No progress noticeable in GM-UAW talks

By EDWARD MILLER
AP Auto Writer

DETROIT — Negotiators for General Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers union bargained on a national contract all day Saturday, as pickets marched outside 13 plants struck over local issues.

There was no indication if progress had been made in national bargaining on the critical job-security issue. Talks were to resume Sunday morning.

Picket lines were set up just after midnight Friday at 13 plants in local protests involving 62,000 employees of the giant carmaker.

Leaders of the striking locals said the walkouts were designed to keep pressure on GM while UAW President Owen Bieber and his bargainers try to reach a new contract.

GM and the union bargained for most of the day, andat 7:25 p.m. EDT, called off talks for the night. A union statement said progress had been made "in some areas. Many differences remain, however."

Company officials said nothing officially.

Bieber said no national strike deadline was set and the remainder of the 350,000 GM workers would continue to work indefinitely.

"We are giving support to the national committee ... to show that we do support their bargaining points," said Mike Feldman, a trustee of UAW Local 160 at the GM Technical Center outside Detroit, one of the 13 struck plants.

Most of the pickets were stationed at plants making GM's most popular cars, such as the Chevrolet Corvette sports car line in Bowling Green, Ky.

Only one of the struck plants had been scheduled for weekend work, and a GM spokesman said the actions would have little effect through the weekend. Workers in the remainder of the plants were told to report to work.

GM's assembly plant at Lordstown, Ohio, which was not one of the 13, canceled its first shift Saturday because some workers stayed away. But production resumed with the second shift Saturday afternoon, officials said.

A majority of the 2,500 workers scheduled to work Saturday morning reported for duty, but not enough to operate the assembly line, said Linda Cook, a company spokeswoman.

Jim Tripp of UAW Local 1112 at Lordstown, one of the union's most militant locals, said some workers apparently felt they were not expected to show up. He said the union was urging them to report for work.

Saturday's resumption of negotiations followed a bargaining session that had lasted well past midnight Friday, when the previous national agreement expired.

Negotiators "came that close" to a settlement, said Bruce Lee, the UAW director for nine Western states, in Los Angeles, holding his thumb and forefinger about an inch apart.

"I feel that's some strategy that we've got a sanctioned strike here by the national," said Ron Miller, vice president of Local 594 at the GM Truck & Bus division plant in Pontiac, Mich."It's a bit of a national strategy."

However, Bieber and the union's GM vice president, Donald Ephlin, were careful not to refer to the strike as a national job action.

But they both laughed and shrugged when reporters pressed them on the point after talks recessed early Satuday morning.

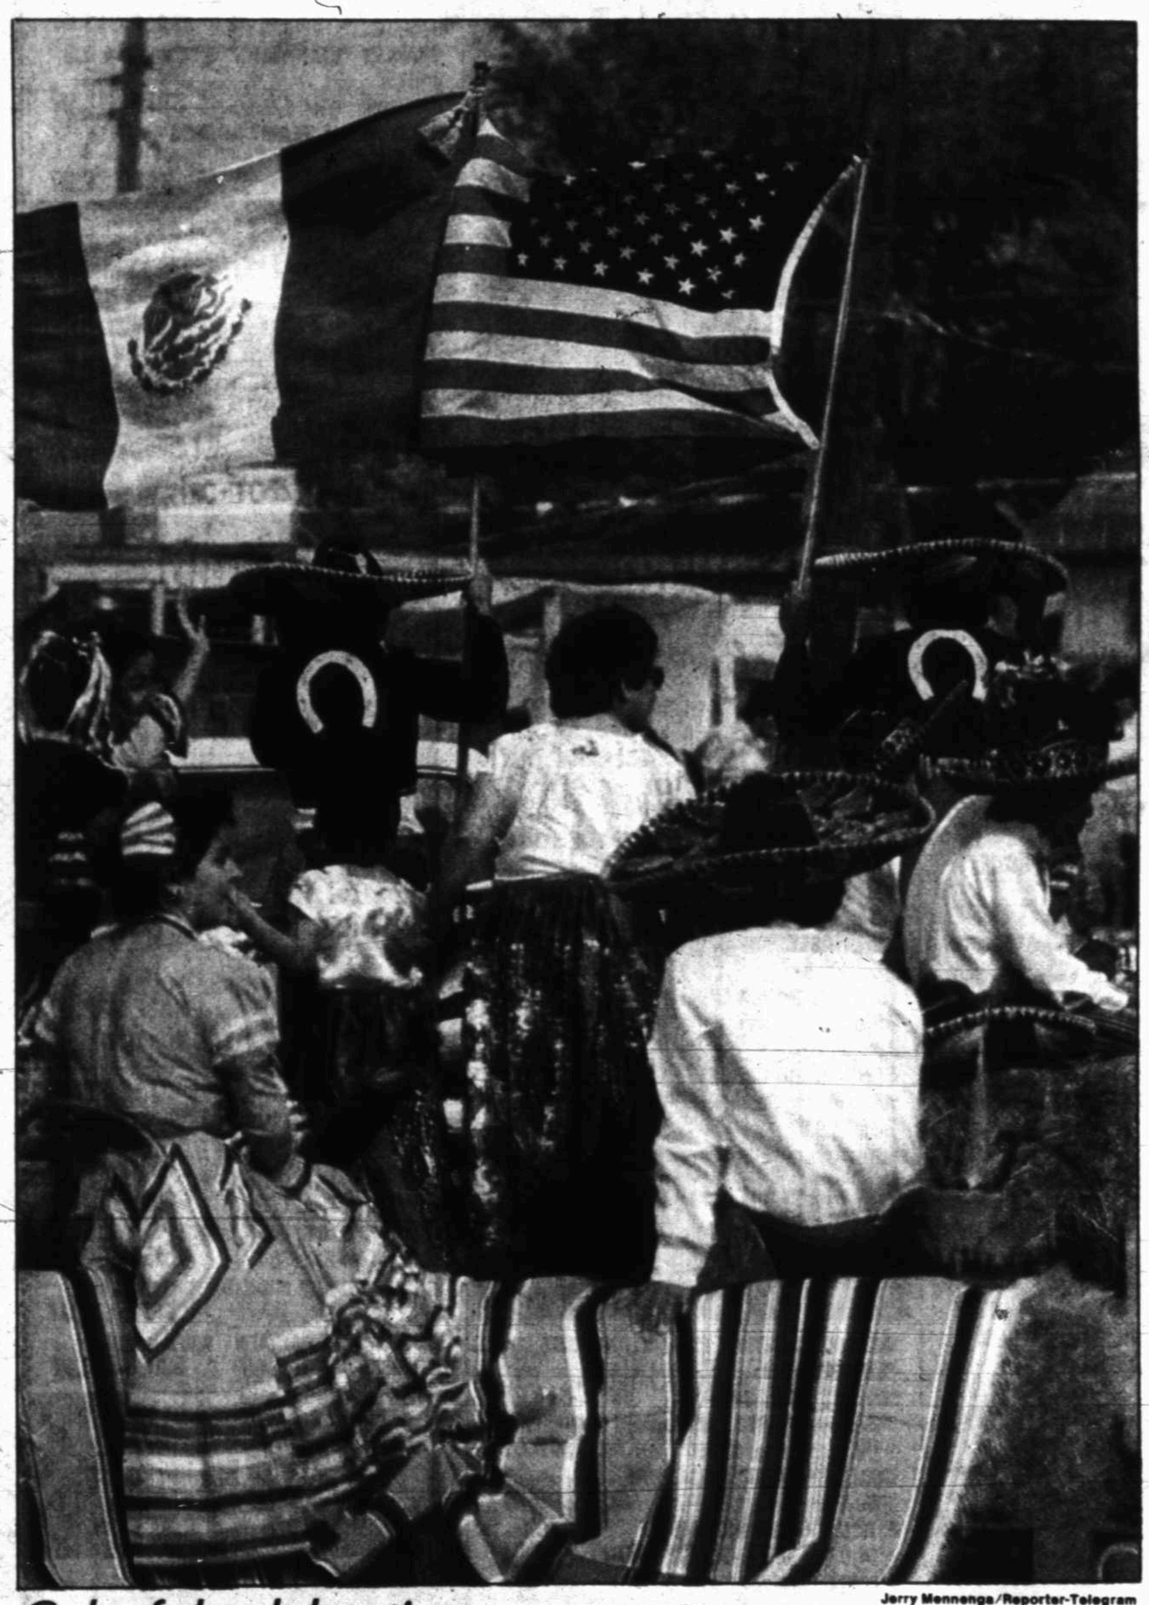

Ted Creason, financial secretary of Local 653 at the Pontiac plant where the small Fiero sports car is made, said the walkouts "may very well extend into local bargaining issues. But it's on the national contract."

"It is through the international union — a national strike," he said.

Sources close to the bargaining said there was some movement on the main issues — job security and wages.

Ephlin said some progress had been made on job security "but not enough."

"A weekend strike like this won't have any noticeable effect right away," said a company official who spoke on condition he not be identified. However, he added that parts could begin to back up in components plants that serve the struck assembly plants if the strike is not ended within a week.

State panel to release report on water table

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

Why, while water levels are dropping across the state, is the water table beneath arid Midland on the rise?

The district office of the Texas Department of Water Resources in Odessa plans to release a report within 60 days studying this question, according to TDWR District Supervisor Bill Lockey.

An April 1981 report by a TDWR hydrologist blamed this condition in the area south of I-20 on three factors:

— Regional growth.

— Heavy rainfall.

While declining to divulge any new findings of his study before its completion, Lockey said the 1981 findings remain true.

But he had no explanation why water keeps showing up in buildings some distance from the plant site, most currently Chapparal Center at Midland College. He discounted the possibility that the mounding (oversaturation of an area resulting in a build-up of water into a mound above the previous level of the water table) near the wastewater treatment plant could be affecting the college, located on the north side of town.

Midland Public Works Director Fred Poe attributed the rising water table to residents' interest in lawn care. "We think its totally just because of the watering of lawns," he said.

He explained that basements of local buildings are in the water strata. When the sprinkling picks up, some of the overflow percolates into this strata and leaks onto basement floors.

Secondary oil recovery efforts injecting water into the spent wells should not be blamed, said Poe.

"It would be something really unusual," he said. "There's been no indication of that."

While the method possibly could have a slight effect, "from the overall picture — no," said Poe.

"We haven't seen that dramatic an increase," said Poe, suggesting complaints have subsided as the problem, which first surfaced in 1981, becomes more commonplace.

Buildings often afflicted by the mounding have installed pumps to remove any standing water.

Local environmentalist Midge Erskine suggested that the water injection methods have contributed to the problem. "Some of it is (the sewage treatment plant)," she said, "but not all of it."

Suggesting the problem is not unique to Midland, Ms. Erskine said "No one will talk about it because you're talking about multi-million dollar lawsuits."

Admitting the factors listed in the report could partially explain the rise of the water table in such a dry area, she insisted they could not have caused the rise that is occurring.

Miami connection may be moving closer to Midland, officials fear

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Back in the '60s, when the drug culture first emerged, it was easy to tell the drug users from the sober citizens.

Those who dabbled in controlled substances stood apart in a crowd, with their long hair, faded jeans and vacant, blissed-out expressions.

Well, the hippies are gone, but today drug abuse is no longer the province of the few and the weird; it has spread to every segment of society.

"Today I see people with families and kids" using hard drugs, says Bob Savage, director of the Palmer Drug Abuse Program. "Drug use has become much more socialized. It's a recreational thing — it's just everywhere."

Even in a conservative, self-consciously respectable community such as Midland, drug abuse is not restricted to the less affluent areas on the east and south sides. Cocaine, for example, has become another expensive status accessory for many of the city's upscale young professionals.

"It's an expensive drug and it's a party drug," says Sgt. Jerry Compton, head of the Midland Police Department's narcotics division. "It's found among executives, professional people, well-to-do people...."

The trail of white powder leads from Colombia to Miami and then across the southeast by various routes to Midland, where it disappears up the noses of those Midlanders who can afford to spend $125-130 for a gram of coke.

But the path cocaine must travel from Colombia (where a pound costs $2,500) to Midland (where that pound is worth $56,000) may be about to shorten dramatically. Federal narcotics agents are putting the heat on the Miami connection, which may drive drug smugglers from Florida to the Texas Gulf Coast.

"The shift is on," says Sgt. Jim Newsom of the Midland Sheriff's Department's Intelligence-Narcotics division. "The next area is going to be Texas — right now the area between Galveston and Corpus Christi is most favorable for drug smugglers."

For heroin, which along with speed is the drug of choice among less affluent hard-drug devotees, the path to market is even shorter.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Parnell Barrett, a 43-year-old grandfather of 11 and convicted murderer who has put his life back together after prison and now drives a cab seven days a week, realized his worst fears this week.

Barrett was one of about 50 Texas inmates paroled early because of bookkeeping error. Now a warrant is being drafted to send him back behind bars.

"If he goes down there, we're going to lose everything," said Patricia Barrett, his wife of nine months. "It's about to scare the daylights out of us."

Barrett was paroled five months ago. On Thursday, his new life was suddenly shaken when Patricia showed him a newspaper atricle saying state officials planned to arrest the parolees who mistakenly were released from prison too early.

On Friday, Barrett's worst fears were confirmed. His wife called his parole supervisor, who said Barrett is on the list of parolees to be returned to prison.

"I thought it was a nightmare," Barrett told the Dallas Times Herald.

Families of dozens of other paroled felons across Texas faced the same turmoil.

A re-examination of records uncovered the goofs, according to John Byrd, executive director of the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles. Warrants will be issued "very soon" for those inmates, he said.

Col. Jim Adams, director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, said his troopers will make the arrests when the warrants are issued. He said the Texas Attorney General's office informed him the state has the legal right to arrest the released inmates.

In 1977, Texas legislators enacted a law requiring felons who used deadly weapons to serve at least one-third of their sentences before becoming eligible for parole. But the Times Herald reported last Sunday that in some cases, the law was not being enforced.

State officials blamed the mistake on court documents that ommitted the date of the inmates' crimes. Without the date, prison officials gave inmates the benefit of the doubt and assumed the crimes occurred before the 1977 law became effective.

Authorities say steps have been taken to improve the parole procedures.

Barrett, who was paroled 14 months before completing a third of his 18-year sentence for murder in the 1979 slaying of his first wife, now faces at least another nine months in prison.

Patricia Barrett, whom he married in January during a five-day furlough from prison, said she hopes their minister and friends can persuade the parole board that her husband's hard work and clean parole record should save him from returning to prison.

System may be scutinized with lawmaker

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — Supporters of state Sen. Carl Parker, who is under indictment for allegedly financing a prostitution ring, say that when the Port Arthur lawmaker goes on trial, the Jefferson County judicial system will be scrutinized with him.

At the center of that system is District Attorney James McGrath, who has denied he is using the grand jury to persecute an old enemy.

McGrath and Jefferson County grand juries have been examined previously, the Austin American-Statesman reported Saturday from Port Arthur.

Four years ago, a grand jury indicted a Port Arthur school official on charges of perjury and misusing travel money. The grand jury foreman and others later lost a $750,000 civil judgment for violating the official's civil rights, the American-Statesman said.

Parker allies draw analogies to that case, in which some grand jurors were accused of abusing their power by telling the official, Bernard Fleener, to resign or be indicted.

THE FACT THAT Parker, who represented Fleener in the criminal proceeding, testified against the legal establishment, including McGrath's handling of the grand jury, is not forgotten, the supporters say.

"They knock off anybody they want to knock off," said Fleener, referring to what he called a "silent power structure" that he believes uses grand juries to injure and remove public officials.

McGrath and other public officials denied the existence of any such power structure. They argued that Parker, a successful lawyer and state senator, would be a member of any such group.

Fleener's perjury charge, which was almost identitical to the one filed last week against the senator, was dismissed after Parker claimed it was illegal. Parker said that the same grand jury that charged Fleener with perjury could not also indict Fleener for perjury, the Houston Chronicle reported Saturday.

FLEENER LATER pleaded no contest to charge of official misconduct and served a year of probation.

Meanwhile, McGrath told the Beaumont Enterprise Friday that his office has "no intention of getting out" of the investigation and will not ask for a special prosecutor when the case comes to trial.

"This is our investigation and our case to prosecute. To ask for a special prosecutor would mean we would be getting out of our own case," McGrath said. "No way we'll do that."

Parker, after proclaiming his innocence Wednesday and saying he would plead innocent, said that he would follow his attorneys's advice not to discuss the case in public.

A Jefferson County grand jury indictment Tuesday charged Parker with aggravated promotion of prostitution, wholesale promotion of obscene material, and aggravated perjury, the latter for allegedly lying during an appearance before the grand jury.

FLEENER'S CIVIL rights attorney, Larry Watts of Houston, said McGrath promised to go after Parker if he testified in Fleener's lawsuit. "He said he would get Parker, or words to that effect," Watts said.

McGrath denied making any such statement. "You could tell me George Washington said that and it wouldn't be any more incredible," he said.

Sen. Carl Parker

"I don't want his job, and I know he doesn't want mine," McGrath said.

Other observers said they cannot believe McGrath is ramrodding the investigation against Parker. "I don't believe McGrath could railroad something like that," said Rep. Mark Stiles, a Beaumont legislator.

McGrath said he spent little time with the grand jury on the Parker case.

Analysts see Reagan leading in Texas polls

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' Democratic and Republican party leaders, along with some of the state's top political observers, say President Reagan is leading in Texas — but all warn that the presidential campaign is not over.

"I keep telling the reporters from the North that elections in Texas are settled in the last three weeks," said State Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle of Sherman.

"The polls look good, but I don't believe in polls," said Slagle's counterpart, Texas Republican Chairman George Strake of Houston.

There have been no published polls on the presidential race in Texas, but Slagle said some private campaign tallies indicate Reagan currently is running ahead of Democrat Walter Mondale in Texas by 12 to 13 percentage points.

"I don't think polls mean anything this time of the election," Slagle said. "It's too early to tell."

Slagle said he thought Mondale's campaign "is starting to build" in Texas.

George Christian of Austin, former White House press secretary under Lyndon B. Johnson and a prominent political consultant, said he thinks Reagan now is leading "just about as he did in 1980."

"In the last two weeks there has been little Mondale movement, although everybody expects that it will be closer than it is now," Christian said.

The private polls he has seen show Reagan's percentage in the 50s and Mondale in the 30s in Texas, he said.

Christian said he also senses a "trend toward apathy. A lot of people figure the election is already over. They may change their minds later but that's some of the feeling now."

"I think Reagan is pretty well ahead in Texas," said Ken Towery, former state campaign manager for retiring U.S. Sen. John Tower and now a top political consultant in Austin.

Several of the observers said Mondale's naming of New York Rep. Geraldine Ferraro as his running mate has been of little help in the state, and some said questions over her finances have hurt the ticket.

"The questioning of Ferraro's finances didn't bother regular Democrats, but to the average voter it arrested any movement toward the Mondale-Ferraro ticket. It actually hurt," Slagle said.

"I don't see any noticeable impact of Ferraro in Texas," said Christian. "There was at one time, but it has diminished."

TCLU asks for judge's removal

PAMPA, Texas (AP) — The Texas Civil Liberties Union has again asked the state Judicial Conduct Commission to remove 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhany because the state judge jailed a woman who wrote him a critical letter.

TCLU officials asked the state agency to remove McIlhany, 65, of Wheeler, from his office after U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson in Amarillo dismissed a federal lawsuit brought against the judge, the Pampa News reported in a Sunday story.

The TCLU filed the $400,00 lawsuit on behalf of Doris Adams of Miami, Texas, whom McIlhany sentenced to 30 days in jail last year on a contempt of court charge.

The suit, which claimed McIlhany had violated Ms. Adams' civil rights, charged that the judge had no authority to jail the woman for writing the letter.

After the federal judge dismissed the case, the TCLU renewed its pleas before the conduct commission, the state agency that polices the judiciary.

McIlhany said Saturday he didn't know about the second complaint. "I don't have any comment on it. I don't know anything about it," he said.

James Harrington, Austin legal director of the TCLU, first asked the commission to remove McIlhany on Dec. 27. On Jan. 13, the commission considered the complaint and said the judge's action did not warrant public punishment.

In a letter sent last week to Robert Flowers, executive director of the Judicial Conduct Commissiom, Harrington appealed to the agency to reconsider the case and "remove him from the bench."

'Fake papers common among illegal aliens'

HOUSTON (AP) — Illegal aliens wanting to enter the United States can spend as little as $10 to secure fake immigration papers, a situation one official says is "out of control."

But new techniques and equipment have been developed to spot document fraud, and officials said they have reported increases in detection at those places where the new practices have been put to use.

Dallas lawyer Robert Harm Bliss, who sat on Gov. Mark White's Task Force on Immigration, said he estimates about 75 percent of the 2 million illegal aliens in the state have the phony papers.

"The situation is out of control," Bliss told the Houston Chronicle.

Illegal aliens can purchase the fake documents, including false and real driver's licenses, Social Security cards and U.S. birth certificates, at bars, on street corners or at flea markets, he said.

Officials with the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service said more than 1,600 aliens are denied entry into the country along the Texas border each month after they are found with bogus papers.

Once illegal aliens have birth certificatse, they can obtain passports and voter registration cards.

The birth certificates can be easily obtained, officials say, by anyone who knows the name of the person, where he was born and the names of his parents.

"There's no way to count how many birth certificates have been issued fraudulently" in Texas," said Paul O'Neill, Houston INS director.

The problem is so widespread that copies of one birth certificate were issued 27 times, O'Neill said. Hundreds of birth certificate copies were mailed to one address in another case, officials said.

New equipment was installed at several border crossings in May, and officials said the equipment, along with a special task force to train border officials about document fraud, has resulted in dramatic increases in fraudulent document detection.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto

The National Weather Service forecast showers today for portions of the Northeast, Southwest, Northwest and coastal Gulf.

From Staff and Wire Reports

Temperatures will remain cool today but should get back to normal, if there is such a thing, by Monday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Today's high should reach into the upper 70s, dropping into the lower 60s tonight and shooting near 90 Monday.

After the early morning fog clears, Midlanders will have a partly cloudy day with winds blowing from the southeast at 5-15 mph. Skies should clear tonight and Monday.

Saturday's high of 77 was 23 degrees cooler than the record high of 100, set in 1965. The overnight low of 62 was 12 degrees warmer than 1951's record low of 50.

STATE

Winds were northeast 10 to 20 mph south of the front, which Saturday afternoon was situated in southwest Texas, the National Weather Service said.

Afternoon temperatures were in the 90s south of the front and mostly 70s to the north, but ranged from near 60 in the Panhandle to the 80s near the front.

High temperatures in North Texas Sunday will be between 75 and 82 degrees, while lows Sunday night will range from 50-62, the weather service said. Monday should be warmer with highs between the 80s and 90s.

NATION

Unexpected, violent thunderstorms developed Saturday over southern California, and cloudy skies, cool temperatures and rain were common over much of the northeastern quarter of the nation.

"We did not see that (cloud) patch breaking off" from tropical storm Norbert over Baja California, said Ivory Small, National Weather Service forecaster. "It developed overnight, and it's making lots of noise."

"Lightning bolts landed around us for about 45 minutes," senior lifeguard Conrad Liberty said from a Santa Monica beach station.

A power outage cut electricity Saturday morning to 2,500 customers in Rancho Palos Verdes, 20 miles southwest of Los Angeles, Southern California Edison spokesman Russ Hawkes said. It wasn't known if the lightning storm was to blame, he said.

On the Golden State Freeway near Newhall, 30 miles northwest of Los Angeles, traffic was halted when a tank truck jackknifed, flipped and caught fire during the thunderstorms, county firefighters said.

It wasn't immediately known if the storm caused the accident, but a witness said lightning bolts struck the area around the truck as firefighters worked to extinguish the blaze that sent flames shooting 60 feet into the air.

Utah woman named Miss America

By ROBERT WADE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Miss Utah, Sharlene Wells, a Mormon who often jogged up a mountain to train for swimsuit competitions, was crowned Miss America 1985 on Saturday, ending the most scandalous of the pageant's 63 years.

Miss Ohio, Melissa Bradley, 23, of Mansfield, who was once accused of shoplifting, was chosen as the first runner-up.

The second runner-up was Miss Mississippi, Kathy Manning.

Miss Minnesota, Lauren Susan Green, was third runner-up. Miss Texas, Tamara Hext, was the fourth runner-up.

Miss Wells, a 20-year-old resident of Salt Lake City, threw her arms around Miss New York, Mary-Ann Farrell, and then hugged Miss Tennessee, Shelley Mangrum, as she was pronounced the winner in a nationally televised show and before a capacity crowd of 21,000 at Convention Hall.

Her crowning ends a year that saw Vanessa Williams, 21, of Millwood, N.Y., become the first black to win the contest and the first woman to relinquish the crown after Penthouse magazine published nude photographs of her — taken before last year's contest, in its September issue.

A junior studying communications and broadcast journalism at Brigham Young University, Miss Wells, says she hopes to become a news anchorwoman in a major television market. She also wants to pursue a master's degreee in business administration, specializing in international business and economic reporting.

The other finalists were Miss Hawaii, Debbie Nakanelua, 26, of Honolulu; Miss Kentucky, Kelly Lin Brumagen, 22, of Lexington; Miss Massachusetts, Margaret Marie O'Brien, 26, of Weymouth; Miss Farrell, 22, of New York City; and Miss Mangrum, 23, of Nashville.

Miss Green was the only black to reach the finals.

Penthouse publisher Bob Guccione had said before the pageant that he had nude photographs of one of the contestants and would publish them if she won. Sy Preston, a spokesman for Guccione, said after the pageant: "There's no comment other than you'll have to wait and see."

Another controversy shook the pageant's glittery girl-next-door image during the week when contest officials had to decide on the eligibility of Miss Bradley, who was accused of shoplifting two years ago.

Miss Bradley pleaded no contest in the case, and officials decided that she could continue in the pageant because the charges eventually were dropped.

The chairman of the Miss Texas Pageant, B. Don Magness, created a small furor early this month when he said Miss Hext had "all the parts it takes" to be Miss America and "there may not be a better body in the United States."

During a noontime assembly of the contestants Saturday, the women thanked pageant Executive Director Albert A. Marks Jr. for the way he handled the adversity of recent weeks.

"We stand behind you and thank you for the support and encouragement that you have given us," said Miss Alabama, Tammy Little, 23, of Section, acting as spokeswoman.

The 51 contestants — representing the 50 states and the District of Columbia for the first time since 1963 — began preliminary competition for the title of Miss America 1985 on Tuesday, when they were interviewed by all the judges.

Miss O'Brien, a vocalist, and Misses Green and Farrell, both pianists, won preliminary talent competitions. Misses Manning, Hext and Wells took honors in preliminary swimsuit events.

The judges' choices in evening gown and interview categories are kept secret. The 10 finalists start the last round of talent, swimsuit and evening gown competition with clean slates.

A former professor at Northern Illinois University who tries to predict the winner based on data fed into a computer, this year selected Miss Brumagen as the odds-on favorite to capture the title.

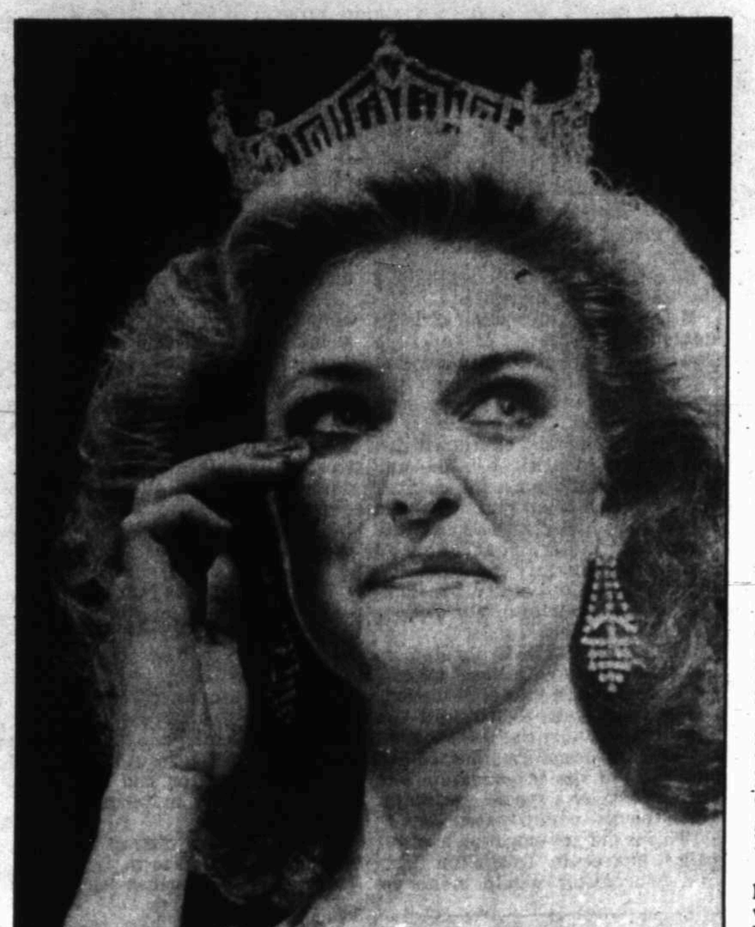

Six blacks — the most ever — reached this year's national competition at Convention Hall. They said Miss Williams' victory and Miss Charles' showing encouraged greater minority participation in local contests.

Miss Williams' publicist, Ramon Herve, said Saturday she planned to watch the pageant on television, but he would not say where.

The winner gets a $25,000 scholarship and will earn at least $100,000 through public appearances during her reign. She also may take the scholarship in cash.The first runner-up wins a $15,000 scholarship and the next three finishers get $10,000, $7,000 and $5,000 scholarships.

The remaining five finalists receive $3,500 scholarships and all contestants get at least $1,500 in scholarship money.

Television talk show host Gary Collins, husband of Miss America 1959, Mary Ann Mobley, was the pageant's master of ceremonies for the third straight year.

Midland woman injured in shooting

Police, Fire Roundup

From Staff Reports

A 40-year-old Midland woman was listed in stable condition but was expected to undergo surgery Saturday night following an early evening shooting incident in northeast Midland.

Pearl Platt, of 1115 E. Cowden, was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital after she was shot at least three times in her front yard with a .410-gauge shotgun.

Surgery to remove some of the pellets was expected to be performed late Saturday night, according to Margaret Pape, MMH house supervisor. Ms. Platt was expected to be kept in the critical care unit overnight for observation.

According to statements made by two witnesses who drove Ms. Platt home at about 7 p.m., she had gotten out of the car and was walking up to the house when a 57-year-old Midland man, who was parked in a blue pickup in front of the house, shot her, said Sgt. Jeff Haile of the Midland Police Department. Ms. Platt apparently knew the suspect although the two women didn't mention having any contact with him earlier in the day while they were with the victim, Haile said.

The man then drove directly to the police department to turn himself in, Haile said. "In fact, he was here at the police station before I got there."

Formal charges of attempted murder are expected to be filed Monday against the man, who gave police an address in the 300 block of South Calhoun.

Two 17-year-old Midland High School students and two juveniles were arrested early Saturday morning during an apparent burglary of the Autumnwood Apartments, 2439 Whitmire. According to police reports, the two juveniles and one young woman were caught inside Apartment 54H while the second 17-year-old was caught running from the apartment.

Midland firemen responded to the scene of fire at a caliche pit at Midkiff and Interstate 20 at about 6:40 p.m. Friday. Blazing on arrival, the grass and trash fire was extinguished with 4,000 gallons of water. There was no damage at the pit, owned by Darrell Adams, and the cause had not yet been determined.

Three firemen were called back to the scene early Saturday morning to make sure the fire did not spread.

A fire in a storage building at 709 N. D St. shortly before 11 p.m. Friday caused heavy damage to the building and contents, owned by Theresa Cuevas. According to reports, the blaze was confined and extinguished with 1,500 gallons of water.

Second son born to Princess Diana

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — Princess Diana gave birth Saturday to a 6-pound, 14-ounce boy, her second child and the newest heir to the 1,000-year-old British crown after his father, Prince Charles, and brother, 2-year-old Prince William.

"We have nearly got a full polo team now," Charles, an avid polo player, exulted to crowds of well-wishers before heading off for "a stiff drink." Polo is played with four players on horseback on each team.

Buckingham Palace announced that the child was born at 4:20 p.m. (11:20 a.m. EDT) at St. Mary's Hospital, 8¼ hours after Diana was admitted in the early stages of labor. Charles, who two years ago became the first royal father ever to attend the birth of an heir, was again present in the delivery room.

Outside the 132-year-old red brick hospital on a west London back street, cheers, applause and popping champagne corks greeted the announcement. Scores of well-wishers had gathered behind police barricades throughout the day.

British press reports had said both Charles, 35, and Diana, 23, were hoping for a girl. If the baby had been a girl, she could have been superseded in the royal line by subsequent sons to Charles and Diana.

"Her Royal Highness and the child are both well," the palace statement said.

A palace spokesman, who spoke on condition of not being identified, said as soon as the child was born, Charles rushed to the telephone to tell his mother, Queen Elizabeth II, who is vacationing with other members of the royal family at their Balmoral, Scotland estate.

"The queen and all the royal family are delighted," the spokesman said.

The baby joins his father and brother as a prince of Wales.

Like his brother, the baby was not expected to be named for several days. The London bookmaking firm William Hill said the odds favored George over a variety of other common kingly English names such as Edward and Henry. Elvis was the long shot at 500-1.

Harold Brooks-Baker, director of Burke's Peerage, the bible of British nobility, said it is "known in royal circles Charles plans to name one child George."

Charles, whose full name is Charles Philip Arthur George, "admired and loved his grandfather George VI very much," Brooks-Baker said.

DRUGS

The heroin comes to Midland via Mexican towns such as Ojinaga, just across the Rio Grande from Presidio, and from El Paso. For heroin, the last stop before Midland is generally Odessa.

Though Mexican marijuana follows a similar path, all the major drugs have separate distribution systems, down to the street dealers who tend to specialize mostly in one drug, according to Newsom.

Heroin, at $25 per shot, is cheaper than cocaine, and therefore more popular in the poorer areas of town. Speed (usually methamphetamine) is even cheaper and more popular, though it also cuts across the socio-economic barriers — teenage children of well-to-do families aren't averse to popping pills when they can get them, especially the legal "look-alike" drugs, which consist mostly of caffiene.

One kind of drug which hasn't been as much of a problem locally as elsewhere is PCP (angel dust).

"A lot of people are scared of that stuff — it's had a lot of bad press," says Savage. That same concern about possible side effects has limited the local comeback of LSD and other hallucinogens, which have been regaining popularity in other parts of the country, according to Savage.

"They're just not popular in this area of the country, and they're not easy to get," says Newsom.

Another group of drugs which seem to have less appeal in Midland are inhalants.

The practice of sniffing fumes from liquid paper, paint, etc., "is not done so much around here," says Conn Carson, a PDAP counselor who deals with children age 10-14. "There's some of it here in Midland, but not that much."

Though most drugs tend to have separate clienteles, there is one exception.

"Marijuana is the most widely used drug," says Newsom. "There are no ethnic barriers — everybody's doing it."

According to Compton, "You can buy grass easier than you can buy beer."

An ounce of marijuana can cost Midlanders anywhere from $50 to $120, depending on quality, he says.

"It has so many outlets, it's hard to say" where it comes from, Compton says. "California, Mexico, local homegrown, or real good Colombian — grass comes from everywhere."

The scale of illegal drug use in Midland "is astronomical — it's in the millions of dollars" each year, according to Newsom. But even though about 100 people have been arrested in Midland County so far this year on felony drug charges, the ability of local law-enforcement officials to deal with the problem is limited by small budgets and public indifference, he says.

Penalties were much stiffer ten years ago when drug use was less common, Newsom says, but now that it is more widespread and therefore perhaps more acceptable, the public is less willing to support long prison sentences for drug users.

"Eventually, I foresee marijuana probably being legalized because of its widespread popularity," says Newsom, though he doesn't think cocaine will ever get to that point.

"We do definitely have a drug problem in Midland, contrary to some people's belief that it's all in Odessa. But you can only enforce the laws the community wants you to enforce."

Correction

In the Friday, Sept. 14 edition of the Reporter-Telegram, the opening date for Ramada Hotel in Midland was incorrectly given as early summer. The hotel plans to have its doors open by early November. The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

WATER

Lockey said he could not determine the rate at which the water table is rising until a piece of equipment he has on order arrives from Austin. But Ms. Erskine said her water well was up nine feet, a level she said could not be explained by the increase in rainfall.

Secondary recovery is being done in older fields, reasoned Ms. Erskine, where the casing separating the different strata has been worn by time.

But Jerry Mulligan of the Texas Railroad Commission (which regulates water related to oil exploration) said "Any rising water table couldn't be caused by water flood operations."

Commission guidelines require adequate casing and cementing before any water is injected into the deep wells, said Mulligan.

A casing is set below the deepest fresh water. Another barrier is positioned to secure the injection zone and tubing is installed to allow inspection and monitoring of the site, said Mulligan.

Meanwhile, Midlanders can expect the water table to continue to rise. Possibly, Lockey's study will clear up the issue.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Lawmaker addresses water concerns

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — Water is like virtue: folks generally favor it but don't necessarily want to pay for having it, and it's often in short supply.

Just what should be done to promote either can lead to some lively arguments.

Texans have argued about water for years, with the debate becoming more acrimonious in recent years as population pressures have increased. It has become apparent that many areas are going to run short of water at present rates of use.

West Texans have been more conscious of the problem since they've had less water to start with and could face more severe problems more quickly than other areas of the state.

So it's not surprising that Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, has been a leader in legislative efforts to promote water development and conservation.

It may have surprised some folks recently when Montford took some shots at the Department of Water Resources, which is charged with those same activities.

Montford's complaint, it seems, boils down to a feeling that DWR hasn't been oriented enough to activities but has been spending too much time in planning.

DWR has been engaged in recent years with overhauling the 1968 Texas Water Plan (the Water Development Board is to look at those revisions at its Thursday meeting).

At a meeting of the Joint Committee on Water Resources, Montford complained that water has become a "paper tiger," with "report after report after report" and no action. And, he complained, DWR's efforts fail to "do one thing for agriculture."

The revised water plan provisions do address agricultural water needs, recommending that water conservation be promoted, with increased research on areas such as brush control, and increased efforts to inform agricultural users of ways to make their water to further.

But the plan concludes that "the private sector" must make "most of the actual investment, production, financing and ...purchase and use of irrigation water equipment."

Montford backed legislation in the 1983 Legislature aimed at providing financing to irrigators for purchase of water-efficient irrigation equipment, noting that while the technology may be there, it won't be of much use until farmers can afford it.

The House Agriculture Committee has been studying the economic feasibility of the conversion of irrigated land to water-efficient crops or dryland farming, and the sub-committee charged with that investigation recommended financial incentives along the lines proposed by Montford.

State programs, the subcommittee suggests in a report due to be considered by the full panel, could include reduced interest loans, tax incentives and educational programs.

The panel also suggests that lending institutions "should become more aware of the need for their support for farmers who wish to convert to water-efficient or dryland farming methods."

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower says he agrees that financial incentives could assist in solving the problems faced by farmers. He says that "there is no issue more fundamental to the future of agricultural productivity than water."

More than 70 percent of Texas' water use is for agriculture, Hightower notes.

"Any water plan that doesn't have a plan for agriculture is no plan at all...it's just a lie," Hightower says.

Hightower reports the Texas Department of Agriculture has been working on ways to increase efficiency of water use — and that work will, he says, "next to my budget, be my top priority."

Texas has good research on agricultural water practices, led by Texas Tech University and Texas A&M, he says — so the question is one of implementing research and bringing technology to the fields.

The problem, he comments, is "it's going to cost money."

And it might be noted that that's true in areas besides agriculture as Texans should be well aware at the end of another hot, dry summer.

Oil company investigating blast, fire

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Officials from the offshore oil company whose drilling platform exploded and caught fire in the Gulf of Mexico began searching for clues Saturday while the Coast Guard prepared an investigation of their own, a company spokesman said.

The blast and fire Friday killed four men on the rig and severely burned three others.

"Early this morning, our senior vice president of operations, and other operations personnel, went to the rig ... to begin a thorough investigation of the cause and damages, and to follow up work we did yesterday," said Zapata Offshore Inc. spokesman Barney White.

White said he expected the company officials to remain on the rig for two days, deciding where to take the rig for repairs.

The floating, 80-foot tall Zapata Lexington was built at Avondale Shipyards in New Orleans, White said.

White explained that the Coast Guard would investigate the explosion because "the rig is essentially a vessel. It floats and is transported from place to place."

White said he expected the Coast Guard query to be routine.

A Guard spokesman said the Marine Inspection Office would handle the explosion, looking for the causes and what may have to be done to corrects discrepencies, if any, on other rigs.

The rig exploded Friday about 1 p.m. CDT while floating in seas 1,465 feet deep. The fire was put out within two hours, White said, adding that conditions were safe enough to allow nine workers to board the rig at 6 p.m.

White said 68 people were on board the rig when the gas well blew wild.

Of the 68, four died, three were airlifted to West Jefferson General Hospital in suburban Marrero, two other accompanied the injured, 45 were taken via crewboats to another Zapata rig and 14 others were picked up by other vessels.

White said 42 people on the rig worked for Zapata, 24 were from various service contractors and two represented Conoco, the owners of the mineral rights in the area.

Three of the four dead were identified as Dalton D. Walker, 42, the senior tool pusher from Columbia, La; Johnnie W. Calton, 37, the driller from Monroe, La., and Gilbert J. Jones, 25, an assistant driller from Lake Charles, La.

White said the identity of the fourth dead man was being withheld until the family could be notified.

Joe L. Smith, 21, a floorhand from Beaumont, Texas, and Paul J. Buckman, 25, a cleaner-painter from Houston were hospitalized with third-degree burns over 60 percent of their bodies, White said. Rusty J. Huckabaa, 22, a floorhand from Andalusia, Ala., was hospitalized with third-degree burns over 30 percent of his body.

Zapata officials say the blast may not have done much damage to the $100 million natural gas drilling rig.

"What I have heard is that it's shipshape," White said. "The electrical system, the ballast controls are all working. The damage principally appears to be fire damage, largely confined to the drill floor area and the top part of the rig. We've been able to level it off. The rig is now out of danger."

Hot-selling book recounts golden days in early oil boom towns

CHILDRESS, Texas (AP) - "Mr. Marshlo was beyond a doubt the nastiest, dirtiest, filthiest bastard I ever had the displeasure to see!"

So begins "Homeless Bound," surely the hottest selling book this summer in Childress and a dozen other early oil boom towns scattered across West Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Arkansas.

That's where a delightful old rascal named Boody Gordon Rogers spent his childhood terrorizing young girls, middle-aged ladies and any number of old fools.

"Homeless Bound" is the uniquely personal and mildly ribald account of growing up in a lusty era of gamblers, con men, whores, open saloons and get-rich-quick schemes.

The son of a restless, hard-working cafe owner, the widely traveled Rogers calls his rambling epic a "true, humorous and tragic adventure" but the accent is on humor and the book reads like "Catcher in the Rye Goes Country."

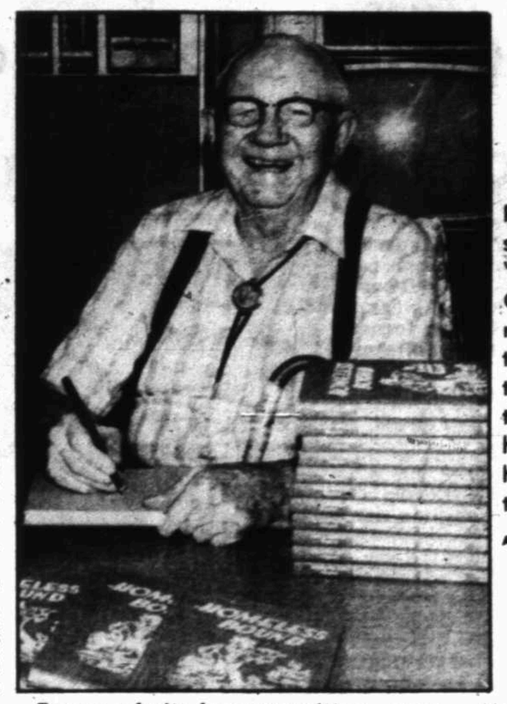

"My dad was a rambler," Rogers says. "He would put in a business, work up the trade, then sell while business was good. He said that if you waited until business started going down, you couldn't swap the thing for a skinny hog."

Though he often worked for his father, Rogers' interests rarely centered on the restaurant business.

"My early ambition was double-barrelled — first to be a football quarterback (to win the girls), and second to be a cartoonist and make people laugh," says Rogers, who contends he was reasonably successful at both.

Rogers spent his high school days in Childress, a typical West Texas town roughly midway between Wichita Falls and Amarillo, and it is here, in his 80th year, that he lives today.

Though "Homeless Bound" touches on Rogers' wartime experiences, the heart and soul of the book focuses on his youthful misadventures in Childress and other such spots as Whizbang, Wink, Smackover, Dalhart, Mangum, Enid, Cushing, Mexia, Kilgore, Ranger, Ragtown, Hogtown and Ringling.

AP Laserphoto

Rogers admits he was smitten early on in Ringling, Okla., by a young lady named Bessie, who, he discovered at recess, could run faster than any boy he ever saw.

"When she ran, though, she held up her dress and all you saw was a flash of yellow drawers going by," he recalled. "If the Olympic games had been going on then, Bessie would have been hump-shouldered from wearing all the gold medals."

But the author proposed to his Childress high school sweetheart, and Mary Norris became his "bride, critic, proof-reader and boss."

Much of the saga deals with Rogers' adventures on and around the football field, beginning with a 1919 episode in which he unexpectedly was sent into a high school game when a starter was sidelined by diarrhea.

The next day, he rushed out to get a newspaper.

"There it was — right on the back page — 'A substitute was sent in who wouldn't weigh a hundred pounds if his britches were full of bricks.' " recalled Rogers. "That's all it said. The reporter didn't even mention my name."

Later, as a starting quarterback in Childress, things were different, if not much better.

"One time I broke loose and ran 60 yards for a touchdown. I was running down the sideline (when) I heard what sounded like a wild buffalo stampede ... I looked, and there were at least 250 Childress fans running alongside of me.

"It was really very embarrassing, because some of 'em were passing me."

No Dieting - Eat All You Want Pill Does All the Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special) An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Has ALL Daily Vitamins

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

Contains Japanese 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

The super-pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Now Available to Public

You can order your supply of these highly successful "super" grapefruit pills (now available directly from the manufacturer by mail order only) by sending $12 for a 14-day supply (or $20 for a 30-day supply, or $35 for a 60-day supply) cash, check, or money order to: Citrus Industries, 9903 Santa Monica Bl., Dept. 841, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard, and Amer. Abortion issue overshadows Ferraro's week of campaigning

WASHINGTON (AP) — A hurricane of controversy over abortion, politics and religion raged about Geraldine Ferraro the past week, blowing away her efforts to focus the campaign on her Republican opponents.

Twenty-four years after John F. Kennedy tried to put to rest the debate over his religion and his politics, Ms. Ferraro faced strong criticism with a religious tenor, including her own archbishop's condemnation of her position on abortion.

"It's noise that's getting in the way of her ability to talk about what she wants to talk about," said Nanette Falkenberg, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League and a Ferraro backer. She called this week's events an "all-out national attack by the church."

Anti-abortion protesters show up at most Ferraro rallies, too, but at week's end the candidate was showing no sign of accommodation. "If they want to make this (election) a referendum on that, we'll make it a referendum on that," she told supporters on Saturday in Syracuse, N.Y.

TWO OF THE nation's most prominent Catholic politicians — Sen. Edward Kennedy and New York Gov. Mario Cuomo — came to Ms. Ferraro's defense earlier in the week. Both questioned the Catholic leadership's course, arguing in Kennedy's words that the church cannot mean that "every moral command should be written into law."

As anti-abortion groups watched the furor with approval, some Ferraro supporters suggested that vehemence of the attacks on the Democratic vice presidential candidate could be traced to sexist attitudes of church leaders.

She was asked on Tuesday if she felt she was being attacked because she was a woman.

"No," she firmly told reporters.

But others were not so sure.

"I would like to be convinced it is not just blatant sexism by the church; When Teddy Kennedy ran for president, you didn't see this," said Ms. Falkenberg.

Geraldine Ferraro greets Archbishop John O'Conner during a dinner of the Coalition of Italo-American Associations Inc., in New York Friday night. The two New Yorkers, whose differing views on abortion have caused much controversy during the past week, shook hands politely.

AP Laserphoto

"I TRY VERY hard not to be paranoid with relation to my sex," said Roxanne Conlin, who ran for governor of Iowa in 1982 and faced anti-abortion pickets as well as a letter from her church's bishops condeming her position on abortion. "But Jimmy Carter's position on abortion is the same as Geraldine Ferraro's" and he is one of the male politicians "who have not been subjected to this sort of attack."

It is clear Ms. Ferraro's discussion of abortion has an element never present before in a national campaign — simply because she is the first female candidate on a national party ticket.

The New York congresswoman says that, as a Catholic, she is opposed to abortion. But she says she will not try to impose her religious beliefs on others through the law.

As has been true through much of her campaign, outside events controlled Ms. Ferraro's week.

Archbishop John J. O'Connor said last weekend she had misrepresented the church's position on abortion, triggering a phone call from her that dominated Monday's news followed by a news conference focused on the topic Tuesday.

Even when Ms. Ferraro strode to the podium in Scranton, Pa., to take on the issue directly on Wednesday, her confrontation with anti-abortion demonstrators in the hotbed of such activism was overshadowed by another development.

THE HOUSE ETHICS committee voted to start an investigation of whether she had adequately complied with disclosure laws.

In Scranton, Ms. Ferraro echoed the words of John Kennedy from exactly 24 years before.

"When I take my oath of office, I accept the charge of serving all of the people of every faith, not just some people of my faith," she said. "If ever my conscience or my religious views prevented me from carrying out those duties to the best of my ability, then I would resign from my office before I would betray the public trust."

On Sept. 12, 1960, Kennedy used similar words to defend his position, which was almost the reverse of Ms. Ferraro's.

He was under attack by those who suggested his real allegiance would be to the Roman Catholic Church, not to the government.

Advisers to candidates know debates could help Mondale

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's strategists, as well as Walter Mondale's, entered the current debate negotiations knowing presidential debates could be the pivotal element of the campaign — and that they usually give a boost to the challenger.

As a result, White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III, negotiating for Reagan, pressed for fewer debates spaced close together, while Mondale campaign chairman James A. Johnson wanted more debates spread out throughout the campaign.

Now, approval seems near for the candidates to meet Oct. 7 for the first debate, and Oct. 21 for the second and last, according to sources familiar with the negotiations. That gives them 16 days until election day to recover from any gaffes.

Both confrontations will occur on Sunday nights, so as not to interfere with Monday night football or regular television series, said a senior Reagan campaign official, who commented only on condition he not be named. And the White House apparently succeeded in having the candidates questioned by a panel rather than a single moderator.

"We think that catfight debates are not presidential," said the official, rejecting a format in which the candidates are allowed to argue back and forth with only a single moderator to keep peace.

"Debates such as you saw in the Democratic primaries where the candidates call each other's proposals baloney and gobbledegook are not presidential," he added.

The panel of questioners is likely to consist of reporters. Though it apparently hasn't yet been settled how they will be selected, this official said he favored having the sponsoring organization give the candidates lists of possible panelists. The candidates then would have the right to object to particular names.

The issue of timing was important to both sides. For example, the official said, an incumbent with a lead doesn't want the debate to be too close to Election Day.

All debates have a major impact, he said, but a leading candidate would want to avoid the possibility of not being able to correct a mistake if he should make one.

That argues for early debates from Reagan's viewpoint. But on the other hand, the White House also saw a danger in beginning th debate series too early.

"If you've got a candidacy that i not exactly greased along, rollin along, do you want to give them a opportunity to get it on track?" h asked, obviously referring to Mon dale. "And the answer to that woul be no."

A lot of attention will turn to th debates once the details are agreed to and locked in, the official said.

"You could argue that if you were behind, you might want to start debating very, very early and end debating very, very late. And have more debates," he said. "That's their position.... Ours is the reversal. We'd like to see them sort of sandwiched in a relatively short period of time somewhere in the middle."

On another topic, the same official said that despite President Reagan's solid lead in the polls, his political strategists expect the race to narrow substantially, especially once the debates begin.

"All I'm saying is, these things can turn around," he said.

Voters to decide drinking issue in dry state

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The issue of liquor-by-the-drink goes before voters Tuesday for the third time in two decades in this Bible Belt state, the only one without some form of open bar sales.

A record turnout of up to 1 million voters is expected for the runoff primary, with most of the attention directed at a proposed constitutional amendment to legalize alcoholic drink sales on a county-option basis.

Oklahomans rejected similar proposals at the polls twice in the 1970s. Under state law, drinks can be sold only in private clubs from bottles brought in by members.

Spokesmen for Oklahomans for Responsible Liquor Control contend the state now has "liquor by the wink," with nightclubs routinely ignoring the prohibition against across-the-bar liquor sales.

George L. Mothershed, an Oklahoma City businessman, and Bill Crozier, a former Federal Aviation Administration instructor, are seeking the Republican Senate nomination. The winner will face incumbent Sen. David Boren in November.

The race has been low key, with both candidates saying they would be better supporters of President Reagan than has been Democrat Boren, a former governor who is seeking his second six-year term.

In other primaries Tuesday, Massachusetts voters pick nominees for the Senate seat being relinquished by Democrat Paul Tsongas. Rep. Gerry Studds also faces a Democratic primary in which a major undercurrent has been his admission that he engaged in a homosexual affair with a House page several years ago.

In Oklahoma, defeat of liquor-by-the-drink proposals in 1972 and 1976 came despite strong campaigns by backers who say the state's anti-saloon laws are hurting tourism and economic development.

Dry forces are once again being led by churchmen, who were successful in holding back repeal of Prohibition until 1959.

Sunday sermons by anti-liquor preachers were considered a major factor in the defeat of liquor questions in 1972 by 61,743 votes and in 1976 by 72,569 votes.

Chamber of Commerce officials in the state's two largest cities — Oklahoma City and Tulsa — have led the effort to allow each county to decide whether they wish to remain wet or dry.

The Oklahoma Is OK Committee, organized to fight the plan, has hammered on the theme that liquor by the drink will increase drunken driving.

Pro-liquor forces have poured $1 million into a two-year campaign. Much of that money, which came principally from hotels, restaurants and other businesses, was spent on the successful petition drive to get the question on the ballot.

Virtually all of the $250,000-plus the drys are spending on radio, television and newspaper ads came from "special offerings" taken at churches across the state, said Dick McCartney, editor of the Baptist Messenger newspaper.

State trooper kills self, four family members

PIKESVILLE, Md. (AP) — A state trooper armed with a shotgun blasted his way into his estranged wife's apartment Saturday and killed her and their three children before committing suicide, police said.

Larry Avery "blew out" a patio door, then fired eight more shots within about seven minutes, killing his family, said Baltimore County police spokesman Jay Miller.

The bodies of Avery, 33, and his wife, Barbara, 35, were found in the living room of her suburban Baltimore apartment, Miller said. Their three children, 15-year-old Caul, 8-year-old Kalasha and 8-month-old J.P., were found in their bedroom, all shot in the head.

Mrs. Avery had been shot in the chest, and Avery, dressed in civilian clothes with the shotgun cradled at his side, had a wound in his head, Miller said.

Diane Abrams, 37, who was visiting in the next apartment, was struck in the face by shotgun pellets that came through the wall, he said. She was in satisfactory condition at Sinai Hospital, a spokeswoman said.

Mrs. Avery called county police at 11:30 p.m. Friday to report that her husband was trying to break in, Miller said. Neighbors called shortly thereafter to report hearing gunshots, he said.

Avery called the barracks in Bel Air, where he was assigned, about 11:40 p.m. and told the duty officer he had just killed his family and was planning to kill himself, said state police spokesman Dan McCarthy. He also told the desk sergeant where his uniforms and equipment could be found.

The four-year veteran, assigned two weeks ago to criminal investigations, was at work until about 90 minutes before the shootings, McCarthy said.

Suit brought attention to genetic theories

ATLANTA (AP) — A jury awarded physicist William Shockley only $1, but the Nobel prize-winner's successful libel lawsuit against a writer and newspaper drew new attention to his claim that blacks are intellectually inferior to whites.

Shockley

A U.S. District Court of five whites and one black on Friday ruled that the 74-year-old scientist had been libeled in a 1980 article comparing his proposal for voluntary sterilization of the "genetically disadvantaged" with Nazi genetic experiments during World War II.

However, the jury awarded Shockley only $1 in actual damages and no punitive damages in his $1.25 million claim against writer Roger Witherspoon and Cox Enterprises Inc., the publishers of The Atlanta Constitution, which printed the article.

Shockley, who shared a 1956 Nobel Prize for his role in developing the transistor, indicated during the eight-day trial that attracting attention to his theories was one reason he filed the suit.

"I don't care whether people pay much attention to me, but they certainly should pay attention to the problems I raise," he said.

In fact, so much attention was paid to the theories during the trial that U.S. District Judge Robert Vining warned jurors that they were only to "try a case of libel."

"You are not here to determine the validity of anybody's plans or programs (or) to agree or disagree with what people propose," Vining said before the jury began its 3½ hours of deliberations on Friday.

Shockley, who turned his attention to genetics in the mid-1960s, theorized that blacks as a group are intellectually inferior to whites as a group and suggested as a "thinking exercise" that cash bonuses be paid for voluntary sterilizations.

One witness testified during the trial that about 85 percent of American blacks would qualify for such bonuses under Shockley's IQ-based criteria.

Witherspoon's 1980 article said that "the Shockley program was tried out in Germany during World War II" and described his proposals as "reworked Hitlerian experiments."

Shockley testified that the comparison was an "evil lie" and said he viewed the Nazi genetic experiments as "hideous and horrible."

Witherspoon, who is black, testified that the comparison was a "rhetorical device" not intended to be taken literally, but that he thought it was a reasonable one.

University of Missouri journalism and law professor Dale Spencer, testifying for Witherspoon and Cox, agreed and said the article was "an obvious column" that presented Shockley's views fairly.

Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist Clark Mollenhoff, a Washington & Lee University journalism professor who testified for Shockley, said the physicist was libeled because the article portrayed him as "an American Hitler."

Shockley's proposal had "nothing to do with race, per se," testified Dr. Arthur Jensen, a professor of educational psychology at the University of California at Berkeley.

It "is a voluntary program and does not have political overtones, whereas the Nazi program of genocide was directed at a particular racial group," said Jensen, who testified for Shockley, but added that he did not endorse the plan.

But defense witness Barry Mehler, a University of Illinois specialist in the history of eugenics — social programs aimed at developing superior beings — said Shockley's theories and the Nazi experiments were "basically very similar."

And Dr. Oscar Kempthorne, an Iowa State University specialist in statistical genetics, testified that he found the voluntary sterilization plan to be "morally repulsive" and said, "My perception is that Dr. Shockley is regarded in the human genetics area as nearly incompetent."

Shockley called the jury award "inadequate" and said it would "encourage the press to take equal freedom in libeling others."

Defense attorney Al Norman said that "to the extent of (paying) 50 cents apiece, we came out close to winning. Total victory would have been zero."

The jury intended to send a message to both sides, said a juror who asked not to be identified.

Union to recommend strike at Disneyland

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Union officials will recommend that 1,844 Disneyland employees reject an "unfair and unjust" contract offer and strike the popular amusement park when the proposal is put to a vote Monday, a spokesman said.

Talks broke off late Friday between negotiators for Disneyland and the five unions representing janitors, ride operators, bakery and hotel workers, among others, said Robert Tiernan, spokesman for Service Employees International Union Local 399.

The current contract was to expire at 12:01 a.m. Sunday, but both sides agreed to extend it through midnight Monday, Tiernan said. A walkout could take place as early as Tuesday if workers reject the pact and vote to strike.

"We fully expect that the union membership will send a clear message to Disneyland that these proposals are not only inadequate, they're unfair and unjust and certainly not reflective of the membership's contribution to Disneyland," he said.

The union members will be voting on what Disneyland called its "last, best and final offer," he said.

Tiernan declined to provide details of the offer, but said that "nothing has changed" significantly since the park, hurt by lagging attendance, asked half its unionized workers to take 17 percent pay cuts over three years.

The unions have sought a two-year contract with annual pay increases of "between 3 percent and 8 percent, which is the average nationwide," he said.

Current union hourly pay scales range from about $7 to $10, said Disneyland spokesman Al Flores.

The unions also object to "very punitive language changes that management is steadfastly demanding that are not acceptable at all," Tiernan said, adding that the changes concern working conditions.

The five unions are SEIU, United Food and Commercial Workers Local 324, representing merchandise sales people; Teamsters Local 88, representing ride operators; Bakery and Confectionery Workers Local 66; and Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees Union Local 681.

Disneyland, which opened in July 1955, has been struck twice. In March 1979, about 500 maintenance workers walked out for 13 days, and in 1970, about two dozen talent workers struck for two days.

Owner, salesman guilty of selling tainted meat

DENVER (AP) — The owner and top salesman of a meatpacking company plan to appeal convictions for selling tainted meat to the federal government, much of it for the nation's school lunch program, lawyers said.

The convictions Friday capped a nine-day trial in which employees and federal inspectors described filthy conditions at the Cattle King Packing Co. plant, which has been closed since February.

Witnesses testified that Cattle King produced hamburger made with rotten meat and, in some cases, repackaged spoiled bundles rejected by supermarkets.

A U.S. District Court jury found Cattle King owner Rudy "Butch" Stanko of Scottsbluff, Neb., and salesman Gary Waderich of Sterling, Colo., guilty of seven counts each of violating federal meat regulations.

The two men face up to 23 years in prison and $70,000 in fines. No sentencing date was set.

"We're shocked at the verdict," said company lawyer Bob Chaloupka.

"We can't believe it came back guilty on all counts," said Waderich's lawyer, Bob McAllister. Both said they would appeal.

Stanko, who sat impassively as the jury forewoman read the verdicts, "considers himself to be innocent," Chaloupka said. "He has not given up the fight in any way, shape or form."

Waderich at first leaned back in his chair and stared at the jury, then shook his head and put it down on the defense table as his wife burst into tears.

"We're very pleased with the verdict," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Charles H. Torres. "There were some counts we were a little worried about. We were concerned about the count charging them with the shipment of adulterated meat. The evidence was a little weak."

Cattle King and Stanko Packing Co. of Gering, Neb., supplied about one-fourth of the ground beef used in school cafeterias around the country before allegations of wrongdoing were broadcast by NBC-TV in September 1983.

Two days after the report, the Department of Agriculture barred Cattle King from bidding on federal contracts and has since seized 18 million pounds of Cattle King-produced hamburger ordered for schoolchildren.

The resulting publicity crippled Stanko operations in Colorado and Nebraska. Cattle King closed its doors in February and Stanko Packing was sold to a Wisconsin firm in July.

Chaloupka said his client set up the Denver-area packing plant, oversaw it for several months and then hired his cousin, Henry Stanko, to run Cattle King for $180,000 a year.

Henry Stanko earlier pleaded guilty to charges of concealing damaged or inferior meat from federal inspectors and was sentenced to one year in jail and fined $1,000.

Driver charged with negligence

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A driver whose tour bus slid off the Alaska Highway and overturned down an embankment, injuring 15 people, has been charged with negligent driving, authorities said.

Brian Lair, 27, of Calgary, Alberta, was charged in the Friday accident near Dot Lake, a tiny village about 135 miles southeast of Fairbanks, said State Police spokesman Paul Edscorn.

The Atlas Tours bus, en route from Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, to Fairbanks, "was traveling too fast to negotiate a curve and the driver apparently lost control," Edscorn said.

Teen sentenced in rape, abduction

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A 14-year-old boy has been sentenced to one year in a juvenile detention center after pleading guilty to the rape and abduction of a woman who was locked in a car trunk and displayed to tavern patrons.

The youth, whose name was not made public because of his age, pleaded guilty Sept. 6 to armed robbery, first-degree sexual assault and false imprisonment. His sentence will be reviewed after one year and he could be resentenced annually until he is 19, authorities said Friday.

Phillip Wayne Harvey, 28, of Milwaukee, faces a Dec. 12 trial on the same charges.

Lightning bolt injured soccer fans

PAOLI, Pa. (AP) — A lightning bolt struck a damp field during a high school soccer game, injuring 29 people, one critically, authorities said Saturday.

The lightning struck Friday just as a storm moved into the area, school officials and police said. Four of the injured were hospitalized and one, 16-year-old Steve Ericson, was in critical condition Saturday.

"I felt a tingle, heard a loud bang, and then I was flat on my back," said Roger Brain, coach of Bible Baptist School, which was wrapping up a match against Faith Baptist Church when the bolt struck.

UAW picket line mood 'festive'

By JAMES REINDL
Associated Press Writer

United Auto Workers members walked picket lines at 13 General Motors Corp. plants around the nation with high spirits Saturday, saying they were "prepared to do whatever it takes" in the first widespread strike against the giant automaker in 14 years.

Union members "are feeling, 'Hey, if they don't want to give in, then they are willing to stay out there as long as it takes, a day, a week, a month, many months,' till we can reach an agreement we can live with," said Ted Creason, 42, assistant financial secretary at Local 160 at Warren, Mich.

The UAW authorized strikes Friday on local issues at 13 plants — mostly assembly facilities — when the national contract expired at midnight. The national talks resumed Saturday morning in Detroit.

About 59,000 of the 350,000 GM workers represented by the UAW were idled by the walkouts. More than half of the striking workers were in Michigan, at plants in Flint, Pontiac and Warren.

THE UNION also struck plants at Van Nuys, Calif.; Doraville, Ga.; Arlington, Texas; Wilmington, Del.; Linden, N.J.; Bowling Green, Ky.; Shreveport, La.; and Wentzville, Mo.

"Production stopped at 12 o'clock and the plant's empty. It's just security guards now," said Hector Villanueva, a worker at Linden. He said he was near the end of his shift when a UAW leader walked in and told workers "punch your clock and get out of here."

The mood along the picket lines in Michigan was mostly festive and jovial, according to union members.

"We're doing all right," said Bill Spencer, president of Local 5960 at GM's Lake Orion plant near Pontiac, where Cadillacs and Oldsmobiles are made. "We're prepared to do whatever it takes."

TED CREASON, assistant financial secretary at Local 160, described the atmosphere on the picket line as "very festive."

"They were happy to be out on strike ... because of problems the shop committee has been having," Creason said. A main issue in local talks has been seniority, he said.

The UAW has said the main issue in the talks is job security, a bid to keep the automakers from farming out work to plants overseas.

But it was also seeking wage and benefit increases following billions of dollars in contract concessions made two years ago when the industry was losing money. The union has demanded the first raise in three years of its $9.63-an-hour basic wage.

"We stepped up to our responsibility, took a cut in pay, froze wages, lost benefits," said Sal Menchaca, secretary-treasurer for UAW Local 654 at Van Nuys. "Now that GM has recorded record profits, we feel we should get some of that money back."

"WHEN YOU'RE in L.A., the car capital of the world, you feel you can make a good struggle for job security," UAW Local 645 president Pete Beltran said in Van Nuys, adding that pickets "had a party out here last night."

"They're moving work away to other countries and it's not right," said Danny Garcia, 21, an assembler at Van Nuys. "They're taking too much away from the people."

Several union members said they began saving money several months ago in preparation for a strike.

Creason, who has a wife and two children, said he had saved and would stay out "even if we run out of savings and such, whatever it takes to reach an equitable settlement."

Strikers will get $85 a week in strike pay beginning the eighth day of the strike.

But Fred Kurczewski, 38, a model maker at GM's Technical Center at Warren, said the strike had his family concerned.

"I think it will be a hardship," he said. "My wife is worried."

Mike Bourgeois, 34, a father of three small children who has worked at the Arlington plant for 12 years, said he was going to start looking for temporary work immediately.

The Arlington workers walked out three hours early over local issues, including more than 2,000 unsettled grievances. "This is one of the plants furthest away from settlement," said Larry Hartman, international UAW representative from Detroit. "Local management has taken a very rigid stance on local issues."

Pope urges reconciliation between whites, Indians

TORONTO (AP) — Pope John Paul II appealed Saturday for reconciliation between Canadian whites and Indians, and a huge crowd filled the runways of a military airport to hear Mass in the shadow of a giant steel cross.

While Canadians — and Americans from across the border — poured in by car, bus and subway to the site of the Mass at Downsview Airport in suburban Toronto, the 64-year-old pontiff made a helicopter journey to pray at the graves of missionary martyrs.

At Ste.-Marie-among-the-Hurons, 80 miles northwest of Toronto, John Paul visited the site where five French Jesuit priests were tortured and killed by Iroquois in the 17th century.

Then at the nearby Martyrs' Shrine, the pope told hundreds of Indians and tens of thousands of other Canadians at an outdoor ceremony that it was time for reconciliation.

"This is truly the hour for Canadians to heal all the divisions that have developed over the centuries between the original peoples and the newcomers to this continent," the pontiff said.

"The one faith is expressed in different ways," he said. "Thus, not only is Christianity relevant to the Indian peoples, but Christ, in the members of his body, is himself Indian."

To symbolize the connections, the service included Indian rites — the Ojibway Sweet Grass Ceremony and the Eagle Feather Ceremony.

Saturday's sermon marked the second time John Paul addressed the grievances of Indians in his 12-day Canadian tour. Five days earlier at the shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre in Quebec, he acknowledged that in earlier centuries the church had committed "blunders" in its dealings with Indians.

"This is truly the hour for Canadians to heal all the divisions that have developed over the centuries between the original peoples and the newcomers to this continent."
— Pope John Paul II

The pope is to meet with leaders of Canada's Indian and Eskimo organizations on Tuesday in Fort Simpson, an Indian village near the Arctic Circle.

On Sunday, the pope heads west to visit Winnipeg, Manitoba and Edmonton, Alberta. He will take a rest from his grueling tour on Monday afternoon, with a private afternoon in the spectacular Canadian Rockies.

At a rousing rally Friday night in Toronto with 50,000 Polish-Candians, the pope, himself born in Poland, set aside his prepared text to call the banned Polish trade union Solidarity a symbol of "the dignity and the rights of the human person."

He said he hoped his countrymen would one day be able to "live as Poland, living our own lives as Polish citizens."

Ste.-Marie-among-the-Hurons is a reconstruction of the 17th century mission where Jesuits first converted the Huron Indians who lived on the edge of Georgian Bay.

Clergymen say deaths higher than official toll

SEBOKENG, South Africa (AP) — Rioting in black townships south of Johannesburg last week killed 46 blacks and injured hundreds of others, according to clergymen who work in the area. Police have reported 31 deaths.

Police said 10 other blacks died in rioting in other parts of South Africa since Aug. 31, bringing the official toll to 41. But based on the priests' estimates the death toll would be 56.

Some of the injured will not go to government hospitals for fear of arrest. Instead, they will "remain with bullets in their bodies," said Anglican priest Peter Lenkoe.

Lenkoe is from Sebokeng, the worst-hit township in the Vaal area about 40 miles south of Johannesburg.

Many of the victims were to be buried after two mass funerals today, according to priests taking part in the ceremonies.

Meanwhile, in Durban six opposition leaders sought by security police spent their second night in the British consulate. Britain has denied a request to intervene with the South African government on their behalf, but it has said it will not force them to leave.

"There is an uneasy peace reigning in the township," said Lenkoe. "The basic problems have not been resolved, which leaves one very uncertain about the future."

Conservative pope in liberal Canada

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON

An Analysis

TORONTO (AP) — He's been serenaded by French-Canadian pop singers and buckskin-clad Indians, sat in a Huron longhouse, seen women distributing communion at Mass and addressed nuns in flowered dresses and open-toe shoes.

More than midway through his tour of Canada, Pope John Paul II has been exposed at close range to this country's ethnic diversity and the various currents buffeting its Roman Catholic Church.

The pope hasn't budged on any of the traditional teachings contested by many in his flock here. He has reiterated church opposition to birth control and abortion, defended priestly celibacy and offered no opening to feminists seeking the ordination of women.

But at least so far, he appears to have tailored his message for North American ears, making his points without sounding too harsh.

"His church in Canada is, after all, a pluralistic one, rather like the country itself, a place where a little tolerance goes a long way," commented the Montreal Gazette newspaper as the pope toured mainly French-speaking Canada at the start of the 12-day pilgrimage. "It also has a reputation for being one of the most liberal outposts in Christendom."

As nowhere else in Canada, the church in once bedrock conservative Quebec has been swept by liberal currents over the past 30 years and seen its influence wane in an increasingly secular and pluralistic society.

It was while visiting the tomb of St. Marguerite Bourgeoys in Montreal that the pope met with nuns. While the older members of the order were wearing two-piece suits with lapel crosses, thus identifiable as sisters as the pope has asked, the few young ones present wore flowered frocks and open-toe shoes.

As he crossed through French-speaking Canada, not only priests but women distributed communion at papal Masses. That is a common practice in Canada but rare for a Mass celebrated by John Paul II.

The Rev. Everett McNeil, a spokesman for the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops, explained that the Vatican was notified of the Canadian practice and it was decided that "whatever the custom is, that's what he's going to follow."

Among the issues straining the church here is the role women should be allowed to play.

While he hasn't repeated the statement here, John Paul II in the past has ruled out the ordination of women as priests.

The Toronto Star reported that the subject was raised during an interfaith meeting at an Anglican Church in Toronto on Friday. But the Protestant pastor who brought it up got no response from the pope, the report said.

John Paul II has been stressing what he sees as the rejection of religious values in North America's secular society.

Emergency declared in states

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The federal government declared an emergency in the states of Veracruz, Guerrero, Michoacan and Tamaulipas, where more flooding was expected because of rains. It also alerted four government agencies to provide help for refugees.

At least 90 people have died because of flooding due to heavy rains that have been soaking most of Mexico for the past 19 days. Fifteen of the victims perished Friday in the southeastern state of Guerrero.

Another 150,000 people were left homeless by the floods, authorities said.

In announcing the emergency, the Interior Department said in a communique Friday night it has placed the departments of Defense and Agriculture, the Social Security Institute and the government Food Supplies Institute on stand-by to help the refugees.

About 90,000 people were forced to evacuate their homes late Friday in Chilpancingo when eight districts of the Guerrero state capital were flooded. Another 70,000 were evacuated before dawn Saturday, the governor's office said in a communique.

Technicians and workers building the government's Laguna Verde thermonuclear electric plant, 293 miles southeast of the capital, were alerted to take special precautions in case tropical storm Edouard hits the area.

Edouard was last reported remaining stationary about 120 miles northeast of the site. Laguna Verde is Mexico's first nuclear plant, and is not yet operational.

In Mexico City, part of a hill side collapsed Friday night, burying a family of six, including four children, in their home. Fire fighters dug them out two hours later unharmed, a police report said.

EARNEST MONEY

An offer to buy is usually accompanied by a substantial deposit sometimes called a binder or earnest money. The sum proves to the seller that you mean business. The deposit is usually placed with the broker who keeps it in a special trust, or escrow account, separate from his or her own funds. If your offer is rejected, the agent returns your money immediately.

The amount normally put on deposit is 10% of the purchase price, but this amount could be higher or lower depending on the circumstances. Remember, though, that the seller is weighing your offer to see if it's likely to result in a successful sale. Unaccompanied by enough cash, it may look a little shaky.

This earnest money, of course, counts toward the sum you'll need at closing. Your full deposit is credited toward the down payment and other settlement costs. The contract should clearly state under what circumstances it may be returned.

Prime minister must fight instability in government

By ARTHUR MAX

An Analysis

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres faces an awesome task in trying to control Israel's political and economic turmoil and lead a government with a built-in mechanism for indecision.

Peres, the Labor Party leader who fought for seven years to become prime minister, must share his decisions with former Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, his ideological rival and a deputy prime minister.

A cartoon in the Jerusalem Post shows Peres and Shamir as halves of a two-headed horse, each pulling in opposite directions.

Peres, who prides himself on being an administrator, is trying to prevent his new government from slipping into paralysis by clearly outlining his priorities.

FIRST, HE WANTS to correct an economy racing toward an annual inflation rate of 400 percent. Debts are so high that private banks are limiting credit, foreign currency reserves are plunging past the danger point, and unemployment is rising.

Second, he wants to get Israeli forces out of Lebanon "within months." Peres told the Haaretz newspaper that he has a "crystallized plan," of political and military action that would end the more than two-year occupation without threatening Israel's northern border.

A Lebanon pullout would clear the way for his third priority, reopening peace efforts with the Arab states.

Peres may find harmony in his bipartisan Cabinet on the first two issues. But he is almost certain to clash with Shamir's Likud bloc, which controls 12 of 25 Cabinet seats, if peace with the Arabs means giving up parts of the occupied West Bank.

Neither Labor nor Likud won enough seats in Parliament in the July 23 election to control a majority and govern without the other.

SO THEY JOINED forces in a Cabinet constructed so that neither can make a move without the other's consent.

"I doubt if it can hold up over a long period of time," said Aryeh Naor, a former Cabinet secretary. "It will be hard for the government to function properly or decide anything."

The Cabinet — one of the largest in Israel's history — has 25 ministers: 12 from the Labor alignment, 12 from the Likud bloc, and one held by the National Religious Party which claims to be neutral.

But the tough decisions will be made in two inner Cabinets of 10 members each, five from each bloc. One will deal with foreign affairs and security, the other with the economy.

Peres, acknowledging the potential for endless deadlock, says that nevertheless the two traditional rivals must close ranks to battle the country's current crises.

The greatest destabilizing element is Ariel Sharon, the former defense minister who quit his post in disgrace in 1983, but has come back as industry and trade minister.

Sharon has openly challenged Shamir's leadership of the Likud bloc in what some analysts see as a bid to eventually become prime minister.

At a meeting last week of the Herut Party, the dominant partner in the Likud bloc, Sharon created a furor by questioning Shamir's right to pick the party's members in the Cabinet. At the last minute he backed away from a showdown.

Sharon "wanted to terrorize Shamir. He wanted to prove that Shamir is a nonentity," wrote veteran Parliament reporter Asher Wallfish in the Jerusalem Post.

Soviets may be facing energy crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union — the world's largest oil producer — is approaching an energy crisis sure to strain a major foundation of its political, economic and military power, according to a study released Saturday.

And while its vast oil, natural gas and coal reserves will enable it to remain a net energy exporter well into the 1990s, Moscow cannot continue to maintain the "growth machine" its once-cheap energy fueled without major sacrifices, said the study written by Ed A. Hewett of the Brookings Institution, a Washington-based research center.

Hewett, recounting the Reagan administration's failed attempt to prevent Moscow from getting Western equipment for a natural gas pipeline to Western Europe, concluded there is little the United States can do to affect Soviet energy developments.

"The easy availability of relevant energy technologies and abundant supplies of state-supported and private export credits from Europe and Japan relegate the United States to primarily 'observer status,'" he wrote.

BUT HEWETT also dismissed the notion, recounted as late as 1982 by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, that the Soviet Union is running out of energy and, in Weinberger's words, might "move down through Iran, Iraq and Afghanistan and try to seize the oil fields" of the Middle East.

That belief gained widespread acceptance on the basis of a 1977 prediction by the Central Intelligence Agency that the Soviet Union would shift from a net exporter of energy to a net importer of 3.5 million to 4.5 million barrels per day by 1985.

The CIA recanted the prediction almost immediately after it was released, saying its assumptions were faulty. Nonetheless, the estimate was used to push much of the Carter administration's energy program through Congress.

With 40 percent of the world's proven and probable oil and natural gas reserves, the Soviet Union probably will never need the Middle East as an energy source, Hewett said.

HOWEVER, NOTING the CIA's predictions that the Soviets would not meet their 1980 production target of 12 million barrels of oil and that output would begin declining soon afterward, he said the agency's estimates "were not that far off."

"Oil output will probably stagnate in the Soviet Union, but energy output will not," Hewett wrote in his 222-page study, "Energy Economics and Foreign Policy in the Soviet Union."

According to July 1984 CIA figures, the Soviet Union's crude oil production in 1983 was a record-high 11.96 million barrels per day, compared with 8.68 million barrels by the United States and 4.87 million barrels by Saudi Arabia.

Using only three-fourths of their production themselves, the Soviets have traditionally relied on oil as a major foreign policy tool. In exchange for their loyalty to Moscow, the East European allies are getting two-thirds to three-fourths of their oil from the Soviet Union at subsidized prices estimated to have cost the Soviet economy $17.8 billion in 1980 alone.

At the same time, the Soviets have been selling 1.25 to 1.75 million barrels of oil a day to the West, for nearly 70 percent of their total foreign currency earnings. The windfall from a doubling in world oil prices in 1979-80 is credited for enabling them to continue to import billions of dollars in food each year without having to borrow from Western banks.

HEWETT CONTENDED that the Soviets have been able to continue this trend only by overinvesting in energy development, including a huge expansion of natural gas output as a substitute for oil once used within the country but now devoted to exports.

In 1983, he said, energy — including transportation links such as pipelines and electric transmission lines — accounted for 40 percent of the nation's total industrial development, crowding out funds needed to modernize its outdated manufacturing facilites, housing, roads and schools.

"In effect, the Soviets are borrowing against future collective consumption," Hewett told reporters. "But they're not going to be able to do it very much longer."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Major explosion not expected

LEGASPI, Philippines (AP) — A "big bang" from the Mayon volcano was still possible, scientists said Saturday, but the current eruption appeared to be dying down.

Government volcanologists said Mayon will probably continue to spew ash and lava sporadically over the next month, but that it was unlikely a major explosion would take place.

Meanwhile, the Office of Civil Defense said the number of evacuees from farms and homes near the volcano had grown to more than 21,000 in temporary centers. Most evacuees are in Legaspi, 15 miles from the volcano famous for its nearly perfect cone shape.

The eruption began last Monday. There were no confirmed casualties, but civil defense officials said there was still danger from mudslides on the mountain's lower slopes.

China wants U.S. compensation

PEKING (AP) — China is demanding U.S. compensation for Chinese textile industry losses expected because of new U.S. "country of origin" import rules.

The official Xinhua news agency said Saturday that Wang Pingqing, deputy minister of foreign economic relations and trade, demanded "fair and reasonable" damage payments at a meeting Friday with U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hummel.

The Chinese official said China was "strongly dissatisfied" with the new rules, which took effect Sept. 7 — with some exemptions until Oct. 31 — and which China has said could cost up to 100,000 jobs in its textile industry.

The rules are designed to prevent one country from bypassing its export quotas to the United States by sending partially finished goods to a third country for finishing and packaging.

More flood deaths reported

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Twenty-seven more deaths were reported in northern Bangladesh Saturday, bringing to 1,100 the number of people killed in month-long flooding.

The official Bangladesh news agency said the latest deaths occurred in Chapainawabganj district, located on the Indian border 170 miles north of Dhaka.

The agency said authorities started evacuating 70,000 of the 300,000 people marooned in the district. The state-run radio Saturday said all the country's major rivers, including the Ganges, Brahmaputra, Padma and Meghna, were running at dangerous levels.

Floods in Bangladesh since mid-May affected more than 30 million people and destroyed 900,000 metric tons of foodgrains. The country's food shortage, earlier estimated at 1.1 million tons, rose to 2.6 million tons due to the floods and drought in the northern districts earlier this month.

Inflation rate hits 60 percent

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Prime Minister Cesar Virata acknowledged Saturday that the Philippines' annual inflation rate has hit 60 percent, but said he does not expect to continue its moratorium on foreign debt repayments.

The year-long moratorium on repayment of the Philippines' $26 billion foreign debt ends in mid-October.

Virata, who is also finance minister, told a news conference he has no knowledge of First Lady Imelda Marcos' role in economic negotiations. The presidential palace said Mrs. Marcos, who is governor of Manila, is touring Europe, the Middle East and the United States on a mission to negotiate new loans.

Virata's remarks came before his own departure Sunday for talks in Tokyo and Washington with private and public financial officials.

The Philippines is suffering its worst economic crisis since World War II. It has been trying to reschedule its current payments and negotiate new loans, including $630 million from the International Monetary Fund and an additional $3.3 billion from private and government sources.

Problems about water corrected

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Health authorities said Saturday they have corrected water treatment problems that caused intestinal illness among hundreds of foreign tourists in the Algarve, a popular vacation area along Portugal's southern coast.

A Health Ministry statement assured those who are suffering that their discomfort was temporary.

Travel agencies in Sweden, Denmark and Finland last week canceled flights for Albufeira, the Algarve's principal resort, after more than 300 Scandanavian tourists complained of intestinal illness. British newspapers reported similar complaints of diarrhea among British tourists.

U.N. assembly to face 'familiar chronic problems'

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. General Assembly opens this week faced with what a top U.N. official called "the familiar chronic problems of the world." He said that of 142 items on the Assembly agenda, only four are new.

"There is no significant departure on any major topic in terms of Assembly debate from those we have seen in previous years," said William Buffum, an American who serves as undersecretary-general for General Assembly affairs.

He named the Middle East, Cambodia, Afghanistan, the Falkland Islands, South African apartheid, Namibia, Cyprus and Central America, and economic problems such as the Third World's foreign debt and what some nations say should be a more equitable sharing of the world's resources.

Buffum listed as new items on the agenda:

— The critical economic situation in Africa, which the U.N. Economic and Social Council decided earlier this summer to bring to the Assembly for consideration.

— A suggestion by Antigua and Barbuda that the U.N. celebrate the 150th anniversary of emancipation of slaves in the British Empire.

Other issues, such as the Middle East, have come up over and over along with routine housekeeping matters.

An Arab ambassador, who spoke on condition he was not further identified, said the Middle East debate will not take place until November.

He said that by the time it is brought up, U.S. elections will be over, freeing the American administration from domestic political pressures.

The Palestinian National Congress, the ruling body of the Palestinian Arabs, will have met and may have adopted a unified stance, he went on.

He said there also may be an Arab summit in November, giving Arabs a chance to reconcile their differences.

The ambassador said there may be some movement as well toward Israeli withdrawal from southern Lebanon, clearing the way for other issues.

But there still is deep division on the basic issues of a homeland for displaced Palestinians and of Israeli occupation of Arab territory. The usual bitter debates are expected.

A statement this month by Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach indicates there may be a new element in the dispute on Cambodia, now occupied by 130,000 Vietnamese soldiers bolstering the regime of Heng Samrin.

He said Vietnam is ready to discuss a settlement under which Vietnamese troop withdrawal would be coupled with free elections supervised by the United Nations. The elections would be contested by an coalition of Cambodian opposition groups headed by Prince Sihanouk, which is recognized as the legitimate regime by the United Nations.

Disarmament will be a major topic, with dozens of resolutions passed and renewed — but the United Nations remains on the periphery of real disarmament activity.

In 1982 the United Nations tried a major disarmament effort in a special session of the Assembly which drew 19 heads of state and about 50 foreign ministers. The session ended in frustration.

Texas' sword cuts down Auburn, 35-27

Dodge's passing statistics may interest pro scouts

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

AUSTIN — Texas, the team with no offense, not only has a sword, but one with a double edge.

Fullback Jerome Johnson paced a Longhorn rushing attack that gained 126 yards, but the real surprise was quarterback Todd Dodge's passing figures in leading Texas to a 35-27 win over Auburn before 78,348 fans here in Memorial Stadium Saturday night.

Dodge was 15-of-24 for 215 yards passing, the kind of figures that will have pro scouts flocking to Austin if he keeps it up.

Johnson's two fourth quarter touchdowns, but the Steers weren't to get out of it without a late scare by the Tigers, who are now 0-2 and probably have lost Heisman Trophy candidate Bo Jackson for the season with a separated shoulder.

Heading into the final quarter, Texas held a precarious 21-19 lead but would be bucking a Texas-strength wind in the final 15 minutes.

A fumble recovery by Jim Moore gave Texas the ball on the Auburn 16. Johnson scored on a 10-yard touchdown run.

The Longhorns converted another fumble, this one by quarterback Pat Washington, into a 45-yard TD drive with Johnson covering the final 12 yards. After Jeff Ward's conversion, it was 35-19 with only 4:50 left to play. But, the Tigers weren't through yet.

After a 12-play drive of 77 yards, halfback Brent Fullwood scored from the one and Washington ran in the two-pointer to put the War Eagles within striking distance with 2:33 left.

"For the second year in a row, Auburn brought out the best in us," Texas coach Fred Akers said. "We are very, very proud to have won against that fine football team. It was an extremely physical game."

Akers pointed out that Texas, due to injuries, fielded a make-shift lineup and hoped for the best. "Auburn is a hard-hitting, talented team. We did what I thought we would do, fight like hell and scratch enough to win."

The wind was a big factor. Texas scored 14 points in the first period on a 10-yard run by Dodge and then converted a fumble recovery into a 44-yard drive that saw Terry Orr, the former Abilene Cooper back, driving in from the one. Orr was one of those position gambles Texas was forced to make, playing his first game as a tailback.

Auburn took advantge of the wind to put 13 points on the board in the second period, with Kyle Collins going around right end for two yards to climax a 72-yard push. Then drives of 40 and 59 yards resulted in 22 and 40-yard field goals by Robert McGinty.

Texas had the wind at its back in the third period and Dodge engineered a 75-yard touchdown drive, completing four passes to account for 87 yards. The payoff was a 32-yarder to Brent Duhon, his high school reciever when the two were teammates on state champion Port Arthur Jefferson.

After the game, Duhon said this was the first time he had caught a touchdown pass from Dodge in college. Both are seniors.

Auburn countered that score with a 74-yard drive of its own with Jackson eating up the final five yards. Texas tackle Tony DeGrate thwarted the attempt for two points but Auburn trailed only 21-19 and would play the fourth period with the wind at its back.

Auburn was to threaten again before the third period ended as Jackson broke a 53-yard run to the Texas 24. This was the play on which he suffered his injury.

The Tigers not only didn't get the touchdown, but Ray Torres deflected McGinty's attempt to salvage a field goal.

Before leaving the game, Jackson carried 14 times for 104 yards. Johnson led the Steers with 59 yards on 11 carries. "Jerome came through like a million dollars," Akers said.

So did Dodge who completed five of his 15 completions to the acrobatic tight end William Harris. "Harris made some spectacular catches. It was the best game he ever had," Akers said.

Top four ladies gain semifinals

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

Zone Tennis

The women's singles championship event in the Midland Major Zone tennis tournament at Midland College is going like clock work, but a few springs are missing in the men's event.

The top four women seeds advanced to the semifinals as you would expect, but No. 1 is missing in the men's competition.

Midland's Kirk Farquhar, seeded fifth, gained the semis Saturday with a hard fought 6-1, 4-6, 6-3 win over Sean Strickling of Midland College. Strickling had earlier ousted Tyler's Buddy Farrington, the top seed.

Farquhar, a former Midland High and Mississippi tennis star who is now a Midland landman, will face another Midland College standout at 9:30 a.m. today in the semis when he takes on Robert Vrij of Holland.

Vrij, seeded eighth, downed MC freshman teammate Emilo Bijleuelo, also from Holland, in another tough match, 6-4, 5-7, 7-5, to earn the right to meet Farquhar.

In the other semis match today, which is set for the same time, Texas Tech's David Leatherwood, the No. 3 seed, will take on second seeded Danny Olesen of Angelo State. Leatherwood won a quarterfinal match over MC's Brad Bailey, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, while Olesen downed MC's John McCauley, 7-5, 6-0. It's easy to see that Midland College players were a force in the tournament. Five of the final eight are playing tennis at MC. Today's final is set for 1 p.m.

MIDLAND COLLEGE'S Liz Burris, seeded third, gained a semis berth with a 6-3, 7-5 win over Texas A&M's Nadini Rangarajan in part of the clock work draw.

Mustangs post 51-36 victory over Matadors

From Staff Reports

The Midland Christian Mustangs evened thier six-man football record at 1-1 Saturday afternoon with a 51-36 victory over the Bethel Christian Matadors of Carlsbad, N.M.

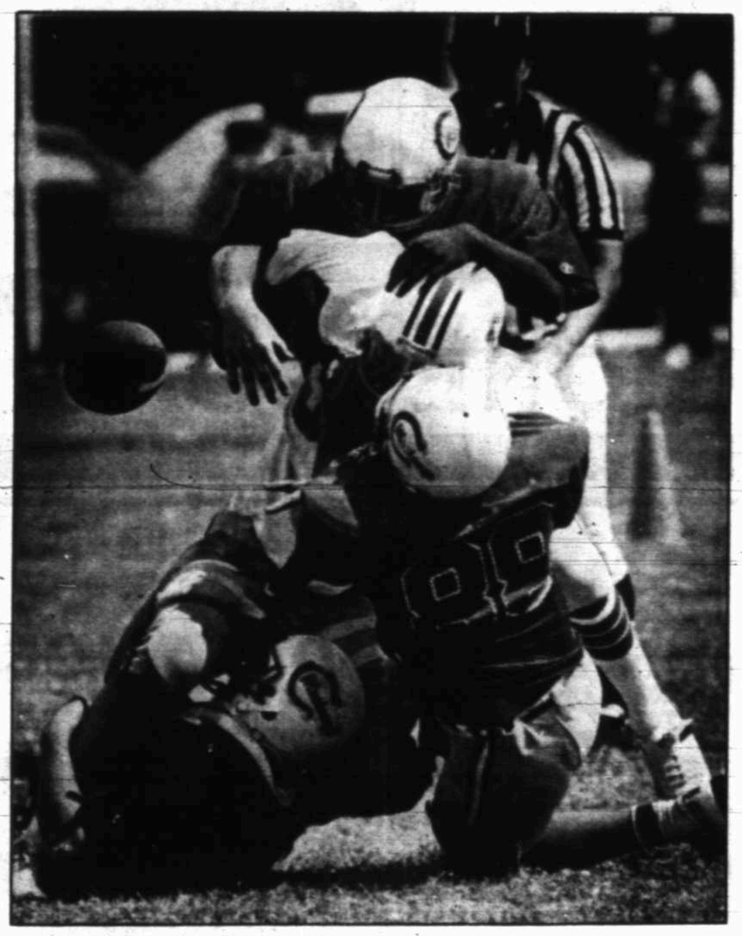

Kevin Matlock paced the high scoring Mustangs with TD receptions of 10, 44 and 44 yards from Karl Schmidt while Tim Ritche had two touchdown runs of 32 and 12 yards. Cory Taylor scored on a four-yard run and again on a 12-yard pass from Ritchie. MC's other score came from Todd Mims on a 15-yard run. Matlock kicked one two-pointer while Schmidt ran for one.

The Mustangs never trailed in the game after taking an early 12-0 lead, but led only by a 26-23 margin at the half. The Matadors fell to 0-2.

Midland Christian put the game away with a 12-0 advantage in the third period. Both teams scored 13 in the deciding fourth period.

Tech rips UT-Arlington

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

LUBBOCK — The cold that snapped at the chilled 35,121 fans here at Jones Stadium only accentuated Texas Tech's red hot showing as the Red Raiders swamped the UT Arlington, 44-7.

Big plays, both offensively and defensively, fueled the first season opening win for coach Jerry Moore since arriving at Tech in 1981.

The Raiders hit the field ready to play. Tech fullback Freddie Wells was certianly ready, and took Tech's first play of the 1984 season for 40 yards around the left side. That put Tech in quick business at the UTA 14, and aided by a fourth and one conversion, the Raiders scored in six plays. Ansel Cole bounced in from two yards out, and Tech quickly led 7-0.

Next it was time for the Raider defense to show its stuff. Tech had stopped UTA's first drive in three plays, but Maverick quarterback Phil Blue connected on two first down passes to get things going on their second possession.

But Tech defensive tackle Ronald Byers personally ended Blue's fun by smashing into him, then falling on the loose ball at the Tech 43. That turnover produced a 29-yard field goal by Ricky Gann, his first of three.

The Raiders then got another big play from its defense. Merv Scurlark snapped up a Mav fumble on UTA's first play after the Gann field goal. Gann hit a 36-yarder moments later.

"They just reared back, had a good time and enjoyed playing football. That's what it is all about," said new Tech defensive coordinator Spike Dykes. "Defensively it was a great team effort. There were no obvious breakdowns anywhere."

Offensively, Wells had 95 yards rushing in the first quarter alone, and spearheaded a Raider ground game that netted 285 yards on the night. Wells finished with 13 carries for 131 yards and Timmy Smith chipped in with 11 carries for 114 steps. Smith quaranteed the rout with a 35-yard touchdown dash early in the second quarter. That big play was set up by another big play, a 27-yard punt return by Lemuel Stinson.

It was a night of many stars for Tech, and the smile on Moore's face said it all.

"In my eyes tonight," said Moore. "We were so much better prepared for things. We made some first game mistakes, but the things I'm not pleased with, I think we can correct. The effort was good."

UTA tried to make something happen after down 20-0 with a fake punt at the Raider 29. But Tech stopped Robert Brodner short of the first.

Meanwhile, everything Tech tried worked, especially the senior passing combination of quarterback Perry Morren to tight end Buzz Tatom. After the aborted fake punt, Tatom caught passes of 22 and 10 yards before Moore went back to Wells. Wells responded with a 22-yard scamper around left end for a first and goal at the Mav seven. Two plays later it was Morren to Wells for a four-yard TD, and with 47 seconds left in the half, Tech led 27-0.

UTA closed the gap somewhat in the third quarter, but Tech had too many horses in the long haul. The Raiders received the second half kickoff but returner Charles Simpson was stripped of the ball by Tim McKyer at the Tech 23. Blue hit wide receiver Andre Booker for 18 yards and two plays later running back Scott Caldwell swept untouched around left end for the touchdown from five yards out.

But the Raiders would have no more of it. Starting at their own 15, Tech went 85 yards in eight plays. The touchdown came when wingback Troy Smith made a leaping grab of Morren's pass for a 28-yard score to make it 34-7.

Morren was 10 of 20 with one interception for 106 yards and two TDs. It was his quarterbacking debut.

Ponies kick Louisville, 41-7

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Jeff Atkins and Reggie Dupard rushed for two touchdowns each and Reggie Phillips intercepted two passes in the end zone, running one back for a touchdown, as No. 14 Southern Methodist routed Louisville 41-7 in college football Saturday night.

The loss dropped Louisville to 0-3, while the game was the season opener for the Mustangs.

Dupard, a junior tailback who led the Southwest Conference last season in rushing with 1,249 yards, gave the Mustangs a 7-0 lead on a 13-yard scoring run with 9:09 left in the first quarter.

Atkins, who was the leading freshman rusher in the Southwest Conference last year, had the Mustangs' next two scores, crossing the goal line on two 1-yard runs to give SMU a 20-7 lead with 8:07 left in the half.

With 2:24 left in the first half, Phillips intercepted an Ed Rubbert pass in the end zone and ran it back the length of the field to give SMU a 27-7 halftime lead.

LOUISVILLE GOT inside the SMU 25-yard line four times in the first half, but three of those drives ended with a Rubbert pass attempt being intercepted in the end zone.

Dupard's second touchdown run, a 50-yard scamper up the middle with 6:04 left in the third quarter, gave SMU its final victory margin and ended all scoring.

Georgia Tech wrecks Crimson Tide, 16-6

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Robert Lavette scored the only touchdown on a 1-yard run and David Bell kicked three field goals as Georgia Tech upset 19th-ranked Alabama 16-6 Saturday, leaving the Crimson Tide with their worst start in 28 years.

It was the second loss in a row for Alabama, which blew a 17-point second half lead in a 38-31 loss to Boston College. The defeat left the Tide with an 0-2 record for the first time since 1956 — two years before Paul "Bear" Bryant returned to his alma mater to develop a perennial national power.

Lavette's touchdown scamper with 10:23 left in the second quarter capped a 71-yard Jacket drive that produced a 10-0 lead. He gained 128 yards on 26 carries.

Bell had field goals of 46 yards in the first quarter, 37 yards in the second and 23 yards in the third as Tech built a 13-0 lead before Alabama claimed its initial first down midway through the second period.

It was the season-opener for Tech, which had lost its last five battles with Southeastern Conference foes and 16 of 18 against the SEC since Bill Curry became head coach in 1980.

Florida 63, Tulane 21

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Florida quarterback Kerwin Bell passed for two touchdowns and ran for another as the Gators capped an emotional week with an easy 63-21 victory over Tulane.

The triumph boosted the Southeastern Conference school's record to 1-1-1 and came four days after it learned the NCAA had uncovered 107 alleged rules infractions during a 21-month probe of Coach Charley Pell's program.

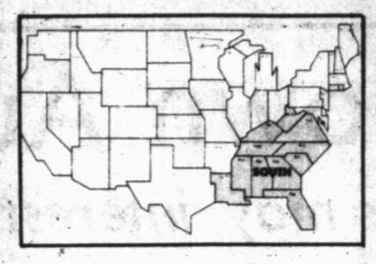

Bell, a freshman walkon, teammed with Ricky Nattiel and Lorenzo Hampton on touchdown plays of 39 and 54 yards, respectively, in the first half when Florida rolled to a 39-7 halftime lead.

West Virginia 17, Virginia Tech 7

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Quarterback Kevin White completed eight of nine passes in the first half to lead the West Virginia Mountaineers to a 14-7 victory over Virginia Tech's Hokies.

Tech held White to only one completion in seven attempts during the second half, but West Virginia retained its edge by intercepting the Hokies during key second-half drives.

touchdown with 9:09 left in the third. It was the first touchdown the Mountaineers, 3-0, have given up this season.

Vanderbilt 23, Maryland 14

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Kurt Page tossed two touchdown passes to Chuck Scott and Ricky Anderson booted three field goals as Vanderbilt turned back repeated Maryland threats and defeated the Terps 23-14.

Page completed 25 of 35 passes for 316 yards, including 10 to Scott for 162 yards, and hit the flanker for scoring passes of 23 and 19 yards to build a 14-6 lead for the unbeaten Commodores, 2-0, in the second quarter.

Maryland, 0-2, which settled for earlier Jess Atkinson field goals of 42 and 34 yards following third-down sacks, forged a 14-14 tie on a 17-pass from Frank Reich to Alvin Blount, plus a two-point conversion.

Navy 33, North Carolina 30

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Bill Byrne's 60-yard scoring strike to tailback Rich Clouse and Napoleon McCallum's two-point conversion run with 2:24 left gave Navy a 33-30 win over North Carolina.

Navy had taken a 25-24 edge on Byrne's 11-yard scoring pass to Chris Weiler with 8:07 remaining. Byrne's two-point conversion pass failed.

The Tar Heels took the kickoff and marched from their 17 to take the lead on Ethan Horton's 2-yard run with 4:02 remaining. Kevin Anthony tried a pass for the conversion but missed, leaving North Carolina with a 30-25 advantage.

After Byrne was sacked at his 21, he got Navy out of a hole with a 19-yard strike to Weiler. He then connected with Clouse, who raced to the end zone untouched.

Alcorn St. 52, Alabama St. 0

LORMAN, Miss. — Alcorn State quarterback Richard Myles dashed 79 yards to break a school quarterback record as the Braves pounded Alabama State for a 52-0 Southwestern Athletic Conference victory.

Myles also completed 6 of 12 passes for 131 yards, including three touchdown passes.

S. Carolina St. 46, NC A&T 7

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Quarterback Charles Glaze fired four touchdown passes and ran 9 yards for another score to lead South Carolina State past North Carolina A&T 46-7.

The Bulldogs snapped a two-game losing streak to go 1-2, 1-1 in the conference, while the Aggies dropped to 0-2, 0-1.

LSU 47, Wichita St. 7

BATON ROUGE, La.— Running backs Dalton Hilliard and Garry James led a crushing ground attack for Louisiana State University Saturday night that buried Wichita State 47-7 in an intersectional college football game.

Hilliard had 166 yards on 17 carries and James had 122 on 21 carries. Hilliard left the game 3 minutes into the second half, and James sat down about 3 minutes later.

Virginia 35, VMI 7

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Sophomore quarterback Kevin Ferguson completed 15 of 25 passes for 273 yards and three touchdowns as Virginia trounced Virginia Military Institute 35-7.

Arkansas can't break 14-14 tie with Mississippi

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Arkansas quarterback Brad Taylor drilled an 8-yard scoring pass to Donnie Centers with two seconds left in the first half for what proved to be the final points in a 14-14 tie with Mississippi Saturday night.

In the second half, Ole Miss kicker Bill Smith of Little Rock was wide right on field goal attempts of 32 and 33 yards, and then missed a 54-yarder on the final play of the game.

Frogs slaughter Aggies

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Tony Jeffery rushed for 182 yards and Texas Christian amassed 677 total yards as the Horned Frogs opened their season with a 62-18 nonconference victory over Utah State Saturday.

Jeffery, a freshman, led TCU's rushing attack, which gained 494 yards — eclipsing a TCU mark of 436 yards set in 1970 against Texas-Arlington. The total offensive mark of 677 yards also was a record for the Southwest Conference school — bettering the mark of 549 yards set in 1969 against Rice.

Jeffery played sparingly in the second half after gaining 171 yards in the first half.

He ran for 53 yards during TCU's first scoring drive and later in the first quarter ran 72 yards for the team's second touchdown.

USU scored all of its points in the first half. Willie Beecher kicked an 18-yard first quarter field goal. In the second quarter, quarterback Brad Ipsen connected with senior wide receiver Paul Jones on a 62-yard scoring toss.

DAVIS ADDED two more touchdowns during the game, on a 59-yard run late in the first half and on a 4-yard run midway through the third quarter.

TCU quarterback Anthony Sciaraffa, who accounted for the first goal of the game on a 10-yard pass to Don Sharp, was forced to leave the game in the first quarter when he fumbled and sprained his ankle while going for the ball.

He was replaced by Anthony Gulley who threw a 64-yard touchdown pass to James Maness in the second quarter to make it 28-10.

Gulley scored again on a 3-yard run later in the second quarter and also threw a 29-yard scoring pass to Sharp in the third quarter, making it 55-18.

TCU third-string quarterback Scott Ankrom scored the fourth quarter's only tally on a 2-yard run with 24 seconds remaining.

Davis gained 145 yards on 13 carries during the game.

For USU, White had 115 yards on 16 carries, the only bright spot for the Aggie offense. Quarterbacks Ipsen and Kevin Nitzel, who entered the game late in the fourth quarter, combined fo five interceptions.

SMU

Two minutes before, Mustang quarterback Don King hit Ron Morris in the end zone with a 32-yard pass to put SMU up 34-7.

Dupard carried 13 times for 145 yards and Atkins 21 for 93 yards, as SMU gained 377 yards on the ground. Louisville managed only 126 yards in 40 carries.

Rubbert completed 18 of 37 passes for 299 yards as Louisville racked up 327 yards in the air. King completed 5 of 8 tosses for 90 yards.

TENNIS

Burris will face San Antonio's Brenda Niemeyer, the top seed, at 9:30 a.m. today with the winner moving on to the 1 p.m. finals. Niemeyer defeated Kim Gidley of Midland College, 6-3, 6-2, in the quarterfinals.

No. 2 seed Sandra Sigulinski of South Plains defeated Gaye Lynn Gensler of Texas A&M, 6-2, 6-0, to earn the right to face A&M's Vanne Akagi, the No. 4 seed, in the semis today. Akagi won a 6-0, 6-0 match over Elizabeth Pierre of Angelo State in the quarterfinals.

Doubles action was going on late at the MC courts Saturday and in a confusing set of circumstances, those final matches will be at either 9:30 a.m. or 3 p.m. The time had not been set late Saturday.

Jay Box of Odessa won the men's 25 singles championship with a 7-5, 7-5 win over Lubbock's Terry Wood. Midland's Mike Henthorn won the men's amatuer title with a 6-2, 6-2 win over Tyler's Tommy Minter. Minter, however, teamed with Ron Neely to win the doubles championship, 6-3, 6-4.

In the women's amatuer chase, Laurie Silberman and Susan Kulcak, both of Houston, advanced to the finals and took the match back home to be completed in Houston. In the women's 25 singles, Becky Roberts will meet Rosie Garza in the finals and they teamed together to win the women's 25 doubles title.

Lee White shutsout Midland Gold, 22-0

From Staff Reports

Lee White shutout Midland Gold, 22-0, Saturday morning at Memorial Stadium in the season opener for both freshman schools.

Lee Maroon also got off to a good start in ninth grade action with a 27-0 win over Odessa Bowie. Midland Purple started the ninth grade campaign Thursday with a 20-0 win over Odessa Nimitz.

In another ninth grade game involving Odessa teams Saturday, Hood slipped by Crockett by a 12-6 margin. On Thursday, Ector defeated Bonham, 21-0.

The eighth grade Midland-Odessa conference also opened on Saturday morning with the Midland schools taking on the Odessa schools.

Goddard was the only Midland school to get off on a winning note as they shutout Odessa Hood 24-0. Alamo lost a 13-12 decision to Odessa Ector while San Jacinto lost to Crockett by a 14-0 count.

In an eighth grade game involving Odessa teams, Nimitz defeated Bowie 28-6. Odessa Bonham was open.

Windham wins first go

PENDLETON, ORE. — Midland's Kennard Windham won the first go round in steer roping with 11.5 seconds here Wednesday in the 74th Pendleton Roundup Rodeo, an event that begin in 1910. Windham ended up ninth overall in the steer roping competition that completed Saturday.

Big Spring's Waley Cathey placed sixth in the bull riding and Jim Davis of Pecos won the second go round in calf roping with a 12.6. The overall winner was Roy Cooper of Durant, Okla., winning $4,403.

The roundup rodeo is a PRCA sanctioned event and over 60,000 people attended the $123,000 event. The rodeo is unique in that the arena is covered with grass and has a large Indian participation. Over 500 Indians camped on the rodeo grounds in traditional teepees.

MJTA taking entries

The Midland Junior Tennis Association will hold its next tournament Sept. 29-30 with deadline for entry Sept. 26. There will be no entries accepted after that date.

Divisions will be for boys and girls 16-under, 13-under and 10-under. To enter call Yvonne or Cary Garton 683 1529.

There will be no mixed doubles benefit this year, but the MJTA hopes to earn the money for balls by funneling its efforts to the USTA-Penn Circuit tournament in October.

First City National Bank will furnish balls for the MJTA tournament, which will begin at 9 a.m. at the Midland Lee courts.

Associated Press

DETROIT — Ruppert Jones belted a home run and made a game-saving catch in left field and Milt Wilcox and Willie Hernandez combined on a three-hitter as Detroit edged the Toronto Blue Jays 2-1 Saturday, lowering the Tigers' magic number to four in the American League East.

Wilcox, 17-7, struck out a season-high eight and walked just one in notching his sixth successive victory. His only mistake was a solo home run by George Bell, his 24th, in the Toronto second that tied the game 1-1.

Hernandez, who took over at the start of the eighth inning, notched his 29th save — out of 29 save opportunities — and set a club record by finishing his 61st game, breaking John Hiller's 1973 mark of 60.

Angels 11, White Sox 2

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Reggie Jackson belted his 499th career homer to lead a four-homer assault as the California Angels routed the Chicago White Sox 11-2.

With the scored tied 1-1 and Doug DeCinces aboard with a single, Jackson slugged his 21st homer of the season to come within one of becoming the 13th member of the 500 circle.

Bobby Grich immediately followed with a solo shot off Tom Seaver, 14-10, to put the Angels on top 4-1.

Red Sox 4, Yankees 3

NEW YORK — Tony Armas blasted his major league-leading 38th home run, a solo shot in the second inning, and Marty Barrett doubled in the go-ahead run in Boston's three-run fifth as the Red Sox edged the New York Yankees 4-3.

Al Nipper, 10-5, scattered 12 hits in 8 1-3 innings before needing relief help from Bob Stanley, who gained his 21st save.

With the score tied 1-1 in the fifth, Bill Buckner and Rich Gedman rapped one-out singles off John Montefusco, 3-3, and Barrett drilled an RBI double. Dwight Evans' two-run single capped the rally.

After Armas' homer in the second, the Yankees tied it in the third on Ken Griffey's leadoff homer, his sixth of the season. Griffey's two-run single in the sixth made the score 4-3.

Brewers 7, Orioles 0

MILWAUKEE — Robin Yount supported pitcher Bob Gibson's two-hitter with a grand slam home run to power the Milwaukee Brewers to a 7-0 victory Saturday over the Baltimore Orioles.

Gibson, 1-3, struck out seven and walked five in completing his first game in six starts.

Yount's homer, his 13th this season and third career grand slam, came in a six-run sixth.

The Brewers loaded the bases with one out on singles by Cecil Cooper and Mark Brouhard and an intentional walk to Jim Sundberg. Willie Lozado then doubled home two runs for a 3-0 lead.

Twins 1, Rangers 0

ARLINGTON — Mike Smithson pitched a six-hitter for his first career shutout and Pat Putnam drove in the only run of the game with a third-inning single to lead the Minnesota Twins to a 1-0 victory over the Texas Rangers Saturday night.

With the victory, Minnesota held on to at least a share of first place in the American League West.

Both Smithson and Putnam are ex-Rangers.

Smithson, 15-12, struck out five and walked two. Texas starter Danny Darwin, 8-11, went the distance and scattered eight hits in defeat.

Putnam singled home Mickey Hatcher from second. With one out, Hatcher had singled to right and advanced to second on a fielder's choice.

In the bottom of the third, the Rangers staged their only major scoring threat of the game. Alan Bannister and Donnie Scott opened the inning with singles and, two outs later, Gary Woods walked to load the bases. But Smithson slipped a called third strike past Buddy Bell to end the inning.

Bears fine Payton $500 for TD throw

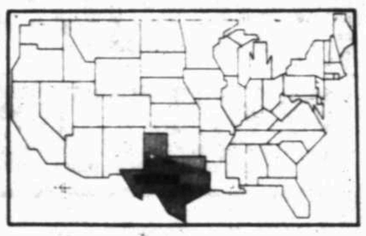

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Bears running back Walter Payton has been fined $500 for throwing a football into the stands at Soldier Field last Sunday after a 72-yard touchdown run — the longest of his career — the Chicago Sun-Times reported in its Sunday editions.

The newspaper said that the National Football League had confirmed the fine, although the league officially had not informed Payton.

"It's not the cost of the balls we're worried about," the newspaper quoted an unnamed NFL official as saying. "We get those free from Wilson. We're concerned with the safety factor from a spectator standpoint. It could lead to a potential lawsuit."

Lamar slips by North Texas, 10-6

Associated Press

BEAUMONT — Dennis Haskin's 66-yard touchdown pass to flanker Dwayne Dodd just a minute and a half into the game along with Ricky Fernandez' 50-yard second-quarter field goal led Lamar to a 10-6 Southland Conference victory over North Texas State.

Lamar, improving to 1-1 for the season in the conference opener for both schools, showed off its defensive strength by limiting the 1-1 Eagles to just 72 yards total offense.

Fernandez' field goal was set up by cornerback Bucky White's interception of Scott Toman's pass.

Southern U. 10, Texas Southern 3

HOUSTON (AP) — Roger Serrano kicked a 22-yard field goal and James Evans added a touchdown as Southern University defeated Texas Southern 10-3 Saturday night.

Rain earlier in the day made the playing field a marshland and high winds also plagued both teams' offenses.

Serrano started the scoring for Southern University in the first quarter and Evans plunged in from the 1-yard line in the second quarter and Serrano added the extra point.

Tarleton St. 21, Colorado Mines 14

GOLDEN, Colo. — Quarterback Kevin Dorn ran for two touchdowns and running back Tyrone Foster rolled up 101 yards on 11 carries to lift Tarleton State to a 21-14 victory over the Colorado School of Mines.

Tarleton State moved to 2-0 with the victory, while Mines fell to 0-2.

Nevada-Reno 61, Texas A&I 35

RENO, Nev. — Nevada-Reno established itself as an offensive football team with a decisive 61-35 win over Texas A&I in a game that resulted in over 1,000 yards of total offense.

Junior Johnny Gordon made his home debut with 167 yards rushing on 19 carries and tied school and Big Sky Conference records with five rushing touchdowns.

Howard Payne 7, Texas Lutheran 7

SEGUIN — Texas Lutheran fullback Trent Faith scored on a 1-yard plunge in the fourth-quarter to salvage a 7-7 for the 12-ranked team in NAIA Division 1 against Howard Payne University in a rain-soaked game.

Angelo St. 21, Cameron 0

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — Angelo State University's opportunistc defense set up all three Ram touchdowns as ASU improved its record to 2-1 with a 21-0 victory Saturday night over Cameron.

The NCAA Division II Rams scored in each of the first three periods. Two touchdowns were set up by fumble recoveries and the third by an interception.

Panhandle St. 23, Sul Ross St. 10

ALPINE (AP) — Quarterback Craig Benson fired two scoring passes to wide receiver Dan Burgan to lead Panhandle State University to a 23-10 win over Sul Ross State University.

The Lobo offense bogged down early in the contest when starting quarterack Gilbert Moroles suffered an ankle injury and did not return to the game.

It was the first regular season loss Sul Ross suffered at home since 1980.

New Mexico 27, W. Texas St. 0

ALBUQUERQUE — Quarterback Buddy Funck threw for two touchdowns and ran for a third as New Mexico rolled over punchless West Texas State 27-0.

Funck, who sat out the second half, scored on a 1-yard run, found freshman wide receiver Sherman Shepherd open on a 12-yard scoring pass and hit halfback Montez Love with a 6-yard TD aerial.

Jackson State 34, Prairie View 14

JACKSON, Miss. — Quarterback John McKenzie scored two touchdowns and passed for another as Jackson State blistered winless Prairie View 34-14 in a Southwestern Athletic Conference football game.

The Jackson State defense kept Prairie View off balance all night and was able to get to the Texas team's quarterback twice for a loss of 16 yards.

Abilene Christian 27, UNC 7

ABILENE — Quarterback Loyal Proffitt threw for 165 yards and three touchdowns and fullback Anthony Thomas scored twice to lead Abilene Christian University to a 27-7 victory over the University of Northern Colorado.

Houston takes 30-17 win over Miami-Ohio

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston sophomore quarterback Gerald Landry ran for one touchdown and passed for two others after a slow first quarter to lead the Cougars to a season-opening 30-17 college football victory over Miami-Ohio Saturday night.

The Cougars, who were plagued with 45 turnovers last season, lost possession on an interception and fumble the first two times they got the ball in the first quarter.

But Landry got the Houston offense moving in the second quarter and the Cougar defense shut down the Redskins until the fourth quarter, when Houston had to hold off a mini-rally.

Miami quarterback Todd Rollins ran 10 yards for a touchdown and completed a 29-yard touchdown pass to John Arthur with Houston turnovers setting up each score.

Landry's 1-yard touchdown leap and a 4-yard touchdown pass to Michael Simmons staked the Cougars to a 13-3 halftime lead after an error-filled first quarter.

The Redskins converted a fumble by Raymond Tate and a recovery by Steve Fitzhugh at the Miami 40. That set up a 25-yard field goal by Gary Gussman for Miami's only lead of the half.

O'Meara holds GMO lead

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Mark O'Meara, chasing that elusive, first professional victory, compiled a front-running, 3-under-par 69 and stretched his lead to three strokes Saturday in the third round of the $300,000 Greater Milwaukee Open Golf Tournament.

O'Meara, four times a runner-up this season, completed three rounds over the 7,010 yard Tuckaway Country Club course in 204, 12 strokes under par.

But the former national amateur champion, who has won $316,236 without taking a title, has his work cut out for him in Sunday's final round of the chase for a $54,000 first prize.

"Three shots is not very much when you've got Tom Watson right there," said O'Meara, who had a 5-shot lead at the turn then saw it whittled away over the last nine.

A fast finish—birdies on three of the last four holes — lifted Watson into a tie for second at 207, three off the pace. The rally salvaged a third round 70 in the cold, breezy weather.

"The fast finish was awfully important," said Watson, the season's leading money-winner and the only man to win three times on the American tour this year.

"It put me back in the tournament," Watson said. "For a while there, it looked like Mark was going to run away with it. And he's still the man to catch."

Watson was tied for second with Dan Pohl, who had a third round 71.

Keith Fergus and Canadian Jim Nelford were only four back at 208. Fergus shot a 68 and Nelford had a solid 70.

"When the leader is that far ahead, that allows him to make two or three more mistakes than you're allowed. He's playing awfully well, and playing with a lot of confidence. A guy like that will be hard to beat — but it can be done," Fergus said.

Tied at 209 were Gary Pinns, with a 68, and Mark McCumber, who had a 69.

O'Meara chipped inside of five feet for birdies on both of the front-side par-5s, hit a 2-iron to within eight feet for birdie on the eighth and ran in an 18-foot birdie putt on the ninth that put him out in 32 and gave him a 5-shot lead.

A 3-putt bogey on the 14th, and Watson's rush over the last three holes trimmed the margin to three.

Watson, one over par for the day and on the verge of dropping out of the title chase, did what he had to do over the last four holes. He scored from 30-35 feet on the 15th, made a 10-footer on the 16th and then capped it with a 20-foot birdie putt from the fringe on the 18th.

Two tied in LPGA Safeco Classic

KENT, Wash. (AP) — Veteran Kathy Whitworth snared a share of the third-round lead in the $175,000 Safeco Classic by shooting a 7-under-par 65 Saturday, and Vicki Alvarez tied a Ladies Professional Golf Association single-round record with 10 birdies.

Whitworth, 43, used only 26 putts in finishing with a 54-hole total of 209, 7 under par. That gave her a tie for first place with halfway leader Muffin Spencer-Devlin, who shot a 1-under 71.

Spencer-Devlin, 30, had four birdies and three bogeys for her 71 to go with her previous scores of 66-72. She sank a par-5-saving 6-foot putt on the 480-yard closing hole.

The 5-foot-1 Alvarez, who was down by 10 shots when the day began, jumped back into contention by breaking the tournament record with a brilliant 8-under 64 for a 212 total.

The Alvarez round included 10 birdies and a double bogey, and her 10 birdies on a sun-splashed, windless day over the 6,202-yard Meridian Valley Country Club equalled the LPGA mark for one round held by Nancy Lopez, Beth Daniel and Lori Garbacz.

Alvarez was in a four-way tie, three shots back, with Sherry Turner, who had a third-day 69; Janet Anderson, 70, and Marta Figueras-Dotti, 73.

There was a three-way tie for seventh place at 213, 3-under, among Jane Blalock, Donna White and Laura Baugh Cole. Amy Alcott, winner in Portland, Ore., last weekend, was in a tie at 212, 2-under.

Whitworth, a 26-year tour member, was extremely efficient on the greens, sinking birdie putts from 4 to 10 feet.

The LPGA Hall of Famer will be gunning for her 86th tour victory Sunday on the course at Kent, just south of Seattle. When she earned her 85th career triumph in July, she became professional golf's all-time winningest player in the United States. Sam Snead had 84 victories on the U.S. men's tour.

BYU continues streak, 38-15

Associated Press

PROVO, Utah — Quarterback Robbie Bosco passed for one touchdown and ran for another and linebacker Marv Allen picked off two passes Saturday as No. 8 Brigham Young won its 14th straight college football game with a 38-15 triumph over Tulsa.

BYU, which owns the nation's longest winning streak, advanced its season record to 3-0 heading into its first Western Athletic Conference game next weekend at Hawaii. Tulsa, winners of the Missouri Valley Conference the past four seasons, fell to 1-1.

Bosco completed 23 of 33 passes for 337 yards.

BYU's defense repeatedly negated Tulsa drives throughout the game, holding the Golden Hurricane to three field goals by Jason Staurovsky until the fourth quarter when quarterback Steve Gage flipped a 4-yard pass to Ron Kelley.

The Cougars' defense, which has given up five touchdowns in its three games, stopped Tulsa drives in the first half five times within the 20 yard line. And Allen ended one Golden Hurricane threat by intercepting a Gage pass in the end zone.

Wyoming 26, Air Force 20

LARAMIE, Wyo. — Freshman quarterback Scott Runyan threw for a pair of fourth-quarter touchdown passes as Wyoming came from behind to upset Air Force 26-20 in WAC action.

Both Wyoming and Air Force, which had a 10-game winning streak broken, are 2-1 for the season.

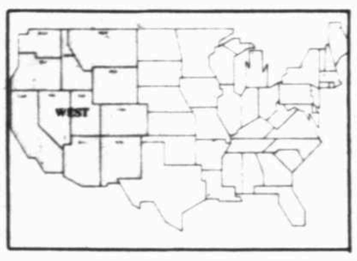

Runyan gave Wyoming its first lead, 19-14, with an 88-yard strike to junior Allyn Griffin, then sealed the victory with a disputed 12-yard strike to senior Jay Novacek. Air Force claimed Novacek trapped the ball in the end zone.

Colorado St. 10, Hawaii 3

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — Sophomore running back Steve Bartalo rushed for 170 yards and a fourth-quarter touchdown, sparking Colorado State to a 10-3 victory over Hawaii in a WAC game dominated by defense.

The victory squared CSU's record at 1-1 and dropped Hawaii to 0-2. It was the WAC opener for both teams.

Stanford 34, Illinois 19

STANFORD, Calif. — Sophomore quarterback John Paye shot down Big 10 champion Illinois with 295 yards passing as Stanford pulled one of its biggest upsets, 34-19.

Paye led Stanford on four touchdown drives and Mark Harmon booted field goals of 57 yards, third longest in the school's history, and 36 yards.

Stanford's defense also shined, intercepting Illinois quarterback Jack Trudeau three times in the fourth quarter.

The victory was the first for new Stanford coach Jack Elway, now 1-1 after losing the opener at Oklahoma. Stanford hadn't won since last Oct. 22 when it beat Arizona during a dismal 1-10 season, and hadn't scored as many points in two years.

Illinois, 2-1, led only briefly when it recovered a fumble by Brian Morris on the game's first play, and Chris White kicked a 28-yard field goal for a 3-0 lead.

Stanford dominated the rest of the game, however. Paye took the Cardinal on three TD drives while completing 13 of 19 passes for 199 of the team's 263 total yards for a 24-13 halftime lead.

Oregon 27, Colorado 20

EUGENE, Ore. — Sophomore quarterback Chris Miller threw two touchdown passes to Lew Barnes to lead Oregon to a 27-20 victory over Colorado as the Ducks boosted their record to 2-0, their best start in 19 years.

Oregon's second consecutive come-from-behind triumph came despite a standout rushing performance by Colorado tailback Lee Rouson, who gained 121 yards in 29 carries and scored both of the Buffaloes' second-half touchdowns.

Miller passed 16 yards to Barnes for the touchdown that gave Oregon the lead for good 24-20 with 13½ minutes to go in the game. Tony Cherry's 56-yard kickoff return set up the decisive score.

California 28, Pacific 12

BERKELEY — University of California senior quarterback Gale Gilbert led a 21-point fourth quarter outburst to give the Golden Bears a 28-12 victory over the Pacific University Tigers.

After a scoreless third period, the Bears went ahead to stay, 13-12, at the start of the fourth quarter on a 9-yard touchdown run by Ed Barbero. The score capped a nine-play, 60-yard drive in which Gilbert, who passed for a total 267 yards, completed four passes for 37 yards.

UCLA 23, Long Beach St. 17

PASADENA, Calif. — John Lee kicked three field goals, making him nine-for-nine in two games this season, as No. 7 UCLA struggled past unheralded Long Beach State 23-17.

Lee hit on field goals of 37 and 22 yards in the second quarter and nailed a 22-yarder with 13:01 left in the game.

The 49ers, who fell to 0-2, took a 3-0 lead after just 4:33 of play when David Caylor kicked a 55-yard field goal, which tied a school record.

The Bruins went ahead to stay when quarterback Steve Bono scored on a 1-yard sneak with 5:09 remaining in the first quarter.

No. 1 Nebraska keeps on rolling with 38-7 victory

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Jeff Smith rushed for 183 yards and Craig Sundberg threw two touchdown passes in No. 1-ranked Nebraska's 38-7 non-conference college football victory over Minnesota here Saturday.

Smith, the successor to Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier as the Cornhuskers' I-back, gained 107 yards in the opening quarter and scored the game's first points on a 13-yard touchdown run early in the second quarter.

Smith carried 26 times to accumulate his career-high yardage total before going to the sidelines midway through the third period.

Sundberg completed eight of 10 passes for 134 yards. The fifth-year senior threw scoring passes of 28 yards to Brian Hiemer and 7 yards to Jim Thompson.

Nebraska, 2-0, allowed only one touchdown for the second straight week. Minnesota, 1-1, scored on a 63-yard bomb from freshman reserve quarterback Reggie Foggie to Valdez Baylor, who snuck 10 yards behind the Cornhusker defense before catching the pass.

Oklahoma 42, Pitt 10

PITTSBURGH — Danny Bradley scored twice on plunges of less than a yard and also threw two touchdown passes in leading 15th-ranked Oklahoma to a 42-10 romp over No. 17 Pitt and its best start in five years.

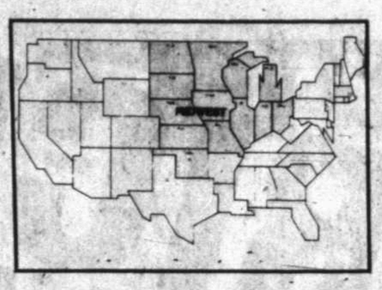

The Sooners, 2-0 for the first time since 1979, spotted Pitt a 3-0 lead midway through the first period on Mark Brasco's 37-yard field goal. Then they took advantage of two mistakes by the Panthers on punt plays plus Bradley's 22-yard scoring pass to Derrick Shepard for a 21-3 halftime lead.

Both errors set up touchdowns and enabled the Sooners to weather a third-period passing barrage by Pitt's John Congemi, who left with a sprained ankle with just over 11 minutes to play.

The loss saddled the Panthers with an 0-2 start for the first time in 12 years.

STILLWATER, Okla. — Oklahoma State defenders Rod Brown and

Mark Moore scored on interception returns while Shawn Jones rushed for more than 100 yards for the second straight game as the 13th-ranked Cowboys turned away pass-happy Bowling Green 31-14.

Penn State 20, Iowa 17

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Doug Strang passed for one touchdown and ran for another and Nick Gancitano kicked a pair of field goals to lift 12th-ranked Penn State to a 20-17 upset of No. 5 Iowa.

Strang, who had a subpar outing in Penn State's 15-12 victory over Rutgers last week, fired a 24-yard touchdown pass to Herb Bellamy in the final minute of the first half to give the Nittany Lions a 13-3 lead and scored on a 1-yard run in the first minute of the final quarter to put his team ahead 20-10.

Florida St. 42, Kansas 16

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Greg Allen shattered Florida State rushing, scoring and all-purpose running records and led the 18th-ranked Seminoles to a 42-16 victory over Kansas.

Allen hiked his career rushing yardage to 3,044, besting Key's mark of 2,953. He also eclipsed Key's career mark of 4,148 all-purpose yards while recording the 12th 100-yard rushing game of his career, another Seminole record.

Notre Dame 24, Mich. St. 20

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Notre Dame tailback Allen Pinkett caught a 40-yard touchdown pass and ran five yards for another score as the Fighting Irish came back from a 17-3 halftime deficit to defeat stubborn Michigan State 24-20.

Michigan State, 1-1, capitalizing on Notre Dame mistakes, had jumped out to a 17-0 first-quarter lead. But in the second half, a fired-up Notre Dame defense bottled up the Spartan offense.

In the final stanza, the Fighting Irish poured it on, scoring two touchdowns, the second after Notre Dame cornerback Mike Haywood blocked a punt deep in Michigan State territory.

Notre Dame recovered on Michigan State's 14 yard line. Pinkett carried the ball three straight times, spinning off the right side on the final carry for a 5-yard touchdown run that gave Notre Dame the lead for the first time and carried them to victory.

Wisconsin 35, Missouri 34

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Senior fullback Mark Harrison ran 21 yards for a touchdown with 5:18 to play, capping a 28-point fourth-quarter rally that gave Wisconsin a 35-34 win over Missouri.

The point-after kick by Todd Gregoire proved decisive as Missouri scored again in the closing minuites but failed on a two-point conversion attempt that would have won the game.

Miami 28, Purdue 17

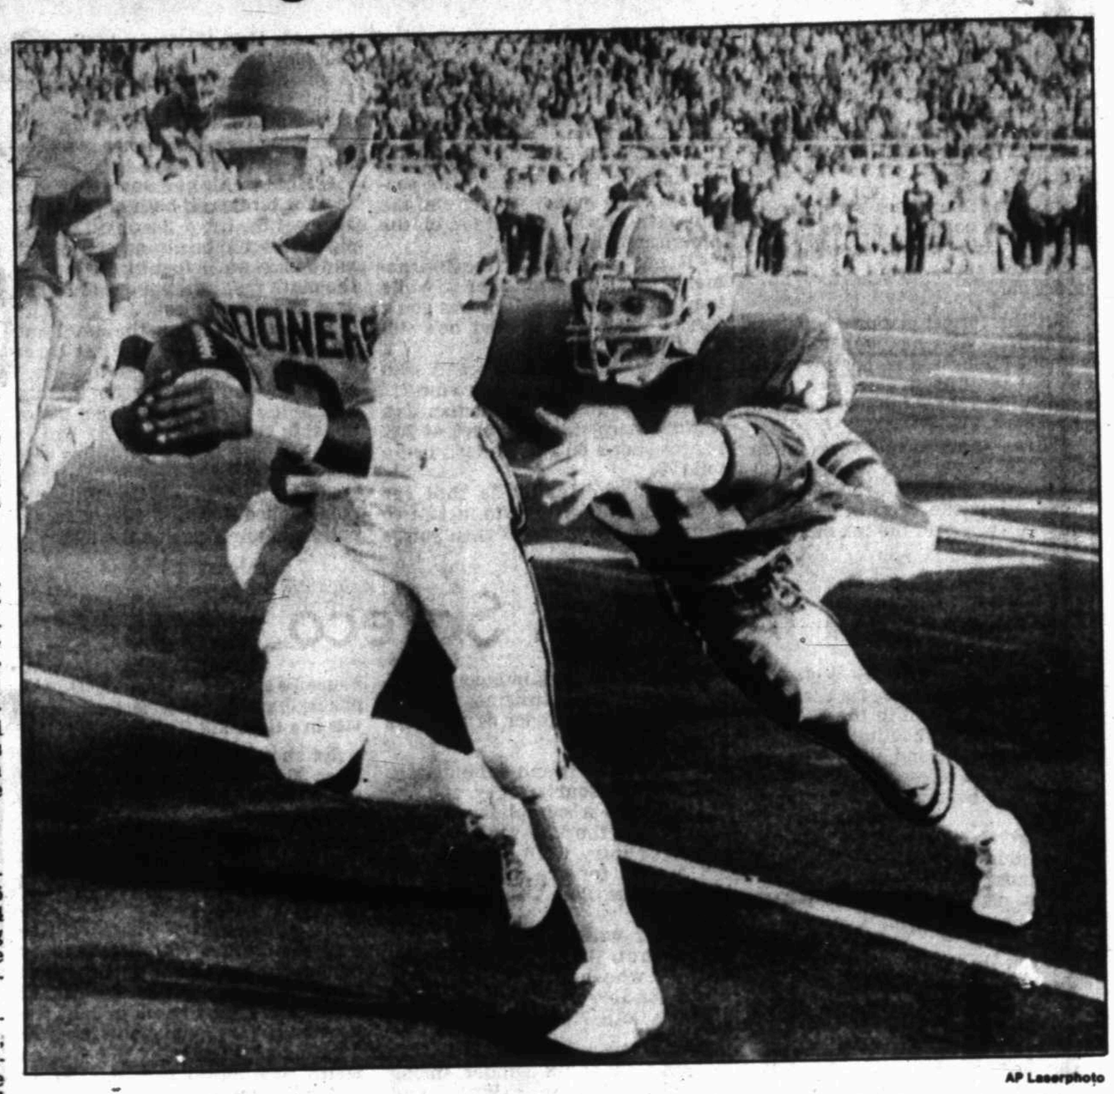

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Sophomore Bernie Kosar guided No. 5 Miami on scoring drives of 66 and 94 yards in the third quarter, scoring once on a quarterback sneak, as the Hurricanes recorded a 28-17 comeback victory over Purdue.

The defending national champions, upset last week by Michigan, moved 66 yards in 10 plays after taking the second half kickoff, to score on Kosar's plunge from the 1-yard line and take the lead for good.

Iowa State 21, Drake 17

AMES, Iowa — Quarterback Alex Espinoza threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to All-American end Tracy Henderson with less than two minutes left to pull out a 21-17 Iowa State victory over Missouri Valley Conference foe Drake.

game and was up 17-0 with less than two minutes gone in the second half.

Syracuse 13, Northwestern 12

EVANSTON, Ill. — Todd Norley's 2-yard touchdown pass to Jim Tate on the final play of the game and Don McAulay's extra-point lifted Syracuse to a 13-12 victory over Northwestern.

Syracuse's only touchdown of the game capped a 63-yard desperation drive led by Norley, who finished the game with 20 completions in 38 attempts for 173 yards.

Kentucky 48, Indiana 14

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Tailback George Adams rushed for 155 yards and a touchdown and set up two other touchdown runs by Mark Logan in the first half, leading Kentucky to a 48-14 rout of error-plagued Indiana.

Army stomps on Colgate

Three break 100 out of wishbone

WEST POINT, N.Y. — Quarterback Nate Sassaman gained 131 yards and scored two touchdowns while leading a trio of rushers over the 100-yard mark as Army's new wishbone attack smothered Colgate 41-15 Saturday.

Sassaman, a converted cornerback, ran 18 times while throwing just three passes, completing two. Fullback Doug Black gained 125 yards on 26 carries and halfback William Lampley picked up 107 yards on 12 attempts.

Army, 1-0, scored on its first two possessions, going ahead on 3-0 on 27-yard field goal by Craig Stopa and making 10-0 when Black capped a 96-yard drive with a 37-yard touchdown run.

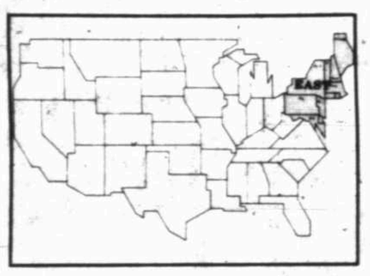

In the second quarter, Sassaman scored on a 21-yard run and Lampley scored on a 33-yard burst as Army took a 24-12 lead at halftime. Sassaman scored a on 1-yard run in the fourth quarter.

Boston U. 44, Morgan St. 0

BOSTON — Rodney Graham ran for 115 yards and three touchdowns and Randy Pettus rushed for two more to lead a 421-yard ground attack as Boston University, which crushed Morgan State 50-0 last year, buried the Golden Bears 44-0.

The Terriers, 2-0, bolted to a 23-0

halftime lead as Morgan State's deepest first-half penetration was its own 39-yard line. Boston University started seven of its first 10 possessions in Golden Bear territory.

Morgan State, which held Texas Southern to minus-18 yards rushing in a season-opening 31-14 loss, fell to 0-2.

William & Mary 23, Delaward 21

NEWARK, Del. — Stan Yagiello threw an 18-yard touchdown pass to Jeff Sanders with no time remaining on the clock as William & Mary slipped by Delaware 23-21.

The Tribe touchdown came a little over one minute after Delaware's Bob Norris capped a 90-yard, 18-play scoring drive with a 10-yard run to put Delaware ahead 21-17.

Rutgers 10, Temple 9

PISCATAWAY, N.J. — Rusty Hochberg hit nine of 11 passes in the second quarter to key two scoring drives and lead Rutgers to a 10-9 victory over Temple, giving Dick Anderson his first victory as coach of the Scarlet Knights.

Hochberg found senior flanker Andrew Baker for a 14-yard touchdown toss in the left corner of the end zone midway through the second quarter to wipe out a 3-0 Temple lead. The junior quarterback also hit Baker on passes of 37 and 20 yards to set up a 38-yard field goal by Tom Angstadt on Rutgers' next possession.

Sophomore placekicker Jim Cooper booted field goals of 41, 39, 43 yards to account for the Temple score, but missed a 23-yard attempt in the third quarter that might have prevented the Owls from dropping to 1-1.

The victory evened Rutgers' record at 1-1. The Scarlet Knights dropped a 15-12 decision to Penn State last Saturday.

Delaware St. 35, Northeastern 0

DOVER, Del. — Quarterback Pat Spencer completed 9 of 12 passes for 223 yards and four touchdowns to lead Delaware State to a 35-0 victory over Northeastern University.

Running back Eldridge Comer caught five of Spencer's passes for 156 yards and two TDs. Spencer threw two other scoring passes of 41 and 17 yards to tight end John Taylor.

Hearns stops Hutchings to defend title

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Thomas Hearns, demonstrating his awesome punching power from the opening bell, knocked down Fred Hutchings twice and stopped him in the third round Saturday to retain the World Boxing Council super welterweight championship.

Hearns, who scored both knockdowns in the first round when he nearly ended the fight, had Hutchings in trouble in the second and finished the match in the third when he had the challenger reeling helplessly from a barrage of head punches.

Referee Arthur Mercante stopped Hearns' third title defense with four seconds left in the third round. At the time that Mercante stopped the bout, one of Hutchings' handlers had climbed into the ring, emploring the referee to take the action he did.

Hearns, who had knocked out Roberto Duran in the second round in his most recent defense, June 15 at Las Vegas, Nev., came very close to ending this fight in the opening round.

The 6-foot-1 Hearns, 154 pounds, hurt the 6-2 Hutchings, 153¾, with a flurry of punches in the first minute of the fight. Then he knocked out Hutchings' mouthpiece with a crushing right hand, and a short while later, knocked down the challenger from Stockton, Calif., with a right to the head.

Once again, Hutchings, ranked No. 3 by the WBC and a loser only once in 28 previous fights, got up. He reeled into a corner, where he took a mandatory eight-count.

On the Road Again
with Allen and Jackie Cason

In packing your RV you can protect the water lines and systems. It is only human nature to take along more than we'll actually need on the trip. Because of this it is important to watch where we "stuff" items...being careful not to store heavy items such as canned goods, tools, etc. In areas where they may come in contact with water piping or cause damage due to road vibration and shifting of the load. Leave plenty space around the water pump to allow operation. In trying to make things handy in the coach...also make them as well balanced as possible too. Billy Sims Trailer Town, 520 E 2nd, Odessa, invites you to explore the exciting world of RV...Billy Sims is open 6 days a week for your shopping convenience...just phone 337-4635...for the service dept. open Mon.-Fri. 9 to 6.

Just about every airline advertises low airfares. Airfares that are just about impossible to get on short notice. Or for the length of your trip. Or to the city you want to visit.

Instead, you're offered a multitude of other fares that get higher as they get easier to use.

Frontier's new fare structure is a very simple alternative. Every seat on every flight will be available for one low fare during peak hours. Or an even lower fare during off-peak hours.

No restrictions. No switcheroo. So call your travel agent or Frontier Airlines at 561-5156.

Denver/Colorado Spgs.	$100	$80	Casper	$165	$135	Salt Lake City	$165	$130

CHICAGO — Ron Cey doubled home two runs during a four-run first-inning outburst and Scott Sanderson and Lee Smith combined on a six-hitter Saturday as the Chicago Cubs posted a 5-4 decision over the New York Mets and moved towards their first National League divisional championship.

The victory gave Chicago a 9½-game cushion over New York — the largest first-place lead in the East this year. It also reduced the Cubs' magic number to five games.

Mets loser Sid Fernandez, 4-6, made his first major league showing against the Cubs and it didn't take Chicago long to figure him out. Bob Dernier drew a lead

Get registered

Earlier this month when she was appointed Texas' new secretary of state by Gov. Mark White, Myra A. McDaniel stressed the importance of voter registration by saying: "I feel it's most important that every citizen expresses his or her views. You can only do that at the voting box."

It's good to have a person in the secretary of state's post with that kind of conviction to voter registration because it is at that point that success or failure in any election begins. It is a crucial link in the chain leading to elections at all levels of government.

A good example is the approaching Nov. 6 general election in which voters will be electing, among other officials, a president to lead the nation the next four years.

The first and most important step in putting the candidate of one's choice in the Oval Office is to get registered to vote because one of the most discouraging moment's a person can experience is the one they experience when they get to the voting booth, pull out their registration to show to the voting clerk and find that they can't vote.

Regrettably, that happens time and time again. Maybe a person has moved since the last time he voted, or maybe it's been too long since he has voted and his automatic registration has expired. Any number of factors can invalidate, for a time, a voter's right to vote in a particular election.

Across the nation this year, numerous organizations have become involved in a massive effort to register voters. In Midland the situation has been no different; many local organizations currently are conducting drives to register voters. That's good because voter participation is important to the American form of government.

Friday the voter registration office for Midland County acknowledged that registration stood at 47,712 this week with more registrations arriving daily. Potential voters can register 30 days prior to the Nov. 6 general election and still be eligible to vote.

Anyone who hasn't registered by that point, Oct. 7, won't be able to vote in the important presidential election. Any voter who hasn't checked his or her registration lately should do so now.

That's warning 'em

WARNING: this editorial may be hazardous to your health.

That's a good, provocative warning label; any editorial page worth its salt should warn readers its opinions could cause high blood pressure, loss of breath, mental anxiety and other maladies. But if that same generic warning were repeated on every editorial, it would soon be forgotten.

The same is true of cigarette warnings, which have lost their punch after endless repetition of the same bromide: "WARNING: The surgeon general has determined that cigarette smoking is dangerous to your health."

The House has come up with a new approach: targeted warnings for cigarette labels. We hope the Senate approves them.

The new warnings read ...

On second thought, why spoil the surprise of reading them on the package, where they might do some good?

Another View:
Mondale's challenge

Candidates for president do not ordinarily win friends and influence elections by promising to raise taxes and then describing who would get stuck with the bill.

Democrat Walter F. Mondale courageously and responsibly defied political precedent on Monday by doing just that. President Reagan should reply in kind so that voters could make their choice in November based on a clearer view of the future than they can get by comparing the way the candidates look in American Legion caps.

Without changes in federal financing, the future will be dominated by huge budget deficits, high interest rates and a shaky foundation for economic growth consisting of money borrowed at home and abroad.

Mondale's plan includes a combination of tax increases and spending reductions that would trim $177 billion from a deficit that otherwise would be $263 billion in 1989. His proposals are not the only way to solve the deficit problem, but they would do the trick, and they are sufficiently detailed to provide a good place to start haggling over details.

Mondale, for example, would change tax rates within the existing structure rather than moving to a more abrupt change that would broaden the tax base and pick up more federal revenue, even though tax bills for many Americans would actually go down. Several such plans already are before Congress and must be included in the search for ways to bring the federal budget closer to balance.

Some of Mondale's proposals would make sense in any circumstances. He would put additional federal income in a trust fund that could be used only to reduce the national debt, thus eliminating an argument that higher taxes would simply tempt Congress to find ways to spend the new money. He would adopt a pay-as-you-go plan of Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., that would require Congress to raise taxes every time it expanded old programs or proposed new ones.

Some of his proposals are open to argument. He would kill the B-1 bomber program, for example, even though the B-1 may already be as radar-proof as a proposed "stealth" bomber that is still on the drawing boards. It is impossible at this point to know whether his proposals for surtaxes on the wealthy would make tax collection more equitable or slow down savings and investment.

But he has tried to raise campaigning to a serious plane so that voters can make a choice. He and all Americans deserve a serious answer from the White House.

JACK ANDERSON
Israelis fear pro-Arab tilt

WASHINGTON — On Friday, Aug. 3, Israeli Ambassador Meir Rosenne met behind closed doors with Undersecretary of State Richard Armacost, and the assistant secretary for Near Eastern affairs, Richard Murphy.

The subject was U.S. policy toward Syria, one of Israel's most implacable and radical enemies.

Jack Anderson

Rosenne expressed his concern over Murphy's recent statement to Congress that Syria was being "helpful" in the continuing political crisis in Lebanon. Did this, he asked, indicate a change in U.S. policy on Syria? Rosenne reminded the Americans that Syria had encouraged, if not outright instigated, the October massacre of U.S. Marines in Beirut.

Armacost and Murphy tried to soothe the ruffled Israeli. They suggested that Murphy's controversial statement had been taken out of context. They pointed out that Syria was still on the State Department's blacklist of countries that support terrorism.

Still, the State Department pair tiptoed delicately around the issue. They repeated the ritual pledges of support for Israel, but they didn't specifically disclaim Rosenne's suspicion. For he may not have been wrong.

Since the Lebanon debacle, there has been an air of contention inside the State Department. Lately, there have been signs that "Arabists" have gained the ascendancy in the interminable search for a workable U.S. policy in the Middle East.

Informed sources have pointed out to my associate Lucette Lagnado that Murphy, the former U.S. ambassador in Damascus, is well known for his pro-Arab sympathies. His praise of the Syrians for being "helpful" in Lebanon was no slip of the tongue, they said, but a deliberate, carefully planned statement intended to send a message to both Israel and the Arab world.

The "Arabists" argue that Syria is the key to any overall Middle East settlement. If the United States wants to have any influence in the area, it must get along with the Syrians, they say, even if it means ignoring their responsibility for the bombing of the U.S. embassy in Beirut and the murders of the Marines.

Those who detect a "tilt" toward Syria point to the recent appointment of veteran diplomat William Eagleton as designated U.S. ambassador in Damascus. Eagleton has a history of enthusiasm for radical Arab regimes. When he headed the U.S. mission to Libya, he eagerly courted Muammar Qaddafi. As head of the mission to Iraq, he was instrumental in the administration's tilt toward the radical regime of Saddam Hussein.

Even such Reagan stalwarts as Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., were disturbed by Eagleton's appointment to the Damascus post. Lugar reportedly let the White House know he had problems with Eagleton's nomination — because of cables he had seen in which Eagleton reportedly spoke well of Qaddafi, the mastermind behind many acts of international terrorism.

Not only the State Department but the Commerce Department has developed pro-Arab leanings. According to confidential Commerce records, the sale of militarily useful equipment to Syria by American firms was being quietly approved by the department throughout 1983.

While the White House was suggesting Syrian culpability in the Marines slaughter and the embassy bombing, Commerce was OK'ing sales to the Syrian Air Force and security troops.

In pursuit of the almighty dollar, American businessmen sought — and obtained — Commerce Department licenses to sell the Syrians replacement parts for their aircraft engines, navigation equipment, bulletproof body shields and the special yarn used in bulletproof-vest fabric.

Strict guidelines prohibit large sales of militarily useful goods to Syria and any other country on the State Department's list of terrorism-supporting nations. So American businesses looking for lucrative exports to these countries get around the ban by shipping equipment piecemeal, one component at a time if necessary.

Sources in the State Department described how Motorola, for example, got Commerce Department licenses to sell what was described as parts of a highly sophisticated communications system to the Syrian security forces that keep President Hafez Assad's minority regime in power.

The company simply broke the multi-million-dollar contract down into segments as small as $8,000, according to the sources.

There was intense debate within the State Department over the Motorola sale. Principal opposition reportedly came from the human rights bureau, which objected to such major assistance to Assad's brutal security police and argued that Motorola was "sneaking through" the legal loophole by fragmenting the overall contract. A Motorola spokesman claimed this was a routine sale of spare parts.

GEORGE F. WILL
Judge's ruling look at future

WASHINGTON — Presidential campaigns can produce a net subtraction from public understanding. Attention given to ersatz events comes at the expense of attention to real events. Rallies are recorded; real clues to the future are scanted.

George F. Will

One such clue may have come recently when a judge who is on President Reagan's short list of potential Supreme Court nominees made a decision illuminating a judicial style, and a potential path for a return to reasonableness on the abortion issue.

The decision was by Robert Bork of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. It concerned the Navy's right to discharge a sailor for repeatedly engaging in homosexual activities in barracks on a Naval base. The sailor contended that the discharge violated his constitutional right to privacy.

Navy rules stipulate that homosexual behavior shall normally result in discharge because homosexuality in a military environment seriously impairs efficiency and morale." The question was: Does homosexual conduct enjoy the overriding protection of a constitutionally protected "privacy right"?

The drama of the question derives from the fact that in 1973 the Supreme Court discovered a constitutional right to abortion. It discovered that right within a larger zone of privacy rights that the Court could not convincingly relate to other constitutional provisions.

The sailor argued that Court rulings on privacy have, cumulatively, established this principle: Government should not interfere with an individual's freedom to control intimate personal decisions regarding his or her body, except when compelling state interests make it necessary. He argued that consensual homosexual activities fall within a zone of constitutionally protected privacy more important than the Navy's concerns.

Bork wrote that the Court has neither said nor logically implied such a principle. The idea of a privacy right grew as a supposed "emanation" from other guarantees explicitly made in the Constitution. When the Court first spoke of a privacy right-by-emanation, the Court was merely recognizing that it is sometimes necessary to protect an activity not explicitly protected in the Constitution in order to protect another that is. (The Court held that the NAACP had a privacy right to keep its membership list secret from the state of Alabama in order to protect its First Amendment associational rights.)

Bork's analysis is broadly majoritarian, deferring to the discretion of the community's popularly elected branches of government as they make choices about activities that shall be, on moral grounds, regulated. He pointedly noted that even in the chaotic 1973 abortion decision, the Court said the privacy right "cannot be said to be absolute. In fact, it is not clear to us that the claim...that one has an unlimited right to do with one's body as one pleases has a close relationship to the right of privacy previously articulated in the Court's decisions."

Indeed. The previously articulate right of privacy was subservient to the community's decision to protect other activities on moral grounds. Although Bork does not reach out to the issue, his analysis makes clear the difficulty of finding in the Constitution or in a settled, coherent body of Court decisions a basis for denying the community the right to regulate abortion.

How, suddenly, in 1973, did the laws of 50 states become unconstitutional burdens on a right of abortion? What had happened to the community's right of democratic choice regarding the values at issue? Perhaps a clue to the Court's unarticulated thinking is in an argument the sailor adduced for a constitutional privacy right to protection for homosexual activity.

He argued that the very fact of community disapproval of an activity disables the government from regulating the activity. That is, unless any activity disapproved by the community is given the special status of a protected constitutional right, then no minority rights are safe.

Bork replied that this theory — that majority morality and majority choice is always made presumptively invalid by the Constitution — attacks the premise of Democratic government. It would "destroy the basis for much of the most valued legislation our country has. It would, for example, render legislation about civil rights, worker safety, the protection of the environment, and much more, unconstitutional. In each of these areas, legislative majorities have made moral choices contrary to the desires of minorities."

(The sailor's lawyer, insisting that moral abhorrence could never be a basis for regulating an activity, was asked about bestiality. He replied that bestiality could be prohibited because it is cruel to animals — which, evidently, he considers abhorrent.)

Bork struggled to extract from the Supreme Court's various privacy pronouncements a principle applicable to the sailor's case. However, his analysis is an intimation of how a reconstituted Court could, on majoritarian grounds, dis-establish some freshly minted constitutional "rights" and restore the community's right to make moral choices.

Success can ruin anybody!

George Will, the columnist, and I used to be friends. When it came to politics we didn't always agree, but it never interfered in our social relationship. What broke up the friendship was baseball — the Chicago Cubs to be exact. George is a Chicago Cubs fan, a member of that very, very small band of brothers and sisters who year after year took pride in rooting for a team that had been in the cellar so many times the Preservation Society on Monuments had declared it a National Fall Out Shelter.

Art Buchwald

George's charm was that he believed in the Cubs, who hadn't won a pennant since 1945. Every spring he would tell anyone who listened how the Cubs would rise from the ashes and regain their rightful place in baseball. To our credit, those of us who understood baseball never put George down. We always humored him and said, "Sure, George. This is the Cubs' year."

Whenever the Cubs won a game during the postwar years George considered it a religious experience. One time the team was only 63 games out of first place during the middle of the season, and George had it figured out that if every other team in the National league lost every one of its games the Cubs could win the pennant. As a believer in lost causes George was in a class by himself.

Whether Will's faith in the Chicago Cubs affected his judgment concerning the political subjects he wrote about was something we never questioned. We just assumed that Will was able to separate his emotional attachment to the Cubs from his trenchant commentary. Except for his quirk about baseball, George made as much sense as any conservative commentator in this town.

But something happened to Will this year. For reasons that no one can explain, the lowly Cubs started winning.

As they started climbing up in their division George became more morose and nervous. He was short-tempered and bitter. He refused to discuss baseball and pretended he wasn't interested in the pennant race.

When he wasn't around we discussed his sudden change in personality.

One of the pundits had a theory. "I don't think George is able to deal with success. He's so used to the Cubs losing that he can't live with the possibility that they may go all the way. After 41 years of being a loser he can't accept the fact that he might become a winner."

"It's even more than that," a Yankee supporter said. "Cub fans took pride in supporting a team that rarely won a game. They enjoyed playing the role of the underdog. If the Cubs go to the World Series there will be nothing unique about them. The fans also resent the fact that after so many years of being shunned and laughed at, everyone is now jumping on the Cub bandwagon. Their privacy has been invaded. They lived in a fantasy world for so long that it's no fun when their fantasy has come true."

I decided to have a talk with Will. "George," I said, "all your friends are talking about you. You're not the same person you were before the baseball season started. We believe the Cub winning streak has gotten to you."

"Maybe it has and maybe it hasn't."

"You can't be mad at everybody just because the Cubs aren't losing. You've got to come to terms with the fact that they are winners. It was Vince Lombardi who said 'Losing isn't everything — it's the only thing.'" "Lombardi was never a Cub fan," Will replied.

"That's neither here nor there. You should be happy your team is on top. You stayed in the cellar with them all these years. You now have every right to enjoy their success. We don't begrudge them winning, why should you?"

"I don't think it's anybody's business."

"But your attitude is affecting your work."

"How so?"

"Just the other day you wrote that Reagan would probably win the election. No one in his right mind would make a prediction like that unless he had truly lost his marbles."

Can we really learn from other's experiences?

I've never been bitten by a rattlesnake, but I don't have to be to understand what might happen if I ever was bitten.

That's because I have been told by people who have been bitten and people whose truthfulness and judgement I do not question what a rattlesnake bite can mean to the victim. It can, of course, result in death under the right circumstances — from not only the venom, which is highly toxic, but also from shock, which for most people is natural after a traumatic experience. And even when a rattlesnake bite isn't fatal, it usually entails a lot of sickness and suffering for those unlucky enough to fall victim.

The point is this: I'm not going to go out looking for a rattlesnake just to check out this information. I have enough confidence in the credibility of those I've talked to and the information I have read to form a value judgment that isn't particularly favorable toward rattlesnakes. I won't choose one as my family's next pet.

A few years back Nobel Prize-winning author and Russian dissident Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn issued a warning to the American people in regard to the threat communism poses to our way of life. Since that time, he has issued the threat a number of times and in a number of ways. It never changes. It's something every American should read because it will open your eyes or at least make you consider again the freedom we enjoy in this country and what it may take to preserve it.

Printed in Reader's Digest and entitled "Wake Up! Wake Up!" the warning, in part, was issued as follows:

"Is it possible to transmit the experience of those who have suffered to those who have yet to suffer? Can one part of humanity learn from the bitter experience of another? Is it possible to warn someone of danger?

"How many witnesses have been sent to the West in the last 60 years? How many millions of persons? You know who they are: if not by their spiritual disorientation, their grief, then by their accents, by their external appearance. Waves of immigrants, coming from different countries, have warned you of what is happening. But your proud skyscrapers point to the sky and say: It will never happen here. It's not possible here.

"It can happen. It is possible. As a Russian proverb says: 'When it happens to you, you'll know it's true.'

"Do we have to wait until the knife is at our throats? Isn't it possible to assess the menace that threatens to swallow the whole world? I was swallowed myself. I have been in the red burning belly of the dragon. He wasn't able to digest me. He threw me up. I come to you as a witness to what it's like there.

"Communism has been writing about itself in the most open way for 125 years. It is perfectly amazing. The whole world can read but somehow no one wants to understand what communism is. Communism is as crude an attempt to explain society and the individual as if a surgeon were to perform his delicate operations with a meat-ax. All that is subtle in human psychology and the structure of society (which is even more delicate) is reduced to crude economic processes. This whole created being — man — is reduced to matter.

"Communism has never concealed the fact that it rejects all absolute concepts of morality. It scoffs at 'good' and 'evil' as indisputable categories. Communism considers morality to be relative. Depending upon circumstances, any act, including the killing of thousands, could be good or bad. It all depends upon class ideology, defined by a handful of people. In this respect, communism has been most successful. Many people are carried away by this idea today. It is considered rather awkward to use seriously such words as 'good' and 'evil.' But if we are to be deprived of these concepts, what will be left? We will decline to the status of animals...

"...The Cold War — the war of hatred — is still going on, but only on the communist side. What is the Cold War? It's a war of abuse. They trade with you, they sign agreements and treaties, but they still abuse you, they still curse you. In the depths of the Soviet Union, the Cold War has never stopped for one second. They never call you anything but 'American imperialists.' Do I call upon you to return to the Cold War? By no means, Lord forbid! What for? The only thing I'm asking you to do is to stop helping the Soviet economy."

Solzhenitsyn's writings have told us — the West — of the danger that exists, the danger that is ever present and will swallow us if we do not resist. But can we learn from the human experience? Can we all come to believe what the bite of a rattlesnake can mean for the victim without actually experiencing it ourselves?

When I was covering the Midland County Courthouse for the Reporter-Telegram some years back, I remember seeing a sign in the office of District Attorney Vern Martin that applies to this story about believing. It said simply: "Just because you're paranoid doesn't mean that nobody isn't out to get you!"

New Northeast YMCA would provide needed recreational facility

By KENNETH R. BARNES

A native of Atlanta, Ga., Kenneth R. Barnes came to Midland about two years ago and serves as executive director of the Park Center and Washington branches of the Metropolitan Midland YMCA. Barnes holds the bachelor of arts degree from Morehouse College in Atlanta and has begun work toward his master's at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

The Young Men's Christian Association started from the teachings of Jesus Christ with the universal goal that we all may be as one. The YMCA's theme of programming highlights the need to improve the total self: spirit, mind and body. In the early years of its inception, boys and men were shaped, molded and guided by dedicated professionals who had a zeal for this type of missionary work. This trend is still being carried on by dedicated professionals but the program thrust has changed from strictly a male perspective to one that includes more co-ed and family-oriented programming.

Midland, by being the unique city that it is, has assessed its needs through many different means. Community input, changing trends and various surveys have all been utilized to help the many different organizations determine the direction and credibility for their future existence. The "Objectives for the '80s," compiled and published through the United Way and the Midland Chamber of Commerce, was a comprehensive study that examined the past, current and future needs of Midland in all areas.

Midland's economic growth, health care, education, population trends, housing and recreation are just a few examples of topics that were dealt with during this study. It was from community input and this study that the Metropolitan Board of Directors along with the local YMCA Board of Managers re-evaluated their entire organizational structure in order to better serve the community.

The firm commitment to construct a new northeast facility was one of the many concepts adopted during the numerous sessions that took place after the study. There are many reasons for building a new northeast facility.

There are no public recreational or non-profit community-based oganizations within a five-mile radius of the proposed site, located across from Lee Freshman School. The school system, in conjunction with the City Parks and Recreation Department, offers supervised recreational activities in and around the gym during the summer, but it is generally limited to the confines of the gym.

There is no affordable, family-oriented center which would house under one roof an indoor pool, gymnasium, shower and locker facilities and multipurpose space that could be used for town meetings, as well as exercise space for senior citizens. Again, the need for a facility to have the capacity to serve the community, from preschoolers to our senior citizens, with a broad base of different programs is desperately needed in northeast Midland.

A new facility would allow more and better collaboration between present social service agencies. It would provide more and better services to the entire community.

A new facility would help improve family life, regardless of the makeup of the family structure. There would be enough positive programs in that one facility to interest each family member, whether young or old. The new Northeast YMCA would stand as a permanent fixture to help shape and mold our young people, upgrade the quality of family time. It would provide meaningful services to all for generations to come. Our current facilities, the Park Center and Washington branches, serve some of the current needs but we have outgrown them. The joy of watching a child learning how to swim in an indoor environment can become a reality in our new facility. A father, after a long day, regardless of his work schedule, can relax in the whirlpool. A mother can participate in a macrame or exercise class knowing that quality child care is available within that facility.

Our senior citizens can take rehabilitative programs in a heated pool, work out in a climate-controlled gymnasium and be able to relax in a nice lounge or multipurpose area. Present community-based centers such as Casa de Amigos and Community Day Nursery could provide even better services for the community. Physical education in a comprehensive program can be a reality through gymnastics, movement education, dance and instructional swimming in our new Northeast facility. Our senior citizens through Casa de Amigos can not only take part in programs, but they can share their knowledge and history with our young people. An "adopt a grandparent" concept could be done in a safe, multipurpose facility.

The new Northeast YMCA would give us the opportunity to increase and improve our present services. It would allow us to touch those who have not been exposed to programs such as racquetball and swimming; a concept that could carry over into a lifetime commitment to wellness for individuals and their families.

Community pride is abundant and permeates all of Midland: There are families of varied ethnic backgrounds who have made long-term commitments by purchasing homes. Through their hard work and commitment, Midland is continually becoming a better place to live and raise families. The new Northeast YMCA would add to the existing community pride and help to bring about a positive sense of true ownership within the facility.

The YMCA started from and built its foundation on Christian beliefs. Those same beliefs are being utilized on a daily basis.

After groundbreaking begins on the new facility, it will need the active support of all Midlanders.

The Northeast YMCA would serve as a local community-based model in which all people, regardless of race, creed, color or religious beliefs, could come together in unity as one in the name of Jesus Christ. Let's pull together Midland, in making this dream become a reality!

Thanks for reporting on important issues

Thank you Reporter-Telegram. You have performed an important public education service in recent months with the in-depth series of articles on the disposal of low-level radioactive waste and on water resources for the state of Texas.

On behalf of the League of Women Voters of Texas Education Fund I also want to express our appreciation for the newspaper's coverage of our Sept. 8 workshop on the Keystone Siting Process, a procedure for early public involvement in the siting of hazardous waste or other controversial facilities.

Preparation of these kinds of articles takes a great deal of time and effort on the part of the reporters, so special thanks to all those who worked on the two series and to Lawrence Budd for attending and reporting on our workshop.

Time for change in sheriff's office

As a 17-year veteran of the Midland Police Department, I have seen many changes — some good, some bad. But I believe the time has come again for a change in the Midland Sheriff's Office. Not because of any "rumors." I'm tired of Mr. Smith blaming the police department for his downfall. Immediately after his loss in the primary, he demoted two deputies and began blaming the police department.

The deputies had been in ranking positions since Dallas Smith took over as sheriff. It seems that overnight they went bad, although one of these men has quickly worked his way back up to the rank of lieutenant. What a see-saw!

I believe Mr. Smith's administrative policies need a change. Now, I am for physical training and education for officers, but I believe in enforcing the law first. As an investigator for the Detective Division, I never had a problem working with any of the deputies themselves. The few that have stayed with the sheriff's office for some time I consider good friends. But on several occasions I tried to obtain assistance from the sheriff's office, only to be told that no one was available. They were all either in their regular meetings, taking tests, or participating in physical training.

On another occasion, two out-of-town deputies came to the police department to request assistance in recovering some stolen property outside the city limits. I told the deputies that they needed to go to the sheriff's office, as that area was out of our jurisdiction. They stated they had just come from the sheriff's office. They were told that no deputies were available because they were all in a physical training exercise. Sure enough, I called the sheriff's office and was told the same thing. The out-of-town deputies went home empty-handed.

It appears that someone has his priorities messed up. That order had to come from someone above the rank of deputy.

It is no secret that Mr. Smith doesn't like Chief Gideon. Whatever personal reasons he has should be kept out of law enforcement. Mr. Smith has remarked that Chief Gideon refuses to file any charges on his officers. If there is sufficient evidence of any criminal charges, this evidence is taken to the Grand Jury. This has been done in the past. The way Mr. Smith puts it makes the entire Midland Police Department look like a bunch of law breakers who can do anything as long as Gideon is chief. This is completely erroneous.

I believe now is the time for change — we need to get someone who has his priorities straight! Law enforcement first, in-service training and physical training later. Probably some county residents have wondered why it takes so long for a deputy to arrive. Now you know.

Voters, stop and think about it. What do you want? I am not endorsing any particular candidate, but do get out there and vote. We need a change. Midland needs the best.

How can man keep running for office?

Our political system is one of the best and fairest in the world, however, I wonder sometimes where some of the laws came from. Left field? I cannot for the life of me figure out how a man can run for office after being defeated once for that same office — the same year. What is the use of having a primary election anyway?

After being defeated in a nearly two- to one- vote, how in the world does a man believe he can run a write-in campaign and possibly win? The people have obviously told him they don't want him in office again. Not that I'm worried about it. He will simply have to be defeated again.

Another point I would like to present is where did he get off telling everyone he improved the sheriff's office from a one-horse department? Ed Darnell was a great sheriff for many years and many of us still believed in him when he was defeated. Maybe we should have launched a write-in campaign back then. But why cry over spilled milk? We'll just have to improve that office this year from a sadly operated sheriff's office.

Anti-Smith campaign wasn't appreciated

I was pleased to read that our sheriff has decided to seek re-election. My family enjoys living in Midland, partially because of the good law enforcement our sheriff's department provides.

I did not appreciate the campaign waged against Dallas Smith. Shortly before the election primary, certain women were seen to be walking the streets and spreading false rumors throughout garage sales. Dedicated liberal Democrats admitted to me that they voted in the Republican primary to insure Dallas Smith's defeat.

I believe we should retain our experienced and capable sheriff. Let's re-elect Dallas Smith, the best sheriff in Texas!

Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — We are at peace and the American economy is robust with signs pointing to even more progress on the financial front. Military defenses have been largely mended but we still have a long way to go and billions more must be spent to sustain our security and that of friends and allies. It has been an uphill task for President Reagan heading toward completion of his first term in office. As the world's leading anti-Communist nation and the West's superpower, we must ensure the underpinning of many nations that look to us for fiscal help and protection against aggression.

It's interesting to me — and I am sure will be something of a revelation to you — to know that the upcoming budget of $700 billion, including $230 billion for military allocations, is only slightly larger than the last Jimmy Carter program when Fritz Mondale was vice president. At that time the budget was $695 billion with a projection that it could run to a TRILLION!

I DO FEEL that fairminded people will recognize that President Reagan has confounded critics by holding to his economic pledges. The rest of the world genuinely envies us our economic return to soundness and tries to emulate the Reagan plans in their own regions. Granted there are pockets of red ink in the black national balances but so are there great increases in employment.

In short, before President Reagan took over we were facing not just a periodic recession but the bleak prospects of a fullblown depression. That's what the four years of Carter-Mondale bequeathed to the Reagan administration.

On the military-security level, President Reagan began by restoring morale in the armed forces. The Soviet Union, whose own economy is a basket case, was pushing the United States around right in our own backyard, in the Caribbean. President Reagan forced an unholy assortment of Cubans, East Germans, Libyans, North Koreans and PLO gunsels out of the island of Grenada being prepared as a Soviet base in the Caribbean. Their expulsion has given breathing time for other endangered nations to prepare defenses.

These potential hotspots are cited in a recent issue of the weekly newsletter circulated by U.S. News & World Report. High on the list, of course, is Nicaragua, whose Marxist military junta supplied arms and men for guerrilla forces operating in El Salvador. That's an area which I think President Reagan will tax Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. Why are the Soviets meddling there? How they would howl if we should, for example, assign secret troubleshooters to Poland.

NEXT, THE U.S.S.R. has greedy eyes and agitators for Mexico, whose economy is in bad shape. Now Mexico has a long and mainly unprotected border with us. Left-wing elements want to seize the vast known oil reserves, bigger than those of Saudi Arabia, and keep it for the most favorable of terms with Moscow. For too many years Mexico played radical footsie and did lots of nationalization. A successor generation has run the country and usually nominated presidents a year before they were installed but has been friendly to the United States. Nevertheless the country has become restless, fanned today by Marxist agitation.

The zaniest and potentially the most explosive situation of all in the Western Hemisphere prevails in Peru, where the last Maoist rebellion has peasants fleeing from their lands and soldiers being ambushed by crazies who want to reincarnate Mao Zedong. Even though Mao has been discredited in the People's Republic of China and his policies are being reversed with openings to the United States, that posthumous offshoot took root high in the Andes. They call their movement "The Shining Path" and revile equally the U.S., the U.S.S.R., Cuba, present-day China and just about anyone outside this system of anarchy.

AT LAST COUNT, 855 persons have been rounded up as "Shining Path rebels," about half of them women. Quite a few of the prisoners have been well educated and field leaders, who've killed their own relatives, and were from good homes. They execute trembling peasants in full view of the victims' children as a lesson to others. To make it more grisly, they frequently massacre kids with machetes.

President Fernando Belaunde Terry frankly admits grave difficulties now because "The Shining Path" is dislocating the economy of nearly 19 million people.

These are the main hotspots in our hemisphere but the U.S. News weekly newsletter reports a macabre list as long as your arm elsewhere in the world. They run from South Africa to areas of the Middle East; from the Philippines to China versus Vietnam and the strange desert fighting in Chad where French forces defend the regime of landlocked Chad against the ambitions of Libya's mercurial ruler, Col. Muammar Qaddafi.

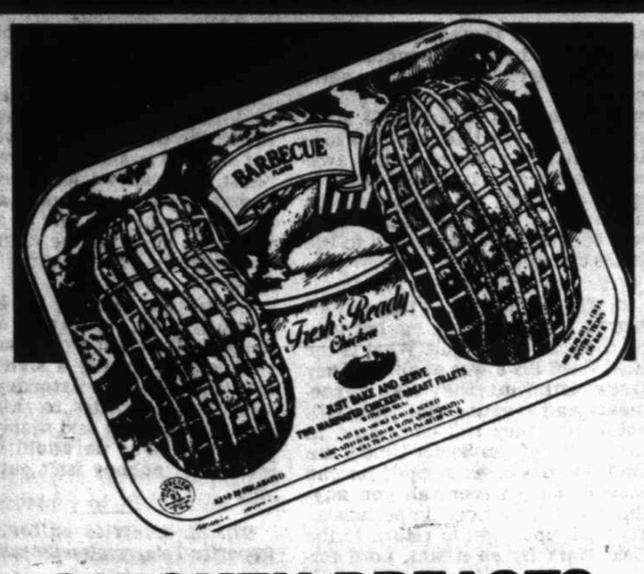

IN THESE circumstances and the compelling urgency for America to stand up and be counted where allies, friends and — yes — enemies are concerned, President Reagan needs a big military budget. The money is needed to continue revitalization of our own defenses and for the wherewithal to assist friends under the gun. There is, I feel sure though, fat that remains to be trimmed in any expenditure that large.

Yet you cannot deploy units in a hurry by cheap commercial methods when the chips are down. Once small countries are toppled, they get knocked off as pins do in a bowling alley. In that context I cannot help but think of little Grenada. It's simple.

Would you rather see Grenada freed as it was and helped by us as President Reagan has done or ignore the Soviet-Cuban buildup that Mondale says should have been American policy?

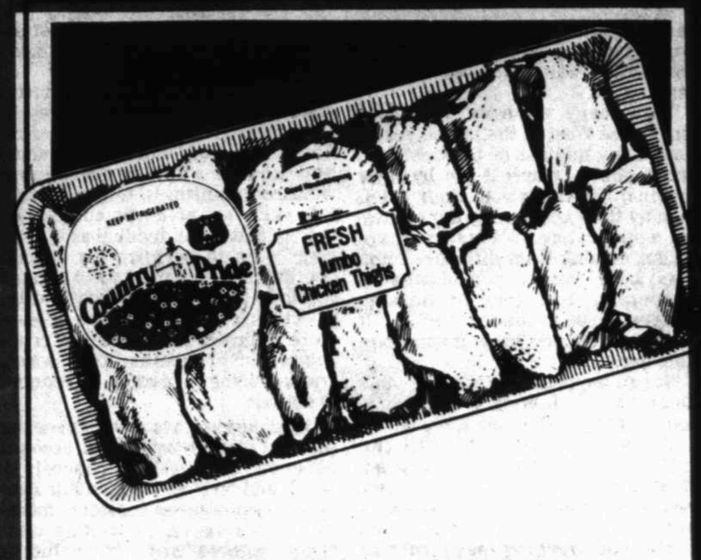

In my book, Mondale rates an "F" for failure on this one.

MC professor plans to fight his dismissal

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

A Midland College economics professor who was fired for using profanity in the classroom will appeal the decision to the college board of trustees. Dr. Jay Dee Martin, who had a faculty award established in his name by a former student last year, has requested a public hearing before the board at its 4 p.m. meeting Tuesday.

Martin is fighting his firing because he feels he was not given due process and that the punishment was too severe for what he termed a "misdemeanor." College professors have one-year contracts with no provisions for tenure.

"Although it's very common in academic circles to resign and not clutter up your record, I didn't think it was a righteous firing, so I determined to appeal," Martin said. "I don't believe I should be under disciplinary action for something that is the case in probably 80 percent of college classes.

This was the second time the administration had acted on student complaints about Martin's language. In June of 1983 he was given a memo which said, in part, "Should the use of profanity in your instruction continue, disciplinary action requiring suspension, termination, or both will be recommended."

"I didn't really know what that meant," Martin, who has taught at MC for eight years, said. "Will Morris (his division chairman) said if it ever happened again I would be put on formal probation.

"At no time had they defined what profanity is...what could and could not be said," he added. "I don't consider 'hell,' 'damn' or 'bullshit' to be profanity. I use it occasionally in the classroom for emphasis and sometimes to simply wake the class up." He conceded some students had objected to his language in their evaluations of his courses.

MC President Dr. Jess Parrish said the college has no written policies concerning profanity, but that all the procedures preceding termination had been followed.

This summer two students complained to administrators about Martin's profanity in the classroom. The professor said he was notified July 3, several weeks after his contract had been renewed, that Dean of Transfer-General Studies Dr. Raymond Yell war recommending he be fired. Vice President of Instruction Dr. Don Hunt upheld the recommendation.

A faculty hearing was held, although the group has no authority and acts more as an advisory body. The committee voted 3-2 against termination, a recommendation which Parrish chose not to accept.

If the board of trustees also upholds his termination, Martin said he will take his case to court.

"I do intend at this time to take legal action if no satisfaction is achieved at the board of trustees' review. But I gather they have no intention of changing their position since they've already replaced me."

The incident that eventually resulted in termination occurred in a summer class Martin decribed as hostile. "They were complaining that it was too hard. I just kind of threw a little fit. I chewed them out. I suggested their attitude was improper and they needed to change their attitude. And in that attempt to modify their behavior I think I used profanity.

"During the past year I tried to abide by that warning and curb my language. I was making considerable effort, even though I didn't believe it was a restriction I should be placed under. It was just the frustration of that classroom." he said.

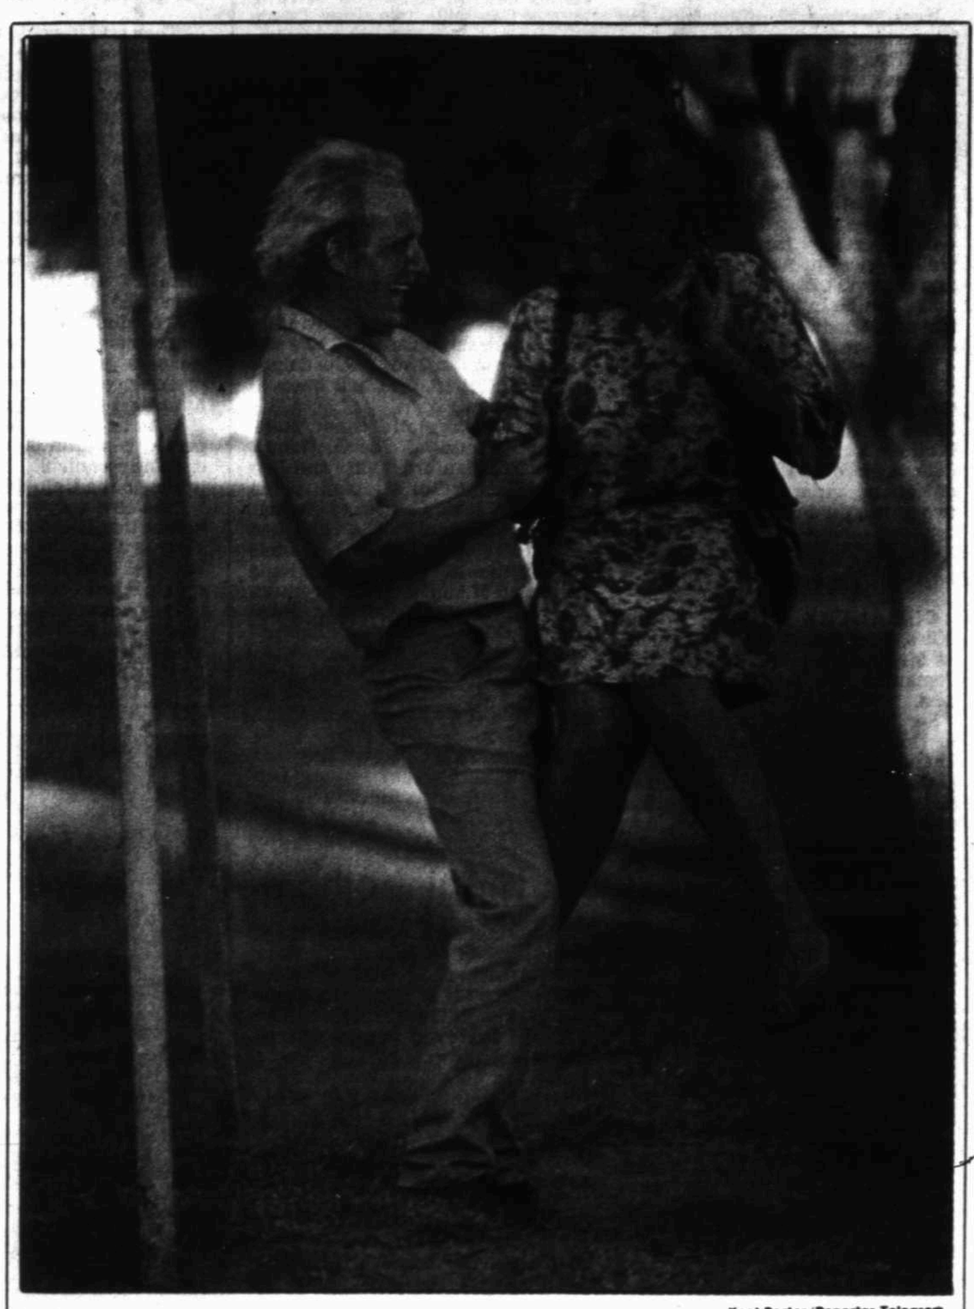

"We're supposed to be dealing with adults. The attitude expressed by the administration seems a little out of touch with reality in terms of what can be accepted and what can't be accepted. Dr. Parrish told me while that kind of language might be acceptable in front of men, it was inappropriate in front of women. I thought that was an intriguing double standard and extremely anachronistic."

Parrish said he did not recall making such a statement.

"The thing that upsets me the most," Martin said, "is all of those eight years I have had extremely favorable evaluations from four different supervisors who thought my work was exemplary."

Last year, in fact, a J.D. Martin Faculty Award was established by one of his former students. The $500 award was to be given annually to a faculty member who has high academic standards. "I don't know if the college will continue to give the award under these circumstances," he said.

"The thing that scares me the most about this is what will happen when it's discovered one can bring down a faculty member on the basis of a few complaints."

The first year of marriage for Susan and John Horner may be on the downswing due to U.S. Immigration and Naturalization laws.

Couple vows 'til death (or red tape) do us part'

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

When Susan and John Horner made their wedding vows, they didn't think parting would come so soon. But thanks to United States immigration laws, the newlywed's first year together may receive the kiss of death.

John, a British subject, has lived in the United States as a legal resident since he was 11. He met Susan Phillips when he went with his family back to Derby, England, for a visit last Christmas.

The couple fell in love during his two-week stay.

Although Susan planned to follow John for a visit when he returned to the United States, he made it back to England before she got out and the two were married March 30.

A week later, they decided to return to America because John had used up all of his vacation time.

"She already had got this (visitor's) visa and John couldn't stay any longer," said Karen Kendrick, also a British subject who married John's brother, Midlander Bob Kendrick. "They thought we'll sort out all of this when we get over there."

But when John returned to the U.S. April 7, with his new bride, they found their honeymoon veiled with the red tape of bureaucracy.

If John had been a U.S. citizen rather than a resident, Susan would automatically have become a legal resident when she married him. But because John, unlike Bob who was born in the States, was not a citizen, Susan had no status other than that of a visitor in this country for a limited time.

Her visitor's visa was to expire Oct. 29, and the two thought they wouldn't have any problem establishing her as a resident. But when they went to Acapulco for a 10-day honeymoon, they were told differently at the gate.

"They cancelled and stamped my visa and said I have to go to El Paso by Sept. 5 (to obtain a voluntary departure extension)," Susan said. At first, she was told she would have only a week to go to the U.S. Immigration offices in El Paso, but John talked them into giving her four weeks so they could get the money together for the trip.

The honeymoon was a belated gift from Bob and Karen. "But now I wish we hadn't given it to them," Karen said.

Because Susan's status had changed from a visitor to a potential immigrant and because there are only 20,000 Britains allowed to immigrate to the U.S. per year, she was told she would have to leave.

Her voluntary departure date was four weeks from the time she went to El Paso. She will have to return to England, leaving her husband behind, by Oct. 5.

"If she'd just stayed here illegally (and not gone to El Paso as instructed by law), no one would have said anything," Karen said. "It was the biggest shock."

The quota system, which allows a certain number of immigrants in per year, is so backlogged at this point that only Britains who filed petitions before Oct. 8, 1983, for immigration to the U.S. are being allowed to come in, said the supervisory examiner of petitions for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Services in El Paso.

They've got it better than citizens of Mexico, according to Ed Hellekson, who said only those who filed for immigrant status before March 15, 1977, are now being issued visas.

Although the quotas can fluctuate from month to month, the last three months have shown a 30 day jump, said Arthur Nieto, immigration department's deportation officer. In August, visas were being issued to Britains presenting petitions for immigration before Aug. 15, 1983. In September, the date had moved up to those filing petitions before Sept. 15, 1983.

"But this (steady increase) still would leave her a long way off," Nieto said.

"If the quota had been open, she could have filed for permanent residence here and been approved in 90 days," Hellekson said. "But the quota isn't open so she will have to petition the consulant in England. And then she has to wait to hear from them but she won't until the quota opens up. It's possible that quota would jump the next month — we don't know."

If John decided to seek naturalization and become a U.S. citizen, thereby making his wife a legal resident, it still would take a good eight months, Hellekson said. And during that time, Susan would be forced to wait in England.

City to honor Foy Proctor

From Staff Reports

Friday has been proclaimed "Foy Proctor Day" in Midland by the City Council in honor of Proctor receiving the prestigious Golden Spur Award that day in Lubbock.

The annual award is given by a group of livestock organizations to a person who has made significant contributions to the ranching and livestock industry.

Proctor, 88, was nominated for the award by Clarence Scharbauer Jr. for his "lengthy, illustrious and successful career in the ranching industry of the great Southwest."

A Midland resident since 1907, Proctor has been ranching since 1917, and he still operates the C Ranch north of Midland and another ranch in Hartley County.

Besides his ranching activities, Proctor served in the Marines during World War I, served as president of the Midland School Board, on the City Council, the Midland Memorial Hospital Board of Governors and the Chamber of Commerce. He was also a director of the First National Bank, president of Citizens Savings Loan Association and director of the Texas and Southwest Cattle Raisers Association.

The Golden Spur award is sponsored by the American National CowBelles and the American Quarter Horse, National Cattleman's, National Wool Growers, Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers, Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers and the Ranching Heritage associations.

In reading the proclamation declaring Sept. 21 "Foy Proctor Day," Mayor Pro Tem David Godfrey paid tribute to the veteran rancher at last Tuesday's City Council meeting.

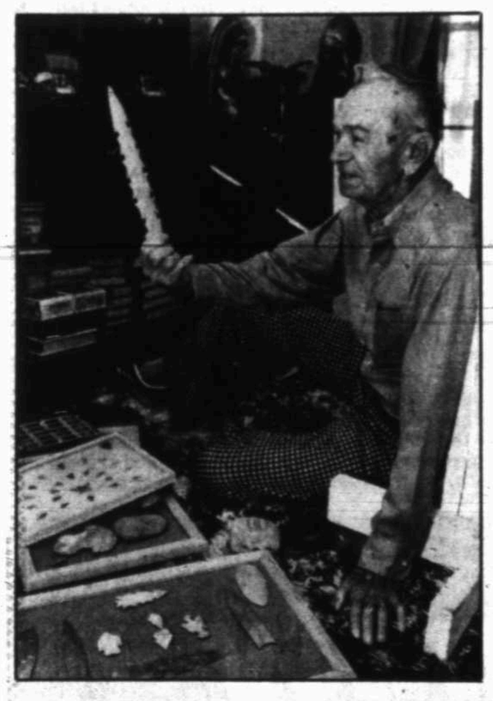

"He played an important role in building our city," Godfrey said.

"It's a great honor and I'm very proud of it," Proctor said after receiving the offical proclamation.

A group of Midlanders will be going up to Lubbock for the award ceremony. Those who want more information can call Clynice Baker at 684-8017.

Jesse Daniel Bartlett has a flair for finding arrowheads and other Indian artifacts in old camp grounds in the Midland area.

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Throughout the ages — his ages — Jesse Daniel Bartlett has searched the plains for Indian artifacts.

In the meantime, he farmed and tinkered about the house.

His delight was ferreting out arrowheads, spearheads, tomahawks, scrapers, grinding stones and other Indian tools made of flint and other rock.

"I had rather hunt arrowheads than eat when I'm hungry," said the 90-year-old retired farmer.

"I guess he had," agreed his wife, Alice, "because you can see how slim he is and tell."

Bartlett has collected hundreds of museum-quality artifacts.

"I've never seen one in a museum any better than these metate, whatever you call it," he said of his collection of dish-like grinding stones and mano.

Bartlett farmed in the Valley View community southeast of Midland for about 50 years until he and his wife moved into town several years ago.

With their move came Bartlett's lifetime collection of Indian tools and weapons; his handmade windmills and pumpjack carvings; collection of buggy, wagon, car and tractor wrenches; array of antique rifles, and five- and six-shot pistols; model locomotive train sets; miniature houses and buildings; ornate miniature chairs cut out of tomato and beer cans; car hood ornaments; old cast-iron toy cars and tractors; branding irons; wooden cowboys and cowgirls; and, among much more, munitions and Civil War cannon balls.

"I WAS GOING to build me a little town," he said of the wooden buildings in his shop behind the house. "I built a few houses. Not too many. That's work."

The shop is busy.

"It's just more 'junk' to anybody else."

One of Bartlett's prized finds is what he calls his "bolt of lightning."

GARY OTT

Change the world? Me? No, I changed majors

When I first read the line in the letter it stunned me. But there it was bigger than life.

It said, "Well, I guess you're still trying to change mankind."

Who, me? Change mankind? Surely, you jest. All I want is a car that won't overheat in traffic. I don't care much about that other stuff.

Best I can tell most of my generation gave up on the silly notion of changing the world shortly after completing our sophomore years in college. It was right after we had switched majors for the 14th time, going from French history to something equally practical like medieval philosophy.

In the meantime we adopted a theory on life we thought to be sufficently laid back. Call it mellow, for lack of a better term. Mainly it enabled us to drift along, simple and free. What was that phrase Jerry Jeff Walker used in one of his songs?

I think it went like this:
"Just lettin' it roll
Lettin' high times carry the load
Just livin' my life
Easy come, easy go ..."
I used that logic once on my dad.

It was during one of those marvelous little verbal wars that can only take place between a Republican father and his 19-year-old son with shoulder-length hair. He was not impressed. And he responded with three words.

"Get a job," is what he said.

Anyway, what we're talking about here is mankind and my decided lack of interest in changing or worrying much about its fate.

There are a number of reasons for this apathy, not the least of which is my admitted inability to provide any legitimate answers. If I could wave a magic wand or even utter a few words of wisdom that might help save the world, I wouldn't hestitate.

Unfortunately, those words escape me and I haven't seen that old magic wand since the Mets won the World Series back in '69.

Besides, I have a host of more pressing concerns today. Grown-up problems. Things like:

— Discovering that the wrecker service won't take my check;

— Being told that Visa has a hit [illegible] looking for me.

So if it's all the same to you, I think I'll leave mankind and its shortcomings to world leaders, college sophomores and other assorted mental giants.

Let them ponder the monumental questions of our times. That's what they're there for...to think. The rest of us must deal with life on a day-to-day basis.

In fact, by us picking up the tab on life's costs, we allow those select few to concentrate on more cerebral matters. It's our way of contributing.

And that's as it should be. We need people with smarts. Maybe they can up with some clue as to how to stop war, famine and other ugly things.

We should be grateful to them.

The only thing that irritates me about all of this is the realization that had I stuck with medieval philosophy 12 years ago I might be sitting under a tree contemplating the long-range future of the universe instead of the short-term future of my car's clutch.

Gary Ott is city editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Mrs. Higginbotham died Thursday.

She was born Jan. 26, 1897, in Erath County, where she was reared. She lived in Stephenville before moving to Midland in 1947. She had lived in Oklahoma City for the past 10 years. She married James Fred Higginbotham Jan. 1, 1925, in Erath County. He died in 1970. She was a member of Dellwood Baptist Church.

Survivors include two sons, Garland Higginbotham of Mojave Valley, Ariz., and Cecil Higginbotham of Midland; three daughters, Hazel Smith of Tulsa, Okla., and Mrs. D.D. Miller and Dorothy Burleson of Ponca City, Okla.; a brother, Henry Roberson of Arlington; a sister, Annie Jaggers of Hico; 12 grandchildren and 20 great-grandchildren.

Lena Johnson

Lena Cain Johnson of Midland died Saturday evening following a brief illness.

Services are pending at Ellis Funeral Home.

COUPLE

"They said it would take about the same time (for him to become a citizen as it would for Susan to become a resident)," John said.

"Anyway, he's proud of his heritage," said Karen, who also chose not to seek citizenship. As a resident, one has all the rights of a citizen except that of voting.

"I think they (immigration employees) have such a bad attitude," Karen said. "You're just a number. You should have seen her in El Paso. They had her just sitting in a corridor waiting."

"I didn't think they were allowed to split families up like that," Susan said. "It's immoral."

According to Nieto, who was speaking in general terms because he was not familiar with the Horners' plight, Susan falls into the second preference category which allows those who have filed for immigration status before Oct. 8, 1983, to be issued visas. The law also states if a person is within 60 days of having a number currently available, they can have an extension to stay in the United States.

"She obviously is ineligible for the extension (under that law) so the next step is an order to show cause, or what we call an OSC," he said. The OSC is an immigration process similar to a criminal procedure although there is no crime.

The person seeking residency goes before the judge, who charges that he or she is a resident and citizen of another country and not the United States and that he or she has been give a specific voluntary departure date. The judge then asks how the person wishes to plead.

In Susan's case, she would state that she is married to a legal U.S. resident and that she wishes to remain in the country with an extended involuntary departure permit.

"Each case is handled on its specific merit," Nieto said.

Although splitting up newlyweds seems terribly unromantic, Nieto said, "You're talking about one person and we're talking about 1,000. We see men with a wife and three kids coming in here."

Families with children would probably be given some sort of priority, Nieto said. When Susan was in El Paso getting her voluntary departure extension, the officers asked her if she was pregnant.

"I said no and they asked if I was sure," she said.

Maybe if she had lied, it would have been to her advantage. But honesty was the reason she was at the immigration department in the first place.

"And I'm damn sure I'm not getting pregnant just to suit them," she said.

The longest involuntary departure extension granted by a judge that he's aware of was six months, Nieto said. "But that's very rare. The norm is 90 days."

Once the judge has granted an extension, Nieto, as deportation officer, acknowledges it. But after that, there are no more extensions.

If a person fails to leave by the involuntary departure date, Nieto confers with the district director and begins trying to make contact with the person.

Despite having about 11,000 docket cards on persons in his district who are not U.S. residents, Nieto said he keeps accurate tabs on all of them. While reviewing the cards, he notes all dates persons were told to be out of the country and begins verifying their departure or presence by contacting places of employment, U.S. addresses and foreign home addresses.

If the person is determined to be in the United States past his or her involuntary departure date, Nieto writes to them to surrender themselves for deportation.

Hellekson said the letters are referred to inhouse as "bag and baggage letters."

"When I have exhausted all of those methods, I send the files to the investigative section," Nieto said. As a legal officer, he is authorized to make arrests. Usually, his officers will visit a certain area, such as the Midland-Odessa area, "on a two-week detail where we round-up those individuals who have already been given due process," he said. "They've had their fair hearing."

Those who can pay to return to their homelands must do so, he said. But for those who can't, who picks up the travel expenses?

"The good ol' U.S. of A."

Breaking out

David Sanchez, a five-year-old of Odessa, was one of several dancers who competed in a break dance contest Saturday at Midland Center. The dance has become extremely popular among young people throughout the United States, including the Midland-Odessa area.

Weapons concern TDC leader

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The state's corrections director said Saturday he doesn't like to see violence in the prison system, where 13 inmates have died this year, but he is not alarmed by it.

"I don't like to see it," Ray Procunier said, "but I'm not alarmed at the amount of violence we have. What I'm worried about is what caused a stabbing.

"People getting in fights for normal things in prison doesn't bother me," he told about 250 people attending a convention of Citizens United for the Rehabilitation of Errants.

"I would prefer they don't use weapons," he said. "I want to get the weapons out of there. We are going to get more staff and I think it's going to be reduced."

Procunier, in a lengthy question and answer session with members of the inmate advocacy group, said he thinks a newly proposed prisoner classification system will reduce violence in the state's prisons, where there have been about 280 inmate stabbings in 1984.

"We're going to try to get those are going to hurt somebody where they belong," he said. "If you've got all the same type people together you've got a lot less violence."

The prison system last week proposed grouping inmates according to size and tendency to violence.

Man offering to carry messages to his grave

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A man with an incurable brain tumor promises to do what no letter carrier can: deliver messages to the dead at $20 a missive.

Ken McAvoy, who expects to die within 30 days and offers an unconditional "guarantee," has already has taken five orders.

"I feel this is humanitarian," said the 41-year-old McAvoy. "The messages are going to be delivered strictly in a spiritual way. This is not a religious thing. I'm not getting into that."

McAvoy said the messages he has received range from "I love you and will join you soon" to a simple "Why Dad?" from a man who was cut out of his father's will.

Dr. Thomas Hammond, a Fort Lauderdale neurosurgeon, confirmed that McAvoy, suffering from a malignant brain tumor, has anywhere from several weeks to three or four months to live.

An advertisement in the personals section of South Florida Single Living, a local publication, prompted the five orders, McAvoy said.

McAvoy said his unique service is designed to "ease the burden" of hundreds who have suffered the sudden loss of a loved one without having been able to say parting words.

"I have a mission in this life. I believe this is what I was put on this earth to do," McAvoy wrote in his ad. "I will acknowledge by a written guarantee a copy of which I will take to the grave with me, and I solemnly promise to put forth my best efforts in trying to contact those who you wish to be contacted."

POINTS

And when the rain stopped, Bartlett walked into the field and found the "bolt," which "was as hot as a firecracker" and which he surmised the streak of lightning made from sand as if the farm land was the lightning's kiln. He said the streak "killed a good acre" of cotton and maize.

"I tell a bunch of people about it, and they think I'm just bulling."

Barlett has a penchant for calling many of his artifacts "that handy rascal," "that gentleman" or "that's a crackerjack," and about the strongest byword he uses is "shoot a mile." In his modesty, he'll apologize: "You'll have to excuse my language; I speak a little Chinese."

IN HIS DEN, Bartlett looked over his collection of symmetrical arrowheads and spearheads.

"Talk about some good workmanship," he said. "Those rascals knew what they were doing to them outfits.... I just love to hunt them, by golly."

Occasionally, when he can't recall just exactly where or when he found a particular arrowhead or spearhead, he'll admonish himself in his frustration.

He started hunting antifacts at age 8 or 10 in Bell County in Central Texas. "That's where I jumped off the moon and landed in Bell County." That was in 1894.

In the early 1920s, after working as a fireman on the Santa Fe Railway Co., he and his family moved to Midland in a mule-pulled wagon and a Model T Ford.

He farmed and looked for points, particularly after a "big blow."

"We had some of the biggest Indian camps and biggest burial grounds in Midland County," Bartlett said. "A lot of people don't know that they are living in Indian burial grounds." Bartlett said he counted 32 Indian camps, including three in the city, in Midland County. "And one burial ground is in the city limits."

Bartlett said he wouldn't dig in burial grounds.

"I just didn't want them (bones)."

IN THE 1950s, he did tell an amateur archaeologist, Keith Glasscock, where on the Scharbauer Ranch southwest of Midland he could find an Indiam burial ground and skeletons.

"I told him I didn't want to fool with them damn bones. That was just like fooling with somebody."

Among other fossilized remains, Glasscock uncovered the skull, dated to 18,500 B.C., of what popularly has been known as the "Midland Man" but later was termed the "Midland Woman."

"I didn't tell him I found that girl's boy friend," Bartlett said. "I found a cave, but I wouldn't tell him about that dog-gone cave."

"They didn't mention me," Bartlett lamented.

"I did good in making that dog-gone cotton...I dominoed...I made the kind (Upland short staple cotton) you go to the gin with more often."

Just as he had retired his mules in 1930 and bought his first tractor, Bartlett retired from farming in the 1970s and moved his "junk" and artifacts into town.

"I never have got used to it too good," he said. "I said I never would live in town, but I fooled around and landed in the middle of town."

People of our community who make a difference.

Eugene Purdue

Throughout it's development, Midland has defied many of the myths about dusty West Texas cities and the people that live here. As Eugene Purdue, concert master of the Midland-Odessa Symphony, points out, contrary to the image which many people have of West Texas, Midlanders have an exceptional understanding of music and the other arts. Mr. Purdue is one of the local musicians whose talents help make the arts flourish in Midland.

Midland has benefited in a number of ways from this exceptional musician's talents. Mr. Purdue came to Midland in 1977 as a member of the Thouvenal Quartet. Each year the quartet has a series of concerts in Midland in addition to playing throughout the United States, Europe, and Mexico. They are also involved in a number of civic projects and do concerts for churches in the community.

Because it is important for the children in Midland to learn to appreciate the arts and to become involved in music, Mr. Purdue and the other members of the quartet give children's concerts at the schools. In addition to this, Mr. Purdue serves on the board of the West Texas Youth Orchestra and teaches privately. He is proud to teach a number of Midland students who have been selected for the top All State Youth Orchestra.

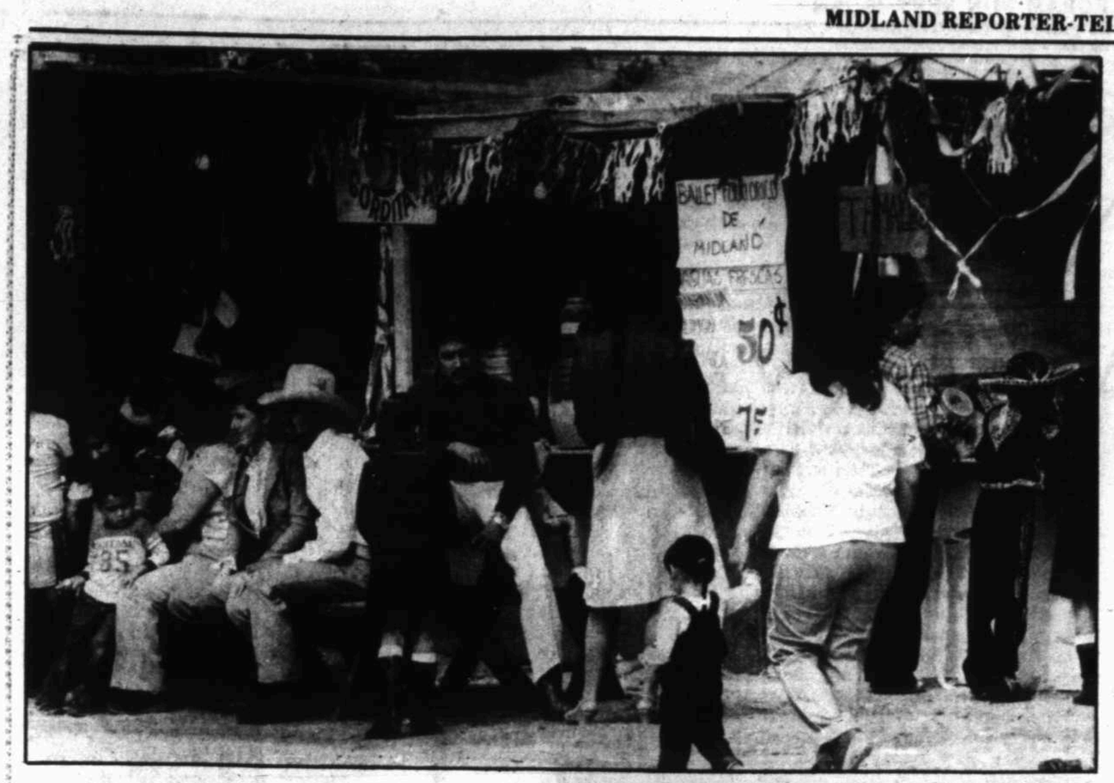

As an accomplished violinist, he says that much nurturing and time is required for one to learn to play a stringed instrument well. Likewise, the various art programs in Midland have been nurtured for many years by musicians and painters.

In addition to being a professional musician, Mr. Purdue is an amateur painter. A number of his works have been displayed at Midland College and in shows which were sponsored by the Midland Arts Association.

Talent, commitment, and performance are why Eugene Purdue makes a difference in Midland.

Independent fun

Midlanders, above, turn out in large numbers Saturday for the Diez y Sies de Septiembre celebration, commemorating the day Mexico declared its independence from Spain, Sept. 16, 1810. Jackie Villa Galindo, right, reigned as queen of celebration, which featured a parade and dances as well as food, booths and games. Pedro Pena, below, a senior citizen from Casa de Amigos on Lamesa St., dressed the part.

CPAs will hear Dallas attorney

Rodney Owens, a Dallas attorney specializing in estate taxes, will be guest speaker at the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at Midland Country Club.

Owens is managing partner of the Estate Tax, Trust and Probate Department of the law firm of Davis, Meadows, Owens, Collier & Zachry and one of the partners in the firm's general Tax Planning Department. He will speak on the "Anatomy of a Prototype Estate and Tax Plan."

Owens is a frequent guest speaker at seminars and has written extensively on estate taxes.

Following the meeting there will be a cash bar from 7:30-8:15 p.m. and a buffet dinner from 8:15-9 p.m. The buffet will cost $15 per person.

Commissioners to open bidding

Midland County commissioners will open bids on the county's 4-H Club Building and Texas Agricultural Extension Service Office in their 10 a.m. Monday meeting in the Midland County Courthouse.

The county is to build the 276-by-40-foot metal building at the site of the old wooden 4-H Club Building just west of the Midland County Exhibit Building. Commissioners are estimating a $170,000 cost on the construction.

In other business, the commissioners are to authorize County Attorney Floyd T. Jarnagin to advertise for bids for a word processor for the County Attorney J. Scott Henderson's Office.

Retreat for Catholics set at Scout ranch

Tokyo firm reading palms for very modern purposes

TOKYO (AP) — Palm reading is an ancient art, but a Japanese company has brought it into the world of high tech with a computerized locking device for sensitive equipment and storage areas.

Mitsubishi Electric Corp. announced Friday that it had developed the system to identify authorized personnel by palm prints, enabling companies to restrict access to certain areas.

The company said the new system would eliminate problems encountered by conventional magnetic card access-control systems, including the use of lost, stolen or counterfeit cards.

It takes about one second for the system to determine whether to permit access by comparing pictures of employees' palms to the palms themselves after the workers punch in a code number, Mitsubishi said.

The $7,500 machine can register up to 250 people and logs the name, date and time at which they enter.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Midland College closes registration Wednesday

By H.A. TUCK

And still the students continue to come for fall semester credit courses! Late registration closes Wednesday. Persons now can register for up to three classes by visiting the Office of Student Sevices in the Administration Building. Hours are from 8 a.m. until 8 p.m. Monday through Wednesday.

A new enrollment record seems assured as the count is running about 3-4 percent ahead of last year's all-time fall semester record of 3,357 students.

• • •

A great many of MC's students are attending classes because they are able to obtain financial assistance. One example is the Crown Royal Hispanic Society, which last year provided financial aid for four students and this year is assisting six more. Their financial aid ranges from $300 up to $1,000 per person.

And two more financial aid grants were received recently from the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Rebekahs. This is the first time this benevolent group has provided financial assistance to Midland College students.

"We are very fortunate to have the strong community support for a large number of grants," said Bill Burns, financial aids officer. "A number of area colleges have run short on money and have almost started granting financial aid on a 'first come' basis. We have had to reduce financial aid in some cases in order to spread our available funds around, but we haven't yet had to turn anyone away.

Burns pointed out that a grant for tuition and fees for a fulltime student can be as little as $300 a semester for two semesters. Others need assistance to purchase books and for some part of their living expenses. And he noted that even smaller gifts can be added to the General Scholarship Fund. A number of Midlanders have made gifts to this fund as memorials to persons who have died.

For low-income students, there also is the possibliility of attending MC through the "work-study" program, where students are employed on campus for as much as 20 hours per week. They can learn marketable job skills in these jobs while earning enough in many cases to defray most of their college expenses. These students also receive grants for tuition, fees, and books.

• • •

Regualr monthly meeting of the MC Board of Trustees is slated for 4 p.m. Tuesday in the Board Room.

• • •

Slated to perform at the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center Monday night at 7:30 p.m. are The Imperials, a contemporary gospel music group. Tickets, priced at $8.50 and $9.50, are on sale at the Chap Center box office, Rudd's Christian Bookstore, and Sonshine Corner. They also may be purchased at the door Monday evening, starting at 6:30 p.m.

• • •

Chaparral tennis teams get their first official collegiate competition in Waco Friday and Saturday when they compete in the McLennan Community College Invitational Tournament. McLennan usually is one of the community college tennis powerhouses, so it will give MC coach Joe Williams a chance to asses his freshmen talent.

• • •

Student activities scheduled this week include a "Balloon Shaving" contest Monday frm 7-9 p.m. and the "Fall Funtastics" event on Thursday from 7-10 p.m.

Prospective student senate members also are lining up their suppo and preparing for their electio campaigns.

• • •

Still on display at McCormick Ga lery in the Allison Fine Arts Buil ing is a show of recent works b Denny Pickett, who paints mostl very large abstracts. A Midlan native and former MC art instructo Pickett now lives in Georgetown.

The show remains on displa through Sept. 28 Gallery hours ar 1-5 p.m. Sunday, 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Mon day through Thursday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m Friday and 10 a.m.-5 p.m. on Satur day.

H.A. Tuck is public relations direc tor for Midland College.

Sign-up at MC to close soon

From Staff Reports

Wednesday will be the final day to sign up for one to three classes for fall semester credit at Midland College.

The registration will be done at the Office of Student Affairs, Administration Building. Hours are 8 a.m.-8 p.m.

By the end of last week, Midland College already had broken its previous all-time enrollment record of 3,357, which was set during the 1983 fall semester.

Friday's count was 3,450 students.

"There still are a few openings in some classes for late registering students," said Dr. Don Hunt, vice president for instruction. "We encourage students to sign up Monday, if at all possible, since it will be difficult for those registering late to make up two weeks of class assignments in many cases. We have created additional sections of classes, where possible, but we have had to close quite a number of classes due to limited lab space."

Specific information about courses which still have openings may be obtained by visiting the Office of Student Services or by calling 684-7851, extension 166.

MAKING THE GRADE

Midland boasts National Merit semifinalists

The National Merit Scholarship Corp. has named 15,000 high school seniors as semifinalists in the 30th annual Merit Program. They will compete for finalist standing and 5,000 scholarships valued at more than $20 million.

Semifinalists from Midland, representing one-half of one percent of graduating seniors, are: From Midland High School, Craig Cunningham and Holly Williams; and from Lee High School, Teri Bailey, Melissa Collier, C. Dean Preston, Laura Renick and Glenn Woessner.

CANDY BAIMBRIDGE, a Midland junior at Southwestern University in Georgetown, is the first recipient of the Angus Springer Memorial Scholarship in theatre. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Baimbridge, 800 Gulf.

Baimbridge

The award was established by a Houston couple in memory of the college's professor and department chairman for 35 years.

JANA GREEN, 3407 Shell, has been chosen to participate in Texas Christian University's Honors Program. Honors classes, designed to be more sophisticated than normal courses, are offered to those students who score well on aptitude tests and rank high in their graduating high school class.

THE MIDLAND West Rotary Club has selected Tina Sanders and Cheryl Landy as Students of the Week. Both are seniors at Lee High School.

Sander

Miss Sanders is the daughter of Steve and Irene Sanders, 3302 Dengar. She is a Rebelette officer and a member of the student council and French club. She was second runner-up in the Miss T.E.E.N. (Teens Encompassing Excellence Nationally) West Texas contest. She plans to attend Texas A&M University.

Landy

Miss Landy, 3501 Imperial Ave., is the daughter of Steve and Marge Landy. She is a Rebelette Lieutenant and listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students. She plans to study advertising at Texas Tech.

DEBORAH MERSON of Midland was one of 40 licensed vocational nursing students to receive a certificate in graduate cermonies at Odessa College last month.

JAMES VAN TOLAR, 1110 N. Austin, has received two scholarships from Hardin-Simmons University for the upcoming year. The attainment and tuition scholarships total $400 per semester and are based on achievement on college aptitude tests.

TWO MIDLAND residents were awarded degrees during summer commencement ceremonies at West Texas State University recently. Bruce Collins, 424 W. Dormard, earned a master of arts degree in music education. Julie Ormand, Route 3, received a bachelor of science degree in elementary education.

BARB'B LIVELY will be listed in the 18th annual edition of Who's Who Among American High School Students. About 5 percent of the nation's upperclassmen are so honored.

Lively

A senior at Permian Basin High School in Midland, she is the daughter of Suzanne Richards of Aberdeen, Scotland, and resides with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Del Baucum of Odessa.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

VIPS offers training

Midland Volunteers in Public Schools (VIPS) will sponsor a volunteer training workshop from 8:30-11:30 a.m. Thursday. It will be held at Washington Elementary, 1800 E. Wall.

Anyone interested in volunteering in Midland schools is encouraged to attend.

Three PTAs to meet

Emerson, Milam and Bonham Parent-Teacher Associations will meet this week.

The first general meeting of the Emerson PTA will be at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the cafeteria, 2800 Moss. After a brief business meeting an open house will be held for parents of first, second and third graders.

There will be an Open House at Bonham Elementary School, 909 Bonham St., at 7 p.m. Tuesday. The Bonham PTA invites the general public to attend.

Ben Milam PTA meeting and open house will be at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the school, 301 E. Dormard. All parents are encouraged to attend.

Sponsor families sought

Youth Exchange Service, a non-profit educational organization, invites families to host teen-age students from Europe, the Orient, Latin America or Mexico. The 15- to 18-year-old students have medical insurance and spending money. Host families provide room and board and may claim a $50-per-month tax exemption.

For further information contact YES, World Trade Center Building, 350 S. Figueroa St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90071.

Nursing classes slated

Midland College is scheduled as the site for two continuing education programs in nursing this fall. The courses are offered by the College of Nursing and Allied Health, the University of Texas at El Paso.

Slated for Nov. 15 is a one-day workshop reviewing Diognostic Related Groups. It will meet from 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Building. Fee is $30.

On Dec.7-8 there will be a two-day course on Physical Assessment of Major Systems. Fee is $45. This course will be taught in the MC Associate Degree Nursing classroom from 9:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. both days.

Area nurses and allied health professionals may obtain more information about the courses from Dr. Eileen Piwetz, acting chairman of the Health Sciences Division at MC, or by contacting the UTEP College of Nursing and Allied Health.

MISD plans lunch prizes

Special prizes will be added to the menus of Midland Independent School District elementary school children this fall. Children who get school lunches will have opportunities to win prizes including stickers, school ribbons, school pencils and more.

The prizes will be awarded for two separate contests — Bell Ringer Days and Monthly Drawings. Bell Ringer Days will be regularly designated and advertised. On those days timers will be set in all elementary cafeterias. When a timer bell rings, the student with a lunch tray nearest the cash register wins a prize. The first Bell Ringer Day is Wednesday.

Monthly drawings of spent monthly meal tickets will begin in mid-October.

FDIC loses suit over FNB loan to Rigco

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. has lost a $2.75 million suit in federal court in Midland to recoup half of a $5.5 million loan which The First National Bank (FNB) of Midland made to Rigco Inc. of Hobbs, N.M., in 1982.

Since then, FNB went defunct and Rigco filed for bankruptcy.

Rigco, also known as U.S. Drilling Co., defaulted on the FNB loan, made at 17.5 percent interest, in early November 1982, and the bank foreclosed on the note. Later in November 1982, Rigco filed for bankruptcy.

Rigco had borrowed the $5.5 million to purchase two drilling rigs.

Under terms of settlement in U.S. Bankruptcy Court, Rigco's liability under the Bankruptcy Act's Chapter 11 (for reorganization) was reduced from $5.5 million to $2.75 million, which was the amount FDIC had sought in the suit against three of Rigco's officers.

Less than a year after FNB was declared insolvent and failed on Oct. 14, 1983, and the FDIC became the bank's receiver, the FDIC began filing lawsuits to collect on notes which FNB's successor, Republic-Bank First National Midland, did not take option on.

The primary issue in the suit was whether or not Rigco's three officers, Nolan H. Brunson of Hobbs, N.M., John B. Castle of Midland and Kenneth R. Marsh of Lovington, N.M., were liable for the loan due to guaranties which each has signed.

The jury ruled they were not.

Brunson, Castle and Marsh maintained that they had signed "blank" guaranties but that they had an agreement with FNB President Charles Fraser that the guaranties were for 25 percent of amount of the loan.

Fraser claimed that the guaranties were for 100 percent.

At any rate, the guaranties reflected that Brunson, Castle and Marsh personally would guarantee payment on the loan were Rigco to default.

The jury found in favor of Brunson, Castle and Marsh, who claimed that Fraser filled in the 100 percent figures contrary to their agreement. Fraser and his former secretary claimed the agreement was for 100 percent — not 25 percent.

"They didn't find any fraud" on part of the bank or Fraser, said Robert Blair, Fort Worth attorney for the Rigco officers.

The jury found that Brunson, Castle and Marsh had left the guaranties blank and that they and Fraser had reached an agreement that they would guarantee 25 cent of the indebtedness.

"The jury believed my guys," Blair said, "and I think rightfully so."

Blair said he didn't know if fraud or negligence was involved in the guaranties or if the bank filled in the 100 percent guaranties "to make the file look better."

"We're certainly glad to be the first (defendants to win an FDIC suit arising from the defunct FNB)," Blair said, "and I'm one happy lawyer."

Fraser resigned from the bank in April 1983.

In another issue decided by the jury, the jury held that FNB "did not tortiously" (wrongfully) interfere with a lease agreement between Rigco and Swanee Drilling Co.

The Rigco officers claimed that between 1982 and early 1983 that they had sought a buyer for one or two rigs and that Swanee was considering leasing or lease-purchasing the rigs until FNB intervened and said it would claim any lease agreement due to its collateral hold on the rigs. Swanee then withdrew its offer; Rigco in turn sought $2 million in damages from FNB and, later, FDIC.

Soon pecans from Midland's fine old pecan trees will be falling, and many of us will be helping ourselves to those which fall on public property. Last year, before setting out to pick up a few, I checked with the Midland Police Department and was told that pecans found in public right of way, streets and alleys, were there for the taking, first come, first served. The officer added that sidewalks were considered part of the street.

After having to call police to convince one homeowner (who should have known better) that committing assault to protect "his" pecans was a bad idea, I decided to ask you this year to check and see just where in the streets, alleys and sidewalks it is legal to pick up pecans. Your answer will be truly appreciated. — Joe Hathaway

ANSWER: The Midland Police Department tells Answer Line that it will need to make further investigation into the legality of persons picking up pecans belonging to another person, and will contact AL. However, a Midland attorney suggests that any type of property belonging to an individual which is found on the right of way is still the owner's property, unless the property obviously has been abandoned. He also points out that the owner can come forward and protect his property, be it pecans or whatever, but no excessive force can be used to protect his property. Something about life is considered more important than property.

Can you tell me when the fair will be held in St. Lawrence this year? — N.G.

ANSWER: Annually, the fair in St. Lawrence is held the first Sunday in November, so that would mean the 1984 fair will be November 4.

There are two mail-drop boxes at the corner of Thomason Drive and the W. Highway 80 service road, near Bowen's Grocery. I mail bills at these boxes and have noticed there are no charts with the collection times for the mail and also times when the boxes are overflowing with mail which has not been picked up. I have contacted the Midland post office department, but nothing has been done. I would like to know the name of someone "higher up" to contact. — Bob Smith

ANSWER: AL talked with V.L. "Bill" Williams, Midland postmaster. He said that everytime you have called the post office with a complaint one or two supervisors have checked on the mail drops. They report that with the new mail drop boxes, the pick-up times are typed on a chart which is placed beneath the lids to prevent persons from tearing them off. Also, the day you reported the boxes were full and the mail had not been picked up, a company in the area had placed packages too large for the boxes and jammed both of them, giving the appearance of "full" boxes. Williams provided AL with the name of his supervisor, which has been given to you.

NOTE TO G.D.S.: Also in the post office vein, Williams was notified of the four-day delay in delivery of invitations mailed in Midland. He attempted to learn the reason for the delay but was unsuccessful. He has written a letter of apology to you for the mistake.

SLEEP ON IT

One in three Americans adults reports having some problems with insomnia and one in six feels the problem is serious. Before resorting to sleeping pills, assess your sleep habits. Try to avoid an irregular sleep schedule, daytime naps, caffeine and alcohol near bedtime. Avoid using your bedroom as a home office. If you suffer from transient insomnia, as can occur with jet lag, try to wait it out. If you elect to use sleeping pills at such times, do not take them for more than one to three nights. When using sleeping pills, do not take them every night. Most cease to aid sleep after as few as two weeks of regular use. Also, do not stop taking sleepig pills abruptly. Cut back gradually.

Deadline extended

The deadline for farmers interested in signing up for federal crop insurance on their 1985 wheat, oats and barley has been extended until Sept. 30.

This applies to farmers not previously enrolled in federal crop insurance. Producers who insured their crops last year automatically had their contracts renewed unless they were cancelled or terminated by Aug. 31.

Winter pastures are high quality, are expensive and offer a potential for profit, if managed properly.

Wheat, oats, barley, triticale, rye or ryegrass are all high in protein and digestibility during their vegetative growth period. It's not unusual for the leafy growth of these plants to be 25 percent crude protein and over 65 percent digestible.

Winter pastures are also highly palatable to livestock. With their high quality and acceptability, winter pastures have the potential for a high rate of gain.

• • •

Feeder cattle market could jump. A strong feeder cattle market this fall could brighten the livestock picture and give U.S. cattlemen a much-needed boost. A livestock marketing economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, sees prices for 600 to 700-pound feeder cattle moving above fed cattle prices. That could result in $80 to $90 feed calf prices — a bullish signal to most cattlemen. Feeder prices should improve due to this year's smaller calf crop and last winter's severe weather and this summer's drought, which caused earlier than normal marketings of feeder cattle.

Defoliation planned

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Federal officials say they will defoliate part of a citrus grove next to a nursery where crop-threatening citrus canker has been found, using an herbicide containing a chemical that has contaminated ground water.

All citrus shipments out of Florida were halted Friday because of the bacteria, which can kill citrus trees.

Steve Poe of the U.S. Department of Agriculture said the herbicide Diquat, containing ethylene dibromide or EDB, proved effective during a 1978-82 outbreak of citrus canker in Argentina.

"It burns back the green twigs" where canker bacteria is located, Poe said of Diquat. "This would probably prevent the disease from infecting the leaves even if it was dormant."

DON'T BUY A LUXURY CAR THAT WAS OUTDATED BEFORE IT WAS BUILT.

With such virtues as an advanced computer-controlled engine that reconciles performance and efficiency, an electronic system that calculates when routine service is needed, and luxury that's functional instead of frivolous, the BMW 528e is the very antithesis of programmed obsolescence.

To experience it, contact us for a thorough test drive.

CUSTOM HOME LUXURY WITHOUT THE HIGH COST OF OWNERSHIP

You get the best of both worlds — the total freedom that only an apartment residence provides, plus the graceful elegance of a spacious custom home. All at an affordable price. The Clusters offers

- Washers/dryers.
- Woodburning fireplaces.
- Ceiling fans in living and bedrooms.
- Classic French doors.
- Private patios/balconies
- Microwave ovens.
- Side-by-side icemaker refrigerators
- Levolor mini-blinds.

Many floorplans are designed with room mates in mind.

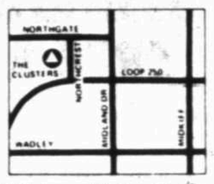

- Full-sized baths.
- Walk-in closets.
- Maximum privacy.

With its country club atmosphere, The Clusters is more than just a prestigious place to live. It's excitement.

- Luxurious clubhouse.
- Two pool centers.
- Jacuzzis.
- Two lighted tennis courts.
- 10-station jogging trail.
- Fully equipped exercise room.
- Professionally instructed aerobics program.

Old-fashioned, down-home square dancing is considered by many to be the one, true American folk dance. Here, a group of dancers swing around the square while others simply clap their hands and stomp their feet. They are from left, Jeanne Pare, Kent Clark, Owen Jeffries, Bonnie Jeffries, Melissa King, Scot Hurt, Wanda Chastain and Hallie Chastain.

Squared Away

"Swing her high, swing her low, but don't dare step on that pretty little toe," chanted the announcer as groups of couples converged toward the center of the room and awaited further instructions.

The square dance began as it begins every Friday and Saturday evening at the tiny M-Squarena building located north of Midland.

There, hundreds of dedicated dancers from throughout the Permian Basin enjoy the swirl of petticoats, the clap of hands, the stomping of feet and other activities synonomous with square dancing.

For generations, old-fashioned, down-home square dancing has been considered the only true American form of folk dance. It consists of four couples who perform a variety of patterns in a square formation as directed by a caller.

Today, square dancing is atop popularity polls with more than five million Americans participating each year.

According to the American Association of Square Dance Callers, there are an estimated 8,500 affiliated square dance clubs in the United States.

Members participate on various levels depending upon their ability. Many of the basic patterns, such as "promenade," "form a star," "grand right and left," "swing your partner" and "ladies chain" are common throughout the country.

"Square dancing bridges all generations and demographics," said Max King, president of Sash-A-Way Square Dance Club of Midland. "It's family entertainment. And where else can you take the entire family for a night of fun for less than $4?"

King said square dancing "is not half as hard as it looks. Most people get the idea that square dancing is similar to what they see on the Grand Ole Opry when in fact, what their actually seeing is clogging."

Please see SQUARE DANCE, Page 2E

Square Dance

Square dancers, on the other hand, slide their feet to the beat of the music and form patterns as instructed by the caller.

The success of a square dance, according to King, "depends entirely on the caller's ability to combine the calls into interesting patterns."

The caller has the possibility of directing 125 different calls during one musical selection and ultimately is responsible for "getting the group started and back home again.

"We're feel very fortunate. We have some very good callers in this area," King said.

Dedicated square dancers in the Permian Basin number by the hundreds with members from 14 different clubs who travel from as far as Big Spring, Monahans, Odessa, Alpine, Andrews, Fort Stockton and Midland to perform in the region.

Midland's four clubs — M-Squares, Sash-A-Way, Grand Squares and Tall City Twirlers (a round dance club) — meet regularly to partcipate in class instruction and also perform at a variety of local events including Septemberfest and "Tar Baby Dances" at Midland Park Mall.

King's wife DeAnn, who has been dancing for five years, said square dancing is a clean form of entertainment and the dancers themselves, are trustworthy.

Also, square dancing can be adapted to almost any style of music and new steps often have been introduced to coordinate with the various changes in music.

"The national organization of square dancers adds two new moves each quarter and they are kept depending on dancer reaction and acceptance," she said.

Square dance costumes also have changed since the days of wagon trains when entire families — dressed in petticoats or dungeries — formed large circles and danced to "Oh Suzanna" and other favorite melodies.

Though the costumes resemble original western prairie clothing, they vary across the country today and reflect the personality of each dancer.

"It's not the same unless you're in costume," said Mrs. King.

"Women's dresses have grown shorter and are considerably more colorful than in the past. But we have kept the traditional petticoats.

Sisters join forces to gut buildings

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — The band "Men at Work" makes music. Allentown's "Girls at Work" makes a mess, then it cleans it up.

To Linda Blose, Nancy Kidd and Carol Williams, music is the sound of a wall falling down, and plaster zipping down a chute and into a dumpster. These three sisters make their living doing what some might consider "man's work" — they gut abandoned buildings for contractors.

"As for us doing this kind of work, it's something different," explained Ms. Williams, 24. "It's gratifying that someone lets a women do this job.

"It's obvious we can't do everything men can do," she added, noting that male help is often needed when it comes time to move a radiator, bathtub or similar heavy item.

"A lot of women do a lot of odd jobs," said Ms. Blose, 29. "I think the gutting part is different."

Ms. Williams thinks that "being willing to crawl in and out of a dumpster" is a unique feature of the job. "I don't know how many women like to do that," she said.

She is also one who often takes risks, as her sisters tell her to climb into a chute on the fourth floor, and slide to the ground-floor dumpster in order to clear the flow of plaster. "It's fun," she said.

"I'm not saying everybody should do it," Ms. Blose said. "It's just what we like to do."

"We have men asking us to give their wives jobs," added Ms. Kidd, 23.

On the job, the women wear jeans and work shoes, T-shirts and a hard hat. By the end of the day, they are caked in a mixture of sweat, plaster and dust.

At present, Ms. Williams works for her sisters, who own the company. In the firm's first year it has worked primarily for Rick Covert of Allentown, who turns condemned buildings into living quarters.

In addition to the gutting, "Girls at Work" also does more routine cleanups. When Covert's carpenters are finished, the young women clean the homes before they are inhabited.

"We were going to call ourselves, 'Demolish and Polish'," Ms. Kidd said. "We're first and last. It's two extremes."

Professor studies old comic books

Away from the classroom, his second profession is studying and collecting comic books. Palumbo holds a Ph.D. in English literature, is chairman of the college's humanities and language department, and has published scholarly papers on some of the comic strip world's best known characters.

Collecting and analyzing comic books led Palumbo to write scholarly essays about them. One such paper published last year in an academic journal was named among the four best of 1983 on popular culture. In it, Palumbo argues for Spider-Man as an existential character.

The philosophy of existentialism, Palumbo says, centers on analyzing the human existence which is not necessarily viewed as scientifically plausible but stresses individual freedom and responsibility.

Palumbo read 300 issues of Marvel Comics to research the theory.

Spider-Man, he says, has "got all the characteristics. He's alienated; he's guilt ridden. He concurs with the existentialists' philosophical issues like the meaning of life, the absurdity of life, and he reacts to them in very positive ways.

He quotes some Spider-Man philosophy which appeared as the Green Goblin was impaled during a battle with the "Webbed Wall Crawler":

"He's dead. Somehow ... I thought it would mean more. When a man dies — even a man like the Goblin — it should mean something. It shouldn't be just an accident ... a stupid, senseless accident."

Palumbo has written comics and is awaiting publication of his work on some exploits of Ghost Rider.

The idea behind good comics, he says, "has to be very simple, almost mystical. Plots must capture reader interest while being expressed mostly in pictures with minimum dialogue."

Palumbo, 35, read comics as a child but got away from them as a student at the universities of Chicago and Michigan. He was teaching in Texas in 1977 when he saw some comic books at a newsstand and got hooked anew.

"I was amazed at how good they were; I was really impressed," he said.

He later attended an academic meeting at Pittsburgh where some papers were presented on comics.

"I realized comics could be studied in a scholarly way," he said.

TO CELEBRATE THE engagement of their son, J.B. White, and his fiancee, Kelly Meek, both of Austin, Dale and Roy Kimsey entertained with a lovely party under the stars at their home, No. 1 Kimsey Way, last weekend.

The great outdoors was like a stage setting, with a beautiful full moon and fluffy clouds, and Dale's decor, which included hundreds of candles and pot plants throughout the home and patio, contributed to the overall, breath-taking effect. Strobe lights reflected off balloons lining the roof top of the house for a still more spectacular look. The butterfly theme, used on the beautiful, handmade invitations, also was carried out in decorating. Adding to the festive air was the music of the Robert LaCroy Band. The 300-plus guests were handed glasses of champagne as they arrived.

The serving table featured an ice sculpture of a sailing vessel, which held the shrimp, and a peacock fashioned of melons, backed by a display of exotic fruits. A variety of other delicacies also was served.

It was a happy occasion indeed, with the immediate families of both Kelly and J.B. present. They will all meet again in Austin Nov. 3 for the wedding.

The couple also was honored with a Sunday brunch at the home of Ann and Perkins Sams. Co-hosting were Ann's daughter, Julie, who is to be the matron of honor, and her husband, Stuart Chase of Oyster Bay, N.Y. The clever, hand delivered invitaions requested guests to "Come help feather the nest," and the couple received many lovely gifts for their future home.

The decor featured Ann's antique quilt collection and stuffed, feathered birds. Delicious food, good music and the unique decorations made it a memorable party.

WITH EVERYONE BACK in town after the summer hiatus, Kathryn and Max Crunk's recent party was a fun way for them to entertain friends and celebrate the beginning of the fall season.

There was a hint of autumn in the air as the guests mingled on a late summer evening in the Crunks' back yard, enjoying delicious barbecue and all the trimmings and catching upon one another's summer activities and trips.

Among the 200 guests were Lou and Decker Dawson, Genevieve and Harry Libby, Kay and Bill Hendon, Lou and Win Brown, Tanya and Charlie Godfrey, Lois and Clayton Harrington, Nan and Art Oestmann, Nancy and Jack Jordan and Jane and Bob Ward.

IN "THE BEST LAID PLANS" Department: John Sheffield almost missed his own birthday party. His wife, Susie, and daughter Caroline, a student at Midland Freshman High School, made elaborate arrangements for a surprise party on Aug. 31 to celebrate his arrival at the half century mark. Plans included getting the Sheffields' daughter Sarah from Dallas and son Stewart from Lafayette, La., to Midland unbeknowst to their dad, for the gala affair.

But the big surprise was on the family when John called from Jackson, Wyo. to say he would be late getting home that evening, due to a delayed flight. However, the guests gathered as planned, and the party was in full swing when John finally arrived toward eleven o'clock. He was greeted by popping champagne corks, soaring balloons and his three children at the door.

John was presented a cake decorated in a fisherman's motif and gag fishing gifts, as he was leaving shortly thereafter for a 10-day Alaskan fishing/float trip.

Guests, including fellow Aggies and classmates of John, were Allegra and Bob Boone, Nancy and Dan Moriarty, Bill Branson, Ann and Harvey Brown, Linda and George Moore, Mary Ann McStravick, Linda and John Borders and Marie Kramer of Lafayette.

Career seminar planned

A seminar focusing on the numerous career opportunities available to women today will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sept. 22, in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium on the Midland College campus.

Sponsored by The Permian Church of Religious Science, the workshop will cover positions such as investment or stock broker, engineer, computer programmer/analyst, geophysicist, geologist, personnel director, mental health counselor, interior designer, advertising manager, business owner, accountant, data processor, minister and secretary.

Annette Brown of Bakersfield, Calif., business development representative for Crocker Bank, will be the keynote speaker. Experienced as an advertising manager, talk show producer and hostess and hospital administrator, Ms. Brown is past president of the National Association of Professional Saleswomen and the 1985 National Convention co-chairman. She will be joined by five local businesswomen:

— Sue Snelson, owner, operator and originator of Midland Travel Agency, which has quadrupled since its inception in 1979 and is now one of the largest travel businesses in West Texas;

— The Rev. Nina Douglas, educator, administrator and minister of The Permian Church of Religious Science, who states, "I changed my profession by changing my thinking;"

— Marilyn Culp, investment broker, teacher, publisher, banker and owner of Larson-McBrine, an investment company which buys and sells oil and gas interests;

— Linda Thorsen Bond, executive producer of The Producers, Inc., a multi-media company based in Midland that produces local commercials and shows and serves as a liaison for national commercials; — and Florence Hughes, senior vice president and Midland division manager of Williamson Petroleum Consultants, Inc. Her energy and drive have enabled her to set and meet challenging goals in the oil and gas industry and executive business world.

The workshop is designed to help women identify and use their skills in exploring career opportunities. All six women will discuss their individual professions.

To help defray expenses, a $15 fee will be charged. For more information, call 697-4188.

Hearst News Service

LOS GATOS, Calif. — In Silicon Valley, they say you can tell how well a company's first public stock offering went by driving through the parking lot the next day. If the beat-up old Ramblers and Datsuns are gone and the parking spaces are filled by gleaming new Ferraris, it's a safe bet the founders became instant millionaires.

"This is a fast-paced, high-risk business. When we succeed, we like to reward ourselves," said Dan Seale, executive vice president of OEM-TEK, a computer company in San Jose. "For life in the fast lane, there's nothing better than a Ferrari. It's the ultimate pay off."

Silicon Valley, home of high rolling, high-technology entrepreneurs, is said to have the world's greatest concentration of the ultra sleek, ultra-expensive Italian sports cars. With a racing heritage, classic lines and sticker prices ranging from about $65,000 for a 308 GTSI to about $90,000 for a 512 Boxer, Ferraris are status symbols throughout the world.

To some, chic sports cars are even a status symbol in the after world. In 1977, when Beverly Hills millionaire Sandra Illiene West died at the age of 37, she was buried in the driver's seat of her Ferrari. Cemetery officials covered the site with cement to prevent grave robbers from driving off in the unusual casket.

But nowhere else do so many people have the desire — and the means — to get behind the wheel of the low-slung racing car as in Silicon Valley. People who succeed in other fields tend to buy top-of-the-line Mercedes Benzes, Jaguars or Rolls-Royces, but many Silicon Valley entrepreneurs prefer the Italian sports cars. Seale believes it's because they are younger — typically in their mid-30s — and are engineers who appreciate what goes on under the car's hood.

Joe Kennedy, the 38-year-old engineering director of Ungermann Bass, a Santa Clara computer network firm, says he has been in love with high-performance cars since his high school days in North Carolina, when he hung out in stock car driver Richard Petty's garage. But until two years ago, Kennedy could afford nothing sportier than a Volkswagen beetle.

When he began making money in Silicon Valley, he traded it in on a Porsche. In 1983, when his firm's first public stock offering made him wealthy, Kennedy immediately bought a Ferrari Boxer, the world's fastest production car.

The sleek Boxer is only 44 inches high. Nearly half its body houses a 12-cylinder engine capable of propelling the car at 188 miles per hour. It can do 55 mph in first gear.

Kennedy said he likes to get up early on Sunday mornings and go for a little drive. "The car is absolutely breathtaking," he said. "I've never had it up much more than 140 mph, but there are people who tweak them up a lot higher."

Kennedy said he occasionally pushed his Porsche up to 120 mph, but the engine would scream and the steering didn't seem terribly stable.

"My Ferrari gets deadly quiet at that speed," he said. "It's like it's in another time zone. You get the sensation that this was what the car was meant to do."

Lifestyle policies

The following are policies for publication of stories and announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the story is to run. For example, an item to appear in Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within five days of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only.

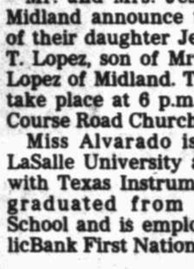

The Reporter-Telegram has forms for announcements of engagements, weddings and anniversaries.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Portraits of the future bride and bridegroom in one photograph may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Luggage enters Twilight Zone

By ERMA BOMBECK

When they talk about space travel, the good news is that sometime in this century, people will be able to travel on a shuttle to the moon. The bad news is their luggage will end up on Mars.

Wherever travelers gather, the subject eventually gets around to lost luggage. They are not pretty stories.

Like the Olympic cyclist medal winner whose bicycle did not make it home with him — not to mention his medals. Or the cardinal who flew on a commuter plane from Chicago to Dubuque, Iowa, and watched the luggage holding his vestments being unloaded in Galena.

Earlier this year, Roselyn went to Pittsburgh for the wedding of her grandson. It was a shame the wedding wasn't held in Canada, because that's where her luggage went.

The agent told her if she did not receive her luggage in 24 hours, she would receive $35 for "new underwear." The luggage did not arrive and "new underwear" was the least of her worries.

All she had to wear to the wedding were the slack suit and sneakers she had traveled in. The family tried to come to the rescue. But the mother of the bride was too short and too thin. Finally, they found something to fit — a blue maternity dress.

They washed out the spots and dried them with a hair dryer and Roselyn marched down the aisle between her two grandsons wearing a maternity dress and a pair of gold bedroom slippers.

End of the story? Grow up. As they were eating dinner the waitress spilled salad all over the gold bedroom slippers and the next time around she spilled champagne down the maternity dress. It was probably nothing personal — just a matter of opinion.

My husband is in the process of filling out a two-page questionnaire on his luggage that sat in Dallas for a month while he was vacationing in New Guinea.

They want every item in the suitcase listed along with when it was purchased, where purchased and the original cost. The clothes could go out of style before he gets all the questions answered.

There is no place on the form for the clothes he had to buy in Port Moresby where they stock clothes for men 5-4 or under (he's 5-11). Or how he had to endure smart remarks like, "Are you on your way to a flood?"

I find myself empathizing more and more with the non-English-speaking Yugoslavian woman I saw who boarded an airplane in Los Angeles wearing two wigs and three fur coats. The woman obviously spoke fluent airlines.

New runners told to start off slow

NEW YORK (AP) — Neophyte runners could be courting sore muscles, fatigue and failure if they do not start a running program slowly and build gradually, warns Sharon Barbano, a national class runner who competed in the first women's Olympic marathon trials.

Ms. Barbano, who conducts running clinics around the country for L'eggs, advises new runners to start the first week's workout with no more than four minutes of running and 20 minutes of stretching, walking and more stretching to cool down.

New runners, she adds, should run only three or four times a week, and add three to five minutes to each consecutive week's schedule.

"Your pace should depend on your heart rate and how you feel," says Ms. Barbano. "If you can talk comfortably to a friend while you are running, you are running at a good pace.

"If you feel you are overdoing it, walk for a while, then start up again. Of course, you should check with your doctor before starting a running program."

Boston full of 'lonely hearts'

BOSTON (AP) — The "yuppie" capital of New England is home to nearly half a million single men and women. But despite dating services for Jews, Christians, entrepeneurs, advanced degree holders and computer jocks, scores of singles still yearn for a significant other.

"I never hear anyone say how great it is to be single anymore," said Jane Carpineto, a social worker who has taught "Spouse Hunting: The How-To of the Mating Game" to hundreds of singles at the Boston Adult Education Center.

"Urban life is so anonymous, everybody is dying to know how to meet somebody."

With Boston's hundreds of colleges and universities, eligible people seem to abound: strolling on the banks of the Charles River near Harvard University, shopping at the trendy boutiques on Newbury Street, dancing at the clubs and discos near Kenmore Square.

But Mrs. Carpineto and other experts on the single life say looks are deceiving. Boston is full of lonely men and women hoping to get hooked.

"There was a time when everybody wanted to be single, but that has shifted. Now most single people want to be in a committed relationship," said William Novak, the author of The Great American Man Shortage.

"People aren't meeting each other anywhere. It's not just Boston, but the city does seem to be the center of dating services," Novak added.

"Boston is loaded with well-educated, upwardly mobile professionals looking for their equivalents or better," said Novak's wife, Linda, who runs New Possibilities, a dating service in suburban Newton.

"They start here as students, they go to graduate school and then they hang around. They become very involved in their other, working lives and feel it's really hard to let something as ambiguous as love happen when everything else in life is so controllable.

"I don't think anyone believes love just happens anymore, I'm sorry to say," she said.

Every month, six pages of personal advertisements appear in Boston magazine, the bible of the young, urban professional crowd — yuppies.

"Beautiful sensitive professional F, 29, 5-5, 130, graduate student, jogger, cross country skier, oenologist, loves music, dining, books, Trivial Pursuit, photography, sports cars, picnics, parties, quiet evenings, seeks a sincere, mature, professional B, W or J male, 30-40, for wining, dining, conversation and seeing the NH foliage in my new sports car," said a typical ad.

Quilting history compiled

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — As part of Michigan's sesquicentennial celebration, the Folk Arts Division of the Michigan State University Museum has launched a project to gather information about the state's quilts and quilters.

Plans call for a major exhibition on the campus, a book on the subject and for the creation of a special Michigan quilt research collection at the MSU Museum.

Among the goals are an inventory of existing quilts, especially those made in Michigan, in public and private collections, says project director Marsha MacDowell, curator of Folk Arts.

Groups plan luncheon

The Lieutenant William Brewer chapter and the Colonel Theunis Dey chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will be having a joint luncheon meeting at noon Tuesday in the Woman's Club in Hogan Park to observe Constitution Week.

Speaker will be Dr. Wellington G. McAlexander of Brazoria, whose topic will be "Unusual Aspects of the Constitution."

Dr. McAlexander is a historian and the writer of a historical column published in some Texas newspapers. He has also taught for many years in Texas schools and colleges.

All members of the chapters are urged to attend.

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — When Rhett Butler and Scarlett O'Hara first see each other, she is ascending a circular staircase in Ashley Wilkes's antebellum mansion, Twelve Oaks.

Critical moments in the making and unmaking of their relationship occur on staircases that are themselves dramatic: wide, grand, rich and precipitous.

The effective use of the staircase, however, is hardly confined to the movies. Sorority houses have traditionally had staircases that set the scene for a flattering entrance. Stairs frame movement: When Marcel Duchamp wanted to paint a nude walking through time, he chose to depict the movement down a staircase. For Carl Jung, the stairway had special meaning as a path into the unconscious.

While stairs in a house are often simply the straightest diagonal between two floors, the well-designed staircase can be an unusual feature, more than just a sequence of treads and risers. Just as there are traditional house types, there are traditional types of stairs. There is also a great deal of latitude for invention, not only in new design but also in new applications of materials. For a stairway in his New York home, the architect Peter Coan used diamond steel plate, a textured, nonslip material usually confined to loading docks.

After Monty and Anne Hill Blanchard moved to New York from the South in 1979, they told the New York architect James Wollens of Wollens Sachs Architects that they wanted a grand and traditional staircase for their new duplex loft apartment, one that would complement their collection of Southern antiques. "They wanted the apartment to feel like a house," says the architect.

There was already a straight flight of stairs in a far corner. Wollens resituated them in a more central location, building a winding, very solid wooden staircase from the living areas to the bedrooms below, with three landings and storage areas beneath. He chose a standard, Brooklyn-bought wooden handrail and posts.

The staircase makes this former commercial space feel like a generously sized town house.

The design liberation of the last decade and an interest in historical forms have encouraged many more designers to explore staircases.

Act IX and the Midland Community Theatre Gallery are presenting works by Loyce Easley of Santa Fe, N.M., Sept. 7 through Saturday during the showing of "Crimes of the Heart."

Works by Ms. Easley have been shown in seven Southwest and Fiesta Biennials at the Museum of New Mexico, where she won first award in the 48th biennial and second award in the 50th. Her oils have been included in 11 of the museum's traveling exhibits and in two invitational exhibits.

Ms. Easley attended Oklahoma University and New York's Art Students League.

She is represented by The Galleries in San Angelo; Gallery A in Taos, N.M.; Santa Fe East in Austin; Savage Gallery in Dallas and McCloud Gallery in Eastland.

The art work is for sale. Proceeds benefit the theatre.

Spanish resources available

Spanish-speaking consumers, however, are often at a disadvantage, since useful information on consumer purchases and government programs is often unavailable in Spanish.

For these consumers, the Consumer Information Center of the U.S. General Services Administration has developed a resource list of federal consumer publications available in Spanish.

"Lista de Publicaciones Federales en Espanol para el Consumidor" describes 90 government publications that are written in Spanish, and tells how to get copies directly from the agencies that publish them. All of the publications found on the list are free and so is the list.

For your free copy of the Lista send your name and address to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 589M, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

AT WORK

Non-resentment puts freeze on boredom

By ADELE SCHEELE, PH.D.

Boring tasks plague us. At work, we stagger under their weight every day. Every so often we get lucky enough to delegate them to someone else. But usually we just have to learn to cope. It's one of the real lessons of life.

I know. I have more routine tasks in my life than I would like. But just this week I think I've discovered a way to cope with boring routines.

I have a refrigerator without an ice-maker, so I fill those never-ending aqua plastic trays. I hate filling them and always wait until all four trays are empty. I suppose I have resented every single cube I have frozen.

But last week, when I was freezing up in advance for a party, I decided not to hate the task. I experimented in non-resentment. First, I timed the act of filling my trays. I stared at the pendulum clock over my sink, counting the swings. It was taking too long, so looking for a short cut, I found that running the water more slowly actually saved time because water didn't splash out.

Then I found that aiming at a four-corner's point, instead of individual pockets, cut down the time by four times. While I was concentrating on filling the empty trays, I had a flash of insight. The tray was empty, just like me that morning: I wish it were so easy to fill the voids in my life. Then flickers of ideas to fill what was missing for me danced in my mind's eye. I was caught up in the doing. Then, instead of going back and forth to the refrigerator, spilling the water inside the freezer as well as on the floor, I carried two trays at a time and simply laid them on the floor. I stooped and slid them in the freezer bottom. I felt some contentment, not bliss, but not disgust. My time-and-motion-study yielded a new attitude toward making ice cubes.

Treatment for angioplasty promising

Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — When Kristin York was growing in the womb, her heart evolved, as it does in everyone, from a simple, pulsing tube into an elegant, four-chambered pump with delicate valves and several great blood vessels.

At some point in this complex orchestration, her heart fell slightly short of perfection. Like one in 100 children, Kristin was born with a congenital heart defect — in her case, a narrowing of her pulmonary valve that would worsen and, if untreated, threaten her life.

Today, some children — including 9-year-old Kristin — are being treated with a promising new technique. Repairs are carried out by catheters threaded through blood vessels to the heart instead of through open-heart surgery, which entails pain, some risk and great expense. The technique can be used only for certain congenital defects, and for several of these, the safety and effectiveness are not yet proven. But for some patients, such as Kristin, the procedure has clear advantages.

"They can go into the hospital on Wednesday, have the procedure on Thursday, go home on Friday and be back in school Monday," said Kristin's cardiologist, Dr. Saul J. Robinson of the University of California at San Francisco.

In balloon angioplasty, as the technique is called, a flexible catheter tipped with a tightly furled plastic balloon is inserted in a vein and maneuvered through blood vessels to the heart. With physicians observing its progress by X-ray, the balloon is positioned in the opening of a valve or blood vessel that has been narrowed by a birth defect. Pushing the plunger of a syringe, the cardiologist inflates the balloon, expanding it forcefully to enlarge the opening so that the blood flows more freely.

It is believed that the expanding balloon tears the obstructing tissue slightly and presses it against the vessel walls. So far there are no indications that the dilated openings later close again, but Robinson said the procedure is too new to say for certain.

Angioplasty for congenital abnormalities has been done about 600 times in the United States, but except in pulmonary valve stenosis — Kristin's problem — it still is described as "investigational" while physicians determine how its risks and benefits stack up against open-heart surgery.

"We need more information in order to make hard-and-fast recommendations," said Dr. Paul Stanger, the UCSF cardiologist who has performed about 25 angioplasties on children as young as 5 months. He has set up a registry to record results from the two dozen medical centers across the country doing the procedure.

A heart murmur heard shortly after birth told physicians that Kristin had valvar pulmonic stenosis. A narrowing of the valve in her pulmonary artery impeded the flow of blood from her heart to her lungs. As she grew, the problem would get worse and cause strain on her heart. Her parents noticed in the last year that she tired more easily than her playmates. About a year ago, Robinson detected a change for the worse in her heart sounds and electrocardiogram; and six months later he recommended treatment.

Kristin's type of defect is the one for which angioplasty has proven safest and most effective. Physicians also have employed it for coarctation of the aorta, a relatively common birth defect in which the aorta, or main artery leaving the heart, is pinched and cannot supply adequate blood to the lower body.

Only a local anesthetic and sedative drugs were necessary when Kristin underwent the catheterization. A long, flexible plastic catheter was inserted into a vein in her groin and slowly threaded into the right ventricle of her heart. First, the physicians injected dye into the heart chambers, outlining the narrowed pulmonary valve and measured the blood pressure on either side of the valve. Then the balloon catheter was inserted so that the plastic balloon, furled tightly like an umbrella, rested within the obstruction.

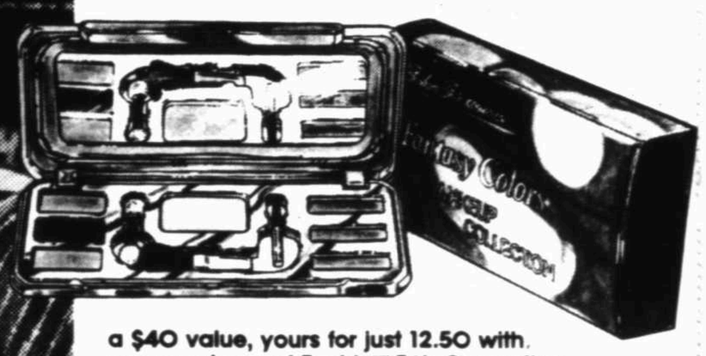

Stanger pushed the plunger of a plastic syringe, inflating the balloon to the diameter of a finger and squeezing the obstructing tissue against the walls of the pulmonary artery. Although the entire procedure took about three hours, the balloon was inflated and deflated in about 20 seconds, Stanger said, in order to avoid blocking blood flow in the artery that carries blood to the lungs.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Medications affect milk

Dear Dr. Solomon: You have often written about how women who nurse their babies should be careful about the kind of medicines they use because they can affect the milk. I would like to know if a woman who is taking drugs for tuberculosis can nurse her baby. — Lee, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Lee: A report from the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta notes that most of the commonly used anti-tuberculosis drugs that are taken by nursing mothers are excreted in the breast milk; however, the amount of the drug that is excreted is relatively small, and the report concludes that the risk of toxic reactions in the infant would be very low. I would add, however, that the decision to nurse under the conditions stated in your letter is a very individual matter. What any one mother and her physician feel is best would not necessarily apply to other mothers.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I went to my doctor because my back was bothering me, and he recommended a combination of bedrest and some activity. I'm following his directions, but I think it would be better for me to get into bed and rest it out so that it clears up once and for all. The way things are now, I'm both in bed and out of bed. — Rusty, Tampa, Fla.

Dear Rusty: Strict bedrest, such as you suggest, can lead to muscular stiffness, and therefore, increase the length of time it would take your back to heal. Dr. David K. Selby, of the University of Texas Health Science Center in Dallas, says that short periods of rest alternated with light activity can help avoid the development of stiffness during the time the back is healing.

Dear Dr. Solomon: In view of all the publicity about AIDS, isn't there a danger that people who have sickle cell disease and who get blood transfusions for it may be affected? In other words, is it possible that the transfusins may do more harm than good? — Mr. K.L., Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. L.: Dr. Samuel Charache, of the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine in Baltimore, says there have been no reports of a patient with sickle cell disease contracting the acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) as the result of a blood transfusion. He adds, however, that the practice of transfusing patients with sickle cell anemia should be reconsidered; and that, as a rule, transfusions should not be given for the sole purpose of treating anemia.

For Gertrude, Brooklyn, N.Y.: I can understand your annoyance over having to struggle to remove the cap from a bottle of medication. The fact is, however, that child-proof packaging has resulted in a dramatic decrease in the number of poisonings among children, and this is something we all welcome. The ingestion of drugs accounts for one-half of all hospitalizations for poisoning, and for one-half of all poison deaths, so the number is not insignificant.

DR. KURIANSKY

Sexual differences normal

By JUDITH KURIANSKY

Dear Dr. Kurinasky: My partner and I have only recently begun to be sexual together. However, his erection is crooked and this makes having sex a little difficult. What would you say the problem could be? — Anonymous, Industry, Calif.

Dear Dr. Kuriansky: I have a problem I hope you can help me with. I don't know whom else to ask. I have never had sexual intercourse because of a fear I have — perhaps an irrational one. I think it comes from a sense of sexual inferiority which keeps me away from females.

The problem is this: My penis, when erect, does not go straight. As it gets harder, it bends towards the left. I am afraid this would interfere with intercourse, so I have been too afraid to try it. It is also bent to the left when I don't have an erection. Is this normal? What can I do about it? — Joe, W. Milford, N.J.

Congratulations to this young man and woman for asking their questions. It clearly took a lot of courage. Some people may read these questions and become upset, embarrassed or angry. But empathize, if you can, with the pain and confusion that people go through when they have such questions and feel too afraid or embarrassed to ask or reach out for help.

Men and women alike are sensitive about their bodies, worried about how they compare to others or are self-conscious. These feelings extend to our most private parts as well.

Most important, we want to know if we are "normal." A curve, a color or a shape can set off fantasies and fears about being inferior, put down, rejected, or worse yet, "abnormal."

These fears can lead to resisting undressing in front of a partner, insisting on making love in the dark or even — as in Joe's case — withdrawing from sex altogether.

Be reassured. Differences are normal. Faces look different; so do genitals. Some noses are longer or more crooked than others. The same is true of genitals. They are marks of our individuality.

Curves in the penis are normal, both with or without an erection. The degree of curve can vary from man to man, and does not necessarily have to interfere with sexual activity.

A few men have a very pronounced curve (called Peyronie's Disease) which can make erection somewhat painful, and therefore sex is not as pleasurable as it could be otherwise.

Curves result from one — or several — lumps of hardened tissue on the shaft of the penis. This can be congenital or due to failures in the development of the urethra, or even caused by some anti-hypertensive medications. It usually happens in men over age 40 but can happen at any age.

In some cases the curve will go away by itself. But do consult a urologist. In extreme cases possible treatments (with variable results) include: local steroid injections, low-dose radiation therapy and even surgery.

Examine your fears that are behind the observation of your shape. One man I counseled was afraid he caused the curve by years of stimulating himself. He had to overcome his guilt about masturbation so he could enjoy lovemaking.

Newlyweds may focus on their appearance when they feel inexperienced. Experimenting with lovemaking and positions will help.

You can become less critical about your body as you grow more comfortable with being sexual. You can learn to evaluate your body less by focusing on your sensations and responses. The more you love your body as it is, the more others will do the same. Or if they don't, you will realize that their concerns don't have to become yours.

Human eyeball believed to be tough

Larry Taber, an assistant professor of mechanical engineering at the University of Rochester, answered the question in terms of non-linear membrane mechanics.

Taber made a fluid-filled model of an eyeball to determine what happened when an object struck and deformed the eye. When he deformed the model with indenters, he found that the outer covering of the eyeball did not perforate or rupture until the deformation approached 80 percent of the eyeball radius.

According to Taber, his study demonstrates the same failure mechanisms that will occur in the human eye.

INTERIOR MOTIVES
by Ray and Austella Berry

Mirrors, although they can be somewhat expensive, will always give depth, added length and width to a room. An alternative to making space with panels of mirror is to create perspective whenever and wherever it can be incorporated with a room's design. Think conciously of creating a foreground, middle ground and background which will provide a definite three-dimensional effect. A mirror placed on a table or mantelpiece with a plant or other small objects in front of it will also give depth as will a hinged screen with a small table and lamp in the foreground. Similarly, the eye can be drawn out and pulled along by diagonal lines painted on doors and walls and by geometric or directional patterns on the floors.

Apart from their own intrinsic beauty, mirrors, whether they are individually framed or treated as a wall-covering, add so much to a room's vitality. At WINDOW DECOR, our specially trained staff can help you incorporate mirrors into your decorating scheme. We can help you with all phases of decorating for your home and office including window, floor and wall treatment. Our showroom at 30 W. Industrial Loop is open 8-4:30 Mon.-Fri., and by appointment. Call us at 685-0875.

Scuba diving not without its own dangers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scuba diving has become increasingly safe and enjoyable in recent years, but carelessness and overconfidence remain deadly enemies of the diver, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration warns.

More than two million Americans dive in the nation's lakes, rivers and ocean areas each year, the agency reports. And of them, 125 will die in accidents in a typical year.

In an emergency, the experts say, divers should stop, breathe easily, get control, think, and then take action.

Divers should be in good health, of course, not diving if they suffer from a head or chest cold. Diving with a head cold could result in a ruptured eardrum, NOAA divers report. And spending time under water while suffering a chest cold can lead to serious, possibly even fatal, overpressure in the lungs.

Special training and sometimes special equipment is needed for diving in caves, under ice, in heavy surf and in mountain lakes where standard decompression tables may not apply.

Heart pump being tested

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Researchers are close to developing a battery-powered, computer-operated pump that could be implanted in the chest and keep a failing heart running for years, doctors said after inserting a forerunner of the device in a Florida man.

"We look upon it as a ... step toward a totally implantable one, where the whole device can be implanted including the computers that drive it," Dr. Philip E. Oyer said of the "Pulsemaker" temporarily put in Robert St. Laurent.

Oyer performed the six-hour operation on the 51-year-old Fort Lauderdale man Wednesday at Stanford University Medical Center.

The 5-inch by 3½-inch device weighing under 1.5 pounds is the first electrically powered heart-assist system to be tried on a human patient, Oyer said.

More than 100,000 potential candidates exist for the permanently installed device, the maker says.

The system works by taking blood from the heart's left ventricle and guiding it into the blood pump. Working in rhythm with the natural heart, the pump ejects blood into the main artery coming from the heart, where it is delivered normally throughout the body.

In July, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration gave approval for 20 of the devices made by Novacor Medical Corp. of Oakland to be implanted temporarily in patients who otherwise would die while waiting for a donor organ or who could not otherwise be removed from a heart-lung machine.

St. Laurent is expected to keep the implant for up to two weeks, or until his own heart is strong enough to take over in the wait for a donor. He was in serious but stable condition on Thursday.

Oyer said St. Laurent was able to move his limbs and would be taken off a respirator so he could talk to doctors. "The patient's condition is as good or better than we could have hoped," Oyer said.

Oyer said the device given to St. Laurent holds promise because it is electrically powered and, unlike a pneumatic system, can be made to operate without the cumbersome extension cable to a power supply.

In the upcoming version, the computer control module and batteries would be implanted. A small, box-like power source linked to a belt transformer would be worn outside the body and could be removed for up to one hour for bathing or swimming.

In its current form, the device is linked by an extension cable to a large external control system and power supply.

Development of the smaller system will be complete and in testing within two years, said Tom Loarie, president of Novacor.

In a survey conducted for Novacor, SRI International estimated that 105,000 potential candidates exist for a permanently implanted device, and that number would grow to 230,000 in 1995.

Generally, candidates for the permanent system would be those unable to receive a human heart transplant. Human transplants would remain the treatment of choice, said Oyer.

Hepatitis outbreak appears serious

ATLANTA (AP) — Delta hepatitis, a serious one-two punch of hepatitis and a seldom-seen virus, has broken out in Massachusetts drug abusers and could spread to other hepatitis risk groups, including health workers and gay men, government scientists say.

The national Centers for Disease Control reported last week the nation's first confirmed outbreak of hepatitis B coupled with delta virus infection, contracted by needle-using drug abusers in Worcester, Mass.

Delta virus, transmissible from person to person, causes illness only in the presence of hepatitis infection. But scientists say the virus may prove a serious threat for other groups already at risk for hepatitis: homosexual men and health care workers.

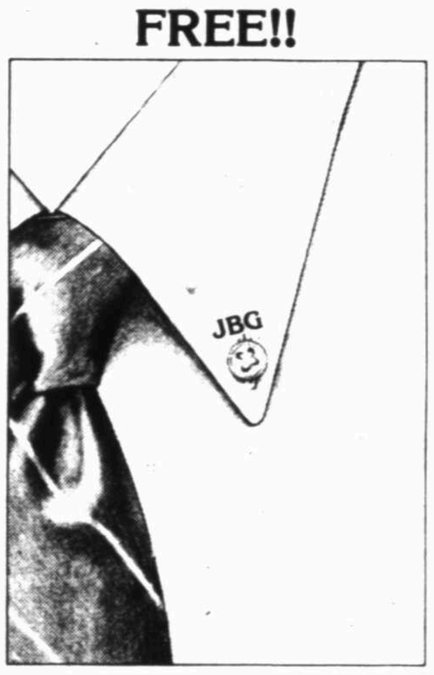

"The concern is ... that delta virus has the potential to spread to other risk groups," said Dr. Ludwig Lettau, a CDC hepatitis researcher. "It's another reason for susceptible people in those risk groups to get hepatitis B vaccine."

After infection with delta virus, a hepatitis patient's illness "can become more serious, a more active type of hepatitis," he said. "If you get both at the same time, it's often more (severe). It can be a very severe, lethal disease."

The CDC, in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, said a program to vaccinate needle-using drug abusers in Worcester is "currently under development" to stop the "continuing" outbreak.

Delta virus infection has been present for some time in southern Italy and also has been found in the Middle East, South America and western Africa. Delta virus infections have even been spotted in a few isolated cases in Los Angeles, the CDC said.

turning a new leaf

Text by David Lee Forrest
Graphic by Matt Holten

Some of the very books once condemned to burn in bonfires face little criticism in Midland, according to an informal survey of local bookstores conducted during Banned Books Week.

Banned Books Week, the second week in September, is sponsored by the American Library Association, the American Booksellers Association, the Association of American Publishers and the National Association of College Stores to raise public awareness about efforts to censor materials and the dangers of censorship.

John Deats, county librarian, could recall only one complaint about a book in the Midland County Public Library in the past year.

"We had a father come in about a paperback book in the juvenile section," he said. "I believe it was a Judy Blume book.

"Nothing came of it," Deats said, after he and the father discussed the book and Deats explained that it's the library's policy to encourage parents to supervise their own children's reading.

IF SOMEONE wished to challenge a book, the library has a questionaire for the patron to complete. The printed questionaire asks such questions as:

— "To what in the book do you object?"

— "What was the effect of this book on you?"

— "Is there anything good about this book?"

— "Are you aware of the judgement of this book by literary critics?"

— "In its place, what book of equal literary quality would you recommend that would convey as true a picture of our civilization?"

The Midland Independent School District also has written guidelines on book selection and the handling of formal complaints.

Lee High School head librarian Sandra Hetrick said, "We haven't had a single challenge" to any books in the school's library.

Rose Marie Stortz, Midland High School's head librarian also said, "I have not had a single complaint."

IN FACT, she said, the high school had co-sponsored, with the Midland County Public Library, an exhibition on banned books in February that sparked some interest.

"The kids enjoyed seeing classics like 'Huckleberry Finn' that they have to read all the time were banned at one time," she said, and that the exhibit had encouraged some of the students to "read them out of curiousity."

Midland College's Learning Resource Center has never had a formal complaint about any of its material, according to Cecilia Miranda, technical services librarian.

"I think it mainly has to do with our environment — it's mainly academic," she said, and the library's works are primarily intended to support the college's courses.

If anyone ever does wish to complain about a book in the college library, "they fill out a questionaire on what they find objectionable," she said.

The book store at Midland College also hasn't received any complaints about its materials, said clerk Jimmie Hewitt, because of its academic nature.

"Most of our material out here at the bookstore is what the instructors ordered," she noted. "We don't have many books for just entertainment. So we don't have that problem like you would at a regular bookstore."

"ABOUT THE only two" books carried by B. Dalton Booksellers that have caused complaints in Midland according to manager Dennis Barnes, "are the 'Marijuana Growers Guide' and 'The Anarchist Cookbook.'

"Some people object to the sex education, but that section is clearly marked," he said.

When someone seriously objects, Barnes said, "We have a form (to fill out for complaints) and we're always willing to communicate people's objections to the general office. We don't want to put out anything definitely objectionable.

"We carry all the notorious classics that have been banned in libraries and schools and we've never had any complaints that I was aware of."

BOOKS

He believes the area is "fairly open-minded. That deal over in Odessa over 'Playboy' and 'Penthouse' (when Odessans for Decency picketed convenience stores carrying the magazines) is as extreme as I've seen it."

Sherry Dummer, owner of the Miz B's Books used bookstore, said, "I've never seen any problem. We've tried to be real careful not to put out anything that's real objectionable.

"I'd never put out anything in the porno line," she said. "If it's really objectionable, I imagine I'd take it off the shelf."

GEORGE LEACH, owner of Imperial Flag and Banner, which also deals in used books, said, "I'm pretty observant of the books I get in. I've never had it (someone asking him to remove a book) come up yet."

He said he wouldn't stock anything he wouldn't want a child to read.

If anyone ever did object to a book, "I'd find out what their objection was," said Leach. "I'd have them put it in writing. It'd depend on the person. Some people are just nitpickers.

"I'd do something about it if it was really objectionable to the general public."

Judy Hubbard put up a "Banned Books Week" display in her Oak Leaf Bookstore's window for the third year, even though she said she doesn't recall any of her customers objecting to any of her store's books.

"I feel responsible since I own my own store," she said. "I do my own ordering, so I'm kind of careful."

If a person objecting to a book "brought something I hadn't thought of," Ms. Hubbard said she might consider removing it.

"Of course, it would depend on what they were objecting to. It would depend on the situation.

"I DON'T think my customers believe in censorship," she said. "They're open-minded, fair-minded people."

"We do observe Banned Book Week," said Ms. Hubbard. "We try to call attention to the fact that many books in literature have been banned in the past — many books that are now required high school reading."

Book study finds reading volume increases, but illiteracy rate high

By DAVID LEE FORREST
Lifestyle Writer

Though September is "Read A New Book Month," a recent study concludes more than a third of Americans read more than one new book each month — they average a book a week.

On the other hand, the same study found that 44 percent of Americans simply don't read books.

The typical American book reader is a white affluent female, with at least some college education, who holds a "white collar" job if she is employed, said the study conducted for the Book Industry Study Group.

The study, which the group said was based on almost 2,000 hours of interviews, also described the typical non-reader as an older man with no more than a high school education, who either earns about $15,000 annually or is retired from a blue collar job or is unemployed.

Fifty-five percent of Americans at least occasionally read a book, according to the study.

Heavy readers, the study said, constitute 35 percent of all readers, but account for 75 percent all books read. Heavy readers were defined as those who said they had read an average of at least one book a week during the preceding six months.

In 1978, when a similar reading survey was made, heavy readers were only 18 percent of all book readers.

Heavy readers now buy approximately half of the books they read and check-out the other half from libraries or borrow them from friends.

"In the age of electronic entertainment and personal computers, books are thriving," the study said, but there are trends that it called "disturbing."

The study found that 44 percent of Americans do not read any books, even comic books and that book reading is on the decline among young people.

Five years ago, in 1978, 75 percent of those surveyed between the ages of 16-21 said they read books, but now only 63 percent do.

Twenty-nine percent of the 16- to 21-year-olds read only newspapers and magazines.

Other surveys have found that a large number of Americans are not even capable of reading a newspaper.

Studies conducted by the Department of Education and the National Council on Literacy have estimated that from 23 million to 60 million people in the United States — roughly 10 to 30 percent of the 1980 U.S. population — are functionally illiterate.

Religious bookstores arouse questions

By DAVID LEE FORREST
Lifestyle Writer

Although one might believe a religious bookstore would be unlikely to face much controversy, Twyla Outhier, manager of Rudd Christian Bookstore said, "We have people object all the time," although she added, "We haven't had any major problems.

"By the nature of our store, we carry things for people of different convictions," she said, and individuals of one denomination sometimes dislike the material sold for persons belonging to a different denomination.

"There are people who like the King James Bible and think the others are inaccurate," she said. "And there are people who can't understand the King James and can't understand why anyone would want that one.

"I've never had people tell me that I shouldn't sell one" version, she added.

If someone shows that the material definitely isn't of "a Christian nature" the store will remove it, she said, "but, otherwise, we tell them that we may not agree with it but there are people who do believe that way."

As an example, she said the store recently ordered a record that was advertised as Christian music, but she discovered it had lyrics which she described as "definitely anti-Scriptural." The store sent it back.

"There are dogmatic Christians as there are dogmatic anybody," she said, but most of her customers accept others' ideals. "I don't know if 'tolerant' is the right word; I think 'loving' is a better word."

The manager of Trinity Episcopal Book Store, Carol Brown, only recalled one minor complaint at her store.

"We had one woman object to the sex education books," she said, "but they're so tasteful, so wonderfully done, that I really couldn't take her too seriously.

"We really don't have any material that would be objectionable," she said, even though she describes her customers as "very conservative."

Deanda Rhoads, manager of another religious bookstore, Sonshine Corner, said she'd never had any complaints. If she ever did, "I'd try to handle it so everyone is satisfied. We carry a little bit of everything for everybody," she said.

"Many people come in The Bookstore thinking that we are anti-Christian, and we're not," said the Rev. Nina Douglas, manager of the "specifically metaphysical bookstore" and minister of the Permian Church of Religious Science.

"Once you get past that," she said, the store doesn't really encounter any complaints, even though she said the community attitude is "basically conservative."

If a person does complain about the store's material, she said, "My response would be that it's a free choice. They don't have to come in."

Bible versions banned throughout history

By DAVID LEE FORREST
Lifestyle Writer

One of the most commonly read books, The Bible, has also been one of the most commonly banned books throughout history, according to the reference work "Banned Books" by Anne Lyon Haight.

Most of the Bible's problems have stemmed from differences over translations and interpretations.

In 553 A.D., for example, the Roman Emperor Justinian decreed that only Greek and Latin versions of the Bible could be used.

In 1409, the Synod of Canterbury at St. Paul's in London forbid translating the Bible from one language to another.

Six thousand copies of an early English translation of the New Testament by William Tyndale were burned in England by the Church in 1526.

The Spanish Inquisition forbade Bibles in Spanish or any language other than Latin in 1551.

A German translation of the Bible by Martin Luther, which was the most widely read book in Germany, was condemned and burned by Papal authorities in 1624.

A thousand copies of the Bible printed in England in 1631 by R. Barker inadvertently omitted the word "not" from the seventh commandment, making it "Thou shalt commit adultery."

Understandably perhaps, the English were not amused. The printers were heavily fined and the edition was suppressed so that only a few copies of the so-called "Wicked Bible" still exist.

In 1926 the Bible was removed from most libraries in the Soviet Union, along with the Koran and the Talmud, and it's importation was forbidden. No copies of the Bible were printed again in Russia until 1956.

The Revised Standard Version of the Bible came under attack by American Fundamentalists in the 1950s because of differences in terminology. In 1953, a leaf of the Revised Standard Version was burned in protest by a Baptist minister in North Carolina.

More recently, the Living Bible has faced criticism in the United States because of its translation and updated language. For example, in one place where Mary is called a "virgin" in the King James Version of the Bible, the Living Bible translates the phrase as "young woman."

Banned books notes some burning issues

By MICHAEL SCOTT-BLAIR
Copley News Service

In 1929 "Tarzan" was removed from the Los Angeles Public Library because it was feared the ape man and Jane were living in sin.

Two years later "Alice in Wonderland" was banned in China because, Chinese authorities said, "animals should not use human language."

And this year "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" has been challenged in Springfield, Ill., as a "racist" novel, while "The House Without a Christmas Tree" has been taken from the Des Moines, Iowa, schools because it includes the word "damn."

They are all, or have been, what publishers and authors call "banned books," works of the imagination or research that groups have succeeded in keeping from being read — at least for a while.

The week of Sept. 8 has been declared Banned Book Week by the American Library Assocation and the American Booksellers Association, highlighting some of the volumes that over the years have raised the censor's ire.

The effort is the the third year of the nationwide effort to heighten public awareness of censorship dangers through Banned Book Week, and also promote the concept of the freedom to read.

Censorship is becoming an "increasingly frightening" aspect of contemporary society, according to Evelyn Kaye of New Jersey, president of the American Society of Journalists and Authors.

She cited a survey by the American Library Association showing that censorship attempts occur in 20 percent of the nation's schools each year, although half of the challenges to that censorship finally succeed.

Censorship "supporters find it very difficult to attack television and films, which are far worse than books, but they can get at their local libraries and schools, causing real problems," Kaye said.

Censorship is almost as old as the art of communication itself, and a look at some of the works banned through the ages shows how widespread it can be.

The first ruler of China's 3rd century B.C. Chin dynasty, wishing to abolish the feudal system, burned all books on the teachings of Confucius and buried hundreds of his disciples alive.

In 387 B.C., Plato tried to have Homer's "The Odyssey" expurgated for immature readers, while the Roman emperor Caligula tried to suppress that work as a threatening expression of the Greek ideals of freedom.

The church and church writings have been both the punisher and the punished in the world of censorship.

In 1783 authorities in Rome placed Edward Gibbon's now-renowned "History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" on the feared Index Librorum Prohibitorum because it contradicted much official church history. Only last year the "American Jewish Yearbook" was banned at the Moscow International Book Fair because it was "anti-Soviet."

Today's classics may be yesterday's pornography or sedition in the eye of censors.

Women most likely to vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The person most likely to vote in this year's presidential election will be a white female, 45 to 64 years old, according to the Census Bureau.

It says the woman will live in the suburbs of the Midwest and her annual family income will total $25,000 or more each.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: May I air my pet peeve? I always put out pretty little hand towels for guests to use. They are easy to launder, but I never have to launder them because nobody ever uses them.

Instead, they dry their hands on the tip of a king-size bath towel, so I'm forced to launder a big bath towel rather than little hand towels that easily could be tossed into my washing machine. Instead of making less work for me, my guests make more work for me. Do other people have this problem? — ANNOYED IN GEORGIA

DEAR ANNOYED: Yes. In fact, Mabel Craddock of Ventura, Calif., grew so weary of guests who dried their hands on toilet paper, bath mats and even her shower curtain, she wrote the following poem, which I published. Her poem was embroidered in cross-stitch, and she framed it and hung it on the wall in her powder room over her guest towels. That solved her problem. So here's the poem, and be my guest:

A GUEST TOWEL SPEAKS
Please use me, guest;
Don't hesitate.
Don't turn your back
Or vacillate.
Don't dry your hands
On petticoat,
On handkerchief,
Or redingote.
I'm here to use;
I'm made for drying.
Just hanging here
Gets very tiring.

DEAR ABBY: I am a salesperson in a large department store. If you print the following suggestions, it would make my job much easier and the customer's visit to our store much more pleasant:

— Please leave at closing time. I will be happy to stay a few minutes longer if you want to buy something, but if you're "just looking," please come back when we both have more time.

— Please don't complain about our prices — the salespeople do not set them.

— Please put things back where you found them. If you don't know where they go, I'll be glad to help you.

— Please don't bring food or drinks into the store. No matter how careful you and your children are, accidents are bound to happen.

— If you don't think you have enough money, please ask me to total your purchases on a calculator first. It really messes up the cash register when items must be deducted.

— Please do not shoplift. We have an excellent security system, and shoplifters are prosecuted to the maximum if caught. — HAVE A GOOD DAY!

Know stain before treating

Hearst Feature Service

Stubborn stains can undo all your efforts. There's little point in getting that heirloom linen tablecloth 99 percent bright and clean if the other 1 percent is marred by a coffee stain.

Here are some hints and safety tips.

— Before removing a stain, read all precautions on the product label and test the stain remover on a hidden part of the garment. Never mix cleaning agents.

— Soaking makes removal of many stains easier. Use cool water, unless directions specify otherwise, and avoid soaking colored items for too long.

— When directions call for sponging, place the stain face down on an absorbent, clean white paper towel or cloth. Apply the stain remover sparingly with a clean, soft lintless cloth. Use light brushing motions, working from the outside of the stain toward the center. Avoid excessive rubbing, and work from the wrong side of the fabric to force the stain out, not in. When the stain is removed, place the sponged area between layers of dry, absorbent towels to speed up the drying process.

— When using hazardous cleaning agents, work in a well-ventilated area, avoid leaning close to the fabric or container, use a small amount of the agent at one time and keep the bottle capped. If you spill the agent on your skin, wipe up the spill with a paper towel and wash the area immediately.

Also, don't work with hazardous cleaning agents near an open flame (a pilot light) or near an appliance (refrigerator, fan or vacuum cleaner).

Gasoline is made to explode

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans know the gasoline they burn in their cars is dangerous, but they may not be aware just how powerful this product is, that moves tons of steel at their command.

When the vapors of a flammable liquid ignite it's often with explosive force, warns the Consumer Product Safety Commission, and the results can be grim.

As many as 70 percent of the persons involved in fires with flammable liquids require hospital care, the safety agency reports.

Storage of flammable liquids is a particular problem, the commission warns, both in the home and the auto.

Fumes from a liquid such as kerosene can move unnoticed across a room or through a basement, finding hidden flames such as a water heater pilot light, or a furnace, stove or cigarette.

Most automobile gasoline tanks are designed to resist rupturing in an accident, but most of the cans you carry around aren't that sturdy, and in an accident the result can be a deadly explosion.

To be as safe as possible, the commission suggests keeping flammable liquids locked up and away from children.

They should be stored in a secure container, away from any flame source and well ventilated. Fuels such as gasoline should never be kept in living quarters.

Buy as small quantities of these products as possible and keep them only in clearly labeled, tightly capped unbreakable containers. Never put gasoline in a glass bottle.

The commission also warns not to use gasoline to start charcoal fires; use only products labeled for charcoal.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: May I air my pet peeve? I always put out pretty little hand towels for guests to use. They are easy to launder, but I never have to launder them because nobody ever uses them.

Instead, they dry their hands on the tip of a king-size bath towel, so I'm forced to launder a big bath towel rather than little hand towels that easily could be tossed into my washing machine. Instead of making less work for me, my guests make more work for me. Do other people have this problem? — ANNOYED IN GEORGIA

DEAR ANNOYED: Yes. In fact, Mabel Craddock of Ventura, Calif., grew so weary of guests who dried their hands on toilet paper, bath mats and even her shower curtain, she wrote the following poem, which I published. Her poem was embroidered in cross-stitch, and she framed it and hung it on the wall in her powder room over her guest towels. That solved her problem. So here's the poem, and be my guest:

A GUEST TOWEL SPEAKS
Please use me, guest;
Don't hesitate.
Don't turn your back
Or vacillate.
Don't dry your hands
On petticoat,
On handkerchief,
Or redingote.
I'm here to use;
I'm made for drying.
Just hanging here
Gets very tiring.

DEAR ABBY: I am a salesperson in a large department store. If you print the following suggestions, it would make my job much easier and the customer's visit to our store much more pleasant:

— Please leave at closing time. I will be happy to stay a few minutes longer if you want to buy something, but if you're "just looking," please come back when we both have more time.

— Please don't complain about our prices — the salespeople do not set them.

— Please put things back where you found them. If you don't know where they go, I'll be glad to help you.

— Please don't bring food or drinks into the store. No matter how careful you and your children are, accidents are bound to happen.

— If you don't think you have enough money, please ask me to total your purchases on a calculator first. It really messes up the cash register when items must be deducted.

— Please do not shoplift. We have an excellent security system, and shoplifters are prosecuted to the maximum if caught. — HAVE A GOOD DAY!

Know stain before treating

Hearst Feature Service

Stubborn stains can undo all your efforts. There's little point in getting that heirloom linen tablecloth 99 percent bright and clean if the other 1 percent is marred by a coffee stain.

Here are some hints and safety tips.

— Before removing a stain, read all precautions on the product label and test the stain remover on a hidden part of the garment. Never mix cleaning agents.

— Soaking makes removal of many stains easier. Use cool water, unless directions specify otherwise, and avoid soaking colored items for too long.

— When directions call for sponging, place the stain face down on an absorbent, clean white paper towel or cloth. Apply the stain remover sparingly with a clean, soft lintless cloth. Use light brushing motions, working from the outside of the stain toward the center. Avoid excessive rubbing, and work from the wrong side of the fabric to force the stain out, not in. When the stain is removed, place the sponged area between layers of dry, absorbent towels to speed up the drying process.

— When using hazardous cleaning agents, work in a well-ventilated area, avoid leaning close to the fabric or container, use a small amount of the agent at one time and keep the bottle capped. If you spill the agent on your skin, wipe up the spill with a paper towel and wash the area immediately.

Also, don't work with hazardous cleaning agents near an open flame (a pilot light) or near an appliance (refrigerator, fan or vacuum cleaner).

Gasoline is made to explode

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans know the gasoline they burn in their cars is dangerous, but they may not be aware just how powerful this product is, that moves tons of steel at their command.

When the vapors of a flammable liquid ignite it's often with explosive force, warns the Consumer Product Safety Commission, and the results can be grim.

As many as 70 percent of the persons involved in fires with flammable liquids require hospital care, the safety agency reports.

Storage of flammable liquids is a particular problem, the commission warns, both in the home and the auto.

Fumes from a liquid such as kerosene can move unnoticed across a room or through a basement, finding hidden flames such as a water heater pilot light, or a furnace, stove or cigarette.

Most automobile gasoline tanks are designed to resist rupturing in an accident, but most of the cans you carry around aren't that sturdy, and in an accident the result can be a deadly explosion.

To be as safe as possible, the commission suggests keeping flammable liquids locked up and away from children.

They should be stored in a secure container, away from any flame source and well ventilated. Fuels such as gasoline should never be kept in living quarters.

Buy as small quantities of these products as possible and keep them only in clearly labeled, tightly capped unbreakable containers. Never put gasoline in a glass bottle.

The commission also warns not to use gasoline to start charcoal fires; use only products labeled for charcoal.

Supervisory Inspector Ron Wall gets ready to process passengers through U.S. Customs at Los Angeles International Airport. Summer is the heaviest travel season and extra customs inspectors are hired to handle the crush of 15,000 or more overseas arrivals a day at the airport.

U.S. Customs officials declare people are weird

By John Needham
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — The aircraft rolls to a halt and hundreds of passengers rush lemming-like into the terminal, snatch luggage ranging from Louis Vuitton suitcases to cardboard boxes, and head for the person who can get them out the door in minutes or keep them for an hour or more — the U.S. Customs inspector.

For the lucky, the process will be painless: A question or two and the inspector will wave them through. For the less fortunate, the questions will increase and every bag will be opened.

Summer is the heaviest travel season, and extra customs inspectors are hired to help handle the crush of 15,000 or more overseas arrivals a day at Los Angeles International Airport. The inspectors say they know that travelers often regard them as surly and rude, but they say the passengers are not any bargains, either.

Whether the plane has come from Colombia, Germany or Japan, whether it carries 100 travelers or 400, the customs inspectors firmly believe that (a) returning Americans will treat them worse than the foreigners will and (b) the rich will try to cheat.

"We have more trouble with the irate American returning home than we do with a foreigner," said Ron Wall, 51, who in 13 years at LAX has worked himself up to supervisory inspector status.

"An American who will stand in a bank line 30 minutes to cash a check will stand in our line 10 minutes and raise hell about the crowded conditions."

As for the rich, Wall said they are his biggest problem, except for drug smugglers and people trying to bring back the foods of their native lands.

"The affluent can afford to buy, and not declare, for reasons known only to them," he said.

Wall is one of about 180 customs inspectors working at the airport's three international terminals.

New customs inspectors go through a six-week training course at Glencoe, Ga., which Wall, a 21-year veteran with the U.S. Air Force, likened to a military boot camp. The inspectors are certified as federal police officers and receive weapons training.

Agents use profiles of typical drug smugglers to try to spot people bringing narcotics into the country. But people smuggling other products are often detected through instinct or experience.

"We learned a long time ago not to try to prejudge people by their dress or ethnic background," Wall said. "We've caught attractive women in tailored dresses and we've caught guys with backpacks" trying to smuggle contraband.

Wall recalled one case in which a man standing in line seemed rather uncomfortable. Inspectors who searched the traveler found the reson for his discomfort — a squirrel hidden in his underpants.

"All the guy would say was the squirrel was his pet and that kept him warm," said Wall.

Wall said he continues to be surprised by the large amounts of cash that people bring in. As long as a traveler declares anything over $5,000, "you can bring in anything you can carry."

Wall said many passengers bringing large amounts of cash have apparently sneaked it out of countries such as France and South Korea that impose restrictions on how much cash can be exported.

Others have jobs where big bucks come with the territory: One man comes through the airport every few weeks with a briefcase containing $200,000 to $800,000 in cash picked up on his trips to the Far East to collect from gamblers who were unlucky in Las Vegas, Wall said.

Travelers returning from abroad can bring in up to $400 worth of purchases duty free, according to Customs spokesman Jerome Hollander. From $400 to $1,400, the duty is 10 percent. Above that, it depends on the item brought back — the duty on a camera is 4.7 percent, while "embroidered or ornamented wearing apparel" can cost from 12 percent to 38.8 percent.

Some items are banned altogether, such as Cuban cigars, he said. Switch-blade knives, by contrast, can be imported — but only by a one-armed person.

People who try to cheat Customs, however, face penalties, confiscation of the items and criminal prosecution.

In a celebrated case six years ago, socialite Betsy Bloomingdale was fined $5,000 and sentenced to a year's probation for hiding a $3,880 invoice for two Christian Dior dresses sent from Paris and substituting an altered invoice for $518.65.

Wall, who was the inspector on the case, said he had no idea who Bloomingdale was when she showed up at an airline cargo office, but he thought "she looked out of place there, she looked nervous."

After lengthy questioning, Bloomingdale produced the original invoice, at which point Wall called in a supervisor, who made the arrest.

New York Times News Service

DALLAS — The motel's receptionists are unfailingly cheery when they answer the telephone. "It's a healthy day here at the Non-Smokers Inn," they say.

The 134-unit motel, about 20 minutes northwest of downtown Dallas on Highway 183, near the Cowboys' Texas Stadium, is one place where the guests can't walk off with the ash trays. That's because there are no ash trays.

And if guests dare to leave butts or ashes behind, they are liable to $100 fines, according to an agreement that every guest signs when checking in. The money is used to "clean and detoxify" the rooms.

The employees don't smoke, either. And just to make sure they aren't sneak smokers, potential employees are given polygraph tests in which they are asked whether they have smoked within the last six months. Those who flunk aren't hired.

The Non-Smokers Inn, which is two and a half years old, is the brainchild of Lyndon W. Sanders, a 55-year-old motelier and militant nonsmoker who said he got the idea in 1968 when he was staying in a Kansas City motel and couldn't sleep because his pillows reeked of smoke.

"Tobacco killed my father," he said, "and also a dozen of my very good friends. And every day it kills more than 1,000 Americans."

As a tribute to them, Sanders, who believes his inn is the only one of its kind in the country, erected a marble monument out front, above which an American flag often flies at half-staff. A brass plaque on the monument reads: "When this flag flies at half-staff, it does so in memory of over 1,000 Americans who die daily due to the use of tobacco, and as a challenge to the social acceptance of smoking in public places."

Sanders conceded that his policy occasionally costs him paying guests. "Some people think I'm crazy and that I'm passing up a lot of good business," he said. He noted that 23 motel chains have added nonsmoking rooms since he built the Non-Smokers Inn in 1982. He also owns the Dollar Inn in Albuquerque, N.M., where he has set half the rooms aside for nonsmokers.

So far, he said, about 50,000 people have stayed in his Dallas motel and only five have violated the rule. It has a current occupancy rate of 70 to 80 per cent, he added.

Vel Connel, the manager, said that guests who showed evidence of being smokers were asked to pay $100 smoking deposits in advance.

The deposit is not returned, she said, if butts and ashes are found during room inspections when guests check out. "We bring them in the office and show them the sample," she said. "But if there is only the smell of smoke in the room then we give the deposit back."

As for employee dismissals because of violations, Miss Connel said with a slight smile: "Well, there was one man who said he didn't smoke, But we learned he was taking smoking breaks at the service station next door. When we confronted him he decided to leave."

NEW YORK — When Barbara Rittenberg went to Europe 27 years ago, she hitchhiked through Scandinavia and traveled the Continent on a third-class Eurail pass. Then 20, Rittenberg spent nights in hostels and inexpensive hotels. Her daily diet was mostly bread and cheese.

This month Rittenberg, a housewife married to a successful psychiatrist, will go to Europe in different style. She and her husband plan to spend two weeks climbing mountains in Switzerland, with a luxury hotel near St. Moritz as home base. And this time, she said, "We'll take the bread and cheese on our hikes."

The Rittenbergs are among millions of Americans traveling overseas this summer, staging an exodus of unprecedented proportions and living it up a bit thanks to an extraordinarily strong U.S. dollar.

EUROPE IS particularly popular. The European Travel Commission, made up of 28 Western European tourist boards, is making what it calls a "conservative" estimate that 5.5 million Americans will travel to Europe this year — 15 percent more than last year's record rate of 4.8 million.

Simple economics has played a key role in the travel boom. The American dollar is up, air fares are down, and the U.S. recovery is strong.

A dramatic improvement in the U.S. economy has put overseas vacations within reach of many people who for years have put travel plans on hold.

Meantime, the dollar has nearly doubled in value against the French franc and British pound in the last four and a half years, and has appreciated by about 65 percent against the German mark since 1979.

An air-fare war on transatlantic routes has produced incredible bargains, with round-trip tickets between New York and London going for as low as $318 on People's Express.

THE LOWER prices have not come because the airlines are suffering. American Airlines, which operated one flight a day between Dallas and London last summer, has nearly doubled its number of flights this year "to take advantage of the strong bookings." Planes are flying more than 80 percent full. British Airways' advance bookings are up by 26 percent and Air France's, by 23 percent. Trans World Airlines expects its transatlantic traffic to grow by at least 15 percent for all of this year.

"In past years, many Americans traveled within this country," said a spokesman for the U.S. Travel Service, which promotes foreign travel into this country. "Europe was considered too glamorous, something the middle-income American family would never consider. Now some overseas destinations are cheaper than some domestic travel. Europe has become affordable and realistic."

According to the U.S. Consular Service, which issues passports, applications have soared since March and the agency now expects to issue 4.7 million passports this year, after a record 4.1 million last year.

BY COMPARISON, the number of foreigners coming to the United States has leveled off, with an expected 3 percent increase over last year for a total of 25 million persons, according to the U.S. Travel and Tourism Administration. They spent an estimated $13.8 billion.

Travel abroad has been so heavy that some Americans may be forced to put off their plans until 1985. Tours offered by American Express are almost sold out, according to Ballou. New York-based Perrillo Tours, which specializes in Italian tours, says 94 percent of the space on its tours have already been reserved for this year.

Once they have crossed the ocean, Americans are taking advantage of cut-rate deals and traveling by car. Hertz Corp. says its European reservations are up by 50 percent over last year, thanks largely to a special promotion it is offering to North American tourists. For example, in Britain a subcompact car that would have rented for $152 for a week in 1981 costs $123 today.

Those who prefer to leave the driving to someone else have caused a surge in the sale of Eurail passes, which allow travel on French, German, Italian and Swiss railroads. In 1983, 180,000 of the passes were sold to Americans and Canadians; so far, sales are running 20 percent ahead of last year.

ALTHOUGH THERE is no question that Europe is a bargain, inflation offsets the strength of the dollar in some countries, particularly France, where prices in terms of francs have risen between 35 percent and 40 percent in the last five years. For example, the price of a double room at the Paris Inter-Continental that cost the equivalent of $120 in 1980 now fetches a slightly higher $138. But moderately priced hotels range from $37 at the Hotel Lenox on the Left Bank to $100 for a double room, including breakfast, at the Hotel California off the Champs Elysees.

Elsewhere, visitors to Europe can also afford to travel in greater style than they did a few years ago. The price of a breakfast in London at the Hilton on Park Lane has dropped by 13 percent from $7.35 in 1979 to $6.40 this summer. A double room at the Hilton International in Munich has come down by 17 percent, from $73.70 five years ago to $61.15 now.

Whether they go first class or tourist, Americans are almost sure to find a warm welcome overseas — not so much for their charm, but more so because they are known as the biggest spenders in the world. Sheer numbers made their business an important factor in the economies of the countries they visit.

LAST YEAR Americans spent a record $4.4 billion in European and Mediterranean countries, not counting air fares. The average tourist from the States spent $873 — again, exclusive of air travel costs, according to the Bureau of Economic Analysis in the U.S. Commerce Department.

Nearly a quarter of the 461,325 visitors to Japan last year were Americans and they spent an average of $155 a day — $10 more than visitors from elsewhere. In addition, Japan's minimal inflation rate of 1.9 percent in 1983 has helped to make it increasingly appealing to Americans, with average lengths of stays growing to 5.4 nights this year, against 4.8 nights in 1983.

Greece this year expects to greet at least 500,000 Americans on vacation, up from 408,000 last year and 333,000 in 1982.

Hawaii celebrates anniversary of statehood

By MICHAEL CARLTON
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

HONOLULU — To many, Hawaii is a paradise — a place of spun-sugar beaches, waving fields of sugar cane, surfers and cloudless nights.

But there is more to Hawaii. There is crime. There are hookers. People are born here, and people die. Volcanoes erupt and hurricanes devastate. It is — as are all the 50 states — unique in many ways, alike in many others.

In this, the 25th year of statehood for Hawaii, a very special book has been produced to show the world a side of the islands tourists seldom see. Called "A Day in the Life of Hawaii" (Workman Publishing, $40), it is exactly that — one day (Dec. 2, 1983) in which 50 world-class photographers roamed the islands and the seas of Hawaii to record the events happening during those 24 hours.

In this over-sized book we see the typical Hawaii — the beaches and the sunsets, the hula dancers and the surfers. But we also see a Hawaii missed by most tourists. We see, for example, some shady ladies in Chinatown. And we see a mother scolding her recalcitrant son on the 500-acre Ackerman ranch. We are taken to the top of mountains and far beneath the seas, into vast pineapple fields and tiny tin shacks.

The 224 pages of "A Day in the Life of Hawaii" give the reader an intimate look at Hawaii and helps him understand the state is more than a bedroom to 4 million tourists each year, more than bright purple aloha shirts and luaus. It is a community of remarkable ethnic diversity, and remarkable problems. A place of dreams and disaffection. A state of extraordinary beauty and occasional ugliness.

All this is shown us in 245 pictures that were culled from more than 65,000 images taken in a single day. The 50 carefully selected photographers used 300 cameras, 24 helicopters and hundreds of assistants to get their pictures on all the Hawaiian islands but Niihau, a private island where outsiders are barred. That's Niihau's loss, for these talented men and women have created a rich visual tapestry even more striking than "A Day in the Life of Australia," the first book in what promises to become a series ("A Day in the Life of Canada" is now in production).

If "A Day in the Life of Australia" was the inspiration for the Hawaii book, a slight Hawaiian native — Sheila Donnelly — was its driving force. Donnelly wanted something very special to salute her state on its Silver Anniversary. She initiated the project and used the charm only Hawaiians have to convince others that the book would be a perfect birthday present to the state.

She got the Sheraton Hotels of Hawaii to provide free rooms for the photographers, United and Aloha Airlines free transportation, the firm of Coopers & Lybrand free accounting, Holiday Rentals free rental cars.

LONES TRAVEL

The wealth and variety of sights, within a day or half-day car trip from Lisbon, are perhaps greater than from any other European city. Travel to Portugal's leading city makes possible many excursions into the country's varied landscapes and rich history. For instance, Sesimbra is an authentic fishing village in the process of becoming a tourist colony. Only 19 miles south of Lisbon, it offers a long stretch of sandy shore where fishermen gather their lines after the day's catch. It is a place to windsurf, sunbathe, swim and stroll. Then, dine at the restaurants along the bay which serve a great variety of seafood including the local specialty, swordfish. After dinner, stroll the Rua da Esperance as a pleasant way to encounter Portuguese families and local fishermen.

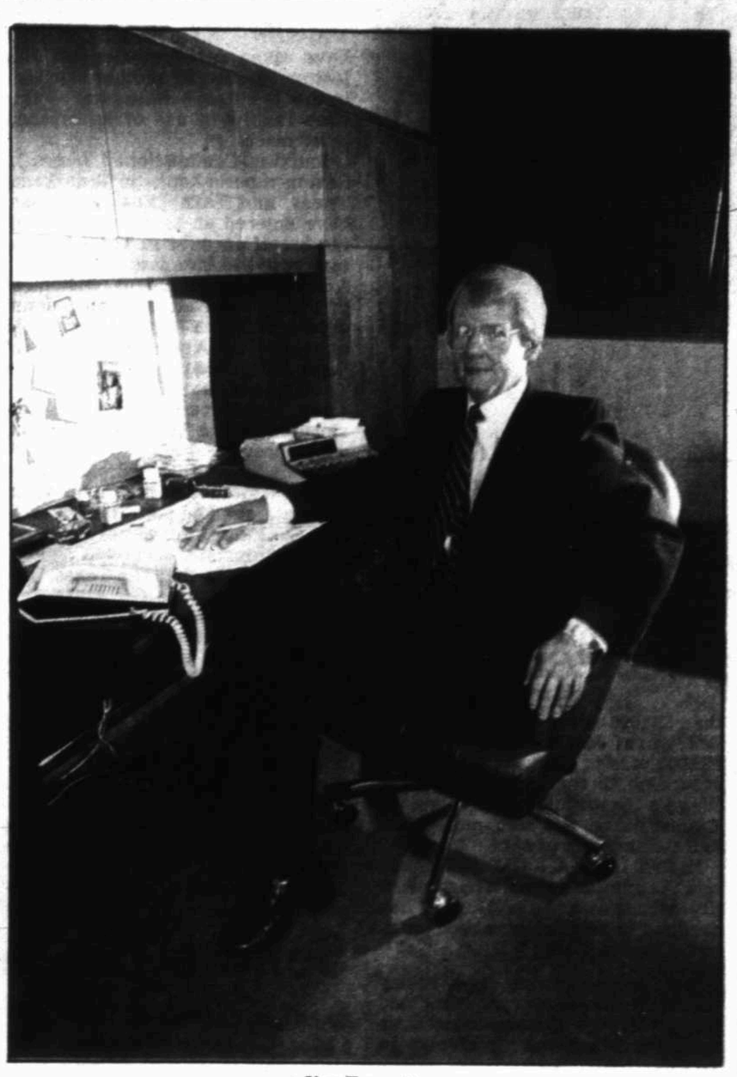

A trip to Lisbon may be the answer to your quest for a vacation place that includes lively nightlife as well as quiet villages. At LONES TRAVEL SERVICE, we're sure we can find the places that will suit your wishes. We're also a full service American Express office so we can issue Express travelers checks and cash checks for card holders. Stop in to see us in the Permain Bldg. (street level) at 319 W. Texas. We're open Mon.-Fri., from 8-5 and on Sat. by appointment. Call 682-8645.

Estoril has the liveliest nightlife outside of Lisbon.

Deregulated thrifts adjusting well

Change brings invention, growth

By Mella McEwen
Business-Oil Writer

Fueled by deregulation and technological advances, the winds of change have whirled through the entire financial industry in recent years.

None, however, has felt the changes more sharply than Savings and Loan institutions. Deregulation has thrown the thrifts into severe competition not only with other S&L's but with commercial banks, financial supermarkets and other financial institutions.

But, despite the drastic change of going from a highly regulated business to a deregulated one, Midland thrift executives report the thrift industry is adjusting well. Even though there have been some failures, reverses and hard times among thrifts, innovation and expansion has also dominated the industry since deregulation.

"Deregulation has created and will continue to create expansion," says Jim Everett, president Petroplex Savings & Loan.

"It got the saving and loans into the consumer loan market, where they should have been. That has been the single biggest inroad from deregulation."

A new found power to establish branches has also played a role in expansion, according to Peter Link, president Home Savings & Loan, who recently announced that his firm had just received approval to open a branch in Dallas.

"This is the one advantage thrifts have over commercial banks," said Link, "It allows Savings and Loans to compete extremely effectively with other financial institutions."

On the other hand, thrifts have had to adjust to the highly competitive business of obtaining deposits.

"It's more competitive," said Steve Riggs, president of First Bankers Trust and Savings Association, "We now have to price our own products."

That competitive pricing, however, has paid off in benefits to the consumer, and has brought a new rash of customers to the S&L's. Convenience might also be part of the consumer attraction,according to local thrift officers.

"The customer no longer has to deal with three or four financial institutions," says Larry Hellums, marketing manager, Home Savings & Loan. "Now he can deal with just one, in all his financial transactions."

Peter Link also cited consumer benefits as the most significant events to come out of deregulation. He offered the growth of Automated Teller Machines (ATMs), as one example resulting from changes in state laws. He also noted that deregulation has allowed the minimum amount of deposit to drop, making the various savings plans more affordable to more customers. "Customers are very sophisticated," he said. "They are correctly demanding and seeking out the best products."

While Steve Riggs, president First Bankers Trust & Savings Association, has become involved to an extent in consumer loans, he still sees the primary function of his business as mortage lending.

Home Savings has an active portfolio of mortage and installment loans and is moving to become moreinvolved in energy lending, a position unheard of by thrifts only a few years back.

"Our energy division is actively making and seeking oil and gas loans." said Link. It's good business for the community and for the association." Home is also looking to become involved in SBA lending.

While some thrift officers have expressed concerned at the possibility of re-regulation, those in Midland unamiously agree that is not likely to happen.

Everett believes any reregulation, if it comes, will merely be along the lines of the goverment asking appraisers to help screen out potential problems, and auditors to do the same. "There's a lot of stress and strain on banks and savings and loans," he said. "The goverment is our largest competitor for funds." He also said that when funds rise, it means loan demand is declining, which is a negative trend, and which has been the trend he's seen the last couple of months.

What Texas S&L heads are saying

Hill and Knowlton, an international public relations firm, recently conducted a survey of chief executive officers and presidents of the 215 savings and loan institutions in the state of Texas to acertain their views on the state of the thrift industry. Here are some of the findings:

Almost 60 percent respondants thought PROFITABILITY was the key issue facing the savings and loans industry today. Second most pressing was interest rates.

Eighty-six percent think that INTEREST RATES will rise over the next 12 to 18 months.

COMMERCIAL LOAN DEMAND has a more promising future than residential loans. Sixty-eight percent say commercial loan demand will increase while 54 percent think residential loan demand will decrease over the next 12 to 18 months.

The most important internal issue facing bank leaders is BUSINESS AND STRATEGIC PLANNING, both in the long and short ranges, according to 81 percent of those surveyed.

Exactly half of those surveyed say the primary influence shaping new business development at their institution is their reading of what the COMPETITION is doing.

SIXTY-PERCENT OF respondants say price and profibility are the most important factors in determining prices and rates on products.

COMPETITION FOR DEPOSITS is mainly with the commercial banks, according to 45 percent of those surveyed, while the rest found savings and loans institutions as the chief competitor.

MONEY MARKET FUNDS were thought to be the next major source of competition with 31 percent ranking the funds behind other savings and loans. Financial supermarkets were seen as the least significant source of competition.

COMMERCIAL BANKS were also listed as the primary competition for loans thought 50 percent of those surveyed. Thirty-six percent named savings and loans institutions.

Also seen as competitors were MORTGAGE BANKERS, with 18 percent ranking them first and 40 percent placing them second.

The majority of respondants (68 percent) believe this competitive ranking on both deposit and loan sides, will remain the same for the next two years. A number, however, think FINANCIAL SUPERMARKETS will become increasingly more significant.

MARKETING AND COMMUNICATIONS are more important to 86 percent of respondants, with advertising isted as the majority choice for communicationds.

STRONG AND STABLE is the image that 77 percent felt the savings and loans industry would like to project.

A summary of the banking bill

By BILL McCLOSKEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although seven days were spent discussing the technical aspects of the ways financial institutions conduct business, the banking bill approved by the Senate has many important provisions that affect the way banks deal with individual customers.

Here is a rundown of those provisions.

—The bill requires disclosure of policies on delaying availability of customers' deposits. It sets a goal of next day availability on local checks and no more than a three-day hold on most out-of-town checks.

It requires next day availability for money from U.S. Treasury checks payable to and endorsed by a customer with an established relationship with the bank of deposit. This is seen as a substantial benefit to elderly people who live on their Social Security checks and often must wait for days while they clear.

Consumers complained to Congress that banks put "holds" on funds while waiting, sometimes for 12 business days, to make absolutely sure a check will clear.

—The legislation limits the increase in interest rates on adjustable rate mortgages to five percentage points over the life home loans negotiated after June 1, 1985.

—It allows federal savings and loans to offer checking accounts to all their customers. An existing prohibition against paying interest on such accounts would be retained.

—Regional interstate banking would be authorized for five years under the measure. Customers may find their bank in one state opening branches in neighboring states. This would be particularly useful for people who regularly commute across state lines.

—The bill restores explicit authority for federal credit unions to make home improvement loans for terms up to 15 years. It leaves up to the National Credit Union Administration Board the decision whether to permit home improvement and second mortgage loans of more than 15 years.

First Bankers sold to Dallas businessman

Southern Union Company has signed a letter of agreement to sell First Bankers Trust of Midland, to Dallas businessman, Ray J. Stockman, according to Steve Rigg, president First Bankers Trust.

The move is a continuing move on the part of Southern Union to divest itself of businesses outside its chosen fields of energy, utilities and natural resources. Southern Union acquired First Bankers in 1980, from a group of Midland stockholders.

"We view the purchase as a definite vote of confidence in First Bankers," said Rigg, who called the purchase price substantial. Stockman, the prospective buyer, is engaged in the oil and gas business and development projects throughout Texas.

Confronting corporate character attacks

There seems to be a growing trend toward corporate assassination by innuendo, rumor, and false allegations. It is a practice that is probably as criminal as driving by and throwing a bomb in a firm's plant, but requires virtually no accountability.

One totally unfounded rumor that recently swept through evangelical church circles was that Proctor & Gamble was involved in devil worship. Proctor & Gamble spent hundreds of thousands of dollars to track down the source of the vicious rumor and is now in the process of prosecuting a religious group. A similar unfounded, malicious rumor was circulated a few years back that McDonald's used horse meat, but the source of the costly lies were never found.

Although untrue, the rumors nontheless did considerable damage to positive corporate images that firms had spent years and millions of dollars in building and polishing. The life blood of a corporation, especially one dealing with the consumer, is reputation. One malicious rumor, however, can instantaneously set an aggressive firm back months by placing it on the defense.

THAT'S WHY the Bechtel Corp. lost no time in squashing a rumor recently at it's Palo Verde, Arizona nuclear project, and smeared some egg on the other face in the process.

The rampant rumor was that Bechtel destroyed and buried tools on the project in order to increase its profits by buying tools from a Bechtel-owned firm. Interveners who opposed the nuclear project alledged that Bechtel workers had buried a $250,000 cherry picker in the local dump along with $1 million in new tools, still in the crate, and enough copper wire "to circle the earth."

Bechtel lost no time in halting the rumor, by paying the cost of a $300,000 dig in the Arizona desert. Bechtel provided the money and heavy equipment for the dig, but Arizona Attorney General Bob Corbin directed where and how deep to excavate.

After a month of digging and the removal of 75,000 cubic yards of desert at the project dumpsite, the only thing uncovered was garbage and false allegations.

"One reason Bechtel authorized the funds for the dig," said Bechtel President, Alden Yates, "was to call attention to the absurdity of the intervention process that is going on today on nuclear power. We have proven the allegations false."

HOW DO RUMORS and false allegations against a company start and grow? Imagine this fictitious scenario:

Prior to a press conference with Glow Corp., a builder of nuclear power plants, a reporter covering the conference receives an annonymous phone call: "Why don't you ask them about all the new tools they buried in the dump, so they could buy tools from their own company?" asks the whispered voice, who refuses to identify itself.

"Can you give me more than that to go on," asks the reporter, who is salivating now at the prospect of landing a story ala Watergate.

"Ask Joe Smith, the dump truck driver, who hauls their trash. He may have something to say."

A call is made to Joe Smith: "I don't know. They dump a lot of stuff. I couldn't really say for sure what all of it is, but some of it looks suspicious—big heavy boxes, nailed shut, the kind they keep tools in."

From there more calls are made. Someone remembers seeing a cherry picker at the dumpsite. It might have been buried, or it might have just been there to do some work on the electrical transformer.

THE REPORTER FEIGNS at being objective, and makes like he is trying to substantiate the "charges." In reality he is only making a sloppy case for asking the question at the press conference, because in his liberal-educated heart he knows the corporation probably is guilty.

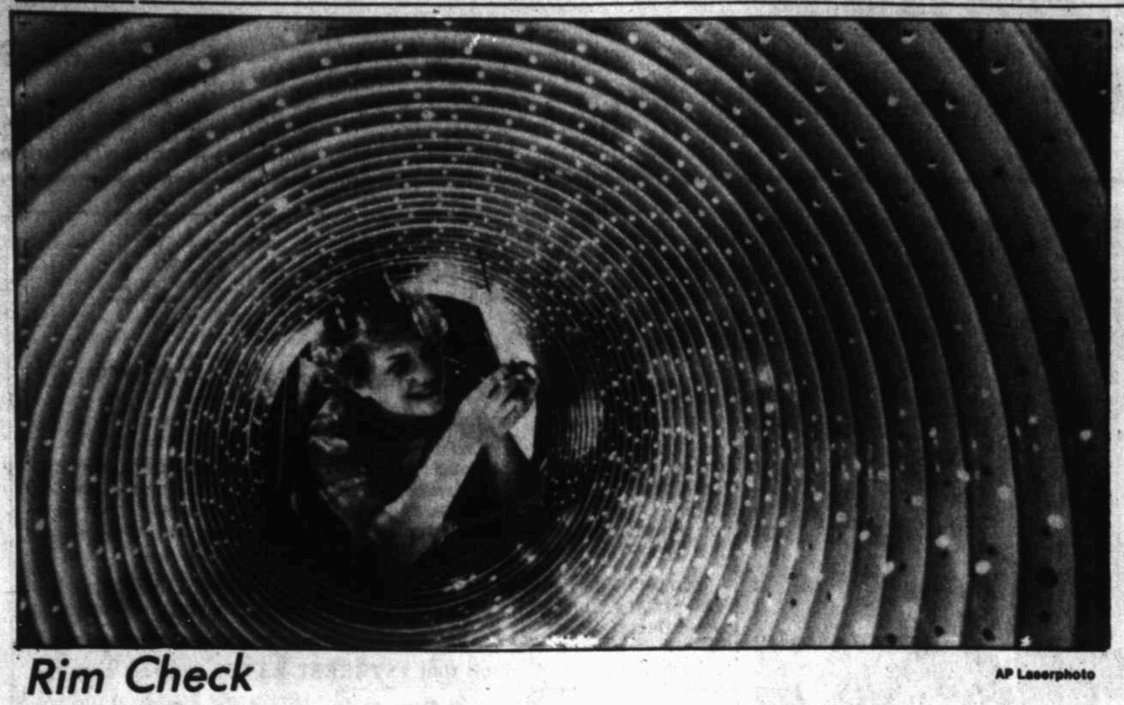

At the press conference the question is asked. It is denied of course, and the net result of the press conference, when it is reported upon by the media is: "Glow Corp. denies burying tools for profit." Glow Corp. then must spend the next months and weeks answering probing question after question, all with no basis in reality.

A good example is the recent Ferraro finances fiasco. There was never a legitimate news story involving Geraldine Ferraro's finaces or those of her husband's. Yet, it was in the news for weeks, because her adversaries keep fanning the fires of suspicion with innuendo.

In a recent business reporting seminar recently, James L. Ewing, director of public relations for Delta Airlines cautioned business reporters not to run with the pack, jump to conclusions and to be fair and honest with businesses.

There is no question that corporations have a problem, keeping tarnish off the corporate image. Part of the problem goes to the inept PR policy of many businesses, but a large share must go to adversaries, competition and the press, all of which are required now to show little accountability when taking on the reputation of a corporation.

Strike would be devastating to dealers

By TIM BOVEE
AP Business Writer

An autoworkers strike against General Motors Corp. would be "devastating" for Chevrolet, Oldsmobile, Buick, Pontiac and Cadillac sales people and "the best thing since sliced bread" for their competitors, dealers say.

But the effects would probably be short-lived, and customer loyalty would soon restore the balance once a strike ended, dealers said Wednesday.

"We could operate for probably a couple or three months, but it would be a devastating experience because we're used to volume," said Marlin Coffee, general manager of Ed Black's Chevrolet in Albuquerque, N.M. "Obviously, it would destroy profits, assuming that your service, parts and body-shop operations didn't increase to take up the slack."

Dale Daniels, general manager of Reynolds Ford in Norman, Okla., said, "If they're out for any period of time, it will help us. It will be the best thing since sliced bread."

His dealership has increased its orders by 35 percent to take advantage of a strike, which United Auto Workers union officials say could come if no contract is reached with GM by midnight Friday.

"Business has been so good I haven't been able to really stockpile anything. And I'm not griping about that good business," Daniels said.

A strike, should it occur Friday night when the United Auto Workers union contract with GM expires, would find inventories depleted and production stretched to capacity at the end of a boom year for 1984 models.

"We're coming off one of the best years we've had for some time, since 1978," said Jim DeNooyer, owner of DeNooyer Chevrolet in Colonie, N.Y. "We're lower this year than we've been for a long time."

Foreign competitors, limited by four-year-old import quotas, will be unable to increase their business if the autoworkers walk out.

"If GM closed up tomorrow and never reopened again, we would still sell the same amount," said Art Garner, spokesman for Toyota Motor Corp. in Torrance, Calif., whose company is allowed to import no more than 558,000 cars a year.

General Motors dealers had 628,000 cars in stock as of Aug. 31, according to the industry journal Ward's Automotive Reports. In August alone, GM sold more than half that number of cars.

Harold Jackson, a GM spokesman, said the automaker had a 56-day supply of cars on Aug. 31. GM has declined to release the actual number of cars in stock.

"I've been running on a 10-day supply of cars for four months," said Walter Havens, general sales manager for Blackwell Chevrolet in Jackson, Miss. "We turn our inventory three times a month."

During a strike, customers walking into GM showrooms would find car salesman less willing to dicker over discounts off the sticker price.

"If they do walk out on Friday, the public just won't benefit like they would have," said Wayne Woody, general manager of Dave Hallman Chevrolet in Erie, Pa. "We just won't be selling them for the year-end price we normally would have."

Mattox asked to rule on ATMs

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State banking officials have asked Attorney General Jim Mattox to assist in another skirmish in the interstate banking war — this time involving use of automated teller machines.

Banking Commissioner James L. Sexton reports banks in Texarkana, Texas, and Texarkana, Arkansas, have entered an agreement regarding use of an ATM in Texas by customers of the Arkansas bank.

Under the agreement, customers of State First National Bank (domiciled in Arkansas) may use the ATM operated by American National Bank (domiciled in Texas) on the Texas side of the state line.

Sexton believes the practice is in violation of the Texas Constitution, which provides that "No foreign corporation, other than national banks of the United States domiciled in this state, shall be permitted to exercise banking or discounting privileges in this state."

Sexton notes that the Texas Constitution provides for state and national banks to share use of ATMs in the city or county of their domicile, the banks involved are domiciled in different states.

Sexton is asking Mattox to take "appropriate" action if the attorney general agrees that it appears a violation has occurred.

State Board of Insurance meets with representatives of insurance industry groups Thursday (September 20) to receive comments on proposed legislation SBI is considering for the 1985 legislative session.

SBI has 25 proposals which it plans to submit the lawmakers in January, with a number dealing with housekeeping changes, clarifications and codification of previously approved changes.

The board also is seeking changes in unfair claim settlement practice provisions.

Those changes would add as unfair practices demanding information which doesn't affect settlement of a claim, denying benefits under the "pre-existing condition defense" unless that condition has been specifically excluded, and voiding coverage or denying coverage on grounds an applicant didn't disclose certain information considered material — if the application did not clearly require disclosure of such information.

Other items being looked at by the board include changes to require separate examinations of surplus lines agents, and requiring that surplus lines insurers be licensed in at least one other state or country.

Changes in provisions on agents responding to SBI inquiries, maintenance of records, and credits against premium taxes also are to be considered.

The Waste Management and Resource Recovery Council of the Texas Department of Health has asked the Board of Health to push for preferential treatment of power-generating facilities which use wastes to generate electricity.

Council members approved preparation of a resolution to the board asking them to seek changes in Public Utility Commission rules to provide incentives for such generating facilities.

PUC rules already provide for use of cogenerated power, but the council wants "true" resource recovery operations to receive priority.

Council members also approved a resolution supporting the need for the Department of Health to proceed with regulation of small quantity hazardous waste generators.

Currently, entities producing 1,000 kilograms (2,200 pounds) of wastes monthly are required to meet manifesting and reporting requirements; THD is in the process of changing the requirement to 100 kilograms.

Small-quantity generators also come in for attention in the final draft report of the Governor's Task Force on Hazardous Waste Management.

That report also urges the Legislature to consider a tax on hazardous wastes, to encourage recycling and proper disposal, and to provide funds for clean-up of abandoned hazardous waste sites.

The report comments, however, that "simply because a material is produced should not subject it to taxation," but rather it should be taxed "if it enters the environment."

Tax reductions and incentives should be provided to encourage installation of hazardous waste treatment and reduction programs — and for use of improved technology, the report says.

The report calls on state agencies to expedite procedures for approving recycling and reuse applications, and to revise regulations to encourage such practices.

Senate passes far-reaching banking bill

By BILL McCLOSKEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, after a week of debate, has approved a bill that allows banks to open out-of-state branches and enables banks and savings and loan associations to set up subsidiaries in the securities business.

Thursday night's 89-5 vote came after Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., failed in efforts to delete the provision allowing expansion into the securities business. He vowed to take his fight to a conference committee after the House approves its version of the comprehensive banking legislation.

Heinz warned his colleagues they would be "betting with the taxpayers' money" if they let banks get into the "riskier businesses" of dealing in municipal revenue bonds, commercial paper and mortgage-backed securities.

Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., abandoned his lonely fight to block a provision giving approval to action already taken by some states to form regional compacts to allow opening of out-of-state branches.

The bill closes a loophole in federal law, under which state regulators could permit banks to offer certain insurance nationwide. Basically, federal banking law now keeps banks out of non-bank businesses.

Also in the bill and approved without debate were provisions to cap interest-rate increases on most home mortgages at five percentage points over the initial interest rate, speed up the check-clearing process so banks couldn't put two-week holds on a customers money and require financial institutions to reveal more about fees and leases.

State slates tax seminar

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock has stated Midland residents with questions about changes in state tax laws can get answers during a special seminar to be held at 7:00 p.m. September 20, 1984 in the Fine Arts Bldg. Auditorium, Midland College.

"The state sales tax rate is going up and a number of new items and services will be taxable for the first time beginning October 2," Bullock said. "We are holding seminars across Texas so that these changes won't come as a surprise to anybody."

Rig counts down slightly in Basin

Rig counts for the Permian Basin dropped two in number from the previous week to a total of 330. That's a healthy 44 more rigs drilling from this time last year.

High rig count was in Lea County. New Mexico, with even that county dropping five rigs from last week. Upton County had six new rigs drilling, while Sterling dropped two. Eight counties lost one rig, six others gained one. Gaines and Lubbock Counties each had two new rigs drilling and Cochran and Midland had three. Crane, Irion, Reagan, Reeves, Scurry and Winkler dropped by two each, while Yoakum lost three rigs.

Nine counties did not change in total number rigs drilling.

Nationally, the rig count was down 47 units from the previous week, but up 70 from this time last year. Canada was also down, with three less rigs from the previous week, up 39 from last year.

Illinois and Oklahoma gained three rigs each and Utah lost the same number. Louisiana dropped by 15 rigs, while California, New Mexico and Texas lost six.

Auto industry has long history of strikes

1937 — A historic 44-day sitdown strike against General Motors Corp., most notably in Flint, Mich., wins bargaining rights for the UAW at 17 plants. A 29-day strike against Chrysler Corp. wins similar rights.

1941 — A nine-day strike against Ford Motor Co. results in wage improvements and dues checkoff.

1961 — Ford is struck for 10 days; union gets longer relief periods and curbs on subcontracting.

1964 — A one-week strike at GM.

Pennzoil Co. announces refinery layoffs

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Pennzoil Co. officials announced this week that 147 people at its Atlas Processing Co. refinery here are being laid off indefinitely due to dim market prospects for its products.

The one-third drop in the refinery's workforce will bring the number of employees at the 61-year-old plant to about 325, the company said.

Robert G. Harper, an Atlas spokesman, said the layoffs are to begin immediately. One hundred jobs will be eliminated within the next few weeks, followed by the elimination of the rest by year end.

Sixty percent of those laid off will be hourly workers, the rest will be salaried employees.

Forty-five of the employees laid off are eligible for retirement benefits, Harper said.

Company officials say the layoffs will save money for the ailing refinery, which has been losing money at the rate of $2 million to $3 million a month for the past several years.

The company should save approximately $5.5 million annualy in payroll and benefit costs, Harper said.

Atlas currently has annual payroll and benefit costs of approximately $15 million. Atlas will maintain its current refining capacity of 36,000 barrels of crude oil a day.

Eighteen percent of its daily output is produced in the form of lubricants. Harper said lubricants are the firm's most profitable product.

"The depressed market for transportation fuels (gasoline and diesel) have been in the ditch for a long time and dragging down the products that we have a good margin on," Harper said.

The layoffs are only the first step Pennzoil intends to take to cut costs at the Atlas Refinery. During the next two years, the company plans to spend $7 million to $8 million finding ways to cut energy costs by 7 percent annually for a savings of $2.5 million annually.

Coal contract talks continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Collective bargaining teams for the soft coal industry and the United Mine Workers union are engaged in the most intense phase of contract negotiations since the talks began in April.

The lengthy face-to-face talks, which continued at a downtown hotel here Wednesday, were cloaked in secrecy, and it was impossible to determine whether progress was being made toward achieving a settlement in time to avert a strike in the coalfields of Appalachia and the Midwest.

Representatives of the 160,000-member UMW, led by union President Richard Trumka, and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, the industry bargaining team, met throughout the day and into the early evening before adjourning.

The talks were scheduled to resume today.

Spokesmen for the two sides refused to characterize the nature of the talks or talk about prospects that a tentative settlement can be reached on a new accord before Oct. 1, when the current 40-month agreement expires.

The United Mine Workers, which has about 50,000 members on layoff, has a long tradition of adhering to a no-contract, no-work principle. Because it normally takes about 10 days for a proposed agreement to be sent to the coalfields, explained to the miners and subjected to a mail ballot referendum, the bargainers here are believed to be shooting for an agreement by around Sept. 20.

The once-mighty mine workers union, which could virtually cripple the U.S. economy with a walkout in earlier years, has struck the soft coal industry in every contract renewal year since 1964.

The union walked out for more than seven weeks during the last negotiations in 1981 despite the repeated statements by then-President Samuel M. Church Jr. that he wanted to avert a strike.

The principle issues before the industry and the union this time around have been obscured by the shroud of secrecy accompanying the talks — and by the fact that a 42-member UMW bargaining council, which had the authority to review proposed settlements under Church's regime — has been abolished by Trumka.

Midland's construction revenue down $15 million

COLLEGE STATION—Authorized construction permit dollar volume for the Midland Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA) totaled $21 million during the fourth quarter1983 - a $15 million decrease from the third quarter.

According to W.L. Born, assistant research economist with the Rexas Real Estate Research Center at Texas A&M University, this fourth-quarter volume was about one-third the average 1982 quarterly dollar volume.

Nearly all of the nonresidential construction permit dollar volume in the third and fourth quarters of 1983 was for mercantile and office buildings. Nearly all of the residential construction dollar volume in these same quarters was for single-family dwelling permits.

"Multiple Listing Service (MLS) data for the Midland area indicate that existing home sales activity was relatively flat from the fourth quarter 1982 through the second quarter 1983. An increase in the third quarter was followed by a steep decline in the fourth. Comparing the fourth quarter 1982 with the fourth quarter 1983, existing home sales prices tended upward," Born said.

"Except for two categories, every major category of authorized construction permit activity in the fourth quarter 1983, measured in dollars, was less than the corresponding quarterly value in the earlier 1983 quarters. These exceptions are for hotel, motel and cabin, and five-or-more family dwelling unit permits."

Residential construction permit activity gained strength during 1982 and the first two quarters of 1983, then weakened in the third and fourth quarters. Quarterly residential construction permit dollar volume during 1983 was approximately twice the quarterly nonresidential volume. The 1983 quarter-to-quarter trend on residential construction was identical to the trend in total dollar volume of new construction. The total dollar volume of residential permits in 1983 was 45 percent greater than in 1982.

The 1983 quarter-to-quarter volatility of nonresidential construction activity was significantly greater than that of residential construction. Born says this occurred for three reasons.

Harris Acoustics and Supply offers experience and quality

Harris Acoutics has been a subcontractor for commercial acoustical ceiling and floor covering for 18 years in Midland. J.E. "Slim" Mason, President and owner, feels that the reason for their success is quality materials and workmanship combined with a thorough knowledge of the construction industry. With that experience, Harris Acoustics has added a new dimension to their company. They are now a warehouse and sell a complete line of sheetrock, metal studs, and acoustical ceiling materials, along with all the necessary accessories. All of their materials are available to contractors or do-it-yourselfers.

Harris Acoustics and Supply is proud of the fact that they have plus fiberglass insulation for both ceilings and walls.

In addition to their drywall and ceiling materials, they also carry vinyl base and commercial vinyl floor covering. Harris Acoustics and Supply is the dealer for Azrock and Armstrong floor coverings.

Just as you would expect, the prices at Harris Acoustics and Supply are very competitive. Truckload pricing is available upon request.

If you would like more information call Slim, his wife Peggy (who is secretary of the company) or David Stickney, Manager and chief estimator, at 683-1874 or stop by number 22 Industrial Loop.

the largest inventory in the Permian Basin. This is a major benefit to the contractor because it eliminates time lost on the job waiting for materials to arrive.

Whether you purchase supplies for commercial or residential use, quality products are essential. As a newly named distributor for Gold Bond Building Products, Harris Acoustics and Supply carries a wide range of sheetrock and metal studs in various sizes. Harris Acoustics also carries installation accessories such as adhesives and screws. They have a complete selection of ceiling tile such as Armstrong, Owens Corning, Conwed, and Gold Bond. They carry a wide range of ceiling grid in a number of finishes,

The Midland Market brings contemporaryart to Midland

"Art comes to you proposing frankly to give nothing but the highest quality to your moments as they pass," suggested Walter Pater in the 1800's. Realizing that art adds a special dimension to our lives, Shari Clemens and Gwen Witte, owners of the Midland Market, are bringing fine contemporary art to Midland.

Shari and Gwen have recently signed a contract with Peterson Fine Art Gallery of Dallas which will allow them to bring fine works of art to Midland. Midland Market has just received its first group of artwork from Peterson.

Art expresses not only the artist's feelings but can also help other individuals express themselves in their decorating. Because each individual may want to make a different statement through their decorating in their home or office, Midland Market is keeping a wide variety of contemporary pieces in stock and can order even more. The first group of art from Peterson includes signed and numbered works by Dali, Calder, and Miro'. A textured work by Maxwell, as well as a number of pieces of Eskimo art, are included in the group. Furthermore, an intriguing suite of three pieces by the Russian artist Chemiakin and an oil on canvas by VanSelem are available. Several pieces by Segunda have a Southwestern look and are particulary appropriate for offices or men's studios. For variety a bronze sculpture entitled "La Paloma" by Alvar is also avaiable.

Art is an excellent way to make a "statement"; however, your decor is not complete without a number of other items. Midland Market recognizes this and is prepared to help you complete your "statement". They have a wide variety of samples and sources for everything from formica to furniture, and from wallpaper and fabric to small accessories. They have so many sources and samples that anyone should be able to find just what they are looking for.

Unusual work by local artists, such as Billie Rice, is also available at Midland Market. Ms. Rice does unusual work on wood. She even redoes old desks, etc. Onyx clocks and desk sets, as well as entry floors, are designed by another local artist, Clark Taplin. The onyx is imported from Idaho.

If you plan on remodeling in time for Christmas now is the time to start and Midland Market will bring a Dallas size selection to you. Many craftsmen and contractors have a busy schedule right before Christmas and sometimes special items have to be backordered, so don't wait till it's too close to the holiday season to start.

Gwen and Shari, along with their associate Leslie Orr, feel that Midland is a cosmopolitan city and that Midlanders deserve to have a local "market" where they can select the decor that expresses their personalities. This is the idea behind Midland Market. Furthermore, they offer a 20% discount off the suggested retail price on everything except the fine artwork and a few items which they keep in stock. This "marketplace" is available to everyone. Though Gwen and Shari are both available for design consultation, you can do your own decorating and still do your shopping at the Midland Market.

For those who want some help decorating their home, Gwen and Shari will help you design a room which will express your personality. Their philosophy is, "Just because we don't like something, doesn't mean it's not right for the family we're working with. We want to incorporate their ideas in the decor."

Go by the Midland Market in San Miguel Square and see the beautiful fine art which they just received and browse through their many samples.

Shari Clemens and Gwen Witte, owners of Midland Market, bring a wide selection of fine art to Midland. Their shop offers you a wide selection of samples and sources for decorating necessities. Midlanders can now go to San Miguel Square, instead of Dallas when they are ready to begin redecorating.

In the air and on the ground Roadrunner is the best all-around!

In the air and on the ground, Roadrunner Charter is best all-around! Roadrunner, now located at Schlemeyer Field, has the best equipment, pilots, rentals, instruction, maintenance, and ground services in the Permian Basin.

Their outstanding fleet of fiveairplanes and two helicopters, including a new turbine helicopter, can be ready on an hour's notice. Jim Carlson, general manager of Roadrunner Charter, points out that they still have the only full size helicopter in the Permian Basin which is available for charter service. Even demonstration or sight seeing trips in the helicopter are available for $35. As always, Roadrunner Charter will still be glad to pick you up at Midland Regional Air Terminal or Midland Air Park.

Roadrunner knows that an exceptional fleet is a necessity, yet a great fleet without equally good pilots is useless for charters. So, Roadrunner Charter pilots undergo an extensive training program and are extremely well qualified to fly in any weather conditions. They also receive regularly scheduled training so that their proficiency level always meets Roadrunner's high standards.

Furthermore, these professionals, know more than just the mechanics of flying; they know that you fly because you have a busy schedule to meet. They are ready to meet your schedule, twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week.

In addition, to their charters, Roadrunner offers sightseeing, hot-shot, and many other aerial projects. When you want a charter call the best - call Roadrunner Charter at 563-2288.

If you are a pilot and prefer to do your own flying, Roadrunner will be glad to rent you an airplane. Furthermore, when you are ready to purchase a plane, Roadrunner can even help you with that.

Roadrunner's flight training both in the air and on the ground is also exceptional. In their individualized training, they utilize fixed wing and rotary wing planes. So you see, when it comes to flight training Roadrunner Charter is the best in the air and on the ground.

Now, Roadrunner's new location at Schlemeyer Field allows them to offer you more ground services like their aircraft sales and rental, along with maintenance for all types of aircraft. Moreover, when it comes to fuel sales, Roadrunner is in the forefront. They offer aviation gas at $1.85 and jet fuel at just $1.51.

Jim Carlson, welcomes all of his past customers and new customers to fuel up and check out the new facility and maintenance service. Roadrunner's experts are trained to service helicopters, as well as most types of airplanes.

So, call Roadrunner Charter today at (915)563-2288 or stop by Schlemeyer and check out their full service facility.

Yes, there really is a Santa Clause

..."Yes, Virginia, there really IS a Santa Clause!" His name is Bill Atwood, Marketing Consultant for Harvey Advertising. He has the perfect solution to every employer's Christmas shopping dilemna. So, give him a call at 697-0749, and take a look at this year's SELECTIVE GIFT PLAN!

How does it work? Very simply! The shopper selects a price range to fit his budget. Within that range is a delightful assortment of top line items from which the recipient chooses. These are handsomely displayed in a small catalog enabling the individual to shop privately for the gift of his or her own choice. Once a selection is made the recipient fills out the certificate accompanying the catalog, mails it in and soon has the gift delivered right to his own door.

If you're wondering whose logo appears on these items –the answer is NOBODY'S. These are gifts; not advertising specialties. They're purchased in quantity at very good prices, but they're intended to achieve what gifts are meant for and nothing more. It's a program that takes the headache out of Christmas shopping and puts in a touch of discriminating class.

Harvey also has a vast array of personalized gifts and/or performance awards that can make this year's company function delightfully special. So, for the employer who plans either an awards function or a staff party-- gifts from such names as CROSS, GALAXY, VITRONIC, HAZEL, or many, many otners --- might be just what's needed.

Don't wait, Virginia, until Santa's sleigh is loaded and the reindeer are on standby for the countdown! Don't forget to let those appreciated employees know, in some tangible way, how much their loyalty has meant to you this year. Give them the gift or award that says exactly what you'd like to say in just the way you want to say it.

CALL TODAY FOR YOUR APPOINTMENT WITH BILL ATWOOD. THE NUMBER (again) is 697-0749. See for yourself just how easy Harvey Advertising makes all your shopping. And, always remember that there'e nobody anywhere who does a better job of meeting those everyday needs with specialty ideas that work!

Charles and Gale Green are glad to be back in Midland and to be able to offer other coin collectors a place to trade and visit. Go by Village Coin Shop in the Village Shopping Center and see what all they have.

Village Coin Shop offers collectors a meeting place

Sometimes it seems like there just aren't enough opportunities for coin collectors to get together. There's nothing more fun than meeting at a coin show where you can trade coins and show off your latest acquisition. But, coin shows only come up every once in a while. Where can you find other collectors between shows? VILLAGE COIN SHOP!

Charles and Gale Green, long time coin collectors and native Texans, have recently moved back to Midland and opened Village Coin Shop in the Village Shopping Center. They are really excited about being back in Midland and about being able to offer a place for coin collector's to meet each other.

To help you sell and acquire coins Village Coin Shop has the only "Bid Board" in the area. Just put up the coin or coins you are ready to trade and wait for the high bid. You'll find that this is a great way to get to know other collectors.

You'll also find a lot of rare coins, both domestic and foreign, in the store. Charles and Gale are not new to this business and are proud to be members of both ANA and TNA. They will be glad to appraise small lots of coins in the store without charge.

If you want help designing a piece of jewelry, maybe around a coin in your collection, Village Coin Shop is the place to go. They have gold chains and pendants. Those without stones are sold by weight so you get a better deal. For your convenience they also carry diamonds, rubies, emeralds, and jewelry of every style.

Coin collecting books and supplies are found in abundance at Village Coin. Likewise, it's the perfect place to purchase gold and silver bullion.

Don't wait till the next coin show to meet other collectors. Drop by the Village Coin Shop and put a coin on the Bid Board. You're sure to see another collector. Oh, by the way, you can use your VISA and MASTERCARD on everything except the gold and silver bullion so be sure to watch for the big upcoming Christmas Special.

Services for credit card protection disputed

The offer usually comes in the mail with a credit card bill. It promises protection, for $6 to $15 a year, from fraudulent charges should your credit cards ever be lost or stolen. All you have to do is provide the credit card protection service with a list of your card numbers and they will make all the necessary telephone calls should you and your cards ever unwillingly part company.

The protection services will also order replacement cards if you need them and notify your credit grantors of a change of address. Some provide other services, such as emergency cash advances if you are stranded away from home and retrieval of lost keys.

Credit card protection may sound like a good idea, but its value is disputed. Some consumer advocates question whether it is necessary to pay for the service, since consumers can keep their own list of credit cards and notification numbers. The numbers are usually local or 800 numbers printed on each bill or on the literature accompanying a newly issued card.

The major objections, however, are based on the way some of the firms market their services. Some have given potential customers the mistaken impression that they are liable for more charges than is the case. In fact, federal law limits liability to $50 a card if the card issuer is not notified promptly, but banks and retailers rarely levy that charge.

In an even more prevalent practice, some services have led consumers to subscribe for one or more years at regular rates while believing that they were only signing up for a free trial period or cashing in a free "check." In other cases, consumers thought they were verifying their name and address for the credit card issuer. And with some of the companies, an initial subscription is followed up with an offer to become a lifetime member — a risky business, consumer advocates warn, since the company may not be around for the subscriber's lifetime, or even for enough years to warrant the common $100 or $120 lifetime membership price.

"The key is to read these advertisements carefully, not just the first few lines or the fine print," said Max Abraham, an investigator with the consumer affairs office in Alexandria, Va., which has received complaints about Credit Card Service Bureau, a company based in his city. Nine have been filed so far this year, compared to 26 last year and 36 in 1982. Other complaints have been received by the Metropolitan Washington Better Business Bureau, though these, too, have declined since a new management took over at the protection firm in May 1983.

Fairchild sophisticated lady

By Jane Ardmore
King Features Syndicate

In Buffalo on the set of "The Natural"...in Minneapolis (temperature 80 degrees below zero) where they were shooting "Purple Rain"...in the heat of Atlanta for Neil Simon's "The Sluggers"...out there on the dark set behind the camera you'd find a dainty girl with superbly chiseled face, her hair tied back in a pony tail, fingers flying over her needlepoint.

She watched intently, aware of the scene and appreciative of the cameraman's technique. Everyone on the crew is used to her, and they kid cameraman Craig Denault about having a girlfriend — actress Morgan Fairchild — this loyal.

There are times, of course, when she can't be with him because she is filming — right now, for example, as star of the new NBC series "Paper Dolls" about the fast lane of the high-fashion world. Lloyd Bridges also stars in the dramatic series.

This is Ms. Fairchild's second big TV series. As fans know, she whizzed to stardom in the role of glamorous Constance Carlyle on NBC's series "Flamingo Road."

Since then, she has starred as a TV newswoman in the feature film "The Seduction;" co-starred with Erik Estrada in the NBC-TV movie "Honeyboy;" last year spent three months off-Broadway in an acclaimed performance as the ingenuous Skye in "The Geniuses;" played the leader of a terrorist group in NBC's "The Time Bomb;" and was whisked off to England for the CBS-TV movie "The Zany Adventures of Robin Hood."

ONLY PROBLEM: the seven-week location in London was her longest separation from Denault. "We talked every night," she explains.

"Lord, how I missed that man! I don't believe in long separations. I think they're one of the main factors that contribute to the divorce rate in Hollywood. No matter how much you love somebody, if you're too long apart, you find yourselves leading separate lives.

"We're very much in love," she says. "When I did 'Geniuses,' they wanted to form a national company, and they offered me a six-month tour. Most people would have given their eyeteeth to make as much in two or three years as I was being offered for six months, but it meant being away from Craig. So I made the choice — to be with him. It comes right down to that.

"Sometimes you find yourself literally commuting!" She has been deeply involved writing a book, "Super Looks," to be published this fall. Originally scheduled for spring, it had to be sandwiched in between the pilot for "Paper Dolls" (with glitz plus intelligence, she's the owner of a model agency), the Dallas location for "Time Bomb," the Italian location for "Life Styles of the Rich and Famous," and the various locations with Denault.

It's been a year and a half since the publishers first approached her to do an exercise book. Ms. Fairchild didn't feel the market needed another exercise book. She countered with, "I'll tell you what I'd like to write — the book I'd have given anything in the world to read when I was 14.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Bette Davis

Q. Can you tell me about Bette Davis? I understand that she has had a stroke. L.L. Leach
West Springfield, Mass.

A. She had a stroke last year, nine days after she'd had a mastectomy, so her health was fairly guarded last fall. Now, though, her friends insist that she's fully recovered, feeling fine and looking for new projects.

"Right now, she's working on a manuscript for a book," explains one friend. "And reading scripts. She's constantly reading scripts and will probably announce her plans pretty soon. She definitely wants to go back to work."

Q. I was wondering whatever happened to the cast of "The Rocky Horror Picture Show," especially Tim Curry.
Debbie
Dickson City, Pa.

A. Curry went on to a stint as a rock 'n' roller, then to the play "Amadeus" on Broadway, the films "Times Square" and "Annie," and on the London stage "The Pirates of Penzance" and numerous classics.

Despite this variety, though, he'd always insisted that "Rocky Horror" left him somewhat typecast. It was hard for him to get away from the bizarre image of the role. His next project won't help too much: He's cast as the Demonic Lord of Darkness in Ridley Scott's mythical fantasy-adventure "Legend." It's tentatively set for release next summer.

As for other cast members: Meat Loaf has, of course, become a rock 'n' roll star; Susan Sarandon (Janet) a movie star (current project: "Mussolini and Me" for HBO, now filming in Italy); and Barry Bostwick (the ever-straight Brad), a stage and TV star. He'll be in an Operation Prime Time special, "A Woman of Substance," due to air in late October and may or may not repeat his role as George Washington when that miniseries spawns a sequel next year.

Anything you'd like to know about prominent personalities? Write Josie: SUNDAY WOMAN magazine, 235th E. 45th St., New York, N.Y., 10017. Sorry we can't answer any letters individually.

Tom Selleck

Q. Tom Selleck is my favorite actor. Please tell me if he has any upcoming movies?
Diane Stephens
Fredericton, N.B., Canada

A. He just finished one in Vancouver, Canada. It's called "Runaway" and it co-stars Gene Simmons from the rock group Kiss (without make up), Cynthia Rhodes from "Staying Alive" and Kirstie Alley, the Vulcan-ette from "Star Trek II." The story concerns, not surprisingly, a dedicated cop on the trail of a homicidal maniac. It's due for release in December.

Besides that, all Selleck has on his mind, as we go to press is rest: He's taking his stepson Kevin away for an extended vacation. "Magnum" is going to shoot around him until he gets back.

Q. As a native American, a woman and a musician, I'm a big fan of Buffy Sainte-Marie, but she seems to have vanished off the face of the earth. Is she still singing, is she married and does she have any children?
Mary Edwards-Miller
Sacramento, Calif.

A. She is still singing, but has been doing it mostly in Canada, her homeland, recently in specials for the CBC. She did appear on "Sesame Street" for a couple of years, however, because her son, Dakota Starblanket Wolfchild (nicknamed Cody and from a previous marriage), was a fan of the show when he was younger.

You may even have seen her on last year's Oscar telecast when she and husband Jack Nitsche picked up their Oscar for writing the song "Up Where We Belong."

Other career notes: She and Nitsche are planning to collaborate on other songs; she's writing a book; and she's in the process of putting together a videotape of recent performances to show to record companies this fall.

"She doesn't have a recording contract now and she wants one," according to an associate. "But first we have to show them she's changed from her old, folksy image."

Q. I think I remember Tab Hunter as a champion figure skater back in the '50s. Am I right?
Bunny Roles
Colorado Springs, Colo.

A. Indeed you are. He was competing under his real name, Art Gelien, had trained since childhood for competition and was both a champion skater and rider. The skating hasn't been too visible lately, but you will get to see the riding in his new film, "Lust in the Dust," a sendup of spaghetti westerns. It co-stars Divine, his 300-pound actor-in-drag co-star from the cult hit "Polyester."

In this film, Divine plays a saloon singer-damsel in distress and Tab plays Clint Eastwood, although not by name, and he's very high on their chemistry on screen. "Divine is certainly one of my favorite leading ladies," he says, putting her in the company of Sophia Loren, Natalie Wood and Rita Hayworth. "We could end up as the William Powell and Myrna Loy of the '80s."

Especially if they wind up in a series of films — which is possible. "They had such a good time on this one tha. they're already talking about doing another," says an associate of Hunter's. "'Lust in the Dust II'... imagine the possibilities."

Tab Hunter and Divine

Q. Can you please tell us about the Jacksons? We want to know in what order they were born, how old they are and if any are married and have children.
Kathryn and Celeste Kertesz
Pomona, Calif.

Q. Michael Jackson's birthday is listed differently in every magazine I read. What is it?
Jennifer Urcioli
Henderson, Nev.

A. The Jacksons were born in the following order: Maureen, 34; Sigmund Esco, a.k.a. Jackie, 33; Toriano Adaryl, or Tito, 31; Jermaine Lajaune, 30; LaToya, 29; Marlon David, 27; Michael Joseph, born August 29, 1958; Steven Randall, or Randy, 22; and Janet, 18.

Now, families: Jackie is married to the former Enid Spann and has two children; Tito, to his high school sweetheart, Dee Dee; Marlon to the former Carol Parker and they have three children; and Jermaine to Hazel Gordy, daughter of Motown founder Berry Gordy, and they have two children.

As you may remember, Jermaine's marriage to Hazel figured into his professional split from the family back in the '70s. Father Joe Jackson decided to move the group to CBS Records without consulting Jermaine and he decided to stay with his father-in-law's company and become a solo artist. Ironically, the family reunited for the TV special celebrating Motown's 25th anniversary last year...leading, of course, to the "Victory" tour.

And, a few notes on The Jackson sisters: Watch for Janet on this season's episodes of "Fame," and, if details work out, for a leather clothing line designed by LaToya.

Parents need to allow teens make decisions

By ROBERTA ALEXANDER
King Features Syndicate

The generation gap just widened a bit at our house, ever since my daughter heard about the Prince concert. "Oh, my God, I'll die if I can't go," she said. "He's just so fine I can't hang."

My daughter is 15, an age when drooling over male flesh is as common as pimples. And popular music has long been full of "bad boys" whose music turns teen-agers on and parents off.

It is not simply that I find Prince's music unappealing. My daughter is entitled to her own tastes, and if I hope that she will outgrow some of her more execrable choices, I am in good company: I recall that my own parents had a few withering remarks to make about my own preference for rock and roll.

For the benefit of anyone not living with a teen-ager, Prince is a 24-year-old singer and composer who has already made more money than most of us will see in a lifetime.

His clothes are skin-tight, sexy, spangled, and his songs include "Do Me, Baby," "Controversy" and "Little Red Corvette." But he is more than another hot number, this year's fad.

Prince qualifies for a gold medal in the Offensiveness Olympics. Many of his most popular songs are considered sufficiently indecent to be denied radio play. We are not talking here about the use of an occasional four-letter word, but rather explicit descriptions of sexual acts, accompanied by music. "Head," "Sister," and "Private Joy" have become underground successes, sold on tapes and played on personal headphones by millions of horny kids.

The Prince concert raised a number of troubling issues for me as a parent. I've established certain ground rules about concerts: I won't permit my daughter to attend an event with general seating, because I think that crowds can turn into mobs. Furthermore, she must have the ticket money; I make no loans. And she must make suitable transportation arrangements.

Unfortunately, she had met these criteria almost as soon as the concert was announced. That left me to object on moral grounds, and wiser heads than mine have struggled to define obscenity.

In dealing with books and movies, the Supreme Court has considered whether a work has any redeeming social value. I am left with the uneasy conclusion that Prince is not dangerous, but merely offensive to adults.

As a once-rebellious teen-ager, I remember the pleasure of thumbing my nose at whatever was nice, conventional and acceptable to adults. And I have no objection to my daughter learning about oral sex, incest and masturbation. But Prince is hardly the teacher of choice. I do object to these very important subjects being trivialized and treated in a commercial and titillating fashion.

One of the little ironies here is that some of my daughter's friends, the ones whose parents are strict to the point of repressiveness, also adore Prince. These parents apparently believe that they can keep their daughters innocent by forbidding them to talk to boys on the telephone; those girls are listening in private to Prince tapes. When you clamp the lid on the pot too tightly, the steam may cause an explosion.

That's not my style. I always thought that ideas were less dangerous when they were discussed than when they were denied. And I think my daughter is a good kid: she's the one who decides that as long as she's going to vacuum the living room, she might as well pull the couch out from the wall, or who says, "You look tired, Mom. Do you want me to make you a cup of tea?" Redeeming qualities, certainly, even if she sometimes turns into Drooling Idol Worshipper.

It's just that things aren't as clear for me as they were when my children were 8 and 5.

They need to make more decisions for themselves. This isn't a process I could stop even if I wanted to; all that would happen if I tried is that they would make their choices in secret.

And so I told my daughter why I objected to Prince, and left her to make up her own mind. Perhaps we can minimize the anger of adolescence if there are times when we can agree to disagree. I had a lot of time to think about all this when I took her to buy her concert ticket.

MORGAN

"I was a thick, chubby, very little (she's only 5 feet, 4 inches now) girl with glasses; I'd been even chubbier. I'd started dieting at 10, but nobody noticed because they didn't notice me period. I used to wonder how those beautiful girls on screen got that way, how they put their makeup on, what their beauty secrets were, how did they learn to walk like that and talk like that, where did those beautiful voice tones come from?

"WELL, THIS IS something I learned. I took the pudge with glasses and an inferiority complex and turned her into a glamour girl in one year, between the ages of 14 and 15 — one of my major accomplishments in life.

"Suddenly in '64 I got a chance to be a finalist on Miss Teen-age Dallas and everyone in junior high wanted to be my friend. Over one weekend, my life changed. It was kind of silly. Like Hollywood. Maybe that's why I am not impressed with adulation now. I had that early experience, then when I tried to break into show business a few years later, I had so many doors slammed in my face. I didn't accept that verdict then just as I don't accept all the instant love showered on me now," she states.

"I studied pictures of old movie stars, how they held their shoulders and hands. I realized, studying their figures, they weren't perfect, but they made you feel they were. How did they do it? In that year when I was changing my teen-age image, teachers began following me around junior high to find out how I put my makeup on.

"That's the kind of book I wanted to write. I think a lot of women in today's world are defeatists. They look at a star and start rationalizing: 'Well, I could look like that too if I had 20 nose jobs and $300,000 a year to spend on clothes.' But I have a career. I have a husband. I have babies. I just don't have time.

"This is a pure copout. If anybody doesn't have time, that's me. Learn how to organize your time. Learn how to take bits and pieces of time for yourself from all other pressures. The phone. Believe me, no one could be more annoyed by a phone ringing non-stop. You have to find a little time and make it work for you.

"Makeup doesn't take two hours to apply. It takes learning a few tricks. I've written about voice, posture, body language, tricks I've never seen discussed in a book. I'm short, but I play some forceful women and you don't expect them to be small.

"I USE THE lines my mother taught me. 'When you walk into a room, throw your shoulders back and you will own that room. Walk straight with a smile on your face!' Thank God for my mother. It works when you go to the high-school prom. It works anywhere. You have to try and find your good points and use them.

"It was one hell of a job writing this book. I spent months with a ghost writer who didn't understand what I was talking about. I started rewriting by myself. Then someone stole the manuscript from my hotel room in Dallas. I had to start all over again."

Ms. Fairchild continues, "It's coming out now in October, and I think that's the way God meant it to be. Because of missing the deadline, it's a much better book than it started out to be.

"My mother sent me for drama lessons as a child because I was so shy. I couldn't make a book report in fifth grade. I'm still shy, but those Saturday drama lessons helped. Mother wasn't trying to get me into the theater; she was just trying to help me get more confidence in myself.

"My dad (an engineering executive) has taken a long time to get used to it because I come from a family of doctors and lawyers. When I was a youngster, I was certainly the one least likely to succeed there. But the fact is, I did. And I tell in this book all the things I would have loved to have known along the way."

A thrill for Ms. Fairchild was the reaction of her editor and that editor's assistant who were the two "makeovers" in the book. Both women came later to her and told her she had changed their lives. "That's what I hope will happen to those who read the book and try it. The object is to be the very best you can. Get a vision of what you want to be and go for it. In the old days, stars went to a makeup department and were created. Today you do it for yourself."

MS. FAIRCHILD IS A do-it-yourself lady. She's her own manager because "there's nobody I really would trust to do it." Denault, of course, but he has a profession of his own and she wouldn't want a husband-manager even were he available. "That is too close. Anytime you are in love and have a financial investment, it can get in the way of personal relationships.

"When you are a female actor, you know that your time in the sun is limited unless you're a Bette Davis. There aren't that many women's parts. Whole movies are made with no women in the cast. It gets discouraging.

"You are motivated because you know there are going to be times... transition periods...you don't know what's going to happen. It's nice to have money socked away. You have to have something socked away because in so many cases you mean nothing to the people who hire you. I have a business manager to keep me away from my money, but I handle my own decisions and make my own deals."

Obviously this is someone who has no illusions about the business and is delighted that she has fallen in love with a cameraman rather than an actor. "It's hard to explain to people who don't know many actors, but as a group, they're essentially narcissistic. It's easy to get swept up into that. Actors are just people.

"I've dated a lot of famous guys (beginning with Warren Beatty when she was 16 and still a schoolkid and was a standin for Faye Dunaway in "Bonnie and Clyde"), but men are men," she stated. "A lot of these guys are just as jerky as those you'd meet at a swimming pool or in a dentist's office. I don't mean to put actors down. Some of them are very nice; but it's a consuming business and people in it are likely to be consumed."

"I don't know that I'd like to be with another actor. I'm just ambitious, not competitive. I don't want to hurt other people for the sake of me. It's hard in this town even to find lady friends because you're conceived as competitive even though you're not. But it's wonderful to have a relationship with someone in the business who understands the hours and the pressures but is not in the same end of it.

"GREAT LOOKS ALONE do nothing for me; but I remember the first time I ever saw Craig. We had just started the second season on 'Flamingo Road.' I was unloading a wardrobe from my car and there was a group of like 20 guys standing on the soundstage. I remember this one face out of all those faces. My heart went zonk. It turned out that he was our camera operator for six weeks. After we 'wrapped' one night, he asked me if I'd like to go out for a drink."

She continues, "My impulse was to say no. He was so cute he couldn't possibly have a brain (which was unfair of me). Also, he looked to me to be about 24 years old. I was 31 at the time, and I wasn't about to go out with a kid. But what I also thought was, 'You want to go out and have a drink? Go out and have your Coca Cola with this great looking person without making it a federal case.' And, of course we ended up falling in love."

Denault might have looked 24, but he was 34, had been married, has two kids and has a great deal inside his handsome head. With one slight hiatus, they've been together for the three years since. "We did break up for a while last year when he was having some of the problems that are bound to come up when you're going out with a well-known actress. It's not easy for a man. It's hard for the male ego. I understand the problem.

'Chainsaw Massacre' rips into 10th year

By DAVID LEE FORREST

Forrest

"The Texas Chainsaw Massacre," originally released in 1974 and now rereleased to celebrate its tenth anniversary, is a hard film to properly define.

On one hand, it is a blatant exploitation film made by amateurs and shot as quickly as possible on a shoestring budget of $160,000.

On the other hand, "Massacre" is now considered a classic horror film and it has been estimated that between 1974 and 1976 alone it earned $20 million in the United States and another $4-$5 million abroad.

The "Texas" in the title is quite appropriate since, unlike so many films supposedly set in Texas but actually made on some backlot in California, "Massacre" was shot entirely on location near Round Rock, just north of Austin.

Don Graham's study of Texas cinema, "Cowboys and Cadillacs — How Hollywood Looks at Texas," has an appendix in which six film critics gave their choices for the ten best movies ever made in Texas. Four of the six critics included "Massacre" among the top ten.

The mythical Joe Bob Briggs (actually a pseudonym for Dallas Times-Herald film critic John Bloom), who is undoubtedly the foremost critic of drive-in movies in the state, has declared that "Massacre" is simply one of the best movies ever.

Director Tobe Hooper, a complete unknown when he made "Massacre," went on to huge commercial success when he directed "Poltergeist" for producer Steven Spielberg.

"Massacre's" plot is somewhat more offbeat than the average horror movie. A group of young people accidentally encounter a crazed family of backwoods cannibals in Central Texas. This grisly band of good ol' boys like to kill people with a sledgehammer, dismember their bodies with a chainsaw and then use the flesh to make barbecue.

To a certain extent, the plot seems to be capitalizing on the paranoia many urban young people in the late 1960s and early 1970s felt toward what often seemed to them to be a hostile, regressive rural populace.

It's impossible to deny that "Massacre" has intense suspense, but it is certainly possible to dislike the way this effect is achieved.

The film goes for sheer shock effect, which sets the audience on edge since it seems anything can happen. After Hooper opens "Massacre" with grotesque closeups of partially decomposed corpses, it's obvious he has nothing to lose by going all out on a grossness binge.

This is definitely a movie only for those with strong stomaches. Even by 1984 standards "Massacre" is painfully violent. One scene in particular, in which a girl is impaled alive on a meat hook, is so cruel that it's nothing short of vicious.

There are occasional flashes of humor in "Massacre," some obviously deliberate, others obviously unintended.

The now-famous scene in which a fat geek wearing an apron and toting a roaring chainsaw chases a girl through the woods now causes as much laughter as it did screams.

The production values are poor, the acting is worse and there is virtually no character development (most of them simply don't live long enough to be developed).

"The Texas Chainsaw Massacre" will send many chills shivering down the spine, but it will send even more waves of disgust swimming through the stomach.

Henry Thomas seems nice, normal

By WILLIAM ARNOLD
Hearst News Service

Henry Thomas, the star of "E.T.," "Misunderstood," and the current "Cloak and Dagger," is the first child actor since Tatum O'Neal with a personal following and a persona that can be used and developed in film after film.

As Allan Carr, producer of the star's latest film, has noted: "One looks for projects for him as you would look for Clint Eastwood, Robert Redford or Paul Newman — as a vehicle to showcase his star quality. He's that important and that special."

Young Thomas is so important and special that Universal Pictures decided to kick off his new movie with interviews that would allow the movie press to individually sit down with the child star of the '80s and see what a nice, normal, unaffected kid he is. While agents, publicists and a woman I took to be his mother hovered in the background, I spent an hour with the boy. Despite an understandable nervousness and a businesslike manner that seems kind of bizarre in a skinny 12-year-old, he seemed every bit as nice and normal as his agents and publicists told me he was.

As the boy tells the story, his career was very much his own doing. He decided to become an actor when he saw "Star Wars" at age 6. A few years later, he saw an advertisement for auditions in his hometown of San Antonio for "an 8-year-old with a Texas accent" for a part in a movie called "Raggedy Man," starring Sissy Spacek.

He got the part, and though the movie was not a success, he was so natural and appealing in it that the film's editor recommended him to Steven Spielberg for the star part in "E.T." He got that part, too, and the rest, as they say, is history. The film went on to become the biggest grossing film ever and Thomas' face became known to every kid in the civilized world.

Thomas then went on to another starring part in "Misunderstood," with Gene Hackman. It disappeared quickly, but the word was that Thomas was good in it, and it did not damage his rising star. Then came "Cloak and Dagger," a big-budget Universal remake of a 1949 movie called "The Window," which in every stage was conceived as a Henry Thomas movie.

I asked him what it was like to be a movie star. He surprised me by pondering the question a moment and then saying it was not exactly what you'd call normal.

Could he give me a for-instance?

"Well, one time I was in this movie theater, playing a video game with my friend. It was right after 'E.T.' came out. And all of a sudden, a couple of people recognized me. And they told other people who were lining up to see the movie that Elliott was inside. I thought I'd better leave, but the manager came up and asked me if I would sign some autographs for the people. And I looked and there were all of a sudden maybe 2,000 people there. And I ran — I ran all the way through Montgomery Wards just to get away."

Still, he says he doesn't really mind the people who want him to write his name on a piece of paper. He likes acting, knows he's good at it, feels pride in doing a good job. Besides, he doesn't really have any hobbies or interests, has no ambitions besides acting.

'Doonesbury' to return to comics pages

NEW YORK (AP) — How many teeth does Joanie Caucus' baby have? Will Uncle Duke avoid the slammer after dealing drugs to raise money for a documentary on auto tycoon John DeLorean? Do Western-style props still clutter a White House stage set?

These and other nagging questions will be answered for millions of readers who haven't had a "Doonesbury" fix in 20 months, when the celebrated comic strip returns Sept. 30.

But exactly what Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist Garry Trudeau will put in those first panels is a closely guarded secret at Universal Press Syndicate in Fairway, Kan.

But in an exclusive story for Life magazine's October issue, Trudeau lets readers in on what their favorite characters have been up to since graduation day.

Michael J. Doonesbury, the dithering major-domo of the Walden commune, joined a Manhattan ad agency and married Joan Caucus Jr. on the back porch at Walden.

Marvelous Mark Slackmeyer has his own radio show and has become something of an irritant at presidential news conferences. Quarterback B.D., who had been traded to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers for two draft picks and a bus, was lost to the Los Angeles Rams in a poker game and distinguished himself by making the worst fumble in Rams' history.

As for Zonker, he's still holed up after graduation, stepping out only to rent videocassettes.

"The writing will stay pretty similar," said editorial director Lee Salem. "He will weave the lives of his characters into political headlines. There will be the same characters and they'll be a little older.

"A lot of it is so much dependent on the news," Salem continued. "So he's waiting until the very last minute. Who could have predicted a woman as vice presidential candidate? She (Geraldine Ferraro) is certainly eligible for the strip."

In fact, just about all of the powers and pawns of the political world Trudeau skewered in the strip's first 12 years are candidates for his pen, ink and parody. But no matter, most politicos love it.

"Life without 'Doonesbury' has meant far more than life without a morning laugh," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. "His return makes our national sense of humor whole again."

Child star writes book about other child stars

NEW YORK (AP) — At age 6, he was a major movie star of the Depression, with a fan club, a hit record and a best-selling coloring book.

At 12, with 40 pictures behind him, he was a has-been. And, after a brief comeback to give Shirley Temple her first on-screen kiss at the age of 16, little Dickie Moore made a painful transition into adult anonymity.

Today, at 59, Dick — no longer "Dickie" — Moore can finally laugh at the pressure-cooker career that began when he made his screen debut at the age of 11 months, landed the lead in "Oliver Twist" when he was 6 and finished with walkons in his 20s. His last movie was "Member of the Wedding" in 1953.

In a happy ending worthy of Hollywood, he has rediscovered fame and true love by interviewing 30 other former child stars of the '30s and '40s and reconstructing the era of the big movie studios from a pint-sized point of view.

The result is "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star" (Harper & Row, $16.95), a collection of poignant, often harrowing recollections by some of the biggest child stars: Mickey Rooney, Shirley Temple, Margaret O'Brien, Donald O'Connor, Roddy McDowell, Jackie Coogan and Jane Withers. Moore also was one of the last people to interview the late Natalie Wood.

The book is dedicated to musical comedy star Jane Powell, Moore's current sweetheart. They met three years ago when he interviewed her for the book.

Revelations abound: Donald O'Connor flunked Universal studio dance lessons; Jane Withers hated Shirley Temple; and TV host Ed Sullivan became the foster father of Peggy Ann Garner, a victim of child abuse.

Jackie Coogan's mother, who referred to herself as "the goose that laid the golden egg," went through his entire $10 million fortune before he was old enough to claim it, the actor recalled in the book.

Moore said his parents built a big house with his childhood earnings, then demanded he pay them rent when he was left jobless as a teenager.

Moore said he was nervous about interviewing the queen of child stars who, as Shirley Temple Black, went on to become a U.S. diplomat.

"I was afraid she'd barely remember me," he said. "But when she opened the door, the first thing she did was point to her cheek and say, 'kiss me there, like last time.' Forty years melted away." Moore and Miss Temple had shared a chaste kiss in "Miss Annie Rooney."

With his huge brown eyes and gentle mouth, Moore still bears a strong resemblance to the towheaded tot seen in TV reruns of the "Our Gang" comedy series, also called "The Little Rascals."

"People don't want to see you as you are now, but as you were then, because that's what they remember, and enjoyed, and made money off of," said Moore. "So there's this enormous emotional and financial investment in keeping you the way you were. But you can't stay that way. And if you do, you end up on the funny farm."

When "Dickie" Moore couldn't make Hollywood accept him as "Dick," he joined the Army. He left two years later and became a correspondent for Stars and Stripes. He didn't want to go back to acting and eventually studied journalism at Los Angeles City College.

Today, he has a successful public relations career representing Actors Equity and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists and a happy personal life with Miss Powell here in New York.

Folk music ensemble opens concert season

Tickets have recently been mailed out as Midland Community Concerts Association is awaiting the season opener and first major attraction set for 8 p.m. Saturday.

Although Aman, the name of the first group to perform on the series, has an exotic sound, this group is actually an American folk music ensemble. For many years, Aman has performed annual concerts at the Los Angeles Music Center, on college campuses and in other theaters throughout California. This year, the group performed for the Olympics Arts Festival and was chosen to be one of the featured groups in the Opening Ceremonies of the 1984 Olympic Games.

Founded in Los Angeles in 1964 for the purpose of preserving and presenting America's multi-cultural heritage of folkloric music, song and dance, the company takes its name from the Biblical affirmative that Eastern Europeans and Middle Easterners pronounce "Aman," and Americans "Amen."

"The implications of this word are reflected in thhe abiding respect and affection for cultural values invested in the research, choreography, music and staging of Aman's international repertoire," says Heidi Goebel, a spokesperson for and member of MCC.

Celebrating its 20th season, the Aman Folk Ensemble made its first international tour in 1983-84 under the auspices of the United States Information Agency. The group traveled to seven countries in North Africa and the Middle East.

This season, audiences will be treated to a work that was especially created for the Olympics, the California Heritage Suite. the program will also include folk music and dance presentations from Eastern Europe, North Africa, India, the Orient, South America, the British Isles and North America.

MCC is an all volunteer association that conducts its membership drive in the spring. Those who joined MCC, but have not received their season membership tickets yet, need to call Helen Codington, 694-0176.

Barry Glass and Linda DeNike, dancers in Aman Folk Ensemble, soar in the Scottish "Chantreuse." Aman will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday at Midland High School for the first subscription concert in Midland Community Concerts new season.

Santa Fe artist will be teaching oil painting workshop in Seminole SEMINOLE — An oil painting workshop being taught by Paul Milosevich of Santa Fe, N.M., will be conducted Sept. 24-30 in Seminole.

Born in Trinidad, Colo., where he later studied with Western artist Arthur Roy Mitchell, Milosevich received his master of arts in paintings and drawing from California State University, Long Beach. He taught at the college level for 10 years, first at Odessa College, where he was chairman of the department, then at Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

Since 1975, he has pursued a full-time professional art career. His work is in museum collections in Colorade, New Mexico, Texas and Tennessee.

His commercial clients include RCA, MCA, Mercury Records and the Songwriters Hall of Fame, Nashville, Tenn. Portrait subjects include Johnny Cash, Linda Ronstadt, Kris Kristofferson, Dolly Parton, Tom T. Hall, Willie Nelson and Loretta Lynn.

Milosevich's work has been featured on the Today Show, NBC.

Several sections of classes are being offered. The day session begins at 9 a.m. The night session runs from 6 to 9 p.m. and the weekend session will be held Sept. 29 and 30.

The workshop covers portrait, landscape and still lifes. Examples of his work will be on display.

For more information call 1-758-2465 or write Workshop, 615 SW 7th St., Seminole, Texas 79360.

Symphony, chorale auditions slated

Auditions for the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale will be held Tuesday from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the symphony rehearsal hall at Terminal.

The 1984 season includes music ranging from spirituals to the classics of the repertoire. The chorale's first concert in November will include such works as Britten's "Rejoice the Lamb" and J.S. Bach's Motet II.

As a tribute to the tricentennial birthday of George Fredrick Handel, in December, the chorale, orchestra and guest soloists will perform one of the greatest choral works of all, "The Messiah."

Mendelssohn's "Elijah" will be presented in February as part of the Spring Choral Festival. In April, the chorale will be featured on the symphony's final subscription concert of the season in Carl Orff's masterpiece "Carmina Burana."

In May the symphony and chorale join forces to present a cabaret pops. The chorale will also perform with The Singers of New York City in a joint antiphonal concert.

No solos are required for the audition. Other audition times are available by appointment.

Bank art collection to be liquidated

A Liquidation Auction of the Corporate Art Collection of the First National Bank of Midland will be held at noon Oct. 6 and 1 p.m. Oct. 7 at Midland Center, 105 N. Main St.

The preview will be held Oct. 4 and 5 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Oct. 6 and 7 for the two hours prior to the sale. Over 650 lots will be sold.

The collection includes works by Thomas Moran, Fremont Ellis, Robert Wood, Harry Jackson, Tom Lovell, Eric Sloane, Alfred de Breanski Sr., Alfred de Breanski Jr., John James Audubon, Edmund John Neiman, A.D. Greer, Joe Beeler, Paul King, Edmund Henry Osthaus, William Dixon, E.M. "Buck" Schiwetz, Paul Salisbury, William Lester Stevens, Charles W. Knapp, Jamie Wyeth and others.

The auction will be conducted by Jerry Hart, president of Hart Galleries, Houston. The collection is being liquidated under the supervision of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Musical class registration continues

ODESSA — Registration continues through Monday for a class which features a trip to New York City plus tickets to two Broadway musicals. The new course, which is being offered at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, centers on the development of the modern-day Broadway musical.

The class carries two semester credit or may be taken under the encore option for no grade. It will be offered from 5:40 to 7 p.m. Mondays through Oct. 22.

Cost of the trip, which is planned for Oct. 25-28, is $599. The price includes roundtrip air fare from Midland; three nights' accommodations, double occupancy, at the Milford Plaza, in the heart of the theater district; and tickets to two Broadway shows of the student's choice (orchestra seats). Air fare is based on July prices and may change.

Fechin Exhibition to begin in Taos

TAOS — The fourth annual Fechin Exhibition will begin Saturday with a public reception from 2 to 6 p.m.

The show will consist of 30 drawings and paintings displayed in the Fechin House, Paseo del Pueblo Norte, Taos. The exhibition, which will continue through Oct. 10, is closed on Mondays.

For regular hours or more information call The Fechin Institute, 1-505-758-1710.

British comedian joins NBC series

NEW YORK (AP) — British comedian Pamela Stephenson has joined the cast of NBC-TV's "Saturday Night Live."

In making the announcement, executive producer Dick Ebersol called Miss Stephenson "one of the world's most talented and experienced female sketch comedians."

Miss Stephenson, who starred in the British TV series, "Not the Nine O'Clock News," said she's been a fan of the late night comedy show for a long time.

"The live element is very exciting," she said. "It's the only way to do television."

The Auckland, New Zealand native will make her debut on the Oct. 6 season premiere of "Saturday Night Live."

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARY

Science magazines can be interesting

By BARBARA TILLMAN

Science magazines can be a most interesting and informative source of knowledge. Some are very detailed and technical, but many are written from a layperson's point of view. Basically, these periodicals contain facts and data relating to the scientific community. The newest ideas and discoveries are eagerly awaited by those in the field as well as by the general public. The word "science" is, in itself, such a broad term that it encompasses many, many subjects. We are touched, in our daily lives, by a wide variety of sciences. And perhaps to understand them better, we will turn to some of the many periodicals devoted to the subject.

DISCOVER is a relatively new title, coming into existence in 1980. The format adopted by the publishers of this magazine offers a very readable way to explore a wide variety of illustrated articles. The fields covered range from energy, medicine, entomology and zoology, to computers. In every issue there is a section called the "Skeptical Eye," in which everything from flying saucers to instant cures is bandied about.

At the other end of the spectrum, both in age and technicality, is SCIENCE. Having been around since 1880, this publication is very sophisticated, but a must for every academic library. Features review the developments in all the sciences and the material is quite technical. Very distinguished specialists in their fields contribute to SCIENCE. There is always a section devoted to short reports of original research.

NATURAL HISTORY is also a publication which has proved itself by being around for many years. The photographs and popular writing style make this a very easy to read and understandable magazine. The material covered includes conservation, anthropology, geography, and astronomy. Virtually anything of interest to the nature lover can be found between its pages.

Another title recommended for libraries is SCIENCE DIGEST. Students, especially, find this magazine to be useful as it contains short news items and several feature articles. Many eminent scientists contribute their expertise, but the information is presented in such a way as to be very readable to the average person. Possibilities for the future are discussed and some older issues are re-examined, all of which helps to make this periodical very popular.

SCIENCE NEWS is a weekly publication, concentrating on short announcements and interpretations of scientific developments in the new that week. All fields of science are covered. The staff editors who write most of the articles make sure their facts are well documented. This periodical only consists of 10 or 12 pages, but the material is useful and informative to students and researchers alike.

Probably the most highly respected title in this field is SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN. Publication began in 1845 and for 125 years this magazine has been reporting on scientific and technological advances. One might find material directed toward his or her interests, ranging from research in prehistory to the latest developments in energy. Each issue contains a carefully balanced selection from the physical, life, and behavioral sciences. There is also a review section which briefly reports on research developments taken from the more specialized journals.

Group of five scales Mount Kilimanjaro

By ROSALIE ISOM
King Features Syndicate

The attempt was what you might call a physical feat with a cultural twist. We set out on New Year's Day — in the middle of southern equatorial summer. From the banana groves at the park entrance to the 19,340-foot summit, Mount Kilimanjaro had everything — and then some — to offer the curious climber.

Hut sleeping, glacial walls, a sleepy volcano, barefoot porters and encouraging guides, alpine flora, international troupes of fellow adventure seekers. Time to oneself, and unlimited space to fill the time.

• • •

Day One: Did you ever wonder if you could do it? Challenge yourself further than you had before? Wonder, then let the idea float to the back of your mind, until the opportunity one day presents itself. Suddenly you're in it. Surrounded by men doing the same thing for whatever reason.

You get caught up in the activity — the rituals of outfitting, pep talks and preparation. And when you look around, the other women are tending the children, settling down for a talk and relaxation at this lovely hotel with a glorious armchair view of Kilimanjaro's highest peak, Kibo, the elusive one.

You're handed a smooth walking stick, the importance of which you don't grasp until later. It holds you up when nothing else will in the limited oxygen.

Rented hiking boots, suede mittens with fur linings, borrowed sweaters, hats, more gloves, socks, orange Danish (not the pastry) rain gear that covers all of you, and then some. You can take all you want, a multiple wardrobe to be worn in layers. The porter will carry everything.

When the final protective garment is distributed, your mind is unable to shift ahead to the climb, but instead searches for the Swahili word for "thank you." You have no idea what's in store, but neither do the others.

The hotel bus transported our group to park headquarters, the entrance to 1,500-square-mile Kilimanjaro National Park, situated three degrees below the equator. The stalwart walked the two-mile distance.

We numbered five: Rob Bernardus, a Dutch physican; Ted Smith, a Canadian engineer; Peter Giese, a German physician; Steve Isom, my husband, an American planner; and me, the female enthusiast and former Vail, Colo., town clerk, Rosalie Isom.

Permits signed, final instructions given — it was time. So up we went — leaving the Chagga farms behind, picking our way through tangled rain forests.

We totaled 29 — our five, nine Norwegians, 14 porters and a guide, Simoni, whose understanding of the mountain was not to be taken lightly on this exhausting journey. It was he who later decided who could or could not continue. The Norwegians were to amuse us, then amaze us, as their athletic endeavor was accented by generous quantities of brandy.

The colubus monkeys chattered at our passing, Lianas, ferns and orchids decorated the path. It was damp and slippery and required careful steps, but we were exhilarated. We still had air to breathe!

After 11 miles of walking we were at Mandara Hut at 9,000 feet. The food was delicious and filling. Perhaps I enjoyed it more than the men because I hadn't been near the kitchen. Later, housed in a four-person bunk room, I was quick to discover that men take up more space than their bodies physically fill. Snores and coughs filled the room.

Day Two: Assembled early, climbers set out after brief photo sessons in the heady alpine air. Located on Kilimanjaro's southern slopes, the town of Moshi at 2,900 feet was visible below us. Ahead, our goal was out of sight above the trees. Porters bearing knapsacks, cases of beer and other staples left us behind. Tea and orange slices comprised our snacks at rest stops.

A team of well-equipped Japanese passed us by quickly only to be overcome later — sketching, photographing, resting in the grasses alongside the path. Coming into the open, Mawenzi shot up on the horizon. A lower, but more rugged peak, we would have to cross its southern slopes to advance toward our destination, Kibo. Snowcapped, Kibo was magnificent.

In the afternoon, clouds descended like a curtain. We walked in fog. No looming peaks to aim for, but the spirit of the mountain and its presence remained unquestioned.

The doctor was called in to Horombi Hut at 12,000 feet to tend to someone who felt ill. Diagnosis: altitude sickness — he must go down. Complaints of headaches. My own smugness knowing that at home on top of the Rockies I could ski at this altitude. Feeling no pain or exertion, my confidence held. Reaching 12,000 feet had not been a concern. But what would tomorrow bring when we attempted 15,000 feet?

• • •

Day Three: There was a difference now. It wasn't long before I noticed it. Tiring easily, I began to feel faint until Steve pointed out that I was regulating my breathing. "You need all the air you can get," he offered. Afterwards, I could laugh realizing I'd been working against my body in an effort to conserve that precious oxygen.

There were more silent periods, each climber turning inward to concentrate his strength. It was growing colder. Approaching the saddle, I felt like an astronaut on a barren orb. Heavily clothed, the wind still pushed at us and tired us further.

This had become a test of endurance. Focusing on that final hut at the base of Kibo, I didn't feel I could reach it. Then our guide, Simoni, began to tell us over and over — "pole pole" (go slowly) in a sing-song voice, a chant that soothed and kept us moving like zombies across the desolate tundra.

On reaching Kibo Hut at 15,420 feet, I could manage nothing more than crawling onto my bunk and sipping the tea I was offered. At this oppressive altitude, we'd heard of others who had wandered off totally disoriented; the possibility of nausea, headache and vomiting loomed.

This was a climb where the best-tuned athlete's body might malfunction and an out-of-shape chain smoker could make it to the top. The mountain held all the surprises. All one had to do was play to it. Finally, bedtime at 5 p.m. after a thin soup and more tea.

• • •

Day Four at 1 a.m.: "Wake up!" People were stirring around me. Complaints of headaches, insomnia and the feeling of suffocation. Finally warm and secure, I had a secret to tell. Waiting for Simoni to come in again, I called him to my bed. "Simoni, I'm not going. This has been a wonderful experience. I'll wait here."

With 15,000 feet under my belt I was quite proud of myself. No pressing desire to reach the summit consumed me. Simoni looked at me hard. He touched my face and neck and made his diagnosis: "You can do it." With that pronouncement, he left the room. There was nothing to do but get dressed. He told me to go. So I went. (One can be easily led when the air is thin.)

Final Ascent: Stomachs warmed by thin cream of wheat and tea, we set out. Lantern light and moonlight were our accomplices. No more than a 4,000-foot endurance test.

They said there were two reasons for climbing Kibo Peak in the dark: 1) to be on top (and barely breathing) by sunrise, and 2) because you wouldn't do it if you could see where you were going. "Zig-zag across the slope," were our directions. "Try to reach the end of the zig-zag and then rest," was the advice. Soon it was down to a rest every 10 steps.

As the sky colored itself orange preparing for a new day, I was taking two steps and then draping my body over the trusty walking stick, my lifelong friend.

The sunrise sneaked past us to light the entire sky. After 6½ hours there were no more steps to take. The beauty of the place overcame us in our weariness. No longer divided into male or female categories, we had not been judged by man, but measured by the mountain.

What the Masai people call "Ngaje Ngai" (the House of God) was ours for a little while. The satisfaction of being there was for us alone to enjoy.

We drank the brandy in toasts to each other and to Kibo. We signed our names in the book kept under a rock for the successful. We cheered for each other and ourselves. A brief time on top, but long enough to know that it was true: "You can do it."

Musical competing with itself

The combined grosses for the New York and San Francisco companies of the saucy musical set in a French nightclub, reached $1.019 million for the week ending Sept. 7. The previous record of the show's grosses was $1.012.

The San Franciso company alone set a new local record in its final week, according to publicist Shirley Herz, taking in $530,000.

THE TALE OF THE ACE OF DIAMONDS

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

He looked like any other Ace of Diamonds, except for one slight oddity — a small black skullcap was perched atop his head. "I am an Orthodox Jew," he explained.

"Bridge is really a simple game," he pontificated. "It's the players who make it complicated. All these weird conventions and strange plays. Why, if they'd simply learn to take their tricks, they would be far better off.

"Only the other day I played in a six diamond contract on this hand. It was in a rubber bridge game. All my winnings go to a very poor family of which I happen to be the head!

"Now you must agree that six diamonds is an excellent contract. If I were addicted to finesses, I would have been defeated. I would have won the opening lead, crossed to dummy and taken the trump finesse. As the cards lie, that would have meant the loss of a second trump trick for down one.

"However, it is against my religion to go down in makable contracts. Besides, my Rabbi has a rule: 'When the king is singleton, play the ace!' If ever there was a time to apply the rule, this was it.

"I won the opening lead in hand and immediately launched myself into the fray. When the king dropped, it was a simple matter to draw two more rounds of trump and then ruff my heart loser on the board.

"My denigrators accuse me of being lucky; some were impertinent enough to suggest I must have peeked, but that's not really fair. If trumps were 3-2, my line of play would always succeed. Because of the missing trump spots, if trumps were 4-1, all lines were due to fail except in the event that his majesty the king was unprotected. I was simply playing the odds!"

Send any questions for this column to Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Complete Bridge," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged to be the best received.

Insects may be part of future diet

By CHARLES MALLORY
King Features Syndicate

It is the year 2000, and you're sitting down to dinner after a hard day's work. It's not an unusual dinner. You're having duckweed salad, a numete artificial steak, steamed winged beans, french-fried grasshoppers, amaranth bread and soyamiel milk.

Some nutritionists debate this scenario. We're doing fine with the vegetables we have, they scoff. There's no real shortage of meat, they say.

But consider the facts:

— Exporting policies, as well as political problems, are causing an unbearable increase in some food prices.

It seems a bit farfetched to think that in less than 20 years we could be chomping strange vegetables or stuffing cooked insects into our mouths.

However, three professors at the University of Missouri-Columbia — David Baxter Dunn, a botanist; Mahlon L. Fairchild, an entomologist; and Treva Kintner, a food sciences teacher — were willing to discuss the possibilities.

Dunn is skeptical about having different diets in the near future. "The garden plants that we have are very effective," he says. But he adds, "I think it is fallacious for man to think he has an unlimited food supply."

Dunn described various plants that could be used as vegetables in the future:

Lupine seed is a beige seed, about the size of corn. It can be eaten like peanuts, but when soaked in salt water, it expands to about the size of a thumbnail. It has 50 percent protein and 15 percent fat.

Peru harvests a commercial crop of lupine that has blue and white flowers. It is gathered in gunnysacks, weighted and soaked to remove toxic alkaline properties.

The food has been getting so much exposure that an International Lupine Conference was held last year in Spain to discuss the possibilities of this legume.

Winged bean is a vegetable that some experts say people should eat now. The pods, beans, roots, leaves and flowers not only are edible, but tasty.

The beans are 37 percent protein, which makes them a possible competitor for soybeans. The difference is that the winged bean can be grown only in the tropics. The winged bean now is eaten in Burma and New Guinea.

Duckweed can multiply at a fantastic rate and is high in protein (about 30 percent). It has an inoffensive, almost bland, taste and it's eaten in such places as Burma, Laos and Thailand.

Cottonseed can be ground to make a flour that is about 70 percent protein. However, it has no gluten, so baked goods made with this flour tend to be flat. In the United States, cottonseed cake is fed to cattle as a fattener.

Amaranth has two types, grain and leafy.

Grain amaranth, which originated in India, grows as high as 10 feet, but the seed is smaller than a pinhead. When ground, it makes a nutty-flavored flour. Because it has a coarse seed coat, it is a high-fibrous grain. The biggest problem with grain amaranth is that it is laborious to harvest.

Leafy amaranth, which is much like spinach, is probably rich in protein. Scientists are conducting research to determine whether it is healthful to eat.

Dunn believes that grains such as corn, wheat, rice, barley and rye will be the mainstay of diets in every country.

Much goes into the domestication of a plant, and a continual battle is waged to protect plants from insects, Dunn says. As soon as a new compound is developed to protect a plant, an insect creates an enzyme to counteract it.

Fairchild is not certain that people in highly civilized countries will wish to eat bugs.

"We're squeamish about insects," he says. "We think they relate only to filth."

Although such foods as chocolate-covered ants and candied grasshoppers are considered delicacies, Fairchild says it is difficult to believe that Americans will rely on insects as a main source of protein. He notes that insects may not be a good food source because they, too, have to be fed so they can grow. The grains that would be used to feed insects might be put to better use as grain food for humans.

"A grasshopper eats many, many times its body weight," Fairchild says. "We would be competing with them for food."

Grasshoppers may be a horrible-sounding main course, but they are 60 percent protein, which is higher than dried beef.

Whether or not man is nourished by eating insects, the bugs have an important place in the food cycle. Insects pollinate fruit plants and aquatic insects feed fish, which in turn feed man.

In many primitive countries, insects are eaten routinely. However, scientists in the United States have done virtually no research on the use of insects as food. It is known that many are edible, including grasshoppers, ants, butterflies, moths and termites.

To gain enough food from insects, ways would have to be found to farm them. However, their phenomenal reproduction rate might be an advantage.

Ms. Kintner, a food sciences teacher, points out that several foods of the future already are being used. The most widely known probably is soyamel, a milk substitute developed from soybeans for use by babies who cannot tolerate milk. Ms. Kintner doesn't think the soyamel will ever replace cow's milk, because cattle are efficient milk producers and because the taste of the soyamel leaves much to be desired.

"It has a funny aroma and doesn't taste like milk," she says.

However, Americans have embraced many artificial products. Artificial eggs are produced by using egg whites and colored oil. Soybeans are added to bacon to reduce the fat content from 65 percent to 10 percent. Tofu, a soybean staple for centuries in the Oriental kitchen, is finding its way into the American home.

Scientists are working to develop a peanut protein, much like soybeans, called numete, a protein-packed meat substitute.

Asked about people switching to new vegetables, Ms. Kintner says: "I doubt that will happen. Americans like potatoes and green beans too much."

There are many possible places to grow vegetables if a lack of farmland becomes a problem.

"Lagoons have essential amino acids," she says. "They would be good places to grow alfalfa and soybeans."

Sophisticated automated fruit and vegetable pickers are an up-and-coming idea, she said. These machines, already used in California, could lower the prices that consumers pay for produce. Mechanical pickers already harvest cherries, cucumbers and tomatoes.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

Monday, September 17, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actress Anne Bancroft, TV favorite John Ritter, Roddy McDowall, Congresswoman Marjorie Holt (R-Md.), Chief Justice Warren Burger, football great George Blanda, author Ken Kesey and auto racing's Stirling Moss share your birthday. Romance is more rewarding than ever, affecting your career in a positive way. Good things begin to happen in finance, education and the arts. Old business friends come to the rescue when you need help most. You recover funds or objects you thought lost forever. A new interest in politics or music opens previously closed doors. Community work will be richly rewarded. Balance your many intellectual pursuits with physical activities.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Original ideas are well worth exploring. An influential friend provides much-needed expertise. Persistence helps you beat out the competition. Say "yes" to someone who asks direct questions!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Ask higher-ups for favors in the early morning. An unexpected encounter puts you in touch with someone from your past. An enthusiastic, positive attitude helps you correct a bad habit.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone gives you a gentle nudge when you need it most. Resist the temptation to speak your mind; being too critical could have unfortunate repercussions. A promotion comes as a wonderful surprise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Longer hours and greater effort are the key to success. A newcomer makes a powerful impression on you, arousing thoughts of a quick romance. First, get to know this person better.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Working from a background position gives you new insights regarding old problems. Keep your professional and personal affairs strictly separate. Cooperative efforts are favored. Romance looks terrific!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A new student meets a dazzling member of the opposite sex. Put any extra time and energy into a research project. Long-term contracts are favored. Build savings by making regular deposits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Show real sympathy to someone who is despondent. Too much haste and too little thought could get you into a bind. Let sleeping dogs lie. Romance picks up when you take the initiative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Strength and initiative are your keys to success. Some good fortune comes your way. Build on it! Romance takes off in a new direction. You find a solution to an old problem.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Mate or partner lets you know that it is time for a change. Do not say "yes" if you think your answer will be "no" later on. Romance deserves a second chance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A younger person plays a major role in your success and happiness. An important management position opens up; you are next in line! Put your best foot forward at interviews.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A good day to sign contracts and agreements. Legal matters require careful handiing. Member of opposite sex tries to distract you. Refrain from angry outbursts lest you make new enemies.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A friendly attitude wins you new allies and helps you influence others. Real estate transactions prove highly profitable. Turn down an offer that has too many strings attached.

Freshly baked bread, fresh fish go well together

By SANDRA SCOTT KLINK
King Features Syndicate

If ever there were two perfect companions, they would be freshly baked bread and freshly caught fish. And freshness is a must for both. Time is merciless to either one.

Given a day's catch (or, for most of us, an excellent fish market) and some basic ingredients, along with a bit of spare time, anyone can prepare a tempting offering. And two recently published cookbooks can be your guide.

Perhaps the most thorough fish cookbook available today is "The Complete Book of American Fish and Shellfish Cookery" by Elizabeth Bjornskov (Knopf, $18.95). The author has lived and fished all over the world and speaks with true authority about virtually every type of fish that can be caught in North America.

What you'll find here is far more than a cookbook. Ms. Bjornskov, aside from including over 600 imaginative and extremely workable recipes, relates information about all of these North American fish. Familiar varieties like tuna and striped bass are there, as are some more esoteric ones like sculpins, red drum and sauger.

The organization makes wonderful sense. She begins with basics of choosing, cleaning, filleting and freezing, then moves on to basic cooking methods — both sections thorough, intelligently written and clear.

Next, she works her way up the Pacific coast from border to border, then down the Atlantic coast. That done, she moves on to freshwater fish and shellfish, adds sauces and marinades and ends with a chart that classifies the various kinds of fish by their characteristics (lean, oily etc.) She even includes information on how to catch them.

Next, the bread. Mel London's "Bread Winners Too: The Second Rising" (Rodale, $14.95) takes a very different approach. It is not intended to be comprehensive, and it isn't. It is a book that came about as the result of the author's first book, "Bread Winners." People wrote in asking questions, giving suggestions, contributing recipes and this tome just sort of evolved. It's like someone's personal album — full of chatty, folksy information, anecdotes, photos and little bios of the contributors.

Not all of these recipes will appeal to all cooks. Some of them I found singularly unappealing, but, to compensate, others I couldn't wait to try.

London's enthusiasm is catching. This man loves to bake bread and knows his craft. As you read, you definitely feel that he's trying to tell his readers all about everything he has learned, perhaps along with a few too many hows and whys and whens. But he's a friendly sort and his book is a friendly book full of 50 bakers' favorite breads.

Some breads to bake:

CRUSTY BUTTER-HERB BREAD
2 tablespoons dry yeast
2 cups warm water
2 teaspoons honey
¼ cup vegetable oil
2 teaspoons salt (optional)
6 cups whole wheat flour
Honey Butter Filling:
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tablespoon grated onions
½ cup butter
½ teaspoon dried basil
½ teaspoon caraway seeds
¼ teaspoon dried oregano
⅛ teaspoon cayenne pepper
Cornmeal for dusting pans
1 egg, beaten, for brushing

In a large bowl, dissolve yeast in warm water. Stir in honey and then add the oil, salt and 2 cups of the flour. Beat until smooth, about 3 minutes. Add enough remaining flour to form a soft dough.

Turn out onto a floured surface and knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. If dough is too sticky, add more flour. Place into an oiled bowl, turn to coat, cover and let rise in a warm spot until doubled in bulk, 1 to 1½ hours.

While dough is rising, make the Herb-Butter Filling by combining all ingredients in a small bowl and mixing until well blended. Set aside.

Punch dough down, turn out onto a floured surface, and divide into 2 portions. Roll each portion into a 10 by 16-inch rectangle. Spread half of the Herb-Butter Filling on each rectangle, allowing a ½-inch margin on all sides.

Divide each portion in half to form 4 10 x 8-inch rectangles. Roll up each rectangle, beginning with the newly cut edge. Pinch and seal ends and seams. Place seam-side down in French bread pans which have been buttered and then sprinkled with cornmeal. Slash tops and let rise, loosely covered in a warm spot, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Brush tops of loaves with beaten egg. Bake in a preheated 425F oven for 25 minutes. Remove from pans, turn loaves over, and return to oven (upside down in pans) for 5 minutes more.

Remove and cool on wire racks. Serve warm.

RUSSIAN-STYLE BLACK BREAD
2 tablespoons dry yeast
2½ cups warm water
1 teaspoon honey
3 cups dark rye flour
4 to 5 cups whole wheat flour
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups bran
2 tablespoons caraway seeds
½ teaspoon fennel seeds, crushed
1½ tablespoons carob powder
2 tablespoons minced onions
¼ cup vinegar
¼ cup dark molasses
¼ cup butter, melted
1 teaspoon cornstarch
¼ cup cold water

In a small bowl or measuring cup, combine the yeast, ½ cup warm water and honey. Stir and set aside to proof.

In a small bowl, mix rye flour with 3 cups whole wheat flour, reserving the balance of the whole wheat flour for use as needed to bring dough to the correct texture. Add the salt, bran, caraway seeds, fennel seeds and carob powder and mix well with a wooden spoon.

In a small saucepan, combine the remaining warm water, onions, vinegar, molasses and melted butter, and blend over low heat until all ingredients are well mixed. Do not boil, but heat to just about the temperature that you would use when mixing with yeast for proofing.

Pour proofed yeast mixture into dry ingredients, and then gradually add warm mixture from the saucepan, mixing with a wooden spoon as you do so. Add more whole wheat flour and stir until dough pulls away from the bowl and can be kneaded by hand.

Turn dough out onto a lightly floured surface, and knead for about 10 minutes, adding more whole wheat flour if it seems too sticky. (Note that all breads that use a large amount of rye flour will have a sticky texture.) Place dough into a well-oiled bowl, turn to coat, cover and let rise in a warm spot until doubled in bulk, 1½ to 2 hours.

Punch dough down, turn out onto a floured surface and divide in half. Shape into 2 free-form loaves and place on buttered baking sheets; or, to keep them from spreading, place them into 2 well-buttered 8- or 9-inch round cake pans. Cover and let rise in a warm spot until almost doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Bake in a preheated 350F oven for 50 to 60 minutes.

In a saucepan, combine cornstarch and cold water, bring to a boil over medium heat, and cook for 1 to 2 minutes, stirring constantly. The mixture will turn clear. Brush cornstarch glaze over the tops of the baked loaves, return to the oven and bake another 2 to 3 minutes.

Makes 2 loaves.

Now for the fish:

GRAVLAX SALMON
2 to 2½-pound center cut salmon fillet (skin on)
2 teaspoons dill weed, or 1 tablespoon minced fresh dill
3 tablespoons salt
4 teaspoons brown sugar
¼ teaspoon ground pepper
¼ teaspoon ground allspice
4 tablespoons white wine vinegar
1 clove garlic, sliced thin

Use very fresh salmon only. Sprinkle the bottom of a shallow glass baking dish with half of the dill and lay salmon in the dish, skin side down. Combine salt, sugar, pepper and allspice and gently rub everywhere onto both sides.

Pour vinegar on the fillets, place garlic slivers evenly on the fish, and scatter on the remaining dill. Cover the dish with a piece of plastic. Wrap a brick or two in plastic bags and lay them on top to weigh down the salmon. Refrigerate, bricks and all, for about 16-24 hours. Remove bricks occasionally and spoon juices over salmon.

The next day, remove weights and discard garlic — the salmon is ready to eat. Slice it thin, diagonally, across the grain. Serve on pumpernickel bread, accompanied with hard-boiled eggs, caviar and sliced tomatoes.

SHARK OR SWORDFISH
2 pounds shark or swordfish
½ cup oil
⅓ cup lemon juice
1 medium onion, chopped
1 cup chopped cilantro
6 cloves garlic, pressed
1-inch piece of ginger, sliced
½ to 1 small green chile, seeded and chopped, or dash of cayenne pepper
1 teaspoon salt
Lemon wedges

Combine all ingredients except fish and lemon wedges in a blender and puree to a smooth paste. Cut fish into 2-inch chunks and marinate them in the puree for 1 hour or more, turning occasionally to coat them evenly.

Broil marinated fish chunks either in the oven or over medium-hot coals and brush with marinade while broiling. Serve fish chunks with lemon wedges and rice.
