Judge rebukes teen murderer for lack of remorse

Jury overcame 8-4 deadlock, foreman says

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Dressed in a striped T-shirt and jeans, convicted murderer Ramsey Blake Harrell had nothing to say before the judge ordered him into the custody of the Sheriff's Office to begin serving his prison sentence.

However, 238th District Court Judge John Hyde had plenty to say, telling Harrell he had 12 years to think about the life he took.

Harrell, 18, was convicted Monday for the April 14 murder of Tommy Edward Musick, 48, after a weeklong trial. Harrell confessed to shooting Musick in the back of the head four times.

He was indicted on charges of capital murder; the state charged he robbed Musick during the shooting. But, jurors found him guilty of a lesser charge of murder.

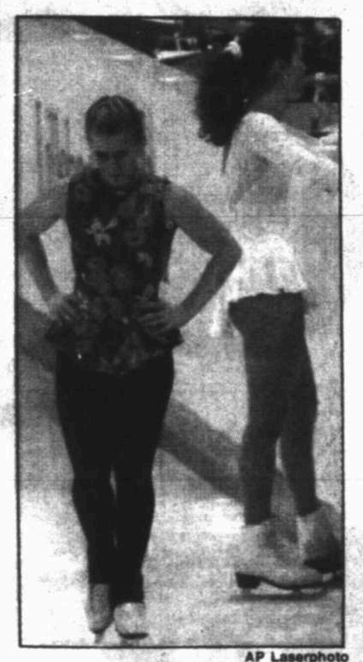

Tuesday, jurors deliberated almost six hours before returning a sentence of 12 years in prison. Harrell was allowed to remain free on bond until the hearing Thursday. Harrell was under "house arrest" and used a home-monitoring device.

238th District Court bailiff Charles Bolinger took extra precautions for courtroom security Thursday because of the highly emotional state of the victim's and defendant's families during and after the trial. Various reports indicate that words were exchanged by both sides of the family.

Courtroom visitors passed through a metal detector and extra bailiffs were posted around the courtroom, in addi-

Serbs comply with demand, pull big guns

■ Heavy weapons to be withdrawn from around Sarajevo in exchange for Russia's promise to contribute soldiers to any new peacekeeping duties.

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Convoys of Bosnian Serb artillery withdrew from the hills around Sarajevo on Thursday in compliance with a NATO ultimatum to pull back or be bombed. "We do think the war in Sarajevo is finally over," Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic said.

The pullout reported by U.N. monitors followed a pledge by Karadzic to meet NATO's Sunday deadline. He made the concession under pressure from Russia.

Karadzic spoke with reporters after meeting with Vitaly Churkin, Russia's special envoy, in Pale, the Bosnian Serb stronghold southeast of Sarajevo.

Lt. Col Bill Aikman, a U.N. spokesman in the shell-shattered Bosnian capital, said U.N. monitors saw convoys of heavy equipment moving off the hills, and U.N. commanders received information that withdrawals meeting NATO conditions would be completed within 36 hours.

It was the first significant Serb withdrawal of heavy guns since NATO issued its ultimatum Feb. 9. NATO has said all heavy guns within a 13-mile radius of Sarajevo must be removed or placed under U.N. control by Sunday or face NATO bombardment. Serbs have relentlessly shelled the city from their positions in the surrounding hills for

If NATO strike order comes, technology, weather must mesh

By Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — If the attack order comes, NATO military commanders hope to combine sophisticated aircraft, high-tech surveillance and plain old good weather for strikes to take out artillery around Sarajevo.

U.S. fliers have preferred in recent years to conduct their raids at night, under the cover of darkness, such as in Operation Desert Storm.

"The time of day, that doesn't matter to us," said one military officer, as long as the pilots have their infrared targeting systems.

But bad weather is a major concern, the officer said, because it interferes with laser identification systems and could throw "smart" weapons off target.

Should cloud cover appear, which is a common occurrence in the region, fliers would have to drop to lower altitudes — putting them at higher risk to enemy ground fire and even hand-held weapons, said the officer, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Therefore, this operation would not be like the war against Iraq, with its potential for desert-clear

Study: Arthritis drugs may slow or block Alzheimer's symptoms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anti-inflammatory drugs used against arthritis also tend to slow or block the onset of mind-destroying Alzheimer's disease, a study suggests.

The study, to be published today in the journal Neurology, compared the drug-taking history of 50 pairs of elderly twins and found that the twin who had been taking anti-inflammatory drugs for arthritis was least affected by Alzheimer's.

"We found that the twins who had used anti-inflammatory drugs had four times greater likelihood of being the later-affected and the non-affected member of the pair," said Dr. John Breitner, a Duke University researcher and lead author of the study. "For identical twins, there was a 10-to-1 difference."

Anti-inflammatory drugs included ibuprofen, piroxicam, naproxen and some steroids that

Austin prostitution-ring arrest triggers flood of calls to police

By Mark Smith
Hearst News Service

AUSTIN — Phones at the Austin Police Department have been "ringing off the wall" with calls from worried clients of a call-girl service operated by a Texas Department of Human Services employee, police said Thursday.

A list of Aimes Escorts' clients included a state legislator and other prominent Texans, some of whom paid up to $20,000 last year to the service, police said.

Computer and financial records naming clients were seized following Tuesday's arrest of James Bunch, charged with aggravated promotion of prostitution. He allegedly operated the call-girl service out of his state office cubicle, using state computer and telephone equipment.

"They — the former clients — know who they are," Austin Deputy Police Chief Ken Williams

Former idols of rock 'n' roll now confront blues

By David Margolick
N.Y. Times News Service

Some of them belonged to legendary groups of rock'n'roll, including the Drifters, the Coasters, the Shirelles and the Young Rascals. The others were among rock's leading solo performers.

A list of the songs they made famous resembles one of those hit parades scrolling up the screen on late-night television: "Under the Boardwalk," "Charlie Brown," "Soul Man," "Sealed With a Kiss," "My Guy."

Now these onetime idols have banded together to form a new group, one that might be called the Plaintiffs. And the song they are singing, in a federal court in Atlanta, imparts as much heartbreak and bitterness as any golden oldie.

'Everyone else is making millions with what we helped invent, but they took us and threw us to the pigs.'

The aging performers, five of them members of the Rock'N'Roll Hall of Fame, maintain that over the last three decades, record companies that prospered from their work have deprived them and thousands of other former rockers of hundreds of millions of dollars in health and pension benefits due them under an indus-

Many Mexicans become enthralled with Zapatista 'guerrilla chic'

By Nancy Nusser
N.Y. Times News Service

MEXICO CITY — Guerrilla chic may have become retrograde in Hollywood, but in Mexico it's hip to be a Zapatista rebel.

At a recent concert, fans screamed and cheered as members of a rock band donned black ski masks favored by members of the Zapatista Army of National Liberation, the Indian rebel movement that staged a Jan. 1 uprising in Mexico's southern Chiapas state.

At a book opening attended by Mexico City's intellectual elite, guests performed a parody of a whiny President Carlos Salinas de Gortari being bested by quick-witted Zapatista guerrillas.

All over Mexico, thousands of people are announcing they want to be part of the rebel movement — not as guerrilla fighters but as civic supporters.

The flood of support stems from deep anti-government sentiment, especially among the poor and disenfranchised, who feel they have gained a champion in the colorful rebel leader who calls himself "Subcomandante Marcos." Hiding his true identity behind a ski mask, Marcos is cool and confident with the press. He produces headlines with sarcastic quips and has attracted a following from those who admire his combination of courage and media savvy.

He also is responsible for a mini-boom in the sales of posters and cigarette lighters bearing his likeness. Students, particularly, seem taken by him.

Even some Mexican entertainers have shown favor, not unlike the 1980s when some Hollywood performers embraced rebel movements in Central America.

"He's my hero; I didn't believe men like him existed anymore," a Mexico City woman was quoted as saying in newspaper column by political satirist Guadalupe Loaeza.

Another woman in the Loaeza column said she hides her Marcos poster in the back of her closet. "In the morning, I open the closet, pull back the clothes, and there he is, Marcos with his ski mask," the woman said.

"There is a euphoria about the Zapatistas," said Andrea Dabrowski, a spokeswoman for Cuauhtemoc Cardenas, the leading opposition candidate in this year's presidential race.

Francisco Arciniega, who helped organize the concert where members of the rock group "Bad Neighborhood" wore rebel masks, recalled how the crowd reacted when sound technicians played a tape of a Zapatista guerrilla announcing the rebels' Jan. 1 offensive in a radio broadcast in Chiapas.

"The crowd was unruly, people shouting and throwing beer cups," Arciniega said. "Then we got the tape playing, and a hush fell over the entire crowd. It was completely silent as they listened to this Indian (rebel) talking in a slow voice. Then suddenly everyone put up their hands in a victory salute.

"But it's not just romanticism that makes students support them (the rebels)," Arciniega said. "It's that their call for clean elections coincides with our own."

Many Mexicans have long been frustrated with the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI), which has held power for 65 years, sometimes through electoral fraud. The PRI also has presided over a system that maintains a wide gap between rich and poor.

The Zapatistas' brief uprising, in which they held four Chiapas towns for several days before the Mexico military forced them back into the countryside, won more PRI concessions than have been gained by nonviolent civic groups that have doggedly been protesting for years.

Many Mexicans see the Zapatistas as the movement that finally might force change.

Rebels to attend negotiations on Monday

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico (AP) — Rebel and government negotiators will meet Monday at an undisclosed location in southern Mexico to try to negotiate an end to a 6-week-old uprising.

The government's peace envoy, Manuel Camacho Solis, announced Thursday that the talks would be in the southern state of Chiapas, but said he would not specify where until Sunday for security reasons.

The announcement followed Wednesday's release by the rebel Zapatista National Liberation Army of a former Chiapas governor who was kidnapped from his ranch Jan. 2, a day after the rebellion broke out.

Camacho had said earlier that the release of Absalon Castellanos Dominguez would be a "firm step toward peace."

He said the talks could center either on the general problems of the Maya Indians in Chiapas or on specific agreements toward a peace treaty. He did not indicate which way the talks might go or how long he thought they would last. There has been speculation they could run for months.

Peasants in southern Mexico have long complained about exploitation, poverty and landlessness and say the central government has ignored their plight. Chiapas, which borders on Guatemala, is the poorest state in Mexico.

The formerly unknown Zapatistas took control of several cities Jan. 1 to demand better treatment. At least 107 people, mostly rebels and civilians, died in fighting that ended with a unilateral cease-fire.

Zapatista spokesmen said previously they wanted to hold the peace talks in Chiapas, but not in a remote area because they would be blamed if something happened to the government's negotiators.

Vietnam OKs human rights talks with U.S.

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Vietnam and the United States moved closer to establishing diplomatic ties Thursday as Hanoi announced talks to be held in both countries that would touch on human rights in the communist country.

It will be the first time since the end of the Vietnam War in 1975 — when the U.S.-backed government fell to the Communist North — that talks will be held simultaneously in both countries.

The announcement comes two weeks after President Clinton lifted a 19-year trade embargo against Vietnam and proposed the establishment of liaison offices in Hanoi and Washington.

Vietnam appeared to be making a concession by agreeing to talks on human rights violations, the most sensitive issue among Communist Party leaders.

Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Ho The Lan told a news conference the talks would be held in New York at the end of the month.

But she said that both sides "share the view that the normalization of relations between Vietnam and the United States is in no way attached to political conditions."

Lan said talks on U.S. financial claims against Vietnam that had been set to begin in Hanoi Tuesday were being rescheduled to allow time to broaden the agenda to include new issues. One of them, she said, is the establishment of a U.S. liaison office in Hanoi and a Vietnamese liaison office in Washington.

Reports from Washington said the talks are now scheduled for next week.

Lan said she had no information on reports from Washington that Secretary of State Warren Christopher would visit Vietnam in March.

An unidentified Israeli soldier, kneeling, trains a soldier from the Congo army to shoot at a base in an undisclosed area of the Congo. The government has hired former Israeli soldiers to train Congolese troops, who have been unable to quash a guerrilla army. The announcement Wednesday by Interior Minister Martin Mberri was the first government confirmation that the Congo had hired Israeli military experts to deal with the eight-month-old uprising in the west-central African nation.

Greece closes Macedonia's most important trade route

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The Greeks forged ahead in their fight with Macedonia on Thursday, closing the former Yugoslav republic's main trade route and drawing angry protests from their partners in the European Union.

EU officials criticized Greece for acting without consulting the trade bloc nations, which agreed last year to begin cooperating in developing a common foreign policy.

Premier Andreas Papandreou, furious over Western diplomatic recognition for Macedonia, ordered Wednesday that the northern port of Salonica be closed to all goods bound for landlocked Macedonia except for food and medicine.

The Greeks contend Macedonia's name and national symbols are historically Greek and thus imply a desire to control the northern Greek province that also is called Macedonia. Greece is trying to pressure its neighbor to change its name and guarantee it will not make claims on Greek territory.

"We want this crisis to be an opportunity to solve the problem," said Foreign Undersecretary George Papandreou, the premier's son.

Macedonia, which denies having designs on Greek land, accused Greece of blackmailing its neighbor by "taking advantage of our position as a landlocked country."

Greek officials at the border said goods moving to and from Macedonia were being blocked. Port officials in Salonica, about 43 miles south of the border, said ships had stopped loading and unloading Macedonian shipments.

Most of Macedonia's foreign trade moves through Salonica, including about two-thirds of its oil needs. Officials in Macedonia said they had oil reserves for about two months, and reports from Skopje, Macedonia's capital, said long lines were already forming at gasoline stations.

REBUKES: Judge chides teen murderer for lack of contrition

tion to a sheriff's deputy being present.

However, the precautions appeared to be unnecessary. None of Harrell's family was present in the courtroom during the sentencing. Musick's family, many of whom live out of state, also was not present.

During the actual formal sentencing, Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre presented the judge with victim-impact statements, in which the victim's family fill out forms to tell how the crime affected them. These statements can be considered at the time Harrell will come up for parole.

Then the judge asked Harrell if he had anything to say before he handed down the sentence.

"No, Your Honor," Harrell replied.

Hyde then mentioned seeing Harrell on the TV news Wednesday night talking about the trial and his subsequent prison sentence. Harrell, flanked by his attorneys Jim Eubank and Vern Martin, granted a personal interview to television reporters Wednesday afternoon.

"I saw you on TV last night and I must say I'm a little concerned that I didn't see much contrition on your part," the judge told Harrell. "The jury found you guilty of committing murder. You took a human life without any justification at all."

Martin told the judge he'd like to clarify exactly what Harrell said in his television interviews. He told the judge the interviews were lengthy and remorse for both families was expressed, but Martin indicated the television stations didn't air those portions.

The television newscasts aired remarks by Harrell in which he indicated he would like to get on with his life and after he is released from prison maybe get married, have some kids and "drink booze and eat pizza on weekends."

"It strikes me as important to recognize that you may be able to restore your life after you are released, but there is no restoration for the life you took," Hyde said.

"The life you took is gone forever. I hope you think about that while you're in prison ... I hope you can become a productive member of society," Hyde told Harrell.

The judge told Harrell he will assess the court costs Harrell must pay for the trial, attorney's fees, the electronic monitoring, as well as the Musick family's cost for medical services after the shooting and funeral expenses. Those costs were absorbed by Midland County.

Harrell was emotionless as he was led quietly from the courtroom into the custody of the Midland County Sheriff's Office. He will be eligible for parole after serving three years in custody.

Eddie Ray Phariss, the jury foreman for Harrell's trial, was present at the sentencing while waiting for a meeting with the district attorney.

Phariss talked openly about the jury's verdicts and what influenced the jurors.

He said that during the guilt-innocence phase of the trial, the jury didn't believe the state proved a robbery was committed before or during the murder, although Phariss said he personally believed it occurred.

He said despite defense allegations that the shooting was provoked by a homosexual overture made by Musick, the homosexual issue did not play a part in either the guilt-innocence or sentencing.

Phariss said that during the sentencing phase, the six-man, six-woman jury was at a standstill because two men and two women wanted to give Harrell probation in light of his age and his family's stormy background.

He said the defendant "really played on the sympathies" of the people on the jury. He said two of the women were touched by Harrell and the things he had been through with his family. Phariss said one of the men who was holding out for probation was doing so because of his religious beliefs.

After two hours of deliberations, Phariss said he didn't believe the jury could reach a unanimous verdict, and he told this to the judge. The judge then instructed the jury to continue deliberating, because if they couldn't reach a verdict a new jury would have to hear the testimony and set the sentence.

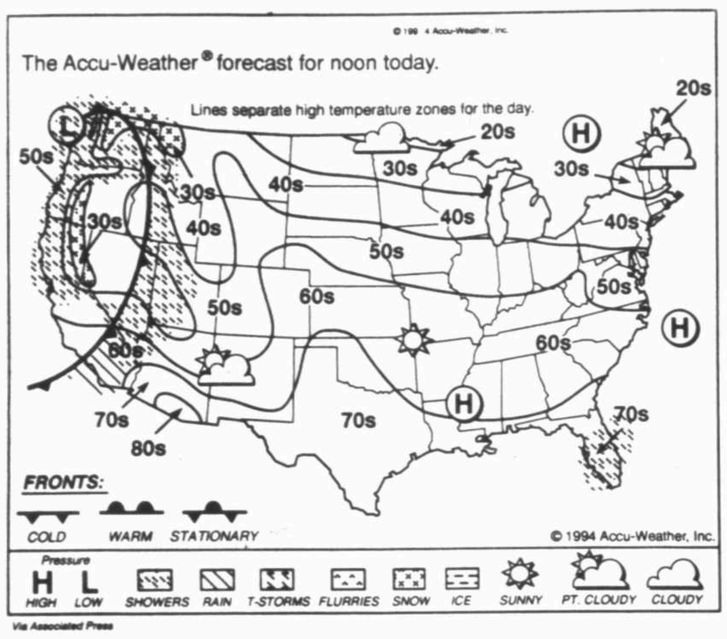

Phariss said, at that point he told his fellow jurors to consider the fact that another jury may sentence Harrell to life in prison if they didn't reach a verdict. He said apparently this influenced them to compromise on the sentence.

Phariss said he wanted a harsher sentence for Harrell.

Following the sentencing, Musick's companion arrived for a meeting with Schorre and the jury foreman.

A friend of Musick sobbed after Harrell was escorted away, saying "How can this be justice? He was such a good man. Twelve years is not enough."

A Western storm pounded California with rain, snow and high winds Thursday. The weather was unseasonably mild across much of the Midwest and parts of the South.

The Western storm moved into California from the Pacific Ocean before heading east across the inland mountain ranges. It brought wind gusts of 67 mph to Point Bonita in the San Francisco Bay area and 50 mph near Sacramento.

Nearly 5 inches of rain fell at Three Peaks, in the mountains of Monterey, Calif. More than 2.5 inches fell at Venado, north of San Francisco.

Heavy snow spread across the Cascades, Siskiyous and the Sierra Nevada, all the way to the mountains of Southern California. Nine inches of snow fell at Castle Peak in California's Sierra Nevada.

Snow also fell on portions of the Intermountain region and the central Rockies, with accumulations reported as far east as southwestern Colorado. Four inches of snow was reported in Kyle Canyon, Nev.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

COMPLY: Serbs begin large-scale pullout

nearly two years.

Aikman called the quickening pace of Serb withdrawals "a very heartening sign."

Signs emerged that in the face of lukewarm Russian support of Serb defiance this week, pullouts began even before Thursday's meeting in Pale. Aikman said he suspected the withdrawals have "been going on for over the past 24 hours."

President Clinton told reporters in Washington earlier Thursday, "I hope the air strikes will not be necessary, and they will not occur if the Serbs will comply."

The Russians have been the most powerful ally of the Serbs, their fellow Slavs and Orthodox Christians. Karadzic's promise, coming after the meeting with the Russian envoy, appeared to reflect Serb acceptance that Moscow had reluctantly lined up behind NATO to prevent Western involvement in the war.

Bosnian Serb generals railed against the NATO ultimatum in a reflection of the frustration of having to pull back and lose battlefield advantage. The generals have defied Karadzic before, and it was unclear if they would honor the promises made.

"We are openly telling everyone: In case of air strikes, all foreigners who find themselves on our territory will become hostages," Gen. Manojlo Milovanovic, Bosnian Serb army chief of staff, said in an interview published in Friday editions of the weekly Intervju, available in Belgrade.

Churkin said the Serbs agreed to withdraw heavy weapons from around the Bosnian capital in exchange for a Russian promise to contribute soldiers to any new peacekeeping duties in the city.

U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali asked U.N. member nations this week for 3,000 more peacekeepers for Sarajevo. Boutros-Ghali accepted Russia's offer Thursday of 400 soldiers.

In Moscow, President Boris Yeltsin's spokesman, Vyacheslav Kostikov, said the Russian plan and the positive response of the Serbs "make the NATO bombardments groundless."

MESH: Weaponry, weather must be on point

skies and wide-open territory to conduct punishing bombing missions, one military specialist said Thursday.

"This won't be a replay of Desert Storm. That was a sledgehammer. ... Here, air space is more limited and they will have to carefully coordinate their command and control so they don't strike United Nations forces or civilians on the ground," said retired Rear Adm. Eugene Carroll, the director of the Center for Defense Information.

Carroll, a former Navy aviator and carrier task force commander in the 6th fleet for NATO, said he believed air strikes face many limitations if command-and-control arrangements with the multinational troops aren't extremely clear, if the weather becomes a problem, or if the weaponry proves less accurate than hoped under poor conditions.

"Pilots may have to go under 4,000 feet to target. The British flew low, and suffered extreme losses in the Persian Gulf," Carroll noted. "It's possible the operation could have very limited affect on Serbian capabilities."

However, Pentagon spokeswoman Kathleen deLaski said Thursday there was "a high level of confidence" among allied commanders who would unleash the raids.

"Their feeling is that they've never been at a higher state of readiness. ... They know the ground very well because they've been covering it week after week," she said.

Allied fighter, tanker and surveillance aircraft have been participating in the Deny Flight operation in the skies over Bosnia-herzegovina for the past 10 months, trying to keep the warring factions in Bosnia from mounting air attacks.

SYMPTOMS: Drugs may block Alzheimer's

were used for arthritis in the 1950s and 1960s, but which are no longer prescribed. All of these drugs, at proper doses, tend to limit inflammation throughout the body, including the brain.

Dr. Leonard Berg, chairman of the medical advisory board of the national Alzheimer's Association, cautioned that the evidence of benefit "is not convincing enough to advise the population at large to take anti-inflammatory drugs to avoid Alzheimer's. There are side effects to these drugs."

Alzheimer's disease is a degenerative, fatal disorder in which brain cells die and patients progressively lose memory and function.

Breitner said the protective effect of the anti-inflammatory drugs was most pronounced in twin pairs in which one member developed Alzheimer's after age 71.

He said the statistical evidence was strongest in women.

"For the female pairs, all 12 pairs studied had the association where the member of the pair who used the anti-inflammatory drug did not have Alzheimer's or developed it late," said Breitner. "The probability of that occurring by chance is less than one in a thousand."

The beneficial effect of the anti-inflammatory drugs was not statistically evident, he said, among twin pairs that were both male and younger (average age 69).

Breitner said there was not enough data in the study for a statistically valid conclusion about the anti-Alzheimer's benefit from aspirin, another common anti-inflammatory drug.

Berg said the study provides "an interesting clue" that is consistent with "the general idea that inflammation in the brain may be one of the factors in Alzheimer's disease."

He said a small study last year showed that when some Alzheimer's patients received anti-inflammatories and others got only placebo pills, those on the placebos had the more rapidly progressing disease.

RING: All of Austin's abuzz about clients

said. "The day after the arrest, they or their attorneys began to call almost immediately. They wanted to know if they or their client had been named on the list and if they could talk to police."

Williams said police are not interested in damaging the reputations of anyone other than operators of prostitution rings. He added, however, that some of the service's more frequent clients may be asked to give sworn statements about whether they paid for sex — or face prosecution.

Lt. Keith Leach, who heads the Police Department's vice squad, said at least one of the former clients is a Texas legislator but declined to say whether the client is a state representative or state senator. He said it was likely other state officials would be found on the client list.

Police said they have known about Aimes Escorts for several years but began investigating Bunch only recently after a tip from state employees.

Two months ago, workers noticed unusual numbers of phone calls being made to Bunch, 46, who reviewed Food Stamp and Medicaid records for the Texas Department of Human Services, where he had worked for 23 years. DHS employees also discovered peculiar lists of names on a computer disk.

A DHS investigator with law enforcement experience recognized the records as possible evidence of a prostitution ring and notified police.

On Tuesday, police arrested Bunch at his home and seized boxes containing records, videotapes and dozens of DHS envelopes full of pornographic snapshots.

Bunch faces a maximum sentence of two to 10 years in prison if convicted. He was released on $5,000 bail Wednesday and has been fired from his $32,000-a-year job.

The police investigation, which is expected to continue for another month, has been expanded to determine if some of the female escorts were juveniles.

Police said records indicate Bunch operated the escort service for nearly two years after buying it from a woman.

ROCK: Former idols now confront blues

try agreement reached in 1958.

Making matters worse, the plaintiffs say, is that their own union, the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, or AFTRA, has let the companies get away with it.

To the companies and the union, which as defendants find themselves in rare alliance, the accusations are just so much fantasy.

The claim of missing millions is a wild exaggeration, the defendants contend. Some small amounts may be due, they say, but if so stem from genuine disagreement — not fraud — that results largely from the complexity of administering detailed collective bargaining provisions.

Making that task all the more complicated was the fleeting nature of many performers' careers during rock's infancy.

Asked about the plaintiffs' claims, Norman Samnick, a lawyer for three of the record companies and himself a trustee of the union's health and retirement fund, said, "Somebody must be smoking something."

Whatever the case, the plaintiffs are people who, as a group, had limited knowledge of finances, particularly during their heyday. And while rock'n'roll may be perpetually youthful, rock'n'rollers are not.

Now, as these pioneers approach old age and its infirmities, they find themselves poorer than they once were or ever expected to be.

"Everyone else is making millions with what we helped invent, but they took us and threw us to the pigs," said Carl Gardner of the Coasters, the group that sang rock standards like "Charlie Brown" and "Yakety Yak."

Gardner, 65, who lives in Florida and is recovering from throat cancer, recently learned that his pension account, on which he had never drawn, was worth $3,331.95 — as little as one-tenth of what should be due, by the reckoning of Richard Perlman, a lawyer for the plaintiffs.

Gardner believes that the continued popularity of groups like the Coasters provides assurance that the record industry will be forced to settle with the plaintiffs.

Under the 1958 AFTRA National Code for Fair Practice in Phonographic Recording, known in the industry as the Phono Code, record companies pledged to contribute a percentage of the money that a recording generates — generally a tenth of the artist's royalties — to the union's health and retirement fund.

The performers' lawsuit, filed in October in U.S. District Court in Atlanta, accuses the companies of regularly underreporting earnings.

Gardner is a plaintiff in the lawsuit, as are Sam Moore of the duo Sam and Dave — the team that won a Grammy Award in 1967 for "Soul Man" — and Lester Chambers of the Chambers Brothers ("Time Has Come Today").

Joining them are solo artists including Brian Hyland ("Sealed With a Kiss"), Curtis Mayfield ("Superfly") and Jerry Butler ("Western Union Man"). Also signing on are Felix Cavaliere, Bill Pinkney and Doris Jackson, who sang, respectively, with the Young Rascals ("Good Lovin' "), the Drifters ("Up on the Roof") and the Shirelles ("Soldier Boy").

Japanese act to head off trade war with U.S.

TOKYO (AP) — Under the threat of U.S. sanctions, the government decided Thursday to develop a wide-ranging package of measures to trim Japan's record trade surplus and possibly head off a trade war.

Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa and top trade negotiators agreed to focus on four areas — promotion of imports and foreign investment, deregulation, tougher anti-monopoly enforcement, and fairer government purchasing.

The decision reflects growing anxiety in Japan over U.S. threats of trade retaliation following a breakdown in talks in Washington last week on reducing the two countries' trade imbalance.

"The ball is in Japan's court," said the chief government spokesman, Masayoshi Takemura.

He said the government needs to plan the package carefully because it will "lead to a change in style and structure of the entire Japanese economy."

On Thursday, the United States announced the trade deficit with Japan shot up nearly 24 percent last year to a record $59.3 billion, surpassing the $56.3 billion set in 1987.

The four areas in the new trade package reflect key U.S. complaints. But the package is unlikely to solve the key issue that caused last week's deadlock: a U.S. demand for numerical benchmarks to measure the success of trade agreements.

Japan contends specific goals would require too much interference in business decisions.

Takemura said the new package might be worked out before a meeting of finance officials from the Group of Seven richest industrial nations on Feb. 26. Japan may send an emissary to Washington to explain the package once it is ready, he said.

Japan's strategy is to keep the trade dispute from boiling over, because a trade war with the United States — by far its biggest market — could cause serious economic damage.

"We ought to deal with specific issues in an objective manner. We should not handle trade issues sensationally," said Kochiro Matsuura, a deputy foreign minister.

Negotiators: Israel, PLO may wrap up talks in March

TABA, Egypt (AP) — Israeli and PLO negotiators said in ending a week of talks Thursday that most outstanding issues on police, prisoners and civilian government matters could be resolved by early March.

"We're just waiting for decisions from higher authorities," chief Palestinian negotiator Nabil Shaath said.

Shaath and Israel's team chief, Maj. Gen. Amnon Shahak, sounded optimistic. Each predicted about two more weeks of talks. But the tendency to delegate upward has stalled the talks for months in the past.

This week's security talks focused on the Palestinian police force and the release of Palestinians jailed in Israel. Both sides said the police issue was closed in terms of outlining coordination between the force and the Israeli army. Important details, however, were left for Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and PLO leader Yasser Arafat to resolve.

The Palestinians want 10,000 police and 100 armored vehicles with machine guns. The Israelis want a limit of 6,000 police and 30 armored vehicles.

Others issues missing details include:

■ Whether travel documents will be called "travel documents" or "passports."

■ Whether Palestinian postage stamps will be limited to internal use, within the autonomous area, as Israel desires, or can be used for overseas mail as well.

Shaath said the main problem was persuading Israel that details like stamps were not symbols of a state but symbols of identity. Israel opposes creation of a Palestinian state.

Implementation of the accord between the Palestine Liberation Organization and Israel for autonomy in the Gaza Strip and West Bank region of Jericho had been scheduled to begin in December. Differences over security, control of the borders and the size of Jericho delayed the start by over two months.

Minister links film 'Silent Scream' to stolen painting in Norway

OSLO, Norway (AP) — The theft of Norway's most famous painting, "The Scream," was linked Thursday to an anti-abortion campaign that has been seeking publicity during the Winter Olympics.

A Lutheran minister involved in the campaign said the Edvard Munch masterpiece "would emerge again" if television broadcast a film called "The Silent Scream," which shows a 12-week-old fetus being aborted.

In a radio interview, the Rev. Borre Knudsen refused to say he or his supporters were involved in the 50-second robbery at the National Art Museum on Saturday.

"We simply can't be too open about it," he said. "We have sent out a signal, and we hope that it will be heard, but we must be very secretive."

The painting was stolen from a Munch exhibition that was one of the highlights of a Norwegian Culture Festival put on in conjunction with the Winter Olympics in Lillehammer.

"We can't publicly state that we know what happened, but we see what happened as linked with the issue we feel deeply about," said Knudsen, an ordained minister in the state church who does not have a parish.

Anne Diesen, deputy managing director at Norwegian television NRK, said it had not received any demand to broadcast "The Silent Scream," which was made by a former abortionist from New York.

Operation Rescue spokesman denies any involvement with thievery.

"We would refuse it without question. We would never broadcast under those conditions," Diesen said.

Police superintendent Leif A. Lier said he listened to a tape of Knudsen's radio interview, but told the national news agency NTB he had no grounds to question Knudsen as a suspect in the theft.

A handful of Norwegian church groups and American groups such as Operation Rescue and the Christian Defense Coalition have been trying to draw attention to the anti-abortion cause while thousands of foreign journalists are at the Olympics.

"We would not engage in stealing in trying to shed light on our cause," Bob Jewitt, spokesman for Operation Rescue and the Christian Defense Coalition, said in a telephone interview from Washington. "I am not familiar with the incident. But I don't think people who engage in illegal activities are acting according to their Christian beliefs."

Twelve American anti-abortion activists, including Operation Rescue members, were deported last week after anti-abortion posters and pamphlets were seized from their luggage. Police said they suspected the activists planned illegal acts, a charge the Americans denied.

Other American anti-abortion activists have been allowed to enter the country. But there have been no reported demonstrations,

China enforces ban on foreign religious activities

BEIJING (NYT) — A delegation of Christians, including three Americans, who came to China this month to visit friends and who passed an evening of fellowship and prayer with a village congregation was detained and held incommunicado for four days, the group's leader said Thursday.

The churchmen's cash and valuables were confiscated by Public Security Bureau agents who said they were enforcing a new ban on foreign religious activities in China.

The leader of the religious group, the Rev. Dennis Balcombe, said Thursday by telephone from Hong Kong, where his Revival Christian Church is based, that he feared that a new pressure campaign against the underground church movement in China had begun.

"This is going to look bad internationally," Balcombe said. "It's like going back to the days of Mao."

Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Wu Jianmin on Thursday defended the actions of the Public Security agents, saying the foreigners had "conducted illegal religious activities" during their stay in China and were released after they acknowledged their guilt.

A spokesman for the U.S. embassy in Beijing said Thursday that the detentions were being "discussed" with the Foreign Ministry.

"We are concerned about the failure to properly inform the U.S. embassy about the detention and release of three U.S. citizens," the spokesman said.

The incident is likely to complicate China's effort to demonstrate progress toward improving its human rights record this spring before President Clinton's decision whether to renew China's favorable trade and tariff privileges in the United States.

A key requirement in Clinton's May 1993 executive order on China is the release of Chinese detained for nonviolent expression of their political or religious beliefs.

Balcombe said that while the foreign participants at the prayer meeting were released, the Chinese hosts were still under detention.

Robin Munro, a Hong Kong representative of Asia Watch, the New York-based human rights group, asserted that there has been an "intensive crackdown on religion in the provinces of China" and that in some cases, the local police are using the "cover" of enforcement to "extort money" from unofficial church organizers.

The Chinese constitution grants the right to religious belief and worship, but forbids religious activity that is outside the state-supervised church organizations, which many Christians reject as organs of the Communist Party.

U.S. expresses 'deep concern' over Greece's Macedonia move

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government expressed deep concern Thursday over a dispute between Greece and what the United States has recognized as the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

Greece cut off its neighbor's main trade route earlier Thursday, drawing angry protests from Greece's partners in the European Union.

The United States, which has about 300 soldiers in Macedonia as a peacekeeping force, had a more subdued response, with no direct criticism of Greece.

"Senior U.S. officials in Washington and Athens have expressed our deep concern about this matter to the Greek government," said State Department spokesman Mike McCurry.

Greece objects to Macedonia's name and national symbol and accuses it of having territorial ambitions over the northern Greek province of Macedonia.

The United States established diplomatic relations with Macedonia last week, calling it the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

Jertram R. Forer stands outside his home off of Pacific Coast Highway in Malibu, Calif., Thursday after rain hit the area. Forer's home was damaged during last month's flood, and he hopes sandbags will keep it dryer this time around.

S. Californians flee rising floodwaters

By Jane E. Allen
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Residents fled rising floodwaters Thursday as another Pacific storm drenched Southern California and tested sandbag, lumber and hay barricades erected in areas burned by last autumn's firestorms.

Rain, snow and gusts up to 63 mph stretched along the entire 840-mile length of California, but a subtropical "Pineapple Express" weather system riding in with the storm from Hawaii brought especially heavy rain to the south.

The sun was shining in some areas by noon, but forecasters warned residents not to be deceived.

"It looks like this storm could stay anchored along the West Coast for a while," the National Weather Service' Gary Neumann said.

Heaviest rainfall amounts at midday included 2.5 inches at Crescent City, 1.7 inches at Santa Barbara, 1.35 inches at Mount Shasta, 1.24 inches at Long Beach and 1.15 inches at Los Angeles.

Mudslides closed canyon roads and clogged drains, and heavy runoff flooded intersections. On La Cienega Boulevard in Inglewood, dozens of cars were swamped in 2 feet of water backed up by clogged drains.

Windy conditions developed along the Northern California coast with 60 mph gusts reported at Pigeon Point and 63 mph atop Mount Tamalpais, north of San Francisco.

Malibu's steep, fire-ravaged slopes got an inch of rain in five hours. Ten days earlier, a storm led to flooding that inundated 25 homes.

"We've warned them there's a significant potential for flash floods and mud flows. The scary part on this mud flow is that mud can break loose at any time," said John Clement, Malibu's public works director.

Las Flores Canyon and Big Rock beach residents were urged to leave their homes 20 miles west of downtown.

Flood watches were in effect throughout the day and the Los Angeles County Fire Department mobilized helicopter and ground patrols.

The storm was expected to bring 2 inches of rain along the coast and 4 inches in the foothills.

Fast-food chain settles lawsuit on bad burgers

SEATTLE (NYT) — The parent corporation of Jack in the Box, the fast-food chain whose tainted hamburgers sickened more than 500 people in the West last year, has settled a lawsuit by agreeing to pay $1.3 million to the family of a 2-year-old boy who died from eating a bad burger.

Michael Nole died Jan. 22, 1993, after eating meat from a Tacoma Jack in the Box that was contaminated by E. coli 0157:H7, a virulent strain of bacteria that can devastate the intestines, kidneys and blood.

Lawyer Paul Luvera, who represented parents Diana and Michael Nole, said Tuesday's settlement is the largest paid in Washington state for the death of a child under 5 years old.

The Noles, who have been active in pushing for tougher food safety standards, are the only parents of the three children who died in the outbreak to disclose the terms of their settlement with the chain.

"We hope that the publicity about this settlement will send a message to the food industry and to the government that there must be a change in our laws and health practices regarding the risks of E. coli," the Noles said.

"On the other hand, there is no amount of money that could possibly make up for the nightmare we have gone through and will always live with for the rest of our lives.

"We intend to remain active in the effort to change the practices regarding safe food handling in the meat inspection system and the risk of harm to our children from E. coli."

Since the death of their son, the Noles have met with Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy and testified at a Senate hearing.

They were among the founding members of the Foundation to Eliminate E. coli Outbreaks. And they also helped found STOP, Safe Tables Our Priority, which lobbies on a national level for tougher food safety standards.

Diana Nole, whose second child is due in a week, said she "gets scared for the safety of my next child. It's something you have to deal with every day. Just because we settled (the lawsuit) doesn't mean the pain will go away."

Clinic in Britain offers abortion pill to Americans

N.Y. Times News Service

In a move prompted as much by pressure politics as practical concerns, a British clinic will begin providing the abortion pill RU-486 available to American women — but only if they are willing to journey to England and pay $500 to terminate their pregnancy.

Helen Axby, the director of the Marie Stopes Health Clinic in London, said Thursday that she had reached an agreement with a representative of the British government's Department of Health allowing the clinic to offer RU-486 to American women and other non-residents.

Until now, British health authorities have forbidden the drug to be dispensed to non-residents.

Ms. Axby and the president of Planned Parenthood in this country expressed hope that the increased availability of RU-486 would help increase pressure on the French company that owns rights to the drug to allow it to sold in the United States.

"We clarified the rules in a conversation yesterday with one of the people in the Health Department who is responsible for our licensing," said Ms. Axby, who refused to identify the official who approved the plan.

"We have had many inquiries about RU-486 from non-residents, particularly American women. This has been a very grey area of the regulations. But the Health Department has now agreed that we can make RU-486 available as long as the woman will stay overnight at the clinic on the day of her miscarriage."

Pamela Maraldo, the president of Planned Parenthood, said she would immediately notify all of the group's affiliates in the United States that women who wanted to avoid a surgical abortion could be referred to the British clinic for RU-486.

"It's delightful that RU-486 is going to be available in Britain, but it's still unacceptable that something so safe and effective would require a trip across the Atlantic," said Ms. Maraldo.

"And it doesn't do much good to poor women to know it's available in London. This is only going to be useful to women for whom a trip to Europe is no big deal. The overall access questions still loom large."

Lawyer: Blood test shows Bobbitt probably is dad

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Blood tests show John Bobbitt is likely the father of a baby born to a woman suing him for paternity, but Bobbitt might challenge the results, his attorney said Thursday.

Beatrice Williams said she dated Bobbitt for three months in 1992, a year before his wife cut off his penis. Bobbitt denies he is the boy's father, saying he knew Williams but they never dated.

"John, this may be the only child you will ever have," Williams said Thursday at a news conference to announce test results from genetics experts hired on her behalf. "Doesn't he deserve better from a father than lame and false denials?"

Experts who examined blood samples from Bobbitt, Williams and her son, Andrew, determined there is a 99.99 percent likelihood that Bobbitt is the boy's father, said Williams' attorney, William Berard III.

Bobbitt's wife, Lorena, said she attacked him June 23 after he raped her. Bobbitt was acquitted of sexually assaulting her and Mrs. Bobbitt was found innocent by reason of insanity of malicious wounding.

Doctors haven't determined if Bobbitt will be able to father a child. His penis was surgically reattached.

Bobbitt's attorney, Michael Iacono, said the results of such DNA tests as the one Williams announced are not absolute. He added that he might get his own genetics experts to try to disprove the results.

Bobbitt was in Europe and couldn't be reached for comment, Iacono said.

Williams is seeking child support, which under New York law could amount to 17 percent of Bobbitt's income, Berard said.

Bobbitt said he has no money and has filed for bankruptcy, but Berard said he may have raised $1 million or more through television appearances, T-shirt sales and other means of trading on his fame.

Even if she wins the paternity suit, Williams said she doesn't want Bobbitt to have any contact with her son.

"I'd rather keep him out of the picture," she said. "What kind of role model is he? . . . I think he's got a lot of growing up to do."

Five-year stain injuring Iran, Islam

Just five years ago Monday, Ayatollah Khomeini of Iran issued a decree calling upon the Islamic faithful to murder Salman Rushdie and all associated in publishing his novel "The Satanic Verses." A few months later the old ayatollah died, but the deadly fatwa stands. Murderous goons have struck fatally at Rushdie's Japanese translator, and tried to kill his Italian translator and Norwegian publisher. Yet Iran's leaders behave as if they are the injured parties when other countries dare make a fuss about this barbarism.

After visiting Bonn two weeks ago, an Iranian member of Parliament saw "no reason why German politicians should antagonize Islam" by defending Rushdie's right to live. "We must be able to protect our interests in the world in the best possible way," Mohammad Larijani said. He means that Iran should be free to offer $3 million for the death of a British subject and to assault exiled foes in a dozen countries — without jeopardizing its ability to buy nuclear reactors from infidels.

Fortunately, Germany has held firm in forbidding its companies to complete what would be Iran's first nuclear power station. Iran cannot expect normal trade relations, much less sensitive technology, so long as it mocks rudimentary rules of decency among nations. The Rushdie affair is not about religion but about politics. The fatwa was issued to reassert Khomeini's leadership over the Iranian revolution, and is kept in force by politicians fearful of being seen as soft on the West.

The essential issue has been correctly stated by President Clinton: No civilized society kills people for writing books. Larijani is perfectly free to fulminate against "The Satanic Verses" and to condemn its author's views. But Iran's right to assail Rushdie cannot invade his right to breathe and speak freely. Sooner or later, some leader in Iran will say in public what its diplomats whisper in private: that the old ayatollah's fatwa was a willful blunder that has injured the good name of Iran, and Islam.

Mideast agenda bypasses water issue

WASHINGTON — As Palestinian and Israeli officials iron out their differences in preparation for peace, a sleeper issue has emerged that may hold the key to successful Palestinian self-rule: fresh water distribution.

Anderson

According to internal Pentagon and World Bank reports, the success of any future Palestinian state greatly depends on nurturing one of the few viable natural resources in the occupied territories: arable land. Palestinian self-sufficiency will only be possible after Israel lifts the current agricultural sanctions against its neighbors. Even then, massive international aid will be needed to bring a Palestinian state into the modern age of high-yield farming.

The Israelis have often boasted that they made the desert bloom, but their efforts came at the expense of Palestinians. To ensure their agricultural supremacy in the region, Israel has placed export restrictions on Palestinian products such as citrus fruits — which grow well in the region — and by denying the occupied territories the water it needs for irrigation.

Israel's success in growing water-hungry crops such as bananas and cotton stems from their control of the Yarkon-Taninim aquifer, which flows under the West Bank into Israel. Palestinians estimate that as much as half of Israel's renewable water supplies come from this aquifer. Palestinians would love to keep more of it for themselves. Israel is unlikely to support any such idea because it would mean that its farmers would have to switch to less water-dependent crops.

The Pentagon and World Bank reports confirm that a key part of Israeli agricultural success is dependent on the disproportionate share of water taken for irrigation. This "has resulted in virtual stagnation in the expansion of irrigation for Palestinian agriculture," according to one of the Pentagon reports reviewed by our associate Dale Van Atta.

Even if the Palestinians manage to solve their water dilemma, there are many other obstacles to overcome. Massive Western aid is needed to bring agricultural practices up to par with Israel. But even that may not be enough. Sources say the biggest problem for the future farmers of Palestine may be finding a market for their products.

"There is room for agricultural expansion (in the occupied territories)," one Middle East expert told us. "The real issue is markets. Look next door in both directions. Israel has largely cut off its markets for the past 25 years, and Jordan produces the same things as the West Bank." Export markets will have to be found in other corners of the Arab world — such as Saudi Arabia — which could prove difficult. Many of these countries are still bitter about PLO leader Yasir Arafat's decision to side with Iraq during the Gulf War.

While current negotiations between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization are focused on security issues and the creation of a Palestinian police force, the politics of water distribution are likely to live on long after those concerns are settled.

CULT OF PERSONALITY — Their policies may be similar, but their politics differ like night and day.

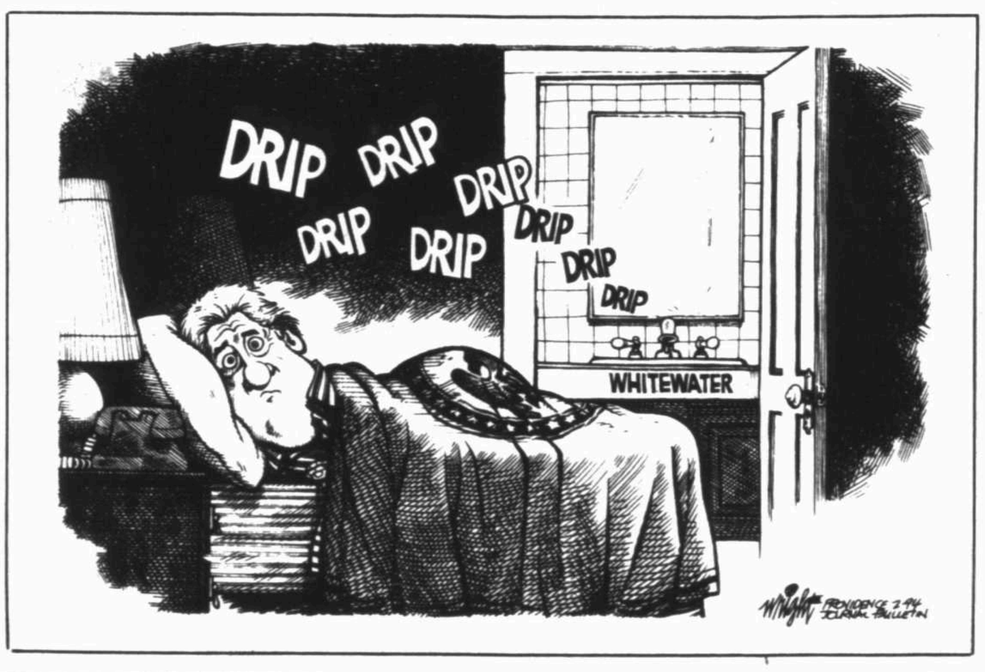

A highly unusual scenario thing took place at a recent Pentagon press briefing on the situation in Bosnia: Defense Secretary William Perry wasn't there. One of his top deputies, Walter B. Slocombe, conducted the briefing instead.

In a town driven by egos, most Cabinet secretaries would have treasured the chance to grab the spotlight on a high-profile issue such as Bosnia. Not William Perry. One of the first things Perry did when he took the top job was issue instructions to downplay his own role in the department.

"Perry is far less interested, in fact he's disinterested, in the personal promotion of Bill Perry," one top Pentagon official told us. "He does not have to be the front and center person every time the Pentagon makes an announcement."

The new policy may come as a relief for reporters who cover the Pentagon. During his brief tenure, former Secretary Les Aspin earned reporters' wrath by often refusing to answer questions during press conferences. "(Aspin) would have come down personally and screwed it up or not taken questions," our source said.

CHARLEY REESE

Go to your library, pick any prize Berry

I don't waste much time on regrets. The past is irretrievable and unchangeable. Still, only recently, I picked up a new regret — regret that I was so late discovering Wendell Berry, a farmer, poet and writer who lives in Kentucky.

Reese

You can avoid that regret yourself by going to your nearest library or bookstore and obtaining the books this man has written. It doesn't matter which one. Any of them. All of them. They are all good.

There are a lot of clever people in the country. There are lot of people who aren't clever but who are famous anyway. But there are relatively few wise and insightful people. Of the wise and insightful people, there are only a few who can express their wisdom and insight with clarity. Wendell Berry is one of those.

Writing about the current economy in a collection of essays in a book titled "A Continuous Harmony" (Harvest, HBJ), Berry had this to say:

"If the Golden Rule were generally observed among us, the economy would not last a week. We have made our false economy a false god, and it has made blasphemy of the truth. So I have met the economy in the road, and am expected to yield it right of way. But I will not get over.

"My reason is that I am a man, and have a better right to the ground than the economy. The economy is no god to me, for I have had too close a look at its wheels. I have seen it at work in the strip mines and coal camps of Kentucky, and I know that it has no moral limits. It has emptied the country of the independent and the proud, and has crowded the cities with the dependent and the abject. It has always sacrificed the small to the large, the personal to the impersonal, the good to the cheap. It has ridden to its questionable triumph over the bodies of small farmers and tradesmen and craftsmen. . . .

"I see it teaching my students to give themselves a price before they can learn to give themselves a value. Its principle is to waste and destroy the living substance of the world and the birthright of posterity for a monetary profit that is the most flimsy and useless of human artifacts."

This farmer-teacher-poet-novelist is revolutionary in the same sense as another farmer, Thomas Jefferson. He knows we cannot cure what we all say is wrong with us unless we abandon the system that produces the wrongs. He scorns people who look for a cure in the quack's pillbox of government.

Nor is he advocating socialism as an alternative to capitalism, which is what the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and blockheads always cry when presented with the flaws of the present money-changer capitalism we practice.

Instead, he advocates instead the property-based capitalism of Jefferson.

But to say only that about Wendell Berry is to create the wrong impression. His mind ranges over a vast landscape. He is not a polemicist or lobbyist or special pleader. He is not a one-note player. He is a man.

You may fairly ask what the heck I'm doing writing about a poet-farmer in a newspaper commentary. I'm doing it because he deals with the key issues facing us better than I can. He has already said well what I keep trying to say.

Naturally, not everyone will like what Wendell Berry has to say. For one thing, despite the clarity and simplicity of his language, you have to kick-start your brain. It's not pap for the gullible.

For another, a lot of people buy into the money-changer economy or into the bigger fraud that human life is a little machine that, with enough tinkering, the government can fix.

So avoid the regret of coming late to Wendell Berry. In this dungheap we call a culture, he's a diamond.

LETTERS

Individual's rights are no longer of concern

I applaud the letter you published in today's paper (Letters, Feb. 14) written by Ann Davis regarding KMID TV ignoring viewers constitutional rights. I had been thinking of writing the exact same letter and was happy to see I was not alone in my views.

What kind of country is this (Constitution) that would allow such disgusting offensive scenes to be forced into our living rooms as the Hopkins political commercial and then turn around and refuse to air a show like "NYPD Blue?" It is the most blatant form of hypocrisy! It is certainly a double standard and we are becoming more like a police state every day since the individual's rights are no longer of concern to those in power.

Shirley Beck
Midland

EDITOR'S NOTE: Federal regulations require television stations to air the Hopkins political ad when it is submitted.

Somebody seems to be afraid of Norwood

Why is Jeff Norwood being harassed? I don't have a problem with the complaint of an illegal campaign contribution being made to the proper authorities for investigation. But I think it stinks when those allegations are sent to the news media, as the newspaper article of Feb. 10 stated. It makes you wonder if the anonymous complaint about Jeff's residency might be connected to these media leaks. Somebody seems to be very afraid of Jeff Norwood. Is anyone else getting tired of dirty politics?

It has been stated that there is only one candidate running for county judge that has the necessary experience of being an attorney. The job of county judge does not require the experience of an attorney. My uncle was a county judge for about 30 years until he retired. He acquired the necessary experience, apparently, as a barber. I think I'll support the non-lawyer, Jeff Norwood.

Many shows aired are worse than 'NYPD Blue'

I am writing in response to Ms. Anne Davis' letter that appeared in the paper on Monday (Letters, Feb. 14). I have seen every episode of "NYPD Blue" through the Feb. 15 episode. I agree with the premise of her letter that "NYPD Blue" is not that bad.

I wish to go further than Ms. Davis in my support for "NYPD Blue." It is an excellent drama that would be enjoyed by most Midland viewers. Viewers for Quality Television have chosen it as the best drama on television. The show also won the Golden Globe Award for best drama. Next September, I expect that "NYPD Blue" will also win the Emmy Award.

The controversy of "NYPD Blue" has to be the language, the violence and the few bare backsides. The language is milder than I have heard on other shows. The most objectionable language I have heard on the networks this year was on the 25th anniversary show of "60 Minutes." I did not hear any outcry over that airing. The most violent show I have seen this year was probably "Walker, Texas Ranger." I do not watch this show anymore so I cannot testify that the violence continues. The most violent single incident I have seen this year was the Sean Connery character being shot point-blank on the edited Indiana Jones movie. Again, I heard no outcry. "NYPD Blue" shows a few scenes of partial nudity. They have shown a few bare backsides. A couple of weeks ago, "NYPD Blue" showed an obviously topless woman from the side. If you complain about this, I saw almost the exact same incident the preceding night on an episode of "Northern Exposure." The most nudity I have seen this year was on the Frederico Fellini episode of "60 Minutes."

Ex-U.S. treasurer enters guilty pleas

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Catalina V. Villalpando, who was the U.S. treasurer in the Bush administration, pleaded guilty on Thursday to three felonies, evasion of $47,000 in federal income taxes; conspiracy to make false statements to the Government about her finances, and obstruction of a federal grand jury.

The charges against Ms. Villalpando did not involve her official actions as treasurer. She filled the post from December 1989 until January 1993, heading the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the Mint and the U.S. Savings Bond division.

The legal action against Ms. Villalpando was disclosed in separate announcements by the Justice Department and Arlin M. Adams, the independent prosecutor who is investigating wrongdoing at the Department of Housing and Urban Development under Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr., who served during President Ronald Reagan's two terms.

Thursday was the first time prosecutors had disclosed that Ms. Villalpando's case intersected with the inquiry of the housing department, which focuses on fraud in the awarding of millions of dollars in grants and contracts. The prosecutors left the precise nature of her involvement unclear.

Ms. Villalpando appeared in Federal District Court for an hour-long hearing before Judge Thomas F. Hogan, who called her offenses "serious crimes." When the judge asked whether she would admit her guilt, Ms. Villalpando replied in a hushed voice, "Yes, your honor."

"This is a most painful and sad day for me," she said in a statement handed to reporters after the hearing. "While devoting all my attention to and energies to the demands of my public office, I neglected to attend to some very important personal matters with the care and immediacy they required."

Adams said that in May 1992 Ms. Villalpando had been ordered to testify and produce records in connection with his inquiry into Deborah Gore Dean, Pierce's former executive assistant. Ms. Dean was convicted in October 1993 of fraud and lying about her role in the housing scandal. Ms. Dean is to be sentenced on Friday.

Faced with a subpoena, Ms. Villalpando ordered a former associate at Communications International Inc., a telecommunications company where she had worked before taking the Treasury job, to destroy records that had been sought by the grand jury. She also directed her lawyer to deny to Adams' prosecutors that the subpoenaed records existed.

In a statement of facts prepared by the Justice Department, which was signed by Ms. Villalpando, prosecutors said that she evaded income taxes by declaring on her tax return in 1990 that she had a total taxable income of $161,983 for 1989 and owed taxes of $45,915. In fact, prosecutors said she "knew and believed" that her actual taxable income for the year was $329,884 and that she owed taxes of $92,928.

The judge released Ms. Villalpando pending sentencing. He set no sentencing date, awaiting what prosecutors said was her expected cooperation with the Justice Department's investigation involving Communications International and the special prosecutor's inquiry into the housing scandal. The three felonies carry a maximum sentence of 15 years in prison and fines totaling $750,000.

Justice Department officials said that under the federal sentencing guidelines Ms. Villalpando could face 18 to 24 months in prison. They said she would serve some time in confinement unless Hogan departed significantly from the guidelines.

Ms. Villalpando was known for her boldly flowing signature on all paper currency issued since her confirmation. Treasury officials said on Thursday that her name will appear on paper money until sometime in March after the swearing in of her successor, Mary Ellen Withrow, the former treasurer of Ohio.

Administration wants to keep military control

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a revamped, still-classified proposal, the Clinton administration says the United States should retain command over its military forces involved in United Nations peacekeeping missions.

The proposal drafted by President Clinton's national security team is a substantial reversal from a policy contemplated last year that would have involved rapid expansion of U.S. involvement in peacekeeping and the acceptance of U.N. command over U.S. troops.

Under the new proposal, the United States would yield operational control of military forces only on a case-by-case basis and could overrule an order from a U.N. commander.

The turnabout follows stiff congressional criticism about U.S. participation in the U.N. humanitarian effort in Somalia and concerns about the possibility of NATO air strikes over Bosnia.

A typical comment came earlier this month from Senate Republican leader Bob Dole: "United Nations peacekeeping — both at headquarters in New York and in the field — is out of control."

The policy, titled "Presidential Decision Directive 13," is still in draft form. But administration officials briefed lawmakers and key congressional staffers on the proposal this week. A copy of an administration summary was obtained Thursday by The Associated Press.

Pentagon spokeswoman Kathleen deLaski said Clinton has not yet signed the document but said it is "nearing a state of readiness." Congressional aides, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Clinton was expected to sign the directive in a matter of weeks.

1st woman cadet at Citadel claims peer harassment

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The first woman to attend day classes at The Citadel said Thursday that male cadets yell obscenities and hiss at her, and a school newspaper article called her names.

In interviews earlier this week, Shannon Faulkner said tensions had eased since she started classes Jan. 20 and "it's not as bad as everyone said it would be."

But after a court hearing Thursday in her continuing attempt to join the school's all-male corps of cadets, Ms. Faulkner said the harassment had gone on too long.

"I expect them (cadets) to be the gentlemen they were taught to be," the 19-year-old said. "I will live with it when I'm in the corps of cadets. Right now, I don't think I should be subject to being harassed."

Ms. Faulkner may attend classes but not participate in military training while her lawsuit challenging the corps' all-male admissions policy is heard.

An unsigned article in the school newspaper, The Brigadier, referred to her as "Shrew Shannon," "Mrs. Doubtgender," and "The Devine Bovine."

Male cadets also yell obscenities from their barracks and hiss at her from the back of classrooms and in stairwells, she said.

Hillary Clinton's brother, Hugh, runs for U.S. Senate in Florida

By Maureen Dowd
N.Y. Times News Service

MIAMI — Once you have flown to Mars in a rocketship with Hillary Rodham at the controls, maybe it doesn't seem so daunting to run for the Senate without any experience or money.

The first lady's brother Hugh once scrapped with his older sister about who would be the captain of the basement bench that doubled as their spaceship.

"She would always drive and I would always have to sit in the back," he said. Now, more than three decades later, the 43-year-old assistant public defender for Dade County is planning what some would call an even more fanciful flight, a bid to win the Democratic nomination to oppose the popular Republican incumbent Connie Mack, in Florida's Senate race in the fall.

A heavyset man with wavy black hair and a mustache flecked with gray, Rodham strongly resembles the actor John Candy. And his quixotic bid has the feel of a Candy comic vehicle, as Rodham lurches forward in sweetly hapless fashion toward an announcement with almost nothing in the way of money, staff, offices, organization or White House support.

Florida Republicans say they are delighted to take on a man whose main credential for high office is the name he shares with his famous sister, especially in light of the polarized response Mrs. Clinton elicits from voters.

They suggest that it is a fool's errand to run against an incumbent who is considered so strong that no other Democrats have entered the primary so far. Republicans also think that they can turn a big loss for a Rodham in Florida into a referendum on the president.

Presidential aides warn that poor showing could embarrass administration.

"Hugh Rodham's candidacy is a joke," said Mitch Bainwol, a senior aide to Sen. Mack. "Having a brother-in-law in the White House is not exactly earning your stripes politically."

White House officials, who had just stopped wincing about Roger Clinton exploiting the family name for a career in B movies, are now wincing about the lofty new aspirations of the first lady's brother — although they make it clear that they have a lot more respect for the genial Hugh than the flaky Roger.

Clinton aides, who fault Rodham more for naivete than exploitation, said that Rodham, who is very close to his sister and brother-in-law and even went along on their honeymoon, has been warned that a disastrous Senate run could embarrass the president.

But the message has clearly not gotten through. Michael Copperthite, a 38-year-old campaign manager, has booked Rodham on "Larry King Live" on Feb. 28 for his announcement and is still lobbying for the first lady to come down and join her brother on the following day when he makes a statewide tour.

"The only way he's not going to do this is if the president of the United States calls and asks him not to," Copperthite said. (Rodham has resigned from his job as of Feb. 28.)

And in a reference to the Clinton strategist, Rodham's brash campaign manager predicted, "In a couple of months, Carville will be clawing to get in on this."

At mid-week, the presumptive campaign was putting in its first phone lines and there was talk about getting the candidate fixed up with some statewide health club memberships.

"I'm trying to watch what I eat and exercise more," said Rodham, a bench-warming quarterback for Penn State in the Joe Paterno years, whose straining shirt buttons testify to the fact that he likes to eat and to cook "by taste," as he puts it. "I guess I'm just a lover of life."

Copperthite, who jokingly calls Rodham, "Zorro's sidekick," confirmed reports that Mrs. Clinton had told her brother, when he mentioned the possibility of a run last fall, that at least it might spur him to lose some weight.

Tom Fiedler, the political editor of The Miami Herald who has written a political almanac of the state, thinks Rodham has appeal, but doubts that it is of the telegenic nature.

Chemical leak spurs evacuation of border towns

NOGALES, Ariz. (AP) — More than 4,000 people were evacuated from this border town and the adjacent Mexican city Thursday after a petroleum-based chemical leaked into the sewage system, police said. No injuries were reported.

A 7½-mile-long area that runs along the city's main sewer line was evacuated because the chemical was believed to be flammable and possibly explosive, authorities said. No fire broke out and no one was hurt, said Officer Luis Puig, a police communications supervisor.

The exact number of people evacuated from homes and businesses wasn't immediately known in the Arizona town, but it was more than 1,000, Puig said.

In Nogales, Mexico, police Lt. Gildardo Parra said about 3,000 people were evacuated from a commercial zone that covered about 5 miles.

The evacuations began Thursday morning and continued into the afternoon.

Everyone on both sides of the border was allowed to return Thursday night after tests showed levels of petroleum-based products in the sewer line had returned to normal.

Whitewater probe will cost millions, president says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton declared Thursday the Whitewater criminal investigation will cost taxpayers millions of dollars though "most of it has nothing to do with me." The prosecutor turned his attention to Mrs. Clinton's former law firm.

In Little Rock, Ark., a broadly worded document called a notice subpoena was delivered to the Rose Law Firm this week including "an admonition against any shredding or destruction of materials," said one person employed by the firm.

Special counsel Robert Fiske's admonition directs the firm to preserve information on computers as well as paper documents that may pertain to the investigation, according to a second person who was read portions of the notice by a different Rose employee. Both people spoke on condition of anonymity.

After a report in The Washington Times last week raising the question of shredding, FBI agents asked law firm employees whether they witnessed any documents being destroyed, the first person said.

Authorities: High school students had sex in class

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A boy performed oral sex on a girl in front of several high school classmates while their teacher was in the room, authorities said Thursday.

According to student witnesses, the act occurred in October during a study hall in a ninth-grade English classroom at Patterson Career Center, said James Williams, the city's school superintendent.

Five to 10 students stood around the couple while the teacher was at her desk listening to a radio with an earplug, witnesses said. The two students were suspended but have since returned to school and are undergoing counseling. Williams said witnesses told investigators about the sex act but the teacher denied it happened. The teacher, Virginia Carter, is on medical leave and has submitted her resignation, effective at the end of the school year.

Her phone number isn't listed, and her attorney, Pete Rakay, did not immediately return a phone call.

Defense rests in Branch Davidian murder trial

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Attorneys for 11 Branch Davidians charged with murdering federal agents rested their case Thursday without calling any of the defendants in a day and a half of testimony.

"There is no need to put your defendant on the witness stand unless you want to prove something," said defense lawyer Steven "Rocket" Rosen. "When you are accused of a crime in this country you are under no burden of proof."

U.S. District Judge Walter Smith indicated closing arguments would take place early next week.

Just before the defense finished, attorney Mike DeGeurin announced defense and government attorneys agreed to several statements gun dealer Henry McMahon would make if he had testified.

McMahon, who was in business with Davidian leader David Koresh, would testify Koresh gave him business records to provide to the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms the August before the raid while the federal agency was investigating Koresh.

Also, McMahon would testify ATF agents were at McMahon's home once when Koresh was on the telephone.

"The agents refused the invitation to talk to him," DeGeurin said.

Four ATF agents were killed in a shootout Feb. 28, 1993, as ATF agents stormed the Davidian compound in an attempt to serve search and arrest warrants. Six Branch Davidians were believed to have been killed.

The 11 Davidians on trial are charged with murdering the agents and could face up to life in prison if convicted.

The final day of testimony began after Judge Smith summoned both sides into his chambers to discuss possible jury tampering. A letter was mailed to eight members of the jury in what appeared to be fake enve-

Narcotics dogs, handlers attend annual seminar

■ The conference, sponsored by the Permian Basin Drug Task Force and Texas Law Enforcement Association, helps officers and their canines work better together.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

ODESSA — It wasn't your typical weeklong seminar.

Instead of spending time in chairs at banquet rooms and auditoriums, there were trucks, pickups and cars lined up in the open space of Barn C, behind the Ector County Coliseum.

Instead of pens, pencils, notepaper and overhead slides, there were tennis balls, favorite leather toys and plastic bags with cocaine and other narcotics.

The instructor wasn't your typical monotone speaker intent on putting everyone to sleep. And the participants — or at least half of them — were a bit on the fuzzy side.

Welcome to the 1994 Advanced Handlers Seminar — attended by law-enforcement canines and their handlers from around west and north Texas. The seminar, sponsored by the Permian Basin Drug Task Force and the Texas Law Enforcement Association, is in its second year of helping the narcotics officers and their dogs work better as a team.

This year's seminar was attended by about 20 handlers and their canines from various law enforcement agencies around the state, including: the Permian Basin Drug Task Force, the Midland Police Department, Odessa Police Department, LaSalle County Sheriff's office, Mansfield Police Department, Pampa Police Department, Upton County Sheriff's office, Arlington Police Department, Waxahachie Police Department, San Angelo Police Department, West Central Texas Interlocal Crime Task Force, Taylor County Sheriff's office and the Blanco County Sheriff's office.

Permian Basin Drug Task Force Commander Tom Finley said the seminar was divided into two parts: classroom-type instruction and hands-on training using vehicles and other devices to sharpen the canines' drug-sniffing talents.

"We search cars, pickups and other vehicles," Finley said. "The handlers learn to work better with canines — how to handle them better."

The seminar is taught by Gene England, a canine instructor from Bowling Green, Ky. England trained all of the task force's canines before they arrived for duty, Finley said.

Canines are typically taught with a reward system, such as getting to play with a favorite ball after finding the hidden narcotics. The canines are taught to identify heroin, marijuana, cocaine and methamphetamines by scent only.

"Just a small amount of any of these drugs would kill the dog," Finley said. "That is part of the reason that the dogs are not rewarded with food. Many drug dealers will place a drug in food, such as hamburger, in hopes that the dog will eat it.

"Also, you don't want to arrive on a

Q. What are the qualifications and responsibilities of the Fire Department's arson investigators and inspectors?

A. The qualifications include certification as a peace officer through the Commission on Law Enforcement and Fire and Arson Investigation from the Texas Commission on Fire Protection. Their prime duty is to investigate fires to determine the cause and origin, then to follow through with the investigation via the justice system, along with public safety education and inspection of commercial, industrial and public buildings.

Questions about emergency medical services or firefighting should be sent to Lights & Siren, P.O. Box 1152, Midland, 79702-1152.

17-city alliance

FORT STOCKTON — Representatives of 17 West Texas cities met Tuesday to form the West Texas Transportation Alliance (WTTA) to deal with and promote transportation issues.

WTTA has also agreed to work with the Midland/Odessa Transporation Alliance (MOTA) to promote a corridor for the extension of Interstate 27 that will best serve the communities of West Texas.

"The meeting was really to establish communication with communities south of the Midland/Odessa area in hopes that they would see the benefits of an I-27 route through the Midland/Odessa area," said Midland County Commissioner Guy McCrary.

"I thought the meeting was extremely productive and strategically important."

McCrary said he thought the chances of bringing the I-27 route through Midland/Odessa were good.

"If you look at the facts, they are clearly in favor of this area," he said. "Based on our population concentration, being the shortest distance from Lubbock to I-20 and the intermodal importance, we have an extremely good chance of getting the route."

In other action, WTTA accepted a request from 10 chambers of commerce in northern Mexico and agreed to meet with them in Lajitas to discuss transporation issues.

TU rehearing

AUSTIN — TU Electric has asked state regulators for a rehearing because the company says a recent 8.7 percent rate hike is not enough.

The Public Utility Commission's order of Jan. 28 granted TU Electric an overall revenue increase of $453.4 million, or an increase of 8.7 percent.

Dallas-based TU Electric had sought an increase of $760 million, or 15.3 percent.

In its motion for rehearing, the company said Thursday the PUC made mistakes in calculations and in analyzing the evidence.

Mansfield's campaign focuses on significance of appeals court

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

While campaigning in Midland Thursday, Steve Mansfield, Republican primary candidate for Court of Criminal Appeals Place 1, focused on spreading the word on the importance of the appeals court.

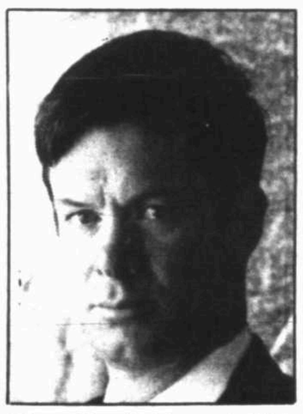

The 41-year-old Houston attorney is up against one opponent — John S. Cossum — for the primary nomination. Incumbent Justice Charles F. Campbell — who has served on the court for 12 years — is the sole candidate in the Democratic primary.

Mansfield emphasized the importance of the position.

For example, the court hears all death-penalty cases, he said.

"They automatically go to the Court of Criminal Appeals ... (and) in my opinion too many cases are overturned," Mansfield said.

Solis makes stop in Odessa, tells voters of law experience

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Campaigning for the Texas 8th Court of Appeals in El Paso, Miguel "Mickey" Solis made his way to Odessa Thursday to inform area voters about his 21 years of trial-law experience.

Solis is competing with three other candidates in the Democratic primary for the Place 1 spot on the court. The 22-county district includes the Midland-Odessa area.

The El Paso Democrat said this kind of race is more about experience than issues. As a justice on this court, there is little room for change with the jurist's duties closely delineated by law, he said.

Solis intends to "humanize" the office, getting out in the community and meeting with students and other groups, he said.

Nabers, in bid for Railroad Commission office, visits Midland

Mary Scott Nabers

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Texas Railroad Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers, campaigning in Midland Thursday, said she was running for office on three basic issues.

In an editorial conference at the Reporter Telegram, Ms. Nabers said the issues are: proactive intervention at the federal level on behalf of the Texas energy industry; building of an infrastructure to support increased trade with Mexico under the North American Free Trade Agreement, and promotion of alternative energy.

Ms. Nabers said she would work hard at the federal level to show Washington what Texas had achieved with legislation that supports rather than hinders the energy industry.

In recent months, Ms. Nabers has tried unsuccessfully to bring Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary to Texas for a firsthand visit of the oilpatch; she thinks she may have a better chance this year.

"The Interstate Oil Compact Commission, which is composed of 29 energy-producing states, will meet in Texas this year, and we hope to have Gov. Ann Richards offer her a personal invitation to be the main speaker."

Ms. Nabers said the energy secretary has been hard to defend the oil industry.

In other matters of federal intervention, Ms. Nabers said she would not be opposed to challenging more federal regulations on a state's-right basis, rather than "just rolling over."

"I am for smaller government and less government intervention, and I am very pro-business."

Ms. Nabers said trade with Mexico would be good for Texas, but the state had a lot of planning and work to do to make it happen.

"About 80 percent of the trade with Mexico will pass through Texas. We need to make sure Mexican trucks are safe, properly insured and obey weight regulations to keep our highways safe."

She said the state must begin immediately

Governor announces plans to revamp state's educational system

By Max B. Baker
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — Gov. Ann Richards on Thursday outlined sweeping proposals for remaking the state's education system, including allowing innovative management of individual schools, which would be free of many state controls.

Administrators, teachers, parents and even businesses could contract with a school board to form partnerships to design and operate a school to meet a community's particular needs, Richards said.

Under that contractual agreement, the schools would be free of most local and state regulations but also would have to meet agreed-upon standards for student performance, she said.

"We have to free up schools and we have to create an atmosphere where the local schools feel free to do whatever is necessary to help their students succeed," Richards said.

Richards unveiled her education agenda in a speech to the Tarrant County Democratic Forum at the Fort Worth Club. Richards, a Democrat, spent Thursday in Fort Worth attending several campaign and fundraising events. She faces no major opposition in the March 8 primary.

Richards said her education plans would cut down on costly and time consuming state regulation and allow for more flexibility in designing a school system that works.

She endorsed the creation of alternative schools for disruptive students and rewriting the Texas Education Code to eliminate unnecessary statutes. She said she also wants to restructure the Texas Education Agency to deal only with fundamentals such as funding, safety, classroom size and teacher qualifications.

Richard's chief Republican rival, George W. Bush, said that her proposals appear to offer nothing new and copy of some of his ideas, such as restructuring the TEA.

"Once again, she is an echo and not a voice," said Bush, who was campaigning in McAllen and Corpus Christi on Thursday.

Bush is scheduled to outline details of his education package during an educational conference this weekend in Fort Worth.

"State government can do what everybody can do," Richards said. "It can lead. It can follow. Or it can get the hell out of the way. And that is exactly the way I feel about what state govern-

TRIAL: Attorneys for cult members rest case

lopes from the Texas comptroller's office, unidentified court sources told The Dallas Morning News.

The letters, on fake district attorney's stationery, were critical of the government's case and said the trial was crucial to the right to bear arms.

The letters also defended the sect members and criticized Judge Smith, the paper said in today's editions.

It is the second time that jurors have received mail during the trial. Last month, a jury advocacy group sent letters on jurors rights, and the letters were handed over to the court unread.

Both sides refused comment on the matter Thursday.

Lawyers for the Davidians contend the followers of doomsday prophet Koresh were trying to defend themselves during the shootout.

Defense attorneys tried to build much of their case around the cross-examination of more than 120 prosecution witnesses over a six-week period.

"They put on a lot of the witnesses we would have called," said defense attorney Douglas Tinker.

Only 11 witnesses testified since the defense began its case Wednesday morning with the playing of a 911 emergency call made from the compound as the shootout began.

"There are 75 men around our building and they're shooting at us at Mount Carmel," Koresh aide Wayne Martin told the McLennan County Sheriff's Department in the call.

In other defense testimony, the mother of defendant Graeme Craddock described her son as a quiet, religious person whose personality is "opposite" the violence that erupted at David Koresh's prairie compound.

Dorothy June Craddock said she received a letter from her son the December before the February raid in which he said he hadn't expected to stay at Koresh's compound near Waco as long as he had.

"In any case, I definitely can't stay here forever," the letter said.

Craddock was arrested after emerging from the compound following the April 19, 1993, fire that destroyed the place. Koresh and 78 others, including 18 children, were killed in the inferno that prosecutors claim the Davidians started.

Another defense witness testified Denver police "blew my arm off" with the same type "flashbang" device federal agents used against the Davidians in a failed raid.

"The only thing I want to say is I hope they quit using those devices," Sandra Sawyer said after she left the federal courtroom.

Ms. Sawyer said several surgeries were necessary to reattach her arm and restore its use. She said she was at a friend's home in 1988 when police raided it and threw in a flashbang.

SOLIS: Candidate informs voters of experience

(From 1B)

"If elected, I'm not planning on just being hidden in an office. I want the voters in the 22 counties to know that I exist and will always be available to my constituency," he said.

In addition to his experience as a trial lawyer, Solis has worked as a licensed pharmacist. Deciding to leave this profession for law, Solis returned to the University of Texas at Austin in the late 1960s.

Solis has written laws as a legislative assistant and law clerk in the Texas Senate and worked as an instructor at El Paso Community College and UT El Paso. Solis also has served as a county commissioner in El Paso.

Solis said this diverse background, along with extensive experience writing and interpreting the law, makes him the best candidate.

While in Odessa, Solis received an endorsement from the Permian Basin Central Labor Union.

The 53-year-old father of four believes a justice on the court of appeals must adhere to the U.S. and Texas constitutions, be tough on crime and be sensitive and fair to those he represents, he said.

Solis is running against fellow Democratic candidates Michael R. Gibson, David Wellington-Chew and Luis Cesar Labrado, all of El Paso. Solis characterized all of the candidates as "gentlemen."

Republican primary candidates include Julia Vaughn of Midland.

PLANS: Richards outlines proposals for education

ment has to do . . . ."

"We need a long-term commitment to our schools," she said. "We are going to lead and we are going to participate in allowing local governments to lead."

The so-called community partnership or "charter" schools would still receive state and local funding and would be required to meet guidelines on items including desegregation, safety and teacher certification, said Cindy Rugeley, a spokeswoman for Richards.

But a school district would be able to sign a contract and turn over management of a school to a partnership that could include a non-profit organization, a university, a private company or a group of parents and teachers, she said.

"They design how the school will be operated," Rugeley said. "They will sign a contract with the school board about how the school will be run and the contract will stipulate student results."

Rugeley said Richards is not interested in having a for-profit company take over a school or school district.

Improving education is necessary to Texas' economic future, Richards said. "We can bring the jobs and we can bring the companies, but we've got to have the young people in the workforce ready to take those jobs."

MANSFIELD: Republican tells of appeals court's importance

(From 1B)

About one-third of death sentences are overturned, he said.

"That assumes that lower courts are messing up . . . too much," Mansfield said.

Despite the assumption, the appeals court, many times, isn't concerned with the guilt or innocence but with, essentially, technical errors, he said.

Mansfield also criticized the speed of the appeals court.

"I think too often the court sits on cases . . . for years before ruling," he said. Mansfield said the backlog was great enough to warrant such delay.

And there are too many cases that go before the appeals court that are frivolous, which needs to be stopped, he said.

Mansfield said the court has the power to set rules to curtail frivolous appeals. He suggested fines, essentially, for filing such appeals or simply refusing to hear them.

Mansfield, who has practiced law since 1978, has never sought public office before.

scene where people who have narcotics in the residence have food on the table and the dog goes for the food instead of the drugs."

The Permian Basin Drug Task Force has five canines: three Belgian Malinois, a German shepherd and a golden retriever.

"We go through training every Monday if possible, with the canines and their handlers. This seminar is a more intense program.

"We got our first dog two years ago, about the same time we started this seminar," Finley said.

He said the first dog cost $4,000, which the dog made good on shortly after stepping off the plane from Kentucky.

"We were working a drug case in west Odessa," Finley said. "We had searched the whole residence and, when the dog got here, we turned him loose on the house. He found about $4,000 in drug money hidden in a dresser. He paid for himself very quickly."

NABERS: Texas Railroad Commissioner seeks office to get ready for the onslaught of traffic from Mexico.

The third issue on her agenda will be promotion of alternative fuels.

She said the Alternative Fuels Council had $52 million to allot to the promotion of alternative fuels such as compressed natural gas, liquid natural gas and propane.

She said creation of an alternative fuels industry in Texas would create jobs for the state.

Ms. Nabers, if successful in her bid in the Democratic primary for the Railroad Commission race, is expected to face Republican Carol Rylander in the general election.

Judge approves settlement in Border Patrol harassment lawsuit

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A federal judge Thursday approved a lawsuit settlement agreement that stipulates U.S. Border Patrol agents cannot detain or arrest people simply because they look Hispanic.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton said the deal was a fair resolution of the class-action suit filed by students and employees at predominantly Hispanic Bowie High School who say agents assaulted and abused them.

The settlement is "the best thing for the people in the Bowie area," said Bunton. "I think it's the best thing for the people who serve this country in the U.S. Border Patrol."

Parties on both sides agreed.

"We're pleased to have had this opportunity to put this issue behind us," said Chief Agent Silvestre Reyes, the head of the Border Patrol's El Paso Sector, which covers part of West Texas and all of New Mexico.

"It's been a situation that's been difficult not just for the Border Patrol and the Immigration Service ... but for the community as a whole," said Reyes, who was not the chief agent when the suit was filed in 1992.

Bowie High Principal Paul Strelzin, who was not a plaintiff, said he was pleased. "Anytime you beat the government at their own game, it's a great victory," he said.

Strelzin and others at Bowie, which is just yards from the Mexican border, said things have improved since the suit was filed.

Plaintiff Ben Murillo, a Bowie football coach who said an agent once held a gun to his head, said agents are careful now to ask permission if they want to come on campus and are respectful.

"That's all that we ask, that they treat us with some dignity," said Murillo."

In the settlement, the sector agreed to maintain a policy barring agents from questioning or detaining someone without having a "reasonable suspicion, based on specific ... facts" that the person is either an illegal immigrant or has violated U.S. immigration laws.

This stipulation does not apply to agency checkpoints or other locations where reasonable suspicion is not required by law.

The sector will also enforce a policy that agents cannot arrest anyone on immigration charges unless they have probable cause to believe that person is an illegal immigrant or has violated the laws.

Reyes said the stipulations don't change existing agency policy. "It's just a reaffirmation that we're going to follow our procedures," he said.

Maria L. Flores, a plaintiff who graduated last year, said she hopes that will be the case. "I hope they follow their own rules," said Flores. "That what they say, they'll do."

The settlement also reinforces a December 1992 order by Bunton, who told the agency in a preliminary ruling in the lawsuit to stop questioning people because they appear to be Hispanic.

Space center funded radiation tests, report says

HOUSTON (AP) — Two human radiation experiments, conducted more than two decades ago, were funded by the Johnson Space Center, The Houston Post reported Thursday in a copyright story.

The newspaper said a NASA review uncovered the studies, one in 1963 and the other in 1974.

NASA said the studies were both with patient consent, and neither used any more radiation than a typical X-ray.

But The Post said a man who participated in the 1963 study has called a government hotline to say he has leukemia, a cancer of the blood.

NASA officials said they have received no information on the man and do not know his identity.

Johnson Space Center officials on Thursday did not immediately return a phone call made by The Associated Press.

A doctor who helped conduct the study said he doubted the tiny doses of radiation the man received during the experiment could have caused the illness.

The man is among more than 18,000 callers to a Department of Energy national 800 number in the seven weeks since it was established.

Following press reports on government testing on unwitting civilians and soldiers, the White House ordered reviews in several agencies of what testing might have been done.

The 1963 study was conducted on seven University of Houston students at the Texas Institute for Rehabilitation and Research. The students, identified only by their initials, were made to lie in bed for two weeks — the best Earthbound simulation of space flight weightlessness.

Among the procedures was an injection of a radioactive isotope in one arm and blood withdrawal from the other arm to measure plasma volume, performed on 10 different days.

"That should be no concern," said Carlos Vallbona, who helped coordinate the study and is now chairman of the Department of Community Medicine at Baylor College of Medicine.

Similar procedures are conducted "thousands of times" today by doctors for a variety of reasons, he said.

Vallbona said he was surprised the study would be included in the Johnson Space Center report.

The space center sponsored a study in 1974 and 1975 by Wil B. Nelp, now director of the Department of Nuclear Medicine at the University of Washington, that used 16 older Washington state women already involved in bone decay studies.

"These were little old ladies probably getting about 2 percent of what an astronaut would get on an ordinary space flight. About what you'd get on an airline flight from Houston to Seattle," Nelp said.

Nelp devised a method where patients' bone mass was measured by the argon they exhaled after standing in a tank exposed to a small radiation dose.

By performing such a procedure before and after space flight, NASA could determine bone loss in astronauts — a known problem, Nelp said.

Nelp and co-researchers won a NASA award for their work, but it was never used. Current thinking concentrates on specific areas of bone loss in astronauts rather than whole-body calcium counts. Light dosage X-rays are used.

Lawrence Dietlein, JSC assistant director for life sciences, said he expects the Energy Department hotline will forward any information from the man with leukemia.

Dietlein said he had no knowledge of what documentation the man might provide. An energy official contacted a NASA official in Washington about the man, and that official contacted Dietlein.

Dietlein, a Harvard medical school graduate, was technical monitor of the 1963 study.

Only one other NASA involvement in a human radiation study is known, said Harry Holloway, NASA associate administrator for life and micro-gravity sciences.

The space agency contributed 10 percent of funding to a well-publicized Atomic Energy Commission high-dosage radiation study on hundreds of terminal leukemia patients in Oak Ridge, Tenn., until 1974.

First exposed in 1981, the study and NASA's involvement were criticized as unethical and mainly serving NASA's purposes of radiation study for astronauts.

Man's third capital murder trial goes to jury

By Peggy Fikac
Associated Press Writer

GEORGETOWN — Jurors began deliberations in Kerry Max Cook's third capital murder trial Thursday after hearing lawyers' impassioned arguments concerning the 1977 slaying of a Tyler secretary.

"The only reasonable deduction you can make from the evidence before you in this case is that Kerry Max Cook is guilty of the sick offense of the mutilation-lust murder of Linda Jo Edwards," said prosecutor David Dobbs of Smith County.

Defense lawyer Paul Nugent countered, "There is not one piece of scientific evidence that connects Kerry Max Cook to the crime."

While Cook's fingerprints were found on the sliding glass door to Ms. Edwards' apartment, he said, they were not found in the room where she was killed.

"If you convict Kerry Max Cook based on innuendo, based on the slop the prosecutor's thrown against the barn wall hoping it sticks, our founding fathers will roll in their graves," Nugent said.

The jury foreman sent out a note after just a few hours of deliberations, saying jurors were divided on the issue of guilt and suggesting a recess until this morning.

But presiding Judge Robert Jones told the six-man, six woman jury to continue deliberating.

Cook, now 37, was sentenced to die in 1978 in the murder of Ms. Edwards, 21. He is accused of killing her during a rape or burglary.

Cook spent 13 years on death row before his conviction was thrown out in 1991 by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals because a psychiatrist who interviewed Cook had not warned him that their conversations could be used in court.

His second trial, in 1992 at Georgetown, ended in a mistrial when the jury said it was deadlocked. The case was moved from Smith County because of the public attention it had received there.

Ms. Edwards was beaten in the head with a small plaster statue and stabbed with a knife and scissors. Prosecutors also say her assailant cut off part of her lip and vaginal area, and a lock of her hair.

Teen dies in fire after saving family

ROANOKE (AP) — The body of a high school senior who died saving her family from a burning home was found about 3 feet from a bathroom window, fire officials said.

Marijo Yeatman would have celebrated her 19th birthday next week. She died Wednesday as she rescued her kin from a blaze that destroyed their home in northwest Tarrant County. Fire officials say the Northwest High School student was probably overcome by smoke.

One of Miss Yeatman's brothers awoke to a smoke alarm around 2 a.m.

Miss Yeatman is credited with helping guide some family members to safety and waking her sleeping parents.

John Yeatman escaped through the front door, while his wife, Cindy, went through a bedroom window and was injured in a fall. She was hospitalized at Baylor Medical Center in Grapevine but her condition was not immediately available.

The cause of the predawn fire hasn't been determined.

FAMILY MATTERS

Moving can be traumatic for children too

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR COPING: We are going to have to move again in March. This will be our fourth move in the 11 years that we've been married. This time is going to be even harder because we were told that when we moved here, we would be here for at least five years. With all the changes in (company), we're glad to have a job but are both disappointed to have to move after only two years.

May

We made the mistake of telling our children (boy 8 and girl 6) that we were going to be here for a few years. They made lots of good friends in our neighborhood and at school. For the first time I have become involved in their school and outside activities. I have also for the first time become involved in several women's organizations.

I know that I'm very sad over having to leave my friends after finally putting down a few roots, but I'm even more worried about the children. We haven't told the children that we are leaving yet because I didn't want to upset them until I had to. They are both so happy here that I'm really concerned about this move. We are being transferred to (a large city) that we lived in when our son was a baby. He doesn't remember that of course, so it will be new experience for both of them.

Can you help me with things that I could do to help them with the move? I don't want to upset them but I just know that this is going to be hard on them. WORRIED MOM

DEAR WORRIED: Moves can be stressful for children as well as adults. The stress in children seems to show up most noticeably in school work. A recent survey of more than 9,000 children between the ages of 6 and 17 found that those who had moved more than six times were 77 percent more likely to have behavior problems and were 35 percent more likely to have failed a grade than those who moved less than that.

In their book, "Moving With Children," Dr. Thomas Oklowski and Lynn Parker give several hints to help children adjust to a move:

■ Make time to explain to the children that the family is moving. Children normally want to know "why?" followed by practical questions about the new house, what the kids there are like, what the school will be like, and so on. Some children need to talk about these things over and over — so be patient and take the time to discuss them as often as it takes.

■ Older children, especially teenagers, need more detailed information.

■ When you go visit your new home, become an "exploration team" with your children. Moving often does mean losing "your place in the neighborhood, your sense of identity." Work together to discover the ins and outs of your new neighborhood.

■ Encourage your children to become involved in whatever outside activities they enjoy here. This will help them to do something familiar and to develop new friendships.

■ Help the children restore some sense of control by letting them help pack (if possible) and move some things to the van. Let them carry their dearest possessions in the car with you.

■ Try to make your move in the summer if you can. This may pose a problem for you given your March move date. Some people do stay to finish the semester. The idea behind that is that the summer gives the kids time to adjust to their neighborhood before having to start to school. It also lets them start school with the rest of the children.

I also encourage you to get actively involved again in your new community, though that may make it more painful if you have to move again. However, it does show the children what you want them to do. Good luck on your move. We're sorry to lose you and your family, but maybe you will be back soon!

THE FOLLOWING "PARENTAL PRESSURE TIPS" ARE OFFERED BY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

■ Take a deep breath. And another. Then remember you are the adult.

■ Close your eyes and imagine you're hearing what your child is about to hear.

■ Press your lips together and count to 10, or better yet, to 20.

■ Put your child in a time-out chair. (Remember the rule: One time out minute for each year of age.)

■ Phone a friend.

■ If someone can watch the children, go outside and take a walk.

■ Write for parenting information to: Parenting, P.O. Box 2866, Chicago, Ill. 60690.

You can also call the Center (699-4262) for additional information and parenting programs.

Support group helps 'messies' into recovery

By Denise Lavoie

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — A walk through Judy's house used to mean stepping over piles — piles of magazines, piles of catalogues, piles of letters and piles of things she couldn't even identify.

Judy had become a "messie."

So Judy started a chapter of a support group — "Messies Anonymous" — for slobs ranging from those who are unable to balance a checkbook to those who have had their children taken away because their homes were a disaster.

Every Tuesday morning, Judy and about a half dozen other people meet at the Greenwich Civic Center to discuss what it means to be messy. The meetings are closed to protect the anonymity of participants.

JUDY SAID during a typical meeting, members share their messy problems from the previous week and set goals for cleaning up during the coming week. They also read from "Meditations for Messies — A Guide to Order and Serenity," by Sandra Felton, the guru of messiness who founded Messies Anonymous in 1981.

"You learn that there are people who have the same problem," Judy said. "I used to think it must be laziness, but I know that's not true. Now, I kind of think of it as a learning disability, only it's a cleaning disability."

Messies Anonymous is not a joke — though in an age when there seems to be a support group for every problem, it is not always taken seriously.

Judy once encountered a man who criticized the group for using the 12-step program advocated by Alcoholics Anonymous and other self-help groups. He "was incensed. He was involved in a 12-step program for drugs or alcohol, and he said, 'You're not going to die from a piece of fluff.'

"I thought he had a good point," she said. "(Being messy) is not a life-threatening problem, but if it's a serious problem for you, then it's a serious problem."

FELTON STARTED the group after growing frustration with her own messiness. After 23 years of marriage, she had so much junk that one bathroom was unusable because it had become a storage room. Her three children were afraid to have friends over because the house was in such disarray.

Only a dozen people showed up near her home in Miami for the first meeting. But after the group was written up in The Miami Herald, "I got 12,000 letters saying, 'Help!'" Felton said.

The group does not keep membership statistics. Felton, who has written six books on the subject, defines a "messie" as "a person who lives a more or less chronically disorganized life and doesn't want it that way."

"It doesn't have to be someone who's terribly disorganized. It just has to be disorganization to the point where it makes the person uncomfortable and they just aren't able to control it on their own," she said.

SOME ARE only slightly perplexed by their messiness; others have been evicted from their condominium association, gone through a divorce or been unable to sell their home because of its messy condition.

"It's sort of like weight. For some people, if they're 10 pounds overweight, they become alarmed, and other people don't become concerned until it gets much further down the line," she said.

Judy, a 37-year-old church secretary, said her low point came about five years ago, when the constant clutter in her house led to tension with her husband. One day, her father-in-law dropped by unexpectedly and found the house in its usual state of disarray.

"He privately confided to my husband that the place was a pigsty, and that's when I knew I had to do something," she said Judy.

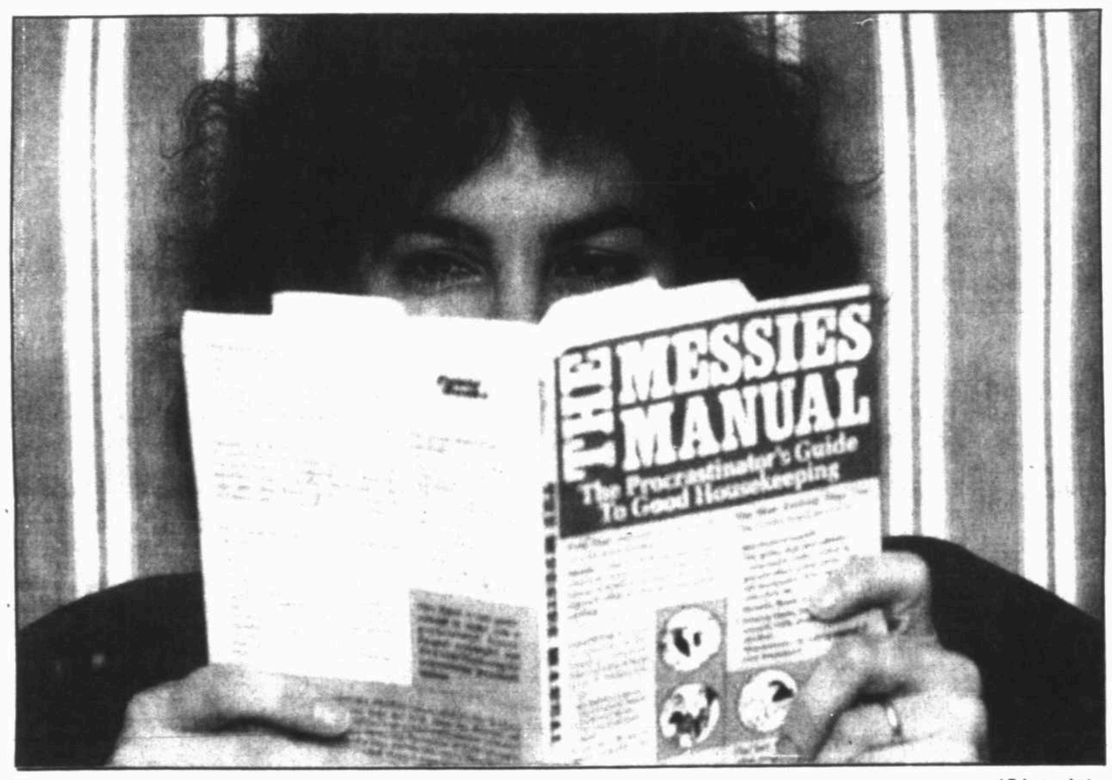

Since starting the support group, she's made progress.

Before, when people dropped by without calling, she would make a frenzied dash to shove as much junk as she could fit under the couch. Now, almost everything has a place in her modest home in Old Greenwich. She keeps a lone three-tier organizer on the kitchen counter, where everything from bills to catalogues are neatly stacked.

"The whole general atmosphere of our home life is so much more peaceful and contented," she said. "I do have people over a lot now, whereas before I'd have only certain people over — people who were tolerant of my mess."

DEAR ABBY

Public-address messages fall mostly on deaf ears

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 62-year-old man with a slight hearing problem. It's not the kind that can be helped with a hearing aid. I understand that about one in five people in my age bracket have some kind of hearing problem.

Van Buren

I do a lot of traveling to visit my family, who live all over the map. The announcements in airline terminals and train stations are sometimes almost impossible to understand, due to resonance and echoes. By talking slower and more distinctly, and making short breaks between each word, the message could be made much more understandable. Example:

"Flight" (pause) "number" (pause) "to destination" (pause) "boarding at" (pause) "gate number" (pause) ...

Usually it sounds like, "Flightnumberthreesevensixto chicagoboardingatgatesix!"

Abby, I doubt if anyone with GOOD hearing could have understood this one. I spoke to the flight attendant who gave the announcement, and she said, "Thanks, I never realized it!"

We hearing-impaired people would appreciate attention to our problem. There are many of us traveling now. No ramps to build, or wheelchair accessibility necessary — just a few lessons in diction and enunciation. Thank you. — ROGER GILMAN, NEWPORT, R.I.

DEAR ROGER: What a public service you have performed for all travelers. Thanks in advance from them to you.

DEAR ABBY: Several months ago, a friend (I will call her Kate) offered to get some theater tickets for my husband and me. I had to be away on a business trip the day the tickets went on sale, and since "Jeff" and I wanted good seats, we took Kate up on her offer. We gave her the $150 for the tickets and thanked her for doing us the favor.

When we returned, Kate called with the news that she was able to get us excellent seats, and she would get the tickets to us soon. I saw her several times after that, but she never got around to delivering the tickets.

When it got close to the date of the performance, she finally confessed that she had "misplaced" them, but she was sure she could locate them. Well, she never did, so in addition to the disappointment of missing a great show, I was out $150.

My husband and I agree that Kate should reimburse us for the tickets she failed to produce, but neither of us wants to risk a confrontation. How should we handle this? — NO TICKETS

DEAR NO TICKETS: In this situation, a "confrontation" is in order — either call Kate, or write her a note asking her to kindly reimburse you for the $150 you gave her for the theater tickets you never received.

DEAR ABBY: I have been seeing a certain man for about three months. When I am at his home, he never answers his telephone. (Sometimes he turns the sound off completely.) He says they are probably business calls, and he doesn't like to take business calls at home.

In all the time that we have been seeing each other, I have never met any of his friends, family members or business associates.

I can't help wondering if he has something to hide. — BEST-KEPT SECRET

DEAR BEST: Stop wondering. The answer is obvious.

DEAR ABBY: Every day, approximately 53,000 units of blood are used in the United States by people whose lives often depend on the generosity of others. Heartfelt thanks to you, Abby, for taking the time to inform your readers about the guidelines for giving blood, the gift that keeps on giving.

The need for blood donors is always great, but just as important is the dire need for people to donate tissue. Tissue is used daily to save or enhance thousands upon thousands of patients' lives. However, only one-sixth of the skin needed for burn victims is available. Additionally, an estimated 150,000 people could have the quality of their lives improved by bone transplants each year, and thousands could recover all or part of their vision.

To become part of the nation's largest collection and distribution point for tissue, you must sign a donor card, available at your Red Cross Tissue Center, or indicate your intention on your driver's license. The American people have shown time and time again their readiness to help others in need. What better way to lend a helping hand than by giving blood and tissue? — EIZABETH DOLE, PRESIDENT, AMERICAN RED CROSS

DEAR ELIZABETH DOLE AND DEAR READERS: I was surprised to learn that the Red Cross not only saves lives through the distribution of donated blood, but that the American Red Cross Tissue Services is also the largest gathering and distribution organization for tissue donations in the United States.

Tissues are gathered from deceased or surgical donors who are tested for diseases such as AIDS and hepatitis (there has not been one reported case of AIDS transmission from a Red Cross transplant). The tissues they gather are: heart valves, mandibles (jaw bones), bones, Achilles tendons, ear ossicles (inner ear bones), skin, ligaments, major blood vessels and fascia (muscle covering). Tissue donations are processed (in a sterile environment) for use in orthopedic, neurologic, plastic, cardiovascular and oral reconstructive surgery.

There is also a national Dental Powder Program (dental powder is crushed, sterilized bone used to fuse jaw bones more quickly and easily with the roots of teeth).

Tissue and powder donations not only enhance and save patients' lives, they can also be used for medical research and education.

Scientists study heart disease

By Lauran Neergaard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Conor Lundergan peered through a microscope at the tissue that once clogged a patient's arteries, looking for the renegade cells that re-hospitalized the man just six months after heart surgery.

Doctors once thought arteries were simply inert tunnels, but they now know their walls harbor cells that actually cause heart disease — and make it come back after surgery.

Armed with this finding, a new breed of scientists called vascular biologists are searching for ways to stop the killer cells without surgery.

"Nothing else has worked," said Lundergan, a professor at George Washington University who has suctioned the tissue out of living patients in an effort to discover how it originates. "The answer is somewhere in the blood vessel wall."

"We're seeing dramatic results," added Dr. Wayne Alexander, cardiology director for Emory University Hospital. "The research is showing we can heal the blood vessel and reverse the disease."

Heart disease kills about 500,000 Americans a year. Surgery — moving clean arteries to bypass clogged ones, or opening blocked arteries with balloons in a procedure called angioplasty — isn't the panacea doctors had hoped. Within six months, 40 percent of angioplasty recipients have clogged arteries again.

So cardiologists have turned to the lining of the blood vessel, called the endothelium — virtually ignored until the late 1980s but now believed to be the birthplace of heart disease.

"We thought it was kind of carpeting in a tunnel," Alexander said. "We now know it is one of the most responsive, regulated, finely tuned tissues in the body."

When the lining functions properly, it makes the blood vessel dilate or constrict — encouraging blood to flow smoothly or clot — and promotes or slows growth of muscle cells beneath its surface. But when fat, diabetes, smoking or other stresses upset the lining's delicate balance, the way it reacts can cause heart disease.

For example, a stressed artery lining stops producing nitric oxide, a cell relaxant that normally prevents arteries from having spasms. Such spasms can cause heart attacks or dangerous blood clots.

The lining also senses cholesterol as soon as it enters the bloodstream. Cholesterol slows the lining's ability to regulate cell growth, and Emory researchers discovered that cells out of control result in harmful plaque.

Lowering cholesterol perks up the blood vessel's lining so much that heart disease symptoms subside even if the plaque isn't removed, they said.

Removing the plaque is still the traditional treatment. But in some of those patients, the blockage comes back "like a cancer," Lundergan said.

He thinks he has discovered why. In research to be reported in March at the American College of Cardiology conference, Lundergan studied 100 patients' arteries and found that their white blood cells — which are supposed to destroy infections — attack the site of the removed plaque as if it were a wound.

These cells produce large amounts of inflammatory proteins that build up tissue to block the artery as surely as cholesterol does.

"Why it only occurs in half the patients is a mystery," Lundergan said. "If we find out, we may also find the cure" to recurrences of artery blockage and prevent other people from getting the disease at all.

Veteran, VA at odds over benefits

By Joan Goessl

AP Laserphoto

World War II veteran Arthur Winters looks through records in his Albuquerque, N.M., home. Winters, shown surrounded by files packed with documents pertaining to his legal fight with the Department of Veterans Affairs, has battled the VA for more than 20 years in an attempt to recieve full disability payments for an unecessary surgery he underwent in 1971.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — This much they agree on: A bladder operation that World War II veteran Arthur Winters had at the veterans hospital here was unnecessary and could have been avoided with a simple test that was not conducted.

After that, Winters and the Department of Veterans Affairs part company.

Winters contends the operation he had more than two decades ago led to a host of disabling medical problems, including severe urinary tract maladies and kidney disease that cost him an organ.

That, he says, entitles him to disability payments way beyond the monthly $284 he gets for an arm wound suffered during the war.

The VA contends that while the 1971 bladder operation was negligent, the surgery did not cause any residual problems, and Winters is not entitled to any more money.

But Winters, 75, is tenacious. He's kept his case alive for years by appealing decisions rejecting his claims and by flooding the VA's regional office here with letters demanding full benefits, which would amount to some $1,800 a month.

"I hope they give in," he says of his fight for back benefits dating to 1971.

HOWEVER, THE VA says rules are rules. It maintains that more money is simply not warranted under its regulations.

"Mr. Winters wouldn't believe you, but we don't bear him any ill will," says Tom Breen, adjudication officer for the VA's regional office.

Breen, who served in the Air Force during the Vietnam era, says his office found most of Winters' operations and procedures were necessary. That decision was upheld by the quasi-judicial Board of Veterans Appeals in Washington.

Winters' attorney, Vietnam veteran Jim McKay of Santa Fe, says Winters and dozens of other veterans are caught in a bureaucratic nightmare.

"As a matter of fundamental fairness, they are entitled to compensation," McKay says. "As far as I'm concerned, it's nothing more than administrative foot-dragging by the VA not to pay these veterans."

Winters, a German prisoner of war for two years, has a separate claim pending before the appeals board in Washington.

That claim contends ailments he contracted while he was a POW — frozen feet, dysentery, malnutrition and arthritis, among others — still bother him and that he's entitled to more compensation as a result.

The regional office didn't buy the argument. The Board of Veterans Appeals is actively reviewing it, said Steve Cohn, executive assistant to the board's chairman.

Beyond that, Winters believes the VA wrongly diagnosed prostate cancer in 1971. He says he quit his job with the post office because he thought he was going to die. His action cost him thousands of dollars in lost wages.

"It was 1971, not 1994," Winters says. "I thought that was it."

Breen says medical documents point to a cancer mass that was successfully removed.

"Mr. Winters sometimes seems to indicate that he never had cancer and none of the surgery should have been performed," he says. "That's not borne out. The documents show he did have cancer, the cancer was removed and it didn't come back."

WINTERS' CASE and others like his are caught in a legal limbo as the VA and veterans across the nation await the outcome of a case involving a Texas man who took on the agency after back surgery in 1986.

Fred P. Gardner contended that his back problems persisted after the operation, to the point where the muscles in his legs withered away. The VA regional office in Waco concluded he was not entitled to benefits, a decision upheld by the Board of Veterans Appeals.

Gardner then appealed to the Court of Veterans Appeals, which was created by Congress in 1988 to oversee and review veterans' cases. The court disagreed with the earlier decisions, and the VA now has appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court. The high court has not yet agreed to hear the appeal.

Gardner's attorney cited a 1924 law that says if a veteran suffers an injury or an aggravation of a previous injury at a VA hospital, he is entitled to benefits as if the injury were service connected.

"The analysis is simple," says Gardner's attorney, J. Michael Hannon of Washington. "If you're a veteran and you go into a VA hospital, it's like walking back into the service."

Whether Gardner's case will have any bearing on Winter's remains to be seen. But while the case is pending there's a moratorium on malpractice claims, and the VA can't grant or deny any such claims until it's settled.

THE GARDNER case would have major consequences for the VA if it's upheld, Hannon says. The agency would have to take a new look at numerous claims.

"The Court (of Veterans Appeals) told us the current regulations are not valid, but we don't have a clear picture of what we'll end up with," Breen says. "It's possible the Supreme Court could uphold the previous court decisions, we'd get new regulations and Mr. Winters might conceivably still not get any more than he's already gotten out of it.

"On the other hand, he could."

Meanwhile, a room in Winters' apartment near downtown Albuquerque remains full of file drawers packed with letters and documents.

"I could empty this room if they'd settle this," he says.

Breast cancer is frightening illness

Associated Press

Breast cancer is a frightening illness, but some of the scariest "facts" about the disease are myths — including the idea that there's an epidemic striking American women.

In addition, Gina Kolata wrote in an article in the current issue of Cosmopolitan, a family history of breast cancer is not nearly as dangerous as it was once thought to be.

The American Cancer Society predicted that about 182,000 women would be diagnosed with the disease this year and 46,000 will die of it. It ranks below lung cancer and heart disease as a cause of female fatalities.

"The word epidemic is a political term," said Joann Schellenbach, director of media relations at the American Cancer Society. She said an epidemic means "numbers of cases beyond what you would expect, a serious public health problem."

"I don't believe you could find a single serious cancer epidemiologist who would describe breast cancer in this way," she said.

One myth about breast cancer is its purported spread among young women. In fact, breast cancer is extremely rare in younger women. Just 2 percent of all cases occur in females under 35. The risk factor for women under 30 is one in 2,500, according to Catherine Boring, who directs the statistics branch at the American Cancer Society. Boring said nearly 80 percent of all breast cancer cases occur in women over the age of 50, most of them 65 or older, and she added: "There is no evidence of increased rates of breast cancer in women under 40."

Researchers attribute the dramatic increase in the number of women over age 40 who were diagnosed with breast cancer in the 1980s to widespread use of mammography.

The heredity factor is another fear about breast cancer — fear that if your mother or sister suffered from the disease, you probably will, too.

Not necessarily, according to a new study conducted by Dr. Graham A. Colditz of Harvard Medical School, which tracked 117,988 women aged 30 to 50 for 12 years. The investigators found that while 2,389 women did get breast cancer, only 9 percent of them had family histories of the disease.

Colditz said a 30-year-old woman with no family history of breast cancer has a 6.9 chance of getting it at some point up to age 70. A 30-year-old woman whose mother and sister had breast cancer — the worst-case scenario — has a 14.7 percent risk factor. The risk increase caused by aging exceeds any hereditary effect.

MHS sights in T-Birds

■ Lady Bulldogs hope to outrun El Paso Coronado in a Class 5A area girls basketball playoff.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

The short trip the Midland High girls basketball fans will enjoy tonight could be the biggest factor in the Lady Bulldogs' favor as they see their first action in the Class 5A playoffs.

MHS coach Jim Raughton's squad will tip off against the Lady T-Birds at 7:30 tonight in the familiar, although probably not friendly, confines of the Odessa Permian Fieldhouse for a 5A area round title. And the Lady Bulldogs, who already have a huge following, are hoping they can draw a big "home" crowd and use it to their advantage.

"Right now I want these girls to understand that I think we have the advantage with them coming to Odessa to play," Raughton said. "I told my players they have to take advantage of every situation that's presented to them. That's what winning in the playoffs is all about."

MHS won its first playoff game last year with a decisive 59-41 whipping of El Paso Andress. And the current El Paso entry in the area round doesn't look all that impressive either.

The Lady T-Birds (20-8 overall) finished second in 1-5A behind El Paso Irvin, a team that District 4-5A already has a fairly convincing win over. The Midland Lee girls, who wrapped up their season with a fifth-place finish in district, topped Irvin 62-52 in a tournament in December. And the Lady Bulldogs (29-3) did not lose a game to a 4-5A opponent this year, whether in district or non-district play.

Coronado coach Sylvia Alcantar likens the Lady Bulldogs to some of the teams which have been a stumbling block for the girls playoff teams in 4-5A.

"They play like the usual Panhandle teams — very big and very physical," Alcantar said.

But despite his team being heavily favored, Raughton is worried about stopping T-Bird guard Erika Gutierrez, a player who does many of the same things for Coronado that Amy Alcala does for the Lady Bulldogs.

"I know they've got one good player — Erika Gutierrez," Raughton said. "She scored 33 against (El Paso) Eastwood in their playoff game the other night. She had 18 in the second half."

Gutierrez, one of the top scorers in El Paso, is definitely the key to the Coronado offense, Alcantar said.

"Erika's going to have to be loose and not pressed too hard. But I've seen her respond all year in big games."

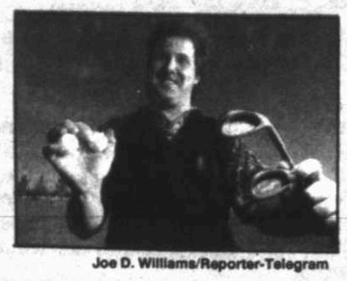

Alcantar has two sophomores who have aided Coronado down the stretch. Andrea Quintanar finished with 10 points and 10 rebounds against Eastwood while Audrey Fisher had seven points and nine rebounds.

Coronado is similar to Midland in game tactics and strengths.

"They are a guard-oriented team and they can hurt with their perimeter players," Raughton said. "They

Robuck sears Green Tree

Sitting at home earlier this week, Dallasite Kevin Robuck called up a couple of friends here in Midland and scrounged up a game of golf with a couple of buddies on Wednesday, his day off.

Wednesday morning, Robuck hopped on a plane, flew into town and grabbed a quick bacon, egg and cheese sandwich before beginning a round at Green Tree Country Club.

A golfer who has never played collegiately or won a club tournament, Robuck admitted that he was "just plodding along, lipping out putts and wondering if it was going to be another one of those days" when he reached the sixth hole.

Using a wedge on the par-3, 146-yard hole, Robuck sank the first hole-in-one of his career.

Robuck's round then went from the unlikely to the unbelievable

On the par-3, 191-yard, No. 8, using a 3-iron, Robuck sank his second ace of the round.

So what are the odds of hitting two hole-in-ones in a round?

"We get approximately 30,000 calls from golfers who have hit hole-in-ones," said Lois Hains, associate editor of Gold Digest magazine. "Of those people 12-20 people report double hole-in-ones."

"The amazing thing about the first ace was that the guy hitting in front of me hit his ball about two inches from the hole, I don't know how my ball got around his and into the hole," said Robuck, who is a three handicap and averages playing a round of golf three times a month.

Midland schools 4-5A swimmers

■ With cooperation and the City of Midland swimming program, MHS and Lee hope to dominate the district meet.

Picture this: Midland Lee football coach Earl Miller demonstrating blocking techniques to a Midland High lineman. Midland High girls basketball coach Jim Raughton working on rebounding with a Midland Lee center. Or Lee baseball coach Jessie Benavides showing Midland High's second baseman how to turn a double play.

In a city where rivalry between the two high school's teams is as intense as ever, those actions would send more than a few ripples through Midland's sports community.

But local coaches working with each other's athletes happens almost everyday in swimming. And with Lee and Midland High in the District 4-5A swim meet this weekend in San Angelo, the Rebel and Bulldog coaches say their unique system of cooperation, among other factors, means Midland's high school swimming programs may be better than ever.

Carter jolts MHS to playoffs

■ Senior and leading scorer Donald Carter makes things happen for the Bulldog offense.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Senior Donald Carter is the electricity that ignites the Midland High basketball team, and the ignition results in back-to-back Class 5A state playoff appearances.

The Bulldogs will host Lubbock Monterey at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Chaparral Center in bi-district action with the winner earning the right to advance against El Paso Andress in the area round.

Carter will be one of the Bulldog keys if MHS is to venture far into the single elimination playoff process. Carter simply makes things happen when he steps onto the floor.

In fact, he draws high praise from MHS head coach Jack Stephenson.

"Donald could start for any high school team in the state of Texas," Stephenson said. "He could be the best athlete in the district. He just loves the game, never loses his poise on the floor and one of the easiest kids to coach that I've ever had."

Carter knows that every time he steps onto the floor from now on it could be his last for the Bulldogs. And when he feels that way, other teams seem to play.

"I'm thinking every time out might be the last one," Carter said. "That's why I didn't want to have to play Abilene High a third time in a district playoff. You've got to give 110 percent every time out because it might be the last time you play here."

Carter scored 30 points and hauled in seven rebounds against Abilene High Tuesday to vault MHS into second place and the playoff berth against Monterey. He had 21 points in the second half when the game was on the line and sparked a 14-2 fourth quarter run that turned the game around.

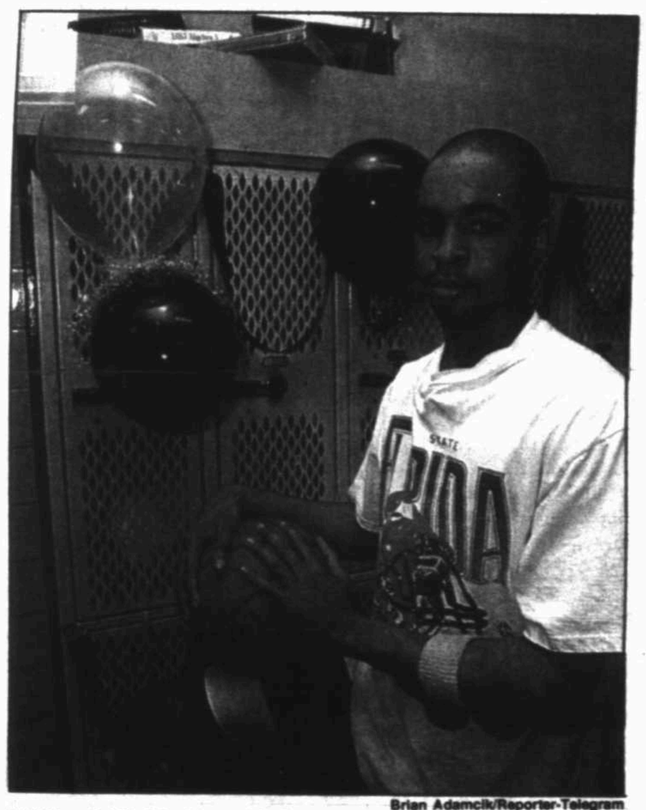

"This has been a great senior season," Carter notes. "This is the way to go out. Still, I thought we would have gone farther in the playoffs last year than we did, but we got knocked out in the first round. I don't want that to happen this year."

But it was the bi-district loss to Amarillo Tascosa last year that is the partial reason Carter has been such a dynamo this year.

"I saw last year how much was needed to take your game to another level," he said. "I knew we would have to be better this year to get past that first round."

Carter has averaged around 17 points per game this season, but he had three district games with 30 points or more. But scoring isn't what the 6-foot-1 Carter is all about. He is the complete player with great leaping ability and he is tenacious on defense. He held the high-scoring Dan Wilson of Abilene High to five second-half points Tuesday after Wilson had scored 15 in American Tommy Moe races to a silver medal, his second Olympic medal in alpine skiing, in the Super G Thursday in Kvitfjell, Norway.

Skier celebrates birthday

■ Tonya Harding and Nancy Kerrigan practice on the same ice for one hour without incident.

By Larry McShane
Associated Press Writer

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — After skiing sensation Tommy Moe celebrated his birthday with another medal, America's Olympians took to the ice Thursday, where Brian Boitano stumbled and the U.S. hockey team — what else? — tied.

The never-say-die hockey team scored a power play goal with 28 seconds left to notch its third straight come-from-behind deadlock, 3-3 against defending silver medalist Canada.

And Boitano, making his first Olympic appearance since winning the gold in 1988, stumbled shortly after taking the ice in the figure skating competition.

Goodbye, comeback. Hello, Disney on Ice.

Boitano's spill was one of many on a bizarre night where the three men responsible for the last six world championships and two gold medals — Boitano, Viktor Petrenko of Ukraine and Kurt Browning of Canada — all but dropped out of medal contention.

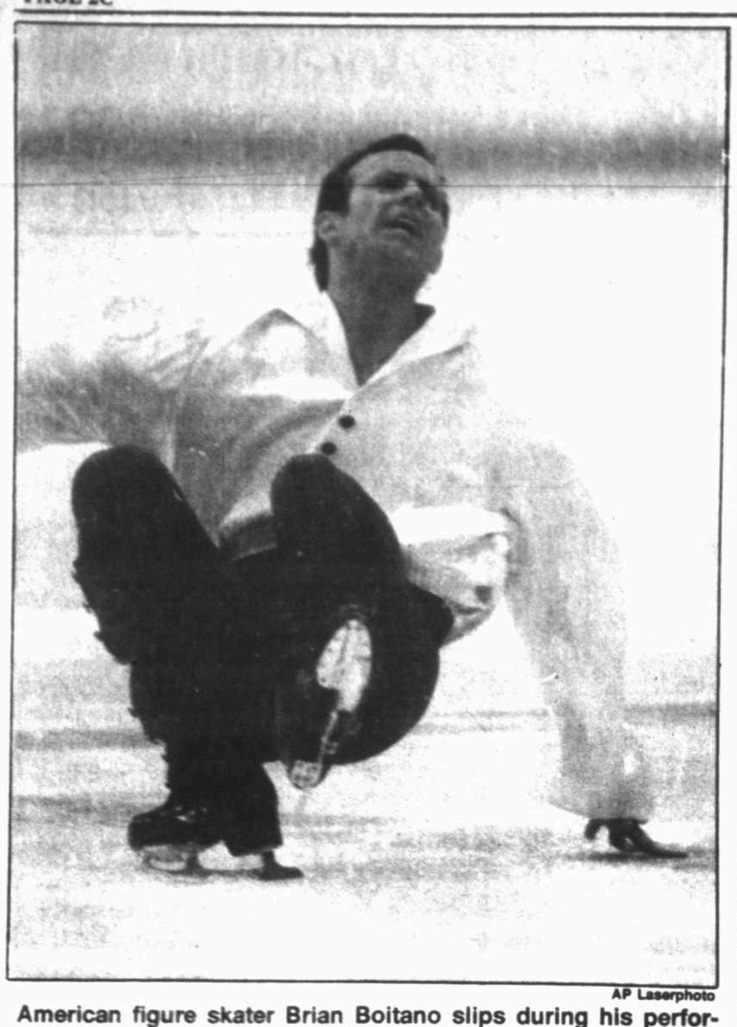

Boitano was eighth, Petrenko ninth and Browning 12th.

"When you miss something, when it goes wrong, you go down," Boitano said. "We all missed."

Not everyone. Russia's Alexei Urmanov, a relative unknown, zipped past the big boys to capture the technical program. Elvis Stojko of Canada was second, followed by Philippe Candeloro of France. America's medal hopes rested with U.S. champion Scott Davis, 22, who was fourth.

HOCKEY: U.S. ties for third time

Boitano, 30, looked nothing like the skater who swept to gold six years ago. He fell down on a triple axle, missed another move, and took the whole thing philosophically.

"Although I missed the triple axel, I feel like everything else was first-rate," he said. "I'm happy with myself for being able to concentrate after that."

The best news on the ice came when Nancy Kerrigan and Tonya Harding practiced together for more than one hour without incident. Despite lingering animosities and threats against each skater, both left the ice under their own power.

Kerrigan continued on to watch the U.S. hockey team, and she saw their best effort of the Olympic tournament.

A penalty with 42 seconds left opened the door for the Americans, who took advantage 14 seconds later when Todd Marchant scored his first goal of the Olympics. In addition to its man advantage, the U.S. pulled its goalie to play 6-on-4.

The tie clinched Canada (2-0-1) a spot in the medal round, while the Americans (0-0-3) would likely need a win over Sweden (2-0-1) on Saturday or Italy (0-3) to qualify.

Despite the comeback against a solid team, U.S. coach Tim Taylor was not quite satisfied.

"We need to prove to ourselves that we can beat somebody," Taylor said. "I think this was more of a win than the first two ties to us, mentally. So I think this will be more a springboard to us."

Where Boitano failed, Moe flew for the second time since he arrived in Lillehammer.

Moe celebrated his 24th birthday in style Thursday with a silver medal — a nice complement to his downhill gold and another unlikely feather in the U.S. ski team's Lycra hood.

Moe put a little icing on his Olympic cake with a second place in the super-G, making him the first American skier in 34 years to win more than one medal at an Olympics — and the first American male ever.

With seven races to go, the U.S. Alpine skiers have already topped their Albertville total of two medals.

No big deal, really, said an overly calm Moe.

"Before the race I was yawning three or four times at the start. That's a good sign for me," said Moe, who was serenaded with "Happy Birthday" by 60,000 fans along the Kvitfjell course. He shared a cake at the bottom of the run with gold medalist Markus Wasmeier of Germany and Atle Skaardal of Norway, who turned 28 and finished sixth.

In speedskating, gold-medal favorite Gunda Niemann of Germany slipped and skidded into competitor Seiko Hashimoto of Japan in a spectacular crash, wiping both out during the 3,000 meters.

Neither was hurt, but the heavily favored Niemann's hopes of repeating her 1992 victory ended abruptly.

The wildly enthusiastic Norwegians cheered countryman Bjorn Dahlie's gold in the men's 10K classical cross-county. But there was melancholy, too: Local hero Vegard "The Viking" Ulvang, a triple gold medalist in Albertville, finished just seventh.

Norway's Kjetil Andre Aamodt, who finished second to Moe in the downhill, took the super-G bronze as he failed to catch the American for the second time since the Games began.

In hockey, Sweden (2-0-1) clinched a medal round berth with a 7-1 romp over France (0-2-1). Surprising Finland is already in, leaving five spots open — and Slovakia (1-0-2) made a move on one of them with a 10-4 pounding of Italy (0-3). Satan — that's Miroslav Satan — had a hat trick for Slovakia.

The U.S. team now has two gold and one silver in three Alpine races — an impressive showing for a team expected to enjoy the fresh mountain air and return through customs with nothing to declare.

And Moe's not done yet — he's in third place halfway through the men's combined, which concludes Feb. 25, and has a legitimate shot at a third medal.

The medals were the main events, but the sideshow attracted the biggest crowd. The much-anticipated, broadcast-live-to-the-U.S. practice skate with Nancy Kerrigan and nemesis Tonya Harding played to a full house.

The media was there — the press section of the practice rink in Hamar was "packed like a Grateful Dead concert," observed Scott Hamilton of CBS.

And security was there — at four times usual strength — after two telephone threats from the United States, one against each skater.

No punches were thrown and no telescoping batons were spotted at the workout. In keeping with their images, Nancy appeared dressed all in white, while Tonya sported black stockings with her leotard.

Asked about the practice, Tonya gave reporters a thumbs up. Korean coach Kathy Casey had a different opinion after skater Lily Lee wound up practicing amid the media hurricane.

"It's sick," she said. "You don't train for the Olympics your whole life to come here and have to deal with this. It's pathetic."

■ Speed Skating

HAMAR, Norway (AP) — One more race. One more chance.

Dan Jansen's 10-year run of Olympic heartbreak ends with Friday's 1,000-meter race — one way or the other.

The race, almost certainly the last Olympic event for the speedskater from West Allis, Wis., could mark him for all time as a failure of almost mythic proportions in these Games — the showcase of winter sport where he has never won a medal.

Or he could break the string of Olympic losses that get more attention than all his triumphs.

The latest failure came Monday, when he slipped on a turn and placed eighth in the 500 meters, the distance he set the pace for with a new world record in January.

"I felt really sorry for Dan Jansen. ... He has to just relax and skate and then he will have his gold medal," said Johann Olav Koss, the Norwegian whose gold medals and world records in the 5,000 and 1,500 have made him the star of these Games.

Or any medal.

"I really feel sorry for him. Dan is the fastest skater in the world," said Russia's Sergei Klevchenya, who won the silver Monday.

Will Jansen go down in the record books as the Heartbreak Kid, the one who couldn't manage a single Olympic medal in four Games?

Or can he win?

"I'll just go out and skate. If it happens, it does," Jansen said. "If not, I'll go on — same old thing."

Jansen doesn't dominate the 1,000 like he does the 500, but he's won five of his eight races this season and easily leads the World Cup standings. He was only fourth in his two 1,000-meter races at the world sprint championships in Calgary on Jan. 29-30.

His Olympic record also suggests this isn't his race. He was 16th as an 18-year-old at Sarajevo in 1984, he fell in Calgary four years later and he faded to 26th place at Albertville, France, in 1992.

"But I'm more comfortable now in the 1,000," Jansen said. "I don't try to skate it anymore like it was the 500. ... I enjoy it almost as much as I do the 500."

Jansen will be all alone Friday on the Viking Ship ice, but millions of speedskating fans will be cheering him on — here, home in America and elsewhere.

He's a superhero to the Dutch and the Norwegians, who love skating and have adopted Jansen as one of their own.

When he suffers, they suffer, too.

On Friday, the red, white and blue-clad Norwegians and orange-painted Dutch will once again hold up signs reading "Dan's the Man" and "Go Dan Gold" and "We Love Dan" and "Go DJ" — hoping, once again, that this will be the day. Finally.

Only Jansen can set aside the burden of his history as a man who cannot win at the Olympic Games, when all the world is watching.

"Maybe," Kuroiwa said, tapping his chest, "the gold medal is in here."

Ice dancer Punsalan tries overcoming grief

HAMAR, Norway (AP) — U.S. ice dancer Elizabeth Punsalan will try to set her grief aside Friday night while she and partner-husband Jerod Swallow compete in the Olympics.

Punsalan's Olympic dream was shattered by a double family tragedy Feb. 4. Her father was stabbed to death at the family's home in Broadview Heights, Ohio, outside Cleveland. Her brother, Ricky, has been charged in his death.

The U.S. ice-dance champion isn't in the medal hunt, so she and Swallow are trying to use the competition to help deal with the heartbreak.

"I find being here and being on the ice is a lot easier than sitting in my room and thinking about everything," Punsalan said. "It's very comforting."

Punsalan and Swallow, dance partners since 1990, were married in September and won their second national title last month.

Everything seemed perfect until they got the call at their Michigan home saying Elizabeth's father, surgeon Ernesto Punsalan, had been fatally stabbed while he slept. Her brother has a history of drug and mental problems.

The decision to even come to Norway was a difficult one, the 23-year-old Punsalan said, but her father would have wanted it.

"We're definitely not done grieving, but we're trying to set it aside, so to speak, because we have a job to do," she said.

"We have spent most of our lives with this (Olympic) goal in mind," Swallow said. "It's a goal our families have helped us with."

Americans still looking for first medal

■ Luge

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — Gordy Sheer and Christopher Thorpe need an upset if America is to win its first luge medal at the Olympics.

Two Germans and four Italians stand in their way in doubles Friday.

If the Europeans slide according to form, Sheer and Thorpe will have a tough time making up for disappointments by Duncan Kennedy and Cammy Myler in the singles.

"We've had a very successful season," Sheer said. "We were fourth over all in the World Cup. But we could have been a lot better and we know that."

Sheer and Thorpe couldn't have asked for better luck in the draw for the starting sequence: They slide first in the opening run, benefiting from clean ice on the 16-turn Hunderfossen track.

But Germany's Stefan Krausse and Jan Behrendt are in no mood to let anyone spoil their defense of the 1992 gold medal.

Bursting with confidence and at ease on the Olympic track, the reigning world and World Cup champions were fastest in four of five practice runs.

The battle for silver and bronze likely will pit 1992 bronze medalists Hansjoerg Raffl and Norbert Huber against fellow Italians Kurt Brugger and Wilfried Huber.

Doubles luge is a strange-looking event.

Sheer, 22, is sandwiched under Thorpe's back when they shoot down the ice chute at close to 75 mph in skin-tight race suits.

"I don't like the feeling of being on a singles sled any more," said Sheer, of Croton, N.Y. "I really just don't feel like I have any real control."

Thorpe, 23, says he was getting bored with singles and found "more fun" in the teamwork of doubles.

Tonya robs Tomba of spotlight

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — La Bomba will have to share the spotlight this time.

Alberta Tomba, by and away the most colorful figure at the 1992 Winter Games, blew into town Thursday sporting a goatee but found himself playing understudy to Tonya Harding.

The Italian skier will get a taste of the new order Friday, when his introductory news conference at the main press center follows directly after Harding's first Olympic encounter with the media.

Few people in Lillehammer would bet that Tomba will outdraw Tonya.

Playing second fiddle is something new for the flamboyant Tomba.

Tomba, known internationally as "La Bomba" (The Bomb) because of his explosive style between slalom gates, reported to the accreditation center wearing the blue uniform of the Italian team.

He will stay initially at the main Olympic Village but said he may transfer closer to the slalom areas at Hafjell before his races. He's been assured that his favorite pastas will be available there.

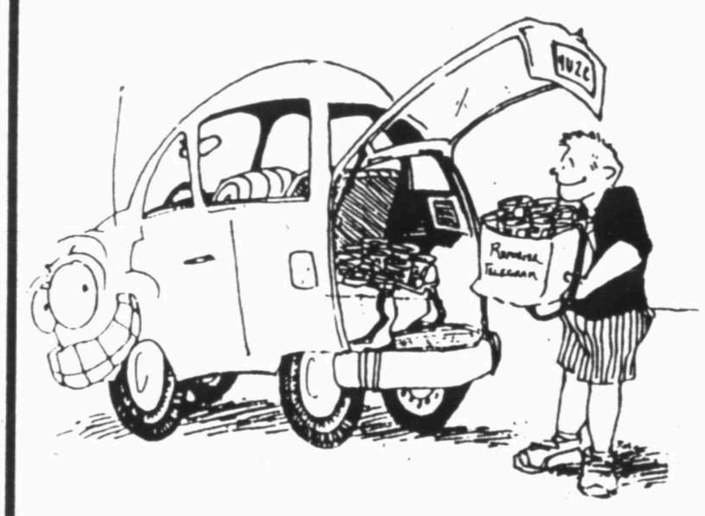

The slalom is scheduled on the last Olympic day, Feb. 27.

Earnhardt, Irvan prevail

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt and Ernie Irvan, the favorites to win Sunday's Daytona 500, looked strong today in winning the Gatorade Twin 125-mile qualifying races.

Earnhardt dominated the second of the 50-lap races on Daytona International Speedway's 2.5-mile oval, holding off a strong challenge from Sterling Marlin, making his first start for Morgan-McClure racing.

It was the seventh time and the fifth straight year that Earnhardt, who never has won the 500, has won one of the qualifying races.

■ Gatorade Twin 125s

Marlin finished second, followed by fellow Chevy driver Jeff Gordon and Ford Thunderbird drivers Bill Elliott, Brett Bodine and Morgan Shepherd.

Irvan passed Rusty Wallace 10 laps from the end of the first race and went on to his first qualifying victory.

Irvan, who started next to Daytona 500 pole-winner Loy Allen Jr., grabbed the lead on the backstretch of the first lap of his race.

Stanton, Greenwood begin playoff run in Pecos

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

STANTON — The "giant killers" of District 6-2A girls basketball are feeling pretty slick these days. After all, Stanton did something no team has been able to do in that league for eight consecutive years — wrestle the district championship away from the Wall Lady Hawks.

The Lady Buffaloes are now hoping their two-point win Tuesday night over Wall can jump-start them to a strong Class 2A playoff run. Stanton starts the playoffs tonight with a 6 p.m. bi-district contest against 5-2A runnerup Anthony in Pecos. They will be followed by a 3A bi-district contest between 6-3A runnerup Greenwood and 5-3A champ Clint at 8 p.m.

Observers could downplay the Lady Buffaloes' accomplishment by saying that Wall lost all but one starter of last year's team and were not quite as strong this year.

But anyone who has lived in West Texas knows about what kind of program the Wall girls have developed. It doesn't matter what kind of personnel the team is made of or who is coaching them, the Lady Hawks find a way to win year in and year out. That determination gave them eight straight district crowns, several regional tournament berths and a trip to the state tournament in 1989.

"They won't give up anything without a fight," Stanton coach Frank Riney said about the Wall players.

After Stanton shocked the Lady Hawks by winning the first league game 50-41 in Wall, the Lady Buffaloes found out just how determined Wall was to maintaining its grip on the district title.

"The first win was the biggest one of the season," junior guard Laura Herm said. "But when they beat us here, it showed us that they weren't going to go down easily."

Wall rebounded from its first district loss since 1990 to beat the Lady Buffaloes 58-55 to tie up the district standings and force a playoff to determine state playoff berths. But the Lady Buffaloes would not be denied and led by Kendra Woodfin's 24 points they edged Wall 49-47 for the top playoff spot.

"They won it last year and we wanted to win it all this year," Herm said about her team's preseason outlook. "We knew they had lost a lot of their players and we had beat them in cross country once. They came back and beat us at district and we knew we would be able to beat them in basketball. Everybody expected us to do it."

And the team's lone senior, Sonja Hopper, said the exciting win over Wall could be a big boost for the team as it enters its second straight playoff season.

"Last year, we weren't as confident going into the playoffs as we should have been," Hopper said.

Another bonus for the Lady Buffaloes is their balanced scoring attack, Riney said.

"One thing I've noticed, it's hard to say who you've got to stop from scoring on our team," Riney said. "If one player is being held down, another steps up and takes over from there."

While Herm leads the team in scoring with 14.7 a game, junior posts Woodfin and Sande Bundas are right behind with 13 an outing.

Greenwood (18-12) is hoping to bounce back after losing to Reagan County in a game which could have given the Rangerettes a share of the District 6-3A title.

Greenwood, like Stanton, is led by balanced scoring. Leading the way is junior JoAnne Pallanez who scores 13.6 points a game. Seniors Tricia Ross and Brandy Wright average 11.6 and 11.1 points.

CARTER: Slow starter

the first half.

This has all come from a player who is probably playing out of position.

"We've probably prostituted Donald's talents," Stephenson says. "He has had to play a lot inside for us to be as good as we can be as a team. But he would be a great outside player. He just does whatever we ask of him and you can't ask much more than that from any kid."

Carter says he never felt any added pressure this year, coming back as a senior and returning starter.

"I knew we would be pretty good if we worked hard," Carter said. "Jumon (Hailey) played a lot last year, and Jason (Kopp) was coming back and we all spent a lot of time in the gym getting ready for the season, so I never really felt any pressure. I just love to play basketball and help any way I can. There are good players on this team."

Still, it was well into the season before Carter really got untracked. He can still call the game.

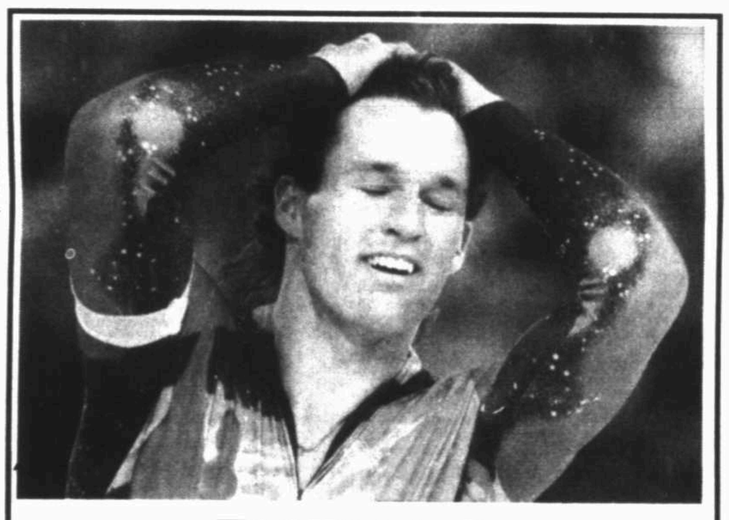

"In the Coppell tournament, we played against DeSoto," Carter remembered. "I scored 24 points and that was the first time I had ever had 20 points in a varsity game. I also got my first dunk in that game. Things just got better after that. I will always remember that game."

Here's hoping that Carter, and his Bulldog teammates, have some more big games to remember before this season is over.

MHS: 'Dawgs want big crowd

(From 1C)

like to run the ball up and down the floor. (Offensively) they want to go down the floor and pull the trigger."

Midland has been running the transition game all season and the Lady Bulldogs have outrun any team that tried to go coast-to-coast with them.

Junior Amy Alcala is most at home in the fast-paced offense, scoring most of her 17.8 points per game on fastbreak layups after steals or quick MHS defensive rebounds. Senior Julie Chancellor averages 15 points a game and makes a nifty tandem with Alcala on the break.

Raughton said he didn't think he would change his game plan too much for the possible track meet with Coronado.

"We can hurt them with some (defensive) pressure which is what we try to do with almost everyone we play," Raughton said. "But there will be some adjustments that we need to make. The last three days we've talked about focusing on Gutierrez. She's certainly deserving of some extra attention."

Still, Raughton thinks the home crowd will rev up his team in a fast-paced contest.

"I know we'll have a good crowd and the crowd is a big part of the playoffs," Raughton said. "Things start happening and the crowd gets into the game. The more the crowd gets into the game the faster the tempo and the better off we are. We want everybody in Midland to be over there."

SWIM: Lee, MHS should fare well at district

(From 1C)

"I hate to use the word dynasty, but it's the beginning of a lot of great years in swimming for Midland," Lee coach Jeff Goelz said.

The City of Midland swim team and its facility can take much of the credit for that. COM starts competitive swim teams for kids eight years old and younger. So by the time they get to high school, they're more advanced than the average first-year high school swimmer.

And Goelz and Midland High coach Ted Carson work in the evenings with the COM team that has about two-thirds of the swimmers from Lee and Midland High's teams.

"I have seveal of his I work with and he has several of mine he works with," Carson said of the COM workouts. "It's a very unique situation. Most places you don't have coaches willing to work that cooperatively."

With its two coaches, both teams benefit from the COM workouts. And at COM the goal is fast swimmers, whichever team the swimmers compete for, Carson said. Both coaches said they root for all the Midland swimmers to do well.

And COM gives both schools a built-in feeder program. Goelz said it has produced more good swimmers in recent years. With the new Mabee pool opening last year, COM has improved its workout capabilities.

"The last couple of years it's turned up its production a notch," Goelz said of COM. "Instead of getting two or three quality kids (a year from COM) we're getting five or six or 10."

This year, Midland High's boys are the favorite to win their fifth straight district championship. And the Lee girls are also favorites. The Lee boys and Midland girls will probably send athletes to regionals but those teams aren't as strong as their counterparts.

The first six finishers at district go to region, so the Lee girls and the Midland High boys will have no trouble getting swimmers to region. Consequently Carson and Goelz are concentrating on region for the stronger of their two teams. They are shaving and tapering off workouts — two strategies used to get swimmers' best times — with only a few team members for district.

"I think we can shave only three girls and then go to region and kind of blow people out of the water," Goelz said.

Lee has not sent a girl to state in swimming since 1987.

"This is going to be a record type year because we're going to get six or seven girls in the state meet and nobody's been in years," Goelz said.

One reason Goelz uses the word dynasty, however reluctantly, when talking about Midland swimming is the youth of his girls team. Ten of his 15 girls going to district are sophomores. And Lee's best female swimmers are 10th graders: Susie Carnett (200 and 500 yard freestyle), Monica Stroman (breastroke, individual medley) and Susie Reed (200 and 500 freestyles). Those three could each win two events at district.

Lee's Steve Mullins has been to state twice in the 100 backstroke and could go again.

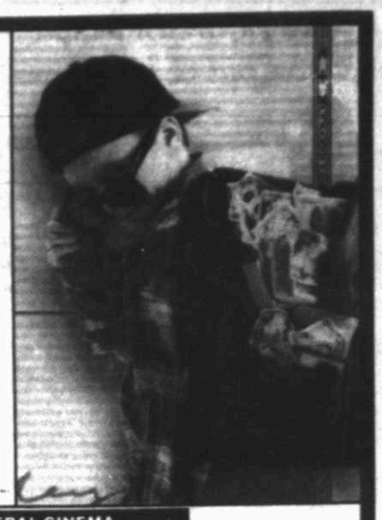

Midland High's boys team is senior laden. Carson said 14 of his 17 boys at district could make region. He said all nine of his girls could make region.

Each school can take up to four in each event. For the Midland High boys, there are "very few spots where we don't have the potential to take all four people into region," Carson said.

Clay Brown, Howard Flowers, Blake Johnson and Anthony Mills have good chances to win two events each for Lee. Chris Hall or Jordan Scharf will battle for first place in the breastroke.

Of nine Midland High girls, diver Sarah Vaughn has the best chance to win district.

When Preston Waters sees an opportunity, he takes it. And now he's made himself a millionaire.

Here's another chance for you to display your declarer technique. Assume you have reached four spades on the auction shown and West attacks with three rounds of hearts. How do you proceed?

Your problem is to avoid losing two club tricks. One way would be to take a club finesse, but since West rates to have the king, that line should be rejected. Better is the diamond finesse. Although ostensibly only a 50 percent chance, West's takeout double improves the chances of the finesse succeeding. As the cards lie, however, the queen of diamonds is offside, so again the contract fails.

Other options involve an endplay. You might try ruffing the third heart, drawing trumps in two rounds, cashing the ace of diamonds and then ruffing the last heart. Now cash the king of diamonds and ruff a diamond, then lead a club to the eight. West can win, but is trapped in the endplay. Unfortunately, East can foil this plan by inserting the ten of clubs, allowing West to overtake the queen with the king and return the jack.

A slightly different endplay guarantees the contract because West is marked with four hearts on the auction. Ruff the third heart, draw trumps, then cash the ace and king of diamonds and ruff a diamond. Now lead the table's last heart and discard a club from hand.

West can win, but must then return a club into your major tenace or else lead a diamond, allowing you to ruff on the board while discarding the queen of clubs. Either way, the rest of the tricks are yours.

Wyatt Earp returns to Tombstone as Hugh O'Brian reprises his role

TOMBSTONE, Ariz. — Wyatt Earp is returning to Tombstone, and Hugh O'Brian is returning to Wyatt Earp.

O'Brian, 68, is reprising his role as the legendary marshal, whom he played from 1955 to 1961 in the TV series "The Life and Legend of Wyatt Earp."

O'Brian will head to Arizona next week to film the TV movie "Wyatt Earp: Return to Tombstone." In the film, a retired Earp returns to the "town too tough to die" 25 years after the shootout at the O.K. Corral.

The movie is scheduled to air this summer.

NEW YORK — There may not be a kiss-off for "Roseanne" after all.

ABC said Thursday it will air an episode of the popular comedy March 1 that features Roseanne Arnold exchanging a kiss with Mariel Hemingway in a gay bar.

After dancing, Roseanne makes wisecrack, gets kissed.

Exactly how that encounter will play remains to be seen, according to ABC spokesman Steve Battaglio, who said the segment had been shot but postproduction was not complete.

"There have been discussions concerning how the kiss will be depicted," Battaglio said. "Those talks are continuing."

He said the episode will also carry a parental discretion advisory.

In the episode, titled "Don't Ask, Don't Tell," Arnold's character, Roseanne Conner, goes to a bar with bisexual friend Nancy, played by Sandra Bernhard. After dancing with Hemingway, Roseanne makes a wisecrack that is misinterpreted. The kiss results.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — Yoko Ono didn't want a safe haven for women and children just to imagine $4,000 — so she gave it to them.

The widow of John Lennon donated the money to the Family Violence Center in Springfield, matching the amount raised by last year's Imagine concert.

The concert is held annually on Dec. 8, the anniversary of Lennon's 1979 murder. Local bands play Lennon songs and donate the money raised to local charities.

"It's not often we get a gift that size," said Leslie Boughton, the center's development director. "We were excited. We can definitely use it."

The center was established in 1976 to provide a safe shelter for women and children seeking to escape abuse.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Jimmy Stewart summed it up in an interview six years ago: His wife had given him "a wonderful life."

Gloria Hatrick Stewart died Wednesday at age 75 at the couple's Beverly Hills home, said her son, Michael McLean. She had been ill with cancer for months and was hospitalized for a week around Christmas.

Stewart, McLean and the couple's twin 42-year-old daughters, Judy Merrill and Kelly Harcourt, were with her when she died. Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

The Stewarts were married in 1949.

LOS ANGELES — For the record, Bette Midler says her movie, "For The Boys," has nothing to do with Martha Raye.

Miss Midler denied in court Wednesday that she based "For The Boys" on the life of Miss Raye, who cheered U.S. troops in World War II, Korea and Vietnam with her brassy song-and-dance act.

"The stories have no resemblance except for one thing — they both were entertainers during wartime," Miss Midler said.

Miss Midler acknowledged that she saw a treatment of Miss Raye's life, but said she also researched such performers as Pearl Bailey, Gypsy Rose Lee, Ann-Margret and "all the Miss Americas."

Miss Raye is suing Miss Midler, 20th Century Fox and others for $1 million, plus 10 percent of any profits from the 1991 film, which flopped.

LOS ANGELES — Elizabeth Taylor will undergo hip replacement surgery, the latest medical problem to plague her since she fell off a horse at age 12 and hurt her back.

Miss Taylor, who is suffering from painful arthritis in her hip, is scheduled for surgery next month, her publicist, Chen Sam, said Thursday. The exact date and location of the operation weren't disclosed.

A statement from John Moreland, an orthopedic surgeon, said cartilage in the 61-year-old actress's left hip has worn out, "causing painful bone-on-bone contact."

Complete recovery could take a year or two. But Miss Taylor plans to attend the "Jackson Family Honors" ceremony Saturday in Las Vegas.

Tar Heels, Louisville shocked

Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Freshman Shanderic Downs scored a career-high 14 points as unranked North Carolina-Charlotte pulled off its biggest home upset in school history, beating No. 5 Louisville 64-62 Thursday night.

■ Top 25 Roundup

The 49ers (13-8, 6-3 Metro Conference) had lost five of eight coming in, but slowed Louisville's up-tempo game and won despite not making a field goal in the final five minutes.

Downs made all four of his 3-point shots in only 19 minutes off the bench.

Louisville (20-3, 9-2) saw its 10-game winning streak snapped.

The Cardinals could have tied the score with three seconds left, but Clifford Rozier — who shoots 57 percent from the free-throw line — missed his first attempt and Louisville committed a lane violation on the second attempt to turn the ball over.

N.C. Charlotte then ran out the final seconds as thousands of fans stormed onto the floor. The victory was the program's biggest since upsetting No. 1 Michigan to get to the Final Four in 1977.

With the score tied at 55, Andre Davis scored five points within 52 seconds to give the 49ers the lead for good at 60-55 with 5:01 left.

From that point, both teams went cold and committed numerous turnovers, but the 49ers held on by making four of five free throws in the final 47 seconds.

Clemson 77, No. 2 N. Carolina 69

CLEMSON, S.C. — Jeff Brown, the best 3-point shooter in the Atlantic Coast Conference, made five long-range shots and finished with 17 points as the Clemson Tigers upset North Carolina.

The Tigers (13-11, 4-7 ACC) led all but the first 55 seconds of the second half, outshooting the Tar Heels 44 percent to 30 percent.

The Tar Heels (20-5, 8-4) led 35-34 at halftime, but lost three starters in the second half with foul trouble, including center Eric Montross. Montross had 10 points and a game-high 13 rebounds before fouling out at 5:04. Derrick Phelps and Brian Reese also fouled out.

Clemson's Devin Gray, who leads the ACC with a 58 percent field goal percentage, had 15 points and seven rebounds. Wayne Buckingham scored a career-high 14 points and had eight rebounds.

Phelps, who had to be carried from the court with a sprained knee after his last foul, had 11 points. Jerry Stackhouse and Rasheed Wallace each had 12 for the Tarheels.

No. 15 Arizona 94, Southern Cal 61

TUCSON, Ariz. — Guards Khalid Reeves and Damon Stoudamire started the second half with two baskets apiece and Arizona routed Southern Cal in a physical game marred by a flurry of fouls and a near-brawl.

Stoudamire hit two 3-pointers and Reeves a jumper and layup as the Wildcats pounced with a 10-2 second-half start to stretch a 38-26 halftime lead to 48-28.

The Trojans (11-10, 4-8 Pac-10), came no closer the rest of the game. Arizona improved to 20-4 and 9-3.

More Sports/12C

Reeves finished with 21 points, Stoudamire had 12 points and 11 assists, and Ray Owes scored 17 points.

Notre Dame 68, No. 22 Marquette 58

MILWAUKEE — Monty Williams scored 19 of his 27 points in the second half as Notre Dame overcame a horrid first half of shooting to upset No. 22 Marquette.

Ryan Hoover added 20 points, 14 in the second half, as Notre Dame (10-14) won for the fifth time in six games.

Jim McIlvaine's 13 points led Marquette, which fell to 17-7 with its second straight home loss. The Warriors lost to Cincinnati in double overtime Sunday.

Marquette, which leads the nation in field goal defense at 35.5 percent, was doomed by defensive lapses and poor free throw shooting, going 4-of-10 from the line.

Notre Dame, which trailed 26-20 at halftime, began the second half with a 26-15 surge, including 10 points by Hoover, for a 46-41 advantage with 10 minutes remaining.

No. 8 UCLA 76, Arizona State 70

TEMPE, Ariz. — Cameron Dollar's driving layup with 57.8 seconds remaining helped lift No. 8 UCLA past Arizona State.

Quincy Brewer had a chance to tie the game but missed a 7-foot leaning jumper with 26 seconds to go. The Bruins (18-2, 11-1 Pacific-10 Conference) converted four free throws to ice their 11th straight win over Arizona State, dating to 1989.

Chaps pull away from Broncs, 80-67

Staff Report

ROSWELL, N.M. — Midland College broke open a 35-all halftime lead and escaped New Mexico Military with an 80-67 win here Thursday.

Midland improved to 25-2 on the year and 8-2 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play. With the loss, NMMI drops out of playoff contention at 12-15 overall and 3-7 in conference play.

NMMI stayed close to the Chaps throughout the game. In the first half, neither team could build a lead as five lead changes took place. Bronco backup center Adonis Baxter slam dunked a missed shot as time expired to tie the game at 35 at intermission.

Midland opened up a six-point lead in the first three minutes of the second half and never trailed the remainder of the way.

MC guard Kevin Rice came off the bench to hit a layup with 15 minutes to play to give MC its biggest lead of the game, 49-40.

The Chaps carved out a 12-point lead in the second half before NMMI rallied late.

MC hit just two free throws over a five-minute stretch in the second half, which saw the Broncos trim a 59-52 deficit to tie the game at 59 with less than five minutes to play.

Sophomore forward Steve Walston, who had 18 points despite hitting only 2-of-10 free throws, scored seven straight points to give Midland a 69-59 lead with 1:29 to play.

MC played shorthanded as Rice and center John Brown did not played in the first half. Rice, suffering from a cold and Brown with a sore knee, did play in the second half.

Midland will return to the Chap Center for its final home game of the season against New Mexico Junior College on Monday. Gametime is 7:30 p.m.

MC golfers start spring schedule

Midland College golfers swing back into action Friday and Saturday, Feb. 25-26, at Roswell, N.M., at the Bronco Invitational.

The two-day event is being held at the New Mexico Military Institute course and is also counted as the first of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference tourney of the year.

The Chaparrals are ranked No. 1 in the country after blitzing through their fall schedule in breath-taking fashion. Coach Delnor Poss's charges won their first six tournaments before slipping slightly to a tie for second in the seventh event last fall.

To underline the depth of the squad, the Chaps had four different players as medalists or runners-up in the seven fall events. Sophomore Lance McCullough from Victoria, British Columbia, Canada, and sophomore Luke Mongrain from Yorkton, Saskatchewan, Canada, tied for medalist honors at the Shoot-Out at Sierra Blanca.

McCullough then was medalist at the Mission Dorado Invitational. At the University of Texas Invitational, it was time for sophomore Chad Campbell of Andrews to be medalist and sophomore Shawn Savage of Plainview to be runner-up. Savage then took medalist honors at the Bossier Parish Invitational in Louisiana.

Campbell came back to take medalist honors at the Midland College Invitational on the Ranchland Hills Country Club course. McCullough was medalist runner-up at the Paris Junior College tourney and medalist runner-up at the New Mexico Junior College Invitational in Hobbs. MC and NMJC tied for second in that event with Odessa the winner.

Organizers hope Cowboys parade doesn't repeat

DALLAS (AP) — Organizers for this year's parade to honor the Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys are hoping that lightning really doesn't strike twice in the same place.

Parade planners have all but turned backflips to satisfy and anticipate any problems that might arise at Friday's celebration in downtown Dallas — — including stationing 1,300 officers to prevent a repeat performance by fans.

Nearly 75 people were arrested and about 50 people were injured after a fist-swinging, bottle-throwing fight broke out among groups of mostly youngsters who had skipped school to attend last year's parade.

After the celebration, city officials were roundly criticized for not providing adequate crowd control. The Dallas City Council, consultants, public works representatives and police officials have been planning this year's event ever since.

"I don't know of anything that has not been thought of," said Jim Chandler, a police department spokesman.

"... We have something to prove. We need to show people locally and nationally that we can do this right. The Cowboys have been two-time champions and we need to be able to celebrate their accomplishments in a safe environment."

Cowboys players will ride on flatbed trucks. Heavy metal barricades, borrowed from this year's Mardi Gras in New Orleans, will protect them from the crowds, planners say. Officers will be stationed every 32 feet along the parade route.

Trade deficit with Japan hits record

■ For first time in more than four years, consumer prices did not go up at all in one-month period.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States posted a record trade deficit with Japan last year and the overall imbalance with the world was the worst since 1988, the government said Thursday.

The U.S. trade imbalance widened by 37 percent, to $115.78 billion, a deterioration blamed on imports growing twice as fast as U.S. exports.

The deficit with Japan shot up by 23.7 percent, to $59.3 billion, surpassing the old record of $56.3 billion set in 1987.

The Clinton administration said the figures highlighted why it was aggressively pursuing a new get-tough approach with Japan. Administration officials and private economists did take heart that the deficit for December shrank to the lowest level in a year and said they hoped it pointed to better days ahead.

In other economic news, the Labor Department reported that consumer prices did not go up at all in January, the first time that the monthly cost-of-living index did not rise in more than four years.

The administration said the Consumer Price Index was proving its contention that inflation remains well under control with no need for the Federal Reserve to raise interest rates further.

"Going into the new year, inflation remains tame," said Laura D'Andrea Tyson, head of the president's Council of Economic Advisers. "We remain on a course of a strong economy and low inflation."

Tyson noted that the $7.5 billion December trade deficit was 23.5 percent below the November figure and should result in an upward revision in overall economic growth, as measured by the gross domestic product, for the October-December quarter.

The government initially put growth at a six-year high of 5.9 percent for the fourth quarter. Some analysts said that figure could be revised upward to an astonishing 7 percent based on the December trade performance.

The acceleration in growth was not having much impact on the labor market. The government said in a third report Thursday that new claims for unemployment benefits rose by 5,000, to 371,000, last week with the four-week moving average jumping to its highest level in 16 months.

The $115.78 billion trade imbalance reflected a dramatic 37 percent widening of the gap between imports and exports from the 1992 level of $84.5 billion.

Prices rebound

NEW YORK — Oil futures prices rebounded Thursday after falling all week on signs of slackening demand. Prices for unleaded gasoline futures surged as traders started looking toward spring driving needs.

Much of the increase Thursday in crude and home heating oil futures was a technical rebound from declines earlier this week.

Local crude buyers raised their posted price 25 cents to $12.50 a barrel.

On Wednesday, crude settled within pennies of a new five-year low and went down as far as $13.88 per barrel during Thursday's trading before rebounding.

Prices rose on a rumor that Kuwait's oil minister was seeking drastic steps to boost oil prices. The market reacted strongly to the report, but fell from its highs after the comment was attributed to the Kuwaiti information minister, who said steps should be taken only if oil falls below $10 per barrel.

Near-term natural gas prices rose on an industry report that storage levels dropped about 12 percent last week. Next-month delivery rose 4 cents to $2.385 per 1,000 cubic feet. Later delivery months were lower.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar edged lower against the German mark Thursday despite an interest rate cut by Germany's central bank. The greenback was mixed against other currencies.

Gold prices fell domestically after rising overseas. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $382.80 a troy ounce, off 80 cents from Wednesday.

In New York, the dollar finished at 104.17 yen, up from 103.80 Wednesday.

Stocks slump

NEW YORK — The stock market see-sawed to a lower close Thursday as technical forces intensifed selling incited by rising interest rates and lingering inflation fears.

The Dow Jones industrial average veered within a 50-point range. After working its way through the wobbly session, the blue chip indicator ended off 14.63 at 3,922.64.

Broadly based market measures behaved similarly. The New York Stock Exchange composite index slumped 1.17 to 261.38 and the Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 2.45 to 470.34. The Nasdaq Stock Market composite index lost 2.38, finishing at 790.24 and at the American Stock Exchange, the market value index slipped 0.86 to 474.46.

Inventor's device cuts commercials from recorded TV

By Anne Thompson
Associated Press

BOSTON — Jerry Iggulden had a tired fast-forward finger.

So he invented a device he says will automatically zap advertising from videotaped television programs.

Iggulden's technology is being manufactured by Arista Technologies as a flat, rectangular box called "Commercial Break" that hooks up to VCRs. The product should be in stores by June and sell for $199.

The idea of zapping commercials from recorded television programs is not new, Iggulden said, but earlier attempts failed because inventors tried to zap the commercials while the VCR recorded.

Although it is easy to make a device that senses when a commercial starts, it is more difficult for the device to tell when the commercial ends, he said.

Instead, Iggulden's device allows for the entire program to be recorded, including the ads, and makes a map of where the ads are. Then, when the viewer plays back the recording, the device locates the ads and fast-forwards past them. All the viewer sees is an eight-second-long blue screen.

Iggulden, who expects a patent in a few weeks, owns the technology with Arthur D. Little Enterprises Inc., a Cambridge-based company that helps inventors commercialize their ideas.

Mortage rates drop, national survey says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 7.11 percent this week, down from 7.21 percent last week, according to a national survey released Thursday by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

It was the lowest rate since Feb. 4.

After dropping to a 25-year low of 6.74 percent in October, rates rose to 7.31 percent in November and then began drifting lower before inching up in recent weeks. Analysts do not expect fix-rated mortgages to rise much above 7.5 percent this year.

On one-year adjustable rate mortgages, lenders were asking an average initial rate of 4.18 percent, down from 4.25 percent last week.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Mutual funds pay dividends, not interest

By Bill Doyle

Q: I recently transferred my individual retirement account from certificates of deposit to a mutual fund. The fund pays around 7 percent interest. But I find the price at which I could sell the fund shares is about 25 cents less than my purchase price.

Doyle

To me, this means I am starting out with a loss. Even if the price holds, it will take a year with reinvested interest for me to break even.

Am I calculating correctly? If so, would you suggest I go back to CDs?

A: There are a number of things wrong with your calculation and reasoning.

For openers, mutual funds do not pay interest. They pay dividends.

Mutual fund shares, like shares of common stock, represent ownership — not debt. Dividends are paid from earnings but are not obligations. They can be raised, lowered or omitted.

So, you can't be sure when you will recover the 25 cents per share you mention. That difference between the two prices was the commission charged on your purchase.

Since you have already paid that commission "load," it would be a mistake to dispose of your fund shares now. In any case, you don't "sell" fund shares; you redeem them by turning them back to the fund. At that point, you would receive their redemption value.

Most funds redeem their shares at "net asset value" — the dollars and cents amount behind each share. Some funds levy a redemption fee; some others reduce redemption amounts through contingent-deferred sales charges.

You would have learned such details about fund in which you invested if you had studied its prospectus.

Q: Some mutual funds advertise that they are "no-load" and "no-commission" funds. Do they take these payments out of the fund itself? If so, isn't this deceptive advertising?

A: The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission prohibits any mutual fund that uses fund assets to pay sales commissions from calling itself a no-load fund.

Keep in mind that sales charges — known as "loads" — are quite different from mutual fund operating expenses. All mutual funds — load and no-load — have operating expenses, which are spelled out in each fund's prospectus.

Every mutual fund advertisement is required to urge the reader to study the prospectus. That might change, under the SEC's proposal for an "off-the-page" summary prospectus. But that idea is still wending its way through Washington, D.C., bureaucracy.

Q: I telephoned a mutual fund in which I had invested and ordered that all my shares be redeemed. I understood the price would be determined at the close of trading that day.

At 9 that evening, I phoned the fund's automated line and was informed that the fund closed at $11.46. The next day's newspaper confirmed the $11.46 figure.

When I received my settlement a week later, I was given only $11.25 per share. I was shorted in excess of $678 on 3,230 shares. I wrote to complain, and was told the fund had given the wrong figure to the automated line and the press.

Should I take this matter to our local small claims court, or should I consider some other method of resolving the dispute?

A: Present your problem to arbitration through the National Association of Securities Dealers. The NASD has arbitration headquarters at 33 Whitehall St., New York, NY 10004, but it conducts arbitration hearings all around the country.

Spurs set record, blow out Pistons

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson had the NBA's first quadruple-double in almost four years Thursday night, getting 34 points, 10 rebounds, 10 assists and 10 blocked shots in San Antonio's 115-96 victory over Detroit.

■ NBA Roundup

The Spurs set a team record with their 11th straight victory and moved into a virtual tie with the Houston Rockets atop the Midwest Division.

Robinson's quadruple-double was the first since Hakeem Olajuwon did it on March 29, 1990. The only other players with quadruple-doubles since the NBA began keeping track were Nate Thurmond in 1974 and Alvin Robertson in 1986.

Robinson has an NBA-leading five triple-doubles this season.

Vinny Del Negro scored 23 points and Dale Ellis added 19 for San Antonio, which notched its 13th straight victory at the Alamodome.

Lindsey Hunter led Detroit with 26 points, while Sean Elliott scored 20 and Terry Mills added 18 points and 16 rebounds. The Pistons lost for the 25th time in their last 29 games.

Detroit led most of the second quarter before the Spurs closed with an 8-2 run to take a 50-47 lead at the half. Robinson capped a 12-4 run early in the third quarter with a spinning jumper as the Spurs pulled away.

Robinson left the court with about four minutes left to chants of "MVP" from the partisan crowd. The Spurs finished with a season-high point total.

The Spurs played without starting forward Terry Cummings, who missed the game with the flu. Rodman started in his place.

San Antonio, which last lost Jan. 20 at Minnesota, has won 22 of its last 25 games since Dec. 26.

Thursday's game was the first trip back to San Antonio for Elliott since he was traded to the Pistons on Oct. 1 for Dennis Rodman. He was greeted by a 40-second standing ovation when he was introduced.

Rodman, the NBA's leading rebounder, grabbed a game-high 22.

Pacers 84, Mavericks 73

DALLAS — Reggie Miller scored 22 points and Indiana took advantage of Dallas' 33 percent shooting to post a victory in the lowest-scoring game this season for the Mavericks.

Dallas trailed 70-66 with 3:12 to play, but Vern Fleming hit a 15-foot jumper, Antonio Davis made one of two free throws and Miller nailed a 3-pointer with 1:29 left to push the lead to 76-66.

Fleming added 19 points for the Pacers, who won for the eighth time in nine games. The Mavericks got 17 points from Jamal Mashburn.

Pacers coach Larry Brown missed the game with an undisclosed illness. Assistant Bill Blair coached in his place.

The 157 total points matched the lowest total ever in a game involving the Mavs.

Dallas recovered from a horrible first half and put together a 13-2 run early in the third quarter for a 48-44 lead. But the Pacers answered with a 15-3 spurt over the final 5:33 to take a 59-51 advantage into the fourth period.

Dallas missed its first 10 field goal attempts of the second quarter, failed to score for the first 5:18 and didn't get a field goal until Doug Smith's layup with 5:07 left until halftime. Indiana led 37-35 at intermission as Dallas avoided matching its lowest-scoring half of the season by two points.

Heat 115, SuperSonics 112

MIAMI — Steve Smith matched his career-high with 32 points and Grant Long scored Miami's final six points as the Heat ended the Seattle SuperSonics' five-game winning streak.

The win completed an impressive back-to-back performance by the Heat against two of the best teams in the league.

Glen Rice added 28 and extended to 40 his team record for consecutive free throws, going 7-for-7.

Knicks 102, Cavaliers 95

RICHFIELD, Ohio — John Starks scored 32 points and made all nine of his second-half shots as New York beat Cleveland to avoid its first three-game losing streak of the season.

The Knicks, who have won five straight against Cleveland, won it with foul shots, scoring 18 of their 28 fourth-quarter points from the line.

Patrick Ewing had 22 points and nine rebounds, and Charles Oakley scored 18 points, many of them on jumpers as Cleveland left him unguarded outside.

Brad Daugherty scored 22, Mark Price 20 and Larry Nance 17 for Cleveland. Tyrone Hill grabbed 15 rebounds.

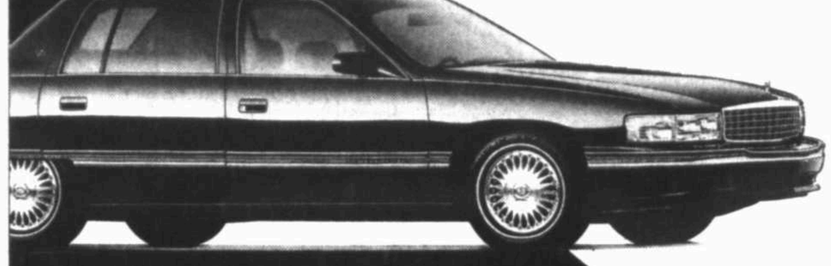

Bullets 109, Timberwolves 105

LANDOVER, Md. — Rookie Calbert Cheaney scored a career-high 30 points on 11-for-16 shooting as Washington extended Minnesota's road skid to nine games.

Hoch leads by 3

■ Bob Hope Classic

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. (AP) — Scott Hoch, playing masterful golf on the course's longest holes, shot a 62 Thursday to take a three-stroke lead after two rounds of the Bob Hope Classic.

"If a 62 can ever be easy, it was today," Hoch said after matching the course record at the Arnold Palmer course at PGA West, one of four desert resort courses used for the first four rounds of this 90-hole event.

Hoch completed 36 holes at 16-under-par 128, two off the PGA Tour record.

"It was just a well played round in ideal scoring conditions," he said. "I had a lot of opportunities and, except for the first hole, took advantage of them."

Most of his advance came on the five par-5 holes on the Palmer course. He played them in 6-under — four birdies and an eagle.

"You think of long hitters like Fred Couples and Davis Love III as owning the par-5s," Hoch said. "Well, I've always figured the par-5s belong to me. Not because of my length, but because of my wedge play."

Two of his birdie-4s came from less than 6 inches, and two others came from less than 6 feet. The eagle, on the 512-yard 11th, resulted from a 4-wood second shot and a 25-foot putt.

Hoch said it was almost certainly the best score he's ever had, in relation to par, but it didn't even touch the possibilities that were within Keith Clearwater's reach.

Clearwater held second at 131 after an 8-under 64 at Indian Wells. But it could have been much, much better.

"I was 9-under-par after 14 holes and very easily could have been 13 or 14 under," Clearwater said. "I missed a short putt at 15. I missed a short putt at 16. And I made bogey on the 18th (a vulnerable par-5). That's about four more shots there."

Jodie Mudd, with a 66 at Indian Wells, was at 132 under the format that has the 128 pros playing one round on each of the four courses, each day with a different 3-man amateur team, before the field is cut for the pros-only finish at Indian Wells on Sunday.

The group at 133, 11-under, included Hal Sutton, Jim Gallagher, Bob Burns, Paul Stankowski, Guy Boros and Doug Martin.

Burns and Stankowski each shot 66 at Bermuda Dunes. Martin had 66 and Boros 67 at Indian Wells. Gallagher's 67 came at PGA West where Sutton, the first round leader, slipped to a 70.

At LaQuinta, defending champion Tom Kite shot 70 for 142; Corey Pavin, a winner last week in Los Angeles, was 69-140; and 64-year-old Arnold Palmer, making his 39th consecutive appearance in the tournament he has won five times, was 73-147.

Clearwater, who said he has gained a more positive attitude after hiring a new caddy, made a remarkable burst in which he had nine birdies in 10 holes.

Becker, Stich to battle

Associated Press

STUTTGART, Germany — Boris Becker struggled and Michael Stich breezed to victory Thursday, setting up a showdown between the two German stars in the quarterfinals of the Eurocard Open.

■ Tennis Roundup

Becker, making a comeback after a nine-week layoff, edged Alexander Volkov of Russia 7-5, 7-5. Stich, the top seed, routed another Russian, Andrei Cherkasov, 6-2, 6-1.

Stich criticized Becker last year for his refusal to play on Germany's Davis Cup team, but the two players have played down their differences recently.

Friday's match "will be good for the spectators," said Stich.

Although Stich has risen to No. 2 in the world rankings, it was the charismatic Becker who drew an ovation from the sold-out crowd of 7,000.

Becker is playing his first German tournament in about a year. He returned this month to tennis after taking time off to help his wife through pregnancy.

In other action, No. 2 seed Sergi Bruguera of Spain beat Russia's Yevgeny Kafelnikov 1-6, 7-5, 6-1. France's Arnaud Boetsch ousted No. 10 Karel Novacek of the Czech Republic 6-3, 7-6 (9-7).

No. 4 Goran Ivanisevic of Croatia beat Carlos Costa of Spain 6-3, 4-6, 6-0, and Magnus Gustafsson of Sweden defeated Carl-Uwe Steeb of Germany 6-3, 4-6, 6-1.

Becker needed 1 hour, 43 minutes to oust Volkov, who has a history of success against top players including a victory over top-ranked Pete Sampras this year.

Becker, who has slipped to No. 13 in the world rankings, set up the decisive break in the first set by unexpectedly rushing the net on the Russian's second serve.

Paris Women's Open

PARIS — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova breezed past Italy's Laura Golarsa 6-0, 6-2 on Thursday in the second round of the Paris Women's Open.

Third-seeded Mary Pierce, a Canadian who plays out of France and lives in Florida, was eliminated by unseeded Caroline Vis of the Netherlands 3-6, 6-4, 6-1.

When you make a check purchase you'll get the information you need to respond to ads by using a special toll-free number. Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?
Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?
Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.
