With Labor...

Reconciliation Clouded By Air Controllers Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's quest for reconciliation with big labor is being clouded by conflicting signals on whether fired air controllers might be returned to flight towers.

Hours after President Reagan indicated to AFL-CIO leaders that he would review his stand against amnesty for some 11,500 dismissed controllers, White House aides cautioned against speculation of presidential conciliation.

In a written notice to the media late Wednesday, the White House said Reagan "is not considering rehiring these individuals as air traffic controllers." The White House press office said the issue remains whether to lift a three-year ban on hiring them for other federal government work.

That conflicted with accounts given by union officials of a nearly hour-long Cabinet Room session with Reagan earlier in the day.

One AFL-CIO executive council member, who declined to be identified, said that when asked to reinstate the controllers to their airport tower jobs, Reagan replied that he would review the "whole issue" when Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis returns from Japan.

According to the AFL-CIO contingent, including president Lane Kirkland, Reagan promised a full review of the controllers issue. The union officials said they took that to mean that not only might he lift the three-year ban on any other government employment for the fired strikers — a prospect he raised a day earlier — but that they might actually be returned to their old jobs.

At first, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said "there are no plans now to put them back in the towers." But he agreed that Reagan didn't rule that out, either.

Informed of the subsequent statement ruling out reinstatement of the controllers to their jobs with the Federal Aviation Administration, AFL-CIO spokesman Rex Hardesty said the White House had "closed the door" on the federation's desire that the controllers be given their old jobs.

"This puts us back to square one," he said.

Speakes quoted Reagan as telling the AFL-CIO leadership in an hour-long meeting that "I never anticipated I would be estranged from labor with all the years I put in as a union member."

"This would be a good point for us to consider starting over. We need consultations to get this country moving again," Reagan was quoted as saying.

A day earlier, Reagan told leaders of the Teamsters union he was considering whether to lift a three-year ban on any federal employment for the fired air controllers. On Wednesday, according to the AFL-CIO source, he went a step further and said he "will review the whole issue" with Lewis.

More Budget Cuts To Be Announced

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's next round of budget-slashing recommendations will include "substantial" cuts in the government's benefit programs, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. says.

"I think every one except Social Security is being examined" for potential cuts, Baker said of the 27 benefit programs.

The largest programs being considered for cuts include Medicare and Medicaid, health care programs for the elderly and poor; a variety of government pension programs; welfare and food stamps.

The benefit payments of these programs are tied to inflation, and some Republicans have suggested across-the-board changes to slow their growth.

Baker, R-Tenn., declined to cite specific figures. But other sources who asked to remain anonymous indicated Wednesday that budget director David A. Stockman is looking toward a two-year package of $30 billion to $40 billion in cuts in entitlements — those programs which pay benefits directly to individuals as mandated by law.

As the administration prepares its fiscal 1983 budget, to be submitted to Congress in January, congressional Republicans and Reagan aides appear to be nearing agreement on the outlines of spending cuts for a new government stopgap money bill to replace the one that expires Dec. 15.

Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., said Wednesday that Republican congressional staffers and administration officials have agreed on a "technical draft" that outlines about $4 billion in savings for the 1982 fiscal year, which began Oct. 1.

The work completed by staffers Wednesday was to be presented to Republican congressional leaders today.

GOP leaders and administration officials have been meeting on Capitol Hill this week in hopes of avoiding another confrontation and disruption of government operations.

A major aim of this week's meetings has been to agree on a common set of budget numbers.

Reagan has insisted on at least half the $8.4 billion in 1982 domestic spending cuts that he requested in September. Last week, he vetoed a compromise stopgap measure — shutting down non-essential government services for half a day — after administration officials said it would have achieved less than $2 billion in cuts. Congressional figures showed the agreement within Reagan's budget.

After Wednesday's meeting, reporters asked Hatfield whether Stockman, who attended the session, had accepted the numbers in the tentative plan.

"I wouldn't be here if I didn't feel there was pretty unanimous agreement in that room," Hatfield said.

The interim measure providing funds for executive branch agencies and the judiciary is necessary because Congress has passed only three of the 13 regular appropriations bills that provide money for government operations.

Crash Kills Odessa Man

An Odessa man was killed in a grinding car-truck crash 15 miles northwest of Snyder on U. S. Highway 84 late Wednesday.

William Frasher Hewitt, 63, 1217 Alpine St., Odessa, was dead at the scene where the car he was driving was involved in a headon collision with a livestock truck loaded with hogs.

Lloyd Carl Bryan of Happy, owner and driver of the truck, was not injured in the crash.

Department of Public Safety Troopers from Snyder who investigated the crash, said the 1977 Ford driven by Hewitt apparently had turned north in the southbound lane of U. S. 84 shortly before the collision.

The truck flattened the automobile in the crash, which occurred at about 5:15 p. m., and it took some time to remove the victim's body from the wreckage. He was pronounced dead at 5:50 p. m. by Justice of the Peace Dan Callaway of Snyder.

The Snyder fire department sent equipment and personnel to the scene, but no fire occurred.

Officers said Hewitt was an employee of L&R Tool Rental of Odessa.

The body was taken to Bell-Seale Funeral Home in Snyder and this morning was transferred to Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home in Odessa, where funeral arrangements were pending.

The SDN Column

While going through a multitude of trivia in our mail the other day, we came across a brief item that caught our eye.

It advised that the first daily comic strip appeared in 1907 in the San Francisco Chronicle. First called "Mr. Mutt," it was later known as "Mutt and Jeff."

We have seen dozens of comic strips come and go in our time, but the first one apparently is the most durable. Mutt and Jeff are still going today, as are some of the other early-day comic strips. A lot of newspapers have opted for more modern materials, but every time we see one of the oldies, such as Mutt and Jeff, Bringing Up Father, etc., we get an attack of nostalgia.

Old doesn't necessarily mean good, of course. We can recall some comic strips years ago that in our opinion wasted space in the paper. And many good ones as well as the duds have fallen by the wayside.

L'il Abner is gone. It was one of the top three or four for most of its lifetime, and we shall always remember its creator, the late Al Capp. It was our privilege to hear him speak in person one time, and we found his satire from the dais to be as salty as that produced on his drawing board.

Capp (his real name was Kaplan) put in some good words for this part of the country. He said, some 15 years ago, that he found it refreshing while driving from Abilene to Lubbock to hear the Star Spangled Banner played on radio stations, and people making patriotic noises, especially on college campuses. He said people around here were out of step with with the progressive Far West and the sophisticated Northeast, and, fortunately, they didn't know it, or didn't care.

But our favorite comic strip of all time was Pogo, which had a relatively short life but made a big impression while it lasted. The little possum and his friends of the great swamp taught many lessons. Like Al Capp, Walt Kelly was a master in the use of satire and his field covered the entire political spectrum.

It was Pogo who came up with the profound statement: "We have met the enemy and he is us."

Both Pogo and L'il Abner went into planned retirement because their creators, both deceased now, did not want them to outlive their welcome. But it would hve been interesting if they could have commented on present-day television.

Baker Abandons Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker today dropped his plan, only one day old, to seek a quick Senate vote on a 10-year extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

"It was probably one of the shortest-lived trial balloons in history," the Tennessee Republican told reporters.

Baker said his proposal drew little support from either the Republican or Democratic side of the aisle — so he abandoned it.

On Wednesday, Baker said he would press the Senate to vote this month on a straightforward extension of the act to avoid a lengthy and acrimonious Senate battle next year.

Strike Alert In Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity's leaders have put their 9.5 million members on strike alert and are discussing ways of retaliating to the government's suppression of a strike by 320 student firemen.

"Today the fight has begun," the independent union's chief, Lech Walesa, told a cheering crowd outside a Warsaw hotel. "We are approaching a peak of tension where something must happen. I order instant readiness of all chapters."

The union leaders declared the alert and went into emergency session Wednesday after 500 commandos, supported by 4,000 to 5,000 police and troops, stormed a firefighters' school in Warsaw and routed the cadets who were in the eighth day of a sit-in strike. Nine Solidarity members at the scene were arrested.

Twins Delivered Aboard Ferry

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A woman gave birth to twins Wednesday night aboard a ferry with the aid of two merchant seamen who were talked through the ordeal by doctors over Coast Guard radio.

The two sailors were waiting for the ferry, which crosses the entrance to the Houston Ship Channel between Galveston Island and the Bolivar Peninsula, when they heard the woman in the car behind them scream for help. They got her aboard the state-operated ferry and crewmen contacted the Galveston Coast Guard Station, said Petty Officer John Deck.

Deck said he called the local John Sealy Hospital and relayed instructions from doctors to the two sailors.

New Questions Raised About Casey's Finances

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate Intelligence Committee report raises questions about William J. Casey and his finances and has prompted two members of the panel to call for his removal as CIA director.

After a four-month investigation of Casey's past business dealings, the committee's six-page report, released Wednesday, handed him the backhanded endorsement that "no basis has been found for concluding that Mr. Casey is unfit" to stay in office.

But the committee said it was up to the Justice Department to determine if Casey violated the law in failing to register as a foreign agent in 1976, and it disclosed that the Internal Revenue Service has two tax audits under way involving Casey. The committee also released Casey's two disclosure statements, in which he revised his income for each of the past five years; one year was up $129,000.

The report said Casey omitted large amounts of information on his initial disclosure forms to the committee and to the Office of Government Ethics. "This pattern suggests an insufficient appreciation of the obligation to provide complete and accurate information to the oversight committees of Congress," it said.

Casey expressed pleasure that the senators had "reported nothing which reflects on the integrity, the business practices and the ethical standards in which I have always taken pride." He said he was looking forward to working with the committee in the future.

In his initial disclosure to the committee in January, Casey omitted at least nine investments, valued at more than $250,000, as well as liabilities of nearly $500,000, four civil lawsuits that he had been involved with since 1976 and more than 70 clients he had represented in private law practice in the past five years, the report said.

Among the clients not disclosed initially were two foreign governments, South Korea and Indonesia, and an oil company controlled by the Indonesian government.

Panel members drew sharply different conclusions from the report.

Democrats Joseph Biden of Delaware, who voted against the report, and Walter Huddleston of Kentucky, who voted for it, said Casey should not continue in office. Democrat Patrick Leahy of Vermont endorsed the investigative findings but refused to comment on Casey's fitness, saying that was for President Reagan to decide.

Republican Harrison Schmitt of New Mexico said, "Nothing in four months indicates any attempt to circumvent the law or professional or ethical standards."

Schmitt said he believed Casey's omissions were inadvertent.

Willfully falsifying disclosure statements to either the ethics office or the committee is a federal criminal violation.

While noting Casey's omission of details of his business dealings, Republican John Chafee of Rhode Island added: "We didn't suggest that he was inattentive to detail on intelligence matters."

Q.—Why do the school buses at junior high school park in front instead of on the north side of the building?

A.—There is ample space in both places, but they are in a better position for supervision throughout the day when parked in front of the building, school officials advise.

Israel...

Accepts Sinai Force Plan

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli Cabinet today approved a new draft of a joint statement with the United States aimed at bringing European troops into the peacekeeping force that will police the Sinai after Israel withdraws next April.

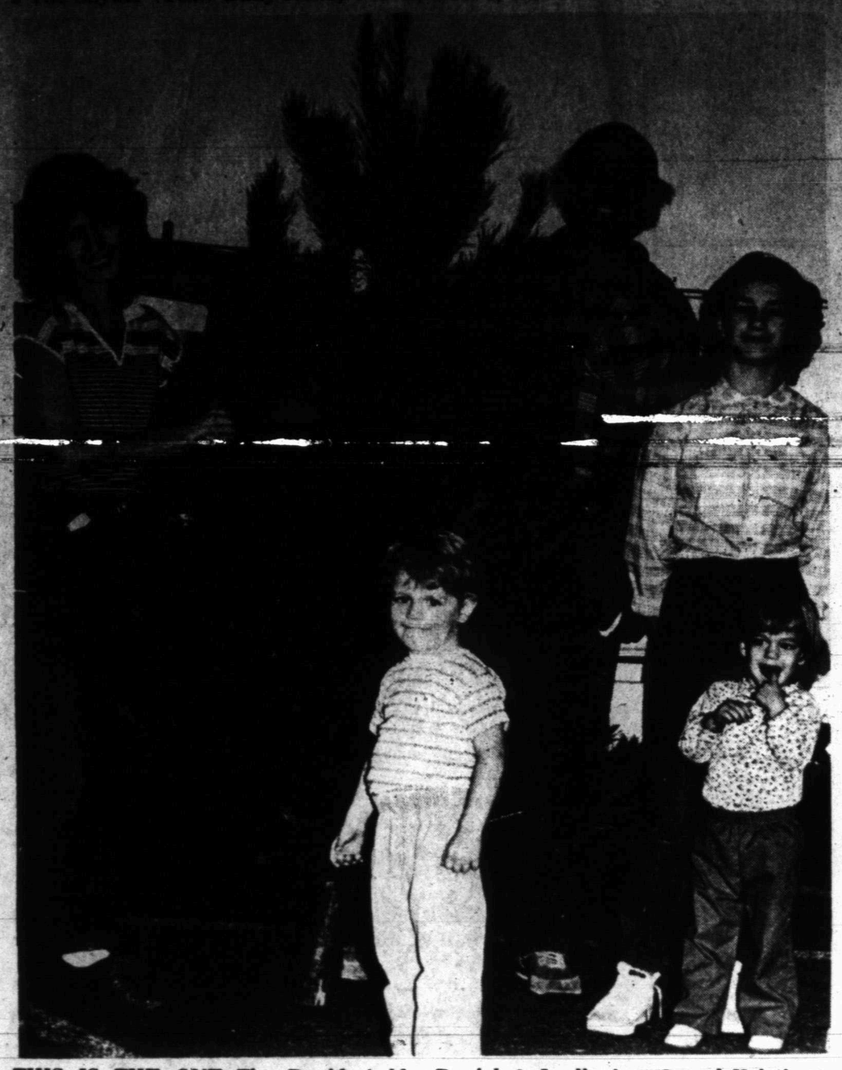

The Cabinet said it will insist the Europeans explicitly accept the conditions in the statement or it will veto their participation in the U.S.-sponsored peace force.

A Cabinet statement said Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir will convey the agreement to Britain, France, Italy and the Netherlands "and will ask them to confirm the principles detailed" in it.

The U.S.-Israeli accord was first drafted last weekend when Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. summoned Shamir to Washington after it became clear that Israel was on the verge of vetoing European participation.

Israel sent the draft back to Haig on Monday with a request for minor changes. The amended version was approved by Israel today.

The full statement was not immediately made public.

Houston Power Plant To Build New Facility

MALAKOFF, Texas (AP) — Houston Lighting & Power Co. will reduce its dependency on natural gas by using lignite to power a $2 billion generating plant in East Texas, company officials say.

The plant, to be built three miles southwest of Malakoff at a site 200 miles north of Houston, will be run solely on the fossil fuel, said HL&P President Don Johnson.

Lignite for the plant will come from nearby lignite reserves jointly owned by the North American Coal Corp. and Getty Oil Co., he said.

Construction on the first of two 690,000-kilowatt generating units in Henderson County is set for late 1983, with completion by 1989. The second unit is scheduled to be finished the following year.

The plant will provide a yearly energy equivalent of 13 million barrels of oil or 82 billion cubic feet of natural gas, the company said in its announcement Tuesday at a meeting of 150 civic leaders here.

C.R. Miercort, president of the Southwest Division of North American, said his company will start building its production facilities in 1985. When both generating units are in operation, North American will supply the plant with about six million tons of lignite a year, he said.

Borges Reflects On Life And Death Thoughts

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Jorge Luis Borges, Latin America's most renowned living writer, is dreaming away the last years of his life and waiting to be "saved by the nothingness" of death.

The 82-year-old storyteller, his sightless blue-gray eyes appearing to smile at his own wit, talked of life and the end of it, his work, politics, Argentina and the Nobel Prize in a recent interview.

"I'm old, I'm blind, a very lazy man dreaming away my life," he said, sinking into an overstuffed armchair in the book-lined living room of his modest apartment. "Even so, not a day passes that I don't spend a moment in paradise, perhaps a few moments."

He is currently working, in collaboration with his secretary Maria Kodama, on a book of essays on Dante, the translation into Spanish of the 17th century German mystic Angelus Sileseus and a collection of short stories he intends to call "The Memory of Shakespeare."

The eclectic scholar, a student of humanities ranging from Buddhist philosophy to Norse language and mythology, recalled a line from a medieval English poem he favors. Speaking of the grave, he quoted in his perfect English: "Doorless is that house and dark it is within."

"I think of death as a great hope," he said. "I hope to be wiped out, utterly forgotten, saved by nothingness."

And his literary legacy — 35 volumes of poetry and short stories translated into more than 20 languages?

"A few jottings that will be forgotten."

Borges has been a nominee for the Nobel Prize for literature every year since 1963, but said he has given up hope of winning it.

"The tradition has been established of not awarding me the prize, and traditions have to be respected," he said.

Called "a jeweler of words" by critics, Borges has a modest opinion of his own work.

"Maybe I have attained, not a book, but perhaps several pages, several lines, that are not worthy of oblivion. But I do not think I am worthy of a prize given to Rudyard Kipling, George Bernard Shaw and William Faulkner," he said.

Borges describes himself as an anarchist with no interest whatsoever in politics. Of the generals who have run this country of 27 million people since a 1976 coup he said, "I don't supppose they are too competent, but I think they are well meaning."

He said contemporary things cannot be known and stated proudly that, even before going blind in 1956, he never read a newspaper. But he has been brought up to date on Argentina's current economic woes, including triple-digit inflation and rising unemployment.

"The country is in a bad way and nobody knows why. Perhaps the reason is ethical. Maybe ethically we are nowhere: cheating, bribing and lying. But I have no solutions whatever to offer. Elections would be a disaster."

Borges shares the opinion of democracy held by 19th century Scottish philosopher Thomas Carlyle, who said, "Democracy is chaos provided by means of ballot boxes."

"Democracy is an evil," said Borges. "Why should every man meddle in politics?"

He has bitter memories of Argentine populist governments presided over by Juan Domingo Peron, who in 1946 "promoted" Borges from director of the municipal library to inspector of chickens in Buenos Aires markets.

Borges said the vigilance the military government exercises over what Argentines read and see is not necessarily a bad thing. "Censorship is better than utter license," he declared, pointing to the pornography that abounds in freer societies.

He talked with pride of his military ancestors who fought in Argentina's war of independence against Spain and the wars against Indians as the country was opened to settlement by European immigrants.

"But today I am a pacifist," he said. "I suppose some wars can be justifled, but if you admit that a war may be justified, the world will finds reasons to justify any war."

He continued: "The idea that the world should be divided into different countries is a fatal mistake. It makes for wars, discord and hatred. I think of myself as the Stoics did, cosmopolitan. I think of Austin, Texas, the same way I do of Buenos Aires, or Montevideo, Geneva or Edinburgh. I am a citizen of the world."

He is planning to travel to New Orleans in January to receive an honorary doctorate from Tulane University, to go with those he has received from, among others, Harvard, Columbia, the Sorbonne and Oxford.

Traveling is one of the joys of Borges' life. He said he was "dazzled" by Japan when visiting that country recently, and he intends to visit India and China before retiring to that doorless, dark house of the old English poem.

"I stand in no fear of hell and no hope of heaven," said Borges, an agnostic.

The writer, who married at the age of 60 but separated from his wife 10 years later, said he is not sad he will leave no descendants. But he reflected on what it is his unborn sons are missing.

"Life may be awful. But it may be lovely also. Why on earth omit the spirits of living since it is so interesting, though it may be painful?," he asked.

Housing Figures Called 'Fluke'

By The Associated Press

Economists see little chance that the building and buying of homes will bounce back any time soon, despite a slight improvement in the latest sales figures for new houses.

Sales of new single-family houses, which had fallen to record lows in September, rose 15 percent in October, the government reported Wednesday. However, the sales were more than one-third lower than a year earlier.

Also, the sales of existing homes remained terribly depressed. Last week, the National Association of Realtors said sales of existing homes fell in October to the lowest level in 10 years.

Robert Genetski, an economist at Harris Trust & Savings Bank in Chicago, said Wednesday he was surprised by the October new-house improvement and he did not think a major recovery was in sight.

Thomas Harter, chief economist for the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, attributed much of the improvement to "all kinds of gimmicks" by builders trying to get rid of houses and cut losses.

Berry's World

"If I ever hear of you fooling around with any of those 'high-tech darlings of Wall Street,' we're through!"

at wits end

by erma bombeck

For years I have been trying to convert my husband to punctuality. It is my life's work.

What I'm dealing with is an 11-month baby who has never seen the first ten minutes of anything. He's never seen a curtain go up, never heard an overture, never seen a race start, never entered a bus that was standing still and has never gotten a parking place close to the door.

Just once I'd like to get to a buffet table where there wasn't a gaping hole in the tuna mold or a salad with all the tomatoes gone.

Just once I'd like to go to a movie when the lights are on and I can see to find my seat.

Being late is habit-forming. I know there is something Freudian about it, but I don't know what. My best guess would be that wherever he's going, he doesn't want to go in the first place.

The thing about people who are always late is there is no way to reach them. I've tried deception, where you lie about the time you're supposed to be somewhere. His body rejects the adjustment.

Humiliation has been tried. Like the night we arrived at a party and we heard a voice say, "Good grief, the Bombecks have arrived. I didn't know it was so late. Roy, we've got to go."

Enticement never worked. One night I talked him into going to a football game on time. When the band struck up a tune he said, "What is that?"

"It's 'The Star-Spangled Banner.' They play it before every sports event."

"What for?"

"Everyone sings it and it sets a tone."

"No one is singing it," he said, "and for this I came without socks."

The conversion of a confirmed dawdler is the dream of a lot of people. We got lucky the other night, en route to a sports event. Made every traffic light, found a parking spot near the entrance and encountered no crowds. Inside, we made a discovery. The event wasn't until the next night.

As my husband sat down in the bleachers he said, "this early enough for you? I don't know what you see in being here on time. It's boring."

Here's the Answer

Q. — I want to replace the on-off electrical switch in our bedroom with one of those which dims the light when it is turned slightly. Is this a job I can do myself or must an electrician be called in?

A. — Have you ever replaced an ordinary switch control? If so, you can handle the dimmer type, which is wired in the same way. If not, better have somebody show you how. This advice is contingent on whether the electrical code in your area permits such an installation by a nonlicensed person. In any case, be certain the electricity to the outlet is turned off before you begin.

Q. — I varnished a wooden table after removing the old finish. I put on three coats, sanding between coats. The final finish is good but not good enough. There are tiny imperfections in it that can't normally be seen, but are noticeable if you are looking for them. Also, they can be felt if you run your fingers over the table top. Is there something I can use to smooth the top and, at the same time, cut down the high gloss a bit?

A. — Use what is called wet-or-dry sandpaper. Get the extra-fine. Wet the paper thoroughly with water and place it around a sanding block. As you move the paper across the table top, apply very little pressure. Sand with the grain. When you are satisfied with the smoothness of the finish, be sure to wipe off the residue. You will find that this kind of sanding will dull the finish a bit as well as making it smooth. The only way you can go wrong is if you press down on the sanding block too much, in which case you will take off some of the finish as well as the roughness. If that should occur, simply apply another coat of finish. Wait two or three days before using the wet-or-dry sandpaper.

Q. — I have an old bureau which I decided to refinish. I was told I did not have to take off the old varnish, but to clean it and apply new varnish, which I did. It came out all right, but then I foolishly decided to put on a coat of lacquer to make the finish even better. Instead, I got kind of a mess, as though the varnish had pulled away from the wood. What went wrong?

A. — Lacquer should never be applied directly over varnish. It acts as a varnish remover. If you decide to repeat the procedure after removing the loose varnish, this time put on a sealer between the varnish and the lacquer. It might be easier to take off the old finish down to the bare wood, then apply a lacquer finish without using varnish, or a varnish finish without using lacquer.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, remover, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 50 cents PLUS a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, N. Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Most players agree that a balanced hand containing all four aces and 18 points is too strong for a one notrump opening.

Today's declarer deviated from this principle because of his square distribution and lack of a spot card higher than a six. South ducked the opening spade lead, allowing East to win the king. East returned a spade and again South ducked attempting to get a proven count on the defenders' distributions.

West won the jack and played a third spade, East signalling with the club 10. Declarer had eight top tricks and a ninth if either red suit divided 3-3. South first tested hearts by playing the ace, king, queen, West discarding a club.

Declarer now had a perfect count of both defenders' hands and knew how to make his game. Opening leader was marked with five spades, four diamonds, two hearts and therefore only two clubs. Since he'd discarded a club on the third round of hearts, declarer simply cashed the club ace just in case West's remaining club was the king.

He exited with his fourth heart, forcing East to lead. East cashed his king of clubs but had to concede a trick to dummy's queen, giving declarer his contract.

Libraries Offer Health Information

CHICAGO (AP) — Libraries have always been a source of books and reference materials on health and fitness, but now they are increasingly providing such information, according to the American Library Association.

Three developments in recent years have intensified and expanded the library's role in the health field, the ALA points out:

—Professional health-care organizations are recognizing that libraries are especially effective delivery points for information about illness prevention, health maintenance, fitness and medical care.

—The American public is more health- and fitness-conscious than ever before and libraries are responding by acquiring more technical reference materials.

—Librarians are receiving instruction on how to handle sensitive health information, stressing that there is a big difference between providing information and giving diagnoses or advice. They concentrate on information dissemination only.

According to Alan Rees, who teaches a course for librarians interested in health information at Case Western Reserve University, "people now want to accept the responsibility for their own health."

In order to do that, he notes, they need facts, and many people are calling upon their library information and referral desks to get answers to their questions.

According to an informal ALA survey of libraries with established health-information projects, the most frequent requests from callers are about drugs' side effects. Many inquiries focus on specific diseases and their symptoms.

To keep up with information requests, libraries are making available a variety of reference materials and are developing special services to help community residents cope with medical problems. They are also acting as referral centers for people seeking agencies to deal with their specific problems.

In Ohio, residents will soon be able to see televised programs at the East Cleveland Public Library via the Health Education Television Network. Guides distributed throughout the community will list daily schedules for shows on everything from looking for a doctor and generic drugs to nutrition, living with a stroke and caring for the teeth.

The University of New Mexico Medical Library in Albuquerque has stocked six bookmobiles with information on infant care and pregnancy as part of the U.S. government's "Improved Pregnancy Outcome Project," designed to lower fetal mortality rates.

Brush off

If you cheat on your diet and eat a forbidden food, here's a trick that could help put the brakes on binges. After one bite of the off-limits food, immediately brush your teeth. If you want to have any more treats, go ahead, but force yourself to repeat the brushing routine for every bite. Chances are you'll tire of so much brushing and give up. Brushing your teeth so much will also give you a chance to change your mind about cheating in the first place!

Watch the Jenn-Air Grill-Range in action. See what good taste is all about.
The amazing Grill-Range that does so many things so well is being demonstrated at your Jenn-Air dealer. See steaks sizzle up plump and juicy on the Char-Flavor grill. Design a balanced diet

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I need a good diet I can use to keep my weight down that won't give me that starved, anxious feeling. I have been on fad diets at times and then I lost 60 pounds and have been successful in keeping it off, but I have to keep going to the club program and that is expensive.

If I had a specific diet to follow I could be more successful. I ride my bike from 11 to 12 miles a day and do other exercises but I'm still having a hard time keeping my weight down. I eat between 1,200 and 1,300 calories a day; any less and I feel starved and nervous.

DEAR READER — There are lots of fad diets that will cause people to lose weight. Some will cause people to lose their health as well. You need to design a diet that comes from ordinary foods and which you can follow for life. Obviously it should be a balanced diet.

Avoid the many high-protein, low-carbohydrate diets. Many of these are health wreckers. Everyone needs carbohydrates in their diet. A good portion of your most important vitamins and minerals come from vegetables, cereals and fruit, all carbohydrate foods.

You may want to add some weight training to your program. If you develop and maintain good muscle strength — and they don't have to be bulging muscles — the muscles will help you use more calories at rest and ease your dieting situation.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, which contains a specific diet as you evidently want. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. It is a balanced diet and can be the basis for your eating pattern for the years to come.

I recognize that you probably want to stay lean for appearance's sake. That is fine. But if that is the only reason you need to re-evaluate your situation. It is normal for women to have a little more body fat than men. If your blood pressure, cholesterol and other medical findings are in a good range you have to ask why you want to make so much effort to avoid a few pounds of normal body fat. Staying lean is usually good for the health but there is such a thing as overdoing it.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read some place that if you need a lot of energy, for fishing, hunting, hiking or the like, that you should eat well for it the night before. I understand that is better and more important in providing energy than a candy bar along the way. Is this true? What can you do for energy?

DEAR READER — There are a lot of mistaken ideas about eating to provide instant energy. Before any food can provide energy it must be emptied from the stomach into the intestine and then absorbed into the bloodstream.

Fat foods or foods that contain fat may stay in the stomach for hours. Many candies also contain fat. Solids need to be liquified into a slush before being emptied from the stomach and that may take time. The best immediate energy source is a sweet liquid.

Glucose water for glucose tests provides glucose within 30 minutes, if taken on an empty stomach.

Good meals the day before a trip do help replenish the body energy stores. Fad low-calorie diets do just the opposite. These body stores, such as glycogen in muscle and in liver, are the initial source of the energy your body uses.

Advertising Campaign Lures People, Industry

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Two or three mornings a week, Larry Rogers goes to the Duke University football stadium, warms up with callisthenies and then jogs around the stadium track.

The 51-year-old Rogers, who suffered a heart attack last year, is one of about 3,500 people who have been helped by the Duke University Preventive Approach to Cardiovascular Disease, a program specifically designed for the 150,000 residents of this Piedmont city and surrounding area.

The benefits from DUPAC and other local medical programs are being used by the city as part of a three-year, $150,000 "City of Medicine" advertising campaign to lure industry and people to the area.

Durham boasts a physician-to-population ratio of 92.5 per 10,000 — five times the national average. It has five hospitals, 2,000 patient beds and 22 percent of its workforce employed in health-related industry. And besides DUPAC, it offers residents other special health programs, including the Quit Smoking Clinic and the Duke Dietary Rehabilitation Clinic.

Rogers began working with DUPAC, located in a new $5.2 million building that doubles as a press box during Duke's football season, after his heart attack. He said the program started him off walking, but built up to increasingly long periods of jogging.

Nurses check the weight and blood pressure of participants each day, while programs of warmups, bicycle work and cool down exercises complete the routine.

"It's extremely good psychologically," Rogers said. "And to have those people on the staff of DUPAC take a real personal interest in you and to really keep up with you and know you by name, it does a lot for you."

Rogers pays between $10 and $15 a week for his testing, and a more comprehensive six-month examination is available for $200.

"They have some psychologists on the staff that they refer you to as a routine thing...if you have trouble adjusting to your heart problem," he said. A vocational rehabilitation specialist is also with the program, counseling patients who have to change their jobs to accommodate their illness.

In addition, patients in the program do extra experimental work for ongoing research.

Dr. William G. Anlyan, Duke's vice president of health affairs, said DUPAC has consistently been a front-runner in the field of cardiac care.

"No community that I know of with the possible exception of Rochester, Minn., has the spectrum of care available to it that you find in Durham," said Anlyan said. "And in Rochester, the Mayo Clinic is the main industry there. They don't have the large indigent (outpatient) population that we have."

In addition to Duke, the campaign focuses on the Veterans Administration Hospital and Durham County General Hospital for general health care excellence. In addition, Durham has McPherson Hospital, a private eye, ear, nose and throat institution, and the Lenox Baker Children's Hospital, a state-supported teaching hospital for disabled children.

Wallace E. Jarboe, who is coordinating the "City of Medicine" campaign, said the program was concentrating on bringing new business to the community, sending its promotional material to medical-related industries, while emphasizing direct medical benefits to individuals.

"The key to the individual's gain is lifestyle," Jarboe said. "Each person really has a lot of control over how many times he needs to go to a doctor or a hospital."

Several of the medical facilities sponsor medical-lectures throughout the series.

"There is one series called 'Health Night Out,'" said Jarboe. "We haven't been able to find a meeting place large enough for people who want to get in."

Among the topics discussed are infertility, cancer research, preventing heart disese and depression.

In addition, officials are planning a health fair in which people can be screened for glaucoma, obesity, high blood pressure and even medical problems that require blood tests.

Jarboe said diagnoses uncovered by the tests would be brought to the attention of participants and their doctors.

Anylan pointed out another contribution the medical facilities make to Durham.

"The medical center is the largest employer in the community," he said. "We have a budget of $300 million for the medical center operations, 71 percent of which is people who live in the community and spend that money and pay taxes with it.

"On top of that you've got 400,000 outpatient visits including 5,000 admissions," said Jarboe. "And the average patient brings 2½ people along. They eat here, get lodged here and use all of the city's services."

Jarboe said he has been encouraged by the amount of public interest in the program but in terms of economic development, the outlook won't be known for two or three years.

FOR SUNDAY—Children who attend the annual Christmas Happening at the Scurry County Museum on Sunday afternoon can take part in a pinata breaking scheduled for 2:15 p. m. Robert Adams, who is in charge of this activity, holds two of the brightly-colored pinatas which will be filled with candy and treats to be scattered when the pinata is broken. The Christmas Happening will get underway at 1 p. m. when Santa Claus arrives and will continue until 5 p. m.

Harrelson Is Indicted

HOUSTON (AP) — Convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson can be tried after Dec. 14 on bond-jumping charges, prosecutors say, but a West Texas trial on a charge of cocaine possession may take precedence.

Harrelson, whom federal agents have named as the prime target in the investigation into the 1979 slaying of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. in San Antonio, was indicted Wednesday on the bond-jumping case, correcting a 15-month-old mistake.

Prosecutors were embarrassed to learn when the case came up on a district court docket Monday that Harrelson, although charged in September 1980, was never indicted.

"It was just a case of the right hand thinking the left hand had taken care of it," said Ted Wilson, assistant district attorney.

Harrelson's trial on possession of a controlled substance (cocaine) is set to begin Monday in Van Horn.

Wilson admitted Nov. 30 he was worried that the charge would be dropped because the indictment was not returned within 120 days, as required by the state Speedy Trial Act.

But he noted that the act has several exceptions, one of which is other trials in the intervening time.

Job Estimates To Be Charged

As of Tuesday, several automobile paint and body repair shops here began to charge for job estimates.

Heretofore, estimates on costs of repairs have been prepared without charge. But increased costs of paper work and requirements by insurance companies have prompted body shops in many areas to charge fees for estimates, especially in metropolitan areas, a local spokesman said.

It is the custom for three or more estimates to be obtained for auto body repair work when insurance claims are involved. Only one, of course, will be selected to do the work, which means that others preparing estimates do so at their own expense.

Indications are that a minimum fee of $10 will be charged for an estimate on a vehicle brought to the shop, with additional charges for those in which the repair firm must go to another location to see the damaged vehicle.

The estimate fee will be deducted from the repair bill by the firm which actually does the work on a car.

Boy Scouts Set Banquet

The Lone Buffalo Boy Scout District will hold its annual leader recognition banquet Friday night at Trinity United Methodist Church.

Dr. Don Newbury, president of Western Texas College, will be the speaker for the banquet. Highlights of the program will be the intallation of officers and presentation of the district award of merit by Lyle Deffebach.

Other presentations will be made by Melvin Moelling, Joel Hamlett and Thelma Deere.

Dr. Thomas Scannichhio will preside and introduce Dr. Newbury.

SPCA's New Office Building Is Perfect Example Of Versality

The Sweetwater Production Credit Association's new office building, located on College Ave. near the hospital, is a perfect example of the versatility of a metal building. It was designed and built by Wadleigh Construction, Inc.

Similar designs utilizing conventional exterior finishes produce durable, low maintenance structures that have many uses as office buildings, homes, farm buildings, carports, garages, stores, gins, etc.

Wadleigh Construction Inc. does the floor designing and blue prints for their metal buildings in their office located on North College Ave. & Highway 84. The buildings they design and build qualify for the lowest rates on insurance in Texas. They are wind resistive and fire retardant.

Metal Buildings do not need maintaining for many, many years. The metal side walls can be of metal, brick, stone or any maintenance free material. The 80,000 PSI metal supplied by Star Manufactory for the customers of Wadleigh Construction has the availability of a 20 year paint guaranteed against paint chipping due to severe weather or hail storms.

The use of materials with a good fire rating will reduce the owner's fire insurance as the contents of the building are practically the only thing that will burn. As the studs in the walls are made of metal also, it would be hard for the building, itself, to catch fire.

The Wadleigh family has been in construction business for many years, with 27 of these years in metal buildings in Snyder, Odessa, and surrounding areas. This is proof of their interest in metal building construction. They desire to make their building projects attractive as well as durable and well constructed.

Wadleigh Construction has recently been involved in several building projects that have enhanced their credentials. Some recent projects they have completed are a 53,000 sq.ft. building and foundation addition in Odessa for an oilfield equipment manufacturer. A 33,650 sq.ft. building for a cotton gin was recently completed in Roscoe, and a six building project for the Western Company here in Snyder with the responsibility of the foundations and buildings.

As general contractors specializing in turn-key construction from plans to completed buildings, the Wadleighs also subcontract through other general contractors portions of construction work as foundations, buildings, etc.

For any of your building needs contact the competent staff at Wadleigh Construction Inc., College Ave. & Highway 84 Bypass. Open Monday through Friday from 8:00 to 5:00, phone 573-6381.

In WJCAC Opener...

Dusters Host Queens At 7:30

Compared to past WTC teams, this year's bunch seems tall. Compared to Howard College, they're not.

Western Texas College's Dusters face their most important test of the young season tonight as they entertain highly-rated Howard County College at 7:30 in Scurry County Coliseum.

WTC's Westerners are also in action this evening at San Angelo, where they are scheduled against Angelo State junior varsity in a non-conference game at 5. Both the Dusters and Westerners combine for a WJCAC double header against Odessa here next Monday night.

The Hawk Queens, rated second in the conference in a preseason coaches poll, are 1-0 in WJCAC play after destroying Frank Phillips 106-53 earlier this week. Tonight's contest will be the conference debut for Coach Joe Cushing's Dusters, who are 10-1 in non-league play.

Western defeated Howard earlier this year, 70-69 to take the annual Hawk Queens Classic championship, and Cushing looks for another tightly contested battle tonight.

"Howard College is improving every game. They have the talent but they hadn't been playing real well together early in the season," Cushing said of the Queens' 7-5 record.

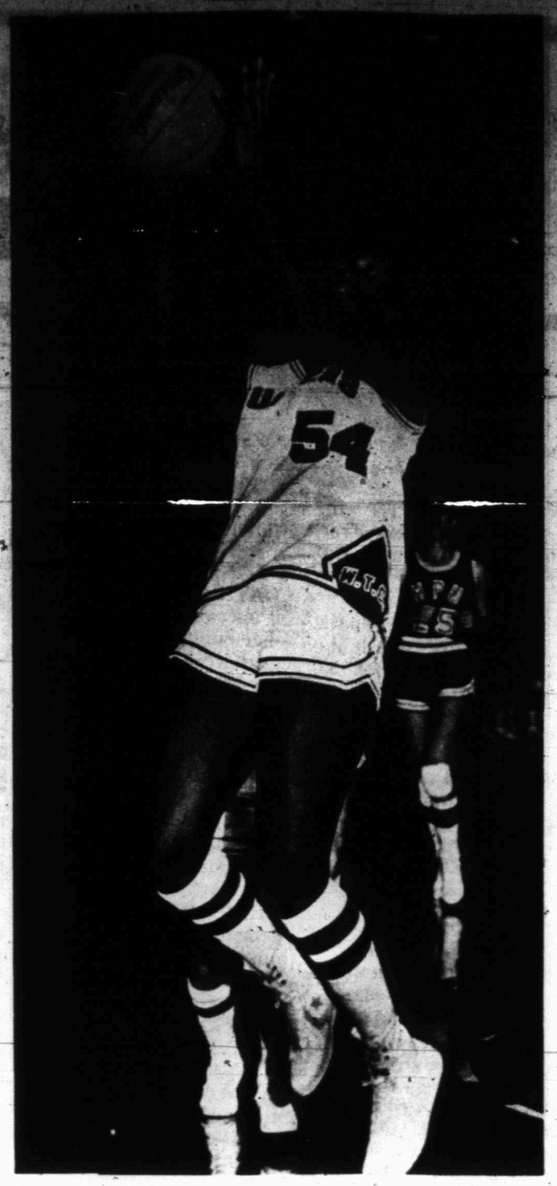

"We'll have all we can handle. What we need is a big crowd to come out and help us."

Howard boasts one of the taller teams in the state, featuring 6-6 freshman Susan Cordell and 6-3 sophomore Melissa Luna, along with returning players 5-9 Carol Wassermann, 5-8 Kelli Mull and 5-8 Cindy Robinson. It has been 5-10 freshman Nell Haskins, who has been they key for the Queens of late, however. Haskins, from Orange, is the second leading scorer in the conference with 23.2 points and averages 9.6 rebounds a game. She scored 36 points, a WJCAC single-game record, when Howard played Western Texas in the Hawk Queens Tournament.

Western Texas will match up in a variety of ways, using 6-2 Dorcas Perkins, 6-1 Vickie Teal and 5-11 Valerie Wells as major strength inside. Others include guards Cindy Goltl, 5-6; Cindy Maddox, 5-7; and Dale Pieper, 5-6. Others usually seeing action include 6-0 Shara Fredenburg, 5-9 Norma Frazier, 5-7 Tracey Muehlbrad and 5-7 Shelia Heflin.

Teal leads the Dusters in scoring and rebounding with figures of 15.5 and 9.1, while Perkins averages 11.7 points and 7.6 rebounds, Wells 10.9 points and 7.8 boards, Goltl 9.1 points and Maddox 8.1 points.

Team-wise, WTC ranks third in offense (WJCAC) with a 72.7 per game average and fourth in defense at 61.1. Howard ranks sixth in offense with a 60.4 average and third in defense with a 56.0 average.

NCAA Gathering To Discuss CFA Television Contract

ST. LOUIS (AP) - A dispute involving football television contracts was the issue that caused the schools in the National Collegiate Athletic Association to gather in special convention, but the heart of the matter was the complaint by some gridiron powers that they give too much and get too little.

About 400 schools were expected to be represented today for the opening of the conclave which will consider proposals for reorganization of the organization.

The convention was called after the College Football Association, made up of the major gridiron powers, negotiated a television contract with NBC.

The NCAA had already committed its members, including the 61 CFA schools, to a television contract with ABC and CBS.

Although the television contract sparked the call for a special convention, members of the CFA, which contributes the bulk of NCAA revenue, have long complained that smaller schools dominate NCAA policymaking by sheer weight of their numbers.

The NCAA Council was to hold a closed meeting while the various conferences were to caucus before general debate began later in the day.

Reorganization has failed in 1976, 1977, 1978 and 1979, although Division I, where the big schools play, was split in two in 1978.

The intent of the split into Division I-A and Division I-AA was to "provide institutions with similar commitments and essentially like programs a common deliberative forum."

The NCAA acknowledges "that objective has not been achieved in Division I-A football or in Division I as a whole."

Division I-A has lost only two of its 139 members since 1978 while membership in Division I as a whole has increased from 237 schools to 276 schools.

The CFA wants its schools in a division of their own and has proposed creating a new Division IV. Qualifications for the new division include an average attendance of 20,000 at home games played in a stadium with a minimum seating capacity of 30,000.

That proposal would create havoc and "divisional clutter" in the NCAA, according to association President Jim Frank.

In a counter-proposal the NCAA is seeking to toughen the criteria for membership in Division I.

Bass Club Notes End Of Season, Awards Presented

Ronnie Parsons hooked a four-pound, 11-ounce bass to win Big Bass and Heavy Stringer honors in the final Snyder Bass Club tournament of the year, held recently at Colorado City.

Club members will meet tonight at 7 in the Towle Park Barn for their annual fish fry and to award season trophies.

Trophies will be awarded as follows: Largest Bass - Tommy Hood, 7-3; Heaviest Stringer - Ken Gard, 18-15; Most 3 and Over, Tommy Hood, 95-2; 6-Pound and Over - Ronnie Parsons, 12-7; 5-Pound Total - Bill Collier, 11-2; 4-Pound Total - Tommy Hood, 45-0; 3-Pound Total - Gay Hickman, 20-7; and Fisherman of the Year - Tommy Hood.

1982 membership dues are being accepted at Teal Carpets during regular business hours. Anyone interested in bass fishing and "friendly competition" is urged to join.

Parsons' 4-11 catch was enough to add to his stringer and beat out Red Pinkerton, 6-5, by four ounces, 6-11. Third was Dave Plunkett, 5-4½; followed by, fourth, Roy Parsons, 5-4; fifth, Tommy Hood, 5-0½; sixth, Ken Gard, 4-12; seventh, Terry Martin, 4-7½; eighth, Bill Collier, 3-12; ninth, Mark Stephens, 3-6; and 10th, Leo Henzler, 3-4.

Top Six Standings for the club are, 1. Hood, 904; 2. Hickman, 806½; 3. Rick Howard, 713½; 4. Don Parsons, 613; 5. Stephens, 575; and 6. GArd, 529½. Others are, 7. Pinkerton, 511½; 8. Cecil Jordan, 449; 9. Ronnie Parsons, 437; and 10. Earl Perser, 396.

Tulsa On TV Tonight

Former Western Texas coach Nolan Richardson and his Tulsa Hurricane will be featured against No. 1 ranked North Carolina at 11:30 tonight on ESPN in a tape-delay broadcast.

Tulsa, which includes five former Western Texas College players, is ranked No. 9.

Greg Stewart, Phil Spradling, Paul Pressey, and David Brown were former Western Texas players two seasons ago, who aided Tulsa to an NIT championship last year. Also playing for Tulsa this season is 1980-81 Westerner standout Chuck North.

The tape will also be shown at 3 p.m. Friday.

Oilers, Browns Tonight

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Oilers and Cleveland Browns are running neck and neck for the second straight year, but this time they're trying to escape the cellar, not break into the penthouse.

The Oilers and Browns, both 5-8 this season after tying for the American Football Conference Central Division title with 11-5 records last season, meet tonight before a national television audience and a capacity Astrodome crowd.

Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano says there will be no experimenting with his starting lineup. He's interested in winning the final three games of the season, finishing 8-8.

Oiler Coach Ed Biles also would like to finish at .500, but he plans to take a look at several young players and hopefully get more playing time for backup quarterback Gifford Nielsen.

"We can't do anything about what's happened. We've got to play the hand that was dealt us," Rutigliano said of the Browns' tailspin of this season. "We're coming off two games we needed to win and didn't, so now we need to redeem ourselves."

The Browns have lost to Pittsburgh and Cincinnati in their last two games.

The Oilers' decline has been even more dramatic. They've lost three in a row and six of their last seven games in Biles' initial season as head coach.

"We will be doing some serious evaluating in our last three ball games," Biles said. "We want to find out who will be able to help us next season. We're going to try to win the games, but we're also going to try to use them for experimenting where possible."

The game will match beleaguered quarterbacks Brian Sipe of Cleveland and the Oilers' Ken Stabler.

'Tree Ship' In Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP) — Hawaiians pining away for Yuletide greenery need fret no more.

The "Christmas tree ship" pulled into port here Wednesday with 103,800 Douglas firs for the holiday season.

Waldheim Asks Name Removed

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim asked the Security Council on Thursday not to include his name in further balloting for the next secretary-general, but it was not clear if he was giving up his quest for an unprecedented third term.

U.N. spokesman Rudolf Stajduhar, in issuing Waldheim's statement, declined to state outright whether it meant Waldheim was withdrawing from the hotly contested race, or that the 62-year-old Austrian would accept an extension of his present, five-year term.

Wood Is Buried In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A Russian Orthodox priest offered a blessing and a balalaika sounded a melancholy refrain as Natalie Wood's flower-covered coffin was buried at a Hollywood cemetery.

The drowned actress' husband, actor Robert Wagner, bent to kiss the coffin and then left the cemetery in a limousine before the burial.

Miss Wood, born Natasha Gurdin to Russian and French parents, fell into the water Sunday from the yacht that she and Wagner owned.

"She found not only a way to put life into her art, but art into her life," actor Roddy McDowall told about 100 mourners — including honorary pallbearers Sir Laurence Olivier, Fred Astaire, Gene Kelly, Gregory Peck and Frank Sinatra.

McDowall spoke after author Thomas Thompson and actress Hope Lange, who described the 43-year-old actress as "a pillar of strength for us all."

"Natalie, you put us to a very severe test today," she said. "It's difficult to feel joy and laughter when you're not there to share it."

Reporters were barred from the cemetery Wednesday but could see and hear some of the proceedings from nearby.

The wooden coffin, blanketed in white flowers, was carried to the gravesite at Westwood Memorial Park to the strains of "Midnight in Moscow" on a balalaika, a stringed instrument played in the Soviet Union.

Wagner, 51, picked some of the flowers and gave them to friends and relatives, at one point bending over and kissing the casket.

Wagner then walked to a waiting limousine and got in with Miss Wood's two sobbing daughters — 7-year-old Courtney, her child with Wagner, and 11-year-old Natasha, from her previous marriage to producer Richard Gregson.

The coffin was buried shortly afterward at the cemetery, which also contains the crypt of actress Marilyn Monroe.

The Rev. Stephen Fitzgerald of the Russian Orthodox Church of North Hollywood said a blessing over the casket before it as lowered into the grave.

Miss Wood's body was found Sunday morning off Santa Catalina Island, a half-mile from the 60-foot yacht Splendour. The coroner's office said she had apparently slipped off the swim steps of the yacht while trying to board a rubber dinghy in the dark.

The night before, the Wagners and Christopher Walken — a guest aboard the yacht and Miss Wood's co-star in the unfinished film "Brainstorm" — had dined and drank wine at a restaurant on the island.

The coroner's office said Miss Wood's blood alcohol content was .14 percent. A .10 percent level is sufficient for a drunken driving arrest in California.

Miss Wood's will was expected to be filed for probate in Los Angeles Superior Court. A news release from the public relations firm Rogers & Cowan said Wagner is sole executor and trustee of the estate.

Wagner, who married Miss Wood in 1957, divorced her in 1965 and then remarried her in 1972, has been under a doctor's care since her death.

Fransie Gets To Meet Pinocchio

ANAHEIM, Calif., (AP) — An 8-year-old South African boy made into an old man by a rare aging disease fulfilled the wish of his compressed lifetime and said hello to a storybook character who struggled to become a real boy.

After traveling three continents, wizened Fransie Geringer of Orkney, South Africa, met his idol Pinocchio at Disneyland on Wednesday.

Afterwards, the character, dressed in bright red shorts and sky-blue bow tie, carried Fransie in the amusement park, rode with him in a train and gave him a watch from his wrist. The shy child looked at the watch all day.

"Fransie said Pinocchio loves him very much. He's so proud. He loves Pinocchio very much," said the lad's 31-year-old mother, Magda.

"It was awfully nice of Pinocchio to give Fransie his watch. It looked like a new one," said Mickey Hays, 9, of Hallsville, Texas, who also suffers from the incurable disease, progeria. The disease ages its victims 10 times faster than normal, and most progeria victims die in their teens or earlier.

Mickey, talkative and effusive, met his favorite fantasy personality Mickey Mouse at the same time Wednesday.

The two boys met in Anaheim Sunday night. It was the first time either had met another progeria victim, and they became fast friends.

"Fransie is so happy all the people are not staring at him. He can go anywhere he wants to go without seeing them with their mouths hanging open," his father, Herman, 37, said of the sightseeing expedition at Disneyland.

"Everybody today had a tear in his eye — I don't care who it was. It was because of the happiness shown in those boys' faces," said William Sample, 45, a police officer who five years ago founded the Sunshine Foundation to grant wishes to terminally ill children.

The foundation, which works out of an office above a hardware store in Philadelphia, coordinated Fransie's trip to the United States via Europe and organized a week of activities for the two youngsters.

Fransie's visit was organized after an Associated Press article about his disease and his love of Pinocchio prompted donations from hundreds of Americans. Mickey read about Fransie and wanted to meet him so Texans rallied to send him to California at the same time.

About $26,000 was collected in Florida for Fransie's visit to Disneyland and Disney World, which is near Orlando, Fla.

The Geringers said it wouldn't cost that much to go to Disney World, so half the money will be put in a fund for other sick children.

Another progeria victim, 11-year-old Alicia Gowans of San Jose, arrived at Disneyland Wednesday hoping to meet Mickey and Fransie. But she became ill before the meeting could be arranged. Her scheduled meeting with Snow White had to be canceled.

Despite their arthritic joints, which make walking difficult, the boys toured the Disneyland nonstop from morning until 6 p.m.

The American West as seen through the camera of Milton Goldstein has been transformed into a traveling exhibit opening Sunday in the Scurry County Museum at Western Texas College.

Goldstein donated the traveling exhibit to the National Park Service in 1978. He titled it "The Magnificent West: An American Heritage," and said of the collection, "What I have tried to do with my camera is to express that vision in an ideal form reflecting the fundamental values of my life. Not ideal in the sense of nature prettified or distorted, but ideal in the sense of nature purified and exalted."

The 22 colorful photographs will be shown in the museum through December, and visitors to the Christmas Happening on Sunday are also invited to view the display in the lobby.

Sr. Citizens Supper Set

Senior citizens are invited to attend a covered dish supper tonight at the Senior Center, 2603 Avenue M.

Dear Abby

Battered Woman Balks At Turning Other Cheek

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a very religious man. Pete (not his real name) is also possessed of a violent temper and has beaten me up several times. The first two times I took no legal action, although I did wind up in the hospital the second time. Pete cut my fingertips with a pair of scissors and hit me over the head with the telephone, causing me to have 22 stitches in my head as well as a concussion. I was in the hospital for two weeks, and when I came out he denied laying a hand on me. He said I threw myself down the stairs and he would like to see me prove I didn't!

After I filed for divorce, Pete begged me to see a marriage counselor with him, so I did. (A man.) When the counselor pointed out Pete's faults, Pete said, "Of course he'd stick up for you; he's a man and you're a woman!"

Wanting to be fair, I changed to a woman counselor, and when she said Pete was in the wrong, he said, "You women always stick together." (I can't win.)

He wants to try to make a go of our marriage, but I'm afraid he'll beat me up again if he gets a mind to. He says the Bible says I am supposed to forgive him 70 times 7, which is 490. I forgave him three times already. Does that mean I have 487 more times to go? I don't think I could live through it. Help me.

HAD IT IN ALTOONA, PA.

DEAR HAD IT: Pete is sick. "Forgive" him, but have nothing to do with him until he recovers. He's not only mentally deranged, he's dangerous. You need help, too. Call your family service association and inquire about assistance and counseling for the battered woman.

DEAR ABBY: When someone makes a donation to a charity in the name of a friend as a Christmas gift, who gets the tax deduction?

Don't pass this off so hastily. If A sends B a card saying that he has given $100 to The Little Sisters of the Poor in B's name, A has either made a gift to B, which is not tax-deductible (B being an individual, not a charity) or he has made no gift to B.

If A has made a gift to The Little Sisters of the Poor for B, then B should get the tax deduction. If A has made no gift to B, but rather a gift to some charity, why should he brag to B about it? I object to such "gifts."

J.C.K.

DEAR J.C.K.: The person who lays out the money for a tax-deductible gift gets the deduction, not the person in whose name the donation was made.

Read on for a letter from another reader who objects to the "gift-in-your-name" gift for yet another reason:

DEAR ABBY: I give to those causes in which I believe, and I do not want anyone to make a donation in my name to any charity without my permission.

Example: If someone made a contribution to the Equal Rights Amendment in the name of Phyllis Schlafly, I'm sure she wouldn't appreciate it.

DEAR ABBY: Is there anything wrong with a girl making out just a little to keep a fellow interested in dating her? I don't mean a great big love scene or anything like that, just a little light necking and a couple of kisses during the evening, and maybe one extra special good-night kiss? I'm keeping my virtue as a matter of principle.

DATING NOW

DEAR DATING: That's a dangerous game. The kind of "interest" you could arouse might cost you your principle.
