Rescue teams find four jet crash survivors

KITA-AIKIMURA, Japan (AP) — Search and rescue teams found four survivors and recovered the bodies of 50 people from the wreckage of a Japan Air Lines jumbo jet that crashed on a wooded mountain ridge with 524 people aboard, officials said today.

The crash of the Boeing 747 on Monday was believed to be the worst single-plane commercial air disaster ever. Airline officials said that among the passengers were six Americans.

The aircraft's pilot reported a broken cabin door and that he was losing control as the jetliner turned north from its normal course and crashed in Japan's rugged central mountains.

One of the survivors of Flight 123, a 12-year-old girl, was reported found in the branches of a tree. One woman was pulled from the crushed fuselage of the aircraft.

Airline spokesman Geoffrey Tudor told NBC's "Today" that the survivors were seated "fairly close to the tail. How they survived is a miracle."

The helicopter-borne rescue teams suspended the search for the night and reported no sign of other survivors. Shinji Watari, general manager of JAL's public relations, told a news conference the cause of the crash remained a mystery.

Koichi Sugita, a spokesman of the Japanese Defense Agency, said a ship spotted what appeared to be part of a vertical tail fin bearing a portion of JAL's red crane symbol. He said the object was seen in the sea off the Miura Peninsula, south of Yokohama.

No explanation was offered, but the 747 was headed out to sea on its normal route from Tokyo to Osaka before going off course.

JAL's Tudor said about an hour after the crash, "We had a call from someone who identified himself as a member of a revolutionary Marxist faction and claimed responsibility for destroying the plane."

Tudor said the information was passed on to police, but added:

"There's some feeling it may have been a hoax."

Airline spokesmen, U.S. Embassy officials and relatives said the American passengers included two Colorado men, a 26-year-old graduate student from the Los Angeles area and three members of a Korean-American family.

Two women and two girls were known to have survived the crash. All were taken by military helicopter to a hospital in Fujioka, 25 miles east of the crash site, said hospital official Kyomi Shinozaki.

Shinozaki reported that the hospital was expecting three other survivors to arrive, but later said the report of three more survivors may have been based on rumor.

A Japan Defense Agency official who spoke on condition he not be identified said searchers had found at least 50 bodies.

ClayDesta Communications Phase I done ahead of schedule

By SUSAN LINDSAY
Business/Oil Writer

When "the world's biggest Aggie" entered the long distance telephone business, he knew little about Federal Communications Commission standards or what would be in store.

"If I'd known I'd have to paint all 47 of these microwave dishes across the state orange and white — University of Texas colors — I might not have gotten into this business," Clayton W. Williams, Jr., joked Monday at a press conference on top of ClayDesta Center Downtown.

"Seriously, I like the communications business. It doesn't deplete like an oil well," said the Midland wildcatter, banker and rancher.

Since its formation in July 1984, ClayDesta Communications has

July prices increase by .3 percent, figures show

WASHINGTON (AP) — Analysts see no symptoms of a 1985 inflation epidemic despite an unusually sharp rise in food costs that sent July wholesale prices up at the fastest clip in four months.

The 0.3 percent increase in the Producer Price Index reported Monday by the Labor Department came on the heels of a revision that showed June prices falling 0.2 percent instead of merely holding steady as originally calculated.

"Over the last two months, prices have risen a grand total of 0.1 percent, hardly enough to wiggle your nose about," said David Ernst of Evans Economics Inc., a private Washington firm.

Moreover, the July increase was driven mostly by a 1.3 percent spurt in food prices — the largest increase in a year and one analysts say does not signal a new trend.

Food prices have fallen eight of the past 12 months because of underlying weakness in the farm economy and nothing has happened to alter that economic fundamental.

Finished wholesale prices for all consumer goods other than food, a broad category that includes energy, were flat in July. Capital equipment costs for businesses also were flat.

"Although the July increase was bigger than expected, I don't think it's a signal that inflation is heating," said Ernst. "The big increase was in food, which doesn't correspond with other information we have about what is happening to farm prices."

Kathleen Cooper, senior financial economist for Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles, shared that assessment.

"The picture remains the same," she said. "Inflation is still very, very tame with no real problems yet in sight. When you look at raw prices for food prices in particular, they continue to look weak. It's hard to believe finished food prices are going to take off."

The big jump in food prices was due largely to a 22.2 percent hike in the especially volatile fresh vegetable component — more particularly lettuce, tomatoes and onions — because of temporary short supply in

Gas prices expected to fall 4 cents a gallon during next year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gasoline prices, which normally rise during the summer vacation months, will drop a penny before autumn and decline another 4 cents per gallon in 1986, according to the latest government predictions.

Consumers this fall also can expect to pay about 3 cents per gallon less, or $1.02, for home heating oil than they did a year ago, the Energy Information Administration said.

Those savings, however, may be offset by higher prices for electricity. The agency, an independent statistical arm of the Energy Department, predicts residential electric rates will increase an average 4 percent for all of 1985 and another 4 percent next year.

Natural gas, the other primary fuel for keeping homes warm in winter, is expected to cost slightly less than during the coldest months last season.

But by the end of 1986, the agency predicts residential natural gas rates will have risen a total of 2 percent over 1984 prices. That compares with an overall annual inflation rate of 4 percent last year and 3.7 percent so far in 1985.

The predictions are from the Energy Information Administration's latest "Short-Term Energy Outlook," a 40-page study updated every quarter. The latest version was released late Monday.

The agency attributed the 8-cent-per-gallon increase — from $1.14 to $1.22 — in gasoline prices this spring to "unseasonably low stock levels...that permitted refiners to recover all of the margin they had lost over the previous 12 months."

But falling crude oil prices and a 30 percent increase in gasoline imports this spring are combining for a penny drop in gasoline prices now "in contrast to the usual price rises at this time of year due to heavy summer driving," the agency said.

For consumers, that translates into projections of $1.19 average gasoline prices for all of 1985, compared with $1.20 in 1984.

For 1986, the agency forecasts an average retail price of $1.15 per gallon, despite an extra 2 cents per gallon in refining costs due to the Environmental Protection Agency's ordered reductions in the use of lead as an additive.

Ortloff Corp. will terminate operations; 112 jobs affected

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Midland-based Ortloff Corp., a subsidiary of Elcor Corp., announced today that it would discontinue operations between now and the end of the year and terminate most of the 112 employees of the firm.

Richard J. Rosebery, vice president, treasurer and chief financial officer of Ortloff, said the decision to close the operation was made because there was simply not enough work available to support an operation the size of Ortloff.

Said Rosebery: "We had a large organization with a large payroll, not enough work to cover it, and not much prospect to find future work."

He said a reduced economy resulting from declining oil and gas prices was one factor accounting for the depressed market. Another was the continuing merger of major oil companies and a resulting reduction of capital expenditures in an effort to handle debt.

Since its founding in 1962 by Midlanders Roy Campbell and Bill Ortloff, the firm grew from a two-man company to become an industry leader in the engineering and construction of natural gas processing facilities, sulfur recovery, and enhanced oil recovery facilities. At one time Ortloff employed as many as 360 employees, but had been trimming back over the past four years to its present 112 employees. The firm had only recently completed one of the nation's largest enhanced oil, carbon dioxide recovery systems at Seminole for Amerada-Hess.

"It was a very difficult decision to shut down the operation because of the closeness and respect we feel for our people," said Roy E. Campbell, president, Elcor. Most of the employees at Ortloff are highly trained, degreed engineers and engineering technicians, according to Rosebery.

Campbell said that the firm continues to own numerous patents in the cryogenic field and a small group would be retained to continue patent licensing and provide consulting services in connection with its proprietary gas processing technology. Also, the Pro-Quip Corp., an Ortloff subsidiary, will continue to serve the energy and chemical industries with its modularly constructed processing units, according to the company president.

Rosebery said the firm will continue to explore options to keep the company alive. The options include a third party purchase, a purchase by an employee group, a merger, or purchase of Ortloff by a major oil company for its own account.

In a letter to shareholders of Elcor Corp., Campbell explained that Elcor would show a fourth quarter net loss of $13.7 million as a result of the Ortloff shut-down. It was previously estimated that fourth quarter losses would be $7 to $9 million for the quarter which ended June 30, 1985. Campbell said except for the closing of Ortloff and an asphalt plant in Stephens, Ark., that Elcor would have shown a profit in the fourth quarter.

Officials will try to save Opportunity Center

By JULIE HILLRICH
Staff Writer

Regional officials of the Texas Department of Mental Health/Mental Retardation are expected to make a plea to prevent the closing of the department's Opportunity Center day services when they meet with state officials today in Austin.

In a surprise action taken last month, the Permian Basin MH/MR announced it was closing day services to handicapped children at Opportunity Center in Midland effective Aug. 31.

The action, according to PBMR/MR officials, is necessary to comply with Senate Bill 633 which mandates that certain services be provided with state-in-aid funding.

PBMR/MR director Bob Dickenson told Midland County Commissioners Monday the bill has been perceived as either the sounding of the death knell for community MH/MR service autonomy or the heralding of consistently sound and comprehensive programs to persons in need of MH/MR services.

The bill requires each community

MH/MR center provide five basic services:

- 24-hour emergency screening and rapid crisis stabilization services;
 - Community-based crisis residential service or hospitalization;
 - Community-based assessments, including the development of interdisciplinary treatment plans and diagnosis and evaluation services;
 - Family support services, including respite care; and
 - Case management services.
- The bill further allows Texas Department of MH/MR to contract with other local agencies if the local MH/MR center fails to provide required services. In addition, it permits MH/MR centers to provide other non-mandatory services and programs.

The news that funding to support day services at Opportunity Center would no longer be available "came as a complete surprise," said Ray Unterbrink, executive director of the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens.

Arsonists burn house of imprisoned leader's wife

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Unidentified arsonists razed the home of Winnie Mandela, wife of South Africa's top imprisoned black leader, police said today. Speculation that her husband would be released soon was dampened by the white-minority government.

Meanwhile, the death toll in nearly a year of racial unrest in South Africa reached 604, according to computations based on statistics provided by the South African Institute of Race Relations, an independent group. Police said four blacks were killed in overnight rioting in the Eastern Cape.

Nelson Mandela's wife was in Johannesburg but left immediately for her devastated home in Brandfort, a remote black township in the Orange Free State Province, a spokesman at her lawyer's office said.

Police today blamed the attack on "unknown arsonists."

The state-controlled South African Broadcasting Corp. said gasoline bombs were hurled into the modest three-room home.

Mrs. Mandela had been at an undisclosed address in the Johannesburg area since an Aug. 6 police raid in which her home and an adjoining medical clinic were badly damaged.

Her husband is the leader of the outlawed African National Congress. He was convicted in 1964 on a charge of plotting sabotage and has been in prison for the past 21 years.

Mrs. Mandela's lawyer, Ismail Ayob, said police told him that both Mrs. Mandela's house and the clinic were burned down.

It was not known if anyone was in the home when the arsonists struck.

In Durban, a leader of the country's main anti-apartheid organization, the United Democratic Front, said his home in the black township of Umlazi was also firebombed early today.

His family put out the fire and there were no injuries, said David Giza, head of the Umlazi residents' association, a UDF affiliate organization.

In Pretoria, police announced the mass release of 268 people held under the country's state of emergency and said another 23 had been detained. That brought to 1,646 the number of people picked up under emergency regulations, of whom 682 are still held without charge.

captured between 25 to 30 percent of the Midland/Odessa market and has just completed its first phase of its state-wide long distance microwave system well ahead of schedule.

Phase I of the 47-tower network is comprised of two legs. One extends from Amarillo to Midland with terminals in Plainview and Lubbock. The other connects Midland to Dallas with terminals located in Big Spring, Sweetwater, San Angelo, Abilene and Stephenville.

Construction of the 47-tower microwave network featuring state-of-the-art Harris Farinon all-digital transmission equipment began in January 1983.

"I have invested or borrowed, in my case it's more borrowed, in Phase I," said Williams, who has plans for more construction.

The remainder of Phase I is scheduled to be completed by the end of this year. This will include service from Dallas to Austin and connections between Waco and Temple. Cost for completion of this leg is estimated at $5 million.

Phase II, consisting of a network to service San Antonio, Houston, Bryan, College Station and New Braunfels, is expected to be completed by mid-1984. Phase III, which includes a network from Midland to Hobbs, N.M., and another leg to Corpus Christi and Louisiana, should be operational in 1987.

"In all, the project will cost about $75 million through Phase III, but each step is based on our continuing success," said Williams. "We've talked of issuing stock to private investors to help finance this project."

Although ClayDesta Communications' network is located in Texas cities, callers are able to call anywhere, anytime in the continental U.S.

Joe Mitchell, president of the company, said the long distance digital microwave system uses state-of-the-art software that has only been available the past two years. Interstate calls are terminated through national companies' carriers.

"The old way of doing long distance communication was by analog. This is the third generation of communication technology. It cuts out feedback and makes the call sound local," he said. "For this reason alone, I know we have a better product than AT&T."

To prove a point, Williams placed the first official phone call on the system to a fellow Aggie, Bum Bright, Dallas Cowboy owner.

"This is Clayton Williams calling Bum Bright," he said.

"Yeah, Bum, how are you? I just wanted to call and congratulate you on the game and tell you that this is the first call on our ClayDesta Communications digital microwave network."

"This is a good Aggie system built for Aggies. No, it's for everyone," Williams laughed. "Why don't you sign up Bum? It was nice talking to you."

Williams said he got into the telephone business in 1980, when he was planning to open ClayDesta Plaza. "It all started in this building, when it was the old Gulf Building," he said. "We needed more office space from this building and so ClayDesta Plaza was built."

"At that time, Cities Service Oil and Gas was our largest tenant and we were unable to get telephone service for them. So, we found a need to put in our own telephone system and as a result, we were able to give them service four months earlier than expected," he said.

"Then, we made a commitment last summer to build a quality state-wide long distance service," he added. "Now we have the most modern equipment in the world. We had to be better than AT&T. I think it's paid off."

About 30 families with handicapped children receive short-term respite care, parental guidance and assistance, and support through the services provided by the Opportunity Center staff.

MARC currently owns Opportunity Center and, with the Opportunity Center Auxiliary, it recently spent more than $200,000 in renovating the building to make it one of the most "up-to-date" day centers for handicapped children in Texas, Unterbrink said.

The building was leased to MH/MR for $5,700 per year, a figure considerably less than the cost of heating, cooling and cleaning other day services, he added.

"I understand some of the complexities of state funding, and I believe PBH/MR felt justified in taking this action. After all, a dollar can be stretched only so far, and when revenue sources change and an organization faces deficit financing, some serious budget cutting must occur," Unterbrink said. "It is at these times when money is in short supply that re-establishing priorities is necessary, and that always causes hard feelings."

Depending on "whose ox is being gored," the budget cuts are considered either fair or arbitrary, according to Unterbrink. "Special interest groups, of which we are one, always feel 'their' services are most important."

Unterbrink suggested alternate ways to provide the family support services now being delivered at Opportunity Center. The use of volunteers, a closer cooperative relationship with the Midland Independent School District for care of children age 3 and over, expanded hours and age limits for services and increased consumer fees "all are ideas which need to be explored," he said.

Any one of the above, or a combination of all, have "good possibilities for continuing and even improving the service," Unterbrink added.

Unterbrink said he anticipates some "blood, sweat and tears before this is over."

To ensure the operation of day care services beyond Aug. 31, the Opportunity Center Auxiliary has committed operating funds through November.

"Right now, we are fighting to save a good service; later our attention must turn to finding feasible alternatives which are equally as good or better," Unterbrink said. "I'll be knocking door-to-door before I see it close."

In other action, commissioners: Entered into an agreement with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to divide escrow funds currently being held by the county and formerly held by the now defunct First National Bank of Midland.

FDIC will acquire about $500,000 while the county will receive about $200,000 in interest collected since the bank was declared insolvent in 1983.

The action stems from 1982 when FNB, in "good faith," promised Midland County Library patrons a new multi-story building in downtown Midland to replace the existing facility.

The bank had proposed a four-story library building plus a basement to be built within the FNB's proposed Eagle Plaza. But those hopes vanished in October 1983 when the bank was declared insolvent and taken over by the FDIC.

Television pictures showed two of the survivors on stretchers, dirty, battered and bandaged. Police identified them as Mrs. Hiroko Yoshizaki, 35, and her daughter, Mikiko, 8.

Another survivor, Keiko Kawakami, 12, was said by Fuji TV to have been rescued from the branches of a tree. A woman who found alive and extricated from the crushed fuselage was identified as Yumi Ochiai, 26.

Officials said 15 crew members and 509 passengers were aboard JAL's domestic Flight 123 when it crashed on the 6,929-foot peak about 70 miles northwest of Tokyo.

JAL spokesman Tudor identified two of the Americans on board as Edward Anderson, 47, Englewood, Colo., and Michael Hanson, 40, Aurora, Colo. Both were employed by Stearns Catalytic Co., Denver. Neil McLagan, a Stearns vice president, confirmed that Anderson and Hanson were on the flight.

Later, airline spokesman S. Yoshida identified the four other Americans as Ward Wallace and three members of a family, Mrs. Okja Kim, Scott Kim and Christopher Kim.

Wallace's sister-in-law, Ginger Wallace of Los Angeles, said in a telephone interview that Wallace, a graduate student at the University of Tokyo, had been on his way to Osaka for a seminar.

It appeared certain that the death toll would exceed that of history's worst previous single-plane disaster, the crash of a Turkish DC-10 that killed 346 people near Paris in 1974.

Among Japanese passengers on the manifest were singer Kyu Sakamoto, 43, known internationally for his 1964 hit, "The Sukiyaiki Song," and Hajime Nakano, 63, president of the Osaka-based Hanshin Tigers professional baseball team.

JAL President Yasumoto Takagi apologized "from the bottom of our hearts" to the families of victims.

JAL arranged special flights and 24 buses to take relatives of victims between Koumi, nine miles from the crash site, and Fujioka, 60 miles away, where they were to be housed in four schools.

"I don't know if I can climb that mountain, but I want to go there and see," said Tsugiko Sato, 60, president of Osaka-Kobe University in Osaka as he boarded a bus. His 29-year-old daughter, Motoko, was aboard the plane, Kyodo News Service reported.

Bill Mellon, a Boeing spokesman in Seattle, Wash., said five company investigators would leave today for Japan. In Washington, the Federal Aviation Administration said it might send investigators if Japan requested them.

The 747-100SR can seat up to 550 people and has heavier landing gear and strengthened wings than the ordinary 747, according to Boeing. When asked if the size of the plane or its makeup could have limited the pilot's control once something went wrong, JAL's Tudor replied, "Not all month, fuel oil costs down 54 percent and natural gas prices slipped 0.7 percent.

"Even among food products, the increase was not widespread and in my opinion is not an indication of any rising trend," said Franz Price, who specializes in wholesale prices for Chase Econometrics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa. "All in all, our projection for PPI is still the same: Continuation of modest increases we have seen over several months."

Wholesale prices are up 0.9 percent from July 1984 and have risen at a 1.4 percent annual rate for the first seven months of this year.

The government expects crude oil prices, which have dropped from $39 to $27 per barrel since early 1981, to decline another dollar before leveling off at $26 per barrel through 1986, "assuming no serious disruption of world oil markets occurs."

Because of a slowdown in economic growth — from 6.8 percent last year to 2.5 percent in 1985, the nation's demand for crude oil has dropped about 100,000 barrels per day this year, to 15.6 million barrels.

The study assumes a 2.3 percent increase in the gross national product in 1986, after counting for inflation, to predict a slight upturn in oil demand next year, to 15.8 million barrels per day.

The agency noted that the 4 percent annual increases in residential electric rates — from $7.56 per 1,000 kilowatt hours in 1984 to a projected $8.33 for 1986 — are only "slightly above the rate of inflation."

It attributes those increases, despite lower fuel costs for utilities, to "higher capital costs of new plants, both nuclear and coal-fired, that are expected to come on line in the forecast period."

Reagan's aides plan fall schedule

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — With President Reagan out of sight at his remote ranch, his staff aides are planning a rigorous autumn round of speeches, trips and TV appearances for him, confident he will be in top physical shape.

"The doctors have assured us he should be (in) normal health, that is health similar to what it was last spring," White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan told reporters Monday.

The president, who underwent colon cancer surgery July 13, is spending three weeks of rest and recuperation at his mountaintop ranch with only one public appearance planned, during a four-day trip to Los Angeles, 90 miles southeast of the ranch.

Reagan's aides, meanwhile, were gathering on two coasts for today's top level brainstorming session designed to map out the balance of the Reagan term.

Their plans relied heavily on the president's predicted robust good health. Regan said the current plan was for at least one presidential trip a week after his vacation ends Sept. 2.

Two men survive midair collision which kills three

QUINLAN (AP) — A Hunt County sheriff's investigator said there was no immediate explanation for the midair collision over northeastern Texas that killed three Jackson, Miss., men on a business trip.

Two Dallas area men survived the crash Monday by making an emergency belly landing of their plane in nearby Van Zandt County, authorities said.

The Hunt County Sheriff's Office identified the three Jackson men as broadcast executive Owens Alexander, 63, the pilot; his son, Doug Alexander, no age available, and son-in-law Kurt Baskin, 33, who were partners in a landscaping business. Hunt County Sheriff's Lt. Bryan Henson said federal investigators were trying to find the cause of the crash, but "there's no explanation right now."

The sheriff's office said the Alexander plane was a 1974 Cessna 206 six-seater en route from Jackson to Love Field in Dallas.

It collided with a larger twin-engine Super King Air Beech 200, an eight-seater, which was being flown by two commercial pilots on a training flight from Dallas Love Field.

Chief Deputy David Alexander of the Hunt County Sheriff's Department said the smaller plane left John Bell Williams Field in Raymond about 8 a.m. and was en route to Dallas when the collision occurred about 10:15 a.m.

Hunt County sheriff's deputies said the larger plane came down on the Cessna at an altitude of about 3,000 feet.

"Parts of the little plane were still stuck to the larger plane when it landed," said Deak Hagler, who lived near the crash site.

The two survivors, who were unhurt but almost "in shock," were identified as Milford Fred Dickson, 48, of Duncanville, and Scott A. Schlegelmilch, 25, of Dallas, said Van Zandt County Sheriff Travis Shafer.

The two pilots managed to land the plane in a rural area near Willis Point, damaging only two fences, Shafer said.

Tape shows professionalism of controllers, official says

FORT WORTH (AP) — The professionalism of air traffic controllers directing Delta Air Lines Flight 191 is apparent in the conversations with the crew of the jumbo jet before it crashed, a federal aviation official says.

The Federal Aviation Administration Monday released a transcript and tape of conversations between controllers and the pilot of Flight 191, which crashed Aug. 2 on final approach to Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, killing 134 people.

"One thing that is important that will come across is the high degree of professionalism that existed in the cockpit of the aircraft and with the air traffic controllers," said "Tex" Melagin, FAA Southwest Region director.

He said the controllers' experience ranged from a minimum of eight years to more than 20 years. Their comments showed the pilot had little concern over a threatening thunderstorm shortly before the jet crashed. At one point a controller issued a general advisory to all aircraft:

"Yes sir — all aircraft listening except for Delta 1291 is going to go across the airport. There's a little rain shower just north of the airport and they're starting to make ILS (instrument) approaches..."

Flight 1291 asked controllers for permission to go around what the pilot called "a buildup."

But Norm Scoggins, manager for the airport tower, said the jet was avoiding a storm cell separate from the weather cell that Flight 191 encountered.

At one point, controllers directed all pilots to begin using instruments to approach the runway instead of relying on visual approaches, a common procedure when visibility is impaired by poor weather.

'Agent' accused of defrauding father goes on trial

AUSTIN (AP) — A self-described KGB agent went on trial Monday in federal court on charges of defrauding an Austin man of thousands of dollars after promising to secure the release of the man's son from captivity in Vietnam.

Bratislav Lilic, 33, a native of Yugoslavia, is accused of swindling Douglas F. Pierce of $46,000.

Pierce's son, John, was on board an oil drilling ship that sank during a typhoon in the South China Sea 200 miles off Vietnam's coast in the Gulf of Tonkin on Oct. 25, 1983.

The younger Pierce and 80 other crewmen aboard the Glomar Java Sea, owned by Global Marine Drilling Co. of Houston, were believed to have drowned. More than 30 bodies were recovered but John Pierce's was not among them. The elder Pierce, hoping his son was still alive, offered $100,000 for his son's return.

Lilic has pleaded innocent to three counts of fraud and one count of mail fraud in the case, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

According to the indictment, Lilic, posing as an officer of the KGB named Alexander Ivanov, contacted Pierce and told him that his son was in a Hanoi hospital and that the Soviet Embassy would assist in his repatriation.

Authorities say Pierce gave Lilic three different payments between June and September 1984 so that the alleged KGB agent could get his son returned from Hanoi.

Son wants cause of father's death declared homicide, not suicide

AUSTIN (AP) — Twenty-four years after his father's death, Don Marshall is in an Austin courtroom this week trying to clear his father's name by having the death declared a homicide instead of a suicide.

At the time of his death, Henry Marshall, a U.S. Department of Agriculture official, was investigating the Sol Estes. Estes, a flamboyant West Texan who claimed ties to Lyndon Johnson, eventually was convicted of fraud over a non-existent fertilizer business.

Estes gained more attention last year when he told a Robertson County grand jury that Marshall had been killed on orders from then-Vice President Johnson.

Marshall's body was found June 3, 1961, on the family farm in Robertson County, north of Bryan. Five bullet holes marred his body. He also had inhaled carbon monoxide.

A 1962 grand jury in Robertson County ruled the death a suicide.

But a 1984 grand jury reopened the case, heard testimony from Estes, and ruled the death a homicide. The grand jury issued no indictment or comment on the claim that Johnson was involved, saying only that those involved with the murder were dead.

In state District Court before Judge Peter Lowry on Monday, Don Marshall and his mother, Sybil Marshall, asked that the cause listed on Henry Marshall's death certificate be changed from "gun shot wounds — self-inflicted" to "gun shot wounds — homicide."

Marshall said he only recently learned that the listed cause of death could be changed.

Assistant Attorney General Lou Bright said a judge can order a change in a death certificate if there is a satisfactory showing that the information listed is wrong.

Phil Banks, the Marshalls' attorney, said the family believes the investigation was botched.

Clint Peoples, a Texas Ranger who investigated Marshall's death, testified Monday that he believed there was no question that Marshall was murdered. "My opinion from the investigation prior and after is that someone went out there to make it look like a suicide," Peoples said.

Peoples said he believes the evidence shows that Marshall had "a terrific struggle" with someone and received several cuts on his head. He then inhaled carbon monoxide, possibly from the exhaust pipe of his pickup. "After that came the finishing off part with the rifle," Peoples said.

The shots came from a single-shot, bolt-action, 22-caliber rifle. Peoples demonstrated that Marshall, who had a partially crippled right hand, would have had to bolt the gun, aim the barrel at his abdomen, and reach a full arm's length away to pull the trigger.

Relatives of air crash victims join search

By MAGGIE JACKSON
Associated Press

TOKYO — Hundreds of relatives hurried to a mountainous area northwest of Tokyo today, praying that their loved ones were among the few who survived the crash of a Japan Air Lines jumbo jet that went down with 524 people aboard. Officials said rescuers pressing into the mountains had found four survivors of Monday's crash. A military official said 50 bodies had been recovered from the wreckage of the Boeing 747.

"I don't know if I can climb that mountain, but I want to go there and see," said Tsugiko Sato, 60, president of Osaka-Kobe University in Osaka. His 29-year-old daughter Motoko was aboard the plane, Kyodo News Service reported.

Sato was one of 803 relatives who flew to Tokyo this morning and boarded buses to the crash site in central Japan, 70 miles northwest of Tokyo.

Noriaki Odani, assistant manager of the airline's Osaka airport office, said in a telephone interview that a stream of relatives was pouring into the mountainous region for word of their loved ones.

Earlier today, 255 other family members boarded seven buses and 10 taxis chartered by JAL for the five-hour trip by road to area, Odani said.

"I just pray for a miracle," Kyodo quoted one relative as saying before boarding the JAL bus. "I will go to the site for confirmation about my brother-in-law."

JAL was making arrangements for relatives of the 21 foreign passengers aboard the plane to fly to Tokyo, said airline spokesman Geoffrey Tudor.

"They are coming from Hong Kong, West Germany and I don't know where else," he said.

Air controllers say JAL pilot reported 'unreliable control'

TOKYO (AP) — The pilot of a Japan Air Lines 747 jumbo jet that crashed Monday night with 524 people aboard reported "unreliable control" in his last conversations with air traffic controllers.

These are the final communications, as reported by spokesman Keizo Shimizu of the Transport Ministry and Shuzo Mikawa of Japan Air Lines.

6:25 p.m., 13 minutes after take-off (5:25 a.m. EDT) — Pilot requests radar guidance from the Tokyo air control headquarters while descending from 24,000 feet to 22,000 feet. Air control officials tell the plane to proceed 90 degrees east.

6:27 p.m. — Pilot declares an emergency.

6:28 p.m. — Traffic control tells the pilot again to fly 90 degrees east, instead of northwest, where he is proceeding. The pilot only responds, "Unreliable control."

Traffic control asks the pilot if he can land in Nagoya, 166 miles west of Tokyo. He says he wants to head back to Haneda airport in Tokyo.

6:33 p.m. — Pilot tells JAL ground control: "SQ confirm (damage area confirmed). R5 door broken, making emergency descent due to cabin pressure drop."

6:46 p.m. — Pilot says, "Unreliable control" or "Unable control." Tokyo air control officials ask if he wants to land at Haneda. Pilot shouts, "Yes, please proceed with that."

The pilot then asks where he is. Haneda traffic control officials confirm the plane's location at 51 miles west of Haneda.

6:55 p.m. — Both Haneda airport and Yokota U.S. air base give the plane permission for an emergency landing at any time.

The domestic flight, filled with holiday travelers, was enroute Monday from Tokyo's Haneda Airport to Osaka when the pilot reported that a door was broken and he was losing control of the airplane.

The plane crashed while trying to make an emergency return to Haneda or the U.S. Air Base at Yokota, west of Tokyo. It was believed to be the worst single-plane crash in air history.

The airliner crashed on the north side of Mount Ogura, a 6,929-foot peak in a remote area in a range known as the Japan Alps. The only roads follow river valleys that cut through steep, densely forested mountainsides.

Sachiko Yoshizaki, the niece of a passenger whose wife and daughter were found alive, told reporters, "I am very happy, but I am wondering if other people were found alive, especially my uncle."

This morning, relatives converged on the small town of Koumi in Nagano prefecture (state), about six miles from the crash site.

The families were to spend the day at Koumi and then board 24 buses to Fujioka, a nearby city where they could be better housed, said Fujioka City Hall spokesman Atsushi Nakano.

Nakano said city officials were preparing four school gymnasiums in Fujioka in Gunma prefecture, about 62 miles from the site, and JAL officials were arranging to feed the families.

One elderly couple from Osaka had their son, his wife, two children and eight other relatives aboard the plane, Kyodo reported.

"I want to go to the place where the accident occurred, but I am afraid I am too old," said 78-year-old Yoshiharu Kotani, father of 37-year-old Toshikazu Kotani. The family group had been enroute home after a trip to Disneyland in Tokyo, Kyodo reported.

His wife Toshikazu Kotani, 74, said, "When I see scenes of the wreckage on television, my hope that they were alive diminishes, but I am still hoping."

Soviet atmosphere relaxes in Georgia, Stalin's homeland

By ROXINNE ERVASTI
Associated Press

TBILISI, U.S.S.R. — "The Russians gave us Soviet power," people here in Georgia like to say. "But we gave them Josef Stalin."

Stalin, the Soviet dictator who died in 1953, was a native of Georgia and went to school in this capital, where his daughter Svetlana Alliluyeva has come to live following her return to Moscow after 17 years in the West as a defector.

The Georgians are a proud people with an ancient culture and language who don't conform to the Soviet-style life.

The Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic once was a kingdom that began around the 4th century B.C. and reached its height in the 12th and 13th centuries A.D. It then was overrun by Turks and Persians.

It turned to czarist Russia for protection in the late 18th century and this historic relationship may in part explain the relatively long leash Moscow gives it, as well as the abounding cynicism the Georgians show about their Slavic leaders in Moscow. Georgia is one of 15 Soviet republics today, and has 5 million people, who mostly live along the Black Sea coast.

Riding the airport bus along the palm tree-lined highway into Tbilisi, a visitor from Moscow notices the relative wealth in public works, the low-key presence of the Communist Party and a Mediterranean atmosphere.

Even such a small thing as ample street lamps stand out. In Moscow, streetlighting is dim and the going hazardous for drivers because of lurching, dark-clothed pedestrians and gaping holes in the streets.

Neon lights dancing like small-scale Las Vegas billboards do the party sloganeering when it exists — another contrast to the dull, red-and-white signboards in other Soviet cities.

Asked about the paucity of Communist Party signs, a local resident jokes, "Well, you just can't see them because of all the trees."

Then he becomes a trifle serious. "You know, the party needed these slogans after the Revolution because people were illiterate and these served as simple rallying themes."

Through the centuries, Georgia has had a high literacy rate. It now surpasses much of the Soviet Union in per capita university education.

The Georgian pride and the determination to retain a Georgian identity come in subtle ways.

One man jokes about a Georgian meeting a foreigner at the airport. "Where are you going?" asks the foreigner.

"To the Soviet Union on business," the Georgian replies, "and are you also traveling abroad?"

Wine is everywhere and despite Moscow's exhortations for labor discipline, the traditional Georgian afternoon respite from work holds. In cafes, champagne corks pop noisily as workmates and friends gather for an hour or so. The champagne is mixed with a fizzy lemonade and nobody staggers away.

Throughout the countryside, workers have two- and three-story homes with space that Muscovites notoriously lack. Gardens contain small vineyards, and no Georgian would be without his private wine-making equipment.

A Georgian official hosting a group of visiting journalists apologizes for offering a toast with fruit juice in line with Moscow's ban on alcohol at official functions.

In Georgia toasting is a ritual, and the officials later take the reporters to the "private homes" of workers where the toasts are made with a stronger substance.

The only anti-drinking poster seen on a trip of several days throughout the republic was on the window of a store in Kutaisi. It had a chart warning of the link between excessive drinking and "sexual disorders and sterility."

The republic abounds with ancient monasteries and cathedrals which include Georgia's own monarchs and their descendants buried in the hallowed floors.

Guides speak frequently of Georgia's history, how the privileged went to Athens to be educated, how the works of Aristotle and Plato were translated into the Georgian language during those philosophers' time.

Modern monuments also abound. In Kutaisi, a monument to labor features a sculpture garden with rotating works. On display now are several bronze statues that one would be surprised to see elsewhere in the Soviet Union.

The more lasting monument is of course to Stalin. Svetlana Alliluyeva and her American-born daughter, Olga Peters, 14, live in a high-rise building next to the city's indoor swimming pool in the heights above Tbilisi proper. Miss Alliluyeva works at a foreign languages institute.

In Gori, Stalin's birthplace, the huge museum has received a new collection of family photos that the curator says Miss Alliluyeva provided.

Anti-apartheid marchers rally in capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Entertainment world celebrities joined prominent politicians and religious leaders in the capital to back the growing anti-apartheid movement and urge the government to get heavy handed with South Africa.

Singer Harry Belafonte accused the Reagan administration of being "unwilling to lend its power" to stop South Africa's racial separation policies, and the Rev. Jesse Jackson said "a large moral force" is unifying in the nation to push for a change in those policies.

They were among thousands of demonstrators who marched Monday from the Lincoln Memorial to the State Department, calling on the administration to renounce its policy of "constructive engagement," or quiet diplomacy, and take stronger action force change in South Africa.

Among the marchers were actors Paul Newman and Tony Randall, mayors Ed Koch of New York City, Marion Barry of Washington and Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., civil rights activist Coretta Scott King; NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks; Walter Fauntroy, the District of Columbia's congressional delegate; Judy Goldsmith, outgoing president of the National Organization for Women, and the Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

They carried 50 coffins symbolizing the South Africans killed in growing violence since the white-minority government imposed a state of emergency 23 days ago.

Speaking to the crowd that police estimated at 5,500, Koch said all countries should end relations with Pretoria.

"What we are seeing today in South Africa is akin to what we saw in 1933 in Nazi Germany. We turned a blind eye to Germany in 1933, and it cost thousands of lives. The U.S. should unilaterally end all diplomatic and economic relations with South Africa unless and until that regime ends apartheid and martial law against the South African people, and then ask the United Nations to do the same," Koch said.

"We should not wait for the death camps that occurred 10 years later in Nazi Germany. We should have acted in 1933 and we should act in 1985," Koch added.

"There is a large moral force in the community coming together," said Jackson, the Chicago-based civil rights leader who ran unsuccessfully for the Democratic presidential nomination last year. "Every moral imperative used to withdraw the Third Reich from Germany in 1945 should be used to justify withdrawal of the Fourth Reich from South Africa in 1985."

Barry urged a U.S. arms embargo against South Africa, and a naval blockade to enforce it, if necessary.

The Free South Africa Movement, which sponsored the event, called for a day of mourning and urged U.S. corporations to halt all business dealings with South Africa.

Mrs. King, widow of the slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., said the current rioting and violence in South Africa "is small compared to the violence" of the apartheid regime. There is violence in "poverty and exploitation. There is violence of the human spirit and human dignity," she said.

"There is a broad-based movement in this country for an end to apartheid," said David Scott, a spokesman for the anti-apartheid group TransAfrica.

He said the anti-apartheid forces would mount increasing pressure in hopes of getting President Reagan to sign an economic sanctions bill if it clears Congress. It has been passed by the House and is scheduled to be taken up by the Senate next month.

U.S. could 'hurt' Mid-East peace talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel has cautioned the Reagan administration that a U.S. meeting with a Jordanian-Palestinian group would hurt chances of holding Middle East peace talks by the end of the year.

Ambassador Meir Rosenne, acting on instructions from Jerusalem, outlined Israel's stand Monday to Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

According to a diplomatic source, who demanded anonymity, Shultz assured the Israeli envoy that Assistant Secretary of State Richard W. Murphy would hold only "exploratory" talks on his forthcoming visit to the region and not engage in negotiations.

Murphy plans to confer with leaders of Jordan, Israel and Egypt. He also may meet separately with some Palestinians, a senior U.S. official said.

But there is less than a 50-50 chance that Murphy, who is assistant secretary of state for the Near East, will meet with a joint Palestinian-Jordanian delegation, another U.S. official told The Associated Press.

King Hussein of Jordan and Chairman Yasser Arafat of the Palestine Liberation Organization have urged such a meeting since last spring. They hope it will produce U.S. recogniton of the PLO.

But the joint approach was not endorsed at a special meeting of the Arab League last week in Casablanca, Morocco, and both the United States and Israel have failed to approve a list of possible Palestinian delegates.

Several of the Palestinians on the list are prominent members of the Palestine Liberation Organization. Rosenne requested the 45-minute meeting with Shultz to make these points:

— Pre-negotiations talks between the United States and a Jordanian-Palestinian group would harm the peace process, weaken Israel and Jordan and strengthen the PLO.

— The talks would be designed to give the PLO the legitimacy it seeks and would divert attention from peace negotiations, which Israel supports.

Israel is prepared, without any preconditions, to immediately open peace talks with Jordanians and Palestinians not prominently identified with the PLO on an overall settlement.

Shultz assured Rosenne that the United States will not negotiate with Arafat's organization until it accepts Israel's right to exist.

Records: 38 faulty 747-door complaints

SEATTLE (AP) — Boeing officials say 747s similar to the jet that crashed in Japan have the best safety record of any model and has no serious door problem, but federal records show at least 38 complaints of faulty doors in the past five years.

A Japan Air Lines 747 jumbo jet carrying 524 people crashed Monday in mountains northwest of Tokyo after pilot Masami Takahama radioed controllers: "We have discovered the cause of the trouble. The right rear door is broken. Will make an emergency landing."

Only four people were believed to have survived.

Bill Mellon, a spokesman for Boeing Commercial Airplane Co., said Monday the 747 has the lowest "hull loss" rate of any Boeing commercial aircraft: 1.77 planes lost per million flights through the end of 1983.

The plane that crashed in Japan was a variant of the 747 called a 747-100SR, specially designed for short-range flying in high density routes.

While the model, with more takeoffs and landings, has more cycles of pressurization and depressurization, tests show no major weakness in the doors, he said.

The Los Angeles Times reported today that the 38 complaints of door problems on 747 by U.S. airlines are described in Service Difficulty Reports filed with the Federal Aviation Administration.

All the problems involved cracks in the fuselage skin around the doors, in door fittings, frames and sills, and in a beam under the doors, the newspaper reported. If problems related to doors on cargo-carrying 747s are included, the total number of such cases reported climbs to at least 56.

Paul Forseth, service engineering manager for the 747, acknowledged that concern about the door cracks has led Boeing to issue a series of service bulletins about them. But he minimized their significance.

"We have had those cracks, but they are well-known and have never caused a problem," Forseth said.

C.O. Miller, former chief investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board, said the strongest part of the 747 is around the door frame and it is "the last place I would expect a fuselage failure."

Downed Boeing 747 made for high-density routes, officials say

SEATTLE (AP) — The version of the Boeing 747 jumbo jet that crashed with 524 people aboard in mountains north of Tokyo was one of 27 specially designed for use on high-density routes like those in Japan, company officials say.

The Japan Air Lines 747-100SR that went down Monday after the pilot reported difficulties with a door was one of 10 delivered to JAL, said Bill Mellon, a spokesman for Boeing Commercial Airplane Co.

The doors on all Boeing planes are "plug doors" that open inward and seal when the cabin is pressurized, Mellon said.

The 747SR, designed for short-range flying in high density routes, seats up to 550 people, he said. Because it experiences more takeoffs and landings, the 747SR was designed with heavier landing gear and strengthened wings.

The 747 is powered by four turbofan jet engines, which get additional thrust from the part of the air that bypasses the engine and is accelerated by a fan. Its is 231 feet, 10 inches long with a wing span of 195 feet, 8 inches.

The jet in Monday's crash was delivered in February 1974 and had 25,000 hours of operation, a "pretty normal amount of time," Mellon said.

JAL has 50 747s, including the 10 SRs, he said.

Resounding vote

Attribute it to the fact that West Texans traditionally support water elections or that they recognize the necessity of the substance more so than do their counterparts in areas of the state boasting greater supplies of surface water, but the resounding response to Saturday's election verifying participation in the Stacy Reservoir project can be classified as nothing short of spectacular.

In fact, when the vote totals from all three cities — Midland, San Angelo and Abilene — involved were tallied, the measure passed overwhelmingly, 18,831 votes in favor and only 658 against.

Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins noted the importance of the community's participation in the Stacy project when he said: "With the growth we expect in Midland, we've just got to have that kind of renewable water source."

The mayor is absolutely correct. As we've noted many times in the past, water is the dividing line between communities that grow and prosper, and those which fail to reach their full potential, stagnate and die.

Midland is one of those communities that has abounding potential, but lacks — or did — that one all-important natural resource, water. The absence of abundant water to fill the city's needs could have spelled eventual disaster without an affirmative vote Saturday. As the city's population and industry continued to expand, the current water resources eventually would have been pressed to the limits. That was a scenario voters determined Saturday to avoid.

Now that Midland's water needs appear adequate for the next few decades, the next item of business is for the Tall City's residents to turn their minds to conserving that precious water supply. Just as it's unwise to be wasteful during abundance with gasoline or whatever, that's especially the case with water.

We truly hope all Midlanders will now go that "extra mile" by disciplining themselves where water usage is concerned. As the old saying attests: Waste not, want not.

Shultz's cautious step

Secretary of State George Shultz is playing a key role in making preparations for the November summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev. His activities demonstrate his talent for diplomacy, and a toughness when it comes to fielding curve balls thrown from Moscow.

His diplomatic side shone when he met Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, appointed only a month ago.

The two got along famously during their private talks in Helsinki.

Mr. Shevardnadze proved a good listener, prompting one conferee in Finland at the 10th anniversary of the Helsinki accords to say: "Imagine! A Soviet foreign minister who listens to you." Another pointed out what was seen as the Soviet's sense of humor and flexibility.

But Secretary Shultz is not one to be taken in by good humor and flexibility. This was clear when the Soviet Union said it would inaugurate a five-month freeze on nuclear testing that would be extended indefinitely if the U.S. concurred.

The U.S. responded with a flat "no," and for good reason. Shultz noted that Moscow had thrown a similar curve in the late '50s and early '60s. After announcing a unilateral moratorium, the Soviet Union suddenly launched what Mr. Shultz described as "the largest nuclear-testing program ever undertaken."

It's good to have a secretary of state who's alert to phony Soviet overtures. It saves costly "mistakes."

Another View:

Remember oil noose?

Times are tough in the oil business. A barrel that brought nearly $40 five years ago now sells for less than $28. Oil rigs sit idle in Texas graveyards. Scores of smaller companies hover on the brink as black gold has yielded to black humor. "A fella was tellin' me the other day that things were picking up in the oil patch," one oil man told The Wall Street Journal. "They picked up his car this week, and they'll be back to pick up his house."

But what's bad for the oil patch is not necessarily bad for America. Indeed, to think back just five or six years is to realize that for the country as a whole, the energy news is wonderful. Then, our necks were caught in an oil noose, which foreign producers could tighten at any time — and did. Remember the gas lines that followed the revolution in Iran.

In 1977, President Carter insisted that America would never again import as much oil as it was importing then, about 8.8 million barrels a day, almost half of total consumption. In part because of oil price decontrol launched then, he was and is right. By 1983, imports were down to a daily average of 5 million barrels a day. For the first six months of this year, the average is still lower, 4.8 million barrels a day. Still a noose, but loose.

Holding down demand for energy is not necessarily good news. Nothing restrains demand like recession. But the explanation in America now is conservation. Energy consumption is measured in "quads" — quadrillion Btu's — and it is about the same as in 1973: 74.3 quads then compared to 73.7 quads in 1984.

Yet the economy has boomed. In constant dollars, the gross national product has increased 31 percent. In other words, the country has become vastly more energy-efficient.

Good could be better. It would be an ideal time to impose oil import fees or a new federal gasoline tax — simultaneously enhancing more conservation, further weakening the OPEC cartel, and yielding new revenues with which to reduce the federal deficit. Import fees would also shore up domestic prices, and that would surely be a pick-me-up for those faltering oil companies in the Southwest.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 13, the 225th day of 1985. There are 140 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Aug. 13, 1961, Berlin became a divided city as East Germany sealed off the border between the eastern and western sectors. East German police and troops used barbed wire and barricades to block crossing points to halt the flight of refugees. Two days later, work began on the Berlin Wall.

On this date: In 1521, Spanish conqueror Hernando Cortez captured present-day Mexico City from the Aztec Indians.

In 1624, French King Louis XIII named Cardinal Richelieu his first minister.

In 1792, French revolutionaries imprisoned the royal family.

In 1818, suffragist Lucy Stone was born in West Brookfield, Mass.

In 1948, the American flag was raised for the first time in Los Angeles.

In 1880, William Gray of Hartford, Conn., received a patent for a coin-operated telephone.

In 1890, director Alfred Hitchcock was born in London.

Wiley commission bites the dust

Question: Name three creatures that have defied the natural extinction process.
Answer: The Horseshoe Crab, the Galapagos Tortoise and the California Debris Commission.

Jack Anderson

Learned people can explain why the Horseshoe Crab and the Galapagos Tortoise have survived, but the longevity of the California Debris Commission is a puzzle. It is a government entity and, as with so many other creatures of that species, it does not expire easily. Like the snakes down South, you have to cut off its head and beat it with a stick, and it still won't die until the sun goes down.

A bureaucratic adjunct of the Army Corps of Engineers, the California Debris Commission was created during Grover Cleveland's second administration to regulate the hydraulic gold mining industry.

Miners, having graduated from pans, picks and shovels, were unearthing veins of gold by washing down hillsides with streams of water. The resulting debris poured into streams and rivers and inundated farms. Following torrential rain storms in 1862, according to historians, the San Joaquin Valley became an ocean of mud and gravel.

After three decades of lobbying, farmers and shippers who wanted to preserve the navigability of California's rivers won a court battle that banned hydraulic mining. Within 10 years, the nation's gold reserves dipped below the $100 million mark and the "Panic of 1893" ensued. Railroads went into receivership; 600 banks folded; and 15,000 other commercial houses went broke.

Congress leaped to the rescue and created the California Debris Commission to resuscitate and regulate the gold mining industry. The three commissioners, all high-ranking officers from the Army Corps of Engineers, began issuing mining permits and requiring the construction of dams and stone walls to contain the debris.

The commissioners got no salary (other than their Army pay), required no staff, had no office and no stationery. In 92 years, their expenditures totaled only $3 million, or about $80 million, depending on how the figures are interpreted.

But hydraulic gold mining is a practice of the past and has been for 30 years or more. The commission's powers were considerably diminished by flood control and clean water legislation. During the 1970s, it had only one mining permit on file. The wording of its annual report hasn't changed significantly since 1962. It hasn't spent a dime for 20 years.

"It's kind of unique," said Mike Helm, chief of operations for the Sacramento district of the Army Engineers, "that you've got a commission that is no burden on the taxpayers whatever."

When Gen. Paul Kavanaugh became chief engineer for the Sacramento district in 1979, he automatically became a commissioner. "Somebody informed me I was a member of the California Debris Commission," he told our reporter Kenneth Reid, "and I thought I was going to be a glorified junk man."

A wise person, Kavanaugh convened the commission and recommended it vote to dissolve itself. The notion carried, and a historian, Joseph Hagwood, was chosen to chronicle the commission's achievements.

The recommendation for abolishment slowly climbed the Army chain of command and finally, in February 1985, the Army asked Congress to close the coffin lid over the commission.

The requisite language was inserted into a massive water bill, which was approved by the House Public Works and Transportation Committee this month. A Congressional source said it has to be considered by four other committees before it hits the House floor, some day this fall.

Even then, the critter probably won't die until the sun goes down.

APRICOTS A PLENTY: The Agriculture Department is considering the purchase of 500,000 cases of apricot juice, on top of the 400,000 cases of canned apricots it has already purchased. The sale is being pushed by unhappy apricot growers, who say that huge surpluses, and costly government safety standards have left them in a bind. Growers are hoping that the government will offer the extra apricots for the federally funded school-lunch program. The Agriculture Department, which has budgeted $350 million to buy commodities for school lunches, has also given priority to peaches, green beans and cherries.

CAUGHT IN THE CROSS FIRE: Forty American technicians have been stranded by South Africa's state of emergency. They went there last year to work in South Africa's nuclear power plants without realizing that those jobs required special clearance by the U.S. Department of Energy. The workers say they were never told about the special clearance. Federal officials, after a fact-finding trip to South Africa, decided not to give the technicians the OK, a decision that wasn't announced until last month. The South African government says it won't pay their way back to the U.S., and the American ambassador has been called home and therefore isn't around to help.

MINI-EDITORIAL: We have a great deal of respect for retiring Budget Director David Stockman, but he is not the Oracle of Delphi. We suspect the publishers who bid up the price tag for his prospective memoirs to $2 million are the same people who tinkered with the taste of Coke.

America getting blame in Greece

ATHENS — Greece is becoming sharply polarized again. The villages have two coffee shops — one where supporters of Prime Minister Andreas Papandreu's Socialist government gather and one for the opposition, so they can denounce each other in friendly surroundings free of inhibition.

The capital has two dialogues, each within its own closed circles. Members of Pasok, the government party, speak with exaltation of dramatic change, of new-found independence though the facts have been modest so far. Members of New Democracy, the opposition on the right, intone dire warnings about a coming "one-party state" and economic disintegration.

They agree on few things. One is that Turkey is the menace, and the other is that whatever they find wrong, it's really America's fault.

The latest frothy scandal is over the testimony of the newly appointed U.S. ambassador, Robert V. Keeley, at Senate confirmation hearings. He said he hoped for "better relations" on a "more equal" basis rather than as "client-patron," as in the postwar period.

The government spokesmen jumped on the phrase, saying it showed America had admitted previous Greek governments were servile. The opposition screamed, saying it was a dirty blow by Washington to curry favor with Papandreu so as to keep American bases. Leading figures in New Democracy argued among themselves whether they should "reject" Keeley for insulting their record.

The fuss is really a reflection of how much America still matters to this country, whether as scapegoat or protector. Most Greeks blame the United States for the seven years of dictatorship following the 1967 colonels' coup, and for not preventing the 1974 Turkish invasion of Cyprus.

Some emotional officials even claim the United States hasn't fulfilled obligations in return for Greece's part in World War II. Such righteous extravagance is accompanied by angry denials that anything Papandreu has said about the United States could be considered "anti-American."

Nobody pretends to have a clear idea of Papandreu's intentions now that he has been re-elected for a second four-year term. He has vowed not to give any more interviews, which leaves things murky but may not be a bad idea given his propensity for casual provocation.

But the government has toned down its America-bashing stance. Foreign policy wasn't a major issue in the recent campaign, although there is a lingering chance that Papandreu's tactics have made the world give Greece more of its due attention and respect.

The trouble is that this doesn't address the main problem, which is the seriously deteriorating economy. Greece is likely soon to become one of those countries obliged to creep under the stern tutelage of the International Monetary Fund. That will renew the dilemma of whether to relieve feelings by more anti-U.S. rhetoric or try to convince those phantoms called "international bankers" that Greece is still a good bet.

Among the people who love to talk politics, there is an atmosphere of an impending watershed, of some moment of decision just ahead that will determine the country's fate. But it seems artificial. The impression is more one of groping and stumbling on the long road of transforming a backward, rural economy and archaic paternal politics into a modern state.

Eleni Vlachou, the outspoken, dauntless editor who sassed the colonels' regime relentlessly and now gives Papandreu similar treatment, says flatly: "I am free to say whatever I want. But they — those in power — are equally free to ignore me to tally. So there is no democracy."

By that she means lack of effort to seek consensus and compromise, heightening polarization between ins and outs, and increasing politicization of state services, which ought to be non-partisan but have always been linked in some degree to patronage.

In the circumstances, there isn't much the United States can or should do. There's no reason to swallow insults, and no reason to panic. At this stage, whatever the United States does, it's likely to hear from Greeks that what goes wrong is all America's fault.

LETTERS Parents still rule

In response to a recent full page ad concerning Planned Parenthood's new theatre group, the Teen Esteem Machine, I would like to know where these people get the nerve, as well as the right, to exploit our children this way? Who has given them permission to place themselves as "authorities" on sexual morality?

As far as I can see, they don't hold any absolute morals, nor do they exhibit any. This smells of Humanism! Certainly most everybody in this area is on to Humanism by now. This is just another tentacle of such.

Maybe they put forth the image of being supporter of the family unit, but inside the are bent on breaking us up. I do not want them to teach my children anything about sex; I will handle that fiery issue. But I will also handle it with love, and with clear-cut morals.

Homosexuality is wrong in my book (the Good Book) as well as abortion, lax sexuality, and disobedient children. Planned Parenthood tries to handle all of these problems for us, and I frankly will not sit back and watch them try to con parents into letting them take control of our kids. They cannot have mine without a fight, and I guess a fight is what they are after since they keep scheming up "cute" little ideas to reach our youth!

People, wake up! This organization advocates children going behind their parents' backs to get birth control, abortions AND sex education in the way THEY think it should be taught! You know, it seems to me that if Planned Parenthood really wanted to do something to fight teenage pregnancies, they would go up against the media to try to control or stop all the sex on television, movies and videos.

They also could go after the music industry and advertising agencies. That is where the root of the problem lies! Clean up THEIR acts and we wouldn't have to worry as much about sexual immorality as we do.

None of the above things are wrong in themselves, but misused by sex they are explosive! We parents have a tough enough job without the help of Planned Parenthood. I urge anyone who has not ever had to deal with these people to read up on them. Know what you are up against.

I also think that anyone wanting to become more involved should do so. If you do not have time to attend organizational meetings, I recommend that you write letters. It is a very effective way to get your point across. Write to those in authority over our country and our laws, to groups who support pro-life as well as to those who oppose right-to-life, the family unit and other such vital issues. Your opinions can make the difference!

School flaws obvious now

I sure am glad I'm not going to high school anymore. I am sure next year's kids will be feeling like they are going to Huntsville Penitentiary if the proposal to shut down the campuses is enacted.

I even heard by next year they are going to begin issuing balls and chains to all students plus a nice set of black and white striped coveralls to meet the decorum in high school. I think the closing down of the school campus is another of the many flaws that the education system will do in imposing this new plan. Taking a few steps backwards I can see other flaws in the education system of not only local, but also state and national as well.

The flaw I can see in the national education system took place about 30 years ago with the Tempe vs. Brown decision by Judge Warren Burger. Segregation and busing have become synonymous words that seem to be infected by each other. I think that people's rights were violated in this landmark decision. When people do not have the right to make the decision on which school they want to attend, I think there should be one school where all these people who supposedly want to integrate can go and let everybody else go where they want to go.

Busing, I think, is a waste of time, money and energy. Didn't we at one time have an energy crisis or is busing to serve as one more of the government-supported jobs?

On the state level of education, I can see many flaws in this system. For starters, next year teachers, including my Mom, will have to take a test to see if they as teachers qualify to teach. I think this is foolish since my Mom has been teaching for 26 years in the system!

Another thing that bothers me is a certain person, H. Ross Perot, is causing a lot of waves with his so-called experienced decision on education. I wonder what gives Mr. Perot this kind of insight and experience to dictate to Gov. Mark White that the Texas Education System is falling behind other states. Maybe it is Perot's name or his money that makes him feel like he is an authority in the field of education.

One last and final flaw of the state education system is the punt and pass program. If people want to play football or any other sport, let them play even if they don't pass. Because in the real world you will find out if you don't pass you can always punt or run with the ball.

Union Carbide covering expenses of 135 injured in poison gas leak

INSTITUTE, W.Va. (AP) — Union Carbide Corp. has offered to pay the medical expenses of the 135 people injured in a poison gas leak, but disputed a company memo that said the chemical is as dangerous as the gas that killed more than 2,000 people in India.

Company officials admitted Monday that workers initially thought the leak at the Institute plant was not serious and delayed notifying authorities.

And Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., arranged for a delegation of top federal regulatory officials, including Environmental Protection Agency Director Lee Thomas, to inspect the plant today.

Six Carbide employees were injured, 129 residents were treated at hospitals and thousands more were trapped in their homes when aldicarb oxime, the main ingredient in the pesticide Temik, escaped Sunday morning.

Carbide disputed the significance of a 1983 internal memo describing aldicarb oxime as being in the same toxicity class as methyl isocyanate, or MIC, the deadly substance that leaked from the Carbide plant in Bhopal, India. The memo was released by the office of Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif.

Carbide spokesman Tom Sprick responded that "the category has considerable range to it and all products are not equal in weight. From what I understand, it (aldicarb oxime) is not as dangerous."

Byrd said he arranged today's tour in part to investigate residents' complaints that they were given inadequate warnings and information when the chemical cloud engulfed their homes.

"This incident has raised a lot of questions that need to be answered," he said. "The people of the Kanawha Valley need to know if this situation was handled properly."

State Air Pollution Control Commission Chairman Carl Beard said Monday the leak raised "serious questions" about the effectiveness of $5 million in "supposed fail-safe equipment" installed recently at the plant.

Carbide acknowledged that county emergency officials were not notified until 20 minutes after the leak, partly because computer monitoring equipment erroneously indicated that the fumes would not drift.

"At that time we did not believe the emergency would affect the community because the cloud was hovering over the plant," said plant manager Hank Karawan.

The company said it would pay medical expenses of all people injured in the leak. Spokesman Dick Henderson said none of the victims would be asked to sign legal releases that could affect their ability to recover damages later.

"We are not considering legal questions at this time," he said. "This is what we have to do for good community relations."

Navy seeks a few good microbes to clean chemical-tainted water

MOFFETT FIELD, Calif. (AP) — The Navy is looking for a few good microbes, the kind that can turn deadly industrial chemicals that contaminate groundwater into harmless gas.

If an experiment this week by Stanford University civil engineers and the Environmental Protection Agency at the Naval Air Station is successful, it could mean vast savings in toxic leak cleanup costs for industry and the military, officials said Monday.

In the first field test of a process developed by EPA researchers, the engineers will try to turn toxic trichloroethylene, or TCE, into carbon dioxide by exposing it to a kind of bacteria found naturally in soil.

"If we can demonstrate that this process works in the field, we'll save a whole bunch of money," said Jack Keeley, chief of research at EPA's laboratory in Ada, Okla. "Industry and the government are spending billions (on cleanups) all over the country and we may be able to save a lot of that. I'm really confident this will work."

The engineers will encourage millions of the bacteria — called methylobacteria — to multiply more than a thousandfold by feeding them water, methane and nutrients, said Stanford's project manager, Doug Mackey.

Then the engineers will intentionally leak TCE, an industrial solvent used to remove grease from metal and other materials, into the 40-foot square test site at 10 to 20 times the hazardous level of five parts per billion.

EPA scientists believe an enzyme produced by the bacteria will break down the TCE and release harmless carbon dioxide. The engineers would then stop pumping food to the bacteria, which would return to normal numbers.

The process was developed by EPA researchers John and Barbara Wilson last year at the facility.

Derailment spills chemicals, melts tracks

VALENTINE, Ariz. (AP) — Dozens of people remained out of their homes today after a train derailment spilled a deadly soup of toxic chemicals and started a fire so hot it melted the rails and the wheels of some cars, authorities said.

The 70-car Santa Fe train flipped 27 cars off the tracks early Monday, engulfing 11 in flames after several explosions, officials said. At least 250 residents of three towns were evacuated; 50 remained away today.

The train was hauling 46 containers filled with about 30 hazardous chemicals, including hydrochloric acid, benzene, methanol, butyl and alcohol derivatives, said Tom Buckley, a spokesman for the railroad in Los Angeles, speculating that the benzene probably caused the fire.

The intense heat melted the rails and the wheels of some of the cars, said Mohave County Sheriff's Lt. Clark Morrell.

"I really felt like an earthquake had happened," said Carole Yellowhawk, of Valentine. "There was a series of four explosions to begin with and the fifth one just totally rocked the home..."

"We went to the front door and looked out and here is this whole string of tankers on fire," she said.

Nearby U.S. Highway 66, about 30 miles northeast of Kingman, was closed as a precaution because of the train's chemical cargo. Authorities said there were no injuries, but at least one cow and several birds were killed by the fumes.

NATION IN BRIEF

Burger wars barred from military bases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Whopper and the Big Mac will have to curtail their celebrated burger war — on military bases, at least — with no further shots fired until Congress decides whether the armed forces should be allowed into the battle.

The Pentagon announced Monday it is imposing a moratorium on building any more civilian-style hamburger stands on military posts, in compliance with a congressional order. Congress ordered a halt to the program, which started last year, after Congress members began receiving complaints from restaurants near the bases. Restaurant owners complained that the Pentagon was subsidizing unfair competition.

Child bride to testify

NEWPORT, Tenn. (AP) — A 14-year-old girl has agreed to testify against her 43-year-old ex-husband if a grand jury indicts him on kidnap charges, prosecutors say.

District Attorney Al Schmutzer Jr. asked the grand jury Monday to charge Howard R. Johnson with kidnapping, even though the sixth-grader willingly accompanied him on a trip to Florida in November 1984 and later married him.

"There's no question that she wanted to go," Schmutzer said of Jo Ann Clevenger, whose divorce from Johnson became final last week. "But the statute we're asking Johnson be indicted on concerns removing a child under 16 from their parents without their permission."

Frustacis 'too small'

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — The three surviving Frustaci septuplets, 12 weeks old today, need to gain more weight to leave the hospital next month, a hospital official said.

The infants remain in stable condition in the hospital's newborn intensive-care unit and are expected to go home by mid-September, Doug Wood, a spokesman for Children's Hospital of Orange County, said Monday.

High temperatures for Tuesday August 13

Thunderstorms likely for area

From Staff and Wire Reports

Thunderstorms are likely to hit the Midland area tonight but conditions should clear somewhat Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

A 50 percent chance of thunderstorms are forecast for tonight as the low drops to near 70. Wednesday's skies will decrease in cloudiness as the possibility of thunderstorms lessens to a 20 percent chance. The high is expected to be in the low 90s. Tonight's winds at 5 to 10 mph will increase to less than 15 mph.

Monday's high of 96 was 11 degrees below the record set in 1936. This morning's low was 10 degrees above the 1931 record of 61.

STATE

A tropical depression moving slowly northwestward in the extreme southeast Gulf of Mexico may become a factor in Texas Weather within a few days.

The National Weather Service said today the depression was expected to develop during the day and may become a tropical storm or eventually a hurricane. Forecasters say the depression is expected to continue moving to the northwest.

Forecasters called for scattered showers and thunderstorms this afternoon and tonight for most sections of the state. It was to be clear to partly cloudy and continued hot statewide.

Highs today were to be mostly in the 90s, ranging upward to slightly above the 100-degree mark in Southeast Texas and in portions of North Texas. Lows tonight will be in the 70s. Highs Wednesday will be slightly cooler.

NATION

Rain stretched from the Great Lakes to Texas today after a killer tornado blasted a Wisconsin trailer park.

Hurricane Claudette posed no threat to land as it was moving East in the Atlantic at minimal hurricane force but forecasters were watching a tropical depression that could be at hurricane strength by Wednesday.

Temperatures took an unseasonable dip in the upper West early today, with the 40s common in sections of Montana, Wyoming and Idaho.

Thunderstorms and rain spread from the upper Great Lakes across west Texas and across the coast of the Gulf of Mexico while showers were scattered across Montana.

A tornado swept through a trailer court at New Lisbon in central Wisconsin Monday night, killing one person, injuring 19 others and destroying 13 mobile homes, officials said.

In Auburndale, about 50 miles north of New Lisbon, high winds damaged about a half dozen trailers. Wind damage was widespread as the thunderstorms rolled east.

Angels no obstacle in Diablos' championship path

El Paso catcher John Buerlein catches James Randall's pop fly....

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

...and makes sure of the out with a head tag.

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The methodical El Paso Diablos continued their surge toward the Texas League's Western Division championship at Angels Stadium Monday night, belting the Midland Angels by a 7-4 margin.

The Diablos have now won 10 games in a row, their longest winning streak of the season, and stand at 10-1 in the month of August.

The torrid streak leaves the Diablos with a championship count-down toward the title. El Paso won the first half title and will automatically gain the Texas League championship series against the eventual Eastern winner with a second half title.

Since Beaumont defeated San Antonio by a 7-2 margin Monday, El Paso's "Magic Number" is now at six. That means any combination of El Paso wins and Beaumont losses totaling six will make the Diablos the Western Division champion.

With four games left in Midland this week, the Diablos could put the title in their hip pocket before leaving town. They won the first half championship in Midland and could do some more Tall City champagne spraying if this current string goes any longer.

EL PASO wasted little time in jumping on Midland Monday. The Diablos scored two unearned runs in the first inning. With one out, Jim Paciorek reached second safely on a two-base throwing error by Angel third baseman Billie Merrifield. That allowed Joey Meyer to the plate after two were out, and that is one batter that Angel pitchers don't need to face with runners on.

Meyer blasted a towering, broken bat homer over the centerfield scoreboard off Midland pitcher Don Timberlake. It was his 35th homer of the season, a league best, and his 11th homer of the year off of Angel pitching. Meyer has hit three homers off Timberlake, who lost for the third time this year to the Diablos.

MIDLAND GOT back-to-back doubles from Brian Hartsock and Phil Stephenson in the bottom of the first to cut the margin to 2-1, but Diablos starter Mike Birbeck (8-9) went on to retire nine Midland batters in a row and 20 of the next 24 to post his second victory of the season over Midland against one loss before leaving in the eighth for John Bryant.

Meanwhile, El Paso bats were going wild with a 14-hit attack against four Midland pitchers. El Paso had leads of 5-1 and 7-2 before Midland made a mild two-run rally in the bottom of the ninth.

Doug Davis and Greg Steen knocked in runs for Midland off of Bryant, but the damage had already been done by El Paso.

Riggins, Moore sign; vets DeLamielleure, Jackson released

Associated Press

John Riggins and Nat Moore will return to their teams for the upcoming National Football League season. Joe DeLamielleure, who has played in 175 straight games, and Alfred Jackson will not.

The Washington Redskins announced Monday that Riggins had agreed to terms on a one-year contract. The pact, according to sources, is worth $850,000, the most ever paid to an NFL running back for one season.

Moore also agreed to terms for another season with the Miami Dolphins. The wide receiver had previously said that the 1984 season would be his last.

DeLamielleure, a guard who was part of the Buffalo Bills' "Electric Company" offensive line that helped O.J. Simpson run for 2,003 yards in 1973, was cut by the Cleveland Browns.

Jackson, the No. 2 receiver for Atlanta last year and fifth on the club's all-time list, was cut Monday by the Falcons.

Riggins, 36, ran for 1,239 yards and scored 14 touchdowns in 1984. The 13-year veteran missed three games last season because of injury and there had been speculation that he might not return in 1985.

EVEN RIGGINS admitted that there were times last year when he thought he might be nearing the end.

"During the season, I started to see the light at the end of the tunnel," Riggins said. "There were times, a week or two, if I could have possibly thought of a way of graciously bowing out at that time... the idea went through my mind."

The Redskins, unsure of Riggins'

Dorsett asking for trade

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys holdout running back Tony Dorsett says he has told team president Tex Schramm that the team should consider trading him before the National Football League regular season begins.

Dorsett and Schramm met briefly during the past weekend and Dorsett says he is no closer to reaching a contract agreement now than he was two weeks ago. Schramm confirmed that Dorsett asked for the trade.

"He keeps saying he's been embarrassed and that he might be better off somewhere else," Schramm said. "But I told him you don't just pull down the curtains on a bad experience because you're traded to another team."

If traded, Dorsett said he would prefer to play for Don Shula with the Miami Dolphins or the Pittsburgh Steelers, who play only 20 miles from his hometown of Alliquippa, Pa.

plans, traded their No. 1 draft choice this year to New Orleans for running back George Rogers.

But Riggins is now ready to play, or at least soon will be. Riggins says said "This year is no different. If possible, I could play on Saturday, but I'll just wait and see how it goes."

Moore, 33, holds Miami career records for receptions (421), receiving yards (6,415) and touchdown catches (60). In 1984, his 11th season in the NFL, Moore caught 43 passes for 573 yards and six touchdowns as a backup for 1,000-yard receivers Mark Duper and Mark Clayton.

DeLamielleure, 34, is a 12-year veteran. His 175 consecutive games played ties him with punter Ray Guy of the Raiders for second among active players, trailing only the 189 by Dave Dalby of the Raiders.

DELAMIELLEURE, a six-time All-Pro, was Buffalo's first-round draft pick in 1973 and played seven seasons for the Bills before being traded to Cleveland.

Jackson caught 52 passes for 731 yards last season, second on the Falcons to Stacey Bailey's 67 catches and 1,138 yards. Jackson set a single-game mark last year with 193 yards against the San Francisco 49ers.

In other NFL news, San Francisco traded linebacker Blanchard Montgomery to Buffalo for a future undisclosed draft pick. Montgomery was a third-year veteran from UCLA.

Cincinnati Bengals strong safety Bobby Kemp was sentenced to three days in the Hamilton County Workhouse and fined $1,000 for driving under the influence of alcohol and resisting arrest. Kemp, 26, was sentenced for an incident July 24.

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers said defensive end Lee Roy Selmon will undergo non-surgical rehabilitation for a back injury that will sideline him for the entire 1985 season. Selmon, who will use traction and other procedures, was placed on the injured reserve list last month.

Lee football tickets a hot item

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

It's official. Midland Lee season football tickets are history. Rebel fans gobbled up the last of the remaining season tickets on Monday, the first day the general public was allowed to purchase unrenowned options.

Gil Bartosh, Midland athletic director, reported Monday morning that all 2,812 available season tickets for Lee games had been sold. "We had about only 50 unrenowned options to sell Monday morning and they were gone within 30 minutes," said Bartosh. "We had a line when we came to work Monday. We could have sold a lot more, but that's all we have for this stadium. There seems to be a lot of interest in football this fall."

BARTOSH ADDED, "A lot of people think there are no tickets left for Lee fans, but that won't be the case in the majority of the games. By law we must save half our stadium for the visitors, but usually there are a lot of those tickets available to us the week of the game." It does mean, however, that if you don't have a season ticket for Lee, there is no chance of getting a seat the week of the Odessa Permian game. "They always ask for their full allotment and sell them all. I would say that is one game that is a sellout," said Bartosh.

It is the first time in history that Memorial Stadium has had a sellout of available season tickets.

SEASON TICKETS are still available for Midland High home games and will be sold through Aug. 30 at the Memorial Stadium ticket office. A season ticket costs $20 and MHS season ticket holders have the option of buying an extra ticket for the Lee game for $5.

Janelle Dozier, athletic secretary, said she did not have an accurate count of the number of season tickets sold for Midland High. "We had to keep a close eye on the Lee tickets and we just haven't posted all the Midland High numbers yet," said Dozier. However, Dozier pointed out that Midland High season ticket sales had increased rapidly in the last week and should near the 1,019 they sold last year.

DUE TO the rush of season ticket sales, there have been some projections of four possible sellouts for Memorial Stadium in 1985. The Lee-San Angelo game should hold a great deal of interest since it is Lee's first district game against an opponent considered capable of making a strong playoff run. The Lee-Permian game is another cinch while the Lee-MHS game will certainly be if either team is in the playoff hunt at the end of the season.

The other game with a possible shot at a sellout is the MHS-Permian contest. Permian always attends in massive numbers and if MHS is in the running, that game could draw a lot of interest.

No matter how you look at it, cramped Memorial Stadium is in for a rough fall. And there is certainly to be some community bitterness when these games roll around and there are few, if any, tickets available. Most people haven't even thought about football in the early days of August.

Cubs' Bowa shown the door; Dunston to get another shot

CHICAGO (AP) — Larry Bowa said he is ready to call it a career after 16 years in the major leagues, two Gold-Gloves, a fielding record and the National League record for most games at shortstop.

Bowa, who has battled managers and teammates in the past, expressed no anger or regrets Monday when the Chicago Cubs asked for waivers on him for the purpose of giving him his unconditional release.

"This was going to be my last year as far as I was concerned, but I thought they would have waited until September to do it when the kids came up from the minors."

Bowa, 39, said he didn't plan to try to catch on with another team, unless a contender came calling. He and the Cubs had scheduled a press conference at 11 a.m. CDT.

"I don't plan on it (playing)... unless a team that's in first place or contending called me, well, then I'd think about it. But right now, no, I don't have any plans on playing again."

THE CUBS immediately recalled two players from its Class AAA Iowa farm team on Monday, bringing the roster up to the full 25-man limit. Shortstop Shawon Dunston, who had beaten Bowa out for the starting job in spring training, only to be sent down to the minors May 15 when his batting and fielding failed to live up to expectations, was one of the players recalled.

Also brought up was left-handed pitcher Steve Engel, who had an 0-1 record in an earlier stint with the team this season.

After a poor start, Bowa was batting .246 with no homers and 13 RBIs in 71 games. He had committed nine errors.

General Manager Dallas Green, who brought Bowa to the Cubs from Philadelphia and decided to keep him for one more year in 1985 at a reported salary of $500,000, said he was releasing him now so he could catch on with another team.

"This is my decision to do it now," Green said.

"This will give us an opportunity to see Shawon play another 50 games. And the timing may be such that Larry could possibly go to another ballclub to finish his career, if that's what he wants."

"I don't think anybody doubts my respect for Larry's ability to play shortstop. He has proven time and again that he is one of the best shortstops in the National League," Green said.

"I'M PROUD of the contribution he gave the Cubs organization in helping it come to respectability," Green said in a statement.

Bowa was the starting shortstop last year when the Cubs won the National League East title, their first championship of any kind since 1945.

Bowa entered the season as the all-time leader in fielding percentage for a major-league shortstop with over 1,000 games played, and in 1979 set a major-league record with a .991 fielding percentage.

He is tied for most times leading the league in fielding percentage at shortstop with five.

Going into the 1985 season he had a lifetime batting average of .261 in 2,161 games.

He played most of his career with Philadelphia before he was traded along with Ryne Sandberg to the Cubs in 1982.

'Hot Rod' Williams a frame victim?

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Former Tulane University basketball player John "Hot Rod" Williams was the victim of a frameup by fellow team members jealous of his ability and desperate for money to pay for their drug habits, Chicago attorney Michael Green said Monday.

Green is representing Williams, who is accused of two counts of fixing Tulane games against Memphis State and Southern Mississippi and of three counts of conspiring to fix basketball games.

Among those who testified were former teammate Bobby Thompson and non-playing Tulane students, Mark Olenky and David Rothenberg, all three testifying as part of plea bargains.

Gary Kranz, the Tulane student identified as the instigator of the plot, was expected to be the first witness Tuesday morning.

Williams faces a possible 17 years in prison and thousands of dollars in fines if convicted. He and point guard David Dominique, to be tried later, are the only players still charged in the case.

PART OF the prosecution's evidence against Williams is a videotaped statement taken on the night he was arrested.

"You will hear him say within an hour of his arrest and without a lawyer, just a kid from Sorrento, 'I didn't do nothing wrong,'" Green said on the opening day of trial in Orleans Parish Criminal District Court.

diamonds. Naturally, the contract was a laydown. Not even a 4-1 trump division would have disturbed declarer.

Declarer won the opening spade lead, drew trumps and cashed the ace-king of clubs. When both defenders followed, declarer crossed to the board with a spade ruff to run clubs and claim the grand slam.

What appeals to us about the hand is not this one strange result, but the fact that only one other contract was played at the rest of the tables. In every other case South declared three no trump and made the obvious eight tricks for down one!

Madonna, Sean Penn to marry

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pop music star Madonna and the boy she's a toy for, actor Sean Penn, have finished the paperwork and set the date.

The names Madonna Louise Ciccone and Sean Penn appeared on a marriage license taken out Monday by the casually dressed, sunglasses-wearing couple. A spokeswoman for Madonna has said the ceremony will be Friday in Beverly Hills.

Penn listed his profession as actor and Madonna as entertainer in the music field. According to the license, "Madonna will celebrate her 27th birthday Friday and Penn his 25th on Saturday."

Madonna, the self-proclaimed "Boy Toy," began her pop music career with the songs "Holiday" and "Borderline," but became a sensation performing "Like a Virgin" and "Material Girl."

The media-shy Penn has portrayed a drugged-out surfer in "Fast Times at Ridgemont High" and a spy in "The Falcon and the Snowman."

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — American astronaut James Irwin, who walked on the moon, is awaiting permission to search for Noah's Ark on Mount Ararat, the biblical mountain now the site of raids by suspected Kurdish guerrillas.

Turkish authorities "will let us go when they take the situation under control," Irwin said Monday in an interview with The Associated Press while he waited for word at a friend's house.

Irwin was hoping to make his fourth ascent on the mountain, the legendary site of the ark, in which the Bible says Noah and his family escaped a great flood along with at least two of every kind of animal on Earth.

Authorities on Wednesday banned climbs of Ararat temporarily after a string of raids by suspected Kurdish fighters on camps of American, French, Japanese and West German mountaineers. Authorities said the guerrillas held the climbers hostage for three hours before releasing them with a warning not to climb.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Burt Reynolds is healthy and preparing to direct an episode of Steven Spielberg's television series, "Amazing Stories," but false rumors persist that the actor has been hospitalized with AIDS, his agent says.

"If anyone (cared), they could have seen him on 'The Merv Griffin Show' last week," agent David Gershenson said Monday, adding that he was becoming angry over the questions about his client's health.

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Five members of country music star Lee Greenwood's band, including his son Marc, were injured when one of their buses was involved in a collision with a semi-trailer, a spokeswoman said.

Greenwood was in another bus and was uninjured Monday, said publicist Kathy Gangwisch. Marc Greenwood suffered a sprained ankle.

Keyboard player Gene Lorenzo had a broken left wrist; piano player Mickey Olson, rhythm guitarist Paul Uhrig, and his brother, bassist Rick Uhrig, suffered back problems, Ms. Gangwisch said.

Greenwood and his band appeared later Monday at the Ohio State Fair, she said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jazz singer Ella Fitzgerald, hospitalized for an apparent respiratory problem, was listed in good condition today at George Washington University Hospital.

Nursing supervisor Elaine Sparks said this morning, however, that she did not know when the 67-year-old singer, who had to interrupt a concert schedule, would leave the hospital.

A performance scheduled for Wednesday night in Chicago was canceled, said Ms. Fitzgerald's personal secretary, Willetta Clark.

"It happened very suddenly. It doesn't seem to be anything serious, but the doctors thought she should remain so they can take care of her properly," Ms. Clark said.

Earlier, hospital spokeswoman Christine Torre said Ms. Fitzgerald had arrived late Sunday via am-

ATLANTA (AP) — Amy Carter, the teen-age daughter of former President Jimmy Carter, is among 120 people visiting Moscow in a Friendship Force exchange.

The group left Saturday for a two-week visit to the Soviet Union, said Bobbie Jones, director of exchange operations for the Friendship Force, a private, non-profit program based in Atlanta.

Most of the group, including Miss Carter, will return Aug. 24. The rest will visit Germany, Austria and Switzerland before returning Aug. 31.

The Friendship Force visit to the Soviet Union reciprocates a visit by 31 Russians to Georgia in May.

Dollar down

LONDON (AP) — The dollar moved down in quiet European trading early today amid pessimistic forecasts on the U.S. economy. Gold prices were up.

The dollar, hit Monday by top Salomon Brothers economist Henry Kaufman's prediction of lower interest rates, continued to slide Tuesday, though trading was slower.

Dealers said the downtrend was reinforced by expectations that economic indices due out this week would confirm that the U.S. economic recovery is slowing.

"The market's mood is bearish on the dollar, and corporate customers are staying out of the market," said a dealer in Frankfurt.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a closing 236.80 yen from Monday's 237.30. Later, in London, it was quoted at 236.50 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Monday:

-2.7720 West German marks, down from 2.7985

-2.2878 Swiss francs, down from 2.3058

-8.4850 French francs, down from 8.5550

-3.1453 Dutch guilders, down from 3.1470

-1.8660 Italian lire, down from 1.8770

-1.3595 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3590

In London, the British pound, one of the biggest beneficiaries of the dollar's recent weakness, gained again. It was quoted at $1.393, compared with $1.3775 Monday.

Gold benefited from the dollar's weakness in fairly brisk trading, dealers said.

The metal opened in London at a bid price of $327.40 a troy ounce, compared with late Monday's $326. At midmorning Tuesday, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $328.50.

In Zurich, the bid price was $329.00, up from $327 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose the equivalent of $1.86 to close at a bid $328.53.

In New York on Monday, gold slipped $1.40 to close at $327.10. Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.33 a troy ounce, up from Monday's $6.29.

UAW wants bigger share of Chrysler profits

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — United Auto Workers negotiators, some wearing red-and-white buttons saying "Lee got his. We want ours," are telling Chrysler Corp. they want a bigger share of the No. 3 automaker's record profits.

The head of the company's negotiating team, however, called for restraint to protect future profits and jobs.

UAW President Owen Bieber and Chrysler Vice President Tom Miner, the automaker's chief negotiator, on Monday officially opened talks on a contract covering 69,000 Chrysler workers in the United States. Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca, the "Lee" of the buttons, did not attend.

Separate negotiations between Chrysler Canada Ltd. and the Canadian UAW, which is splitting from the Detroit-based union, were to begin today in Toronto. The Canadian talks cover about 10,000 workers.

Bieber said he had met the Chrysler negotiator more than halfway as the men stretched across a 7-foot-wide table and shook hands for photographers during the opening ceremony.

At a news conference afterward, Bieber predicted tough talks as the union sought to bring its Chrysler workers back to equality of pay and benefits with General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co.

UAW Vice President Marc Stepp, the union's chief negotiator, said, "We think the corporation ought to be fair and share its profits with the workers," adding that job security "will loom as the No. 1 item with us." Job security includes protection against contracting for jobs that could be performed by UAW workers.

Stepp said local union officials would take steps to seek strike authorization within 30 days. The UAW last struck Chrysler in the United States in 1973, for nine days.

"We must remain competitive in product and manufacturing plants, not only with the American manufacturers but with overseas car makers as well," Miner said. "We are certain the union is aware of Chrysler's plans and needs in these areas and will temper their demands as the negotiations proceed during the next few weeks."

Chrysler made a record $2.4 billion in profits last year. Its assembly workers typically earn $12.79 an hour, 39 cents less than their counterparts at GM and Ford, because of concessions made by the union after 1979 when the No. 3 automaker faced bankruptcy.

"This is the year that Chrysler moves back to pattern with GM and Ford," Bieber said.

UAW and Chrysler representatives planned to meet daily through Thursday this week, setting up subcommittees to lay the groundwork for main-table negotiations expected to begin near the Oct. 15 expiration date of the current contract. That pact was signed in December 1982.

Bieber cut short questioning on Iacocca's statement in July that he wanted contract provisions for his company that were "no less than" those in the contract proposed for workers GM's planned Saturn Corp. assembly complex at Spring Hill, Tenn.

That preliminary agreement would give labor permanent job security for 80 percent of the workforce and an equal voice with management in business decisions in return for more flexible work rules, a salaried pay scale for assembly workers, and payment in part through bonuses based on productivity and attendance.

"I don't want to spend time talking about Saturn where there is no Saturn," Bieber said. "We're not in Spring Hill. We're at General Motors. We're at Chrysler."

MidCon to acquire Houston company

LOMBARD, Ill. (AP) — MidCon Corp. will extend the reach of its natural-gas distribution system into important Southern and Southeastern markets with its proposed acquisition of United Energy Resources Inc.

The proposed merger, announced Sunday, would unite two $4 billion energy companies, the Houston-based United and Lombard, Ill.-based MidCon, in a merger valued at $1.4 billion.

The acquisition includes cash and an exchange of stock.

Initially, MidCon will offer $41 a share for 65 percent of United's 27.8 million outstanding shares. Subsequently, United's remaining holders will receive between .904 and .960 of one share of MidCon stock for each United share, the price to be determined by the value of MidCon's stock prior to the exchange.

O.C. Davis, chairman of MidCon, and J. Hugh Roff Jr., chairman of United, said in a joint statement, "The combination of these two systems will create one of the largest and most flexible gas pipeline marketing systems in the nation, with access to a wide range of gas supply and market areas."

BUSINESS BRIEFS

TI changes name of its equipment group

DALLAS — Texas Instruments has reorganized its government electronics business area, including a change in the name of its Equipment Group to the Defense Systems and Electronics Group, the Dallas-based semiconductor/electronics company recently announced.

"This new name better describes the principal business objectives of the group," William B. Mitchell, DSEG president, said.

The accompanying reorganization has consolidated the group's business activities into four operating business entities and a consolidated operating support entity, all reporting to Mitchell.

Tenneco acquires Goodyear gas businesses

HOUSTON — Tenneco Inc. announced that it has completed its purchase of selected natural gas businesses from The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. The two companies agreed that Tenneco would acquire stock of certain Goodyear subsidiaries for cash and assumed debt totaling more than $500 million.

Businesses acquired include Louisiana Intrastate Gas, Mid Louisiana Gas Co., Tuscaloosa Pipeline Co., LIG Chemical Co. and interests in five gas processing plants.

Tenneco Corp., Tenneco Inc.'s intrastate carrier and natural gas spot marketing division, will manage the acquired companies and their 2,770 miles of pipelines. The throughput of the acquired pipelines, which has historically approached one billion cubic feet per day, will permit Tenneco to double its daily sales and transportation volumes.

Southwest passenger miles reach record

DALLAS — Southwest Airlines flew 500.3 million revenue passenger miles (RPM's) during July, an increase of 14.0 percent over July, 1984, and a record for the company.

Passengers boarded in July increased 6.4 percent to 1,041,169, while the average length of a passenger trip increased by 7.1 percent to 480 miles, both also company records and the third consecutive month in which Southwest boarded more than one million passengers.

Company announces upgrade dBASE II kit

AUSTIN — Texas Instruments announced an upgrade kit for dBASE II users and a preferential pricing to dBASE II MSX-DOS version users who upgrade to the TI version of dBASE III, developed by Ashton-Tate.

Current owners of dBASE II may purchase an upgrade kit from participating TI authorized resellers, or directly from TI. The upgrade kit contains a TI order form for dBASE III, a shipping pouch to send the dBASE II system disk and documentation to TI, a bill of materials pre-printed "TO TI," and "FROM TI" and a TI/Ashton Tate brochure about Framework software. TI will ship the selected purchase within 48 hours of receiving the dBASE II materials and the user's properly completed coupon order forms for dBASE III.

Retail sales make first jump in three months

Associated Press

Retail sales climbed a modest 0.4 percent in July, the first increase in three months, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said retail sales rose to a seasonally adjusted $113.7 billion as a jump in activity at department stores offset a big slump in car sales last month.

The 0.4 percent sales gain was the first increase since a big 3.1 percent advance in April.

On Monday, the government reported that wholesale prices in July rose 0.3 percent, but analysts said they don't see inflation as a major economic problem for at least the remainder of this year.

The July rise was fueled by the sharpest increase in food costs in a year, the Labor Department said. The 1.3 percent spurt in food costs offset the second straight monthly decline in energy costs.

The government also said Monday that it expects farmers will harvest a record corn crop of nearly 8.27 billion bushels this fall, 8 percent more than last year's output and slightly more than the old mark set three years ago.

The Agriculture Department's Crop Reporting Service also forecast bumper crops of soybeans, sorghum, wheat and cotton, based on surveys taken Aug. 1.

The overall production estimates were the first of the season by the department and will be updated during the rest of the growing season.

Food and energy are the major components of the Labor Department's Producer Price Index and their movement typically sets the tone for the wholesale inflation figure.

Gasoline prices were off 1.4 percent last month, fuel oil costs fell 5.4 percent and natural gas prices slipped 0.7 percent.

"Even among food products, the increase was not widespread and in my opinion is not an indication of any rising trend," said Franz Price, an analyst with Chase Econometrics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

Kathleen Cooper, senior financial economist for Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles, said "inflation is still very, very tame with no real problems yet in sight. When you look at raw prices for food prices in particular, they continue to look weak."

July's increase would translate to a 3.7 percent annual rate if extended for 12 straight months.

Revised Labor Department figures issued Monday showed wholesale prices fell 0.2 percent in June, after having been reported originally as holding steady.

Ralph Parlett, a USDA food economist, said the higher crop estimates are "not going to change things, to speak of, in terms of food prices."

He said retail food prices are estimated to rise an average of 2 percent to 4 percent this year.

In other economic news,

—Steel production rose 1.6 percent to 1.591 million tons in the week ended Aug. 10, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported. Production amounted to 62.4 percent of capacity, compared with 61.4 percent in the previous week.

—Yields on short-term Treasury securities fell sharply from a week ago. The Treasury Department sold $7.2 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.14 percent, down from last week's 7.3 percent. Another $7.3 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.36 percent, down from 7.52 percent last week.

Glasscock extenders draw mixed results

Two extensions in the Dewey Lake field of Glasscock County have brought mixed results.

While EXXON CORP. completed its No. 1 Charles W. Blalock B as a Strawn producer in the field for only 2 bopd, CHAPMAN EXPLORATION, Tulsa, completed a Wolfcamp producer for 169 bopd of 44 gravity oil with 137 Mcfd gas and no water on a 13/64 inch choke. The No. 5 Blalock was completed in perforations from 8,353-8,370 ft., using 3,000 gal. of acid.

The Exxon well is located 960 from south and 660 from west lines of Section 1, Block 36, T-3-S, 15.2 miles northwest of Garden City, and the Chapman well is located 900 from northwest and 780 from southeast lines of Section 8, Block 35, T-3-S, 13 miles northwest of Garden City.

Future of Parkview up in the air again

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

The future of Parkview Hospital is up in the air again, as investors in a venture which will purchase the facility Sept. 10 ponder its fate.

"There's a possibility it might be sold," said Jack Ladd, general counsel for the group of 41 physicians who entered into a partnership with ClayDesta Corp. to purchase Parkview and examine the feasibility of constructing a new hospital near ClayDesta Plaza. "It would make an excellent nursing home or a rehabilitation hospital. As far as I know, we have no rehab hospitals in Midland."

"I know of one other idea that is being considered and that's a skilled nursing unit which is something between a hospital and a nursing home," added Ladd.

A local physician who heads the steering committee for the hospital construction feasibility study, stated that the group, for now, will continue to operate Parkview.

"We plan to continue running Parkview as an acute care facility," said Dr. Tulsi Singh. "We would like to improve the hospital aesthetically and add some services." Singh suggested improving the intensive care unit and operating facilities and also indicated that Richard Lilley, former administrator of Parkview, could be reinstated.

"Lilley did a great job for Parkview... and he is available," he said. Lilley, who became Parkview administrator in 1981 and left in May after Summit took over management of the facility, indicated that he "was definitely in the running" for the position.

"It's still undecided, however," Singh added.

Lilley also indicated that should the new hospital be constructed, he would be considered for a director's position there, as well.

Singh also stated that the feasibility study, which is examining two different hospital plans — a $20,385,000, 75-bed and $22,120,000,

120-bed facility — "should be ready in about six weeks."

"The study is proceeding right along," he said.

Ladd, however, suggested that the smaller facility would likely be the winning option.

"The money difference is not that great, but there is a question as to whether there's a need for the extra beds," he said.

Singh added there is a market for another hospital in the area.

"Thirty percent of Midland patients leave town for treatment elsewhere," he said. "We need to establish Midland as a medical center."

There is no reason why a person from Lamesa should go to Lubbock, when they can come here."

Singh suggested offering new cardiac services and a burn unit as possible ways of upgrading medical care in Midland.

There's a lot of oil field industrial burns and the nearest burn unit is in Lubbock," he said.

"It's my personal feeling that there is a need," he said. "The need was identified by Forum, Parkview's original owners, which led them to replace Parkview with Doctors."

Lilley indicated that if a new hospital is built, it would be a "first class facility" and would have the "same basic philosophies as Doctors."

Members of the steering committee include Louis Barkley, William McGavran III, P.V. Patel and Terry Tubb. Singh added that about 30 other physicians had expressed an interest in the project besides the 41 original investors, who each paid a minimum of $1,000 for the study.

While Singh insists the market is available for another hospital, Midland Memorial Hospital president, Ray Branson, expressed concern Monday over the group's plans.

"We're concerned because the average length of stay has been declining," he said, referring to the average number of patient days at a hospital, a major determinant in budgeting.

ClayDesta and the physicians re-

Dr. Tulsi Singh recently signed a contract to purchase the assets of Parkview from Hospital Corp. of America of Nashville, Tenn.

The purchase would include the transfer of all rights under the certificate of need for the new Doctors' Hospital, a replacement facility planned for Parkview by its original owners, Forum Inc., to ClayDesta. The future of Doctors' Hospital was put in limbo by HCA which purchased Parkview earlier this year. HCA later was ordered to divest itself of both Parkview and the planned Doctors' within one year due to a monopoly situation in the Permian Basin.

The Federal Trade Commission passed the ruling in early July that HCA must sell the facilities. HCA had already negotiated with Summit Health Ltd., a California firm, who stepped in with an offer to purchase Parkview after the FTC ruling. Summit is managing Parkview until the Sept. 10 signing.

The Parkview purchase will come 10 days after the shutdown of the THFC, a state regulatory agency that was not renewed by the State Legislature.

Commissioners agree to precinct line changes

By JULIE HILLRICH
Staff Writer

Midland County Commissioners in a unanimous decision Monday agreed to make changes in the county's voting box and precinct boundary lines effective March 1986 pending approval by the U.S. Justice Department.

The changes follow a series of public meetings in which city, county and school officials determined a need to refine voting box and precinct boundary lines after U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton "changed the voting box lines without consulting us," County Commissioner Win Brown said. Midland County was not required to make any changes until 1981.

The City of Midland agreed in December 1984 to switch from at-large voting to a compromise version of single-member districts, thereby ending its struggle with the League of United Latin American Citizens and the Black Advisory Council.

The organizations sued the city to force a change from the old at-large system to single-member districts, by which the city is divided into separate districts where voters elect their own representative.

Bunton's ruling followed an out-of-court settlement on the compromise plan.

Brown, who spearheaded the series of June meetings, said only county races would be affected by the change. They include County Commissioner precincts 2, 3 and 4. Precinct 1 would remain unchanged.

"It's not perfect by any stretch of the imagination," Brown said of the change. "We're not going to satisfy everyone."

Still, county, city and school officials all must concur with the change in order to comply with the court settlement, he added.

Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman will study the legality of the change before sending it off for approval to the Justice Department. Final approval is expected before the changes go into effect.

Probe leads to indictments at West Texas youth home

PIYOTE (AP) — A criminal investigation of some male employees at the West Texas Children's Home has led to indictments being handed down against two men for allegedly promising a teen-age girl an early release from the center in exchange for sex.

Charges of sexual abuse by male staff members first surfaced at the center for delinquent youths in late June, said Joan Timmons, chief of media relations for the Texas Youth Commission in Austin, which operates the home.

"After our people at the children's home began an investigation into the matter, and determined it required more than they normally would do, we at the Texas Youth Commission started an investigation with the Texas Rangers," Ms. Timmons said.

The probe prompted the firing of four male employees, the transferring of a fifth staff member to another TYC facility, and disciplinary action being taken against two others, she said.

It also led to the case being presented to a Ward County grand jury in nearby Monahans, said Jack McGowan, who prosecutes cases for the state in Reeves, Loving and Ward counties.

Last Friday, the panel handed down bribery indictments against Esequiel Valadez Jr., no age or hometown available; and Ismael Mendoza, 27, of Pecos.

Both were accused of soliciting sex in January from a "15- or 16-year-old" girl confined at the center, McGowan said.

The indictment alleged that Mendoza and Valadez offered the girl an earlier release date in exchange for the sex.

Mendoza was one of the four employees fired in July, while Valadez had resigned from the center in January, Ms. Timmons said.

Arrest warrants were issued last Friday, but Ward County sheriff's officials said that the men had not been picked up Monday.

McGowan said no other charges were filed against the men because "these were the best charges to fit the offense at hand."

He said that because the sexual history of a girl older than 14 can be considered as a defense in cases of alleged sexual abuse, "bribery charges fit best."

"These girls are not put into the children's home for missing Sunday school," he said.

The West Texas Children's Home is one of four centers for non-violent juvenile criminal offenders operated in the state by the TYC, Ms. Timmons said.

The home has been in this small, isolated town, 26 miles east of Pecos, since 1966, but was a center for neglected children until July 1, 1980, when the youth commission turned it into an institution for delinquent youths, she said.

Today, 161 boys and 35 girls are confined at the center, she said, adding that no action was taken against any of the youths at the home in connection with the commission's investigation.

Ms. Timmons said that of the three other employees fired last month, two were terminated for "inappropriate sexual behavior," and the other for "lying during the investigation about what happened."

East Texas' city voters OK single-member plan

SILSBEE (AP) — This East Texas' city government system, approved by voters, is aimed at providing better representation among minority residents but some city council members are wary of the new plan.

In a special election last week-end, voters adopted a system that will elect the mayor and two council positions at-large, and the remaining four council seats from single-member districts.

City officials put the plan before the public after the Silsbee Black Voters League and four city residents filed a lawsuit against the city last year, claiming the at-large system was unfair to local blacks.

City Attorney Roger Ratliff said the districts will contain an equal number of citizens, but not necessarily an equal number of voters.

"I see no problem with drawing the lines," Ratliff said Monday. "This is a small community and there are geographical ways to divide the city." He suggested using local railroad tracks and highways as natural boundaries.

Ector County officials OK tax increment zone

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County commissioners, in regular session Monday, approved creation of a tax increment zone in downtown Odessa, a contract with J.W. Cooper Construction Co. for construction of a cardiac recovery room at Medical Center Hospital and heard a recommendation that the county buy, rather than lease, a helicopter for the sheriff's office.

Roy Allen, chairman of the downtown development committee, in seeking approval of the tax increment zone, explained that creation of the tax zone will not mean any increase in taxes or any new taxes.

Agreeing to create the tax zone, Allen said, would simply commit the county and other participating taxing entities to earmarking all future tax revenues realized from valuation increases above the present tax base to development of the downtown area.

The Odessa City Council approved creation of a tax increment zone July 23 and Allen said the downtown development committee hoped to persuade all taxing entities to follow suit.

Under the proposal, tax entities would commit tax revenues to redevelopment of the downtown area for a specific period of time, not to exceed 20 years.

As authorized under the Texas Tax Increment Financing Law, revenues realized from the tax increment zone from all taxing entities will be deposited in a tax increment fund. The city would be authorized to issue tax exempt bonds payable out of the fund for any improvements done in the downtown area.

Cost of the cardiac recovery room addition to Medical Center Hospital will be about $270,400. Cooper Construction, under the contract approved by commissioners, will have 210 days to complete the project, with a $500-per-day penalty for every day any part of the project remains incomplete after the expiration date of the contract.

County fiscal services director Tom Pace told commissioners Monday the county would be further ahead if it purchased a helicopter for the sheriff's office, rather than acquire one on a lease purchase arrangement.

Earlier, commissioners had tentatively approved the lease purchase of a Soloy helicopter that would cost a total of slightly more than $1.28 million during a 10 year operational period.

Pace recommended the purchase of a Bell Helicopter 47G3-B-1 conventionally powered helicopter, that would cost only $588,585 over a 10 year operating period.

The Soloy, turbine-powered, helicopter has an initial cost of $266,000, while the Bell 47G3-B-1 costs only $70,000. Paces figures show the county would save nearly $700,000 during a 10-year operating period.

Odessa veteran officer gets five-day suspension

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 17-year veteran of the Odessa police department has been handed a five-day suspension without pay "as a result of his violating department rules and procedures," according to deputy chief Jim W. Dodson.

In a news release Monday, Dodson said Sgt. Tommey Morris July 29 was placed on "administrative suspension without pay" pending an internal investigation of an allegation that he "failed to arrest D'Vorak Smith on two occasions after receiving notice from his subordinates of two felony burglary warrants from Midland County."

Dodson stated that, while "Morris did instruct D'Vorak Smith to turn himself in on those two occasions and on Thursday, July 25, Smith did turn himself in to Sgt. Morris," Morris "did knowingly and intentionally fail to notify members of the Midland Police Department when Smith was initially arrested."

Morris further violated departmental policy and procedure when he "failed to notify his own subordinates who were actively seeking D'Vorak Smith," Dodson said.

"Sgt. Morris' intent was not to interfere with the charges filed by Midland," stated Dodson. "But to assist Smith in making bond from Odessa Police Department Jail, which is in accordance with the Code of Criminal Procedures allowing a suspect to make bond where he is arrested or in the county where the charges are filed," the deputy chief said.

Noting that a personal relationship "contributed to his using poor judgment in the events surrounding the arrest of Smith," Dodson said, "D'Vorak Smith is the nephew of a lady that Sgt. Morris dates."

Though it was determined Morris did violate departmental rules and regulations, Dodson said, it was found "no state penal laws were violated" in the incident that resulted in his suspension.

GARY OTT

Here's hoping some stars decline to reveal naked truth

News Flash: "Nude photographs of Sylvester Stallone, taken before he bearded up (no pun intended) for the 'Rocky' and 'Rambo' movies will appear in the October issue of Playgirl, the magazine has announced.

"Stallone, 39, joins a recent flurry of celebrity nudes, including the Playboy and Penthouse pictures of Madonna and the current Playgirl spread featuring Stallone's fiancée, Brigitte Nielsen."

The newspaper article went on to say the magazine had refused to disclose how much it paid for the Stallone photographs, which were taken from an old porno film featuring the actor in sexually explicit scenes.

This whole idea of famous people posing without their clothes on seems to have caught fire. There have been reports of Playgirl, Penthouse and, in some cases, even Hustler, that great literary quarterly, offering astronomical amounts of money to Hollywood stars to allow pictures to be taken of them in the buff.

I'm reciting this from memory, so don't hold me to it, but I seem to recall a news story about one magazine offering Mary Tyler Moore $100,000 to pose nude.

She declined. I'm glad she did. I don't want America to have the opportunity to gawk at Mary Tyler Moore while she rolls around on the floor naked. She should forever be remembered as the cutesy girl-next-door type who spends her free time strolling hand-in-hand with her boyfriend while a Marvin Hamlisch song plays in the background.

Still, her rejection has not stopped the magazines from trying. And, history shows they are becoming increasingly successful. Hardly a month goes by that some celebrity doesn't pop up on the slick pages of a periodical, leaving nothing to the imagination.

(NOTE: I am unable to list any of those celebrities by name because, although I occasionally buy one of those magazines, I do so only to read the articles.)

Unfortunately, not everyone shares my impeccable moral standards. Indeed, it would seem there is a strong reader demand for such photos, and since the magazines are in the business of giving the subscribers what they want, the pictures can be expected to continue, especially if the price is right.

But here's hoping it doesn't get out of hand.

Following is a list of female stars I hope never pose nude, no matter how much money is thrown their way:

— Minnie Pearl. Need I explain?
— Betty Davis. One can only do so much in touching up wrinkles.
— Jane Fonda. Radicals should have more important things to do than showing off their tans.

— Boy George. Male, female, who knows? Who wants to know?

— Brooke Shields. No one wants to hear her mother explain again what a sweet and innocent child Brooke really is.

— Bo Derek. Enough is enough. Used goods.

— Anyone who doesn't shave under her arms.

— Dolly Parton. Some things should be sacred.

Midland men arrested on child-abuse charges

From Staff Reports

Two Midland men were arrested Monday on child-abuse charges stemming from separate incidents which occurred earlier this summer, according to police reports.

Blaisdell Young, 23, 422 E. Spruce, was held on $225,000 bond for an Aug. 2 incident involving a 12-year-old girl. According to police, Young assaulted the girl on the street, cutting her on the hand before she escaped. He is charged with attempted sexual assault, aggravated kidnapping and injury to a child, and Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine set bonds of $75,000 for each charge.

Raymundo Diaz, 25, 3100 Fairgrounds Road, number 242, was being held on a $40,000 bond for aggravated sexual assault on a child. The incident, which occurred several months ago, involved a 9-year-old girl who was spending the night at Diaz's house, reports said. Diaz is accused of raping the girl and threatening her life if she reported him.

Two Odessa men were arrested Monday in connection with several burglaries in the northwest Midland area. Henry Hereford, 22, and Clifford Fairfax, 20, were arrested by Odessa police and transferred to Midland after being implicated by D'Vorak Smith, who was arrested earlier this month for burglary, according to police. Midland police were questioning the two Odessans this morning in an attempt to corroborate Smith's information.

Hereford was being held in city jail on a $50,000 bond for burglary of a habitation, and Fairfax was being held on three $50,000 bonds for two burglary-of-a-habitation charges and one escape charge.

No determination has been made of the cause of death of a 28-year-old Midland man whose body was found Sunday in the parking lot of the Crown Royal Inn, 3206 W. Front., according to police. Randy Simmons, 209 Circle Drive, was pronounced dead about 10:11 a.m. by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry. An initial examination revealed no specific cause of death, and more extensive tests were being conducted, police said.

Odessa council to conduct hearing on federal funds

By FRANK TROMBLEY

Staff Writer

ODESSA — City Council members were to conduct a public hearing this morning on the proposed 1968-69 budget and how federal revenue sharing funds are to be spent in the coming fiscal year.

The budget for next year, about $47.14 million, will be some $270,000 smaller than last year. However, significant increases proposed in user fees may augment tax revenues in the coming year.

The proposed budget calls for garbage collection fees to increase from $5.25 a month to $6, an increase of about 14.3 percent. An increase is also proposed for sewer service and the council may also consider a tax increase of about four percent in city taxes.

Council members today are also scheduled to hear the second and final reading of an ordinance that would grant a one year taxi franchise to B.G. Lee, owner of the Yellow-Checker Cab Co. of Midland.

July 23, the city council revoked the taxi franchise of Odessa Taxi Inc. because the company was in financial trouble. Lee started operating in Odessa July 24 as Yellow-Checker Cab of Odessa.

Freshmen GOP congressmen among most conservative

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas' six freshmen Republican congressmen are among the most conservative in their class, according to a political action committee that rated their votes during their first six months in office.

The Fund for a Conservative Majority said Reps. Joe Barton of Ennis, Dick Armye of Denton and Tom DeLay of Sugar Land, voted 100 percent "correct" based on 10 votes selected by the group as a barometer of their conservatism.

Texas' three other freshmen Republicans — Beau Boulter of Amarillo, Mac Sweeney of Wharton and Larry Combest of Lubbock — each scored 90 percent in the group's ratings. All three disagreed with the FCM on the same vote — emergency farm aid.

The Fund for a Conservative Majority is a major PAC contributor to conservative political candidates.

"For the second straight session of Congress, Republican freshmen are more conservative than the Republican delegation as a whole," the organization's chairman, Robert Heckman, said in a statement released with the ratings.

Texas elected seven new congressmen last year.

Lavernia man jailed in Odessa

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 45-year-old Lavernia man remained in the Odessa City Jail early today in lieu of $5,000 bond on a charge of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death of a 22-year-old Midland man early Monday morning.

Omar Cortez Ortiz, 1800 W. Texas, died when a diesel semi-trailer tractor driven by J.L.R.F. Simmons struck the rear of Ortiz's 1977 Ford Thunderbird, which was stopped at a traffic signal at the intersection of U.S. Highway 80 and East Loop 338. The tractor ran up over the rear of the Ortiz vehicle and crushed the top, pinning Ortiz in the wreckage, according to Odessa police accident reports. Ex-POW recounts stories

AUSTIN (AP) — Former World War II prisoner John Allen McCarty does not like to tell his war stories. But he is recounting them on behalf of fallen soldiers who cannot tell their own.

"I feel like I owed it to them to tell it the way it was," the 70-year-old Henly rancher said during a break at a book-signing party.

McCarty's 33 months in a prison camp in the Philippines are recounted in the new book, "Cabanatuan, Japanese Death Camp."

McCarty was captured when Bataan fell April 9, 1942. After a 65-mile forced march, he was loaded onto a box car and sent to a POW camp in the Philippines.

"During the first hour I was captured, the Japanese killed seven Americans and a Filipino. Any soldier who had any article made in Japan or Japanese money was tried and executed on the spot. They were bayoneted and clubbed to death," McCarty said.

After several months, McCarty was transferred to the Cabanatuan camp.

Jury selection begins in murder trial

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Jury selection got under way in 70th District Court this morning for one of two men accused of the Oct. 25, 1964 stabbing death of 39-year-old tavern owner Gayle Stiffemire.

Donny Lee Bretz, 25, and his 19-year-old stepbrother, Gary Lynn Waqua, on January 10 were indicted on charges of capital murder, but the Ector County district attorney's office sought reindictment of Bretz and Waqua July 29 on a lesser charge of murder because neither had a prior criminal record.

Stiffemire was stabbed to death at the Tally Ho Lounge, 3114 W. 2nd Street and robbed of about $500, according to the Ector County sheriff's office.

Judge Gene Ater indicated he expects the trial to last about two days.

Southwestern Bell offers Spanish service bureau

Realizing the importance of the Hispanic market in Texas, Southwestern Bell Telephone has developed a new Spanish-language customer information program called the "800 Spanish Service Bureau," according to a press release from the company.

The bureau is designed to provide Spanish-speaking customers with general information about telephone service.

The bureau opened for service in this area on Aug. 1.

To reach the 800 Spanish Service Bureau, customers will dial 1-800-592-7726 from anywhere in Texas. There is no charge for the call. Spanish-speaking Southwestern Bell employees will handle the calls, providing information, answering questions or acting as interpreters as necessary for the customer and other telephone company employees.

"In the next 15 years, eight million more people will live in Texas — at least 25 percent of those people will be Hispanic," said Jim Adams, president of Southwestern Bell's Texas Division. "Programs such as the Spanish Service Bureau demonstrate our concern for Hispanic customers and help provide opportunities for us to market our goods and services to them."

Adams will initiate the three-phase trial of the bureau on Aug. 1 in El Paso. Along with El Paso, the bureau will begin serving customers in the Panhandle, Midland/Odessa, Dallas/Fort Worth and Austin in Phase I.

Phase II, which begins Sept. 2, will bring the Spanish Service Bureau to the Houston/Beaumont area. On Oct. 1, the trial will begin in San Antonio and the Rio Grande Valley.

Charles H. Clamurro, Food and Beverage Director at The Midland Hilton, maintains high standards of excellence in all areas for himself and his staff.

At Midland Hilton, excellence in every area is the rule

Maintaining a consistent high standard of excellence is often a difficult task for large hotel properties.

At The Midland Hilton, excellence in every area is the rule expected and achieved both by hotel manager Marshall Hill and his competent staff.

Among those staff members is Charles H. Clamurro, a recent and welcome addition. Clamurro, Food and Beverage Director, maintains the same philosophy as Marshall Hill.

"First and foremost," Clamurro said, "we want our guests to enjoy every aspect of their visit with us. Whether it be for a meal or an extended stay, we want them to feel completely satisfied with the entire experience."

And because this fine staff has maintained these goals in such a consistently superior manner, the American Automobile Association has recently awarded the Midland Hilton four-diamonds, as a distinctive superior hotel property. Such a distinction is only given to the most outstanding hotel properties in the U.S.

As part of The Midland Hilton experience, every guest will certainly want to dine at Charlie's, The Midland Hilton's specialty restaurant. Serving the finest in American Regional and Novelle cuisines, which can be characterized by eye appeal, composition and fresh ingredients used in each delectable selection, prepared and fabricated at tableside or in the kitchen.

"Patrick Bruyneel, Charlie's manager and all of the staff at Charlie's are seasoned professionals. For instance, each day our executive chef, Art Elvins, usually prepares two or three novel entrees as specialty menu items, all of superior quality," Clamurro said.

"And any member of Charlie's staff works very hard to assure our guests in complimenting their dinner with an appropriate wine, either domestic or imported."

Clamurro explained that Charlie's staff works very hard to assure their guests of a gracious, memorable dining experience.

And that policy of maintaining the highest standards carries over to the two other establishments within the hotel property, Sally's Restaurant and Goodnight's Lounge.

"Sally's has a more informal atmosphere. There we serve a variety of menu items for breakfast, lunch and dinner. We feature a delicious, varied luncheon buffet with two or three entrees and a complete selection of salad each day for only $5.95. This is certainly a value," Clamurro said.

Additionally, every Sunday Sally's features a champagne brunch from 11 am to 2 pm at $6.95 for adults and $3.25 for children. This is served under Chef Elvins' personal supervision.

"And of course, for our senior citizens, we accept Midland Gold," Clamurro added.

The Food and Beverage director discussed future plans for Goodnight's Lounge.

"We want to encourage Midlanders to choose to The Midland Hilton for their evening enjoyment. And that is why we are scheduling finer live entertainment groups on a regular basis to our elegantly-appointed lounge."

Clamurro concluded that his overall goal for this beautiful hotel property paralleled that of hotel manager, Marshall Hill, that being to strive for absolute excellence, a five-diamond rating by AAA, an award of unique distinction achieved only by 53 other hotel properties in the United States.

Temporary Resources welcomes you

Temporary Resources is a local company which proudly serves both local and national companies in Midland and Odessa. This company with local commitment has qualified temporaries who can certainly fill vacant positions.

Owner and president, Patricia de Little says that being locally controlled and totally dedicated to temporary services allows Temporary Resources to offer things that other companies simply are not able to offer.

After serving as a branch manager for a national temporary company, Patricia recognized that Permian Basin businesses can greatly benefit from a locally-owned company, so Patricia started her own company, Temporary Resources.

Temporary Resources has expanded, now having offices in Midland and Odessa. Patricia credits the growth to outstanding service which is possible "because decisions are made locally, not off in New York, Detroit or some other faraway place." People who understand Midland businesses make the decisions at Temporary Resources.

One important decision that has long been settled at this local office is that temporaries perform better and enjoy their assignments more when they get personal attention. That is why Office Manager Barbara Smith and Associate Manager Fran Hawke dedicate much time to each interview. Finding out whether the applicant is qualified as a word processor, secretary, clerk, receptionist, or marketing temporary is only part of the task. Getting to know the individual's personality is equally important.

Once a temporary starts accepting assignments, the professionals at Temporary Resources still maintain contact with that temporary at least twice a week.

"We don't just send out warm bodies; we send qualified people," says Patricia. That's why Temporary Resources is confident enough to offer a 100 percent guarantee.

Temporary Resources also offers customers two to four hours of free training time. This is a real plus.

Patricia emphasizes that temporary employment is their specialty, not a side line to permanent placement. Companies that depend on a Temporary Resource temporary sometimes want to make that individual a permanent employee. Patricia says, "All that we ask is that they try the temporary for eight weeks. Then they are free to hire them." No extra fees are charged.

Patricia announces that Temporary Resources is now able to offer a payroll service at a low, low mark up. This service allows companies to add an employee without having to put that individual on their payroll.

To find out how Temporary Resources can serve your company, call Account Representative, Tausha Day at 684-0527. Cross training makes it possible for anyone in this office to take orders and dispatch the temporary needed. Temporary Resource customers don't have to worry about office personnel competing for a commission.

Flattering fashions fabulous for fuller figures

Copley News Service

While slim may be in, it's not realistic.

A whopping 50 percent of America's women are overweight — not just five or 10 pounds but so much that they can't find clothes to fit them.

Those are the facts, says Mary Duffy, president of Big Beauties, a New York modeling agency that specializes in statuesque models. "Thirty million women, half of them under the age of 35, are a size 14-plus — and the average 5-foot-4, 32-year-old woman weighs in at 150 pounds!"

"It took a long time," says Duffy, "but at last the fashion industry is acknowledging the existence of the forgotten woman. For the first time in history top American designers and manufacturers are producing exciting, flattering, proportioned fashions for large women."

EVEN THOUGH stores are now featuring special departments for size 16 and up, being large is more than a weight problem. It's also an emotional problem.

"Most (large) women feel pretty awful about themselves," says Duffy, who knows what she's talking about. This beautiful, radiant 40-year-old weighs 180 pounds and wears a size 18 dress.

"I always had to battle my weight," Duffy admits. She was able to get her weight down to 117 pounds while attending Mount Holyoke College, but she was miserable, constantly dieting. Even her mother told her that if she'd stay a size 8 she could catch a doctor or lawyer for a husband.

Now isn't that silly? she says. "If a man says, 'I'll love you if you'll lose 30 pounds,' he never loved you to begin with!" (Duffy, engaged several times, is single.)

But whatever your weight, to succeed in life you've got to love yourself, she stresses, and, frankly, most overweight women don't. And that's why they tend to be sloppy, she explains. The combination of not being able to find anything stylish and a lack of self-confidence doesn't make for an attractive appearance.

"You've got to kill them with grooming," she tells women in the many seminars she conducts for department stores. "The key to looking attractive is external grooming — and internal pride."

WHILE DUFFY HOPES women will not gain so much weight that it becomes life endangering, she preaches self-acceptance. "The worst thing you can do is wear clothes that are too tight because you think you'll diet your way back into them," she says. While dieting is an American pastime, only a tiny percent of dieters maintain their new weight, she adds.

So buy clothes that are loose but not baggy. Pick styles that are complementary to your figure shape, colors that are flattering, and be the best that you can be.

While Duffy may sound like the leader of a pep rally, this rah-rah attitude has paid off for her. In 1979 she was running an art gallery in New England, giving biennial tours and dieting, when she was approached by the Jordan Marsh department store. "I was asked to be a large-size model in its catalog, and it was the first time I had a positive response to being large," recalls Duffy. "I did 17 ads in one month. It was wonderful!"

After working full time as a model, Duffy bought the Big Beauties modeling agency and now employs 31 models, constantly interviewing potential models.

"There's nothing like confidence," says Duffy, who feels it's the way you project yourself — not how much you weigh — that makes people like you or think of you in a positive manner.

DUFFY'S POSITIVE PROJECTION did not go unnoticed by L'eggs pantyhose company, either. Three years ago L'eggs hired her to not only appear in some commercials for its new large sizes but also to act as its official spokeswoman and beauty consultant.

She does it with panache. Touring the country touting L'eggs Just My Size pantyhose, this vivacious, charming woman also serves as a role model for women who've been hiding in the closet, stuffing themselves with cookies to drown their sorrows.

She tells those women they've been in there too long and it's time to come out. "Don't let diet commercials suck you in and make you feel bad, but don't be obsessed with food either," she says.

"Give yourself a break," she stresses. "Do things in moderation, like take the cream out of your coffee and give up wine for two weeks," she suggests. Be healthy and fit. Just because you're overweight doesn't mean you don't have to do any exercise."

WHEN TALKING to seminar audiences, Duffy gives all sorts of practical advice. For those rude folks who say things like, "Have you gained a little weight?" Duffy suggests saying, "No, would you like to Special evenings call for glamour dresses, such as these gracefully draped chemises, which will complement the large-size woman who has a thick waist but broad shoulders and narrow hips.

borrow my Binaca (mouthwash)?"

"Being overweight is not a joke, though. It's a heartbreaker," says Duffy, who's big on fashion tips to get women to either accept themselves or make an effort to change. And the funny thing, she says, is that once you've accepted yourself and get on with your life, you become happy. And when you're happy you tend to lose weight."

Now for the fashion tips. Duffy loves shoulder pads. They're slimming and make you look more angular instead of round, she says. Wear them under your bra straps, daily.

And wear a body brief instead of conventional bra and panties. A lightweight one-piece body stocking is a lot more flattering because there are no lines or bulges.

OF COURSE, pantyhose with a tummy control panel are a must. Never wear a girdle, says Duffy, who adds that the days of the "iron maiden" girdles and corsets are gone.

Flesh-toned and black slips are also recommended, and if you're on a budget, buy a half-slip and a cami-sole set for maximum versatility. Stockings should match your clothing and shoes, she says, if you want to look taller and slimmer. While dark stockings may make your legs look thinner, you'll look all chopped up if you wear a light colored pair of shoes and dress with them, says Duffy, who has produced (with L'eggs pantyhose) a nifty brochure for large-sized women.

Large women need to pay attention to accessories, too, she says. Purses should be in proportion to your body and should look neat. In general, big hats look best on big faces. To draw attention to your face wear scarves and/or big, colorful earrings. "Over-sized geometric shapes are flattering to full faces."

In jewelry, stay away from chokers and big bracelets. Long chains and strands of pearls are Duffy's choices.

GIVE A TOTAL, polished look, says this modeling agency president. Make sure your hair is cut in a style that's good for your facial shape and wear a bit of makeup, but nothing wild. Stressing natural makeup that begins with clean skin, Duffy suggests blusher used on the top of the cheeks and well-blended. She likes lip liner to keep lipstick from running and suggests lipstick shades to match the blusher.

On the eyes Duffy suggests (and wears) soft lavender and taupe shades, keeping everything soft and subtle. For a makeup foundation, pick one that blends with your face and neck. If there's a makeup line along the chin, it's too dark and will cause negative attention.

Other tips. If you wear slacks, look for pleated styles, as they'll be more flattering. "And buy them to fit well in the hips and thighs, as the waist can always be taken in if necessary." She also suggests wearing pantyhose under slacks for a slimmer appearance.

TO HELP STATUESQUE women minimize their size, Duffy categorizes the large woman's figure into four basic body profiles: The "A", "X", "H" and "O".

The "A" body type belongs to the woman who is larger in the hip and thigh than in the bust," says Duffy, who reports that this is the most common body profile. The "A" shape is mostly narrow or average in the shoulder width with a well-defined waistline and heavy legs.

The goal of this shape is to re-proportion the top and bottom by creating a visual illusion. "A" types will look their best in lighter colors above the waist, padded shoulders, waist belts, unmatched suits, big tops, slightly dropped waists, soft crystal pleats, soft dirndls and pleated (eased) trousers.

"A" type figures should avoid tight-fitting tops, dark tops and light bottoms, halter tops, hip belts, long sweaters, fitted suits, turtle necks and tight-fitting sweaters, fanny wraps, A-line skirts and boy-cut shorts.

The "X" figure is evenly proportioned with a clearly defined waist, usually 10 inches smaller than the hip. This extremely curvy figure should put the emphasis on understated simplicity.

FLATTERING TO THE "X" are wide or padded shoulders, soft romantic looks, draped and wrap dresses, set-in waists, V-necks, belted dresses and coats, soft ruffles and solid colors.

No-no's for the "X" include snug, clingy tops or bottoms, man-tailored clothes, snug fitting knits, tent dresses, chemises, high necks, bow blouses, boxy jackets and coats, blouses, crew necks and big prints.

The third body type is the "H" (this is Duffy's profile), which lacks a defined waistline, has small or moderate bust, straight hips and slim arms and legs. The "H" should dress with emphasis on grace and choose vertical lines. They are best in monotone outfits, including shoes and hose.

Best bets for this figure type are elasticized snug belts, moderately padded shoulders, soft floaty fabrics, dolman or batwing sleeves, semi-fitted jackets, classic pumps and big, eye-riveting jewelry.

Not flattering to the "H" shape are tops and bottoms in sharply contrasting colors, set-in waists, cummerbunds, sleeveless dresses, raglan sleeves, stiff fabrics, boxy jackets, ankle strap shoes and choker necklaces.

The "O" body type carries her weight and girth through the middle, is broad shouldered but slim through thighs and legs. The goal for "O" is to balance the heavy middle by widening the look of the body below. This minimizes the middle.

BEST LOOKS FOR the "O" are squared shoulders, elastic waist blouses, pleated trousers with elasticized waist, boxy, short jackets, unstructured suits, empire waists, dark tops and light bottoms, cropped pants, blouson tops, overblouses with matching skirts, and V-necks.

Nancy Reagan 'thinking about' ideal location for retirement

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Like couples everywhere who see retirement on the horizon, Nancy Reagan is letting it be known that she is thinking about where she and President Reagan will live when he leaves office 3½ years from now.

Friends say the Reagans want to return to California when the president's term is ended and that they are especially fond of the Pacific Palisades area of Los Angeles, where they once lived.

The news met predictably favorable reaction in Pacific Palisades.

"I've got just the house for them," said Joyce Abbott, manager of the new Pacific Palisades office of Coldwell Banker.

Whatever the size, the price won't be modest. Abbott said there is a two-bedroom, one-bath home "that needs a little work" selling for $225,000.

Bow ties again making mark on modern fashion scene

Associated Press

The bow tie — that butterfly of masculine fashion — is back in style. It is not yet a trend, according to an article in the August issue of Connoisseur, but it is spreading its wings among a certain exclusive minority.

For some, it never left. Jack Dunbar, a well-known New York interior designer, wears bow ties not only because he likes them but because he has twice chopped up his long necktie in his paper cutter.

Bow ties were "out" for men in the 1970s, but were adopted by women who were dressing for success. By 1985, things had come full circle and women were relinquishing bow ties to men once more. Clara Pierre wrote in Connoisseur. But that leaves the question of ready-tied or self-tied.

"Ready-tied is too perfect," noted clothing designer Alan Flusser said. "A bow tie had to have character, like the man who wears it. And with pride in wearing had better come the ability to tie it."

Legendary 'blond bombshells' making fashion comeback

Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

You don't have to be a hairdresser to know for sure. In 1985, the Age of Attracting Attention, the blond bombshell is making a comeback.

He or she can be streaked like Madonna, out-and-out fake like Cyndi Lauper, platinum like Billy Idol or serene like Linda Evans. This new generation of golden girls and boys is reviving the drama of the '30s with the decidedly modern bleaching techniques of today.

And who cares if nobody's wondering, "Does she or doesn't she?" Going outrageous is just as acceptable as going natural and, judging by our rock-star role models, it's even more modern.

"Over the past two years, we have seen a definite interest in products that allow women to go even blonder," said Phyllis Klein, publicity director for Clairol. "We attribute it to all the wonderful blondes on TV. Every show seems to have a drop-dead blonde."

"Today's hair-coloring should be like makeup for your hair," she continued. "It's not necessarily supposed to look real — it's supposed to look fun."

Perhaps blondness, in a sense, is going back to its roots: the total glamour of Jean Harlow, Carole Lombard and Marilyn Monroe. As mousy browns they were nobodies; as blondes, they were stars.

Linda Evans, the sweet Krystle Carrington of "Dynasty," is a former brunette who found fame and self-confidence when she colored her hair. Twenty-one years ago, she took the advice of a studio executive, became a blonde and landed her first big role.

"Until I changed my hair color," Evans confides in a Clairol press release, "I never even felt pretty."

Today, Evans is the spokesperson for Clairol's new Ultrase hair-coloring gel.

One person who would like to see more golden bombshells is Alan Masters of Salon Masters-Kennedy in Denver, who unabashedly admits, "I love them." Masters may be biased, because he is that rarest of adult creatures: a natural blond.

"I like the good blond looks if they're done well," he said. "Most people don't know what a platinum blonde is. It's a silver-white blonde. It takes a very glamorous woman to wear platinum hair. If you are a platinum blonde, you have to dress accordingly: very sharp lines, a lot of color or black."

Masters thinks Dyan Cannon, for example, looks "20 years younger" today, with sand-colored blond hair, than she did a couple of years ago with white-blond hair. And although he thought Elizabeth Taylor "looked younger and softer" with blond hair, "I hated her. It was not Liz Taylor. She has a character about her, and blond hair ruined her character," Masters said. On the other hand, he thinks dark hair doesn't do anything for Jessica Lange.

Kathleen Turner, a former brunette who's now a wheat blonde, gets Masters' biggest raves: "She is absolutely fabulous," a sultry star in the Veronica Lake mode, he said. She is a true 1985 blond bombshell, living proof that a man or woman can be blond and brainy, too.

Of course, this hasn't always been so. Throughout history, blond hair has been associated with youth, innocence and romanticism. Marie Antoinette, after all, was a frivolous blonde. So are all the fairy princesses.

Today, although a blonde can be anything she wants, some associations remain.

As Alison Lurie writes in "The Language of Clothes," "Blondes are more often the heroines of comedy or melodrama, brunettes of mystery and tragedy. Curls suggest humor, and a redhead is expected to be tempestuous."

The revival of decorative fashions — tapestry prints, satin shoes and large gems — probably will help boost the blond cause this fall. And the attitude of the '80s is another reason for bringing back the bombshell.

"In the '70s, we went through a decade when people wanted to look natural, they wanted a believable color," Klein said. "Today, there's definitely a trend for bolder, more dramatic hair color, the same way there is a trend for dressing up."

But no matter what the time or fashion, the biggest benefit of being blond remains constant: people notice you.

"When I'm in New York, people stop in the street and ask me, 'Is your hair natural?'" Masters said. "I say, 'Of course, it's my Norwegian background.' They love blonds in New York."

And as any blond — real or manufactured — knows, the hotter the highlights, the stronger the attention.

"Many women get blonder every year — look at Barbara Walters and Jane Pauley," said Klein, who has been a Clairol blonde for 20 years and still waxes lyrical about waxy tresses.

"We're not getting older," she said, "we're getting blonder."

DEAR ABBY

Marriage is one of convenience for wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for nearly three years to a very beautiful 23-year-old woman. I am 30. Our marriage hasn't been perfect, but I considered it better than average, with one exception — "Betty" has no interest in sex. Once every two or three months is enough for her; then she acts like she's doing me a favor.

When I try to discuss it with her, she gets angry. Despite our differences, I have given her all my devotion and a very comfortable life with all the material things a woman could want — a lovely home, clothes, jewelry and a car of her own.

Two weeks ago I discovered that Betty had been seeing a married man. I was shocked and hurt. When I confronted her, she admitted it, and told me she'd never been physically attracted to me; she married me because I had money and she wanted to get out of her parents' home. She says she "loves me" — but not in a physical way.

Betty doesn't want a divorce. She says she's strongly attracted to the married man and will not give him up. She insists that she wants to save our marriage, but needs to see her lover twice a week. I find this totally absurd and unacceptable.

Abby, is this marriage worth saving? — HURTING HUSBAND

DEAR HURTING: You didn't have much of a marriage in the first place. By Betty's own admission, she used you. You may qualify for an annulment.

DEAR ABBY: Everybody writes to you to get something off their chest; well, now it's my turn.

Does anyone realize how difficult it is for a woman with a child to get a date? Once a man finds out a woman has a child, he assumes she wants to get married and stick him with a ready-made family, then boom! it's all over!

Abby, that's not true. There are some women, like myself, who would just like to go out with a member of the opposite sex once in a while. If marriage is in the cards, then it will work out. If not, well, it was fun while it lasted.

So where does a decent woman meet a decent man? Don't suggest church; I don't belong to one. — LONELY IN LEHIGH, PA.

DEAR LONELY: Here we go again. Decent women meet men where decent people go to entertain themselves, do volunteer work, improve their minds and bodies, enjoy sports, music and theater, and even to worship the Lord, whether you belong to a church or not. They also meet through the thoughtfulness of friends.

DEAR ABBY: Am I touchy, out of line or overly sensitive to resent it when someone asks, "Is that dress new?"

I enjoy being complimented on my clothes, but I bristle when I am asked, "How much did it cost?"

I never know what to say, so I foolishly respond as though I were on the witness stand, having sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

Am I an oddball to feel that these are impudent questions? And how should such questions be handled? — KICKING MYSELF

DEAR KICKING: You are no oddball. Quit kicking yourself and have the answer ready. To any question that strikes you as being impudent or out of line, haul out the standard response: "Why do you want to know?"

AT WIT'S END

Traveling modern version of survival of fittest

By ERMA BOMBECK

For years, traveling has been one step above primitive camping.

You're thrust into a wilderness surrounded by hidden light switches, foreign shower spigots, and strangers on all sides of you who are consumed with their own survival.

There are a lot of people who tell you it doesn't have to be this way. Foremost among these are the catalogues that list page after page of travel "necessities."

Sure there's your rubber duck and your change of underwear. But wait! You need an iron that weighs 13 ounces and folds up to the size of a ballpoint pen. You need a hair dryer and a global clock that tells you what time it is in Amsterdam when you are in Harlan, Ky. You need an adapter to use all that stuff in case you have the wrong voltage.

Don't forget your personal coffee-pot and your Walkman. You can either listen to music on it or take along a special carrying case for your language cassettes that have you speaking Italian, German or Boston before you get there.

There are cases for your contact lenses, your pills, your neckties and little socks that slipcover your shoes.

And don't worry about leaving your office. Put it under the seat in front of you. There's a lap computer, a portable typewriter, word processor, calculator and compact desk organizer.

It was the same way with camping. The first time we went, we threw everything into a pillowcase and hit the road in five minutes. Then we started to add things like a grill, an ice chest and a couple of lawn chairs.

Later it was a portable table, a tent with a floor in it, a stove, lanterns and clothesline. Finally, we were taking a humidifier, lawn torches, ice maker, food processor and valet parking signs.

As Yogi Berra once said, "It's deja vu all over again."

Working women called 'healthier'

NEW YORK (AP) — Women who are employed are healthier than those who aren't, according to Dr. Lois Verbrugge of the Institute of Gerontology at the University of Michigan.

She reached that conclusion after analyzing National Health Interview Surveys conducted by the National Center for Health Statistics, reports Feeling Great Magazine.

Employed married women are the healthiest, followed by employed married women without children. Exceptions are employed mothers with preschoolers, or three or more children at home.

Single women without children, and without jobs, have the poorest health status of all, even after adjusting for the fact that many of this group are older widows.

Beirut fighting continues; Three-day death toll at 26

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christian soldiers of the Lebanese army repulsed grenade-throwing Moslem militiamen with tank fire today in three hours of pre-dawn fighting that left two dead and three wounded, police said.

The clash engulfed the bomb-ravaged old commercial district that straddles Beirut's Mediterranean harbor. The area is along the Green Line that splits the city into Moslem and Christian sectors.

Police said Christian soldiers guarding entrances to east Beirut opened up with tank fire after repeated grenade attacks from Moslem west Beirut.

At daybreak, the hostilities faded into sporadic sniping with automatic weapons and anti-aircraft guns. Neither side gained any ground in the clashes, police said.

The casualties raised the official toll from three days of sectarian fighting on the Green Line to at least 26 killed and 135 wounded. The fighting was the worst in two months.

It reached its peak with a 16-hour shelling duel that rained more than 3,500 artillery and rocket rounds on 40 Christian and Moslem residential neighborhoods Sunday and Monday. Sixteen people were killed and 75 wounded.

Among the victims was a Lebanese doctor serving at the American University of Beirut hospital and a medical student, also a Lebanese.

They were killed by a mortar round that crashed at the university campus, wounding three other people, including Souha Chahin, this year's Miss Lebanon. The 20-year-old Miss Chahin is a Christian studying public administration at the university.

Students staged a one-hour sit-in on campus at mid-morning today to protest the bombardment. The university administration also ordered a two-hour suspension of classes from 10 a.m. to midday.

A hospital spokesman said Miss Chahine was making "good progress," but remained in the intensive care unit.

Christian and Moslem militia commands accused each other of shooting first in a bid to undermine Syrian mediation efforts aimed at ending Lebanon's 10-year-old civil war.

The Syrians, Lebanon's main power brokers, have been urging a dialogue on political reforms to give majority Moslems an equal share of power with the Christians, who had dominated the government, army and parliament for four decades.

Last week, Syria sponsored the coalition of 15 Moslem militias and political factions in a National Union Front that demanded a new constitution to guarantee equality for Moslems.

The Shiite Moslem fundamentalist group known as Hezbollah, or Party of God, today declared its opposition to the newly created Front, saying it was seeking a secular solution for Lebanon, "while Islamic ideology is the real option for a new order."

Hezbollah members are believed to have been behind the hostage-taking June hijack of an American TWA jetliner to Beirut and the gunpoint abduction of seven American and four Frenchmen in Beirut over the last 15 months.

The gunmen sought the release of hundreds of prisoners from an Israeli jail. Israel put 101 of the prisoners on buses for Lebanon today, leaving about 230 left in the prison at Atilit.

Pope says faith, tolerance will heal African education/generation gap

DOUALA, Cameroon (AP) — Pope John Paul II delivered messages today for both sides of an African generation gap, telling youth to have faith in the church and admonishing parents never to give up the responsibility for educating their children.

His comments came midway through his 12-day tour of seven African nations, during which he has also pressed his campaign for better relations between Christians and Moslems.

"Have faith in the church, despite its imperfections...As the African proverb says, 'never abandon the canoe that got you to the other side of the river,' " he said in a special message to youth in French.

John Paul also warned young people against people "who promise a future without pain, fun with no responsibility, success without work, profit with no sharing."

The pontiff, in a homily earlier at a Mass celebrated with a gold and ivory chalice that was given by President Paul Biya, spoke of the problems of Africa's educated elite.

Many are over-qualified for the jobs available on the impoverished continent, and their education makes it difficult for them to keep close relations with their rural parents.

At a Mass in Douala, John Paul said that education must be the responsibility of the family.

"But I know the difficulties that you meet," he said. "The children acquire in school knowledge and worldliness not known to their parents and perhaps don't appreciate their wisdom as much."

He said he understood the difficulty parents have supervising their children in such circumstances, "but they must never abdicate...No one can replace you."

John Paul flew to this port city 120 miles west of Yaounde to deliver the first of a series of homilies on education. The large Roman Catholic presence in African schools has given the church a larger role than it otherwise would have as a minority religion.

More than 100,000 people poured into a big rectangular plaza for the ceremonies. The city of more than 1 million was chosen partly because more than 60 percent of its population is under the age of 21.

Beneath overcast skies and in a shirt soaking with sweat, the pope said young people "want peace...fraternal solidarity without restrictions of race or frontiers. They want to unite in order to overcome hunger in the world. They want a world in which there will be respect for man and for his freedom and his conscience."

John Paul's trip culminates in an unprecedented papal address to a predominantly Moslem crowd next week in Casablanca, Morocco.

On Monday, he told Cameroon's Superior Islamic Council: "It is necessary to recognize that we live in an era of polarization...Certain racial and ethnic groups, certain religious communities strain to make their point of view prevail over those who do not share it," he said Monday in an address to Cameroon's Superior Islamic Council.

"It is necessary that Moslems and Christians resist these temptations," he said.

"Today, I ask you to walk hand in hand with your Christian brothers and sisters to follow the paths of God in the service of humanity," John Paul said.

For 19 years, since the Second Vatican Council, the Roman Catholic Church has sought to erase the bitter memories of medieval crusades and slave raids, during which many people were killed in the name of religion.

On Monday evening, the pope vowed that he and the church will lend a strong hand to efforts to end "the evils" of human rights violations, which he said are claiming too many victims.

American Jews immigrating to Israel face difficult changes

By DAN FISHER
Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

LOD, Israel — The 132 passengers of El Al Flight 36, described as the largest group of American Jewish immigrants to arrive here all at once in two years, were greeted with red roses, soft drinks and a cold buffet. Two Cabinet ministers were on hand.

"You come to Israel at a very, very special moment," Jaime Aron, an officer of the Jewish Agency, told them, and he noted that, at that moment, the latest Israeli victim of a terrorist attack was being buried about 50 miles to the north, in the town of Afula.

"When you come to Israel you are the best answer to everyone who is against us," he said. "You are the Zionist answer to terror."

Some of his colleagues would say later that they thought Aron's remarks about terrorism were inappropriate, but no one disputed that, for a number of reasons, this was a truly special occasion.

For Israeli officials like Yaacov Tsur, the minister of immigration and absorption, it was special because the number of Jews coming to live in Israel has slowed to a trickle in comparison to what it once was. By some estimates, the number of Israelis emigrating this year will be twice the arriving immigrants.

The reasons for their departure will be mostly economic. But whatever the reasons, this is a traumatic prospect for a nation whose very reason for being is an in-gathering of world Jewry.

"I'M SURE that you are the best gift that Israel has received in a year," Tsur told the newcomers, "because you are the hope for the future."

For the Americans, the moment was a special blend of fatigue, excitement, fulfillment and fear. They had been traveling for the better part of 24 hours, from New York via Amsterdam. Tired toddlers screamed, the sounds grating on their parents' nerves.

Several of the newcomers had tears in their eyes as they stood in a special reception room at Ben-Gurion International Airport and sang the Israeli national anthem, "Hatikvah" (Hope).

They talked candidly about the problems of making a new life in a country that always seems to be in some sort of crisis. Economic concerns ranked high. And in the back of some of their minds was the knowledge that, if these American Jews are like the thousands who have come before them, nearly half

The issue of immigration has long been at the heart of the tension — considerable if unspoken — between Israeli and American Jews. will have reconsidered within two years and gone back to the United States.

The issue of immigration has long been at the heart of the tension — considerable if unspoken — between Israeli and American Jews. Many of the people here regard returning to the biblical homeland as an almost solemn duty. The Hebrew word for immigration is aliyah — literally, "ascending." And the word for emigration is yerida — "descending."

ABOUT 6 MILLION Jews, roughly half of the world's total, live in the United States — half again as many as in Israel. Thus as Israel looks for sources of new citizens, it looks to the United States.

Jews in many countries are happy to come to Israel, for economic as well as religious or nationalistic reasons. But for American Jews, moving to Israel usually means a sharp drop in living standards, and this is a sacrifice that only about 60,000 American Jews have been willing to make.

Israel relies on and is grateful for Americans' economic and political support, but there is also a strong undercurrent of resentment toward American Jews, who are seen here as leaving to others the danger and hard work of building a Jewish state while they enjoy the relative comfort of life in the United States.

To compound the problem, the perceived advantages of life in the United States have lured away as many as 300,000 Israelis, many of them professionals. Israel has begun an aggressive campaign to persuade as many of these people as possible to return to help build the high-technology industries it sees as the answer to its long-term economic plight.

ACCORDING TO Olga Rachmilevich, director of absorption services for the Association of Americans and Canadians in Israel, the peak immigration years from North America, including Canada, were 1968-1970, in the nationalistic euphoria that followed Israel's victory in the Six-Day War of 1967. There was an average of 9,000 immigrants a year in those three years, compared with about 2,500 in 1984. Roughly 10 percent of the North American immigrants are Canadian.

Rachmilevich said that so far this year North American immigration is off by 30 percent compared with 1984, though the government has said that in the first six months of 1985 there was an increase of 8 percent in "immigrants and potential immigrants" from the United States and Canada.

The difference underlines the imprecision of immigration and emigration statistics here. For one thing, most immigrants are registered at first as "temporary residents," but not all temporary residents are immigrants. Most American immigrants retain dual citizenship.

On the other hand, Israelis leaving the country virtually never announce that they are leaving for good. The Bureau of Statistics, for lack of any better measure, arbitrarily considers an Israeli who has been out of the country for four years or more an emigre.

NO MATTER what figures on North American immigration are used, they are a disappointment to everyone concerned in Israel. "The cold facts are that they're not coming," Rachmilevich said, and of those who do, 40 percent to 50 percent leave again, according to her association's figures.

"They come from a very efficient, well run society, and they have problems dealing with this other society," Rachmilevich said, and the problems are compounded by the fact that "Israel is going through a very difficult period...economically and in terms of security."

The profile of the people who immigrate has also changed, she said. In the heyday of American immigration, most were "socialistic, humanistic, secular," she said. But now as many as 75 percent of North American immigrants are observant Jews who have come to Israel primarily for religious or nationalistic reasons. Many have very large families. Also, she said, there has been an increase in the number of single parents and divorced men and women.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Meese wants to stem Mexican drug traffic

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III came here Monday for meetings with Mexican officials on how to stem the flow of illegal drugs from Mexico to the United States.

Sergio Garcia Ramirez, Mexico's attorney general, went to Washington earlier in the year to outline Mexico's anti-narcotics campaign.

It is Meese's first trip to Mexico since becoming the top U.S. law enforcement official. He said he would ask about Mexico's investigation into the kidnap-murder in February of U.S. narcotics agent Enrique Camarena Salazar in Guadalajara, Mexico's second-largest city. More than 30 people, including police officers, have been charged in the case.

Explosion kills miners

SECUNDA, South Africa (AP) — An underground explosion of methane gas killed 21 miners and injured 27 at the state-owned Middelbult coal mine, officials said today.

Rescue teams that worked overnight were still trying to reach the area of the explosion where an accumulation of gas and dust has built up, said a spokesman at the mine. 40 miles east of Johannesburg.

The spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the blast ripped through an underground work area Monday, destroying ventilation shafts.

He said the identities of the dead and injured would not be released until their families had been informed.
