Police Called Out To Control Shrieking Crowds Gathered At 'Miracle Grave'

BOSTON MAYOR IS SUPPLICANT AT OLD GRAVE

James M. Curley Kneels at Shrine to Pray for Wife's Health

SCORES COLLAPSE

More Than Million Estimated to Have Visited Priest's Crypt

MALDEN, Mass., Nov. 17. (US)—James M. Curley, mayor-elect of the city of Boston, today joined the record-breaking throng of more than 200,000 pilgrims who visited the grave of Rev. Patrick Joseph Power in Holy Cross cemetery, and knelt humbly at the shrine, praying for the complete recovery of his sick wife.

The mayor-elect arrived at the height of the tumultuous crowds, by far the greatest in number and the most intense in their religious fervor of any who have so far stormed the shrine.

Scores of women fainted, the cries of little lost children rose shrilly, and the hysterical, piercing prayers of the afflicted rang out above the weary shuffle of feet and the rumbling chant of thousands of voices.

Police Called Out

So tremendous was the throng in the cemetery that every available police facility was called to the scene. Within the gates 35 Malden police officers kept order in three great lines, reaching from the gates to the shrine. At the grave 75 uniformed members of Malden Post 69, American legion, in charge of Senior Commander Melvin P. Reed, assisted police.

Supplicants at the grave, in a fervor of faith, scooped up so much earth from about the stone that wide holes, two feet in depth, were dug in the soil.

When the slab threatened to become dislodged and fall, employes brought wheelbarrows of earth to fill up the holes.

Long Journey for Many

Automobiles from almost every state in the union joined the unceasing procession to the cemetery. There were two cars from Arizona, their owners drawn to the shrine by reports of its cures. Pilgrimages from Canada, from northern New England, from New York and from

Decrease in Tourist 'Crop' Worries France

PARIS, Nov. 17. (US)—Faced with further losses in the "tourist crop," an industry valued at around $600,000,000 annually, France today is casting about desperately for means of again drawing the foreign visitor into the confines of the republic.

While tourist travel generally has been on the increase, the season just ended shows a decrease of roughly $100,000,000 in the amount of money spent, when compared with the figures for 1928.

TEXAS BAPTISTS SESSION OPENS

General Convention Begins At Beaumont

BEAUMONT, Nov. 17. (AP)—Baptists from all parts of the state were gathering here tonight for the general convention of Texas and meetings preliminary and incident thereto. Beaumont was prepared to care for about 4,000 visitors—the largest gathering ever entertained here. It will exceed in numbers the state Democratic convention held here in 1928.

While the general convention will not meet until Wednesday night, about 1,000 women will participate in the meetings of the Women's Missionary union, which will convene tomorrow night for its 43rd annual session, and beginning Tuesday there will be a pastors' and laymen's conference.

Visitors Preach

Visiting ministers filled some of the local pulpits today. Dr. B. L. Lockett, medican missionary to Africa, and Dr. J. R. Saunders, missionary to China, preached from the First Baptist church pulpit. Doctor Lockett, who is in charge of a hospital at Ogbosomo, Africa, was graduated from Baylor university at Waco.

Taking a prominent part in the convention sessions will be a number of Texas' leaders. Former Gov. Pat M. Neff, will preside over the opening general convention session. Others here include Dr. S. P. Brooks, of Waco, president of Baylor university; Dr. Thomas H. Taylor, Brownwood, president of Howard Payne college; Dr. J. C. Hardy of Belton, president of Belton college; Dr. J. D. Sandefer of Abilene, president of Simmons university; Dr. L. R. Scarbrough, Fort Worth, Southern Baptist Theological seminary and Dr. George W. Truett, pastor of the First Baptist church of Dallas and one of the outstanding churchmen of America.

Harmony Forecast

Dr. J. H. Pace, pastor of the First Baptist church of Beaumont, chairman of the general committee handling the convention, said indications were good for one of the biggest and best conventions in the history of the church. He predicted the sessions would be harmonious.

Waco and Amarillo are asking for the 1930 convention.

Mrs. F. S. Davis of Dallas, beginning her 24th year as president, will preside over the Women's Missionary union meetings. Dr. B. B. Blaylock, pastor of the First Baptist church of Mart, will preside over the pastors' and laymen's conference.

Messrs. 'Y' to Represent America In International Bank of Settlement

Institution to Handle Reparations Funds Appoints New York Interests to Act for This Country

By WILLIAM R. KUHNS
Associated Press Feature Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Messrs. "Y" of New York will speak for America in the councils of the world bank.

With less commotion than attends the election of a township clerk, Messrs. "Y" have been chosen for one of the most important executive tasks in the world. They will represent the United States unofficially in an institution which many bankers have predicted will become preeminent in international finance.

Seven Nations

Fourteen famous banking authorities, representing Britain, France, Belgium, Japan, Italy, Germany and the United States, have adjourned their sessions in Baden-Baden, Germany, after agreeing on a charter and statutes for the Bank of International Settlements.

The American delegates were Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank of Chicago, and Jackson E. Reynolds, president of the First National bank of New York.

Text of Charter

The text of the charter, chapter 2, article 6, provides:

"Subscription of the authorized capital having been guaranteed in equal parts by the Banque Nationale de Belgique, the Banque de France, the Reichsbank, the Banca d'Italia, Messrs. "X" in place of the Bank of Japan and Messrs. "Y" for New York, the bank may begin business as soon as the minimum of 112,000 shares has been subscribed."

New York banking circles assume two things. The first is that J. P. Morgan & Co. is the principal part of Messrs "Y." The second is that Messrs. "Y" will have the cooperation of Messrs. "A" of Chicago, Messrs. "B" of Boston, Messrs. "C" of San Francisco, Messrs. "D" of New Orleans and so on through the list of American financial centers.

Funeral services for Edward Williams, 46, plastering contractor here, who was shot to death at his home, 1416 Twenty-fifth street, last Friday afternoon, were held from the Albert's funeral home chapel Sunday at 3 p. m. with Dr. Floyd Allan Bash, pastor of the First Christian church, officiating. Interment was in the Riverside cemetery.

Further investigation into Williams' death will be handled by the Wichita county grand jury which meets in January, it was decided at a court of inquiry held before Justice of the Peace R. V. Qwinn Saturday.

Mrs. Mattie Williams, wife of the victim, who made a statement to District Attorney Sam B. Spence after the slaying, was placed under a personal recognizance bond of $1,000 to appear before the grand jury. On the recommendation of the district attorney no charges were filed against her.

In her statement to the district attorney Friday Mrs. Williams said her husband had threatened her life, and when he returned to her home later in the afternoon apparently under the influence of liquor, she fired four times in self-defense.

Williams is survived by his widow and six children.

Liquor Killings Are Concealed, Wets Charge

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. (US)—Only one killing in every four in connection with prohibition enforcement ever shows on the government records, and such reports as are available are biased, according to charges tonight by the association against the prohibition amendment.

In a survey entitled "Reforming America With a Shotgun," the association cites 51 specific killings which are not recorded in the files of the prohibition department. It is stated that, although only 263 deaths are now recorded, more than 1,000 would be shown if an honest and thorough canvass of the country could be made, covering all sources.

GAS EXPLOSION AT BELLEVUE INJURES TWO

Woman Near Death From Burns Received in Blast at Home

FUMES FILL HOUSE

Man Strikes Match When Couple Enters Front Door of Residence

Special to The Record News.

BELLEVUE, Texas, Nov. 17.—Mrs. J. M. Redin, about 50, was probably fatally burned, and her husband sustained serious burns tonight when their home was wrecked by an explosion which occurred as Mr. Redin, returning with his wife from church, struck a match as he opened the front door leading into the gas filled residence. Apparently a gas connection was leaking or had been severed.

The resulting explosion was heard all over the north part of town, in which the Redin residence is situated, and glass windows of houses across the street from the scene of the explosion were shattered.

Mack Simmons, assistant agent at the Fort Worth and Denver railroad office here, was the nearest to the home when the explosion occurred. He reached the home just as Mr. and Mrs. Redin ran from the house, their clothing aflame. Simmons, it was said, threw his overcoat over Mrs. Redin, whose body was literally charred in places, according to witnesses. Mr. Redin, Simmons said, rolled on the ground to extinguish his burning clothing. The house was completely destroyed.

The injured couple were taken to the residence of Mrs. Garrett, nearby, and Dr. D. W. Holmes and Dr. L. F. Cook of Bellevue, were summoned. Later Dr. C. M. Carmen of Vashti, a nearby town, arrived.

The Redins have lived here for several years and are well known. They have four children, Mrs. Ophas Farmer of Garland, Miss Grace Redin of Dallas, Carl Redin of Fort Worth, and Lester Redin of Bowie. Mrs. Redin has two sisters, one, Mrs. J. W. Watkins living at Henrietta, and the other residing at Iowa Park.

HOLLIS MOTHER SERIOUSLY BURNED

Special to The Record News

HOLLIS, Okla., Nov. 17.—As a result of what proved to be a useless risk of life in an attempt to save her 4-year-old son from her burning home, Mrs. Homer Young, of Hollis, is suffering from painful burns.

Her son had climbed out of a window early Saturday morning when Mrs. Young, who had gone with her husband to a nearby dairy barn, saw flames coming from the house. Unaware of her son's safety, Mrs. Young plunged into the house, running from room to room despite smoke and flames, looking for the boy.

When, her clothing afire and her face and hands painfully seared, Mrs. Young was forced to leave the house, she fell to the ground, rolling in the dirt to extinguish the flames which enveloped her. She was rushed to a hospital here for treatment.

The fire was believed to have been started by defective wiring.

ALPINE, Texas, Nov. 17. (AP)—Somewhere on the hill behind the Sul Ross State Teachers' college a "horrible" monster roams. Coeds are all a-flutter. "If he is only a foot long," the coeds say to those who try to reassure them. "why can him a monster?" And they refuse to stir.

Record News Cotton Table

For Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma

Memphis and Frederick, cotton leaders of this section of Texas and Oklahoma respectively, plugged away at their growing total of ginnings Saturday to additionally increase their already long lead over other towns in the area. Memphis turned out 126 bales during the day and Frederick 160, while other towns were unable to muster as much as 100 bales. Ginnings for the last two weeks have shown a downward tendency that cannot be entirely attirbuted to the weather. Prices over the week-end closed strong, most of the principal markets of Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma marking up sharp advances in the range of price during the day's buying. The following reports were received by The Record News:

'TAY PAY' DIES

T. P. O'Connor, 'Father Of House of Commons' Succumbs

LONDON, Nov. 18. (Monday) —(US)—T. P. O'Connor, "the father of the house of commons," is dead. Death was due to a septic condition of the leg, which had kept the 82-year-old politician and publicist to his bed for the past two weeks.

"Tay Pay's" condition became grave on Saturday when he lapsed into unconsciousness. Today he was visited by the king's physician, Lord Dawson or Penn, but little could be done to delay the end.

Death came to the aged parliamentarian at 3:10 o'clock this morning. It was not unexpected since the physicians in attendance had not hoped that at his advanced age he could survive the last illness.

"Tay Pay," however, was not of their opinion. He battled until the very end. Several times during his illness he appeared in the house of commons in his wheel chair. Despite the protests of nurses and physicians, he insisted on writing his weekly political articles.

GOOD WAGING LOSING FIGHT

No Improvement Seen in War Secretary

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. (Monday) (AP)—Oxygen was being administered to Secretary Good at 1:15 o'clock this morning in an effort to prolong his life.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. (AP)—At 11 o'clock tonight hope that Secretary Good would live had given way to fear that death might take him momentarily.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. (AP)—The condition of Secretary Good at 9:20 was reported to have been worse than at any time since he underwent an appendicitis operation Wednesday.

The White House said heroic measures had been resorted to by attending physicians in an effort to revive the strength of the stricken secretary, but it was believed that death might be imminent.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. (AP)—The staff of physicians attending Secretary Good were in attendance at his bedside in Walter Reed hospital tonight prepared for the worst eventuality.

The secretary of war was making a valiant fight for life against the inroads of infection which beset him after his operation for appendicitis.

The morning bulletin said Mr. Good was "markedly prostrated." Early this evening a second bulletin said he had not lost any ground since noon.

At the White House, President Hoover awaited word regularly. Returning from church this morning, Mr. Hoover inquired into the advisability of visiting his war secretary again but he was told that the patient was experiencing only brief moments of consciousness and a visit might further upset him.

Mrs. Good and her two sons were at the hospital. The older son of the secretary, James W. Good Jr., arrived from Evanston, Ill., where he is a student at Northwestern university, last night.

His father was so seriously ill that he has been unable to recognize him.

Russians Negotiate For Mexican Lands

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 17. (US)—A syndicate of Russian farmers is negotiating with the government for the purchase of 1,500,000 acres of farm lands in northern Mexico.

Pete P. Veringen, Russian peasant leader, has been in Mexico for several weeks looking over various tracts.

"If a suitable tract is found," Veringen declared "more than 50,000 Russians who are seeking freedom from military service in Russia will come to Mexico where the government has assured us that we will be exempt from any military draft."

11 KILLED AND MANY WOUNDED IN REPUBLIC

Seven Fatalities in Capital and Four in Vera Cruz Reported

RUBIO VICTORIOUS

Faction Claims Sweeping Triumph but Cannot Give Figures

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 17. (AP)—Paschal Ortiz Rubio, national revolutionary party candidate for president, was swept into office today by what appeared to have been the greatest presidential vote ever cast in Mexico. The anti-reelectionist party, whose nominee was Jose Vasconcelos, conceded the victory to Ortiz Rubio tonight in a statement which attributed their defeat to interference at the polls by followers of Ortiz Rubio.

By GEORGE A. SCHREINER

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 17. (US)—With 11 persons dead throughout the country as a result of the bitter election day riots, Pascual Ortiz Rubio, national revolutionary party candidate, without waiting for the final returns, this afternoon claimed his election over Jose Vasconcelos.

While clashes between the Rubioistas and Vasconcelosistas occurred in almost every principal city in the republic the severest fighting took place here and in Vera Cruz.

Scores Wounded

Seven persons were killed in the capital and four at Vera Cruz. Scores were wounded in both cities and with the reports pouring into the capital it is believed that the total of casualties all over the country will run into the hundreds.

The bloodiest outbreak here was an attack on the anti-revolutionist headquarters, on Bolivar street near Madero avenue, staged by a party of about 40 Rubioistas. Four persons were killed during the battle, similar in some respects to the one that occurred in front of the national revolutionary party headquarters last Sunday, when five were killed.

From the rural districts came repeatedly calls for federal assistance in quelling the rioters, as factional differences flared into violence and and partisans of the two candidates took to the gun to settle their political differences.

Morning Orderly

The election here, despite some petty disturbances, had begun in quite an orderly fashion. It was not until noon that any signs of disorder were visable. Then two persons were killed and about 10 wounded in a street fight.

From Vera Cruz came reports that four persons were dead there. Advices added that one Vasconcelos supporter had been lynched by a mob of Ortiz Rubio sympathizers.

Tampico, it was learned, is under martial law and all traffic to or from the city by either railroad or highway has been stopped by federal troops.

Comparatively Calm

Despite the many fatalities, the election is not regarded here as a particularly bloody one. Many more persons have been killed on previous presidential days.

With the precinct polls opening at 9 o'clock this morning, it was 10 o'clock before the election boards had been organized to permit the voters casting their ballots.

It was in connection with this delay that many minor clashes were reported. Several were wounded in this city.

At all polling places followers of both candidates, Pascual Ortiz Rubio and Jose Vasconcelos, assembled as early as midnight, employing the early hours of the morning marshaling themselves into strategic positions for capturing the polls, which in most cases was accomplished by the Ortiz Rubioistas. When the polls legally opened they were in possession of most of them.

MIRACLE GRAVE DRAWS THRONG

Mayor-Elect of Boston Is Supplicant

the Middlewest, were made by hundreds of faith-inspired visitors.

A hush fell over the vast throng when a special ambulance was driven through the gates, bearing 20 patients from the Holy Ghost hospital for incurables in Cambridge. Women wept as the invalids and cripples were gently lowered on their stretchers, to touch the grave in hope of being cured of their sufferings.

Malden police received many requests during the day from afflicted persons through the country, begging for a bit of earth from the grave.

One woman wrote from Cotton Plant, Ark., asking to have her letter placed on the grave, and then returned to her. Thirteen cures were reported during the day.

Boy Discards Crutches

A five-year-old boy, John H. Braley Jr., was taken to the shrine from Providence by his father. The little boy, his father said, had been paralyzed since infancy and unable to walk. He walked without crutches after kneeling at the grave.

A Gloucester woman, Mrs. Ezra Williams, visited the shrine and told officials she had been paralyzed 26 years as a result of a fall and severe injury to her hip.

After praying, she walked without aid. She said she had used water from the shrine a week ago, and had felt steady progress, culminating in what she declared was her complete cure.

An enlisted man from the naval fuel station at Newport, R. I., Joseph C. Simpson, walked away from the shrine without his crutches after reporting he had been helplessly crippled for two years.

Little Charles Dancheta, 10, of Newbury street, Lawrence, had been visiting the grave daily for two weeks. His father said he had suffered from paralysis in his leg since birth.

Yesterday, he stood and walked firmly, after he and his father had knelt in prayer.

Leg irons were taken from a seven-year old boy of Natick and he declared that he could walk for the first time without the braces.

A four-year-old girl from the same city was next to shout that she was no longer crippled but could walk.

Stay Over Night

Hundreds of persons are now remaining in the cemetery at night, praying at the grave or in All Souls chapel for cures.

In the 18 days that have elapsed since the grave was reported to be a miracle shrine it is estimated that no less than one million persons have visited it.

The number of cures claimed thus far is 650. Not all, but many have been authenticated by physicians or the Catholic clergymen who are investigating.

The Rev. Patrick Walsh, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic church, of Malden, where the unusual demonstration is taking place, regards the situation conservatively. He is making a quiet investigation to see how the reported cures have been so widely and generally credited as to bring a response which is perhaps unparalleled in the history of the miracle shrines.

The cure apparently had a simple and unpretentious beginning. On Sunday, Oct. 24, Father Walsh, having heard reports of the visits to Father Power's grave announced at mass in his church that he would like to have any of his parishoners who knew of cures report the circumstances to him.

In answer to this invitation two women told of their experiences. Mrs. Mary O'Hearn of Everett said that she visited the grave three times and annointed her ears with water that had collected in the chalice of the tombstone. Her deafness had disappeared.

Miss Lillian Walsh of Malden, commercial school student, said that she heard of Mrs. O'Hearn's cure, went to the grave and used some of the same water to bathe a mole on her face. Two weeks later the mole disappeared leaving no scar.

These two reported instances of cures are said to have started the great procession of pilgrims which increases daily. But back of Mrs. O'Hearn's experiment in curing her deafness is an interesting story. For 32 years the secret of Father Power's grave had been known to two women who discovered it accidentally.

Water Cures Man

Mrs. Nora T. McGrath, of Malden, and her sister, Mrs. Katherine Pierce, of Chelsea, had been accustomed to stroll among the graves of Holy Cross cemetery. The tombstone on Father Power's grave is the only one of its kind in the cemetery. One of the sisters had with her, during a Sunday afternoon stroll, a small empty phial and noticing that rainwater had collected in the chalice of the stone said that it was much like the holy water of church and filled the phial with it.

A year later John Sweeney, their brother, was injured while swimming and a gangrenous condition of the leg resulted. Doctors were consulted but were unable to check the spread of the poison.

One of the sisters thought of this little phial of water which had been put away with the unexplained impression that somehow it was one of things especially "blessed." The water was applied to the infected leg drop by drop and after a few days the poison began to disappear.

The story of the sisters had been told to Mrs. O'Hearn. It caused her to experiment with her deafness. She related the whole to Father Walsh and he in turn recited it to his congregation as it had come to his ears.

The story found its way into a Boston newspaper and at first a few persons came to view the tombstone with its carved chalice more out of curiosity or interest in a revived bit of history than with the thought of starting a pilgrimage.

Race Prejudice Defined by Martin In Address to Men's Bible Class

Whites and Blacks Get Along Better in South Than Anywhere, Floral Heights Teacher Says

"To say that all races are socially equal is to brand one's self as a fool or a demagogue; but to say that all have the same right to life, liberty, and property and the pursuit of happiness, as well as the right to worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences is to say that one is a real, true, red-blooded, 100 per cent American in the true sense of the term. To deny either of these things to any of them is race-prejudice, un-Christian and un-American."

With these words Judge P. A. Martin defined race prejudice in an address on that subject before the Men's Bible class of the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday morning. In spite of all the teaching of the Bible, he continued, the world seems not yet ready to accept fully the profound truth of the brotherhood of man.

Race-pride and race-prejudice are far removed in meaning, Judge Martin said, but in practice come so close that over-stepping is constantly imminent. "To close the door of hope" to any race merely because we have the power to do so was branded as the fruit of cowardly race-prejudice.

"Racial equality taught in the Bible is not social equality," continued the speaker. "It is equality of right in the spiritual kingdom of our God; the good and faithful old negro slave always had just as good a chance to be in the kingdom as "old Marster" himself did. The white and black race mutually respect and help each other and get along better right here in the South than in any country where social equality is taught and recognized."

Evangelization of the world never will be started as long as the prospective evangels have a "high-hat" complex toward other races, Judge Martin declared.

"We have no right to expect others to accept our religion until we prove to them by example as well as by precept that it is better than their own," he concluded.

Airport Notes

The Municipal airport and a large crowd of visitors Sunday afternoon obtained their first glimpse of an amphibian plane when Harold Boyce landed at 2 o'clock in his Ireland amphibian with Pilot Bill Ulbrico at the controls. The ship, a single-motored plane, was of the type of the huge DOX recently flown in Europe, having a prow and keel which gave it the appearance of a boat with wings. Boyce and his pilot were en route to Los Angeles from New York on a transcontinental hop. The ship remained about an hour and took off after refueling.

Landings over the week-end at the Municipal port include L. P. Hammond of the Lone Star Aviation company who returned late Saturday from his ranch in New Mexico where he had been on a hunting trip; Inspector Delaney of the department of commerce, aeronautics bureau, who landed Saturday morning in his Travelair J5-9 from Fort Worth en route to Fort Sill, Okla.; Robert Lesagé in his American Eagle who landed about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon from Graham and returned during the evening; S. P. Hotchkiss of the T. A. T. school at Fort Worth who landed about 4 p. m. in his Sparton J6-5 while en route to Woodward, Okla.; and Mrs. James E. McKanna and party who landed in the Travelair J6-9 about 6:30 o'clock Sunday evening from San Antonio where they had been on a visit.

The foundation work on the administration building at the Municipal port has been completed and the road leading to the field has been graded and made ready for graveling. Gas lines have been installed and service was made available for the first time Saturday. Another significant gesture was made Sunday afternoon when an aerial photographer was sent up in the Lone Star company's Travelair 0X5 to make pictures of the landing field and the hangar. The pictures will be sent to Washington as part of the efforts of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce to secure air mail service for the city.

The doors of the new $100,000 Highland Heights Christian church building, on Avenue H fronting the Junior college, were flung open for the first time Sunday, and reverent members of the denomination filled its enclosure for three special services commemorating the completion of the structure.

At the evening services the congregations of both the Highland Heights and the First Christian church were present, to hear Dr. Floyd Allan Bash, pastor of the latter church, delivered a sermon on "What the Church Offers the Community." As in the other services, special musical selections were rendered.

Among the out of town pastors who will preach during the three weeks revival will be Dr. Frederick M. Brooke, pastor of the Herring Avenue Christian church of Waco. He will begin his sermons Monday.

Epworth Young People Finish Book Programs

Leon Deaton Jr. presided Sunday evening at the meeting of the Epworth young people of Floral Heights Methodist church. Following the reading of the minutes by Mabel Rowe, secretary, Mrs. C. M. Goodwin gave a splendid devotional; she then led in sentence prayers which were closed by Thomas B. Scott.

After a brief review of the preceding chapters, the last chapter of the book, "Going to Jerusalem" was given by Mrs. Joe Richker. She told of the beginning of Christianity in Japan, how a Japanese boy risked death to run away to America to find God. Years later, when Japan had lifted the ban on foreigners, he returned and founded the Doshisha university, where workers are trained.

The work of Mr. Geddy among the savages of one of the Pacific islands was summed up in the inscription on his tomb: "When he came to the island, in 1848, there was not a single Christian; when he left it in 1872, there was not a single heathen." John Adams, John Coleridge Patterson, John Williams, John Paton, Titus Coan, and Eliza Agnew were spoken of as other missionaries in the Pacific islands.

A vivid picture was painted by Mrs. Richker of the Easter Sunday in 1928 when about 200 people representing 51 nationalities met in Jerusalem on the Mount of Olives to discuss the problem of how to spread the kingdom.

Side number two won in the contest and a party will be given in their honor at a date to be announced later.

Barbara Martin gave a violin solo, accompanied by Mary Earl Shaw.

Joe Long, Thomas Husbands, Norman Tittle, Corinne Perkins, Karl ten Brink, Elbert Moeller, J. I. Staley Jr., Philip Wilkinson and Irving Humphreys were new members introduced.

The benediction was repeated by the society in unison.

Grandma Would Offer Sympathy To the Moderns

"If Grandma Could Rise Up From The Coffin, Wouldn't She Hold Out Arms of Sympathy to Granddaughter and Sob Out That Pioneering Was Nothing Like This," Queries Dorothy Dix.

When the modern woman compares her lot with that of the women of the past, she is filled with congratulations for herself and compassion for her foremothers. She could weep tears of pity over poor, dear grandma who had to espouse anything in trousers that came along because marriage was the only career open to a woman; who had to bring her children up by hand, so to speak, and who had no steam-heated house, no electric lights, no electric refrigerator, no vacuum cleaner, no patent dishwasher, no automobile, no delicatessen shops around the corner.

But, after all, has the woman of today an easier life than the woman of the past had? Wasn't it grandma who had the graft instead of granddaughter? And if grandma could rise up from her coffin wouldn't she hold our arms of sympathy to granddaughter and sob out that pioneering was nothing like this? True, the modern woman has pushed the door of opportunity wide open and is free to do anything from running for president to flying an airplane. She has achieved economic independence, but with the ability to support herself has come the necessity for doing so.

In Grandma's time a father never dreamed of such a thing as not taking care of his daughters. Brothers felt obligated to look out for their sisters and when a man got married he assumed his wife's board bill and shopping ticket. But as soon as the modern girl is through school, father and brother wash their hands of her and expect her to go to work and pay for her own flimsies. Even husbands are more and more demanding that their wives shall keep on with their jobs after they are married and be bread-earners as well as breadmakers.

When grandma got married she felt that she had, as the phrase went, settled herself for life. Of course, it was incumbent upon her to be a good wife and mother to be thrifty and industrious and to look well after the material wants of her family, but that was all.

Grandpa didn't expect to be a siren who would keep him perpetually fascinated, nor a vaudeville team that would keep him amused and entertained and on his tiptoes to see what she would do next. She didn't have to compete in looks with the flappers in his office nor in charm with the golddiggers who consider it a shame for a middle-aged man to waste his money on a mere wife. Divorce was almost an unheard-of thing among respectable people, and so grandma could slump down and take it easy because she couldn't have lost grandpa if she had tried.

But marriage is no such sinecure to granddaughter. It isn't a permanent situation that she is sure of holding through life on good behavior. It is a precarious position in which she has to fight from the altar to the grave to hold her own and even at that some vamp is likely to take her husband away from her and oust her from her position if he gets rich enough to make him a desirable prize.

Grandpa expected only that his wife should be chaste and domestic and amiable. Grandson demands that his wife shall be as discreet as Mrs. Caesar, cook like a chef, be so mild of temper that butter would not melt in her mouth and then that she shall be eternally young and beautiful, dress like a fashion plate, be a diplomat who will be able to handle him without riling him and a miracle-worker who can keep him from ever getting tired and bored and looking at another woman. Probably grandpa strayed from the straight and narrow path as often as grandson does, but he didn't make grandma the custodian of his morals and blame his lapses in virtue on his wife, while grandson does.

Another great advantage that grandma had over granddaughter was that she could let nature take its course. She was under no compulsion to be beautiful, though homely, and to look 35 after she was 60. In those halycon days when a woman got fair, fat and 40, she was simply that, and no shame to her. She looked middle-age and she dressed middle-aged and she acted middle-aged and was comfortable and happy.

But granddaughter can indulge in no such luxury, for age has become a scandal, and a pound too much of flesh on a woman's body is more to be dreaded than a blemish on her character. So granddaughter goes through all the tortures of the inquisition in being permanently waved and pounded and stewed and starves herself into emaciation and agonizes around in stilt-heel shoes and makes a figure of fun of herself in clothes too young for her and wishes with all her heart and soul that she had the courage to be as old as she feels, as grandma did.

Most of all, grandma had the privilege of living in an age before anybody had discovered that children were a problem and when nobody had ever heard of child psychology and complexes and fixations and the danger of wrecking the lives of children by making them behave. Grandma spanked her children when they were bad and kissed them when they were good and fed them when they were hungry and taught them obedience and to fear God and do their duty, and they turned out the kind of men and women who were an honor to their parents and a credit to their country.

Grandmother may now and then have had a wayward son to worry over, but she didn't have to lose sleep over her daughters, for nice girls behaved nicely and caused their parents no anxiety. She did not have to lie awake at night as the modern mother does, with her heart torn with fear at the thought of what may be happening to her girls who have gone off in high-powered cars with boys with synthetic gin in their pockets and who won't come home until 3 o'clock in the morning and then tell her it is no business of hers where they have been or what they have done.

And so when the modern woman thinks of these things she thinks that maybe she is wasting her pity on grandma after all and that it was grandma who had the graft. Not she.—DOROTHY DIX.

VODVIL BILL SEASON'S BEST

Here's Where "Blue Ribbon" Should Go

By W. L. UNDERWOOD
The Record News Staff

Majestic theater patrons learned Sunday afternoon just where the "blue ribbon" desigation under which the bill of Nov. 3-4 appeared really was supposed to have been assigned. As an indication of the season's best all-around vaudeville entertainment, the blue silks were just two weeks out of time—they should be hung on the present bill in which Marion Wilkins' dancing troupe and Australian Stan Kavanagh go under the wire winners by snail's-jump over a fast field.

Enhanced by unique and charmful settings, the elfin face and figure of "little Miss Ginger" whirl and flash with consummate grace through a group of dances more delightful than any other performance of this kind offered thus far in the 1929-1930 season. Particularly alluring was the brief Spanish dance, enacted in colorful costume and scarf of the Toreador, and finishing with a cyclonic finale. The ensemble consisting of Miss Wilkins, Jack Meyers, and the Harris twins closed the act with an excellent synchrony of tap dancing, each artist utilizing a platform which had the appearance and resonance properties of a bass drum.

"Different" Juggling

Stan Kavanagh, credited with having begun his juggling practice while a sheep-herder on the hills of Australia, combines a provoking assortment of manual tricks with a line of patter which tops those offered by many patterers as the piece de resistance. Elastic balls, plug hats, and Indian clubs alike show remarkable proclivities for flying numerously into space, only to suspend themselves in air, apparently, until reached by a retrieving hand. Mr. Kavanagh's juggling has nothing of the common-place element in it. The moving pattern looks familiar, but quickly resolves itself into a complete surprise.

Consigned by virtue of being classified as athletic to the opening place on the bill, the five persons included in "The Mounters" set a top-notch standard for the entire program with gymnastic accomplishments as graceful as they are unusual.

Making up in good measure for the mild type of humor introduced by the other four numbers on the bill, Myrtle Glass and Jimmy Conlin bring on a ridiculous farce which supplies 12 minutes of raucous hilarity, seasoned with flashes of ingenious clowning by Mr. Conlin incident to his efforts to play the piano—or to persuade the piano to be played, to be exact. Only a moment's delay in Miss Glass' reduction of Jimmy to a state of complete dishabille could be pointed out as tiresome slapstick in a gale of innocently amusing action.

Filling second position on the program, with a group of songs, Misses Dorothy and Rosetta Ryan were attractive in lovely creations of white tulle, with draped orchid sash used as a corsage at the waist.

Evelyn Brent and Hal Skelly in "Woman Trap," on the talking-screen, completes the program.

BIG PERSIMMONS

HUGO, Okla., Nov. 17. (UP)—Persimmons as big as apples are on display here, the largest seen here for some time. They are of the Japanese variety and were brought in by Earnest Steen.

WORKS HARD IN THE FIELD

Relies Upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Rankin, Illinois.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a tonic before and after my first child was born six years ago. Then when my second child came and I felt weak and rundown, I took it again. I am still taking it and I am feeling better. My mother used it for herself when I was small and always got good results. She still takes it. I do all kinds of heavy work, including my housework and I also help in the field. I recommend the Vegetable Compound and I am willing to answer any letters."—Mrs. Ben Oberland, Route 2, Rankin, Illinois.

THE WEEPING MUSE

Is Modern Industrialism about to deal the Art of Music the saddest blow of its history?

To blame Machinery as an Instrument of Decadence may seem startling, but it is true that Machinery in the form of Canned Music is elbowing Real Music out of motion picture theatres, thus denying to the masses the cultural influence of a Fine Art.

Surely, if machine-made music displaces the artist in thousands of instances, the incentive for any individual to improve his talent—so necessary in all art—is minimized and music can no longer hold the cultural value that it has possessed. Any art is dependent for its progress upon the number of its enthusiastic executants.

Do you, Mr. Reader, find the pleasure in Mechanical Music that you do in Real Music?

If you believe that Real Music should be saved to the masses who attend Motion Picture Theatres make your opinion known to the manager of your favorite theatre. Very likely he will appreciate your frankness for he wants to please his patrons.

Daily Editorial

IN 1919, THE interior department conducted an inquiry with respect to the relation of turnover to illiteracy.

In response to its questionnaire, the United States Aluminum company estimated the percentage at one-fifth of the corporation's working force; the Goodyear Rubber company, at 30 per cent; the Fleischmann Malting company, at 50 per cent; the Nineveh Coal and Coke company, at 80 per cent; the Pfeister-Vogel Leather company, at 100 per cent; the Standard Roller Bearing company, at 200 per cent; the Baltimore Copper Smelting and Rolling company, at 300 to 400 per cent; and the Graselli Chemical company, at 390 per cent.

Strike an average and appreciate how closely ignorance and incompetence are related.

The investigation disclosed 58 firms which would not employ illiterates in any department and 42 prominent concerns which refused to place unnaturalized citizens on the payroll.

And yet, in the face of such figures, congress has steadfastly neglected to deal with a situation which challenges the tradition that America symbolizes opportunity and that there is no discrimination here.

Sheer selfishness urges us to remove the disability under which so many of our people fumble.

We the same as reduce the supply of labor when we suffer the continuance of conditions which restrict its adaptability, and so severely limit its general service.

Even if we proceed on the basis of the inaccurate 1910 census; even if there are, as it claims, only eight millions of this class, that number approaches Canada's entire population, is more than the whole citizenry of the South during the rebellion, is greater than the combined population of Nevada, Wyoming, Delaware, Arizona, Idaho, Mississippi, Oregon and Connecticut.

THE SOUTH leads in illiteracy, but the East leads in non-English speaking.

The nation's veins are choked with unassimilated foreign clots, which only education can dissolve and digest into America's blood stream.

The revenue loss rising out of this multitude is incalculable. The productive capacity of an illiterate is easily five dollars per week less than that of a man who can follow printed directions, express himself and maintain touch with progress through verbal contact and the informative press.

If these eight million inchoate grudges are merely taught to read and write—if they simply received sufficient schooling to raise their earning power a dollar per diem, we would thereby create two billion dollars of wealth annually in excess of the present yield from such groups.

Which amount should not only take care of all treasury interests, but support the necessary schools besides.

The federal government and the several states expend enormous sums every year to help farmers improve their crops and homes, yet ten per cent of rural folk can't puzzle through an agricultural bulletin or farm journal, the Constitution of the United States or a prayer book, make out a tax statement or post accurate accounts.

All of which represents economic stupidity and fiscal folly, not to mention ingratitude to both mountaineer and immigrant, soldiers and sailors, whose French graves commit us to instruct and cherish their brothers in breed—and need.

A Means of Progress

NOW THAT the Wall street collapse has passed a little distance into the background, we are beginning to hear once more the impassioned cries and angry criticisms that always follow a crash in the stock market.

We are being told, for instance, that speculation in stocks is a great evil. Legislators are talking about new laws to curb the practice. Wall street, once again, is being made the target for all kinds of bitter attacks.

Wall street will surpive this, very likely. It has come through similar flurries before, and it will again. And, meanwhile, it might be a good thing for us to get our minds a little bit clearer on the iniquities, or otherwise, of speculation itself.

An Englishman, Ralph Hale Mottram, recently wrote "A History of Financial Speculation," tracing the development of the process from prehistoric times. His book is rather instructive. It leads one to the conclusion, not that speculation is an evil, a restraint on legitimate trade and a dissipation of a nation's energy, but that it has helped mankind immeasurably on the long advance from barbarism to civilization.

Mottram begins right at the beginning.

In cave-man days there was a traffic in flint knives and arrow heads. Tribes that lived near extensive beds of flint made more of these implements than they themselves needed, and carried them considerable distance, to exchange them for furs, meat and grain. He dealt in articles of uncertain future value, and thereby became the first of the speculators—and, also, helped the race take its first step upward.

Mottram then proceeds to trace this sort of thing down to its present-day state. Wall street, born of the flint trading speculator of 3000 B. C., has an ancient and honorable lineage.

There was, for instance, ancient Greece, home of philosophy and beauty. Greece, Mottram points out, was a trading nation. It rose from barbarism to civilization because its people were, preeminently, speculators and traders.

"In other words," he says, "the glory that was Greece was the same glory that we pursue today, the endless effort to live a little better than our fathers."

The thing holds good all the way down the line. Today, Mottram sees as war-striken Europe's chief hope the fact that speculation has become international and universal in character. It is providing an influence that may eventually become strong enough to counteract nationalistic rivalries and jealousies and promote that world peace that looks so desirable and so unattainable.

So, if you lost money in the stock market crash, don't take to cussing Wall street. Its good deeds outweighs its sins.

Missionaries at Home

THE AMERICAN CHURCHES, which devote much money and energy to the sending of missionaries to foreign fields, might well consider the need of missionary work right here at home, according to Dr. Lyman P. Powell, rector of St. Margaret's Episcopal church, New York City.

Writing in the current Review of Reviews, Dr. Powell says:

"Of the million persons in the Bronx, only 170,000 are even nominally attached to any fold. And with less than 20 per cent of the Bronxites religiously affiliated, the one-quarter of these habitually attending services brings the total of the dependably religious down to perhaps four per cent, and indisputably makes the Bronx as definitely a missionary field as India or Africa."

Similar conditions, to a greater or lesser extent, are doubtless to be found in practically every big city. Dr. Powell's statement is a thing the churches would do well to bear in mind.

Ontario Is Satisfied

ONTARIO, quite evidently, is pretty well satisfied with the way its liquor law is working. It is hard to see how the results of the recent election can be interpreted in any way except as an indorsement of the existing policy. The party that advocated a return to strict prohibition was snowed under—almost put out of existence, as far as representation in parliament is concerned. Another party, which pledged itself to hold a provincial referendum on the matter, also took a bad beating. The Conservatives, upholding the present law, won the greatest victory in their history.

It is hard for citizens of the United States to tell just how the Ontario law is working. Reports that come back are apt to be colored by the bias of the investigator. But it seems rather evident that Ontario is pretty well satisfied.

A Boon to Aviation

THE "AUTOMATIC PILOT" which recently proved its worth in a test flight from Dayton, Ohio, to Washington may develop into one of aviation's most important inventions.

This device holds a plane on its course and keeps it at the proper elevation without any attention from the pilot. Its possibilities for usefulness can easily be imagined. They can hardly be exaggerated.

If a pilot can go aloft and make it mechanically certain that his plane will fly along the exact course that he wishes, and stay at the exact height above the earth that he wishes, half of his worries are over. Elmer Sperry, inventor of the device, has done aviation a great service.

SAYRE, Okla., Nov. 17.—Turkeys of Beckham and surrounding counties are to be pooled at Sayre and sold to the highest bidder on Wednesday, Dec. 4, according to plans that have been worked out by the chamber of commerce and farmers of this section. Much dissatisfaction with prices received for turkeys sold for the Thanksgiving market led to the decision to pool them for the Christmas market.

'EASY' The Love Story of a Modern Girl

By BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER XLI

When they drove up to the little police station that night Jim refused to let Ann Marie set foot in it.

"No, you're not going to get yourself mixed up in this thing if I can help it," he told her. "This is my part of the country and I've known these people up here for years. I'm pretty sure I can get everything straightened out without much trouble."

Ann Marie watched his tall figure disappear behind the gray veils of rain. She saw the door of the police station open and shut as he stepped into it.

Four or five minutes went slowly by. Ann Marie began to be nervous.

Then the door opened again and a motorcycle policeman stepped out into the rain and the darkness.

He came across the wet sidewalk towards his motorcycle which was parked at the curb, just in front of Jim's car. He stood there a moment, lighting a cigaret.

Ann Marie opened the door of the car and called to him.

"Did you see a couple in the station who were arrested tonight in an automobile?" she asked him. "In an automobile that the police thought they had stolen?"

He threw his match down into the gutter and came up to the side of Jim's car.

"Did I see 'em?" he asked. "Lady, I arrested 'em!"— He threw back his head and let out a great laugh —"And, believe me, next time they have any mugging to do they won't stop to do it on a county highway! —And they won't bawl out an officer of the law, I bet you, either!— If it hadn't been for Mr. Goodwin they'd have spent the night in jail. We all thought they had a stolen car."

"I see," said Ann Marie with stiff lips. "It's my car. I let them have it. . . . Is Mr. Goodwin getting everything straightened out?"

The road policeman nodded, touching the visor of his cap as he backed away.

"Sure. They'll all be out in a minute now," he answered. And, as he spoke, the door opened and Alice and Neal came walking out of the building arm in arm.

For a minute or two they stood at the top of the steps under the light globes with the legend "Police Station" painted on them in black letters.

Then, still with their arms linked, they ran down the wet steps and around the corner of the building, where Ann Marie's car was parked in the streaming darkness.

Above the sound of the rain and the wind she could hear them laughing together and they ran to it. The door of it slammed and they drove away towards town.

"They never came near me," Ann Marie said quietly to Jim when he came back to her and started his own car. "After I'd come all this way up here, too!" Low as her voice was, it was full of hurt and resentment.

"I didn't say anything to them about you being here," Jim answered. "I may as well be honest with you—I was afraid that Neal would want you to ride back with him if he knew you'd come up with me. And, this is probably the last ride I'll ever have with you."

Ann Marie said nothing, just stared at the wet black road ahead of her.

"But whether we ever see each other again," he added after a long pause, "I want you to know that if ever you need a friend you can count on me—"

He stopped for a moment more as if he didn't know how to go on.

Then suddenly he spoke again, slowly, as if it were hard for him to say what he had to say:

"Neal and I have known each other for a good many years. He's a fine chap—and my greatest wish is that you will be happy with him. I am sure you will be happy with him."

He sounded as if he were trying to convince himself that she would be happy with Neal—and only half believed it, himself.

He had been driving slowly. But now he stepped on the gas suddenly, as if he couldn't get back to Perry street soon enough.

The great purring car raced with the wind all the way back to town.

Neal was waiting for her when she reached the top floor of Susquehanna hall.

The door of his studio stood open, and through the doorway she could see him walking slowly up and down the long room with his hands in his pockets and his eyes on the floor.

He stopped and looked up as she paused on his threshold.

"Oh, so you're here at last!" he said sarcastically. "Well, did you have a pleasant evening?"

Ann Marie came into the big untidy room that always smelled of gin and cigarets these days. She closed the door behind her and stood with her shoulders against it.

"You ought to know what kind of an evening I had," she replied, and there was a sharp little edge to her voice.

"Well, I know that you had Jim Goodwin down in your office with you at 9 o'clock, when I telephoned there. I know that much for sure—and I'm pretty sure that you just came driving back to town with him. You did, didn't you?"

She nodded. She wasn't going to tell him even the shadow of a lie.

"I did . . . he drove me up to Connecticut to get you and Alice out of the fix you were in. There wasn't anything wrong about that," she said frankly. "But you—you were arrested because you were parked on a side road, making love to Alice in the car! The motorcycle policeman told me so!—You're in love with her, and you keep telling me you aren't; Why don't you be honest with me?"

He shrugged his shoulders. "Honest with you?—Why should I be honest with a girl who'll take a road cop's word against mine?— You think I'm crazy about Alice just because a cop says he caught us necking—"

"No! No!" Ann Marie broke in. "I've noticed things, myself. And if I had a grain of sense I'd drop you the way Johnny's dropped Alice—Why, look here, tonight you took Alice up to Westport for dinner, didn't you? But did you ever take me for dinner anywhere? No. You've never spent a dollar on me!"

"Sure! That's it—Money! That's all a woman thinks about!" Neal's voice had risen and his face was flushed. "That's why you let Jim Goodwin come to see you down there where you work—late at night. Because he has money! That's why. You're all gold-diggers at heart, you women!"

Ann Marie shook her head with its wet brown gold curls plastered against her cheeks by the rain.

"You can't say I'm a gold digger," she said. "I know I'm not one."

She was thinking of the time she had paid for the dinner the two of them had had at Simonds' roadhouse back home. Of the money she had let him take since she had been here in New York. Of the food she had bought for him and for Alice and for Jeanie during the last two or three weeks. Of the car she had bought—and had not even had a ride in, yet!

But she did not mention any of those things to him, as most people would have done.

"I know I haven't a ghost of a chance to keep you if Jim Goodwin's after you," Neal was saying now, and all of the anger had died out of his voice. He seemed very pathetic all at once. "I can't give you rides in a big car and dinners at a high-priced flat the way he can. I can't find jobs for you and see that you're invited to parties like the one Janet invited you to last week. I'm poor—"

The old story of "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby" once more! The story he had been telling her ever since she had promised to marry him.

But once more it had its effect on Ann Marie.

"Neal, please don't talk like that!" she cried softly. "You know I don't care how poor you are! You know I love you, and I'd marry you tomorrow if you asked me to—And just tonight I told Jim Goodwin I couldn't see him any more. I was telling him that I wouldn't drive him with him when you called up from that police station. Please do believe me, Neal!"

She came to him and laid her hands on his shoulders and kissed him.

He kissed her back, but he did it quickly as if his heart was not in it.

"I'd hate to think that Jim Goodwin could cut me out with any girl!" he said bitterly. "And I know he couldn't if he didn't have all that money of his!"

She had turned away and was going into her own rooms to go to bed when he called her back.

"No more of that business of working at night down town! Understand?" he asked, like some commanding officer giving orders to a rookie.

Ann Marie brought her paint box and her organdies home from the office on Tuesday night.

But it was almost impossible to get any real work done in the flat.

On Wednesday night Neal insisted that they all go to the movies. They went—"Dutch treat."

On Thursday night Alice had a sick headache and wanted all the lights in the room turned out.

On Friday night George and Tom Terrell turned up, bringing Leota Ingram and Tillie Chapman with them.

They made wild "whoopee" all over the place until midnight when the janitor came upstairs in his bath robe and broke up the party.

"Don't you hate to have Leota Ingram in the same crowd with us?" Alice asked a half hour later when the two girls were getting ready for bed. "How does she happen to be such a good friend of Neal's?"

"Well, I don't really know," answered Ann Marie. "I've always wondered about it, myself."

Alice gave a little snort as she opened her cold cream box and began to lather cream on her cheeks.

"Well, I'll bet if I were engaged to Neal I wouldn't have her hanging around him very much!" she said sharply. "She's much too good-looking, and I saw her give him that come-and-kiss-me-before-anybody-sees-you look a couple of times tonight! —You'd better watch her step, Ann Marie!"

Ann Marie sighed. "If I kept my eyes on all the girls who are crazy about Neal, I'd be pretty busy."

"Well, you won't have to worry about me much longer," said Alice with a laugh. "I'm going home Sunday. I want Jeanie to make me some summer clothes before she gets married . . . Neal is going to drive me home in your car."

The Once Over

By H. L. PHILLIPS

OUR OWN BOOK REVIEWS

No. 1—Calvin Coolidge's Life Story

This is a story that will interest grown ups and not offend children. It is the work of Mr. Calvin Coolidge, a rising young author who seeks to do for Vermont what Bret Harte did for California, Thornton Wilder for Peru and Ernest Hemingway for Spain. Mr. Coolidge was quite well known even before he turned to literature, he having spent a number of years in Washington as president of the United States or something. Great things were predicted for him even when he was serving as president and the high hopes of his admirers would now seem to have been realized by his first book.

PHILLIPS

The book rather baffles description. It is not pure romance, nor does it come under the head of travel, history, hunting big game in Africa or psycho-analysis. Perhaps it may be best described as just a book, not too thick and not too thin, with most of the pages cut.

Mr. Coolidge chooses for his hero a man named Steve, or possibly it is Gus, and the story opens in a small Vermont town at the height of the Money Mardi Gras or Coin Scramble, an annual fete in which all the natives participate and give themselves over to a riotous tossing away of silver dollars. In this quaint frolic it is the endeavor of each Vermont man to throw away more coins than the other. The man who throws away the greatest sum of money is crowned King of the Spendthrifts and wheeled around the village green on a huge float called the Spirit of Extravagance. He is the envy of all true Vermonters.

It is at the Coin Scramble that the hero meets Joan Lowell, a sea captain who is in love with Trader Horn, a brother of a ukulele player known as "Musical" Horn. It is a case of love at first sight and he takes her into the village store and buys for her the gifts, which Vermont custom prescribes must be given by any Vermont boy to the girl of his choice. They are a Rolls-Royce, a player-piano and two 80-foot yachts.

Here there is a terrific clap of thunder (which is no wonder) and lightning flashes in the skies. The Vermont hero takes Joan in his arms and sings the theme song, "Oh, to be a vagabond and never have a dime." This is immediately followed, naturally, by a hurricane, which sweeps the hero and heroine into the Yale bowl with Nathalie Crane, Sinclair Lewis, two fishing guides and a big life insurance company.

From this point the author seems to ramble a bit and there is a lot of narrative prose concerning the Hollywood diet, daylight saving and the Boston police strike. There is a duel between the hero and a cowboy, who wants him to dress up and play Indiana. While they are fighting it out, the heroine is caught in a three-alarm fire, which later turns out to be a stock market crash. She is saved by John D. Rockefeller, who climbs up a ladder and announces, "My son and I are buying at these levels."

Everybody is then reunited and the closing number is, "America, I Love You."

There is a preface on the maple-sugar industry and many footnotes on wood-carving, most of them quite subtle.

All in all Mr. Coolidge has done quite well and should be heard from later, unless the Boston censors do something about it all.

How to Prepare for Winter

See if you can go through this winter without a cold. Very few people escape having one or more severe colds each winter when, as a matter of fact, everybody ought to feel better in cold weather. There is no excuse for the sniffles and sneezes, the headaches, aching eyes, and a nose that gets red and sore.

The cold season is a bracer, and it should make one feel energetic. The cold, sparkling air rushing into the lungs stimulates them, and oxygen is more plentiful in the blood stream.

The Anglo-Saxon racial strain, which is probably the most energetic on the face of the earth, was cradled in the cold. The fact that these men had to struggle to overcome the freezing chill to keep warm, and to shelter themselves and their own from the blasts of winter, built a tougher and more stout-hearted breed. Winter is a challenge that makes the red blood flow faster. It whips up new pep, new ambition.

The reason that so many people feel distressed with the cold weather is that they reverse many of their rules of health. The snappy air of winter acts as an appetizer and makes them feel like eating far more than is needed, especially of the starches and sugars, and instead of burning these carbohydrates up by exercising, the bulk of the population stays cooped up in houses. Most of the houses are overheated, and do not get aired out enough during the day, and this leads to a congestion of the lungs because of the foul, warm, humid air. Upon veaturing out of an overheated room into the cold, the delicate, congested, linings of the nose, bronchial tubes and lungs receive a severe shock which could easily be avoided if the rooms were not overheated and fresh air was allowed to circulate freely. Often, too, people wear heavy clothing in these overheated houses, and this produces a still greater congestion of the lungs, bronchial tubes and nasal membranes.

You can easily see a demonstration of how overheating brings on a crop of colds if you watch the doctors' offices shortly after the Thanksgiving and Christmas feasts.

At the same time that more starches and rich foods are eaten, the additional mistake is usually made of using less of the fresh vegetables and salads. Since fruits are also more expensive in winter, they too are left off the menu. Anyone who is well and wants to stay well must include one or, if possible, two vegetables with the starchy meal, and at least one large salad daily. I am sure that you will find in the end that it is far cheaper to spend your budget on fruits and vegetables and keep well, than it is to spend it on cheaper starches and have to pay doctor bills.

The fruits and vegetables will give the body enough of the mineral salts and vitimins and bulk so that health can be maintained as usual. More cream, more butter and nut butters may be used freely in winter, since these are heating foods and give extra warmth. You will find it to your advantage to keep on using the citrus fruits all winter long, and you can add dried figs, prunes, dates, apples, raisins, etc., to the list if fresh fruits are available. You can also use dehydrated or canned vegetables to supplement the scarcity of fresh vegetables.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Water Blisters

Question—Mrs. S. D. F. writes: "I took a water fast for 14 days and my body cleared up from blisters which had terrible itching, but now three weeks afterwards these irritations are coming back. I do not know what to do for relief."

Answer—If your skin cleared up on the fasting regime this would indicate the correct treatment. The fact that the eruptions returned after a few weeks of eating indicates that some of the foods or combinations which you used must have been wrong. It would be a good policy to repeat another short fast and then be especially careful of your food combinations. Short daily sunbaths and cold showers, followed by an olive oil rub should be beneficial to the skin.

Fresh Figs

Question—M. R. writes: "Please give me some information regarding the food value of fresh ripe figs. And should one troubled with mucous colitis avoid figs?"

Answer—Fresh figs contain 79 per cent water, 13 per cent carbohydrates, 5½ per cent protein, and the rest mostly mineral matter. They are highly alkaline forming and are a very good food even for those troubled with mucous colitis.

Wearing Hats

Question—G. W. asks: "Does the wearing of a hat part of the time have any effect on the growth of the hair or the health in general?"

Answer—There is no doubt that tight fitting hats have some effect upon making a poor circulation of blood throughout the scalp. If a hat must be worn part of the time, it is a simple matter to choose a hat which rests lightly upon the head and does not fit so tightly as to stop circulation.

The Big Change

Further proof that football systems swing back and forth was shown in two of the big intersectional games of the season—Army and Illinois, Harvard and Michigan.

Some years ago the West concentrated on attack with the forward pass one of the leading weapons. The East concentrated largely on defense. I recall one well known Eastern coach coming back, after watching a conference championship game, with this remark: "Well, I saw a good basket ball game, but it wasn't football. They threw 57 passes in one afternoon."

But when Army met Illinois and Harvard tackled Michigan it was the two Eastern teams who did most of the passing and who excelled in this respect. It was Cagle and Wood who brought forth the admiration of western crowds. Neither Illinois or Michigan had a passer who could come close to either Cagle or Wood. In each of these games it was the Eastern team that put on the most daring and interesting offensive. It was the two Western teams that depended more upon a strong, alert defense that could help force the breaks, or wait for them.

The Mid-West had much the more interesting type of football a few years back. The East has a more interesting type today, where more time is spent upon offensive play and there is more chance taking, more daring. The one trouble is that in such football just one mistake can often do more damage than 10 fine ground-gaining plays.

Good Passers

The game has a number of fine passers this season, but three of the best are Cagle, of the Army; Wood, of Harvard, and Lom, of California. They know their stuff when it comes to chucking a football to the right spot in the right way. They are not outguessing and throwing the ball any old where it may travel through the air. They are all smart passers, as well as skillful tossers. They take away the haphazard side of this football feature.

Haphazard passing is not only dull to watch, but extremely dangerous. Marsters was another good passer before he was hurt. Good passing doesn't mean the ability to throw a football 50 yards. It also means the ability to hit a roving target down the field.

Final Stands

Two of the big traditional games of football feature Saturday's card. They are the Harvard-Yale meeting in the East and the California-Stanford grapple on the Pacific coast. These two contests always carry a thrill, regardless of the remainder of the year. They will be doubly interesting on Saturday. Harvard and Yale are both stronger than they were a year ago, and both have worked up greater interest in their play. Stanford and California are two of the best teams in the game, where this next meeting may decide the Pacific coast title.

The appearance of Booth will be a big help in the direction of greater crowd enthusiasm and the passing of Wood will add its full share to the spectacle.

Harvard this season has a better team than the Crimson's record shows. Football is the most unsound of all games, when it comes to a matter of general balance between luck and skill. On any number of occasions this year the better team has lost a game that it would have won five times out of six.

If California gets by Stanford it will be proof enough that the Golden Bears are one of the best teams of the year. They have three leading stars in Lom at back, Schwartz in the line and Norton at end. Elsan at quarter is another high-class entry. The psychology of this game belong with Stanford, but psychology doesn't always carry the day, although it can play a ruling part where two teams are fairly evenly matched.

Bennie Lom will hold a high place among the best backs of the year, if he can carry out against Stanford the same standard of play he showed against Pennsylvania and Southern California.

EACH ELEVEN IS UNDEFEATED

Nctre Dame-U. S. C. Game Great Spectacle

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

CHICAGO, Nov. 17. (AP)—It requires no extended post-mortem to discover that the main contenders for the national football championship of 1929, are Pittsburgh and Notre Dame, two of the finest and best equipped machines that the college gridirons have produced in many years.

These two mighty elevens do not meet this year, so that there may be no definite way to settle the argument if neither strikes any pitfall in the final charge or two. Each has swept along so far undefeated, piling up records for consistent brilliancy in a season otherwise marked by a startling succession of upsets, the latest of which was Stanford's defeat by little Santa Clara on the Pacific coast.

Great Grid Setting

In the greatest of all gridiron settings, Notre Dame turned back Southern California Saturday and stamped itself as a far more superior team than the score of 13 to 12 indicated, while a record throng of 123,000 spectators looked on from the wide open spaces of Soldiers field.

Pittsburgh smashed by a score of 34 to 13 the Carnegie team that had held Notre Dame three weeks ago to a single touchdown victory.

Pitt's eight straight triumph, at the expense of its city rival, removed any lingering doubt about the super-power of the Panthers as the ubiquitous Toby Uansa again ran wild.

The Hoosiers' seventh successive triumph over formidable opposition, over the "breaks" and a hard fighting Trojan squad, was something else besides a fine tonic for the health of Knute Rockne, guiding genius of the South Bend Cyclones.

Next Week's Layout

Notre Dame faces Northwestern at Evanston next Saturday and then the Army at the Yankee stadium, Nov. 30, with both of the latter outfits primed to toss everything they have at the Hoosiers in the hope of redeeming previous disappointments.

Although Pitt and Notre Dame lead the big parade, there are at least a half dozen other great teams still unbeaten as they approach the climax of the campaign. Chief among them are Purdue, new champions of the Big Ten for the first time, and Detroit, of the Middle-western group; Tennessee and Tulane, the pace-setters in the Southern conference; Texas Christian, in the Southwest; Utah, the Rocky mountain conference title holders; California, at the top of the Pacific coast conference, and St. Mary's unscored on and the only team to hold California to so much as a tie.

Purdue Going Strong

Purdue turned back Iowa by 7 to 0, to clinch the Big Ten crown while Michigan was upsetting Minnesota, 7-6, and Indiana rallying in the last period to topple Northwestern, 19 to 14.

Illinois trounced Chicago 6 to 0, but no longer has a chance to retain the honors held twice in a row. Detroit beat Michigan state 25 to 0, and added to a record marred only by a tie with Marquette, which upset Boston college in another form reversal yesterday, 20 to 6.

Tennessee eliminated Vanderbilt from the Southern conference race by a 13 to 0 victory, while Tulane kept pace by beating Sewanee, 18 to 0. Alabama handed Georgia Tech the latter's fifth defeat of the season. Florida beat Clemson and Maryland trounced V. P. I., with surprising ease.

Pitt on Top

Pittsburgh's place at the top in the East is undisputed as Cornell, the only other major team unbeaten up to Saturday, fell before Dartmouth's last period spurt 18 to 14. Yale's conquest of Princeton by 13 to 0, without the services of Albie Booth, sounded taps for the worst Tiger season under Bill Roper's regime. It also served warning for next Saturday on Harvard, which beat Holy Cross, 12 to 6.

Southwest Conference Race Changes Private Bout Between Baylor-T. C. U.

By GAYLE TALBOT JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

DALLAS, Nov. 17.—Within the short space of two hours Saturday afternoon the Southwest conference pigskin race was changed from a free-for-all into a private little affair between two mighty elevens, the Texas Christian university Horned Frogs and Southern Methodist university's air-minded Mustangs.

The championship will be decided when those two schools, whose campuses are only some 30 miles apart, clash in their annual duel Nov. 30 at Fort Worth. Southern Methodist will be seeking its third title, the Christians their first.

Thrilling Contests

Two frenzied periods, in which the action and thrills of a half-dozen ordinary games were crammed, sufficed for the Frogs and Mustangs to vanquish two staunch rivals and advance to the threshold of the throne.

Wild Second Quarter

A wild second quarter, which saw them pass their way to three touchdowns within eight minutes, enabled the Ponies to come from behind and rout the strong Baylor Bears, 25 to 6, in a spectacular game here. Texas Christian, led by the fleet Leland, pounded out a 15 to 12 triumph over the hitherto undefeated, unscored upon Texas university Longhorns at Austin. It was the eighth consecutive victory for the Frogs. All four touchdowns were scored in one period, the second.

Leland's Great Run

Leland's 90-yard sprint through the entire Texas team for the Frogs' first touchdown stood out as the greatest individual feat of the two hard-fought battles. Shelley ran half the distance of the field to score for the Longhorns in the same period. Green, substitute Frog fullback, provided the winning points of the game when he plunged across for his team's second touchdown and kicked the extra point.

Baylor Took Lead

Baylor was leading the Mustangs 6 to 0, midway of the second period of their battle here. Then presto! like that, and the daring Methodist machine had scored three touchdowns before the period ended. The Baylor craft was sunk. Bob Gilbert's long, accurate passes to Kattman provided the magic. The Mustangs have one of the greatest of a long line of great passing teams.

A third conference fray, forced into the background by two more vital conflicts, resulted in a 26 to 6 victory for the Texas Aggies over the Rice Institute Owls at Houston. Captain Tommie Mills led the Aggie assault with a pair of touchdowns and generally helped boost his team out of the cellar.

Arkansas Stars

Arkansas' two shining lights, Miller and Schoonover, scored touchdowns that gave the Razorbacks a 13 to 2 victory over Centenary college in their tussle at Fayetteville. Losses to Texas and Baylor in the first weeks of the season remain the only marks against the Porkers' record.

One game stands out in the conference schedule for the ensuing week, Baylor and Texas Christian playing at Waco.

The outcome of the Baylor-T. C. U bout will not affect the race to any marked extent. Even if the Frogs lose they will go into their game with Southern Methodist a week later with an even shot at the title. A victory could not help the Bears.

INDIANS WILL PLAY TARLETON

Hard Fought Game Will Ensue

The spirit of football will hardly have died down in Wichita Falls from over the week-end before it will flare up again on Wednesday when the Junior college Indians entertain the John Tarleton Agricultural college Plowboys here in a mid-week gridiron extravaganza. The Plowboys come here to engage with the Indians in the first of two home contests to be played in the city during the ensuing couple of weeks. The Plowboys are a husky, hard-playing outfit, and have not been defeated in a conference game so far this season. Their record against other Junior college outfits bespeaks a high-powered scoring machine.

Plowboys Big Scorers

For a good many years they have been playing heavier and superior colleges—full-fledged colleges—and coming off with favorable scores. Against the Wichita Falls Indians in 1925 they rolled up a 58-0 score and in 1926 the two teams fought in Stephenville and the Indians again lost to the Plowboy machine and to the tune of 34 to 0. But this is 1929 and the Indians have a much more formidable team than they have ever had before.

Comparative Tallies

A glance at the comparative scores of the two elevens shows that the Indians will be on the unfavorable end of the tallies. John Tarleton whipped Gainesville by 18 to 0 while the Indians lost to the Gainesville Tigers 6 to 7, which gives the Plowboys an edge of 19 points. On the other hand the dope gives the Indians a fine chance. Hillsboro trounced N. T. A. C. 14-0 and tied with Tarleton 6-6. Now Wichita Falls Junior collegians gave the N. T. A. C. eleven the battle of their life, outplayed them, but lost on a fluke, 12 to 7.

Indians Have Chance

Thus it is apparent that the Wichitans have a splendid chance with the Stephenville boys. One thing is sure and that is a scrap will ensue when the teams meet. Coach E. A. Baggett has been saying nothing and doing a great deal since the reverse at the hands of the N. T. A. C. He has not missed a day with the boys in their training and has driven them along in preparation for the coming bout. The team will put in a stiff practice Monday afternoon and go through a light workout on Tuesday, the eve of the combat.

The Tipton Tigers started the scoring in the very first minute of play and continued the rough tactics through the entire route of the game.

Sport Loose Ends

By W. G. CHAMBLESS

Sensible like, we'll take the Horned Frogs to win the 1929 Southwest conference championship. That the Frogs will capture the title is so seemingly obvious that it is almost inevitable. Thus we feel safe in hazarding the opinion that the Frogs now have it—the championship.

In the light of all that passed and repassed, went on, and transpired over the week-end we'd say that the Horned Frogs are to the Southwest conference what Clara Bow is to the movie fandom over the country—they're the "it" team.

From what we could gain from the papers and from the worst radio hookup arrangement ever heard during our natural life time, the Frogs were a much superior team to the Longhorns than the 15 to 12 score indicates. Though the teams were even as to first downs made—twelve each—the Frogs carried the fight to the Longhorns and kept the ball in Texas territory, sometimes deep and within the 20-yard line, during most of the time. Thus much of the time Texas played a "backs to the wall" game. And the Frogs everlastingly pounded and slashed the Longhorns most cruelly. We like the Frogs for this ruthless, aggressive fight of theirs. They're like the old man-mauling Jack Dempsey "type." They have the stuff of champions in their blood and bones and we believe they'll be hailed by that honorable appellation when the curtain is wrung down over the 1929 stage.

The game at Austin was also spectacular, sensational, thrilling, beautiful, exquisite, sweet or what will you. Cy Leland is a sweet running halfback if there ever was one. So is Shelly of Texas U. Neither would we scoff at Perkins, Green, Grubbs, Reese. Cy Leland is a "shooting star" on the gridiron firmament, a football expert, showing forth his handiwork, all rolled into one.

Seventeen thousand fans who saw Leland do an a la "Grange-Cagle" 90 yards from his own 10 yard line to the opposing goal line will certify to it. Thus the testimony is overwhelming and he only awaits the pronouncimento of conference judges and critics to be named on the mythical all-conference eleven.

Among the inscrutiabilities of the game at Austin Saturday is the fact that Perkins was held in reserve during so much of the time. He proved to everybody's certain knowledge that he was capable when called upon and was a most consistent ground gainer. Yet he was kept on the sidelines during much valuable time—time when the Longhorns sorely needed somebody. Yet he was held out and less consistent gainers kept in the game. Maybe Clyde Littlefield knew what he was about, but we don't and many of the other fans are in the same shape concerning the mystery.

Somehow the fiery steeds of S. M. U. got going and cut loose for four touchdowns against the Bears at Dallas. They have enjoyed an enviable reputation as a defensive team but Saturday they seemed to outdo themselves and proved that they can also play an offensive game. Saturday at Dallas, the Ponies unleashed a terrific aerial attack that startled the Bears and swept them on in the hopes of winning the conference title. Nov. 30 they will have an opportunity to demonstrate whether they can do the same thing against the Frogs at Fort Worth.

The Baylor Bears fought a game battle with the Mustangs but they were swamped with passes and a driving follow-up by the Morrisonmen. They say that the air was simply filled with passes in that second quarter and the Bears had no adequate defense against them. They looked like the man unexpectedly caught in a sudden thunder shower without an umbrella and didn't know what to do. In desperation they also went to the air but this proved a dangerous boomerang, for their passes were intercepted and turned to the Mustang advantage.

A whole flock of individual stars emerged from the fracas. Not least among them was little Jake Wilson, punter extraordinary, and all-around player for Baylor. Buffeted about over the field like a tackling dummy he took all the mighty Mustang tacklers, Choc Sanders, Marion Hammon, Bill Skeeters, had and lasted the entire distance of the game. He deserves a world of credit for a great game. For the Ponies Robert Gilbert was on the passing end of a spectacular series of tosses. He was a big factor in the Pony victory.

SANTONE TRIMS DE PAUL 19-12

Contest Is Played on Sabbath Day

CHICAGO, Nov. 17. (US)—St. Mary's university football stock, quoted at 229 yesterday, soared to 248 this afternoon when the colorful San Antonio grid machine rode over De Paul university to a 19-12 victory at Soldiers field.

Previous to today's game the Texas team had punctured the enemy for 229 points and, as a result of its latest triumph, which marked the Rattler's eighth successive win, St. Mary's remains among the country's leading universities in points scored. The 8,000 fans who witnessed the game saw St. Mary's live up to its reputation.

The Rattler's passing attack was one of the most effective seen on a local gridiron in many a day.

"WIVES! Let's talk about your husbands' cigars"

"Now he may smoke a cigar as safe as certified food,"

says

Alfred W. McCann
D. Litt., A. B., LL.D.,

famous pure food expert, long active in crusades for pure foods and sanitary factories.

"You've heard me crusade for clean foods and sanitary factories. Now let's get down to brass tacks about cigars.

"In these modern days of pasteurized milk and certified foods, the old-fashioned cigar is a disgrace. Real danger faces the man who smokes a spit-tipped cigar. That's why I'm so militant in my certification of Cremo.

"And how comforting it is to smoke a Cremo . . . to actually know that it is sanitary and safe.

"Every tobacco leaf entering the Cremo factory is scientifically treated by U. S. Government approved methods. Every sanitary precaution known to science is taken to safeguard its purity along each step of the way.

"Cremo Cigars are folded, wrapped and tipped by amazing inventions without the menace of spit . . . in factories that are models of cleanliness . . . air-flooded, sunbathed, spotlessly clean!

"This Cremo purity is sealed . . . in separate sanitary foil wrappers. Thus the method of manufacture used by Cremo insures a cigar that aims to give the same standards as found in certified milk."

Here's a suggestion deliberately made with confidence, which you smokers of imported cigars will appreciate: Try a Certified Cremo. You will recognize the superiority of Certified Cremo which starts with the choicest and tenderest leaves, ripe and mellow, and continues in goodness through a slow, expensive maturing and mellowing process . . . topped off with the finest imported wrapper! For 5 cents you get the delight of a high priced cigar, for Certified Cremo contains no scrap—no floor sweepings—all long filler—all fresh, tender leaves. Over $7,000,000 was spent perfecting the method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo that insures uniformly fine, clean cigars. Foil-wrapped . . . sanitary . . . crush-proof . . . the kind of cigar the late Vice-President Marshall must have had in mind when he said: "What this country needs most is a good 5-cent cigar."

Do you remember the old, filthy shop where the man in the window rolled the leaves with dirty fingers . . . and spit on the ends? What a far cry this is from the modern method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo.

"I certify Cremo sanitary and clean"

LAMESA MOVIE TRIAL IS SET

Attorney Queries State On Sunday Shows

Special to The Record News.

LAMESA, Texas, Nov. 17.—Sunday movies in Texas is a problem at present being delved into by Carl Roundtree, Lamesa lawyer, who is making a written survey of every county in the state concerning the opinion of the general public toward theaters. Out of the 252 counties in the state nearly 100 replies have been received in answer to a questionnaire.

The Texas legislature voted upon and passed a bill on Dec. 2, 1871, prohibiting the operation of theaters and amusement places on Sunday when admission is charged. The law was passed before the motion picture was invented.

Lamesan Charged

The survey is being made in the interest of a case in the Dawson county court at present charging Aubrey Cox, owner of the Palace theater, with operating movies on Sunday. Dyrel Kirk and Carl Roundtree, representing Cox, are to present the letters in court when the trial comes up Nov. 16. The case was brought to court once before but the date was set Nov. 16 for another trial after the jury had found that it could come to no decision.

Out of the 100 replies to the questionnaires it was found that 60 per cent of the counties heard from have dealt with Sunday movies before, with no satisfactory result.

Some of the replies reveal that about 30 counties in the state have no theaters.

Practically all of the 60 per cent of counties heard from are allowing Sunday movies regardless of the law, according to the survey. One theater in Collin county shows each Sunday afternoon and pays a minimum fine of $20 each Monday morning, it was said. The maximum fine is $50. Complaints against the Sunday movies are usually filed by the county attorney or county peace officers. Operation, however, continues after juries acquit the operatives.

Forty per cent of counties heard from have no Sunday movies and have never dealt with the situation.

Many means of showing Sunday movies without violating the law are employed by theater owners. As an example, one county shows its movies from 1 to 6 o'clock and the proceeds go toward the benefit of schools and churches. Other shows have midnight matinees.

Usually the Sunday shows are held from 1 to 6 o'clock to allow citizens to attend the evening church services after seeing their favorite stars during the afternoon.

Liberty Lovers

Comal county is a liberty-loving county, according to a reply from there, and thinks it not sinful to attend picture shows on the Sabbath afternoon.

Such counties as Tarrant, Dallas, Bexar, El Paso, McLenan, Potter and Lubbock have Sunday movies and they run wide open and are not molested.

Several cases show that the theater owners are prosecuted after complaints have been filed by citizens of the county, with the usual decision of acquittal.

Couldn't Hardly Walk Around

Waco Man Suffered Over a Year With Rheumatism and Was Hardly Able to Do Any Work—Orgatone Ends Troubles

"When I began taking Orgatone I had rheumatic pains in my arms and legs so bad I could hardly raise my right arm to my head, or walk around but it is all different now," said W. M. Cannon, 3027 Ethel street, Waco, Texas.

"You can certainly class me among the many Orgatone boosters," he continued, "for it is sure fixing me up all right. For over a year I have been bothered with rheumatism in my arms and legs and sometimes the muscles in my neck and arm would be so sore and stiff I could hardly do my work. Besides this, I was very nervous most of the time and I could hardly sleep. I lost my appetite and in a short time I was in a mighty bad, run-down condition.

"I read so much about Orgatone in the Waco papers, I decided to get a bottle and give it a trial, and after I had taken it about 10 days I noticed a decided improvement in my condition, but I could still feel a pain every now and then shooting down my arms and legs, but I kept on taking it. I am now feeling much better in every way. My appetite has improved and I sleep well at night and I can get up in the morning and feel like I used to. That is the best evidence that I can give you on what Orgatone has done for me; it shows plainly what a great medicine it really is."

Prize Winners In Hollywood Revue Contest Named

Miss Ann Glenn, 1711 Eleventh street, was declared the winner of the $5 in gold offered by the Strand theater management for the best identification of "Hollywood Revue" film stars who were shown in advertisements appearing in the Record News and Daily Times of last Thursday, according to information given Sunday.

Second prize, consisting of a pass to the Strand theater for one month, was awarded to Miss Miriam Kohn, 1801½ Tilden, and third prize, a two-weeks' pass, to Joe Uttz, 1917 Eighth street.

Two passes each were awarded to Mrs. Nancy J. Barber (78 years of age), 1809 Huff; Miss Mina Scott, 1512 Fifteenth street; Miss Cleo Bowers, 1700 Pearl; Miss Rose Tillotson, 1207 Austin; Miss Marguerite Robertson, 1707 Collins; Mrs. J. G. Murback, 2128 Harvard, and Mrs. Mabel Sharp, 2314 Tenth street.

The following were awarded one pass each: Mrs. Billie High, 1612 Fourteenth; Miss Lucille Kirkpatrick, Box 191, Estelline, Texas; Miss Mimmie Trueblood, Box 547, Childress; Miss Ruth Mary Connor, 1906 Pearl, and Mrs. Bert Baber, 2509 Tenth street.

Winners of tickets will receive their awards in Monday's mail, according to Robert Eller, manager of the Strand theater.

Eighteen of the 23 stars used in "The Hollywood Revue" were submitted for identification, each with eyes masked by a star. More than 270 answers were received. Many successfully identified the complete list, but decision was made on the basis of neatness, originality, correct spelling of names, acquaintance with the stars, etc. The most frequent "miss" was in naming Charles King for William Haines, it was said.

BIBLE CLASS HEARS DANIEL

Golden Rule Advocated in Foreign Relations

"The application of the golden rule of Christ in our conduct toward and relations with foreign races is the best and only way to handle the race problem," said Roy J. Daniel in his address before the Kay Bible class at the First Methodist church Sunday morning.

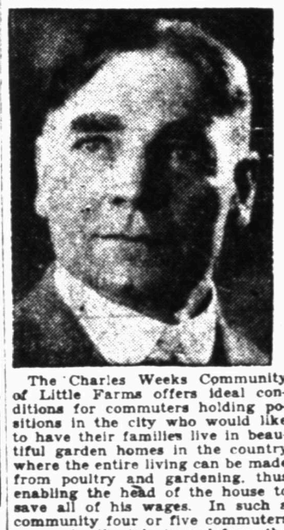

Daniel

Mr. Daniel referred to possible harmony of the world's races as the ultimate fulfillment of the barrier - breaking program inaugurated by Jesus, and cited numerous instances in Old and New Testament narratives illustrative of that process.

"Ruth's decision to return with her mother-in-law, Naomi, to the latter's native land was a striking example of love's conquest of racial differences," the speaker pointed out. "Through the Samaritan woman whom he converted at the well, Christ broke down barriers of prejudice through which he entered during the coming years to gain hundreds of followers among a race which hated the Jews. Simon Peter required rebuke and command from God before he would minister to the Gentiles, but acceded, and converted the centurion, Cornelius.

"Our country is called the melting pot of nations," continued Mr. Daniel, "because every race and every country on the earth is represented in our population. We are faced with the race problem at home, even here in Texas. To solve it, we should be able to 'write their faults upon the sands, but their virtues upon tablets of love and memory."

The Charles Weeks Community of Little Farms offers ideal conditions for commuters holding positions in the city who would like to have their families live in beautiful garden homes in the country where the entire living can be made from poultry and gardening, thus enabling the head of the house to save all of his wages. In such a community four or five commuters can make the trip to and from the city easily, comfortably and cheaply in a modern Ford car. By thus saving the entire wages in time the intensive little farm could be made entirely self-supporting and the nerve-wrecking job in the city could be given up. Visit the Model Farm in Weeks Community of Little Farms located near Westmoreland swimming pool and see what irrigating water and abundance of fertilizer will do when scientifically applied. It will be a revelation to you. If you cannot come write for free literature.

U. S. COURT TO OPEN TODAY

Atwell May Invoke Jones Law in Trials

United States Judge William H. Atwell and his retinue of court attaches will march into the 89th district court room Monday morning and formally open the fall term of federal court, which promises to be burdened with liquor cases.

With the convening of the court the effect of the Jones law on local violators of the prohibition statutes, it is indicated, will be made apparent, for although the Jones ruling was in effect at the last term of federal court here, most cases which were tried had originated previous to its enactment. The Jones law leaves to the discretion of the judge whether or not the alleged violator shall receive a maximum penalty of not to exceed five years imprisonment and a fine of $10,000.

The federal government will be represented before the court by Mrs. Sarah Menezes and E. Crippen, assistants to the federal district attorney.
