Reagan's new plan facing tough road

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, leading a "crusade to save our economy," is asking Congress to reduce next year's budget deficit by $16 billion with spending cuts and tax increases that even his allies admit face a perilous path.

Reagan had barely outlined his plan Thursday night for $13 billion in program reductions and $3 billion in higher tax revenues for 1982 when

Related stories, Pages 2A, 6A, 7A

Senate Republican Whip Ted Stevens of Alaska said, "I don't believe we can get the cuts" in the form proposed. "It would be very difficult to do."

House Republican leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois, like Stevens a strong backer of the president, predicted in advance that Congress would probably trim defense spending by more than the $2 billion the president requested.

Senate GOP Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee agreed, saying Congress "almost certainly" will try to increase defense spending cuts, "and I would not rule out the possibility they will be increased."

Asked later if he thought he could win Senate approval of the proposed new cuts, Baker said, "It's really going to be tough."

Wall Street did not readily embrace Reagan's plan. After the first 90 minutes of trading today, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was off 9.04 points and declines held a 5-1 margin over advances on the New York Stock Exchange.

Reflecting the financial community's skepticism over whether the president's latest round of cuts and proposed cuts would reduce the federal deficit, Michael Metz, an economist and vice president with the investment firm of Oppenheimer & Co., commented, "Wall Street wasn't expecting very much and that's what they got."

Other analysts said the latest cuts were not sufficient to convince investors that the deficit, and interest rates, would be brought under control in the near future.

At the White House meanwhile, reaction was said to be running more than 3-1 in the president's favor. The press office said that as of 10 a.m. EDT, there had been 2,649 telephone calls, telegrams and Mailgrams supporting the president and 771 opposing his latest proposals.

And on Capitol Hill, Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said that "where he mutilated programs (in Reagan's original spending cuts), he obliterates them now." The speaker said that "there's no question in my mind he has tremendous problems" in persuading Congress to go along with the latest proposed cuts.

Aware that a group of moderate and liberal Republicans already has indicated dissatisfaction with parts of Reagan's plan, Michel said, "I can't have more than token slippage on my side to make a credible showing out there."

Reagan mentioned none of those problems in a nationally broadcast speech from the Oval Office that backed away from cuts in Social Security, including elimination of the minimum benefit, and rejected delays in the three-year personal income tax cut Congress approved earlier this year.

"We are just starting down a road I believe will lead us out of the economic swamp we've been in for so long," he declared.

Odessan killed in truck-train wreck

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

A young Odessa mother of four children, who apparently "never knew what hit her," is dead after the pickup she was driving was struck broadside by a train about one mile west of Holiday Hill Road early Thursday afternoon.

Witnesses said 31-year-old Mary Jo Hamilton was westbound on the south service road of U.S. Highway 80 when she suddenly turned north and attempted to cross the tracks at an unprotected crossing near Airline Mobile Home Park about 1:15 p.m.

A westbound Southern Pacific freight train hit the passenger side of the truck and pushed it nearly half a mile down the tracks before coming to a stop.

The truck was wedged between the tracks and the front coupling of the locomotive. The fire department's "Jaws of Life" had to be used to pry open the driver's door so Mrs. Hamilton's body could be extracted from the wreckage, which was bent into a V-shape. She apparently died instantly of head and internal injuries, according to Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry.

A witness, Bob Creighton of Midland, said he was driving toward Odessa and saw the woman turn into the path of the train. "She came bounding across the tracks and never saw it. Her windows were up and she didn't hear it. She never saw the train, I'm sure of it. She never knew what hit her."

Creighton said he's "always been interested in trains" and was pacing it at 35 to 40 mph. He estimated her speed at 25 mph. Said a stunned, unidentified crew member of the train: "She just whipped right out in front of us."

Her body was found slumped face up on the seat under the steering wheel. The only visible injury was a deep gash on the left side of her forehead. Sprayberry pronounced her dead at the scene and ordered routine blood tests to determine if she had been drinking or was under the influence of drugs. "I don't think she was, though," said Sprayberry.

Southwest Corp. stock sells for $46.5 million

CLEVELAND — Robert F. Anderson, president and chief executive officer of Hanna Mining Co., announced Thursday the company has entered into an agreement to purchase approximately 50 percent of the outstanding stock of the Midland Southwest Corp. The purchase price will be $20 per share in cash for a total of about $46.5 million, according to a Hanna spokesman.

Midland Southwest Corp., headquartered in Midland, Texas, is engaged in contract drilling of oil and gas wells and in the exploration and development of oil and gas reserves for its own account.

The company also is in the gas gathering business in Texas and Oklahoma and owns investment land interest primarily in Midland. It trades on the Over the Counter market.

"This acquisition," said Anderson, "reflects Hanna's on-going efforts to redeploy assets into the energy related industries while at the same time maintaining its role as a major supplier of raw material to the steel industry."

Hanna will purchase its 50 percent investment from M.W. "Buddy" Branum, who is chairman of the board of the Tri-Service Drilling Co., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Midland Southwest Corp.

Branum will continue as a director on the Midland Southwest Corp. board and as chairman of Tri-Service.

The other members of the present managment team of the Midland Southwest Corp. will also remain in their present positions.

The cash purchase agreement is scheduled to be completed no later than Dec. 31, 1981, and requires approval by the Hanna board of directors, notification and approval of governmental authorities and fulfillment of certain other conditions.

Anderson also observed for the record that "the Hanna Mining Co. has no intention of acquiring additional Midland Southwest stock at this time." Hanna intends to make the stock purchase through its wholly owned subsidiary, Hanna Services Co.

Midlanders hope cuts ease woes

By PATRICK DEAREN

Local political leaders and financiers hope Reagan's proposed budget cuts and increases in tax revenue alleviate the nation's economic problems, but at the same time note the harsh reality that it may fail.

"It's one of those things that if it works, it's great, but if it doesn't, we'll have hell to pay," said Democratic County Chairman Darrell Smith, and that typified responses a few hours after Reagan's nationwide television appearance.

"I think Mr. Reagan has found it's easy to cut the budget, but it's murder to decide where to cut it," noted Harris Kerr, member of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

Bob Monaghan, who served as Reagan's regional campaign coordinator in 1980, also supported the president's plan, but feared inflation may still continue to reign.

"I don't think (the tax cuts) will cure inflation — I think the only way to cure the inflation is cutting government spending," he said.

Certain aspects of Reagan's proposal came under close scrutiny, particularly his decision not to propose cuts in Social Security.

"I'm glad he reaffirmed the committment not to undercut the safety system of Social Security," said Kerr. "I think that's what most of us were saying would be a disaster. It would be pretty rough to cut the underpinings (of a program so many persons are dependent on). I'm glad he reaffirmed his commitment to reform Social Security as well."

President of Citizens Savings and Loan Association Ray Moudy, meanwhile, sees in Reagan's proposal to reduce federal loan guarantees by $20 billion a possibility of resultant lower interest rates.

"Any reduction in government spending, in my opinion, will ultimately help reduce interest rates," he said. "The reason that we have such high interest rates now is that the government borrowed so much money that (it) is competing with everybody else that's borrowing money — and that drives the rate up."

Moudy also said that mortgage lenders, especially those who are in the conventional lending business

Hospital board OKs Tax Appraisal District change

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

The Midland County Hospital District Board of Directors passively accepted the recent change in the Tax Appraisal District Thursday in their regular monthly meeting at Midland Memorial Hospital. And at the Board of Trustees meeting it was announced that one member out of the four who are up for re-election in 1982 will not seek another term.

In addition, Dr. Arnold H. Meckley is resigning his position on the board of trustees "because he is the president-elect of the medical staff and he feels it is inappropriate to stay on the board when he becomes president in January," Ray Branson, MMH administrator, announced.

Mickey Cappadonna, trustee board member and president of the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center, asked not to be re-nominated to the board.

"I've been on there for 12 years and I told them (the board) that they ought to get some new blood. At the present, I plan to stay with the Allison Center, that is if they (the board) want me," Cappadonna said.

And in the directors meeting, Edwin H. Magruder Jr., president of the board, explained that the hospital district does not have any options in the tax appraisal district and "we have only to attempt to contract with the appraisal district."

In other business, the directors recommended purchasing a radiographic-flouroscopic diagnostic X-ray machine. A.C Buchanan, MMH vice president, reported that General Electric submitted a bid of $216,334, but Picker countered the bid with a figure of $209,899.

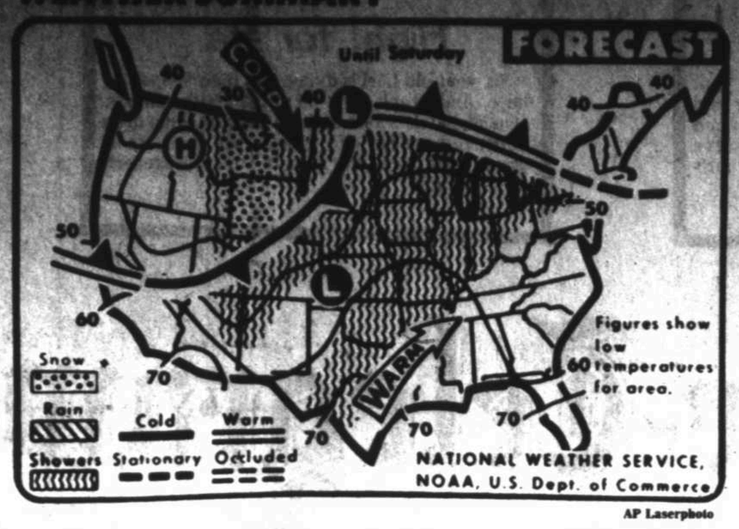

"WE WANTED TO make sure we were comparing apples with apples," Buchanan said in explaining how the decision was made. "Picker has good local service."

Dr. J.W. McGee, trustee board member, added "the top of the line equipment (GE) has a lot of unnecessary (parts) — a fancy panel. We're not taking a lesser line, we're just not accepting whistles and bells that may have to be replaced eight years or so down the road."

During the building committee report in the trustee meeting, Cappadonna reported that all construction projects were under way, with the exception of the laboratory. He added that construction has stayed close to the projected $1.6 million budget of

Board accepts tax district change

Fall 1980.

Director Pat Estes asked Cappadonna about a fire department report concerning a water pressure problem the hospital was having.

Cappadonna replied that the fire department would not allow the existing problem and arrangements were being made to "take immediate steps to care of it."

He explained that an on-going problem of low water pressure has prompted that "we have to spend $50,000 to fix the domestic and fire pumps."

In a related matter, the board of directors unanimously approved a motion to establish a line of credit to draw on as needed.

MAGRUDER EXPLAINED that after a study of the cash available, the hospital needed to "seek a short term line of credit."

"To keep the hospital currently financing and continuing expansion, we need to establish a line credit for $700,000," he said.

In an interview after the directors meeting, Buchanan explained that some of the invoices for existing construction projects are being paid with cash from the operations fund and causing too much of a burden when it comes to paying other bills. With this line of credit, unexpected financial matters can be met without disturbing other funds.

Another purchase discussed at the directors' meeting concerned the approval to purchase dictation equipment for the new medical records department. At last month's board meeting, Branson asked to have this item tabled for further research. Two bids were received and a $41,204.96 bid from Lanier was approved over a $37,626 bid from Dictaphone.

Buchanan said delivery for the dictation equipment would take about 45 days, but wiring in the new medical records department has started.

"I think this is a vital department and they have been hindered with antiquated equipment," Mrs. Estes said, giving her approval to the action.

In other board news, revenues for August reached another record high of $1.6 million, about $255,000 over budget. Dale Miller, MMH vice president of finance, said salaries exceeded the budget by $128,194, resulting in a deficit of $201,424 for the month. This represents an unfavorable budget variance of $115,259 for the month.

HE ADDED THAT year-to-date operations have resulted in a $573,471 deficit, which is $400,003 below the budgeted deficit. Patient days totaled 4,472 for August. Miller said this brings the average daily census for the year to 139.3, compared to 124.9 this time last year — an increase of 12 percent.

"It is estimated that for fiscal year 1981, salaries will exceed the budget by approximately $250,000. This compares favorably with the original estimate of $600,000 in February, when substantial salary adjustments were made," Miller said.

"Can I assume we're coming closer to full staff, the reason for the increase?" Magruder asked.

"The biggest part of the increase is due to the salary increases. We certainly have more staff, but they have been employed over a period of time," Branson replied.

In other financial matters, indigent care for August totaled $89,143 and bad debts turned over to referrals for collection totaled $134,488.

Of the $134,488, about $89,000 was a bill for a patient who was admitted to the hospital with a fractured hip. According to the board discussion, the patient apparently had an insurance policy, but it did not cover payment for fractured hips, cardiac arrest or diabetes. Complications during the patient's stay at MMH included a cardiac arrest and diagnosis of diabetes.

Leaders hoping budget cuts help such as Citizens Savings and Loan, will not be affected significantly.

"Whatever he does, I hope he succeeds in bringing interest rates down...because a lot of people have been priced out of the market," he said.

The proposal to dismantle the Departments of Energy and Education especially caught the attention of Smith. "I was thinking, 'I wonder what's going on in Plains, Ga. (in the mind of Jimmy Carter)," he noted.

Smith saw in Reagan's proposal an attempt to reach a wide range of people, to call upon the responsibilities of individuals to ensure success is restoring economic prosperity.

"I thought I heard him talking to a lot of us last night who are not directly on welfare, but who have participated in the benefits of government services," he said. "He was calling on us to honestly appraise our status very objectively, rather than just point at people without faces, without names...I hope he succeeds, and if everybody will just accept their individual responsibilities we can work these things out."

Reagan's 1980 state campaign coordinator Ernest Angelo Jr., meanwhile, feels the burden of responsibility rests on the shoulders of congressional leaders.

"I think (Reagan's program) is so critical to the future health of the country that I really hope that Congress was listening last night, that they will do the statesmen-like thing, which is to make these cuts without the demagoguery that has been associated with some of the past comments by senators and congressmen," he said.

"I would urge everybody in Midland who has an opinion on the program, pro or con, to get in touch with our elected officials, because it is important to let them know what we think."

Monaghan concurred in the great responsibility Congress has to respond favorably to Reagan's proposal.

"I think Tip O'Neill and Jim Wright and some of them have got to give Reagan a chance to bring spending in line, because we can't afford another 30 to 40 years of the gimmicks they've been pulling," he said, but added, "it won't be cured overnight."

One of the other escapees, Glen Eugene Stewart, was brought back to the jail last month, following his capture in Juarez, Mexico. The other two escapees are still at large.

Reagan revises stand on Social Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Congress doing it anyway, President Reagan is shelving his package of long-range Social Security cuts and urging restoration of the minimum benefit eliminated at his behest earlier this year.

Instead, Reagan told the nation Thursday night, he now favors mingling the system's three trust funds to keep the main retirement fund from running out of money by the end of next year and "to give us time to seek a permanent solution."

At the same time, he challenged majority Democrats in the House to join in a bipartisan effort to restore fiscal integrity to Social Security and remove it "once and for all from politics."

Reagan defended his May 12 proposal to eliminate the $122-a-month minimum benefit, slash early retirement, disability and other benefits and delay next July's cost-of-living increase for three months. But he did not urge Congress to adopt any elements of that plan.

He said he never intended to take the minimum away "from those who truly need it" and asked Congress to restore it for "current beneficiaries with low incomes."

Partly cloudy skies predicted

Midland will be shadowed with partly cloudy skies through Saturday with a slight chance of thundershowers tonight.

A 20 percent chance of rain is predicted for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Highs today through Saturday are expected to reach the low 90s with the low tonight continuing in the mid-60s.

Thursday's high of 92 fell short of the record high mark of 101 set in 1977. The overnight low of 66 was a far reach from the record low of 48 set in 1975.

Winds should be traveling southerly at 10-15 mph through Saturday, diminishing to 5-10 mph tonight.

Police looking into burglaries

Midland police this morning were continuing to investigate a couple of major burglaries and a criminal mischief case.

R.H. Jones, 2840 Wildwood Circle, reported the theft of three scale units, valued at $2,160, from his storage unit at 2900 W. Kentucky Ave. Jones told police the theft apparently occurred last Sunday. He reported it to police Thursday.

Several offices in the Mid-America Building in downtown Midland were entered and burglarized Tuesday night.

Investingating officers said several hundred dollars worth of items were reported missing. Desks and file cabinets were opened and riffled, reports indicated.

Officers responding to a disturbance call at Playhouse Lounge, 1810 Rankin Highway, arrested a 24-year-old man on a charge of being intoxicated. Later, they learned the man may have been involved in breaking three plate glass windows in the Half-Hour Laundromat next to the lounge.

Reports indicated witnesses said the man became belligerent inside the lounge, went outside and they heard glass breaking. The witnesses then told police they walked outside and saw windows broken out of the laundromat and the man walking away from it.

Police, Fire Roundup

Midland firemen responded to a fire at Geosource, 2211 W. Industrial Ave. shortly before 7 p.m. Thursday and found the building and contents blazing.

The fire was extinguished with 650 gallons of water. Cause of the fire was not determined immediately, but reports indicated it caused slight damage to the building and contents.

Former restaurateur awarded life term

Wallace Lee Sims, the 33-year-old former restaurateur who claims the police were trying to railroad him to prison, on Thursday was awarded a life term in prison after a 238th State District Court found him guilty of escaping from the Midland County Jail on July 5.

Presiding Judge Vann Culp pronounced a judgment of an automatic life imprisonment for Sims, who was adjudged an habitual criminal.

"I feel like I'll still be a young man (about 45)" when his so-called life imprisonment is served, Sims said before the jury had convicted him; an acquittal would have surprised him.

"And this is the last conviction, because I'll have something I didn't have before and this is God on my side."

Sims, who says he lived in luxury while operating his Sims' Honey-Fried Chicken 'n' Fish Restaurant in San Angelo in the late 1970s, apparently hasn't been faring so well since he returned to Midland.

But he claims that the Midland police had been thwarted in their attempt to "railroad" him to prison.

"The system is angry because I beat the case," Sims said in referring to his acquittal in a March 1981 robbery case against him. He claims he was framed.

And Sims, an ex-convict who holds convictions out of Houston for robbery and attempted murder, claims he also was framed last summer when he was arrested for burglary of a habitation and incarcerated in Midland County Jail.

Evidence in the trial indicated that Sims and, allegedly, co-inmates Frank Smith and Willie Bustillos Jr., escaped from the jail's "bull pen" by crawling through the light-fixture portion of the ceiling, over the bars and into the jailers' walk-around section of the jail.

There, the three allegedly overpowered Jailer Gary Morgan, who was making his 11 p.m. head-count rounds on July 5.

"I was jumped by three inmates, thrown up against the wall, bound and gagged," Morgan said on the witness stand under examination by Prosecutor Jim Rex.

"They (the escapees) expressed that they were going to take the fire escape (to freedom)," Morgan testified. "(Eventually), I freed myself and made my presence known (to other jailers) that I was OK."

Meanwhile, the escapees allegedly assaulted Jailer Ted Macklin.

"He (Smith) took the flashlight, and he hit me three times," Macklin said.

"Sims (then) told me if I tried anything he would kill me, 'cause he was going to the TDC (Texas Department of Corrections) and had nothing to lose."

The threesome allegely stole a set of jail keys and sneaked from the jail on the fifth floor of the Midland County Courthouse. Via the stairs, they went to the first-floor lobby, where they broke a glass front and escaped.

All three were subsequently arrested. Smith and Bustillos, like Sims, face potential life sentences as habitual criminals.

Sims' court-appointed defense attorney, R. Sandy Torres and Gayle Newman, offered no defense for their client.

During trial recesses, Sims allowed that he probably would be convicted. But he said that he preferred going to trial on the case and taking his chances for an acquittal rather than accepting the state's offer for a 40-year prison sentence in exchange for a guilty plea.

"When you cop a plea," reasoned Sims, "you give up your rights."

Aside from that, Sims said that the actual time served on a 40-year sentence and a life (sentence) was too much and that he had just as soon take his chances on a trial.

But he was upset, too, that the prosecution had offered him a 40-year sentence in exchange for a guilty plea, but had offered Bustillos a 25-year sentence.

"He's been out (of prison) for three month and gets offered 25 years, and I've been out four years and get offered 40 years," the lamented. "And if that's just, I don't know what unjust is."

Prosecutor Rex explained that Sims had a far longer criminal record than did either of his co-defendants.

But Sims apparently was resolved to prison life for the 12 or so years.

"I give them a run for the money, anyway," he said.

Arsenal revs up for war the old-fashioned way

By LARRY ELKIN
Associated Press Writer

WATERVLIET, N.Y. (AP) — The United States spends billions of dollars each year preparing to conduct the next big war with missiles, computers and nuclear warheads.

At the Watervliet Arsenal, though, the Pentagon gets ready for war the old-fashioned way — turning out hundreds of cannons each year. The cost is measured in millions of dollars.

The goal is to be ready for anything, including a World War II-style confrontation in which American industrial power would wrestle the enemy in a war of attrition.

The Army keeps Watervliet and another arsenal in Rock Island, Ill., operating because private industry prefers to supply profitable high-technology arms. If Watervliet closed for example, there would be nobody in America making big guns for ships, tanks and artillery units.

"Manufacturing cannon is not a viable peacetime proposition," said Fred Clas, Watervliet's director of operations "Companies found the business to be unprofitable."

Two other arsenals — in Denver and Pine Bluff, Ark., — serve as supply depots for weapons produced elsewhere. At the end of World War II, the U.S. was keeping 50 arsenals going.

Here beside the Hudson River north of Albany, the 73 buildings of the Watervliet compound sprawl across 140 acres.

Founded in 1813 to provide arms for the war against England that had begun a year earlier, Watervliet began specializing in cannons in 1887, after two more wars.

A machinists' school opened in 1905. The four-year, tuition-free program now has an enrollment of 140, one of the largest in the Northeast, according to arsenal officials who say there is a nationwide shortage of skilled machinists.

Students are government employees who draw a salary while they learn. When they graduate they can go into private industry or join the arsenal's 2,500 employees at a starting salary of $9.03 an hour. Most arsenal employees are civilian.

Watervliet produces more than 3,000 weapons a year. The heaviest pieces weigh 15,000 pounds. The most popular is the 105mm gun for the Army's new M-1 Abrams tank.

Sales to foreign governments accounted for 53 percent of the plant's output last year and for $44 million out of $108 million in revenues.

Spokeswoman Maureen Gour said Watervliet supplies weapons to about 20 foreign nations, but she refused to name them.

To keep the arsenal from languishing in the nuclear age, the Army is spending $218 million for a renovation scheduled to be completed in 1987. Ms. Gour said equipment — some of it up to 35 years old — is being replaced, "down time" is being eliminated and the arsenal's production capacity will be doubled.

Plans for a major production speed up are ready, even if war breaks out before modernization is complete.

Library debate to be settled in Congress

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The debate over the proposed Richard Nixon library at Duke University has been conducted in academic halls so far, but Congress will have the last word.

In the process, there may be renewed questions about how far the government should go in maintaining museums highlighing the achievements of former presidents.

The Presidential Libraries Act, passed in 1955, gives Congress 60 days in which to veto any agreement for the establishment of such a library.

The question would be reviewed by the House Government Operations and Senate Governmental Affairs committees.

The members of the Governmental Affairs panel include Sens. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., and David Pryor, D-Ark., sponsors of a bill designed to limit the museum part of presidential libraries.

In addition, the 1974 act giving the National Archives control of former President Nixon's papers provides that they must remain in the Washington, D.C., area.

That act would have to be amended in order to move the papers to the Durham, N.C., campus where Nixon attended law school.

Even among Nixon's stoutest foes, there appears to be little sentiment in Congress to block the proposed library if Nixon, the Archives and Duke reach an agreement.

In fact, Pryor said opponents of the Duke facility were being "very short-sighted."

Questions may well come up, however, about what Pryor called "the shrine syndrome" in presidential libraries.

Probably few scholars at Duke or anywhere else would deny that the Nixon papers are a treasure trove for historians and should be available for study.

Presidential libraries, however, are not just libraries. They are also museums celebrating the achievements and personalities of individual presidents.

Chiles and Pryor have introduced legislation since 1979 to curtail the museum function. They have had little support. Time cools passions, and few Americans think it inappropriate to honor both Herbert Hoover at West Branch, Iowa, and Franklin D. Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N.Y.

But Richard Nixon? The idea was too much for some Duke faculty and alumni, who argued that the building would become a memorial to the president driven from office by the Watergate scandal.

Duke President Terry Sanford, however, insisted that the library would be "primarily a research facility" and trustees of the university decided to continue negotiations with the former president.

Nixon's attorney, R. Stan Mortenson of Washington, declines to discuss the status of the talks, or even whether any talks are going on. Duke officials have indicated they will insist that the museum part of the library be severely limited.

A just settlement

The recommendation by a presidential panel that the U.S. government pay each of the former American hostages in Iran $12.50 a day as compensation for the ordeal appears, at first glance anyway, to be a fair one.

Discussed sums, of course, ranged much higher and the former hostages' attorney, Brice Claggett, had claimed that even $1,000 for each day each hostage was held would have been conservative. That recommendation would have resulted in payment of nearly a half million dollars to each former hostage. Would that have been a fair sum? We don't think so.

According to the panel, the tax exempt detention benefits it recommended are similar to those given to Vietnam prisoners of war and interned civilians in Vietnam and to the crew of the USS Pueblo.

The claim that the hostages suffered a legal "damage" because of their ordeal may be accurate, but Iran, not the United States, was the perpetrator of that damage. It is true that the government signed away the hostages' rights to sue Iran, and in that respect the United States is liable to the hostages.

But there are other extenuating circumstances that further cloud the compensation issue. The hostages were federal government employees who were well aware of the risks involved in their jobs, and, apparently, willing to accept those risks. Apparently, they continued to draw pay from the government during their captivity. In addition, the government continually negotiated for their release and safe return to this country.

Besides the $5,550 each former hostage will be entitled to receive if President Reagan approves the compensation plan, additional benefits recommended by the panel include:

— Raising from $40,000 to $50,000 the maximum payment allowable on claims for damage to or loss of personal property.

— Allowing unlimited medical and health benefits relating to the hostages' detention.

Payment of $12.50 a day represents only a token sum, particularly in light of the unimaginable horrors suffered by the hostages. But what monetary sum would have adequately compensated the hostages — $100 a day? $1,000? Would not those sums have represented a slap in the face for other Americans who previously suffered through similar ordeals for the sake of their country?

Patriotism is not easy to repay, for it is something that comes from the heart, something that means more to the giver than can ever adequately be represented in dollars and cents.

The former hostages deserve the undying gratitude and respect of a nation that lived with them through the 444-day ordeal and will never forget.

Catching the Soviets

Have we caught the Soviets yellow-handed?

It appears so, from recent statements made by Secretary of State Alexander Haig in Berlin, followed up by a State Department briefing for reporters in Washington.

There have been recurring reports, since 1976, of a poisonous yellow rain in Southeast Asia. Similar symptoms have been reported in Cambodia, Laos and Afghanistan, all pointing to possible use of chemical warfare agents by the Soviet Union or its clients, the Vietnamese.

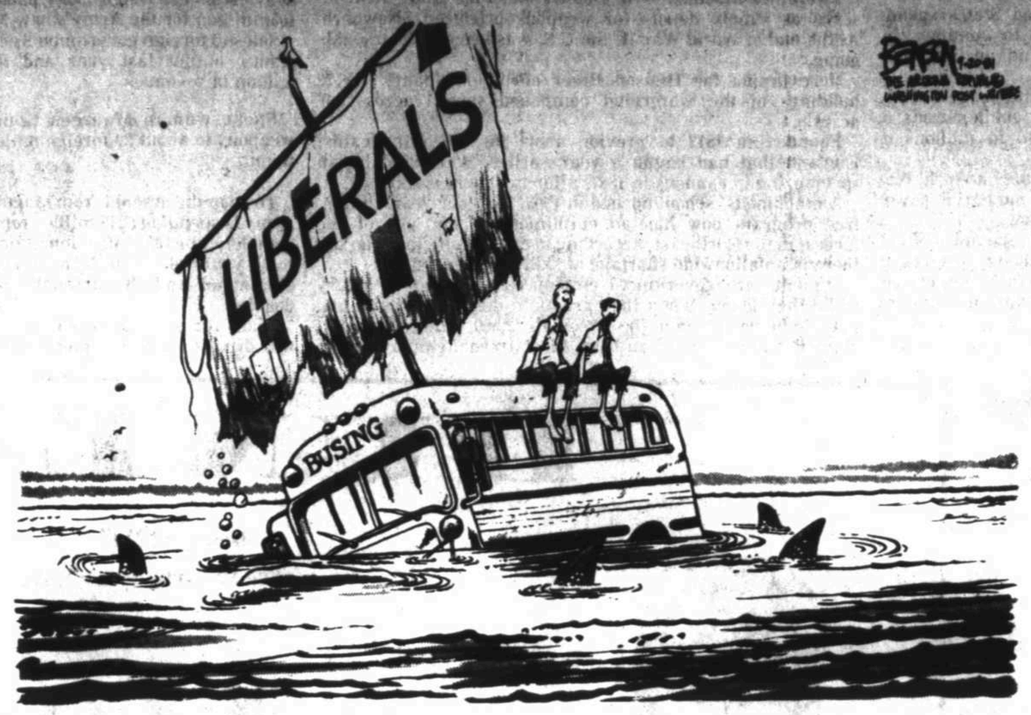

The United States has asked for an impartial international investigation by the United Nations, without success. But now we have uncovered physical evidence. A leaf and stem sample from Cambodia revealed high levels of mycotoxins of the trichothecene group — potent poisons not occurring naturally in Southeast Asia but commonly occurring in the Soviet Union, where they are produced by fungi in improperly stored grain.

Our findings will be dismissed as propaganda unless they are validated by an international investigation. This is a possible violation of international law which the U.N. should investigate.

Small towns teach values to children

I'm sorry for children who missed the opportunity to grow up in a small town, or perhaps I should say, in just one place long enough to establish an identity.

Charley Reese

In our mobile society today, children miss that and I agree with the author of "Future Shock" that mobility is part of the problems that plague our society today.

For me, Thomson, Ga., will always be my hometown even though I have not lived there for many, many years. It was a lovely place to spend my first 10 years on earth.

Thomson is the county seat of McDuffie County and called itself "The Camellia City of the South." Its most famous son had been Tom Watson, a strange man who was an early leader of the Populist Movement, a lawyer, a writer, a U.S. senator and, sadly, in his latter days, an intense bigot.

When I was growing up, farmers would bring their cotton into town in flat-bed wagons drawn by mules. Our principal industry was a box factory, a sawmill, a cotton gin, and a pants factory. We were 2,500 or 3,000 souls with one full-fledged traffic signal and one caution light.

I remember the complete freedom which my own children do not have. I roamed everywhere, all over town, out in the woods and fields, with never any thought of fear. I never gave a thought to crime. There were bootleggers and drunks and fights and occasional shootings and cuttings, but these I considered simply natural activities, not crimes.

Much of what I did as a boy would today be considered acts of delinquency — shooting out street lights, throwing mud balls and firecrackers at cars, overturning lawn furniture and soaping windows on Halloween (we never heard of trick or treat), and stealing back my pet duck from a lady my parents had given it to. I danced many a tune to a whistling peach tree switch.

I had my first Daisey Air Rifle at the age of six and my first .22 rifle at the age of eight. We often had BB gun "wars" with the only rule that you had to shoot below the neck. We played on the box cars of the trains, hitching short rides, and one of the big "dares" was to roll under the train while it was stopped to take on water or coal. None of these things would I dream of letting my own children do.

It was wartime in those days and often on Sundays we had a soldier home for dinner from Ft. Gordon. Some of them were my first exposure to "Yankees," who turned out not to be as bad as I had imagined. Even as late as the 1940s, the Confederacy and the Civil War were very much alive in our culture.

My grandfathers had fought in the Civil War and in elementary school we did not observe either Lincoln's birthday or the "Yankee" Memorial Day. We observed instead the birthdays of Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee and on Confederate Memorial Day would bring flowers to put on confederate graves.

It seems strange even to recall this in these days when mobility and mass communications have wiped out virtually all traces of regional differences. There were negative aspects to parochialism, but I think we have again thrown out the baby with the baby water.

One reason children today feel somewhat rootless is that they are not taught to take pride in their native states. They are not required to study their state's history and geography. A country as large and diverse and as isolated from other nations as ours is difficult for a child to relate to emotionally. I believe the way to build love of country is to develop first a love of one's state and region. It's an easy jump from love of town and state to love of country.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Billy's Libyan connection nearly killed him

WASHINGTON — A complex federal investigation of two ex-CIA agents who supplied arms to Libya has focused on a famous target: Billy Carter.

Jack Anderson

As I have noted in the past, there is an obvious need for a special prosecutor to investigate the tangled dealings of the two ex-spies, Frank Terpil and Edwin Wilson. There are several aspects of their connection to the former president's brother that bear looking into. These include:

— Terpil's statements to associates that he was pivotal in behind-the-scenes activity that led Billy to accept a $220,000 "loan" from the Libyans, presumably in return for any influence he might have had on the then-president.

— Similar statements by Wilson, including one discussion of assassinating Billy for reneging on a deal with the Libyans.

— The indisputable fact that Terpil knew details of Billy's Libyan deals long before they were made public, and even before federal investigators were aware of them.

— The close similarity of an oil-commission deal for Terpil in 1976 to the one offered to Billy Carter in 1979.

Billy Carter first visited Libya with a bunch of Georgia cronies in the fall of 1978. The ostensible purpose of the trip was to promote commercial ties with the Libyans. But intelligence sources said that Libyan strongman Muammar Qaddafi had Billy targeted right from the start as a White House influence-peddler.

Qaddafi apparently believed that Brother Billy could persuade the president to release eight C-130 transport planes, which had been embargoed because of Libya's support for international terrorists. Carter associates said Billy discussed the plane embargo with Libyan officials. Billy denied this, though he admitted discussing it with American officials after his return.

Federal investigators have pointed out that one of ex-CIA man Terpil's main projects, besides supplying explosives and terrorist training to the Libyans, was to arrange delivery of the embargoed C-130s. A former business partner of Terpil and Wilson said Terpil advised Qaddafi that Billy Carter might be the vehicle for getting delivery of the transport planes.

According to this associate, Terpil telephoned Billy and invited him to the tenth-anniversary celebration of Qaddafi's coup, in September 1979. It was then, apparently, that the deal was struck that would give Billy a commission on additional Libyan crude delivered to the Charter Oil Co.

Ironically, Terpil had attempted to arrange a similar oil-commission deal for himself two years earlier. The Terpil associate described the arrangement in handwritten notes, now in my possession. I also have a Terpil telegram in which he confirmed the arrangement, which apparently fell through later.

The Terpil partner told my associate Dale Van Atta that he understood the oil deal "was simply a bribe, a way for the Libyans to get Billy in bed with them." Billy asked for a $500,000 "loan" — actually an advance on his expected commissions. The Libyans gave him $220,000. Terpil later told another confidante that the amount of money available for bribing Billy was $1 million, to be supplied directly by Libyan intelligence agents.

(According to one Justice Department intelligence report, Iranian strongman Ayatollah Khomeini, bent on embarrassing President Carter, sent a trusted mullah to Libya with $1 million in U.S. currency to finance the buying of Billy.)

Terpil and Billy were spotted together on at least two occasions during the 1979 celebration; Terpil told several persons he had met with Billy during the visit.

On Jan. 16, 1980, Billy told a Justice Department official he had indeed met Terpil on the 1979 trip, and that Terpil later followed up with a telephone call about a proposed "machine-gun deal." Carter recanted this statement two months later, but he did acknowledge that he might have autographed a picture of Terpil and himself "To my friend Frank."

The most bizarre twist in the Billy Carter-Terpil-Wilson connection comes from a knowledgeable source who detailed a meeting between Wilson and a professional assassin. According to this source, Wilson was angry over Billy's failure to perform on some unidentified deal, and suggested blowing Billy away by planting explosives in an oil painting. The painting was to be given to Billy, then detonated by remote control.

GRASSLEY'S GAFFE: Sen. Charles Grassley, the conservative Republican freshman from Iowa, let his concern over abortion lead him into a conversational indiscretion that would have embarrassed an eighth-grade civics student.

At the White House with a half-dozen other senators, Grassley confronted President Reagan about Sandra Day O'Connor and what Grassley considered to be her support of abortion when she was in the Arizona legislature. Then Grassley shocked his fellow senators by asking the president point-blank: Had he instructed O'Connor how to vote on future abortion cases before the Supreme Court?

The president "acted embarrassed," according to one observer, and "tried to find a delicate way out of the conversation." Reagan finally "changed the subject and walked away," the witness said.

A Grassley spokesman said the senator came away "more satisfied that he and the president shared the same position on abortion."

INSIDE REPORT:

Budget-cutting battle could 'Carterize' President Reagan

WASHINGTON — As an eager Ronald Reagan prepared to fight for his new budget cuts, senior advisers — including David Stockman — hoped to deflect him from an all-out battle that could "Carterize" the president and doom his dream of a resurgent economy.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

President Reagan still believes he can marshal his popularity and salesmanship to win deep congressional cuts in federal spending. But thoughtful aides understand that his bipartisan conservative coalition in the House has vanished. They argue that pursuing deep domestic spending cuts will only unleash a firestorm against defense spending.

Thus would Reagan, two months after his heady triumphs in the House, experience the humbling by Congress of every president the last 20 years. Specifically, Reagan's advisers use the word "Carterization" — Reagan repeating Jimmy Carter's ordeal by Congress in rejecting his domestic cuts and savaging his defense budget, assaulting the newly-renewed authority of the presidency.

Beyond this lie further dismal comparisons with Carter. Patently unable to balance the budget by cutting spending, Reagan even now is being importuned to rescind or cut his hard-won tax cuts. Like Franklin Roosevelt in the 1930s and Jimmy Carter in the 1970s, Reagan in the '80s would be trapped into a vain quest for a balanced budget by increasing taxes.

To avoid Carterization, sounds of caution are replacing the old aggressiveness in some administration quarters. Deciding not to pursue budget cuts all that vigorously might finesse a congressional raid on Pentagon spending. That would guarantee a deficit for the new fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 no smaller than $60 billion and perhaps much worse (compared to the estimated $42.5 billion).

Since there is no inclination in the administration to move toward the gold standard or any new monetary policy, that means sitting tight in expectation of short-term recession and long-term growth, booming out in 1983 and 1984. Thus, there might be no succor for Republicans seeking office next year.

This gloomy prospect derives from high interest rates, the plague that could wither all Reagan's hopes. While Congress vacationed, budget director Stockman devised his strategy to convince financial markets and lower interest rates by the new round of budget cuts.

Stockman was jolted by reaction on Capitol Hill after Labor Day. In any new budget showdown, Reagan would lose up to 20 of the "boll weevil" Democrats from the South and another 20 "gypsy moth" Republicans from the Northeast and other industrial states. The gypsy moths, in particular, threaten to respond to deeper social welfare spending cuts with an assault on the defense budget. Although vilified at the Pentagon as a blood enemy, Stockman dreads a congressional rampage against the military as much as Reagan.

Democratic refusal to join Social Security reform further limits Reagan. House Republican leaders have told Stockman they will not give Democrats a campaign issue by a partisan squeeze on Social Security. Barred from significant savings on entitlements, Reagan will have to stick to the laborious task of piecemeal slicing away at appropriations.

In truth, the notion that $16 billion in new budget cuts would turn around the financial markets and lower interest rates is doubted by a wide spectrum of economic opinion. But with the cuts certain to end up well below $16 billion, the novelty of a fiscal cure for monetary disease will never be tested.

As for a monetary cure, nothing is even being discussed. Some high officials whisper about the shock value of sacking Paul Volcker as Federal Reserve chairman, a dubious palliative. Only a few ponder an expanded money supply, with its implicit surrender to inflation. As for returning to the gold standard, a mere announcement of that is viewed by advocates as sure to revive markets and drop interest rates; but this has no adherents in power today.

That leaves Reagan playing the hand that has been dealt him. For the long haul, he must count on growth-oriented companies taking advantage of the dramatically improved tax climate to fuel economic growth essential to future budget balancing. For the short haul, it probably means recession and huge budget deficits.

During that short haul, Reagan will have to beat off demands — from Wall Street, Congress and his own administration — to rescind tax cuts and thereby signal retreat. That is one reason his friends in Congress are praying he will not roar into battle with guns blazing for a budget-cutting campaign he cannot possibly win and that could Carterize him. Surprisingly, David Stockman probably joins those prayers.

Soviet, Israeli ministers meet at U.N.

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli and Soviet foreign ministers met for the first time in six years, the Israeli Foreign Ministry confirmed today.

The unannounced meeting Thursday between Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and his Israeli counterpart Yitzhak Shamir took place at the United Nations, where both men are participating in the General Assembly. Israeli newspapers said they discussed the Middle East, Soviet Jews and bilateral issues.

The talks were not announced in advance.

The Maariv and Yedioth Ahronoth newspapers said Israel had requested the meeting with Gromyko. The 90-minute session, over tea and coffee in the Soviet U.N. Mission building, was held in a cordial atmosphere, they said.

The last previous meeting between the two countries at the foreign ministerial level took place at the United Nations in 1975 between Gromyko and the late Yigal Allon.

Since then Israel and the Soviet Union have maintained a frosty distance.

Former Foreign Minister Abba Eban of the opposition Labor Party told the Associated Press the meeting Thursday marked a change in Prime Minister Menachem Begin's policy.

But he said it was doubtful it signaled any breakthrough in Soviet-Israeli relations, which were broken by the Soviet Union after the 1967 Mideast War.

The Shamir-Gromyko meeting took place amid plans by Israel and the United States for increased "strategic cooperation" to thwart Soviet inroads in the Middle East. Israel informed the Reagan administration in advance of the meeting, according to Maariv and Israel Radio.

Eban, who in 1974 held several meetings with Gromyko, said in a telephone interview that the meeting marked no change in Soviet policy.

He said Gromyko had told him in 1973 that the Israeli and Soviet ministers could meet any time they were together at international gatherings such as U.N. sessions.

"The present Likud government refrained from using the opportunity," Eban said. It now appeared that Israel and the Soviet Union could hold such ministerial meetings every year at the United Nations, Eban said, adding, his experience was that the Soviets only used the opportunity to tell the Israelis their objections to Israel policy.

Nevertheless, regular meetings are "useful because they will help to discern a change (in Soviet policy) if it comes," he said.

Moscow backs Israel's adversaries — Syria, Iraq, Libya and the Palestine Liberation Organization — with arms and political support, and Israel rejects the Soviet demand for a total withdrawal from Arab territories occupied in the 1967 war.

Moscow accused Israel of waging aggressive war against the Arabs in 1967 and used that as its basis for breaking relations with the Jewish state.

Welfare cuts deny benefits to 32,000 Texans

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Reagan administration welfare cuts mean 32,000 Texans won't be getting Aid to Families with Dependent Children, says an official of the Texas Department of Human Resources.

"All the people who we know will be automatically denied (benefits) were notified Monday," said Martin Dukler, deputy human resources commissioner for programs.

The DHR's three-man board, with no choice, rubber-stamped the cuts on Thursday and said they will take effect Oct. 1.

Board action implementing the federal cuts also means 65,158 Texans who would have gotten food stamps in the coming year will not be eligible.

AFDC payments in Texas are estimated at $123.7 million in 1982, compared with $130.6 million in 1981 and $132.7 million budgeted for 1982 by the Carter administration.

If the board had not acted, the federal government could have cut off funds for AFDC in Texas or taken over administration of the state's program.

Dukler also said social service cuts contained in the Reagan budget will keep the DHR from filling 160 child-abuse prevention jobs created by the 1981 Legislature.

The new welfare law says a family with income above $301 a month may not receive AFDC, nor may people 19 and 20 years old, even though they might be in school.

The board took an option available to it and said 18-year-olds can get AFDC if they are in high school or vocational school. It could have cut out 18-year-olds altogether.

Removal from the AFDC rolls also means 19- and 20-year-olds, and 18-year-olds out of school, may not have their medical bills paid by Medicaid.

Administration food stamp rules adopted by the board said families with incomes 30 percent above the poverty line can't get food stamps. The current poverty level is $8,450 for a family of four. That means four-person families with incomes of more than $10,985 no longer can get food stamps.

AFDC consists of state and federal funds, but Dukler said Texas will save only about $500,000 in state tax dollars over the biennium that began Sept. 1.

Reagan administration officials have suggested that private giving to the poor will take up some of the slack of welfare cuts, and Dukler agreed.

"I believe there will be an increase in the voluntary sector to help families...I think those kind of things are going to increase," he said.

Medicaid changes will save $6 million annually

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Board of Human Resources has decided on Medicaid changes a consultant says will save Texas $6 million a year but also could leave electronics millionaire H. Ross Perot as the only bidder.

Texas will continue using a mechanism under which it pays tax dollars to an insurance company to buy medical coverage for 700,000 needy Texans.

More than 600 insurers and computer companies were contacted by the board's consultants, and only Perot — who holds the current contract — said he definitely would bid for Texas' $400 million-a-year Medicaid business.

After soliciting and receiving bids, the board will award a new contract next year, to take effect March 1, 1983.

The board adopted a "quota share" insurance approach recommended by the Touche Ross & Co. consulting firm, which received more than $100,000 to evaluate the current system and offer alternatives.

The Texas Medical Association and the Texas Hospital Association said they like the present system. Less than half the state's doctors participate in Medicaid, according to board staff members.

"No compelling reasons have been presented to date to reverse a progressive system — many years ahead of the understanding of other states," said Burnham Jones, a vice president of the hospital association.

Perot's National Heritage Insurance Co. has had the Medicaid contract since 1977. It was underbid last summer by Bradford National Corp. of New York City, but the board — after first voting to award the contract to Bradford — decided to accept neither bid.

The Department of Human Resources avoided a lawsuit by paying Bradford a settlement of more than $3 million.

The state now pays premiums to Perot's company, which pays doctors and hospitals on behalf of Medicaid recipients. A huge "reserve" — which hit $163.7 million on July 31 — is available to the company for investment and for excess claims.

Federal officials have criticized the large reserve, which consists mainly of federal money, because it "contributes to the federal deficit."

The new system also uses the premium mechanism but creates a less generous reserve and imposes less risk on the insurer.

Texans say Reagan can expect blood-letting fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Early reaction of Texas congressmen to President Reagan's nationally telecast speech in behalf of a new round of spending cuts makes it clear another blood-letting soon will be taking place on the floor of the U.S. House of Representatives.

"His speech was very well delivered, but I don't think he is going to receive as much support on this as he did the last time," said Rep. Richard White, D-El Paso, a "boll weevil" who defected from the Democratic Party to support Reagan on the budget bill.

Less conservative Democrats were more explicit.

"I was impressed as usual with the president's ability to deliver a good speech, but to paraphrase the president, 'You can run but you can't hide' from the reality that the bottom line is that the administration's program will result in the largest deficit in American history," said Rep. Jim Mattox, D-Dallas.

"IT WILL BE hard to make this magnitude of cuts," added Rep. Martin Frost, D-Dallas, adding that the size of Reagan's tax bill made larger deficits inevitable. "Any agreed changes will have to be considered in the tax bill.

A more logical approach to curing the nation's economic ailments, Frost said, would be for the president to persuade the Federal Reserve Board to lower interest rates.

Rep. Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, the House majority leader, chastized Reagan for blaming Democrats for the deficit. Democrats were much more submissive than should have been expected, he said.

Wright said the national deficit figures that Reagan seeks to correct are the natural result of the president's insistence on a major tax cut and the largest peacetime buildup in the history of the country.

Despite the opposition, Rep. Phil Gramm, D-College Station, the author of Reagan's budget bill that won congressional approval, predicted the president's newest proposal also will win.

Texas Republicans agreed with that; other Democrats, even Gramm's fellow conservatives, were less sure.

"I BELIEVE congressional reaction will be similar to what we heard earlier this year," said Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, the deputy minority whip of the House, referring to the budget and tax bill battles Reagan won.

"There will of course be the partisan responses, but I think it will settle down in the House to where the efforts of the bipartisan coalition that brought success earlier this year will become very crucial again to achieve this $16 billion reduction," Loeffler added.

"The president's proposal for a mid-course correction to get us back on budget and back on target for a balanced budget in 1984 is sound economically and saleable politically," Gramm added.

"The president has taken a step that for the first time in 15 years assures that a budget that was set out is going to be lived with," Gramm added.

Loeffler said the president "has given us a real good course to continue our efforts to achieve a balaneed budget in 1984. We now have the president's new budget target, so we'll reload, take careful aim and go after the bulls-eye."

AS PART OF his recommendations for finding more revenue, the president recommended that more user fees be put into effect.

On that point, Wright said he'd be glad to go along if there is some distinction made between those who fly and sail for pleasure and "the farmer who has an airplane that he has to fly for the operation of his farm, the man who sprays for insects."

It's unfair, Wright said, to expect small aviation operators to pay 30 percent of the cost of building and maintaining and operating the airports. He said commercial jets ought to pay a relatively high portion of the total.

Asked about the proposed Social Security commission, Wright said "I don't think Tim O'Neill and I would be in favor of a proposition where he (Reagan) and (Republican Senate Leader) Howard Baker appointed two thirds of its members and the speaker on the other hand appointed one third. I think the speaker can count better than that."

Wright added that Social Security isn't simply a question of cutting benefits or raise payroll taxes, as Reagan implied.

"THERE'S A LOT of other things than can be done if necessary. We can enrich the fund from general revenues. We could put another nickel on a package of cigarettes and a quarter on a gallon of spirited beverages."

Here are comments from other Texas congressmen:

— Bill Archer, R-Houston: "Whether the Congress will accept this depends once again on the support of the American people for the president's proposals. I was particularly glad he did focus on Social Security apart from the budget, because Social Security does have special problems outside the overall budget, and we can't afford to sweep these problems under the rug."

— Ron Paul, R-Lake Jackson: "I think he will get the support of Congress, but I think he will have a harder job than the first time. We need all of those cuts plus more if we ever expect to get the budget balanced."

— Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford: "I was relieved to hear his assurances to Social Security recipients that the budget would not be balanced through their sacrifices. At the same time, we can't afford to ignore the long-range problems facing the system, and certainly the task force is a step in the right direction toward approaching those problems in a bipartisan manner."

Stenholm reserved comment on details of Reagan's plan until he can visit with people of his district when he returns to West Texas this weekend.

"The president once again asked citizens to let their representatives know their feelings on his proposal, and I fully expect my constituents to do that."

Moscow says plan hurts social needs

MOSCOW (AP) — President Reagan's latest budget-trimming proposals provide mainly for cutting down on "social and public needs," the official Soviet news agency Tass said today.

The Tass account of Reagan's economic speech to the nation Thursday night said the president had decided to cut the defense budget by "only" $3 billion in 1982.

Noting Reagan's renewed support in his speech for relatively heavy defense spending, Tass said that "in this connection, as usual, he referred to the 'military threat' from the Soviet Union."

"Reagan's proposals immediately brought sharp criticism in political circles," Tass added, citing criticism by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and others.

Radio Moscow said Friday that under Reagan's plan, "military expenditure, which is the main cause of budget deficits," will remain at record levels.

Hong Kong disappointed; Price of gold goes up

HONG KONG (AP) — Disappointment with President Reagan's new deficit-cutting program pushed the price of gold up $5.25 an ounce on the Hong Kong market Friday.

Dealers predicted that the U.S. budget deficit would be larger than the president's forecast, boosting his government's borrowing needs and maintaining upward pressure on interest rates.

Dealers said their initial reaction to Reagan's speech was that it contained no surprises, and that was a disappointment.

Reagan's budget-cutting getting much tougher as it does deeper

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan won his first round of budget cuts in a euphoric sprint. Now he's settling in for a marathon — and some of his allies may not be ready to go that distance.

After all, they'll be in another kind of race in the congressional election campaign a year from now. They are not likely to risk their prospects at the polls by running as Reagan budget-cutters unless they can point to dramatically lowered inflation and interest rates.

"The important thing now is to hold to a firm, steady course," Reagan said Thursday night in his fifth nationally televised address on his tax and budget program. It also is important that the course show results, if Reagan is to hold his economic alliance together.

The president counseled patience. But that already is wearing thin. "In recent weeks, we've begun to hear a chorus ... protesting that we haven't had full economic recovery," he said. "These are the same voices that were raised against our program when it was first presented to Congress.

"Now that the first part of it has been passed, they declare that it hasn't worked," the president said. "Well, it hasn't — it doesn't start until one week from today."

That is when the first phase of the tax cut and the first round of budget reductions take effect. But the change is not going to be dramatic in dollar terms.

Not all the voices that have been complaining lately are those of Reagan opponents. Nobody has outdone congressional Republicans in protesting high interest rates. Besides, some programs dear to Republican governors are marked for reduction in the latest package. And GOP moderates, solid for Reagan the first time out, are restive because they think the Pentagon should be targeted for more drastic cuts than Reagan proposed.

Furthermore, architects of the Reagan plan counted on a change in the psychology that feeds inflation and helps account for soaring interest rates. That dividend hasn't come in so far, and it is one of the reasons Reagan took his case to the nation once again.

He needs to convince the country and the business community, starting soon, that he can hold down the federal deficit, so as to ease the borrowing pressure that pushes up interest. "All of us know that interest rates will only come down and stay down when government is no longer borrowing huge amounts of money to cover its deficits," Reagan said.

Ironically, the interest rates that plague consumers are costing the government more than any other borrower. Every additional percentage point of interest costs an extra $2 billion a year to cover the cost of the national debt. And every time that happens, it increases the very deficits Reagan is trying to end.

The cutting gets tougher as it goes deeper. And Reagan said it is going to have to go deeper. "In the euphoria just after our budget bill was approved this summer, we didn't point out immediately that while we did get most of what we'd asked for, most isn't all," he said.

There was no such euphoria this time. "I know that we are asking for sacrifices from virtually all of you," said Reagan. "But there is no alternative. ...

"And let me be clear that this cannot be the last round of cuts. Holding down spending must be a continuing battle for several years to come."

Workers given rights in naming factory managers

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Parliament today passed a law giving workers greater rights in naming factory managers, in a major compromise between Poland's Communist government and its independent labor movement.

The measure passed the 460-member Parliament with no negative votes, but 15 abstentions, the official PAP news agency said. It gives both the government and workers rights to name supervisors and says disputes over choices may be arbitrated in court.

Both the Communist government and the independent union Solidarity had wanted full authority to hire and fire factory managers, but the union offered to compromise earlier this week.

According to Polish journalists, the measure would allow the government to have sole authority to nominate managers at certain vital factories, with talks between the union and government to decide which enterprises are to be considered vital.

The new law could significantly ease tensions between government and union officials if it is accepted by the 892 delegates to Solidarity's second congress in Gdansk on Saturday.

Solidarity's first congress earlier this month ended with a call for a national referendum on worker participation in business and industry.

The congress also demanded free elections for Parliament and legalization of free trade unions in other Soviet bloc countries. Government leaders said the union's 9.5 million members were attempting to seize power with their hardline stance.

Elsewhere in the capital, increased numbers of military police patrolled Warsaw streets and guarded government building's in response to Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski's declared war on anti-Soviet lawlessness he blamed on the independent labor movement.

"An end must be put to the disregard for legal norms, to deepening anarchist tendencies, to unbridled hooliganism, to anti-Soviet and anti-state excesses," Jaruzelski told the Sejm, Poland's parliament Thursday.

The premier, a general who is also the minister of defense, said army units were being assigned to the interior minister to assist the police in this task.

The increased military presence in the streets was discussed among the crowd of 100,000 that attended an open-air mass Thursday for the installation of Poland's Roman Catholic primate, Jozef Glemp, as archbishop of Warsaw.

Glemp called for unity "to lead us out of crisis and poverty," a unity "based on peace, national tradition, justice and love so that man doesn't have to shed his blood on the streets any more."

Jaruzelski told the Sejm supplies of sugar, wheat and cereals were improving, but production of coal, Poland's chief export, was falling rapidly.

The government has already ordered troops into the mines to boost production now estimated at 163 million tons for the year. The premier condemned Solidarity for rejecting the government's proposal to boost output by working free Saturdays for double pay.

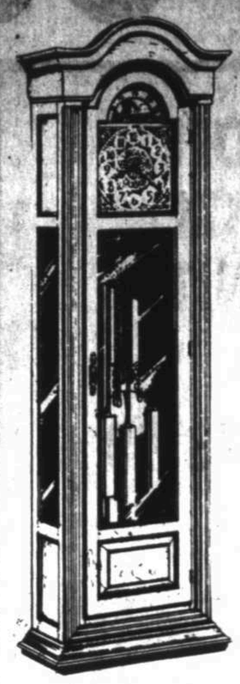

"Next year," he said, "to ensure even a minimal increase in the Polish economy, we need 175 million tons of coal. A smaller increase will mean a further recession, deepening the crisis in the country.

"Can the government, faced with such a prospect, remain passive and indifferent?"

Jaruzelski said Solidarity should muzzle its militancy when its national congress resumes on Saturday and "show the desire to understand the government's efforts to put into effect the economic reform and end the crisis."

In Brussels, meanwhile, the European Commission proposed that the 10-nation Common Market sell 720,000 more tons of grain, beef, butter and lemons to Poland at 15 percent below world market prices. If the 10 member governments approve, it will be the third cut-price food sale by Western Europe this year to help ease the Polish food crisis.

Carpenter miraculously survives building accident

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Melnick says some doctors who examine him "shake their heads in amazement" when they discover that the steel rod that pierced his head in a construction accident left him without major brain damage.

Melnick, a 29-year-old carpenter from Reseda, said doctors cannot figure out how the steel bar went into his head at the base of his neck and came out between his eyes without causing any damage to his eyes, brain, spinal column or key arteries.

Melnick was working on the construction of a Malibu house seven months ago when he fell 10 feet from the second floor. When he landed and tried to pull his head up, he found he couldn't, he recalled in a recent interview.

Other workmen — including his father — came running up, crying with horror, 'Oh, no!" and "Oh, my God!"

Melnick said that was when he realized his head was stuck on a steel reinforcing bar, five-eighths of an inch thick. Six inches of the rough-surfaced bar protuded from his face.

"When I finally realized what had happened to me my heart just dropped," he recalled.

As his father, Alexander, also a carpenter, and other workers tried to make him comfortable until medical help arrived, Melnick said he felt "sure I was going to die."

But he went into shock as lifeguards from nearby Zuma Beach sawed the bar from the concrete where one end was embedded, the sound vibrating in Melnick's head.

The bar was removed by Dr. Paul Ironside at Westlake Community Hospital.

Melnick since has accompanied Ironside to several medical meetings where doctors examined his fading scars and looked at slides taken when he was brought to the hospital.

He has had to be hospitalized seven times because of complications. His back was injured by both the bar that penetrated his head and another he fell on. He also suffered a shattered nose and tear ducts, and had nerve and muscle damage to his back.

The fall also left him with psychological damage and he has spent as many as six sleepless nights in a row because of fear of nightmares. He sees a psychiatrist to help him overcome the dread that has lingered through the accident. He said his worst fear is of falling helplessly through space.

Melnick said that at the time of the accident he thought he would "never see the child my new wife was carrying. That's what hit me the hardest while they were rescuing me."

But happily, Melnick has had a lot of time to see his new son, Michael Allen Jr., born to his wife Cheryl two months after the accident.

Minister will appeal court ruling

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — A controversial Pentacostal minister says he plans to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court a lower court ruling allowing the Internal Revenue Service to examine the bank records of his church.

The ruling by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans overturned a decision by U.S. District Judge William Steger of Tyler, who held the the IRS summons for the church's bank records would hinder the free exercise of religion.

The Rev. Charles E. Glass, pastor of the First Pentecostal Church, predicted the ruling will be appealed to the Supreme Court.

Glass said the ruling is a setback to religious freedoms, not only to his church but to all churches in America.

Glass and other church members are currently involved in a $5 million civil rights lawsuit filed against them by a group of ex-members and critics. He was first censured for his unorthodox religious teachings, then disfellowshipped in 1979 by the United Pentecostal Church.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, September 26, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The late Pope Paul VI (1897-1978) and American composer George Gershwin were born on this date. Also sharing this birthday with you: actress Julie London, who co-starred with her husband-musician Bobby Troupe in TV's "Emergency." Better employment opportunities are part of the picture in the months ahead. Do not be surprised if you now have more contact with government officials or politicians. Where finances are concerned, you will want to be a bit more adventuresome than in the past. Some risk-taking is fine, but do not overextend yourself. Romance takes an unusual turn. Recognize the difference between true love and infatuation!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Confusion could cause some distress early in the day. Family members may press you to participate in a variety of household projects and social events. You will enjoy doing something different.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): What you accomplish today could turn a hobby into a source of income. Loved ones will welcome the extra cash. Share a rare experience with those closest to your heart.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study a financial proposition very carefully. You may find that there are too many strings attached to make it really attractive. Show greater consideration for mate. Judge child fairly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take the lead where domestic issues are concerned. Do not pass up an opportunity to turn your ideas into extra income. This is not a good day to close property deals.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be deferential to someone influential at a social gathering. New contacts will help open doors previously closed. Exercise tact to avoid hurting loved one's feelings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A good day for business travel. You are able to score big with distant contacts. Agreements are finalized in your favor. Romance and social activities dominate the evening hours.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An excellent day for taking care of errands and domestic obligations. Your friends' cooperation will help you resolve a personal problem. Keep diet resolutions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Enjoy the slower pace at work, and tend to personal affairs. Travel is best postponed. Neighborhood functions may hold special appeal. Give your opinions only if asked.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A carefree day lies ahead. Loved ones are cooperative and you will be able to do pretty much as you please. Privacy may be hard to come by, however. Avoid talking business.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A good weekend to tend to odd jobs around your home. Progress with repairs will be slow but sure. Some highly beneficial influences are at work on your behalf. Be patient.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Mate will rebel if you make too many demands this weekend. Be more diplomatic, thoughtful and affectionate. Romance could be moving you in new directions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An older family member is watching to see how you hold up under pressure. Pace yourself and the day will be productive. Romance is under favorable influences.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	Pass	1 NT
Pass	2 NT	Pass	3 NT
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠.

What makes a great defender? High on the list of priorities is the ability to see how the play will develop and to take the necessary countermeasures. Watch West's defense on this hand from a U.S.-France match.

North-South were a trifle pushy to get to game after West had opened the bidding. South's aggressive action was based on the belief that the hand would play well since his partner's strong hand was poised over the opening bidder.

West hit on a good attack when he opted to start with a spade. Declarer finessed the ten, East won and continued the suit to dummy's queen. Declarer led a low heart and misguessed by inserting the nine, which lost to West's ten.

The automatic play would seem to be another spade, clearing the suit and setting up a trick for the defense with the ace of hearts as a sure entry. But as so often happens, the automatic play would be wrong. Declarer could then make the contract by winning the ace of spades, leading a diamond to the king and taking the diamond finesse. When both missing diamonds fall under the ace, declarer then puts West in with the ace of hearts. After cashing his long spade, West will have to lead a club away from the king, giving declarer two tricks in the suit and nine altogether.

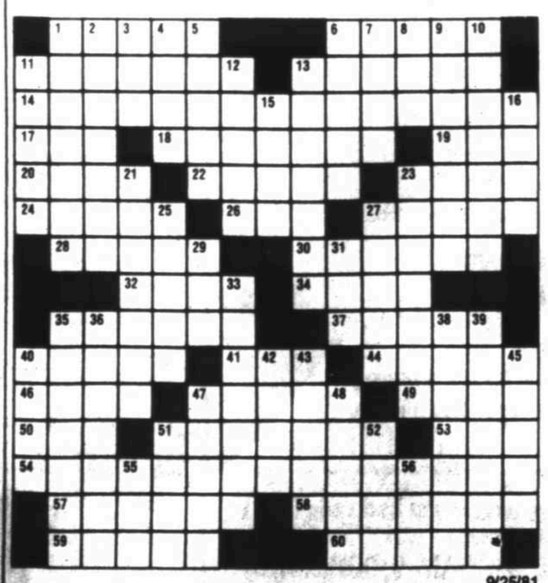

Fortunately for the defense, West was aware of this possibility and thwarted it with a simple but far-sighted maneuver. After winning the ten of hearts, he first cashed the ace of that suit before exiting with a spade. Now there was no way he could be forced to lead away from his king of clubs. All he had to do was sit back and wait to collect two more tricks for down one.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Chefs and assistants from the Academy of Culinary Arts, Mays Landing, N.J., put together what they claim to be the world's largest popcorn ball in Peekskill, N.Y., recently. The popcorn ball consisted of 4,000 pounds of popcorn, 4,000 pounds of sugar and 2,000 pounds of syrup.

Carter limited Cody investigation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Carter Administration limited a federal investigation into the financial dealings of Cardinal John Cody of Chicago because it was concerned about problems of separation of church and state, the Los Angeles Times says.

Former Deputy Attorney General Charles Renfrew said in an interview published Thursday that last December he ordered investigators not to do "a lot of check tracing" until they found out whether Cody maintained discretionary accounts that he alone controlled.

Check tracing is a method of investigating the sources and recipients of funds. Renfrew told the Times he was concerned about the First Amendment ban on government involvement in religion.

Cody, archbishop of the nation's largest Catholic archdiocese, is the subject of an investigation involving his alleged diversion of up to $1 million in church funds to his step-cousin, Helen Dolan Wilson.

Cody has vigorously denied the allegations.

"I didn't think it terribly important where the money went, if he had discretion," Renfrew told the Times. "It was something between the church and him."

Renfrew said he was also concerned about "people in the church who blew the whistle" on Cody by giving the U.S. Attorney's office information, the Times said. He did not identify any of the informants.

"I didn't think it behooved the Department of Justice to be involved in an intra-church squabble."

Job hiring quotas not to be enforced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, breaking with the policies of the last three administrations, says it will no longer go to court to force employers found guilty of sex or racial discrimination to abide by quotas in their future job hiring practices.

Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, chief of the Justice Department's civil rights division, told a House subcommittee that in suits brought to enforce federal laws against job discrimination the administration "no longer will insist upon or in any respect support the use of quotas or any other numerical or statistical formulas designed to provide non-victims of discrimination preferential treatment based on race, sex, national origin or religion."

Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., chairman of the House Education and Labor subcommittee on employment practices, called the change in policy, which applies to cases settled out of court as well as those that go before a judge, "patently idiotic" and said the administration was showing a "callous, insensitive and misguided abandonment of traditional remedies for employment discrimination followed by every administration since Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Government lawyers familiar with the subject say the Justice Department's basic policy for handling affirmative action cases was begun in the 1960s, during the Nixon administration, and has remained essentially unchanged.

Senate proposing more tax breaks for Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, as Congress is being urged by President Reagan to approve deeper cuts in federal spending, is proposing tax breaks that could be worth several thousand dollars a year for members of Congress.

Only hours before Reagan unveiled his new cost-cutting plans, the Senate voted 50-48 Thursday to repeal the $3,000 limit on tax deductions lawmakers can claim for living expenses in the Washington area.

Congress' Joint Committee on Taxation has estimated this step could cost the Treasury $3 million a year and give the average lawmaker an annual tax writeoff of $13,500. The congressional salary is $60,062 a year.

The Senate also came up with another present for itself when it endorsed removal of the present $25,000-a-year limit on the amount of honoraria senators can receive. The ceiling for representatives is $9,700 a year.

The Senate also voted to lift the pay cap imposed on several thousand top-level federal bureaucrats earning more than $50,000 a year. This could pave the way for some of them to get their first pay raises in four years.

The proposals were attached to an interim funding bill to keep the government running after fiscal 1981 ends Wednesday. The House has passed its version of the stopgap funding bill without the benefits.

Meanwhile Thursday, the Senate Finance Committee voted unanimously to restore the minimum Social Security benefit for most current recipients but cut the amount paid to people receiving government pensions of more than $300 monthly.

The panel's recommendation would allow all but 350,000 of the 3 million minimum benefit recipients to continue receiving $122 a month. The committee also voted to allow Social Security's strapped retirement fund to borrow from the system's healthier disability and medical insurance funds.

In other congressional business Thursday:

—In a rebuff of Reagan's foreign policy and a defeat for El Salvador President Jose Napoleon Duarte, the Senate voted to condition future U.S. military aid on reforms and human rights improvements in the troubled Central American nation.

Rejected 51-47 was an administration-backed amendment that sought to make the specific requirements goals, not conditions. In a letter to the Senate, Duarte called the conditions "unwarranted" and "unacceptable."

The conditions were placed in the foreign aid bill, which also opened the way for the administration's planned $3 billion aid program for Pakistan and removed a ban on U.S. aid to Argentina, Angola or "any individual group, organization or movement" in Angola.

—A limited extension of federal aid for interstate highway construction was approved by the House and sent to the Senate. The measure also authorizes the federal government to withhold highway funds from states that have weakened penalties for violating the 55 mph speed limit.

—CIA Director William J. Casey requested an exemption for all U.S. intelligence agencies from the Freedom of Information Act.

—Homebuilders, auto dealers, farmers and union officers told the Senate Small Business Committee that Congress, the administration and the Federal Reserve Board should to act to bring down interest rates.

Arson suspected in frat fire

COMMERCE, Texas (AP) — A second fraternity house near East Texas State University has been destroyed by fire, officials said.

Commerce Fire Department units were called to the Sigma Phi Epsilon house about 2 a.m. after a resident of the house reported the blaze, officials said.

The fire forced eight reisdents of the house to flee in their nightclothes, but no serious injuries were reported.

The blaze gutted the building and destroyed most of the personal belongings it contained, fraternity members said. Several rags were found scattered on the ground floor of the building and fire investigators removed a small square of carpet for laboratory analysis.

It was the second fraternity house fire in Commerce since Aug. 22, when the nearby Lambda Chi Alpha house was destroyed by fire, officials said.

Grand jurors renew Martin inquiry

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Grand jurors renewed their inquiry into Rep. Mike Martin's campaign and financial records just hours after the legislator stood before a crowded courtroom and pleaded innocent to an aggravated perjury charge, a prosecutor said.

The Longview Republican is accused of lying to a Travis County grand jury when he denied plotting his own shooting.

Martin spent an hour in the courtroom Thursday with dozens of other defendants before he told State District Judge Mace Thurman, "I am not guilty, your honor."

The judge scheduled Martin's trial to begin on Nov. 9.

A few hours after Martin entered his plea, Assistant District Attorney Bill Willms said grand jurors went back to work on the lawmaker's campaign and financial records.

The investigation is not over, and a subsequent grand jury will be asked to look at the records, said Willms.

"We are still looking into the campaign report. No decision has been made on whether to actively pursue charges on it," Willms told reporters. "There might be some felony charges there."

Published reports have alleged that Martin accepted an illegal corporate contribution from a Longview backer.

The aggravated perjury charge against Martin could result in a sentence of up to 10 years in prison. Thurman set a pretrial hearing for Nov. 5. Defense lawyer Frank Maloney said there was "still a possibility" he would ask Thurman to move the case out of Austin because of extensive publicity about the July 31 shooting.

Martin was wounded by buckshot fired at him as he got out of his car. The vehicle was parked near the camper he lived in during the special legislative session.

The indictment, returned Sept. 3, charged Martin lied to the grand jury when he said he did not plan the shooting. Charles Goff, Martin's cousin, said he was the gunman — recruited by Martin to fire the shots in a plot aimed at winning publicity.

Martin was considering running for a state Senate seat.

After telling police he did not know who shot him, Martin later said he was the target of an occult group that was out to get him. He eventually denied that story.

Martin sat with his wife, Debbe, in a second-row seat as they waited for his case to be called. They walked arm-in-arm from the courtroom after the brief appearance before Thurman.

Willms said there have been no plea bargain negotiations so far.

"There have been no overtures and I don't anticipate any," Willms said when asked about the possibility of a deal which would include Martin's resignation from the House.

Willms said he prefers taking cases to trial, rather than wrapping them up with a plea bargain.

"Let the jury decide what a particular crime is worth, if the defendant is guilty," he said.

The prosecutor said he would fight a change of venue motion.

Inflation almost under control, analysts say

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation is being brought under control despite two straight months in double digits, analysts say.

"Double-digit increases (in July and August) are an aberration, mostly due to rises in shelter care costs," said private economist Allen Sinai.

Housing costs eased somewhat in August so that inflation rose at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 10.6 percent, lower than the 15.2 percent pace of July, the government reported Thursday.

Another private economist, Sandra Shaber, said the August report indicated inflation is "on a moderating trend in the long run." Ms. Shaber predicted inflation for the year would run about 10 percent, compared with 12.4 percent in 1980.

"I think (inflation) is getting under control," said William Dunkelberg, a professor at Purdue University and an economic consultant for the National Federation of Independent Business.

He said he expected housing costs to register "ups and downs" in the inflation rate, as measured by the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index. The housing component of the Consumer Price Index is "going to behave very peculiarly for the next year or two," he said.

Sinai, vice president and senior economist at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., predicted housing costs would "begin to fade" in the last quarter of this year. He forecast that mortgage interest rates, which rose 1.3 percent in August, would show a slower rise in September's inflation measure.

Housing costs, which were up an overall 1 percent in August, should "tend to come down over the next few months," said Ms. Shaber, senior economist with Chase Econometrics of Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

August's increase in housing costs was the smallest since the 0.7 percent gain of April. They rose a sharp 1.6 percent in July.

The housing component of the Consumer Price Index has been criticized as overstating the real rate of inflation.

Sharp increases in housing prices include investment gains that shouldn't be reflected in the index, some analysts say. And sharp increases in mortgage interest rates result in large jumps in the index.

Three sentenced in school milk scam

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Three dairy company employees have been handed probated prison terms after they pleaded guilty to defrauding the federal government of almost $500,000 intended for use in a school lunch program.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda Thursday also fined Golden Jersey Creamery of Edinburg, employer of the three defendants, $10,000.

Federal grand jurors indicted the three defendants, the dairy, and several other present or former dairy and Mission Independent School District employees July 14 on charges alleging they filed phony vouchers to get federal reimbursement for undelivered half-pints of milk.

DeAnda sentenced dairy manager Frederick Hagedorn to a four-year probated prison term and a $5,000 fine. Others sentenced were dairy employees Dwayne Townes, who received a two-year probated term and was fined $1,500, and Irma Cortez, who was also sentenced to two years probation and fined $1,000.

A pretrial hearing is scheduled Monday for several Mission school employees who have pleaded innocent. Two other people who pleaded guilty will be sentenced September 29.

Presenting
Oscar de la Renta

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

Midland has never shied away from "doing it up in style." And the city showed its flair for high style Wednesday at Midland Country Club for the appearance of top world designer Oscar de la Renta.

The black-tie event, a benefit for the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale, was sponsored by the Midland Symphony Guild and presented courtesy of Julian Gold Inc.

Over 350 persons attended the activities, which consisted of cocktails, dinner and a style show.

Though de la Renta is already working on his spring collection, his showing Wednesday was of his fall 1981 fashions.

As he admitted, he used a whole array of ideas collected from his various travels, making use of embroidery details from Eastern Europe and the Middle East.

Sixteen professional models, including some from New York, San Antonio, Houston and Midland, displayed his new line of longer, fuller skirts paired with smaller, fitted jackets, new embossed leather jackets, great blanket wrap scarves and, for evening, extraordinary metallic embroidery and chiffons.

In a Wednesday afternoon press conference at the Country Club, de la Renta said that he always attempts to make clothes that are "very feminine, very romantic and beautiful."

"There is a mood for a much more sophisticated and simple way of dressing—getting rid of the gimmicks," said de la Renta. He said that First Lady Nancy Reagan is having a great deal of influence in how America is dressing today.

"She dresses well and in clothes that are right for her," he said. "She has brought a sense of dignity and style to the White House in fashion, something that has been lacking there for years."

He explained that fashion is knowing what is best for a woman and her liestyle. "Let's not confuse the issue," he said. "What is fashion for you may not be fashionable to me anymore."

"We in the American fashion world have more of a sense for the working woman than anywhere else. No one buys clothes for a specific season anymore—they buy clothes to last. Comfort is an important word."

"It is more difficult today for a woman than a man," he continued. "A man can go from morning to evening wearing the same outfit, but a woman is expected to change outfits for each different occasion she attends."

He declined to comment on the Midland fashion scene, explaining that he had not been here long enough to observe. "In Texas, however, the women have much more time for dressing than they do in New York or the Eastern United States," he said. "In Dallas and Houston, for example, I have noticed that the women dress very well."

He gave a hint of what his spring collection would be, saying that he has played heavily upon color and texture.

His Wednesday night showing revealed a few new features in what will very likely be trend setters.

He has designed some skirts in shorter hemlines and slimmer silhouettes. Shoes show a higher heel with the shorter hemline. Many of these skirts were designed for day wear in a suit look. Some were paired with a doubled breasted jacket, signifying a return to the sixties look.

He also threw in some shorter hemlines for evening wear, especially in classic and simple black velvet gowns. Many of these gowns featured simple rounded necklines or bare shoulders, perhaps with a touch of ruffle at the waist or hem.

"I have always worked with velvets—this collection using black with the added sophistication of vibrant colors and lace, or midnight blue velvet for a whole new range of evening shine.

"The importance of my new day looks involves the mixtures of shapes, a more ornamental way of dressing; silk taffeta blouses, silk embroidered velvet jackets, wool tapestry skirts; suede stoles trimmed with fur; jersey and tweed; herringbone and charmeuse.

His winter coat collection showed the influence of his Russian travels, featuring fur hats, big silhouettes and suede boots—many boots, and ALL in flat heels.

Receiving approval from the Midland audience was his line of evening looks that featured flowing fabrics of gold-shot silk in Paisley. And his "de la Renta" signature embroidered jackets in moire, gilded silk—some paired with chiffon blouses and full, soft silk taffeta pants or simple tuxedo black pants.

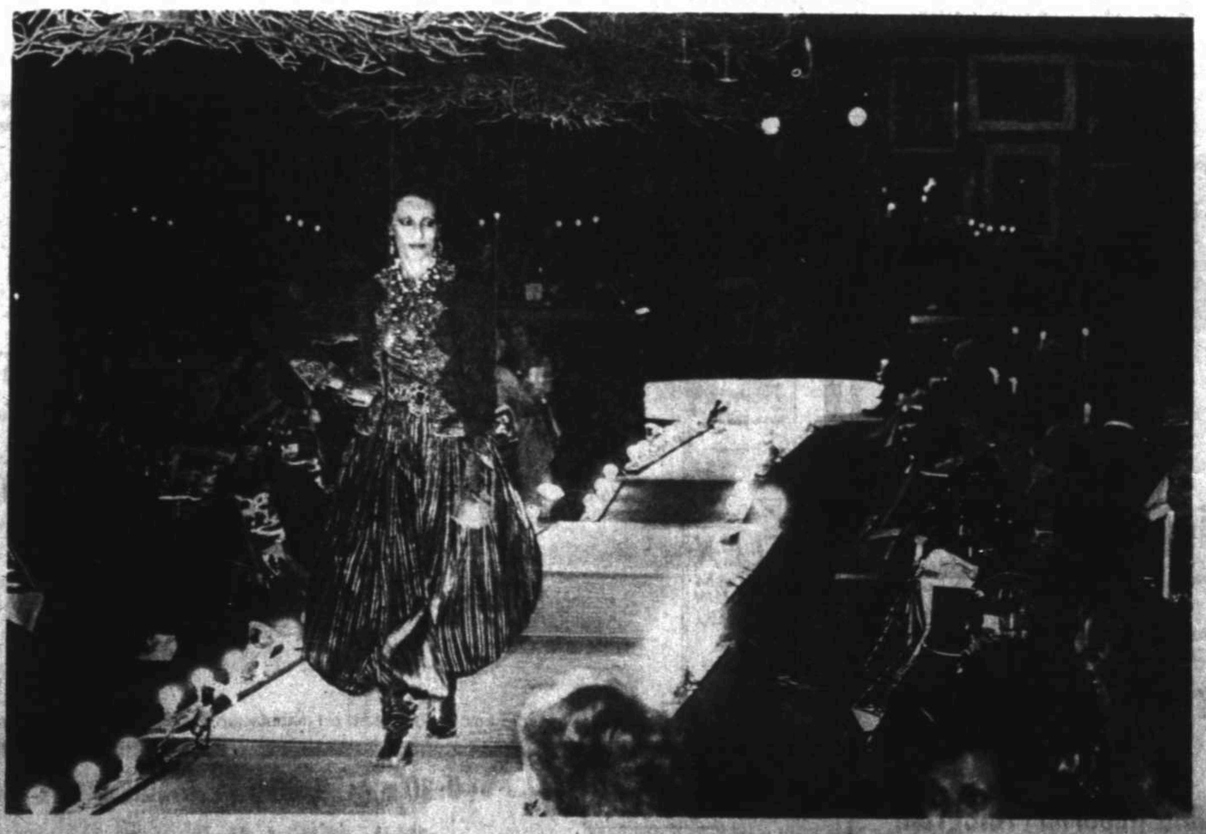

Almost a hundred ensembles were modeled in less than 30 minutes, presenting a compact, dramatic show.

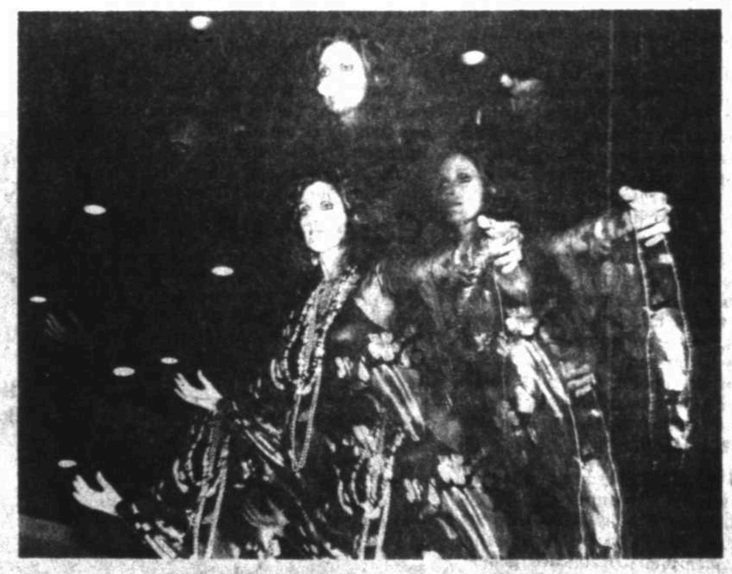

"After my good friend Bill Blass (another top American designer) has made it to Midland three times, it is nice to be able to visit here at last," said de la Renta. He and his staff of models received a standing ovation.

Chairman of the event was Mrs. Henry Tillett.

Pictured counterclockwise, from top: Oscar de la Renta takes a bow upon triumphant completion of his fall fashion showing Wednesday at Midland Country Club. Next: Receiving enthusiastic applause of approval from the audience was this model wearing a classic gown of black velvet with touches of ruffle at the hem and ascending to the waist. Note the shorter hemline. Third from top: Onlookers who paid $75 a table setting for the benefit event show a variety of reactions to de la Renta's designs. Newest fad for designers is putting name on candy

By ANN COMBS
Hearst Feature Service

In the beginning there were Levis, dungarees with a cattle brand on the hip pocket that let the world know you and I were wearing what the cowboys wore. Then Gloria Vanderbilt and Calvin Klein put aside their bolts of shantung and silk. They messed around with denim and top stitching and signatures in contrasting colors. And lo, the prices went up and behold, designer jeans were born.

In the beginning there were also chocolates, delectable morsels of candy with a telltale swirl on the top to let you avoid the cream if you preferred the nougat. Then Bill Blass, who'd missed out on the designer jeans bonanza, dipped his finger in a vat of bittersweet. He signed a bonbon or two. And lo the prices went up and behold, designer chocolates were born.

I haven't tried any Bill Blass chocolates. At $14 a pound it may be a while before I do, but I'm sure they're a cut above chocolate covered raisins. I'm also sure it's only a matter of time before others whose names ring well at the cash register will be signing designer chocolates, too.

No doubt Vera, who until now has been content to see her signature on scarves and tablecloths, will want to endorse a confection of sorts. She may even decide to package her sweets in a tissue box and suggest no home should be without one in every room.

Mary McFadden might like to sell five-pound slabs of quilted or pleated chocolate. Estee Lauder most likely will dig up an old world recipe for fondant, and offer a sample box with every $10 purchase of European performing cream. And of course she'll include a written guarantee saying none of her chocolates will ever cause even the tiniest blemish.

I assume Gloria Vanderbilt and Calvin Klein will want to try their hands at signing couturier candy, too. Gloria will probably come out with an assortment of stretch chocolates to go with her new line of stretch jeans. She'll have lovely young things nibble on her chocolates while they stand around showing off their autographed derrieres.

Calvin's bound to call on the services of Brooke Shields in his promotional campaign for Calvin KLein Designer Fudge. He may have her stand on her head with one leg wrapped around her neck all the while insisting, "Nothing comes between me and my fudge." Or he may have her look up as she creme-rinses her hair and pouts, "As far as I'm concerned, anyone who doesn't eat Calvin KLein Designer Fudge is a loser."

Once designer candies become a bona fide fad all sorts of celebrities should be jumping on the candy wagon. We'll see Jack Nicklaus Dimpled Bourbon Balls, Mean Joe Greene Marshmallow Creams. maybe even Billy Graham Divinity Fudge.

Undoubtedly there'll be a Bo Derek confection, at least there will if the chocolate dippers let husband John supervise the proceedings and guide Bo's hand for the signature. Richard Simmons should come out with a local chocolate chip mixture of yogurt and pureed Kadota figs. And I'm sure Johnny Carson will have a personalized candy with a guest signer autographing every other batch.

Then when the American status seeker has had his fill of designer chocolates, celebrity marizpan, and couturier bonbons, some imaginative entrepeneur will dash back to the drawing board and come up with a new prestige item. It may be a designer lawn mower with a tie-dye grass catcher and a macrame pull cord. Who knows? As long as they don't try to peddle a James Watt chainsaw most anything should sell.

Care of suede

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Proper care of suede leather requires frequent brushing with a dry bristle brush or a dry rubber sponge to prevent dust from settling in the nap of the suede, according to Sharon Hinchey, Extension clothing specialist at Oklahoma State University.

"You can easily remove any stains the garment has accumulated by using an art gum eraser, an emery board or chalk cleaner," she says. "Always let a wet leather garment dry away from heat in any form."

Foot problems

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prevention is the key to avoiding foot problems, says Dr. Rene Cailliet, professor and chairman of rehabilitation medicine at the University of Southern California.

Cailliet, who says he sees nothing intrinsically wrong in walking barefoot, believes that "children do not need shoes until they walk, and they need them then only for protection against stepping on something harmful.

White House redecorating completed

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — From carpets to handmade plumbing fixtures, Nancy Reagan is finished redecorating the White House, and her press secretary says the $822,641 from tax-deductible donations was enough. She originally figured it would cost less than a quarter of that.

"The bills aren't in yet, but we've kept within bounds," the first lady's spokeswoman, Sheila Patton Tate, said Thursday.

When Mrs. Reagan launched the fund-raising campaign last spring, she said she hoped to raise $200,000 for the first major refurbishing since Jacqueline Kennedy oversaw a similar project 20 years ago. She ended up spending $209,508 alone on 220 place settings of new state china.

Mrs. Patton refused to give a breakdown on how the remaining funds were spent.

Although complete details on the redecorating will not be revealed until photographs are published in December by Architectural Digest, an interior design magazine, Mrs. Tate revealed the following tidbits:

—The presidential bedroom has been painted salmon and peach carpeting has been installed.

—The Reagans' private living area is pale yellow.

—The president's office is read, with red-and-white carpets.

—Some of the new White House plumbing fixtures are handmade.

Mrs. Tate said some of the largest financial outlays went for plumbing, refinishing hardwood floors on the second and third floors, rewiring, reupholstering and replacing drapes and carpets.

"Some of the drapes were rotting from the sun ... and many rooms had not been repainted for up to 10 years," Mrs. Tate said. "The hardwood floors had not been refinished since the Truman administration."

Mrs. Tate said some of the plumbing fixtures for the bathrooms and kitchen had to be handmade because replacements for old broken and worn parts could not be found. She also said Mrs. Reagan has made some "art-type acquisitions."

Mrs. Tate said some of the public rooms in the White House, including the East Room, the State Dining Room and the grand staircase, have been repainted. She said all fireplaces have been cleaned and the marble on the White House ground floor has been cleaned by acid-etching.

The Reagans raised the money through private contributions, many from individuals with oil intersts in amounts ranging up to $50,000. They had rejected $50,000 appropriated by Congress for the refurbishing work, saying that wasn't enough money to do the job right and it was more appropriate to do it with private funds.

Amos in literacy campaign

CHICAGO (AP) — The Friends of Libraries, U.S.A., has elected Wally Amos to its Board of Directors, the first black person to serve on the board.

According to the American Library Association, of which the Friends group is an affiliate, Amos is using his success as president of Famous Amos Cookies as an inspiration to others, lending his promotional ability to the cause of wiping out illiteracy.

He has been a national spokesman for the Literacy Volunteers of America for two years, traveling throughout the country encouraging both adults and children to learn to read.

It's a snap to cut glass with these hints

By AL CARRELL

With football season in full swing, a lot of neighborhood quarterbacks are throwing passes through a lot of window panes. Taking care of replacing panes is certainly something most of us can do. But I'm not going to talk about that. I do have a FREE sheet that tells step-by-step how to accomplish this. A self-addressed, stamped envelope will get you that sheet.

Today I'd like to pass along some tips on cutting glass. It's a fairly simple chore, but if you have too much breakage, you'll end up blowing all your savings from having done it yourself.

The term "glass cutting" is really a misnomer. The inexpensive tool called a glass cutter actually only scores the surface of the glass. Then you snap it along that line for a smooth, clean break. You can buy a good glass cutter for about a buck, and if you take care of it, it'll last for a long time.

The process of cutting requires some practice. You need to learn just how hard to press to make the wheel score a line on the surface. After you learn how to do this, you can hear the wheel bite into the glass as you score. You soon learn to make one continously scored line without any skips. You should never go back over the line, so you have to get it right the first pass. Practice is the only way to get to that point. Even though the home centers and other glass dealers are experts, they break a lot of glass, and you might be able to get some of their scraps to practice on.

Glass should be clean for better scoring. Almost anything, oil from your hands, peanut butter or wax, on the surface can cause skipping. The cutter also glides along better if it's lubricated before each pass, and it's also a good idea to brush a coat of the lubricant along the line to be cut.

Once you get the feel of the stroke, you then have to learn how to snap the glass. You should make the break as soon as possible after scoring because glass tends to "heal," and you won't get a clean break if you wait. My favorite way is to place a headless nail under the glass at each end of the scored line. This raises the glass up just a bit, and then you can apply hand pressure equally on each side of the line for an even break. Other techniques include placing a dowel under the glass or moving it to the edge of the bench to snap it off. I'd suggest wearing safety goggles when cutting glass.

Here are some handy hints for better glass cutting:

Dear Al:

When handling a pane of glass, you must be careful of the sharp edges. You won't have to worry if you slip a slit piece of garden hose over two opposite sides of the glass to act as handles. — W.A.

+ + +

Dear Al: A good storage container for a glass cutter is an olive bottle with a wad of cotton in the bottom. Pour oil or kerosene in to saturate the cotton, and the cutter wheel is protected, lubricated and ready for work. — N.O.

+ + +

Dear Al: A slip-on rubber pencil eraser is just the right size to fit over the end of a glass cutter to protect the small wheel. — A.L.

+ + +

Dear Al: To smooth the edges of freshly cut glass so they won't be so dangerous, I use wet-dry sandpaper lightly moistened. I use a scrap of tongue-and-groove flooring to wrap the abrasive around the edge so I can smooth both edges at once without getting my hands near the sharp edge. The groove in this lumber will work for all but the very thick glass. — D.K.Y.

+ + +

Hope this helps you to see through the mysteries of glass cutting. It doesn't have to be a pain.

Antique or junque

By JAMES G. McCOLLAM
Copley News Service

Dear Mr. McCollam: What was the purpose of this little cabinet? It is solid walnut with burl walnut veneer and has a marble top.

I would like to know if it is an antique and what it would be worth on today's market. The hardware is beautifully made of brass and what looks like ebony. Inside the door is one shelf. — T.R.D., Ocala, Fla.

Dear T.R.D.: This is a fairly rare late Victorian commode or washstand. It was made after the Civil War and should be worth about $500 to $600.

The small size makes it very useful as a nightstand or almost any other use that would be convenient. It was customary to have a washbowl and pitcher on top and a chamber pot below.

Dear Mr. McCollam: What can you tell me as to the vintage and value of this chair?

It is curly maple with bird's-eye maple veneer on the back.

According to family tradition, it is over 100 years old and was brought over the Oregon Trail before the Civil War. — P.T.B., Chico, Calif.

Dear P.T.B.: This chair was made in the second quarter of the 19th century and would be classified as Empire. So it is quite possible that family tradition is accurate.

The market for Empire furniture has been weak for several years, but is beginning to strengthen. Chairs like this have been selling for about $100. They should be double that in a few years.

This would be referred to as a vase splat back chair.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Mend that rubber glove

DEAR HELOISE:

I am going to be a pauper from spending fortunes on rubber gloves. I always buy a good brand but manage to get a small hole or small tear when they are almost new.

Do you know how to repair them? — Hilary DeLoach

+ + +

Sure do, hon! Just cut a small notch from the cuff part of the glove, then put a drop of bonding glue on the hole.

Place the small patch piece on the glue and hold in place with a toothpick. Don't use fingers if you are using an instant type glue. Also, be sure the glue doesn't seep through to the inside of the glove, causing it to adhere to itself.

Your gloves will be as good as new and ready to protect those hands again. Never again will you have to discard pair after pair after pair... — Hugs, Heloise

CRISPER COOKIES

Dear Heloise: Put a paper towel under the lid of the cookie jar.

Helps to absorb moisture, thus the cookies won't become soggy as readily. — Reader

QUICK COOLER

Dear Heloise: I've been keeping baby teething rings in my freezer since my 9-year-old daughter was an infant. Now, my young son is past the teething stage, yet I'm not ready to discard them.

When their soup is too hot, I pop a water-filled, frozen teething ring in the bowl and, within seconds, it has cooled down.

The rings work with anything too hot, such as canned spaghetti, baked potato, etc. Best part, the food is undiluted as it wouldn't be with an ice cube.

Guess I'll keep teething rings in my freezer from now on since I saw my husband grab one and put it in his too-hot cup of coffee this morning! — Pat Herzog

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: When privacy is not a factor, get out of the customary habit of sealing letters immediately after placing them in the envelope. Wait until you get ready to put them into the mailbox.

Frequently, you would like to add a brief, additional note or hold up mailing for a few days, etc. This also affords you the opportunity to see if you signed the enclosed check, etc. — Charles H. Dawson

YARN THREADER

Dear Heloise: When working with yarn, the best thing I have found for getting the stubby yarn through the needle is the pull tab from a beverage can.

All you do is break off the ring and dispose of it, then take a pair of sturdy scissors and trim the narrow end of the tab until it will pass through the eye of the needle.

If it is too thick, take it out to the sidewalk and lightly pound the narrow end with a hammer. Rub it on the sidewalk to smooth the edge if needed.

I fixed my "yarn pusher" years ago and, best of all, it's free! — Phyllis Shreves

MARGARINE LIDS

Dear Heloise: A simple but efficient way to remove the printing from most lids of margarine containers, etc., is to rub the printing with a piece of cotton moistened in fingernail polish remover.

I save all these containers for one purpose or another. I use the red and green tubs during the holiday season for gift-giving goodies. — Peg Houk

BOOK MARKER

Dear Heloise: Keep your place in a book by cutting diagonally across the bottom corner of a used envelope.

The triangle fits perfectly on the top corner of any page. — Monica Bennett

FLOOR SCRUBBER

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a rather large, white-tiled kitchen floor, and when mopping, the black marks are very hard to get out.

So I made a 5-inch square of nylon net folded four or five thicknesses and stitched them together to stay in place.

While mopping, when I come to a black mark, or hard to remove spot, I drop my little square of nylon net on the floor, and with my foot, give a little rub. Works great!

No bending of an already weary back. These little squares are handy for other cleaning jobs, too. Of course, the floor cleaning scrubber is used for only that purpose, but I find myself busy making more and more. — Betty Nelson

+ + +

Now that's using the old foot... I mean "head." — Heloise

DIAPER DUTY

Dear Heloise: Here's a hint for new mothers. Instead of wringing out diapers by hand before washing them, just pour them into your automatic washing machine, soaking water and all.

Set it on "spin dry" for a couple of minutes to drain off the water, then rinse and wash as usual.

Saves time and drudgery. — J. Berry

CRACKER CRUSHER

Dear Heloise: When I make graham cracker crust, I use my food processor to make the crumbs.

They come out like powder more than crumbs, and I like the way the crust turns out.

If I have extra crumbs, I use them in place of flour when flouring a cake pan. Gives a good taste to the batter. — Peg Kreps

BENEFICIAL GAME

Dear Heloise: The following is a game my children were very fond of when they were growing up, and one that served a useful purpose.

The child would pretend to be lost, and I would play the part of the friendly policeman.

What followed was a question and answer exchange that gave me a chance to teach my child useful information about the family.

"How old are you?" "What is your telephone number?" "What is your name?" "Where do you live?"

You can go still further by asking the names of family members, where parents work, etc.

All these are questions your child, even very small ones, should be able to answer, and my children practiced learning and giving this information in a way which was fun, and yet instructive. — Helen Bullen

+ + +

Please, parents, take the time to teach your child these few important pieces of information. Anytime your child may be separated from you, you'll at least be confident in knowing he knows his name, address and telephone number and how to seek help. — Heloise

+ + +

THIS COLUMN is written for you... the homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem write to Heloise in care of this newspaper. Because of the tremendous volume of mail, Heloise is unable to answer individual letters. She will, however, use your letters in her column whenever possible.

Local club plans dance to benefit St. Jude's

The Beta Eta and Beta Omega chapters of Epsilon Sigma Alpha in Midland are sponsoring a country and western dance to benefit St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

Dance will be held Oct. 3 at the American Legion Hall, 501 Air Park Road.

St. Jude's purpose is to help children everywhere live. It is the largest center for the study of childhood cancer and other catastrophic diseases of children, and for that reason, has worldwide impact.

Upon diagnosis and a doctor's referral, a child from anywhere in the world may be accepted and treated free of charge.

Also, research at the hospital helps more than those brought to Memphis. Each year doctors, nurses and scientists visit St. Jude's to exchange and share vital knowledge.

Finishing redwood deck

By GENE GARY
Copley News Service

Q. I have a redwood deck about 3 years old. I was told to let it weather for a reasonable period before putting anything on the surface, which I did.

I went to a few paint stores for advice in what to use, All of them recommended the same thing — a stain and wood preservative for exterior siding and deck. I tried it and it seems to just peel off — not all of it, just in a few places.

I have applied it twice and hate to do it again if I face the same trouble. It has a dull finish which I like, if it just wouldn't peel off. Can you offer any suggestions? — Mrs. J. McC., Seaford, Long Island, N.Y.

A. First remove the peeling finish and start over again, as with new wood. A sander, which can be rented, would be theeasiest method to remove the old finish.

The California Redwood Association recommends a water-repellant finish over any other type of natural finish. A water-repellant preservative is a solution of hydrocarbon wax, such as paraffin, resin, or resin and non-volatile oil, and a preservative, such as chlorinated phenol, in mineral spirits or other volatile solvents. It penetrates and continues for some time to spread into the wood.

The wax and possibly the resin and oil make the surface of the wood repellant to water, and the preservative also adds mildew and decay resistance to the wood.

This type of water-repellant finish is manufactured under a variety of brand names.

Q. I have a fireplace of slate which is discolored. I think it is caused from ashes that have collected in the crevices.

I have washed it, scrubbed it, and even went to a masonrysupply dealer and used a product which he recommended. Instead, the condition gets worse.

Can you please tell me what to do to make the slate black again? — Mrs. John B., San Diego.

A. Slate is practically immune to all common chemicals and any of the usual cleaners may be used.

DEAR ABBY

Loss of baby is husband's loss, too

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently lost a premature baby boy. He was our first child and the first grandchild on both sides. My husband and I were both very grateful to our family and friends for their support during such a difficult time. However, all the flowers, gifts and condolence letters were addressed to ME. My husband hardly left my side during my stay at the hospital. That dear man stood on his feet for 12 hours beside me while I was in labor. When the baby was born we both held him and wept together, knowing he would live only a few hours. It was OUR loss and we both grieved.

Abby, why do people consider the loss of a child only the mother's loss? It's the father's loss, too. Please remind your readers that men need just as much support as women when their children are ill or dying.

I was given time off from work to recuperate emotionally, but my husband had to go back to work the day after our baby died. Thank you for letting me get this off my chest. — E.W.

DEAR E.W.: Thank you for a valuable addition to this column. You also inadvertently gave a boost to the Equal Rights Amendment, which would give men as well as women time off work to recuperate emotionally after the death of a child.

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive bachelor who would really like to get married, but it seems the only women I find appealing are married! Being a romantic, I get involved with them anyway, which leaves me very little time to court single women, should I happen to meet one I like.

I can't figure out why married women hold such a fascination for me. They were all single before they were married, and many of them were available, but I had no interest in them. Why, oh why, Fair Oracle? — LIKES 'EM MARRIED

DEAR LIKES: Elementary. You really don't want to get married, because you aren't prepared to make a commitment. The married ones are "safe" — and so are you. Grow up!

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this in hopes that some of the older generation moms will read it and be more understanding of young mothers who work.

I have a beautiful 3-month-old baby. She is my second child. I plan to go back to work next month. I've always worked part time to help support our family. My working outside the home is not a matter of luxury, it's a necessity. You would think people would realize how expensive it is to raise a family today, but I guess they don't.

Abby, I am sick of hearing older moms, including my own, say, "How can you leave that beautiful baby all day?"

Now I just reply, "This beautiful baby likes to eat!" Sign me ... I'D RATHER BE HOME

DEAR RATHER: That's food for thought. Well said.

DEAR ABBY: My mother and my best friend are having a disagreement. My friend says that a girl can't get pregnant the first time she has sex. My mother says that is a lot of hogwash. Who is right?

I'm sure many girls are wondering the same thing. Sign me ... HAS NO IDEA

DEAR HAS: Your mother is right!

Making money and making people happy

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — When Geoffrey Aydelette gave up analyzing securities and took up matchmaking, his goal was to meet lots of attractive women and get rich in the process.

Six years later, Aydelette is meeting women all over the country. His computer matchmaking game, Selectrocution, is bringing in about $200,000 a year.

"I'm making money and I'm making people happy," said the 31-year-old Greensboro native. "What more could I ask for?"

Aydelette calls his game, which is featured in nightclubs up and down the East Coast and in California, "an audience-participation game for singles." He came up with the idea while he was spending his evenings in singles bars.

"It was pretty silly. The guys would be lined up at the bar watching the girls and the girls would be sitting around looking back. It never got much further than the looking stage," Aydelette said.

"I just thought if I could come up with a game that would help people meet people and have a good time, too, it would be great," he added.

Selectrocution is easy to play. Players coming into a club where the game is offered are given a decal to pin on and a scorecard. Each player chooses two initials that are printed in big letters on the decal and the game card. After that, there are no rules. People do whatever they would usually do in a singles bar, but all the while they check one another out.

If a player wants to send a message to another player, he gives the message to one of Aydelette's staff members who types it into the computer. It appears on a large screen for everyone to see. For example, a message might say, "To SX Male. I'd like to meet you. Want to dance? From TK Female."

At the end of the evening, male and female players rank each other on their sex appeal by voting for their favorites on their scorecards. If a person gets few or no votes, the computer declares him or her "selectrocuted."

"The game can be a brutal form of entertainment. It doesn't spare your feelings," Aydelette said.

Aydelette runs the Selectrocution business from his modest brick home on the outskirts of Greensboro. Two-person crews operate the game at night spots in Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Massachusetts. Computer time is bought from a Richmond, Va., company.

"There was a time in the beginning when I traveled everywhere, helping run the game. I didn't have the money to hire a lot of people to help me, just my father and my brother," Aydelette said.

Aydelette gets about $500 a night from clubs where Selectrocution is featured. But he said the clubs get their money's worth from their investment.

"It can take a slow Tuesday or Wednesday night and turn into the busiest night of the week," he said.

Selectrocution has been written up in several national magazines and featured on East Coast TV newsmagazine shows, but Aydelette said he depends mostly on word of mouth for advertising.

Meanwhile, he has plans to take Selectrocution into Florida and try it again in his home state. Selectrocution made its debut at a Greensboro nightclub in 1975.

"We sort of bombed in North Carolina when the game first came out," he said. "But liquor by the drink (now) gets a lot more people into the bars, and I think Selectrocution will go over a lot better now."

Cellulite doesn't exist says American Medical Association

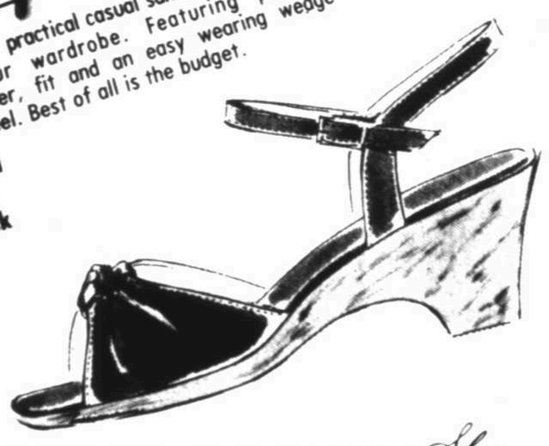

The form of fat commonly called cellulite doesn't really exist. That's what the American Medical Association has concluded after an extensive investigation, according to a recent Family Circle magazine article on permanent weight-loss strategies.

Though many people believe that dimpled lumps and pockets of unsightly fat are "cellulite," while the rest of the body's fat is "fat," the association says there is only one type of fat. Also, says the article, the AMA has found that devices made to dissolve so-called cellulite are of little use.

Ferry captain likes the ride

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN
Associated Press Writer

OXFORD, Md. (AP) — The bartender at Pope's Tavern lives across the Tred Avon River in Royal Oak, Md., which means he has two ways to get to work. Unless his timing's off, he takes the ferry.

"If I come along just as the ferry's leaving," Tripper Showell said, "I can usually drive around and get here just about when it does."

So, it's not to save time that he goes by water.

"I just like the ride ... It settles your nerves," Showell explained.

For almost 300 years — longer, in private hands, than any other in the country — the Oxford-Bellevue Ferry has been plying its three-quarter mile-route. And for almost 50 years, the pilot has been Bill Benson.

Around this trim Eastern Shore town, Benson is known to Showell and others as "Captain."

Now, he's working part-time and the small ferry he ran by himself has been replaced by two larger ones with small crews.

"I've done nothing but work long hours all my life," said Benson, 73, his squint squeezing a smile. "If anybody'd told me I had to work a 40-hour week, I'd have thought I was on vacation."

Making 32 round trips on a typical day, Benson said, it's been "a pleasant life" because it has given him a chance to chat across the wheel.

"Maybe I talk too much," Benson said. "But people come back, to talk some more."

The Oxford-Bellevue Ferry, which carried its first passengers for a fare of tobacco, is one of five such services operating in Maryland — from White's Ferry on the Potomac River in the west to the Crisfield-Smith Island Ferry in deepest watermen country at the bottom of the Eastern Shore.

The Oxford-Bellevue ferry line started in 1683, when the Talbot County Court "pitcht upon Mr. Richard Royston to keepe a ferry." In the early days it was rowed, according to a diary in Oxford's town museum, and later a steam tug towed a skow.

"The first experience I had on the water," Benson recalled, was a long way from his Eastern Shore home. As a young man, he worked on deck and in the engine rooms of pleasure yachts that operated off the New England coast and on Long Island Sound.

Compared to that, it's been smooth sailing on the Oxford-to-Bellvue hop all of these years. "I've been frozen up and couldn't run" a few times, Benson said, but rarely have problems been serious.

Benson's years aboard the leisurely paced ferry named after the Tred Avon have given him time to think, and he dispenses his philosophy freely from his shady front porch within site of the ferry dock.

Economics is a favorite topic. He concludes one lesson in what's right and wrong with the interest and inflation rates by saying, "The last 10 or 15 years are the best people have ever lived" — in terms of how much an hour's pay will buy.

Benson remembered buying his boat in 1938, when hourly wages were around 15 cents and the fare was 40 cents for Talbot County residents and 60 cents for others. The county owned the dock.

"I just said to heck with it. I'll charge everybody 40 cents," Benson recalled. "I should have charged 50 cents."

Now, the fare is $2.75 for car and driver, plus a quarter per passenger. At that rate, the ferry operator to whom Benson sold his business, Gilbert Clark, has enough business to keep busy two barges, both larger than Benson's.

Shifts toward single-sex schools

By TRUDY TYNAN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Six years after allowing boys past their school's ivy-covered walls, trustees of one of New England's oldest girls' boarding schools have decided coeducation is not their cup of tea.

"Attitudes have changed since the big rush towards coeducation in the 1970s," says Robert Bussey, headmaster of Miss Hall's prep school. "It seems incongruous in these times of modernism, but there has been quite a swing back towards the single-sex schools.

"We decided it was time for Miss Hall's to resume its historical role in the education of females."

Nancy Hinsdale started the boarding school, the first for girls in Massachusetts, in 1806. After her departure, a subsequent owner of the property closed it. The school was revived in 1898 by her great-niece Myra Hall. It became Miss Hall's School.

Down to 126 students when trustees decided to go coed in 1975, Miss Hall's now has an enrollment of 200 from 21 states and 17 countries. The school, where tuition is $7,450 a year for boarders, will not actually become all-girls until 1984, or until the last of the dozen boys currenty enrolled leave, Bussey said.

There were never more than 30 boys at Miss Hall's — which teaches grades 9 through 12 — and they were strictly day students, not allowed to board.

According to Ralph West of the New England Association of Independent Schools, Miss Hall's is the first former all-girl preparatory school to turn away from coeducation in a region that contains more private schools than any other in the country.

"I don't think the future of single-sex schools is in doubt any longer," West said. "The all-girls schools that decided to stick it out are very glad they did. They are flourishing."

Of the 203 prep schools that belong to the association, 34 remain all-girls and 29 all-boys, West said.

"It's fantastic. They are breaking the doors down trying to get in," said William Lauber, headmaster of the 91-year-old McDuffie School for Girls in Springfield.

Author explains Jewish etiquette

By JOHN J. MULLINS
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Helen Latner defines etiquette as a "road map of how to behave in stressful or very happy" situations. So her new book makes her a Jewish cartographer of sorts.

"It's the only book in print on the subject," Mrs. Latner said of "The Book of Modern Jewish Etiquette," published this month by Schocken Books.

"Jewish customs are just a footnote in many of these (other etiquette) books," she said in an interview. "I felt that somebody ought to set out ... what the proper Jewish way is to do these things, because it is different."

Her book covers subjects from good manners, dietary laws and special occasions, to traveling and coping with Christian holy days that also are civil holidays.

"This tells you what the right things to do are. ... My book covers all three (Jewish) viewpoints (Orthodox, Reform and Conservative) and the one of the non-observant person," she said. "And, of course, it is a guide to the non-Jew."

Hebrew and Yiddish words in the text are listed in an index with the pages on which their definitions are given.

"I would say I'm a conservative on the liberal side," Mrs. Latner said of her own religious views.

She retired about four years ago as assistant principal and head of the English Department at Theodore Roosevelt High School in The Bronx, N.Y. Born and raised in New York City, she became fluent in Yiddish language and culture.

She was co-creator of Collectors Guild, producing recordings of Jewish music; is author of "The Round The World Jewish Cookbook," and writes a weekly advice column for The Jewish Week.

She lives much of the year in Becket in the Berkshire hills of Massachusetts, but maintains an apartment in New York's Brooklyn Heights.

"I've been thinking about the book for 25 years. I started thinking about the need for it when helping a rabbi friend arrange a wedding," she said.

"A lot of this material comes out of my own deep life experiences. ... I've studied the Talmud, Hebrew, Jewish history and (have done) much research into Jewish history," she said.

"Etiquette is an important section of the Talmud (book of Jewish laws) — how you treat your fellow man and how you present yourself as a scholar to the community," she said.

"I got to know people that cut across the whole spectrum of Judaism. ... I did a lot of research for the book, with rabbis and social agencies. And, you ask people. ... It's based on life experiences and research, both," she said.

"It's really not a religious book," she said. "It doesn't preach a religious viewpoint. It tells how to enjoy life from the Jewish point of view."

Army fare gets four-star rating

By MARNA PERRY
Associated Press Writer

ABERDEEN, Md. (AP) — For members of the nation's volunteer Army at Aberdeen Proving Ground and Ordinance Center, KP duty is a fond memory of the way things were done in the old days.

The Army has begun educating full-time chefs to improve food, and already has upgraded the fare at Aberdeen to rival the cuisine of four-star restaurants, an APG cook said.

"The quality of food here has definitely improved," Spec. 4 Scott Schimmel, 20, a cook at APG, said in a recent interview.

Schimmel was one of five Army chefs here sent to L'Ecole, the Baltimore Culinary Arts Institute, as part of a program started last January.

"I never thought I'd get the chance to go to chef's school," Schimmel said. "I never thought I'd be able to afford it."

Schimmel, whose father is a chef at The Penthouse in Harrisburg, Pa., said he attended a week-long class at the institute on "garde manger," or buffet foods.

"It was definitely a good course," he said. "We were making pates and decorating them."

Warrant Officer Gary Rosynik, the APG installation food officer, said Schimmel, an award-winning cook, is to return to L'Ecole this fall for a pastry class.

"The Army is trying to improve food for the troops and provide an incentive to entice people to join, such as this specialized training. It's necessary for the volunteer Army," Rosynik said. "We have to ask, 'What have we got to offer to attract people and then to get them to stay in?'"

Rosynik noted that "there is a shortage of cooks in the Army," although he said he didn't know how severe the shortage was.

"We're trying to encourage people to go into cooking," he said.

Both Rosynik and Schimmel said the food at Aberdeen is more varied since the program began.

"We now offer continental breakfasts for the troops and fast-food lines at lunch and dinner," Rosynik said. "We're stealing business from Gino's."

He added that Aberdeen also has instituted specialty nights for suppers around such themes as Italian night or Black Heritage Week, "with ice carvings and centerpieces, and we allow others, like families and friends, to join" for the meals.

"We try to keep the guys here to feed them so they don't have to spend money outside," he said.

The Army has an apprenticeship program for cooks who can obtain civilian recognition as a journeyman or cook and can achieve up to executive chef training and credentialling, Rosynik said. He added that attendance at L'Ecole "goes into their portfolio."

Schimmel "probably would qualify now as a journeyman cook," Rosynik noted.

Terrorists end siege in Paris

PARIS (AP) — Three Armenian terrorists demanding the release of Armenian prisoners from Turkish jails surrendered early today after holding about 60 hostages for 15 hours in the Turkish Consulate in central Paris.

A fourth terrorist gave up hours earlier after he was wounded. Police said a Turkish security guard was killed early in the siege, and a Turkish diplomat and one of the other three gunmen were wounded.

The two wounded terrorists were hospitalized and the other two were taken to police headquarters. They all requested political asylum in France.

Their demands were rejected despite repeated threats to blow up the eight-tory building and kill their captives, police said.

Armed with pistols, a submachine gun and hand grenades, the four men seized the consulate on the Boulevard Haussmann and everyone in it Thursday morning. They said they were "suicide commandos" of the Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia. The group has claimed responsibility for more than 200 bombings and assassinations, most of them against Turkish targets, in the past five years to avenge the massacre of an estimated 1.5 million Armenians in Turkey in 1915.

Police said the terrorists, in their mid-20s, were Lebanese of Armenian descent. They demanded the release of Armenians "political prisoners" they said were being held in Turkish jails along with two Armenian religious figures, five Turkish revolutionaries and five Kurdish revolutionaries.

The Turkish government denied it was holding any Armenian political prisoners, refused to negotiate with the terrorists and demanded that the French government secure the immediate release of the hostages.

Members of the crack French anti-terrorist squad surrounded the consulate. Marksmen in flak jackets kept aim on the building, while anti-terrorist police chief Robert Broussard negotiated with the terrorists throughout the day.

"The negotiations were made difficult by the attitude of the terrorists," he said. "We couldn't follow their reasoning. They passed through phases of calm where we could reason with them to phases of hysteria where we feared the worst."

Broussard said police were prepared to storm the consulate but delayed the assault because they did not know what was going on inside.

Demonstrations by rival Armenian and Turkish groups outside the consulate made the terrorists nervous, police said. Fights broke out between the two groups, who were kept back by police barricades.

One of the freed hostages told reporters that after the building was seized, the terrorists bound the hands of all the hostages and forced them to lie on the floor.

College Board will try to raise scholastic standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — The College Board, whose Scholastic Aptitude Test has mirrored what many view as a steady deterioration of the nation's high schools since 1963, is starting a drive to raise scholastic standards.

The board on Thursday unveiled its own definition of the minimum skills all college-bound students should possess and said it will seek nationwide adoption of the standards.

George H. Hanford, president of the College Board, told a news conference that just as school quality slid during an era of burgeoning enrollments, the time is right to boost standards with fewer youngsters in the classrooms.

Hanford said the board's 10-year "Project EQuality" is aimed at both improving school standards and preparing more minority students for college.

The board — a non-profit group of 2,500 colleges, schools and education associations — said it conferred with more than 400 educators over the past year to reach a consensus on six basic academic competencies needed for college. They are reading, writing, listening and speaking, mathematics, reasoning and knowing how to study.

In addition, it said, the "basic academic curriculum" should include courses in English, mathematics, foreign language, history or social studies, natural science and the visual and performing arts, regardless of whether a student is bound for Harvard or a community college.

In the year ahead, after more talks with teachers and curriculum experts, the board will offer a more detailed definition of what students should have learned in those courses.

Since "the content and difficulty of high school courses, even though bearing the same label, may vary widely," the board said it will try to define what students should learn "rather than simply number of years studied."

Hanford said the project "is not an attempt to establish a single national curriculum." It will be up to schools, colleges, teachers, parents and students to carry out the drive for higher standards, he said. "Standards have been going down for nearly two decades. It will take at least one (decade) to recover."

Asked if the board would develop tests to measure whether students have mastered those minimum skills, Hanford said, "We'll look to the testing part if and when it's appropriate." He said the current SAT would not fill that bill.

The average verbal SAT score, on a 200-to-800 scale, has dropped from 478 to 424 since 1963. The average math score has dropped from 502 to 466.

The board has budgeted $500,000 in the year ahead for the project. It got $95,000 from the Ford Foundation to meet with inner-city educators and to host a symposium in St. Louis last May on the basic competencies and curriculum.

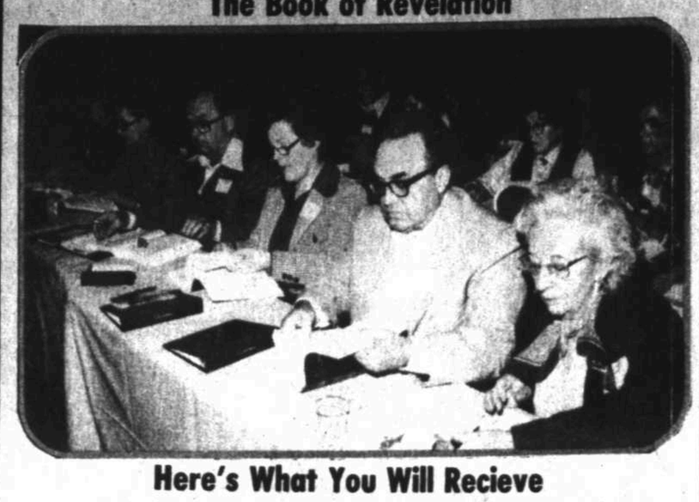

The board also has embarked on a three-year effort funded by a $1 million grant from the Minnie Stevens Piper Foundation to prepare more Hispanic youth for college in San Antonio and Bexar County.

Navy jet crashes near Brownwood

BROWNWOOD, Texas (AP) — Two people ejected to safety today when a Navy jet burst into flames and crashed during a training drill, authorities said.

The F-4 Phantom jet crashed 4 miles south of Brownwood about 9:45 a.m., said Capt. Ren Stedman of the Dallas Naval Air Station, to which the plane was attached.

The two reserve pilots aboard, Lt. Cmdr. Danny R. Thomas of Arlington and Lt. Cmdr. Carl T. Springfels, were not injured. They were escorted to the Brownwood Police Department after the crash.

Stedman said the cause of the crash was under investigation.

O'Connor sworn in as Supreme Court justice

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sandra Day O'Connor, assuming a job held by 101 men before her, is taking her place as the first woman on the Supreme Court, promising to "do equal right to the poor and the rich."

Mrs. O'Connor, an Arizona appeals court judge, was to be sworn in during a brief ceremony today as an associate justice of the nation's highest court.

Two hours before her swearing-in, Mrs. O'Connor posed for photographers and television camera crews in the brilliant sunlight of the court's massive front plaza.

She was accompanied by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who asked photographers, "You've never seen me with a better looking justice, have you?"

Asked how she felt on the threshold of history, Mrs. O'Connor smiled and replied, "Just great."

She was dressed in the robe she wore as a state judge. "I'll buy a new one eventually," she said. "They do get old, you know. The arms get all worn out."

The chief justice suggested that Congress might be willing to appropriate funds for a new robe.

Mrs. O'Connor, her arm held by Burger, posed with her parents, Harry and Ada Mae Day; her husband, John; and their three sons.

Mrs. O'Connor appeared relaxed, and laughed heartily as a close family friend, former Phoenix Mayor John Driggs, turned the tables on reporters and photographers and began taking photos of them at work.

President Reagan, who broke a 191-year, all-male tradition when he appointed Mrs. O'Connor to the lifetime job, was among some 500 guests invited to watch as Burger administered her oath of office.

Also invited was retired Justice Potter Stewart, the man Mrs. O'Connor was picked to succeed.

Following a court tradition, Mrs. O'Connor had to take two oaths, one during a private meeting of the justices and the other in the marble and mahogany courtroom.

HELP cures elderly of housing headaches

By JOHN C. GIVEN
Associated Press Writer

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Julia Schick has traded her housing worries for a new roof, free rent and an extra $52 a month while launching an experiment some say could help elderly homeowners around the nation.

"I feel like queen for a day," said Ms. Schick, 66, after signing the first of an expected 80 contracts to be offered under the Home Equity Living Plan, a non-profit organization designed to give house-rich, cash-poor senior citizens a chance to profit from their equity without having to move from their homes.

After an appraisal, search and survey, the participant begins receiving a monthly check, based on the value of the home and the owner's life expectancy, as determined by insurance industry mortality scales. The payments continue until the participant's death, when the house reverts to HELP.

HELP, backed by $1.3 million in federal block grant money, assumes all tax and insurance payments, immediately performs repairs and continues a 24-hour maintenance service.

Homeowners sign an agreement which allows them to live in their homes as long as they like," said HELP Director Donna Guillaume.

"They're retaining the best parts of owning a house — the shelter portion — and they're selling away the headaches and responsibilities," she said.

"When the participants no longer need the house — usually when they die — we then market the home to someone who will live in the neighborhood," Ms. Guillaume said. "We recoup our investment and then can take someone else" into the program.

Until HELP came along, Mrs. Schick she said she had been supporting herself — and the house — on monthly payments of $303 in social security and a $50 pension from a department store.

"We are the demonstration project for the country," said City Councilman Norm Bakos, who originated the idea five years ago.

Bakos got special permission from the U.S. Housing and Urban Development Department to use block grant money to set up the fund. And, added Ms. Guillaume, "We don't have to ask for future funding. We have it. The interest rates today are helping us. Our success is locked in."

"It fits in exactly with President Reagan's concept," said Bakos after Mrs. Schick signed her papers Friday.

"In all other kinds of social projects, if you give money to someone who needs it, you take it out of the pockets of someone else." Here, he observed, "we're helping them help themselves."

Bakos said he plans to spend a year or so "working out the kinks." Then "I'm going to fly to Washington, hand it over to HUD and President Reagan and say, 'You can, if you want to, set up modules all over the country.'"

One of the first things you'll discover about being a Reporter Telegram carrier is that you make housecalls every day. And those housecalls are pretty important for a couple of reasons.

First, you're responsible for delivering the paper to your customers every day, rain or shine, because they want to be kept informed. It's not always an easy job, but it's a very important one.

Second, you'll find that your on-time housecalls pay off for you in profits and experience. On your newspaper route, you'll learn the essentials of operating an independent business while enjoying the financial rewards that accompany hard work. USC, OU in early shootout

By The Associated Press

It has all the makings of a game for the national championship. It's No. 2 Oklahoma, with the nation's leading rushing offense, against Southern California, the country's top-ranked team. It's just too bad that it's the fourth week of the season instead of a bowl game.

"I don't think in the 16 years I've been in Oklahoma ... that anybody has presented the challenge these people do," said Sooners Coach Barry Switzer about Saturday's matchup in Los Angeles. "They are awesome on offense. It's like a tidal wave. This is the most talented team we've played," Switzer added.

Talented and undefeated.

SOUTHERN CAL, which clobbered Tennessee 43-7 and downed Indiana 21-0, revolves mostly around the talents of tailback Marcus Allen, the nation's leading rusher with 484 yards in two games.

"Marcus Allen is a great back," Switzer said. "I think he and Herschel Walker (Georgia) are certainly the two greatest backs in the country. I think when they throw a pass it's a wasted down."

Southern Cal Coach John Robinson says he is concernedabout Oklahoma, which rolled up 453 yards on the ground in beating Wyoming 37-20 in its opener.

"Very few teams still use the wishbone, but Oklahoma seems to defy the normal limitations of the offense," Robinson said. "They rush for a million yards a game and are going through an era where they can win without passing.

"There is no other example of that in college football and I find that impressive," Robinson added.

The game also matches two of college football's best active coaches. Switzer has an 84-9-2 record, while Robinson is 52-8-2.

"This game pits two of America's best teams, year in, year out," said Robinson. "We love to play games like this."

THE TWO teams last met eight years ago, playing a 7-7 tie.

Elsewhere this Saturday, No. 3 Penn State takes on No. 15 Nebraska at Lincoln; No. 14 Miami of Florida visits No. 4 Texas; No. 6 UCLA plays at Iowa; unbeaten Navy is at No. 7 Michigan; Stanford hosts No. 8 Ohio State; No. 9 North Carolina entertains Boston College and No. 10 Alabama is at Vanderbilt.

Also, No. 11 Brigham Young is at Colorado; it's Florida at No. 12 Mississippi State; No. 13 Notre Dame at Purdue; No. 16 Washington at Oregon; South Carolina at No. 17 Georgia; No. 18 Arizona State at Washington State and No. 20 Southern Methodist at Texas Christian.

Fifth-ranked Pittsburgh and No. 19 Clemson are idle.

JOE PATERNO brings one of his strongest teams to Nebraska Saturday, hoping to put a halt to the Cornhuskers success against his team. The Nittany Lions were humiliated by Nebraska 42-17 two seasons ago and lost a 21-7 decision last year.

"We weren't a very good football team when we came out here two years ago," said Paterno. "Last year they were stronger and more poised team than we were. They've simply been better."

Penn State, 1-0, bombed Cincinnati 52-0 in its only game, while Nebraska was shocked by Iowa 10-7 in its opener, but rebounded to beat a tough Florida State team 34-14 last week.

The Texas-Miami of Florida battle pits two of the nation's staunchest defenses. The Longhorn offense has been bolstered though by the return of the oft-injured running back A.J. 'Jam' Jones, who rambled for 105 yards on 22 carries in Texas' 23-10 win over North Texas State last week.

UCLA could face a tough task if Iowa regains the form it showed in upending Nebraska. The Hawkeyes though were surprised last week by intrastate rival Iowa State.

Michigan, 1-1, faces unbeaten Navy, 2-0, at Ann Anbor. The Wolverines, fresh from their big victory over Notre Dame, will go up against a defense that has yielded just seven points.

"George Welsh (Navy Coach) is a fine defensive coach and I expect quite a battle. We have a way to go in our own game and playing Navy will be a real challenge," said Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler.

North Carolina and Boston College will put six-game winning streaks on the line when they square off at Chapel Hill, N.C.

"This will be the biggest football team will see all year," said North Carolina Coach Dick Crum.

Boston College must cope with the Tar Heels' Kelvin Bryant, who has scored 11 touchdowns in North Carolina's two games and averaged 173 yards a game rushing.

Brigham Young puts it 15-game winning streak, the longest in the country among the major teams, on the line against much-improved Colorado, while Northwestern hopes to end it 22-game losing skid, the longest in the other direction, when it plays Utah.

In other major games, its Auburn at Tennessee, Brown at Army, Kentucky at Kansas, Arkansas vs. Mississippi, Maryland at North Carolina State, Texas Tech at Baylor and Air Force at New Mexico.

SMU, TCU resume bitter SWC series

By The Associated Press

Another chapter in what has become a bitter series unfolds between Southern Methodist and Texas Christian Saturday night in Amon Carter Stadium in a Southwest Conference football opener for both teams.

SMU was a whopping 10 point favorite over the Horned Frogs but such was the case last year when the Mustangs held on for a shaky 17-14 victory.

TCU Coach F.A. Dry, now in his fifth year, has yet to beat Mustang Coach Ron Meyer.

And there have been some hard feelings between the pair — patched up on the surface where they now have at least a speaking relationship.

Dry became irritated at Meyer over remarks about Dry's son and Meyer was was mad at Dry for playing a game once under a hot September sun instead of at night.

The most recent dispute came over linebacker Gary Spann, a bluechip recruit who was told to go to junior college by the Mustangs until he could get the proper credits.

TCU's research showed Spann indeed had the proper academic credentials and he enrolled this fall, giving the Mustangs a giant case of red face.

Defending SWC champion Baylor also was a 10 point favorite over Texas Tech at home; No. 4 ranked Texas was a 7 point nod over Miami, Fla., in Austin; Arkansas was a field goal choice over Ole Miss in Jackson; Rice was a 14-point underdog to Louisiana State on the road; and the Texas Aggies were 10 point favorites over Louisiana Tech at College Station.

"We want this game really bad for Coach Dry and ourselves," said TCU senior quarterback Steve Stamp, who threw five touchdown passes last week to earn The Associated Press Back of the Week award nationally.

"If our defense can just hold SMU to 21 points, I think the offense can outscore them."

It will be a classic confrontation of run versus pass.

With running backs Eric Dickerson and Craig James, SMU has two 100 yard gainers to rely upon.

Stamp's passing to mercurial wide receivers Stanley Washington and Phillip Epps has yet to be stopped.

In Waco, Walter Abercrombie hopes to have his first good rushing game against Texas Tech.

In three outings against Tech, he has totaled only 35, 12 and 19 yards against the Red Raiders.

"Tech will give us all we want," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff. "They always have, and I'm sure they always will."

He added "We're anxious to start playing for real...We're anxious to see how we stack up in the league."

The last time Miami played the Longhorns the Hurricane prevailed 20-15 in Miami. In the only other meeting, Miami won 23-10 at Austin in 1972.

MHS-Permian tickets go on sale Wednesday at Memorial Stadium

Tickets for the Midland High-Odessa Permian football game, scheduled for Oct. 2 at Memorial Stadium at 8 p.m., will not go on sale to the public until Wednesday at 8 a.m.

Tickets may be purchased at the Athletic Office at northeast end of Memorial Stadium. Tickets are $4 per person. Student tickets may be purchased at school for $1.

"We've already had many requests for tickets to the game," noted assistant athletic director Edwin Nixon. "However, we will start the sell the Wednesday before the game as we do for all games. Our office will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Friday, including the noon hour."

Buffs face Owl homecoming

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Despite a light schedule of games this week, the area has some choice morsels for schoolboy grid fans.

Rankin, Greenwood and Crane are taking the evening off along with all of the District 5-5A teams, but the lineup of games on tap looks outstanding.

One of the key matchups will feature Stanton (2-1) at Reagan County (2-1) before an Owl homecoming crowd.

The Owls, playing their best football in several years, will be wanting a win before starting district next week. Stanton, too, opens district next week and would like nothing better than a win over Reagan County to build on.

In San Angleo, the Lakeview Chiefs (1-0, 2-1) will be looking to slow down the Keith Brooks-Andrews Express. The Mustangs (1-0, 3-0), leaders in all District 2-AAAA offensive statistics, would like a win over the Chiefs as they bid to become the first district team to win back-to-back titles since Monahans turned the trick in the 1973 and 1974 seasons. Brooks alone has scored 62 points in three games for Andrews.

McCamey will have its hands full for the third straight week. Tonight the Badgers tangle with the Eagles of Seagraves in Seagraves. McCamey has beaten Reagan County, 7-0, and played Rankin to a scoreless tie in its last two outings.

Lamesa will be looking for its first win of the campaign when the Golden Tornadoes host the Fort Stockton Panthers. The Golden Tors have had difficulty finding the endzone, 12 points in three games, while their defense has been burned for 71 points. Lamesa has been shutout twice.

Midland Christian will be gunning for its third six-man win in the school's history when the Mustangs travel to Southland. MC has startled the "experts" with two wins in their first three outings.

This Week's Games

District 3-AAAA: Andrews at San Angelo Lakeview; Fort Stockton at Lamesa; Monahans at Pecos; Sweetwater at Snyder; Odessa Ector open.

District 5-AAA: Kermit at Seminole; Denver City at Post; Coahoma at Sonora; Crane open.

District 5-AA: Stanton at Reagan County; McCamey at Seagraves; Forsan at Sterling City; Lubbock Cooper at Morton; Klondike at O'Donnell; Bovina at Plains; Ropes at New Home (Saturday).

District 6-AA: McCamey at Seagraves; Sanderson at Marfa; Van Horn at Fort Davis; Clint at Deming, N.M.

District 9-AA: Alpine at Ozona; Stanton at Reagan County; Center Point at Junction; Mason at Brady; Menard at Burnet; Abilene Wylie at Wall; Eldorado open.

District 6-A: Balmorhea at Marfa JV (Thursday); Grandfalls at Roby; Buena Vista at Irion County; Sandersonat Marfa; Iraan, Rankin, Wink, Greenwood open.

Whisenant says politics caused trial

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — A former University of New Mexico assistant basketball coach said after being found innocent on fraud charges that the attorney general's political ambitions led to his trial.

"Look at the last two attorney generals we've had," John Whisenant said Thursday. "One is running for governor and the other is running for the Senate. They just want to use their offices as a political steppingstone."

The present attorney general, Jeff Bingaman, is running for the U.S. Senate.

Whisenant, 38, was the last of three UNM basketball coaches to stand trial on charges stemming from one of the largest recruiting scandals in college basketball history that rocked the university's basketball program at the beginning of the 1979-80 season.

Whisenant had been charged with six counts of fraud and six counts of filing false travel vouchers during a period from 1978-79. He was found innocent on all counts after the jury deliberated nearly nine hours.

Former UNM head basketball Coach Norm Ellenberger and his top recruiter, Manny Goldstein, were convicted in separate trials in state district court earlier this year on charges of fraud and submitting false public vouchers.

"We had a lousy system over there and the university no longer uses it," Whisenant said. "I just hope that audit information can help Norm (Ellenberger) and Manny (Goldstein) get a new trial."

Whisenant said a key factor in his trial was a controversial audit report done by the university and discovered a week before his trial by his attorney, James Brandenburg.

Brandenburg forced UNM to turn over the report which listed 651 infractions within the school, involving primarily travel voucher billings. Brandenburg often asked during the trial why only three coaches were singled out for prosecution when there were so many violations.

Afterwards, Brandenburg downplayed the audit and said the key was Whisenant's testimony.

Sears brothers complete transfer to Andrews without hitch

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

Scott and Bruce Sears, who quit the Midland High football team Sept. 5, are now both students at Andrews High School and members of the Mustang football program.

Due to a new University Interscholastic League ruling, athletes may now transfer without losing a year of eligibility, providing (1. that the athlete and their family establish residence in the new school district, (2. that the move is not only made to allow the new student to participate in athletics and (3. that the student was not recruited.

The UIL is the governing body of high school sports in Texas and the rule went into effect this school year. Previously a transfer student had to wait a year before competing in athletics on the varsity level unless the student was a senior. Scott is a senior and Bruce is a junior.

BOTH WILL be eligible to play varsity football Oct. 16 for Andrews. Since the transfer was not made prior to the school year, there is a 30-day waiting period, according to UIL rules.

To transfer, parents of the student must have two release forms filled out and signed by both the receiving school and the school of enrollment. The forms explain the UIL rulings and the real burden of proof lies with the parents of the student involved.

The release forms were signed in Midland by Dr. James Mailey, superintendent of schools in Midland; Jack Stone, principal at Midland High; and Pat Culpepper, Midland High football coach.

Andrews accepted the forms and the District 2-AAAA Executive Committee approved the athletic eligibility of both Scott and Bruce without a formal committee meeting. Both are now playing junior varsity football at Andrews.

Due to the fact that the Sears brothers left the MHS squad after one varsity game and were obviously displeased with the football program at Midland High, there were many who thought that the Sears family moved to Andrews strictly for athletic purposes. Bill Sears, father of Scott and Bruce, firmly denies that the move was made so his kids can participate in sports in Andrews.

"THE MOVE was not made for athletic reasons. We feel that Andrews has a better school system and we were unhappy with the system in Midland," Bill Sears told The Midland Reporter-Telegram. "There were also some personal and financial reasons. I am going to rent out my house in Midland and my wife is considering a job at the hospital in Andrews.

"I am also a landman for Saxon Oil and I feel that the move will help me with the contacts I need because my territory is all of West Texas and Eastern New Mexico. I will continue to work in Midland and I've been enjoying the drive from Andrews every morning.

"It's true that there was some unhappiness with Pat's (Culpepper) program on our part, but it is nothing personal. Pat and I didn't buck heads. I just told him I was taking my kids out of his program. I wish Pat all the luck in the world and I hope he can win. I think he has some good kids."

Sears also said, "As far as the moving for athletic purposes is concerned, the ruling seems very vague to me. Do they mean athletic advantage or what? I would be crazy to move Scott if it were for athletic purposes. Keith Brooks is one of the best quarterbacks in the state and that's what Scott was playing. I would be crazy to think that Scott is going to replace Brooks at midseason. Also Bruce will miss half a season before he can be on the varsity.

"I'VE HEARD a lot of wild stories of why we left Midland, but none of them are true. My little girl just loves her school in Andrews and the whole family is just a lot happier in Andrews. If we had moved this summer like we were thinking, there would have been no questions asked."

However, Culpepper is not so sure about the motives involved in the transfer. "I thought about it for a long time before signing the release. At one time I wasn't going to, but I feel it was for the good of everyone concerned. We needed to get rid of this thing, so we let them go. Also I didn't want Bill (Sears) blaming us for the fact that his kids couldn't get a scholarship because we wouldn't let them play in Andrews," Culpepper noted. "It's up to that district (2-AAAA) now whether they play in Andrews or not. The way I see it, it is clearly against UIL rules for them to play in Andrews because I feel they went to Andrews for athletic reasons."

Dr. Mailey was also concerned with the transfer request. "I knew Bill Sears was obviously displeased with our football program at Midland High and I asked him if he could live with the paragraph in the transfer form concerning moving for athletic purposes. He told me that he was planning to move there anyway and said that it would be crazy to think that he would move there solely for athletic purposes with Keith Brooks playing quarterback. Still, I was concerned about it, but I don't think we are in a position to judge their motives for moving. That is something that is really hard to do. I think the receiving school should also be concerned with that question."

BILL SHIPMAN, athletic director and head football coach at Andrews, confirmed that both Scott and Bruce are working out with the Mustangs. "Bruce is already playing on the junior varsity and Scott will play tonight (Thursday). We didn't think Scott could play on the JV since he is a senior but we contacted Bailey Marshall of the UIL and he told us that seniors awaiting eligibility could play JV ball," Shipman said.

Shipman also noted that the District 2-AAAA Executive Committee had already approved the transfer and that the Sears brothers will be eligible for varsity play, "in our last four games."

"We don't have to hold a formal meeting for this. Just a district poll was taken to approve the transfers. I'm sure there were some questions about it, but all the papers are signed and complete," Shipman said.

Scott was scheduled to play wide reciever instead of quarterback Thursday night in the JV game. Bruce gained 121 yards on 22 carries last week in his first JV outing. In Midland High's 31-12 victory over Amarillo Tascosa, Bruce rushed for 27 yards on 10 carries and Scott completed two of three passes for 41 yards, including a touchdown.

Career struggler takes Hall of Fame lead over Pate

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — The performance, while better than normal, was not all that unusual for Morris Hatalsky.

"Somehow," observed the career struggler, "you get accustomed to missing greens, needing to get it up and in."

And Hatalsky, who has yet to win in six years on the pro golf tour, was at his scrambling best when he one-putted 12 times and chipped in once on the way to a 6-under-par 65 and a 1-stroke lead Thursday in the first round of the $250,000 Hall of Fame Classic.

"Maybe it will continue all week," said Hatalsky, who used only 21 strokes on the bumpy, sandy greens at the No. 2 course at Pinehurst Country Club, "but if I'm to do well this week, I'd think I'd need to hit more fairways and greens."

He managed to hit only six fairways and half the greens, but saved it all with his scrambling through the pines and sand dunes, capping it off with a birdie-birdie finish — one of those on a 90-foot chip-in.

That fast close left him a stroke in front of Jerry Pate, who fought back with eight birdies after making a double bogey off a bad drive on the first hole. He had a 66.

And mighty Jack Nicklaus, closing his American season and seeking his first title of the year, was one more back after a very solid, no-bogey 67 in the cool, sunny weather.

"I played a pretty good round of golf," said Nicklaus, who hasn't won since extending his record to 17 major professional titles with a victory in the 1980 PGA. "I missed only two greens, hit the ball well, made a couple of putts." He was tied with Bill Kratzert, Bob Glider and Gary Trivisonno, also 4 under par.

Tied at 68 were Allen Miller, Jim Booros, Scott Watkins and Tim Simpson.

Ray Floyd could do no bitter than a 70.

Carl Eller admits cocaine habit

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. (AP) — Carl Eller, the star defensive end of the Minnesota Vikings' four Super Bowl teams, says he had a $2,000-a-week cocaine habit before retiring from the National Football League.

Eller, who recently underwent chemical dependency treatment, also said he was heavy user of alcohol during most of his 15-year NFL career.

"It's certainly no fun thinking you spent a couple of thousand dollars a week like that," Eller told an audience of about 200 people at the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire Thursday night as part of a Chemical Awareness Week on campus.

"That was just an insane part of my life and it hurt a lot of people. It hurt me. A lot of things from that time are still not worked out. My parents and my daughter suffered. I did a lot of crazy things and ended up really sad."

Eller said he underwent 30 days of chemical dependency treatment at St. Mary's Hospital in Minneapolis six months ago. He said he has been sober since that time.

In an interview, Eller said he did not use drugs during games. He said the Vikings never knew about his problem because he overcompensated, trying to be a team leader, to hide it.

Eller said he did not admit he had a drug and alcohol problem until his last year in football, when the Vikings traded him to Seattle in 1979.

"I had moved away from my friends and I had lost a lot of friends," he said. "I was doing lots of things against my character. I was lying, cheating. I didn't feel good about that. My life was going to pieces."

Eller said he began drinking in high school in Winston-Salem, N.C. He said his drinking increased after he joined the Vikings in 1964.

"I continued that way until about halfway through my career," he said. "I stopped in Detroit to see an old friend ... They introduced me to this little white powder. It turned out to be just what I was looking for."

Cocaine use drained Eller's finances. In 1980, about a year after he retired from professional football, he filed for bankruptcy. Court records showed that he owed more than $116,000 and was forced to sell his north Minneapolis liquor store.

Eller said he sought drug and alcoholism treatment when "the woman who I was in a relationship with said, 'I can't take it.' The only person who cared said, 'Get treatment or I'm leaving.'"

Today, Eller recruits for a Minneapolis personnel business. He said he is trying to decide how much time to devote to speaking about drug use and alcoholism.

Minnesota picked over Green Bay

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

By next Sunday night, the National Conference's Central Division will have a team that isn't a loser.

One.

You weren't expecting more, were you?

And the only reason the Minnesota Vikings will surge to a 2-2 record is that they'll be playing another NFC Central team, the Green Bay Packers.

Give the Vikings an inch and they'll take a yard. Give the Packers a lead and they'll take a hike.

The oddsmakers like the Pack at home (in Milwaukee), but we don't like them anywhere just yet. Let's wait a few weeks to see if John Jefferson and Delvin Williams make much of a difference.

Last week's picks against the spread: 9-4. The season record: 18-22. This week's picks, with home teams capitalized:

Minnesota plus 2½ over GREEN BAY: Neither team has anything resembling a ground game, but we still think the Vikes can do more with their passing. UPSET SPE-CIAL.

Houston 3 over NEW YORK JETS: The Oilers don't score much, but they won't have to. The punchless, disorganized Jets are a disaster. BEST BET.

PITTSBURGH 4½ over New England: The Steelers aren't as good as the Jets made them look, but the Patriots are coming off a very physical Monday night loss.

San Diego 3 over DENVER: The league's best attack against the league's best defense. The Broncos will break down first.

Los Angeles even over CHICAGO (Monday night): Now Pat Haden can worry about losing his job to Jeff Rutledge.

Oakland 2 over DETROIT: The Lions seem to give a few more yards than they get, and Oakland, a ball-control team, can get a lot of them.

Kansas City plus 2 over SEATTLE: The Chiefs have a a lot of punch. It doesn't take much to punch holes in the Seahawks' defense. A mini-upset.

St. Louis even over TAMPA BAY: Look for an air show, and look for Jim Hart to outclass Doug Williams.

DALLAS 10½ over New York Giants: Tony Dorsett may not gain 100 yards, but the Cowboys have plenty of other weapons — and a 38-35 score to settle from last year.

Other games:

Atlanta 2½ over CLEVELAND.

Buffalo 3 over CINCINNATI.

PHILADELPHIA 9½ over Washington.

Miami 2½ over BALTIMORE.

SAN FRANCISCO 6 over New Orleans.

St. Louis even over TAMPA BAY.

Lobos fight battle to fill stadium

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Football coaches in Bo Schembechler or Bear Bryant country don't have to worry about gate receipts. They get their teams on the field each Saturday, and the fans turn out in massive numbers.

Such is not the case for the University of New Mexico and Coach Joe Morrison.

Since their arrival at UNM in December of 1979, both Morrison and Athletic Director John Bridgers have been on a constant mission to produce a winning team in football, and in the process fill the stands at 30,000-seat University Stadium.

The Lobos were 4-7 under Morrison in 1980, and despite an opening-season upset win over Brigham Young, home attendance last year averaged right around 16,000.

New Mexico opened this season with three straight road losses and plays its first game at home Saturday when it initiates its Western Athletic Conference season against Air Force.

For New Mexico, whose sports fans prefer basketball to football, a victory is crucial, both for the record and football revenues.

Ironically, the Lobos played well in the losses to Houston, Nevada-Las Vegas and Texas Tech. The difference has been lack of consistency and the inability of the defense to prevent the big play.

"We're so young in every area of our defense," laments New Mexico defensive coordinator Joe Lee Dunn. "But we'll get better, we have to."

Dunn advocates a gambling defense, which at times is susceptible to the big play by the other team's offense. But he said the team's kamikaze approach will continue.

"Making something happen is fun," Dunn said. "And I guarantee you we'll still gamble. We've discovered the other teams hate it."

Offensively, New Mexico's statistics are impressive.

Quarterback Robin Gabriel ranks seventh nationally in total offense and the team ranks eighth in passing offense, according to last week's NCAA statistics.

Gabriel is averaging 264 yards a game in total offense, with the team averaging 267 yards in the air. Gabriel has thrown only two interceptions despite having put the ball in the air 108 times through the first three games. As a team, the Lobo offense has turned the ball over only four times.

But New Mexico's ground game has failed to compliment Gabriel's passing. Thus far, the Lobos are averaging only 60.7 yards per game on the ground.

WHY FALL IS THE BEST TIME TO PLANT TREES, SHRUBS AND BULBS.
It's always better to plant outdoor trees, shrubs and bulbs during the fall when they are dormant. These plants, when dormant, will channel all their energies toward establishing root growth that will greatly benefit their ability to gather nutrients in the spring and become greener, healthier plants. You'll also find a much greater selection of these plants in the fall. For spring shade and landscaping beauty, plant your trees, shrubs and bulbs in the fall!

Bobcats keep perfect district record

Sports Writer

Like two veteran heavyweight pugilists, Midland High and San Angelo battled toe-to-toe Thursday night at MHS gym before the Bobcats claimed a vital, 15-6, 15-10, District 5-5A volleyball win. The victory keeps San Angelo's district record unblemished at 4-0 while the Purple Pack slips to 2-2 in district warfare.

MHS coach Linda Jolly told her troops before the game, "Come out and hit the ball hard. We need to get the ball down early so they (San Angelo) will have some respect for us."

And that's exactly what the Pack did. Led by Sheila Christian, Penny Griffin, Anny Miller and Holly Randell, MHS was hitting cannon shots at the Bobcats. But, San Angelo's 20-3 season wasn't built with mirrors, and the Bobcats returned shot after shot behind the smashes of Jeanne Bryant, Regina Cole, Lisa Barrera and Beverly Holtkamp. After 11 points, Midland High was up 6-5 when the roof caved in.

MHS' serving turned sour, and San Angelo took advantage of the situation to run off six straight points to take a commanding 11-6 lead.

With the situation looking bleakest, the Bulldogs tightened their belts and battled the Bobcats through seven more serves before a block by Bryant and a smash by Holtkamp gave the visitors the 15-6 win.

In the second set, defense was the key word. Time after time, Missy Larrimore, Judy Gatlin and the other Bulldogs hustled, dived, and swarmed around every Bobcat serve or return.

Not to be outdone, San Angelo coach Nita Vannoy watched Lisa Lisewsky, Elas Ornelas and the rest of the Bobcats pull the ball out of the net or off the floor as the two clubs battled evenly though the first ten points.

With the score even at 5-5, MHS's old bugaboo — inability to get the serve in struck again. Five times in a row the Purple Pack had a serve go astray. The opportunistic Bobcats took advantage of the erratic serving to run off five points in a row to take a 10-5 lead.

The gutty Bulldogs weren't about to back down. After Jolly called a timeout to settle down her charges, the Pack came out snarling with teeth bared.

Randell and Miller drilled serves that were too hot for San Angelo to handle as the Pack whittled the lead down to 12-8. In the end, it was just to much experience and superior height at the net that settled the issue.

San Angelo called on Bryant and Cole for the deciding points. With Cole serving, Bryant blocked a Christian returned and took a perfect set from Lisewsky for the game-winning smash as the Cats closed out the set 15-10.

Coach Jolly said, "San Angelo is a fantastic team. I though we played very well considering the circumstances. I put in a different offense and defense yesterday (Wednesday) and the girls had only one day to work with it." She added, "That was why we were confused on a few serves and let some balls drop in that we should have played."

Jolly stated, "Our serving killed us. Still this was one of our better games and we learned from it. Of course, we can't afford to lose another game in district."

In the junior varsity contest, San Angelo struggled to a 15-12, 8-15, 15-3, win over a gallant Bulldog JV.

MHS has little time for rest. Immediately after the game last night, the Bulldogs were on the road to Abilene where they will play in the Key City tournament today and Saturday. The Bulldogs meet Jim Ned in a first-round game.

Big Spring levels Rebs in volleyball

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring Steers kept pace with the San Angelo Bobcats in the District 5-5A volleyball race here Thursday night with a straight set victory over the Midland Lee Rebels.

With the loss, Lee falls to 2-2 in district play and 12-9 for the season. Lee will try to rebound Tuesday when they host the Odessa Permian Panthers.

Big Spring pounded Lee 15-4 in the first set, but Lee hung tough before dropping the second by a narrow 16-14 margin.

The Lee junior varsity, however, pulled out a victory over Big Spring after losing the first set 2-15. Lee rallied for 15-11, 15-12 margins in the final two sets to take the match.

MHS Bullpups gain first grid victory

FORT STOCKTON — The Midland High Bullpups got its first victory of the junior varsity football season here Thursday night with a 14-8 victory over the Fort Stockton JVs despite a driving rain in the second half.

The Bullpups, now 1-1 on the year, drove 80 yards in the first quarter for the first score with Randel Swindell scoring from two yards out and Kyle Kitto running for two points.

In the third period, Terry McGowan, who had touchdowns called back of 40 and 60 yards, broke loose on a 60-yard run for the Bullpups' other score. Fort Stockton scored in the fourth quarter after three defensive goal line stands by the Bullpups. Fort Stockton also got a safety in the game.

The Bullpups will travel to Odessa Permian Thursday to begin the district run at 7 p.m.

Rebel sophs fall to Odessa Permian

ODESSA — The Midland Lee sophomore football team lost its unbeaten tag here Thursday in a lop-sided 41-7 loss to Odessa Permian.

Permian led by a 14-0 score at the half, but held a 34-0 lead late in the third quarter before Lee's Sergio Ochoa scored from two yards out for Lee's only score of the day.

Figures based on Gibraltar's current Tax Free Savings rate of 12.61% (70% of average yield on one year Treasury Bill).

Count on Tax Free Savings beginning October 1st.
No taxable interest in the Money Market can match the net yield of Gibraltar's new once-in-a-lifetime Tax Free Savings Certificate for people in many tax brackets.

President Reagan's Tax Bill recently passed by Congress allows Texas' largest and America's first insured savings association to offer you this significant, one-time tax exclusion.

Gibraltar's new 12-Month Tax Free Savings Certificate lets you earn up to a lifetime aggregate of $1,000 or $2,000 interest Tax Free. Married couples filing joint returns can exclude up to $2,000 interest. Individuals can exclude $1,000 interest. Based on today's rate, married couples can exclude from their taxes all the interest earned on a 12-Month Tax Free Savings investment of $15,860.43. Individuals $7,930.21.

Tax Free Interest means more net interest.
The minimum deposit on this 12-Month Certificate is $500. The tax exclusion is lost if account is closed before one year, plus the applicable penalty with premature withdrawal.

Because the interest is Tax Free, the annual yield can be almost twice as high as the stated tax free rate, depending on your tax bracket.

Gibraltar's highest yield ever.
Most people will find that Gibraltar's Tax Free Savings pays the highest net yield they've ever earned on savings.

For example, if you are in a 50% tax bracket, your Tax Free yield is equal to a taxable rate well above 20%.

Count on Texas' largest for more.
Stop paying Uncle Sam up to half of your interest earnings. Invest in Gibraltar's new once-in-a-lifetime Tax Free Savings Certificate and earn up to a lifetime aggregate of $1,000 or $2,000 interest Tax Free. Your Gibraltar Savings counselor can help you set up your Tax Free account.

Your money is safer at Gibraltar Savings. We're Texas' largest and America's first insured. With an asset strength of $3.4 billion. Reserve strength that exceeds any savings association in the state. And savings that are insured up to $100,000 by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

Cowboys, Saints have score to settle

By The Associated Press

The Dallas Cowboys and the New Orleans Saints each have a score to settle Sunday. In both cases, the score is 38-35.

Last year, the Cowboys moseyed into the Meadowlands, on their way to what they thought would be just another routine victory over the New York Giants. When the smoke cleared, Joe Danelo's last-minute 27-yard field goal had enabled the Giants to gun them down 38-35. It wound up costing them their division title.

NOW THE Giants are visiting Dallas — and the Cowboys are armed with one of the biggest guns in the National Football League, Tony Dorsett, the rushing leader with 423 yards.

Also last year, the Saints visited San Francisco and, by halftime, had amassed a whopping 35-7 lead. But the 49ers, in the club's greatest comeback, rode Joe Montana's two touchdown passes and one scoring run to a tie after four periods, then Ray Wersching's 36-yard field goal gave them a 38-35 sudden-death victory.

In New Orleans' case, it postponed by one week their only victory of the season.

On Sunday the Saints return to San Francico. This time, though, they've already got a victory tucked away.

Also on Sunday, it's Houston at the new York Jets, New England at Pittsburgh, Washington at Philadelphia, San Diego at Denver, Atlanta at Cleveland, Buffalo at Cincinnati, Oakland at Detroit, Miami at Baltimore, Minnesota vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee, Kansas City at Seattle and St. Louis at Tampa Bay. Monday night's game is Los Angeles at Chicago.

A VICTORY by Dallas over the Giants last year would have permitted them to finish the season with a 13-3 record and the NFC East title. Instead, they were deadlocked with Philadelphia at 12-4 and wound up losing the division championship to the Eagles because of a fifth-level tie-breaker, best net points in division games. Ultimately, of course, the Cowboys wound up losing the NFC title game to the Eagles, too.

This season, the Cowboys and Eagles are tied again, each at 3-0. And the Giants are just one game behind them, following their 20-7 victory over the Saints.

Phil Simms, the Giants' quarterback whose three touchdown passes paved the way to the upset of the Cowboys in 1980, had one of his best days as a pro last Sunday, completing 28 of 41 passes for 324 yards against New Orleans. "I've always been impressed with Phil Simms as a thrower," Dallas Coach Tom Landry said. "Of course, he will be up and down until he learns to handle all situations."

THE LAST time the Giants won in Dallas was 1974. The Cowboys have not lost during the regular season at home in 11 games.

The Saints' George Rogers has rolled up 298 yards, third among league ground-gainers behind Dorsett and Philadelphia's Wilbert Montgomery (346 yards). But a hamstring injury to No.1 quarterback Archie Manning and ineffective relief from Bobby Scott (who was pulled last week and replaced by rookie David Wilson), has hindered them this year.

Although the 49ers were burned 34-17 by Atlanta last Sunday, Montana had an excellent day, completing 24 of 34 passes for 274 yards and two touchdowns. He ranks first among NFC passers. His 66 percent completion rate is the best in the league and his 756 yards is second in the conference only to Washington's Joe Theismann (967).

Dan Fouts, who shattered his own passing record last year when he rolled up 4,715 yards, is well on the way to surpassing that. He's already got 930 this year, is tied for the touchdown lead with seven and leads the league in passing. What's more, the Chargers also have the American Conference's rushing leader, Chuck Muncie with 290 yards.

Theismann, the Jets' Richard Todd and New England's Matt Cavanaugh (or Steve Grogan, if he get's his job back as a No. 1 quarterback) will be trying for the fourth week to secure victory No. 1 this season.

Harold Katz takes over NBA's 76ers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers have started their second five-year plan.

The National Basketball Association team was taken over officially Thursday by businessman Harold Katz. He signed the final papers and paid former owner Eugene Dixon a reported $12 million for the franchise.

Knepper, Lee pack heavy bat power

By The Associated Press

Pitchers Bob Knepper and Bill Lee both hit their second career home runs to lead the first-place Houston Astros and first-place Montreal Expos to National League victories Thursday night.

Lee limited Pittsburgh to six hits over 7⅓ innings and Gary Carter drove in three runs as Montreal defeated the Pirates 7-1 for their fifth straight victory.

Knepper, who also hit a single, scattered five hits as Houston defeated the Atlanta Braves 5-3.

The Expos, who now lead the National League East by 1½ games over St. Louis, held a 1-0 margin when Lee led off the fifth inning by belting a 3-1 pitch from starter Odell Jones, 4-4, beyond the right field fence. The hit boosted Lee's batting average to .400.

Carter had a two-run double in the seventh and an RBI single in the first.

Knepper, 9-4, fanned four and walked four before giving way to Dave Smith, who picked up his eighth save, in the eighth. Knepper's earned run average went up to 2.03, but he still ranks second in the National League behind teammate Nolan Ryan.

The Houston left-hander helped the Astros take a 2½-game lead over idle Cincinnati in the NL West when he teed off on loser Larry McWilliams, 1-1, for a solo homer in the second inning that made the score 2-0.

Also in the NL, Gary Matthews delivered a pair of two-run singles as the Philadelphia Phillies erupted for 11 runs and 11 hits in the third inning and buried St. Louis 14-6 on a 20-hit attack. The defeat was the sixth in seven games for the slumping Cardinals.

Bobby Bonds settled a six-homer slugfest with a tie-breaking homer in the eighth inning, giving the Chicago Cubs a 10-9 victory over the New York Mets. Ellis Valentine hit two homers and drove in five runs for the Mets, while Ty Waller, Jody Davis and Leon Durham also homered for the Cubs.

In the American League, Mike Hargrove and Toby Harrah drilled three hits apiece and keyed a three-run seventh inning as the Cleveland Indians rallied for a 5-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox. In handing the Red Sox only their third loss loss in the last 11 games, the Indians foiled Boston's bid to move into a first-place tie with idle Detroit in the AL East.

Jim Palmer pitched a four-hitter and Rich Dauer slugged his fourth homer of the season to lead the Baltimore Orioles to a 5-1 victory over the New York Yankees.

Amos Otis and Willie Wilson drove in two runs apiece as the Kansas City Royals broke out of a hitting slump with a 9-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins to move back into first place in the American League West. The triumph gave the Royals a half-game edge over idle Oakland and a 3½-game lead over the third-place Twins.

Tom Paciorek singled home the winning run in the 11th inning as the Seattle Mariners defeated the Texas Rangers 2-1.

In West Coast night games, Mike Scioscia highlighted a five-run third inning with a three-run homer as Los Angeles defeated the San Francisco Giants 7-3, snapping a five-game losing streak for the Dodgers.

Former Midland Cub Dennis Lamp fired a four-hitter to pace the Chicago White Sox to a 4-1 victory over the California Angels.

San Diego fans losing patience

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Throughout their 13-year history, the San Diego Padres have, with little success, tried to shake the image as the West Coast version of the early-day New York Mets.

In 1962, the Mets' maiden season, those loveable bumblers set a new standard in comic relief by losing 120 games and committing 210 errors.

But, after fielding only one .500 team in 13 years, San Diego fans are running out of patience.

And the prospect of finishing last twice in the same season is no laughing matter for San Diego fans.

The Padres, with baseball's youngest starting lineup, have produced the worst record of the Second Season — 13-31 — and are playing before empty seats at home.

Since 52,608 showed up for a free season re-opener Aug. 10, the team is drawing an average of 5,600 fans. Earlier this month, only 2,428 attended a game with San Diego and Houston, the defending NL West champion. For the season, San Diego is 36-63, a few percent points better than the Chicago Cubs.

General Manager Jack McKeon partially blames the strike for the Padres' poor performance and the declining attendance.

"At the time of the strike we had just got some momentum, after struggling earlier," McKeon said. "We had won three straight and six out of 10. In the second half, our pitching went downhill and the fundamental mistakes increased."

McKeon, who triggered the massive overhaul after Dave Winfield's departure, questions "how seriously" the players worked out during the strike.

"Or maybe we didn't work them out hard enough in the eight days before starting up again. What bothers me is why we couldn't regenerate what we had going," he said.

The performance of Frank Howard, the eighth Padres manager in 13 years, is being evaluated and a decision won't be made until after the season, according to Padres' President Ballard Smith.

What also worries McKeon is the club's drastic dropoff in stolen bases, nonexistent power — only 30 home runs — and 27 losses in 36 one-run games.

A year ago, San Diego set a club record with 239 stolen bases and became the first major league club with three players with 50 or more stolen bases.

After 100 games, and with 10 remaining, the Padres have only 73 thefts and have been caught stealing 56 times. Last season, San Diego was successful 77 percent of the time. This year, the figure has plunged to 57 percent.

"I don't know what gives," said McKeon. "I don't know if we're not taking advantage of it or if the guys are not getting on base."

Shortstop Ozzie Smith, whose 57 steals were second to Gene Richards' 61, says the club suffered when Jerry Mumphrey was traded to the New York Yankees. Mumphrey had 52 steals.

"Jerry took the pressure off Gene and I, and vica versa. And other teams have done a lot to offset our running game," Smith said. "They've done a good job of attacking our strength."

Finding more power will be an offseason priority, says McKeon. Even without the strike, the Padres were heading toward one of the lowest home run totals in the past 15 years.

When the season started, the front office hoped first-year catcher Terry Kennedy and first baseman Randy Bass could fill the power void left by Winfield's loss.

Swisher says Padres lack pride

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Angry over his backup role, San Diego catcher Steve Swisher says the struggling Padres "have no pride, no emotion" and he would welcome a trade.

"If they have no plans for me, they should trade me," said Swisher, who has participated in only 14 of the Padres' 100 games this year.

Acquired last winter as part of an 11-player deal with St. Louis, Swisher said he was told "before I came here that the catching job was open, but I can see that wasn't true."

Terry Kennedy has been the club's regular catcher, hitting more than .300 in his first full season. But he leads the team in errors with 20 and has just one home run.

"I don't want to be a caddy," said Swisher, who hasn't played in three months. "I want to be used.

"They tell me to be patient, but patience is for losers. Why, when we're constantly losing, do we play the same lineup? Is this a team concerned about developing careers or are we here to win games?"

The Padres have baseball's youngest lineup — averaging just 26 years old — and the worst record — 13-31 — of the second half.

OIL & GAS FIELD SALES
Field Compression Sales

Ingersoll-Rand, Gas Compression Sales Division, offers you the opportunity to join the BIG RED TEAM and be with a leader in the industry. We are seeking self-starting individuals who have had 5 or more years of sales experience in the oil and gas service industry. Dealing with the independent oil and gas producers. We desire an individual with a degree and a basic knowledge of compressor packages and utilization.

In return for your ability and efforts, we offer a base salary plus commissions. We have no caps on the amount of commission, so all your efforts and successes are rewarded. We also offer a full benefits package plus car and expenses. We have opportunities in a number of locations, so relocation will probably not be necessary. If you feel you are ready to be with the leader, please send your resume including earnings history to:

Nineteen wildcats planned by oilmen, gas field growing

Basin oilmen plan 19 new wildcat projects for the region. The Nine Mile Draw gas field will get one more hole.

COTTLE WILDCAT

Independent Exploration Co., Houston, will drill the wildcat No. 1 Stinson, to 7,300 feet, 1 mile east of Chalk.

The drillsite is 1/2 miles south of the Goodwin No. 1 Swain, abandoned May 28, 1972, at 6,926 feet. The well was latter designated Three Dollar Oil Swain-1, deepened to 7,248 feet, and abandoned August 6, 1972.

The new project spots 467 feet from the south and east lines of "block" 21, Mary Ann Cook survey, abstract 65.

CROSBY VENTURE

Gunn Oil Co., Wichita Falls, will sink the No. 1 J.H. Hinton, a 5,500 foot wildcat, 15 miles northeast of Crosbyton.

The location is 1,320 feet from the south, and 660 feet from the east line of section 5 1/2, block H, AB&M survey, abstract 1434.

The drillsite is in the extreme northeast corner of the county, in a relatively unexplored area.

CULBERSON GAMBLE

Texaco, Midland, will cut the No. 1 Culberson X Fee, a 4,200-foot wildcat, 11 miles west of Orla.

The project spots 467 feet from the south, and 1,980 feet from the west line of section 5, block 58, T-2, T&PRR survey.

The drillsite is in the Geraldine, West and Screw Beans fields area.

ECTOR EXPLORER

Amoco Production Co., Andrews, will drill the wildcat No. 1 David Fasken 'BO', to 11,500 feet, 14 miles northeast of Odessa.

The drillsite is in the extreme northeast portion of the county, and, apparently, there are no wells of comparable depth in the vicinity.

The stake is set 660 feet from the north and west lines of section 1, block 41, T-1-N G&MMB&A survey.

GLASSCOCK PAIR

Wood & Locker Inc., Midland, will drill the 11,500-foot wildcat No. 1 Adcock '11', 14 3/4 miles northwest of Garden City.

The location is 1,980 feet from the south, and 660 feet from the east line of section 11, block 36, T-3-S, T&PRR survey.

The operator will test the Blalock Lake (Wolfcamp) at 10,000 feet, and the Spraberry at 8,600 feet. The drillsite is in the W.Z.B. field. Apparently, the well will be drilled two or three times deeper than surrounding wells.

****

In the same area, Wood & Locker will drill the No. 1 Blalock, another 11,500-foot wildcat.

The site is 660 feet from the south and east lines of section 1, block 36.

The project will be located north of the W.Z.B. field, and it too will apparently be two to three times deeper than existing production.

GARZA WILDCAT

Hinkle Exploration Ltd., Midland, will drill the wildcat No. 1 Connell, to 8,200 feet, 6 1/2 miles southeast of Post.

The location is 990 feet from the south, and 467 feet from the west line of section 15, block 5, GH&H survey.

The drillsite is about 1 1/2 miles southeast of the the 8,300-foot Moore-McCormick No. 1 Kirkpatrick, abandoned August 20, 1978.

LOVING PROSPOECTOR

Tenneco Oil Co., San Antonio, will drill the No. 1 Brunson 15, to 17,200 feet, 14 miles southeast of Mentone.

The project spots 1,320 feet from the north and west lines of section 15, block C-26, PSL survey.

It appears there are no wells of comparable depth in the vicinity.

REEVES EXTENSION

Indrex Inc., Tulsa, will attempt to extend the 6-hole Nine Mile Draw gas field with the drilling of the No. 1 Conoco State-20, to 14,500 feet, 9 miles north of Saratoga.

The drillsite is apparently 1 3/4 miles southeast of the field discovery well — though the Reporter - Telegram's records do not not name the well. The field was discovered in January, 1975.

The location is 990 feet from the north and west lines of section 20, block 54, T-7, T&PRR survey.

SCURRY WILDCAT

Patrick Petroleum Corp., Midland, will drill the No. 1-29 Wall, a 7,100-foot wildcat, 9 miles northeast of Hermleigh.

The location is 500 feet from the north, and 1,780 feet from the east line of section 29, block 3, H&GN survey.

If you aren't careful how you spot this one, you could end up putting it in Fisher County. It appears it will set right on the county line.

The drillsite is 1,500 feet northwest of the No. 1 Cochran, a Harding Brothers workover project, plugged and abandoned December 26, 1967, at 6,628.

SCHLEICHER TRIO

JEM Petroleum Corp., Midland, will drill the No. 1 Williams, a 5,400-foot wildcat, 18 miles northeast of Eldorado.

The stake is 1,980 feet from the north and east lines of section 37, block I, GH&SA survey.

The drillsite is 4/5 of a miles northwest of Humble's No. 1 LaGloria, abandoned July 15, 1952 at 6,000 feet.

****

Tucker Drilling Co., San Angelo, will sink the wildcat No. 1 Whitten to 7,100 feet, 5 miles northwest of Eldorado.

The project spsots 2,320 feet from the north, and 1,300 feet from the east line of section 33, block LL, TCRR survey.

the drillistie is 1 1/4 miles northwest of Fryer & Wonson's No. 1 Delta, drilled to 7,032 feet, and abandoned in January 1963.

****

Plains Oil Co., Inc., Midland, will drill the No. 1 Cody Bill, a 7,000-foot wildcat, 7 miles north-northwest of Eldorado.

The location is 1,320 feet from the south, and 660 feet from the west line of section 11, block LL, TCRR survey.

The site is 1 1/2 miles northwest of the Argo No. 1 Meador, Abandoned November 6, 1950 at 7,130 feet.

TOM GREEN WILDCAT

Morrow Resources, Inc. Odessa, will drill the wildcat No. 1 Mathews to 7,000-feet (reportedly into the Ellenburger), 3 miles south of Carlsbad.

The stake is out 4,375 feet from the south, and 2,264 feet from the west line of section 1138, TCRR survey, abstract A-7460.

Apparently, there are no wells of comparable depth in the vicinity.

WINKLER VENTURE

Clements Energy Inc., Midland, will drill the 9,400-foot wildcat No. 1 Shriners Hospital, 14 miles southeast of Kermit.

the location is 660 feet from the south, and 1,980 feet from the west line of section 6, block B-9, BSL survey.

The drilliste is about 1 mile west of the David Fasken No. 1 Superior Amburgey, abandoned at 8,697 feet, October 4, 1965.

PECOS PROSPECT

Monsanto Co., Midland, will drill the No. 1 Jacqueline '7', a 10,520 foot wildcat, 6 miles west of Sheffield.

The stake is driven 167 feet from the north, and 3,463 feet from the east line of section 7, block 193, TMRR survey.

The Operator will test Block A-2 (Strawn) at 7,500 feet.

The drillsite is 1 1/8 miles northeast of Coquina's No. 1 Thigpin, abandoned December 22, 1974 at 10,335 feet.

RUNNELS VENTURES

WLK Properties Inc., Midland, will drill the No. 1 Gordon Brookshier, a 4,200-foot wildcat in Runnels County, one miles southwest of Talpa.

The location is 2,173 feet from the north, and 467 feet from the west line of the J.M. Parker No. 110 survey. Apparently, there are no wells in the vicinity of the site.

Malone Oil & Gas Corp., De Soto, has scheduled two 5,700-foot wildcats in Runnels County, five miles northwest of Norton.

Both of the projects are in the D.P. Richardson No. 462, abstract 415, survey.

The No. 1 Kathleen Black is located 467 feet from the north and east line of the survey.

It is approximately one-mile north-northeast of the 5,443-foot Lee Bros. No. 2 Laura Black, dry and abandoned, Aug. 4, 1953.

The No. 2 Kathleen Black is located 1,758 feet from the north, and 467 feet from the east line of the survey, and is 3/5-mile northwest of the same 5,443-foot failure.

****

OJB Inc., Ozona, will drill a scheduled 4,500-foot wildcat 5 miles northwest of Crews.

The No. 1 England-Beard is located 4,160 feet from the most northerly north, and 1,000 feet from the most northerly west line of the Juan H. San Miguel No. 72 survey.

The site is 4/5 mile soutwest of a 4,409-foot project abandoned Jan. 28, 1952.

Utility says quality of contractor's work not cause for firing

HOUSTON (AP) — Brown & Root Inc. has been relieved of engineering and construction management responsibilities at the South Texas Nuclear Project because Houston Lighting and Power officials were not satisfied with the progress of the construction, a HL&P spokesman said.

"We have always felt that the quality of this project was good," said Don Beeth, director of nuclear information for the utility, the controlling partner in the construction project. "Our distress has been with the quantity of their work."

Bechtel Power Corp., which has built about 40 nuclear plants, will replace Brown & Root, said HL&P President Don Jordan. Jordan said Brown & Root will continue to do actual construction work.

"Brown & Root intends to cooperate fully with HL&P in making this change, and it has the question of its future role in the project under study," it said.

Problems at the facility led the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to fine HL&P $100,000 in May 1980 and order the company to "show cause" why its construction permit should not be revoked.

The action followed an 1,100-hour investigation which found, among other things, that the company had allowed construction workers to intimidate quality control inspectors into approving sub-standard work.

Beeth said Thursday's move was not related to those problems nor to Brown & Root's new estimates on the cost of the plant and its completion date.

HL&P "reluctantly came to the conclusion that despite Brown & Root's best efforts, their ability to attract and retain the types of nuclear engineering talent necessary was limited," Beeth said.

He said officials were considering the move as early as six months ago.

Brown & Root announced Thursday that the cost of the finished plant will be between $4.4 billion and $4.8 billion and that the first reactor unit will not be operational until 1986.

The company said in its most recent previous estimate, made in 1979, that the plant's cost would be $2.7 billion and the completion date would be 1984. When the project was originally proposed in 1973, the estimated cost was $738 million and the completion date was set for 1980.

Utilities in Austin, Corpus Christi and San Antonio are building the project along with HL&P.

Austin voters will decide in a Nov. 3 referendum whether to authorize the City Council to sell the town's share in the project.

Lanny Sinkin, leader of San Antonio-based Citizens Concerned About Nuclear Power, said he was not surprised by Brown & Root's firing.

"I've been talking to people on the site, where they've been taking bets on when it's going to happen," he said. Sinkin's group is one of two intervenors asking the NRC in ongoing hearings to deny the Houston utility a license to operate the plant.

"In the seven weeks of licensing hearings to date, design engineering has not been a major topic," Sinkin said. "The real problems have been in construction and quality control, so removing Brown & Root from design engineering is not addressing the real problems.

"This is a long overdue response to mismanagement at this project," Sinkin said. "I don't think it's an adequate response."

Sinkin said he thought Thursday's action showed that HL&P is extremely worried about the project.

"Houston Lighting and Power has finally realized that this project is in big trouble, and they are trying to take steps to save themselves," he said. "Part of the trouble is the cost, part is the schedule, and part is that in the licensing hearing, there's a devastating record of mismanagement and incompetence."

Bennington College still sails against the wind

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

BENNINGTON, Vt. (AP) — When Bennington College publications director Tyler Resch was asked how the school would celebrate its 50th anniversary this year, he looked almost bewildered, as if any poor soul who could ask such a thing didn't understand what this experimental, avant garde college is all about.

"Part of the Bennington thing," he explained patiently, "is we don't have pep songs, school colors, football teams, no prizes, no grades. To mark that occasion would be, well..."

Not the Bennington thing.

What Bennington is, and is not, continues after 50 years to bemuse even insiders.

It is probably best known these days as "the most expensive college in the country" — with total costs at $12,030 a year.

But caricatures also have portrayed it as a far-out, unruly school where "easy" women and gay men gather in a sheltered Vermont paradise to study art and immorality, and come out with an "easy B.A."

"I've heard all those stories," said President Joseph S. Murphy, who plans to leave in June after six years as the school's head. "My hunch is there's probably as much deviance at Bennington as there is in the U.S. Congress, the American Civil Liberties Union and the Moral Majority."

AVANT GARDE BENNINGTON certainly is — from course offerings in black music to lunch offerings consisting of fare like Tofu loaf and eggplant casserole.

But frivolous it most certainly is not. Two freshman women were spotted joking and giggling on the way to their first classes of the new school year. They stood out like sore thumbs. Bennington is, above all, deadly, deadly serious.

"We have very intense people here," says Alice T. Miller, head of the Office of Student Affairs. "Boy, I mean it's tough stuff. They're really expected to perform."

"Bennington women are very neurotic," James Offenhartz, a senior studying literature and printmaking was telling friends one recent evening. "Very aggressive, very assertive, very intelligent, very wonderful. The kind of girl you'd love to have as a daughter."

"But not as a wife!" joked sophomore Brigid Capra, and everyone laughed.

What do the 630 students get for $12,030? Why is Bennington so expensive?

"It's very simple," said Murphy. "We have an 8½-to-1 student-to-faculty ratio here. That is virtually twice as rich as at other schools."

Bennington students also have full-time, free psychological counseling.

The floorboards in the $6 million performing arts complex have just the right spring for dancing — the artistic endeavor Bennington has been most noted for since Martha Hill and Martha Graham revolutionized modern dance here in the 1930s.

INDIVIDUAL ATTENTION, both time consuming and expensive, is the school's hallmark; it is apparent from the moment a student applies.

"More personal letters go out of this office, I would guarantee, than any other private college," said Thelma Bullock, an assistant admissions director. "If a kid asks something about our dance program or whatever, we sit down and write a letter."

Even acceptance letters are meticulous and unusually personalized — like this one to a New Jersey woman who entered this fall as a freshman:

"Though your song has not yet formed, as you say in one of your poems, it is surely developing; Bennington seems a fine setting in which to continue listening for it, encouraging it, and revising it as it begins to be heard..."

Still, the high cost of a Bennington education means 45 percent of students receive financial aid.

Said Rhea Nowak, an entering freshman from Lexington, Mass.: "A lot of people are very well off, but a lot of people are working their butts off to stay. It's expensive, but it's worth it. Still, it freaks me out the amount of debt I'll be in when I get out of here."

FROM JANUARY THROUGH mid-March each year, students spend a "non-resident term" working at jobs related to their studies and career aims. It gives students a taste of working life and four job entries on their resumes.

And sometimes, it leads to irresistible opportunities. In 1942, student Carol Channing left for a "non-resident term" job in a Broadway theater. It proved to be the end of her academic career, and the beginning of stardom.

Playwright and producer-director Elizabeth Swados and socialite Yasmin Aga Khan, both from the class of '73, dancer Kathryn Rosin, class of '65, abstract expressionist painter Helen Frankenthaler, '49, and poet Julia Randall, '45, are among other prominent Bennington alumnae.

The school was all-women until 1969. Men now make up a third of the enrollment.

The lack of formal grades has not kept Bennington grads from finding a welcome at top graduate schools. Recent alumnae are studying medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, law at Johns Hopkins and the University of Chicago and theology at the Harvard divinity school.

Even after graduation, the school sends newsletters to former students about available jobs in their field.

"I think you will not find a place where students are attended to so closely along the way by their mentors as is the case here," said R. Arnold Ricks, dean of studies. "Teachers are supposed to get right down to it with the student. There is no distance between student and faculty."

That closeness apparently repels as many students as it attracts. Most of the students here think getting conventional grades would be a far easier way to pass through college than at Bennington, where they are expected largely to plan their own education.

"A LOT OF PEOPLE who don't understand our grading system think we're getting off easy, but here you not only have an academic responsibility to succeed, but you also have to make an impression on your instructor," said Capra, who designed her own program in speech and social science.

"You set your own standards, and that can be a very scary thing," said Sallie Stadlen, a junior studying biology and literature.

Half the entering freshmen won't make it through four years at Bennington, an exceptionally high attrition rate that has held relatively constant since the school's founding in 1931.

Clements' $40 million gamble paying off

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — What appears to be Gov. Bill Clements' $40 million gamble with highway money may turn out to be a sure bet.

If so, it would become only another in a series of threats by federal highway administrators that were not carried out.

Federal Highway Administrator Ray Barnhart told Clements this summer that Texas might lose $40 million in highway funds if the special session of the Legislature did not pass a truck weight proposal.

Barnhart said Texas needed to increase penalties for overloaded trucks and to authorize state troopers to enforce weight limits on state highways within cities.

Director Jim Adams of the Texas Department of Public Safety and Engineer-Director Mark Goode of the State Highway Department of Highways and Public Transportation supported Barnhart's request.

Goode said Barnhart, a former state highway commissioner, "has made it clear ... that he has no choice in this matter and will be compelled to enforce federal sanctions if this situation is not corrected."

The Republican governor, however, waited until Aug. 7 — four days before the end of the 30-day special session — to open the session to a truck weight proposal, and the Legislature did not get to it before adjournment.

Now, Clements says he has no intention of calling another special session on the proposal before Jan. 1, the date by which Texas must comply with federal truck weight regulations.

Asked why he waited so late to submit truck weight legislation, Clements said, "I announced to begin with there would be no additions" until the main business of the special session was completed. That business included congressional redistricting and a state water trust fund.

Clements also said, in response to a written question, that Barnhart — a former Texas GOP chairman — had assured him privately that Texas might get more time to comply with the federal requirements.

Gary Hoitsma, special assistant to Barnhart, said Barnhart was "disappointed" that the Legislature had not acted on the proposal, but Hoitsma added, "While Texas is, technically, in a strict legal sense, in non-compliance, we don't see any precipitous action taking place in terms of imposing penalties."

"Many states are in what we'd call a non-compliance situation," said Hoitsma, "but before any kind of sanctions were imposed, the states involved certainly would be allowed to make their case for any mitigating circumstances. We'd give them an opportunity for hearings before it would ever reach the point where sanctions would be imposed."

"This doesn't mean we're relaxing any standards. It's just that it's a matter of status quo that's been going on for years," said Hoitsma. "In fact, Texas is in better compliance than most other states."

RICHARD Vander Straten, program engineer for state highways, said, "It will be interesting" to see how Barnhart responds. "He has the unpleasant task now to enforce federal requirements regarding truck weight limits. Without legislation, law enforcement has no way to enforce truck weights inside cities. I don't have any idea how he will handle it — it's Mr. Barnhart's duty."

An ongoing federal threat involves the 55 mph speed limit, which was adopted in 1974. Texas has struggled to comply under the threat of losing $7 million to $8 million a year in federal highway funds.

In the 1980 fiscal year, Texas needed compliance from 40 percent of its drivers. Otto Wehring, director of traffic programs, said after federal officials changed the formula to calculate compliance, the state's compliance rate jumped from 34 percent to 46 percent, which was acceptable.

This year, he said, Texas must achieve 50 percent compliance.

Also, last year the U.S. Department of Transportation threatened to freeze $400 million in highway construction funds unless the state required contracts to be awarded to businesses that met a federal quota for minority subcontractors — even if they did not submit the lowest bid.

Germans built station in Canada

ULM, West Germany (AP) — Austrian-born Franz Selinger, a 66-year-old retired engineer, returned here from a visit to Canada recently with firm proof that German soldiers set foot on North American soil in World War II.

"Until only a year ago," Selinger told The Associated Press in his southwest Germany home, "the Canadians wouldn't believe me. But when I presented them with definite proof, things started humming."

In close cooperation with Canadian historian Alec Douglas and with generous help from the Canadian Coast Guard, Selinger discovered at the end of July the rusted remains of a German-built automatic weather station on the northernmost tip of Labrador.

The 10 barrel-like steel containers were set up about 20 miles south of Cape Chidley by the crew of U-537, a German World War II submarine, which nudged its way through shallow water in October 1943.

It then surfaced, and the crew launched rubber dinghies to take ashore the men who put up the weather station with its antennae and tall wind-measuring pole.

Much of the withered material was still there when Selinger arrived at the spot. To disguise it, the Germans had marked it "Canadian Weather Service." But it appeared that hunters, whose empty cartridges were found nearby, discovered it some time after World War II and damaged much of the equipment.

Now, 38 years later, the remains are to be taken to Halifax for display. Selinger said he wants to return there for the occasion.

Rumors of German landings in North America during World War II were often heard and never substantiated. Selinger, intrigued by the scientific performance of fewer than 100 armed forces weathermen, said their exploits in frequently appalling conditions are well worth remembering.

The former department chief of a large Ulm-based electronics company prepared his Canadian excursion over two years before setting out to find the forgotten weather station.

He paged through war diaries, traced the routes taken by U-537 and then put it all together. His investigation was complicated by the fact that the 1,500-ton submarine, after it had accomplished the feat in Canada, was sunk in the Java Sea by the U.S.N.S. Flounder.

All those who were witness to the top-secret Canadian weather station mission perished in the attack.

Price's Pit has become nation's most serious

EGG HARBOR TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — For most of his 62 years, Melvin Johnson lived next to a landfill, a gravel dig-turned-garbage dump named Price's Pit.

Three years ago, he lost a kidney. Then emphysema struck, then bladder troubles.

Melvin Johnson died this summer, just two months before a government attorney called the 22-acre dump "the most serious environmental problem in the United States."

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency says industrial wastes dumped in Price's Pit in 1971 and 1972 have been silently threatening the Johnsons, at least 36 neighbors and Atlantic City's municipal water supply for the better part of a decade.

The chemicals include arsenic, benzene, lead, cadmium, chloroform, vinyl chloride and several industrial de-greasers. Several are known carcinogens and all are oozing into the great Cohansey aquifer of the Pine Barrens, one of the East's purest and most plentiful ground water supplies.

Few knew of the danger until two years ago.

"Melvin, he's gone. I don't know, he died so suddenly. He went so fast," his widow, Dorothy, said this week as she and a young grandson walked outside to draw their day's fresh water from a National Guard tanker truck that now supplies the stricken neighborhood.

The Johnson family, like their working-class neighbors and Atlantic City officials, many years ago sank their fresh-water wells into the sandy soil six miles northwest of the Boardwalk. The water then was clean and sweet.

Today, the Johnsons' tap spews battleship gray. The water stains their modest bathroom tile and the linoleum floor. It smells like horseradish and turpentine.

"Oh no, we don't drink it any more," Mrs. Johnson said. "We just use it for the toilet and now I'm afraid even to do that."

Johnson, a township employee, could not work in the months before his death on July 17. His widow and her attorneys blame the water for Johnson's medical problems, for her own unexplained rashes, for their daughter's headaches and for their grandson's need for leg braces.

Recently, alarmed Atlantic City officials began scrambling to save their 12 wells, which supplied 90 percent of their water needs last year — up to 15 million gallons a day for the city's 40,000 residents and millions of gambling tourists at the Boardwalk's new casino hotels.

They are paying for a $234,000 study to define the Price's Pit pollution and come up with solutions. They may drill five emergency wells.

But instead of looking for new water near Price's Pit., officials believe they would be safer to seek fresh water closer to the Atlantic Ocean, deep within aquifers beneath their own beach.

The EPA, in a lawsuit filed last December and amended on Monday, characterized the landfill as the nation's most serious environmental problem because of the pollution threat to Atlantic City's water supply, said Charles Walsh, an assistant U.S. attorney in Newark.

The EPA claims that nine disposal companies and 10 major industrial firms, including such giants as Procter & Gamble Co., Union Carbide Corp. and Honeywell Inc., are among those responsible for the dumping.

The amendment to the suit named the companies allegedly involved in the dumping, thus making the suit the first legal action under new federal "superfund" legislation which established a billion-dollar fund to clean up pollution emergencies and hold guilty firms financially responsible.

This past spring, U.S. District Judge Stanley Brotman, sitting in Camden, heard legal and technical testimony on the landfill's pollution. Dr. George Pinder, a Princeton University civil engineering professor, warned that the chemicals, some in quantities thousands of times higher than safe levels, are now within 1,000 feet of Atlantic City's Well 13, one of the dozen sunk in 1930.

Unless something is done quickly, Pinder said, the chemicals will pollute the well within two years. That one well supplies 10 percent of Atlantic City's fresh water in the summertime.

On Thursday, Brotman, ruling on preliminary motions, said the landfill's present and former owners are partly responsible for the ground water pollution. Brotman, calling Price's Pit "a grave hazard to human health," nevertheless rejected EPA attempts to have present and former owners immediately pay for Atlantic City's water study and to provide a pipeline for fresh water to the Johnson's neighborhood.

A group of township residents near the landfill has filed a separate suit against the owners and state officials to have the pollution cleaned up and fresh water piped into the neighborhood.

Theater furnished in early Egyptian

By KATHY EYRE
Associated Press Writer

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The walls surrounding the Boise audience were painted with hieroglyphics copied from the ancient "Book of the Dead." But the crowd was as alive as it could be, singing old songs like "Bicycle Built for Two," accompanied by an aging 1927 theater organ.

With every one of the 833 seats in Boise's Egyptian Theater occupied, the theater recently offered a special one-day silent-movie showing, complete with a sing-along. It was a night featuring golden oldies in more ways than one.

Inspired by the 1922 discovery of the ancient treasures of Egypt's boy ruler Tutankhamen, the Egyptian Theater opened in 1927 and has become a virtual historic treasure in its own right, says Arthur A. Hart, director of the Idaho Historical Museum.

The theater, featuring the decor of the pharaohs, continues to operate today, complete with gold-leaf trim, red, green and blue painted walls and ceilings of hieroglyphics, and statues of sphynx-like gods and goddesses, sacred scarabs and holy hawks.

And the theater displays an old-time object which has been donated to the Idaho Historical Society, an authentic early 1900s advertising backdrop that Egyptian Theater manager Bob Covert found rolled up in the attic of another movie house he used to own in Emmett.

"It's a cloth screen that comes down during intermission with a scenery picture in the middle and then it's got ads all the way around it. And years ago, before the show started, they would shine spotlights on the ads," Covert said. "The phone numbers on them are interesting. One of them is 91, a two-digit number."

Hart said many an American movie theater in the 1920s adopted an Egyptian atmosphere in response to the King Tut craze.

But Hart said the Boise theater was the only one he knew of still operating with restored original 1920s King Tut-inspired furnishings when the famous boy king's treasures visited the United States in 1978-79.

The theater has acquired some fame itself. Pictures of the theater, which is on the National Register of Historic Places, represent the Egyptian Revival style in "A Guide to American Architectural Style," a book recently published by the American Association for State and Local History, Hart said.

In its recent nostalgia trip, the Egyptian Theater preempted its run of the modern movie "Stripes" for the showing of the silent film "Lilac Time," in which Gary Cooper plays a World War I flying ace in his first leading role. Both the theater, the film shown in it and the backdrop were vintage 1920s.

And proceeds from the special matinee and evening flick will be used to restore another historical treasure housed in the theater — a 1927 Robert Morton theater pipe organ, Hart said. An organist from San Francisco, Warren Lubich, played the instrument to accompany the silent movie, a Laurel and Hardy short comedy and an audience sing-along.

He said the organ was the only one of its kind left in Idaho and one of the few remaining in the nation. A "unit orchestra," the theater organ was designed to replace old-time theater orchestras and provide sound effects for the then-new silent movies.

Its repertoire includes drums, Indian tom-toms, bird whistles, a series of sleigh bells for every note, sirens, auto horns, xylophone, birds chirping, a telephone's ring, a streetcar, tugboat's horn, a horse gallop — and the list goes on.

"It's actually a whole side-effects department, operated by one man," said Ron Thurber, a Boise architect who heads the drive, which began in 1974, to save the instrument.

Thurber said the $40,000 organ needed to have its old, cracking and leaky leather pneumatic drives repaired, and to have work done on worn, corroded electronic controls.

Birdwatchers thrilled by condor

By ANDY FURILLO
Hearst Feature Service

MOUNT PINOS, CALIF. — It was a productive morning even by the birdwatching standards established for this, the highest peak in the Los Padres National Forest.

There were Cassin's finches and green-tailed towhees, turkey vultures and pygmie nuthatches, violet green swallows and mountain bluebirds, four varieties of hawk (red-tail, fan-tail, Cooper's, sharp-shinned), and the ubiquitous dark-eyed junco.

Then, shortly after 10 a.m., came the call: "Condor!"

Small talk ceased. Adrenalin pumped. Binoculars steadied. Necks craned. Bird watchers staking out other points of the observation site sprinted through the gnarled limber pine and the thin mountain air to fix their telescopes on the 20-pound bird.

"I got up here the day before yesterday, and this is the first time I've ever seen them," said Bob Delareuelle of Walnut Creek, a retired airline pilot who's been watching birds for 50 years.

"There were some people here yesterday who came all the way from Michigan just to see condors. There was another guy from Klamath National Forest in Oregon. It was the first time any of us had seen them. Everybody was jumping up and down."

The 25 or so birders perched on Mount Pinos were hopping again on this particular Saturday morning when the condor — it was Delareuelle who spotted it — popped over the ridgeline of nearby Sawhill Mountain.

Massive, 9-foot wingspan...unmistakable white triangular markings beneath the wings...orange head...fingerlike feathers flaring out at the tip of the wings...sheer enormity. All the signs of the condor.

A red-tailed hawk harassed the bird as it approached its audience. The star of the show pulled up short of the observation site and rolled into a semi-back flip, then peeled off to the east and flapped its incredible wings just once before soaring high and away over the San Joaquin Valley.

Every visual aid on the mountaintop remained pegged on the condor until it became only a speck on the horizon and then nothing.

Mount Pinos, an 8,831-foot peak about 20 miles east of Gorman, is prime viewing terrain for California condor — a bird that appears to be going the way of the Edsel.

The largest North American land bird, the California condor once roamed the skies over the entire state, surviving on the remains of Tule elk, antelope and other wild game.

Those were in the days before 25 million human beings moved to California, endangering the elk, wiping out the antelope, poisoning the air and eliminating one condor roosting area after another. Its last habitat is the Los Padres National Forest in Ventura, Kern and Santa Barbara counties.

Experts agree that the condor population is down to 30 birds of two distinct populations, one of which migrates northward along the coast range and another that flies east from the Sespe Condor Sanctuary across the Tehachapi Mountains to the southern Sierras and northward.

About the only foraging area left for condors, which once had the entire San Joaquin Valley as their domain, is the Tejon Ranch in Kern County. Even that area is in danger of being subdivided.

With the condor's long-term survivability in question, the crowds atop Mount Pinos have been higher than normal the past two years, according to long-time watchers who make annual visits to the observation site.

It could be that the mere threat of extinction is attracting people to the site. But a more likely explanation is that publicity from the proposed captive breeding program has generated greater interest in the condor among novice birdwatchers.

The captive breeding program — a bold, controversial plan to save the magnificent species by capturing a number of condors and breeding them in zoos over a 30-year period — could save the bird.

Opponents of the program contend that at best, the experiment will alter the species to the point where it can't survive in the wild, or at worst, hasten its demise. They favor expanded habitat protection for the condor.

Regardless of the outcome of captive breeding, birdwatchers from across the country are flocking to Mount Pinos for what may be final glances of the big bird in the wild.

Plants by Evergreen has new plants under the big top

Plants by Evergreen has a new tent site for your convenience, located at the intersection of 868 and Big Spring St. In keeping with the requests of their customers, they have a variety of outdoor plants as well as indoor. All plants purchased at Plants by Evergreen are of high quality and sold at low wholesale prices. Employees are well versed in the care and maintanence of their plants. Landscaping and Atriums are specialties of Plants by Evergreen. (They give free estimates.)

Plants by Evergreen also has a shop at 409 Kent Street, with the same low wholesale prices.

Carol Johnson and Dottie Crow will be happy to help you choose your plants and explain their care. They have a large selection of hand-glazed pottery as well as macrame and stone ware.

Plants by Evergreen receives truckloads of lush plants weekly, so customers always have a wide variety from which to choose. And, of they don't have what you want, they can get it.

Direct any questions or requests for estimates to 682-9199, Plants by Evergreen, open 9-7 Monday through Saturday, and noon to 6 on Sunday at both locations.

FTC orders Anacin to revise ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission ordered Thursday that Anacin advertisements no longer claim the product "contains the pain reliever most recommended by doctors" unless it also reveals that the pain reliever is aspirin.

The commission found the ads to be false or deceptive. Anacin is made by American Home Products Corp. of New York City.

Commissioner Michael Pertschuk, writing for the commission, said "the strained syntax of many of the advertisements ... fosters the impression that Anacin contains something other than aspirin."

The commission found many of the challenged Anacin ads also left the impression that the product's superiority has been demonstrated.

Credit controls urged for construction industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — A representative of the AFL-CIO's Building Trades Department today urged the the Reagan administration to impose selective credit controls to rescue the construction industry from high interest rates. But the administration quickly rejected the proposal.

Robert Georgine, representing the AFL-CIO department, said the Federal Reserve's policy of tightening the money supply must be abandoned.

"We should turn away from the disastrous reliance on tight money to fight inflation," he said in testimony submitted to the Senate Small Business Committee.

"Because tight money results in rationing credit through high interest rates, thereby often favoring nonproductive uses of credit, the Fed should use selective credit controls to channel credit for productive purposes," he said.

He said productive purposes include home mortgages; new residential, industrial and commercial construction; farming; financing of capital equipment; heavy equipment; cars and trucks; and industrial and state-local government bonds.

"By making credit less accessible for non-productive uses, interest rates for productive uses would tend to decline," he said.

John's Swap Shop brim-full of fine, quality furniture

John's Swap Shop at 600 E.Florida is brim-full of fine new furniture. In addition to the sofas illustrated, there are many excellent living room singles and groups, plus a good selection of chairs, recliners, occasional tables, and lamps. Owner John Kramer offers smartly-designed glass top dining room tables at a good price, starting at $249 up. He has many dinette sets in a variety of styles, several types of bar stools, and odd dining room chairs (just the chairs - you don't have to buy a table.)

The Swap Shop features GE refrigerators and television sets, Roper gas ranges, and Rangeaire food freezers.

Be sure to see the handsome bedroom suites and Ther-A-Pedic bedding: king, queen, regular, and twin sizes, as well as hard-to-find bunk beds. Nod-A-Way baby furniture includes beautiful little cradles, bassinets, cribs. Roll-top and regular student desks are available at John's Swap Shop. John has a special rate of $39.95 for new 4-drawer chests of drawers and $49.95 for the 5-drawer chest. These come in maple or walnut finishes.

In addition to new and used furniture of all kinds, John's Swap Shop has at present many nice etageres and more coming, gun cabinets, good sets of tools for the handyman, Spanish tapes (8 track,) and Mexican pottery. Everything is well-organized and neatly displayed at 600 E. Florida, where you can shop Monday through Saturday from 9:30-5:30. For more information, call 683-7872.

ON THE ROAD

Some driving tips for the road

By SUE ALFORD
Traffic Safety Planning
Midland College

This is the final column of "On the Road." It has been a pleasure to share with you driving tips that may have prevented an accident or saved a life. To conclude these tips, which I hope you will remember and consider while you are driving, today I am going to list a potpourri of "reminders."

— If you approach a school bus from either direction, front or rear, and the bus is displaying alternately flashing red lights, you must stop and not pass until 1) the bus has resumed motion, or 2) the driver signals you to proceed, or 3) the red lights cease flashing.

— Accident records show you are 57 percent less likely to be injured if you are wearing a lap/shoulder type seatbelt and 31 percent safer in an ordinary lap belt, in the event of an accident, than if you were not using seatbelts.

— Experts say chances of surviving a wreck at 70 mph are only fifty-fifty. But at 55 mph, the odds of survival are 31 to one in your favor.

—If your car has a blowout while driving at high speeds, grip the steering wheel firmly to guide the car on a straight path; ease up on the gas pedal; and, after the car has slowed down, pump the brakes lightly. Then, with the car well under control, pull gently off the road.

— One of every 60 babies born today will die in a traffic accident; six of every 10 American babies will be injured in a traffic accident some time during their life.

— Almost one-sixth of the fatal accidents in Texas involve vehicles striking pedestrians. Most frequently, the victims are the very young, the elderly and persons who have been drinking.

A recent study suggests that one in four cars has at least one seriously underinflated tire. That tire is more likely to blowout, wears 10 times faster and reduces gas mileage by up to one mile per gallon.

— Transportation takes over 50 percent of America's oil; the 55 mph speed limit can save the average motorist up to 20 percent on gas mileage. That could mean energy independence for all of us.

— Prescription tranquilizers are very risky as far as driving in concerned. One British study showed that drivers on Valium or any other mild tranquilizer were five times more likely to have car crashes than non-users.

— The most dangerous time to drive your car, in terms of fatal accidents, is weekends, after dark, and after the "party hours" especially.

— If you're going to drink before driving, stick to an eight-ounce glass of beer — right? Not really. A 12-ounce glass of beer contains as much alcohol as a 1 1/2-ounce jigger of 86 proof whiskey or a six-ounce glass of wine.

—Over 80,000 bicyclists are hurt in collisions with cars annually. Drivers don't seem to notice the cyclists and cyclists don't seem to be aware of the risks.

— More accidents occur in the city than in the country, because of crowded streets and traffic congestion; but the traffic death rate is higher in rural areas, because of higher average speeds and greater distances to emergency medical care.

— Americans demand their children be inoculated against diseases such as polio and smallpox. Yet most parents don't buckle their children into safety belts or child restraint devices for trips in the car. That's a tragedy; traffic accidents are the number one killer of children in the United States.

— If you start to skid, never jam on the brake. Take your foot off the gas; turn your wheels in the direction that the rear of the car is skidding. When the car comes out of the skid, straighten the wheels.

— Almost half of the 50,000 American traffic fatalities per year are people under 30.

— Last year 80 percent of all stolen cars had unlocked doors. Forty percent had their keys in the ignition! No wonder one million cars are stolen in America every year.

— In Texas last year, one person was killed in a traffic accident every two hours and 12 minutes; one person was injured every two minutes and 57 seconds; there was a traffic accident every 74 seconds.

Remember, the people who are dying on our streets and highways are our friends, our neighbors and our family, and this carnage cannot be stopped unless we each take a personal interest in traffic safety.

Credit unions allowed to raise interest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting Oct. 1, the 26 million Americans belonging to federally chartered credit unions will be able to earn up to 12 percent interest on their passbook savings and interest-bearing checking accounts.

The nation's 12,500 federal credit unions were authorized by the National Credit Union Administration board Thursday to boost dividends 5 percentage points, to a maximum of 12 percent.
