the tale when he was 21 to amuse his younger brothers, princes Andrew and Edward.

The story, which became a best-selling book, describes the adventures of an old man who lives in a cave at the foot of Lochnagar Mountain on the royal estate of Balmoral, in Scotland.

Brown

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — James Brown, the "Godfather of Soul," says he's just as disappointed as the thousands of fans who were sent away when his free concert was rained out.

Brown agreed to reschedule his Labor Day performance at Rodney Square for Tuesday, but city officials, fearing more rain, canceled the second concert.

"It's a shame. I am very, very sorry we couldn't perform," Brown said from his Hotel DuPont suite. "We agreed to do a show Tuesday free of charge. We had another job, but we wanted the people to see us so we stayed on. Now we may not get to see you for another year."

Donna-Marie Smith, the city's special projects coordinator, said it should be known within two days if a new date can be arranged.

"In the future, we'll be back together," promised Brown. But in the meantime, he said, young people should "stay away from drugs, stay in school and trust in God."

NEW YORK (AP) — The torch from the Statue of Liberty will ride atop a float in the Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena, Calif., on New Year's Day, it was announced Wednesday.

Barron Hilton, the hotel tycoon whose corporation is aiding in the arrangements, said the torch, which was removed from the statue as part of a restoration program, will grace a 55-foot float.

On the same float, he said, will be Deborah Wolfe of West Virginia, who is Mrs. America. The float will be decked with roses, orchids and irises.

A campaign to raise $230 million from citizens and other private sources for the restoration of the statue, which will be 100 years old in 1986, and of nearby Ellis Island is under way.

The original torch, which will be placed in a museum, is being replaced because of corrosion by the elements.

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Prince Felipe de Borbon, heir to the Spanish throne, flew Wednesday to Canada, where he will study during the next nine months.

The 16-year-old crown prince and his mother, Queen Sofia, flew aboard a Spanish air force DC-8.

The prince has enrolled in the Lakefield School, 80 miles from Toronto.

After completion of his studies there, he will enter the infantry, navy and air force academies, a tradition among Spanish kings.

The prince was seen off at the airport by his father, King Juan Carlos, and Premier Felipe Gonzalez.

Zachry

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — H.B. "Pat" Zachry, whose construction company spanned the globe building dams, roads, nuclear power plants and even temporary shelter for Middle East armies, died Wednesday of a stroke. He was 82.

H.B. Zachry Co. constructed part of the Alaskan pipeline, laid roads in Peru and Chile, erected dams in the United States and Canada and ventured into the Sinai to construct modular housing for peacekeeping troops.

BERLIN (AP) — Leonid A. Kostandov, 68, the deputy Soviet premier, died Wednesday of a heart attack during an official visit to East Germany.

Kostandov worked in Central Asia for several years before being named to a succession of government posts, chairman of the State Committee for the Chemical Industry during the 1960s. He was appointed as one of the Soviet Union's 10 deputy premiers Nov. 4, 1980.

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) — Bessie Jones, a singer of ethnic black songs who was recognized in 1982 as one of the nation's leading folk artists, died Tuesday at the age of 82.

Mrs. Jones began performing professionally in 1955, singing music originated by slaves on the Georgia sea islands. In 1971, she and Brunswick residents Douglas and Frankie Quimby began touring as the Sea Island Singers, making records and starting an annual folk festival on St. Simons Islan eight years ago.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Harry Delmar, a vaudeville producer and soft-shoe artist who gave Jackie Gleason a break and taught Milton Berle to dance, has died of cancer, 11 days before his 102nd birthday.

Delmar died Aug. 29 at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles, hospital spokesman Ron Wise said Wednesday.

A memorial Mass was scheduled for Saturday — Delmar's birthday — at a Hollywood church.

Born in St. Louis, Mo., Delmar starred with Jeanette Hackett as part of the noted vaudeville dance team "Hackett and Delmar."

Orchestra gets good reviews in Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The New York Philharmonic Orchestra won enthusiastic reviews today after a sell-out concert here, part of a Southeast Asian tour made controversial when Malaysia asked that a Hebrew rhapsody be scratched from the program.

Conductor Zubin Mehta drew calls for an encore from a crowd of 3,000 people, who clapped for the orchestra's performance of Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 5 in C-sharp Minor here Wednesday evening.

In the audience were diplomats and members of President Suharto's Cabinet.

The audience appeared moved when Mehta asked them to stand up for a moment of silence in respect to former Indonesian Vice President Adam Malik, who died Wednesday from cancer.

The orchestra will play a second concert here tonight before leaving for Singapore.

The Malaysian government stirred protests when it requested that the orchestra remove "Schelomo," a Hebrew rhapsody by Ernest Bloch, from the musical program. The government said it considered the piece offensive to Malaysia's mainly Moslem population.

Instead, the philharmonic canceled its appearance in Malaysia and added a stop in Bangkok, Thailand.

Tour spokesmen in Indonesia, whose population is also mainly Moslem, said the program for the philharmonic was prepared months ago and that the Hebrew rhapsody was not included.

Opening lead: 10 of ♠.

For the most part, believe your opponents. They are honest fellows. A pair of world champions failed to heed this advice — to their cost.

Some years ago in the European Championships, Michel Lebel, North, and Paul Chemla, South, who have been mainstays of France's international squad for many years, reached seven diamonds on the sequence shown. East's double was for an unusual lead, in this instance spades, but North, who knew that his partner had only four spades and heart shortness, thought the danger in a major-suit lead was, at worst, remote. South's redouble was to reassure his partner about the quality of his hand — he had not come close to showing the extra values he possessed.

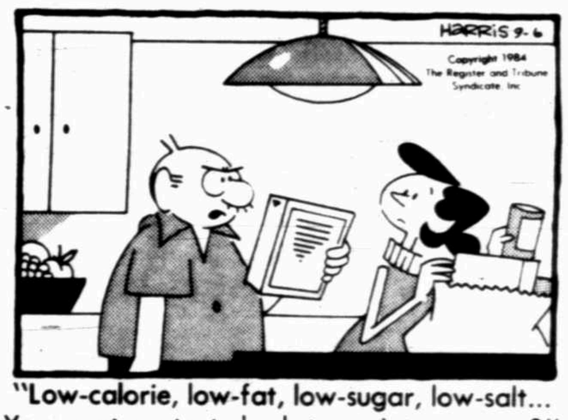

But remote is not a synonym for impossible. West knew which major to lead, and East ruffed the opening spade lead for a one-trick set.

If either North or South had chosen to believe the opponents, he could have pulled to seven no trump. Even though there are only 12 top tricks, declarer can claim the contract. When declarer runs his eight red-suit winners, West's whole hand counts out after he shows up with only one heart and no diamonds.

West must find seven discards on the red winners. He can part with five spades and one club, but the last red card squeezes him unmercifully. He must either sluff a spade and promote a third spade trick for declarer, or else part with a club and allow the table to score the fulfilling trick with the third club.

Friday, September 7, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actors Peter Lawford, Richard Roundtree and Anthony Quayle, actor-director Elia Kazan, Sen. Daniel Inouye (D-Hawaii), and medicine's Dr. Michael DeBakey share your birthday. Also born on this date: Queen Elizabeth I, Grandma Moses and rock 'n' roll singer Buddy Holly. New commitments give more meaning to your life. Welcome changes where your career and financial arrangements are concerned. Greater public recognition is possible. Property deals provide continuous income growth. Family members draw closer together. A romance survives a challenge to emerge stronger than ever. Devote the same effort to your home life that you give to your work. A child follows your example.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be sure to guard your cash and credit cards when traveling. A new neighbor adds excitement to the day. Romance could be part of the picture. Plan a fun but casual evening.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Try not to act like a possesive parent when around new in-laws. Entertaining one or two people is more fun than hosting a large party. Your earnings increase.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Domestic affairs demand your attention. You could find yourself with new responsibilities. The workday is busy and productive. Thoughts of the weekend spur you on. Romance looks promising.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You benefit from other people's mistakes. Money owed you is paid in full. A battle of egos could thwart romance; compromise and love will triumph. Obey all traffic regulations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Pursue your goals with zeal and you will reap lasting rewards. Work conditions are excellent; you get a chance to impress higher-ups with your talents. An evening at home recharges your batteries.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You find yourself very attracted to someone with a totally different background. Romance surfaces. Avoid going to extremes at work or at home. Steer clear of anyone who has a shady reputation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Expect the unexpected today and be flexible. Someone who flatters you could have an ulterior motive. Do no let your obstinacy make your co-workers or family unhappy. Concessions please everyone.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You receive support from an unexpected and somewhat mysterious quarter. Take care of your obligations before turning your attention to pleasure. Do not allow a romance to affect your good judgment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Contracts and agreements signed today will work to your advantage. Be more understanding when dealing with children, especially teen-agers. An attractive newcomer arouses your interest.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A wonderful day for contract negotiations. Strike while the iron is hot. Supplement your income by moonlighting at a second job. Develop interests outside your work. Romance flourishes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Business and financial matters claim your attention. Emotional involvement could be complicating a career decision. Talk things over with partner. A heart-to-heart chat improves romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Several surprises and beneficial changes are in the wind. A long journey could bring lasting rewards. Love at first sight is a very real possibility! Follow your heart.

Tiny museum home to voracious catfish

By MIKE COCHRAN

FRITCH, Texas (AP) — Beneath the water tower and across from the Dairy Queen is a tiny museum with a dead rattler, a live catfish and a director named Midge Savage, who says:

"Each day I come in and do a head count to see who's eaten who during the night!"

What Ms. Savage needs is a muzzle for her 30-pound catfish, or at least a sign at the Lake Meredith Aquatic & Wildlife Museum that warns: "Beware of Catfish."

"One night that rascal ate my turtle, two walleyes, a yellow perch and a sand bass...I did say a few unkind words to him."

With unfailing good humor, Ms. Savage oversees this splendid little museum jammed with visual delights rarely found in larger and more sophisticated facilities.

It showcases the wildlife and archeological wonders of the Texas High Plains and the fish and fowl found in and around nearby Lake Meredith, a sparkling oasis in this dry and windswept geographic region known as the Llano Estacado, or staked plains.

Fritch itself, "the heart of Lake Meredith," is a spunky little Panhandle town of 2,500 north of Amarillo and just south of Borger. It lies midway between Dallas and Denver and is closer to the state capitals of New Mexico and Oklahoma than to Austin.

Fritch considers itself the gateway to the Alibates Flint Quarries National Monument, an archeological goldmine still under development by the National Park Service.

Archeological traces of prehistoric Indians abound throughout the entire Canadian River system, and tools and weapons fashioned from Alibates flint are on display in the museum.

The museum, which resembles a desert outpost in a very old John Wayne movie, was dedicated in 1976 as a bicentennial project of the City of Fritch, the National Park Service and the local bicentennial committee.

It stands today as a self-styled "monument to community pride and dedication" and the home of the hungriest catfish in captivity.

Ms. Savage says the museum attracts an average of 20,000 visitors a year.

It features five aquariums containing 11,000 gallons of water and everything from walleye, bass, crappie and carp to the aforementioned flathead catfish.

Counting turtles, there may be 16 species to look at.

"You'll notice, the fish kind of like to look at us, too," observed Ms. Savage as she and a visitor peered at a large mouth bass, which peered right back.

The most visually stunning of the exhibits are six lifesize dioramas of wildlife preserved in their natural habitat. They include bobcats, turkeys, raccoons, coyotes, eagles and pronghorns, the latter an antelope-like deer.

Paintings by local artist LaNelle Poling provide the backdrop for each display and range from a starkly beautiful wintertime scene with bobcats to a springtime romp with a family of coyotes.

"Coyotes will eat anything and one of their favorite foods is watermelon," Ms. Savage said. "They also kill lots of rabbits and rodents, and if it were not for coyotes, we'd be overrun by both."

Not uncommon to lose hair during pregnancy

Dear Dr. Solomon: I lost a lot of my hair while I was pregnant, but I have been told that it will grow back. I guess I need some reassurance. Is loss of hair during pregnancy only temporary? — Mrs. W.P., Aberdeen, Md.

Solomon

Dear Mrs. P.: It is not uncommon for a woman to lose hair during periods of stress, such as during pregnancy or when ill with a high fever. Loss of hair under these conditions does not result in permanent baldnes. In general, it takes about six months for the hair to regrow.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I usually drink in moderation but there are times, such as New Years Eve, when I really tie one on. No matter how loaded I am, however, I always have sense enough to know not to drive when I'm under the influence. What I would like to know is whether there is any way to tell when it is safe to start driving again. I can't very well go to the neighborhood police station and ask them to test the alcohol in my blood. — Kip, Atlanta

Dear Kip: Your blood alcohol concentration, even if it were attainable, might not provide the information you want. According to a study conducted in Sweden, a person who has a hangover may have his or her ability to drive impaired even when tests show the blood alcohol level to be zero.

There are a number of factors that determine a person's reaction to the ingestion of alcohol, and individual variations are the rule. The best advice I can give if you are not certain about your ability to drive is to err on the side of safety. Otherwise, you may find that there are some conditions that are even far worse than a hangover.

For Jimmy, Cedar Rapids, Iowa: Individuals who have osteoarthritis may have to change their lifestyles to achieve some relief. For example, many patients may be helped by resting during the day or by living on one floor, instead of going up and down a flight of stairs. Changes of this kind tend to reduce the stress on affected joints.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Crimes of the Heart

Paul Talbot and Renee Spicer rehearse this scene from the Midland Community Theatre production of the Pulitzer Prize winning comedy "Crimes of the Heart, slated to open Friday. The production will run through Sept. 22 in Theatre One at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. This play portrays the chaotic lives of the MaGrath sisters of Hazelhurst, Miss. For reservations or ticket information, call the theater's box office, 682-4111.

The recent works of Midland native Denny Pickett will be featured in an exhibition at Midland College's McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building, beginning Saturday.

The show, which will hang through Sept. 28, opens with a free public reception from 7 to 9 p.m. Saturday. It may be viewed, at no cost, Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m.

Pickett, an art instructor at MC from 1975-79, received his bachelor of arts degree in political science from Southwestern University, Georgetown, and his master of fine arts degree from Texas Tech University. When he left MC, he went to New York to concentrate fulltime on painting. He now lives in Georgetown.

His works have been honored as "Best of Show" at the eight annual Museum of the Southwest Regional Show and the Midland Arts Association Fall Show. They have also been selected for shows and competition in Houston, Lubbock, Fort Worth, Austin, El Paso and New York.

"Although my skyscapes are not pictorially real, they represent an image derived from years of gazing into the area's peaceful sunsets, turbulent thunderstorms, violent sandstorms and vast clear blue space," Pickett says of his work.

"As an artist, I am uncovering a personal link with the dynamic universe, a spiritual message from the area's vastness, and most important, a realization of the immense beauty in an area considered by many to be stark wasteland. This harsh desert, which is the ghost of a prehistoric ocean, represents the mystery of time as well as space."

Pickett suggests to the viewer of his paintings, to "imagine yourself as a soaring hawk high above the dynamic plains of West Texas."

For this exhibition, Pickett has selected 18 oil paintings on canvas. They range in size from 10 by 11 inches to 5 by 6 feet. Most of the paintings are available for purchase, with a commission going to the MC exhibition fund.

Council rejects New York City street vendors

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — The streetcorner pushcart may soon be an endangered creature in the Big Apple — going the way of the automat, the Checker cab and the good, cheap restaurant.

But the predator in this case isn't a sour economy, foreign competition or changing consumer tastes. It's City Hall, which won a key court victory Wednesday in its campaign to chase out the street vendors from the busiest streets in the city.

The vendors can be seen on virtually every corner in the city's midtown business district, hawking a mind-boggling assortment of foods.

There are hot dogs and pretzels, of course, plus ice cream in the summer and hot chestnuts in the winter. There also are knishes, egg rolls, souvlaki, shish-kabob, Italian ices and the newest streetcorner sensation: Toffutti, a bean curd-based dessert.

Unless a higher court halts the city's plans, pushcart vendors will be banned in about 10 days from midtown Manhattan and parts of Brooklyn and Queens. The carts, city officials have said, contribute to congestion by blocking busy sidewalks and streets.

"This is terrible," said vendor Carl Thomas, 36, standing over his heaping fruit cart near Grand Central Station. "I have to make a living, and I think a lot of people who came to this country made their way as small entrepreneurs."

Street vending, he said, "has been a part of America for a long, long time, and I think to close the doors now is neither wise nor compassionate."

"This is America," Thomas said, gesturing over his cart. "This is what our system is all about."

Thomas sets up his cart at 6:30 every morning and rolls it away after about a 12-hour day. He gets a lot of regular customers.

"Somebody will come and get an apple and a banana and they're happy with that for lunch," he said. "It costs them less than $1 and they don't have to go out to lunch. Believe me, vending has a lot of social value. It's not a negative — it's a benefit."

Wednesday's decision by acting state Supreme Court Justice Elliott Wilk lifted a temporary restraining order which had stopped the city from instituting its ban on vendors in the city's most congested areas.

According to attorneys in the case, Wilk said he would issue a written ruling later this week or early next week which will validate the legality of the city regulations. City officials said the regulations would be enforced seven days after vendors are notified, with notification beginning within 24 hours of the ruling.

Representatives for the city's 15,000 pushcart owners vowed to appeal to the court's Appellate Division. The Supreme Court is the trial court in New York.

Phyllis Arnold, an attorney for the city's corporation counsel, said the ban applies to "highly congested streets at highly congested times."

One of the vendors who would be affected is a 39-year-old Greek immigrant who identified himself as A.P., and who was minding his hot dog stand on Fifth Avenue during rush hour Wednesday.

"This is not right," he said, when told of the judge's decision. "If you say that, don't call the United States a free country."

If he is forced out of business, he said, in halting English, "The first thing, I want unemployment, welfare — I don't know what you call it. I've got three kids, a wife, I've got to pay rent. It's a lot to think about."

Woman wins suit against dating service

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

BRAINTREE, Mass. — Janet Carlino wanted someone to take her dancing. Instead, a dating service matched her with a scuba-diving veterinarian, a man who wanted to talk stocks and bonds and another who inquired about sex on the first date.

So the 42-year-old mother of two sued the dating service. She won $400.

"I think that they should do a better job of matching," said Ms. Carlino, a clerk with an insurance company. "They put men with me who weren't my type. They put me in the position to be rejected, rejected, rejected."

Hingham District Court Judge Alvin C. Tamkin ruled Tuesday that Ms. Carlino should be reimbursed $400 of the $495 fee she paid Together — The Personal Dating Service last June.

"I'm very pleased," she said. "I feel they should do some more screening."

Ms. Carlino signed up with the dating service at the suggestion of her daughter, paying $495 to meet from one to six single men a month for one year. She filled out the forms, listing her interests and hobbies. She likes movies, theater and dancing.

"I was looking for somebody with substance," she said.

Instead of finding a soulmate, Ms. Carlino was contacted by five men with widely different interests.

There was the biochemist: "I never met him. He wanted a career girl who could talk stocks, bonds and politics," she said.

The veterinarian who flies and scuba dives: "I was not what he was looking for," she said.

The owner of a jewelry store: "I had seen him locally at some dances before they gave me his name. He wasn't interested in me back then and I wasn't interested in him."

The dating service offered an "executive type" who hated to dance. Ms. Carlino loves to dance. The one thing they had in common was their disappointment with the dating service.

"He told me he wanted to get out of the contract himself," she said.

She met four of the men for coffee to see if they were compatible. One considered himself very compatible.

"He asked me if I believed in sex on the first date," she said.

Ms. Carlino was even given the name of an old beau whom she dated several years ago. "When the girl gave me his name I laughed," she said.

By July, Ms. Carlino had had enough.

"It was embarrassing. You size him up and he sizes you up and it's utterly ridiculous," she said.

When Together refused to reimburse her fee, she sued.

Brian Pappas, president of the 10-year-old dating service, said his company will appeal the court decision. Together advertises 50 offices and 30,000 clients nationwide.

"We're not a marriage bureau, nor do we make any promises except to try our best at matching clients through personal interviews," he said. "She never really gave us a chance."

But Ms. Carlino says she has found there are better places to meet men of her type. The supermarket, for instance.

"I've met nice people on my own," she said.

Twins quadrupling kindergarten confusion

ATHOL, Mass. (AP) — Normal first-day confusion quadrupled Wednesday in Joann Deacon's kindergarten class as four sets of identical twins started their schooling.

Mrs. Deacon said she was aware that four sets of twins were to be enrolled this year, but didn't learn until the last minute that Jessica and Jacqueline Debasitis, Jacqueline and Melissa Carey, Melissa and Tara Cowdrey and Christopher and Nathan Carlson all would be in her class.

She noted that the duplicate Jacquelines and Melissas and similarity in three surnames would add to confusion.

"I'm a little nervous," she said, "but I'm looking forward to it. It should be a real challenge."

Jennifer Saben, the teacher's assistant, said that "they may have to wear name tags all year."
