MIDDLE ATLANTIC STATES ARE SNOWBOUND

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

By H. N. S.

Governor John M. Parker of Louisiana, elected as a Democrat, is the first vice-president of the Southern Tariff association. Governor Parker is one of the most fearless men in public life. He is opposed to free raw materials. He appeared before the senate finance committee and this is what he said: "I never raised a stalk of cane nor a pound of rice in my life and have no personal interest in any tariff schedule, but unless we get 2 1-2 cents on sugar and 2 cents on rice, these industries are doomed to ruin and disaster," said Parker. "The state of Louisiana owns farms and operates them with convict labor and, as governor of the state, I, of course, have knowledge of affairs on these farms. And on this free labor basis we lose money on sugar at its present price. Unless the farmers of the South get protection on vegetable oils, livestock and products of the farm and ranch, we are going to wipe out agriculture. Our banks will not loan money to farmers and cannot afford to unless you protect farm products against the poorly paid, underfed and half-clad labor of the world. A protective tariff ought not to be a political issue. It is Americanism. I have favored it for thirty years and believe it to be a sound economic principle of government, and the only policy that will enable us to maintain American standards of living." Governor John M. Parker has started something in the Pelican state. Secretary of the Interial Albert W. Fall has no use for the Pinchots or their conservation policies. Gifford will make this discovery early in the game. Theodore Roosevelt is dead.

President Harding called these distinguished farmers to Washington as delegates to an agricultural conference: Sam H. Cowan, Louis J. Wortham and Clarence Ousley. Sam H. Cowan is an able lawyer. He does not pursue the law. He practices it. Louis J. Wortham is a politician and an editor. Clarence Ousley may have been born on a farm but he began his career in Texas as a teacher, evoluted into the newspaper game and as a writer and an orator he is known the country over. Joseph Hirsch is another delegate to the National Agricultural Conference. He is a banker who knows how to bank. Congressman Hatton W. Sumners is a delegate. Hatton began life as a lawyer and has been holding office ever since. There are three dirt farmers who are among the delegates to this conference: D. E. Lyday, George B. Terrell and J. P. Orr. R. G. Kleberg is a banker, a land owner and a cattle king, and W. W. Turney is a lawyer who accumulated a fortune as a ranchman and live stock producer. All the delegates are politicians—some of them harmless and some few well known as former members of the third house in the city of Austin as well as the city of Washington. Of course a third house is necessary and the dirt farmers, who have been thoroughly educated, know the value of continuous membership in the third house.

SAYS NEFF TO CALL SPECIAL SESSION SOON

Wichitan in Touch With State Politics Declares He Has Dependable Information to This Effect.

Correction of Error in Redistricting Measure Declared to Be One of Two Matters Presented.

Governor Neff will call a special session of the legislature, the call coming within the next week or ten days, according to information which a Wichitan in touch with state politics, and also who has just returned from a tour of the larger cities of the state, declares he has obtained from an authoritative source.

The redistricting measure and the finances of the penitentiary system will be the reasons for the call, he declares, and will be the only questions submitted.

The redistricting bill passed at the last session of the legislature is considered invalid through failure to provide for Swisher county. The measure will be held invalid in a ruling to be issued by the attorney general within the next few days, this Wichitan was informed. This will necessitate a new session of the state legislature in time to rectify this error before the coming primaries unless West Texas is for two years longer to be subjected to the inequality of representation it has had for the past twenty years, it is pointed out in this connection.

Under the new measure Wichita county has two representatives in the legislature and one representative for both this county and Wilbarger. Under the old plan Wichita and Wilbarger counties have a joint representative.

MINERS' STRIKE IS THREATENED IN OHIO FIELDS

By Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 28.—Prospects for a coal strike in southern Ohio coal fields at the termination of the present wage scale, April 1, loomed tonight when announcement was made by the operators that they have adopted a new scale providing for reductions in wages ranging from 31 to 46 2-3 per cent and abrogation of the check off system.

The proposed scale, President Lee Hall of the Ohio mine workers union declared, will not be accepted. He asserted that he has no authority to take action on the proposed scale until after the international mine workers convenion in Indianapolis, February 14.

The wage scale proposed by the operators must be accepted by the miners not later than March 1. The proposed scale, if accepted by the miners, would become effective April 1, and would continue there after until further notice.

A statement containing the proposed wage scale was issued by the operators "to our employes." It is understood that the proposed scale has not been formally submitted to the unions.

LAW IS PASSED AGAINST STRONG BEER IN POLAND

By Associated Press.

WARSAW, Jan. 28.—Beer, containing more than two and one-half per cent alcohol is to be forbidden in Poland in the future. The alcohol law passed by the diet today placed the ban on beer of higher alcohol content, limits drinking places to one per 2,500 population, prohibits saloons, licensing only cafes and restaurants, makes proprietors liable to arrest in the case of drunkenness on their premises and places a tax of 20 per cent on all liquor stocks.

A stiff fight in the diet preceded the passage of the measure, the "wet" forces presenting lengthy arguments against, as one of them phrased it, "compelling the poles to drink lager tonic as they do in the United States."

The "dry" victory is attributed largely to the activities of the seven women deputies.

FOUR MEN HOLD UP SUBURBAN GROCERY STORE

Force Proprietor and Three Others to Face Wall and Permit Search; Get $70 Cash and Checks.

Allow Customers to Retain Watches and Personal Effects; Could Give Police No Descriptions.

Forcing the aged proprietor, J. R. Morgan, a clerk and two customers to face the wall while they searched them, four hi-jackers robbed the Morgan Cash Grocery, corner of Avenue F and Polk street, Saturday night at 8:30 o'clock. According to the reports made to the police immediately after the robbery the hi-jackers secured $70 in cash from the men and several dollars from the cash drawer of the store in addition to checks estimated at $150.

According to the statement of Morgan made to the police the four men first made their presence known at the residence section grocery when they knocked loudly at the back door of the building. Mr. Morgan said that his clerk informed the men that they would have to come around to the front door, the rear door being locked.

Morgan and two customers were standing near the front door when a few seconds later they were told to face the wall by a masked bandit who held a pistol in his hands. Three men were to the rear of the leader, according to Mr. Morgan who was unable to state whether or not they were masked and armed.

The hi-jackers then proceeded to search the four men, taking all the money they could find, but leaving watches and other valuables of small worth. They also went to the cash register and secured what change and checks were there.

"Keep your backs to us until we get away from here or we will kill you," was the parting remarks of the four men as they hurriedly left the store and disappeared down the alley to the rear.

Police officers made a search of the neighborhood shortly after the robbery was reported. No arrests had been made at an early hour this morning. No accurate description could be given officers. The names of the two customers and clerk in the store were Ben Yarbrough, clerk, R. H. Ryan, 1508 Taylor street and N. Gentry were the men robbed in addition to Mr. Morgan.

SECOND TRIAL OF ARBUCKLE NEARING END

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 28.—The prosecution announced today that the end of its rebuttal testimony was "in sight" in the second trial of a manslaughter charge against Roscoe C. ("Fatty") Arbuckle, in connection with the death of Miss Virginia Rappe, motion picture actress. At the conclusion of the session, adjournment was taken until Tuesday to permit Gavin McNab, chief defense counsel, to argue before the Nevada state supreme court on Monday in opposition to an action to dissolve the divorce of Mary Pickford, motion picture star.

The prosecution announced after the adjournment today that it expected to consume all of Tuesday in its rebuttal testimony, but would surely close finally, on Wednesday. The defense has not indicated if it will put in sur-rebuttal testimony. The case is expected to reach a decision before the end of next week.

Katherline Fox, Chicago, and Mrs. Kate Hardebeck, Los Angeles, friends of Miss Rappe for more than ten years, were put on the stand by the prosecution today to rebut defense evidence that Miss Rappe died as the result of a chronic bladder ailment, which evidenced itself in hysteria and other visible paroxysms and that her death was not due to the attack charged against Arbuckle. Both testified that they had known Miss Rappe in Chicago and Los Angeles and with one exception, she never showed any visible signs of illness of any sort. The exception was testified to by Mrs. Hardebeck, who said that Miss Rappe was treated by a physician in Chicago for a short period for a supposed nervous disorder.

U. S. LAWMAKING MACHINE STOPPED BY SNOW STORM

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Forty-nine senators, a bare working majority, today fought their way through snow drifts to the capitol. Some of them found the going so difficult that they were late in arriving, but after half an hour's delay consideration of the allied debt refunding bill was renewed.

Senator Simmons of North Carolina, leader in the democratic fight on the bill, was snowbound in his suburban home, reporting a drift fifteen feet deep there.

With the storm showing no signs of abatement at 1 p. m., the senate reached an agreement to limit debate on the bill, beginning at 3 p. m. Monday and recessed until 11 a. m. that day. The senators feared they might become marooned at the capital if they remained longer.

DAUGHERTY IS SUMMONED IN LOUISIANA SUIT

Attorney General and Assistant Instructed to Appear With Correspondence Bearing on Case.

By Associated Press.

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 28.—Attorney General Daugherty and Rush L. Holland, assistant attorney general have been summoned to appear as witnesses, February 13 in contempt and disbarment proceedings against Hugh C. Fisher, United States attorney for the western district of Louisiana, John B. Files, his counsel and R. A. Giddens and in trial of charges of alleged corrupt practices on the part of Fisher, Giddens and Emile Kuntz, chairman of the republican state committee. The summons also requires that the attorney general and his assistant bring with them originals or photographic copies of all correspondence between them, Judge Jack of the western Louisiana district, Kuntz, Fisher, Giddens and others relative to Fisher's appointment and his prosecution of certain cases in court. Trial of the contempt cases is set for February 13.

This correspondence, application for the summons sets forth, is material and admissible evidence bearing on Fisher's charges against Judge Jack in which he accuses him of being a "bench politician" and otherwise "impugned the motives of the court in his opposition to the appointment of Fisher and was using his office to satisfy his own personal interests." It will also have a bearing on allegations contained in the application in the Giddens case setting forth that while the Lemoyne embezzlement case, out of which the entire proceedings developed, was pending, efforts were being made to oust W. H. Kirkpatrick as United States marshal to make way for the appointment of R. A. Giddens, a brother-in-law of Lemoyne.

STRIKERS STILL HOLDING OUT IN EAST ST. LOUIS

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—The strike in the St. Louis packing plants "has practically been off for three weeks" Dennis Lane, secretary of the Butcher Workmen's union, said today following announcement of the official calling off of the strike from St. Louis.

The men are employed at independent companies here and the action, it was explained, is independent of that of striking employes of the "big three"—Armour & company, Swift & company, and Morris & company—in East St. Louis, who voted Thursday to continue the strike.

STORM FAILS TO DIM ARMS PARLEY HOPES

Delegates Are Confident That Solution Will Soon Be Found for All Issues of Conference.

Most of Delegates Are Making Plans for Adjournment Soon After the First of February.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The Shantung tie-up and the near blizzard that paralyzed traffic and communication in Washington combined to again block the progress of the arms conference today, but the delay did not dim prevailing confidence that all the conference issues soon would be carried forward to solution.

Both of the meetings planned for today by sub-divisions of the conference were cancelled because of the storm, the delegates deciding it was impracticable to attempt to plow their way through the snow to their committee rooms. One of these meetings was to have brought the Japanese and Chinese delegates together to begin drafting a Shantung treaty and the other was a proposed session of the sub-committee considering the Chinese Eastern railway.

In the Chinese Eastern railway discussions, which are a part of the Far Eastern committee negotiations, differences of view have developed which in any case seem likely to delay a decision for several days, while the various powers fully determine their respective attitudes. The Chinese have objected to the plan for international financing for the road, worked out by a group of experts, and also the proposal for policing the line with Japanese guards.

It was said tonight that the Chinese Eastern problem might become one of the most difficult of the lesser issues of the conference, because of the situation of the road, partly in Siberian and partly in Chinese territory. The present system of administration by an inter-allied board seems certain to be perpetuated, but the financing and policing proposals are far from settled.

It became increasingly apparent today that the big question in the Shantung controversy was what degree of control is to be obtained by Japanese over the Tsingtao-Tsinanfu railroad during the period while China is paying for it. With that out of the way, it is conceded, settlement of all the other details will be easy. The Japanese seem disposed to insist that a Japanese rule with real authority be retained in both the traffic and auditing department, but the Chinese delegates are uncertain whether their government will consent to such a proposal.

While the other important subjects of the conference are awaiting for a Shantung settlement, the delegates are assessing the possibilities of the questions that must be decided afterward and are preparing the ground for a discussion of the "twenty-one demands" and other postponed questions. No one seems to think any of these will take very long, however, and the most of the conference personnel is making its plans for a final adjournment soon after the first of February.

TROOPS READY FOR ACTION IN NEBRASKA CITY

By Associated Press.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., Jan. 28.—Military authorities were preparing early tonight to put into force martial law proclaimed today by Governor McKelvie, in the four-mile precinct. The proclamation followed a request last night from local authorities for aid in restoring order following recent clashes between sympathizers with striking packing house workers and alleged strike breakers.

Kearney Hill cemetery bridge, the packing house district, Gregsport, Edgewood, the waterworks subdivision of four-mile precinct, and Nebraska City, will be under patrol, military authorities announced. These sections comprise the residence and operating districts of the packing house workers.

General military headquarters have been established in the court house here with Lieut. Col. R. G. Douglas in command.

Troops began arriving here at 2 o'clock this afternoon and the last of them arrived tonight. There are about 500 national guardsmen here tonight. Little interest was manifested in the arrival of the guardsmen, either by citizens or striking packing house workers.

ACTIVITIES ARE PARALYZED AS RESULT STORM

Officials Declare Blizzard to eB Worst Since 1889 and One of Most Severe in History.

More Than 200 Pullman Cars Are Tied Up Somewhere Between Philadelphia and Washington.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—More than twenty-four hours of continuous snow had tonight covered the middle Atlantic section, with Washington as a center from a depth of a foot to nearly 30 inches, caused the suspension of practically all business and social activity; disrupted transportation and shut most of the population in their homes.

The storm, which weather bureau officials after looking up their records, said was one of the most severe in history, and exceeded in the depth of snowfall only by the long-remembered blizzard of February, 1899, was moving slowly tonight up the coast from its position during the day off Virginia.

Reports to the weather bureau showed that the Carolinas, Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia were bearing the brunt of the storm and receiving the heaviest snowfall. Virginia cities, accustomed to only an inch or so of snow, and then of rare occurrence, were buried in many cases to the depth of a foot, while northern portions of the Carolinas still were blanketed with a fall that began Thursday.

Washington, however, appeared to be the center of the heavy fall, the weather bureau measurements taken late in the day showing the depth to be closely approaching two and a half feet and the record fall of three feet established in '99. All records for twenty-four hours' fall had been broken at 6 o'clock, the hour at which the storm struck Washington yesterday.

The national capital with its heavy and constantly increasing blanket was virtually paralyzed as to activities of all kinds in much the same manner as in 1909, when a lighter fall, but accompanied by rain and sleet, forced abandonment of elaborate plans for the inauguration of President Taft.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 28.—With a six-inch depth recorded by the local weather bureau at 6 o'clock the snow tonight continued to fall in the Philadelphia vicinity.

Traffic has been hard hit by the storm. Only one train has reached Philadelphia from Washington today,

FARM BUREAU HEAD PRAISES RECENT MEET

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The national agricultural conference which closed its sessions last night after adopting recommendations designed to alleviate present farm depression and prevent recurrence of such a condition was hailed as "the most far-reaching conference of farmers ever held," in a statement issued tonight by J. R. Howard, president of the American farm bureau federation, one of the largest farmers' organizations.

The recommendations of the conference were endorsed by Mr. Howard tonight and during the day were made the basis of study by Secretary Wallace and other officials upon whom will devolve the task of making them effective. Referring to President Harding's suggestion in opening the conference that the farmers of the nation seek to unite in co-operative organizations, Mr. Howard in his statement said:

"The farm bureau will undertake to organize all the farmers of the nation and unite them into strong commodity marketing associations which will improve the distribution of food to the lasting benefit to both consumers and producers. We want to bring the eater and the grower closer together."

"The agricultural conference will go down into history as the most far-reaching conference of farmers ever held," the statement said. "The topmost feature of course, was the address of the president of the United

SCORES INJURED IN CATASTROPHE AT WASHINGTON, D. C.

Collapse Due to Weight of Snow on Roof; Firemen and Soldiers Work Frantically to Save Injured; Thousands Are Prevented From Rushing to Wreckage.

Ruins Present Scene of Horror With Once Supporting Pillars Standing Stark and Ragged As Monument to the Dead Lying Beneath Debris and Snow.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Seventeen persons are known to have been killed and scores injured tonight in the collapse under the weight of two feet of snow on the roof of the Knickerbocker theater, a motion picture house located in the heart of Washington's fashionable northwest section.

Two hours and a half after the crash, which occurred about 9 o'clock, definite information as to the number of dead and injured was wholly lacking as well as estimates of the number of those in the theater at the time—these estimates ranging from 150 to 500, although the theater, one of the most elaborate motion picture houses in the city, has accomodations for more than 2,000 spectators.

The theater, situated in the center of Washington's fashionable northwest section, presented a scene of horror an hour after the roof fell beneath a weight of snow heavier than any to which it had been subjected since its erection.

The roof, to those unable to push through police lines, seemed to rest almost on the floor, scarcely more than a foot and a half separating the lower-most debris and the floor level. The ruins were covered with snow from the roof. Standing up through the wreckage, however, stark and ragged, were once supporting pillars. The site of the theater at street intersections was illuminated by the glow of are lights.

Firemen and soldiers, hastily rushed from Walter Reed military hospital and barracks, endeavored to find an opening in the ruins but heavy steel and concrete defied their efforts, excepting when reinforced with picks and gas and acetylene torches. Moans of the injured rent the air together with the harsh commands of fire chiefs and the military.

Beyond the lines first established by the police and later taken over by soldiers, thousands gathered, the news having spread over the capital like wildfire.

Many were aroused by the clanging of fire gongs as fire apparatus was rushed to the scene from every fire station in the city.

Those beyond the fire lines, included men and women known throughout the country—senators, representatives, ambassadors, ministers and society leaders. Numbers of those behind the lines had friends whom they believed to have been in attendance at the theater when the crash and they appealed to those maintaining the lines either to let them through or give them some news of the dead or injured.

STATEMENT IS ISSUED BY OWNERS OF THEATER

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The board of directors of the Crandall company, owners of the Knickerbocker theater, tonight issued the following statement:

"We are stunned by this catastrophe.

"The Knickerbocker was the pride of our circuit, constructed at no limit of cost before the war when the best materials and engineering brains were secured to make this house a model of theater architecture and construction. The theater was subjected to and passed every municipal and government inspection and test.

"We cannot find words to express the depths of sympathy we feel for those bereaved by this appalling catastrophe.

"We would infinitely rather have abandoned all our enterprises than that a single life should have been lost or any individuals maimed or injured."

The Dead

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The names of only eleven of the seventeen persons who are known to have lost their lives in the Knickerbocker theater catastrophe have as yet been ascertained. H.

Large Crowd Attends Hedley Poultry School

Special to the Record News.

HEDLEY, Tex., Jan. 28.—Freezing weather failed to hold down the attendance of the one day poultry school here today. A large crowd of farmers and poultry raisers heard the specialists lecture at the morning session. L. A. Stroud, chairman of local poultry school committee announced in his talk that both local banks had agreed to make loans to farmers and poultry raisers for the purpose of buying pure bred chickens, eggs for hatching and for improving the erection of buildings necessary for poultry raising.

The Hedley Poultry Breeders association, organized less than a month, has 300 members and have made definite plans for an annual poultry show. H. B. Oats agricultural agent for the Fort Worth & Denver railway who had charge of the special poultry exhibit car said in his talk at the school that it was not the purpose of the poultry education campaign to convert farmers into poultrymen but to induce every farmer to keep a flock of standard bred poultry. Miss Myrtle Murray poultry specialist and F. W. Kasmeir of the A. & M. college extension service discussed farm poultry keeping for profit.

Debs Asks for Information and Gets an Earful

By Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 28.—Governor Warren T. McCray, in a reply made public today to Eugene V. Debs, socialist leader, accepted responsibility for remarks in which the governor was quoted as saying: "I am sorry, extremely sorry, that the one arch-traitor of our country should live in the state of Indiana. I believe that he will be taught a lesson by the American Legion."

Debs in a letter asked if the remarks as published in an Indianapolis newspaper were correct.

The governor's reply follows:

"In reply to your favor, I wish to say that in my brief remarks at a recent meeting of the George Dewey post, American Legion, I did not speak from notes. What I had to say at that time was entirely extemporaneous and therefore I am not sure of the language quoted in the paper which you report, but in the main it was what I said.

"As my authority for the statement, I refer to the fact that you were tried and convicted in the federal court and served three years of the sentence imposed."

STYLE LEADS TO GRAVE.

MARTIN'S FERRY, Ohio, Jan. 28.—"Thousands die for fashion," declared Dr. C. B. Wingerd, sermonizing on dress reform. "Bare breasts, silk hose, low shoes, with a chic fur coat send thousands into the grave. In the high school dress leads to snobbery and caste, and many a poor man's daughter, with birth, brains and character even in excess of others, cannot go because of expenses."

He does not allow his social functions to interfere with his ardent pursuit of the little balls he sends flying. He is one of the first golfers on the links every morning.

NEW TEXAS COMPANY PRODUCER EXTENDS BUNGER HALF MILE

An extension of about a half mile to the southwest from the Bunger pool is effected by the Texas company's No. 1 Bunger, which is a hundred barrel producer, from the top of the 1900 foot sand. Drilling is continuing on the well, according to Saturday reports. This well is about a half mile from the nearest producers on the Grimshaw. It is also the Texas company's first completion in the Bunger pool.

Saturday reports from the Herron well of the Penn Cities Oil and Gas company showed a second cap rock encountered under the first five feet of sand, and more sand when the rock was drilled through. The hole is reported caving badly.

MOTOR COPS TAKE 74 IN PAST WEEK

Seventy-four arrests were made by the motorcycle squad of the police force during the week ending Saturday night, according to the weekly report of Captain Eyerly. The squad consists of three men.

According to the report 20 motorists were arrested for speeding, six for open mufflers, three for reckless driving and several for wrong parking and other violations of the traffic laws. The remaining arrests made by the motorcycle officers were for various offenses including vagrancy, theft, gambling and violation of the prohibition laws.

Local automobile owners are paying more attention to the regulations regarding parking in the downtown section according to Captain Eyerly. He asks that greater attention be paid to the parking places as marked off along the curbs of the streets in the business section.

Automobile owners are warned that every effort is to be made for a strict enforcement of the traffic rules. Motorcycle officers will start arresting owners for failing to have their 1922 license tags this week, beginning the first of the month.

while the Pennsylvania railroad officials reported more than 200 Pullman cars tied up between here and Norfolk, Va.

All shipping in the Philadelphia port has likewise been tied up. No vessels were moving in or out of the harbor today and the movement within the harbor was largely confined to ferries.

The gale that swept Philadelphia today reached a velocity of forty miles an hour. Much of the snow that fell during the day was picked up and deposited in doorways and side streets, seriously impeding the downtown traffic. Toward 6 o'clock service was suspended on several street car lines, necessitating long waits on the part of the hundreds of people starting for their homes.

STUFF LUCK! MAN LOST HIS LIQUOR AND BRIDE ALSO

By Associated Press.

BOSTON, Jan. 28.—Antonio Silva, arrested at Springfield two weeks ago with six quarts of moonshine that he was bringing to his own wedding and held in jail there since, lost not only his liquor, but his bride.

When he appeared in the federal court here yesterday on a charge of illegally possessing liquor, Silva pleaded guilty and the court was about to declare sentence when the prosecuting attorney announced that Silva's bride-to-be had married another man, meantime.

Judge Peters said Silva had apparently suffered almost enough and declared the sentence to be one more day in jail.

Farm Bureau Head Praises Recent Meet

States and the commitments which it contained of the administration's attitude toward agriculture. Probably no chief executive of the nation has previously indicated so deep and intelligent interest in the farmers' affairs. President Harding recognized the bad state of agriculture at the present time; stressed the outstanding importance of agriculture in our national life; showed that the farmer must have a credit system adapted to his needs; asserted that lasting improvement is to come only through the development of co-operative marketing; favored a scientific limitation of production and pointed out the dignity of the profession.

"The co-operative marketing movement as fostered by the American farm bureau federation is a protest expressed in action against excess margins and distributive costs. It is no new thing. It has been carried on successfully in Europe for hundreds of years. Within less than fifty years, Denmark, through co-operative marketing, has reduced distribution costs so that the producers receive 72 cents of the consumers' dollar, more than twice as much as we get here, and through co-operative marketing has rebuilt her entire national prosperity.

Cattle Thieves Are Cowed.

NORFOLK, Neb., Jan. 28.—Cattle rustling in this part of the cow country has gone entirely out of style as a result of threats of livestock owners to return to the old-time western methods of dealing with thieves. Cattle thefts in the vicinity of Norfolk were estimated at $50,000 in 1919. They dropped in zero in 1920, with the organization of the Owners' Protective association.

NATION HAS OIL FOR ONLY TWENTY YEARS

Geological Survey Experts Estimate Available Supply at Only 9,150,000,000 Barrels Under Ground.

Also Declare United States Must Depend More and More on Foreign Countries for Oil.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—A canvass of the oil reserves of the country has convinced the United States Geological Survey that the available supply is only 9,150,000,000 barrels. This is enough to satisfy the present requirements of the country for only twenty years, provided the oil can be taken out of the ground as fast as is wanted.

The experts of the survey estimate, however, that the oil cannot all be discovered, much less taken out, inside of twenty years, and assert that the time is rapidly approaching when this country will have to depend more and more on foreign countries to obtain all the oil it needs. They warn the nation that it must avoid waste of oil and make an urgnt plea for the development of new methods for the extraction of every ounce of oil from the earth.

"Unlike our reserve of coal, iron, and copper," the Directors of the survey declared tonight in announcing the results of the oil canvass which it has just finished in co-operation with the foremost oil geologists of the country, "which are so large that apprehension of their early exhaustion is not justified, the oil reserve of the country, as the public has frequently been warned appears adequate to supply the demand for only a limited number of years. The annual production of the countdy is now almost 500,000,000 barrels, but the annual consumption, already well beyond the half-billion mark, is still growing.

"For some years we have had to import oil, and with the growth in demand our dependence on foreign oil has become steadily greater, in spite of our own increase in output."

Results Considered Startling.

The survey just completed embraces a careful study of producing probable and possible oil-bearing regions in the United States, and the results are considered startling by the eminent geologists identified with the work. The canvass was made by a joint committee composed of members of the United States Geological Survey and the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. It resulted in an invantory estimate that 9,000,000,000 barrels of oil recovered by means now in use remained in the ground in this country on Jan. 1, 1922.

The estimated oil reserves of the United States for local areas, fields or districts have been consolidated in the inventory by states, groups of states, or broad regions in the case of non-productive states, as follows:

States	Millions of Barrels
New York	100
Pennsylvania	250
West Virginia	200
Ohio	190
Indiana and Michigan	70
Illinois	440
Kentucky, Tennessee, Northern Alabama and Northeastern Mississippi	175
Missouri, Iowa, North Dakota, Wisconsin and Minnesota	40
Kanas	425
Oklahoma	1340
Northern Louisiana and Arkansas	525
Texas, except Gulf Coast	670
Gulf Coast Texas and Louisiana	2100
Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona	50
Wyoming	525
Montana, Nebraska and South Dakota	100
Utah, Nevada, Oregon, Washington and Idaho	80
California	1350
Eastern Gulf, Coastal Plain and Atlantic Coast States	10
Total	9150

The committe responsible for the original preparation of the estimates and for the adjustment and revision of the results in joint conference, comprised F. W. DeWolf, state geologist of Illinois; W. E. Wrather of Dallas, Rosewell H. Johnson of Pittsburgh, Wallace A. Pratt of Houston, Alexander W. McCoy of Bartlesville, Okla., Carl H. Beal of San Francisco, S. T. Lupton of Denver, Alexander Deussen of Houston, K. C. Heald of Washington, and G. C. Matson of Tulsa, Okla., representing the American Association of Petroleum Geologists; and, for the Federal Survey, Davis White, chief geologist, chairman; W. T. Thom Jr., A. E. Fath, Kirtley F. Mather, R. C. Moore, state geologist of Kansas, and K. C. Heald. The latter represented both the survey and the association.

These men were assisted in subcommittees by a large number of the leading oil geologists of the country, who were especially familiar with the regions considered.

Calculations "Reasonably Reliable"

"The calculations of the oil reserves in the proved and discovered fields are reasonably reliable," the director of Survey said, "and those for regions regarded by the geologists as embracing 'probable' future oil fields are based on all the available data and are entitled to high respect, but the committee wishes it most clearly understood that the estimates of oil in 'possible' territory are absolutely speculative and hazardous, and that, although they represent the best judgment of the geologists, they nevertheless may be, at least in part, wildly erroneous. The questions involved are not only how much a particularly doubtful region will yield, but whether it will furnish any oil whatever.

"On the whole, the estimates are undoubtedly the best that have ever been made for the United States, and better than have hitherto been prepared for any oil country or district of the world.

"Of the total estimated oil reserves of the United States, amounting in round numbers to 9,000,000,000 barrels, 5,000,000,000 barrels may be classified as oil in sight and 4,000,000,000 barrels as prospective and possible. Rather more than 4,000,000,000 barrels should be assigned to the heavy-oil group. These oils will be recovered mainly in the Pacific Coast, Rocky Mountain and Gulf States. The contents of the Lima-Indiana region, which yields oil of a distinctive type, are estimated at 40,000,000 barrels. In general, the so-called paraffin oils of moderate and high grade, as contrasted with the heavier oils, amount in all to about 5,000,000,000 barrels. The estimated reserves of high grade oils of the Appalachian States are about 725,000,000 barrels.

"The estimated reserves are enough to satisfy the present requirements of the United States for only twenty years, if the oil could be taken out of the ground as fast as it is wanted. Should these estimates fall even so much as 2,000,000,000 barrels short of the actual recovery that error of 22 per cent would be equivalent to but four years' supply, a relatively short extension of life.

Cannot Be Pumped in Twenty Years.

"However, the committee expressly descries the too frequent assumption that inasmuch as the estimated reserves appear to be sufficient to meet the needs of the country at the present rate of consumption for twenty years, therefore, the reserves will be exhausted at the end of that time, or at most a few years. This assumption is absolutely misleading, for the oil pools will not all be found within that length of time, drilling will be spread over many years as the pools are found, and the wells cannot be pumped dry so quickly.

"Individual wells will yield oil for more than a quarter of a century, and some of the wells will not have been drilled in 1950. In short, the oil cannot all be discovered, much less than from the earth in twenty years. The United States is already absolutely independent upon foreign countries to eke out her own production, and if the foreign oil can be produced this dependence is sure to grow greater and greater as our own fields wane, except as artificial petroleum may be produced by the distillation of oil shales and coals or some substitute for petroleum may be discovered.

"All the estimates, except the oil recovered from the ground by present methods, but it is practically certain that the percentage of oil to be recovered from the American oil fields will be vastly increased by the application of new and improved methods of recovery. At present, however, this phase of production may be regarded as in the experimental stage. Little has been definitely determined as to the applicability of 'air pressure,' 'water drive,' 'gas pressure,' vacuum extraction,' and other methods to different regions, with their variation in conditions, or to the increase in production to be counted on from the use of these methods. The committee therefore feels that at present any estimates of such possible additional recoveries would probably contain errors enormously greater than those inherent in the estimates made on the basis of methods now in use.

"In only one region are the geologic conditions so well known and the experience with improved methods on a commercial basis so extensive and so long continued as to justify the formulation of estimates, based on the results obtained. This is the region in northwestern Pennsylvania and southwestern New York, where the 'water drive' is now employed to obtain oil from the Bradford sand, which was supposed to be largely exhausted.

"Under the peculiar conditions there the use of this method will result in the recovery of a large quantity of oil that cannot be recovered by ordinary methods of production. Allowance for the additional oil thus recovered has, therefore, been made in the estimates. It has already been found, however, that this method is not applicable to some other districts, and accordingly no allowance has been made for possible additional recovery through its use where its suitability to the local conditions has not been actually demonstrated.

"In the light of these estimates as to the extent of our supplies of natural petroleum, the joint committee points out the stern obligation of the citizen, the producer and the government to give most serious study to the more complete extraction of the oil from the ground, as well as to the avoidance to waste, either through direct losses or through misuse of crude oil or its products."

Ku Klux Klan Distributed Over $1,000,000 in Charity Last Year, Announces the Imperial Wizard

Special to the Record News.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 28.—William Jospeh Simmons, Imperial Wizard of the Knights of Ku Klux Klan announces that more than $1,000,000 was distributed in charities by the organization in 1921, the gifts ranging all the way from financial assistance to persons in distress to large donations to colleges, schools and university. Following is the text of Mr. Simmon's report:

Figures just compiled by officials of the organization show that the Klan's charitable activities were carried on in every state in the union and that probably more money was passed out to needy cases by the local organizations during the year than by any other similar fraternal institution.

During the long period of unemployment and its accompanying hardships and suffering special committees of Klansmen in every locality sought out the most worthy cases and made fitting contributions. Institutions, such as schools and churches needing money to increase their comfort or efficiency were remembered in a similar way and the calling by death of the head of a family or father was the motive for Klan charity.

Thousands of dollars were subscribed by the Klans for various funds being raised in their communities for good causes. In hundreds of cases it was the Klansmen who supplied American flags, and bibles to schools, made needed donations to colleges and, in many instances, supplied money necessary to enable worthy students to pursue further their studies in such institutions.

An outstanding feature of the Klan's charitable activities was the method in which aid was extended. Invarinbly the check was sent as a gift from the organization, the name of no individual being made public in any instance. Local newspapers were used as the medium through which money was sent in not a few places, the money being sent to the editor, or slipped beneath his door during the night with an accompanying note requesting the disposition desired.

The pursuit of charity has become a paramount issue with members of the Ku Klu Klan, and wherever the organization is active, assistance will be rendered to the needy.

Taxpayers Boost Own Tax.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Jan. 28.—The first man visited in Morgan town by the assessor, when he started out to revalue all the property in the city last week, voluntarily jumped his valuation from $19,000 to $47,000, or a boost of nearly 150 per cent. The next man increased his valuation from $47,000 to $98,000. Estimates of increase on all city and county valuation place it not less than 100 per cent above former assessments.

SAYS PARRISH STRONG WITH SOUTH TEXANS

Local Man Says Feeling Is Apparent Against Sending Another North Texas Man to U. S. Senate.

Unless a South Texan gets into the race for the United States senate, and strenuous efforts are being made to bring this about, the considerable support already in evidence in that section for Congressman Lucian W. Parrish is likely to assume overwhelming proportions, a Wichita Falls man recently in South Texas, says he was informed by political writers for the leading dailies in that section.

A fairly strong feeling against the sending of another North Texan back to the senate is in evidence in the southern part of the state, where some think that the North Texans have had something or other of a monopoly of both seats for entirely too long. While none of the present candidates for the place, except R. L. Henry of Waco, live south of Dallas, according to this man, those in South Texas who have this feeling classify Parrish more as a West Texan than a North Texan and are accordingly inclined to support him.

Jimmie Maxwell To Make Race For Sheriff

Announcement of his candidacy for the nomination for sheriff was made Saturday by Jimmie Maxwell, for the past several years a scout for the Texas company in this section, and for the more recent few months oil reporter for the Wichita Daily Times.

A strict enforcement of all laws, careful and faithful attention to duties, and a business like and courteous conduct of the office comprise the platform on which Jimmie asks for the nomination.

Particular stress is laid by him on a pledge that if elected he will employ as deputies only men of the highest character and integrity, and that this administration of the office, if the voters see fit to choose him for it, will never inflict on the county anything remotely resembling the "shotgun deputy" type.

Mr. Maxwell has been a resident of Wichita Falls during the past 12 years during which he has made a wide circle of friends, both in Wichita Falls and over the county. Particularly is this true with regard to the oil fraternity, and with reference to the Electra field, where most of the time while he was scouting for the Texas company was spent.

During his residence here he has made the reputation of a clean, careful citizen who has a full respect for the law, a combination which he believes will go far toward constituting material for a good sheriff.

LANDLORDS TO PRESENT CASES TO COMMITTEE

Several Plan to Attend Monday Afternoon Session; Residence and Apartment Rents to Be Heard.

A number of the landlords whose tenants have lodged complaints regarding rent contracts are planning to attend the hearing of the Chamber of Commerce rent commission Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when the landlord's side of the case is to be heard, it was learned Saturday.

The beginning of the hearing on residence and apartment rents is also scheduled for this meeting, and is expected to bring out a considerable attendance at the meeting.

PAVING IS HELD BACK BY WEATHER

Due to cold weather, only 1500 feet of pavement was completed during the last week on the Burkburnett road. With the temperature hovering around freezing temperature, most of the week contractors did not care to risk the loss from frozen paving and the two mixers were only operated a part of each day.

Approximately 7,000 feet of the paving on the road has now been completed. The total is about equally divided between the south end of the road and a midway point where the central proportioning is located.

It is expected that the south mixer during the coming week will reach the Frieberg cut-off. No decision has been made by the county commissioners court as yet as to whether the cut-off will be paved pending the decision of the court of civil appeals on an injunction suit which seeks to restrain the county commissioners' court from paving the new route. A hearing will be held February 4 on the injunction suit. It is not anticipated that a decision will be announced until a week later.

TO DISCUSS GASOLINE ORDINANCE

Privisions and requirments of the proposed gasoline ordinance, embodied in the form of a tentative draft, will be read and discussed at a meeting to be held in the Chamber of Commerce assembly room at 10:30 Monday morning, according to an announcement from the office of Dr. A. H. Douglas, city chemist.

This proposed ordinance will contain specifications for the grading of gasoline and lubricating oils sold at retail in the city.

All persons interested in the sale of these articles are urged to be present at the meeting, for it is desired that the provisions be fully discussed before the matter is presented to the city council.

Dancigers Get Second Well in Mexia Field

The Danciger Development Syndicate has just brought in its second big well at Mexia, according to word received by the local office. The new well, the No. 1 Koenig, was brought in Thursday flowing 5,000 barrels and the Saturday reports from the field showed it holding up to the flush production.

There are two more derricks up on this lease and the company is preparing to develop this property immediately, as well as other property on which they have four rigs running.

Wichita Market House

—I have leased the building at 707-709 Scott Avenue and will open about Feb. 1.

—We have one of the best market men in Wichita Falls. We also have rented the fruit and vegetable stand to, beyond question, the most up-to-date man in his line that it's ever been our fortune to know. Some of the fruit men will tell you frankly that he can sell for less than they can buy.

—We will have a first class grocery store, where everything will be sold at the very lowest price, consistent with good business.

—We still have a few very valuable concessions at a reasonable rent, bakery, butter, eggs, milk, cheese, dressed poultry, fish, oysters, home made candies, peanut and popcorn, etc.

—See me at the store Monday. Better come early as the choice stands and spaces will be taken early.

—We are for Wichita Falls, and we expect to have a market that we all will be immensely proud of.

—Come in and let me get better acquainted and exchange ideas.

"If Winter Comes—There's the Fan!" Says Milady

WITH the mid-winter season close by, with its dances and dinners, the well dressed woman is devoting more attention to the accessories of the evening costume. And this season there are many new accessories of engaging design.

Take for example, one of the latest fads—the fan. In the upper sketch is shown a beautiful fan of amber frame, flounced with black Chantilly lace. At first it may seem absurd—but one may be comfortably sure that not only will it cause a fluttering gossip, but will be in perfect taste as well. Of course, it is taken for granted that discretion will be used, for it is quite essential that it is carried only by a rather willowy person, gowned in clinging silks or satins.

For the more conservative, the jade and black fan of sequins is suggested. This fan carried by Gloria Swanson, starring in the Paramount picture, "Her Husband's Trademark," lends a pleasing yet brilliant touch to any costume.

Another clever innovation in fans, acceptable for the evening costume, is the tiny fan shown in the sketch with the gown. This is of orchid tulle, and is finished off with long flues of orchid ostrich feather, as is the tassel at the end of a long silk cord.

Miss Swanson, ever an enviable type for the designer of Spanish costumes, is in possession of this entrancing gown of black velvet and dull silver lace, decidedly reminiscent of a Velasquez painting. The skirt is built on bouffant lines, and is set to a tight bodice, which has a round yoke fitting over the top of the arm and so forming a covering for the sleeves. Regardless of the class in which this gown belongs, it has an uneven hem, and is slashed at the left side, thus leaving reason for trimming the edges with dull silver galloon. A further Spanish touch is furnished by a vivid red rose.

SMILES.

To man these words mean the deepest woe—
His wife's proud boast "I told you so!"

Hygiene and Care of the Baby

If the house is small, it is better to do without parlor which is not often used and give one room to the little folks who will use it every day.

Sunshine is as necessary for babies as for plants. A baby not given sunshine will droop and pine just as the plant does. Therefore, choose a sunny room for the baby's room and one which has windows and doors on opposite sides so that a continual abundant supply of fresh air may be obtained.

The baby's room should be kept comfortably warm in winter. Furnace heat is better than stoves. Oil and gas stoves exhaust the air in a short time. An open grate is a great convenience both for the additional heat and because it helps to keep the air of the room in circulation. The floor should be bare so that it can be kept clean by wiping it with a damp cloth or dust-mop. A few washable rugs may be added. Plain white sash-curtain should be provided at the windows, as they can be laundered frequently.

FRESH AIR: Fresh air is essential for the healthy baby. To obtain the best air without drafts put baby's bed in the middle of the room. The windows may be opened from the top. They should be screened against flies and disease-carrying insects. Windows facing the hot sun should be provided with awnings. In the winter time, plentiful supply of fresh air without drafts may be obtained by tacking thin muslin or cheesecloth over the open windows or on the window screen. This also keeps out particles of coal, soot, dirt and snow.

All the furnishings for the baby's room should be of the simplest kind and such can be wiped readily with a damp cloth or laundered and so kept free from dust. The equipment may include a screen to protect baby from drafts, a low chair without arms for the mother, baby scales, bath tub, basket for toilet articles and plain table. A chest of drawers or bureau is a welcome convenience.

BED: Baby's first bed may be made in an ordinary clothes basket, lined with a sheet. This can be picked up and carried about easily, which is an advantage. It should be placed on a chair or a box, never on the floor.

A feather pillow is not suitable for a mattress or for the baby's head. Use an old, soft comforter or ordinary mattress of hair, felt or cotton, protected by rubber sheeting, light cloth or paper blanket. Since rubber or oil cloth is hard and uncomfortable, a soft washable pad should be used directly underneath the sheet. Table felting makes an excellent pad for this purpose.

The young baby will breathe more easily and take a larger supply of air into his lungs if no pillow is used. A clean soft folded napkin may be placed under his head. Toward the end of the second year, a thin hair pillow may be used.

BASKET: The basket for the baby's toilet is best of white enamel. An ordinary wicker basket painted white is better than one lined with cotton or silk material and decorated with ribbon bows.

The supplies for this basket should be of the first quality. It is better to have a few good things than a lot of material which will be used and of poor quality.

The basket should contain:
Pure White Castile Soap.
Unscented talcum powder.
Olive Oil or tube vaseline.
Boric acid, powder and solution.
Four dozen safety pins of different sizes.

BATHING THE BABY.

Baby must be bathed at least once a day. During the hot weather, one or two extra sponge baths may be given. For the first few months the temperature of the bath should be 90 degrees to 95 degrees F. By the end of the first year, it may be lowered to 80 or 85 degrees. The temperature of baby's bath may be tested with the bare elbow, never with the hand. The water should feel comfortably warm to the elbow.

Equipment: Baby's own tub, soap, towels and washrag, bath thermometer, powder, clean clothes, chair and table. All these and his full set of clear clothing should be arranged beforehand.

Face: After undressing baby, wrap him in a small blanket, wash the face, head and ears, being careful not to get soap into his eyes and mouth. Very little soap is needed for baby's skin. It is most important that the skin should be rinsed thoroughly. Pat the skin dry with a soft towel, taking care to dry well back of the ears and in the soft folds of the neck.

Undressing: To undress baby, take the clothes off over his feet. If held on the lap, a large bath towel should be placed across the lap to prevent his tender skin coming in contact with a rough or worsted dress and to receive him when he is lifted out of the tub. A more convenient way of bathing the baby is to undress him on a table instead of the lap. After the bath, dress him as rapidly as possible. If the weather is cold, take care not to expose him unnecessarily.

The Bath: Care should be taken never to plunge the baby into water that is too hot or too cold, not to let him fall and strike the tub or in any way to get frightened at his daily bath. If the bathing is done properly, baby will enjoy his bath so thoroughly that the giving it will be a pleasure.

Soap the entire body thoroughly, then place him in the bath, holding him with the left forearm under the neck and shoulders, the left hand under his left arm, and lifting the feet and legs with right hand. Support the baby while in the tub with the left hand and arm. Sponge the entire body with the right hand, then lift the baby out and wrap him in a bath towel. Dry carefully with the soft towel patting the skin gently. Never rub the baby's tender skin with anything less smooth than the palm of the hand.

Bran Baths: When there is any irritation of the skin, such as chafing or prickly heat, bran may be substituted for soap. Make a cotton bag of cheese cloth or other thin material and fill loosely with bran. Soak the bag in the bath water, squeezing it until it becomes milky.

Powder: A little pure talcum powder may be used in the creases and folds of the skin, under the arms and around the buttocks, but it should not be used too freely as to clog the pores of the skin. A highly perfumed powder should not be used. Powder should never be applied until the skin is thoroughly dry.

BABY'S CLOTHING.

In dressing the baby, he should be handled as little as possible. A little baby's body is very tender and if handled roughly or too much, he will be made very uncomfortable. All the clothing should be drawn on and off over the feet instead of over the head.

When he is dressed completely, baby has on a band, shirt, diaper, skirt, dress and bootees. None of this clothing should be heavy or stiff. It is better to dress a baby lightly and slip on a little short jacket for cool mornings and evenings. When baby is a few months old, it is a good plan on a hot summer day to take off all his clothing for a few minutes in the middle of the day and allow him to roll and play on a bed.

Elaborate or fancy trimmed garments have no place in a little baby's wardrobe. Both mother and baby are better off without them, especially if the mother must care for the garments herself. Lace about the neck of a little baby's dress is liable to irritate the tender skin and cause the child a great deal of discomfort, as well as starched garments. Sometimes these irritations are difficult to heal.

For the first few weeks of life, the new baby does little but eat, sleep and grow. He needs many clean clothes, and these should be of the simplest and most comfortable kind.

The following are all that are necessary:

SLIPS: For every day wear, there should be 6 plain white slips. These should be cut by the kimono sleeve pattern and tape run through a facing around the neck and sleeves. If they are made twenty-one inches long from shoulder to hem, they will not need shortening. They should never be made longer than twenty-seven inches. Two Sunday slips may be made with bishop sleeves and a little embroidery on the front. Set-in sleeves are more difficult to put on a little baby. For wear under the slips, baby needs also 4 flannel skirts, princess style. For hot weather these may be made of the very lightest weight flannel or part flannel and cotton.

SLEEPING GARMENTS: Baby needs 4 "nighties" or sleeping bags of white outing flannel or knitted materials. For winter wear, the sleeves of the nightie may be made two inches longer and the bottom eight inches longer. Draw tapes may be run through the sleeves and the hem and baby's hands and feet protected from the cold.

Sleeping bags are made thirty-three inches long and twenty-seven inches wide, open down the front. The baby is laid in and the bag buttoned up. He can be changed without taking him out of the bag.

Bands: Three flannel abdominal bands made of soft, white unhemmed flannel, five or six inches wide and from fourteen to eighteen inches long. They should be wide enough to protect the abdomen and not wide enough to wrinkle. They should go once and a half around the baby's abdomen, lap across the front and pin at the side. After the cord is healed and these may be replaced by there knitted abdominal bands with shoulder straps and a tab to pin to the diaper. These should be made the lower part of wool and the upper part of cotton. This kind of band will not slip up around the baby's chest and make him uncomfortable. The band may be discarded altogether in hot weather.

Shirts: Three shirts, wool and cotton, or wool and silk, never all wool. For the very hottest weather an all cotton or silk shirt may be worn. The shirts should be fitted smoothly. They may either lap or button in front.

Stockings: Three pairs of bootees. Three pairs of merino or cashmere stockings, if the weather is cold.

Blankets: Three blankets of closely knitted or crocheted wool, or made from an old soft woolen blanket.

Diapers. Four dozen diapers, two dozen, 24-inch, two dozen, 30-inch are convenient. For the first few weeks, provided it is not hot weather, diapers eighteen inches square of old, soft knitted wear are very convenient. Several dozen pieces of old sheeting torn into pieces ten inches square, may be put inside.

When diapers are removed, they should be put into a covered pail of cold water to which borax has been added. Later they should be washed clean with a pure soap, boiled, rinsed thoroughly, but not blued, and hung in the sun to dry. Soap and bluing are very irritating to a baby's skin. They should be folded, pressed with a hot iron and put away. A soiled or wet diaper should never be used a second time without washing. The urine contains substances which are very irritating to the skin of a baby and he may be made very sore.

Jackets: For cool morning, baby needs three short jackets. These are made of white flannel over the kimono sleeve pattern, or they may be knitted or crocheted with close stitches. There should be no loose stitches or scallops or other trimming to catch on buttons or the baby's finger.

Out of Door Garments: The healthy baby is taken out of doors, so he must have a wrap and hood. This wrap is made like the sleeping bag except it is of white eiderdown or flannel. It may be sewed together or bound around with ribbon. At four months, the upper corners may be opened so as to allow the baby to get its hands out freely. When baby begins to walk, a very comfortable coat may be made from the bag. Open it and hem at the bottom, shape the top loosely by a kimino slip pattern.

For winter, the hood may be made of the same material as the wrap, or it may be knitted or crocheted. For summer a silk or cotton knitted or crocheted hood of an open lace pattern and lined with the very thinnest white silk is comfortable. Wash hoods may be made of soft white embroidered lawn and laundered without starch. The ties on the hood should be such as can be laundered easily. A little chin strap fastened at one side of the hood with a snap or hook and eye is very convenient and does away with the bow under the baby's chin.

Woolen Garments: All woolen or part woolen garments must be washed very carefully. They should be washed by hand in tepid soapsuds (mild soap), rinsed in a little soapy water and hung in the shade to dry. When dry, they should be pulled or patted into shape or smoothed with a warm iron before being put away. Always before putting garments on a baby they should be held to the cheek to be sure they are dry and warm.

At a certain girls' school they do not allow the pupils to drive out with men unless there is a near relationship between them, or unless there is an engagement in prospect.

A girl asked permission to take a drive with a young man.

"Is he your father, brother or cousin?"

"No, ma'am."

"Are you engaged to him?"

"No, ma'am, but I expect to be before we get back."

BURKBURNETT SOCIETY AND NEWS EVENTS

Young Men of City Have Organized Club for Recreation With Splendidly Equipped Club Room.

Popular Young Man of Burk Weds Young Lady in Dublin; Young People Have Many Good Times.

The Lotus club, recently organized by 50 young men of Burkburnett for wholesome pleasure and recreation, has established an elegantly furnished club room in the basement of the First National Bank building. Books, magazine, dominoes and other parlor games furnish home-like recreation, especially appreciated by these men, most of whom have no home relationship in the city. The pretty room, with its victrola, rugs, rockers, reading stands, and soft light, are most inviting to the tired business man; and would do credit to a club room of a much larger and older city than Burkburnett.

Among the recent marriages of interest to Burkburnett was that of Fred Brookman of this city and Miss Grace Prater of Dublin, Texas, Rev. Martin, the Methodist minister officiating. The bride is a popular young woman of Dublin, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Prater of that city, in whose home the wedding took place, attended only by relatives and a few intimate friends. The groom has been in Burkburnett many months and is known as an energetic young man of stirling character with a large circle of friends. Following a short honeymoon trip to Temple, Mr. and Mrs. Brookman returned to Burkburnett and have established a cozy home on Eighth street.

Little Billie Dixon, son of Will J. Dixon of the First National bank of Burkburnett, narrowly escaped fatal injury last Saturday while playing with his boy friends near a pumping oil well. He is reported to have been rescued from the bull-wheel that had carried him over a score or more of revolutions, sustaining only a number of minor cuts and bruises touching almost every part of the body. The shock and injuries have confined the little fellow to his bed for a few days, but he is rapidly recovering and will soon be himself again. Considering his dangerous position on the big wheel, that he escaped with so light an injury seems miraculous.

In keeping with a contest in the Senior B. Y. P. U. of the First Baptist church for the solicitation of the scubscriptions during "Baptist Standard Week" in Burkburnett, the victorious section was entertained by the defeated captain and her team last Monday night at the church annex where one of the liveliest and most enjoyable young peoples' affairs of the season. Music, stunts, games and good eats furnished the evening entertainment. Miss Violet Hammitt and Miss Bessie Grey were the newly appointed captains for the contesting sections.

On Friday morning at 10 o'clock, the little life of Audrey Opal Lewis, passed away following an attack of pneumonia of nearly four weeks duration. Deceased was about a year and a half old, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Lewis. Funeral services were held from the home by Rev. Furnis and interment in the Burkburnett cemetery Saturday afternoon.

Among the social activities of the week none were more enjoyed than the "Good Luck Shower" tendered Mrs. Daisy Parsons Horsemann by her young girl friends, composing Mrs. J. M. McGuire's Sunday school class in the First Baptist church. The entertainment was informal, and following the shower of dainty gifts, a social hour was enjoyed, culminating in a refreshment course.

As a fare-thee-well courtesy to Miss Adele Parsons and her brother, Arthur Parson, the Junior B. Y. P. U. entertained Thursday evening with a social session. A general good time was enjoyed by the boys and girls at the event which was held in the Baptist church annex. A refreshment course concluded the function.

Fashions for Americans

Here's a Bathing Suit Suggestion for the Southern Tourist.

Bathing apparel of 1922 vintage has been on the market for several weeks now, shop windows displaying these garments along with furs and midwinter coats and suits. It is interesting to note that the practical wool jersey bathing suits gain in style and general smartness each season. The one illustrated combines plain color and a striking striped weave. The underneath garment is a one-piece affair, and the suit proper is fitted rather basque fashion. This suit would be becoming only to a woman with a very good figure, the draped and otherwise more or less elaborately decorated garments being better adapted to the figure that is far removed from perfection.

Suit in one color and bloomers or underneath garment in another is a next season bathing suit style, white and vivid colors being very effectively combined in this way.

Cap styles galore are seen, and in footgear there are many smart strapped slippers and sandals made of fabrics to match the suit, in color at least.

Never has sports apparel been as alluring as it is during the present season and for spring. For winter wear lovely shaggy knitted things are quite the rage, and in the spring line-up color is the big note. Among the very smartest of the southern resort sports models may be mentioned those featuring a one-piece frock of white silk crepe over which is worn a sleeveless jumper of bright colored duvetyn, such as flame, scarlet, Hunter's green, etc.

The vogue for knickers continues strong and most sports suits have skirts, knickers, coat, and often also a cape to match.

Silk fringe appears as a trimming on many of the sports suits and capes.

Incidentally corduroy is to play quite a part in spring sports apparel, sime coat and skirt suits of white corduroy being exceptionally smart.

Lead the way into the dining room.

Service at Table.

Anticipate the needs of those at the table, asking to have food passed before it is asked for.

Give courteous requests to the maid for any desired service, in a quiet voice, waiting for her to come near before addressing her.

See that all of one course is served before asking the maid to refill tumblers or to get extra things, such as bread, extra silver, etc.

Show no signs of impatience nor haste. Poise is the desired end.

In Eating.

Give the cue for all at the table to begin eating, by starting promptly when all are served, being careful to choose the proper silver for the food served.

Remember the saying, "If in doubt watch the hostess," and set the best possible example, not only in eating, but in your position at the table, in your conversation, and quality of voice.

Conversation at the Table.

The hostess should launch the conversation.

She should control the conversation, being quick to change the subject tactfully if along lines not suitable. She should make sure that everyone is included.

On Finishing the Meal.

The hostess should be the first one at the table to fold her napkin, thus giving the cue to the others to fold theirs.

She rises from the table first, the others following. The hostess leads the way from the dining room.

General Suggestions.

The hostess should put her guests at ease and should herself be at ease. She should not be embarrased, but self-possessed. To accomplish this, try not to be self-conscious. Remember that self-respect is as much a virtue as respect for others.

Do not ask anyone if he will have "more" meat, bread, etc. It is more polite to say, "Let me serve you 'some' meat, thus not implying that it is a second helping."

Do not suggest serving anyone a second helping at the latter part of a course, as this would cause the entire company to wait for one or two to finish, which is embarassing to all.

"Yes," said the principal of the young ladies' school to the proud parent. "You ought to be proud to be the father of such a large family, all the members of which appear to be devoted to one another."

"Large family. Devoted?" gasped the old man in amazement. "What on earth do you mean?"

"Why, yes, indeed," said the principal, beaming through her glasses, "no fewer than eleven of Dora's brothers have been here to take her on the river, and she tells me she expects the tall one with the blue eyes again tomorrow."

WOMAN-I-TORIALS

INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF UNIVERSITY WOMEN.

Another agency leading to international friendship and understanding is the recently organized International Federation of University Women. Women university graduates from many countries met in London "to promote intercourse and mutual assistance among universities and their graduates of all countries. Great Britain and America were leaders in the movement and were joined by ten national associations of university women.

It is not much over twenty-five years that women have been allowed to take university degrees. In Spain the law stipulated, as a condition, that "order was not to be disturbed." In many universities women are not yet permitted degrees altho they may listen to the lectures, and in many cases take the examinations ,when they often make higher grades than their brothers.

Provisions for study abroad, opportunities for university women to do research work, hospitality committees, international scholarships and fellowships and university club houses are resulting from this organization. It will promote an understanding and solidarity and clearing house of thought for the intellectual women of all nations.

Sein' Things.

Mothers, your boys and girls will like this idea of John James Tigert's, the commissioner of education. It is a plan to bring the picture machine into school houses everywhere and to let the children see the things for themselves instead of reading about them. Scenes of everywhere, through movies, and processes of manufacture, and history repeating itself, as it has a reputation for doing, on the picture screen this time, that the children may see Napoleon marching and the Picket Men picketing, and battles waging, and all the scroll of the past unrolling before their very eyes. Edison estimates that of every hundred facts we learn, eighty-five come thru the sense avenue of the eye. Those school houses are on the right track, which are installing moving picture machines. Time will come when no school houses will be without one!

Sounds Good Enough to Eat.

Isn't this a pleasant description of a school lunch?

Gave a hot-lunch demonstration at the Oakland school. Appointed committees to oversee the washing of hands, placing paper napkins on desks, passing lunch boxes and serving the hot chocolate. When the children were seated, we repeated in unison a blessing I had taught them before noon. Every child drank and enjoyed his cup of hot chocolate. The dish-washing committee had only the cooking utensils to wash and put away as the children take their spoons and cups home every night and bring them back clean every morning. These lunches will be carried on during the winter.—Iva Burch, Washington County, Oklahoma.

Consider Miss Wooley.

It is often assumed that to be a force, especially an executive force, a woman must become aggressive, and dictatorial in manner. This is refuted by the gentle sweetness of Miss Mary Wooley, for twenty years president of Mount Holyoke college. Her administration dates away back to the time when woman had to assert her right to an education in the face of an unfriendly public opinion. Thru all this Miss Wooley has gone quietly—so thoroughly an intellectual influence that she did not have to combat the public to convince them of it.

Prison or Hospital?

Indiana is answering the call of its ten thousand child candidates for hospital care by establishing the James Whitcomb Riley Children's Hospital at Indianapolis. Physicians and Sociologists agree that hospital care will fit many for normal life who otherwise would find themselves later in correctional or charitable institutions. Iowa has a model state Children's hospital.

School Children Save.

A California bank sends out four collectors over the state weekly to gather up the children's pennies from the rural schools. In one week they have gathered more than half a million dollars.

In Memphis, Tennessee, more than half the children have bank accounts. In one day a third of them contributed an average of thirty-six cents apiece.

Mike called for a pint of beer and tossed a bright new half a crown on the bar counter.

The barman looked suspiciously at the coin, weighed it in his hand, then tested it several times on the counter.

"Look here old sport," said the barman. "Where did you get this thing from? It's not a good one."

"What do you mean?" returned Mike. "Be sure it is a good one. Why, I only made the blithering thing this morning."

Honor compels us to tell a man his faults to his face, but the law of self-preservation makes it safer to tell his neighbor.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS

The Drafty Window.

To admit fresh air in the bed-rooms in winter and yet not have a draft sweeping over the bed, a cheese-cloth or muslin or cotton flannel (wooly side out) screen may be used. Tack the cloth over an adjustable window screen if you wish to remove it at times. If you can leave it all winter it may be tacked to the window casing. The air sifts thru the cloth so broken and so slowly that it does not make a draft. Some claim that the cloth keeps out the cold and the heat in better than the glass pane does, but this seems impossible, else its value to admit fresh air would be nullified. It is practicable to leave windows open all the time if so protected. Many schools and some residences are using this system of ventilation.

SPENT HALF HER TIME IN BED

Farmer's Wife Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman

Carter's Creek, Tenn. — "Three years ago I was almost an invalid. I spent half of my time in bed, being afflicted with a trouble which women of a certain age are apt to have. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I am a well woman now and have been for two years. I can work as well as any one who is younger and as I am a farmer's wife I have plenty to do for I cultivate my own garden, raise many chickens and do my own housework. You may publish this letter as I am ready to do anything to help women as I have been so well and happy since my troubles are past."—Mrs. E. T. GALLOWAY, Carter's Creek, Tenn.

Most women find plenty to do. If they are upset with some female ailment and troubled with such symptoms as Mrs. Galloway had, the smallest duty seems a mountain.

If you find it hard to keep up, if you are nervous and irritable, without ambition and out of sorts generally, give the Vegetable Compound a trial.

ALL-STARS OF LEAGUE HANG 26 TO 19 DEFEAT ON BURKBURNETT FIVE

BY "HANK" HAYES

The highly exalted quintet of Burkburnett, under the leadership of Bremen, arrived at the Legion hall last night hoping to get sweet revenge for the defeat handed them Tuesday by the picked five of the league, but they had to board the Burk special with a 26 to 19 defeat and revenge to get at a later date.

Gormley, of the visitors, became reckless the first few minutes and slipped a couple of counters in the basket before the Wichita machine got into operation with Bill Viner scoring the first tally for the locals. Don Faichney, the fast little center of the Knights of Columbus quintet, playing center for the Wichita cagers, made his shots true and ran up eight points to his credit and played a clean, snappy game throughout. Abe Bremen stayed close to his man and "Smiler" Ferguson, leading the league in goals, never chalked but one goal for the afternoon. Harry Viner and Seyler kept the Burk forwards at their mercy and allowed them two a-piece. At the close of the first period the locals were considerably in the lead with 17, while Burk could only boast of 9.

The second half saw the Burk cagers fighting hard but they could not overcome the lead that the Wichita quintet piled up on them in the opening. The Burk boys found the wicket three times and four free shots by Bremen totaled ten tallies for them. Harry Viner made three extra long tries find their place, and with Ferguson's shot and a free goal had nine to their credit, but this was enough for the local's victory.

Referee McClain kept the engagement going splendidly marred occasionally by fouls, most of them on the Wichita boys. Every player on the floor put forth all the effort within him to grab the honors but the Wichita quintet, without doubt, had a decided edge on that of Burkburnett.

THROWING OFF TENNIS POINTS FROWNED UPON

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Deliberate throwing away of points in a sportsmanlike effort to correct supposed mistakes on the part of linesmen, is to be discouraged during the coming tournament tennis season. The Tennis Umpires association will discuss the matter here next Saturday.

Outlining the umpires' attitude, R. Clifford Black, chairman of the United States Lawn Tennis association said:

"Lawn tennis has its paradox. Why should a player striving to win deliberately give points to his opponent if he thinks a mistake has been made in his favor by a linesman or umpire? It is undoubtedly due to the fine sporting ideals of tennis.

"Historically the practice probably dates back to the visits of Dobertys to this country some years ago. The lining was poor in those days and the galleries applauded the players' actions evidence of good sportsmanship. Our players copied them. While the practice is falling rapidly into disuse, it is still seen occasionally.

"Players should be made to feel that the time has come to stop this throwing of points. With the better class of umpiring that has been inaugurated by the Tenis Umpires association during the past few years, the last excuse for it has disappeared.

Aggies Defeat Phillips Five By Score 30-18

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, Jan. 28.—Texas A. & M. basketball team defeated the Phillips university quintet here tonight, 30 to 18. CAGE LEAGUE'S ENTRANTS SET FOR NEW WEEK

With Three Teams Tied for Both Second and Third Places, Warm Contests Are in Prospect.

By "HANK" HAYES.

With the third week of the Wichita Amateur Basketball league opening, there promises to be harder competition between the eight entrants than in the past two, as all the members are now in better trim after hard practice and games preceding, and each one now has its eight regulars, which is the number alloted to each contending team.

This week will see if the University club will maintain its 1,000 percentage and eliminate some quintets from the three that are deadlocked for both second and third places.

On the night of February 1, the Gaines Motor quintet will tangle with the North Methodists, whose prestige is greatly increased after that sensational game with the champion collegians. The Gaines five will have to go their best to stop them, if they do. The Knights of Columbus should take the high end of the score from the Texhomas, now bringing up the rear, unless the Texhoma cagers turn the tables by showing more team work and ease up on so many fruitless long tries.

When the Legion warriors tie up with the University five it will likely be one of the season's sensations. The Legionnaires, since acquiring Abe Bremen, about the best guard in the league and a dead shot on free tries, will give the college men, or any other quintet in this vicinity, a run for their money. The hard-playing youths of the High school under the able tutelage of Coach Tate will, if they keep the same spirit among them as has been prevalent heretofore, have the honor of trimming the Elks club antlers shorter.

However, the famous old adage: "There is many a slip 'twixt cup and lip," may be worth remembering concerning these games.

The standing of teams and players, follow:

—CLUBS	W.	L.	Pct.
University Club	3	0	1000
High School	2	1	666
American Legion	2	1	666
Knights of Columbus	2	1	666
Gaines Motor Co.	1	2	333
North Methodists	1	2	333
Elks Club	1	2	333
Texhoma	0	3	000

The team's total scores: Legion 124; University Club 102; High School 86; Knights 68; Gaines 62; Elks 54; Methodists 41; Texhoma 20.

Individual goals: (Six or more) Ferguson 27; Rogers 18; Harper 17; W. Viner 16; H. Viner 14; Faichney 13; Baldwin 8; Deems 9; Herrod 11; Johnson 12; Sharpe 9; Kennedy 7; Seyler 9; Kubecha 6; Carter 6; Peterson 6.

Individual free goals: (three or more) Bremen 16; Faichney 14; C. Neal 4; Stiles 8; Deems 4; Kennedy 5; Kubecha 5; Shaw (High School) 3; Gordon 4.

NOTRE DAME PLAYERS DENY PRO CHARGES

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 28.—Emphatical denial that they had participated in a professional football game at Taylorville, Ill., November 27, was made tonight by three members of last year's Notre Dame football team. The men are John Mohardt, Gus Desch and Chester Wynne.

Both Mohardt and Desch declared they were on the Notre Dame campus on November 27 and added the story implicating them was an attempt to injure the athletic reputation of the university. Wynne, it was said, told Coach Knute Rockne of Notre Dame, that he did not play.

Coach Rockne said: "Illinois has had two months to probe this matter and the only information that has come to Notre Dame has been the stories of The Associated Press.

"The stories implicate Mohardt, Desch and Wynne, and all have denied the implication absolutely. We can only give these boys a fair chance and investigate their cases thoroughly and demand a retraction if the charges are proved untrue."

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—William A. Brady, theatrical producer and sports promoter, today placed $50,000 in a bank here as a forfeit and guarantee of his good faith in seeking to arrange a match between Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills, negro heavyweight.

Mr. Brady said that if he could bring Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, to believe in the success of such a bout, he would immediately post an additional $150,000. Dempsey's share of the purse would be $150,000 and Wills' $50,000. Conditions of the bout would be the same as those under which the Carpentier-Dempsey affair of last summer was held.

Kearns said he was considering the offer.

Rivalry of Country Towns Was the Cause Of Athletic Scandal

Taylorville, Learning That Their Rivals Were Playing "Ringers," Obtained Services of Nine Illinois Grid Stars, Bet the Town Finances and "Cleaned-Up."

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—The bitter rivalry between two country towns, which became so acute that approximately $100,000 was bet on a football game, was the real cause of the athletic scandal which resulted in disqualification last night of nine University of Illinois athletes and which threatens to reach into Notre Dame university.

A group of citizens of Carlinville, Ill., it was learned tonight, decided last fall to financially "clean out" the rival town of Taylorville, Illinois, by obtaining ten college stars to play on their football team and with victory apparently assured, to bet the limit on the annual contest between the two elevens. Taylorville, however, learned of the plan, obtained nine college stars for its own team and not only defeated Carlinville but won close to $50,000 by covering every Carlinville bet made, thus beating the rival team at its own game.

Ten Notre Dame players were in the Carlinville line-up, according to statements by citizens of that town, while the nine Illinois men disqualified last night played on the Taylorville eleven.

In the Carlinville line-up, according to persons associated with the team, were Gus Desch, member of the American Olympic team and world champion 440 year hurdler; Chester Wynne, selected by some as all-Western conference full back, and John Mohardt, all-American selection of several football writers. All played on the Notre Dame eleven last fall.

In 1920 Carlinville won from Taylorville 10 to 7, at Carlinville. Taylorville at that time loudly boasted that next year, with their team on its home ground, there would be a different story.

Several Carlinville people then conceived the "safe betting" idea of filling their line-up with college stars. Overtures were made to Natre Dame men according to backers of the Carlinville team, and it was agreed to pay the ten men $200 each plus their expenses, the total coming to $2,700.

The persons who arranged the affair passed the word to their friends to bet the limit. These friends went to the bank, the family stocking and the cupboard to bring forth, in some cases, the savings of years. A special train was hired and a band was taken along on the trip to Taylorville. Farmers from all the nearby towns arranged to join the pilgrimage and in nearly every case a well-filled wallet was taken along. The clinching of the game became common gossip on the street corners, in the grocery stores and wherever persons gathered.

But each person who received the "confidential" information, apparently passed it on to another friend, for gradually the word spread through Macoupin and Montgomery counties into Taylorville. At the same time Taylorville received word that Carlinville was ready to back its team with the family jewelry if necessary.

Consternation spread through Taylorville at the idea of sending their team against nationally known players. Then, a few citizens decided to seek a little college aid themselves.

CHARGE FOUR IN CASE OF DELINQUENT

Charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor Ulrich Weissendanger, Gregory Weissendanger, Ruth Rollins, and Bonnie Barce were released under $200 bond each following their arrest Saturday afternoon. Their arrest, according to officers, is a result of the finding of a fifteen-year-old girl on the porch of her home in the factory district at an early hour in the morning a week ago.

According to officers, after refusing for several days to reveal the names of the members of the automobile party which she is alleged to have accompanied and spent the early part of the night, she is said to have made a statement involving the four.

According to officers the two couples make no denial that the girl accompanied them on the automobile party but do deny that the girl was left in an intoxicated condition at her home after midnight.

The charges Saturday following an all week investigation by officers and the county and district attorney offices. The girl, according to officers, has told varying stories regarding the incidents leading up to the finding of her on the porch of her home in a supposed intoxicated condition. One of her stories involved a man who declared he had never seen her and whom she afterward admitted was not the man she thought.

NEW PRESIDENT GIVES WIDE RANGE KIWANIS IDEALS AND ENDEAVORS

Covering a wide range with the sphere of Kiwanis activities and ambitions, Ben Neal, president of the Wichita Falls Kiwanis Club, in his inaugural address at the annual open meeting at the Kemp hotel last Monday evening, gave members and visitors a new insight into the value of the organization, and in his exposition of the club motto, "We Build," painted a glowing picture of the club's part, if it would but take it, in the new growth of Wichita Falls, now at hand.

The address, in full, follows:

Ladies of Kiwanis, Guests and Fellow-Kiwanians:

It seems fitting that here and now, in the presence of these witnesses, I make confession as to why I was made president of the Kiwanis club for the year 1922.

No one realizes better than I, that I was not given this place of honor because I possessed qualities of leadership that peculiarly fitted me to direct such an organization through what promises to be an extremely trying year; nor was I elected because the membership thought mine an intellect that could grasp quickly and decide with unusual wisdom any issue that might come before this body.

The idea in the minds of my fellow Kiwanians was not that I could preside over our gatherings more gracefully than could any other member; nor did I bring to this position of trust any affluence that might in its turn lend dignity and honor to our club.

My election can not be so explained, for I can boast of no such virtues or attainments. You see me here tonight accepting the responsibilities of this position for one reason and one alone. That reason, my friends, was that the members of this club felt that during the year 1921 I had given perhaps more of my time and energy to the building of our organization than any other member. My election therefore, was simply the reward of effort.

And, inasmuch as I am president of this club because I have worked for its success, I can promise only that during 1922 I will display the same symptom that I displayed during 1921, namely: I offer you a never-lagging interest and an untiring effort in doing all within my power to further our growth and development.

But, when 1922 shall have run its course, our record of achievement will be due—not to what I have done or tried to do—but to what you have done. As a combined force, striving for given ends, we can leave behind us a record of achievement that will remain as a kindly memory in the years to come.

Allow me please to address myself directly to my fellow-members, forgetting for a moment our guests here assembled. For I would feel ill content were I to fail to say at this time that if we are to achieve largely this year it means that each member must give his whole-hearted support to Kiwanis. There must be a oneness of purpose back of our activities that will laugh at obstacles and impediments.

The lowing kine, resting in her leisure hours 'neath the shade of a protecting tree, engages herself with solemn industry in the chewing of her cud. Nor does the size of her chosen morsel seem to be the least affected by her perrennial mastication. One, in observing her would be tempted to cry, "What a useless operation!" And just as useless is the practice, too often found in various organizations, of chewing the rag among the members. A useless expenditure of time and energy; availing nothing but frequently damaging!

Now let us shift our gaze a moment from the cow to the mule. Of the two, the latter has traits far more destructive. The mule! A cronic kicker, a back-biter, an habitual shirker! Surely our organization can not be forwarded one inch by the laggard and kicker in our ranks.

I am reminded of something I read a few days ago. A veterinarian is given credit for the remark that a mule can't kick while he is pulling nor can he pull while he is kicking. From this humble source we can make a human application. Let us, then, during this year keep both feet on the ground and pull together as one man!

I realize that this is a serious part in the evening's entertainment, and that I should not be tempted to give you three lines of a song I learned as a boy. But when I think of the proverbial kicker and knocker I am reminded of this song. It goes like this: "Sweet to the donkey is the growing grass. If you don't like his ways you can just let him pass." (Here he sang the song of the donkey.)

The last act, ladies and gentlemen, was for the purpose of convincing our guests that I hold office, not because of, but in spite of, my lack of dignity.

Kiwanis, first brought to the business man seven years ago as a luncheon club, has proven the means by which he might satisfy his hunger for fellowship and invest his life in practical service. The motto of the Kiwanis club is, "We Build," and it is being proven daily a motto to live by rather than one to decorate our walls. My point is well brought out by a little poem I read in The Gusher, published by the Kiwanis club of Okmulgee, Oklahoma:

"You may bring to your office and put in a frame
A motto as fine as its paint,
But if you're a crook when you're playing the game
That motto won't make you a saint.
You can stick up the placards all over the hall
But here is the word I announce,
It isn't the motto that hangs on the wall,
But the motto you live that counts.

If the motto says, "Smile" and you carry a frown,
"Do it now" and you linger and wait;
If the motto says "Help" and you trample men down,
If the motto says "Love" and you hate,
You won't get away with the mottoes you stall
For the truth will come forth with a bounce;
It isn't the motto that hangs on the wall,
But the motto you LIVE that counts."

We have on our roster two honorary life members: Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kemp. We could find no more striking example of a real builder than Mr. Kemp. How glorious to contemplate, after having reached the autumn of life, a past record such as his; to remember that many large institutions in this city function because of his support; that a large number of our sterling citizens are making their mark directly and indirectly as the result of his planning; that a public library is open to all our people because of the generousity of himself and his equally remarkable wife; that many thousand acres of land of indifferent productiveness will soon blossom as the rose and yield in abundance because of his dream! Verily he lived not unto himself alone! Let us emulate his example.

In the United States and Canada are more than 60,000 Kiwanians, men who either own the business in which they are engaged or hold executive positions therein. They range in prominence from the president of the United States down to your humble servant, myself. This great body of men is striving daily to apply the Golden Rule to business.

Give your imagination free play, if you will, and picture the far-reaching influence of such a potential force. The Kiwanis club of Wichita Falls is an integral part of that dynamo. Each of you can realize the effect that will be produced here by more than one hundred of our younger business men carrying that principal as their daily guide.

Roe Fulkerson says that if he were asked to write a Kiwanis Creed it would have but five professions of faith: my country is the best over which a flag ever flew; my state the best state in my country; my city the best city in my state; my Kiwanis club the best organization of men ever banded together in my city; and my motto is my club's motto, "We Build."

There has never been a time in the history of any city where the ambitions of men following such a Creed could have freer scope than in Wichita Falls today. Consider the situation a moment. New railroad connections have been built and further extensions planned; new businesses have been persuaded to come to Wichita Falls because of the strategic position she occupies; the oil industry that has meant so much to us in the past is with us still and will continue its outpour of wealth; the irrigation system is fast reaching fruition and will spell for Wichita Falls an ever increasing growth in wealth and population.

Our club, therefore, occupies a position that is enviable. In carrying out the motto, "WE Build," the opportunity is at hand to use all the ingenuity and resourcefulness that belong to our several members. Kiwanis club in other cities, cities that had already assumed their permanent mold, have made for themselves a position and carved for themselves a name high in the niche of achievement. How much greater is our opportunity, situated as we are in what promises to be the fastest growing city in the Southwest where newly developed resources will bring forth the best that is in us all and attract at rapid rate outside brains and capital.

In our club, there will be certain definite purposes outlined from time to time, the carrying out of which will demand our combined effort. When a park is to be beautified, a municipal auditorium to be built or a junior college to be procured, the results of our efforts, should we undertake any such activities, would be plainly visible to the eye. And while these physical activities will be engaged in on an ever increasing scale by this organization, and while the importance of such can scarcely be exaggerated, I will point my remarks in closing to some of the smaller considerations, if you please, —some of the little things that go to build up character.

In our Code of Business Ethics, we learn that the Ideals of International Kiwanis are—Brotherly Love, Service and Square Dealing. The big things we might collectively do in Kiwanis will depend entirely upon what we severally do day by day. If it were in the range of possibility to have each member of this organization feel toward his fellow-Kiwanian an unselfish and brotherly love; and if our thoughts and actions could be so trained as to point unerringly in the direction of service toward our fellowmen; and should square dealing characterize our movements in our daily walks of life, then would any other of the larger purposes at which we might aim be guaranteed of realization.

I have biblical authority for the statement, "And the greatest of these is charity." Love! Do you know, I am ambitious to see every member of our organization come to love every other member. And the secret key to a realization of that ambition is, I think, to have each become well acquainted with the other. In the Kiwanis Builder, published in Muskogee, Oklahoma, I found this poem, author unknown:

"When you get to know a fellow,
know his joys and know his cares,
When you come to understand him and the burdens that he bears,
When you've learned the fight he's making and the troubles in his way,
Then you find that he is different than you thought him yesterday.
You find his thoughts are sensible and there's not so much to blame
In the man you lightly jeered at when you only knew his name.

"You are quick to see the blemish in the distant neighbor's style,
You can point to all his errors and may sneer at him the while,
And your prejudices fatten, and your hates more violent grow
As you talk about the failures of the man you do not know.
But when drawn a little closer, and your hands and shoulders touch,
You find the traits you hated really don't amount to much.

"When next you start in sneering and your phrases turn to blame
Learn more of him you censure than his business and his name.
For it's likely that acquaintance would your prejudice dispel,
And you'd really come to like him if you knew him very well.
When you get to know a fellow and you understand his ways,
Then his faults won't matter, for you'll find a lot to praise."

The spirit I would encourage in you, my fellow-Kiwanians, is that of love for mankind. Such a spirit includes generousity, forbearance and sympathy. For my part, I shall not worry about the record to be made in Kiwanis this year if I can feel that such a spirit pervades our membership.

Not long since I met a man whom I had known eight or ten years ago. This man had gone into a line of business that had tended to dwarf his impulses for generousity and had dulled the edge of his once kindly spirit. His hardness, which was concealed behind a suave exterior, came to light in a conversation we were having about a third acquaintance, whom we had known years ago but whose path was strewn with misfortune.

I did something then, my friends, which I had done only once before, and for which I now apologize. I wrote a few lines in verse and after repeating them to you, I will have finished.

"Please lend attentive ear to me,
while I tell you some things
About the man whose joys are least and whose every action stings;
I'll halt and hesitate with this; I'm not used to telling tales,
But I feel constrained to talk about the man who's hard as nails.

Of all sad things in this old world the saddest, seems to me
Is to see a man who could be just and yet refuse to be;
His ingratiating style with its superficial smile, veils
A soul as tough as leather and a heart as hard as nails.

I'd rather mark my time, incased behind steel bars
Than walk among my fellows leaving here and there deep scars;
High heaven is much nearer to many in our jails,
Than to the man who walks scot free but who is hard as nails.

The sublimeness of contentment that comes to one who lives
A life that takes its share, but taking, also gives,
Is an unknown source of pleasure to him who e'er bewails
The supplication of the needy with a heart as hard as nails.

The feeling in my heart my friends, that burns and burns and burns
Is a triple-plated notion that kindness pays returns;
Returning good for evil as a plan to guide one's life, fails
To make an imprint on the heart of substance hard as nails.

The child of circumstance and sadness may come to see that ray
Of hope that leads to happiness by some small word we say;
Let's remember then, Kiwanians, that kindness much avails,
That old age is bleak and desolate if youth is hard as nails.

"Do you unto others as you'd have them do to you,"
Let us make ourselves that promise and keep the promise true;
For charity toward our neighbors the soul of man regales,
And leads us nearer heaven with the hopes that heav'n unveils.

SAYS CALOMEL SALIVATES AND LOOSENS TEETH

The Very Next Dose of This Treacherous Drug May Start Trouble.

You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It mal s you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate.—Adv.

Manifold and Gigantic Possibilities of Muscle Shoals Seen in Survey

(By International News Service)

FLORENCE, Ala., Jan. 28.—The manifold possibilities of the Muscle Shoals power and nitrate project have fired the imaginations of farmers, business men and industrial engineers from all parts of the country.

Water, water power and nitrogen —these are the natural elements whose harnessing at this point is expected to revolutionize the agricultural, industrial and commercial activity of a large part of the United States.

When the harnessing of Muscle Shoals is completed it will have a four-fold effect. In the first place, it will open up navigation on the Tennessee river, and will link up the entire territory as far as Chattanooga with the Mississippi Valley and New Orleans.

Second, it means the creation of cheap electric current and the establishment of a manufacturing and industrial area which may equal any in the United States.

Effect on Farming

Third, it means the operation of a fertilizer plant which would revolutionize farming in the south and east and even all over the United States.

Fourth comes the question of national security, as it will be enhanced by a supply of artificial nitrates, making the United States independent of imporatations from Chile.

What is known as Muscle Shoals is an extended hard rock formation which has blocked the natural deepening of the Tennessee River in the vicinity of Florence and Sheffield, situated respectively on the north and south sides of the river in the northwest corner of Alabama. In their ceaseless flow rivers attack the soft rock in their beds more easily than the harder crust, and owing to the peculiar formation of the river bed of the Tennessee at this point the water has eaten away the earth underneath in such a manner as to create a fall of nearly 150 feet.

This fall is made by a bed of solid rock, which will probably continue to withstand the effect of erosion for another geologic epoch. In the meantime it constitutes both an impediment to free navigation on the Tennessee and a potential source of vast amount of water power energy.

600,000 Horsepower

Measurements taken by government engineers show that 600,000 horsepower is created at Muscle Shoals, and that at a certain period of the year the figure rises as high as 1,000,000 horsepower.

The early colonial settlers saw in Muscle Shoals only an aspect of grim, remorseless nature opposing itself to the progress of man. Indeed, the presence of Muscle Shoals proved an absolute mar to the spread of the French colonists who sought to push east from the Mississippi valley. It has required the enormous mechanical advances of the nineteenth century before man was finally able to appreciate the potential riches offered by this despised gift of nature.

During the war the federal government set to work feverishly to harness part of the energy at Muscle Shoals and manufacture nitrates. Nitrates, curiously enough, form the most essential ingredient of both explosive materials and agricultural fertilizer. The government wanted nitrates for war purposes only, and when the war was over it closed up its nitrate plant and waited to turn it over to a private company as a concessionaire.

Ford and Edison See

Henry Ford and Thomas Edison were among the first to appreciate the tremendous potentialities of Muscle Shoals, and Mr. Ford made the federal government a concrete offer to buy out the government plant and organize the water power of the falls on a large scale, for the production of electric current and nitrate fertilizer.

The story of the development of artificial nitrates for fertilizing purposes constitutes by itself a tremendous achievement in chemical progress. Nitrate salts, which are so singularly necessary to the sustenance of human life, are found in large quantities in only a few places on the earth's surface. One of those places is Chile, South America, from where the United States buys practically all its nitrates. The annual nitrate bill of the country has now come to be about $100,000,000, and according to figures compiled by the American Farm Bureau Federation the United States has paid Chile since 1867 approximately $1,000,000,000 for the precious salt. By 1928, at which date the Muscle Shoals plant may be in full operation, the bill would have risen to about $1,500,000,000.

"Fixing" Nitrates

The only practical way yet found for the artificial manufacture of nitrates on a large scale—and it is this that constitutes the supreme importance of the Muscle Shoals—is to use a very high-powered electrical current for the "fixation" or the combination of the free nitrogen of the air with other chemical elements. This process is known as the cyanamid process, from the name of the chemical used, and has been successfully employed for a number of years in Norway.

As for extending the river's navigation possibilities comes talk of organizing a large steamer route on the Tennessee, which will carry the cotton crop to the seaboard and thence abroad. The river route will also serve to transport the manufactured articles when the industrial zone is developed.

As a producer of hydro-electrical energy the significance of Muscle Shoales can be understood when it is pointed out that more energy will be developed at that point than is represented at present by the five states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Tennessee and Georgia—all states which have made considerable advances in this respect. The total water power now in use in the United States is only approximately 8,000,000 horsepower, or about twelve times the potentialities of Muscle Shoals.

Surplus Horsepower

The operation of the nitrate plant at the shoals will require only 100,000 horsepower, leaving a surplus of more than 500,000 horsepower for the use of towns and cities included in a 300-mile radius of the plant. This territory embraces Memphis, Birmingham, Chattanooga, Nashville, Knoxville, Montgomery, Jackson, besides the new centers that will be developed in the course of years. The city of Memphis alone could use 50,000 horsepower from Muscle Shoals at a cost of 50 per cent less than the power now employed.

Farmers of the south are now talking of nothing else but the fertilizer plant, which they believe will increase the value of their land about $25 an acre. Both Ford and Edison believe that the cost of fertilizer could be cut so as to save something like $75,000,000 annually in the production of the cotton crop alone. Phosphates, sulphates and lime deposits, all of which are subsidiary elements of agriculture fertilizer, are found in large quantities in the territory of Alabama and Tennessee, and thus the production of complete fertilizer could be carried on at the Muscle Shoals plant.

Cheap Fertilizer.

With the water transportation available at Muscle Shoals it is believed that the new fertilizer could be delivered almost anywhere in the United States with a reduction of 20 to 50 per cent over present prices.

Considered for its war-time possibilities, the Muscle Shoals plant is sufficiently inland to make it safe from attack by airplanes or an invading army.

All the materials needed for the manufacture of high explosives are in easy reach, and it is believed that no more ideal combination of conditions could be found anywhere in the United States.

M. L. Tittle Is Candidate to Succeed Self

Announcement of his candidacy for re-election was made Saturday by M. L. Tittle, present county tax collector. Mr. Tittle in making his announcement said that he is basing his candidacy on the record made by the collector's office during the time he has been in charge.

Previous to his election to the office Mr. Tittle served as deputy county tax collector for a period of three years. Since his initial connection with the office he has seen the tax rolls of the county increase from $200,000 to the present total of a million and half dollars. Last week in his yearly report Mr. Tittle turned back to the county the largest excess fees of any office in the history of the county.

Mr. Tittle is widely known in the city and county where he has resided for fifteen years.

The man who maintains an account with the City National Bank of Commerce enjoys the knowledge that the advice and counsel of its experienced officers are at his command whenever he is perplexed about business, financial or investment matters.—Adv.

Stocks

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Business on the stock exchange today was duller than at any week-end session of the New Year, the severe storm interrupting connections between this center and Southern points.

Trading was unusually professional a number of relatively obscure issues developing strength, apparently under pool auspices. Among these were American ice, National Biscuit, preferred, Remington Typewriter, Associated dry goods, Martin Parry, Kresge and May department stores at gross gains of 2 to 5 points.

Some old time favorites of the steel equipment motor and shipping divisions also improved, probably on short covering, but most of the investment rails and industrials held within fractional bounds. Sales amounted to 265,000 shares.

Dealings in bonds were light, that market continuing to ease especially for Liberty issues and some of the rails and foreign war flotations and municipals. Total sales, par value, aggregated $10,375,000.

The principal foreign exchange retained most of yesterday's sharp rise, notably sterling and French francs. German marks relaxed slightly but quotations on neutral countries were irregularly higher. Betterment in South American trade conditions caused another brisk rise in Argentine bills.

Actual loans and discounts of clearing house banks were again decreased by about $28,000,000 and the actual loss of $18,890,000 reduced excess reserves to $20,736,0000. A construction of $21,414,000 was shown in reserves of members at the federal reserve bank and net demand deposits decreased $22,887,000.

Cotton

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—While somewhat irregular, the cotton market showed a generally steady tone this morning on scattered trade buying and further covering for over the week-end. May contracts sold up to 16.48 and closed at 16.41 with the general market closing steady at a net advance of 20 to 36 points.

The market opened firm at an advance of 14 to 25 points on reports of improved conditions in Egypt and India, Liverpool and Japanese buying, rather better week-end reports from the domestic cotton goods market than expected, and covering. The initial prices here were above a parity with New Orleans and houses with New Orleans connections selling rather freely right after the call. Differences between the two markets were readjusted by a reaction of ten to 12 points locally, however, after which the New Orleans selling tapered off and prices continued steady on further scattered covering or trade buying.

March sold up to 16.70, or 25 points net higher, and July to 16.13, or 27 points net higher, while later months were relatively firm, October selling at 15.62 which made a net advance of 37 points. The close was a few points off from the best under realizing by recent buyers. Cable advices from Cairo said that conditions were much improved and that there had been recoveries in the Egyptian market. There was no improvement in the news from Manchester, where mill curtailment is said to be increasing, but there was probably some buying here late in the morning on a belief that Liverpool would be influenced by better Bombay and Egyptian reports on Monday morning. Sales of cotton goods in the Fall River market for the week were estimated at 100,000 pieces which was in excess of last week's report, and a better business was reported in the local goods market yesterday.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance was estimated at 93,000 bales against 203,000 last year. There were rumors here during the morning that some cotton might be shipped from the New Orleans certified stock for tender in New York.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 28.—Higher prices ruled in the cotton market today and the tone was very steady from the opening. Covering of the short interest and fresh buying for long account were responsible for this and were stimulated by reports of rather extensive price fixing by foreign spinners, by reports of a sharp rise in the price of Egyptian cotton, improved conditions of Egyptian politics and the rumor that the Bombay boycott had been lifted. October became the strongest month on the boards following the receipt of messages from Texas indicating that a determined effort was under way to hold down the planting of cotton and to stimulate the raising of food and feed prducts. At the highest of the day, March stood at 15.65 and October at 1495, at which levels the list was at gains of 22 to 35 points. The close was at gains of 17 to 27 points with March at 15.60 and October at 1487.

Prices ere shaded toward the close on reports from New England to local brokerage concerns that union officials had authorized strikes among cotton mills where wage cuts had been announced. Rumors that cotton would be shipped out of the New Orleans stock to New York to go on contract, there, were regarded as unfavorable, although not generally credited. Another report was that recount of the local stock was being made which would probably result in a minus correction of 20,000 bales so far as certified grades were concerned.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Cottonseed oil was firm and higher through buying by refiners and urgent demand from shorts, promoted by the bullish showing in crude markets and in lard. Active months closed 13 to 16 points net higher. Sales 18,600 barrels. Tenders 500 barrels. Prime crude 7.50 bid; prime summer yellow spot 8.95@9.25; March 9.19; May 9.34; July 9.69, all bid.

WEEKLY STOCKS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—The most significant feature of another uncertain week in the financial markets, according to the prominent banking interests, was the strength of leading foreign exchanges. The sharp advance in British bills and the concurrent recovery of the French rate were accepted as proof of improvement in the general European situation. Plans to combine various companies in the steel, copper, equipment, oil and sugar trades, together with the operations of pools, furnished the foundation of a very large part of the irregular movement of stock.

Many of the old line issues of the railroad and industrial divisions were neglected for new favorites. Gulf States Steel registered further wide fluctuations, but interest in that issue waned perceptibly after publication of the company's annual statement.

Davidson Chemical was among the few stocks of recent prominence to hold the greater part of its gains. Bethlehem also was an exception to the general trend of industrials, its firmness resulting from the favorable preliminary statement of 1921 and the avowed intention of the corporation to expend $25,000,000 in the current year.

Trading in rails was dull at best and frequently reactionary in tone, although earnings showed improvement. Labor conditions were more hopeful, and Washington advices were indicative of a retention of the present freight rate schedules.

Firmer money rates were regarded as a logical sequence to withdrawals of local reserves by interior banks to meet February payments and preparations for crop moving requirements. That no actual stringency is expected, however, was evidenced by free offerings of time funds at 4½ to 4¾ per cent.

Aside from numerous small underwritings and the department of the Seine (France) $25,000,000 issue, the bond market developed no features of interest. United States war flotations were depressed on heavy selling prompted by the announcement that congress intends soon to undertake the framing of a soldier bonus bill.

Banjos, which originated in India, were taken to England from America.

Grain

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—Highest wheat prices on the present bull swell were recorded today and the closing level was at the top of the day. There was free selling when 117 1-2 for May was reached but after these offerings were finally absorbed the market advanced fast. At 1.18 there was a renewal of pressure from commission houses, partly to cover shorts. May wheat made a net gain of 1 1-2 to 1 7-8; corn was up 1-2@3-4; oats were 1-4c higher while provisions were higher with hogs.

Liverpool surprised the trade with the buying of futures here and there was a belief in some quarters that foreigners were commencing to become uneasy over future supplies. Another feature of the day was the big bulge in the Argentine market which was attributed largely to an advance in exchange equal to 5 cents a bushel.

The May-July spread widened out to more than 14 cents difference, the greatest thus far on this upturn.

Less favorable reports coming from the Argentine had an influence on corn, which also reflected the strength in wheat.

Oats were affected by the action of other grains and averaged higher. The domestic demand was only fair.

Provisions were more active and higher.

WEEKLY METALS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—The volume of new business in the steel market is not impressive from the point of production, the market is about holding its own and the trade is very confident that conditions are shaping themselves for an improvement. Export sales are larger with an increased demand both from Japan and the Far East as well as from South America. Domestic buyers are holding off partly on account of uncertainty over freight rates.

Pig iron is quet and while prices are not much changed, the tons of the market is unsettled. Competition is keen for new business especially for orders of more than ordinary magnitude.

In the copper market, no improvement has been reported during the week. A little business has been put through the export association for shipment to Germany and France at prices equal to about 14 cents c. i. f. European ports. Otherwise, no revival of export interest has been noted and very few buyers for domestic consumption have been in the market. Competition for the small business offering has led to price hading by second hands and some of small producers. So far as can be learned, however, the larger interests are not pressing for business and are holding their quotations fully up to the 14c level. Tin has been weaker in response to heavy selling by Chinese interests and consequent weakness in London and Singapore. Domestic traders and operators became buyers on Thursday but consuming interests are not in the market.

Lead was quiet with traders pretty well sold up to the end of February and asking premiums for March and April deliveries.

There is very little demand for zinc from consumers and with competition keen, prices are the lowest since last fall.

Antimony continued easy under scattered local pressure.

COWS MUST BE INSPECTED, SAYS LUCEY

Announcement that all dairymen operating dairies and supplying milk for public consumption in the city, must have their cows tested for tuberculosis infection at once was made Saturday by Dr. L. I. Lucey, city food and dairy inspector. Thus far, ten head of cattle suffering with tuberculosis have been found in Wichita Falls and surrounding territory during 1922.

These tests will be made by officials of the city health department or by any licensed veterinarian.

Permits for the sale of milk must also be obtained before a wholesale or retail trade is built up, Dr. Lucey asserts.

ASSERTS SHIPPING BOARD "HAMSTRUNG" BY VOLSTEAD ACT

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Affairs of the shipping board claimed the attention of the house today.

An attempt by Representative Byrnes, democrat, South Carolina, to limit to $500,000 the amount the shipping board could spend during the coming fiscal year on advertising was defeated by a four-vote margin.

Declaring that ocean travelers were refusing to make bookings on American vessels on which no liquor was sold, Representative Gallivan, democrat, Massachusetts, said the board in advertising for passengers worked under a tremendous handicap.

The board, he asserted, has been "hamstrung by Dr. Volstead and is suffering loss of business as a result."

Sufferers from chronic headache should have their eyes and their teeth medically examined.

Japanese women usually begin smoking when about ten years old.

Dear Sir:

We realize, of course, that you are interested only in what is considered news. You hesitate to consider even for the smallest moment anything that smacks of advertising. We'll be honest, Mr. City Editor, and admit that this is nothing more or less than an advertising scheme. But while we are admitting that damaging fact, please allow us to make the statement that as adveritsing goes, this is a fair and square proposition, and that our purpose is only that we might through this medium become acquainted with someone whom we might favor in finding a home or for whom we might sell a property who otherwise would not have known that our services were to be had for the asking.

Surely none of your subscribers can take offense at one or two fair questions. That being true, please answer me: Do you want to buy? Do you want to sell?

We ask these questions, not because we enjoy using this space and thereby assist in guaranteeing a continuance in a modern-day necessity, the daily newspaper, but because we actually are anxious to learn these facts.

If you are ready to buy, sell or trade, we want to know about it. That's the way we make our living. So, Mr. City Editor, if you or any of your friends are in the market for transacting business such as we have suggested, all you have to do to secure action is to call at 416 Bob Waggoner Building, or 'phone 3333, and you can get what you are asking for. If you have any difficulty in recalling the number, which is a handful of threes, you have only to consult the directory and find the number of

Yours very truly,
BEN NEAL, Real Estate.

P. S.—Yes, this is an advertisement. Unless you have some property to sell, and—provided you have never thought of buying—don't consider reading the above for even the smallest minute. It will be a waste of time. The letter is not well enough written to be considered a classic in English. It is only a poor effort on the part of the writer to get in touch with the people in Wichita Falls who want action on real estate. Take it from the writer!

BLUE SUNDAY FORCES ARE VERY ACTIVE

Ohio Congressman, by Request of Religious Forces, Has Introduced Drastic Sunday Bill in Congress.

Penalties Attached to the Bill Range From Five Dollars to Five Hundred With 6 Months in Jail.

(By C. S. LONGACRE, General Secretary of the Religious Liberty Association.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 28.—A new compulsary Sunday observance bill was introduced into congress by Congressman Fitzgerald of Ohio, at the instigation of the Pastors' Federation of Washington City, the Lord's Day Alliance, the National Reform association and the Methodist Board of Temperance and Moral Reform. This bill is the long promised Sunday measure put forth by the Sunday law advocates which is to close up everything tight in the District of Columbia and is to serve as a model Sunday law for the whole nation. It forbids all kinds of Sunday work except works of "necessity and charity," in the first section of the bill, and in the third section, it limits even works of "necessity and charity," to six days of the week and excepts only household service on Sunday. Neither an individual nor a firm can carry on or perform works of necessity and charity on Sunday, unless "he or it" shall forbid their employes doing such work on a succeeding day.

Would Make Things Worse.

The bill specifically closes on Sunday all "places of public assembly or amusement for secular purposes," and also "unlawful sports," but does not define what are lawful sports. Naturally and logically "unlawful sports" are already prohibited by law, because they would not be unlawful unless some law made them so, and it does not seem necessary to enact another law to declare them unlawful. If one law does not work another would make things still worse.

No exemptions are made in the bill for those who observe another day than Sunday as a day of worship, and rest, and thus the Jews and Seventh Day Adventists and Seventh Day Baptists would be compelled to observe two days each week.

What Would Happen.

If this bill should become a law in the district all unnecessary labor would have to stop on Sunday, and extra help would have to be provided for necessary and charitable work on Sunday. This would mean that a new set of people would have to be selected to release the fire department men, the police department, the editors and employes of the newspapers, the newsboys and vendors, the clerks in the ticket office of railway stations, the conductors and brakemen, the engineers and firemen on the railroads, those in the factories, government offices, and apartment houses and private dwellings, the night watchman, the telegraph operators, the bakers, the restaurant employes, the surgeons, physicians, and nurses, the druggists and pharmacists, the electricians and wiremen, the dairy employes, the janitors in public and private dwellings, the barbers and bootblacks, the hotel employes, the automobile chauffeurs, the garage men and gasoline salesmen, in fact the congregation who had only one pastor whose duties kept him occupied seven days each week, would be obliged to hire a second pastor to relieve him on Sundays.

Back to Puritan Times.

If this bill becomes a law it will transport us back to the Puritan times, when they imprisoned the cat for catching mice on Sunday, when they put husbands in the stocks for kissing their wives on Sunday, when they rolled their cider barrels out of the cellar because they refused to cease working on Sunday.

The penalties attached to the provisions of this Sunday bill for the violation of any of its prohibitions range from $5 to $500, with six months in jail on the side.

Every lover of religious liberty and of the constitutional rights to worship God in harmony with the dictates of his own conscience, should take alarm at these encroachments upon his conscience, and should send a vigorous protest to his representative in congress, to use his influence to defeat this Sunday bill entitled H. R. 9753.

Planning Big Campaign.

The religious forces behind this Sunday bill are planning a big campaign to flood congress with petitions favoring its passage. The Religious Liberty association, and the Anti-Blue Law League of America are planning to meet the issue in a vigorous opposition campaign. The issue promises to be a lively one on both sides. Religious legislation of this nature should be turned down with an overwhelming defeat. Human rights and religious liberty are in danger.

Evidently Dr. Bowlby, the secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, who is backing this drastic Sunday bill, is trying to make good his threat, that he proposed, "by legislation, to make it easier for people to go to church." He said, "If we take away a man's motor car, his golf sticks, his Sunday newspaper, his horses, his pleasure steamships, amusement houses, and parks, and prohibit him from playing outdoor games or witnessing field sports, he naturally will drift back to church."

This is the third compulsory Sunday observance measure introduced into congress during this session.

This photograph was made the day Princess Mary, who is to become the bride of Viscount Lascelles, received one of her first wedding gifts. The West Norfolk Hunt is one with which the princess always rides when she is at Sanringham. The presentation of an emerald and sapphire brooch was made by its master, Col. Saymour. The photograph shows Queen Alexandra patting the head of of Princess Mary's horse. Queen Mary and other members of the royal family were also present at the meet. Queen Mary is seen standing beside Queen Alexandra.

LEGION NOTES

Ignorance is abroad in the land. For example, there are a few people who never heard of the city of Wichita Falls. If they had, natural curiosity would have lead them to investigate its advantages. Such an investigation would have lead them to become citizens of that city. We invite students of logic to argue from the same premis and reach any other conclusion.

The American Legion is a splendid organization with lofty principles, aims and ambitions. But it is financially hard-up. Nothing wrong with that logic, either.

All citizens of Wichita Falls who are worthy of the name are loyal, and seize every opportunity to tell the world all about it. Six thousand of our citizens own automobiles. Five thousand eight hundred and forty-nine of these cars are yearly driven beyond the limits of this county. If each one of these cars should in the future bear a plate displayed with the number plate proclaiming that its home is "The City That Faith Built," much ignorance would be dispelled, many families would be added to our community and if those plates are bought in the right way, some financial aid would be given the Pat Carrigan Post of the American Legion.

Here is the plan: At the instigation of the Chamber of Commerce, a large number of neat metal plates, bearing the name of Wichita Falls, have been obtained. The Pat Carrigan Post of the American Legion is undertaking the sale and distribution of these plates and from each sale so effected that Post will obtain the benefit of the entire profit made.

At a luncheon at the Kemp hotel, a committee was organized to conduct this sale. Within the next week, this committee expects to call on every citizen who is the owner of an automobile, present samples of the plate and procure orders therefor. These plates come in sets of two, one for the front and one for the rear of the car. They are so made that they may be attached to the car as number plates are now attached. In buying a set of these plates for the sum of Two Dollars every citizen may know that he is not only performing his patriotic and community duty, but he is also contributing a neat little sum toward the financing of the activities of the American Legion.

If you become impatient waiting for members of the Legion committee to call upon you, go by the Chamber of Commerce, sign an order blank which will be furnished you there and leave your check for Two Dollars, payable to the American Legion. The plates will be delivered to you later by the committee.

When the committee calls upon you, do not talk about hard times. Remember that the members of the American Legion know about it better than anybody.

The committee as organized is composed of: Ben E. Neal, general chairman; publicity, Luther Hoffman, Hubert Harrison, John Naylor and John E. Kilgore; sales, Charlie Nolan, captain; Dr. Wilson, Raymond Myers, Joe Ward, A. P. Gagge, D. L. Fritz; Zeb Nixon, captain, Dr. Lucy, J. W. Chatham, Guy Rogers, Norris Ewing, C. V. Chenault; Dr. John Fletcher, captain, D. B. Sartin, Bobby Burns, Dr. Parnell, Dr. McClory, Sam Black; Joe B. Hatchitt, captain, W. E. George, C. T. Ailes, A. L. Taylor, J. R. Claypool, Ernest Thornton; Joe Marlow, captain, Roy Miller, Dr. Strong, Harry Viner, Dr. Douglass, Harry Self.

The entire committee will meet Monday at 1:45 p. m. at the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

WHERE THE WEST AND THE SOUTH LINEUP

Irrigation and Drainage Bid Fair to Occupy Considerable Attention in the Next Congress.

McNary-Bankhead Bill and the Creation of Revolving Fund Available for the Gigantic Project.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 28.—The demand for and value of irrigation to the West particularly to Texas, has been the subject of much thought by Representative Lucian W. Parrish since he came to congress and while opportunities for active efforts have been limited by the fact that no general irrigation bill has been submitted during these years he has appeared several times before committees having these matters in charge. The Wichita Falls irrigation project, now thoroughly financed and in process of construction, although a private enterprise, promises to be one of the big propositions, of this character in the Southwest and, if it proves the success anticipated, doubtless will be followed by other and no less meritorious projects. As the close friend of those interested in the Wichita Falls project, as well as congressman from that district, Representative Parrish has obtained for these men whatever government help was permissible, such as soil surveys and meteorological reports, indicating possible and average rainfall.

Where Secret Lies.

Congressman Parrish is convinced that in irrigation lies the secret for the great development of Texas and he believes that the next decade or so will see the construction of dams a spanning the rivers and water courses of that state, providing vast storage reservoirs from which will be drawn the waters to irrigate unnumbered millions of acres, many of which as yet untouched by a plow. Along with this, he believes, will come the drainage of enormous tracts of cut-over and swamp lands in the southeastern part of the state for Texas, unlike most other states where conservation programs must be launched, faces the dual necessity of providing sufficient water to insure crops as well as in other sections to limit the amount of water so as to give opportunity to work the soil.

Irrigation and drainage bid fair to occupy considerable attention in the next congress. The start already has been made and committees in both the House and Senate have united on a measure known as the McNary-Bankhead bill. This measure contemplates the creation of a revolving fund, available for the construction of gigantic projects and which will be paid back by the benefitted landowners, with interest in a stipulated number of annual payments. The bill is understood to have united support of Western Republicans and Southern Democrats. Congressman Parrish has conferred with members of the House committee on irrigation of arid lands and advised with them in urging incorporation of features which will make of this a conservation measure, national in its scope.

End of Crop Failures.

"No state in the Union is more vitally interested in such a conservation program as proposed than Texas," said Congressman Parrish recently in discussing this measure. "I am confident that the next twenty-five years will see the end of crop failures in Texas due to drouths and that the great floods which now periodicaly devastate vast areas of the state will be scientifically controlled and that water which now flows out to the seas will be held back in reservoirs to be used as needed. It is a significant fact in history that the science of irrigation, intelligently applied, played a big part in the creation of early civilizations and I am sure that the civilization of today is fully as able to cope with this problem, to the lasting benefit of the people in Texas.

"Anyone who will view the map of Texas will be struck by the fact that the location of our rivers all running in the same general direction, afford the basic lines for a net work of irrigation canals. Since the western part of the state is most in need of irrigation to bring it up to a high state of cultivation it is probable that it will be developed there first on a big scale. Far to the west there is the Pecos river which, running between precipitons banks, affords opportunity for the construction of many storage dams, sufficient to catch the flood waters and hold them in subjection. The same is true of the Devil's river and the Colorado, which meanders up almost to the Panhandle, should, and I believe will be, harnessed and curbed.

Rio Grande Valley Prosperity.

"Irrigation in Texas is practiced most extensively in the Rio Grande Valley but I am convinced we have seen only the beginning of it even there. The Rio Grande, forming the boundary line between Texas and Mexico, of course must be handled from an international standpoint but I am hopeful that when a treaty of peace and amity is concluded between the United States and Mexico we will see in it a provision under which irrigation projects international in character, can and will be constructed. When this occurs we will see the Rio Grande Valley, where two or three crops can be raised every year, a garden spot and a granary."

GIRLS TOLD TO GOVERN DRESS BY CONSCIENCE

Justice of Peace Says That Not Even Fond Parents Know What Is Best for Them to Wear.

(By International News Service)

EVANSTON, Ill., Jan. 28.—Girls, in deciding what to wear and what not to wear, let conscience be your only guide.

This is the advice of a learned judge—Justice of the Peace Max Witkower, of this sedate little town, whose judicial duties have been such as to warrant the statement, that what he says on the subject can be accepted as authoritative. Many of this town's important cases affecting ladies' attire he has settled.

"Girls know best what they want to wear and nobody else, not even their fond parents, should interfere" said Judge Witkower.

The occasion for his remarks had to do with the case of Elizabeth Foresch, fourteen years old. Elizabeth "dolled herself up" in her mother's silk stockings rolled beneath her knees, a tucked-up skirt which displayed dimpled knees; powder and rouge, perhaps applied a little too thickly, and her brother's low rubber boots, in lieu of galoshes.

Elizabeth crossed the yard to test her get-up on Homer Anderson, an interior decorator.

Mr. Anderson's decorative sense was outraged. His remarks shocked Elizabeth, who returned home crying. Her father hurried to Anderson's presence for an explanation. A quarrel ensued which landed both before Judge Witkower on the charge of disorderly conduct.

The judge, after offering some advice to the men, dismissed the case.

"Don't ever interfere with a woman's idea of how to adora herself, that's her own business," was the judge's parting shot.

GERMANY ASKS FOR MORE TIME ON PAYMENTS

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 28.—The German note to the reparations commission in response to the commission's demand for explanations of Germany's alleged inability to meet her obligations for January and February, requests that Germany be relieved of all cash payments in 1922. It also asks for a general reduction in cash payments and an increase in payments in kind.

In explanation of Germany's financial position, the note states that energetic measures will be taken against removal of the capital abroad and the evasion of taxation, such as the abolition of the obligation to secrecy imposed on banks, and control over the ownership of securities deposited with banks. It explains that the railway rates, compared with pre-war conditions, had been increased nineteen fold for passengers and thirty-two fold for freight; the postal and telephone rates were increased twenty-one fold.

The food subsidies for 1922 will amount to only one billion paper marks, as compared with 2,270,000,000 previously. The price of bread will shortly be increased by 75 per cent. A system of insurance for the unemployed at the expense of employers and employes will be introduced, to replace the existing relief.

HIS EYES POPPED OUT THEN.

First Lady—My husband is the most unobservant man you ever saw. He can talk to a woman for half an hour without noticing what she wears.

Second Lady—Not like mine. The less they have on the more he'll notice them.

Prompt attention in the matter of securing service of all papers is now promised at the sheriff's office, according to the announcement of F. E. Johnson, newly appointed chief deputy. Mr. Johnson in his announcement said that he had arranged the work of the office so that he could assure attorneys that all papers in connection with the filing of suits and other legal matters would be served immediately.

ADDITIONAL PROGRESS ON WAURIKA LINE

Right of Way Is Nearly Cleared Up; Condemnation Proceedings Prepared for Outstanding Pieces.

Negotiations have progressed sufficiently with regard to the Byers-Waurika extension by Frank Kell and associates that Mr. Kell believed Saturday that construction may be under way within the next three or four months, unless unforseen circumstances arise.

Pleasing progress was reported to him Saturday by the two committees working on the right of way for the road. While the two or three pieces of the right of way on this side of the river have not been secured, this is not expected to delay proceedings much longer as papers necessary in condemnation suits are now in preparation and will be brought before the courts unless a reasonable trade is made within a short time, Mr. Kell said.

INCREASE IN DUTY ON PECANS FROM MEXICO IS SOUGHT

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Jan. 28.—An organized effort to have the duty on Mexican pecans sent into the United States increased, is being made in Texas, according to information received at the department of agriculture. The department is co-operating in this move.

The move is being made because of the competition of the Mexican products with Texas grown pecans. It is estimated that from 1,000,000 to 4,000,000 pounds of pecans are shipped into the United States each year from Mexico. The plan is to have the duty on unshelled pecans raised from 4 to 8 cents and on shelled pecans from 1 to 2 cents.

The proposition is being taken up with Texas representatives in congress. It was pointed to them that Texas shipped between 800 to 1,000 carloads of pecans two years ago and that the shipments have decreased since then because of the Mexican importations.

UNEMPLOYED GIVEN JOBS IN NEW YORK AT SWEEPING SNOW

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Unemployed men who wanted jobs could get them tonight sweeping snow from the pavements of New York, covered with a white layer by a swirling storm that darkened the city from noon onward. The seven thousand men in the street cleaning department were immediately called out to operate scores of tractors, ploughs, automatic pilers and sweepers and Street Cleaning Commissioner Taylor announced he would hire all others available.

Health Commissioner Copeland said he feared the change would increase the spread of influenza and pneumonia.

200 BARRELS OF WHISKY MAY BE DUMPED IN RIVER

(By International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 28.—Wanted, a buyer for 200 barrels of perfectly good whisky valued at $400,000. Somebody that's all right can have it reasonable if they will bid on it and do so quickly.

The whisky, seized in a big raid last Spring, was put in a commercial storage house and the charges are piling up. United States Marshal John F. Short is worried about this whisky and he has sought a bidder in vain for months. If he doesn't get a bid soon he intends to get a court order permitting him to dump the whisky in the river.

"Hallo, Fred! How did you get on in Scotland?"

"Well, they told me that they didn't hang a man with a wooden leg in Scotland."

"That's queer!" said Jack. "How's that?"

"Oh, they hang 'em with a rope as a rule!" was the reply.

SCHOOL DAYS — By DWIG

NEWS BUDGET FROM ELECTRA IS INTERESTING

Magnolia Well, Drilled Last Week, Made 325 Barrels Daily When Placed on the Pump.

Stockholders of First State Bank Hold Annual Election; Two Business Houses Change Ownership.

By H. A. STROUD.

The Magnolia Petroleum company's No. 1 Duke in section 21, north of Fowlkes, which was drilled in last week has been placed on the pump and made at the rate of nearly 500 barrels per day, the pumps actually extracting 325 barrels and were shut down a portion of the day. The well was drilled in and 5-inch casing set which necessitated the installation of four-inch line pipe which reduced the size pipe to such an extent that it has probably reduced the production of the well to a considerable extent.

The Gulf Production company has timbers on the ground for another test west of the Duke No. 1 and will be rigged up some time next week ready to spud in. Other locations are being delayed while titles are being examined by the major companies who made the purchases.

It has developed in the past few days that a number of law suits are liable to materialize, in fact have already done so, on some of the property lying near the well. It has been alleged that certain parties owning acreage nearby had failed to pay the rental the first of the year and that the land had reverted back to the original owner on this account.

State Bank Elects.

The stockholders of the First State bank held their yearly stockholders meeting last week and elected a board of directors for the coming year. Following is a list of the directors elected:

P. P. Langford, J. R. Brewer, S. E. Honnaker, C. W. Coffey, T. T. Weatherall, J. A. Brannen and E. A. Dale.

The directors held their meeting following the adjournment of the directors and chose their officers for the year. E. A. Dale resigned as president of the bank on account of the condition of his health, which forbade the active work required in that office. C. W. Coffey, who has been active vice president in the past, was chosen as his successor. J. R. Brewer and S. E. Honnaker were elected vice presidents. T. T. Weatherall, cashier and C. H. and Mary McGann, assistant cashiers.

The stockholders found that the bank had a prosperous year, taking the general condition of the country into consideration, and were well pleased with the showing made.

Ashley Sells Business.

J. M. Ashley, well known tailor of this city, has disposed of his interest in the Ashley and Johnson tailoring establishment. He closed a deal Tuesday whereby Wayne Conway, formerly of the Electra Grocery purchased his interest.

Mr. Ashley is one of the old-time citizens of Electra and has been engaged in the tailoring business here for the past eight or ten years. He recently reached the decision that he would like to change his line of business and for this reason disposed of his interests.

According to Ashley he will not leave Electra and is making plans for entering another line of business in the near future.

Local Dokies Honored.

Three local men were named Royal Princes in the Dramatic Order Knights of Khorassan, according to a news item published in the Dixie Dokey, the Temple's official organ. The local men receiving the appointments were R. E. McCaskil, L. D. Embry and Sid W. Smith.

Eight Princes were appointed in the Ft. Worth district the others being as follows: J. O. Bell of Denton. [illegible] Luttrell of Mineral Wells and J. M. Williams, Doc Holland and I. N. Smith, of Ft. Worth.

Aged Citizen Dies.

Mrs. H. J. Robinson, age 75, died at her home here last Friday after several days illness from Pneumonia. Funeral services were held at the family residence, 708 Main Street, by Rev. R. B. Curry pastor of the First Methodist Church and interment was made in the Electra cemetery.

Mrs. Robinson came to Electra in 1908 and has resided here ever since. She made her home with her son, Aston, who is well known in the city. She is survived by four children, Aston and Alward, of this city and D. R. of Point Texas and Mrs. Jessie Pendleton of Farmersville, Texas.

Progress With Band.

According to Mr. Smith who started organization of a band here a few days ago, great interest is being manifested and something like thirty have expressed a desire to join the band. A large number have already started taking lessons and Mr. Smith believes that it will only be a short time until actual concerts will be given.

In addition to the band Mr. Smith is organizing an orchestra, composed of local talent, which will be available to clubs and various organizations for dance purposes.

Store Changes Hands.

A deal has been closed whereby the Army Store on Cleveland Avenue has been sold to M. Harris and William Chast, of Wichita Falls, who were formerly engaged in business in that city.

Mr. Harris has just returned from a trip to the market centers of the east where he has made extensive purchases for the establishment. He states that a complete line of men's clothing, both high grade dress goods and work clothes will be handled and his purchases are already beginning to arrive.

The store has been rearranged to take care of the growing stock.

Mr. Harris says that financial conditions are improving in the east and that the wholesalers of clothing and textiles are freely predicting a good year's business for 1922. It is the opinion of these people that conditions all over the country are much better than they have been in the past.

Prominent Geologist Here.

M. M. Garrett, nationally known geologist, who has recently returned from South Africa, where he has been engaged in making an oil survey has been in the city the past few days making up a report for some of the major companies.

Mr. Garrett expects to go over something like 125 miles of territory working out of this city.

Announce Art Exhibit.

Supt. B. N. Densmore, of the Electra public schools, announced this week that the Elson Arts Exhibit would be in this city on the 3rd and 4th of February and will be presented to the public on the second and third floors of the Thompson Ward school building.

This exhibit includes over 200 pictures of the world's most famous paintings, both by modern and old masters. An admission fee of 15 and 25 cents will be charged to visit the exhibition and the proceeds will go to the school and be used as a fund with which to purchase pictures for the different rooms. The room selling the most tickets will be presented with a picture free. Any citizen who desires to purchase a picture to be hung in the school may do so and the name of the donor will be placed in gold on the frame.

Wednesday Study Club.

The Wednesday Music club had one of the most interesting meetings of the new year, Wednesday afternoon, presided over by the president, Mrs. Sam J. Dotson.

Texas composers was the subject and Miss Genevive Gallagher, leader. Roll call was responded to with names of Texas musicians making good in the musical world and an interesting program was rendered.

The next meeting of the club will be the first of February, the subject studied will be "Dialect Music."

Mrs. Campbell Entertains.

Mrs. Campbell entertained the Primo Bridge club Tuesday afternoon at her home. Mrs. Hyter made high score. Refreshments were served to the following members. Mesdames J. H. Harris, J. T. McDannald, J. A. Wise, V. B. Williams, E. E. Merket, B. V. Magee, A. S. Haaf, S. C. Hyter, C. E. McDannald, T. H. Smith, John Brownlee, S. E. Cramer.

MARRIED SUNDAY IN WICHITA FALLS.

A. S. Burlison, employe of Tarlton Drug company and Miss Francis Kettle were married last Saturday night at Wichita Falls. The couple left Electra shortly after 11 o'clock and the ceremony was performed about midnight by Justice of the Peace Quinn.

Jerry on the Job

DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE TO BE PLAYED AGAIN

Monday Night, for the Last Time at Wichita Theater, Mr. Lorch Will Appear in Famous Dual Role.

"The Unkissed Bride," a Mirth Provoking Comedy, to Be Presented During Remainder of Week.

In response to popular demand Mr. Lorch and his company will play, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" once more and for the last time tomorrow (Monday) night at the Wichita Theatre. Several hundred people were turned away at the last performance, and it is to accommodate these and others who want to see Mr. Lorch in the famous dual role that he has decided to put on the play again. There will be no future performances of it.

Beginning Tuesday night and running for the remainder of the week, with bargain matinees Wednesday and Saturday, the bill will be "The Un-Kissed Bride," another tremendously funny farce comedy built exclusively for laughing purposes. For better than a year this farce convulsed New York playgoers and then it was sent on the road with equal success. Here is comedy sparkling in its wit, remarkable in its construction and throughly enjoyable in every line and scene. It is a farce of a new sort, there are new stage tricks, and the love interest is sufficient to make the play doubly attractive.

"The Un-Kissed Bride" is ingenuous, audacious and debonair. It is full of rapid change opportunity for mirth and excitement and love and adventure imbued with nerve and vim. There are more unexpected and astonishing surprises than were ever crowded into three ordinary plays. Without any doubt whatever this frisky, frolicsome farce will please every attendant at the Wichita next week for each member of the Lorch company will be in an ideal part.

Tuesday night every lady accompanied by a gentleman holding a paid ticket will be admitted free; but this privilege does not extend to any other occasion—it is for Tuesday night only.

"BACK PAY" TO BE SHOWN AT THE OLYMPIC

Seena Owen Admirably Depicts Leading Character in Play From the Pen of Fanny Hurst.

Seena Owen, whose performance in "The Woman God Changed" has been described as one of the finest examples of dramatic acting ever seen in motion pictures, again has the leading role in "Back Pay," a new Paramount picture created by Cosmopolitan Productions coming to the Olympic theater beginning Thursday next. The story was written by Fannie Hurst.

In "The Woman God Changed" Miss Owen depicted a woman who from the start was bad and who gradually comes through hard experience, to see the light of righteousness and clean living. In "Back Pay" she has once more a role in which she is first seen as an unsophisticated country girl who is later plunged into the vortex of New York's wildest life.

As Hester Bevins, Miss Owen undergoes a moral breaking down, but shining through the mask of her gayety is a faint longing for the upright simple life she had led in her small town home.

Playing opposite Miss Owen is Matt Moore, well remembered for his parts in "Straight is the Way" and "The Passionate Pilgrim." Mr. Moore, in the character of Jerry Newcombe, is the plain, straightforward country boy who loves Hester in spite of her rejection of him, in spite of her leaving the town where they live and in spite of the life she subsequently leads. It is Jerry's undying love for Hester that is the keynote of the dramatic story of "Back Pay."

GIRLS! LEMONS WHITEN HANDS

Press the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter-pint of harmless and delightful lemon-bleach lotion to soften and whiten red, rough or chapped hands. This home-made lemon lotion is far superior to glycerin and rose water to smoothen the skin. Famous stage beauties use it to bleach and bring that soft clear, rosy, white complexion, because it doesn't irritate.—Adv.

"CHU CHIN CHOW" APPROCHES

The Famous Mannequins of Bagdad in "Chu Chin Chow"

"Chu Chin Chow" is really coming. the date is Feb. 6, 7 and 8, and if a five year record in London, two in New York and the guaranteed metropolitan production and cast, the same that has played Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Washington and all the other big-time cities, mean anything at all to the theatre-lovers of Wichita Falls then this city is about to enjoy a festival of music and spectacle, drama and comedy, which it will remember for many years to come.

Not in this generation has a production of such magnitude and interested ventured into Wichita Falls. It is as if the good old days of the theatre were with us once more to read the important names in the cast; to know that the fourteen massive scenes and the nearly nine hundred beautiful costumes are the exact duplicates in design and fabric (for this famous extravaganza of the Orient is gowned anew every season) of those that London created, that New York copied, and that all the other representative American cities have praised and glorified until the book of adjectives was exhausted; and above all, to realize that F. Ray Combstock and Morris Gest, its generous producers have conceded our city her rightful place on the theatrical mop, with promise of other great things should we prove ready to receive them.

Everyone will see "Chu Chin Chow." It's first visit among us will be its last, and the opportunity is one not to be missed. Due notice will be given of the box office sale, though mail orders will be received now, to be filled in order of their receipt.

"Wally" vs. Rent "Pirates"

Wallace Reid in the Paramount Picture
'Rent Free'

In these days of high rents and profiteering landlords, "Rent Free," a new Paramount picture starring Wallace Reid which will be shown at the Olympic theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, starts the audience off with a happy thought and keeps them laughing to the final fade-out.

There is a lively plot and plenty of action, a good deal of which supposedly takes place on the roofs of two New York rooming houses. Wallace Reid plays the young artist who shuffles for himself rather than study law in his father's office. To get the better of the rent problem, he moves up on the roof, and later establishes himself in a house, the owners of which are away. There he finds a mysterious note about a will, which is uncovered in the end of the story and awards the girl, whom he has met in the meantime, also a roof dweller, the home and estate of which she has been defrauded by her unscrupulous stepmother.

Lila Lee plays the role of the girl and Henry Barrows, Gertrude Short, Lillian Leighton, Clarence Geldart, Clarie McDowell and Lucien Littlefield are excellent in their portrayals.

FOX FILM STAR IS STRONG FOR BOBBED LOCKS

Shirley Mason, Bobbed Hair Devotee, Appears in "Ever Since Eve," at Empress Two Days.

From the immemorial cannoisseurs in feminine beauty have been accustomed to assure us that fine, luxuriant hair was "woman's crowning glory." This remains true, in a sense—though custom has gone so far in curtailing the length of the hair among millions of young women that the old-time connoisseur would probably get a shock and declare that "bobbed" hair could not possibly be luxuriant. But there's room for argument.

Shirley Mason, noted as a star in William Fox photoplays, who is to appear at the Empress theater Monday and Tuesday in "Ever Since Eve," is said to have been the first woman among feminine screen celebrities to bob her hair. No one certainly will assert that this in any way mars her piquant beauty.

To a friend who took exception to the cutting of her luxuriant locks, Miss Mason recently said:

"It appears to me to be a common-sense practice. If the hair is fine and abundant, originally, it remains a 'crowning glory' even when shortened. A practical advantage, in my case at least, is that I am not forced to wear an uncomfortable wig if called upon to disguise myself as a boy—as I sometimes have to do. Then think of the saving in time and labor when one is not compelled to dress long hair in the morning, and often at night as well if one is going out to some social function. Not alone time and labor, but the fatigue of holding up one's arms for half an hour before the mirror is little short of appaling after one has been liberated from it. Finally, there is the lessened discomfort in hot weather.

"No; bobbed hair has my endorsement. I would like to see it universally adopted—at least by young women."

EILEEN PERCY IN "MAID OF WEST" AT GEM

Eileen Percy, the blonde beauty of the William Fox forces, is starred in a picture called "Maid of the West" and will be at the Gem theater next Thursday. The story is of a western girl who goes east to inherit a fortune, be introduced into society, and have a nice husband picked for her. The western girl, however, does her own picking and sends a gang of high-toned crooks to jail after she handles them in true western style. William Scott is Miss Percy's leading man.

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

George Pattullo is an adopted son of Texas, he was a war correspondent during the great conflict and is a popular contributor to the Saturday Post and other periodicals. George married a Dallas girl, a Miss Kate Wilson, and she accompanied him to France and Flanders in war time. Raymond G. Carroll is the New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Public Ledger. This skit is from the pen of Carroll: "One of the New York book reviewers offers as a defense for the mutual admiration cult: 'In an age which has an extraordinary tendency to fly into a great state of calm about things it seems unfortunate to jump upon the youngster who has the temerity to leap to his feet and let out an occasional long cheer about something.' Alas, the cheer is invariably directed at some friendly publisher. George Pattullo, of Dallas, Texas, author of a flock of very readable short stories, is domiciled at the Hotel St. Regis for the opening months of 1922. He writes a story and sends it out and then starts another—that is his method. Concerning log-rolling by mutually anointed book reviewers Mr. Pattullo said: 'They suggest Pomeranian dogs on the sidewalk barking at the passing high-powered motorcars.' Up until 1908 Mr. Pattullo was engaged in newspaper work in Montreal, London and Boston. He is of Scotch lineage and has a keen business sense aside from his literary gift. A few months ago he had opportunity to set $1,000 at work in partnership with another Texan, taking joint ownership of a small strip of land in a new oil district. They sold out before the boom, and from that one little venture Mr. Pattullo banked a net profit of $30,000." Now the Dallas Golf and Country clubs will know him some more. There appears to be money in oil.

It is interesting to see everywhere this year the increased number of motor cars in use all through the winter, says a writer in a New York publication and he adds it is also interesting to note the causes which have brought this condition about. In the first place he says people are more dependent upon motor transportation than ever before. Those who own cars have arranged their time on the basis of automobile use. They are accustomed to doing more in a day than before. In some cases they have established their homes in locations best accessible by motorcar. To be deprived of their automobiles for several winter months would mean uncomfortable changes in their very habits of living, a falling back upon the use of inferior conveyances, a loss of the personal independence which motorcars afford and many personal discomforts in getting about which winter always brings in its train. Because of this people are not putting up their cars for the winter, as they used to do. Once they have driven cars the year round, they never think any more about doing without their cars at any time. Of course, automobiles are being built better today than ever before. They are being improved all the time. Every year finds them better able to meet all kinds of traveling conditions. Owners, too, have become more and more familiar with what their cars will do. They expect more and they get it. It is also true that better streets and roads in all parts of the country have helped to increase the winter use of motor transportation. As a matter of fact, it is when the weather is cold or is disagreeable otherwise that the use of an automobile is most enjoyable as well as practical. And in recent winters motorcars have proved their ability to transport their owners when and where other means of conveyance have failed. This is especially true of the light, yet sturdy and powerful cars—the type that is proving the most convenient and economical for general use at all times. They have the advantage over heavier cars through snow and other usual winter road conditions. The development of closed cars of this type has had a very great influence in the increase of motorcar use in winter. When you consider that you can enjoy all the comforts of the closed car in any weather, together with all the superior advantages of dependability and economy of light, open cars it is impossible to see why any one should deprive himself of motor transportation through the winter. In fact, it is easy to see why the practice of winter driving is increasing in popularity. Even closed cars are within the means of virtually every one. And people are buying them now, at this time of year, for use this winter and next spring and next fall and winter. And it is due to the present low price of quality, completely equipped cars of both open and closed types that you are going to see more automobiles in use this winter than ever before.

Dr. E. J. Dillon repeats in his recent book, "Mexico on the Verge," a story told him by supposedly informed persons in Washington of the poisoning in Mexico of a certain Englishman of the name of "Danall or Dalinn." The stranger was invited to a luncheon given by some of the colleagues of President Obregon, and that was the last luncheon the poor fellow ever took. "Did you ever meet or hear of that Englishman?" Dillon was asked. "Yes," he answered, "I did. And curiously enough I received the news of his death from Warsaw, and also from Paris, a fortnight ago. The details were slightly different and the name too, was slightly different—it was E. J. Dillon. So you see the yarn has gone the rounds of two continents and reached me, the principal dramatis personae from two sources!" This is one of several similar anecdotes given by Dr. Dillon of the more or less organized propaganda spread abroad in this and other countries to show that conditions in Mexico demand intervention, says Leslie's Weekly. Dr. Dillon, an observer with a lifetime of experience in world politics, is favorably impressed with President Obregon, and finds that conditions in Mexico are altogether different from what they were under Carranza. However that may be—and the subject is too big and controversial to be handled in a word here—every one who knows anything about Mexico knows that the sort of thing he complains about is actually going on. It is not a pretty business, to say the least, and not in keeping with American notions of a square deal.

District Judge F. O. McKinsey delivered a law enforcement address in the city of Decatur. He denounced mob law. He appealed to all good citizens to uphold the written law. He said masked men and their program of mid-night riding was not the proper method for enforcing the laws of the land; that even a criminal was due a free trial by jury instead of being tried, convicted and punished by masked men in dark places. The judge could not credit the maskers with any pure motives or good results from their labors, but insisted that instead of using secret organizations to purify the government, that the people should get back to the fundamentals of free government, each citizen having due respect for the laws which were made to protect the persons and rights of the citizenship. Every citizen should pursue the even tenor of his way, stand up for righteousness and morality, assisting the constituted authorities in the enforcement of the laws." Ninety-five per cent of the people of Texas are law-abiding. Ninety-five per cent will stand for the written law when fully informed. Representative men should not dodge jury service. They should qualify for jury service. They should convict the guilty and vindicate the innocent.

A well known financier of London, in a review of 1921 of the financial history of European countries gives the Lombard street point of view as follows: "In Belgium most industries are working at full capacity, and the traffic at the port of Antwerp was very considerable, so that extension of facilities is planned. While efforts to balance the budget are made, there is still considerable deficit; the outstanding indebtedness to America and this country naturally influences the rate of exchange, so that the first claim on the reparation payments has not yet had much effect. In France great strides have been made in increasing taxation and balancing the budget; the deficit for the present year now estimated at about 250,000,000 francs against the previous estimated 2,000,000,000. Foreign trade has considerably improved, and the excess of imports over exports almost entirely disappeared. Trade in Switzerland has been very bad; the Government subsidized some branches of industry in order to provide work for unemployed. The watch and embroidery trades, and also the dairy produce industry suffered seriously. The Government control of coal and other articles of import is held responsible for a great part of the difficulties. The public services, railways, postoffices were operated at a considerable loss. The hotel industry is in a bad way owing to tourists being conspicuous by their absence on account of the high cost of living. The large premium of the Swiss rato seems to be chiefly due to continued remittances from abroad for safe keeping. Commercial relations between Spain and other countries, especially France, are regarded with misgivings, the high tariff and retaliation policy being resented on account of the stagnation in trade, and it is hoped that by way of negotiation new commercial treaties will be arranged and barriers removed. The position of the Bank of Spain is a strong one. The Czechoslovakian government is very determined in putting its house in order, raising taxation and doing everything possible to assist development of trade. Developments in Germany are of importance to her industries. Assistance has not been rendered to Austria yet to such a degree as to improve the position; in fact, it has become considerably worse, which the fall in the rate shows. Sympathy for the country is not wanting; but even the Ter-Meulen scheme, which is regarded as particularly suited to relief measures for Austria, has not been applied yet, as the necessary securities are not yet available." Of England itself, this "City summary" remarks that "our foreign trade figures seem to offer some explanation for the recovery of sterling in New York; so do American purchases of foreign securities and their financing of South America and other countries. Furthermore, the Washington conference produced a sentimental effect not to be overestimated. On the other hand, it has to be borne in mind that in case of a revival in trade our imports will grow and that also from next year on we shall have to remit more than 50,000,000 pounds sterling yearly for interest on our debt to America.

Mexico is a sister Republic. Mexico has a staple government. Mexico is doing its best to come back. To Mexico our total exports for the eleven months ending with November, 1921, is 210 million dollars against 176 million dollars in the same months of 1920 and 119 million dollars in the corresponding months of 1919. Why not give Mexico a glad hand? Why threaten Mexico with a big stick?

Denouncing the Snell forestry bill before the house agricultural committee as "legislation in favor of the lumber interests rather than in the interest of the whole people," Gifford Pinchot, chief forester under Roosevelt and father of forest conservation in this country, has set forth his ideas of the necessary steps to be taken before it is too late. "Thirteen out of 48 states," said Pinchot, "are lumber exporting. That is to say they produce more than enough for their own needs. All the others must import in whole or in part. "Ten years from today, possibly sooner, the number of states having a surplus will be reduced to five! And these will all be on the Pacific coast or near it. Pennsylvania, once the greatest lumber producing states, today imports four-fifths of what it consumes. The greatest economic question of the age is the conservation of our forests. Without lumber we are economically helpless. One-half the lumber consumed in this country is needed on the farms, yet our once vast forested area has been reduced one-sixth what it originally was. The first great essential is the mandatory stoppage by congress of the devastation of our forests by the lumbermen. No state legislation can possibly get results. The law must be national and apply with equal force to the whole country."

Railroad executives are getting wise. There is room in Texas for an additional twenty million inhabitants. There is more cheap and fertile land in Texas than can be found under the skies of any other state or half dozen states. Thousands of farmers and truck growers are reminded that Wichita Valley lands will be on the market shortly as the irrigation project is going over with a rush. All this reminds the railroad editor of the Fort Worth Record: "The gulf coast lines are going after North Texas farmers to settle in the Rio Grande valley and along the gulf coast. The line recently put in an excursion rate of a fare and a third for the round trip from Fort Worth and Dallas to Raymondville and points south. The tickets are on sale Saturdays and Sundays. It is expected to have a large number of tenant farmers in the black land belt and in North Texas visit that section of the country that produces citrus and other tropical and semi-tropical fruits and vegetables by irrigation. The fact that the gulf coast lines have broken over may induce the North, Northwest and West Texas lines to act similarly for interstate business. It is understood that several of the big ranches in West Texas are to be cut up into small tracts and put on the market. Announcement already has been made by Fayette Tankersley of Concho county that as soon as the Colorado river valley irrigation project is assured that his "Lazy S" ranch will be cut up into small farms for settlers. Other ranches in Runnels, Sterling, Concho, Tom Green and Schleicher counties also will be turned from the production of cattle, sheep and goats into making other stuff. It is generally known that the soil of West Texas is the most productive in the state when moisture is sufficient to make a crop. The various irrigation plants, already out there, have demonstrated that fact. The cantaloupes of the Pecos are superior to those of Colorado or California, also are the grapes produced in the vicinity of Barstow." Just what are the rail executives of West Texas, which includes the Panhandle and the Plains country, going to do about it?

Three distinguished Englishmen see gloom for the Empire. The Living Age caps a series of quotations from the British press upon the future of the Empire with these three paragraphs: H. G. Wells—"Either the empire will have played its part in the development of civilization, and have changed into and given place to a much larger union of free states, or it will have become a danger and a nuisance to mankind, and have followed German imperialism and Roman imperialism to the dust heap." Sir Rider Haggard made this prophecy: "The empire could only be saved by an infusion into it of an adequate population of our own blood. There was room in the empire for three or four hundred millions of the British race. Australia, for her own security, shoud welcome every drop of English blood we could send her." The famous Dean Inge is as pessimistic as the others: "One hundred years hence the population of the British Islanders would be about 50 millions. The United States would probably contain a population of 300 millions. Canada would probably have about 60 millions and Australia the same number, while New Zealand would have perhaps 20 or 25 millions. The United States would therefore have an enormous predominance in wealth, power, and security over all the other English speaking peoples. These islands would have fallen from their pride of place, and would be only one among several dominions. They would be no longer the center of a world empire in which they had the dominating power." But why worry? It is the present that concerns us. Those who are on earth a hundred years hence may be able to settle their own problems.

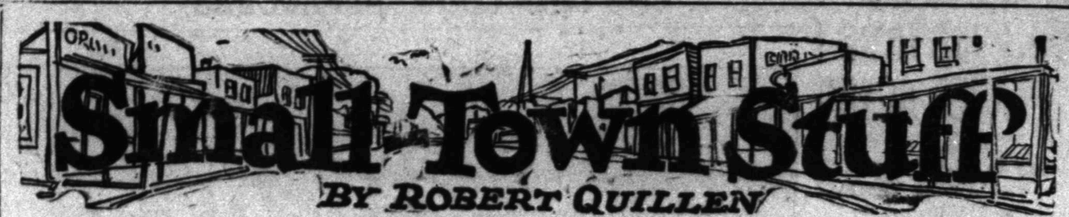

"Benedict XV. died of pneumonia so far as the physical body is concerned but there is reason to believe that the sorrows and cares of war time, which broke the heart of his predecessor, weakened his own resistance to ill health and the final dissolution," editorializes the Dallas News. "The personality of the man, however, was merged into the personality of the office. That effacement of self is in keeping with the character of the post which he held. But it must also have been in keeping with the character of the man who held it. For in the short cable accounts of his illness there was room for references to his gentle solicitude for the welfare of those who ministered to him, a solicitude which not even the presence of his approaching death could silence. And of Pope Benedict, head of the largest religious organization in the world, it will be remembered by the world, Catholic and non-Catholic alike, that he bent every particle of influence and power which his position gave him toward the consummation of peace and the promotion of good will among the peoples of the earth. Having labored earnestly in so good a cause, surely his spirit may enter upon its rest content." Pope Benedict was a casualty of the world war; Lord Bryce was a casualty of the world war; Woodrow Wilson is a casualty of the world war. It is not necessary for a man to die on the field of battle to be a war casualty. Pope Benedict, according to a disinguished American newspaper man, was a scholar, a trained diplomat, an aristocrat, with the traditional Genoese trait of shrewdeness in money matters. Small, frail, somewhat bent, thin and angular, with a weak, inharmonious voice. Yet triumphing over all of these with the inherent force of his character and mind. That was Pope Benedict XV (Giacomo Della Chiesa) who served as pope since September 3, 1914, when he was chosen the 260th pope, to succeed Piux X. In the difficult years that he had directed the policy of the Roman Catholic church, Benedict XV had made relations between the Vatican and the Italian government easier, and had taken an interested part in world affairs. The revival of the Vatican as a great power in diplomacy is the personal achievement of Benedict XV. During the world war he appealed to all the belligerents in behalf of peace. He voiced his proposals for ending the conflict on four separate occasions. On the last occasion his document called forth the noteworthy reply from President Wilson as spokes man for the allies. He was strongly in favor of the League of Nations plan and as strongly against communism and bolshevism. When America entered the world war Pope Benedict XV expressed a belief that the country's participation would likely facilitate the approach of world peace. After the war he declared in favor of the Washington arms conference. Born in Pagli, in the diocese of Genoa, November 21, 1854, the son of a wealthy nobleman Benedict XV got a thorough grounding in, his boyhood studies. He decided to enter the priesthood early in life and prepared for it in the schools of Genoa. In 1876 he entered the Capranican College at Rome and finaly became a student at the Academy of Noble Ecclesiastics. His studies were completed in the last days of Pope Pius IX and he was ordained to the priesthood in 1878 at the age of 25. Shortly after he went to Madrid with Archbishop Rampolla and on his return was made a permanent under secretary of the secretariate of state. He rose rapidly from that time on, in the ranks of the church, being made archbishop of Bologna in 1907. After seven years he was elevated to the College of Cardinals.

Germany is buying from the United States, regardless of conditions in other European countries. Germany is coming back. Our total exports to Germany in the eleven months ending with November, 1921, were 351 million dollars against 253 million dollars in the same month of 1920 and 75 million dollars in the correspondending month of 1919. The principle articles sent to Germany in the eleven months were: Cotton, 727 million pounds, against 293 million in the same period of 1920; copper, 212 million pounds, against 78 million; crude mineral oil, 14 million gallons, with no record for the preceding year. In practically all of the important foodstuffs, the movements to Germany show big gains; wheat, 37 million bushels, against 6 million in the corresponding months of last year; flour, 1,619,000 barrels, against 934,000; corn, 11 million bushels, with no record for the year preceding; bacon, 53 million pounds, against 47 million; lard, 269 million pounds, against 81 million; condensed milk, 53 million pounds, against 25 million; oleo oil, 20 million pounds, against 3 million; cottonseed oil a little over 7 million pounds, against 1 1-2 million. Lubricating oil shows a total of 44 million gallons, against 28 million; oil, gasoline and naptha show a material reduction. Germans are working their way back. There are Europeans who are trying to talk their way back.

Former State Senator W. A. Hanger of Fort Worth is one of the foremost lawyers and Democratic leaders of Texas. He was for many years a stalwart opponent of prohibition and perhaps the most influential advocate of liquor regulation in the Southwest. However, Senator Hanger is a fearless champion of law enforcement. Governor Neff asked editors and judges and representative citizens to preach on law enforcement on a certain day. Senator Hanger followed Judge Ben M. Terrell of Fort Worth and this is what he said: "Prohibition enforcement and stamping out the bootlegger is one of the biggest problems confronting this government today. The time has come when everybody in the United States who cares anything for his government has got to aid in driving out the maker and seller of the poisonous liquor. Unless this is done and done immediately our government will crumble. If the bootlegger is to be allowed to continue the sale of his goods it will not be long before the merchants up and down Main street selling clothing and other necessities of life will be forced to close up. There will be no money left in the country for the law-abiding citizens. The bootlegger will have the money market cornered. He is near that point now. They are buying up the black land farms over the country and riding around in fine automobiles. They will continue, until they can be carried into the courts and given penitentiary sentences instead of having to pay only a light fine of $25, while the man who commits burglary or other offenses will get from ten to fifteen years imprisonment." Senator Hanger moves with the procession. He is a Democratic who believes in law and liberty and not in law and license. He is for the written law and its enforcement.

William Randolph Hearst is at it again. He has acquired another leading daily newspaper, the Detroit Free Press, and the purchase of the Free Press it is said will establish William Randolph in the foremost city of the United States which up to the six months ago he had no direct newspaper connection. Hearst will be in a position to dominate the Detroit field as he became the owner of the Detroit Times, an evening newspaper, some months ago. Lord Northcliffe isn't the only pebble on the newspaper beach.

Men are always telling what they would do under certain circumstances, but when the aforesaid circumstances happen along they invariably do something different.

Uncle Gus.

Uncle Gus sat near the stove, cleaning his shotgun and pausing at intervals to squint through its immaculate barrels.

"I wish folks wa'nt allowed to use no kind o' gun exceptin' this," said he. "O' course, officers has use fo' fightin' hardware to put the fear o' God in rascals; but shotguns would do just as well as pistols. I ain't got no use fo' pistols. They seem kind o' sneakin' to me. If I know a feller is totin' a pistol, I know he's got a yaller streak in 'im. He's scairt. Boys totes 'em, maybe, just to be smart; but I ain't never seed a full-growed man a-totin' one without he was a scary kind o' feller.

"It's the scairt ones that is dangerous, too. I ain't never been afraid of a brave man. I know he ain't a-goin' to do nothin' rash. He'll lick me, maybe, but he won't do no mo' than seems necessary. These scairt fellers with pistols in the' pockets is like a pa'tridge. When you flush 'em, they go plum wild. They git so scairt they ain't got a lick o' sense, an' if you don't watch sharp they'll kill you dead as a hammer.

"We had a policeman here once what was scary. He didn't look it, him bein' a great strappin' feller with that kind o' faded-out blue eyes most killers has; but he didn't have no backbone a-tall. Ever' time he went to arrest a feller, he had to cuss a streak to work up courage enough to do it. An' then like as not he'd go wild an' lam the feller in the head with his club.

"The only dog what ever bit me was a aig-suckin' hound' I caught in my chicken house. I had a stick an' was a-goin' to beat 'im, an' he backed into a corner an' whimpered. He was the scaredest dog I ever seed. But when I got close on him, he up and snapped at me. Got me right on the wrist. Like as not he didn't know he done it; just too scairt to have any sense.

"Folks is like that. The' ain't no 'trustin' a coward. An' the' wouldn't be no pistols toted if the' wa'n't no cowards."

Talk.

One who is possessed of a glib tongue may upon occasion talk himself into trouble, but he will, with equal celerity, talk himself out again. The ordinary mortal, however, more frequently talks himself in than out, and his days are punctuated with the remorseful phrase: "I wish I had kept my fool mouth shut."

Man is possessed of many powers by means of which he can get himself into trouble, but the ability to talk leads all the rest. For all persons a foot high have opinions and prejudices of their own and feel a little offended when other people express contrary opinions. Every mortal enjoys the sound of his own voice, and, given an audience of his own choosing, is happiest when holding forth without fear of interruption. Being the center of interest appeals to his vanity, and nothing so generously contributes to happiness as a tickled ego.

It would appear, therefore, that it is the part of wisdom to keep one's mouth shut and learn to listen. This is true, in a measure, for on short acquaintance it is difficult to distinguish between a wise man and a fool, if both keep still; and a good listener is popular because he deals in a subtle form of flattery.

But even silence may be overdone; for if one can talk and doesn't one's acquaintances become suspicious of a circumstance so unusual. "Here is a mystery," they will say; "either this man has a head devoid of ideas and composed entirely of ivory, or he is a conceited ass who is laughing in his sleeve while we chatter."

The Old Folks.

Men who make a study of such things say that when a wolf becomes old and unable longer to fend for itself, other wolves of the pack turn upon it and kill it—not because of any evil it has done, but solely because it is unable to protect itself.

Thus wolves demonstrate their possession of some of the qualities commonly thought peculiar to mortals.

Mortals, however, are less humane. For the wolves do their work quickly and mercifully. And they kill the body without first torturing the heart.

When men grow old and feeble, they are treated with respect and a kindly consideration if they are possessed of great properties and retain the degree of wit necessary to make or alter a will. But if they are poor and have not sufficient strength to earn their bread, it is common practice to call them a "burden."

Says the daughter to her husband: "Father is becoming so helpless and childish that it is almost more than I can do to wait on him and bear with him. I am not strong, anyway, and my nerves are getting in a frightful stage. I think we should send him to Brother John. John's house is larger than ours, anyway; and he has no right to put all the burden on us."

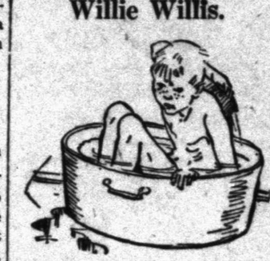

Thus the old folks are driven from daughter to son and son to daughter, and live always in an atmosphere that is chill with resentment. Their frequent complaint that they are in the way meets with a half-hearted denial. The ache in their hearts bears testimony to the conviction that they are considered a nuisance.

Wolves have their little faults, but they are a pretty decent sort, after all. Their methods are direct and innocent of hypocrisy. The wolves who are aged and broken may feel that they are treated unjustly, but they do not feel it for long. Merciful fangs end their days, and leave them little opportunity to reflect concerning ingratitude.

Aunt Het.

"There ain't no sense in a woman quarrelin' with a man, when she can get him to do anything in the world by braggin' on him a little."

Willie Willis.

Little Willie Willis caught a severe cold Monday night while standing in front of Martha Howard's home wishing the house would burn down so he could rescue her.

THE LEAVENING

Copyright, 1921 by W. Werner

Now that she was so near her journey's end her heart began to fail her. She felt timid, doubtful, almost frightened. Had she not been foolish to come? It probably only meant another disappointment, mixed perhaps with the chagrin of not being remembered, and she had had so many disappointments already. Her life had been full of them and of sorrow and hard times.

Yet as she sat gazing hungrily out of the car window at the evening panorama of hills, valley and river, she found some compensation for her trouble and sacrifice in making this journey. For it had entailed both. She had not realized how poor she was until she began to make preparations for her departure. And she could not ask the children to help her. Rolfe had just married and Charlotte, who had been married some years and had a child, had just had an expensive sickness. It was, in fact, her long period of nursing Charlotte which had made some sort of change necessary, and as she could not afford the seashore she was going back to the town where she had lived fifteen years before to see her old acquaintances.

During that fifteen years she had lost herself to them. She thought they had forgotten her, and yet the longing in her to see the old faces and places was passionately strong. She had been so happy in the small country town with her husband and three young children. He was a doctor, and they had driven up and down the valley and over the hills together on visits to his patients. He and her oldest girl were now dead. The best part of her had been taken, she felt. True, she had Rolfe and Charlotte left, but she did not mean to them what she had meant to her husband and to Bessie.

One reason that she sat with her back to the aisle and her face so persistently turned to the window was that in the seat across from her sat Mrs. Heath, the first lady of the town to which she was going. She had known Mrs. Heath casually in the old days—their interests were far divided—but she had not hoped that Mrs. Heath would care to recall this fact now. There was a great distance between the plain little wife of a not overly popular doctor and a woman to whom life had brought every good and desirable thing. She had recognized Mrs. Heath as that woman entered the car, but Mrs. Heath had apparently not even seen her. And it was to save them both embarrassment that Celia Ferris kept her face to the window and away from the others.

Of course, she had changed. In fifteen years her hair had turned from brown to white, and her black garments were plain and not altogether becoming. She looked twenty years older than she was, while Mrs. Heath seemed younger than her years.

The train stopped as she arose to take down her coat and bag. As she turned toward the aisle she came face to face with the woman she wished to avoid. She drew back to let Mrs. Heath go ahead, but the other woman paused.

"I'm not mistaken, am I? This is Mrs. Ferris," she said.

Celia Ferris lifted her eyes. "Yes," she replied simply. "How do you do, Mrs. Heath."

"How do you do?" rejoined Mrs. Heath. She gripped Celia's hand in a most unexpected manner. "Where are you going? Where are you visiting?" she demanded.

Celia was reluctant. "I am going to the hotel——" she began.

"To the hotel! What for? You'll not be able to stand it even for one night. It has no management at all. If that's the only place you have in mind I shall take you home with me."

"Oh, I couldn't trouble you to that extent," Celia exclaimed, almost in alarm.

"It will be no trouble. I am alone in my home, save for four servants to wait upon me."

They stepped off the train. A limousine driven by a chauffeur in livery waited. The man promptly relieved Celia of her bag and opened the door for them. Mrs. Heath helped Celia in. As she settled herself and drew Celia down beside her she went on. "I am alone, for my husband died two years ago. You may have heard. Sometimes I think if he could have had Doctor Ferris for a physician he might have lived."

"Oh, thank you for saying that!" Tears sprang to Celia's eyes.

They both looked ahead a moment without speaking. Then the car whirled in between two gateposts and Mrs. Heath was at home.

From that time until she fell asleep in the polished mahogany bed of the guest room Celia moved in a numbway. And even yet when she awakened next morning she could hardly tell how she came to be there.

"Please consider yourself my guest during your stay here," Mrs. Heath said over the breakfast coffee. "I shall telephone to Ellen Satterlee and the William girls and Mrs. Goodwin that you are here. I think I'll have them all in for the evening to meet you, and any one else you can think of you'd like to see. As soon as it is known you are here you'll probably have more invitations than you can well manage." She smiled.

Celia was frozen with amazement. What did it all mean? She could not find an answer to this question as she sat listening to Mrs. Heath at the telephone saying. "Mrs. Ferris is here—the doctor's wife. Yes, yes, she is staying with us. You'll want to see her, of course? You'll come right over? Very well." Mrs. Heath hooked up the receiver. "Ellen Satterlee is coming right over. She is eager to see you. I know every one will be."

During the days that followed Celia found herself the centre of such a social whirl as she had never dreamed of. She who had thought to creep timidly into town, gaze a time or two upon her old home, recall a few happy memories and then slip away unseen, perhaps unremembered, found herself invited here, there, everywhere. She met everybody and found a cordial welcome. Doors opened to her. At night when she crept into the mahogany four-poster almost breathless with it all, she tried to reason out what had happened. It could not all be Mrs. Heath's patronage, although that means much. She felt herself involved in a mystery which there was no explaining.

Yet she enjoyed it all—so much that sometimes she forgot and allowed herself to be happy. She never got so that she could laugh and she smiled until her face lost some of its sad lines. She felt more like the spirited, dark-haired woman she had been fifteen years before than she had ever dreamed she could again.

But still the mystery continued and she believed that she should go away in the end without finding out why people were so good to her now when as her neighbors and close associates they had sometimes seemed almost indifferent. She resolved to ask Mrs. Heath. But it was not until they were on their way to the station that she found courage to do so. Even then her voice faltered as she said: "You have been so good to me—so wonderful—I can't understand it at all. I wish you would tell me what I have ever done to bring forth so much kindness. I'm sure I don't deserve it."

Mrs. Heath laid her ample hand over Celia's work-hardened, thin one. "The good that people do live after them," she said solemnly. "You see, while you were here among us, you and the doctor, we didn't realize the true worth of either of you. Perhaps we were all too young to do so. Life goes pretty fast when you are in the middle thirties. But since then we've all grown older and had more time to think. At fifty you begin to get the true perspective of life. Tom's going taught me a lot. I believe if he could have had Dr. Ferris—but I told you that. Yes, the older you get the harder you cling to the old, tried, true things of life. And then you always were a sweet thing. I'll never forget how that time poor Mary Cornell's boy was sick with the fever you went and nursed him yourself and did almost as much as the doctor in bringing him out. It's things like that we remember when we get on in years. And people like you."

They had reached the station. A group of young girls waited with more flowers for Celia. "Good-bye," they sang gayly. "Come back again."

But it was to Mrs. Heath that Celia turned tearfully.

"Yes, come back," Mrs. Heath said. "And, Celia, you'll be sure of your welcome next time, won't you?"

Watching the Parade

By JOHN PILGRIM

His name might be Jenks, but it isn't, and it doesn't make any difference anyhow. His one job in life is to make over business enterprises that have gone sour. Incidentally he has made himself rich at it. But he has worked at his job because that particular job is the one thing that life holds for him. As soon as he has turned a wreck into a prosperous concern he sells out and begins looking about for another wreck.

"How do you do it?" I asked.

"I'm a salesman primarily," he said. "I sell goods through other men. But I will not have a salesman on the job unless he has got what I call business religion."

Sometimes the goods he has to sell are no better than other competitive goods. He never puts them on the market until they are at least as good. But he can always sell them because his men believe in them. They know all about the articles they sell. They know where they are made, how they are made, of what materials they are made and what they are good for. They never try to sell a man who does not need them, but a possible customer has no chance against them. Their eyes shine. They have the fervor of evangelists. The old man gives them a motto.

"Young man," he says to them, "sell thyself."

The advertising columns are full of people, he says, who offer to teach "personality" in a course of lessons. He does not believe in that sort of teaching. The dominant young man with an undershot jaw and a loose tongue and an imperious forefinger has no place in his establishment. That sort of a man might bully a customer into buying once, he says, but next time around he would not be able to break into that customer's office with a crowbar:

"The salesman I want," he said, "is the sort of a man who gets himself filled up with the merits of the goods he has to sell. He talks about them to his wife. He comes busting into my office to tell me new things. He may be a small, narrow-shouldered, rabbit-faced person with a squeaky voice, but if he knows his game and believes in it from turret to foundation stone he will make good."

Hard times never come too hard for a business represented by that sort of men, he says.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

DUMM AND DUMMER ON HAYS AND THE MOVIES

"What do you make of Will Hays, the postmaster general, going over to the moving picture interests?" asked Senator Dumm as he leaned against a swinging door in the corner drug store and fell into the street.

"I think it means the Republican party is thinking of saying it with celluloid in the next campaign," returned Representative Dummer, rushing out and sitting down in the gutter beside him.

"That's one of the few bright things you ever said," returned Senator Dumm. "Association with me is sharpening your wits. You've got it doped out exactly. The time when a party could win an election by depending upon a flock of long-winded speakers, a few catchy billboard slogans, and a few hundred thousand banners with oil paintings of the candidates under the words, 'The People's Choice' has passed. Both parties found out in the last campaign that no silver-tongued orator could get an audience in any community where there was a good Charlie Chaplin film on the same night."

"And I'll tell the world, put in Dummer, "that when it came down to two rival billboards, one showing a picture of Pola Negri and the other showing a bust of Warren Harding or Jim Cox, it was no contest."

o o o

"The movies have come to be the biggest advertising medium, next to the newspapers, in the country," resumed Dumm. "And the political party that rules the camera will rock the election results."

"I'm not so sure," argued Dummer. "Certainly the Democrats had better representation in the movies during the war than the G. O. P. Every time I went into a movie house I was sure to see Newt Baker and Joe Daniels grinning at me from ear to ear and wig-wagging me with high silk hats. I think Daniels and Baker consumed more miles of film in the aggregate during 1918, 1919 and 1920 than Douglas Fairbanks. I got so sick of seeing 'em reviewing the home guard and various wildcat divisions that I used to wear blinders whenever the news revnue came on. Yet the Democrats lost the election."

"Sure they lost it," returned Dumm. "Joe Daniels and Newt Baker ain't no Mack Sennett beauties, you know. All the good looking politicians are in the Republican party. But even the best of 'em won't stand too many close-ups. Harding takes a particularly good piteure, particularly in golf pants. He's pleasing to the eye. Hughes looks neat and dignified. Secretary Denby is one of the few hairless men I ever saw on the screen who made a good impression."

"Just how do you think a party can use the movies in a campaign effectively?" asked Dummer.

"All you've got to do is to see that the candidate is liberally photographed skiing with the boarding school girls at Lake Placid, patting little children on the head, romping with an airdale on the White House lawn, congratulating Mrs. Obidiah Digby of Lincoln, Neb., upon raising a family of 18 children," replied Dumm. "And if the Republicans can get a picture of the Democratic candidate in some such unpopular act as throwing an old shoe at a cat or chaining up a dog, there will be nothing to it."

"You seem to talk sense," asserted Dummer.

o o o

"Righto," declared Dumm. "Mark my words, the next campaign will see a well-directed movie campaign. And if I was running for any office within the gift of the American people I'll tell you how I'd want to be photographed."

"How?" asked Dummer.

"I'd get on to a broncho, tear into some western town and shoot up a soft drink emporioum."

"You'd get every vote," asserted Dummer. "But do you know what you ought to do to make it a clean sweep?"

"What?"

"Get William S. Hart to run with you for the vice-presidency," replied Dummer.

VOICES FROM THE SWIMMING POOL

Would you be sure that Spring is here?
Then seek the Smiling Pool, my dear.
If there the Hylas pipe their lay
You'll know that Spring has come to stay.

Everybody who lives on the Green Meadows knows that. You see, it sometimes happens that Mistress Spring arrives and then has to go back for a few days. Usually it is because she has been in such a hurry to reach the Green Forest and the Green Meadows that she has trodden on the heels of grim, hard, fierce-tempered Master Winter. Now, no one likes to have their heels trodden on, least of all Master Winter, and when this happens he promptly sends rough Brother North Wind and sometimes Jack Frost to show that he is not so far away but that he can make things very uncomfortable for everybody.

So when this happens gentle Mistress Spring just has to run away. There is nothing else for her to do. Of course she knows when she is in danger of treading on the heels of Master Winter, and so she is careful to waken only those whom she knows can stand the pinching Jack Frost if he returns. The others she doesn't waken until she is sure that she will not have to go back even for a few days. And among these are the Hylas, who spend the winter in the mud at the bottom of the Smiling Pool. The Hylas, you know, are the children and grandchildren of Sticky-toes the Tree Toad.

So it is that the little people of the Green Meadows listen almost as eagerly for the voice of the first Hylas as they do for the first whistle of Winsome Bluebird. Winsome tells them that Mistress Spring will soon arrive. Little Friend the Song Sparrow tells them that she has arrived. The Hylas tells she is going to stay. So it was that as Peter Rabbit hurried about greeting all his old friends who had just come up from the faraway south and those other friends who had just wakened from a long, long sleep, he was forever stopping to listen for voices from the Smiling Pool. Peter was very happy. It was so good to know that Mistress Spring had really arrived, and it was such fun to visit his old friends and tell them all the news. Everywhere on the Green Meadows and in the Green Forest he heard voices, happy voices, which were good to hear. But as yet he had heard no voices from the Smiling Pool, and so he was afraid, just a little bit afraid, that Mistress Spring had not come to stay.

He was thinking of this one evening as he sat just at the edge of the dear Old Briar Patch looking over to the Purple Hills behind which jolly round, red Mr. Sun had just gone to bed. It was very still, for Winsome Bluebird and Cheerful Robin and Little Friend the Song Sparrow, who always go to bed when jolly, round, Mr. Sun does, had tucked their heads under their wings and their sweet voices were silent. Suddenly a clear, piping voice sounded. Pretty soon another joined it and then another and another. They seemed to come from the Smiling Pool.

Peter jumped straight up in the air and kicked his heels together. "Hurrah!" he shouted. Then looking this way and looking that way to be sure that the way was clear and that Granny and Reddy Fox and Old Man Coyote were nowhere about, he started for the Smiling Pool as fast as he could go, lippety-lippety-lip! The nearer he got to the Smiling Pool the louder sounded the piping voices. When he reached the Smiling Pool and peered over the bank there was no one to be seen but Jerry Muskrat. Jerry was sitting on top of his house listening and smiling and from all around right out of the water came those clear piping voices. It seemed as if the Smiling Pool itself was singing. Jerry looked over at Peter and his eyes twinkled as he cried:

"Mistress Spring has come to stay;
This is what the Hylas say."

GRANDFATHER FROG IS HEARD FROM

Where was Grandfather Frog? Jerry Muskrat didn't know. Billy Mink didn't know. Little Joe Otter didn't know. Spotty the Turtle didn't know. What is more, not one of them seemed to care. They were so busy with their own affairs that they couldn't waste time thinking about Grandfather Frog. At least, that is what they said whenever Peter Rabbit asked them about him. But to Peter the Smiling Pool didn't seem quite natural without Grandfather Frog. No, sir, it didn't seem quite natural. Every day Peter visited it to see if there was any news of Grandfather Frog. The fact is, Peter was beginning to be worried. What if something had happened to Grandfather Frog? Who would tell him stories, then?

"It's very strange," thought Peter. Mistress Spring had come to stay, for all the Hylas, who, you know, are the children and grandchildren of Sticky-toes the Tree-Toad, were singing their loudest, and this is one of the surest signs that Mistress Spring has come for good. Peter knew that they had come out of the mud where they had slept away the winter, and he wondered if some of them knew where Grandfather Frog was, for it was in the mud of the Smiling Pool that he had gone to be after bidding Peter good-by in the fall. He just ached all over to ask them, but they were so shy that he never could see one of them. No, sir, look as he would he never could see one of them. Peter remembered an old saying of his mother's when he was a very little fellow and asked too many questions. She would say: "Children should be seen but not heard." But that was not the way the Mylas had been brought up. They evidently believed that they should be heard, but not seen. So while Peter could hear their voices coming right out of the Smiling Pool on every side he could never catch so much as a glimpse of one of them, though he nearly looked his eyes out. And, of course, it was foolish to ask questions of people you couldn't see.

"The old fellow has overslept, I guess. Perhaps Mistress Spring has forgotten him. It would serve the lazy old chap right," said Billy Mink, who is not always respectful to his elders.

"Oh, you don't really think that, do you?" cried Peter, quite upset at the mere thought of such a thing.

"Shouldn't wonder," replied Billy Mink, winking at Jerry Muskrat. "Probably she thinks he is getting so old that it isn't worth while to wake him. I wouldn't blame her if she didn't."

"Oh, Billy!" cried Peter. "I—I—if I really thought she had forgotten, I'd go remind her."

"Why don't you?" retorted Billy Mink, once more winking at Jerry Muskrat. You know Billy is a great mischief maker and dearly loves to get other people into trouble.

"She might not like it," replied Peter, looking very thoughtful. "She might think that I was trying to meddle in her affairs. Still, I can't bear to think that Grandfather Frog has been forgotten. Why, what would the Smiling Pool do without him, I'd like to know?"

"It would do very well," replied Billy Mink, "Of what use is an old fellow who thinks he knows all that is to be known, like Grandfather Frog? He's—"

"Chugarum!" exclaimed a great deep, gruff voice, and it sounded indignant, very indignant, indeed.

Peter Rabbit looked eagerly across the Smiling Pool. There on the end of Jerry Muskrat's old log sat Grandfather Frog, for there was no big, green lily-pad for him to sit on yet.

"Oh, Grandfather Frog. I'm so glad you've waked up!" cried Peter.

"Chugarum!" replied Grandfather Frog. "What were you about to say, Billy Mink?" But Billy Mink was nowhere to be seen.

THE CRUELTY OF THE PAST

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

There is no doubt but that there is a great deal of cruelty in the world.

Behind all the clamorous charges that make up the literature of protest, there is some truth. We would not deny for a moment that there are intolerant majorities, tyrannical rulers, heartless employers, and other oppressors, individual, and official. Heaven knows the world is bad enough.

But we can get one little crumb of comfort from reflecting that it has been a good deal worse.

These thoughts are startled up by the recent remarkable achaelogical discoveries that have been made in Asia Minor and the Sudan.

These show that a high state of civilization existed several thousand years ago. The Babylonians anticipated many of our inventions.

Most of this old world life has been revealed to us during the last eighty years. Recently The Daily Mail, of London, called attention to the fact that it was only some seventy years ago that a great English scholar, Grote, insisted that before 700 B. C. the art of writing was unknown. Modern archaelogy, however, has demonstrated that we have written inscriptions in the stones of the Cretan palaces which must have been built at least a thousand years before the date given by Grote, although as yet many of them cannot be read.

"One fact," says the Daily Mail, "stands out from the monuments and records of this ancient culture. It was extraordinarily cruel, with a savagery not surpassed until the days of the Bolshevist torture chambers in Russia. It killed human beings as mercilessly as if they had been flies. The burial of hundreds of miserable servants alive to accompany Egyptian dignitaries into the next world is now proved to have been a custom at one period. Yet the Egyptians were among the most humane of the ancients."

This is but in line with what any schoolboy knows about that section of ancient history which lies more open to the light of literature.

We know that the republic of the ancient Greeks was composed of freemen only to a limited degree, as probably the majority of the human beings there were helots or slaves.

We know of the cruelty of Rome in the days of its highest culture; we know of its gladiatorial games and the merciless hands of its rulers.

We know of the horror of the middle ages, its persecutions for heresy, its judicial torture, and its many fantastic and revolting forms of the death penalty.

And we also know that Greece, Rome, and the Mediaeval church, bad as they were, were better than the dark world that surrounded them.

And, knowing all this, we have a pretty fair reason for believing that the world is getting better.

Mental Bommerangs

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.

(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

What do you gain by abusing, slandering, vilifying a person you rightly or wrongly dislike?

You gain, ou perhaps respond, at least a feeling of satisfaction. And you help others "to place correctly" the one whom you verbally castigate.

Are you so sure of that?

Is it not possible that, hearing your unrestrained utterances, your listeners may be more inclined to pass an unfavorable judgment on you than on the subject of your attack?

Even though they may dislike him, they can hardly avoid saying with regard to you:

"This man has a wicked tongue. He is sadly short in self-control. He has an ugly mind, the thoughts of a serpent. Beware of him."

Certainly many men have had personal experience, to their lasting regret, of the truth that words of abuse slander, and vilification are mental boomerangs, likely to work their greatest hurt to those who make use of them.

How often it happens that, in the heat of a political campaign, one justice nor their elegance. The other may reply in kind, or he may calmly continue to press political issues, avoiding all personalities.

In the latter case he is helped rather than harmed by his opponent's rabid statements. The voters' common sense warns them:

"A man who can talk like this cannot worthily hold office. He is a dangerous fellow, not to be trusted. We'll have none of him."

Occasionally, it is true, circumstances conspire to offset the boomerang effect of a campaign of slander. But the slanderers, the abusive, the scandalmongers of political contests, usually go down to defeat, destroyed by the unsightly weapons they have chosen to employ.

As in political life, so in life generally. The lavish of abuse are the conspicuously unsuccessful.

They are helped to failure, moreover, by their abusiveness's effect on themselves as well as on the minds of other people. For, because they are abusive, they are kept in a state of emotional turmoil, a hubbub of hateful thoughts. This reacts to interfere greatly with their mental efficiency.

It reacts even to impair their physical well-being. Their whole organism functions less vigorously, in accordance with the psycho-physiological law that unpleasant ideas tend to impede action.

Clearly, then, however true it may be that a momentary sense of satisfaction does follow indulgence in abuse, in slander, and in vilification, a heavy penalty is in the end exacted. Better far to forget completely those whom you dislike than to let your dislike impel you to spiteful harrying of them.

Rippling Rhymes

By WALT MASON

THE RAIN CARRIER.

Where'er I go it starts to rain before I've been there long; the water soaks the long parched plain and drowns the human throng. The Kansas drouth was once renowned; I went there to be dry, and presently the state was drowned, and barns went floating by. Old watercourses that had lain for ages dry as dust, became wide rivers in the rain, to everyone's disgust. All bottomless was Kansas land, no husbandmen's despair; Niagaras on every hand, Nyanzas here and there. So to a country then I went where rain is seldom known, whose arid wastes, of wide extent, are drier than a bone. And to this bright and sunny clime I brought the word of doom; it's raining, raining all the time, and creeks and rivers boom. The big black clouds roll up and melt in rain and splatter me; I know just how Dad Noah felt when he was out at sea. It's wetter than the law allows, the lawns are sobbing seas, the streets are full of swimming cows, and floating cribs and trees. And people weep and wonder why the climate thus has changed, traditions curl themselves and die, and records are deranged. I am the hoodoo, I'm the gent who brought the change accrust; wherever I may pitch my tent the cloudbursts do their worst.

THE PROP

CHAPTER LXII.

Where before Ruth had devoted herself to her business with the calm determination to succeed that had characterized her ever since leaving college, there was now added a sort of feverish desire to prove to herself that her success satisfied her. This she would not have admitted. Perhaps it was unconsciously in her mind and flavored her actions, her feelings.

"You must take a vacation," Mr. Carr said to her. "You are wearing yourself out."

So she allowed herself to be persuaded and for two weeks she "loafed and rested," as she said, in a small unfashionable hotel at the shore. When she returned she was more like her old quiet self. The storm had beaten itself out for the nonce. It might return, but in the interim she would be content.

"How good it is to work!" she said enthusiastically to Selma Thornton the day she came back. "The old harness feels good."

"What a gourmand you are for work," Selma laughed. "I don't believe you would be either satisfied or happy away from here."

"I know I should not!" Ruth replied so emphatically that one might have thought she was trying to assure herself of the fact. Especially as a vivid blush accompanied the words. Selma's remark had brought vividly before her mind the last conversation she had had with Robert Turnbull, her declaration to him that she would not be happy away from her work.

Selma saw the blush and wondered. Had their clear-headed, business-like superior any romance in her life? Then she blushed a little on her own account as she thought of Ruth's brother, the tall, bronzed adventurer.

"I have a right to do what I wish with my life," Ruth often said to herself. She would have been surprised had she been told she was apologizing to herself and that this apology was apt to be made whenever she found herself with Robert Turnbull.

Stubbornly she had set herself to this making of her life what she willed, and stubbornly she held to her course. She was happy when at her desk, planning her day's duties, when talking to her employees, when explaining to some wealthy customer just why something was a good investment and why it might be advisable for her to make certain changes in investments already made, when showing some poor, underpaid office girl how quickly her small savings would buy her a baby bond. She was happy because she was busy, busy with congenial duties. But when alone at night she was strangely restless. She had developed a desire to be constantly on the go, so at variance with her former quiet manner, that both her mother and her brothers wondered, although they were pleased.

"I'll take you anywhere you want me to, Ruth," Ted told her. Then he asked: "You won't object to Selma going along occasionally, will you?"

"No, indeed! I am very fond of Selma and Laura both. I cannot, of course, show any favoritism in the office. But they are both lovely girls. They are making good, too."

"That isn't anything—making good in business," Ted replied so grumpily that Ruth laughingly shook her finger at him and said:

"Don't you dare talk that rubbish to my girls! I won't have it!"

"It's the truth! Not many girls would be satisfied to go on as you have, Ruth. Perhaps we don't deserve it, but they need us, need the companionship and the love of men—most of them."

"You make us out Mormons, Ted."

"You know what I meant—the love of some man. Honest, Ruth, I can't understand why some chap hasn't picked you up and carried you away. You are awfully clever, and good looking, too."

"Men don't care much for cleverness in a wife, they want a home maker, Ted. Then when it comes to looks, my sort of good looks never stand a show when some dainty, lovely, pink and white prettiness is around."

"You don't give us credit for much sense." He wondered if she were thinking of Betty, and how easily Hunter had transferred his allegiance, as Sam had described it to him.

"Yes—I do. Perhaps it is you who have the sense, Ted, and we women who wish to carve a place for ourselves in the world of business who lack."

"I'd love to see you happily married, Ruth," Ted returned rather wistfully. "I feel that it is partly my fault that you are not. I was all kinds of a brute to leave you to bear all the family burdens. I have no excuse, I do not try to apologize, but I did think you had dad and Sam."

"Stop blaming yourself, Ted. If you knew how I love my work, have always loved it, you would not reproach yourself because of me. I used to wish you would come for Betty's sake, but she, too, did not really suffer because of your absence. "Then with a little laugh, she added: "A girl as pretty as Betty is an awful responsibility."

"I know—and I am sorry. That's one reason I want to do more for you now. You have had too much responsibility—always."

Chapter LXIII.

Susan was at home from college. It was her first vacation since Ted had moved them all into the Riverside Drive apartment. She was delighted, although she insisted she would have been just as happy in the old home.

"What have you done with it?" she asked.

"I am renting it," her mother replied, with what Susan afterward told Sam was "the real Peabody manner."

"It should have belonged to Ruth," Susan said to Sam. "I don't care if Ted's money did finally pay off that mortgage. Ruthie kept the interest up for years. Do you know, Sam, as I grow older and wiser—oh, you needn't shake your head. I am wiser, hundreds of dollars' worth. Ask Ted. But to get back, I wonder what would have become of us had it not been for Ruth."

"Infants' home for you, old ladies' home for mother, and the river for me."

"Oh, Sam, you never would."

"Wouldn't I? I came mighty near it once or twice in those dark months after father lost his job."

"Think what you would have missed. You are coming home tomorrow. They told me 1 might tell you. It was to be our surprise, yours and mine. Oh, Sam, I am so happy!"

"Still think you will write a book some day!?"

"Think I will? I know it!"

"Gad, I believe you are a bit like Ruth. I'll be hanged if I don't. So I am to go home. Do you know, Susan, I believe I am as happy as you are, even if I don't make such a holler about it. It will be fine to feel I can do something. I don't care what, to be of use in the world again."

"It isn't in you to get all excited as I do; artistic temperament, you know, and all that." Then seriously, "Ted has been making plans for you, I believe, to attend to some sort of foreign business he is interested in. He will tell you all about it."

Tears of joy were in the sombre eyes when he kissed Susan good-bye; tears of joy.

"I'll come for you myself tomorrow. Among the wise things I have learned in the past year is to run a motor car. Ted's going to give me one, so I thought I'd be prepared. He's bought a dandy for mother. Ruth has her own now, you know. My, Sam! It takes my breath away when I think of the rise of the Browning family. But, honest, I think a lot of my joy comes because of Ruth; to think she doesn't feel that she must be a business woman because of us. If she stays in that old office now it is because she wants to."

True to her word, Susan took Sam home the next day. She drove the smart, rakish-looking roadster up to the curb with all the nerve of which she was capable. Ted saw them from the window and came down.

"Like that car, Sam?" meaning the roadster.

"It's a great little machine, Ted, Yours?"

"No, yours." I thought you would like it, and Susan planned you should be the first one to ride in it. You can drive, can't you?"

"Yes," Sam replied when he could speak. "I'm stale and couldn't compete with Susan, but I'll soon get the hang again. Thank you, Ted. You are very generous with us."

"That's all right, old man. Why shouldn't I be?"

"Now, boys, I want to tell you something." Susan remarked when they were seated in the homelike but luxurious living room. "There's to be no talk of business, no troubles, nothing but good times while I am at home. I've only two weeks before the grind begins again and——"

"Grind—learning to drive like the devil, playing basketball, vamping the——"

"There, Sam Browning, you keep still! Be thankful your sister is good looking enough to vamp. Blue stockings—I am one, you know—aren't supposed to be attractive enough to be vampires. Now you keep still! I want to talk. Ruth said I could plan things for every single evening, and all that I could get you boys and mother to agree to in the daytime. So be prepared to be dragged at my chariot wheels for the next two weeks. And Ted! You can bring Selma along some of the time. Think I didn't know? Why, you haven't written me a letter for six weeks that hasn't had more Selma in it than anything else."

"Go ahead, Susan. We're game."

So for two weeks Susan Browning had, as she expressed it, "the time of my young life." Dancing, theaters, teas, motor rides; every moment there was "something doing."

"How she enjoys everything," Ruth said to Ted one night at the theater as they watched he mobile face, first all laughter, then at a moment's notice her eyes filled with unshed tears. "She is a dear, but sometimes I worry because of her. I fear she would be easily hurt."

"Don't worry, Ruth, Susan has too much of you in her to let anything interfere with her career. We were talking of it last night. She wants to travel. When she has graduated I shall send her around the world before she settles down to her serious work. She is very serious about it, Ruth."

Wichita County Produces 25,000,000 Bbls. Oil in '21

MAINTAINS LEAD AS BANNER TEXAS OIL COUNTY OF ALL TIME

Stephens County, in Banner Year of Latter, Only Exceeds Wichita County by Five Million Barrels Due to Productivity True Sand.

Twenty-five million barrels of oil during 1921!

Pretty good for an old "has been," for a "boom field gone dead" and all that sort of a thing, isn't it?.

That's exactly what Wichita county, the banner oil county of Texas, produced during the year 1921, in the face of falling price of crude, a shutting down of wildcatting, a practically drilled up field in the largest pool, Burkburnett, and the worst drouth in several years.

Not in this part of the country is Burkburnett, or Wichita county referred to as a "has been," but there are sections where this mistaken opinion prevails. To these figures of production in 1921 should be of considerable interest, and also information.

Although lacking by about five million barrels the total production of Stephens county for 1921, its best year, the Wichita county production for the last half of the year shows practically the same production as the county to the south, even with it's preponderance of new completions, from the deeper producing levels. But while Stephens county production showed a decrease of seven million barrels approximately the last six months from the first half of the year, the Wichita county loss was only approximately two million barrels.

Steady Production.

The splendid showing the home county made is due to the steady productivity of the true sands, these wells not showing the rapid decline from the flush production shown by the deeper, lime production, though their flush is never so high.

These interesting figures showing how Wichita county is keeping it's place in the foremost ranks of oil production were compiled by Dan F. Duncan of the Oil and Gas Journal.

These figures show the somewhat startling fact that despite 1920 being the banner year of the oil fields of North and Central Texas, both with regards to new drilling, big completions and high price of crude, the year 1921 saw only two and three-quarters of a million barrels of oil less produced than in 1920, when the high mark was better than 70,500,000, or a monthly average of around 5,800,000 barrels of oil.

New pools in Stephens county, and the consistent holding up of the Wichita county fields, without any spectacular developments, is responsible for this splendid showing.

What the new year will bring forth can only be half way prophesied, for not even the most glib, tongued prophet can reckon on the price of crude, and on that depends the state of drilling operations.

The table of crude prices and the table of completions and production are rather closely related as a study of the following figures will convince.

In this compilation Wichita county is the heading given all pools in Wichita county outside Burkburnett. Young county is carried under the classification of "All other fields."

EXTENSION 2100 FOOT SAND IN PAST WEEKS SOUTH BEND SURPRISE

Young county's surprise this week, it is getting so that at least one surprise a week is to be expected from this field, is provided by the North American Oil and Refining company's No. 3 Scott-Smith, which unexpectedly drilled into an oil sand at 2,100 feet, with a 450-barrel showing resulting, from a few feet in the sand. This is the 2,100-foot sand of the pool further west, according to the present showing, and the production looks like better than average, so it is supposed that the North American will complete at this depth, without going down to the 3,500-foot lime, for which the new well was drilling.

This well is only 500 feet from the North American's 3,500-foot well, and is about three miles from any production at 2,100 feet, so that it constitutes a real surprise. None of the deep wells in this territory around the town of South Bend showed anything in the 2,100-foot level.

The East Bunger wildcat, drilled by the Penn Cities company, the 4,000-foot well of Cosden & Co., and two new gassers on the south of the Bunger pool constitute the other features of a week which has been marked by lack of activity in the proven fields, thanks to the freezing weather, which has tied up water lines, and made this problem even more acute than did the drouth.

Penn Cities Showing.

The Penn Cities well, which had drilled the sand, with a showing of oil, at 2,360 feet last week, has made several flows, and is now being drilled deeper, at latest reports from the field. A fair producer seems probable from the present showing. This well is two and a half miles east of the Bunger pool, and the sand is at such a depth that it may be either the Bunger 2,600-foot sand rising, a new sand, or a stray sand. Further drilling, of course, will be necessary to tell the tale here.

South Shows Variety

The south part of the Bunger pool had considerable variety in its developments also this past week. The Cosden No. 1-E Grimshaw, formerly the Brooks and Rossell, is making better than 100 barrels from the 4050-foot level, according to the latest reports from the field. Early in the week the well was reported to have made around 250 to 300 barrels. This well is to be shot and cleaned out, in order that a fair test be given, it is reported. Any production so deep is something of a novelty, not only in Young county, but in the entire south part of the North Texas field. Some reports have it that this Cosden well is producing from a sand, but it seems only reasonable that it is a lime formation. At any rate the further developments will be well worth watching. This well is just east of the Edgette No. 1 Grimshaw, the discovery well in the 2600-foot sand.

Just south of the No. 1-E Grimshaw, the No. 2 of the Cosden interests is a gasser at 2550 feet, the initial flow being better than ten million cubic feet.

West of the Cosden gasser the Ohio Fuel Oil and Gas company has completed its No. 1 Grimshaw, making around 5,000,000 cubic feet of gas.

Two new wells are reported for inside locations of the Bunger pool, both in the 1800-foot sand. The Cosden No. 2-M Grimshaw is reported good for 200 barrels, and the No. 2 Owens of the Godley Oil and Gas company is reported a hundred barrel producer.

Eight New Cosden Tests

Cosden and company are to lose no time in thoroughly developing their new properties, recently taken over from the Rossell interests. Eight new locations are reported on the Owens and Grimshaw leases, with preparations to drill them up immediately.

The Simms Oil company has four new rigs on its Owens lease, Nos. 6 and 7 being ready to drill, and Nos. 8 and 9 rigged up.

The Union Oil company has made a new location on the Whittenberg.

The Pomona Mutual Oil company's No. 3 Owens is a new location. The No. 2 is due to get the sand shortly being down below 1,800 feet.

The Gulf Production company's No. 1 Lisle, west of the Edgette well, is reported setting casing, slightly above 1,800 feet.

The Texas company's No. 1 Bunger is reported on the 1,900-foot sand, preparing to complete, with several hundred feet of fluid in the hole.

Number Show No Change.

The status of a number of the other drilling tests in this field remains practically unchanged over last week, due to the bad weather, it is reported.

The weather has also held up the starting of new tests in the old pool, on the McCleskey and Graham farms, where a new interest was aroused by the Conner strike of the 26-foot sand. The Panhandle Refinery company, Conner, the Hobbs interests, and several other neighbors of the Conner property are ready to go down for this deep sand.

The Roxana Petroleum company is preparing to deepen its No. 1 Fe and No. 1 Donnell, shallower producers, to the 2,600-foot sand.

When it has been possible to drill this past week, fair progress has been made by the Hobbs and Panhandle tests going down to the 3,500-foot lime, discovered by the North American's No. 1 Scott Smith. The Panhandle well is due to reach this depth at any time now, it is reported.

STOMACH TROUBLE

In five minutes "Pape's Diapepsin" ends

Indigestion Gases Acidity
Sourness Flatulence Palpitation

Take "Pape's Diapepsin" now! In five minutes your stomach feels fine. Don't bother what upset your stomach or which portion of the food did the damage. If your stomach is sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; you belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress. Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear. If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless antacid is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs only sixty cents for a large case at drug stores.—Adv.

Performance of Duke Well Furnishes Only Local Bit of Interest

With practically all the available water unavailable because of the cold weather, operators in the Wichita county fields this past week found themselves in a double dilemma, with the result that there is practically nothing new to report from the week's operations.

The performance of the Magnolia's new Duke well, North Fowlkes, once the fishing job was over, and it was possible to make a steady pumping test, had helped to sustain the already keen interest which the new strike had engendered, and there have been several new tests projected. However because of the cold, and the aggravated water situation none of the rigs has been able to start up.

The first real run which the well made, according to the late reports from the field, showed better than 325 barrels in the tanks. A continuation of this showing will be very gratifying to those interested around the scene of the strike, and with the promised activity once under way, it will be only the matter of a few weeks until it will be known whether Wichita county is really to have a new pool of some importance.

Several More Locations

The Magnolia, the John O'Neil, the Stone, et al, Mona Marie, and the two Gulf tests will probably be augmented by several more locations within the next week or so. The general tendency of those tests is to the east and northeast, though the Gulf's No. 1 Powell is to the west of the Duke well.

The Planet Petroleum company's No. 29 Burnett, reported early in the week as a 600 barrel well, was the best completion of the week in any part of the North Texas fields. This well is from the 1800-foot sand.

The general tie-up has delayed completions in the South Electra field, which is usually looked to to furnish a few each week, and there are no new developments reported from any of the outside tests.

The various tests that have been at derrick, or rig stage for several weeks, in the territory between the South Electra pool, and the old West Electra production, have made no progress this past week, it is reported.

Griswold Wildcat

The Griswold Oil company's No. 1 Waggoner, wildcat southwest of the Bridwell and Heydrick producers is reported drilling below 1700 feet, with developments of interest anticipated within the next few days.

In addition to its new locations at Fowlke, the Gulf Production company has made location for its No. 5 Burnett, C, in the north part of the old South Electra shallow field, and its No. 1 Grace Jennings.

The No. 5 Waggoner of Waggoner and Kolp, on the outskirts of Electra where these operators have several shallow producers, is reported ready to drill.

The only new locations reported for the week from the Kemp-Munger-Allen field is the Production Company's No. 9 Potter-Lewis. This is in the west 1500-foot pool of the K.-M.-A. pool.

South Burkburnett

An extension of several hundred feet to the north in the 1000-foot pool, which has been developed in recent months on the west side of the old Texhoma pool, is indicated in the Tom F. Hunter No. 1 Dodson, which got a good looking oil sand at 1045 feet. The well was drilled five feet in, and preparations are now being made to drill in and test early in the week.

On the Burk Tex Refinery property Laning and Moninger are getting ready to drill their No. 1 Cropper, Lease 2. This test will be slightly to the north of production, and will be of considerable interest.

The new wells are reported for this South Burkburnett field, both in the 1000-foot sand. The Weowna Oil company's No. 10 M. K. and T. right of way is reported a hundred barrel producer, and the Lewis Oil Corporation No. 9 Dodson is a 175 barrel producer.

Truth is Mighty and Shall Prevail

The universal popularity of Studebaker Cars is attested by the fact that the corporation enjoyed the biggest business in its history in the year of 1921.

The sales of Studebaker Cars were 29% greater than in 1920, notwithstanding the fact that the total number of cars sold of all other makes (except Ford) was 40% less than in 1920. Stated otherwise, Studebaker's ratio of sales was 129 and the total of other makes 60, as compared with 1920.

The number of Studebaker Cars sold in the year of 1921 in both Greater New York and in the Metropolitan District exceeded the sales of any other make except Ford.

Studebaker is the world's largest producer of six-cylinder cars.

The only possible explanation of the popularity of Studebaker Cars lies in their quality, durability and dependable performance in users' hands. Proof that the cars stand up in service with minimum repairs is evidenced by the fact that our sales of Repair Parts in 1921 were 12% less than they were in 1919, notwithstanding that 118,000 new cars were sold and put in operation in 1920 and 1921. Based on the total estimated number of Studebaker Cars in operation in 1921, we sold $16.00 worth of parts per car for repairs from all causes, including accidents.

The materials and workmanship in Studebaker Cars measure up to the highest standards known to the automobile industry. Substantially better intrinsic values cannot be obtained at any price. The theory that high prices necessarily mean fine cars is fallacious, simply because prices are not based upon intrinsic values but upon production costs of individual makers, which vary widely according to their ability and manufacturing facilities. Obviously, high costs of production, inevitably arising from incompetence or inadequate manufacturing facilities, mean not only high prices but actually inferior cars.

With $70,000,000 of actual net assets including $36,000,000 of plant facilities, Studebaker stands unsurpassed in ability and resources to manufacture economically and give the greatest intrinsic value possible for a given price.
