Gunshot fatal to Winters resident

Ralph Hightower, 67, of Winters was found dead of an apparent single gunshot wound on Monday, March 8. The shooting, which preliminary studies show to be accidental, occurred on the Tad Richards ranch approximately seven miles northeast of Bronte in Coke County.

According to Coke County Sheriff Marshall Millican,

Hightower had apparently attempted to transfer several firearms from one vehicle to another when one of the guns discharged. No foul play is suspected in this incident, according to Millican.

Coke County Justice of the Peace Judge Gary Shaffer ordered that the body be sent to San Antonio for an autopsy.

Council discusses 911 issue—again

The Winters City Council met in regular session on March 8, 1993.

There was again a great deal of discussion concerning the 9-1-1 dispatching agreement with Ballinger. City Manager Aref Hassan gave the Council an update on correspondence between his office and that of Judy Miller, City Administrator of Ballinger.

Per the Council's instruction, Hassan had asked for a written agreement from the City of Ballinger. The agreement should itemize all the terms and conditions of the dispatching service approved by the Ballinger City Council.

Mr. Hassan had requested the agreement be sent for the Winters City Council's consideration at their March 8 meeting. Ms. Miller informed Mr. Hassan that the Ballinger City Attorney was out of town and could not review the agreement but would get to it as soon as possible.

Fire Chief Johnny Merrill, speaking for himself and the VFD, voiced a preference to keep the fire department dispatching separate from 9-1-1 to avoid possible communication problems. Mayor Sandy Griffin suggested that a meeting be arranged with Ballinger's Chief of Police and Fire Chief. The Council authorized City Manager Hassan to arrange such a meeting.

In other business, WTU manager Gary Moore presented a proposal to the Council on the cost of flood lighting around the Community Center. Under the terms of Mr. Moore's proposal, two 1000 watt lights and two 400 watt lights would be installed around the Center, at an additional cost of $37.40 per month. A motion was made and approved to accept WTU's proposal.

There was a short discussion about the City's American Disabilities Act requirements. This item was tabled until more information could be obtained.

Two zoning ordinances were considered for amendment, one of which was tabled. The other, concerning existing fences, trees or other possible obstructions was revised to allow for governing of public open space easements.

Administrator Hassan asked the Council for a ruling about his living in or out of the City Limits of Winters and was told he should live within the Winters City limits in order to comply with city ordinances.

Mayor Griffin related to the Council a request by Eva Reyna that a citizens poll be taken regarding the Council's ruling that alcohol could not be used in the Community Center. The Council agreed that the results of the recent liquor election showed the majority opinion of the citizens of Winters concerning the matter.

A motion was made and passed that Marlene Wood be appointed as election judge and Ellen Meyer as alternate judge. Also, Mrs. Wood was authorized to appoint two election clerks, one of which is to be bilingual in English and Spanish.

Grass fires burn over 300 acres Local firefighters assist in battle

Dry grass, warm weather and bad luck all contributed to two large grass fires which burned several hundred acres in southern Taylor County last Sunday afternoon.

Members of the Winters Volunteer fire department responded to a call for assistance from the Tuscola VFD. The Winters team was joined by firefighters from Ecca, Lawn and Buffalo Gap in battling a fire near Tuscola which burned about 200 acres.

Officials believe the fire was started when a spark jumped from a welding rig being used to build a pipe fence adjacent to a pasture of dry grass igniting the field.

As firefighters worked on the Tuscola blaze, a call was received reporting a grass fire south of Lawn. That fire, which started from a trash fire that got out of control, burned about 150 acres before Lawn and Winters firefighters brought it under control.

Winters fire chief Johnny Merrill urges anyone attempting a control burn to use extreme caution. "Proper burning technique is of utmost importance," says Merrill. "Remember to always start your fire on the down wind side and burn upward, against the wind, which allows a much slower, safer burn."

"Folks need to really be careful, particularly around all these dry CRP fields," Merrill adds. "A 3-foot high CRP pasture will burn with 30-foot flames."

Anyone planning a control burn is asked to please notify the Winters City Hall at 754-4424 prior to burning. A false alarm is quite costly, both in equipment use and manpower.

OIL BUSINESS . . .

By Reg Boles ©1993

Very often, in this column and in other publications, the term "enhanced recovery" is mentioned. The term encompasses a wide array of techniques and procedures to coax more oil and gas out of the ground.

The very meaning of the word "enhanced" would imply that it would involve any procedure that would utilize any assistance other than natural to produce petroleum. Although this would be a literal translation of enhanced recovery, its more typical industry reference is to the so-called third-tier techniques.

Third-tier techniques (or tertiary for the latin-literate) include recovery mechanisms that are more exotic than the more common water and gas injection projects that dot west Texas. You see, there are three levels of recovery commonly referred to in the oil business.

There is PRIMARY recovery, SECONDARY recovery, and TERTIARY (or enhanced) recovery.

Primary recovery is that which involves no assistance from mankind to produce petroleum. Such mechanisms are often referred to in text books as solution-gas drive, water drive, gravity drainage, etc.

Secondary recovery involves the first step in the human assistance to naturally occurring energy in the struggle to extract as much oil and gas as possible. I don't mean pumping units and such, those are LIFT methods. I refer to reservoir techniques—those that involve the technology that is applied in the reservoir.

Techniques like waterflooding and gas injection are the most common types of secondary recovery.

There is no strict dividing line between secondary recovery and tertiary recovery, but techniques that might follow secondary recovery methods are typically referred to as tertiary recovery because they might be the third type of recovery mechanism that a reservoir might undergo. That is, they would come after waterflooding and gas injection.

Enhanced recovery techniques could be steam injection, in situ combustion, chemical processes, and miscible displacement processes.

Steam injection is pretty self-explanatory. It involves injecting hot water or steam into reservoirs to help thick oil move faster to the producing wells. The oil contacted might otherwise stay in the reservoir if the steam didn't have a chance to heat the oil to a more fluid consistency. This process works best where the gravity of oil is low (that means it is thick and slow moving), like in California.

In situ combustion is a very high-powered term that means creating a small fire or explosion in the reservoir to heat-up and generally push along some stubborn oil that refuses to move out of the reservoir. It is usually accomplished by injecting some distillates that will ignite in the reservoir and cause all sorts of havoc in the reservoir. This havoc, hopefully, will increase recovery out of the reservoir.

Chemical processes is a very broad term that could include polymer injection, surfactant (soap or "surface acting agent") injection, or caustic injection. Polymers are injected for the purposes of causing water to become thicker, thus pushing more oil out of a reservoir without causing too much water production in the process. Surfactants actually try to wash oil out of a reservoir by causing it to release from rocks much like soap tries to take dirt from behind your ears. Caustic injection is the process by which very acidic or alkaline substances are injected with the hope that they will scour the reservoir much like Var-Sol cleans oily tools.

Miscible displacement processes involve injecting substances that will actually mix with the petroleum in the reservoir and change its composition enough to push it out of the reservoir to the producing wells. Carbon-dioxide and nitrogen injection are typical injected miscible substances.

The problem with all of these processes is that they are very expensive. The tertiary recovery field is a risky place to be, because the return has to be big to justify the cost. Unfortunately, product prices at their current levels are not high enough to encourage many applications of these more exotic techniques.

What we have discussed here today is a very cursory review of the major enhanced recovery techniques that are used today. Enhanced recovery is a subject of much research and study to help make it more economical and applicable within the oil and gas price scenarios experienced today. The incentive is there, it is just that the risk and return have a distance to go before these techniques become more successful and useful.

Poe's Corner

by Charlsie Poe

Life of Rowena Lodge Threatened

"If property taxes are raised in Runnels County as proposed, it will mean the closing of the Sons of Hermann Lodge No. 216 in Rowena," Emmalene Watson related to me on the telephone.

"We have always been a non-profit organization and for 83 years the center of community life including rallies and family picnics. Without a steady income, it is hard to pay the taxes and it will be impossible if they are increased," she says.

Members worked to erect the building and they secured a Texas State Historical Marker in 1971. The marker located at the entrance to the ODS Hall reads:

SONS OF HERMANN
LODGE NO. 216, organized in 1904 as Rowena chapter of the Sons of Hermann, worldwide benevolent fraternal organization.

The organization is named for German national hero and tribal leader Hermann the Defender (18 B.C. - 19 A.D.), who helped break Roman power east of the Rhine River in 9 A.D.

First officers of the Rowena Lodge were Michelus Feist, President; Julius I. Henkhaus, Vice-President, Walter Schumann, Secretary; Ignatz Olsak, Treasurer. There were ten charter members.

The order maintains a youth camp and home for the aged, for members, at Comfort, Texas.

Watson is secretary of the Lodge and from her records we read:

"Hermann was loyal to his duties, faithful to his friends and an inspiration to others to render service to their fellow man. Members of the order should follow his example and be ever ready to render service to our country, our state and assistance to a member and his or her family."

The youth camp carries on activities of an educational nature and wholesome entertainment is provided for the benefit and pleasure of junior members.

Members who qualify may go to the home for the aged and spend the rest of their days under pleasant conditions.

State historical commissions are under the direction of the Governor and each county is headed by its county judge.

It is the aim of this commission to make every effort to save our history.

HENDRICK MEDICAL CENTER

Preventing 12,000 needless deaths

More than 12,000 women in the U.S. will die from breast cancer this year when they could have been saved through early detection by a mammogram and appropriate treatment, according to B.J. Hendrix, RRT, assistant technical director of radiology at Hendrick Medical Center.

In fact, Hendrix says, treatment of breast cancer in its early stages is 90 percent effective because the mammogram can pick up a malignant tumor the size of a cluster of pin dots. That same tumor possibly wouldn't be discovered by the woman or her doctor for another two years, when the tumor has grown to the size of a marble and treatment is much less effective.

Since early diagnosis and treatment are so effective, it would seem reasonable to assume women are convinced of the importance of mammograms and get them religiously. The number of women taking advantage of this important medical test is increasing, but one recent American Cancer Society survey showed less than half of women 40 and over were getting mammograms.

The reasons some women avoid mammograms range from fear of the pain and discomfort involved to concern over radiation exposure.

The radiation emitted by a mammogram has been reduced to such low levels that it is now negligible. The mammogram is a "low-dose" x-ray and the radiation exposure involved is no greater than that of a cross-country trip by airplane.

There is slight discomfort involvement because a good image requires compression of the breast, but the technologists at Hendrick make the procedure as easy and painless as possible.

Another concern has been faulty mammograms performed by inferior facilities publicized on television. Such facilities can be avoided by using only those accredited by the American College of Radiology, such as Hendrick Medical Center.

Hendrix recommends that women follow the guidelines set forth by health organizations such as the American Cancer Society and National Cancer Institute. They recommend a woman have her first mammogram at age 40. Between 40 and 49, a woman should have a mammogram every one to two years along with physical breast examination by a physician. After 50, a woman should have a mammogram and physical breast examination every year.

Some women, however, have a greater risk of breast cancer and should consult with her doctor in obtaining a mammogram before age 40. This group of women at greater risk includes those who gave birth for the first time after age 30; who are childless or who began menstruation early; and who have a mother, sister or daughter with breast cancer.

Following these guidelines can reduce the death rate among the 180,000 women who will be diagnosed with breast cancer this year. And of the more than 40,000 women who will die this year from the disease, 30 percent could have been saved by early detection and treatment.

From The Well

by
Pastor Jim Hanson

When I was a little boy, my bedroom was right across the hall from grandma's room. Her room was special. And the reason for that was because she was always there! She was pretty much confined to her room. She had broken her hip and it never really worked after that.

Her room was a peaceful place. Quiet. She only listened to the radio half an hour each day and that was to hear a Christian speaker or preacher. The rest of the time, the only noise you heard was when she read the Bible out loud, prayed out loud, and sang hymns (or hummed them) out loud. I can remember the first time I heard her mention my name out loud in her prayers. I was so blessed. It made me feel so good, it warmed me all over. For I knew if Grandma was praying for me, I would be well protected. Hearing my name prayed was like having my head anointed with the Holy Spirit.

I suppose it was her love of Jesus and her prayers that made her room so peaceful. It was almost like being in church, to be in her room. It was like a sanctuary, a holy place. Sometimes it was a place of refuge, like when my big brothers were chasing me. If I could just make it inside her door before they caught me, I would be safe. For some reason their anger at me became defused when Grandma was around. We all calmed down and became a little more sane, and for sure, a little more safe.

It was a sweet place. She always had a jar of lemon drops and a jar of mints, pink or white. If wasn't too close to meal time, she'd say, "You can have a lemon drop or a mint. But just one." They were so good.

I always felt protected there. I can remember one night when a tornado came through our eastern South Dakota town. The wind really did sound like a train was moving right into our house. Grandma was 87 at the time, I was 12 or 13. I was scared silly. I jumped into bed with grandma. In just a few minutes, I was sound asleep, oblivious to the storm. Why not? Grandma's room was the safest place in the world!

I think the reason was that not only did Grandma live there. God lived there too. In His temple, her body. After she died, the room wasn't the same anymore. The presence had left the room. But the memory is still there. In my soul. And my hope and my prayer is that someday I can be for someone else what my grandma was for me. And that where I live can be a sanctuary, a place of peace, and quiet, and sweetness. And presence. Where under the shadow of His wings, saints can dwell secure!

Lions Farm Night to be western-style

by JIM HANSON

Everybody's welcome to the Lions' Farm Night sponsored by the Lions Clubs of Winters, Norton and Wingate on Thursday April 1, beginning at 7:00 p.m., at the Winters Community Center. It just seemed like it was time for folks to get together and have a good night celebrating each other.

The theme is western—western music, western Barbecue served by "The Shed" and western decorations. Come dressed western. Wear your denims, hats and boots, gingham and lace. We're fixing to have a real good "get together."

Dr. George Newman, former professor of biology at Hardin-Simmons, deacon at Pioneer Drive Baptist Church in Abilene, and now full-time rancher living in Potosi will be the speaker. Newman graduated in 1969 from Baylor and earned his Ph.D. from Texas A&M in 1975. He is an active member of the National Cattlemen's Association and the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers' Association. He is busy speaking up for the ranchers wherever he goes. "I firmly believe nobody loves the land and environment more than ranchers," he said. He is a strong voice for landowners' and ranchers' rights. "Land can be protected far better by private ownership than the government," he stated further.

His proudest moment came when nationally renowned cowboy and horse instructor Ray Hunt absolutely refused to believe Newman was a Ph.D. When he found out that Newman did, in fact, have a Ph.D. Hunt told him, "Well, you're sure the first Ph.D. I've ever met who had any common sense." He will be good to hear.

So, get your tickets and come on. Let's get together. The price is $5.50 a plate. You can get tickets at the Chamber of Commerce office, Winters State Bank, Peoples National Bank and Farmers Seed and Supply. The absolute deadline for getting tickets is March 15. There will be no tickets sold at the door!

Everybody's wanted. Everybody's welcome. Put on your western duds and "ya'll come!"

Good Morning, America, from Winters on ABC

Early morning television viewers watching ABC's Good Morning, America program Tuesday, March 9, were treated to a quick mention of Winters and the everchanging weather conditions of this area.

Winters, Texas, and Winter, Wisconsin, were highlighted during the weather segment of the program. The feature compared high and low temperatures of this week and the winter forecast for the upcoming weekend.

High temperature on March 9 was 90 degrees in Winters, Texas, and 40 degrees in Winter, Wisconsin. But Old Man Winter is scheduled to visit Winters, Texas, again with a forecast high of 35-40 degrees for Friday and Saturday. So it's back to winter for Winters and Winter.

As baseball and softball season gets underway, Winters fans will be privileged to have six newly certified umpires behind the plate.

Alyn Key, Jim Ventress, Robert Gibbs, Mary Arredondo, Ricky Davis and James Bellinger of Winters have successfully completed an intensive sixteen hour course sponsored by the American Softball Association (ASA) umpire school in Abilene.

Participants spent eight hours last Saturday in classroom instruction covering rules and regulations.

All the students from Winters passed the written and physical tests and are now certified ASA umpires.

Girl Scout Week begins; Winters Girl Scouts plan celebrations

In a world where newspaper headlines are filled with words such as "rioting," "famine," "child abuse," and "cocaine," it is heartening to be reminded that Heart of Texas Girl Scout Council and Girl Scouts of the USA are with us—and celebrating its 81st year. If we were writing headlines about Girl Scouting, these are the kind of words we would use: "values," "leadership," and "growth."

On March 12, 1912, a remarkable woman named Juliette Gordon Low decided that what the girls of the United States needed was an organization of their own—an organization where they could learn skills, develop self-esteem and have a wonderful time. From those first 18 Girl Scouts have grown the largest voluntary organization for girls in the world. Today more than three million girls and adults share the experience of Girl Scouting.

To commemorate the founding of Girl Scouting, the week of March 12 is celebrated as Girl Scout Week in every Girl Scout council in the USA. The Heart of Texas Girl Scout Council will be celebrating with different activities taking place in every part of our jurisdiction.

Winters Girl Scout troops will be making their own celebrations with things from flag ceremonies to birthday parties. They will honor the timeless values and standards set by Juliette Gordon Low, which have always been at the heart of Girl Scouting.

Lilly Presley is recovering well from knee surgery. Her daughter and son-in-law, Ann and Gerald Terhune of Arlington, were with her during last week.

Claudia Hill thinks her back is some better, although the pain is different from any she's had before. Mike Hill from Sweetwater and Gary Hill from Eastland both came during the week to see about their mother.

Brian Faubion spent Friday with his friend Sean O'Mara. On Saturday they went to A.S.U.

The Wesley McGallian family has returned from the Houston Stock Show. They enjoyed the show very much but are glad to be home. Sue Campbell and Nila and Therin Osborne had Sunday lunch with the McGallians and heard about their trip.

Performance to benefit former Winters teacher

The following is an excerpt from an article which appeared in the Coleman Chronicle and Democrat-Voice. Many Winters residents will remember Ms. Malmstrom, formerly a teacher at Winters Elementary.

A benefit show performance featuring modeling, acting and singing, set for sometime in May, will support a truly deserving person, Nancy Malmstrom, a fifth grade teacher at Coleman Elementary School.

Several weeks ago, Nancy was diagnosed as having an illness called viral encephalitis which has affected her speech and mobility. Nancy will need extensive rehabilitation therapy on her road back to full recovery following a hospital stay at Hendrick Medical Center in Abilene. It is understood that her therapy will be given at a facility in the Houston area.

Yvonne Chandler is directing the benefit show. Anyone interested in assisting in any way with this benefit can call her at 625-3688 or Melissa Mills at 625-4837.

"Lost Wages" Insurance: A loser for seniors

An auto insurance policy that protects against lost wages is a great idea for working Americans. But for those insured drivers who are retired, it's nothing but a drain on their wallets — and a financial windfall for insurers.

Wage-replacement insurance obviously is unnecessary for those who have left the work force. Yet insurers continue to sell it to retirees who are unaware they are paying for it.

How many seniors are affected by this procedure in how many states is anybody's guess. No one knows, although those familiar with the problem believe it could be a substantial number of seniors in many states.

On the surface, the amount of money a retiree pays for this coverage isn't a whole lot — it averages between $25 and $70 a year. But those individual premiums collectively translate into tidy profits for insurance companies.

The coverage often is hidden deep inside the fine print and technical language of a policy. Sometimes called "lost wage insurance," it frequently is inducted under "personal injury protection" (which offers back-up insurance for medical expenses) or "uninsured motorist protection" (which covers drivers in collisions with motorists who have no insurance).

There are two important steps retirees should take to avoid paying needlessly for lost-wage protection.

First, ask your insurance agent if your state allows lost-wage protection and, if so, whether you're covered. Remember, it may be difficult to determine just by looking at your policy. Remind the agent that you're retired, then ask him to remove the coverage and request a rebate for the unexpired portion of the policy. Even if your insurance policy clearly shows that you're retired, insurance companies have the right to continue charging you for the coverage unless you specifically ask that the coverage be cancelled. It's unfortunate, but right now, it's legal.

That's why step two is important if you live in a lost-wage-protection state: call your local lawmakers and urge them to change your state's law. Currently, it's not illegal to sell this unneeded coverage to retirees. But it should be. Legislation should require that those over 65 who are retired automatically be excluded from the lost-wages clause.

Most seniors get by on fixed incomes. Paying for insurance coverage they don't need wastes those limited resources.

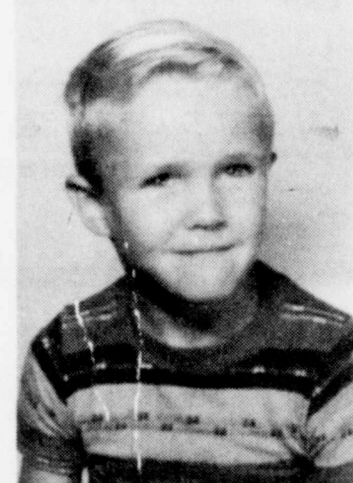

Check your policy. Call your local lawmakers. The time for change is now.

Social Security beneficiaries must report 1992 earnings

If you worked and received Social Security benefits during 1992, you have until April 15, 1993, to report the amount of your 1992 earnings to the Social Security Administration. Anyone whose earnings exceeded the annual earnings limits must file a report. The earnings limits for 1992 were $10,200 for beneficiaries aged 65-69 and $7,440 for those under age 65.

Filing your Federal income tax return does not take the place of filing your earnings report with Social Security and, if you request a filing extension for your Federal income tax return, you do not automatically get an extension on the filing date for your Social Security earnings report. You must request each extension separately.

Anyone who does not have a reporting form can call 1-800-772-1213 on Monday through Friday between 7:00 a.m. and 7:00 p.m. to file their report.

Unclaimed Money Fund list published; listed below are Winters names included

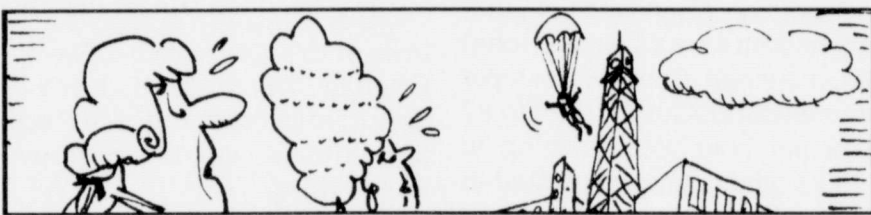

State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison has announced that 125,000 Texans have more than $86 million in lost or forgotten property that she hopes to return to the rightful owners.

The 125,000 names were included in the 1993 edition of the Texas Treasury Unclaimed Money Fund list that was published in 34 Texas newspapers on Sunday, March 7.

Listed below are the names of people from Winters: Walter Adams, Lenora Alexander, Glen R. Billingsley, Mary Brown, Harvey E. Carrell, Billy L. Dunn, M. Joyce Harris, Zora Mitchell Hill, Tye Hunter, Hazel H. Jordan, Darrell W. Kurtz, John Norton, Harold D. Poe, and Lucille Rogers.

Texans are encouraged to call toll free, 1-800-654-3463, for information on the unclaimed property program. Out-of-state callers must dial (512)463-3120. Accounts in the fund include checking and savings accounts, utility deposits, oil royalties, stocks and contents of safe deposit boxes.

The first successful parachute jump was made from a tower in 1783 by the French physicist Sebastien Lenormand.

Social Security offers toll-free number for Eldercare Locator

"Older Americans and their families may be interested in knowing about a nationwide information and referral service that is now available," said Franklin H. Upp, Social Security manager in San Angelo.

The Eldercare Locator is a national toll-free number service that can help find appropriate community resources for older people anywhere in the country. "Simply by dialing the toll free number, 1-800-677-1116, you will be referred to a local number for such senior services as nursing homes, legal assistance and financial aid," Upp said.

The Eldercare Locator service, which is funded by the Administration on Aging, began limited operation in May 1991, but went nationwide only this past November. Upp pointed out that early experience shows about half of the callers to the 800 number are family members interested in locating assistance for the care of an older parent or relative; and about a third of the callers are older persons who are themselves interested in locating community services.

The National Association of Area Agencies on Aging, which helps administer the toll-free number service, states that "The Eldercare Locator ... is a service whose time has come."

The Association notes that improvements in life expectancy and health care have helped to make Americans over the age of 85 the fastest growing segment of the U.S. population. And, it is this age group that is most likely to need assistance from caregivers and/or aging services.

"If you call the Eldercare Locator," Upp said, "you will speak with a trained information specialist. If the lines are busy, you will be told that the next available specialist will take your call and be placed in a waiting queue. The information specialist can help you define exactly the type of service that you are looking for and refer you to the nearest service provider."

The Eldercare Locator toll-free number, 1-800-677-1116, operates from 9:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. (Eastern Time) every business day. During non-business hours, an answering machine will take your call and an information specialist will contact you the following day.

What to do if your Social Security Check is late ... or lost

When someone's Social Security or SSI check doesn't arrive on time, the Social Security office knows about it pretty quickly. Office phones usually start ringing the same day with a call from the beneficiary who is wondering what to do.

The first thing they are usually told is "Wait to make sure it's not just delayed in the mail." While the postal service routinely delivers benefit checks on time, there are instances when the mail is delayed. The normal policy is to allow three days for late mail deliveries before processing a request for a replacement check.

The usual check delivery days are the 1st of the month for SSI checks and the 3rd of the month for Social Security checks. Social Security can process a claim for a lost SSI check on the 4th of the month or for a lost Social Security check on the 6th of the month.

If the delivery date falls on a weekend or on a legal holiday, checks are delivered on the last banking day before then. Claims for lost checks can be processed three postal delivery days later.

The most common reason that checks are late is because changes of address aren't reported. If you move, be sure to put in a change of address form with the post office in addition to informing Social Security of your new address.

Many people use direct deposit to have their benefit checks deposited directly into a savings or checking account at a bank. They generally find that direct deposit is safer and more convenient than getting their checks by mail. If you want to start direct deposit, call your bank or your nearest Social Security Office at 1-800-772-1213.

Survey indicates crappie and bass fishing excellent at Ballinger Lake

Last fall staff from the inland fisheries district office in Abilene assessed white crappie and largemouth bass populations in several area lakes. Data on abundance and size structure can be used to provide insight on potential fishing success the following spring.

Lake Ballinger
Crappie and bass fishing should be excellent at Lake Ballinger this year. Abundance of legal-size crappie (10 inches long) has nearly doubled since 1990, and 38% of all adult crappie (5 inches long) collected in 1992 were at least 10 inches long. Abundance of adult largemouth bass (8 inches long) has increased from 38 bass per hour electrofishing in 1990 to 82 bass per hour electrofishing in 1992. Eighteen percent of all adult bass collected in 1992 were at least 14 inches long.

the use of the permanent school fund to guarantee state revenue bonds, but would permit the legislature to provide by law for the issuance of general obligation bonds or revenue bonds of the state for the purpose of making loans to, or purchasing bonds of, school districts for the purpose of acquisition, construction, or improvement of instructional facilities, including all furnishings. The amendment also provides that the state, pursuant to general law, may forgive the payment of principal and interest on all or part of a loan made to a school district under the amendment to partially finance an instructional facility. The cap of $750 million on the amount of bonds that could be issued under article VII, section 5(b), as amended, would be retained. The amendment would repeal the current provision of the constitution permitting the legislature to authorize bonds in excess of $750 million by two-thirds record vote of both houses of the legislature. While any of the general obligation bonds issued under the amendment or any of the interest on those bonds is outstanding and unpaid, there would be appropriated out of the first money coming into the state treasury in each fiscal year, not otherwise appropriated by the constitution, the amount sufficient to pay the principal and interest on the bonds that matured or became due that fiscal year.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment authorizing the issuance of $750 million in state general obligation or revenue bonds to assist school districts in partially financing facilities, authorizing the state to forgive payments of loans made to a school district for partially financing facilities, and repealing the authorization for $750 million in state revenue bonds guaranteed by the permanent school fund."

PUBLIC NOTICE

BRIEF EXPLANATORY STATEMENTS

OF PROPOSED

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

SPECIAL ELECTION

MAY 1, 1993

PROPOSITION NO. 1 ON THE BALLOT

Section 1 of Senate Joint Resolution 7 proposes a constitutional amendment that would allow the legislature to redistribute among other school districts ad valorem taxes levied and collected by a school district. The amendment would also allow the legislature to create county education districts with the taxable property of existing school districts in one or more counties combined. County education districts may levy, collect, and distribute ad valorem taxes as authorized by general law. The legislature would be allowed to set the rate of the ad valorem tax to be imposed in a school district or county education district or it may authorize the board of trustees of each school district or county education district to set the rate, provided that the rate of county education district ad valorem taxes may not exceed $1.00 per $100 valuation of taxable property, unless a higher rate is approved by the voters of the district. The amendment also provides that the amount of ad valorem taxes redistributed among school districts by the legislature and effectively redistributed within a county through county education districts may not exceed 2.75 percent of the sum of the state revenue appropriated for public schools and the revenue from local ad valorem taxes levied and collected for public schools. The term "state revenue" does not include revenue from ad valorem taxes, revenue for the provision of free textbooks, or contributions to a retirement system. Finally, the amendment provides that it does not affect the distribution of the available school fund under article VII, section 5, of the Texas Constitution.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment allowing limited redistribution of ad valorem taxes for schools, authorizing the legislature or local districts to set a minimum tax rate in county education districts, and placing a cap on the ad valorem tax levied by county education districts."

PROPOSITION NO. 2 ON THE BALLOT

Section 2 of Senate Joint Resolution 7 proposes a constitutional amendment that would provide that, except for state educational mandates imposed in compliance with the Texas Constitution or federal law, or unless enacted by a vote of at least two-thirds of the members elected to each house of the legislature, a school district may not be required to comply with an obligation requiring expenditure of school district funds unless the obligation is fully funded. The amendment also requires the legislature to provide by law a procedure for determining whether an obligation is fully funded. In the absence of such a procedure, and at the request of a school district's board of trustees, the comptroller of public accounts shall determine whether or not an obligation is fully funded. This amendment applies only to state educational mandates enacted after December 31, 1993.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment exempting a school district from the obligation to comply with unfunded state educational mandates."

PROPOSITION NO. 3 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 4 proposes an amendment to article VII, section 5(b), of the constitution, which currently authorizes the legislature to provide for using the permanent school fund to guarantee bonds issued by school districts and certain education-related revenue bonds issued by the state. The amendment would repeal the provision authorizing

Local youth perseveres in Houston Calf Scramble

In what is one of the most heart-warming events featured at the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo, Ashley Lewallen of Winters, proudly stood in the spotlight of the calf scramble winners' square.

Ashley was one of 28 determined Contestants who attempted to catch a calf, halter it and bring it into the square during the February 26 performance of the Show.

In exchange, Ashley will receive a $1,000 certificate donated by Cavshatta Ranch to be used for the purchase of a registered beef or dairy heifer.

Next year, Ashley will return to the Houston Show armed with detailed records and a well-groomed heifer to compete in a special livestock show competition for additional prize money and awards.

Supervising the project with encouragement and enthusiasm will be Roy Shackelford, Ashley's agricultural science teacher.

According to Robert Norwood, chairman of the Calf Scramble Committee, more than 12,400 animals worth $3.27 million have been given to the youth of Texas since the program was established in 1942.

"The calf scramble is a unique program. Each contestant must demonstrate the tenacity to catch and halter a calf; in addition, he/she must spend time and resources to raise the calf for a full year," said Norwood.

The scramble is held during each of the 18 performances of the rodeo which includes professional rodeo action, top-notch entertainers, indoor fireworks and much, much more.

All the proceeds from the Houston Show benefit the youth of Texas in the form of scholarships and research grants to Texas colleges and universities.

Local farmers to benefit from reduced rates

For the fourth time in the last 12 months, the variable interest rate for Federal Land Bank Association agricultural, rural housing and farm-related business loans has declined. The new rate, effective March 1, is 8.2 percent.

The new rate benefits nearly 30,000 farmers, ranchers and rural homeowners throughout Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas who do business with FLBAs.

In addition to reducing the variable interest rate, the bank has received regulatory approval to originate and sell loans through the Federal National Mortgage Corporation (Fannie Mae).

Additional information on FLBA loans is available through the local offices.

Boll Weevil legislation passes in House

Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry today applauded passage of boll weevil eradication legislation in the Texas House of Representatives and urged Gov. Ann Richards to act quickly to sign the measure into law.

The bill, passed by the Senate in January, will enable Texas to meet a March 1 deadline for $45 million in federal funds to help the state eradicate boll weevils over a period of five to seven years.

"The legislators' cooperation and their speed in passing this emergency measure is to be commended," Perry said. "This is a clear demonstration that government still works for the people."

"Once Governor Richards signs the bill, Texas can join other cotton-producing states in the national movement to eradicate boll weevils," he said.

Boll weevils cost the state's cotton industry more than $20 million in crop loss and $22.5 million for boll weevil control. Perry said the enabling legislation will give cotton farmers the option of cutting costs while providing long-term benefits for the environment.

According to Texas A&M University, growers could reduce pesticide applications 70 to 75 percent within five years after eradication begins.

The legislation, sponsored by Representative Pete Patterson, D-Brookston, and Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, will allow producers to vote on creating a Texas cotton foundation that will administer eradication efforts by zone. Cotton producers in each zone will select board members.

Producers will fund eradication, which will be augmented by up to 30 percent in federal funds.

Perry noted that other states have already completed eradication programs and are gaining fast on Texas, the country's leading cotton state. Farmers in North and South Carolina, Georgia, California and other states are harvesting increased yields of high-quality cotton at costs lowered by fewer pesticide applications, he said.

In Texas, cotton in an average year generates $1.5 billion in direct sales and $4.5 billion for the state's economy.
