Gunman injures U.S. diplomat

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — A gunman on a motorcycle fired five shots at the head of the U.S. consulate here, wounding him slightly, as the diplomat was driving to work this morning, police said.

The consul general, Robert Onan Homme, 43, suffered superficial wounds in the face, neck and chest by three of the small-caliber bullets fired through the windows of his car, Strasbourg's Haute Pierre hospital said.

No surgery was needed, no permanent damage was expected and Homme was being held only for observation, the hospital said.

Homme is the top official in the consulate and one of two Americans stationed there. He was assigned to Strasbourg in August 1981.

There had been no prior threat and no group immediately claimed responsibility, police said. Police rounded up several possible suspects, but released most shortly afterwards.

Police sources said investigators noted that the light pistol used in the shooting was not a professional weapon and that the gunman had not fired accurately.

Investigators were looking into the possibility that the shooting was linked to Hommes' recent dismissal of a household employee, the sources said.

The shooting occurred as Homme was on his way from his home in a suburb north of this eastern French city to the consulate located near the Place de La Republique in Strasbourg, seat of the European Parliament and home of the Council of Europe.

A motorcyclist pulled up to Homme's car on a city street and fired the shots, police said. First reports said Homme had a driver, but police later said he was at the wheel and that a consulate staff member was in the car with him but was uninjured.

The force of the shots was lessened by the car's windscreen and windows, police said.

A spokesman for the French Foreign Ministry condemned the attack and expressed the government's sympathy for Homme and his family.

A career diplomat from Duluth, Minn., with three children, Homme joined the service in 1962, with postings in Mexico, Colombia, Rome and Panama. From 1975 to 1981 he was at the Department of State in Washington, successively in charge of the Common Market desk and director of personnel for Europe.

The last known attack on a U.S. diplomat in France was the slaying of U.S. military attache Col. Charles M. Ray in Paris Jan. 18, 1982. Ray was killed outside his home by a lone gunman who shot him once in the back of the neck.

Three months earlier a gunman fired shots at Christian Chapman, then charge d'affairs and number two man at the embassy in Paris. Chapman escaped injury by ducking behind his car.

Pressing the flesh in El Salvador

At left, Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, greets Salvadoran voters in Osicala, El Salvador, Sunday. The town, located in northeastern El Salvador, has frequently been under rebel control. Above, voters crowd around the officials' table at the polling place in San Vincente, Sunday. Many polling places were jammed as voters turned out early to cast their ballots.

Vote counting comes to standstill

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Vote counting in El Salvador's presidential election — already beset by bureaucratic foulups and guerrilla harassment that prevented thousands from voting — came to a standstill today after allegations of dishonesty in the tabulations.

Leftist rebels, who called the election a farce and refused to take part, kept up their attacks early today.

The vote tabulation was suspended Sunday night after Morgan Bojorques, the chief technician at the national election computer center, was accused of favoring right-wing candidate Roberto d'Aubuisson and ordered off the job. Other technicians walked out in protest.

The accusation was made by Roberto Meza Delgado, the Christian Democratic Party representative on the Central Election Council, which is made up of one representative of each of the eight competing parties.

D'Aubuisson of the far right Republican Nationalist Alliance and Jose Napoleon Duarte, a moderate Christian Democrat, were the two top contenders among the eight candidates in the country's first presidential elections since 1977.

Unofficial results compiled by the Christian Democrats showed Duarte, with 355,655, or 47.3 percent of the total today.

The Republican Nationalist Alliance was second with 316,132 votes, or 28.7 percent, and the conservative National Conciliation Party third with 130,694, or 17.4 percent, the Christian Democrat figures said.

Christian Democrat tabulators said the figures are based on results from 3,327 of the country's 6,598 precincts. Other parties are not giving out tabulations.

The U.S. observer team here gave similar percentages they said were based on unofficial information from the Central Elections Council.

The observers said the vote total would be about 1.3 million, or a 70 percent turnout. However, the Central Elections Council had said earlier there were 2.5 million eligible voters, which would make the turnout just over 50 percent. The reason for the discrepancy was not clear.

Thomas Pickering, U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, said today that early, unofficial vote tallies from poll watchers indicated "something above 40 percent" of the vote went to Duarte while "30, 30-plus percent" went to d'Aubuisson.

Mondale, Hart both back Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Walter F. Mondale and Gary Hart are campaigning for the New York Democratic primary by emphasizing their differences on the Middle East, but an examination of their public records shows that both presidential candidates have been unwavering friends of Israel over the last decade.

"There is really no difference," said one senior official within the pro-Israeli community in Washington. "Both are very strong supporters of Israel."

The official, who requested anonymity to avoid public involvement in the campaign, said Hart, a senator from Colorado, voted with the Israel lobby on 31 of 31 issues rated by Jewish organizations in Washington over the last several years.

On two others, he was absent because of the presidential campaign.

The votes ranged from opposition to the sale by the United States of F-15 fighters and AWACS surveillance planes to Saudi Arabia, to various military and economic aid packages to Israel, to joining as one of four co-sponsors in opposition to selling Hawk missiles to Jordan.

And in 1976, when President Ford was reviewing the U.S.-Israeli relationship, Hart signed a letter reaffirming the America friendship with Israel. So did Mondale.

"Hart should have little trouble addressing the Jewish electorate," a publication called Washington Jewish Week said in its March 8 edition.

As for Mondale, the pro-Israel official said, "He has always been seen as a friend to the Jewish community."

As vice president under Jimmy Carter, Mondale lobbied to sell F-15s to Saudi Arabia, a move which the Israel lobby in Washington worked hard to defeat. There were also preliminary discussions about AWACS sales within the Carter White House.

But Mondale was well known as a friend of Israel inside the Carter administration, according to officials of two pro-Israel organizations, and the former vice president's public position was accepted as necessary to remain loyal to Carter.

Nonetheless, the 1978 F-15 sale and AWACS have become issues, and Hart said last Thursday that as president he would oppose sending high-technology weapons to Arab nations.

Noting his opposition to the F-15 sale, Hart said, "Not only did Mr. Mondale not dissent; he lobbied vigorously for that sale."

Mondale replied: "When the president (Carter) made a decision, I felt bound by that decision. In the private councils of the administration...I was always on the side of trying to prevent the sale of weapons or the enhancement of those weapons or the sale of AWACS."

Prosecutor: Rapists should get at least six years

FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) — A prosecutor today recommended prison terms ranging from six to 12 years for four Portuguese immigrants who could be sentenced to up to life on their convictions for gang raping a woman on a tavern pool table.

Bristol County District Attorney Ronald Pina asked Superior Court Judge William Young to impose sentences of nine to 12 years in Walpole State Prison for three of the men, Daniel Silva, 27, Victor Raposo, 23, and John Cordiero, 24.

He requested six to eight years for Joseph Vieira, 28, citing "feelings of the community" and the fact that Vieira had no prior record.

The four men were convicted of aggravated rape for assaulting a 22-year-old mother at Big Dan's Tavern in nearby New Bedford on March 6, 1983 while onlookers cheered them on.

Heavy security was in effect as the four entered the court in handcuffs. About 200 spectators and many police officers watched from outside the court house.

Just before court began, supporters of the four men presented the judge a petition with 16,000 signatures asking that the guilty verdicts be voided because jurors were swayed by "exaggerated versions of the facts."

Silva and Vieira were tried separately from Raposo and Cordeiro to prevent the defendants from testifying against each other.

Their trials ended March 17 and 22.

Two other men, Jose Medeiros and Virgilio Medeiros, who are not related, were acquitted on all charges. They were present during the attack, but the jury ruled they were not involved.

In an interview last week, the judge said he was neither "happy" nor "relieved" to be sentencing the men in a case that gained nationwide publicity and prompted marches by women's rights advocates.

"We have to keep this in proper perspective. In our process, while this was a serious case, there are also other serious cases to be considered," Young said.

"It would be easy to lose perspective on the system, and those cases are just as anguishing."

'Candy Man's' appeal rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today rejected the appeal of a Texas man facing execution for murdering his young son with cyanide-laced Halloween candy, but blocked the scheduled execution of a Georgia murderer who drowned a taxi driver after stuffing him into the trunk of a cab.

The justices, over two dissenting votes, refused to let Ronald Clark O'Bryan, dubbed the "Candy Man," file an appeal aimed at winning himself a new trial in the Oct. 31, 1974, death of his 8-year-old son, Timothy. His execution is scheduled for Saturday.

O'Bryan had asked the Supreme Court to overturn his state court conviction, without first seeking help from a federal trial judge and a federal appeals court. Such manuevers are rare.

Justices William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall, who oppose capital punishment under all circumstances, voted to set aside O'Bryan's death sentence.

In the case of Christopher Burger of Georgia, the court ordered a delay in his scheduled Tuesday execution. Burger was convicted of killing a taxi driver seven years ago when he was a 17-year-old soldier.

The court ordered Georgia authorities to keep Burger alive until it considers granting full review to his latest formal appeal. That could take weeks.

Burger, along with another soldier then stationed at Fort Stewart, was convicted in the 1977 slaying of Roger Honeycutt, 25, a Fort Stewart soldier who drove a taxi part-time.

Police said Honeycutt was robbed and, while still alive, stuffed into the trunk of his taxi. The cab was driven into a water-filled pit, and Honeycutt drowned.

The Supreme Court never has decided whether imposing the death penalty on killers who were not yet 18 years old when they committed their crimes violates the constitutional ban on cruel and unusual punishment.

Hollywood wants to tell Geter's story

NAACP director criticizes news media; Lenell Geter returns home; Related stories — Page 7A

DALLAS (AP) — Lenell Geter's long battle to win his freedom from prison had a happy ending, and now that the story is complete, Hollywood wants to tell it.

Edwin M. Sigel of Dallas, one of Geter's attorneys, says book and movie offers could bring Geter a half a million dollars.

"It's a story about an innocent man who's been screwed up by the system," said movie producer Ronald Levin of General Producers Corp. of Los Angeles. "See, this story has a definite beginning, middle and end. And the ending's happy. That's good for a movie."

His supporters said Geter, who is black, never should have been a suspect in the holdup of a suburban fast food restaurant in the first place and was a victim of racism.

Though he had no prior police record, Geter received a life sentence.

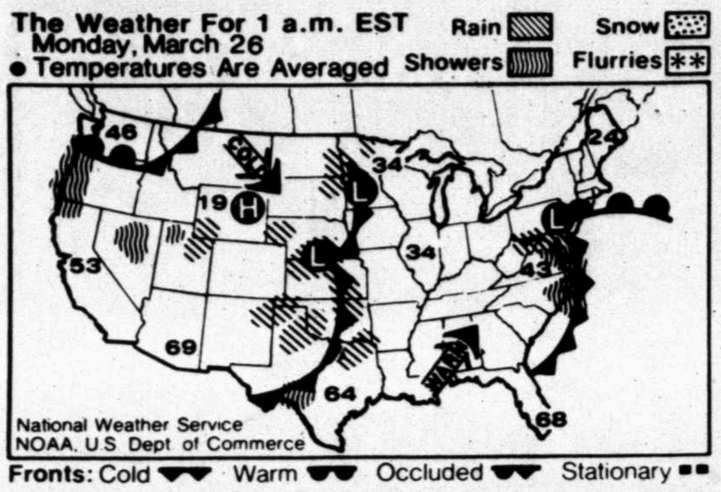
WEATHER SUMMARY



AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts showers and rain for Tuesday for the Southeast and Midwest. Snow is forecast for the eastern Rockies and from the Midwest to Minnesota. Rain is expected for Washington and Oregon coastal regions.

Fair skies to give way to cooler temperatures

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair skies and cooler temperatures will greet Midlanders who venture out this evening.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, Tuesday will be partly cloudy, windy and a little cooler than today, with highs in the low 70s.

Tonight's low will be in the mid-40s, with winds gusting from the southwest at 15-20 mph.

Sunday's high of 79 was well below the record for the date, 90 degrees, set in 1938. The low temperature of 47 was comfortably above the record low of 20 degrees, set in 1965.

STATE

A Canadian cold front moved southward through Texas today, triggering light rain showers and thunderstorms across the High Plains, and forecasters predicted more rainfall later as a result of the polar air.

The intrusion of cold air lowered the mercury into the 30s over the northern half of the Panhandle, while temperatures hovered in the 60s in East Texas, Trans Pecos region and Permian Basin. Extreme temperature readings ranged from 37 degrees at Amarillo to 70 at Brownsville, the National Weather Service said.

Gulf moisture pumped northward in a 10- to 15-mph wind brought low clouds to South and South Central Texas. Considerable high cloudiness prevailed around the rest of the state, as a wedge of dry air separated the moist Gulf air over eastern sections from the Canadian air mass.

NATION

Snow fell in the central Rockies today and in areas from eastern Washington to Montana, turning to scattered rain over the northern and central Plains.

Rain and thundershowers were reported in Kentucky, the Carolinas, Virginia and West Virginia.

On Sunday, thunderstorms with hail and winds gusting to 70 mph hit the Carolinas as rain fanned out over the Eastern Seaboard.

In Long Beach, N.C., at least 38 summer homes were destroyed, trees flattened and roofs and gazebos damaged Sunday. No one was injured.

Hail was piled up 3 inches deep at Kingstree, S.C., where 2½ inches of rain fell too.

Rain showers also lingered over northern Nevada and rain dampened areas from northwest California along the Oregon coast.

Today's forecast called for rain showers and thunderstorms over much of the central and southern Plains and the lower and middle Mississippi Valley.

Light rain was expected in the morning along the Virginia coast, scattered rain showers over the Pacific Northwest and rain and snow showers across the northern and central Rockies.

Refugees find peace at end of journey

WESTON, Vt. (AP) — And on Sunday they rested.

A family of Guatemalan refugees settled into their new home, a five-bedroom house on the grounds of the Weston Priory, after being delivered during the weekend by a church group's cross-country "overground railroad" that defied federal immgration law.

In their native Guatemala, the family of Mayan Indians, a farmer and a weaver and their five young children, normally arose as early as 4 a.m. in the highlands village they said they had to flee because death squads were looking for them.

But after arriving amid pealing bells here Saturday, the family slept well past Sunday's 5 a.m. chants that mark the beginning of every day for the 12 Benedictine monks who have offered them sanctuary indefinitely.

The family, used to sleeping together on straw mattresses in their one-room adobe hut in Guatemala and more recently in sleeping bags on church floors in this country, slept in real beds in separate rooms for the first time.

Felipe and Elena Excot and their 7-month-old daughter, Inez, stayed in the master bedroom, 4-year-old Juanita and 7-year-old Alicia shared another bedroom and 9-year-old Julian and 11-year-old Marta claimed their own rooms.

On Sunday, the children made their first snowman.

The week-long, 1,400-mile caravan from Chicago was punctuated by stops in cities along the way for suppers, prayer services and news conferences where the refugees and their escorts criticized U.S. immigration policies and military aid to Central America.

The refugees and their conductors slept on church floors in Cincinnati, Harrisburg, Pa., Washington, Philadelphia, Schenectady, N.Y. and Cambridge, Mass.

The caravan swelled to 28 cars and more than 100 people on the last leg Saturday, which included brief stops. Police officers who stopped traffic and directed the caravan through Keene, N.H. and Brattleboro, Vt., were the only contacts the caravan had with law enforcement authorities.

Felipe Excot, 34, said the family had to flee its highlands village in Guatemala because soldiers came looking for him for organizing reading classes for other peasants.

Excot said the family wants to return to Guatemala as soon as it is safe, but he conceded that may not be for years. Meanwhile, he said Elena, 34, will teach her children and the monks her intricate, gaily-colored weaving, the children will go to school for the first time and he will help the monks with their vegetable gardens.

"They are at home with us," said one monk, Brother Richard.

At a 90-minute welcoming service Saturday, the brothers sang and danced around the family huddled amidst a crowd of about 300 jammed into a former barn that had been converted to a chapel.

Some few people blinked back tears as Elena and then Felipe, a catechist for he Roman Catholic Church in his village, described how they feared for their lives because of their religion. They said many Christians buried their Bibles and hide their communion wafers in sacks of grain.

The Excots, who assumed that name and wear masks in front of news cameras to protect friends and relatives still in Guatemala, said they walked across the U.S. border near Douglas, Ariz., on Jan. 9. They were taken in by the "sanctuary movement," a loose network of 110 churches in 60 cities which has provided food, clothing, shelter and transportation to 300-350 Central American refugees over the past two years.

The family was moved secretly to Chicago, where leaders of the interdenominational Chicago Religious Task Force on Central America, the umbrella group for the sanctuary movement, decided to take them publicly "overground" for the last part of their journey.

Through the caravan's week on the road, Immigration and Naturalization Service officials in Washington said they would stop it only in the course of "normal enforcement," which is focused on the southern border.

The Rev. Michael McConnell, a United Church of Christ pastor in Chicago, said the auto caravan, the public prayer meetings and the news conferences were all aimed at defying immigration authorities following the recent arrests of church workers escorting Salvadoran refugees in Arizona and Texas.

McConnell said that to further defy authorities, the sanctuary movement's next caravan might carry refugees across the border from Mexico into the United States.

"They wouldn't be able to ignore us then," he said.

Democrats focus on Israel, Connecticut

NEW YORK (AP) — Gary Hart and Walter F. Mondale are going still another round in the sparring over who is the best friend of Israel and focusing on Connecticut on the eve of its Democratic presidential primary, while Hart enjoys his first victory in 10 days of campaigning.

Mondale is hurrying back to Connecticut today for last-minute campaigning before Tuesday's Democratic primary, but he continues to put most of his time and effort into New York, which holds its primary next week.

Hart is hoping that Sunday brought a portent of things to come — he defeated Mondale handily in the Montana caucuses.

The Colorado senator won 49 percent of the vote and 11 national convention delegates there. Mondale took 35 percent in Montana, good for eight delegates, while the Rev. Jesse Jackson had 5 percent, and 9 backed uncommitted slates.

But Mondale was the victor Saturday in Kansas caucuses, winning 372, or 48.9 percent, of local delegates to 317, or 41.7 percent, for Hart, 25, or 3.3 percent, for Jackson and 47, or 6.1 percent, unpledged, party officials said.

Hart thinks days of big ships are over — Page 12A

Hart planned to spend all day in Connecticut, where he is well ahead of Mondale and Jackson in the polls in advance of the voting. Hart wants to complete his shut-out of Mondale in the New England primaries by taking a majority of the 52 pledged delegates at stake on Tuesday.

Mondale was to spend most of the day in New York — where a new poll puts him in the lead — before a two-hour trip to Connecticut in the early evening.

Jackson, who spent Sunday night with a poor Puerto Rican family in New Haven, was to campaign for most of the day in Connecticut before heading for Buffalo, N.Y.

He served about 16 months in prison. All charges against him were dropped last week when four of the five eyewitnesses who identified him changed their minds and identified a man being held in the Harris County Jail as the robber.

Geter's co-workers testified at his trial that the engineer was at work at E-System Inc. in Greenville, a small city north of Dallas, at the time of the holdup.

After a flood of publicity, including a segment on CBS' "60 Minutes," Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade agreed in December to Geter's release from prison and a new trial, which would have begun April 9.

Sigel told the Dallas Morning News that Michael Warren, who plays Bobby Hill on the "Hill Street Blues" television series, wants co-produce a television movie about Geter and play the lead role.

U.S. observers withhold verdict on elections

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A 30-member U.S. observer team is withholding its verdict on El Salvador's presidential election while electoral officials sort through technical problems that marred the vote.

"There is an urgency for instant analysis, but until we get some idea of what the statistical results are, the instant-coffee solution isn't going to be available," said Thomas Pickering, U.S. ambassador to El Salvador who was one of three chairmen of the delegation.

The two other chairmen — House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, and Sen. William Roth, R-Del. — agreed after the polls closed Sunday evening that they were not ready to give a firm assessment of the election.

The delay was in marked contrast to the 1982 Constituent Assembly election, also attended by U.S. observers. Then Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., head of the observer team, pronounced that vote fair and free within hours of the polls closing. Her judgment was ratified the next day by the full group.

The United States observers were appointed by President Reagan to report on the fairness of the elections. In all, 28 countries said they were sending 300 observers to El Salvador to watch the polling.

The 19 members of Congress and 11 other U.S. official observers who watched the balloting Sunday did agree quickly on one thing — they unanimously praised the determination of Salvadorans to vote.

"It's obvious that there's a genuine democratic spirit," said Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y.

If fewer people voted Sunday than during the last El Salvador election in 1982 it would be the fault of election bureaucracy, said Bob Livingston, R-La., who was also an observer in 1982.

Salvadorans who are eligible to vote are required by law to do so, and thousands stood hours waiting in line to cast their ballot. Some were never able to vote because of a variety of bureaucratic problems, including a shortage or absence of ballot boxes and election officials.

Counting of votes comes to standstill

The rough figures came from U.S. poll watchers who counted the ballots along with the political parties, Pickering said in an interview on "CBS Morning News."

The United States, which supports the government in fight against the rebels, contributed $10 million to help buy the computer system, compile the registration list and count the vote.

Final results had not been expected for three days after the vote but with the count suspended, the elections council said no results at all would be available until at least Monday afternoon — indicating they might start counting again.

Officials predicted there would be fewer ballots to count than the 1.8 million initially expected. Thousands of people were prevented from voting by a shortage or absence of ballots, ballot boxes, voter lists and election officials at hundreds of precincts.

Local officials in dozens of areas, stymied by the lack of voting materials and the resulting confusion, simply threw up their hands and let everyone vote without checking lists.

One presidential candidate, Dr. Rene Fortin Magana of the small Democratic Action Party, hinted strongly that he would ask to have the election nullified because of what he called widespread irregularities.

Under Salvadoran law, political parties seeking to overturn the election have three days to present petitions to the election council.

Guerrilla activity was relatively light and seemed more aimed at harassment than preventing the vote. The leftist rebels had given conflicting advance signals about whether they would try to disrupt the elections, which they called a farce.

D'Aubuisson draws much of his support from the upper class while Duarte, who pushed for land reform as president of a ruling civilian-military junta from 1980 to 1982, draws support from middle and lower classes.

The Reagan administration urged Salvador to hold the election as a means of bolstering its government in the face of rebel opposition. However, some U.S. officials have suggested a victory by d'Aubiusson could discourage Congress from providing a high level of military assistance.

D'Aubuisson, 40, a former army major who has been accused of having links with right-wing death squads, has vowed to crush the leftist guerrillas militarily. Duarte, 57, favors negotiations to end the civil war has claimed more than 50,000 lives since it began 4½ years ago.

The heaviest rebel attack Sunday came hours after the polls closed in San Miguel, the country's third-largest city, where the garrison came under fire from submachine guns and automatic weapons. Six soldiers and 10 guerrillas were reported killed in three clashes elswhere.

Lt. Col. Domingo Monterrosa, commander of the 3rd Infantry Brigade in San Miguel, said his forces would begin an operation today in the Chinameca region. Rebels attacked the city of 28,300, about 75 miles east of the capital on Sunday, preventing people from voting.

On Sunday, thousands of people lined up in hot, dusty streets to cast ballots. But the voting was delayed for hours and sometimes canceled altogether when ballot boxes never arrived.

Americans charged with terrorist attacks

JERUSALEM (AP) — Authorities today indicted four Americans in connection with terrorist attacks on Palestinians in Jerusalem and the occupied West Bank, including an ambush on a bus in which six Palestinians were wounded.

The four men charged in Jerusalem District Court are members of the extremist nationalist Kach movement headed by Rabbi Meir Kahane, founder of the New York-based Jewish Defense League.

The charge sheet said the defendants' intended on "inflicting physical harm on members of the Arab population and their property as revenge against terrorist actions" by Palestinian guerrillas against Israelis.

District Court Judge Yisrael Weiner decided in a 10-minute preliminary hearing to delay the trial until April 4. He ordered the defendants held until then.

Three of the men were charged with shooting and wounding six Palestinian workers in a March 4 ambush on a bus near the West Bank city of Ramallah. District prosecutor Michael Shaked said conviction on the charge could carry a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison.

A fourth defendant could be sentenced to up to 15 years in prison if convicted of involvement in several other attacks, including the firebombings of a newspaper office and a Palestinian home and the burnings of four Palestinian-owned vehicles.

The charge sheet identified the defendants as Matthew Leibowitz, 21, Levi Hazan, 23, and Yehuda Richter, 21, all charged in the ambush on the bus, and Yekutiel Guzossky, who was charged with the other attacks.

The charge sheet said Craig Leitner, another suspect in the bus attack, would be a prosecution witness at the trial.

The charge sheet said the attack on the bus was planned after the bombing of an Israeli bus in Jerusalem last Dec. 6 that killed six Israelis and wounded 40. A Palestine Liberation Organization faction claimed responsibility for that bombing.

Kach spokeswoman Barbara Ginzberg said all four defendants and the fifth suspect were members of Kach. Leitner and Richter were from Los Angeles and the other three were from the New York City area, she said.

Mattox plays major role in ethics decision

DALLAS (AP) — Members of a panel developing suggested ethics guidelines for state officials say the dominant member of the group is Attorney General Jim Mattox, who has been indicted on a commercial bribery charge.

"He's dominating the discussion, but he's not dominating the results," commission member Robert Calvert, a former chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court, told the Dallas Times Herald.

When the nine appointed members of the Texas Ethics Advisory Commission, all lawyers, have balked at Mattox's suggestions, the Times Herald said, he has reminded them that their opinions can be appealed to the attorney general.

Mattox is a non-voting member of the commission, which was created by the Legislature last year to advise state officials on questions of ethics relating to election laws, lobbying laws, conflict of interest laws and criminal statutes governing bribery and official misconduct.

The commission has no power to censure or investigate individuals.

The newspaper said Mattox has used the commission meetings as a forum to criticize Travis County District Attorney Ronald Earle, who directed the grand jury investigation that led to Mattox's indictment.

On at least one occasion, the newspaper said, Mattox participated in deliberations on ethical questions that might relate to activities of his own office.

Mattox says he has made no attempt whatsoever to promote decisions that would aid him personally, but says he wants to make sure the commission does not issue any decisions that can be "twisted" by prosecutors, which is what he says happened to him.

"You can get somebody that's unreasonable and they will twist it (an ethics opinion) into a fact situation and indict someone," said Mattox. "I don't want there to be misapplications of the law as there was in my case."

Mattox was indicted for allegedly threatening to harm the business of a Houston law firm that was attempting to question his sister in a civil lawsuit. Mattox said he did not break the law. His case has not come to trial.

The commission has no authority to investigate individuals or to censure or reprimand. Its opinions, like those of the attorney general, have the force of law unless they are challenged in court and overruled.

In the first three months of its existence, the commission met four times, debated for nearly 10 hours and discussed more than a dozen ethical questions submitted by state office holders or employees.

It has reached a final decision on only five opinions.

With Mattox leading the debate, discussions on a single issue have lasted for hours and concluded with no final decision, the newspaper said.

Most commission members said their decisions to redraft opinions from the staff were based on the fact that Mattox's arguments had simply made good sense.

"Most of them (the staff recommendations) happen to be wrong," said Mattox.

Broken pipe forces evacuation

MISSOURI CITY, Texas (AP) — Exxon Pipeline Co. officials said they hoped to determine today what caused a pipeline to burst, flooding a neighborhood with thousands of gallons of gasoline and forcing the evacuation of about 240 homes.

Pipeline company spokesman Perry Smith said the section of the eight-inch pipe that split open early Sunday was replaced and the pipeline put back into operation Sunday afternoon.

"We still don't know how much gasoline got out," Smith said.

He said 20 vacuum trucks were dispatched to this suburban community southwest of Houston to clean up the spill. Smith said it would be Tuesday or Wednesday before the cleanup is completed.

Officials do not know what caused the pipe to rupture.

"We're going to try to get a better handle it on tomorrow," Smith said Sunday.

Smith said company officials estimated that about 750 were evacuated. Missouri City police dispatcher Alice Church said officers began knocking on doors at about 6 a.m. Sunday.

By 11 a.m., the spill had been contained in a mile-long stretch of drainage ditch and a quarter-mile strip of Oyster Creek, Smith said.

At 4:30 p.m., all of the evacuees, except two families, were told they could return to their homes.

Smith said the two families were "the one's who lived right adjacent to the leak."

Lenell Geter returns home

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Lenell Geter says it feels "fantastic" to be back home after his long-awaited exoneration of Texas robbery charges, but that he cannot celebrate while other people face the threat of being wrongfully convicted.

The 26-year-old black spent 16 months in prison before being cleared last week of robbing a fried chicken restaurant outside Dallas. He returned to his native South Carolina on Sunday and to a home-cooked meal of his favorite foods.

Geter said he planned to return, possibly today, to Dallas for a hearing at which charges would be formally dropped.

In a telephone interview from his mother's home in Denmark, S.C., Geter said he feels "just like a bird. I feel fantastic."

But, he added: "Until our system comes up with some type of laws and rules that would prevent a situation like mine from happening again, then I'll celebrate. There are many, many people wrongfully convicted."

There was no big hometown welcome for Geter, who slipped into the state unnoticed until he reached his mother's modest brick home. While still in Texas, he attempted to elude reporters last week.

"I have thanked the media in the past for bringing my case to a head," he said. "I just ask that they have sensitivity to my feelings."

Geter's newfound notoriety may, however, have a silver lining.

One of his attorneys, Edwin M. Sigel of Dallas, says book and movie offers about Geter's experiences could generate about a half million dollars.

Sigel told the Dallas Morning News that Michael Warren, who plays Officer Bobby Hill on the "Hill Street Blues" TV series, wants to co-produce a television movie about Geter and play the lead role.

The prestigious William Morris talent agency would like Geter as a client and has sent him a contract, Sigel added.

Sigel said they are "considering asking $250,000 for rights to a motion picture. The book offer is $25,000 to $100,000 up front. And the television movie (should be) about $500,000."

'NAACP slighted in Geter case'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Although the NAACP spent thousands of dollars and hundreds of staff hours winning the release of a wrongfully jailed black man, an "irresponsible and immature" news media failed to report the civil rights group's role, according to the NAACP's top official.

Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Saturday criticized news coverage of the case of Lenell Geter, a black engineer jailed for a Texas robbery he did not commit.

"It is one of the passing strange things of American journalism," Hooks said. "It was mentioned that he was tried, convicted and spent about 15 months in jail. But one would surmise that a little bird dropped down and freed him."

Geter, 26, was convicted in the 1982 armed robbery of a suburban Dallas fast-food restaurant, even though co-workers at E-Systems Inc., a defense contractor, testified he was at work the day of the holdup.

National news reports — including a segment on CBS' "60 Minutes" — raised doubts about the evidence, and in December Geter was released from prison. Calling the case one of mistaken identity, authorities dismissed the charges last Wednesday.

Hooks, in Philadelphia to address the NAACP's 38th annual Northeast Leadership Training Conference, said the cost of backing Geter was one reason the association was experiencing a "cash-flow problem." But he said the organization had no choice but to defend him.

"If we walked away from the Geter case, there is no question in my mind that he would still be in a Texas jail with the key thrown away," Hooks said during a news conference.

Hooks said Geter's prison ordeal and his ultimate vindication would make the young engineer a hero in the eyes of many.

"We look forward to an invitation from the White House — the same as Lt. Goodman," Hooks said.

Cagney, Carney on CBS

NEW YORK (AP) — Winner of a 1974 Academy Award, Art Carney became a movie star late in life. But his legacy is bound to be his most famous and favorite second-banana role — sewer worker Ed Norton on "The Honeymooners."

On Tuesday night, Carney again moves downstage a bit, playing a houseboy-handyman to a wheelchair-bound James Cagney, making his television debut in the "ITT Theatre" presentation of "Terrible Joe Moran" on CBS.

In its few bad moments, the film is a far-fetched ramble, but, most of the time, it manages to be sentimental and moving without being overly mushy.

Cagney plays Joe Moran, a tough-skinned ex-boxer who's really jelly inside. When he lets down his guard, he can show tenderness to Troy (Carney), another ex-pug who has been helped by Joe over the years. But Joe's real gleam is for Ronnie (Ellen Barkin from "Tender Mercies"), his estranged granddaughter.

Joe was never the settle-down type, and his marriage, which produced Ronnie's mother, lasted only three months. Joe hasn't kept up with his family for years. Then, one day, 23-year-old Ronnie, a would-be writer in need of money to bail out her dreaming, scheming boyfriend, comes calling.

Although they each place initial obstacles in the way, the developing grandfather-granddaughter relationship proves beneficial and important to both. He finds the family love he's never had after years of superficial adulation from the sports world. She finds somebody who genuinely cares for her and challenges her to be better.

The script originally was written for Katharine Hepburn, and the plan was for her to be Terrible Tessie, former tennis great. But she turned down the role, and CBS went for Cagney. The acting legend suffers from circulatory problems, the effects of a mild stroke and impaired speech.

His doctors felt working was good therapy, although they restricted his work to two hours a day. His voice let him down occasionally during the filming, and some of his post-production dubbing is noticeable.

But Cagney, in his 64th film, very often is Cagney, which means the eyes twinkle, he acts tough, and shows joy and his famous sneer when he needs to.

Old fight films, with Cagney doing the duking, are used nicely during a scene in which Joe is toasted on TV. Of lesser value is a contrived gym scene, in which ex-heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson and New York City Mayor Ed Koch have cameo roles.

Koch is funny playing a glad-handing agent, but he's not sleazy enough.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ1063 ♡5 ◇QJ9 ♣AJ63
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Had partner wanted to know how many aces you have, he could have employed Blackwood. Therefore, he must be interested in something else, and logically it can only be the quality of your trumps. You are certainly more than adequate in that department, so we would go on to six spades.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A106 ♡KJ53 ◇A985 ♣72
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—Sometimes you have to stretch a little to jump to two no trump, but that is not the case here. Your hand is suit oriented because most of your points are prime. However, that does not mean that you should respond one heart. Bid your hand naturally. Respond one diamond, If partner has four hearts, he can introduce the suit; if not, you can jump in no trump at your next turn.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKJ1054 ♡9 ◇AK95 ♣Q6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—You have a very good hand, but to show it with a jump in spades is too unilateral. Double is more flexible. For all you know, partner might have a heart stack and be able to convert to penalties for your best result. If he responds in clubs, you can then rebid your spades.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠95 ♡AKQ63 ◇A87 ♣KJ4
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Your hand rates one move toward slam. Since you will not get the information you need by asking for aces, the obvious course to adopt is a cue-bidding sequence. Bid four diamonds. However, if partner simply rebids four hearts, throw in the towel.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠98732 ♡Q6 ◇86 ♣AKJ9
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	1 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner may, or may not, have significant support for one of your black suits, but any effort to probe for an alternative contract courts disaster. For example, if you bid one spade partner might pass with a singleton, fearing a misfit. Your hand is worth some action, and the recommended move is a raise to two hearts. A doubleton honor is adequate support for a suit in which partner has overcalled.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠QJ8 ♡AKQ9873 ♣A92
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Your superb hand has just become even better. As little as five spades to the king and the king of clubs in partner's hand will give you an excellent play for six hearts, and even a grand slam could be laydown on minimal values. You can apprise partner of this by jump shifting to three clubs.

Second thoughts

When the United States announced its decision last December to withdraw from the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the British government was sympathetic. It understood the American complaints about UNESCO and the need for reform, but its immediate reaction was to keep its membership in the agency. The British Foreign Office felt it would "do better by continuing to seek reform from within."

The British are now having second thoughts. Being realists, they have seen little inclination on the part of UNESCO members, especially those in the Third World-Soviet majority, to change their wayward ways. Both Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Sir Geoffrey Howe, the foreign secretary, are reported to be impatient with UNESCO because of ballooning costs, its anti-Western attitudes and its hostility to freedom of the press.

It is highly possible that Great Britain will eventually join the United States in severing its connections with the world body. And for good reason.

Bowen Wells, the member of Parliament who is chairman of that group's committee on the United Nations, expressed the opinion of many of his colleagues the other day when he said UNESCO has shown "an incompetence which is unforgivable, and a degree of eccentricity by its director-general which discredits the whole U.N. system."

Timothy Raison, minister for overseas development, has discussed the possibility of pulling out. He said, "We will want to be certain that UNESCO is cost-effective and we will be looking at whether there are ways of doing what we do through UNESCO better outside."

He added, "It is certainly possible that we might leave, whatever other countries decide."

It is Mr. Raison's department that pays Britain's annual contribution to UNESCO of 25 million pounds. He has a right to ask questions.

GNP jumps 7.2%

All Americans should know what GNP stands for, and whether it grows or declines in any given three months of the year. GNP stands for gross national product, and is the sum total of the value of all goods and services after adjustments are made for inflation.

So when you see a headline like the above, "GNP jumps 7.2 percent," it means the economy is on an upward spiral because more goods are being made and purchased, and service industries are thriving.

The 7.2 figure is what the United States Department of Commerce calls a "flash" estimate of the annual rate of growth of the January-February-March period of 1984. It is especially significant because most economic analysts had predicted the first-quarter surge would be between 5 and 6 percent.

Growth beyond expectations has been the history of the American economy for the past 16 months. For instance, economists expected the GNP growth rate in the final quarter of 1983 to be in the vicinity of 4.5 percent, but it went up to 5 percent. It was expected in December that the rate for all four quarters of 1983 would be 3.3 percent, but it exceeded that figure by a tenth of a percent.

So when the annual rate of the upward swing of the gross national product is estimated at 7.2 percent, or more than twice the rate of last year, it is something to cheer about. Martin Feldstein, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, put his cheers in these words. He said the Commerce Department's new report "shows the economy is still on a powerful roll."

Another View:

Burying a bad idea

There is something about the military mind-set that frequently allows the most ill-conceived ideas to take root and flourish. The latest example of this is a Pentagon announcement that "deep basing" is alive and well.

This was one of the more preposterous suggestions made during the late 1970s on how to deploy the MX missile. Deep basing called for placing the MX inside mountain tunnels, thousands of feet underground. Since the entrances to these missile complexes would be destroyed in a Soviet nuclear attack, these deep-based MXs would use tunnel boring machines to dig through thousands of feet of solid rock in order to allow for what the Pentagon called "post-attack egress." The plan was rejected because the Air Force didn't like the "slow reaction" time.

Now, the Air Force wants to deploy missiles mounting spy and communication satellites deep underground in order to allow for — are you ready? — "post-attack reconstitution of space assets." The plan calls for putting the missiles "about 1,000 feet underground, thereby using the intervening material to impose a miss distance on attacking missiles." The Air Force is also claiming successful test boring of "vertical egress paths" through 150 feet of solid rock and a simulated nuclear crater.

It's disturbing enough that so-called rational minds are wasting time, money and effort on such mad schemes. However, the senselessness of it is made even more apparent when one asks what is to prevent the Soviets from deploying multi-megaton, "earth-penetrator" nuclear warheads that can dig even bigger craters?

The Pentagon's answer to that question, we fear, could well be the resurrection of another defunct MX basing scheme — nuclear-armed dirigibles. Don't say we didn't warn you.

Meese promotion criticized

WASHINGTON — Last December, I reported that presidential counselor Edwin Meese, a bird colonel in the Army Reserve, had been boosted up the military ladder by pals in the Pentagon. Educational requirements were waived, and the promotion was rushed through just before his mandatory retirement date.

Jack Anderson

The odd circumstances attached to his sudden rise in rank were laid before the Senate Judiciary Committee, which was debating Meese's nomination as attorney general. Those hearings have now been suspended pending a Justice Department investigation.

Meese had assured the committee that he did not seek special treatment. He was merely "the victim of bad judgment within the Army," he said.

The Army's inspector general also cleared Meese of any personal impropriety. But strangely, the Army has refused to release the IG report. Key excerpts from the suppressed document have now been reviewed by my associate John Dillon, who has also had access to portions of a Senate investigation file. Here are the highlights:

— "Mr. Meese was selected not on the basis of his past military performance but rather on the basis of national prominence. ... Mr. Meese, despite his disclaimer, was accorded special treatment and consideration that far transcended that which might be considered reasonable."

— Meese's promotion was expedited by Maj. Gen. William Berkman, the Army Reserve chief, who normally would have given up his post in February 1983. But the very day that Meese became a colonel, Berkman was confirmed for an additional four-year term. He also happens to be an old California buddy of Meese, attended the same law school and served in the same reserve unit.

— A special job was re-created for Meese, with less demanding training requirements. The post was among those abolished in 1969 because "those positions served merely as a haven for individuals seeking an extension of their mandatory retirement date or less stringent military education requirements."

— The same day Meese was assigned to the resurrected reserve slot at Selective Service headquarters, President Reagan announced his intention to appoint Maj. Gen. Thomas Turnage director of Selective Service. Turnage is another of Meese's buddies from California. He was also the one who waived the education requirements for Meese's promotion. Then at Berkman's request, Turnage "directed that Meese be transferred to the Ready Reserve and assigned to the Selective Service System," Pentagon officials reported to Senate investigators.

— The investigators were also informed by the Pentagon that Meese had skipped certain educational requirements in his earlier promotion from major to lieutenant colonel.

Ed Meese is an amiable fellow, with a soft voice, quiet manners and general gentility that make him seem too mild for the rough-and-tumble of politics. He obviously wanted to become a colonel, which will increase his military pension by 18 percent. But his Pentagon friends appear to have wanted his promotion even more, hoping perhaps to butter up an influential White House official.

ON THE WARPATH: Jamake Highwater, one of America's most celebrated Indian personalities — though his claim to being an Indian is disputed by some famous native Americans — has taken me severely to task for reporting last month that he had fabricated much of his background.

In a letter written in collaboration with his lawyer, Highwater charged me with being unfair, erroneous, false and outrageous, among other things.

For example, Highwater notes in his letter that his voluminous writings on Indian culture have been praised for their "originality." Yet page after page of his books show striking similarity to earlier writings by other authors. Sometimes it's almost word-for-word, as in his 1978 observation of an Indian named Tsatoke:

"Music was important to Tsatoke; he loved to sing and, for many years, he was head-singer at Kiowa Pow-wows." But 10 years earlier, Jeanne Snodgrass had written of Tsatoke that "music was also important to him; he loved to sing and, for many years, was chief singer at Kiowa dances."

Perhaps by "originality" Highwater meant his supposed conversation with Margaret Mead about his plans to follow up his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago with research on Indians in America. The university said it had no record of a Ph.D. or any other degree given to either Highwater or to J Marks, a name he had used previously.

Nor could the University of California at Berkeley find any record of the bachelor's and master's degrees he claimed to have earned there.

Confronted with evidence of these and other whoppers, Highwater acknowledged that he had "fudged" on some things and that some of his statements were "apocryphal." The dictionary defines the verb "fudge" to mean to cheat, welsh or be dishonest; "apocryphal" means spurious or false.

If Highwater-Marks can produce convincing proof of his claimed background and ancestry, I'm prepared to print it.

Mondale rode TV in comeback

WASHINGTON — The magnitude of Walter F. Mondale's Illinois comeback, giving him a badly needed primary victory, stands out in secret data from his pollster, Peter Hart, showing Sen. Gary Hart 13 percentage points ahead in the state on Friday night.

Rowland Evans

Following that grim news, Mondale launched a saturation television campaign Saturday, Sunday and Monday arguing that Hart was not fit for the presidency. But Mondale's strategists believe Hart's blunders also contributed significantly to their win.

Robert Novak

In particular, Hart's attack on Edward Vrdolyak, leader of the Chicago Democratic organization, backfired. Mondale's national campaign leaders believe it produced an outpouring of white ethnic votes against Hart.

BLOCKING SALVADORAN AID

Rep. Clarence Long of Maryland has refused to bring up military aid to El Salvador in his House Appropriations subcommittee despite protests from the State Department that more delay mean severe ammunition shortages for government forces fighting communist guerrillas.

That suggests no action by Long's subcommittee until the end of April. If conservative Roberto d'Aubuisson is elected president, further delays are probable. That could enhance guerrilla efforts for a war-winning offensive in 1984.

Mitigating the delay, however, is the fact the Salvadoran government has stockpiled limited quantities of ammunition in anticipation of just such an emergency.

HART'S JEWISH FLANK

The first crack of the political gun against Sen. Gary Hart's comeback effort in the crucial New York presidential primary came when the Jewish Press — the most influential Jewish weekly in New York City — attacked him for "speaking out of both sides of his mouth."

Only hours before Hart arrived in Manhattan to start his campaign for the April 3 test against Walter Mondale and the Rev. Jesse Jackson, he was the target of an editorial questioning his positions on Israel. That undercut Hart's careful decision to clear himself of Jewish criticism as the top priority of his fledgling New York campaign.

The widely-read Jewish weekly also ran a major front-page story documenting allegations that Hart has been inconsistent — and, by implication, inconstant — in dealing with U.S.-Israeli issues. The Jewish community, which leans strongly to Mondale, will probably produce more than 30 percent of the total primary vote.

LAFFER'S SENATE CURVE

Arthur Laffer, the supply-side economic theorist who contributed heavily to President Reagan's tax-cutting policies, is seriously considering seeking the Republican nomination to run against California's Democratic senator, Alan Cranston, in 1986.

Laffer, famous for the Laffer Curve showing how higher tax rates produce lower revenue, has never sought public office. An economic professor at the University of Southern California, he also runs a profitable economic consulting firm. He is a frequent adviser to Reagan, Rep. Jack Kemp, Sen. Paul Laxalt and other Republican politicians.

Considered vulnerable in the wake of his humiliating presidential candidacy, Cranston is apt to attract many Republican challengers far more experienced than Laffer (headed by popular ex-representative John Rousselot). But Laffer, bouncy and witty at age 43, poses the sharpest contrast to the 69-year-old Cranston.

DEMO SENATE HOPE

A confidential analysis showing Democrat Rep. Norman D'Amours moving ahead of Republican Sen. Gordon Humphrey in conservative New Hampshire's hot Senate race is cause for guarded optimism by Democratic leaders.

The Senate election of the former airline pilot was one of the surprises of the big 1978 Republican year and he was immediately put down as vulnerable. But Humphrey has been shaving his conservative positions, particularly on the environment, and building his political strength.

But the confidential voter-profile study, just completed by Russell Hemenway's New York-based National Committee for an Effective Congress, shows D'Amours beating Humphrey, the first matching to give the 10-year House veteran an edge. To win the Senate the Democrats would need a net gain of six seats if President Reagan wins re-election, five if he loses.

CHARLEY REESE

Only force will stop Red plan

The day the Sandinistas marched triumphantly into Managua, Nicaragua, Fernando Chamorro, one of the leaders of the revolution, went to Anastasio Somoza's bunker into which he had once fired a rocket. He found Cubans already there.

"We didn't win," he told his friends that night. "We've been (expletive deleted)."

Charley Reese

Chamorro, who spent most of his adult life fighting Somoza, stewing in exile, or sitting in prison is once more back in the jungles of Nicaragua. Once more, he is fighting.

Inside both the southern and northern borders of Nicaragua, Nicaraguans are once more fighting — this time, to liberate their country from Communists who committed the same crime Fidel Castro committed in Cuba: grand larceny of a country.

In the south, Chamorro and Eden Pastora, who is known as Commandante Zero, and others are fighting under the umbrella of the Aliana Revolutionara Democratica, or ARDE in English abbreviation. So far as I can gather from talking with their people in Miami recently, they are not getting any of the overt-covert aid that the Congress reluctantly provides.

That seems to be going to the FDN, which is fighting in the north under the leadership of Adolfo Calero. The FDN and the ARDE communicate and share the same goal — ousting the Sandinistas but so far they have not formally adopted a united front.

Based on my talks with Nicaraguans, I believe we can be certain of three things:

1. The Sandinistas are Reds and they aren't going to give up power voluntarily.

2. The opposition from the Nicaraguans is genuine and determined and is not something cooked up by the CIA or the Reagan Administration.

3. Whether the government helps or not, we, the American people, should support the Nicraguan people in their struggle for freedom.

Now, you may ask what difference it makes to an American what kind of government they have in Nicaragua. This year, it makes little difference. But if the Reds consolidate their power in Nicaragua, then by next year or the year after, it will make a lot of difference.

The Reds in Managua are not your home-grown variety. If they were, there wouldn't be so many Cubans, Russians, East Germans, and Bulgarians in Nicaragua. If they were interested in only Nicaragua, they would not be setting up the standard, block by block, Communist security system. If they did not intend to spread Communism, they would not be building airfields and sending young men off to learn to fly MIGs. If they were simply democratic socialists, then the Communist Party apparatus in the United States would not be screaming so loud in their behalf.

A Red Nicaragua will mean war in Central America and eventually a Red Central America. A Red Central American will mean war in Mexico and eventually a Red Mexico. A Red Mexico will mean war in the southwestern United States and all of it will mean millions of new refugees in the United States.

That is cheap, risk-free offensive for the Soviet Union.

One thing you learn when you spend time with Nicaraguans is that the line between Somocistas and Sandinistas is not as clear as the Sandinistas would have you believe. That is an old Red propaganda tactic, of course. Everybody who is against the Red Sandinistas is a Somocista. In the 1930s and 1940s, everybody who was against the Communists was a fascist. In our own country, the leftists say everybody who is not a leftist is a rightwing extremist.

Among the Nicaraguans fighting the Sandinistas are men who never supported Somoza as well as some who did and some who did for a while and then opposed him.

Somoza was not universally hated for the entire length of his stay by all Nicaraguans. Apparently, he overstayed his welcome and toward the end got so greedy he alienated practically everyone.

Nevertheless, Somoza's precipitous departure — urged on him by the Carter Administration — left a vacuum that the Reds filled before the Nicaraguans realized what was coming down.

The Nicaraguans are wise, however. They have started fighting early. They have learned from the Cuban tragedy. Once a Communist security system gets firmly installed, it is very difficult to root it out.

Hart: Falklands proved big ships vulnerable

WASHINGTON (AP) — After Great Britain whipped Argentina two years ago in the war over the Falkland Islands, Sen. Gary Hart and U.S. Navy officials said the conflict proved their views about ocean warfare — but their opinions didn't coincide.

Hart concluded that the days of big surface ships were over because of the ease with which a single Argentina missile sank the British destroyer Sheffield and the way a British sub torpedoed a Argentinian cruiser.

But the Navy, then embarking on a new era of shipbuilding as part of the Reagan administration's defense build-up, said the war only proved that even larger, faster and better-protected surface ships were needed.

As part of his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination, Hart is telling his audiences that one of his goals is "military reform," a little-explained phrase which covers a different way of looking at the U.S. defense establishment.

Though Hart hasn't been in the active military, he has gained much of his expertise as a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, a post which gives him regular access to top civilian and uniformed Pentagon personnel.

For the past four years, Hart has also been a member of the congressional military reform caucus, a loosely knit group that includes senators and House members from across the political spectrum.

Caucus members want the Pentagon to buy simpler and cheaper weapons, which they say are likely to be more reliable in combat than some of the Pentagon's much-touted and highly sophisticated weapons.

Aside from weapons, Hart and the other reformers worry about the type of officers the Pentagon is turning out and the tactics they develop. Those officers are better at managing weapons systems and pushing paper than they might be at leading troops in combat and making quick and correct decisions which could spell the difference between victory or defeat in battle, say the reformers.

For example, Hart says the Army still relies on a land warfare concept dominated by using massive firepower to win a war of attrition.

"One can place the U.S. Army's field manuals side-by-side with those of the French in 1940 and find remarkable parallels," Hart wrote two years ago, pointing out how quickly the Germans and their blitzkrieg attacks destroyed the French and their static defense based on the Maginot Line.

Rather, says Hart, the Army should emphasize quick-striking maneuver warfare of the type perfected by the Israelis.

In addition to changing tactics, Hart also wants to change weapons. He doesn't like the Army's Bradley fighting vehicle, which critics say doesn't have enough armor and catches fire too easily and the Army's new Apache attack helicopter, which Hart would replace with fixed-wing planes he says are less vulnerable. He would also replace the expensive new Divad air defense gun with one of the current anti-aircraft guns.

The Air Force is also buying the wrong kinds of weapons, Hart believes, and should purchase more of the light-weight F-16 fighters instead of the more expensive F-15s.

But it is the Navy which is the object of Hart's harshest criticism.

Hart, along with other Navy critics, say the ease with which the Sheffield was sunk means that surface ships are highly vulnerable in an era of "smart" missiles.

He would cancel two new nuclear-powered aircraft carriers and the FA-18 fighters. Those 90,000-ton ships, approved by Congress in fiscal 1983, will give the Navy 15 carriers when they join the fleet late in this decade.

Instead, Hart would build smaller carriers of around 40,000 tons each, equipped with planes that could take off and land vertically, similar to the carrier-based Harriers used by Britain in the Falklands War.

That would give the Navy more carriers for the money and make it more difficult for the Soviets to knock out the U.S. ships in a war, Hart has written.

Cop was under observation

NEW YORK (AP) — A New York police officer whose testimony helped convict an innocent man of murder was under psychiatric observation at the time for allegedly threatening to kill his sergeant and himself, a newspaper reported today.

Police records describe the threats Officer Henry Harrison Jr. allegedly made in November 1981 to gain a promotion, The New York Times reported. Harrison was put under psychiatric observation and not allowed to carry a gun for more than six months, according to the records.

During that period, he testified at the trial of Nathaniel Carter, who was convicted of killing a Queen's woman and sentenced to 25 years to life in prison. Last January, after serving more than two years, Carter was freed after his former wife confessed to the slaying.

Mitterand calls for new Soviet-U.S. dialogue

WASHINGTON (AP) — French President Francois Mitterrand says the United States and the Soviet Union must resume direct talks and that means both sides must make concessions.

"You will never succeed in negotiations without making some concessions, naturally," Mitterrand said Sunday through an interpreter on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"One does not know quite what those concessions might be," Mitterrand said. "The main thing is to say one is ready to talk."

Mitterrand said he agrees with President Reagan that the U.S. should not make any unilateral concessions or gestures to Soviet leaders to lure them back to the nuclear bargaining table.

The interview was taped here Saturday before Mitterrand set out on a U.S. tour, with stops in Georgia, Illinois, California, Pennsylvania and New York.

Mitterrand was asked if the U.S. might get the Soviets back to the bargaining table with an offer to renounce the use of force or to ratify a long-pending treaty on underground nuclear testing.

Mitterrand said such a gesture might be worthwhile "if the Russians at the same time make a corresponding gesture."

Impeached Nebraska official goes on trial

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Three-term state Attorney General Paul L. Douglas, impeached over alleged wrongdoing in connection with a failed industrial bank, would be the first Nebraska official ousted in 113 years if he is convicted in a trial beginning today.

Nebraska's top law officer protested after his March 14 impeachment by the non-partisan, one-house legislature that the move was "unjustified."

But some of Douglas' his supporters in the 49-member legislature said they were among those who voted 27-19 for the impeachment, in order to let him defend himself in court.

The six articles of impeachment against Douglas, 56, stem from his official conduct in the investigation of the insolvent Commonwealth Savings Co. of Lincoln, and from his personal dealings with the institution and one of its former officers, Marvin Copple.

The articles allege in part that Douglas abetted inside borrowing, misrepresented a $32,500 loan from the bank, failed to investigate Commonwealth, and violated the state bar association's Code of Professional Responsibility by failing to avoid the appearance of impropriety.

Douglas, first elected attorney general in 1974, is suspended with pay pending the outcome of the trial before the state Supreme Court.

Besides the impeachment articles, the Legislature passed a resolution condemning Douglas' conduct in regard to Commonwealth and to Copple, a member of the family that owned the bank.

Commonwealth was Nebraska's biggest loan and investment company before it was declared insolvent last Nov. 1 with liabilities of $69.2 million and assets of $78.6 million.

As a loan and investment firm — a type of industrial bank allowed under state law to provide an alternative to traditional banking institutions — the bank took deposits and made loans on such items as land.

A federal grand jury investigated the failure after the Nebraska Depository Institution Guaranty Corp. — a state-created, independent agency that included an industrial and cooperative credit association — announced it lacked sufficient funds to make good advertised insurance of up to $30,000 on Commonwealth accounts.

Lebanese leaders discuss security needed after troops' withdrawal

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese leaders conferred today over how to fill the security vacuum which will be left when French peacekeeping troops complete their withdrawal from the capital.

In west Beirut, Druse fighters agreed to give up positions they captured last week from a Libyan-backed Moslem group, the Mourabitoun.

However, Moslem and Christian militiamen clashed overnight in Beirut's center, killing two people and injuring 14 before the fighting tapered off after daybreak, police said.

A four-party security committee representing the Lebanese army and Christian, Druse and Shiite Moslem militias met today to discuss arrangements for dealing with the French withdrawal. Radio reports said the meeting took place at the French headquarters.

French troops guard the museum crossing, the only open gateway between Christian east Beirut and the mostly Moslem west, as well as other positions on the "green line" which separates the two sections.

A scramble for territory by either Christian or Moslem militiamen after the French withdrawal is completed Saturday could touch off a new round of civil war.

Local radio stations and newspapers said the committee was considering forming a police force buttressed by reservists to guard the museum crossing and patrol the green line. The committee was established by rival Lebanese leaders who met earlier this month in Switzerland.

The French contingent, the last of the four-nation multinational force, began its pullout Sunday, loading between 250 and 500 of the remaining 1,300 troops aboard a ferry boat for the trip home via Cyprus. The force, which lost 86 men in terrorist attacks and crossfires during its stay, continued its evacuation today by loading equipment onto landing ships at Beirut's port.

The United States, Italy and Britain already have pulled out their multinational force contingents. The force was deployed in Beirut in September 1982 after the Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

Meanwhile, Walid Jumblatt's Druse fighters agreed to give back the Mourabitoun headquarters and radio station to the Sunni Moslem group today and to withdraw from the streets of west Beirut, turning over their security duties to the national police.

The accord was announced after a lengthy meeting between representatives of Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist Party and Grand Mufti Hassan Khaled, spiritual head of Lebanon's Sunni community.

Jumblatt's fighters dislodged Mourabitoun militiamen from their west Beirut strongholds in street fighting last week that left 28 people dead and more than 100 wounded.

Meanwhile, Syrian President Hafez Assad was quoted as saying in an interview in the April 2 issue of Time magazine that Syria would withdraw its troops from Lebanon if a unified government was formed and made that request.

"We will never accept any linkage between Syrian and Israeli withdrawal," Assad was quoted as saying. "But when a government of national unity is formed as a result of the desire of the Lebanese government, we will meet its request to withdraw unreluctantly, and this could be within a month or within days or months."

Rebels discussed killing U.S. journalists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two news photographers held overnight by Salvadoran guerrillas say their taxi driver told them later the rebels discussed killing them if they turned out to be U.S. advisers.

The photographers, David Leeson of the New Orleans Times-Picayune and Dayna Smith of the Washington Times, said, however, that the leftist rebels fed them and, after becoming convinced they were journalists, allowed them to take pictures.

"We were under guard during the night — once I awoke to see a guard standing over me with a rifle, silhouetted against the sky — but we were not afraid for our lives," Ms. Smith wrote in today's editions of the Times.

The next morning, after they were freed, however, the taxi driver who had taken them to the rebel-held town of Comalapa, 15 miles north of the capital, gave them a chilling account of his conversation with the guerrillas.

Ms. Smith said the rebels suspected Leeson.

In the late afternoon, however, the guerrillas shared rations of tortillas and rice with the photographers, Ms. Smith said. She said the rebels, dressed in U.S. Army uniforms and armed with American weapons, seemed relaxed.

With sporadic gunfire crackling in the surrounding hills, Leeson reported, the photographers drank Cokes and listened to classical piano music on a portable tape recorder while waiting for word of their fate from the guerrilla commandante.

Italian Communists' power still waning, despite historic protest

By KEVIN COSTELLOE

ROME (AP) — The Communists, long the bridesmaids but never the brides of Italian governments, mobilized hundreds of thousands of workers in a historic protest. But the party's political clout probably will continue to wane.

More than 500,000 workers from all over Italy poured into Rome on Saturday for the nation's largest single labor protest ever. They demonstrated against a cap on automatic wage hikes that would trim an average worker's salary by about $125 a year.

But the protest contributed to divisions in the labor movement, setting a Communist-led union against two others led by members of other parties. And polls have indicated that the wage hike cap is popular.

The Communists are Italy's second-largest political party, behind only the Christian Democrats, but are routinely excluded from government coalitions. They failed to block

An Analysis

Senate approval of the wage measure and are now planning strategies to block it in the Chamber of Deputies.

The wage cap was imposed by decree by Socialist Premier Bettino Craxi's five-party coalition to counter inflation. It must be approved by parliament by early April to remain in effect.

"Obstructionism in the Senate and an anachronistic march have confirmed the deep sickness of the Communist Party," said Nino Badano, the leading political commentator for Rome's conservative Il Tempo newspaper.

Socialists and Christian Democrats, the main partners in the current government, say the march only isolated the Communists, whose popularity and influence have been sliding downwards since a 1976 peak.

During national elections last June, they slipped from 207 to 198 seats in the Chamber of Deputies, the key barometer of political strength.

The Communists also have been slipping downward at the polls, thwarting party leader Enrico Berlinguer's hopes for a "historical compromise" that would let the West's largest Communist party share national power.

Saturday's protest was organized by the Communist wing of the 3.5 million-member Confederazione Generale del Lavoro, Italy's largest labor union.

CGIL's Communist wing split with Socialists and the two other major unions in Italy's 12-year-old labor federation in staging the demonstration.

The two other unions in the labor coalition — Confederazione Italiana Sindicati Lavoratori and Unione Italiana del Lavoro — have accepted the Craxi reforms. The two unions, which together claim 4.3 million members, opposed Saturday's protest.

Israel marks fifth anniversary of peace treaty with Egypt

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel today marked the fifth anniversary of peace with Egypt with little of the fanfare that marked the signing of the first Arab-Israeli peace treaty at Camp David on March 26, 1979.

Jimmy Carter, Menachem Begin and Anwar Sadat, the three main actors in the drama, are no longer in power. In Israel, the current top office-holders opposed the concessions Israel made for peace, and relations with Egypt are strained.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who has accused Egypt of retreating from the Camp David accords, sent President Hosni Mubarak a cable expressing his hopes for progress in relations.

However, Shamir made no mention of the issues raised by Mubarak in an Egyptian cable sent two weeks ago. In that message, Mubarak reportedly complained of lack of progress in solving a border dispute on the Red Sea, the stalled Palestinian autonomy talks, the Lebanon war, Israeli West Bank settlements and other contentious issues.

Ezer Weizman, Israeli defense minister duuring the Camp David talks, said on Israel Radio that "if I had to repeat those days of 1977 to 1979, there is no doubt I would do so...if with certain changes."

He said Egypt's attempts to restore its relations with Arab countries, which have boycotted it since the treaty, could be good for Israel.

"Perhaps through Egypt we will reach agreements with other Arab countries," Weizman said.

Weizman resigned from the Begin government in 1980, claiming that Israel was not doing enough to advance the peace process. Since announcing that he is establishing a new political party , he has been highly critical of Israel's invasion of Lebanon, one of the main stumbling blocks in Israeli-Egyptian relations.

Queen arrives in Amman

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Britain's Queen Elizabeth II and her husband, Prince Philip, arrived in Jordan today under tight security, two days after a bomb explosion that officials say was "meant to prevent the queen's visit."

It was the queen's first official state visit to this Arab kingdom, which gained independence from Britain in 1946.

The British royal couple arrived in a specially equipped Boeing Tristar 500 jet after an overnight stop in Cyprus. They were greeted at the Marka military airbase north of the capital by Jordan's King Hussein and Queen Noor.

Khaki-clad Jordanian soldiers lined the runway at the Marka field, and hundreds of the Jordanian king's guards ringed the base, patroling in jeeps mounted with machine guns.

Houston gains Final Four

Cougars tired of comparisons to last year

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Coach Guy Lewis says his Houston Cougars made a crusade out of working their way back to college basketball's Final Four following their title miss 12 months ago.

"They've grown so tired of being compared to last year's team," said Lewis following a 68-63 triumph Sunday over Wake Forest in finals of the NCAA Midwest Regional. "I don't blame them, really. I'm proud of them, because they've played up to their potential."

HOUSTON, BY overcoming shaky foul shooting in the late minutes, improved its record to 31-4 and earned the praise of Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy.

"I really think that they're a much improved team over a year ago. First of all, they had a lot more poise," Tacy said. "They seem to have more a 'together' club. Their inside game is very powerful."

Tacy's reference to power applied specifically to Akeem Olajuwon, the regional's Most Valuable Player and a towering force in the middle.

The 7-foot junior hit all eight of his field-goal tries in the opening half, catapulting Houston into the lead for good with a mighty slam dunk. In the final 20 minutes, although missing all three of his foul shots, he added 12 points and helped wreck the Wake Forest offense.

"You're always thinking about him, but he's not intimidating," said forward Kenny Green, the Demon Deacons' top scorer with 18 points.

"We changed our shots as a result of him," Tacy said, however. "He's a great talent. I don't expect to see very many as good as he is."

WAKE FOREST, while spreading its offense in a bid to control the game's tempo, grabbed a 27-22 lead at 15:10 of the opening half before Olajuwon asserted his skills.

He had four first-half slam dunks, the final of which gave Houston a 32-29 lead.

Olajuwon's dominant performance enabled Lewis to chuckle when asked how the Cougars managed to win despite 6-for-15 foul shooting in the second half.

"Having this guy get a whole lot of points didn't hurt anything," said Lewis, nodding to Olajuwon on his left. "This guy at the end hitting his free throws finished them off," he said with a nod to Alvin Franklin at his other side.

LEE GARBER pulled Wake Forest to within 34-33 at the outset of the second half before Michael Young of Houston found the range.

Young's shooting put Houston up 45-37 and later 49-41 with 12:09 left. Afterward, Anthony Teachey's bomb from 22 feet put Wake Forest close at 53-51 and his two foul shots posed the Demon Deacons' final threat at 57-55.

"We felt that if we stayed close until the end we would have a good chance to win," said Tacy, whose team bowed out with a 23-9 record.

"When we did have some opportunities we hurried and made some crucial mistakes that cost us some points and the ballgame," Tacy added. "We needed more time to prepare for a team such as this."

OLAJUWON, IN addition to his 29 points, pulled down 12 rebounds and blocked three shots while playing the entire 40 minutes.

Green, a 6-6 sophomore, grabbed 16 missed shots for the Demon Deacons. Both he and guard Delaney Rudd, who scored all 12 of his points in the opening half, joined Young of Houston and freshman William Bedford of Memphis State on the Midwest all-tourney team.

The journey to the Final Four, where it will play Virginia, 21-11, in Saturday's semifinals, will be the third in a row for Lewis' team, which a year ago fell 54-52 to North Carolina State in the title game.

"It's such a thrill to be going back. It's just as thrilling this time as it was two years ago," Lewis said. "I don't look forward to playing them (Virginia), I'm just glad I'm able to get there."

Texas nips Cougars in SWC game

HOUSTON (AP) — Darrin Loy's sacrifice fly in the ninth scored the winning run as Texas completed a sweep of a three-game Southwest Conference series at Houston with a 12-10 win on Sunday.

With Texas leading, 9-5, Houston catcher Riley Epps' solo homer in the seventh started a Cougar comeback. In the eighth, Mike Engle knocked in a run with a ground out and Mark Grimes scored two runs on his single. Benny Mota's single added another, putting Houston in front, 10-9.

But Rusty Richards' RBI single in the top of the ninth tied it, and Loy sacrificed for the winning run. Dennis Cook walked with the bases loaded to score the final run.

Eric Boudreaux, 2-0, was the winner. Larry Coker, 1-3, took the loss for Houston, which fell to 20-13 overall and 1-5 in the SWC.

Texas improved to 35-4 and 3-0.

Arkansas wins pair

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas swept a pair of games from third-ranked Rice on Sunday to give the Razorbacks a 4-1 record in the Southwest Conference.

Arkansas won the first game 5-3 and took a second win of 6-3 on Rice's six errors and five unearned runs.

Rudy Garcia, 3-1, won the first game for Arkansas. He went six and two-thirds innings. Lester Lancaster got his fifth save of the year by getting the final out.

Tim Englund took the loss for Rice.

Arkansas led 5-0 after six, but Garcia gave up a three-run homer in the seventh to James Thompson. He then got a strike out but walked the next batter. Lancaster came in to get the final out.

In the second game, Arkansas scored three runs in the second on four Rice errors. With one out Berry reached on an error by Scott Johnson. Mark Jackson reached when Johnson made a second error.

Arkansas scored its final runs in the fifth. King lead off with a single and came home when Roberts tripled. Roberts scored when Foxx made his second error.

The winner in the second game was Rick Huntze, 6-0, who had to leave the game in the sixth with a sore elbow.

A&M rips TCU, 10-1

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Mike Scanlin's three-run homer led the way for Texas A&M as the Aggies defeated Texas Christian 10-1 in Southwest Conference baseball Sunday.

Kelly Keahey, 4-0, scattered eight singles in eight innings for the Aggies. Rock King came on the ninth, retiring the TCU batters in order.

Scanlin's home run in the fourth broke open the game. Aggie batters scored in six of the eight innings they batted.

Georgetown's Patrick Ewing slams one home for the Hoyas Sunday in the NCAA Western Regional title game against Dayton.

Hoyas heading for Seattle

Defense will be key to success

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's on to Seattle for Patrick Ewing and the Georgetown Hoyas, who hope their defense can take them to an NCAA basketball championship they missed by only one point two years ago.

"I think our (defensive) pressure has to become more of a factor now," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson after the Hoyas whipped upstart Dayton 61-49 in Sunday's NCAA Western Regional championship game. "The task becomes more difficult. There are only four teams, but four very good teams."

The second-ranked Hoyas, 32-3 and winners of 19 of their last 20 games, face Kentucky, 29-4, Saturday after Virginia, 21-11, meets Houston, 31-4.

The winners of those games will square off April 2 for the national title.

DAYTON COACH Don Donoher, for one, is looking forward to the Georgetown-Kentucky matchup.

"It will be like the Rockies against the Alps," said Donoher, whose team finished the season with a 21-11 record. "It ought to be a whale of a game. I know I'll be in my seat early."

What had been billed as "A Year of the Dream" became a nightmare for Donoher and his outmanned Flyers at Pauley Pavilion.

Dayton was seeded 10th in the West but upset Louisiana State, Oklahoma and Washington to earn its berth opposite top-seeded Georgetown in the regional championship game.

The Hoyas, meanwhile, beat Southern Methodist and Nevada-Las Vegas to advance to Sunday's game.

"They're a tough bunch of knockers," Donoher said of Georgetown. "They just keep that constant pressure on you.

"You play as many games as they have and the opposition can't shoot 40 percent from the floor, that's an amazing stat. We're going to get one shot, we're not going to get any second ones and they are."

GEORGETOWN'S FIRST 34 opponents this season hit on only 39.4 percent of their field goal attempts.

The Flyers did a little better, making 41.2 percent of their floor shots, but they connected on only 33.3 percent in the second half.

In addition, the Hoyas won the battle of the backboards 35-20. And it was 22-10 in the second half when Dayton's lack of size, strength and depth really began to tell.

"Our team gave everything it had," Donoher said. "We made it to the final eight. We're down now, but we'll wake up tomorrow and feel proud."

GEORGETOWN WENT ahead to stay by scoring eight straight points to turn a 14-12 deficit into a 20-14 lead. It was 30-24 at halftime.

The Flyers were still in the game early in the second half, trailing 38-33, when the Hoyas rattled off seven straight points to take command with 9:51 remaining.

Dayton never got closer than eight points thereafter.

"I was as nervous as I have ever been before a game today," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "It is difficult to play not to lose instead of playing to win. Because of our height advantage, people naturally expected us to win.

"I am proud of our team. We played well, and played good, alert defense. I didn't consider Dayton a Cinderella team because Cinderella didn't stay out this long. Their team is as well-coached as any team we've played this year."

The 7-foot Ewing, who led the Hoyas with 15 points, seven rebounds and three blocked shots, clogged up the middle on defense, especially in the second half.

WHEN ASKED about the events of two years ago, when Georgetown lost to North Carolina 63-62 in the NCAA championship game, Ewing said: "I really haven't been thinking about my freshman year . . . It's great to be in the Final Four because we have worked so hard all season."

Kentucky, the Mideast champion, fields a front line of 7-foot Sam Bowie, 6-11 Melvin Turpin and 6-8 Kenny Walker.

"It won't be me against Bowie or Turpin; it will be Georgetown against Kentucky," Ewing said. "I'm just going to take it in stride."

While the Flyers used only seven players, none taller than 6-7, Thompson employed 10 players, with all but two scoring points. Bill Martin, a non-starter, led all rebounders with 10 while playing 22 minutes.

Rebels host Big Spring

Bulldogs travel to San Angelo

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

There is no longer a crowd of teams atop the District 4-5A baseball standings. Only Midland Lee holds that honor, the lone unbeaten team after four games.

And, considering the Rebels' opponent Tuesday, it is likely they will remain there at least one more game. The Rebs host winless, and rather brutally beaten, Big Spring at 4 p.m. at Lee Diamond.

While the Rebels are fighting to remain in first place, four teams are working just as hard to catch them. Midland High and Abilene Cooper are tied for second at 3-1 while Odessa Permian and Odessa High are knotted in fourth at 2-2. San Angelo and Abilene High lead only Big Spring with 1-3 records.

While the Rebs and Steers are playing, Midland High will be in San Angelo, Odessa Permian is at Abilene Cooper and Abilene High is at Odessa High.

BIG SPRING is slowing finding out just how tough the rest of the teams in the district are this year. After losing their first two games by a total count of 13-2, the Steers dropped the next two by a 37-16 margin.

With all the problems the Steers are having, it's likely Lee's top pitcher Bryan Willis will be used in the outfield, giving up mound duties for Mike Small or George Matta.

Steve Woodlee continues to lead the Rebel hitting attack with a sizzling .667 average. His eight hits, three of which were doubles, have produced six runs and six RBI in four games.

Willis, with two-game winning RBI under his belt in 4-5A play, is also swinging at a hot click with a .538 average. He has seven RBI and two runs scored. His only extra base hit is a triple.

Jimmy Phillips is hitting .375 for the Rebs followed by Rob Walker and Dennis Matta at .333. Walker has a pair of doubles to his credit while Matta leads the team in stolen bases with two.

MIDLAND HIGH played San Angelo in the Pre-District Tournament at the start of the season and would like a shot at deciding the 3-3 score the two teams played to by means other than a coin flip, which the Bobcats won.

Steve Wootan, who was injured in a collision with catcher Jeff Magness against Abilene Cooper, is a possible starter for the Bulldogs against the Bobcats. If he's still too sore, which has kept him off the mound lately, Mike Timlin could get the call.

Wootan and Timlin also lead the Bulldogs at the plate with healthy .583 averages. Wootan with no extra bases, has scored five runs for the Dogs while knocking in two. Timlin has three doubles and a triple in seven hits for a team-high seven RBI.

Keith Clay is hitting .300 for the Bulldogs and has the team's only district home run. He's also a strong situation hitter with two sacrifice bunts and a sacrifice fly to his credit.

Darren Thorpe, who is finding trouble getting hits, still manages to get on base in some fashion. With only a .250 average, the speedy infielder has turned walks into doubles with his district-leading nine stolen bases.

Malone of old paces 76ers past Celtics

By The Associated Press

Moses Malone has one main commandment: Thou shalt not give up a rebound, especially on the offensive boards.

"Today you saw the Moses of last year, always coming up with the big play," Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham said Sunday after Malone scored 32 points and hauled down 27 rebounds — a National Basketball Association season high — with 15 of them offensive caroms. "I guess this has been the first time all year he has been healthy."

NBA

Malone's heroics, combined with 29 points by Julius Erving, paced the 76ers to a 119-114 double-overtime victory over the Boston Celtics, their arch-rivals.

"So what's new?" said Erving, who scored five of Philly's 16 points in the second overtime. "It was quite a battle. Neither team gets blown out when these two teams play each other."

Erving hit the first basket of the second overtime and Bobby Jones' layup stretched Philadelphia's lead to 107-103.

Lakers 114, Clippers 102

James Worthy came off the bench to score 26 points for Los Angeles and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 22. Derek Smith had a career-high 26 points for San Diego and Terry Cummings contributed 22. The Clippers led 79-72 lead midway through the third quarter before the Lakers reeled off a 19-0 burst to take command.

Nets 107, Knicks 94

Buck Williams had 19 points and 10 rebounds, Micheal Ray Richardson scored 11 of his 19 points in the third quarter and Albert King also had 19 as New Jersey won for the 13th time in the last 16 games and moved within one victory of clinching a playoff berth.

Jazz 121, SuperSonics 98

Adrian Dantley scored 40 points and Utah led virtually all the way in registering its 40th triumph, a record for the franchise. The Jazz also climbed within one percentage point of the Dallas Mavericks in their battle for the Midwest Division lead. The Jazz led 95-89 after three quarters and the Sonics sank just four of 22 shots in the final period when they scored just nine points, equaling the club's all-time low for one period.

Pacers 102, Bulls 99

Clark Kellogg connected on a sky hook with 14 seconds remaining and Steve Stipanovich sank two free throws with one second left as Indiana won for only the fifth time in 34 road games. Kellogg scored 13 of his game-high 25 points in the final period. Chicago's Orlando Woolridge had tied the score 98-98 on a three-point shot before the Pacers went ahead for good on Kellogg's hook.

Cavaliers 101, Bullets 96

Cliff Robinson scored 18 of his 24 points in the second half and World B. Free scored all 16 of his points in the final 15 minutes for Cleveland. The game was tied 73-73 entering the final quarter, but Free scored six points to give the Cavaliers a 79-75 lead with 9:44 remaining and Washington never caught up.

Breakers win in OT, 41-35

By The Associated Press

USFL

There are two ways to look at Johnnie Walton's 44-yard touchdown pass to Frank Lockett at 2:59 of sudden-death overtime.

Since the long-range toss gave the unbeaten New Orleans Breakers a wild 41-35 United States Football League victory over the winless Chicago Blitz, Lockett, who took the pass over his shoulder and streaked across the goal line, called it "a hell of a throw. I just turned and the ball was there."

But Chicago Coach Marv Levy had a different view. "Their guy threw a pass, our guy missed it, their guy caught it," he said.

Walton's overtime TD strike to Lockett capped a game in which the New Orleans quarterback completed 29 of 43 passes for 440 yards and four touchdowns. He hit Buford Jordan — who caught seven passes for 71 yards and rushed for 135 — on a 14-yard scoring pass in the first quarter, Dan Ross on a four-yarder in the third quarter and Charlie Smith from nine yards out with 1:52 left in the fourth quarter after Chicago had taken a 32-28 lead. The Blitz tied it 35-35 on Kevin Seibel's 23-yard field goal with no time left on the clock.

Marcus Dupree, the Breakers' leading rusher after signing a $6-million contract in the second week of the season, opened the scoring on a 1-yard run but re-injured a hamstring pull and sat out the rest of the game after carrying twice for three yards.

On Saturday, the Philadelphia Stars ripped the Pittsburgh Maulers 25-10, the Arizona Wranglers crushed the Oklahoma Outlaws 49-7 and the San Antonio Spurs edged the winless Oakland Invaders 14-10. Tonight, Birmingham is at Tampa Bay and unbeaten Michigan plays at Houston.

Generals 43, Federals 6

Herschel Walker rushed for 116 yards, his best performance of the season, and tied a league record by scoring four touchdowns as New Jersey buried winless Washington. Walker, who carried 27 times, scored on a 4-yard pass play from Brian Sipe in the first period, on runs of 9 and 3 yards in a space of 70 seconds late in the second quarter and on a 5-yard run midway in the third quarter. Sipe completed nine of 13 passes for 132 yards.

Bulls 13, Express 7

Brian Franco kicked two field goals, including a 35-yarder with just over seven minutes left. The Bulls also scored on a 58-yard pass play from Robbie Mahfouz to Willie McClendon midway through the third quarter, culminating a six-play, 77-yard drive that gave the Bulls a 10-7 lead. Mahfouz, replacing Bulls starter Ken Hobart, completed 11 of 22 passes for 183 yards. Jacksonville free safety Don Bessillieu saved the game by intercepting a Tom Ramsey pass at the Bulls' 7-yard line with a 1:30 left in the game. Ramsey came in early in the fourth quarter in relief of starter Frank Seurer.

Although the Express managed 112 yards rushing and 155 through the air, Coach John Hadl was far from satisfied. "We don't have an offense," he said. "Our defense is doing a great job. They're playing championship football. If we can get untracked on offense, we'll be all right."

Hadl said newly signed quarterback Steve Young would see action next week.

Gold 28, Showboats 24

Craig Penrose threw two touchdown passes as Denver came from behind twice, but it took Vincent White's 16-yard run with 57 seconds left to provide the victory. The Showboats led 24-21 with 2:53 remaining after Alan Reid's 1-yard run capped a 16-play drive that covered 72 yards. But Denver struck back with a 66-yard drive. The key play was a 27-yard pass from Penrose to Leonard Harris at the Memphis 25. White scored two plays later. Penrose's TD passes covered 36 yards to Scott Niziolek and 24 to John Arnold. He was intercepted once, with Memphis Terry Love returning it 79 yards for a touchdown.

Eastwood wins USF&G; John Adams ties for third

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Bob Eastwood's victory in the USF&G Classic was a triumph of perserverance.

"I knew I could win. It was just a matter of when, a matter of when I could put everything together," the 38-year-old Eastwood said Sunday after he ended 13 years of struggle and frustration by winning for the first time in his career.

He nailed down his front-running, three-stroke victory with a closing round of 2-under-par 70.

Eastwood, who led or snared the lead throughout the 72 holes, started the final round on the Lakewood Country Club course — 7,080 yards of lakes and ponds and fairways lined with oaks and moss-dripping cypress — with a three-stroke advantage.

He holed a bunker shot for a birdie on the first hole, hit a driver from the fairway and two-putted for birdie-4 on the second and never looked back. He finished with a 272 total, 16 under par.

It was worth $72,000 — more than he had won in 10 of his 12 previous full seasons — from the total purse of $400,000.

EASTWOOD LED by six shots much of the way. No one ever got closer than three. And for most of the day the drama concerned a struggle for second place.

That position eventually was secured by Larry Rinker, with a 68-275.

Doug Tewell, in second place when final round play started, dropped back with a double bogey on the third hole, taking pressure off Eastwood, and could do no better than a par 72. He was tied for third at 277 with Midland's John Adams and John Mahaffey. Adams closed with a 67 while Mahaffey scored an eagle-2 on the way to a 71.

Lady Techsters upset top rated, Texas, 85-60

RUSTON, La. (AP) — Louisiana Tech's co-head Coach Leon Barmore knows a good 20 minutes of basketball when he sees it.

In the past five years, his second-ranked Lady Techsters have had two national championships, including an undefeated season, and played four championship games.

Sunday, they booked their sixth straight trip to the Final Four by crushing No. 1 Texas 85-60 in the NCAA Midwest Regional championships, and holding the Lady Longhorns to just 16 second-half points.

"That's the best one half of basketball I've been involved with since I've been at Tech," Barmore said. "You don't hold a team like Texas to just 16 points in a half without playing good defense."

All-America Janice Lawrence led Tech scoring with 34 points — 10 of them in a string of 22 unanswered points that put the Lady Techsters ahead for keeps.

Louisiana Tech, 30-2 on the year, will meet Southern California, 27-4, Friday in the Semifinals in Los Angeles. Tennessee, 22-9, will take on Cheyney, 25-4, in the other game.

Islanders rally, 5-3

By The Associated Press

NHL

The New York Islanders showed the Buffalo Sabres what it takes to be champions.

The Sabres, one of the main challengers to the Islander dynasty which has compiled four consecutive National Hockey League titles, grabbed a 3-2 edge midway through the third period Sunday night and felt primed to knock off the champs. Then the Islanders, as they have done so often, ignited and ran off three goals in three minutes to win it 5-3.

The victory kept the Islanders in first place in the Patrick Division, one point in front of Washington, which edged Pittsburgh 4-3.

"You don't think negative," said Isles center Bryan Trottier of the comeback. "We're not going to quit until the final buzzer."

Capitals 4, Penguins 3

Washington, which has lost only once in its last 12 games, used Mike Gartner's goal with less than eight minutes remaining to edge the Penguins, who got two goals from Doug Shedden. Gartner scored on a breakaway against goalie Denis Herron, who made 40 saves in a losing cause.

Black Hawks 5, Maple Leafs 4

Chicago, winner of only two of its last nine games, recorded a key victory over Toronto in the race for the final playoff spot in the Norris Division — the only postseason berth still up for grabs. The host Black Hawks moved five points up on the Leafs with three games remaining for each team.

Rangers 3, Canadiens 2

Rookie goalie John Vanbiesbrouck, making only his second NHL start and first in more than two years, stopped 23 shots. The host Rangers' forward unit of Mark Osborne, Anders Hedberg and Mark Pavelich each had two points, with Osborne getting the game-winner on a powerful slapshot in the second period.

Flames 4, Canucks 4

Jere Gillis scored in the third period to lift Vancouver to the deadlock with the visiting Flames. The Canucks lead fourth-place Winnipeg by two points in the Smythe Division race — but the Jets have two games in hand.

Oilers 3, Jets 2

At Edmonton, the Oilers got all of their goals in a 67-second span, then held off Winnipeg, which has lost five straight. Glenn Anderson capped a super week — he scored six times — with two goals in a span of 15 seconds in the opening period, then Wayne Gretzky scored his league-leading 85th goal to finish off the flurry.

Flyers 4, New Jersey 1

The host Flyers won their sixth straight game to remain five points ahead of the Rangers and three behind second-place Washington in the Patrick Division. Brian Propp had his second two-goal, one-assist game of the weekend.

Nordiques 6, Whalers 6

Rookie Sylvain Turgeon's 40th goal, with 2:19 left, lifted the host Whalers to the tie. Tony Currie paced Hartford with three goals, his second career hat trick.

Stoudt learns to tackle

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Cliff Stoudt, the new quarterback of the Birmingham Stallions of the USFL and former Pittsburgh Steeler signal-caller, has a quick wit.

After one game for Pittsburgh last fall, in which he was intercepted three times, Stoudt was asked if he had learned anything from that experience.

"Yeah," he said. "I learned how to tackle."

Reagan plays down 'boom-bust' cycle

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — On its face, the news was spectacular — the economy during the first three months of 1984 is growing far faster than many had thought possible, booming ahead at an annual rate of 7.2 percent.

But instead of celebrating, Reagan administration officials went out of their way last week to play down the news — a seeming contradiction for an administration counting on a strong economy to propel the president to re-election.

The trouble is that 7.2 percent growth is, in the eyes of most economists, too much of a good thing. It raises fears that an overheated economy will bring a return to double-digit inflation.

"We're now moving into a danger zone," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for the Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb investment banking firm. "If the economy doesn't slow down, we will likely have problems in terms of higher inflation and financial strain."

Edward Yardeni, chief economist for Prudential-Bache Securities, was even more blunt.

"This is increasingly starting to look like a boom-bust economy," he said. "The boom is creating large increases in private credit demand, which in combination with the government's borrowing needs is pushing up interest rates."

White House economic adviser Martin Feldstein, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and other administration officials deny the economy is overheating.

Baldrige sought to minimize the 7.2 percent growth by calling it a statistical aberration, caused by the weather and other factors. He said slower growth is coming, which would leave the gross national product for the year expanding at a more modest 4.5 percent.

GNP, the total value of goods and services produced by the economy, grew by 3.3 percent last year.

Baldrige no doubt hopes his words will be heeded by the Federal Reserve Board. The administration has been trying to convince the board and its chairman, Paul Volcker, that the economy is not expanding too rapidly. If the Fed moves to tighten credit, officials fear, it could kill the economic recovery before the November elections.

Many economists believe such pleas have fallen on deaf ears. They are predicting the Fed could move as early as this week to raise the discount rate, which it charges on loans to banks, for the first time since December 1982.

Some are predicting the Fed will act following closed-door meetings Monday and Tuesday of its Federal Open Market Committee, the central bank's 12-member policy-making panel.

While such an action would calm the economy down, higher interest rates also could choke off the consumer spending and business investment needed to keep the recovery alive.

"The Fed is on the horns of a dilemma," said Michael Evans, head of an economic forecasting firm here. "If it tightens now, it nips inflation in the bud, but it stalls out the recovery. If it waits, then the recovery will be moving along, but so will inflation."

The trouble with economic recoveries is that they all end. An analysis back to 1854 shows the longest recovery in U.S. history was the expansion from 1961 to 1969, a record 106 months. The typical expansion since World War II has lasted 40 months.

Jack Carlson, chief economist for the National Association of Realtors, said the current expansion, which began in November 1982, may behave more like the 1980-81 recovery, which lasted 15 months.

"With the 7.2 percent GNP estimate, it raises the chances that this will be a shorter recovery," he said. "We are already starting to see bottlenecks develop in some industries and inflation beginning to rise."

Midland real estate on a roller coaster

From Staff Reports

Midland's real estate markets has had its ups and downs in recent years and in all probability will continue in the same manner in the years to come said Sara Newsom, president of the Midland Board of Realtors.

According to W.L. Born, assistant research economist with the Texas Real Estate Research Center at Texas A&M University, Midland's existing-home market was still slack during the first half of 1983 compared to the same time one year ago.

According to statistics released by the center, Midland showed a decrease in listings with Multiple Listing Services and a 20 percent decrease in the number of existing home sales.

However, according to Newsome the second and third quarters of 1983 were varied.

"Instead of an expected down turn in volume and price we have a roller coaster effect attached to the figures," she said.

The dollar volume of sales was off 27 percent compared with the second quarter of 1982 and the average existing-home sales price declined about 9 percent.

During the thrid quarter of 1983, 92 new homes and 273 existing homes were closed for a combined total volume of almost $34.5 million ($9,796,894 and $24,643,592 respectively).

The average selling price of a new home during this time was $112,002 compared to $113,271 during the same quarter of 1982. Existing homes averaged $90,642 for thrid quarter 1983 and $94,189 for the same quarter of 1982.

"I would compare 1983 to an escalator going down," Newsom said. "I think we'll see a gradual upswing in 1984, however it will not be a big upswing. It's going to take awhileto get back in the black but by the last half of 1984 I expect to see more activity and more sales."

Born said the Texas housing market is recovering strongly from the 1981-82 recession with a 24 percent increase in MLS existing-home sales in the first six months of 1983 compared to the 1982 semi-annual average.

"A continuation of supportive depositor savings rates and mortgage interest rates will serve to maintain this trend," he said.

According to Newsom, activity in Midland's real estate market is increasing.

"January and February were rather slow months but we expect March and April will reflect this recovery. Activity is up. We're experiencing more calls, walk-ins, showing and people making offers."

Born agrees, "There is a continued indication that homeowners are enjoying modest returns from investing in single-family housing which is still keeping ahead of inflation."

Statistics compiled by the research center indicate the dollar volume of loans increased during the second quarter nearly 32 percent from the preceeding quarter, with construction and residential loans leading the upswing.

In addition, the center reported statewide total net new savings fell 30 percent from the first quarter. Average conventional mortgage rates were up nearly three-quarters of a percentage point compared to the prior quarter.

Born said a major change in the savings rate at nearly all savings and loan institutions occurred during the second quarter.

"New 'super' NOW accounts and insured money-market funds authorized in December 1982 and January 1983, respectively, temporarily attracted savings from other institutions. This created an S&L savings bulge in 1982's fourth quarter and 1983's first quarter."

Her mother, Jane Warren, left, and her grandmother, Marie Allen Sullivan, right, also were American flight attendants. American Bank move ok'd

From Staff Reports

Midland American Bank's request to move its offices from 4415 Northgate in northwest Midland to downtown has been approved by the State Banking Board. The bank has also indicated it will add $1 million in capital.

The board had delayed action at its Feb. 28 meeting after deciding the bank needed to increase capital to meet anticipated increases in lending which is expected to result from the move.

Banking Commissioner James L. Sexton said Midland American has agreed to increase capital by $600,000 before or at the time of its move and add $400,000 within 60 days of the move.

Sexton said a meeting of the bank's shareholders was necessary to approve issuance of stock to provide the increased capital.

At a hearing on the domicile change held Jan. 10 in Austin, Sarah Carter, bank president, said Midland American's present location is in an area which hasn't developed as expected because of an economic slump and that the slower development had led to the decision to relocate the bank.

HAWTHORNE, Calif. — Financially troubled Mattel Inc. has won a reprieve from its lenders, giving it 11 months to repay $349 million in domestic debts.

Under the agreement disclosed last week, however, the company may not borrow more money from its banks and must operate from cash on hand and from the proceeds of the previously announced sale of four Mattel businesses.

Repayment could be difficult, since the company has pared its businesses to toys, which probably will generate only $100 million in operating profits in a stellar year, according to some analysts. The full amount is due Feb. 2, 1985, but Mattel must begin making payments Nov. 15.

When asked whether Mattel expects to pay the entire amount, Vice President Spencer Boise said, "The company expects that a significant portion of the loan will be repaid by then."

One banker familiar with the seven-month negotiations said that the new arrangement is not a permanent restructuring of Mattel's financing. "This allows the company (executives) ... to run the whole season the way they like and then give the banks the opportunity to see how well they do," he said, adding that his bank still has confidence in current Mattel management.

The new agreement's terms appear to keep Mattel on a short leash, and "that saves face for the banks," said Barbara Isgur, a securities analyst with Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins Inc. in New York.

Mattel's Boise said that as part of the loan agreement, the company has promised "to attempt to recapitalize the company and rebuild its equity, and that could be done in a number of different ways."

The possibilities include a merger, cash infusion from an outside company or some form of public offering, Boise said.

The company had negative net worth of about $150 million at the close of its fiscal year on Jan. 28, Boise said, adding that the financial results for the year would be available Thursday. He declined to say how much cash the company has on hand, but some analysts have placed the sum at more than $100 million.

Another $112 million should be available to the company when the sale of the four businesses is completed. Mattel already has received $68 million from the sale of its publishing and printing business, $20 million for its electronics business and $12 million for its semiconductor manufacturing plant.

The sale of its hobby business for $12 million has not been completed, Boise said.

In addition to its domestic debt, Mattel owes about $50 million to foreign lenders, Boise said Wednesday.

Dollar down; Gold mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar slipped against major currencies in early trading today. Gold prices were mixed.

Gold opened in London at $388.20 bid an ounce, down from Friday's late bid price of $388.50, but moved up in later trading. London's five main bullion houses set the mid-morning "fixing" at $388.50.

In Zurich, gold opened at $388.10 bid, up from $388 bid late Friday and rose another 30 cents in later trading.

Both currency and bullion dealers described the markets as dull and said there was scant evidence of firm trends.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before it begins in Europe, the dollar closed at 225 yen, down 1.40 yen from Friday's 226.40.

In London, the dollar declined nearly half a cent against the British pound, which cost $1.4410 in early trading compared with $1.4370 late Friday.

Early dollar rates against other key currencies compared with late rates Friday:

-2.6085 West German marks, down from 2.6300.

OIL INDUSTRY NOTES

Mitchell reports acquisition of wells

THE WOODLANDS, TX. — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. has reported the acquisition of a 5/6 interest in eight shallow oil wells and approximately 990 acres of leases in Upton County.

The company said it paid $3 million for the interest in the wells and leases, all of which are above the 3,000-foot level in the Castle Gap Field area of western Upton County.

Mitchell will become the operator of the properties and plans further development in the area. The interest it acquired was formerly owned by several individuals and firms.

Mitchell is a large independent producer of oil and gas, and is a major developer of real estate in the Houston-Galveston area.

Lands withdrawn from exploration

WASHINGTON — Federal lands totaling 136 million acres have been withdrawn from oil and natural gas exploration and development, a study by the American Petroleum Institute reveals, and 149 million acres are temporarily withdrawn while under consideration for closure to mineral development.

If al 285 million acres are permanently withdrawn, the report points out, it will mean that more tha one-third of the federal lands will not be available for oil and gas leasing. In addition, some federal land that technically is available for leasing has been informally withdrawn under land management plans and practices.

Pipe line construction to remain active

HOUSTON — Pipe line construction will remain active during the next 15 years, according to the recently published "Worldwide Pipe Line Outlook — 1984 and Beyond" issued by Pipe Line Industry magazine, a Gulf Publishing Co. publication.

Between now and the end of the century, it is estimated that upwards of 100 major international pipe line systems will be built, reports Don Lambert, editor of the Houston-based trade magazine.

Lambert expects U.S. 1984 construction to total 6,682 miles. Of this total, 2,083 miles will be for gas transmission; 1,528 miles for gas gathering; 525 miles of crude lines, including about 200 miles of the All-American line; 486 miles of crude gathering lines; 1,530 miles of product lines; and 530 miles of ofshore oil and gas lines.

Natural gas appliances using less energy

ARLINGTON, VA. — A study by the American Gas Association shows that natural gas appliances used less energy in 1982 than they did in 1975.

The study, "Gas Consumption by Residential Appliances," is based on data from gas utilities nationwide.

In the residential sector, consumers with gas furnaces used 29 percent less gas in 1982 than they used in 1975. Gas range consumers used 25 percent less in 1982 than in 1975 and gas water heater energy use was down 18 percent. Air conditioner energy consumption declined 27 percent per ton during the period.

ENSTAR completes tenth gas well

HOUSTON — ENSTAR Petroleum Co. a division of ENSTAR Corp., announces that it has completed the tenth natural gas well in its Mestena Grande Field in Jim Hogg County, Texas.

The Montalvo No. 1 tested at a daly rate of 1.7 Mcf gas and 75 barrels of condensate with a flowing tubing pressure of 1,250 psi on an adjustable choke. Te well, which is an extension of the Mestena Grande Field, was completed in the Queen City formation over selected intervals between 9,446 and 9,549 feet.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a small loss today amid lingering interest-rate uncertainties.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped .95 to 1,153.89 by noontime.

Losers held a 4-3 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said traders were proceeding cautiously, with the Federal Reserve's policy-setting Open Market Committee meeting this week.

Some analysts believe the Fed will decide on measures to tighten credit, if it has not already done so, and thereby exert some new upward pressure on interest rates.

If nothing else, economists say it is likely that the central bank will soon raise its discount rate — the charge on loans to private financial institutions — to bring it into line with other rates that have risen lately.

Southwest Forest Industries gained 2 to 21½. The company said it agreed to be acquired for $24 a share by a group of private investors through a leveraged buyout — a type of transaction in which the assets of a company are typically used as collateral to help finance its purchase.

Walt Disney Productions rose 1⅛ to 65. The company has been the subject of continuing takeover speculation.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .12 to 90.23. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .41 at 209.08.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 28.94 million shares at noontime, against 36.84 million at the same point Friday.

Consumers not yet stumbling under weight of new debt

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — Households aren't yet stumbling under the weight of their debt burdens, but a slight shuffle is causing some concerned glances, and not just from the ever-vigilant Federal Reserve.

Consumers are carrying a heavy load these days. They went deep into debt for mortgage and car payments early in the recovery, and more recently they have been running up a lot of lesser, credit-card debts.

In fact, net installment debt — loans minus repayments — during the first year of the recovery increased faster than income, a rarity. Generally speaking, post-recession buyers watch their money more closely.

As Continental Illinois Bank puts it, "Consumers have displayed a stunning eagerness to take on debt in this recovery," an observation documented by a $125 billion net expansion of consumer debt last year.

The pace of household debt accumulation also rose as the year progressed. During the fourth quarter of the year it leaped by a 12.4 percent annual rate, the sharpest in more than four years.

In spite of this, the ratio of installment debt to personal income rose only moderately to 13.4 percent this January from 12.8 percent in November 1982. Rising incomes held it down. It remains below the 15 percent of 1979.

Those figures, however, might tell only part of the story.

Jack Lavery, chief economist at Merrill Lynch, notes that the value of household assets is slipping, even if incomes are rising. "A cautionary note would seem to be in order," he says.

A little background: Between mid-1982 and mid-1983 the stock market advance added $530 billion to the financial net worth of the household sector, quite likely giving a substantial boost to consumer confidence.

But the market no longer is booming. Household psychology no longer is buoyed by expanding financial asset values. Equity holdings in the last half of 1983 declined by $44.5 billion. And the decline continues this year.

At the same time there has been a disturbing note from the credit markets. The prime rate has risen one-half percentage point to 11.5 percent, and few people would be shocked to see another rise to 12 percent.

What happens beyond that point is just a guess, but experience shows that rates can continue to rise to shocking levels. There is no automatic cap on interest rates. Ask anyone who had a floating-rate loan in 1981.

What will the impact be when a family's adjustable rate home mortgage begins to rise? That's the question nobody can answer; never has the nation had to face that situation, simply because adjustable rate mortgages — ARMs — were rare before the 1980s.

They are rare no more. Lavery points out that $106 billion of new mortgage debt was assumed last year, with a progressively larger number of mortgages being of the ARM variety.

In the final three months of the year, in fact, 53 percent of the new loans had adjustable rates, and the percentage has risen this year. Many of these loans are uncapped; there is no contractual limit to their cost.

Such mortgages present a situation, therefore, in which the debt burdens of households could increase without any further expansion of debt.

Combined with a deterioration of stock market assets, should that continue, the ARMs potentially could produce a rapid run-up in the debt-to-income ratio.

Nobody says with any great degree of certainty that it will happen. Nobody knows if it will happen. But it could happen, and that explains why the debt-to-income ratio might become a popularly watched figure this summer.

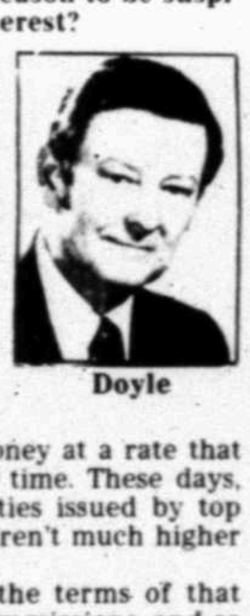
Double-check interest rate, details in insurance firm's IRA

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have been looking for an individual retirement account that pays high interest and found an insurance company offering 14 percent. That is considerably higher than anything I have found at banks and savings and loan associations. Do I have reason to be suspicious about that generous interest?

A. You won't know until you double-check the interest rate and all other details of that insurance company's IRA. I suspect you will find out that the company credited 14 percent interest to IRAs in the past and that the rate has since been reduced.



Doyle

When you have an IRA with an insurance company, your money goes into an annuity. Depending on the terms of the particular annuity, the company adds interest to your money at a rate that can be changed from time to time. These days, the "accrual rates" on annuities issued by top quality insurance companies aren't much higher than 11.5 percent.

Also, be sure to study all the terms of that annuity — especially the commissions and-or other charges. Some companies levy a front-end commission when you buy, reducing the amount of money in your account. Others levy a rear-end commission in the form of a surrender charge, if you take your money out within a specified period of time — typically seven years.

Most insurance companies charge annual administrative fees on annuities. Those costs can reduce the interest that builds up on your IRA.

Q. I opened an insurance company annuity individual retirement account and deposited $2,000 in it in 1982 and 1983. Last year, the interest on my money was 9.7 percent, but I was charged $193.99 as a yearly service fee. I realize I made a mistake.

Do you have any suggestion as to what kind of IRA would be best suited for my needs, which are high interest, low or no charges and safety?

A. My suggestion is to shop around at a number of banks and savings and loan associations. Compare the interest different banks and S&Ls pay on IRA savings certificates. Ask about annual fees. Some banks and S&Ls lay on such fees. Most don't.

Assuming a bank has Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage and a S&L has Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. coverage, you have no worry about safety.

After you have picked a bank or S&L to your liking, open an IRA there and make your 1984 IRA contribution. You'll probably want to move the money you now have in the insurance company IRA. But don't do that until you find out if you'll be hit with a surrender charge.

It's unclear if vasectomies up risk of heart attack

Dear Dr. Solomon: What's all this talk about men who have had vasectomies having a better chance of getting a heart attack? Have I gone from the frying pan into the fire? Tell me it ain't so. — Dave, Bellingham, Wa.

Dear Dave: Concern about an increased risk of cardiovascular disease first arose when it was reported that vasectomy accelerated the onset of atherosclerosis in monkeys. Human studies, however, have not shown an increased risk in men who have undergone the procedure.

These, of course, have been short-range studies. Long-range studies will have to wait until a sufficient number of men who have had vasectomies are older.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father-in-law has been diagnosed as having Parkinson's disease. He is 68 years old. Is this something that all people will get if they live long enough? — Beatrice, Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Dear Beatrice: Parkinson's disease is a common neurologic disorder but it does not affect all elderly people. In fact, it has been estimated that it is found among 2.6 percent of those over 85 years of age.

Nor is Parkinson's disease limited to elderly people. Although the average age onset is close to 60 years, some patients develop symptoms before age 30, and even children have been diagnosed as having the disorder.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I went to my doctor because I was having some heavy bleeding, and he started asking me about how things were going and whether I was upset about anything. If I had wanted to see a shrink, I would have gone to one, but I expect a gynecologist to act like a gynecologist. Don't they learn the difference in school? — Mrs. E.Y, N.Y.

Dear Mrs. Y.: At the risk of upsetting you even more than you appear to be, I must say that a physician does not have to be a psychiatrist to be concerned about a patient's situation over and beyond the specific symptom that brings the patient to the office. I'm concerned about what's happening with my patients, and I am neither a psychiatrist nor a gynecologist.

But your physician had even more reason to inquire aout your general situation since the excessive bleeding you mention may be associated with emotional factors. In fact, according to Dr. Maurice Greenberg, of St. Bartholomew's Hospital in London, psychotherapy in some women may correct a problem that otherwise might require surgery.

If whatever menstrual difficulties you may be experiencing are the result of depression, for example, your gynecologist would have been remiss not to explore that area with you. This does not make him a psychiatrist, only a competent physician.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that if a person has psoriasis he can't get cancer? I've heard this from more than one person. — Gertrude, Teaneck, N.J.

Dear Gertrude: There is at least one study that suggests there is no association between psoriasis and a lower incidence of cancer.

Answer to today's Crossword Puzzle

Senate may consider merger moratorium

WASHINGTON (AP) — The recent announcement of $29 billion in oil company mergers is prompting Senate consideration of a halt to more petroleum industry takeovers while Congress studies their economic impact.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., hoped this week to win Senate approval of a six-month moratorium on mergers among the 50 largest oil companies. The ban would be attached to a bill providing additional U.S. aid to El Salvador.

Johnston ordinarily is an ally of the oil industry. But with three of the biggest corporate mergers in history announced in the last month, Johnston said, some study is in order to determine what effect the mergers have on oil exploration and on the economy in general.

In recent weeks, Standard Oil Co. of California announced it will pay $13.2 billion for Gulf Corp.; Mobil Corp. said it plans to pay $5.7 billion for Superior Oil Co., and Texaco Inc. has said it will pay $10.1 billion for Getty Oil Co.

Johnston agreed last week to drop an effort to block the Socal-Gulf and Mobil-Superior mergers.

But he cited Wall Street estimates that $44 billion to $51 billion in additional mergers "wait in the wings ... unless the U.S. Senate steps in and does something about it."

Johnston, who is the senior Democrat on the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, said every dollar devoted to the takeovers is a dollar not used for oil exploration.

"Congress at this time is flying blind on a question which fundamentally affects the energy future of this country," Johnston told the Senate last week. "... If we fail to act, it is clear that the country irrevocably will have lost the ability to look at the question of merger mania."

Johnston's rider would be attached to a multimillion-dollar aid package for El Salvador that is likely to be controversial in its own right.

Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said last week the Senate will vote Tuesday or Wednesday on a plan to provide an additional $61.7 million for El Salvador in the current fiscal year.

Baker wanted to bring the bill to a vote last week, but liberal Democrats led by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said no action should be taken until after Sunday's presidential election in El Salvador "when we will have a clearer idea about who will be receiving the resources and what kind of a regime we will be supporting."

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R.-Kansas, shakes hands with witness Don Schnacke of the Kansas Independent Oil and Gas Association at the conclusion of a field hearing of the Senate Commerce Committee in El Dorado. The hearing was to consider the Kansas impact of the Texaco-Getty merger. U.S. Rep. Bob Whittaker, R.-Kansas, is at far left. (AP Laserphoto)

Interest spotty in options

NEW YORK (AP) — Is the index option market creating too many options?

That's a question investors seem to be asking given the spotty interest in some of these relatively new investments. Yet four new index options made their debut this past week, and more are expected.

By buying or selling an index option, the investor is in effect betting on whether the index will rise or fall during a specific period. The option also can be used as a hedge against adverse price changes in the actual stocks included in the index.

The underlying stocks do not change hands in index options; investors instead collect cash for the difference between the value of their options and the value of the index.

Indexes carrying options are divided between those covering a broad list of stocks and those covering a narrowly based list, also called a subindex, that usually is restricted to stocks in a particular industry.

A broad index is the Standard & Poor's 100 Index, whose options are traded on the Chicago Board Options Exchange, while a narrow one is the American Stock Exchange's Computer Technology Index, which has 30 issues.

The four new index options lifted to 15 the total number now available. The four newest ones are subindex options and include two based on eight telephone stocks and two based on 20 transportation stocks.

Both the New York Stock Exchange and the CBOE unveiled indexes composed of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and the seven regional telephone companies created by the Bell System breakup last Jan. 1.

The CBOE and the Amex introduced the transportation index options.

Yet with 15 index options to choose from, investor interest varies widely as shown by the trading volume one day this past week. And it appears the broader indexes are more popular — for now — than the subindexes.

The Philadelphia Stock Exchange's Gaming-Hotel Index generated trading of only two contracts that day; the CBOE's Computer-Business Equipment Index also had just two contracts traded.

The Amex's Computer Technology Index recorded 3,316 contracts, but that still paled when compared with the 146,435 traded in the most-popular option — the CBOE's Standard & Poor's 100 Index.

The NYSE's new telephone index generated 492 trades, while the CBOE's telephone index recorded 118 trades.

Why are many of the subindex options so thinly traded?

"Lack of public and professional interest," said Stewart Winner, manager of Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.'s options marketing department.

Bell children may turn back on Ma Bell

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like wayward children who sever all ties with home, the seven Bell System companies may soon be turning their backs on Ma Bell and her best known product — long-distance phone service.

Two of the seven Bell companies created by the breakup of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. are already experimenting with using long-distance circuits from AT&T's competitors for their corporate business calls. Those two are Ameritech and Nynex.

Four of the other five — BellSouth, Bell Atlantic, Pacific Telesis and Southwestern Bell — say they're actively exploring the idea. The one exception is US West. But even there, spokeswoman Barbara Smith says "it's not something we would ever rule out."

"We are definitely looking at it," says Pete Hoffman, a spokesman for Bell Atlantic. "We (Bell Atlantic employees) all received a memo recently noting we have to pay our own long-distance telephone bills now and urging that we be judicious with our calling. Our internal telecommunications bill is pretty high and it's only natural we would look to outside competitors."

"We're looking at our phone costs just like any other business does," added Bill Hensley, a spokesman for Ameritech, which is now using some circuits from AT&T arch-foe MCI Communications. "And that means actively looking at other carriers besides AT&T."

While the amount of telephone traffic at stake appears relatively small at this point, few competitors of the old AT&T ever thought they'd see the day when local Bell companies would consider abandoning AT&T. Not surprisingly, they like the idea.

Permian Basin artifacts

Margaret Bissell, above, fondly remembers the days she and her late husband, Col. C.E. "Bud" Bissell, spent collecting artifacts in the Permian Basin. Shown here are but a few of the projectile points, animal bones and other items that comprise the 40,000-piece Bissell Collection at the Museum of the Southwest. "Midland Minnie", right, is believed to have been in her mid-30s when she died about 9,800 years before Christ did. On top of being the oldest human remains ever discovered in the Permian Basin, she is also one of the oldest human fossils ever found in North America.

Cartridge casings, spurs, pieces of horseshoes and the emblem from a powder flask of a U.S cavalryman are among the more "modern" artifacts in the Bissell Collection.

Ancient bones.

Stone spear tips dating to 12,000 B.C.

Spurs, pieces of leather, glass bottles and other reminders of the more recent past.

They're all part of the 40,000-piece Bissell Collection of artifacts found in the Permian Basin during 30 years of work by Col. and Mrs. C.E. Bissell of Midland and donated to the Museum of the Southwest after his death in 1977.

"They looked at other museums and decided to put the collection here," said museum Staff Archeologist Eunice Barkes, whose job includes identifying, preserving and storing the items under terms of a three-year grant from the Weyman-LaForce Fund.

"Its prime significance is that it's the best documented collection of artifacts I know of," she added. "Other collections carry no information as to where the artifacts were found or information that would give an indication of the behavior of the people who used them."

The meticulous record-keeping by the Bissells at the time of discovery has been an invaluable aid for students and scholars as they study the objects and try to fit them together into a slowly developing picture of early civilization in the Southwest.

"I think the reason 'Roots' was so popular is that we need to know where we came from and where we're going," said Mrs. Barkes.

"Each item, in its own way, is important to scholars. No one piece is any more important than the other. Each adds its own bit of information to the total picture — like a jigsaw puzzle in 3-D.

"The students learn archeological and museum techniques by working with the collection and getting it in proper order."

In addition to UTPB students, volunteers from the Midland Archeological Society help get the artifacts in shape for research. "They do everything from sorting and identifying the pieces to running to the store for boxes," said Mrs. Barkes.

"We try to look at artifacts as sort of the fossilization of human behavior. It would help if we had a computer. It isn't easy when you're dealing with 40,000 items and 20 to 30 bits of information about each item."

Bissell was a retired U.S. Army officer who had been stationed at Midland Air Base during World War II. He was also an amateur archeologist who, along with his wife and family, devoted one day a week to going out and gathering artifacts from around the area, according to Mrs Barkes.

"He also swapped, traded and was given a few artifacts by other collectors," she noted. "One antelope bone dates to perhaps 9,000 B.C. Some of the pieces that were given to him were not scientifically dug and the data have been lost."

Although the collection is stored in the museum's basement and is used primarily for study purposes, selected pieces have been — and will continue to be — put on display at periodic public exhibitions.

In addition to the Bissell Collection, the museum houses a plaster replica of the cranial remains of "Midland Minnie" — the Permian Basin's earliest known resident and one of the oldest human fossils ever found in North America.

It's believed "Minnie" (Her scientific name is Midland Man) was in her mid-30s when she died about 9,800 B.C. She was discovered by pipeline welder and amateur archeologist Keith Glasscock while he was working on the Scharbauer Ranch southwest of town in 1953.

The original cranium is safely stored at Southern Methodist University and Glasscock now lives in New Mexico.

Conservationists pitted with private enterprise

EL PASO (AP) — A dry, treeless peak in the Franklin Mountains of West Texas may appear barren of life to visitors, but it has sparked a controversy that pits conservationists who live in its shadow with a real estate developer.

"The mountain may not be a big deal to some people, but it's beautiful in our eyes," said Robert Gilbert, president of the Kern Place Association, the neighborhood group fighting plans to build on the mountain. "The mountain is the heart of our community. ... We don't want to see it scarred and defaced."

The subject of the confrontation between private enterprise and conservation is Crazy Cat Mountain, a peak two miles from downtown El Paso.

At Kern Place, the neighborhood abutting Crazy Cat, residents say their area is one of the oldest and most charming communities in a city afflicted by urban sprawl.

Residents told the Dallas Times Herald the proposal would ruin their community, spoil their cherished mountain and cause drainage and traffic problems.

Rolando Madero, a mild-mannered architect, is their opponent. He says he is a distant relative of Francisco Madero, the revolutionary leader and president of Mexico from 1911-13.

Madero, of El Paso, says it's his land and he can do what he wants with it as long as it's legal. He denied that damage will result from development on the mountain.

He also said landscaping for Madero Hills, the proposed 35-acre subdivision on the slope, would improve Crazy Cat Mountain.

"I did not purchase the property so the residents of the community could contemplate its beauty," Madero, motioning toward the treeless mountain, said. "I believe this is a free country, and I believe in the free enterprise system."

Next month, the city council is scheduled to decide whether Madero can proceed with plans to build the first six of 75 homes, valued at $200,000 each.

An angry crowd of more than 200 neighborhood residents on March 13 criticized council members. Councilmen asked Madero to supply additional studies on whether the mountain could be developed safely. Madero claimed it could be done.

Madero said that he will file suit if the city does not allow him to build the subdivision.

Residents doubt the council will block the plan. They said the city in the past has failed to protect the Franklins from developers. They point to the scarred 4,700-foot peak of Crazy Cat, on which a developer built Sierra Crest, a subdivision the city allowed in 1975 despite vociferous objections from area residents.

"The city really has to put its foot down and say, 'The mountains are a centerpiece of El Paso, they're an extremely important part of our identity," Gilbert said, "and we need to protect them. And that the protection of that centerpiece far outweighs any developer's economic interest."

Below average rainfall has ranchers worried

ODESSA (AP) — Below average rainfall this year has West Texas farmers worried that the drought of 1983 isn't over yet.

The National Weather Service station at Midland Regional Airport has recorded 0.58 inches since Jan. 1. The average for the area is 1.51 inches by the end of March.

Said Zan Matthies, a Pecos County agriculture extension agent, "If we don't get any rain, I don't know if there's going to be any agriculture."

Weather service official George Lucas says the area went into a "dry cycle" in 1983, but that the level of rainfall this year is not a matter for alarm yet.

"I think it's typical," he said. "We get most of our rain starting about April and running through July."

Upton County Judge Peggy Garner said ranchers have told her they will wait for rain until June, then face selling out.

During the drought last year, the weather service recorded 10 inches of rain, compared with an average of 13.7 inches.

By October, there was plenty of rain, but some of the growth it sparked was killed by frost during the severe winter.

"We really didn't get any snow," Matthies said. "Our range conditions are in real, real bad shape."

The drought brought federal aid to many West Texas counties last year, including low-interest emergency loans and discount feed. Cotton farmers faced a double whammy because the low yields caused by the weather were coupled with a federal program that paid them not to plant.

"It's really become worse and worse," said Ms. Garner. "When it clouds up and then doesn't rain, it makes you feel like there's not much of a chance."

She said federal aid will be of little help if drought conditions continue.

"I'm not going to be looking for any more aid," she said. "There's not any point that I can see."

County agricultural leaders estimated last year that ranchers sold from 25 percent to 85 percent of their herds.

Matthies said many ranchers who cut back on livestock last year have not restocked and now may face further cutbacks. "Our numbers are still pretty much down," he said.

"The ones who haven't sold out have spent about double (on feed) what their stock is going to bring when they sell it," said Ms. Garner.

David Davis, an area supervisor with the Texas Department of Agriculture, said there has not been enough rain to bring the area out of the drought of 1983.

"It really depends on what kind of rain we get this spring and summer," said Davis. "A good rain now would help."

Paramedics making Big Bend safer area

STUDY BUTTE, Texas (AP) — A group of emergency medical technicians and paramedics have made the area around Big Bend National Park a safer place, using donated equipment that includes an ambulance purchased with proceeds from a chili cookoff.

Paramedic John Alexander is one of two full-time medics participating at the Terlingua Medics Emergency Aid Center, a non-profit organization made up of volunteers who serve south Brewster County and the park.

Volunteers placed a ranch worker who had complained of chest pains early one morning in the new ambulance, purchased with proceeds from a Terlingua chili cook-off in November.

Alexander said he checked the man's heartbeat on a monitor donated by country and western singer Willie Nelson. The paramedic then determined that the man needed hospitalization. He was sent to the nearest facility, 80 miles away.

The ranch worker was under observation at Big Bend Memorial Hospital in Alpine within two hours. Alexander said he then returned to the aid center to await the next emergency in an area bigger than the state of Delaware.

"If it weren't for him, we'd be back to the old days of throwing a mattress in the back of a pickup truck," Brewster County Judge Tom Connor told The Dallas Morning News. "I can remember the days where there was no emergency service down there. John is invaluable."

Paramedic John Alexander stands by his ambulance near Study Butte, Texas. Officials in this West Texas community said a group of emergency medical technicians and paramedics has made the area around Big Bend National Park a safer place, using donated equipment including an ambulance purchased with proceeds from a chili cookoff.

Alexander and licensed vocational nurse Ann Carr, whom he calls his "sweetheart," are the full-time medics.

Since October 1981, the medics have had a contract with the county to provide emergency health care to residents such as the ranch worker. This year, the medics entered an agreement with the U.S. Park Service to assist in visitors' emergencies, which typically involve hiking injuries.

The Interior Department added $50,000 to the park's 1984 budget, and Alexander said most of that will be used to buy supplies and keep the ambulance gassed up and ready for action.

Paramedics say they must be ready for anything. The job can involve major traffic accidents or can lead the medics into some of the most remote and rugged territory in Texas.

"The park people figure that 300,000 people visit every year. We figure that there are about 1,000 people per day in our service area, which is about 3,000 square miles," said Alexander.

The Big Bend lacked a full-time ambulance service until 1980, when Alexander moved from Denver, where he worked 13 years in the ambulance business.

Alexander, who came to the Big Bend to work in the Texas Outward Bound program for teen-agers in the early 1970s, said the lack of medical services he saw in the region prompted him to take paramedic training when he returned to Denver.

He said he went through an ordeal that made him want to learn how to save lives. At 16, he came upon a traffic accident and helplessly watched a man who had been injured in the wreck choke to death in his own blood.

Anti-abortion protesters discourage women at clinic

HOUSTON (AP) — Paul Bail says his group of protesters has discouraged 26 women from going into Houston's Planned Parenthood clinic for abortions — an achievement he sees as equivalent to preventing 26 murders.

Members of Catholics United for Life have gathered outside the clinic almost every day since October to try to talk women out of undergoing abortions, said Bail, a psychologist who leads the group.

Clinic workers call it harassment.

"I find it kind of sickening and sad," said Peter J. Durkin, executive director of the clinic. "Labeling people as 'baby butchers' is an extreme use of the language."

Evelyn Roebuck said she became one of the activists after having an abortion two years ago.

"My husband didn't want me to have it," she said. Ms. Roebuck said she remembered being told "there was only a little piece of meat hanging there they were going to take out."

Afterward, she said, "I felt guilty. I knew I had committed murder."

Durkin said other Houston clinics sometimes have protesters, but his is the most frequent target of the anti-abortionists. He blames that on the building's accessibility — the entrance is next to a city sidewalk — and Planned Parenthood's high profile as an advocate of birth control.

Navaho workers continue long tradition

LUMBERTON, Texas (AP) — Spending long hours pounding metal spikes into railroad tracks is tough, grueling work.

But Emmis Bahe says he and his blood brothers must put food on the table back at the reservation.

Bahe and 29 other Navaho Indians make up a Santa Fe Railroad crew that is camping in Lumberton this month repairing tracks between Lumberton and Silsbee.

The 25-year-old Bahe says job opportunities are scarce on the Navaho reservation in New Mexico and many Indians have no choice but to take jobs away from home to feed their families.

"It's not so bad for me because my family are farmers; we can feed ourselves. But some of the guys have wives and children to support and no way to do it on the reservation," Bahe says. "Many of us are homesick, but Santa Fe pays good and at least we can work together."

The crew works eight hours a day, pulling up track, replacing rotting wooden ties and nailing down rails again. Crew foreman Michael Knight says the all-Indian crew has replaced a mile of track a day since work started March 5.

"These people are the best workers I've ever seen. They don't complain or take sick," Knight says. "They are all business on the job. I never see them wind down."

But after pounding metal all day, the Navahos relax by watching television in four bunk cars where they sleep, listening to popular and traditional Navaho music or making Indian jewelry to sell in Lumberton.

"Some of the older guys are more into tradition, so they practice the tribal songs and speak only Navaho," machine operator Arthur Yazzie, 24, says. "But most of us listen to rock or country music."

Although the Navahos are far from home and have no medicine man or chief with them on the crew, the tribe's traditions are not forgotten, Yazzie says.

Man jailed on murder, attempted rape charges

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 19-year-old Midland man remained in the Ector County Jail Monday on charges of capital murder and attempted rape stemming from a incident early Saturday morning in the southwest part of Ector County.

Pablo Madrid Galindo, 19, Midland, is being held on $100,000 bail, after being charged with the murder of Mark Defee, 29, and attempting to rape Defee's wife, Kelly. Reports indicate the Defees were asleep in their home in what is known as the Pleasant Farms area of the county about 3:30 a.m., Saturday, when Ms. Defee awakened to find a man in their bed with them.

A struggle ensued in which Defee was shot. He was pronounced dead at the scene with multiple gunshot wounds. Ms. Defee reported the suspect then attempted to rape her, but she escaped to a neighbor's home where she called the sheriff.

Another call from residents living about one half mile from the crime scene that a man knocking on their door had blood on him led sheriff's deputies to arrest Galindo shortly thereafter. He was initially arrested for unlawfully carrying a weapon, but charges of capital murder and attempted rape were filed when the caliber of the pistol he was found with matched that of the bullets in Defee.

Church service honors El Salvador's clergyman

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — Lutherans attending a memorial service for El Salvador's slain Archbishop Oscar Romero say that whatever the outcome of the presidential election in the embattled country, the military will remain in control.

"Most of the opinion in El Salvador is that a decision (in the election) will make no difference," said Rev. Ray Flachmeier of Ascension Lutheran Church, where the Sunday service was held.

"The military will still be the most powerful force in El Salvador," said Flachmeier, who led the memorial service. "The elections are there to give the (Reagan) administration the illusion of democracy."

Returns, delayed by power blackouts and rebel fighting, were expected today from Sunday's election. Salvadorans were choosing a president from among eight candidates.

The strongest candidates were Jose Napoleon Duarte of the centrist Christian Democrat party, Roberto d'Aubuisson of the ultraright Nationalist Republican Alliance and Francisco Jose Guerrero of the conservative National Conciliation Party.

"If d'Aubuisson is elected, it will provide the Grenada scenario," said Flachmeier, who visited Washington, D.C., this week as part of Central American Solidarity Week.

Sunday's hour-long service was sponsored by the Interreligious Task Force on Central America and the Dallas Chapter of the U.S. Committee on Solidarity With the People of El Salvador.

The service included readings from the archbishop's sermons and prayers dedicated to Romero, who was assassinated March 24, 1980 while saying Mass.

Ernesto, a Salvadoran man who is living in Dallas under sanctuary by Holy Cross Catholic church, attended the ceremony with his family.

Center out of this world

DALLAS (AP) — A 38-year-old inventor says his amusement center, complete with simulated Laser weapons and other trappings reminiscent of Buck Rogers, goes one step beyond video games and other arcades.

Eerie crimson and emerald lights pulse within the darkness, scented mists rise slowly in the air and helmeted figures lurk in the shadows, waiting to zap customers with guns that fire bursts of light.

George A. Carter III, inventor of Photon, told the Dallas Times Herald he is banking that many teen-agers and young adults soon will be knocking down the doors to get into his futuristic arcade, which simulates an alien planet.

His Star Wars-style entertainment center is scheduled to open Friday. It puts players into a simulated alien world where they carry light phasers and participate in space battles.

Photon's easy-going bearded inventor is shooting for a share of the luctrative young-adult entertainment market that has poured tens of millions of dollars into video arcades and outdoor entertainment parks.

"There's nothing like it in the world," said Dan Allen, Photon's marketing director.

And Marianne Kroeger, assistant director of the International Association of Amusement Parks and Entertainments in Wood Dale, Ill., says she's unaware of any other amusement facility like Photon.

It cost more than $500,000 to develop and build all the center's gadgetry, said Carter.

Photon players suit up as space warriors, donning minicomputer packs and Darth Vader-type helmets complete with audio systems and light sensors.

To play Photon, participants lurk around a cavernous 8,500-square foot arcade that pulses with colored lights, is shrouded in fog and throbs with eerie music.

Odessa man in critical condition

ODESSA — An argument in a southside bar early Monday morning has left a man in critical condition in the intensive care unit of Odessa Medical Center Hospital.

Rafael Lopez Garcia, 22, Odessa, was listed in critical condition this morning at the Odessa hospital after being stabbed at 1:30 a.m., today at the El Rancho Grande lounge on the south side of Odessa.

Police were not releasing the name of the suspect, a 22-year-old Hispanic male, who was being held pending arraignment later today. Reports indicate Garcia and the suspect had an argument over a woman Garcia had brought to the bar and that Garcia emerged from the bar's restroom bleeding profusely from the neck after entering with the suspect.

Witnesses said they saw the two men enter the restroom and the suspect carrying a knife. Police found Garcia on the floor of the bar, with employees holding the suspect for their arrival.

Fire damages mobile home kitchen

Fire of undetermined origin heavily damaged the kitchen of a mobile home owned by Jerry Vorheis on County Road 113, about a half-mile north of East Highway 80, shortly after 4 p.m. Sunday. Four fire department units responded to the call and firemen spent more than two hours at the scene.

Mealtimes turn into real zoo for animal 'kitchen'

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — In Dan Fry's kitchen, there are no substitutions without permission.

If the order calls for frozen blueberries for the birds of paradise at the San Diego Zoo, then blueberries it will be.

If the monkeys require cabbage every day, then they will get cabbage, regardless of price.

As the head of the zoo's food warehouses, Fry is required to buy what's been ordered for the zoo's collection of 3,400 animals, birds and other species. He can't judge on his own to choose grapefruit when oranges are too expensive.

"We can't substitute," he said, "because animals' diets must be carefully controlled to assure proper nutrients. Also, some animals need time to adjust to a different food."

Actually, he can vary if necessary, but first must go through a chain of command of zookeepers, curators and veterinarians who collectively develop animal diets, said Dr. Phil Robinson, director of veterinary services.

As may be expected, animal diets are a hot topic at the zoo, which must provide tasty, nutritional food to be eaten as readily as "fresh kills" or plant life in the wild.

CNS Photo

Susan Krinske of the San Diego Zoo watches a Kikuyu Colobus monkey zero in on his lunch.

"FOOD IS just as vital to these (zoo) animals as it is to us because they are in captivity and don't have the opportunity to choose different food items which might provide them with a balanced diet," explained Duane Ullrey, a Michigan State University professor of animal nutrition.

Ullrey is periodically consulted by San Diego Zoo veterinarians and others who have major responsibility for deciding what the animals eat, how to ration the food and whether animals' diets should be supplemented with vitamins and minerals.

"It used to be that the animals were fed pretty much by somebody who had something to throw in there," recalled Robinson. "We fed them second-rate produce and day-old bread."

Now it's table-quality food, consultations with Ullrey and dietary changes as needed to keep the animals healthy, Robinson said.

Interest in animal nutrition has increased during the last 15 years, due in part to efforts to breed endangered species in captivity. "Part of the real pressure" is to improve dietary conditions among zoo animals, Robinson said, so that they will reproduce.

THE OTHER reason, of course, is the central import of the general health of zoo animals and those in the field are becoming aware of its significance.

"We are gradually coming out of the Dark Ages ... but it's a slow process," Robinson said. "The principal areas of focus on animal nutrition have been pet animals and livestock. Livestock has gotten the most concern because of the economic concern to raise healthy animals."

Zookeepers, curators and veterinarians keep each other informed about animal diets and whether the animals are thriving or perhaps showing signs that indicate need for a dietary change.

For example, two of the zoo's red howler monkeys from South America died within the past year. One was an adult, the other a juvenile about 1 year old. Autopsies revealed soft bones, and observation also indicated the problem because the juvenile had trouble hanging on to its mother, Robinson said.

They have consulted Ullrey, who says the minerals in the diet must be balanced. The professor is working on ways to do just that, Robinson said, adding that the other monkeys appear to be doing fine as they may be eating a wider variety of the foods put out for them.

Once the diets are developed or changed for any of the animals, they are sent to Fry, who must procure the items and have them prepared in appropriate quantities.

ANNUALLY, CONTRACTS are awarded to the lowest bidders who will provide everything from the 99,900 pounds of mackerel needed in a year to the 46,400 pounds of sweet potatoes and 31,560 pounds of bananas. The zoo's 1984 animal food budget is $502,500.

Fry's four warehousemen prepare the day's menus, following written instructions on amounts of food all the animals should get.

For example, the monkey area gets 8 pounds of fresh green beans, six heads of cabbage, 20 carrots, 50 apples, 26 hard-boiled eggs, 45 oranges, 65 bananas, 10 bunches of kale, 40 sweet potatoes, five stalks of celery, 10 bunches of spinach, one bunch of broccoli, two papayas and three ears of corn.

The foods are delivered at various times during the day to the appropriate animal enclosure, including the animal hospital and the zoo's Primate Propagation Center, a breeding area.

Like most of us, Fry must live within his food budget, which is predicated on the previous year's actual costs and estimates of future costs, including seasonal fluctuations such as those caused by inclement weather.

For example, he banks on some produce costs rising well beyond normal costs because of snow, freezes or other weather that may cause a low supply of certain fruits or vegetables.

SO HE'S prepared to pay the $22 it costs now for a 45-pound case of cabbage — which normally sells for $7.50 a case. It's in short supply because of cooler weather in areas like Texas, where cabbage is grown, local produce suppliers said.

Zoo menu includes fish, eucalyptus leaves

Copley News Service

Ever wonder what animals at the San Diego Zoo eat? With annual allotments of such foods as 99,000 pounds of mackerel, 46,400 pounds of sweet potatoes and 31,560 pounds of bananas, it is easy to see that foods are abundant, fresh and varied. Listed below are basic daily diets for a few of the 3,200 animals of 750 types of species at the zoo.

ALASKAN BROWN BEAR
(adult)

6 apples
6 small mackerel
4 hard-boiled eggs
25 lbs. omnivore biscuits

ARMADILLO
(adult, fed once a day)

1 cup feline food
1 hard-boiled egg
1 mm multivitamin with iron
1 cup baby cereal
1 can sow's milk replacer

The entire mixture is mashed to a mushy consistency before serving.

GORILLA
(adult male)

3 oranges
3 apples
2 bananas
½ onion
1 qt. monkey chow
3 sticks celery
2 sweet potatoes (partially boiled)
1 head lettuce
2 carrots

Also, some hibiscus or palm branches along with some hydroponic oats or barley.

HORNBILL

6 ozs. bread and milk
4 ozs. soaked raisins
6 ozs. chopped apple
4 diced tomatoes
3 ozs. shredded lettuce
½ banana, diced
4 ozs. chopped orange
6 ozs. soaked dog chow
1 oz. soaked trout chow
1 hard-boiled egg

KOALA

The Koala diet is highly specialized. They live entirely on eucalyptus leaves. The zoo has approximately 56 varieties of eucalyptus trees, but the Koalas seem to eat only about 16 of these. The only additional food source given the Koalas is salt blocks which are placed in their housing quarters.

LORY

Lories are small- to medium-size members of the parrot family. Following is a daily diet for 100 birds:

20 apples
2 heads lettuce
½ lb. trout chow
Sugar water
¼ lb. ground carrots
2 loaves bread
¼ lb. soaked raisins
Vitamin powder

This entire mixture is put into a blender, liquefied and placed in hanging feeders in their enclosure.

MONKEY
(colony of nine)

1 head cabbage
1 bunch spinach
1 head kale
1 lb. green beans
1 large carrot
9 hard-boiled eggs
5 apples
5 oranges
5 sweet potatoes
1 bunch celery
3 ears sweet corn

Note: The Kikuyu Colobus monkeys are atypical in two respects. First, they don't like bananas as do all other monkeys at the zoo. Second, they do like eggs and sweet corn, unlike the others.

ELEPHANT

100 lbs. Sudan hay
5 qts. barley
5 qts. bran
1 dz. apples
1 dz. carrots
1 dz. oranges
1 dz. yams
50 lbs. alfalfa pellets

SEA LION
(two, fed twice a day)

5 lbs. Spanish mackerel

Monkeys test AIDS theory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Healthy monkeys injected with a laboratory-grown virus got sick with a simian form of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, a discovery that might help reveal the cause of often-fatal AIDS in humans, a researcher says.

"This is the first time that simian AIDS has been transmitted by a laboratry-grown virus," said Dr. Preston Marx, a virologist at the California Primate Research Center in Davis.

Marx said his research group isolated a "type D retrovirus" from the blood of a rehesus monkey sick with simian AIDS.

The virus was grown in tissue culture, then injected into three juvenile monkeys, causing them to contract simian AIDS.

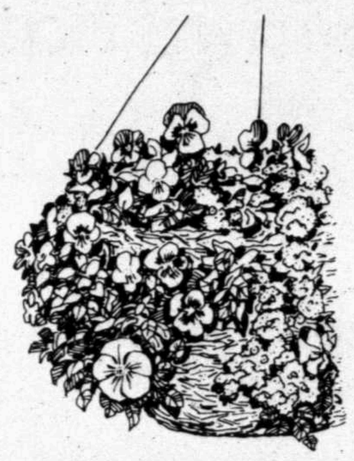
Hanging baskets allow gardening in vertical spaces

By ELVIN McDONALD

One of my favorite places to visit is Roger's Gardens in Corona del Mar, Calif., which is in Orange County, near Newport Beach, an hour or so south of Los Angeles. It is widely known both as America's largest and most beautiful retail garden center.

The idea of gardening in vertical spaces was pioneered at Roger's, not in espaliered plants, which are an old idea from Europe, but in hanging baskets that are flat on one side, designed to be hung against a wall. Each includes several varieties, such as sweet-alyssum, pansy and parsley.

Right now at your own local garden center or nursery you will likely find this very kind of container, as a quarter-sphere wire basket, or perhaps a similar shape in plastic mesh, as a plastic wall pot, or in terra-cotta, Mexican pottery or glazed ceramic.



With a basket garden, plants can be grown in tight spaces.

Not only does the vertical garden let you turn a wall into a place to grow plants, it lets you take advantage of narrow spaces that might otherwise be useless and bare. What you hang where depends first on the light. A wall facing east receives direct but relatively cool rays of sun. This is the place where achimenes, cascade tuberous begonias and fuchsias might be used.

Walls facing south or west need the most heat-tolerant plants: Trailing or upright succulents, things such as crassula, echeveria, aeonium, assorted cacti and other desert succulents. Portulaca might also be used, as well as ice plant. Cascade and ivy geraniums also come to mind.

North-facing or other shaded walls, indoors or out, are the place for ferns, impatiens, possibly achimenes. Indoors, in wall areas that receive about two hours sun I use wall pots for columnea, aeschynanthus, episcia, ivies and trailing philodendrons.

Q. How can I revive a potted dwarf pomegranate? I have been growing this plant about ten years and have a certain fondness for it. While on a recent trip my plant sitter forgot to water this one pot; most leaves are yellow or on the floor, but there are tiny green buds showing.

A. I think your dwarf pomegranate will survive. In fact, it will die sooner from standing in water than from being dry a few days.

Late winter and early spring are the best times to prune and repot this lovely flowering plant. It makes an excellent choice for training to standard or tree-form and also for shaping as an all-year indoor bonsai, for a sunny window garden or maxi-light setup (four 40-watt tubes over a bench 2x4 ft.).

I grow dwarf pomegranate in equal parts soil, sand and peat. It needs neutral to alkaline pH, however, so scratch a teaspoon dolomitic limestone into the surface soil every few months.

Q. What causes twigs and branches of my Norfolk pine to drop? I have raised it for ten years from a small plant. It grew nicely until last fall when twigs and lower branches turned brown and dry.

A. To some extent this behavior is natural for Norfolk pine. Outdoors the shedding of lower branches occurs with age, as the seedling or cutting matures into an evergreen tree. As a house plant the condition you describe is encouraged by letting the soil become too dry between waterings, insufficient light and occasionally by an attack of red spider-mites.

To check for mites, which are essentially too small to be seen with the naked eye, shake a paling branch over a sheet of paper. If dark specks fall and soon begin to move across its surface, your tree has spider-mites. Spray with a houseplant pesticide labeled specifically as a miticide.

Quick Take: A cracked thumb may be more the sign of an active gardener then a green one. Rubbing with lanolin or Avon's Silicone Glove after gardening helps. When you are doing lots of potting or digging with your hands, try wrapping the most exposed fingertips with adhesive bandages, as orchid growers do.

Q.T.: Nancy Story, who teaches horticulture at Meadowbrook Farm, Meadowbrook, Pa. 19046 (215-887-5900), says it helps topiaries, espaliers and other plants in training to spray or dip them with a fungicide (Benomyl is one) following any major stress — such as potting, repotting or pruning. She says that dipping is better for topiary forms stuffed with mosses such as sheet and sphagnum, to ward off any potentially harmful organisms they might contain.

Q.T.: "How to Grow Fuchsias" by Brian and Valerie Proudley is a brand new paperback from Blandford Press, $4 U.S., $5 Canada. If not at your bookstore, write Sterling Publishing Co., Inc., Two Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016.

Teens find summer jobs by being persistent

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: If you aren't a teen-ager or if you have no teen-aged children, grandchildren or friends who want a summer job, skip this column.

Employers are looking for good kids to hire, just as good kids are looking for good jobs. It may take some time to make the proper connections, so it pays to start looking early.

Spring is the time to line up summer work, and fall is the time to nail down a Christmas job. Some tips:

Start looking early. Check with your school. Schools often have job listings available and can put you in touch with local community service organizations for jobs in your neighborhood.

Ask EVERYBODY. People will keep their ears open for jobs for you if you convince them you're ready, willing and able.

Go from store to store and speak to the manager. Don't telephone! You will have better luck if you present yourself in person.

Follow up. If they don't call you, call them. Be persistent, but don't make a pest of yourself.

Be realistic. Minimum wage for a not-so-hot job may be the best you can do this year, but think of the experience you can gain, and how impressive that experience will look on your resume next year.

Check your newspapers under "Employment" or "Help Wanted" — especially on Sunday. Call early in the day; the jobs may be snapped up quickly.

When you're out for a stroll, keep your eyes open. Many establishments place "Help Wanted" signs in their windows.

Some places likely to like you: Baskin-Robbins, Kentucky Fried Chicken, Dairy Queen, McDonald's, Wendy's Old-Fashioned Hamburgers, Burger King, Taco Bell, movie theater concession stands, adventure parks, pet stores, vets, hospitals, drugstores.

Some of these places have very strict rules concerning job applicants because of the access to drugs. Expect a thorough check, and don't bother applying if a personal check on your habits would turn up drug use.

Also check: summer camps, summer resorts, restaurants and coffee houses, stores, large and small.

The above is from a dandy little Ballantine paperback titled "Jobs for Teen-Agers" by Ilene Jones.

It contains a wealth of information for teen-agers who really want to work. It's available at your local bookstore for $2.25 (and is worth it). Or write to: Ballantine Books, Dept. TA, 201 E. 50th St., New York, N.Y. 10022. Add 50 cents for postage and handling for each copy ordered.

Get going — and good luck. (Luck is preparation waiting for an opportunity.)

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Mail-order shopping tricky for gardeners

Hearst Feature Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — Gardeners have legal rights too, when it comes to purchasing supplies by mail.

Although most firms doing business by mail are reputable, disappointment sometimes result from clerical mix-ups, supply shortages or damaged merchandise, all of which can frustrate the consumer, cautions consumer educator Josephine Swanson.

And while the Federal Trade Commission rule for mail orders protects consumers, the rule does not apply to seeds or growing plants, said Swanson, a teacher at the New York State College of Human Ecology at Cornell University.

For satisfactory mail-order shopping, Swanson suggested checking the mail-order firm's reputation with friends or consumer agencies. Always remember the old consumer caveat, she advised: If it sounds too good to be true, it usually is.

"Consumers should consider all costs of ordering, including charges for shipping," she said. "It might be cheaper to buy locally." Swanson said you also should determine the firm's policy for refunds, repairs, replacements, substitutions and availability of merchandise — before you buy.

"Some gardening material, particularly live plants and bulbs, may not be available year-round, and the firm may not be able to ship a particular item immediately," Swanson said.

Do not send cash, the Cornell educator stressed: "Use a check, money order or credit card for proof of purchase, and keep records of all transactions, including a copy of the catalog or advertisement.

"Do your part. Fill in forms accurately. Print, don't write, and give your complete mailing address."

In general, you have a right to know when mail-order merchandise will be shipped, Swanson said.

"If a company fails to meet its stated deadline, it must notify you and set a new shipping date. You can agree or cancel the order for a full refund. If the delay will be less than 30 days, you must send in a reply or the company will assume you agree. If the delay will be longer than 30 days, you have to give your consent or the company must return your money," she said.

An order that arrives damaged or spoiled can be sent back by writing "refused" across the package. But if it is opened, the purchaser must pay the return postage, Swanson advised.

"If upon opening the package you discover the material is unsatisfactory or damaged, write to the company, but do not return the merchandise until you receive a reply to your letter. Garden-supply companies in particular may not want you to return damaged plants or defective plants or bulbs," she said.

"If you have a complaint, begin with the company. A majority of consumer problems are resolved with the business," she said. If the company does not respond to your satisfaction, turn to a local or state consumer protection agency for recourse. The complaint should be filed also with a regional office of the Federal Trade Commission.

If you suspect fraud, a U.S. Postal Service inspector may be able to resolve the dispute. Contact your local postmaster, Swanson advised.

SALT SHAKE-OUT EVOLVES AT CAMPBELL SOUP COMPANY

Twenty years of research and development led to these three new low sodium ready to serve soups that have specific cooking applications.

Over the last 20 years, food production has undergone an evolution in response to consumer trends. Consumers' demand for "light" foods that are not only good tasting, but good for them, have sparked Campbell Soup Company's development of new low Sodium Soups as well as a "salt shake-out" in all Campbell products, according to H. Pierce Pelouze III, marketing Director, Soups & Special Projects at Campbell Soup Company.

Campbell first began marketing low sodium soups designed for consumers on salt-restricted diets in the early '60's. This consumer group was limited -- less than five percent of the population -- and research showed there was dissatisfaction with the taste of the low sodium canned soups, said Pelouze. Through these and other experiments with soups containing varying levels of sodium content, Campbell determined that reduced salt levels would give soups -- as well as other products -- the most broad-based acceptance, said Pelouze. "The key was to meet the special dietary needs of a small but growing consumer group of salt avoiders while maintaining the good taste that has been our strength over the years."

Campbell's New Low Sodium Soups were introduced in late 1981 with advertising commencing in early 1982 directed to health care professionals -- doctors and dietitians. Increased awareness of the salt issue prompted articles in consumer magazines and newspapers. In February, 1982, Campbell responded to the consumer's need for nutritional information by voluntarily including sodium labeling on all soups and broths. "Ninety-six percent of our canned soups are now sodium-labeled, and we are moving to be at 100 percent this year," Pelouze said. "In addition, over the past two years, unannounced sodium reductions ranging from four to twenty percent have been made in 22 Red & White Condensed Soups and 19 Chunky Soups. This reflects our corporate commitment to a sodium reduction program, but again keeping in mind the paramount importance of good taste," he said.

Pelouze noted other low sodium/no salt products are offered by Campbell Soup Company. "We have marketed low sodium 'V-8' Juice since 1974, in the fall of 1983 we introduced Prego No Salt Added Spaghetti Sauce and additional products are in other stages of testing," he said. While the low sodium market is relatively limited, the forecasted growth of the 40- to 50-year-old age group, as well as senior citizens (65+) -- both of which are affected by hypertension -- means an increased need for reduced sodium products in the future, Pelouze said. "Campbell Soup Company is working responsibly with its efforts on our regular products and our low sodium product development."

Singer Michael Jackson holds six of the eight Grammy Awards given to him in Los Angeles on Feb. 23. Jackson's "Thriller" album broke sales records in 1983, helping the music industry out of its four-year slump.

Record companies change their tune

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After four years of singing the blues, the music industry is dancing to a happier tune — the sound of cash registers ringing amid a financial and creative renaissance.

Nobody did it better in 1983 than Michael Jackson's "Thriller," which has sold some 32 million copies worldwide to become the best-selling LP of all time and contributed substantially to CBS Records Group's $109.4 million in earnings — a leap of nearly 500 percent over 1982.

But other record companies celebrated too, with other albums scoring multimillion sales: "Synchronicity" by the Police, the "Flashdance" soundtrack, Def Leppard's "Pyromania" and David Bowie's "Let's Dance," to name a few.

But perhaps the most welcome development was the emergence of many new faces on the Top 10 album and single charts. Groups like Men at Work, Eurythmics, Culture Club, Def Leppard and Duran Duran injected new artistic and commercial life into an industry that for a while seemed trapped in a time warp in which only veterans had a chance at success.

The recovery was not dramatic for all — giant Warner Bros. experienced a decline in earnings for its U.S. record labels — and no one is betting on a return to the music industry's glory years of the 1970s, when growth rates of 15 percent and 20 percent were not uncommon.

But observers say last year's rebound gives the lie to those who feared pop music was permanently on the skids.

"It's as healthy as it's ever been — it's diverse, it's vital," says Arista Records chief Clive Davis. He always maintained that the slump was never as severe as it was made out to be, but rather reflected the general economic conditions of the last four years.

But a slump it certainly was, and perhaps because the music business had so many boom years it came as a shock to many. According to the Record Industry Association of America, the value of domestic record and tape shipments tumbled from $4.31 billion in the peak year of 1978 to $3.59 billion in 1982.

During the four-year period, record companies cut hundreds from their staffs — and dozens from their artist rosters.

The RIAA has yet to compile its 1983 year-end figures, but all indications are that they will show healthy gains. The National Association of Record Merchandisers has already noted that average sales of the thousand-odd stores it surveys were $53,430 per month last year, compared to $47,589 in 1982 and $46,276 a year earlier.

Also, the huge sales of "Thriller" contrast sharply with the 3 million or so copies of 1982's top sellers, "Asia" and John Cougar's "American Fool."

What happened? Industry observers offer several theories, including the emergence of rock video through its primary outlet, the MTV cable channel, and a simultaneous decline in the video game business, which for a while seemed to be siphoning off young people's entertainment budgets.

Some say music simply got better last year.

"There was really more exciting music around," says Polygram Records, Inc. President Guenter Hensler, who estimates that such LPs as "Flashdance" and Def Leppard's "Pyromania" helped his firm to a 25 percent sales increase.

Much of the credit for getting that music to its audience is given to MTV, the Warner-Amex channel, which for the first time gave new bands an alternative to radio as a means of national exposure.

"Consumers were asking for records that weren't on radio, so they must have seen them on MTV," said NARM consultant Joe Cohen. "It gave exposure to groups like Duran Duran, Stray Cats, Men At Work — groups that may not have been heard of ever again if it were not for the MTVs in the world. We're seeing a changing art form and a generation of new consumers who are embracing it."

MTV — and a handful of big-city stations that got good ratings playing new music — also convinced American radio to drop its resistance to newcomers. The Police, for example, released their first album in 1979 and even had a minor hit with "Roxanne," but it took another few years for them to become a staple on rock radio.

The record industry also helped itself by re-examining its marketing strategies. The extended play (EP) record, with five or six songs, and the 12-inch single have become popular ways of introducing bands without the expense of a 10- or 12-cut album.

Psychologist discovers that nastiness pays

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — While still in college, Teresa Amabile noticed that students and junior professors always asked the most biting, vicious and obnoxious questions at scholarly conferences.

Now that she is Dr. Amabile, psychologist and Brandeis professor, she is trying to discover what makes people brutally critical of others' intelligence. And she believes she has the answer:

People who are insecure about their own intellectual standing go on the offensive by questioning the brain power of others. And it works. Supercritical people really do give the impression they're smarter.

In short, nastiness pays.

Ms. Amabile has conducted experiments on college students to test her theories about "negativity," as she calls it.

"We have evidence that people tend to be more negative in assessing other people's intelligence if they themselves are intellectually insecure for some reason," she said.

"Does it serve any purpose? Does it convince people that you are smart? It seems that the answer is 'yes.' A very loud 'yes.' "

She acknowledged that she had picked an ideal environment to research backbiting. Universities are, after all, famous for intellectual hissing. But she thinks her findings also apply to ordinary life — to any situation where someone feels slightly inferior in the IQ department.

Those who cast aspersions pay a price, however. They're not viewed as very nice people.

Ms. Amabile found that ruthless critics are seen as insightful but mean, brilliant but cruel. On the other hand, those who have something positive to say are considered to be undiscerning but affable, plodding but friendly.

Her work, published in the Journal of Experimental Social Psychology, began with an attempt to compare the behavior of students who felt secure and those who did not.

Forty-four students were paid to serve as "experts" to review essays on social problems. Some were told they would keep jobs no matter what. The rest were led to believe their future in the program depended on how impressively they conducted their first analyses.

Half of the students also thought they were working for a graduate student, while the rest thought the boss was a psychology professor.

When the results were in, those who believed their jobs were in jeopardy were far more critical of the essays than were their colleagues. And the professor's students were nastier than the graduate student's — even though all, in reality, were working for Ms. Amabile.

Next, 104 students were asked to assess the intellect of an actor who was being interviewed on videotape. Half thought the experimenter was a sophomore undergraduate, while the rest thought she was a graduate student working on a doctorate.

Again, those who thought their opinions would be judged by someone with high academic credentials were far more scathing.

So it seemed clear that people go for the jugular when they think their own gray matter is in question.

The third study set out to learn whether this "impression management tactic" really works.

Ms. Amabile found two book reviews — one glowing, the other damning — written by the same critic and published the same Sunday. To confuse matters even more, she produced two versions of each review by changing words like "inspired" to "uninspired" and "successful" to "unsuccessful." Then 55 students assessed the writers' intellectual and social qualities.

"The negative reviewer was overwhelmingly rated as more intelligent," she said. "At the same time, he was seen as cruel."

The students thought the positive reviewer was less intelligent but "compassionate, forgiving, open-minded and kind."

When somebody writes a blistering critique, she believes, it may say as much about the reviewer as about the play, book or movie being judged. New reviewers, especially, may try to prove their intellectual muscle by ripping a work to shreds.

Ms. Amabile remembers her own days as a newly minted Ph.D. asked to review studies submitted to a psychology journal.

Developer of polio vaccine wants to wipe out measles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Albert Sabin, developer of an oral polio vaccine, has a new goal at age 77: worldwide use of his vaccine against measles, which kills about 1.5 million children each year.

"In the tropical, economically underdeveloped countries of the world, measles remains a killer, the way it was in other countries earlier," Dr. Sabin said.

"What I have been working on for the last couple of years is immunization by inhalation of an aerosolized vaccine," he said in an interview. He has developed a small plastic mask that nonprofessional people can use to vaccinate children who breath the aerosol for 30 seconds.

Sabin explained that, in underdeveloped countries, it is necessary to administer the vaccine to children before they are six months old because that is when they can get measles and perhaps give it to other children.

This differs from the measles vaccine most American youngsters receive by injection when they are about a year old.

"In the developing countries, you've got to have something that can be used in a mass way, by people in the community who don't have much training. You've got to have a method that doesn't require needles and syringes," Sabin explained.

"In some underdeveloped countries, it is being done by people in the community who have maybe two or three years of schooling," he said. "Measles could be eliminated in one year, but that requires organization."

The medical researcher said polio, which paralyzes hundreds of thousands of people a year in countries where vaccines are seldom given, also could be wiped out.

"I would like to influence certain events so that both polio and measles are eliminated," he said.

"I have friends who say, 'What's the good of saving the lives of those children who are going to suffer from poverty and other things?' I answer by saying 'One at a time. You concentrate on seeing that everybody gets fed or clothed and eventually all these needs will be taken care of.' "

Sabin said there is no alternative to medical research, despite the little progress that has been made on arthritis, multiple sclerosis and other health problems.

"We may be going about it the right way or the wrong way, but we have to keep going. You don't reach the endpoint very quickly. There are many things you have to study and you don't do it alone. But then there is somebody who persists longer, and that makes the difference. There were many people who worked on a vaccine against polio, but didn't continue."

Beach Boys guitarist marries

Jardine

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Beach Boys guitarist Al Jardine was married in a private, poolside ceremony attended by other members of the famed "California-style" rock group and conducted by a minister who's apparently not a devoted follower of the surfing sound.

Before Jardine's marriage Saturday night to Scottsdale marketing executive Mary Ann Helmandollar, 27, the Beach Boys sang "an appropriate wedding song," said the Rev. William Smith.

"I'm not familiar with the name but it was very nice, very appropriate and well received," he added.

The ceremony was conducted before some 300 guests at a private home on a mountain overlooking the metropolitan Phoenix area, band publicist Sandy Friedman said Sunday.

Jerry Lee Lewis hospitalized for reaction to drug

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Jerry Lee Lewis was in stable condition at the Regional Medical Center early today after being hospitalized for an apparent reaction to a muscle relaxant, officials said.

Lewis, 48, became ill at his Nesbitt, Miss., home Sunday night after taking a muscle relaxant for a sore shoulder, said J.W. Whitten, the singer's road manager.

The entertainer was taken to Methodist Hospital here and later was transferred to the Regional Medical Center where he was listed in stable condition, said nursing supervisor Lorraine Donavant.

Ms. Donavant refused to release any other information.

Whitten said Lewis complained of dizziness and experienced some swelling in his right hand and also had some numbness in his right leg after taking the relaxant.

Lewis is best known for his rock 'n' roll hits, "Whole Lotta of Shakin' Goin' On" and "Great Balls of Fire."

Film on Adam's death sparked action, his parents say

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Five months after the national telecast of a docudrama about the abduction and murder of their 6-year-old son, the parents of Adam Walsh remain both awed and unsettled by the film's impact — grateful for the many positive effects and disturbed that it took a TV movie to inspire them.

Here last week to film a new ending to "Adam," which NBC plans to air again April 30, John and Reve Walsh, their 19-month-old daughter, Meghan, playing quietly nearby, said that the two-hour movie seemed to raise "the consciousness of the country" about the thousands of children who are kidnaped, abused, molested and killed each year.

"For two years I went around this country begging congressmen and law enforcement people to talk to me," John Walsh said. "Now we go to Washington and everyone will talk to us."

THAT IS ONLY one example. In a remarkable testament to the power and influence that TV can wield, the Walshes ticked off a string of events that have followed in the wake of "Adam's" broadcast Oct. 10:

—Eleven of the 55 missing children whose photographs were displayed at the end of "Adam" have been found, plus two siblings who also were missing.

—Impressed by the success of the movie in finding those youngsters, the five TV stations that NBC owns jointly launched a weekly feature on their news programs to help find other missing children. Two have been located since the series began in January.

—The Reagan administration allocated $1.5 million to help establish a National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. John Walsh has taken a year's leave from his business, and the family plans to move to Washington, D.C., in the next few weeks to help set up the center, which initially will have a staff of about 25. (Long-range funding from Congress is still pending.)

—Viewers voluntarily contributed a total of $87,000 to the Adam Walsh Child Resource Center, a non-profit organization that his parents set up near their home in Hollywood, Fla., to work on behalf of missing, abused and neglected children.

—The resource center was so inundated with requests for its printed educational material — what kids need to know to help protect themselves, how parents can set up a court monitoring system to keep tabs on the sentences being meted out to child molesters — that "we've never been able to catch up," Walsh said.

—The FBI, which was portrayed negatively in "Adam" for opposing Walsh's efforts to allow parents to put information about missing children into the agency's National Crime Information Center, "has really come around," Walsh said. "They got some national publicity that they didn't want."

PRODUCED BY Linda Otto for Alan Landsburg Productions, and starring Daniel J. Travanti and JoBeth Williams as the Walshes, "Adam" won its time period and was the seventh most-watched program the week it aired, attracting an audience of more than 19 million households.

The drama recounted how Adam was kidnaped from a shopping mall on July 27, 1981, and, despite a massive search effort spearheaded by his parents, was found dead two weeks later.

It then depicted how the Walshes' grief ultimately was channeled into a successful effort to win passage of the Missing Children Act, which allowed parents and local law enforcement agencies to enter and retrieve information from the FBI computers about missing children and established procedures for law enforcement agencies to exchange information about unidentified bodies that they have found.

"The movie has broken so much ground," summed up Walsh, 38. "It proved Linda's contention — that the American public is willing to deal with serious subject matter."

"You just have to talk their language," Reve Walsh, 31, added. "Television is the American language."

Sitting in a conference room at Landsburg's production offices here, where Otto also runs an organization called Find the Children, the couple admitted that they find this conclusion less than comforting.

"It's a sad commentary," Walsh said, "that people needed a prime-time television show — not a documentary, not a PBS show but an entertainment form — to form their priorities on what could happen to their children. It's there in the newspapers every day ... but all of a sudden they see a TV movie and decide that things aren't right."

THAT DOES NOT mean he does not appreciate the results, however. Walsh believes that it is just such a fundamental shift in priorities that is needed — especially among lawmakers, law enforcement officials and the media — to ensure the future safety of the nation's young people.

"It's time to stop worrying so much about Lebanon, about the quality of education, about nuclear proliferation," he stressed, "because when you have to go to the morgue to identify your child, or if your child is molested, those other things don't matter so much."

The Walshes talk with amazing calm about Adam and his gruesome death. The pain and anger remain — "People have labeled this (the problem of missing children) a national epidemic. It's a national disgrace is what it is," Walsh snapped at one point — but they have been funneled into a fervent campaign to effect social change.

By their own description, tragedy has transformed them from complacent middle-class parents into missionaries struggling to reform the laws and personal attitudes that affect the well-being of all children.

"It took an incredible coward to murder Adam, a 6-year-old boy," Walsh said, "but I believe we would be cowards if we didn't do anything about it."

The point he makes now is that, contrary to the impression that "Adam" may have left, the fight for legal reform did not end with President Reagan's signing of the Missing Children Act in Octobe, 1982. That was "rudimentary legislation," he maintained.

Woman filmmaker overcomes hurdles

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — With Diane Kurys and her Academy Award-nominated film "Entre Nous," life has been a series of hurdles.

The first was exploring her own French childhood in an attempt to come to grips with her parents' divorce. "I think a lot of children who undergo the same trauma conclude 'it must be me' who caused them to separate," she says. "Perhaps I had to pursue their story to get rid of my own guilt."

An accomplished filmmaker who made a hit with her first movie, "Peppermint Soda," Miss Kurys (pronounced Cure-ees) spent 1½ years writing a script. It turned into the story of two women who become close friends and decide to end their suffocating marriages. Such a subject would prove a hard sell in the United States.

"It's easier to sell a small movie in France," said Miss Kurys, who was once an actress. "We don't make big pictures because there isn't an international market for French movies.

"There is a respect for director-writers that doesn't exist as much in Hollywood. They are never considered employees in France. A director is never fired from a film; everything is settled by mutual agreement. There is no question that he or she will have the final cut. If there is no agreement on the director's final cut, there is no film."

Miss Kurys found the $2.5 million she needed for "Entre Nous." That's a tiny budget by Hollywood standards, but sizable for France. "I had to re-create the 1940s and '50s — clothes, cars and everything," the director said. "I also had to build a concentration camp and fill it with extras. Still, I managed to finish shooting in nine weeks."

Isabelle Huppert and Miou Miou star as the two women who take charge of their own lives.

"It was a difficult film to sell because of the story," said Miss Kurys. "People feared that it was a feminist pamphlet, which it isn't. In France, it is difficult to market pictures about women; they're thought to be meaningless and boring. 'Julia' was only so-so in France. 'The Turning Point' didn't do very well.

"I tried to avoid the sexual aspects of 'Entre Nous.' Some people say that because the two women leave their husbands they must be lesbians. That's not necessarily true, and I make no point of it in the film."

"Entre Nous" opened in Paris last April to critical and commercial success. Late last year, the film faced another hurdle: Would it be entered as France's competitor for the foreign-language Oscar?

Each filmmaking nation is allowed one entry; in France, the choice is made by a committee of critics, and officials from the culture ministry and foreign office. They chose "Entre Nous," and it was voted to become one of the competitors.

Miss Kurys, 35, has been visiting the United States to help stir up interest in her film.

Movie shorts seldom seen, but win Oscars

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Movie shorts — films that last for minutes rather than hours — are seldom seen by today's audiences. Still, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences continues to give Oscars to these projects.

Three short film categories — cartoon, comedy and novelty — were established in 1931, when every major studio maintained a shorts department. Now Oscars are given for animated and live-action shorts, most of which are exhibited only in art houses and film festivals.

A few years ago, Howard W. Koch, in charge of producing the Oscar telecast, made the brave suggestion that the shorts category be eliminated to help speed up the program. Nothing happened.

"Every time the suggestion comes before the Board of Governors, it is voted down," says June Foray, chairman of the Shorts Branch and a veteran voice for cartoons.

"Even though shorts don't get much exposure in theaters, they provide a way for young talent to enter the industry."

Superstars like George Lucas, Steven Spielberg and Taylor Hackford first drew attention with their short films. Lynn Littman, director of "Testament," also won an Oscar for a short movie.

So the Academy is likely to continue its awards to short films, whose creators have their brief moment of glory on the Los Angeles Music Center stage, then go back to the struggle for acceptance in the movie world.

Here are the animated short films:

"Mickey's Christmas Carol" is the ringer among the nominees, a $4-million Disney production released with "The Rescuers" in December. It was the first short cartoon released by Disney since "Goofy's Freeway Trouble" in 1965. The new film employs the full list of Disney characters in a ho-hum version of the Dickens tale.

• • •

"Sound of Sunshine, Sound of Rain" is a touching story of a blind 7-year-old who sees the world in the brilliant hues of his own mind. The animation lacks the polish of "Mickey's Christmas Carol," but contact with the emotions is more effective.

• • •

"Sundae in New York" is a witty account of the city's ebullient mayor, Ed Koch. Animation with clay figures is not to everyone's taste, but the clever script carries the day.

Here are the nominated live-action short films:

"Boys and Girls" is a moody Canadian-made film centering on a 13-year-old girl (sensitivily played by Megan Fellows) who lives on a fox farm in the 1940s. She learns from her father and her spiteful little brother that it's a man's world.

• • •

"Goodie-Two-Shoes" takes place in an English high school where students are required to take a ballroom dancing course. The youthful dancers are the antithesis of those in "Flashdance," and their antics are hilarious.

Teamster president praises Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teamster President Jackie Presser, coming close to endorsing President Reagan's re-election, says the AFL-CIO's support of Democrat Walter F. Mondale has created "an embarrassing situation for all of labor."

Presser stopped short of actually endorsing Reagan but said the president "has kept his commitment" to turn the economy around.

"First comes America. Then comes the union," said Presser, 57, head of the 1.7 million-member union since April 1983.

"If there's a healthy and a sound American system and an economy, we'll have our fair share," he said in a wide-ranging interview late last week. "We won't get any more. We won't get any less. If there's a sick America, you get less."

The Teamster leader, who has in the past admitted that he has been investigated by the government "time and time again" but has never been indicted, emphasized that no decision has been made by the union, which endorsed Reagan's 1980 candidacy.

Presser said rank-and-file Teamsters will be surveyed in a questionnaire to be mailed in August and that no endorsement will be made until after the Democratic and Republican presidential nominating conventions.

But he displayed a full-page union advertisement, with charts and graphs, showing Reagan's performance on inflation, interest rates and employment.

"I'm telling you in advance that . . . our indicator shows it's (union support of Reagan) going to be even greater than last time" when the president got more than 40 percent of union votes, Presser said.

"We're already feeling it," he added, "but I'm not going to come to a conclusion until that questionnaire goes out, but I feel very comfortable saying to you that the man kept his commitments. That's what America needed and that's what it got."

Presser replied "that's true" when asked if he had diametrically opposing views from AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland.

"If ever the AFL-CIO gave the Teamsters a good lesson, it's right now . . . because of what they did politically."

The AFL-CIO's endorsement of the former vice president "has put the American labor movement right up on front street. . . . I think that if ever a guy is getting a spanking, it's Kirkland . . . and there's a lot of unrest in the labor movement right now, and it tells us Teamsters that we are on the right trail."

The Teamster leader said the AFL-CIO endorsement has "put a yoke around" Mondale's neck.

Presser scoffed at any suggestion that the Teamsters would seek to reaffiliate with the AFL-CIO, despite the fact that Kirkland invited all non-affiliated unions to come back into "the house of labor" shortly after he became president of the federation.

Presser described as a "red-letter day" when the Teamsters were thrown out of the AFL-CI0 in 1957 amid a Senate racketeering investigation.

"Everybody tries to make it sound like we're the only nasty union in the world. We're as good as anybody else."

He cited wide-ranging differences with Kirkland's policies, zeroing in on the AFL-CIO's Mondale endorsement.

"You know, and I know and the rest of the world knows, that the Teamsters are not a one-political-party captive . . . and the philosophy that's been displayed by the AF-of-L is a good example of why we wouldn't be interested in being a part of that philosophy."

Police dispute reports of release

LOS ANGELES (AP) — City police are "shaking our heads" at reports that more than half the 2,121 California fugitives arrested in the federal government's biggest manhunt are already out of jail, a commander says.

The fugitives, including 24 murder suspects, were arrested in a 10-week statewide sweep by the U.S. Marshals Service, many for failing to appear in court on previous charges. But authorities said this weekend that more than 1,000 have been released on bail, freed on their own recognizance or placed on probation.

"Boy, you'd think we could grab some people and hold them behind bars," Los Angeles police Cmdr. Mark Kroeker said.

Ship's cruise 'a routine operation'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Soviet diplomat says the West Coast cruise of what U.S. officials call the Soviet Navy's only spy ship known to be armed is "a routine operation" with "nothing strange about it."

The 4,500-ton Balzam was "just generally loitering" about 32 miles off San Clemente on Sunday, said Cmdr. Roger Copeland of the Third Fleet headquarters in Hawaii. Sources in and out of the Navy said the Balzam was probably eavesdropping on military and possibly civilian communications.

Valery Belokurov, Soviet vice consul in San Francisco, was asked if the Balzam is a spy ship and replied, "Maybe. ... Who knows? But as far as I know it was in international waters, and there was no violation of international law."

Suspended chancellor wants trial

NEW YORK (AP) — City schools Chancellor Anthony Alvarado, suspended as head of the nation's largest school system, welcomes a school board trial because it will let him answer charges of improper conduct, his lawyer says.

Another city agency reported last week that Alvarado had borrowed $90,000 from subordinates before getting the chancellor's job last year, and had failed to report $128,000 in income to the Internal Revenue Service.

Alvarado, 41, had already taken a leave of absence from the $95,000-a-year job before the Board of Education voted Sunday to suspend him with pay, effective today. The board will investigate him in a trial-like forum on charges of "conduct unbecoming" to his job and being "unfit" for the post.

More pins found in cookies

BELFAST, Maine (AP) — Just days after pins and paper clips were found in Girl Scout cookies in St. Louis, a Maine council stopped distributing cookies because police found pins in a half-dozen boxes shipped in from Kentucky.

In both cases, police and Girl Scout officials said pins had been pushed through the boxes into the cookies before they were put in cartons for shipping.

Maine's Abnaki Girl Scout Council suspended distribution Sunday after a woman, who was not injured, bit into a cookie containing a pin. An officer in the Waldo County sheriff's department said he opened several cartons and found pins in "about a half-dozen boxes"

Despite record, Reagan praised for education

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Ronald Reagan campaigned for president in 1980 he promised to dismantle the Department of Education, fight for school-sanctioned classroom prayer and seek tax breaks for parents of private school children.

He has managed to deliver on none of those promises.

The Senate has rebuffed his education policies twice in recent months, killing a tuition tax credit bill last November and last week defeating a constitutional amendment to allow spoken prayer in schools.

Reagan and Education Secretary T.H. Bell never even mustered enough support for their plan to downgrade the Education Department to a foundation to put a bill in the hopper. They were rebuffed in 1982 when they sought to cut most federal school aid programs by a third.

Now, in an election year, Reagan is seeking a record $15.5 billion budget for the agency, which his counselor, Edwin Meese III, once dismissed as "a ridiculous bureaucratic joke."

And Reagan, who never set foot inside a school during his first two years in office, now scarcely lets a week go by without visiting a school, inviting educators to the White House or inveighing in his Saturday radio addresses about the poor condition of America's $215 billion educational system.

With help from the National Commission on Excellence in Education, which Bell had the foresight to set up in late 1981, Reagan has succeeded in placing himself in the lead of a crusade to raise school standards. He and Bell speak with pride of "the grassroots revolution" that is taking place in state houses and school boards across America.

There is no disputing that in the wake of the excellence commission's report entitled "A Nation At Risk" and similar studies from a host of other blue ribbon panels, the American school system is in ferment. Educators relish the attention they are getting, even if so much of it is critical.

And Reagan, instead of having to admit his failure to achieve any of his major educational policies, is in position to take credit for these developments.

Opinion polls have shown the public generally regards Democrats as more concerned about the schools and more likely to provide quality education.

But polls also indicate that Reagan has polished what was once a tattered image on educational issues. A year ago the public may have associated him most with efforts to cut aid for college students, the poor and handicapped students — budget policies that have led Walter F. Mondale to call him "the most anti-education president in U.S. history."

But now, without spending an extra dime, Reagan has moved to the head of the excellence parade. He has given his rivals a schooling in how to defuse a nettlesome political issue.

He has struck a responsive chord in the citizenry by crying out for merit pay for teachers and "good, old-fashioned discipline" for students.

He suggests schools can be improved at no extra cost and argues that school standards went down in the 1960s and 1970s as federal aid went up.

He may argue that teachers should get merit pay — and denounce the National Education Association for opposing that idea — but he doesn't propose to pick up the tab.

Reagan first spoke of the need "to revitalize American education" in his State of the Union address in January 1983, when he proposed a $50 million program to help states recruit math and science teachers. The House has passed a version nine times more generous.

Reagan chose a good time to champion education.

Baby found

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The mother of a 9-month-old baby found crawling along a busy city street 18 blocks where she left him says she did not abandon the child and believes the tot was kidnapped by a woman "who was acting weird."

"I would never, ever abandon my baby or even think about it," 23-year-old Rosalene Allen said Sunday.

Gary Wesley Allen, clad only in a T-shirt and diaper and shivering in 40-degree weather, was discovered Saturday by a motorist who stopped near a three-way intersection after seeing what he first thought might be a puppy on the pavement.

"It was a boy ... a cute little kid," said the motorist, James P. Plummer.

Police said they were puzzled as to why the child did not have scrapes on his knees or palms if he had crawled over concrete for 18 blocks.

The baby was placed with a foster family while police investigate the case, said John L. Stiegelmeyer, a police juvenile detective.

Ms. Allen said a woman she knew only as Jackie displayed an unusual amount of interest in Gary during a Friday night gathering.

Ms. Allen said she and her son stayed Friday night at the apartment building where the gathering was held. She said she decided to stay at the apartment when she could not get a ride home.

She said a woman she knew as Jackie also stayed at the building Friday night.

Ms. Allen said she awoke early Saturday and fed Gary. She then dozed off and when she awoke, the child was gone, Ms. Allen said.

She said she contacted authorities when she discovered the child was missing.

"I knew that she (Jackie) must have taken him because we were up on the second floor, and there is no way Gary could have climbed down two flights of steps and then pushed a heavy door to get outside," said Ms. Allen.

Thinking the child might have slipped away from a nearby house, officers questioned several residents near where he was found, but no one claimed the baby.

Breath test laws not easy to enforce

CREVE COEUR, Mo. (AP) — About halfway through "happy hour," Charlie Grable slipped a quarter into a brightly colored machine at a popular restaurant. Grabbing a straw from a dispenser, he struck it in the machine and blew into it.

"I've had five or six glasses of beer since I got here," Grable said. "This machine says I can drive. But I wouldn't use it as gospel truth."

Grable is not alone in his distrust of the breath-testing machine.

When this affluent St. Louis suburb passed an ordinance 16 months ago requiring nine restaurants to install them for voluntary use by customers, the law was touted as the first of its kind in the country.

But city officials have had their troubles enforcing it.

FAULTY EQUIPMENT SUPPLIED grossly inaccurate readings and overzealous patrons dumped drinks on the machines, rendering them useless for weeks at a stretch.

The machines, which give an unofficial reading of blood-alcohol content, can be either rented or purchased. Only two restaurants currently have them in working order.

"We've had some problems with maintenance and with the accuracy of the machines," said Mayor Harold Dielmann. "But we hope to have them back in all of the bars and restaurants by May 1."

Dave Cochran, manager of the Stewart Anderson Cattle Co. restaurant, said the machine he bought for $1,700, "tends to be misused and abused more than it is properly used."

But he recalled at least one time when it changed a person's mind about driving home.

"A wife asked her husband to breathe into the machine, and if he failed, he wasn't allowed to drive home," Cochran said. "He failed, so he handed the keys over."

DAVID SEAGER, MANAGER OF a El Torito, a Mexican eatery across the street from Stewart Anderson's, said his experiences with the breath-testing machine have been "terrible" because of frequent breakdowns.

"They're disgusting. I want them out," Seager said. "The only reason I keep putting up with it is because I don't want to jeopardize my liquor license."

Police Chief Don Daniel said the number of drunken driving arrests in Creve Coeur decreased from 234 in 1982 to 195 last year. But Daniel said the decrease could be attributed to stiffer state laws against drunken drivers and efforts by several citizens' groups.

"I'd like to believe they are helpful," Daniel said. "If it keeps one person off the street who shouldn't be there, then we don't have to go about cleaning up the problem by punishing the offender after the fact."

Dielmann maintains that statistics could never bear out the true success of the program because it reshapes attitudes about drinking and driving.

"IT'S BROUGHT AN AWARENESS to the community," the mayor said. "Hey, I like to have a drink myself. But there ought to be some way to know where you stand before you grab the car keys."

"Happy hour" was just about over when Joe Hamill, a friend of Grable, decided to take the test after his fifth martini.

The red light came on, but Hamill insisted he was still able to drive.

"It won't stop me from getting into my car," he said. "I still rely on my own judgment."

Poor gain least from benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Middle and upper income families benefit most from the nearly $2 billion in tax breaks that the federal government provides to encourage college attendance, according to a new study from the College Board.

About 65 percent of these tax breaks go to families with incomes above the 1982 national median income of $23,000 for all families, according to the study. These families are the ones who probably would arrange for a college education for their children even if the tax breaks weren't offered, it said.

"Student aid programs can be a much more direct and effective way for the government to encourage college enrollments," said the study, "Tax Breaks for College: Current and Proposed Tax Provisions that Help Families Meet College Costs."

"A grant of $1,000 reduces the price that students and their families pay for college much more than a tax advantage accruing from a $1,000 investment in postsecondary education."
