Thursday morning rodeo is a special annual WTC event

The Western Texas College NIRA Rodeo promises plenty of bucking, roping and riding for fans over the next few days, but one of the highlights of the annual event takes place almost behind the scenes.

It's a special rodeo, put on by members of the rodeo team for those who attend Humble-Smith School.

Bob Doty, WTC agriculture instructor and rodeo coach, said the event started about five years ago. "We usually team a WTC rodeo athlete with a child but this year the event is so large students on the rodeo team from Howard College will come over to help us," Doty said.

According to Doty, the special rodeo simulates actual rodeo events, including a dummy roping, goat race and barrel race. "It is sort of fashioned after a stick horse type rodeo," Doty explained.

The special rodeo begins at 9:30 Thursday morning in Scurry County Coliseum and is open to the public at no charge It is sponsored by the Western Texas rodeo team.

Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association clowns/bullfighters Mark Swinglinger and Larry Morgan will be on hand to perform for Humble-Smith students.

The traditional collegiate rodeo opens Thursday night, with the first of three performances set for 8 o'clock. The top cowboys and cowgirls from Thursday's and Friday's performances advance to Saturday's finals.

Tickets are $4 for adults and $3 for students.

Also scheduled is the annual WTC Exes Rodeo, set for 2 p.m. Sunday in the coliseum. Entry in the events is open to WTC exes only. Fans are welcome.

30 hurt during evacuation from American Airlines jet

GRAPEVINE (AP) — At least 30 people were injured today, including a 79-year-old woman who suffered a broken neck, while evacuating an American Airlines jet whose landing gear collapsed shortly after touchdown at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

"Apparently the aircraft touched down in a stable condition," said American spokesman Al Becker, but the plane came to rest just off a high-speed taxiway.

"We don't know what caused the problem, or why the aircraft ended up where it did," Becker said. All the injuries came during the evacuation, Becker said.

The DC-10's nose gear collapsed after landing, said FAA spokesman Roger Myers. The nose of the plane and the left wing could be seen sitting on the ground.

The injured people were taken to four hospitals.

Twelve passengers were treated at Northeast Community Hospital in Bedford, while eight were taken to Baylor Hospital in Grapevine and another four to Harris Methodist H-E-B Hospital.

Six people were treated at Irving Health Care System, including the elderly woman from Vero Beach, Fla., whose neck was broken, said hospital spokeswoman Verone Travis.

"We had a bolt of something that hit us when we were airborne," said passenger Faye Evans of Baltimore. "And then as we landed it was like we weren't going to stop. And then the flames started."

Becker said one of the control towers reported "smoke and flame coming from the well wheel" on the left side.

Hank Lindsaey of Honolulu said he saw flames coming from the left wing area.

"I was near the wing on the right side, the wing was tilted way up" said Hank Lindsaey of Honolulu. "At first the people who rushed out were afraid to go off the wing on the slide ... it was too steep. When we saw the fire we said 'It's not.'"

Heavy thunderstorms were rolling across the area at the time of the incident.

"At this point we don't know if that was a factor or not," Heires said.

All 189 passengers and the 13-member crew were evacuated from the DC-10 immediately after it stopped near a Delta Air Lines terminal, Becker said.

The visibly shaken passengers, many of whom were soaking wet and visibly shaken, were taken to an airport terminal. There they were given dry clothes, blankets and hot drinks.

Flight 102 had originated in Honolulu and was landing at 6:59 a.m.

'Don't Bag It' seminar set Saturday

Scurry County citizens are encouraged to attend a free seminar Saturday morning at Western Texas College.

The seminar, to discuss solid waste and the landfill, will begin at 8 o'clock in the Fine Arts Theatre. It is sponsored by the City of Snyder and Scurry County Extension Service and will also launch a local "Don't Bag It" program.

Designed by Texas A&M University's extension service, the progam aims to reduce solid waste in the landfill by urging citizens to leave their grass clippings on the lawn.

Speakers will address lawn management, watering, fertilizing and composting.

A slogan expressing "clean up Snyder" will be unveiled and its designer, a Snyder High School senior, will receive a $225 scholarship donated by Snyder National Bank, American State Bank and West Texas State Bank.

Those attending will be eligible for door prizes. A mulching mower will also be given away.

Area experiences first significant rain of year

Some parts of the county received their most significant rainfall so far this year last night and early today.

Residents near Dunn reported 1.15 inches by 9 a.m. A few miles away, residents near Ira received three-quarters of an inch.

As of 11:30, Snyder had received just .56 of an inch of rainfall from the rains that began last night.

Snyder received .24 of an inch of rainfall prior to 7 a.m. today and .32 of an inch between 7 and 11:30.

Today's rain brings the total to 3.57 inches for the year, according to the water pump and filter plant.

At this time last year, Snyder had received 8.26 inches.

Hermleigh received a half-inch last night and this morning with a little hail mixed in.

Polar received .25 of an inch, while Camp Springs and the area just north of Snyder reported .40 of an inch.

East of Snyder received .60 of an inch and Loyd Mountain received .45 inches of rain.

Fluvanna did not receive enough to measure.

Weather forecasts call for the moisture to move out of the area later in the day.

IISD trustees take no action on school finance resolution

Ira public school trustees took no action on a resolution in support of Propositions 1, 2 and 3 during their April board meeting Tuesday.

The constitutional amendments would allow some tax funds to be shifted from rich districts to poor ones, would call for funding for future mandates, and financing for school facilities. Early voting began Monday on the amendments. The election is May 1.

"Basically, the board feels that until we see some enabling legislation to see what the impact will be on our school, we can't support the resolution," said Ira Superintendent Rick Howard.

Howard said a Town Hall Meeting concerning the amendments has been tentatively set for April 26. The time and exact location are pending.

In other business, the board also took no action on a resolution to seek bids for construction of a concession stand. Trustees did approve a resolution to seek bids for fuel, food service, athletic, instructional, janitorial and office supplies for 1993-94.

Named to a budget committee Tuesday were trustees Keith Clements and Darryl Calley, parents Lois Haynes and Rodney Josey, teachers Becky Hudgins and Linda Gartman, principal Jane Matlock, business manager Joee Gainer and Howard.

The committee will begin holding meetings next week to consider teacher requests for 1993-94.

Also named was a personnel screening committee. Those members are Martha Ezra, Tim Mebane, Debra Brown, Richard Long, Denby Cheney, Larry Collom, board members Gwen Cumbie and Doug White, and Matlock and Howard.

In other business, the board approved 42 transfer requests and authorized the administration to accept subsequent transfers. Trustees also approved bills and set a special meeting to canvass election returns for the May 1 school board election for May 3 at 7:30 p.m.

All board members were present Tuesday. The next regular meeting of the board is set for 7:30 p.m. May 13.

Nobel laureates sing praises of super collider in Capitol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of America's leading physicists are warning that high-energy physics research will come to a virtual standstill if Congress kills the super collider.

Supporters of the giant atom smasher brought together seven Nobel Prize-winning physicists and other top scientists Tuesday to tout the merits of the embattled project.

The laureates' meeting with Vice President Al Gore and an earlier news conference constituted a preemptive strike by collider enthusiasts in advance of the congressional fight expected in June. Opponents have said they will seek to terminate the project when the appropriations bill containing its funding reaches the House floor.

Foes of the collider, estimated to cost $10 billion to construct, oppose it on the grounds that it diverts dollars from other institutions.

Some have criticized the collider question its scientific merit — especially at a time when the national economy is struggling.

But the physicists reiterated their theme that the expense of the huge particle accelerator is a small price to pay for the knowledge and technological spinoffs it will generate.

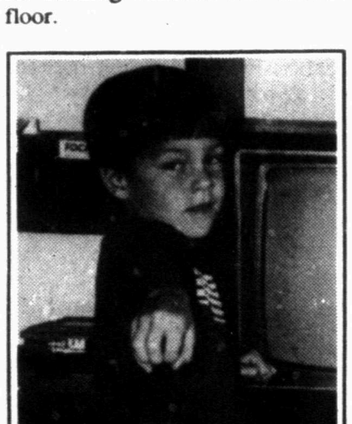

"Basically, the importance of the super collider, when you all boil it down to a single phrase, is to continue the process of answering the fundamental question of science: Why is the world the way it is?" said Steven Weinberg, a 1979 Nobel laureate, author and University of Texas physicist.

Without the collider, Weinberg added, "The process of science toward an understanding of the deepest level of nature just comes to an end here in the late 20th century."

Scientists hope to learn more about the fundamentals of matter by colliding beams of subatomic particles at near-light speeds in the atom smasher's 54-mile underground tunnel. The project, under construction south of Dallas, is now expected to be completed in 2002.

"To many, the SSC seems like an expensive luxury in times of fiscal crisis, terribly abstract research with unpredictable utility in times of national stress," said Leon Lederman, a 1988 Nobel laureate, author and physicist at the Illinois Institute of Technology.

But Lederman cautioned that in addition to devastating America's high-energy physics community, cancellation of the collider could deter young people from going into the field.

Under school funding plan...

13 school districts may have to increase property taxes

AUSTIN (AP) — Only 13 school districts would have to raise property taxes to meet a minimum rate under a plan for redistributing some local tax money from wealthier to poorer school districts, a state lawmaker said.

Rep. Libby Linebarger said only 13 out of 1,048 school districts in Texas would have to raise property taxes. No schools in Scurry County were on the list.

Rep. Linebarger, head of the House Public Education Committee, released her version of a bill showing generally how money would be distributed if a share-the-wealth constitutional amendment on the May 1 ballot is approved by voters.

The ballot proposal would authorize the redistribution of some school property tax money to help meet a Texas Supreme Court order to equalize funding among property-rich and property-poor school districts. The court has set a June 1 deadline for lawmakers to come up with a plan or face the cutoff of state education funding. Schools rely on state aid and property taxes.

Ms. Linebarger's plan, which is pending in her committee, does not include specific funding figures for each school. Leaders have not finally agreed on how much state money to put into public education for the next two years.

But it gives a general outline, including an 86-cent required minimum tax rate per $100 property valuation. That's four cents over the current rate in single or multi-county education districts which now are used to shift property tax money among school districts.

The Supreme Cout has ruled unconstitutional the current system, saying it wasn't approved by voters. The May 1 ballot proposal would amend the state constitution to allow tax fund redistribution through the county districts or statewide.

Ms. Linebarger's plan would eliminate multi-county education districts.

A total of 76 school districts would have money redistributed within their counties, and another 40 would send money to the state for redistribution. The other school districts would benefit from the redistribution, according to Ms. Linebarger, D-Manchaca.

While the minimum tax rate would go up, the basic allotment per student would go down, from the current $2,400 to $2,300, under Ms. Linebarger's proposal. But she said poorer school districts generally could make up that loss through additional state matching funds for taxing over 86 cents. Richer districts also could tax above the minimum, but they would not receive as much in matching funds as poor ones.

School districts that currently tax below 86 cents and would be required to raise rates by up to 4 cents, according to Linebarger, are: San Vicente, Brewster County; Rocksprings, Edwards County; Morgan Mill, Erath County; Crowell, Foard County; Tom Bean, Grayson County; Marshall, Harrison County; Karnes City, Karnes County; Lometa, Lampasas County; Vysehrad, Lavaca County; Cameron, Milam County; Leakey, Real County; Throckmorton, Throckmorton County; and Centerville, Trinity County.

Ms. Linebarger said her measure also would give local taxpayers more say over their tax rates by changing rollback elections. Currently, voters may petition to have taxes rolled back if school districts increase taxes by more than 8 cents. Her bill would do away with the petition requirement and lower the trigger to 6 cents.

An opponent of the share-the-wealth ballot proposal, Dallas businessman Tom Pauken of the Texans Against Robin Hood Taxes, said, "We already know that at an 82-cent level, local property taxes have risen substantially under Robin Hood One.

I find it hard to believe that under an 86-cent taxing level, under what I would call Robin Hood Two, that somehow property taxes will not rise for most homeowners throughout the state," he said.

Goodwin talks to students, inmates

SPEAKER — Joan Goodwin, informations specialist for the Texas Employment Commission's Project RIO, speaks to junior high students in Mrs. Beard's classroom about drugs and crime. (SDN Staff Photo)

As a licensed chemical dependency counselor and public speaker, Joan Goodwin spoke to students at Snyder Junior High jail Tuesday and inmates at the Price Daniel Unit today.

An information specialist for the Texas Employment Commission's Project RIO, a statewide initiative assisting Texas parolees to successfully reintergrate into society through employment, Goodwin travels the state. She promotes Project RIO to civic and business groups, prison inmates and students.

"I was here last November and I was supposed to be back in February but our schedule has been so busy I'm just now getting here," Goodwin explained.

Goodwin said one would be surprised at how young students reand crime. "I received a letter from a young girl that thanked me for talking to her group. She said it gave her the courage to tell someone about a friend of hers that was using drugs.

"I tell them like it is. You have to not be afraid of someone calling you a snitch...you have to love someone enough and care enough to tell on them. I also tell them where drugs and crime lead and that is to trouble, prison, hospitals and even the graveyard."

Goodwin admits to her audiences that she was into a life of drugs and crime for 20 years. "I took my first hit of speed at age 13," she told a group of seventh and eighth grade students.

She was sentenced to 10 years term in February of 1983. She was released in October of 1985, and entered a correctional facility. In 1986 she started working at the facility, which led her where she is today. "I feel driven to help people," she said.

According to Goodwin, since October of 1985 more than 89,000 parolees have gone through Project RIO and more than 60,000 of those have found work.

"It has been proven that the sooner parolees go to work the better. If they find work then they don't turn to crime to support themselves," she said.

Goodwin said that the project teaches them skills such as how to apply for jobs, put together resumes and present themselves in a positive light in an interview.

"But we need more prevention. It is much easier to prevent a person from becoming a criminal than to rehabilitate one. That's why I like talking to students," she said.

She said if she had one message to pass on it would be, "This is your life, not a dress rehersal, so you better live your life while you have the opportunity."

Goodwin will travel to Sweetwater on Thursday to talk with civic groups.

Senators ok change in election method

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas senators voted for a judicial election system that is designed to increase the number of minority judges in nine counties.

Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, said Tuesday that the proposal would "move Texas into the 21st century in far better shape than it is in this century."

The 17-13 vote — with Democrats holding the majority — is the latest development in a partisan battle in which Republicans have shut down the Senate twice; once in a walkout and the second time by a filibuster.

The dispute is over a proposed court settlement to change the method of electing state district court judges in Bexar, Dallas, Ector, Harris, Jefferson, Lubbock, Midland, Tarrant and Travis counties.

The proposal is the result of a recent federal court panel ruling that says the current countywide system of electing judges discriminates against black and Hispanic voters because white bloc voting essentially prevents minority-backed candidates from winning.

For example, Harris County has a 42 percent minority population. But of 59 state district judges, less than 10 percent are minorities.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales and minority plaintiffs signed a proposed agreement that would divide the nine counties into smaller districts where higher concentrations of minority voters would be able to elect their candidates.

Morales asked lawmakers to endorse the proposal as he submitted it for approval by the federal court. The House has yet to consider the proposal.

Republicans would probably stand to lose a large number of judge positions under the change. Several GOP senators said the proposed settlement should be put to voters first. They also said they oppose the smaller district system because it does nothing to remove partisan politics, or high-dollar contributions in court races.

"There is no Democratic law, there is no Republican law," said Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Pasadena, in an unsuccessful attempt to amend Ellis' resolution to have non-partisan races.

Even after the vote, senators would not let the issue rest.

Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mt. Pleasant, said the action should not be taken as an official statement of the Senate because it was done as the 31-member body met as a committee.

When the Senate meets as a committee, only a majority vote is needed for consideration of a measure. But official Senate proceedings almost always require a two-thirds vote to consider a measure.

Since supporters of the settlement did not have the necessary two-thirds vote, they settled for a "committee" vote of the full Senate.

But Ellis said he tried a parliamentary maneuver to get by the two-thirds rule on March 30, and Republicans walked out.

"I would've been prepared by any means necessary to change the unfair way in which people are elected to the judiciary of Texas," he said.

East had never seen a 28-point hand before. Trying not to smile, she opened one club, strong and artificial. South's overcall of one no-trump showed at least 5-5 in any two suits. West's two diamonds was natural and indicated fewer than nine points (a debatable choice in my view). North was happy to compete with two hearts, expecting that to be one of his partner's suits. South's bid of two spades was a shock to North, but he recovered brilliantly. Knowing that East wouldn't sell out to two spades, North passed. Then over East's three no-trump (East not knowing what else to do), North "sacrificed" in four spades.

East doubled, of course, but the contract was unbeatable. South ruffed the heart lead and immediately attacked clubs. East won and switched to the spade king, but declarer won and played a second club. South's 10 tricks were the spade ace, four diamond ruffs in the dummy, four heart ruffs in hand and a club.

Note that East-West can make six no-trump or seven hearts — but only if the latter contract is played by West.

When did you last bid and make a game with a combined eight points?

Tricks are better than points

By Phillip Alder

Picking up a really powerful hand gives you a momentary glow of pleasure. But then you wonder how to steer the bidding to find out what you need to know from partner.

East suffered badly on today's deal, which was reported in New Zealand Bridge. It occurred a few years ago in beautiful Norfolk Island, which lies to the north of New Zealand.

Valenzuela rocked in 8-3 Rangers win

ARLINGTON (AP) — Fernando Valenzuela was a sensation in spring training but his regular season major league comeback got off to a stumbling start.

Valenzuela, who hadn't started a game since 1991, was rocked by the Texas Rangers, who lead the major leagues in homers and have one of baseball's most imposing lineups with the likes of Jose Canseco, Juan Gonzales, Julio Franco and Dean Palmer.

The former Cy Young winner for the Los Angeles Dodgers and more recently a member of the California Angels lasted only two and one-third innings as the Baltimore Orioles lost 8-3 to the Rangers Tuesday night.

Sitting back in a lounge chair in a black print shirt and black slacks after the beating, Valenzuela didn't try to skirt around the issue: He didn't look good and admitted it.

"I'm trying to figure out what was going wrong," he said. "I had no idea what was going on...on the mound. I just hope I get another start. If I do, I'll be ready."

The 32-year-old Valenzuela had worked hard to be ready for Tuesday night's game. Last year he played for the Jalisco Charros of the Mexican League and also pitched winter ball for the Navojoa Mayos of the Pacific League.

He signed a minor-league contract with the Orioles on Feb. 17 and made the team with a 2.65 ERA which included 15 consecutive scoreless innings.

But spring training hitters aren't the regular season hitters.

Valenzuela was tagged for five hits, including a 407-foot homer by Gary Redus. He walked two batters, served up two wild pitches and hit a batter.

"It was a bad outing," he said. "Everything I did went wrong. I think the fact I had only pitched one inning in 13 days might have hurt me. I have to pitch a lot."

In three career starts in the AL, Valenzuela has allowed 19 hits and 17 runs and has lost all three outings. The other two were with the Angels.

Mickey Hatcher, the Rangers first base coach who played with Valenzuela for the Los Angeles Dodgers, predicted, "In time he will be the Fernando of old. He just needed to get a game under his belt."

Baltimore manager Johnny Oates indicated Valenzuela will get another start.

"I'd be willing to bet he threw the ball harder than he ever did with the Dodgers," Oates said. "The adrenalin was pumping. He was throwing too hard. He just threw it all over the place."

Valenzuela is now 141-119 in the big leagues. Valenzuela hasn't had a winning season since 1985.

"I know I can still pitch," he said. "coming back is hard for me, but I know I can do it if I just don't get down on myself."

Lose 7-6 to Plainview...

Tigers' comeback falls short

PLAINVIEW — The Snyder Tigers, led by a three-run triple by junior catcher Brad Hart, rallied for four runs in the top of the seventh inning, but still came up one shy, falling to Plainview 7-6 in Tuesday District 2-4A baseball action.

Trailing 7-2, The Tigers opened the last stanza with a single by Craig Lang, who scored on consecutive walks to John Clinkinbeard, Raymond House and Chris Mitchell before Hart's 3-RBI triple.

"The kids really gave a good effort," said Snyder coach Albert Lewis. "They impressed me with the comeback. They never quit and they showed more cohesiveness than at any time in the season, so far.

"We're gradually improving."

Lang led the Snyder offense Tuesday, getting two hits in three at-bats. Curt Rinehart finished with a pair of singles in four trips to the plate.

Plainview scored three runs in the last of the first inning on a Johnny Gonzales homer that pushed in Jeremy Enriquez and Willie Martinez, taking a 3-2 advantage, then added a pair in the third, a single run in the fifth and one in the sixth for the win.

Snyder leadoff hitter John Clinkinbeard put the Tigers on the board first, singling to open the game, moving to second on a House bunt, swiping third and scoring on a passed ball.

Chris Winter made it 2-0 after being hit by a Chad Feris pitch, stealing second, and scoring on a sacrifice by Mitchell.

The Tiger bats got quiet for the next five innings. PHS pitchers allowed only three base runners in the middle innings, Brad Hart, who walked in the third, Rinehart, who slapped a sixth-inning single, and Mitchell, who was issued a free pass in the sixth.

Feris wound up striking out eight and walking five in five innings of work for the win.

House got the loss for SHS, fanning four, walking three and scattering just six hits in seven innings.

The Tigers slip to 6-15 on the season and 0-4 in loop encounters. Plainview moves to 14-7 in all games and 2-2 in district contests.

In other 2-4A games Tuesday, Frenship's B.J. Krier limited Estacado to just four hits in a 4-2 victory that gave FHS sole possession of first place in the district, and Levelland moved to 2-2 in the loop chase with a 6-1 home win over Lamesa.

Snyder is back on the road Saturday for its first meeting this season with Estacado. Sophomore Reagan Key is the planned starter for SHS against the Matadors. Saturday's tilt wraps up the first half of district play for the Tigers.

Astros rally past Montreal

MONTREAL (AP) — First came the calm, then the storm.

Ken Caminiti battled Montreal Expos relief ace Mel Rojas for 14 pitches in the 8th inning Tuesday, finally working out a walk to load the bases, and the Houston Astros used a seven-run rally to spoil the Expos' home opener, 9-6.

Andujar Cedeno followed the walk with a two-out, two-run double and Ed Taubensee added a two-run homer for Houston. Afterwards, though, it seemed the dramatic showdown between Caminiti and Rojas had sparked the Astros.

"That walk gave me the same satisfaction as my two-run double in the first inning," Caminiti said. "I fought so much for that walk."

The Astros had already scored three times to tie the game 5-5, and with first base open, Rojas said he "wasn't going to give him anything to hit."

Rojas (0-1), gave way to reliever Brian Barnes after the walk, and Barnes seemed about to get out of the jam when he got pinch hitter Chris James to hit into a home-to-first double play.

Cedeno, however, then came through with his hit, and Taubensee capped the rally with his first home run of the season.

"I guess (Expos manager) Felipe Alou figured he had the horses in the bullpen to hold the lead," Astros manager Art Howe said.

One inning earlier, with his team in front 5-2, Alou followed the advice of pitching coach Joe Kerrigan and lifted starting pitcher Ken Hill, even though the right-hander had allowed just four hits.

The uprising made a winner of Brian Williams (1-0), who allowed one run in three innings.

Orosco nabs 8th at state lifting meet

COLLEGE STATION — Snyder senior Gilbert Orosco placed eighth in his weight class at Saturday's State Class 4A-5A powerlifting meet here.

Orosco, who competed in the 165-pound class, had a combined 1,145-pound lift, his personal-best by 20 pounds.

"It was an unbelievable finish," said SHS lifting coach Joe Granato, "especially when you consider the quality of the competition.

"It was real close the whole way. A matter of between 10 and 30 pounds separated second and eighth place."

Orosco, who was a second-team All-District 2-4A selection as a fullback for the Tiger football team, is the first SHS powerlifter to make the state meet.

Kennedy enjoying 6-1 start

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — At 38, Kevin Kennedy is finally making a name for himself as a big league rookie.

The Texas Rangers manager, who spent 16 seasons in the minor leagues — eight catching and eight coaching — has led Texas to a 6-1 start in his first week as a big league skipper.

"This may sound cocky, but, no, I'm not surprised," Kennedy said. "I'm here to win and that's what we're going to do. We've got the players to execute the kind of game I want. I think we're going to surprise some people, but not me."

When Kennedy was hired as the Rangers' manager on Oct. 26, 1992, his name didn't register with the casual fan because he never played or managed in the major leagues.

But Kennedy was known as a top managerial prospect in baseball's inner circle, and Texas drew high praise for its choice. Kennedy has never had a losing season or finished below second in nine seasons as a minor league manager and major league coach.

"I didn't come here to learn how to manage. I came here to win," Kennedy declared.

Kennedy said he's enjoying the challenge.

"I get a better hotel suite than I did as a minor league coach," he said. "Once the game starts, baseball's baseball. It's just that now I've got the best players in the world."

District judge has removed himself from skinhead case

FORT WORTH (AP) — The much criticized presiding judge in the trial of a skinhead convicted in the racially motivated slaying of a black man has removed himself from further involvement in he case.

State District Judge Everett Young recused himself on Tuesday, less than three hours after Brosky's attorneys filed a formal "suggestion" that Young turn the proceedings over to someone else.

The judge was to hear legal arguments this week on whether Christopher William Brosky, 18, should go to trial on organized crime and conspiracy charges.

The district attorney's office brought the new charges after black leaders exploded in rage over the 10-year probated sentence Brosky drew after being convicted.

Young said Tuesday he had transferred the case to State District Judge Bill Burdock, but declined to comment on why he stepped down.

Brosky's attorneys had asked that Young step down in favor of a judge "who has not been publicly subjected to the pressures of the community."

The petition by Brosky's attorneys noted a stream of marches, protests, prayers, editorials, letters to the editor, political speeches and signs criticizing the judge and calling for his disbarment.

Specifically, Young came under attack for not dismissing the whole jury panel after defense attorneys excluded two African-Americans, assuring that an all-Anglo jury would decided the racially-charged case.

Police arrested a 36-year-old woman from the 2900 block of Avenue X at 10:05 a.m. on a city warrant for failure to appear. She was transported to city court and later released.

At 2:06 p.m., police arrested a 23-year-old woman in the 600 block of 25th Street on a city warrant for failure to appear and Abilene DPS warrants for speeding and failure to appear.

Police arrested a 52-year-old man at 8:33 p.m. in the 2700 block of Avenue I for public intoxication.

Joe Hammit contacted police at 8:14 a.m. in reference to someone damaging his vehicle while it was parked at Snyder High School. A report for Class A criminal mischief was filed.

At 3:31 p.m., Barbara Tamiez reported damage to a storage building. Police submitted a report for Class B criminal mischief.

A woman came to the police department at 7 p.m. in reference to some problems she was having with another subject. A report for Class C assault/family violence was submitted.

At 7:54 p.m., a woman contacted police from the 2900 block of Avenue M to report a man creating a disturbance. A report for Class C assault/family violence was filed.

Waco standoff source of black humor

WACO (AP) — The six-week siege at the Mount Carmel religious compound remains deadly serious business. But from loving words about a black Camaro to the nasty sound of a dentist's drill, it's [illegible]

From subtle cracks during FBI briefing to jokes told around town, the strain of the continuing standoff between heavily armed religious cult members and hundreds of law enforcement officers has its lighter moments.

And many of the best lines come from a seemingly unlikely source — poker-faced FBI agents delivering daily news updates.

For example, FBI Special Agent Bob Ricks told an eager assembly of reporters Tuesday about one of cult leader David Koresh's favorite topics — his Chevy hot rod [illegible] to be Jesus Christ is terribly fond of his chariot, Ricks said without cracking a grin.

"He talks about his black Camaro, which is very close to his heart. Apparently, it has a 427-cubic-inch engine. It has Holley carbs."

When a mild earthquake hit southeast of San Antonio last week, Ricks reported without a smile that Koresh thought his prophecy of doom finally had come true.

"They were very excited about the earthquake," he said. "When it was learned it was down in South Texas, they decided maybe it wasn't as significant as they thought."

One joke making the rounds in [illegible] ice cream, Mount Carmel, it's full of nuts and won't come out of the carton.

News reporters covering the siege since Feb. 28 aren't immune.

After cult members hung a banner from a window of their compound saying, "God help us we want the press," one TV crew hung a banner in response: "God help us we are the press."

Meanwhile, Ricks — a salt-and-pepper haired agent who heads the FBI's Oklahoma City office — has become something of a celebrity with his dry wit and occasionally sarcastic manner.

Asked early in the siege about the prolonged religious conversations Koresh favored, Ricks replied: "We do have our Bible [illegible]"

On one of the cult leader's questions to the FBI: "He talks about what we think of all the crazy people inside and what they're doing."

On Koresh's view of his own situation: "Mr. Koresh in our conversations bemoaned his fate, that he was stuck in this stinking compound."

Special Agent Dick Swensen, a sometime FBI spokesman, favors the blunt approach.

Railey's case heads to jury

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A defense lawyer urged jurors today to ignore the press and the pressure and acquit former Dallas minister Walker Railey of attempted murder.

"It is because of the pressure, slander, libel, yellow journalism, profit motive, greed and sensationalism that lives have been destroyed," Roy Barrera Jr. said in his closing argument.

Insisting the state failed miserably to prove Railey tried to kill his wife, Berrera declared:

"Would you bet your life on this evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt? You'd stake your life on it? I don't believe so."

Opposing lawyers swapped final statements and prepared to surrender the case to the jury. Railey, 45, faces up to 20 years in prison if convicted.

The state maintains Railey, infatuated with a female psychologsist, tried to kill his wife six years ago and cover up the crime with a counterfeit alibi.

Railey's legal woes took another turn today when he was served with papers requesting a legal separation from his wife, Peggy.

Dallas attorney Bill Arnold, who represents Mrs. Railey's parents, said the lawsuit was filed Tuesday in Los Angeles, where Railey has been living.

The petition also includes an order to freeze Railey's assets, except for necessary living expenses, for 30 days.

Testifying under oath for the first time, Railey admitted Monday he devised a phony story but said he wanted only to conceal his affair with Lucy Papillon.

"I did not strangle my wife," he said. "I do not know who strangled my wife."

Mrs. Railey, 44, survived, but suffered irreversible brain damage.

He instructed opposing attorneys to resume this morning.

After Railey's surprise testimony, jurors no longer must determine if but why Railey lied to police and others about his activities and whereabouts the night his wife was attacked.

He said he was camouflaging a midnight liaison from his wife. Prosecutors say he was hiding a murder attempt on his wife.

The assault occurred two days after Railey, wearing a bulletproof vest under his robes, preached the Easter sermon at First United Methodist Church of Dallas.

Between services that Sunday morning, someone slipped the sixth in a series of threatening letters under a church office door.

The state contends now that Railey wrote those letters on a church typewriter and sent them to himself so he would be a martyr and not a suspect after his wife was murdered.

Leading off final arguments Tuesday, Howard Wilson, an assistant district attorney from Dallas, branded Railey a lying, coldblooded charlatan.

"He got on the stand and cried those crocodile tears as he talked about Peggy ... but the only tears he shed were for your benefit," he told the jury.

For the defense, Barrera argued that Railey's only crime was adultery and the bungled attempt to conceal it from his wife.

"We are not here to render judgment on sin," he said.

After a series of sarcastic references to Ms. Papillon as "Lucy babe" and Railey's "little mistress," prosecutor Wilson turned to Railey and said:

"He is the one for whom the guilt falls. He is the one who should be punished."

White House ups pressure to get GOP ok on jobs bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is increasing the pressure on a few Republican lawmakers as it tries to set President Clinton's $16.3 billion jobs bill past a GOP roadblock in the Senate.

The president avoided partisan jousting in his public comments Tuesday but fired off written statements to the home states of six Republican senators urging them to "break the gridlock in the Senate."

He called on the senators to put "constituents back to work" by breaking party ranks to end a Republican filibuster that has blocked a Senate vote on the jobs bill.

At the same time, White House spokesman George Stephanopoulos rattled off a list of specific building projects and summer jobs that he said would be jeopardized if the jobs package is not enacted.

"We need a jobs package now to make sure that this recovery does happen, to make sure that this economy creates jobs," the spokesman said.

Clinton was expected to campaign for his proposal during a meeting with mayors today on summer jobs. On Tuesday, he made only a quick pitch for the jobs package while avoiding direct criticism of the Republicans.

At a conference on education and training, Clinton said the package would create 700,000 summer jobs, "including many thousands that have a strong education component so our young people can be learning and working at the same time."

Kuwaitis happy about Bush visit

KUWAIT (AP) - When the arrival of former President Bush was delayed by a day, Kuwaitis weren't disappointed - the delay just gave them more time to prepare a lavish greeting for the man who led the fight against Iraq.

The schedule change resulted from an airplane malfunction that delayed Bush's special Kuwaiti Airways flight.

Fiyad al-Sultan, 43, a supermarket manager, spent Tuesday collecting more Kuwaiti signatures on an American flag he hoped to give the former president. Thousands have signed.

Hotels and houses are flying Kuwaiti and American flags, and large posters of Bush adorn downtown street corners.

Police and the army have been assigned to crowd-control duties to deal with tens of thousands of Kuwaitis expected to line the airport road this afternoon to cheer Bush's motorcade.

Al-Sutan's 66-year-old mother will be among them.

"She wants to set up a tent there from tonight," he said Tuesday.

Kuwaitis revere Bush for his leadership in the 1991 campaign that liberated the emirate from seven months of Iraqi occupation.

Although he was the prime mover in assembling the 32-nation force to deal with Saddam, this is Bush's first trip to the oil-rich emirate.

He was prepared to enjoy the fanfare, too. "It's going to be a wonderful trip," he told reporters before departing Houston.

Bush is accompanied on the three-day visit by his wife, Barbara, their son Neil and his wife, Sharon, and two other daughters-in-law.

Former Secretary of State James A. Baker III and former White House chief of staff John Sununu also were making the trp.

They will be the special guests of Kuwait's emir, Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah. Bush is to receive Kuwait's highest civilian honor, the Murarak al'Kabeer medal, which is named for a former emir.

Deputies work theft

Sheriff's deputies noted one theft and several other incidents Tuesday.

At 9:55 a.m., Dan Derryberry of Pool Well Service advised the sheriff's office of a theft of oil field equipment at SACROC Tract, two miles southwest of Union.

Later in the evening, at 7, Pool reported a suspicious gray van with a trailer, driving around on the lease roads, three miles north of Union, just east of the old El Paso gas plant. Deputies checked the area but were unable to locate the vehicle.

At 10:10 a.m., an Allsup's clerk in Hermleigh reported a fire in the median one mile west of the convenience store.

Also, at 2:20 p.m., Bob Doty advised he found two rolls of three-eighths inch wire on Road 333, south of the college.

Jury deliberations continue in L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Marines practiced storming a city and South Central was urged to "chill" as a federal jury in a barricaded courthouse continued to weigh the fate of the four policemen in the Rodney King beating case.

The jury was to return for a fifth day of deliberations today.

Sgt. Stacey Koon, Officers Laurence Powell and Theodore Briseno and former Officer Timothy Wind are accused of depriving King of his civil rights in the 1991 beating videotaped by an onlooker. They could get 10 years in prison.

The four white officers were acquitted April 29 on state assault charges in the black motorist's beating, touching off riots that killed 54 people.

This time, authorities put up 3-foot concrete barriers at the courthouse and fenced off a parking lot for a police staging area.

About 1,000 Marines at Camp Pendleton, 80 miles away, stormed a mock town in an assault exercise, and a base spokesman said a unit stood ready to go to Los Angeles if needed. About 600 National Guardsmen trained at area armories.

U.S. District Judge John Davies admonished media sketch artists for being "too accurate for comfort" in their portrayals of the anonymous jury.

"Any drawings of jurors or alternates must contain minimal detail and must not render them recognizable," the judge ordered.

Meanwhile, the message from politicians, police and celebrities was to "chill," or keep calm.

"Let's stop the rumors," Mayor Tom Bradley told about 100 members of Neighbor to Neighbor, a door-to-door campaign to defuse tensions.

"Rumors have been spreading like wildfire," the mayor said of the stories that had a verdict had been reached and that gang assaults were planned.

In South Central Los Angeles, where the trouble started last year, U.S. Rep. Maxine Waters handed out letters saying, "It's time to chill."

"If you take to the streets with a Molotov cocktail in your hand, a gun in your belt or a brick ready to throw, you give the police the legal right to kill you," the letters read.

A music video titled "Chill," featuring Arnold Schwarzenegger and Arsenio Hall, was introduced Monday on the school district's TV station.

See urologist for cystitis therapy

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please comment on the most effective treatment for cystitis. My friend has suffered from this condition for quite some time now, has been seen by several doctors, and none has suggested an effective treatment. She's 80 and otherwise in good health.

DEAR READER: Cystitis is bladder inflammation, usually caused by bacteria, that leads to painful and frequent urination with or without blood in the urine. In most instances, cystitis is treated with antibiotics; which one depends on the type of bacteria causing the infection.

A rare form, interstitial cystitis, is not caused by bacterial infection and is treated with techniques to stretch the bladder wall and prevent spasm. This may be your friend's problem.

Or she may be suffering from the symptoms of cystitis without having the condition at all: As women age, the bladder opening (urethra) may become narrowed and inelastic due to post-menopausal hormone deficiency. This can cause urgency, frequency, painful urination, and other symptoms that can be relieved by using estrogen cream applied to the bladder opening and surrounding structures.

In my opinion, your friend should be examined by a urologist who will do a biopsy to establish a diagnosis. Then the specialist can recommend appropriate therapy.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Bladder and Urinary Tract Infections." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have polycythemia. I've had blood drawn and am now taking hydroxyurea to bring down my count. I'd like information on the prospects of a cure or at least control of my disease.

DEAR READER: Polycythemia means too many red cells, causing blood that is too thick and symptoms such as weakness, headache, lightheadedness, a bleeding tendency and shortness of breath. There are two types: primary and secondary.

Primary (polycythemia vera) is a major blood disorder caused by an overproduction of red corpuscles by the bone marrow. The cause is unknown. The condition often progresses to anemia and leukemia. Therapy usually consists of blood-letting and medicine, such as hydroxyurea, which retards the formation of red blood cells. With treatment, the [illegible] survival up to 25 years.

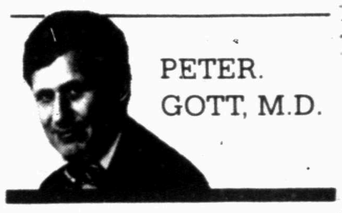

Secondary polycythemia is due to other underlying diseases (such as chronic lung disorders and certain tumors) that must be treated to lower the red blood cell count. Thus, the prognosis depends on the basic disease causing the polycythemia.

Polycythemia must be considered in any person whose red blood cells comprise more than 55 percent of the total blood volume (the usual figure is 40 to 50 percent).

Judging from your treatment, I conclude that you probably have polycythemia vera. You appear to be receiving appropriate therapy. Be sure to follow your doctor's instructions with respect to your medicine and suitable follow-up visits.

Computer maker picks suburb in Texas for expansion site

AUSTIN (AP) — Dell Computer Corp. has selected Round Rock for its expansion site after the city offered a multi-million dollar incentive package.

With sales of $2 billion last year, Dell has become the fifth-largest computer maker in the world. The company employs about 4,200 people in Austin.

Construction on the first of two 300,000 square foot buildings could start in a few weeks and be completed in one year, company officials said.

Eventually, Dell is expected to house more than 2,600 of its employees within two years at the expansion site.

To land Dell, the Round Rock city council approved an incentives package that will enable the company to use $50 million in tax-free bond financing, share sales tax revenue that it generates from its Texas sales and receive property tax abatements for 20 years.

City officials said Monday the agreement would reduce city property taxes for all taxpayers in their community.

The city's share of Dell's sales tax revenue would reduce Round Rock's net property tax rate by more than 26 percent by the year 2005, even if Dell's sales remain flat, city officials said.

"In this partnership the citizens of Round Rock are truly the big winners," said Round Rock Mayor Mike Robinson.

The council voted unanimously for the incentives package. After the vote, nearly 100 people in the council chamber gave Dell executives a standing ovation.

The company has not said where it intends to locate, but real estate sources said Dell has contracted to buy a sizable tract of land on the east side of Interstate 35 near Williamson County Road 170.

The accord with the Round Rock city council came three days after the personal computer maker said it had broken off negotiations with neighboring Austin because of an impasse over proposed incentives.

Dell Chief Financial Officer Tom Meredith said Dell considered a variety of places in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado and other states before choosing Round Rock.

No leads surface in killings of two witness for the FBI

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Authorities say they've uncovered no solid leads in last week's separate shooting deaths of two federal witnesses who testified against hitmen in a Mexican drug gang.

"We have no idea at this time that these deaths are connected to their testimony," FBI agent Wayne Smith said Tuesday. "There is a possibility and we are concerned about that."

Both Norberto Hernandez, 25, and Armando Barrera, 28, had testified in the murder trials of two hitmen in the Juan Garcia Abrego drug-trafficking ring.

"Their deaths deeply concern us," Smith said. "We have no reason to believe any other witnesses are being sought. However, we have taken steps to inform other witnesses of what has happened."

Both victims had declined offers to join the federal witness protection program, law enforcement sources told The Brownsville Herald.

Garcia Abrego, 47, whose operations are based across the border from Brownsville in Matamoros, Mexico, has been indicted in the United States on 131 counts of drug trafficking and money laundering. He also is wanted in Mexico.

Hernandez, a used-car salesman, was found dead Friday evening after two men went with him on a test drive.

"We will investigate all possibilities," Brownsville Police Sgt. William Kingsbury said.

The Cameron County Sheriff's Department is investigating the homicide of Barrera, whose body was discovered Thursday morning in a residential area southeast of Brownsville.

Smith said the FBI would share any information it develops with the two local agencies.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Patterson, who successfully prosecuted hitmen Miguel Botello, 35, and Arcadio Perez, 32, said the two witnesses may have been killed for reasons unrelated to their testimony.

"They were both people who hung around the underworld, so there are an infinite number of reasons they could have met their deaths," Patterson said.

Another federal witness who testified in the trials said the latest deaths prove the power of the Abrego ring.

"The witnesses used by the government of this country ... against the Juan Garcia Abrego organization now know the danger," said Oscar Lopez Olivarez, a former lieutenant for Abrego.

Hernandez testified last year against Botello and Perez, who were eventually convicted of killing Gerardo Luis Quintanilla on behalf of the drug ring.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our son has entered the first grade and has befriended a lot of his peers. These children and their parents, some of whom are complete strangers to us, often phone and invite our son over to their homes to play. We try to get to know as many of these people as possible, but sometimes kids will invite him over before we've even met them and their families.

When this happens, we say that he can't go, and sometimes explain that he can't play there because we don't know them. Some parents have been offended by this reply and others have then suggested that I come over with him.

In this day and age, we carefully instruct our children to beware of strangers. How can anyone expect us to send our young children to spend an afternoon in a stranger's home? It's time to make it a practice to invite the child and a parent over on the first visit.

I hope you can print this. It might protect some unsuspecting parents and children.

BETTER CAUTIOUS THAN SORRY

DEAR BETTER CAUTIOUS: Your vigilance is commendable, and a good example. I hope you are willing to reciprocate the hospitality and invite the mothers of your son's playmates to investigate the suitability of your home as well.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old, happily married woman with a 2-year-old daughter. My husband, "Burt," is 29. He just received a telephone call from an old girlfriend who now lives in Indiana. (We live in Florida.)

"Betty" called to tell Burt that he is going to be subpoenaed for a blood test. She says that Burt is one of the men who could be the father of her daughter, who is nearly 7 years old.

All this happened before I met Burt. Betty said that she hates doing this, but this is the only way she can get welfare — and they won't help her until they find the father of her child.

My question: What are Burt's rights in Florida and Indiana? And what right does Betty have walking into a man's life after seven years and saying, "You are my daughter's daddy, therefore you are responsible for this child"?

I could understand it if she had just had a baby — but after seven years, it's ridiculous. We have our own life, our own child, and we can't start paying child support for a child we just now heard about.

Burt is a decent and responsible man, and this will really turn our lives upside down if he finds out this little girl is his daughter. The mother obviously never needed welfare until now. Please help. What a ridiculous mess!

FRUSTRATED IN FLORIDA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Sorry, the only person who can help you and Burt is a lawyer. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I have been told there is an organization where people can send old, soiled and torn American flags, and they will be disposed of properly.

I wasn't sure of the name of that organization, so I wrote a letter to the Veterans of Foreign Wars — the chapter nearest me — and I never received a reply.

Do you know if there is such an organization?

PATRIOTIC IN CAMDEN, MAINE

DEAR PATRIOTIC: Yes, there is such an organization. Contact your local chapter of The American Legion. It will accept soiled and damaged American flags and dispose of them in a dignified, respectful ceremony. And thank you for caring enough about "Old Glory" to make sure she is disposed of properly.

Nudists' plan cleanup day

HOUSTON (AP) — A nudists' group that has bared a plan to "adopt" a Gulf of Mexico beach for a trash cleanup may rile some residents along the Southeast Texas Coastline.

The Texas General Land Office, which sponsors the adopt-a-beach cleanup program, said there's no dress code for any group interested in cleaning up the coastline.

"It's fine with us," agency spokesman Ron Calhoun sad. "We can't legally tell people what they can and can't do."

But such naked truths aren't likely to sit well with some residents near Bolivar Beach.

More than 100 nudists plan to participate in the annual Land Office-sponsored cleanup April 24.

"Nudists have been going there for years," sad Rusty Haway, editor of the national nudist publication Free Nudist Review. "It's such an isolated place."

Haway said that when he heard about the cleanup, he wanted to help organize nudists in the effort.

For the past five years, nudist groups have been going to the beach once a month for vollyball games and barbecuing in the buff.

But nudists keep a sign posted to warn off other people who prefer to see volleyball players in jerseys.

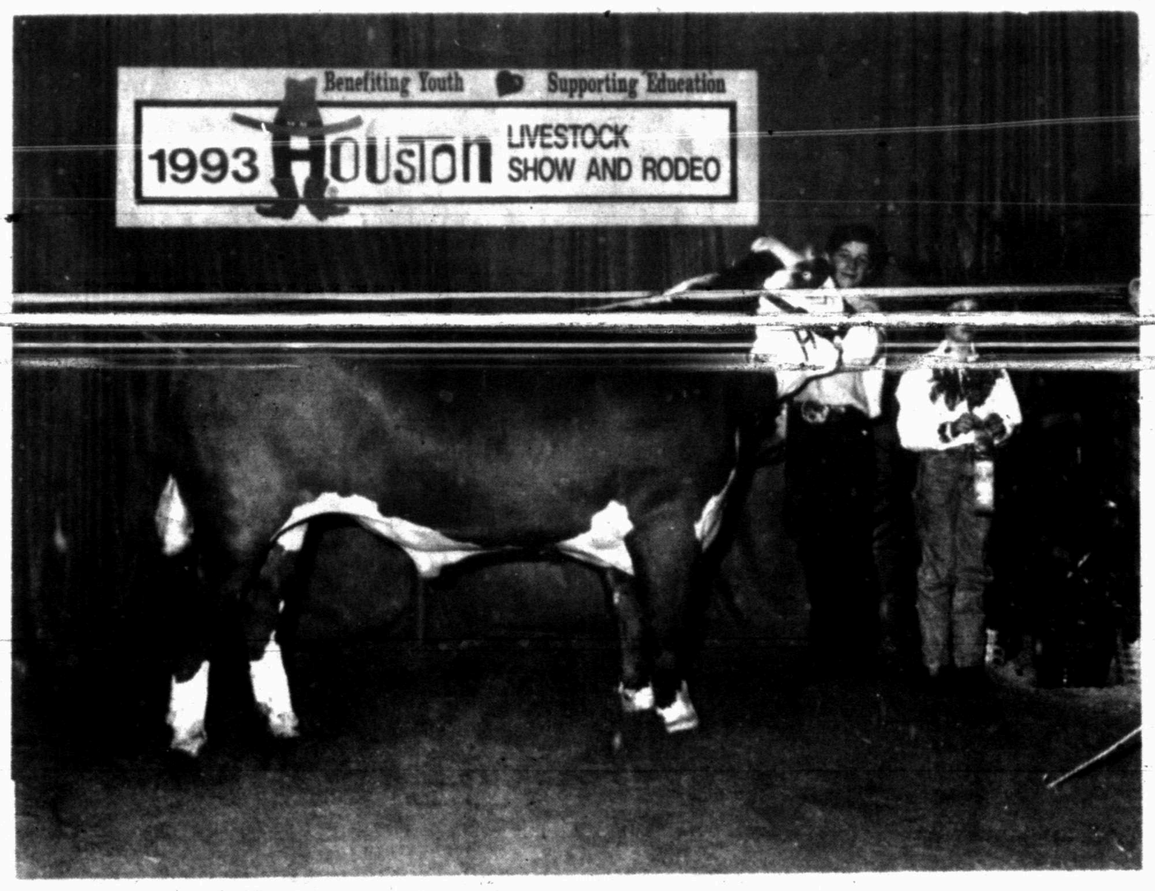

Bolivar Beach is located northeast of U.S. 87 in Jefferson County.

A nudist since 1979, Haway described nudism as "an easy going lifestyle" that allows others who have people with similar beliefs to socialize with one another.

Haway estimates that there are "3,000 card-carrying nudists" in Texas. He said he has sentout invitations for them to join the cleanup.

Only two Houston-area resorts are listed for nudists only. They are the Live Oak Ranch in the Brenham area northwest of Houston and The Natural Horizon outside Needville.

In 1986, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro began the adopt-a-beach program, which occurs three times a year.

McCartney's concert still set for Saturday in L.A.

LAS VEGAS — Paul McCartney says he's aware of the tension in Los Angeles as a verdict is awaited in the Rodney King case but doesn't plan to cancel his weekend show because of it.

"I'm keeping out of it," said McCartney, who plays Anaheim stadium on Saturday. "It's an American affair. I'm just a British guy showing up."

McCartney said Tuesday he has seen the videotape of policemen beating King and has read about the case. But he's keeping his opinion to himself.

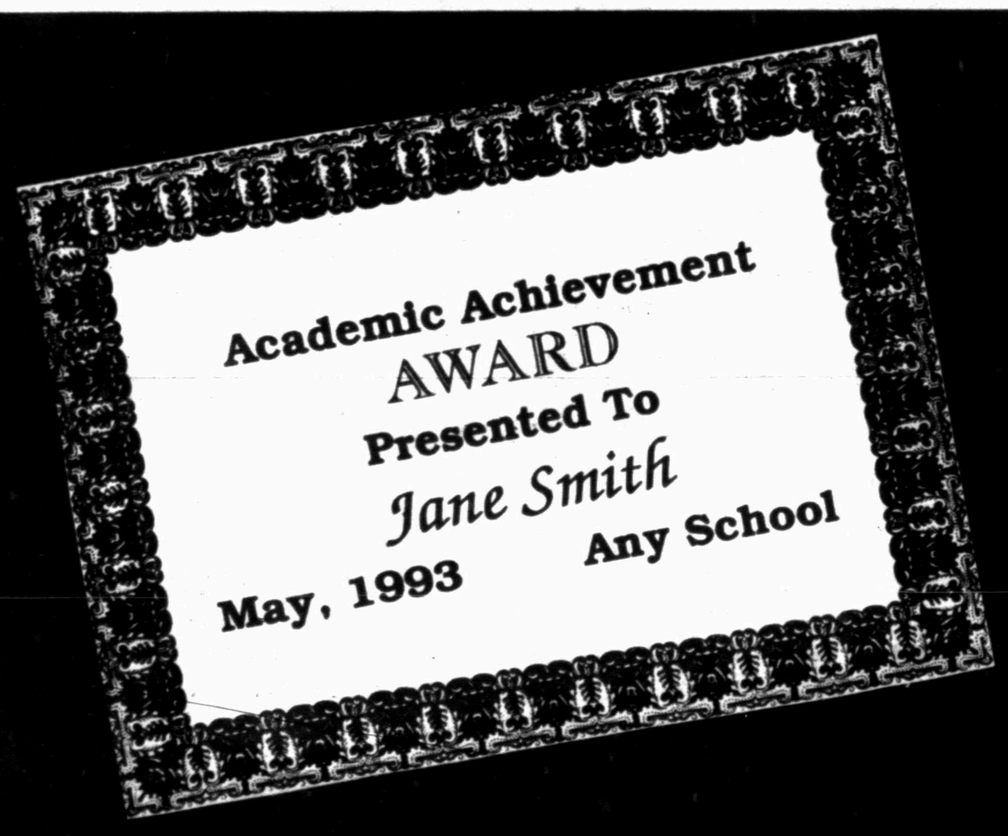

"As an outsider, I know what I thought of seeing the tape," he said. "But I don't know enough about it to say."

The former Beatle kicks off his 19-stop tour Wednesday in Las Vegas.
