230 Dead In Amazon River Boat Mishap

BELEM, Brazil (UPI) — Rescue workers today flipped over a capsized river boat and recovered another 100 bodies, raising to 230 the death toll from the sinking of the launch packed with homeward-bound Christmas vacationers.

"Our people at the scene said the overturned boat has been righted this morning and another 100 bodies found," government spokesman Diogenes Silva said.

Silva said the double-decker launch that sank Tuesday night was jammed with 400 to 500 people, as well as with crates of beer and two taxis.

"With that cargo on the upper deck, it became a crazy boat, difficult to control, and when the accident happened it flipped over, trapping the people who were on the lower deck," Silva said.

Authorities said many of the passengers on the overloaded launch were employees of the Jari agro-industrial project of American billionaire Daniel K. Ludwig.

Survivors had said earlier that scores of passengers were trapped beneath the hull of the 80-foot Novo Amapo after it capsized in the Amazon Tuesday.

Officials at Belem, where first news of the accident arrived on Thursday, said the dead included many children.

Officials said many of those on the boat were employees of the huge timber project on a tributary of the Amazon at Jari.

Macapa port captain Francisco Gomes Espinoza said 211 survivors had been rescued.

"But no one knows the exact number because most of the river launches like this one never make an exact passenger list," Belem port director Darcy Goncalves said. "They even loaded up two taxis and crates of beer on the top, further reducing the boat's stability."

Roberto da Silva Pintt said he counted the bodies of about 50 children. He said he saved himself by holding onto a floating tree trunk.

Many of the passengers were sleeping in hammocks on decks when the boat capsized.

"The first thing I knew the boat was sinking and I just threw myself into the water," survivor Francisco Lopes said.

Lopez, who swam through turbulent currents to the river bank, said panicky survivors tried to break through the overturned hull to free passengers trapped below.

The river boat sank just off Belem de Cajari, a hamlet 100 miles upriver from the Novo Amapo's destination at Macapa, 375 miles north of Belem on the Amazon delta.

BATTLE FATAL BLAZE — Firemen fight to control the flames sweeping through a boarding home for elderly and mentally retarded residents at Keansburg, N.J., early today. At least 18 people were killed and 13 others unaccounted for in the blaze, according to officials. The intense heat delayed the search for additional bodies. (AP Laserphoto)

Boarding Home Fire Fatal To 18

KEANSBURG, N.J. (AP) — Fire roared through a two-story brick boarding home for elderly and mentally retarded residents before dawn today, and authorities said at least 18 people were killed and 13 others were unaccounted for.

Monmouth County Prosecutor Alexander Lehrer said firefighters found 16 bodies inside the smoking ruins of the Beachview Rest Home in this central New Jersey community. Two other bodies were found outside. Eyewitnesses said the bodies were badly charred.

"We expect to find more bodies," Lehrer said. By early afternoon, firefighters had removed nine sheet-draped bodies from the building.

Eight residents of the home, on Raritan Bay about 30 miles south of Newark, were injured in the blaze, Lehrer said. Several firefighters also were reported injured. Several employees believed to be in the home at the time of the fire had been accounted for, authorities said.

Boarding home owner Frances Cappadona said the building didn't have sprinklers, which were not required under state law, but it did have smoke detectors in the individual rooms, the halls and the closets.

Nick Naumetz, 67, who fled from the top floor, said the fire flashed through the home.

"It was unbelievable ... the smoke," Naumetz said. "The sirens went off. I looked at my watch and it was 4 a.m. Smoke built up rapidly, in no time at all ... all of a sudden."

The heat of the smoldering building was so intense that firefighters were unable to enter in a search for victims until nearly six hours after the fire broke out.

"When we got there, flames were coming out of the entire front of the building," said Lt. Albert Scott, who received hospital treatment for smoke inhalation and a broken ankle in the fire. "It's pretty well a mess."

Survivors, some naked, others in pajamas, were huddled in front of the building in sub-freezing temperatures when authorities first arrived. Most were evacuated from a one-story, wood-frame extension at the rear of the main brick structure, a former hotel, Scott said.

Six residents initially thought to be unaccounted for were found safe elsewhere.

The evacuation was orderly, with "no screaming or nothing," Naumetz said.

One man apparently leaped from a second-floor window and was found dead in front of the building clutching the window screen, said First Aid Squad Capt. Frank Folz.

Another man was found dead behind the building, he said. Both victims were badly burned.

Some evacuees, their faces blackened by soot, huddled under blankets in the Keansburg Fire House, and about a dozen others found shelter across the street from the boarding home in the home of Keansburg Police Sgt. Kevin Robinson. Still others were taken to the Newpoint Fire Company in Keansburg.

The fire, which erupted at 2:57 a.m. CST, was still "burning like blazes" two hours later, said Detective James G. Beatty Jr.

Some 200 firefighters from a half-dozen neighboring communities brought the blaze under control just before 7 a.m.

Bayshore Community Hospital officials said at least three people were in the intensive care unit, five had been treated and released, and more were expected to be admitted.

IRS Delaying Bond Ruling

An Internal Revenue Service ruling which had caused great concern in city government and financial circles has been delayed until May 31, U.S. Rep. Kent Hance's office announced this morning.

The ruling, which Lubbock city officials said could destroy the market for tax exempt municipal bonds, was scheduled to become effective Saturday.

However, a spokesman for Hance's office said today that after a series of meetings with IRS and Treasury Department officials on Thursday, the IRS had agreed to postpone the ruling until May 31 and completely restudy the measure in the meantime.

The ruling would have declared the interest earnings from state government certificates of deposit not deductible by banks if the CDs are secured by pledges of municipal tax exempt bonds.

The Hance spokesman said the matter will be taken up by the House Ways and Means Committee, for which Hance has been proposed for membership, and the House Banking Committee.

The reprieve came as welcome news to Lubbock city officials and bankers, who had been stunned by the IRS ruling.

City Finance Director Robert Massengale told the City Council on Thursday that the ruling would wreck the market for tax-exempt municipal bonds.

After Massengale delivered the ominous message to the council, council members quickly fired off telegrams to U.S. Sens. John Tower and Lloyd Bentsen and to U.S. Rep. Jim Wright of Fort Worth and Hance.

"Banks are the major market for municipal bonds," Massengale said. "If the IRS allows the ruling to stand, it will have a significant effect on the municipal bond markets and impair our ability to raise funds for capital projects."

Massengale said it will increase interest which must be paid by cities on municipal bonds. With a 10 percent ceiling in Texas on interest which can be paid on municipal bonds, Massengale said the problem is particularly worrisome.

In the telegram to the Congressmen, Massengale said "hopefully they can express our concern to the Secretary of Treasury and help him realize the significance of his ruling."

Massengale said he thinks the ruling is a product of the increasing number of sales of tax exempt bonds for low-interest mortgage loans and for industrial development, which he said is "robbing the U.S. Treasury" of taxes.

"I think they figured they'd fight this from the back door," he said.

Massengale said Texas has a "built-in market for our bonds" because state law requires bonds issued in Texas to be pledged against state deposits. He said the ruling, in addition to dramatically increasing the taxes banks (and possibly savings and loans) must pay, could make it more difficult to find a depository for state and local government funds.

Some have estimated the ruling would cost the nation's banks billions on dollars in taxes.

The American Bankers Association was successful in convincing the IRS not to make the ruling four-years retroactive, as originally planned, Massengale said, and the bankers continue to work on getting the ruling revoked.

Haig Warns Nation Of 'Dangerous Era'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State-designate Alexander M. Haig Jr. declared today that the Republic faces an unusually dangerous era in which foreign policy must be rooted in the premise that "there are things worth fighting for."

Haig, in testimony to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, swore that all his activities in behalf of Richard Nixon's presidency were "within the boundaries of the law" and commensurate with his duty "to preserve that office in the national interest."

But the retired four-star general dwelt principally upon his vision of a troubled globe, warning that "the years immediately ahead will be unusually dangerous."

And Haig declared the nation cannot survive those years with an obsession for peace at any cost. "There are worse things, there are more important things," he said during an exchange with Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker Jr.

"This Republic was spawned by armed conflict ... We fought and died to prevent dictatorship and genocide, in the second World War, from becoming the rule of the land. There are things worth fighting for. We must understand that. We must structure our foreign policy on that credible and justifiable premise."

In obvious anticipation of questions to come, he made some mention of his 5½ years with Nixon in his opening statement and appended those remarks with a written defense of his role in the handling of Watergate and other controversial issues of that era, including wiretapping and the bombing of North Vietnam.

Haig said American foreign policy mistakes have been magnified by the transformation of Soviet military power "from a continental and largely defensive land army to a global offensive army, navy and air force fully capable of supporting an imperial foreign policy."

That accumulation of armed might has produced "the most complete reversal of global power relationships ever seen in a period of relative peace," Haig said.

Haig told the committee, which must pass on his nomination, that "The evidence of ... danger is everywhere."

He cited the Soviet Union's intervention in Afghanistan and her might over such European nations as Poland, the uneasy Middle East peace, the instability of the Persian Gulf region, continuing strife among nations in Asia and the "turmoil and violence" in Africa, Southeast Asia, Central America and the Caribbean.

He noted that President-elect Ronald Reagan had pledged that the secretary of state will be America's foreign policy voice and that the national security adviser will "fill a staff role for the president."

And, in another area of concern to the senators, Haig pledged active consultation with the Congress and he said he would rely on career personnel in the State Departmnent who "will be around long after the president and the secretary of state are gone."

In his appendix, Haig said that his role in the FBI wiretaps of 17 persons

Fog Slows Travel In City, Area

A-J News Services

Murky fog slowed traffic and delayed airline flights going in and out of Lubbock this morning, as a record cold wave continued to numb sections of the Midwest and Northeast.

The fog in the Lubbock area started lifting late this morning and had disappeared by midday. Sunny skies this afternoon are predicted to become partly cloudy tonight and Saturday.

A Braniff International flight came in and departed during the fog, but Southwest Airlines delayed the departure of two flights past midmorning, Lubbock International Airport manager Marvin Coffee said.

A scheduled 7:30 a.m. Continental Airlines flight from Midland had also been delayed past midmorning because of the fog, a Continental spokesman said.

A Lubbock weatherman said the fog covered an area from Plainview to Midland.

He said the fog began to form about 5 a.m. when light winds began to stir air made heavily humid by overnight rains.

The forecast is for temperatures in the mid-50s today, upper 20s tonight and near 50 Saturday.

The extended West Texas forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with mild days and cool nights Sunday through Tuesday.

Most of the state had light to moderate rain during the night.

Lubbock had .02 of an inch, its first measurable precipitation of 1981, while area readings included .71 at Big Spring,

Secretary Heir To Fortune

NEW YORK (UPI) — Some bosses only take their secretaries to lunch. Helene Barak's late boss bequeathed her a Renoir painting, his Park Avenue apartment and $1 million in cash.

The terms of Paul Garrett's will were filed Thursday in Manhattan Surrogates Court. Garrett, a former General Motors vice president, died Nov. 19 at the age of 87.

He described Mrs. Barak in the will as "my competent and loyal secretary." For that competence and loyalty, he bequeathed her a Renoir painting entitled "Women in Front of Flowers," his cooperative apartment on posh Park Avenue and $1 million.

Garrett also left $5,000 each to two other former secretaries at GM, Emily Martinson of Farmington, Mich., and Carmen Macksoud of Manhattan.

New Sheriff Asks Boost In Budget

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

After only a week in office, Sheriff D.L. "Sonny" Keesee already is hitting up the Lubbock County Commissioners Court for about a $27,000 boost in his department's budget this year.

In a letter sent to commissioners Thursday, Keesee asked for salary increases, new uniforms, more ammunition, badges for the jail staff and a king-size chair for his personal use.

"I think we're well documented on everything we've asked for," Keesee said. "We're not asking for anything that's not needed."

And the sheriff said that more requests for budget increases are likely to be presented to commissioners in the near future.

However, Keesee's bid for more money to run his department apparently will meet with strong opposition from at least one member of the commissioners court.

Commissioner Alton Brazell said he isn't ready to begin adding to the county's 1981 budget. "Generally, my position is that all departments, at least for a month, ought to live with the present county budget," Brazell said.

County Judge Rod Shaw said he was suprised to receive a budget increase request from Keesee so soon after he was sworn into office.

"I understood during his (Keesee's) campaign that he said he was going to give better management of the personnel

Envoys Seek Hostage Agreement

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — An American hostage negotiation team headed by Warren Christopher met again today with Algerian officials and worked to draft explanations that will convince Iran that President Carter cannot release billions in Iranian assets blocked by court action.

"I think some sections of the message were forwarded directly to Tehran and others are still being discussed here," said an American official who declined to be named.

With the pace of negotiations stepped up and the American side pushing to get agreement before President Carter leaves office, the negotiations appeared centered on the amount of money the United States would provide in exchange for the 52 Americans held captive for 14 months.

On Thursday, Algerian Foreign Minister Mohamed Benyahia delayed sending the U.S. reply to Iran after nearly three hours of talks.

The team headed by Christopher, U.S. deputy secretary of state, was working behind the walls of the U.S. Embassy compound and keeping "in frequent contact with Algerian officials," an American source said.

Officials in Washington said Christopher would continue his talks in the Algerian capital at least until Saturday. An American source in Algiers said departure plans have not come up yet, since "we haven't reached that point."

U.S. officials in Washington said the Algerians, the go-betweens in the hostage negotiations, were urging the Americans to come up with a clearer explanation of the legal obstacles to the return of some $5.5 billion of the Iranian assets frozen by Carter.

The United States offered to set up an escrow account in the Algerian Central Bank and transfer to it several billion of the estimated $8 billion to $14 billion in frozen assets. This would be released to Iran when the 52 Americans were freed.

The Iranians initially demanded that the United States deposit $14 billion in Algeria as security for the return of all of their assets. They still do not understand that the U.S. Constitution prevents the president from doing anything with the funds that have been impounded by the courts because of legal actions against Iran, officials in Washington said.

They said the U.S. reply to the questions the Iranians raised Tuesday would be held up until Christopher and the Algerians complete their talks. The effect on the negotiations was not yet clear, but State Department spokesman John Trattner indicated the end result might be helpful.

"Obviously the Algerians are counseling us, providing us the benefits of their advice and insights because they have been in this business a month and a half

Damage From Stroke

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — We lost my mother-in-law when she was 88. The cause of death was listed as a pontine infarct. We had never heard of it before but the hospital personnel told us it was quite common in her age group. She was a strong vital person until she was 85. She was from the old country and in her 60s she did concrete work and built a driveway.

When she was 85 she had a sudden loss of hearing in one ear. She had trouble swallowing and got weak. She often fell in spite of her quadcane. Then she was hospitalized for pneumonia and when she was recovering she had a "massive stroke to the braain stem" and died four days later. Do pontine infarcts occur often in older people? What causes them? Does the tendency run in families? Others in her family lived to be in their late 80s and 90s.

DEAR READER — It is always hard to let people who are close to us go. Apparently your mother-in-law had some problem with brain function when she first suddenly lost hearing in one ear. That was probably related to changes in the arteries to her brain — most likely fatty-cholesterol deposits that obstruct the arteries and cause strokes.

A pontine infarct is simply an anatomical designation of the area of the brain that can be damaged in a stroke. This is the area where the nerve from the ear enters the brain. The brain stem is a larger area of the bottom part of the brain.

Regardless of the location of brain damage, most strokes are caused by obstruction of one of the arteries to the brain from fatty-cholesterol deposits, as explained in The Health Letter number 15-6, What You Need to Know about Strokes. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Strokes are particularly apt to occur in women over 75 and are the second most common cause of deaths in that age group of women.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 16 years old and have noticed that my breast development has been stunted. I am a male who exercises daily and I'm in excellent physical shape. My underdeveloped breast plates, as they are called, cause me greaat anguish and have started an inferiority complex for me. Please tell me what kind of exercise I am missing or anything that could be of some help.

DEAR READER — Those "breast plates" are the pectoralis major and minor muscles over the front of the chest. While there are some refinements to this concept their main function is to pull your arm forward and round your shoulders forward. Hold your right arm straight out to your side shoulder high. Put your left hand over the right chest muscles. Now move your right arm forward so your hand is directly in front of you. You should have been able to feel your right chest muscles contract as you make this movement.

You need to make these and other movements that swing the arms and shoulders forward against resistance. There are a number of exercise devices for this or you can go to an exercise facility and use machines to exercise your chest muscles against resistance. If you follow a proper exercise program designed for these muscles, they will enlarge. Developing these muscles also improves a person's ability to do the crawl stroke when swimming, as this stroke uses these muscles.

Long-Living Battery In Production

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Before solar energy can really help Americans save scarce oil and gas, someone must come up with a good way to store power for those times when the winds won't blow and the sun doesn't shine.

The Energy Department, NASA's Lewis Research Center and Sandia National Laboratories are working on a new battery that might open the way for widespread use of windmills, and photovoltaic cells to convert sunshine to electricity.

It's called REDOX — for its reduction-oxidation chemical principle — and its most unusual feature is that it never seems to die.

Another factor setting REDOX apart from the short-lived chemical batteries in cars and flashlights is a modular construction that can be scaled up to great size for commercial use.

But first a commercial-scale battery, which really looks more like a big chemical plant, will have to be built.

Interested U.S. firms soon will be asked to submit proposals to join in a $2-million federal project to build a multi-kilowatt prototype REDOX to be field-tested in 1983.

The next step in a scenario written by the space agency that developed the new electricity storage concept will be a truly vast, multi-megawatt unit slated to be designed in early 1984.

"With the experience we've received in the operation of our experimental one-kilowatt unit, the technology is ready to be transferred to American industry for large-scale prototype development," said NASA's Dr. Louis Rosenblum.

Dr. Albert Landgrebe of the Energy Department said small REDOX systems in the kilowatt range could stimulate use of wind energy and photovoltaics.

Storage capacity of 20 kilowatt hours is all that's needed for most residential photovoltaic applications, he said. That could mean a REDOX the size of "a couple of 250 gallon tanks, no more than the oil tank in your basement," said Landgrebe.

Other uses could include hydro-electric storage and use by factories, cities and rural electric cooperatives that could buy cheap power from utilities during off-peak hours and store it for later use.

REDOX could also permit electric utilities to cut costs and boost efficiency by storing thousands of kilowatt hours of energy made in times of low demand for later use during power peaks.

Unlike conventional lead-acid batteries that depends on one chemical reaction, REDOX converts chemical energy to electricity with two reactant fluids. The fluids — chromium chloride and iron chloride — are kept apart by a membrane as they are pumped through a stack of flow cells.

The membrane serves as a selective ion exchanger, letting just charged hydrogen and chlorine ions to pass through for conductivity. As the fluids circulate, their net electrochemical energy is gradually depleted while electrical energy is withdrawn from the system.

To recharge, the fluids are pumped back through the stack with electricity supplied from an outside source.

The fluids in the charged battery contain ferric iron and chromous chromium, said Dr. Stanley Ruby of the Energy Department. While discharging, each iron ion picks up an electron to become ferrous and the chromium ions lose an electron to become chromic.

Normal batteries slowly die as their electrodes are plated or eroded by chemical reaction. But the REDOX membrane prevents such a reaction in the reactant fluid, giving the system an indefinite lease on life.

Economist Dampens Travel Industry's Optimism

NEW YORK (UPI) — The travel industry expects global travel will be the biggest business in the world by the end of the century, but a Stanford Research Institute economist sees some obstacles in the way.

The industry conclusions emerged from an SRI survey conducted for the Hyatt hotel chain recently among 426 executives, primarily in the airline and aircraft manufacturing industries. About one-quarter of these were interviewed personally.

David T. Raphael, the senior economist who supervised the study, said, however, he suspects the travel people may be much too optimistic. Raphael sees potential economic, social and political clouds on the travel horizon.

Among the industry conclusions:

—The travel business will expand dramatically in the rest of the century because so many new players will enter the game with huge selling efforts.

—Computer communications technology will become general throughout the world, effecting a massive transformation in the way the travel industry makes it possible for people to get about.

—Surface travel costs, including meals and lodging, taxis and buses, and entertainment, will become a bigger share of the average travel outlay.

—There will be fewer and bigger travel agencies, but a much broader range of travel services.

Firm Publishes List Of Average Tax Deductions

NEW YORK (AP) — All the necessary forms are in the mail, or will be shortly, for the annual American rite of filling out income tax returns.

The goal in this noble endeavor, of course, is to maximize deductions, and thereby minimize taxes, without setting off any audit alarms in the Internal Revenue Service's computers.

Toward that end, Prentice-Hall, a publisher of tax information, has worked out a profile of average deductions in each major category for taxpayers at varying income levels.

The firm based them on IRS figures for 1978, the most recent data available:

Adjusted gross income of $16,000-$20,000: Average deduction for contributions, $540; interest, $2,156; taxes, $1,592; medical, $657; casualty and theft, $1,005. Total excess over the "zero bracket amount," or standard deduction, is $2,043.

Adjusted gross income of $20,000-$25,000: Average deduction for contributions, $570; interest, $2,280; taxes, $1,876; medical, $561; casualty and theft, $756. Total excess over zero bracket amount, $2,333.

Adjusted gross income of $25,000-$30,000: Average deduction for contributions, $644; interest, $2,456; taxes, $2,245; medical, $498; casualty and theft, $602. Total excess over zero bracket amount, $2,832.

Adjusted gross income of $30,000-$50,000: Average deduction for contributions, $869; interest, $2,880; taxes, $3,007; medical, $503; casualty and theft, $766. Total excess over zero bracket amount, $4,271.

Adjusted gross income of $50,000-$100,000: Average deduction for contributions, $1,825; interest, $4,585; taxes, $5,309; medical, $668; casualty and theft, $1,425. Total excess over zero bracket amount, $9,364.

Adjusted gross income of $100,000-$200,000: Average deduction for contributions, $4,676; interest, $7,933; taxes, $10,001; medical, $963; casualty and theft, $1,949. Total excess over zero bracket amount, $20,501.

Adjusted gross income of $200,000 and up: Average deduction for contributions, $25,913; interest, $19,633; taxes, $26,699; medical, $1,510; casualty and theft, $4,550. Total excess over zero bracket amount, $72,165.

"Just because your deductions compare favorably with these averages, don't think you can't be audited. You most certainly can be," Prentice Hall cautions.

Nevertheless, the average figures can be useful in any of several ways. A taxpayer can check his return against them to see whether his return carries any unusually high deductions that could cause it to be picked out for further scrutiny by IRS screening computers.

If you have such deductions, says Prentice-Hall, "never pass them up just because they throw you above the average. However, you should make certain that you can prove them — as well as all other items in your return."

At the same time, a check of the average numbers can also show whether you are far below the typical level of deductions. As Prentice-Hall advises: "If you're running far below average, take a closer look. Chances are you may be overlooking some deductible items."

No Good News Seen For House Buyers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Home Loan Board says it doesn't expect any good news for prospective house buyers for a while.

The board reported this week that homebuyers paid an average of 14.93 percent interest on mortgages in early December, the fourth straight month in which the rate increased.

The Price Is Not Right

AS THE POSSIBLE end of the hostage stalemate comes closer, the sense of relief has to be mixed with one of shame as far as the U.S. is concerned.

Seldom in the nation's history has it been subjected to so much humiliation over so long a period by so few.

The full implications of the last-minute talks are not known at this point, but there is no question but that Iran's latest demands amounted to one thing pure and simple—a ransom payoff.

THE CARTER Administration, which to a great degree was responsible for the Iran upheaval in the first place, must bear the stigma of the hostages' seizure and their imprisonment.

No matter how the matter is finally settled, the Iranian mess will stand as a monument to the President's inept understanding and handling of foreign affairs for much of his four-year term in office.

While Mr. Carter can claim due credit for his handling of the Mideast Peace pact between Israel and Egypt, his failure to come to grips with the real issue in Tehran—the challenge to American rights to defend its citizens and diplomatic property—negated any gains in world opinion which may have accrued from the former achievement.

THOSE WHO oppose a "hawkish" stand vis-a-vis the Iranians and the Ayatollah Khomeini may argue that patience and prudence has resulted in a safe return of the hostages.

These people also will argue that in today's volatile world, any overt military action on the part of the U.S. would have not only jeopardized the lives of the hostages but run the risk of sparking a wider conflict.

Perhaps. But, on the other side, one has to wonder if others who may someday decide to storm a U.S. Embassy, say in some Central American nation or Third World country, if the fact we took no retaliatory measures against Iran, to amount to anything, may not be seen as an open invitation for such terrorist acts in the future.

WE, AS THE families and friends of the hostages will welcome them home, if and when...

But, it will be interesting to see what a year out of the lives of the hostages and their families will mean in the long run. How can that be replaced?

While we are in effect agreeing to blackmail, who will reimburse the men and women who are coming home for their loss of freedom, dignity, perhaps even health?

And who will restore the good name of the United States among friends and foes around the world? In the final analysis, the bottom line is that there should be no price on freedom or honor.

IT TOOK A LOT of doing, but Mary Campbell finally proved it actually is possible to take your telephone with you when you move.

Numerous persons have complained to me in recent months about having to take out their old telephone, go to the Southwestern Bell offices, stand in long lines and pick up new telephone instruments if they wanted to save a few bucks when they moved.

They couldn't understand why they couldn't use the telephone to conduct their business with the telephone company.

Yet, when they'd call Ma Bell, they would be told that the only way they could avoid paying to have someone come out and disconnect their old phones was to disconnect them themselves and bring them in for exchange.

"No, you can't take it with you" was the message that came through loud and clear.

TELEPHONE COMPANY officials protested the reporting of these complaints. They conceded that the business office folks try to get customers to come in "so they can sell them more" but insisted that if the customer insisted, he could avoid a command appearance.

"It doesn't make sense," we responded, "that a person would go to your office and stand in line for a couple of hours, complaining about it all the while, if he had been given any inkling he could avoid it."

Nevertheless, we dutifully reported that company officials said it could be done.

Enter Mary Campbell.

She wanted to move a couple of blocks down the street. She called the telephone company. Got the same old story.

She'd have to come in one day to place her order, in person, for a telephone at her new address. And she'd have to come in again to exchange her old telephone for a new one.

The telephone company couldn't take orders by telephone, she was told.

Her mother, remembering our column on the subject, called. We checked with Jim Goodwin, the company man, who said let him check with a supervisor of the service representatives to make sure he'd told me right the first time.

YEP, HE CALLED back to say, "it's perfectly okay to take your telephone with you from one place to another...You can save money by unplugging or snipping the wire yourself and taking it with you."

We called back the mother, who called the daughter, who called the telephone company and then called us.

"At first," she said, "I got the same old story again: I would have to come in and stand in line."

This time, the customer stood her ground, insisting she had neither the time nor inclination to do that. All of a sudden, the sweet voice on the other end of the line said it was perfectly possible to do that and took the order for discontinuing service at the old address and starting it at the new.

So, it CAN be done. Only took, let's see, about nine or ten telephone calls in this instance. If you're moving and can do better—or if you have trouble getting it done at all—we'd like to hear about it.

Holmes Alexander:

Why They're Shooting At Haig

WASHINGTON—Presidential ambition is the Promised Land on which the sun never sets—and this is the unmentioned factor in L'Affaire Al Haig.

Here is a man who has rubbed shoulders with five heads of the American state, hectored the NATO Leaders, been spear-carrier for Douglas MacArthur, the "American Caesar," made the White House his second home and commanded all allied forces in Europe.

When Haig resigned his post at Mons, Belgium, he could not have predicted that his next position would be American Secretary of State. Like Eisenhower before him, Haig planned to change into mufti and move directly to the peak.

He expected that by this writing he would be drafting an Inaugural Address. The time looked ripe. President Carter had flubbed it. Gov. Reagan was four years older than when Gerald Ford had stopped him in '76.

Al Haig had inside knowledge of the Soviet war machine; he could cause American blood to creep with fright on the campaign trail.

BUT THE GENERAL ran into the silent heavy fire of apathy. He had been away too long. Then he required heart surgery. Was he through for the season? Would he be forced into a long still-hunt for the '84 nomination?

Around Thanksgiving, Sen. Robert Byrd was asked:

"Sir, do you subscribe to the theory that a new President should be entitled to pick his own team; and second, how do you feel about Gov. Reagan's reported consideration of Gen. Haig for Secretary of State?"

At that, history went back into action. Sen. Byrd's diatribe against Haig and his Watergate connections catapulted the General back into the news and into Presidential politics.

WHO IN OFFICIAL Washington, and among the watchers, believes that Al Haig will be a satisfied sitter at the State Department?

Not the power brokers of the Democratic Party. A national election is like a steeplechase where the racers are no sooner over one jump than they are facing the next one.

My pick for chief honcho among Democrats is this same Robert Byrd who, when the 97th Senate meets, will open fire with Al Haig the designated target.

What Ted Kennedy will do to rub out Haig as a Republican figure, and what ex-Vice President Mondale is able to do, I haven't a clue.

But any Democrat with Presidential notions knows that this January opens the shooting season on the first military activist in politics since the American Caesar.

And Republicans? Name a top-notcher in the GOP and you've named a stalker of Al Haig. With one hand, Sen. Howard Baker will point approbation at the General, but—is that a banana peel in Baker's other hand?

George Bush, our next Vice President, will startle at the shadow that falls across the Potomac upon the Reagan White House.

The incoming President himself, although confident in Haig's demonstrated loyalty to commanders-in-chief, will soon be a man in his 70s and watching the calendar.

Say what you will, the time once more is ripening for Al Haig. If the country ever had need for a military activist in charge of its future—its survival—the time is now, and from now on. Probably the State Department is the best gym for a candidate-in-training.

Sylvia Porter:

'You're Fired' Is Not Worst Thing To Hear

NEW YORK—Barring a now utterly unforeseeable outburst by the Reagan administration of brilliant, workable measures that would simultaneously curb the inflation spiral, spur economic growth and slash the budget deficit, the U.S. economy will begin 1981 in an exceedingly wobbly condition.

We're teetering on the edge of renewed business downturn right now, perhaps are already in it; today's tortuously steep interest rates are forecasting waves of business/personal bankruptcies, small and large; the pace of inflation and expectations of relentlessly persistent inflation remain, if anything, more destructive than ever.

One logical outcome: more, though selective, firings at the upper levels of corporate management by boards of directors trying to protect their companies' solvency (and themselves). The "revolving doors" are revolving faster than in many years.

"YOU'RE FIRED!" IS rarely used at the top levels, of course—but while the term may be replaced with a phrase far less abrasive, it still will boil down to the same thing.

"You're out on the street." And if you've ever had the experience, you know how severely traumatic an emotional impact this can have.

"Incompetence" in the job is the reason often cited for the removal of most top-level executives and middle managers. But that is merely a catch-all phrase with little meaning of its own.

The most common versions of incompetence include: inability of the executive to understand the problems of the job he/she has been given and therefore to find solutions; a lack of a practical approach to solving the problems involved; procrastination; inferior technical knowledge of the job; fear of being honest with the top boss about what the real situation is and what it demands.

"IT IS OFTEN not the executive but the job itself that signals the downfall of a budding career," says Paul R. Ray Sr., president of the international executive search firm bearing his name.

In short, an executive can be well educated, competent, experienced—and still turn in a poor performance. Why?

Because the executive and the job are mismatched. A man/woman who thrives in a business environment requiring a major degree of social contact and interaction would almost surely be stifled sitting locked away in an office.

So too would be the executive who is accustomed to making on-the-line decisions but who finds that in this job, the decisions must be approved by a bureaucratic command.

OR BECAUSE THE company, when seeking the high-powered executive at the start, has "puffed up" the post to make it more appealing and thus to lure the candidate.

After a few months on the job, though, the executive realizes that the position was misrepresented—and his/her original enthusiasm is replaced by frustration.

How, then, can you defend yourself against these occupational hazards in 1981's extremely tough months for employers and employes across-the-board?

(1) Conduct a thorough self-examination of your motives for seeking a particular position. What are your special characteristics that make you a good manager? In what situations and job environments do you function at your peak?

(2) Once you have answered these questions about yourself to yourself as honestly as you can, collect as much information as you possibly can about a new job for which you have a chance.

What can you find out about the people with whom you will be in closest contact? Will you be able to fit in with them? Will the new position use your abilities and create a stimulating environment in which you can excel or will it call for skills you do not possess?

(3) Even though you're understandably anxious to relocate as rapidly as you can—particularly in this business climate—will this job and your job skills result in a competent match?

If you cannot answer each of these questions satisfactorily, you'll once again risk entering a job situation which eventually will lead to another dread "you're fired!"

OF COURSE, THERE are other common causes for executive firings than mentioned above. The Paul Ray survey suggests in this order:

* Poor company performance in sales or earnings; or the company is acquired or merged; or there's a change in management. The outcome: a reshuffling of management and a "chopping off of heads."

* Personality conflicts involving the boss, the executive's peers or subordinates and touching on style or philosophy.

* Refusal to relocate at company's request—whatever the reasons of family, personal resistance, etc.

* Inflexibility, reflected in the executive's tendency to be dogmatic, automatic, impatient or too rigid and thus ineffective.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Lid Put On Garbage Truck Din

WASHINGTON—Back in November I unloaded a curmudgeonly column complaining about a new national regulation governing the noise levels of garbage trucks.

I said it was a petty, stupid, nit-picking regulation, destructive of state and local responsibilities, and all of those comments stand.

But I am minded to return to the topic because of a letter from Memphis. There is indeed a better way of coping with the problem: It is the way of the marketplace in a free economy.

The letter comes from Raymond Hughes, deputy purchasing administrator for Shelby County, Tenn.

The answer to the noise problem, in his view, lies in the "Buy Quiet" program initiated by the National Institute of Governmental Purchasing and the National League of Cities.

UNLIKE THE FEDERAL regulation, which is complexity itself, this program is simplicity itself. It rests solidly upon the ancient law of supply and demand. Local purchasing agents create a demand for quieter garbage trucks; and perceiving that demand, manufacturers undertake to supply it.

Hughes sums up the procedure succinctly: "Cities and counties that want quieter trucks ask for them; those that do not, don't."

The Buy Quiet plan was launched about 18 months ago. In this period, the National Institute of Governmental Purchasing has begun to establish product specifications not only for garbage trucks, but for many other pieces of machinery also.

Shelby County, for example, sought bids on 10 "quieter" lawnmowers.

"We had no trouble in obtaining a sufficient number of bids," Hughes reports, "and the prices we paid were no higher than before. We plan to follow the same approach in future purchases of jackhammers, garbage trucks and other noisy items."

NEW ORLEANS HAS undertaken some pioneer efforts in this direction. An environmental report from the National League of Cities advises that such cities as Chicago, Milwaukee, New York, Pittsburgh and Austin also are purchasing quieter models of lawn equipment, air compressors and pavement breakers.

In Iowa, the Scott County Purchasing Association is working with the city of Davenport and nine other units to buy quiet products only. Forty purchasing units in north-central Texas have established a purchasing cooperative.

In Minnesota, the league identifies Minneapolis, St. Paul and Bloomington as "Buy Quiet" cities. Some of the programs embrace not only outside equipment but also such indoor noisemakers as vacuum cleaners and typewriters.

SURELY THIS APPROACH is infinitely preferable to the heavy-handed approach taken by the Environmental Protection Agency in the matter of garbage trucks.

If you recall, the EPA went at this essentially local problem with the politesse of a Black Angus bull. The feds roared in with reports, studies, consultants, experts, statisticians and bureaucrats of high and low degree.

We had draft regulations, comments upon the draft regulations, promulgation of revised regulations, and in October of last year a final regulation.

The EPA's idea of how to get quieter garbage trucks is to threaten manufacturers with a $25,000 fine and a year in prison, or both, if henceforth they market a truck that produces noise in excess of 79 decibels.

If we believe in the marketplace system, why do we not give the system a reasonable chance to work? Instead of imposing uniformity by federal decree, why do we not try variety for a change?

ONE OF OUR cherished principles is "local responsibility." Why not abide by that principle? Let our cities decide for themselves, through the mechanisms of local government, whether they want their local parks mowed by lawnmowers that go putt-putt-putt, or by mowers that go KA-VOOM, KAVOOM, KAVOOM.

To be sure, there is a place for national regulation of products that might be truly dangerous to the public health or safety. Even the most dedicated friends of free enterprise stop short of condoning botulism in the vichyssoise.

But a decent respect for federalism ought to teach us that national regulation should be the last resort, not the first.

Wouldn't you like to hear some 100-year-old person tell an interviewer: "Yes, I owe my longevity and good health to eating chocolate donuts and pecan pies."

An optimist laughs to forget—a pessimist forgets to laugh.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You won't go unnoticed tomorrow, regardless of setting. By just being yourself you'll win admirers, so avoid any form of pretense.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your chances of collecting old debts or obligations are very good tomorrow. Use a gentle reminder, not a blunt demand, with one who owes you something.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be complimentary tomorrow to friends who have done things worthy of mention. However, don't flatter the undeserving. Your praise would have an undesirable effect.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's possible tomorrow that others will have greater appreciation for your talents and abilities than you do. Don't let moods get you down.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) When conversing with close friends tomorrow, make it a point not to pry into their innermost secrets. A sensitive pal may not want you to know certain things.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Commercial ventures look very promising for you tomorrow, but just be sure that everything is spelled out to the letter if an agreement is necessary.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're a very easy person to get along with tomorrow. You think in terms of "we" instead of "me." Unfortunately, an associate might not be this fair.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll feel more comfortable tomorrow being around persons who are productive and industrious than you will be with idlers. Select kindred spirits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Instead of being pleased tomorrow that others also think highly of someone you're very fond of, you might just be a shade jealous. Be proud, not possesive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're a very good worker tomorrow, so long as you are interested in your tasks. When your interest begins to waver, however, your craftsmanship will also suffer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll want to enjoy yourself tomorrow, but it will also be very important to you that others have an equally good time. Your attitude is admirable, yet it could be expensive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Materially, tomorrow should be a fortunate day for you, but for some reason you may feel slightly disappointed. It could be because you expect too much.

Center Reports Toilet Shortage

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — A corrections official says he does not know what caused a mass outbreak of diarrhea at the Westville Correctional Center Christmas night. But he says he's certain of one thing — there weren't enough toilets.

A total of 277 inmates and nine staff members were stricken with diarrhea soon after eating a roast beef Christmas dinner.

The problem surfaced when an angry inmate wrote the Indianapolis News, complaining some inmates did not receive prompt medical attention because so many people asked to see a doctor.

Cloid Shuler, director of adult authority for the Indiana corrections system, this week agreed there was a shortage of toilets during the outbreak, but said there never could be enough to cope with such an emergency.

"We renovated the facility recently and it is designed to meet minimum standards of the American Correctional Association for the number of people (941) confined to that facility," he said.

Watt's Confirmation Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, after his panel finished two days of hearings on the nomination of James G. Watt to become the new interior secretary, predicts Watt will be confirmed with "strong bipartisan support."

Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, said he hopes to schedule a committee vote on Watt's nomination next week, probably Thursday.

What McClure called "the one open issue resulting from the hearings" was resolved late Thursday when Watt agreed to broaden his pledge against taking actions that might appear to be a conflict of interest.

In a statement submitted to the committee and the Office of Government Ethics, Watt promised to disqualify himself from any court or administrative proceedings involving the Mountain States Legal Foundation, the conservative Denver-based public interest law firm he headed for more than three years.

Backed by conservative businessmen, the foundation frequently has challenged Interior Department land management policies.

Watt previously had pledged to disqualify himself from cases that began when he was with the foundation. The broadened pledge covers cases that are begun by the foundation after he becomes interior secretary.

The broader pledge was requested Wednesday by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., the committee's ranking minority member. Jackson said Thursday he was pleased with Watt's new promise and said he would trust Watt's "common sense and sense of propriety" in any potential conflicts not covered specifically by the pledge.

McClure said he believes the agreement "will ensure that there is no possibility of any appearance of conflict of interest during Watt's tenure as secretary of the interior, while at the same time preserving his full ability to formulate and implement the policies for the department. ...

"I am confident now that Watt will receive strong bipartisan support in the committee and in the full Senate for his confirmation," McClure said.

The committee heard about 14 hours of testimony on Watt's nomination, during which conservationists claimed his record on the environment was disastrous.

Watt, though, maintained he was trying to bring balance to the management of the nation's public land holdings.

During the two days of hearings, even Democratic senators on the committee seemed inclined to accept President-elect Ronald Reagan's choice for the Cabinet post.

A leading environmentalist voice on the panel, Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., said he may vote for Watt based on assurances from the secretary-designate that he would consult regularly with environmental activists.

Stockman Believes Tax Cut May Have To Be Postponed

WASHINGTON (AP) — As President-elect Ronald Reagan's inauguration draws closer, his Cabinet nominees are hinting that the new administration may have to back away from a quick tax cut and other campaign promises on the economy.

Rep. David A. Stockman, R-Mich., Reagan's choice for budget director, said Thursday that a tax cut the president-elect has said he wants retroactive to Jan. 1 may be postponed until later this year.

"Whether you make the first (tax cut) installment effective Jan. 1 or June 1 or any other date, I don't think is very important," Stockman told a Senate Governmental Affairs hearing on his nomination. "The real importance is that there be a permanent reduction" in tax rates over the next three or four years.

However, Stockman said he is committed to reducing taxes as soon as the administration and Congress can work it out. In his campaign, Reagan said he wants to reduce personal income taxes 30 percent over the next three years, with the first cuts made retroactive to Jan. 1.

"If we fail to cut taxes, then we have no hope, no real chance, over the next three or four years of bringing the budget into balance," Stockman said.

Stockman's comments marked the second time this week a Cabinet designee hinted that Reagan may be reconsidering a campaign promise.

Treasury Secretary-designate Donald T. Regan said Tuesday that under current economic forecasts, Reagan may find it impossible to balance the federal budget until 1984 at the earliest, at least one year later than Reagan had promised during the campaign.

Aides to Reagan's economic advisers said Thursday that some advisers now believe the effective date of a tax cut should be postponed until later this year because of a growing federal budget deficit now estimated at $60 billion — twice as large as projected just two months ago.

But, the aides emphasized, Reagan still has not made a decision.

During more than five hours of questioning before the panel, Stockman also was asked whether he would support supplemental money for the federal food stamp program, which may need an additional $1.1 billion to $1.3 billion this year, according to Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo.

Stockman did not endorse the supplemental money, but said savings could be achieved by restructuring the program to eliminate what he called the "marginally eligibles" now receiving benefits.

Carter Preparing For Private Life

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Jimmy Carter is setting up an office in one of his mother's houses to use when he is no longer president — in 11 days.

The president and his wife Rosalynn arrived here Thursday and promptly visited his mother, who is recuperating from a hip injury, and inspected their new office quarters.

The president's mother, Miss Lillian, spends most of her time at what is called the Pond House. The president and his wife are setting up their offices in Mrs. Carter's other house, on the main street of Plains.

"We're going to be home," Carter told some friends who greeted him when the presidential helicopter landed in a softball field a block from his home. "Rosalynn is going to put me to work."

Both the president and first lady have said they intend to write books about their White House experiences and both are taking aides to Plains with them.

Carter's secretary, Susan Clough, has rented a home in Plains, and his White House appointments secretary, Phil Wise, has been designated as Carter's chief of staff after he returns to private life. Madeline MacBean, a longtime aide of Mrs. Carter, will continue to work for the first lady in Plains.

The first lady's mother, Miss Allie Smith, was one of several Plains residents who flew to Georgia aboard Air Force One.

A small crowd greeted the Carters at the field, shaking hands and bearing signs, one of which read, "Peace in our time, thank you Mr. President." But the real celebration will occur Jan. 20. Several local residents are planning a welcome-home party when the Carters return to Plains after Ronald Reagan has been inaugurated president.

The president is expected to keep a low profile during his four-day stay here, but he said he will receive reports on the negotiations with Iran over the American hostages.

Doctor Says Reagan In Good Health

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Dr. Daniel Ruge believes President-elect Ronald Reagan — his soon-to-be patient — will be no problem to keep in good health.

"He seems in good health now and he has proven he can take care of himself," said Ruge, whose appointment as White House physician was announced Thursday by Reagan transition headquarters. "I don't anticipate any problems."

Ruge, 63, director of the Spinal Cord Injury Service at the Veterans Administration central office in Washington, expressed reserved delight at the appointment.

"I'm looking forward to it," he said. "But I've always had good jobs."

Ruge — pronounced Roo'gee — was a student at Northwestern University of Dr. Loyal Davis, Nancy Reagan's stepfather. The two practiced neurosurgery together in Chicago from 1952 until 1976.

Ruge will replace Dr. Wiliam Lukash, the Naval officer who has served as White House physician since 1974. Lukash recently announced he would retire at the end of President Carter's term.

Ruge said Davis approached him just after the November election about taking the post. He said he plans to move into the White House and set up shop Jan. 19 and has asked the current staff to remain.

Reagan aides Thursday also announced the appointments of Joseph W. Canzeri and Edward V. Hickey Jr. as deputy assistants to the president in the office of Michael Deaver, the designated deputy chief of staff.

Canzeri, who will be Deaver's deputy in charge of presidential scheduling operations, served as tour director of the 1980 Reagan campaign. He once served as an aide to Nelson Rockefeller.

Hickey will serve as director of special support services and will be in charge of the Military Office and security liaison for the president.

1980 Heyday For Mutual Funds

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — The past year was, by almost any measure, the best in at least a decade for the mutual fund industry.

For much of the 1970s, the funds languished in disfavor. But a bull market in stock prices and the impressive success of a new product — money market funds — helped change all that by 1980.

The Investment Company Institute, a trade group, estimated in a year-end report issued this week that mutual-fund shareholders now number more than 11 million, a record high.

In the past two years, aggregate assets of mutual funds have doubled, to about $138 bollion.

According to preliminary calculations by the institute, investors bought more shares of common-stock mutual funds, the traditional heart of the industry, than they redeemed in 1980. It was the first year that has happened since 1971.

This news isn't really any big surprise. It jibes with the New York Stock Exchange's report several weeks ago that found that large numbers of small investors had returned to the stock market. In addition, the boom in money-market funds has been widely publicized.

Still, it is a striking comeback story. After the collapse of the go-go era in the late 1960s, when many high-performance funds turned sour, it looked for a while in the '70s as though the funds might never regain their former standing.

What has helped revive them, interestingly enough, is a renewed enthusiasm for "performance." If greed and fear are, as long-standing Wall Street dogma says, the two basic forces that set investment trends, then greed is back in a big way.

The institute's estimates show a net inflow of $667.6 million into "aggressive growth" funds in 1980 — those that take the biggest market risks in the hope of producing the largest possible gains.

The popularity of these funds isn't hard to understand in view of the spectacular results many of them have been turning in lately.

The Wiesenberger Investment Companies Service, one of several that tracks mutual fund results, reports that 89 "maximum capital gains" funds posted an average increase in net asset value per share of 48.5 percent in the 12 months ended Nov. 28.

That compares with a 38.4 percent rise for more conservative growth funds, and a 29.9 percent gain for funds that seek the dual objective of growth and income.

But the increase in speculative enthusiasm is only part of the story. Money market funds, which invest in such short-term securities as Treasury bills and large certificates of deposit issued by banks, climbed from $11 billion in assets two years ago to $45 billion at the end of 1979 and $76 billion recently.

Short-term tax-exempt funds, money funds that invest in municipal issues exempt from federal income taxes, have attracted more than $2 billion in their brief existence.

One other new wrinkle appears to have gotten a warm reception from investors. The '70s saw a great expansion of the "family of funds" concept, in which a fund manager running several different types of funds allows investors to jump from one fund to another with a telephone call.

The institute estimates that $9 billion worth of such switching took place in 1980, up 67 percent from 1979 and more than 12 times the amount reported five years ago.

Researchers Studying Jet Lag

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Researchers who estimate that 90 percent of pilots and flight crews suffer from fatigue are hoping that an $8 million laboratory complete with two simulated airplane cockpits will turn up some definitive information about jet lag.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration project is aimed at determining jet lag's causes and remedies and the tolerance limits of pilots.

"Circadian desynchronization," as jet lag is formally known, is something experienced by "every pilot who has ever flown," says William Price, a consultant to the project.

"The reason we don't have aircraft crashing around our ears is because of our equipment and procedures," says the 47-year-old researcher and commercial pilot, who has been flying for 26 years.

He estimates about 90 percent of all airline pilots and flight crews suffer from sleep loss, fatigue and jet lag, and scientists at NASA's Ames Research Center in Sunnyvale plan to find out if that is accurate.

Flying, particularly hemisphere-hopping at the helm of a commercial airliner, can be a dangerous proposition, Price said.

"It starts when people are assigned to fly around the clock. They become desynchronized," Price added. "Everything goes along very nicely until something bizarre happens — and then there's an accident."

"Essentially, what we want to do is get some objective information on what performance problems — if any — are associated with fatigue and jet lag," Alan Chambers, head of one of Ames' research division, said this week.

At the request of Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., R-Calif., the division has launched a study to determine how irregular work schedules, disrupted sleep patterns and frequent crossings of time zones affect airline pilots' performance.

New Fuel Standards To Bring Savings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Achieving an average fuel-economy standard of 40 miles per gallon for new U.S.-made cars by 1995 would add about $600 to purchase and maintenance costs, but would cut fuel costs, a new report says.

The Congressional Budget Office report released this week said fuel costs for driving 100,000 miles would be reduced by about $1,100, meaning a net savings of $500 per vehicle when the extra $600 purchase and maintenance costs are taken into account.

The report says attaining an average of 40 miles per gallon should be "technologically achievable" by 1995. A bill introduced in the Senate last year would have required U.S. automakers to boost the fuel economy of their new cars to that average by 1995.

UTAH BLACKOUT — Utah Power & Light Co. officials sought Thursday to determine the cause of a power outage that affected 1.5 million people in Utah, southern Idaho and western Wyoming. (AP Laserphoto)

Engineers Seek Cause Of Utah Power Outage

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Engineers worked today to find the cause of a vast power failure that hit 1½ million residents of Utah, Idaho and Wyoming and left people dangling from ski lifts, awaiting rescue in elevators and maneuvering in traffic snarled by blacked-out signals.

It was one of the most widespread outages in U.S. history.

The entire state of Utah lost electricity from lunchtime to suppertime Thursday. Some 27,000 people in five Wyoming counties also lost power for up to 45 minutes, and a few communities in southeastern Idaho also were affected. Lights flickered in eastern Nevada, but stayed on.

By early today, 99 percent of Utah Power & Light's customers had full power.

Officials at the utility said they did not know what triggered the seven-hour outage, although they speculated a break in a 230,000-volt power line may have contributed to the problem.

At 11:38 a.m. MST, elevators throughout Utah halted between floors, traffic lights darkened, radio stations went silent and television signals were knocked off the air.

"This is ridiculous," snapped a girl who had just lost a quarter in an electronic game machine.

Skiers dangled over mid-slope from Snowbird Mountain's Gad II lift for an hour before a backup power system got them moving.

An open heart operation — in progress at the University of Utah Medical Center when the electricity failed — continued with light from spare generators. But all other operations were canceled for the day.

A graduate student at Brigham Young University in Provo fractured both knees when he fell four floors as he tried to escape from a stuck elevator. Simon Tang, 22, was hospitalized in critical but stable condition.

When their dormitory elevator stopped between the third and fourth floors, Tang and two other students pried the door open. His companions backed out and lowered themselves to the third-floor landing, but Tang jumped forward and missed the landing.

The power failure, which occurred just as lunchtime crowds began filling Salt Lake City streets, triggered numerous minor traffic accidents. But Mayor Ted Wilson said motorists adjusted quickly.

The downtown ZCMI Mall shut down when the electricity did.

Although banks were blacked out and electronic cash registers in stores were frozen, no increase in crime was reported, according to Salt Lake City Police Chief Bud Willoughby.

Temperatures were in the 30s.

The mayor, who had planned a curfew had power not been restored by nightfall, said the comparative lack of problems "speaks well for the people of Utah."

Smuggler Bombs Neighborhood With 100-Pound Bales Of Pot

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Robert Banta was tossing in bed, fighting a cold and the flu, when something hit his mobile home with "a hell of a jolt." When he went to investigate, Banta found the remains of a 100-pound bale of marijuana in his living room and a gaping hole in his roof.

Authorities said the marijuana was dumped out of an airplane as a pilot made a frantic escape attempt across South Florida skies in an effort to elude U.S. Customs agents.

The plane "was built in the early 1940s," said Broward County Sheriff's Deputy Jerry Sampson. "It was held together with baling wire and duct tape."

No one was injured by the barrage, but Banta's mobile home, which was hit about 3:30 a.m. Thursday, was left with a jagged, two-foot-wide hole in the roof. Another bale struck an empty parked van without doing serious damage and a third crashed through the roof of an unfinished home.

In all, police recovered 12 bales scattered from Pembroke Pines to Port Everglades, which are 15 miles apart.

"We got marijuana bombed," said Banta. "I think this whole thing is pretty stupid. It's tough enough living near an airport, anyway."

Banta said when he heard the noise he thought there had been an explosion.

"It sounded like the hot water heater blew out. We came running out of our bedroom to see what happened and the place was eight inches deep in brown weeds," said the South Florida State Hospital security guard, who lives in the suburban community of Pembroke Pines.

Customs agents had spotted the airplane flying without lights over the Florida Keys, and began the chase at 1:48 a.m.

Police arrested Gerald Finegan, who gave addresses in Woodside, N.Y., and Fort Myers Beach, at Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport, where his Beechcraft Baron 18 made an unauthorized landing after the chase.

Once on the ground, the plane's pilot first eluded Broward County sheriff's deputies and Customs officials. But an undercover agent spotted Finegan in a cab in front of an airline terminal.

"He was acting suspiciously. He bought a one-way ticket to New York City and was passing the time nervously," said Judi Maffei, a sheriff's department spokeswoman.

When officers searched Finegan's luggage, they found clothes soiled by airplane fuel and bits of clay, which matched dirt found in the aircraft, authorities said. His fingerprints also matched fingerprints found on the plane, said Miss Maffei.

"I'd like to catch up to this Mr. Finegan and talk to him to the tune of $500 or $600," said Banta, who added that he doesn't have insurance to cover the damage to his mobile home.

Mathematicians Term Study Ridiculous, Disturbing

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mathematicians infuriated over a study reporting that men are genetically better than women in math say "it is virtually impossible to undo the damage" of the publicity surrounding the report.

At a news conference Thursday during the annual meeting of the American Mathematical Society, a half dozen mathematicians — men and women — called the finding "ridiculous" and "disturbing."

The study was published in the Dec. 12 issue of the journal Science.

Two of the mathematicians here responded to the study in an editorial to be published in the journal's Jan. 16 issue.

"The issues ... of what sort of toys and games children are exposed to, of what the expectations of parents and teachers are, and of a multitude of other factors cannot be lightly set aside," said the reponse by Alice Schafer of Wellesley College and Mary Gray of American University.

"It was irresponsible of Science to publish (the study) in the form in which they published it," Miss Gray said Thursday.

She said she was not arguing that the study should not have been published, only that "unsupportable hypotheses" should have been kept out.

The study by Camilla Benbow and Julian Stanley of the psychology department at Johns Hopkins University indicated that seventh-grade boys did significantly better than seventh-grade girls on the mathematics portion of the Scholastic Aptitude Test.

"We favor the hypothesis that sex differences in achievement and attitude toward mathematics result from superior male mathematical ability," the authors concluded, acknowledging that there were other possible explanations.

"Environmental and cultural factors were completely left out (of the study)," said Miss Schafer.

Writer Describes Famous Old Stunt

By SHARI LEWIS

Here's a famous old stunt. Try it at the kitchen sink — and only at the kitchen sink — or your folks may have a fit, and I won't blame them!

Fill a glass with water. Cover it with a piece of cardboard. Holding the cardboard so that it presses firmly against the mouth of the glass, quickly turn the glass upside down onto a tray.

Then say to your friend, "The challenge is this: With one hand behind your back, can you drink the glass of water without spilling a drop?"

When your pal gives up, you can show how it's done. Press your forehead down against the bottom of the bottoms-up glass. Now lift the tray and tilt your head back at the same time, until the glass is balanced upright on your forehead. With one hand, first remove the tray, then take away the cardboard, and finally lift off the glass and drink the water.

Thursday's Brain Twister: How many times can you subtract 10 from 100?

Answer: Only once. After that, any other subtraction is from a smaller number!

Knifemaker Dedicated To Keeping Art Alive

MIDDLETOWN, Md. (AP) — He's described in some quarters as the most celebrated of all American knifemakers. But William F. Moran appears more concerned with his efforts to ensure that bladesmithing will not become a lost art.

He labors at knifemaking in a tiny workshop along a rural road near this Frederick County community, continuing the work he became interested in when he was a boy on his father's farm.

"My father had a dairy farm, and we, like everybody else, had a forge on the farm," said the 55-year-old Moran. "When I was just a kid I started making knives. After a while, I found I could make a better blade than one you could buy."

Since giving up farming to go into the knifemaking business full time 20 years ago, Moran has parlayed a youthful hobby into a business so successful that he is no longer accepting orders for his work.

He has, he said, a "backlog of 20 years or more" for orders for his custom-made blades, and he expects that just filling those will take "the rest of my life."

His hand-tempered, hand-forged blades sell at about $300 on the low end, and can go as high as $5,000 — the price he got sight-unseen from a collector for a knife forged from a meteorite.

Although the worth of blades such as Moran's is now appreciated, there was a long period when craftsmen who could do his type of work were few and far between.

"Back when I started, it had been sort of a forgotten art," noted Moran. "One of the first things that went under during the Industrial Revolution in this country was knife-making. It was just totally forgotten."

About four years ago, he and two other men who forged blades began the American Bladesmith Society, an organization dedicated to passing along the art of knife forging to a younger generation.

The society holds seminars and teaching sessions, with some measure of success.

"The thing I am really more proud of than anything else is the American Bladesmith Society," said Moran. "That (society) has really brought back interest in the forged blade."

Although the society is still a small organization, Moran noted "It has grown quite well and there is no question that the forged blade will always be around."

Magazine Lists Award Winners

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer

"EDUCATION USA," the independent education weekly, gets this writer's first annual "attempt to tickle the ribs" award for coming up with a barrel of fun in its yearend edition.

That's because the issue lists EDUCATION USA's 1980 Annual Dubious Distinction Awards in the field of education.

Recipients of the awards, however, are likely to have red faces, temper tantrums, and maybe tears, especially in the nation's capital.

Consider, for one example, how U.S. Secretary of Education Shirley Hufstedler will react to the award to the Department of Education. The award is titled the "It's fat, has feathers and gobbles, but I wouldn't call it a turkey Award." The Department gets the award because, the magazine says:

"Albert Bowker, the outgoing assistant secretary for post-secondary education, recently said the department was in 'chaos.' There are too many assistant secretaries, 'most of whom have overlapping jobs,' he said. 'And there is really no one in charge. I find it difficult to believe much improvement can be made under the present structure.'

"But Bowker doesn't believe Ed should be done away with — just reorganized and given a new secretary."

The "Extra-curricular Activities Award" aims at "a Massachusetts school superintendent and high school principal indicted on more than two dozen charges of larceny, embezzlement, intimidation and assault.

"Among other things," said EDUCATION USA, "he allegedly robbed the cheerleaders' fund, took food from the cafeteria, sexually molested his secretary and assaulted other school employees."

The "Defender of the Classics Award" lands on "the Montgomery County, Md., schools."

"The school system penalized an English teacher for assigning Aristotle and Machiavelli to his 10th graders in violation of school district rules," said "EDUCATION USA.

Merrill Performs At Supermarket

SEATTLE (AP) — Was that Metropolitan Opera star Robert Merrill belting it out by the frozen foods counter?

Yes, indeed. The famed baritone, hired by Funk & Wagnalls as a traveling troubadour, is making appearances in supermarkets around the country to promote the company's new record collection, "The Joy of Great Music."

On Wednesday, Merrill, attired in white tie and tails and accompanied by the Northwest Chamber Orchestra, performed for an hour before enthusiastic shoppers at a Seattle supermarket.

More than 1,000 people jammed the store for a look and a listen, and motorists had to be turned away from the parking lot. When the concert was over, more than 500 records were snapped up.

Merrill, 61, said afterward: "What difference does it make where you sing a performance as long as there is an audience? And this is an untapped audience.

"They want to touch me. They don't believe I'd be in a supermarket," he laughed. "I love these people. Some ask me if I'd visit their homes and listen to the record with them."

Actor Assists In Heart Operation

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Donald Sutherland spent two days in Houston at the side of Dr. Denton Cooley to research a role as a top heart surgeon and was permitted to take part in an actual operation, the New York Post says.

SUTHERLAND

Sutherland, whose only medical experience had been playing the role of Dr. Hawkeye Pierce in the movie "M*A*S*H," was allowed to apply electric shock and stitch up the unidentified patient, the Post said Thursday.

Cooley, a pioneer heart surgeon, described the actor as a "fast learner."

"I taught him how to scrub up, dress in surgical clothes, stitch and tie surgical knots," Cooley was quoted as saying. "Then I brought him into the operating room during an actual operation to assist."

Sutherland, who plays a heart surgeon in the recently completed film "Passages," said: "Research is very important when you're doing a movie like this. You've got to look authentic. I was a litle surprised that Denton let me do stitching, but it was a wonderful experience."

'Animal' Takes News Photo

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Daryl Anderson for years has played the role of news photographer "Animal" on the TV series "Lou Grant." Now he actually has a news photo to his credit.

A fire at a telephone company building here, a block away from where the "Lou Grant" cast was filming, gave Anderson his break.

While police and firefighters cleared the streets and other cast members headed to the top of a nearby building to watch the blaze, Anderson — who was wearing his cameras in preparation for a scene — headed to the fire and began snapping photos.

"He keeps the cameras loaded just for fun," said CBS publicist Norma Green.

Anderson offered his film to Associated Press photographer Reed Saxon, who was supposed to shoot the "Lou Grant" cast but was diverted to the fire.

"He said, 'I've got some pictures of the flames, do you want them?'" said Saxon, who took Anderson's film back to the AP office along with his own.

One of Anderson's pictures was used by the AP — a first for the actor, who Miss Green said had taken pictures while doing research for his part but had never had any used by a news organization.

Donna Summer Has Baby

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pop singer Donna Summer has given birth to her second child, a 7-pound, 3-ounce girl.

Brook Lynn Sudano, daughter of the well-known singer and her husband, singer-guitarist Bruce Sudano, was born Monday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, with Sudano assisting in the Lamaze delivery.

MISS SUMMER

The announcement was made by Warner Bros. Records, distributors of Geffen Records, Miss Summer's label.

The infant is named after the New York City borough where Sudano was born and after his band, Brooklyn Dreams.

Sudano and Miss Summer were married last year. She has another daughter, Mimi, age 7½, from a previous marriage.

Cronkite Wins Journalism Award

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Walter Cronkite, veteran CBS newsman, has been named the winner of the University of Arizona's John Peter Zenger Award.

CRONKITE

Cronkite, who will leave the post of anchorman of the CBS Evening News later this year, is the first broadcast journalist to receive the award.

In voting by about 350 newspaper journalists nationwide, Cronkite was the runaway choice, said Donald Carson, head of the university's Journalism Department.

The award is presented annually for "distinguished service in behalf of freedom of the press and the people's right to know."

The prize, now in its 27th year, is named for John Peter Zenger, a colonial publisher who fought for freedom of the press.

Why Fight City Hall? Buy It!

CLIFTON, N.J. (AP) — Rather than fight City Hall, residents of this North Jersey community can buy it. But no one is jumping at the offer.

The Lighter Side Of The News

The 62-year-old brick building has been on the market since September when the police department and most of the city's administrators moved to new quarters. However, no buyer has met the $300,000 asking price.

Earlier this week, an Islamic group offered $300,000, but the bid was rejected. Then a Ukrainian community organization's $251,000 offer was turned down.

The City Council wanted to restrict the bidding to private, taxpaying companies. But that condition has been dropped, even though the old city hall is considered important to the economic vitality of Clifton's tiny downtown area.

Mrs. Grasso's Condition Worsens

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Doctors treating former Gov. Ella Grasso for cancer downgraded her condition from guarded to serious because of a fever, and called her return to intraveneous feedings a "setback."

Hartford Hospital spokesman James Battaglio said Mrs. Grasso's condition was changed when her fever rose shortly after 6 p.m. Thursday. The fever — the second she has had in less than a month — came down later in the evening to where it had been earlier in the day, he said.

"Shortly after six or so it elevated considerably and her physicians expressed concern over the situation between the ulcers and the fact that she's had a fever, which obviously implies an infection," he said.

Battaglio said doctors had found stomach ulcers in Mrs. Grasso, 61, while conducting tests to assess the effects of a third round of chemotherapy administered to her Monday.

The change in Mrs. Grasso's condition would "not change the care she is receiving," Battaglio said.

"There's been no talk of putting her in intensive care," he said. "She will continue to stay in her private room."

Mrs. Grasso resigned effective New Year's Eve because of her illness and was succeeded by Lt. Gov. William O'Neill.

She has been taken off semisolid foods and is "back on intravenous (feedings), about 1,000 calories a day."

Cool Season Grasses Offer Grazing In Lean Days

BUSHLAND (Special) — Irrigated cool season perennial grass can furnish grazing after winter wheat pasture and prior to spring growth of native grass.

The critical time when no other forage grows is from March 15 to June 1. Farmers and ranchers who want to carry cattle year-around usually have to feed over this period.

In order to test the value of cool season grasses for supplying forage during this time, Dr. H.V. Eck, soil scientist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture Center at Bushland, conducted an experiment with irrigation water and fertility levels on tall fescue and smooth bromegrass.

The Science and Education Administration scientist found that irrigation for spring growth and fertilizing with 300 pounds per acre of actual nitrogen gave the most efficient production. This treatment produced five tons of dry forage per acre annually in a three-year experiment.

Eck started his research by planting Fawn tall fescue and Southland bromegrass in the fall of 1973 on level borders. The borders were made on dryland Pullman clay loam that never had produced an irrigated crop. Starting in 1974, forage was cut at a two-inch height when the grass headed about May 10, and at three later dates at about six week intervals.

The scientist used three water levels requiring 20, 24, and 40 inches of irrigation water annually. For the lowest water level the grasses were irrigated at midwinter, April and after each harvest. The treatment that received 24 inches of water was irrigated mostly during the early part of the season when grasses produced the most growth.

Applications were made in midwinter, April, two weeks before the first harvest, midseason, after third harvest and two weeks before the fourth harvest. With 40 inches of water, irrigations were at midwinter, and twice before each of the harvests.

Ammonium nitrate was used on each water treatment at 0, 150, 300, 450, and 600 pounds per acre of actual nitrogen. Feedlot waste was applied at 12 and 24 tons per acre each year to give nitrogen at 300 and 600 pounds per acre.

As the researcher expected, yields were greatest with 40 inches of water. Pounds of forage produced per inch of water used greatest with 24 inches of irrigation water, applied mostly in early spring. This came about because the first cuttings yielded 75 percent of the total forage produced during the year.

The optimum nitrogen fertilizer rate proved to be 300 pounds per acre. Eck also found that additions of phosphorous and potassium fertilizer did not increase yield. About one-half of the nitrogen in feedlot manure was released the first year, so it took 24 tons to produce yields equal to 300 pounds of nitrogen.

Average yield for the three years was 5.3 tons per acre of air dry fescue and five tons per acre of bromegrass with 24 inches of water and 300 pounds per acre of nitrogen. With 20 inches of water, fescue and bromegrass yields averaged 4.4 and 4.7 tons per acre. Irrigating with 40 inches of water and using 200 pounds per acre of nitrogen produced 6.6 and 5.8 tons per acre of fescue and bromegrass.

The grasses yielded much more the first yeasr than the second and third years. On unfertilized plots the two grasses averaged five tons the first year with 24 inches of water. As residual nitrogen in the soil was used up, yields dropped to 1.5 and 0.7 tons per acre the second and third years.

With 300 pounds of nitrogen per acre and 24 inches of water yields were seven tons the first year. The second and third year, yields dropped to five tons per acre. Late summer temperatures were hotter the last two years and late season growth slowed down accordingly.

"Our study shows that a good fertility program is necessary to produce economical yields of irrigated and cool season grass," Eck said.

In a separate experiment the researcher found that cutting at three-week intervals reduced forage yield 25 percent as compared with cutting at six weeks. This indicates that keeping the grasses grazed short would cut yields.

"The secret to maximum production is leaving adequate leaf area to feed the plant but grazing enough so the grass does not become too large and stemmy," the researcher said.

The scientist checked protein, nitrates, digestibility and the ratio of potassium to calcium and magnesium in the forage. The tests showed the grasses, fertilized with 300 pounds of nitrogen per acre, would furnish a good diet for cattle. The forage contains from 13 to 15 percent protein and the nitrate level was not high enough to be poisonous.

Grass fertilized with 300 pounds per acre of nitrogen was more digestible than unfertilized grass. If potassium level gets too high in relation to calcium and magnesium, cattle may get grass tetany. With fescue there was no danger of grass tetany.

Bromegrass, however, was higher in potassium and lower in magnesium than fescue and at the higher nitrogen rates. With 300 pounds of nitrogen per acre, ratios of potassium to calcium and magnesium were close to the level causing grass tetany. This hazard could be minimized by reducing nitrogen fertilizer or supplemental feeding magnesium, according to the researcher.

After all the work, the scientist figures he could irrigate cool season grass more efficiently by managing the irrigation water differently from any treatment in his experiment. Irrigation in midwinter, April 20 and late August would produce good yields and maintain the grass.

Eck figures this would cut irrigation water to 12-16 inches annually, saving considerable water and irrigation expense. Most years rainfall during the summer will keep the grass alive.

The August irrigation is needed to encourage growth and build up root reserves for winter survival and spring growth. Under this system fertilizer should be applied just before the winter irrigation, he said.

Irrigating cool season grasses fits well with corn or grain sorghum farming. The grasses use water in the early spring and late fall before or after summer crops need irrigation. "My research tells Southern Great Plains growers how to manage cool season grassses and how much feed or hay they can expect. Cool season grasses furnish good quality forage at a time when other forage crops do not produce," Eck said.

CHECKS BROMEGRASS — Dr. H. V. Eck, U. S. Department of Agriculture soil scientist, checks bromegrass production at the Research Center at Bushland. He has conducted experiments with irrigation water and fertility levels on tall fescue and smooth bromegrass.

Ag Nominee Pledges Voice For Farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — John R. Block, who thinks more U.S. exports can help farmers prosper, says he would speak out loud and clear on their behalf if the Senate approves him as Ronald Reagan's secretary of agriculture.

For example, Block said this week, he would make it known within the administration that he:

—Would be reluctant to use a food embargo as a tool of diplomacy except under the most dire circumstances.

—Has no preconceived budget targets or plan to demolish the government's $11 billion food stamp program, the estimated cost in 1980-81 if current projects are allowed to stand.

—Thinks Americans should have mostly a free choice on what they eat and not be subjected to so much federal dietary advice.

Block, responding to questions before the Senate Agriculture Committee headed by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said food is "a valuable instrument of peace" but is valuable only if other countries can count on the U.S. supply.

An embargo, he said, should be ordered "only as a last resort under extreme circumstances."

President Carter ordered a partial embargo of U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union more than a year ago in response to its intervention in Afghanistan.

Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., asked whether the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan would qualify as an extreme circumstance. Block said, "I don't know all the details on that."

Helms said final committee action on Block's appointment would be postponed until Jan. 19 or possibly earlier so financial and ethics paperwork could be completed on behalf of the 45-year-old Illinois farmer and state director of agriculture.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., one of Block's strongest supporters for the nomination, said there is "a concern by many of us and by everyone on the committee" that in speaking out for farmers others are not forgotten, including those who rely on government food stamps and other feeding programs.

Dole, who has supported revisions in the food stamp program, told Block "there is a need for those programs" and that he hoped budget cuts could be made "without any meat-ax approach" to any single program.

Food stamps this fiscal year are expected to account for about half of the Agriculture Department's $21.6 billion budget, counting supplemental money currently under review.

Block told Dole he has not yet singled out "any particular program" to cut and that "I agree the whole budget needs to be looked at."

Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, asked Block what he thought about some of the Agriculture Department's recent publications about human nutrition, including guidelines that are intended to help consumers eat better.

Jepsen questioned whether some of those were of any value because there has been so much disagreement among food experts about additives, meat in diets, cholesterol and other issues.

Block said he thought people "are pretty good at figuring out what to eat and what they should eat" for themselves so long as poisonous foods are kept off the market.

"I know that they're not the same, but hogs are ...," Block began before laughter interrupted the hearing.

"You can provide protein and grain to a hog and he'll balance his ration (meal)," Block continued. "He'll eat about the right amount of protein to go along with the grain. He won't overeat on the grain. And people surely are as smart as a hog."

Block's farming enterprise includes 3,000 acres of land and produces about 6,000 hogs a year.

Members Plan New Orleans Bureau Fete

WACO (Special) — More than 125 Texas Farm Bureau members are planning to attend the 62nd annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation Jan. 11-15 in New Orleans.

Texas Farm Bureau will send 19 voting delegates this year — the largest number in history from this state — to help decide national Farm Bureau policies for 1981. Representation is based on membership, which stands at 263,000 in Texas.

Among the proposals to be considered are the recommendations adopted at the TFB convention in San Antonio in early December. Delegates from the 49 state Farm Bureaus (all except Alaska) and Puerto Rico, who represent the 3.3 million member families in the organization, will participate in the business session on the final two days of the meeting.

Several well-know leaders will address the annual meeting. They include Robert B. Delano, AFBF president; Gen. William C. Westmoreland, honored military man and former head of West Point Military Academy; and, Paul A. Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve System.

Pete Fountain and his jazz band will entertain at the New Orleans Superdome on Jan. 13.

TFB president Carrol G. Chaloupka of Dalhart, will head the 19 delegates from Texas, who comprise the present TFB board of directors and five former directors. Chaloupka also will preside at a wheat and feed grains conference Jan. 12.

AFB board members from the High Plains who will serve as voting delegates include S. M. True Jr. of Plainview, vice president; Jack Osborne of Pampa; and Vester Smith of Loop. Former director Bill Reid of Lamesa is an alternate delegate.

Soybean Meet To Feature Innovations

PLAINVIEW (Special) — The latest innovations in weed control and new varieties will headline the annual Texas Soybean Association meeting Jan. 30 in Plainview.

TSA president LaMarr Ramsey of Plainview said registration will begin at 8:30 a.m. in the Hale County Agriculture Center.

Speakers for the morning sessions will include Texas Agriculture Extension Service specialists Ray Brigham, Mike McWhorter, Leon New and Marvin Sartin. Topics will include fertilization, weed and insect control, irrigation and production costs. There will also be a film on marketing.

Following the noon luncheon sponsored by the Plainview Production Credit Association, American Soybean Association director of market development Dennis Blankenship will describe market opportunities available through grower-sponsored programs.

In the afternoon, the business meeting will be held and winners of the yield contest announced. The contest is sponsored by the association and prizes are awarded by Elanco Products Co.

More information may be obtained from Texas Soybean Association, 812 East 8th St., Plainview, Texas, 79072, (806) 293-3806.

CLOSED-BOLL COTTON PRODUCTION is feasible if yields could be increased to near current levels for conventional open-boll cotton, a U. S. Department of Agriculture economist said this week.

Dale Shaw told the National Cotton Council's annual Beltwide Conference at New Orleans that the costs of closed-boll production are very dependent on yields.

It currently is impossible to attain the same yields as with open-boll cotton, he said.

Closed-boll cotton in beltwide tests has averaged about 300 pounds an acre, Shaw said, compared with about 517 pounds for conventional cotton.

The costs of closed-boll cotton production through the ginning stage are estimated at 113.9 cents a pound, he said, compared with 76.5 cents a pound for conventional cotton.

Most of the increased costs of closed-boll cotton stem from higher assembly, drying and ginning costs, he said. However, if yields can be raised, he said, lower harvesting costs of closed-boll cotton could offset those higher processing costs.

ADDITIONAL RESEARCH IS NEEDED to raise yields of closed-boll cotton, Shaw said.

Studies to date, he said, have shown that closed-boll cotton is cleaner and whiter than open-boll cotton and should be attractive to textile mills.

Shaw said U. S. textile mills could realize a 17 percent reduction in their mill investment if economical closed-boll cotton production were possible.

Despite encouraging developments in closed-boll cotton research, the USDA official said, various issues need to be resolved.

Results have been inconclusive as to whether closed-boll cotton alleviates byssinosis among textile workers, Shaw said. Byssinosis, allegedly associated with cotton dust, commonly is known as "brown lung."

Research still is being done on developing harvesting and drying technology for closed-boll cotton, Shaw said, and on its performance in textile processing.

AREAWIDE COTTON CLASSING RECEIPTS on the High Plains through Wednesday totaled 1,747,234 running bales, including classings of 1,553,364 and a carryover of 194,150.

Receipts on the day were a combined 19,309 samples at Lubbock, Brownfield and Levelland and 5,700 at Lamesa. An estimated 98 percent of the crop is off the stalk, agricultural officials said Thursday.

Most of the cotton that is stored in modules is said to be in an area north of the Idalou highway and east of the Amarillo highway. A couple of gins in Gaines County still have a considerable amount of moduled cotton to process.

The majority of gins still operating expect to be done by late next week. Some gins to the south have only enough cotton left to run another one to three days.

Classings at Lubbock totaled 1,194,466 bales, up from 1,081,674 a year ago, and the office here had a carryover of 145,200 for total receipts of 1,339,666.

Receipts at Levelland totaled 101,026 bales, including classings of 91,726 — against 171,388 a year ago — and a carryover of 9,300. The Brownfield office had classed 48,833 — compared with 160,033 a year ago — and had a carryover of 6,200 for total receipts of 55,033.

ACTUAL CLASSINGS FOR THE SEASON were a combined 1,335,025 running bales at Lubbock, Levelland and Brownfield, down 78,370 bales from 1,413,395 a year ago.

The Lamesa office had classed 218,059 bales and had a carryover of 33,450, making total receipts of 251,409. With daily receipts dropping sharply, the night shift may be pulled off at Lamesa next Thursday as well as possibly a portion of the day shift.

Some trade officials now believe areawide classings from the 1980 crop could total approximately 1,860,000 running bales. This, in rough and rounded figures, would include around 1.4 million at Lubbock, a combined 160,000 at Levelland and Brownfield, and 300,000 at Lamesa.

The classing figures, for reasons noted earlier, are not necessarily an accurate gauge of the final production tally for the 25-county area in 480-pound net weight bales. The classing-production difference over the years has been highly erratic.

But it is interesting to note that the 10-year average difference between classings and final official production figures would translate into a 1980 crop — based on the latest private classings estimates — of about 2.062 million bales. The 1979 crop totaled 2,750,600 bales.

WITH A BURST OF ACTIVITY IN THE last half-hour, cotton futures Thursday rallied to the session's highs and then fell back to finish a mostly sluggish session up 60 to 75 points in current marketing year months.

For most of the session, analysts said, prices had traded within a narrow 60-point range, with many usual participants sidelined ahead of Thursday afternoon's weekly export report and today's production estimate.

Late local buying, as well as commission house and trade support, sent prices to the 94-cent level, basis spot March, where stops were triggered to send the front month to the day's high of 94.35 cents, a gain of 107 points, analysts said.

Toward the close, they added, the market fell off the highs as commission houses forcefully took profits on long Positions.

"Activity overseas has picked up in the last couple of days as Japan has been a good buyer of Arizona and Texas cottons," one analyst reported.

THE OVERNIGHT EXPORT SALES WERE said to have been for both Arizona and Texas growths, with estimates on the amounts ranging from 30,000-80,000 bales.

"Domestic mill activity has been slow," the analyst said, although one of the major mills was reported to have bought approximately 25,000 bales late last week.

The USDA reported after the close that net new U. S. export sales in the week ended Jan. 1 totaled 46,100 running bales for current marketing year delivery, with a purchase by Thailand of 45,000 bales the only major transaction.

The 1980-81 export commitment — shipments plus outstanding sales — totaled 4.477 million bales. No new sales were reported for 1981-82 delivery.

Shipments for the week slowed to 101,700 bales, with 11 percent going to Europe and 84 percent to Asia, including 33,500 bales to China. This brought exports for the season to 2,149,200 running bales, compared with 2,752,700 a year ago.

AN AVERAGE OF CROP ESTIMATES made by eight commission house analysts and specialists totaled 10,851,875 bales, down from 0.79 percent from the ASDA's December estimate of 10.938 million.

Crop analysts here don't expect the High Plains estimate to change much from the December projection. They believe it could range from slightly lower to slightly higher, with a leaning to the view that a bit of an increase wouldn't be surprising.

Nor is the Texas estimate thought likely to show anything more than a relatively minor change, although some believe it could be down a maximum of possibly 50,000 bales. A basically unchanged Texas number generally wouldn't be considered surprising.

The eight commission house estimates on the U. S. crop ranged from a high of 11 million bales to a low of 10.774 million.

Trading on Telcot totaled 7,552 bales on an average price of 74.93 cents, an average of 3,445 points over the loan, with a volume of lower grade cotton pulling down the premium. There was no market difference.

Cotton in the firm offer program rose to 96,623 bales, believed to be a high for the season.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures prices closed lower Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade on what sources said was substantial selling by local traders and commission houses.

A veteran trader in the soybean pit said most traders appeared to be selling to stop their losses from mounting as the value of contracts declined. Prices also had been lower Wednesday when almost all commodities slumped amid rising interest rates.

Sources also pointed to the strengthened U.S. dollar overseas, which makes purchase of grains less attractive to European interests. They said there also is some nervousness about labor and farmer unrest in Poland.

At the close, soybeans were 8 cents to 13½ cents lower, January $7.98 a bushel; oats were 1 cent to 1¾ cents lower, March $2.22¼ a bushel; wheat was ¾ cent to 12½ cents lower, March $4.97¼ a bushel; corn was 1¼ cents to 5½ cents lower, March $3.74½ a bushel.

COMMODITIES

By Mike Stevens
Merrill Lynch Commodities

THE PICTURE OF COTTON FUTURES TRADING could be strikingly different by the end of 1981 if any of the proposals being discussed by three U.S. commodity exchanges take effect. On the other hand, revisions in the exchanges' plans or bureaucratic red tape could delay action for the foreseeable future.

In 1981, the cotton industry will be watching for changes in the following three major areas of futures trading:

— The New York Cotton Exchange (NYCE) has been asked by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission to evaluate the terms of its cotton contract in light of changing geographical patterns of production and cash marketing, including the possibility of providing a western delivery point for the futures contract. A reply is due April 30.

— The New Orleans Commodities Exchange (NOCE) has proposed a Texas short-staple cotton contract, which is under consideration by the CFTC. NOCE expects to open in February, although the cotton contract may not be ready for trading by then.

— The Chicago Board of Trade (CBT) has proposed to the CFTC that it begin trading a cotton contract with terms almost identical to those of the NYCE. The proposal would put Chicago in direct competition with New York. However, at a meeting scheduled for yesterday, the CBT was likely to make changes in its proposal, including adding a western delivery point and broadening the contract to attract participation by western hedging interests and foreign export firms. The original proposal was submitted to the CFTC in October and has been assigned to the same analyst who is working on the New Orleans cotton contract.

LATE IN 1980, THE CFTC ASKED THE NYCE to file a report responding to three basic CFTC concerns: The adequacy of existing delivery points on the New York contract, none of which is west of Texas, and the appropriateness of quality specifications and price differentials for tenderable cotton, which have allowed lower than base qualities to be tendered on the contract, and the life of certificates and penalties on over-age cotton.

Herman Kohlmeyer Jr., chairman of the executive committee of the New Orleans Commodities Exchange, believes the proposed NOCE contract for 1-inch strict low middling cotton would provide a better hedging mechanism than the NYCE contract for farmers and merchants in the High Plains of Texas and Oklahoma, where the shorter staples are common. Kohlmeyer said the NOCE intends for its contract to be complementary to the New York contract because of the shorter staple and because it would allow delivery of strict low middling light spotted cotton, which cannot be tendered in New York. He said interest in a short-staple contract had increased as the use of futures markets by merchants, mills and growers had increased during the past 10 years, and that many would find it a more useful hedging instrument than the NYCE contract. Kohlmeyer noted that the NOCE contract would provide a vehicle for arbitrage with the longer staple New York contract.

Tom Coleman, vice president and director of economic analysis and planning for the CBT, said the CBT intends for its contract to be in direct competition with the NYCE contract. The CBT believes it could offer better support and liquidity for a cotton contract than the NYCE and could attract potential business that is not going to New York. Coleman also noted that cotton competes with grains and soybeans, and said individuals who trade those contracts in Chicago would be interested in trading cotton. Grains and soybeans are not traded in New York. Although the CBT has duplicated the terms of the NYCE contract, except for delivery procedures, in its proposal to the CFTC, Coleman said it was likely that the CBT would change its strategy and broaden its proposed contract during a meeting on the subject Thursday.

He said the CBT would probably add a western delivery point to its contract and make other changes to correct what it considers the weaknesses of the NYCE contract. Coleman also said the CBT proposal would be for a more "international contract" than that of the NYCE and that if the changes he expects are made, it woould attract more interest from western hedgers and international exporters. Even if the changes are made, Coleman said, he expects Chicago to be in direct competition with New York. He said he hoped for action by the CFTC this year.

It is possible that the New Orleans cotton contract will not be approved in time for trading to begin by the exchange's planned mid-February opening date, according to James Culver, director of the CFTC division of economics and education.

EXPORT SALES OF U.S. UPLAND COTTON are expected to continue at a slow pace for the remaining seven months of the 1980-81 marketing year, despite recent large sales to China, according to U.S. cotton merchants and other export sources.

In December, the U.S. Department of Agriculture estimated 1980-81 (August-July) U.S. upland cotton exports at about 5.24 million running bales (5.5 million 480-pound bales). But weekly sales would have to average only slightly above 26,000 running bales for the rest of the marketing year to meet the USDA export estimate.

Actual export shipments would have to average at least 103,000 running bales for the rest of the season to meet the USDA estimate. Upland cotton sales during the first 21 weeks of the marketing year have averaged about 55,000 running bales. However, until China purchased about 554,000 running bales in the past three weeks, sales had averaged only about 31,000 running bales a week. Exports averaged about 97,500 running bales a week during the first 21 weeks of the marketing year.

The slow cotton export business so far this marketing year was consistently attributed to three factors: The reduced size of the 1980-81 U.S. cotton crop, high U.S. cotton prices and the worldwide economic recession.

About 6.0 million bales are expected to be consumed by U.S. textile mills. To be able to export even 5.5 million 480-pound bales, U.S. merchants will have to dig into the carryover stocks, and the USDA estimates that 1980-81 U.S. ending stocks could be the lowest in about 30 years. As U.S. cotton became more expensive, especially by comparison with similar foreign growths, export customers looked to cheaper markets to fill their need. U.S. cotton has been more expensive than comparable foreign growths for most of the season.

The most discussed foreign supplier entering 1981 is the Soviet Union, traditionally one of the top two world cotton exporters, along with the United States. The USDA estimates that the Soviet Union could export as much as 4.0 million 480-pound bales of cotton this season, out of a record crop of 14.2 million 480-pound bales.

Taiwan, which traditionally buys 40 to 50 percent of its cotton from the United States is expected to cut its imports from the United States significantly, and replace some of the U.S. growths with imports from other markets including the Soviet Union, India, Pakistan and Central America.

Irrigation Subject Of Planned Meeting

AMARILLO (Special) — The amount of water needed to irrigate a crop and ways to most efficiently apply it will be examined at the annual High Plains irrigation conference here Tuesday.

The conference is from 9:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center, 6500 Amarillo Blvd. West. It will include presentations by specialists of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, researchers with the U.S. Department of Agriculture-Science and Education Administration, faculty of the Texas State Technical Institute, industry representatives and a panel of growers.

Ways of figuring the amount of water applied during a single irrigation using furrow, center pivot sprinklers and side roll sprinklers will be explained by Wayne Keese of College Station, extension agricultural engineer. Excessive amounts are too costly and in most cases applications can be controlled, Keese noted.

Research on row irrigation that emphasizes full and limited irrigation of corn, grain sorghum and wheat will be summarized by Jack Musick of Bushland, research agricultural engineer with USDA-SEA. Results of reduced planting and irrigation patterns will be included to help identify potentials in reduced irrigation. Musick also will discuss methods to control irrigation costs and maintain profit when using furrow irrigation.

An economic comparison and the feasibility of installing center pivot sprinklers on longtime row-watered land will be presented by Dr. Ray Sammons of Amarillo, extension area economist. Many cost and production factors are involved, Sammons said.

How pump and engine performance affect irrigation fuel costs will be detailed by Leon New of Lubbock, extension area agricultural engineer-irrigation. He will summarize irrigation pumping plant efficiency tests made in many High Plains counties since 1977. New will discuss why low engine and pump performance cause individual well fuel costs to increase. Additional fuels costs caused by low equipment performance can pay the cost of repair, sometimes in one year, New said.

The importance of high pump efficiency following repair of used pumps or installation of new pumps will be discussed by Ken Glenn and Rod Marshall of Big T Pump Co. in Hereford. The grower is entitled to know the anticipated level of efficiency to help warrant the expenditure for repairs or replacement, New explained. The grower can provide information to insure maximum efficiency and needs to know the limitations of his equipment, the extension irrigation engineer said.

Good engine maintenance, fine tuning, accurate operation and other factors important to the performance and life of irrigation engines will be discussed by Pete Brisley of Amarillo, chairman of the auto mechanics program of TSTI. He will cover operation and service according to manufacturers recommendations and performance and operational checks the grower can perform to achieve maximum fuel efficiency.

To conclude the conference a panel of growers will describe changes they are making in their irrigation practices to offset increasing costs of irrigation fuel and production.

Serving as moderators for the conference will be county extension agents Robert Devin of Dallam County, Kenneth Holloway of Moore County and Dennis Newton of Hutchinson County.

Wheat Production Boost Planned

By RODERICK TURNBULL
Kansas City Board Of Trade

KANSAS CITY — Both Canada and Australia are planning on boosting the production of wheat to meet what they expect to be an expanding world demand. Both already have made some progress, but each has certain problems.

Canada's principal problem seems to be with transportation, although considerable dissatisfaction is apparent over its marketing system. Australia has certain limits on the availability of arable land, or land that receives adequate rainfall.

Ordinarily, Canada is second to the United States in wheat exports with Australia third, but last year, Australia took over the second position spot.

Canada for years has had difficulties with a venerable grain freight rate structure which has had the effect of restricting expansion of the rail transportation system.

Despite this, some improvements have been made in recent years, permitting record exports in the last crop year. Some of these things are outlined by a U.S. Department of Agriculture economist, Mary Anne Nermile, in the department's magazine, "Foreign Agriculture."

Canada shipped 21.7 million tons of grains and oilseeds in the crop year that ended July 31, 1980, surpassing the previous record of 20.5 million tons exported in 1972-73, the first year of the big sales to the Soviet Union and a worldwide surge in exports.

But in the two years previous to 1979-80, Canada was forced to cancel or defer some grain export contracts because of shipping bottlenecks. The Foreign Agriculture article says Canadian farmers lost a billion dollars in business in 1977-78 and 1978-79 because transportation difficulties forced delays in shipments overseas.

The primary trouble in Canada has been a shortage of cars to haul grains, but there have been some port difficulties also. The Canadian government has pledged, the Foreign Agriculture article states, to improve the grain handling and transportation system with a goal of increasing grain and oilseed exports by 50 percent in the next five years to a level of 30 million metric tons.

One thing that helped grain shipments in the last crop year was a decline in the general Canadian, and U.S. economy, which left more cars available for farm commodities rather than industrial products.

The Canadian government, the Wheat Board and Canadian provinces have been purchasing cars in recent years. In addition, the government and railroads have carried on a refurbishing program. On the other hand, old cars have been retired about as fast as new ones have been added. However, the new cars, aluminum and steel hoppers, can haul more than the old boxcars.

Cattle Futures Close Mixed

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 77 points lower to 32 higher on sales of 18,191 cars Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. February paced the decline with only January up.

Futures staged a recovery near midsession on local short covering but most months fell on lack of follow through. Futures and easier live markets brought selling while steady cash beef was supportive in the nearby contract. Some spreading was also noted in nearby contracts.

Deliveries total 104 thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 100 to 101 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were off 50 to up 50 cents with the best top $65 per hundredweight. Slaughter totaled 127,000 head. About 2,975 head are expected today at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed 80 to 125 lower paced by March on sales of 1,651 contracts. Most months ended at or near the day's lows.

Futures followed the lead of other meat pits and clipped early losses near midsession before slumping again. Prices fell on lack of support despite steady cash beef and weakness in grain futures. Locals were most active.

There have been 11 deliveries thus far. Cash feeders were off $5 to up $2 with the best top $91.25 per hundredweight at Oklahoma City. Receipts at the major terminals are expected to total 1,100 head today.

Hog futures closed 60 to 107 lower paced by December on sales of 9,259 lots.

Futures rallied for net gains on local short covering after midsession but fell to new day's lows on lack of follow through. Earlier, prices fell on sharply increased runs, weak live markets and lower grain futures. Uneven pork complex at noon made for choppy trade at times.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to off 2 at 62½ to 65 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were steady to off $1.25 with the best top $44 per hundredweight. Kill totaled 387,000 head. The major markets are expecting 21,700 head today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 142 to 172 lower paced by May on sales of 8,794 cars.

Local short covering near midsession lifted prices for net gains, but futures relapsed on lack of follow through. New day's lows were set in choppy trade with lower grain futures, heavy slaughter and weak live markets overshadowing the firmer tone to cash product at noon.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 2 at 45 to 50 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Prices Rising At Wholesale Level In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose 11.7 percent in 1980, only slightly less than the year before despite the recession, the government said today. And 1981 begins with energy prices once again accelerating at a double-digit pace.

The Labor Department also reported that the nation's unemployment rate dipped from 7.5 percent of the workforce in November to 7.4 percent last month. The number of jobless workers stood at 7.8 million at the end of 1980, 1.5 million more than in December 1979.

The department said that wholesale, or producer prices, rose another 0.6 percent in December. If that pace continued for 12 months, it would translate to a 7.8 percent annual rate.

But economists forecast sharp increases in the coming months for energy and food prices.

"The fact that energy prices have accelerated significantly in recent months, after several months of moderation, bears watching," said Janet Norwood, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"Although these prices are not now increasing at the levels registered late last year and early in 1980, the magnitude and duration of changes in energy prices in the coming months will be an important factor in the inflationary climate for 1981," she told the Joint Economic Committee of Congress.

Mrs. Norwood said the unemployment rate last month was "little changed" from November, however "some improvement in the economy occurred."

In December, prices for wholesale food, ready for sale to consumers, dipped 0.4 percent after rising 0.5 percent in November. This falloff is considered an aberration, however, because of continued heavy slaughtering of farm animals, and should be reversed soon, say economists.

The department's wholesale price report showed declines last month for pork, refined sugar, fresh fruits, processed poultry and roasted coffee. Beef and veal prices edged down as well, but not as much as in November.

Dairy and bakery products, frozen meat pies, fresh and dried vegetables, peanut butter, black pepper, processed fruits and vegetables, and eggs all rose in price.

Also advancing in price were apparel, household flatware and many health products. The price of passenger cars, suffering a severe sales slump, remained stable. But Detroit has since raised prices on many models.

The price of capital equipment, which is used to manufacture other goods, rose 1 percent, compared with 0.6 percent in November, the department added.

The 1.3 percent falloff in raw material prices was the first decline since April.

Meanwhile, gasoline prices rose 1.5 percent in December following a 1.7 percent jump the month before. Home heating oil prices climbed 1.9 percent after rising 0.9 percent in November, the department said.

Last year's 11.7 percent acceleration in wholesale prices, before seasonal adjustment, is a small improvement from 1979's 12.6 percent advance. The slight slowdown could be traced to energy prices, which rose 27.2 percent after soaring 62.7 percent in 1979, the Labor Department reported.

Another moderating influence through 1980 was prices for finished food, which rose 6.5 percent following a 7.6 percent climb the year before.

On the other hand, prices for finished wholesale goods other than food and energy rose 11 percent last year compared with 9.3 percent in 1979.

The department's Producer Price Index includes three categories: finished goods, ready for sale by retailers; intermediate items, which are semi-finished; and raw materials, which have yet to be processed. The direction of prices at the bottom two levels will eventually influence finished goods.

In 1980, intermediate goods prices moved up 12.6 percent, after increasing 16 percent the year before, the department said. Raw material prices climbed 13.3 percent, following a 17.3 percent jump in 1979.

In December, the price of intermediate goods accelerated by 1.3 percent, while crude goods prices declined by the same amount, the department reported.

Polar Air Shatters Records

.35 at Snyder, .16 at Post and .12 at Plainview.

Rainfall was generally lighter on the South Plains than it was farther south in Central Texas, where Abilene reported .98 and San Angelo .85.

Lubbock's high Thursday afternoon was 52 degrees and the low this morning was 32.

In the frozen Midwest, three men fell to their deaths in a series of accidents on a fog-shrouded bridge on the Ohio Turnpike and temperatures dropped to record lows today.

A thick fog hovering over an Ohio Turnpike bridge in Fremont, Ohio, led to the deaths of three men — Richard Hill, 36, Seaford, Del.; Earl T. Gregory, 37, Uniontown, Ohio; and Roy Rogers, 28, Mosherville, Mich.

Ohio Highway Patrol Sgt. Michael Porter said the series of accidents involved 11 vehicles late Thursday.

He said a tractor-trailer rig driven by Hill slammed into the rear of another truck at the bridge, throwing Hill out of the cab and over the bridge guard rail to his death on the ice-covered river 60 feet below.

Porter said Gregory and Rogers both died a few minutes apart when each man, stopped by accidents on the bridge, stepped over the guard rail and fell to his death on the ice.

Witnesses said the fog was so thick the victims apparently were not aware there was no ground on the other side of the guard rail.

Record low temperatures iced the eastern third of the nation.

The mecury dropped to 8 below today in Providence, R.I., breaking a 13-year record of minus 5. Subzero temperatures were recorded throughout Ohio. Findlay had a record 10 below, Youngstown 7 below, Toledo 11 below and Cleveland 5 below.

Pennsylvania also had its share of subzero readings, with Tobyanna checking in at minus 15, Philipsburg at 6 below and Bradford had a minus 4 reading.

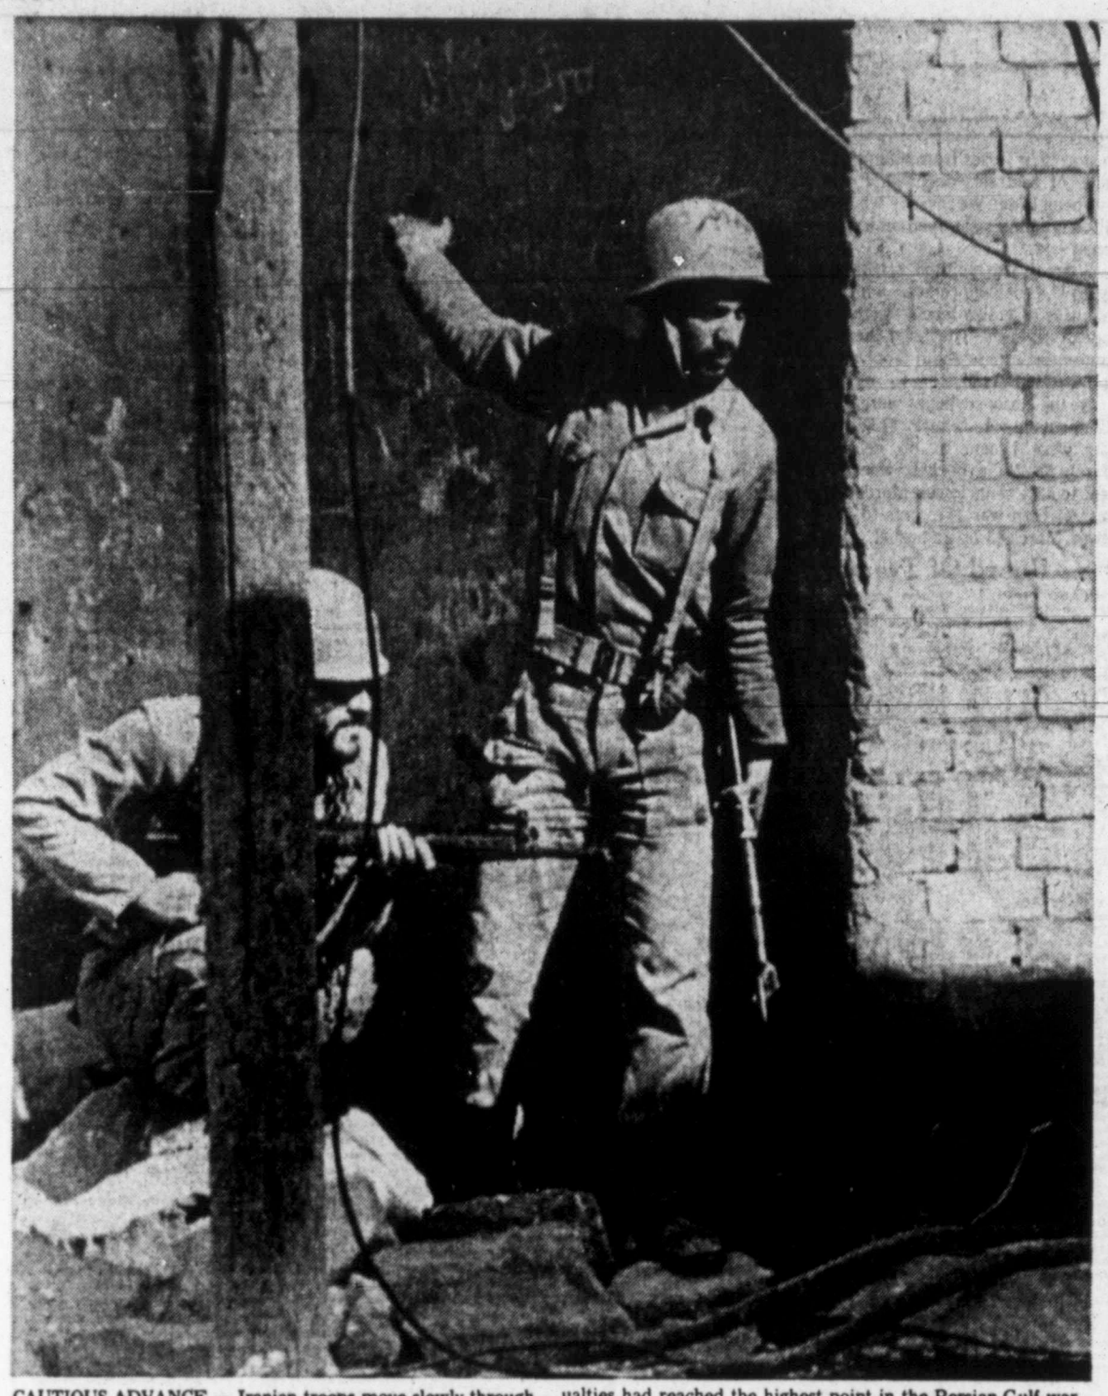
The temperature nosedived to 18 below zero in Watertown, N.Y., early today and the National Weather Service forecast similar readings for much of New England and the Northeast.

Subzero temperatures in New York City forced at least 107 elderly and poor residents, some without heat or hot water for weeks, into a heated shelter provided by authorities.

"We all sleep together in our clothes," said Deborah Harvey, who took her four children to the public shelter in search of a warm place to sleep.

"It's so cold. For us there was no Christmas or New Year's. The kids complain, but they know mommy can't help it."

A 53-year-old Boston man, Henry Humbrick, was found frozen to death Thursday after he apparently fell down his front steps.



CAUTIOUS ADVANCE — Iranian troops move slowly through the back alleys of Susangerd, in southwestern Iran, during a search for Iraqi snipers. Iran and Iraq reported today that casualties had reached the highest point in the Persian Gulf war, with thousands of dead and wounded on both sides. Iran is trying to retake lost territory. Casualty Reports Mount In Persian Gulf Battle

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran and Iraq claimed 1,529 troops killed in ground and air attacks on the bloodiest single day of combat reported in their 3½-month-old border war.

Iraqi casualty claims exceeded those of Iran for the first time since the Iranians announced Monday they had launched their first major counter-offensive of the war. No confirmation of any of the reports was available since Western reporters were barred from the battlefronts. But it was assumed that the casualty figures were considerably inflated.

Iraq said its ground forces, backed by waves of fighter-bombers and helicopter gunships, repulsed assault after assault by the Iranians Thursday at Gilan e-Gharb, in the mountainous northern end of the 300-mile battlefront, and at Sar-e Pol Zahab, Dezful and Susangerd, to the south in the oil province of Khuzistan.

Iraqi communiques broadcast by Baghdad Radio claimed a total of 1,062 Iranian troops killed and 87 tanks destroyed or captured in the battles. It was the biggest single-day claim since Iraqi troops invaded Iran Sept 22.

Iraq's admitted losses also attested to the magnitude of the fighting. Baghdad conceded it lost 71 troops and 36 tanks, also single-day records.

Iranian war communiques, carried by the official Pars news agency, claimed a total of 467 Iraqi troops killed and dozens of tanks destroyed. This raised to 1,767 the number of Iraqi deaths claimed by Iran in the counter-offensive.

Iraq's total count of Iranian dead for the same period was 1,736. Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan said Iran's losses so far this week exceeded its total casualties during the previous 15 weeks of the war.

Iran said the Iraqis "are being forced to retreat for kilometers on all the western fronts." But Iraq said it forces have lost none of the approximately 20,000 square miles of Iranian territory occupied since the war began.

The Iraqi communiques claimed an Iranian Phantom jet and three helicopter gunships were shot down at Ahvaz, capital of the oil province. They said Iraqi MiG jet fighters flew 12 air raids on Ahvaz and Susangerd.

Meanwhile, Iran announced it will not attend an Islamic summit conference scheduled for Jan. 24 in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, where Kuwait and the Saudis hoped to arrange a cease-fire in the Persian Gulf war.

Iran, which insists on an unconditional withdrawal of Iraqi troops before a cease-fire, said it would not attend the summit.

New Sheriff Requests $27,000 Hike In Department's Budget and resources available," Shaw added.

Around half of Keesee's proposed budget increase would go to hike salaries for some personnel in his department. He proposed to establish "a promotion ladder" that calls for seven captains' positions, two lieutenants and two sergeants.

County records indicated that only four captains' posts currently are authorized for the sheriff's office, and there are no authorizations for the other positions.

The proposed promotions would cost the county around $14,880 this year, according to County Auditor Dale Gallimore.

But Keesee said the promotion system is needed. "We're trying to establish right now a department that can expand for the next 20 years by just the addition of personnel," he explained.

The addition of the lieutenant and sergeant positions will be necessary to handle the chain of command as the department grows larger, Keesee said.

The sheriff also is seeking a $175 monthly raise for his personal secretary. That request would add about $2,000 to the county's budget this year.

Another request calls for the purchase of 55 badges for correctional officers and captains in the jail division. The estimated cost for that purchase is $1,100.

Keesee has asked commissioners to purchase new uniforms for the deputy staff, estimating the cost will run about $20,160 over the next five years.

However, county officials noted that Keesee failed to consider the turnover rate in personnel at the sheriff's office. They said the uniform costs could go as high as $42,525 over the five-year period, based on a 50 percent turnover rate.

In his letter, Keesee noted a new policy that will require deputies to regularly qualify in weapons use on a firing range. He is asking commissioners to purchase ammunition for deputies to use in practice training and qualifying. In addition, he has requested the purchase of replacement rounds of tear gas.

The estimated cost for the tear gas and ammunition is $5,000, according to the sheriff's letter.

Keesee's final request is likely to draw at least a few chuckles from members of the commissioners court. What the new sheriff is seeking is a chair big enough to hold his bulky frame.

The letter notes that the base for many of the weighty decisions in the sheriff's department "is one of width and breadth which heretofore has not been brought to bear on this office or its office furniture."

County officials estimate it will cost between $350 and $500 to purchase a chair large enough to adequately fill the sheriff's needs.

Keesee's budget requests will be considered by commissioners when they meet at 10 a.m. Monday.

Police May Use Old Cadillacs

PORTERVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — City policemen may soon be patrolling the streets in Cadillacs, and Mayor Ted Ensslin says it's all a matter of economy.

Ensslin and the City Council this week authorized Police Chief John Smith to hunt for two used cars to convert to police cruisers, and Ensslin said he told the chief he thinks they should be Cadillacs.

"It's an interesting concept and what I had in mind, and I was dead serious on it, was to purchase used Cadillacs," the mayor said recently.

The mayor says Cadillacs "have all of the components and features of your police specials and you can buy used Cads now for at least $4,000 less and convert them for about $1,000. So you're still maybe $3,000 plus ahead."

A police car now runs about $10,000, while a 4-year-old Cadillac can be purchased at wholesale prices for $5,000 to $7,000, the mayor said. He said the police cars, which last only about two years, quickly lose their resale value.

Haig Defends Actions While Aide To Nixon

and the covert activity aimed at overturning Chile's Marxist government "was quite limited."

And he defended the Christmas bombing of North Vietnam in 1972 as being "in the best interest of the United States (that) produced the intended result."

Haig also defended his advice to Nixon, on June 4, 1972 that the president could say "you can't recall" if he were asked about an earlier conversation with John Dean. Haig told the senators that "it is impossible to say with certainty exactly what we were discussing."

But Haig said he is certain that "I never suggested then or on any other occasion, that he should dissemble or pretend not to recall something."

The retired general also attempted to forestall questions about his role in Gerald Ford's pardon of Richard Nixon by saying "at no time did I ever suggest in any way an agreement or 'deal' that Mr. Nixon would resign in exchange for a pardon from Mr. Ford."

Democrats predicted that unless their questioning unearths clear misconduct by Haig himself, the Senate will easily confirm the 56-year-old retired four-star general.

But the committee's ranking Democrat, Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., said that while Haig is intelligent, competent and loyal, "He carries with him — whether justified or not — political baggage, or scar tissue if you will, from his service during a period in our history marked by gross abuses of presidential power," Pell said.

Pell added, however, that his decision whether to vote for confirmation will be based on Haig's "views on the all-important question of war and peace."

The committee's chairman, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., said the Democrats' questions about Haig have already been investigated extensively and must not delay his confirmation.

"As of now I personally have no information which would justify an adverse conclusion, or which suggests that this nomination should be delayed," Percy said.

He said "these are perilous times," that require Haig to be confirmed and on duty as secretary of state soon as President-elect Ronald Reagan is inaugurated Jan. 20.

Haig was Nixon's chief of staff for the 16 months before Nixon resigned. President Gerald Ford then named Haig supreme commander of NATO, a job he held for five years until entering private business in 1979.

Diplomats Seek Deal With Iran

now," he said in Washington. "They obviously have developed a wisdom about it which they provide to us and, I assume, to the Iranian side as well."

Christopher arrived in Algiers early Thursday. It was his third visit since the Algerians agreed to act as intermediaries in the negotiations to free the hostages, who were seized in Tehran on Nov. 4, 1979 and today were spending their 433rd day in captivity.

Carter, on a visit to his home in Plains, Ga., told reporters: "I think the proposals that have been exchanged through the Algerians are reasonable and a foundation for resolving the differences between us, but I can't predict success. I think that would be a mistake."

Before he left the White House for the trip to Plains, he said that "obviously, time is getting close but we will try to do our best" in the days left before the inauguration Jan. 20 of Ronald Reagan as president.

Reagan, who was at the State Department Thursday for a meeting with his Cabinet appointees, told reporters he felt confident any agreement Carter reached for the release of the hostages would be one he could carry out.

But the president-elect said if an agreement was not concluded before he took office, he would feel free to review the negotiations. The implication was that he would feel free to alter any of the offers to Iran.

"I don't think anyone should be asked to sign a blank check," said Reagan.

Meanwhile the Soviet press, accusing the United States of "blackmail" and "hysteria" over the hostage crisis with Iran, is portraying U.S. concern for the hostages as a smokescreen for possible armed intervention in Iran.

Officially, the Soviet Union upholds respect for diplomatic immunity and release of the Tehran hostages. But since the beginning of the crisis, Soviet commentaries have taken every opportunity to portray the United States as bullying Iran over the hostage issue and refusing Iranian proposals to solve the problem.

In recent weeks, as negotiations to free the hostages have gathered speed, the official Soviet press has continued to present Iran as an idealistic, revolutionary republic facing a barrage of threats from Washington.

The hostage negotiations, the Soviet news agency Tass said Thursday, "rest on the position of the United States, which refuses to return the Iranian assets frozen in American banks and the wealth plundered by the former shah."

Western diplomats say the hostage crisis, despite its potential dangers, helps Moscow in the short run by diverting attention from Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Soviet officials often counter criticism of the Red Army's actions in Afghanistan by pointing to America's own naval armada around Iran, calling it an example of U.S. "militarism" in the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean.

City Man Beaten, Robbed At Club

A Lubbock man was beaten and robbed by a gunman early this morning as he was leaving a club in the 200-block of 18th St.

Freddie Walter Johnson, 30, of 2223 Quirt Ave. told police a man with a handgun jumped in front of him and threatened to kill him if he did not hand over his money.

Johnson said when he refused, the man hit him on the head and knocked him to the ground. After kicking Johnson, the gunman made off with $45 from the victim's pocket.

Reports said the victim refused medical treatment at the scene and would not press charges.

In another criminal activity, three Lubbock men, ages 20, 17 and 16, were caught at a Lubbock lumber yard with 10 storm windows from the yard in the back of their van, police said.

Reports said police arrived at the Maxey Lumber Co. at 122 N. University Ave. to find the three men at the yard. The men jumped in a white Chevrolet van and began backing down the alley behind the store.

The men finally stopped when a policeman pulled his service revolver as he ran beside the van.

The 17-year-old man ran from the van, causing a policeman to fire a warning shot in the air. The 17-year-old was found in a near-by trailer park within minutes of the search, reports said.

All three men were arrested and taken to Lubbock County Jail. Police said they found 10 storm windows, identified by the store's manager, in the back of the van the men were driving.

A 31-year-old woman told police someone entered her 70th Street house between 8 a.m. and 10 p.m. Wednesday and took more than $5,700 in jewelry.

Reports said entry to the house was gained by prying open the storm door.

A Brady resident told Lubbock police Thursday that $550 worth of goods were stolen from his truck at 6025 Ave. A between 9 p.m. Wednesday and 7:45 a.m. Thursday.

Reports show that three CB radios, an 8-track tape player, tools and a hydraulic jack were taken from Domingo R. Cortez' truck. Three windows were broken on the vehicle with damages estimated at $450.

A marble grave cover was stolen from the City of Lubbock Cemetery between 4 p.m. Jan. 1 and noon Thursday, according to police reports.

The value was estimated at $475.

Four Indicted For Killing Amarillo Police Officer

AMARILLO (AP) — A Potter County grand jury took only an hour to return capital murder indictments against four men charged with the Christmas night shooting death of an Amarillo police officer.

Ernesto Gutierrez, 17, his brothers Victor, 23, and Guadelupe, 19, and Urbano J. Flores, 18, all of Dumas, were held without bond in the Potter County jail Thursday.

Police say patrolman Berry McGuire, 26, was shot to death with his own .357 Magnum service revolver during a scuffle with four men he had stopped on a routine traffic violation.

Witnesses told police McGuire was overpowered by three of the men as he tried to arrest the driver of the car. McGuire was beaten severely and shot twice in the abdomen and once in the head, according to an autopsy report.

When McGuire was found dead by an officer responding to his call for assistance, police launched a massive manhunt for the suspects.

Two men were arrested shortly after the shooting when their car apparently ran out of gas just outside of Amarillo. One man was wearing McGuire's police handcuffs, police said.

Two other men were arrested the next day, one as he walked along a railroad track in Amarillo, the other at his mother's home in Dumas.

Police said officers found what they believe was McGuire's service revolver underneath the floor of one man's home.

Best-Selling Author Dead

MONTREUX, Switzerland (AP) — A. J. Cronin, the Scottish-born author of "The Citadel" and "The Keys of the Kingdom," best-selling novels about a doctor and a priest, is dead at the age of 84.

Cronin — once likened by a British critic to Charles Dickens — died at a nursing home near here Tuesday and was quietly buried after funeral services today at La-Tour-de-Peiltz, another Lake Geneva town. Death was attributed to "acute bronchitis," according to a family source.

Survivors include his wife, the former Agnes Mary Gibson, who is in a nursing home in Canada, and three sons.

Cronin was a surgeon but turned from a profitable medical practice after the success of his first novel, "Hatter's Castle," in 1931 to devote himself full-time to writing.

His novels, in a direct, simple style, reflected both his medical training and his religious beliefs as a Roman Catholic.

In addition to "The Citadel" and "The Keys Of The Kingdom," his best-known novels were "The Green Years," "Shannon's Way," and "Pocketful Of Rye."

Archibald Joseph Cronin was born July 19, 1896, in Cardoss (Dumbarton) and was educated at Glasgow University.

Apartment Complex Damaged In Blaze

A fire that apparently started from an electrical short caused more than $1,000 damage to a Lubbock apartment complex late Thursday night.

Firefighters responded to the alarm at Twin Oak Apartments at 5817 22nd St. at 9:49 p.m. with 17 men and four units.

No injuries were reported, but a part of the complex sustained smoke damage in the fire, reports said.

SPACE PROGRAM COST

MATTHEW BEARD JR.
'Stymie' Dies

Early Comedy Star Dies From Stroke

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Matthew Beard Jr., who played Stymie on the "Our Gang" comedy films from 1930-35, died at the age of 56 after suffering a stroke.

Beard, whose trademark in the series was a derby hat, was stricken at his apartment and lay unconscious on the floor for several days before he was found Friday and taken to the hospital, according to his agent, Helen Barkan.

He died Thursday in County-USC Medical Center.

When he was 5, Beard made the first of his 36 "Our Gang" comedies, in which he would steal a scene by rolling his eyes or wiggling his ears.

Later, misfortunes befell Beard, who only recently had returned to acting. After he left the "Our Gang" series to play in such movies as "Captain Blood," "Jezebel" and "Kentucky," he started using drugs.

In 1957, he was sentenced to 20 years for sale and possession of heroin. He served 6½ years at prisons in Fort Worth and Sandstone, Minn.

But Beard went back on drugs after returning to Los Angeles. After seven years with Synanon, the drug rehabilitation organization, he was cured of his addiction.

He recently had appeared in such television shows as "Sanford and Son," "Maude," "Backstairs at the White House" and "Palmerston."

Weather On Mountain Called Awesome

MOUNT WASHINGTON, N.H. (UPI) — In his 20 years atop New England's highest peak Guy Gosselin has seen temperatures near 50 below zero, howling winds and breathtaking views.

"The weather, in a word, can be awesome," he said from his perch atop Mount Washington.

In 1934 the highest wind gust ever recorded, 231 mph, occurred on the summit of the 6,288-foot mountain. Windchill temperatures of near 100 degrees below zero are common.

Gosselin and his team of weather experts at the Mount Washington Observatory live on the mountain for a week at a time in the winter. Harsh winter storms that block the team's snowcat from inching its way up the mountain may extend

The only person to work for 20-uninterrupted years for the observatory, Gosselin admitted the job places a strain on his family.

Despite the wintertime isolation, the 48-year-old Gosselin said he has never been bored. That is the attraction of the job — there's always something interesting to do. And you can't beat the view.

P&Z Board Rejects Game Room Bid

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

After almost two dozen audience members voiced opposition to a zoning change request which would have allowed a game room at the old Broadway Drug building, the Planning and Zoning Commission voted 7-1 Thursday evening to deny the change requested by Aladdin's Castle Inc.

The issue involving the former drugstore captured the most attention during the commission's meeting, during which the panel members also approved a zoning change to allow construction of a multi-story condominium for elderly residents and designated Chatman Hospital as a Historic Landmark.

Harold P. Brown Jr., representing the game room establishment which operates about 250 such entertainment centers across the country, presented the commission with 15 letters from various police departments testifying to the company's reputation as a well-supervised family oriented establishment.

But Larry Gautreaux, proprietor of La Crepe Suzette restaurant, 2420 Broadway, three doors down from the Broadway Drug building, argued that a game room "will bring a lot of problems" to the area.

"We have a very nice clientele at our establishment," the restaurant owner said, adding that a game room would attract trouble-makers to area alleys and parking lots.

Burl Pigg Jr. of University Jewelry was even more adamantly opposed to the game room proposal. He said such an establishment would entice youths to "sit on cars and drink beer" in the area, which he said would in turn keep customers away from other businesses in the area.

Steven Berger, attorney for Aladdin's Castle Inc., emphasized that the company does not permit consumption of or allow sales of alcholic beverages, soft drinks or food within its establishment.

But nearby merchants, including Custom Flowers owner Julie Ray, who said she represented four other businesses which opposed the game room, argued

Advisory Panel Raps Council

The City Council was blasted Thursday by members of the Community Development Advisory Committee for ignoring that committee's recommendations on how $3.48 million in federal funds should be spent.

But the council only slightly altered its tentative decision of two weeks ago following the discussion.

The council primarily was criticized for ignoring the CDAC recommendation that no funds be included for an overpass at East 34th Street and Quirt Avenue and the widening of East 19th Street between Quirt Avenue and Loop 289.

CDAC chairman Shelton Berry said the committee felt Community Development funds should not be used for preliminary planning for the two street projects when there is no assured source of funding to complete the projects.

Berry said the council had "completely disregarded the long work and hard study the committee put into it (the recommendation). There was a lot of time put in which was of frankly no use. I hate going to meetings of no purpose."

CDAC member George Nelson, who also is chairman of the Urban Renewal Board of Directors, echoed Berry's thoughts, adding the street projects would be better included in a bond issue voted on by the electorate.

He said committee members do not oppose the two east Lubbock projects, but opposed tying up $530,000 for projects which are so uncertain. By pulling CD money away from other projects, Nelson said the council's decision would "directly and adversely affect the health and welfare of low and moderate income citizens who would benefit from the other projects."

Nelson added that many of the other CD-funded projects have no other funding source, while bond funds could be used for the street projects. And he criticized the council for dropping funding recommended by the CDAC for Neighborhood House, for security at Hub Homes and Green Fair Manor and reducing recommended funding for urban renewal activities.

"CDAC members feel like pawns performing a useless act made necessary by the rules of HUD (U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development)," he said. "Our advice is unwanted and rather

Ranching Heritage Association Picks Executive Vice President

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Alvin G. Davis of Brownfield, who has enthusiastically supported heritage appreciation for years while helping develop the South Plains, Thursday was named executive vice president and general manager of the Ranching Heritage Association.

He assumes duties Feb. 2 with offices in the David M. DeVitt and Mallet Ranch Building at the Ranching Heritage Center.

The announcement was made at a meeting of the association's executive committee at the RHC.

Directions his life has taken over the years, Davis said, now seem "always another step along the cowboy heritage trail" which brought him to his new position.

He has worn many hats, all western, since growing up on a Garza County farm just outside the Catclaw Pasture of the John B. Slaughter U Lazy S Ranch.

After obtaining a degree in agriculture from Texas Tech, he wore the hat of a banker with farm and ranch advisory duties in Brownfield and New Mexico for 14 years.

And for two decades, his western wear stores in Lamesa, Levelland and Brownfield kept him close to the cowboy scene, due in large part to an awards segment aiding rodeo and Appaloosa horse shows he was promoting on the side.

A feud with trophy companies over horse confirmation led to his latest avocation, bronze sculpture — first for award plaques and then for western art itself.

On the civic scene, he served with the South Plains Association of Governments and is a member of the Brownfield City Council. He also works with all Brownfield development boards and the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Unlike most cowboy fans, he recalls to the day the beginning of his fascina-

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Returning anything to a department store for adjustment is one of my favorite things. It ranks right there under getting three estimates on a crushed car door.

It isn't that the salespeople give you a bad time, it's just time-consuming.

On Christmas when I opened a box containing a blouse, a cardigan and slacks, I was flattered that my husband saw me as a 5-10, 36-pound girl.

"The pants have Cheryl Tiegs right on the pocket," he said proudly.

I weighed more than Cheryl Tiegs at my birth.

"Maybe you could exchange them for a designer with a longer name and a bigger pocket," he said.

The day after Christmas I tried on the blouse. The sleeves held my arms to my side like a vise. The sweater would never button in this life.

Two days after Christmas, the department store set up special desks to handle the returns more efficiently. I took a second look at my outfit.

"How are you at handling stress, Cheryl?" I said in the closet to no one in particular. If I did without breakfast, didn't drink a glass of water in 36 hours, left the top gripper open, secured the zipper with a pin to keep it from easing on down, rolled up the legs and wore an overblouse, I could get by with it. I hung them in the closet and watched TV.

Four days after Christmas, my husband asked if I had returned my outfit. I took another look at the blouse. If I did arm circle exercises every morning for the next Vear, rolled up the sleeves, didn't button the two bottom buttons and didn't use my hands or shoulders to open doors, answer phones or drink coffee, I could wear it under a coat. I hung it up in the closet.

A few days ago, I ran across the box holding the Christmas sweater. I thought about returning it when I took another look at it. What the heck, if I hung it loosely over my shoulders and looped the arms under my chin and looked breathless like I'd just come off the courts, it would fit like a glove. I took it out of the box, threw away the tags and sales slips and viewed my coordinated sports outfit that Barbie would have to wear a truss to get into.

Foolish? Maybe. On the other hand, there isn't a day goes by that I'll not look at that trio and quote a wise man who once said, "Some men see things as they are and say why. I dream of things that never were and say why not?"

RESPONSE TO DIVORCE

Age variation affects the way children respond to divorce and the kind of help they need from parents during the divorce process, says Diane Welch, a family life education specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A &M System.

APPEAL OF WARMTH — The mood created here is warmth and dignity, stemming from the use of wood and brass, bamboo print wallpaper, wedgewood blue accent wall and cobblestone patterned no-wax floor.

Friendships Provide Strong Buffer To Man's Loneliness

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Develop friendship to enhance feelings of warmth, love, trust and affection between two people, says Dorthy Taylor, a family life education specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M System.

Friendship is a unique form of human bonding that has no legal restrictions, no expected social roles and no professional or career guidelines, she explains.

"A friendly relationship grows out of free choice rather than out of necessity.

"It also allows people to relate to others at a time they are most free of conflicts; when the relationship is important enough to 'make' time for," she points out.

"A friend is not necessarily an extension of yourself, your interests or your work.

"Friendships allow different races, sexual preferences religions or cultural backgrounds to come together on mutual terms because of trust," Miss Taylor says.

Friendships have different degrees of commitment, from casual to close friendships.

When buidling friendly relations, most people look for the same qualities, such as someone who keeps confidences, loyalty, warmth, affection, supportiveness, frankness, a sense of humor, willingness to spend time and easy to talk with.

Age, physical attractiveness, personal accomplishments, similar income or job appear less important to friends than personal traits, the specialist continues.

Friendshops varies over the stages of the life cycle. Youpg children enjoy other family members, teenagers like more friends and less family and older adults enjoy immediate family, kin and long time friends.

A recent half-page article in The New York Times described the Cavendish Bridge Club in New York as the club with the most world-class players as members. One of them produced this pretty defensive play in a recent rubber bridge game.

South was rather aggressive. Even though it was known from the auction that North had to have fair values outside the heart suit, the misfit nature of the hands suggested that any game would be an ambitious undertaking.

West led a low spade, and the jack was covered by the queen and ace. A club to the ace was followed by the queen of hearts from dummy. East covered and declarer ruffed. A club ruff put declarer back on the table to lead the jack of hearts, again covered by East and ruffed in the closed hand.

Declarer crossed back to dummy with a club ruff, cashed the king of spades and then the ten of hearts, discarding a spade from hand. The scene was set. Declarer was down to three trumps and two clubs, and needed to score only the ten of diamonds to make the contract.

Declarer led a low spade from dummy. If East ruffs low or discards, the contract will sail home as declarer ruffs with the ten. But East had stayed awake. He ruffed with the jack of trumps!

Double-dummy, declarer can still make the hand. He must sluff a club when East ruffs, then discard again when East leads the nine of hearts. Now he scores three trump tricks by playing West for a doubleton queen of trumps. But declarer decided that East had to have the queen of trumps for his no trump overcall, so he overruffed with the king and exited with a club. East ruffed and lead a heart, and struggle as he might, declarer had to lose two of the last three tricks for down one.

Federal Warranty Covers Emissions, Design Defects In New Cars

WASHINGTON (Special) — What happens if your car suddenly develops a PCV valve problem? You have to spend a bundle getting it fixed, right? Not necessarily, says the U.S. Environmental Protecton Agency. According to federal law, if your car meets three specific conditions, then the manufacturer of your automobile must repair or replace the defective part free of charge.

A new pamphlet released by EPA lets you know what conditions you must meet and how to go about getting service under the Federal Emissions Design and Defect Warranty. For your free copy of What You Should Know About Your Auto Emissions Warranty, just send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 507J, Pueblo, Colorado, 81009.

What are the conditions?

•First, your car must be less than five years old and have less than 50,000 miles on it;

•Second, the part that's defective must be an original engine part that failed because of a defect in materials or workmanship; and •Third, the part failure must cause your car to exceed federal emissions standards.

If your car has a PCV valve problem that affects emissions, and if your car qualifies under the three conditions, the problem should be repaired or the part should be replaced free of charge. It doesn't matter whether you bought your car new or used, or if you bought it from a dealer or just the neighbor down the street. So long as your vehicle hasn't exceeded the five years or the 50,000 miles, this warranty applies.

The warranty covers all parts in your car that control emissions, such as the catalytic converter, the EGR valve, and electronic spark controls. In addition, any parts that have an effect on emissions, such as the carburetor, fuel injection system, and the ignition system are also covered. The warranty also covers hoses, gaskets, brackets and clamps used in these parts. If you find a defective part that could be covered under the warranty, make your claim to the authorized warranty representative listed in your owner's manual or warranty booklet. If you can't get them to honor the warranty, ask for a complete reason in writing, and find out to whom you should appeal the denial.

Remember, though, that performance of scheduled maintenance is your responsibility. If the part fails because your car is not being properly maintained, the manufacturer may not be required to repair or replace the failed part.

When you order a copy of What You Should Know About Your Auto Emissions Warranty, you'll also receive a free copy of the Consumer Information Catalog. Published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration, the Catalog lists over 200 selected federal consumer publications.

DEAR ABBY:

Gratitude Expressed On 25th Anniversary

DEAR READERS: Today marks the 25th anniversary of this column, and I am filled with gratitude to:

My twin, Eppie, who only months before I began writing landed the job of writing the Ann Landers column and gave the inspiration to strike out on my own.

Mort Phillips, my devoted husband, who has spoiled me for 41 years and has given me more unconditional love, encouragement, confidence and sound advice than I ever dreamed possible.

Stanleigh Arnold, the features editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, who agreed to see this unknown, inexperienced Hillsborough housewife when she impulsively telephoned him to say, "I can write a much better advice column than the one you've been running."

Robert W. Lucas, the then-managing editor of the Denver Post, who offered to be my special consultant. (He's now retired, but he's still my special consultant.)

The late Ted Bernstein of The New York Times, who, out of friendship, served as my supreme court on word usage.

Katie Beal (Abby's Irish Rose), who has been not only my loyal secretary but my cherished friend for 25 years. Close on her heels came Marion Lake Tetley, Thra Gusfield, then Sylvia Singer — all still part of my team.

I am profoundly indebted to the hundreds of editors who bought the Dear Abby column early and made it successful. And to you, my readers, I am extremely grateful for providing me daily with letters so human, so poignant and so outrageously funny that at times the column practically writes itself.

Please don't ask me when I plan to retire. I have no such plans. I intend to continue writing this column just as long as you and the Good Lord let me.

LOVE, ABBY

P.S. Has my styled changed much in 25 years? You be the judge. The following is a reprint, in part, of the very first "Dear Abby" column, as it appeared in the San Francisco Chronicle Jan. 9, 1956.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I have never written to the paper for advise before, but need help desperately and cannot talk to my family or friends about my problem. I am a private-secretary to a well-know executive in the bay area. I have been employed by him for five years. You may think this sounds cheap, but we are deeply in love. His wife speaks to him only when she wants money, and he has no respect or affection for her. He has told me repeatedly that I am the woman he loves, but we can't consider marriage because it would ruin him financially and socially. In addition to an excellent salary, he has given me an automobile, a fur coat and he pays my rent. When he takes business trips, I always go along. I am not getting any younger, yet I feel one day he will make me his wife. What do you think?

CONFIDENT

DEAR CONFIDENT: I think your boss is a super salesman. He certainly did a terrific selling job when he convinced an intelligent girl like you to give up a decent, respectable life of her own to be available when he whistles. Of course he won't marry you. Why should he? He is getting the whole show for the price of the amusement tax.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am sweet 16 and truly never been kissed. I have plenty of dates and the boys seem to enjoy my company, but when it comes time to say good night, all they do is just say "good night." Please tell me how I can become irresistible.

HOPEFUL ANN

DEAR ANN: If you become "irresistible" at 16, you'll need police protection by the time you reach 20. If you are longing for a good-night kiss, the likes of which would melt a glacier, it's too early. However, if you want the innocent, customary good-night kiss, just hold your little cheek up, close your eyes, and boom! You're irresistible.

Three Girls Stay In Seclusion

BUCKEYE, La. (AP) — Three white girls ousted from all-white Buckeye High School — and still not registered at the integrated school they were ordered to attend — remained in seclusion this morning as the fight over mandatory busing continued to simmer.

Parents, guardians, school officials and others involved in the case this morning brushed aside questions about the girls, who stayed out of school for a second day.

The three are at the center of a dispute between a federal judge and state judge that began with a federal busing order and now extends to child custody and state rights.

The girls were dropped from Buckeye High's rolls Thursday after they failed to attend classes. A day before, a federal judge began contempt of court proceedings against their parents, guardians, a state judge and others because of the girls' enrollment in defiance of his school desegregation order.

"As a principal, I am dropping the girls from classes. As a citizen, I don't like it," Buckeye Principal Charles Waite said. "Federal judges are running our school, and I'm sick and tired of it."

The latest twist in the case came from the blacks who filed the original desegregation suit 15 years ago and now plan to intervene, their attorney said.

Lawyer Louis Berry said Thursday he would ask a federal judge to include his clients as plaintiffs in any action against people trying to find loopholes in the sweeping desegregation order for Rapides Parish public schools.

His clients should share in any fines collected in a civil suit, he argued.

U.S. District Judge Nauman Scott has threatened to fine anyone who interferes with his busing plan and enjoined all state officials from enforcing a state judge's order that the girls attend Buckeye.

And he has scheduled a hearing for Jan. 15 for at least a half-dozen people to show why they should not be found in contempt for defying his order.

State District Judge Richard Lee faces $1,000-a-day fines, and the girls' parents and guardians, the Buckeye principal, the Rapides Parish superintendent of schools and a constable who escorted the girls to school all face $500-a-day fines.

The girls, Michelle Laborde, 13, Linda McNeal, 13, and Ramona Carbo, 12, attended Buckeye for three days this week, but did not appear Thursday. No one would say where they were.

In August, Scott extended the desegregation of the 52 Rapides Parish public schools by ordering more extensive busing. Under that plan, the girls would attend a 54 percent black school 15 miles away in Alexandria. To prevent that, their parents transferred custody of the girls to friends who live in the Buckeye attendance zone.

Prosecutor States FBI Methods Did Not Entrap Abscam Victims

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal prosecutor said this morning in closing arguments in Rep. Raymond Lederer's bribery-conspiracy trial that the FBI's Abscam operation was "a trick" but not "entrapment," as defense attorneys contend.

Prosecutor Thomas Puccio likened the covert inquiry to a mugger stealing an elderly woman's purse, only to find the "victim" to be a decoy police officer. "A trick? Yes," he said. "Entrapment? I submit to you, no."

Puccio gave his final argument in the week-long trial after the defense rested without calling Lederer to the stand.

Defense laywers said Thursday that testimony by two Justice Department lawyers about an Abscam con man "putting words in people's mouths" and a department memo revealed at Lederer's trial could jeopardize other Abscam prosecutions.

"Telling someone to say something, then prosecuting him for saying it," was a tactic used by undercover operative Mel Weinberg, according to Robert J. Weir, assistant attorney in charge of the federal Organized Crime Strike Force in New Jersey.

Lederer's lawyer James J. Binns put the government attorneys on the stand Thursday in an effort to build his case that the congressman was entrapped by Abscam operatives using similar tactics.

Neither the testimony nor the memo directly pertain to Lederer, whose trial was winding up today.

Binns subpoenaed the two after seeing the interdepartmental memo outlining the lawyers' criticisms of Weinberg, a convicted swindler who set up meetings between potential bribe-takers and fictitious Arab sheiks or their representatives.

The memo has been sealed by the Lederer trial judge, but The Associated Press obtained a copy.

The Lederer jury was expected to begin deliberating the bribery and conspiracy charges today against the Philadelphia Democrat, the only congressman indicted in the Abscam operation to win reelection. He is accused of taking $50,000 in exchange for promising to help two Arab sheiks, portrayed by FBI agents, with immigration matters.

Weir and Edward Plaza, chief assistant U.S. Attorney in New Jersey, testified Thursday they thought Weinberg had put "words in people's mouths" at his meeting June 28, 1979 with undercover FBI agents and Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J, who also has been indicted in the Abscam inquiry.

The two lawyers said they aired their criticisms at an Abscam strategy meeting two months later.

Official Claims Plans To Move Refugees To Texas Tentative

MARSHALL (UPI) — A leader in the Cuban resettlement program today said plans to move a large group of refugees into East Texas are tentative and no immediate transfer was planned.

News that a group of Cuban refugees from Fort Chaffee, Ark., estimated as high as 2,000, would be settling in the communities of Longview, Marshall, Lone Star, Daingerfield and Mount Pleasant brought adverse reactions from citizens and municipal officials who said they were confused and uninformed.

"I wish you could tell me something about it," Morris County sheriff Joe Skipper said Thursday night.

"I had a visit from a man in the Justice Department (community relations division) and he said 150 Cubans were to be moved into the Marshall area sometime pretty soon.

"He told me they had jobs lined up with subcontractors at Lone Star Steel (in nearby Lone Star). We haven't been able to confirm that, and I don't believe it. I don't think there are 150 jobs available there. If they got jobs for them, we can't find anyone who knows about it."

City and county officials are scheduled to meet Monday with representatives of the Justice Department and World Relief Agency of Wheaton, Ill., one of the organizations the federal government chose to help with the relocation of the refugees, to discuss bringing Cubans to the area.

The agency is a branch of the Southern Baptist Convention.

World Relief Agency spokesman Dick Burrow said current plans call only for determining how receptive East Texas will be for the Cubans.

"I don't know where this guy (the Justice Department spokesman who talked with Skipper) got his information but I've had a lot of calls now and the answer is yes, there is some thought and planning in this regard," Burrow said. "We are putting a few people down there to investigate the potential of it. We're having a meeting on Monday with Marshall, Texas, leaders of the community to discuss it and we'll go on from there.

"There is no decision on the quantity — 2,000 or anything like that. In the meantime there are refugees being screened as possible refugees that would be available for such a program but they are still in the camps." 3Estimates of how many Cubans will be moved from the Fort Chaffee relocation center in Arkansas vary between 150 and 2,000.

No Records Of Probe By Kelly Available

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Rep. Richard Kelly, under cross-examination at his Abscam trial, testified today he intentionally kept no records of the investigation he was conducting when he took a $25,000 bribe.

Kelly, on the witness stand for the fourth day, again maintained he was investigating the "suspicious characters" he had met through his former district aide when he went to a Washington townhouse last year and pocketed the money.

Roger Adelman, the government lawyer, asked Kelly why he kept no records of his investigation.

Kelly replied he had made a decision "not to start playing cops and robbers."

"I had no intention at any time ... to ever try to gather evidence to prosecute a case." Instead, Kelly said, he was trying to find out who the suspicious characters really were and why they had approached him.

As part of his own investigation, Kelly said he was pushed into taking the money so he would not arouse the suspicions of the men with whom he was dealing. But he maintained he had no intention of doing anything wrong.

Meanwhile, the federal judge presiding over the trial privately told lawyers the government's conduct in the case "has an odor to it that is absolutely repulsive."

U.S. District Judge William Bryant made the comment this week during a routine conference with defense and government lawyers in his courtroom.

A transcipt of the exchange was obtained by United Press International.

Kelly, Eugene Ciuzio of Longwood, Fla., and Stanley Weisz of Smithtown, N.Y., are charged with conspiring to take a $250,000 bribe in exchange for Kelly's promise to sponsor private immigration legislation.

Kelly was indicted in an operation in which undercover FBI agents posing as representatives of fictitious Arab sheiks offered bribes to politicians in exchange for special favors. To date, four congressmen have been convicted.

The tactics have drawn widespread criticism.

In November, a federal judge set aside the Abscam convictions of two Philadelphia councilmen because of government misconduct. Similar requests are pending in other cases.

During the exchange Tuesday, Weisz's attorney, Michael Dennis, told Bryant a key part of his case will include questioning FBI agents and Melvin Weinberg, a convicted felon-turned-informant.

Dennis said he would "show the nature of the corruption that pervaded this entire investigation, including the Kelly case, by Weinberg and the FBI knowingly."

Flu Outbreak Reported In Epidemic Proportions

By United Press International

New York City officials say the flu epidemic that may have killed hundreds of people appears to be easing, but health officials in Texas and Tennessee warn outbreaks in their regions may intensify — especially with school back in session.

The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta has said this winter's outbreak of flu is reaching epidemic levels in some areas of the country, killing more people than expected for the fourth straight week.

The CDC said its preliminary data show New York was the only state now with an acutal state wide flu epidemic, but the problem is growing nationwide, based on a survey of 121 major U.S. cities.

A fuller CDC report was expected today on this season's flu attack, mainly caused by the A-Bangkok strain.

In New York, Dr. Steven Phillips said deaths from flu-related pneumonia appear to be dropping in the city. The city Health Department does not keep track of flu-related deaths, he said, but in general it presumes that sudden rises in the number of pneumonia fatalities can be attributed to the flu.

In the week ending Jan. 2, 80 people died from pneumonia in New York, he said, about 20 more than the normal number of pneumonia fatalities for the week in previous years.

In mid-December, the "excess deaths" figures were in the range of 50 a week, he said.

"It looks to me like it's just about to end," Phillips said.

The department has no way of knowing how many city residents the flu has killed, but Phillips said, "As a guess, we're talking about hundreds as opposed to thousands."

Most of the victims were old or in poor health, he said.

In El Paso, Dr. Bernard Rosenblum, director of the City-County Health Unit, said flu is expected to filter through both of the county's school districts in the next few weeks now that classes have resumed from winter break.

Rosenblum said about 10 percent absenteeism has been common among teachers, industry and government workers in recent days from what he suspects is a variant of the A-Bangkok virus, which already has infected about 20,000 people in the area. He declared a flu epidemic in the county of 415,000 residents Tuesday.

Rosenblum said four county residents, all in their 80s, apparently have died of pneumonia brought on by the flu.

In Tennessee, state health officials said 2,400 cases of flu were reported statewide last week, and said the normal figure this early in the flu season is 1,300 cases.

Officials warned the number of cases might increase dramatically next week as flu spreads among school children, in their second week of classes after the holidays.

Former Headmistress' Moral Standards Praised

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Colleagues and former students of Jean Harris testified at her murder trial that the former headmistress of a posh Virginia girls school was admired but under great stress in the days before the slaying of Scarsdale Diet doctor Herman Tarnower.

Other character witnesses Thursday described Mrs. Harris as "the most highly regarded woman I've ever known," and a woman of "high ideals, high moral standards, integrity and ingenuity."

One witness revealed to a shocked court that her son was a hostage in Iran.

The prosecution alleges Mrs. Harris, 57, murdered her millionaire lover of 14 years at his Purchase, N.Y., estate in a jealous rage over Tarnower's affair with another woman.

The defense contends Tarnower was shot March 10 trying to wrest the gun from Mrs. Harris, who wanted to kill herself. Her lawyer has called a host of witnesses to testify about what could have driven her to the brink of suicide.

Dana Schmidt, a former Madeira School student, testified Thursday that Mrs. Harris was under fire from many of the 330 students over the March 6 expulsion of four girls caught with drug paraphernalia.

Mrs. Harris was openly criticized at a meeting March 7 and "was obviously flustered," Miss Schmidt said.

The defense hopes to prove to jurors that the events at Madeira culminated in a decision to commit suicide and that Mrs. Harris drove to Tarnower's home to "say goodbye to the human being who meant the most to her."

Lung Cancer Cases Continue To Rise

ATLANTA (AP) — Though gains have been made in treating many types of cancer, the most common form of the disease remains a deadly killer because lung cancer is hard to spot in its early stages, says an American Cancer Society official.

"We are losing ground to lung cancer," Arthur I. Holleb, senior vice president of medical affairs, said Thursday.

Holleb, here for the society's National Volunteer Meeting for Education, said his organization is forecasting that 122,000 cases of lung cancer will be diagnosed this year and that 105,000 people will die from the disease.

Both those figures are the highest for any type of cancer. Last year's figures were not available.

Cancer researchers have made "tremendous progress" in combating several less-common cancers, increasing survival rates tremendously in the past 10 to 15 years, Holleb said. Even the survival rate of women with breast cancer — the top cancer killer in women — is being enhanced by mammography, he said.

However, lung cancer has remained resistant to improved cures because early detection remains difficult, he said.

In addition, cigarette smoking has been linked to the disease, but smoking is increasing among young people influenced by advertisements showing women "in low-cut dresses" and "macho" men, Holleb said.

One company has earmarked $150 million to market a single brand of cigarettes this year, and "that is the budget of the American Cancer Society," he said. The cigarette industry will pump $1 billion, about as much as the entire budget of the National Cancer Institute, into advertising, Holleb said.

Insulin Pumps Replace Injections For Disease

TORONTO (UPI) — Tests show that portable insulin pumps provide better control of diabetes than the usual daily injections and doctors say the experimental devices may delay the development of serious complications.

The pump, worn on the belt or carried in a purse, serves as a rudimentary artificial pancreas, continuously supplying the hormone needed by the body to control metabolic operations that process sugar, proteins and fats in food.

In diabetes, the pancreas fails to produce the necessary insulin. The new mini-pumps feed the insulin through a tube leading to a vein or through a needle under the skin.

Scientists developing the pumps reported the latest test results Thursday at a closing session of the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dr. Philip Felig of the Yale University School of Medicine said studies of 17 patients who have used the skin infusion pumps for up to 19 months showed that blood sugar and some other chemical levels were continuously close to normal.

The pumps are programmed to feed a steady amount of insulin into the body around the clock and the patient is directed to turn a dial to increase insulin infusion during meals when more is needed.

"What we've been able to do is restore the blood sugar and other aspects of the body's metabolism and chemistry to normal in a way that has not been achievable with the conventional administration of insulin," he said.

Council Members Criticized On Use Of CD Funds

consistently ignored."

Nelson urged the council to call a bond election on the street projects "and leave the CD funds for people-oriented projects where they belong."

However, T.J. Patterson encouraged the council to include funds for engineering work on the 34th and Quirt overpass, expected to cost about $9 million to construct.

Patterson said the project has been on the back burner since 1970. "We must start somewhere," he said, adding that the overpass would positively contribute to the economic redevelopment of East Lubbock.

The council split 3-2 in favor of including funds for the street projects.

Councilwoman Joan Baker suggested deleting the street projects from CD funding and using the funds for Neighborhood House, Urban Renewal and rehabilitaton of sheltered workshop facilities for Lubbock Mental Health-Mental Retardation Services.

Mrs. Baker said she does not oppose the street projects, but agrees with CDAC members that they should be included in a bond election. Councilman Jack Brown gave the only support to her motion, saying bond funds approved in 1977 for an at-grade crossing at East 34th Street and Quirt Avenue should not be combined with CD funds to fund engineering work on the project.

"If you're going to do something else, it's going to cost something else and you need to let the citizens speak," he said. "We'd be in a awfully embarrassing situation if we spend the money on the engineering and it's turned down in a bond election."

Brown added that "there's a whole lot of difference between asking them to spend $500,000 on an at-grade crossing and asking them to spend $7-9 million" on an overpass.

However, Councilman Bud Aderton disagreed.

"These are projects the city of Lubbock has to have and is going to have. This makes a start," Aderton said. "There will never be a time when human needs and stuff today don't have a priority over something long range."

Aderton's motion to reduce the 34th and Quirt overpass by $50,000 (to $250,000) and the East 19th Street project by $30,000 (to $200,000) to use the funds for Neighborhood House so the United Way agency can build a new building and renovate existing facilities passed 3-2. Mrs. Baker and Brown voted "no."

Funds allocated for planning of the two street projects, however, will not be spent until a firm source of funding is found to complete the construction.

City Manager Larry Cunningham said a Citizens' Advisory Committee is expected to be appointed next month to recommend a list of projects to be submitted to voters next August or November. — SYLVIA TEAGUE that game room customers would do their drinking and littering outside.

P&Z Rejects Zone Change For Game Room

John B. White, an elder at Broadway Church of Christ, also spoke against the game room.

After hearing the opposition, Aladdin representatives offered to provide private security patrol for both inside and immediately outside the proposed establishment to placate concerned property owners in the area.

David Bass, the only commission member who supported the game room, told other board members, "I think it's hypocritical to think pinball machines are bad. This property needs some use and Tech has the obvious clientele." Bass praised the Aladdin representatives for their presentation and for their own ban on alcoholic beverages.

After four persons spoke in opposition to the game room zoning request, board member Esther Sepeda asked if there were other audience members in opposition but who did not wish to speak before the commission. About 20 persons in the audience stood.

Also Thursday, the request by the Urban Design Commission to make Chatman Hospital at 2305 Cedar Ave. an Historic Landmark easily passed. Harold Chatman, whose father Dr. Joseph Chatman built the structure in 1945 as the first hospital for blacks in Lubbock, urged the commission to approve the designation, saying it was a monument to blacks.

Another easily approved request was that of Ray Chapman for A-3 zoning to allow a high-rise building for retired persons. Chapman said the approximately 125-foot high structure would contain about 200 units, most of them one-bedroom. The facility also will include 24-hour security, a club, lounge, library, dining area, and social, recreational and spiritual activities.

In other matters the commission approved:

— H.A. Sessions' request for a zone change from single family to high-density apartment to allow construction of efficiency apartments west of Frankford Avenue between 36th and 37th Streets.

— Sanford Whitaker's request from Texas Bank and Trust Company for an apartment-medical specific use zoning to allow conversion of duplexes into professional offices at 2433 20th St.

— Sam Reyes' request for a zone change from R-2 to R-2 specific use to allow townhouses at 5402 34th St.

Numerous zoning changes in the Whisperwood addition, requested by Jerry Bradshaw of Tara Land Co., also were approved. But many details, such as cul-de-sacs and street islands, were turned over to the city staff to work out with the developer before the matter comes before the commission for final approval.

Commissioners also Thursday amended Sonny Arnold's request's for zoning to allow commercial use and townhouse use south of 87th Street and east of University Avenue to allow townhouses only.

Security Funds Running Out At Apartments

By PAT GRAVES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Security guards will not patrol Greenfair Manor apartments after March 31 if the Lubbock Housing Authority cannot come up with funds to replace a dwindling Community Development grant.

Only about $8,800 remains from a $35,800 CD grant the authority received in fiscal 1979. The grant has been used to pay an armed off-duty Lubbock policeman to patrol the half-vacant apartment complex. Two attempts to secure more CD funding have failed.

Two weeks ago the City Council rejected a Community Development Advisory Committee request for $110,000 for security patrols at both Greenfair and Hub Homes, another low-income housing project run by the authority.

Thursday the council heard a plea from newly elected authority board chairman Julian Simpson for a three-part appropriation from CD contingency funds totaling $33,900. The request, which included $18,900 to hire a security guard for June through December and $15,000 to board windows and doors of unoccupied apartments, did not make the council's final group of approved projects for CD funding.

On the suggestion of Mayor Pro Tem Alan Henry, the council did, however, agree to reconsider a portion of Simpson's proposal at its Jan. 22 meeting. That part calls for $5,500 to fund Greenfair security for April and May, to be allocated from CD contingency monies.

Simpson, who was appointed to the authority board only last month, told the council Greenfair hopes to develop a tenant security program and also will seek to incorporate security costs into its operating budget.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development already has told the authority it has no money available for security. HUD also is the agency which administers the CD funds the authority has been denied.

More than $800,000 has been spent from federal sources in the Greenfair area recently, and Simpson was hopeful that other CD money might be available if, as it appears, that sector becomes a target area for further expenditures.

Hub Homes has had no real security force since May 1980, Simpson said, adding there has been an increase in minor crimes in the project. Authority Community Services Coordinator Fulton Berry told board members at Thursday's meeting the biggest security problem in Greenfair is youth vandalism by outsiders, not tenants.

Simpson said he feared the gradual deterioration of both projects, which could discourage prospective renters from moving in.

Authority director D.C. Fair said three years ago it was common in the Greenfair area to find rape, shootings, drug dealing and prostitution. Berry, a former Lubbock policeman, said when he was on the force in 1977 officers feared making patrols through that part of town.

"A routine traffic ticket could result in an incident," Berry said.

He said police-citizen relations have improved and that the security guard's presence has helped. Board member Vernon Behner pointed out the guard reduced the time police must spend in the area. Simpson mentioned that, along with the $76 per police call, to the council, hoping to show the net cost of the funding would be relatively low.

In other action, the board raised tenants' utility allowances in response to a HUD directive. The increases match the amount of increase in costs as reported by utility companies for the past three years.

Tenants will benefit by 36 percent for electricity, 56 percent for water and 73¼ percent for gas, but assistant authority director Mary Myers said the net effect will be to reduce revenue to the authority.

Actual rent is figured based on 25 percent of a tenant's income, and arrived at by subtracting the utility allowance from the gross rent. Fair said rents are examined annually and modified according to changes in income.

In Hub Homes, each tenant pays for the utilities he uses over a base rate. In the other three projects, tenants use their allowance to pay their utility bills directly to the companies.

Mrs. Myers said she was unsure how much revenue the authority would lose, but said it would be substantial. She added she did not know how HUD would compensate for it.

The board also charged off some $3,128 in unpaid debts owed by previous tenants and referred them to the Retail Merchants Association for collection.

Manager Named At Heritage Center

"I was 7, seeing my first rodeo at the Texas Cowboy Reunion. Will Rogers had been seen in the crowd that morning, and all afternoon he was in the arena, riding a gray horse of Scandalous John Selman's."

When contestants turned a calf loose, Rogers displayed several fancy rope tricks before roping the calf and leading it from the arena. After that, Davis, who learned to ride horses used on the family stock farm, made about all the cow works possible on the U Lazy S next door.

"The dope boy (who carried the medicine around at roundups) and I formed a flanking team for the small calves," he recalled.

Though never actually a working cowboy, Davis "had feelings and attitudes always toward cowboys, an inner feeling probably to have a tie with the past."

And, though he never came out of a rodeo chute as a contestant, Davis' name brings a big smile from contestants and parents involved in the American Junior Rodeo Association he founded in 1952. The AJRA, founded as a family oriented sport, graduated many alumni into the championship ranks of the Professional Rodeo Cowboy Association.

Davis also was secretary-manager of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association (1955-58) after serving as president and rodeo director for the Texas Tech Rodeo Association. He has announced and boosted rodeo all over the Panhandle and South Plains.

When the Appaloosa began hitting the breeding scene, Davis joined the effort to upgrade the breed and founded the first Appaloosa Halter Futurity in conjunction with the Tri-State Fair in Amarillo.

While building up his own horse herd, Davis helped begin Appaloosa shows in West Texas and New Mexico. His first bronze sculpture was presented to the grand champion stud of the National Appaloosa Show in Albuquerque.

In addition to judging Appaloosa shows, Davis also judges paint and 4-H horse shows in Texas, New Mexico and Indiana.

His own 4-H Club work ended with the nation's top honor as outstanding 4-H boy in the country, one of two Texans ever to win the prestigious title.

Among other honors coming his way over the years was being in the top 10 competing for the Outstanding Young Men in Texas title given to only five.

As an adult, he has continued his 4-H association as a leader and adviser.

Davis is married to the former Barbara Ann Hext of Apache Creek, N.M., also a Tech graduate. They have two sons, Glen Robert of Hobbs, N.M., and Jay Todd, a student at Brownfield schools, and a daughter, Debbie of Midland.

Lubbockite Convicted Of Growing Pot

A Lubbock man was convicted of possession of marijuana Thursday for growing the illegal plants in a backyard greenhouse and will be sentenced by 99th District Court Judge Thomas L. Clinton at a later date.

Michael Philip Lewaren of 2528 69th St. faces a possible sentence of from two to 10 years imprisonment for the offense, a third-degree felony. A Lubbock County jury took about 30 minutes early Thursday afternoon to hand down the guilty verdict, after hearing more than a day of testimony.

Defense attorney Dan Hurley argued that mere presence of the substance in Lewaren's back yard was not enough to prove that Lewaren actually had possession of the marijuana. Hurley had called a witness earlier in the trial who testified that Lewaren had two sons, ages 17 and 19, living at his home at the time of the incident.

Hurley stressed before the jury that the two young men living in the house should be considered before convicting their father.

But prosecutor John Tabor countered with, "Any decent parent would go out and pull it up if it belonged to the children."

Hurley argued that two Drug Enforcement Administration officers may have changed their stories to meet the circumstances required for a conviction. He cited their claims that they confiscated 19 pounds of marijuana as false, saying that after dirt and non-useable portions were removed, no more than four pounds of the contraband substance would be left.

"Well, that upsets me," Tabor said of Hurley's accusation that the DEA officers had changed their stories. "I don't know what it does to you," he argued to the jury.

STAR IN THE EAST — The glass cross on this East Lubbock church building, coupled with the sky in the background, points up the significance the east has in the Christian faith. At Jesus' birth, the wise men followed His star, which they had seen in the east. Also, New Testament prophecy states that Christ will return, splitting the eastern sky. Aide To Carter Airs Argument

WASHINGTON (Special) — President Carter's assistant for religious affairs said in a recent interview one of the most painful experiences during his White House tenure stemmed from his involvement last summer with Southern Baptist Convention President Bailey Smith.

Bob Maddox referred to what he termed a misunderstanding among many Baptists and others over advice he gave Smith not to participate in last August's National Affairs Briefing in Dallas.

The controversial meeting, sponsored by The Religious Roundtable, featured a parade of conservative candidates and public officials, including then-presidential candidate Ronald Reagan.

It was there Smith made his now-infamous remark that "God does not hear the prayer of a Jew."

Maddox came under fire after it was revealed he tried to dissuade Smith from going to Dallas. He said Smith, pastor of First Southern Baptist Church in Del City, Okla., has since called him expressing regret over the pain caused by the effort.

According to both Smith and Maddox, the telephone conversation during which the presidential aide made his suggestion was understood to be personal, but that Smith told Fort Worth Star-Telegram Religion Editor Jim Jones about the talk without knowing Jones was a reporter.

Maddox emphasized he has no hard feelings toward Smith.

Asked to assess the impact of the religious right on the recent fall elections, Maddox said that while fundamentalist preachers such as Jerry Falwell and James Robison had a pronounced effect on some senatorial and congressional races, they did not topple Carter.

He attributed the President's surprisingly poor showing to economic factors.

Maddox believes the religious right was a direct by-product of old-line, right wing political organizations. Its leadership, he predicted, is not going to be satisfied with Ronald Reagan.

Although he said the movement will give the president-elect a better shake than it gave Carter, it's only a matter of time before the new president fails to live up to its leaders' expectations.

Despite agreeing with some of their positions, Maddox said he now sees the religious right as a real and present danger to the nation. He described the movement's leaders as being confused about law and grace.

"A lot of these people are trying to be saved by works," he asserted.

What hurt Carter personally about religious right attacks, Maddox noted, was the view that his positions on several so-called moral issues amounted to a denial of his faith.

"That really pained him," Maddox said, adding that such a transfer was "an unfair leap and unfair connection."

Maddox listed the following as Carter's primary achievements:

—Renewed emphasis on human rights in foreign policy.

—Continued efforts to negotiate arms limitation agreements with the Soviet Union.

—The achievement of the Camp David framework for peace in the Middle East.

—And a comprehensive energy plan for the nation. He predicted historians will treat Carter rather well.

Maddox said Carter genuinely wants Reagan to succeed, and that the President's position has been to make it as easy as possible on the new administration.

"I want him to succeed," Maddox added. "I pray for him. I'm going to be more supportive of him than they (opponents) were of Carter."

Maddox, who came to the White House 19 months ago from the pastorate of First Baptist Church in Calhoun, Ga., has been the coordinator of the President's relations with the religious community.

He will become assistant to the president of Pitt Community College in Greenville, N.C., and during the spring semester will be a visiting lecturer at East Carolina University there, following his departure from Washington this month.

Maddox said he also plans to write a book about his White House experiences, lecture at Baptist colleges and seminaries and do television work locally in North Carolina.

He said he considered going back into the pastorate but felt led toward college administration.

"Ministry is in the mind and in the heart, not just in the formal structure of the job," Maddox noted. He added that one dimension of his White House position has been to counsel other members of the President's staff on personal and family problems.

"I don't feel like I have left the ministry," the aide said.

Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter have a truly happy marriage, Maddox said, praising them for setting a tremendous example of a husband and wife. He predicted Mrs. Carter would go down in history as one of the great first ladies.

Despite long hours and constant pressure, Maddox viewed his White House tenure as extraordinarily fulfilling, but added the experience has been much more positive than negative.

Anonymous Donor Gives Church $50,000

Someone definitely got in the Christmas spirit in a big way lately and St. Paul's Episcopal Church is $50,000 richer for their generosity.

An anonymous benefactor recently donated the sum to the church with no designation as to its use. Rector Jack Washington said the congregation's vestry (lay leaders) earmarked $5,000 for the Bishop's Fund, but the remainder will not be allocated until after Jan. 22.

At that time several new vestry members will be elected. Church newsletter editor Jerry Henderson said it will probably be decided then what to do with the $45,000. He said it is being held for bonds or bills at present.

As to the donor's identity, Henderson said, "I don't know who it is. No one will tell me, but I'm dying to know. Jack Washington knows and he's not telling."

Washington said he is not at liberty to disclose the contributor's name or motive, but Henderson speculated it was the same person who gave $25,000 to All Saints Episcopal School. He said he assumed it was a member of St. Paul's.

Both Henderson and Washington said anonymous gifts are not uncommon, but that one of this size is likely the largest the church has ever received. Washington has been at St. Paul's almost 25 years. Henderson has been a member 20 years.

"We've had larger bequests, but this is the largest gift," Washington noted. "I'm very gratified and delighted to get it."

Both church leaders said the congregation had no special fund drives or projects underway, other than the annual budget commitment emphasis.

Missionary's Daughter Writes Book Telling Family's Plight

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Bob Pierce, founder of the Christian missionary agency World Vision in Monrovia, traveled the world aiding the starving, hopeless and war-ravaged.

But according to a book written by his daughter, the late Pierce left his family emotionally ravaged, and only managed a 44-hour family reunion a few days before he died two years ago.

He was legally separated from his wife for 10 years; his oldest daughter committed suicide.

But Marilee Pierce Dunker of Thousand Oaks, his second daughter, feels she has emerged from the traumatic years victorious. Her book, "Man of Vision-Woman of Prayer," scrapes the shiny veneer off the image of the wholesome, perfect Christian family.

And although Mrs. Dunker has been criticized by some people for sullying her father's name, she believes the book is helpful to others in the same situation and she gives glory to God for allowing a "healing of family wounds" in the end.

"The fallacy in a lot of ministers' minds is that the demands of their work can justify neglect of family, body, health. They live unbalanced lives because their goals are noble and wonderful," said Mrs. Dunker. "But I don't believe God smiles on anybody who allows that to happen.

"Mother and I often said, 'We should write a book,'" said Mrs. Dunker. "But I didn't want to write it without a happy ending. There needed to be a redeeming quality to the whole situation."

Mrs. Dunker's book depicts Lorraine Pierce and her daughters, Sharon, Marilee and Robin, living in the limelight of a man whose commitment to serving humanity's needs blunted his ability to handle close interpersonal relationships at home.

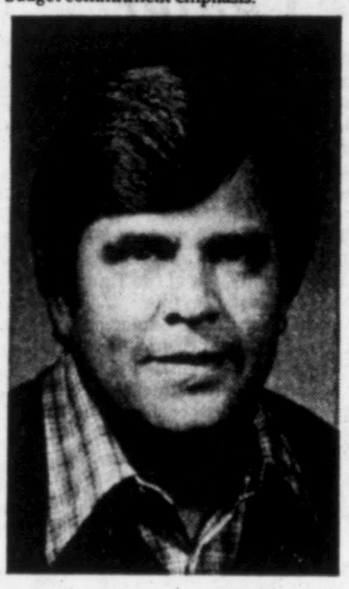
Of the reconciliation at a family dinner just before Pierce's death, she said, "People might question: Was one night enough — 44 hours as a family again? But the Lord gave us what our hearts cried out for. It was not that God was ... capable of doing more, but whether Dad would have allowed it."

Still, Mrs. Dunker does not slacken her praise of her father's work in China, Korea and Vietnam. "The Bible says you can tell a person by his fruit. No one can question the kind of man he was: the 'fruit' of Dad's life lives on — Samaritan's Purse (a missionary relief organization now headed by Billy Graham's son) and Great Commision Films," which evolved into World Wide Films, and, of course, World Vision, which has become one of the most respected relief agencies in the world.

In fact, Mrs. Dunker believes that her father's home-front battle was where Satan tried to get back at him for the good he was doing elsewhere. "People who say to God, 'Do something really meaningful through me,' should realize it's going to cost them," she said. "They had better learn to use spiritual weapons of defense."

She believes her mother used the best defense weapon, prayer, that enabled her to survive. But "sometimes she would get in the car, roll the windows up and drive around screaming," said Mrs. Dunker. Her mother felt she couldn't talk to anyone about her problems because of her husband's eminence in the Christian community.

That is where Mrs. Dunker, now married with two children, believes her book may help, not only other women married to spiritual leaders, but those men themselves, who can learn from her father's mistakes.



GARCIA ELECTED — The Rev. Pablo Garcia, pastor of Arnett-Benson Baptist Church, has been elected president of the Lubbock Baptist Associational Church Staff Fellowship. Garcia, a Tahoka native, has served churches in Paducah, Seagraves, Rosefield, Petersburg and Hereford.

Missionaries Benefit From Tax Measure

WASHINGTON (Special) — President Carter signed into law Dec. 24 a bill restoring an income tax exclusion for missionaries and other charitable workers.

The signing followed months of efforts by numerous religious and humanitarian organizations with charitable workers overseas to convince Congress to restore the $20,000 tax exclusion.

It had been in effect prior to passage of the Foreign Earned Income Act of 1978.

Congress completed action on the measure just two days before a twice-extended deadline granted by the Internal Revenue Service for payment of 1979 taxes. The tax exclusion cleared Congress as an amendment to HR 4968, a bill dealing with real estate investment trusts.

The Southern Baptist Convention Foreign Mission Board said the new law will save it about $1 million annually.

The signing came as no surprise since Carter supported the measure. The real question for its backers was whether it could be moved through the closing days of the lame duck session of Congress.

The overseas tax exemption is granted to employees of agencies such as the board solely because they perform "qualified charitable services" in lesser developed countries..

It is not related to the constitutional requirement for church-state separation.

In supporting the restoration of the tax exclusion, the Senate Finance Committee report said, "Charitable employees in developing countries generally are performing services which the United States has a special interest in supporting."

Most Americans living abroad pay taxes to host governments.

Economy Changing Views Of Stewardship

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
United Press International Writer

The nation's faltering economy, especially high inflation rates, is hurting church giving and forcing new definitions of stewardship.

Through much of the last several decades, an ever-expanding gross national product had its impact on church growth as well — with per capita giving by church members increasing and most denominations embarking on expensive building and other capital construction projects.

But at a recent National Council of Churches conference for church development and financial management specialists, conferees were told they could no longer plan their futures around notions of spiraling economic growth.

Last year, for example, although per capita giving by church-goers increased, it did not keep pace with inflation and, coupled with a steady, decade-long decrease in membership among mainline denominations, income fell.

Theologians attending the conference stressed that in a world of shrinking resources, the churches must develop new understandings not only of stewardship as it relates to church giving, but of ecological and economic development as well.

"When the economny is going well," said Elizabeth Dodson Gray of the Boston Institute for a Sustainable Future in Wellesley, Mass., "giving to the church tends to go well."

"The problem is that if we go on economically growing like that we will destroy the earth," she added.

"We have a real Catch-22 problem," she added, "because if we in the church affirm that kind of growth we will have problems with our constituents earning a living and with funding the church."

Dr. Bruce Birch of Wesley Theological Seminary, Washington, D.C., said the coming period of economic stress in the United States could be compared to the Babylonian captivity of ancient Israel.

He said the churches in the Western world must prepare their members for an "exile" experience like that of Israel and develop a theology of "shalom" (wholeness) to deal with the alienation and discourgement of Christians.

Another theologian attending the conference, Dr. Douglas Hall of McGill University in Montreal, warned the stewardship experts that in troubled economic times, religion turns away from the world and social concerns and focuses almost exclusively on the otherworldliness of God.

He cited the growth of conservative evangelical Protestantism as an example of that trend.

Within mainline Protestantism the turning away from the world can be seen in the growing emphasis on "designated" giving as well as a tendency of local churches to keep more and more of their funds at home rather than sending them on to national offices or agencies.

The stewardship officials said the trend to designated giving — earmarking funds for special projects — has more than doubled in the past five years in a number of mainline church bodies.

Dr. Leo Waynick, executive director of the Ecumenical Center for Stewardship Studies in Evanston, Ill., reported on a study he made of designated giving in 19 denominations.

Pointing to increased church costs and a shrinking dollar, Waynick said these economic factors "are causing increased tension between the various levels ... within a denomination, from the congregation to the national church bodies.

"The tension increases between maintaining commitments of long standing and permitting congregations to draw new priorities by their designations," he said.

Methodists Aid Fight On Hunger

The United Methodist Church has disbursed or designated a total of almost a half million dollars for hunger-fighting projects and ethnic minority programs.

A group of 25 projects to combat hunger has received $310,981 in a final outlay of hunger funds contributed during the 1977-80 quadrennium.

Included is a social service center and free restaurant for poor street people in Anchorage, Alaska, an organic gardening project for the Choctaw tribe in Mississippi, and rehabilitation aid to widows and orphans in war-torn areas of Angola.

The funds come from a total of more than $6 million given during the past quadrennium through the church's World Hunger Advance Special.

Funding for 16 ethnic minority programs totaling $160,250 has been approved by the church's Commission on Religion and Race.

A Los Angeles American Indian program as the "Circle of Wholeness" received the largest amount, $28,500.

The Rev. Woodie White, chief staff executive of the commission, said changes in the denomination's missional priority program in the 1981-84 quadrennium might result in smaller amounts of money available for the Minority Group Self-determination Fund, from which these particular grants come.

Church Officials Laud Ruling

BOZEMAN, Mont. (Special) — A Montana district court judge here Dec. 22 dismissed the United Methodist Church as a denomination from litigation involving the Yellowstone Annual Conference and the Bozeman Deaconess Foundation.

"The 'United Methodist Church' is a spiritual connection of millions of individual persons and thousands of representative church units which are collectively incapable of being sued as a jural entity," said Judge Peter G. Meloy.

"For purposes of this action there is no 'United Methodist Church' which is a national jural entity capable of suing and being sued."

The judge also dismissed as a defendant retired Bishop Ralph T. Alton, who at the time the suit was filed was president of the Council of Bishops.

Samuel W. Witwer Sr., chief counsel for general United Methodist interests, said the ruling is of great importance to United Methodism because earlier decisions in California courts that the church is a jural entity might appear to leave the denomination as such vulnerable to an array of suits.

More Gasohol Use Ordered By Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government must use gasohol instead of gasoline whenever possible, according to an executive order issued by President Carter.

Gasohol is a blend of 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent fuel alcohol. Carter has endorsed use of the mixture as part of an overall effort to reduce dependence on imported oil.

The executive order, issued this week, was advocated last October by several congressman who said gasohol accounted for only 4 percent of the government's purchase of more than 340 million gallons of fuel for federal vehicles in 1979.

Interferon Program Begun At Hospital

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — What is billed as the nation's first program to treat cancer patients with a homemade supply of interferon has been launched at Lansing's Sparrow Hospital.

Hospital President Karl Neumann called the plan to supplement the treatment of up to 50 patients with interferon "one of the most exciting programs we have undertaken."

Fewer than 20 hospitals and research programs around the nation use interferon experimentally, he said. Scientists believe the substance may stop cancer cells from growing without affecting healthy cells.

High Court Upholds Record Suit Award

NEW YORK (AP) — A State Supreme Court judge has upheld an award of $273,387 to a woman who was passed over 13 times for promotion when she was employed by Burlington Industries.

The city Human Rights Commission granted the award last year to Jean Spencer, 57, who now works for a real estate firm. It was then described as the largest individual sex discrimination award on record.

In his decision, Justice Francis Pecora said Miss Spencer "was never even considered for any of 13 sales manager jobs for which men were hired, despite her proven performance" in a 25-year career.

A Burlington spokesman said this week the company would appeal.

Living on the Leftovers

They don't have much — Granny and Gramps:

A little "retirement cottage" with a guest room for visiting grandchildren, though they own it free and clear . . .

A modest savings account for a rainy day — it took some doing to add to it month by month. . .

Memories, the kind that grow warmer and deeper with every passing year . . .

Affection — it reaches to them across the miles from more than a score of loving hearts . . .

And Faith, the firm, courageous, ever-celebrating faith that has made life to Granny and Gramps a confident walk with God.

No, they don't have much as many people count riches. But they do have certain treasures that can never be lost, stolen or foreclosed. Priceless things whose value reaches beyond time into eternity.

They're living on the leftovers of a life of giving.

Tattooing Becoming Art Form

DALLAS (AP) — Tattoos typically conjure images of brawny sailors, barroom brawls and forearms stained with former girlfriends' names.

But a new wave of young tattooists is changing the reputation as well as the substance of the ancient practice, a researcher says.

Huge Japanese woodblock prints are wielding a heavy influence on the new tattooists, many of whom hold degrees in fine arts, says Alan Govenar. At the same time, he said, tattoos are experiencing a popularity that transcends social class, sex and age.

Govenar, a 28-year-old Boston native, has studied American tattooing for seven years. He currently is pursuing a doctorate in arts and humanities at the University of Texas at Dallas.

He points to tattooist Ed Hardy of San Francisco as the leader of the creative new breed.

"He is bringing fine art to tattooing. ... He has done a lot to influence other young tattooists," Govenar said.

Hardy's designs include elaborate scenes of Samurai warriors and dragons, and "he specializes in large tattoos that, say, cover a person's back or chest."

Govenar entered the world of tattooing while an undergraduate student at Ohio State University in 1973, when he walked into the downtown Columbus shop of Leonard L. "Stoney" St. Clair.

The two struck up a friendship and Govenar learned the man had been confined to a wheelchair since he was a child because of rheumatoid arthritis. St. Clair learned to tattoo after joining a circus as a sword swallower at age 15. "He was a natural storyteller," Govenar said, and a paper he wrote about St. Clair for a class eventually developed into a book — "Stoney Knows How: Life as a Tattoo Artist."

The book was accepted by University Press at Kentucky in 1978, but has yet to be published, Govenar said. St. Clair never will see it — he died Dec. 3 after spending 51 of his 67 years tattooing.

"What drew me into tattoing was I discovered it was not what people thought it was," Govenar said. "I was committed to show tattooing as a folk art and a fine art ... also, there was a total dearth of material that had been written on the subject."

Govenar earned his masters' degree at the University of Texas at Austin in 1975, then hit the road in search of American tattooists. He visited more than 30 shops in 17 cities, and wrote several articles on the subject.

Govenar said he's found tattooists are "people who maintain very high standards. They only want to tattoo people who are serious about being tattooed."

The new tattoos "are vastly different from the ones Stoney did," Govenar said, with overtones of large 18th and 19th century Japanese woodblock prints.

"Tattoos in Japan have a completely different status," he said. "They stress symmetry, continuity, conformity to body contours. Western tattoos are more agglomerate, with many images placed often haphazardly. They often lack a unifying motif."

The National Endowment for the Arts provided funds for a documentary, scheduled for release in January, on the "old school of tattooing."

Govenar also has written a novel about tattooed people, "Done Up," that he is trying to get published.

He said he is now working on two more films about tattooing. Other projects include an investigation of tattoos' place in Mexican-American culture and "the multitude of meanings tattoos have and can have."

Executives, as well as women, increasingly are joining the ranks of the tattooed, Govenar said, adding that tattoos are beginning to come out from beneath clothing.

Even with the burgeoning popularity, he said, tattooed people still are "oppressed by stereotypes. Oftentimes, they are discriminated against because they have a tattoo showing."

Even though Govenar has no tattoos himself, he said that does not mean he will not ever have one.

"I don't have any objection to getting a tattoo. If and when I get a tattoo, I want to be sure — I want to get something that will really say a lot and that will have a lot of meaning for me."

Texans To Jam Capital For Inauguration

AUSTIN (AP) — President-elect Ronald Reagan will be inaugurated Jan. 20 with many whoops and hollers from his Texas supporters.

Reports from the Texas Inaugural Committee, which actually is part of the state Republican Party, shows at least 1,500 Texas backers of Reagan and George Bush, an adopted Texan, will attend the festivities.

"It's just about the biggest thing that has happened to Texas Republicans," said one party worker. "There are many, many more going up this time than they did for Richard Nixon's inauguration in 1968 and 1972."

National inaugural celebrations may be new for most Texas Republicans.

However, Texans have played big parts in previous inaugurations of Democratic presidents.

A number of Texas Democrats rode special trains to Washington for the inauguration of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Vice President John Nance Garner, a native Texan. Special planes carried even greater numbers to the nation's capital for the inauguration of President John F. Kennedy and Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson in 1961.

But the big Texas trek came in 1965 after Johnson had whipped Republican Barry Goldwater.

"I guess there were close to a thousand there from Texas, maybe more," says Austin attorney Don Thomas. "Almost everybody you knew was there."

Thomas particularly remembers an inauguration party thrown for the Texans by Perle Mesta, internationally known hostess. "Even the Gabor sisters were there," said Thomas.

Texas had a special float in the parade — a miniature of the LBJ ranch with a miniature Pedernales River flowing real water. Johnson's alma mater, Southwest Texas State University, furnished one of the bands.

Saturday night, Jan. 17, the Texans will be guests at a big party thrown at the Sheraton-Washington by the Texas State Society, where the vice president and his wife will be honored.

Sunday afternoon there will be a reception honoring Texas Gov. Bill Clements and other Republican governors, followed by a concert that night at Kennedy Center.

Monday morning there is a reception at the Kennedy Center honoring the wives of the president and vice president, Nancy Reagan and Barbara Bush.

Later, the Texas Inaugural Committee, headed by Rita Clements, wife of the governor, will host a brunch for Texans at the Sheraton-Washington. Monday afternoon there is a reception at the Smithsonian Institution honoring Bush.

Monday night there is a gala, at $150 per ticket, with a long list of entertainers including Carson, Frank Sinatra, and Bob Hope.

At least some of the Texans will have special spots for the inauguration Tuesday at noon and the shortened parade.

Those with white tie and tails and $100 for a ticket can attend one of the nine inaugural balls Tuesday night. Most Texans are expected to celebrate at the Sheraton-Washington.

And before leaving Washington on Wednesday most Texans will pick up a souvenir — maybe a $15 pair of cuff links with the inaugural seal, a $25 red, white and blue inaugural license plate or a $650 porcelain portrayal of the "Nancy Reagan Rose."

Moviemaking Risky Business

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The Wright Brothers risked their necks when they asked themselves at Kitty Hawk, "Will it fly?"

Moviemakers only risk their reputations, and often times their fortunes, when they launch a new film and pray that it will get off the ground.

In the case of Michael Cimino's "Heaven's Gate," which crashed and burned after a single week's flight, the answer was clearly "no." The director went back to the drawing board hoping to resurrect something in a salvage project.

But there comes a time in the life of every motion picture when its fragility is nakedly apparent — the moment of its release to theaters.

No one connected with a film can be certain whether the public will accept it. And during those first few days of release the studio, producer and director are helpless. There is nothing more they can do.

Some recent films have been released with great expectations — "Flash Gordon," for example — only to fail dismally at the box office. Others, such as "The Competition," are keen disappointments.

In some cases there apparently is little hope for a film, "Stir Crazy" for instance; yet it zoomed off to a flying start and soared out of sight.

The filmmaker, eternally at the mercy of fickle audiences and the whims of providence, is in the most dicey of all businesses.

No one knows this better than Richard Donner who directed "Superman," "Omen" and, just recently, "Inside Moves."

Both "Superman" and "Omen" were airborne the moment they were released, destined to rake in profits at a prodigious rate. "Superman," in fact, ranks in the top 10 moneymakers of all time with $165 million in the till.

"Inside Moves" is another matter.

Donner made the transition from fantasy spectacle with "Superman" and eerie occult-suspense with "Omen," to an intimate story of interpersonal relationships with "Inside Moves."

Three weeks ago director Donner and Goodmark Productions (Mark Tanz and Bob Goodwin) held their collective breaths. They released their touching little film and waited.

Clunk.

"Inside Moves" — starring John Savage and Diana Scarwid — just lay there. It appeared as if Donner's picture would never get off the ground.

The few patrons who did straggle into theaters, however, plus excellent reviews, gave the fledgling film new life. Last week "Inside Moves" surpassed the first week's box-office take by 280 percent.

So far this week it has gained 80 percent on the second week, to the elation of Donner and his producers.

"The name of the game is word of mouth," Donner said during lunch in the sun drenched patio of his Hollywood offices.

"Our picture opened so slowly it was frightening. If it had continued at the first week's pace, we'd have been out of business in no time. Now we have a budding hit on our hands as long as people keep talking about it.

"The reviews were 95 percent sensational and the others were written by idiots. Theater owners say they never had better audience reaction from the crowds coming out of the theaters.

"The fragility of a film at its birth is always there. In the first 10 days nobody is willing to endorse a movie — not the distributors or exhibitors. They don't want to throw a lot of exploitation, advertising and publicity money into a project until they know how it will fare.

"If they panic and pull back, you've had it. Many good films have been destroyed because they were never given a chance to grow and find their audiences. Some movies need to incubate for a while.

"The first week or two of release is a frightening time for all of us. The sneak prevews may give us an idea, but you have to wait for public reaction."

Mitch Miller Returning To TV

By KENNETH R. CLARK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mitch Miller's return Saturday to NBC prime time television will be much like that of an old western gunfighter who straps on his .44 for one last showdown, confident that his draw is just as good as it ever was.

Miler has reason for confidence.

In the early '60s, the hirsute king of "Singalong" was the most feared triggerman in the network ratings war. At 69, he's a bit older, but he is determined to see his 8 p.m., CST, special drive straight into series and to the top of the Neilsen heap.

"If it doesn't, I'll be the most surprised man in the world," he said this week.

Miller has been out of the electronic combat zone for 15 years — the victim of what he bitterly calls "the guys with the slide rules" — but in his day, the competition couldn't touch him. He stood where "Dallas" now stands for CBS, and he still remembers it in combat terms.

"We were the No. 1 show," he said as he prepared to tape a segment for the musical spectacular the Peacock Network will run very strategically between Barbara Mandrell and another veteran of the early wars, Steve Allen. "They moved us as a weapon against other shows. After one year, we knocked off 'The Untouchables.' Then they moved us to Friday night and put us in the middle of 'Route 66' and '77 Sunset Strip' and we started to knock them off. They moved us the next year to Monday night to fight 'Ben Casey.'

"Even then we had a 34 share. Then in came the guys with the slide rules and a new science called demographics. That's when mathematicians decide what entertainment is going to appeal to each group and even though we had a 34 share, they said we did not have enough young people watching us, so they put us off the air. That got NBC 20,000 leters of protest. We never went off the air as a failed show."

"Today's caviar is tomorrow's hamburger if you stay the same," Miller said. "Television has never had more power, and it has never used it with less taste."

But one thing will not change. The time-honored "Singalong" Miller made part of his persona will dominate the show, leading a studio audience, and hopefully those in front of their television sets, in such hoary Harry Warren favorites as "Chatanooga Choo-Choo" and "Lullaby of Broadway."

NBC News Magazine Competes With 'Dallas' For Viewers

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Suppose you were a network programming boss, and your news guys kept coming up with these magazine programs that didn't cut it. They took up an hour of your prime time schedule without putting anything measurable back, such as ratings.

You can't just do without a news magazine, much as you'd like to; that would be bad form. The legend of CBS' wildly successful "60 Minutes" beckons loudly. You have to try.

Yet, making a news magazine work is the least of your problems. Your prime time schedule is failing, your daytime schedule is failing, your late-night schedule is faltering. Your neck is itching, and the board of directors of your parent company may bring an ax with your name on it to their meeting this spring.

What to do with the news magazine? Do what NBC President Fred Silverman did, nudge the little nuisance into a forgotten corner and concentrate on matters of weight — relocating Sheriff Lobo in Atlanta, cutting "Harper Valley PTA" in half, fashioning a marketing strategy for "Number 96," and the like.

And, oh, what a forgotten corner Silverman found for "NBC Magazine With David Brinkley." What's that, you say? There exists such a program? Sort of. If you were looking, which most viewers aren't, you'd find "NBC Magazine" on Friday nights, situated alongside CBS' "Dallas."

This descendant of NBC's "Weekend" and "Prime Time With Tom Snyder" fiascos isn't "60 Minutes," but neither was "60 Minutes" in the first decade of its life. Brinkley, who won new fans with his refreshing wit and dead-aim to the heart of matters during last summer's political conventions, is a vast improvement over Tom Snyder in this type of program.

Brinkley's "Magazine" team comprises Jack Perkins, master of the off-hand report, Betsy Aaron, Garrick Utley and Douglas Kiker. The format, as Brinkley wishes, is pliant, allowing short segments as well as longer, more deliberate pieces. After each, Brinkley & Co. sit around and mull.

"What we want first is to be loose and flexible," says Brinkley. "Other shows have a rather rigid formula — three stories a week, which means each story has to be 12 to 16 minutes long, whether it needs to be or not. We're doing some that are two minutes long.

"The other thing we want is a degree of relaxed, informal attitude — not to come across as rigid and steely. Everything in our little round-table is ad-lib, I've insisted on that. People are better when they're not staring at a TelePrompter — it's like a cobra. You can become dependent on the damned thing and develop this blank stare..."

Of course, style doesn't count in a dark closet. One upper-level NBC programmer recently said that "Magazine" might be moved to a healthier spot in the schedule after "it has shown itself qualitatively."

Teachers Can Lower Fines By Writing Essays

HAMILTON, Ohio (UPI) — Thirty-nine school teachers fined for defying a back-to-school court order during a strike last year can cut their fines in half by writing essays, a judge said.

The judge even gave the teachers a wide range of essay topics to choose from.

Butler County Common Pleas Court Judge Robert Moser fined the teachers this week between $315 and $415 each for contempt of court because they violated his orders during a seven-week strike. The strike was settled New Year's Eve, but the teachers had to show up for sentencing this week.

The judge said the fines had to be paid by May 1, but he added he would cut the fines in half for teachers submitting 900-to-1,200-word essays by April 1.

Some topics Moser gave the teachers to choose from include: "It's time for a new Constitution"; "Priority of tax dollars for more prisons"; "Probation for whose benefit?"; "Jail time is fun time"; "An eye for an eye" and "Is justice really blind?"; "Crime on the increase — Why?".

San Francisco Museum Offering Photo Exhibits

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Photography enthusiasts who want to exercise their imaginations as well as their eyes have a well-laid path in two exhibits at the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art.

A display of "Avant-Garde Photography in Germany 1919-1939" is at the museum through the first week of February; a sampling of nine American Masters of Photography from the permanent collection lines a third-floor corridor.

Working one's way through the Germans' "new vision" and then on downstairs through the Americans' — some contemporaries, others successors of the Europeans — is a streamlined but adequate manner to trace the contributions of the avant-gardists that shaped, and often surfaced in, later works.

In the exhibit's first showing before visiting six other cities — Akron, Portland, Ore., Chicago, Baltimore, Minneapolis and New York — the German photographers clearly display their delight and daring in exploring new dimensions of the medium. Boundaries become limitless as the photographer, not the subject, controls the composition.

Images blend into one another as in a 1927 work by W.M. Heinz Loew. In the untitled photograph, a drummer in white hat merges into the record which dominates the frame.

One popular exercise of the artists is to turn the camera on themselves. Some do it delicately; others harshly. Edmund Kesting's self-portrait in 1930 reflects both treatments with characteristically surprising results: His angular chin appears more softly drawn than the darkness, which is more silhouette than shadow.

Common street scenes often become comical, bizarre or threatening in many photographs. In a 1932 work, the gauzy torso of a nude falls across three top-hatted, faceless gentlemen.

Machines catch the Germans' attention as the developing importance of technology amuses and intimidates. In a scene evocative of Chaplin's film, "Modern Times," a man keeps a respectful distance from gears in a photograph by Max Burchartz.

Surrealism also is represented, as in "Hommage a de Fallia," a photogram by Marta Hoepffner.

Others included in the exhibit are Umbo, Laszlo Moholy-Nagy, Raoul Hausmann, August Sander, Herbert and Irene Bayer and Lotte Jacobi.

The photographs, chosen by museum curator Van Deren Coke, mark the first time such extensive attention has been given in the United States to the Germans of that period, according to Dorothy Martinson, an assistant curator.

The American display spans more time — from early in this century through the '60s — than the German exhibit, but is much smaller.

Walker Evans' "Penny Picture Display," done in 1936 in Savannah, Ga., has company in Umbo's "Head Studies," which documented the glamorous, playful and desperate in German society.

Included is Imogen Cunningham's portrait of Alfred Stieglitz, who himself is represented in the exhibit, which probably will run through January. Other works are by Man Ray, Paul Strand, Wynn Bullock, Minor White and Dorothea Lange, from her photos taken in India.

Woman Charged In Baby Death

NEW YORK (UPI) — A teen-age mother was arrested for allegedly throwing her hours-old daughter 18 floors to her death from a Brooklyn housing project, police say.

Housing Authority police said the mother, Felicia Timus, was charged with second-degree murder in the baby's death this week.

Sgt. Lancelot Smith of the housing police said the infant fell 18 floors after being thrown from an apartment window in a city project.

Eric Brown, a caretaker at the project, told police he heard "an object" fall about 10:15 a.m., Smith said.

"He investigated and discovered the child," Smith said. The infant was pronounced dead at the scene.

The baby's mother, Felicia Timus, was taken taken into custody at Greenpoint Hospital, police said.

BROKEN BALLOTS

Citizens of Athens scratched their votes on pieces of broke pottery. Potsherd ballots cast more than 2,400 years ago have been unearthed by archeologists Such ballots were known as ostraka, from which the world "ostracize" is derived.

The evening star is Mars and Mercury.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Capricorn.

American statesman Alexander Hamilton, first secretary of the Treasury, was born Jan. 11, 1757.

On this date in history:

In 1785, the Continental Congress convened in New York City.

In 1861, Alabama seceded from the Union.

In 1935, American aviatrix Amelia Earhart Putnam became the first woman to fly across the Pacific from Hawaii to California.

In 1964, Surgeon General Luther Terry released a report saying smoking cigarettes was a definite "health hazard."

A thought for the day: Alexander Hamilton said in 1781, "Government implies the power of making laws. It is essential to the idea of a law, that it be attended with a sanction; or, in other words, a penalty or punishment for disobedience."

SEC Officials Questioning Granville's Warning

HOLLY HILL, Fla. (UPI) — Investment adviser Joseph Granville says he was duty bound to issue to his selected clients an emergency "sell signal" that rocked Wall Street, but Security and Exchange Commission officials hinted it may not have been "kosher."

"The market told us Jan. 6 to sell," Granville said Thursday in an interview at his office north of Daytona Beach. "It's our duty to convey the message. We're paid to do that."

But SEC officials expressed reservations that he only contacted about 3,000 of his estimated 12,000 clients — those who pay an extra $500 a year for the "early warning" service to receive last-minute forecasts.

The SEC refused to say whether any investigation was under way.

But Granville's son, Blanchard, who is a vice president of the market letter, said their attorney was contacted Wednesday by the SEC's regional administrator in Miami. The younger Blanchard added that the lawyer believes the flash to only select clients did not violate any SEC regulations.

After the telephone flash to "sell everything" was issued late Tuesday, Granville's other clients were sitting with totally contrary advice. In his latest weekly newsletter, which most of the $250-a-year subscribers would have received Monday or Tuesday, Granville said he was bullish on the market and advised subscribers to "do some aggressive new buying" of stocks.

Granville, who has made a string of correct calls since 1974, said his quick change of heart came Tuesday after the Dow Jones industrial average climbed past the magical 1,000 level.

Granville said it was technical indicators — sales volume, the number of stock advances and declines and a dozen other factors — that turned him bearish late Tuesday.

He huddled with his son and by nightfall had called in 30 employees on overtime to phone the 3,000 special customers.

The word spread like wildfire through the investment community and sell orders flooded stock brokers' offices.

The Dow Jones average, which cracked the 1,000 barrier Tuesday in reaching a four-year high, plunged more than 23 points Wednesday on a volume of more than 92 million shares, the heaviest trading day in history. The Dow fell another 15.19 points Thursday to 965.70, bringing the two-day toll to 38.99 points.

There was some bargain hunting in Thursday's session and brokers say the skid is due for a pause.

An SEC staff attorney, who asked not to be identified, said investment advisers, under federal securities laws, have to maintain "undivided loyalty" to their investor clients and their "fiduciary responsibility" or loyalty "extends to each and every client," even if some pay extra for special services.

"My gut feeling is that isn't kosher," said Jack Evans, another staff attorney, who works for the SEC enforcement division, when presented with the facts hypothetically.

SEC staff attorneys were not free to discuss Granville specifically, but they did comment when given a hypothetical set of facts similar to those surrounding Granville's advisories over the past week.

Joel Goldberg, associate director of the SEC's division of investment management, said the issue "raises a question" but whether there is any violation depends on whether or not mail subscribers "clearly understood" that a forecast can change and some clients might receive advance notification of the change.

Miami Couple Refuses To Accept Personal Injury Suit Settlement

MIAMI (AP) — Despite the threat of a 60-day jail sentence for contempt of court, Mary and George Adams say they're not willing to accept a $75,000 personal injury suit settlement that wouldn't cover their expenses.

Dade County Circuit Judge Harold Featherstone had given the Miami couple a 1 p.m. Thursday deadline to accept the money or go to jail, but attorneys said no action had been taken against the Adamses as of Thursday night.

Mrs. Adams, 53, told reporters shortly before the deadline that she and her husband, a 63-year-old carpentry contractor, wouldn't take the check because it was negotiated by a lawyer they fired a week before the settlement was reached.

She said also that the $75,000 would not cover their medical and legal expenses.

"We have not gotten any word from the judge," attorney Alan Dubow said Thursday night. "The next move is up to the judge — he can really do whatever he wants."

Dubow is an associate of Ellis Rubin, the attorney now representing the Adamses.

Featherstone had ordered the couple to sign the check Tuesday. They refused and he found them in contempt and imposed a 60-day jail term. He later relented and gave them 48 hours to reconsider.

"Something really needs to be done," said Mrs. Adams, who was crippled in a 1975 automobile accident and walks only with the aid of a cane. "It's not justice. I'm angry and I'm disgusted and I can't believe what has happened."

Rubin said he filed an appeal to the state's 3rd District Court of Appeal in Miami. He said the notice of appeal asks the court to rescind Featherstone's contempt ruling.

"We will comply with the court's rulings (if the couple is ordered to jail)," Rubin added. "I will attempt to see that the contempt order is rescinded before they have to go to jail."

He said he advised the couple not the sign the check because it would leave them deep in debt.

"By my calculation they would come up about $19,000 in debt if they sign the check," he said, citing legal and medical bills which have piled up in the 5½ years since Mrs. Adams' accident.

Among the legal expenses is $32,000 claimed by attorney W. Carl Rentz II, who reached the settlement.

Mrs. Adams suffered leg, back and neck injuries in the accident. Rentz took the case in October 1976 and filed suit eight months later.

Shortly before the case came to trial in 1978, the Adamses fired Rentz and hired a new attorney.

Gasohol May Conflict With Food Production

TORONTO (AP) — Rather than being a panacea for the transportation problems of the future, the production of gasohol may lead to "food-fuel conflicts," a scientist says.

Production of the mixture — 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent ethanol, or grain alcohol — is rapidly increasing in the United States, a panel on transportation fuels told the American Association for the Advancement of Science on Thursday.

The current rate of expansion could lead to demands for corn by the ethanol producers that would drive up the price of corn-based foods and animal feeds, said Steven E. Plotkin of the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment in Washington.

The grain alone for alcohol fuel production could cost $3.50 per gallon, Plotkin said.

He said he expected that conflicts between the need for cheap food and the need for cheap fuel could arise when the annual production of ethanol nears 2 billion gallons a year, something he predicted would occur in five to seven years. The United States now consumes 110 billion gallons of gasoline a year, he said.

"If you produce 10 billion gallons (of ethanol) a year, you are going to have major inflationary effects and I think that may be less than totally acceptable," Plotkin said.

The panel of energy scientists said such economic uncertainty, along with other problems, indicated that gasohol and other synthetic fuels are not likely to play a major role in replacing gasoline as a transportation fuel in the near future.

Scientists at the final session of the five-day association meeting said that the best hope for maintaining gas supplies is to stop using oil in power plants and other areas where another fuel would do.

"There's a lot of oil that's being used in places where you could use coal. But it's not going to be cheap. A coal boiler costs a lot more than an oil boiler does," Plotkin said.

PLYMOUTH HORIZON

BUILT IN AMERICA FOR AMERICAN'S NEEDS!

WHAT YOU GET WHEN YOU CHOOSE PLYMOUTH FRONT WHEEL DRIVE

11 billion miles of front-wheel-drive experience.
• Our front-wheel-drive technology is known in the industry. • We have more front-wheel-drive experience in small, U.S.-fuel-efficient cars than GM, Ford, AMC, Toyota or Datsun. • We introduced an American-made, high mileage, front-wheel-drive car two years ahead of GM and three years ahead of Ford. • We have sold more small, fuel-efficient, front-wheel-drive cars in the U.S. than GM, Ford, Datsun and Toyota.

Outstanding overall est. mpg.
• Plymouth has more front-wheel-drive cars rated over 24 est. mpg than GM, Ford, Toyota, Datsun or VW. • Plymouth has the highest projected overall mpg of any American car company brand.

Most front-wheel-drive choices in America.
• Plymouth has more 5-passenger front-wheel-drive car models than any other American automobile manufacturer. • Plymouth has the only 6-passenger, front-wheel-drive cars in America. • Plymouth offers more front-wheel-drive choices under $6,000 than any other American automobile manufacturer.

Ease and economy of maintenance.
• Plymouth front-wheel-drive K-cars with the standard 2.2 liter Trans-4 engine incorporate ease-of-maintenance features, so you'll probably find your service bills lower than for your previously-owned vehicle. • Most routine maintenance can easily be done by the driveway mechanic.

Electronic fuel control system.
• Provides smooth engine performance during warm-up. • Contributes to fuel economy. • Promotes good acceleration. • Improves engine performance and smoothness throughout the engine speed range. • It helps control engine emissions—even before they leave the engine.

1980 Plymouth Horizon with front-wheel drive has terrific gasoline mileage ratings* and more passenger and cargo space than Pinto Runabout or Chevette (based on EPA interior volume index.)

Our special priced 1980 Plymouth Horizon has front bucket seats, 4-speed manual transmission, two-barrel, 4-cylinder 1.7 liter overhead cam engine, remote control mirror, air conditioner, wheel trim rings and white stripe, steel-belted radial tires.

Bulldog Attacks Parked Vehicle

WATSONVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — The suspect refused to explain the motive for the crime.

A young pit bulldog was taken into custody after commiting assault and battery on a parked car, authorities said recently.

The victim, a brown Chevrolet Impala, suffered chrome damage, teeth marks and blood stains, according to police reports.

The assailant, a male pit bulldog about 2 years old, "just went crazy," a witness said, wildly attacking the driver's side of the unoccupied car.

Poundmaster Jimmy Hernandez took the suspect into custody and set "bail" at $35.

Owner Patricia Johnson said she would pay any "reasonable" damages.

Successful Aid Request Gives City Schools Hope

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Recent demands by school districts involved in mandatory desegregation for court-ordered state aid provides a glimmer of hope for Lubbock taxpayers now shouldering integration costs, the local school attorney said Thursday.

Lubbock school attorney Tom Johnson said a request for state aid that was sought and won Thursday through federal court by Columbus, Ohio, school officials certainly "could happen here."

He added that a victory by Austin school officials seeking a similar desegregation cost sharing plan will set the ball rolling for other requests throughout Texas and boost the chances of success for districts like Lubbock.

He cautioned, however, that he is not familiar with the details of either the Austin or Columbus cases and that a high court review of the Ohio situation probably will be forthcoming before the issue is resolved.

A federal judge ordered the Ohio Board of Education to share equally the expenses of integrating Columbus schools with the local school district. U.S. District Judge Robert M. Duncan ruled that Ohio was aware of the segregation in Columbus and was negligible in failing to investigate the matter.

Parties involved in Lubbock's desegregation case believed that the 1979 Supreme Court ruling in the Columbus and Dayton, Ohio, integration cases would be a key factor in the decision made by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in the local case.

Additonally, Austin school officials recently have filed a motion in federal court asking that the state of Texas absorb almost $23 million they estimate has been spent in integrating Austin schools during the last 10 years.

Austin school attorney Bill Bingham said the motion basically is for any expenses incurred by the district that would not have been necessary if desegregation had not been ordered, such as capital outlay for buses, personnel, buildings, additions and renovation, the cost of fuel and legal expenses.

Bingham said that all lawsuits "are unique enough that they are not necessarily controlled" by decisions in other cases, but admitted that the Columbus ruling "would help" the Austin case.

Should Lubbock school officials elect to seek some help from the state, Texas could be presented for a bill that includes $800,000 for buses, $300,000 per year for bus operating costs and about $4.9 million that has been eroded so far from the schools' 1977 bond program stalled by integration proceedings.

Ronnie Gooch, assistant superintendent for business affairs, said those figures are extremely rough, but added that other expenses such as legal fees and the cost for extra personnel and equipment could be added as well as about $200,000 for renovation and partial costs of a $400,000 bus maintenance facility.

But Johnson said there are some questions that must be answered and obstacles to overcome before taxpayers can start holding out their hands. The attorney noted that although the federal court has spoken in Ohio, the state probably will appeal, adding that the case probably will end up at the Supreme Court level.

And other northern school districts have operated under a different form of segregation so that the court ruling might not apply in southern schools.

He explained that northern schools did not function under de jure or "by law" segregation as did districts, like Lubbock's, in the South. Therefore, he said, the judge might have decided the state should help pick up the integration tab because the state was negligent in not correcting a situation that existed as a matter of fact, not law.

Johnson said the ruling might not hold up in Lubbock, where segregation was required by law. But, he also acknowledged, Texas could be judged as negligent in not trying to change that law.

Gilbert Conoley, head of Technical Assistance for the Texas Education Agency, said Thursday that the impact of the Columbus ruling conceivably could filter into Texas.

GRANT'S DEMISE

In 1884 the collapse of the Grant & Ward investment house left ex-President Ulysses S. Grant penniless. He then began his "Personal Memoirs," writing while ill of cancer and completing them four days before his death on July 23, 1885. Grant was buried in a tomb on Riverside Drive, N.Y., where his wife also lies.

Lubbock Receives Federal Grant To Purchase Additional Buses

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock officials received word Thursday that the city has been awarded a $2.1 million federal grant for the purchase of 16 new advanced design buses and land to serve as a Citibus parking facility.

The Department of Transportation grant, which still must be accepted by the City Council, requires matching funds of around $351,500 from the state and nearly $190,000 from the city.

"I think it's great that we'll get the grant," Mayor Bill McAlister said, adding that escalating costs for gasoline are increasing the need for a bus system here.

McAlister said that he could not speak for the entire council but that he expects council members to take a favorable look at the grant.

The council approved the Transit Department's application for the federal grant funds last June following a public hearing to determine whether the city should remain in the bus business.

At that hearing, however, council members Jack Brown and Joan Baker attempted to delay the grant application. Mrs. Baker suggested that a further study be made to determine how many new buses were actually needed.

Brown argued that the council had not been provided sufficient financial information to determine what the Citibus system is costing.

But McAlister noted that the city has received "great reaction" to the 18 diesel-powered buses put into service here in September. The grant money will be used to purchase the same type of buses, he said.

McAlister said he is optimistic about the council accepting the federal grant. "I'd be surprised if the council goes the other way," he added.

Sandy Stuart, city transit analyst, said the proposed 16 new buses would replace the smaller gasoline-powered Grumman buses which already are presenting serious maintenance problems.

Bought in 1976, the Grumman buses have a five-year, 200,000-mile life expectancy, Miss Stuart said. "All of the Grummans have outlived their life expectancy and will have over 200,000 miles on them by the time they are replaced," she said.

"They (the Grumman buses) really are becoming a big maintenance problem," Miss Stuaart noted. "They're just like a car that has too many miles on it."

Miss Stuart said the Grumman model buses used here are no longer manufactured, making it difficult for the city to order parts for them.

The proposed new buses are manufactured by the General Motors Corp. Each bus will have room for 35 passengers and will be equipped with a lift for the handicapped, Miss Stuart said.

If the council accepts the grant money, she said the earliest date the buses could be ordered would be sometime in March. She said the order would request a 45-week delivery date on the buses.

"We're hoping, if everything goes smoothly, they will be received in January of 1982," Miss Stuart said.

Plans call for all 16 buses to be used strictly on city routes, she said. Eight of the larger buses received in September are being used on Tech routes.

In addition to buying buses, the grant funds would be used to purchase a vacant lot northwest of 8th Street and Avenue H.

Miss Stuart said the lot being considered is adjacent to the old Pollard Ford building that is being remodeled by the city for use as a transit facility. The lot would be used for parking the new buses, she explained.

She said city transit officials will not order the new buses or purchase the lot until after the council members have taken action on the federal grant.

McAlister said the grant will appear on a council agenda in the near future.

Dockworker Dies From Explosion Injuries

CORPUS CHRISTI (UPI) — A dockworker who was burned over 90 percent of his body in a fire and explosion at Southwestern Refinery died early today.

Dwayne Eckles, 47, of Corpus Christi, died about 12:15 a.m., said a Corpus Christi Memorial Medical Burn Center spokeswoman said. He had been listed in critical condition from severe burns received when an explosion turned three gasoline storage tanks into an inferno early Thursday.

A truck driver, John Fernandez, 44, of Rosharon, also injured in the fire and explosion, was in fair condition at the same hospital with burns on his hands and face.

When the first fire broke out on a loading dock, Eckles went to a shack to report it. While he was talking to fire officials, an explosion ripped through the shack.

Southwestern Vice President H.R. Sager said the fire apparently was caused by gas leaks. Fire Chief Ralph Rogers said it probably would be two to three days before authorities could complete their investigation and announce their findings.

The fire started in the loading area of the waterfront refinery about 4 a.m. and before 125 firefighers could bring the blaze under control four hours later, the plant and a nearby neighborhood were rocked by three explosions among the tanks.

The initial blaze touched off the explosions and fire among two nearby 80,000-gallon storage tanks and a 60,000-gallon tank. The blast showered the area with debris, destroyed a pickup, two small buildings and damaged a tanker truck parked at the dock, Rogers said.

After the first wave of explosions, firefighters moved in and used water and foam to cool the flaming tanks and prevent five other adjacent tanks from going up.

Another blast occurred in one of the flaming tanks about 7:30 a.m. Flames shot 250 feet high and the blast raised the lid of the tank, forcing firefighers and plant employees to back away from it.

Gibson said the fires were controlled by pumping gasoline from the tanks and pouring on foam and water to cool them. Rogers said a great amount of the fuel in the full tanks was salvaged by the pumping operation conducted by refinery workers.

"But it looks like one of the tanks was destroyed, the other severely damaged and the other has minor damage," the chief said.

Gibson said the fire department ordered no evacuation of the residential areas, but many people left their homes after the first blast. Included in the evacuation area was an elementary school that was unoccupied at the time.

Insurance Group Urges Rate Change

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Insurance should reduce the amount of profit built into automobile insurance rates, says the president of the National Insurance Consumer Organization.

Robert Hunter testified Thursday at a hearing the board called to help decide how insurance companies' investment income should be considered in setting rates.

He recommended direct use of income from investing policyholder premiums to reduce rates.

"The status quo in Texas is that the rates that are filed imply excess profits, but the rates should imply reasonable profits," Hunter said.

Most rating formulas used by the board include five cents of each premium dollar for before-taxes profit.

Hunter said a profit of 5 percent of sales "is excessive" because companies get still more money from investments.

Hunter urged the board to seek additional advice from outside the insurance industry. Meanwhile, he said, the board should allow a total profit — counting investment income — of 4 percent to 5 percent of sales on auto insurance.

"You shouldn't be afraid of 'minus' underwriting profits because the investment income will be there," Hunter said.

Underwriting profits are those made from insurance alone, not counting investments.

Board member Lyndon Olson Jr. said he was "not real sure I want the consuming public picking up the investment losses of the insurance industry" in bad economic years.

Hunter replied that capital gains and losses — such as a company would sustain on the stock market — should not be considered.

"Investment income is always positive. ... There are ways to make sure that investment returns are reflected in a way that gives smart investors a profit on their money but not jack up rates if the stock market tumbles," he said.

Another witness, Paul Kerr of Temple, president of American Desk Manufacturing Co., urged the board to consider investment income when it sets workers' compensation rates.

He said workers' compensation rates could be reduced 7 percent to 10 percent if this was done.

Gas Utility, RRC Seeking Way To Help Community

DAISETTA (UPI) — A southeast Texas gas utility and the Railroad Commission — the agency that pronounced Daisetta's crumbling gas lines unsafe, leaving 12 homes without gas for several days — are trying to find a way to help bail the tiny community out of its gas system problems.

Meanwhile, State District Judge W.G. Woods of Liberty scheduled a hearing for 10 a.m. today to decide whether to extend his injunction against last Friday's Railroad Commission order to shut down the city-operated gas system.

Texas Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple visited Daisetta Thursday to meet Mayor Harold McCann and tell him the commission's order was intended to help, not harass, the 1,200 citizens by protecting them from a hazard.

He promised to help McCann in his search for federal aid — either a Farmers Home Administration loan or a Housing and Urban Development grant — to finance the $489,000 cost of replacing the system.

The mayor also talked to the staffs of Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, and Sen. John Tower, R-Texas. Entex Inc. of Houston sent personnel to Daisetta.

McCann said he spent three hours with two representatives of Entex. He said he proposed that they consider taking over the system and they indicated Entex wanted to help, but was reluctant to take over gas delivery in Daisetta.

An Entex spokesman said the company expected its help might take the form of engineering or construction services rather than takeover of the system. But McCann said the matter was left open for discussion.

The latest controvery began when city officials called in Railroad Commission inspectors to locate the source of gas leaking into sewers. The inspectors found a 1,500-foot section of pipe faulty and suggested its replacement.

The city began replacing the pipe Dec. 31, but the abandonment of the old section of pipe lowered pressure in about one-fourth of the city. The commission shutdown order resulted from the loss of pressure.

NFL To Determine Super Bowl Berths

By The Associated Press

The National Football League season will end in two days for all but two teams, and then begins the two-week wait for Super Bowl XV on Jan. 25 in New Orleans.

The wild-card Dallas Cowboys and East Divison champion Philadelphia Eagles will decide the National Conference title. They are scheduled for a noon kickoff Sunday in Philadelphia.

The wild-card Oakland Raiders and San Diego Chargers, winners in the West, begin their American Conference championship game at 4 p.m. in San Diego.

The Cowboys, coming off a 30-27 victory over NFC West champion Atlanta in the division playoffs, are one-point favorites to repeat as the only wild-card team ever in the Super Bowl.

San Diego, meanwhile, is a four-point favorite to end the Cinderella season of Oakland's Jim Plunkett, who became the Raiders' starting quarterback after Dan Pastorini broke his leg.

Dallas, guided by quarterback Danny White, appears to have its offense flying. The Cowboys have scored 30 or more points in their past three games, including a 35-27 victory over the Eagles in the final game of the regular season.

"White has come a long way, and they have those great receivers and offensive line," Eagles' linebacker Frank LeMaster said of the Cowboys. "I'm concerned about that, but I'm not going to go into the game concerned. We can play defense, too, you know."

Several Eagles' players are mending from injuries, and a few of them won't mend in time for the conference title game.

Wide receiver Charlie Smith, with 47 receptions on the year, broke his jaw against the Cowboys, and backup Scott Fitzkee rebroke his foot in the Eagles' 31-16 playoff victory last Saturday over Minnesota.

The only healthy flanker is rookie Rodney Parker, and even tight end Keith Krepfle has been slowed by minor knee surgery late in the season.

Also on the mend is Eagles' running back Wilbert Montgomery, who sustained head, thigh and knee injuries against the Vikings.

The Oakland-San Diego tilt, meanwhile, shapes up to be an aerial show with the Raiders' Plunkett having his best season in the NFL and the league's most prolific passer, Dan Fouts, throwing for San Diego.

"Week after week, someone has come up with big plays when we needed them," the 33-year-old Plunkett said. "If we execute well, there's no telling how many points we can score Sunday."

Plunkett is in his 10th season in the NFL, but he had not started a game previous to this season since 1977. "If you play football long enough, I guess something good is going to happen," Plunkett says.

However, before Plunkett and the Raiders can accomplish the ultimate NFL "good," a Super Bowl victory, they must stop Fouts. The Chargers quarterback is coming off his second consecutive 4,000-yard passing season.

Phillips Fixes Mood On TV Show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — By Bum Phillips' reckoning, there are two kinds of coaches: "Them that's been fired and them that's gonna get fired."

Phillips is currently the former with the Houston Oilers, and, hopefully, the latter — meaning employed — with the New Orleans Saints.

On a trip to Los Angeles to appear on the "Tonight" show with Johnny Carson Thursday, Phillips was in a light-hearted mood during the taping.

In an interview earlier in the NBC studios, however, he was an angry man.

"I'm just mad at all this stuff," said Phillips, who was fired as the Oilers' head coach on Dec. 31 and accused of tampering with Houston assistants earlier this week. "It's ridiculous."

Things could be brighter soon for Phillips, described by Saints' owner John Mecom, Jr., as his "heads-on favorite" for the vacant coaching job at New Orleans. The two met for long periods Tuesday and Wednesday, but both said there is no firm commitment.

"I haven't gotten to the point with New Orleans of them setting conditions for hiring me," said Phillips. "I know they (the Saints) have some more people to talk to. There's no big hurry. We don't have any games to play."

Meanwhile in Houston, Oilers' Ladd Herzeg said Thursday he will pursue tampering charges against Phillips and seek draft choices from the Saints if any Houston assistant coaches accept jobs in New Orleans.

Phillips said the charges of tampering were "a lot of bull," adding "if having dinner with the son you've raised for 34 years or visiting with a friend you've worked with for seven years is tampering, then that's just ridiculous."

Phillips referred to his son Wade, the Oilers' defensive line coach who is the only Houston assistant who has said flatly that he wants to leave.

"It would really be dumb of me to offer somebody a job when I don't have one myself," said the elder Phillips.

Phillips said he was able to deal with his firing better than with the charges of tampering.

"I can live with being fired," he said. "But the last three or four days, all this stuff has really made me mad."

At one point during the interview, Phillips said, "I better settle down; I don't want to be this mad when I go on the show."

Phillips, whose firing is becoming a sort of sports cause celebre, since he took the Oilers to three playoffs, was a big hit with the studio audience when he did go on the show.

Ushered on to the stage by strains of "Way Down Yonder in New Orleans," Phillips joked with Carson, "I usually take my wife with me on trips because she's too ugly to kiss good-bye."

City Cagers Ready To Inflate Basketballs

All five of the city's boys' teams and two of the girls' squads will be in action tonight in local basketball contests.

Running down the boys' schedule, Coronado is at Levelland, Dunbar is at Dimmitt, Estacado is at Midland, Lubbock hosts Palo Duro and Monterey hosts Odessa. In girls' games, Dunbar travels to Dimmitt and Estacado hosts Levelland.

All three of the city's Class 5A boys' teams will be playing opponents they've yet to play this season, but in two of the cases, they've probably read plenty.

Lubbock's Westerners host Palo Duro in one game. The Dons just defeated Monterey 59-48 Tuesday night to boost their record to 11-4. The main reason? 6-5 Joel Washington, who is leading the area 5A schools in both scoring and rebounding with 20.1 and 13.3 marks, respectively.

But the LHS bunch has a big man of its own. Kirk Cole is just a tad shorter at 6-4, and his stats aren't far behind Washington's either.

With Cole scoring 16.9 points per game and pulling down an average of 10.7 rebounds, Lubbock High has managed to go to 8-11 so far this season.

Coronado is the other city team facing a much-talked about big man. The Mustangs will have to fend off 6-8 Dwight Phillips, who is averaging 20.6 points and an incredible 22.2 rebounds a game.

Coronado, now 10-10 on the season, can't counter with an outstanding big man but the Mustangs have had good success alternating 6-6 Mark Sobosle and 6-5 John Lord. Sobosle is averaging 8.4 rebounds a game.

Most of the Mustang scoring is coming from guard Robby Garner and forward Cody Love. Garner, a 5-11 senior, is averaging 12.5 points a game while Love, a 6-2 junior, is leading the club with 12.7

In the other game involving a city Class 5A boys' team, Monterey hits the road south to face Odessa. The Plainsmen, now 14-6, are still recovering from last Tuesday night's loss to Palo Duro that snapped a string in which they'd won six of their last seven games, dating back to Dec. 12.

The Plainsmen are paced by 6-7 post Ian Hyslop, a 19.3-point per game scorer who is also pulling down 8.3 rebounds a game. In addition, 6-3 forward Gary Hodges is scoring 11.9 points a game.

The Estacado girls' squad entertains Levelland in the only district game among the city's 4A teams. The Matadors, 0-1 in district and 11-7 overall, meet the Lobos, 1-1 and 9-8, at 7:30 p.m.

Estacado, playing its first district game since Dec. 18, may be without the services of senior 5-foot-11 post Maxine Walker, Mat coach Mary Ann Cobb said. Miss Walker re-sprained her left ankle Tuesday against Monterey.

"Hopefully we'll have everybody well. Maxine helps keep the team together with her experience and its going to hurt us if she's not able to play," Miss Cobb said.

Miss Walker is averaging 8.9 points and 9.7 rebounds per game.

The Estacado boys' squad travels south to face Midland High, 17-3 and the state's No. 2 ranked team. The Matadors, 10-8, played host to Midland Tuesday and lost 83-71.

"We're going to try and handle their press better this time," Mat coach J.J. Wood said. Midland's full-court pressure defense for the entire game helped force 31 Matador turnovers when the teams met in the Estacado gym.

Both Dunbar squads travel to Dimmitt to take on the 3A powerhouse Bobcats. The Dunbar girls are 10-6 and face their Dimmitt counterparts, 11-7, at 6 p.m.. The Panther boys' squad, 5-12, takes on the 18-2 Bobcats at 8 p.m.

Both Christ the King teams will be on the road today, the girls playing at Lamesa at 7:30 p.m. and the boys playing at Lorenzo at 5:30 p.m.

Tech Hires Mike Mock

Mike Mock, former Texas Tech All-Southwest Conference linebacker, was named the Red Raiders' weight coach Thursday and will assume his duties immediately.

Mock, 25, will be in charge of Tech's off-season weight program and will work with all Raider athletes in improving their strength and conditioning. He replaces Russ Polhemus, who resigned in late November.

The New York Jets drafted Mock in the eighth round following the 1977 season. He played one year at outside linebacker and punter for the Jets before returning to Tech and earning a degree in finance and real estate.

Texas Football named Mock the SWC's best linebacker following his senior year, when he was a consensus All-SWC choice after playing in every game for three years at outside linebacker.

Carmichael Expects To Find Clogged Pass Routes

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Sunday could be the toughest day in Harold Carmichael's professional football career.

The 6-foot-8 Carmichael will be Philadelphia's only regular wide receiver when the Eagles meet the Dallas Cowboys in the National Football Conference championship game Sunday.

Carmichael, one of the National Football League's best receivers since he became a starter in 1973, is certain to draw a lot of attention from the Dallas secondary.

The Eagles are crippled at wide receiver with Charley Smith and Scott Fitzkee sidelined because of injuries. Rodney Parker, an inexperienced free agent, will team with Carmichael.

Carmichael expects to be at least double-teamed on every passing down. He's used to that type of defense, but realizes it will be worse Sunday.

Eagles' coach Dick Vermeil candidly admits that if Carmichael doesn't have a big game in this battle for a spot in Super Bowl XV, the Eagles won't win.

"I'm just going to get ready and prepare myself. That's all I can do," said Carmichael at this Florida training site where the Eagles came to escape the snow and cold of Philadelphia.

"I'm hopeful that Parker can step in and do a fine job. In fact, I know he will," Carmichael said. "We've got to go now."

Carmichael looks two ways at the constant double-team defense he faces.

'It can be frustrating trying to catch passes with a couple of people draped all over you. Then, it's a big compliment. It's a challenge to beat that double coverage."

Carmichael, with 48 receptions for 815 yards and nine touchdowns, was second to Smith among Eagles' receivers this season. The extra attention to Carmichael left Smith open on many plays.

Carmichael feels Dallas has a young secondary and the Eagles should be able to complete some deep patterns. He's concerned about veterans Charlie Waters and Benny Barnes, but thinks the rest of the Cowboys' pass defense is vulnerable.

This especially is a big game for Carmichael, one of 10 veterans who have struggled through the Eagles' rebuilding program.

"We've come down a long road, clawed and scratched," he recalled. "I know we can win. I don't even want to talk about if we lose."

Carmichael says he has a vivid recollection of all the bad years.

"I've lived with the thought that every year, regardless of the record, we were reaching for this point, a real shot at the Super Bowl," he said.

SKATE COACH DIES

SPECTATING — Ten-year-old Eddie Breunig watches his uncle and Dallas Cowboy Bob Breunig lift weights Thursday in Dallas. Breunig, who led Dallas in tackles the past three seasons, will be part of the defense Sunday when the Cowboys meet Philadelphia for the NFC title. (AP Laserphoto)

Eagles To Resume Brown's Test

DALLAS (AP) — There are many tempting targets for a quarterback attacking the young Dallas Cowboy secondary, but now there's a bright new bullseye at linebacker to test.

Atlanta quarterback Steve Bartkowski greeted the newcomer, linebacker Guy Brown, by throwing a touchdown pass in his area during the Falcons' recent 30-27 playoff loss to the Cowboys.

The Cowboys are certain Brown, who is replacing the injured Mike Hegman at strongside linebacker, will get a quick challenge Sunday from Philadelphia Eagle quarterback Ron Jaworski in the National Conference title game.

"Sure, the Eagles will come at him," said Dallas linebacker coach Jerry Tubbs. "But he played tough against Atlanta. He got beat on two passes but graded 100 percent against the run. I thought he had a pretty good game. I thought he passed with flying colors."

Hegman was injured in Dallas' final regular-season game, a 35-27 victory over the Eagles. He was hurt chasing down a fumbled forward lateral after an interception, dislocating his elbow.

Brown is a fourth-year player from the University of Houston who has spent most of his career on the bench. He has tremendous speed but has always been hampered by nagging injuries.

"Now's the time for the real pros to come to the front," said Dallas coach Tom Landry. "Now is when Guy shows what he's got."

The 6-foot-4, 222-pound Brown admitted he was under siege by the butterflies when the playoff game with the Falcons started.

"The longer the game went the more comfortable I felt," said Brown. "I felt like I always had the physical equipment to play this game. Now I believe I have grown a lot mentally."

The Cowboys were to leave Dallas at 4:30 p.m. today after practice. Dallas has scheduled a workout in Veterans Stadium Saturday.

Jim Plunkett Extends Career, Raider Goal

OAKLAND (AP) — Jim Plunkett finally landed in the right place at the right time, and the next stop for the rejuvenated quarterback could be Super Bowl XV.

"If you play football long enough, I guess, something good is going to happen," Plunkett said as the Oakland Raiders prepared for Sunday's American Football Conference title game in San Diego, where victory would mean a third trip to the Super Bowl for the team.

He has two playoff victories behind him, one more than Chargers' quarterback Dan Fouts. The Raiders made the playoffs as an AFC wild-card team and have advanced by beating the Houston Oilers and Cleveland Browns.

The 33-year-old Plunkett never came close to the Super Bowl in his first nine National Football League seasons. He was with just one winning team, the 1976 San Francisco 49ers, before signing with the Raiders as a free agent in 1978.

"At New England, after Chuck Fairbanks got there, the Patriots were coming on fast, but then injuries got us," recalled Plunkett, quarterback for the 1974 team which finished 7-7 and one of the injury victims in 1975 when the Pats went 3-11.

In 1976, the former Heisman Trophy winner from Stanford was traded to the 49ers, who posted their first winning record in four years by finishing 8-6 under first-year coach Monte Clark.

"We felt we'd be even better the next year, and I think we would have if Monte had stayed," said Plunkett, recalling the firing of Clark after the 49ers changed ownership in early 1977.

They went 5-9 in 1977, and Plunkett was waived during 1978 pre-season training camp. The Raiders signed him but he didn't throw a pass in an NFL game, and last year he threw just 15 as backup to Ken Stabler.

Plunkett made good showings in exhibition games last summer, but was No.2 behind Dan Pastorini, the quarterback acquired when Stabler was traded to Houston. Rookie Marc Wilson appeared to be the Raiders' quarterback of the future, and veteran Plunkett admitted he wouldn't mind being traded.

His first pass this season was for a dramatic touchdown, sending a Sept. 14 game at San Diego into overtime. But Pastorini, who had been shaken up, returned for the overtime. The Raiders lost 30-24.

Three weeks later, Pastorini suffered a broken leg and Plunkett took over. In his first start since 1977, he completed 11 of 14 passes in a 38-24 victory over the Chargers.

His statistics are nothing fancy compared to those of Fouts, who has back-to-back 4,000-yard seasons. But like the Raiders' offense as a whole, Plunkett has usually come through when necessary.

"Week after week, someone has come up with big plays when we needed them," Plunkett says. "If we execute well, there's no telling how many points we can score Sunday."

AFC MAYORS WAGER

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A home-cooked meal and a ceremonial tree are at stake Sunday for the mayors of San Diego and Oakland when their National Football League teams battle for a Super Bowl berth. San Diego mayor Pete Wilson has agreed to cook a Mexican meal for Oakland mayor Lionel Wilson if the Chargers lose. As part of the deal, he would plant an avocado tree in Oakland's Lakeside Park. If Oakland loses, Lionel Wilson has to provide the San Diego mayor with a soulfood dinner and a young oak tree to be planted in Balboa Park.

College Football Elite To Fight NCAA Proposal

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The College Football Association, which is to say the Alabamas, Oklahomas and Notre Dames, is scared to death it will pass.

Charles E. Young, chancellor of the UCLA, says it must pass because "it simply makes sense."

The entire Division I membership of the NCAA, 292 colleges and universities, will vote next week on a proposal to base athletic scholarships on "need," or the financial condition of a young man's family.

"I am convinced that the nation's colleges and universities no longer can afford the luxury of awarding financial aid on any other basis than that of need," says Young.

It's not a new idea. The last time it was proposed at an NCAA convention, in 1976, it failed by only seven votes. And as athletic administrators and college presidents began gathering here for the NCAA's 75th conclave, most observers agreed it would again be too close to call.

Leading the fight against "need" is the CFA, the 61-member group organized six years ago to protect the interests of big-time football schools.

"To a large degree, we believe it is basically unfair," said Charles M. Neinas, CFA executive director. "It's unfair on the basis of being unable to assist someone who not only contributes to his particular sport but to the institution as a whole. Plus, there is an unfairness in the system itself in terms of evaluating an individual's need. I don't know all the ramifications, but it would be very difficult to administer where you have an intense recruiting situation. There are those who are opposed philosophically. And there are those who are in favor of it philosophically, but just don't feel it would be workable."

The plan's best chance of passage stems from its sponsor, the powerful NCAA Council, the organization's policy-making board. The whole idea, of course, is to save money in these times of economic crisis in athletic departments.

"Obviously, need is not a panacea for all the economic ailments faced by intercollegiate athletics," said Young. "But it has a great deal of merit."

Fred C. Davison, president of the University of Georgia, says the need plan will, ultimately, damage the morale of players.

"Consider the morale of a star athlete from a family judged to be affluent," he said. "He or she receives no financial aid while the third-stringer who performs not nearly at the same level, but is considered to have financial need, receives full financial aid. The star is bringing acclaim and perhaps financial support to the institution, but is penalized."

Although the CFA is working furiously behind the scenes in an effort to stop the proposal, it perhaps will have little clout. If every CFA school votes as a block against it, that would represent only 22.6 percent of the total Division I votes.

"I can't judge if it will pass," said Neinas, "because I have no way of knowing how institutions which do not have football may vote."

NCAA Penalizes Oregon State

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — Oregon State University has been placed on a one-year probation by the NCAA Committee on Infractions because of violations in its intercollegiate football program, officials said.

In a statement released today, the NCAA said the probation became effective Jan. 2.

Oregon State's reprimand came after officials found that at least two former assistant football coaches and two student-athletes had been involved in activities between 1977 and 1980 such as accepting unearned credit from extension courses and altering college transcripts to establish athletic eligibility.

The NCAA's latest action against the school supplements sanctions against the team that were imposed in August 1980 by the Pacific 10 Conference. During the probationary period, the school will be able to participate in a bowl game and in NCAA-controlled football telecasts during the 1981-82 academic year.

Previous sanctions included a public reprimand, ineligibility for any football bowl game and the Pac-10 football championship during the 1980-81 academic year and forfeiture of all games won during the 1977 and 1979 football seasons in which any ineligible athlete competed.

"Although the violations in this case are serious, they involve only two student-athletes in separate academic years," said Charles Alan Wright, chairman of the Infractions Committee.

"Because the violations are isolated, and because of those that were imposed upon the university by its conference, the committee determined that no more severe penalty was required," he added.

Monterey Girls Pound Sandies

The Monterey Plainsmen, ranked No. 2 in the state Class 5A girls' basketball poll, handed No. 15 Amarillo High a decisive defeat Thursday night, whipping the Sandies 77-63.

Monterey, now 18-1 on the year, climbed to a 20-9 first-period advantage and never looked back.

Leading MHS was Kamie Ethridge with 33 points, including 13 field goals. Andrea Moore and Tracey Muehlbrad were the only other MHS girls in double figures, tallying 11 and 10 respectively. Kriss Ethridge had nine.

For Amarillo, which now stands 12-6 on the season, Carmen Wynn scored 23, Liz Jones 14 and Cindy Marten and Felicia Cotton 10 each.

"That's probably the best game we've ever played in that gym, here at home," said coach Tim Tasker.

"I'll tell you why — two reasons. First, Amarillo is ranked right up there in the top 15 and they just got done beating Plainview by two the other night.

"And second, Kriss Ethridge got in foul trouble early and sat on the bench for two quarters. That's a good sign, anytime you can go in and hang on to your lead with one of your stars on the bench.

"Kamie did everything but coach the team. She had eight steals, six rebounds, seven assists and of course the 33 points. And Molly Hasie got eight rebounds. That's something we haven't been doing very well lately."

Kyle Rote Jr. Advocates Soccer, Religious Belief

By RICHARD DAY
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

"I'd like my kid — he or she — to be just like Kyle Rote Jr."

It's an idea that has flashed through the mind of many a parent.

The three-time Superstars Competition winner, professional soccer player, television commentator and all-around nice guy was in Lubbock Thursday — not to just take advantage of the January Clearance Sale at Hollon's Home Furnishings, but to spread the word of God, conduct three soccer clinics and see his old high school buddy, James Hollon.

It was Rote's first visit to Lubbock since 1975. That's when he and his former Dallas Tornado teammates played an exhibition game against Texas Tech.

"The main thing I remember about that visit was that it was so cold — about 10 degrees with the wind-chill factor, and about 5,000 people still turned out to watch," Rote recalls. "It was then I realized that youth soccer in this area was growing and had great potential to grow even more."

Rote added that he expected to see a reflection of that growth when he conducted his four clinics that night. He was also anxious to see the skill level of the kids who attended the Tornado clinics five years ago.

Rote, like former Tornado teammate Bobby Moffatt, who has been conducting clinics in West Texas for several years, feels a responsibility to be an ambassador for soccer. "Many Toronado players from the early '70s, including Bobby and myself, have been going out to spread soccer for years," Rote said. "We're anxious to sell and go overboard with the publication of our sport.

"There are a lot of youth leagues in Lubbock, but there are also women's leagues. I remember one time before they were formed, a woman asked me about women playing soccer. I told her it was a good way to lose weight. A way to lose weight was all she needed to hear — she was all for the idea. You get out in this Texas heat and run through an entire game and you're sure to lose some weight."

Rote is happy that there are leagues for the older generation, because he believes it's important for the whole family to be involved in something — together. "I like to emphasize that fact — the building up of the family and relationships when I'm promoting soccer" he said. "When the mother goes out to see her son play Saturday morning, she can't yell too loudly at him because she knows he will be watching her with that same chance Tuesday night.

"However, the problem of the little-league complex sometimes exists unless the family is completely unified in the sport. When that happens, it can work in the opposite direction. Instead of unifying, it divides the family."

Rote is one of the top performers in the North American Soccer League. He's the only native American to lead the league in scoring, even though he didn't start playing the sport until he was 17. He was a star in football, basketball and baseball at Highland Park High School and was named to the all-state football team in 1968.

Following high school, he went to Oklahoma State on a football scholarship. New Tech coach Jerry Moore, then an assistant at SMU, tried to keep Rote in Dallas, but Rote opted for the Cowboys. Rote says that's probably the only thing Moore probably remembers him for.

While at OSU, Rote played soccer in the offseason, but only as a conditioner. "After three summers of soccer, I knew I had more God-given ability in soccer than in football," he said. "It was funny, though. I grew up with a football. I never had a teddy bear. As I child, I used to throw a football up in the air before I went to sleep at night."

Rote grew up with football because his father, Kyle Rote, Sr., was a future Hall of Famer for the New York Giants. When his son chose soccer over football, rumor has it that Rote, Sr., didn't like it one little bit. But Kyle Jr., says his father never said a discouraging word about his decision.

"My father always taught me to be a balanced individual," Rote says. "He loved me whether I was a good athlete or not, and no matter what sport I played.

"Whatever sport was in season was my favorite when I was in high school. I already had enough athletic influence from my father so it didn't matter what sport I played — I liked it. There were two things my father did that showed me you have to be balanced. I didn't understand them then, but now I'm thankful he did them.

"He never saw me play any sports until my last game of high school. It was hard to accept because everybody else's parents were there, but he did it for a purpose. It really bothered me that he didn't come to watch me perform, but now I understand. By not being there, he let me be on my own. Another thing he did was to introduce me to the guys who were cut from the team to show me there were going to be bad times as well. My dad and I love each other as father and son, but we're friends as well."

When Rote was at OSU, he says he didn't have the discipline to do as well as he wanted to in academics. After a couple of years there, Rote transferred to Sewanee University in Tennessee to play soccer. Then, after his college career was over, Rote decided to combine a professional soccer career with law school when he was drafted by the Dallas Tornado of the NASL.

Just like his father had taught him, Rote knew he needed to be balanced. "I knew I would need something to fall back on some day. After law school, I knew I wouldn't have to play soccer the rest of my life in order to make it.

"That's what I try to teach the kids in my clinics. I tell them they must consider the other abilities they have as well as their athletic talents."

Rote practices what he preaches in his everyday life, using his professional athlete's status to preach God's word. And, unlike most people who earn the majority of their living from athletics, Rote preaches that sports is not a god. He says there is life after a professional career.

Rote took this past season off to help cover the Olympics for the ABC Television Network. He also went to India to work with Mother Teresa, a Nobel Prize winner, on a study of world hunger.

"That experience (in India) had a big impact on my life," Rote said. "It made me appreciate America and my Christian beliefs more. The Indians believe in suffering."

Rote has a contract to play for the Houston Hurricane for the next two seasons, but he believes the franchise will "dismantle" before then. The team has drawn poorly, something Rote blames on the players and management. He calls it "negligence" on their part.

As the Tornado's leading career scorer, Rote was one of the most popular athletes in Dallas — but only in Big D.

Then came the Roone Arledge's brainchild called "The Superstars," and Rote burst onto the national sports scene by becoming the only athlete winning the competition three times. "I really enjoyed the Superstars competition," Rote said. "The money was nice and being able to make Howard Cosell speechless was very gratifying, but the exposure I got from that opened the door for me to glorify God. My prayer before the competition began was to honor God through my performance whether I finished first or last."

Rote responded with three first places. After winning the competition, proving he was one of the best athletes in the world, Rote was looked upon as a "special" professional athlete. But, he says, "The only reason I'm special is because God loves me. God loves us all, so we're all special. I don't think I'm any better than anybody else."

Not only does Rote keep his balance between being a pro athlete and a sportscaster, but he's balanced between the man in the public eye and the everyday citizen.

The main thing in Rote's life, what he looks out for most, is his family. He knows of the problems of being important, in the public eye, but he looks at himself as average. "You have to look at yourself as average or you'll get into attitude problems. And after all, we're all the same in God's eyes — all of us are his children."

Every Friday night of the offseason, Rote can be seen on the Soccer Game of the Week, a production of the U.S.A. Cable Network, a division of Madison Square Garden Sports. That's just his way of keeping other opportunities open and following the teachings of dear old dad, who said to keep that delicate balance.

Bradshaw Threatens To Retire

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Terry Bradshaw, talking retirement again, says he may leave the Pittsburgh Steelers for a starring role in a possible NBC television series called "Short Trackers."

"But you're talking about a lot of ifs," the 32-year-old quarterback said Thursday night from Las Vegas in a phone interview with television station KDKA in Pittsburgh.

Bradshaw, who also discussed possible retirement last winter, said he'd had discussions with NBC about doing a pilot show — which would star Bradshaw and country-western singer Mel Tillis as cohorts in a two-man auto racing team.

He said the pilot, if approved by NBC, could lead to a series, the filming of which would conflict with football next summer.

"I haven't signed a contract with NBC. The negotiations are through, but I haven't signed," said Bradshaw.

What if he signs? What if the pilot is a hit? What if the network goes for a series?

"If NBC buys the pilot, then I'll have to quit playing football," Bradshaw said.

Earlier Thursday, a Steeler spokesman talked with Bradshaw by telephone. Afterward, Steeler publicity director Joe Gordon said Bradshaw told him it was possible he could film the entire series before training camp.

"My gut feeling is that he'd like to do both — play football and do TV," said Gordon.

Gordon added, "I'd be very surprised if he retired. He enjoys playing football too much. It means too much to him. He's still a very healthy 32."

A year ago, Bradshaw talked through the offseason about the possibility he might quit football. Then he announced at the start of training camp that he would play as long as possible.

It was on July 7, 1980, that Bradshaw told reporters: "I'll tell you guys now. No matter what I say at the end of the season, I'll be back. I'd be crazy to quit."

Bradshaw's agent said Thursday that the Steeler star would probably leave football if NBC buys the series. Agent David Gershenson also said Bradshaw had a verbal agreement to do the pilot.

"The verbal agreement calls for Terry to star in the pilot," said agent David Gershenson. "Once Terry signs to do a pilot, at the same time he agrees to do a series.

"Whether the series goes on is totally NBC's option. Terry will have no choice. If NBC picks up the series, it will go into production right away. Terry won't be able to play football. Only if NBC doesn't pick up the series will Terry be available to play."

Gershenson said NBC has until May to decide whether it wants to make a series from the pilot.

"I expect them to decide earlier than that," the agent said. He added that "Short Trackers" should go into production in February. Johnny Carson Productions and Al Ruddy, producer of "The Godfather," are backing it.

"Terry Bradshaw is a co-star in 'Short Trackers'," said Gene Walsh, a spokesman for NBC. "Bradshaw and Tillis co-star. Bradshaw is a driver, Tillis is a mechanic. They tour the stock-car circuit. If Bradshaw gets into the series, he'd have to hang up his spikes."

Is it likely that NBC will turn the pilot into a series?

"The vast majority don't get picked up," said Gershenson. "But there are a lot of heavyweights involved in this. I would be amazed if this one isn't picked up."

Weak Shooting Hurts Coronado

AMARILLO (Special) — Coronado shot only 28 percent from the floor Thursday night and, predictably, fell to Palo Duro 46-37 as a result.

The Mustangs, who coach Miles Johnson said had one of their better defensive games this year, just couldn't put the ball in the hoop. Only Tami Scott and Leanne Wade broke double figures, scoring 14 and 12 points apiece.

Palo Duro didn't do much better. Tonya Folsom scored 11 Pat Wormsley got 13 to be the only Dons in double figures.

In fact, Coronado trailed by only four points, 30-26 after three periods of play. But when it came time for the stretch run, the Mustangs' turnovers and bad shooting caught up with them.

"It was a close game till the last minute or two," said Johnson. "But when we needed to go out and get them we couldn't do it.

"We only shot 28 percent and we turned the ball over quite a bit on offense — it was just poor fundamentals. It's a shame because we played one of our best presses in a long time."

Coronado's junior varsity beat Palo Duro 49-48 to advance to 11-2 to save some face.

Tascosa Rips Lubbock 59-37

AMARILLO (Special) — Tascosa jumped out to an early 13-point lead and coasted to an easy 59-37 victory over Lubbock High Thursday in girls' basketball action here.

Nellie Gilbreath hit five of five field goals and Sharon Mack connected on three of five in the first quarter as Tascosa opened a 20-7 lead after the first eight minutes.

Disputed Call Gives Pacers Disputed NBA Win

By The Associated Press

Referee Tommy Nunez said it was "a simple call to make," but really it wasn't. It was a very tough call, one that might have gone either way.

Nunez called offensive goaltending against New York's Sly Williams with two seconds left in overtime Thursday night, nullifying a basket that almost surely would have given the Knicks a one-point victory. Instead the Indiana Pacers were able to come away with a very satisfying 116-115 National Basketball Association triumph, their sixth in a row.

"We were on the edge of being blown out," said Indiana coach Jack McKinney, whose team trailed the Knicks 87-72 going into the fourth quarter. "But we hung on and came back. That shows a lot."

Indiana outscored New York 35-20 in the fourth quarter, Dudley Bradley's first three-point goal of the season tying the score at 107-107 with two seconds left. Indiana rookie Louis Orr then scored six of his 14 points in the five-minute overtime period, including a pair of baskets off offensive rebounds that gave the Pacers a 116-113 edge with 50 seconds to play.

Bill Cartwright's short jumper cut the margin to one, then Mike Glenn tipped the ball away from Indiana's George McGinnis to give the Knicks one last chance. Ray Williams tried an off-balance jumper from the right baseline, but it was off line until teammate Sly Williams guided it in from directly in front of the basket.

That's when Nunez blew his whistle.

"I thought the goaltending was there," said McKinney. "It was a darn good call by the official, especially since it went against the home team. It took a lot of guts."

"I thought it was a good basket for us," countered New York coach Red Holzman. "We checked with the TV people upstairs and they also said it was good. But what good does that do us now?"

No good at all. The only man whose opinion counted was Nunez, and he ruled that the ball was at least partially in the imaginary cylinder directly above the basket when Williams tipped it, which made it offensive goaltending. He immediately waved off the basket, bringing a chorus of boos from the spectators at Madison Square Garden and a shower of debris onto the court.

In a mimeographed statement distributed to newsmen, Nunez said, "There's really nothing to explain. It's a simple call to make, one which I make all the time. The ball was in the cylinder of the rim when he touched it."

Williams didn't think so.

"The ball was off the rim, out of the cylinder," he contended. "It shouldn't have been called that way."

But it was, giving Indiana the victory even though the Pacers were outscored 29-11 from the foul line. Billy Knight topped Indiana with 25 points, while Bill Cartwright led the Knicks with 26 points and 10 rebounds.

Bucks 98, Hawks 95

Junior Bridgeman scored 13 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter as Milwaukee rallied to beat Atlanta. The Bucks, trailing 77-60 with 1:40 left in the third quarter, stormed back to win their sixth game in a row and 12th straight at home.

Atlanta center Wayne "Tree" Rollins, who has been plagued by knee trouble all season, suffered a sprained left ankle midway through the third quarter. Hawks' coach Hubie Brown said Rollins will be sidelined two to three weeks.

Jazz 99, Mavericks 97

Adrian Dantley, who scored 51 points against Denver Wednesday night, got 40 against Dallas as Utah won its third in a row. Dantley, the NBA's leading scorer with a 31.7 average, hit a jumper with 1:02 remaining for the winning points.

Kings 136, Bullets 118

Kansas City led 67-45 at halftime, then erupted for a 45-point third quarter to overwhelm the Bullets. The Kings, getting 28 points from guard Phil Ford, led by as many as 45 points in the second half as they handed Washington its fifth consecutive defeat.

Georgia's Dooley Tops Honorees

MIAMI BEACH, Fla (AP) — Everyone knows Georgia is college football's national champion for 1980. Coach Vince Dooley just hasn't found time to let it sink in yet.

"What I haven't had a chance to do is sit down and just reflect on it. I'd like to do that. I'm hoping to do that next weekend," Dooley said Thursday as he was named University Division Coach of the Year by some 2,400 fellow members of the American Football Coaches Association.

Dooley and Rick Carter, who led Dayton to the NCAA Division III national championship and was named Coach of the Year in the College Division, were honored Thursday night at the AFCA's annual banquet.

For Dooley, 48, it was the culmination of a 17-year head coaching career at Georgia that has seen him change from unbending martinet to a man of reason.

"I think you should have some rules," said Dooley, who still forbids facial hair and long locks on his players. "But kids nowadays are a lot easier to deal with than they were during the late 1960s and early 1970s.

"I've changed, too, by being more understanding, by being able to weigh both sides of an issue, by giving a kid the benefit of the doubt, by being able to relate to him more, by having more consulatation instead of reaching an arbitrary decision, by considering others — that type of thing. As a young coach, I stood up and made a decision and I didn't worry if it affected anyone else."

Dooley knows that "the pressure will be more than ever" as Georgia attempts to repeat in 1981.

"We could win it again," he said, "but the percentages are really against it. The possibility is very slim. There are so many good teams and we had everything come our way this season.

"We lose 24 seniors and they were all involved. They helped make us a team. We lose the whole secondary and almost the entire offensive line and both kickers. We'll have a very small senior group next year and the biggest thing will be trying to replace the leadership."

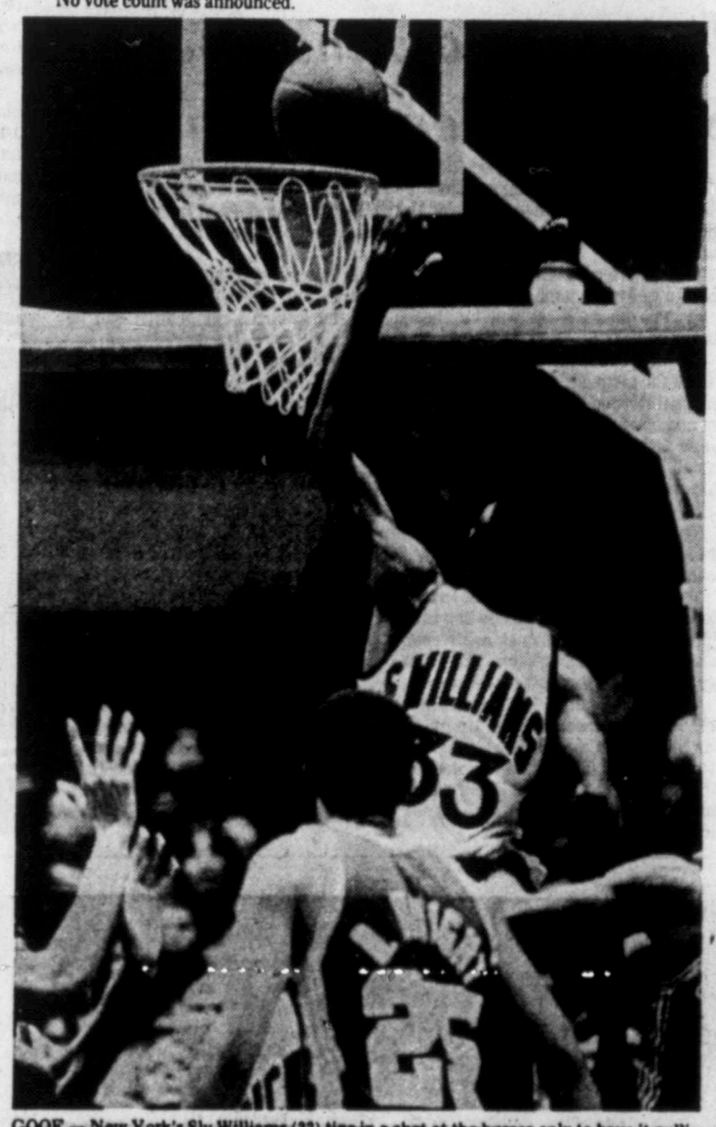
Carter, 37, has been a coach for 16 years — one season as an assistant at Earlham College and 15 as head coach at Earlham, Hanover and Dayton with an overall 102-39-5 record. He recently accepted the head coaching position at Holy Cross.

Carter said his Coach of the Year award was "kind of like the Academy Award in the football coaching profession."

Dooley was one of nine district winners in the University Division balloting. The others were Carm Cozza of Yale, George Welsh of Navy, Dick Crum of North Carolina, Bo Schembechler of Michigan, Chuck Shelton of Drake, Grant Teaff of Baylor, LaVell Edwards of Brigham Young and Don James of Washington.

Carter won out over Jim Butterfield of Ithaca, Bill Manlove of Widner, Claude Gibson of Mars Hill, Wayne Grubb of North Alabama, Charles Finley of Missouri-Rolla, Jim Hess of Angelo State, Bob Blasi of Northern Colorado and Joe Harper of Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo.

No vote count was announced.



GOOF — New York's Sly Williams (33) tips in a shot at the buzzer only to have it nullified by officials for offensive goaltending Thursday night in Madison Square Garden. Bucks' Sidney Moncrief Accepts Supporting Role

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Moncrief-Winters study is providing Milwaukee Bucks' fans with insight into coach Don Nelson's manner of handling personnel and player personalities.

Sidney Moncrief, much of whose second season in the National Basketball Association has been spent as a substitute for the injured Brian Winters, says he would have assured himself a permanent starting job at Winters' expense were they playing for some other coaches.

"I would like to remain in the position I am now," he said. "But there are lots of different coaches in the NBA with lots of different philosophies. Nellie has his, and I have to respect his position."

After Moncrief shared team scoring honors with 17 points against Dallas Dec. 27 while a hobbled Winters fouled out, Nelson admitted being disappointed with Winters.

"Brian is still struggling, both mentally and physically," he remarked.

Asked Monday to explain why Moncrief cannot be assured of permanently replacing Winters, Nelson underscored the merit of the question by describing Moncrief as the team's best follower of game plans, a man who never misses an assignment, and a player who doesn't shun the "dirty work" against which some stars might rebel.

Still Winters is assured of his old job back when he has recovered physically and emotionally from his Nov. 23 shoulder injury, Nelson said.

"It is not that I won't change," he said, "but anyone who has been with me for a year knows I don't make drastic changes easily. I stay with my starters through slumps and injuries, and I give them the benefit of the doubt."

Former Arkansas' star Moncrief, a 6-foot-4 first-round draft choice by Milwaukee in 1979, seems to have caught a touch of the Nelson gentleness.

"Brian has been here for six years," Moncrief said, "and when he gets back to where he can make the contribution he was making before he got hurt, he should be back in the lineup."

The three share at least one thing: frustration.

Moncrief admits he "would be lying if I said I didn't want to be a starter."

Nelson said it hurts to want to reward Moncrief's effort and still have to abide by a principle, remarking: "It may not even be fair to do it that way, but that's the way it is."

Estacado Teams Advance In Tourney

Both Estacado ninth-grade basketball teams advanced to today's semi-final round of the city junior high basketball tournament with victories Thursday at the Lubbock High gym.

The Estacado girls' slipped past Matthews 42-38 and were joined in the final four by Hutchinson, a 37-28 winner over Evans.

Sheila Stewart scored 14 points for Estacado while Cindy Garcia poured in 24 in a losing effort for Matthews. Hutchinson was paced by Kermi Becknel with 11. Marti Troger had nine for Evans.

Today's games, which will all be played at Chapman Gym, pit Wilson and Evans in a loser's bracket girls' game at 3 p.m. and Atkins and Estacado in a winner's bracket girls contest at 8:20 p.m.

In two winner's bracket boys' games, Atkins and Estacado meet at 4:20 p.m. and Mackenzie and Evans square off at 7 p.m.

The tournament will continue with Saturday games at the Lubbock High gym.

LCHS Defeats Stanton

COLORADO CITY (Special) — The Lubbock Christian High girls' basketball team recovered from a mid-game slump and, with the help of an effective press, rallied to sweep past Stanton 61-53 Thursday in the first round of the Colorado City Tournament.

The Eagles jumped out to a quick 15-7 lead after the first period but saw their lead cut to a single point, 26-25, at halftime and trailed 44-41 entering the final period.

"We jumped out to the early lead and the kids didn't expect that. I think they were cruising after we got the 15-7 lead," LCHS coach Dale Pectol said.

Stanton led 51-48 with 5:23 to play in the game when Lubbock Christian, which had used a pressing defense ineffectively earlier in the game, went into a three-quarter court defense. The Eagles finished the game with a 13-2 spurt for their 12th victory in 17 contests.

"Our press finally just started working and everything fell together," Pectol said.

Guard Brendell Baker led all scorers with 37 points on 11 of 24 field goals and 15 of 21 free throws. Jana Rogers scored five points and pulled down three rebounds, all in the final period, and it was her three-point play that broke a 51-51 tie and put the Eagles ahead for good.

The Lubbock Christian High boys are among the teams competing today in the boys' side of the bracket.

Browns' Sam Rutigliano Garners Coaching Award

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sam Rutigliano, whose easy-going style lifted the Cleveland Browns to the AFC Central Division title and helped Brian Sipe to the top of the NFL Passing hierarchy, Thursday was named AFC Coach of the Year for the second straight season, narrowly edging Buffalo's Chuck Knox.

Rutigliano beat out Knox in balloting by the 56-member UPI panel, consisting of four writers from each of the conference's 14 cities. Rutigliano was named on 24 ballots while Knox received 22 votes. Oakland's Tom Flores finished third with eight votes.

Rutigliano, who took over the Browns three years ago, lifted them to an 8-8 record in 1979 to win the coaching honor. This season, the Browns overtook heavily favored Pittsburgh and Houston to capture the AFC Central with an 11-5 mark. The candid coach built his offense around Sipe, who responded with a spectacular season and earned AFC Player of the Year honors. Sipe joined San Diego's Dan Fouts and Joe Namath, formerly of the New York Jets, as the only 4,000-yard passers in NFL history.

"We played extremely well as a coordinated unit," said Rutigliano. "We made the big plays all season. We didn't have guys who had big statistics but we played well as a unit. We played well under pressure and I think it was a tremendous learning experience for our players this season. They learned what they need to do to make the playoffs."

Cleveland's season ended on a frigid note last Sunday in a 14-12 playoff loss to the Oakland Raiders, as Rutigliano chose to try for a 13-yard touchdown pass rather than a 30-yard, field-goal attempt off a frozen surface and into a stiff wind. Sipe's attempted TD pass to tight end Ozzie Newsome was intercepted by Mike Davis in the final minute, sealing Oakland's victory.

The decision stirred criticism but it was strictly Rutigliano's style. He is a coach who is not afraid to take a chance.

"I'm a traditionalist in the sense that I'll punt when I'm supposed to on fourth down and do all the things that are written down in the book," he explained shortly before the Oakland game. "But there comes a time when you have to deviate from what's written down. You have to do what you think is right and not worry about what the writers will say on Monday."

Sipe, the NFL's top-rated passer, credits Rutigliano's attitude for much of the quarterback's success.

"He made playing football fun again," said Sipe, "and that's the way it should be."

FULL-CONTACT KARATE? — Milwaukee's Bob Lanier, left, receives a shot in the chin from Atlanta's high-kicking John Drew Thursday night in Milwaukee. The contact was accidental. The Bucks defeated the Hawks 98-95. (AP Laserphoto)

Sims, Falcon Duo Win Honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Sims of the Detroit Lions, who proved in 1980 he was every bit the runner he'd been in college — and a fine receiver as well, was named today The Associated Press Offensive Rookie of the Year in the National Football League.

Sims was, fittingly, a runaway choice. He received 53 of the 84 votes cast by a nationwide panel of sports writers and sports broadcasters, three from each NFL city. Joe Cribbs of the Buffalo Bills was second with 24 votes. The only other player to receive more than two votes quarterback David Woodley of the Miami Dolphins with three.

Sims enabled the Lions to vault from last in National Football Conference rushing in 1979 to second in 1980, just behind Los Angeles. He set club records with his 313 carries and 1,303 yards (fourth in the conference and fifth in the league), his league-high 13 touchdowns rushing and his five 100-yard games in the season.

He also caught 51 passes for 621 yards and three touchdowns (not bad for a guy who'd caught the ball just three times in college). In all, he accounted for 1,924 yards on offense and his 16 TDs led the league.

Sims was the Heisman Trophy winner as a junior at Oklahoma and the runner-up to Charles White in the voting as a senior. There was never any question of his ability to run.

"I felt chills every time he touched the ball," veteran linebacker Charlie Weaver said following Sims' debut.

And coach Monte Clark of the Lions said almost wistfully: "He's everything we thought he'd be — and more."

Meanwhile, the complementary rookie defensive award went to a set of linebackers — both from the same team.

When the Atlanta Falcons drafted linebackers last year, they figured they had an ace in Buddy Curry and an unturned hole card in Al Richardson.

But both turned out to be winners as they helped make the Falcons' defense one of the best in pro football and then split the pot Thursday by being named The Associated Press Defensive Rookies of the Year.

"We drafted Buddy No. 2, and when you draft a man No. 2, you suspect he'll be a starter," linebacker coach Doug Shively said. "How soon will be dictated by the position at hand. He was in a position where he was put in the starting lineup and he responded quickly."

In Richardson, Atlanta drafted a blue-chip athlete with a bad knee.

"We took a chance and it paid off," Shively said of Richardson, an eighth-round pick. "Al probably would have been drafted a lot higher if it hadn't been for that bad knee. We knew he was an excellent athlete."

Curry called defensive signals and played inside linebacker in the Falcons' 3-4 defense. Even though the basic defense was called from the sidelines, he had the option to change it if the opposition came out in an unexpected formation.

Curry and Richardson received 23½ votes each from a nationwide panel of 84 sports writers and broadcasters. Cornerback Roynell Young of the Philadelphia Eagles was next with 13 votes.

Holtz Explains Saints' Quotes

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Coach Lou Holtz says he doesn't plan on being anywhere but the University of Arkansas next year.

Holtz said Thursday that some of his comments about the coaching vacancy with the New Orleans Saints were misinterpreted.

"I am not a candidate for any job," the football coach said. "I am not looking for a job. I am not soliciting a job."

The comments were made Wednesday during a radio interview in Houston. Holtz was quoted Wednesday as saying, "I think whenever an opportunity comes along, you have to evaluate it and look at the situation."

Holtz said the comments were made hurriedly as he was leaving his office. He had been called by a radio talk show hostess, Holtz said.

Pressure Shot Thumps Buffs

AMARILLO (UPI) — Senior guard Rick Malnati hit a 10-foot jumper with one second remaining in overtime to lift defending Missouri Valley Conference champion Bradley to an 88-86 triumph over West Texas Thursday.

The Braves, now 2-0 in the MVC and 10-2 overall, controlled the ball for the last three minutes of overtime, using a delay game until the clock ticked inside 10 seconds.

Malnati, a 6-foot reserve, took the ball from the top of the key and drove the lane, firing the winning shot just as time expired.

Bradley fought from a 55-40 halftime deficit to tie the game at the end of regulation play on a rebound layup by Donald Reese with only two seconds remaining. Reese, who finished with 22 points and 10 rebounds, blocked a West Texas' field-goal attempt with 37 seconds left to play to keep Brave hopes alive before turning in the tying layup.

Leading all scorers was Bradley's J.J. Anderson who had 24 points and the game high 12 rebounds.

Tower Makes Bet On Cowboy Game

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sens. John Heinz, R-Pa., and John Tower, R-Texas, have bet "their shirts" on the outcome of Sunday's National Football Conference championship game between the Philadelphia Eagles and the Dallas Cowboys.

Tower said Thursday he would wear Eagles' quarterback Ron Jaworski's jersey for a day if Philadelphia defeats the Cowboys. Heinz will wear Dallas quarterback Danny White's jersey if the Cowboys prevail.

"John Tower is not much over 5-feet tall and Ron Jaworski's jersey is about 4-feet long," Heinz said. "I'm looking to an Eagles' victory so that Sen. Tower can prove he's no stuffed shirt."

AZTECS NAME COACHES

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Newly hired San Diego State football coach Doug Scovil Thursday named three full-time assistant coaches and two part-time assistant coaches. Scovil said he signed Doug Smith, offensive line coach at California for four years, to perform the same job for the Aztecs, and Gary Zauner, a part-time coach at Brigham Young University, to become special teams and kicking coach. Steve Shafer, who coach defensive backs for San Diego State, was retained by Scovil as linebacker coach.

Polish Dissident Under Attack

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Poland's official army newspaper today attacked as a "competitor" of the Communist Party dissident leader Jacek Kuron, who was named to a special committee on public opinion by the independent Solidarity labor confederation.

The army newspaper Zolnierz Wolnosci said Kuron "hates socialism, the (Communist) Party and state authority in Poland, speaks without respect about many persons and tries to accolade himself as a fighter for democracy not only at home but in the international dimension.

"He proposes to change the party and state authorities in such a way that they could lose their socialist character," it said.

The newspaper said Kuron would like the unions to become a "political party" and "competition" of the Communist Party.

At the same time, the Communist Party daily Trybuna Ludu revealed, for the first time in an East bloc country, details of the interior ministry's budget — showing a drop of $85 million in internal Polish security expenditures since last year.

Millions of workers planned to stay off the job Saturday, heeding Solidarity's call to inaugurate its unilaterally declared five-day work week — a move that could lead to new strikes.

The minister of labor and wages issued a statement Thursday telling workers they would be considered strikers and not receive pay if they do not work this Saturday.

The state-run television Thursday said Solidarity members were directly involved in sit-ins at government offices in four towns, calling the action "a symptom of anarchy" and "a conscious operation against the authorities."

The tug of war between the government and the Solidarity group is taking place under the watch of the Soviet Union, which has warned there are limits which cannot be crossed.

The most serious occupation was at the town of Ustrzyki Dolne, near the Soviet border, where protesting farmers have been occupying the local government building for 10 days, demanding an end to harassment of private farmers who want to form their own Rural Solidarity.

Solidarity sent a negotiating commission to the town, where the protesters have broken off talks with a government commission.

A two-day meeting of the national Solidarity leadership ended in Gdansk Thursday declaring its "support to all factory staff that do not go to work Jan. 10 and all following Saturdays."

Solidarity approved the declaration of a five-day work week Wednesday night and local chapters already have told their members to stay home.

The government wants only two free Saturdays a month with slow phasing in of more free days, saying the economic situation was too bad to support the loss of production on work-free Saturdays.

West German Intelligence Hides Defected Soviet Union Official

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — The chief Soviet interpreter at the East-West troop cut talks who defected with bundles of secret documents was hidden today by West German intelligence to debrief the prize catch and keep him from KGB murder commandos.

In a scene conjuring plots from John LeCarre spy novels, Nikolai Koroliuk, 35, slipped out of a Baden, Austria, hotel past Russian guards, went to the airport and caught the first available plane to the West, the Stuttgarter Zeitung newspaper reported.

Landing at that first Western stop, in Dusseldorf, West Germany, Koroliuk — the Sovet translator at the Vienna troop reduction talks — surrendered to airport police and they turned him over to intelligence officials who took him to a hideout.

"The service officials apparently wanted to prevent the Soviets, fearful he would spill important secrets, from silencing him by sending a murder commando," the newspaper said.

The defection came to light on the the same day, Thursday, that the highest ever ranking CIA employee to admit being a Soviet "mole," or deep cover agent, was sentenced in Baltimore, Md., to 18 years in prison for selling intelligence secrets to Moscow. Prosecutors said David Barnett, 47, was paid $92,600 by the Soviets.

Koroliuk's defection, in which the Russian brought bundles of documents, took place after the final session of the troop reduction talks in Vienna, which are now in recess, the Stuttgarter Zeitung said.

The West German government Thursday refused to give any details on Koroliuk's whereabouts, saying only he had turned up in Germany and "more details in this matter cannot be revealed."

But informed sources said Koroliuk had been taken for questioning to Munich, the site of the West German Federal Intelligence Service headquarters.

The newspaper said as chief interpreter, Koroliuk would have known all secret Russian papers on the Vienna troop reduction talks, which have been going on since the early 1970s. The talks are in recess and Koroliuk had been in Vienna since September.

A spokesman for the Soviet Embassy in Vienna said he was aware of Western press reports on the defection but refused to comment on them.

Pakistan Preparing To Dispatch Troops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite denials, informed sources say there are mounting indications Pakistan is preparing to send a force of combat troops to Saudi Arabia to guard against guerrilla attacks or internal revolt.

Reports of imminent action follow a year of rumors of a secret agreement to base Pakistani combat forces on the Arabian Peninsula in exchange for nearly $1 billion in Saudi economic and military aid for Pakistan.

Both sides have denied the reports to inquiring Western diplomats.

The reported agreement would underscore Saudi Arabia's continued concern about its security following the disastrous November 1979 attack on the Grand Mosque in Mecca — a two-week siege that left hundreds killed and wounded.

The dead included 60 Saudi troops who attacked a multinational Arabic band that seized the mosque and took pilgrims as hostages.

Saudi spokesmen said 170 of the guerrillas were captured. Last Jan. 9, 63 of them were beheaded in public squares in six Saudi cities.

Of these, official reports said, 41 were rebel Saudis, 10 from Egypt, six from South Yemen, three from Kuwait and one each from North Yemen, the Sudan and Iraq.

After the attack, Saudi King Khalid carried out a major shakeup of his armed forces, apparently for not acting with sufficient speed or cohesion during the siege.

It was then reports emerged of an approach to Pakistan, a nation with professional soldiers infinitely better trained than the Saudis.

A recent issue of International Defense Review, an arms catalog published in Geneva, quoted a NATO source as saying a "special division" of 10,000 to 12,000 Pakistani troops, including armor, artillery and engineering units plus mechanized and airborne infantry battalions would be stationed on the Arabian Peninsula.

An advance party of 400 engineers and technicans was said to already have arrived in Saudi Arabia.

Informed sources said they believe there is a secret SaudiPakistan agreement on troops, but nowhere near the number mentioned by the Geneva publication.

Classes To Resume After Disturbance

MEXICALI, Mexico (AP) — Classes at Baja California University are to resume Monday following a violent confrontation in which 400 club-swinging strikebreakers wrested control of the campus from striking professors, campus workers and sympathetic students, officials say.

Ten people were injured, at least one by a gunshot, and two people were hospitalized after the confrontation, which began late Wednesday. An architecture building where 35 students and workers gathered was damaged by fire, and seven cars were reported burned.

The strikers' union headquarters also were gutted by fire.

There were no arrests.

The decision to reopen the school came after an agreement on union elections was reached between Governor Roberto de la Madrid and two unions which walked off their jobs and shut down the university Nov. 17.

Striking professors "probably will be back Monday," said Jose Luis Garcia Estrada, lawyer for the strikers.

The unions went on strike when University Rector Ruben Castro Bojorquez outsted the campus workers' union annd signed contracts with two new unions. Some teachers and students joined in when 78 strikers were fired.

The strike was "killed" when "storm troopers took the university," according to a student spokesman who asked that his name not be used.

Students charged that the people who stormed the campus included police and soldiers in civilian clothes, and strikebreakers from other Mexican states.

Early Elections Predicted By Israeli Minister

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli Interior Minister Yosef Burg said today there was "a reasonable possibility" that general elections would be held in May, six months ahead of schedule.

Burg spoke to reporters after meeting with Prime Minister Menachem Begin to discuss the political crisis that threatens to bring down the Begin government, possibly by next week.

Burg said he brought new proposals for a compromise on salary demands by the nation's 58,000 teachers. He gave no details.

Finance Minister Yigael Hurvitz says he will quit if the government gives in to the teachers' demands for raises, which he claims will add new fuel to an inflationary spiral that left Israel with the world's highest inflation rate last year, 131 percent.

At the same time, Education Minister Zevulun Hammer says he will resign if the increases are rejected. The raises would give an educator with nine years' experience a salary of $546 a month, up from $480. The average wage is $630 a month.

Hurvitz's resignation would leave Begin with a minority in Parliament. Less certain is what would happen if Hammer quit.

His National Religious Party, of which Burg is a member, is divided, with some members saying Hammer's resignation would be grounds for an early election. But Burg and others are cautioning against bringing down the government in haste.

The crisis is expected to come to a head on Sunday, when the Cabinet meets to decide the teachers' salary issue.

Israeli newspapers said that if Hurvitz quit, Begin would wait 48 hours until the resignation legally took effect and then would announce his next move.

He could stay on as a caretaker prime minister until November, the scheduled month for elections, or propose legislation in Parliament for early balloting, a move reportedly supported by two factions in the Begin coalition.

Begin controls a shaky 60 or 61 of the 120 seats in Parliament. The Labor Party, the chief opposition, believes it could get an even 55-55 vote today on a bill to dissolve parliament and hold new elections. But no one knows how the 10 undecided deputies would vote.

Salvador Leftist Offensive Expected

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — The junta's army went on alert today to counter an expected nationwide offensive by heavily armed leftist guerrillas who the United States says were trained in Nicaragua by the PLO and supplied with weapons by Cuba, Vietnam, Libya and Iraq.

Government troops stepped up a search-and-destroy campaign against guerrilla strongholds and killed 50 rebels in a clash in Armenia, 50 miles west of the capital, an army commander said Thursday.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said there were no new developments in the disappearance of American free-lance journalist John J. Sullivan, who vanished after checking into San Salvador's posh Sheraton hotel 11 days ago and is feared dead.

All 14 military command posts around El Salvador were alerted Thursday and "everybody is on a state of emergency until new orders," a spokesman for the military said.

The state of emergency came only hours after Jose Napoleon Duarte, president of the U.S.-backed junta, said leftist rebels may take to the streets today and firebomb factories to launch a long promised offensive to overthrow the government.

U.S. intelligence sources confirmed that 4,000 to 6,000 guerrillas were ready for the final push against the junta and said many of them were trained in neighboring Nicaragua by instructors of the Palestinian Liberation Army, which maintains close relations with the Sandinist army.

The U.S. sources said the guerrillas have been receiving money and highly sophisticiated weapons — much of it of U.S. make — from Cuba, Nicaragua, Vietnam, Iraq and Libya.

The rebels, who say their strategy is to close in on the cities from the countryside, virtually control the northern province of Chalatenango, which is the largest of El Salvador's 14 provinces and shares a long border with Honduras, the U.S. sources said.

In a stepped up search-and-destroy campaign, government troops Wednesday battled with guerrillas in Armenia and killed 50 rebels, the commander of the area's Fifth Army Brigade told UPI.

IRA Confesses To Terrorist Attacks

UXBRIDGE, England (UPI) — The Irish Republican Army today claimed responsibility for four separate terrorist attacks on British diplomats and military targets in the past month, including the bombing of a famous World War II air force base.

A statement issued from Ireland said the IRA was responsible for the Thursday night bombing of a barracks at the sprawling Uxbridge Royal Air Force base, which had been a main control center for Britain's Spitfire fighter planes during World War II.

The bomb was discovered minutes before it went off and 50 people inside the barracks were evacuated. There were no injuries.

Shortly after the explosion, an anonymous caller to UPI in London claimed the bomb was set by the IRA. Scotland Yard refused comment on the claim other than to say police had received several other telephone calls.

The IRA formally claimed responsbility for the attack today in the statement, which also said IRA members had carried out the bombing of a London gas works on New Year's Eve, the bombing of a military barracks in London last month and the attempted assassination of British Common Market Commissioner Christopher Tugenhadt in Brussels last month.

Both the bombing of the gas works and the Uxbridge blast came after a man accused of being an IRA explosives expert escaped from the maximum security wing of a London prison.

Officers at Uxbridge said today that an alert RAF military patrol discovered the latest bomb and saved 50 men from serious injury or death. The three-man patrol smelled gas and found a blue RAF flight bag with wires sprouting from the flap placed alongside several gasoline containers.

Namibia Party Blasts SWAPO Support

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — The largest political party in Namibia said today it will reject any independence plan as long as the U.N. recognizes the SWAPO liberation movement as sole representative of the territory's 1 million people.

Dirk Mudge, leader of the South Africa-backed Democratic Turnhalle Alliance (DAT), said his party was forced by the U.N. to attend the Geneva independence talks as part of the South Africa delegation.

"Before this conference can be successful we want a firm undertaking in a public statement that the U.N. withdraws its recognition of SWAPO as the sole legal representative of the Namibian people and will also withdraw its financial support," Mudge told a news conference.

"This U.N. support of SWAPO contradicts the U.N.'s potential role as an impartial referee to free and fair elections and we will not under any circumstances be forced into an election which is not fair and free," he said.

SWAPO, the Southwest Africa Peoples Organization, which has fought an armed struggle for the past 14 years against South African forces in Namibia, held its own news conference at which it said it is ready to accept the U.N. Independence plan at once.

Dow Jones Average Off 1.37

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, struggling to right itself after the free-fall decline of the past two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 38.99 in the last two days, gained about 6 points in early trading today. But by noontime it stood at 964.33, off 1.37 from Thursday's close.

Gainers clung to a 7-6 lead over losers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the selling pressure set off by investment adviser Joseph Granville's recommendation that his subscribers dump their holdings let up for a while at the opening.

They said it was typical for the market to take at least a temporary upward bounce after a severe decline. The fact that the rally quickly faded, however, showed that investors were still unsettled by the recent drop.

In the economic news, several banks which had not yet joined in a recent prime rate reduction to 20 percent did so. But one that had gone to 19½ percent, Chemical Bank of New York, raised its basic rate on business loans to 20.

Citicorp led the active list, off ½ at 23½. A 478,600-share block traded at 23¾.

The NYSE's composite index lost .17 to 76.03. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .90 at 337.28.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 23.78 million shares at noontime, against 23.86 million at the same point Thursday.

Dollar Rises In Trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose on world money markets Friday, propped up by a rise in interest rates on Eurodollars — dollars on deposit abroad. Gold prices rose slightly, ending a slide on European bullion markets.

European morning dollar rates, compared with late Thursday, included 1.9708 West German marks, up from 1.9615; 1.7787 Swiss francs, up from 1.7735; 4.5563 French francs, up from 4.5425; 2.1425 Dutch guilders, up from 2.1315; and 936.50 Italian lire, up from 932.33.

In London, the pound was worth $2.4020, down from $2.4026 late Thursday.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar bounced back against the Japanese yen to close the week at 202.30 yen, almost 2 yen higher than Thursday's finish of 200.40. It was nevertheless below the 203.60 rate of Dec. 31, the last Tokyo trading session of 1980. The dollar lost 15 percent of its value against the yen last year.

London's five bullion houses fixed a recommended morning gold price of $579.75 a troy ounce, up from $575.25 late Thursday.

In Zurich the metal traded at a median $579.50 an ounce, up from $573.50.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold closed at $578.92 up $3.95. Gold finished at $573 in New York late Thursday.

Silver was quoted in London at $15.70 a troy ounce at midmorning, up from $15.53.

University Refutes Reputation

MOSCOW (AP) — Patrice Lumumba University, an institute here for students from developing countries, is not happy about being linked by Westerners to international terrorism and Third World subversion, its Soviet administrators say.

They claim the Westerners often note that the notorious Venezuelan terrorist Carlos Ramirez — known simply as "Carlos" — was a student at Lumumba. The administrators note, however, that Carlos was expelled in the early 1970s on grounds of poor grades and bad behavior.

The university's Soviet administration prides itself in training civil servants, scientists, teachers and other professionals for Africa, Asia and Latin America.

In its 20 years of existence, more than 9,000 Lumumba graduates have taken their skills back home to 110 mostly emerging nations.

Apart from Carlos, only a handful of former Lumumba students — some reportedly from Mexico and Sri Lanka — have been implicated in revolutionary activities in their homelands. The Soviets complain that Western publicity given these cases has created the impression that the university exports subversion.

"Some unobjective organs of the press claim that we are a school for spies, saboteurs, the best hijackers, and so on," said Assistant Rector Leonid Kharyukov, displaying an English paperback book about Carlos.

"He was enrolled here only 18 months or two years, but some people concluded that he was thoroughly trained by us," Kharyukov said. "We had nothing to do with his actions."

Carlos is accused of masterminding the kidnapping of OPEC oil ministers in Vienna, Austria, in 1975; the killing of two French security agents in Paris, and bombings in the French capital during the mid-1970s.

Some Western investigators suspect he may have received Soviet military instruction after his student days at Lumumba, but the Soviets have never acknowledged this.

Carlos has dropped out of sight, but his notoriety has had repercussions at Lumumba University.

Military training — a normal part of the curriculum in Soviet higher education — is banned at Lumumba for foreigners and Soviets alike, Kharyukov said.

"To head off any attempts to slander the school, we don't even permit rifle target shooting or archery for recreation," he said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Soviet political slogans and portraits of graduates decorate the hallways of the university in a seven-story building that once served as a military college three miles south of the Kremlin.

Officially called Patrice Lumumba Peoples' Friendship University, it is named for the Congolese leader slain in Katanga Province in 1961.

In five-or six-year courses at Lumumba, foreign students get not only training in their specialties, but full exposure to Soviet society.

Attendance is mandatory at lectures by the all-Soviet faculty on Soviet politics and social philosphy, and foreigners must maintain passing marks in all their work to remain at the school, Kharyukov said.

Campus life is tightly controlled. Soviet students, who make up about a quarter of the 6,700 undergraduate and graduate students, help monitor the foreigners, 900 of whom are women.

It is unknown, however, what percentage of Lumumba students leave Moscow convinced that the Soviet model is right for their own countries. Some students say privately that Soviet economic shortages and bureaucracy are obvious to any student, and that some of them leave in a far from pro-Soviet state of mind.

Kharyukov said there is intense competition among foreigners for the 600 places in the annual freshman class. Three hundred Soviet students also are admitted each year.

Kharyqkov said India is alloted one of the largest blocks of scholarships — 40 per year. "Smaller countries, such as the Maldive Republic or Gabon, get two or three a year."

The foreigners begin with intensive Russian-language training — six hours daily for six months — to enable them to understand the lectures.

Lumumba students have free tuition and dormitory space, plus travel and clothing allowances and a monthly stipend of 90 rubles ($135).

Political Woes Take Toll In South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — The young businessman politely shook his head and said, "It isn't safe to talk about politics."

We were in a crowded train that connects Seoul, the South Korean capital, to Inchon, the country's second largest port, 24 miles to the west.

"Even on this train I don't risk talking about the government," he said in flawless English without a trace of emotion. "You don't know who may be listening."

Like a city jolted to its foundations by an earthquake and then crumpled by severe aftershocks, South Korea continues to be shaken by political reverberations following the October 1979 assassination of President Park Chung-hee.

Foreign journalists based here often remark that there are only two stories in South Korea: politics and the economy.

Since former army general Chun Doo-hwan pulled on his iron gloves of absolute rule in a rise to the presidency that began one year ago, the political story has grabbed the headlines.

To anchor his presence in the presidential mansion, known as the Blue House because of its bright blue tile roof, Chun has orchestrated the arrest, trial and death conviction of his No. 1 opponent, Kim Dae-jung, dissolved all political parties and banned most of the remaining opposition leaders from politics.

He has permitted the formation of new parties, but it's a question what kind of opposition they actually will present.

Called the "Land of the Morning Calm," South Korea was proclaimed a republic along democratic principles by its founding fathers in 1948.

Much of the discontent with the present government has been expressed by college and university students. They have staged demonstrations on most of the country's major campuses.

Often, they have erupted in bloody clashes with police and soldiers.

Students now are scared, a journalist explained. They have been beaten too hard. "No longer do my student sources call to tell when a demonstration will be held," he said. "They fear informers."

Despite the political turmoil, life in Seoul goes on normally. Or so it seems.

The Fifth Avenue-type Lotte shopping complex is jammed with evening shoppers admiring the numerous Western consumer items. But Seoul isn't cheap. This past year the country was hobbled by 40 percent inflation.

In a moderately priced Western hotel two pieces of toast cost $1.50. But a train ride from the center of the city to Inchon cost only about 75 cents.

In the cold winter air, hawkers of French fries — made from sweet potatoes — do a brisk business.

On Sundays, generally under sparkling blue skies, crowds flock to the grounds of the pagoda-shaped Kyongbok Palace. Many parents take their children there to let them kick up their heels while others visit the National Museum.

Happy 50th Birthday, Dad!
Love,
Doug, Barry, David, Paul
