PIONEER'S END RECALLS EARLY VERNON DAYS

By A. C. McCONNELL,
Staff Correspondent.

VERNON, Oct. 31.—Lee N. Perkins, 76, And a native of Virginia, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. R. Boyd, San Antonio, while visiting there. The body was brought to Vernon and buried in East View cemetery.

Mr. Perkins was a pioneer of Vernon, having came here in 1880. When the county was organized in 1881 he was elected county clerk, serving until 1890, and was afterwards county tax assessor for four years. Prior to coming to Vernon in 1880, he was a citizen of Montague county and was sheriff and tax collector there.

Mr. Perkins served through the Civil war, joining the forces of Stonewall Jackson when a lad. He lost a leg in the service at Winchester, Va. He participated in nearly all of the important engagements.

Mr. Perkins taught the first school in Vernon in a one-room shack on the public square. Mr. Perkins said he was forced to move the school from the square to a location in the south part of Vernon because the cowboys made so much noise when they came to town by shooting up the village that the scholars were disturbed.

During his tenure as county clerk, a petition was presented on August 7, 1884, and filed on October 15, 1884, with the county clerk, signed by 161 names, representing themselves to be citizens of Hardeman county, to the commissioners' court of Wilbarger county, "desiring the honorable body of Wilbarger to organize Hardeman county." Hardeman county and Ford county were then the same, and the citizens living south of Pease river were oposed to the organization of Hardeman county.

While Mr. Perkins was temporarily absent from his office some of the opposing citizens visited the county clerk's office and invited the deputy clerk to go to a nearby drink emporium and partake of a drink of sure-enough whiskey, which he did, and while he was absent one of the party in the crowd took the petition. When the matter came up for hearing before the county commissioners of Wilbarger county, Mr. Perkins was unable to find the petition. Consequently no order was made to organize Hardeman county and the county was not organized until the fall of 1885, when a new petition was presented. If the petition had been presented the court would have turned it down because the 161 names were not known voters of the proposed Hardeman county.

In September, 1914, Mr. Perkins received a letter from John Wesley of Margaret, Texas, saying that some thirty years ago he took a valuable document from the clerk's office in Wilbarger county and was returning same. The document was the lost petition for the organization of Hardeman county.

SHIMMY FORBIDDEN; STUDENTS QUIT DANCES

(By International News Service.)

URBANA, Ill.—Dances at the University of Illinois lost all popular favor among the student body following the ban placed on the shimmy, the toddle and other objectionable forms of dancing by the Student Union and Woman's League. Attendance has dropped to such an extent that entertainment committees are seriously thinking of eliminating the affairs from their winter entertainment programme.

BACK HURT ALL THE TIME

Mrs. Hill Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Removed The Cause.

Knoxville Tenn.—"My back hurt me all the time, I was all run down, could not eat and my head bothered me, all caused by female trouble. I was three years with these troubles and doctors did me no good. Your medicine helped my sister so she advised me to take it. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the Liver Pills and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and now I am well, can eat heartily and work. I give you my thanks for your great medicines. You may publish my letter and I will tell everyone what your medicines did for me."—Mrs. PEARL HILL, 418 Jacksboro St., Knoxville, Tennessee.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

If you are ill do not drag along and continue to suffer day in and day out, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills.

The Senate's Stab in the Back

By GEORGE CREEL.

The early days of February, 1919, were bright with promise. The European press, seeming to accept the president's leadership as unshakable, was more amiable in its tone, the bitterness bred by the decision as to the German colonies had abated, Fiume and the Saar Basin had taken discreet places in the background with other deferred questions and the voice of French and English and Italian liberalism was heard again. On February 14th the president reported the first draft of the league constitution—a draft that expressed his principles without change—and it was confirmed amid acclaim. It was at this moment, unfortunately, that the president was compelled to return to the United States to sign certain bills, and for the information of the senate he carried with him the covenant as agreed upon by the allies.

The draft of the league constitution was denounced even before its contents were known or explained. In Washington the president arranged a conference with the senators and representatives in charge of foreign relations, and laid the covenant frankly before them for purposes of discussion and criticism. The attitude of the republican senators was one of sullenness and suspicion, Senator Lodge refusing to state his objections or to make a single recommendation. Others, however, pointed out that no express recognition was given to the Monroe Doctrine; that it was not expressly provided that the league should have no authority to act or express a judgment on matters of domestic policy; that the right to withdraw from the league was not expressly recognized; and that the constitutional right of the congress to determine all questions of peace and war was not sufficiently safeguarded.

The president, in answer, gave it as his opinion that these points were already covered satisfactorily in the covenant, but that he would be glad to make the language more explicit, and entered a promise to this effect. Mr. Root and Mr. Taft were also furnished with copies of the covenant and asked for their views and criticism, and upon receipt of them the president again gave assurance that every proposed change and clarification would be made upon his return to Paris. On March 4th, immediately following these conferences, and the day before the sailing of the president, Senator Lodge rose in his place and led his republican colleagues in a bold and open attack upon the League of Nations and the war aims of America. Thirty-seven republican senators signed the "round robin" that he presented.

A full report of this action was cabled to Europe, as a matter of course, and when the president arrived in Paris on March 14th, ten days later, he was quick to learn of the disastrous consequences. The allies, eagerly accepting the orders of the republican majority, had lost no time in repudiating the president and the solemn agreements that they had entered into with him. The League of Nations was now discarded and the plan adopted for a preliminary peace with Germany was based upon a frank division of the spoils, the reduction of Germany to a slave state, and the formation of a military alliance by the allies for the purpose of guaranteeing the gains. Not only this, but an allied army was to march at once to Russia and put down the Bolshevists and the treaty itself was to be administered by the allied high command, enforcing its orders by an army of occupation. The United States, as a rare favor, was to be permitted to pay the cost of the Russian expedition and such other incidental expenses as might arise in connection with the military dictatorship that was to rule Europe.

While primarily the plan of Foch and the other generals, it had the approval of statesmen, even those who were assumed to represent the liberal thought of England being neck-deep in the conspiracy. Not a single party to the cabal had any doubt as to its success. Was it not the case that the republican senators, now in the majority, spoke for America rather than the president? Had the senators not stated formally that they did not want the League of Nations, and was the republican party itself not on record with the belief that the allies must have the right to impose peace terms of their own choosing, and that these terms should show no mercy to the "accursed Hun?" The president allowed himself just twenty-four hours in which to grasp the plot in all of its details, and then he acted, ordering the issuance of this statement:

The president said today that the decision made at the Peace Conference in its plenary session, January 25, 1919, to the effect that the establishment of a League of Nations should be made an integral part of the Treaty of Peace, is of final force and that there is no basis whatever for the reports that a change in this decision was contemplated.

This action of the president brought upon his head the fiercest denunciation that had yet been launched, and when he met with Clemenceau and Lloyd George on March 18th their attitude was one of truculence. In this crisis the president used no threats of any kind, for, as a matter of fact, there were none that he could use. Nor did he stoop to appeals or persuations. He simply talked sense. Clearly, logically, convincingly, he ripped the plan to pieces, showing that it was not only unjust, but unworkable, and that instead of leading to firm ground it was committing the allies themselves to a quicksand from which there was no escape. If they cast the Fourteen Points to one side, where would it leave them. France would straightway seize the Saar Basin and the Rhine Valley. Was that agreeable to England and Italy? No! Italy would proceed at once to make the Adriatic an "Italian lake," cutting off Czechoslovakia, Austria, Jugoslavia and Hungary from their outlet to the sea. Putting aside the certainty of armed resistance by the Slavs, would France and England like that? No! Poland, craftily directed by France, would lay claim to East Prussia and all the territory from the Baltic to the Black Sea? Even ignoring the wars of freedom that would be waged by Russians, Lithuanians, Ruthenians, and Ukranians, would England and Italy like that? No! England would take over Persia, Mesopotamia the Hadjez, Egypt, and the German islands in the southern Pacific? Would France and Italy like that? No!

Did they not have sense enough to see that the thing they planned was no more than the manufacture of new wars; that if it were put into effect it would not be a year before England, France and Italy would not only be facing armed revolt from within, but that each nation would be in arms against the other, searching eagerly for allies, and willing to make any agreement, even with their former foes, that would enable them to defeat their former friends? They thought themselves intelligent, yet could not discern that their greedy imperialism would restore not only the reputation of the Central Powers, but also their military strength? It stood plain that they recognized the need of a machinery to administer the terms of the Peace Treaty. Were they fools enough to dream that this administration could be furnished by the allied high command, backed by armies drawn from the youth of America, England, Italy, Japan, and the other associated nations? Did they not have the vision to perceive that the peoples of these nations were sick of militarism, and that they would not stand for a military dictatorship any more than would the people of Germany? Were they so blind as not to see that the League of Nations provided the very machinery—and a civil machinery—that was needed? That the whole Peace Treaty would fall to pieces without a fair, independent, civil body to live on through the years that would be necessary to carry out the treaty's provisions? What madness possessed them that they imagined for one moment that the United States would furnish the money for a Russian invasion or for the maintenance of a military dictatorship in Germany?

Under this merciless rain of logic Lloyd George curled up and Clemenceau writhed. There was no answer to it, either from the gay insouciance of the one or the insolence of the other. On March 26th it was announced, grudingly enough, that there would be a League of Nations as an intergral part of the Peace Treaty. It was now the task of the president to take up the changes that had been suggested by his republican enemies, and this was the straw that broke his back. There was not a single suggested change that had honesty back of it. The league was an association of sovereigns, and as a matter of course any sovereign possessed the right of withdrawal. The league, as an international advisory body, could not possibly deal with domestic questions under any construction of the covenant. No power of congress was abridged, and necessarily congress would have to act before war could be declared or a single soldier sent out of the country. Instead of rescoginizing the Monroe Doctrine as an American policy, the league legitimized it as a world policy. The president, however, was bound to propose that these plain propositions be put in kindergarten language for the satisfaction of his enemies, and it was this proposal that gave Clemenceau, Lloyd George and their associates a new chance for resistance.

All of the suggested changes were made without great demur until the question of the Monroe Doctrine was reached, and then French and English bitterness broke all restraints. Why were they expected to make every concession to American prejudice when the president would make none to European traditions?

As if at a given signal, France renewed her claim for the Rhine Valley and the Saar Basin, Italy clamored anew for Fiume and the Dalmation coast, and Japan, breaking a long silence, rushed to the fore with her demand for Shantung in fee simple and the right of her nationals to full equality in the United States. Lloyd George, threatened on one side by the British labor party and menaced on the other by his Tory government, shifted painfully from one foot to the other, wondering which way to jump. Worn out in body by the terrific strain, the president fell ill and took to his bed, but his indomitable will would not let him quit the struggle, and the Council of Four continued its meetings, holding them in a room adjoining the president's sick room. Instead of sympathy for his illness, there was only desperate intent to take advantage of it. On April 7th, the president struggled to his feet and faced the council in what every one recognized as a final test of strength. There must be an end to this dreary, interminable business of making agreements only to break them. An agreement must be reached once for all. If a peace of justice, he would remain; if a peace of greed, then he would leave. He had been second to none in recognizing the wrongs of the allies, the state of mind of their peoples, and he stood as firmly as any for a treaty that would bring guilt home to the Germans, but he could not, and would not, agree to the repudiation of every war aim or to arrangements that would leave the world worse off than before. The George Washington was in Brooklyn. By wireless the president ordered it to come to Brest at once.

The gesture was conclusive as far as England and France were concerned. Lloyd George swung over instantly to the president's side, and on the following day Le Temps carried this significant item:

Contrary to the assertions spread by the German press and taken up by other foreign newspapers, we believe that the government has no annexationist pretensions, openly or under cover, in regard to any territory inhabited by a German population. This remark applies peculiarly to the regions comprised between the frontier of 1871 and the frontier of 1814.

SMALL SALES FEATURE OF DRY GOODS MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Very light sales at the lowest prices, still characterize the cotton goods markets. Wide sheetings offered for delivery in November, December and January by the largest producer were taken up to the extent of two-thirds of the offerings, while bleached muslins sold in a moderate way. Percales have not moved to any extent owing to the reluctance of the larger producers to name new prices, while the demand for spring goods remained dormant. Yarns have declined to lower levels. The mills are giving notice daily of a purpose to curtail production.

New England mills in some centers are operating at half capacity or less. Some mills have reduced wages from 10 to 25 per cent. In New England the wage question will come up for discussion between unions and manufacturers next month and union leaders are already giving notice that they will resist any reductions. Knitting mills are generally reported as running to about half capacity. Prices follow:

Print cloths, 28-inch 64x64s, 8c; 64x60s, 7 3-4c; 38 1-2-inch 64x64s, 10 1-2c; brown sheetings, southern standards, 17c; denims, 32 1-2 nominal for 2.20's; tickings, 40c nominal; staple ginghams, 20c; prints, 23c; nominal; dress ginghams, 25 and 27 1-2c. Members have agreed to bog their hair, while the wearing of silk hosiery is permitted, providing the skirt is not too long—from the ground.

The girls voted recreation to be the most important aid to health and plan to acquire a space for a gymnasium where daily classes are to be held.

COTTON PRICES CHANGE LITTLE DURING WEEK

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 31.—The net changes for the week's trading in cotton were insignificant. December was 9 points net higher at its closing quotation of 20.37 and later months were 28 to 48 points net lower, May closing at 19.33. In the early session of the week, the highest levels were reached and at one time prices were 138 to 177 points over the close of the preceding week. The later sessions brought heavy selling and prices dropped 202 to 234 points landing 54 to 75 points under the preceding weeks finals. Middling spots were unchanged in the net results, at 20.50.

The progress of coal strike negotiations made for much of the buying of the early part of the week, along with a better feeling in the spot markets of the interior but late in the week much liquidation came from the long side and short selling was encouraged by evidence that with the filling of October commitments any pressure to but spots was over with. At the same time, the tone was steadied on the close by frost in the belt and the threat of still colder weather to come, together with some rain.

This week the local market will open until Wednesday morning.

The trade will await with interest the unfolding of the November spot situation for there is considerable dispute as to whether spot commitments are large or small.

USURY IN WALL STREET

There is no doubt that much of the financial distress from which the industries of the country are now suffering—and whatever affects the industries, one way or the other, correspondingly affects the welfare of the people as a whole—is due to the inordinately high rates that are being paid for "call money" on Wall Street.

In a formal statement John Skelton Williams, comptroller of the treasury, calls attention to the fact that sworn reports on file in his office show that "more than four thousand loans had been made by the New York banks between October 1, 1919, and August 1, 1920, at rates of 15, 20, 25 and 30 per cent."

"The records will show," says Mr. Williams, "that the total loans outstanding upon which interest at 15 to 30 per cent was being charged by a portion of these banks on 42 different days, for which reports were received from them, aggregating over $1,100,000,000.

"The records also show that the amount of loans made during the same period at rates in excess of 10 per cent and up to, but not including 15 per cent, amounted to over $1,400,000,000, there being over 11,000 of such loans."

The question arises: How do they do it? How do New York financiers manage to transact a loan business on such an exorbitant interest basis and get away with it?

Elsewhere a man who makes a loan on the basis of "15, 20 or 30 per cent" is popularly branded a "loan shark" and the law takes him in hand for practicing usury.

Most states fix their legal rate of interest by legislation; and interest exacted above the legal rate is usury, the law fixing a stiff penalty for it.

If there is such a law in New York—and no doubt there is—how do the 15, 20, 30 percenters get around it?

The comptroller of the treasury calls attention to a practice that ought to be stopped, and to a situation that ought to be remedied.

The Wall street usurer is no better than the Shylock who "demands his pound of flesh" from the day laborer.

The difference is only in degree, and the law should reach them both.—Atlanta Constitution.

ALASKA IN FIFTY HOURS

The four United States army 'planes that finished a 9,000-mile flight to Alaska and back bring out clearly the peculiar situation of flying today. The Alaskan test was peculiarly searching. It covered much territorw unsatisfactory for landing, and presented weather conditions of unusual difficulty. The result suggests that the planes themselves are ready for service. If we desired to cut the thirty days now required for reaching Alaska to two or three, it is not inconceivable that we might be able to do so permanently within a year.

Yet no one believes that we will. Flying is obviously held up by something other than the efficiency of airplanes. Probably this is chiefly the question of cost. An Alaskan air route would not be expensive to establish compared to an Alaskan railroad, but flying to Alaska would be much more expensive than going by rail or steamer. In time it may be seen that quicker transport justifies economically a charge double or more that of existing services. It is clear at present that few people believe this to be the case. From New York to Alaska or New York to Chicago, the traveler or business man will usually send himself or his goods by the more reasonable route. It means little to him that aircraft cut time in half. Possibly he would find that the airplane really paid if regular service were once a fact. It is not a fact, and he is unconvinced of its essential usefulness. Probably several years of faithful demonstration will be required to "put over" an invention which has already proved its reliability, but has not yet been accepted as an everyday necessity.—New York Globe and Commercial Advertiser.

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF VOTING

Discussing the subject of voting from a psychological viewpoint, Dr. Joseph Collins, the noted New York neurologist, says it is true that the majority of us don't vote for a candidate or for a party—we vote against the candidate or the party we don't like. "The things that condition man's conduct," he declares, "are self-interest, self-conservation, self-preservation; in 'self' family and partners are sometimes included. Individually we deny that our conduct is not shaped by altruism, by ideals, by ethics, and by religion, but we rail and inveigh against our representatives who attempt to be guided by them. The space so allotted would be under the control of a press organization representing the various sections of the labor movement.

Editorial Digest

RUSSIA'S BOLSHEVIKS LOSING GROUND.

Three recent news reports from Russia are interpreted by the American press as clearly forecasting the early fall of bolshevik control in that country. These events are the signing of the Polish-Russian armistice, the peasant revolts against the soviet government, and the report of the Finnish Red Cross on starvation and disease in Petrograd. In addition, a Washington news dispatch states that officials of the state department anticipate the collapse of the government in Russia and are speculating on what may take its place.

Coming together as they have, these items form the background for editorial conjecture and prophecy in regard to Russia's present condition and outlook. "The evidence," to the Butte Miner (democrat) "is that Russia is about to cast off the yoke of sovietism." The Mobile Register (democrat) quotes a statement "made recently that only about 600,000 Russians out of a population of 150,000,000 are bolshevists. Accepting that statement alone, it is easy for one to believe that bolshevism in Russia must fall."

Many writers see in the declaration of peace with Poland the critical point in bolshevik power. "With Russia at peace," says the Pittsburg Sun (democrat), "it has been believed that bolshevism must fall of its own weight," and the Brooklyn Eagle (independent democrat) believes that "communism will have to face its real test when Russia is at peace and the red army demobilized. Few observers believe that it can long survive under such conditions."

More concrete evidence of disorganization, however, is brought out in a number of papers. They see in the recent peasant revolts definite promise of a new order. "Reports of Russian uprisings are important," in the opinion of the Seattle Times (independent), "because four-fifths of the country's population is agricultural. A peasant uprising on a big scale would doom bolshevism." The Salt Lake Tribune (republican) points out that peasants are being organized to "unite in a refusal to deliver their foodstuffs to bolshevist cities. The bolshevists achieved their triumph partly through starving out the bourgeoisie, and now it is planned to put the bolsheviki out by the same method." The Russian peasant has never been an adherent of the soviet form of government, the Sacramento Union (independent) remarks, and "since the industrial population has now grown hungry enough to invade the country peasant resistance "is becoming active and formidable." The Philadelphia Public Ledger (independent) agrees that "Bolshevism is a city product," and is sees "an even more promising portent" in the sporadic revolts in the cities and towns, for "if the cities really rise against it, it is indeed doomed."

The burden of bolshevism has fallen most heavily on the peasants, the Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph (republican) believes, and "its victims are apparently beginning to turn. The widespread anti-bolshevik movement is taking the form of meetings in many communities which demand a national election for a constituent assembly." Further, the Greensboro (N. C.) News (independent) points out that "the latest news is to the effect that the power of the zemstvo, the local governing body, is increasing as bolshevism demonstrates its hopelessness."

The Indianapolis News (independent) also notes the revival of the zemstvos, and points out further that General Wrangel, who "is proving himself to be something of a statesman," is establishing local governments throughout the territory under his control. To the Portland (Me.) Express and Advertiser (republican), "General Wrangel's problem is comparatively simple," since his strength is increasing and "he has the confidence of European civilization." The St. Joseph (Mo.) News-Press (independent) feels that "the hope of a new Russia lies in a thoroughly aroused peasantry under competent and patriotic leadership. General Wrangel * * * is reported to be a patriot and a leader of ability. He may be the man destined to lead his country out of chaos."

Financial collapse is as certain as is the military and economic failure of the bolshevist regime, according to the Boston Herald (independent republican). It refers to an official financial report just issued from Moscow, which "is a plain avowal that the government which aspired to reach out for the control of the world has long since ceased to be a going concern." To this phase of the situation the Indianapolis Star (independent republican) adds that "a group of Scandinavian bankers who had made a study of Russian conditions with a view to financing the country's industries has reported that the situation is hopeless and that it would be most unwise of financiers to attempt a rescue from the deadening blight of communism."

THE PRO AND CON OF ROOT'S SPEECH

Elihu Root, in his only campaign speech, introduced an angle on Art. X of the League of Nations covenant which, while not wholly new, has not heretofore received much attention. Instead of the old dispute about whether or not Article X takes away from Congress the power to declare war, places our army and navy at the disposal of a "supergovernment," and all the more or less threadbare argument dealing with our participation in the League, Mr. Root makes a new contention. He bases his objection to this provision on the fact that treaties "which undertook to make over Eastern Europe," were the conclusions of four men; conclusions which establish new states and national boundaries through accomodation of conflicting interests and "shading of justice by expediency," some of which in his judgment "are mistakes." Accordingly, Mr. Root says:

"I think it most objectionable that the American people shall enter into a solemn and positive agreement to guarantee and maintain by force for all time the disposition of territory and sovereignty which these four men made in 1919."

In other words, the danger as Mr. Root sees it lies not in the method of upholding guarantees given under Article X, but in the nature of that which is to be guaranteed. With the emphasis thus shifted, editorial writers seize the point as a means of making more thorough a general understanding of the League covenant.

Mr. Root's speech, in the opinion of the Pittsburgh Leader (Prog Rep.) "expresses the view of the public in a stronger, clearer way than the average man is able to place the case. At the root of the matter lies the fact that "four men drew up the specifications in a solemn agreement which binds the world to guarantee by force of arms the territory and sovereignty set out in the pact. The point is that there is no question of justice in the guarantee. It is a brutal pledge that conditions remain as they are, the unjust no less than the just."

The decisions establishing state and boundaries, the Knickerbocker Press (Albany, Ind.) thinks, "might have been right or they might have been wrong," but it is "fallacious and dangerous" to seek to guarantee them "forever". And even if not a single mistake was made, the Buffalo Express (Ind. Rep.) contends, "the point which ought to sink deeply into the minds of the American people is that this treaty which ought to sink deeply into the minds of the American people is that this treaty binds the United States to help to maintain perpetually and by force of arms necessary the territorial decisions for all the nations of the world which were reached by four men." The Express continues:

"This whole method of trying to settle the territorial or other rights of nations by the diplomats decisions of a few superior powers is wrong in its very fundamentals. A combination of diplomats whose first duty must always be to guard their national interests can only raise the question of who is strong enough to be boss."

Mr. Root's charge of the immutability of these decisions is of course challenged by papers supporting the League. To the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot (Ind. Dem.) it is simply a repition of "the old baseless objection that Article X etches all present boundaries on a changeless may of steel, . . guaranteed to the end of time." Mr. Root failed to admit that boundaries are guaranteed only against "external aggression." The Virginian Pilot explains further:

"There is in this article no Persian and Median guarantee of present boundaries, but a guarantee that no nation will be permitted forcibly to revise another's boundaries without first submitting its case for judgment by its peers. This is the vital distinction that Mr. Root ignores."

But the Omaha World-Herald (Ind.) regards Mr. Root's statement of the case as one which "affords grounds for analysis and honest argument. It is a forceful statement and it calls for candid consideration." In its opinion "the best answer, the most conclusive answer," to the argument against guaranteeing dispositions of boundaries and sovereignties not based on exact justice was made by Theodore Roosevelt: "A beginning must be made somewhere."

"If the nations of the earth," it continues, "should wait until equal and exact justice everywhere prevailed before organizing to prevent wars of aggression, they would wait forever. And if, by some miracle, that day should come, there would be no need of a league. The League is not an agreement to forbid the changing of titles and political allegiances by resort to diplomacy, to arbitration or to an international court of law. All proper and legal peaceful means for the transfer of territory from one nation to another, and for the formation of new nations, would not only remain but would be broadened and encouraged. The League is simply an agreement against external wars of aggression, whether to right old wrongs or to perpetuate new ones."

The contention that boundaries are guaranteed only against external aggression is maintained also by the Pittsburgh Sun (Dem.) which points out that Article X provides "that no nation shall violently cross the border of another. That is the cause of nearly every war. Mr. Root cannot afford to class himself as a supporter of armed aggression" in his attitude toward present boundaries.

Further, the Atlanta Constitution, (Dem.), Mr. Root interpolates an expression not in the text of Article X when he says that "part of what Article X undertakes to do," is to guarantee to maintain boundaries "by force." Quoting Article X itself, the Constitution replies that this provision "undertakes to do' nothing of the kind. Article X says nothing about, or even implies, any obligation on the part of the American people to 'maintain by force of arms' the dispositions of territory and sovereignty.' The New York Globe (Ind.) makes the same point: "Article X does not mention the means to be used, except to state that the Council shall advise on them."

"Mr. Root's "criticism of the League covenant is constructive," the Chicago Post (Ind.) believes, and many papers welcome it as pointing the way to final acceptance by the United States. In it the Rocky Mountain News (Ind. Denver) finds "assurance and renewed faith to many who were beginning to despair," and the Seattle Post Intelligencer (Ind. Rep.) agrees that he "has set at rest any uneasiness which the advocates of a League of Nations with safeguarding reservations may have felt at the trend of events in this country.

With the elimination of "such pitfalls as Article X", supporters of the League idea join with the Lafayette (Ind) Journal Courier (Ind. Rep.) in the belief "that we can have a league or association of nations that will really accomplish some part of the purpose for which it is organized."

On the Spur of the Moment

SIZING UP THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

We have been asked by a reader to explain the present financial depression in many personal pocketbooks, also to explain the high prices and everything.

The subject of financial depression is one with which we are well acquainted, in fact, we may say chummy.

The main cause of personal financial troubles is keeping up with the styles, and this because they come so fast that they cannot be kept up with even if you are pursuing them on a motorcycle.

It was Beau Brummel who said that he would rather be dead than out of style, and shortly after he said it he was both, thereby getting his wish with compound interest.

Keeping up with the styles is the best way in the world to teach a bank account how to take a joke. Nothing becomes discouraged more quickly than a bank account. It is the original sensitive plant and will turn its face away from the sun and wither and die on the slightest provocation. A bank account is the Battling Levinsky of the financial world. A few pokes and it takes the count.

I don't believe there is any man without faults. I even think Herb Hoover may have one or two.

I like ex-Governor Hughes because he always speaks to me pleasantly when I meet him on the street. There are a lot of upstage tinhorns who do not.

I always read what Sam Blythe says about the coming election and when I get through, I wonder what he said.

I am able, by hard work, to live up to my income, in which I differ from perhaps one per cent of other people.

I have known newspaper reporters for twenty years and I have never known one who deliberately wrote a false piece of news.

I am not overwhelmed by the terrible menace of a change in the administration.

WOMEN'S GLEE CLUB

WACO, Texas, Oct. 31.—A girls' glee club and chorus will this year be a feature of Baylor University's musical organizations. Prof. W. N. Payne, instructor in voice in the fine arts department, will have charge of the organization and development of the women's chorus. Rehearsals have already begun and from the number of girls trying out, the women's chorus bids fair to rival the like organization of the men. Plans are under way that call for a tour of the principal towns and cities of the state, and probably three or more of the larger cities in the nearby Southern states.

HEAR

Jack Culbertson

of Wichita Falls

Republican Candidate for Governor

Mr. Culbertson will deliver the closing address of his campaign at the Wichita Theater Monday night at 8 o'clock. Mr. Culbertson is a successful and progressive business man, and has a definite and constructive program to offer for the consideration of the voters of the state. It will be well worth while to hear what he has to offer.

A Business Man for Governor

Wichita County Harding-Culbertson Club

BOTH HOUSES TO BE REVISED BY TUESDAY'S VOTE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—A new house of representatives and slightly more than one-third of the senate will be chosen in Tuesday's general election. While the presidential campaign has eclipsed others in interest, the congressional fights, particularly the senatorial contests, have received much attention from the leaders in both parties.

Both Senator Harding and Governor Cox have pleaded with the voter to elect a congress in which their respective parties would have a majority. The heads of the congressional and senatorial campaign committees have been especially active, stressing the importance of the senatorial elections because the senate which meets next March 4 will be called upon to dispose of the questions of peace with Germany.

The present senate is composed of 48 republicans; one progressive republican and 47 democrats, which on a strict party vote has given the republicans a majority of two. Thirty-four senators will be elected Tuesday the terms of 32 expiring next March 3 and two being selected to fill unexpired terms caused by the deaths of Senators Bankhead of Alabama, and Martin of Virginia. These two places are certain to be filled by democrats.

Seventeen of the 32 senators whose terms expire March 3 are democrats and 15 republicans. The democrats to obtain a majority must capture at least two senatorial seats from the republicans. Leaders of both parties are claiming accessions to their present strength. Four hundred and thirty five members of the house of representatives are to be elected Tuesday.

The number necessary for a majority is 218. The present membership of the house is 190 democrats; 232 republicans, 2 independent republicans; 1 independent and 1 prohibitionist; with 8 vacancies. To obtain a majority the democrats must gain 51 seats, as eight of the nine vacant seats normally are held by republicans.

Culbertson to End Campaign Here Tonight

Two addresses today in his home county, at Electra in the afternoon and here at night, will close the gubernatorial campaign of Jack Culbertson, republican candidate for governor.

The night address will be at the Wichita theater at 8 o'clock, Mr. Culbertson will be introduced by Frank Kell, a democrat but a business associate of years' standing. George Griffith, who has made many speeches for Culbertson over the state, will speak with him at both places.

The Culbertson party will also spend some time in Iowa Park and at Burkburnett if weather conditions permit.

Confidence in the outcome of the approaching election was expressed by Mr. Culbertson on his arrival home Sunday morning. He said he had been particularly gratified by the reception he has gotten from the crowds which have packed the places where he has spoken over the state.

SCHOOL AMENDMENT ENDORSED AT A. & M.

COLLEGE STATION, Oct. 31.—The school amendment to be voted upon at the general election November 2 has been unanimously endorsed by the entire college community at the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas.

A petition circulated by Prof. J. M. McDonald has been signed by every man approached. There is no opposition whatever to the amendment at College and every possible effort is being made by the College people to promote the passage of this important educational measure. Both President Bizzell and Professor McDonald have issued statements in support of the amendment.

MEXICAN OFFICIAL TO INSPECT A. & M.

COLLEGE STATION, Oct. 31.—Samuel Torres Elorduoy, chief of the agronomy section of the Mexican Bureau of Agriculture, who was in charge of the Mexican Agricultural exhibit at the State Fair in Dallas the past month has applied for admission to the A. & M. College of Texas in order to take post-graduate work in agronomy, plant breeding and other specialized work in agriculture. President Bizzell has notified Mr. Elorduy that he will be accepted at the College as a post-graduate student, and he is expected to arrive at College Station within the next ten days.

Mr. Elorduay's full title is representative of the Bureau of Agriculture, as chief of the Agronomy Section and Agricultural and Hydraulic Engineer. His headquarters are in Mexico City.

TAMMANY

And its chieftain, Charles Murphy, Nugent of New Jersey, Tom Taggart of Indiana and the boss of Sullivan's old Illinois machine, the three-boss-directed cohorts whose stubborn stand resulted in the nomination of Candidate Cox at San Francisco, are not the only ones to whose hearts this nomination brought joy unconfined—witness the following letters which show that this nomination was joyously hailed by the leaders of the outlawed organized liquor traffic, whose president declares Cox's nomination a big victory for their cause. And, in passing, it might be said that few people can bring themselves to believe that the bosses above named who enthusiastically supported Cox—"men who make a business of the corruption of politics," as Bryan called them, were supporting the nomination of Cox from either disinterested or patriotic motives—"for their health" to use the vernacular. Whatever it is that they want, they are satisfied that Cox, if elected, will give them. This is certain to be opposed to the interests of decent citizens everywhere. Whether it is for the same reasons as those advanced by the organized liquor interests or not, does not matter—either will be equally opposed to the interests of good citizenship.

The revelations contained in the letter given below will probably go a long way to explain why Cox has so assidiously stuck to the League of Nations as a dominant issue—to the exclusion of everything else. It might have been embarrassing for the candidate to have allowed the interest of this hearers leave Europe and Asia and get to the United States, they might have found out something interesting in connection with the letters below. It is only at the last minute of the campaign when Cox, seeing that the advocacy of the surrender of American Independence and the setting up of a super-government, such as is proposed in the Wilson draft of the League of Nations, would lose him the race, and he has flopped over to the "League with Senate Reservations" policy, one for which he villified the Republicans up and down the land at the beginning of the campaign, that attention is drawn to other issues.

The following statement and the two letters, from one of which is quoted, should be illuminating to Texans, upon whom an attempt is being made to betray into supporting this man:

"The nomination of Governor Cox for the Presidency by the Democrats is a big victory for our interests, and it can be attributed, to a great degree, to the activity of our trade organization here in New Jersey and throughout the Nation.—President National Liquor Dealers association.

Following is the appeal being sent out by George T. Carroll, President of the National Liquor Dealers' Association, and President of the New Jersey Liquor Dealers' Association.

Office of the President,
849 Broad St., Newark, N. J.
July 22, 1920.

CABAIN BROS.,

Dear Sir and Brother:

The organized liquor trade of New Jersey has set out to do its part toward the election of James M. Cox as the next President of the United States and it becomes my duty to call upon you to help. More than that we are going to fight as we never fought before to keep the hirelings of the Anti-Saloon League out of office; to elect congressmen in the twelve congressional districts of the state who will vote to amend the Volstead Act so as to permit the sale of light wine and beer; to elect Assemblymen and state senators who will keep New Jersey from ratifying the Eighteenth Amendment and prevent the passage of any law concurring in the Volstead Act in its present form.

The nomination of Governor Cox of Ohio for the presidency by the Democrats is a big victory for our interests and it can be attributed to a great degree to the activity of our trade organizations here in New Jersey and throughout the nation. Governor Cox is a pronounced "wet" and he can be relied upon to approve an amendment to the Volstead Act as suggested above. It is now up to our trade organizations to stand unitedly behind the ticket of Cox and Roosevelt and roll up such a majority as will show convincingly that the public well is in our favor. Are you going to help? Of course you are.

This is going to be the greatest political fight in the history of the United States. Your liberty and mine has been taken from us. Our business has been unjustly confiscated. The rights of the people have been seized and they are lined up with us in the mighty struggle that is soon to be decided by the battle of the ballot.

The recent decision of the United States Supreme Court has thrown the question of prohibition squarely into politics. It is the vital issue in the campaign that is now under way. The prohibitionists tried to keep the question out of the campaign. They feared the vote of an outraged and indignant public. It is up to us—members of the organized liquor trade—to force the fight. That is just what we are doing.

Second Letter—Just as a Reminder

We have issued the challenge. The Anti-Saloon League is forced to fight. It has made an appeal for a $30,000 fund to elect dry congressmen who will uphold the Volstead Act and dry candidates to the State Senate Assembly to force ratification of the Eighteenth Amendment on New Jersey. There is no question about the Anti-Saloon League's ability to raise the amount asked. How much can we raise?

We must have money at once to carry on the work that we have planned. Do not think for a moment that there is plenty of time to give between now and election. The fall will be too late. Money must be had immediately if we are to maintain our headquarters and continue the propaganda that is necessary in the drive to win public opinion. This is the second appeal that I have sent you. The first you evidently overlooked. I would not bother you now if it were not for the fact that your own interests hang in the balance just as much as mine. Let me beg of you to remain loyal to the cause to the finish. Make this your last contribution if you will, but give—give something.

Your record on the roster of your local associations and also on that of the state league shows that you have been loyal and regular in the past. Do keep that record unsullied to the very end. I have always had your cooperation in the past; please let me have it now, for the Federation is to put up a bigger fight than it ever made before.

So that we may know at once just what our resources are, may we not ask you to promptly return the inclosed card filled out with your remittance.

Jump in and help us fight. Give as much as you can afford This is not merely a battle to save your business but one to preserve something more sacred, namely, your personal liberty.

Yours fraternally,
GEO. T. CARROLL,
President.

NOTE: The above letter was introduced in evidence before the Senate Investigating Committee, at Chicago, August 30, 1920.

N. Y. SENATOR TO BE BEATEN BY DRY, BELIEF

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—Charles H. Randall of California, the lone prohibition congressman, will be re-elected and Ella Booles of New York, running against Senator Wadsworth for the United States senate on the prohibition ticket, has a fighting chance, so Virgil G. Hinshaw, chairman of the prohibition national committee, declared here today.

Reviewing the place and prospects of the party in this campaign, the prohibition chairman in his pre-election statement said:

"The prohibition party entered this campaign to insure the election of a dry administration. The national committee has done its utmost to prevail upon Harding and Cox to come out four-square for the Volstead law and to agree to use their official power to prevent the increase of alcoholic content in beverages. Both candidates have refused to make an open, plain and above-board statement. Both have camouflaged, seeking to hold the vote of both wets and drys, Consequently, we are in this campaign for Watkins and Colvin for all we are worth. Hundreds of thousands of people have been reached with our propaganda. Thousands of women now enfranchised have ordered literature and platforms from prohibition headquarters.

"Charles R. Randall of California, who has the support of all dry organizations, will be re-elected. Ella Boole, running for the United States senate against Wadsworth of New York, has a fighting chance for victory. Her candidacy, backed by all the drys, is being watched with great interest.

"Margaret Wintringer, who has the support of all drys and many women's clubs and other organizations, is running against William E. Mason, congressman-at-large in Illinois. The issue is "Wintringer, dry, or Mason, wet." Other campaigns of interest waged by party prohibitionists are Edwards of California, running for the U. S. senate against two wet candidates, he having the support of all the drys; Leah Cobb Marion of Pennsylvania is running for the senate against Penrose; Mrs. Flora Disfenderfer of Pennsylvania is running for congressman-at-large; Dr. Esther Lovejoy of Portland, Oregon, running for congressman against McArthur, wet; R. H. Clark of the La Crosse, Wis., district is running for congressman and others.

"The prohibition party was a vital factor in securing war prohibition and ratification. Its own congressman, Randall, was the author of war prohibition. It will be a vital factor in the November election with its language of protest as against the wobbling attitude of both old party candidates."

Evans was alone in his automobile, and it was smashed in the crash. He is survived by five brothers and four sisters. The body was taken to the Hines' undertaking establishment.

COOKS AND WAITERS DEMAND MORE WAGES

(By International News Service.)

HELENA, Mont.—Cooks and waiters of this city have presented demands on all employers for a big increase in wages. They threaten to tie up every public eating house in Helena if the demands are not met. They ask for hotel help: First cook $6 a day, dinner cook $5, waitresses $2.50; first-class restaurants, chef $8 a day, second cook $6, night chef $7, counter waiters $5, and table waiters $4. These demands are from 42 to 55 per cent over the scale, according to employers, and call for a six-day week with time and a half for overtime, $2 a day more for waiters and waitresses during fairs and holidays.

This Is Better Than Laxatives

One NR Tablet Each Night For A Week Will Correct Your Constipation and Make Constant Dosing Unnecessary. Try It.

Poor digestion and assimilation mean a poorly nourished body and low vitality. Poor elimination means clogged bowels, fermentation, putrifaction and the formation of poisonous gases which are absorbed by the blood and carried through the body.

The result is weakness, headaches, dizziness, coated tongue, inactive liver, bilious attacks, loss of energy, nervousness, poor appetite, impoverished blood, sallow complexion, pimples, skin disease, and often times serious illness.

Ordinary laxatives, purges and cathartics—salts, oils, calomel and the like—may relieve for a few hours, but real, lasting benefit can only come through use of medicine that tones up and strengthens the digestive as well as the eliminative organs.

Get a 25c box of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) and take one tablet each night for a week. Relief will follow the very first dose, but a few days will elapse before you feel and realize the fullest benefit. When you get straightened out and feel just right again you need not take medicine every day—an occasional NR Tablet will then keep your system in good condition and you will always feel your best. TECH'S VICTORY BIGGEST UPSET IN DIXIE GAMES

ATLANTA, G., Oct. 31.—Six records of unbroken victories for this season on southern gridirons were smashed in Saturday's games, the two most surprising results being Georgia Tech's decisive victory over Centre College and Georgia University's triumph over Auburn. Alabama defeated Sewanee, Virginia Military Institute bested North Carolina State, and Washington and Lee won from Virginia Poly. Mississippi A. and M. with a victory over Tennessee University kept its clear record, but Vanderbilt marred the Kentucky State record by winning in decisive fashion.

The results of the contests was to leave seven of the more important Dixie elevens with a clean slate of victories for the season to date.

Vanderbilt's 20 to 0 victory over the strong Kentucky State eleven gave indisputable proof that the old Vandy spirit survived the defeats by Georgia Tech and Auburn. Alabama justified her heavy line and powerful backs by victory over Sewanee. Georgia raised high the hopes of er supporters by the triumph over Auburn. Tech's defeat of Centre was by a wide enough margin to show real strength claimed for the tornado despite the fact that the Centre team was handicapped by injuries from the Harvard game.

During the game it was stated that both the Army and Navy are seeking a game in New York next season with Tech and that negotiations also are on with Dartmouth, Princeton and other eastern elevens.

Texas Victory Week's Thriller In Southwest'n

FORT WORTH, Tex., Oct. 31.—Elimination of Rice by Texas by a decisive score was the outstanding feature of the week end games in the southwestern conference. Texas A. and M's 35 to 0 defeat of the Oklahoma Aggies seemingly show to the advantage of the farmers in comparison with the 21 to 0 score by which Texas defeated the Sooner team at the Dallas fair two weeks ago.

One decided upset in the Saturday games was the defeat of Baylor by Southwestern at the Cotton Palace. This result would seem to indicate that T. C. U. has its work cut out to keep its record of victories unbroken when the Methodists play here Thanksgiving Day.

Games for the coming week will have small bearing on the championship races in either the Southwestern or the Texas inter-collegiate conference. Texas meets Phillips at Austin, while Texas A. and M. will play Baylor at the Cotton Palace and T. C. U. will meet the Missouri school of Osteopathy here. Some interest will be taken in the S. M. U.-Rice game at Houston owing to the excellent showing made in all its games by Texas University.

FROM THE JUDGES' STAND

Assorting the News From the Sport Realm

If one will take the trouble to look at the Centre College lineup which opposed the Golden Tornado last Saturday, it will be seen just why the unexpected happened. The Danville team was deprived of the services of no less than four of its outsanding stars, in the persons of McGregor, Weaver, Ford and Roberts, all of who were suffering from injuries received in the heart breaking bout with Harvard a week ago.

It will be a case of "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," when the "Keystone King," Johnny Evers, returns to the Cubs next year in the role of Pilot. Johnny has been away for seven years, ever since he relieved Frank Chance as the manager of the Cubs back in 1913. Remember the days of the "Tinker to Evers to Chance" combination when Johnny was the hero of "Touching Second"?

More scandal in the baseball world may be uncovered by the Cook county grand jury, if the intimations of President Ban Johnson are based on facts. Ban said evidence had been accumulated that was connected with the Pirates and Cub game of August 31. It was stated that the files of the Western Union Telegraph company showed that a wire had been sent by a Cub player to a friend urging him to bet on the Phillies in the game for that day.

The directors of the Western golf association adopted a rule at their last meeting allowing a player to clean a muddy ball before putting on the green. Also it permits a player to lift a ball imbeded in soft mud except when the mud is a recognized water hazard.

The identity of the promotors from Cuba who have offered such a substantial purse for the Dempsey-Carpentier fight in Havana is still a mystery and sportsmen of the island surprised by the New York anonucement.

Intersectional games in the football world seem to be growing more popular than ever before and in view of such, the Tulane athletic directors are attempting to arrange a game with some member of the Big Ten for next year. The game is to be played in New Orleans, and Tulane is anxious to get Chicago, Michigan or some other well known institution of the conference signed up for a game in the Crescent City. The southern school is to clash with the University of Detroit in New Orleans on the 2nd of this December.

If the prospect of the twelve club league is carried out, Baltimore will in all probability be the twelfth member. It has already been suggested, the only objection offered being, that the attendance might not warrant a major berth if last season was any precedent. Although the Orioles won the pennant in the International, they were not well supported by the home fans.

Only two of the Navy oarsmen who brought the international championship to the United States in the Olympic games contests, will be lost this year by graduation, and the rowing mentors at the academy are looking forward with a great deal of complacency to the reassembling of the eight for next year's contests.

YOUNG WIFE AT MURDER SCENE NOW OUTCAST

(By International News Service.)

NEW CASTLE.—Held under bail with her older brother, Ray Phillips, as a witness in connection with the death of J. C. Abraham, a traveling salesman who was killed on the night of October 11 while in company with Mrs. Harriet Olds, Mrs. Ada McIntyre, not quite twenty-two, has appealed in vain for her townspeople to believe that her presence on the fatal occasion was above suspicion. She has sat in church and heard herself denounced, and now she and her husband, "Scotty" McIntyre, a steel worker, and their twenty-months'-old baby have been given notice to move from their little apartment in Quest street, where they have lived for eighteen months.

Ray Phillips is accused of the homicide, which took place on the Wilmington road, a short distance out of Newcastle. The party had been out automobiling on Abraham's invitation.

The body of Abraham was found by the side of his car and with him was Phillips, incoherent and tattered. Phillips was arrested and after he told his story Mrs. Olds and Mrs. McIntyre were held as witnesses.

Ever since her brother was arrested Mrs. McIntyre has been the subject of public condemnation wherever she has gone about the city. Neighbors have shunned her.

These things so distressed her that last Saturday she made an appeal through the newspapers to the people to be merciful to her. This apparently had no effect.

The unhappy woman herself told how her townspeople have put her "in the stocks." The minister, she said, talked to his flock about "The things that make men evil." He dwelt at some length, she said, upon her letter.

"She asked forgiveness from you men and women," he thundered. "She told you publicly how her soul was tortured by the just condemnation of her city. I say to you that she was not a Christian woman."

Mrs. McIntyre said she went to the clergyman after the service and said: "I am Mrs. McIntyre. Was it me you were talking about in your sermon?" and all he said was "Yes."

"Then I told him that I was a Christian, as good a Christian as anybody in that church. But he did not say another word.

"Scotty" McIntyre reached for the family Bible.

"People like that minister make you hate to look at the Bible," he said, fluttering the yellowed leaves.

SASKATCHEWAN LEADS IN AUTOS IN CANADA

(By International News Service.)

REGINA, Sask.—Saskatchewan has long boasted that it has as many telephones per capita as the United States. It now has the right to boast that it has as many automobiles per capita.

The number of automobile licenses issued in the province from the first of the year to September 1 was 59,000. This is one automobile to every fourteen inhabitants, "and that is the number of persons," said a government official, "who would have to ride in each automobile in the United States if the entire nation started out duck shooting on the same morning."

Saskatchewan is considerably ahead of Canada as a whole and the other principal countries of the world as shown by the following statement of the number of persons to each automobile in each: Canada 21, Cuba 91, Great Britain 180, Austria 185, France 198, Switzerland 262, Sweden 550, Belgium 625, Germany 866, Mexico 969, Italy 985, Spain 1,380, Russia 12,000, Japan 15,000.

Assuming that the average value of the cars is $1,000, Saskatchewan's investment in automobiles is $60,000,000. Of all the machines in the province, 87 percent are owned by farmers.

THEY'RE LEADING ELEVENS IN GREAT GRID SEASON

Capt. Tim Callahan of Yale being tackled by Coach Bride, uper left. Upper right, Capt. Ralph Horween of Harvard. Upper center, Capt. Frank Weston of Wisconsin. Center, Capt. I. M. Huffman of Ohio State. Below is Capt. Mike Callahan of Princeton.

The 1920 football season already has shown every indication of being the greatest the college sport ever has enjoyed. The development of strong teams in several of the smaller colleges has made the bigger schools look to their grid laurels. Above are some of the men who are leading formidable elevens this season.

SHORTHORNS TO PLAY KNIGHTS SATURDAY

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 31.—Coach "Tex" Bryan of the Texas University Shorthorn football team announces that his team is scheduled to play the Knights of Columbus team of San Antonio in that city on November 6. This is expected to be one of the hardest fought games on the Shorthorn schedule for this season, and the team is receiving stiff preliminary training.

Okla. Making Strong Bid for Valley Honors

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 31.—The week end found the Missouri valley football conference season at the half way mark, with Oklahoma, the new member of the conference, and Kansas looming as the strong contenders for the valley championship. The Missouri University and Kansas state Aggies elevens still were in the running however, despite their defeats yesterday by Oklahoma and Kansas, respectively.

Kansas, which is undefeated, and with three conference victories to its credit, meets Oklahoma, which has won two straight victories, at Norman next Saturday, while Missouri and the Aggies will play at Columbia. Observers here were agreed that an Oklahoma victory over Kansas virtually would clinch the title for the southern school. A Kansas victory, it was declared, would bring the race into the north again, as that team still has to play Missouri.

The Columbia eleven's defeat yesterday by Oklahoma was one of the surprises of the season. It was the 1919 champions first defeat of the year.

In the other valley conference games yesterday, Iowa state defeated Washington and Drake tied with Grinnell.

ECZEMA

Also called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk-Crust, Weeping Skin, Etc.

ECZEMA CAN BE CURED TO STAY, and when I say cured. I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for awhile, to return worse than before. Remember, I make this broad statement after putting ten years of my time on this one disease and handling in the meantime a quarter of a million cases of this dreadful disease. Now, I do not care what all you have used, nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured—all I ask is just a chance to show you that I know what I am talking about. If you will write me TODAY, I will send you a FREE TRIAL of my mild soothing, guaranteed cure that will convince you more in a day than I or anyone else could in a month's time. If you are disgusted and discouraged, I dare you to give me a chance to prove my claims. By writing me today you will enjoy more real comfort than you had ever thought this world holds for you. Just try it and you will see. I am telling you the truth.

TWO LETTERS THAT TELL Their Own Stories

From a Prominent Texas Business Man

Mr. John H. Kirby, of Houston, Texas, President of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, a native of this state and an old-fashioned Democrat, who has been active in party matters more than thirty years, has acted as Chairman of State Conventions and as Delegate to National Conventions and has always contributed to the Democratic campaign funds, is not going to vote the Democratic ticket this year.

Mr. Kirby says:

1. I cannot conceive of the people showing future confidence in my party when for eight years we have constantly increased their taxes and reduced their liberties.

2. I believe in a government of laws under a written constitution and not in a government of bureaus and commissions with a constant multiplication of tax eaters.

3. I cannot subscribe to the monstrous idea that this government owes a higher duty to the people of other nations than it owes to its own citizens. I believe in a nationalism which places America first and not in an internationalism which would require us to expend our taxes or sacrifice the lives of our sons in fighting wars which do not involve the honor of our country or the welfare of our people. Believing thus, I am unalterably opposed to the Covenant of the League of Nations as brought back by the President.

4. The Democratic Party is honeycombed with socialism. Its continuance in power will imperil the Republic. There cannot be any compromise between the right of individuals as set up in the bill of rights under our constitution and the sophistry of socialism, however plausibly presented.

5. The success of socialism means the death of the Republic. The God of nations has set no angel of the resurrection to roll away the stone from the sepulchre of liberty. For the rights of freedom once crucified upon the cross of socialism there will be no Easter morn.

(Signed) JOHN H. KIRBY.

From a Prominent Texas Farmer

FARMERS, PROTECT YOURSELVES!

In 1907 when the panic was on and the bankers of the South were in imminent peril the Southern cotton grower dumped his cotton upon the market at whatever price he could get and relieved the money stringency.

In 1914 when the Democratic Party again refused to come to the assistance he relieved the panic of the country by throwing his cotton on the market at an average of seven cents a pound when in ninety days it was selling for ninety cents a pound.

In 1918 when his cotton had reached thirty-five cents a pound, and the first time in the history of the cotton growing states when they hoped to come into their own by a remunerative price for their cotton, Mr. Wilson, in October of that year, said it might be necessary to fix the price of cotton; it was too high. The result was that the next day the farmers suffered a decline of $10.00 a bale for his cotton. * * * *

Still more damnable, Barney Baruch, a New York cotton gambler, was made Chairman of the War Trade Board and also dominated the War Industries Board. Restrictions and embargoes were placed on the shipments of cotton, Baruch taking advantage of these conditions. The War Trade Board and the War Industries Board beat down the price of cotton $59.50 per bale, and today, while we are staring bankruptcy in the face, the Federal Reserve Board and the Party whose collar we have always worn have deserted us and left us the prey of England's commercial greed and piracy.

In all justice it is now time that the farmer should demand his industrial emancipation and with that high regard and love for his family, whose children are today going barefooted to school and whose wives are tired from daily toil in the fields, serve notice on the Democratic Administration that unless that relief that they can give us comes immediately, we will withhold our support from the Democratic nominee and throw our vote solidly to the man and party who has promised us his co-operation in our endeavors to secure a fair price for our commodity.

PLEDGE NOT BINDING

The farmers of the South have too long voted without regard to their own interests, and through the dictation of office-holding poiticians. The farmers of Texas are not bound by any previous primary nomination for they were disfranchised by the Texas oligarchy which refused their pleading to be permitted to participate in a primary election to select their delegates to the Democratic Convention at San Francisco. If the producers in this country will have the same courage and patriotism to stand by their rights that they evinced in sending their boys to the war and in going into debt to purchase the bonds that this war might be continued, and cast their votes accordingly there will come an era of prosperity to the Southern states that will mark a new and better day agriculturally and industrially.

Personally, I have decared that I am going to cast my vote for what I believe is in the interest of the toilers of this country. (Signed) GUS H. ("Farmer") SHAW.

STOCK MARKET SHOWS VARIED PRICE CHANGES

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Widely Sterling forfeited most of its re the financial markets, last week, many shares of the speculative variety giving way to further liquidation and professional pressure, while additional capital issues were confidently absorbed by investors.

Latest underwritings embraced transportation, industrial and utility projects and approximated 75,000,000. Other loans for fully double that amount including credits to South America, Cuba and several European countries are said to be in prospect.

Movements of foreign exchange were wholly in favor of this center.

Sterling forfeited most of its recovery on the settlement of the British coal strike, French and Italian remittances fell to discounts of 65 to over 80 per cent.

at the outset of the week to promote a pre-election advance, but such attempts were nullified by the firmer tone of money and the detached attitude of the public.

Shorts seized upon the adverse conditions as a reason for extending their already large commitments. There were steady offerings of textile, leather, rubber, chemical and kindred issues.

Outstanding features of the industrial situation included the favorable quarterly statements of the United States Steel and Bethlehem Steel companies, a sharp decline in pig iron prices and production and the liquidation of labor as indicated by the voluntary acceptance of lower wages.

SOCIALIST COME BACK PREDICTED BY PARTY HEAD

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—The socialists party will "come back" at Tuesday's election, Otto Branstetter, campaign manager and national secretary of the party, declared here today. He predicted the re-election of Victor Berger to congress as well as the re-election of the five ousted New York assemblymen and estimated the total vote for Debs and Stedman at 3,000,000.

Reviewing the socialist campaign, in some respects the most unusual the party has ever conducted in this country, in a statement from national headquarters here, Secretary Branstetter said:

"After three years of persecution by the government and of lawless terrorization, sanctioned and encouraged by the recognized leaders and the press of both the democratic and the republican parties, the socialist party entered this campaign with our presidential candidate in prison most of our papers suppressed our organizations entirely destroyed in many states, with a bankrupt treasury and heavily in debt.

"The expulsion of Congressman Berger and the New York assemblymen, in connection with the official and unofficial reign of terror and the suppression of free speech and free press, had made many converts to the theory of force and violence and the uselessness of political action.

Despite these handicaps, the party has made one of the most wonderful campaigns in its history and the vote on November 2nd will show that we have come back, and come back strong. Reports from all sections indicate a wonderful sentiment for socialism and a tremendously increased vote for our party candidates.

"The five ousted assemblymen in New York will be re-elected by overwhelming majorities and we will carry as many more assembly districts in that state. The re-election of Victor Berger to congress is assured and we have an excellent chance of carrying the 2nd, 5th and 8th Wisconsin districts also. The election of Morris Hillquit, Meyer London and a number of other congressional candidates are more than possibilities. A tremendously increased vote with the possibility of the election of a large number of socialist candidates is a certainty in Oklahoma and Nevada. The triple alliance in the state of Washington and the members of the nonpartisan league in North Dakota, Minnesota and Nebraska will cast a heavy vote for Debs and Stedman and the socialist vote in the solid south will be treble what it ever was before.

"Despite the large stay-at-home vote of working men made hopeless of political action by the autocracy of the Wilson administration, we confidently expect to poll three million votes for Debs and Stedman and Stedman and demonstrate conclusively that socialist ideals and principles cannot be imprisoned or the socialist party destroyed."

WAR ON "FEATS"

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 31.—The board of education here has launched a fight against fraternities and sororities in the high schools, and has issued an ultimatum to the pupils declaring membership will be cause for immediate suspension. "Secret organizations in the high schools are undemocratic and undesirable and injurious to the free and wholesome life of the schools" the board declares.

SURPASSED HIS EXPECTATIONS

Port Tampa Man Says Tanlac Has Put Him in the Very Pink of Condition.

"I am satisfied Tanlac is a great medicine, for I have given it a fair trial and it has proved in my case that it will do the work," declared Robert Greene, of Port Tampa, Fla.

"For ten months before I got hold of Tanlac I had been in an awful run-down condition. My nerves seemed to be on edge all the time and just kept me restless and upset. My appetite went back on me, my stomach was all out of order and several times I had acute attacks of indigestion, and my liver was sluggish. I was simply all in and just felt that I didn't have any energy left.

"One of my friends recommended Tanlac to me about a month ago, and it has done everything I expected and even more, and today I call myself in the very pink of condition. I want to be eating all the time now, and everything my appetite calls for digests properly without any bad effects at all. My nerves are good and strong and I sleep sound all night long. My strength and energy have come back and I can put in full time at work now. Tanlac has put me in fine shape and I believe it will do the same for any man that gives it a fair trial."

Tanlac is sold by all druggists.—(Adv.)

HON. SIMON BAMBERGER,
Governor of the State of Utah, says:

"It is the dollar saved that provides shelter and comfort on rainy days; that is available for wise investment; that leads to financial success and independence.

"Saving is no more than intelligent spending.

"The man who saves is seldom out of a job. He is the man to whom comes the greatest opportunities."
