Crooker nominated

AUSTIN — Howard County commissioner Bill Crooker will be nominated Tuesday for an opening on the state prison board, according to State Rep. Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring. Fraser said, "Bill gained valuable experience through working on the prison process. He would be an outstanding board member and an asset to West Texas."

Howard County was one of 26 possible sites for six state prisons before Wednesday, when the TDCJ cut Howard County off the list. A reduced list of 12 possible prison sites in other counties remain.

Fraser will be meeting with James Huffines, appointments secretary for Gov. Bill Clements, Tuesday to make the nomination.

"I'm flattered and pleased," Crooker said. "And I'd be very interested in the position. I feel I've gained some experience and insight into how TDC works. We'll just see how it comes out."

The Texas Department of Criminal Justice is a nine-member board, responsible for supervising the operation of the criminal justice system in Texas. The TDCJ areas of supervision includes the pardon and paroles aspect, the probation, and the incarceration of criminals.

Top liars named

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The National Liar's Hall of Fame cited The Des Moines Register as teller of 1989's tallest tale in a story of a drought-stricken corn farmer who gave new meaning to the phrase "knee-high by the Fourth of July."

The newspaper deserved the top award for its report on an Iowa farmer who "was doubly proud last summer when his corn was knee-high twice before the Fourth — once on the way up, once on the way down," Hall officials said Thursday.

The hall of fame ceremony in Dannebrog was held as the 60th annual awards banquet, although sponsors admitted they might be lying.

Bill Orr, husband of Nebraska Gov. Kay Orr, won the Mendacity Diplomacy Award when he notified hall officials he would be unable to attend next year's dinner because, "I have an important funeral to attend that day."

Last year, politicians were banned from the competition because the winners must be amateurs, said Roger Welsch, the hall of fame's founder and director.

This central Nebraska town, population 356, welcomed celebrities in black shirts and white ties to the Dannebrog Convention Center, Welsch claimed.

'War' terrifying

CORVALLIS, Mont. (AP) — A pre-dawn Army shoot-'em-up — complete with machine gun fire, flares and soldiers racing through civilians' yards — has the sheriff, well, up in arms.

The mock military attack came on Thursday at 4:30 a.m., a time Sheriff Jay Printz said was totally inappropriate.

Calls from terrified residents came in so quickly "my lone dispatcher couldn't get everybody's name," Printz said.

"One woman was so scared she was calling from the bathroom, where she'd locked herself in," the sheriff said.

Callers told of unidentified men firing automatic weapons and shooting flares and warriors racing across the deck of a private house, Printz said.

The Army was "essentially having a little war" in an area just outside Corvallis, which is south of Missoula in western Montana, Printz said.

Complaints focused on rude disruptions in the pre-dawn, trespass on private property, spooked livestock bouncing off barbed-wire fences and potential fires from flares on roofs, the sheriff said.

Army officials refused to say anything other than there would be an investigation of the complaints.

Margaret Searle said her family thought it was a "war zone" outside. Her husband got his rifle and fired a round into a wood pile to scare off the soldiers, she said.

Veterans honored at local events

By JAMES FLEHR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Veterans Day activities kicked off early today with Congressman Charles Stenholm calling on Americans to remember the veteran.

Stenholm who spoke at the Big Spring Veterans Administration Medical Center said the local facility was part of the largest health care facility in the world.

The day included dedications for both the new Radiology Department and the new communications building at the hospital.

Stenholm gave the keynote address and was introduced by Medical Center Director Conrad Alexander as being the Veterans' "advocate" in his appointment to the Department of Veterans Affairs Committee.

He called the facility here "living proof that DVA commitments are being met."

Stenholm reminded the audience of the purpose behind the celebration of Veterans Day — the memory of those that sacrificed their lives for freedom.

"It's a statement, a statement that America will not forget the sacrifice," he said about the holiday.

He referred to a "new democracy" evidenced by yesterday's opening of the Berlin Wall.

Thousands of Germans celebrate opening of borders

BERLIN — Thousands of Germans celebrate by climbing the Berlin wall after borders were opened between East and West Germany.

By NESHA STARCEVIC
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN — Tens of thousands of giddy East Germans streamed into West Berlin and other parts of West Germany today after a heady night of celebrating the opening of the Berlin Wall and western borders for the first time in 28 years.

"The Wall is gone! Berlin is again Berlin," proclaimed a banner headline in the Bild Zeitung, the main West Berlin tabloid. Revelers in downtown West Berlin early today waved copies of the newspaper, popped champagne corks and lit sparklers.

East Germany's embattled Communist leaders said Thursday they would throw open western borders and allow citizens to travel freely anywhere for the first time since the Berlin Wall was erected in 1961.

Communist authorities opened East German borders Thursday in a desperate attempt to stem the flow of people fleeing to the West and quell the growing demonstrations that have spread to several cities.

More than 200,000 East Germans, nearly 1 1/2 percent of the nation's 16.5 million people, have left so far this year — 56,000 through Czechoslovakia since Saturday alone. Most are young, skilled workers vital to the economy.

The abrupt opening of the once heavily fortified borders was the breathtaking climax of a remarkable series of reforms that began three weeks ago in this once strictly controlled society.

East and West Berliners joined in dancing atop the Berlin Wall during the celebrations, which lasted from about 10 p.m. Thursday night until about 5 a.m. More than 50,000 East Berliners crossed into West Berlin during the night, said the West German radio station Sender Fries Berlin. Only about 1,000 of them planned to stay, the radio said.

Today, lines of East Berliners waited at control points to enter West Berlin, and Communist border guards were rapidly handing out visas. The visas were required as of this morning for those wanting only to visit the West.

Most were obviously just visiting rather than emigrating, exulting in their sudden new freedom to travel to the other side of the monolithic wall.

300 acre fire probed

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

BIG SPRING — Officials still haven't determined the cause of a fire that burned about 300 acres of brush south of the city.

C. Roy Wright, Howard County volunteer fire chief, said investigators are still examining the area where they think the fire started.

More than 30 county and city firefighters battled the blaze, which started about 1 p.m., for more than two hours, he said. The fire burned just under half a section of land north of the country club and south of South Mountain, Wright said.

"We still have it under investigation," Wright said. "We have some ideas but nothing concrete at this time. We don't feel it was arson. We'll call it accidental."

Wright said investigators should be able to determine the cause within a few days.

Sandoval: Witnesses coached in Gomez case

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — The second day of a grand jury investigation into the May 1988 fatal police shooting of Sammy Gomez continued amid procedural complaints by the San Antonio civil rights attorney representing the Gomez family.

Attorney Ruben Sandoval charged that certain witnesses, including Billy Ray Williamson — the former part-time police officer who shot Gomez — may have been counseled prior to their testimony, and other key witnesses may not have been subpoenaed.

"Nobody's coaching anybody," 32nd District Attorney Frank Conard responded during a break in the proceedings. "They've gone through one grand jury already and they have all been interviewed by the attorney general's office."

"They've had a year and a half to talk about the case," Sandoval said. Williamson and another officer, Vince Ariaz, who was at the scene of the shooting, spent almost an hour in the district attorney's office prior to their testimony Thursday.

"They take key witnesses in that room and spend oodles of time with them," he said. "The normal procedure is that the witnesses are put into a grand jury room. They're not coached."

He said the other five people who testified Thursday and who may have provided damaging information on Williamson, waited in the hallways and the grand jury room, which is also a law library, prior to their testimony.

Conard said it was normal procedure to have certain witnesses wait in his office.

"Where else are they going to be?" he asked. "We don't have the same facilities that a lot of places have. We don't even have a decent grand jury room."

"It never occurred to me that this complaint would come up. We haven't tried to isolate people."

Responding to another comment by Bexar County native Sandoval that subpoenaed witnesses in San Antonio wait in a grand jury room, Conard said, "Bexar County is not necessarily the way it's done."

Meanwhile, Sandoval urged the district attorney to subpoena some witnesses that indicated they would contradict a woman that said Gomez raped her the night he was shot. He was being arrested on

Regional landfill proposal presented to county officials

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

MIDLAND — Officials in Stanton and Martin County said they would consider having their trash hauled to an area-wide landfill if there was one.

Otherwise a new city-county landfill will have to be constructed that will adhere to stricter pollution laws going into effect next year, said the county judge and a city councilman following a regional landfill presentation in Midland Wednesday.

The presentation was made by representatives of Permian Basin Disposal, a subsidiary of Waste Management of North America Inc. It was organized by the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission and was attended by about 50 government officials from the 17-county region.

"This was the case of a private firm, a rather large one, giving interpretation of what the rules will be," said County Judge Bob Deavenport who was at the meeting. "They're basically looking for business. Basically it was a review of what I heard before."

After listening to the presentation, Stanton City Councilman Gene Wheeler said hauling trash to a regional landfill is a possible solution.

"If someone would open up a regional one, we would consider it," he said.

Joel Ford, president of Permian

Basin Disposal, said his company is seriously considering constructing a landfill.

"I think if enough cities would take their refuse to it to generate sufficient volume they most likely will (locate a regional landfill in the area)," Ford said.

"I think what we're going to do first is get a feel for how many communities want to participate," Wheeler said. "I think the chances of that are slim to none."

"So we're still kind of locked into this (city-county landfill) thing whether we like it or not. We may even have to consider taking in trash outside of the county to make it work."

Deavenport, however, said there are many problems associated with operating a landfill. The engineering firm of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper Inc. has estimated it will cost the city and county $175,000 a year to operate a landfill.

Wheeler said they do have an option to haul trash to the Midland landfill but that would only be allowed for a year until other arrangements were made.

That landfill, about 300 acres, costs $572,000 a year to operate, he said.

"There were no problems solved (at the meeting)," said Jerry Tschauner, director of planning for the regional planning commission. "That wasn't the intent of the meeting. It was an informative meeting."

"They discussed Title D of the (Resource Conservation Recovery Act) that does away with landfills as we know them."

The Environmental Protection Agency act is expected to go into effect in February.

Tschauner said they also offered information on how the new Environmental Protection Agency standards can be dealt with by using regional landfills and transfer stations for smaller towns.

"It's not going to be an inexpensive process for anybody," he said. "It was an informative meeting."

Also at the meeting was Mike Edmondson, an engineer with the Texas Department of Health.

"It was a presentation of some of the things going on," he said. "It was also a presentation on lots of the alternatives that Waste Management could provide if requested.

"It's going to come down to an economic study. It's going to have to be done soon."

Tschauner said a study might not be done until at least next year.

"The biggest problem is there won't be any money available for planning," he said. "As far as money that's been allocated for planning, it won't even be available for another year or so."

Also at the meeting from Stanton were City Manager Jimmy Mathis and City Councilman Lester Baker. Representing Martin County were county commissioners Don Tollison and E.D. Holcombe.

Spring board

How's that?

Q. How soon will amendments go into effect once they are passed by vote?

A. According to the Secretary of State and Governor's Office, if the bill has an effective date written into it, the bill will go into effect on that date. If the bill does not have an effective date written in, then the bill will go into effect not earlier than 15 days and not after 30 days of the final canvassing date. The final canvassing date will be set by the governor.

about two hours before firefighters got it under control, damage to the area was minimal, Wright said.

"The cable TV company did lose some lines on their microwave system," he said. "So far that was the only damage I knew of other than grass."

Wright said units from six county fire stations responded to the blaze. About 30 firefighters from Sand Springs, Jonesboro, Silver Heels, Tubbs, Forsan and Coahoma helped contain the fire, he said.

The fire was under control by about 3 p.m., Wright said, but units stayed at the site until after dark "making sure all the edges were in good shape. Silvers Heels got up in the middle of the night to check it."

Big Spring firefighters also responded to the fire. Fire Chief Frank Anderson said his crews helped protect a house that appeared threatened by the flames.

he ran in to call the volunteer Silver Heels (fire department)," Anderson said. "He said after he notified them, he came out and it was really rolling."

Anderson said when city crews arrived, about 100 acres already were involved and that the blaze quickly spread.

He said Big Spring sent a tanker and the captain's van, and Tom Decell, city public works director, sent a bulldozer to cut a fire break, which Wright called a "tremendous help."

"I think both the city and the county did a really fantastic job knocking that down and controlling it," Anderson said. "And of course we had some luck in that the wind was just moderate. If it had been gusting, we really would have had a problem."

"The volunteer fire chief did an excellent job in his coordination and management of his equipment and personnel. He did a real good job."

Border guards allowed me. East Germans over the border, after merely stamping their identity papers. Some didn't even require that, and guards from both countries stood together at the border.

"The sun is shining, and the people are in a good mood," said a smiling, husky East German guard today at the Invalidenstrasse crossing of the Berlin Wall.

Many people cried as they embraced relatives they hadn't seen in decades. Others rushed to West Berlin department stores to buy cosmetics and other goods scarce in the East bloc.

"It was so simple to come over," one young East German said. "The feeling is just indescribable."

East Germany's sudden decision to open the borders came at a Central Committee meeting Thursday and followed a dizzying series of reforms announced by new Communist leader Egon Krenz.

Guenter Schabowski, a member of the ruling Politburo, announced the borders were being opened until a law is passed allowing East Germans greater freedom of travel. He did not say when the law would be passed.

President Bush said upon hearing the news that if East Germany makes good on its promise to allow free emigration, "this wall built in '61 will have very little relevance."

In Moscow, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov praised the East German reforms but cautioned that any speculation about a reunified Germany was "out of the question."

that charge when he was shot. She testified Wednesday.

"We're asking that they subpoena Vicki Farris and Sandra Castillo, who would from our understanding of their statements totally contradict the rape victim's version," he said. "But they haven't called them."

"They would make assertions that came to their knowledge that came from the rape victim that she was not sure it was Sammy Gomez who was involved but it was suggested to her by police during a lineup."

He also submitted Minnie Gomez, the mother of the deceased, as a potential witness.

He said he had to push to have two other witnesses testify that may have provided an alibi for Gomez during the time that he allegedly kidnapped the woman who said he raped her.

They were Gomez's brother Robert, who testified Wednesday, and Danny Rivera, who testified Thursday.

Sandoval also raised complaints about the district attorney's decisions not to release a subpoena list or make a recommendation in the case, saying they are not standard practices.

"Those that watched television today probably had a special place in their hearts for Germany," he said.

"Most people were aware we were having some great difficulty about three to five years ago," Stenholm said after the ceremonies. He said, at one time the question of the hospital's status was in question.

Today two new departments were dedicated at the hospital.

"It's another two steps today that you have to have. You can't stand still in the medical community today," Stenholm said.

"It's the total health care delivery. Our health care delivery system is second to none in the world, but it is also expensive,"

Stenholm said.

He credited the health care delivery system as being the best in the world. Citing the problem of the budget versus technology, Stenholm said, "Our goal and challenge is to continue to demand efficiency from technology today to better technology tomorrow."

Alexander said he thought the ceremonies went well at the hospital.

"I thought it went very well. The primary purpose of the ceremonies was to honor our veterans. With the Congressman here I think we did that very well," said Alexander.

The new radiology facility has been completely renovated and will include equipment to do routine radiography, special procedures, ultrasound, mammography and nuclear medicine procedures.

The communications building will house state of the art telephone equipment, computer training room and offices.

Alexander said, the communications building is expected to increase the productivity of the hospital's staff.

Elsewhere around the Crossroads Country veterans will be honored with a memorial wreath at the Evergreen Cemetery in Martin County Saturday and in Colorado City a flag raising ceremony will be held at 8 a.m. Saturday.

HOUSTON (AP) — It was a day of role switching for Harris County Court-at-Law Judge Jimmie Duncan, who reported for jury duty only to be assigned to his own court.

But Duncan was not among the five men and one woman selected Wednesday to serve as jurors at a misdemeanor assault trial.

His mere appearance startled his own staff, and visiting County Court-at-Law Judge Frank Hale was so impressed with the unlikely situation that he ordered a defense attorney to photograph the juror prospects "for history."

After the jury was sworn in, Duncan departed for his chambers.

Border bandits

EL PASO (AP) — A task force of undercover police officers and Border Patrol agents are patrolling a stretch of the Texas-Mexico border to curb rising violence by border bandits.

The task force has netted nine felony arrests ranging from burglary and auto theft to assault. At least six of those arrested have been undocumented aliens.

"The violence is definitely there," said Steve Mendoza, border patrol agent. "The bandits are getting braver."

Mendoza is in charge of the Border Patrol's part in the task force, which has been dubbed "the bandit detail."

The task force began Oct. 29 and patrols an area that includes the University of Texas at El Paso.

Bush to address plight of homeless while in Dallas

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is pressing for a new initiative that administration officials say will address the plight of the nation's homeless and other problems families face in finding decent housing.

Bush was traveling to Dallas today to speak about the housing crisis before the National Association of Realtors, the powerful lobby of real estate agents.

He also was attending a dinner to help Texas Gov. Bill Clements retire $2 million in debt from his 1986 campaign and helping dedicate a Texas memorial to Vietnam veterans before flying home Saturday.

Top officials of the Department of Housing and Urban Development met Friday with White House domestic policy adviser Roger Porter and other top administration officials to put the final touches on Bush's housing initiative, sources said.

A White House official, who asked not to be identified, said Bush will use the Dallas appearance to unveil "a comprehensive plan to make basic shelter and affordable housing within reach of every American."

Bush will also propose to aid the homeless by easing regulations that currently inhibit public housing authorities from housing the homeless in vacant units intended for families, the elderly or handicapped, the source said.

HUD will allow public housing authorities to grant waivers to let the homeless into such vacant units, he added.

Bush, in a speech last March 14, said, "When you look out the window of the White House and see the ragged, pathetic figures huddled over the steam grates of the Ellipse, I see an affront to the American dream, a national shame."

He ordered Kemp then to come up with new ideas to get the homeless off the streets of urban America.

Earlier in the year, Bush proposed spending $644 million in fiscal 1990 to carry out the McKinney Act, a program created to find housing for the homeless.

President Ronald Reagan, was often criticized by homeless activists for not seeking more funds for the homeless. Bush, during last year's campaign, promised "full funding" of the McKinney Act.

District of Columbia officials believe there are 8,000 to 10,000 people living on the streets of the nation's capital. Nationally, some researchers estimate 300,000 to 600,000 Americans are homeless on any given night. Some activists say the homeless number 2 million or more.

Federal funds for low-income housing were cut 75 percent during the Reagan administration.

Board defends system of choosing prison sites

AUSTIN (AP) — Amid criticism from some losing cities, members of the Texas Board of Criminal Justice defended the process for choosing sites for six new state prisons.

On Thursday, board Chairman Charles Terrell said the selection has been "absolutely" fair. "I'm also satisfied that we've got 12 good finalists."

The board on Monday is scheduled to choose six sites from a list of 12 finalists for three 2,250-bed maximum security prisons and three 1,000-bed medium security units. The 12 finalists were announced Wednesday.

"I think, probably the process is being handled as well as it could be," said board member F.L. Stephens of San Angelo.

People involved with two communities' proposals passed over by the board said they weren't convinced the selection has been conducted fairly.

"It is my belief that it was all in place, said and done, before yesterday's (Wednesday's) meeting," said Ernestine Bejcker, who helped organize the proposal from Karnes County.

Harry Stafford of Woodville, which already has been awarded one prison, was told in its contract for that unit that "we'd be given due consideration for an additional prison."

But Stafford said, "I don't think we were given due consideration. We were told about a week before that the fact that we had one (prison) was not in our favor."

Stafford and Ms. Bejcker said they had heard rumors before the selection of finalists that an unofficial "short list" of sites might exist.

Stephens and board member Allan Polunsky of San Antonio said they knew nothing of a short list.

Picking teeth

EL PASO — Arthur Harris, a professor of biological sciences, inspects a prehistoric jawbone. The bone was discovered in a gravel pit and Harris says it is an important find because it is so well preserved. The bone is believed to be at least 500,000 years old and to have belonged to a stegomastodon, a relative of the modern elephant. The bone was donated to the University of Texas at El Paso.

State officials call for judicial election changes

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas leaders must work quickly to design a new system for electing state district judges unless they want a federal court to do it for them, key officials say.

"We can postpone the inevitable, or we can accept the leadership responsibility of coming forward and changing this system," said Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, whose office represents the state in court.

Mattox, declining to say whether he would appeal U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton's decision striking the current system in nine counties, urged Gov. Bill Clements to include the issue in the upcoming special legislative session.

Bunton ruled that the election of state judges from at-large districts in the counties — Dallas, Harris, Bexar, Travis, Jefferson, Lubbock, Ector, Tarrant and Midland — illegally discriminates against minorities.

The judge indicated he may block judicial elections if the Legislature has not worked to address the problem by Jan. 3.

Clements, who called the session beginning Tuesday for lawmakers to address workers' compensation reform, accused Mattox of "playing politics." Nevertheless, he said he is considering whether to add judicial election reform to the special session agenda.

"We're not going to have anything on the agenda except workers' compensation until we get that laid aside, and then we'll think about other things," Clements said. But he added, "Everything is possible... I have to say that it merits consideration."

Immediately following Wednesday's ruling, Clements rejected the idea of adding judicial election changes to the session agenda.

Grand jury views bus crash site

EDINBURG (AP) — A grand jury visited the flooded caliche pit where 21 students lost their lives in the worst school bus accident in Texas history.

The Hidalgo County panel will reconvene next week to continue deliberations, Guerra said. The panel is reviewing affidavits from experts and witnesses, including the 60 survivors of the Sept. 21 accident, to decide whether criminal charges should be filed.

The crash occurred when a soft drink truck collided with the bus at a rural intersection near Alton. Survivors said the bus became airborne and careened into a flooded, 40-foot-deep caliche pit, which was not fenced.

Preliminary results of an inspection by the National Transportation Safety Board and the Texas Department of Public Safety showed that some of the truck's brakes were out of adjustment and others were correctly adjusted.

Houston vies for convention

WASHINGTON (AP) — Houston leaders pitching their city for the 1992 Democratic National Convention say there's no place better than George Bush's adopted hometown for launching the party's next election battle against the Republican president.

Jack Carter, chairman of the Harris County Democratic Party, said the nation's fourth-largest city was "disappointed when Atlanta won the convention in 1988 over Houston."

But "we don't sit and pout in Harris County, Houston, Texas" and the city started early in its bid to capture the 1992 convention, he said.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, the Democrat's vice presidential nominee in 1988, led a delegation of Texans touting Houston as the next convention site before the selection committee Thursday.

"In 1992, Texas will be the same kind of key battleground that it was in 1968," said Bentsen, D-Texas, recalling a rally 20 years ago at the Astrodome for Democratic presidential nominee Hubert Humphrey. "And for that reason, I can't think of a smarter way to begin the 1992 general election than to nominate our candidates in Houston."

The site selection committee was expected to decide this afternoon which of the five cities making bids for the convention would be visited before a final decision is made in April.

A minimum step forward

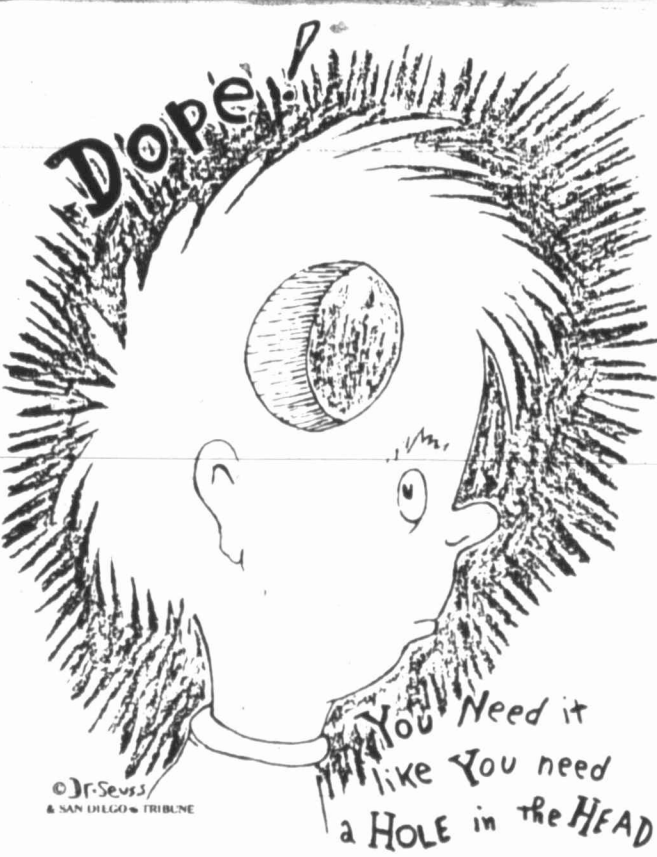

After months of wrangling, President Bush and Congress have finally struck a compromise on increasing the minimum wage. The deal gives both sides a piece of what they wanted out of the legislation, though it doesn't give the poor nearly enough. If Congress acts to increase the earned-income tax credit, poor working families could get a great deal more help from government.

In the compromise approved Oct. 31, the federal minimum wage would increase in two stages to $4.25 an hour, the current California minimum, by April of 1991. That's less than congressional Democrats sought, but it raises the minimum more quickly than the president had wanted. In addition, the compromise establishes a separate subminimum training wage for teen-agers. Employers may pay a lesser amount to teen-agers for at least the first three months on the job, and for three months more if the employer can document that the workers are still in training. This provision will help guard against having the higher minimum wage price thousands of low-skill teen-agers out of the job market, as it has in the past.

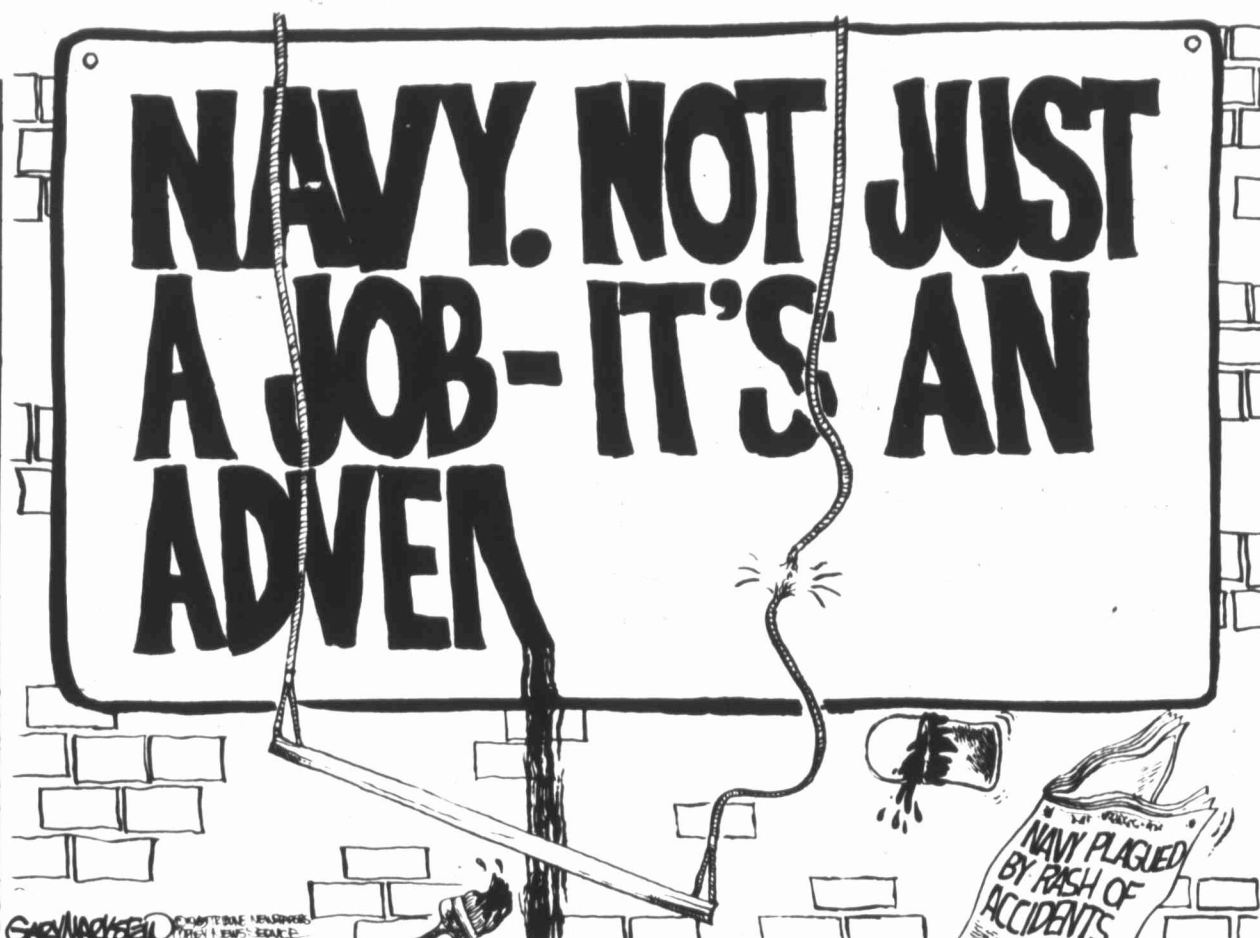

Given the long political stalemate on this issue, the compromise must be counted as a boon for low-wage workers. It will give minimum-wage workers their first pay increase since 1981, when the current $3.35 level was set. Since that time, prices have increased more than 40 percent, leaving a minimum-wage worker supporting a family of four $5,000 below the official poverty line.

Unhappily, even the $4.25 an hour level doesn't begin to bring minimum-wage workers back to the level of real income they enjoyed in the 1960s and 1970s. To give working families some of the help they need, it's important for Congress also to move ahead with a major increase in the earned-income tax credit, which refunds part of the payroll tax to low-income workers with children.

The House-passed child care bill both expands the earned-income credit and adjusts it for family size. It would increase the wages of minimum-wage workers with children by the equivalent of another 50 cents an hour without any impact on employers' hiring decisions. Without action on earned-income credit, the minimum wage compromise will remain but a minimum step forward giving all American workers a decent reward for their labor.

Liberal censors also unacceptable

By GEORGE F. WILL

WASHINGTON — Two years ago, Prof. Charles Lawrence of Stanford law school produced a scholarly essay of 31 pages, 62 footnotes and one weird idea. It was that the real purport and proper effect of the Supreme Court's 1954 school-desegregation decision is to permit, and perhaps require, sweeping censorship of speech.

Lawrence argued that the Court found segregated schools inherently unequal and unconstitutional because of "the message" of inferiority that segregation conveys. Therefore it is constitutional to suppress speech with a racist message.

It is but a short step — via the manufacture of yet another right (the right to respect) — to the notion that the Constitution sanctions suppression of all speech offensive to any of America's "traditionally subjugated groups" or "victims." Only one group is ineligible for the privileged status of victim: There can be no limits on speech about white males. Speech that liberals disapprove should be suppressed because it expresses ideas that are "culturally engendered" by "America's sick society."

Were Lawrence's argument merely one man's eccentricity, it would not matter. However, it exemplifies the ongoing attempt to give intellectual respectability to the spreading movement of censorship by liberals on campuses.

Many colleges and universities have adopted stringent codes stipulating impermissible speech. Such codes often come in a package with mandatory "awareness" classes. These are inflicted by sensitivity-tutors and other official consciousness-raisers. Their task is to make students "aware" of officially approved thinking about race, "sexual preference" and other items of liberal orthodoxy.

The proliferating rules proscribe speech that "stirs" or "stigmatizes" or "victimizes." The rules forbid giving offense to any group enjoying the coveted status of victim. The University of Michigan's rule (which a judge laughed out of court) forbade all speech giving offense "on the basis of race, ethnicity, religion, national origin, sex, sexual orientation, creed, ancestry, age, marital status, handicap or Vietnam-era veteran status."

George F. Will

Many such codes strikingly resemble something that recently enraged liberals: Sen. Jesse Helms' amendment to prohibit federal funding of art that "denigrates, debases or reviles a person, group or class of citizens on the basis of race, creed, sex, handicap, age or national origin." "Tyranny!" exclaimed some liberals who, pausing over their lengthening lists of forbidden forms of speech, declared that denial of a subsidy constitutes censorship.

Prof. Alan Kors of the University of Pennsylvania shrewdly notes that in the 1960s, when most students seemed to the left of faculty and administrations, liberals said: It is illegitimate for universities to assert moral authority over students. But today, most students seem to be to the right of the academic establishment, so liberalism encourages that establishment to control ("raise") the consciousness of retrograde students caught deviating from liberal orthodoxy.

More than at any time in memory, there are many subjects "too sensitive" to talk about freely on campuses that are patrolled by prowling sensitivity-police. Courses on, for example, the history or sociology of race can be considered too problematic to undertake. This is a broader threat to freedom than the liberal mobs that howled down speakers supporting the U.S. commitment to Vietnam. It has more of a "chilling effect" than McCarthyism did because today the forces of censorship arise from within the academic culture.

The censorship that liberals like might seem especially odd in an era of permissiveness regarding curricula. But the permissiveness is itself a ploy in the liberals' struggle to politicize the curricula by ending the "domination" by DWEMs — dead white European males.

Liberals have been First Amendment fanatics (All forms of expression are of equal value — who is to say otherwise?) for a long time. Therefore, only conservatives can make the case for the kernel of truth in what the liberals are saying. Conservatives can say:

An academic community is not a haphazard aggregation of individuals. Rather, it is a community, a complex, fragile organism with distinctive purposes. Fulfillment of those purposes requires a particular atmosphere of civility that can be incompatible with unrestricted expression.

Liberals, however, have long preached universal disdain for all authority, intellectual as well as political. Having asserted that tolerance is the only obvious value, they are singularly unsuited to digging their heels into the academic soil that liberalism has made marshy.

In attempting to temper individualism with communitarian concerns, academic liberals are asserting a right they ferociously deny to every other community — local, state or national: the right to defend community values by circumscribing individual rights.

Among today's academic list-makers, listing all the forms of forbidden speech, are there any who defend the right of the national community to nurture its values by limiting the "symbolic speech" of flag desecration? Any who defend a community's right to defend its standards against pornography? Imagine the incredulity, quickly becoming outrage, if anyone suggested campus restrictions on speech slandering the United States?

The grim administrators of moral uplift at the University of Connecticut are empowered to punish students for "inappropriately directed laughter." Derisive laughter directed at the liberal censors is appropriate.

A machine with a slow crank

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

Did you read what Jack Nicholson's former girlfriend said about him?

She said, among other things, he was a "sex machine" and was into erotic games, such as spanking.

Some guys have all the luck. Here's an ex-girlfriend of a guy calling him a "sex machine" in public, which means a lot of other women will want to give ol' Jack a try now just to see if he lives up to his billing.

I figured perhaps it might work for me. I phoned my ex-wives and several former girlfriends to see what sort of recommendations they could give me as a lover.

My first ex-wife, once she stopped laughing, said, "You're a sex machine, all right — a 1954 DeSoto with plaid seat covers."

"But didn't we play any erotic games?" I asked her.

"Once you tried to use a dirty word in Scrabble, but I disallowed it," she said.

I moved on to wife No. 2: "Somehow," she said, "the term 'sex machine' just doesn't seem to work when I apply it to you."

I pressed on, "What terms apply to me when you think of my sexuality?"

"Do the words, 'numb,' 'yawn,' and 'wake me when this is over,' ring a bell?"

Wife No. 3: "How did you get this number?" she asked.

"Please be civil," I said. "I know we had our differences, but I was just wondering how you would describe me as a lover."

"How would I describe you as a lover?" she asked, in a tone of voice I remembered distinctly. It was in that very same tone of voice she once said to me, "My lawyer is going to ask for the death penalty during our divorce proceedings."

"I'd say," she continued, "you are to lovelinking what Muammar Khadafy is to world peace."

I called an ex-girlfriend. "Jack Nicholson's ex-girlfriend," I explained, "said he was a sex machine. What would you say if you were asked what sort of lover I was?"

She handed the phone to her current boyfriend, Bruno.

"You call here, again," he said, "and I'm going to hurt you."

I went on to my next ex-girlfriend. She was a lot nicer about the whole thing.

"Well, you weren't bad," she said.

"Could you expand?" I asked.

"Well," she said, "if we turned off the lights and I thought of my ex-boyfriend, Bruno, it was bearable."

I had one last ex-girlfriend to call, the lovely Juanita. We met while I was having my oil changed. I can still remember that first meeting, Juanita rolling out from under my car at the Gulf station, oil dripping down on her shirt, the one with "Juanita" sewn in script over her left pocket.

"Juanita," I asked, "was I a good lover?"

"If I could have ever got you cranked, darling," she replied, "who knows?"

I went and made myself a couple of peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. I just wish I'd known about them sooner.

VA balks on treating victim of nuclear tests

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — In the spring of 1955, Frank Weldon and his shipmates on the USS O'Brien shipped out of the Long Beach Naval Station with a strange set of instructions — leave their cameras and film at home. Three days later, out at sea, they found out why. They were to be official observers of Operation Wigwag, a series of underwater nuclear tests, and the Navy didn't want them to ruin their film.

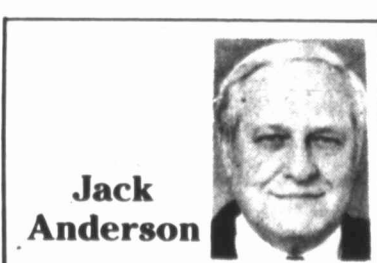

Today, Weldon, 56, has leukemia. Six Veterans Administration doctors have told him that his disease is probably related to the exposure to radiation 34 years ago. But the VA has abandoned Weldon because he doesn't meet the terms of an arbitrary VA statute of limitations on leukemia. He didn't have the good sense to come down with the disease within 30 years of Operation Wigwag.

According to documents we obtained from the Defense Nuclear Agency, Operation Wigwag was a series of deep water nuclear tests in May 1955 in the Pacific Ocean about 500 miles southwest of San Diego.

Most of the crew were not on deck during the explosion. After the test, Weldon and a shipmate went on deck and spied a buoy that had been blown from its spot by the explosion. Weldon went out on a small boat to retrieve the buoy. It was tested and found to be radioactive.

"Every time I heard of someone getting a disease or dying from radiation exposure, I thought back to that buoy and hoped nothing would happen to me," Weldon told our associate Tim Warner. "My doctors had told me that something might show up, but I was reassured, knowing that I qualify for treatment in Veterans Administration hospitals in case I got sick."

Yes, something showed up last February, but no, Weldon did not qualify for treatment. While being examined in preparation for eye surgery in Louisiana, Weldon was diagnosed with Chronic Myelogenous Leukemia. He was flown to a VA hospital in San Antonio, Texas, where the diagnosis was confirmed. The VA doctors in Texas strongly recommended Alpha Interferon as the best treatment.

Weldon went back to his home in Long Beach, Calif., where he assumed he would be treated at the local VA medical center. He asked for Alpha Interferon, an expensive experimental drug that has proved effective in the treatment of leukemia. His VA doctor rejected that approach and proposed a more traditional treatment.

Weldon wrote to several members of Congress and a letter to the editor of his local newspaper. The VA discharged him from the Long Beach outpatient program.

Fearing for his life, Weldon turned to a civilian doctor who put him on Alpha Interferon. It costs more than $3,000 a month and Weldon's insurance runs out next April.

Three weeks ago, he got a letter from the VA saying that he was not eligible for treatment anyway because he didn't come down with leukemia within 30 years of his military exposure to radiation. That 30-year limit has little to do with the course of the disease and more to do with politics. When Congress was debating the Atomic Veterans Compensation Act of 1987, the 30-year statute of limitations on leukemia was one of the budget compromises that was struck.

"It was a matter of getting what I could get," said Rep. Roy Roland, D-Ga., who led the fight for compensation to veterans exposed to severe radiation. "I didn't even expect the president (Reagan) to sign the legislation."

SHOPPING LIST — The Bush administration is considering a number of arms sales to the Middle East. Here is a partial shopping list from a classified State Department report: 40 F-18 fighter planes and 12 helicopters to the United Arab Emirates; 60 F-16 planes to Pakistan; 315 M1 tanks to Saudi Arabia and 200 to Kuwait; 150 Hawk anti-aircraft missiles to Egypt; 200 Stingers to Israel; 50 armored personnel carriers to Egypt; and 1,500 TOW anti-tank missiles to Kuwait.

City mourns death of infant

BOSTON (AP) — A boy born two months premature after his mother was fatally shot by a robber has died at the age of 2 weeks, officials said.

"It's a tragedy for a mother and a baby and it's a tragedy for all the families of innocent victims who have suffered violence in our society," Mayor Raymond Flynn said after Christopher Stuart's death Thursday afternoon.

Dr. Steven Ringer, head of the hospital's neonatal intensive care unit, said the infant died of respiratory failure from his premature and traumatic birth.

The baby had been in intensive care since his delivery by emergency Caesarean section shortly after his mother, Carol Stuart, was shot Oct. 23.

Charles Stuart, 29, who was critically wounded in the attack, was brought by ambulance from Boston City Hospital to be at his son's bedside along with family members.

Mrs. Stuart, 30, who was seven months pregnant, was shot and killed by a gunman who held up the couple in their car after they left Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Navy jet crashes into apartments

SMYRNA, Ga. (AP) — Searchers picked through the rubble of a suburban Atlanta apartment complex today, looking for three people still missing after a Navy jet fighter exploded and slammed into the buildings, setting off huge fires.

Four people were injured, including the pilot of the A-7E Corsair II who ejected just before the crash Thursday evening, and a woman and her 5-year-old child who were critically burned.

About 30 people were left homeless by the crash, which occurred about 6:30 p.m. It took firefighters two hours to extinguish the blaze.

The unarmed A-7E Corsair II crashed 2.5 miles short of the runway at the Dobbins Air Force Base, 15 miles north of Atlanta, where the pilot was attempting to land, said Navy spokesman Kerry Honore.

TV show inspires young bombers

BUFFALO, W. Va. (AP) — Two youths inspired by a television show created a bomb using a shotgun shell and a pipe, and both lost fingers when the device exploded in their hands, police said.

"They told us they'd watched that show 'MacGyver' recently and they wanted to try and build one like they'd seen on there and set it off in a field," state trooper S.A. Lawrence said.

Kenneth Price, 19, and Mark

Paul, 11, were in fair condition at Charleston Area Medical Center's Women & Children's Hospital, nursing supervisor Darla Brumfield said Thursday. Price also received facial burns in Wednesday's accident.

ABC-TV's "MacGyver" stars Richard Dean Anderson as someone who outwits criminals with his scientific knowledge, including by fashioning explosives out of everyday materials.

Navy hunts for scattered bombs

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Navy pilots accidentally dropped hundreds of bombs for years outside a military bombing range in central Nevada, and state officials are angry they never were told about it.

Navy officials, in a sweep that began Oct. 30 and should be completed by mid-November, have found some bombs on public lands used by hunters, hikers and off-road-vehicle enthusiasts.

The Navy has recovered up to 2,000 live and dead bombs dropped outside the 22,000-acre bombing range at Fallon Naval Air Station.

"I'm just appalled this has occurred," Gov. Bob Miller said, ordering the closure of state Route 839, an 18-mile road that parallels Navy bombing areas starting 60 miles east of Reno.

Citizen Alert called for an indefinite halt to bombing at Fallon pending an investigation into why the bombs were allowed to fall outside the 22,000-acre range for years without public knowledge.

White House considers bypassing confirmations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is considering a high-risk move to temporarily bypass the Senate confirmation process by giving "recess appointments" to a number of presidential nominations.

White House officials said recommendations are being prepared for President Bush outlining the process for such a parliamentary end-run.

That the White House is even considering such a move reflects frustration by Bush and his top aides over the Senate's slow pace in acting on his nominations.

Under the Constitution, the president can temporarily sidestep the Senate's confirmation powers by appointing a person to fill a vacancy while the Senate is in recess. Those named during Congress' upcoming winter break could hold their jobs through the end of 1990 without Senate confirmation.

Some of the 119 nominations now pending before the Senate have been controversial.

For instance, Bush's choice of James Cason for a top Agriculture Department post has drawn fierce opposition from environmentalists and many senators for what they allege to be a pro-development bias.

The nomination of Vaughn R.

Walker — a cousin to Bush — to be a federal judge in northern California has been snarled in a nepotism charge.

Victor Stello Jr.'s nomination as assistant secretary of energy for defense programs has been stalled since July over criticism of his record at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Some ambassadorial appointments have been blocked by Senate Democrats who claim they have few qualifications other than large contributions to Republican campaigns.

Federal law requires Bush to formally resubmit nominations of any recess appointments once a new session of the Senate begins in order for the official to get his or her paycheck.

At a news conference Tuesday, Bush, who often has vented his frustration at the slow pace of Senate consideration of his nominees, accused the Democratic-led Congress of "blocking everything I do."

Meanwhile, Mitchell repeatedly has accused Bush of foot-dragging on other key government positions. He told the Senate recently that Bush had failed to "make nominations for nearly half" of the key executive branch jobs and that Bush's criticism of Senate inaction was "unfounded and unfair."

Fundamentalists gain in elections

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Moslem fundamentalists, many of them campaigning under the slogan "Islam is the solution," won the biggest bloc of seats in Parliament during this kingdom's first general election in 22 years.

The result was an apparent setback for King Hussein, who urged voters not to mix religion with politics in Wednesday's vote.

Fundamentalist candidates captured 34 of the 80 seats in Parliament, according to results announced Thursday.

About 20 seats were won by pro-government candidates, while leftists, Arab nationalists, tribal leaders and others took the rest. The breakdown gave opposition forces a clear majority over strict loyalists.

For the first time, women were allowed to vote and seek office, but none of the 12 females among the 647 candidates won a seat.

The Brotherhood called for more social welfare programs to help the poor and for a Palestinian state on Israeli territory.

Deng meets with Kissinger

BEIJING (AP) — Deng Xiaoping met former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger among the official trappings of the Great Hall of the People today, a day after he announced his retirement from his last party post.

Deng on Thursday gave up his last official job as chairman of the Communist Party's Central Military Commission.

The 85-year-old Deng today noted with a hearty laugh that Kissinger was the first foreign guest he had met since retirement, but he said he will continue to play his "dual role" as citizen and party member.

The meeting at Beijing's Great Hall, the seat of government, reinforced the general feeling that Deng will remain dominant, though he no longer holds official titles.

Kissinger is making what is believed to be his 15th trip to China since a secret visit in 1971 that set the stage for normalization of relations with the United States.

Protesters demand closing of bases

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Club-wielding police today drove hundreds of protesters from the U.S. Embassy, where they were demanding the closing of U.S. military bases. At least two people were injured.

Protesters carried placards denouncing President Corason Aquino's meeting Thursday in Washington with President Bush.

"President Aquino's meeting with Bush is a sign of her treacherous selling of her country's sovereignty in exchange for the bases," said Philip Hernandez, a union official who spoke at the Manila rally.

In Olongapo, home of the U.S.-run Subic Bay naval base, thousands of residents turned out today to show support for maintaining the bases after their lease expires in September 1991.

U.S. and Filipino negotiators are expected to begin talks in Manila next month on extending the lease. Any agreement must be approved by two-thirds of the 23-member Senate, where opposition is strong.

Airshow called success despite low attendance

By RUTH COCHRAN
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Less than ideal weather contributed to poor attendance at the Vietnam Memorial Airshow, but show organizers termed the event a success anyway.

Charlie Lewis, a member of the committee that organized the show, said about 12,000 people bought tickets for the Oct. 28-29 shows. An estimated crowd of 18,000 saw the show, he said. Windy, cool conditions during Saturday's performance contributed to a smaller-than-expected crowd, he said.

Although the Vietnam Memorial Committee had hoped to draw as many as 40,000 people to the event, Lewis said the airshow still drew spectators from across the country.

"We had people from 56 Texas cities and nine different states attend the airshow," he said. The spectator traveling the farthest came from Turtle Creek, Pa., he said, while the Texan traveling the farthest came from Brownsville.

Lewis said that according to Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce figures, the crowd attending the airshow and the committee had a total economic impact of more than $300,000. The airshow committee spent about half the airshow budget, or $22,000, in Big Spring, he said.

While the show was not an overwhelming success, it did earn a small profit, Lewis said, and will be held again next year.

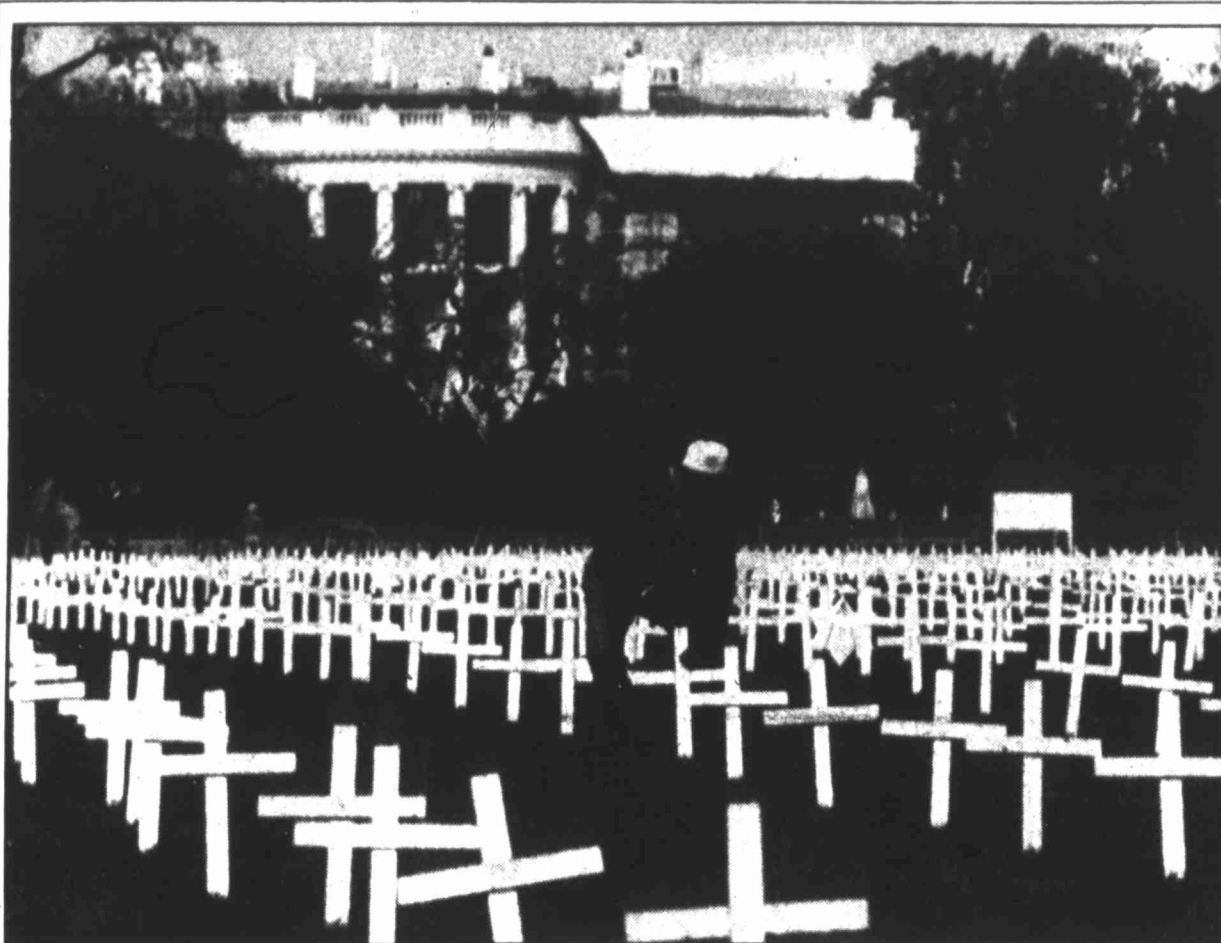

The memorial committee had hoped to earn a large portion of the money needed to build a memorial to West Texas area Vietnam veterans.

The committee expects each successive show to be more successful, he said, as the annual event builds a good reputation with aviation fans. The airshow already is a hit with performers, he said.

"All the participants, civilian and military, were extremely pleased with the hospitality... and friendship extended by the City of Big Spring," Lewis said. "Every one of them had a positive comment."

Lewis said an "outstanding community" effort, including volunteers and sponsors, helped make the airshow a success.

"We extend our deepest appreciation and heartfelt thanks to the community of Big Spring for their support," he said.

Net maker clings to old ways

FREEMONT (AP) — When Rod Brinkley throws his net into the surf after mullet, he remembers each of its 30,000 knots and his fingers' corresponding calluses.

"That's why some say a hand-made net will last longer," Brinkley said. "Your hands get real sore and you have put a lot of time into it, so you don't want to tear it up."

It's intangibles like pride in workmanship that encourage Brinkley and other net makers to cling to the craft instead of buying machine-made nets. Brinkley says the time spent is not wasted.

"I turn on some music, sit back and start tying," he says. "I can relax. There is no tension in tying the net."

But he can remember a time when he started tying nets seven years ago when knots like the "flying dutchman" and "Portuguese flat" were more like frustrating enemies than trusted friends.

"Before I learned it you should have heard me. I used to get really radical because I couldn't remember how everything went. Then one day it fell into place."

His practice of the ancient art began as a practical way to save money while catching good bait to lure redfish and trout, Brinkley said.

"There is an art to it. I catch mullets by looking at the water. If the water is muddy, you can catch them by watching for bubbles."

"Then you pick the net up and lay it on your shoulder. When you see the bait you throw it over them."

The Spanish-style net Brinkley uses is designed to pull up into a bag to trap the fish, he said.

"Then you take it to the bank, release the lines and shake it until the bait fall onto the lines."

Brinkley says he has developed his own style of net making and prefers modern monofilament line to the more traditional nylon.

But, on the whole, Brinkley says he is using many of the same techniques fisherman have used for centuries.

"It's been around since Christ's time and nets haven't changed that much."

Early signs suggest 1989 was a very good year for wine

PARIS (AP) — An exceptional harvest in vineyards across France has wine growers and wine lovers happily anticipating their first tastings of this year's vintage.

"There's even talk, perhaps overexcited, that 1989 could produce some of the best wines of the century."

The enthusiasm stems from near-perfect growing conditions: a hot, dry summer that meant drought for other farmers, followed by an early harvest free from rain.

"We've got sun in the vats," said Maurice Vigier, a producer of Chateau Reve d'Or, a Bordeaux Pomerol, and winner of the Concours Agricole wine competition. "The quality is very high."

Hopes are high from Alsace in the northeast to Bordeaux in the southwest, and in all the winegrowing regions in between.

"It's a good year all over France," said Christian Amare, spokesman for the Maison de la Vigne et du Vin. Besides the high quality, production is up in quantity by 5 percent over last year, he said.

Olivier le Flaive, a grower of Puligny-Montrachet and a wine dealer for the Cote d'Or, said the 1989 Burgundy whites will be the best in a decade.

"They are of very, very good quality, at least equal to the good wines of 1978, the acidity is minimal but acceptable. I'd grade the whites 19 out of a perfect 20," he said, adding that the region also will have some exceptional red wines.

But there are reservations as well among wine experts and producers, many of whom are withholding praise until the first corks are popped.

"It may be the year of the decade, because growers and the media want it to be," said Steven Spurrier, the founder of l'Academie du Vin in Paris and one of the best-known wine connoisseurs in the city.

Spurrier said he would wait to see if overripe grapes produce "a flabby, over-rich product."

Tim Johnston, co-owner of Willi's Wine Bar and Juveniles in Paris, said: "It was a great year, but people who are hyping the harvest haven't understood the problems of drought. Some of the whites, for example, are lacking freshness and acidity."

Russell Hone of Le Serbet, a wine brokerage firm in Burgundy, said the white wines from his region have finesse "with good intensity of taste."

"But these wines may not be as rich and lush as 1986, nor as alcoholic as 1985. For now, the white Burgundies still have a milky quality like grapefruit juice," Hone said. "It's a good year, but too early to say if it's great."

Hone said Burgundy suffered hailstorms and frost in June and that "quality varied according to vineyards up and down the Cote d'Or."

There will be plenty of vintage Champagne as producers there bubble with enthusiasm for a crop that produced 10 percent more wine than usual.

"We've had an exceptional year," said Philippe Coulon, director of oenology at Moet et Chandon. "The condition of the grapes was perfect; they reached the ideal maturity, were perfectly healthy, giving a balanced product."

"For the final verdict, we have to await February and March, but we're predicting a 'millesime' or vintage year," Coulon said.

The year's wines may be memorable for their abundance and flavor, but they also will be remembered for being more expensive than ever before. Champagne prices are fixed at 13 percent higher than last year.

Some blame rising labor costs or the expense of improved vinification. Often it simply is a question of supply not meeting demand.

And sometimes public relations campaigns have as much influence as producers in how a wine is priced. Wines from regions that are "hyped" bring as much as the market will bear.

"A lot of speculators in Bordeaux buy it up even before the secondary fermentation is finished," said Mark Williamson of Willi's Wine Bar, adding that it is too early to judge the 1989 Bordeaux.

Nevertheless, he said, "Thanks to this year's hype, the price will probably rise."

World's tallest building

TOKYO — This is an artist conception of Aeropolis 2001, a 500-foot building Ohbayashi Corp., one of Japan's largest construction companies, is designing to build on a reclaimed island in Tokyo Bay. People will be whisked up to the top floor of the 2001-meter (6,603-foot) high building in linear driven elevators in 15 minutes. The 110-story Sears Tower in Chicago is currently the tallest in the world.

McDonald mcbooster

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — State Treasurer Robert Bowman got hooked on fast food as a youthful burger flipper, and he dreams of the day when doctors will say "salt is good for you" and push saturated fat to prevent heart attacks.

Bowman quit his job at McDonald's in 1973, but he told about 750 McDonald's assistant managers at a convention Wednesday that Big Mac sauce will always be in his veins.

"I am always proud to be an 'alum' of McDonald's," Bowman said.

During seminars at the convention, employees were quizzed on such matters as "In what order should a Big Mac, fries and a soda be presented to a customer?" and "What is the proper temperature setting for cleaning the biscuit oven?"

Winners got a variety of prizes including McDonald's stock.

"I'm an unabashed Number 1 frequenter of McDonald's in this state, bar none," Bowman said. "I have this dream doctors will come back in five years and say salt is good for you, saturated fat is the best thing to prevent a heart attack, and if you eat red meat three times a day you're going to live to be 120."

Bowman was 16 when he got his first job at a McDonald's in Brookfield, Wis., in 1971.

Man's persistence changes maps

WASHINGTON (AP) — It took Martin Miller seven years, but he's finally persuaded the CIA and the State Department to change their maps of Israel and Jordan to reflect historical fact and U.S. policy.

It's a story about a persistent advocate, a cumbersome bureaucracy and the intractable Israeli-Arab conflict.

Miller, a retired Treasury Department official, began his crusade in 1981 when he noticed that a government-published map book showed the West Bank of the Jordan River as part of Jordan.

This was despite the fact that the United States and most of the rest of the world have never recognized Jordan's 1950 annexation of the 2,200-square-mile territory.

On the official U.S. maps published by the Central Intelligence Agency, the Israeli-Jordanian border was drawn along the 1949 armistice line, which defined Israel's physical borders until the 1967 war. The maps did not reflect Israel's capture of the West Bank in that war and the new cease-fire lines created as a result.

"It wasn't right. It just didn't reflect reality," said Miller.

He undertook his campaign in a methodical way, buying a computer and poring over history books and archive documents, far from the controversy generated by every wrinkle of the Arab-Israeli dispute.

The first step was a letter to then

Secretary of State Alexander Haig. The retired general referred Miller's letter to a little-known State Department entity called the Office of the Geographer.

The office maps official U.S. policy on sovereignty issues for internal State Department publications, and acts as an advisory and arbitration board for other government agencies that issue maps.

Miller began corresponding with the geographer, who issued a directive in 1982 ordering cartographers to stop showing the West Bank as anyone's territory.

But still, the public maps were not changed.

Miller also enlisted his congressman's help, wrote opinion pieces and editorial letters, but the maps were still wrong.

Finally, Miller asked to see Haig's successor at the State Department, George Shultz, whom he had known when Shultz was Treasury secretary. "That was very exciting," Miller said. He left Shultz with 92 documents buttressing his argument.

More conversations with administration officials and letters followed.

In 1984, Miller read an opinion piece in The Washington Post by former deputy CIA chief Robert Gates, who said the agency was emphasizing accuracy and objectivity in its assessments.

Miller decided to call Gates, talking his way past skeptical aides and secretaries until he got through.

"I told him his people were not adhering to his standards," Miller said. Two days later, on Jan. 2, 1985, he was summoned to a meeting with two CIA officials.

They promised the maps would be changed, but a year later nothing had been done, Miller said.

Miller called again — and this time a promise was fulfilled. The map of Jordan was changed in 1986. It took until January 1989 to change the Israel map.

The new maps show the 1967 cease-fire line between Israel and Jordan, with the West Bank designated as two cultural regions — Judea and Samaria. The two biblical names are also used by Israeli nationalists to describe the region.

Miller's efforts also bore fruit outside government circles when the Encyclopedia Britannica changed its maps, he said.

The State Department is reluctant to give all the credit to Miller for the changes, but concedes his campaign influenced the decision.

"He was very, very active, and believed in his cause," said one official familiar with the case.

Perhaps the best tribute to Miller's determination was contained in a letter from Shultz earlier this year, soon after the Israel maps were changed.

"Dear Marty," wrote the man who labored in vain for six years to bring about Israeli-Arab peace talks. "I'm glad you kept at it and accomplished something that is of genuine and lasting significance."

Local war memorial not same as Midland's

BIG SPRING — Efforts in Midland to build a Vietnam veterans memorial shouldn't be confused with local efforts to build a memorial, say Big Spring-area veterans.

Donald Boling, president of the Rackley-Swords Chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America, said a planned memorial in Midland is separate from a memorial local veterans are trying to build.

Boling said that after the "Moving Wall," a replica of the Vietnam memorial in Washington D.C., stopped in the city in 1987, the "Vietnam Memorial Committee of Big Spring was formed and plans to erect the West Texas Vietnam Memorial... were made."

While the local committee is continuing with efforts to build a memorial, citizens in Midland are planning the Permian Basin Vietnam Memorial to be built at the Midland Air Terminal, Boling said. Because Midland TV station KMID has taken an active interest in that project, publicity for the memorial may have caused confusion, Boling said.

"While I applaud their efforts, I feel the citizens of Big Spring needed to be made aware that this is a completely separate effort and is in no way connected to the West Texas Vietnam Memorial to be built here," he said.

"Should anyone desire to help us build the memorial here, they can make donations to the Vietnam Memorial Committee, P.O. Box 2854, Big Spring.

Claim jumping

CRYSTAL BAY, Nev. (AP) — The Sagebrush War over the boundary between California and Nevada ended in 1863, but inside the Cal-Neva Lodge, it was only recently that the Silver State reclaimed some territory.

It turns out the red line painted down the middle of the hotel-casino on the north shore of Lake Tahoe was about 6 feet too far to the east.

"Basically, the border used to be painted in the middle of the fireplace in the Indian Room but somewhere along the line someone got cute and moved it over," owner Charles Bluth explained Tuesday. "We discovered it during the renovation when we were going through historical records."

Bluth, who's restoring the lodge to its 1937 appearance, recently had the line repainted where it belongs, farther west. It no longer goes over a boulder decorated with a blue-painted hole representing Lake Tahoe.

The original boundary dispute was settled with gunfire and litigation that went all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, but there's no acrimony or finger-pointing at the lodge. Bluth said it isn't clear who is responsible for California's indoor claim-jumping or why. But he said it appears the line was moved during Frank Sinatra's tenure as lodge owner, from 1960 to 1967.

Eastern perils

AMHERST, N.Y. (AP) — Homeowners who feel burdened by the chore of raking up autumn leaves might feel better if they consider the plight of the highway department.

Take Patrick Lucey, highway superintendent in the Buffalo suburb of Amherst. He figures his city's trees will shed about 2,200 truckloads of leaves this fall.

It'll take 80 workers, using 44 pieces of equipment, to sweep up the 800 miles of curbs.

Panamanian eyed for key canal post, officials say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Facing a Jan. 1 deadline, the Bush administration is planning to carry out a key personnel change required by the Panama Canal treaties without violating its policy of avoiding contact with the Panamanian government, officials say.

The treaties say that as of the new year, the U.S. government commission which runs the canal must be headed by a Panamanian for the first time in the 75-year history of the waterway.

They also specify the Panamanian government must nominate the administrator and the U.S. president appoint him, subject to Senate confirmation.

But the administration has refused to consider the nominee of the Panamanian government, Carlos Duque. He was the official presidential candidate in the May elections that were annulled by Panamanian authorities amid widespread allegations of fraud.

The administration, while promising to abide by the treaties, has made it clear that it won't consider any nominee proposed by Panama on grounds that the country has no legitimate government. The administration doesn't recognize Francisco Rodriguez, the hand-

As the officials see it, the ploy does not follow the letter of the treaties but complies with the spirit in that Manfredo's accession ensures that management of the canal will be in the hands of a Panamanian.

In effect, the post of administrator would be unfilled and Manfredo high marks for his performance in his 10 years as deputy administrator.

"His ability to run the canal is unquestioned," said one congressional source.

What is not clear is whether Manfredo will go along with a plan that responded.

He is a former commerce minister under the late Panamanian strongman Omar Torrijos and is said to harbor anti-Noriega sentiments.

The current administrator of the canal commission is Dennis McAuliffe, a former commander of U.S. military forces in Panama who has held his present job for 10 years.

He will step down by Jan. 1, consistent with the treaties, and an American will be appointed to the deputy administrator's post. The transfer of power to Panama will be completed at the end of the century, when Panama assumes full control of the canal.

Noriega, who is wanted in the United States on drug trafficking charges, has said the U.S. campaign against him is part of a plot to evade compliance with the canal treaties.

The treaties say that as of the new year, the U.S. government commission which runs the canal must be headed by a Panamanian for the first time in the 75-year history of the waterway.

picked crony of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega who was sworn in as unelected president Sept. 1.

U.S. officials said the dilemma is expected to be resolved by allowing the deputy administrator of the Panama Canal Commission, Fernando Manfredo, to take charge Jan. 1.

Manfredo would serve as acting chief until an elected government takes office in Panama. The administration plan was first disclosed in a Sunday New York Times column by Flora Lewis.

Administration, congressional and diplomatic sources, all insisting on anonymity, gave Mannot only departs from the letter of the treaties but that also could leave him open to charges by Noriega of acquiescing in an anti-Panamanian gambit.

Administration and congressional sources said Manfredo has been approached about taking over as acting administrator but has not

Tumbleweeds a hazard in South Dakota town

MOBRIDGE, S.D. (AP) — Tumbleweeds tossed by 50-mph winds buried houses in this Missouri River town, and residents struggled to dig out of the prickly problem.

The mayor warned residents who had tumbleweeds up to their chimneys to clear them to reduce the danger of fire.

The weeds had grown thick all summer along the banks of the drought-shrunken Oahe Reservoir in north-central South Dakota. Winds out of the west Tuesday evening sent the weeds rolling across the prairie.

"People in the west end of town as they were sitting in their homes... heard what sounded like rocks being thrown against their houses," Larry Atkinson, publisher of The Mobridge Tribune, said Wednesday.

"They came out this morning to find out that a number of houses were buried, literally buried, with tumbleweeds. We had some homes with only the roof sticking out.

"We had people that could not get out of their driveways," Atkinson said. "We had streets that were blocked, literally invaded by tumbleweeds."

Mayor Darrell Bender urged residents to help clean up the mess. City crews cleared the brush from the streets so vehicles could pass. The cleanup was continuing today.

"It's developing into what could be a very dangerous situation," Bender said. "We need to use extreme caution. I'd like to tell people not to drive through those tumbleweeds. Those that have homes that are covered up to their chimneys, get those weeds cleared so they don't start a fire."

Bender said he had asked the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, which manages the reservoir system, to help in the cleanup.

Army hopes movie will give positive view of Apache helicopter

By ROBERT CADWALLADER
Waco Tribune-Herald

FORT HOOD (AP) — A leather-faced colonel strides out of a Fort Hood airfield hangar and tells a group of the Army's best Apache helicopter pilots to get ready for combat.

In 72 hours they will support a Drug Enforcement Administration effort to arrest drug cartel leaders in South America.

"Our job is to make damn sure they get that chance," the colonel says.

It could happen. But this time it's Hollywood, not Holocaust.

Fort Hood is hosting filmmakers and actors Tommy Lee Jones, Nicolas Cage and Sean Young this week in a movie collaboration to create Wings of the Apache.

Army officials hope the movie, which has been in the works for two years at various air bases, will do for the AH-64 Apache attack helicopter what Tom Cruise and Top Gun did for the Navy's F-14 Tomcat warplanes — show superiority of American military weapons.

The story will tell of a U.S. military task force attack on the drug cartel's "unnamed South American country." And it will feature the special fighting abilities of the $10 million Apache, considered the first chopper maneuverable enough for air-to-air combat.

Fort Hood will act mostly as an Apache-heavy backdrop to character acting scenes, with most of the combat and destruction taking place at Arizona sites. The movie will cost $16.9 million and will hit theaters next summer, said producer William Badalato, who also produced Top Gun.

Production officials use that movie — in which Cruise shoots down Russian MIG warplanes — to describe the spirit of Wings of the Apache. But they emphasize that their movie will have more depth and character development than its cousin.

More importantly for the Army, the film will put a positive spotlight on a helicopter that has weathered negative publicity about several mechanical malfunctions in its brief history.

The military temporarily grounded its Apaches on those occasions to make sure the problems weren't fleetwide, and each time the choppers were approved again for use.

"One thing everybody has to understand is it's been in the field since 1965," said Fort Hood Apache pilot Bill Lee, who is flying the ship for the filmmakers. "It's a new airplane, and it's very sophisticated. Anything that sophisticated, you're going to have some problems with it."

"It's a good airplane. It's a great airplane actually. We enjoy the hell out of flying it. I think people will forget about the negative publicity the aircraft has had once they see the film and how terrific it looks. It looks fantastic on film."

The movie's premise also spotlights the debate about military involvement in fighting international drug trade. Actor Dale Dye, the movie colonel and a real-life retired marine sergeant, says it shouldn't be an issue.

"I think it's something the military has to do," said Dye, who also had a roll in the movie Platoon. "I think it's unfortunate that the drug problem has become such a scourge that the assets and the talents and the skills of the American military have to be applied. But the plain fact of the matter is it's out of control."

Wings of the Apache is a "no-cost arrangement" for the government, said Maj. Christopher Chalko, the Department of Defense's liaison between the production company and the military installations it is using.

Chalko said the filmmakers pay for flying time and other costs, and the Army gets the good publicity.

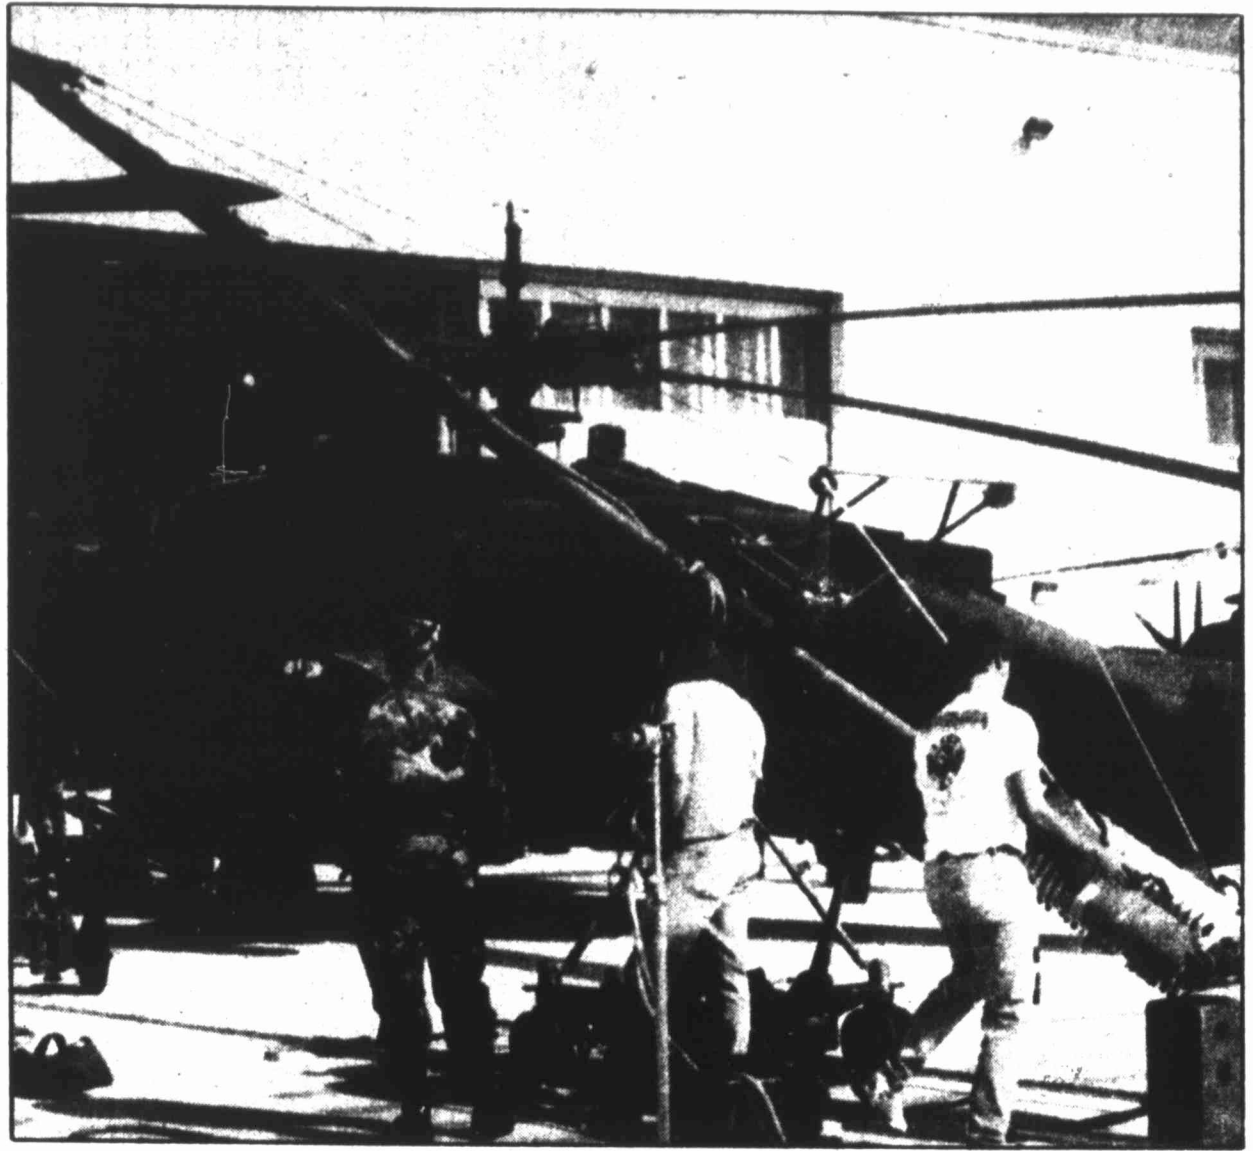

"The folks here at Fort Hood have been absolutely outstandingly super," he said. "I can't come up with enough words to say it."

He said the Pentagon, as in all joint ventures with movie makers, closely studied the script to make sure it portrayed the service "in a positive light and a realistic light, but also one which can enhance either retention, or recruitment."

"Occasionally script writers write things a la Rambo III," he added.

Dye said he thinks the movie will be accurate. He has dedicated his post-military life to consulting with Hollywood about making military film portrayals more realistic. Although a lifelong fan of war movies, Dye said the films always seemed to leave a bad aftertaste.

"I just thought it stunk," he said. "That wasn't who we were, and it wasn't the people I knew. Berets looked like berets and not pizza pans. And the ribbons were on the wrong side, and I couldn't stand that stuff."

WACO — A production crew shoots scenes around the AH-64 Apache attack helicopter at Ft. Hood recently for the movie "Wings of the Apache." Army officials hope the movie will do for the AH-64 Apache what Tom Cruise and "Top Gun" did for the Navy's F-14 Tomcat war planes.

Georgia state board upholds firing of teacher of year

ATLANTA (AP) — The state Board of Education upheld the dismissal of an award-winning teacher even though she was acquitted of charges stemming from the discovery of marijuana growing on property she shared with her husband.

The board said Vicki Sherling's immorality could be inferred without proof of criminal purpose or intent.

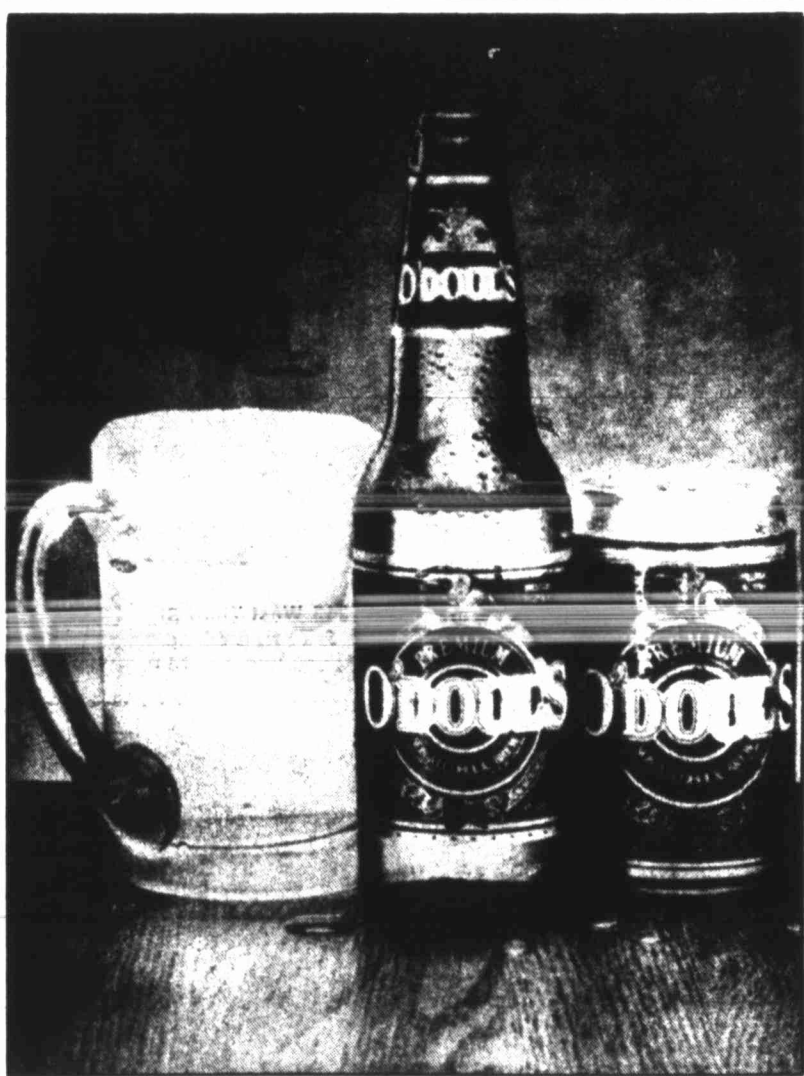

The state board voted 4-3 Thursday to uphold Colquitt County's decision not to reinstate Mrs. Sherling, who was fired in May.

The local board contended there was sufficient evidence to conclude that Mrs. Sherling at least knew her husband had possessed marijuana.

Mrs. Sherling, who was named 1989 Teacher of the Year in the south Georgia county, was arrested with her husband, Michael, after marijuana plants were found in a makeshift greenhouse in their back yard in May.

The Georgia Association of Educators backed Mrs. Sherling, paying legal fees for her appeal.

Is granddaughter living in sin?

DEAR ABBY: I am a female graduate student at a large university. I share an apartment with a male law student. We are not sexually involved with each other; he has a girlfriend and I date a special fellow. Our apartment has two bedrooms, two baths and a spacious living room, dining room and kitchen. It's ideally located, and neither one of us could afford to pay the rent alone.

The problem is my grandmother. She thinks it's terrible that I am "living with" a man and she refuses to believe that we aren't sleeping together. I have told her there is nothing romantic going on between us, but she doesn't believe me. She's from the old country, and there's no changing her mind. Fortunately, my parents do not share her point of view.

Now, here's where you come in. "Granny" reads your column every day and thinks you have the wisdom of Solomon. She also credits you with helping her to read English. She says when she came to this country from Finland 21 years ago, she went to night school to learn English, and her teacher used your column as a teaching tool because it was easy to read and it also reflected the behavior of the American people.

So, Abby, maybe if Granny sees this letter in your column, she'll be more accepting of my lifestyle. Thank you. — ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Here's your letter. I hope it helps.

DEAR ABBY: Last Friday night, my ex-wife informed our two daughters — ages 16 and 18 — that she needed to have her house to herself to do some entertaining, so they had to be out by 7:30 p.m.

The 18-year-old had to wait in a Burger King for an hour and a half before she could join a friend still at work to go on to a party.

The 16-year-old had two engagements that called for different types of clothing; finding the door locked at 9:30 p.m., she had to attend the second engagement inappropriately dressed and feeling very out of place. When she arrived home at midnight, she found doors still locked and had to climb in through a window!

I live 1,500 miles away, so I wasn't able to come to the rescue. I am hoping your comments on my ex-wife's behavior might persuade her to think twice before she pulls such a stunt again. — FRANK (LY) TICKED OFF IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR FRANK (LY): Don't depend on a few lines in my column to change your ex-wife's behavior. A mother who would lock her children out of the house because she wanted to do some "entertaining" may not be an unfit mother, but she certainly behaved like one in this instance.

Perhaps a few words from your attorney reminding your "ex" of her custodial responsibilities might be more effective than anything I could say. It's worth a try.

DEAR ABBY: Right after I announced my engagement, the girls at the office gave me a shower, and someone gave me your book, "Dear Abby on Planning Your Wedding." I don't know what I would have done without it. It really helped me a lot. First, it encouraged me to have the kind of wedding I wanted — not the kind my mother or future mother-in-law thought I should have.

Surprise, surprise! When I told my future mother-in-law I wanted to get married in a suit, I thought she'd have a fit, but instead she said, "I wanted to get married in a suit, too, but my mother wouldn't let me!"

Thanks, Abby! — LOVE, HEIDI

Big Spring (6-2, 5-0) at Snyder (2-6, 2-3)

Although these two teams' records are just the opposite, there is not that much difference in their level of play. The "hearbreak" Tigers have figured out just about every way to lose a ballgame — five losses by a combined total of 10 points. Last week was no different, a 12-10 loss to Pecos.

Meanwhile the Steers were just getting by the Andrews Mustangs 35-33, a game Big Spring was supposed to win by 21.

This one should be a real head-knocker. First of all, the Highway 350 rivalry is alive and kicking. Secondly, both teams have nasty defenses when they want to. Last, but not least, is that the Tigers want to take out this season's frustration on somebody — and what better team than the Steers?

Try as they might, the Tigers won't get that upset, but they'll make the Steers sweat a little.

BIG SPRING 21, SNYDER 7

Stanton (7-2, 4-0)

at Marfa (3-6, 1-3)

The Stanton Buffaloes are going for their second consecutive undefeated district season. If they beat the Shorthorns, they'll get it.

The Buffaloes are playing their best ball right now, and it's very important for them to have a strong game in preparation for the playoffs. They'll get it tonight.

STANTON 40, MARFA 14

Sands (9-0, 4-0) at

Borden County (6-2-1, 3-1)

Both teams need to win this game for these reasons: The Sands Mustangs need to win to assure itself as the No. 1 seed from the district in the playoffs. The Borden County Coyotes need to win to at least have a shot at a playoff berth.

If Borden County wins, it can force a three-way tie between themselves, Sands and Grady. Then a coin flip will determine who advances.

It's homecoming night in Gail and a big crowd will spur the Coyotes on. The Sands Mustangs were in this position last year with Grady and they lost out. They learned their lesson and they won't miss out this year.

SANDS 42, BORDEN COUNTY 28

Coahoma (4-5, 2-2) at

Colorado City (3-6, 1-3)

This is one 1-20 rivalry that goes back a long way. This is a very important game for the Coahoma Bulldogs because, with a win, they can finish at .500 overall and have a winning record in district play.

The Colorado City Wolves have lots of pride and take pride in not having let the Bulldogs beat them in the '80s. This one will be like two heavyweights slugging it out in the middle of the ring. The last one standing will win. In this case, it will be the Red and White, not the Red and Black.

COAHOMA 14, COLORADO CITY 13

Dawson (0-4, 2-7) at

Klondike (4-5, 1-3)

This is big game for both teams for the simple reason that both need the momentum for next year. The Klondike Cougars, inexperienced and short-handed, can finish the season at .500. The Dawson Dragons can end a disappointing season on a sweet note.

The game will be close for half, but the Cougar offense has too many weapons. The Cougs end the season on the right foot.

KLONDIKE 48, DAWSON 20

Reagan County (6-2, 2-2) at

Forsan (3-6, 2-2)

This is a very big game, but it's more important to the Reagan County Owls than it is to the Forsan Buffaloes.

The Owls, who were a preseason Top 10 pick and tabbed to win the district easily, have had a disappointing season. The Owls have been hit by injuries as well as House Bill 72; their starting quarterback flunked out.

Reagan County needs this win, and has to hope that district champion Ozona beat Wall, forcing a tie for second between the Owls and Wall. Then a coin flip will decide the district runnerup.

On the other hand, the Forsan Buffaloes are much better than their 3-6 record, and they have been showing it of late. A small consolation for Forsan is that if it wins, it could finish in a tie for second with Wall. But the Buffs can't get into the playoffs because Wall beat them in head-to-head competition.

So there's a lot at stake in this game. The Buffs will play their hearts out, but Reagan County has more at stake, and a little more talent.

REAGAN COUNTY 20, FORSAN 14

Garden City (6-2, 2-1) at

Sterling City (2-6, 2-1)

A very important game for both teams. The winner has the inside track for a state playoff berth.

The Garden City Bearkats have rolled along in their usual consistent way; Sterling City Eagles have gotten hot in league play, mainly on the strength of their tough defense.

They'll put up a game fight against the Bearkats, but Garden City will crak this tough defense.

GARDEN CITY 28, STERLING CITY 7

Queens struggle past CJC

SNYDER — It was the same final result, but the Howard College Hawk-Queens had to work a little harder in defeating the Cisco Junior College Lady Wranglers.

Monday, the Queens beat the Lady Wranglers 80-59 in Big Spring. Thursday night in the Western Texas Classic, the Queens had to scrap for an 80-56 victory. The win gives Howard a 5-0 record, Cisco falls to 3-5.

Howard had a cold shooting night, especially in the first half, when they made only 10 of 32 field goals attempts. Howard trailed 26-24 at the half, and trailed by as many as nine points in the game.

"I think our kids thought they (Cisco) were going to do the

'possum routine — we show up, they roll over on their backs and stick their legs straight up," said Howard coach Royce Chadwick.

"Cisco was extremely high for the game and we opened the game one of 10 from the floor. We didn't play well, but we hung in there and some good things started to happen with five minutes to go in the game.

"The only thing that saved us was that we guarded them. They (CJC) would get into a man-to-man, but once we passed the ball they switched to a 1-2-2 zone. We didn't do a good job of adjusting to it.

"I told my girls I'm more proud of this win because we showed more as a team."

Freshman guard Kim Robinson paced Howard with 18 points and eight rebounds. Shannon Lawson added eight points and eight rebounds. Linda Waters was the only other Queen in double figures, scoring 10.

Howard plays South Plains, a 78-70 loser to Western Texas, today at 4 p.m.

Texas-Houston key SWC matchup

BY The Associate Press

Only Texas A&M will be out of harm's way as the Southwest Conference football race gets critical for Texas and Arkansas Saturday.

The league-leading Aggies, 5-1, will be off two straight weeks before they play Arkansas on national television the day after Thanksgiving in College Station.

Arkansas, the defending SWC champion, hopes it can get there with just one league loss. The Hogs host Baylor at 3 p.m. in Fayetteville before a national television audience (ESPN). Portable lights will ring the stadium because the sun will set during the second half.

While Arkansas will be struggling with the Bears, the Texas Longhorns will be trying to corral Andre Ware, Houston's amazing quarterback who is just 263 yards short of the SWC passing record of 7,179 yards held by SMU's Chuck Hixson from 1968 to 1970.

Texas is 3-1 with four conference games remaining, including the 4 p.m. clash against the Cougars. Two years ago, Houston won 60-40 in the Astrodome.

The Longhorns hope wide receiver Tony Jones' sprained ankle heals because he has had two big games in the Dome. Against Houston, he caught five passes for 173 yards and two touchdowns. In a Bluebonnet Bowl game two years ago, he won MVP honors with eight catches for 242 yards and two touchdowns.

Jones will travel with the team, Longhorns coach David McWilliams said Thursday.

"He is still doubtful, but we sure can't play him if we leave him home," McWilliams said.

In another league game on Saturday, those giant-killing Texas Tech Red Raiders, who have two league losses but own victories over Top 25 teams Arizona, A&M, and Texas, hope to impress bowl scouts in a Noon (Raycom TV) game against the pesky Texas Christian Horned Frogs. The Independence Bowl has been eyeing the Red Raiders.

Southern Methodist closes out the SWC's non-conference record in an 11 A.M. game against defending national champion Notre Dame, which is going for a school-record 22nd consecutive victory.

The Mustangs will get a $200,000 guarantee for making the trip to play against coach Lou Holtz, who once coached at Arkansas.

The SWC is 18-8-1 in non-conference games, one of its best ledgers of the decade against outside competition.

SMU coach Forrest Gregg said the Pines coach the chance to play Notre Dame.

"To perform well against the best tells you where you are and what your capabilities are," Gregg said. "I hope more of our players gain confidence by playing well at Notre Dame."

Arkansas' improved passing attack has Baylor worried.

"Their ability to throw the ball deep like they did against Houston really concerns me," Baylor safety Robert Blackmon said. "Quinn Groves is a tough quarterback to contain because of his athletic ability and the ability to scramble."

Rice is also idle on Saturday.

LEFTY CATCHER

PITTSBURGH (AP) — When Benny Distefano took a turn behind the plate for the Pirates against the Atlanta Braves on May 14, 1989, he became only the sixth left-handed catcher to perform in the major leagues since the turn of the century.

He also was the first since Mike Squires of the White Sox, another lefty, did it in 1980.

Distefano entered the game in the ninth inning and registered a putout on a strikeout.

HARVEY'S RECORDS
MILWAUKEE (AP) — Harvey Haddix Jr. established a great record when he retired 36 consecutive batters in his first 12 innings pitching for Pittsburgh against Milwaukee May 26, 1959.

However, he lost the game, 1-0, in the 13th inning.

Although a pitcher with excellent control, Haddix was on the wild side in a 1963 game while still with the Pirates. He tied a record by cutting loose with three wild pitches in one inning.

NAMED FOR PLAYER
CINCINNATI (AP) — The popularity of a Cincinnati Bengal player sometimes is measured by whether he has a dish named for him at the popular Precinct Restaurant here.

Ickey Woods, a hard-running rookie ballcarrier, made it in 1988, his rookie season. The restaurant offered patrons a dish called "Chicken Ickey," which despite that name is described as a tasty arrangement of breast of chicken with pecan sauce, green beans and mashed potatoes.

FOOTBALL ECONOMY
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — How much does a big football game mean to the economy of the city or area in which it is held?

The Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce hired an economist to total up the estimated money spent during the weekend of the 1989 Dec. 3 football game between Army and Navy.

According to economist Edward B. Shils, almost $10 million was spent by visitors to the city for the game.

GREAT RECORD
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was one for the books when Norm Van Brocklin, the fiery quarterback of the Los Angeles Rams, took the field on Sept. 28, 1961.

Five OT's later, Bucks win

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Tony Brown's 3-point shot with 1:10 left in the fifth overtime put Milwaukee ahead to stay and the Bucks defeated the Seattle SuperSonics 155-154 Thursday night in the longest NBA game since the adoption of the 24-second clock 35 years ago.

With the score tied 146-146, the Bucks outscored the Sonics 9-0, starting with Brown's 3-pointer from the left corner and ending with 34 seconds remaining on Jeff Grayer's lay-up which made the score 155-146.

The only longer game in NBA history was Jan. 6, 1951, when the Indianapolis Olympians beat the Rochester Royals 75-73 in six overtimes. The Syracuse Nationals defeated the Anderson Packers 125-123 in five overtimes on Nov. 24, 1949.

Ricky Pierce had a career-high 36 points for Milwaukee before fouling out in the first overtime. Alvin Robertson added 28 points. Dale Ellis scored a career-high 53 points for Seattle, including 20 in the five overtimes, and Xavier McDaniel added 35.

After Milwaukee's 9-0 run, Seattle countered with a 3-point basket by Dana Barros, a free throw by Nate McMillan and Sedale Threatt's rebound which made it 155-152. Seattle had a chance to tie the game but McDaniel's desperation 3-point shot missed. He was fouled by Humphries as time expired and his two free throws made it 155-154.

The score was 103-103 at the end

Knicks 107, Nets 105

NEW YORK (AP) — Charles Oakley had 17 of his 22 points and 11 of his 18 rebounds in the second half and Patrick Ewing's dunk with 1:22 left gave New York its first lead of the game.

The Knicks, who trailed 62-42 in the final minute of the first half, came back from a 10-point deficit in the last nine minutes. They finally pulled ahead 106-105 on Ewing's dunk off an inbound pass, giving him 20 points in the game.

Nuggets 128, Rockets 127

HOUSTON (AP) — Alex English hit an eight-foot jumper with four seconds left in overtime to give Denver the victory. Fat Lever had only one point, seven assists and four rebounds at halftime but finished with 19 points, 10 assists and 14 rebounds for his second consecutive triple-double.

Lakers 106, Warriors 95

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A.C. Green scored 24 points and grabbed 16 rebounds and Michael Cooper and Magic Johnson led a fourth-quarter Los Angeles runaway.

The Lakers took advantage of the absence of Warriors center Alton Lister, out for the season with a ruptured Achilles tendon, to dominate the boards, 69-34, against their smaller opponents.

Johnson had 19 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists and Cooper scored eight of his 11 points in the fourth quarter. Chris Mullin led the Warriors with 31 points.

The Finest In Y

'Open your heart by faith to Jesus Christ'

By BILLY GRAHAM
DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I guess you could say I've been living life in the fast lane — lots of money, good times, plenty of drugs and sex whenever I wanted them, etc. But somehow I feel like I'm worn out, and there's nothing left in life to experience. Do you think it's possible to burn out from too many good times? I guess you would say I need God, but whatever my problem is I feel empty inside. — N.Y.J.

Billy Graham

DEAR N.Y.J.: Yes, it certainly is possible to "burn out" when we try to indulge in every kind of pleasure. At first, that kind of life seems very attractive, but its attractiveness is short-lived. The Bible warns that "the way of the unfaithful is hard" (Proverbs 13:15). Why is this the case? It is true because a life of self-indulgence and pleasure will never satisfy the spiritual hunger of our souls. You see, you have not only a body and a mind — but deep inside of you God gave you a spiritual nature as well. And no matter how much attention you give to satisfying the desires of your body and your mind, your life is still incomplete as long as you neglect to take care of your spiritual nature. What is the answer to your problem? The answer is to turn to Christ, for he wants to come into your life, and he alone can give you a real reason for living. The answer is not more things and more pleasures, but Christ. God says through the words of the Bible, "Why spend money on what is not bread, and your labor on what does not satisfy? Listen, listen to me, and your soul will delight in the richest of fare. Give ear and come to me; hear me, that your soul may live" (Isaiah 55:2-3). Open your heart by faith to Christ. When you do, God himself will take up residence inside your heart and give you the peace and stability you seek.

Religion roundup

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Failure to engage the "cultural right" may have contributed to the membership slump in mainline churches, says a researcher into church lifestyles.

The Rev. Tex Sample, an ethicist-theologian at the St. Paul School of Theology in Kansas City, Mo., characterizes the "cultural right" as "life-oriented, respectable, traditional" and intensely patriotic.

Reporting findings for a new book, "U.S. Lifestyles in Mainline Churches," he told the United Methodist General Council on Ministries that seminarians often do not learn to relate well to rank-and-file people.

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — A survey of Reformed Church ministers in three Netherlands provinces finds that one in 10 would rather have another job. The report notes that the ministers work an average 58 hours a week, compared to 38 for Dutch workers overall.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Florida Baptists have voted overwhelmingly to condemn abortion and support restrictive legislation.

With only scattered opposition, 1,656 "messengers" from 2,057 congregations of the Florida Baptist Convention approved a resolution declaring:

"We believe human life to be sacred and that it begins at conception. . . . The right of life must be protected by the state. We call upon Florida Baptists to support legislation that will achieve the dramatic saving and nurturing of human life."

'Project Forward'

Church provides legal aid to refugees

By FRANK KELLY

Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS — The minuscule office tucked in a corner of a small annex behind the Stevens Park United Methodist Church in Oak Cliff isn't your average attorney's workplace.

All the oak-and-leather trappings are missing. The desk is time worn and work scarred. A pair of wooden folding chairs provides seating.

It looks like someone is heading a paper collection campaign. Papers, folders and books. They're everywhere — mini-columns sprouting from the tops of file cabinets, peaking over rims of cardboard boxes about the floor, threatening to topple from stacks of wall shelves.

Parker Wilson, 67, isn't your average attorney. But with 30 years of corporate law behind him and a waiting room full of clients in front of him, he is right at home.

It's Saturday at Proyecto Adelante (Project Forward), a nonprofit organization that assists the Dallas area's growing Central American refugee population, and Wilson's already worked through lunch.

"Excuse the clutter," he says, lighting his pipe and flicking a stray strand of tobacco off a sweated sleeve. "We're a little tight on space and it's somewhat hectic today. A lot of our clients simply aren't in a position where they can get here on a weekday. Saturday's are usually busy."

Indeed, most days are busy for Wilson, who for more than seven years has put in an average 60-hour week as a pro bono lawyer to help refugees — primarily from El Salvador and Guatemala — apply for sanctuary in the United States.

"He's amazing," says Sam Nance, president of the board of the Dallas Peace Center, whose organization on Dec. 7 will honor Wilson with its third annual Peacemaker Award.

"He's been an inspiration for peace and justice his whole life and more recently his work with Central American refugees has become more than a full time job during a period of life during which most people would be looking to as their retirement."

Study of South Africa

Women of the First Church of God met Monday for the final study on "South Africa: A Time For Answers," written by Kay Slively, associate secretary for the National Office of Women of the Church of God, Anderson, Ind.

Betty Reagan, Mission/Program coordinator, directed the study using objectives to recognize the continued division of South Africa, and to struggle with answers for the church and for ourselves.

The group was challenged to be true to their deepest belief, and to be sure their understanding of the gospel is clear, relevant, meaningful and vibrant.

Linda Lindell, Spiritual Life coordinator, closed the worship with scripture from Ephesians 2:12-16, focusing on the closing prayer on asking God how we can break down the wall of partition between ourselves and other Christians.

The next meeting will be the Christmas program Dec. 4.

First Christian news

General Board will meet Sunday at 8 p.m.; the Personnel Committee will meet at 7 p.m. to finalize its budget requests for 1990. All department heads, elders and deacons are encouraged to be present. A final presentation of the 1990 budget will be reviewed.

Nalley, Pickle & Welch Funeral Home will sponsor two Monday evening seminars titled "After the loss: Coping With the Holidays" Nov. 13 and Dec. 4 in the First Baptist Church Family Life Center, from 7 to 9 p.m. The public is invited.

The church will have a congregational meeting Nov. 19 to vote on the 1990 general budget.

The C.Y.F. Fall Rally, titled "Come as You Are," is set for Nov. 17. Contact Jana Ervin if you are interested in attending.

Congratulations to Julie Shirey who was inducted Oct. 31 as the first female member of the Tuesday Rotary International Organization of Big Spring.

DALLAS — Attorney Parker Wilson, 67, helps refugees, primarily from El Salvador and Guatemala, apply for sanctuary in the United States.

The Dallas Peace Center, an ecumenical networking center for more than 40 groups in the Dallas area, created the award three years ago. Past recipients have been Lutheran Bishop Mark Herbener, 57, a former pastor of Mount Olive Lutheran Church in Fair Park, who has been in the forefront of civil rights activities for more than 25 years, and Vivian Castleberry, 67, former features editor of the Dallas Times Herald and founder of Global Peace, which sponsored an international women's peace conference in Dallas last year.

The award recognizes "commitment and contribution made to the spirit of peace" and it comes as no surprise to Nance that while the movement's membership spans all ages, in many instances an older generation provides a hefty portion of the effort's leadership.

"They've had the time and experience to develop understanding," he says. "They've had the time to formulate their ideas and establish their principles. They want to do something that puts the world in better shape."

The trend spills into all sectors of the community, says Lisa Faulkner-Dunn, community relations director of the Dallas Volunteer Center. She estimates 90 percent of her center's workers are retirees. "They're the plum of volunteers because they know about responsibility and commitment," she says.

For Wilson, the commitment dates to the 1960s when he began working with the Greater Dallas Community of Churches Block Partnership. With his wife, Jean, he also became involved in other civil rights and peace movements, lending legal advice to the Dallas affiliate of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and Clergy and Laity Concerned.

"You see a need and you meet it," the World War II veteran advises. "One thing leads to another and pretty soon you're caught in the middle and can't get out."

It's doubtful Wilson ever thinks of getting out, co-workers say. "He's one of our inspirations," says Fran McElvaney, director of education and development for the six-member office. "If he ever gets discouraged it sure doesn't show. His sense of humor, faith and commitment keeps us all going."

In the late '70s, Wilson became acquainted with the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador (CISPES) and the Inter-Religious Task Force on Central America. When two members, Nancy Boye and Ron Wilhelm, established Proyecto Adelante under a grant from Church World Services, Wilson had just retired from a 30-year career with the legal department of Sears Roebuck.

Retirement marked the beginning of Wilson devoting up to 60 hours a week attempting to obtain asylum for thousands of displaced Central American refugees.

Proyecto Adelante, along with the Mennonite International Refugee Assistance, are based at the Oak Cliff center whose office space is donated by the adjacent church.

Wilson filed his first asylum application in early 1982 for a Saladorean employee of a Dallas firm.

"I didn't know a thing about immigration law," he recalls. "I just knew I wanted to help. I had to call a friend over at Catholic Charities to find out where the Immigration and Naturalization office was so we could go to the client's hearing."

But the word spread about the free legal services offered through the project. "I had no idea there were so many people needing this type of help," Wilson says. "Sure, I knew we had some Central Americans coming here fleeing civil strife, but I had no idea how many of them there were."

He still doesn't. "You hear of estimates of 30,000 to 50,000, but no one knows." Nor does he keep statistics on the number of cases he's handled, although it's well into the thousands. "I don't deal in numbers," he says. "I deal in people. Numbers of cases I don't worry about."

Give thanks to God

By DeWAYNE WALLACE

Special to the Herald

The earth and the fullness of it belongs to God, and each of us are stewards of it. We receive many blessings from him, and in nothing more do we offend our Heavenly Father than to accept these blessings without giving thanks to him. BISHOP WALLACE

This is the month that, perhaps, we have more thankful thoughts than at any other time.

In Ephesians 5:20 we are admonished to give "thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ."

"Now thank we all our God With hearts and hands and voices,

Who wondrous things hath done,

In who his earth rejoices; Who, from our mothers' arms Hath blessed us on our way With countless gifts of love, And still is ours today."

Hymn by Martin Rinkhart 1586-1649

May we use our hands, hearts and voices to make each day a day of thanksgiving, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

Wallace is the bishop of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, Big Spring.

Names in the news

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Actor Richard Chamberlain is proud of his 54 years, though he once hated the idea of growing old.

"When I was in my 20s, I was obsessed with how I looked and thought the idea of getting older was terrifying," he said in an interview for the Nov. 11 issue of TV Guide.

"Now I find it rather fascinating, except for the fact that I don't run quite as fast," said Chamberlain, who stars in CBS-TV's "Island Son" series.

"Our battle scars, our wrinkles or whatever, should be looked upon with pride," Chamberlain said.

CHAMBERLAIN SUTHERLAND

MONTREAL (AP) — You name it, Donald Sutherland has had it.

Polio, rheumatic fever, hepatitis, an appendectomy, pneumonia, scarlet fever.

"And spinal meningitis," the actor said. "I died."

A reporter chuckled. Sutherland looked perturbed.

"Yes, I died. For four or five seconds," he said.

Sutherland overcame the bout of meningitis, and said his experience with disease since childhood left him with a deep appreciation of the medical profession.

He is the 1989 honorary fund-raising chairman of the Montreal Children's Hospital, which hopes to raise $1 million this year to pay for renovations and new equipment.

Sutherland said concern for his five children makes him especially sympathetic to the hospital's appeal.
