Border bridge

Like many residents of San Antonio del Rio, Francisco Uaden illegally crosses the Rio Grande each day, using this rickety footbridge at Candelaria, Texas.

BORDER SOCIETY
Fourth in a series

CANDELARIA, Texas — Celedonio Ornelas illegally crosses the Mexican border into this tiny hamlet each day.

There is no subterfuge involved, however. The U.S. government knows but doesn't care.

Ornelas simply walks from his village, San Antonio del Rio, a few hundred yards south of the Rio Grande, across a weathered suspension footbridge that links the two countries here.

There are no immigration or customs authorities to police the unofficial port of entry, no city or federal government agencies involved, and none of the interminable traffic jams that tourists returning from Tijuana or Ciudad Juarez have come to expect.

In fact, vehicles are unable to cross the river — which begins its twist toward the Gulf Coast at Candelaria, about 150 miles southeast of El Paso, Texas.

This town of fewer than 20 people is starkly isolated. Getting here requires a tortuous 15-mile drive over an unpaved, rock-strewn road.

Virtually cut off from the outside world, Candelaria and San Antonio del Rio exist as a single community that ignores international boundaries and government regulations.

The border — heavily patrolled and tightly controlled in places — does not seem to exist here. But the border society has grown here because of the isolation.

Most of those Mexicans who cross over from San Antonio work for Marion Walker and her sister, Nell Howard, who own the largest cattle ranch in the region. Others come over to shop in the sisters' 81-year-old general store, the only one for miles around.

Residents see nothing remarkable in their non-border border. They note that the hamlets are interdependent, so an open border is practical. Many years ago, people from both sides of the border got tired of wading across the river, so they built the bridge.

Government officials never got involved in the project.

A more important reason for the special relationship, they say, is that few of those who cross from Mexico do so with the intent of staying in the United States.

There is one government agency that keeps an eye on the area — the Border Patrol.

But Marcelino Lozano, for the past 35 years foreman on Walker and Howard's cattle ranch, says that U.S. immigration officials are unconcerned when they find San Antonio residents here illegally.

A sort of truce is in effect whereby Mexicans can freely stroll into the United States.

"The migra (as Mexicans commonly call U.S. immigration agencies and their officials) might see them in the store or walking around and they don't even ask them for papers," says Lozano.

The truce doesn't extend beyond here, however.

Should illegal border crossers attempt to venture beyond Candelaria, according to local residents, they run the risk of being picked up and sent back to Mexico.

Autry, on second try, executed by injection

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — James David Autry, smiling at a female pen-pal and saying "I love you," was executed with a lethal injection early today for killing a convenience store clerk.

It was the second time within six months that Autry lay strapped to a hospital gurney in the death chamber, intravenous needles inserted into his arms. But this time there was no stay of execution.

Autry was pronounced dead at 12:40 a.m. by prison doctor L.A. Masters.

Gov. Mark White had announced 70 minutes earlier that he would not halt the execution.

The U.S. Supreme Court had voted 7-2 earlier Tuesday to reject Autry's request for a fourth stay.

At 12:03 a.m. Autry was strapped to the gurney with white leather belts. A needle was inserted in his left arm at 12:05 and into his right arm at 12:10. At 12:15, a saline solution to carry the fatal drugs began to flow. A minute later, the witnesses were brought into the death chamber.

The flow of lethal drugs began at 12:25 a.m. Warden Jack Purley asked Autry if he had any last words, and Autry replied, "No."

Autry smiled at Shirley Tadlock, a Dallas mother of three who began corresponding with Autry last October. "I love you," Autry said.

Mrs. Tadlock, clutching a wad of pink tissues, answered, "I love you, too."

After the inmate was pronounced dead, Mrs. Tadlock asked permission to hug and kiss the body. The request was denied.

Autry's body was taken to Houston immediately and an autopsy was performed by the Harris County Medical Examiner's office, Deputy Medical Examiner Jay Evans said today.

"He arrived shortly after 2 a.m. and went through the normal procedures," Evans said. "Everything is on hold" pending completion of chemical tests, he said.

Autry's body was removed from the Harris County morgue at 7:40 a.m. today, Evans said. He refused to say who claimed the body and referred other questions to Justice of the Peace Lloyd Roark in Huntsville. No one answered a phone call to Roark's office.

Autry left all his possessions to the Dallas woman, who was brought to the prison by her husband, Ray.

'Marathon' shapes up

Walter Mondale and Gary Hart, each missing opportunities to sprint to an early victory, emerged from the Super Tuesday primaries and caucuses resigned to running "a marathon all the way to California" for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Before the New Hampshire primary, speculation was rampant that Mondale might wrap up the nomination in Tuesday's balloting. After New Hampshire, there was talk of a Hart tidal wave capable of sinking Mondale.

But the mixed bag of results from the nine primaries and caucuses Tuesday left both camps agreeing that neither will have it easy from now until the San Francisco convention in July.

"It's going to be a marathon all the way to California," Mondale told supporters Tuesday.

"This is going to be a long, tough fight," said Hart campaign manager Oliver Henkel.

Of the five primaries on Tuesday, Hart carried Florida, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, while Mondale was the winner in Georgia and Alabama.

Hart and Mondale were only a few votes apart in Oklahoma caucuses, while Hart jumped to a comfortable lead in Washington.

Caucus results from Hawaii had Mondale winning only 5 of 27 delegates up for grabs, with the other 22 remaining uncommitted. Hart was leading Mondale in Nevada's caucuses.

Man 'chasing' sheriff's race

By ED TODD

Painter, so far thwarted in his efforts to oppose his former boss, Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith, will take his case before the Texas Court of Appeals in El Paso on Monday. He is banking on the three-judge court to order Midland County Republican Party Chairman William T. "Bill" Shaner to place his name on the ballot in the May 5 primary.

Painter's lawyer, Austin attorney Buck Wood who specializes in election laws, has petitioned the court for a writ of mandamus to compel Shaner to accept Painter's application for candidacy.

"He (Wood) called it a 'classic case,'" Painter, 36, said Tuesday. "'There has never been a case like this before in Texas politics.' He feels very confident my name will be on the ballot."

Painter said Wood "from the outset knew something was wrong" with the situation and that Painter's "name should be on the ballot."

On the afternoon of Feb. 6, the final day of a 30-day period in which would-be candidates could file for office, Painter resigned his patrol lieutenant's post with the sheriff's office. He then sought out Shaner to file his candidacy prior to the 6 p.m. filing deadline.

BUT SHANER, a geological engineer, was on well site near Plains southwest of Lubbock. By the time Painter had driven the 167 miles to the site, it was 8:27 p.m. — almost 2½ hours past the filing deadline.

Painter said Shaner made a "mistake" by not being readily available at the crucial last-day filing time and had "violated his public office" by not being at hand. Shaner, who said he had no idea of any impending filings at deadline time, noted that he had to make a living but had been available to accept filings 80 percent of the time during the 30-day filing period.

City seeks tract sales documents

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

City officials this morning were still searching files for documents verifying sale of two tracts of land at Midland Air Park that amount to $70,000 which have been requested by an auditor with the U.S. Department of Transportation.

Midland City Council was told about the missing papers during its regular meeting Tuesday in City Hall. At that time, documents for three sales were missing. Papers for one sale amounting to $45,000 were found during the afternoon.

If all the papers can't be found, according to Finance Director Troy Gifford, the city may have to transfer money from its General Fund to the Airport Fund to make up the difference. On Tuesday, the council was told it might be up to $100,000.

In a related matter, the council decided not to accept a bid for $65,000 for another tract of Air Park land from the American Cancer Society. The land had been appraised for $162,000 and the Federal Aviation Administration warned the city would have to make up the difference if the bid were accepted.

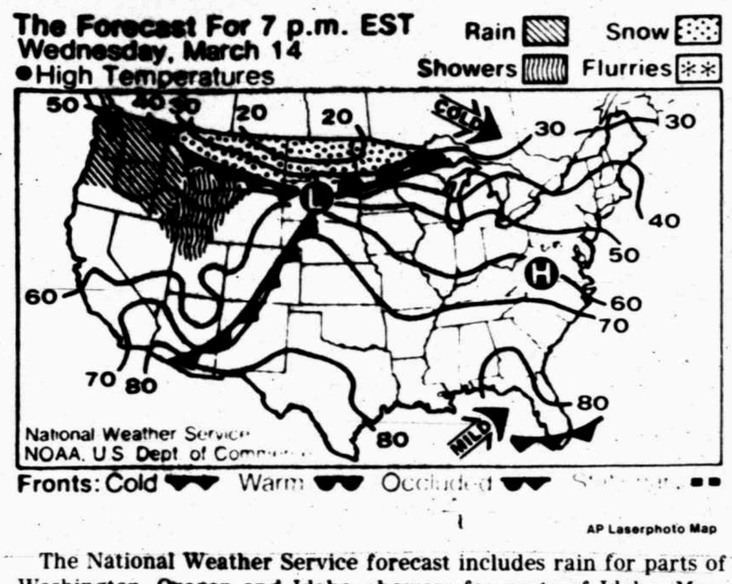
WEATHER SUMMARY



AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecast includes rain for parts of Washington, Oregon and Idaho; showers for parts of Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Utah and Nevada; and snow from Idaho east to Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Warm, windy weather should last several days

From Staff and Wire Reports

Warm weather and slight winds will continue in the Permian Basin for the next couple of days.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, tonight will be fair with a low in the lower 50s. Thursday should be partly cloudy with a high in the upper 70s.

Southerly winds will breeze at 10-15 mph tonight, shifting to southwesterly at 15-20 mph Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 80 missed the record high of 88, set in 1971, by eight degrees. The overnight low of 48 was twice as warm as 1954's record low of 24.

STATE

Dense fog covered wide areas of Texas' eastern half before dawn today as an area of high pressure over the eastern United States pushed in moist air from the Gulf of Mexico.

The heaviest fog hovered over Southeast and South Central Texas and along the coast, cutting visibilities to near zero in many locales and creating a navigational hazard.

Patches of lighter fog dotted Northeast and North Central Texas. Light drizzle dampened the Austin and McAllen areas.

Meanwhile, mostly clear skies dominated the western half of the state.

Pre-dawn temperatures were mostly in the 50s and 60s, with a few readings in the upper 30s and 40s noted across the Panhandle and the mountains of West Texas. Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 38 at Marfa to 71 at Brownsville.

NATION

A snowstorm packing up to 15 inches blanketed much of New England today as an ice storm glazed southeastern New York and northwest New Jersey.

Meanwhile, in the West, a Pacific storm brought rain from California to the northern Rockies, turning to snow in the mountains.

Winter storm warnings and travelers' advisories were posted for the Northeast, where 15.7 inches of snow was on the ground at Albany, N.Y.; 5 inches at Concord, N.H., and Portland, Maine; 4 inches at Montpelier, Vt.; 3 inches at Brunswick, Maine, and Glens Falls, N.Y.; and 2 inches at Burlington, Vt., Augusta, Maine, and Plattsburgh, N.Y.

Snow totals of up to foot and a half were possible for some locations today, the National Weather Service said.

Arab League begins gulf talks

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Foreign ministers and ranking diplomats from 19 Arab League nations opened a meeting today on ways of ending the Iraq-Iran war, which has raged in the Persian Gulf for 42 months.

Iraq had requested the "urgent" conference of Arab foreign ministers, which went into session at 10 a.m. in the heavily guarded Rashid Hotel.

Arab League Secretary-General Chedli Klibi told the opening session the conferees should view the talks as "a test of the Arab states' ability to close their ranks to impose peace, protect an ~~Arab land~~, and stand hard and fast by an Arab people engaged in the defense of a part of the Arab nation."

The League was formed in 1945 with the stated goals of strengthening relations among member states by coordinating policies in various fields and of mediating disputes between members, or between members and third parties.

Today's meeting had been scheduled for Tuesday, but was postponed.

Mohammed Saeed, undersecretary in Iraq's Foreign Ministry, said Tuesday that members had agreed to continue deliberations on a draft resolution and to wait for the arrival of the foreign ministers of Sudan and Morocco, who were expected overnight.

Iraq had said before the meeting convened that it expected the League to condemn the Iranian "aggression" and come out clearly in support of Moslem Iraq and against Persian Iran.

The Baghdad meeting came as a United Nations team was in Tehran, capital of Iran, to investigate charges by Iran that Iraq had employed chemical warfare in the gulf war, which began with a dispute over the Shatt Al-Arab waterway.

Iraq has denied the charges and offered to cooperate in any investigation. It did not immediately respond to Iran's latest accusation Tuesday that Iraq used chemical weapons again that day in an attack on Iranian forces in the Majnoon Islands east of Basra, and injured "tens" of Iranian soldiers.

Baghdad radio also claimed heavy fighting in the Basra front and day-long raids by Iraqi jets and helicopter gunships against "Iranian troop buildups."

In Tehran, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, IRNA, said the four-member U.N. team of experts in chemical weaponry was asked to visit the Majnoons immediately to check out Iran's claims.

A U.N. spokesman in New York said Tuesday the team would spend five days in Iran.

Following a trend experienced by three other airlines which attempted service between the two West Texas cities, Wise's shortage of passengers on the 19-seat de Havilland twin-engine Otter resulted in a 33 percent average passenger load, according to Wise Airlines President N.M. Mitchell III.

On March 7, Texas Aeronautics Commission received a letter from Mitchell asking to grant a suspension of the service between the two cities, effective April 1.

But Mitchell this morning told the Reporter-Telegram from San Angelo that a change in equipment would save the service.

According to TAC Air Carrier Administration Director C. Harry Rodgers, a 15-day notice for those opposing the airlines departure was put out when Wise requested suspension. Apparently, "the City of Midland made some concessions and the airline decided to go with a craft with less seats," Rodgers said. "All cities would rather keep their air service."

Mitchell changed his mind Tuesday about the request to suspend the service because of "the ability to find another turbo jet-powered aircraft with lower operating costs," he said. The new craft, a PA-T-1040, which seats 11 passengers, should increase the passenger load to 50 percent, he estimated.

"And the operating cost per hour will be about half as much," Mitchell said. "This should be profitable and allow us to develop the market faster and come back and increase the equipment."

By increasing the equipment, Mitchell said he was referring to more flights between the cities, not larger aircraft.

Currently, Flight 103 departs San Angelo at noon, arriving in Midland at 12:40 p.m. Flight 204 departs Midland at 3 p.m., arriving in San Angelo at 3:40 p.m.

Wise Airlines also has flights between San Angelo and Dallas Love Field, Brownwood and Austin. A flight from San Angelo to San Antonio through Austin will begin April 2, and plans also are being made to serve Lubbock and Amarillo, Mitchell said.

He expressed happiness with continuing the service between Midland and San Angelo, citing an increase of about 60 percent in the passenger load during February.

"We're happy to have things worked out this way," Rodgers agreed. "We never like to see a suspension."

According to Rodgers, TransTexas and later Texas International had tried to serve the two cities "on and off for a period of time. Then Permian Airlines attempted that route but Permian Airlines had other financial problems and went defunct maybe two or three years ago.

"The concept of Wise was the San Angelo passengers could connect to two low-cost airlines, Muse and Southwest," Rodgers said. "I thought that it was a good concept — at least it was one that hadn't been tried before."

Eleven-year-old Meredith Medly sent a letter to NASA volunteering to be the first child to ride the shuttle into space.

Texas girl requests space shuttle flight

PORT ARANSAS, Texas (AP) — Eleven-year-old Meredith Medley doesn't think her 90-pound body would take up much room on the space shuttle, so she's filed an "application" with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"Dear NASA," Meredith recently wrote, with a carbon copy to President Reagan, "Have you'll thought about taking a child on the space shuttle? Please consider me for a Columbia run."

She said she came up with the idea from Samantha Smith, the 10-year-old Manchester, Maine, youngster who wrote the late Soviet President Yuri Andropov about world peace and ended up on a free tour of Russia.

"That gave me the idea about my letter," she said.

Meredith said her parents, Paul and Sue Medley, encouraged her to write the letter and have also given her permission to fly in a shuttle.

"Sometimes parents think children are here just to make them happy. Children can do a lot of things adults can do, like going to space," Meredith said.

She said she's willing to do whatever it takes to become a child astronaut.

"I am willing to train," she said. "I am willing to go anytime they (NASA) want me. I believe I can handle it OK."

The 4-foot-5 sixth-grader says her 90-pound body wouldn't take up much room in the shuttle. She said she wanted to go into space for Texas, Port Aransas, her parents and all the children of the world.

"Port Aransas is so small that something big like this (a shuttle flight), is something that would make people look at us," she said. "I like Port Aransas for the beach and I have friends here."

Meredith said her hobbies include cats, space, rock 'n' roll music, ocean study, television, wrestling and art, although her computer is her main interest.

"My dad has a math program (in the home computer) to help me with my math. I'm not that good in math. The computer will help me get better so I will be ready when I hear from NASA," she said.

City officials still seeking documentation of sales

City Manager James Brown said the auditors were checking the history of sales of city land to see how the prices compared with the appraisals. "There's $100,000 of sales we can't find. If we can't find it, money from the General Fund would have to be turned over to the Airport Fund." Out of a "sheetful of sales," he said the staff had not been able to find the papers on three.

Gifford said two of the sales date back to the 1960s, the third from 1978-81, and the papers could be in a warehouse.

The audit was prompted by the FAA, according to Deputy City Manager Fred Poe. The council at its Tuesday meeting finalized a land swap involving land at Air Park for 2,600-plus acres northeast of the city. This swap, according to Poe, was another reason for the audit.

"They came through first to verify that all proceeds from sales of airport land went to the Airport Fund," Poe said. "Now they're back looking for appraisals on all sales to arrive at how we decided on the price. So far, they haven't found any that we sold for less than appraisal price. The FAA said if we couldn't prove we had put the money in the Airport Fund or we sold it at less than appraisal price, we would have to make up the difference. We've got the sales, we just haven't found all the appraisals."

Gifford said if the $100,000 in sales can't be located, tranferring the money from the General Fund to the Airport Fund doesn't affect the taxpayer.

When a bid from the American Cancer Society for a tract of Air Park land was opened, it came to only 40 percent of the appraised price. The land is located in A Street Community Center, which is Air Park land.

Poe, noting that the FAA wants to give final approval on all such sales, warned that the city might have to pull $100,000 out of its pockets for the Airport Fund if this bid is accepted.

The council decided to talk with representatives of the American Cancer Society at the March 27 meeting before accepting or rejecting the bid.

But Shaner nevertheless accepted Painter's application on the condition the Texas Secretary of State said he could legally accept it.

Painter said the Secretary of State told him and Wood that Shaner "had the option of accepting it or rejecting it" because of the "extenuating circumstances."

Shaner, however, said Karen C. Gladney, director of the Secretary of State's Elections Division, said "6 o'clock is 6 o'clock" and that the Texas Election Code rule on the filing deadline "would stand up in any court in the country. That's the letter of the law."

Shaner said he had not designated a surrogate to act in his stead when he was out of town at the filing deadline time. He said the Texas Election Code makes no provisions for stand-ins. The code says applications for candidacy "shall be filed with the county chairman" prior to 6 p.m. on the first Monday in February.

"THERE'S NO equivocation," Shaner said Tuesday. "There's no other person that can take it, not the executive secretary."

"That's the law," he said. "It's bent in a number of cases, but that still does not answer my problem."

At that time, the county's Republican Party did not have an executive secretary. "I do now," Shaner said. "I didn't then."

John Steiner, director of the legal section of the Secretary of State's Elections Division, on Tuesday said the party's executive secretary may accept applications for candidacy. He did not cite a law or case law backing up his contention.

Steiner, who said his office was not involved in the Painter-vs.-Shaner litigation, said whether or not the appellate court orders Shaner to place Painter's name on the ballot "may hinge on the facts of the individual situation."

The case is to be heard by Chief Justice Stephen F. Preslar and Associate Justices William E. Ward and Max N. Osborn. Painter noted that lower courts were bypassed in his case, since the Texas Election Code provides that the judicial process can be speeded up in election-related cases such as his.

Shaner said he was seeking an attorney to represent his stance in the case. "I'm a geological engineer — not a lawyer," he said. "I would rather not go down by myself."

Shaner noted that the hearing on Painter's case is "timely." On Monday night, Republican and Democratic Party chairmen by law are to approve names on the primary ballots.

"Of course," Painter said, "I don't know if they (the three judges) are going to decide right there on the spot."

The hearing initially was scheduled for 10 a.m. Monday, but Shaner is trying to get the hearing set an hour earlier so that he can catch a 12:15 p.m. return flight to Midland to approve the ballot and, if the court so orders, to include Painter's name on it.

"It would be another case of old Shaner being out of town" should he miss the flight due to the court hearing, Shaner said. "I'm damned if I do" and damned if I don't. I just do what I can, the best that I can."

Should Painter get on the ballot, he will be contesting Smith, sheriff since 1977, for the Republican Party's nomination for sheriff. Winner of that race will be opposed by Democrat Joe Carr, a detective sergeant in the Midland Police Department.

"Everybody has been very supportative," said the 6-foot-5 Painter. "People will recognize me and say they are rooting for me and are encouraging me to go with it."

ROTC survival test becomes 'too real'

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — A winter ROTC exercise to test survival skills in the Wyoming mountains was all too real for 17-year-old Duane Matson and dozens of other students, who brushed death in freezing weather and "neck-deep" snow.

"We were supposed to survive in the worst conditions, and it was the worst," Matson said Tuesday in a telephone interview from his Casper home, recalling the frigid conditions Saturday night on Muddy Mountain.

The wet snow reached "neck-deep at times" on his 5-foot-6 frame, he said, adding, "We literally had to blaze a trail to get to the site."

The overnight camping trip ended abruptly when Sgt. Al Smith, an instructor in the ROTC program for Natrona County schools, was forced to radio for help. Rescuers used helicopters and snowmobiles to evacuate the 35 students from the 8,200-foot mountain near Casper after Matson and two others suffered the ffects of extreme cold, with outdoor temperatures in the 20s.

Smith has operated the survival outings for five years without incident, and Matson enjoyed the trip last year, but said this time was different.

"Last year we only went in about three miles," the teen-ager said. "This year we went much farther than we should've, about four or five miles."

Matson said he started to suffer from hypothermia — lowered body temperature — when he arrived at the campsite as the sun was setting and temperatures dropped. "The wet snow had soaked my boots and everything," he said.

He also said combat boots and fatigues provided by Smith "did not protect us from the cold."

Smith could not be reached for comment Tuesday night; his wife said he did not wish to come to the telephone or wish to be interviewed.

As Matson and three companions struggled to set up a lean-to while the wind kept extinguishing their fire, "that's when the hypothermia started to set in," he recalled. "I felt terrible. I didn't know what was going on. I couldn't remember anything and I felt everything was closing in on me. It was frightening."

A friend, Charles Schoenwolf, said the ROTC courses had taught them to recognize the symptoms of hypothermia.

Autry repeatedly professes love for woman pen pal

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Convicted killer, James David Autry, executed by lethal injection early today, declined any last statement, but repeatedly professed his love for a Dallas mother of three who corresponded with him over the past several months.

Shirley Tadlock was the only one of 23 witnesses to the execution to sob openly. She repeatedly exchanged with him the phrase "I love you."

Autry only once complained of pain and writhed only once briefly during the execution.

Witnesses were searched by Texas Department of Corrections officials before they were led to the death chamber door at 12:16 a.m.

Texas Department of Corrections Maj. H.L. Scott said Autry was not yet ready, and the witnesses huddled for nine minutes in a courtyard before they were led into the newly renovated powder-blue facility.

At 12:25, Autry, watching as the witnesses were led in, was strapped to a gurney with white leather belts. The straps wound around his ankles, just below his knees, at his thighs, at his waist, and around his chest. A sixth strap, designed to go just above his waist, was not used.

state

Warden Jack Pursley asked at 12:25 whether Autry had any last words. The condemned man replied, "No." The lethal injection was started.

Mrs. Tadlock then cried out, "I love you. I love your pretty brown eyes. I love you, J.D."

"I love you, too," Autry said.

Three minutes into the execution, Autry's left foot began twitching.

Mrs. Tadlock and Autry exchanged more "I love yous" and Autry began to wiggle both of his feet and began breathing deeply.

Just before 12:30 he grunted, heaved a large sigh and winced. His eyes became cloudy, began closing slowly and he looked dazed.

At 12:31 he began breathing even deeper. Mrs. Tadlock cried out again, "I love you." Autry said, "Oh, it's hurting."

Just before 12:33 his head shot up and he looked around.

Larry Scott, who had been corresponding with Autry for about a year, said, "Hey, J.D., you got Bob and Larry here," referring to Bob Tarbutton, a former cellmate of Autry's. Scott and Tarbutton attend the same church in Houston, and Scott began writing Autry at Tarbutton's urging.

Autry looked up at Pursley, who was standing behind him. Then he stared again at Mrs. Tadlock, and they again exchanged loving words.

At 12:35 his legs squirmed and his knees popped up.

Dr. L.A. Masters, a TDC staff physician, arrived and watched over Autry for two minutes. The convict appeared to be unconscious. His eyes were half open, he didn't blink and he didn't appear to be breathing.

Just after 12:38 Masters pulled out his stethoscope, checked Autry's chest, then put a small flashlight to Autry's eyes, checked his heart again, and at 12:40 pronounced Autry dead.

Mrs. Tadlock asked that the doctor close Autry's eyes. The doctor attempted to, but the eyes would not close.

Chaplain Caroll Pickett leaned over to Mrs. Tadlock and said, "He's with God."

Mrs. Tadlock asked if she could hug Autry, but TDC officials refused to allow her beyond the jail-like bars that separated the witnesses fromm the actual execution.

Victim's relatives 'relieved'

By The Associated Press

After James David Autry's three previous dates with an executioner were stayed, one by only 30 minutes, relatives of the 29-year-old drifter's victims said they were relieved that he had finally died.

"I just feel justice has been done," said Harold Ferrell in a telephone interview from his home in Duncan, Okla. Ferrell is the brother of Shirley Drouet, a Port Arthur convenience store clerk. Autry was convicting of killing in a hold-up in 1980. Prosecutors said Autry shot Mrs. Drouet between the eyes rather than pay for a six-pack of beer.

"I didn't know it (the execution) would take place, but I didn't figure they'd stop it this time," Ferrell said.

Autry was taken to the death chamber on Oct. 5 and strapped to a hospital gurney. Intravenous needles were inserted in his arms in preparation for the lethal injection. But with 30 minutes to spare, U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron White issued a stay.

James Ferrell, Mrs. Drouet's other brother, reached at his home in Gonzales, La., was not aware early today that Autry had been executed. He said he didn't think Autry would actually be killed.

"I knew it was scheduled, but I didn't expect it to take place because of the last time," James Ferrell said.

He declined to say how he felt about the execution.

Mrs. Drouet, a 43-year-old mother of five, was working overtime at the store to earn extra money.

A former Catholic priest, Joseph Broussard, was also killed in the gunfire. Tommy Svarnas, a crewman on a Greek freighter anchored at Port Arthur, had hitched a ride with Broussard. Svarnas was left brain damaged.

"I'm glad it's done, glad it's over," said Svarnos' brother, Jimmy, from his home in Brick Town, N.J. "It has been a long time."

Svarnos said he also felt something would happen to interfere with the execution.

"I feel comfortable. If he (Autry) is going to kill somebody, then he's got get killed," Svarnos said in broken English.

"My brother came to this country with dreams, with muscle," Svarnas said. "He was a very strong man. Now he's like a baby. He can dress himself, but he forgets things. You have to tell him things too many times. You have to watch him 24 hours a day.

"If there is a law to execute people, this guy deserves to die."

IRS: Returns being filed more slowly

AUSTIN (AP) — Internal Revenue Service officials say taxpayers in the Southwest are waiting longer to file their federal income tax returns this year, and that will mean longer waits for refunds.

"Our latest figures indicate tax returns are coming in about 20 percent more slowly than last year at this time," said Bob Branson, spokesman for the IRS regional service center in Austin.

"We really don't know why, but we're not really concerned about it. As the filing deadline of April 15 nears, we are sure that gap will be closed," Branson said.

One effect of the slower filing pace is that seasonal hiring by the IRS service center has lagged this year, he said.

Normally, the 1,800-employee service center and some 2,000 temporary employees receive the heaviest load of returns beginning in late February. This year, that peak may not come until late this month, Branson said.

He said the IRS so far has hired about 1,700 of its expected 2,000 Austin seasonal workers.

The Austin IRS center processed 24 million tax returns last year from Texas, New Mexico, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Kansas.

Those who wait longer to file returns will have to wait longer for refunds from the government. Those filing returns now must wait six to eight weeks, Branson said, but those who wait until the last minute will have to wait eight to 10 weeks.

About 80 percent of individuals filing returns receive refunds, he said. This year, refunds in the Austin district covering south Texas have averaged $498 each, about the same as last year, he said.

Laura Tynes, Waco, state president of the Texas Parent Teachers's Association sits next to H. Ross Perot, chairman of the Governor's Select Committee on Education at a joint news conference Tuesday in Austin.

Perot: Proposals vital to students

He suggests spending more on younger children

AUSTIN (AP) — Some changes being recommended for the Texas public school system are vital not only to the state's children but to its economic future, H. Ross Perot said Tuesday.

Perot, whose Select Committee on Public Education will begin drafting its final report in Dallas today, said two key changes should be made quickly.

More money needs to be spent on early childhood development and more attention should be paid to children who don't speak English as their primary language, he said.

"If we don't get this segment of our population competitive, we'll look like Detroit in 30 years," Perot said.

In Austin to address state PTA leaders, Perot declined to estimate what his committee's final proposals might cost. But he said the panel understands the need to stay within a budget.

Perot said the cost of public education in Texas has climbed from $1.75 billion to $8.3 billion in 10 years. If the current system isn't changed, that will hit $25 billion by the year 2000 and things still won't improve, he said.

"Education is like PAC-man. It will eat up every dollar you send to Austin..."

— H. Ross Perot

"Education is like PAC-man," he said, referring to a popular video game. "It will eat up every dollar you send to Austin. Our committee will be very responsible."

But if starting from scratch, he said, "we could build a system that would put this state at the top of the charts for $8.3 billion."

The Legislature ultimately will decide whether to enact the committee's proposals. Perot said some recommendations would have to be delayed for cost reasons, but money could be squeezed from existing programs for the most-needed changes.

Perot said his committee's recommendations would range from proposals which cost nothing — such as increasing homework for students — to spending more on younger children.

"If we just started assigning more homework, you would see a dramatic improvement. We can't have a school system that is do diluted and so watered down that all you have to do is stay alive to get through it."

Perot said more attention must be paid to "the neglected and deprived (4-and 5-year-old) children in our state. Nobody hugs these children. Nobody makes them feel good about themselves."

As a result, many deprived children start school developmentally far behind children of the same age, and are turned off to school from the first day. Some eventually turn to crime, he said.

"I think you'll see more and more money put into elementary education. It is cheaper (in the long run) to send them to Harvard than to Huntsville," Perot said.

As for students who don't speak English, Perot said it is foolish to say the public school system can't accommodate them.

"Twenty percent of our school population is Hispanic. We've got to get these children into the mainstream. These children have got to get competitive. We can't have a large unskilled workforce in Texas."

One way to economically make changes in the school system would be to divert some money from non-essential high school programs to early childhood development, he added. Money also could be shifted from courses such as wood shop to English and mathematics.

"I would venture a guess that the state won't collapse if we don't teach pottery in public schools," he said.

AT&T rate hike request delayed

AUSTIN (AP) — The state Office of Public Utility Counsel applauded AT&T Communications' decision Tuesday to delay seeking a $300 million increase in long distance phone rates.

After AT&T announced its decision, counsel Jim Boyle said the long distance company now should drop its rate hike request entirely.

"I think the responsible thing for (AT&T Communications) would be to withdraw their proposal to increase long distance telephone rates," said counsel Jim Boyle.

Boyle said AT&T, having operated independently from the old the Bell System only a short time, can base its rate requests only on "estimates, speculation and predictions in its rate applications."

Tom Jones, a vice president of AT&T Communications of the Southwest, said the delay was requested beccause the Public Utilities Commission next month is scheduled to determine a permanent long distance access charge.

The access charge is a fee local telephone companies assess AT&T for allowing AT&T to complete long-distance calls over local telephone exchanges.

Jones said AT&T hopes the permanent charge established by the utilities commission would allow AT&T to lower its rates on long-distance calls within Texas.

Earlier, AT&T had sought an emergency interim rate increase, but was turned down by the utilities commission and in court.

Jones said Tuesday that AT&T decided to seek the delay in its rate increase request — which had been scheduled for a hearing March 20 — because the company figured the utilities commission's final ruling on access charges might come within days of the separate rate case decision. That might change the amount of money AT&T needs, he said.

"It just looked like an awfully good time to say 'time out,' Jones said.

"We had a rate (increase) case filed which was based on our estimate of what the (utilities) commission is going to do."

When the Bell telephone system and AT&T were broken up under court order at the beginning of this year, Jones said, the state utilities commission established an interim access charge to be paid by long-distance companies.

Jones said that on an annual basis, that charge would cost AT&T $911 million. He said the rate increase initially was sought because AT&T believes it would lose money if required to pay that level of access charges permanently.

He said AT&T hopes that when the final charge is established next month, the access charge will be reduced. That could mean reduced costs to AT&T customers, he added.

"We're hoping the access charges go down. We would hope the commission recognizes that it is really in our customers' best interests to lower that access charge," Jones said, adding that access charges make up 83 percent of the company's costs.

Attorney General Jim Mattox issued a statement saying he, too, was pleased by AT&T's action.

Mattox said his office had been working on a legal opinion sought by Boyle as to whether Texas law requires such rate increases to be based on actual, known costs rather than estimates.

McGovern withdraws, but Jackson stays in race

BOSTON (AP) — George McGovern is polishing lines for a "graceful exit," the Rev. Jesse Jackson is staying in to the end "and beyond" and Sen. John Glenn isn't quite saying where he stands after the Super Tuesday round of Democratic presidential primaries and caucuses.

"Although I will be withdrawing from this campaign, this is not a concession of defeat," McGovern declared Tuesday night as primary returns from Massachusetts showed him running third.

"What greater lasting victory than to emerge with the titles of conscience and statesman and peacemaker?" McGovern asked. "I claim the victory of those who have won a high place in the hearts of (their) countrymen."

McGovern said in advance he would make a "graceful exit" from the campaign if he finished third or worse in Massachusetts, and he scheduled a news conference in Washington on Thursday to make it offi cial.

"With all good grace, I fully accept the verdict of my special friends, the voters of Massachusetts," the former South Dakota senator said in Boston as nearly complete returns showed him running third with 21 percent of the vote. Sen. Gary Hart won the state with 40 percent, and Walter F. Mondale followed with 26 percent.

It was the only state where McGovern mounted a Super Tuesday campaign, and the only one he carried in his 1972 presidential campaign.

Super Tuesday beginning of race, not end

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

An Analysis

Super Tuesday turned out to be just a beginning, not the end.

For Walter F. Mondale, it was far from the day he had once hoped. But his two primary victories kept him in what is now a marathon fight for the Democratic presidential nomination that could stretch all the way to San Francisco in July.

For Gary Hart, three primary triumphs kept his momentum alive — only two weeks after he burst out of the pack to knock Mondale out of the front-runner's spot.

But that momentum didn't knock Mondale out of the race and now Hart must look for ways to fend off attacks that have taken a bit of the gloss off his "new ideas" and "new generation of leadership" in recent days. Polls of voters found Hart's surge after New Hampshire and Maine slowed dramatically once Mondale and others found the range with their shots at the Colorado senator.

For George McGovern, Tuesday was the end of his hopes to win the nomination one more time.

For Sen. John Glenn, the big day provided no better than one third-place finish to justify continuing a campaign already more than $2 million in debt.

For Rev. Jesse Jackson, Georgia's vote returned his eligibility for federal matching funds by giving him a 21 percent showing. The black hopeful said he will continue to be the conscience of the campaign, but Jackson faces home state voters next Tuesday in Illinois, where the polls show him far behind Mondale and Hart.

And for the rest of the nation's Democrats, the results of Super Tuesday provide the opening for a voice in deciding who the party's presidential nominee will be — rather than letting New Hampshire, Iowa, Maine and Wyoming have all the clout.

Mondale's victories Tuesday saved his campaign from a startingly quick end — and not at all the one he had planned. The former vice president said he once foresaw the race as a 100-yard dash, with him effectively crossing the finish line in Tuesday's big set of caucuses and primaries.

Instead, he just managed to keep his campaign alive, with a victory in Alabama and a narrow win in Georgia that the old Mondale juggernaut would have considered a moral defeat.

For Hart, winning Florida, Massachusetts and Rhode Island were confirmation that his two-week surge is something with some staying power and not a mere fluke traceable to "cantankerous" New Hampshire voters.

As a result of the voting and caucusing in 11 states and territories, the race for the Democratic nomination remains very much a fight.

"There are 40 contests yet to come and we will be in every one of them. This marathon will be tough on the candidates," Mondale said.

Actually, there are 42 contests left in states and territories and 12 of them come in the next seven days.

From Delaware's caucuses today through Illinois' primary on March 20, the non-stop pressure of the primary calendar may claim still more casualties among the four men left of the original eight.

Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale and his wife, Joan, face supporters during a rally for the Democratic presidential contender Tuesday night in Washington.

Hart's victories came despite blurred image

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Gary Hart's three Super Tuesday victories came despite his "blurred" image and a late surge by former President Walter Mondale in all five primary states, according to television network exit polls.

"A lot of people were making up their minds at the last minute, and they were trending toward Mondale," Jeff Alderman, ABC News' pollster, said.

Mondale's victories in Georgia and Alabama were his first in the Democratic presidential primary campaign, although he won the lead-off Iowa caucuses. Hart, who had won four straight confrontations since Iowa, won in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Florida on Tuesday.

"There was an enormous fall-off in Hart support in the last few days," Laurily Epstein, the polling consultant for NBC News, said.

She said Hart's challenge now is to retain his popularity as voters come to know more about him.

"Mondale's negatives are stronger than Hart's," she said. "He is more clearly perceived by voters, they know more about him. But his image is more negative. Hart's more blurred."

For example, in Alabama, where Mondale won, voters were asked how they thought each candidate would perform as president. Twenty-seven percent said Mondale would be very effective, while 38 percent said he would not be very effective and 11 percent were not sure. Nineteen percent, meanwhile, said Hart would be very effective, while 33 percent said he would not be very effective and 19 percent were not sure.

The NBC News poll also pointed to what may be a difference in the convictions of the two leading candidates' supporters in Alabama. Two of three people who voted for Mondale said they think he will get the Democratic presidential nomination, while only half of the people who voted for Hart said they think he will get the nomination.

The NBC News polls in each state asked voters when they had made up their minds for whom to vote. In Georgia, those who decided on election day went for Mondale over Hart, 36 percent to 22 percent, while those who had decided in the previous month split 47 percent for Hart and 19 percent for Mondale.

In Massachusetts, those who decided on election day split between Hart and Mondale with former Sen. George McGovern close behind, while those who had decided in the previous month split 59 percent for Hart, 18 percent for McGovern and 17 percent for Mondale.

In Alabama, Mondale got 32 percent and those who said they made up their minds on election day split 32 percent for Mondale and 23 percent for Hart. In contrast, Hart had 43 percent and Mondale 22 percent of the vote among those who said they had made up their minds in the previous month.

CBS News-New York Times polls said the Rev. Jesse Jackson got 50 percent of the black vote in Alabama and 61 percent in Georgia, but only 1 percent of the white vote in each state. The poll also said that Jackson ran much more strongly among younger blacks than older blacks.

In both states, Mondale ran second to Jackson among blacks, while Hart had little support from blacks.

In McGovern's third-place showing in Massachusetts, he had solid support among people who favor a nuclear arms freeze, according to the ABC News poll. The CBS News-New York Times poll said that the majority of those who voted for McGovern in Massachusetts said their second choice was Hart.

Americans saving more coupons

By The Associated Press

Americans are clipping coupons faster than ever, trimming their grocery bills by more than a billion dollars a year.

The A.C. Nielsen Co., which handles redemption programs for many coupon distributors, says consumers redeemed 5.56 billion manufacturers' coupons in 1983, up 24 percent from 1982. That compared with an increase of 17 percent the previous year, and it meant that total redemptions over the last four years have risen by 62 percent.

The coupons are steadily gaining in value. In 1982, the coupons redeemed were worth $1.2 billion, with an average value of 21.7 cents each. In 1983, the coupons were worth almost $1.7 billion, with an average face value of 30.5 cents each.

While the number and value of coupons increases, however, the redemption rate remains relatively low. In 1983, manufacturers distributed about 142.9 billion coupons, meaning that only 4 percent were cashed in by shoppers.

Note: These figures represent manufacturers' coupons only. They do not include the coupons issued by the stores themselves on a local basis.

Consumers looking for coupons are most likely to find them in daily and Sunday newspapers; more than one-third of the coupons issued are in free-standing inserts in the Sunday paper; one-fifth are in the pages of the daily paper.

You can get more out of coupons if you take a little time to plan your strategy. Among the ways to save the most:

—Combine coupon and refund offers. Look for coupons for products that also offer a refund for a proof-of-purchase seal. And keep an eye out for stores in your area giving double and triple value for coupons. You could end up getting something for free or actually being paid for using a product. Here's how: Suppose you have a 30-cent coupon for paper plates normally costing $1.29. Grocery store "A" gives triple value for coupons this week. When you get to the store, you find a form offering a $1 refund if you buy two packages of paper plates. Buy two packages and pay $1.68 — regular price for the first package and 39 cents for the coupon-reduced second package. Mail in the appropriate information and get back $1. Your total expenditure was $1.88, including a stamp for the refund letter. But your final, out-of-pocket cost is 88 cents for something that normally would have cost $2.58. One package was free, the second cost 41 cents less than without the coupon and refund. If you'd had two coupons, you would have made a net profit.

—Look for local tie-ins that allow you to save on staples. Government and university studies have shown that coupons for staples like milk, meat or fresh produce are rare. But you may be able to find a manufacturer's coupon issued in conjunction with a local promotion that does the trick. An ice cream company, for example, might have a tie-in for a discount on fresh fruit.

—Know your prices before you start. Compare the quality and price of generic and house brands before you jump at a coupon for a national brand. The national brand may be more expensive with the coupon, than the house or generic brand without. You also should make sure that you don't sacrifice over-all value for the sake of coupons. If you take your business to a store that offers double or triple value for coupons, but has consistently higher prices on non-coupon items, you could wind up paying more in the long run. It may be worthwhile to split your shopping list.

—Watch out for strings and don't buy items you won't use. Some stores will make coupon use conditional: Buy a fixed amount of groceries at regular price and save on specials. Make sure the bottom line really is a saving. And avoid items you wouldn't buy if you didn't have a coupon.

Americans eating less red meat

By The Associated Press

Americans are trimming their wallets and their waistlines at the same time.

A recently released report by the Department of Agriculture shows that per-capita food consumption dropped by a little less than half a percent from 1981 to 1982. At the same time, however, retail food prices went up 4 percent and personal consumption expenditures on food went up 6.3 percent.

Note: The price and expenditure figures are different because they reflect different things. Retail prices for food are measured by the Department of Labor as part of the Consumer Price Index and show the cost of a marketbasket of items. The expenditure statistic comes from the Department of Commerce; it reflects not only inflation, but also changing quantities and tastes.

In general, Americans ate less red meat, fresh fruits and dairy products in 1982 than they did a year earlier. They ate more poultry and fresh vegetables.

The overall increase in food prices in 1982 was the smallest in six years. The biggest jumps were in the cost of pork, oranges and apples. The price of chickens, potatoes and fats and oils decreased.

The USDA estimates that consumers spent $299 billion in 1982 for foods which were produced on U.S. farms. It also says farmers got about $83 billion, with $216 billion or more than two-thirds of the total, going for costs involved in getting the food from the farm to the shopper.

The government statistics show the share of disposable income which Americans spend on all foods, domestic and imported, at home and in restaurants, stayed about the same from 1981 to 1982 — going from 16.2 percent to 16.1 percent.

The USDA calculates the amount of food eaten in terms of something called a "retail weight equivalent," converting raw material weights — like the carcass of a steer — into edible pounds and ounces.

The newest numbers show per-capita food consumption in 1982 was 1,387.4 pounds — almost three-fourths of a ton of food per person. The figure was down about seven pounds or a little less than 0.5 percent from 1981.

Each person ate about 231 pounds of meat in 1982 — also down about seven pounds from the previous year. Per-capita consumption of red meat dropped from 157.1 pounds to 150.5 pounds, while poultry consumption went up from 62.8 pounds to 64.1 pounds.

Although Americans still eat almost twice as much red meat — mainly beef and pork — as they do poultry and fish combined, per-capita red meat consumption last year was lower than at any time since 1965 when it was 148.3 pounds. Red-meat consumption peaked at 170.1 pounds per person in 1971.

Consumption of dairy products in 1982 was 302.1 pounds per person, a drop of about two pounds from a year earlier. Per-capita consumption of dairy products has dropped by more than 15 percent in the last 20 years, the USDA figures show.

Consumption of both red meats and dairy products has been declining steadily in recent years because of concern about fat and cholesterol in the diet and overweight.

Diet and health also have contributed to a continuing rise in the amount of fruit and vegetables we eat, although there was slightly less fruit eaten in 1982 than in the previous year. Per-capita consumption of fresh fruits went from 85.1 pounds to 81.2 pounds and of processed fruit from 55.3 pounds to 50.4 pounds. Vegetable consumption, however, rose from 203.4 pounds to 207.2 pounds per person. There was a drop of almost one pound in per-capita consumption of processed vegetables, but consumption of fresh vegetables more than offset the loss.

Fatherly judge wants to help people any way he can

FORT WORTH (AP) — Justice of the Peace Charles Griffin gives fatherly lectures to some who appear in his court and scolds, commends, encourages or threatens others.

In a typical week, the colorful and salty justice of the peace evicts people from their homes, takes away driver's licenses, fines parents for not sending children to school and puts wife beaters in jail.

Griffin, 68, who never got past the ninth grade, also performs weddings, hears civil cases involving $1,000 or less, issues mental health warrants and arraigns criminal defendants.

He has seen the human condition in its most basic form and says he learned more about people from his bench than he could have if he received a doctorate in psychology.

"It takes a very special man to be a JP, but above all, you got to know how to treat people," said Griffin.

But that doesn't mean Griffin coddles everyone who appears in his court.

"If you've gone out here and violated the law, Judge Griffin will put your behind in jail before God gets the news," he told one defendant.

Before he became justice of the peace, Griffin spent 30 years working for the the federal government, beginning as a janitor with the General Services Administration and advancing to quality inspection specialist.

He also worked as a busboy at Dallas' Adolphus Hotel. He brushed elbows with the rich and prominent and vowed that he, too, would make a name for himself some day.

Griffin is not rich, but he says he has accomplished everything he hoped he would. He was the first black judge in Tarrant County and has received more plaudits than he can count.

"Being the first, you've got to face all kinds of people with all kinds of problems. You've got to know how to deal with them," said Griffin.

"I didn't have no bed of roses, but I love people and I want to help them if I can," said Griffin, "Baby, that's what it takes to be a good judge."

He has presided over his precinct — which includes the poor, congested Polytechnic area of southeast Fort Worth and extends to rural Mansfield and Everman — since it was created in 1981.

If there is an issue that lights a fire in Griffin's eyes, it is truancy. He has no sympathy for parents who claim they can't make their children go to school. He gives numerous courtroom lectures on the subject and sometimes levies fines.

"You have to," he said, his voice growing louder, "because you're dealing with the most precious item in America — our children. You have to start early with kids and get them to go to school."

Businesses that take advantage of people, especially old people, make Griffin bristle.

Judge lectures, scolds, threatens

"Be sure to put in your story about all these crooked people in business," Griffin told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "They'll take an old person's television for repairs and say, 'I'll fix it for $60.' The old person doesn't get a receipt, and when that television comes back, it's going to cost $120, and there's nothing they can do about it.

"What's so bad is that these people are on fixed incomes. If they pay you $160, how are they going to eat?" Griffin asked.

And his other pet peeve is men who beat their wives.

"They (women) come in here with both eyes almost closed, both jawbones broken, three broken ribs and their pelvis is busted where a man has kicked them in the stomach," Griffin said. "Then they wonder why I put the man in jail."

But mostly Griffin sees himself as the arbitrator, the voice of reason in the midst of an unreasonable situation.

"You're not out there to see how cruel and mean you can be to people," Griffin explained after a day on the bench. "Life itself is hard enough on people."

Politicians cope with border ills

By RICARDO CHAVIRA
Copley News Service

Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt had barely settled into the governor's chair when crisis struck.

A couple of states away in McAllen, Texas, several members of the American Agricultural Movement were arrested after they smashed cars and blockaded the international border crossing to stop Mexican truckers from bringing produce into the United States.

"It was a very nasty situation, and they announced that their next target was Nogales (Ariz.)," the governor recalls.

Babbitt immediately contacted his counterpart in the state of Sonora, Mexico, across the border from Arizona, and "we sat down and worked out a joint plan. By the time the protest movement hit, we managed to contain it with no violence."

But most significant to Babbitt was what occurred after they had tamed the situation.

"What really persuaded me that you had to live and work in the border culture was that two days after it was over, I got a call from (American Ambassador to Mexico) Pat Lucey. He said, 'Governor, we have intelligence from the State Department that there's going to be trouble on the Arizona-Mexico border, and I'm calling to offer whatever assistance we can.'"

Babbitt was shocked at how slowly the federal government worked. "I said, 'Look, that happened two days ago. Thanks.' That, to me, just delineated the entire framework. If you deal on the border from Arizona to Washington to Mexico City and back up, nothing will ever get done."

What the Arizona governor learned is common knowledge to veteran officials in U.S. border cities, who say that it is not so much closeness to Mexico but distance from Washington, D.C., that shapes the attitudes and actions of state and local officials along the boundary.

Many local politicians complain that federal bureaucrats are not responsive, and as one example they point to what they see as Washington's failure to move swiftly to alleviate economic troubles caused by last year's Mexican peso devaluations.

If a feeling of federal neglect permeates U.S. border communities, it is also reflected on the Mexican side of the boundary. City leaders in Mexican border cities often complain about federal measures from Mexico City, saying they fail to take into account the special circumstances, such as the economic interdependence of the two sides, that make the border region unique.

Said Eduardo Martinez Palomera, who recently retired after a three-year term as mayor of Mexicali, Mexico: "The federal government takes actions of a general nature — not in bad faith — and those actions often hurt us. It seems that the economic solutions enacted in Mexico City are not relevant to the reality of Mexicali."

Martinez says that officials from Mexico City also fail to understand the nature of governing along the border. Mexican border residents, many of whom have moved to the border to better themselves, force local governments to be responsive to their needs, unlike their compatriots in the interior, he says.

"We here are faced with the challenge of governing the most daring and ambitious people in Mexico," said Martinez. "They come here to expand their horizons, and they expect a lot from their government."

They also take notice of the quality of life north of the border.

"Our citizens cross the border to travel and to shop, and that experience gives them a constant point of comparison," said Martinez. "They see how government operates in the United States, the services it provides."

Proximity to the United States, in fact, has forced political change here and in other Mexican border cities.

Before Martinez became mayor, municipal politics in Mexicali was characterized by large, chauffeur-driven cars, bodyguards and officials' general aloofness from the citizenry.

One of Martinez' first mayoral acts, he recalls, was to reject such trappings and eliminate barriers between the citizens and their government. Voters in Mexicali get to see the mayor and talk to him about their problems, Martinez says proudly.

The changes in Mexicali are characteristic of a new attitude toward government and governing developing all along Mexico's U.S. boundary, an attitude that blends the Mexican penchant for centralism with the American love of easygoing familiarity.

Indeed, northern Mexicans are among the first in the nation to make their displeasure known when their government doesn't give them what they expect. During the present economic crisis, voters in the border region have elected enough candidates of the opposition National Action Party to give that conservative, business-oriented party its biggest string of victories since 1929.

In elections earlier this year, PAN politicians used American campaign tactics — canvassing neighborhoods, holding town hall-style meetings — to bring out the vote and to convince many voters that the PAN cared more about their concerns than the governing PRI.

On the U.S. side of the border, officials also complain that American federal bureaucrats refuse to recognize the border cities' special problems.

Bill Jones, community development director for Nogales, points to the daily influx of Mexican border crossers as a problem that federal officials fail to take note of. On any given day, says Jones, his city's population can swell from its official population of 18,000 to more than 40,000 as Mexican visitors and commuters stream in.

That means Nogales' streets, parks, maintenance crews and even its police force are called upon to serve more people than they were designed to.

But, says Jones, federal funds are given to Nogales based strictly on its population of 18,000. The result is that often there isn't money to hire enough police and city workers to handle the floating population.

Many other officials in the American border region tell similar tales.

Babbitt says that not only do federal officials fail to deliver to local governments, but that they also show a lack of continuity in dealing with the Mexican government.

"It's hard to conceive that we've ever overcommunicated with Mexico at the federal level," he said. "There tends to be sporadic bursts of interest. Whenever there is a crisis, everybody pledges undying attention and then they forget about it until the next crisis."

Washington officials, however, heatedly deny that they leave the border region unattended.

"To say that the federal government is not paying attention to border issues is just not true," said a State Department spokesman who asked not to be identified. "There is ample evidence to indicate that we are."

The spokesman said there are federal officials working on border water resources issues, cross-border hazardous waste problems and issues of border health, among others. "And the consuls at the border are active, too.

"Sometimes local officials have a broader notion of what can be done than can be done," he said.

While many U.S. border cities' officials complain about sporadic communication between local and federal levels, more frequent cross-border contact occurs between state and local officials along the boundary.

In some cases, the contact consists of participation in each other's ceremonies — parades, ribbon-cuttings — intended to promote goodwill between Mexico and the United States.

Babbitt, for example, went so far as to make a walking pilgrimage to a much-venerated shrine to St. Francis in the town of Magdalena, about 50 miles south of the border.

"It didn't get a lot of attention in the American press," Babbitt said. "But half of the housekeepers in Nogales mention that immediately when I meet them. They view it as an important statement about their role in the society."

Babbitt estimates that he meets about once a month with Mexican officials to discuss border issues.

San Diego's mayor, Roger Hedgecock, held a private dinner with newly elected Tijuana Mayor Rene Trevino even before Trevino took office.

Hedgecock said that although border politicians on both sides recognize "that solutions (to big problems) must come from the central government, personal relations are the most important way to get things done."

Hedgecock recalls that when a sewage pipe broke in Tijuana, Mexico, he talked to Baja California Gov. Roberto de la Madrid. "When I talked to him personally about (fixing) it, it got done."

Hedgecock thinks Washington's involvement in border issues is improving. "Until recently, U.S. government relations with Mexico was a low priority. Now, we're getting top-level attention paid to border issues (because) there are people in Washington who are familiar with the issues."

THURSDAY: Crime on the border

Ogden leaves Utah for border life

By DIANE LINDQUIST

Columbus, N.M., Mayor Carols Ogden, who chose life on the Mexican border over the dichotomy of Mormon-dominated Utah, talks with constituent Cayetano Jacquez. His town of 500 borders on Palomas, Chihuahua.

Carl Ogden could easily have stayed in Ogden, Utah.

He was born there, in a city named for his ancestor, Peter Ogden, a fur trapper who was the first white man to explore vast areas west of the Rockies. Carl was a Mormon in a place populated predominantly by Mormons. He was a lawyer. He would have fit in well.

"But Utah has a split personality. You're either a Mormon or a non-Mormon," Ogden said.

That was too strict a dichotomy for Ogden, who feels much more comfortable living as Carlos Ogden in Columbus, N.M., a town of 500 residents that sits across the U.S.-Mexico border from Palomas, Chihuahua.

Ogden, 48, is Columbus' mayor. He is an Anglo who speaks fluent Spanish and is married to a Mexican-American.

"Five hundred seems small, but when you consider Palomas, we call it a metropolitan area of 5,000. Palomas, it's hometown, too."

Few of Ogden's constituents know that his real name is Carl. He adopted Carlos, even listed it on the ballot, because "when you do business on the border, you've got to have a name that can be pronounced."

A talkative, balding man who usually wears a cap decorated with crisscrossed U.S. and Mexican flags, he often sits in a trailer off the highway just north of the boundary line. From there, Ogden runs a business that combines law, money exchange, Mexican car insurance, customs brokerage and notary public with his duties as mayor.

He lived for some years in Los Angeles. But after their eldest daughter contracted tuberculosis, Ogden and his wife, Toy, picked up and moved to Columbus. They sought a border town because of climate and culture.

The two cities have a community feeling that unites them despite, or perhaps because of, the inhabitants' variety of backgrounds. Mexicans live on the U.S. side, Americans live on the Mexican side. There are Anglo retirees from the Midwest and Latino retirees from the surrounding ranches and farms.

"On the Mexican side, there are a remarkable number of people who are U.S.-oriented. So you really have an international cooperation, one you just don't find anyplace else."

The Catholic churches on the two sides of the border combine many of their social activities. The most prestigious organization is the Lions Club in Palomas. It has members from both sides, even though some of them speak only English and others only Spanish.

In the five years he has been Columbus' mayor, Ogden has worked to bring the communities even closer. He spearheaded the city's annexation of a 200-foot, three-mile strip between Columbus and the border to include a fledgling 360-acre industrial park.

Ogden has been attracted to Latin culture since visiting Tijuana as a teenager, attending summer school in Mexico City and serving in the Peace Corps in Central America.

Automaker John De Lorean wears a relaxed smile as he walks back inside the federal courthouse in Los Angeles Tuesday where he was attending the jury selection phase of his cocaine trafficking trial.

De Lorean claims he's victim of FBI

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Z. De Lorean, his cocaine trafficking trial finally underway, broke a yearlong public silence to claim that he's a victim of FBI dirty work and compare himself to civil rights leader Martin Luther King and actress Jean Seberg.

De Lorean, 59, told reporters outside court Tuesday that his case was "a pure frame-up, an FBI cheapshot."

The former carmaker is charged with conspiring to distribute 220 pounds of cocaine — $24 million worth of the drug — in an attempt to save his company, which was manufacturing a gull-winged sports car that could not find a market.

If convicted on all counts, De Lorean will face up to 72 years in prison.

Attorneys questioned 11 of 177 jury candidates on the first day of jury selection. U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi, who has declined to reveal the jurors' names or any information about them, said he had excused five candidates for bias.

De Lorean claimed he'd been put on an "FBI list" because he had worked on behalf of blacks in the 1960s.

He said he'd had the pleasure to be "12 people who are totally unfamiliar with the horrendous actions engaged in by the FBI against Martin Luther King and Jean Seberg."

Federal officials have acknowledged that King, who won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1964, was a target of a lengthy FBI campaign that included bugging his hotel rooms.

FBI documents suggest that the agency may have spread gossip in 1970 that actress Jean Seberg had become pregnant by a member of the Black Panther Party. Seberg, who committed suicide in 1979, miscarried shortly after the rumor began circulating.

De Lorean, who faces more prospective jurors today, stepped into the spotlight Tuesday as hundreds of reporters and photographers crowded the street outside the federal courthouse.

"I'm absolutely an innocent man," said De Lorean, flanked on the courthouse steps by his attorneys, Howard Weitzman and Donald Re.

His wife, model Cristina Ferrare, came to court hand in hand with De Lorean and the couple exchanged hugs and kisses during court recesses.

Atlantic City mayor vows to stay in office

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Mayor Michael Matthews vowed not to yield his office without challenging his recall election and, bitterly denounced the black Republican who was picked overwhelmingly by voters to replace him.

James L. Usry, who promised to "be mayor of all the people," was to be sworn in as the casino resort's first black mayor at noon today after trouncing Matthews in Tuesday's voting.

But Matthews, deriding Usry as the Republican Party's "token black mayor," said he would go to City Hall as usual today, while his lawyer would be in court "first thing" to continue his legal battle against the recall.

Usry could not be located for comment on the mayor's remarks early this morning.

The voting on a stormy, slushy day followed racial lines, with Usry, the city's 62-year-old assistant schools superintendent, carrying four predominantly black and Hispanic wards.

Matthews, whose administration was clouded by a general corruption probe, took the two mostly white wards in the city of 40,000 with a population roughly half black and half white.

With 30 of 32 precincts reporting, unofficial tallies showed 7,021 votes, or 63 percent, in favor of recalling Matthews and 4,086, or 37 percent, against.

A second ballot question asked who should replace Matthews if the recall was successful. With all 32 precincts reporting, Usry had 7,303 votes, or about 62 percent, to Matthews' 4,224 votes, or 35 percent. A third candidate, civic activist John Polillo, got 306 votes. Election totals were to be certified later today.

Usry tried to show during the campaign that Matthews was rewarding his allies to pay off political debts. Recall supporters also charged Matthews had supported increases in spending but had not provided better housing and services for residents.

At a celebration in his storefront headquarters, a jubilant Usry told hundreds of cheering supporters that his victory was "a new awakening for Atlantic City."

"I am humble as I stand before you because I represent the collective thoughts of all of you people," he said.

Gov. Thomas H. Kean, a Republican, called Usry to congratulate him and to proclaim the victory "a new day for Atlantic City."

Usry promised [illegible] politics that he said had [illegible] Matthews administration.

Troubled sleep

An American who just reentered the work force after a lapse of a number of years understandably might feel somewhat like Rip Van Winkle who awakened from an extended sleep to find the world had drastically changed. It would be eye opener, to say the least.

Now get ready for the shocker: All of us in the work place may be in a Rip-type sleep that will jolt us tremendously in a few short years.

According to an article in a recent issue of The Futurist, "We are now entering the post-industrial period. In 1980, just 28% of the work force was in manufacturing, and it will probably be only 11% in the year 2000 and 3% in the year 2030. More people now work at McDonald's than at U.S. Steel."

As the work place is undergoing this change, some jobs are disappearing. For example, the elevator operator, the bowling pin setter, the milkman and hundreds of other jobs have virtually disappeared in the past few years. Of course that really isn't all that surprising. That's been the case down through history. For example, during the days when horses were a primary means of transportation blacksmith shops were common. Now they're scarce.

While the number of hamburger cooks is increasing today, though, that isn't the only change occurring in the work place, the magazine says. "While there is likely to be greater employee participation in decision-making, loyalty to one's company will probably continue to decrease. More people will change jobs or even careers more often. Training policies will be reassessed to meet an increasing need to train and retrain people."

Certainly some of these predicted changes will be beneficial. As service industries grow and industrial firms diminish, obvious needs will be met. Our society is in a period of flux and meeting its demands is essential in many more ways than one.

Still, it gives us cause to wonder if all these changes that took place — or will occur — while all us "Rips" were sleeping will really be in our best interests.

Electronic soap boxes

Will Rogers, Mark Twain and Mr. Dooley, who used to love to twit the nation's lawmakers about their political venality, would have a field day with those in house television studios which senators and representatives can exploit to perpetuate themselves in office.

Any time a congressman wants to impress the folks at home all he has to do — for a relatively few dollars — is to set up an "interview" in either the Senate or House high-tech studio and then bounce the tape off any television station that will use it. And in these days of cable, there are a lot of television stations.

What a political treasure trove! The Senate and House television recording studios are on government property and the staffs are on the public pad. In contriving the "interviews," the elected lawmakers have access to attractive backdrops, they can prepare their own texts, avoid the risk of embarrassing questions and use makeup — in short, do anything to make themselves sound and look good.

And how about a little spontaneity? Coming right up! The studios are equipped with minicams that can be used to catch the senator or congressman at committee hearings in supposedly "unguarded" moments.

Of, there are some limitations on the use of the studios. The senators and congressmen are barred from making outright political pitches but who is to define what is political in intent and what is not?

How many senators and congressmen are making use of these wonderful facilities? Just about all of them. Of course.

Another View:

Hope for legal aid

Despite repeated rebuffs from Congress, the Reagan administration is still trying to cripple the federal agency that provides funds for legal aid to the poor in non-criminal cases. A federal judge in Washington now has blocked the latest effort by Reagan appointees on the Legal Services Corp. to undermine legal aid. U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker has ordered the corporation to continue supporting four regional legal services training centers that the LSC was trying to shut down.

In December the four regional centers, which help train lawyers in legal services organizations, applied for renewed financing and were told by the corporation that their grants, amounting to about $600,000 last year, would not be renewed. In response to a suit by the four centers — in Massachusetts, Indiana, Arkansas and Colorado — Judge Parker said it was clear that Congress intended to safeguard financing of the centers; and he ordered the LSC to provide them with about the same monthly allotments they had received since 1981, plus a 14 percent increase over last year's levels, as approved by Congress.

The LSC rationale that the centers were intended to have one-time grants only and not annual funding was only the most recent of many devices employed by the administration to undermine legal services. Because of the hostility to legal services from Reagan LSC appointees, the corporation during all of Mr. Reagan's term has never had a full slate of board members confirmed by the Senate. With a judge having staved off the latest attack on legal services — at least until new members are confirmed — the Senate should, among other things, make a point of asking the nominees about their attitude toward the training centers.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Labor official challenging bosses

WASHINGTON — Edward J. Bergin is a senior Labor Department official who has chosen a unique way to challenge his superiors in the federal government. He has written a book excoriating several agencies, and the Reagan administration in general, for failing to protect the American public from pollutants in the environment.

Jack Anderson

Until they read this column, Bergin's bosses won't know about his book, "How to Survive in Your Toxic Environment." It's being published in June by Avon Books.

"I'm expecting trouble," and I know I'll be subjected to tremendous pressure," he told my associate Indy Badhwar. "But I'm sick and tired of our government agencies continuing to act as if chemicals have more rights than people."

Bergin, 42, is currently a senior policy adviser in the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, earning about $58,600 a year. He could continue his career and retire comfortably, but he has decided to fight to revive programs, which were canceled by the Reagan administration but which he believes are essential for the public's safety.

In 1980, Bergin participated in an exhaustive study of workers disabled by harmful chemicals. The 138-page report to Congress estimated that at any given time nearly 2 million Americans are totally disabled by worksite chemicals, gases and dust.

"The amazing thing we found," Bergin said, "is that only one out of 20 people suffering from occupational diseases received anything from the state workers' compensation system which is supposed to take care of work-related injuries and diseases. When we looked closely at the compensation system, we found that while it may pay for a broken leg on the job, it is designed not to pay for occupational diseases."

Yet most state laws preclude workers from suing their employers for diseases contracted on the job. The only thing they can get is workers' compensation, but the laws are rigged to prevent them from collecting, Bergin said. He was appalled at the widespread ignorance about the compensation program, not only among workers but among physicians and lawyers who had little or no training in toxic chemical cases.

With the Labor Department's blessing, Bergin and his colleagues designed several programs at New York's Montefiore Hospital to train physicians in recognizing and treating chemical-induced diseases. In addition, Bergin was put in charge of a new program to teach workers in seven selected states about toxic substances and workers' legal rights.

The Reagan administration killed these programs, abolished Bergin's job and transferred him to OSHA.

My experience convinced me that the American people were genuinely concerned about birth defects, chemicals in drinking water, toxic waste dumps and food additives," Bergin said. "I had also seen enough in my 12 years in Washington to convince me that the government was not doing its job in protecting people or the environment. I wrote my book to give people who have problems with chemicals the information they need to help themselves until the government gets its act together."

The book is a veritable training manual for workers, telling them how to make the government respond to their requests and how to find helpful information buried in government files.

EDWIN FEULNER

Industrial heart still healthy

While everybody and his brother knew beforehand that the administration's 1985 budget would be in the red by $180-to-$200 billion, the mavens of Wall Street — who had been chalking up hefty gains on the Big Board all winter long — reacted by acting surprised and sending the stock market into a tailspin.

Edwin Feulner

I felt like calling my broker to ask him the classic question: "If you're so smart, why aren't you rich?" With minor variations, that's exactly the kind of question we should ask many of our policy-makers: "How can you be so smug when you're so consistently wrong?"

In early February, for example, members of a House Banking subcommittee, on a straight party-line vote, approved legislation designed to heal the hemorrhage in the U.S. industrial base. The two-pronged proposal would establish a federal advisory council to target federal aid to ailing industries and a new "Bank for Industrial Competitiveness" to provide loans to U.S. businesses. The legislation is part of a bigger National Industrial Policy (NIP) program designed to revive the moribund manufacturing sector of the U.S. economy.

But there's at least one major flaw with the program: its proponents are dead wrong when they claim U.S. industry is seriously ill and in need of heroic life-support measures.

To the contrary, a new study shows U.S. industry is actually quite healthy and "continuing to evolve along its historical path," according to the study's author Thomas DiLorenzo, professor of economics at George Mason University in Virginia.

"The national industrial capacity is not declining, it is growing and changing," Dr. DiLorenzo says, noting a three-fold increase in industrial output from 1950 to 1981.

Dr. DiLorenzo's important research shows that manufacturing employment has actually risen from 16.5-million jobs in 1960 to 21.8-million in 1981. Even in such "basic" industries as auto, steel and textiles, any decline has been modest.

Unfounded claims that U.S. manufacturing is on its deathbed have, of course, fueled support for national industrial policy. Instead of rescuing U.S. industry, however, DiLorenzo feels more government intervention would only prop up less efficient businesses at the expense of the rest of the economy.

You'd think, by now, that the pundits and politicians would have learned enough about economic history to know that every economy goes through high and low cycles as technology advances and industries change.

Let the would-be government planners cry. Let them post. Just take a look at countries where the governments do the planning. Free-enterprise America will continue to succeed and maintain its position as the leading industrial nation of the world. Those who claim otherwise will be wrong again.

Edwin Feulner is president of The Heritage Foundation, a Washington-based public policy research institute.

Sandinistas say U.S. ready to intervene

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista government claims the United States is on the verge of direct military intervention in Nicaragua and El Salvador and is demanding the withdrawal of all U.S. troops from the region.

Daniel Ortega, coordinator of the leftist junta, appealed Tuesday to "friendly countries" to provide Nicaragua with military aid to "withstand such an aggression."

"We demand the withdrawal of all American troops from the region, suspension of aggressions against Nicaragua, a political solution to the Salvadoran crisis and the search for peaceful solutions to the problems between the United States and Nicaragua," Ortega said in his statement.

The Salvadoran leftist rebels' Radio Venceremos echoed the Nicaraguan accusation in a broadcast, and said Honduras and the United States were preparing an "operation of great scope."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Monday the United States will hold a military exercise later this month in Honduras, involving 200 to 400 U.S. troops, to coincide with presidential elections in El Salvador. A source close to the U.S. military in Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital, said the war games will be held "some time between" March 22-25.

"The Reagan administration has justified this action by saying it is an attempt to support the carrying out of elections March 25," Radio Venceremos said, claiming the exercise will take place on the border with El Salvador's northeastern Morazan province, a longtime rebel stronghold.

"If the presence of U.S. troops near the border is a method for intimidation, we will respond by deepening the war until achieving victory — even if we have to do it by battling and defeating invading troops from the United States and their puppet, the Honduran army," the broadcast warned.

The United States has been bolstering its year-old military presence in Honduras. U.S. military personnel there were recently increased to about 1,700, the largest number since a series of exercises involving as many as 5,000 American troops ended in February.

Pentagon officials also said U.S. Navy task forces will soon resume cruising off the Central American coast.

Unarmed U.S. Army reconnaissance planes have reportedly begun flying over El Salvador from Honduras to spot concentrations of leftist rebels.

Senate may compromise on Salvadoran aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee is looking at a compromise on the twin issues of aiding anti-leftist guerrillas in Nicaragua and bolstering the beleaguered government of El Salvador.

Administration supporters planned to offer both measures today as amendments to a bill providing $150 million in food aid to African nations, where relief agencies say thousands face starvation because of drought.

But Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis., said his proposal for $93 million in immediate aid to El Salvador would be conditioned on demonstrated progress toward ending death squads and making other governmental reforms.

And the Senate Intelligence Committee struck a compromise on the administration's request for $21 million in emergency aid for the Nicaraguan guerrillas by voting Tuesday to grant the money in installments.

The Appropriations Committee rejected the $21 million request 15-14 last Thursday when it was offered as an amendment to a measure providing $200 million to buy home heating fuel for poor people in the United States. The African aid bill, and the proposed amendment on El Salvador, were put off until this week.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., who cast a crucial vote against the Nicaragua proposal last week, said he would "in all probability" vote for both the Nicaragua and El Salvador money today.

"Last week was a very different circumstance," he said. "We were given no notice, the Intelligence Committee was completely bypassed, and the money was put on a bill that was extremely important to people in this country who are cold."

Susan Lylce of Bread for the World, which describes itself as a Christian anti-hunger lobby, said the African aid bill is also pressing and, "We can't waste any more time waiting to see how and when we are going to get aid there."

Rudman, however, said, "Without trying to sound callous, it seems to me there is a significant difference on that point between aid for people who are residents of the United States and those who live outside our borders."

Kasten said, "I am hopeful that we will be able to once again have bipartisan support for military assistance to El Salvador."

"I think the objection to the Nicaraguan aid was in part the substance and in large part the process," he added. "I think the administration made a mistake by coming up less than 24 hours before the meeting and asking for consideration of all these issues."

The Intelligence Committee's version of aid for the rebels would provide only $7 million immediately.

Teacher Appreciation Day
in the Midland Public Schools

American historian and philosopher Henry Adams once said: "A teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops." That's true. In fact, teachers are second only to parents in their influence on students' career choices, inspiration and encouragement of talent development and instilling in students a recognition of self-worth and the desire to learn.

On March 18, the Reporter-Telegram Will Publish Letters From Readers Whose Lives Were Touched By Teachers.

As many letters as possible will be published.

Morehead State is still alive...for now

By The Associated Press

Morehead State is in a horse race with a couple of thoroughbreds from cross-state in Kentucky. It's not the kind of race the Eagles figure to win.

Morehead, champions of the Ohio Valley Conference, won its preliminary round game in the NCAA basketball tournament Tuesday night, edging North Carolina A&T 70-69 on Guy Minnifield's 20-foot shot with only four seconds remaining. Next up for the Eagles: Louisville. If Morehead, 24-5, manages to upset the Cardinals at Milwaukee Friday night in the Mideast Regional, the third-ranked Kentucky Wildcats could be next.

"Every time we play Louisville, it's a nightmare," said Morehead Coach Wayne Martin, whose Eagles lost 85-50 to the Cardinals earlier this season. "We race at Latonia and they're in the Kentucky Derby."

Minnifield didn't let the pressure of the opening steps in the race to the Final Four bother him. His game-winning basket was his only one of the game.

"Guy has been in that position before," said Martin. "He's done it on several occasions fozs."

After Morehead's victory at Dayton, Ohio, Alcorn

NCAA Tournament

State pounded Houston Baptist 79-60. At the Palestra in Philadelphia, Northeastern downed Long Island University 90-87, Richmond belted Rider 89-65 and Princeton took San Diego 65-56.

The Morehead-NC A&T game was an historic one. The referees used a television replay with 26 seconds remaining to determine which Aggie should attempt a pair of free throws after an intentional foul was called on the Eagles' Earl Harrison. James Horace hit one of two free throws to put the Aggies ahead 69-68.

Harrison was charged with a deliberate foul after he pulled the jersey of one of the Aggies' players. But the referees couldn't determine which player was fouled. At first, Eric Boyd of A&T was sent to the line. But after watching a replay, the refs awarded Horace the free throws.

The officials, Mickey Crowley, Jim Burr and Tim Higgins, issued a joint statement after the game.

"It was a deliberate foul. The player came across and grabbed him by the shirt, making it a two-shot foul," the statement read. "We wanted to be sure we had the correct man at the line. We had a conference, were not entirely sure, so we got clarification from TV and justified our selection."

A&T Coach Don Corbett said: "They didn't know and they admitted they didn't know. I'll give them credit. They were honest about it."

Eddie Childress led the Eagles with 20 points, while Boyd had 23 for the Aggies, champions of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference, who finished 22-7.

Michael Phelps led a balanced Alcorn State attack with 21 points as four Braves scored in double figures. Aaron Brandon added 15 points, Eddie Archie 12 and David Claybon 10 for the Southwestern Athletic Conference champions, 22-9. Alcorn goes to Omaha, Neb., on Friday to play Kansas in a first-round Midwest regional game.

Anicet Lavodrama, an import from the Central African Republic, was high scorer for Houston Baptist with 14 points. The Huskies, champions of the Trans-America Conference, finished 24-7.

"We told our kids before the game that we didn't believe they could blow us out, but that they did believe that we coulr%2w them out," said Braves Coach Davey Whitney.

Both Richmond and Rider made their NCAA debuts. The Spiders, 21-9 and ECAC South champions, took a 16-2 lead six minutes into the game as Rider missed its first six shots. Richmond cruised from there as John Newman scored 25 points and Kelvin Johnson added 22. Rider, which won the East Coast Conference, ended up 20-11.

Next up for Richmond is Auburn on Thursday at Charlotte, N.C., in the Eastern Regional.

"We expected a six- or eight-point game, not 29," said Spiders Coach Dick Tarrant.

Freshman Wes Fuller had 22 points and eight rebounds to lead ECAC North titlist Northeastern, 27-4, past ECAC Metro winner Long Island University, 20-11. The Huskies, who ran off the final 12 points of the first half, then held off a late LIU rally, also got 21 points from Reggie Lewis.

Northeastern advances to the East Regional at East Rutherford, N.J., Friday night against Virginia Commonwealth.

Abilene takes 4-5A sweep

Things went well for Abilene schools in the first day of District 4-5A baseball Tuesday as Abilene High shutout Big Spring 7-0 and Abilene Cooper defeated San Angelo, 7-4.

AHS pitcher Ricky Rodriquez, who came on in relief of starter Jay Gravens in the third inning, collected the victory against the Steers to improve his record to 1-1 on the year and 1-0 in 4-5A play.

The Eagles scored all the runs they would need in the first inning when they brought one across home plate. They added two more in the second, one in the third and fifth and two in the sixth for the final count, scoring on six hits and three errors.

For Abilene Cooper Doug Hadley had the game's only extra-base hit when he slammed a two-run home run in the second inning to set the pace for the Cougar victory.

Rebels' Willis blanks Bronchos

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

4-5A Baseball

ODESSA — Midland Lee pitcher Bryan Willis got into trouble twice against Odessa High here Tuesday in the District 4-5A baseball opener for both schools. However, each time he used a little defensive help, Broncho mistakes and good pitching to get himself off the hook. He also came away with a 1-0 victory.

In the bottom of the second inning and the game scoreless, Willis got into his first jam when he walked Leroy Rodriquez, watched Benny Armenderez reach first on Keith McDonald's throwing error and then gave up a bunt single to Randy Thompson to load the bases. There were no outs.

Willis came back by striking out Johnny Arrellano before getting his big break. With pitcher Tommy Olivas at the plate, OHS coach Ronnie White called for the suicide squeeze.

On Willis' pitch, Rodriquez headed for home. He didn't have a chance. Olivas missed the outside curve ball and Lee catcher Jimmy Phillips threw to McDonald covering third who made the tag for the second out of the inning. Willis then got Olivas to ground out to first base to escape the inning unscathed.

"I didn't think about it," said Willis of the no out, bases loaded situation. "Coach just tells us to pitch the ball and play it where it goes. We have a pretty good defense behind me."

"The base runner didn't make a mistake on the play, the pitcher (Olivas) just missed the ball," said Lee coach Ernie Johnson. "We had our squeeze defense on and we might have gotten him (Rodriquez) anyway. (Paul) Colwell, our third baseman, was playing ahead of the runner and ready for the bunt."

Though the play failed, White was sure it was the right call for the situation. "I'd do it again," he said.

TWO INNINGS later and the game still scoreless, Odessa's Freddie Alvarado led off the inning with a double to left-center field. Willis and McDonald didn't let him go any further. With Rodriquez at the plate, McDonald broke for second from shortstop but Alvarado froze. Willis turned and threw to McDonald, who applied the tag.

Two batters later, the pickoff turned into one of the biggest defensive plays of the game as Armenderez ripped a double into left field, moving Rodriquez, who had walked, to third. Alvarado would have scored but the Bronchos came up empty as Willis got Thompson to ground out back to the mound and Arrellano to fly out to center.

"It's called a daylight pickoff," said Willis. "Keith came in behind Alvarado and he didn't move."

It was Odessa's last real opportunity for a score as Willis finished the game for a five-hit shutout, walking three and striking out five.

"I felt great and the guys were behind me all the way," said Willis. "I wasn't scared to let them hit the ball because I knew they were there."

WHILE LEE was coming up with the big breaks to preserve Willis' shutout, Olivas was busy throwing a good game of his own. Through five innings he allowed only one Rebel hit and a total of three base runners. None got farther than second base.

In the sixth, however, Olivas put Dirk Bergoon on first with a walk and then gave up a single to Phillips which moved Bergoon to third. It was the second and final hit for the Rebels in the game. Steve Woodlee followed with the game-winning RBI when he grounded to Albert Cruz at short. Cruz got off the throw to second but the turn wasn't quick enough to get Woodlee.

"I really thought, with the way they hit against us before, this would be a higher scoring game," said Johnson. "What was it, 21-13 (in the Pre-District Tournament)? I'm tickled with the win. Odessa is a good team and I can't take anything away from them."

The victory gives Lee a 7-3 overall record and a 1-0 mark in 4-5A play. OHS falls to 3-4 on the year, 0-1.

On Friday, the Rebels travel to Lubbock to take on Coronado at 4 p.m. and follow with a district game against San Angleo at Rebel Field on Saturday at 2 p.m. The Bronchos are in Abilene on Saturday against Cooper, also at 2 p.m.

Midland High stuns Permian, 2-1

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

4-5A Baseball

Midland's Bulldogs rode Steve Wootan's strong right arm and Paul Neatherlin's fast feet to a surprise 2-1 victory over Odessa Permian in a District 4-5A baseball opener in balmy weather at Memorial Stadium field Tuesday.

Even the signs that prohibited fishing off the bridge or skinny dipping in the new creek that runs behind the baseball backstop, all part of the undergoing face-lifting at Memorial Stadium, couldn't spoil this day. Still, there was no ban on water-skiing or scuba diving...or taking liberties on the base paths.

NEATHERLIN'S appearance in the game was a cameo appearance, but it lasted long enough for him to bring home the winning run from first base in the fifth inning.

When DH Greg Hatcher opened the fifth with a single to left in a tense 1-1 pitching duel between Wootan and Permian's Mark Fowler, Coach Tim Whalen trotted out Neatherlin. He stole second, took third on a passed ball and raced home on Fowler's wild pickoff throw to third.

When Chris Herbert singled, out came Fowler. Before the inning was over, lefthanded relief pitcher Craig Steen had to pitch out of a bases loaded situation, but he did to set up more drama in the seventh.

WOOTAN, WHO had surrendered an unearned run in the first, walked Kyle Bowen to open the seventh. When Bowen tried to steal second, catcher Jeff Magness gunned him down for the first out...a very big play.

Ronnie Lovera then singled to left and that brought up Ed Montez, who had three of the Panthers' five hits.

"He's a gutsy son of a gun," said Whalen later, "He'll fight you all the way. He's a competitor." He was talking about Wootan, who responded to the challenge by striking out Montez and then getting Fowler to ground into a force play, shortstop Herbert to second baseman Darren Thorpe.

Midland fans' hearts were in their mouths when Thorpe stepped on the bag and then dropped the ball. However, the runner was out when it was ruled that Thorpe had made the play and was taking the ball out of his glove.

Wootan got off to a shakey start when Lovera singled, Montez beat out a bunt and then a wild pitch moved the runners into scoring position with one out. Lovera was thrown out short to home as Magness blocked the plate and absorbed the collision. However, third baseman Doug Daehling threw Davey Wright's grounder into the dirt at first and Permian's lone run came home.

AFTER THAT, Wootan pitched shutout ball fanned five and didn't walk anyone until Bowen in the seventh.

"That's the second excellent game he has pitched for us," said Whalen. "He beat Abilene 2-1 in the Pre District tournament at Odessa and he is 2-1 for the season."

Midland tied it in the second when Wootan bounced a single into left, took second on a wild pitch and scored on Mike Timlin's single to center.

Midland returns to action at 4 p.m. Thursday against Pecos at Memorial Stadium and then travels to Big Spring for its second district game Saturday at 2 p.m.

Jones vs. Leach: 'THE RACE'

By 3:40 p.m. Saturday, a cold, stiff wind had glazed the mind with thoughts of finding shelter at Ratliff Stadium. Old bones were beginning to creak while watching younger bones make the oval at the 39th running of the West Texas Relays.

Any sane person would have been at home in front of the fireplace, shoveling down aspirin for arthritis ailments. Surely, there was a better place to be on this earth than Ratliff Stadium on a cold, windswept Saturday in March.

BUT "THE RACE" was coming up and we were assured by all that this would be worth waiting for. Midland Lee's Walter Jones vs. Odessa Permian's Jason Leach. The distance this day would be 200 meters, but no battle in military history wore the ground so well.

It would also be on this day a victory by Jones. Some were calling it an upset. On another day it was Leach to the finish line first. And in the future who knows who will have finish line tape draped across the chest in victory.

It doesn't really matter to the track fan. Just the matchup itself is the key item of importance. If a cold, windy March day at the West Texas Relays didn't accomplish anything else, it established the fact that track fans want more of the Leach-Jones battles. We almost demand it.

Permian and Lee will meet many times this year in track, which means that Jones and Leach will square off again. They have become the center stage of the track season. The only thing better than seeing the two duel at 200 meters would be another duel at 100 meters. That's what the fans really want to see — two battles at every track meet. Double your pleasure, double your fun, so to speak.

After all, Jones is the defending 100-meter champion in District 4-5A, but hasn't run in the 100 this year. Leach, a West Texas newcomer from Kingsville, is running both the 100 and 200 races.

LEE FACES a problem here. Jones has been a relay standout on both of Lee's relay teams. He can enter only three running events. To put him in the 100, he would have to give up a relay, which is worth double points. Lee coaches Sam Volpe and Eddie Wolski will have to make a decision on where to use Jones before the 4-5A meet in April.

The fans want Leach and Jones in both the 200 and 100 races. There would be no question of that. These two have captured the hearts of the West Texas track world, as small as it might be.

In fact, when Jones and Leach had completed the 200 Saturday, fans left in droves. They had seen "THE RACE" and it was time to find shelter. The day would have seemed warmer if the two had another race together.

"I think we know what the fans would like to see, but we have to decide what is best for Walter and the team," says Wolski. "Really, Walter isn't ready for the short race where he would have to give everything. We don't want to risk his pulling a muscle at this stage of the season.

"With the extended football season, Christmas and final exams, Walter is probably a month behind Leach in workout time. We plan to put Walter in the 100 at some point in time, maybe even this weekend in Andrews. We are even considering running Walter in the 400 meters. But at some point we are going to have to make a decision on where he will be for the district meet and that decision will be for Walter and the team. It comes down to a matter of where we can use him best."

EVEN AT this stage of the season, it would seem a sure bet that Leach and Jones, or Jones and Leach, would be 1-2 finishers in both races. But the question of how much Lee would be hurt in the relays without Jones would seem to be the key factor.

Those decisions are out of our hands. Volpe and Wolski have to make that decision. Still, the word is out. We want Jones and Leach in 3-D. We want overexposure. We want the thrill of seeing two of the best every week, twice a week.

Right now, Jones and Leach are the track season. We just wish it wasn't so complicated.

Bucks fight back against Pistons

By The Associated Press

The Milwaukee Bucks aren't going to give up their Central Division championship to the Detroit Pistons without a fight.

The Bucks, who have won the division by eight, 13 and 15 games the past three seasons, are being challenged by the Pistons, who have not been in the National Basketball Association playoffs over the same three-year span. But on Tuesday night, Milwaukee took a half-game lead over Detroit with a 116-95 victory over the Pistons.

Afterwards, it became apparent that the two teams viewed the importance of the game differently.

"It's one game," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said. "That's the way we approached it. We have two more games at home this week against Denver and New Jersey. Maybe we didn't approach this game with enough intensity."

"We viewed this as our most important game this year," said Bucks guard Sidney Moncrief, who had a game-high 27 points. "We wanted to come out and establish ourselves as the divisional champs that we are."

Detroit never recovered from a 13-0 blitz at the start of the game, with guard Paul Pressey scoring seven points.

"We were just going out and getting it," said Bucks forward Alton Lister, who had 11 rebounds and six blocked shots. "We just wanted it more."

"The Bucks set the tone from the beginning," Daly said. "They put us in a deep hole. Their defense took a lot away from us and we were unable to get into our running game."

Marques Johnson tallied 20 points, Bob Lanier 17 and Pressey 16 for Milwaukee, which made 49 of 89 shots from the field for 55.1 percent.

Forward Kelly Tripucka, held to six points at the half, finished with 18 to lead the Pistons.

Lakers 114, Sonics 98

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Byron Scott scored 20 points each as Los Angeles handed visiting Seattle its sixth straight loss.

Gus Williams and Tom Chambers scored 27 points each to lead the Sonics, who scored 10 of the first 12 points of the second half to cut a 10-point deficit to 60-58 before falling back again.

Jazz 124, Blazers 119

At Las Vegas, Nev., Utah broke a five-game losing streak and moved past Dallas into first place in the Midwest Division as Adrian Dantley scored 39 points and Darrell Griffith 35 against Portland.

The Jazz trailed 62-52 at halftime, but outscored the Trail Blazers 35-22 in the third quarter. Portland, which got 21 points each from Kenny Carr and Mychal Thompson, came back to lead 107-103 with 4:49 left. But a basket by Dantley with 2:47 remaining gave Utah the lead for good at 113-111.

NBA Roundup

Spurs 137, Mavericks 131

George Gervin scored 34 points, Edgar Jones had 25 rebounds and John Lucas scored six points in the second overtime to help San Antonio win at home against Dallas.

The Spurs forced the first overtime when Fred Roberts fought off a crowd of Mavericks to sink a layup with one second left.

Knicks 117, Suns 95

Louis Orr had 25 points and 10 rebounds as New York beat visiting Phoenix for the first time in six meetings over the past three years.

Orr became only the second Knicks player besides Bernard King to lead the team in scoring in the last 19 games. King added 23 points, including nine in a decisive 21-7 New York spurt in the third period, while James Edwards led the Suns with 20.

76ers 121, Pacers 106

Sam Williams scored 11 of his 15 points in a nine-minute span in the first half to help Philadelphia come from eight points behind to win at Indiana.

Julius Erving led the 76ers with 31 points, while George Johnson had 25 for the Pacers.

Bulls 112, Warriors 101

At Oakland, Calif., David Greenwood led Chicago's 31-23 spurt in the third quarter with 10 of his 22 points against Golden State.

The Bulls extended a five-point halftime lead to 82-69 in the third period, then went on to lead by as many as 19 points in the fourth quarter. Purvis Short led the Warriors with 24 points.

Rockets 117, Clippers 109

Allen Leavell had seven of his 22 points and six of his 13 assists as Houston built a 20-point lead in the third quarter and went on to win at home against San Diego.

The Rockets led 94-74 with 5:19 left in the third period, but the Clippers, who got 37 points from Terry Cummings, narrowed the deficit to 108-103 with 4:51 to go in the game before falling back again.

Bullets 108, Nuggets 103

At Landover, Md., Jeff Ruland scored 12 of his 25 points in the fourth quarter to lift Washington past Denver.

After making up a 10-point halftime deficit, the Bullets took the lead for good on a three-point play with 10:17 left in the game.

Cavaliers 92, Hawks 83

Cleveland won at home following a winless seven-game road trip as Cliff Robinson scored 13 of his 29 points in the fourth quarter against Atlanta.

It was the eighth loss in nine games for the Hawks.

Oakland's Ralston goes down with tears

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Tears filled John Ralston's eyes as he tried to explain how his Oakland Invaders had become unraveled and he had lost his job after just three games of the second United States Football League season.

He had been the league's first employee, an important force in bringing it all together. He had been head coach, general manager and chief booster of the Invaders, winners of the Pacific Division title in the league's first year.

But the team is 0-3 now and has been outscored 58-7, including two straight shutouts at home.

In an effort to shake the team out of its misery, owner Tad Taube named offensive line coach and player personnel director Chuck Hutchison, 35, as head coach Tuesday, offering Ralston an advisory position.

Ralston, 56, said he'll stay on for the moment, but if another coaching opportunity arises he'll take it.

Ralston said he cried when Taube told him of the firing Monday night.

"I got in a dark room and I cried, that's what I did," he said.

Ralston has been steeped in football for more than three decades. He was a linebacker on two Rose Bowl teams at the University of California and later coached Stanford to two Rose Bowl victories. He coached the Denver Broncos of the National Football League for five years before being fired in 1976 after a 9-5 season.

He took an assistant coaching job with the Philadelphia Eagles in 1977 and then an administrative post with the San Francisco 49ers for two years before getting involved with the USFL.

Ralston always put everything he had into his work. He worked hard on starting up the USFL and just as hard for the Invaders, although he said recently he'd been doing a "lousy" coaching job.

Losing the Denver job, Ralston said, was "devastating."

Bitter Cardinals face NIT road

By The Associated Press

With a 24-5 record, Lamar is the winningest basketball team in the 32-team National Invitation Tournament field — and perhaps the most irate at being passed over by the NCAA tournament committee.

Coach Pat Foster, who also is the school's athletic director, says the Cardinals may drop out of the Southland Conference because Foster believes the league doesn't carry enough clout within the NCAA.

"The problem that is evident to everyone is we have an image problem," Foster said. "I think the problem is more acute with the conference than with Lamar."

Lamar, which won the Southland Conference regular season title but was upset by Louisiana Tech in the finals of the league's postseason tournament, will play New Mexico in one of the NIT's opening-round games tonight.

In other first-round games tonight, it's Old Dominion, 20-10, at Notre Dame, 17-11; Georgia, 17-12, at Tennessee-Chattanooga, 23-6; Florida, 16-12, at South Alabama, 22-7; St. Peter's, 23-5, at Tennessee, 19-13, and Southwestern Louisiana, 20-8, at Utah State, 19-10.

On Thursday night, it's Florida State, 19-10, at North Carolina State, 19-13; Georgia Tech, 18-10, at Virginia Tech, 18-12; Wichita State, 18-11, at Michigan, 18-10; Nebraska, 17-11, at Creighton, 17-13; Ohio State, 15-13, at Xavier, Ohio, 20-9; Marquette, 16-12, at Iowa State, 16-12, and Santa Clara, 22-8, at Oregon, 16-12.

The opening round concludes Friday night with three games — Boston College, 17-11, vs. St. Joseph's, 20-8, and Pittsburgh, 16-12, vs. La Salle, 20-10, at Philadelphia, and Fordham, 19-14, at Weber State, 22-8.

The second and third rounds will also be played at regional sites. The four surviving teams will advance to New York City for the semifinals and finals to be played at Madison Square Garden on March 26 and March 28.

A smaller but much quicker team than New Mexico, Lamar's offense is built around 6-foot-5 Tom Sewell, the Southland Conference Player of the Year who averaged 22 points a game this season.

"He's a lot like Devin Durrant," said New Mexico Coach Gary Colson in comparing Sewell to the Brigham Young forward. "He lives at the free throw line and a lot of what they do revolves around him."

Notre Dame, meanwhile, will be looking for some redemption in this 47th annual NIT, the nation's oldest postseason basketball tourney. The Fighting Irish were knocked out in the first round last year with a 71-57 loss to Northwestern.

Because the 32-team NIT field contains 13 teams who are 20-game winners along with North Carolina State, last season's NCAA champion, Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps thinks the tourney will be an "interesting march to New York City for all the teams involved."

Tennessee has never played St. Peter's, and Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe is well aware of the Peacocks' reputation for tough defense.

"Our fans have never heard of them and that sometimes carries over to our players," DeVoe said. "The team is obviously good, and I'm very impressed after watching the video tapes. What's critical is that we are fresh, alert, excited, and not overconfident."

St. Peter's is 23-5 and on a 16-game winning streak, tying Iona and La Salle for the Metro Atlantic Conference title at 11-3.

Utah State Coach Rod Tueller sizes up Southwestern Louisiana as a team very much like his own.

"It's interesting to see that they're a team very much like we are," Tueller said. "They don't have a dominant center, they score pretty much the same amount we do and they're a team we can rebound with."

Southwestern Louisiana is known for its ability to get up and down the court in a hurry, and Tueller hopes to fight fire with fire.

"We're going to run and play up-tempo against them," Tueller said. "They're already calling us about (extra) oxygen, so that's a good sign."

NBA referees fire Phillips from post

NEW YORK (AP) — Richie Phillips was fired as the general counsel of the National Basketball Association referees union despite having the firm support of the organization's executive director, Jack Madden.

"At a meeting in Chicago, the majority of our membership decided to seek new counsel for our association," Madden said in a statement.

Burleson plays without pain

By The Associated Press

For Rick Burleson, it was no sweat playing six innings. Better yet, it was no pain.

"I feel real good," said the California shortstop after helping the Angels beat the Chicago Cubs 8-6 in exhibition baseball Tuesday. "I wasn't nearly as stiff this morning as I thought I would be after Monday's game."

Burleson, attempting to come back from a torn rotator cuff in his throwing arm, made an uneventful debut on Monday. But on Tuesday, he went 2 for 4, including a run-scoring triple, and handled two chances cleanly in the field. One was a difficult chance in the fifth inning when Burleson had to charge a slowish hit grounder and throw on the run.

"I recently adjusted my throwing motion because films showed I was slinging the ball, trying to protect my shoulder but instead putting more pressure on it," Burleson said.

Red hot Brian Downing drove in four runs with three hits to pace the California attack. With his 3 for 4 performance, Downing improved his batting average to .500 and his RBI production to 11 for the spring training season.

In other exhibition action, Doug Frobel doubled home two runs in a three-run first inning as the Pittsburgh Pirates jumped on Tim Leary for six runs in the first two frames to hand the New York Mets a 7-5 loss. Frobel also had a single and scored a run as the Pirates mashed out 11 hits.

Rickey Henderson homered and drove in four runs and Dwayne Murphy had a homer and three RBI to pace Oakland over Cleveland 9-1. Ed Romero and Mark Brouhard each drove in three runs in Milwaukee's 16-hit attack as the Brewers beat Seattle 12-2.

Rich Murray and Chris Davis homered to account for all of San Francisco's runs in the Giants' 5-1 decision over San Diego. Ron Shepherd's line drive off the left field fence drove in the winning run in the 10th inning and gave Toronto a 5-4 victory over a Detroit Tigers' split squad.

The other Tigers' team beat the Kansas City Royals 4-1 as Alan Trammell, playing his first game this spring, drove in two runs with a double.

Pinch hitter Dave Hostetler's long three-run homer in the bottom of the ninth erased a 4-3 Texas deficit and lifted the Rangers to a 6-4 victory over the New York Yankees. John Castino's ninth-inning, one-out single sent home the winning run as the Minnesota Twins defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 3-2.

Vance Law hit a three-run homer and Tim Hulett added a two-run shot to power the Chicago White Sox to a 10-1 romp over Atlanta. Greg Brock belted Los Angeles' first preseason homer and drove in the tie-breaking run with a two-out single in the ninth inning, leading the Dodgers to a 9-5 victory over the Boston Red Sox. Jim Rice slammed two homers and a double for the Red Sox, whose relief ace Bob Stanley gave up five runs on five hits, a walk and two hit batters in the wild ninth.

Four Montreal pitchers — Chris Welsh, Greg Bargar, Gary Lucas and Dick Grapenthin — combined on a shutout to lead the Expos over Houston 4-0. Tom Lawless had three hits and three RBI to pace Cincinnati over Philadelphia 10-4.

Also, the defending world champion Baltimore Orioles defeated the University of Miami 12-2.

Dodgers possess many questions

By MIKE WALDNER
Copley News Service

VERO BEACH, Fla. — One of the favorite games of spring is the "What If ..?" game.

In Dodgertown, home of the calm, cool and usually collected Los Angeles Dodgers, the defending champions of the National League West, this game already is in full swing.

What if Greg Brock, hailed for two years by the Dodgers as the greatest thing since the Russians discovered baseball, can't learn to hit the hard inside pitch?

What if Rick Honeycutt, the pitcher acquired from Texas in the American League last season, is another Dave Goltz?

GOLTZ, OF course, was the pitcher from Minnesota in the American League who cost the Dodgers a ton of money, not to mention self-esteem, when he failed to produce in the National League.

The Dodgers are cautiously optimistic about Brock and Honeycutt.

This means the Dodgers are aware of the numbers, or lack thereof, of each late last season. The numbers are the reason for the caution.

Faith in the original scouting reports on each player is the reason for continued optimism.

Brock hit 20 home runs last season as a rookie. But without a seven-homer push in September, Brock would have been a bust. He was disturbingly consistent in June, July and August, hitting one home run in each month.

Honeycutt was 0-3 in five starts in September, eventually forcing his way out of the starting rotation. His earned-run average for the month was 9.

Tom Kite turns bear killer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Tom Kite, who is playing out of Midland's Green Tree Country Club, is getting something of a reputation as a bear killer on the golf tour.

He's won three times in Florida, the latest last Sunday in the Doral Eastern Open.

In all three of those victories, Jack Nicklaus, golf's Golden Bear, was the victim.

"Kind of ironic, I suppose," Kite said.

"It's a great feeling to win anytime anywhere, but winning against great fields, on great golf courses against a great player like Jack only enhances the feeling.

And Nicklaus very well could be the man to beat this week in the Sportcom Tax Hill Classic, Kite said.

"If Nicklaus is going to be anywhere where he is playing very well and not a minute," Kite said before a practice round on Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill course, the site of the event that begins on Thursday. "It's now up to Nicklaus and Arnold.

Kite said, "Sooner or later it will happen."

And Nicklaus said he'd prefer that it be Sooner.

"This is getting old," he said after patiently explaining his runnerup finish to Kite last Sunday in Miami. "I accomplished most of what I wanted to accomplish," said Nicklaus, who is using the Florida swing to prepare for his first big event, the Masters next month.

"I accomplished everything except winning the golf tournament. I played well enough to win. I tried with all my might to win the golf tournament. I just came up short.

"I need a win to give me confidence going into Augusta. That's the key.

Nicklaus and Kite, tied with host Arnold Palmer at one-under-par 287 after 72 holes Sunday, lost to Tom Watson, who won the first event of the season-long golf tour, a complex system, referred to only in whispers as the Points Race. Four defending champion Mike Nicolette, Andy Bean, Bruce Lietzke, PGA champion Hal Sutton, Fuzzy Zoeller, Hal Peete, Craig Stadler and Ray Floyd.

The foreign field includes Greg Norman, the white-haired Australian who now has a home on this course and chased Nicolette to the title last year, Masters champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain, South African Gary Player, Nick Faldo of England, Isao Aoki of Japan and Australian David Graham.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by NBC.

New Milwaukee catcher Jim Sundberg

From Wire Reports

Jim Sundberg, a six-time Golden Glove catcher traded last winter to the Milwaukee Brewers, says he still can't believe the Texas Rangers would swap him for a backup catcher and a minor league pitcher. In December, the Rangers exchanged the 32-year-old Sundberg for Milwaukee's 28-year-old catcher Ned Yost and left-hander Dan Scarpetta.

"We made the deal because Yost is a better player," Texas Manager Doug Rader said. "I would have traded him even up."

Is Yost really the superior player?

"I would definitely say no," Sundberg said. "In doing that, I don't want to degrade him. I don't think he's really had the opportunity over the course of a season to really see what he can do yet."

Bobby Johnson went from a prized Texas Rangers prospect to an unconditionally released player in just two seasons. Johnson was the team's backup catcher last season, but General Manager Joe Klein said the decision to release Johnson Saturday was based on an evaluation of his 1983 performance and "what we have seen so far this spring. Bobby has repeatedly stated that the minor leagues were unacceptable."

Texas Rangers Manager Doug Rader has named knuckleballing right-hander Charlie Hough as his opening day pitcher April 3 against the Cleveland Indians. Hough won 15 games and lost 13 and had an earned-run average of 3.18 last season.

FOOTBALL — Ray Malavasi, who took the Los Angeles Rams to the Super Bowl in 1980, was named defensive coordinator with the Los Angeles Express of the USFL Tuesday. Malavasi replaces Pokey Allen, who was fired.

Sam Harrell spent three years with the Minnesota Vikings of the NFL and rushed for an average of 7 yards. But Harrell's name virtually was obscure in the NFL because he compiled his average on a single carry in 1981. He's become somewhat more famous with the USFL's Houston Gamblers this season by improving on his NFL average to 7.7 yards a carry in 44 attempts. Harell has rushed for 338 yards and five touchdowns.

BASKETBALL — Lamar University may drop out of the Southland Conference in order to get some respect, according to Pat Foster, athletic director and head basketball coach. Foster says in light of the snub his Cardinals' basketball team received from the NCAA college basketball tournament, Lamar may try to join a new conference, form a new conference or just become an independent.

Former Boston College basketball star Ernie Cobb received $2,000 in return for helping to fix three games in the 1978-79 season, a federal prosecutor charged Tuesday. Cobb's lawyer acknowledged that the Cobb accepted money from gamblers but denied that he was in on the plot to throw some games and "shave points," or win by less than the oddsmakers expected, in others.

Despite its loss in the Atlantic Coast Conference playoffs, North Carolina is still No. 1 with the voters in The Associated Press college basketball poll. And they did in rather comfortably, as a nationwide panel of 62 sports writers and broadcasters rewarded the 27-2 Tar Heels with 51 first-place votes and 1,227 points. That was more than enough to beat out Georgetown, 29-3, which remained in the No. 2 position, collecting eight first-place votes and 1,169.

Teammates of guard David Thompson of the Seattle SuperSonics say the veteran NBA player was victimized by a "sucker punch" in a scuffle at New York's Studio 54. Thompson suffered a broken tooth and torn knee ligaments that will sideline him for the rest of the season.

TENNIS — Competing against men could help women athletes perform to their full capacity, tennis star Billie Jean King said in an article published Tuesday in Glamour magazine. King said she began questioning "our fundamental assumptions about today's sports for women" while watching last year's New York City Marathon. "I wondered how much better Grete Waitz would have done if she had seen herself as competing against everyone in the race, not just the other women. Grete finished in such comfort, while the men's winner, Rod Dixon, had little left and the second-place finisher, Geoff Smith, crumpled into a mass of pain at the finish line."

Jordan, Perkins head cage list

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Jordan and Sam Perkins, who led North Carolina to the No. 1 ranking and an unbeaten record in the Atlantic Coast Conference regular season, today were named to the Associated Press first team All-American college basketball squad.

Three of the nation's premier big men — 7-footers Patrick Ewing of Georgetown and Akeem Olajuwon of Houston, and 6-9 Wayman Tisdale — complete the first team.

Jordan and Tisdale were unanimous choices in the voting by a 10-member panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Ten points were given for a first team selection, five for the second team and three for the third team.

Jordan, Ewing and Tisdale are repeaters from last year's team.

It marks the fourth time two players from the same team were chosen to the AP first team. Alex Groza and Ralph Beard of Kentucky (1949), Bill Walton and Keith Wilkes of UCLA (1974), and Scott May and Kent Benson of Indiana (1976) were the others.

Jordan, a 6-6 junior swingman who has been the Tar Heels' clutch performer since his freshman year, led North Carolina in scoring with a 19.6 average while hitting 55 percent of his shots from the field. The Wilmington, N.C., native, who was named the ACC's Player of the Year, also averaged 5.4 rebounds and made 49 steals.

Perkins, a 6-9 senior forward-center from New York, made 60 percent of his floor shots while averaging 17.5 points and led the team in rebounding with a 9.5 average. He had 66 blocked shots in helping the Tar Heels to a 27-2 record.

Ewing, a native of Jamaica who played high school ball in Cambridge, Mass., was the co-Player of the Year in the Big East Conference. He led the Hoyas to both the regular-season and postseason league titles and the No. 2 ranking in the nation with a 29-3 record.

An imposing presence defensively as evidenced by his 118 blocked shots, the junior center averaged 10.1 rebounds and 17.2 points on 67 percent shooting from the field and was named the Southwest Conference's most valuable player.

Olajuwon, a junior from Lagos, Nigeria, averaged 16.3 points on 67 percent shooting from the field, 13.8 rebounds and had 189 blocks — 16 against Biscayne — in leading No. 5 Houston to a 28-4 record, including the SWC's regular season and postseason crowns. He has been playing basketball for only five years and late last season blossomed into an outstanding performer.

Tisdale, a sophomore who became the first freshman in history to make first team All-American last season, poured in an average of 26.8 points on 58 percent shooting and averaged 9.6 rebounds. He had 74 blocked shots.

Tisdale was named the Player of the Year in the Big Eight for the second straight year. The Tulsa, Okla., product was the only returning starter on the seventh-ranked Sooners, who posted a 29-4 record and won the Big Eight regular-season championship.

Islanders reach new milestones

By The Associated Press

It was a night of milestones for three New York Islanders. Two of them, defenseman Denis Potvin and right wing Mike Bossy, are used to such things. The third, forward Bob Bourne, is not.

Potvin scored his 20th goal of the season in a 5-1 victory over New Jersey Tuesday night to become the first defenseman in National Hockey League history to collect that many goals in eight different seasons. Bossy had two assists, giving him 800 career points.

But Bourne had the most to celebrate as he registered his first three-goal game in 12 NHL campaigns. He scored all three goals in the second period, the second on a power play and the third with New York shorthanded. The goals were scored against former Islander goalie Glenn Resch, who is a close friend of Bourne's.

Elsewhere, it was Edmonton 6, Quebec 5 in overtime, Vancouver 4, Pittsburgh 3, and St. Louis 2, Hartford 0.

"He was so excited," Resch said of Bourne's three goals. "I didn't know it was his first hat trick. I usually have very good luck against him."

Not this time.

"I'd almost given up hope of ever getting a hat trick," Bourne said. "I'm not a great goal scorer. Now when I get two goals I can relax instead of pressing. It's always been a thorn in my side every time I scored two goals."

"I'm really happy to see Bourne get those goals," said Islanders Coach Al Arbour. "He's had a number of chances in the past."

Potvin, the Islanders captain, scored at 5:41 of the first period with a 50-foot slap shot on a power play. New Jersey's Murray Brumwell beat Islander goaltender Roland Melanson on a power play to tie the game 1-1.

Bourne scored his first at 3:37 of the second period on a 45-foot shot, then Bryan Trottier extended the visiting Islanders' lead to 3-1 at 10:32 on another power play in which Mike Bossy got his 800th point.

"That's probably only 760 more than mine," said Arbour, who played 15 years as a defenseman for Detroit, St. Louis, Chicago and Toronto.

Justice weighs new LTV merger proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice Department antitrust lawyers are weighing a new merger proposal from LTV Corp. and Republic Steel Corp., the two steelmakers whose earlier merger deal was rejected in a decision that created dissention within the Reagan administration.

The chief executives of the two companies presented the new proposal Tuesday to Assistant Attorney General J. Paul McGrath, the department's antitrust chief who had rejected their earlier deal.

Raymond Hay of LTV and Brad Jones of Republic met for an hour and a half with McGrath at the Justice Department and the discussions will continue next Friday, said LTV vice president Julian Scheer.

"We made a new proposal, and we felt we made some progress in our discussions," Scheer said. "We think it was a good meeting, and we'll go back in and continue Friday."

Scheer would not disclose the details of the new merger deal, but it was learned that it would involve the firms' selling off some stainless steel and flat-rolled steel plants.

Justice Department spokesman Mark T. Sheehan would only say that the discussions would continue.

The company representatives have been meeting regularly with department lawyers since McGrath, head of the department's antitrust division, said Feb. 15 he would sue if necessary to block their proposed $770 million merger.

The combination of LTV, which owns the nation's No. 3 steelmaker, Jones & Laughlin, with Republic, the nation's No. 4 steelmaker, would have created the second-largest steel producer in the nation, after the U.S. Steel Corp.

McGrath said the original deal would produce such concentration of ownership in the production of stainless steel and flat-rolled sheet steel — the basic steel used in autos and large appliances — that there would be a risk of collusion to fix prices in violation of federal antitrust laws.

The companies, joined by Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, criticized McGrath for refusing to count European and Japanese steel imports in his calculations of the size of the market in which the new firm would compete.

But McGrath has said Reagan administration guidelines prevented counting the foreign steel, because import quotas and voluntary restraints would keep those countries from shipping in enough low-cost steel to drive down any collusive price increases that might be initiated by domestic steelmakers.

On Monday, Attorney General William French Smith publicly said the department was deciding steel cases "on the basis of the facts and the law" and would not be swayed by public criticism from other figures in the Reagan administration.

Water well gas bombs hunted

LA SALLE, Colo. (AP) — Ever since natural gas seeped into a lumber showroom and blew it to pieces, town officials have been using metal detectors, heavy machinery and the memories of senior citizens in a search for abandoned water wells that might be filling with explosive gas.

The elementary and middle schools down the street from the site of the explosion have been evacuated. For a while, the operations of the nearby United Bank were moved to a church annex. The part-time mayor has been busy full time with the search.

There is little business as usual in this northern Colorado farming community of 2,000 people.

Town Clerk Nancy Rutz said she's been doing "only the basics;" she's been too busy with phone calls from residents and reporters.

"One woman wanted to know if it was safe to keep her hair appointment down here, another caller asked if it was true the whole town was being evacuated," Ms. Rutz said.

The Wickes Lumber Co. showroom blew up early in the morning of Feb. 18 after gas accumulated in an abandoned well underneath it. No one was injured, but the one-story building was destroyed. Later, a pipe was sunk into the well to vent the gas, and the vapors can now be seen spewing out, diffracting the sunlight like pavement on a hot day.

The explosion set off a search for 200 or so other wells that were abandoned when a municipal water system was installed in 1917. Some underground well pipes apparently were left in place while the above-ground fittings were removed.

The search by officials and volunteers was intensified after water from another buried well bubbled through the bank parking lot, across the street from the lumberyard and just down the block from the elementary and middle schools.

And now at least one abandoned well is thought to be located beneath the schoolyard.

Last week school officials decided to bus all 480 first-through eighth-grade students to the school district's other towns, six to 10 miles away.

"If we find that old well, then we can be assured it's safe for kids," Mayor Bruce Kamada said as a front-loader dug around in the schoolyard, uncovering bricks and stone and a tangle of pipes, but no well.

Searchers are now trying to use senior citizens' memories of the 1908 high school, which was torn down in 1971. The old school was on the site of the present schoolyard, between the new middle and elementary schools.

But the search has been slow.

"You're trying to jog memories back 40, 50 or even 80 years ago," said public works director Doyle Schaeffer.

Trying to be helpful, La Salle High alumni stopped by Friday with old yearbooks in which the old school was pictured. But none of the photos showed the well.

It's not clear how the gas got into the wells.

The buildup was at first blamed on underground disturbances caused by recent natural-gas drilling south of town along U.S. 85. The Colorado Oil and Gas Commission, concerned that newly tapped natural gas isn't going where drillers intended, has placed a moratorium on fracturing underground formations in the area.

LaSalle Mayor Bruce Kamada stands on the playground of the town's Middle School as a bull-dozer searches for hidden water wells Friday. Town officals fear natural gas has made abandoned water wells explosive.

CPA's to meet

The Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants will hold its monthly meeting Thursday in Odessa at Barn A located behind the Ector County Coliseum.

The meeting will begin at 6 p.m. and will feature one of the Dallas Cowboys as guest speaker. The Chuch Wagon Gang will cater a barbeque dinner. For reservations or more information contact Kristin Collinsworth, 2300 W. 42nd St., Odessa, 366-6541.

Dollar lower following retail report

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was sharply lower against other major currencies early today, a day after the U.S. government reported a drop in retail business sales. Gold prices edged higher.

The report from the Commerce Department that sales in February were down 0.2 percent, the first drop since last July, appeared to catch investors by surprise and cast new doubt on the vigor of the U.S. economic recovery, dealers said.

As a result, when trading opened in Tokyo, the dollar dropped to 222.80 yen from Tuesday's late rate of 224.55 before closing at 223.35 yen. Later Wednesday, when the business day began in Europe, the dollar was quoted in London at 222.78.

Dealing in dollars was brisk, brokers reported.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Tuesday:

–2.5505 West German marks, down from 2.5760.

–2.1128 Swiss francs, down from 2.12725.

–7.8700 French francs, down from 7.9405.

–2.8820 Dutch guilders, down from 2.9085.

–1,585.25 Italian lire, down from 1,600.50.

–1.2733 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2665.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4760, compared with $1.4640 Tuesday.

Gold prices benefited from the dollar's weakness. London's five bullion dealers fixed a morning recommended gold price of $400 per ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $398.25.

In Zurich, the bid price was $400.25, up from $397.75 late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $2.04 to close at a bid $399.77.

In New York Tuesday, gold rose $2.20 to close at $398.50.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $9.80 per ounce, up from Tuesday's $9.74.

FERC head to speak to landmen

The Permian Basin Landmen's Association will hold it's monthly meeting Thursday, March 15 at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Speaker will be John David Hughes, commissioner of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commissioner. Mr. Hughes was born and reared in Lubbock, attending the University of Texas where he graduated in 1958 before obtaining his LLB Degree from American University in 1961. Prior to his nomination to the FERC, he served for six years in the Texas Attorney General's Office, was chief of Public Utilities for three years and in 1979 was named chief of the Energy Division by Attorney General Mark White.

The FERC is an independent regulatory agency which has jurisdiction over aspects of natural gas, electric utility, hydroelectric power and oil pipeline industries.

All members of the Permian Basin Landmen's Association and their guests are urged to attend this March meeting which has been designated as Executive Night. Social hour is at 6:30 p.m. followed by dinner and program at 8.

How a yack sells a goat pasture to a mooch on the telephone

By the Los Angeles Times, Washington Post News Service

DENVER — When a "yack" wants to sell an oil lease, he might get help from a "singer," then "flap" while dodging a motorcycle, shrug off the guy in the gorilla suit, grab a phone and breathlessly describe the "goat pasture" to a "mooch" hundreds of miles away.

It is a side of hardsell pitches for oil leases that most people never know about.

That is because instead of sitting across the desk from a salesman, they're on the other end of a phone line.

There, in the comfort of their homes across the nation, they listen to the pitches and, all too often, sign up for the deals that are too good to be true.

Literally.

Those words — yack, singer, mooch, flap, goat pasture — are in the lexicon of oil lease salesmen, many of whom work in South Florida "boiler rooms," or phone centers, calling prospective investors across America.

The state of Florida has shut down some boiler rooms from which salesmen used pressure tactics to defraud thousands of persons. And more than 40 others are under investigation by the Florida comptroller's office, R. Michael Underwood, the comptroller's assistant general counsel, says.

Underwood explained how such boiler rooms have operated:

Salesmen have a name for victims of the scams: "mooches." The fast-talking salesmen are called "yacks." And the land leased is called "goat pasture."

A "singer" is a person who gets a cut of the yack's commission for recommending a property to a mooch.

Sales managers frequently go to extremes to heighten tension among their yacks. For example, one manager donned a gorilla suit and invaded a boiler room, jumping up and down. Another climbed on a motorcycle and roared through the boiler room, effectively unnerving his yacks.

The theory behind these shenanigans is that they excite the yacks. And the more excitement in a yack's voice, the better the chance for a sale.

Also, a yack is believed to be more effective if he is tired, especially out of breath. Thus, yacks often are not allowed to sit down while calling.

Sometimes, they even flap — or put their hands in their armpits and frantically wave their elbows back and forth. Then the panting yack calls the mooch and breathlessly announces, "I'm just off the floor of the exchange, and have I got a deal for you."

And consider the salesmen who discovered that a prospective mooch was a deaf woman. Undaunted, the yack arranged for someone in the same room as the deaf woman to translate his phone pitch in sign language.

She signed up to invest $4,000.

Stock market mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed no clear-cut trend today, hesitating after the rally of the past two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 25.02 Monday and Tuesday, slipped back 1.15 to 1,163.63 by noontime today.

Gainers and losers were evenly balanced among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Livestock

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Texas Panhandle and western Oklahoma feedlot report. Estimated 1,200.

Trade very slow in the Panhandle area Wednesday. Not enough slaughter steers or heifers sold for a market test. Feedlots expected limited interest and inquiry from buying sources. Sales on 500 slaughter steers and 500 heifers. 40,500 head sold for the week to date. Note: All live cattle prices based on net weights fob the feedlot after 4 percent shrink.

Slaughter steers. Few good and choice 2-3 70-85 pounders. Per hundredweight 550-1300 lb. 71-76. Few good and choice 2-3 750-850 pounders 71-75.

Slaughter heifers. Several loads good and choice 2-3 700-850 pounders 70-74. Few choice 2-3 550-650 pounders 70-72. Few good and choice 2-3 550-650 pounders 68-70.

HNG spurns acquisition offers

Houston Natural Gas Corp. will remain an independent company ... to its board of directors.

... statement the board ... is to the "best long-term ... of HNG and its shareholders ... for the company to remain an ... company."

... decision was unanimous ... directors have further ... an acquisition ... companies which had ... interest in HNG.

... the directors ... program to enhance ... In addition to ... earlier decision to ... million shares of ... in open market ... transactions, the company ... to concentrate its ... business of natural gas transmission and oil and gas exploration and production.

As an initital step in its restructuring program, HNG has retained First Boston Corp. to assist it with implementing the program. In addition, HNG said it plans to sell its liquid carbonic subsidiary. The company said it expects the proceeds from this sale will be used to expand its core businesses. Also, the company said such proceeds may be used to purchase additional shares of HNG common stock.

For the three-, six- and 12-month periods ended Jan. 31, liquid carbonic contributed almost $78.5 million, $161.5 million and $314.5 million respectively, to the consolidated operating revenues of HNG and about $6.7 million, $14.3 million and $24.7 million respectively to HNG's consolidated earnings.

HNG said it also intends to explore available alternatives with respect to the disposition of its marine and coal business.

In addition to these actions, HNG's board increased the cash dividend on the company's common stock to an annual rate of $2 per share, an increase of approximately 10 percent more than the current annual rate of $1.82.

The board of directors also reported unaudited consolidated second quarter earnings of almost $63.7 million or $1.55 per common and common equivalent share before an "extraordinary charge" related to expenses incurred in conncetion with the recent tender offer by Coastal Corp. This compares with earnings of about $57.5 million or $1.41 pershare for the same three-month period one year ago. Earnings after the "extraordinary charge" of $22 million were about $41.6 million or $1.01 per share.

HNG said revenues for the three- and six-month periods ended Jan. 31, improved slightly compared to the same periods in fiscal 1983 because of increased natural gas sales resulting from extremely cold winter weather during the second quarter.

Revenues for the quarter were almost $808.6 million compared with $795 million for the second quarter one year ago. The first six months of the current fiscal year produced revenues of about $1.55billion compared with about $1.54 billion for the same period of the previous fiscal year.

Austin may need nine power plants

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin may need to build at least three and as many as nine coal-fired electric generating units over the next 25 years, according to a consultant's study.

The units would cost more than $600 million each, depending on location, said the study by Charles T. Main Inc., Boston, issued Monday by the city Electric Department.

The study said there are many uncertainities about the power needs of Austin with is growing population and the need to replace old generating plants, but the city could face a shortage as early as 1988.

Since a new power plant could not be completed until 1991 at the earliest, the city might have to install gas turbines or buy power from other utilities, such as the Lower Colorado River Authority.

The study listed a site at Baylor Creek near the existing Fayette Power Project in Fayette County as the best plce to build the first generating units the city will need.

...ks at circumstances of walkout

...(AP) — Ford ... Ltd. and the ... are reviewing ... of a three-day ... walkout prompted by a fight ... between a supervisor and two union ... officials on the production floor, ... management and the UAW said.

... workers at the ... about 90 miles east ... to work Monday ... walkout idled ... assembly lines and resulted in the production loss of 700 cars, said Ford spokesman Jim Hartford.

Hartford said the fight involved the installation of batteries on cars, but declined to elaborate.

Ron Pellerin, chairman of the plant's UAW local, said the fight broke out between two union officials and a management supervisor who allegedly was performing production work. One of the union officials was injured, he said.

The walkout occurred because management allegedly did not discipline the supervisor, Pellerin said.

A dozen workers walked out early Friday, and the rest of the workers followed Saturday morning when the disagreement had not been resolved, Hartford said.

Maintenance workers reported to work Sunday and the plant resumed full operation on Monday, Hartford said.

1920

In Kuwait, Maj. Frank Holmes opens negotiations for concessions, and simultaneously opens negotiations with the sheiks of Bahrein and King of Saudi Arabia. In the early 20s he opens vigorous campaigns to dispose of these concessions. He was turned down by Angelo Persian, Royal Dutch-Shell and Standard of New Jersey. In 1927, he succeeds in selling Gulf a concession covering Kuwait and Bahrein (but tenuous title was never validated for Saudi Arabia). Gulf assigned half its inerest in the concession on Bahrein to Standard of California for obligation to drill.

Retail sales take slight decline

By the Associated Press

Economists are not taking a report that retail sales fell last month after surging in January as a sign that the recovery is running out of steam.

A sales gain of up to 1 percent for February had been expected by some analysts, not the 0.2 percent drop reported Tuesday. But the surprise over the decline was tempered when the Commerce Department reported it has revised January's sales figure sharply higher.

The revision lifted January's gain from 2.2 percent to 3.3 percent, making it the largest monthly jump since May 1975. And despite the February decline, sales for the month still were up 16.3 percent from a year earlier.

"I don't think there is any reason to be fearful that we have any bust ahead in the consumer marketplace," said Sandra Shaber of Chase Econometrics. "All this shows is a bounceback from unsustainably strong growth in January."

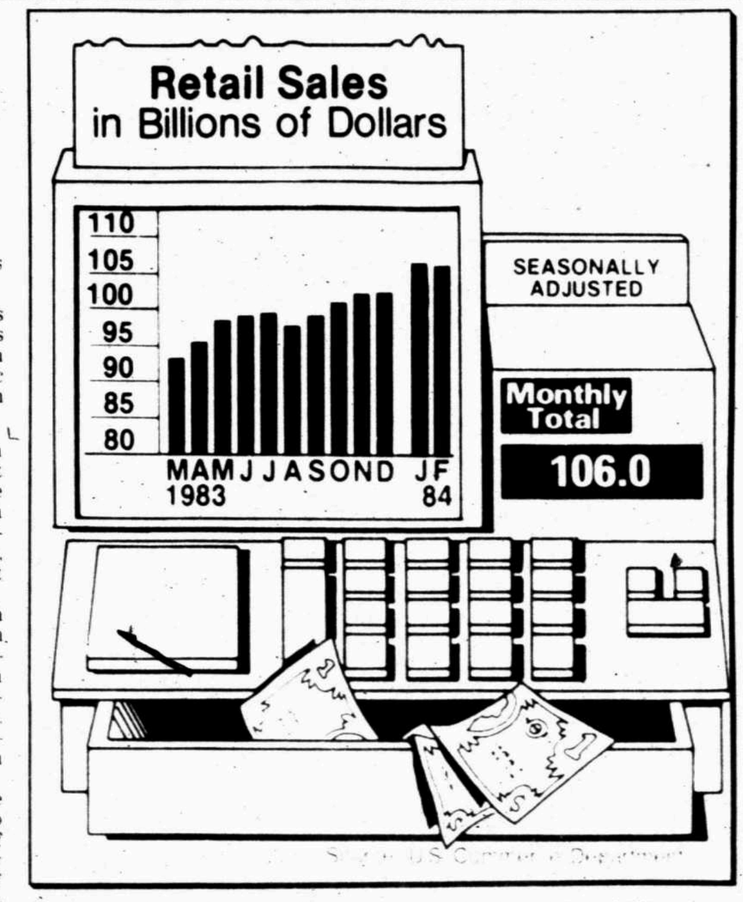
Meanwhile, the nation's money markets on Tuesday reflected concern that a substantial reduction of the federal deficit, which would reduce the upward pressure on interest rates, will not occur this year.

Credit analysts said bond prices tumbled late in the day as reports circulated that President Reagan appeared increasingly pessimistic about prospects for an agreement on reducing the deficit.

In the bond markets, long-term interest rates rose to the highest level since September 1982. The yield on 30-year Treasury bonds, a bellwether issue for long-term borrowing costs such as mortgage loans, rose to 12.40 percent from about 12.32 percent Monday.

Reagan said in the interview with representatives from newspapers in six Southern states and West Virginia that he has "lost a little faith in the bipartisan approach" to reducing the massive budget shortfall. However, he denied he was unilaterally breaking off the talks with Democrats.

On Capitol Hill, the Senate Finance Committee, in trying to assemble a $100 billion package of deficit reductions, agreed Tuesday to restrict the tax-saving device of income averaging. A similar proposal was approved by the House Ways and Means Committee.



Despite a slight drop-off, February's retail sales of $106 billion were still 16.3 percent above the same period last year.

Japan import curbs could end next year

WASHINGTON (AP) — After four years of restraints, Japanese cars could be rolling into the United States in unlimited numbers by early next year if the Reagan administration's top two foreign trade officials have their way.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said Tuesday that with the U.S. auto industry vigorously reviving from several years of hard times, an agreement limiting Japanese imports should not be renewed when it expires at the end of March 1985.

Told of Baldrige's comment, U.S. Trade Representative William Brock said, "I've felt that way all along."

The United Auto Workers union and at least some of the nation's major automakers could be expected to fight for further limits, whatever the administration's position.

For example, Robert Perkins, vice president in charge of Chrysler Corp.'s Washington office, said Tuesday, "We would like to see auto quotas go away, too, but only after the tilted playing field goes away."

That was a reference to foreign exchange and tax-treatment differences between the two nations that he said give the Japanese an advantage of nearly $2,000 per car.

Unless help is forthcoming in some way, he said, quoting recent congressional testimony by Chrysler Corp. chairman Lee Iacocca, the company may feel forced to "go overseas as well, import cars into the United States and close down some factories in this U.S."

Baldrige and Brock said their views were only personal and did not necessarily reflect administration policy. But industry observers have speculated that U.S. auto companies and the UAW could have trouble winning a fifth year of restraints, especially with the auto makers announcing big profits and with the White House and Congress less vulnerable to pressure after November's elections.

Reagan officials have pushed for extensions of the limits in past years, though sticking to theoretical backing of free international trade. They argued that the limits, which the Japanese technically impose on themselves, were necessary to keep Congress from ordering even stiffer restraints.

Japan will be limited to exporting 1.85 million vehicles to the United States in the year that begins this month, up slightly from the previous limit of 1.68 million. But every trade official and expert agrees the Japanese car companies could sell many more cars here if allowed to do so.

"In no previous political campaign have I ever had more peace of mind and warmth of soul than I have experienced in this uphill but deeply satisfying campaign of 1984," he said to the last hurrahs of supporters in Massachusetts.

If McGovern was ready to bow out, Jackson was anything but.

"I will remain in the campaign as its conscience," the former civil rights leader declared. "We are in to the end and beyond."

Council hires firm to find ways to recoup costs

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

The city, which is operating on a budget deficit of $2.1 million this year, is going to spend money to find money.

Midland City Council approved paying out $51,000 to a consulting firm to dig up ways to recoup money from the federal and state governments and from local user fees. The action came Tuesday during a regular meeting in City Hall.

David M. Griffith and Associates is charging $16,000 for a Cost Allocation Plan and $35,000 for a Cost/Revenue Study.

Finance Director Troy Gifford recommended the firm be hired, saying it had found $750,000 in additional revenue for the city of Denton, which is a smaller municipality than Midland.

The Cost Allocation Plan is directed to finding ways the city can recover overhead costs on implementing state and federal grant programs. The study will look "at different costs which are reimbursible and to apply for those costs, to prove these costs to the federal government," said Gifford.

Areas that would apply include MidTran and its grants from the Urban Mass Transportation Administration and housing with the Department of Housing and Urban Development and Community Development Block Grants.

This study also would allow the city to "to better identify the cost of services in the Water and Sewer Fund and the Airport Fund."

The Cost/Revenue Study would look at the cost of providing various services vs. the cost that comes back in fees. "They will look at what it costs us to provide it and what we're charging for it," said Gifford.

"In some cases, we'd like to recover 100 percent of the cost in the fees, such as in vaccinating dogs and inspecting buildings. In other cases, we may recognize we can't fully intend to recover those costs, such as in the Parks and Recreation Department."

In his report to the council, Gifford noted that while it is difficult to predict actual results, "a four-fold recovery of the Cost Allocation Plan is likely for each year from UMTA/MidTran and HUD/CD. With council adoption of the fee study, we could have 10 to 20 fold recovery per year."

How much of the cost-savings measures will be implemented will be a decision left for the City Council, he noted.

In other action, the council approved an annexation schedule for a development by Scharbauer Brothers and Co. west of Loop 250 and between State Highway 191 and Wadley Avenue. The timetable will allow a public school to be constructed on that land and be open for Fall 1985.

Mayor G. Thane Akins asked for names to be included on a task force that will address the problems of people driving while intoxicated and to encourage parents to put their children in child restraint seats.

With the air of a devil's advocate, Councilman Tom Sloan said he thought the commission should include someone who represents the "drunks" and the unrestrained kids. He suggested County Judge Bill Ahders as the one to take the side of the drunks. Ahders was featured in a recent Reporter-Telegram article expressing compassion for "drunks."

MISD trustees OK intern program

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Forseeing a severe shortage of math and science teachers, Midland school trustees Tuesday approved a novel approach to a potential problem.

Citing a statewide and nationwide shortage of math and science teachers as well as newly-passed state policies which require high school students to take additional math and science courses, school officials predicted a lack of qualified instructors.

To solve the problem, Texas Tech University and Midland Independent School District hope to establish a crash course in teaching for non-education majors who have degrees in math, science or possibly foreign language.

"It will address some critical staffing needs we have in those areas," personnel director Ron Whitmore told trustees. Persons selected to participate would go through an intensive training course in the spring, student teach during the summer and then intern as a teacher next year.

MISD employees with master's degrees in education would work with and monitor the interns. The district plans to pay the non-certified teachers four-fifths of a starting teacher's salary because they would teach only four courses. Whitmore said the district could hire six to 10 such interns.

But the proposal must get Texas Education Agency approval before it can be implemented. Because there is already a shortage of math and science teachers, the TEA has issued several thousand emergency certifications in those areas.

The board also gave the go-ahead for plans to refund outstanding bonds at a lower interest rate. Greenwood ISD recently made a similar move, expecting to save more than $1 million over 15 years.

Similar to refinancing a car loan, refunding plans call for paying off outstanding bonds with money borrowed at a lower interest rate. The money is invested at approximately the same rate at which it was borrowed and pays off the outstanding bonds according to the original schedule. The district is no longer reponsible for the old debt, but takes on a new, cheaper one.

The proposal offered by financial advisors calls for refunding about $22 million in outstanding bonds. The board can choose one of three plans. One will save the district $611,000 the first year while another will result in a $1.2 million savings in 1992.

Trustees expressed a preference for the third alternative which would result in a total savings of $844,000, or about $105,000 a year. That represents about one-third of a cent of the district's tax rate.

"We're talking about a relatively minor savings at any one time," Superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi commented.

Highest bidder will win 4,000 Ector County Library books

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Books don't die, they're just sent to the fan room.

At least that's the way it has been in Ector County for the last 5½ years.

More than 4,000 books have piled up in the second-floor fan room of the Ector County Library and there is no sign of the numbers of books added to this graveyard of antiquated facts and volumes slacking off in the near future.

But the Ector County Commissioners Court has provided County Librarian Ted Campbell and his staff with a way to get relief from the problem. After hearing the librarian's story, they voted Monday to allow the library to declare these books surplus and put them up for sale.

Far from the average book sale, prospective buyers must be willing to provide a home for the entire collection and to move the piles of publications from the library's second floor when all bids are opened April 9 by commissioners. It's a winner-takes-all situation.

Campbell has been researching this disposal question for several years since discovering he could not legally sell county property in book sales in the front lobby, as is done with those books given as gifts. In the past, excess books were burned or torn up to make room for more recent discards.

"You buy the whole lot," Campbell explained. "That way they'll all be gone in one fell swoop." He listed among prospective buyers book dealers, interior decorators and schools. One company in Midland has used the ground-up paper in their drilling operations, he said.

Getting to the bottom of this problem has not been easy. Campbell went through countless sources, including the attorney general's office, before arriving at the answer.

"We kept getting blank stares and no information," he recalled until the state and county attorneys finally came up with the answer.

Calls already are coming in from people interested in the collection.

But as Campbell put it, "They're not terrific books."

These volumes are being put up for sale for a variety of reasons.

Books, books and more books are crowding Ector County Library. This volume of volumes will be put up for bid and sale, with the lucky buyer left to deal with more than 4,000 books.

Few tourists would be interested in 1956 travel guides. Adventures to the foreign lands described in these old volumes might put the traveler in the middle of a war or stranded in a country not even mentioned.

Children reading the 1952 Children's Encyclopedia would find no mention of space travel other than Buck Rogers, very little if any on computers and even less on more current topics.

Campbell remembered well an irate mother complaining about her son referring to an outdated encyclopedia. Since then he has added emphasis to the program in which his staff periodically pulls dated periodicals from the public's eye.

As the lone county library, there is nowhere to send extra copies of books of a more timeless quality.

Multiple copies of books now being stored will go in the sale. Campbell noted that space limitations have stopped even the Library of Congress from keeping copies of every book published.

Some of the published works were rarely used. An example is "An American Among the Riffi," published in 1925 and donated to the library in 1965. This book was checked out twice during its stay on library shelves.

Incomplete collections of books like the Jewish Encyclopedia, copyright date 1901 (already discarded by the Odessa High School Library), are taking up space Campbell wants to use for a work area.

Other books have been rebound once, but are in need of repair again. Each rebinding takes from the margins, so another rebinding would obscure some of the contents.

Campbell said he was frustrated in attempts to give away the books. Inquiries to other libraries were turned away in vain. Only the community of Midkiff chose to take from the Ector County's surplus when it opened a library.

Pages are missing from some. Chewing gum blocks out words and phrases on pages of others. Some dealing with current technologies and changing sciences would literally misinform readers.

Women are rarely mentioned in the pages of older management and career-related books published long before the Equal Rights Amendment and the career woman.

And it is doubtful the Internal Revenue Service would be sympathetic to the taxpayer using last year's federal tax regulations.

But someone out there likely will find a use for these books. At least Campbell and his staff hope so.

Reed announces candidacy for MISD board of trustees

From Staff Reports

Joseph Reed

A. Joseph "Joe" Reed, 1710 Cessna, has filed as a candidate for Place 4 on the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees. He is a 15-year Midland businessman and president of Ed L. Reed and Associates Inc.

The election will be Saturday, April 7.

Because his six children are active in band, orchestra, choir, sports, gifted education, etc., Reed says he is committed to supporting a well-rounded education with academic excellence for Midland students. His children, ranging from second to tenth grades, attend five MISD schools.

Reed is a member of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and chairman of its Water Development Committee. He is technical advisory director of Water Inc. He has been vice-president of the Midland Jaycees, chairman of Central YMCA's Community Development Committee and serves on the board of directors of the City of Midland Swim Team. He is a member of the Midland Downtown Lions Club and a committee member of Boy Scout Troop 152.

Reed has also served as president of St. Ann's Catholic Church's Parish Council and Religious Education board. He has been involved in organized children's sports, Boy and Girl Scouts, and the YMCA Indian Princess and Indian Guide programs.

Parents discuss problems encountered in child rearing

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Alcohol. Drugs. Inadequate supervision. And parents who can't say no to their children were among the child-rearing problems stressed at a gathering of about 100 persons at Fannin Elementary School on Tuesday night.

"Adolescence is an extremely stressful time for children," said main speaker and Midland family counselor Sam Guyton. "They're terribly vulnerable. If we ignore their problems, we increase their vulnerability.

"Don't be afraid to be a strong parent. Children need to be taught what's in their best interest. They'll sulk and complain, but they'll get over it."

The main thrust of the meeting, which was held under the auspices of Families In Action, was to urge parents to band together in support groups "to gain confidence in our roles as parents."

A major problem, according to parents who did not want to be identified, is weekend beer busts, with alcohol and land provided by parents. While it's legal for parents to give their own children alcohol, it's a misdemeanor if that alcohol falls into the hands of other children.

Ways to combat that problem include curfews, chaperoned parties and athletic events, raising the drinking age to 21 and isolating the stores and parents who provide alcohol to minors.

"From the city's perspective," said City Councilman Gordon Marcum, "one of our biggest problems is finding out which particular businesses are selling kegs and six-packs to minors."

Marcum urged concerned parents to find out which retail outlets are violating the law. "Tell us and the police," he added. "We'll do what we can, but we need to pinpoint where the supply is coming from."

One purpose of support groups would be for members to contact the parents of their children's friends, with an eye toward sharing experiences and goals.

The groups would also foster public awareness of the problems of modern child-rearing and share information on how other support groups around the country operate.

During a question and answer period, one man said, "We need to quit being friends to our kids and start being parents." Another said, "We need to bust the the beer busts and put pressure on those providing them."

Families In Action is a nationwide organization that serves as "an umbrella group" for local support groups. The next meeting will be sometime in April, with the time and date to be announced later. More information may be obtained by calling 687-2498.

City Council hires firm to find ways to recoup costs

"Me," Sloan replied.

Discussion of a fire station site was deleted after the county commissioners on Monday decided to turn over the tract to the city. Deputy City Manager Fred Poe said records first showed the tract in northeast Midland to be owned by the Grafa Estate, and the price of $30,000 was paid. Further title searches showed the land was owned by the county, which charged nothing. Poe said the city would recover its money.

The council adopted a policy for new developments which include several park sites. George Logan, parks and recreation director, said there can't be more than three park sites per neighborhood and there must be at least four acres each with a total of not more than 15 acres. In addition, the developer will be asked to develop the parks and then deed them over to the city.

This new regulation would apply only to developments of at least one square mile.

MISD board of trustees approves intern program

The figures were only estimates based on a May 1 closing date. Financial advisors expected to get an interest rate of about 8.5 percent. The last bond issuance was financed at nearly 10 percent.

The board told advisors to go ahead with the plan and will be asked to authorize the sale of bonds at its next meeting.

In other action trustees:

—Granted employees a 4 percent bonus in lieu of a matching annuity for the current school year. The annuity plan was approved by the board last fall, but still requires IRS acceptance before it goes into effect.

—Accepted a $10,000 donation from Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Wagner Jr. for the purchase of computers. To date $76,100 has been donated toward a matching $100,000 grant for the district's computer program. Additional gifts are expected from local banks, oil companies and the Junior League. In addition, the board authorized advisor Dr. James Mailey to apply for $25,000 from the Beal Foundation for the program.

—Approved recommendations from the Textbook Adoption Committee.

Texas-ARC will sponsor free educational seminar

Care of more than 400,000 Texans with mental retardation is best in small, community based residential environments, according to a recent policy statement by the board of the Association for Retarded Citizens-Texas. ARC feels that community services are more appropriate than large congregate state school facilities.

An educational meeting for members and other interested persons will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Holiday Inn, 4300 W. Highway 80. The day-long seminar, sponsored by ARC-Texas, is free.

The historical development of institutional services as well as that of the organization's support toward an evolution of services for persons with mental retardation will be presented. During the past few years, data indicates that small, community-based residential services are superior in costs and in terms of care offered to clients to those offered by institutions.

ARC-Texas and its 12,000 members in 65 communities, including units in Midland and Ector counties, is dedicated to ensuring that all Texans with mental retardation are provided the opportunities, benefits and services necessary to achieve their optimum level of personal development and to participate as productive citizens in the mainstream of community life.

Leading the forum will be ARC-Texas executive director Carmen Quesada and assistant executive director Mike Bright. Volunteer speakers will include ARC-Texas president Theda Hoyt of Cypress and ARC-Texas Treasurer John Murphy of Midland. Their presentations will examine the primary reasons for the board's position statement and the factors which led to it.

The forum will focus on common concerns of those who oppose the deinstitutionalization movement. Time will be provided for questions and answers as well as an open discussion among all workshop participants.

More information may be obtained by contacting the Midland ARC offices at 682-9771.

Man hospitalized after accident

From Staff Reports

A westside man was hospitalized and two other persons were injured when the car they were in went out of control and rolled over on County Road 111 near Interstate-20 about 2 a.m. today.

In critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning was 20-year-old Kelly Ray Avery of 5216 Tremont.

He suffered head injuries when, according to police, his westbound, 1969 model car failed to negotiate a curve and overturned at least once.

Released following emergency treatment were passengers Sue V. Martin, 20, of Rt. 10, Midland, and 41-year-old Jim Rouse of Rt. 6.

Forum's been scheduled by the Texas Planning Council

The 1984 Regional Priority Services Forums, sponsored by the Texas Planning Council for Developmental Disabilities, will begin at 9 a.m. Friday at the Holiday Inn, 4300 W. Highway 80. A public forum on major priority services will begin at 1:30 p.m.

The Texas Planning Council will outline history, structure, role and purpose and state services priorities.The Texas Legislation and the Disabled, will focus on 1983 legislative highlights, appropriations for 1984-85, the Texas Legislative and Appropriations planning process and planning priorities for 1985.

Hearing panel members from the Governor's Appointees to the Texas Planning Council, members of the Texas Health and Human Services Coordinating Council, members of the Council on Disabilities, and key Texas legislators will be present at the afternoon public forum.

Also, public testimony and recommendations on alternative community living arrangement services, nonvocational social-developmental services and other priorities will be given.

Representatives from the Governor's Appointees to the Texas Planning Council will be panel chairman Gary Shreve of Monahans and Lee Kitchens of Slaton.

Representing state agency members of the planning council will be Bill Waddill, Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation; James Harvey, Texas Department of Human Resources; Les Lovell, Texas Rehabilitation Commission; Jill Gray, Texas Education Agency; Jimmy Harper, Texas Department of Health; and Kristy Godinich, Texas Commission for the Deaf.

Reps. Jay Gibson, member of the House Appropriations Committee, and Tom Craddick of District 76 and Sen. Bill Sims of District 25 have been invited to attend the forum.

Teen-age burglars hold actress Penny Marshall

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Penny Marshall, star of the "Laverne & Shirley" TV series, was briefly held by two ski-masked burglars armed with swords and knives after she surprised them in her home, police said today.

Ms. Marshall, 39, was not harmed during the incident at about 11 p.m. Tuesday and two teenagers were arrested in the nearby Hollywood Hills with the aid of dogs, police said.

"She is OK. There was no medical treatment on her. However, one of the suspects was bitten by a K-9 unit (dog)," said Sgt. Jim Lowry.

The bitten youth was given first aid at the scene. The youths, ages 18 and 19, were not immediately identified.

"Property was taken, but was recovered," he said, adding that the burglars had been armed with "swords and knives."

The New York-born actress, sister of producer Garry Marshall, has also appeared in such TV shows as "Happy Days," "Let's Switch," Paul Sand's "Friends and Lovers" and "More Than Friends" and also directed "Working Stiffs."

"Laverne and Shirley," a comedy series about two roommates, was introduced in January 1976 and canceled after the 1982-83 season. It co-starred Cindy Williams.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Singer Kenny Rogers' Beverly Hills estate is on the market for $22 million, possibly the highest asking price ever for a private home in the United States, his real estate agent says.

"It's certainly the highest price ever asked for a house in California," said Bruce Nelson, who has had the exclusive listing for the 11-acre estate since October.

Known as The Knoll, the estate features a 35-room French neoclassic stone mansion, two guest houses, a separate theater complete with popcorn and hot-dog machines, 16 garages and a gas station.

The main house has 14-foot ceilings, Waterford crystal chandeliers and, in the powder room, a collection of antique fans Rogers bought from the widow of oil baron Edward Doheny, who built the house in the 1950s, Nelson said.

Rogers paid filmmaker Dino De Laurentiis $14.5 million for the property three years ago, then poured an additional $5 million into renovations and $2 million into furnishings, Nelson said.

But by the time Rogers, his wife, Marianne, and their baby son, Christopher, moved into The Knoll a few months ago, they had already decided to sell it because they want to spend more time at their 1,500-acre ranch near Athens, Ga., a Rogers spokesman said.

The ranch "is near Marianne's hometown. I think they want to bring their kid up away from Hollywood," the spokesman said.

Nelson said Tuesday that he has shown The Knoll to about 25 prospective buyers.

He warned Rogers will be no pushover — he won't go lower than $20 million.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Brazilian pop star Sergio Mendes, who had a big hit last year with "Never Gonna Let You Go," had to let go of his plans for a recording session with children in an orphans' home when several of the kids came down with the sniffles.

Mendes, 42, wanted to record a Spanish-language version of "With This Song" with a children's chorus in the background, as he previously had done in English.

But he told reporters Tuesday the session with youngsters from the Infant's Home of the Salvation Army had to be called off because too many of them had bad colds.

"The idea of recording with children doesn't have any altruistic intention. I'm only trying to do something different," Mendes said.

He said he'll still record the Spanish version with a kids' chorus — but now will do it in Los Angeles.

OTTAWA (AP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has a new $230,000 Cadillac limousine to shuttle him between his home and Parliament Hill in style — and with plenty of protection.

The armored vehicle, paid for and owned by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, was rebuilt from the tires up to withstand a wide — but undisclosed — array of modern weaponry, press aide Ralph Coleman said Tuesday.

The 1983 Fleetwood sells for about $43,000 fully equipped except for the armor. The fortified model replaces a 1973 Cadillac that shuttled Trudeau around Ottawa for the last 10 years.

Coleman said the mounties' security service decided it was time for a new car because technology has changed and the other one was getting old.

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Actress June Marlowe, one of the exotic beauties of the silent screen but often remembered for her roles in the early Our Gang, Rin Tin Tin and Laurel and Hardy films, has died at the age of 80.

Miss Marlowe, who died Saturday in St. Joseph's Hospital in Burbank, had been retired for nearly 50 years.

Born Gisela Valeria Goetten in St. Cloud, Minn., she broke into films in the early 1920s after graduating from Hollywood High School.

For her first films she was cast as the feminine lead in the Rin Tin Tin pictures in which the former German army dog rescued her from a succession of villains.

She retained her ingenue image in such silent features as "The Tenth Woman," "Find Your Man" and "A Lost Lady."

Her first critically acclaimed role was as Trusia in the John Barrymore film "Don Juan," the 1926 swashbuckler with its synchronized musical score that proved a precursor of sound films.

Later she made "The Fourth Commandment," "The Life of Riley," "The Foreign Legion" among many others.

Miss Marlowe made two highly popular films with Jean Hersholt, "Alias the Deacon" and "The Old Soak."

In 1928 she moved from Warner Brothers to Universal and that studio sent her to Germany for two pictures, "Fallen Angels" and "The House of Glass."

Later she portrayed Jackie Cooper's teacher Miss Crabtree, in some of the Our Gang comedies from 1928 to 1930 and was in a few early Laurel and Hardy films.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Edwin C. Kemble, 95, a Harvard University professor who advanced the field of physics in the United States, died Monday.

Kemble joined the Harvard faculty as an instructor in 1919. He was chairman of the physics department from 1940 to 1945 and also directed physics instruction for the Army and Navy officer candidate programs.

LONDON (AP) — Arnold Ridley, a character actor known for his portrayal of Private Godfrey in the British television show "Dad's Army," died Monday at age 88.

"Dad's Army" was a top-rated weekly comedy series televised by the British Broadcasting Corp. from 1968 to 1977. Ridley also wrote more than 30 plays, including the 1927 comedy thriller "The Ghost Train."

MOSCOW (AP) — Sergei P. Trapeznikov, who headed the science and education department of the Communist Party's Central Committee for 18 years, died Monday at age 72.

Trapeznikov worked in the science and education post from 1965 until 1983. He also held leading posts in Communist Party schools training top officials.

Video machine fills 'tall' order

CASTRO VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Along with the usual rations needed to sustain his 7-foot frame, Golden State Warriors' center Joe Barry Carroll can be seen stuffing his supermarket shopping bags with rented videotapes dispensed from a vending machine.

Carroll is just one of many shoppers at a Safeway market here who are checking out tapes like "WarGames," Michael Jackson's "Thriller" and "Tootsie" from what is known as Videomat.

"When a guy's taller than the machine, you notice him," store clerk Bruce Tabaracci said of Carroll. Videomat, designed by Essex Engineering of Connecticut, stands a mere 6 feet high.

To use the machine, shoppers first slip an American Express, Visa or Mastercard credit card into a slot and then select up to 24 tapes.

Videomat charges $3 per tape the first day and $2 a day thereafter. If the tape isn't returned in five days, the machine is programmed to assume the customer has bought it and charges him accordingly — $35 to $75.

To return a tape, a customer puts his credit card back into the slot, and the machine checks a read-out on the tape cassette. A receipt is returned for the amount charged.

Videomat also offers tapes for sale.

"This is a one-of-a-kind machine," said Louise Hunter, public relations director at Amusement Corp. of America, an Oakland-based firm which is testing Videomat on the West Coast. "And it's really, really caught on."

She said peak periods are late afternoons, Thursday nights and weekends. The machine contains 168 tapes, about six for each title.

Senior citizens and mothers with young children are among the best customers, Tabaracci said.

The one-month experiment here has been successful, and other stores in the San Francisco Bay area may have Videomats by the summer, Ms. Hunter said.

She said Safeway selected Castro Valley when asked for a store in which to test the machine.

The idea for Videomat belongs to Bruce Joslyn, a marketing manager for Essex Engineering, which invested $500,000 in the venture.

"Our experience has been that people who own a VCR (video cassette recorder) rent between two and three movies a week," said Joslyn.

Each Videomat costs about $16,000, he said.

The company also is testing the machine in Burlington, Vt., Detroit, Great Britain and Canada.

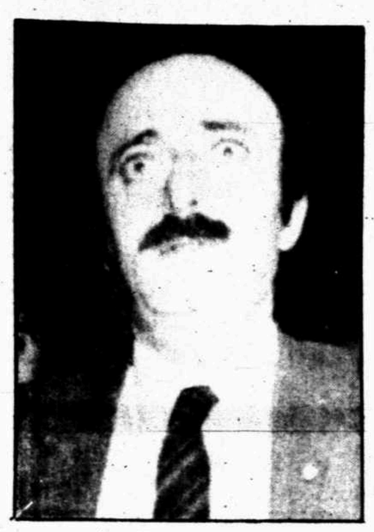
New Lebanese cease-fire holding as rivals resume negotiations



Walid Jumblatt

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — A new cease-fire accord was holding in Lebanon today as reconciliation talks between the country's rival Christian and Moslem leaders shifted to the crucial issue of political reforms.

Police in Beirut said artillery shelling stopped soon after the cease-fire was declared Tuesday night and that only sporadic sniping was occurring today along the "green line" dividing the Lebanese capital's Moslem and Christian sectors.

In Lausanne, where leaders of the rival factions have been meeting since Monday, doubts persisted as to whether the cease-fire would hold. Scores of announced cease-fires have collapsed during nine years of civil warfare.

"I am not sure," said Nabih Berri, leader of the powerful Shiite Moslem militia Amal, when asked if the accord meant an end to the sectarian strife.

He said he instructed his men to stop firing but predicted they would retaliate if fired upon.

Both pro-government and opposition groups have prepared detailed but sharply differing proposals on institutional and electoral reforms for the resumption of the conference today.

The right wing Christian groups are committed to a concept that provides for a federal system, with cantons or provinces to be determined largely by religious affiliation.

Conference sources said this was opposed by Moslem delegates and the Syrian observer, Vice President Abdul Halim Khaddam. According to one conference source, Khaddam said the plan had been "presented to us already in 1976 and we then put in the dust bin."

Key figures in the opposition, including Berri and Druse leader Walid Jumblatt, insist on steps that would boost the Moslem community's share of power.

British criminal found hanged in prison cell

LONDON (AP) — David Martin, Britain's most wanted criminal when he was captured last year, was found hanged in his cell at a maximum-security prison on the Isle of Wight, the Home Office says.

Martin, 37, was sentenced in October to 25 years in prison for wounding a policeman with a gun, burglary and robbery.

He was the subject of a manhunt last year that led to the accidental shooting by police of film editor Stephen Waldorf, 27, who was mistaken for Martin.

Martin, who often dressed in women's clothing, escaped from a cell in London on Christmas Eve 1982 while awaiting trial.

Report implicates Moscow

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — A report submitted to the European Parliament accuses the Soviet Union of trying to disrupt NATO and says there is "considerable evidence" Moscow was involved in the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II.

The report, commissioned by the parliament and prepared by British delegate Lord Bethel, said Moscow had intensified efforts to create tension within the Atlantic alliance by spreading "disinformation" and forged documents.

The Soviet goal, it said, was to portray the United States as planning "aggressive interference" in the internal affairs of its European allies.

U.S.S.R. 'hates' Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir says the Soviet Union has not renewed diplomatic ties with Israel because of "irrational hatred for the Jewish people and its state."

In a speech Tuesday, Shamir said the Soviet Union had diplomatic relations even with the "most reactionary" countries, but has refused such ties with Israel.

Israelis honor Germans

JERUSALEM (AP) — Three West Germans have been honored by Israel for helping save Jews from the Nazis when they were teenagers.

Two of the three men, Michael Jovy and Bartolomeus Schink, died recently. The third, Jean Julich, wept as he accepted the award Tuesday at Yad Vashem, Israel's memorial to the 6 million Jews who perished in the Holocaust.

Polish bishop declares 'church will not retreat' as students cheer

From Wire Reports

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — To the cheers of more than 4,000 teen-agers, a Polish bishop declared that "the church will not retreat" in its fight against the Communist government's order to remove crucifixes from high school walls.

Bishop Jan Mazur read a statement from senior bishops Tuesday during a Mass in Garwolin, 40 miles south of Warsaw in the farming country where Poland's "war of the crosses" broke out last week.

The battle lines between the Roman Catholic Church and the authorities were drawn when government spokesman Jerzy Urban declared in Warsaw: "Religious symbols cannot be displayed in schools. This is government policy and it will not change."

Urban told a news conference, "The government does not want a war of the crosses and will avoid drastic measures." But he replied "Yes" when asked if Communist officials planned to remove crosses from all state-owned schools.

Meanwhile, Cardinal Jozef Glemp, the Polish primate, and his senior bishops, who met on the issue here Tuesday morning, expressed support for the students in Garwolin.

Their respective stands put the two sides on a rare public collision course. Previously, they have been careful to air their inevitable differences in private — particularly since the unpopular martial-law crackdown that crushed the Solidarity independent trade union movement in late 1981.

Polish sources said they could remember nothing like the current clash since the mid-1960s, when the authorities tried to stop special outdoor ceremonies honoring the country's revered Black Madonna icon.

"State schools in Poland were, are, and will remain institutions of secular character," Urban told Polish and foreign reporters at a press conference Tuesday. "The secular character of school implies that religious symbols cannot be hung in state schools."

Glemp, who returned to Poland Monday from a lengthy trip abroad, was meeting with eight senior bishops of the so-called "main council" of the episcopate as Urban spoke. While the deliberations of such church leadership meetings are normally secret, this time it was different.

While they made no direct statement, the senior clerics sent a message to the Garwolin students through Mazur, head of the Siedlce diocese of which the town is a part.

Mazur read what he described as a "preliminary" statement from the main bishops' council at a special guitar mass for the protesting students at the Transfiguration Church in Garwolin Tuesday afternoon.

"The church does not retreat," the statement vowed.

Mexican students upset by police actions

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Students at an agriculture college in this border city threatened violence today in retaliation for what they contend was unnecessary police action ordered against them Tuesday.

Police used tear gas and shotguns to stop a demonstration by the students Tuesday after about 400 of them commandeered 10 city buses and threatened violence, authorities said.

Two students sustained minor injuries after being shot with buckshot, said Soledad Pacheco, an agent with Juarez municipal police.

More than 75 students were arrested after the four-hour clash at the Hermanos Escobar agriculture college, Ms. Pacheco said.

Officials said police were called to the school about 9 a.m. after receiving complaints that 10 city buses had been hijacked by students who planned to use them in a protest for more funding for the school.

A student leader, Alfredo Aguirre, however, said the buses only were "borrowed." Aguirre added that the students did not harm any bus passengers, saying, "We left them at the bus depot."

Students contend they have not received funding for this year promised them by the federal government.

In Honor Of The IRISH!

A GALA DINNER OR FESTIVE BRUNCH

Honor the Irish this year with a gala menu that salutes the green! Presented here are two choice menus to serve with style for St. Patrick's Day festivities.

The first menu is a stylish dinner; the second a regaling brunch. Both feature uncomplicated recipes that the host or hostess, as well as the guests, will enjoy. And both combine popular foods that lend a wee touch o' green to the day!

For an unusual, and marvelously untraditional dinner menu, top snowy white, poached Alaska halibut with a crunchy Emerald Sauce. An accompaniment of Kiwifruit Potato Vinaigrette provides an outstanding flavor complement to the halibut. For dessert, bake up wonderfully moist layers of Spicy Pear Cake, and adorn them simply with pastel green frosting and glistening canned Bartlett pear slices.

POACHED HALIBUT WITH EMERALD SAUCE

3/4 cup minced parsley
1 3 cup chopped almonds
1/4 cup olive oil
3 tablespoons lime or lemon juice
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1/4 teaspoon each garlic salt, coarsely ground pepper and crushed basil
*6 (4 to 6 oz. each) hot, poached Alaska halibut steaks
Lime wedges

Combine parsley, almonds, oil, lime juice, cheese and seasonings; blend well. Serve over hot, poached halibut. Garnish with lime wedges. Makes 6 servings.

Poaching Directions: Place single layer of halibut steaks in large skillet or poaching pan. Cover with boiling water. Add 1/2 cup white wine vinegar, 1 sliced small onion, 2 sprigs parsley, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 4 peppercorns. Cover and return to boil. Reduce heat and simmer 5 to 8 minutes or until halibut flakes easily when tested with a fork. Remove carefully with slotted spoon.

KIWIFRUIT POTATO VINAIGRETTE

1 pound red-skinned new potatoes, cooked and sliced
1/3 cup thinly sliced celery
Vinaigrette Dressing
2 to 3 California kiwifruit, pared and sliced

Combine potatoes and celery. Add Vinaigrette Dressing; gently toss together. Cover and refrigerate several hours. Add kiwifruit; mix gently. Makes 6 servings.

Vinaigrette Dressing: Combine 1/4 cup oil, 3 tablespoons red wine vinegar, 1 tablespoon chopped green onion or chives, 1/2 teaspoon each sugar and salt, 1/8 teaspoon crushed thyme and dash bottled hot pepper sauce. Blend well. Makes about 1/2 cup.

SPICY PEAR CAKE

1 can (16 oz.) Bartlett pear halves
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon each baking soda and baking powder
3/4 teaspoon each ground cinnamon and nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1-1/4 cups sugar
3 eggs
3/4 cup buttermilk
Cream Cheese Frosting

Drain pears; reserve 1/4 cup pear liquid and 4 pear halves. Slice each reserved pear half in thirds; puree remaining pears. Combine flour, baking soda, baking powder, spices and salt. Cream butter and sugar until light. Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition. Combine buttermilk, pureed pears and reserved pear liquid. Add flour mixture and buttermilk mixture alternately to creamed mixture. Pour into two greased and floured round 9-inch cake pans. Bake at 350° F. 20 to 30 minutes or until wooden pick inserted near center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes on wire racks; remove from pans and cool thoroughly. Frost top of each layer with Cream Cheese Frosting. Place one layer on top of other layer. Drain sliced pears thoroughly; arrange on top of cake. Makes 12 servings.

Cream Cheese Frosting: Beat together 1 package (3 oz.) cream cheese, 1/4 cup softened butter or margarine and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Gradually add 2 cups powdered sugar; beat until smooth. Tint with 1 drop green food coloring, if desired. Makes about 1-1/2 cups.

Perhaps entertaining at brunch fits more easily into your lifestyle. Here's a great menu: Serve savory Alaska halibut—in a cream sauce sparkling with a "confetti" of green peas—in flaky puff pastry shells. Round out the menu with St. Patrick's Fruit Platter, an outstanding combination of fresh California kiwifruit and canned Bartlett pears, arranged on lettuce and drizzled with flavorful Poppy Seed Dressing. Offer an assortment of exotic coffees to complement the menu.

CREAMED HALIBUT BRUNCH PUFFS

(Not Shown)

1/2 cup sliced mushrooms
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1-1/2 tablespoons flour
1/8 teaspoon each salt and white pepper
3/4 cup half-and-half
1/2 cup chicken broth
1 teaspoon lime or lemon juice
1-1/2 cups cooked, flaked Alaska halibut
1 cup fresh or frozen peas, thawed if necessary
Dash each dill weed and bottled hot pepper sauce
*6 baked puff pastry shells
Lime wedges

Saute mushrooms in butter. Add flour, salt and pepper; cook and stir 1 minute. Add half-and-half and chicken broth; cook and stir until mixture thickens and comes to boil. Sprinkle lime juice over halibut; fold halibut, peas, dill weed and hot pepper sauce into cream sauce. Heat thoroughly. Serve in pastry shells. Garnish with lime wedges. Makes 6 servings.

*Purchase baked puff pastry shells or bake frozen ready-to-bake puff pastry shells according to package directions.

ST. PATRICK'S FRUIT PLATTER

(Not Shown)

1 can (16 oz.) Bartlett pear halves
Leaf lettuce
2 cups shredded iceberg lettuce
2 or 3 California kiwifruit, pared and sliced
Poppy Seed Dressing

Drain pears; reserve 1 tablespoon liquid for Poppy Seed Dressing. Cut pear halves in half lengthwise. Line platter with leaf lettuce; arrange shredded lettuce in center. Place pears and kiwifruit on lettuce. Drizzle with Poppy Seed Dressing; pass extra dressing. Makes 6 servings.

Poppy Seed Dressing: Combine 1/4 cup oil, 2 tablespoons lime juice, 1 tablespoon reserved pear liquid, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1/8 teaspoon dry mustard and dash salt. Add 1 teaspoon poppy seeds; use wire whisk to blend well. Makes about 1/2 cup.

Irish fare more than spuds

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

On St. Patrick's Day, Americans across the land will feast on corned beef and cabbage, regarded here as Ireland's national favorite, like potatoes once were.

Delicious as it is, I can't recall seeing this dish featured in many Dublin restaurants. I did hear that cold, spiced corned beef is a traditional part of the annual Christmas Eve feast.

I was surprised, in fact, to discover that many of the top Dublin restaurants feature French fare, as do their counterparts in New York.

This does not mean there is no national Irish cuisine. There is a delicious one, with such dinner specials as Dublin Bay prawns, broiled lobster, roast chicken and Irish ham.

At luncheon, they offer the matchless Irish salmon and delicious oysters found in local waters. The shellfish, I'm told, have been a favorite since ancient times when the Celts gathered them.

Ireland has come a long way from the dark days of the 18th-century famine when people subsisted on potatoes and little else. Spuds are still served, of course, but often as a festive side dish like boxty.

This Shrove Tuesday special consists of grated raw potatoes and mashed cooked ones with a flour binding. Baked on a griddle or pan fried, it is regarded by some as a form of bread.

And bread is something the Irish love in many forms. There are yeast breads, soda breads, griddle breads, brown breads and scones, to name a few.

One feature of the Irish cuisine is the breakfast buffet available in most hotels there. Here breads are the centerpiece, spread thick with country butter covered with jam and washed down with Irish tea laced with cream so heavy you can hardly pour it.

A favorite drink, of course, is Irish Coffee, that delicious brew of strong black coffee flavored with spices and brown sugar, then bolstered with Irish whiskey and topped with cream.

There have been many theories as to how this drink acquired its popularity — one of which credits Joe Sheridan, a chef at Ireland's Shannon Airport who reportedly served it to chilled passengers on a winter's night in the 1940s.

To return to food, here's a recipe for brown soda bread.

BROWN SODA BREAD

5 cups whole wheat flour
2½ cups all purpose flour
⅓ cup sugar
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup butter
2 eggs, well beaten
2¼ cups sour milk or buttermilk

Mix together the two flours, sugar, baking soda and salt. Work in butter by hand. Mix eggs and sour milk.

Make well in center of dry ingredients and add egg mixture, blending until a stiff dough is formed.

Turn dough out on a floured board and knead well. Divide dough in half and shape into 2 round balls.

Flatten tops and, with pointed knife cut an X about ½ inch deep into them.

Put loaves on oiled baking sheet and bake in preheated 400-degree oven 45 to 50 minutes, until brown and baked through. Cool bread before slicing. Best eaten baked fresh.

Leeks most popular Welsh onion

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

I remember staying up late one night — I must have been in my teens — to watch an old Alec Guinness movie. The setting was the green and misty principality of Wales, and the plot involved (who else?) coal miners. It was years later that I finally understood the scene where a group of miners, traveling to England, had leeks in their caps. At the time it looked pretty strange.

It turns out that St. David advised Welshmen to wear leeks in their caps when they fought against the invading Saxons. This way, the Welshmen could tell their fellow countrymen from their enemies. The Welsh army was victorious, and the leek became the national symbol of Wales. Men still wear a leek on St. David's Day.

Brought to Britain by the armies of Julius Caesar, leeks were a favorite with the Emperor Nero; he thought that the vegetable made him more eloquent.

A member of the onion family, leeks have a mild oniony flavor which is very popular with the French. In fact, the leek is essential to French cuisine — they call it "poor man's asparagus."

The peak season is September through April, when you should shop for small- or medium-size leeks (the larger ones are less tender). Tops should be fresh and green with no loose or wilted leaves. And be sure to wash leeks well, as there usually is some soil left between the leaves.

Leeks lend a great flavor to mixed-vegetable dishes, soups and stews. An old Welsh custom gathered farmers together each spring for plowing. Each farmer contributed a leek to the communal stew in a gesture symbolic of neighborliness and cooperation. Invite some of your vegetarian neighbors over for one of these leek dishes, and taste the spirit of Wales.

LEEKS VINAIGRETTE

2 lbs fresh young leeks
1 wine glass vinaigrette sauce
Salt and pepper

Trim roots, leaves and green parts of leeks. Slit almost to base; wash well. Cook in small amount of salted boiling water until softened, but still firm, about 7 to 10 minutes. Drain well and let dry.

Arrange in hors d'oeuvre dish and marinate in sauce while still warm. Cool before eating.

VINAIGRETTE SAUCE

1 egg yolk
2 tbsps. wine vinegar
1 tbsp. Dijon mustard
1 tbsp. chopped shallots
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. freshly gound white pepper
¾ cup vegetable oil or a mixture of olive oil and vegetable oil

Whisk together all ingredients except oil for about 1 minute. Add oil very slowly, beating constantly.
Makes 1 cup.

LEEKS AU GRATIN

3 bunches (about 9 large) leeks
½ tsp. salt
1 garlic clove, peeled and split
3 tbsps. unsalted butter
¾ cup coarse bread crumbs
¾ cup freshly grated natural Gruyere cheese (do not use processed cheese)
Salt, just a little
Dash grated nutmeg
Pepper to taste

Set oven at 400 F and preheat for 20 minutes. Wash leeks thoroughly; cut off root ends and all green; slice white parts only into ¼ inch slices. Cook leeks with ½ teaspoon salt in boiling water until tender; test with fork. Drain well, press to get out all extra water.

Rub bottom of baking dish with garlic, then discard garlic. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in cast-iron skillet and saute bread crumbs until golden brown. Rub baking dish with 1 tablespoon butter, then arrange layer of leeks in dish.

Sprinkle on layer of sauteed bread crumbs, layer of cheese, dash of salt and nutmeg and grind of pepper. Keep arranging layer after layer in this manner until all leeks are in dish. Finish with bread crumbs, cheese, salt, nutmeg and pepper.

Heat in oven only long enough to melt cheese. Serve hot. This makes a good first course for Makes 4 servings.

Irish holiday more popular in America

By The Associated Press

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Although Saint Patrick is the patron saint of Ireland, his feast day has actually been celebrated more widely here in the United States than in his native land, according to Bernard McLane, a University of Rochester historian.

Part of the reason is cultural. "Irish immigrants to this country may have used the celebration to maintain ethnic ties," McLane says.

The other part is political: "Before an independent Irish republic existed, British authorities banned St. Patrick's Day marches in Ireland," he adds.

Potato growers: Chomped chips not junk food

By The Associated Press

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — In a year's time, how many chips does a chip lover chomp when a chip lover chomps potato chips?

For the average American, 4.7 pounds, or about half a gross of those little sacks sold in vending machines, says Wilbur Gould, a man who knows his spuds.

Gould, who has worked at the food industries center at Ohio State University for 34 years, spoke at the 1984 National Chipping Potato Seminar drew to a close.

But you can't get those delectable crisps from just any old potato, says Dan Hall, executive director of the National Potato Council.

Russets and baking potatoes don't have the right amount of starch to be quality chipping spuds, he said. Denali, Mononaz and Norchip potatoes do.

At the convention, chipping potato growers and processors gathered to discuss a variety of topics, some of which were a bit esoteric, such as "Nematodes Transfer by Bulk Trucks — What Can Be Done to Correct This Problem?"

But delegates were also intent on junking the idea that potato chips are junk food.

"There's no such thing as junk foods, just junk diets," said Joe Whelan of Jay's Foods in Chicago and past president of the Potato Chip Snack Food Association.

For every 2½-inch-diameter potato, a consumer gets 100 calories and more than a third of the federal recommended daily allowance of vitamin C, 20 percent of vitamin B6 and a variety of concentrations of other vitamins and minerals, according to literature made available at the meeting.

But those figures may not mean much to a lot of people, and Gould is concerned about it.

"About 7 percent of the people know what nutritional information means," he said. "We're trying to get it back into the elementary level," possibly through the use of stars to rank foods by nutritional value.

Hall said spuds give a body all sorts of nutrition.

"The potato is one of the few foods in the whole world you can sustain life on," he said.

In fact, Hall added, a foundation recently has been formed which will be "working with CARE to get more potatoes into the Third World." However, because of import and export restrictions, shipping fresh potatoes is impossible.

So potatoes may have to be dehydrated or flaked before being sent overseas, said Hall, who calls himself a "purist" when it comes to chewing chips.

Some of the products that may not particularly excite his palate include ketchup-flavored chips, which have gone over well in Chicago; or vinegar-and-salt-flavored chips, which Canadians love.

One flavor that didn't have much of a chance to catch on before it faded from shelves was hot-dog-and-mustard-flavored chips, according to Hall.

Cointreau dates to age of Napoleon

By The Associated Press

Many of the exquisite liqueurs we linger over at dinner parties today had colorful origins.

Some were conceived by monks in musty monastery cellars centuries ago and bear the name of the religious orders that created them — such as Benedictine.

Others are named after popular national figures, such as Galliano, honoring Italian war hero Maj. Giuseppe Galliano.

One of the most popular cordials, Cointreau, was created during the 19th century by a French family of that name which made candied fruit during the reign of Napoleon Bonaparte. They were based in the city of Angers.

During the 1840s, Edouard Cointreau, son of one of the founding brothers, was sent abroad to seek new ingredients for the sweets they made.

In the West Indies, young Cointreau stumbled on an especially tasty orange. Realizing that the fruit would not last the trip home, he had the peels dried and shipped back.

Cointreau's father, who had begun distilling liqueurs, was intrigued by the scent and combined the peel with those of oranges from Europe and Africa.

He then steeped the mixture in brandy, added spices and produced the fragrant 80-proof liqueur that is sold in 170 nations today.

Cointreau is used in a number of cocktails and tall drinks. The French also serve it alone on the rocks.

Cointreau plays a role in the kitchen, too, as a seasoning for fish, meat or fowl. It can be equally useful as an ingredient for all sorts of desserts, from Cherries Jubilee to various pastries.

Cointreau was introduced to Americans in 1893 at the International Exhibition in Chicago.

Today, it is still made in Angers, the city of its birth, in red copper stills, like those in which it was first made nearly 150 years ago. These drinks indicate the liqueur's versatility.

California-style cooking emphasises 'simplicity'

Copley News Service

"Simplicity. We're into simplicity. That's one of the key elements of California cuisine."

The voice comes from a petite woman with intense brown eyes. She is sparking the kitchen with her dynamism as she prepares a California-style dinner for two. She imagines the couple to be working people who want to spend a special evening together with limited time preparing the meal. While cooking, she shares the latest news in the continuing culinary saga of cooking in the Golden State.

Diane Rossen Worthington, author of "The Cuisine of California" (Jeremy P. Tarcher Inc., 1983), knows what she's talking about. Her years as a cooking teacher and restaurant consultant in Southern California give her a strong background in the field. She sees her book as a chronicle of today's situation, not as a definitive work on the subject, which, she claims, "is still in the growth stage."

She say she "hates the image of hot-tub lunches with cold artichoke soup," and feels that the concept of cooking with fresh ingredients will eventually stabilize across the nation.

ACCORDING TO Worthington, these are the fundamental principles of California cooking:

— Brief cooking, which releases fresh flavors while retaining the desired texture.

— Combinations of ingredients (herbs, mustards, wine, etc.) chosen to heighten, rather than mask, natural flavors.

— Simple yet elegant presentation of food on the dish. If the plate looks bare, it's because it's California cuisine.

VENTURA LIMESTONE LETTUCE WITH TOASTED PINE NUTS AND RASPBERRY VINAIGRETTE

Vinaigrette:
1 tbsp. olive oil
1 tbsp. oil
1 tbsp. raspberry vinegar
½ to 1 small shallot, minced
½ tsp. Dijon mustard
1 tsp. whipping cream
Salt and finely ground pepper to taste
2 heads limestone lettuce or butter lettuce, broken into bite-size pieces
2 Belgian endive, thinly sliced (one to line salad bowl)
2 ozs. enoki, or white mushrooms, roots cut off
1 small head radicchio, torn into bite-size pieces
Garnish:
8 cherry tomatoes, sliced in half

Preheat oven to 350 F. Toast pine nuts in oven 5 minutes or until lightly browned. Prepare vinaigrette by mixing all ingredients with whisk or in blender until well combined. Place limestone lettuce, endive, mushrooms and radicchio in salad bowl. Garnish with cherry tomato halves and toasted pine nuts. Pour approximately ¼ cup raspberry vinaigrette over and toss. Taste for seasoning and serve. (Vinaigrette can be kept up to 1 week in refrigerator.) Salad may be prepared up to 4 hours ahead except addition of dressing, which should be kept in refrigerator until ½ hour before serving.

Makes 2 generous servings.

Note: Limestone lettuce now is grown hydroponically all year in Southern California. Its taste is closest to butter lettuce, with a pronounced, sweet buttery flavor. It also has less waste. In combination with ruby red radicchio, Belgian endive and thin enoki mushrooms, the salad greens are out of the ordinary. Sweet, acidic raspberry vinaigrette accents the salad, and toasted pine nuts add a crunchy finish. If necessary, substitute butter lettuce for limestone and red cabbage for rachicchio.

GRILLED LEMON-MUSTARD CHICKEN

Marinade: ¼ cup lemon juice
½ tbsp. finely chopped lemon zest
⅛ cup Dijon mustard
⅛ cup finely chopped fresh herbs — any combination of rosemary, thyme, basil, oregano and parsley
¼ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. coarsely cracked pepper
2 large whole chicken breasts, skinned, boned and halved
Garnish:
Parsley sprigs
Lemon slices
Fresh herb leaves used in marinade

Diane Rossen Worthington: "Simplicity — that's one of the key elements of California cuisine."

Combine marinade ingredients in small bowl. Mix well. In large shallow non-aluminum dish, arrange chicken pieces and pour marinade over them. Marinate 2 to 4 hours in refrigerator. Prepare barbecue (mesquite preferred) for medium-heat grilling. Remove chicken from marinade and grill 3 inches from flame 7 to 10 minutes on each side (or use broiler). Place on individual plates or on platter surrounded by parsley sprigs, lemon slices and fresh herb leaves. (May be prepared up to 4 hours ahead through marinading/refrigerating chicken breasts.

Makes 2 generous servings.

Note: Recommended California wine: This flexible dish works equally well with Chardonnay, Cabernet or Zinfandel and can be served with a crisp, refreshing Fume Blanc in the summer.

SAUTE OF JULIENNED GARDEN VEGETABLES

2 medium carrots, peeled and julienned
2 medium stalks celery, peeled and julienned
1 tbsp. unsalted butter
1 tbsp. oil
½ medium red onion, thinly sliced
2 small zucchini, julienned
½ to 1 medium clove garlic, minced
¼ tsp. salt
Dash coarsely cracked pepper
½ tbsp. chopped parsley

Immerse carrots in pan of boiling water and boil 1 minute. Drain and set aside. Immerse celery in pan of boiling water and boil 30 seconds. Drain and set aside. Heat butter and oil in large skillet until hot. Add onion and saute over medium heat 3 to 5 minutes or until soft but not brown. Add carrots and celery and continue sauteing another minute. Add zucchini and saute another 2 minutes or until cooked but not soft. Add garlic, salt, pepper and parsley. Mix well, taste for seasoning and serve immediately.

Makes 2 generous servings.

Variation: Other vegetables that can be used include blanched green beans, jicama, summer squash, blanched turnips, red Swiss chard and red peppers.

Note: Can be prepared up to 4 hours ahead through blanching vegetables, and keeping in refrigerator.

BAKED YAMS WITH SOUR CREAM AND CHIVES

1 to 2 evenly sized and shaped yams
1 tsp. unsalted butter
¼ cup sour cream
1 to 2 tsps. chopped chives

Preheat oven to 400 F. Wash yams and rub lightly with butter. Place yams in baking sheet and bake 30 minutes. Prick skin of yams and return to oven for 30 minutes more or until tender. Remove pointed ends of yams and slice crosswise into 1½-inch thick round slices. Lay slices flat on plate and garnish each with sour cream and chives. Serve 1 to 2 slices per person, depending on thickness of yam. Serve immediately.

Makes 2 generous servings.

Variations: To speed cooking, use microwave oven for yams. Substitute sauteed leeks for chives.

CHOCOLATE MOUSSE CAKE

14 ozs. semisweet chocolate
2 ozs. unsweetened chocolate
¼ cup strong brewed coffee
6 large eggs
½ cup sugar
1 cup whipped cream
1 tsp. vanilla extract
Garnish: 1 cup whipping cream
1 tsp. vanilla extract

Preheat oven to 350 F. Butter 9-inch springform pan. In top part of double boiler, combine both types of chocolate and coffee above hot water over low heat. Leave until melted, stirring occasionally. In mixer bowl, beat eggs until frothy. Slowly add sugar and beat until light, thick and lemon colored, about 5 minutes. Whip cream in chilled bowl until stiff; add vanilla. Beat chocolate mixture until shiny; beat into eggs. Fold in cream until well combined.

Pour into prepared springform pan. Place springform into larger pan, such as roasting pan. Pour hot water into larger pan halfway up side of springform pan to become a water bath. Bake 1 hour. Turn off oven and let sit in oven 15 more minutes. Remove from oven and cool 30 minutes.

For whipped cream garnish: Whip cream in chilled bowl until soft peaks form. Add vanilla and whip another minute or until fairly stiff. (For chocolate whipped cream, fold in 2 ounces semisweet chocolate, melted and cooled.)

This cake is best served either warm or at room temperature, with whipped cream passed separately.

Makes 8 to 10 servings — enough for dinner for two, plus some to share with friends the following day.

Tomato chowder: Delicious, nutritious light meal

TOMATO CHOWDER

If the turkey broth called for is not at hand, use chicken broth.
2 cups clear fat-free homemade turkey broth
10½-ounce can condensed tomato soup, undiluted
8.5-ounce can creamstyle corn
Salt and pepper to taste

In a medium saucepan gradually stir the turkey broth into the tomato soup. Stir in corn. Heat, stirring often, until very hot. Add salt and pepper. Makes about 1 quart.

Eggplant 'noble' vegetable

By The Los Angles Times — Washington Post News Service

Richly purple and satiny smooth, the dark and handsome eggplant sits with an air of nobility among the otherwise plebeian produce in the market. Notable as ratatouille, caponata, moussaka and parmigiana, eggplant is aubergine to the Europeans who invented those dishes.

There is a lot a cook can do with eggplant. Slice it, dice it. Stuff it, roll it. Shred or bread it. Its flavor blends well with that of onions, olives, oil, cheese, tomatoes and other ingredients from anchovies to zucchini. Bake, boil, broil or steam it; serve it hot or cold as an appetizer, a side dish or entree. Offer it to vegetarians or meat-eaters.

CLAUDIA AND MICHAEL FRANKS' EGGPLANT ROTOLINI

2 large eggplants
Salt
Oil
Olive oil
1 onion, chopped
10 mushrooms, chopped
1 zucchini, grated
1 clove garlic, minced
1 stalk celery, chopped Parsley
Oregano
Basil
1 cup ricotta cheese
1 (15 ½-ounce) jar prepared marinara sauce

Cut stems and ends from eggplants, slice thinly (about 3-8 inch) lengthwise to yield 12 large slices. Sprinkle slices lightly with salt on both sides. Let stand 15 to 30 minutes. Wipe with paper towels to remove as much excess salt as possible, do not rinse. Arrange slices on oiled baking sheets and brush lightly with olive oil. Bake at 350 degrees until slightly tender, about 15 minutes. Meanwhile, in skillet saute onion in 2 tablespoons olive oil until transparent. Add mushrooms, grated zucchini, garlic and celery. Add parsley, oregano and basil or other herbs to taste. Saute until vegetables are tender but crisp. Stir in ricotta. Mound some of cheese mixture onto each eggplant slice. Roll up. Place rolls, seam side down, in 13 by 9-inch shallow baking dish. Cover with marinara sauce. Bake at 450 degrees, 10 minutes. Makes 6 servings, 2 rolls each.

STUFFED EGGPLANT

4 long Japanese eggplants
Salt, pepper
4 to 8 slices cooked ham
2 to 3 eggs
Oil
4 slices jack or mozzarella cheese, cut in strips

Rinse and dry eggplants. Leave stems intact and place eggplants on upper rack of broiler. Broil until skins become browned and start cracking, turning occasionally. Peel off skins, leaving stems. Press eggplant with fork to flatten. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place 1 or 2 slices ham on top of each eggplant near stem end. Fold up bottom of eggplant to cover ham.

Lightly beat eggs in pie plate, adding salt and pepper to taste. Lift each filled eggplant into beaten eggs to coat completely. Heat 1-2 inch oil in skillet over medium heat. Fry each eggplant until golden brown, turning once. About 3 minutes before end of cooking, top each eggplant with strips of cheese arranged in lattice form. Remove from heat and drain on paper towels. Serve garnished with sliced tomatoes and parsley, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

CURRY EGGPLANT DIP

1 medium eggplant
¼ cup plain yogurt
2 to 3 cloves garlic, crushed
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons olive oil
1½ teaspoons curry powder
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
¼ teaspoon ground cumin
¼ teaspoon ground coriander
⅛ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ cup chopped cilantro
Cilantro sprigs
Toasted pita bread wedges

Pierce eggplant in several places. Place on baking sheet and bake at 400 degrees about 45 minutes or until very soft. Remove peel from eggplant and coarsely chop pulp. In blender combine eggplant pulp, yogurt, garlic, lemon juice, olive oil, curry powder, salt, ginger, cumin, coriander and mustard. Blend until pureed. Stir in cilantro. Turn into bowl. Garnish with cilantro sprigs. Serve with toasted pita bread wedges as dippers. Makes about 2½ cups.

EGGPLANT-PEPPER SALAD

1 large eggplant
2 sweet red or green peppers
Olive oil
1 clove garlic, minced
⅓ cup red wine vinegar
1 teaspoon Italian herbs or oregano
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon black pepper
1 large tomato, chopped
½ cup chopped red onion
½ cup black olives
Butter lettuce leaves
¼ cup crumbled feta cheese

Pierce eggplant in several places. Place on baking sheet and bake at 400 degrees until very tender, about 1 hour. Cool. Pull off and discard skin. Tear flesh into shreds and discard large seed pockets. Cover and chill.

Meanwhile, brush peppers with olive oil. Roast under broiler, turning, until blistered all over. Enclose in paper bag and set aside 10 minutes. Rub peel off peppers. Slice peeled roasted peppers into strips about ½-inch wide. Chill.

In jar with tight-fitting lid combine garlic, vinegar, herbs, salt and pepper. Add ½ cup olive oil, cover tightly and shake to blend thoroughly.

When ready to serve, drain eggplant. In large bowl combine eggplant, roasted pepper strips, tomato, onion and olives. Add dressing and toss to coat vegetables. Pile onto lettuce leaves on individual serving plates. Sprinkle with feta cheese. Makes about 6 servings.

Debugger 'thrilled' to find wiretap

Electronic eavesdropping common, he says

LOS ANGELES — When curiosity overcomes obedience to the law and people turn to electronic eavesdropping and phone-tapping, Norman I. Perle goes to work, clearing homes, offices and yards of bugs planted by some "low-life criminal."

For the 45-year-old professional debugger, "Finding a wiretap or an electronic surveillance system on one of my clients is a tremendous rush."

Part of the thrill might stem from the risk involved. Once, Perle says, he traced wires from a closet wall in a condominium to a telephone equipment room near the elevator. When he opened the door, the eavesdropper came at him — swinging a Boy Scout hatchet. The weapon missed Perle as he ran in the opposite direction.

Perle says he's debugged offices for all kinds of businesses and homes for those involved in marital breakups, but has never installed a bugging device, despite a cash offer of $67,000 to bug a Century City attorney.

Some clients, he says, are so shocked at discovering that someone has broken in to invade their privacy that they become physically ill.

"The horror of actually seeing it in front of them is such a trauma," Perle said from his home-office in the San Fernando Valley. "The bottom line is that the person who put it there is a felon. Somebody had to go out and hire a low-life criminal to put in a device."

Perle has about 25 steady clients who pay him to make regular sweeps of their offices. About 60 percent of his business is with law firms.

"The ethics of business, of employers listening in on their employees' conversations, or the employees listening in on the employers, one business listening in on another business, is unfortunately commonplace within the business community," he said. And that includes the entertainment industry.

"Drive by any Hollywood studio with a special surveillance receiver, and you'd find so many wiretaps going on between one production company and another, you wouldn't believe it," he said.

One on occasion, he said, a car pulled up beside him as he left a "sweep" job and a man pointed a gun at him.

"I knew as soon as I saw that car that they weren't going to ask me for directions," he said.

"As I dove down to the seat where my weapon was, I caught my shirt on the door handle and ripped it half off, rolled out the door and fell on my shoulder. I did a somersault and landed flat on my back. By the time I stood up, I had practically knocked myself out and my shirt was off," he said.

"The guy was just so shocked to see this kind of thing that he took off...He didn't have a clear shot at me anyway," Perle said.

Perle also evaluates magnetic tapes to determine their authenticity for trials.

He determined as faked an audio tape that Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt claimed would show an informant had threatened John Z. De Lorean if the automaker tried to back out of a narcotics deal. Three weeks after Perle said the tape was not real, Flynt admitted in court that it was a fake.

Perle also determined that a tape provided an alibi for a defendant by listening to the background noise of airplanes and finding from the flight patterns that the client really had been where he said he had been.

Academy admissions up as officers' image improves

AP Laserphoto

Cadets at West Point line up for inspection. More students with better academic records are applying to the academy.

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Uncle Sam wants to spend $151,000 on your college education. Interested?

More people than ever before are, but getting admitted to one of the four American service academies is also harder than ever before. The glitter is back on being a military officer.

Despite declining enrollments at many colleges, applications are running higher than usual at the United State Military Academy here and at the Naval, Air Force and Coast Guard academies.

West Point, for example, is receiving applications for the Class of 1988 from more students with better combined academic and extracurricular records than in any of the previous 179 classes, according to Col. Manley E. Rogers, the director of admissions.

Beyond their qualifications, even simple numbers tell a lot. More than 14,000 young men and women will start the application process at West Point this year, the most ever except when the Class of 1980, the first to accept women, applied in 1976. The applicants will compete for 1,400 places in a class from which about 900 will graduate as Army second lieutenants.

By the time they graduate, the U.S. government will have spent more than $151,000 on each cadet — for class work, mandatory athletics, summer military training and the $6,000 annual pay. In return, graduates will give at least five years to the Army. Most will make it a career.

"Last year we got a larger percentage of the high test kids than we've gotten in the 30 years we've been using it," said Rogers. The test is an academy rating that considers such high school factors as class rank, course of study, class size, standardized test scores, physical aptitude and academic and extracurricular honors.

Rogers said West Point competes for top candidates with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute and the eight Ivy League schools, as well as the Navy and Air Force academies.

And that competition is doing well, too. At the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md., 13,572 people applied and 1,356 were accepted for the Class of 1987, said Dennis Boxx, an academy spokesman. Of that group, 82 percent were in the top fifth of their high school graduating class, he said.

At the Coast Guard Academy in New London, Conn., the Class of 1987 had 6,956 applicants for 251 openings, and 92 percent of those entering were in the top fifth of their high school class. While it was not the largest applicant pool ever, said Cmdr. Edward R. Williams, associate director of admissions, the 28:1 ratio of applications to acceptances was the highest.

In Colorado Springs, Colo., 1,449 students entered the freshman class at the Air Force Academy last summer, 89 percent of whom had been in the top fifth of their high school class, said Lt. Col. Larry Thacker, director of admissions. The class was drawn from 12,481 applicants, the most ever, he said.

"We look for a participant, a doer, a leader," saidRogers. The chief gauge of such qualities is class rank, he said.

Drawing such applicants has gotten easier. Rogers ticked off a list of attractions: alumni that include Eisenhower, MacArthur and at least three astronauts; free tuition; more Rhodes and Hertz (engineering) scholars than all but three other schools, and excellent career training.

But Rogers said more fundamental factors were responsible for the recent increase in applications. He cited three reasons:

— Vietnam is over. As memories fade of the Vietnam War, students from a younger generation are again embracing traditional views of military careers.

— Patriotism is back in style. Even before favorable reaction to the U.S. invasion of Grenada, Rogers said, the country's mood had shifted back to one of pride in its military.

DEAR ABBY

'Father, daughter' pair case of mistaken identity

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "Older Than I Look in Tucson" and want to add my experience.

I am a woman in my mid-30s but could easily pass for 18 or 19. My husband is 43, but looks older. We are constantly mistaken for father and daughter. At first we were embarrassed and even annoyed when strangers made this mistake, but we have learned to handle it with humor.

For example, if we are in a restaurant and the waiter turns to me and asks, "And what would your father like to drink?" I reply with a sly wink, "He's not my father — but please don't tell my husband."

And if someone asks my husband, "What will your daughter have?" he replies, "That's not my daughter, that's my son, and frankly I'm worried about him."

"Older Than I Look in Tucson" will probably have to deal with that problem the rest of her life, so I suggest she have some stock answers ready. — BEEN THERE IN MILWAUKEE

DEAR BEEN: Good advice. Humor often lubricates the stickiest of situations.

DEAR ABBY: I believe you erred in approving the use of the title "Dr." on wedding invitations. The use of such titles is appropriate only in a professional context.

Using professional titles in a social context, such as thank-you notes or in wedding invitations, implies a haughty attitude, since there is no other reason to convey information about one's education. I hope you will reconsider.

I happen to be a physician, but since this has nothing to do with my profession, I will sign myself .... VIVIAN WHITE

DEAR VIVIAN WHITE: I agree with you. But neither Amy Vanderbilt nor Emily Post agrees with us.

DEAR ABBY: I feel compelled to comment on your reply to "Wants a Ring," whose boyfriend, a Seventh-Day Adventist, told her that because his religion forbids wearing jewelry of any kind, she shouldn't expect a wedding ring. You wisely advised her to talk to a local pastor of that church and ask for some educational material about what is expected of its members.

If she becomes a Seventh-Day Adventist and holds to the teachings of that church, she will be expected to abstain from:

1. Reading fictional material.
2. Playing cards or games that invoke rage or stimulate competition.
3. Wearing jewelry.
4. Using cosmetics.
5. Using tobacco in any form.
6. Drinking alcoholic beverages, coffee and tea.
7. Having marital relations on the Sabbath, which begins at sundown on Friday night and ends at sundown on Saturday. It is considered a sin to seek pleasure on the day set aside to worship the Lord. — NANCY B.

Bread baked with bananas

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

BANANA BREAD

The way my friend Ellen May makes it.

1¼ cups well-stirred all- purpose flour
¼ cup wheat germ
2 teaspoons baking powder
Salt to taste
½ of a ¼-pound stick butter
⅓ cup sugar
1 large egg
Two ripe bananas (each 6 ounces)

Stir together flour, wheat germ, baking powder and salt. Cream butter and sugar; beat in egg.

Peel and finely mash bananas — there should be 1 cup; add to creamed mixture with flour, stir only until dry ingredients are moistened. Turn into a greased 8 by 4 by 3-inch loaf pan.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 45 minutes. Turn out on a wire rack and cool. Loaf will not be high.

Indian food uses variety of seasonings

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

India's cuisine has always intrigued me, and I learned some interesting facts about it recently. My informant was a young woman from New Delhi who had originally studied to be an architect, then switched to food.

Marinating plays a key role in India's cuisine, I was told by Julie Sahni during lunch at New York's Nirvana Restaurant, where she is executive chef.

"In chicken tandoor where the bird is cooked in a clay oven, it must first be marinated overnight in a mixture of yogurt and herbs," said Miss Sahni, who has written a book about her native cuisine. ("Classic Indian Cooking." William Morrow. 105 Madison Ave. N.Y. N.Y. 10016).

"You must know how to use our spices and herbs properly," added Miss Sahni, who also teaches classes about her country's cooking. Indian seasonings cover a wide range from garlic to ginger root. Some spices are used as aromatics, others tenderize the food.

Indian tastes differ somewhat from ours. For instance, goat meat, rarely served in New York where I live, is India's most popular meat, I am told.

Lamb is a close second and beef trails behind. Pork is rarely eaten because of India's religious restrictions.

The price of food also plays a prominent role. In the poorer homes, the main course often consists of vegetables, which cost about one fifth as much as meat.

Indians love sweets, said Miss Sahni, and cakes and cookies are available any time of day in snack shops.

Soup is also an Indian favorite, like this fragrant lime soup.

FRAGRANT LIME SOUP

1 thin cinnamon stick, 3 inches long, broken into 3 pieces
6 whole cloves
3 green cardamom pods
1 teaspoon black peppercorns
4 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 medium onions, peeled and chopped
5 medium potatoes, peeled and cut into 1-inch cubes
¼ teaspoon turmeric
6 cups chicken broth
¼ cup fresh coriander leaves
Salt, to taste
2-3rds cup coconut milk, or whole cow's milk
⅓ cup heavy cream
Juice 1 small lime

Place pieces of cheesecloth 6 inches square on chopping board. Put cinnamon, cloves, cardamom and peppercorns in center of cloth. Tie spices into a bag by bringing four corners of cheesecloth up and tying. Bang it lightly with wooden mallet to crush spices.

Heat vegetable oil in pan. Add onions and potatoes and cook over medium heat, stirring until onions are wilted and begin to brown (about 10 minutes). Add turmeric, broth and spice bag and bring to boil.

Reduce heat and simmer, covered, until vegetables are thoroughly cooked and tender (about 35 minutes). Turn off heat and stir in coriander leaves and salt.

When soup is cool, remove spice bag, squeezing out juice, and discard. Puree soup in blender. Soup may be refrigerated up to 3 days or frozen.

Defrost puree if frozen and add coconut or whole milk and heavy cream. Simmer till soup is heated through. Serve hot, sprinkled with lime juice. Serves 8.

Amish add own culinary touch

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

QUEENSTOWN, Md.-The Amish of Pennsylvania Dutch country know how to eat, from rich, homemade breads to fresh beef, country hams and loose sausage, honey, shoo-fly pie, cheesecake, fresh-pressed cider, salt-free potato chips, mushrooms, sticky buns and garden vegetables.

But they don't know how to drive, and traditionally that's meant cosmopolitan fans of the good, simple foods of the Pennsylvania Dutch either had to travel to the source or forego the pleasures.

Times are changing in Bird-in-Hand land. Last summer a small group of Lancaster County Amish opened a Pennsylvania Dutch Farmers Market here on Rte. 50, 10 miles east of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge and a fourth of a mile beyond Rte. 301, on the way to the beaches from Washington, D.C., and Baltimore. The store has done well enough that in April it will move to new quarters next door and triple in size to 15 stalls and more than 100 workers.

LAT Photo

Amish farmer Daniel Esh reaches for a pencil to write up a order at the Pennsylvania Dutch Farmers Market in Queenstown, Md. Some Amish are beginning to move beyond their farms to participate in the modern economy.

PENNSYLVANIA AGRICULTURE officials say it is the first example, to their knowledge, of Amish going out of state to sell their farm wares. The Amish say it's symptomatic of their increasing need to join the mainstream economy as their numbers grow and available farmland around home is taken up.

"Twenty years ago, you wouldn't have seen anything like this," said Amish market organizer Daniel Esh, resplendent in black breeches, suspenders, a broad-brimmed hat and Solzhenitsyn beard. "All we could do then was farm."

The Amish church still regards farming as the appropriate activity for its members. It still requires that members forgo such amenities as cars and tractors, electricity, public schools, radio and television, telephones and store-bought clothes. But Esh said liberal wings of the church increasingly are permitting some Amish to participate in the modern economy.

THE MARKET here has lights, telephones and refrigeration and looks no different from any busy food outlet, except for the Amish in traditional garb who staff it.

But because of the rules against driving, the 30 workers must hire four trucks and drivers to haul them and their goods the 100 miles here every Thursday, then back home that night and down and back again Friday.

"It's expensive, but it's too far for buggies," Esh said with a chuckle.

Evidently the added expense does not drive prices too high to prevent them from being competitive. Last week, when no fresh produce other than mushrooms was available, the place was jammed at noontime.

"If you think this is busy, you ought to see it in the summer," said an Eastern Shore matron finishing a sandwich from the lunch counter.

Author covers American cooking masters

Hearst Feature Service

The book in question is Betty Fussell's "Masters of American Cookery." The question is, do you keep it in the kitchen, the study, or next to your bed?

Fussell, first of all a cook, is also a scholar, a food writer and a member of the M.F.K. Fisher school of cookery devotees. For her, to cook is to create, to live in history, and above all, to live well.

"I'm combining a mad passion for being in the kitchen with a strong interest in history," she said. This former New York Times food writer has a Ph.D. in English and now devotes all her time to writing.

PUBLICATION OF "Masters" marks the beginning of the author's search for the common thread of American cookery, a pursuit she opens with an examination of four major forces in what she calls the "American Food Revolution:" M.F.K. Fisher, James Beard, Craig Claiborne and Julia Child.

Her intriguing book begins with four chapters on these American food writers, who all could be considered members of the cookbooks-as-literature school. But before you get too far, Fussell brings you back to what it's all about. Food, with an eclectic collection [illegible] interpretations of [illegible]

Italian fennel vegetable more popular

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Now that cooks in the United States are more interested than ever before in exploring the world of fresh vegetables, fennel (sometimes called by its Italian name, finocchio) may get its due. At one time it could be found most often in shops in Italian neighborhoods, but these days an increasing number of supermarkets carry it.

It has a licorice flavor and its appearance has some resemblance to celery.

Its broad leaf stalks overlap each other at the base of its stem, forming a bulb-like structure (3 to 4 inches in diameter) that is firm, white and sweet inside. Fennel's leaves — sometimes called ferns — are needlelike and a beautiful green color. They make a lovely garnish.

FENNEL, FAIRLY thickly sliced, may be served as part of a first course raw vegetable platter. Or the slices may be steamed, mixed with a cream sauce, sprinkled with grated Parmesan cheese and broiled briefly to achieve a golden topping.

Recently, however, we came across an unusual way to use fennel — in a soup along with pears. We found the recipe in a worthwhile new menu cookbook, "Cuisine for All Seasons" by Helen Hecht (Atheneum).

Mrs. Hecht says of her fennel and pear combination, "It is a pureed soup made without milk or cream. It is therefore lighter and more intensely flavored than a creamed soup would be."

Both calorie-watchers and devotees of light cuisine may want to try her recipe.

HELEN HECHT'S FENNEL SOUP

3 medium-large fennel bulbs (about 3 pounds untrimmed)
1 large potato (½ pound), peeled and sliced
1 medium onion, peeled and coarsely chopped
Several sprigs parsley
3½ cups chicken stock or broth
1 cup peeled, cored, and chopped Bosc pear
2 teaspoons minced fresh tarragon or ½ teaspoon dried
1 scant tablespoon Pernod
Salt
Fresh-ground white pepper
Garnish: minced fennel ferns

Trim the stalks off the fennel bulbs and discard. Slice the bulbs crosswide about 1 inch thick. Put the fennel in a large saucepan with the potato, onion, parsley, and chicken stock.

Cover tightly, bring to a simmer, and cook for 15 minutes. Add the pears and cook for 10 minutes longer, or until the vegetables and pears are soft.

Puree the solids in a food processor or blender, adding the stock in a thin stream.

Return the soup to the saucepan and stir in the tarragon, Pernod and seasoning to taste. Reheat before serving. Garnish each portion with minced fennel ferns.

Yield: approximately 8 cups or 10 servings.

Avocados available year-round for special

Copley News Service

Growing up in Southern California, I've loved Mexican food since I can remember. And one of my favorite Mexican specialties is guacamole, made from the buttery, rich avocado.

The house where I grew up has an avocado orchard in the backyard. They're large, shady trees with glossy, deep green leaves, and even in the summer it's dark and cool under their branches. The fruit (yes, the avocado is a fruit) hangs heavy and pear-shaped among the leaves, often so high up that a special pole is needed to reach them.

The Fuerte variety is available generally from November to May, while the Hass variety appears on the market around May and is available through October. Avocados grown in Florida are on the market from July to February, so there's a year-round supply of different varieties from which to choose.

Avocados are not tree-ripened, but are picked while still hard, then left to sit until ripe. The best way is to store them is at room temperature for two to seven days, until they begin to soften. To hasten ripening, place avocados in a brown paper bag — do not refrigerate. In fact, unripe avocados should never be stored in the refrigerator. Allow them to ripen until they yield to gentle pressure, and then they may be stored in the fridge for up to eight days longer.

Sliced avocados will turn brown when exposed to air, but this may be prevented by sprinkling cut edges with a little lemon juice.

The word avocado comes from the old Aztec "ahuacatl." Native to tropical America, the potters of old Mexico used to mold their earthenware jars in the the shape of the prized fruit. Also known as the "alligator pear" and even "love fruit," the avocado has a subtle and unique flavor.

It is rich in oil, low in carbohydrates, and very easily digested. And it contains good amounts of vitamins A and B.

EASY GUACAMOLE

1 medium to large ripe avocado
¼ cup sour cream
¼ cup diced tomato
2 tbsps. chopped fresh chives
¼ tsp. garlic salt
Dash pepper

Cut avocado in half and remove pit. With spoon, scoop pulp into bowl. Mash ulp with fork until smooth, then mix in remaining ingredients. Serve on lettuce as a salad, or as a dip for corn chips. Makes about 1½ cups.

ZIPPY AVOCADO DRESSING

1 medium to large avoocado
1½ tbsps. lemon juice
¼ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup milk
¼ tsp. salt
½ tsp. chili powder
Dash garlic powder
Dash cayenne pepper

Cut avocado in half; discard seed. Scoop out pulp and mash with lemon juiceto smooth consistency. Add remaining ingredients and blend well. Refrigerate until ready to use. Serve over salad or sliced tomatoes.

NUTTY AVOCADO BREAD

3 cups sifted unbleached flour
1½ cups brown sugar
1 tsp. baking soda
⅛ tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. salt
3 medium eggs
1 cup mashed avocado
¾ cup vegetable oil
3 tsps. vanilla
1¼ cups chopped nuts
¼ cup wheat germ

Combine sugar, eggs and vanilla in mixing bowl. Beat well, then add avocadoand oil, blending until smooth. Gradually add sifted dry ingredients. Beat at medium speed of mixer until smooth. (Mixture may be quite thick. If necessary add water, a little at a time, up to ½ cup, until thin enough to pour. Mixture

Asparagus flavorful green vegetable

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Asparagus, that most delectable of green-tipped veggies, was first popularized in England by the famous diarist Samuel Pepys. How they got along before that I haven't a clue. A life without asparagus? Unthinkable!

Ancient Greeks gathered wild asparagus, which is more flavorful than cultivated. Wild asparagus is still found in the Mediterranean and some parts of the United States. Folklore has it that these luscious green spears have the power to restore eyesight and cure a toothache — but even if they gave me a toothache, I don't think I could stay away from them.

French, Belgian and German connoisseurs prefer the milder white asparagus. This variety is grown in mounds of dirt which cover the shoots and keep them from sunlight (which would turn them green). And, a purple-tipped variety is popular with Italians.

Many Americans eat only the tips and discard the stalks. For shame! All that lovely asparagus down the color and closed, compact tips. Avoid those whose tips have opened out, and don't buy large spears — these can be tough and stringy.

When microwaving asparagus, arrange the spears in the dish with the tips toward the inside and the stalks (which take longer to cook) toward the edges of the dish.

ASPARAGUS CANTON

2 tbsps. butter or margarine
2 tbsps. slivered almonds
3 tbsps. minced onion
1 (10 oz.) pkg. frozen cut asparagus
½ cup thinly sliced celery
1 (5 oz.) can water chestnuts, drained and sliced
1 tbsp. soy sauce

Combine butter, almonds and onion in 1-quart glass casserole. Microwave for1½ minutes. Stir and microwave for 2 to 3 minutes or until golden brown.

Add asparagus, celery and water chestnuts to butter mixture; cover. Microwave for 5 minutes. Stir and microwave for 3 to 4 minutes or until tender-crisp. Stir in soy sauce. Let stand, covered, 3 minutes before serving.

Makes 4 servings.

CHEESY ASPARAGUS AMANDINE

1 lb. asparagus
2 tbsps. water
2 tbsps. butter or margarine
½ cup each finely chopped green pepper and finely chopped onion
2 tbsps. all-purpose flour
¼ tsp. salt
Dash pepper
1 cup milk
1½ cups (6 ozs.) shredded Monterey jack cheese
¼ cup slivered almonds

Snap off and discard tough ends of asparagus and cut into 1-inch slanting sices. Place asparagus and water in 1½-quart casserole. Cover with lid or plastic wrap. Microwave for 6 to 7 minutes (stirring after 4 minutes) or until tender-crisp. Let stand, covered, for 1 minute.

With slotted spoon, transfer asparagus to paper towel, reserving juices; set asparagus aside.

Add butter to reserved juices. Microwave, uncovered, for 30 seconds. Stir in green pepper and onion. Microwave, uncovered, for 4 minutes, stirring after 2 minutes. Sprinkle with flour, salt and pepper; mix until blended. Microwave, uncovered, for 1 minute or until bubbly.

With wire whip, beat in milk. Microwave, uncovered, for 2 minutes (stirring after 1 minute) or until bubbly. Stir in cheese, mixing until melted; gently stir in asparagus. Sprinkle with almonds. Microwave, uncovered, for 3 minutes, rotating dish ¼ turn after 2 minutes.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

ASPARAGUS SOUP

2 cups boiling water
2 chicken bouillon cubes
3 cups fresh or frozen asparagus, cut up
1 small onion, chopped
1 cup cottage cheese
½ cup milk
¼ tsp. ground nutmeg
Salt, white pepper to taste

In 2-quart casserole, combine water, bouillon cubes, asparagus and onion. Cver, cook 6 minutes, until asparagus is tender.

Cool soup. Force through a sieve or food mill with cottage cheese. Add milk and seasonings. Serve hot or chilled.

Makes 4 servings.

Beef tripe cheap, wholesome food

By MERLE ELLIS

"How say you to a fat tripe finely broil'd?"

"I like it well: good Grumio, fetch it me."

Thus went the dialogue between Katharina and Grumio in Act IV, Scene III, of Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew." Bonnie Kate was being starved into gentle submission by her husband, Petruchio. She would have eaten most anything, even tripe!

"I'm starved for meat . . . ," she said.

"I care not what, so it be wholesome food."

Tripe is wholesome food and comes closer to being cheap than almost any meat since Shakespeare's day. I couldhardly believe my eyes last week: "Beef Tripe — scalded, frozen, fresh thawed — 29 cents per lb." on special at the local Safeway store. That's about the cheapest edible anything that I have seen in a meat case in a long, long time. There are some, I know, who do not consider beef tripe to be an edible anything, but it can be delicious!

Tripe may not always be available for as little as 29 cents a pound, but it usually is inexpensive. Yet it is often overlooked. Most of what is produced in the United States is shipped overseas, where it receives greater respect and commands a better price.

The traditional recipe for simmered tripe calls for braising in cider, but I've found using plain-old water instead helps keep the tripe a nicer white and doesn't change the flavor (except for the better). Traditionally, too, the dish was sealed for baking in an earthenware casserole with a thick paste of flour and water. Aluminum foil has long since replaced that paste.

One of the secrets to good tender tripe is the temperature of the water in which it's cooked. Tripe should not boil hard because boiling water will shrink and toughen it.

SIMMERED TRIPE

2 pounds beef tripe
1 small veal shank (2 pounds, cut into 1-inch pieces)
2 onions, sliced
3 carrots, sliced
2 leeks, split in half
1 teaspoon thyme
2 bay leaves
3 to 4 garlic cloves, mashed
1 teaspoon salt
10-12 peppercorns
1 teaspoon allspice
1 pound beef clod fat in thin slices to cover casserole
Water

Rinse the tripe well under cold running water, dry with paper towels and cut into 2- or 3-inch squares.

Put the veal shank in a saucepan and cover with cold water. Bring it to a boil, reduce heat and simmer for about five minutes. Then drain and rinse with cold water. This step helps eliminate the scum that is an inevitable part of simmering most meat.

Layer the bottom of a good-sized covered casserole with the sliced onions and carrots. Lay the tripe over the vegetables and add the leeks, veal shank and seasonings.

Cover with slices of beef fat, then add enough water to cover all.

Seal the casserole with heavy-duty aluminum foil and top with a heavy lid. Bake in a 250-degree oven for 6 hours, or until the tripe is tender. Check from time to time to make sure the mixture is covered with water and add a bit more if necessary.

To serve: Remove the foil and take off the layer of fat. Drain the tripe, reserving the broth. Remove the meat, both tripe and pieces of veal, and discard the vegetables. Put the meat in a serving dish and keep warm. Strain the broth and remove any fat that rises to the top. Reduce the broth over high heat to approximately 2 cups, pour over tripe and serve in hot earthenware bowls. This, a good crusty bread and a glass of hearty red wine will make you a lover of tripe. Serves 4.

LIVING TODAY

Future home may be more functional

By SHARON A. HILLIS

What will future houses look like? Will they be radically different from the types of buildings of today? Probably not.

People often expect future housing to be revolutionary. In fact it is more often evoluntionary. Housing reflects the needs, resources and desires of the people who live in it. Housing changes as those needs, resources and people change. Like people, houses are more likely to evolve slowly rather than change quickly and dramatically.

Throughout history, housing has reflected three key elements that can still be observed today. The Romans called these elements commodity, firmness and delight. Today Americans call them function, construction quality and aesthetics. But the concepts are the same and will be just as important in the future.

Certain trends in function already have appeared in the housing industry. For example, more Americans are choosing passive solar designs which orient a house to the sun rather than the street and have large window areas and overhangs on the south side.

A trend toward smaller houses will become even more important in the future. The smaller a house is, the less expensive it is to build, heat and cool. The goal of reduced-volume housing is to decrease the cost of housing without also decreasing its liveability. It has dual-purpose rooms, little wasted hall space, efficient storage and smaller-scale furnishings.

More people will learn how to use mirrors, color and lighting techniques to make the small spaces seem larger. Many will have to adapt their lifestyles too. Learning to share more items and devising ways of creating privacy with limited space will be two challenges of reduced-volume design.

The concept of "delight" may be the key to housing of the future. Much of the housing built in the recent past is rather plain. In trying to make housing a compartmentalized "machine for living," Americans omitted much of the "delight."

In addition quality was often less valued than quantity. Future housing will see a greater emphasis on aesthetics, with greater attention to detail and quality. More home buyers will compromise sprawling spaces for beauty, entertainment and a few luxuries in a smaller but quality-built house.

These housing design trends reflect an economic and energy squeeze rather than a shift in American tastes and preferences. All people may have to do some adapting to future trends.

New wild game, venison cookbooks available

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

You might want to check your bookstores or library for a copy of "The Wild Game and Fish Cookbook," by Jim Bryant (Little, Brown). Written recently by an expert gamesman who loves to cook, it contains about 30 recipes for using venison in all its forms.

You may also be interested in a booklet about venison published by Cornell University's Cooperative Extension Service.

Adapted from bulletins published by the Cooperative Extension Service of Oregon State University, it contains numerous valuable tips, recipes and helpful photographic illustrations of boning and cutting techniques.

This useful pamphlet, "Venison: Boning, Freezing & Cooking," is available by sending $1 — payable to Cornell University — to Cornell Distribution Center, 7-V Research Park, Ithaca, NY 14850.

Pork roasted with prunes

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Scandinavian cooks have a traditional way of roasting a joint of pork with prunes inserted in it. The prunes add good flavor, and the roast looks most attractive when it is sliced.

Now an American cook has developed her own version of the dish. Instead of inserting the prunes in small slits in the loin, she bones the meat and cuts a pocket in it to stuff with the dried fruit, then she rolls and ties the pork. Her particular seasonings and style of roasting produce a delicious accompanying sauce.

PORK ROAST WITH PRUNES

3¾ pounds pork loin (bone-in)
12-ounce package pitted prunes
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon dry rosemary leaves
1-16th teaspoon pepper
½ cup coarsely diced onion
½ cup sliced celery (½-inch)
½ cup sliced pared carrot (½-inch)
1 cup dry red wine
1 cup clear fat-free beef broth
½ teaspoon dry thyme leaves, crushed
1 garlic clove, crushed
2 bay leaves

Remove and reserve the bones from the pork loin. Make a pocket in the loin to hold the prunes: with a 7- to 8-inch sharp pointed knife, cut a lengthwise slit through the center of the meat, about 2½ inches wide, from one end to the other. Fill with prunes. Fold flap of meat around roast. Tie roast with string in 4 places. Stir together the salt, rosemary and pepper; rub over meat.

In a large roasting pan surround the reserved bones with the onion, celery, carrot, wine, broth, thyme, garlic and bay leaves. Place pork loin, fat side up, on top of the bones. Roast uncovered in a preheated 500-degree oven until pork is lightly browned — about 10 minutes. Reduce oven temperature to 325 degrees. Continue roasting uncovered, basting occasionally, until a meat thermometer inserted in the center of the meat registers 170 degrees — about 1½ hours. (If liquid is needed in the pan during this period, add a little water.)

Remove meat and keep warm in a low oven. Remove bones and bay leaves from pan and discard. Remove liquid and vegetables from the pan and puree half at a time, in an electric blender, or use a food processor for pureeing. If necessary, add enough water to make 2 cups sauce; heat. Slice the pork loin about ½-inch thick and serve with the hot sauce.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Root vegetables often confusing

Copley News Service

Are you troubled over turnips? Rattled over rutabagas? Many people mistake these two root vegetables for each other, but each has its own unique appearance and taste.

Turnips may be easily recognized by the purple tinge on white skin. They have white flesh and a zesty, pungent flavor.

Rutabagas have light yellow to brown skin with yellow flesh. They have a nutty-sweet flavor.

When shopping for fresh turnips, look for smooth, round roots with purple-tinted white skin. There should be only a few scars at the top and fibrous roots at the base.

Purchase fresh rutabagas that are roundish in shape with smooth, light yellow-brown skin. They should be firm and feel heavy for their size.

TURNIPS AU GRATIN

4 cups diced pared fresh turnips (about 3 lbs.)
2 tsps. salt, divided
1 tsp sugar
2 tbsps. butter or margarine
2 tbsps. flour
⅛ tsp. pepper
1½ cups milk
¾ cup shredded cheddar cheese
¾ cup fine dry bread crumbs

Place turnips in 1-inch boiling water in medium saucepan. Add 1 teaspoon sat and sugar. Cover and cook 12 minutes or until tender. Drain.

In medium saucepan, melt butter or margarine. Blend in flour, remaining 1 teaspoon salt and pepper. Remove from heat and gradually stir in milk. Return to heat and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Stir in cheese.

Alternate layers of turnips and cheese sauce in 1½-quart casserole. Sprinkle with bread crumbs. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes or until golden brown. Makes 6 servings.

BAKED RUTABAGAS

2 lbs. rutabagas
1 inch boiling water
2 tbsps. chopped parsley
1 tsp. sugr
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
3 tbsps. butter or margarine
2 tbsps. milk

Wash and pare rutabagas; cut into slices ½-inch thick. Place in a saucepanwith 1 inch boiling water. Cover. Bring to boil and cook about 10 minutes. Drain well and arrange slices in layers in a buttered baking dish, sprinkling each layer with chopped parsley, and a mixture of sugar, salt and pepper. Dot with butter and sprinkle with milk.

Cover and bake at 350 degrees 50 to 55 minutes or until tender. Makes 6 servings.

Anne Molofsky, George Washington University nutritionist, with plastic models of food she used to teach subjects in cholesterol tests about portion control.

Nutritionist helps people translate food, diet terms

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Among the files and diet books on George Washington University nutritionist Anne Molofsky's shelves are pizza slices that never get gummy, slabs of roast beef that won't spoil, scoops of ice cream that don't melt. These, among other plastic samples, help people "eyeball" food, says Molofsky, who used the models to teach test subjects about portion control.

During the National Institutes of Health's cholesterol study, Molofsky's and the other nutritionists' efforts were supplemented by an extensive educational program. Recipes were issued monthly, as well as for special holidays. "Market updates" were distributed listing the latest cholesterol and fat counts of old and new products. "Adherence events" were scheduled — parties used to keep the men in the cholesterol study active as well promote the foods the study recommended.

Among the handouts were "lipid puzzlers" (2 Down: One source of polyunsaturated fat is ...) and quizzes (True or false: Margarines usually contain cholesterol. Answer: False, no plant food has cholesterol. Molofsky says margarine products whose labels flag "contains no cholesterol" are confusing to consumers.)

Molofsky's and the clinic's handouts were geared to clarify misconceptions and to offer suggestions to study subjects. Among them:

— Polyunsaturated fats are liquid oils of vegetable origin. They are liquid at room temperature and tend to lower blood cholesterol. Saturated fats, of animal origin, are usually solid at room temperature. They raise blood cholesterol. Monounsaturated fats, or neutral fats, such as olive and peanut oils, neither raise nor lower blood cholesterol.

— Margarine doesn't have fewer calories than butter; the crucial difference is simply that it is made from vegetable fat, not animal fat.

— Tub margarine is higher in polyunsaturated fats than stick margarine because it is closer to the liquid state.

— On ingredient labels, "hydrogenated" means the oil has been saturated.

— The cocoa butter in chocolate is a saturated fat. In recipes, for 1 ounce of chocolate, substitute the following: 3 tablespoons of cocoa and 1 tablespoon of margarine. To make "chocolate sauce" combine 1 cup sugar, 1-2 cup water, 3 tablespoons cocoa and 1 tablespoon margarine. Boil 5 minutes. Cool and stir in 1-2 teaspoon vanilla.

— To add flavor to sandwiches (instead of mayonaise), make a spread by mixing any of the following spices to margarine — chili and oregano, curry powder, horseradish, mustard powder or lemon juice and herbs.

— When calculating portion sizes, estimate that boneless red meat will shrink approximately 1 ounce per 4 ounces of meat when cooked.

— Equivalencies from the 12-clinic cookbook "Modified Magic": 1 cup whole milk equals 1 cup skim milk plus 2 teaspoons oil, melted margarine or mayonnaise. 1 cup light cream equals 3-4 cup milk plus 1-4 cup melted margarine. 1 cup sour milk, yogurt or buttermilk.

— For those interested in more information about diet and cholesterol, free brochures are available from the American Heart Association.

Food plan for emergencies commonsense idea

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service

If a major disaster suddenly struck your area would you be caught without food and water?

Few of us really pay much attention to emergency food supplies and equipment that could mean the difference between surviving and staying well, or depending upon others and hoping they'd help us — if we could be found.

Certainly, it's not necessary to build and stock a bomb shelter with a year's supply of food, and live in terror of our lives, but a little commonsense planning is easy and well worth it.

The Red Cross will set up mass care structures including feeding and shelter, but the more people can help themselves, the better. They will have both fixed and mobile capacities, but most people would rather stay in their own homes, if possible, than go to junior and senior high schools to eat and sleep.

Camping equipment is a great boon during a disaster, especially if the utilities have been cut off. It should be stored in an easily accessible place, and kept clean and usable (you may not have water to clean it when you need it). Matches, charcoal, lighter fluids, kerosene lamps, workable flashlight, extra batteries for radios and flashlights can be kept together with the camping gear, so you don't have to search for them when needed.

Paper or plastic plates, cups, knives, forks, spoons, napkins, foil, toilet paper and tissues can be stored together for emergency needs. Pie pans, covered with foil that is discarded after each meal, make good reusable plates that need no washing. Pots, kettles, skillets and unbreakable small bowls to be used on outdoor fire pits, barbecues or fireplaces can be added to the emergency gear. Towelettes, bar and liquid soaps, paper towels, brushes, a scraper and cleanser will help meal clean-ups. A cardboard (not plastic) egg carton filled with paraffix-coated charcoal briquettes can be used in a coffee can, as both a stove and a source of heat. Manual can and bottle openers only.

If the power is off, the foods in the freezer will last for several days if it is full. Avoid unnecessary openings and use the most perishable foods in the refrigerator first. Fresh milk, poultry, meat and fish are the most likely to spoil. If the freezer is only partially filled with food, cover it with newspapers or blankets, if possible, to keep it cold.

Nutritionally, you can calculate the amount of foods needed by multiplying the number of people in your family, and the number of days you want to provide for them. If possible, each person should have two servings of milk or dairy products, and two servings of meat, fish or poultry, plus four servings of breads or cereals and four servings of fruits and vegetables. This is the ideal diet, but you may not be able to get it that way during an emergency. Don't worry too much, but do the best you can.

Add a bottle of multivitamin, mineral supplements to your disaster kit. Aspirin, antibiotics and a small bag of medical supplies are advised as well as extra quantities of any special medications needed by family members.

When planning your food supplies, stick to familiar kinds and family favorites when possible. They will contribute to feelings of security and continuity during a stressful time.

Canned, vacuum-packed and aseptically packaged foods that have a shelf life of about six months are good choices. Canned fruit juices, vegetables, fruits, meats, fish, seafood, poultry are ready to eat, and easily prepared or eaten cold. Graham and other crackers, dry cereals, dry milk, beans, dry mixes, dried fruits, jams and jellies and a dry seasoning mix will help improve emergency meals.

Some bottled water is also advised as a necessary addition to the disaster kit. Most water heaters will contain from 30 to 60 gallons or more of good, usable water for drinking, food preparation and tooth brushing. Strapping the water heater down is a simple, but valuable precaution.

Nutrition vital in diet program

From Staff Reports

Food can be a great ally or a deadly enemy. Diet Center Inc., a franchised weight loss program, offers the following tips for good nutrition, whether overweight or not:

— Choose filling, nutritious foods. Abandoned pursuit of some mystical number of calories is an excellent way to compound obesity with malnutrition because all calories are not created equal. An apple or a salad may have a few more calories than a piece of candy, but the natural foods contain nutrients and filling bulk.

— Shop for unprocessed foods. The essentials — fruits and vegetables, meats, poultry and fish, dairy products, and breads — are all located on the store's perimeter. Convenience foods don't do budgets or bodies any favors.

— Prepare food carefully. Cut fat from chicken breasts and steaks. Substitute lemon or herbs for salt whenever possible. Water soluble vitamins can be boiled away during cooking; maximize nutrition by eating one raw and one lightly steamed vegetable daily. Don't use "diet" salad dressings containing sugar, sodium, starch and additives. Instead use two teaspoons of polyunsaturated vegetable oil, apple cider vinegar, mustard and spices.

— Don't throw away hours of slection and preparation by bolting food. Rapid eating is an almost sure guarantee of overeating and accompanying discomforts.

Cinnamon: Favorite flavor also has 'spicy' history

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Cinnamon is one of the oldest spices known to man, and one of the most popular. The spice is mentioned several times in the Bible, and in Egypt, imported cinnamon in known to have been in use since 1450 B.C.

The ancient Chinese believed the cassia tree, on which Chinese cinnamon bark grows, to be the Tree of Life. By the second century A.D., cinnamon was regularly exported, via caravan, from China to Rome.

Roman chefs of antiquity used large amounts of spices in their kitchens and cinnamon, along with pepper, was one of the great favorites.

Medieval Arabs traveled to China to bring back the bark of the cassia tree for use in their highly spiced, and very complicated cuisine.

Spicy sauces for meats became very popular in medieval Europe. By the 14th century, there were professional sauce makers in Paris from whom housewives could buy them ready-made. The most widely favored of these was "cameline sauce," of which cinnamon was the basic flavoring ingredient.

For hundreds of years, cinnamon was very expensive and hard to get. It had to be transported by caravan via rugged overland routes from East to West — until the great navigator Magellan, in the early 16th century, finally charted a sea course to the Spice Islands. These Indonesian islands, lying west of New Guinea, produced many of the spices which Europe craved, including cinnamon.

Today, Indonesia and South Vietnam are our two principal sources of the bark, which is stripped from the trees and rolled into slender cinnamon sticks. Versatile cinnamon lends a unique flavor to a wide variety of dishes. Try these microwave treats and sample for yourself this historical spice.

CINNAMON WALNUT NIBBLES

½ tsp. cinnamon
3 tbsps. butter or margarine
2 cups walnut halves

Mix together sugar and cinnamon. Set aside. Place butter in 10-inch ceramic skillet. Melt in microwave oven for 1 minute.

Combine nuts with butter in microwave for 5 minutes, until toasted. Stir every 1½ minutes. Remove nuts from microwave and quickly stir in cinnamon-sugar mixture, coating nuts evenly.

Spread nuts in baking dish. Cool. Store in tightly covered container. Makes 2 cups.

CINNAMON TWO-FRUIT JAM

2 medium cooking apples (Jonathan, Pippin, McIntosh)
½ lb. ripe cherries
¼ cup lemon juice
1½ tsps. ground cinnamon
1½ cups sugar
1 tsp. butter or margarine

Peel and core apples, then dice to make 1 cup. Pit cherries and cut into haves to make 1 cup. Add lemon juice and cinnamon. Place fruit and spices in 2½-quart glass casserole. Add sugar and butter and mix thoroughly.

Cover and microwave for 6 minutes, or until mixture comes to a boil. Stir, and microwave, uncovered, for 8 to 9 minutes longer. Test for thickness by dripping jam from the sides of a metal spoon. Jam should coat the spoon and fall in thick droplets.

If not thick enough, cover and bring to boil a second time, then microwave, uncovered, 2 minutes longer. Pour jam into hot, sterilized jars. Fill each jar two-thirds full, then cool, and cover with lids. Refrigerate or freeze until ready to use. Makes about 2 cups.

Amtrak plagued with misleading image as 'killer train'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amtrak hasn't quite lived down stories about "the killer train" — that Silver Meteor which on its way north from Florida last summer struck a woman fishing from a trestle, later plowed into an abandoned pickup and finally derailed after hitting another truck.

On the way back two days later it hit a car, killing the driver.

None of the accidents could be blamed on Amtrak, but it gave the railroad a round of publicity it would just as soon forget.

In the last four months the nation's passenger railroad has gotten more unwanted notoriety: It has suffered two of the most serious accidents in its 13-year history as trains derailed at high speed in Texas and North Carolina, leaving four dead and scores injured.

Overall, however, government and rail industry safety experts give Amtrak high marks and say of all the ways of traveling — plane, bus, car or rail — the train remains among the safest. As the "killer train" incident demonstrated, it is vastly more dangerous to get in front of a train than to ride one.

Since Amtrak began operating in 1971, derailments have not been uncommon but only 20 passengers have been killed in train accidents. During that time Amtrak has carried more than 200 million people. Half of the fatalities came in Amtrak's worst accident, a derailment in 1971 shortly after Amtrak began service.

"The safety record (of Amtrak) I think you would have to conclude is excellent," said Bruce Fine, a rail safety specialist at the Federal Railroad Administration.

Safety experts say that even when a train is traveling at 70-plus mph passengers have considerable protection because much of the impact is absorbed at the front of the train.

"If you can keep the cars upright you almost never have a fatality," says Tom Styles, head of investigations at the National Transportation Safety Board.

Serious injuries have been reduced, the experts say, with improved design of seats, luggage compartments and car interiors to reduce the chances of a passenger being struck or hurled into a sharp object.

Of about 50 people injured when an Amtrak train derailed near Kittrell, N.C., last week, only 16 were hospitalized although the train was traveling at 79 mph. NTSB investigators attributed the low number of serious injuries partly to improved car design.

Produce should be washed off

Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: Sometimes when I shop for fruits and vegetables I find a grayish kind of powder on them. Are the fruit and vegetables safe to buy when they look like that? — Mrs. J.R., Norfolk, Va.

Dear Mrs. R.: A white or grayish powder on fruits or vegetables may be the residue of a spray and should be completely washed off. In fact all fruits and vegetables should be washed before being eaten or cooked.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My niece has suffered from eczema for some time and my brother (her father) tells me they have been referred to a pediatrician who says that the child has a food allergy. I'm no doctor, but I had always been under the impression that food allergies could not cause eczema. Is this something new? — Alice, Bradenton, Fla.

Dear Alice: I have treated many patients whose eczema was caused by food allergy and many whose eczema was not caused by it. According to Dr. Hugh A. Sampson of the Duke University Medical Center, food allergies can cause eczema, although they are not the only cause. Among the foods implicated in my patients' illness were: eggs, peanuts, milk, soybeans and wheat.

Dear Dr. Solomon: At different times there seems to be an emphasis on different minerals in the diet. Lately I seem to be reading an awful lot about zinc. Suppose a person does not get enough zinc in the diet, what is likely to happen? — Mrs. K.W., Springfield, Ill.

Dear Mrs. W.: A zinc deficiency can result in poor healing of wounds and in reduced immunity to diseases. I should add, however, that anyone who takes a zinc supplement without medical supervision is taking a risk since toxicity is a real possibility.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know enough not to eat salted peanuts or potato chips or to add salt to my food if I want to cut down on the amount of salt I use. But what about salt when it is not so obvious? Can you mention some of the more common foods that we eat that are high in salt and that should be avoided by people who have to cut down? — Ken, Miami, Fla.

Dear Ken: One step a person can take to reduce the consumption of salt is to use natural cheese instead of processed cheese, and to limit its use to two or three times a week. In addition, if you use a salad dressing, try a mixture of oil and vinegar; it has less salt than that contained in commercially prepared dressings.

The use of dry, ready-to-eat cereals should also be limited to two or three times a week. A cooked cereal such as oatmeal contains less salt that the ready-to-eat varieties even if a pinch of salt is added during its preparation.

Other food products whose use should be limited include cured meats such as bologna, ham and bacon, and packaged pancake, waffle and biscuit mixes.

For Clara, Yonkers, N.Y.: Soybeans and a mixture of beans and rice provide a good source of protein. Protein does not have to come from meat.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write him at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

New arrivals still lion around

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Among the newest arrivals at Ron Miller's farm are Leon, Lucy and Libby — who spend most of their time just lion around.

The young lions arrived on the 216-acre farm about two months ago when Miller bought them from a rural Tipton man for $1,500.

"I've always liked animals," Miller said. "I've had monkeys and a bear and, of course, farm livestock like cows, hogs and horses."

Miller said the lions are good-natured and gentle, but don't know their own strength.

Congressmen's thoughts turn to signs of spring — primaries

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress may be trying to keep their minds on their jobs but their eyes seem to be only on the presidential campaigns now under way.

Senate rules forbid election campaigning on the Senate floor, but that didn't keep Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., from parading around the chamber the other day with a campaign bumper sticker. It said: "Honk if Walter Mondale promised you anything."

Senate Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, held a news conference recently to announce his support for Mondale. He was asked to comment on speculation that he might be considered for the vice presidential slot on the Democratic ticket under Mondale.

"I am not a candidate for the vice president and I do not expect to be," Wright retorted. "If a genie came out of a bottle and gave me a choice between being vice president and (House speaker, I would choose to be speaker under normal circumstances."

Meanwhile, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., who has made no secret of his interest in seeking the Republican presidential nomination — in 1988 — was asked about reports that he was being viewed as a likely candidate for secretary of state in a second Reagan administration.

Baker said he wouldn't want the post.

"There are but two jobs in this city that I'd like to have and I already have one of them," he said.

Later, while addressing the Senate during a debate on school prayer Tuesday, Baker noted that many senators would probably be absent, because of primaries in their states. In fact, in addition to state races, Tuesday was dubbed "Super Tuesday" because of Democratic presidential primaries and caucuses in eight states.

"It may be that we all should engage in a little prayer that day," Baker said.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz got into an animated discussion the other day with Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., on party politics and federal deficits.

Shultz said that he had been told that there was only one major difference between Democrats and Republicans on spending: "the Democrats enjoy it more."

Long: "Well, maybe deficits are a little like sex..."

Without waiting for Long to elaborate, Shultz pounded on the table and said: "I never considered that parallel."

Long went on to complete his thought. Deficits are like sex, he said, because "people enjoy them more than they admit they do."

Workers in Sen. Gary Hart's office dug deep into their files and found this tribute to Hart from a fellow Democrat: "He is one of the most decent and effective and compassionate public servants I have ever known in my life. He is brilliant. Gary Hart is as thoughtful and perceptive as any member of the Senate.

Veterinarian gives knowledge, others provide hands

NORMANDY, Mo. (AP) — Although her mind remains agile, a fatal form of muscular dystrophy has stiffened the once-talented hands of veterinarian Deborah Polleck.

"Even though you have the knowledge, you're not a very employable veterinarian if you can't use your hands," Ms. Polleck said last week. "It was frustrating to think that all those years were going to go to waste."

Doctors had predicted that the 32-year-old animal doctor would be "confined to a wheelchair in a year and dead in three," when they diagnosed amyotrophic lateral sclerosis — "Lou Gehrig's disease" — three and a half years ago.

But Ms. Polleck has proven that diagnosis wrong and has chosen to devote her borrowed time to abandoned, lost and unwanted animals at a non-profit shelter, using her skills to guide the hands of volunteers.

"The girls at the shelter will share their hands and she'll share her knowledge," said Elmer Janca, a member of the board of the Open Door Animal Sanctuary in House Springs. "We depend a lot on the donated time of people like Dr. Polleck."

The shelter provides a haven for large, adult or male dogs which usually don't get adopted elsewhere because many people want small dogs or puppies for apartments.

"I like the idea that the dogs will get a second chance at being useful and living a happy life," said the veterinarian.

In addition to spending one day a week overseeing the health program at the sanctuary, Ms. Polleck and her husband have helped organize a program which will teach dogs to aid the persons confined to wheelchairs or otherwise immobilized. The program, Support Dogs for the Handicapped Inc., is new to the St. Louis area.

The disease, nicknamed after the New York Yankee star who died at age 37 in 1941, attacks nerves of the spinal cord and is eventually fatal — depending on how fast the disease progresses, according to Debbie Graham, coordinator for the Muscular Dystrophy Association of St. Louis. It also affects speech and breathing.

"I spent about a year in my apartment after they first told me that I had the disease," said Ms. Polleck. "When I saw I wasn't going to become a vegetable I decided to get out and start living again. I thought about taking some classes. I even started driving."

But as the disease progressed, it became difficult for her to practice.

"I had to stop working with cows and horses because of the possibility that I wouldn't be able to get out of their way and get trampled," she said.

Ms. Polleck said she decided she wanted to become a veterinarian when her family moved to a farm outside St. Joseph, Mo., where she "took care of cows, horses, pigs and just about anything else that happened to be around."

She and her husband, Bryce Goman, 32, operate the Normandy Animal Hospital in suburban St. Louis.

"I'm still alive, still going, although I use a crutch," said Ms. Polleck, whose thumbs have become useless appendages because of the disease.

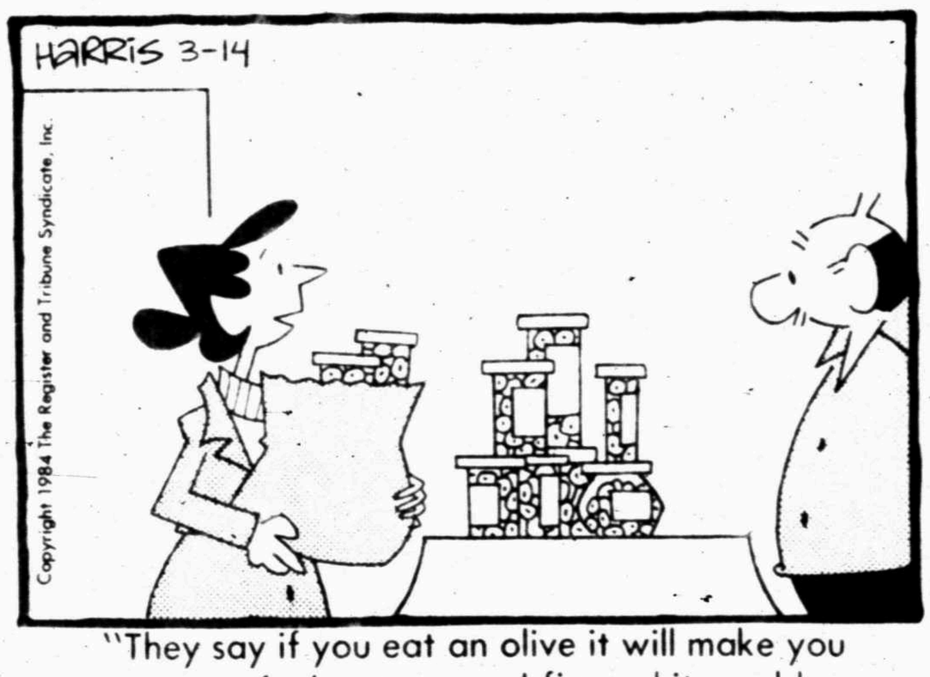
THE BETTER HALF



"They say if you eat an olive it will make you romantic. In your case I figured it would take 15 jars!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, March 15, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: President Andrew Jackson, actor George Brent, trumpeter Harry James, producer Lee Schubert and cereal heiress Marjorie Merriweather Post were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: football's Dick Bass, "Days of Our Lives" patriarch MacDonald Carey, "Taxi's" Judd Hirsch and baseball's Bobby Bonds. Time devoted to further study is an excellent investment. Loans are repaid. You have the resources to form a partnership or buy into a family business. Steer clear of those who think negative. You must spend money to make it. Romance is filled with happy surprises. Be subtle when giving others the benefit of your experience. Lectures are ignored.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make repairs on your property. Romance continues on a steady course. Someone offers you the benefit of his or her experience. Heed this person's suggestions and you profit financially.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Use restraint when handling money. Do not draw on your savings to back a get-rich-quick scheme. Get agreements in writing even if dealing with friends. Self-improvement projects boost your morale.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The rumors you hear are unlikely to be true. Conduct your own research! Make a special effort to do everything correctly and you will save both time and money.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Continue to prepare for an important venture. Long-distance phone calls save time, money. Catch up on routine tasks. Avoid doing anything that could be construed as underhanded.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Review insurance papers to see if your coverage is adequate. Friends offer interesting suggestions for this evening's entertainment. Plans made by close associate should not prove too expensive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Bigger profits are indicated. Bring income tax and insurance records up to date. Overseas investments look promising. Someone who works behind the scenes offers you helpful information.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Work holds your attention for most of the day. You are determined to help a special group. Evening may feature a grand event. Dress your best to impress.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A younger person could anger you when trying to be amusing. Perhaps you need to loosen up a bit. A loved one asks some tough questions. Be truthful but diplomatic.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Phone calls are important. Return them promptly. Someone who argues with you may be trying to pique your interest. Something new develops on the home front. Steer clear of an irritating neighbor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A neighbor could vex you. Be careful not to say or do anything you will regret later. Double check all facts and figures if making an important presentation. Love is grand!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Peace of mind means a lot. You can gain it if you seek an expert's help. If you are thankful for someone's skill at handling delicate matters, say so. Be appreciative.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If you never reveal your feelings, loved one may never change. Level with this person when something is really bothering you. Almost everything goes your way this evening!

PBS to air Canadian series

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — "Seeing Things" was described by one critic as "the best series in the history of Canadian television" (Montreal Gazette) and won the "bold-faced endorsement" of another (Toronto Sun).

It's good — better than a lot of American TV — with some really funny moments. Trouble is, all those moments, it seems, involve the series' leading character, Louie Ciccone, getting hurt — physically or verbally.

In the episode planned for distribution on public TV in this country starting Saturday, Louie is shot in the head (grazed), nearly electrocuted (burned) and pushed off a balcony (scared).

And he's abused by a lady singer who once was the focus of his dreams: "You're bald and you're overweight and you're sort of schleppy looking," says Stevie Mercer (Diane Heatherington).

"Why don't you stop at that?" Louie interrupts.

"Seeing Things" was introduced by the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. in Canada in 1981, and the series of 20, hour-long installments crossed the border last November with another CBC show, a science magazine called "The Nature of Things."

In "Seeing Things," Louis Del Grande plays Louie Ciccone, a general assignment reporter for The Toronto Gazette whose psychic flashes seem to involve him in all kinds of trouble. That part is weak; the producers might have made a better show without the psychic flash nonsense.

Some of the humor is jokes only a Canadian would appreciate. But the writing is first-class, and that kind of quality widens the appeal.

In the upcoming installment, Louie and his estranged wife are celebrating their anniversary at a nightclub when the singer they have come to see, Johnny Lee, is killed by a hot wired mike.

"The scene is not particularly gruesome. It might even be described as mildly amusing, consistent with the rather understated humor of the dialogue. "I can't believe it," Marge Ciccone (Martha Gibson) laments. "Poor Johnny."

Yeah," says Lou, "he was zapped just like that."

"Now I'll never get his autograph," Marge replies.

Louie eventually solves the crime, with help from Heather Redfern (Janet-Laine Green), an assistant crown attorney and a regular in the series.

Del Grande's exposure includes the motion picture "Atlantic City" and the TV movie "Home to Stay" with Henry Fonda, and he wrote the stage play "42 Seconds from Broadway," which had a run there, with Henry Winkler. Along with David Barlow, he created, produced and wrote "Seeing Things" for the CBC.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
3 ♢	Pass	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♢.

How often have you gazed longingly at a dummy replete with tricks, but you have no entry to them? When that happens, try enlisting outside aid.

Note South's jump to four hearts. A bid of three hearts would simply be competitive, and would describe a hand considerably weaker than South's distributional giant.

West led the king of diamonds, and declarer liked what he saw in dummy — if he could ever get to use it. Obviously, the danger was that he would lose three club tricks in addition to the diamond, for the opening preempt made it a near certainty that East held the ace of clubs. However, the preempt also suggested another line which depended only on West having no more than two tramps.

West won the king of diamonds and continued with the ace. Declarer ruffed with the seven of trumps as East sluffed a spade. When West dropped the queen on the first trump lead, declarer could claim his contract.

He continued with two more high trumps, then cashed the ace and king of spades. The scene was set for the enemy to come to the aid of declarer by providing him with an entry to the table!

Declarer presented East with a trick he did not want by leading his deuce of hearts to East's nine. East got a heart trick he did not expect, but now he was forced to lead a black suit, and no matter what he did he would have to give declarer an entry to the board to enable him to take club pitches on the queen-jack of spades.

The key play was declarer's foresight in ruffing the second diamond with the seven of trumps. If he ruffs with the two instead, only East can prevent the end play by jettisoning his nine and six of trumps under declarer's winners, and South will have no way to throw East on lead.

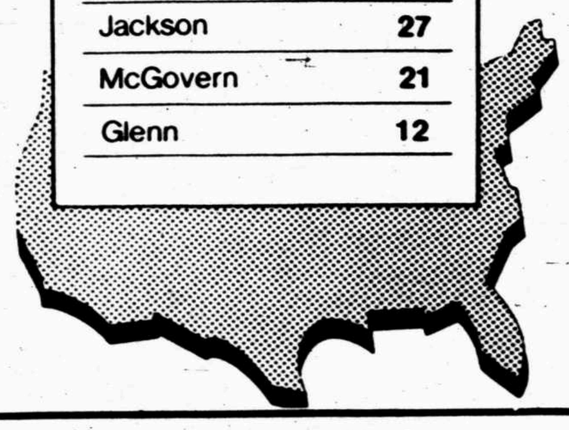
Super Tuesday Scorecard

Delegates awarded in Tuesday's primaries in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Georgia, Florida and Alabama.

Mondale	143
Hart	129
Jackson	27
McGovern	21
Glenn	12



Democrats still have 816 more to fight over

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic presidential candidates who survived Tuesday's battle over 511 delegates will have 816 more to fight over in 14 primaries and caucuses in 14 other states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands during the rest of March.

In addition to pledged delegates, each state is also entitled to send some party and elected officials to the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco July 16-19.

There will be 3,933 delegates at the convention. The candidate who has the allegiance of at least 1,967 will be the Democrat's standard-bearer.

Here is a rundown on the rest of the contests in March. The first number represents the number of pledged delegates. The second is the total.

MARCH 14 (28 pledged delegates):
Delaware Caucus 14; 18.
North Dakota Caucus 14; 18.
MARCH 15:
Alaska Caucus 11; 14.
MARCH 17 (304 pledged):
Arkansas Caucus 35; 42.
Kentucky Caucus 53; 63.
Michigan Caucus 136; 155.
Mississippi Caucus 36; 43.
South Carolina Caucus 41; 48.
Latin American Democrats Caucus 3; 5.
MARCH 18:
Puerto Rico Primary 48; 53.
MARCH 20 (246 pledged):
Illinois Primary 171; 194.
Minnesota Caucus 75; 86.
MARCH 24:
Kansas Caucus 37; 44.
MARCH 24-26:
Virginia Caucus 68; 78.
MARCH 25:
Montana Caucus 19; 25.
MARCH 27:
Connecticut Primary 52; 60.
MARCH 31:
Virgin Islands Caucus 3; 6.

By month's end, the Democrats will have chosen 1,429 delegates, or 42 percent of all delegates.

Some 705 more will be at stake in April, including big primaries in New York on April 3 (252 delegates) and Pennsylvania on April 10 (172). Some 645 will be chosen in May, including 169 in Texas' caucuses on May 5 and 154 in the Ohio primary on May 8. And on June 5, 486 delegates will be chosen in five state primaries, including California (306) and New Jersey (107).

Lee Hart isn't running for status of first lady

Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — Sen. Gary Hart has a clear-eyed vision of taking up residence in the White House, but Lee Hart says she is not running for first lady.

News magazines and political columnists have made much of the Democratic upstart's "nearly mystical" sense of his destiny since he won the New Hampshire Democratic presidential primary. But his wife said that the Colorado senator's view of things is a little more down-to-earth than that.

"I think that's overplayed," Lee Hart said of all the punditry about "mysticism." "I think Gary has always felt there was a purpose for his life. I think a lot of people have that feeling that God wants them to do something while they're here," she said. But she declined to speculate further on the source of that sense of certainty. "I'm going to go home and ask him about it. I'm tired of being asked all the questions about his mysticism," she joked.

Lee Hart, 48, seemed to mirror her husband's dispassionate, no-baloney approach to campaigning during a visit here as her husband's surrogate in the battle for Democratic votes.

Like her husband, but unlike most of the rest of the political world, Lee Hart said she wasn't astounded to find Hart the front-runner, or at least the co-front-runner with Walter Mondale, following his primary and caucus victories in New Hampshire, Maine and Vermont.

"I didn't expect it (Hart's campaign) to explode. That's not being mystical, that's just having a sense of what's going on," she said matter-of-factly.

The candidate's wife recalled a time last fall when he returned home, exhausted after a lengthy campaign trip, at a time when he was barely a blip in the opinion polls.

"He said, 'I just can't quit. I feel what's out there,'" she said. "Gary would have dropped out many months ago if he had not felt there was a potential. This was not a symbolic campaign. Contrary to what many people around the country thought, this was not a campaign for 1988 or 1992 (presidential elections)."

Fighting a lingering case of laryngitis, Lee Hart visited the Everett Community College parent cooperative day-care center and addressed a campaign reception at Seattle Center. After posing for pictures while surrounded by pre-schoolers, Hart met with the youngsters' mothers in private to talk about problems caused by the Reagan administration's cutbacks in federal funds for college day-care centers and training programs for unemployed mothers.

"I happen to feel very strongly about day-care centers," she said. Hart, a former teacher, said she has visited a number of day-care centers during the campaign because she has been a working mother with children at home. "I am very much a people-oriented, service-oriented person," she said.

Nancy Reagan crusades against drug abuse in schools and Lady Bird Johnson campaigned for outdoor beautification projects. But Hart refused to speculate about what her pet causes might be if she were to become first lady.

"I'm not running for first lady. I'm not campaigning because I want to live in the White House," she remarked. "I am not going to get myself boxed in in terms of what I would do if I got to the White House. I've never lived my life by jumping several steps ahead. I do things a step at a time," Hart said impatiently, sounding like her methodical husband.

She said she wouldn't use the position of first lady to make symbolic gestures, and she claimed she hasn't given the role any thought. Again, first things first.

"I'm still a mother. I feel very strongly about my role as a mother, even though our kids are 17 and 19," she said.

The Harts have separated twice and reconciled twice, most recently at the end of 1982, after a separation of more than a year. "We went through some of the difficult periods that any marriage has and dealt with the problems we had," she remarked. "I'm glad we did that. Our marriage was only strengthened by the separation."

Jackson claims black leaders' support would have helped him

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Jesse Jackson, vowing to remain in the Democratic presidential race "as its conscience," said he would have done much better in the Southeast if all black leaders had supported his "rainbow coalition."

And, although the Baptist minister finished fourth in Alabama and Florida and third in Georgia in primaries Tuesday, he said he would remain a candidate "to the end and beyond."

To underscore that, he said he planned to campaign in Mississippi, Arkansas, South Carolina, Michigan and Illinois before the week ends.

"The black leadership missed the opportunity for us to be No. 1 in Georgia, Alabama and Florida," Jackson said at a news conference.

Speaking to about 100 supporters at a recreation hall rally later, Jackson noted that many black leaders shunned his candidacy to back Walter Mondale.

"If our black leadership had been clear, we could have won" in the three states, he said.
