ANC agrees to meet South African leader

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — The African National Congress said Friday it is now willing to meet with South African President F.W. de Klerk to discuss opening talks on ending the group's three-decade guerrilla war against apartheid.

Such a meeting would be the first between the guerrilla movement's exiled leaders and a South African head of state. It could represent a major step toward finding a solution to South Africa's black-white divisions.

The group also said thousands of black guerrillas exiled decades ago would be returning to their homeland as the once-outlawed group moves back to South Africa.

The ANC's national executive committee said delegates would visit South Africa to try to clear the way for negotiations on ending white-minority rule and sharing power with blacks for the first time. The ANC gave no date for the visit.

The offer follows the government's historic release on Sunday of Nelson Mandela, the most famous symbol of anti-apartheid resistance. Mandela was freed to a tumultuous welcome after 27 years in prison.

Alfred Nzo, secretary-general of the ANC, also said the guerrilla movement was prepared to negotiate "a suspension of hostilities" once de Klerk meets the group's remaining conditions for formal talks.

"To achieve this objective, in the shortest possible time, the National Executive Committee resolved to meet Mr. de Klerk as soon as possible," the anti-apartheid group said.

The group's conditions for formal talks are a lifting of the state of emergency and the release of all political prisoners.

A South African government spokesman said his administration was waiting to see the ANC statement and would have no immediate response. But it was unlikely that de Klerk would refuse such a meeting.

The ANC, the main black group fighting white rule in South Africa, has been waging a bombing and sabotage campaign since 1961. However, the armed struggle has been largely dormant in the past year and poses no serious threat to the white government.

Mandela said Friday he was ready to meet with de Klerk to further negotiations and end apartheid.

Mandela, released Sunday after 27 years in jail, is expected to visit Lusaka next week to consult with the exiled leadership.

"I have found him (de Klerk) to be a man of integrity with whom I can do business," Mandela said at his home in Soweto, outside Johannesburg.

The ANC said de Klerk still had not met all conditions to clear the way for talks on creating a new political structure for South Africa and cited the 3 1/2-year-old state of emergency.

The statement also called for an end to all political trials and army troops be removed from black townships.

Nzo said the ANC "resolved to meet Mr. de Klerk as soon as possible to discuss with him the need to address these issues so that a climate conducive to negotiations is created."

"The meeting agreed that the Pretoria regime had not yet created a climate conducive for negotiations."

Nzo said that Walter Sisulu, released in October after more than 25 years in prison, would lead the effort to rebuild the ANC.

San Antonio seeks to land CAF with $75,000 study

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

San Antonio leaders apparently are trying to set Midland up for a shootout in both cities' quest for the new headquarters-museum of the Confederate Air Force.

San Antonio, which came in second behind Midland as the CAF membership's preference for a new home base for the aviation group, is proposing a $75,000 study to compare CAF visitor potential of the two cities, projected income and economic impact on the CAF and the cities.

In population, Midland is about one-tenth the size of metropolitan San Antonio, which claims about 1.3 million citizens.

The economic study, proposed by the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce and endorsed by the San Antonio City Council, would help the CAF's governing General Staff decide where to relocate the CAF. The international organization maintains a "Flying Museum" of more than 140 "vintage" World War II fighters, bombers, trainers, transports and liaison aircraft.

Most are United States aircraft but "warbirds" from the Allies and Axis Powers are represented in the CAF's Ghost Squadron.

The CAF General Staff "will negotiate the best deal for the Confederate Air Force," Joe Mabey, a Midland rancher-oilman who is chief of the CAF General Staff, said recently.

A site-selection committee was to tour the proposed six sites and to report to the General Staff, which soon is to decide on a permanent home for the CAF.

Mabey, who has been a colonel in the CAF since 1976, has campaigned to bring the CAF to Midland.

The San Antonio study is contingent on the CAF agreeing to the study and that San Antonio is one of the two cities to be examined in the report, according to The Associated Press.

The CAF currently is based at Valley International Airport in Harlingen in South Texas, but the CAF General Staff is planning a move because the CAF is boxed in at the South Texas airport and does not have room to expand.

Midland and San Antonio lead the list of potential new homes for the group, according to a recent vote by almost 4,800 CAF colonels.

In that vote, almost 50 percent of the colonels favored Midland as the site of the CAF headquarters and museum. San Antonio received 27

Clayton Williams Jr. mourned the death of five close friends and business associates Friday, bidding a tearful farewell to the "laughs, the hunts and the campfire songs" they shared.

Williams delivered the eulogy during a memorial service at the First Baptist Church, where business and community leaders gathered to pay their last respects to the five men who died in Wednesday's crash of Williams' plane near Abilene.

"I never thought I could experience again such a feeling of loss until this week," said Williams, his voice cracking at times.

The memorial service paid tribute to Aaron Giebel, 63, president of Giebel Petroleum Ltd.; Randy Kidwell, 36, vice president of business development for Advanced Telecommunications Corp.; Bob Smith, 62, owner of R.R. Smith Consulting; Jamie

Colombians demand talks for hostages

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Guerrillas holding two U.S. citizens demanded the formation of a committee to negotiate terms for their release, a television news program reported Friday night.

Police said they had no word on a third American, a priest who was also kidnapped by guerrillas protesting President Bush's Thursday visit to Colombia for a drug summit. Parishioners prayed for the return of the New York priest.

The TV program 24 Hours said relatives of James Donnelly were contacted by the abductors, who demanded formation of a committee to negotiate the terms to release Donnelly and David Kent.

Officials plot strategy for united Germany

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Officials announced plans Friday for a 16-state united Germany with NATO membership as part of a defense strategy that might include the presence of Soviet troops in the eastern sector.

The Soviet Union has insisted a reunified Germany be neutral.

An international Holocaust awareness organization said victims of the last united Germany, which produced Hitler and the Nazis, have "great fears" of the rush toward reunification.

Letters to Chancellor Helmut Kohl and the East German premier, Hans Modrow, from the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles listed 10 ways to reassure victims of the Nazis. Among them were making sure the Holocaust was included in German textbooks and creating an agency to monitor "hate groups."

Defense Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg told reporters Friday of a security concept his ministry was drafting. "Defense obligations are indivisible and cannot be weakened for a whole Germany," he said, and military integration will be an initial step.

Stoltenberg said a cornerstone of the plan was membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

He said defense officials of East and West Germany will meet after the East German elections March 18 to work out a joint security policy, and that the continued presence of Soviet troops in what is now East Germany was open to discussion.

He raised the possibility of a "transitional phase" in which the West German and East German armies would cooperate while retaining their own command structures, but also said: "We are not going to have two different armed forces in a united Germany for long."

UTPB students unable to raise issues at UT system meeting

By RICK BROWN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Two University of Texas of the Permian Basin student representatives said they were unable to formally raise the subjects of budget cuts and four-year academic status during a University of Texas System meeting of their peers Friday.

Odessa Danny Armstrong said the organizational meeting of representatives of 16 UT campuses was not the proper forum to raise the issues, although he hoped future meetings would provide an opportunity.

Midlander Gloria Clemons said that she was able to discuss the funding issue on an informal basis with UT Chancellor Hans Mark. She was optimistic she would hear further from Mark on the subject.

The Student Advisory Group is comprised of two appointed representatives from each of the system's campuses.

Armstrong said he and Ms. Clemons had hoped to formally present a request for supplemental funds to the panel to replace an estimated $100,000 in state aid lost from the university's summer session budget.

The university will operate summer classes with a budget of $146,000 during the coming session, which translates into a reduction in classes students need to graduate, Ms. Clemons said.

"Who wants to stay around through the fall," she said.

Armstrong said that if the school sees further cuts in summer funding "We probably won't even be able to have a summer school session."

Students at the Odessa campus had faxed signed petitions to be presented at the meeting, Armstrong said.

The students also had planned to speak in favor of expanding classes at UTPB to freshmen and sophomores. Currently the school only may provide instruction to juniors, seniors and graduate students.

Midland political leaders and legislators have been negotiating for nearly a year on the matter, which also entails cooperation from Gov. Bill Clements, the Legislature and the UT Board of Regents.

The local leaders have yet to agree on a plan among themselves before pursuing the matter at higher levels.

"The students don't seem to be as concerned whether it's a Midland extension or an Odessa extension," said Armstrong. Reaching a compromise "is a political problem that can be handled by the Legislature," he said.

Ms. Clemons said she also is optimistic for a solution on the UTPB matter — "and sooner than we think."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Springlike weather in store

From Staff and Wire Reports

The weekend promises to be sunny, warm, and spring-filled in the middle of the winter.

The National Weather Service at Midland International Airport is predicting a sunny and warm day today, a peak temperature in the mid-60s, and southerly winds at 10 to 20 mph.

Tonight is to be fair. The low is to be in the upper 30 degrees. The high temperature Sunday is to be in the lower 60s. The weatherman is calling for a 20 percent chance of rain under cloudy skies.

The high temperature Friday was 56 degrees, and the low was 20 degrees. The record high temperature for Feb. 16 is 80 degrees in 1971. The record low for Feb. 17 is 11 degrees in 1936.

A weak surface ridge of high pressure centered over southern Oklahoma spread southward across Texas late Friday, creating a cool, dry and stable air mass over the Lone Star State.

Moisture in the upper levels of the atmosphere continued to spread across Mexico into South Texas from the eastern Pacific. This subtropical moisture was producing some mid- and high-level clouds over the southeast half of the state, otherwise skies were mostly sunny across the state.

Thunderstorms produced tornadoes and flooding Friday in the Southeast, while a new Pacific storm rolled into the West and dumped as much as 3 feet of snow in northern California's Sierra Nevada.

Tornadoes touched down at Carrollton, Ga., injuring 11 people, and at Irmo, S.C., where no injuries were reported.

In Chilton County, Ala., a tornado smashed several mobile homes in the Cooper community near Clanton, and smashed the building of the volunteer fire department in the Enterprise community, police said.

Flooding forced hundreds to evacuate in parts of Georgia, Tennessee, North Carolina, and Alabama.

Wind gusted to 63 mph during a thunderstorm at Robins Air Force Base, Ga.

Winkel, 45, president and chief executive officer of Clayton W. Williams Jr. Cos.; and Ken Mardis, 51, a pilot for Williams Aviation.

Williams said his friends helped him build empires, watched them slip away and helped to build them anew.

"We weren't related by blood, we weren't related by marriage, but we were bound by love, by respect, by achievements and by some battle scars," he said.

After news of the crash, Williams pulled his campaign advertisements and canceled all of his public appearances "indefinitely."

But friends construed Williams' prayer following the eulogy as the strongest hint yet that he'll soon be returning to GOP race for governor.

"Dear Lord..." he said. "...Give us the strength to comfort one another, to love one another, and to move forward and live our lives by the example these five dear men set."

Marion Baugh, a longtime friend and rancher, said Williams "will come through this tragedy a much stronger person," even though others worried about the impact Winkel's death will have on Williams' operations.

As chief executive officer of all the Clayton W. Williams Jr. Cos., Winkel was considered Williams' right-hand-man, and was to have sole authority over the vast banking, real estate, ranching and oil & gas operations if Williams became governor.

"Jamie was the glue that held our operation together," Williams said in the eulogy. "I trusted him totally with everything I had."

Winkel became Williams' corporate controller 14 years ago when Williams' enterprises were still based in Fort Stockton, and was later named chief executive officer of the Clayton W. Williams Jr. Cos.

Winkel also was chairman of the board of ClayDesta National Bank, president of James W. Winkel Inc., and vice president of Carpenter Corp.

Another longtime friend and advisor, Smith was a well-known landman whose business relationship with Williams dated back to Williams' early days in Fort Stockton.

A former vice president for Williams, Smith helped with the development of ClayDesta Plaza.

"Everything you see that you like in ClayDesta Plaza was put into place by Bob Smith," Williams said, adding that a street in the commercial park was named after Smith as a tribute to their friendship.

"No matter how rough things got in the oil patch, you could always count on Bob," Williams said.

Smith joined the Clayton W. Williams Jr. Cos. in 1977 as an executive assistant and later served as a consultant to the company.

He was on the Board of Directors of ClayDesta National Bank, Physicians & Surgeons Hospital and ClayDesta Corp.

Kidwell also was a trusted advisor and campaign worker who had been hired by Winkel as his assistant, and later became president of Midland-based ClayDesta Communications.

"Without Randy, ClayDesta Communications never would have gotten off the ground," Williams said.

A Midland native, Kidwell was graduated from Midland High School, and Texas Tech University, where he was a "crazed, fanat-

Kidwell also was a trusted advisor and campaign worker who had been hired by Winkel as his assistant, and later became president of Midland-based ClayDesta Communications.

"Without Randy, ClayDesta Communications never would have gotten off the ground," Williams said.

A Midland native, Kidwell was graduated from Midland High School, and Texas Tech University, where he was a "crazed, fanatical, eat, drink and sleep" Red Raider fan.

When Atlanta-based ATC purchased ClayDesta Communications in 1989, Kidwell left the Williams organization and went to work for ATC as vice president of business development, in charge of mergers and acquisitions.

He was on ATC business at the time of the crash, but was still a trusted advisor to Williams and had been working on the campaign as a volunteer.

Williams said he often referred to Giebel — a fellow Texas A&M University graduate — as "Giebelstein."

"It's not often when you feel that a man is your best friend 30 minutes after you meet him. That's how I felt about Giebelstein," Williams said.

Described as the consummate businessman and wildcatter, Giebel had been involved in the Permian Basin oil and gas business for 40 years.

In 1962, Giebel, Jack Major and Fred Forester Jr. formed MGF Oil Co., which went public in 1970 as MGF Oil Corp., and served as chairman of MGF during a period of extraordinary growth.

At a high point of MGF in 1982, the Midland oil company had 1,300 employees, 46 drilling rigs, 6.25 million barrels of oil reserves and 65 billion BCF of gas reserves.

Giebel put much of his personal oil fortune into a Sacramento, Calif.-based ministry that rehabilitated young drug addicts.

He later formed A.F. Giebel Petroleum Consultants, invested in pecan farms and Brangus cattle ranches in South Texas, and served on the board of directors of ClayDesta National Bank.

Mardis, who had been employed by Williams Aviation since September 1989, previously worked as a pilot for the Permian Corp. A native of Natchitoches, La., he attended Northeast Louisiana State University in Monroe, La.

"You could always count on him to greet you with a smile and a twinkle in his eye... and you know what I mean," Williams said.

Odessa couple killed in cycle mishap

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A couple riding a motorcycle were killed Wednesday in a mishap in rural Ector County, but their bodies were not discovered until two days later, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The DPS identified the dead as William Abner Year, 36, of Odessa and Donna Ray Frost, 29. The DPS said Year, driver of the 1985 Harley-Davidson motorcycle, was not wearing a helmet, but Ms. Frost was wearing a helmet at time of the accident. Her hometown was not available.

The DPS said the motorcycle failed to halt at a stop sign at Knox Road and 57th Street in rural West Ector County, ran into a vacant lot, traveled into mesquite brush, struck a dirt mound, was airborne for about 30 feet, and rolled on impact.

Donnelly, a 65-year-old mechanical engineer from Detroit, and Kent, a 40-year-old school teacher from Indianapolis, were separately kidnapped in the northwestern city of Medellin Tuesday.

The pro-Castro National Liberation Front made public Friday night a communique claiming responsibility for their abductions.

Officials had already blamed the group for the kidnappings of Donnelly, Kent and the priest, Rev. Francisco Amico Ferrari, who was abducted early Thursday.

The Rev. Francisco Antonio Amico Ferrari, 44, who served at St. Anne's Catholic Church until 1987, was reportedly seized while on his way to Mass about 6:45 a.m. Thursday in the southwestern city of Cali where he was head of a Canadian-sponsored Catholic community.

"Father Amico is a unique person," said Jose Puga, 57, a parishioner at St. Anne's, that boasts a congregation of about 3,000. "He is very special to the Hispanic community."

Puga worked with Amico for almost 12 years as a member of St. Anne's Parish Council and as a member of the Forum of the Hispanic Community.

percent of the vote. Of the four other cities seeking to be the CAF's home base, Brownsville's garnered 8.5 percent of the vote; San Marcos, 6 percent; Nashville, Tenn., 5.5 percent, and Longview, 3 percent.

Hoping to garner the CAF's tourism revenue, San Antonio has offered to give the CAF $3 million in cash, to build a replica of a World War II air field with hangars adjacent to Kelly Air Force Base and to build a museum.

Industrial revenue bonds would be used to finance the proposed construction in San Antonio.

Midland, however, has offered the CAF a $19-million debt-free "deal" that includes a museum, hangars, headquarters building and, all told, 52 acres at Midland International Airport.

"The Confederate Air Force has repeatedly said they won't move if they have to incur debt to leave," said CAF Colonel Ed Jones, who is spokesman for Midland's effort to relocate the CAF headquarters to West Texas.

"And Midland's offer so far is the only one without debt to the CAF," Jones said.

The San Antonio offer would be debt-laden due to the revenue bonds needed to finance construction of CAF facilities in San Antonio.

And Jones, a Midland banker, figured that it would cost San Antonio $20 million to "duplicate what Midland is going to do for them (the CAF)."

In essence, San Antonio's offer is "no offer" at all, Jones said. Unlike Midland's proposal, it is not a "gift."

"If they aren't going to pay for it, that's hardly an offer," Jones said.

And the CAF is not "going to sell their planes to pay off the debt" should CAF revenue not pay off the indebtedness. "The members are not willing to risk their airplanes," Jones said.

San Antonio is a "nice place," he said. But San Antonio officials "are not willing to put forth an attractive enough proposal" to win over the CAF, Jones said.

"Midland's proposal is designed to meet the needs of the CAF," Jones said. "And the proposals of the other cities are designed to meet the needs of those cities."

And Midland business-civic leaders, in their bid to lure the CAF to West Texas, have engineered an $19-million offer to bring the CAF to Midland.

In the Alamo City's bid for the CAF, San Antonio city officials have agreed to contribute $20,000 to the $75,000 study, which would compare visitor potential, projected income and economic impact.

City money would come from the hotel-motel tax. The remaining $55,000 already has been arranged and will come from the private sector, said Steve Schultz, vice president of urban affairs at the Greater San Antonio Chamber of Commerce.

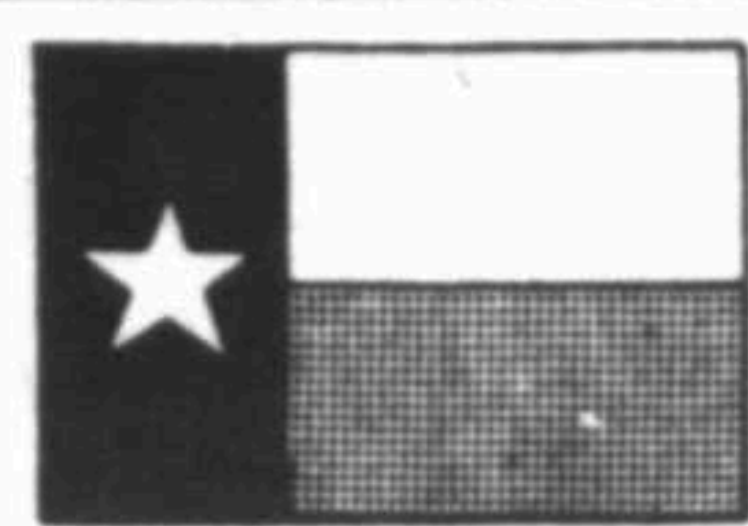

The chamber, which is joining the Economic Development Foundation in leading the effort to attract the Confederate Air Force to San Antonio, proposed the study, Schultz said.

"It would be very difficult for them (the CAF) to go against the study. It is a free study to them and would help them make the best decision possible," Schultz said.

The proposed research would be unbiased and independent of the CAF and either of the two cities profiled.

The Confederate Air Force would select from 10 Texas and California firms to conduct the study.

Galveston Mardi Gras site of fierce 'brew-haha'

GALVESTON (AP) — The Mardi Gras celebration that begins this weekend not only features floats and parades, but also beer battles. Competition between Miller and Budweiser has become so fierce, beer delivery men reportedly are turning off competitors' taps and switching out coaster and table ads.

When Miller won a bid to be designated as the "official beer of the Mardi Gras," Budweiser retaliated by setting up its own schedule of shows for the celebration featuring "the Krewe of Brew," a huge night parade and a party tonight featuring Bo Diddley.

The winners of the battle may be the 800,000 revelers expected for Mardi Gras festivities. By the time the foam quits flowing on Feb. 27, Galveston will see twice as many big floats as last year, two extra parades and a concert thanks in large part to the marketing fray.

"Might as well take advantage of a marketing opportunity," said Larry Del Papa, captain and founder of the Krewe of Brew and president of the Galveston Budweiser distributorship, Del Papa Distributing Co. The theme is important because Mardi Gras rules limit advertising to a sign on the vehicle pulling the float.

But Stacy Dienst of Dienst Distributing, the Galveston Miller distributor, calls the tactics "ambush marketing."

Dienst said Budweiser is making an extraordinary effort because the Houston-Galveston area is one of the few places where it has a brewery that its beer isn't No. 1.

Miller Lite is the No. 1 selling beer locally and in Texas, while Budweiser is No. 1 nationally, Dienst said.

As the "official beer" of Mardi Gras, Miller will have its banners on display while a band plays in Old Galveston Square. The large, outdoor party will continue into the night Saturday, while the Budweiser parade is making its way along the seawall.

Budweiser, calling itself the "King of the Mardi Gras" in a series of radio advertisements, is one of several sponsors for the Bo Diddley party, which includes eight bands. The 225 members of the Krewe paid to have 10 large floats built in New Orleans and shipped to Galveston by barge to be the heart of the Krewe of Brew parade Saturday night that may be the largest of Mardi Gras.

Judge refuses to dismiss indictment in Treaty Oak case

AUSTIN (AP) — The man accused of poisoning the historic Treaty Oak lost a bid Friday to have the felony indictment against him dismissed and has sued the Travis County sheriff over payment of medical expenses.

Paul Stedman Cullen, 46, of Elroy, has been in jail since his June 29 arrest in connection with the poisoning of the centuries-old tree. He has been diagnosed as a diabetic, according to his lawsuit, and has received medical treatment while jailed on the criminal mischief charge.

In the handwritten civil suit filed in state court, Cullen said Sheriff Doyne Bailey and Woody Simmons, director of jail programs, were wrong to take $60 from his account at the jail to pay for medical bills and should return the money.

Cullen said he is indigent and that Bailey and Simmons haven't helped him seek public assistance for medical expenses, which he said the officials have a legal duty to do.

According to the suit, Cullen was told he had a negative balance of $546 at the jail commissary, which sheriff's spokesman Curtis Weeks said was for medical expenses.

"It's a state law. We can charge them," Weeks said of Cullen's complaint. He said he doesn't think the sheriff's office is required to help the suspect apply for assistance to pay medical bills.

"We have an obligation to do as much as we can toward his health. Toward his finances, we don't have, as far as I know, a responsibility to seek out money for him," Weeks said.

Weeks said after Cullen's family complained about the money being taken, the sheriff's office told his father $15 a week would be used for medical expenses when money is deposited in his account. Such accounts can be used by inmates to buy candy, cigarettes or other items.

Attorney Terrence Kirk, representing Cullen in the criminal case, said of the civil suit, "I think there's good reason for him to be upset." But Kirk said his main concern is the criminal proceeding.

State District Judge Bob Perkins denied a motion to dismiss the felony indictment against Cullen. Defense attorneys argued that Cullen should have been charged instead with desecration of a venerated object, a misdemeanor carrying a maximum punishment of a year in jail and $2,000 fine.

Cullen could face life in prison if convicted on the criminal mischief charge, because the indictment alleges Cullen had a previous felony conviction for burglary.

The Treaty Oak was poisoned with a powerful herbicide, and tree experts don't know if it will survive. There has been an outpouring of public concern for the tree, which according to legend was the site of a treaty-signing between Stephen F. Austin and Indians.

Perkins said he planned to rule next Friday on pretrial defense motions to suppress evidence.

Former President Reagan grilled for Poindexter's Iran-Contra trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former President Ronald Reagan, known as the great communicator, went before cameras in a different role Friday — explaining during secret court testimony what he knew about the Iran-Contra affair.

It could be the toughest questioning Reagan has faced about the scandal that caused heavy political damage to the final two years of his presidency.

Reagan smiled and waved but did not speak to reporters when he entered the federal courthouse to give a videotaped deposition for the trial of his former national security adviser, John Poindexter.

The former Reagan administration official goes on trial March 5 on charges of concealing from Congress assistance that national security aide Oliver North gave to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels and lying about a 1985 shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran.

Poindexter entered the courtroom a few minutes before Reagan, flanked by a half-dozen lawyers and legal aides, who had in tow a red cart with boxes of documents.

The public was barred from the session in which Reagan was asked 154 questions plus follow-ups that focus on his meetings with Poindexter. Reagan also faced cross-examination by Iran-Contra prosecutors, meaning questioning could carry over until Saturday.

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene allowed Reagan to give the videotaped testimony near his home in the Bel-Air area rather than require him to appear at Poindexter's trial in Washington.

Three cameras were positioned to record the testimony — one pointed at Reagan, one pointed at the judge and the other directed at lawyers questioning the former chief executive.

Thursday, Greene rejected a request by news organizations that they be allowed to attend the deposition.

However, he said he would order the videotape released within a few days, after editing to remove material deemed to touch on classified national security matters.

Three years ago, Reagan portrayed himself as a president who was kept in the dark by his aides. But Poindexter contends he kept his former boss fully informed about all aspects of the affair — with the apparent exception of the diversion of Iran arms sale money to the Contras — and that Reagan authorized his activities.

Reagan said early in 1987 that he hadn't known about "secret bank accounts and diverted funds," two products of the Iran-Contra affair that he found "distasteful."

Poindexter subsequently told Congress he believed Reagan understood that "Col. North was instrumental in keeping the Contras supported without maybe understanding the details of exactly what he was doing."

'Sweetheart City' streets stuck with mass of molasses

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — A mass of molasses oozed through two blocks of Colorado's "Sweetheart City" Friday after a storage tank ruptured, forcing a kindergarten to close and blocking several businesses.

No one was injured, but before the syrupy mess was identified, authorities took precautions against what they thought was a potentially dangerous chemical spill.

Word of the spill reached authorities early Friday after a car spun out of control on a slippery substance and ran into a ditch.

City Manager Mike Rock said two young males were in the vehicle and "one of them told me it was like hitting glare ice. His windshield was so splattered with the stuff he couldn't see."

The molasses was steaming when it escaped but it thickened in the 5 degrees below zero temperature.

Hong Kong comics express fears of reverting to Chinese rule

HONG KONG (AP) — Cartoonists have become the conscience of Hong Kong as they acidly etch the desperation felt by a people destined to live under the flag of Communist China in seven years.

With politicians bickering and editorial writers anxious not to irritate the leaders in Beijing, comic strips have become one of the few platforms where Hong Kong's fears are expressed with often brutal clarity. Just after the crackdown June 4 in Beijing on the democracy movement, cartoonist Juan Tze drew Premier Li Peng in a bathtub of blood. "Is it hot enough?" asked a soldier holding a bucket of steaming "people's blood."

After Sir Geoffrey Howe, then the British foreign secretary, told Hong Kong that Britain could not guarantee the territory's future, Larry Feign, an American expatriate, summed up the feelings of many. "I don't know who to hate more, Deng Xiaoping or Margaret Thatcher," says one of his comic strip characters.

After 149 years of British rule, Hong Kong returns to China in 1997. Although Beijing has promised to retain the territory's free-wheeling economic and social system for 50 years, many of Hong Kong's 5.7 million people lost faith in that promise after the June 4 crackdown.

Many also have little confidence in faction-ridden local politicians, says Joseph Y.S. Cheng, a leading educator and writer in the colony. Newspapers also practice self-censorship in their criticism of Beijing, he said.

"People look to comic strips as an outlet for their frustrations," Cheng said. "Their popularity demonstrates that we have a solid groundswell of anti-communist, anti-China feeling, especially after June 4."

Adds Feign: "Cartoons appeal to the Chinese because you can get your meaning across indirectly."

Cheng said that only in the last few years have comic strips become an important political outlet in Hong Kong. A recent exhibition of cartoons at the Hong Kong Arts Centre drew 40,000 people over several weeks.

Feign and Juan are perhaps the two best known cartoonists in the colony.

Frenetic and balding, Feign, 34, is author of a comic strip for the English-language South China Morning Post called "The World of Lily Wong."

For the five years since he moved to Hong Kong from Orange County in California with his Chinese wife, Feign has charted the lives of Lily, a smart, sexy Hong Kong woman, and Stuart Wright, a bumbling but good-hearted American.

Stuart wants to marry Lily and give her the passport she covets but Lily isn't in love and so far has refused him. Through their relationship, Feign explores the often blatant racism inflicted on Chinese by Westerners. He also pokes fun at the ways Chinese view Westerners, known as "devils" in Cantonese.

A tall man, with the comportment of a Mandarin official in old China's imperial court, Juan is more self-consciously political than Feign.

He grew up during Hong Kong's most turbulent times and remembers watching the bloody anti-British riots in 1967 from a rickety balcony on his tenement home. He began drawing comics as an art student at the Chinese University of Hong Kong in the 1970s.

He took a page from early 20th century Chinese history, during which cartoons were a popular form of political agitation, and decided to use comics to fight for Hong Kong's common man. He went to work at the Chinese-language Ming Pao.

"My generation is different from my parents'," said Juan, now 33. "They came from China and are concerned with basic things like food and money. We are searching for other things, from the spirit."

When China recently announced its opposition to a British plan to give passports to key Hong Kong professionals and officials, Juan drew a man sitting on his bed, his birth certificate, identity card and passport scattered beneath him. "Who am I? Who am I?" the man screamed as his wife snored beside him.

"We have an identity crisis in Hong Kong," Juan said. "London and Beijing are deciding our fate and we can't influence them. I want to describe our feeling of hopelessness."

Following the crackdown in Beijing, Juan drew Chinese Premier Li Peng explaining why tanks were used to put down the rebellion. "We ran out of cars," Li tells a visitor. Another strip shows an Englishman offering Hong Kong on a fork into the drooling mouth of a corrupt Chinese cadre. "Be a brave Chinaman," the Englishman says.

Juan, who hopes to stay in Hong Kong after 1997, has recently published a book of his work, "Black Goods."

"I guess the Chinese might call me a counterrevolutionary," he said with a wry smile. "I'm just helping them gather proof."

If Juan expresses the desperation of Hong Kong, Feign captures the absurdity of its life.

Living on the cusp of two worlds — Hong Kong Chinese and Western expatriate — Feign has a unique vantage point.

"In the beginning, my position gave me a chance to pull off a lot of good gags," said Feign. "But now as things get serious I find it harder to draw. It's becoming a tragedy."

Scientists don't think giant frogs should be allowed in contest

By KEN GOSTING
Hearst News Service

University scientists have jumped into the dispute over whether so-called "superfrogs" can be imported to compete in the Angels Camp, Calif., frog-jumping contest this May.

Fearing the frog species is threatened, scientists from the universities in California, Oklahoma and Michigan are seeking federal action to ban the huge amphibians on environmental grounds.

Academic biologists and zoologists are pitted against animal importer Andy J. Koffman, 40, of Seattle, who insists "it's destiny" for his brood of African frogs to win this year's competition at the Frog-Jumping Jubilee.

Koffman, enjoying the limelight created by his 17 frogs, which weigh six to eight pounds and dwarf American bullfrogs, is touring the nation.

"While he has paraded the Goliaths around the country, he has a freezer full of dead ones in his home," charged Victor Hutchison, professor of zoology at the University of Oklahoma.

Hutchison, considered one of the world's top experts on African frogs, has joined Christina Richards, a biology professor at Wayne State University in Michigan, in the effort to restrict Koffman.

Conceding that "some of the Goliaths died a few years ago when I was starting out," Koffman insists the scientists want to stop him out of spite because he has developed innovative ways to keep Goliaths alive in captivity.

"They're so wrapped up in their little worlds, they can't see their hands in front of their faces," said Koffman, reached in Colorado Springs, Colo., after appearing with the frogs at a nightclub.

Along with David Wake, director of the Museum of Vertebrate Zoology at the University of California at Berkeley, the scientists are recommending that Goliath frogs be placed on the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's list of threatened or endangered species.

Beginning in late 1988, Goliaths appeared as "vulnerable" species on a list drafted by the Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources, an international body. The "vulnerable" listing, however, provides no legal restriction on imports.

But placing Goliaths on the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's list could thwart Koffman's plans to return to the Sanaga River region in the Cameroons to capture 200 more of the amphibians.

Koffman, who has alternated appearances on network television talk shows with educational visits to schools, maintains that by importing Goliaths he is saving them from being served as dinner in Africa.

Several zoo curators confirmed Koffman's contention that establishing a colony of Goliaths in captivity may be integral to saving the species.

"Goliaths are a delicacy in the Ca-meroons," said Frank Slavens, curator of reptiles at the Seattle Zoo. "Their legs can be the size of a chicken drumstick."

Wake, of UC-Berkeley, and Hutchison countered with a theory that removing even 200 or 300 of superfrogs would add unnecessary pressure on their survival in their native land.

Child-support reform tops debate among attorney general candidates

AUSTIN (AP) — Law and order has become the battle cry in the fight to be Texas attorney general, even though the state's law office spends most of its time handling civil cases.

"The attorney general's office needs reforming so that the attorney general has more power to combat crime," said Rep. Pat Hill of Dallas, one of four Republican candidates for attorney general. Crime-fighting has been a theme among most of the candidates to succeed incumbent Attorney General Jim Mattox, a Democrat running for governor.

The Republican contenders are Hill, Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown of Lake Jackson, Dallas lawyer Tex Lezar and Houston lawyer Bobby Steelhammer. Democratic candidates are Rep. Dan Morales of San Antonio and Houston lawyer John Odam.

Also running is Libertarian Ray Dittmar, a paralegal and engineer from Houston.

Lezar, former assistant U.S. attorney general, has taken the hardest line, saying, "I think it's time to end parole in Texas. I also think it's time that criminals in this state receive sentences that every are every bit as severe as the harm they do to our citizens," said Lezar, 41.

Brown, 49, said the attorney general shouldn't become a "super prosecutor," but should provide stronger leadership and assistance to local law enforcement officials.

Steelhammer, 49, said he was concerned that some voters could be misled by the anti-crime arguments.

"I'm as much for law and order as anyone else, but the attorney general's office is more civil in nature than it is criminal," he said. Dittmar, 63, expressed similar concerns.

On the Democratic side, Odam has proposed a drug "strike force" in the attorney general's office that would work with local prosecutors.

"The ultimate prosecution of the case is with local prosecutors, but the attorney general's office must provide statewide assistance," said Odam, 46.

Morales, noting that the attorney general defended the state in a federal lawsuit over crowded prison conditions, said it's justifiable for that officeholder "to deal with some of the underlying problems and issues that gave rise to the lawsuit to begin with."

Those include early release and parole statutes, prison capacity, education, and efforts to prevent substance abuse, said Morales, 33. He is seeking to become the second Hispanic elected to statewide office in Texas; the first was Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez.

The attorney general has defended Texas in lawsuits involving not only the prison system, but school finance, judicial elections and the care given to mentally ill and mentally retarded people.

Lawsuits are initiated by the attorney general in anti-trust cases and to protect consumers, and the office pursues suits to protect the environment and public health at the behest of other agencies. The office also renders legal advisory opinions.

Of about 44,000 active cases in the attorney general's office, excluding child support cases, 22,000 concern bankruptcy, said Mattox spokesman Steve Hall. Of the remaining cases, fewer than 4,000 involve criminal law.

The child support enforcement program, with about 420,000 cases, also is administered by the attorney general. Although Mattox defends his handling of the program, those running for the office cite delays in processing cases and say they could do better.

Odam suggested a management change, saying the child support division should contact with local domestic relations offices.

Cooperation with local attorneys, judges and domestic relations offices has been stressed by Brown, while Ms. Hill said the attorney general's resources could be reallocated to make the child support enforcement division more effective.

Morales said his background as a lawmaker would help him convince the Legislature of the dividends that would come from an increased investment in child support collection and enforcement.

Lezar said he is studying how other states do the job of collecting and enforcing child support.

Ethnic riots in Soviet Central Asia spread to Uzbekistan

MOSCOW (AP) — Rioting in Soviet Central Asia spread Friday to Uzbekistan, where members of the Moslem majority fought ethnic Armenians in the fabled city of Samarkand, Radio Moscow reported.

Reinforcements of Interior Ministry troops were sent in and a curfew imposed, the state radio said, but quoted its Interfax news service as saying rallies and demonstrations continued.

Telephone calls from Moscow to Samarkand did not go through. Radio Moscow's midnight report on the "intercommunal rioting" contained no details and no one answered the telephones at Uzbekistan's official news agency Uztan in Tashkent, capital of the republic.

Violence in Uzbekistan follows seven days of unrest in the neighboring Central Asian republic of Tajikistan, a predominantly Moslem region bordering China and Afghanistan where 20 people were killed and 500 wounded, by Interior Ministry count.

Tass, the official news agency, reported earlier Friday that inflammatory leaflets had appeared in areas of Uzbekistan bordering Tajikistan.

"The leaflets demanded the immediate eviction of Russians from Central Asia," Tass said.

They denounced the alleged resettlement in Uzbekistan of refugees from Azerbaijan, presumably Christian ethnic Armenians, who were fleeing the two years of ethnic warfare in the Caucasus, the agency reported.

In Samarkand, Tass said, a man identified as Kh. Saidov was arrested for carrying 30 "anti-Armenian leaflets" and the Shab district court fined I. Guseinov $830 for advocating the eviction of Armenians and using force against them.

It was not clear what started the riots in Samarkand, an ancient city conquered by Alexander the Great in 329 B.C., but rumors of apartments being given to Armenian refugees also started the riots. Tajikistan's capital, Dushanbe, the night of Feb. 10.

Samarkand, about 1,700 miles southeast of Moscow, has a population of 390,000. It was the capital of the 14th-century Mongol conqueror Tamerlane.

Interfax said rumors were circulating in Dushanbe about a massacre of "infidels" supposedly planned for Saturday, and it voiced concern for the 200,000 Russian residents.

Nevertheless, Interfax said, authorities have brought Dushanbe under control. "There have been no casualties in the past 24 hours," it said. Residents interviewed by telephone agreed the city of 506,000 was quiet.

Izvestia, the government daily, said the central part of Dushanbe

Demonstrators in the Soviet republic of Tajikistan Wednesday call for the ouster of local Communist Party chief Kakhkar Makhkamov and other "traitors." Tajikistan has been in political and ethnic turmoil for about a week.

was being guarded by special Soviet army commando units, commonly known in the West as "Spetsnaz."

Tajikistan's party chief, Kakhkar M. Makhkamov, and the premier and president tendered their resignations Wednesday night, Tass said. But the policy-making Central Committee of the republic's Communist Party, in an emergency meeting, refused Friday to accept the resignations.

The committee decided that "while there is such a difficult situation in the republic, its leaders do not have the right to resign." Mansur Sultanov of the Gostelradio state broadcasting authority said from Dushanbe.

Sultanov said he hadn't heard the massacre rumors cited by Interfax but said an unauthorized demonstration was scheduled Saturday. At previous demonstrations, held in defiance of government orders, Tajiks demanded the ouster of their party and government leaders.

Ethnic Russians, who make up 10 percent of Tajikistan's population of 5 million, are worried about the unrest but not leaving, Sultanov said.

The scarcity of housing in Uzbekistan, which like Tajikistan has one of the Soviet Union's highest birth rates, seemed to be fueling nationalist sentiments there, Tass said.

Ethnic Albanians march in Yugoslav province

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Several thousand ethnic Albanians demonstrated in Kosovo and thousands of pupils stayed out of school to protest the virtual state of emergency in the violence-ridden southern province.

About 1,000 children marched peacefully through Titova Mitrovica, 30 miles north of Pristina, the provincial capital, with their hands raised in V signs, local journalists said.

School attendance in the province was low because most ethnic Albanian students stayed away in "a massive boycott of classes," the official Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported. Ninety percent of Kosovo's

1.9 million people are ethnic Albanians.

Belgrade radio said 1,000 people protested in Podujevo, 20 miles north of Pristina, demanding an end to the year-old state of emergency. It said riot police were present, but did not interfere.

Podujevo was a focus of protests and riots last month in which at least 26 ethnic Albanians were killed.

Violence began last year after Serbia, the largest of Yugoslavia's six republics, made constitutional changes that gave it almost total control over the poor southern region adjacent to Albania. Before that, Kosovo was an autonomous province within Serbia.

Recent unrest has been directed at the strict security measures imposed after the violence last year, and against alleged human rights abuses by authorities.

"Forces in Serbia that are interested in perpetuating tension in Kosovo have succeeded in blocking every attempt to solve existing problems," the Democratic Alliance of Kosovo, a new independent group, said in a statement Friday.

Serbian authorities claim the predominantly Moslem ethnic Albanians harass the Slavic minority in Kosovo, which was the heart of medieval, Christian Serbia.

Research indicates Dead Sea wasn't so dead 2,300 years ago

QUMRAN, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Researchers say the Dead Sea was a lively commercial center as far back as 2,300 years ago, not anywhere near like it is today with few boats and only sparse settlement along the shores.

The research may also throw new light on the Essenes who lived in the area, casting doubt on the accepted theory that they were isolated hermits.

Ariel Nissenbaum, a geo-chemist, said three stone anchors and mooring ropes found recently in the Dead Sea were the "first datable evidence" to support the theory that the Dead Sea was an active place for commerce in the 4th century B.C.

He said Carbon 14 testing at the Weizmann Institute of Science in Rehovot on well-preserved fiber rope fragments left open the possibility that the anchors were from ships sunk in the first Middle East oil war.

"The Dead Sea was not so dead. This is a misleading name given to the lake by the British," said Gideon Hadas, an Antiquities Authority archaeologist.

According to ancient historians, a huge naval battle was fought in 312 B.C. when Antigonus, the Seleucid ruler of Syria, tried to seize control of the trade in asphalt, which naturally forms from evaporating petroleum. He was repelled by the superior archery of the Nabateans of southern Jordan who were backed by Egypt.

Although there was uncertainty about the date because of a 100-year margin of error in dating, Nissenbaum said it is possible that "the anchors are mute witnesses to that battle."

Hadas found the 220-pound anchors along the western shore of the lake, which at 1,292 feet below sea level is the lowest spot on earth.

He said the ropes were well preserved because of the high salt content of the water and suggested other remains, even wooden boats, might also be nestling in the seabed.

Asphalt, which came to the surface in large blocks from fissures in the seabed, was the prize of ancient traders. Nissenbaum said it was used as mortar for buildings, an embalming agent in the Egyptians mummification process, a medicine to treat skin wounds and as a bug-killer.

In a new study of Dead Sea shipping, Nissenbaum said that up to the end of the Crusader era there was active boat traffic on the lake. Ships ferried wheat and corn grown in southern Jordan along the 50-mile length of the salt sea to the northern end where roads led to Jericho and Jerusalem.

A large Israelite farming community grew at Ein Gedi on the lake shore and Hasmonian kings built a series of fortresses in the area.

The Dead Sea region, surrounded by barren mountains and rocky desert, fell into economic decline after the Crusader period. Today the only boats on the lake are a few Israeli military patrol craft. Just a few small settlements occupy its shores, and foreign visitors come mostly to the health spas that promote the curative powers, especially for those afflicted with skin diseases, of the Dead Sea waters and mineral-rich mud.

Robert Eisenman, chairman of the religious studies department at California State University in Long Beach, suggests today's image of the Dead Sea as a lifeless region may be the basis of a misleading view of the Essenes, keepers of the Dead Sea scrolls.

Traditional theories about the sect portrays them as a small isolated community of hermits who sought refuge in a remote wilderness, but he suggests this may not have been the case.

His 15-member surveying and mapping expedition recently completed a study of the Qumran caves at the northern end of the Dead Sea. It was there that the scrolls dating to the second century B.C. were discovered in 1947.

Eisenman said his survey explored 282 desert caves along a 13-mile stretch of coast and found pottery as well as other evidence of man living in 62 of them. He said a 1962 survey found only 230 caves in the area and suggested man could live in only 17.

Eisenman added that his findings indicated there could be more scroll-bearing caves in the area and that many more had been inhabited than that originally suggested.

"There was a lot of habitation," he

Milton Bradley develops game for Hispanics

EAST LONGMEADOW, Mass. (AP) — After years of adapting its games for Hispanics by slipping a set of Spanish instructions into the box, Milton Bradley Co. is really going bilingual.

Its board game, "Sabado Gigante," based on a popular Hispanic network television show, was unveiled this week.

"This is the first time that in this industry I've seen a product that's adapted to the market rather than asking the market to adapt the product," said George R. Ditomasi, the company's president.

The $23 game, with printing in both Spanish and English, is based on the 3½-hour cable television show of the same name, broadcast on the Univision network.

Milton Bradley, the 130-year-old maker of such board games as "Chutes and Ladders," decided to develop a Hispanic game after research showed an estimated 20 million Hispanics in the U.S. game-buying market.

In addition, Ditomasi said, studies indicate Hispanic parents tend to spend more per capita on their children than the average U.S. parent.

said, pointing to pottery shards in front of a large cave half-way up the side of a cliff of brittle rock shale.

"This means it was not isolated like a lot of people think. The idea of hermetic Essenes contemplating their navels in isolation is rather peculiar."

ARDEN GROVER ENDORSES NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

I have been in the oil business here in Midland for over 35 years. Midland needs a judge with broad oil and gas related and commercial experience. I have worked personally with Nick Taylor on a wide variety of oil and gas legal matters and I know he has broad training, good judgment and complete integrity.

Nick is devoted to the service of our community and country, and I know he would be a great asset to Midland. For a judge who will serve with fairness to all, please join me in voting for Nick Taylor in the Republican Primary on March 13, 1990.

Ice harvesting tradition lives on in remote area of Maine

By GLENN ADAMS

OQUOSSOC, Maine (AP) — When the sun beats down on this remote corner of Maine this summer, campers will refresh their parched throats with drinks cooled by ice cut months earlier from the sprawling lake glistening at their doorsteps.

Steve Philbrick and his hearty band of ice harvesters, men more committed to preserving a tradition than making a buck, have seen to that.

With 5-foot steel saws, iron chisels, metal-tipped pick poles and brute strength, Philbrick and his seven men carved 2,000 blocks from the 2-foot slab covering Mooselookmeguntic Lake while winter was in its arctic prime.

They stacked mountains of light blue ice between layers of sawdust in two well-insulated icehouses, which will remain sealed tight until blocks are removed during summer.

Much of the ice will be used at the resort Philbrick runs, providing refrigeration in its kitchen and a convenient cooler for the guests renting cabins strung along the shore in this western Maine community. Philbrick, who also sells ice blocks, has one of the few commercially viable ice harvesting operations left.

His hand attack the work with vigor, enthusiasm and wit.

"I'd rather do this any day than sit in the house," said Ray Christy, whose house-moving business slows down during winter. "We're keeping the old times flowing, the tradition going. I'll do it as long as (Philbrick) does."

"It's something that's not done much any more and you want to be part of it," said Bob Brown, a transplanted New Jersey draftsman, who also runs a local computer shop and bakery. "I'd rather be here sawing ice than down there making more money."

A century ago, Maine was famous for the crystal-clear chunks it exported all over the world, said Richard Judd, an assistant professor of history at the University of Maine.

Around 1880, the peak of Maine's ice trade, up to 1 million tons a year were cut in Maine, mostly from river valleys in southern Maine. The ice, which made excellent ballast for clippers, was loaded between layers of straw and sawdust and carried to ports in the South, the Caribbean, South America and beyond, said Judd.

As ice harvesting all but vanished, a few old timers who had cut it in their younger days passed their skills to younger men interested in preserving the craft.

Philbrick, 36, remembers cutting ice every winter during his youth with his grandfather, Ronnie Turmenne, who is now 85 and cut ice until five years ago. In Turmenne's prime, "he did four or five times the scale" of the current operation, said Philbrick.

"I was brought up with it."

Bulldogs slip in district's back door

By BILL PRICE

ABILENE — Abilene High proved why its home court is as big an advantage as there is in District 4-5A boys basketball, as about 1,200 screaming AHS fans packed Eagle Gymnasium and saw their team take its third straight district title with a 70-65 defeat of Midland High Friday night.

AHS ended the regular season at 21-9 and 11-1 in 4-5A, and is set to face Amarillo High in bi-district at a date and site still to be determined.

For the Bulldogs, the stage is now set for a second place district playoff at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday against San Angelo at the Big Spring High School gym. MHS (21-11 and 9-3) finished the regular season deadlocked with the Bobcats for the second 4-5A playoff seed, despite losing twice to San Angelo in district play.

As three-year Eagle starter Donald Hall put it, "The fans are our sixth man." Of course, Hall had plenty to do with the Dogs' downfall by leading all scorers with 23 points.

But after the game, nobody questioned that a gym filled to capacity (fans were being turned away at the doors even before the teams began pre-game warmups) is anything but a decided advantage for the home team in a close game.

"These people had a large part to play in our win tonight, but our kids earned it. The players are the ones who worked their tails off all season for this moment," said AHS coach Gerald Coppedge.

With the district title hanging in the balance, both teams appeared tight as the game opened with MHS misfiring 11 times before sinking a field goal. However, the War Birds were unable to capitalize, as AHS hit 6-of-17 in the first quarter and a dismal 13-of-41 from the field in the first half.

That fact proved to be what gave the Dogs a three-point edge at the end of both the first and second periods (15-12 and 34-31).

AHS warmed up in the third quarter, though, breezed to a 9-of-17 field goal mark and scored 22 points in that eight minute span. Meanwhile, MHS tried to slow the pace of the game, only to find its offense was the one suffering.

The Bulldogs scored 17 points in the quarter, which saw three ties and the lead change hands six times, and were behind by one goal entering the fourth period, 53-51.

MHS' Rodrick Hickey scored 15 points in the first half, but was limited to one basket in the third quarter. Then Hickey quickly saw his game end, as he picked up his fourth personal foul with 6:05 to play in the game and fouled out with 4:05 left.

"We were in the game all the way. If we just could've made some shots toward then end we would have won it," said Jack Stephenson, MHS coach. "But if you want to know what the turning point was, it was when Hickey fouled out. That's it right there. It sure limited what we could do later."

"Both teams were tight early on, and that showed in the way they were shooting," Coppedge said, "but we played a little bit better in the second half, and some shots started to fall for us. It was just one of those nights."

Hickey was high point for the Dogs with 17 points, and Scott Melzer scored 16. Albert Ray sank a pair of three-pointers on his way to 14 points.

Behind Hall for AHS was Shannon Garrett with 12 points and Chris Balanciere with 10.

The junior varsity match Friday was also a close affair, with MHS overcoming an 11-point deficit in the second quarter to win by one, 79-78. Tyler Beard and Stephen

Stueckler's 700th

Rebs close season on up note

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Editor

Midland Lee head basketball coach Paul Stueckler had just put the 700th notch on his coaching gun with a 62-55 win over Abilene Cooper at Chaparral Center Friday night, but he didn't even mention it to his Rebels in the post game locker room.

Seven hundred victories, but Stueckler turned this one over to his team.

"I'm so happy you guys could win your last game," Stueckler told his team after No. 700. "I want to say this from the heart. You guys have been so wonderful to work with. You've run the offense as good as any team I've had. You made coaching fun again."

This Lee team finishes the season with 13-16 overall record and a 4-8 District 4-5A mark, tying Cooper for fourth place. It was also a team that could easily add four more victories with a break or two. Still, Stueckler was pleased.

"You don't measure athletics by how many wins you have, but if you do the best you can do, and I felt these kids did that," said Stueckler.

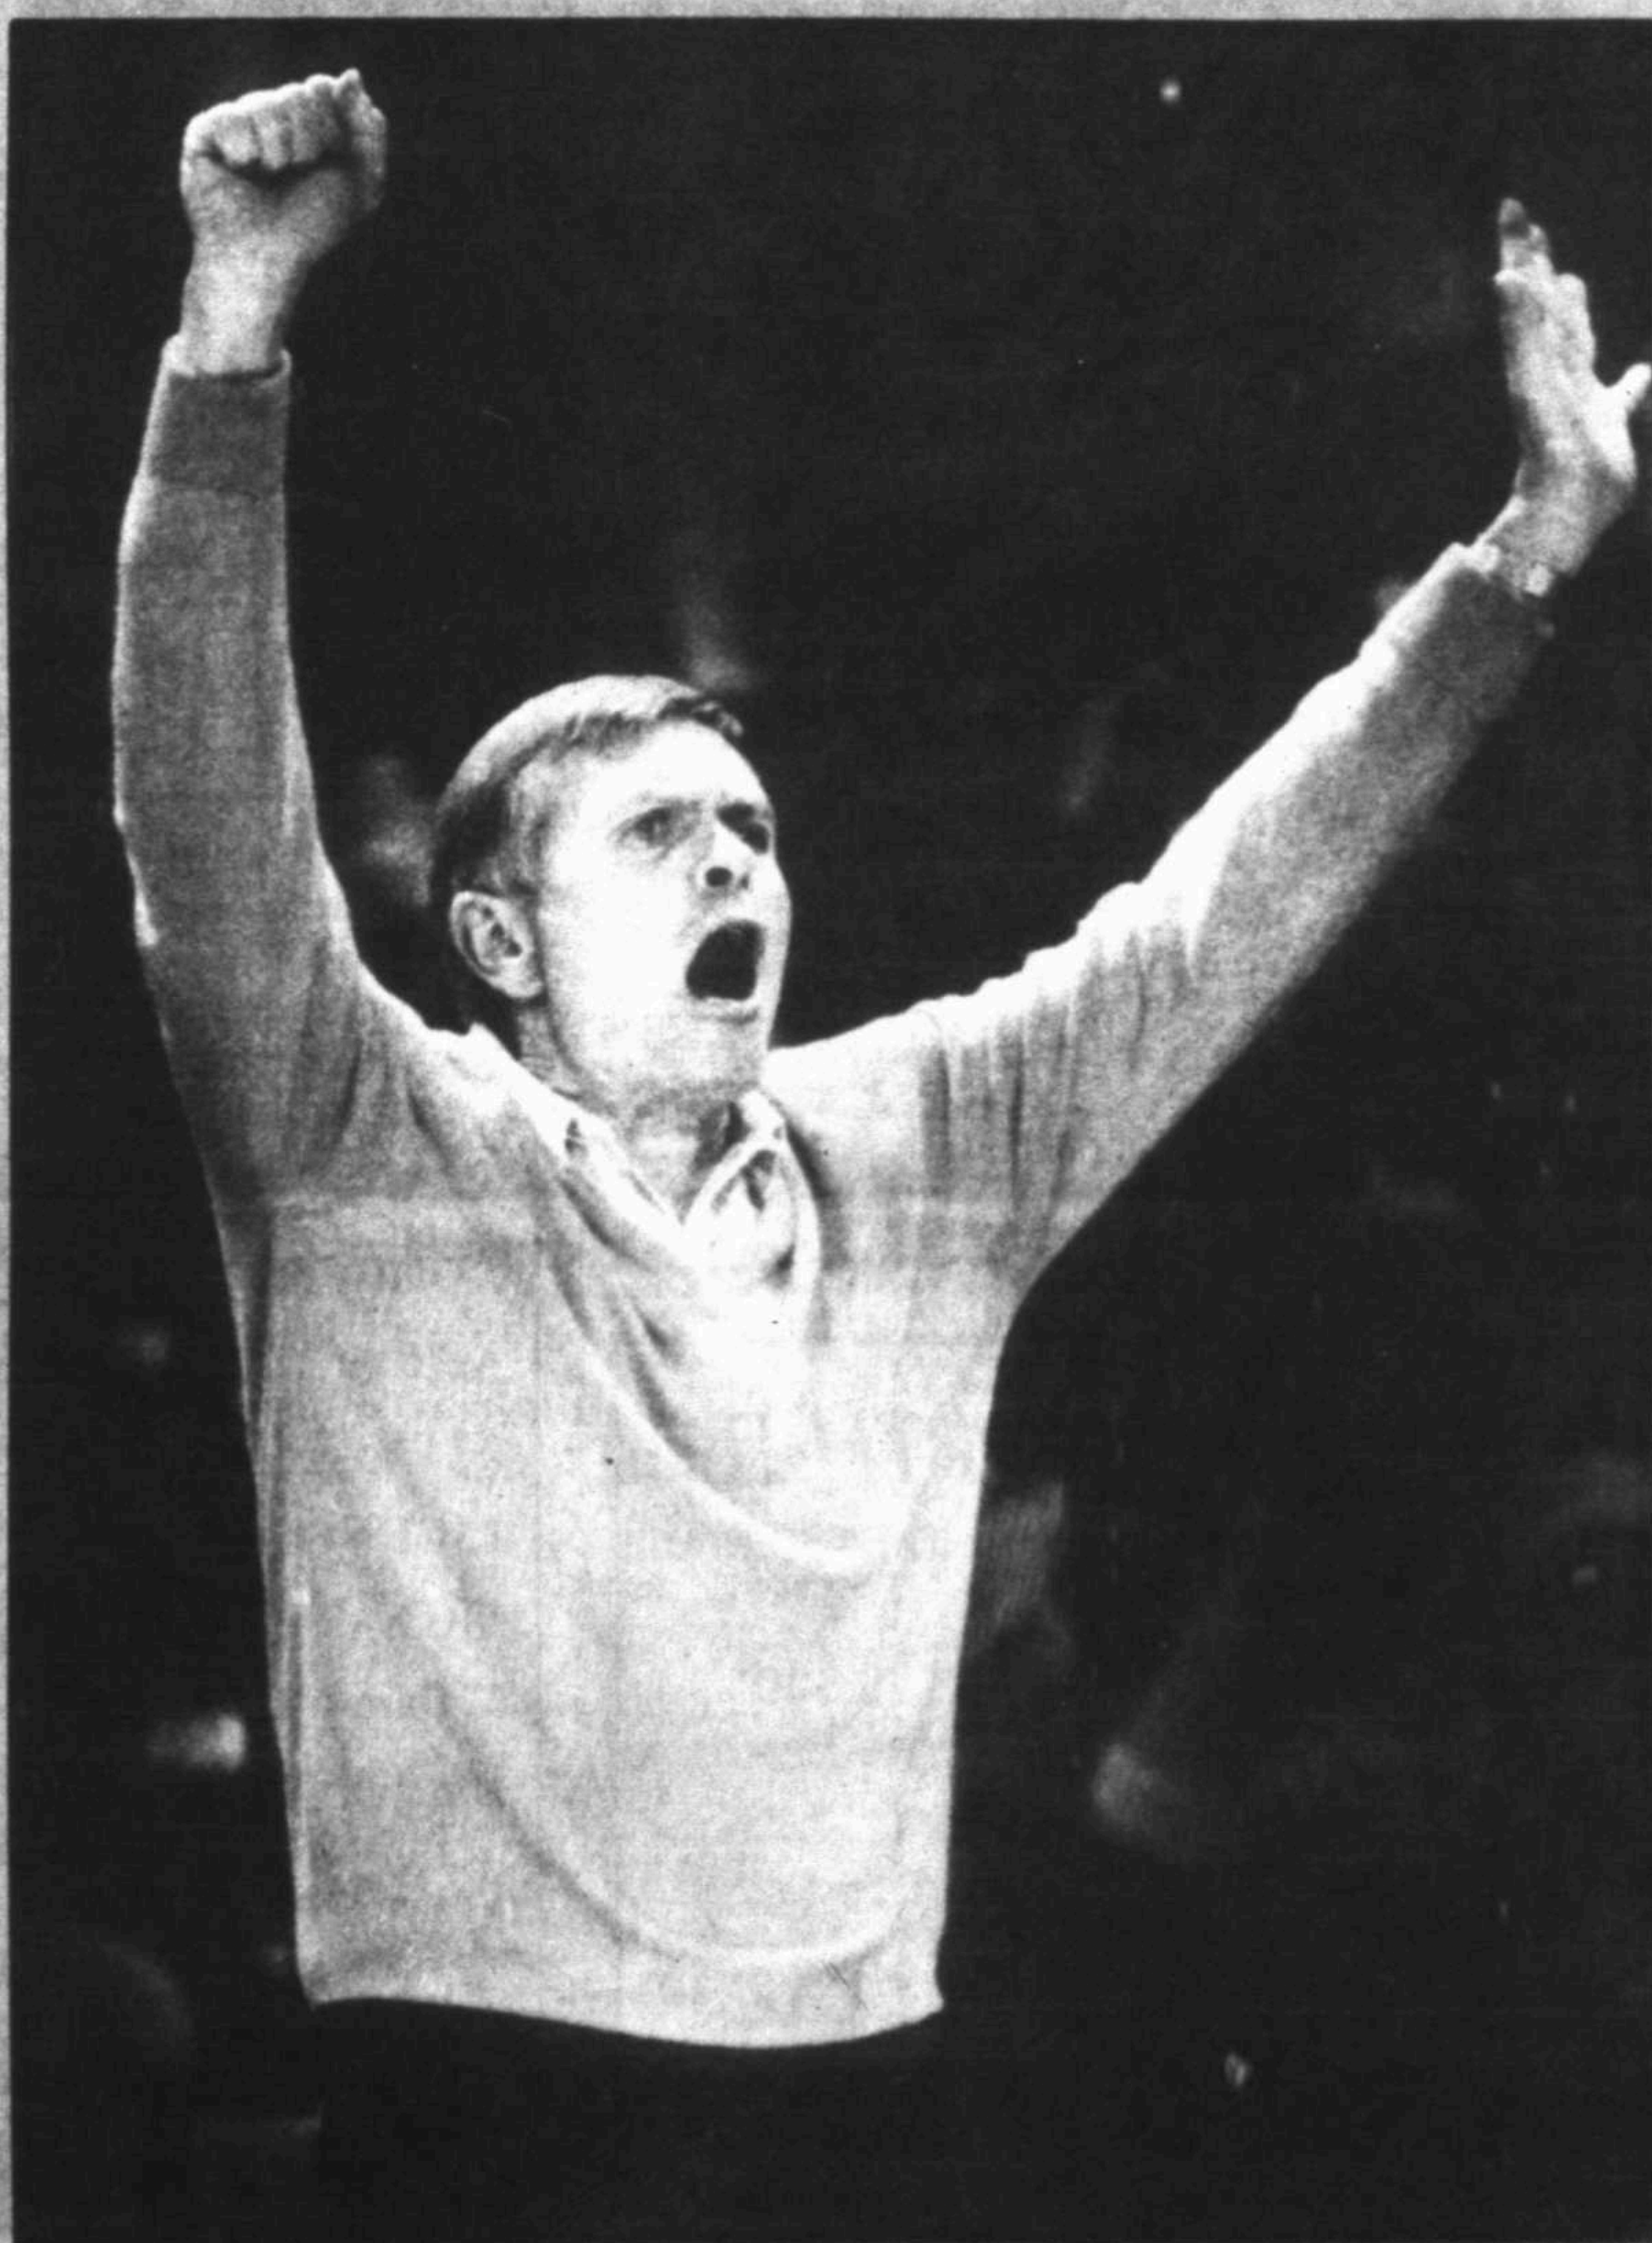

But don't ever underestimate kids. They knew the task at hand.

"Coach was unselfish, not talking about 700 all week," said senior guard Greg Crowe. "He told us not to think about the 700, but he got it and it makes us all feel good."

Senior guard Doug Cochran said, "We were talking about it before the game and we don't know how many more years Coach has. I know, for one, I didn't want to be on the team that left him at 699."

Stueckler did talk about his 700th victory when asked, however, but he tried to downplay the importance of reaching one of the real coaching milestones in Texas high school basketball.

"The 700 thing is fine, and I'd be crazy to say I didn't like it, but these kids winning the last game is the big thing. They deserve it. I didn't play a minute," said Stueckler. "Besides, if you get 700, you just want 800. It doesn't take too long if you win 30 games a year." Early in this one, however, it didn't look good for Stueckler or the Rebels as Cooper rolled to an 8-0 run to

Commissioner 'worried' after Friday meetings

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The baseball talks recessed for the weekend on Friday with the union saying it finally felt owners were negotiating seriously, and management saying discussions were at "an important juncture."

On the second day of the lockout of 1990, negotiators and players finished two days of what union chief Donald Fehr called "reasonably heated" meetings with Commissioner Fay Vincent. The talks covered Vincent's nine-point proposal, which calls for a 75 percent cap in salary arbitration increases and a settlement of the three collusion cases.

Fehr, the executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, said the odds of the union accepting an arbitration cap were "reasonably long," and Vincent said the union told him it "simply will not discuss" arbitration limits. Yet Fehr said he thought it was a positive sign that Vincent substituted his plan for the revenue-sharing proposal.

"The discussions have been focusing quite precisely on the issues that divide us," Fehr said. "They are serious discussions. Important questions are being asked. We feel for the first time ... that the clubs are serious about trying to reach an agreement. ... I did not believe that before."

Talks broke for the weekend to give both sides time to assess their positions.

"I think we're at an important juncture. We ought to know by the end of the (next) week where we are on this," management negotiator Chuck O'Connor said after the four-hour session, the 23rd since negotiations began Nov. 28.

"It is important to take a step back, do some more internal work and try to see where this leads," said Fehr, who will go to Tampa, Fla., on Sunday to speak at the Associated Press Sports Editors' winter meetings.

"I don't want to tell you or suggest that there's been a monumental breakthrough," Fehr said. "On the other hand, I don't want to say that they've been unimportant, meaningless or otherwise not useful."

With spring training shut down across Arizona and Florida for the fourth time in 18 years, O'Connor repeated that management will not open camps until an agreement is reached. Fehr said he had no reason to think owners would change their position on that.

"They've taken the step and it will be very difficult psychologically for them to take a step back no matter how silly (the lockout) might be," Fehr said.

Vincent said after Thursday's meeting that he was "extremely pessimistic" about reaching an agree-

Vincent's Proposals

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Fay Vincent's nine-point proposal in the baseball negotiations:

- Two-year reopener for management.
- Study committee on revenue sharing and industry economic conditions.
- Management's pay-for-performance proposal is dropped.
- No changes in free agency rules.
- Seventy-five percent cap on salary increases for players in arbitration, combined with minimum salaries of $75,000 for first-year players, $125,000 for players with 1-2 years of service and $200,000 for players with 2-3 years of service.
- No change in management's $39 million yearly contribution to the benefit plan.
- A settlement of outstanding collusion cases and protection for the union against future collusion.
- Suggestions on other related issues, including the 25-man roster, waivers and outright assignments.
- A written agreement instead of the memorandum of understanding baseball has been operating in since 1985.

ment in the short-term. On Friday he said he was "very worried ... that we are not heading toward something that will be acceptable to both parties."

"Maybe it's a matter of perspective in terms of what you're looking for or what you see," said Fehr, whose outlook has been slightly more positive in the last two days.

According to Vincent, "The union has said, 'We will not discuss any form of limit on free agency and we will not discuss any kind of limit on arbitration. We simply will not discuss it.'"

"That makes middle ground more difficult," Vincent said. "That's really saying, if you want to talk about these issues, you have to be really willing to put the season at risk and you really have to be willing to try to destroy the union. To which I say nobody wants to destroy the union. It isn't rational."

The first exhibition games are scheduled for March 1. O'Connor said the spring training schedule would not be effected if an agree-

Borden County sits down Rankin

Lady Coyotes chalk up eighth bi-district win in decade

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

FORSAN — While Borden County girls basketball coach Bill May hopes "next year" is this year, Rankin mentor Gary Durham and his Red Devils will have to sit out the rest of this year's playoff dance.

The Borden County Lady Coyotes, the prohibitive District 16A winners, scored their eighth bi-district win in 10 years with a convincing 57-25 win over the Red Devils here Friday. The Lady Coyotes face the Marathon-Tornillo winner in area playoff action at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Chaparral Center.

Despite Borden County's bi-district success, the Lady Coyotes have never gotten past the Region I semifinals, thanks to perennial state powers Nazareth, Sudan and Happy.

The Red Devils missed their first nine shots from the field to help Borden County open up a 10-0 lead, and Durham admitted that wasn't what he'd had in mind for a rousing start.

Durham said playoff pressure might have gotten the best of the Red Devils.

"These kids had never been in anything like this," the Red Devil mentor said.

Rankin, the District 15-A runnerup, finally scored on Christy Walker's bank shot with 52 seconds left in the first period, and the Red Devits went on to make a game of it in the second quarter. Junior Carrie Culpepper sank two free throws and a medium-range basket in quick succession early in the period to cut Borden County's lead to 14-10.

The Red Devils were still in the hunt with less than a minute to go in the half, especially when the Lady Coyotes missed three front ends of a one-and-one shooting opportunity. Borden County scored the last five points of the half to take a 27-14 halftime lead.

It was all downhill from that point on for the few Rankin partisans in attendance. The Red Devils suffered through another dry run at the beginning of the second half, courtesy of repeated turnovers.

Gena Criswell kept the Red Devils from a totally dry eight-minute run on a bucket with 1:18 left in the period. The Red Devils took only four shots in the period, while Borden County padded its lead to 40-16 going into the final eight minutes.

Despite the lopsided defeat, Durham feels like the Red Devil program is on the upswing — with only point guard Leticia Garcia graduating off this year's squad.

"Our girls have improved so much since the start of the season," he said. "We've got a real junior varsity squad coming up, too."

Culpepper led Rankin with 10 points. Borden County's Amy Lewis led all scorers with 18 points, while Lisha Sternadel added 14 points for the Lady Coyotes.

The Red Devils finished at 10-19, but 14 of those losses were to playoff-bound teams — by an average margin of four points.

Meanwhile, May thinks he has the answer to the Lady Coyotes' regional tournament woes.

"We've always felt like we can compete," May said. "I think it's been a psychological thing with us."

Bobcats remain in hunt for 4-5A playoff spot

From Staff Reports

SAN ANGELO — The San Angelo Bobcats blasted Odessa Permian 96-66 here Friday night to keep their state basketball playoff hopes alive, tying Midland High for second place.

Midland High lost to Abilene High Friday, leaving both MHS and San Angelo with 9-3 District 4-5A records. The two teams will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Big Spring High School in a one-game playoff to decide which team advances to bi-district against Plainview, the District 3-5A champion who has a 27-4 season record and won the district title with a 13-1 mark.

The Bobcats got a big 27 points from Ty Brown, but three other teammates also hit in double figures with Corey Grays getting 17, Dewayne Lofton 14 and 10 off the bench from Bobby Anson.

San Angelo led by a meager five points at the half, but outscored Permian 53-26 in the second half. Permian got 18 points from Erskine Talbert, 13 from D.J. Ross and 12 from Tony Daniels. Still, the Panthers finished in last place with a 2-10 league mark.

This marks the second consecutive year that San Angelo and Midland High have had to meet in a district playoff to decide second place. MHS won last year in Big Spring, but has lost twice to the Bobcats this year.

Canoe scored 17 points each, John King had 15 and Sherman Peterson added 10 as the Bulldog JV ended the season at 28-1 and 12-0 in district.

The winner of the Midland High-San Angelo playoff Tuesday will advance to the bi-district round against District 3-5A champion Plainview, which posted a 13-1 record in that loop and was state ranked much of the year. The date and place of that matchup hasn't been determined.

Tuesday's playoff is the second year in a row these two teams have ended up in Big Spring to decide second place. MHS won last year's match before losing to Amarillo High in bi-district action. MHS has lost two of its last three games going into that playoff with the Bobcats, the same as San Angelo.

NE Louisiana takes lead

MONROE, La. (AP) — Northeast Louisiana took a six-point lead Friday after the first day of the Southland Conference Indoor Track and Field Championships.

Northeast, which is trying to regain the championship it lost last year after winning it three years in a row, scored 28 points in the four events held Friday afternoon. North Texas and defending champion Southwest Texas were next with 22 points followed by pre-meet favorite Texas-Arlington with 20.

Koss breaks school scoring record in Midland Baptist game

From Staff Reports

Phil Koss hit 12 of his first 13 shots and ended up with a school record 38 points Friday as Midland Baptist routed Sherwood Baptist 85-63.

Koss broke his own school single game scoring mark of 37 with the performance. Koss also had 25 rebounds as Midland Baptist outrebounded Sherwood by a 67-21 margin. He ended up hitting 18 of 24 shots.

Heath Kuhlmann had 17 points in the win while Chris McKinney added 13 and Louis Shanks 10.

Sherwood got 23 points from Scott Adams and 18 from Mike Messing.

Lady Tornados down Fabens in blowout, 65-23

From Staff Reports

PECOS — The Lamesa Lady Tornados used a ferocious full-court press to knock off Fabens 65-23 in Class 3A bi-district girls basketball action here Thursday.

The Lady Tors, 19-6, opened up a 41-10 halftime lead before Fabens got untracked in the third quarter, though it was too late for the El Paso-area school.

Sophomore Saresa Butler led the Lady Tors with 28 points, while Tiffany Weeks added 12.

Lamesa will face the Dimmitt-Periyton winner in area round action next week.

"I knew the guys were trying hard to win this one for me, and I think that's why we got off to such a poor start. We were pressing a little early," Stueckler noted.

Lee finally got his first lead of the game with 2:38 left to play in the second quarter as senior David Meade got hot. Meade scored 11 second quarter points and went on to hit 23 for the night, his best district performance of the year.

"I just gave it my all," said Meade. "It was my highest district game and if I was going to go out with this game, I wanted it to be my best."

Junior Eugene Hicks came in with 14 points while Crowe had 13. Lee held 4-5A scoring leader Mitch Royals to 16 points and just six in the second half. Royals came in averaging 23 points per loop outing.

Lee also did a good job on Raymond Hunter, limiting him to just 11 points, two in the second half before he fouled out. Lanny Owens came off the bench to hit 11 points for Cooper.

The score was tied six times and there were 12 lead changes until a Meade layup in the third period was followed by a Crowe three-pointer for a 44-39 lead and the Rebels never trailed again, leading by as many as eight points down the stretch.

There has been speculation that Stueckler may retire after 35 years in the profession, 29 at Lee. But he said that decision hasn't been made.

"I'm eligible (for retirement), but I don't want to make an emotional decision like that during the course of a season," said Stueckler. "I would like to take a few weeks, go down to the state tournament and think about it. I just don't know if I'm ready to retire right now. But I will look at it."

In junior varsity action, the Rebels beat Cooper 49-28 to finish the season with a 14-12 record. Herb Crisp led the Rebels with nine points.

Mackey leads Greenwood to area

From Staff Reports

WALL — Shelly Mackey sank four free throws in the last 80 seconds to help the Greenwood Rangerettes successfully defend their bi-district girls basketball championship over the Fredericksburg Billies, 50-44, here Friday.

The Rangerettes, 20-9, face the Comanche-Bowie bi-district winner in area playoff action Monday or Tuesday.

Greenwood appeared to have the game well in hand after leading 38-25 going into the fourth quarter, but the Billies cut the gap to 43-41 with 2:40 left before the Rangerettes made seven of 10 free throws to put the game away.

Mackey was held scoreless from the field, but did sink six-of-seven from the free throw line, including her clutch shots down the stretch.

Rebels, Panthers meet for first time on soccer field

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Midland Lee and Odessa Permian are going to war today. Sound familiar?

It may not, after it is considered that there will be neither a national television crew nor 10,000 screaming fans. After all, high school soccer is in its infancy in West Texas.

But you can bet the Rebel mascot that Lee mentor Eddie Bull is taking today's 2 p.m. match at the Lee field seriously. He has no choice, even though Permian has shown a dramatic inability to defeat anybody but hapless Odessa High in District 3 action.

The Rebels are tied with Abilene Cooper and Midland High for third place in district play. It stands to reason that any of the three teams that lose any more matches are in big trouble playoff-wise, since first-place San Angelo is flying high with a 4-0 district mark, while Abilene High is nipping at the Bobcats' heels with a 3-0-1 district mark.

Lee and MHS are 2-2 in district action, while Cooper is 2-2-1 to tie the others percentage-wise.

In other district action, Midland High travels to Odessa High, while Abilene High visits San Angelo in a showdown of undefeateds — though AHS was tied by Cooper in the district opener.

Bull worries about Permian's fledgling team — in its first season of interscholastic competition.

"If you don't get intense, anybody can beat you," Bull said. "We have to play well every game."

For the most part, the Rebels have competed well in district action — losing to front-runners Abilene High and San Angelo in overtime.

Lee, 5-2 overall, has used a sticky defense to forge its winning record.

4-5A Soccer

National Merit Scholar finalist Brian Wojcik leads a heady group of Rebel defenders, while goalkeeper Joel Renner has provided a solid last line of defense in his bid for all-district honors.

"You have to be impressed with Joel Renner," Bull said. "He's a good enough athlete to high jump for us in the spring."

Offensively, left forward Jordan Reed has scored nine of the Rebels' 17 goals this season. Russ Moore has scored twice on penalty kicks, while six other players have scored once each.

NBA

Sixers, Sonics make overtime history

Associated Press

Rick Mahorn and Johnny Dawkins had two free throws apiece — the only points in the extra period — as the Philadelphia 76ers won the lowest-scoring overtime game in NBA history, 100-96 over the Seattle SuperSonics.

Neither team made a field goal in the five-minute overtime, with Mahorn scoring the first points with 1:38 left and Johnny Dawkins sealing the victory with seven seconds remaining.

The 76ers were 0-for-6 and Seattle 0-for-8 from the field in overtime. The lowest-scoring overtime period in NBA history was six points — three each by Philadelphia and Washington on Nov. 15, 1975.

It was only the third time since the advent of the 24-second clock that a team was shut out in overtime. Houston was blanked against Portland on Jan. 22, 1983 and the Lakers were shut out 11-0 against Detroit last Dec. 1.

Charles Barkley scored 23 points and Dawkins added 20 to lead the 76ers. Xavier McDaniel had 25 points and Derrick McKee 22 for Seattle.

The SuperSonics held a 96-92 lead on a rebound basket by McKee with 1:04 remaining. However, Mahorn scored for Philadelphia with 22 seconds to go and then deflected a pass that Derek Smith converted into a game-tying layup with six seconds on the clock.

The tie was the 25th of a game that saw neither team lead by more than six points.

The first half had 15 ties, and neither team led by more than four points. Seattle connected on 20 of 36 shots in the half, led by McDaniel, who was 8-for-12 with 17 points.

A layup by Mike Gminski with 4:37 left in the third quarter gave Philadelphia a 67-61 advantage, but the Sonics came back to take a 72-71 lead on a jump shot by Jim Farmer with 22 seconds left in the period.

Hornets 113, Nuggets 107

Robert Reid made four crucial baskets in the final seven minutes as the Charlotte Hornets broke a 12-game losing streak and gave Coach Gene Littles his first victory.

Reid, who returned for a second stint with the Hornets after being traded to Portland, hit three straight baskets to help Charlotte open a 103-91 lead midway through the fourth period. When Denver rallied, Reid converted a three-point play to give Littles his first victory after seven losses.

Littles replaced Dick Harter on Jan. 31.

Reid and Armon Gilliam scored 19 points each for Charlotte to lead seven players in double figures.

Fat Lever scored 14 of his 26 points in the fourth period to lead Denver, which lost its third straight game. Alex English added 20 points for the Nuggets, who lost to Charlotte 110-108 in Denver on Jan. 18.

Texas A&M to interview Idaho head coach

Associated Press

DALLAS — Texas A&M Athletic Director John David Crow has asked Idaho for permission to interview basketball coach Kermit Davis Jr. for the vacant A&M head coaching job, a Dallas newspaper reported Friday.

Davis, 30, is the second-youngest Division I coach. He has a 46-10 record.

In two years as a head coach and Idaho appears headed for a second consecutive NCAA tournament bid. Idaho Athletic Director Gary Hunter gave permission to Crow to interview Davis, but a more formal interview would probably be put off until after the season, the coach told the Dallas Times Herald.

"I'm very interested," Davis said. "Texas A&M is a job I think a lot of people around the country would be interested in because of the tradition that school has in all of its athletic programs."

"The following they've gathered in the booster organizations is outstanding. When you think of alumni allegiance, probably Notre Dame and A&M are ahead of everyone else."

John Thornton became interim coach of the Aggies Jan. 22 when Shelby Metcalf resigned after 27 years.

Crow was on vacation in California Thursday and unavailable for comment, the newspaper reported. Crow issued a statement Wednesday saying that no coach has been officially contacted.

"We are in the process of evaluating several possible candidates for the position," Crow's statement continued. "I have no plans of talking to any coach in the immediate future."

Charlotte guard Rex Chapman, right, falls as he scrambles for control with Denver's Michael Adams.

Denver closed the 12-point deficit to 104-100 on Lever's two free throws with 3:26 left. Following a Denver turnover, Kenny Gattison hit a follow shot with 2:39 left.

Lever then missed a 3-point try before Reid dove the lane for a basket, was fouled and got the free throw with 1:44 left for a 109-100 advantage.

Charlotte came back from a 10-point deficit with a 12-2 run in the second period for a 43-40 lead after Dell Curry's 20-footer at 5:56. The lead changed six times after that, the last on Gattison's jumper that gave the Hornets a 56-54 edge with 11 seconds left in the half. Charlotte never trailed again.

Cavaliers 109, Hawks 101
Brad Daugherty had 21 points and 14 rebounds and started a game-ending 11-3 run with a three-point play as the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Atlanta Hawks.

Daugherty, playing in his seventh game since returning from August foot surgery, broke a 98-98 tie with a layup and foul shot with 3:13 to go.

Larry Nance followed with a layup on an alley-oop pass from Steve Kerr, and after Moses Malone made one of two free throws, Nance scored the next four points on a pair of free throws and a layup, making it 107-99. Kerr's layup with five seconds left clinched it before Malone made a layup at the buzzer — Atlanta's only field goal in the final 3:37. Dominique Wilkins scored 25 points and Malone 23 for Atlanta. John Williams added 20 for Cleveland.

The Hawks, fighting to stay ahead of Cleveland for the final Eastern Conference playoff spot, have lost eight of their last 10 games. Cleveland has won six of nine.

Atlanta took a six-point lead midway through the third quarter, but, as in the fourth, struggled in the closing minutes. The Hawks scored five points in the final 6:16 of the third quarter and trailed 87-80 entering the final period.

A 12-3 Atlanta surge, keyed by six points from Wilkins, tied it 98-98 with 3:37 to play.

Timberwolves 111, Pacers 105
Sam Mitchell came off the bench to score 24 points, including a pair of baskets that started a decisive 9-1 run late in the game, as Minnesota held on for a victory over Indiana. The victory was the expansion Timberwolves' second straight and ended a four-game winning streak by the Pacers, who were led by Reggie Miller with 32 points.

Consecutive baskets by Mitchell gave Minnesota a 106-104 lead with 58 seconds to play. Tony Campbell scored on a drive 40 seconds later to make it 108-104, and Sidney Lowe's free throws with 11 seconds left cemented the victory.

Minnesota hit its first six shots of the second half, including Pooh Richardson's 3-pointer with 8:52 to go in the third quarter, to take a 63-61 lead. The Timberwolves outscored the Pacers 10-4 late in the third quarter to widen their margin to 84-75 with 1:12 remaining.

But the Pacers overtook the Timberwolves midway through the fourth quarter with a 12-6 run.

Miller's three-point play off a steal with 3:10 to go knotted the score at 100-100. Miller scored on a drive with 1:59 to play to give Indiana a 104-102 lead.

Spurs 100, Jazz 86

Terry Cummings scored 14 of his 27 points in the fourth quarter and San Antonio finished the game with a 15-0 run Friday night to knock off Midwest Division leader Utah.

Utah, which got 28 points from Karl Malone, now holds a half-game edge over the Spurs, who had lost three straight games.

Trailing 86-85 with 5:37 to play, the Spurs held the Jazz without a point the rest of the way. Cummings accounted for 10 points during the run.

Utah erased an eight-point deficit with an 11-2 run at the end of the third period, taking a 73-72 lead into the fourth quarter.

Bulls 119, Heat 105

Michael Jordan scored 26 points and Scottie Pippen added 23 as the Chicago Bulls handed the Miami Heat their fifth straight loss.

Rookie Stacey King scored a season-high 18 points and had 10 rebounds, while John Paxson also had 18 for Chicago, which won for the 19th time at home against just two defeats. The Bulls are 5-0 against the Heat.

Billy Thompson scored 20 points for Miami, which lost for the 22nd time in 27 road contests.

Paxson scored nine points and Jordan added eight in the third quarter when the Bulls increased a 72-66 lead to 89-73 with 6:19 left. They entered the final quarter leading 95-82 and Jordan did not play in the final 12 minutes.

Suns 135, Warriors 114

Jeff Hornacek matched his season-high with 30 points and Tom Chambers added 29 as the Phoenix Suns averted a second-half collapse to beat Golden State, their 13th consecutive victory at home.

The Warriors lost for the eighth straight time at Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum despite Mitch Richmond's 27 points and 20 apiece from Chris Mullin and rookie Tim Hardaway.

Simmons shows he can play defense, too

Associated Press

On a night when he struggled offensively, Lionel Simmons did it with defense. Simmons' steal sparked a 10-0 run that gave 14th-ranked La Salle a halftime lead it never relinquished as La Salle went on to beat Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference rival Iona 95-78 on Friday night.

It was the 13th straight victory for La Salle (21-1, 11-0). Iona (10-14, 5-9) had a two-game win streak snapped.

With Iona leading 30-27 with 5:04 left in the half, Simmons stole the ball and fed Doug Overton for an easy layup.

"Fortunately, we got our defense going. We got most of our points off our defense," said Simmons, who scored 20 points despite shooting only 7 of 21 from the field. He was 6-for-9 from the foul line.

"I didn't play nearly as well as I am capable of doing," he said. "I didn't shoot well and I didn't rebound well."

Speedy Morris said Simmons has been too concerned about scoring.

"I think that the 3,000 points is on his mind," Morris said of Simmons, who has 2,939 career points. "I think he should forget it and go out and play and just be Lionel Simmons. It's kind of taking its toll a little bit."

"Our defense did it tonight for us," agreed Overton, who led the Explorers with 21 points.

Overton said the game was "full of peaks and valleys, but our games always seem to play like this."

"You can't play perfect basketball for 40 minutes and, besides, everybody is looking for us," he said. "We need to be scared a little bit to wake up, but fortunately we are capable of responding and we usually do."

Simmons added, "We have a tendency to play a little lazy at times, but then we put each other on the back and tell each other to pick it up and play the type of defense that we are capable of playing."

La Salle opened the second half with a 12-4 run, ending with a jump shot by Randy Woods for a 49-34 lead with 15:53 to go.

Iona pulled to 63-55 with 7:14 to go, but La Salle then scored the next 10 points to put the game away.

Sean Green and Jory Johnson scored 17 points each for Iona, which also got 16 from Shawn Worthy.

No. 11 Oklahoma 88, Colorado 64
Jackie Jones scored a career-high 30 points Friday night and 11th-ranked Oklahoma extended its home winning streak to 43 games by beating Colorado.

Oklahoma (19-3 overall, 7-2 in the Big Eight) put the game away with a 19-2 spurt in the final five minutes to beat Colorado for the 20th straight time. The Buffaloes (10-14, 2-9) lost their 50th straight regular-season game in the conference.

Jones scored 17 in the first half — including 13 in a row at one point — as the Sooners built a 10-point lead.

But Colorado kept the Sooners from playing their usual uptempo style and pulled within two on several occasions. Shaun Vandiver did most of the work on offense, scoring 12 of his 22 points as the Buffaloes trailed 38-30 at the break.

Skeeter Henry and William Davis got going in the second half, although Colorado stayed within single digits until the late collapse. The Buffaloes made only one field goal in the last 4:42, while Oklahoma scored 19 points.

Henry scored 15 of his 21 points after half-time.

Bucky Dent works out little Yankees

Associated Press

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. — Bucky Dent wore his New York Yankees uniform with the familiar No. 20 and stood near second base teaching the art of infield play.

But two things were wrong with the picture on Friday, the day the Yankees' manager had expected to oversee the first workout of pitchers and catchers.

Dent was working at the Bucky Dent Baseball School rather than Fort Lauderdale Stadium, site of the Yankees' spring training camp — and his students were Little Leaguers and high schoolers rather than major leaguers.

"It's the same game, same things. Just different talent," Dent said of his time with the eager youngsters.

But Dent also could not conceal his disappointment at the owners' lockout that is delaying the start of his first full season as manager.

"This is something I always wanted to do, managing," Dent said. "It's a little bit of a setback, but you've got to be able to deal with setbacks."

The extent of the delay will determine how much of a setback the lockout will be for Dent, the Yankees, and every other major league team.

"We had our program put together for the first five days," the manager said. "Now we're kind of batting around other ideas. You really can't put a program together until you know when the (exhibition) games are going to be."

Dent said the delay, if substantial, will force changes in the way he approaches spring training. He had hoped to get a good look at some of the top prospects in the farm system, including left-hander Kevin Mmahat and right-handers Steve Adkins and Willie Smith. Now, he might have to settle for a glance instead of a good look.

"Some people who could be hurt are the younger players and the non-roster guys," Dent acknowledged.

Rose gets own radio program

CINCINNATI — Pete Rose has agreed to do daily baseball commentary for a radio station — his first media venture since his lifetime banishment from baseball.

The former Cincinnati Reds manager will do 3-minute daily commentaries and a once-a-week interview with a sports broadcaster on WCKY-AM in Cincinnati.

The station said the features are scheduled to begin March 19 and continue through the World Series.

Rose was banned from baseball last August after admitting he bet with bookmakers. While he was manager, Rose did daily interviews on the Reds' radio network.

He's also concerned about having far less time to evaluate the pitching staff. Only three starters, Pascual Perez, Tim Lincecum, and Andy Hawkins, are set. Left-handers Dave LaPoint, Greg Cadaret and Chuck Cary and righties Eric Plunk and Clay Parker are the top candidates for the two vacant spots in the rotation.

Dent, who replaced Dallas Green last Aug. 18, said the time he spent in the dugout will serve him well if he must make evaluations in an abbreviated spring training.

"If I had been coming here right now, if they had just named me, you'd be kind of concerned," he said.

Dent talked to several of his players before the lockout was announced and is confident they will be in good condition when the impasse finally ends.

UT women dealt blow in bid to repeat

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — The Texas Lady Longhorns' bid to win a sixth consecutive Southwest Conference Indoor Track and Field championship suffered a severe jolt Friday when high-scoring Carlette Guidry withdrew because of a knee injury.

Guidry scored 30 points and won gold medals in the 55- and 200-meter dashes and the triple jump last year.

"Carlette has a slight knee strain and we decided it would jeopardize her chances for the NCAA championship if she competed here," said Texas coach Terry Crawford. "This is mainly a coaching decision."

Crawford said Texas could be in trouble without Guidry's points.

"This might give us a chance to be just part of the pack," Crawford said. "But with an athlete like Carlette you don't play around. Rice has a great chance to win the title now."

The Lady Owls jumped to the lead after the first day of competition with 30 points to 18 for the Lady Longhorns and 15 for Arkansas.

The Razorbacks men's team jumped to a huge lead with 37 points on the first day to 12 for Texas.

Edrick Floreal of Arkansas won the men's triple jump with an effort of 53-7½.

Angie Bradburn won the women's high jump for Texas but Sonya Henry of Rice was second.

Guidry, a junior from Houston, hadn't lost an SWC indoor event in two seasons and her absence will cost the Lady Longhorns on Saturday in the final day of the two-day meet at Tarrant County Convention Center.

Tim Gargiulo of Southern Methodist won the 5,000-meter in a meet record 14:02.17 but the Razorbacks scored 20 points by finishing second, third, fourth, and fifth. The old meet record was 14:20.39 by Harry Green of Texas last year.

The Hogs, seeking their 10th consecutive men's title, got a first place triple jump from Edrick Floreal who posted an effort of 53-3½.

teeing off at 11:30 a.m. at the Maxwell Golf Course in Abilene.

Andrews girls keep with success

From Staff Reports

ANDREWS — The Andrews Lady Mustangs continued to dominate early season golf action in West Texas by jumping out to a 39 stroke lead over second place Midland High in first round action of the Andrews tournament.

Andrews shot a 341 Friday; Midland High was second at 380 and Midland Lee was an additional 40 shots off the pace with a 420.

Midland High was paced by Jenny Hyde's 85 while Lady Rebel linksters were led by Aimee Freeman's 101.

Action concludes today in Andrews.

Team Scores
1 Andrews 341; 2 Midland High 380; 3 Midland Lee 420.

Individuals (by team)
MIDLAND HIGH (380) — Jenny Hyde 85, Amanda Koon 94, Lena Dittler 99, Martha Jossely 102, Kim Williams 113.

MIDLAND LEE (420) — Mandy Price 103, Jennifer Adkins 108, Aimee Freeman 101, Becky Duran 107, Susan Simpson 115.

Other Individuals

Lee golfers on trail of win in Abilene tourney

From Staff Reports

ABILENE — The Midland Lee Rebels are a mere 10 strokes off the pace after first round action in the Abilene ISD Tournament, Friday at the Fairway Oaks Country Club.

The Rebels' 339 trailed first-place Lubbock Monterey's 329; Abilene Cooper is in second with a 332.

Midland High was at the back of the pack with an opening round 374, 45 shots off the hunt.

Lee's J.J. King and Abilene Wylie's Mike Chisum both had 77s to tie for first medalist honors. Their scores were the only two sub-80 performances of the day on the varsity level.

"We fell apart," MHS head coach John Ford said. "You don't see it too often but the whole team fell apart. They were not prepared."

Midland Tennis Club starts 31st season in March

From Staff Reports

The Midland Tennis Club is celebrating 30 years of activity in the Tall City and is beginning a new season of competition.

Memberships are now available as the March 3-4 Fred Middleton Mixed Doubles tournament kickoff nears. Membership fee is $20 for adults and $10 for juniors. Membership information can be obtained from S.D. Armstrong, 687-4046.

Tournaments sponsored by MTC are composed of men's and women's singles, men's and women's doubles and mixed doubles. Tournaments are flighted to allow players to compete at their own skill level.

MTC, a non-profit organization, was started to promote tennis throughout the Permian Basin by providing tournaments for players of all skill levels.

Founders Armstrong, Middleton, Bert Bruce and Jack Harrison created a club that has grown to a membership of over 400 and now provides competition for juniors and adults in 35 organized tournaments a year without leaving the city.

In addition, MTC has provided a great service to other local tennis activities by supplying money for nets, windscreens and equipment for both high schools and Midland College. MTC also has an annual collegiate tournament that brings in some of the top college players, who face professional careers.

MTC's monthly tournament schedule can be found in the Reporter-Telegram's West Texas Sports each week.

Mullin a triple threat

Associated Press

The last NBA player who finished a season among the league's 10 best in scoring, field-goal percentage and free-throw shooting percentage was Atlanta's Lou Hudson in 1969-70.

Through 47 games this season, Golden State's Chris Mullin was sixth in scoring, 10th in field goal percentage and seventh in free throw percentage.

International Basketball Association possible

By MARK ZEIGLER
Copley News Service

Is it the National Basketball Association or International Basketball Association?

Commissioner David Stern held his annual state-of-the-league press conference Feb. 10, and spent most of it talking about Spain and Canada and Japan and everywhere except the United States.

Stern said "it's a good bet" that you'll see a Canadian expansion franchise by the year 2000. He also said the league is "actively pursuing" having two unidentified NBA teams open the 1990-91 regular season in Tokyo.

Stern announced that the 1990 McDonald's Open, the NBA's annual international preseason tournament, will christen the Olympic basketball facility in Barcelona, Spain, next October.

In addition, Stern spoke of "my anticipation" of NBA players representing the United States in the 1992 Olympics, as well as nations like West Germany, the Soviet Union, the Netherlands and Yugoslavia; of foreign teams playing an exhibition schedule against NBA clubs here; of international coach-to-coach, trainer-to-trainer, executive-to-executive clinics.

His dream: "To make basketball the No. 1 sport in the world."

For the umpteenth time, Stern said the NBA will not expand into Europe, beyond its various exhibitions, telecasts and sale of NBA merchandise. However, he had not taken so optimistic a stand on Canada before so significant a media gathering.

"We've had some serious interest from Canada," Stern said. "If you asked me if there could be a Canadian franchise by the end of the decade, my guess is that it's a good bet."

The best bet in Canada is considered to be Toronto, the nation's most progressive city in regard to professional sports. Proof: The Skydome, where baseball's Toronto Blue Jays have more or less already sold out the entire 1990 season.

There also has been speculation that L.A. Kings hockey star Wayne Gretzky is part of a potential basketball ownership group.

To help satisfy Europe's sudden craving for the NBA, Stern said the McDonald's Open will stay overseas indefinitely. The inaugural tournament was three years ago in Milwaukee. In 1988, it went to Madrid. In 1989, Rome.

The NBA representative this year is the New York Knicks. Joining them will be Barcelona of the Spanish pro leagues and two European teams to be chosen after the European "Final Four" in April.

"I'm looking forward to seeing all the sights," Knicks center Patrick Ewing said. "Being an art major, I'm definitely going to enjoy that. This will be my first time in Europe."

The way the NBA is going, it probably won't be his last.

IF GRANDMA AGREES

During their recent win streak, the Philadelphia 76ers vowed to all get earrings if the streak reached double figures. It did, finally ending at 12 straight.

So where's the earring, Charles? His grandmother evidently is opposed to it.

"I'll have to talk to my grandmother about it," Barkley said. "If all the other guys on the team want to go through with it, then I guess I will, too."

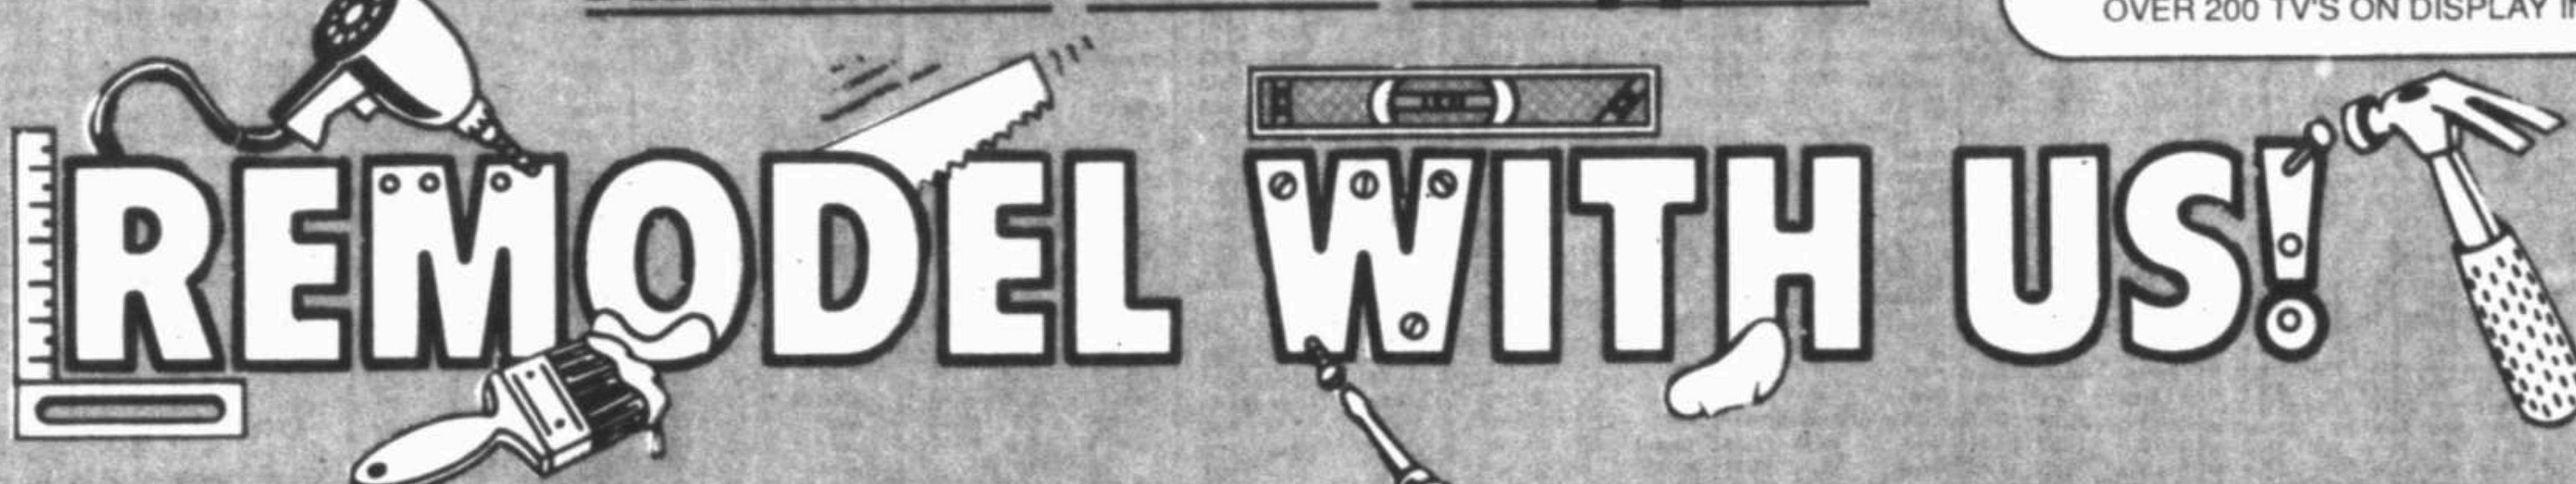

ALL-TRASH WHAT?

Highlights from two recent polls: The Miami Herald asked one front-office executive from each team to project the superstars of the '90s.

San Antonio rookie center David Robinson was the only player named on all 27 ballots.

Michael Jordan was second with 26 votes.

He Bore A Nation

This week, we, as a nation and as individuals, celebrate the birthday of George Washington, our nation's first president.

George Washington fought many hard battles for our country, both literally and figuratively. He had faith that the people of this young nation could govern themselves as a country, and laid the cornerstone on which our rights and freedoms would soon be established.

Today, we sometimes take our rights and freedoms for granted. We must remember that many of our forefathers died for these causes, giving us the gift of a free nation.

One of these special rights is that of religious freedom. Exercise that right this week in your local house of worship.

Passion play emphasizes 'Jewishness'

By DAVID BRIGGS

NEW YORK (AP) — The 3-century-old Oberammergau Passion Play is eliminating some anti-Semitic stereotypes, but an ancient "blood curse" still divides American Jewish leaders and villagers in the small town in the Bavarian Alps.

The script for the 1990 production — expected to draw more than 200,000 American visitors — emphasizes the Jewishness of Jesus, drops horns from the heads of Jewish high priests and presents Jesus as confused rather than a cold mercenary figure.

"We have tried to... show the Jewish tradition in a positive light," said Otto Huber, one of the directors, in an interview from his home in Oberammergau.

But American Jewish leaders who have been meeting with village officials are concerned the anticipated half-million spectators for the play will still hear the passage from Matthew 27:25 that has plagued Jews for 19 centuries: "His blood be on us and our children."

"For 1990, we still have the same basic text with the blood curse," said Rabbi James Rudin, national interreligious affairs director for the American Jewish Committee.

The Passion Play dates from 1663, when bubonic plague ravaged the mountain valley where Oberammergau sits. When the Roman Catholic villagers vowed to stage a passion play every 10 years if the plague abated, the epidemic vanished in what was considered a miracle, according to historical accounts.

The play, to be performed this year from May 21 to Sept. 28, was last performed in 1984, when a special jubilee production attracted 470,000 spectators. Americans accounted for about 45 percent of the visitors to the daylong production.

Since then, leaders from the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith have sought to change aspects of the play they believed maligned Jews and blamed them for the murder of Christ.

Among the changes for 1990:

■ Jesus' identity as a Jew is emphasized, including having him and his followers wear traditional prayer shawls. "We have tried to show Jesus really as a Jew coming out from Jewish tradition and Jewish faith," Huber said.

■ Jesus has a larger popular following among Jews, and there is no longer a separation of Jesus and his followers and the rest of the Jewish community in light and dark clothing. "You had the good guys and the bad guys in the 1984 text," Rudin said.

■ There is no longer any connection between the temple merchants and Jesus' persecutors. Rudin said that connection was "one of the worst stereotypes of the play," playing on anti-Semitic images such as "Shylock."

■ The Jewish high priests who presided at the trial that led to the condemnation of Jesus will no longer have horns, an image carried over from the Middle Ages.

■ Pontius Pilate, who before 1984 was portrayed as a noble Roman and in 1984 was shown as ambivalent in sentencing Jesus to death, is presented in the 1990 text as an unsympathetic, brutal character.

ic, brutal character.

■ Judas Iscariot, the disciple who betrayed Jesus, is portrayed as a confused character who lost faith in Jesus, rather than as a man motivated only by the 30 pieces of silver he received for giving Jesus up.

Rudin said Jewish leaders are sensitive to the efforts made by the German village, but while there were many positive developments, "The retention of the 'blood curse' is very problematic."

The idea that Jewish people have collective guilt for the death of Jesus has been devastating in its impact on Jews throughout the centuries. Rudin said a new script should be written in light of the Holocaust and advances in Jewish-Christian relations.

Rudin said American Jewish groups are not urging a boycott of the play, but plan to make available background materials on the play and hold briefings for people planning to visit Oberammergau.

Huber said the changes show Oberammergau is "very conscious about all the questions of anti-Semitism."

He noted the passage from Matthew was barely retained by an 11-9 vote of the text committee, and with certain provisions: that a five-page explanation be included in scripts that tourists purchase to follow the German-language play. The explanation says the passage does not apply to one race and outlines the history of anti-Semitism surrounding it.

"With all the changes, I think that anti-Semitism is not the problem of the play in 1990," Huber said.

Theresia Fellner and Max Jablonka portray Mary and Jesus in a 1984 rehearsal for the Oberammergau Passion Play. At its next airing in 1990, some anti-semitic stereotypes will be eliminated.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Temple Beth El planning dinner

ODESSA — The Sisterhood of Temple Beth El will hold its 23rd annual dinner to celebrate Brotherhood Week and President's Day Monday from 5 to 7 p.m. at Temple Beth El, 1501 North Grandview.

The theme "Our Heritage" will be represented with table settings representing the various holidays, and members of the congregation will be available to answer questions about the synagogue and its traditions and practices.

This year's menu is in keeping with the dietary laws observed in the synagogue, which require separation of meat and milk products, with a menu of baked fish, noodle kugel, homemade rolls, borscht (beet soup), vegetables and strudel.

Reservations are requested. Tickets, priced at $6, are available at Pikes, 5000 E. University, in Odessa, by calling 367-4839 or 362-3474, or from Mrs. Norman Gould in Midland at 694-1880.

Proceeds from the dinner are used to support sisterhood and synagogue activities. Temple Beth El is a member of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods.

Drug seminar offered

A drug abuse prevention seminar will be presented by the Family and Youth Ministries of Golf Course Road Church of Christ, 3500 W. Golf Course Road, Feb. 27 from 7-9 p.m. Minister John Featherston will share his story of what drugs did to his life, family and what he has learned through recovery.

"Teens, parents and interested adults will benefit from this practical lecture," says a release from the church.

Bob Savage, director of Midland's Palmer Drug Abuse Program will talk about what adults and teens can do to prevent drug abuse in their lives and the lives of people they care about on March 4, 11, 18, 25 from 6-7 p.m.

Child care is provided for the Tuesday session by pre-registration at 694-8836, and nursery and Bible Hours will be available on Sunday evenings.

The public is encouraged to attend. No offerings will be taken.

Event to honor Israel

A Night to Honor Israel will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. March 5 at the Holiday Inn Convention Center, 4300 W. Highway 80.

Doors will open at 6 p.m. for browsing exhibits on Soviet and Ethiopian Jewry, Texas-Israel exchange and travel. Felafel, a Middle Eastern sandwich, will be on sale.

Randall Bane, dancer and choreographer for the International Christian Embassy Feast of Tabernacles Celebration in Jerusalem, will perform. A choir, composed of Jews and Christians, will sing Israeli-flavored music.

Polly Grimes of Redondo Beach, Calif., will speak on biblical Israel and the present-day nation of Israel. The Counsel General of Israel to the Southwest, Mordechai Artzieli of Houston, will bring greetings from Israel.

The public is invited to this free event, which is sponsored by area Christians and Jews.

Black history celebrated

Hollowell United Methodist Church, 400 S. Marshall St., will celebrate an annual observance of African-American history in song, litany and preaching at 11 a.m. Sunday.

The Hollowell Adult Choir will present a musical history starting with the early acappella "call-response" spirituals used by the slaves as a means of communication. Another historical musical rendition will be the presentation of music from the Jubilee Era, gospel and contemporary gospel.

The church's pastor, the Rev. Hadley R. Edwards, will deliver the message.

The public is invited to attend. A reception follows in the fellowship hall.

Vocal seminar slated

Kelview Heights Baptist Church is hosting a Vocal Freedom Seminar with Ray Holcomb Feb. 26 and 27.

Holcomb is the former chairman of the Church Music department, School of Music, Ouachita Baptist University, Arkadelphia, Ark. He has two degrees in music and 30 hours of doctoral studies, including Juilliard, Westminster, Conservatory of Midland at Kansas City and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth.

"At the seminar you will learn how to improve your vocal technique effectively without any apparent effort," says a release from the church. "You will learn how to better control breath management, how to create attractive mature sounds and how to consistently sing with a rich, resonant quality."

Fee is $25 per person for those registering in advance and $30 at the door. For more information call Russ Hale, 682-3842.

Sessions on finance set

Lovella Richardson, certified financial planner, will present a seminar March 3, beginning at 9 a.m., at Christian Church of Midland, 2808 Neely.

Ms. Richardson earned masters and doctors degrees from the University of Tennessee, Knoxville and received the Certified Financial Planner designation from the College for Financial Planning in Denver after having completed additional courses in money management, insurance, investments, taxes, retirement and estate planning.

A nursery will be provided, parents are asked to bring a sack lunch for their child.

This seminar is provided free by the Christian Church of Midland. For information, contact the church office, 684-7881.

Women's retreat set

All area women are invited to a women's retreat with speaker Rita Glasscock and Suzanne Medlen ministering in music Feb. 23 through 25. The retreat will be held at The Promised Land Christian Retreat, located 5½ miles south of Odessa.

Topic for the weekend will be "This Precious Treasure," a study on how to have a life full of purpose.

Schedule for meetings will be Friday, 7 p.m.; Saturday 9:30 a.m., 1 p.m. and 7 p.m.; Sunday 9:30 a.m.

Meals will be served at 12 noon and 5:30 p.m. on Saturday at a cost of $5 per meal.

Registration can be made by calling 366-2256 after 5 p.m. or by writing Retreat, 1841 Petroleum, Odessa 79762. Fee to attend is $20.

Youth worker sought

Ranchland Heights Baptist Church has authorized the employment of a summer youth worker. The new staff member will aid the church program in its work with youth for the summer of 1990.

The committee, chaired by Bobby G. Wilson will begin an immediate search to fill the position.

Pastor Lucian Rudd indicates, in a news release, that this is a major step for the church to strengthen its ministry to young people, single young adults and older children. Growth of the church program over the past year has made this move possible. The public is invited to attend and participate in the activities of these age groups of the church.

For more information, call 684-6544 or 683-1947.

Prayer emphasized

St. Ann's Altar Society is sponsoring a Day of Prayer to be conducted by the Rev. Alfredo Prado, OMI, in the Church Parlor Wednesday.

The day will start with the celebration of Holy Mass at 9 a.m. and end with the closing conference at approximately 3:30 p.m. The nursery will be available by calling Bertha at 687-0941 in advance for arrangements.

Lunch will be served at noon in the Parish Conference Room for a $2 donation.

All the ladies of St. Ann's and guests are invited and encouraged to attend and participate in the services planned for this special opportunity for spiritual enrichment.

Author to speak here

Joyce Landorf Heatherly, nationally known author and communicator, will be in Midland Feb. 27.

The author of "The Inheritance," "Irregular People" and "Balcony People," Mrs. Heatherly will speak at a luncheon Feb. 27 at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, she will be spending time at Page and Prints, Plaza Shopping Center, and will speak at 7:30 p.m. at the Parkies Baptist Church, 2906 Franklin St.

No admission will be charged at Parkies Baptist Church. For more information call either the church or the bookstore.

Genetics to be topic

Sharon Newcomb Davison of Genetic Screening and Counseling Services will present a slide show and discussion at the Unitarian Universalist Church, 3301 Neely, at 10 a.m. Sunday.

Genetic Screening and Counseling Services is a community-oriented program providing genetic services to the people of the Permian Basin.

Ms. Davison's presentation is entitled "Do Your Genes Fit Your Lifestyle." Topics covered will include cutting disease risk, plotting your medical family tree and common genetic abnormalities.

Grace offering class

Grace Presbyterian Church, 2801 N. Garfield, will begin a four-week "Growing with Grace" class Feb. 25 at 9:30 a.m., in the church office.

This class will cover the history of Presbyterianism, the four basic principles of the Reformation, the sacraments of the Protestant Church, and the mission and programs of Grace Presbyterian Church, locally and nationally.

Visitors are encouraged to attend.

Safe sex to be discussed

A Safe Sex workshop will be held at Holy Trinity Community Church, 1607 S. Main St., at 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

"The latest information on preventing HIV and other sexually transmitted infections will be presented," says the Rev. Glenn E. Hammett, the church's pastor.

"Our goal is to encourage the participants to protect themselves and those that they love."

The public is invited to attend. For more information call 683-8566.

Revival starts Feb. 21

Revival time at White's Chapel Church of God in Christ, 1106 Cherrylane, is scheduled for Feb. 21 through 23, and Feb. 25. Services will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Guest evangelist will be Joe Parks of Odessa. The revival is hosted by the Rev. R.L. Colvin.

The public is invited to attend. For more information call 682-1009 or 682-8407.

Young adults devoting year to Bible study, church service

By BEAR MILLS

PAMPA, Texas (AP) — Seven young people have come to this Panhandle city to spend a year in intensive Christian discipleship.

The young West Texans, ages 19 to 24, will spend the year in the Master's Commission program sponsored by the First Assembly of God.

The program of study and service is in its first year, and First Assembly members and staff say the young people have brought new life to the congregation.

"We have worked with young people for 17 years," said Lonny Robbins, who heads Master's Commission with his wife, Gloria. "We are not a Bible college or a commune. Their parents approve of their being here. We are not the first to do this. We got the concept from a church in Phoenix, Ariz."

Young people in the ministry-intensive program do Bible study and work in community service.

"They give a year of their life," Mrs. Robbins said. "We want them to know what the Bible teaches so they can deal with issues like abortion and other things they are going to be confronted with."

"A lot of people go to college and waste a lot of money because their lives lack direction," Robbins said. "It's because they've never developed Godly disciplines in their lives."

He and Pastor Herb Peak said they want to develop young people who are leaders with the hearts of servants.

Commission member Ross Black, 24, of Amarillo, said the experience is a sort of military boot camp.

"They train soldiers for war, but you never know what to expect until you get into the fighting," Black said. "With this, we're in training and battle."

Black said he felt God's call to the ministry, but didn't know what capacity to pursue.

"I couldn't afford Bible college so I came to Master's Commission. It's great. I love it," he said.

The seven live with church members and raise their $100 a month tuition through jobs such as cleaning houses or detailing cars.

In addition, they visit shut-ins, nursing home residents, host youth group meetings with high school students, help in Sunday School and lead Sunday evening worship services.

Every morning begins with an hour of prayer, breakfast and classes. Afternoons are filled with projects.

Robbins said he hopes to provide discipline and challenge for youths in the program.

Police in Atlanta lead George Nickleberry, 64, from the Atlanta Police Station on his way to a Texarkana hospital for psychiatric evaluation. Nickleberry held police at bay for more than eight hours, shooting and wounding one officer.

Northeast Texas man faces capital charge

ATLANTA (AP) — An Atlanta man was charged with attempted capital murder Friday after he barricaded himself in his residence, shot a police officer and set the house on fire, authorities said.

George Nickleberry, 64, was under psychiatric treatment Friday afternoon, said Atlanta Police Chief Mike Scott.

The incident began shortly after midnight Friday when out-of-town relatives called the police department and asked officers to check on Nickleberry, Scott said. He refused to let the officers in the house and fired shots through the door, the chief said, beginning an almost nine-hour confrontation with lawmen.

"He wouldn't talk. We tried to make contact with him on the phone. He wouldn't answer the phone," Scott said.

During the night, Scott said, Nickleberry fired shots, injuring Officer Jimmie Townsend in the left leg. The officer was in good condition at Atlanta Memorial Hospital, Scott said.

Nickleberry set the house on fire around 8:40 a.m. and tried to flee, Scott said. He was arrested by members of the Department of Public Safety SWAT Team dispatched from Austin and Texas Rangers, said DPS spokesman Mike Cox.

Women's group endorses Richards

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Women's Political Caucus Friday reiterated its backing of Ann Richards for governor and announced its support for an almost all Democratic slate of candidates in the March 13 primary.

The caucus overwhelmingly chose Ms. Richards, currently the state treasurer, over her opponents — State Attorney General Jim Mattox and former Gov. Mark White.

"Ann Richards has just been over the years very supportive of women's issues," said Patricia Smothers, chairwoman of the group's political action committee.

Responding to questions concerning Mattox's support of issues backed by the caucus, Ms. Smothers said, "It's not just because he is not a woman that he's not endorsed. But electing more women to office is a part of the caucus."

Ms. Smothers of San Antonio said the caucus has raised approximately $40,000 for Ms. Richards' campaign.

The 2,000-member caucus supports a woman's right to an abortion, passage of an Equal Rights Amendment and increased funding of child care programs.

The caucus endorsed State Comptroller Bob Bullock for lieutenant governor; State Rep. Dan Morales, D-San Antonio, for attorney general and the re-election efforts of Land Commissioner Garry Mauro and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

The group also endorsed Bob Krueger in the race for a seat on the Texas Railroad Commission and State Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth, who is seeking the Democratic nomination to challenge U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

In court races, the caucus endorsed Supreme Court Justice Oscar Mauzy for chief justice; Fred Biery of San Antonio in Place 1 and Lamar McCorkle of Houston in Place 2.

McCorkle is the only Republican candidate endorsed by the caucus in a statewide race, but the Supreme Court on Wednesday ruled 5-4 that he is ineligible for the 1990 election because he falls short of having the 10 years legal experience required by the Texas Constitution.

In the Court of Criminal Appeals races, the group supports Morris Overstreet of Amarillo in Place 1; Pat Barber of Colorado City in Place 3 and Charlie Baird of Houston in Place 4.

In other political developments: ■ Ms. Richards said both White and Mattox told the Baptist Standard newspaper in 1986 that they opposed a state lottery.

Now both say they favor it, and Mattox has made creation of a lottery a focal point of his campaign.

"Election-year conversions are nothing new for politicians who put personal ambition above policy, but these born-again lottery supporters have reached a new level of hypocrisy," said Glenn Smith, Ms. Richards' campaign manager.

■ Krueger said if elected to the Railroad Commission he would press Congress to pass an oil drilling tax incentive that would allow drillers to deduct 65 cents per hole. The tax cost of drilling a dry hole. The tax break could not be recovered until after the driller hit a producing well. "This is not a tax dodge. It is activity driven," Krueger said.

Krueger, of New Braunfels, said his former experience as a congressman would help him shepherd such a plan through Congress. He faces former state Rep. Clint Hackney of Houston in the primary.

Hackney said he, along with most Texas politicians, supports tax incentives for drilling, but that Krueger should focus on ways the Railroad Commission, rather than Congress, can help the oil and gas industry.

"We ought to be talking about what that agency can do immediately for Texas," Hackney said.

Former jailer details association with Klan

FORT WORTH (AP) — A former Tarrant County Sheriff's Department jailer who was dismissed because of alleged ties to the Ku Klux Klan described himself as "extremely intelligent," but said her involvement with the group was a "stupid mistake."

Kay Moore said her first exposure to the Klan was last month in a White Settlement restaurant with Air Force Sgt. Timothy Hall, whom she was meeting to pick up three cartons of discount cigarettes.

As the two talked, Ms. Moore realized that he had come to recruit her into the Klan.

"I picked up my cigarettes. We were sitting there talking, eating a hamburger," she told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram Friday in a telephone call from an undisclosed location. "Before I knew it, he was giving me some literature, and an application was filled out, and he was taking it with him."

Ms. Moore declined to reveal her location because she says threatening messages have been left on her telephone answering machine.

A month later, on Feb. 9, both Moore and Hall — a volunteer reserve officer with the Tarrant County Sheriff's Office — were dismissed from the department for joining the Klan.

It was part of a widening scandal that led to the dismissal of a third sheriff's employee, David White, and the discharge of five Carswell

Air Force Base airmen.

"As unbelievable as it may seem, I was thoroughly convinced the Klan had widespread support throughout the law-enforcement community," said Ms. Moore.

"My purpose for doing it was for advancement in the sheriff's department," who described herself as "very intelligent, except for this sort of mistake."

Ms. Moore said Hall pulled out a Klan business card and told her about the Invisible Empire to which he belonged, saying his local klavern was anti-gay, anti-abortion, anti-crime and anti-liter.

"Tim told me they needed intelligent people such as I," she said. "He convinced me they were a nonviolent, passive organization."

In a subsequent meeting he drove her to a Klan initiation ceremony at an Arlington apartment complex.

"Someone read some stuff that I can't recall," she said. "We took an oath. What was even in it I'm not sure, other than not to give out any information regarding the Klan or any of its members."

It was over in 15 or 20 minutes.

"Once I got their view, I realized it was a hate group," she said. "That's when I realized what was going on. I realized it was a totally reprehensible, violent, prejudicial hate group. I thought, 'Oh, dear, what have I got myself into?'"

Egyptian consul's son held on drug charges

HOUSTON (AP) — The 27-year-old son of the Egyptian Consul was being held without bond Friday after he and seven others were arrested in an undercover sting for allegedly trafficking the synthetic drug Ecstasy, authorities said.

Sheriff Elgamrawy, son of Consul Bedair Elgamrawy, remained at the Harris County Jail after authorities bought about 1,000 tablets of the drug and arrested the eight at a north Houston apartment complex about 11 p.m. Thursday, said Sgt. Bill Kessler of the Harris County Organized Crime Narcotics Task Force.

"He was out on bond on another charge out of Meadows Police Department in Fort Bend County at the time," Kessler said of the younger Elgamrawy. He was indicted on three drug counts in Fort Bend County last July, records show.

One suspect was a 16-year-old girl, who was released to her parents' custody, Kessler said. The other seven, including Elgamrawy, were charged with delivery of a controlled substance.

Kessler said the bust came as part of an ongoing investigation of Ecstasy suppliers in the Houston area.

Bass' bid for paper rejected

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A $270 million buyout offer for the St. Petersburg Times was flatly rejected Friday by trustees, who sent a message to an investor group led by Texas billionaire Robert M. Bass that the newspaper was not for sale.

The Bass group responded immediately by saying the fight with the Times wasn't over.

Trustees of the Poynter Institute, a journalism school which owns the controlling stock in the paper, voted unanimously to turn down the bid by the Poynter-Jamison Ventures Limited Partnership to buy its interest in Florida's second-largest newspaper.

"The trustees carefully considered the institute's educational purpose and concluded it was better to own a newspaper than a stack of Treasury bills," said Andrew Barnes, chairman of the board of trustees and editor, president and chief executive of the newspaper.

"The institute's ownership interest in the Times is not for sale," Barnes said.

The institute was set up by the late Nelson Poynter who ran the paper for 30 years before his death in 1978.

Perrier scare benefits state

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower predicted Perrier's troubles will benefit Texas bottled water companies.

"The well may be dry for Perrier, but there are plenty of cool, clear and pure Texas bottled waters to quench your thirst," Hightower said Friday.

Perrier began a worldwide recall of all its bottles — some 160 million — after traces of the cancer-causing chemical benzene were found in recent weeks in some bottles shipped to the United States, Canada, West Germany, Denmark and the Netherlands.

Hightower said there are six Texas-based water companies in the agency's "Taste of Texas" program, which helps Texas food and beverage companies identify and market their products as Texas-produced.

Mary Ayala, right, shares a laugh with her 17-year-old daughter Anissa at their home in Walnut, Calif., recently. Mrs. Ayala, 43, is having a baby in hopes that the newborn can become a bone marrow donor for Anissa, who is suffering from leukemia.

Child conceived as bone-marrow donor

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A couple conceived a child in hopes the baby's bone marrow cells could save the life of a teen-age daughter who is dying of cancer, but ethics experts said Friday the decision is outrageous and troubling.

Such criticism means little to Abe Ayala and his wife, Mary. They found out this week that despite one-in-four odds, their unborn baby girl will be a compatible bone marrow "stem cell" donor for their 17-year-old daughter, Anissa, who was diagnosed with leukemia two years ago.

"We've been searching for a donor for almost two years and we haven't been able to find anybody, so this is the only other alternative," Ayala said in a telephone interview Friday. "We can't just stand idly by and do nothing about it and wait for Anissa to die."

The Ayalas live in the Los Angeles suburb of Walnut with Anissa and a 19-year-old son, Airon. They were told that Anissa has a 70 percent chance of surviving if she receives a transplant of stem cells — bone marrow cells that help produce various blood cells — but no chance if she doesn't, her father said.

None of the Ayalas have compatible marrow.

So against the advice of Anissa's doctor and after years of resisting his wife's wish to have another child, the 45-year-old Ayala had his vasectomy reversed last year. Mrs. Ayala, 43, is due to deliver a baby girl in April.

If not for Anissa's leukemia, "it's true we would have never had another baby this late," Ayala said.

"It is troublesome to say the least," medical ethics expert Philip Boyle said from The Hastings Center think tank in Briarcliff Manor, N.Y. "It's outrageous that people would go to this length."

"The ideal reason for having a child is associated with that child's own welfare — to bring a child into being and to nurture it," said Alexander Morgan Capron, a professor of law and medicine at the University of Southern California.

"One of the fundamental precepts of ethics ... is that each person is an end in himself or herself, and is never to be used solely as a means to another person's ends without the agreement of the person being used," he said.

The baby can't consent to the transplant, and the parents face a conflict of interest in making the decision, the experts said.

The Ayalas' baby "is not seen as an end in itself, but as a means to another end. The fact that the other end is laudable doesn't change that," Capron said.

Anissa said Friday she is "sort of upset" by such criticism of her parents, but "we're going to love our baby."

Mrs. Ayala added, "Our baby is going to have more love than she probably can put up with."

Leukemia is a cancer of white blood cells. Doctors use high-dose radiation and chemotherapy to kill diseased bone marrow and blood cells. Then marrow from a matching donor, usually a sibling, is injected into the leukemia patient's bones so healthy stem cells from the marrow can produce healthy blood cells.

Ayala said his daughter's leukemia is now stable, and doctors expect she will be alive even if they have to wait until her baby sister is 6 months old, the youngest age at which marrow can be transplanted.

However, Anissa's doctors at City of Hope National Medical Center in suburban Duarte hope to make the marrow transplant unnecessary by obtaining stem cells from the baby's umbilical cord blood at the time of birth, a painless procedure, hospital spokesman Charles Mathews said.

"The problem remains: a child will have been created for the purpose of being a donor," Capron said.

Paper pulls plug on new TV listings

BOSTON (AP) — A few short years after new Coke fizzled on the marketplace, The Boston Globe is admitting that it, too, underestimated human resistance to change.

After the newspaper altered the format of its TV listings last summer, its editors were deluged with calls and letters from readers criticizing the changes. This week, as the paper reintroduces the new old version of its TV Week, it is taking to the airwaves with a series of tongue-in-cheek advertisements, hoping to win back the disgruntled.

"It's a story about being misunderstood, and having the guts to overcome it ... about being unwanted and unloved, and finding the strength to change," the ad's narrator says.

Last June, the Globe altered the format of its weekly TV listings to cut a few pages. The move, which saved "a few hundred thousand dollars," was part of a general belt-tightening, as newspapers everywhere confronted lagging revenues, Globe spokesman Richard Gulla said Friday.

The earlier format featured a horizontal grid of shows scheduled for prime time, as well as a "rolling log" that listed in narrative form the day's schedule, with blurbs for some of the movies.

After the changes, listings for the entire day were compiled in a vertical grid, with the names of the channels heading the columns. The type was smaller, there was no rolling log and no blurbs explained the shows.

"Readers went bananas," Gulla said.

SPELLING BEE 1990

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1990 Regional Spelling Bee March 31 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 30. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

rotogravure (noun) — The process of printing a newspaper or magazine using copper plates or cylinders and a rotary press is called rotogravure. A photo engraving process is used to etch an image on the cylinder or plate, creating lines or depressions that hold ink. Some publications are printed by this process entirely. Daily newspapers also print special rotogravure sections, or supplements, for the Sunday edition because the process is fast and inexpensive.

Twisters strike south; Hundreds evacuated

Associated Press

Flooding forced hundreds of Southerners to evacuate Friday after thunderstorms generated tornadoes and up to 10 inches of rain, and a strong Pacific storm swept inland after dumping up to 3 feet of snow in the Sierra Nevada.

"All of a sudden the roof went one way and the floor went the other way," Frank Higginbotham said of a tornado that struck his home Friday morning in Alabama. "I cradled my daughter to my chest and we were blown through the wall into another room." He had a bump on his head; his daughter was unhurt.

Thousands of customers still had no power in the Midwest and Northeast after snow and ice storms. "Hot wires are falling all over the place," said police dispatcher Rosemarie Million in Erie, Pa.

Even sled dog races scheduled this weekend in Truckee, Calif., were postponed because of the blinding snow.

One man apparently drowned Friday in a raging North Carolina river and one was missing in Georgia. Traffic accidents on ice and snow had killed at least 11 people since Wednesday — four each in Kansas and Minnesota, two in Michigan and one in Missouri.

In Georgia, a tornado destroyed 15 homes and injured 11 people in Carrollton, the National Weather Service confirmed.

And authorities said as many as 1,000 people were evacuated Friday from Trion in northwestern Georgia after 10 inches of rain fell in 15 hours and the Chattooga River rushed out of its banks.

Authorities could not determine if a dam on the Chattooga at Trion had burst because "it's 10 feet under water and the currents are so fast going across it that they can't see the dam," said Chattooga County sheriff's deputy Tammy Owings.

Schools were closed in Chattooga and other counties of northwestern Georgia.

In McCaysville, in extreme northern Georgia near the Tennessee border, the Toccoa River washed over its banks and forced an estimated 500 people from their homes, authorities said. No injuries were reported.

Just across the state line in Copperhill, Tenn., the Ocoee River ran out of its banks and flooded the business section of the old mining town of 400 people.

"The entire downtown area of Copperhill is flooded, up to the second-story windows of buildings," said Russell Newman, a Tennessee Emergency Management Agency official.

"It's the worst flooding I've seen in the last seven or eight years," said Police Chief Charles Bond in Eton, Ga. "Water in low-lying areas is 6 feet deep. One guy said it was up to the top of his pickup truck."

Roads were flooded, bridges were out and mudslides and rockslides were reported in several mountainous areas.

In nearby western North Carolina, up to 6 inches of rain fell and the body of a man who apparently was swept away from his trout hatchery was found downstream on the French Broad River, police said.

A tornado touched down Friday afternoon in Robeson County near Maxton, said Robert Ivy, a communications officer with the county sheriff's department. Three trailers were damaged and one overturned, causing up to $15,000 in damage, Ivy said. There were no injuries.

Officials in Harnett County reported an unconfirmed tornado.

Some schools were closed because of slippery, muddy roads.

Researcher claims early childbearing combats poverty

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Poor girls who become teen-age mothers improve their economic outlook and increase their chances of having a healthy baby, a researcher said Friday.

The findings challenge the widely held belief that teen-age pregnancy and motherhood are among the most serious problems facing the poor, said the researcher, Arline T. Geronimus of the University of Michigan.

"I think women in poverty know what they're doing," she said in an interview. "There are social realities in the poor that those of us doing research are unaware of."

Among her findings:

■ Infants in poverty-stricken communities are healthier if their mothers are in their teens rather than their 20s, because poor mothers are healthier when they are younger.

■ Teen-age mothers form alliances with the fathers' families — even if they are not married — that improve the mothers' economic positions.

■ Teen-age mothers are free to earn a living in their 20s, because their children are old enough to be cared for by other family members.

■ The elevated death rate for children of poor black mothers would become even higher if the women were encouraged to delay child-birth.

Geronimus presented her findings Friday at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"I would like to go on record today in opposition to the view that teen childbearing is self-destructive, irrational or anti-social behavior," Geronimus said.

The Children's Defense Fund, a research and advocacy organization in Washington, campaigns actively to reduce the teen-age pregnancy rate.

"If a 15- or 16-year-old becomes pregnant, there's no way that's a smart thing," said the organization's Ray O'Brian.

Teen-age pregnancy and motherhood lock poor women into poverty and poor academic performance, he said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Trump says it's not likely Ivana will get $100 million

NEW YORK (AP) — Day six of "Trump: The Divorce" arrived Friday with the billionaire developer saying he had no plans to pay estranged wife Ivana $100 million in a settlement to end their marriage.

"I don't rule anything out, but it's highly unlikely" there will a settlement negotiated beyond an existing prenuptial agreement, Trump told New York Newsday. The paper had reported a day earlier that Trump told associates he expected to pay $100 million to end the case quickly.

"It's a very simple case. It's an open and shut case," Trump told the newspaper. "I'll do whatever I have to do, but I don't see a settlement of this case."

Trump's fortune, which includes the Trump Tower, the Trump Plaza Hotel and Casino, and the Trump Shuttle, is estimated at $1.7 billion. The couple has a divorce agreement which was updated four times during their nearly 13-year marriage. It reportedly would give Ivana $25 million, a Connecticut estate and custody of their three children.

Drexel fires thousands

NEW YORK (AP) — Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. fired thousands of workers Friday and doled out slim severance packages as the Wall Street wonder of the 1980s headed into oblivion.

The bulk of Drexel's 5,300 employees were turned loose into a slumping securities industry that already has witnessed tens of thousands of layoffs since the 1987 market crash. Drexel workers, some tearful, carried boxes and wheeled shopping carts filled with computer equipment bought at a discount from the firm as they left the headquarters in lower Manhattan.

Drexel's parent company filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of federal bankruptcy law Tuesday when it defaulted on some debt and banks refused to lend money.

"It's a beautiful day, isn't it?" one Drexel executive said, pointing to a drizzly, gray sky. "It's like the day King Kong invaded Manhattan."

NOW history preserved

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The National Organization for Women was born in a hotel room in 1965, its name scribbled on a napkin one saved.

Loss of any other details about the beginning of NOW would hinder future historians seeking to chart the start of the modern battle for women's equality.

To preserve the stories of the women who spearheaded the modern women's movement, Patricia King is coordinating an oral history project of NOW and founder Betty Friedan.

JAY BOWDEN ENDORSES NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

As a businessman, Certified Public Accountant and father, I believe that Midland needs a dedicated, properly motivated judge in the 238th District Court who will administer the law with equity and justice. In the 10 years that I have been associated with Nick Taylor, I have found him to be concerned about Midland and its citizens. He is involved in such worthwhile programs as The Boy Scouts of America, Midland Crime Prevention Commission, Midland Rape Crisis Center, and the Council on Substance Abuse.

I firmly believe that as citizens of Midland, we need to support those individuals who will make crime unprofitable, uncomfortable and disappointing. Nick Taylor is such an individual. Please join me in supporting him as District Judge in the Republican Primary on March 13, 1990.

Most feel Paraguay on the right course

Paraguayan President Gen. Andres Rodriguez greets citizens in Asuncion as he attends the opening of a housing project for survivors of the Feb. 3, 1989, coup that brought him to power.

By ED McCULLOUGH

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — The dictator of 34 years is long gone and wisps of freedom and change are freshening the Paraguayan air.

Gen. Alfredo Stroessner — the last of the South American "caudillos" — is in exile next door in Brazil and the man who sent him there a year ago, Gen. Andres Rodriguez, governs as an elected president.

Most everyone believes Rodriguez has set Paraguay on the right course.

"Some changes are reversible. Some are irreversible. What is happening in Paraguay is not reversible," political analyst Benjamin Arditti said. "If the country slips back, it won't slip all the way back, and I don't think Rodriguez will go backward."

CHANGES INDEED are everywhere.

People no longer speak in whispers of sensitive things. Police tails and tapped telephones are gone. Books banned by Stroessner are in free circulation.

The newspaper ABC Color is back on newsstands with editorials criticizing what it doesn't like; it was banned March 22, 1984, on grounds that it provoked class hatred.

Radio Nanduti, which was Asuncion's most popular station before mysterious jamming forced it off the air in 1987, is broadcasting again.

Without fear, people call in to radio talk shows or write letters to the editor to express their views or to complain.

Paraguay's mayors no longer will serve at the pleasure of the president but by preference of the ballot box.

"The last year has been diametrically different from anything Stroessner did during his 34 years," said Enrique Sanchez, secretary general of the opposition Revolutionary Febrerista Party, Paraguay's third largest. "Human rights have been elevated to a major issue. The government is trying to open up to change."

Domingo Laino, the former political prisoner and exile who lost to Rodriguez in last May's presidential election, remains a political opponent of Rodriguez but still likes much of what he sees.

"The press gives space to all points of view. That didn't happen before. ... Terror has diminished, fear has diminished, courage has increased. We are trying for political responses — not police, or repression — to problems."

THE STORY of Paraguay today is in many ways the story of Rodriguez, a stout, 66-year-old farmer's son who rose through the ranks of the armed forces, and along the way became one of the richest men in Paraguay, a relatively poor country of 4 million people.

As the commander of the 1st Army Corps, he moved on Feb. 3, 1989, to overthrow the Western Hemisphere's longest ruling dictator in an all-night firefight in which 300 to 400 soldiers and a few civilians were killed.

Rodriguez won the presidential election by a landslide. He needed to run only as the man who delivered Paraguay from Stroessner, but he campaigned tirelessly. Before he did, he legalized almost every political party so they could run, patched up government relations with the Roman Catholic Church and pledged to promote civil rights.

"We thought of him more as a soldier than a governor, and it has been surprising to find out he has a real democratic spirit," said Aldo Zuccolillo, director of ABC Color. "He is more interested in reforms than the politicians."

Rodriguez remains a general and armed forces commander, but he wears civilian clothes when performing presidential duties and puts on his general's uniform only for military ceremonies.

Rodriguez has brought change in union halls, courtrooms, political quarters and Congress.

Since Rodriguez took office, the independent Interunion Workers Movement has increased its membership sixfold, to 50,000, according to secretary-general Victor Baez Mosquera.

While Mosquera regards the Rodriguez government as one for big business and landowners, he also praises it.

"We have had a lot of little triumphs," he said. "The fact that Paraguay lost its fear is the first ingredient for political, economic and social progress."

ABOUT A DOZEN top cronies of the 77-year-old Stroessner have been arrested and charged with embezzling millions, perhaps hundreds of millions, of dollars from state coffers.

Several thousand peasants have been given titles to land, and the government has pledged that process will continue.

Rodriguez personally intervened to permit the leader of Paraguay's Communist Party, Ananias Maidana, to return home after 10 years in exile, and allowed the party — still banned under the unchanged constitution — to hold meetings and public rallies.

He helped throw out a law that required public employees to belong to his own dominant Colorado Party and contribute 5 percent of their salaries to it.

Rodriguez also reaches out with a personal touch to the people.

When the Parana River flooded in late January, he flew to the scene and promised housing and medical aid. An endearing picture turned up in newspapers the next day showing him accepting a plate of food from a peasant woman.

"What would Stroessner have done?" asked Arditti, the political analyst. "He would have said the reports of flooding were an invention of the press and his opponents. Rodriguez talks with people. He recognizes there are problems."

But not everything has gone well.

NO REAL PLAN is in place to shore up the budget deficit, curtail inflation or stimulate economic growth. The stated program of privatization of government-owned businesses has not advanced beyond the planning stage.

Workers chafe at the low minimum wage of 183,000 guaranis ($140) a month, but now they can protest without fear of arrest or assault by the army or the police.

The number of landless peasants in a nation that largely is agrarian — and where an estimated 89 percent of the arable land is held by 4 percent of the total number of farmers — runs into the tens of thousands.

Paraguayans seem willing, however, to judge Rodriguez on what he is doing now, not what he may have done before the coup — including the matter of how he got so rich.

"There are questions that aren't asked out loud," said Arditti. "Where did Rodriguez get his money? His house looks like the castle on Walt Disney. He wasn't born rich; where did he get it?"

Stroessner can't fence out controversy

By JORGE MEDEROS

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Gen. Alfredo Stroessner, Latin America's longest-reigning dictator until his ouster a year ago, lives here in a two-story house with a pool, a barbecue and a fence the authorities say is illegal.

A guard stops people at the entrance. "The general isn't home," the guard says. "And, anyway, he doesn't talk to reporters."

The home in Brasilia's chic lakeside Lago Sul neighborhood isn't the most expensive or elegant on the block, but it's the only one with 24-hour outside protection by the police.

Stroessner arrived in Brasilia on Feb. 5, 1989, two days after his downfall, settling first in the remote central town of Itumbiara. Then he moved to a beach house he owned in Guaratuba, on Brazil's southeast coast, where he had partied and vacationed frequently while ruler of Paraguay. He moved quietly to Brasilia in July.

A neighbor, Willibald Sterf, a 75-year-old retired dentist from Austria and a 30-year resident of Brasilia, said he has seen Stroessner walk alone around his pool in the dark, wearing a gray suit and gesticulating.

"General Stroessner has a firm step. But he is a worried man. He never laughs. He only comes out at night," Sterf said.

The local Department of Housing and Construction is after him about his 20-foot-high, wood-and-iron fence, which it claims violates zoning laws that permit only "green" or "living" fences and hedges.

Officials tried to serve Stroessner with a summons, but were unsuccessful.

"We never could talk to the general," Paulo Fonseca, the head of the department said.

Finally, the Foreign Ministry intervened, and it later was announced that Stroessner would replace the fence with a hedge.

Fonseca said Stroessner wound up sending him a post card saying, "Thank you very much for your patience and cooperation."

February 16, 1990

Dear Citizens of Midland County:

I want to take this opportunity to tell you about myself and why I am running for the position of 238th District Court Judge. This office is being vacated by the retirement of Judge Vann Culp, who has done an outstanding job.

After graduation from Harvard, I became an infantry officer and paratrooper in the U.S. Army Reserve. I then completed law school at Georgetown University. I had an interest in oil and gas law and taxation. This interest brought me to Texas where I worked as a roughneck and lead tong man for a West Texas drilling company prior to attending SMU for advanced legal studies of oil and gas law and taxation which I completed with honors. I have always believed that practical experience is just as important as academics.

I have been fortunate to have a successful law practice for 26 years. About 16 years ago I was recruited by Tom Sealy, Boyd Laughlin, James L. Pardue and William F. Pennebaker to move to Midland and head up the Corporate department of the Stubbeman, MacRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder law firm. My wife, Trinkka, and I chose Midland as our permanent home. We have spent 16 of the happiest years of our lives in Midland. We have increasingly given of our time to community services.

In the 1980's I became concerned with the efforts of special interest groups to control the Texas judiciary. Our courts received adverse publicity on a national level and the public began to lose its respect for the judiciary. I also realized that few successful attorneys were willing to leave private practice and serve the community.

I have a strong conviction that the Court should be for all people. The primary function of the Court is to know and apply the law with integrity and fairness.

I have been concerned for the past few years with the rising crime rate in Midland, most of which is linked with the drug problem. Many of us have been victims of crime, including my family. I have volunteered my time to help solve this problem and I agreed to serve as President of the Midland Crime Prevention Commission after my appointment by the Midland City Council.

I have always believed that public service is the highest honor. This was instilled in me by my family. My father worked for the U.S. Government for 32 years concluding with his service as an Economic advisor in the executive office of President Eisenhower. My father's example was to forego all personal benefit in favor of public service.

I am offering my candidacy for District Judge because I want to serve this community with integrity and fairness. This community has given much to my family. It is time for me to step forward and make a contribution.

Please consider my candidacy in casting your ballot on March 13th.

Sincerely yours,

Nick Taylor

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Show the compassionate side of your nature and you will find greater success and support. Travel and research will help you capitalize on an unusual career opportunity. A budding relationship could blossom into something serious by June. Financial ills can be cured, but only if the whole family cooperates. Lay your cards on the table. An obstacle to a career or educational goal will be removed in late autumn. You find your true niche.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: editor Helen Gurley Brown, actor Matt Dillon, actress Cybill Shepherd, "Wheel of Fortune" Vanna White.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The emphasis today is on communication and travel. Share secrets with mate or family. A delay should not be interpreted as a loss. Someone's vigor will return. Focus on valuable new information.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Extend a helping hand to anyone who deserves it. Family members and friends will go along with most of your ideas. If single, spend more time with someone who builds your ego.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Put yourself in the other person's shoes before passing judgment. Your social plans are subject to sudden change. Seek your mate's opinion, but also keep expenses in mind. Check your date book.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Turn down a last-minute invitation and stick to your previous plans. The best introductions come through close friends or neighbors. Limit personal spending to what you can afford. Seek free entertainment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A bright future is indicated for those who plan carefully. Use a quiet period today to meditate on your options. Keep a low profile in social situations until you see how the land lies.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are in charge of your destiny; the controls are in your hands. Do what feels right—it will be! Private deals and close friendships fuel your progress. A romantic encounter is featured.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Show a positive attitude. Making a good first impression will open the door to a golden opportunity. Socializing produces influential contacts. Evening could be a difficult time for alliances.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A relationship might become something terrific if you exchange secrets. An unexpected introduction could prove quite memorable. Sharing a quiet evening with loved one has special benefits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): New alliances are favored. Join with a group of people for mutual gain. Swift action is advised; today may bring a now-or-never opportunity. You will benefit from putting a relationship on hold.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You radiate a warmth and fellowship others find very attractive. Socialize more. You could meet the partner of your dreams. A telephone call will relieve your concerns about a loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Spending money on others brings you pleasure now. A neat appearance and cheerful disposition help you gain acceptance from a new group. Church activities give you a chance to mix and mingle.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Without a little limelight today your spirits could wilt. Seek a change of scenery and adventure may find you. Romance enjoys favorable influences. Avoid plunging into domestic projects.

Artist known for decorating walls of New York's subway dies of AIDS

NEW YORK (AP) — Keith Haring, whose distinctive, cartoon-like drawings in subway stations caught the attention of art dealers and formed the basis of a lucrative business, died Friday of AIDS. He was 31.

Haring, who was diagnosed with AIDS more than a year ago and was active in AIDS fund-raising, fell ill with flu-like symptoms in January and died early Friday at home, said an assistant, Margaret Slabbert.

Haring's work, characterized by cartoon-like human and animal figures in an energized setting, has appeared in murals in settings as diverse as the Berlin wall and a Monte Carlo hospital.

He has had 42 one-man shows and his paintings and drawings sell for tens of thousands of dollars.

But his critical reputation never matched his popularity.

"Keith Haring's work is obviously very seductive and immensely attractive to a lot of people," said New York Times art critic Michael Brenson. "But there never seems to be any edge to it. ... I don't care for it at all."

Others resented the commercialization of his art through T-shirts and posters. But to Haring, that was part of his point.

"If commercialization is putting my art on a shirt so that a kid who can't afford a $30,000 painting can buy one, then I'm all for it," Haring said. "Art is nothing if you don't reach every segment of the people."

Haring's chalk drawings first appeared on blank advertising space in New York's subways about 10 years ago. His motifs — a glowing baby, dancing figures, pyramids, creatures with TV heads, barking dogs — caught the eye of commuters and dealers alike. He was arrested on occasion for marking up the walls.

By 1983 Artnews was calling his work "provocative, far-reaching and uplifting."

Others called it the visual equivalent of rap or hip-hop music, popular without being serious.

Even after his illness was diagnosed, Haring continued drawing, painting, creating art for his business and the public.

"If you really want to communicate with the people, you have to go beyond the art world," Haring said.

Among his best-known works was a 300-foot mural he painted on the Berlin Wall in 1986, a chain of red and black human figures on a yellow background — incorporating the colors of the flags of East and West Germany.

Other murals include those at Children's Hospital in Washington, Grady Hospital in Atlanta, Necker Children's Hospital in Paris and the maternity ward of Princess Grace Hospital in Monte Carlo.

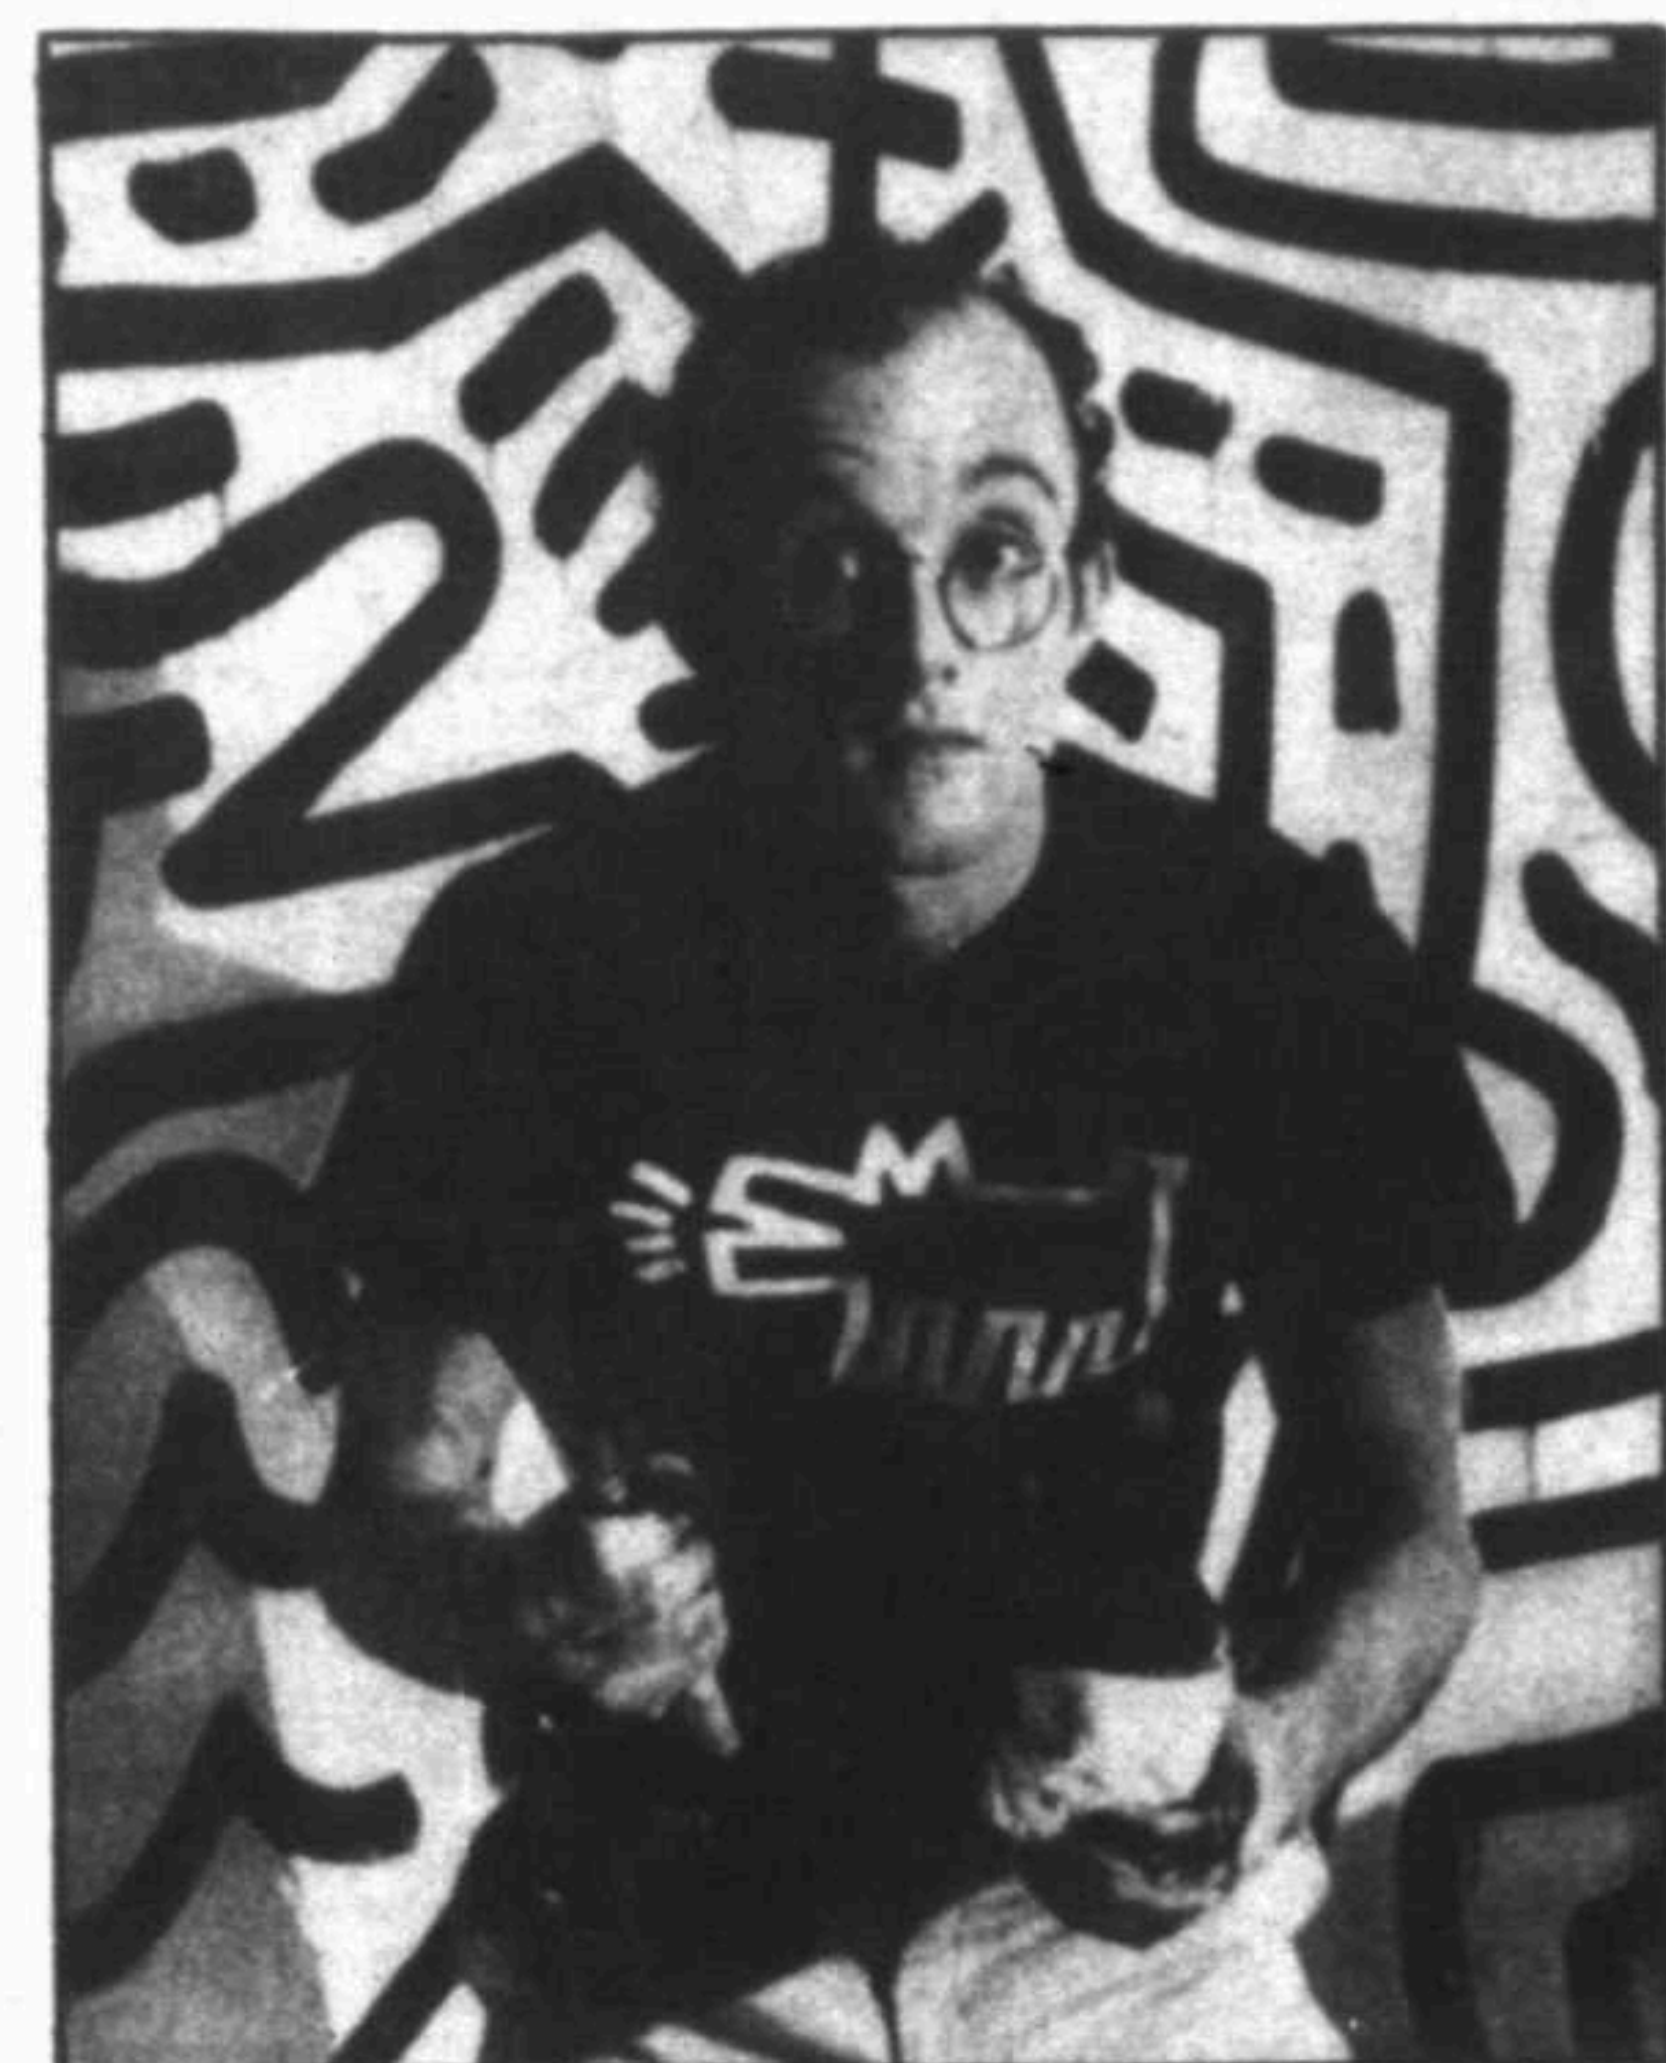

He did a great deal of work for free, including posters for the anti-apartheid movement, anti-crack murals and the logo for the Great Peace March, a cross-country trek promoting disarmament.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tempestt Bledsoe, the 16-year-old actress who plays Vanessa Huxtable on "The Cosby Show," has become a finalist for a National Merit Scholarship, her publicist said.

The nationwide academic scholarship is awarded on the basis of students' academic record and scores on the PSAT, a scholastic aptitude examination, according to a statement issued Thursday by publicist David Brokaw.

Miss Bledsoe has studied at the Professional Children's School in New York City. She is graduating from high school with straight A's, Brokaw said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The city of Warsaw and Brazilian Indian activists were among the winners of the Onassis International Prizes, given to those whose work reflects "human values as conceived in Greek philosophy and culture," it was announced.

Other winners of the $100,000 prizes announced Thursday were United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and the Goulandris Museum of Natural History in Greece.

Warsaw's residents were honored for restoring buildings destroyed during World War II, showing "deep dedication to their cultural heritage."

Ailton Krenak and the Union of Indian Nations, which he heads, were honored for their work in protecting native populations and rain forests.

Perez de Cuellar was honored for "reinvigorating the United Nations" and the museum was cited for preserving Greece's natural environment.

NEW YORK (AP) — In the third farewell to viewers by a network news anchorwoman since October, Kathleen Sullivan of "CBS This Morning" said goodbye Friday and obliquely confirmed that Paula Zahn will succeed her.

However, CBS News spokesman Tom Goodman said the network had no announcement to make on Sullivan's successor. A CBS source said the announcement of the hiring of Zahn, who has left ABC, is expected Tuesday.

In her goodbye to viewers, Sullivan, who had co-anchored the show with Harry Smith since its premiere in November 1987, appeared upbeat but near tears.

"Paula Zahn has been the stepmother to two of my other children at ABC, and now I'm sure she'll take great care of my third, 'CBS This Morning,'" she said.

Before joining CBS, Sullivan co-anchored ABC's "World News This Morning" and the news segments of "Good Morning America."

First, National cars are backed by the industry's first "Buy Back Guarantee." If for any reason you are not completely satisfied with a car you buy from us, bring it back within 30 days or 1000 miles and we'll exchange it or buy it back.

Second, we sell only late model cars. And because we display the price on the window of each car, there's none of the usual haggling over price.

Third, we have a wide variety of cars to choose from. National currently has cars available to sell that were manufactured by General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, Nissan, Honda and Toyota.

Additionally as an added convenience National accepts trade-ins and can arrange financing.

LEASE A VOLVO WITH THE MOST ATTRACTIVE TERMS YET. YOUR OWN.

240 DL

MONTHLY PAYMENTS AS LOW AS $246*

No matter what you're looking for in an automobile lease, look no further than your participating Volvo dealer. Where right now, during our special leasing program, you can choose from a wide variety of options to get the lease that's right for you. You can lease for two to six years. Lease with no down payment, or put some money down to reduce your monthly costs. You can also lease with the option to buy. Better still, your dealer is offering especially low monthly payments on every leasing arrangement. Whether you choose the legendary Volvo 240, the luxurious 760, the limited edition 780, or any other Volvo model. See your participating Volvo dealer soon. Because while his leasing terms are flexible, the deadline for this offer isn't. A car you can believe in.

*Offered by participating Volvo dealers to qualified and approved customers through February 28, 1990 in conjunction with Chase Manhattan Services Corporation. Customer must take delivery out of dealer stock by 3/3/90. Price shown based on a 60-month closed-end lease of a 1990 Volvo 240 DL Sedan. Subject to availability. 60 monthly payments equal a total of $14,760.00. Down payment of $2,000 required. First monthly payment required in advance in this example. Customer responsible for taxes, registration and title fees. Excess mileage charges will apply if contracted mileage is exceeded. Purchase option price established at time of inception based on projected fair market value of vehicle at full-term maturity. Other conditions and fees may apply. Lessee responsible for maintenance and repairs not covered by warranty. Other lease terms and down payment options available. Individual dealer prices may vary.
