Lebanese cabinet resigns; Ceasefire halts civil war

■ Troop withdrawal casualty of war — Page 7A

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan said he and his Cabinet resigned today, hours after a cease-fire arranged by the United States and Saudi Arabia halted Lebanon's civil war.

Wazzan, a Sunni Moslem, told reporters after a Cabinet session he was stepping down to clear the way for the "formation of a national unity Cabinet to undertake the rebuilding of the homeland."

President Amin Gemayel, a Maronite Christian, has not decided whether to accept or reject the resignation, Wazzan said.

Syria and Lebanese Druse leader Walid Jumblatt had demanded the resignation of Wazzan as a condition for a cease-fire in the civil war, which pitted Syrian-backed Druse militias and their leftist Lebanese allies against Christian militias and the Lebanese army.

The prime minister announced he was stepping down hours after the cease-fire went into effect, silencing the guns around Beirut and opening the way for a national unity conference between the feuding factions.

"It marks the convening of a true dialogue among leaders of Lebanon involving individuals whose experience in shaping the course of this country for a generation can lead to a truly new beginning," said U.S. presidential envoy Robert C. McFarlane, who helped arrange the truce.

The Lebanese army and police said parties in the conflict were observing the truce on all war fronts since it took effect at daybreak.

However, the army said three gunmen tried to infiltrate the army-held mountaintop town of Souk el-Gharb about 2½ hours after the deadline, drawing fire from the garrison before withdrawing. And there was an exchange of fire between the Lebanese army and Druse gunners in Kaifoun, less than a mile from Souk el-Gharb.

A Lebanese government official said the United Nations would be asked to provide 500 observers to help police the cease-fire.

In London, the British Foreign Office said the four nations contributing to the multinational force that has been patrolling Beirut will meet "urgently" in New York to consider what steps to take in view of the truce. Britain, France, Italy and the United States have contingents in the force.

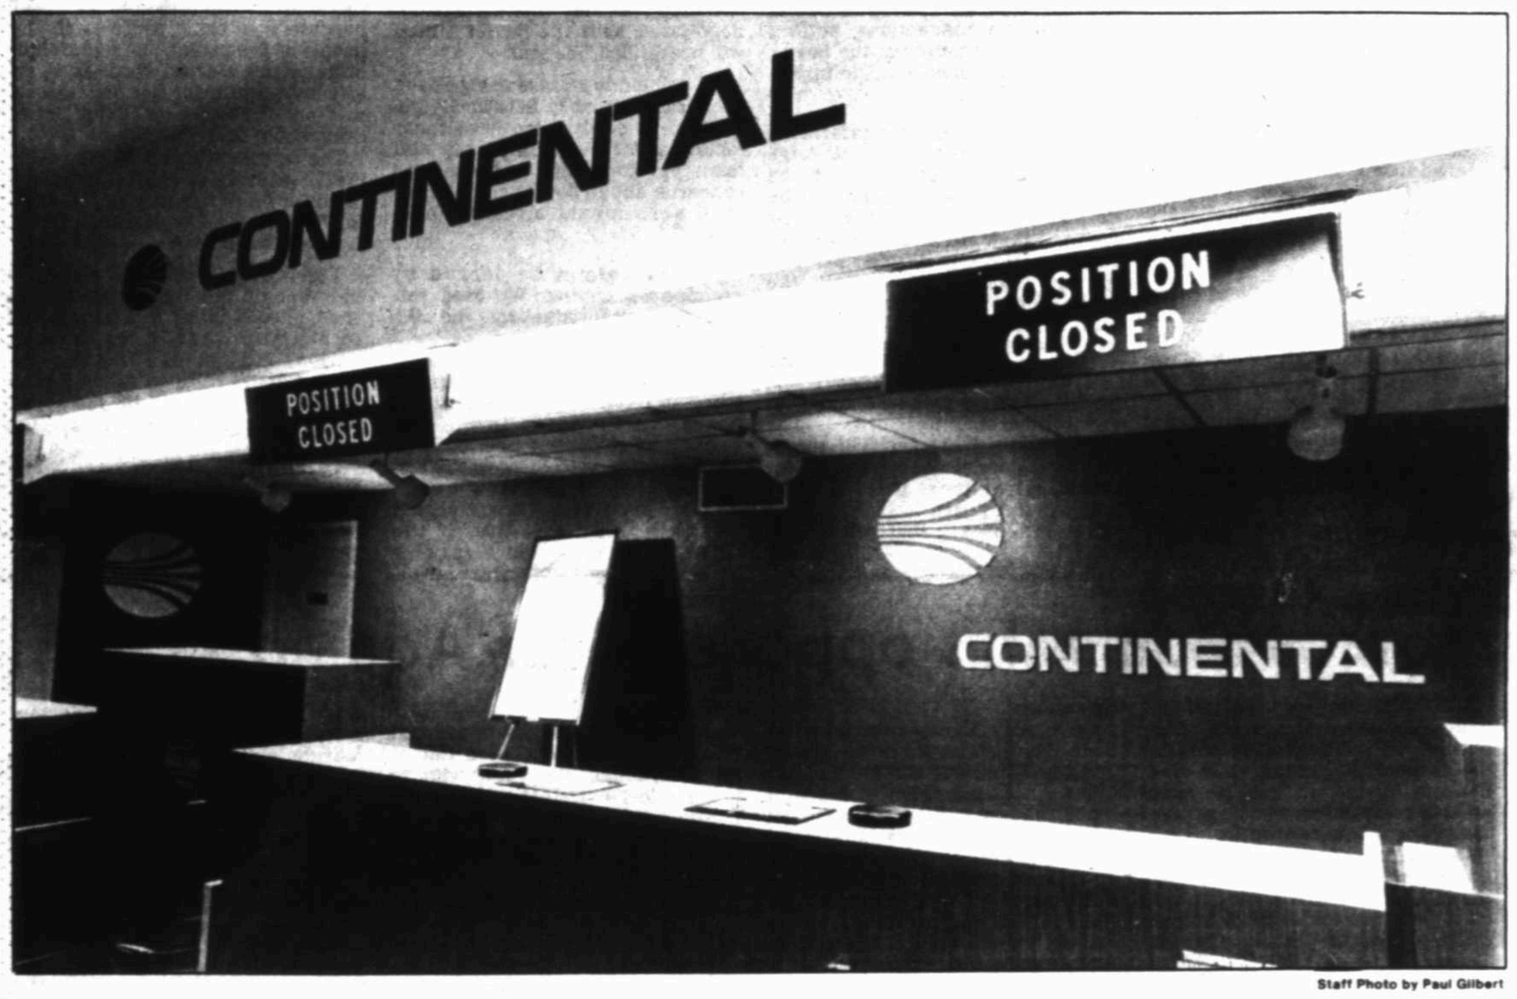

Police said 806 Lebanese were killed and 1,725 wounded in the three-week war that broke out when the Israeli army withdrew from the central mountains Sept. 4. The fighting pitted Syrian-backed Druse militiamen and their leftist allies against Christian militiamen and Lebanese army troops.

The cease-fire agreement was announced at midnight Sunday just a few hours after shelling which wounded four U.S. Marines at Beirut's international airport.

Beirut residents said the roar of artillery, rockets and mortars that shook the capital throughout the night stopped at the cease-fire deadline.

Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan said shooting around the Marine base at the airport stopped six minutes after the deadline, and no gunfire was heard after that by the U.S. contingent of the multinational force patrolling Beirut.

Out of business

The Continental service desk at Midland Regional Airport was closed Saturday evening after employees were informed the airline had filed for bankruptcy and they were laid off. Although Continental flights are scheduled to take off again Tuesday, Midland's flights will not resume.

Union leaders say shutdown not necessary

From Staff and Wire Reports

Union leaders say Continental Airlines didn't have to temporarily shut down and file for reorganization under bankruptcy laws, contending the moves were intended to break the unions and force acceptance of pay cuts.

Travelers stranded by the airline's sudden grounding after it filed for reorganization Saturday under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy law swamped other airlines over the weekend, scrambling for alternate flights.

"The other airlines are supposed to be obligated to accept their tickets," explained Victor White, manager of Midland Regional Airport. "After the Braniff bankruptcy last year, federal regulations were passed which obligated other airlines to honor those tickets.

"All of the local airlines in Midland yesterday (Sunday) were accepting them," he continued, "but in other cities it could be another story. They may decide not to." White explained that availability of seats on other flights was a determining factor.

Continental, which put its losses at $471.9 million since January 1979, said its planes will not fly until 12:01 CDT Tuesday. The first Continental flight out of Denver's Stapleton International Airport was scheduled to depart at 11:01 p.m. MDT.

When flights resume, the airline will only continue flights to 25 of the 78 cities it served previously. The seven daily flights to and from Midland Regional Airport are not scheduled to resume, according to Steve Boyd, Continental's local manager. He said the airlines local office is being closed "temporarily," with no immediate plans to reopen it.

Continental also has laid off 65 percent of its 12,000 employees and implemented new work rules and salary cuts for remaining workers after failing to reach agreement with its unions on wage concessions.

Locally, 19 employees, including the local manager, received word they had been furloughed until further notice.

Manhunt continues for escaped prisoners

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Police today recaptured two Irish Republican Army guerrillas who escaped from the Maze maximum security prison and a massive manhunt continued for 21 still at large.

"It is a desperately dangerous situation," said a senior police officer. "It is like trying to corner a pack of wolves." Hundreds of soldiers and police, aided by helicopters and tracking dogs, scoured the countryside for the guerrillas.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, in Ottawa for talks with Canadian officials, said the breakout was "the gravest in our prison history."

James Prior, Britian's secretary for Northern Ireland, ordered a "rigorous and searching inquiry at the highest level" into how 38 men obtained guns and knives to fight their way out of the maximum-security Maze prison, 12 miles south of Belfast, on Sunday. Seventeen fugitives have been recaptured.

The two recaptured today were picked up in the south of County Down as they headed toward the border with the Irish Republic, police said,

A police spokesman said the escaped convicts, including men serving life for murders and bombings, stabbed one guard to death and wounded six others — five with knives and one with a bullet in the head. All those who broke out of the prison are members of the IRA's provisional wing.

Sinn Fein, the IRA's legal political wing, sent its congratulations to the fugitives and called them prisoners of war.

"There is a feeling of jubilation in nationalist and republican areas because people...realize the British government has no right to imprison anyone in Ireland," Sinn Fein said in a statement.

Hardline Protestant leader Rev. Ian Paisley called for the resignation of Nicholas Scott, the Northern Ireland minister responsible for prisons.

"If the minister resigns, we would realize that the British government definitely meant business," Paisley said.

Photographs of the fugitives were issued 14 hours after the breakout. Among them was Brendan McFarlane, serving life for the murder of five people in a pub bombing seven years ago. He escaped four years ago but was recaptured.

McFarlane led the 1981 hunger strike at Maze in which 10 men starved themselves to death in a failed bid to gain official recognition as political prisoners. He did not participate in the strike, in which Bobby Sands, serving 14 years for weapons possession and being an IRA member, was the first to die.

Other escapees include Joseph Corey, serving life for murdering an Ulster Defense Regiment soldier and said by police to have been the IRA commander in Londonerry, and Kevin Artt, jailed earlier this year in the killing of Maze's deputy governor.

"It was worth a try," one of the recaptured prisoners said with a grin as he was led by a soldier back toward the jail.

The Maritime Safety Agency's patrol boat Tsugaru sails from the port at Otaru, Japan, enroute to Nevelisk, which is southwest of Sakhalin. The ship will receive items and documents from the Soviet Union pertaining to the downing of the Korean jetliner. Japanese and American officials are aboard the ship.

Soviets turn over airliner debris

NEVELISK, U.S.S.R. (AP) — A grim-faced Soviet general today turned over five wooden crates of clothing and debris from the South Korean jetliner shot down by a Soviet warplane, but insisted his country had found no remains of its 269 passengers and crew.

Major General A.I. Romanenko, head of the Soviet border forces for the Sakhalin and Kurile Islands, handed over the crates at Nevelisk, a fishing port on Sakhalin island not far from where Korean Air Lines Flight 007 is believed to have plunged into the sea Sept. 1.

It was the first time the Soviet Union has surrendered items from the Korean plane. The Soviets turned over 76 items, mostly debris from the aircraft and articles of clothing.

Five bodies and several body parts have been found on the coast of Japan, as well as thousands of pieces of debris and personal items. Still apparently missing, and the object of intense U.S. and Soviet searches, are the flight recorders from the Boeing 747.

Minoru Tanba of the Japanese Foreign Ministry quoted Romanenko as saying the Soviets had found no bodies from the plane.

"The Soviets told us on the 20th of this month they had no bodies or body parts to return," Tanba said. "We asked Romenko persistently and I looked him straight in the face and asked if they really hadn't found any. Romanenko said the Soviets had found no human remains whatsoever."

Romanenko and other officials were abrupt, seemingly nervous and rarely smiled during today's five-hour visit by the delegation of four Japanese, three Americans and one Swede.

The delegation arrived aboard the 3,218-ton patrol boat Tsugaru after a 15-hour voyage from the northern Japanese port of Otaru. They and the boat later returned to Japan.

The U.S. officials aboard the patrol boat were Lynn Pascoe of the State Department, Dennis Wilham of the Federal Aviation Administration and Navy Capt. Bert Terry. The Swede was Karl Oskar Nordlander, who represents the Montreal-based International Civil Aviation Organization.

The boxes turned over by the Soviets contained garments still damp and reeking of jet fuel, oxygen bottles and aircraft documents. All the items were reportedly found floating near Moneron Island west of Sakhalin or washed up on nearby Soviet beaches.

The talks between the visiting delegation and the Soviets were said by one American participant to be "very formal — no one invited us to lunch." He spoke on the condition that he not be identified.

Other items in the boxes handed over by the Soviets were a tattered orange and red life boat, seat cushions, seven pairs of pants, a suit coat, tow jackets and other pieces of cloth.

The Soviet Union had demanded that all radio tranmissions to and from the Japanese patrol boat be halted and that its 40mm cannon be removed before it entered Soviet waters.

Reagan offers to reduce missiles

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Reagan, declaring "a nuclear war cannot be won and must never be fought," today offered to reduce the number of new missiles the United States plans to deploy in Europe if the Soviet Union accepts his challenge to cut global nuclear stockpiles.

"The door to an agreement is open," he said. "It is time for the Soviet Union to walk through it."

The president made his remarks in a speech to the 38th annual session of the United Nations General Assembly. He was applauded once, when he had finished speaking.

Reagan used the speech, his first to the General Assembly, to castigate the Soviets for striking down a Korean Air Lines jetliner. But he also held out the carrot of arms control agreements, stressing the need for a peaceful solution to global disputes and employing less harsh language than in recent remarks on the airplane catasrophe.

At the same time, he affirmed "our unwavering support" for the United Nation's peacekeeping missions — at a time of when efforts are being made to cut the U.S. contribution to the U.N. budget — and decried "the emergence of blocs and the polarization of the U.N."

The centerpiece of the president's arms control proposal was an offer to cut, by an unspecified figure, the number of Pershing 2 and cruise missiles the North Atlantic Treaty Organization plans to begin deploying in Western Europe in December.

While U.S. and Soviet negotiators confer in Geneva, Switzerland, on reducing the number of such medium-range missiled, the president has said that, barring an agreement, deployment of the 108 Pershings and 464 cruise missiles will go ahead on schedule.

Outlining in only vague terms what he called "a package of steps designed to advance the negotiations as rapidly as possible," Reagan offered to not try to offset, with western missile deployments in Europe, the entire Soviet missile deployment throughout the world "if the Soviet Union agrees to reductions and limits on a global basis."

In addition, he said the United States would be "more flexible" about the topics of the Geneva talks being conducted by U.S. ambassador Paul Nitze.

This, he explained, would mean the United States would consider ways to take into account the Soviet desire that a European arms agreement cover aircraft as well as missiles.

In advance of the speech, a senior State Department official said Reagan's proposal addressed three concerns the Soviets had raised in Geneva: the question of whether the new U.S. missile deployment in Europe would completely offset Soviet global deployment, the inclusion of aircraft in the talks and the number of Pershing 2 missiles deployed if an agreement to reduce global missiles is reached.

The official, who spoke only on condition he remain anonymous, said that so far the United States has made all the concessions, adding that "in this negotiation, the Soviet Union has not made a single important concession."

While making the new offer, Reagan reiterated that he felt his original "zero-option," under which the United States would cancel the European deployment if the Soviets removed their 351 SS-20 missiles targeted on Western Europe, was still the best plan. "Unfortunately, the Soviet Union declined to accept the total elimination of this class of weapons," he said.

"I want to make an unequivocal pledge to those gathered today in this world arena," Reagan said. "The United States seeks and will accept any equitable, verifiable agreement that stabilizes forces at lower levels than currently exist."

But, in a speech that referred to the Sept. 1 attack on KAL flight 007 that killed 269 people as "a timely reminder...of the Soviets' concept of truth and international cooperation," the president said "we cannot...compromise on the necessity of effective verification."

"Evidence abounds that we cannot simply assume that agreements negotiated with the Soviet Union will be fulfilled," he said.

He pointed to attacks using Soviet chemical weapons in Laos and Afghanistan, "a newly discovered radar facility and a new ICBM" and said those developments "raise serious concerns about Soviet compliance with agreements already negotiated."

"Peace cannot be served by pseudo-arms control. We need reliable, reciprocal reductions," he said, adding:

"I call upon the Soviet Union today to reduce the tensions it has heaped on the world in the past weeks, and to show a firm commitment to peace by coming to the bargaining table with a new understanding of its obligations. I urge it to match our flexibility. If the Soviets sit down at the bargaining table seeking genuine arms reductions, there will be arms reductions."

"The time has come for the Soviet Union to show proof that it wants arms control in reality, not just in rhetoric," he said.

Giving the assembled heads of government and dozens of foreign ministers a tour of the diplomatic and global weapons horizon, Reagan said:

"The progress in weapons technology has far outstripped the progress toward peace. A nuclear war cannot be won and must never be fought. If governments are determined to deter and prevent war, there will not be war."

Criticizing the movement of nations professing non-alignment with the East or West, Reagan said that "client governments of the Soviet Union, who have long since lost their independence, have flocked into the non-aligned movement, and once inside have worked against its true purpose. Pseudo-non-alignment is not better than pseudo-arms control."

"The United States rejects as false and misleading the view of the world as divided between the empires of the East and West," he said, adding that the nations of the West are "a free alliance of governments," while the East represented "an empire directed from the center which is Moscow."

Among those expected to attend the session were several heads of government and as many as 50 foreign ministers. Missing, however, was Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, skipping his first General Assembly opening session since 1957 in the wake of the plane's downing.

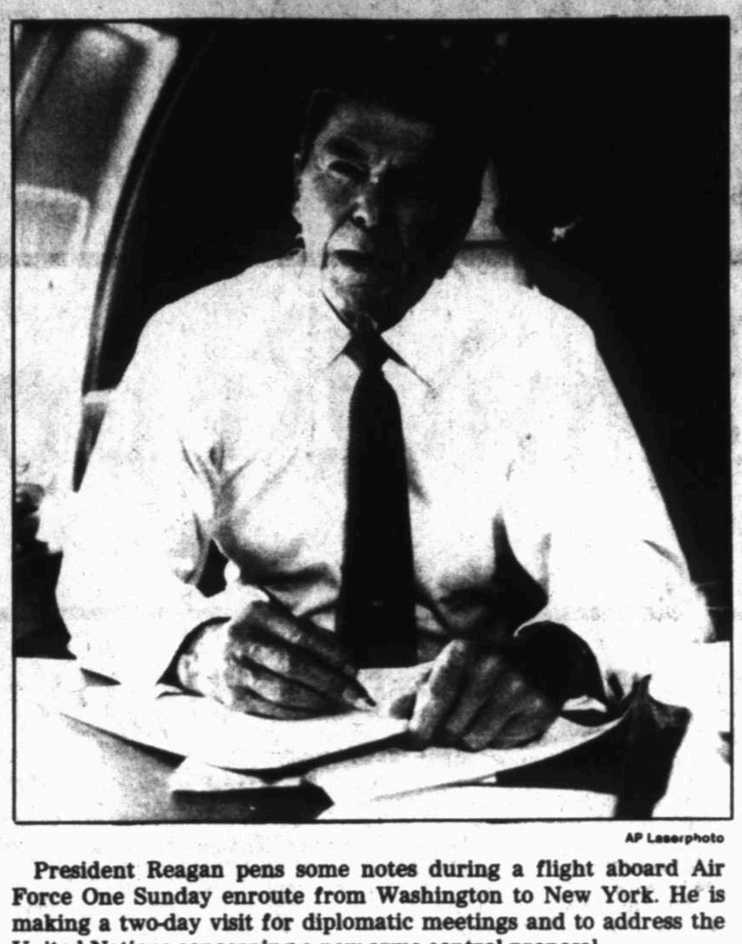

At a reception he gave for heads of government and foreign ministers, Reagan on Sunday night stressed his support for the international body.

"The United States is proud to be the home of this organization whose purpose is to bring peace to all the people of the planet," he said. "I still believe the United Nations is an effective forum for not only discussing our problems but doing something about them."

The president's visit follows General Assembly speeches by every president since Harry S. Truman. However, today's appearance comes at an awkward time.

Last week, Charles Lichenstein, a member of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations, said in response to criticism that if the member nations did not like the way the United States fulfilled its obligations as their host, they could meet elsewhere. The president endorsed the idea.

In addition, there have been moves in the Senate to cut the U.S. contribution to the United Nations by $480 million over the next four years. That move has been opposed by the Reagan administration.

Marcos blames his opponents for Aquino's death

MANILA, Philippines (AP) – President Ferdinand E. Marcos today blamed his political opponents for the assassination of his chief rival, Benigno Aquino, and said he would press to complete an investigation of the killing within two weeks.

In another development, U.S. Embassy and church sources said today that President Reagan will meet with Marcos' most prominent critic — Roman Catholic Cardinal Jaime L. Sin — if Reagan makes his planned visit to the Philippines in November.

On Sunday, Marcos rejected a plea from Sin that he share his power, and he lashed out at Catholic clergymen, accusing them of teaching schoolchildren to hate him.

Reagan has faced pressure in the United States to cancel his visit because of political turmoil in the Philippines. Anti-Marcos demonstrations in the Philippine cities have had an increasingly anti-American tone, and organizers have vowed to stage large rallies against Reagan if he comes.

Marcos, in remarks broadcast today on radio and television, said of Aquino's killing:"We were trying to prevent this assassination while the political leaders of the other side were trying to bring it about, unconsciously probably...But the guilt is there."

Aquino returned to Philippines Aug. 21 from three years of self-exile in the United States despite warnings by Marcos that he might be killed. He was gunned down while under government protection, moments after arrival in Manila, and Marcos appointed a five-member commission to investigate the murder.

The commission suspended public hearings Sept. 12.

Hundreds of thousands of demonstrators in recent days have called for Marcos' resignation, accusing his government of complicity in the assassination. Marcos has denied any role in the murder.

Union leaders contend shut down unnecessary

The actions were defended by the company as necessary to ensure Continental's future, but union leaders contended the moves were not needed and were in reality a ploy to rid the airline of its unions.

Gary Thomas, a spokesman for the Air Line Pilots Association, said late Sunday that the company's new plan for pilots cut salaries by about 50 percent and drastically changed work rules in the airline's favor. Marilyn Wade of the 2,300-member Union of Flight Attendants said similar rules were prepared for members of her group.

But of 717 flight attendants and 143 pilots contacted by the airline, all but three pilots had agreed to go to work under the new plan, Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks said.

The airline grounded its domestic flights at 6 p.m. CDT Saturday. It proposes to resume operations Tuesday, flying to 25 U.S. cities, down from the 78 it previously served.

The airline said it has debts of $650 million and assets of $50 million. Hicks said the salary cuts and new work rules would save the airline about $250 million. The airline had sought $60 million in concessions from pilots and $40 million from flight attendants.

It is the second major U.S. airline to go to bankruptcy court. Braniff International, also based in Texas, shut down last year. According to White, Braniff so far has no plans to resume service to Midland. "They haven't indicated they'd come to Midland," he said, "but with this change, who knows?"

Frank Lorenzo, chief executive officer and president of the airline, said Saturday the contract changes were needed for Continental to "remain alive and healthy in the years to come."

"We will implement a strategic plan to make Continental the largest of the low-cost airlines," Lorenzo said, adding that Continental had "strong positions in cash, equipment and facilities."

Ms. Wade contended that Continental is so strong, in fact, that it should still be solvent. She said the company should not "be able to file bankruptcy solely to get rid of unions."

Top-scale domestic flight attendants will receive about $22,250 annually, about 41 percent of the salary they were paid under the old contract, she said.

Thomas said pilot captains will be paid $43,000 a year. That figure is less than half the $89,400 a year pilots were formerly paid.

Thomas said he believes the airline "never intended to bargain in good faith" during negotiations for wage concessions. "They were going to implement this unilateral change no matter what we offered to do," he said.

The International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers struck Continental Aug. 12. The airline's bankruptcy papers noted that in the 30 days after the walkout, passenger loads dropped to 54.7 percent, about 3 percent lower than before.

Hicks said Sunday most Continental passengers "seemed to be rerouted onto other carriers," but he did not have any figures.

The domestic destinations to be served when flights resume are Austin, Texas; Baton Rouge, La.; Burbank, Calif; Chicago; Cleveland; Corpus Christi; Denver; Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; Houston; Kansas City, Mo.; Lafayette, La.; Los Angeles; Minneapolis; New Orleans; New York; Oklahoma City; Orlando, Fla.; San Antonio; San Diego; San Francisco; Seattle; Tampa; Tulsa, Okla.; Washington, D.C., and Wichita, Kan.

Soviets turn over debris from downed airliner

The Soviet Union, which claims the downed plane was on a U.S. spy mission, Sunday accused President Reagan of lying about the plane incident when he made a speech broadcast from the Voice of America headquarters in Washington on Saturday.

"The gist of the president's statement, the atmosphere of secrecy during the arrival of the president to the 'Voice of America' radio station for delivering his speech, and the fact that it was broadcast in 42 languages show that all has been conceived as a propaganda performance on an international scale," the official news agency Tass said.

Soviet citizens denounced Reagan in letters published Sunday by the Communist Party newspaper Pravda, indicating an interest in defending the government against bitter international criticism stemming from the airliner incident.

"It is none other than the U.S. president in person who has launched a barrage of malicious slander in a bid to discredit the peaceful aspirations of the Soviet leadership and the whole of our people," wrote Konstantin Vysotsky, 35, a researcher at the Moscow Agricultural Academy.

In Wakkanai, Japan's northernmost port on the island of Hokkaido, MSA officials said 16 Soviet and six American vessels were spotted today near Moneron in the area where the Korean plane is believed to have crashed.

The extent of the search operations indicated that vital parts of the plane, including the recorders or "black box" which could reveal why the plane strayed into Soviet airspace, still were missing, the officials said.

Relatives of victims will be able to inspect the thousands of items recovered by Japanese searchers and any personal belongings handed over by the Soviets starting Oct. 1 in Hokkaido's capital, Sapporo. They will be allowed to claim items belonging to their family members, officials said.

Lebanese cabinet resigns; Cease-fire in effect

The agreement, announced by Gemayel, was followed by an order from the army commander, Gen. Ibrahim Tannous, to his 32,000 troops to stop shooting "except in self-defense" after 6 a.m. local time.

Jumblatt, based in Syria, issued a similar order to his Druse militiamen and their allies after the cease-fire agreement was announced in Damascus by Saudi mediator Princeqandar Bin Sultan and Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam.

Khaddam said, "An agreement has been reached for a cease-fire in Lebanon, ending the war and starting a national dialogue. What was achieved is great."

"We appeal to all our Lebanese brothers to go beyond the bloodshed and the hatred in order to start the building of Lebanon," he said.

Jumblatt said his anti-government coalition, the National Salvation Front, and its allies in the Shiite Amal militia "consider the clauses of the agreement positive."

The agreement provides for establishment of a four-man committee from the Lebanese army and warring factions to "supervise and consolidate" the cease-fire, to be policed by "neutral" observers, Gemayel said.

Under the agreement, Gemayel announced he was calling the nation's leftist, conservative and independent political leaders to an urgent conference to "begin national reconciliation dialogue at once." A time and place was not specified.

Lebanese officials said McFarlane and Bandar proposed that the opening session be held in Riyadh, the Saudi capital, under King Fahd's auspices.

Gemayel invited observers from Saudi Arabia and Syria to take part in the dialogue to "bring about a comprehensive national reconciliation that will be the permanent foundation of honest coexistence among the members of the Lebanese people, a guarantee for establishment of state sovereignty over all Lebanese territory and the creation of a balanced government system."

Lebanon's state radio said the conference would include Jumblatt and two other leaders of his anti-government coalition; Nabih Berri, leader of the Amal militia; former President Camille Chamoun and Pierre Gemayel, founder of the right-wing Christian Phalange party.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz told a news conference Sunday in New York that the cease-fire did not alter the mission of the 1,600 Marines in the peacekeeping force.

Asked how the American troops would respond if fired on in violation of the cease-fire, Shultz said their permission to defend themselves was the same. However, he added, "All parties should exercise restraint."

In Washington, President Reagan displayed crossed fingers and said of the cease-fire, "It is a first step."

Cease-fires have been notably unsuccessful in Lebanon. Dozens were declared then violated during last year's fighting between Israel's army and Palestinian guerrillas.

Airplanes and baggage carts await reorganization after the airline filed federal bankruptcy reorganization Saturday under Chapter 11 laws. Only international flights remained in operation Sunday.

Deregulation, recession batter airline industry

NEW YORK (AP) — Lightning has struck twice in Texas, with a second major airline, Continental Airlines, following Braniff International down the path of reorganization under the protection of a bankruptcy court.

The two succumbed to the new world of airline deregulation, combined with back-to-back recessions starting in 1980, a tripling of fuel prices since 1979, and the 1981 air controllers strike.

Continental, which halted all its flights Saturday and announced it would be filing a Chapter 11 petition under federal bankruptcy laws, says it expects to begin flying again Tuesday, offering a sharply reduced service. Braniff's fleet — the half that has not been sold off — has been sitting on the tarmac in Dallas since May 13, 1981.

Continental has been battered for several years.

As then-President George Warde put it in Continental's annual report, "Nineteen-eighty-one was the most difficult and turbulent year in the history of Continental Airlines."

That was the year the major airlines lost an aggregate $500 million, following a $225 million loss the previous year.

Then came 1982, with the brunt of another recession. The national airlines, with some singular exceptions, lost a total $1 billion.

Here's how some rounded up that year for their shareholders:

—"Eastern Airlines sustained a net loss of $74.9 million in 1982 on operating revenues of $3.77 billion as recession and unrestrained fare discounting continued to plague the airline industry."

—"Corporate profits and consumer spending both reflected the unfavorable economic climate, resulting in a deterrent impact on air travel for business and pleasure alike." — Trans World Airlines.

—"The weakened consumer demand has been accompanied by rising operating and interest expenses; by increased competition — due primarily to deregulation and a proliferation of new airlines — which has led to overcapacity on many routes, a dilution of traffic and fare discounting; and by airport restrictions that were imposed in the wake of the U.S. air traffic controllers strike." — Pan American World Airways.

With the losses piling up, was it any wonder there would be victims?

But why not before? There have been many recessions, and yet no major airline had failed since the industry began to take itself seriously in the 1930s.

The answer is deregulation.

Before, the U.S. airlines merely went to the Civil Aeronautics Board with a fare increase request, just like your local utility, "and the guy with the worst costs got the increase" to the benefit of everybody else, says one airline executive, who requested anonymity.

Until 1978, when the rules were changed mid-game, airlines were protected from failure, guaranteed lucrative routes in exchange for serving non-productive cities and towns, and not a single new major airline could get into the business.

But since 1978, airlines have been free to pick their routes and set their own fares at well. Dozens of new, low-cost, typically non-union carriers have come along.

Siamese kittens may not survive

FORT WORTH (AP) — A veterinarian says it's unlikely that four kittens joined at the abdomen will survive.

The Siamese quadruplets were born Friday to a gray cat of unknown breed, "Kitty," owned by Louise Batts.

The kittens — two gray, one black and one white — each appeared to have four legs.

"All four developed from an incomplete division of the developing embryo," said Dr. Gene Giggleman.

Cats frequently have abnormal pregnancies because they have large litters, but Siamese quadruplets are very rare, Giggleman said.

Bombings baffle police

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The attack on Don Patterson broke with the emerging pattern and left detectives unable to find a motive in a bizzare series of car bombings that have not injured anyone.

Patterson, a 41-year-old computer technician, loaded his 4-year-old son into the family station wagon on the morning of Sept. 9 and was backing out of his drive when a pipe bomb exploded beneath the car.

The blast lifted the vehicle off the ground and sprayed shrapnel across the street.

It also shattered what seemed like a pattern developing from two earlier car bombings here on successive Sundays in March.

"This is a rarity," Police Detective Larry Foraker told the Dallas Times Herald in a Sunday story. "To have three of these in six months — this just doesn't happen."

Foraker, of San Antonio's police department arson squad, said authorities have been unable to determine a motive for the Sept. 9 bombing, or to come up with an explanation for the rash of attacks.

Foraker said the type of bomb used against Patterson apparently was different from the ones used against the cars of an oilman and a congressman. The first two bombings caused extensive damage but also injured no one.

"In the first two you can speculate a little bit because of the type of cars they went after," said Foraker, noting that the oilman's car was a $30,000 Cadillac and Rep. Bill Archer's vehicle was marked with a government license plate.

"Maybe somebody's got something against money or authority.

"But in this last one," Foraker said. "Somebody may be doing it just for the heck of it, getting kicks out of it."

In the March bombings, not enough of the explosive device was left to tell much about it, police said, but they surmise it was placed above the fuel tank because in both cases the gasoline was ignited.

The bomb used on Patterson's car was fairly sophisticated — gunpowder packed in a pipe that was triggered by the car's motion, said experts with the police department and the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Foraker said the placement in the rear of the car suggested that the attack wasn't an attempt on someone's life, but rather "criminal mischief."

THE BETTER HALF

"Your new diet must be working. Three snack food companies just declared bankruptcy."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, Sept. 27, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Statesman-patriot Samuel Adams, Dickens' illustrator George Cruikshank and political cartoonist Thomas Nast were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actress Jayne Meadows, author Louis Auchincloss, singer Shaun Cassidy and Senator Charles Percy (R-Ill.). Think of your current job as an experience that will be very valuable in the future. Although a return to school is expensive, you will never regret it. Let your family and friends do for you for a change. Productivity rises when you get better organized. Sharpen your managerial skills. Office changes are coming. Loved one urges you to apply for an administrative post.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be patient with your less experienced co-workers. A business project gets a nice boost from private financial sources. Keep the lines of communication between you and your loved ones open.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Use your talents wisely today and you will turn a nice profit. You need to spend some time in seclusion thinking through a problem. Repay social obligations without wrecking your budget.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone influential is sympathetic to your career and business concerns. An unexpected development disrupts domestic harmony. Take time out to tend to mate's needs before things get out of control.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your professional contacts help you crystallize your financial plans. Keep your ambitions in line with reality. Refuse to give in to mate or relative's unreasonable demands. Stand up for your rights!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Let your intuition determine what you do today. Mate or partner offers constructive advice. Welcome it! You will enjoy spending a quiet evening at home with your loved ones.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Watch what you do and say today. A blunder could be costly in terms of status and reputation. Good friends share important news. A former employer gives your career aims a boost.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Study a problem carefully before making a final decision. An older friend is enormously helpful if you ask his advice. Guard your financial interests. Romance is mostly fun-and-games.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be wary about investing in land or property. An old friend brings you some good luck where romance is concerned. Negotiate with creditors if behind in your payments. You get free advice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A cozy talk with a friend or relative will heal a recent wound. Exercise greater self-discipline where spending is concerned. A TV program or new book gives you valuable insights.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your mood changes quickly today, leaving others confused about your intentions. Put your thoughts in writing. You must be willing to make concessions if you want a relationship to last.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Allow subordinates to take greater initiative at work. A business meeting brings new facts to light. You get a fresh slant on an important relationship. Business trips prove profitable.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You need to socialize more. Emphasize the rapport you and your partner enjoy. A frank admission on your part will relieve domestic tension. Forge ahead with a creative or artistic project.

PBS airs show run by children

BOSTON (AP) — Eleven children with virtually no acting experience are going on live nationwide television to entertain young viewers who have outgrown "Sesame Street."

"It'll probably be as big as 'Saturday Night Live,'" says 11-year-old Paul Branco, one of the stars of "Don't Look Now," which will debut on Public Broadcasting Service stations Sunday, Oct. 2, at 9 a.m. Eastern time.

Five pilot shows will be broadcast nationally to test the water for a possible 26-week series.

Some segments will be taped ahead of time, but others will be done live. "It's exciting because it's live, so you never know what these kids are going to do," explains Susan Gale, a spokeswoman for the producers.

For Paul, a small boy with a big voice, the show is a step up when it comes to acting. His previous experience included playing the leg of a dragon in a class skit — "the left leg," he says slowly, brown eyes serious.

"Don't Look Now," will view life through the eyes of a teen-ager. The format has worked in Britain and Canada, says British producer Roger Price.

"It's funny. It's better. It's run by kids," says Bajah Freeman, one of the children, braces accenting her smile.

The program is aimed at viewers age 7 to 14 who are tired of cartoons but aren't necessarily ready to dive into the sex and crime of prime time.

"That age group is really betwixt and between. They can't watch the young stuff, and the adult stuff that's there is really too adult," says Dighton Spooner, the executive producer.

Finding the child actors was easy — producers put up posters in schools in Cambridge and Newton, and nearly 200 children showed up. After auditions, the students took drama classes all summer and now practice daily, including weekends, at WGBH, the public TV station in Boston.

"It's a lot of work to put in for an 11-year-old, believe me," says Bajah.

They are ordinary kids, not flamboyant child stars. And they have ordinary problems, like keeping up in school. Dylan Jones, 13, does algebra while waiting his turn in front of the camera.

Matthew Flynn, at 9 the youngest actor on the show, reads over his lines. When you first go out there it's really nerve-wracking, but it goes away instantly, he says.

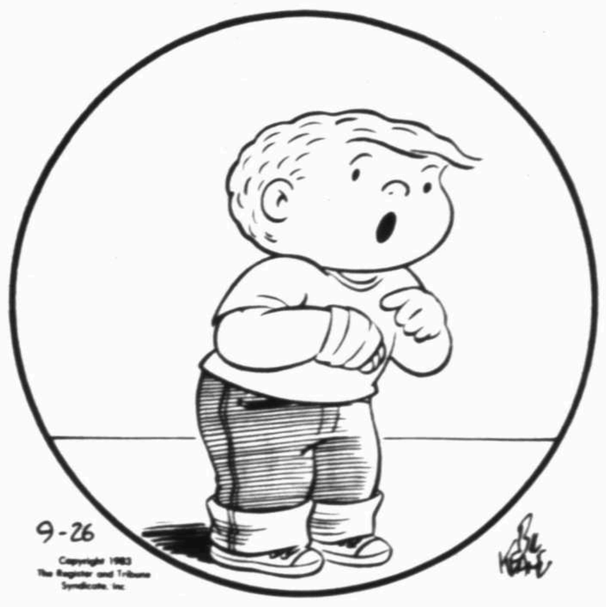

The sketches are set where kids find themselves in classrooms, at camp, in the living room. Price and the director, Geoffrey Darby, write the programs, but the young actors can change the language, or simply tell the producers, "That's not funny."

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ865 ♡742 ◇K6 ♣AQ4
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 3 ◇ Pass
What do you bid now?
A. — The answer is obvious if you understand what type of hand partner shows by his jump shift. North either has a strong hand with a very good suit of his own or a spade fit. You don't want to rebid a weakish five-card suit and you can't bid no trump with one suit unstopped. So the solution becomes obvious — raise to four diamonds. A high honor doubleton is sufficient for this action. Partner's next bid will clarify which type of hand he holds.

Q.2 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q8753 ♡Q ◇Q9842 ♣103
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
2 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass
3 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A. — You did not have the values for three spades at your first turn, nor could you jump to four spades, for that would deny the second-round control in hearts that you hold. Now you certainly don't want to play no trump, but to take a mere preference to four spades doesn't come close to doing justice to your hand. Jump to five spades.

Q.3 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠QJ74 ♡98 ◇Q63 ♣8762
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
2 ♡ 2 ♠ ?
What action do you take?
A. — You have a conventional bid that describes your hand exactly — double. That shows a hand with values in the opponents' suit but little or nothing outside. Partner can judge from his hand whether he wants to play for penalties or whether his hand is better suited for offense, either in his own suit or in no trump.

Q.4 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ765 ◇KQ73 ♣QJ83
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♡ Dble Rdble ?
What action do you take?
A. — It sounds as if someone is fooling around, but you have no reason to suspect that it is your partner, especially at this vulnerability. Even if partner is a bit light, you have enough for game. Jump to four spades.

Q.5 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ873 ♡Q1052 ◇A6 ♣K3
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
What do you bid now?
A. — There is no reason why you should not bid your hand naturally. You have a two-suited hand, and your second suit is a major at that. Bid two hearts — it is more important to tell partner about your hearts than it is to confirm that you have five spades.

Q.6 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ9 ♡KJ107 ◇Q107 ♣KQ9
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 NT Pass 2 NT Pass
What action do you take?
A. — In theory, partner's raise asks you to bid game if you are maximum and to pass if you have a minimum no trump. In terms of point count, you have a dead minimum 16. However, your 10's and 9's give your hand so much body that its trick-taking capacity has increased to the point where we would accept the invitation and bid three no trump.

It's an insult

The entire story of Dr. Edward Franklin Jackson Jr. of Akron, Ohio, is incredible. He was convicted last Thursday of 21 rapes over a seven-year period. He was sentenced Friday to up to 665 years in prison and fined $131,250 for his crimes, which included terrorizing his victims, kidnapping and multiple aggravated burglaries.

He could have been sentenced to a total of 1,370 years in prison had the presiding judge chosen to make the all the various sentences run consecutively.

But all those facts pale when you consider that Jackson still can be eligible for parole in 9½ years under Ohio state law. He would have been eligible for parole after 9½ years even if he had received the maximum sentence because the state law applies to any crime other than homicide.

What that means is if Jackson is paroled when he first becomes eligible, he could serve only 5.4 months for each of the rapes he committed. That is outrageous.

It's true that Jackson's medical practice is lost and his family life undoubtedly threatened. But for a minute don't think about him; think about the victims of his crimes. What does the Ohio state law mean to them?

What it means is that the value of each of his victim's rights is reduced by the fact he possibly could walk free in 1992 or 1993. The law is understandable in some cases. Of course the prosecutors say early release won't happen; that he won't be paroled after that short a term.

Well, we hope not for the sake of the bad doctor's victims. To leave a criminal with a crime of his magnitude to the mercy of unnamed parole board members certainly won't be comforting to his victims. In fact, it's an insult.

The standoff war

The war between Iran and Iraq will mark its third anniversary with little gained by either nation except long death lists that account for more than 100,000 casualties.

Neither Iran nor Iraq has been able to win a decisive victory. Thus the dreary war plods on, costing each country about $1 billion each month. The winner, in the end, may well be the country that succeeds in destroying the other economically.

The Iraqis are threatening once again to attack and destroy Iran's oil-production facilities. Air strikes against Iran's Nowruz Field last March started oil spills that still continue unchecked, sending 7,000 barrels a day into the Persian Gulf and damaging marine life.

The conflict is a religious one, with the Iranian leader Khomeini calling for the liberation of Moslem holy lands in the name of Allah. We hope Allah sees fit to end this hopeless slaughter before another anniversary is marked.

Another View:

Lichenstein's courage

After U.S. U.N. delegate Charles Lichenstein made sharp remarks about American willingness to cease hosting the world body, the Reagan administration hastened to say his comments shouldn't be considered a change of U.S. policy.

But Deputy Ambassador Lichenstein undoubtedly spoke for many Americans who are fed up with the organization's ineffectiveness and frequent abuse of the United States, which generously serves as its host (in New York) and major financial backer.

The United Nations has been ineffective in furthering the cause of world peace and political stability among nations. It has become a major cause of global disharmony as it has welcomed guerrilla leaders and legitimitized various terrorist organizations.

This country is regularly condemned by communist and Third World regimes in the United Nations yet the United Nations also offers a potential forum to promote Western freedoms and mediate differences before they erupt in violence, or keep hostilities from escalating.

The United States contributes a quarter of the annual U.N. budget of about $750 million — a far greater share than any other nation. By contrast, the Soviet Union has pledged to contribute 14 percent, and remains delinquent on about $200 million.

Lichenstein made his remarks after the Soviet Union questioned U.S. fitness to host the United Nations in a controversy stemming from the Korean airline incident and the closure of some U.S. airports to the plane of Soviet delegation head Andrei Gromyko.

If the Soviet Union or other U.N. members feel mistreated, he said, "then the United States strongly encourages such member states seriously to consider removing themselves and this organization from the soil of the United States."

Then he added: "The members of the U.S. mission to the United Nations will be down at dockside waving you a fond farewell as you sail into the sunset," as delegates from 157 nations prepared to convene for the U.N. General Assembly's 38th annual meeting.

Members of the U.S. Congress called for Lichenstein's head. Liberals and internationalists fell over themselves to condemn the statements as a gross injustice to an important forum for resolving global tensions and conflicts.

The United Nations is better than nothing, but we doubt Lichenstein's comments did it any harm. Rather, he deserves a national standing ovation for reminding members that the U.S. welcome mat and support shouldn't be taken for granted.

CHARLEY REESE

American greed helps Soviets gain

President Reagan's anemic response to the Soviet Union's most recent act of barbarism has created the false impression that the United States is impotent to deal with the Soviet Union. Actually, the United States could hurt the Soviet Union very badly if we had the will.

Charley Reese

Alexander Solzhenitsyn, among others, has pointed out that from the beginning of the Bolshevik revolution the Soviet Union has been dependent on Western technology and credit.

"...what they need from you is economically absolutely indispensable to the Soviet system," he said.

Sen. Henry Jackson, just a few years ago, described the flow of Western technology into the Soviet Union as "an acute hemorrhage."

Greedy and/or ignorant touts of trade with the Soviets often argue that if Americans don't sell it, sombody else will. This is a specious argument on its face. In the first place, if that were true, then why would the Soviets go to such lengths to steal or purchase, legally or clandestinely, American technology? In the second place, 50 percent of the high tech manufacturers in Western Europe are using American-owned licenses.

If the United States strenghtened its laws to ban trade and loans to the Soviet Union, to severely punish owners of American licenses who allowed them to be used in trade with the Soviets, that would hurt them badly. If the United States then cut off all cultural, scientific and technical exchanges so that the only Soviet citizens allowed in the U.S. were a small core of diplomats, that, to, would hurt them severely.

At the present, we typically and stupidly send Americans to the Soviet Union to study poetry while they send graduate engineers to study American technology.

"The forces of the entire Soviet economy are concentrated on war," Solzhenitsyn said. "But everything which is lacking, everything which is needed to fill the gaps, everything which is necessary to feed the people or from other types of industry, they get from you."

Stop this assistance, he urged, and the Soviet economy will have to reduce its military preparations, abandon its military space effort, and concentrate on feeding its own people lest they revolt.

Stephen Bryan, deputy assistant secretary of defense, estimates the Soviet Union devotes 93 percent of its high tech to military purposes (we devote about 7 percent of ours). The Soviets have built a special compound of industries in Zelonograd, a city so secret no foreigner is allowed in and no Soviet citizen can enter without a special pass. These industries are believed to be concentrating on military applications of microcircuitry.

Western trade to the Soviet Union hurts us in three ways: (1) it is immoral because it supports the most barbaric and murderous tyranny in history; (2) it makes a direct contribution to the military system which threatens the lives and freedom of Americans; and (3) it cost Americans money because the Soviets are able to leap-frog us on some defense items which forces us to develop new systems much sooner than we normally would.

We would not today be worried about the vulnerability of our land-based missiles if we had not sold the technology and machinery necessary to increase the accuracy of Soviet missiles. We would not be concerned about the vulnerability of the Trident submarines which are just now entering the fleet if we had not sold the Soviets technology which can be used in anti-submarine warfare.

Last year, West Germany sold $500 million worth of technology to the Soviets; Japan, $366 million; France, $205 million; and while the U.S. figure is only $55 million, remember that half of the licenses in Europe are American-owned.

This kind of greed can result in the deaths of your children. You should let your Congressman know how you feel about it. It does not make sense to spend billions defending ourselves against our own technology.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Assad outwitted foes in Lebanon

WASHINGTON — CIA analysts have been watching Syrian President Hafez Assad, the Middle East's chief troublemaker, with glum admiration.

Jack Anderson

Though the Israelis blasted his planes out of the skies, stopped his tanks in their tracks and thoroughly humiliated him in Lebanon, he has now succeeded in turning back the Israelis and confounding the Americans. Suddenly he is about to force upon Lebanon a government that will take its directions from Damascus.

It's not that he blindsided Reagan & Co. The president and his policy makers were fully aware of Assad's treacheries. He simply outwitted and outmaneuvered them.

They knew that Assad was conspiring against the peace effort while giving it lip service, that he was digging into new military positions in Lebanon while promising to withdraw, and that he was bolstering his armed forces while negotiating a settlement.

They were also aware that he had a rousing hatred for Israel. Intelligence reports have consistently warned that he believes a military showdown with Israel is inevitable.

"When the blow comes," he is quoted as saying, "we will seize the opportunity and fight." The secret report telling of Assad's conversation emphasized that he used the Arab word "lamma" which means "when" not "if."

His defense minister, Gen. Mustafa Talas, is quoted in the same cable as acknowledging that "all the Arabs combined are weaker than Israel." Yet he vowed that the Syrians would fight anyway "if not to gain a victory, at least to keep the war case hot between us and Israel."

Last January, the U.S. Embassy in Damascus cabled that Assad believes "a conflict with Israel will inevitably erupt during 1983" and that he "would not run away from a fight."

Despite these clear warnings, President Reagan has kept the Marines in Lebanon to guard the powder kegs in the midst of the incendiaries. Here is the depressing record:

— Secretary of State George Shultz and former special envoy Philip Habib assured President Reagan that in a matter of months the Lebanese army would be ready to take control of Lebanon. But top-secret intelligence reports warned that the Lebanese army was in far worse shape than anyone had imagined. I reported on Oct. 10, 1982, that the Marines, therefore, "may be in Lebanon for a lot longer than the American public has been led to believe."

— Shultz and Habib also persuaded the president that Assad would pull his forces out of Lebanon if the Israelis would withdraw. This was vigorously disputed by intelligence analysts. I reported on April 29 that "the Syrians will try to remain in Lebanon after Israeli troops and international peace-keeping forces agree to pull out."

— Reagan hailed Habib's statesmanship for arranging the withdrawal of the Palestine Liberation Organization from their embattled positions in Beirut. But I reported on Nov. 10, 1982, that the PLO fighters who left by the front door were returning by the back door. It was Assad, of course, who helped them slip back. A secret CIA report also declares: "Almost all arms and equipment destined for the guerrillas in Lebanon, whatever their source, (come) through Syrian territory."

— Shultz and Habib told the president at first that the Soviet presence in Syria would be a restraining influence on Assad. But intelligence reports warned, on the contrary, that the Soviets would try to ignite a Syrian-Israeli clash. I publicized their warnings in columns on Feb. 25, April 3 and April 29. "So the American Marines," I wrote, "may find themselves in the middle of a conflict in which the Soviets have a huge stake. Even if a major explosion can be avoided in Lebanon, there are sure to be a spatter of little explosions."

To correct the mistakes of the past, President Reagan must first of all admit them.

INSIDE REPORT:

Nancy's displeasure is delay

WASHINGTON — The remote prospect that Ronald Reagan will not seek a second term stems not from his own state of mind and body but from his wife Nancy's, in the opinion of insiders.

Rowland Evans

One of the president's important political advisers sets the probability of a second term bid at 99.5 percent and attributes the 0.5 percent doubt factor solely to the first lady. "I think the president is in better shape today than he was before he was shot," the adviser told us. "It's Mrs. Reagan who concerns me."

Robert Novak

Of specific concern is the fact the slim first lady has lost so much weight. Insiders say she has had a less pleasant time in the White House than the president. Her three years there have been grievously marked by two events: the assassination attempt on her husband and the death of her father.

SHULTZ VS. GROMYKO

In private talk with his top staff, Secretary of State George Shultz insists that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko never had any intention of attending the United Nations General Assembly session where he would confront worldwide anti-Soviet reaction over the Korean airliner shootdown.

The decisions by Govs. Mario Cuomo of New York and Thomas Kean of New Jersey to forbid Gromyko's landing at commercial airports in their states gave the veteran Soviet diplomat an easy pretext for his boycott decision. Shultz wishes the two governors had kept out of it, but insists privately that they had nothing to do with Gromyko's decision.

Shultz believes that Gromyko would have cited a "threat" of anti-Soviet riots in Manhattan if he had shown his face at the U.N. But the real reason, according to the secretary of state, would have been his embarrassment over Soviet isolation that would be apparent in the U.N. debate.

ANTI-KEYNOTER CUOMO

Democratic National Chairman Charles T. Manatt is not pleased by the pressure to pin down New York's Gov. Mario Cuomo as the 1984 Democratic National Convention keynoter, and is spreading the word that it is still an open decision.

Operatives close to Manatt say a better national image for the party might come from Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, who, like Cuomo, is a fiery orator, as keynoter. Biden has been wowing party events around the country, most recently New Jersey's state convention. There is also talk at Democratic national headquarters about finding "a strong Southerner" to keynote.

The talk about an alternative to Cuomo has less to do with animosity toward him from Manatt than with the desire for an orderly selection process without being crowded into a quick pick of the New Yorker. Manatt operatives blame the Cuomo-keynoter boom on pollster Pat Caddell (who also counts Biden among his clients).

GLENN'S ISRAELI GAIN

Financial contributions from the American Jewish community have been pouring into the presidential campaign treasury of Sen. John Glenn ever since his Sept. 13 speech praising Israel to the Foreign Policy Association in New York.

Glenn, running just behind Walter Mondale (a staunch Israeli backer), insists that he said nothing in his speech that he had not said before. According to the senator, pro-Israeli Democrats were simply unaware of his strong record of support for Israel. Nevertheless, eyebrows were raised by his speech, particularly his statement that a U.S. policy of "even-handedness" toward Israel and the Arabs "has all too often meant a tilt against Israel."

Glenn's speech is being mailed to Jewish groups and contributors across the country following what aides called the "spontaneous" pro-Glenn reaction in New York City. However, Democratic political operatives believe the senator's new posture on Israel undercuts his ability to ultimately attack Mondale for pandering to special interests.

BILL CASEY'S CLOUT

Central Intelligence Agency Director William Casey has become second only to national security director William Clark as President Reagan's favored adviser, partly because of Casey's silence at large meetings and his meticulous preparation for his private talks with Reagan.

Casey is known as Mr. Mumble for his performance at National Security Council sessions, speaking only when directly asked and then muttering his answers. That frees the canny CIA chief from commitment to policies that he might wish to change.

But on his ever more frequent visits to the Oval Office for private chats with Reagan, Casey is armed with concise, hard-hitting summaries prepared by his own top staffers. While not always taking Casey's advice, the president is listening longer and harder to him as U.S.-Soviet relations deteriorate.

Women to be armed with tear gas

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli army says it plans to arm its female soldiers with tear gas canisters to help them deter sexual assaults.

The daily Maariv said the move was initiated by Pinhas Goldstein, a member of Parliament for the ruling Likud bloc, following an increase in sexual assaults on hitchhiking women soldiers.

The army relies partially on hitchhiking as a means of getting troops around the country, and motorists are encouraged to pick up male and female soldiers who congregate along highways.

Opposition leader holds rally

GWERU, Zimbabwe (AP) — Opposition leader Joshua Nkomo held his first political rally since returning to Zimbabwe five weeks ago and urged the government to talk with dissidents in his Matabeleland province.

The province, Nkomo's political stronghold, has been wracked by political and tribal violence since Prime Minister Robert Mugabe ousted Nkomo from a position in a coalition government 19 months ago.

Nkomo, 66, president of the opposition Zimbabwe African Peoples Union and a hero of Zimbabwe's fight for independence from white rule, addressed thousand cheering supporters Sunday and disavowed any affiliation with the militant dissidents, but he urged the government "to talk to these young men."

Pope's consecration celebrated

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A 20,000-member choir sang hymns to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the consecration of Pope John Paul II as a bishop in his native Poland.

In a two-hour Mass in St. Peter's Square, 70,000 pilgrims Sunday commemorated John Paul's consecration in Krakow on Sept. 28, 1958.

In a message after the Mass, the pope said the poverty of the Virgin Mary is an example of simplicity and dedication "to be followed by all men."

Bishop indicted over property dispute

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Judicial authorities say the head of the Episcopal Church in Mexico has been jailed on a fraud charge stemming from a dispute over ownership of a parsonage in Acapulco.

Judge Arturo Deloya Fonseca told The Associated Press on Sunday that Bishop Guadalupe Saucedo was indicted in connection with the claim of the former vicar of Acapulco, John Peter Black, to ownership of the parsonage in the Mexican resort. Saucedo is in an Acapulco jail pending bail proceedings. said.

Black resigned the ministry but claims he purchased the property from the congregation in 1970 and agreed to rent it to Saucedo. Saucedo obtained the deed to the property in a civil suit, but church officials said he never paid for it. Under Mexican law, churches may use property but cannot own it.

Withdrawal agreement may be casualty of civil war

An Analysis

By ROBERT H. REID

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Even if today's cease-fire holds, the Lebanese civil war may claim another casualty — the U.S.-mediated Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement signed last May.

President Amin Gemayel will likely face strong pressure to scrap the accord in the coming weeks — perhaps during the conference of national reconciliation called for under the cease-fire plan accepted by the Syrians and their Druse allies.

The list of those to be invited to the conference includes Druse leader Walid Jumblatt, former Moslem Prime Minister Rashid Karami and former Christian President Suleiman Franjieh.

The three form the presidential council of the Front for National Salvation, which they organized July 23 to challenge the Gemayel government and undermine the withdrawal agreement.

They will likely get support for their opposition from Nabih Berri, leader of the Shiite Moslem militia Amal, and from the Syrians and possibly the Saudi Arabians, who are to be invited to the conference as observers.

The Syrians have strongly rejected the withdrawal agreement because it grants Israel a number of security, political and economic concessions in return for pulling out its troops who invaded Lebanon in June 1982 to destroy Palestine Liberation Organization guerrilla bases.

The Israeli and Lebanese governments signed the agreement May 17 after five months of negotiations under U.S. auspices.

But Israel said it considered the agreement "frozen" until the Syrians also withdrew their estimated 50,000 troops from lebanon.

Syrian President Hafez Assad had refused to discuss pulling his own troops out of Lebanon until the pact is cancelled and the Israelis leave unconditionally.

Syria's state-controlled media refer to the agreement as the "contract of submission."

Although Saudi Arabia has not been so harsh in its criticism, it is hard to imagine the Saudis sanctioning any deal which perceived as giving the Israelis advantages in an Arab country.

Prince Bandar Bin Sultan, a chief architect of the cease-fire accord, described the truce as a first step "along the road for freeing lebanon from israeli occupation."

Bishops reject reform

From Wire Reports

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (DPA) — Roman Catholic bishops rejected the constitutional reform passed by the South African Parliament as insufficient in a pastoral letter read from the pulpits Sunday.

The bishops said that the draft constitution, which gives coloreds (those of mixed descent) and Asians political equality with whites but excludes black South Africans, was "not a satisfactory step on the road to peace in South Africa.

"It falls short of what is required in terms of truth, justice, love and freedom," the bishops said.

White South Africans will make a final decision on the draft constitution in a vote Nov. 2.

"We cannot accept a constitution that prevents people from crossing racial barriers and working together for unity and peace in parties and associations of their own choosing," the bishops said. "The maintenance of racial discrimination runs count to the redemptive work of Christ."

Anglicans, Methodists and other Christian churches also have rejected the proposed reform, which includes far-reaching executive power to be given to future presidents of state.

Thatcher to visit White House, United Nations

OTTAWA (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who will visit the White House and the United Nations later this week, was in Ottawa today for a meeting with her Canadian counterpart, Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

"There is so much to discuss both in the economic sphere and in foreign affairs in these troubled times," Mrs. Thatcher said on her arrival Sunday night.

Canadian officials said Trudeau and Mrs. Thatcher would probably "compare notes" on the anti-cruise missile protests each is facing — in Britain against plans to begin deployment of the U.S. missiles this year, in Canada against an agreement to test the cruise delivery system in northern Alberta.

Besides talks with Trudeau and his Cabinet, Mrs. Thatcher's schedule includes a call on opposition leader Brian Mulroney and an address to a joint session of Canada's Senate and House of Commons.

Until last year, Canada had to get approval from the British Parliament before it could make any constitutional changes.

On Tuesday, Mrs. Thatcher is to meet with government officials and businessmen in Toronto, then travel to Edmonton.

Congress adds fiscal crisis atop Mideast workload

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, still undecided on how long U.S. Marines should stay in Lebanon, must scramble to meet another deadline this week to prevent much of the government from running out of money when the new fiscal year begins Saturday.

The Senate begins debate today on a compromise worked out by House and Senate leaders with the White House to place an 18-month limit on the Marines' stay in Lebanon. The House begins debate Wednesday or Thursday.

At issue is the 1973 War Powers Act, requiring the president to notify Congress within 48 hours whenever he sends troops equipped for combat abroad. If they are in a zone of hostilities he is required to bring them home in 60 days unless Congress authorizes a further stay or he decides an additional 30 days is needed to get them out safely.

Some legislators say the 18-month limit is too long and are pressing for compliance with the existing law.

nation

Others, however, say the situation has gone far beyond the mere technicalities of the War Powers Act.

"I do not believe we ought to be debating a time limit. I think we ought to be debating our role in Lebanon," Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"I think the danger is we will end up with an open-ended commitment with no exit point, with no clearly defined mission, but with a congressional resolution that basically limits the amount of military force we can use to perform that mission. That's the worst of all worlds," Nunn added.

Meanwhile, the start of the new fiscal year on Saturday places Congress in the increasingly familiar situation of having to draft stopgap legislation to provide money for federal departments and agencies awaiting action on their regular annual appropriation. Without action, most of the government will be facing at least a technical shutdown.

Only four of the 13 necessary appropriation bills have been approved by both houses of Congress and signed into law. Two more measures may be acted upon.

Efforts to start work on the stopgap measure in the House last week fell apart when the House Appropriations Committee rebelled against House leaders.

Democrats stressing gender

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic presidential candidates are working hard to keep the gender gap alive for the 1984 election.

The role of women was a major topic for two Democrats who appeared during the weekend before a meeting of Americans for Democratic Action.

Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado used the opportunity to bid for support far beyond their immediate audience that sits on the left wing of the Democratic Party.

AMONG the Democrats as well as in Ronald Reagan's White House there is clear awareness that more than half the voters in the 1984 presidential election will be women and that President Reagan gets far more support from men than from women.

For example, a CBS-New York Times poll last summer said 57 percent of the men but only 39 percent of the women approved of Reagan's work as president.

White House officials have sought to counter the president's political problem with women by releasing statistics showing he has appointed more women to top government posts than his Democratic predecessor, Jimmy Carter. The administration figures were disputed by Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., who said there were only 88 women in executive-level jobs in the Reagan administration.

The National Organization for Women, whose leadership is clearly hostile to Reagan, will meet in the nation's capital next weekend and hear from Democratic presidential candidates.

DURING their appearances before the Americans for Democratic Action, Mondale and Hart provided a preview of what NOW is likely to hear.

Hart told the Democrats he would "make the issues of concern to women central in my campaign." He announced the appointment of Mrs. Schroeder as co-chairwoman of his campaign and said one of her principal duties would be to "recruit women for central roles in the campaign and for key high public policy appointments in the Hart administration."

The Colorado senator also called on his party to increase its effort to aid women candidates and to commit itself to election of two Democratic women to the Senate in 1984.

THERE are two women in the Senate now — Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas and Paula Hawkins of Florida — and both are Republicans.

Mondale said he would "bring women into positions of power where they have never been before."

He implied that might include the vice presidency when he said his search for a qualified running mate would not be limited to white males.

MONDALE also criticized the administration for recent comments that he said reflected insensitivity.

"I think one of the biggest burdens for women in our country and for all who believe in justice for women is the snickering and the jokes and the derision that is spilled out across the land by public leaders of insensitivity," he said.

Dallas gains 'lucky' win over New Orleans

Defense gives Cowboys' 21-20 victory

AP Laserphoto

Dallas cornerback Ron Fellows (27) juggles the ball and races New Orleans' Guido Merkens to the goal line after picking up the loose ball on a blocked field goal in the fourth quarter.

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry had just one word for it: "Lucky."

The Cowboys remained unbeaten in the National Football League Sunday with a 21-20 victory over the New Orleans Saints, thanks to a safety quarterback sack in the final two minutes.

"I don't know what happened out there myself," Landry admitted after the Saints forced his team into numerous turnovers. "We were very lucky to win."

Linebacker Anthony Dickerson sacked Saints quarterback Kenny Stabler in the end zone with 1:58 to play for the game-winner.

Landry said he was stunned New Orleans tried to pass from its four-yard line.

"That wasn't too smart, but we had some mental errors too," Landry said. "We're 4-0 and I'll take it."

Dallas quarterback Danny White said, "Every year (New Orleans Coach) Bum Phillips comes up with something new, and they blitzed us and blitzed us. They sacked us seven times because we couldn't pick it up."

"New Orleans was just great," said Landry, but added: "We found a way to win just like we have in the other three games."

Asked if his team was motivated, Landry replied: "I hope not. If we were motivated and played that bad, we're pretty poor."

Phillips said, "Dallas was Dallas. We thought we had them at the end. We were passing down there because if we just ran three plays and punted then a field goal would have beaten us anyway."

Dickerson said he wasn't surprised New Orleans passed from the end zone.

"I got up early this morning and watched the game-of-the-week on television and saw the Saints did the same thing last week against the Green Bay Packers," Dickerson said.

Dallas appeared dead after linebacker Dennis Winston intercepted a White pass in the end zone and ran it out to the four-yard line with the Saints leading 20-19.

THE SAINTS, now 2-2, tried to catch the Dallas secondary napping, but a blitzing Dickerson wasn't fooled by Stabler's play action fake and nailed him in the end zone, much to the delight of the partisan crwod of 62,136.

Dallas appeared to have blown the game when Tyrone Young blocked an extra point attempt by Rafael Septien after Ron Fellows returned a blocked field goal attempt 62 yards for a touchdown with 7:05 left.

New Orleans had seized a 20-13 lead when Frank Warren's interception of wide receiver Drew Pearson's pass at the Dallas 24 led to Wayne Wilson's 1-yard touchdown plunge early in the fourth period.

Dallas led 13-10 at halftime, but New Orleans tied the score in the third period on Morten Andersen's 42-yard field goal.

The Saints continually harrassed White, sacking him seven times and intercepting three of his passes.

White completed a 4-yard touchdown pass to Pearson as the Cowboys scored their first points of the year in the opening quarter, giving Dallas a 7-0 lead. Septien kicked a 41-yard field goal and Dallas led 10-0.

However the Saints rallied on Andersen's 19-yard field goal and Wilson's 2-yard touchdown run.

Septien's 34-yard field goal gave Dallas the halftime lead.

Streaks continue: Rolling Bills beat rolled-on Oilers

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — The phrase "winning ugly" was first applied to baseball's Chicago White Sox, but Buffalo Bills Coach Kay Stephenson could have used it to describe his football team's victory against the Houston Oilers Sunday.

"It wasn't pretty, but it was a win," said the first-year coach as his team won its third straight National Football League game 30-13. The Oilers are also on a roll, but, with their 11th straight NFL loss, it's the kind of roll Las Vegas gamblers have nightmares about.

While the Bills' third victory against one loss may not have been pretty, the work of two running backs was beautiful.

Buffalo's Joe Cribbs and Houston's Earl Campbell displayed two distinct running styles in the ground-oriented contest.

The 5-foot-11, 190-pound Cribbs picked his way through the Houston defense for 166 yards, seven yards more than his previous single-game high.

"One of my biggest attributes is my ability to read the holes," said Cribbs. "I've spent more time learning the blocking schemes this year."

While Campbell also has the ability to pick the holes, his strength is his strength. Although he's the same height as Cribbs, Campbell weighs about 50 pounds more and was able to out-muscle the Bills defense for 142 yards.

"He's a big refrigerator of a running back," said Bills safety Steve Freeman, who had more than his share of collisions with Campbell.

THE OILERS fought back from a 13-3 second quarter deficit to tie the score at 13 early in the third quarter. But a 48-yard field goal by Joe Danelo gave Buffalo the win.

Buffalo extended its lead in the fourth quarter with a 17-yard touchdown pass from Joe Ferguson to Frank Lewis and an 87-yard return of a fumble by Dave Kilson.

The Oilers opened the scoring with a 31-yard Florian Kempf field goal following a 27-yard drive in the first quarter.

But the Bills scored the next 13 points with Cribbs' 1-yard touchdown run and a 7-yard touchdown pass from Ferguson to Jerry Butler. Danelo missed the conversion on the second score.

The Oilers came back with a 26-yard Kempf field goal in the second quarter before a 1-yard touchdown run by Campbell tied it at 13.

The Oilers grabbed an early lead in the first quarter, and Campbell showed he was ready to run. Houston got the ball on the Bills' 41-yard line and Campbell rushed seven straight times before he was stopped at the Bills' 7-yard line. Kempf then connected from 31 yards.

The Bills then took the Oiler kickoff and marched 76 yards in eight plays before Cribbs pushed the ball over from the 1 to put the Bills ahead 7-3.

Buffalo increased the lead to 13-3 in the second quarter following another long drive. The Bills, using Cribbs and fullback Booker Moore, culminated an 80-yard, 10-play drive when Ferguson found Butler for the 7-yard touchdown pass. A bad snap prevented Buffalo from tacking on the extra point.

With only 24 seconds left in the half, the Oilers, following Robb Riddick's fumble of a John James punt inched closer with a 26-yard field goal by Kempf that made it 13-6 at the half.

Campbell's touchdown, following the second half kickoff, tied the score at 13 before the Bills took the lead for good with a 48-yard Danelo field goal that made it 16-13 Bills.

Ferguson's 19-yard, fourth quarter strike to Lewis and Kilson's fumble return closed out the scoring.

Parcells likes 'to watch' Lofton

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New York Giants Coach Bill Parcells says Green Bay Packers wide receiver James Lofton is "really a pleasure to watch." But playing against Lofton is another story.

"I think Lofton is the best receiver in the league. Who else averages 24 yards a catch?" said Parcells, who will get a close-up view of Lofton tonight when the Giants, 1-2, face the Packers, 2-1, at Giants Stadium.

"As an athlete, I don't know anybody who is superior to Lofton. He's fast and strong. He can leap. He's so graceful," Parcells added.

Parcells also says he hasn't forgotten Lofton's ability to turn a game around. Lofton led the Packers to 27-19 comeback victory over the Giants last year in a Monday night meeting that was the final game before the strike. He raced 83 yards on an end-around as the Packers rallied from a 12-0 deficit.

This year Lofton has caught 16 passes, is averaging 23.8-yard per catch and leads the NFL with four touchdown receptions.

Lofton also gets quite a bit of help. John Jefferson, the Packers' other starter at wide receiver, has 13 receptions and three touchdowns. Tight end Paul Coffman has 11 receptions and fullback Gerry Ellis has caught 13 passes.

Lynn Dickey, a 13-year veteran, ignites the Packers' explosive offense. He's the NFL's top-rated quarterback, with 63 completions in 87 attempts for 911 yards and nine touchdowns.

"What we've got to do is cover their receivers long enough so our defensive people can get in Dickey's face," Parcells said. "We have to get him moving so we can sack him. He's not mobile.

"He goes back and slings it. If we make him hold the ball a little we've got a chance to get some sacks," Parcells added.

MEANWHILE, GIANTS quarterback Scott Brunner says the best way to stop the Packers' explosive offense will be to keep it off the field.

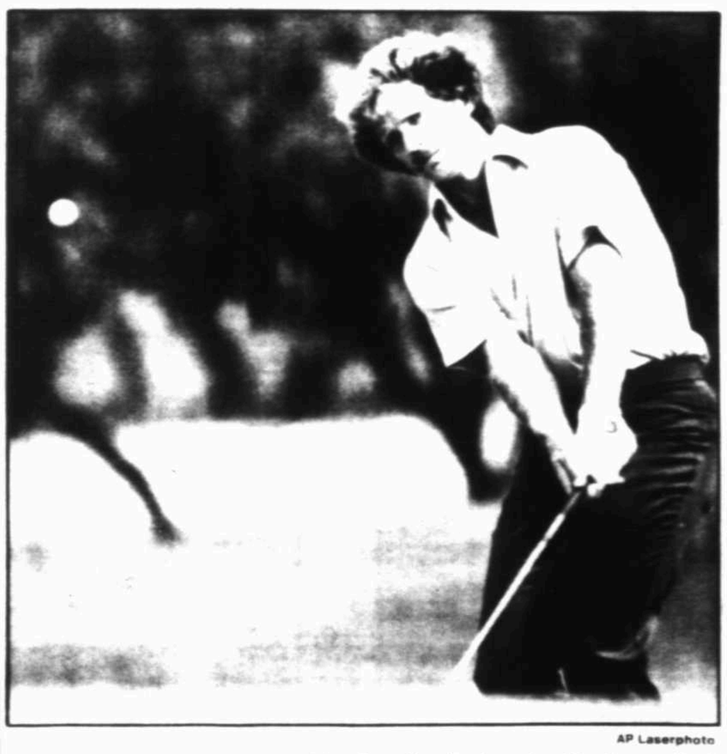

"It will be our job to limit their opportunities," said Brunner, referring to the Giants' offense. "And we're going to have to score when we do have the ball. Green Bay is phenomenal. They can score from anywhere on the field."

The Packers have averaged nearly 30 points a game, but their defense has surrendered a similar number and ranks near the bottom in league statistics. The Giants have averaged less than 12 points a game and given up an average of 19 per game.

In the National Football Conference, the Giants offense ranks 13th in first downs, 12th in scoring and last in passing.

"We've been hot and cold against them," said Brunner, whose father, John, is the Packers' offensive backfield coach. "We just have to put together four quarters of offensive football against them."

Parcells hinted last week that he may try to confuse the Packers with a variety of defenses, including the possibility of switching two-time Defensive Player of the Year Lawrence Taylor from outside to inside linebacker. Parcells said he was considering the move because inside linebacker Harry Carson will be out at least five weeks with a knee injury.

Sheehan posts two-shot Inamori Classic victory

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Patty Sheehan posted a two-stroke victory Sunday in the $175,000 Inamori Classic and vaulted into first place in the points race for Player of the Year in the Ladies Professional Golf Association.

After sharing the second-round lead with former college teammate Juli Inkster, Sheehan shot a final-round 71 for a total of 209, 10-under-par, at the Torrey Pines Golf Course for the $26,250 first prize.

The tournament was reduced to 54 holes because of fog that canceled play last Thursday.

Inkster finished at even-par 73 for the day and settled for the second prize of $17,150 in her sixth tour event ever. Inkster won the Safeco Classic last week in Seattle, Wash.

Nancy Rubin finished third after a 69 Sunday, giving her a 212 total.

In repeating as the tournament champion, the 27-year-old Sheehan notched her eighth victory over three years and her fourth of this season.

The duel between Sheehan and Inkster, who played together during the 1979-80 school year at San Jose State University, turned on the 145-yard sixth hole where Sheehan recorded a birdie for the third consecutive day while Inkster suffered a bogey. The two had been tied until that time.

Sheehan built her lead to three stokes before suffering a bogey, only her third of the tournament, that allowed Inkster to move within one stroke at the end of 14 holes.

But on the 15th hole, Inkster had trouble when a shot landed in a divot and she fell two strokes behind once more.

The win pushed Sheehan ahead in the points race, 58-54, over JoAnne Carner, who finished eight strokes off the pace in this tourney.

Sheehan boosted her season earnings to $238,836, second to Carner by more than $40,000.

Tabb easy Peking Marathon winner

PEKING (AP) — American runner Ron Tabb survived extreme heat on the way to a near two-minute victory in the Peking International Marathon.

Tabb, from Eugene, Ore., completed the 26 miles, 385 yards Sunday in 2 hours, 18 minutes, 51 seconds. Kjell Erik Staahl of Sweden, the 1981 Peking winner, was second despite stopping for about 30 seconds because of an upset stomach. He was clocked at 2:20:34.

Caldwell wins LaJet for first PGA crown

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

ABILENE, Texas (AP) - Rex Caldwell readily admitted he was starting to wonder about his future on the PGA Tour.

"I was beginning to think that I never would win out here," Caldwell said, then flashed a broad smile. "But I put that thought to rest.

"It took me nine years — almost nine full years — but I finally won."

The victory, after countless disappointments that included two playoff losses and four runner-up finishes this season, was achieved by a single stroke over Lee Trevino in the final round Sunday at the LaJet Coors Classic.

It came on the strength of a closing, 6-under-par 66 by Caldwell and a late 3-putt by Trevino.

Caldwell, who played 40 minutes in front of Trevino, didn't get a share of the lead until he hit a 3-wood second shot to the par-5 18th and 2-putted for birdie.

Trevino, trying to snap a 2-year victory drought, was playing the 15th at that time, and missed the 3-foot second putt only moments after Caldwell had finished.

"I posted my score early, and that seems to work a lot out here," Caldwell said. "Then he missed that little putt and all of a sudden I'm the leader."

Trevino, now in the position of attempting to match Caldwell's 6-under-par total of 282, gave himself a chance with birdie putts of 8 and 15 feet on the 17th and 18th.

Both missed and Caldwell, 33, now a resident of Abilene, became a first time winner.

"The thrill of a life," he said. "I did everything I had to do. That's probably the best round I've ever played. Shooting six under to go get somebody. With that kind of pressure. Probably the best I've ever played."

The victory was worth $63,000 from the total purse of $350,000 and boosted Caldwell's earnings for the season to $279,851, almost three times his previous high.

Trevino, whose last triumph came in the 1981 Tournament of Champions, had a final round 73, one over par, and a 283 total.

Allegre's second chance gives Colts win

By The Associated Press

Raul Allegre's concentration was broken as he headed for the field when one of the Baltimore coaches said, "Good guys get a second chance."

Donned in his white helmet, the rookie then booted a 33-yard field goal with 4:51 gone in overtime to give the Baltimore Colts a 22-19 victory over the Chicago Bears Sunday.

Allegre got his second chance after missing a 45-yarder with three seconds left in regulation time - his only miss of the season.

"You always try to vizualize yourself in these situations, so you expect it if they happen," Allegre said. "I had a feeling it would come down to a field goal."

Allegre had field goals of 37 and 47 yards in the fourth period, giving him a 9-for-9 season record before his miss.

49ers 24, Falcons 20

Joe Montana passed for three touchdowns and the San Francisco defense sacked Atlanta quarterback Steve Bartkowski eight times as the 49ers ended a six-game home losing streak. The 49ers, however, lost running back Wendell Tyler, who suffered a dislocated shoulder, indefinitely.

Atlanta also suffered a big loss as wide receiver Alfred Jackson broke his left collarbone.

Jets 27, Rams 24

Pat Leahy kicked a 26-yard field goal at 8:22 in overtime as the Jets scored a wild, fight-punctuated victory over the Los Angeles Rams. Jets quarterback Richard Todd had one of his best NFL games, completing 37 of 50 passes for 446 yards.

The Rams had sent the game into overtime by scoring a touchdown with 32 seconds left in regulation.

Patriots 28, Steelers 23

Quarterback Steve Grogan and rookie Stephen Starring hooked up on a 76-yard scoring pass play with 3:59 remaining as New England upset Pittsburgh. The loss spoiled Franco Harris' run into the NFL record books.

Harris passed O.J. Simpson to become the NFL's No. 2 career rusher behind Jim Brown. Harris rushed 25 times for 106 yards against the Pats and now has 11,309 career yards on a record 2,689 carries. He trails Brown by 1,003 yards.

Redskins 27, Seahawks 17

Three touchdown passes by Joe Theismann powered the Washington Redskins over Seattle. It was Washington's ninth consecutive road victory.

The Redskins defense shackled Seattle rookie running back Curt Warner, who went into the game as the NFL's leading rusher. Warner picked up just 34 yards on 15 carries.

Vikings 20, Lions 17

Benny Ricardo booted his second field goal of the game midway through the fourth quarter and Minesota held on to nip Detroit. After Ricardo's field goal, the Vikings intercepted Detroit quarterback Eric Hipple for the fifth time in the game.

Bengals 23, Bucs 17

Ken Riley sprinted 34 yards with an interception for a touchdown and Cincinnati went on to win its first game of the season, beating winless Tampa Bay. The Bengals stopped a late threat when Robert Jackson picked off another Tampa Bay pass in the end zone.

Browns 30, Chargers 24

Quarterback Brian Sipe and tight end Harry Holt teamed up for a 48-yard touchdown pass just 1:53 into overtime to give Cleveland its victory over San Diego.

The Browns had tied the game when Chris Bahr kicked a 32-yard field goal with just 18 seconds remaining in regulation.

Raiders 22, Broncos 7

Two touchdown passes from Jim Plunkett to Cliff Branch powered the Los Angeles Raiders to its fourth consecutive victory. Denver scored in the closing moments to avert a shutout, which would have been the Broncos' first ever at home.

Cardinals 14, Eagles 11

St. Louis posted its first victory of the season when veteran quarterback Jim Hart threw a 26-yard touchdown pass to Roy Green with 29 seconds remaining in the game. Hart, a 19-year NFL veteran, played in place of the injured Neil Lomax and completed 12 of 19 passes for 123 yards and two touchdowns.

Dolphins 14, Chiefs 6

Miami survived a mistake-marred first half to beat Kansas City as quarterback David Woodley hit rookie tight end Dan Johnson for one touchdown and fullback Andra Franklin bulled over from the 1 for the other.

Take it off; We want to see this keel

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — "Take it off! Take it off! Take it off!"

Any red-blooded man — or woman, for that matter — who had ever been at a burlesque show has heard such exhortations ring around the rafters.

Now the same urgent yells are being aimed at a very unique lady — a sailboat 64 feet long with 52,000 pounds of displacement.

She's Australia II, poised to try to wrest the fabled America's Cup from Yankee hands in the seventh and deciding race of the ancient yachting series.

Win or lose — and the invaders are favored to take the lumpy silver trophy first won by the Americans 132 years ago and never lost — the 1983 series has revolved around the mystery hidden behind Australia II's green and blue skirts.

A privileged few have seen. Fewer are aware of its significance. The one known fact is that it is a winged keel which permits the sleek bridal white Australian craft to cut swiftly through the waves and turn on a dime.

Photographs published today in the Toronto Globe and Mail showed what the newspaper said was the Australia II's keel with wings on either side of it. The photos were reportedly taken by a member of the Canadian syndicate who escaped detection when a fellow Canadian was caught trying to take pictures of the keel last July.

Still no one will know about the boat for sure until the Aussies decide to unveil her secret charms, and the sporting world is treated to the most exciting striptease since Sally Rand mesmerized a panting public with her white fans in the 1930s.

It is certainly a tease.

EARLIER IN this final series, Alan Bond, the multimillionaire head of the Australian syndicate, was asked a seemingly naughty but properly nautical question:

"Now that you have raced her, do you plan to raise her skirts and let us see what is underneath?"

"I don't think so," Bond replied bluntly.

When the controversial Australian boat tied the series last week and moved within a single victory of scoring one of sports' mightiest upsets, the dark secret of the fins became more acute.

"Should Australia II win," the Aussies were asked, "will you raise the boat immediately and let people view the keel?"

A negative reply came from Warren Jones, the Aussie spokesman, who said:

"We think we should accord her greater respect than just dropping her skirts and saying, 'Here it is.'"

Now Bond promises a Wednesday unveiling.

That failed to satisfy everybody.

In the dark of the early morning Saturday, a few hours before Australia II was to face defender Liberty in the showdown race, a scuba dive — the second of the summer - was discovered swimming uncomfortably close to the high-masted, million-dollar miss at her Newport dock.

The man in a black wet suit breathing into a yellow tank surfaced a few docks down the pier and disappeared. Security forces tracked him a few yards before he disappeared like a puff of smoke.

The Aussies have guarded their secret as if it were a king's treasure.

Four men stand guard on the boat all night. Other guards stand vigil at Australia II's loft and the crew's headquarters.

"I am tripling the security," Bond said after Saturday's postponement.

THOSE WHO have seen the boat's bottom say the keel is not all that revolutionary. It consists of a bulb flanked by two wings which are said to give the boat greater acceleration.

The staid old New York Yacht Club, proud of its America's Cup tradition, got alarmed when the Aussie boat virtually flew over the water in the preliminary trials and tried to have it disqualified through new measurements.

Thwarted in that, they tried to buy specifications of the keel from the Dutch firm which tank-tested it for designer Ben Lexcen.

All the blue-coated commodores got edgy when the Australians insisted all official examinations of their boat be done behind closed doors under strict guard.

Finally, the Americans had no other choice than to face the challenger — reluctantly.

Orioles second team to clinch title

By The Associated Press

The Baltimore Orioles became the second major league team to clinch its division when they secured the American League East title Sunday with a 5-1 decision over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Storm Davis and Tippy Martinez combined on a six-hitter, while reserves Jim Dwyer and Joe Nolan homered.

The Orioles began the day needing either a victory or a loss by second-place Detroit to clinch the division. Detroit beat Boston 3-2 Sunday.

Baltimore, which last won the division in 1979, will face the AL West champion Chicago White Sox for the league championship, beginning Oct. 5 in Baltimore.

Major League Baseball

Davis, 13-6, gave up one run on three hits over six innings before being relieved by Martinez, who earned his 19th save.

Kirk Gibson smacked a solo homer to lead Detroit's win. Rookie Ken Schrom scattered six hits for his 14th victory as Minnesota took Kansas City 7-1. John Montefusco won his fourth consecutive American League game and Roy Smalley drove in three runs as New York beat Cleveland 6-4. Bob Stoddard retired 15 consecutive batters at one point to pitch Seattle over Texas 2-1.

LaMarr Hoyt won his 12th consecutive game for his major league-leading 23rd victory as the White Sox dumped California Angels 8-4.

Rance Mulliniks lined a three-run homer in the top of the ninth to give Toronto a come-from-behind 8-6 victory over Oakland.

IN THE National League, Rafael Ramirez and Glenn Hubbard each had two-run singles and Brett Butler a solo homer as Atlanta moved within 3½ games of first-place Los Angeles Dodgers in the West with a 7-1 win. The Dodgers' magic number remained at five. Los Angeles has seven games remaining, Atlanta eight.

Pete Rose pinch hit a single with the bases loaded in the 10th inning, boosting Philadelphia to a 6-5 victory over St. Louis which extended the surging Phillies' winning streak to 10 games. The Phillies now lead the National League East by four games over Pittsburgh and have a magic number of three.

Al Oliver's two-run single lifted Montreal past Pittsburgh 5-3.

Dann Bilardello hit a homer and a bases-loaded double to drive in three runs as Cincinnati beat San Diego 5-2. Reggie Patterson won his first major league game and Larry Bowa had four singles to pace a 15-hit attack as Chicago defeated New York 11-7. The Mets clinched last place in the NL East with the loss. Louis after nine innings.

In a late game, it was San Francisco blanking Houston, 3-0.

Lendl beats McEnroe for Transamerica title

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ivan Lendl overcame early wildness, crushed John McEnroe in the second set tie-breaker, then outdueled the top seed in the third set Sunday night to post a 3-6, 7-6, 6-4 triumph in the finals of the $265,000 Transamerica Open tennis tournament.

Lendl snapped a string of three losses this year to McEnroe, who had beaten him in the Wimbledon semifinals, and took an 8-7 lead in their head-to-head matches.

The second-seeded Czechoslovakian native, who earned $40,000 to boost his winnings for 1983 to $1,184,878, made repeated errors in the first set. He was broken in the sixth game, and after an exchange of serves, McEnroe closed out the set with his fourth ace.

McEnroe then broke Lendl in the first game of the second set. After each held, McEnroe got into trouble for the first time in the fourth game.

Lendl hit two forehand winners and McEnroe doublefaulted, to scattered applause from the generally pro-McEnroe crowd at the Cow Palace. McEnroe fought back to 30-40, but was called for another double fault. McEnroe disputed the call, complaining the ball was inside the line, while Lendl turned to a ballboy and asked, "Can I go home?"

When play resumed, Lendl took the lead for the first time, 3-2, with the help of two aces. McEnroe didn't give up a point on his next four service games, but Lendl also held his serves to send the set into a tie-breaker.

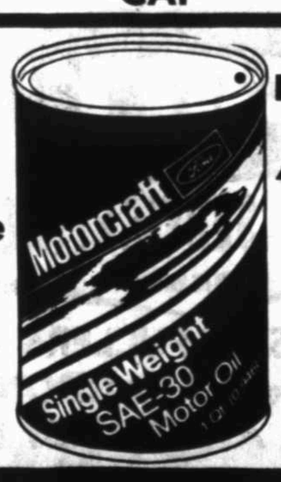

Lendl won the tie-breaker 7-4 to even the match. After Lendl held service to win the first point of the tie-breaker, they each had their serves broken until Lendl held to 6-3 with an ace. McEnroe won his first serve to make it 6-4, but Lendl then drilled a superb forehand return down the line out of McEnroe's reach to capture the set.

The third set went with service until Lendl broke McEnroe in the seventh game to take a 4-3 lead. Again, Lendl's return of serve was the winner, a forehand out of the reach of McEnroe's backhand. Lendl held to 5-3 and McEnroe saved a match point while holding to 5-4. Lendl then served out the match at love, capping it with a service winner.

Lendl, Connors top players in Super tourney

TOKYO (AP) — Ivan Lendl and Jimmy Connors, ranked second and third in world tennis, will lead a field of 32 top players from 10 countries to the 1983 Seiko Super Tennis tournament in Tokyo Oct. 25-30, Japanese sponsors announced Monday.

Lendl, 23, of Czechoslovakia, is the two-time winner of the Volvo Masters' title in 1982 and 1983.

Connors, 31, is the five-time U.S. Open champion and 1982 Wimbledon winner.

The $375,000 event, Japan's richest tennis tournament, is expected to be another big confrontation between Lendl and Connors. Two weeks ago in New York, Connors beat Lendl in the U.S. Open final in four sets.

The Seiko Super carries first prize money of $75,000 for singles and $18,000 dollars for doubles.

Twenty-five players selected for the tournament on the basis of the Association of Tennis Professional (ATP) computer rankings as of Sept. 12, include: Americans Eliot Teltscher and Vitas Gerulaitis and Australian Pat Cash, the 1982 Wimbledon junior and U.S. Open junior champion.

The Sewells, of Midland Country Club, edged out RHCC members Dave and Betty Clarke by one stroke and Jim and Nina Colter by two strokes. The Colters claimed that third place finish in a card playoff.

In the first flight, Gene and Glenda Howard nabbed first place by a card playoff with Doug and Jane Thomas. Both duos scored a 57. Jerry and Brenda Gray of Arlington finished third in a card playoff with a 59.

Larney Fuller and Jane Thomas won the nearest to the pin competition for men and women, respectively. Ralph Huggins won the men's long drive competition, while Mary Robinson was the women champ.

Second Flight: Paul and Bernice Varner, RHCC, 56; Frank and Sylvia Alvarado, RHCC, 57; Tom and Sandy Wilkerson, RHCC, 57.

Luzinski believes in positive thinking

CHICAGO (AP) — Greg Luzinski of the White Sox is a great believer in positive thinking for a batter in the major leagues.

"You have to start out believing you can hit any pitcher in any situation, and then you have to keep right on thinking that," he said. "The biggest thing for a hitter is to avoid dry spells — where you go something like 0-for-20."

Luzinski says the greatest compliment the opposition can pay a power hitter is to deploy its defense against him straightaway. He added that he got that kind of treatment in the 1983 season.

Football more popular than antidecontrol rally

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa — Activists from a growing national coalition of workers and retirees rallied, marched and rang doorbells in this Corn Belt industrial city Saturday, seeking support in their fight against the decontrol of natural gas.

But despite more than a month of planning, the young leaders of the Iowa Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition (CLEC) got indifferent results, for they were up against a foe as unassailably American as Mom's apple pie: the first home game this season of the University of Iowa football team.

The canvass here was part of a national effort to galvanize citizens in the gas decontrol controversy. The national CLEC headquarters in Chicago scheduled rallies, picketing, canvassing and marches in 60 cities in 35 states over the weekend as the culmination of a national "Gas Protest Days" effort this week. The AFL-CIO is co-sponsor of the activities.

In Cedar Rapids, chief organizer Michael Lux had anticipated that several hundred residents of this quiet community of 100,000 located on a bend of the Cedar River in eastern Iowa would turn out at a march, rally and soup kitchen before canvassing in the city's residential areas.

But the morning march drew not many more than 100 and their chant of "Reagan! Reagan! He's no good, send him back to Hollywood!" fell on a downtown almost empty of passersby. Everyone seemed to be heading for the game at the Hawkeyes' stadium in nearby Iowa City or getting ready to settle down in front of a television to watch it.

An hour later, the rally-goers barely filled the first five rows of a big auditorium. And the response to the canvassers Saturday afternoon was cordial but somewhat preoccupied: kickoff time was fast approaching.

Nevertheless, Lux, 23, said he was heartened by the turnout at the morning march and rally later in the basement auditorium of the armory, on a small islet just downstream from the Quaker Oats factory. "It's always good to have more than you expect rather than less," he said philosophically, "but these people represent a broad coalition. They are talking to each other for the first time, and that's positive."

The Iowa coalition targeted Cedar Rapids because it is in the district of Rep. Thomas J. Tauke, R-Iowa, who is on the fossil fuels subcommittee of the House Energy and Commerce Committee. The subcommittee's vote on natural gas legislation is crucial. "Turn up the heat on Tauke!" the marchers cried.

The Reagan administration contends that natural gas deregulation will lead to lower prices by encouraging exploration and increasing supplies. Opponents say deregulation will drive up prices. The national coalition wants to stop the decontrol process that began five years ago and to freeze or roll back gas prices.

A Tauke legislative aide, Ed Senn, said that the congressman does not support the decontrol of natural gas from wells drilled before 1977, but has sought a formula to allow for recovery of gas from old, played-out wells at higher prices.

On a soft, sunny afternoon in the suburb of Marion a few miles northeast of Cedar Rapids, canvasser Kymm Matthew , 23, told residents who answered her knock at the door that if decontrol is not stopped, "the gas bill for a Cedar Rapids family will go up $1,000 in three years." That was enough to get Richard Asby, a laid-off auto mechanic, to sign the Iowa CLEC petitions, which will be sent to Washington.

Asby, 23, who has a wife and two small children, said that he has been out of work for a year since being laid off by a downtown service station, which has since closed because of the continued economic downturn here. "You hardly ever hear of that happening to a gas station," said Asby.

But it is only one more sad reflection of the times here. This city, long a congenial home to major factories producing cereals, processed meat, farm implements and radios, has been hit hard by the recession. Thousands of jobs have been lost, and good times have not returned.

Asby declined to contribute to the coalition, but he and his wife wrote a letter to Tauke voicing opposition to higher gas prices that canvasser Matthew retrieved on her way home.

Most other residents among about a dozen that Matthew and Iowa state Rep. David Osterberg, a Democrat, talked with during their hour of door-to-door work either voiced support or signed the petition. But the canvass team collected only a total of $15 instead of their goal of $12 per house.

In its four years and eight months of existence, Iowa CLEC has grown from a shoestring operation in Des Moines to an organization with a $500,000 annual budget, 92 affiliated organizations and a membership of about 500,000.

Everything you've heard about CBT is probably true

By KARA KUCHINIC
Hearst Feature Service

CHICAGO — Everything you ever heard about agricultural commodities futures at the Chicago Board of Trade — the world's oldest and largest commodities futures market — is probably true.

There, in the unstable world of commodity futures, frenetic traders make and lose millions. The pits are chaotic and exciting. Brightly-smocked traders yell fanatically, flash their hands wildly, whirl and spin as fast as the numbers on the boards change.

From the 9:30 a.m. opening call, the 32,000-square-foot trading floor is bedlam. Winners win big; losers lose big. The pace doesn't let up until the market closes four hours later.

There is no seeming organization in the eight trading pits, but there is method to the madness. The scramble on the floor is really a structured, efficient system at work.

A futures contract is a commitment to buy or sell a certain amount of a commodity on a specific date at a specific price. The price is established by open outcry between traders in the pits. Traders can buy or sell with any other trade in the pit.

Only one commodity is traded in each pit. Where the trader stands indicates what month he trades in. Big brokers stand on the outer steps of the pit, smaller-lot brokers below.

The trading game has several kinds of players. Hedgers are producers or owners of a commodity used in the futures market, such as farmers. They use the market to shift the risk to speculators — who assume the risk and provide venture capital in the hopes of winning big. Hedgers and speculators trade through a broker who receives a commission for excuting orders.

Then there are floor traders — the big traders who are members of the exchange and trade for their own accounts. Their futures are tied up in what happens in the pits, how sound their judgement are, how fast they can trade.

Becoming a trader does not require a college degree, related job experience or a list of references. But it is no place for a novice. The 2,000 traders at the exchange buy a seat for $25,000-$275,000, or lease one for $500-$3,000 per month.

Speculators study the market of a commodity — soybeans, for example. Based on growing conditions, levels of supply and demand around the world, inflation, interest rates and global events, they forecast future soybean prices.

Commodity trading is based on margin. To buy or sell a commodity, an investor puts up only a portion of the value of the contract. This leverage allows him to control the contract's full value for only a 5-15 percent investment.

When investors invstor expect prices to go up, they buy. When they expect prices to go down, they sell. Traders make or lose money with every price fluctuation, or "tick."

Of the thousands of trades made, orders are seldom delivered. Most trades are offset by other trades before the delivery date. Investors are not in commodities because they want 5,000 bushels of January beans, or $4,000 of April plywood. They just want to play the market and come out ahead.

In the midst of the flurry and haste, the yelling of prices, the signaling of hands, the Board sees goods worth millions of dollars exchange hands — at least on paper. Profit can be pursued in plywood, wheat, corn, oats, gold, silver, soybean meal, soybean oil or just plain soybeans.

Anxiously peering at the boards, traders await the latest prices. New trades begin as soon as the last ones are completed. The market rises and falls as bids and offers are made. Traders move in and out of the market quickly.

America's legalized gaming industry will grow at a hefty 10 percent this year, with Atlantic City continuing to narrow the gap with Las Vegas in gross revenues, according to a study by the accounting firm of Laventhol & Horwath.

Saul F. Leonard, national partner for the gaming industry at Laventhol & Horwath, a Philadelphia-based firm which closely monitors the international industry, predicted that if Atlantic City continues to increase its hotel capacity at the present rate, the New Jersey resort would overtake Las Vegas in 1986.

"Atlantic City can't catch Las Vegas without adding new hotels," he said. "But new hotels are being built.

"The Trump-Harris should open on the boardwalk next year. Hilton will open its hotel in the latter part of 1985. Bally will be adding 1,000 rooms in '86 and the Golden Nugget and new Resorts International will open hotels there that year."

Laventhol & Horwath is projecting a gross for Atlantic City's nine casino hotels this year of $1.75 billion, compared to $1.5 billion in 1982, an increase of 16 percent.

At the same time, L&H projects that Las Vegas casinos will produce gross revenues this year of $1.9 billion, compared to $1.75 billion last year, an increase of only 8 percent.

The recession continues to take its toll on Las Vegas.

This year the Riviera Hotel filed for relief from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal Bankruptcy Code. Ownership of the Sands Hotel transferred from the Summa Corp. to the Pratt Hotel group, but then Summa had to take back its property after losses mounted and Pratt was unable to make its payments.

The Dunes hotel was due to be sold to Cliff and Stuart Perlman effective Aug. 1, with the Perlmans agreeing to take over debts of $105 million. They backed out of the sale, however, after it was revealed the hotel's debt was approaching $120 million and rising.

Meanwhile, the sale of the Aladdin Hotel to singer Wayne Newton is reportedly still pending, even though the hotel is in arrears on both its mortgage and its debt to former shareholders.

Analyst Leonard was quite bullish, however, about the near-term for Nevada casinos.

"The whole state of Nevada is starting to show some signs of coming to grips with its recessionary problems," he said in an interview Friday.

Leonard, the host of Laventhol & Horwath's Fifth Annual Gaming Conference in Atlantic City Sept. 28-30, noted that Las Vegas lacked the population base that surrounds Atlantic City. "The number of visitors to Atlantic City this year was the largest of any tourist location in the U.S.," said Leonard. "That's in a city that was in absolute decay five years ago and still is except for the gaming hotel development along the boardwalk."

Other analysts were less optimistic about Las Vegas' potential.

This is the Swiss Credit Bank in Zurich, Switzerland, one of the country's main banks. Switzerland's numbered bank accounts and bank secrecy laws, although no longer unique, are coming under attack from within, as well as without, the country.

Bank secrecy under attack

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — It's an insular world of numbered bank accounts and staffs sworn to secrecy that attracts the personal fortunes of financial wizards and ordinary tax dodgers alike.

Switzerland has 572 major banks with assets, according to 1982 figures, of more than $278 billion. And secrecy plays an important part in their popularity.

"Almost no international financial scandal in the past 10 years has not ended up, in part, at a Swiss numbered account," said Beat Koppler, secretary of the Swiss Trade Union Confederation.

As a result, Swiss commercial secrecy laws are now under attack and financial observers say that the rules are slowly being changed — despite fierce resistance from the country's bank managers.

The case of oil trader Marc Rich and his partner Pincus Green, who are believed hiding in Switzerland, is only the latest incident to place Swiss banking laws in the spotlight. The two men were indicted Sept. 19 in New York, along with two of their companies, on charges of conspiring to evade $48 million in U.S. taxes on illegal oil profits.

Tax evasion is not an extraditable offense in Switzerland.

The Rich case has fueled an on-going debate over proposed reforms to the 1934 banking law which was passed originally in reaction to demands from Nazi Germany that the accounts of German refugees be made public.

Switzerland's secretive banking laws are no longer unique, and the industry is facing increasing competition from Luxembourg, Austria, Panama, the Bahamas and the Cayman Islands.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Policies swing back and forth

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — For reasons that psychologists may understand but that most people find baffling, federal policies over the years seem to lurch from extreme to extreme.

Tax policy, for example. Investment incentives enacted in an attempt to steer investments into socially or economically desirable areas may in, just a few years, be condemned as loopholes to be closed.

Monetary policy in the decade before Paul Volcker seemed to veer from the left lane to the right and back again, like a car whose driver just couldn't find the delicate touch needed for power steering.

And fiscal policy has been marked by fears of an economy getting out of hand, like a fire, followed by a renewed sense of urgency about putting some heat back in the industrial sector and getting the economy moving again.

Regulatory policy probably has followed the pattern longest of all, with attitudes toward anti-trust, workplace conditions, minimum pay scales, union and management activities and the like shifting by the decade.

Now the Securities and Exchange Commission has announced a twist of policy that seems to reinforce the web and warp of the pattern: It has greatly reduced the amount of information that corporate managements must provide shareholders.

Most of the SEC deregulation concerns the personal remuneration of executives, which is the same subject matter of stiff SEC regulations imposed as recently as the administration of President Jimmy Carter.

Back then, it was found, the managements of many corporations were unfairly fattening their wallets with all sorts of perquisites that had nothing to do with running a company. In effect, the perks were ripoffs.

They still exist in some companies, as any literate shareholder realizes when he opens his corporate annual report. In themselves, perks are neither good nor bad; the controversy is over the exercise of them.

Are executive bonuses and incentives based on profits justified? What then, is the justification of the executive's regular salary? Isn't he supposed to do his best at all times?

What are shareholders to make of golden parachutes, those contracts written by executives for executives that guarantee income even if they are fired?

Stock options? The popular justification for these opportunities to buy stocks at a discount, and with little or no risk, is that they are needed to keep good people from jumping to other companies. Is this always so?

Consider consulting contracts. What can you make of large corporations honoring retiring executives with lucrative contracts, knowing at the time that the executive will seldom if ever be called upon for advice.

The list of perks and the varieties of income are limited only by the imagination of those who benefit from them. Free rides on the corporate jet, low-cost or no-cost vacations, tickets, bonuses not based on incentives...

In the spirit of deregulation, the Securities and Exchange Commission this week decided that companies must reveal less about such things, since some of these practices, it suggested, are irrelevant to investment decisions.

Hereafter, it said, income information will be required only of directors and officers in policy-making functions, rather than for all officers and directors. Salaries must be reported only for the five highest-paid people.

In stiffening the requirements just a few years ago, the very opposite reasoning was used by advocates of full disclosure. How management reimbursed itself, they insisted, was vital to the investment decision, a viewpoint that Harold Williams, a former SEC commissioner, reiterated last week.

There is any even larger irony, however, that hasn't been addressed. Corporate management is the hired hand. Shareholders are, in theory anyway, the owners. And owners generally like to know what they are paying the help.

Banks confused over reporting interest

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have owned municipal bonds for many years. When an interest payment comes due, I clip the appropriate coupon from a bond and cash it at my bank. Beginning with coupons I have cashed this year, the bank has asked for my Social Security number. Furthermore, the bank informs me it will issue Forms 1099, listing the amount of the interest — one copy to me and one to the Internal Revenue Service.

Why? Municipal bond interest is not subject to federal income tax.

Doyle

A. The short answer is that your bank and lots of other banks goofed. There is no requirement that banks or other "middlemen," such as brokers, who cash municipal bond interest coupons obtain your Social Security number as a "taxpayer identification number" or issue 1099s for that tax-free inerest.

The fact that many banks have been doing so has to be chalked up to mass confusion over some of the compliance provisions in the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, which are aimed at catching people who have not been reporting taxable interest.

Since Jan. 1, 1983, your bank has been required to obtain your Social Security number when you cash a coupon for taxable interest from such things as corporate bonds and U.S. Treasury bonds and notes or when you collect interest by redeeming "discount securities," such as U.S. Treasury bills or Series E and EE, U.S. Saving Bonds.

As the middleman in the interest payment process, your bank must issue 1099s no later than Jan. 31, 1984, for 1983 taxable interest payments.

But, because interest from "municipals" — bonds issued by states and their political subdivisions — is free from federal income tax, those reporting rules don't apply.

When you cash a bond interest coupon at your bank, the bank sends the coupon to the bond's paying agent in a "shell envelope." If it's a municipal bond coupon, you can certify on a line provided on the shell envelope that the interest is tax free. No Social Security number need be provided. No 1099 should be issued.

The original IRS regulations on this did not provide for tax-free certification on the shell envelopes. Hence, the confusion. Revised regulations straightened things out. By this time, all banks should be squared away, but the mailbag indicates some aren't.

Q. I have cashed a number of municipal bond interest coupons this year. Until recently, each time I did this, the bank took my Social Security number and issued me a Form 1099. The bank has sent copies of those 1099s to the Internal Revenue Service. Will I have to report that interest on my income tax return, even though it is tax exempt? Won't this cause confusion?

A. Unless the rules are changed, on your 1983 federal income tax return, you will be required to report all municipal bond interest for which 1099s have been filed.

Preliminary drafts of 1983 returns show you will list that tax-free interest on Part 1, Schedule B of your Form 1040, where you report other interest you received. There will be a line there to exclude or subtract that tax-free interest. As a result, you won't pay tax on it.

As in previous years, you won't have to report municipal bond interest for which no 1099s have been issued. For federal income tax purposes, you just ignore that interest and don't list it anyplace on your return.

The procedure for reporting and then excluding municipal bond interest for which 1099s have been filed will be similar to the method used for tax-free interest from all savers certificates.

Confusing? You know it is, just like almost everything concerning taxes. The taxpaying public's cries for a simplified federal tax code falls on deaf ears at Endsville-on-the-Potomac.

Q. After putting $2,000 into an IRA in December, 1982, I listed that $2,000 as an "adjustment to income" on Line 25 of my Form 1040, 1982 federal income tax return. As a consequence, I did not pay income tax on that money. I have already made my $2,000 IRA contribution for 1983 and assume I will list it the same way on my 1983 return.

However, the $4,000 I have in my IRA has earned interest in 1983. Will I be required to report that interest on my 1983 federal income tax return?

A. No. That's the beauty of an IRA. You not only don't pay tax on the money you put into it, but you don't pay tax on the money it earns — in interest and-or dividends — until you withdraw it. You're not required to list on your tax return the interest that is building up on your IRA. Everything in your IRA remains tax-sheltered, until you make withdrawals.

Gold prices increase

LONDON (AP) — The dollar skidded on world money markets early today in reaction to a sharp drop in the U.S. money supply. Gold prices rose.

On Friday, the U.S. Federal Reserve reported a $3.5 billion slump in its M1 index of the amount of money in circulation.

Traders generally view contractions in the money supply as a sign the Fed will drop interest rates, which reduces the dollar's value as an investment.

Early today, Eurodollar deposit rates — interest paid on dollars held in Europe — dropped 1⁄16 of a point in Frankfurt and the Federal Funds rate — which banks charge one another for overnight cash loans — fell 12 percent.

The major exception to the dollar's slide was in Hong Kong, where there was continued investment turmoil over the future status of the British colony.

OU engineer studying surfacants

NORMAN — It has long been known in the oil fields that mixtures of surfactants are more effective than pure surfactants in enhanced oil recovery efforts.

John Scamehorn, a University of Oklahoma chemical engineer, is working to find out which mixtures work best and why.

Surfactant flooding is used when an oil well has stopped producing sufficient amounts of oil through conventional methods. Water mixed with certain chemicals is injected into the well to increase production.

"Using mixtures of surfactants has several advantages," says Scamehorn, an assistant professor in OU's School of Chemical Engineering and Materials Science. "Surfactants are not adsorbed by the rocks in the producing formation as readily, nor do surfactants precipitate out of the water as easily when mixtures are used.

"I am trying to develop surfactant formulations which more effectively recover oil at a lower cost," he said. "I am taking a systematic look at the molecular structures involved, to determine the optimum mixture of surfactants necessary under specified in-hole conditions to produce the greatest amount of oil from a well."

Using kaolinite, a non-swelling clay commonly found in oil-producing formations, Scamehorn is studying adsorption and precipitation levels for mixtures of various commercially available surfactants. A non-swelling clay is easier to study than other common clays which swell when surfactants are added.

Scamehorn also is testing how effectively the surfactant mixtures recover oil under varying salinity, temperature and other conditions.

His study originally was supported by a grant from OU's Energy Resources Institute, which provides funding to faculty members involved in exploring new concepts in energy research.

Scamehorn has received additional funding totaling $60,000 from the National Science Foundation and the American Chemical Society to continue his studies.

ARCO's ad blitz zaps gasoline prices

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — The average price paid by motorists at name-brand gas stations in California, Arizona and Nevada has dropped by more than four cents a gallon in the month since Atlantic Richfield Co. started an eight-week advertising blitz touting its low prices and heightening oil company competition.

And at the stations of Arco and Shell — perhaps Arco's fiercest competitor — prices fell even more, according to Dan Lundberg, publisher of the Los Angeles-based Lundberg Letter, which tracks gasoline prices and oil company market shares.

The price declines came after a month in which Arco's share of the market in the three states dropped 3.9 percent from its share a month earlier and 1.34 percent from its percentage of July 1982, one year earlier, Lundberg said in an interview.

Marketing experts at Arco were not available to comment on Lundberg's report.

Although the Los Angeles-based company's share of the market for the seven months from January through July grew 1.96 percent, Lundberg said that the gains came early in the year.

"Arco has lost some of its momentum," the publisher said.

Figures are not yet available to indicate whether some of that momentum has been revived by Arco's current television and radio advertising campaign, which warns motorists, "You just might be paying a lot more for gasoline than you have to."

However, in the four weeks since the ads began, motorists throughout the three-state region apparently are paying less for gas than they were.

The average price of leaded regular gasoline sold by the major oil companies dropped to $1.1397 a gallon as of Sept. 9, from $1.1828 as of Aug. 12—four days after Arco's ad blitz began.

Average Arco prices on leaded regular fell to $1.1227 a gallon from $1.1743. Average Shell prices fell to $1.1564 a gallon from $1.2019.

Arco has kept the retail gasoline industry churning since early 1982, when the company announced that it was abandoning credit card sales and passing the savings on to motorists. The company's share of the market here subsequently rocketed and gas prices fell.

Other companies scrambled for competitive strategies. Shell announced it would accept anybody's credit cards and offered a single-tier price structure that put the same price on gasoline bought with credit cards as with cash. Other companies came up with different approaches.

At July's end, Lundberg said, the big winners appeared to be Shell, whose market share had increased 4.61 percent over the same month of a year earlier and 1.04 percent for the year. Union Oil Co.'s share was up 5 percent over July, 1982, levels and 0.47 percent for the year, he said.

Ingredients for cornbread read like it would feed an army: 3 pounds of flour, 1 cup of baking powder, 1/2 cup of salt, 1 quart of oil. And then it's poured from giant measuring cups onto large baking trays.

Margaret Henry raises the lid on steaming food ready for the 350 students who eat at Midland High School cafeteria. Manager of that cafeteria, her world consists of jumbo machinery and elephant-sized recipes.

The 100 percent ground meat from the U.S. government has been cooked and seasoned and is ready for dipping onto a nacho basket.

She dabs her finger in the spoon and then to her mouth before pronouncing the pinto beans ready to be consumed. If it doesn't taste good to her, she says, it won't taste good to the students.

Culinary Artist

Margaret Henry lives in a world of big measures — oversized recipes and jumbo utensils. But there's one ingredient she's never out of and that's spirit.

She supervises a kitchen where enough food is cooked each day that could feed one person for a year. Her clientele is elite — Midland High School students and faculty.

Cooking is something Mrs. Henry knows and does well. "I've been cooking since I was 17," she says spryly.

MRS. HENRY worked for 21 years in a resident's home here before her employer moved. She applied for a job with the school system, was assigned to Edison, now Midland Freshman High, for nine years before being advanced to the manager position at MHS five years ago. And when she's off work, Mrs. Henry is home brewing up something for her family, or her friends, or her church, or anyone who drops by.

She starts the day at 6:45 a.m. when she shows up to cook breakfast at the school. By 8 a.m., breakfast is over, and the others have arrived to begin preparing the lunch menu.

One recent day, it was burritoes and chili, nachos, chicken fried steak, hamburgers, a variety of sandwiches, cornbread and pinto beans. Each woman had her assignment. Silently and quickly they went from one job to another, Mrs. Henry moving among them, checking the taste and quality of each item.

SIXTEEN pounds of pinto beans were simmering in a 3-foot tall bean pot. She lifted the lid and dipped a long-handled spoon in to test the doneness. Later, after another employee had seasoned the beans, Mrs. Henry spooned out a small amount of the liquid, dabbed a finger into it and then into her mouth.

Her eyes took on a thoughtful look, she shrugged her shoulders and said, "Tastes OK to me."

She explains later her philosophy: "I nose into everything in order to have it right, I have to see it and taste it. I wouldn't serve anything I wouldn't eat myself."

By 10:30 a.m., the 25 pounds of ground meat was browned and seasoned, the 20 pounds of cheese melted into a sauce for the nachos, the 3 pounds of flour baked into slices of cornbread, the 10 heads of lettuce and 15 pounds of tomatoes chopped up for the salad.

The government provides "only the best" in food, she notes. It's butter, not margarine, that is used. It's 100 percent cheese — no cheese substitutes. And the ground beef is all meat — no additives.

SCHOOL cafeteria food has changed in the past few years, she says. Although the regulations appear sometimes unrealistic with their 2 ounces of this, 2 ounces of that and 2 ounces of something else on the plate, Mrs. Henry tries to make it taste good. And the menus have changed drastically to better fit students' wants.

"A lot of people think cafeteria food is no good, but it is. To compete with the fast food places, we have to have a lot of different things," she said. "It's not that expensive to eat in the cafeteria. Since we have multiple choices we don't hear the kids go 'yuk.'"

Throughout the years, however, one thing hasn't changed in that cafeteria and it is Mrs. Henry's attitude.

"I really take an interest in the kids. If I can't take an interest in the kids and the people I work with, I might as well not come to work. They're looking for a friendly face."

SHE'S TAKEN special courses for her job and has been verified as a manager by the Certified Texas School Food Association.

But she didn't always work in a kitchen. A native of North Carolina, Mrs. Henry moved to Waco in 1945 after she got married. Her first job was behind the cosmetics counter at a drug store "before integration came along. I was the first black to run a counter and take money."

She was advanced to managing the store's snack bar and later moved to Midland with her husband, an independent body mechanic. Her three children grown, she still keeps a watch on them and gives support when needed.

MRS. HENRY gives the cheese sauce another twirl with a 24-inch whisk and tells her employees to begin dipping the food into the large silver-colored serving pans.

At 3 p.m., when the dishes are washed and put away, the counters clean and the floors sparkling, Mrs. Henry goes home to cook a full meal, starting out planning for four to five persons. Before the evening is over, often more have helped to scrape the plates clean.

She's also the official cook for her church, Macedonia Baptist. "Oh, I love to bake — cakes, pies, bread." But sometimes she can't eat it on her diabetic diet.

When the church needs a special meal, Mrs. Henry does it. When the church needs to cook food for a grieving family after a funeral, Mrs. Henry is called.

Her life is not lacking ingredients, she notes. Sometimes, in fact, "it's too full."

These are file photos of the five people abducted from a Kentucky Fried Chicken Restaurant Friday night. From left are Opie Hughes, Joey Johnson, David Maxwell, restaurant manager Mary Tyler, and Monty Landers. Bodies of the five victims have been tentatively identified by police as those abducted from the Kilgore, Texas restaurant.

Robbers leave few clues to killers of five

KILGORE, Texas (AP) — "A few bullet fragments" are the only clues to the trail of thieves who abducted five people from a fast-food restaurant, made them lie face down near a country road and shot them in the back of the head, officials say.

Investigators on Sunday combed the area where the bodies were found for seven hours, seeking clues to the killers.

"There's no probability of a quick solving," said William Brown, a Rusk County district attorney's investigator. "We're just running down leads as they come in," he said. "We don't have much."

The bodies of the three men and two women were discovered Saturday off a rural road about 15 miles south of Kilgore, which is about 110 miles east of Dallas. Investigators said four were found together, the fifth about 50 yards away, and all had been shot in the back of the head.

"A few bullet fragments — that's all we have to go on," said Rusk County Sheriff Mike Strong.

The robbery occurred Friday night and was discovered when a woman went to the Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant to find it empty and stained with what turned out to be chicken blood.

"I don't recall the last time anything like this happened. We were hoping to find the victims alive, tied to a tree or something — anything," said Assistant Police Chief R.C. Heaton.

"The whole community is numb," said the Rev. Don Beebe, a Baptist minister. "Everybody is just shocked."

Kentucky Fried Chicken officials in Louisville, Ky., said Sunday they were offering a $25,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killers.

About $2,000 was missing, and a regional Kentucky Fried Chicken spokesman said the restaurant's employees failed to make a scheduled deposit earlier in the day.

"Hanging is too good for whoever did it," said Joe Weatherford, a fraternity brother of three of the victims at Kilgore College. "It's hard to feature anyone who would do such a thing. The money? That works out to $400 per person. That makes life awful cheap."

Three of the victims, David Maxwell, Monty Landers and Joey Johnson, all 20, were students at the junior college. Maxwell, an off-duty employee of the restaurant and whose wife is pregnant, and Landers had gone to the restaurant to wait for Johnson to finish closing, officials said.

The body of the restaurant's assistant manager, 37-year-old Mary Tyler, was found beside those of the fraternity brothers. Investigators believe Opie Ann Hughes, 39, tried to flee as the others were shot. Her body, clad in her restaurant uniform, lay sprawled 50 yards away.

Mrs. Tyler, who leaves a husband and four children, had worked at the restaurant about 2½ years and never expressed reservations about working at night, said her brother-in-law, Bob Tyler. "I guess you always assume things like this only happen to someone else."

Young widow contemplates life

GOOD SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — Lana Maxwell is starting life over again — with three strikes against her.

She is a widow. Her husband, David, was among five people abducted and slain near Kilgore during the robbery of a fried chicken restaurant.

She is young — only 18 — and doesn't have a job. She quit working and going to school after she married Maxwell in December.

And she is pregnant. If the baby is a boy, he will be named David Maxwell Jr.

The child is due March 10, the day before her husband would have turned 21.

Mrs. Maxwell recalls meeting David when she started school at Kilgore College.

"A couple of friends introduced us at a dinner table at school," she told The Dallas Morning News.

That was in March 1982. The couple married on Dec. 21.

"Out of all the other people I ever met, he was the gentlest," she said. "And he made me realize that life wasn't something you just trudge through. He got me to enjoy it. Some people make their own lives miserable. He made his wonderful."

Part of it was a sense of humor, she said.

At a dealership-sponsored auto giveaway in nearby Longview, Maxwell brought in swimsuit-clad sorority girls to cheer on the contestants.

When the Muscular Dystrophy Association needed a fund-raiser, it was Maxwell who persuaded the Phi Theta Omega fraternity — of which he was president — to push a beer keg all the way to Louisiana and back to raise money.

Annual recruitment day to be held

Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Midland is holding its first annual Volunteer Recruitment Day today. In an effort to increase community awareness of the need for more Big Brothers and Sisters, more than 150 volunteers and parents will be promoting the program.

Aimed at serving the children of single-parent families, Big Brothers-Big Sisters provides a special friend who gives guidance, understanding and companionship.

The Midland branch of the National agency started in 1975 but has experienced rapid growth over the past two years. More than 130 children are now matched with a Big Brother or Sister volunteer, but with 80 children still on the waiting list, the Recruitment Day is designed to bring in more adults interested in helping a single-parent child.

Governor's conference convenes

AUSTIN (AP) — Problems caused by this summer's drought and concern over public education top the agenda when 14 members of the Southern Governor's Association gather this week.

North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt said he would introduce a resolution when the three-day conference begins today.

'Texas Exes' gather for annual Lone Star style barbecue

BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — In the 1830s, John Quincy Adams argued for Massachusetts in Congress against admitting Texas to the Union. But the 150 "Texas Exes" who gathered here for their annual Lone Star style barbecue didn't seem to mind.

Ranging in age from 2 to 75, members of the Boston Texas Exes Club, which is open to University of Texas graduates or people with ties to Texas, gathered in a pine grove deep in the heart of New England on Sunday for their annual fete in honor of the University of Texas' 100th birthday.

"We'll do just about anything to pretend we're in Texas," bragged Exes Club Vice President Will Bowen.

The group feasted on 67 pounds of beef brisket that sizzled over a hickory wood fire.

"Mesquite wood is the best, but I'm waiting for a shipment from my boy in Texas," apologized club cook Earl Koester, a Raytheon engineer from Sequin, Texas, now living in Bedford.

Picnic tables were laden with guacamole salad, a potato salad decorated with the letters "U.T." in pimentos, pinto and chili beans, baskets of Mexican garlic bread, tostados, jars of ome-grown jalapeno and green chilis — grown and canned by club members, as well as mounds of Texas fudge cakes, pralines and pecan pie.

Much of the fare served and consumed by members of the Boston club was "imported."

"We go to Texas at Christmas," explained Alice Valle, a Newton psychiatrist from Belton, Texas, "and return loaded down with Wolfe Brand chili out of Corsicana."

Motorist stabbed

ODESSA — Two men remained in the city jail this morning after they allegedly beat and stabbed a motorist whose car had run out of gas early Sunday morning.

Police said the victim, 25-year-old Ismael Galindo of 6401 Jay St., had run out of gas and was pushing his car to a nearby convenience store when two men in a passing auto yelled obscenities at him.

The resulting argument left Galindo in serious condition at Medical Center Hospital with facial bruises and stab wounds to the neck and shoulder. The suspects were arrested and formal assault charges were to be filed sometime today.

The incident occurred near the intersection of Clements and South Grant streets about 2:10 a.m. Sunday.

Many hated slain land salesman

QUINLAN, Texas (AP) — Chance McMillan, a 65-year-old land salesman, made so many ememies from people he dealt with that it would take "the next five years to weed out a suspect" in his slaying, according to the police chief of this North Texas town.

McMillan, whose body was found Aug. 11, was strangled in his mobile home on the western edge of Quinlan. No one has been charged in his killing.

Police Chief Jim Pierce said law officers don't have an easy task trying to nail down a suspect.

"Using the process of elimination, it would probably take you the next five years to weed a suspect out of the people he beat in land sales," Pierce told The Dallas Morning News. "He had so many enemies that it could have been anybody."

McMillan earned his living and reputation from almost 10 years of questionable land deals in the southern part of Hunt County, a prime territory for land salesmen because of its proximity to Lake Tawakoni, an attractive resort area for moderate-income investors from the Dallas area.

"That area lends itself to problems," said Chris Peterson, who directs the federal regulatory agency that spent almost 10 years trying to bring order to land sales in the Lake Tawakoni area.

"You have a very willing buyer from a metropolitan area, a marginal piece of ground and a person with a profit in mind," Peterson said. "It has all the makings of an area ripe for problems."

Peterson's staff, from the Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration at the Department of Housing and Urban Development, found that some sales in the Tawakoni area were exactly the opposite of what was advertised in local newspapers.

"Escape city problems. Lower blood pressure. Commune with nature," some of the ads said. "Join happy commuter or retreat families."

The advertisements were part of the evidence submitted by HUD in a civil lawsuit filed in 1978 in Dallas federal court. McMillan was one of five people named in the suit, aimed at stopping unregistered sales of the Tawakoni land.

"A major part of our complaints into the Dallas (HUD) office come out of Quinlan," said Tom Visage, a land-registration office field representative for North Texas and southern Oklahoma.

Quinlan, with a population of 1,002, has six real estate companies, The News reported. Some salesmen, such as McMillan, worked out of mobile homes in Quinlan near the edge of Lake Tawakoni.

"The complaint the consumer has it that 'I was promised roads' or 'I was promised water' or 'I didn't get a deed to the land I paid for,'" Visage said.

Odessa man kills himself

ODESSA — As police watched, a 36-year-old Odessa man put a gun to his head and killed himself in the bedroom of a northside house early Saturday night.

Officers said they were called to a disturbance at 1309 E. 44th St. about 8:20 p.m. and could not get anyone to come to the door. They then went to a bedroom window and saw 36-year-old Gary Lee Hall lying on the bed.

Police said Hall, who apparently was asleep, sat up and agreed to talk to them. But instead of coming out of the house, he put a .25 caliber pistol to the right side of his head and pulled the trigger.

He was taken to Medical Center Hospital, where he was pronounced dead at 11:30 p.m. His body was taken to the Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Police said they believe Hall was despondent over marital difficulties.

Judge Odom won't run again

AUSTIN (AP) — Judge Wendell Odom of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals announced today he would not seek re-election in 1984.

Odom said in a brief statement that he would leave the court at the end of his term on Dec. 31, 1984.

Odom, from Houston, was a trial judge for 14 years before being appointed to the court by Gov. Preston Smith.

Burglary suspect jailed

ODESSA — A burglary suspect was jailed after police said they caught him in the act of burglarizing Sam Houston Elementary School about 12:10 a.m. today.

Officers responding to a burglar alarm at the school said they entered the building and saw the 22-year-old Odessa man in an office attempting to steal faculty mail money.

Asked what he was doing, police said the man replied: "I'm just checking out the building." Formal burglary charges were to be filed sometime today.

Ulcer myths persist, doctors say

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Some 500,000 Americans suffer from active ulcers and more than 10 percent of all Americans will at some time be diagnosed as having one. Yet, much of the public remains misinformed about the causes and treatment of ulcers.

Yesterday's common wisdom — that spicy foods, caffeine, alcohol and stress cause ulcers — is now referred to as myth. Ulcers are no longer a male disease. Treatment of this chronic and recurrent condition no longer involves drastic changes in lifestyles, such as limiting diets to bland foods and switching to less stressful jobs.

Seven gastroenterologists — physicians specializing in the stomach and intestines — involved in a program co-sponsored by the University of Connecticut School of Medicine and the University of California, San Diego School of Medicine, have launched a national campaign to educate physicians and the public about this new information.

An ulcer is a break or a hole, usually in the lining of the duodenum, the portion of the small intestine leading out of the stomach. Although about 80 percent of ulcers are duodenal, ulcers can occur in the stomach, too, said Dr. Seymour M. Sabesin, a professor of medicine at the University of Tennessee Center for the Health Sciences in Memphis.

An ulcer, which is similar to a canker sore, can break through a blood vessel, causing bleeding into the intestines, which may lead to shock. If it perforates the intestines, the contents of the intestines can pour into the abdominal cavity and cause inflammation of the cavity lining, known as peritonitis. Or, the ulcer can scar or swell, obstructing the food traveling through a tube from the stomach into the duodenum, and lead to vomiting.

About 20 percent of ulcer sufferers experience these types of complications, and 8,000 to 9,000 patients per year die from them, said Sabesin.

However, the most common symptom and complaint about ulcers is the pain, a burning, gnawing feeling in the pit of the stomach, he said.

Ulcers are partly caused by the secretion of acid and pepsin in the stomach; that much doctors do know. However, since everybody produces some acid, and since only 20 percent to 30 percent of ulcer sufferers produce more acid than the average population, acid secretion cannot be the only factor in getting an ulcer, said Sabesin. Those other factors, though, are not so apparent.

Doctors have believed that ulcers are caused by certain foods. Yet, there is no evidence that people who eat spicy foods have a higher incidence of ulcers than those who keep to a bland diet, said Dr. Jon I. Isenberg, professor of medicine at UC, San Diego. And, decaffeinated coffee stimulates as much acid secretion as regular coffee, he said.

A peptic ulcer is a crater in the caused by acid-pepsin digestion boring through the mucosa lining the stomach or upper intestine into the submucosa.

Eating several small meals a day instead of three is no longer considered advisable since eating stimulates stomach secretion. And keeping off alcohol won't make a difference in treating an ulcer either. "The casual drinker is probably no more likely to get ulcer disease than the non-drinker," said Isenberg.

"I'm not very strict on diet," said Isenberg. "If a patient takes a drug to suppress acid production, it doesn't matter what he eats."

There is also no evidence that stress or other psychological factors are to blame for causing ulcers. Research has knocked down the ulcer victim sterotype of the "middle-aged, hard-driven executive," said Sabesin. A blue collar worker is just as likely to develop an ulcer.

The problem with linking ulcers to stress is that stress cannot be quantified, explained Sabesin. A job that is stressful to one person, may not be to another. In the past, people with ulcers were advised to change jobs and other facets of their lifestyles. "It's wrong to force this on the public," he said.

Research has also dispelled the notion that men are the primary victims of ulcers. Fifteen years ago the ratio for the incidence of ulcers in men and women was 10 to one, said Isenberg. Now the ratio is two to one, which suggests that fewer men and more women are getting ulcers.

The only certain links researchers have found to ulcers is smoking.

Non-drinking not always necessary for diabetics

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT-BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service

Alcoholism has been one of the curses of humanity down through the ages. People suffering from this disease have been counted in the millions. Families, careers and lives have been lost in the ravages of its path.

So severe are the effects of excessive alcoholic intake that some people are afraid to use it at all. But, is total abstinence the only way to avoid severe problems? Yes, for some illnesses, but not for all.

Certainly a recovering alcoholic must avoid it, but new studies are showing that the controlled use of alcohol in the presence of certain other diseases may not be all that bad.

Diabetes mellitus, when well controlled, is just such a disease. In the past, millions of diabetics have been told that they must avoid alcohol as part of an agonizingly restrictive diet. Today, not only has the diet been vastly improved, but the occasional use of alcohol is acceptable, even condoned as a normal part of social living.

What does occasional use mean? It was defined in the studies as not more than once or twice a week. Alcoholic beverages (distilled spirits, beer and wine) add approximately 210 calories per day to the diet of the average drinking-age American. When a person with diabetes chooses to use some alcohol, it is important that its effects are better understood, more so than if the disease were not present. If the diabetes is well under control, under normal circumstances the blood glucose level will not be affected by the moderate use of alcohol.

Research has shown us how the alcohol is is used by the body, and why excesses are damaging. Briefly, alcohol (ethanol) is absorbed by simple diffusion both in the stomach and the small intestine, but various kinds of alcoholic beverages are absorbed at different rates depending on their composition.

Generally, distilled liquor is absorbed more rapidly than beer or wine. Diluting with water or other beverages is preferable to "straight shots." Taking food with alcoholic drinks slows down absorption and delays peak levels to a far greater degree than if the same amount of alcohol were taken on an empty stomach.

The amount of alcohol absorbed is also reduced if taken with a meal that is high in carbohydrates, such as pasta, breads, whole grains and vegetables and fruits. In fact, one old-time quick-fix hangover advice was to eat bread and fruit.

However, prevention remains the best choice. The best times for anyone, diabetic or not, to take an alcoholic drink are just before, during or just after a meal.

People with diabetes are better off to limit their alcohol to two equivalents per day. One equivalent is equal to 1½ ozs. whiskey, scotch, rye, vodka, gin, cognac, rum or dry brandy, or 4 ounces dry wine or 12 ounces beer. They should avoid sugar-laced mixes, sweet wines and liquers because of their high sugar content.

Insulin-dependent individuals can take the two equivalents of alcohol in addition to their regular meal plan. No foods should be omitted because alcohol does not require insulin to be metabolized.

Little certain about steroids

Copley News Service

SPRINGFIELD — There are more uncertainties than certainties about steroids, but two things at least are definite: they are big news just now, and their use is definitely illegal.

The first fact actually follows the second — steroids, particularly anabolic steroids, became big news when a number of U.S. athletes withdrew from the Pan American games after it was announced sophisticated tests would be used to assure that participating athletes had not used the illegal drugs.

Steroids are chemical compounds that include sex hormones, bile acids, cholesterol, cortisol and other substances. They are taken by many — maybe most — athletes to increase strength.

Steroids occur naturally in the human body, and are ingested daily in food, but these are not the compounds which are causing the publicity and the problems, according to Philip Dziuk, a University of Illnois professor of animal science.

"We've got the system for taking care of our natural steroids," he said. "But we are not equipped to take care of the synthetic ones. They are very potent."

The anabolic steroids taken by athletes are synthetic — usually synthetic testosterone, an androgen or male sex hormone which is used by both male and female athletes "to emulate a supermale," Dziuk said.

Studies link warts, cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — Two new studies of a virus that causes venereal warts suggest that the virus — which sent nearly 1 million people to their doctors in one year — is a contributing cause of cervical and genital cancer.

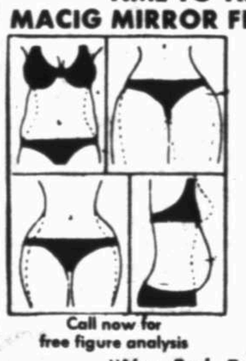

One researcher has found genetic material from the sexually transmitted virus in cervical and genital cancer tumors, he said Tuesday. Another scientist reported that the virus carries a gene very closely related to a known cancer gene.

The virus, known as human papilloma virus or HPV, exists in more than two dozen strains. Certain strains produce common warts on the skin; others cause genital warts.

The strains that produce genital warts constitute one of the most rapidly growing venereal diseases in the United States, surpassing genital herpes, says the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

In 1966, 169,000 American men and women saw their doctors for treatment of genital warts. In 1981, that number soared to 946,000. Less than a third as many people — 295,000 — saw their doctors for herpes.

Two of the newest sugar free offerings now appearing in local stores are Swiss Miss Sugar Free Hot Cocoa Mix and Swiss Miss Sugar Free Chocolate Milk Maker. They join other products already in the supermarkets that contain NutraSweet, the revolutionary sugar-free sweetener that is not artificial like saccharin.

Swiss Miss Sugar Free Hot Cocoa Mix has the familiar rich chocolate flavor at 50 calories per serving, less than half of the calories found in cocoa mixes containing sugar. For best results, simply add hot water and stir; enjoy right away. The cocoa is packaged in economical 20 serving canisters and in handy pre-measured single serving envelopes, 10 per carton.

Swiss Miss Sugar Free Chocolate Milk Maker is a chocolate flavor mix that is added to milk. It makes rich, flavorful, sugar-free chocolate milk which also can be served hot. Because it is sweetened with Nutra Sweet it adds only 14 calories to eight ounces of milk, compared to the 90 calories found in the leading chocolate milk powder, an 84 percent caloric savings. It is available in both 30 serving canisters and in boxes containing 14 pre-measured single serving envelopes.

NutraSweet is the first new sweetener in 25 years to receive U.S. government approval. It is gaining quick consumer acceptance because it does not have the metallic aftertaste of saccharin, nor the calories of sugar. NutraSweet is made by combining two naturally occurring proteins, resulting in a substance 200 times sweeter than sugar. Therefore, only a small amount is needed in sugar free products like those available from Swiss Miss.

Both new sugar free products appeal to those on sugar or carbohydrate restricted diets, yet won't disappoint the demands of non-dieting family members who want quality chocolate flavor in hot cocoa and chocolate milk. In addition, NutraSweet does not promote tooth decay. The pre-measured Swiss Miss chocolate drink envelopes make it easy to tuck them into lunch boxes or to take along on family outings. Look for Swiss Miss Sugar Free products in the chocolate drink mix section of supermarkets.

Laser treatment helps fight serious vision loss

BALTIMORE (AP) — A laser treatment that seals off leaking blood vessels can cut serious vision loss in half for sufferers of ocular histoplasmosis syndrome, an ailment that threatens the sight of 1,500 Americans each year, a national study reports.

The study of 245 patients at 12 medical centers examined the effectiveness of laser treatment in dealing with the syndrome and was directed by Johns Hopkins Wilmer Eye Institute.

Study director Dr. Stuart Fine said the laser treatment reduced by 50 percent the risk of serious loss of central vision in a group of people who were eligible for the special care.

The disease, characterized by leaking blood vessels under the retina, is a potentially blinding eye condition that threatens the sight of some 1,500 Americans a year, said Fine, director of the Wilmer Retinal Vascular Center.

If unchecked, Fine said, the leakage can cause irreversible damage to the macula, the area of the retina responsible for sharp, detailed vision needed for reading or driving a car.

Only 19 percent of the patients receiving laser treatment lost most of their central vision, while 43 percent of the untreated patients experienced a major vision loss within 18 months of entry into the study.

Laser treatment is used to stop the process by burning and sealing off the leaking vessels. The treatment sacrifices some of the patient's side or peripheral vision with the aim of saving the more important central vision.

While the use of lasers to treat eye disease is not new, some opthalmologists have been reluctant to offer the treatment to their patients because of a lack of proof of its effectiveness, said Fine.

DEAR ABBY

In-laws borrow money from their son

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to a man I'll call "George." The problem is his parents. They moved into his house two years ago when they ran into financial trouble, so their bighearted son invited them to live with him temporarily. Both parents are ablebodied and have good jobs, but they live beyond their means and always have. They don't have a dime and owe their creditors thousands of dollars. Both drive expensive new cars and they practically live at the track every weekend. (They are horse crazy.) They owe George $15,000 that I know of, and I'm sure he will never see a dime of it.

George and I were supposed to get married last summer and live in his house, but I refused to move into his house while his parents were there, so there was no wedding.

George says he can't kick his parents out. I say they will stay until he does. This is putting a terrible strain on our relationship. How can I cope with the problem of George's parents? — AT ROPE'S END

DEAR END: Your problem isn't George's parents — it's George. He's suffering from role-reversal: He's the "parent" who can't say no to his spoiled "children." He may be a wonderful son, but unless he is able to (as the Good Book says) "leave his father and his mother and cleave unto his wife," he's a poor candidate for marriage.

Tell him to call you when his parents are out of his house, and if you're still around, you would love to see him.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend (I'll call him 'Lou") has an 18th birthday coming up, which is why I'm writing. Lou's brother told me that their father is giving Lou a trip to Reno with a "call girl" thrown in as a birthday gift.

Lou doesn't know I am aware of this, and so far he hasn't mentioned anything to me about it.

Well, Lou and I share a sexual relationship, and I feel that if he accepts this "gift" (the call girl, I mean), he would be betraying me. Abby, please tell me what you think of a father who would give his son such a gift, and what do you think I should do about it, if anything. — MIXED UP IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR MIXED UP: Years ago some fathers gave their sons such gifts (the call girl, I mean) to introduce them to the ways of the world. Since it's not necessary in Lou's case, tell him that you are aware of the "gift" offer, then leave the talking to him.

DEAR ABBY: I am 24, divorced (I was married quite young for nine months), and I consider myself outgoing, friendly and attractive. I am a nurse and am well-liked by my patients and co-workers. Here's the problem: I've been fixed up with a few friends of friends of mine, but they are all after one thing — sex. I am just not into that with someone I hardly know.

When they discover I won't "put out," I never hear from them again. I'm so discouraged I'm beginning to think there are no decent guys out there. I am not against sex, but certainly not on the first date. I mean, really! I want to meet a man, fall in love and then make love. But all the guys I've met want to go to bed the first night, then they tell you they don't want any serious relationships.

I don't want to get married right now. I just want a nice guy I can go out with for dinner, dancing or a movie.

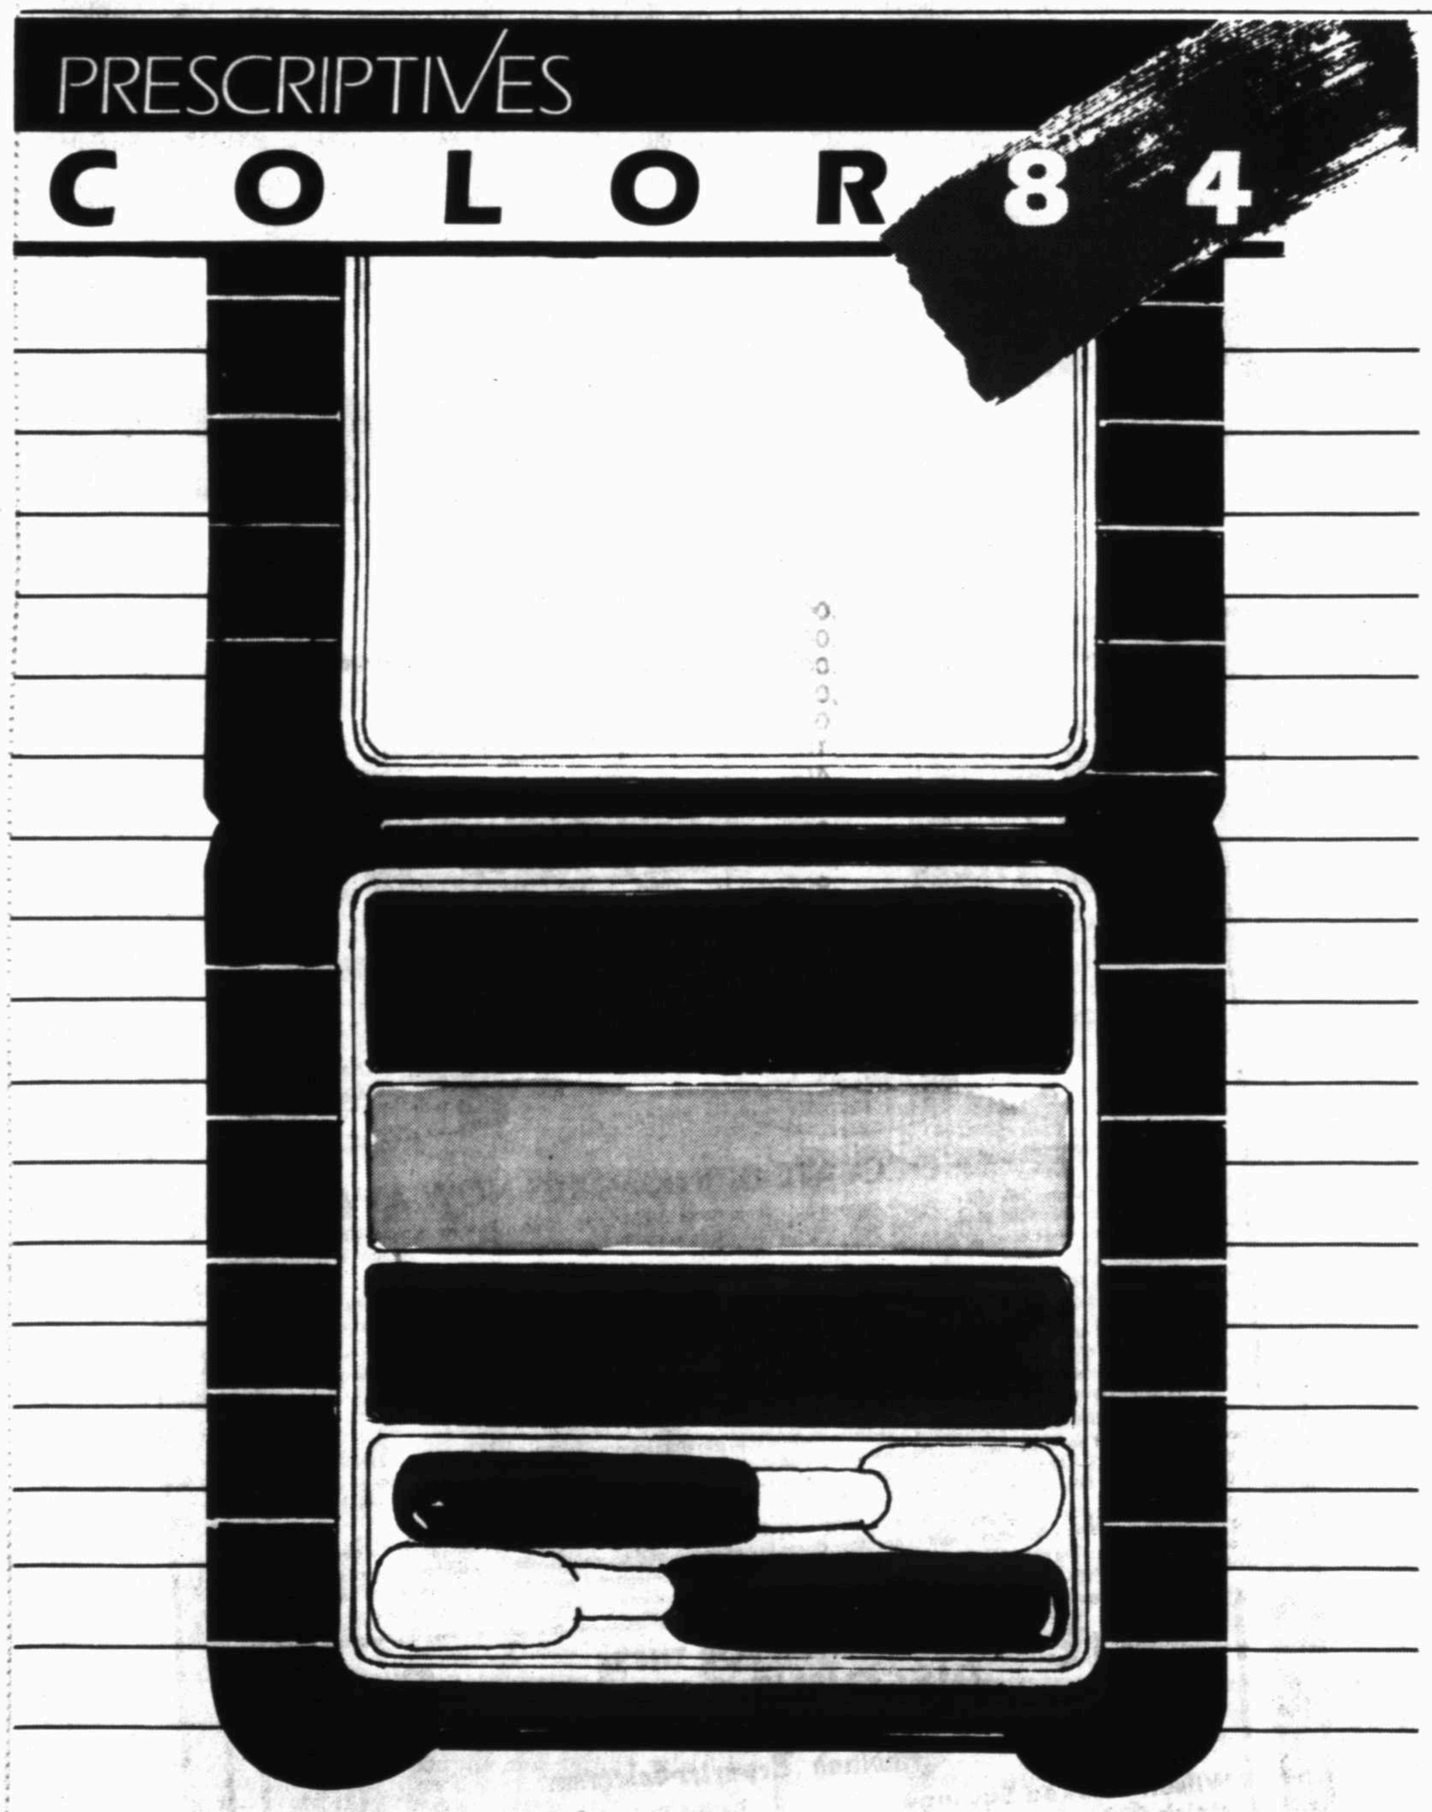

I don't want to go to bars. Where are the nice men? Church is out because there's where I met my exhusband, and he was no better than the rest. Please help me. — SICK OF WEEKENDS

DEAR SICK: I know I sound like a broken record, but I assure you there are some decent men out there. Keep saying no to guys who try to rush you into bed. Be fussy and stay clean. You'll be glad you did ... for the "right man" somewhere out there.

Women engineers work on railroad

MARION, N.C. (AP) — Casey Jones might be surprised if he peeked into the cab of number 92, a coal train rumbling along the line between Erwin, Tenn., and Danton, Va.

At the controls he'd find Neita Lingerfelt, 28, of Jonesboro, Tenn., one of three "Railblazers" working for Clinchfield.

Clinchfield, a division of Seaboard, now employs three women as engineers in what has traditionally been a male field.

Ms. Lingerfelt says she's proud to be a pioneer and mentions that someone recently compared her to Sally Ride, America's first woman astronaut. "Someone told me that I'm a pioneer in a field 120 years old and hers is only 20 years old," she said.

On a recent run on the number 92 from Marion to Bostic, she was at the helm as two 3,000-horsepower GE engines hauled 83 cars, including 11 piggybacks, 13 coal cars and five cars carrying dangerous materials.

Loads of coal have given Ms. Lingerfelt some anxious moments adjusting the throttle and brakes down the mountain.

She says coal is a difficult cargo, with each of the 144 cars holding 100,000 tons. The weight makes the train more difficult to control, especially on grades. On steep grades, "you pray for dynamic brakes," she said.

"I am scared coming off Blue Ridge Mountain," she admits.

But Ms. Lingerfelt said the job as an engineer was physically less taxing than her railroad beginnings as a brakeman, who makes all the moves on the ground, from switching rails to hooking up cars and signaling the engineer.

Because of a business slowdown, Ms. Lingerfelt is working full time as a railroad fireman and assistant engineer. She said she had encountered no discrimination or resentment from her male colleagues.

When the job market improves and she has more experience, she'd like to move into a "shifter" job. A shifter is a train that makes a daily run to an industry and back. It's a 9-to-5 job with the crew going home each night.

Ms. Lingerfelt is following a family tradition by working for Clinchfield. All four older brothers work for Clinchfield, although she's the family's only engineer.

She had joined the Army to become a practical nurse, but turned to railroading after her discharge because the pay was better. She said the strength she developed from Army training helped prepare her for the brakeman's job, which includes uncoupling 75-pound links between trains.

Because she often works a night shift, she said she had little time for other activities.

"Rest is important," she said. "I have to concentrate. I have to think about what kind of engine, what kind of track."

Conversation between the engineer and the brakeman, who rides to the left of the engineer, is minimal as she studies the tracks, the speed signs and the whistle signals.

"They always told me that once I got used to driving a train, it would be just like driving a car," Ms. Lingerfelt said. "But it hasn't got like that yet. I have to think a lot."

School worry causes illness

Copley News Service

It's normal to play hooky occasionally, but some children are so scared of school that they actually become ill. Stomachaches, chest pains and nausea are real and painful to such children.

According to family therapist Dr. Esther Marine, children develop sicknesses to avoid school because of a change in community, a change in schools, family illness, divorce, parental dependence or a new baby at home, among other reasons.

Regardless of the cause, Marine stresses that the most important thing is to get the child back to school as soon as possible.

Before forcing a sick child to attend school, however, it is important to be certain that the illness is not caused by a medical condition.

Therapist acquires 'Aunt Freud' image on talk show

NEW YORK (AP) — Her blunt talk about sex could make the birds and bees blush.

Dr. Ruth Westheimer, a sex therapist with an "Aunt Freud" image who has nonplussed radio listeners, lecture audiences and some of nation's best-known talk-show hosts, concedes she is "not easily shocked."

That frankness, along with her maternal concern, wit and idiosyncratic German accent, have turned the 4-foot-7 dynamo known by fans as "Dr. Ruth" into a celebrity.

"It would be a lie to say I don't love what's happening," Mrs. Westheimer, 54, says. It all began with a local radio call-in show and snowballed into a book, network interviews, an ardent campus following and a new Los Angeles radio program.

At trendy nightspots like Studio 54 and Xenon, people have been dancing to the song "Dr. Ruth," which proclaims with a rapid disco beat: "Don't do something you'll regret. Use protection — don't forget."

The bravely fashionable can buy T-shirts that promote "Sexually Speaking," her popular radio show.

The subject of "all this hullabaloo and celebrity stuff" is, in real life, a psychotherapist and a professor of human sexuality at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

A child of the Holocaust — her parents died in concentration camps after sending her to a Swiss boarding school-turned-orphanage — Mrs. Westheimer migrated at age 16 to Israel, where she was wounded in both legs by cannon shrapnel during the 1948 War of Independence.

After coming to the United States in 1956, she worked in public health and counseled pregnant teen-agers at Planned Parenthood. "I used to think, 'These people I work with are crazy, talking about sex from morning until night without stopping,'" she recalls with amusement.

She was hired to do "Sexually Speaking" on WYNY in 1980, after telling a group of broadcast executives during a speech that if they were going to air suggestive material, they ought to air sex education as well.

Since then, the woman with a voice once described as "a cross between a canary and Henry Kissinger" has been appalling, enthralling, entertaining and educating an average of 150,000 New York listeners each Sunday night, combining explicit sexual how-to's with advice about relationships.

"Sometimes I think it has something to do with my courage," she says of her popularity with listeners, who are screened by a producer before their calls are broadcast via a six-second tape delay. "I don't talk down to them and I answer their questions directly."

Several hundred people call WYNY each Sunday night with questions for Dr. Ruth, according to station manager Frank Osborn. Thirty or fewer make it onto the air.

Before they can talk to Dr. Ruth, the callers must tell their age (they must be at least 16) and question to producer Susan Brown, who reminds them not to use profanity on the air.

When a caller uses the clinical name to describe a part of the body or a sexual technique, Mrs. Westheimer uses clinical terms in her answer.

But when the caller uses a colloquial term in his or her question, Mrs. Westheimer replies using the same language. Some listeners admittedly find it shocking or amusing when Mrs. Westheimer, in a no-nonsense tone of voice, utters street terms.

Panel may endorse penalties

ATLANTA (AP) — A presidential panel on drunken driving is likely to endorse a national drinking age of 21 and stiff penalties for violators, the group's executive director said on the eve of its meeting here.

Eugene V. Lipp said Sunday the panel's final report probably would urge that Congress pass such a measure and call for mandatory jail terms or license suspensions for people caught violating it.

"We are not advocating any federal measures yet, but we are pushing states to make their drunken driving laws stricter," said Lipp.

After the two day session in Atlanta, the commission will compile its final report and then disband in December, hopefully to be followed by a nongovernmental group, Lipp said.

Pilot takes airline to court

CHICAGO (AP) — An Eastern Airlines pilot who was fired after undergoing a sex change operation has taken the airline to court in an effort to win reinstatement.

Karen Ulane — formerly Kenneth F. Ulane — alleges that the airline unlawfully discriminated against her on the basis of sex. The trial was to begin today in U.S. District Court here.

The airline, which fired Miss Ulane from her $60,000-a-year job in 1981, contended she suffers from psychological problems resulting from the 1980 sex change and also cited safety concerns, saying that working relationships in the cockpit may be jeopardized because of the controversial operation.

Spending stifling growth

NEW YORK (AP) — Massive military spending by Communist nations is stifling their civilian economic growth, says a Conference Board study.

The report, released Sunday and based on analyses of 26 communist countries, said: "Fully one-third of these countries are involved in ongoing war efforts, including Afghanistan, Angola, Cambodia, Vietnam, Laos, Ethiopia, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Cuba and the Soviet Union."

Communist nations need to increase exports and cut down on imports. "While these countries have 40 percent of the world's population, they account for only 12 percent of world trade," said the report by the private, business-supported research group.

Epcot celebrating birthday

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Epcot Center, the Disney empire's giant theme park, celebrates its first birthday this week, with both area businesses and Disney shareholders enjoying its success.

The $1 billion park, which opened Oct. 1, 1982, at Walt Disney World, added 10 million admissions to the amusement attraction, setting a new industry standard as the nation's most popular.

Attendance at Disney World probably will hit 23 million for the fiscal year ending Friday, analysts say, an 83 percent jump from 12.5 million in 1982, when the Magic Kingdom was Disney World's only park.

Its popularity is helping Walt Disney Productions, whose financial performance had been tarnished by high development costs for Epcot and costly movie flops.

Artist may be charged for work

CEDAR KEY, Fla. (AP) — An artist who included a pelican skull in a collage unwittingly fell afoul of wildlife law and now faces a misdemeanor charge carrying a possible six-month jail sentence.

Kevin Hipe is charged with illegally possessing the remains of a bird protected by law.

He found the pelican skull on a beach and used it and a banded bird leg he had found — possession of which also is illegal — into a "mixed-media" piece he dubbed "Ace." When it was exhibited at a Gainesville art show last April, authorities confiscated it.

On Oct. 11, Hipe will appear before a federal magistrate in Gainesville to answer the illegal possession charge, which carries a maximum penalty of a $500 fine and six months in jail.

Patients evacuated after bomb threat

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bomb threats followed by "suspicious" fires in three rooms on an unoccupied floor of Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital forced the evacuation of more than 140 patients, authorities said.

No bomb was found Sunday after a three-hour search of the North Wing of the hospital by police and firefighters, said hospital spokesman Bob Giacovelli.

A doctor at the hospital said he had received a call from a man with a foreign accent threatening a bomb.

The fires were quickly extinguished before firefighters arrived and were confined to three rooms — two on the north end, one on the south — on the fifth floor of the hospital's older wing, said fire inspector Ed Reed.

Some of the 143 patients evacuated — about three-fourths of the approximately 200 patients at the hospital — had been under intensive care, said Giacovelli, and 23 patients were taken to five local hospitals.

He said none of the patients was treated for any ill effects from the evacuation. They were being returned to their rooms after the search ended, shortly after midnight Monday, Giacovelli said.

But Reed said one patient suffered cardiac arrest following the move and was treated outside an entrance to the hospital, although he said he didn't know if the problem was connected to the evacuation and didn't know the patient's condition.

The first bomb threat was received at 10 a.m., followed by another at 8 p.m. and then several more after that, said Reed.

Dr. Carlos Ruiz said he received a telephoned bomb threat at about 5 p.m., and said he believed the man's heavy accent was Armenian. Asked how he could be sure, the doctor said 80 percent of the patients at the hospital are Armenian and he knows the accent.

"He said a bomb is going to blow up at 10, and then I interrupted him and he hung up," said Ruiz.

An unidentified nurse aids a patient during the evacuation Sunday evening of Hollywood Presyterian Hospital following a fire in three unoccupied rooms and a bomb threat on the Los Angeles medical center. About 120 patients were evacuated from the North Wing of the hospital according to a fire department spokesman.

TV weatherman plunges to death

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Television weatherman Jim O'Brien was a veteran skydiver, jumping once to deliver the opening day baseball to the Philadelphia Phillies, but on his 814th dive, his expertise failed and he plunged to his death.

Jim O'Brien

O'Brien's chute had become entangled in the parachute of another jumper, Doug Sellix of Bethlehem, in a five-man dive Sunday from a small plane at an altitude of 8,500 feet, officials said.

O'Brien, 43, rewarded for his popularity at WPVI-TV with one of the highest TV news salaries in the Philadelphia area, a reported $400,000, fell free for about 100 feet before crashing to the ground, officials said.

While Sellix pleaded with O'Brien to ride out the jump with their lines tangled, the newsman cut his main chute free, intending to finish the jump on his reserve, said Jim Place of Pottstown, who also made the jump at the Hanover Township Airport in Gilbertsville, Montgomery County, at 12:30 p.m.

O'Brien's reserve chute had barely opened before he hit the ground, police said.

"You have to make a decision in a second in this sport," said Tom Morrison, safety director of the United Parachute Club, which organized the jump. "Apparently Jim made the wrong one."

O'Brien's death came as a shock to his colleagues at WPVI, where he was a prominent figures in the area's top-rated TV news report.

The accident was the lead story in the 6 p.m. newscast, which ended with credits over a black background and no music.

"Jim, we will miss you more than you will ever know," said co-anchor Jim Gardner on the broadcast Sunday, his voice quavering and eyes filling with tears.

Detective Joe Donahue of the New Hanover Township police said O'Brien apparently thought that cutting his chute would avoid injuries to either Sellix or himself. But Donahue said O'Brien cut himself loose at about 100 feet — too low to allow his reserve chute time to open.

"He just misjudged. If Jim hadn't cut away, everything would be OK," Donahue said.

Station officials described O'Brien as a man who had as much passion for diving as for work. Art Moore, the station's promotion director, said the jump was O'Brien's 814th.

Teachers may accept settlement

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Union negotiators have recommended that teachers in the nation's second-largest school district accept a $75 million, one-year settlement hammered out to avert a threatened strike.

The tentative settlement between the United Teachers of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Unified School District was reached Sunday evening after a marathon bargaining session that began Saturday.

While noting that negotiators recommended ratification, UTLA President Judy Solkovits said the union was "deeply distressed that the salary and fringe benefit package was reached only after a powerful rally by teachers, a one-day (walkout) protest and a strike authorization vote."

A ratification vote will be held in two weeks.

"I don't think anyone comes out the winner in a situation like this. The institution takes a loss," said district Superintendent Harry Handler.

School board President John Greenwood said he was "delighted" the dispute was over.

About 17,000 of the district's 26,000 teachers are UTLA members. About 14,000 of those cast ballots that gave 53 percent support for union leaders to call a strike if necessary. The district has 558,000 students.

The pact calls for a base pay increase of 8.15 percent. Teachers were seeking 8.6 percent while the district initially offered 7.8 percent, said UTLA spokesman Len Feldman.

Ms. Solkovits said that along with additional wage hikes for senior teachers and additional benefits, the tentative pact amounted a $75 million, or a 10.78 percent overall compensation boost.

Last year, a beginning teacher made $13,700 annually, while the top wage was $28,500, Feldman said.

Because of the contract and a new California state law raising base salaries, a beginning teacher will make $16,250 a year, while the maximum will be about $31,240, he said.

Ms. Solkovits and Feldman said other parts of the tentative pact included:

—An additional $25 a month — from $155 to $180 — in the raise given to teachers after they work 15 years for the district.

—A onetime half percent bonus for all teachers.

Man falls to death after kite flight

LONG BEACH, Wash. (AP) — A man who fell to his death after being lifted more than 100 feet by the tangled lines of a massive parafoil had spent hours planning the launch of what may prove to be the largest kite to stay aloft, relatives say.

Steve Gary Edeiken, 30, of Venice, Calif., was killed Saturday as a 26-member team attempted to fly the 115-by-124-foot parafoil kite from a long, wide beach on the Washington coast about 120 miles southwest of Seattle.

The stunt, co-sponsored by Edmonds Community College and the town of Long Beach, was aimed at breaking the Guinness Book of World Records' entry for the largest kite to fly.

Edeiken's ankle became tangled in one of the many lines to the kite, and he was swept aloft, said witnesses. He lost his grip on a kite cord as the kite surged in the wind.

He was dead on arrival at a nearby hospital from multiple injuries.

Edeiken's brother-in-law, David Whitten, said Sunday that Edeiken had spent hours planning the launch.

"One of his primary concerns was that nobody would get hurt," Whitten said. "He had identified five places that were dangerous and he decided that he and four other people that were older than the students would take those five places."

Space shuttle stamp a hit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service has a hit on its hands with its priciest souvenir envelope ever, the $15.35 stamp and envelope combination carried into space this month on the shuttle Challenger. One dealer ordered 40,000 of the postal covers — one at a time.

A one-per-order rule was adopted by the postal service to ensure wide distribution for the 260,000 covers that flew in Challenger's cargo bay for six days. To date, said spokesman Bob Becker, about 200,000 of the covers have been sold.

Those wanting covers were warned before the flight that no orders would be accepted until the ship touched down on Labor Day. Becker said 15,000 checks were returned because they were for multiple orders and another 3,000 to 4,000 because they were mailed too early.

The envelopes, bearing four different cancellations on the $9.35 express mail stamp, will be sent out the first week in October, Becker said. And beginning Oct. 5, multiple orders will be accepted. NASA and the postal service are splitting what's left over after the $9.35 for the stamp, plus printing costs, are deducted.

The dealer with the 40,000 covers — a $614,000 order — had to send each request in a separate envelope, incurring an $8,000 mailing bill. Becker would not identify the dealer. Other dealers have offered the covers for $25, although anyone can order them directly for $10 less.

Dennis Almasay, a victim of multiple sclerosis and an employee of the Yosemite Nakional Park Service rangers, takes disabled children on a tour of the park. Posing with Almasay is his wife Barbara Barrick.

Yosemite

Naturalist John Muir was enthralled by the awesome splendor of Yosemite, as are those who travel to this valley today, 115 years after Muir first saw it to behold and marvel at its magical, even spiritual grace.

The sights of Yosemite — its imposing granite cliffs, its serene meadows of tall grasses, its groves of giant Sequoias, its thundering waterfalls — bring visitors back season after season, summer and winter.

For years in springtime, college students from all over the country place their names on waiting lists, hoping to get a chance at summer jobs in this 1,189-square-mile national park in the Sierra Nevada of Central California.

Teachers and professors, too, often seek work at Yosemite during their summer hiatus.

But something new is happening to the job market at Yosemite. It is not just students or teachers looking for employment anymore.

City dwellers tired of urban life are coming to Yosemite Valley. Retired factory and office workers, truck drivers, salesmen and farmers are coming.

They vie for work in the hotels and restaurants, gift shops and stores; they operate trams and open-air shuttle buses; they give tours and nature walks for Yosemite's 2.5 million annual visitors.

The Yosemite Park and Curry Co., the park's concession, has approximately 800 winter jobs and 1,800 in summer.

Not only is the employee population at Yosemite getting older, said Rick Vocelka, the companay's head, it is stabilizing, with less and less turnover. He believes that it's because of the nation's economy and appealing lifestyle of the park.

"It used to be the Curry Co. could hire nothing but college kids," said Yosemite Postmaster Leroy (Rusty) Rust, who was born in Yosemite Valley 62 years ago. "But the country and the economy are not the same anymore.

For Rust, Yosemite has been mostly a permanent home. His father had the postal contract in the early 1900s.

Rust left for college and the Army, but returned to begin working for the Postal Service in the park 40 years ago.

Rust's wife, Jane, came from nearby Mariposa, where her grandfather brought his family and opened a grocery store in 1897.

Don Evans, 31, who works in the Ahwahnee, Yosemite's poshest hotel, and his wife, Carolyn, 30, first came to Yosemite in 1979, having quit lucrative jobs on the East Coast to travel.

"We decided we'd save our money and see what the world is like elsewhere," Evans said. "We both were making good money, but it gets so, what do you do with your money?"

The Evanses started working in Yosemite in September 1979, and have come and gone since then, traveling to Alaska, to other national parks in summer, returning to Yosemite in winter. They came back to stay in the fall of 1981.

Jack Hicks, night manager of the Ahwahnee, is another of the hotel employees with a revolving career. He first came to Yosemite in 1958, while attending college in Atlanta. He worked elsewhere in California, before returning to the park in 1969 as a management trainee. He worked at three other jobs before deciding to come back to Yosemite for good.

"I'll tell you the truth, I've been a lot of places, but I've never really found anything as nice as Yosemite. You can play tennis, raft, golf, hike, ski, whatever."

Dennis Almasy, 42, is in the fourth year of his second career, employed by Yosemite's National Park Service rangers.

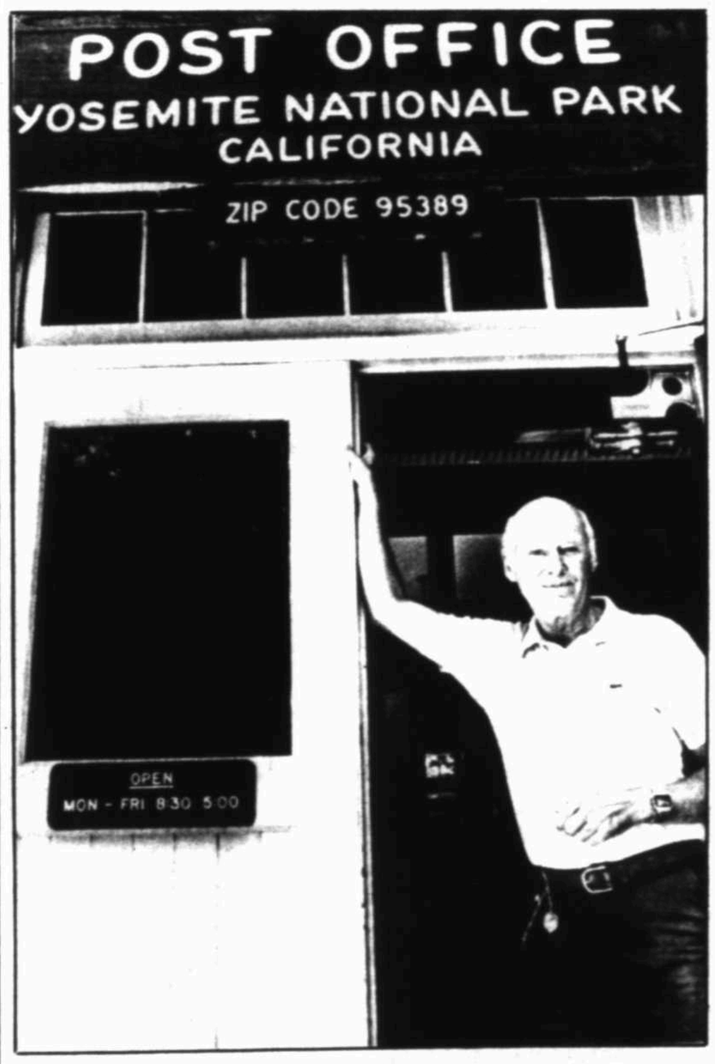

He served in the Air Force for 15 years before contracting multiple sclerosis.

He takes charge of the groups of disabled children from the Oakland, Calif., public schools who come to the park every year, raising money for their trip through bake sales, raffles, benefits and flea-market sales.

Almasay leads the children and their teachers high up on the ridge on Glacier Point, scanning the valley and pointing out various other peaks they could see. Vogelsang, 11,576 feet; Half Dome, 8,842 feet; Mount Lyell, 13,114 feet, Yosemite's highest.

Most of the time, Almasy said, he spends his time in administration, dealing with programs and facilities in the park to make sure that they are accessible to handicapped visitors.

Both the National Park Service in Yosemite and the Yosemite Park and Curry Co. encourage handicapped and disabled persons to come work at the park. There are several in wheelchairs, and several legally blind workers. Al Guhl, who lost one leg and part of another in Vietnam, works for the park service as a student intern under an agreement with the University of Arizona, where he studies.

Postmaster Leroy "Rusty" Rust, 62, top photo, has lived in Yosemite all his life. Kim Saunders, who has worked at Yosemite on and off for eight years, relaxes with park employee, Bill Miller.
