U.S. sends peace envoy

Clinton hopes Oakley can get talks 'back in gear'

■ President reiterates position: It's largely up to African leaders to work out solution.

Associated Press

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — President Clinton said Saturday he believes the dispatch of special envoy Robert Oakley to Somalia will get peace talks "back in gear" but that the United States is not negotiating directly with warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid.

He reiterated the administration position that it is largely up to African leaders to work out a solution for the violence-torn nation in which at least 18 U.S. servicemen have been killed during the past week in fighting with warriors believed to be under the direction of Aidid.

"We want to support a political process in Somalia that would permit the termination of our involvement . . . but there's been no direct communication," Clinton said.

"I think that the peace process, which

With booming simulated bombs, massive clouds of black smoke, the rat-a-tat-tat-tat of pseudo-machine gun fire, the acrid smell of smoke, children shrieking, and massive warbirds zooming by at treetop level, the air show is a transforming experience.

Property-tax bills to be up to month late

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Midland tax collectors are late in sending out property-tax notices to taxpayers.

Through no fault of their own, they are doing exactly what they warn taxpayers not to do year after year: Don't be late.

The yearly property-tax bills, normally in the mail by Oct. 1, will be up to a month late this year due to spinoffs of the old Robin Hood plan of school financing.

Under that now-defunct original plan, richer school districts, such as Andrews and Rankin, shared their wealth with the poorer school districts, such as Midland and Greenwood.

"Historically, we have always had our tax bills out by Oct. 1," said Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Kathy Reeves. "Texas law provides that we have the tax bills out by Oct. 1 or as soon thereafter as possible," Mrs. Reeves said. "We are doing it 'soon thereafter.'"

Mrs. Reeves, who collects taxes for Midland County and the Greenwood Independent School District, expects to put her tax notices — which represent about 117,000 pieces of property — in the mail within 10 days.

Ron Stegall, Midland Central Appraisal District's chief appraiser — who collects taxes for the city, Midland Independent School District, the Midland County Hospital District and Midland College — plans on having his tax notices posted by Nov. 5 after the MISD board sets the district's tax rate on Oct. 26.

"The board has already made their intentions known to set that (tax rate at $1.3873 per $100 valuation)," said MISD business manager Don Furgeson.

Based on a $3.32-billion tax base, that tax rate would generate more than $40

$189,744 in ambulance bills were free rides at taxpayers' expense

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

A 46-year-old woman, who lives about two blocks from the hospital, calls 911 and reports a medical crisis. A city ambulance rushes to her home and transports her to the emergency room.

The woman receives an ambulance ride about twice a week. She's usually released without treatment and walks home.

One time she called the ambulance because "she had her neighbor lady tell her she didn't look good," said Dianna Moore with the city of Midland's ambulance receivables.

"If the patient wants to ride we have to take them. We cannot deny anyone," Ms. Moore said.

For some it's a free ride — at taxpayers' expense.

Assistant principal orders strip search in Texas school

BROOKSHIRE (AP) — A strip-search of students at a high school southwest of Houston didn't turn up missing money, but it did raise the temperatures of some parents and students.

A school administrator ordered the strip-search of a first-year Spanish class at Royal High School Thursday after a student complained that $41 of her money was missing, officials said.

"It was horrible," said one girl who was searched. "It was very embarrassing — and nobody even took her money."

Some parents were upset but wanted to remain anonymous fearing retribution against their children, the Houston Chronicle reported. But their concerns led Principal Jimmy Davis to call for an investigation into the search of about 20 students.

Superintendent James Kemp did not immediately return calls to The Associated Press Saturday.

On the day of the search, top-level administrators were in a meeting, so the matter was referred to an assistant principal.

Students in the class were told over the school's intercom to report to the library. They were told that their parents had been contacted and had consented to having them searched, witnesses said.

Female students were taken to the nurse's office where they were told to strip to their undergarments, raise their bras and lower their panties for a visual inspection by the nurse.

Arab guerrillas launch jet ski attack on Israel

NAQOURA, Lebanon (AP) — Arab guerrillas riding jet skis in a daring attack on northern Israel were blown out of the sea Saturday by Israeli gunboats off Lebanon's southern coast.

One guerrilla, a Syrian, was killed in the failed pre-dawn raid, according to statements by the Israeli army and the Syria-backed Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

However, U.N. officers at an observation post in south Lebanon's border village of Naqoura said they saw the Israelis pull the bodies of two guerrillas and some debris from the water.

The attack was the first launched by Palestinian guerrillas on jet skis. Over the past 15 years, their innovative tactics have included hang gliders and motorized hot-air balloons.

Foiled jet ski assault might be placed in category with other innovative attacks in hang gliders, motorized hot-air balloons.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Marxist-oriented group, claimed responsibility for the attempted raid and said it was meant to protest the PLO-Israel peace accord.

It said its three-man squad landed on the Israeli coast "after penetrating all enemy lines" and clashed with an Israeli army patrol near the northern resort town of Naharaya.

A statement issued in the southern provincial capital of Sidon said the attack was launched to "underline the Palestinian people's determination to maintain the armed struggle until our right to statehood and self-determination is achieved."

Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin have said attacks by hardliners were likely to continue, but would not hinder their resolve to implement the agreement signed in Washington on Sept. 13.

Saturday's attack was the first sea offensive since the accord was signed. The U.N. officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said four Israeli gunboats fired on the jet skis shortly before daybreak off Naqoura.

Report blames Palestinians for 2 deaths

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinians shot and stabbed two Israeli hikers in a gorge in the occupied West Bank on Saturday in the first fatal guerrilla attack on civilians since the signing of the Israel-PLO peace accord last month.

Israel radio said there were reports a woman hiker was also hurt, possibly killed, and that searches would continue Sunday.

The killings came only hours after the Israeli navy thwarted an infiltration attempt from Lebanon claimed by a radical PLO faction opposed to reconciliation with Israel.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin on Saturday condemned the attacks, but vowed to stick with the peace process.

"I know it's not easy to talk about peace on a day that they are trying to infiltrate from the sea and are murdering innocent hikers in the Judean Desert," Rabin told a gathering of his Labor Party. "But who is doing it, and for what reason? (They are doing it) to provide ammunition to the opponents of peace on both sides. We are determined. We said it wouldn't be easy . . . but we have to keep our eyes on the target."

Negotiations on the implementation of the agreement on autonomy in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho are to begin Wednesday in Cairo and the Egyptian resort of Taba.

Saturday's attack took place in Wadi Kelt, a gorge through the Judean hills between Jerusalem and Jericho. The area is popular with hikers, and on Saturday hundreds of Israelis were touring there.

The two Israelis were stabbed, bludgeoned with stones and shot at about 2:30 p.m., the army and media reports said.

A group of hikers heard the shots and saw several people fleeing, and alerted security forces.

The assailants fled in stolen cars, apparently toward the West Bank town of Ramallah.

Study suggests importance of Mideast water

JERUSALEM (AP) — A secret study says Israel could give back land in the West Bank and Golan Heights if it guaranteed access to water in those areas or from alternate sources.

Details of the study, kept under wraps by successive Israeli governments since the start of the peace talks two years ago, were revealed Friday by the daily Haaretz newspapers and confirmed by officials.

Researched by two engineers of the state water company Tahal, the report defines water as perhaps the second most vital issue — after security — in the peace talks with the Arabs.

"A concession here can only be made possible if and when there is an unequivocable political benefit," said the report, as quoted by Haaretz.

Joseph Alpher, who commissioned the study for the Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies at Tel Aviv University, suggested Israel would want access to water in the West Bank and Golan even if it relinquished them. The lands were taken from Jordan and Syria, respectively, in the 1967 Middle East war.

"If we do give up water resources, some compromise or measure will be necessary to insure that we have access to the water," he told The Associated Press.

"Water is essential. It doesn't mean you can't withdraw, but you can't withdraw without making certain Israel's supply of water is secure," Alpher said.

The water resources in the occupied lands have become more important to Israel over the years because of population growth. The Arabs are demanding the return of all occupied land and control over its resources.

Commander links NATO force, accord

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) — NATO won't commit forces to Bosnia unless a sweeping peace plan is signed and its terms are met, the U.N. commmander in the former Yugoslavia said Saturday.

"If, starting on the day of signature of the agreement, things go fairly well, then we can probably count on NATO's arrival," said Gen. Jean Cot of France, who heads a United Nations peacekeeping force of nearly 25,000 troops.

But he added: "If, conversely, things go badly, NATO will not come."

Cot's remarks came a day after the presidents of Bosnia and Croatia appealed for a deployment of NATO troops in disputed Bosnian territory, followed by arbitration on a partition plan.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization has been preparing to send up to 50,000 troops to enforce a possible Bosnian peace accord. But the United States, which would provide about half the soldiers, has said it would send them only to cement an established peace.

In neighboring Bosnia, fighting continued to flare Saturday. Lt. Col. Bill Aikman, a U.N. spokesman in Sarajevo, said fighting was especially intense between government and Croat forces in the central Bosnian town of Gornji Vakuf and in the southwestern city of Mostar.

Government and Serb forces near Vitez, also in central Bosnia, each exchanged 200 prisoners Saturday in the biggest such deal in the area since the war began, said Salka Beba, an intelligence officer with the Bosnian army.

Meanwhile, a proposal to divide Bosnia among its warring Serb, Croat and Muslim factions appeared hopelessly stalled. The Muslim-dominated parliament has said it will sign only if Serbs return more captured territory — something they have refused to do.

Bosnia's war erupted in April 1992 when Serbs rebelled over a vote by the republic's Muslims and Croats to secede from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia. As many as 200,000 people are believed dead or missing in the fighting.

STATE

Fall-like weather dominated Texas Saturday, as cool temperatures and scattered showers were reported throughout the state.

In West Texas, a cold front extending from El Paso to the Big Bend caused temperatures to dip into the 50s, though parts of the region were still in the 80s.

Today should be sunny in the area, although far West Texas and the Big Bend may see thunderstorms. Highs today should reach the 70s, and lows were expected in the 40s.

The eastern portion of South Texas was hit by showers Saturday, but most of the region had sunny skies. Temperatures were mostly in the 80s and 90s, but dipped into the 70s in some areas. South Texas should have continued scattered showers today, with highs in the 80s.

North Texas was sunny but cool Saturday with temperatures mostly in the 50s and 60s. Today should be fair and cool, with highs in the low 70s and lows in the 40s.

ORDER: Principal calls for strip search

(From 1A)

The male students went to the office of the assistant principal, who allegedly ordered the search and had them strip down to their underwear.

Some parents say they were not contacted about the search. Others said they consented only to a cursory search.

Administrators Friday called strip searches a last resort and were unclear on the district's policy about them. Such procedures were rarely employed and never had been used on an entire class of students, according to teachers who asked to remain anonymous.

School Board President Elton Foster declined Friday night to comment on district policies or the incident, saying the matter will be discussed Monday night at a school board meeting.

"We are awaiting completion of the investigation," Foster said. "I don't think any district in the state is without problems regarding discipline.

"We are trying to provide the best possible learning environment we can. I hope that focus has not diminished by what has happened in this case."

PAY: Taxpayers foot bill for unpaid rides

(From 1A)

the $150-apiece ambulance rides. She doesn't even acknowledge the city's bills.

And she's not alone.

City Council recently performed their annual write-off for uncollectible delinquent accounts for emergency medical services.

The write-off doesn't mean the city will stop trying to collect the money owed from the year before last. The measure is necessary for accounting house-keeping.

Delinquent ambulance bills from the 1992 fiscal year totaled $189,744, down from $207,202 the year before.

City officials estimate that another 15 to 20 percent of the amount owed eventually will be paid.

For fiscal 1992, the city received about a quarter-million dollars from paying customers. Emergency medical services' budget for that year was $753,536, compared to the $794,871 allocated for fiscal 1994.

"It's a money-loser as you can see," said Assistant City Manager Rick Menchaca.

People don't pay for the ride — that could save their lives — for a variety of reasons.

Many non-paying patients are repeat riders, although not usually to the extent of above example, Ms. Moore said.

And most don't have insurance, and some are indigent, she said.

Other delinquent accounts are the result of lengthy processing by insurance companies, a dispute of who's responsible for the bill (as in some car accidents), the patient can't be located, and the expense isn't always covered by Medicare, Menchaca said.

And some people just don't want to pay, he added.

"We send a bill every 28 days until we get a response (or) until the 90th day and at that time we hand it over to the collection agency," Menchaca said.

Naturally, non-payment will affect customers' credit ratings.

For an ambulance call the city charges $150 within the city and $175 plus mileage for runs in the county.

From January to August of this year, the city made 3,727 runs with 88 percent within the city.

The Fire Department, which operates the emergency medical services, responded to 999 fire calls in the same period.

In other cities, the service provider varies between city government, hospitals, private carriers and joint ventures.

"Those (cities) that do don't break even," Menchaca said. "But if we stop doing it no one's going to take over."

Midland Fire Chief James Roberts said the city started partial ambulance services in 1974 and took over completely in 1976. Before that, a local funeral home provided the service.

When the city took over, officials were aware that the service would be tax-supported and patient fees wouldn't cover all expenses but that users would pay for part of the service, Roberts said.

Nevertheless, the city has taken some measures to increase the collection rate, such as prompter billing and mailing more reminders.

The city discussed consolidating billing with the hospital but it was concluded that the hospital's collection rate for such services would not be any better than the city's, Roberts said.

Ambulance bills are not the only uncollectibles the city acknowledges, but are by far the largest.

City Council recently wrote off $44,697 in delinquent miscellaneous accounts for fiscal year 1992, which includes bills back to 1987.

Those bills not paid include rent on city buildings, damage to city vehicles and property such as a stop sign, and even $30 for disposing a dead horse.

The city also writes off uncollectible water and sewer bills, which were about $55,000 the last time, or about 0.25 percent of $22 million in fiscal revenues for the service.

That rate fares better than the industry standard of an uncollected 2 percent of total revenues.

Menchaca said Midland has a better rate because the city is able to increase a deposit based on consumer's history and to file a lien on homeowner's property.

In perspective to the city's $75 million budget, uncollectibles account for less than 0.4 percent.

LATE: Funding problems slow tax collectors million in tax funds for MISD.

Tax rates for the other taxing jurisdictions in Midland County are: city of Midland, 67.93 cents per $100 valuation; MC, 10.53 cents; hospital district, 17.79 cents; Midland County, 23.56 cents, and GISD, $1.915.

Both MISD and GISD are former members of the Andrews-Midland County Education District (CED). And Midland and Greenwood benefited from the Andrews County school district's wealth fueled mainly by taxation on petroleum.

"The (latest) problem that all the (Texas) jurisdictions are having this year is with the school funding," Mrs. Reeves said.

After the Legislature's Robin Hood method of school financing was deemed unconstitutional by the Texas Supreme Court, the so-called wealthier school districts were given limited options on how to re-distribute their excess revenue to other public schools, other than through the phased-out CEDs, informally termed the "Robin Hood" plan.

After the CEDs were killed off, MISD and GISD boards were forced to postpone setting their tax rates until after Andrews County held an election to decide how it would re-distribute part of its school-district wealth.

Andrews opted to funnel the money directly to the Texas coffers for re-distribution rather than taking other options, such as busing students from one school district to another, assigning taxable property directly to other school districts, or paying to educate students in other school districts.

However, the revised system, is basically the same as the old Robin Hood approach, Mrs. Reeves said.

"I think this is something we will be struggling with for a long, long time," she said.

State-wide, approximately 100 "property-rich school districts were forced to hold elections to see what they were going to do with their excess money," Stegall said.

In West Texas, those so-called wealthy school districts include Crane, Seminole, Rankin, Garden City and Andrews, Stegall said.

While property or ad valorem taxes theoretically are due on Oct. 1, they do not become delinquent until Feb. 1. Taxes not paid until then are subject to a 7 percent penalty-and-interest fee, which grows to 15 percent by June.

However, Stegall and Mrs. Reeves said, taxpayers may pay half of their tax bills before Dec. 1 and then pay the balance at mid-year without incurring penalty-and-interest fees.

"That deadline is still there, too," Stegall said.

"Our (tax notices) won't be a month late, so they will have plenty of time to make half payments before Dec. 1" and to pay off the rest by June 30, Mrs. Reeves said.

Otherwise, taxpayers will not be granted extensions to pay their tax bills even though the tax collectors were late in sending out notices.

"The Texas Property Tax Code says if (tax) bills are sent out as late as December, the delinquency date does not change," Mrs. Reeves said. "You have to give them (taxpayers) at least 21 days notice."

CRISIS: Clinton sends peace envoy to Somalia

sort of got derailed over the last several months, is going to get back in gear," he added.

Oakley, who stopped in bordering Ethiopia en route to Somalia, was expected to try to revive the tentative agreement reached by Aidid and the leaders of 14 other Somali clans in March to cooperate in creating a transitional government.

Oakley represented the Bush administration in Somalia and has held face-to-face talks with Aidid, as well as other warlords, in the past.

Clinton, who talked to reporters about Somalia after visiting Yale University for an alumni reunion, made clear that the United States wants the African states to take the lead.

"We believe that over the long run, the only way the Somalis can live in peace with one another is if their neighbors work out an African solution to an African problem," Clinton said.

He denied the United States had offered a cease-fire to Aidid or engaged in any negotiations to bring about an exchange of prisoners.

"There's been no direct negotiation," he said.

If Aided offered a cease-fire?

"That's fine," Clinton said. "He ought to stop the violence."

But the president repeatedly put the focus on the need to "see what kind of political process that the African people themselves can get going."

Oakley is trying to set up an African commission to investigate charges that Aidid is responsible for attacks on American and Pakistani peacekeepers, U.S. officials said.

While Clinton has said Aidid would not be barred from a role in a new government, Oakley will not see him or negotiate with him, according to administration officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

He said he was encouraged by Oakley's reception in the region.

"The greatest likelihood of a successful political resolution would be if the African leaders of the adjoining states took the initiative and they tried to work out a solution which reflected whatever is possible and whatever is desirable as they define it, and I don't think we ought to be defining it for them," Clinton said.

The president said he is hopeful Chief Warrant Officer Michael J. Durant will be released but insisted that "there have been no negotiations over that at all. None." However, he added: "We're going to have all of our people present and accounted for before we go home."

Secretary of State Warren Christopher and Anthony Lake, the U.S. national security adviser, spoke to Oakley by telephone from the White House on Friday night about the diplomatic initiative Clinton ordered last week while announcing he would withdraw all U.S. troops by March 31.

One element of the package, which is being pursued through Ethiopian intermediaries, would involve calling off the hunt for Aidid if he agreed to a cease-fire. The warlord has been in hiding for months and special U.S. Army units in Somalia have been unable to find and arrest him.

Aidid reportedly went on the radio in Somalia on Saturday and accepted the outline of a U.S. peace offer. But the officials said it had not been formally presented to him and that no word had been received from him.

Meanwhile, a Time-CNN poll released Saturday found 60 percent of those surveyed disapproved of having troops in Somalia, while 36 percent approved. That was a dramatic shift from a similar survey taken Sept. 23, when 46 percent approved and 43 percent disapproved.

Presidential counselor David Gergen said the latest poll came at a time of high emotion after the deaths of American servicemen, and that he thought support for the president's policy was growing again.

Also Saturday, Frank Wisner, the under secretary of defense for policy, said the United States would keep its options open in the future on whether to deploy U.S. forces as part of U.N. military operations.

HISTORY: CAF simulates war in AirSho'93

ter the simulated attack on Pearl Harbor.

"I almost went with him," admitted his chuckling grandfather, Mac Wyler, also of Fort Worth.

"You can watch old war movies on TV, but you can't beat the thrill of really being out here watching those magnificent machines in action," the elder Wyler said.

Visitors from various cities in Texas and around the world echoed the Wylers' sentiments. Gaggles of skywatchers crowded around loud speakers, fascinated by the "you-are-there" detailed narration pouring forth.

"Here comes Jimmy Doolittle's Raiders at treetop level now. Here's the B-25s swooping in and dropping bombs on the (Japanese) homeland. They came in undetected from a secret base in Shangri-La," the narrator said, as "bombs" exploded and clouds of smoke obscured the sky.

"Kind of like the Fourth of July," said Lupe Navarette, 10, of El Paso, as she covered her ears when firepower popped.

"Jimmy Doolittle passed away a week or so ago, at the age of 95," the narrator announced. "Some of his raiders came in totally undetected over the China Sea. Some didn't make it. Some ran out of fuel. Some crash landed and were taken captive."

Later in the show, depicting the Ploesti oil-field raids, "1,300 feet of fire" produced a cloud the announcer described "as eclipsing the sun." As a wall of black smoke rose up and spread — darkening the sky over acres of the airshow — thousands of showgoers applauded and cheered. The announcer promised that today's show "will go for the world's record with 1,500 feet of fire."

The 30th annual CAF show capsules the roles in which the United States' air-power, coupled with the combined might of its allies, helped to defeat the Axis powers.

Approximately 130 rare warbirds, now restored, pampered and flying, are being featured this weekend.

Battles and raids depicted include the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, the Battle of Coral Sea, the Battle of Midway, bombing and strafing runs into German-occupied Europe, and air raids into Japan, including the atomic bombing of Japan in August 1945 by two B-29s.

When not enjoying the sensory-igniting show, people drifted to food booths that offered sausage, barbecue ribs, chicken fajitas, cheeseburgers, ice cream or hot dogs.

CAF units from around the country, including Arkansas, Minnesota and the Ohio Valley Wing, sold memorabilia, T-shirts and warbird posters.

People in uniforms abounded including Army officers in Desert Storm fatigues, CAF Ghost Squadron jumpsuits, military police, Boy Scouts and even men garbed in authentic Civil War dress.

The event celebrated all things airborne, historic, military and Confederate.

In fact, the Sons of Confederate Veterans West Texas Brigade staked tents, posted Confederate flags, and set up a campsite adjacent to a World War II campsite. Some CAF uniforms sported humorous patches touching on Southern heritage that read: "This is a CAF aviator. If found lost or unconscious, please hide him from Yankees. Revive him with mint juleps and return to Southern territory."

CAF spokeswoman Barbi Woods said war veterans from all over the world attended the event.

"We have two Bavarian colonels, people from Austria, Japan, Holland and a crew from Scotland here," she said.

Erik Shilling, who piloted Flying Tigers in the Orient during the war, autographed his book "Destiny, A Flying Tiger's Rendezvous with Fate," outside the Airpower Heritage Museum and gift shop.

A fellow veteran approached Shilling's table bearing an album of photographs he had taken about the Flying Tigers, as other nearby pilots gathered around to reminisce.

The younger generation toured the museum or headed over to the Coca-Cola Road Show, a section with an in-line skate arena buffered an all sides with an inflated bumper pad. An "NFL" training track featured tires to jog through, a football toss and inflated tackle hurdle.

The Coca-Cola stage with live band equipment and radio shows (broadcasting live from the event), blared pop music and served as the site of a paddle-ball contest for youngsters. The sports area allowed children to try their luck at basketball, soccer or hockey.

Some tiny tots clutched a person garbed in costume as the Bart Simpson character while others danced around Midland College's "roadrunner" mascot Pepe Paisano.

Shoppers browsed through booths where aviator goggles, leather bomber jackets, balsa wood airplanes, and World War II airplane models were for sale.

Veterans introduced themselves to other men and women in uniform, and some veterans even sported "Remember Vietnam Vets" buttons.

"This is like a homecoming for the CAF," Ms. Woods said. "It's the biggest annual CAF show."

The National Weather Service had predicted gusty winds, which didn't occur. The clear, sunny skies encouraged warbird fans to park and host tailgate parties along Highway 191 and Farm-to-Market Road 1788.

"We were worried about the weather and wind, and especially questioned the parachute team dropping, but it turned out fine," Ms. Woods said.

Hordes of people watched the skies with binoculars and cameras with long-range lenses.

Men removed their hats as "Taps" played to signal the end of one airpower demonstration. The airshow announcer called for a moment of silence for all of those men and women who sacrificed their lives to preserve America's freedom.

Trying to describe the mystique of hearing vintage aircraft engines roar into life, some people said the big attraction is the heady "power one man has" piloting a weighty warbird.

"It's a nostalgia thing. For those of us who weren't there we can come out here and imagine what things were like before wars were fought with stealth missiles and computers," said Ryan Cookes, 23, of El Paso. "It's real combat stuff."

A CAF member walking by said, "It's preserving a flying museum. These planes aren't on the ground. They're flying. It's living history. We're living it."

Aircraft featured at the airshow include CAF aircraft allied with the American Airpower Heritage Museum; privately-owned warbirds flown by CAF colonels, and flying-museum warbirds, including Britain's heaviest bomber, the four-engine Avro Lancaster, from the Canadian Warplane Heritage Museum.

Two CAF B-17s, "Sentimental Journey" and "Texas Raiders," are being featured during the show as are the war's biggest bombers, England's Avro Lancaster, America's Boeing B-29 Superfortress, Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress, and the Consolidated B-24 Liberator.

Soldier: Somalia is more war zone than humanitarian cause

By Arthur Allen
Associated Press Writer

LANDSTUHL, Germany — The longest night in Spec. Carlos Rodriguez's life started at 2 p.m. He was playing volleyball outside the Mogadishu airport hangar when his Army Ranger unit was hustled into action.

Pvt. Xiong Ly, a Stockton, Calif., combat engineer, was supposed to have the day off, too. After nightfall, he was packed into an armored personnel carrier and sent to rescue Rodriguez and the other Rangers.

By the time dawn broke, at least 17 Americans had been fatally wounded and a helicopter pilot was captured. Ly, Rodriguez and 75 other troops were hurt in the 16-hour battle with Somali gunmen. It was one of the bloodiest single engagements of U.S. troops since the Vietnam era.

"People say Somalia is a humanitarian cause, but from what I see it's more of a war zone," said Ly, 20, whose belly was slit open by surgeons to remove shrapnel that pierced his back. He spoke from his hospital bed.

"I think we underestimated the Somalis," added Richard Lamb, a 16-year veteran from Des Moines, Iowa.

A flight carrying 18 of the wounded men departed Saturday for Andrews Air Force Base, Md. Nine other men were still too hurt to travel.

A U.N. military spokesman said two bodies believed to be of U.S. troops were recovered Friday, which would raise the U.S. death toll in the battle to 17 Americans.

A Malaysian peacekeeper also died. The Red Cross said more than 700 Somalis were wounded, a third of them women and children, while backers of warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid put the number at 315 dead and more than 800 wounded.

Sunday, Oct. 3 began quietly enough for most of the 28,000 U.N. troops in Somalia. About 100 Army Rangers and Special Forces were hunting for Aidid, who is wanted by the U.N. for repeated attacks by his forces on the U.N. troops.

Shortly before 4 p.m., Rodriguez was dropped into a hot zone by helicopter.

"It was definitely bad-guy land, and we started moving to the pickup spot." A bullet soon pierced Rodriguez' right thigh. Friends dragged him into an abandoned house.

Across the alleyway, more wounded were being treated. "There was shooting all around, shooting everywhere."

A Blackhawk helicopter went down, and it was Sgt. Lamb's job to lead the rescue. The area in central Mogadishu was full of armed Aidid loyalists, but Lamb didn't hesitate.

His column of humvees was turned back by a barrage of gunfire, mine explosions and rocket-propelled grenades, some of the 200 to 300 rockets the Somalis fired that day, Lamb said.

"The guys on the radio sounded desperate," said Lamb. "I told them, 'We're coming, we're coming.'"

Lamb himself took a hit. A metal splinter pierced his forehead and lodged, so doctors tell him, somewhere between his two brain lobes.

"I just pulled my helmet down to stop the bleeding," he said with a wicked grin.

It was time to bring in the armor.

According to the accounts by Lamb and other soldiers, it took an hour or two to communicate with the Pakistani and Malaysian U.N. units and get their tanks and armored personnel carriers ready.

At about 10 p.m., a column of 30 to 40 armored personnel carriers, with eight to 10 men from the 10th Mountain Division of Fort Drum, N.Y., set out from Mogadishu airfield.

This column, too, would be pinned down by a barrage of grenade and rifle fire. The rescuers would need a rescue themselves.

Ly's armored vehicle got trapped behind Somali lines and was hit by a rocket-propelled grenades. He ran for cover and tried to set up contact with another company on safer ground.

"I almost made it, but that last 75 meters," he said.

Peeking from behind a wall, he saw open ground and tried to dash for it.

Two RPGs went off.

"I looked back at my sergeant and I could see fragments hitting off his face and chest. I lay flat, but the next one hit me very hard on my back. I was out for a good two to five minutes." The sergeant, 31-year-old Cornell Houston of Fort Drum, N.Y., died early Thursday at the Landstuhl hospital.

The second armored column, carrying Sgt. Robert Jackson Jr. and about 100 other men, set out around midnight. About two hours later, it reached the wounded Rangers, among them Rodriguez.

Jackson, of Oakland, Calif., was blasted by a grenade explosion, but his flak jacket saved him and he suffered only chest bruises.

Rescue came too late for the helicopter crew. The pilot was captured, the other men lynched after being dragged through the streets by angry mobs.

Surgeon Has Opened Facilities for Total Eye Care

Dr. Patrick Kelly Riggs, M.D. is announcing the opening of the Riggs Center for Diseases and Surgery of the Eye in Midland with secondary offices in Monahans and Pecos. The spacious new facility in Midland, over 3,000 square feet, is located at 3000 N. Garfield, Suite 215, and offers state-of-the-art equipment in a fresh setting of modern medical efficiency. There are four examination rooms and an operating room for minor surgical procedures, including Radial Keratotomy. The minor surgical room is equipped with Argon and Neodymium YAG lasers. In addition, Dr. Riggs has supplied Ward Memorial Hospital in Monahans and Reeves County Hospital in Pecos with the most advanced equipment available in order to provide his services to those people who live in Monahans, Pecos and the surrounding areas.

Dr. Riggs is an ophthalmologist certified by the American Board of Ophthalmology, with specialty training in cornea and external disease. Besides concentrating on small incision/sutureless cataract surgery and refractive surgery for the correction of nearsightedness and astigmatism, he offers a full range of ophthalmic services.

He received his undergraduate degree from Texas A&M University where he graduated with the highest honors, Summa Cum Laude. While working his way through college as a welder in a refinery, he majored in Biology with a minor in Chemistry. Because Dr. Riggs was among the top ten individuals within the College of Science, he was selected by the Dean of the College to receive a scholarship his junior year.

Following graduation he worked in the plastics division at Exxon

Research and Development. His assignment there was to determine the structure of certain plastic polymers. Dr. Riggs felt that the study of plastics would be useful in his later career as an ophthalmologist in the research and development of intraocular lenses. Concurrently, he was obtaining his Doctor of Medicine degree from the University of Texas Health Science Center in Houston, which has the largest medical center in the world. In medical school Dr. Riggs continued to excel academically. In the surgical rotation he was ranked in the top 10% by his written examinations and by his professors, among whom was Dr. "Red" Duke.

After graduation from medical school, Dr. Riggs went to Virginia for his internship in general surgery. Then he completed the basic science course in ophthalmology at Stanford University School of Medicine. His residency training in ophthalmology took place at the Eastern Virginia Graduate School of Medicine where he was selected by the staff physicians to be chief resident his last year. During residency Dr. Riggs continued his interest in research and development. Working in conjunction with fellow residents, he developed a topical drug for the treatment of eye disease.

Following residency Dr. Riggs was fellowship trained in cornea and external disease. Since then he has worked as a consultant in practice management and as chief surgeon in a large eye care center where he supervised the work of other surgeons. He has taught numerous surgeons the art of small incision/sutureless cataract surgery and the techniques necessary to achieve better results with corneal transplantation.

During the course of practice, he realized that there were many ways in which to manage a health care delivery system. He found himself dissatisfied with his level of understanding of the health care delivery system in our country as well as in other countries. Plagued by this discontent he sought further knowledge in a one-year course in Hospital Administration at the Kenan School of Business, University of North Carolina. Dr. Riggs finished that study in May 1993 and then chose his practice site and home in Midland, Texas

Dr. Riggs is a native Texan, born and raised in Pasadena. He chose to practice in Midland not only because he enjoys the regional dry climate, but also because he realized there is a shortage of ophthalmologists in West Texas. He would like to make his services convenient to all.

The Riggs Center is open six days a week. In addition, Dr. Riggs is available 24 hours a day. The area wide phone number is 915-570-0288. Dr. Riggs has the staff, resources, and training to provide the most advanced techniques.

Russian army soldiers keep watch in front of the Lenin Museum near Moscow's Red Square, Saturday. President Boris Yeltsin extends the state of emergency in the capital another week. Moscow military commander vows tough policy against future demonstrations.

Russian army rides wave of influence

By Deborah Seward
Associated Press writer

MOSCOW — When President Boris Yeltsin called, the army delivered the crushing blow to his hardline foes. With that victory, the generals won clout that could pose problems for the Kremlin and the West.

When the army goes to collect its debt from Yeltsin, the brass is likely to press for a greater say in arms control, a more active role in former Soviet republics and a boost in the defense budget.

Although Russia has no tradition of military rule, the generals could be tempted to grab for power if the regions began to break away, threatening both Russia's unity and that of the armed forces.

"The army stood the test of loyalty very well," said Phillip Mitchell, a military expert at the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London. "No soldier likes firing on his own troops or civilians."

On Saturday, Yeltsin continued to exert his authority, dissolving city and town councils throughout Russia. Local councils are often holdovers from the Soviet era and have resisted some of Yeltsin's economic and political reforms. Disbanding them, however, will make it difficult to continue local government and administration in many areas.

Also Saturday, the government extended the state of emergency and curfew in the capital until Oct. 18. The measures had been scheduled to end Saturday.

The government quickly rewarded the troops who flushed hard-line lawmakers out of the barricaded parliament building last week, awarding medals to the survivors and heroes' burials for the dead.

The army, however, is likely to demand a higher price for turning its guns against other Russians on Oct. 5, when tanks pounded the lawmakers and their armed supporters into submission.

More than a year after creating a new Russian army out of the old Soviet army, the government has failed to enact a military doctrine — a key demand of the army brass, which wants more clarity about the future size, role, funding, armaments and organization of the military.

Yeltsin seeks to recast regional councils

MOSCOW (NYT) — President Boris Yeltsin kept up pressure on his opponents in Russia's regions and territories Saturday by ordering regional councils to submit to new elections and face a drastic reduction in their size.

In his latest decree, Yeltsin gave a special commission six days to come up with a reorganization of regional government and set election procedures for new regional councils.

The new councils, to be called assemblies, or dumas, a term used in czarist Russia, will be made up of 15 to 50 full-time legislators. They are to replace the existing councils, called soviets, whose membership in some regions exceeds 300.

Yeltsin on Saturday also extended the week-old state of emergency in Moscow by another eight days, although the nighttime curfew hour was changed from 11 p.m. to midnight.

Despite the inconvenience, many Moscow citizens have welcomed the curfew, which has kept street crime and car thefts in the capital down.

In the last two years, regional and local soviets have tended to echo the Russian Parliament, or Supreme Soviet, in resisting Yeltsin's program of economic and political change.

The soviets — creatures of the early Bolshevik era — became giant boondoggles that allowed members of a displaced Communist Party hierarchy to keep their political offices and through them to wield influence locally.

Land mines pose lethal hazard long after wars have ended

By Charles J. Hanley
AP special correspondent

Nuclear bombs come by the megaton, but today's biggest killers come by the pound, in lethal little lumps of plastic and powder, a bargain at $36 a dozen.

Along village lanes and riverbanks, high on mountain passes, in wheat fields and rice paddies, the lowly land mine is felling people by the tens of thousands in trouble-torn corners of the Third World. And like any other pollution, this explosive litter of war is spawning its own clean-up movement.

A small international corps of politicians, diplomats and aid groups is making quiet headway in a campaign to rid the world's arsenals of anti-personnel land mines.

They have scored successes in Washington and Western Europe, and are now turning to the United Nations for help on an immediate goal: choking off the global trade in the explosive devices.

Up to 100 million land mines, often leftovers from civil wars, are scattered across the landscape in more than 50 countries, from Afghanistan to Zimbabwe.

First developed as defensive armaments, land mines are now often used to terrorize civilian populations in the world's small-scale conflicts. Once the wars subside, the left-behind mines keep on killing.

The mayhem in places like Cambodia, where mine blasts have left an estimated 30,000 amputees, stirred the advocates into action.

"If you look at what has happened in Afghanistan, in Cambodia, in Angola, in Mozambique, it's a real nightmare," said Michel Miraillet, a French U.N. diplomat promoting land-mine restrictions.

An outright ban will face powerful opposition. The Pentagon, for example, defends the land mine as a legitimate weapon of war. For now, anti-mine campaigners intend to "stigmatize" the use of the weapon one step at a time.

Sen. Patrick Leahy describes it as "giving the same onus to land mines as to poison gas or chemical weapons. It doesn't mean you eliminate all use forever, but you certainly curtail much of the use."

The Vermont Democrat, a leader of the campaign in Washington, is making progress.

On Sept. 14, the Senate voted 100-0 to extend for three years a moratorium, first adopted last year, on U.S. exports of anti-personnel mines. It is expected to win final congressional and White House approval by November. The measure also declares it U.S. policy to seek an eventual global ban on manufacture and use of anti-personnel mines.

The offensive, meanwhile, is winning other battles, too:

—The European Parliament has urged western European governments to impose five-year moratoriums on mine exports. So far, France and Belgium have complied, and Italy, a major mine manufacturer, says it is considering a moratorium.

—At the United Nations, the U.S. delegation will push for a General Assembly resolution this fall urging all governments worldwide to suspend exports of anti-personnel mines.

—By November, the Defense Department will join the State Department in recommending U.S. ratification of a 1980 treaty governing use of land mines, said an informed Pentagon source, who spoke on condition he not be quoted by name.

—Within 18 months, at France's request, an international conference is expected to convene to review and toughen that treaty's provisions.

The 1980 treaty prohibits "indiscriminate" use of mines and requires mapping of mine fields by those who lay them. The review conference is expected to extend the treaty's coverage to civil wars, and add provisions for verifying compliance and punishing violators.

The basic anti-personnel land mine is less than a pound of high explosives encased in plastic, metal or even wood. It is usually buried just below the surface,

Youths stab U.S. teacher in S. Africa

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — An American math teacher was in stable condition Saturday after being stabbed several times at the township school where she worked.

Police said robbery appeared to be the motive for Friday's attack on Danielle Marlin, 23, of Brattleboro, Vermont. She was being treated at Groote Schuur Hospital for stab wounds in the neck and left side.

Marlin was due to return to the United States next month after volunteering for a year at the Zonnebloem Nest School in District Six, a sprawling black township near Cape Town.

Marlin, who is white, had come to South Africa as part of a community service program organized by her alma mater, Brown University, said Zonnebloem Nest principal Geoff Jacobs.

Marlin, who lived on campus, was attacked as she made a phone call from a booth at the school late Friday. The injured teacher dragged herself to the home of the school caretaker, who took her to the hospital.

Marlin told The Associated Press that she was attacked by two boys and recognized one as a Zonnebloem Nest student. Jacobs said the attackers entered the campus through a door or gate that had been left open.

Police said Marlin's backpack was found in a garbage can, but could not immediately determine whether anything was missing.

The attack followed the killing of Amy Biehl, another American woman who volunteered in Cape Town's poor black communities. Biehl, a 26-year-old Fulbright scholar from Newport Beach, Calif., was stoned and stabbed by a mob in the Guguletu township on Aug. 25.

Her parents, visiting as guests of Cape Town Mayor Clive Keegan, were to attend a church service in their daughter's honor in Guguletu on Sunday.

Report: Thatcher attempted to block union of Germany

BERLIN (AP) — Margaret Thatcher made a concerted diplomatic effort just weeks before the Berlin Wall fell to halt German unification — and got support from Mikhail Gorbachev, a German newsmagazine reported Saturday.

The former British prime minister makes the claim in her soon-to-be-released memoirs, the weekly Der Spiegel said, promising to print excerpts in its Monday editions.

Even as late as September 1989, two months before the wall went down, Gorbachev "confirmed that the Soviet Union also does not want German unification," the magazine quoted Thatcher as saying. The report was widely cited by German news media on Saturday.

The book, "The Downing Street Years," also continued to raise questions in Britain Saturday with the release of more excerpts there. Thatcher got a cold reception at a Conservative Party conference last week after a newspaper reported her memoirs contained misgivings about Prime Minister John Major, the man she picked to be her successor.

That Thatcher had reservations about German unification was no secret, but her memoirs may reveal a more active opposition.

Der Spiegel quoted her as saying she also sought to persuade Francois Mitterrand and George Bush that they should encourage the development of democracy in East Germany — and leave a decision on reunification for a later date.

She accuses both the French president and former U.S. leader of giving in to pressure from German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, Spiegel says.

Thatcher also expresses distrust for Germany and its new European role.

Brutal 'limb executions' in Ireland spur advances in medicine

By Louis J. Salome
Cox News Service

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — The before and after X-rays tell the story.

First the illuminated gray-black picture of a bullet, fired deliberately to disable, that chiseled off part of the knee and lodged in the kneecap.

Then the three metal screws that make the split bone one again.

This is a common sight in the surgical rooms of Belfast's 1,000-bed Royal Victoria Hospital, where the victims of "limb executions" carried out by Catholic and Protestant paramilitary gangs come for repair.

The hospital has pioneered bone-repair procedures. And for procedures pioneered by others, the Royal Victoria staff has refined them due to the frequency with which its surgeons are called on to hone their skills. As many as 100 cases a year are brought to the hospital, and their similarity and variety breed surgical repetition and effectiveness.

Dr. Gerry McCoy, an attending specialist in orthopedic surgery at the hospital, has repaired his share of shattered bones.

The past 25 years of sectarian and political violence in Northern Ireland have, ironically, enriched medical technology, a motivation doctors and nurses could do without.

Gunmen associated with the militant Catholic Irish Republican Army and the alphabet soup of Protestant paramilitary gangs push victims face-down on the floor. Then from close range they fire bullets into the backs of knees, thighs and elbows. Low velocity bullets maim, while bullets from automatic or semiautomatic weapons can blow off a limb, Dr. McCoy said.

The word "kneecapping" is part of the language of Northern Ireland because of the frequency with which the sectarian gangs, primarily the IRA, have blown out the knees of people they consider to be thugs or criminals in their respective communities.

Unrepentant first-time victims are often shot in all four limbs, Dr. McCoy said, while persons viewed as collaborators with rival sectarian gangs are killed rather than disabled.

Royal Victoria Hospital has either developed or improved on technology made necessary by "the troubles" of the past quarter-century. That means, to list a few advances, external "limb scaffolding" that allows partial healing for bone damage too severe for reconstruction, titanium plates for damage to skulls and stainless steel rods inserted into thigh bones.

American lawyer, 26, dies in Moscow battle while helping others

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Among those who died lastSunday in the firefight at the Russian radio and television station was an American lawyer who spent his last hour trying to save others.

Witnesses said Terry Michael Duncan, 26, repeatedly went to the front of the building that was under assault, pulling as many people as he could to safety.

"He went back and forth several times, checking on people to see if they were okay," said Otto Pohl, a photographer for The New York Times who was wounded in the cross-fire.

Pohl and Duncan were crawling along the side of the building when Pohl was shot through the right lung. Pohl said Duncan stayed with him for about half an hour as intense shooting continued, talking to him and trying to keep him from losing consciousness. Duncan was then shot in the head, and apparently died immediately.

"He'd clearly came back into the line of fire just because he wanted to save everybody," said Pohl, who is convalescing in a Moscow hospital.

'He wrote about how young people from all over the world. . .had come to moscow to be entrepreneurs and just jump in.'

— Jamison Firestone, friend

Duncan arrived in Moscow four months ago after graduating from the George Washington University National Law Center, as a lawyer with Firestone, Duncan & Associates. One of the host of young Americans who have poured into Moscow over the last two years, friends said he revelled in being on hand for Russia's transformation.

Jamison Firestone, a friend and partner of Duncan, described a letter that Duncan had been writing to his girlfriend in the United States before his death.

"He wrote about how young people from all over the world, without a lot of money, from diverse backgrounds, had come to Moscow to be entrepreneurs and just jump in," Firestone said. "He wrote how he and his girlfriend would do well here."

On that fateful Sunday, Firestone, Duncan, and five other friends had set off for the Ukraina Hotel, from which they hoped to view the action around the Mayor's Office, which legislators, paramilitary soldiers, and others opposed to President Boris Yeltsin had just stormed.

The attack on Ostankino started at about 7:20 p.m., pinning down journalists and onlookers. Pohl remembers Duncan, though at that time he knew only that he was an American lawyer.

Queen pulls some perks: liquor, soap, shoe repair

By Leslie Shepherd
Associated Press writer

LONDON — The free lunch survives, and the free plum pudding, too, but Queen Elizabeth II is cutting off gifts of suits, soaps, booze and shoe repairs for her staff.

Perks for hundreds of palace employees, from footmen, underbutlers and the assistant yeoman of the plate pantry to senior courtiers, are being replaced with cash.

The cuts were disclosed in a leaked Buckingham Palace document published in British newspapers this week.

The palace press office confirmed the changes were part of a "rationalization and streamlining of the pay structure in the royal household."

For Her Majesty's faithful servants, that means:

—Servants who usually get free soap every month — two bars at Buckingham Palace, one at Windsor Castle — will instead get an extra $15 a year, before taxes.

—Chauffeurs, carriage cleaners, grooms, horsebox drivers and other stable staff lose their traditional free shoe repairs, in exchange for an extra $45 annually.

—Liveried footmen who wait tables at parties will no longer get two free miniature bottles of liquor, but they can continue to keep the contents of unfinished bottles. They'll get $45 more a year.

—Senior courtiers on foreign tours will lose the right to a new suit for every other trip they make.

But some perks remain.

All 900 employees of the royal household — from the Page of the Backstairs, to the queen's piper, Her Majesty's Swan Keeper, the Gentlemen Ushers and Ladies of the Bedchamber — will be able to attend the queen's Christmas Dance every other year and qualify for Christmas presents worth up to $33.

Terrorism damages Egyptian tourist business

By Anne Pearson
N.Y. Times News Service

LUXOR, Egypt — A year ago, 2,000 people a day filed past Bedwy Hassan Ahmed Gad's souvenir stand at the entrance to the Valley of the Kings, the arid resting place of King Tut and other nobles.

This year, armed attacks against Western tourists by Muslim extremists have cut the number of visitors in half. The lower count is cutting painfully into the livelihoods of Egyptians like Gad who toil in the once-flourishing tourist trade.

The sun-scorched vendor from nearby Gourna, who has peddled alabaster carvings, scarabs and guide books here for the last 20 years, says he's still making a decent living, "but not like last year."

The extremists have been waging a guerrilla war against Egypt's secular government for years in an attempt to set up an Islamic state, but the fighting had remained far from the country's popular tourist destinations. That changed in late 1991 when the extremists escalated their campaign. Since then, nearly 200 people have been killed, including police, government officials and foreign tourists.

The attacks against Western tourists have cost Egypt $1 billion since last October, when a British tourist was killed.

Egyptian officials and tourist operators say they believe the worst of the fear-induced tourist drought is over. They are hoping they will see a big upswing in visitors when the punishing heat gives way to moderate temperatures this fall and winter.

Terrorists bent on attacking the government of President Hosni Mubarak by way of the national pocketbook picked a prime target when it singled out Western tourists.

Next to the paychecks that Egyptian workers send home from jobs elsewhere in the Middle East, tourism is the second-largest contributor to Egypt's balance of payments, according to Fouad Sultan, the minister for tourism. Tourism was a $3.5 billion industry last year, representing nearly 30 percent of Egypt's balance of payments and almost 9 percent of its gross domestic product.

Egypt is battling unemployment and the normal birth pains of an emerging market economy.

While Western economic experts say Egypt still has a long way to go in making itself attractive to outside investment, Youssef Boutros Ghali, Egyptian minister of state for economic matters, is proud of how far the country has come.

Egypt's cash reserves now stand at $15 billion. The gross domestic product should grow at 2 percent to 2.5 percent this year and 4 percent next year. The telephones work, and while traffic is horrible by any measure, it is nothing like it was in the late 1970s, thanks to a big public works push to improve Egypt's infrastructure.

Despite the improvements, the average Egyptian remains terribly poor.

Egypt's economic struggle is one of the big factors feeding the Islamic extremist groups, says Nagi El-Ghetrifi, spokesman for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

"Terrorists are fascists looking for power," he says. "They look for support among the unemployed and those who are dissatisfied with the economic situation."

Shortly after terrorists killed the British tourist and wounded several Germans in separate incidents last fall, tourism plummeted to the point where the government had to give hotels and other businesses temporary holidays from local taxes, water and electricity bills, and it pursuaded many of their lenders to give struggling businesses a little extra time to pay.

The terrorists' campaign has not hurt the pricey scuba diving resorts on the Red Sea, but it has been hard on towns like Luxor, home to the Valley of the Kings and the 2,000-year-old Temple of Karnak. In Luxor, the jobs of an estimated three out of four people are related to tourism.

Countrywide, according to Sultan, tourism was down only about 30 percent in the first half of 1993. But in Luxor, it was off by more than half, according to locals in the trade.

Egyptians have responded to the terrorist campaign with a campaign of their own aimed at reassuring fearful foreigners.

Two die in New Mexico when balloon snags electric line

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A hot-air balloon participating in an aerial fiesta snagged a power line Saturday, killing the pilot and a passenger in the gondola that plummeted to the ground.

Albuquerque Fire Department Assistant Chief Morris Huling said both men sustained massive head injuries and were pronounced dead at the scene.

Pilot Allan C. Jones, 60, and passenger Karl Gordon were the only two aboard the balloon named Sunrunner. Fiesta officials did not know Gordon's age.

Marie Ruppenthal, executive director of Albuquerque's International Balloon Fiesta, said Jones had flown balloons in the fiesta for eight or nine years.

Witness Nikki Irwin said she saw the balloon "come real close to the power lines. We heard a big pop and the basket just came out of the sky. It separated that quick. Then we saw the black smoke."

Jim Schumacher, fiesta president, said the weather was probably not a factor in the crash — wind was blowing at 4-5 knots and the sky was clear.

The 115,000-volt power line cuts across the site of the crash, a field about a quarter of a mile from the balloon fiesta field. The crash knocked out electricity to about 600 residential customers Saturday morning, and power was restored after about an hour.

The balloon was among more than 600 that had lifted off in a mass ascension Saturday morning.

The Federal Aviation Administration and state police were investigating.

The last fatal balloon accident during the fiesta was in 1990, when a balloon hit a power line and burned about seven miles from the fiesta field, killing two people.

Police arrest trusted handyman in connection to four murders

SPRING HILL, Fla. (AP) — Weeks of terror in this retirement haven ended with the arrest of a handyman who investigators said confessed to raping and killing four elderly widows because "he had an urge."

Police said Edwin Bernard Kaprat, a 29-year-old machinist, detailed how he met the victims by doing odd jobs, returned to kill them and tried to destroy the evidence by torching their homes.

News of Kaprat's arrest Friday relieved residents of the quiet community 60 miles northwest of Tampa. Many had installed alarms and purchased handguns, fearing that a serial killer was on the loose.

"It's wonderful," said 74-year-old Martha Cunningham, who had put double locks on her doors. "This was the first time here I had been truly afraid to be alone."

"I wasn't sleeping at night," said Stella Hurman, 69. "Maybe now I can rest easier."

The victims, who ranged in age from 72 to 87, were found in their burned homes in August and September. All lived alone and were attacked in the middle of the night, authorities said.

"All he said was he had an urge," said Hernando County Sheriff's Maj. G.Z. Smith. "He said something would just come over him. He had to go do it. There was a need he had. He had to fulfill this need."

Deputies had followed Kaprat since receiving a tip Sept. 29. They linked him to a fingerprint on a garage door of the last victim, 87-year-old Lorraine Dawe, whose home was the only one not destroyed by fire.

Kaprat, who worked at a machine shop in Tampa, often came to Hernando County to help with his father's business doing odd jobs and carpentry work.

In the slaying of Dawe, Kaprat told investigators he was sexually assaulting the woman when he thought she was having a heart attack.

Questions arise over Vietnamese in Brown inquiry

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (NYT) — He rose at an early age to the top of the South Vietnamese government, but he refused to flee as Saigon fell. The conquering Communists did not send him to the prison camps where they banished other South Vietnamese officials. Instead they gave him a comfortable government post.

For the last few years, he has been living with his family in a four-bedroom, waterfront home on a cul de sac in Coral Springs. His daughter says he has had no job. His former business partner says that he has been trying to bribe the commerce secretary, Ronald H. Brown, to help lift the trade embargo against Vietnam.

A number of mysteries now surround Nguyen Van Hao, 54, who has emerged at the center of a federal investigation that seems to have spilled from a James Bond novel. He holds the answer to the question being asked by investigators in Washington and Miami: Did he and the Vietnamese government bribe Brown?

Brown has dismissed the accusations as ludicrous, and there is no evidence that he received any money or broke any law. But after first cultivating the impression that he did not know Hao, Brown, through his lawyer, has reluctantly acknowledged meeting with him on three occasions.

Hao, (pronounced how) who has been called before a federal grand jury in Miami, has made no public comments and has disappeared from his home. His wife, speaking from the aisles of the family-owned convenience store, will say only that he is an "honest man."

Hao's biography winds through Saigon, Haiti and Florida and discloses a remarkable talent for making connections. His resume lists a doctorate in economics from the University of Geneva. He married into a prominent South Vietnamese family and rose through the government at lightning speed, earning a reputation for intelligence, sophistication and charm.

Jury: K-Mart must pay for selling gun to drunken man

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Kmart Corp. must pay more than $11 million to a quadriplegic woman shot by her drunken boyfriend with a rifle he bought from the retailer, a jury has ruled.

"It was not so much that he was drunk," jury foreman Sean Callahan said. "There was negligence on Kmart's part for not training the salesperson."

The $12.5 million verdict against Kmart and Thomas W. Knapp, who shot Deborah Kitchen in the neck on Dec. 14, 1987, sends a message to gun retailers, said Kitchen's lawyer, Gregory Stine.

The jury found Knapp, who's serving a 40-year prison sentence for the shooting, partially responsible for Kitchen's injury. He must pay about $1 million of the total verdict, Stine said.

The clerk who sold Knapp the rifle said Knapp did not seem drunk but had trouble filling out federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms forms required for gun purchases. Because Knapp's writing was illegible, the clerk copied the information onto another form and had Knapp sign it.

Knapp shot Kitchen once in the neck shortly after buying the rifle at a Kmart in Tampa.

Kitchen, 40, of Grand Rapids, Mich., was not in court Friday when the verdict was read.

Study: Folks choose mates through nose

By Paul Raeburn
AP science editor

NEW ORLEANS — Members of an isolated religious group usually avoid choosing mates with similar immune system genes, suggesting that subtle odors may play a role in romance, researchers said.

Researchers studying the immune systems of the group's members speculated that people who were breast fed may be sensitive to the smell of certain immune-system components in breast milk.

That may help them avoid marrying people with the same immune-system genes, and decrease chances of a miscarriage, said the study's director, Carole Ober, a geneticist at the University of Chicago.

Women are more likely to miscarry if they share certain immune-system genes with their husbands, Ober said. The children of such marriages are likely to be more susceptible to disease.

"In the mouse it's been nicely shown that mice will prefentially mate with mice with different odors," said Ober, who presented the study Friday at the annual meeting of the American Society of Human Genetics.

Ober has been studying a religious community called the Hutterites for 10 years. The 35,000 Hutterites scattered across Canada and the northern United States descend from a group of 100 people who left Russia for the United States in the 1870s, she said.

"It's an interesting study, if true," said Dr. James Neel of the University of Michigan.

But he said more research is needed to confirm the results.

"There would have to be a lot of mate choice" in the group Ober studied for the results to be sound, Neel said.

Ober studies the genetic causes of infertility. In examining the immune systems of Hutterites, she found that those with similar immune systems were much less likely to marry one another than chance would have suggested.

Ober tested 852 Hutterite adults to determine how many were the product of marriages between people who shared five key immune system genes.

A careful analysis of the population showed that there should be 68 such individuals. But she found only 24, meaning that many people were avoiding marrying others with the same five genes.

Ober and her colleagues were then left with the puzzle of how people could possibly determine the immune system makeup of potential mates. The researchers concluded that a likely possibility was some subtle, subconscious odor.

"Sweat and breast milk could be odor cues governing behaviors," she said. Hutterites generally avoid marrying people with the same immune system genes as their mothers, suggesting that people are sensitized when they are breast fed as infants, Ober said.

She admitted that her hypothesis was somewhat daring, but she said no other explanation is apparent.

Other studies, which she described as weak, have suggested that mothers may be able to recognize their infants by smell alone, and that infants can use smell to distinguish their mothers' breast milk from other breast milk.

Danson upsets some during his blackface stunt

NEW YORK (AP) — Whoopi Goldberg laughed, as did most of the audience at her Friars Club roast. But boyfriend Ted Danson's appearance in blackface and his racially peppered jokes angered Mayor David Dinkins, talk show host Montel Williams and others.

"I was confused as to whether or not I was at a Friars event or at a rally for the KKK and Aryan Nation," Williams said in a telegram to the Friars announcing his resignation from the entertainment industry club.

Friars' roasts traditionally are down and dirty, no-holds-barred affairs at which the guest of honor is skewered by jokes that often are crude. The roastee then gets a chance to respond, in kind.

But the city's first black mayor said later that the jokes at Friday's roast "were pretty vulgar and many were way, way over the line."

The uproar came over Danson's arrival on the dais at the 89th annual roast. The Emmy-winning "Cheers" star was in Jolson-esque blackface makeup, with huge white lips, wearing a tuxedo and top hat.

Danson reportedly used the word "nigger" several times during his bit, and joked about his sex life with Goldberg.

Goldberg began her rebuttal: "Nigger, nigger, nigger, whitey, whitey, whitey. It takes a whole lot of (courage) to come out in blackface . . . I don't care if you don't like it. I do."

Black model Beverly Johnson also defended Danson's performance.

Clinton continues to link anti-crime, health plan

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — President Clinton on Saturday stepped up pressure on Congress to pass anti-crime legislation this year, saying violence is "siphoning away our humanity" and denying Americans a sense of personal security.

In his weekly radio address and in a speech to fellow Yale Law School alumni, Clinton spoke about the needs of Americans for greater security in areas from safety to health care.

"Our people have a right to feel safe where they live, work, play and go to school," Clinton said in the radio address before he left Washington. In a pitch for his health-care reform plan, Clinton said "medical security" was equally important.

He told his audience at Yale that while all of them most likely were doing well, "one of the reasons we haven't been able to come to grips with these great challenges is that too many of us are too personally insecure in our ... family lives, our work lives and our community lives to have the courage and self confidence it takes to take a different course."

Clinton in recent days has linked his campaigns for health-care reform and anti-crime legislation at every turn, arguing that both are part of Americans' need for greater "personal security."

Speaking one day after visiting with gunshot victims at a New Jersey trauma center, Clinton told Americans, "My visits with these victims yesterday made me more determined than ever to win passage of our crime bill."

"Violent crime crowds our emergency rooms and drains our medical resources," Clinton said. "And it is siphoning away our humanity."

The anti-crime legislation, among other things, would impose a five-day waiting period on handgun purchases, put more police officers on the street, and set up "boot camps" and other innovative rehabilitation programs for young offenders.

"This bill will help to restore a system where those who commit crimes are caught, those who are found guilty are convicted, those who are convicted are punished — sometimes by imposition of the death penalty for especially serious crimes," Clinton said.

In Washington, administration officials acknowledged Saturday that legislation providing details of Clinton health reform package may not be ready for a month or more despite calls from members of Congress to move faster.

Clinton and his wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton, flew to Connecticut to attend a reunion for Yale Law School University alumni. Both of them graduated from Yale 20 years ago, and it was where the couple first met. Their daughter, Chelsea, accompanied them on the trip.

Clinton was awarded the Medal of Merit of the Yale Law School Association.

In his radio address, Clinton said America "can't go on being the only country on earth that lets teen-agers roam the streets with assault weapons, better armed than even the police."

He then urged Americans: "Tell your representatives on Capitol Hill you want the crime bill and you want it now because it's important, it's long overdue. I guarantee you this; the minute I get it, I'll sign it."

"We can never enjoy full economic security in our professional lives without real personal security in our homes, on our streets and in our neighborhoods," he said.

While acknowledging the importance of Clinton focusing on crime, New York Rep. David Levy said in the Republican response to the president's radio talk that "it is not the issue of today."

Corporate chiefs see profits, few new jobs

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Executives running America's corporate giants expect double-digit increases in profits this year and next, but say the economy's dismal job growth won't be improving anytime soon.

In an era of low inflation and fierce global competition, they say the only way they can earn profits is by improving productivity and controlling payroll costs.

"We must be able to compete around the world and therefore we don't have the luxury of employing if not needed. We have to work toward efficiency," said Douglas C. Yearley, chairman of Phelps Dodge Corp., the international copper producer.

Yearley and more than 100 other executives of Fortune 500 companies concluded the fall meeting of the elite Business Council on Saturday, after spending two days in black-tie dinners and closed-door meetings with senior Clinton administration officials, including U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor and Deputy Treasury Secretary Roger Altman.

While the executives met, the Labor Department reported that the nation's unemployment rate remained stuck at 6.7 percent in September while manufacturing jobs fell to their lowest level since 1965.

The economy added 156,000 jobs during the month but most of the hiring came at restaurants and bars and from a temporary government jobs program.

The executives gathered at Williamsburg did not foresee an early shift to more robust hiring.

"I can't predict a time, but my guess is it's not 1994," said Edward H. Budd, chairman of The Travelers Companies. "The momentum still is for ... downsizing and that drags the economy."

The council, in its semiannual economic report, forecast only scant improvement in the unemployment rate — to 6.4 percent by the end of next year. Nevertheless, it predicted healthy gains in corporate profits — 12.7 percent this year and 10.4 percent in 1994.

The business leaders cautioned that the two projections weren't as contradictory as they first appeared. Efficient, lean companies that can compete in foreign markets will hold down job growth in the short run but in the long run create more jobs that last, they said.

"At the end of the day, jobs are the result of being competitive. They don't precede it; they follow it. And the more competitive we are as a country ... the more ... we'll be able to add jobs," said Lawrence A. Bossidy, chairman of Allied-Signal Inc., a diversified manufacturing company.

John W. Snow, chairman of CSX Corp., the transportation company, said big layoff announcements obscure the fact that the economy is continually creating new jobs.

"A good, well-functioning market economy is always in the throes of major change. If it's stable, it ain't working," Snow said. "Unfortunately it means for large enterprises like CSX that we will continue to employ fewer people in our businesses at the same time we will ... earn more revenues and in the process create more wealth for shareholders. That becomes income for somebody and that ultimately creates jobs."

The executives also made the point that even though their payrolls are shrinking, that doesn't mean their firms aren't contributing to job growth.

Most new employment has been created by big business' buying the services of smaller companies, said John F. Welch Jr., chairman of General Electric Co.

Intrigue produced by cable TV spy allegations grips Florida

Struggle over emerging technology pits Florida Cable Television Association against telephone companies.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Intrigue has infiltrated the usually dry world of utilities regulation in Florida, where the cable television industry is being investigated for spying on state officials and those they regulate.

"It's pretty bizarre," said Luis Lauredo, a Public Service Commission member who was among those under surveillance by the Florida Cable Television Association.

Locked in a multibillion dollar struggle with telephone companies over uses of emerging technology, the association says it spent $40,000 in the last three years digging up dirt on state regulators, utility employees and lobbyists.

"We were very concerned we weren't getting a fair and objective hearing at the PSC," said Steve Wilkerson, president of the group of 165 cable systems.

There have been numerous newspaper stories in recent years about state regulators socializing with utility lobbyists. Public Service Commission member Thomas Beard resigned after disclosures that he had dated two employees at Southern Bell, Florida's largest telephone company.

Wilkerson had hired a private investigator to spy on Beard, Lauredo and telephone company lobbyists and employees. The surveillance included watching their cars and contacts with other people, tracking down public records such as license plates and investigating long-distance calls.

State and federal prosecutors are examining whether any laws were violated when the private eye, Richard Lund, obtained the toll call records on Beard and Lauredo.

If the spying found that PSC members were fraternizing with telephone company executives while phone cases were pending before the panel, Wilkerson would alert the media, legislators and law enforcement officials.

"I was trying to build awareness about the PSC," Wilkerson said.

It's not known if the spying led to Beard's resignation in August.

Still, Beard said last week he was shocked to learn that his movements and calls had been monitored for years.

"Either they wanted to try and get somebody or somehow influence and control you," he said.

Lund's lawyer, Alan Weinstein, said his client simply bought the records from one of many companies that sell them.

"My client had no reason to believe these records were obtained illegally," Weinstein said.

While telephone company officials insist it's against the law to obtain such long-distance records without a court order, Wilkerson and communications lawyers say it is not. They point to the thriving business in toll records.

Scanners, a Denver company that bills itself as "America's Information Brokerage Source," promises to fax a complete list of toll calls made by anyone, anywhere, for up to $125.

Bill Richey, a Miami lawyer who tracks people down for banks and other clients, said that while the content of telephone conversations are protected by law, billing records are not.

Public Service Commission Chairman Terry Deason said the spying scandal has undermined the panel's credibility and that it may be time to tighten laws on access to telephone records.

"It raises some concern about the safeguards and security of those records," Deason said.

Wilkerson defended the association's action, saying it focused attention on the commission's ethics.

"There have been reforms. Right now, in some quarters at least," Wilkerson said.

Former bishop discloses his homosexuality

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — An Episcopal bishop who led the Utah diocese and recently retired as dean of the Episcopal Divinity School disclosed that he is homosexual.

Bishop E. Otis Charles wrote a letter to other bishops just before the annual meeting of the House of Bishops in Panama in late-September.

"I have promised myself that I will not remain silent, invisible, unknown," Charles wrote. "The choice for me is not whether or not I am a gay man, but whether or not I am honest about who I am with myself and others."

The issue of homosexuality has been fiercely debated in the 2.5 million-member Episcopal Church, and the faith in 1991 ruled against allowing practicing homosexuals into the ministry. The United Church of Christ is the only major Christian denomination to officially allow ordination of homosexuals.

Charles, 67, led the Utah diocese from 1971 to 1986, before he moved on to the divinity school in Cambridge, Mass.

He and his wife, Elvira, have five children and nine grandchildren. Charles said he told his wife in 1976 about his struggle with sexual identity. They have separated. He said he plans to live in San Francisco and she in Connecticut.

"To say that the years since 1976 have been painful is totally inadequate. They have been wrenching for us and our family," Charles said.

Bishop George E. Bates, current Episcopal leader of Utah, said in a written statement that Charles "has my full support in communicating the realities of his life to those he has loved and cared for."

Charles said he expects to continue his work as a priest.

His disclosure was greeted harshly by the Rev. Todd H. Wetzel, executive director of Episcopalians United, an Ohio-based conservative group that challenges the rights of homosexuals in the church.

"Here is another leader who supported the gay agenda for a self-serving motive," Wetzel said. "I know there are other bishops who are gay but have not openly identified themselves. Frankly, that is what's so insidious about this."

Denny jurors get time off as trial intensifies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jurors in the Reginald Denny beating trial are suffering personality clashes and apparent strain from deliberations, prompting the judge Saturday to give them most of the weekend off.

Superior Court Judge John Ouderkirk told the sequestered jurors he would let friends and family members visit them on Sunday to "recharge your batteries and come back with a clear mind and a fresh start Monday morning."

The judge suggested the complicated nature of the racially charged trial has caused some "interpersonal problems" among the jurors, who entered their seventh day of deliberations Saturday. He also gave jurors Saturday afternoon off, presumably to spend in the hotel where they have stayed during deliberations.

The jury is weighing the case of Damian Williams, 20, and Henry Watson, 29, two black men accused of attempted premeditated murder and other felonies in the attack on Denny, a white truck driver, and others.

The attacks occurred during the riots that followed the acquittal of white policemen in the beating of black motorist Rodney King.

The stress on the jurors, whose names the court won't release, was evident.

"It's detailed and it's tedious," one juror, a middle-aged black woman, complained to the judge in open court.

Some new senators' salaries nearly double during recession

By Larry Margasak
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — A single term in the U.S. Senate can guarantee personal wealth — and a cozy retirement — that far exceed the compensation of average Americans, an Associated Press analysis of the freshmen Class of '86 shows.

In just six years, the nine senators elected for the first time in 1986 and still serving have seen their congressional salaries nearly double to more than $133,600 a year.

And when they retire, their annual pensions will probably exceed the salaries of most working Americans.

Several members of the Class of '86 are also savvy investors in stocks, bonds and, frequently, real estate. Many came to Congress with a healthy portfolio.

At least three are millionaires — Democrats Harry Reid of Nevada, Richard Shelby of Alabama, and Bob Graham of Florida, according to a review of their most recent financial disclosure forms.

Shelby bought an office building worth between $250,000 and $500,000 while in office. Reid foreclosed on a note and deed of trust, permitting him to repurchase land worth between $500,000 and $1 million.

"The most striking thing is the comparison between members of the Senate and average Americans," said Joshua Goldstein of the Center for Responsive Politics, an organization that scrutinizes the links between money and politics.

The salary became too generous for Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., after the Senate's last big pay raise, in July 1991. He accepts the pre-raise pay of $101,900, and gives the rest to charity.

He said the senators' pension plan should also be brought "more in line with that of average Americans." McCain was the only one of the nine senators willing to comment about compensation.

The AP reviewed the financial disclosure statements, salary adjustments, campaign finance reports and pension estimates to see how they have changed since the nine senators first took office.

In addition to McCain, Shelby, Graham and Reid, the class includes: John Breaux, D-La.; Barbara Mikulski, D-Md.; Christopher Bond, R-Mo.; Kent Conrad, D-N.D. and Thomas A. Daschle, D-S.D.

When they took office in 1987, their salaries were $77,400. By last January, they had risen to $133,600 — an increase of nearly 73 percent.

The U.S. Labor Department said median wages for full-time workers during the same period rose from $369 a week, or $19,188 a year, to $459 a week, or $23,868 a year, an increase of just 24.4 percent.

The last time the Senate voted itself a pay raise in July 1991, only Breaux among the nine favored the increase.

But it's the Senate pension plan — more generous than most offered elsewhere in government or corporate America — that could leave lawmakers dreaming of retiring to a life of leisure.

Four young sisters spend their weekends winning beauty pageants

By Michelle Williams
Associated Press writer

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — In five years of beauty pageants, Blaire Pancake has won 25 national crowns, two cars, costly wardrobes, almost $20,000 in savings bonds, a Bahamas cruise, a trip to Disney World — and a puppy.

Don't discount that puppy; Blaire Pancake is just 10 years old.

And if her career as a contestant has been extraordinary, she is not alone. Her three younger sisters are all following in her sequined shoes.

"We've been to so many pageants I've quit counting," said Bruce Pancake, a plastic surgeon who spends his spare time preparing his daughters to compete.

"It's something we can do together as a family. It's like soccer with boys, only I have four daughters and they enter pageants."

And they usually win. Blaire and her 7-year-old sister Erin have won so many trophies in their short pageant careers that their parents recently donated more than 800 of them to schools.

"They just filled the entire basement," Pancake said. "Sometimes they'd win 10 trophies in just one pageant."

The younger sisters are novices, but they're off to a good start. Elise, 3, and Alexis, 1, both took top honors in their first pageant this year. Both were crowned Miss Southern Charm 1993 in their age divisions.

"The babies don't really know what's going on. When they're little, it's almost like a dog show, in a way. It's mainly for the parents," said Pancake.

It is a giant leap from there to the Miss America Pageant; it is Blaire's dream to walk that fabled runway in triumph, and she and her father have traveled to Atlantic City for the past three pageants.

She's far from the only one with that dream.

Pageantry magazine, based in Orlando, estimates that up to 1.5 million contestants compete in children's pageants across the country each year. Many go on to compete in young adulthood.

This is not a bad thing, Pancake insists. "If our girls get anything out of this we hope its a good self-image, confidence and a sense of accomplishment when they do the best they can do," he said.

His wife, Debbie, is a former beauty queen — first runner-up, Miss Chattanooga — but she said pageants aren't pushed on her daughters.

"You can't make children do this," said Ms. Pancake. "Kids that do it for their parents usually don't do well. They have to love it."

If her children "decide one day that they don't want to do this, that's fine with us," she said.

Son of top coach takes on female chief

By Larry O'Dell
Associated Press writer

RICHMOND, Va. — Virginia voters will decide in November whether to replace the nation's first elected black governor with the state's first female chief executive or the son of a famous football coach.

After two terms as attorney general, Mary Sue Terry hopes to succeed L. Douglas Wilder and extend a string of Democratic gubernatorial victories to four. The Virginia Constitution prohibits Wilder from seeking re-election.

Her Republican opponent is former U.S. Rep. George F. Allen, whose late father coached the Los Angeles Rams and Washington Redskins.

Both candidates are lawyers who served in the General Assembly — Terry for eight years, Allen for nine. Allen was elected to Congress in 1991 but lost his seat to redistricting about 15 months later.

Terry, 45, has made her major issue a five-day waiting period for handgun purchases.

"Over the course of this year, we've seen on occasion after occasion the consequences of the proliferation of handguns in schools and streets, and handgun violence among juveniles," she said.

Allen, 41, opposes additional gun control in Virginia, which has a computerized background check for gun buyers and this year limited consumers to one handgun purchase a month. He wants to fight crime by abolishing parole.

"We'll have to build more prisons because I want violent criminals serving longer sentences," he said. "The actual cost of incarceration is less than the cost of having these people out in our communities."

But these issues may have less impact than President Clinton's unpopularity here. George Bush carried Virginia last November, and Terry has opposed Clinton's deficit-reduction plan and his proposal to permit gays to serve in the military.

Allen tries to emphasize the links between the two Democrats. He talks about Terry "nibbling cheese with Hillary Rodham Clinton" at a summer reception and points out she "was a strong and early supporter of Bill Clinton."

"I think people can determine someone's philosophy by the type of person they supported for president," Allen said.

Terry's repudiation of the president's budget rankled some Democrats, so she is now quick to note she agrees with Clinton on many other issues.

Braves whack Philly

■ Atlanta takes a 2-1 lead in the series after a 9-4 thumping of Philadelphia.

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Braves don't need power to pummel the Phillies. On Saturday, they pulverized Philadelphia with line drives.

■ NL Championship Series

While Tom Glavine picked up his first playoff victory, the Braves' record onslaught continued unchecked as they routed the Phillies 9-4 and took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-7 series.

"We've hit the dickens out of the ball the last two ballgames," Braves manager Bobby Cox said.

The Braves' bats have made the playoffs a nightmare for Phillies pitchers. Combined with Thursday night's 14-3 victory in Philadelphia, Atlanta set a playoff record for runs in consecutive games.

"They've got a great offensive ballclub over there," Phillies manager Jim Fregosi said.

White Sox whip Jays; even up ALCS series

By Ben Walker

TORONTO — The most unlikely power hitter put the Chicago White Sox in the most unexpected position.

The White Sox, in trouble when the AL playoffs moved to Toronto, instead tied the series at two games each Saturday night when slap-hitting Lance Johnson led them to a 7-4 victory over the Blue Jays.

Johnson homered for the first time in more than a year and drove in a career-high four runs. Frank Thomas, who is supposed to be a slugger, also homered when the Blue Jays finally pitched to him as the White Sox won a wacky game filled with weird plays.

"I try to hit triples," said Johnson, who hit a two-run triple, too. "I hit all my home runs in batting practice. If I tried to hit home runs in a game, I'd probably hit seven or eight during the season and be out of the game in two years.

"It felt nice going around the bases. I do a lot of running, and it was nice to jog a bit."

Florida State tailback Warrick Dunn gets by Miami middle linebacker Ray Lewis (52) and the Hurricane defense to pick up a first down Saturday.

'Noles roll to win

By Rick Warner

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Florida State made sure it didn't come down to a last-second field goal this time against Miami.

After losing to the Hurricanes two straight years by missing kicks in the closing seconds, the top-ranked Seminoles didn't want another heart-pounding finish. So they took control early with two long touchdowns Saturday and went on to beat No. 3 Miami 28-10 before a record crowd of 77,813 at Doak Campbell Stadium.

The Seminoles snapped Miami's 31-game, regular-season winning streak and got revenge against their longtime nemesis.

Miami had beaten Florida State seven of the past eight years and spoiled the Seminoles' national championship

Gundy grinds Texas

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Injured quarterback Cale Gundy operated an old-fashioned grinding ground game to perfection Saturday, scoring three times as No. 10 Oklahoma snapped a four-game losing streak to Texas with a 38-17 victory at the Cotton Bowl.

Oklahoma advanced to a spotless 5-0 record while Texas dropped to 1-3-1 mark in its worst start since 1938.

Gundy, playing despite a painful bruised left hip, scored on runs of 18, 1, and 3 yards as long-suffering Sooners among the 75,587 fans celebrated coach Gary Gibbs' first victory in the series in five tries.

The Sooners, playing against the NCAA's 104th ranked defense, built a 17-3 lead in the third period after a ground-oriented 65-yard drive capped by Gundy, who faked a pitch on the option and strolled 18-yards for the touchdown.

Texas struck back on a 41-yard Shea Morenz to Mike Adams touchdown pass but couldn't contain Gundy, who authored a 79-yard drive and scored himself on a quarterback sneak to make it 24-10.

'Pack wins cardiac contest

■ North Carolina State wins on the final play of the game as Texas Tech drops to 1-5.

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech almost had a four-game bleeding streak stopped at Jones Stadium Saturday night, but expired of cardiac arrest about the same time the clock ran out.

North Carolina State, which trailed Tech all night got an 11-yard touchdown pass from reserve quarterback Terry Harvey to Eddie Goines with no time remaining to hand the Red Raiders a 36-34 loss, their fifth in a row.

The Wolfpack, now 3-2 on the year after two consecutive losses, scored 12 points in the last two minutes of play to take an amazing victory away from Tech, which fell to 1-5. It was almost a fitting end to the way the Tech season has gone thus far this season.

Harvey, who replaced starting NC State quarterback Geoff Bender, threw four touchdown passes, three to Goines.

Tech led 27-16 after driving for a TD to open the third quarter when Bam Morris scored on a 1-yard run.

Upsets highlight weekend's high school football

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Welcome to full-gear district play, high school football's breeding ground for everything from upsets to merciless poundings.

Both aspects were evident Friday night as several highly ranked teams were knocked off and other top teams crushed opponents by embarrassing scores such as 79-0, 52-0 and 49-0 — and that was just in Class 3A.

Actually, there were a few teams playing out their non-district schedule and one of them turned out to be the biggest shocker of the night as Eldorado went to Rankin and upset 1A's top-ranked Red Devils 14-0.

The Eagles (3-3) opened the scoring with a 1-yard run near the end of the first quarter and added a second touchdown in the third quarter.

The closest Rankin (5-1) came to scoring was reaching Eldorado's 1 before turning the ball over on downs.

Two other surprising results were in 5A as Arlington ended No. 4 Arlington Lamar's 33-game district winning streak with a 21-7 victory and Odessa High upset No. 5-ranked Midland Lee 13-9.

Lamar, which hadn't lost a district game since Arlington beat them Oct. 14, 1988, ended its run by fumbling six times and throwing three interceptions before 10,000 people at UT-Arlington's Maverick Stadium.

It was only the second loss in 49 regular-season games Vikings (5-1).

The Colts (4-1-1) were led by 63 yards and two touchdowns from Ricky Brown.

Odessa's victory was even more dramatic because the Bronchos scored all their points in the final quarter. They capped it with a Rod Williams interception at the Odessa 5 with 1:04 remaining.

"They wanted the win," said Midland Lee coach Earl Miller, who plays No. 1 Odessa Permian in two weeks. "We were just outcoached. This is the poorest coaching job I've seen by us."

Another huge upset was Vernon, ranked fourth in 3A, suffering its second loss of the season 17-14 to Iowa Park.

That's pretty surprising for the team expected to be the biggest obstacle between No. 1 Southlake Carroll and a second straight state title.

"We shocked the world tonight," said Iowa Park coach Robert Clensay, whose Hawks rode a burst of 14 points in 51 seconds in the third quarter for the victory.

The rally began on the opening kickoff of the second half with an onside kick the Hawks recovered and drove for a touchdown.

Vernon's next drive was short lived as Tony Lozipone grabbed an interception on the second play and returned it for a touchdown that led to another onside kick. This time, Iowa Park settled for a field goal that proved to be the winning points.

The Lions scored with little more than a minute left to play and tried an onside kick of their own, but Iowa Park held onto it with 37 seconds to seal the victory.

As for Carroll, it was another typical Dragon slaying. They whacked Aledo 49-0 to extend their state-record winning streak to 67, easily a state record.

Other ranked teams to lose were 3A's ninth-ranked Crandall falling 6-0 to Ferris and a trio of 2A upsets — No. 4 Goldthwaite dropping 13-6 to San Saba, Three Rivers beating No. 8 Refugio 16-7 and defending champion Schulenburg sticking it to No. 9 East Bernard 35-7.

Then there were the lopsided victories, games like 2A's top-ranked Boyd beating Callisburg 62-0 or Permian whipping Midland 52-0.

More brutal results saw 4A's fourth-ranked Austin Westlake beat Del Valle 70-0, 3A's second-ranked Sweeny drub Palacios 79-0 and third-ranked Marble Falls pop Austin Lake Travis 52-0.

The only class to escape the weekend unscathed was 4A, where all ranked teams won easily. The closest margin was No. 10 Jacksonville beating Tyler Chapel Hill 16-9.

Stadler leads rain-plagued Disney

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Craig Stadler was one of the lucky players at the rain-delayed Walt Disney World-Oldsmobile Classic on Saturday.

He got in the last six holes of the second round of the $1 million PGA Tour event in the morning, then shot a 4-under-par 68 to grab a share of the early third-round lead before an afternoon thunderstorm stopped play for the second straight day.

Not only was much of the field still scattered over three courses being used for the tournament, but Jeff Maggert and Skip Kendall — two-thirds of the trio that led after 36 holes — hadn't even begun the third round.

That means some players will have to play 36 holes today if tournament offiicals meet a goal of getting in 72 holes without delaying the finish until Monday.

With good reason. He was already in the clubhouse with a 54-hole total of 13-under-par 203 — tied for the lead with Ed Humenik, who shot 70 Saturday after moving into contention with a 64 in the second round.

But while they had the lowest scores among the nine players who got in the entire third round, Keith Clearwater was the leader on the course at 17-under with one hole left. Mark Wiebe was 14-under through 17 holes.

Clearwater's day, like Stadler's, began at 8 a.m. He played the last seven holes of his second round to pull even with Maggert and Kendall, then began to open a lead on the back nine of the Lake Buena Vista — the easiest of three courses the field of 132 pros and 296 amateurs were playing.

The weather forecast for today calls for a 30 percent chance of rain in the afternoon, but tournament officials said they'll do everything possible to finish the tournament before the end of the day.

■ Golf Roundup

Transamerica Seniors

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Tom Shaw shot a 4-under-par 68 Saturday and took a one-stroke lead over Simon Hobday in the $600,000 Transamerica Senior Golf Championship.

Shaw's second straight 68 left him with an 8-under 136 total after 36 holes on the 6,632-yard south course at Silverado Country Club.

Hobday carded the tournament's lowest round, a 66.

Lee Trevino, Chi Chi Rodriguez, Gary Player and Al Geiberger were two strokes behind entering today's final round. Six others were three strokes out of the lead.

Shaw had nine pars on the front and trailed Trevino by one stroke at the turn. The first of five birdies on the back nine came early when he made a 33-foot putt on No. 10.

Coach bans newspaper access

ODESSA (AP) — Upset with what he termed "negative coverage," the Odessa High School football coach has barred the Odessa American from dressing rooms and practice fields.

Coach Bill Barron also issued a gag order for his staff and all players.

The newspaper retaliated by running white space where it usually runs Broncho game advances.

The disagreement began last Sunday when the newspaper revealed three Odessa High players, including both backup quarterbacks, had left the team.

Barron had earlier told media members that the departures were "for disciplinary and other reasons."

Barron said that all agreed not to run a story on the matter.

American editors decided before Friday's Midland Lee game, which Odessa won 13-9, to tell readers why some players were not suited up.

"We ran the story partly because the quarterback they were using had been injured several times and the key backup was suddenly going to be gone," editor Gary Newsom told The Dallas Morning News. "At the very least, it was of interest, if not important, to the readers."

Barron disagreed with the newspaper's decision.

"I know news is news, but we have so many good kids who don't get covered. I thought it was a negative to cover the ones that we had to discipline," he said.

The Ector County School District has no policy prohibiting coaches from banning media members.

Newspaper reporters and photographers will be allowed to cover games, but the coach said he'll refuse to talk.

"It's just going to be, 'No comment,'" Barron said. "That's all."

Barron said he will consider lifting the ban next season.

"As long as there is not any more negative stuff," the coach said, "there won't be any problem.

Newsom says that although things won't quite be the same, the paper will continue to cover games.

The ban has created some problems in coverage, sports Editor Ed Shugert said.

"It makes it impossible to, for instance, do feature stories. ... Without any way to interview players and coaches, we can't do them anymore."

Newsom says he has a call in to the superintendent, who was out of town Saturday. Newsom said he hopes the problem can be resolved soon.

Apple Tree claims Turf Classic

NEW YORK (AP) — French trainer Andre Fabre couldn't beat Star of Cozzene with Serrant, so he clobbered the U.S. grass ace with Apple Tree.

■ Turf Classic

Making his American debut, Apple Tree swept past pace-setting Solar Splendor 70 yards from the wire and won the 1½-mile Turf Classic on Saturday at Belmont Park.

Star of Cozzene's chances for Horse of the Year honors were battered as the 1-2 favorite finished fourth in a five-horse field. In his first 10 starts this year, the 5-year-old had posted six wins and four seconds.

Two weeks ago, Fabre brought Serrant over from France only to finish second to Star of Cozzene in the 1⅛-mile Man o'War.

Sprinters also were featured on Saturday's card, and Birdonthewire, making a major move on the turn, won the 7-furlong Vosburgh for his third straight victory and a stakes double for Mike Smith, who also rode Apple Tree.

Birdonthewire, $7.40 to win, beat Take Me Out by 2½ lengths in 1:22 1-5, then withdood a foul claim.

Star of Cozzene, purchased for $3 million after the Man o'War by a Japanese group racing as Tamaeato Farm, was pinned along the hedge all the way and never was better than third under Jose Santos.

Apple Tree, a 4-year-old colt, was fourth for the first 1¼ miles then went around horses.

The winner, owned by Sultan Mohammed Al Kabeer, finished 2¼ lengths ahead of Solar Splendor, with George Augustus another half-length back and a length in front of Star of Cozzene. Fraise finished last.

Apple Tree paid $11.40, $7.40 and $11.60 and earned $300,000 from a $500,000 purse with his fifth win in 16 starts this year.

Ridden by Herb McCauley, Solar Splendor waltzed through a 26-second first quarter and a 51 2-5-second half. The mile time was 1:41.

Before the race, Hennig indicated Star of Cozzene would skip the Breeders' Cup Turf Nov. 6 at Santa Anita and go to the Japan Cup at Tokyo on Nov. 28.

WOLFPACK: Tech loses on final play sewed up, leading 34-30 and owning the ball with under two minutes left in the game. But Morris dropped the ball without being hit and Harvey took the Wolfpack 66 yards in 10 plays with just 1:23 left in the game and he needed every second to get the job done. But he did it.

"I was just like everyone else. It looked kind of bleak out there," Harvey said, "but to get to come into the game and be a part of something like this is just fantastic. What else can you say. Goines is the greatest receiver around. He gets open."

Harvey completed 26 of 41 passes for 307 yards and Goines caught nine for 123 yards.

NC State coach Mike O'Cain said, "We're just happy to have Lubbock in our rear view mirror. You just don't question how this one happened. You just go on."

The last second heroics spoiled a great outing by Tech quarterback Robert Hall, who completed 29 of 40 passes for 348 yards and a touchdown. Also, Morris' fumble overshadowed his 141 yards rushing and two touchdowns.

Former Odessa Permian star Lloyd Hill caught seven passes for 56 yards to become the SWC career leader for pass receiving yardage with 2,805 yards in his career, passing SMU's Emanuel Tolbert.

"I guess the record is nice, but I can't think about that right now. This was a tough one to lose," Hill said.

The two teams produced 1,125 total yards, the second highest total in Jones Stadium history. The last time Tech lost on the final play of the game was in 1982 against SMU.

"This is the toughest loss I've ever been through," said Tech coach Spike Dykes. "It's quite obvious this is a 60-minute game. We just could not get the job done. This is a bitter pill to swallow and I'm at a loss for words to describe how we feel right now. This one just makes you sick."

Tech held a 20-16 lead at the half, thanks to a blocked NC State extra point by Byron Wright and a 67-yard drive for a 45-yard Jon Davis field goal with two seconds left.

The Raiders never trailed in the first half, taking a 7-0 lead on their first possession when Robert Hall hit Bruce Hill with a 21-yard scoring strike. NC State later tied the game at 10-10 in the second quarter when reserve running back Brian Fitzgerald scored from the 12 for his first career TD, but Tech answered quickly with a 39-yard scoring strike from Hall to Tony Miller for a 17-10 lead.

The Wolfpack answered the challenge when quarterback Geoff Bender hit Eddie Goines with a 38-yard TD pass, but Wright blocked the extra point.

OU: Gibbs wins first

(From 1B)

Safety John Anderson's interception of a Morenz pass at the Texas 25 positioned the Sooners for Dwyane Chandler's 3-yard run and a 31-10 fourth quarter lead.

Morenz connected with flashy freshman Adams again on a 12-yard scoring pass but it was too late to catch the Sooners, who came right back on a 3-yard touchdown run by Gundy. It was the first time Gundy had scored three touchdowns in a game.

Oklahoma, operating from the shotgun formation for the first time this season, drove to the Texas 7 in the first period with Scott Blanton putting the Sooners ahead 3-0 on a 22-yard field goal.

The Sooners stayed on the ground all 12 plays to make it 10-0 on freshman Jerald Moore's 9-yard run. Moore gained 51 yards on seven carries on the almost-mechanical 88-yard drive.

Texas, an 11-point underdog, cut the deficit to 10-3 just before the end of the first half on Scott Szeredy's 52-yard field goal which rode a 25 mph wind.

Gundy hit 10 of 17 passes for 111 yards and rushed for 21. James Allen gained 102 yards on 18 carries for the Sooners.

Morenz hit 20 of 36 passes for 263 yards.

It was the first Texas-Oklahoma game on grass since 1969. The Cotton Bowl has been refurbished to be ready for World Cup soccer matches in 1994.

Texas now leads the series 51-33-4.

Hill returns from suspension to lead Aggie win

Houston safety Gerome Williams (3) almost intercepts a pass intended for Texas A&M's Greg Schorp (86) during the Aggies 34-10 win Saturday.

■ Greg Hill rushed for 128 yards as A&M remains undefeated in conference play.

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Greg Hill returned from a five-game suspension and rushed for 128 yards and No. 14 Texas A&M rebounded from a sluggish start to beat Houston 34-10.

After a scoreless first quarter, Texas A&M (4-1, 2-0) scored 20 straight points in the second on Corey Pullig's 4-yard pass to Ryan Mathews, Rodney Thomas' 9-yard run and a 45-yard field goal by Terry Venetoulias.

Venetoulias added a 28-yarder in the third quarter for a 20-0 lead before the Cougars rallied briefly on Trace Craft's 40-yard field goal and a 52-yard interception return by Delmonico Montgomery.

Leeland McElroy returned a kickoff 43 yards to start the drive leading to Thomas' 1-yard TD run with 10:11 left in the game, and McElroy made it a rout with an 81-yard touchdown run with 5:34 left in the game.

Hill, the Aggies' leading rusher last season, had been suspended for taking money for work he did not perform. He got his 128 yards on 20 carries. Thomas added 82 yards on 21 carries.

Houston (1-4, 1-1) got momentum in the first quarter when Trey George launched a wind-aided 67-yard punt to the Aggie 1-foot line. The Aggies drove out to their 31, but Rodney Thomas fumbled and Ryan McCoy recovered.

Houston's Sherman Smith fumbled on Houston's next play and the Aggies drove 62 yards and scored on Pullig's 4-yard pass to Mathews.

The Houston defense, which held Baylor without a touchdown last week, apparently stopped the Aggies at the Houston 16, but a holding penalty against McCoy gave the Aggies a first down and set up Thomas' 9-yard touchdown run.

George's 14-yard punt into the wind with 21 seconds left in the half set up a 45-yard field goal by Venetoulias.

Bears pass on throwing game, grind up Ponies

DALLAS (AP) — Baylor became the first Division I-A team in seven seasons not to throw a pass, running away from Southern Methodist 31-12 Saturday behind 100-yard games from John Henry, Bradford Lewis and Brandell Jackson.

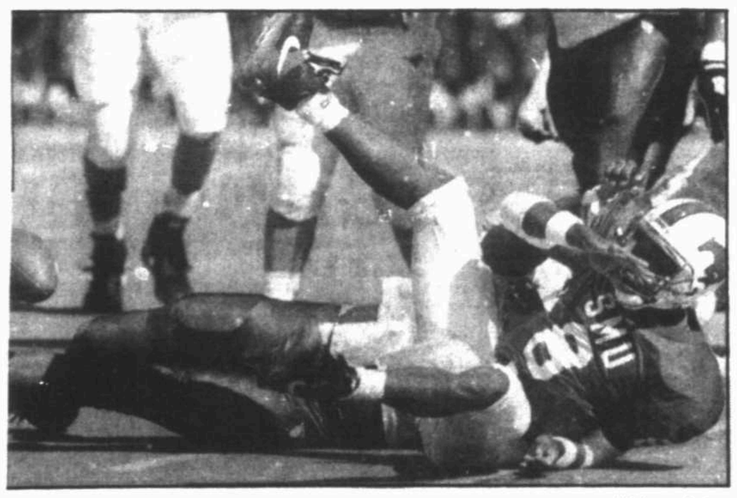
The last time a team went without a pass was Oklahoma vs. Colorado on Nov. 15, 1986. It's believed not to have happened in the Southwest Conference since SMU was grounded by Texas A&M in 1974.

"We didn't really have a choice," said Baylor's first-year coach Chuck Reedy. "After warmups, we found out that (quarterback J.J. Joe's) shoulder was too sore and he couldn't throw."

The 91 carries by the Bears (4-2, 2-1 Southwest Conference) also broke the conference record of 90 by Texas vs. Arkansas in 1970.

Baylor gained a total of 482 yards, led by 164 and a touchdown from Henry, 101 and a TD from Lewis and 100 by Jackson. Robert Strait had 38 yards and two TDs.

Baylor was an unlikely candidate to abandon the pass considering its first victory was a 42-39 throwing duel against Fresno State.



AP Laserphoto

SMU quarterback Ramon Flanigan (8) loses the ball after being sacked by Baylor's Scotty Lewis during the Bears 31-12 win.

The Bears were averaging 19 passes for 186 yards, but they proved early that their game plan consisted basically of straight handoffs, draw plays and options.

By halftime, the Bears had rushed 44 times for 248 yards, getting scoring runs of 1 and 7 yards from Strait and a 42-yarder by Henry. Henry's run was their longest run of the season — until he went 50 yards in the third quarter.

The Mustangs (1-2-1, 1-1) were lucky to be down only 21-6 at halftime, scoring only on two John Stewart field goals, including a wind-aided 55-yard kick that barely cleared the crossbar as the second quarter expired.

It was the second-longest field goal in school history, behind Brandy Brownlee's 57-yarder against Texas Tech in 1985.

Eagles rally to defeat Bobcats

Associated Press

DENTON — Mitch Maher accounted for all of North Texas' scoring, running for three touchdowns and throwing two more as the Eagles rallied to defeat Southwest Texas State 35-28 Saturday.

Maher started his day with a 55-yard touchdown pass to Troy Redwine, but the Bobcats (1-4, 0-1 Southland Conference) fought back to grab a 17-7 advantage early in the third quarter.

The Eagles (3-2, 1-0) began their comeback with Maher's first rushing TD, an 18-yarder with 9:05 left in the first half.

He added a 2-yard run in the third quarter and a 7-yarder in the fourth, followed by a 27-yard scoring toss to Luis Silva that extended UNT's lead to 35-20.

Southwest Texas' second-half points came on Ray Whitehead's second field goal of the game, a 37-yarder, and a 10-yard TD run by Michael Ivory with 49 seconds left.

Whitehead also kicked a career-best 42-yarder in the first half.

Terrence Brown rushed for a game-high 126 yards on 24 carries. Maher threw for 217 yards.

The Bobcats were led by Steve Eaton's 66 rushing yards.

Trinity 30, Carnegie-Mellon 29

PITTSBURGH — Arbra Bailey passed for two fourth-quarter touchdowns and ran for a third score as Trinity snapped a three-game losing streak with an upset of Carnegie Mellon.

The second of Bailey's touchdown passes, a 6-yarder to David Marston, came with 2:44 left and gave Trinity the victory. Trinity linebacker James Vallerie intercepted a Chris Dee pass at the CMU 35 to set up the winning drive.

Trinity (2-3) drove 30 yards on nine plays.

Earlier, Trinity's Eric Phifer intercepted Dee and returned it 33 yards for a touchdown. Dee finished 10 of 21 for 183 yards, but was intercepted four times.

Carnegie Mellon (4-2), ranked 21st in NCAA Division III, got touchdown passes of 63 and 34 yards from Dee to Jarrod Siket.

Brian Horton and Jason Grusky also ran for touchdowns of 1 and 3 yards respectively.

Angelo St. 28, E. New Mexico 0

PORTALES, N.M. — Mike Jinks threw for 245 yards and two touchdowns and Angelo State scored all its points in the first half of a win over Eastern New Mexico.

Angelo (5-1) held the Greyhounds to 12 first downs and 188 yards in total offense in winning its Lone Star Conference opener.

Jinks hit Andre President for a 48-yard touchdown pass to give Angelo a 20-0 lead with 6:23 left in the first half.

With 32 seconds left in the half, Jinks and Wayne Mathis hooked up for an 11-yard touchdown pass and a two-point conversion to close the scoring.

Jinks completed 15 of 23 passes with no interceptions.

The Greyhounds (0-5-1, 0-2) used three quarterbacks and completed only 8 of 26 passes for 75 yards. Eastern's starting quarterback, Jared Hutchins, left after going 4-for-9 for 35 yards and an interception.

Howard Payne 20, Sul Ross 17

BROWNWOOD — Aaron Evans rushed for 123 yards and first-half touchdown runs of 11 and 4 yards as Howard Payne edged Sul Ross State.

Tom Collins added a 12-yard TD pass in the third quarter for the Yellow Jackets (2-4, 1-1 Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association). Collins completed 13 of 27 passes for 170 yards.

Rodney Hall caught eight passes for 128 yards and two touchdowns for the Lobos (0-5, 0-2).

Colorado College 38, Austin College 24

SHERMAN — John Lutz rushed for 130 yards and a touchdown as unbeaten Colorado College got by Austin College.

Lutz carried the ball 34 times for the Tigers (4-0).

Chris Sanders led the Kangaroos (3-3) with 177 yards rushing on 24 attempts. He also scored two touchdowns.

Austin College had 439 yards of offense, but turned the ball over seven times.

Valdosta St. 68, Tarleton St. 10

VALDOSTA, Ga. — Chris Hatcher passed for 315 yards and five touchdowns, leading Valdosta State to a romp over Tarleton State.

The Blazers, 5-1 and ranked eighth in Division II, scored on their first two possessions in the first quarter and added four second-quarter touchdowns after a Tarleton field goal to lead 41-3 at the half. The Texans fell to 2-4.

Hatcher has 25 touchdown passes this season and 54 in his career, both school records. Lance Funderburk relieved him in the third quarter and threw for 111 yards and two scores.

■ Texas Colleges

West Texas A&M 28, Prairie View A&M 6

PRAIRIE VIEW — Jeff Myers rushed for three touchdowns and Norman White ran for 196 yards Saturday as West Texas A&M routed Prairie View A&M, extending the Panthers' losing streak to 29 games.

Myers gained only 16 yards on seven carries, but scored on two 1-yard runs and an 8-yarder for the Buffaloes (2-3)

White gained 196 yards on 25 carries, including a 44-yard run as West Texas A&M gained 218 yards on the ground. Arnold Marcha added a 3-yard TD run in the third quarter.

Prairie View scored the fourth quarter on a 43-yard pass from Greg Bell to Shawn Narcisse. Bell completed eight of 19 passes for 119 yards. He was intercepted three times and sacked three times.

Texas A&M-Kingsville 28, East Texas State 3

KINGSVILLE — Tailback Dexter Deese scored two touchdowns as Texas A&M-Kingsville snapped a five-game losing streak with a victory over East Texas State.

Deese scored on a 2-yard run in the first period and caught a 58-yard touchdown pass from Joe Menchaca in the third quarter as the Javelinas won their Lone Star Conference opener.

Larry Young added a 14-yard rushing TD and Menchaca hit Billy Bartosh with an 8-yard scoring strike for Texas A&M-Kingsville, which led 21-3 at the half.

Billy Watkins kicked a 23-yard field goal to pull East Texas State to within 7-3 after Deese's TD run.

East Texas fell to 3-3 overall and 1-1 in the LSC.

The game was called by the game officials with 6:15 left when a thunderstorm hit Javelina Stadium.

Stephen F. Austin 24, Sam Houston State 20

HUNTSVILLE — James Ritchey's three touchdowns led Stephen F. Austin to a victory over Sam Houston State.

Ritchey did most of his damage on the ground, scoring twice and running for 104 yards on 12 carries for the Lumberjacks (4-1, 1-0 Southland Conference). He also completed six of 10 passes for 60 yards and one TD.

Ritchey's 17-yard touchdown run gave SFA a 10-0 lead at the half. He then hit Walter Terry on a 10-yard scoring strike 3:10 into the third quarter to put the Lumberjacks ahead 17-0.

The Bearkats (2-3, 0-1) scored in the third quarter on a 10-yard pass from Dwight Gross to Blake Vincent.

But Ritchey scored on a 6-yard run in the fourth quarter for a 24-7 Lumberjack lead.

Gross then hit Red Jones with two 13-yard scoring strikes in a 78-second span to make the score 24-20 with 11:15 remaining.

Gross completed 19 of 33 passes for 217 yards. He threw three touchdowns and one interception.

Curtis Luper recorded his third consecutive 100-yard rushing day for SFA, gaining 105 yards on 22 carries.

Hardin-Simmons 38, McMurry 7

ABILENE — Kevin Beam passed for 328 yards and two touchdowns in top-ranked Hardin-Simmons' romp over McMurry.

Beam completed 27 of 36 passes for the NAIA Cowboys (5-0, 2-0 Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association).

Collin McCormick caught 15 passes for 127 yards and a score, and John Jones caught 6 for 115 yards for the Cowboys.

McMurry (3-2, 0-1) managed just 66 passing yards and 193 yards of offense.

Abilene Christian 28, Central Okla. 10

ABILENE — Rex Lamberti passed for 309 yards and four touchdowns, including throws of 66 and 48 yards, as Abilene Christian whipped Central Oklahoma.

Lamberti, a senior who returned to football this year at age 27 after six years off, completed 19 of 37 passes for the Wildcats (5-1, 2-0 Lone Star Conference). He has thrown 19 touchdowns this year.

Central Oklahoma (4-2, 0-2), which had been averaging 282.6 rushing yards, gained only 25 yards on the ground.

Cleveland Phillips' 65-yard punt return in the second quarter was the Bronchos' only score.

Wyoming 33, UTEP 26

EL PASO — Wyoming quarterback Joe Hughes plunged across the goal line with less than a minute left to lift the Cowboys to a victory over Texas-El Paso.

The victory was the fifth straight for Wyoming (5-1, 3-0 Western Athletic Conference). UTEP slipped to 1-5 and 0-2.

Hughes' game-winning touchdown came on a rare carry for Hughes, who completed 26 of 42 passes for 422 yards and three touchdowns. He ran four times for 25 yards.

One of Hughes' favorite targets was All-American wide receiver Ryan Yarborough, who had 10 catches for 213 yards to set a NCAA record for the most 200-yard games in a career. The senior receiver has gone over 200 yards six times.

He also became Wyoming's all-time career touchdown leader, scoring his 35th TD on a 56-yard pass from Hughes in the second quarter.

The final scoring drive began after Miners quarterback Corey Tucker threw an incomplete pass on a 4th-and-8 at the Wyoming 47 with the scored 26-all.

The Cowboys took possession with 2:56 left in the final period. They drove 53 yards on five plays in 2:10.

Hughes was 4-for-4 on the final drive, completing two passes each to tight Mike Jones and to Yarborough, who caught his final pass of the night on the 1. Hughes then went in over the middle for the go-ahead score.

The Miners closed in on the Cowboys with 11:49 remaining in the game as slotback John Haqq ran around the right side for a touchdown, and Marshall Young, whose extra point was blocked earlier, connected to tie the game at 26-all.

The score was set up by a 77-yard run by slotback Ivory Durio, who took an option pitch from Tucker and ran to the 3 before being brought down by safety Rob Levin.

Durio led the Miners ground game with 102 yards on seven carries. The Miners option offense rolled up 275 yards on the ground.

Tucker, starting his first game, completed 7 of 17 passes for 140 yards and one touchdown. He rushed 19 times for 15 yards.

Eyes on NBA rookie crop

Associated Press

■ NBA Camps

All eyes were on highly-touted rookies as NBA training camps opened around the country.

Shawn Bradley banged bodies with Moses Malone, Bobby Hurley matched up with Spud Webb and Anfernee Hardaway got ready to team up with Shaquille O'Neal.

What were Chris Webber and Jamal Mashburn doing Friday?

Webber was sitting in a Detroit hospital room recuperating from an appendectomy. The No. 1 pick still hasn't signed with Golden State, but team president Dan Finnane said he was confident a deal could be reached by next week.

Mashburn, meanwhile, was waiting for the Mavericks to make him an offer like the one Hardaway got with the Orlando Magic. Dallas personnel director Rick Sund said Hardaway's $45 million, 13-year contract will have an effect on the negotiations with Mashburn. Last year, Dallas didn't sign top pick Jim Jackson until 54 regular-season games had been played.

In other camp news:

Spurs

San Antonio is looking for a point guard. The team chose not to resign Avery Johnson, last year's sporadic starter at the point, leaving the job open to either Sleepy Floyd, Vinny Del Negro or rookies Chris Whitney or Chris Childs.

Bulls

Scottie Pippen was the focus of everyone's attention as Chicago opened camp without Michael Jordan.

"It's going to be a test by fire for him," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "He's perfectly capable of stepping in."

Pippen is the designee to fill the leadership role Jordan had for the three-time defending champions. He said he doesn't feel any additional pressure.

"It's a great role," he said. "We're going to find out what we've got as a team. We can still win with what we've got."

76ers

Bradley looked worn out after going up against Malone in practice, but the Philadelphia staff didn't seem to mind the veteran jabbing the rookie with a few elbows.

"I was happy with what that kid did," coach Fred Carter said. "This is like a whole new world to him."

Malone, who was traded from the team in 1986, was signed in the off-season and is expected to help with Bradley's development.

Kings

Hurley, one of 19 players at Sacramento's camp, has his hands full — with homework. "It's a lot more information to take in than I'm used to," he said. "It's quite an adjustment, and it will take some time to learn all the plays and offenses."

Bucks

Milwaukee opened camp and showed off new uniforms, which mix green — the team's long-time color — with purple. The Bucks also have a new logo this year. Getting a look in camp is 7-6, 265-pound center Greg Ritter. "In the Los Angeles summer league, he had about four or fives games where he blocked 10 shots in a game," coach Mike Dunleavy said.

Nets

New Jersey also made a uniform change, announcing they will wear a black stripe across the shoulder strap in honor of guard Drazen Petrovic, who was killed in a car accident in Germany over the summer. Petrovic's uniform No. 3 will be retired at the Nov. 11 home opener.

Heat

Miami signed free agent guard Jeff Martin, who played 32 games last year for Zaragoza in the Spanish league and averaged 17 points. Martin was drafted out of Murray State in 1989 by the Clippers and played two seasons before being traded to the Detroit Pistons in August 1991.

Celtics

Robert Parish summed up the Celtics' chances in a season that follows the death of Reggie Lewis over the summer and the retirement of Kevin McHale after last season.

"There are expectations," the 40-year-old said. "They're just not championship expectations."

Pacers

Indiana signed veteran guard Ledell Eackles, who played in the CBA last year after four seasons with the Washington Bullets.

National team may lack Shaq attack

SECAUCUS, N.J. (AP) — Charlotte Hornets teammates Larry Johnson and Alonzo Mourning headed the list of 10 NBA players who accepted invitations to play on the U.S. national team at next summer's World Championships. One name that wasn't there Saturday should generate a lot of discussion.

Shaquille O'Neal, the league's rookie of the year last season and the man who many handed Michael Jordan's mantle of NBA superstar, was not on the list because of a sponsorship conflict. If the problem is worked out, he could be one of two players added to the roster in the spring.

Joining Johnson, who just signed a 12-year, $84 million contract, and Mourning on the second team of NBA players to represent the United States in international competition were Dominique Wilkins of Atlanta, Derrick Coleman of New Jersey, Joe Dumars of Detroit, Tim Hardaway of Golden State, Shawn Kemp of Seattle, Mark Price of Cleveland, Steve Smith of Miami and Dan Majerle of Phoenix.

The team will compete Aug. 4-14 at Toronto in a 16-team field, for which the United States qualified by winning the Olympic gold medal last summer. Golden State Warriors coach Don Nelson was chosen to coach the team.

No member of the Dream Team, the first all-NBA international team which won the gold medal at the Barcelona Olympics led by the recently retired Jordan, Magic Johnson and Larry Bird, was selected for the second version.

That team had its own sponsorship problem, but it came during the Games when Jordan led a group of players under contract to Nike who didn't want to wear the USOC-issued medal ceremony sweatsuits made by Reebok. That problem was solved by the players covering the logo with strategically placed American flags.

The latest controversy involves rival soft drink companies.

Pepsi-Cola, which has O'Neal under an exclusive marketing agreement, said the NBA is insisting on a contract with Team USA players that allows it to market them "in conflict with their current business deals."

"We're told that unless we waive our rights, he (O'Neal) can't be on the team," Pepsi said Friday in what it called an open letter to its customers. "We're not going to be a pawn for the NBA's promotional partners."

One of the team's prime sponsors is McDonald's, the restaurant chain that sells Coca-Cola.

USA Basketball said O'Neal cannot play because of his refusal to sign the standard player contract.

New Mav coach wants to bring respect to franchise

WACO (NYT) — Quinn Buckner could hardly sleep Thursday. He couldn't wait to get a jump start on maybe the biggest challenge of his life — turning the Dallas Mavericks from National Basketball Association laughingstock to a respectable, maybe even championship organization.

"I don't know if this is the biggest challenge that I've ever faced, but it is the latest," Buckner said.

"I've been looking forward to this day ever since I took this job. Just to be able to talk with the guys about what it takes to be a successful athlete but a successful person as well."

Buckner is laying the groundwork for those principles during his initial training camp at Baylor University's Ferrell Center.

"This is the key to our program," Buckner said. "You've got to have a starting point, a foundation. We're doing that right now. I'm called a coach, but I look at myself as more of a teacher.

"We talked about the responsibilities of winning and what it takes. We talked about being accountable for where we are and where we want to go and what it will take to be a winner, not just on the court, but off it as well. Those are all character traits that do not come out of habits, but beliefs and attitude as well. We've got to change the old way of thinking around here."

One way Buckner has done that is with his get-tough, no-excuses attitude.

"You've got to take the responsibility for where you are," Buckner said. "That's the first thing. I know everybody doesn't take criticism well, but we've got to change the attitude from last year. We've got get the guys to understand how much they contributed to the situation last year.

"The bottom line is, a person who believes in his ability to accomplish something will be successful more times than not. To me that key is to learn something every day. I know some people might think that I'm a pain in the behind, but I'm not here to make any friends."

Buckner is fanatical about winning, but not to the point he will sacrifice time with his family the way some coaches do. He was a successful businessman who had a dream job with NBC that kept him around the game he loved after he played 10 years in the NBA.

But he couldn't resist this challenge, and now he's glad he didn't, even though he has no prior coaching experience. He says Mavericks consultant Stu Inman and assistant coach Tom Newell have helped him learn the organizational structure of the job.

"Stu has done a good job of helping me understand the components of what this job is all about," Buckner said. "He has been very helpful in helping me organize practice and prepared me for some things to expect.

"I'm not afraid to make mistakes. If you're afraid to make the mistake, then you're afraid to try. And I won't be afraid to try something."

"The good thing about our staff is that nobody gets easily offended. I have no problem taking opinions from the rest of the staff."

Huskies rally over Cal

Associated Press

BERKELEY, Calif. — Damon Huard threw a 7-yard touchdown pass to Mark Bruener with 1:04 left and Travis Hanson kicked the extra point to lift No. 13 Washington to a 24-23 victory over 16th-ranked California on Saturday.

■ Top 25 Roundup

The Huskies (4-1, 2-0 Pac-10) overcame seven turnovers and a 23-10 deficit with a stunning rally in the final 2:06, extending their winning streak against Cal to 13 games.

Cal (5-1, 2-1), which rallied from 30 points down to beat Oregon 42-41 last week, was the victim of a comeback this time.

Huard, who threw four interceptions and fumbled twice, threw a 29-yard touchdown pass to D.J. McCarthy to pull Washington within 23-17 with 2:06 left.

Washington then tried an onsides kick and it was recovered by the Huskies' Scott Greenlaw at the Cal 48.

Suddenly, the Bears defense, dominating all day, was back on its heels. On fourth-and-4 from the 42, Huard completed a 10-yard pass to Joe Kralik.

Three more completions moved the ball to the 7 and, after Napoleon Kaufman was held for no gain on a run, Huard passed to Bruener in the corner of the end zone for the winning score.

Cal drove to the Washington 47, where the Bears lined up to try a 68-yard field goal by Doug Brien with two seconds left. But he didn't get the kick off because of an illegal snap. The Huskies refused the penalty and time ran out.

No. 4 Notre Dame 44, Pitt 0

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Lee Becton ran for a career-high 142 yards Saturday and No. 4 Notre Dame did not allow a first down in the second half of its 44-0 win over Pitt.

Becton, who missed two starts with a hamstring injury, ran for 97 yards in the third quarter and the Fighting Irish (6-0) piled up 371 total rushing yards to hand the Panthers (1-4) their fourth straight one-sided loss.

Ray Zellars also ran for two touchdowns.

No. 5 Florida 58, LSU 3

BATON ROUGE, La. — Danny Wuerffel threw for 221 yards and four touchdowns in less than three full quarters Saturday night as No. 5 Florida handed LSU the worst defeat in its 100-year history, 58-3.

Errict Rhett added 75 yards and a TD on 14 carries for the Gators (5-0, 4-0 Southeastern Conference), and Terry Dean picked up where Wuerffel left off, hitting Sorola Palmer with a 34-yard touchdown pass to make it 44-3 late in the third quarter.

When Dwayne Mobley ran it in from 7 yards out with 9:48 left in the game, it gave LSU (2-4, 1-3) its worst SEC loss ever and marked the first time the Tigers gave up more than 50 points in once-foreboding Death Valley.

And, when Terrence Foy scored on a 6-yard run with 1:38 left, the 55-point margin exceeded the Tigers' previous worst loss, a 64-9 setback to Texas A&M in 1914.

Wuerffel has been the starter since Dean was benched during a near-loss to Kentucky on Sept. 11. The redshirt freshman has thrown at least three touchdowns in all three of his starts. He completed his final 11 passes against LSU before sitting out the end of the third and all of the final period.

No. 6 Ohio St. 20, Illinois 12

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Joey Galloway caught an 11-yard touchdown pass and Terry Glenn recovered a fumble in the end zone Saturday as sixth-ranked Ohio State defeated Illinois 20-12.

The victory snapped Ohio State's five-year losing streak against the Fighting Illini and also gave the Buckeyes (5-0, 2-0 Big Ten) their best record since 1979.

■ More Sports/10B

Ohio State's defense was equally impressive, surrendering only 197 yards. The Illini (1-4, 1-1) got all their points on field goals by Chris Richardson.

Johnny Johnson hit Ken Dilger with a 33-yard touchdown pass that would have put Illinois ahead in the fourth quarter, but the play was wiped out by a penalty. The Illini had another pass picked off in the end zone in the last minute.

Wind gusting to 30 mph from the north made passing difficult and all six of the game's field goals were kicked through the south goal posts.

Michigan St. 17, No. 9 Michigan 7

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Jim Miller passed for 187 yards and a touchdown and Michigan State's fired-up defense overwhelmed Michigan as the Spartans upset the ninth-ranked Wolverines 17-7 Saturday.

The Spartans held Tyrone Wheatley, the nation's leading all-purpose rusher, to 33 yards on 11 carries, which was the total of Michigan's rushing offense. The Spartans sacked Todd Collins three times for 30 yards and recovered Wheatley's first-quarter fumble to set the tone for the rest of the game.

Michigan State (3-1 overall, 1-1 Big Ten) led 17-0 at halftime, making it the first time since 1987 that the Wolverines (3-2, 1-1) were scoreless at the break.

Brice Abrams scored on a 3-yard run, Scott Greene caught a 3-yard touchdown toss from Miller, who completed 18 of 24, and Bill Stoyanovich kicked a 47-yard field goal for Michigan State.

Collins, who completed 17 of 23 for 212 yards, threw a 21-yard TD pass to Derrick Alexander in the third quarter.

No. 11 Tennessee 28, Arkansas 14

LITTLE ROCK, Ark — Heath Shuler tied a school record with his 18th touchdown pass of the season and also scored twice as 11th-ranked Tennessee beat Arkansas 28-14 on Saturday.

Shuler's long completion to Craig Faulkner led to the touchdown that put the Volunteers ahead 14-7 and Shuler's 11-yard throw to Faulkner made it 21-7 early in the third quarter. His 7-yard run upped it 28-14 with 6:11 to play.

Shuler wound up 19-of-26 for 307 yards.

Arkansas (3-3, 2-2 Southeastern Conference) put together a 74-yard touchdown drive midway through the third quarter to make it 21-14, then held the Vols (5-1, 3-1) on fourth-and-inches at the Arkansas 7.

Dean Peevy's interception at the Arkansas 47 gave the Razorbacks a chance early in the fourth quarter, but, for the first time, it was three plays and punt. The Vols then went 84 yards in 14 plays and ate up 6:40.

No. 15 North Carolina 45, Wake Forest 35

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Curtis Johnson ran for three touchdowns and Leon Johnson rushed for a score Saturday, leading 15th-ranked North Carolina to a 45-35 victory over Wake Forest.

Curtis Johnson rushed for 132 yards on 15 carries, including a 17-yard burst for a score midway through the second quarter and a 75-yard dash on the first play of the second half for his second score. Johnson went 5 yards for his third score with 38 seconds left in the third quarter.

Leon Johnson had a 7-yard touchdown run early in the second quarter and he finished with 119 yards on 16 carries for the Tar Heels (6-1, 3-1 Atlantic Coast Conference).

It was an afternoon of futility for Wake Forest (1-4, 0-2 ACC) despite a fourth-quarter rally that closed a huge gap. If the Demon Deacons weren't chasing the Tar Heel offense for the first three quarters, they were committing costly penalties — and there were a lot of those in the first half.

No. 20 Colorado 30, Missouri 18

BOULDER, Colo. — Lamont Warren rushed for 137 yards and scored twice, and No. 20 Colorado ended a two-game losing streak with a 30-18 romp over Missouri on Saturday.

The Buffaloes (3-2) opened their Big Eight season by scoring on five straight possessions en route to a 27-3 lead midway through the third quarter.

No. 21 Wisconsin 53, N'western 14

MADISON, Wis. — Darrell Bevell completed all 14 of his first-half passes and Terrell Fletcher ran for three touchdowns Saturday as No. 21 Wisconsin routed Northwestern 53-14 for its first 5-0 start since 1977.

Wisconsin's offensive outburst before a sellout crowd of 77,745 and scouts from the Holiday and Citrus bowls was its biggest since scoring 56 against Minnesota in 1983.

No. 22 Auburn 31, Mississippi State 17

AUBURN, Ala. — No. 22 Auburn overcame four early turnovers to ensure its first winning season since 1990, getting three touchdown passes from Stan White in a 31-17 victory over Mississippi State on Saturday.

The Tigers (6-0 overall, 4-0 Southeastern Conference) had lost two years in a row to Mississippi State, but this is a different Auburn team than the one that stumbled to records of 5-6 and 5-5-1.

No. 24 West Virginia 36, No. 17 Louisville 34

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — Robert Walker rushed for 161 yards and three touchdowns Saturday and West Virginia's defense forced Louisville into four late turnovers as the unbeaten Mountaineers beat the Cardinals 36-34.

hopes four times since 1987. But the Hurricanes (4-1) were no match this time for the mighty Seminoles (6-0), who had outscored their first five opponents 228-14.

Florida State, a 12½-point favorite, built a 21-7 halftime lead on a 69-yard touchdown run by Sean Jackson, a 72-yard bomb from Charlie Ward to Matt Frier and Ward's 2-yard TD run.

After a scoreless third quarter, Miami pulled to 21-10 on a 23-yard field goal by Dane Prewitt on the third play of the fourth quarter. But Florida State sealed its 13th straight victory with 4:59 left when Devin Bush intercepted a pass by Frank Costa and returned it 40 yards for a touchdown.

Miami beat Florida State 19-16 last year when Dan Mowrey missed a 39-yard field goal attempt on the final play. In 1991, the Hurricanes won 17-16 when Gerry Thomas' 34-yard kick went wide right with 25 seconds remaining.

Florida State didn't have to rely on a crucial kick Saturday by highly recruited freshman Scott Bentley. He didn't attempt a field goal and made all four of his extra-point kicks.

The loss ended a remarkable run by Miami against top-ranked teams. The Hurricanes had won their last eight games against No. 1, including wins over Florida State in 1988 and 1991.

In the first half, Florida State scored three touchdowns, gained 303 yards and averaged 10 yards per play against a Miami defense that hadn't given up a touchdown before intermission all season.

Florida State scored on its third play from scrimmage, when Jackson cut right and raced down the sideline for a touchdown. He broke four tackles, one with a great stiff-arm of Terris Harris near the Miami 20.

Miami tied it with 4:09 left in the first quarter on Costa's 6-yard TD pass to Donnell Bennett. The key play in the 80-yard drive came on third-and-13 from the Miami 40, when Costa and Chris Jones hooked up on a 40-yard catch and run.

Four plays later, Florida State scored on the 72-yard pass from Ward to Frier, who caught the ball at the Miami 40 and outraced linebacker Rohan Marley to the end zone. Ward made the play possible by scrambling out of the pocket and throwing on the run while being chased by lineman Warren Sapp.

Income tax vote lets people decide

Most important of the 16 proposed amendments to the Texas Constitution that face voters in the Nov. 2 election is Amendment 4 which would provide a safeguard against the Legislature enacting a state income tax without approval of voters.

That proposal, along with Amendments 5, 12 and 14, are the subjects of today's editorial.

The Texas Constitution now gives the Legislature the authority to impose a personal income tax, but the debate over such a tax has been raging for the past several years with a number of Texans suggesting that a prohibition such as the one contained in Amendment 4 is needed.

Under the provisions of this amendment, an income tax would be prohibited without voter approval and if enacted, the proceeds of such a tax would be dedicated to education and property tax relief.

Amendment 4's safeguard against enactment of a personal income tax without approval of Texas voters is an important safeguard in the current tax climate.

Opponents of the proposal argue that the amendment would actually make the enactment of a personal income tax easier. We don't think so. First of all, there is the simple matter that Texans should be allowed to vote on a statewide tax; second is the likelihood that Texans would not approve such a tax unless it was absolutely essential.

Voters should cast ballots FOR this amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 5 — This amendment would allow the Legislature to prescribe the qualifications of sheriffs. That might be fine if the sheriffs of Texas were serving the legislators, but they're not; they're serving the people of the county for which they are elected.

The Texas Constitution has correctly left it up to the people of the 254 counties in the state to decide the qualifications for their sheriffs. That keeps basic law enforcement directly responsible to the people. That's as it should be. Voters should cast their ballots AGAINST this amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 12 — Texans concerned about the number of violent crimes committed in the state will appreciate this amendment. Under its provisions, a judge may deny bail to a person accused of a felony crime, other than a capital felony, if the person has two or more prior felony convictions, the felony was committed while on bail for a prior felony, or the felony involved the use of a deadly weapon and the person has a prior felony conviction.

The crimes covered by this amendment include murder, aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, aggravated kidnapping, aggravated robbery, aggravated sexual assault, sexual assault, or indecency with a child if the offense was committed while on parole, mandatory supervision, or probation for a prior felony.

This offers an important protection to Texans against violent habitual offenders and voters should cast their ballots FOR it.

AMENDMENT NO. 14 — Midland County residents should be particularly interested in this proposed amendment since it would authorize the issuance of up to $1 billion in general obligation bonds to build prisons and mental health and mental retardation institutions.

In fact, the lack of facilities and unsuitable facilities have resulted in the state turning away prisoners from county jails such as Midland, which has led to a serious overcrowding problem throughout the state. That is an extremely dangerous situation that must be addressed. This amendment proposes to do exactly that.

In addition, the state has only recently been released from federal monitoring because of its prison conditions. Approval of this amendment will help avoid the possibility of the state being placed back under federal monitoring.

These prisons and institutions are needed. Voters should vote FOR this amendment.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1886, the tuxedo dinner jacket made its American debut at the autumn ball in Tuxedo Park, N.Y.

In 1913, the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans commingled in the Panama Canal after U.S. engineers blew up the Gamboa Dam.

GEORGE WILL

Let's consider Somalia through Kipling

WASHINGTON — In the last year of the last Democratic presidency before the current one, the United States invaded a country three times the size of France, using a force of eight helicopters. Americans' fury about the debacle at Desert One intensified when an Iranian cleric desecrated the body of an American soldier.

Will

Now the United States is at war in Somalia, where American bodies are playthings of Somalis whom one senator calls "infidels." That is a nice bit of 19th century name-calling, in the tradition of "lesser breeds without the law" and

So 'ere's to you, Fuzzy-Wuzzy,
at your 'ome in the Sudan;
You're a pore benighted 'eathen
but a first-class fightin' man.

Does that jar your late 20th century sensibilities? Too bad. If we are going to practice colonialism somewhere east of Suez, we had better brush up on our Kipling. You say it's not colonialism because we are not seeking dominion over palm and pine? True, we are not. Today's colonialism-of-compassion lacks even the redeeming clarity of rapaciousness. But many old-time imperialists had a robust altruism of the sort that inspired a turn-of-the-century senator to say we would civilize the Philippines right up to the level of Kansas City.

The administration seems to think that the secret of success in Somalia is better night vision equipment for armored fighting in Mogadishu's congested neighborhoods. The theory du jour in Washington is that "getting" warlord Aidid would make Somalia safe for the people sent there to make it safe for Somalians. People who believe that evidently think the civic culture, or lack thereof, that bred Aidid will breed no others like him.

But people hot to go "get" him in the back streets of Mogadishu should first visit a video store and rent the movie "The Battle of Algiers." Their ardor for urban warfare may be cooled by this dramatization of French soldiers hunting enemies in Algiers.

If we do not have the stomach for full-blooded colonialism — we don't, and shouldn't — we should get out quickly. The alternative is a slow self-inflicted torture of futility in a place the flavor of which is given by this from The Washington Post:

"On the Pentagon's color-coded maps of downtown Mogadishu, nearly every important road — including the Afgoi and Jaale Siade Roads abutting U.N. headquarters, the K-4 traffic circle linking the airfield and port, and the 21 October Road in the north — appears in red. The map key defines red as meaning, 'High Threat (Multiple Attacks).'"

It is said that if U.S. forces are withdrawn U.S. "credibility" or "influence" or something will suffer, spoiling our ability to function well in such situations. Good. There should be no more such situations. Furthermore, when considering apocalyptic warnings about how withdrawal from Somalia will annihilate U.S. power, consider this:

In 1975, helicopters lifting off the U.S. Embassy in Saigon announced the loss of a war, but 14 years later the fall of the Berlin Wall sealed the U.S. victory in the Cold War. In 1983 one truck bomb blew U.S. forces out of Lebanon, but 10 years later the White House lawn was the venue for signing an Israeli-PLO peace agreement.

The Wall Street Journal says we should not "cut and run" because that "would make a hash of U.S. leadership in future brushfires." rightly skeptical about the efficacy of the U.S. government in, say, south central Los Angeles but they believe it can exercise successful leadership in distant chaos. For the Journal, skepticism stops at the water's edge.

New drug, 'cat,' worries law enforcement

WASHINGTON — The latest front in America's war on drugs is not South America, or even South Central Los Angeles. It's a windswept corner of Michigan's Upper Peninsula, just across the border from Canada.

Anderson

It is in this rugged country that a new and powerful drug — nicknamed "cat" — first emerged four years ago. Now law enforcement officials are worried it will spread elsewhere. It is easy to make, produces a high more powerful than cocaine, is highly addictive, and its ingredients are, for the most part, entirely legal. Cocaine abusers describe cat as more powerful and longer lasting than cocaine.

"It's like going back to square one again," said Sheriff Joe Maino of Marquette County, Mich., who spent years trying to make a dent in more conventional drug trafficking before "cat" hit the streets.

It was largely by accident that Northern Michigan became the site for America's first "cat" epidemic. "Cat," which is the street name for methcathinone, first became popular in Russia several decades ago. Parke-Davis developed the drug in the 1950s, but shelved it soon thereafter because of its high potential for addiction and severe side effects.

According to an analysis by Michigan drug enforcement officials, cat was rediscovered in 1989 by three friends in Ann Arbor, Mich., who set up a lab and began making the drug in their apartment. It wasn't very difficult; the active ingredient in cat is the drug ephedrine, which is widely available as an over-the-counter weight-loss product and stimulant. Ephedrine is also used as an active ingredient in bronchial medication such as Primatene.

Once the ephedrine is obtained, it is easily converted into cat by those who know the formula. It can be made almost anywhere using such common household chemicals as battery acid, drain cleaner and epsom salts. For an investment of $500 in raw materials, a dealer can create product with a street value of about $50,000. This is where the danger lies.

"If you had the formula, it's easy enough that you or I could make it," Rep. Bart Stupak, D-Mich., told our associate Jan Moller. This week, Stupak introduced legislation that would take ephedrine pills off the market by making them subject to the Chemical Diversion and Trafficking Act. Stupak's legislation would also create a national registry for ephedrine manufacturers, which would help eliminate the mail-order business for ephedrine.

When cat did not take hold in Ann Arbor, one of the three friends moved back to Marquette, in northern Michigan, where he set up a lab in a Northern Michigan University dormitory. Over the next several months, he taught the procedure to a few close friends there, but the drug also failed to take hold among the NMU student population.

It did catch on, however, among the local population in Marquette. By late 1991, it was introduced in Ishpeming, 16 miles west of Marquette. As the recipe for cat spread around the Upper Peninsula, so did the clientele. Today, cat producers in Northern Michigan resemble a 1990s version of Prohibition-era moonshiners.

But police also say the problem is spreading.

"We are very concerned that it will spread nationally," said Dale Schuitema, special agent in charge of the Detroit office of the Drug Enforcement Administration. "Right now, it's like a cancer blowing westward."

If there is a bright side to the spread of cat, it's that federal and local officials believe this is a problem they can eventually control. The problem is still new enough that Michigan did not place cat on its list of controlled substances until last May. Law enforcement officials believe that the key to preventing the spread of cat is to slap controls on ephedrine.

"There is no way we are going to be able to stop this thing by ourselves," Schuitema said. "This is not something we can blame on Mexico or Columbia. This is a U.S.-manufactured drug, and with the proper regulation, this is something we can put a stop to."

Chill of autumn energizes New York streets

NEW YORK — I like New York in fall. How about you? Set to a Gershwin tune, the words are running through my mind as the car plunges wildly up Hudson Street.

I love driving up Hudson Street. It's urban rodeo. An immense asphalt wave hits the front end. Only the seat belt keeps me from flying through the roof.

Baker

"Energy! It's that New York energy!" I exult to my wife, who is cringing in the passenger seat. "Only in New York do you feel energy like this."

She observes that this massive street rehabilitation project may be in the hands of a 7-year-old boy since absolutely no progress has been made on it since last we experienced the immense Hudson Street energy five months ago. Why, she asks, if the famous New York energy is so intense, does Hudson Street lie eternally in a ruin of utter torpor?

I hate sarcasm, especially when I have driven all the way from Burgville for refreshing drafts of the famous New York energy. "Don't be low-key. Feel the energy," I urge her.

There is a thrillingly energizing confrontation as we attempt a left turn into Third Avenue at 23rd Street. Do I dare try for the turn in the face of the challenging roar from the oncoming car that clearly has the right of way and is clearly determined to claim it, though it cost us both a life and perhaps a few pedestrians too?

I do dare. This is New York. I am charged with energy. We miss colliding by a fractionated millimeter. I race full-gas-pedal to catch the next traffic light on the yellow, arrive an instant too late and, crying "This is New York!" to my whimpering wife, shoot through on the red.

The energy! It is coursing through the streets!

"New York in fall!" I cry. "Feel that energy!"

Our hotel awaits with its incredible array of hotel taxes that will add some 24 percent to the bill ere we are allowed to leave. No, says the desk clerk, no new hotel taxes have been added within the past week by either city or state.

"Never fear," I comfort him. "Surely they are only temporarily out of energy. Soon they will take an energizing drive up Hudson Street and give us a new 3 or 4 percent hotel tax."

My wife is not cheered. She thinks they might use a little of the present 24-percent tax to do a little work on Hudson Street.

"It's autumn in New York," I tell her. "Feel the energy," and off we go to look at famous people. Other people all over America have driven to the sticks to look at leaves. We have driven to New York to look at the energy of famous people.

I use the residue of my Hudson Street energy to finagle an invitation to a book-publishing party. It is for Frank Conroy, head of the Iowa Writers Workshop, who has just published a new novel titled "Body and Soul," and since the book is about a musical genius the party is at Carnegie Hall.

En route, thinking to give a New Yorker the joy of telling a hick "Practice, practice, practice," I ask an energetic-looking man how to get to Carnegie Hall. "Better take a taxi," he says, the witless clod.

We do, completing the mile-and-a-half journey in 53 minutes (slightly better than one and a half miles per hour), thanks to the immense energy that has cars, trucks and buses gridlocked at every intersection.

The energy at the reception is intense. Author Conroy is beset by urgently energetic demands for handshakes from people brimming with energy

Autumn in New York! I love it! And what is New York, or autumn either, without the theater? Two $50 bills produce a surge of box-office energy at a Broadway theater sufficient to provide two seats for Lynn Redgrave's performance in "Shakespeare for My Father."

What energy she has! What a lovely evening! And what an energy test for the audience has been contrived by the seat designer. He — surely not a she — has made the seats so narrow.

All through the show I contest vigorously but silently for arm room, losing a closely fought bout with a big man on my left, but whipping my wife hands down — no, make it elbows down.

What a town! What energy!

Columnist knows little of insurance matters

Well, Mr. Ed Todd has once again taken to pen in order to show his complete ignorance on yet another subject. Is there no end to the number of areas in which Mr. Todd has little or no knowledge? Now, he has decided that he should be the self-appointed guardian of the people when it comes to matters of insurance. His article on September 24 shows an appalling lack of knowledge about insurance and most insurance agents.

In his article, Mr. Todd decries that an individual must die in order to benefit from his insurance policy. The truth is that more than 70% of all benefits paid out by life insurance companies are in the form of living benefits: College Education Funds, Retirement benefits, Down payments for new homes, Disability income and the list could go on-and-on, depending on the monetary needs of the particular client. I have been in the life insurance business for more than 22 years. During that time, I have paid less than 20 death claims. BUT, I have had the privilege to see many children receive a college education because of the professional planning that was done with their parents; I have had the good feeling of knowing that several of my clients would have a comfortable retirement because of the plans that were made years ago; I have been invited to visit the homes of young couples. They could show me, with pride, what their planning or their parents' planning had accomplished. And, I have known the satisfaction of being able to provide income to a disabled client. . .income that will allow him to still provide for his family with dignity. Yes, there have been times when I was the only one, besides the minister, who visited with a widow and brought her something that would be a comfort to her for the rest of her life because her spouse loved her and wanted to take care of her, even if he was not around to do it personally.

You see, Mr. Todd, the professional insurance agent is one who provides more than just a few dollars when a client dies. He provides security (and insurance is guaranteed by a number of different entities in Texas — and is nothing like the stock market!), peace-of-mind and dignity. We Texans are a proud people. We want to take care of our families, even if we are not there in person to do it! We have character, which is defined as one who cares about others. That is one of the traits that I look for in my clientele. Based on your conclusions to "Don't see an insurance agent when he or she calls on you," I would surmise that you would not qualify as a client of any professional insurance agent. I hope that you don't receive a call some day in the future from someone who took your mis-advice asking you to provide funds for their future, since you have advised them to avoid insurance. How will you answer them, Mr. Todd?

Pageant winner clears title 'misconceptions'

This letter is in response to the letter sent in by Sharon Strout concerning the Miss Permian Basin Fair 1993 Pageant. I, being the one of topic, felt it is my responsibility to clear up the many misconceptions regarding my short-term dual-title holding.

First, I emphatically want to inform everyone that I have not broken any rules or contracts. Before winning the Miss Midland USA 1993 pageant, I signed a contract which specifically stated, "I am not, nor will I become a winner of any other national or international competition." Miss Permian Basin Fair 1993 is obviously not a national or international competition, nor does it require that you go on to one. Therefore, all "precedented rules" have been followed. Ms. Strout is correct that I will soon relinquish my title as Miss Midland USA 1993 (not Midland County). So why should she or anyone feel that it is unfair that I have two titles if it is only for a short while?

Also, in the Midland pageant, I did not receive any scholarship funds or monetary units. I did receive a wonderful prize package, though, for which I am extremely grateful. However, the fair pageant provided a $1,600 scholarship prize, an award for which I have never won before through pageants. No one could agree more than I, that there is an economic hardship in West Texas. I literally could not afford to pass up such a wonderful opportunity. The educational scholarship is why I ran in this pageant. I was not out to dominate the Permian Basin with my two titles or prevent another deserving individual from winning.

I am sorry for the unnecessary controversy and hope this letter has unclouded all misapprehensions. I plan to continue representing this area with the best of my ability as I complete my reign as Miss Midland USA and fulfill my reign as Miss Permian Basin Fair. I realize Ms. Strout's concern was mainly about holding two titles at one time but I would better understand if it was about holding two titles for the same length of time. Maybe a rule should be made for that.

A.B.L.E. seeks ideas to improve education

Thanks to all those who participated in the A.B.L.E. meeting recently at San Jacinto Jr. High. Several great suggestions were made including promoting candidates for school board elections and sponsoring debates among all candidates.

Our shortcomings on the Texas education laws were noted. We are addressing these problems with help from knowledgeable volunteers.

Once again, school teachers and MISD employees were reluctant to participate for fear of endangering their jobs. Everyone, who has ideas to improve our children's education, should take the time to write out those suggestions and mail them to A.B.L.E. at Six Desta Drive, Ste. 6200, 79705. Names are not necessary although confidentiality will be maintained at all times. Only with input from all sides are we going to have a partnership between parent, teacher and administrator.

Meetings are open to the entire community. We ask participants to state comments objectively (i.e., without criticism). It only sidetracks us from our goal of improving education.

They should plan to offer alternative methods to achieve these goals.

A.B.L.E. Secretary

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Readers' views on: Proposal for new airport terminal

Let's put new airport in holding pattern

The proposed construction of a new Airport Terminal Facility at the Midland International Airport seems to have crept back into the limelight with the powers that be in our city government. I would first like to say that the council should be listening to Mr. Tom Dollahite and his ideas concerning this project. If I could echo his opinion just a bit and toss my two cents worth into the hat, I would be obliged.

First, just look at the number of boardings that have occurred this year; and then look at what the proposed number of boardings was for 1993, and one need not be a rocket scientist to figure that one out. It would seem that the opinion of one Mr. C. Ronald Schwisow differs from mine and Mr. Dollahite. One only needs to look at where Mr. Schwisow came to Midland from in order to understand his attitude toward new taxes. I work in Minneapolis, and my family and I moved up there for a year, only to return to Midland just this past June. Taxes is one of the first words that newborns learn up there. We don't need a new terminal bad enough to tax the people of Midland, Texas for it's construction.

Several years ago this subject was a major topic in Midland, and it was laid to rest at the time. I wrote to the editor at that time concerning this proposition, and will echo some of my thoughts from that letter. If it ain't broke, then don't fix it. We need to see an increase in the number of boardings at MAF before we go spending millions of dollars for something that we don't need. It seems that one major concern here is the fact that the tower controllers have a blind spot which hinders them from seeing traffic moving on the south side of the terminal building. I fly in and out of some of this country's largest airports on a daily basis, and let me assure all of you that this is common in every major airport in this country. In order for a control tower to be able to view every movement on the airport, the tower would have to be 500' tall. Pilots are responsible for the safe movement of their aircraft, not the tower.

It also seems that we have another banker involved with the Airport Advisory Board. I believe that Mr. David Jones, another former banker, was a large proponent in this fiasco four or five years ago. I, as a pilot, do not advise bankers how to loan money; what makes them think that they are capable of advising the airport as to whether or not we need a new terminal building? Good People of Midland, don't let these tax hungry council members sell you a bill of goods on something that you don't need yet! Demand a vote on this bill, and I'm sure that will put a stop to this ridiculous line of thought. One last thing: there are larger cities in this country that do not have as nice a terminal facility as we do here in Midland. Let's see some growth and demand before we pay millions for something we don't need yet.

Voters should decide city terminal's future

The FAA fund that proponents of a new airport terminal building plan to use for part of its construction is broke! The Airport and Airway Trust Fund balance statement of July 31, 1993, shows an undisbursed balance of $126.34. The rest of the fund has been "borrowed" by the federal government, and $13,347,217,452.76 (yes billions) placed in U.S. Treasury Certificates of Indebtedness, presumedly to give the appearance of a reduced federal deficit or to pay other expenses.

What this means to the new terminal building project is that when the treasury certificates mature, and the funds doled out, they must be paid for (plus interest) by all American taxpayers, not just the airline passengers and users of the airport facilities who originally paid into this FAA fund. Yes, this means that those who paid into this fund will get a "double whammy" by paying into the fund in the first place and then paying for the certificates to be redeemed with their taxes. This really hurts when they must also pay for a needless facility such as a new terminal building with a PFC (passenger facility charge)!

In view of the numerous shortcomings of the proposed new terminal building, I would like to urge the City Council to hold an election soon to let the taxpayers of Midland have their say in this matter - after all, what could be more fair?

Edward Arthur

Is $29 million airport plan really justified?

Build a new airport? What is the justification for a 29 million dollar ($29,000,000) expenditure? Are we that overcrowded now or are our politicians aware of something we are ignorant of for the future of Midland-Odessa? Personally, I find the accommodations fine. Perhaps some painting here and there or even new carpeting from time to time, but a new terminal?

Couldn't that money be better spent if it has to be spent at all? Why not make an attempt to overcrowd the airport by efforts to attract new industry. We have the land, the climate, the roads, and a lot of skilled people who need a job. Can we attract industrialists by providing more educational classrooms to accomodate their needs? Many businesses follow Southwest Airlines, and we have them already. I would hope that our leaders think in terms of jobs, jobs, jobs. Not short term jobs such as construction, but rather long term jobs by promoting this region as an industrial base, educational center and retirement haven. What do you think?

SPEAKING OUT

Let's restructure U.S. education

By Laura M. Volkmann

Laura M. Volkmann has lived in Midland since 1982. She has a bachelor of arts in English and a master of arts in clinical psychology. She was a substitute teacher in a New Mexico school system for eight years. She has taught English as a second language, GED, and adult basic education skills. She coordinated the Adult Education Program at Odessa College and worked in the psychology department of Big Spring State Hospital. Currently she is self-employed.

The idea that education can be equated with learning is not new or novel, yet our public schools continue to separate the two. Science has proven that there are laws of nature which govern learning. People learn at individual rates in a unique way. This fact alone exposes the current group teaching methods to be as outdated as they really are. The only way to insure that Americans become educated is to provide information in a way that can be used by individuals.

Leading scientists in the field of learning theory have shown that there are indeed some basics that do not change. Learning occurs in small steps. It is based on what has gone before. New material is organized according to what is already in the memory and how that material was organized.

With all of the information on learning available, we may well ask how it is possible to have instructed an individual, for 12 years, who cannot then pass a test of basic education. Currently, 40 million American adults function at the lowest level of literacy, another 50 million function at a level only slightly higher. Considering that there are an estimated 191 million adults in the nation, these numbers represent nearly half of the adult population. If we maintain that education as practiced in the public schools works, then we must also maintain that one in every two children is incapable of learning.

Looking at adult learners who failed in the public schools emphasizes one simple fact, they were not given the appropriate opportunity to learn. They learn and learn well through individualized instruction. Because the brain organizes information based on what has already been learned, when a step is missed there is no base to attach later steps to. The new information cannot be attached to the missing step, and cannot be used correctly. For example, algebra cannot be mastered without a good mastery of fractions.

When adult learners are tested for basic skills a clear pattern of missing steps emerges. Somewhere in the past a gross teaching disability occurred and was not corrected. One of the basic building blocks was bypassed leaving the individual without the necessary support to progress to the next step. When taken back to the break in the chain of learning, given an opportunity to master the material at that step before moving on, a wonderful sense of "ah, ha" occurs. At first the progress is slow because there is so much that has to be unlearned and reorganized.

Funding for adult education is limited. Teachers often work with 50 or 60 students. What might seem a nightmare for group technique isn't with mastery learning. Costs are kept low by the larger individualized student load and by the use of less material. Only one set of books or material is required because each student works on only one step at a time. Because it is considerably more difficult to unlearn material, no unsupervised work (homework) is assigned or graded.

The key to mastery learning includes using small, sequential steps, recognition of individual progress, no homework, an individually determined pace of progress, the presentation of material matched to the individual's learning style, and materials that are related to individual interests. Students who do not participate are asked to leave instead of being allowed to stay and disrupt the learning of others.

Many excellent teachers strive to give as much individual attention as possible. The problem is not in ability or desire but in the unwieldy regulations placed on the system. When students lose interest in learning, they develop discipline problems. The teachers then become baby-sitters and find themselves acting as police officers, drug control agents, and mental health-care providers.

So far, the media has focused on the teacher as the cause of educational problems, calling for more training, more supervision, and more teacher testing when what is needed is a complete restructuring of the existing system. Teachers should be allowed to do the one job they trained for — instruct. It is clear what should be done. The question is, why aren't we demanding that it be done? Instead of participating in teacher bashing, why aren't we insisting that the administration and the government retreat and let our teachers teach?

Readers' views on: Gun control

'Gun control has to be step in right direction'

Recently I read a letter written by a Midland resident stating she was tired of people blaming guns for the murders and killings. Who are we trying to kid here, we are responsible for our own actions.

I am a Canadian living here in the states for more than three years now and really enjoy the American lifestyle. Gun regulation is very STRICT in Canada and recent graphic studies have shown murder and deaths here in the states is five times that in Canada. I'm not saying one country is better than the other except the proposed gun control has to be a step in the right direction. We all heard or read of what has been happening in Florida and something definately has to be done.

Should we be allowed guns in our household and why is accessibility of guns so easy? Personally I do not own a weapon and have no intention of obtaining one. As for the old saying "Curiosity kills the cat" look how many relentless deaths that have occurred with all the innocent children!

Last week a co-worker made a comment stating "Well if the bad guys have a gun why not us. . ." we're just asking for trouble and not allienating the problem. Given a hypothetical situation human instinct is to protect oneself and when your adrenalin is pumping and the pressure is on, it is proven you do not think straight, and next thing you know, "BANG." Who's to blame now?

Firearms control now; dictatorship tomorrow

This is in regard to the letter written by E. Ann Porterfield in the Sept. 30 edition of the Midland Reporter-Telegram. She is ever so right but I feel that she left out some very important facts revelant to her subject matter. First point is that the parents that own guns should have kids that mind and respect the parents' private property as well mind their every command as well as act responsibly at all times.

If this cannot be accomplished, then a locking system should be instituted with the keys in the parents possession. There are all types of these such as key locks, gun cabinets, and gun safes etc.

Then, there is the aspect of losing our rights to own guns at all. A lot of people don't realize that with the loss of that amendment that others are soon to follow - such as the right to worship when, where and how we please. Then, there is the amendment that would soon follow that one which is the freedom of speech and the freedom to gather in groups to peacefully protest. If you don't follow me - this is called the domino effect and usually precedes the entrance of a socialistic dictatorship. Of course, the Trilateral Commission and several radical groups would like to see this happen in their quest to rule the world. Think about it.

Clinton absurdly ties guns to health care

If it escaped your attention, President Clinton expressed his belief that one of the root causes of runaway health-care costs was the lack of gun control. When he made this absurd point, the joint session of Congress gave him a standing ovation.

Did you also notice the "so-called' national health-care access card President Clinton held up for all to see? How long will it be before our access to health care will be tied to turning in our firearms. In more simple terms: access to any health care will be only through possession of the card, if you choose not to turn in your firearms, no health card.

Let's go further. . .this card will not be just a health-care access card, but rather a national identification card. How big a leap is it for government to require it to be shown to fly through airways controlled by a federal agency? How long will it be before being required to purchase a politically correct automobile to drive on federally supported highways? Then, how long will it be before all of this data will be accumulated by government about literally all of our daily life? The last leap to make is, "how long will it be before the government will use the withholding of this 'card' to require all of us to comply with any government edict?"

Lee spikers surprise San Angelo

Staff report

SAN ANGELO — Midland Lee came back from a first-game loss and a quick San Angelo Central start to get perhaps its biggest volleyball win of the season here Saturday 8-15, 15-11, 15-14.

Central had not lost a game since early September and was undefeated in District 4-5A play coming in. The Lee win secures its hold on second place in the league, keeps it in contention for a district championship and brings it closer to clinching a playoff spot. The Rebels now trail San Angelo in district by ½ game.

"Our ability to block started to turn the tide in the second game," Lee coach Anita Corder said. "Heather Huff played a great game all around the court. Her hitting was spectacular."

The Lady Rebels scored six consecutive points to break an 8-8 tie in the second game and reach game point, 14-8. They then surged to an 11-0 lead in the third game.

Corder said her team has often started slow this year.

"This team kind of has a habit of doing that," Corder said. "I guess it just takes a little bit for them to understand, and then they do things correctly."

The Bobcats lost for only the third time this year and fall to 6-1 in district and 21-3 overall. Lee is now 6-2 and 9-12.

Central stormed to a 5-0 and 11-3 leads in the first game. Corder said Central's athletic presence may have rattled her team early.

"You look across the net at Central and they put their elbows above the net when they set a block and it's a little bit intimidating," Corder said.

But intimidation soon turned to confidence for Lee when they began the second game going up 3-0.

The Lady Rebels next game comes against Odessa High at home Tuesday. The Lee junior varsity fell to Central 8-15, 7-15.

Navratilova headed for European Indoor final

■ Tennis Roundup

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova moved a step closer toward one of few titles that have eluded her when she advanced on Saturday to the European Indoors final.

Navratilova scored a 6-3, 6-4 semifinal victory No. 3 seed Magdalena Maleeva of Bulgaria.

Maleeva's eldest sister, fourth-seeded Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere, won the other semifinal, beating Stephanie Rottier 6-2, 7-5.

Navratilova is going for her 166th career title. She lost last year's final in this tournament to Steffi Graf, who is out this time after foot surgery.

Australian Indoor

SYDNEY, Australia — Jaime Yzaga of Peru continued his giant-killing run at the Australian Indoor tennis championships, beating defending champion Goran Ivanisevic.

The unseeded Yzaga downed the erratic Ivanisevic 6-3, 6-4 in only 54 minutes to clinch a place in Sunday's final against No. 6 seed Petr Korda of the Czech Republic.

Korda defeated Wayne Ferreira 6-3, 6-2 in the other semifinal, repeatedly ripping ground strokes past the unseeded South African.

Yzaga, who at 5-foot-7 is the smallest player in the tournament, has beaten four higher-ranked rivals on his way to the final.

Toulouse GP

TOULOUSE, France — Cedric Pioline and Arnaud Boetsch set up an all-French final by winning semifinal matches at the Toulouse Grand Prix tournament.

Pioline, second seeded and finalist in the U.S. Open, beat No. 6 seed Andrei Chesnokov of Russia 6-4, 6-2.

Boetsch, the No. 5 seed, defeated Christian Bergstroem of Sweden, 6-1, 6-2.

Pioline, who has never won a tournament, will be favored against countryman Boetsch. Pioline lost to Pete Sampras in the U.S. Open final last month and has risen to No. 12 in the computer rankings.

The last time two Frenchmen gained a final of a major ATP tournament was in 1991 at another French tournament, Bordeaux, when Guy Forget beat Olivier Delaitre.

Winston race heats

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Today's Mello Yello 500 will play a big role in determining whether Dale Earnhardt or Rusty Wallace is going to win the Winston Cup championship.

■ Mello Yello 500

When the 500-mile race on Charlotte Motor Speedway's 1½-mile oval is over, there will only be three races remaining. But, more important is the psychological edge that either Earnhardt or Wallace will have.

"It's close to being a hometown track for both of us," said Earnhardt, who has lost all but 72 points of his 304-point lead in recent weeks. "Our shops are both close to Charlotte. We both run good here and we both enjoy racing here. And weird things happen here.

"I remember we left the pits, I think it was the same year (1989) we were racing Rusty for the championship, and we didn't have any left-side tires. I've crashed in this race. I broke a camshaft 13 laps into the race. On the other hand, you win here, too.

"I think Rusty has seen the same kind of luck at Charlotte."

Earnhardt has won four times at Charlotte, twice in the May race and twice in the October event. Wallace, who rallied to beat Earnhardt in 1989, has won each of the Charlotte races once.

"I keep having people tell me, 'You haven't been running good here,' " Wallace said. "I've won the (Coca-Cola) 600, the 500 and The Winston (all-star event) here. I've got a lot of good top five finishes.

"Everybody used to say, 'This isn't Dale's track. It's terrible for him.' Then he won two 600s in a row. Now what are they going to say? It just goes in cycles. Drivers don't change from one year to the other. It's the equipment you're driving, how hard you're working the equipment and how focused your team is and how well your team blends together.

"That's the reason I think our two teams are on top right now. Our teams are long term. These guys have been together for a long time. I like looking out and seeing all those guys switching drivers. It takes them more time to build."

Earnhardt appeared to be ready to bury the opposition in a bid for his sixth Winston Cup crown, but a crash at Dover and a broken rear end to his car at Martinsville helped Wallace slice 202 points from Earnhardt's lead in only two weeks.

Earnhardt has been accused of easing up after taking such a big point lead, but he said, "Why would I be on cruise control?"

"I was sitting there running second at Dover when we got in a crash," he said. "We were running fourth or fifth at Martinsville when we had the problems, and we were running hard. We just had things happen that you can't gain back.

"I think Rusty and I were close last today at North Wilkesboro (where Wallace won and Earnhardt finished second). I was running him hard at the end, trying to make him do something, and I used up my tires. No, we haven't been on cruise control. Cruise control is 10th or 12th."

Rookie Jeff Gordon will start from the pole today, with Ernie Irvan alongside. Earnhardt will start ninth and Wallace 21st in the 42-car field.

all the Busch races he has finished this season.

The 300-mile, 200-lap race on Charlotte's 1½-mile oval was divided into two parts, with a scheduled 10-minute break after the first 102 laps. Martin led 95 of those first 102 laps and appeared on the way to another in a series of Grand National runaways.

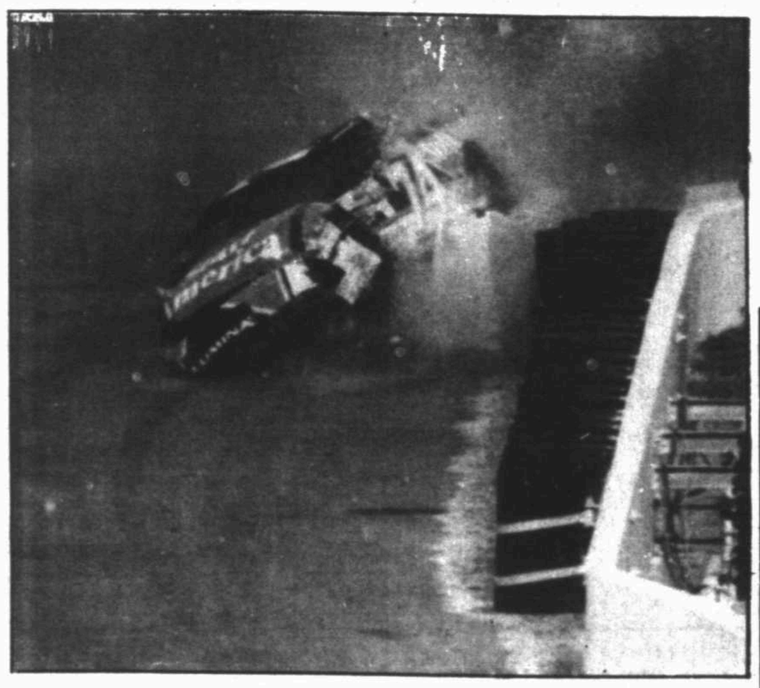
After the break, however, Martin made an uncharacteristic mistake. During a caution period on lap 124, he drove onto pit lane despite a red flag indicating the pits were closed because of debris from an accident near the pit entrance. Martin, who had been leading, was sent to the rear of the field, placing him 21st at the time.

But Martin's Ford Thunderbird was simply too strong for the rest of the 44-car field as he sliced through traffic and moved back into the lead to stay on lap 168.

"We had to make up for a mistake I made, pitting when I wasn't supposed to," Martin said. "Then, we almost got into a wreck because we were back in the field. But the Roush Racing crew gave me great pit stops today and I had enough car to do it."

Martin, who won $57,593 after leading three times for 149 laps, averaged 113.690 mph in the race slowed by a record 12 caution flags for a total of 50 laps.

Despite several crashes and spins, there were no injuries reported in the race.



Driver Johnny Benson Jr. hits the water barrels as he crashes in the fourth turn Saturday during the All Pro Auto Parts 300 at the Charlotte Motor Speedway. Benson was not injured.

Modano, Stars tie Jets

Associated Press

DALLAS — Mike Modano's power-play goal with 8:26 left in regulation completed a Dallas comeback from a two-goal deficit Saturday night and the Stars and Winnipeg Jets tied 3-3.

■ Hockey Roundup

Modano blasted a 25-foot slap shot past Winnipeg goaltender Bob Essensa while the Stars enjoyed a four-on-three advantage.

Winnipeg had the best scoring opportunity in the overtime but Stephane Quintal's point-black shot with 1:53 left was smothered by Dallas goalie Andy Moog.

Panthers 2, Lightning 0

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — An NHL record crowd of 27,227 watched Florida goaltender John Vanbiesbrouck stop all 36 Tampa Bay shots Saturday night in a 2-0 Panther win that spoiled the Lightning's home opener at the ThunderDome.

The victory was the first for the expansion Panthers (1-1-1), who opened the season with a 4-4 tie Wednesday at Chicago. Tampa Bay fell to 0-3.

Flyers 5, Whalers 2

HARTFORD, Conn. — Josef Beranek and Kevin Dineen scored twice each in Philadelphia's five-goal first period, and the Flyers beat Hartford 5-2 Saturday night to extend the Whalers' woes in home openers.

Beranek, second in preseason scoring for the Flyers, and Dineen added an assist each. Eric Lindros got the other goal. Dominic Roussel had 26 saves and an assist.

Penguins 3, Rangers 2

PITTSBURGH — Martin Straka scored his second goal of the game with six minutes left in the third period to lift the Pittsburgh Penguins to a 3-2 win over the New York Rangers on Saturday night.

Straka scored on a power play as the Penguins won their 12th consecutive regular-season home game. Straka scored the only goal of the second period at 3:40 to give the Penguins a 2-2 tie.

Bruins 7, Nordiques 3

BOSTON — Adam Oates scored two of his three goals on power plays during a five-goal first period, and the Boston Bruins went on to a 7-3 victory Saturday night over the Quebec Nordiques.

Oates scored again in the third period to complete the fourth regular-season hat trick of his nine-year NHL career. He has four goals and nine points in three games this season.

Devils 6, Capitals 4

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J — Corey Millen and Claude Lemieux each scored two goals Saturday night to help the New Jersey Devils stretch their season-opening winning streak to three with a 6-4 victory over the Washington Capitals.

The win gave the Devils a sweep of the weekend home-and-home series with the Caps following their 6-3 win in Landover, Md. Friday night. The Caps have dropped three straight to open their season and have allowed six goals in each defeat.

Washington coach Richie Petitbon has compiled a 1-4 start in his first stint at the helm of an NFL team.

Early game crucial for 'Skins

Associated Press

In this bye-bye season in the NFL, pro football fans will be scrambling at times to find a truly meaningful game. This is one of those weeks.

■ NFL Roundup

In the best that can be offered — one of only two intradivisional games on tap as a half-dozen teams take one of their two weeks off — the New York Giants will visit the Washington Redskins today.

Because this is just the fifth game for both, even this matchup of fierce NFC East rivals would ordinarily be considered too early to be crucial. But it is to the Redskins, who with a loss will be in deep trouble in the division.

"We need a win, somehow, some way," quarterback Mark Rypien said. "This is just one we have to have."

The Redskins are 1-3 and tied for last in the division after losses to NFC East mates Phoenix and Philadelphia. At 1-4, Washington would have virtually no chance to win the division, while its playoff hopes would continue to dwindle.

Rypien practiced this week for the first time since tearing ligaments in his right knee Sept. 12 against Phoenix. The Redskins need him desperately.

'We need a win, somehow, some way. This is just one we have to have.'

— Mark Rypien
Washington quarterback

The offense has yet to score in the first quarter of a game, and penalties cost Washington dearly in its 17-10 loss to the Miami Dolphins on Monday.

Elsewhere today, it will be Chicago at Philadelphia, Cincinnati at Kansas City, Miami at Cleveland, Tampa Bay at Minnesota, San Diego at Pittsburgh, New England at Phoenix, the New York Jets at the Los Angeles Raiders and Denver at Green Bay.

Atlanta, the Los Angeles Rams, New Orleans, San Francisco, Detroit and Seattle have byes.

The Giants (3-1) are playing their first game in the division. A victory coupled with a loss by Philadelphia would move New York into a first-place tie with the Eagles.

New York must overcome the absence of running back Rodney Hampton, who underwent arthroscopic knee surgery this week and will miss the game. Hampton is second in the league in rushing behind Detroit's Barry Sanders.

With Hampton missing, the burden of sparking the Giants' ground-oriented attack lies with quarterback Phil Simms. That's fine with cornerback Mark Collins.

"I think he's a great quarterback," Collins said.

Bears at Eagles

Bubby Brister, who pulled off a come-from-behind victory after Randall Cunningham broke his leg against the Jets, will run the show for about two months. Despite Cunningham's absence, Philadelphia (4-0) should handle Chicago (2-2) for its 12th straight home victory.

Chiefs at Bengals

It's not likely that Joe Montana (pulled hamstring) will start for Kansas City (3-1). But it shouldn't matter against the hapless Cincinnati (0-4). A victory would give the Chiefs their best start since 1971.

Jets at Raiders

The Jets (2-2), behind Boomer Esiason, the AFC's second-rated passer, will try to rebound from their collapse against the Eagles. Jeff Hostetler, who did not play for the Raiders in a 24-9 loss to Kansas City because of an ankle injury, could return at quarterback for Los Angeles (2-2).

Chargers at Steelers

Pittsburgh (2-2), idle last week, hopes to begin another productive October at home. The Steelers are 36-11 in October since 1970. It will be one of three road games in the next four weeks for the Chargers (2-2).

Buccaneers at Vikings

The Buccaneers (2-2) are in the NFC Central, a division Minnesota has been feeding off with relish. The Vikings (2-2) have won eight straight against their division opponents.

Broncos at Packers

It will be a first for the Broncos (3-1), the only NFL club never to have played at Green Bay's 36-year-old Lambeau Field. The Packers (1-3) are badly in need of a victory.

Patriots at Cardinals

Both clubs return from a bye week and both needed the rest. New England's Bill Parcells was 11-4-1 against the Cardinals (1-3) as head coach of the Giants. The Patriots (0-4) are the only team in the league without a victory.

Dolphins at Browns

The winner of this game between 3-1 teams will be in a good position to collect a division title and an even stronger position in the race for AFC wild cards.

Colt QB question does not affect Dallas 'D' game plan

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It makes no difference to Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson who starts for the Indianapolis Colts at quarterback today.

Jeff George, who lost the starting job during his 36-day preseason boycott of the team, was expected to make his first start of the season in the Hoosier Dome. However, he hurt his passing hand while mopping up in the final minutes of last week's loss in Denver, so he's questionable.

If he can't play, Jack Trudeau will.

"Jeff's a very, very talented individual and can make a lot of plays," Johnson said. "I've also been very impressed with the way Trudeau has played. It really won't affect our defense, as far as how we prepare."

Both teams are 2-2, but seem headed in opposite directions. The Cowboys have won two straight since two-time NFL rushing champion Emmitt Smith ended his holdout on Sept. 16.

"I don't think he's as sharp as what he would have been had he been in training camp," Johnson said of Smith, who has gained 116 yards on 21 carries. "I think it will be a few weeks before he really gets as sharp as we'd want him to be."

Indianapolis, which allowed four touchdowns and 228 yards on four consecutive possessions to start last Sunday's 35-13 loss in Denver, has more than Smith to worry about.

Troy Aikman leads the Cowboys on their first trip to Indianapolis since the Colts arrived in 1984. Aikman has the NFC's highest quarterback rating at 98.9 and is second in the NFL in passing with 1,162 yards.

The defending Super Bowl champions have the league's second most productive offense, averaging 385.8 yards. Only the New York Jets at 412.8 have a higher average.

"We feel that we have all the pieces back in place. Now it's a matter of going out and executing," Aikman said. "We feel like we're playing well. ... We've expanded the offense a little bit each year and it's given us some more opportunities to make some plays. I feel comfortable with the way that I've played up to this point."

Oilers try to repair season

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — The team that can't win the big one versus the team that can't win The Big One.

That's one spin on Monday night's rematch between the Houston Oilers (1-3) and the Buffalo Bills (3-1).

Steve Tasker, can sympathize with the Oilers, a talented team that has made the playoffs the past six seasons but hasn't been able to advance into the Super Bowl.

"It seems like whenever you want to forget something there's always somebody there to remind you that it actually happened," the Bills special teams star said. "We're victims of that three times over."

All the Bills heard about in the offseason was their third straight Super Bowl loss. All the Oilers heard about was their latest and greatest playoff failure, a 41-38 defeat last season when Buffalo mustered the biggest comeback in NFL history.

Houston has a lot of experience answering questions about postseason losses but this past offseason was particularly trying.

"You never really get a chance to forget about it," quarterback Warren Moon said. "We never think about it until we're asked about it, but it's asked so much, that it stays on your mind."

After blowing a 35-3 third-quarter lead to the Bills, Oiler owner Bud Adams demanded change and brought in defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan, the outspoken former head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles.

Adams also told the team's core of veterans he was tired of hearing about the Oilers' potential. Win this year, he said, or the changes next year will involve more than coaches.

So far, not so good. Houston's defense has struggled learning the "46" defense Ryan had so much success with in Chicago and Philadelphia. And on offense, the Oiler line hasn't given Moon lots of time to throw.

"We lost Don Maggs (free-agent to Denver), Mike Munchak has been hurt, John Flannery (injured reserve) was our top backup last year, so that's where a lot of it starts for us, our pass protection," coach Jack Pardee said.

"The last couple of weeks we've gotten in a little better groove, but we've certainly had our problems," he said.

Rocket launches in NFL

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Raghib (Rocket) Ismail calls his quarterback "dude." He does not yet fully comprehend the Los Angeles Raiders' offensive language, and the Raiders cannot even begin to decipher his. The day the former prodigy Todd Marinovich was waived, for instance, Ismail's bug-eyed response was, "Holy commotion."

Ismail

Who taught him that?

"Holy commotion? That's probably a Batman thing from when I was 6," Ismail said after a practice this week, wearing a floppy "Gilligan's" cap with the front brim flipped up. "The stuff I say, sometimes I sit down afterward and say, 'Where did that come from?' "

The only place he won't speak is the huddle.

"Better not," Raiders Coach Art Shell said. "Only one person talks in there, the quarterback."

But at least Ismail's in the huddle.

After a two-year hiatus in Canada, a summer holdout and then five weeks of being tutored, quizzed and filed under classified information, the Raiders finally launched Ismail on the Kansas City Chiefs last week, and the former Notre Dame wide receiver actually wound up in the end zone once.

Every time he asks a redundant question, teammate Tim Brown fines him $1 — Ismail says he owes $50 by now — but he has digested enough of the Raiders' system that Sunday's opponent, the Jets, must back up whenever they see him.

"I'm tempted to say, 'Rocket, run as far as you can, and we'll throw it to you,' " said Raiders' offensive assistant Terry Robiskie.

But just running on the field has been an adventure so far. In Kansas City, Robiskie called his name, and Ismail bounced up like a jumping bean, blindsiding the coach.

"Stumbled into Terry's arms, almost," Shell recalled later, with uncontrollable laughter.

Robiskie had wanted to shock the Chiefs by inserting Ismail late, just as the play-clock began. So, he told the receiver to stand still.

"OK, Rock," Robiskie then advised Ismail, "Look at the guy with the orange gloves. As soon as his arms are in motion, go in."

"I see him," Ismail said.

"OK, go in," Robiskie then said, shoving Ismail.

"But what about the guy with the orange gloves?" Ismail asked.

"Go in," Robiskie said, lathered up by now.

"Well," Ismail said later, "the dude with the orange gloves didn't move. I'm thinking, Bro', I screwed up already."

Before long, he had caught four passes, including a 43-yard touchdown from quarterback Vince Evans, who, at 38 years old, is old enough to be his uncle. Those two have a definite generation gap.

Ismail, after his score, said: "It was rad. Everyone came up for a high-five, but Vinny had his hand down here for a low five. The way he had it out, I thought he wanted the ball. I said, 'Oh, man, I thought I get the rock.' "

Ismail is invigorating a team that still mourns the loss of Marcus Allen to the Chiefs and Ronnie Lott to the Jets.

"The players are falling in love with him," Shell said.

In fact, he reminds Shell of Cliff Branch. He already wants Commissioner Paul Tagliabue to widen the field by 5 yards, he already sees the inherent danger in returning kickoffs and he might play a full game today if he can keep from hyperventilating again.

"Bro', I promise you, I was running up to the line in Kansas City thinking: 'Good thing I'm not playing much today. I'm so tired,' " said Ismail, who desperately needed a paper bag to blow into.

City workers to help stop crime

Posting signs is unlawful

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Midland residents are being warned that homemade signs announcing garage and yard sales, along with other announcements and political advertisements will no longer be welcome on telephone poles, street signs or other city property.

"There is actually a city ordinance that prohibits putting signs on telephone poles and other city property, it just hasn't been enforced," said Paul Tryson, who works in the city of Midland employee development. "We just want people to be warned that city employees are going to start better enforcing the law and taking those signs down."

City Ordinance 4-7-13 reads, in part: "No person shall paste, post, string, nail, or otherwise fasten a handbill, signpost or advertisement or notice of any kind whatsoever, or cause the same to be done, on any curb, stone, flagstone, or any other position or part of any sidewalk or street, or upon any tree, lamp post, telegraph pole, telephone pole, hydrant, or upon any structure within the limits of any street within the City of Midland . . ."

The Midland Police Department will soon have some extra help in its war on crime.

Next month, the department will launch an educational program to teach city of Midland employees how to spot criminals, crimes in progress, and other problems while they are at work throughout the city.

"This goes along with proactive vs. reactive," said Midland Police Sgt. David Garcia. "It goes hand-in-hand with our community-oriented policing. We want citizens to become more aware and involved in stopping crime."

Garcia said the program will be primarily for employees who work in the city streets, such as the sanitation department, street maintenance, the health department, meter inspectors and animal control.

"These people are out on the streets every day in their vehicles," Garcia said. "We want to tap into that resource and cultivate more eyes and ears for the Police Department."

The program — which will be conducted from from 8 a.m.- noon and 1-5 p.m. from Nov. 1-5 — will teach employees how to spot possible criminals, be alert to crimes in progress and how to relay information into the department.

Instructors will include employees from the city of Midland's Communica-

Agency tutor teaches English, builds esteem

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in a series of articles about individuals who have been assisted by United Way agencies.

By Lana Cunningham

"I first came to Casa de Amigos with my brother Juan on a rainy and cold fall day in 1977. Casa was just a little white building on North Dallas Street then. We had come there to learn English and we were both soaked. I knew two words in English: cat and dog. I was 9 years old."

Zulema Zubia wrote those words about 10 years ago, shortly after she entered Midland High School. Today, she works as a clerk at the Midland County Library, continuing her love affair with English and the written word that was fostered through the friendship and caring of a man who was paired as her tutor as Casa. It came about because Casa de Amigos was there

16-year-old friends are extension of one's mind, soul

The two boys, they were probably in their mid- to late teens, were leaning against a car in a private driveway on Michigan Avenue. It was about 7:30 p.m. on a Friday, and the sun was just beginning to fade away.

Ott

For some reason, as I drove by, my eyes were drawn to the two kids. They looked nothing out of the ordinary, and they certainly weren't behaving in a particularly unusual manner. They were just two typical high school boys hanging out together on a Friday night.

It was a scene that could have been played out in any community, large or small, in America. Indeed, as I took one final glance at them in my rearview mirror I was briefly overcome by a wave of fond memories.

Suddenly, I was 16 years old again and back in my hometown, hanging out with Chris Tawwater and James Pinkerton, my two best friends from that point in my life. As the past danced across my brain, I could see the three of us sitting in my front yard talking about whatever it is that 16-year-olds talk about. For us, it was rock music, basketball and girls, though not necessarily in that order. I can only assume those are still hot topics, though music and girls are probably at the top of the list.

It is easy to glamorize the past, remembering things more for what we wanted them to be than what they really were. We're all guilty of doing it. And why not? They're our memories. If we want to dress up the past a bit, who's to say it is wrong? Certainly not me. A person should be free to exaggerate to his heart's content. If a Norman Rockwell childhood is what he chooses to remember, then so be it.

But when it comes to hanging out with your buddies, and the special memories it evokes, the need to exaggerate somehow ends. Indeed, those many hours spent together are the times that define our youth. There is a bonding that occurs between friends at that age. While it may be difficult for a 16-year-old to discuss his thoughts and concerns with an adult, even a parent, the words just seem to flow when they are shared with a fellow kid.

There is an understanding that automatically exists. After all, he has "been there."

Many a worry has been put to rest simply by exploring the possible ramifications through the eyes and ears of a "best friend." Those problems don't seem so insurmountable when they are discussed with

AGENCY: Casa de Amigos offers English lessons

when she needed help.

Ms. Zubia was in fourth grade the year that she, her mother and two brothers moved here from Ojinaga. She couldn't speak English and an aunt suggested the children go to Casa de Amigos for help. John Savage became her tutor — a volunteer job that expanded far beyond the typical two hours a week at Casa.

"Mr. John Savage was very kind to me. When he realized that I needed more help to get through the fourth grade than his two hours a week with me, he added more hours of tutoring," she wrote in a Casa newsletter.

He tutored Ms. Zubia in fifth grade, then helped her get a scholarship to Trinity. "That first year was very hard," she recalled last week, but Savage tutored her, pulling her through.

"It never dawned on me why I was there," she said of her years at Trinity. But she could recall hearing that all her school supplies would be taken care of by Savage.

When she started at Casa, Ms. Zubia said, Savage was also tutoring a boy and he would challenge the two youngsters in contests using the dictionary.

"He would write down a word and we had to see who could find it first." That exercise began building her English vocabulary.

At one point during those six years of tutoring, Savage had surgery and could not drive to Casa. He arranged for Ms. Zubia to be tutored at his home. "He always had a Coke and a cookie ready," she said with a small laugh.

"He was like my second Dad," she said. Her parents had divorced before her mother moved to Midland. "He (Savage) was there as we grew up. When my older brother started a yard-work business, Mr. Savage and his friends helped him."

Ms. Zubia graduated from Trinity's ninth grade and from Savage, shedding some tears as she went. Her English was good and she no longer needed tutoring. Busy with school work and other activities, Ms. Zubia lost touch with Savage. She breezed through her sophomore year and eventually graduated from Midland High School, gaining more self-confidence with each year.

In her sophomore year, she found a job as a shelver for the Midland County Library, one of the first places she visited after moving to Midland.

"My aunt brought me here and I can remember the first book I checked out. It was a Dr. Suess dictionary and my aunt made us memorize the words and their meaning."

"It's funny, isn't it. The library is one of the first places I came to when I was a child and now I work here."

The laughing, talkative Ms. Zubia is the opposite of the little girl who went to Casa de Amigos one rainy day. That girl was shy and could not understand English. Today, she enjoys dealing wtih people who visit the library. "I love talking to people."

John Savage was one of those unique volunteers at Casa de Amigos, remembered Margaret Hernandez, director of operations and neighborhood outreach. "He was always there to help with tutoring. He went above and beyond" what is typically asked of volunteers.

"He was really concerned about everybody, but especially kids and trying to get them an education. He said the city would profit if these kids were well educated," Ms. Hernandez said. "And he would just stop by Casa to visit and see how the staff was doing."

If it were not for Casa de Amigos and for John Savage, Ms. Zubia acknowledges she wouldn't be where she is today, doing something she loves: working as a clerk at the county library. Without Savage and Casa de Amigos, she said she possibly would not have graduated from high school.

She also credits her aunt, Luz Rodriguez, for that first trip to the library and the suggestion to try Casa for help. And behind it all, she said, has been her mother.

"My mom has always said, 'I want you to be the best you can be.'" She's proud of us (three children) and we're proud of her. Being a single parent, she's come a long way," Ms. Zubia said.

It was saddening, then, for Ms. Zubia and her family to learn of Savage's death in 1991. "When he died I was very sad. He was a great person. Without his help, I couldn't have gone this far in life."

"I don't think I ever had the chance to thank him for everything he did."

Casa de Amigos is one of the 16 agencies that receives funding from United Way of Midland. The annual fundraising campaign will end Nov. 9. For more information about the agencies or campaign, call 682-4358.

POST: City ordinance outlaws poles on signs

(From 1C)

The ordinance will be reviewed with city employees during the Midland Police Department's crime education program in November and employees will be asked to take down signs that are illegally posted.

"Not only are these signs unsightly, they pose real hazards to telephone maintenance personnel that must climb the poles," Tryson said. "There is a real danger of someone getting hurt if there are nails all over the poles.

"We just wanted residents to be aware that this is against the city ordinance and that employees will be taking the signs down," he continued. "This is just a forewarning, to ease the change."

HELP: City employees to assist in crime prevention

(From 1C)

tion and Information System, patrol officers, narcotics intelligence officers and crime prevention officers.

"Let's say a sanitation worker notices an intersection where a lot of people run red lights," Garcia said. "He can alert his supervisor, who will get in touch with the Police Department and we will make sure the information gets to the proper people."

He said the employee can also call the department personally or explain the problem in writing.

Employees will also be taught how to use their radios to call the department's dispatcher in case an officer is needed immediately.

"If someone notices a house where there is heavy traffic and people are filtering in and out, that might be a drug house," Garcia said. "All city employees have radios in their vehicles that allow them to contact the dispatcher on a certain channel. If a employee sees a house like that, he can call it in and an officer in the neighborhood can possibly check it out. Plus, a background check of the address or a license plate can be run for more information."

Employees will be taught what information to call in and when the situation does not require immediate action.

"They (the city employees) can help us out with problems such as abandoned vehicles, dangerous intersections, things like that that we may not be aware of," Garcia said.

Garcia said future programs will depend on the reaction of employees to November's session and the success in training them.

"We will ask the employees to critique the program, what their ideas are," he said. "We will continue it if it is necessary or it could just be a one-time deal."

However, the program itself isn't nearly as important to the Police Department as its outcome.

"We are hoping that it will make an impact in the city," Garcia said. "We want to present a united front of citizens and the police officials against crime and the people who commit it."

OTT: Old friends are extension of mind, soul someone who has experienced the same trauma. There is security in familiarity.

(From 1C)

But, really, there's more to this teen-age bonding than just solving common problems.

Indeed, it is the "hanging out together" part that stirs the fondest memories. At no other time in a person's life is he closer to his friends. They become a part of him, an extension of his mind and soul. Whether he is leaning against a car in the front yard, as the two kids were Friday evening, or secluded in a back room of his parents' home, far from all adults, there is a certain freedom that exists between young people. There's a mutual trust, an us-against-them mentality that tends to evaporate as the aging process progresses.

Those were the thoughts that drifted through my mind Friday as I watched the two kids. What were they talking about? Sports? An upcoming test? A future date? Cars? The unfairness of acne? The possibilities were endless.

But one thing was certain. Regardless of the topic they had chosen, those of us over age 16 would not have been able to understand. In short, we would have been excluded from their little world, unfamiliar with the subtle nuances that weave together a conversation between true friends.

Those people — true friends — speak a different language, often communicating without actually uttering words. They just KNOW what the other person is thinking, somehow sensing their feelings and emotions.

Now, I know what you're saying. "Gary, that's all fine and good, but the ability to interact with a true friend is not limited to young people. We all have the power."

Quite true. It is just that teenagers do it better. They have to. After all, no one else cares what they're talking about.

Relatives criticize authorities in search for missing teen-ager

DALLAS (AP) — Relatives of a 13-year-old missing since Tuesday have criticized police saying the law enforcement officers should have done more to find the Dallas girl.

Medical examiners are investigating whether a clothed body discovered Friday in a brushy area of southeast Dallas is Quana Colquitt, a police spokesman said Saturday.

But the girl's uncle, Cedric Colquitt, who saw the body, said he believes it is his niece.

Police were hesitant to confirm Colquitt's belief.

"Anything I can say now would be just a guess," said homicide Sgt. Joe DeCorte. "We've got a lot of suspects to look at, so I don't want to say anything."

Cedric Colquitt and his mother-in-law say that police have been lax in their search efforts for the E.B. Comstock Middle School eight-grader who failed to report to school Tuesday.

"If that had been a white kid, every police officer would have been out there," said Linda Fuller, Quana Colquitt's grandmother.

"Somebody should have done more," said Ms. Fuller. "Although she was dead that ain't the point."

Authorities say they realize that this is an emotional time, for the family and understand their frustration.

"I don't know what we could have done to find her quicker," said Lt. Ron Waldrop.

"It's an emotional time for the family," Waldrop said. "We had a major commitment of personnel to this case and we searched every area that we thought there might be something."

The body was discovered by Edward Bishop and his son, part of a search team organized by family and friends.

Bishop said he decided to search the area because it was frequented by the girl's stepgrandfather, James Brewster, 51.

Police said they now are investigating whether Brewster may have been involved in the slaying 20 years ago of another 13-year-old, his stepdaughter Christine Mitchell. The case never has been solved.

Brewster remains in the Lew Sterrett Justice Center on $500,000 bond on a charge of molesting a 5-year-old girl.

Director of music educators to address Lee High students

Staff report

Robert Floyd, executive director of the Texas Music Educators Association, will speak 8 p.m. Tuesday at Lee High School.

Floyd will address the state board of education's high school degree plan that recommends students take more rigorous courses — such as math, science, and foreign language — at the expense of fine-arts courses.

Public testimony will be heard on the proposal Friday in El Paso.

Local school administrators note that the degree plan is being recommended by the state as the "preferred" — rather than the required or mandated plan.

In a column in the "Southwestern Musician" magazine, Floyd said, "Even though this is a recommended plan, by tying numbers of students in the plan to the Academic Excellence Indicator System (that grades schools on academic performance in order to receive state funding), building principals and counselors will be strongly encouraging participation. Our fear is that all options would not be carefully explained to students and parents and the plan on some campuses could take on the posture of a required plan."

Parents opposing the plan say it shows a lack of concern and inflexibility for students who want to choose a career in the arts, such as in band, music or choir.

"The recommended plan certainly precludes any student from participating in more than one music course or elective during the instructional day during each of his or her four years in high school," Floyd said. "For example, band and choir, or band and athletics."

The Texas Business and Education Coalition is promoting the plan through the Texas Scholars program which rewards students for taking more rigorous academic courses.

One question the TMEA asks is: "Will this new plan really better prepare all students for the global workforce? If a student is deficit in math, is the solution to require trigonometry or pre-calculus?"

The TMEA notes that the state's proposed high school degree plan for college-bound students exceeds the requirements in math, science and foreign language for admission to the University of Texas at Austin, Rice University, Texas A&M University and Southern Methodist University.

All interested persons are invited to hear Floyd speak at LHS.

First big fall event for the students is Thursday night when the Student Activities Office sponsors Roctoberfest. Despite the name, the music will be quite mixed, rather than all one style. A DJ will handle the music, answering requests. Free food, free drinks, music, and dancing make an irresistible combination. Oh yes, the drinks are "mocktails" in observance of Alcohol and Drug Awareness Month and since alcohol isn't allowed at campus functions.

Admission is free for students with MC identification cards and their guests. The Roctoberfest takes place in the Student Center from 8 until 11 p.m.

Since this is the final day of AirSho '93 for the Confederate Air Force at the Midland International Airport, it's appropriate to talk about an educational aspect of the CAF which is scheduled Nov. 11-13. It's an international symposium on World War II sponsored by the CAF's American Airpower Heritage Museum and Midland College.

Among the speakers are: former U.S. Sen. Barry Goldwater, who was a long-time pilot and World War II veteran with the Air Training Command and the Air Transport Command; Scott Crossfield, who set many air speed records with the X-series research aircraft; and Col. Francis "Gabby" Gabreski, who was a World War II "ace" who shot down 28 enemy aircraft in a P-47, then became an ace in Korea flying F-86 Sabre Jets.

There are scores of other presenters who are survivors of various World War II events, historians, or researchers. Werner Seitz, a former Luftwaffe pilot and sole survivor of the German top-secret "Mistel" program, also is on the lengthy program.

Since there are separate prices for each meal and each concurrent session, you really need to drop by the college's Continuing Education Office in the Administration Building for a brochure and registration form. Or call 685-4518 for additional details.

The Midland Shrine Circus arrives at Chaparral Center on Saturday for performances at 11 a.m., 3 p.m., and 7:30 p.m. This year's event features a different circus group than the one which has performed here the past few years for the Shriners, so you'll see new acts, new animals, new clowns, possibly even some new novelties. No, I'll guarantee you'll see new novelties!

Children's tickets are being distributed through the local schools. Adult tickets will be on sale at Chap Center later.

If you haven't taken the time to see the current Midland Arts Association's fall show, please do so before it closes on Oct. 22. This is a juried show, which means that an out-of-town judge selected the works which would be displayed in the show and also selected the winners in various categories. Although viewers usually have some disagreement with the judge's selections, this year's show is excellent both in quantity and quality. Works by both local and regional artists are included in the show.

It's being displayed in the McCormick Gallery, located in the Allison Fine Arts Building, daily with free admission. Hours are: 1-5 p.m. Sunday, 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday, and 9 a.m.-5 p.m. on Friday. Some of the works are available for purchase, so you could do some early Christmas shopping and be assured the recipients will have absolutely unique gifts.

Just four classes are listed on this week's schedule from the Continuing Education Department, but they are certainly different.

Gary Khasan is starting a class in Conversational Russian I, which will meet from 7-9 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays through Nov. 18. The cost is $59.

Judy Griffin is offering Drawing With Color on Thursdays from 6:30-9 p.m. through Nov. 4. Cost of this class is $25.

There's a Saturday-Sunday Real Estate-Mandatory Continuing Education class next weekend. It meets from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. both days. Donna Gore is the instructor. The cost is $99.

And if you think you'd like to write children's literature, make plans to attend Nancy Robinson Masters' class on "How to Write for Children's Publications" on Saturday, Oct. 16, from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Ms. Masters has written — and sold — more than 3,000 articles, so she knows how to research her markets successfully. She's also written several books, including one on the restoration of World War II aircraft by the Confederate Air Force. Her workshop costs $25.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director for Midland College.

Scientists, health experts to share findings of birth defects research

HARLINGEN (AP) — A mysterious cluster of rare birth defects in this border county will be among the topics when researchers from around the world converge here to share their findings this week.

The International Conference on Neural Tube Defects will give health experts, geneticists and epidemiologists a chance to discuss research into defects such as anencephaly and spina bifida.

"There is a lot of time for discussion. That's what we want," said Stanley L. Fisch, a Harlingen pediatrician who has helped organize the conference at Valley Baptist Medical Center.

Fisch said the conference, running Sunday through Wednesday, is not likely to yield stunning new discoveries. Scientists don't understand the cause or causes behind neural tube defects.

Because the defects are so rare, researchers must compile each other's studies for sufficient numbers to take a fresh look at the problem, Fisch said.

Anencephaly is a fatal condition in which babies are born with undeveloped and exposed brains. Spina bifida, though not necessarily fatal, is a severely crippling disorder resulting from an exposed spinal cord.

Doctors have detected that Cameron County, encompassing Brownsville and Harlingen, has a rate of these defects that is four times the national average.

The area received international attention during a cluster of anencephalic births in 1991, including a 36-hour period in which three anencephalic babies were born at one Brownsville hospital.

A Texas Department of Health study in July 1992 could not pinpoint the cause for the cluster.

Fisch said that despite the alarming rate in Cameron County, the occurrence is still extremely rare — 13 per 10,000 live births between 1986 and 1991.

The conference will include Drs. Carmen Rocco and Gregg Wilkinson, who are among those suggesting that environmental pollution is related to the cluster.

Some people have blamed the "maquiladora" industry across Rio Grande in Matamoros, Mexico.

Maquiladoras are mostly U.S.-owned assembly plants that use cheaper Mexican labor. A lawsuit in state district court in Brownsville alleges that 92 maquiladoras released air pollution that caused 20 Brownsville births with neural tube defects, most of them stillborn.

Maquiladora industry spokesmen say the lawsuit is politically motivated by opponents of the North American Free Trade Agreement, which would expand trade with Mexico.

Tony Martinez, the attorney who filed the lawsuit, has denied any political motives, saying the case was filed to compensate the families and protect the environment.

Grand jury to decide whether to bring charges against DA

DALLAS (AP) — A state grand jury will decide Monday whether Van Zandt County District Attorney John Sickel should be indicted on criminal charges in connection with alleged misconduct in office, a special prosecutor says.

Earlier last week, the grand jury issued a civil petition seeking Sickel's removal from office. The panel accused him of giving preferential treatment to certain criminal defendants and writing 100 bad checks during 1991 and 1992.

As district attorney, Sickel is responsible for prosecuting writers of bad checks.

"We're going to fight it, obviously," said Sickel.

The grand jury's petition accused Sickel, 41, of showing favoritism to relatives of two of his employees who were charged with burglary, said Reed Prospere, a court-appointed special prosecutor.

The grand jury also said Sickel was guilty of official misconduct by writing the checks because he "did not apply the law to himself."

In Texas, writing a bad check is a Class C misdemeanor, punishable by a fine up to $500. Hot checks written for property or services delivered at the time the check is written can be prosecuted under felony theft or theft-of-service charges.

The examination into Sickel's activities started when county Republican Party chairman Jerry Walling filed a petition in state court requesting an inquiry of Sickel, a Democrat.

Walling says his petition wasn't politically motivated.

"My concern was, here's a guy who is responsible for prosecuting hot checks in the county," Walling said.

SUCCESS RATES TOP 95% FOR WEIGHT LOSS & STOP SMOKING HYPNOSIS PROGRAMS

ODESSA- Betty Powell was an 'expert' on weight loss. "You name it, and I've tried it", she said, "... diets, shots, pills, Nutrisystems, Jenny Craig, Slim Fast, etc. Oh sure, I'd manage to lose a few pounds, but I always regained them, with a few extra to spare. I'd almost given up hope, when some of my friends told me how they each had not only lost weight but kept it off through a group hypnotherapy session conducted by Dr. Kaloski. Three and a half months after attending the seminar I had lost 43 lbs., reaching my goal weight of 115. It's been a year now and I haven't gained back a single pound! Best of all, I did it without dieting."

Frank Lopez was a 3 pack-a-day, 31 year smoker who had tried "the Patch", nicotine gum, white-knuckle willpower and even other hypnosis programs. "Five wall-climbing days was the longest I ever made it", he said, "Dr. Kaloski helped me quit smoking with absolutely no withdrawal. It's been 2 years and I've never felt better."

These people, and thousands more like them, are now being helped through the innovative and highly successful techniques pioneered by Dr. B. E. Kaloski. Holder of Doctorate Degrees in both Counseling Psychology and Clinical Hypnotherapy, Dr. Kaloski founded the nation's largest network of private hypnosis clinics, is a Fellow of the National Board for Hypnotic Anaesthesiology, past president of the American Board of Hypnotherapy and author of "Psych Yourself Slim" and "The No Nonsense Guide to Smoking Cessation." With over 100,000 patient hours in group and private practice, he ranks as one of the nation's most experienced hypnotherapists.

A dynamic speaker who brings a genuine enthusiasm to his seminars, Dr. Kaloski credits his phenomenal success rate, in the 95% range, to his exclusive and revolutionary Multiphasic Motivational Programming method, so unique that it is registered with the U.S. Copyright Office. "All habits are the result of both conscious and subconscious processing. To treat one area while neglecting the other is only doing half the job. MMP is the only program that's been designed to provide dynamic intervention on both levels - conscious and subconscious. The results may at times seem truly miraculous but these techniques are based on sound, proven and time-tested principles."

" Contrary to popular belief, everyone can be hypnotized. A hypnotized person is not asleep; they're just fully relaxed, intensely focused, aware and always in control."

"Dr. Kaloski has made a significant breakthrough in the areas of weight loss and smoking cessation," according to Dr. A.M. Krasner, a top hypnosis educator and author of "The Wizard Within", a definitive textbook." He's taken a centuries old technique, hypnosis, and given it a startling new dimension. I strongly recommend his program to everyone, especially those who've had little or no success with other programs or seminars. Simply put, his method works."

According to Dr. Kaloski, there are three main reasons why most people fail to permanently lose weight or stop smoking. " First, they rely on willpower - a very unreliable method. Willpower means you have to deprive yourself of something you want. With my method, willpower becomes unnecessary since you can't feel deprived of something you don't want. We redirect a person's priorities so that the desire for the fattening foods or cigarettes is replaced by a stronger desire for a slim, trim figure, vibrant health, longevity and abundant vitality. After our seminar a person eats less because they actually want less. They don't smoke because they actually don't want a cigarette. That's critically important."

" Second, they concentrate on changing the action but not the attitude... a big mistake. Before the weight can come off and stay off the body, it must come off from between the ears. The same principle applies to smoking. The only way to permanently lose weight or stop smoking is to change one's attitude toward food and cigarettes. That's exactly what this program accomplishes."

" Third, they often find a great void in their life without the food or cigarettes that have been their friends for years. This often causes a relapse. I've solved that problem by programming everyone, while in hypnosis, with three positive replacements to fill that void. Smokers also benefit by not gaining weight after quitting."

" The first hour is the same for everyone. That's when we lay the crucial groundwork for success. After a short break, I conduct the weight loss session, which takes about 30 minutes - sending the smokers off to puff to their heart's content since it'll be the last cigarettes they'll ever have. I then conduct the stop smoking session."

At his seminar, he also shows people how to improve other areas of their life as well, such as exercise motivation, stress, memory & concentration, self-esteem & confidence, financial success, procrastination, alcohol, insomnia, pain relief, depression, fears & phobias, to name a few.

He is so confident of these programs that he offers a lifetime guarantee. If anyone should ever need additional help, attend the same program at anytime in the future absolutely free of charge.

Dr. Bruce E. Kaloski backs his seminars with a lifetime guarantee

" I'm very pleased to offer this seminar for only $39.95 for either program or $59.95 for both," he said. "Compared to my $295 private session fee, this puts these outstanding programs within the reach of almost everyone. Furthermore, I offer a discount for groups of 3 or more."

Dr. Kaloski will personally conduct his highly acclaimed seminar in Odessa on Thursday, October 14 at the Odessa Hilton, 5200 E. University (at Loop 338) starting at 7:30 pm. Registration is at the door beginning at 7:00 pm. Cash, Check, MC/VISA are accepted. Dress comfortably and bring a pillow, if you wish.

Phone books target ethnic, geographic niches

'People like to do business with people they have something in common with.'

— David Hatfield
Christian directories publisher

HOUSTON (AP) — There's always been a primary telephone directory for people wanting to reach out and touch someone through the Yellow Pages.

In Houston, that's Southwestern Bell Yellow Pages' Greater Houston directory. The newest edition — promoted heavily with the current "Swbyp's" advertising campaign — is a two-volume, 2,646-page tome, with 128 more pages than last year.

But this proverbial 500-pound gorilla hasn't scared off a number of alternative Yellow Pages publishers, who have introduced smaller directories for audiences ranging from African-Americans and Koreans to Christians and gays.

Hoping to find a born-again automobile repairman? Check the Houston edition of the Christian Business & Professional Directory.

Wanting to locate businesses supportive of gays and lesbians? Go to the Houston Gay & Lesbian Yellow Pages.

Looking for a black-owned insurance agency? Try the Greater Houston Black Pages — "Houston's official African-American and Caribbean business directory."

Foreign-language Yellow Pages directories are available in Spanish, Chinese and Korean. There's a growing number of suburban directories from local and regional publishers. And there's an entry from the Information Age: Compu-Pages, a computerized Yellow Pages that started operations in Houston earlier this year.

This directory is distributed free of charge on computer disks found in area computer stores.

For consumers, such "niche" directories offer a different way to pinpoint goods and services. For advertisers, alternative directories provide a method to target ad spending to a more specific audience.

"People like to do business with people they have something in common with," said David Hatfield, who publishes Christian directories in Houston and Dallas. "This is a network you can step right into."

These alternative business directories are trying to squeeze into a Yellow Pages advertising industry that ranks as the nation's fourth-largest advertising medium, with $9.3 billion in sales last year, according to the Yellow Pages Publishers Association.

The business is highly concentrated, with 95 percent of the revenues coming from the top 12 companies, including GTE and the Bell companies, said Larry Small, a vice president of the Troy, Mich.-based association.

After the breakup of AT&T nearly a decade ago, new directories were unleashed nationwide, peaking at 6,500 Yellow Pages titles in 1986. Many consumers were confronted with phone book clutter, getting several varieties of similar books as companies, including Southwestern Bell, expanded beyond their traditional service areas, only to later pull back.

The number of Yellow Pages bottomed out at 5,700 in 1991, but it has since climbed to 5,900.

"The real growth in the number of titles today is fueled by independent publishers, not the Bell companies," Small said.

Niche directories are usually carved out of geographic areas, such as the suburbs, Small said. There are an estimated 45 suburban Yellow Pages in the Houston area, books that target consumers shopping such places as Clear Lake, Memorial, Deer Park and West University/Bellaire.

But there are also a number of others that are demographically oriented, aimed at specific ethnic or other groups.

Not all these alternatives survive, of course. The Greater Houston Women's Yellow Pages, for example, dissolved in 1989 after three years of operation following a partnership disagreement.

Still, a number of alternative Yellow Pages say they are expanding rapidly, either in the Houston area or in other markets.

Laura Villagran, who owns VillaGraphics, publisher of the two-year-old Houston Gay & Lesbian Yellow Pages, introduced a similar directory in Denver earlier this summer and plans soon to unveil one in Washington, D.C.

"It's an excellent, excellent niche," she said. "People are willing to support their own, for the economic advancement of our community. We finally realize there is so much money to be made in the gay community."

The 2-year-old Korean Business Directory of the Southwest, which is published by the Houston-based Korean Journal newspaper, has grown 50 pages to 300 pages this year and has started similar editions in Chicago and Atlanta.

Distributing thousands of directories looms as a big challenge — and a big expense.

The Spanish Telephone Directory is distributed door-to-door to homes in 12 heavily Hispanic zip codes, from racks placed in Fiesta Marts and through the mail, said Mario Duenas, president of Spanish Publications, publisher of the Spanish-language book.

Villagran said the Gay Yellow Pages is distributed from racks in grocery stores plus door-to-door, primarily in three zip codes in the Montrose area.

Not all the publications are locally oriented.

The Woodlands-based U.S. Yellow Pages publishes The Yellow Pages — nationwide edition, a business-to-business directory that charges a flat $147 rate to list companies under business headings and by city and state.

"Our niche is the opposite of these other directories," said Andy Veres, company president. "We are a nationwide Yellow Pages directory for businesses."

Veres said 99 percent of the more than 50,000 copies he distributes each year are through the mail.

"That is a headache," he said. Postage is about $1 a copy for the 3- to 4-pound directories.

Another Spanish-language directory, Paginas Amarillas En Espanol de Texas, lists Texas firms and is distributed not in Texas but exclusively in Mexico, where high-income people crave access to goods and services north of the border.

"It's a market no one else is doing, and it's very lucrative," said Shawna Van Ness, Houston sales representative. "Everyone wants a piece of the action in Mexico."

The directory, 175,000 of which were distributed, is published by APS Communications Corp. in San Antonio. The company originally published a Hispanic Yellow Pages in San Antonio but abandoned that market when it discovered Mexican nationals traveling to Texas got the most use out of it, Van Ness said.

Compiling lists and setting up rules for accepting advertising can be troublesome for specialized directories.

"Do you eliminate headings or do you eliminate businesses? Is it only paid listings? Or, do you give free listings to just Hispanic businesses?" asked Small of the Yellow Pages association. "Those are major decisions that the publisher has to make."

Businesses in the Christian directory are screened first, and often come referred, said Hatfield.

The Houston Chinese directory provides free listings only on a space-available basis.

Compu-Pages provides free listings to anyone who notifies the company. It is adding about 300 new listings a day to a data base that is expected to have 10,000 in the new edition, said Robert Clough, a 26-year-old former landscaper and co-founder of Compu-Pages.

But since they don't usually run residential listings, many of the demographic-oriented directories are spared a major expense. Suburban directories must pay for mailing lists of names and phone numbers.

Some of the larger firms, such as San Diego, Calif.-based Trans-Western Publishing, which publishes 11 Houston-area directories, buy telephone number data from Southwestern Bell. Some smaller operators cut costs by using independent firms, which supply information on computer disks.

"I could cut my printing in half if I didn't have white pages," said Trudy King, president of Neighborhood Directories.

King's firm publishes two local directories in affluent, well-defined neighborhoods, Memorial and West University/River Oaks.

"Right now we are just going to stay with these three. I'm not sure there's any more room for any additional books in the Houston area."

All but one of the directories — the Greater Houston Black Pages — gives directories away for free.

The Black Pages comes with a $2 cover price, which publisher Joe Head said was designed to add value to a directory that is often used not just as a resource to buy goods and services from the advertisers, but as a data base of black-owned businesses to which people can pitch their own products.

Still, because of donations to non-profit groups such as churches, more than half of the 100,000 copies are given away anyway, he said.

Compu-Pages has distributed about 60,000 free computer disks to Houstonians, who can use Compu-Pages on any personal computer equipped with Microsoft's Windows operating system, Clough said.

One advantage of the computerized pages is ads can be updated once a month.

West Texas rancher tries to defeat Maine proposal

AUSTIN (AP) — A West Texas rancher is trying to do in Maine what he couldn't do in Texas — defeat a proposal to make his hometown the site of a low-level nuclear waste dump.

Bill Addington of Sierra Blanca is traveling through Maine begging voters to defeat a ballot measure approving the shipment of waste from Maine's nuclear plant to his hometown, about 80 miles east of El Paso.

The Nov. 2 Maine election is one step toward ratification of a compact in which Maine and Vermont would pay Texas to dump its low-level nuclear waste.

The Texas Legislature approved the compact earlier this year. But Maine law requires that a decision on nuclear waste storage must be put to the voters.

So Addington, president of Save Sierra Blanca, is conducting news conferences, appearing at town hall meetings and talking on radio shows in Maine against the proposal.

"People here are obviously proud and independent, and have a strong sense of family and community — just like we do in West Texas," Addington said. "From everything I have seen, Mainers are not the kind of people who would want anything to do with a shady deal like this proposed nuclear dump."

Addington has been in Maine since Sept. 30 and plans to stay through this week.

Phillip Merletti, spokesman for the Don't Waste Maine Alliance that is opposing the compact, said Addington is helping residents remember how they felt when fighting proposals to put a waste depository in Maine.

"How can we as human beings, knowing how dangerous this is, now turn our backs and wish it away to another state?" Merletti asked.

Most Maine officials, however, believe moving the waste more than 2,000 miles away is a good idea.

Police remove vehicle doors without stickers

FORT WORTH (AP) — In an attempt to comply with an arcane state law, Fort Worth police have been taking the driver's doors off impounded cars and then charging the vehicle owners $20 for the door's removal.

Subsequently, some owners have driven away from the pound in vehicles without driver's side doors.

State law requires that the vehicle's door have a legible identification and information sticker that police calls a "Nader sticker." Police remove the doors as evidence from cars that lack a proper sticker.

Police Chief Thomas Windham, who discovered Friday that his own van violates the law, said police now will use "discretion" before deciding whether a door should be removed.

"I don't think we should ever allow a person to drive away" without a driver's door, Windham said. "I think the safety factor is too great; I think the liability factor is too great."

The manufacturer glues the Nader sticker, apparently named after consumer advocate Ralph Nader, on the inside of the driver's door to certify that the vehicle has met safety and environmental standards.

The sticker can aid police in locating stolen vehicles, Windham said.

Windham said the sticker, if marred by water, cleaning solvents or other means, could come off or become illegible without the owner's knowledge, he said. But the owner still would be in technical violation of the law, he said.

Voters OK $19 million bond; reject another for girls' sports

ODESSA (AP) — Voters in Ector County approved a $19.9 million bond issue Saturday to add classrooms to overcrowded junior high schools and build futuristic "workplace preparation centers."

They also rejected a proposition that would have allocated nearly $5 million for girls' athletics at Ector County Independent School District's six junior high schools and two high schools.

The bond that passed 3,635-2,637 will be used to build two centers that will "help prepare our students for the challenges of the 21st century," said Chuck Hornung, communications director for Ector County ISD.

The workplace centers will be used to teach robotics, plastics and management techniques in addition to the standard high school curriculum, Hornung said.

The girls athletics measure failed by 16 votes, 3094-3078. The bond election was prompted by a new state law that calls for equal funding for boys' and girls' athletics.

"The law isn't going to change because the bond lost," Hornung said. "So we'll probably have to cut back on boys' things."

Had that proposition passed, gyms, locker rooms and other workout facilities would have been built at the junior and senior high schools.

Part of the $19 million will also go toward adding classrooms to the district's junior high schools, which were originally designed for 750 students, but now have about 1,100 each, Hornung said.

Permian and Odessa high schools will also receive money for building and science improvements, he said.

Police to notify owners of vehicles spotted in drug-infested regions

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — Police say they plan to write letters to businesses and individuals whose vehicles are spotted in an allegedly drug-infested neighborhood in the Dallas suburb of Grand Prairie.

"Basically, what we'll do is send a friendly letter," said Joe Babina, a police storefront officer in the neighborhood of Dalworth. "We're not going to allege anything."

The letters will inform people that police saw their vehicles on a particular date in a particular time in a known drug area.

"The majority of people who come through Dalworth, they come in here to buy drugs," Babina said. "Why would you come down here if you don't live here?"

Babina said more than half of the people arrested in Dalworth for drug offenses are not from the town. Over the past six weeks, police have made 17 drug arrests in the 2-square-mile neighborhood.

The letter-writing operation, praised by city leaders, has drawn fire from the American Civil Liberties Union. The civil-rights group says notifying companies that their vehicles drove through known drug areas may put employees under undue suspicion.

"I think reporting people to their employer without either reasonable suspicion or probable cause is at least unwise and possibly unconstitutional," said Don Jackson, president of the Fort Wroth ACLU chapter.

Police say they will send the letters to owners of vehicles that they think have no legitimate reasons for driving through the neighborhood.

Tanker explodes near mouth of Houston ship channel

GALVESTON (AP) — A 600-foot tanker carrying more than 30 people exploded Saturday night near the mouth of the Houston Ship Channel, rocking the area and causing a raging fire.

Two people remained missing two hours after the blast about 8 p.m. aboard the OMI Charger, said U.S. Coast Guard spokesman Dennis Schaefer. He said more than 30 others were pulled ashore.

"Fortunately, on board we had only two men that were working. At the moment, we know 26 men from the vessel are on shore and safe," said Enrico Fenzi, vice president of New Jersey-based ship owner OMI. "The other two doing repairs on board, we cannot find them. We don't know where they are. They are unaccounted for."

Fenzi said the two missing workers were from an outside company.

One crewmember was in serious condition with second-degree facial burns at the University of Texas at Galveston's medical complex, said hospital spokeswoman DeAnn Armstrong.

Two people were in fair condition with smoke inhalation and another was in good condition, she said.

Although the tanker was docked a mile into the water, the blast caused a force on the east side of Galveston many said could be felt more than four miles away.

The fire was still blazing after 10 p.m.

Schaefer officials said civilian boats in the area were assisting in the search for the missing crewmen.

Initial reports said 26 people would be taken to a local hospital, but it later appeared that many of those were safe and would be taken to a nearby hotel.

Linda Ford, the general manager of a Ramada Resort Hotel, said she was told to prepare rooms for 26 crewmen that were expected to arrive by 10:30 p.m.

Schaefer said the tanker had no cargo, but it was carrying about 8,700 barrels of fuel. That's the equivalent of 275,000 gallons.

State bars group home investors from Medicaid program

FORT WORTH (AP) — Two Fort Worth owners of the state's largest chain of group homes for the mentally retarded have been barred by the state from the Medicaid program.

The state says that the owners of the home network have repeatedly jeopardized the health and safety of their residents. The loss of the Medicaid contracts cuts all revenue to the homes owned by Lee Goodman Jr., Greg Goodman and Carolyn Anderson Bell. However, most of the residences have remained open because of changes in operators, the state said.

Lee Goodman Jr. and several companies he controls are barred from holding Medicaid contracts in Texas for 10 years. The agreement was reached Friday with the Texas Department of Human Services.

In the agreement 31-year-old Greg Goodman, Goodman's son, also was barred for six years, said Sharon Thompson, a manager of the state agency's Medicaid Fraud and Sanctions unit.

Greg Goodman said Friday that he and his father have "voluntarily" withdrawn from the Medicaid program. He disputed "any allegations" that the state has made about the operation of their facilities.

Ms. Bell, a third partner, is appealing similar Medicaid sanctions, Ms. Thompson said.

The three investors owned 68 six-person community-based homes for the mentally retarded, 18 in Tarrant County.

Medicaid, the joint federal-state medical subsidy program for the disabled or poor, paid $10.1 million last year to the homes, Ms. Thompson said.

The state's actions against the Goodmans and Ms. Bell come amid plans to transfer about 40 Fort Worth State School residents to community-based group homes — the kind operated by the Goodmans.

Advocates for the mentally retarded and parents of state school residents have questioned the adequacy of the monitoring and evaluating of group homes and criticized the state actions involving the Goodmans and Ms. Bell.

"More monitoring is needed, and this whole thing points to that fact," said Deb Silvas, program director with the Association for Retarded Citizens of Greater Tarrant County.

The sanctions against the Goodmans and Ms. Bell are the state's response to repeated reports of failures to meet federal quality standards in the six-person homes and other health facilities.

"The history is not of a single group home being out of compliance," said Jaylon Fincannon, deputy state commissioner of mental retardation services. "But over time over some years you see a pattern."

Problems cited included poor record keeping, not keeping clients bathed and not giving residents their necessary medications.

The Goodman-Bell homes housed about 450 people across the state.

Eighth-grade chess champion takes good fortune from his talent in stride

By David Pego
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — Chess can be a very serious game, but Adi Smith says he doesn't see it that way.

"At the moment, I'm just playing for fun," Adi says. "I'm not sure what I want to happen with it."

Don't let the casual attitude fool you. A lot of good things concerning chess already have happened for him.

Last year, the St. Andrew's Episcopal School student won the national chess championship for seventh-graders. He also has nearly two dozen trophies and plaques won at various tournaments. But sometimes he seems a bit bored with his success at the chessboard, his parents say.

"At the moment, I like basketball more," he says. "I usually play every day after school for a little bit."

He also spends time listening to music, going in-line skating, tending to his pet turtles and playing football on the school team.

Adi's parents, Larry and Ester Smith, don't mind having a son with widely varied interests. But they both say they wish he'd get a little bit more serious about chess.

"He could be a lot better if he would take it more seriously," Ester says. "I think he relies on brains rather than practice. Brains only go so far in chess."

Larry, who often challenges his son to a game of chess and takes him to various tournaments, says Adi is a natural at the chessboard.

"Right now, my rating is probably higher, but it's obvious to me that he has more raw talent than I do," Larry says. "He picks up things more easily than I do — the relationship between the pieces."

While Adi enjoys playing tournament chess, he never seems overly serious about developing his game. In fact, his mother says he goes long stretches without practicing. He doesn't get all worked up over playing chess.

"It's something fun," Adi says. "It's something to do."

Adi started playing tournament chess nearly five years ago, when the father of a classmate organized a chess club at St. Andrew's. The classmate already was an outstanding young chess player, and the father volunteered to coach a school chess team. Within two months, the group went to its first tournament and finished eighth in the country in its age group.

The chess-playing classmate moved away, but Adi continued with the sport. About a year ago, he took a class at the Northwest Recreation under Austin's Alexey Root, one of the nation's top 10 women's players.

"He was certainly a star in that intermediate class," Root says. "His concentration and seriousness really impressed me. I've heard from his parents that he hasn't taken a class since then. But when he's actually at the chessboard, he's thinking about it rather than letting his mind wander."

Tournament chess can be pressure-packed. Even younger players try to psyche each other out and mentally wear down their opponents.

Larry says a current movie called "Searching for Bobby Fischer" does a good job ot focusing on that side of junior chess. But he says it mostly ignores the pleasant experiences that keep kids coming back month after month.

"First of all, these national tournaments are large, with lots of kids there," Larry says. "All these kids and their teams are lying there between rounds, playing speed chess with cold pizza around. I don't think it captured that side. For kids, it's fun."

Tournament chess also can be hard work, Larry says.

"What's surprising is how much energy kids use up in playing chess," Larry says. "The coaches will tell the kids and the parents of the kids to have them load up on carbohydrates — just like marathon runners. This is surprising, but it's true: Your brain uses up a lot of calories. By the end of the tournament, the kids are really exhausted."

"Another thing that really hit me is that here you have these young kids who you typically think of as having an attention span of a few minutes. But some of these games last two or three hours. It's kind of remarkable seeing young kids focusing on one chess game for that long."

At this moment, Adi isn't even sure whether he wants to compete in the eighth-grade national championship. It may help that Root is taking over as coach of the St. Andrew's School team. She'll work with team members on Mondays, after school.

His parents say they aren't going to push him, however, they do hope that he will go as far in chess as he desires.

"I hope he'll become a more serious player," Ester says.

Police charge 7 with alleged gang-initiation rape

CONROE (AP) — Seven alleged members of a Conroe street gang have been charged with raping two girls in what one official says was a gang-initiation rite.

Three of the seven accused of raping the girls, ages 12 and 13, are high school students.

Justice of the Peace Edie Connelly said she thought the rapes were part of an initiation into the gang.

Jose Guadalupe Vasquez, 20; Luis Enrique Flores, 17; Francisco Felipe Guillen, 17; Simeon Morales Guerrero, 20; and David Ayala Araiza, 18, were charged with aggravated sexual assault.

They were being held at Montgomery County Jail Friday night.

Guillen and Flores, a student at Conroe High School, were each charged with three counts of aggravated sexual assault. They were being held on bonds of $150,000 apiece.

Vasquez was charged with one count and was being held without bond.

Guerrero and Araiza were charged with one count each. They were being held on bonds of $100,000 and $75,000, respectively.

Two juveniles also were charged with aggravated sexual assault. One is in custody in connection with nine aggravated sexual assaults and another was reportedly involved with two, according to a statement released by the Montgomery County Sheriff's Department.

Both juveniles are Conroe High School students.

All of those arrested are believed to be members of the Conroe street gang VNS, the sheriff's department said.

Authorities said they expect more arrests in connection with the rapes, which they say began in mid-September.

Dallas police use barricades and signs to shut down pedestrian traffic along Commerce Street in downtown Dallas Friday night. The annual Texas-Oklahoma pregame party was banned this year and more than 800 police officers were used to enforce the new policy.

Little violence in downtown Dallas this year, police say

DALLAS (AP) — The first night of Texas-OU weekend in Dallas included at least 18 arrests, but little of the violence that tarnished last year's celebration.

Last year's festivities were marred by several stabbings, robberies, and shootings. One man was shot to death after he was in a minor traffic accident downtown.

Most of Friday's arrests were for alcohol or drugs, said Dallas police spokeswoman Sandra DeKing.

In Deep Ellum, just east of downtown, there were three arrests, two for public intoxication and one for possession of drugs late Friday.

On the other side of downtown, at the West End Historic District, 11 people were arrested. Four more were arrested downtown.

"There's been no violence so far," Ms. DeKing said late Friday. "It's been mainly alcohol this year."

Dallas city officials took several steps to try to make the 1993 Texas-OU weekend safer, including stationing more than 800 police officers downtown. The Dallas City Council also passed an ordinance forbidding open containers of alcohol in the central business district.

Traffic lights were either flashing or continuously green on Commerce Street to keep vehicles moving. Commerce has been the focus of past OU-UT celebrations. Downtown sidewalks were closed to pedestrians beginning at 7 p.m. Friday.

City renovations disturb some Corpus residents

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Downtown Corpus Christi is undergoing a face lift, but some residents say that the changes — rather than improving the city — may instead leave it scarred.

In the past five months, five old buildings have been demolished by a development company that owns 25 percent of downtown property. The same company is now in the process of tearing down a landmark restaurant.

The move is designed to clear the cityscape of unsightly, deteriorated structures and to minimize insurance liability, said Jim Caldwell, president of TRT Development Co.

"We are trying to give downtown a better look," Caldwell said. "We're of the opinion that once we create a new landscape, people will be quicker to come up with new ideas for using those spaces. By starting with a clean slate, you open a lot of possibilities."

Mayor Mary Rhodes and a prominent downtown developer, Charles DeCou, say the demolitions probably make good business sense and will improve the appearance of the downtown area.

But other local developers and architects say the demolitions have robbed the city of an important part of its history.

John Wright, an architect who helped with the downtown development plan, said that downtown property owners should be more sensitive to the importance of old buildings because they define the city's history.

"These are buildings that we will never have again and that are important to the fabric of our city," Wright said. "The uniqueness established over time is what makes Corpus Christi attractive."

The five buildings razed by TRT Development were the old Coastal Motors car dealership, the Dandy Dog restaurant, the Paradise Isles Club, the old Wholesale Auto Parts and an abandoned warehouse.

Bulldozers began razing the old Ship Ahoy restaurant Friday, according to the Corpus Christi Caller-Times. The landmark seafood restaurant served customers for 58 years before closing last year.

None of the buildings had been ruled substandard by the city, said Tom Utter, group manager for development services.

Together, the demolished buildings leave 123,750 square feet of vacant lots, Caldwell said. While there are no immediate plans for the empty lots, he says they will be more attractive to potential developers.

Report: Pearson to assume space center post

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Marine Maj. Gen. Jeremiah "Jed" Pearson III, named last year to head NASA's space flight program, has been picked as the next Johnson Space Center director, according to a published report.

Pearson will replace Paul J. Weitz, appointed acting director in August after the retirement of seven-year director Aaron Cohen, in the next week, The Houston Post reported Saturday. The newspaper cited Texas congressional staff sources.

Weitz, reached by telephone at his home Saturday, said he knew nothing that could confirm or deny the report.

"I only know what I read in The Post," said Weitz, the former astronaut who served as the center's deputy director before assuming Cohen's responsibilities.

Weitz said he has not been consulted about a successor and has heard no timetable for selecting a new director for NASA's manned spaceflight hub.

"That's why ... I don't give it (the report) a lot of credit," he said. "I don't know."

Ed Campion, a spokesman at NASA headquarters in Washington, said no decisions have been announced.

Sources told The Post that Pearson would arrive with a mandate from NASA administrator Dan Goldin to take a hard look at Johnson's management. The center has been blamed for a large portion of cost overruns on space station contractor work it has overseen.

Pearson will serve as director only temporarily, the newspaper said.

Pearson, who studied aeronautical engineering in college and flew as a test pilot, served as one of the top U.S. commanders in the Gulf War.

He was named by Goldin in April 1992 as associate administrator of space flight at agency headquarters in Washington. In the position, one of the agency's highest, Pearson oversees both the space shuttle and space station programs.

The shuttle program is managed from Johnson Space Center, and the slimmed-down and consolidated space station operation was recently relocated to Johnson, a sprawling complex 30 miles south of Houston.

After accepting Cohen's resignation in July, Goldin said he was in no hurry to find a replacement.

"I want to let a little time pass," Goldin said. "The tempting thing is to go out and pick someone and put them in place and make a whole bunch of changes. I want a little time to settle."

Newspaper celebrates centennial

HOUSTON (AP) — Newspaper editor George McElroy looks forward to the day his publication goes out of business.

That's because The Informer & Freeman Press, celebrating its 100th anniversary this week, will shut down only when racial prejudice is overcome.

"Until we can no longer make reference to race or creed, there will continue to be The Informer and a place for papers like it," said McElroy, 71, who has helped produce the paper for most of this century.

The Informer is the state's oldest black newspaper and the third-oldest minority paper in the nation.

McElroy began as an Informer columnist when he was 16. Years later, after other jobs that included working as a Houston Post columnist in the 1970s, he assumed news and operational management responsibilities for his old employer.

He has also taught journalism at the University of Houston and Texas Southern University, his alma mater, through the years.

McElroy said he expects the newspaper to continue as a leading voice for minorities in some form.

"A hundred years from today? I have no idea if there'll even be newspapers, let alone papers like ours," he said. "I believe that in the fairly near future, there'll be ways to get news (like ours) from TV. How we'll participate in that, I'm not sure."

The Informer has an illustrious past rooted in beginnings in the 1890s as the four-page Texas Freeman. That paper focused on issues of racial equality in Houston.

In the 1930s, lawyer Carter Wesley bought and merged the Texas Freeman with The Informer, which was founded in 1919 by C.F. Richardson. The result was a newspaper chain that in its heyday included several Texas cities and New Orleans.

The chain is now gone, although The Informer still circulates in the Beaumont-Port Arthur area. Most of the weekly's 170,000 readers are in Harris, Galveston and Fort Bend counties.

The newspaper has recently undergone changes that could shape its future.

The James Watson family, which briefly published The Informer as a daily, last spring sold it to Marshall-Butler Newspapers, owned by Lorenza Butler jr. and Pluria Marshall Jr. of Houston. They plan a more aggressive campaign to sell the paper.

Wends try their best to oom-pah-pah out of melting pot

By Robert Camuto
Associated Press writer

SERBIN — The bride wore black.

And after the vows were said, everyone ate noodles and sausage to an oom-pah-pah beat.

It could only be a Wendish wedding.

"A what?" you ask.

The Wends are the tiniest Slavic minority anywhere and one of the smallest ethnic groups in the United States.

The Germans have Milwaukee, the Italians have Little Italy and the Chinese have Chinatowns.

For the Wends, the American capital of their culture is this Hill Country town (population 90) about 50 miles southeast of Austin in Lee County.

Last month saw the fifth annual Wendish festival — an effort by a microscopic minority not to disappear forever into the American melting pot.

"There are more Poles in Chicago than anywhere outside of Warsaw. But where do you have Wends?" asked Charles Wukasch, an Austin Community College professor.

Wukasch, vice president of the Wendish Historical Society, wore traditional Wendish dress, a red vest and bow tie, knickers and flowers in his black velvet hat.

The Wends hail from the Lusatia, a region of eastern Germany near the Polish border.

A group of Lutheran Wends (also called Sorbs) sailed to Galveston in one large migration of 600 in 1854. They sought religious freedom and relief from the Prussian yoke of oppression.

The settlers, led by pastor Johann Kilian, purchased more than 4,200 acres in Lee County and founded Serbin, which means "Home of the Wends" in their native tongue.

Eventually, however, the Wends were assimilated throughout the predominantly German Hill Country and the nation.

Today there are only three Texans — two college professors and a 93-year-old man who lives in a nursing home — who are fluent in the Wendish native tongue.

"Now that all the speakers of Wendish have died off, people are trying to resurrect the heritage," Wukasch said. "It's too late to save the language."

What's left of the Wendish culture is Serbin, a wide spot on Farm Road 2239 with a museum, a cemetery and a 120-year-old church that, despite its small size, is said to have the highest pulpit (about 15 feet) in Texas.

On Sunday, before rains turned the celebration picnic site into a muddy ravine, Dallas hairdresser Teresa Zoch, a Wendish descendent, was married in the church to John Worm, also of Dallas.

It was the first time in at least 70 years that a bride wore the traditional Lutheran-Wend black bridal dress, intended to warn of the trying times ahead.

Not only did a train of hundreds come from Dallas, but German journalists — a radio reporter and a newspaper photojournalist — were in Serbin to record the event.

The two Wendish journalists were from the bilingual city of Bautzen, where street signs are in Wend and German.

Now that the Iron Curtain has fallen, the journalists said, the former East Germany's small ethnic groups are hungry for information from the New World.

"We heard that Wends were living in Texas," said radio reporter Mathias Bulang, through a German interpreter. "But the information was always fuzzy."

Aldine ISD gives problem students second chance

By Felix Sanchez
Associated Press writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Hambrick Middle School student David Acevedo made the mistake earlier this year of proudly showing his .25-caliber semiautomatic weapon to another student. He was expelled.

Now, Acevedo and 12 fellow teens — all kicked out of the Aldine Independent School District on weapons, drug or assault allegations — are getting one more chance to make up for their mistakes and get back into school.

Project Recovery, a first-time program started this semester at Aldine ISD's Lane Center in far north Harris County, uses a structured, highly disciplined approach to trying to build self-esteem in problem students like Acevedo.

Some of the program's rules border on boot camp-style discipline:

There is a strict hair-length code, and boys must wear dress shirts and ties. No jewelry is allowed.

All teachers and staff members must be addressed as either ma'am or sir.

Students will stand at their desks at the beginning of class until told to sit by their instructors, and they will move to the side in hallways as they pass adults.

All students perform community service, such as picking up trash along highway medians and at parks, repairing vandalism, working at a food bank and mowing yards and performing simple maintenance for the elderly, and local churches.

Students going to the school are picked up by a special bus at their doorstep, and taken home the same way.

But most of all, say the director of the program and several instructors, Project Recovery tries to treat the students — whom some teachers might find intimidating — with respect.

And that is what's expected in return.

So far, students and instructors say, the program appears to be working.

Acevedo, 14, who says "bunches" of fellow students take guns to school daily, says he's staying out of trouble thanks to Project Recovery.

"If I was back in the other school I'd be skipping class, getting high. . . . Here, there's nothing to do but learn," Acevedo said as he pored over a textbook on Texas geography.

As for his classmates who still deal in troublemaking exploits: "I don't care no more about them, really. I don't do the things I used to do," Acevedo said.

Another student, a 12-year-old boy who was expelled for fighting, says he appreciates the individual help the program's staff gives.

"We give them choices. We teach responsibility. We give them respect. . . . One thing is, though, we don't mess around and we don't take any mess from them," said instructor Amy Honn.

Richard Ruhman, project coordinator, said the program grew out of a commitment by Aldine administrators to work with problem students instead of "just putting them out on the street," or in an already established alternative education program that deals with students with less severe discipline problems.

Students encouraged to enter the voluntary program are those expelled for using or selling drugs, assaulting another student or teacher, or for being caught with a weapon on campus.

When the student is expelled, parents are given a brochure explaining the program and encouraged to enroll the student. So far, the parents of 13 of the 15 students expelled so far this school semester have taken up the offer.

The students take math, science, English and history classes, in addition to the community service work. Depending on their performance, they could be readmitted to their home school in as little as one semester, or be in the program for a year.

"We give them choices. They know that when they make a choice, it's their choice. If they have a behavior we don't like, we try to teach them a better behavior," Ruhman said.

To help prevent any violent acts, all students must walk through a metal detector, and empty their pockets, at the beginning of the day.

Honn and instructor Nelda Swetnam, however, do not fear their charges.

"We do have respect for what they have done in the past," Swetnam said.

"We hope we can raise their self-esteem, broaden their vision of what they can do with their lives. Rather than waste their lives committing crimes, or antisocial behavior. We want to open avenues for them," Ruhman said.

New blood transfusion could be source for marrow transplants

SAN ANTONIO (NYT) — A leukemia-stricken San Antonio preschooler has a new chance at life, thanks to a transfusion of blood cells from the umbilical cord and placenta of an unrelated newborn.

The historic procedure could be an unlimited donor source for the growing number of people in need of bone-marrow transplants, doctors said.

Three-year-old Derick Pritchard is doing well after his own marrow — destroyed by chemotherapy and radiation — was replaced with the aid of umbilical-cord blood last month at Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C.

Although such blood has been used in a few marrow transplants between siblings, doctors at Duke believe Derick is the first patient to receive cells from an unrelated donor.

"He's been a fighter through the whole thing; and as long as he wants to fight, we're going to stay here and fight with him," said Derick's father, Staff Sgt. Steven Pritchard, an air crew systems mechanic with the 12th Maintenance Squadron at Randolph AFB.

Umbilical and placental blood is rich with undeveloped cells called stem cells, which develop into bone marrow after transplantation.

"This is otherwise-discarded material, and does not put a donor at any risk or inconvenience," said Dr. Joanne Kurtzberg at Duke.

Doctors believe the umbilical cells are less likely to cause graft-versus-host disease, a form of rejection peculiar to marrow transplants.

The blood cells used in Derick's procedure were provided by a new cell bank in New York City that was established by a $4 million grant from the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute.

There is a critical shortage of marrow donors across the country, and finding a compatible match is difficult. In addition, doctors have been performing the transplants in greater numbers, for a wider range of diseases.

The extremely high doses of chemotherapy and radiation used in marrow transplants destroy a patient's own marrow cells. In some cases, a small amount of marrow is removed before a patient begins treatment and is reinfused later.

With very sick leukemia patients such as Derick, however, there is risk of reinfusing cancer cells along with healthy marrow.

"In Derick's case, it was important to do this because he didn't have time to look for another donor," Kurtzberg said. "His leukemia was not under control, and we really needed to proceed with something right away. This gave us that opportunity."

Derick became ill about a year and a half ago while his father was stationed in Turkey. The family was transferred to San Antonio and Derick began chemotherapy, but suffered a relapse.

Doctors at Wilford Hall Medical Center here referred Derick to Duke University for a marrow transplant, but were told the experimental procedure was Derick's only option.

Kurtzberg said it may be years before doctors know whether Derick's leukemia is in long-term remission.

Perfect

Located on a corner lot in a quiet neighborhood, this three bedroom family house provides a great escape from the pressures of daily life.

Surrounded by mature trees and pleasant lawns, this is a wonderful house, perfect for those with children.

The house has many useful features that are practical as well as elegant. The family rooms, (the kitchen, informal dining room and living room) form the heart and focus of the house.

With views over the patio and lawn these are restful, pleasant places to be: perfect for relaxing.

The kitchen is fully equipped with all the amenities that one could need, including a double sink, built in range, disposal and microwave.

It also boasts masses of storage space that includes two pantries and a large utility room, making it ideal for families.

A large breakfast bar separates the working areas of the kitchen from the informal dining room which helps to open up the area to the lovely natural light which floods in from the south-facing kitchen window.

With a covered patio that leads off from the kitchen, the rear of the house is designed for entertaining as well as relaxing with its new fence that ensures privacy as well as security.

The two-car garage at the side of the home is large enough to work in as well as store the cars.

The sumptuous master bedroom suite is typical of the rest of the house, in that it is tastefully decorated, has lots of room, high ceilings and all the amenities that one would expect from a great house.

For more information about this great family home or to schedule an appointment to view it, call Ruth Young of Remax at 682-7884.

Real Estate agents provide "one stop shopping"

Vicky Garrett
Chaparral Realtors

Planning to buy a home? Want to know how many real estate agents it takes to find you the right home? The Answer is "one".

Buyers often believe it is necessary to call the real estate company advertising a particular home for sale. That can mean calling a dozen or more companies to learn more about each advertised home. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Although individual real estate agents do compete for listings on homes, they also have a network of cooperation, allowing them to show virtually all homes in the area. This means that you can contact a single agent, yet see every home which meets your homebuying objectives.

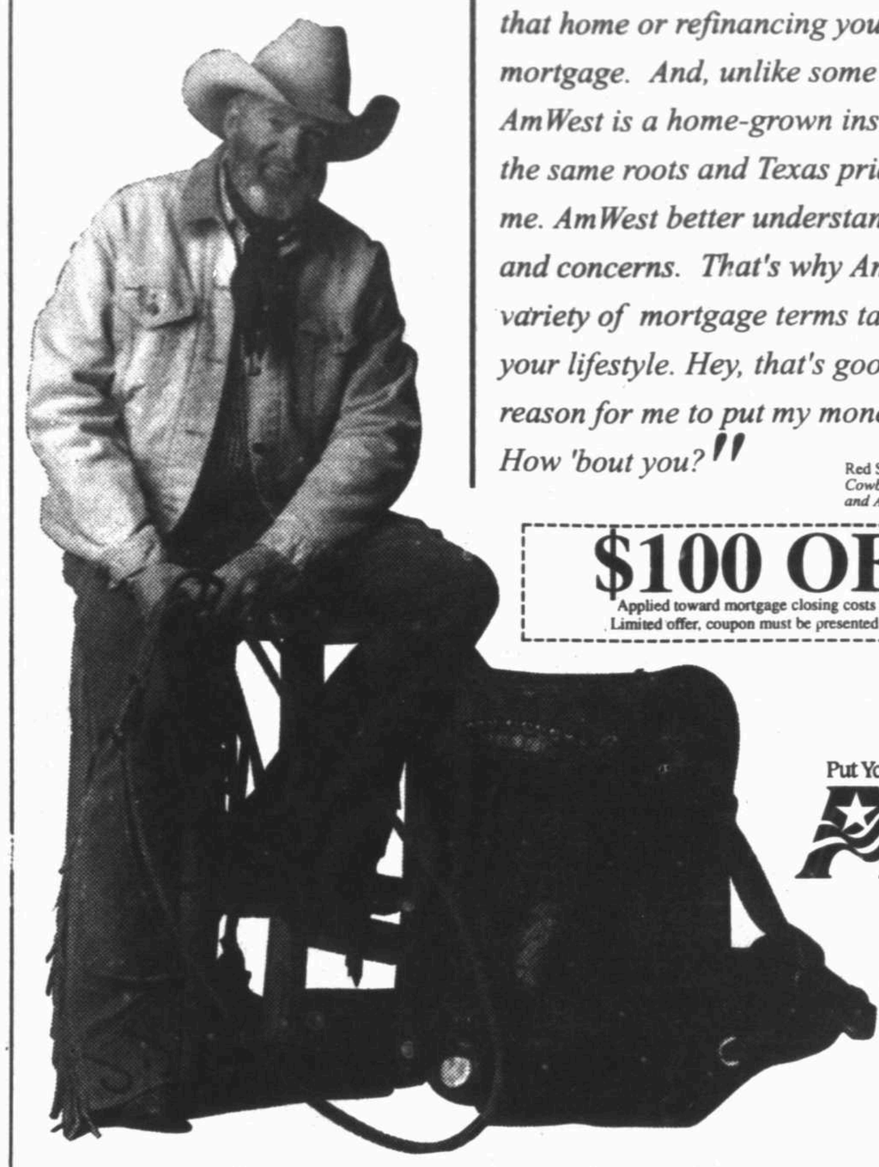
How does the process work? It begins with your selection of a single agent who you believe to be the best suited to conducting your home search. This person should be in real estate full-time, and be an active member of the local real estate community.

A thorough knowledge of properties currently for sale is essential. A willingness to listen and ask questions about your housing objectives is also critical to locating the right property. The individual you choose must be able to translate your wants and desires into a selection of available properties - each meeting the requirements you have established.

This agent's ability to research the market before you ever see a home is invaluable, and will save many wasted hours of looking at unsuitable properties. The agent will take care of all appointments, and coordinate the schedule of showings to maximize your available time.

Take the time to choose an agent carefully, then be ready to pour out your heart to that individual. The more information you are willing to share about your future home, the easier the search will be. Ask for a prequalification interview with a mortgage lender too. The lender will be able to explain the maximum mortgage for which you qualify.

"Ride on over to AmWest"



"Whether you're building, buying or refinancing, there's no better time than now to saddle up and ride on over to AmWest. With interest rates at a 20-year low, now is the time to look into buying that home or refinancing your present mortgage. And, unlike some banks, AmWest is a home-grown institution with the same roots and Texas pride as you and me. AmWest better understands our needs and concerns. That's why AmWest offers a variety of mortgage terms tailored to fit your lifestyle. Hey, that's good enough reason for me to put my money on AmWest. How 'bout you?"

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?
YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?
Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?
Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.

PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT

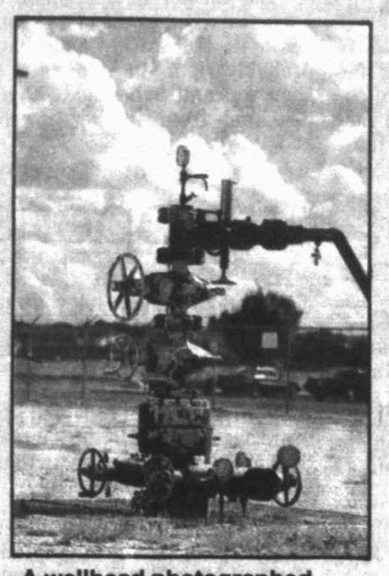
SUNDAY, October 10, 1993 SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

ENERGY BANKING

■ Who's lending what and how much? In November, the Oil Report will take an in depth look at energy banking in the Basin.

BRIEFING



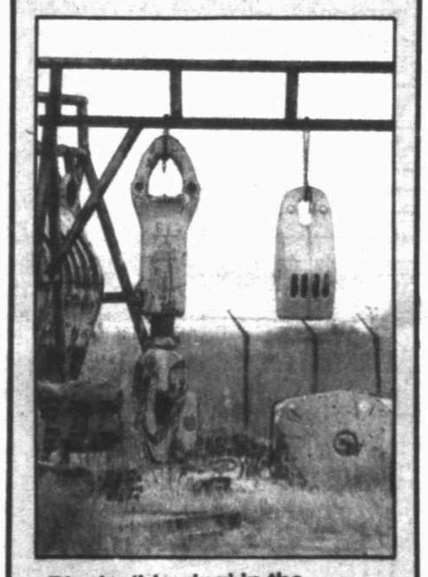
A wellhead photographed through a link fence creates a checkered effect.

Steady prices

Oil prices traded in an extremely narrow range much of this week, boosted slightly amid reports the United Nations and Iraq had failed to reach an agreement on Iraqi oil exports.

West Texas Intermediate closed at $18.49 on the Mercantile Exchange.

Natural gas prices slipped to $2.17 per thousand cubic feet.



Blocks 'blowing' in the wind, as rigs slump.

Slower drilling

Rig activity slumped during the last week of September, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

For the week that ended Oct. 1, the Permain Basin rig count slipped two to 122 from 124 the previous week; a year ago the count was 104.

Nationwide, the rig count dropped 10 to 856. The count remains well above the 756 seen a year earlier.

Among major producing states, Texas recorded the sharpest drop, seven rigs, while Oklahoma showed the highest gain, five rigs.

Gas caravan

DALLAS — A caravan of 14 natural gas-powered vehicles is set to make a 5,000-mile cross-country cruise organized by the Natural Gas Vehicle Coalition and Columbia Gas Distribution Cos.

The 18-day trip began Friday in New York and will finish Oct. 25 in San Diego. The tour is intended to spread awareness of natural gas as an alternative to gasoline and diesel fuel.

"Using natural gas in transportation can have a positive and profound impact on the U.S. economy and America's environment. It's here today, a plentiful American fuel, and it's the cleanest fuel readily available," said Boone Pickens, head of the Natural Gas Vehicle Coalition and chairman of Mesa Inc.

The caravan includes a variety of models from Chrysler, Ford and General Motors. It will make stops in more than 20 cities nationwide.

Tour spokesman Jay Rosser said gas pipelines will be tapped into with compressors where natural gas pumps are unavailable.

"We want to show that we have an infrastructure that is developing rapidly as far as fueling goes," he said.

Natural gas success story still unfolding

■ Western Gas Resources has grown 500 percent in five years while exploding in value.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

The adage warns: "Be kind to the people who work for you, lest your paths cross again in the future."

For Bill Sanderson, 63, that was advice that was well-received, because today Sanderson, an old Shell hand who has held a host of responsible positions in Midland, Venzuela, London, the North Sea, Houston and New Orleans, is now president and CEO of a company founded by one of his former youthful engineers at Shell.

The young engineer is Brion Wise, 47, founder of Western Gas Resources Inc. and together the youthful entrepreneur and the veteran "boss" have worked together to lead the company to extraordinary growth and have authored one of the top natural gas success stories of the decade.

Much of the growth has come in the Permian Basin of West Texas and New Mexico where the Denver-based company has extensive holdings in gathering systems and gas plants.

The company was started in 1971 with only $2,400 capitalization, and in its meager beginning was essentially a one-man consulting firm headquartered in one corner of Wise's bedroom. But that was only the starting point, Wise's vision was to install modest gas recovery systems to capture natural gas that was otherwise being vented and to sell it on a share basis.

It is a "share-cropping" formula that has worked and has made Western, which reported $600 million in revenues, the fourth largest independent producer of natural gas liquids in the U.S.

Only three years ago capitalization for the company was $157 million, today it stands at an impressive $1 billion. And, this year the Denver company was honored by the Rocky Mountain News as the No. 1 firm on the publications top 100 list.

Since going public four years ago, Western Gas Resources, through carefully controlled acquisitions and stock, has literally exploded in value. "When we went public in 1989," said Sander-

Bovaird builds Russia supply link

■ Oilfield supply company looks to build stores in Russia.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

Despite the political turmoil in the former Soviet Union, one oilfield supply company says it is moving forward with its plans to build an oilfield infrastructure in the troubled region.

"The hotels in Moscow are full of foreign investors from all over the world, simply because they recognize the tremendous potential there," says Darrell Fox, manager of product sales for Boviard Supply Co.

The Tulsa-based supply company is now working to fulfill a multi-million dollar order that could lead to the establishment of oilfield supply stores throughout the Confederation of Independent States (CIS).

Bovaird has already shipped two remanufactured Cardwell 60-ton workover rigs by air to Talon, Estonia where they will be used in oil fields in the Baltic states, and is due to ship 18 more by the end of the year.

"The rigs were completely reworked by Cardwell and adapted to the extremely cold weather in the area," said Fox.

Also on the order list are 400,000 feet of sucker rods, manufactured by Upco Inc. of Claremore, Oklahoma and Harbison-Fisher downhole pumps which are manufactured at Crowley, Does oilpatch hafta have a NAFTA?

As the debate over the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) rages, a question often asked in this part of the world is: "Will it be good or bad for the oilpatch?"

There are pros and cons to the agreement, otherwise there would be no debate. But basically the agreement looks good for Texas and the oilpatch. I don't know of a single oil group that doesn't favor the trade agreement, which has been supported by both Presidents Bush and Clinton.

Here are some of the positives as reflected by several oil groups.

■ While U.S. oil and gas companies would still not be allowed ownership of Mexican leases or minerals, and the oil business in Mexico will not be as free and open to Americans as in Canada, NAFTA will give U.S. companies increased rights. It also benefits Mexican exploration and production contracts, and arrangements like contract well drilling "will be replaced by negotiated incentive bonuses that mimic ownership rights," says the Natural Gas Supply Association, which represents companies that supply 90 percent of the domestic natural gas consumed annually:

■ HOWEVER, once NAFTA is in effect and both sides see the benefit of free trade and mutual investment, Mexican barriers to full involvement by U.S. firms in exploration and production in Mexico are likely to disappear. That will be good for U.S. oilmen.

■ FOR U.S. oil and gas consumers, particularly natural gas consumers, the agreement puts an entire continent into one market and will counter perceptions of shortages that plagued the confidence of natural gas consumers in the 1970s.

■ THE MARKET would be truly open in that it would prohibit either the U.S., Canada or Mexico from imposing minimum or maximum export or import prices for gas, and would allow suppliers to negotiate price with the consumer. This means that Pemex would no longer be the only customer for U.S. natural gas. It also means that we might see Pemex stations in Midland.

■ WHILE NATURAL gas coming from Canada would back U.S. gas out of some markets in the Northeast, West and Midwest, new Mexican gas markets would be open to producers in the Southwest, as Mexico strives to clean up its air, and as the maquiladora industry expands along the border. In the long run it would balance out.

■ U.S. INVOLVEMENT in the Mexican oil and gas industry will result in a more aggressive and successful petroleum industry, that will buy more goods and services from U.S. firms and result in a stronger cash flow from south of the border.

■ ALONG THE SAME LINE, the bidding process for technology, hardware and software would be opened to bidders in all three countries, clearing the way for the formation of new U.S. markets in Mexico.

■ MOST OF ALL NAFTA offers an opportunity to forge stronger trade relationships between the three coun-

SUCCESS: Gas firm's growth astounds son, "our stock sold for only $11.50 a share. Today, it is selling for about $44-$45 a share. Needless to say, we have made a lot of happy stockholders." It has also made a few happy owners, because Brion Wise and the three friends who each put up $600 each to capitalize the start-up company, still own 50 percent of the stock.

Sanderson said the original business strategy of the company was to grow by 20 percent each year, but that it had far exceeded those goals.

What accounts for the extraordinary growth? The company CEO attributes much of it to an excellent management and work force team at Western Gas Resources, but notes that a lot of it had to do with being the right company in the right market at the right time, making the right acquisitions, and doing the right thing.

"Natural gas is a good business, because it is clean-burning and good for the country. We, in turn, have focused on a part of a good business that is also good — the service end of the natural gas business. We do that very well, and it has paid off for us."

Sanderson, a native of Seagraves, and an engineering graduate from Texas Tech, calls Western Gas Resources a natural gas service company. Noting that Eddie Chiles formed the Western Co. at Seagraves, he says Western Gas Resources is now Seagraves' second link to a large service company.

"We provide services, on an entrepreneurial basis, that were once provided by the regulated companies — namely gathering, processing, transportation and marketing."

He said Western's formula is to buy wet gas at the wellhead, drop out the liquids for sale, sell the dry gas into an interstate pipeline and share the proceeds with the producer. A typical deal will bring 75 cents of every sales dollar to the producer and 25 cents to Western. Western also likes to do these "share" arrangements on a long term contract.

A typical deal Western makes with producers is like the one it recently made with Parker & Parsley to process its gas from the Spraberry field at the Midkiff plant south of Midland. Under the agreement, Western will take P&P gas for the next 20 years from the company's 600-well development drilling program. Along with that deal, however, Western sold P&P 20 percent of its Midkiff and Benedum systems.

While Western is active in all the gas producing basins of the U.S., the Permian Basin is and is expected to continue to be a core area for Western. The company now processes 150 million cubic feet of gas per day at its Midkiff, Benedum, Noel and Perkins gas plants and a former Parker Gas Co. treating plant near Pyote, and is looking to buy more.

"Natural gas is looking good in the Permian Basin," said Sanderson, who has been with Western for the past 12 years and once did a four year tour of duty with Shell Oil Co. in Midland.

"We are adding gas to our systems all the time, and are always on the lookout for new acquisitions. Anytime anything trades, we look at it. We would build plants if the opportunity arose, but this is a mature basin and the areas are pretty well covered for gas plants."

He sees a strengthening of natural gas prices this year, but says a shortage situation that caused natural gas prices to flare up would be the worse thing the industry could experience. "We will need a price of about $2.50 to $2.75 to get rigs running and replace reserves, and I think that's a price we can live with for awhile."

To gain marketing flexibility, Western, this year, constructed its own gas storage facility at the Katy Hub 20 miles west of Houston. The storage facility will have a total capacity of 32 BCF, of which 22 BCF will be working gas and 10 BCF cushion gas. It will have a draw down rate of 400 million cubic feet per day.

"This will allow us to convert constant flow to variable rate and command higher variable rate prices. There are 14 natural gas pipelines that pass within ten miles of this facility so we will be able to serve a lot of markets."

producers in Anadarko Basin.

■ Acquired numerous smaller properties and gathering systems in Oklahoma to consolidate with existing facilities, adding 233 wells, 326 miles of gathering system and 22 MMcf per day of gas throughout.

1991:

■ Purchased the Union Texas Petroleum's gas processing assets, adding 12 plants in Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma, and expanded into 5 gas-producing basins. The acquisition doubled miles of gathering systems, wells serviced, dedicated reserves and gas throughput, and more than doubled Western's NGL production.

1990:

■ Purchased the assets of Parker Gas Companies, Inc. including the 500-mile Giddings Gathering System, which gathers gas from the Austin Chalk formation in Texas.

1989:

■ Began operating the San Juan River Gas Plant in the San Juan River Basin, New Mexico and acquired the property in 1992.

■ Began operating the Midkiff Gas Plant in the Permian Basin of West Texas and acquired the property in 1990. Western replaced the 1950s-era technology lean oil processing plant with a high efficiency, automated cryogenic processing plant, resulting in higher recoveries and greater full efficiency.

1988:

■ Constructed the Lincoln Road Gas Plant in the Green River Basin, Wyoming.

■ Constructed the Four Corners Gas Plant in the Paradox Basin, Utah.

1986:

■ Acquired the Spearhead Ranch plant in the Powder River Basin, Wyoming.

1985:

■ Purchased the MCO Companies. Included were 5 processing plants in the Power River and Williston Basins, MIGC, Inc., an interstate pipeline company and MGTC, an intrastate pipeline company.

1984:

■ Constructed the Temple gas plant and Alexander gathering system in the Williston Basin, North Dakota.

1983:

■ Constructed the Amos Draw plant in the Power River Basin, Wyoming.

1981:

■ Formed Williston Gas Company, a joint venture between Western and a subsidiary of Enron Corp., and constructed the Williston Gas plant, operated in conjunction with the Teddy Rossevelt plant.

■ Constructed the Baker gas plant in Montana.

1979

■ Constructed the Teddy Roosevelt gas plant in the Williston Basin, North Dakota. The plant was expanded in 1983 to increase processing capacity and sulfur recoveries.

1977

■ Acquired and modified the Hartzog Draw plant in the Power River Basin, Wyoming

Texas.

"This is a multi-million dollar order," says Fox. "It calls for deliveries through January 1994, and after that can be rolled over for two years. If we are able to deliver, and I am sure we will, the sky is the limit." Fox said the contract was made with independent oilmen in Russia in April.

He said that eventually Bovaird hoped to have a full line of oilfield supplies in Russia.

"We had hoped to have a fully stocked store open by September 1 of this year, but now it looks like it might be next year."

Fox said the biggest task is deciding where to locate a store so that it would be convenient to the most oil production, and noted that eventually the company might have a number of supply stores in CIS.

"They need everything we have. Their petroleum technology is at least 30-40 years behind ours. We had a group from Russia in here recently looking at tongs and fishing tools, so those items will probably be on a future order."

Fox said Bovaird first became interested in sending supplies to Russia when he and John Bovaird attended the Russian Oil Show last April and were impressed with the great need and potential.

"The former Soviet Union has been described as the last great oil boom in the world, and that is probably right. In 14 days at the show we came in contact with a lot of oilmen from around the world and they all agree."

In addition to complete packaging of environmental, safety and training manuals the company will also offer online documentation, translations and graphics preparation, including assembly drawings.

Information Development has been in business since 1984 and some of its clients in the petroleum industry include: Exxon, Shell, Dow Chemical, Baker Oil Tools, and the Ocean Drilling Program for Texas A&M University. Information Development also has clients in distribution, telecommunications, manufacturing, software, and the U.S. and Texas state governments.

By offering fixed bids and strict project controls, IDI officials say they are able to keep production on schedule and within budget.

Officials for the company say they first became interested in Midland when the company set up a booth at the 1992 Permian Basin Oil Show and learned that there was a tremendous need for technical manual preparation in the Permian Basin.

Gas association offers support of NAFTA

Staff report

QUEBEC, CANADA — American Gas Association President Michael Baly said that the "Northern American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) will have a beneficial effect on trade that will mean more and better jobs for Americans, for Mexicans and Canadians."

"What NAFTA is really about is increasing trade. By lowering tariffs, it will make it easier for Mexico, Canada and the United States to move goods and services across our borders. That means more prosperity for all three nations," Baly told a Gaz Metropolitain Natural Gas Industry Forum meeting in Quebec City.

"In the U.S. for example, Mexico is our fastest growing foreign market, with more than 650,000 jobs depending on this trade. NAFTA will only improve those numbers, producing an estimated 300,000 more jobs," he said.

Baly noted that a common goal of all three nations is to improve the environment. "Since there are no tariffs on the smog and acid rain that each of us sends back and forth by burning high-sulfur fuels, the least we can do is reduce tariffs on the one fuel that fights pollution - clean burning natural gas."

"NAFTA's economic effect on the natural gas industry will be equally positive. It permits North American companies to negotiate directly with Mexican buyers, it allows private ownership of independent power plants and cogenernation facilities in Mexico, and it will help open portions of the Mexican energy sector to competitive business practices," Baly said.

Baly noted that right now the United States exports natural gas to Mexico and imports it from Canada. Canada's gas exports currently represent several billion dollars in revenues and are projected to rise 14 percent this year. Because of NAFTA, the United States and Canada will be able to export more natural gas to Mexico, he said.

"A.G.A. will do all it can to assure passage of NAFTA by Congress, as well as increase the cooperation between the U.S. natural gas industry and that of our neighbors - and friends - to the north and south," Baly concluded.

PITTS: Oilpatch stands to gain from NAFTA

(From 1E)

tries that will benefit more people. As Robert D. McTeer Jr., president of the Dallas Federal Reserve Bank, points out: "NAFTA is a step forward and not a step backward. The fall of the Soviet Union clearly represents the consequence of withdrawing from the global market."

Now for the down side. Most critics point to job loss, "the giant sucking sound" as Ross Perot puts it, and the cultural and economic chasm between Mexico and the U.S. and Canada.

With the exception of Quebec, Canada and the U.S. are a cut off the same block, sharing the same language, background, values and level of prosperity. So close are the two countries that many Canadian youngsters even aspire to grow up to be president — of the United States.

Mexico, on the other hand, is truly a foreign country. Geographically the two countries are separated by only a fence or few feet of water, but in terms of culture and economics they are worlds and decades apart. Mexico has a language, customs, history, laws and values and that are much closer to Peru than Texas.

Even a hundred years of peaceful coexistence between the U.S. and Mexico has blurred the cultural differences only somewhat along the U.S. border. There are miles to go before the cultural and economic chasm between the U.S. and Mexico ceases to be a problem.

Then there is the problem in doing business. For decades Mexican laws, culture and corruption, have made it not only difficult but dangerous to do business in Mexico, and it has taken a huge toll on the nation's economy. Even as the NAFTA story unfolds, horror stories of overt corruption, sour business deals, and even prison terms for American business men who get cross ways with Mexican power brokers continue to unfold.

Mexico's backward business practices and policies have been most detrimental to itself and its people. One of the richest nations in the world in terms of natural resources, Mexico by western standards is a poor country. It would be naive to assume that this disparity will not have an impact upon U.S.-Mexico businesss relations.

But, having pointed out the negative, it should be said that the cultural and economic chasm, is not a good enough reason to reject NAFTA. The distance between the two countries needs to be narrowed for our own benefit. NAFTA may not bring Mexico as close as Canada, but it can help.

Opponents of NAFTA fear the loss of jobs. And, while there may be some job loss in the short term, in the long run the removal of barriers to trade and investment will invariably enhance competition in the North American and global markets, resulting in more jobs.

Free flowing, unfettered interstate trade has been good for America, because it made more goods available to more people at lower prices. Imagine what an economic cripple the United States would be today if each state had been allowed to set up trade barriers — if New Mexico could have made it as hard for Texas operators to do oil business in that state as Mexico. Imagine passing customs at each state line in the U.S.

By the same token, international trade enhanced by NAFTA will eventually be as good for America as interstate trade. That's all America — including the oilpatch.

Mitchell Energy leases out storage space

Staff report

THE WOODLANDS — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp., and its subsidiary, Winnie Pipeline Company, announced that Natural Gas Clearinghouse (NGC) has leased one billion cubic feet (Bcf) of storage space at Michell's new Spindletop Natural Gas Storage Facility near Beaumont.

Under the terms of the 10-year lease agreement, which went into effect July 1, Mitchell will provide Natural Gas Clearinghouse guaranteed capacity in Winnie Pipeline's recently opened salt dome gas storage facility, as well as access to and from numerous interstate and intrastate pipelines in Southeast Texas.

The $50-million-plus Spindletop facility, which opened last winter, currently has one partially completed cavern in operation with a working capacity of 1.7 Bcf.

The company stopped work on the first cavern in order to begin storage operations immediately but will expand it to its full 6 Bcf working gas capacity as soon as a second cavern, now under constructions, is completed.

By 1997, when both caverns are in operation, the facility will have a total working gas capacity of 12 Bcf. Ultimately, Mitchell could expand the facility to six caverns capable of storing up to 36 Bcf of natural gas.

"This agreement is a perfect marriage," said Allen J. Tarbutton, Jr., president of Mitchell Energy's Transmission and Processing Division. "Natural Gas Clearinghouse is one of the most successful companies in the gas marketing business. Having a customer of their caliber and reputation on board with Spindletop at this early stage validates our beliefs that storage is key to marking natural gas the nation's number-one fuel source," he said.

Tarbutton said Mitchell originally designed the Spindletop facility to serve its Winnie Pipeline customers in the Golden Triangle area.

However, as the project developed, the company saw an opportunity to expand the facility and offer storage to other interstate and intrastate pipelines, marketers, industries and utility gas users.

He added that Winnie soon will complete a pipeline connection to the Texaco Sabine Pipeline, giving Spindletop customers direct access to the New York Mercantile Exchange gas futures trading center, known as Henry Hub, located in Vermilion Parish, Louisiana.

'We were particularly attracted to Spindletop because the space is available now and will, therefore make an immediate contribution in terms of our preparations for Order 636 implementation this winter.

C.L. Watson,
CEO, Natural Gas Clearinghouse

According to C.L. Watson, chairman, CEO and president of NGC, "The availability of storage in the Spindletop caverns provides NGC with greater flexibility for making sales and purchases under the most advantageous market conditions. Winnie's interconnect with Sabine also provides us with access to the Henry Hub.

"We were particularly attracted to Spindletop because the space is available now and will, therefore, make an immediate contribution in terms of NGC's preparations for Order 636 implementation this winter," he said.

Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. is among the nation's largest independent producers of natural gas, natural gas liquids and oil. The company also has sizable real estate interests in the Houston-Galveston area.

NGC is the nation's largest independent gas marketer with sales averaging approximately 3 Bcf per day. NGC also owns and operates seven gas processing plants, over 1,400 miles of gas gathering systems and markets nearly 30,000 barrels per day of crude oil. The company also is actively engaged in other joint venture storage projects which will serve Midwest, Mid-Atlantic and Northeast markets.

Smith begins acquisitions

HOUSTON — Smith International, Inc. says it has begun an active acquisition program to complement and expand its existing product lines and services for oil and gas drilling, well construction and production management.

Smith is currently in discussions regarding the potential acquisition of product lines, divisions or entire companies to which it can add significant new value with its patented ultra-hard materials and drilling technologies, its Fast Cycle engineering processes and international customer service organization, according to Chairman and CEO Doug Rock.

"Smith International's technologies and customer service have made us profitable, the number one company in the North American drill bit market, and the reliability leader in downhole tools and services," Rock said. "This has produced consecutive quarterly increases in revenue and earnings from continuing operations that will exceed analysts' current estimates for at least the coming third and fourth quarters."

"We plan to leverage Smith's technology and worldwide service infrastructure to extend this same level of performance to the products and services we acquire, particularly by using fast-turnaround engineering and manufacturing capabilities and our patented polycrystalline diamond coating to set and meet higher price-performance standards in new market niches," Rock added.

Smith Executive Vice President Loren K. Carroll said the company has approximately $120 million in cash, enabling it to consider both small and large acquisitions on the basis of cash, debt or equity transaction.

"We have used the $270 million proceeds from the sale of our directional drilling business to effectively eliminate our debt, end $1.7 million in annual preferred stock dividends, settle our only significant pending lawsuit for $19.5 million, and begin a buyback of shares," Carroll said.

"This creates the optimum positioning for Smith's future growth: a financially strong, increasingly profitable company that will selectively acquire products and services which, combined with Smith's current products and service network, will provide better answers to our customers' problems," Carroll added.

PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT

Business Review

An Oil Report Special Feature

New variation on oil & gas property auction announced by PABCO Energy, Inc.

The climate for "doing business" in the industry today is probably better than it has been since 1984, the last high point of action.

Last year alone, it was estimated that $10 billion of oil and gas properties were available and $4.5 billion changed hands.

With this information in mind, Hal McClure, the president of Pabco Energy Inc. has been promoting what he calls "Trade Days".

These are marketplace situations, based on a forum concept, where deals can be transacted on a more personal and consistent basis.

It gives industry members, who wish to conduct business and get information, an opportunity to meet 'face to face' with minimal risks and obligations.

McClure believes that this addresses and provides an answer to an industry requirement..

The advantage to this plan of broad industry participation is that no one single organization realizes financial gain from promoting the Trade Days idea.

The intention is to organize the marketplace under the umbrella of a non-profit corporation whose members are the sponsoring companies that provide the leadership role.

The key to Trade Days is the regularly scheduled meetings provided for the purpose of conducting business.

McClure's predictions for the future of the Trade Days concept are that Trade Days will eventually become the place where energy companies meet to to exchange commodities and ideas as well as make deals.

Houston, Texas was targeted for the first Trade Day which was launched October 7th, for more information about future Trade Days call Pabco at (918) 584-3111.

Triton settles lawsuits

DALLAS (AP) — Triton Energy Corp. said it has reached an agreement to settle all its outstanding shareholder and derivative lawsuits. The company's share of the settlement will be $2.7 million.

Triton said Tuesday that it also has reached an agreement in principle with its insurance carriers regarding their funding of settlement and related costs.

Triton expects it can cover its $2.7 million share with existing loss reserves, and the settlement won't have an effect on first quarter results, said Linda Covington, manager of investor relations.

Seven shareholders filed several lawsuits against the company in June 1992 following a drop in the price of Triton's stock, Ms. Covington said.

"We decided to go ahead and settle these and move on with the business of oil and gas," she said.

Ms. Covington declined to reveal the amount of the settlement.

Several conditions still must be met to make the settlement final, including negotiation of definitive agreements and court approval, the company said.

Mesa Inc. dedicates new plant

DALLAS (AP) — Mesa Inc. has dedicated its new, $43 million gas processing plant in Satanta, Kan.

The plant in the Hugoton field can process up to 250 million cubic feet of natural gas per day and includes the capability to extract helium.

Supply will come from 953 wells Mesa operates in the southwest Kansas field. Mesa's gas has been processed at other facilities, including the Dallas company's existing plant in Ulysses, Kan.

Mesa said it also will pursue third-party processing opportunities to utilize excess capacity at the Satanta and Ulysses plants.

Construction of the plant began a year ago and was completed in August, when start-up operations began.

"The Satanta plant and multiple inter- and intra-state pipeline connections gives us the processing capability and marketing flexibility we need to capitalize on the increased deliverability from our concentrated reserves," said Boone Pickens, Mesa's chairman and chief executive officer.

Alaskans face a future not underwritten by Prudhoe Bay

By Joel Connelly
Hearst News Service

ANCHORAGE — The latest fiscal gusher from Alaska's oil boom came last week, with the announcement that this year's dividend from the Alaska Permanent Fund would put $949 into the pocket of every permanent resident of the state.

The annual check, income from a wisely invested fund totaling nearly $13billion, is the most visible windfall from the icy, windswept oil fields of Alaska's North Slope. But production is dropping, notably in the giant Prudhoe Bay field.

In the next few years, the state's 550,000 residents must confront a future no longer underwritten by Prudhoe Bay.

What will happen to Alaska as its greatest source of revenue continues its steady decline?

No one knows. The state appears to be drifting. Planning for the likelihood of a future without massive oil revenues doesn't seem to be a priority.

"Our lifestyles are going to have to change," said Bill Allen, head of Veco International, a major oilfield services company.

"We're going to end up at the same place whether we spend money foolishly or wisely," said former Anchorage Mayor Tony Knowles.

"I would compare us to a person standing on the 10th floor of a building. He has an option of jumping or taking the elevator. He ends up at the same spot. How he gets there makes the whole difference."

Prudence hasn't always been part of the Alaska psyche.

The state spends nearly four times as much on each of its citizens as the average spent by all other states. It sends them an annual check, pays a longevity bonus to senior citizens and charges neither an income tax nor a state sales tax.

"Alaska is the only state in the union that pays instead of taxes its citizens," John Strohmeyer, writer-in-residence at the University of Alaska-Anchorage, wrote in his recent book, "Extreme Conditions."

While the state did have wisdom to set aside some oil income in the permanent fund, it has spent with abandon. It has wasted hundreds of millions of dollars in misspent investments trying to develop Alaskan industries.

Oil money makes up a whopping 85 percent of state income. A drop of $3 a barrel in petroleum prices, as happened this year, can leave Alaska facing a $300million shortfall.

Although squeezed, the state can still go on spending binges.

Earlier this year, $650million flowed in when the state settled a tax case with British Petroleum. Gov. Walter Hickel and legislators used the money to launch a major new capital construction program.

"They just spent it all. It's the whole history of this state," said Lee Gorsuch, director of the Institute of Social and Economic Research at the University of Alaska-Anchorage.

North Slope production is on the wane, and world oil prices are dropping, too. The down curve will continue. The state forecasts North Slope output at about 1 million barrels a day at the end of the decade.

In the past year, Arco Alaska, the state's most successful explorer, announced a major discovery called Kuvlum, deep in waters of the Beaufort Sea.

The company doesn't know how much oil is in the field. It stresses that at least a billion barrels of oil must be present for development to be economical. "It's got to be big," said James Weeks, senior vice president of Arco Alaska.

Another find is Sunfish in Cook Inlet, southwest of Anchorage. Arco says it will go ahead with development there.

It takes up to 10 years to turn a discovery into a producing oil field. Whatever their sizes, the new discoveries cannot hope to duplicate North Slope fields that have supplied as much as 25 percent of U.S. domestic oil.

"Even if Sunfish comes through like they say, at 750 million barrels, it's one-fifteenth the size of Prudhoe Bay," said Veco International's Allen.

A high school dropout, Allen came to Alaska in 1968 to work on an Arco Alaska oil platform in Cook Inlet. He has built a company that employs 3,300 people, 1,800 of them in Alaska. Veco was prime contractor on cleanup of the Exxon Valdez oil spill, taking in more than $800million.

"Back when we were putting 2 million barrels a day down the (Trans-Alaska) pipeline, if you took tourism and mining and fish and forestry — and added them all together — it would have amounted to 15 days' production off the North Slope," Allen said.

The thought of a change in lifestyle sends shivers down many Alaskans' backs. In their minds, oil has provided for the best days of their lives.

"I never thought I would live in a house like this," said Marvin Mangus, 69, a geologist who helped find Arco's breakthrough well on the North Slope.

Mangus can remember a time when unpaved streets kicked up dust in Fairbanks, when salmon were caught in streams flowing through Anchorage, and when he and fellow geologists were the only people to set foot in the Brooks Range. "Thank God I was there 35 years ahead of the crowd," he said.

Today, Mangus helps raise money for public radio, serves on a museum board, and gives oil-painting lessons to a banker friend. He is aware, however, that an era of limits has arrived. The museum is "pounding the streets" looking for money because the state will no longer fund its budget.

Nor does Mangus see any more discoveries on a scale of Prudhoe Bay. "It looks like all of our elephants on shore have been found."

In industry jargon, an "elephant" is a big, lucrative oil field. A 200million-barrel field qualifies in the lower 48. With Alaska's costs, 500million barrels is the threshold on land, more if the find is underwater.

The oil industry has grown far more complicated and expensive. It cost $4.5 million to put in Arco's exploratory well in 1967. The same well today would run $50million to $60million.

Alaska is a big land, and its boosters dream big dreams.

Over the past 15 years, though, some of those dreams have come a cropper. Particularly disastrous were a series of economic diversification schemes spawned in the early 1980s by Gov. Jay Hammond.

Trying to make Alaska an agricultural state, bureaucrats launched a dairy farming industry and tried to make the Delta area, southeast of Fairbanks, into Alaska's barley-farming capital. The result was a debacle with bankrupt farmers, empty, rusting railroad cars and an abandoned, half-finished grain terminal in Seward.

"Counting the money spent on grain terminals, slaughterhouses, the creamery and railroad cars, the state's expenditures exceeded $100 million," Strohmeyer wrote in "Extreme Conditions."

A state-financed boondoggle called the Alaska Renewable Resources Corp. threw away more millions in schemes ranging from a mushroom farm to woodfire power houses.

Tubing liners catch on

By Ellen Hopkins

WESTERN FALCON INC. of Odessa is one of only three companies in the country that is putting polyethylene liners in tubing.

Bill Jackson, part owner of Western Falcon, said the liners reduce corrosion and help recondition tubing that may be pitted so it can withstand higher pressure. He said as oil companies recover used tubing from wells, they line it with this polyethylene and then use it for line pipe.

Hopkins

Jackson said the idea is catching on so well that Western Falcon has purchased more land to expand the business.

PERMIAN TANK, a manufacturer of steel and fiberglass tanks, separators and heater treators, has expanded its markets, added manufacturing facilities, and diversified its product line.

Mike Banas, marketing director and sales manager, said the company tapped into a new market in China for its high-pressure gas production equipment, i.e. separators.

Additional manufacturing facilities are now located in Farmington, N.M. and Lupton, Co. The latter serves Permian's steel tank customers located in Wyoming, Utah and Colorado.

The company's Midland facility, which manufactures fiberglass tanks, has been expanded to meet its consistent demand of eight to 12 tanks a day.

Banas said Permian Tank has diversified by adapting a tank design for Cashcan Inc. in San Antonio. Permian Tanks designer, Joe Birdwell, worked with Cashcan's design for a recycling collection tank, 18 ft. by 14 ft., into which customers drop aluminum cans.

Banas said the cans are counted inside the Cashcan recepticle and customers are immediately paid 5 cents per can. He said Cashcan is requesting 70 carbons teel tanks per month. HEB Grocery stores are already using Cashcans in their parking lots and Wal-Mart has expressed an interest.

TECTROL is also expanding its business with a new item called a non-rising stem steel gate valve.

John Martin, manager and vice president, said this item covers 275 to 720 lbs. working pressure, is manufactured at Tectrol in Odessa, handled through a master distributor in the northeast, and is targeted at the gas distribution industry.

Tectrol also manufactures heater chokes and level controls which are sold locally. Martin said a popular item is Tectol's pneumatic valve that is only 1/4-inch in size and often called a snap valve.

Rules to cover underground storage safety

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has proposed new safety rules to govern storage of all types of hydrocarbons in underground salt formations and productive or depleted reservoirs.

The three proposed rules represent a Commission effort to clarify and strengthen state regulations for storage of hazardous liquids and natural gas, and also comply with mandates from the Texas Legislature adopted earlier this year on the safety of underground hydrocarbon storage.

In August the Commission published the rules in the Texas Register and this month conducted a public hearing to receive comments. The agency's technical staff is now studying the comments received and will soon present the proposed rules to the full Commission for final approval.

We've worked to make certain the proposed rules include more rigorous and detailed safety standards than are required under existing state regulations for underground storage of natural gas and liquid and liquified hyrocarbons said commission officials.

"The Commission is at the forefront of developing comprehensive rules for these facilities that will set the standard for the nation and help ensure public safety," said Barry Williamson, commissioner.

Rule 95 addresses storage of liquid and liquified hydrocarbons in underground salt formations. The rule has detailed permitting and safety requirements for the design, construction, operation, and maintenance of underground facilities that store such hydrocarbons. The rule also requires installation of leak detection measures and devices and the development of emergency response plans, which must include plans for citizen evacuation.

The rule also requires storage facility operators to apply to amend existing permits or orders before exceeding the authorized cavern capacity, adding storage wells, or increasing the volume of stored hydrocarbons above the authorized maximum.

Rule 96 would require a Commission permit to store natural gas or other gases in a productive or depleted reservoir, and specifies information that applicants must submit for such a permit. The rule includes design, construction, and operating requirements for gas injection and storage of these reservoirs, such as pressure monitoring and gas metering requirements, and well construction and integrity testing requirements.

In addition, the rule requires development of safety plans and employee and subcontractor safety training programs, and installation of gas detectors, warning systems, and alarms.

Rule 97 would require a Commission permit to create, operate, or maintain a facility for storage of natural gas or other gases in an underground salt formation. The rule establishes permitting and operating requirements, such as pressure monitoring and gas metering.

Kellogg gets refinery contract

HOUSTON (AP) — Lyondell-Citgo Refining Company Ltd. has named the M.W. Kellogg Company of Houston to coordinate its $800 million refinery expansion and upgrade program.

The upgrade of Lyondell-Citgo's Houston refinery, the nation's ninth largest, is expected to be completed within four years and boost heavy crude processing capacity from 130,000 to 200,000 barrels a day, Kellogg said Tuesday.

Lyondell-Citgo Refining, based in Houston, is owned by Lyondell Petrochemical Co. and Citgo Petroleum Corp.

The M.W. Kellogg Co. is an international engineering and construction subsidiary of Dresser Industries, Inc. of Dallas.

Hadson Energy names new chief executive

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — William J. Johnson, president and chief executive officer of Apache Corp., has been elected a director and chairman and chief executive officer of Hadson Energy Resources Corp., Hadson announced.

Apache is a 66.5 percent stockholder of Hadson Energy.

John C. Capshaw, who had been chairman and chief executive officer, remains as president and a director of the board.

Apache acquired its interest in Hadson Energy in July and reached a merger agreement in August for Hadson Energy to merge with a wholly owned subsidiary of Apache.

The merger must be approved by two-thirds of Hadson Energy stockholders, other than Apache and its affiliates.

Hadson is based in Oklahoma City. Apache is based in Houston.

Four directors of the board of Hadson Energy also have resigned for personal reasons, the company said.

Those resigning were J. Michael Adcock, Gordon F. Ahalt, Robert P. Capps and William C. Rankin.

Adcock, Ahalt and Capps were representatives of Hadson Corp., a former 49 percent stockholder in Hadson Energy.

Shell investment

Shell Oil Co. made headlines this week when it announced it would invest $1.2 billion to develop a huge new oil and gas discovery in deep waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

Jack Little, Shell executive vice president of exploration and production, stands in front of a computer rending of Shell's "Mars" tension leg platform.

Wiser buys properties from Mobil

DALLAS — The Wiser Oil Co. has announced the purchase of oil and gas properties from Mobil Exploration & Producing U.S. Inc. and the Mobil Foundation, Inc. for $58.8 million in cash. Wiser will operate over 75% of the production from these properties and approximately 80% of the acquired reserves are in the Proved Developed reserve category.

The properties being acquired are in 16 fields in the Permian Basin of West Texas and New Mexico. The average net daily production for the properties in May 1993 was 2,250 barrels of oil and 10.5 MMCF of gas. This acquisition will increase Wiser's daily oil and gas production by approximately 60% and 70%, respectively. Since these properties are in one of the company's main focus areas, the incremental increase of general and administrative expense is expected to be modest.

The properties included in the acquisitions represent a mix of primary, secondary and tertiary producing operations. Production is typical of Permian Basin fields with long lives and predictable production profiles and reserves. Wiser plans to begin its exploitation and development on these properties in the fourth quarter of 1993.

These acquisitions were funded using internal resources and through a new revolving line of credit with NationsBank of Texas, N.A. This newly-completed credit line provides for up to $125 million subject to customary terms and conditions.

BRIEFS

The principal increases will be from drilling revenues in the Gulf of Mexico.

Commission forecasts October production

AUSTIN — The Texas Railroad Commission has forecast Texas oil production for October at 1,683,713 barrels per day, based on purchaser nominations, and set gas production allowables for prorated fields in the state to meet market demand of 163,518,858 Mcf (thousand cubic feet). For prorated gas fields, the October 1993 allowable represents an increase of 1,344,267 Mcf when compared to actual production of 162,174,591 Mcf in October 1992.

Commission issues horizontal permits

The Railroad Commission granted 47 permits for horizontal wells statewide in August, reflecting a slight decline in activity from the previous month.

By comparison, 52 permits for the advanced technology wells were issued in July, 62 in June and 44 in May.

Altogether, the Railroad Commission has issued 426 permits for horizontal wells so far in 1993. In all, a grand total of 3,348 permits for horizontal wells have been granted in Texas since 1984.

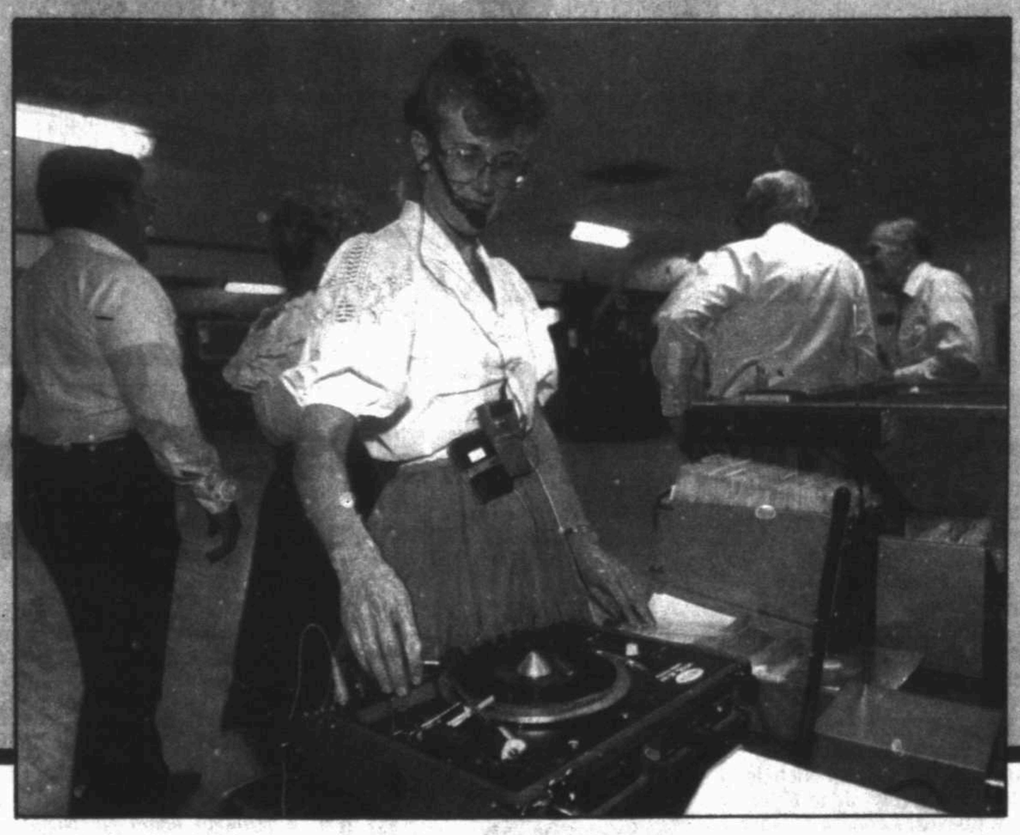
M-Squarena is home to not only round dancers, but square dancers as well.

MAKING THE ROUNDS

Paul and Vera Wecker perform some steps they have perfected during the time they have been involved in learning round dancing.



Carol Franklin, cuer of Funtastics Round Dance Club, selects the music for the group to dance to during a recent meeting of intermediate round dancers.

Lunge, twist, recover, forward triple, two triples to semi, and spin maneuver may sound like football plays, but actually they are cues used in round dancing.

As the name implies, round dancing is related to square dancing. Even the clothes worn for round dancing are the same as those worn for square dancing — big, full skirts with lots of petticoats or prairie skirts for women; western shirts and slacks for men.

Bettie Hooper — who, with her husband, Herman, has been a round dancer for about 10 years — explained it this way: "Round dancing is ballroom dancing with cued commands."

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Midlanders enjoy opera in Santa Fe

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Cool, delightful days filled with good music, good food and good fellowship were enjoyed recently by a group of Midlanders, who participated in the annual Opera-lovers adventure in Santa Fe, N.M., sponsored by the Music Ministry of Midland's First United Methodist Church.

McKnight-Harrison

The group enjoyed performances of Mozart's masterpiece, "The Magic Flute," with its dazzling stage effects, and the romantic richness of Puccini's "La Boheme." Several individuals also attended a performance of Handel's "Xerxes," featuring international opera star Frederica von Stade.

Other activities enjoyed by the group were shopping visits to Santa Fe's Canyon Road, in addition to the fascinating shops around the historic plaza, high tea in the lobby of the Hotel St. Francis, backstage tours of the opera house, dinner theater productions at La Casa Sena, the famous flamenco dancer Maria Benitez, relaxing moments at the 10,000 Waves Japanese Health Spa and dining in some of the city's famous eateries, including La Tertulia, Julians, The Ore House and Pasquale's.

An additional highlight was the attendance at a pre-performance buffet dinner and opera lecture by Dr. Lawrence Cave under large tents on the opera grounds prior to the performance of "The Magic Flute.

Making the trip were Jane Schulte, Margaret Cerf, Mary White, Janis Chapman, Ruby Mae Graves, Sue Cason, Aida Dunlap, Lulene and Arthur Oldman, Marge and Tom Savage, Nita Helmer, Joyce Leach and her aunt, Margo Farrar of San Antonio, Lois Faris of Big Spring, Jane and Brad Kisner and Jane and Bob Ward.

Joining the Wards were their daughters, Carol Ward of Dallas and Teresa Compton of Longview and Jane's brother and his wife, John and Nancy Branson, and nephew and niece, Grant and Stewart Steffen, all from Denver, Colo.

AFTER A HONEYMOON to Santa Fe, Fredericksburg attorney David Herbig and his bride, the former Carla Fishel of Houston, will make their home in Fredericksburg. Both former Midlanders, they were married Saturday afternoon at Fredericksburg's St. Barnabas Episcopal Church. A reception followed in the church gardens.

Parents of the couple are Diana and Chuck Fishel of Littleton, Colo., and formerly of Midland, and Anne and Jack Herbig.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted Friday evening by the groom's parents on the patio of The Gallery Restaurant. A brunch was hosted Saturday morning at The Peach Tree Tea Room by Mynan Feldman, Angela Fishel and Krystal Kainer.

Pre-nuptial festivities in Midland included a "Mexican Fiesta" party in the home of Elizabeth and Byron Greaves and also hosted by Kay and Ralph Arrell, Sudy and H.G. Bedford, Susan and Ron Britton, Dana and Clarence Chandler, Marion and Bob Frazier, Bobbie and Ed Lookabaugh and Sarah and Russell Neisig. Carla had the pleasure of seeing a number of former classmates, whom she knew while living in Midland and attending Lee High School.

There also was a "Wine and Cheese" party and "Honey-Do" shower in the Midland home of Marilee and Ed Runyan. The other host couples were Karen and Doug Eisele, Marianne and Will Green, Sherry and Jerry Hewett, Polly and Niran Kellogg, Jean and Wes Pittman and Kay and George Smith.

Houston parties included a shower at Fulbright & Jaworski, where Carla worked as a legal assistant, and a "Christmas in September" party for Carla and David hosted by Barbe and Walt Bozeman.

MIDLANDERS Melissa Pavlas and Shawn Cooper were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at Sacred Heart Catholic Church in Austin. A dinner reception and dance was hosted by the bride's parents, Margie and Gene Pavlas of Austin, in the SPJST Hall in Elgin following the wedding.

The groom's parents, Patty and Dave Cooper of Midland, and his sister, Marisha Cooper of Nacogdoches, hosted the rehearsal dinner at Austin's historic Scholz Garten on Friday evening.

Pre-nuptial parties began in Midland in July with a "Meet Our Future Daughter-in-law" brunch at Annie's Gingerbread House given by Patty Cooper. Special guests included Melissa's mother, as well as Shawn's grandmothers, Martha Belle (Mrs. Marvis) Bretz of Dighton, Kan., and Virginia Cooper of Maryville, Mo., and his aunt, Cathie Cooper of Garden City, Kan.

In August, a "Fiesta Honey-Do" party honoring Shawn was held in the home of Betty and Don Tomlin and was co-hosted by Cindy and Heasley Rook, Bonnie and Jerry Jordan and Sue and Francis Johns.

The Visiting Nurse Service of Midland hosted a miscellaneous shower in Melissa's honor in September.

Out-of-town festivities included a kitchen shower in College Station and a lingerie shower in Austin.

Following a honeymoon to Lake Louise, Canada, the couple will be at home in Midland, where the bride is a social worker for the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland, and Shawn is employed by Big D Lining Systems Co.

AND LAST but not least: From Odessa comes word that St. John's Episcopal School is looking for former students to be a part of the school's new alumni program.

The "St. John's School Alumni Star Search," which is in progress, will include a first-ever homecoming and open house on Oct. 24. Organizers are asking former students, many of whom live in Midland, and parents to contact the school in order to update addresses and provide other information.

The school, which now offers classes for students in pre-kindergarten through sixth grade, got its start in 1950 as a preschool.

Incomplete records from the early years are making it difficult to find former students. "Our records are accurate back to 1981, but before that, we have little to go on," according to Marge Armstrong, a member of the St. John's School Board and chairman of the Alumni Affairs Committee.

In addition to the homecoming, other plans in the works include a periodic newsletter and an annual fund-raising effort.

DANCE: Steps are easy to learn

(From 1F)

A brochure from Funtastics Round Dance Club in Midland offered the following definition: "Simply stated, round dancing is couple dancing using choreographed routines to definite arrangements of music, with all couples doing the same steps at the same time. While the most common rhythms used are two-step and waltz, all rhythms from folk and ballroom are used."

Anyone — even those with no previous dance experience of any kind — can do round dancing, club members say, although many people have discovered round dancing through its relatives such as square dancing, ballroom dancing or folk dancing.

Lynn Myers said he and his wife, Sylvia, began round dancing about three years ago after learning to square dance. "It just seemed like the natural thing to do," he said, adding that round dance steps can be done on an ordinary dance floor, "especially if it's country/western (dancing)."

Mrs. Hooper said she and her husband had a specific reason for becoming round dancers. "When the last two kids graduated from high school and we faced the 'empty nest' syndrome, we wanted something to do and the bar scene just didn't cut it. We needed something else to fill the bill."

TEN YEARS LATER, they are still enthusiastic about round dancing.

Carol and Harold Franklin began round dancing at the same time, after they met while square dancing. "He was the one who wanted to start round dancing," Mrs. Franklin said.

Today, Mrs. Franklin is the cuer for the group, giving them their commands while they circle the room.

Steps such as butterfly position, New Yorker, wrap and unwrap, and crabwalk sound confusing to a novice, but 10-year veteran Mrs. Hooper said round dancing is not difficult to learn. "It's just like anything else — you learn it one thing at a time and build on it."

Franklin said, "How long does it take to learn? How long does it take to learn how to play golf? The point is, it's an on-going thing.

"Basic lessons are for 26 weeks (once a week). Round dancing has phase levels from one to six. When you get through the basics (beginning classes), you are through phase two. The next two phases probably take a couple of years," he said.

The Franklins have been round dancing since January 1987, and one thing they and the other dancers discovered is that occasionally tempers can get a little short, especially for those dancers just starting out.

Round dancing "takes a stable relationship," Mrs. Franklin laughed. "When you are just learning how, we as people tend to blame the other fellow" for any mistakes in footwork.

One way over this uncomfortable situation is to learn to say "'We are not doing it right' instead of 'you aren't...'," Mrs. Franklin advised. "We stress to our dancers that you don't need to put the blame on each other."

Mrs. Franklin said that the decision to move into a more advanced class is a "personal choice. You need to do a couple of years (of intermediate dancing) before you are comfortable enough to move into an advanced class."

FROM JUST beginning to proficient expert, round dancers of all levels of expertise can attend festivals, she said. "There are festivals at all levels of round dancing."

But unlike many other forms of recreation, "there is no competition in round dancing," she said. "It's just for fun."

"Without fun, it's dead," her husband agreed. "Fun is the most important ingredient in our dancing.

"There have been times when we needed a marriage counselor out here, but it is fun!"

Beginning round dance classes are 7:30-9:30 p.m. Wednesdays; intermediate (phase 2-4) dancing is 7-10 p.m. Thursdays; advanced dancers meet 2:30-4:30 p.m. Sundays. Dancers meet at M-Square-ena, off South Midkiff Road. For more information call 689-6663.

Garage sales can be fun, profitable

Associated Press

Call it a garage, tag, yard, porch or barn sale, it's a terrific way to get rid of a lot of unwanted items. And the bonus is that the money you make is virtually all profit. You don't have to pay employees, there's no overhead and — in most cases — there are no sales taxes to pay.

Here are some tips for holding a successful garage sale:

■ About a month before the sale, check with your local government to learn if you need a special permit. And find out the rules for collection of local and state sales taxes.

■ Assemble the items to be sold. If you don't have enough, ask friends and neighbors tc participate.

■ Ask yourself the the following three questions to decide which items qualify for the sale:

1. Have I used this item in the past year? If yes, it's worth keeping for another year. If no, discard it.

2. Does it have sentimental or monetary value? Yes? Then keep it.

3. Might it come in handy someday? If, yes, but you have nothing specific in mind, you'd better plan to get rid of it. A yes answer usually means that you're hanging on to clutter.

■ Clean and repair salable items. Test appliances and other electrical devices to be sure they work.

■ If you have valuable items such as antiques or other collectibles, have their value determined by a professional appraiser.

■ Price goods with removable tags or tape. Use different colors, or initials, for different owners. As a general rule, price merchandise from 10 percent to 50 percent of what it would cost new, depending on the age and condition. When in doubt, price lower. Consult one of the large mail order catalogs to learn the approximate value of some items.

■ Run an ad in your local newspaper one week prior, giving the sale location, the date (and rain date) and sale hours. Note the kind of items available. Place notices on supermarket and other local bulletin boards, such as libraries and social centers. If local law permits, also put them on poles and trees at intersections and at bus stops. Post signs with large, bold, easy-to-read lettering along the best-traveled roads near the sale location.

■ Before the day of the sale, arrange the merchandise on card tables or picnic tables. Group items together, clothes on racks (be sure to indicate size if it's not on the garment tag); odds and ends on tables; books on shelves or in boxes. Plug in an extension cord for testing electrical items.

■ Have on hand plenty of wrapping materials — newspaper, supermarket paper and plastic bags, extra department store shopping bags, tape and twine.

■ Start with $30 to $40 in small bills and change. Keep your money in a cash box with the lid closed when not in use. Designate one person as the cashier, seated at the exit end of the traffic flow through the sale. Or turn up the bottom of an apron and stitch five pockets so that you can wear your cash box around your waist, keeping the coins and bills separated and safe from theft. Or sew some extra pockets into a carpenter's apron.

■ Be prepared to bargain. After all, you're trying to get rid of everything. Reduce all prices during the last two hours of the sale.

■ Donate sale leftovers to your favorite charity or set them aside for another sale next year.

■ Be a good neighbor. Take down all signs and posters when the sale is over.

DEAR ABBY

Abbreviated centur y will be here soon enough

By Abigail Van Buren

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I called our post office to find out how we might have to write the abbreviated date for the year 2000. We thought that 6/24/00 might be right, but that does not tell the exact year. Would you and your staff tell us what would be right when the next seven years have elapsed? Thanks. — MRS. O. DODD, RAYMOND, WASH.

DEAR MRS. DODD: My staff checked at the library, where various style manuals and language usage guides were consulted. But none made any mention of what to do with abbreviations for the year 2000. The librarian then called both the Keith Clark Corp. and Success Business Industries (both major manufacturers of calendars) and asked them what they are planning to do.

According to their "best educated guesses," they would abbreviate Sept. 1, 2000, as 9/1/00 — but then admitted that they had not really thought about this yet, either!

When someone comes up with a definitive answer, it will be about time!

DEAR ABBY: I've read many letters from your readers who claim that grandparents are closer to the children of their daughters than they are to the children of their sons.

My husband's mother lives 120 miles from us and she sees our children approximately once a month. She lives in the same city as her daughter (my husband's sister) and she sees her daughter's children daily.

The problem is that when we go to visit her, her daughter's children are also there. I feel that it is important for our children to have some special time with their grandmother alone — just as her other grandchildren have on a daily basis. It makes me feel that our children aren't as important to her as her other grandchildren are.

Am I being overly sensitive, or should I address this issue with her? Even our children have asked if they could spend some time at Grandma's without their cousins. — FRUSTRATED IN GEORGIA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: You are not being overly sensitive. Your children deserve some special time with their grandmother without their cousins present. Ask your husband to talk to his mother about how your children — and you — feel about them seeing Grandma alone.

DEAR ABBY: For years you have printed letters from women who are having affairs with married men.

I think it's now time to hear from the wife. I have written a poem from her point of view. I hope you think it's worth the space in your column. — WORTHETTA HUNTER, EDINBURG, PA.

DEAR WORTHETTA: It is, indeed. Thanks for sending it.

THE OTHER WOMAN

I'm the other woman in your man's life,
You are his girlfriend and I am his wife.
He takes you to bed in the dark of the night,
He walks me to church in the bright morning light.
He takes you to motels,
He makes me a home.
You show him your children,
I give him his own.
He'll call you his baby, sweetheart and dame.
He took me for life and he gave me his name.
You go to strange places and he'll hold your hand.
Mine will be wearing a gold wedding band.
He'll take me to parties or a family affair.
You can bet your sweet life that you'll never be there!
Here's some advice that I think you should heed,
He'll never be there in your hour of need.
So get yourself a man of your own,
Or someday, Girl, you'll be all alone.
For when it comes to a choice for life,
It won't be his girlfriend —
He'll choose ME — his wife!

DEAR ABBY: One evening recently, after I enjoyed an outing around the fire pits at the beach, the beach closed and people were requested to pack up and leave.

At the fire pit next to ours, a large family had been celebrating. The "man of the family" threw the remaining wood on the fire and then proceeded to squirt a full bottle of lighter fluid on the already raging fire! Obviously, this man had no idea that fire can travel back up the stream of lighter fluid or even ignite the fumes, causing the bottle to explode!

I am an occupational therapist who has seen the ravages that fire can do to the human body. There were many little children in the group who could have been injured. Worse than that, the family learned from their "role model" that this is a fun and prudent thing to do with a dangerous chemical. No one should ever squirt any flammable liquid on an open fire!

Please, Abby, remind your readers that burns are forever, with months of painful treatment and therapy, if one survives. A visit to a local burn unit will verify this sad fact. I hope this letter will prevent someone from living the remainder of his or her life paying a heavy price for a moment of foolishness. — GERI LOPKER, ORANGE, CALIF.

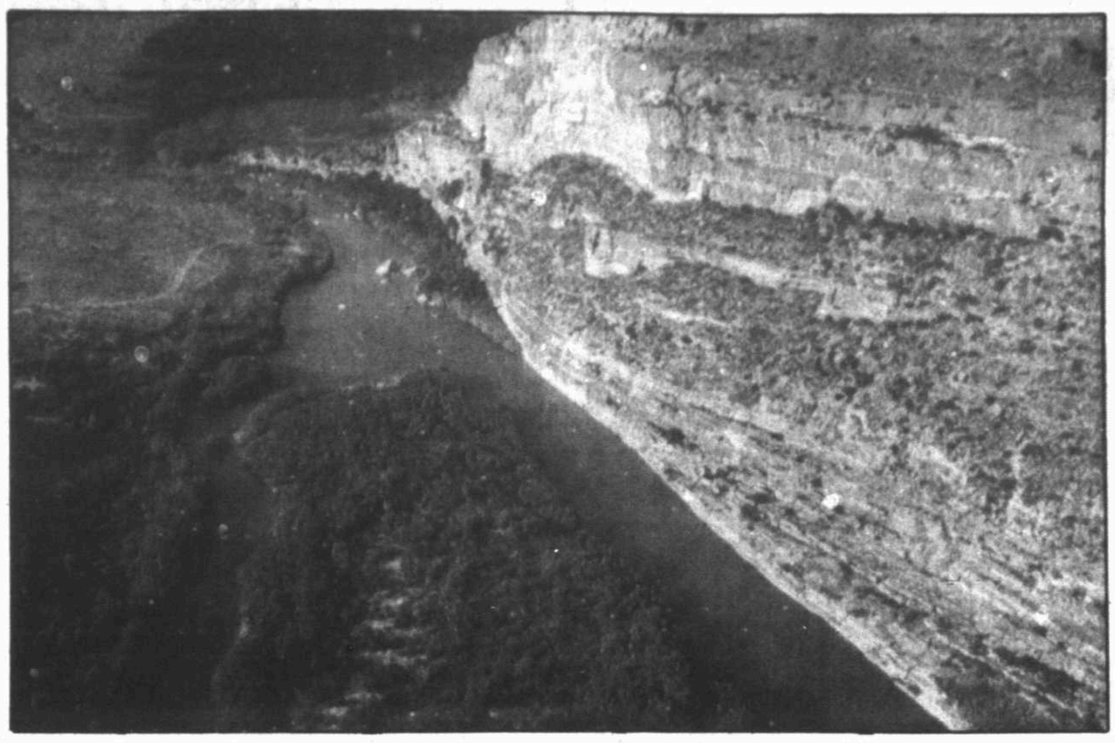
Pecos River is unforgiving place

Associated Press



National Geographic Society

Perched high above the Pecos River, a Texas getaway gives its owner, cattle rancher Lee Kidd, the solitude he treasures. The Pecos region is isolated and Kidd says that there is "something almost mystic about this country. I feel a little bit closer to God."

The Pecos River is no place for sissies.

Even the buffalo hunters dreaded it. "When a bad man dies, he goes either to hell or the Pecos," they said.

Some places are meant for the few, for a tough strain of humanity who, by fate or choice, live out their span in harsh isolation. Pecos River country — distant, dry, unforgiving — is such a place, Cathy Newman writes in the current National Geographic.

For most of its 900-mile run through eastern New Mexico and western Texas, the Pecos is by turns narrow, sluggish, salty, shallow. In some places it vanishes altogether, into limestone outcrop.

The Pecos begins in mountain wilderness and ends in furnace desert with not much in between but long horizon and hard blue sky. It surrenders to the Rio Grande on the Texas-Mexico border.

"Graveyard of the cowman's hopes," Charles Goodnight called it. In 1866 he drove 2,000 cattle along the river and lost more than 300 to thirst. His partner later lost his life to a Comanche bullet.

It is the graveyard of many hopes — of Spanish conquistadores who came looking for gold in the 16th century, of 19th-century homesteaders lured by dreams of land ripe for the plow, of 20th-century wildcatters seduced by the whisper of oil.

THOUGH SHORT on water, the Pecos has always been long on mythology. Here, folktale cowboy Pecos Bill, who cut his teeth on a bowie knife, rode a mountain lion while twirling a live rattlesnake lariat.

Real-life cattle king John Chisum employed cowhands so accustomed to the alkaline taste of Pecos water, it is said, that they carried salt in their saddlebags to doctor fresh water they found.

"Pecos" even got to be a verb. To "pecos" someone meant to deep-six him.

Many towns throughout the upper Pecos Valley have dried up and blown away. The malaise affects Colonias; only nine families remain in this New Mexico village of red dust.

Its church, vacant and decaying, is being restored. Caretaker Fabiola Saiz mixes earth and water in a trench and fills a large can with the adobe.

She was married here. Her parents are buried here. And so is her handicapped son. "I reach for a trowel and a handful of adobe," Newman writes, "adding a prayer of my own for the church of San Jose."

As if with a sigh of relief, the river emerges from canyon walls into plains south of Colonias. Red rock disappears; pale green prairie appears.

Here in its middle basin, the river is at its most productive. For the rest of its run through New Mexico, the Pecos stitches together fields of alfalfa and cotton and pastures for cattle.

In Fort Sumner, there are two Billy the Kid museums. Is the town big enough for both?

"No," says Don Sweet, who owns Billy museum No. 1. Displays include a grave marked "Replica." Museum No. 2, the Old Fort Sumner Museum, boasts the "authentic grave."

The object of this rivalry — Billy the Kid — was shot dead in Fort Sumner, N.M., at 21 by Sheriff Pat Garrett in 1881. Legend says the kid with the choirboy face killed 21 men. Fact says it was no more than 10.

LONG AFTER he was supposed to be dead, Billy, the Elvis of his time, was reported to be living in Mexico.

Fort Sumner's dark legend encompasses a more tragic chapter: Beginning in 1863 the U.S. Army rounded up 10,000 Navajos and marched them 350 miles from their homeland. Only 8,500 arrived, joining 450 Mescalero Apaches.

Fort Sumner held the American Indians prisoners. Food was scarce. Disease claimed hundreds.

"Thousands of my people died," says Pearl Sunrise, a Santa Fe, N.M., museum curator. "Our hearts were torn out. When you go, you can feel their spirits lingering."

The Pecos has been involved in classic western water warfare. In 1988, after a 16-year courtroom shoot-out, Texas won a suit that accused New Mexico of hogging more than its share of water.

The U.S. Supreme Court agreed and ordered New Mexico to pay $14 million in damages.

Even in Texas, size isn't everything. Mentone (population 20) has a pink-stone courthouse, a post office, a one-pump gas station, the A&G Cafe. That's it.

Mentone, the seat of Loving County (population 100), is the only town in this least densely populated county in the contiguous United States. Sheriff Elgin "Punk" Jones took office in 1965 with 65 votes.

Cafe owner Ann Hogue, a wiry woman with hair the color of a dried chili pepper, says Mentone folks are "tough on the outside, marshmallows inside."

The sheriff is the toughest marshmallow. He shows off his jail: two barred windows, bunk bed bolted to the floor, sink, urinal, shower. "At that," Newman writes, "it looks better than some of the motel rooms I've slept in recently. That evening I check into jail."

In the hand dealt by the Pecos, a wild card turns up — a dream comes true. For Ira and Ann Yates, that moment came in 1926, when their well No. 1 blew in, dispelling the belief that there was no oil west of the Pecos. There was an ocean of it.

AS THE PECOS nears the Rio Grande, the Chihuahuan Desert tightens its grip. Out here, they say, everything stings, bites or sticks.

National Geographic Society

A dappling shower cools trail horse "Mr. Woody" and guide Hule Ley near headquarters of the Pecos River in northern New Mexico. Ley took over his father's outfitting business in 1972 at age 15 and has never tired of the solitude of his Pecos Wilderness back yard.

"It is land that will not tolerate a bad guess," Newman writes. "How much water to carry, distance to the next gas pump, interval from storm to flash flood. There's no margin for error."

The Pecos can still turn mean in a flash. Why do people live here? Perhaps they find something of themselves in the lean, spare landscape.

"We just do whatever it takes," says Margaret Woodward, wife of a Texas sheep rancher.

Wave after wave of pioneers have crossed this river with hope. Many have left with broken hearts. Through it all there echoes a Pecos refrain, constant as the sighing wind.

Whatever it takes.

School cooks up expansion

By Catalina Ortiz

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Something's cooking at the California Culinary Academy, and it's not just the succulent dishes its students create.

The academy, one of the nation's most successful and prestigious cooking schools, is expanding to feed a seemingly insatiable appetite for trained chefs and fine amateur cooking.

"Our biggest dilemma on a day-to-day basis is what opportunities to work on that day. The plate's full," said Theodore G. Crocker, chairman of the board of the California Culinary Academy Inc.

The academy, housed in a stately 1912 building in downtown San Francisco, has graduated more than 3,000 students since it was founded in 1977.

Along with the famed Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, N.Y., and the Johnson & Wales school in Providence, R.I., the California Culinary Academy is considered one of the nation's top cooking schools.

But with 600 full-time students in its professional training program and hundreds more taking avocational and continuing education courses, the academy is bursting at the seams.

SO THE SCHOOL is remodeling to absorb another 100 full-time students and plans to open a branch with a television production kitchen, retail shop and restaurant near Fisherman's Wharf. Both projects are expected to be completed by year's end. The academy also is looking to license its distinguished name for kitchen tools and small appliances.

And it's seeking a spot in Southern California where it hopes to start a second school in early 1994.

"Beyond that, we're looking into moving fairly quickly into other states" and into other countries, most likely on the Pacific Rim, Crocker said.

The current expansion is being funded by the $6.5 million the debt-free academy raised in its recently completed initial public offering. The school is believed to be the only one of its kind to be publicly traded.

'One of the things I keep telling people — and it's kind of a cliche around here — is our goal is to be able to blindfold graduates ... take them anywhere in the world and take off that blindfold, and they should be able to start cooking,'

— Thomas A. Bloom
academy's president and CEO

Profits rose 147 percent, to $336,000 or 16 cents a share for the third quarter ended May 31, from $136,000 or 7 cents a share for the same period of last year. Revenues rose 17 percent, to $2.9 million from $2.5 million.

The academy is best known with the public for its 1991 television show, "Cooking at the Academy," The 13-part series was "the hottest and most savory TV cooking show" of the year, proclaimed Time magazine.

THE PROGRAM, produced with San Francisco public television station KQED, eschewed wise-cracking celebrity chefs. Instead academy teachers gave clear, straightforward instruction ranging from simmering soup stock to making plates delectable to the eye as well as the palate.

It was watched by 7 million people each week on 95 percent of the nation's PBS stations and in Britain, New Zealand and Australia. A second series is in the works.

The academy also has published more than 30 cookbooks, selling 2 million copies since 1985. For those more interested in consumption than creation, the school has two popular restaurants, a cozy grill and an elegant dining room surrounded by glassed-in student kitchens.

But professional training, an intensive 18-month course, remains the academy's core business and chief money maker.

Students, who spend seven hours a day five days a week in classroom and kitchen, learn the art and business of classical cooking. They start with such basics as proper use of a knife and essential sauces, progress through food chemistry and controlling costs to adorning buffets and the sweet science of pastry.

"One of the things I keep telling people — and it's kind of a cliche around here — is our goal is to be able to blindfold graduates ... take them anywhere in the world and take off that blindfold, and they should be able to start cooking," said Thomas A. Bloom, the academy's president and chief executive officer.

"When they walk through here, they know everything about an artichoke that there is to know — but we also tell them how to make money with that artichoke,' he said.

ALL THIS training isn't cheap. Tuition is $22,500, not including more than $700 for a supply kit: uniforms, towels, traditional tall pleated hats, books, knives and other hand tools.

But graduates are virtually assured of work. The academy says 88 percent find jobs within six months of graduation with an average salary of $24,000. That's comparable with the starting pay of college graduates, according to the Department of Education.

Graduates are cashing in on the rapid growth in the food service industry. The National Restaurant Association estimates that demand for cooks, excluding fast food, will increase 22 percent by the year 2000. And there's growing demand for trained cooks as caterers, restaurant managers, consultants and "food stylists" — artists who arrange food tastefully for the camera.

Meanwhile, the layman's craving for culinary knowledge is filling the academy's continuing education courses. About 12,000 people — both hobbyists and professionals seeking new skills — have taken the Saturday classes in the four years they have been offered.

Creatures great and small do not belong in residence's hall

By Erma Bombeck

I have not yet learned how to live in harmony with the wild creatures on our planet — especially the ones that invade my home.

Bombeck

Despite the fact that I am considered more intelligent, must look like a dinosaur to it, and have state-of-the-art weaponry, a simple cockroach still has the power to send me to the top of my refrigerator. Quite simply, folks, I panic.

A friend of mine saw a 2-inch lizard scurry along her kitchen floor one night. Assuming if she didn't get rid of it, it would suck the air out of her as she slept, she screamed for her husband, who came running to the kitchen armed with a waste can and a flyswatter. I thought that was optimism until one night I saw my father whip out a small plastic gun with a cork on a string in the end of it. He sat in his chair and used it to zap crickets, which he was sure were building a birthing wing in his carpets.

We tend to lose all sense of reason when we come upon a small creature. I have been known to attack a sewer roach with a yardstick, a scorpion with a bath towel and a snake with a snow shovel. I always have the feeling they are looking at me and laughing themselves to death.

It must be wonderful to enter a room and have everyone leave it and have the dip and TV to yourself. My daughter-in-law was with us on a trip to Greece where we slept with the doors and windows open. The house had no screens. At breakfast the next day, she reported that something hairy and with a big stomach had wandered into her room in the dark.

"You have just described my son," I said.

"No, it made a lip-smacking sound," she said.

Because of the appearance of a simple hedgehog, we boarded up the house each night and sweltered.

Probably my most absurd reaction to a creature happened one day when I was home alone. I walked into the hallway and right in my path was a small furry animal about the size of a tennis ball. I stopped breathing. Then I eased my way back to the kitchen, grabbed a wastebasket and quickly dropped it on top of the animal. I put a rock on top of it. When my husband came home he could dispose of the beast, whatever it was.

I barely let him get in the door before I directed him to the wastebasket. Slowly, he lifted it. The animal hadn't moved. He cupped his hands around it. I had held a dust ball captive for 10 hours.

I saw a mouse in the driveway the other day. If it gets in the house — we sell.

Many kinds of oak trees grow in area

By Deborah A. Benge

You can't tell it by our landscapes, but there are oak species that will grow in the Permian Basin other than live oak and red oak. There is a world of wonderful oaks and several that will do well in our area. The problem is finding them in the nursery trade. Since that's the case, you may have to collect seed and start your own unusual oak trees.

Benge

But before you do, be sure to check with Midland nurseries. They may have unusual varieties or be able to get them for you.

Live oak and red oaks are magnificent trees, but you can enhance any landscape with some of the other oaks that are adaptable to our area. Burr Williams, educational director of Sibley Environmental Learning Center, suggested some of these nearby native oaks as having good landscape potential for our area. They include the following:

■ Mohr oak or Quercus morhriana is a small tree that will attain a height of 10 to 20 feet, making it a wonderful small landscape or courtyard tree. The leaves are blue grey in color, semi-evergreen in the fall and most of the winter. These trees can be found in some of the escarpment breaks of the Llano Estacado.

■ Chinkapin oak or Q. muehlenbergii is a handsome tree with a narrow round top with attractive dark green lustrous leaves. Leaves have a serrate edge with prominent veins. This tree gets quite large, about 90 feet tall in some it its best native sites.

■ Wavyleaf oak, Q. turbinella, is a shrub-type oak, about 15 feet tall, blue-grey leaves with lots of tiny teeth that hand on the tree well into the winter. The size of this tree gives it tremendous value in the West Texas landscapes. Native stands of the tree can be found in the Franklin, Eagle and Quitman mountain ranges of the Trans Pecos, but acorns ripen early, sometimes as early as mid-June.

■ Chisos red oak, sometimes called Graves oak, Q. gravesii, is a beautiful red oak found in the high country of the Chisos, Davis, Del Norte and Glass Mountains. Remember, collecting seeds or plants from a national park is prohibited, but there is Madera roadside park near Fort Davis where there are a few Chisos red oaks.

■ Lacey oak, Q. glaucoides, an attractive small to medium size tree with dusky-blue to blue-grey leaves. The tree is deciduous in nature with some fall color. The tree has good drought tolerance.

■ Burr oak, Q. macrocarpa, is an excellent large deciduous oak tree. This tree can attain a height of 75 feet, has thick bark, large lobed leaves and very large acorns. This tree is easy to grow and has good drought tolerance.

Many of these oaks have good growth rates, especially while they are young, so don't be afraid to grow them from seed or start with a young tree.

There are many benefits to be gained by selecting acorns from the beautiful, healthy landscape oaks or from desirable native oaks adaptable to our area. Characteristics worth noting when choosing a mature tree for a seed source are vigor, hardiness, desirable leaf color and shape, drought tolerance, absence of galls, trunk form and canopy shape.

"Tree Talk in the Park," an educational program to help you select, plant and establish the best trees for your landscape, will be 2-6 p.m. Oct. 23 at Noel Heritage Plaza in downtown Odessa. Master Gardeners will give away seedling trees and other gifts. Tree experts from the area are scheduled to give presentations throughout the afternoon. Tree tours, booths and more will be included. For more information contact the county extension agents or Permian Basin Master Gardeners.

Deborah Benge is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector counties.

Rosemary Barkett

Climb the steps of the state Supreme Court building in Tallahassee, Florida and you will find the name of Rosemary Barkett in a very prominent location. Barkett is the first woman ever to serve as Chief Justice of that Court. But she did not always plan a career in law.

Born in Ciudad Victoria, Mexico, Barkett moved to Miami with her family in 1946. A precocious child, she wanted to be an actress but became a nun instead. Between 1957 and 1966 the future Chief Justice, known as Sister St. Michael, taught at Catholic schools in Tampa. "Had there been a Peace Corps then," says Chief Justice Barkett, "I might not have become a nun."

Her vocation of service found a new outlet in the law. In 1970 she earned a law degree from the University of Florida and went into private practice in West Palm Beach. Barkett was appointed to a circuit judgeship in 1979. In 1984 she was promoted to the 4th District Court of Appeal and one year later to the Florida Supreme Court. She was elected Chief Justice for a two-year term in 1992.

Chief Justice Rosemary Barkett sees herself partly as a teacher and steadfastly rejects simple definitions of the law. "Part of my job," she says, "is to help people understand our judicial system. Our life has become very complex and our problems are not susceptible to simple solutions."

Mujeres Hispano Americanas Lideres

El nombre de Rosemary Barkett figura prominentemente en el edificio del Tribunal Supremo de la Florida en Tallahassee. Barkett es la primera mujer en ostentar el como Presidenta en ese Tribunal. Sin embargo, el derecho no fue su primera vocacion.

Nacida en Ciudad Victoria, Mexico, Barkett emigro a Miami con su familia en 1946. Procoz y avispada, la joven Barkett hubiera querido ser actriz, pero termino abranzando la vida religiosa. Entre 1957 y 1966, la futura jurista, conocida entonces como la Hermana San Miguel, impartio clases en las escuelas parroquiales de Tampa. "Si hubieran existido los Cuerpos de Paz entonces," dice la Presidenta del Tribunal Barkett, "tal vez no humiera entrado en el convento."

Su vocacion de servicio encontro una nueva dimension en el derecho. En 1970, se graduo de abogada en la Universidad de la Florida y abrio un bufete privado en West Palm Beach. En 1979, el governador de Florida la desgno para ocupar un cargo de uez de distrito. En 1984, ascendio al Tribunal de Apelaciones del Cuarto Distrito, y un año mas tarde al Tribunal Supremo de la florida. En 1992, fue elegida Presidenta del Tribunal por un periodo de dos años.

Barkett nunca ha dejado de ser maestra y rechaza definiciones simplistas del derecho. "Parte de mi funcion," dice, "consiste en ayudar al pueblo a comprender nuestro sistema judicial. Nuestra vida es muy compleja; y no existen soluciones faciles para nuestros problemas."

Hollywood re-enacts rescue scene in Odessa

By Jeffrey McDonald

It was an exciting time for everyone when Hollywood came to Odessa, Texas.

For four-and-a-half days, the cast and crew of Rescue 911, a weekly program on the CBS Television Network (KOSA-TV, Channel 7, in West Texas), recreated the dramatic story of Brittany Rodriguez, a nine month-old Odessa girl who might have died from choking in 1990, had it not been for the fast thinking and quick actions of a telephone serviceman.

"I was installing a telephone, when I heard a lady screaming for help," recalled Art Molina, a Customer Service Technician with Southwestern Bell Telephone. "And I came to investigate, and there was a truck that was driving real slow, a pickup".

"I thought the truck had hit the lady, because the lady was running outside, hollering for help, and she was holding a baby."

" I was going to stop the truck! And as I got in front of the truck, she then changed to saying, "Help me, my baby is choking!' So I let the truck go by."

It was a desperate moment for Mary Cruz, the mother of young Brittany, who had walked into the living room of her parents' home on Ada Street, to find her daughter choking on a piece of apple she had swallowed. Mary rushed into the street, carrying Brittany, and calling for help.

Fortunately, the first to answer her call was Molina. Luckily for young Brittany, Molina's company had required him to take a class in lifesaving skills, the very skills that he now applied to a child o the verge of dying.

"I knew what the problem was. She said the baby was choking, so I checked the throat," said Molina. I did the finger probe, and I couldn't find anything. I turned the bay around and did the back blows. I didn't work so I turned the baby forward and I did the Heimlich on the baby, which is different from doing it on a grownup."

"Tthat didn't work. So I laid the baby on the ground - in this case, it happened to be the road and I started CPR [cardio pulmonary resuscitation]. I asked, right before I started, if anybody had called 911, and a lady said that she did. Then I started doing CPR on the baby."

Molina does not clearly recall all that went on around him, as he worked to resuscitate Brit-

Hollywood representa una escena de rescate en Odessa

Por Jeffrey McDonald

Fue un momento muy emocionante para todos cuando en Hollywood vino a Odessa, Tejas.

Por cuatro días y medio, los protagonistas y el personal de Rescue 911 (Rescate 911), programa que se exhibe cada semana en la estación Televisiba CBS (TV KOSA, Canal 7, en Oeste de Tejas), recreando la dramática historia de Brittany Rodriguez, una niña de Odessa de nueve meses de nacida que tal vez hubiera muerto de sofocamiento en 1990, si no hubiera sido por la rapidez y la acción oportuna de un empleado del servicio telefónico.

"Yo estaba instalando un teléfono cuando escuche a una mujer gritar por ayuda," recuerda Art Molina, Técnico en el Departamento de Servicios para Clientes de la Compañía de Teléfonos Southwestern Bell. "Fui a investigar, y ahí estaba una camioneta que se conducía muy despacio. Pensé que la camioneta había atropellado a la dama, porque la dama estaba corriendo afuera gritando por ayuda, y estaba sujetando a una bebé."

"Yo iba a detener a la camioneta! Cuando me puse enfrente de la camioneta para detenerla, entonces fue cuando ella me comunico, 'Ayúdeme, mi bebé se esta ahogando!' fue cuando deje al de la camioneta retirarse."

Fue un momento desesperante para Mary Cruz, mamá de la pequeña Brittany, quien había caminado dentro de la sala de la casa de sus padres en la calle Ada, para encontrar a su hija ahogándose con un pedazo de manzana que ella se había tragado. Mary se anticipo a la calle, cargando a su hija Brittany, en busca de ayuda.

Afortunadamente, el primero que recurrió al llamado fue Molina. Afortunadamente para la pequeña Brittany, la compañía en que trabaja Molina le requieren que tome clases de primeros auxilios, habilidad que aplico a la pequeña quien estaba al borde de la muerte.

"Sabia cual era el problema. Ella dijo la bebé se esta ahogando, entonces verifique su garganta," dice Molina. "Hice la prueba con el dedo, y no pude encontrar nada. Voltee a la bebé hacia abajo y golpee en la espalda. No tuve ningún resultado entonces volteé a la bebé boca arriba e hice el Heimlich el cual es diferente que el hacerselo a un adulto."

"Y esto no resulto. Así es que puse a la bebé en el piso - en este caso, estábamos en la calle- y empecé a

Reforming an education system that fails Latinos

By Janice Petrovich
A Latino Youth and Advocacy Organization

Latinos have the lowest achievement levels of any major group in the United States. That's common knowledge. They are less likely to complete high school or to enter or complete college.

To say that our children are underserved by the educational systems of this country is an understatement. For every 10 Latino youngsters who enter first grade, four are already below grade level by age 13. By 10th grade, one has dropped out of school. Three more drop out before high school graduation. Of the six who are left, two enroll in college — one in a community college — and only one graduates.

These figures have remained stagnant over the past decade, and indeed, as national aggregates they disguise the even more dismal picture for inner-city Latino youth. We lose our children to gangs, to drugs, to crime and unemployment.

For the Latino community, this waste is highly personal — a daily devastation.

For the nation, the loss is measured in needed workers. One out of every six new workers in the next 15 years will be Latino. Policy.makers, educators, and advocates must join together to accomplish a Hispanic education agenda that includes four major areas:

FIRST, they must address the resource inequities between schools. Around the country, Latinos are overrepresented in resource-poor and severely overcrowded schools. Leaking roofs, classes that meet in hallways, and the lack of such basic school supplies as desks make teaching and learning impossible. As Jonathan Kozol, author of "Savage Inequalities," notes, "As long as we continue to operate an unequal and racially divided system, reform is frivolous, if not cynical."

SECOND, the federal government must begin to collect and report systematically the data necessary to let us know exactly how well or how poorly .. Latino children are being served by federal education programs.

THIRD, we must build a school climate that makes Latino children feel wanted. School policies and practices need to be revised and parents and school staff more involved.

La reforma de un sistema de enseñanza que no funciona para los Latinos

Por Janice Petrovich - Presidenta de ASPIRA, organización latina juvenil y defensora

Los latinos tienen los niveles más bajos de adelanto de cualquier grupo importante de los Estados Unidos. Eso es del conocimiento común. Tienen menos probabilidades de terminar los estudios secundarios o de entrar o terminar la enseñanza superior.

El decir que nuestros hijos no reciben suficientes servicios de los sistemas de enseñanza de este país es quedarse corto. Por cada diez niños Latinos que entran al primer grado, cuatro están ya por debajo del nivel de grado hacia la edad de 13 años. Para el décimo grado, uno ya ha desertado de la escuela. Tres más desertan antes de graduarse de secundaria. De los seis restantes, dos se matriculan en un colegio o universidad — uno de ellos en un colegio comunitario — y sólo uno se gradúa.

Estas cifras han permanecido estacionarias durante el decenio último, y en verdad, como acumulaciones nacionales disfrazan el cuadro aún más aterrador para los jóvenes latinos de las ciudades interiores. Perdemos a nuestros hijos en las pandillas, los narcóticos, la delincuencia y el desempleo.

Para la comunidad Latina, este desperdicio es altamente personal — es una devastación diaria.

Para la nación, la pérdida se mide en trabajadores necesarios. Uno de cada seis nuevos trabajadores en los 15 años próximos será un Latino.

Los que elaboran cursos de acción, los educadores y los defensores deben unirse para lograr un programa de enseñanza Hispano que comprenda cuatro campos principales:

PRIMERO, deben enfocarse sobre las desigualdades de los recursos entre las escuelas. Alrededor del país, los Latinos se hallan representados abrumadoramente en las escuelas carentes de recursos y gravemente congestionadas. Los techos que se filtran, las clases que funcionan en los pasillos y la falta de suministros escolares tan fundamentales como son los escritorios, hacen que la enseñanza y el aprendizaje sean imposibles. Como hace notar Jonathan Kozol, el autor de "Desigualdades Salvajes": "Mientras que continuemos funcionando en un sistema desigual y dividido racialmente, la reforma es frívola si no es cínica."

SEGUNDO, el gobierno federal debe empezar a acopiar e informar sistemáticamente la información necesaria para hacernos saber con exactitud cuán bien — o cuán mal — se está prestando servicios a los niños Latinos en los programas de enseñanza federales.

TERCERO, debemos edificar un clima escolar que haga que los niños Latinos se sientan bienvenidos. Los cursos de acción y las prácticas de las escuelas necesitan ser revisados y tiene que haber una mayor participación de los padres.

Both sides of the border come together for Fiesta at Big Bend National Park

As they have for the past twelve years, people from both sides of America's border with Mexico, musicians and schoolchildren, craftsman and friends, will come together for for an afternoon of international fun and friendship in the heart of West Texas' Big Bend country.

Robert L. Arnberger, Superintendent of the Big Bend National Park, announced that planning is underway for the 13th Annual International Good Neighbor Day Fiesta. The event is set for Saturday, October 16th, from 12:00 noon till 5:00 pm, at Rio Grande Village, in Big Bend National Park.

"We look forward to the fiesta each year," said Arnberger. "It is a chance for people on both sides of the border to come and celebrate our unique heritage and culture. It is a time to share, and to promote goodwill among neighbors."

The mountains, canyons, and deserts that form the border between the American state of Texas, and the Mexican states of Chihuahua and Coahuila, are some of the wildest in the United States, and some of the most beautiful. It provides a scenic backdrop for this annual event of food,

Ambos lados de la frontera se juntan para la Fiesta del Big Bend National Park

Como ellos han tenido por los pasados doce años, gente de ambos lados de la frontera con México, músicos y niños de colegio, artesanos y amigos, vendrán juntos por una tarde de diversión y amistad internacional en el corazón del Oeste de Tejas en los campos del Big Bend.

Robert L. Arnberger, superintendente del Parque Nacional de Big Bend, anunció que los planes están tomando efecto para el décimo tercero evento anual del International Good Neighbor Day Fiesta (Día Internacional de la Fiesta del Buen Vecino). El evento estará listo para el Sábado, 16 de Octubre desde las 12:00 del mediodía hasta las 5:00 p.m.., en el Río Grande Village, del Parque Nacional del Big Bend.

"Nosotros siempre estamos al pendiente de la fiesta cada año," dice Arnberger. "Es una oportunidad para la gente de ambos lados de la frontera para que vengan y celebren nuestra herencia y cultura muy singular. Es tiempo de compartir y promover la buena voluntad entre vecinos."

Negocio Hispano es buen negocio

Por Jeffrey McDonald

Octubre marcara el décimo quinto aniversario de un exitoso negocio de Midland, este comenzó con la búsqueda de una dama para una nueva dirección en su carrera y una observación chistosa para su jefe.

"Cuando primero comencé el negocio era solamente una dependiente de aseguranzas con Charlie Harris quien es agente de la compañía de seguros Farmer's. Yo nunca había trabajado con una aseguranza en mi vida," recuerda Oralia Corrales, fundadora de la agencia de seguros Corrales. "Yo habia trabajado mas como una trabajadora social con el Albergue Federal y con la comunidad de varias áreas. Habia tenido una pequeña quemadura, haciendo el trabajo social."

"Un verano la esposa de Charlie iba a salir para estar con sus hijos. Así es que andaba buscando ayuda únicamente por el verano. Recuerdo cuando un día, yo estaba jugando y le dije que yo deberia persevir el sueldo que el estaba persiviendo. El dijo, 'Bueno si usted esta hablando seriamente, la compañía esta buscando a una mujer para emplearla.' le respondí que si, sin pensar mucho acerca de esto."

Esta decisión dirigió hacia unos meses de mucho trabajo a Corrales la mama, la dependiente de seguros, la estudiante, y ahora una probable agente de seguros.

"Ellos estaban ahí para emplearme el siguiente día, así es que firmé. Una tremenda cantidad de trabajo esta involucrado, y comencé a estudiar inmediatamente," recuerda Corrales. "Para ese entonces, yo había obtenido mi GED y tenía como 63 créditos en el Colegio. El exámen para aseguranzas es muy difícil. Mi casa todavía estaba llena de niños pequeños, excepto mi hija Jane, quien ya estaba casada."

"Así es que me tenía que levantar a las cinco de la mañana, y estudiaba hasta las siete, preparaba el desayuno, y alistaba a todos mis hijos para la escuela, me preparaba para el trabajo el cual todavía tenía. Regresaba en la tarde, preparaba la cena, ponía a todos en su lugar respectivamente, y entonces me encerraba en mi habitación para continuar estudiando."

La perserverancia paga tarde o temprano y en este caso en pocos meses, cuando Corrales paso su examen y estaba lista para comenzar como agente.

"De primero pensé en compartir oficina con Charlie, en su local en el lado Oeste," dice Corrales. "Pero así como comencé a contactar a varias gentes, note que había un inconveniente en las distancias que estas tenían que recorrer. Así es que, abrí un lugar pequeño y antiguo aquí, en el lado de la calle Lamesa."

La casa original de la Agencia de Seguros Corrales fue muy diferente a las grandes y espaciosas oficinas que estamos acostumbrados a ver hoy.

"Había dos habitaciones. Tom Scott, un abogado amigo de nosotros me dio mi primer escritorio. Otro amigo de doctor, me dio unos muebles viejos que el tenía," recuerda Corrales. "El teléfono fue el primer recurso que tuve, porque este es el que uso cada día. El uso del teléfono para llamar a la gente, para darle a saber que estaba haciendo este tipo de trabajo."

Curt Wilcott/Midland Reporter-Telegram

Elena and David Corrales — Corrales Insurance of Midland.

"Una cosa que a seguido con nosotros, que pienso que es el recurso numero uno, es el tener una muy buena compañía que nos respalda, cual es la Aseguradora Farmér's. Esta aseguradora a estado por siempre, y ellos tienen una oficina de reclamos aquí, en Midland. Así pude dar este motivo a nuestra clientela."

El crecimiento de su negocio en las años que siguieron, reflejaron una evidente prosperidad a través del Oeste de Tejas a principio de los años ochentas, rápidamente se inundo el pequeño espacio en su oficina tan original.

"Para 1980, mi negocio había crecido tremendamente, y teníamos a tres personas trabajando. Esto fue durante 'la bonanza', y realmente necesitaba mi propia oficina," dice Corrales. "Así que, nosotros construimos la primera sección de nuestra oficina en la cuadra 1100 Estes y Lamesa, y esta fue aproximadamente de 1,200 pies cuadrados. Bueno para el '81' tuvimos que añadirle otros 1,500 pies cuadrados! Ese periodo lo disfrute tremendamente porque tenía a mis hijos trabajando para mi y las cosas estaban trabajando muy suave."

Corrales explica que su agencia siempre a sido una operación familiar, donde sus hijos han recibido entrenamiento en el negocio antes que ellos abrieran sus propias agencias. En 1988 por causas de salud Oralia tuvo que abandonar el negocio, su hijo, David, asumió el control en la agencia de Midland.

Así como ella señala este quinceavo aniversario, Corrales tiene que ver hacia atrás, incluyendo el éxito en la carrera de su negocio, un termino con el Concilio de la Ciudad de Midland, el reconocimiento de líderes de negocios locales y estatales y en el gobierno, y el crecimiento y éxito de sus hijos.

Pero ella también mantiene sus puntos de interés fijos firmemente en el futuro. Su hogar todavía esta lleno con el patrocinio de sus hijos, y ella esta lista para ofrecer sus años de experiencia para cualquiera que este pensando en meterse dentro del mundo de los negocios por ellos mismos, especialmente en el negocio de seguros.

"Ellos deben de ser bien disciplinados, deben de ser bien organizados. Y cuando entren en el mundo de los negocios por ellos mismos, ellos no van a trabajar ocho horas diariamente. Algunas veces ellos tendrán que trabajar veinte horas al día," aconseja Corrales, la cual no habla nomas por su propia experiencia, pero por contactos y conversaciones con otros que operan pequeños negocios a través del Estado. "No es fácil para salir adelante. Usted tiene que pagar una cuota. Y no pienso que no hay trabajo mas difícil, porque usted tiene que tomar rechazamientos."

No importa que carrera la persona escoja, Corrales añade que la cosa mas importante que usted puede hacer es de ir a la escuela, quedarse en la escuela, y obtener una educación. Es una lección que ella misma aprendió de la experiencia.

"Sugiero que cualquiera, no importando cual sea la situación, lo primero es tener una educación escolar," ella dice. "Una vez que usted se casa, y tenga hijos, es muy difícil de regresar y obtener su educación. Es mucho mas fácil cuando uno no tiene obligaciones, cuando uno no tiene responsabilidades, cuando usted no esta inquieto por no tener suficiente comida en la mesa para sus hijos, para obtener esa educación."

"Una persona joven ahora seria boba, de no obtener esa educación habiendo tantas becas a la disposición de uno. Todo lo que tiene que hacer uno es un esfuerzo, y las puertas estarán completamente abiertas."

Hispanic Business is good business

By Jeffrey McDonald

October marks the fifteen anniversary of a successful Midland business, one that began with a woman's search for a new direction in her career, and a joking remark to her boss.

"When I first started the business, I was an insurance clerk with Charlie Harris, who is a Farmer's (Insurance Company) agent. I had never worked insurance in my life," recalled Oralia Corrales, founder of the Corrales Insurance Agency. "I had worked mostly as a social worker with federal housing, and had worked with the community in various areas. I got a little burnt out, doing social work."

"One summer, Charlie's wife was going to take off to be with her kids. So he was looking for help just through the summer. I remember when, one day, I kiddingly told him that I ought to be getting paid what he was getting paid, since I was doing all the work. He said, 'Well, if you're really serious, the company is looking to hire some women.' I said yes, you know, not thinking much about it."

That decision led to some very busy months for Corrales the mother, the insurance clerk, the student, and now a prospective insurance agent.

"They were there to sign me up the next day, so I signed up. A tremendous amount of work was involved, and I started studying immediately," recalled Corrales. "By that time, I had already obtained my GED, and had about 63 hours of college credits. The insurance test is very difficult. My house was still full of little ones, except for my daughter, Jane, who had already gotten married.

"I would get up at five in the morning, and I would study until about seven, get breakfast ready, and get them off to school, get myself to my job, which I still held. Come back in the evening, fix supper, get everybody situated, and then I would lock myself in my room and I would study again."

The perseverance paid off in just a few months when Corrales passed her insurance examinations, and was ready to begin her career as an agent.

"At first, I thought of 'sharing an office' with Charlie, at his place out on the west side," said Corrales. "But as I started contacting various different people, I noticed that there was a drawback in the distance they would have to travel. So, I opened up a little old place here, on north Lamesa Road."

The original home of the Corrales Insurance Agency was very different from the large suite of offices you see today.

There were two rooms. Tom Scott, an attorney friend of ours, gave me my first desk. Another one of our friends, who was a doctor, gave me this old furniture he had," recalled Corrales. "The phone was the biggest asset that I had, because that's what I used every day. To get on the phone to call people, to let them know that I was doing this type of work now."

"One thing that we had going for us, that I guess was the number-one asset, was that we had a very good company behind us, which was Farmer's Insurance. They've been in the business forever, and they had the claims office here, in Midland. So I could make that pitch to our clients."

The growth of her business in the years that followed, growth that reflected the prosperity evident throughout west Texas in the early eighties, quickly overwhelmed the space available in her original office.

"By 1980, my business had grown tremendously, and we had three people working. This was during 'the boom', and I really needed my own office," said Corrales. "So, we built the first section of our office on the 1100 block of Estes and Lamesa, and that was approximately 1,200 square feet. Well, by '81, we had to add another 1,500 square feet! That period was a tremendous joy for me because I had all of my kids working for me, and things were running pretty smooth."

Corrales explained that her agency has always been a family operation, where her children received hands-on to open their own agencies. In 1988, when poor health required Oralia to leave the business, her son, David, assumed control of the Midland agency.

As she marks this fifteenth anniversary, Corrales has much to look back upon, including a successful career in business, a term with the Midland City Council, the recognition of local and state leaders in business and government, and the growth and success of her children.

But she also keeps her sights set firmly upon the future. Her home is still filled with the sounds of children, and she is ready to offer her years of experience to anyone who is thinking of going into business for themselves, especially the insurance business.

"They have to be very disciplined, they have to be organized. And when they go into this business for themselves, they aren't going to work eight-hour days. Sometimes, there may be twenty hours a day," advised Corrales, who speaks not only from her own experience, but from contacts and conversations with other small business operators throughout the state. "There's no easy way out. You have to put in your dues. I don't believe there's a harder job, probably, because you have to take rejection."

No matter what carreer a person may choose, Corrales adds that the most important thing they can do is go to school, stay in school, and get an education. It is a lesson she herself learned from experience.

"I would suggest that anyone, no matter what their situation is, should first get their education," she said. "Once you have gotten married, and had kids, it's very difficult to go back and obtain your education. It's so much easier when you don't have obligations, when you don't have responsibilities, when you're not concerned about having enough food on the table for your kids, to get that education."

"A young person right now would be foolish not to, with as many scholarships as are out there. All they have to do is make some effort, and the doors are wide open."

Education/Educación

Aprendiendo a Través del Comer en la Escuela Gale Pond/Alamo

Por Rey Lascano

La enseñanza cooperativa tiene sus beneficios en el ambiente de clases. El padre de la enseñanza cooperativa, Lev Vigotsky una vez dijo, "lo que un muchacho pueda hacer en cooperación ahora, lo podrá hacer solo en el día de mañana." Teniendo a los estudiantes involucrados en actividades multiculturales en las clases de estudio pueden ser remunerables, especialmente cuando el estudiante a sido puesto en un ambiente de cooperación.

La enseñanza cooperativa y consciente de las culturas van tomadas de las manos. Corporaciones importantes están enfocándose en factores de empleo tal como la habilidad de comunicarse en el lugar de trabajo. Tecnología moderna atrae a paises con culturas únicas y con costumbres mas cerca de uno que mas antes y de acuerdo en tener una relación de negocios, nosotros necesitamos estar siempre alertas de la manera de vida en esas personas.

En el Sudoeste de los Estados Unidos, la comida Mexicana es muy popular para todos aquellos que viven en esa parte del país, para chicos y grandes. A través de experiencias personales, como estudiantes y padres disfrutan involucrandose en la preparación de ciertos alimentos como los tamales. Nosotros como maestros tratamos constantemente de encontrar maneras para que los padres de familia se involucren en el proceso de la educación y actividades tal y como se ha probado su efectividad. Estudiantes y padres tienen la oportunidad de aprender por medio de la disciplina como medir (Matemáticas), leyendo recetas (Lectura), maneras de comunicación (Lenguaje), y aprendiendo acerca de las culturas (Estudios Sociales).

Estudiantes de mi clase han experimentado el proceso de hacer tamales como parte de una temática , que nosotros hicimos para las fiestas Decembrinas. En la temática hemos aprendido acerca de otros paises y sus costumbres durante la época Navideña. Divido mi clase en grupos y cada estudiante en el grupo es responsable por ciertas informaciones que hace la presentación final. Como un aspecto culminante de la actividad, el estudiante compartirá alimentos propios de ese país del que hayan hecho la investigación. El "proyecto tamal" quedo en un lugar al final de todas las presentaciones y todos los grupos estuvieron involucrados en el proceso de hacer los tamales. Enseñanza cooperativa es una técnica ideal para hacer esta clase de proyectos.

Los estudiantes y padres siguen esto "Amigos Estudiantes" receta saludable y como resultado, los tamales se ven como si verdaderamente hayan salido de una cocina auténtica. Como un medio de precaución, los pasos que envuelven electricidad y vapor , un adulto supervisa y es responsable de dichos procesos. Ahora maestro, padres estudiantes, aquí esta todo lo que necesitas para saber acerca de como preparar tamales en la clase de estudios.

No hay palabras que expliquen lo divertido que la pasaron los estudiantes y los padres aprendiendo a través de este proyecto. Muchas de las veces nosotros como maestros, llenos de trabajo que nunca termina en las clases de estudios y padres aseguran de darle el toque ideal al lugar de trabajo a cada uno. Ambos tenemos algo en común, y es el bienestar, el cariño a esos muchachos, y actividades como estas que prestan ellos mismos a nosotros todos juntos para construir ese lazo de unión que se necesita.

"In the southwestern United States, Mexican food is a popular cuisine enjoyed by all walks of life, young and old." — Gale Pond Alamo Elementary teacher Rey Lascano shows students how to make tamales as part of cooperative learning.

Tamales

1 pound corn flour (harina de maiz)
1/2 to 3/4 pound of pork (roast or butt, preferably)
12 to 15 chili pepper pods (red Anaheim)
2 garlic cloves or 1 teaspoon garlic powder
Pinch of oregano
Salt and Pepper to taste
4 to 6 ounces of corn shucks

Boil chili pods. After they come to a boil, put them in blender with the garlic and oregano. Boil the meat, add salt and pepper. After meat has boiled and cooled off, tear it to shreds with hands. Add water to the corn flour and knead to a smooth texture. Add chili that has been blended to the prepared flour and meat. Add chili according to the desired hotness.

Corn shucks need to be soaked a few hours before use. (Corn shuck will be about 4 inches bY 4 inches in dimension.) Then spread thin laYer of "masa" or flour mixture on corn shuck. Place meat about the width of a finger on one side of shuck and roll, starting with the meat side, in the style of "rolling a burrito." Overlap the corn shuck about an inch on one side so the meat and flour mixture will stay contained in place.

Any pot can be used to steam tamales, but results are best when using a roaster oven. Place a 1-inch pie pan upside down in steam container. Add 1 inch of water to the pot or roaster oven. Stack tamales with folded side above the water. Place a wet cloth or towel on top of the tamales then cover the pot or roaster oven.

Steam at about 300 degrees F. from 3 to 4 hours. Let cool and enjoy. Yields one dozen tamales.

1 Libra de harina de maíz
1/2 a 3/4 libras de puerco (Preferiblemente la parte trasera)
12 a 15 piezas de chile colorado (Anaheim rojo)
Dos cabezas de ajo o una cucharada de ajo en polvo
Orégano una pizcacha
Sal y pimienta al gusto
De 4 a 6 onzas de vainas de maíz (hojas de maíz)

Hervir los chiles. Después que estén hervidos, pongalos en la licuadora con los ajos y el orégano. Hierva la carne, añádale la sal y la pimienta. Después que la carne este hervida y se haya enfriado deshebrela con sus manos. Póngale agua a la masa harina y amásela hasta que se convierta en una textura suave, añádale el chile que se licuo con anterioridad a la harina y a la carne. Añádale el chile de acuerdo con lo chiloso que lo quiera.

La vaina del maíz debe ser remojada unas horas antes que se use (la vaina del maíz deberá tener cerca de 4 pulgadas por 4 pulgadas en dimensión) Luego unte en capas delgadas la 'masa' o la masa revuelta con la vaina del maíz. Ponga la carne tanta como lo grueso de su dedo en un lado de la vaina de maíz y enróllela, comience en el lado de la carne, como si fuera a enrollar un burrito. Cierre o doble la vaina del maíz como una pulgada en el lado de la carne y la masa quedara contenida en su lugar.

Cualquier olla puede ser usada para cocer al vapor los tamales, pero los resultados serán mejores cuando se usa horno. Ponga una cacerola de una pulgada la parte superior hacia abajo en el envase de vapor. Añádale una pulgada de agua a la olla o al asador. Ponga los tamales en pila con la parte del pliegue hacia arriba del agua. Póngales una toalla húmeda en la parte superior de los tamales luego cubra la olla o el asador.

Deje que evaporize a unos 300 grados F. de tres a cuatro horas. Pongalos a que se enfríen un poco y luego a disfrutarlos. Rinden con esta receta y sus cantidades una docena de tamales.

Learning Through Eating at Gale Pond/Alamo

By Rey Lascano

Cooperative learining has its benefits in the classroom setting. The father of cooperative learning, Lev Vygotsky, once said, "what a child can do in cooperation today, he can do alone tomorrow." Getting students involved in multicultural activities in the classroom can be rewarding, especially when the student has been placed in a cooperative setting.

Cooperative learning and an awareness of cultures go hand in hand. Major corporations are now focusing on factors for employment such as the ability to communicate in the workplace, work in groups, and share ideas. Cultures are also important in the workplace. Modern technology brings countries with unique cultures and customs closer than ever before an din order to have a business relationship, we need to be aware of a person's way of life.

In the southwestern United States, Mexican food is a popular cuisine enjoyed by all walks of life, young and old. Through personal experience, I've seen how students and parents enjoy getting involved in the preparation of certain food items such as tamales. We as teachers constantly try to find ways to get parents involved in the education process, and activities such as these have proven effective. Students and parents get the opportunity to learn across disciplines by measuring (math}, reading recipes (reading}, communication skills (language), and learning about cultures (social studies).

Students from my class experienced the process of making tamales as part of a thematic unit we did for the Christmas holidays. In the unit we learned about other countries and their customs during Christmas. I divided my class into groups and each student in the group was responsible for certain information that made up the presentation at the end. As a culminating activity, the students would share a holiday food native to the country they had researched. The "tamale project" came into place at the end of all the presentations and all groups were involved in the process of making tamales. Cooperative learning is an ideal technique to use in projects like these.

The students and parents followed this "student friendly" healthy recipe and as a result, the tamales seemed like they came from an experienced homemaker's kitchen. As a precaution, for any steps that involve electricity or steam, an adult must handle that chore. Now teachers, parents, students, here is everything you need to know about making tamales in the classroom.

Words cannot explain the fun the students and parents have in learning through this project. Often times we as teachers/ loaded with never ending work in the classroom and parents, anchored to the workplace lose touch with each other. We both have one thing in common, though, the welfare and love of that same child, and activities like these lend themselves to us all closer together and building the bond that is needed.

aplicarle resucitación cardio pulmonar. Pregunte, luego que comencé, si alguien había llamado al 911, y una dama respondió que si. Y comencé a darle la resucitación a la bebé."

Molina no recuerda muy bien todo lo que paso en esos momentos en su alrededor, mientras él le aplicaba la resucitación a la pequeña Brittany. Un gentío se junto alrededor de ellos, y los paramédicos del Departamento de Bomberos fueron enviados a la escena. Pero Molina estaba solamente consciente de la pequeña niña en sus brazos. Después de unos momentos tensos, el pedazo de fruta fue desalojado de su garganta, y la pequeña niña comenzó a respirar de nuevo.

Los paramédicos llegaron para encontrar a Brittany respirando normalmente, con su color regresando a la normalidad, y su mamá llorando de alivio y gusto. Una tragedia fue prevenida y la historia tuvo un final feliz.

Fue una historia que por consiguiente trajo la atención a Rescue 911 (Rescate 911), un programa de televisión de la 'vida real' que documenta situaciones de emergencia y rescates a través de todo el país.

La tripulación de producción de California primero voló a Dallas, donde ellos condujeron audiciones para el hombre y la mujer que ellos necesitaban para recrear ese día de 1990. La tripulación luego viajo a Odessa, donde la audición continuo, no solamente para el hombre y la mujer, pero para bebé que harían el papel de la pequeña Brittany.

Debido a las demandas de la producción de televisión, las cuales pueden durar por muchas horas durante el día y la noche, el director del programa seleccionó a tres bebés los cuales tomarían turnos en el papel de Brittany.

Dos de los bebés fueron Christopher y Joey Paredes, Junior, hijos gemelos de Joey y Renee Paredes, de Odessa.

La familia Paredes había escuchado de las audiencias por un familiar, quien había escuchado el llamado en el Odessa American. Las audiciones fueron nuevas experiencias para la familia.

"Nosotros solo lo hicimos, y nada mas," dice Renee Paredes, "Nosotros decidimos y tomamos el riesgo, y vimos si lo hacían o no."

La filmación tomo lugar el Lunes, en las oficinas principales del Departamento de Bomberos en el Centro de Odessa, y el Martes y Miércoles en la casa en la Calle Ada donde el rescate tomo lugar.

Paredes encontró una experiencia muy excitante, diferente de cualquier cosa que ella hubiera hecho antes, y que ella disfruto. Ella piensa que los dos niños se comportaron bien durante la filmación, e hicieron una buena actuación.

Si hubo algún contratiempo, fue por causa del maquillaje usado en los niños para que se vieran como si ellos estuvieran ahogándose, maquillaje que les cambiaba a color azul, e hicieron que la piel pareciera de un color gris.

"Espeluznante," dice Paredes. "Se observaba como si fue la cosa real!"

Ella añade que a no le importaría si los niños se transformarán algún día en actores.

"Espero que si," ella dice, riéndose. "Ellos podrían mantenerme a mi y a la familia entera!"

Alguien que puede comentar de algo en lo que respecta al negocio de actuación, es Frank Ybarbo, actor profesional de Dallas, quien fue seleccionado para que hiciera el papel de Molina. Rescate 911 es solo una edición mas de la larga y diversa lista de actuaciones de Ybarbo.

"Bueno, he estado en muchas entarimados actuando en Dallas. En algunos musicales, The Mikado, Ebenizer Scrooge," dice Ybarbo. "Haciendo filmaciones industriales para grandes compañías, como Southland Corporation. Haciendo comerciales con Dairy Queen, y cosas como esas."

"Me gusta esta clase de trabajo. Un poco tedioso, algunas veces, el estar esperando. Pero cuando usted esta haciendo su parte, es donde el premio lo acomete a uno Es muy divertido, y realmente lo disfruto haciéndolo."

Para Ybarbo, un trato especial para el, trabajando en este programa tan particular, fue una oportunidad de conocer y trabajar con Molina, a la persona que representa en el papel en la televisión.

"Es cierto. Es una gran experiencia," dice Ybarbo. "Para mi, es realmente un honor de representar el papel de alguien que a hecho algo como esto por alguien. Así es que me siento muy afortunado que yo pueda hacerlo."

Molina aconseja a Ybarbo y a la tripulación a través de los dos días que tomaron en el lugar de la escena, ayudándolos a llevar a cabo la recreación de los hecho tan auténtica como fuera posible. Mary Cruz, la mamá de Brittany, estuvo a la mano para aconsejarlos. También participaron ellos en entrevistas, las cuales serán editadas dentro del programa, junto con las escenas del estatuto.

Pequeños papeles, como el despachador en le departamento de bomberos, y los paramédicos que llegaron al lugar de los hechos, serán actuados por los mismos que estuvieron en el eventos de los sucesos, de 1990. Residentes de Odessa y Midland fueron contratados para que representaran como 'extras,' en pequeñas partes, actuaciones no verbales, tales como el gentío que se reunió alrededor del sitio de rescate. Otros residentes se emplearon como asistentes de producción.

La producción ofreció a los vecinos de la Calle Ada que vinieran y observaran a 'Hollywood' trabajar. Muchos de los cuales convienen que es una experiencia muy excitante, y que ellos planean para verla en la televisión, la cual estará en el aire en KOSA-TV, Canal 7, en el Oeste de Tejas.

Pero cuando menos un participante en la producción, dice que es tiempo de dejar atrás los artículos del periódico y las historias noticiosas en la televisión, las entrevistas y las ceremonias de premios - aun a Hollywood! Y regresar al mundo real.

"A mi realmente no me gusto tanto," dice Molina, admitiendo que el no esta del todo confortable con toda la atención que el a recibido. "Solamente quiero que todo siga su normalidad. Estoy listo para eso!"

tany. A crowd gathered around them, and paramedics from the Odessa Fire Department were dispatched to the scene. But Molina was conscious only of the little girl in his arms. After a few tense moments, the bit of fruit was dislodged from her throat, and the little girl began to breather again.

The paramedics arrived to find Brittany breathing normally, with color returning to her skin, and her mother crying from relief and joy. A tragedy had been averted, and the story had a happy ending.

It was a story that eventually came to the attention of Rescue 911, a 'real-life' television program that documents emergency situations and rescues across the country.

A production crew from California first flew to Dallas, where they conducted auditions for the men and women they needed to recreate that day in 1990. The crew then traveled to Odessa, where auditions continued, not only for men and women, but for babies who would play the role of Brittany.

Due to the demands of television production, which can last for many hours during the day and night, the director of the program selected three babies who would take turns playing the role of Brittany.

Two of the babies were Christopher and Joey Paredes, Junior, the twin sons of Joey and Renée Paredes, of Odessa.

The Paredes' had learned of the auditions from a relative, who had seen a casting call in the Odessa American. The auditions were a new experience for the family.

"We just did it, that's about it," said Renée Paredes. "We just decided to take a chance, and see if they make it or not."

Filming took place Monday at the Odessa Fire Department's downtown headquarters, and on Tuesday and Wednesday at the home on Ada Street where the actual rescue took place.

Paredes found the experience exciting, different from anything she had done before, and she enjoyed herself. She thought both boys behaved well during the filming, and did a very good job of acting. If there was any drawback, it was the makeup used to make the babies look as if they were choking, makeup that turned the lips blue, and made their skin appear a pale gray.

Scary," said Paredes. "It looks like the real thing!"

She added that she wouldn't mind if the boys someday became professional actors.

"I hope so," she said, laughing. "They can support me and the whole family!"

Someone who could lend some insight into the acting business, is Frank Ybarbo, a professional actor from Dallas, who was selected to portray Molina. Rescue 911 is just one more addition to a long and diverse list of acting credits for Ybarbo.

"Well, I've been in a lot of stage things in Dallas. I've been in some musicals, The Mikado, Ebenezer Scrooge," said Ybarbo. "Doing industrial films for big companies, like the Southland Corporation. I,ve done some commercials with Dairy Queen, and things like that."

"I like this kind of work. It's a little tedious, sometimes, with the waiting around. But when you get to do your part, that's where the reward comes in. It's a lot of fun, and I really enjoy doing it."

For Ybarbo, a special treat for him, working on this particular show, was an opportunity to meet and work with Molina, the man he would portray on television.

"That's right. That's a real experience," said Ybarbo. "For me, it's really an honor to be able to play somebody like that, that's really done something for somebody. So I feel real fortunate that I can do it."

Molina advised Ybarbo and the production crew throughout the two days they spent at the rescue location, helping them to achieve as authentic a recreation as possible. Mary Cruz, Brittany's mother, was also on hand to advise. They also participated in interviews, which will be edited into the show, along with scenes from the re-enactment.

Smaller roles, such as the dispatchers at the fire department, and the paramedics who arrived at the scene, were played by the actual participants in the real event, in 1990. Residents of Odessa and Midland were hired to perform as 'extras', brief, non-speaking roles, such the crowd that gathered around the rescue site. Other residents were hired as production assistants.

The production offered people in the neighborhood of Ada Street to come and watch 'Hollywood' at work. Most agreed that it was an exciting experience, and they plan to watch for the program, which will air on KOSA-TV, Channel 7, in West Texas.

But for at least one participant in the production, it's time to leave the newspaper articles and the television news stories, the interviews and the awards ceremonies - even Hollywood! - behind, and get back to the real world.

"I really don't like it all that much," said Molina, admitting that he's not entirely comfortable with all the attention he has received. "I just want to get back to everything being normal. I'm ready for it!"

They're baaack!

By Leonela

Yes West Texas, they're back! And 'En Grande' describes their latest show. It is also the name of their just released album.

They have travelled from one coast to another since the last time they performed for the West Texas area. With a little more experience behind them, they're here to give us a big dose of FAMA.

The slightly slower tempo of their music gives FAMA that unique and suavesito sound anyone can recognize when they here it. The echoes, the horns and the lyrics, yes the lyrics of their songs make FAMA very well received by West Texas fans.

Lots and lots of enthusiastic fans, especially girls, surround the stages and scream like crazy whenever FAMA performs. The audience loves to sing along with Javier, every word of every song in the album 'Como Nunca,' the audience knows them all.

FAMA, whose members include Javier Galvan - vocalist, Oscar Galvan - bass, Edgar Galvan - saxophone, Israel Dominguez - keyboards, John Baraza - guitarist, Eddie Gonzales - trumpet and Ed Dominguez - drums, really enjoy the reaction they get from their audiences. It pumps them full of energy. The louder the audience, the better the show.

When the show is over, FAMA still gets plenty of attention from the audience. This is probably FAMA's favorite part of the show, when they get to meet some of their fans. The good part about it is that they really want to meet their fans, sign autographs, take pictures with their fans and maybe even get a little 'hello' hug. FAMA loves it all.

FAMA's new release 'En Grande' also has a video in the making. All the songs on this album are new and most of them having been written by Javier. Keep an ear out for their newest release on the airwaves, and get ready to fall in love again either with FAMA or the one by your side.

FAMA's present performance has more special effects, lights and the choreography, well, the performance itself is more powerful and energetic than ever before.

FAMA has grown with their music and it shows 'En Grande'!

FAMA will be performing Friday, October 8, 1993 at the Howard County Fairbarn in Big Spring, Texas. They will also be performing on Saturday, October 9, 1993 at the International Ballroom, 201 Alabama St., in Odessa. The Odessa show is co-sponsored by Odessa College's SALSA. Por Leonela

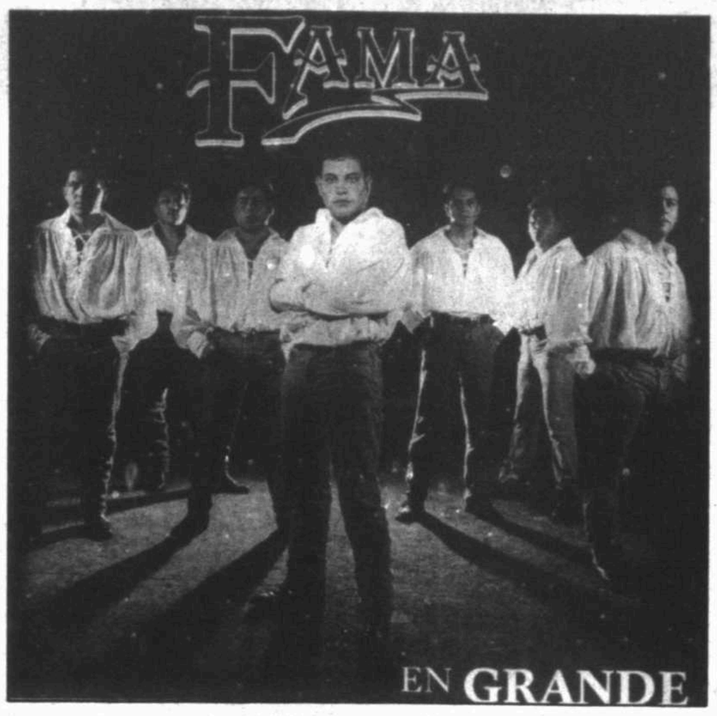
Así es Oeste de Tejas, ellos han regresado. Y 'En Grande' describiendo su ultima función. Es también el nombre de su ultimo álbum.

Ellos han viajado de costa a costa desde que ellos se presentaron en el Oeste de Tejas. Con un poco mas de experiencia, están aquí para ofrecernos una gran dosis de FAMA.

El tono bajito de su música le da a FAMA ese toque único y suavecito que cualquiera puede distinguir cuándo ellos se presentan aquí. Los ecos, las trompetas y lo lírico, si lo lírico de sus canciones hace que a FAMA sea bien recibido por sus aficionados del Oeste de Tejas.



Muchos pero muchos aficionado entusiastas especialmente muchachas, rodean los entarimados y gritan como locas cuando FAMA se presenta. A la audiencia le encanta cantar junto con Javier, cada letra de cada canción del álbum 'Como Nunca' la audiencia de la sabe toda completa.

FAMA cuales sus miembros son Javier Galvan - vocalista, Oscar Galvan - el bajo, Edgar Galvan - saxofón, Israel Dominguez - teclado, John Baraza - guitarrista, Edie Gonzalez - trompeta, y Ed Dominguez - batería, ellos realmente disfrutan la reacción de su audiencia. Vibran llenos de energía. Entre mas la audiencia grite, mejor es la función.

Cuando la función termina, FAMA obtiene mas atención de parte de la audiencia. Tal vez es la parte de la función favorita de FAMA, cuando ellos se presentan con algunos aficionados. La parte buena es que ellos si quieren conocer a sus aficionados, firmando autógrafos, tomándose fotos con ellos y tal vez un abrazo don un 'HOLA'. FAMA ama esto.

El nuevo álbum de FAMA "En Grande" también tiene en curso el video. Todas las canciones en este álbum son nuevas y muchas de estas están escritas por Javier. Manténgase informado de su nueva realización en las olas del aire, y este lista para enamorarse una vez mas de FAMA o del que este a su lado.

Las presentaciones de FAMA presentan mas efectos de luces especiales y mas coreografía. Su presentación es mas poderosa y llena de energía que antes.
