District plays at SHS

UIL one-act play competition returns to Snyder Tuesday afternoon with the District 4-AAAA contest scheduled to get underway at 2 p.m. in Worsham Auditorium at Snyder High.

Drama students from Snyder, Andrews, Pecos and San Angelo Lake View High School, all winners in last Tuesday's zone events held in Snyder and Andrews, will be vying for the chance to advance.

The Andrews players will open the contest, performing their 40 minute production of "The Diviners" at 2 p.m. Lake View student actors will take the stage at 2:50 p.m. to present their production of "The Runner Stumbled."

Players representing Pecos High School will perform third — at approximately 3:40 p.m. Their entry in this year's competition is a production of "The Importance of Being Earnest."

The SHS Drama Department's production of Arthur Miller's "The Crucible" will finish off Tuesday's event at 4:30 p.m.

The public is invited to view all of Tuesday's

Three in quest for delegates

By the Associated Press

The three surviving Democratic presidential hopefuls were battling for convention delegates in five states Saturday, including Michigan where Walter Mondale hopes his strong union ties will help stem Gary Hart's winning ways.

"I expect labor people will vote very strongly for Mondale because he knows the issues" Ellen Globokar, Mondale's Michigan coordinator said Friday. But she said a narrow victory for Mondale, once considered the overwhelming favorite in the caucus fight for Michigan's 136 delegates, would be "absolutely acceptable."

Hart's campaign aides concede the Colorado senator is unlikely to win in Michigan and may place third behind the Rev. Jesse Jackson, the other Democratic candidate still in the race.

"If we got 20 delegates I would consider it an outstanding, frankly a momentous, victory for us and a terrible defeat for the former vice president," said George Sallade, Hart's campaign manager in the state.

Ohio Sen. John Glenn, his campaign heavily in debt, on Friday became the fifth casualty of the Democratic presidential race. Glenn, who failed to win a single primary or caucus, officially announced his withdrawal.

As the candidates prepared for Tuesday's primary test in Illinois, Mondale was also hoping for caucus victories in South Carolina, Mississippi and Arkansas.

'Rights' unclear for Borden sale

Reports indicate a Borden County landowner considering selling property to the state agency now searching for a low-level radioactive waste disposal site has indicated he is having difficulty securing all mineral rights to his property.

The indication is that negotiations to sell the property are continuing, however.

No action due on arrest claim

An attorney representing an Odessa woman in a false arrest claim has notified local officials that no legal action will be filed.

The possibility of a lawsuit involving both Scurry and Ector Counties surfaced here after officials with both were put on notice in early February.

The claim stemmed from the Jan. 6 arrest in Odessa by Ector County officers of a woman iden-

AFS Norwegian visitor adapts quickly to U.S.

Lars Orlien almost didn't become Snyder's latest foreign exchange student.

First, he submitted his application to the American Field Service program at the last minute and then he waited anxiously to be notified if he would be accepted and be allowed to visit in the United States — his first choice.

He didn't receive final word until a brief two weeks before arriving in Snyder. But, he was soon on his way to a first meeting with Lee and Margaret Presswood, with whom he has been living with this school year.

The Presswoods have no children living at home now, but that doesn't seem to bother Orlien who is adept at "entertaining himself" (according to his American father). He is also very studious, again something Presswood said he finds remarkable in an 18-year-old youth.

The Presswoods call Orlien's stay in Snyder another AFS success story. As Presswood tells it, one of Orlien's fellow students has remarked to Lars, "You aren't like some AFS students, you're just like one of us."

Presswood said he feels this is testimony to Lars's ability to blend in with his new American family and friends.

And he adds Orlien has never been homesick for family or his hometown and country of Oslo, Norway.

"I've been too busy to be homesick," Orlien said. "I just don't let myself be homesick."

Besides writing many letters back home, Orlien also maintains a very active school schedule which includes drama, track and choir in addition to his other school work.

FAMILY ACTIVITY—Lars Orlien of Oslo, Norway, Snyder's current foreign exchange student, is keeping a scrapbook of all local AFS activities. Helping him work on this special project are his American parents, Lee and Margaret Presswood. All parties say they are enjoying the mutual sharing and learning experiences of the past year. Mrs. Presswood notes she has enjoyed cooking for a family again. (SDN Staff Photo by Shirley A. Gorman)

Museum tour set to Dallas exhibit

A visit to Dallas April 27-29 to view the Shogun exhibition from Japan is now offered through the Scurry County Museum at Western Texas College.

The Shogun exhibit was assembled by the Tokugawa Art Museum in Japan and will be shown in the Dallas Museum of Art. Included in the display are works of art, costumes and historical objects selected to depict the history of Japanese leadership through the years.

It is made up of about 300 objects, says Eunice Irwin, director of museums. However, because of the fragile nature of some of the items, about 100 will be shown at one interval.

The tour group will leave Snyder at 4 p.m. on Friday, April 27, traveling by van. They will check into the Adolphus Hotel in Dallas for Friday and Saturday nights.

On Saturday, a brunch at the hotel and a lecture by a representative of the Art Tours of Dallas will precede the visit to the Shogun exhibit. The formal tour is to end at 3 p.m. Group members will then be free for their respective plans.

Irwin notes it will be the first opportunity for most area residents to see the newly completed Dallas Museum of Art.

The building was built at a cost of some $34 million and contains more than

The Westerners of WTC head for Kansas this week for a try at bringing back the national junior college title to Snyder for the third time. It will be the school's sixth trip to Hutchinson, Kan. and that's pretty impressive in the school's brief 13-year history.

Without a doubt, WTC is the Cinderella team of the tough Western Athletic Conference. It's the first time in history that the conference's fourth-place team had won the regional tournament.

Ten years ago, WTC Coach Barry Davis was a star performer for Hill County Junior College, and that team also defeated Howard College for the regional championship and a berth in the national meet. Davis won MVP honors that year at regional and was all-tournament at the national tourney.

On Monday WTC President Don Newbury had his staff battling a deadline connected with the national tournament. Monday was the first day after spring break and the first work day after the victory over Howard.

First thing Monday, Newbury received a call from national tournament officials stating that a team picture and roster would have to be in Hutchinson by Tuesday or face a forfeit.

Newbury and company spent the rest of the day attempting to figure out delivery schedules. Two packets were readied, and one was put on a commercial airliner. Newbury called a friend in Wichita, Kan. who agreed to meet the flight and drive the package to Hutchinson.

Just to be sure, Newbury sent the second package by a national overnight express service. Everybody- not just the team--was getting a workout on Monday.

Now that Gary Hart is a serious presidential contender, we suspect we'll hear more of that popular song entitled, "You Gotta Have Heart."

Someone else suggested that Hart might pick Jesse Jackson as his vice presidential running mate. They could be known as the "Hart and soul ticket."

Centennial Year Footnotes: In 1945 A. L. Kerby, principal the past two years, was named superintendent of the Pyron school replacing M. M. Hastings. School board members were Calvin Clifton, J. M. Glass, F. C. Ohlenbusch, Frank Klecker, Herbert Zinke and E. C. Cummings.

Ask Us

Q. — What is the deadline to vote in the upcoming Snyder elections?

A. — For persons currently not registered to vote, it is too late to sign up to cast ballots in the city, school and college board elections set April 7. Under Texas law, persons must be registered at least 30 days prior to the ballot. The deadline to register for the May primaries is April 5.

Correction...

Bank in Seminole declared insolvent

SEMINOLE, Texas (AP) — A combination of agriculture and energy problems has caused another West Texas bank to go under, officials say.

The U.S. Comptroller of the Curreney's office declared the Seminole State National Bank insolvent, closed the financial institution at Friday evening and placed it in receivership with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., said Dean DeBuck, spokesman for the comptroller's office.

The bank will re-open Monday as Seminole National Bank under a new bank holding company charter granted to four Midland businessmen and a Plainview man, FDIC spokesman Alan Whitney said.

"Quite obviously, energy loans and farm loans and the state of the economy caused the closure of the bank," former Seminole Mayor Bob Clark told the Odessa American.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas announced late Friday the approval of the holding company application for First West Texas Bancshares Inc. of Midland.

Olen Brock, a former First National Bank of Midland loan officer, is a member of the newly chartered holding company.

Brock could not be reached for comment, but his wife, Betty, said that other bank holding company members include independent oil operator J.L. Davis, David Davis and Keith Moore, all of Midland, and Houston Hamby of Plainview.

FNB Midland, where Brock worked, was declared insolvent and ordered closed last Oct. 14. The Seminole bank failure follows the Feb. 17 closing of nearby Brownfield State Bank and Trust Co.

Friday's bank failure marks the fifth Permian Basin bank to fold in recent months. One Odessa bank and two Midland banks, including FNB Midland, failed last year.

"Over the past year, the bank experienced substantial deterioration in the quality of its loan portfolio. The bank, unable to remedy its problems and losses, finally exhausted the bank's capital, resulting in its insolvency," senior deputy comptroller H. Joe Selby said.

The Seminole bank, which converted from a state to a national bank on May 19, 1982, had deposits near $43 million, DeBuck said.

In addition to assuming the failed bank's deposits, Whitney said the new bank will assume assets and loans totaling $19.7 million.

Mitchell Glassman, FDIC assistant area director, said agency employees will "work 24 hours for the next two days. We've got to balance out the bank. We've got to know exactly what the new bank retains in deposits and what the FDIC retains in assets.".

He said about 50 FDIC examiners and auditors entered the bank after it closed for business Friday.

Although Mayor Jameil Aryain was out of town late Friday, Clark, who was Seminole mayor from 1972 to 1980, confirmed reports that the bank was experiencing problems.

He said the Seminole area was beset with agriculture woes dating back about 10 years. Farming has been "going downhill since 1973," he said.

"On top of that came the energy bust," Clark said. "This bank had both farm and energy loans."

Former Glenn supporters are being sought

AUSTIN (AP) — Telephones were ringing in homes of former backers of John Glenn as campaign workers for Walter Mondale and Gary Hart tried to convince them to make the switch.

Glenn dropped out of the Democratic presidential race Friday leaving Mondale, Hart and Jesse Jackson in the nomination race.

"After Super Tuesday, we believe we can pick up the bulk of his (Glenn's) supporters not just in Texas but also in Mississippi, Oklahoma, Arkansas and other southern states," said John Pouland, Hart's coordinator in Texas and Oklahoma. "Glenn's base has primarily been in the southern states and Ohio, and we feel confident we can pick up the majority of his supporters in those states."

At the state headquarters of Mondale in Austin, Bobby Rogers, state campaign director, said Mondale supporters would begin an immediate drive to enlist Glenn's Texas backers.

"We think we have a chance to get most of Glenn's supporters," Rogers said. "When they look at Mondale and Hart, they will see that going for Mondale will keep the party united and will give the Democrats a better chance of beating Ronald Reagan in November."

"The Jesse Jackson campaign is moving upward," state Rep. Rl Edwards, D-Houston, state coordinator for Jackson, said after Glenn's announcement.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I'm trying to clean up things and get my life in order so I'll be able to devote the next seven months to the birth of Princess Di's and Prince Charles' second child.

Already I've made a notation of where I was and what I was doing when I got the news. I was having breakfast with my husband (half a grapefruit and a bowl of crispies with half a banana and skim milk) when I heard it announced on "Good Morning, America."

Anticipating all of my questions, a British spokesperson said if the new baby was a girl and was as "spirited" as her Aunt Anne was with her brother Prince Charles, it could give Prince William a run for his money. (Not to mention the United Kingdom and Canada.)

In the ensuing months, I must be prepared to absorb Princess Di's maternity wardrobe, her royal diet, and if we're lucky perhaps her milliner will "leak" sketches of the hat she will wear during delivery.

The nursery will come under scrutiny, as well as will her layette. Time, Life and Newsweek will have indepth interviews with the palace obstetrician, details about the new nanny and how the people of Great Britain are being prepared for the imminent birth. There's no doubt there will be a poll conducted to suggest a name.

The tackier tabloids will be busy dispensing updated graphs of what this does to the line of succession, with perhaps an outrageous quote by one of the princesses complaining that if they knew they were going to be this far removed from the throne they would never have practiced all that waving all those years.

Psychology Today will run a cover story on the psychological effects of the Cain and Abel sibling rivalry and a made-for-television movie is undoubtedly being put together as I write showing the royal couple planning a second child, starring Victoria Principal and Christopher Reeve.

Already I have read where a British gynecologist is warning of a copycat baby boom and suggesting that the royal couple stop at two children. "Women think it is a great distinction for their children to share the same birth year as a prince or princess and an influence like Diana would mean an extra 2,000 babies this year."

There were a lot of things I was going to do this year. I was going to clean out the hall closet, stitch my personal goals on a tea towel, plan a family reunion, and maybe start writing a new book, but all that has to go on the back burner. Getting a royal baby born is just too time-consuming.

DEMONSTRATION SCHEDULED–Local artists are invited to see a demonstration on the use of the airbrush Thursday afternoon at Western Texas College. Presenting the program will be Debora Schubert, a WTC graduate currently attending East Texas State University. She will also be displaying some of her paintings on which she has used the airbrush, giving the effect shown in the painting above. (WTC Photo)

Former graduate to present show

Debora Schubert, a student at East Texas State University, will present a demonstration on the use of the airbrush in paintings at Western Texas College on Thursday.

Schubert, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Freddie J. Schubert of Sweetwater, was graduated from Western Texas College cum laude with the associate of arts degree. At WTC, she was named to Who's Who Among Students in American Junior/Community Colleges. She was a member of Phi Theta Kappa, a national honor fraternity for junior college students, and of the Artisans Club.

She is now a junior student at ETSU where she is a member of Alpha Chi Honor Society. She is working toward the Bachelor of Fine Arts Degree specializing in painting.

On Thursday, Schubert will be demonstrating how the airbrush works and techniques that can be used. The demonstration will begin at 2 p.m. in the Fine Arts Building and is open to the public free of charge.

Houston man shelters passengers

HOUSTON (AP) — Jim Wallace Smith has found a way to help the commuters in his neighborhood who must wait in all kinds of weather for city buses that run on erratic schedules.

Smith, 68, built a luxury bus shelter from concrete and steel near his north Houston home.

"So many of them stand out there in the cold, rain and hot sun," said Smith, who is retired.

PRETTY GARDENS AND UGLY BACKACHES

There's nothing more flattering to a home than a well-kept yard, well-trimmed shrubs, and well-tended flower beds. Likewise, a vegetable garden that produces a bumper crop of tomatoes, turnips, and green beans is most flattering to its owner and a good pastime sometimes. Unfortunately, all too often it is painful for its participants.

Gardening and landscaping are great, if you recognize that they are activities that produce certain body stresses; if you recognize your own physical limitations; and, if you do them with good sense as well as enthusiasm.

Although gardening does not use tremendous surges of energy or force the body into shock situations as might be required by activities like competitive sports, it should be recognized that the health threat may be just as serious. Many health disorders are the result of awkward posture positions, use of muscles not conditioned for the activity, and overindulgence. Not necessarily accidents.

Doctors of chiropractic offer the following "golden rules" of gardening.

— Warm up your muscles to a task a few minutes before you embark on a tough project.

— Don't bend over for long periods of time without taking standing breaks.

— Don't lift more than you can handle.

— Wear clothing that does not restrict or confine your movements.

— Wear flat, comfortable shoes that offer firm support.

— Avoid iced drinks when overheated.

— Avoid doing your work in an awkward position.

— If you injure yourself or have aches and pains, see a health specialist immediately.

Don't let those beautiful chrysanthemums give you an ugly pain in the back!

Nurse loses job over call for help

DALLAS (AP) — A fire department nurse-dispatcher has been fired and a fire department captain demoted for their handling of a man's urgent plea for an ambulance for his stepmother, who died before help arrived.

Officials also announced Friday the suspension of a nurse-supervised screening program for emergency ambulance calls.

Two other department supervisors received reprimands, and Assistant Fire Chief Jackie Walton, who headed the department's communications section, retired, department officials said.

Walton was threatened with demotion several days ago and instead resigned, The Dallas Morning News reported.

Larry Boff has filed a $315,000 claim against the city because of the fire department's failure to dispatch an ambulance when he called on Jan. 5. An ambulance was dispatched to his home only after he argued with two fire department employees for several minutes about the urgency of the call.

By the time the ambulance arrived, Lillian Boff, 60, was dead.

Fire Chief Dodd Miller called a news conference Friday to announce the dismissal of nurse Billye Myrick, the dispatcher who took Boff's call. Her supervisor, Capt. Donald Greene, who also argued with Boff, was demoted to lieutenant.

Miller also said Walton had retired, effective immediately, and an ambulance supervisor and a section chief had been reprimanded.

Department spokesman Bill Jernigan said the written reprimands were given to fire section chief Mike Jones and to Lelani Starks, a registered nurse who supervised Ms. Myrick and four other nurses whose job it was to screen emergency calls.

Ms. Myrick admonished Boff for "cursing" during his call and repeatedly demanded to speak to the person in need of an ambulance. Despite Boff's insistence that his stepmother was incoherent, Ms. Myrick persisted.

Several minutes later, during a second call in which the nurse again asked to speak to the woman, Boff said that his stepmother had just died.

Miller also announced Friday that the ambulance-screening program was being suspended until the department could come up with ways to improve the system.

Firefighters will take over the screening of calls to determine if they are emergencies, department officials said.

The problems in the Boff case were a result of a "breakdown of the system because of rules violations," Miller said. He would not elaborate.

An ambulance normally is dispatched within 60 to 90 seconds in an emergency, Miller said. In the Boff case, he added, an ambulance should have been sent automatically because the call was made by someone other than the person who was ill.

Greene, who was shift supervisor, spoke briefly to Boff during his first call for an ambulance and said he would disconnect the call if Boff cursed again. He said Boff should do as Ms. Myrick said.

Boff, interviewed Friday by Dallas television station KDFW, said he thought city officials should also have fired Greene.

Assistant City Manager Camille Barnett, who joined Miller at the news conference, said the penalties imposed on some of the supervisors — who may not have had a direct involvement in the case — were because "managers are responsible for the actions of the employees."

She declined to comment on why city and fire department officials were not notified of the incident until Jan. 30, more than three weeks after it occurred.

Miller's announcement "shows me they are trying to take some corrective action that is greatly needed," Boff said.

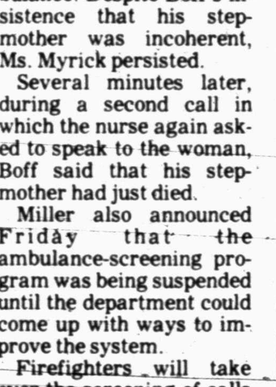

"I think I've paid a hell of a price to have the system corrected," Boff said. "Hopefully, through this, someone else will be spared this thing of not knowing whether this person would be alive today if the ambulance left when it should have."

Capital murder warrants issued

PALO PINTO, Texas (AP) — Two brothers who allegedly bragged to a Phoenix, Ariz., undercover police officer about killing a man in Texas were jailed without bond today in connection with the death of a Methodist minister.

No formal charges had been filed early today, but two Texas law officers said they would question the men Sunday about the slaying of the Rev. John H. Basham, 55.

The victim's body was found Feb. 9 in a van along Interstate 20 south of Gordon.

Basham was reported missing by his family on Feb. 8 after he failed to show up at a ministerial conference in Dallas. He was to have accepted an award the previous day as the outstanding Methodist minister in his district.

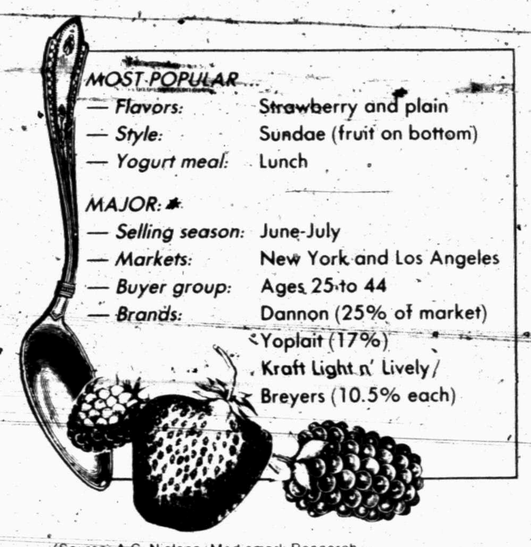

Palo Pinto County Justice of the Peace Adron Nicks said capital murder warrants were issued here about 12:05 a.m. Friday, less than three hours after the men were arrested at a motel in downtown Phoenix on allegations that they tried to sell a stolen car.

Phoenix police Sgt. Brad Thiss said the brothers divulged details of the slaying to police while being investigated for numerous car thefts in the Phoenix area.

GETTING CULTURED

Yogurt has shaken its 'alien' image

(Source: A.C. Nielsen, Mediamark Research, United Dairy Industry Association)

NEA GRAPHIC Marilyn Post

Yogurt has become an '80s phenomenon. It has been sold in the United States for more than 40 years, but was long viewed as strange and exotic. The current focus on health and diet has boosted its popularity — even though many yogurts are loaded with sugar and additives and are far from "natural."

Shamrock plans usual activities

SHAMROCK, Texas (AP) — The folks in this most Irish of Texas cities claim their St. Patrick's Day celebration is second only to New York in size and splendor and they'll argue that bigger is not necessarily better.

"We probably do have more fun," quipped Howard Weatherby, general chairman of the 38th St. Patrick's Celebration that got under way Friday evening with a barbecue and banquet.

Weather permitting, officials say, as many as 30,000 visitors will descend on this green-hued Panhandle city of 3,000 Saturday for a unique blend of Texas-flavored Irish revelry.

Maybe that should be Irish-flavored Texas revelry, since the activities include team roping and calf roping, dancing and a fiddlers' contest.

Whatever, there is no evidence to suggest that St. Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland, ever frowned on fiddling and roping.

And surely he'd approve of the Miss Irish Rose contest. In the beginning, it was the Wild Irish Rose contest, but someone decided that sounded a little too racy.

"It's a great celebration; it really is," insists Bill Howe, the fiesty editor-publisher of the weekly Shamrock Texan who traditionally dyes his beard green and publishes his St. Patrick's Day edition on green paper.

"This probably has been one of the most successful community identification events in the Southwest. ... I've seen crowds so thick out there you couldn't stir em.

"It depends on the weather," he added, no doubt displeased that Friday dawned chilly and wet and with overcast skies.

The theme this year is "Irish Galore in '84," and Main St. is aglow with green welcome signs and decorations and the noble little three-leafed plants for which the city is named.

"Our main street runs from Laredo on the border of Old Mexico to the Canadian border," says Mayor Seibert Worley with the straightest of faces.

"I do not know of a longer main street in this country."

Actually, Main St. is also U.S. 83, which intersects I-40, old Route 66, on the northern tip of town. That's why Shamrock calls itself the "Crossroads of America" when it's not "Irish City, U.S.A."

"In my opinion, we have the best-located town in the Texas Panhandle," said Worley, who is serving his seventh term as mayor of a city he obviously and openly adores.

The mayor and many of the townspeople were mightily miffed over an Associated Press story last year that cast Shamrock in a bad economic light.

Worse yet, the article pointed out that the green paint was peeling off the Blarney Stone pillar in Elmore Park. The stone is said to have been imported from Ireland's Blarney Castle in 1959.

"I never saw a madder group of people," recalled Worley with a chuckle. "They were mad as hell."

Phony CIA agent gets scuba account

HOUSTON (AP) — A Pasadena man accused of posing as a CIA agent so he could buy scuba gear at bargain prices has been charged with impersonating a government official, federal officials say.

Paul Alan White, 30, was arrested and charged Thursday when authorities discovered he used a government identification card to buy scuba gear at less than half-price, officials said.

U.S. Magistrate H. Lingo Platter released him on a $5,000 personal recongizance bond. If convicted he faces a maximum sentence of three years in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Officials claim White found a government identification card on the floor of the building where FBI and Secret Service offices are located. White touched up the ID card to make it look like a CIA card, officials said.

White is accused of using the card to persuade the owner of a Webster, Texas scuba shop last November that he was a CIA agent.

The owner then offered him discount rates on his purchases, eventually saving him more than 50 percent on diving equipment, court records show.

Federal prosecutor Mark Bailey said giving discounts to government officials is a common perk.

Investigators said that by late February, White had bought $1,088 worth of equipment for only $488.

White is on probation in Harris County after being convicted of credit card abuse, officials said.

College to host judging teams

Western Texas College will host students from several area high schools on March 21 for livestock and land judging contests, Bob Doty, WTC assistant professor of agriculture, aid.

About 100 students from 20 schools are expected to participate in the livestock judging, while about 40 students from 10-15 schools are expected for the land judging. All the students will meet at the coliseum at 1:30 p.m. and livestock judging will take place in the agriculture annex there. Land judging contestants will be taken to a pre-selected site for their competition.

Awards in both contests are to be presented about 6 p.m.

Sam Buchanan, district conservationist with the local Soil Conservation Service, will be assisting with the land judging. Students will be doing official classing of land according to state FFA rules.

In the livestock contest, students will be grading slaughter swine and steers and feeder cattle, selecting breeding gilts and heifers, and placing slaughter swine and steers, breeding ewes and market lambs.

Business classes are most popular

University for blacks still going

CHEYNEY, Pa. (AP) — Twenty-four years before the start of the Civil War, the first U.S. college created specifically for blacks was founded at the bequest of a Quaker whose family held slaves.

Cheyney University, as it is now known 147 years later, is still a pathway to upward mobility for blacks. It guards its proud identity while it works to satisfy desegregation orders by attracting whites.

"We have not reached the point of an egalitarian society in America. Until we do, there will always be a place for historically black universities such as Cheyney," says school president Dr. C.T. Enus Wright.

"We have a role, a mission to reach the majority of black students who need an opportunity to mature and become leaders and to reach all students who have an interest in education," he adds.

"There have been those who question the continuing existence of historically black institutions. This university will survive. We are the oldest historically black university in the country, and we must maintain that character."

Cheyney's heritage is rooted with Quaker Richard Humphreys, a Philadelphia goldsmith and silversmith who set aside one-tenth of his estate for a school "to instruct descendants of the African race in school learning ... to prepare and fit and qualify them to act as teachers."

In 1837, the Institute for Colored Youth opened in Philadelphia at a time when laws barred blacks from white schools. The school moved to its rustic, 275-acre site 24 miles west of the city in 1903, and in 1920 it became part of what is now known as the Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education.

The first full-time white student was admitted in 1947, seven years before the U.S. Supreme Court struck down the "separate but equal" concept that barred blacks from white public schools.

But desegregation meant turbulent times at Cheyney because the historical character was destroyed at traditionally black schools such as West Virginia State College, Bluefield State College and Lincoln University in Missouri.

Then, last August, a balance was struck that preserves Cheyney's identity and gives it more money to attract white students.

Van Zandt spent life in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 40 years ago, Jimmie Van Zandt stood on the floor of the House and resigned his seat to go to war.

"My resignation is the result of my intense desire to serve my country in the armed forces as a member of the United States Navy," he told his colleagues on Sept. 23, 1943.

The rest of Congress didn't feel the same urge. But President Franklin D. Roosevelt had a few words for the third-term Republican from Altoona, Pa.

"I envy you, Van Zandt," the congressman recalls FDR telling him. "If I didn't have these (tapping his paralyzed thighs), I'd do the same thing."

For Van Zandt, dispatched with prayers and praise from his fellow lawmakers, World War II turned out to be a short interruption in a Capitol Hill career that has spanned nine presidents and generations of change.

A graduate of the Pennsylvania Railroad Apprentice School and a railroad worker for 22 years, Van Zandt arrived in Washington when each congressman had one secretary and one aide instead of a 25-member staff and a couple of district offices.

He served another 22 years in Congress, taking time out for World War II, then represented two Pennsylvania governors in Washington. Now, with his health beginning to fail, he's winding up 20 years as volunteer secretary, peacemaker and Dutch uncle to the state's congressional delegation.

"I was 85 the other day and I'm beginning to realize I'm not as young as I used to be," the trim, silver-thatched Van Zandt declares in his booming voice. "I've decided I've had enough. I only regret that I'm not younger."

Van Zandt's long-term love affair with Capitol Hill sets him apart from less enamored representatives who choose to leave before their constituents are ready to retire them.

"I was very enthusiastic about my job," he says. "To be one of the 11,000 or 12,000 that have served in the Congress since this country began, I considered a high honor and also a great challenge. I enjoyed every minute."

In his heyday, Van Zandt played basketball, ran track and field and even tried out for the U.S. Olympic track team in 1924.

His penchant for keeping fit paid off 30 years later when three Puerto Ricans fired into Congress from the House Gallery. Van Zandt dodged bullets as he dove to the floor, crawled to the Republican cloakroom, ran up the steps to the gallery and seized one of the armed terrorists — in two minutes' time.

A specialist on defense, veterans affairs and atomic energy, Van Zandt traveled the world with Lyndon Johnson and Henry Jackson. He campaigned in California for a House candidate named Richard Nixon. He played handball with Jerry Ford, served in the Pacific with John Kennedy and politicked, or tried to, with Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Once he asked Ike to help a fellow Republican, Rep. Arch Moore of West Virginia, who had a political problem in his re-election campaign.

"Ike said, 'I am not interested interested in politics, congressman. I am not a politician,'" Van Zandt recalls. "He didn't help me out."

A rear admiral and threetime national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the energetic Van Zandt says he has given more than 10,000 speeches in 67 years. Three years ago he filled in for Rep. Bill Clinger, R-Pa., at a Clearfield County corn boil.

"He's an orator in the old style. He gave a real stemwinder," Clinger says with a smile, puffing on his pipe. "They told me it was the best speech they'd heard in 10 years. I thought Jimmie might run in the primary against me. He gives 'em hell."

This August, Van Zandt will attend a ceremony dedicating the James E. Van Zandt Veterans Administration Medical Center in Altoona, Pa. Congress approved the name last year in a tribute to a stalwart who resisted leaving until the last possible minute.

"My life has been the Congress. I love the atmosphere. I enjoy being part of it," says Van Zandt.

Gypsies object of discrimination

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — "Gypsies?" sniffs an urbane Hungarian, with a wave of his fork that nearly punctures the unnoticed but ubiquitous Gypsy violinist hovering at his table. "They are, well ... not like us."

Even in Hungary, where authorities try hard to accommodate a large Gypsy minority, discrimination is rife. Elsewhere in Eastern Europe, "the Gypsy problem" ranges from serious to critical.

Gypsy clans have eluded governments ever since migrating from India at least 1,000 years ago. Many still live in ragged camps at the edge of towns, looking as if their great migrations began last week.

More than half of Europe's 5 million Gypsies live in Romania, Hungary, the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia and Bulgaria. Another 800,000 are in Yugoslavia.

They outnumber non-Gypsies in some districts of Eastern Europe. And officials note, with clear alarm, that their birth rate can be more than three times that of non-Gypsies.

Soviet bloc governments, which do not class Gypsies as a separate minority, are pressing to integrate them. Many Gypsies resist, and most find that integration is not easy.

"Many have settled and assimilated," says a Gypsy scholar who asked not to be identified even by nationality. "But we are still seen as Gypsies, kept from the best jobs and humiliated. This creates tremendous problems for the young who must decide who they are."

Gypsies wander with ease among the pillars of rigid societies. Odd jobs and artful foraging fill cooking pots. Clans share their passing fortunes. Living on the road is legally indistinguishable from camping.

In Romania, where Gypsies are most numerous, a Western diplomat says, "They are despised by the population, and their situation is very, very, very poor. It's amazing, but none rise to prominence."

In Hungary, where conditions are better, dissident social commentator Lazslo Rajk says, "Gypsies are treated the way blacks were in the States 20 years ago. Equal but..."

Government officials argue that Gypsy parents often keep their children out of school and teach them to flout authority, forcing them to be outcasts.

Similar conflicts arise in France, Spain and other Western European countries with sizable Gypsy populations. But Eastern European societies are less flexible, and Communist governments frown on the Gypsies' non-visible means of support.

In the Soviet bloc, where "parasitism" is a criminal offense and all citizens must register a fixed address, the Gypsies' way of life is seen as a political threat.

Miloslav Prucha, a senior Czechoslovak Labor Ministry official who deals with Gypsy affairs, says in Prague, "We have had considerable results in raising their cultural level." But he says many refused to adapt to settled society.

"They have equal rights with all citizens and get special housing subsidies," he says. "Gypsies are very well aware of their rights and social benefits — they are the first to get because they know best what is available."

Across Eastern Europe, Gypsies are visible in cliche images.

Center considers two group tours

The Senior Citizens Center is offering local senior citizens the opportunity to join a group for a trip to California or Scandanavia or both places this summer, Gloria Shaw, director, said.

The center could sponsor both trips if there are as many as 15 persons interested in going. Departure for the California tour would be June 9, with a deposit of $75 required by March 30 to confirm a reservation. Departure for the 15-day trip to Scandanavia would be July 30 and a despoit of $200 is required by April 13.

Total cost for the California vacation would be $1,091 per person, based on double occupancy. Complete payment is required by April 20.

The trip to Norway, Sweden and Denmark will cost a total of $2,486, with final payment due by June 8.

The California trip will take nine days, with the first stop in San Francisco. Other stops would include Lake Tahoe, Yosemite, the Hearst Castle, Morro Bay, Santa Barbara and Los Angeles. The group will fly to San Francisco and travel down the coast by air conditioned motorcoach.

Swingers to entertain at local Senior Center

The Swingers, a singing group from Snyder High School, will entertain at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday in the Senior Citizen Center. The group is directed by Bill Lyon and will present a program of varied music.

On Monday, the center will host a senior citizens choir from Sweetwater. Their program will also begin at 11:30 a.m.

Reservations for the annual recognition banquet sponored by the center are due by Friday. Everyone planning to attend must make a reservation because of the food preparation involved. This year's menu will include chicken breast in wine sauce, vegetables and salad and strawberry pie for dessert.

Because of the March 29 banquet, there will be no noon meal in the center on that date.

Senior citizen volunteers will be assisting with the distribution of surplus cheese and butter Wednesday in the cenior center. Persons eligible for the commodities may also fill out the required forms in the center on Wednesday.

Appeal requests claims be halted

AUSTIN (AP) — The state has appealed a judge's order that held unconstitutional the Texas workers' compensation law, excluding farm and ranch workers from on-the-job injury benefits.

Attorney General Jim Mattox said the appeal was filed with the 3rd Court of Appeals in Austin on Friday.

Almost immediately, State District Judge Harley Clark granted a stay of his original order, pending completion of the appeal.

Mattox said Friday he filed the appeal in order to give the Legislature time to act on a new so-called compromise drawn up by the Joint Committee on Farmworkers Insurance. Gov. Mark White has been asked to include the proposal in the special legislative session scheduled this summer.

Mattox was joined at a news conference by Tony Korioth, chairman of the joint committee, who said nearly all of the 25 members of the committee had agreed on the compromise.

Another so-called compromise failed to get approval of Korioth's committee in December because of opposition from the Texas Farm Bureau.

"I expect the Texas Farm Bureau will not be one of those who approves this bill," Korioth said Friday, "but we have the four state senators on the committee, three of the four representatives and more than 20 members of the committee."

"If we can present the governor with a bill with sufficient signatures of legislators as co-sponsors, I think he will put it on the agenda," Korioth said.

Clark signed a permanent injunction last week that would make the Industrial Accident Board consider any injury claim from a farm or ranch worker if the employer had workers compensation insurance on any other workers. His stay, however, puts that order on hold.

"There is a question of just which workers are covered and which are not," Mattox said.

Governor announces work on atom-smasher

AUSTIN (AP) — Four Texas universities, working together, have entered what scientists call a friendly race to build the world's largest microscope to probe deeper within the heart of the atom.

Gov. Mark White announced a $5.1 million research project Friday that he said could lead to the construction of "the most powerful scientific tool ever built."

"This revolutionary device would function as the world's largest mieroscope, capable of viewing the smallest bits of matter existing inside the atom," White told a news conference.

The governor said the Houston Area Research Center had received a $2.2 million U.S. Department of Energy grant to go with $2.9 million put up by the center, the University of Wisconsin and four national laboratories.

The center is one of three research groups developing designs for the huge atom-smasher, and a release from the center described the design efforts as "friendly competition."

Others working on a design are the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory in Illinois and a collaboration between the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory in California and the Brookhaven National Laboratory in New York.

Scientists at the Houston-area center, which is a consortium of Texas A&M, Rice, the University of Texas at Austin and the University of Houston, would receive scientific help and equipment from Japan.

"We should not be at all xenophobic in this," Texas A&M physics professor Peter McIntyre told reporters. "It is an enterprise for all of mankind — it's not an enterprise for the United States."

The project is to design a Superconducting Super-Collider, or SSC, that would hurl beams of protons in opposite directions in an underground concrete tunnel that would be at least 100 miles in circumference. When the protons approach the speed of light, they are made to collide, releasing subatomic particles and giving scientists an electronic view of the atom's inner structure.

McIntyre described it as "peeling the onion of matter to look for this ultimate little kernel of reality."

At 40 trillion electron-volts — 20 trillion volts per proton beam — the SSC's collision energy would be 20 times greater than what can be achieved at any existing accelerator.

"Here's an interesting fact. Eighty percent of all accidents that occur in the home are caused by simple negligence."

Quality doesn't have to cost $2.5 billion

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says Texas may not be able to afford the $2.5 billion price tag on public school reforms but can get quality education for less.

The Select Committee on Public Education this week in Dallas recommended reforms that state Comptroller Bob Bullock estimated would cost $2.408 billion.

"I don't know that we can afford that ... but I do know there are some changes that will rather dramatically lower that cost if the Legislature is willing to make those changes, and I think they would," White told a news conference Friday.

The governor has said he would call a special legislative session to act on the committee's recommendations.

The committee's most expensive recommendation — $906.5 million — was for an average class size of 15 pupils through the fourth grade, and White said, "We can get the lower pupil ratio at a much lower cost, and I think we certainly will make an effort."

White was asked if he was for a State Board of Education appointed by the governor, which would replace the 27-member elected board, and he said, "Yes, I am."

He was asked how he could reconcile favoring an appointed Board of Education and an elected Public Utility Commission, and he said the PUC "tends to take money out of your pocket" by setting utility rates. "I think, if nothing else, under the theory of no taxation without representation you can build a very strong argument for electing the Public Utility Commission."

"The Texas Board of Education does not raise your taxes, they spend your money," White said. "And I think it's very easy to suggest that maybe someone can spend that money more wisely through an appointed board."

"Let's just remember that the reason we're having this (education) problem is that we've been doing it the old way, and I think change is what we're looking for," White said.

Asked if an extra $2.5 billion was too much to pay for education, White said, "I don't think that it's necessary to achieve the goals of that committee."

He was also asked if the special legislative session might "go along with half" the $2.5 billion, and he replied, "Possibly. It's a little hard to say. I think we're right now in the setting of priorities, trying to accomplish as many of those recommendations at the lowest cost possible."

"I believe we will have dramatic change in the quality of education," he said.

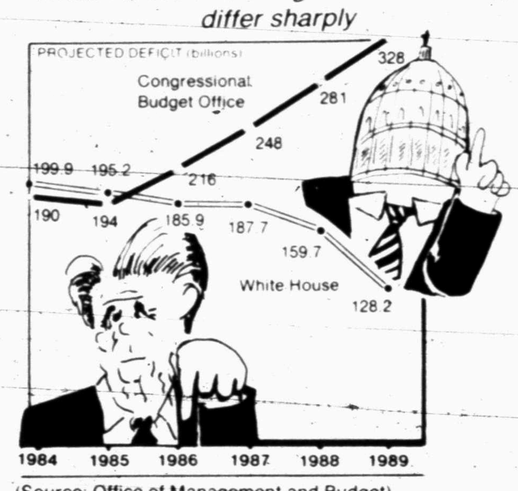

Crack safe to win the contest

BALTIMORE (AP) — Only an honors student in larcency might be able to pass the latest test at Johns Hopkins University — trying to crack a vintage safe for a $100 prize.

University officials don't know the combination of the lock and don't want to damage the safe, but would like to know what's been inside it since the 1920s or 1930s. Three weeks ago, university President Steven Muller offered $100 to any undergraduate who could open it.

FEDERAL AID TO WOMEN

Of the nation's 84 million households, nearly 30 percent are headed by women. Many of them benefit from at least one of the four major federal programs providing food, housing and medical assistance.

Miami 'very quiet' following violence

MIAMI (AP) — Sporadic violence continued early today in three black neighborhoods as the arrest toll rose past 370 from two nights of unrest, sparked by the manslaughter acquittal of a Hispanic police officer who shot a black man to death.

But as morning neared, the city was "very quiet," said Metro-Dade Officer Sue Munn.

Sniper fire broke out late Friday in an apartment complex a few miles north of the neighborhood of Liberty City, scene of a 1980 racial disturbance that left 18 people dead. Those riots also were sparked by the acquittal of police in the slaying of a black.

No one was injured in the sniper incident. But by early today, police said, at least 34 people, including four police officers, had received minor injuries in disturbances that began Thursday evening after an all-white jury quickly returned an innocent verdict in the manslaughter trial of Officer Luis Alvarez.

Alvarez fatally shot Nevell Johnson Jr., 20, in a video arcade in December 1982, sparking several days of rioting. During his trial, the officer testified he fired after seeing Johnson reach for a gun, a .22-caliber "Saturday night special."

Police Sgt. Larry Scheer said four to six young black men late Friday randomly fired small-caliber weapons from the apartments at police. Another officer at the scene, who asked not to be identified, said several shots had been fired at passing civilian cars as well.

Police tactical squads surrounded the buildings and conducted a room-by-room search. No weapons were recovered.

Later, five men were arrested at the apartment complex. Police Officer Maria Caro said three were charged with disorderly conduct, one with loitering and prowling and one with throwing "a deadly missile."

There was repeated but minor rock- and bottle-throwing throughout the night in the predominantly black Coconut Grove and Overtown sections of the city. Many streets were littered with broken glass, rocks and chunks of concrete.

As of early today, 371 people had been arrested by county and city police since Thursday night, officers said. At least a dozen businesses were ransacked and three warehouses were torched.

Seven people were arrested early today, on burglary charges in isolated incidents in Liberty City, Miami Police Officer Mike Stewart said.

Alien witness plan is probed

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — U.S. Attorney Edward C. Prado has complied with a federal court order by drawing up new guidelines that would reduce lengthy jail time for illegal aliens held as material witnesses in smuggling cases.

A class-action lawsuit was filed to stop the practice after four undocumented workers were jailed 10 months while waiting to testify in an alien-smuggling trial.

The aliens never were charged with anything and even were farmed out to work at a feedlot for 85 cents an hour.

Prado's plan was a response to an order by U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions to stop the practice of routinely jailing aliens to testify against accused smugglers.

The plan was filed Thursday, but still must be approved by area federal judges.

The program would limit government detention of illegal aliens to no more than 48 days, and would give priority for return to Mexico to women, children, the old and the infirm.

The U.S. attorney also called for earlier deadlines for indictments following smuggling arrests and for plea bargains, and said videotaped testimony by the aliens could be used during trials.

Only three witnesses will be held in smuggling cases from now on, instead of four, he said.

In El Salvador...

American photographer killed

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Twenty-five leftist rebels and at least 14 government troops died in a guerrilla attack on the town of Suchitoto, military and civilian sources said. The rebels burned the town hospital, ambushed troops and fought house-to-house with soldiers.

A photographer for Newsweek magazine was killed Friday as he headed for Suchitoto.

More fighting was reported north of the Torola River Friday during a nearly two-week-old sweep through San Miguel province by the 3rd Infantry Brigade. Two soldiers and 12 rebels were reported killed there.

The Guerrillas' Radio Farabundo Marti, the official voice of the Popular Liberation Forces, said about 400 guerrillas attacked Suchitoto, 27 miles northeast of San Salvador, Friday.

Military officials in Suchitoto said four police were killed and at least 10 government troops wounded in fighting inside the town, a once prosperous trade center. Journalists returning from Suchitoto said an additional 10 government troops were killed by the guerrillas in roadside skirmishes.

The Defense Ministry issued a statement saying soldiers killed 25 rebels, but the ministry gave no details.

Suchitoto was home to 15,000 people before the civil war broke out 4½ years ago. Most residents have since fled the area, and only some 5,000 people remain.

Newsweek magazine photographer John Hoagland, from San Diego, Calif., was shot and killed Friday as he traveled to cover the fighting in Suchitoto. Hoagland, 36, and Time magazine photographer Robert Nickelsberg were walking with government soldiers when they were ambushed from behind by rebels about 14 miles north of San Salvador.

"We got sprayed with bullets and one of them got him," said Nickelsberg, adding he was not sure whether the fatal bullet came from the rebel or government side.

The government fears rebels will attack polling stations during the presidential election March 25, but the rebels have they will not try to disrupt the voting.

A Salvadoran leftist leader says Western countries should not send observers to the election.

"You don't have to go to El Salvador to know what is happening. It is just political tourism, what they are going to do," said Guillermo Ungo, president of the Democratic Revolutionary Front, in Montreal for a three-day conference on Latin America.

The front is the political organization suppporting guerrillas who have been fighting El Salvador's U.S.-backed government.

Ungo said countries who send observers to the election are tacitly approving the Reagan administration's Salvadoran policies, which the rebels oppose. Canada is among several Western countries planning to observe the voting.

Potholes are to be adopted

BLACKFOOT, Idaho (AP) — Those lovable potholes that bring cars to their knees and send motorists through the roof are up for adoption in this Idaho town.

Under the program, residents can go to City Hall and identify potholes they wish to help repair. The adoption fee ranges from $5 to $25, depending on the size of the hole and its location.

The adoptive parents will be given a certificate noting the donation and the location of the pothole, which supposedly, will receive loving attention from the street department.

"Blackfoot's streets are in bad shape and the number of potholes continues to grow to alarming proportions," Councilman Lynn Bales said Wednesday, adding he would adopt the first $25 pothole.

"It's a novel idea that just might work," Councilman Terry Hawley said. "It really sounds like a fun way to celebrate spring."

Councilman Mike Simpson also endorsed the adoption program and kicked in $25 to buy a pothole for his wife's birthday March 24.

Goodyear store has new owner

McWhorter's, a Lubbock Goodyear dealer for more than 40 years, Friday announced the purchase of the Snyder Goodyear Tire Store, 1701 25th.

Bill Tanner, president of McWhorter's, announced the purchase of Permian Tire and Supply from Don Glaser.

New manager of the Snyder store will be Bob Lang, former service manager of one of the firm's three stores in Lubbock.

Lang, a native of Hays, Kan., has been associated with Goodyear since 1971. He was a member of the Lubbock Lions Club. He and his wife, Debbie, have three children.

Tanner and partner Virgil Rickel purchased McWhorter's five years ago. Both men have been associated with Goodyear for more than 15 years.

Tanner said store hours will be from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 7:30 until needed on Saturday.

Tanner said the backbone of the company is automotive tires and service and oilfield and farm tire needs. "We can be called day or night, weekends and holidays and we will respond to our customer needs," Tanner added.

Tanner said that many Snyder area companies have used McWhorter's Truck Center in Lubbock. He said a fleet service would be available here. "Our philosophy is to offer quality products backed by top-notch service," Tanner said.

In addition to tires, service work will include front-end alignments, brake, shocks and muffler work.

Tanner said the company will honor national accounts. Also Scurry County customers with the Goodyear Silver Card will be able to use them locally. The firm will also honor Visa, Mastercharge and American Express.

To compete with USFL...

NFL considers drafting college undergraduates

NEW YORK (AP) - The National Football League, confronted by the loss of college stars to the United States Football League, is trying to work out a plan to include undergraduates in its draft, The Associated Press has learned.

The USFL, in less than two years, has signed undergraduate running backs Herschel Walker and Marcus Dupree and about a dozen potential first-round NFL draft choices. Further influencing the NFL is the successful suit against the USFL by University of Arizona dropout Bob Boris.

"The discussions have just been in general terms right now, but the league feels, in view of the Boris case and the loss of Walker and Dupree, that it has to do something to retain a share of good players," said a source close to the NFL, who asked not to be identified. "We're trying to work out the details. We don't know yet what we can live with."

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said he believes there is little likelihood undergraduates will be included in the next draft, scheduled for May 1. Still, the fact that the NFL is talking about including them is a major shift in league policy.

Under current rules, the rights to a drafted player who doesn't turn pro are retained by the drafting club for one year, then he re-enters the draft. If he again fails to sign within one year, the player becomes a free agent. There is concern that a star undergraduate drafted twice but not signing before his eligibility expires could be a free agent at the end of his final year in college.

Under NCAA rules, a player loses his college eligibility only after negotiating with a pro team, hiring an agent or declaring himself eligible for the draft. Just being drafted, the NCAA said, would not cost a player his eligibility.

The NFL begins a week of meetings in Honolulu on Sunday, following Competition Committee meetings the past few days in Maui. "I can't say whether it (drafting undergraduates) has been talked about out there," Rozelle said from NFL headquarters in New York before leaving for the meetings, "but it is my feeling it will not be seriously considered until we're forced into it by agents and the legal situation."

Rader injects winning into Rangers program

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) - It was the remark "winning ugly" that kind of set things off.

Doug Rader, the outspoken manager of the Texas Rangers, had directed the salvo at the Chicago White Sox.

Nothing, it seemed, could go wrong for Chicago. They won games under all sorts of circumstances - errors, walks, wild pitches.

Their victories may not all have been pretty, but the White Sox won the American League West Division by a record 20 games. Texas, which led the division at the All-Star break with a 44-34 record, lost 21 of 26 and by season's end had fallen to third, 22 games back.

Rader had made his point; so had the White Sox.

"It really had nothing to do with that," Rader said of his club's slide. "Plain and simple. We didn't play any different in the first and second half. We just got out horsed."

What probably happened was that Texas' inability to score runs finally had proved too big an obstacle to hurdle. They led the league in pitching and fielding in 1983, but they were second-to-last in run production.

The disappointments notwithstanding, Rader had guided the Rangers to 13 more victories than in 1982, and he had helped move the team up three places in the standings from sixth in his first year as a major league manager.

With his outgoing, unpredictable style, he had injected life into the Rangers. His "winning ugly" remark fit perfectly into a career style that many times has approached the outright bizarre.

For example, in spring training of 1983, Rader invited a bum into spring training. The man, unshaved and wearing old sneakers and a battered coat, had claimed to be a hitting coach. Rader let him hang around for a day, then sent him off with a letter of recommendation to New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner.

At the same time, however, Rader tried to instill pride and aggressiveness in his players. He gave inspirational talks that mixed revival-meeting intensity with belicose barroom hollering. He talked of dough boys charging over the hill, the red-white-and-blue, simple pride in performance and a matter of fans' rights to see a professional exhibition.

To a great degree, it worked. In the final analysis, though, the Rangers came up short because they had too little hitting to go along with their pitching. With the acquisition of Gary Ward from Minnesota, the improvement of players like Wayne Tolleson and Billy Sample, and some reshuffling, Rader hopes to rectify the situation.

"What a lot of people forget is that we didn't get over .500 last season until a couple of weeks before the All-Star break," says Rader, 39.

"We were playing against a California team that wasn't doing well. We had Seattle and Minnesota and Oakland. We played some teams that might have inflated our situation," Rader said. "They weren't playing very well, and we were.

Bo-Sox 4, Astros 2

COCOA, Fla. (AP) - Boston's Reid Nichols drove in two runs with a sacrifice fly and a single to lead the Red Sox to a 4-2 exhibition baseball victory over the Houston Astros Friday.

Bob Stanley, 1-1, got the victory, pitching three innings and allowing one hit. Houston starter Mike Scott, who went six innings for the Astros and yielded two runs, was the loser.

Chico Walker singled and scored on Nichols' sacrifice fly in the fourth inning and Marty Barrett scored the second Red Sox run in the sixth on Nichols' single.

Boston's remaining runs came in the seventh on Stanley's sacrifice fly and Barrett's double.

Houston got one run in the third on Jose Cruz' single and in the ninth on a single by Denny Walling.

Yankees defeat Texas Rangers

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) - Pinch-hitter Steve Kemp's sacrifice fly in the ninth inning drove home the winning run as the New York Yankees defeated the Texas Rangers 3-2 in exhibition baseball Friday night.

The Yankees began their rally when Don Baylor reached second on an error by third baseman Jim Anderson. Jim Bibby then walked Toby Harrah and Roy Smalley to load the bases and set the stage for Kemp, pinch-hitting for Brian Dayett.

Texas had taken a 2-0 lead on Gary Ward's run-scoring single in the fourth and Mike Richardt's double-play grounder with the bases loaded in the fifth.

The Yankees closed it to 2-1 in the bottom of the fifth on Smalley's homer off Frank Tanana and tied the game in the seventh on Dayett's sacrifice fly.

In an off-the-field development, the Yankees announced that outfielder Dave Winfield would be lost to the team for a week as the result of a two-stitch cut on his right hand suffered in Thursday night's game against the Baltimore Orioles. Winfield cut the hand in the sixth inning sliding back into first base when he was spiked by Orioles' first baseman Eddie Murray.

Dupree says he will retire from Cowboys

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Tight end Billy Joe DuPree, the Dallas Cowboys' "Mr. Reliable" for 11 years who played in 181 consecutive National Football League games, says he's retiring and won't be back unless Coach Tom Landry has an emergency.

DuPree said he wanted Landry to realize he needed to draft another tight end but added, "I told him if he got into real trouble he might want to give me a call."

DuPree said at his retirement party Friday that his fondest memories will come from the Super Bowl and scoring a touchdown as a runner.

"You just can't beat a Super Bowl victory as the greatest feeling of exuberance," DuPree said. "And to score a touchdown as a runner when you are a receiver is another tremendous thing for a player.

"Of course, I scored a touchdown running once out of fear, not because of my speed," he said.

DuPree, a No. 1 draft choice out of Michigan State in 1973, caught 42 passes for 680 yards in 1976, his best year receiving.

"Eleven years is a long time to play," DuPree said. "I decided to devote fulltime service to my business."

DuPree also said he believed Gary Hogeboom was the answer to the Cowboys' quarterback problems.

"I have no preference and I think Danny is excellent, but I believe Hogeboom has some qualities that Danny does not possess," DuPree said. "Both guys are qualified to do it, but I give Hogeboom the edge in leadership and aggressiveness."

He said Hogeboom wants the job and "will either push Danny into greatness or out of the (No. 1 position)."

DuPree was voted to the Pro Bowl three times and his nine touchdown catches in 1978 led all NFL tight ends in that department.

Andrews blanks Tigers

Pitcher Omar Trevino gave up only one hit and Andrews got three runs on error as the Mustangs blanked Snyder High School here Friday, 3-0 in semifinal action of the Snyder Baseball Tournament.

The loss put Snyder in Saturday's third place game against Plainview at 4 p.m. Andrews was to meet Lubbock Estacado in the championship game at 6. In other Saturday games, Dunbar and Levelland met at 11 a.m. for seventh place and Lamesa and Kermit fought in the consolation game at 1:30.

Estacado ripped Plainview 10-5 to advance to the finals while Lamesa popped Dunbar 11-6 and Kermit bombed Levelland 13-4.

Trevino, a three-year starter for Andrews, gave up a single to lead-off batter Chad Peterson, but it was the only hit he allowed over seven innings. Peterson eventually reached third, but was left stranded.

Snyder left eight batters on base as Trevino ended the fourth, fifth and sixth innings with strikeouts. He fanned 10 batters and gave up just two walks.

Charles Bollinger, 2-2, took the loss for Snyder. The junior hurler allowed only six hits and struckout eight batters, but got in trouble with five walks.

Destry Simpson slapped a first-inning, two-out double that led to Andrews' first score. Bollinger had fanned Rob Henderson for the third out of the inning but the pitch got past catcher Eddie McClure and Simpson ran home.

Andrews added insurance in the fifth. Bill Morrison led off with a walk and one out later Simpson reached on a base-on-balls. Both later scored on errors.

"Omar was tough. He got stronger as the game went on. He's a fine pitcher," said Snyder's Albert Lewis, who still thought Snyder should have gotten more hits. "We had plenty of chances but we didn't take advantage of them. He (Trevino) is a good pitcher but we should have gotten more hits than that. We're going to have to come up with some hitting somewhere.

"Charlie (Bollinger) did a good job. The walks hurt us, but we had some fielding problems that did damage too."

Lewis said he would probably start Jimmy Cain in Saturday's game.

Simpson and Trevino led all batters with two-for-two performances at the plate.

Lady Tigers take lead into Andrews tournament

ANDREWS -- The second District 2-4A girl's golf tournament is scheduled here Monday morning and Snyder's teams hope for a strong finish to keep them high in the overall standings.

Snyder A squad leads the district race by 20 strokes after the first tournament, held a week ago in Fort Stockton. The B team is in third place, only three strokes behind Andrews A.

A strong performance here could give the Tigers a big lead with just two tournaments remaining. Snyder's A shot a 380 to win the first meet, while Andrews came in at 400 and Snyder B was 403. In fourth place is Fort Stockton with a 408, followed by Andrews B at 411 and Pecos at 416.

Lisa Franklin shot a 79 to pace Snyder A and lead the medalist race. Lisa Sheelar of Fort Stockton and Kellie Nelson of Andrews each shot 91 while Angie Lay and Rebekah Powell of Snyder turned in 97s.

The district tournament road continues in Monahans on March 26 and in Sweetwater on April 2. All district tournaments tee off at 11 a.m.

Rebs test Miners in NCAA tourney play on Saturday

by The Associated Press

They've been the top-rated college basketball teams in the Western United States for most of the season, and now Texas-El Paso and Nevada-Las Vegas are ready for an old-fashioned shootout in the NCAA playoffs.

The ninth-ranked Miners and 13th-ranked Runnin' Rebels were to meet Saturday in the second half of a West Regional doubleheader at Salt Lake City after No. 7 Oklahoma played Dayton.

"We certainly do not want to get into any kind of running game with them," said Texas-El Paso Coach Don Haskins, aware of a high-powered Nevada-Las Vegas offense that has averaged 87.2 points a game. "We're not going to win that battle."

The contest was to be a study in styles - the Miners stressing defense and the Runnin' Rebels offense. UTEP senior forward Fred Reynolds, who is averaging a team-high 13.9 points per game, believed the Miners would need a superlative defensive effort.

"A key for us is to keep the score down in the 50s and 60s," Reynolds said. "If we do that, we can win."

Nevada-Las Vegas Coach Jerry Tarkanian envisioned a deliberate pace. "We wouldn't try to force them to run," he said. "We've played a lot of teams in a half-court game this year."

In other regional action today, top-ranked North Carolina faced Temple and Indiana met Richmond in the East at Charlotte, N.C. In the Mideast at Birmingham, Ala., third-ranked Kentucky tackled Brigham Young and No. 11 Maryland took on West Virginia. In the Midwest at Memphis, Tenn., No. 5 Houston met Louisiana Tech and 10th-ranked Purdue played No. 16 Memphis State.

In Friday night's action, Virginia escaped with a 58-57 win over Iona and Virginia Commonwealth nipped Northeastern 70-69 in the East Regional at East Rutherford, N.J. In the Midwest Regional at Milwaukee, Louisville routed Morehead State 72-59 and Villanova trimmed Marshall 84-72. In the Midwest at Lincoln, Neb., Illinois State beat Alabama 49-48 and Kansas stopped Alcorn State 57-56. In the West at Pullman, Wash., Washington whipped Nevada-Reno 64-54 and Southern Methodist stopped Miami of Ohio 83-69.

SMU beats Miami, Ohio

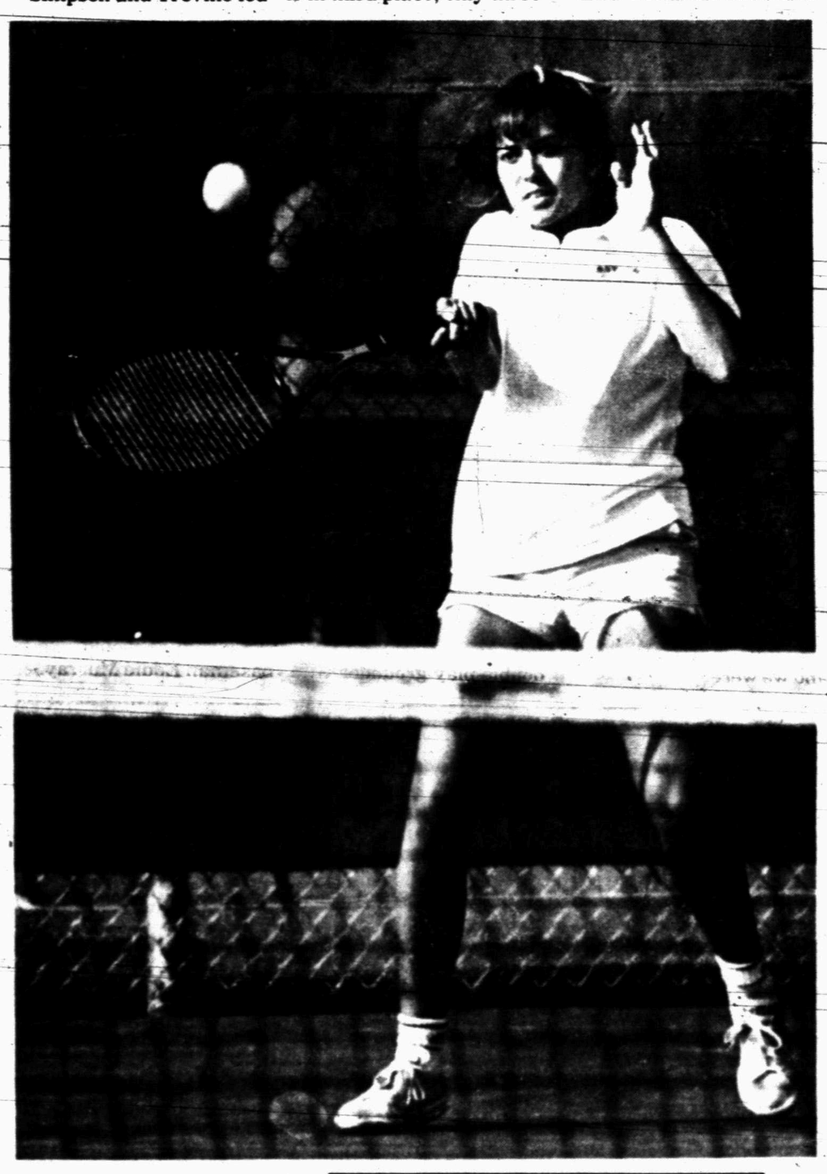

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) - Southern Methodist University scored the game's first 12 points and exploded behind 7-foot junior center Jon Koncak for an 83-69 victory over Miami of Ohio Friday night in a first-round game of the NCAA basketball tournament.

The win before a national television audience sends the Mustangs, 25-7, against powerful Georgetown at 3:30 p.m. Sunday in the second round of the West regional.

Miami's Redskins finished the season at 24-6.

Koncak had 19 points, six rebounds and two blocked shots by halftime, when SMU was leading 39-30. He finished with 32 ponts and seven blocks.

The Mustangs held Miami scoreless for the game's first five minutes. Miami hit eight of its next 10 shots to close to within 26-18, but could never get closer than seven points by intermission.

Lady Raiders defeated

RUSTON, La. (AP) - Second-ranked Louisiana Tech, hitting on four of every five field goal attempts in the second half, got a 13-for-17 performance from Pam Gant to defeat Texas Tech, 94-68, in Friday night's first round of the NCAA Midwest Regionals.

The Lady Techsters, 28-2, advance to the March 23 semifinals here against the winner of Sunday's game at Baton Rouge, La., between Missouri and Louisiana State University.

The Techsters scored 41 field goals in 63 attempts for a 65.1 shooting percentage, versus 43.3 percent for Texas Tech. They also used superior height to gain a 39-24 rebounding advantage.

Gant, a junior forward, led the second half charge with a 10-for-13 performance that enabled her to top all scorers with 26 points for the game. Three other Tech starters also scored in double figures - Janice Lawrence with 19, Pam Crawford with 11 and Debra Rodman with 10.

Carolyn Thompson, an all-Southwest Conference forward, had 23 points to lead Texas Tech, which finished its season at 23-7.

The winner of the first Belmont Stakes in 1867 was a 3-year-old filly named Ruthless.

Condo activity up on Alabama coast

PERDIDO KEY, Ala. (AP) — Anchored to pilings running 60 feet into the ground, highrise condominiums, built to withstand hurricane-force winds, have spread from Fort Morgan to Perdido Key, long a showcase stretch of pristine Alabama beachfront.

There are 80 condo projects either completed or under way on the 40 miles of Alabama Gulf Coast in an unprecedented development that began after Hurricane Frederic struck Sept. 12, 1979.

Building permits for Gulf Shores in the last fiscal year were $16 million, up $2.8 million over the year before. Little acreage is left for development in the town, sending builders west to Fort Morgan or east to the Florida line for future projects.

Ranging in size from as few as five units to more than 400, the condos have spawned miniindustries of condo furnishers, cleaning services, and a plethora of real estate agents, changing the "Redneck Riviera" into a "Condo Klondike."

But high tides of environmental concern have washed ashore around those condo pilings, particularly where sand dunes are threatened.

"I can go over there and pick sea oats and get fined, but they (the developers) can come in and bulldoze the sand dunes," says Stu Schmidt of Ono Island.

Residents of Ono Island, an enclave of about 200 resort homes at Perdido Key, formed a "Save the Dunes" coalition with environmentalists to challenge the Alabama Department of Environmental Management on two condo projects going up in sight of their homes.

The dispute was over the nebulous sand dune line. Developers must receive ADEM's permission to build on the beach, and the setback requirement is 40 feet behind the primary dune line.

But there has been uncertainty over the line.

In the months before Frederic struck the coast, new maps were prepared showing the dune line, but the hurricane rearranged the coastline. That doesn't mean the dune line was erased, according to engineers. Photos taken immediately after the storm showed where everything was prior to being swept away by Frederic, and outlined the new coast.

But ADEM recently hired University of South Alabama geologist George Lamb to redraw the dune line. He expects to complete the work by midsummer.

Lamb, who has been photographing Alabama's beaches for 20 years, says problems will always exist for beach developments because of the constantly shifting sands and storms like Frederic. He compared it to living on an earthquake fault.

He says the dune problem "shrinks in comparison" to the sewer problems. Gulf Shores officials are studying methods of handling the increased sewage, with one alternative being construction of an ocean outfall line.

Gulf Shores officials have worked with developers on the dune setback issue. "Gulf Shores determined the dune line with the Coastal Area Board," says George Phillips, the town's engineer.

Asked if the challenged condos at Perdido Key could have been built under Gulf Shores' setback rules, Phillips says, "No."

Ono resident Al DaCosta says his concern was that the condos would form a "breakwater" causing beach erosion on either side of the buildings that eventually would undermine the bridge over Ole River to the island. One project is across the highway from the island bridge.

DaCosta says Save the Dunes succeeded in getting government agencies to look into their complaints.

"We can't stop progress. It's safety we're concerned about," DaCosta says.

Thespians stage play

Ira High School will present "Androcles and the Lion" by Aurand Harris for this year's UIL one-act play competition which begins Tuesday in Klondike. Ira competes in District 6A, West Zone.

Sue Parham is the director. Cynthia Pattison made the costumes and Melissa Klepper serves as alternate cast member.

Regular cast members include Tom Brown, Androcles; Stacy Forbes, prologue; Jerilyn Trice, Pantalone; Roxanne Goodwin, Isabella; Jason Spradlin, Lelio; Stacy Forbes, lion; Rebel Royall, captain.

The stage crew consists of Irma Sanchez, stage manager and lights; Nikki Stewart, sound and K'ana Scott, curtains and make-up.

The Italian Renaissance gave birth in the 16th century to a characteristic type of popular theatre, later on called Commedia dell'Arte. "Androcles and the Lion" is written in this fashion. Commedia dell'Arte was improvised; there were no fixed texts. There were standard characters: Pantalone of Venice, a merchant; the boastful soldier capitano; but especially servants who muddled up their master's plans by being more clever than their masters.

Tom Brown will be remembered as Mr. Bagley, from last school year's presentation of "Years Ago." Stacy Forbes, likewise, will be remembered for his role as Mr. Sparrow. The other cast members are making their debut this year; however, Jason Spradlin was the lighting technician and Jerilyn Trice was the sound technician during last school year's production.

Irma Sanchez, senior, has served as stage manager for the past three years. The cast members are all sophomores and one freshman.

Last year's "Years Ago" went on to win zone, district, and area contests. At the regional contest Julie Kellner was named best actress and Patti Blagg earned a place on the all-star cast. Tom Brown, Kelly Bryant, and Scott Chapman received honorable mention.

The play, however, did not advance to the state contest, though many praised the performance.

Stanley uses Presley link to reach others

(Editor's Note: This is the second story in a series of three written for the SDN by Vicki Brown, local freelance writer and the wife of Calvin Brown, pastor of the Ave. D Baptist Church. In this issue, she recounts the message given Friday night by Rick Stanley at the Scurry County Crusade. In Monday's edition, she will report how planning for the large-scale effort came about.)

BY VICKI BROWN

"I am not a celebrity, I am a Christian I use whatever means I can to tell others about Christ." For Rick Stanley, the "vehicle" for reaching people is often his celebrity status as Elvis Presley's stepbrother.

Stanley told his story to a large crowd Friday night at the Scurry County Crusade. When he was four years old, he and his two brothers were placed in an orphanage because of his parents' divorce.

Two years later his mother married Vernon Presley and the boys moved to Graceland mansion.

"Elvis welcomed me into his family when it seemed nobody cared. He was one of the most generous men I have ever known. He was also very compassionate. Most of you already know how he helped finance St. Judes Hospital for Children in Memphis. I loved him and respected him for 18 years of my life."

Now Stanley considers his relationship to Elvis "old news." He is quick to point out that even though he loved and respected Elvis and despite the luxury in which he lived, he had problems like other teenagers.

He began experimenting with drugs and alcohol. By the time he was 17-years old, Stanley was addicted to heroin.

Through the influence of a friend, he turned to Christ in 1977. As a fulltime evangelist, he conducts about 48 revivals in this country, in Europe and Canada. He also speaks to high school students concerning the dangers of alcohol and drugs.

RICK STANLEY

When asked which direction his ministry will take in the future, Stanley said this summer he will enter Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary to continue his education.

Even though studies will limit his travel, he plans to conduct weekend revivals. In fact, he has speaking engagements booked through 1986.

He said he would like to become a fulltime pastor when his 19-month-old daughter reaches school age.

Rick Stanley's basic message whereever he goes is this, "Parents, it's time to wake up. Your kids are looking for real people in a phony world. God will put up with a lot, but he will not accept anyone who rejects His Son."

Land Bank gathering at C-City

The annual Federal Land Bank Association stockholders' meeting in Colorado City is scheduled Tuesday.

It will be conducted beginning at 1:30 p.m. in the C.C. Thompson Room of The City National Bank Annex Building.

An election of directors is planned and cash prizes totaling $1,000 will be drawn at the close of the meeting.

Judge stays Jernigan execution

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge has granted a stay of execution for Joseph Jernigan, 29, of Waco, who was scheduled on Monday to become the second Texas Death Row inmate in a week to die by lethal injection.

The order came Friday afternoon from U.S. District Judge Robert Porter of Dallas.

Obituaries

He is also survived by his wife; two sons, Bobby of Roby and John of Kansas City, Mo; two brothers, Carl of Stamford and Buster of Woodson; another sister, Artie Miller of Wichita Falls and six grandchildren.

Leader sentenced to death

HOUSTON (AP) — A Fort Worth man who claims to lead a prison crime syndicate has been sentenced to death by injection for his conviction in the slayiing of a bar owner.

Raymond Martinez, 37, was convicted Thursday of killing lounge owner Herman Chavis, 40, who was shot four times during a robbery. A jury returned the verdict after deliberating 45 minutes.

Prosecutors said Martinez also is named on charges of two other murders in Houston and a double slaying in Fort Worth.

Assistant District attorneys Kay Burkhalter and Lori Millberg said Martinez was released from prison in December, 1982 and went on a seven-month crime spree to raise money to finance the so-called Texas Syndicate, an in-prison crime organization.

"This is organized evil, it's evil with a long-term purpose," Ms. Burkhalter said in a statement before the six-man, six-woman jury. "He's trigger happy and he likes to kill."

FLAG PRESENTATION — Members of the Snyder Layne-Kite Post 181 of the American Legion held a dinner meeting Friday evening in observance of this week's 65th Anniversary of the founding of the vetern's organization. Highlight of the meeting was the presentation of a flag from the local post to the City of Snyder. On hand for the ceremonies were: (from left) H. L. McCormack, junior vice-commander of the local post; Ernie Armstrong and Rod Waller, representing the City of Snyder; and Post Commander Bill Anderson. Born in the wake of World War I, the Legion has sponsored a wide variety of programs, especially those for the nation's youth. The Legion was founded in Paris in 1919 at a meeting called by Lt. Col. Theodroe Roosevelt, Jr., and 19 other officers. The preamble to the constutition, adopted at a convention in St. Louis in May 1920 set forth the group's purposes in part as "to uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States, to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a 100 percent Americanism; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness." The Legion currently boasts 2.6 million members, veterans of World Wars I and II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War. (SDN Staff Photo)

Ed Meese fires back at critics

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edwin Meese III, with his nomination as attorney general increasingly under fire from Senate Democrats, says he has done nothing improper and is looking forward to testifying in a second round of hearings "so that the truth can prevail."

President Reagan's top policy adviser sent a combative statement to members of the Senate Judiciary Committee on Friday, declaring: "I've engaged in no improper act."

Meese lashed out at those he said were making "false and misleading statements" and said they were opposing his confirmation for election-year gains.

Meese's statement was released on Capitol Hill by the office of Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn.

tive Waste Disposal Authority is that both the surface and the mineral rights must be sold.

If a site could be secured in Borden County, it would become the fourth potential candidate for the state's first low-level waste facility.

Borden County residents have expressed heated opposition to the location of the site in their county. A meeting in Gail between authority representatives and some 300 county residents March 5 produced considerable negative comment regarding such a possibility.

The identity of the potential land seller has not been released by the state agency. This follows policy that the names of any potential sellers will not be reported until a legal agreement has been signed.

AFS visitor enjoying stay

Orlien has three brothers, ages 19, 13 and 3. His father services and sells campers in Oslo which is located in the southern tip of Norway.

When Orlien returns this summer he will be one year behind his classmates as he will have to repeat this current school year in a Norwegian school. But it doesn't seem to bother him. As he tells it, what he has learned this past school year is more valuable than being a year behind his friends.

Orlien has no future plans beyond returning to Norway and continuing his education. He is still a little "confused and unsure" about what he wants to become.

Even though Orlien came from a busy household in which he always shared his bedroom with two bothers, Mrs. Presswood said he adapted well to "being an only child."

Having a bedroom and bathroom all to himself has been quite a treat for him, Mrs. Presswood said.

Orlien humorously remarks that at his home in Oslo, bathroom time is carefully regulated starting with who has to get ready first getting to use the facilities first.

Orlien said that two things he had to get used to here were eating fried foods and the warmer weather. Temperatures in the 80s is about as hot as it gets in Oslo, he said.

Even as Orlien learned about America and Snyder in particular, the Presswoods both said they feel they have also learned about the Norwegian culture and lifestyle from their houseguest.

Orlien's parents write frequently to the Presswoods. Mrs. Presswood noted, "His family has been very warm towards us. We feel that we already know them and would love to meet them someday."

Life in Norway does have its differences and this is perhaps most noticable in its system of education.

For instance, students must attend a compulsory school for the first six years but then they are allowed to choose a private school if they wish.

Students are allowed very little time for extracurricular activities and the same class routine is not followed everyday. Instead, classes are arranged more like a college schedule.

Compulsory schools grade by marks and at the private schools the highest "grade" is the number 6. During the first few years of school, students are not graded but yearly letters are sent to parents explaining the child's progress.

Also students are not singled out for recognition such as being named to an honor roll. Norwegian schools do not have the equivalent of UIL competition either, Orlien said.

A few other differences concerns movies which are shown at the cinema, sometimes with commercials, and television which consists of a government-owned channel with no commercials allowed. Programs are aired between 6-11 p.m. and some American programs such as Dynasty and Dallas and various movies are shown.

Censorship is very strict, but when the offending part is cut out of a movie no effort is made to retain the continuity of the film, Orlien said. Once a movie is shown on the television channel it can be censored even more than it was when it was shown at the cinema, he said.

Orlien has visited Denmark, Finland and Sweden, but this is his first visit to the United States.

plays. School officials remind, however, that no one will be admitted to the auditorium while a performance is underway.

As in the zone competition held last week, the top two plays in Tuesday's competition will advance to area. It will be held in Snyder also March 27.

At last Tuesday's zone event, two Snyder players were named Best Actor and Best Actress. Chosen were David Etheredge, who plays the character John Proctor; and Dana Parham, who plays his wife Elizabeth.

In addition, Snyder's Kelly Farquhar, portraying Abigail Williams, was named to the All-Star east; while Kathy Norris, as the character Mary Warren, earned an Honorable Mention designation.

Arrest at school

Snyder police were called to a disturbance at Central Elementary at 2:46 p.m. Friday and arrested at 35-year-old Snyder woman on disorderly conduct charges.

According to reports, the distrubance at the school was between school officials and a parent. The woman was released from custody after paying a fine for the disorderly conduct charge.

In other action, city officers jailed two suspects for public intoxication and one for DWI Friday evening.

tified as Linda Donell Wallace.

The arrest warrant had been issued in Scurry County for a suspect identified as Linda Deloris Wallace.

The Odessa woman's initials and name were the same except for the middle name. She was taken into custody by Ector County deputies and kept overnight in the Ector County Jail.

Representing her in the action was Odessa attorney Michael McLeaish.

The local warrant was issued for a misdemeanor theft which was reported here in October of 1982. It involved the theft of $10 from the purse of a patient admitted at Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

COMMON HOUSEHOLD PRODUCTS CAUSE CHEMICAL STAINS

The next time a mysterious carpet stain appears, don't rush to blame the kids or the dog. It may be from some seemingly harmless product--like your face cream--spilled months ago.

Most people know that poor handling of foods, liquids and household bleach will damage household furninshings.

But few people realize that many common products containing chemicals can cause irreparable damage to valuable carpets, rugs, upholstery fabrics and other furnishings.

For expample, acne medications, fade or age creams, some foot care products and some pet shampoos contain benzoyl peroxide as an active ingredient. Benzoyl peroxide is a strong bleaching agent which can destroy most dyes used in carpet and upholstery fabrics, as well as pillowcases, sheets, towels and clothing.

Spills of some liquid plant foods or leakage from house plants can also cause color changes in carpet. Spots of this kind typically develop near the backing and surface as a dull yellow stain days or weeks later.

Some pesticides and insecticides can cause discoloration of carpet. If the spray is directed to the carpet instead of the baseboard, fading around baseboards may be evident.

Even furniture polish can act as a catalytic agent to destroy red carpet dyes and create green or bluish discoloration. Because this usually occurs about the base of a piece of furniture, a stain can remain hidden until the furniture is moved.

One fiber manufacturer has estimated that more than 50 household products can cause stains or spots on home furnishings.

The time between contact and appearance of the stain can be days or months until a change in humidity, temperature, moisture or sunlight activates the chemical reaction.

While common stains like food, dirt or oily substaces can usually be removed, chemical stains actually change or destroy dyes. Generally, nothing can be done to restore the dye to its original color.

Today's dye stuffs represent the best that modern technology has produced. Yet there are few known dyes which are resistant to chemical degradation. As a result, chemical spots and stains are not covered under most manufacturer's warranties.

From the consumer's point of view, the only real solution to chemical spots and stains is careful use of all household products.

Personal grooming at HE club

The Honey Do's Extension Homemakers Club met March 15 at the First United Methodist Church. Attending were Virginia Fogle, Irene Orosco, Diane Price, Ethel Head, Texas Jones, Gina Fogle, Mae Thornton and Shirley Bullard.

The roll was answered by members telling their favorite age and why.

Following a short business meeting, Diane Price presented the program. She explained how to give manicures and how to care for the skin. She explained the correct method of applying makeup with a demonstration on Mrs. Fogle.

A covered dish luncheon was enjoyed at noon.

The club's next meeting will be April 19, 9:30 a.m. at the First United Methodist Church.

Thomas, Nesbit hostesses

The Altrurian Daghters Club met Wednesday at Martha Ann Woman's Club. Hostesses for the meeting were Mary Beth Thomas and Nina Nesbit. Mrs. Nesbit was welcomed as a new club member. President Betty Youngkin presided.

Tickets were made available for the luncheon and style show, featuring Margaret's fashions. Time for the event will be this Saturday at 11:30.

Sketches by Mrs. Youngkin that will be used in the MAWC's cookbook were displayed. Members were informed of the cookbook progress and encouraged to purchase orders now. An outdoor barbeque will be held May 11 at 5 p.m. at the clubhouse to benefit the printing of the cookbook.

A humorous story was reviewed by Georgene Gallaway. The book is titled "Due to the Lack of Interest, Tomorrow Has Been Canceled," by Irene Kampen.

The club's next meeting is April 11 and will be a "Dutch treat" luncheon and style show at Lubbock's Hemphill-Wells Tea Room.

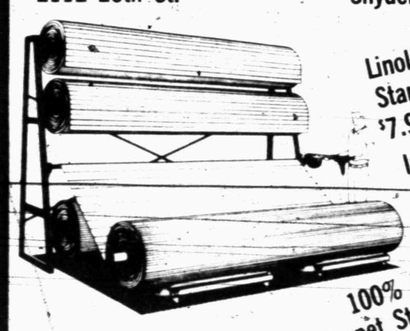

Vinyl replacements save energy

NEW YORK (AP) — Vinyl window frames are expected to become dominant in the replacement window business, dislodging traditional wood and aluminum window frames.

The Vinyl Window and Door Institute says that among the advantages vinyl offers is better insulation than wood or aluminum.

Since up to 45 percent of a room's heat loss in the winter can occur through drafty window frames, the cost of installing vinyl window frames is recouped within a few years in energy savings, the institute claims.

Make meal or snack

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Sandwiches for school or the office can be quite inventive. All kinds of inexpensive containers and coolers for hot soups and entrees are available if you want to take along something extra special.

A tropical croissant stuffed with a chicken, pineapple and peanut mixture makes a good lunch or weekend snack. Another special sandwich combines chicken, ham, cucumber and alfalfa sprouts.

Both of these sandwiches offer a well-rounded lunch and are easy to prepare.

Keep them in mind for spring and summer hiking or biking trips.

CANNED chicken mixed with vegetables makes packable sandwich fillings.

TROPICAL CROISSANT

- 1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese, softened
- 1 tablespoon mayonnaise
- 1 can (8 ounces) crushed pineapple drained
- 1/3 cup chopped celery
- 2 tablespoons coarsely chopped peanuts
- 1 can (5 ounces) chunk chicken or chunk white chicken
- 4 croissants or other rolls
- Leaf lettuce

In medium bowl, blend cream cheese and mayonnaise until smooth. Add pineapple, celery and peanuts; mix well. Add chicken; toss gently to mix well. Cover; refrigerate 2 to 4 hours.

To serve: Split croissants in half lengthwise. On bottom halves, arrange leaf lettuce and about 1/2 cup filling; replace top halves. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 4 sandwiches.

CONTINENTAL DELUXE SANDWICH

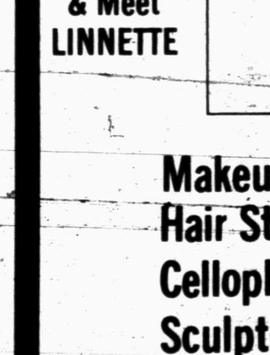

- 1 can (5 ounces) chunk chicken or chunk white chicken
- 1/3 cup chopped cucumber
- 1 tablespoon mayonnaise
- 1/8 teaspoon dried dill weed, crushed
- 2 hamburger buns or other rolls
- Spinach leaves
- 2 slices ham (about 2 ounces)
- Cucumber slices
- Alfalfa sprouts

In medium bowl, combine chicken, chopped cucumber, mayonnaise and dill weed; toss gently to mix well. Cover; refrigerate 2 to 4 hours.

To serve: On bottom halves of hamburger buns (toasted if desired), arrange spinach leaves, ham slices and chicken filling. Garnish with cucumber slices and alfalfa sprouts; replace top halves. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 2 sandwiches.

It is always a pleasure to watch a skilled partnership in operation.

West opened the jack of hearts. East followed with the deuce and South took his king.

South led a club to dummy's king and a club back to his ace. Then he led the jack of spades.

West paused for a moment, rose with his ace of spades and promptly laid down his ace of hearts as the starter for four heart tricks.

"How were you so sure?" asked South.

"No problem at all," replied West. "My partner played the deuce of hearts at trick one to tell me he had an odd number of hearts. I was looking at five hearts. There were three in dummy. That left five for you and East. You had responded three diamonds to your partner's Stayman, so you could not hold four hearts. Hence you held just two, and my partner exactly three."

This Kelsey hand introduces the maxim: "Help your partner with defense by signaling your distribution."

We add a fervent amen. Tend to high-low with an even number and low-high with an odd number.

Popcorn good for holiday or anytime

By Cecily Brownstone
AP Food Editor

SNACKTIME FARE
Coconut Popcorn

COCONUT POPCORN

Just right for the holiday season, and with delightful lemon flavor.

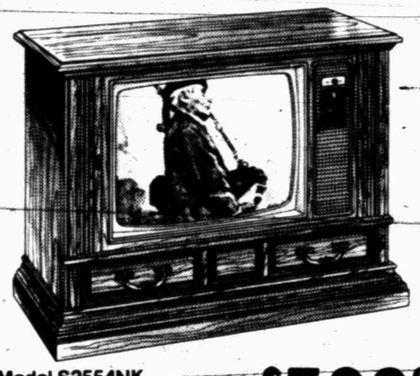

2 quarts freshly popped corn
1 cup packaged flaked moist coconut
2-3rds cups toasted coconut
3/4 cup sugar
3/4 cup light corn syrup
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon vanilla

Into a large buttered saucepot turn the popped corn, moist coconut and toasted coconut. In a medium saucepan, over medium heat, stirring constantly, cook the sugar, corn syrup and lemon juice until the sugar dissolves and mixture almost boils — about 10 minutes. Off heat, stir in vanilla; cool for 2 minutes; pour over popped corn and coconut; with a long wooden spoon, mix well. Return to medium heat and stirring constantly, heat until corn begins to stick together. Press out onto a 15-by 11-inch sheet of wax paper. Cool completely. If necessary to dry further, let stand, uncovered for 8 to 12 hours. Cut in large squares and wrap each in saran.

Do's, don'ts may save child

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — You've told him again and again: Don't go off with strangers. But today you're late picking him up from school, so when a man approaches and says, "Your mommy sent me for you because I've got a new batch of kittens and she can't decide which one you'd like," it's goodbye to all your warnings.

At worst, it may also be goodbye to your child.

Not that "don'ts" are useless, but, it's just as important to arm children with "do's" to fall back on, says Susan Newman, a writer who specializes in parent-child relationships. "You should teach your children that it's wrong to talk to strangers or accept gifts from them, and you should also explain about the danger of abduction: that if they leave with a stranger, they might be taken somewhere they don't want to go. Maybe the person won't bring them back. You'd miss them terribly and not know how to find them."

But then, follow up with a "do." For instance, no matter what the enticement, the child should be taught to reply, "I have to ask permission." "Ah," comes the retort, "but your mommy said it's all right." If he's at school, the child should know he's to go back inside and tell a teacher — any teacher — what's happening. "And if he's playing outside the house and you're not home," says Ms. Newman, "he should feel comfortable with and have access to at least one neighbor's house."

Suppose there's an emergency and you or whoever is supposed to pick him up at school can't. In that case, anyone else who does show up must give a secret family code word you can change every day if you like — without the child giving it first. "You'd be surprised what a sense of control and strength that gives a child," she says. "Someone arrives and says 'grocery bag' when the code word is 'lamp,' and the child thinks, who does he think he's fooling?"

If worse comes to worse and the child is grabbed, he or she should know it's not only all right to scream, it's mandatory. "Kids are usually taught to be quiet and obey adults, so it's a good idea to give them practice screaming," she says. "You can make it into a game."

And you can make it part of a family session once a week or so when you and the child practice how he or she can respond to strangers' temptations. Now's the time, too, to help them memorize their last name, their phone number and street address, as well as how to dial the police (usually 911) or, if they're too young for that, "0" for operator if they're in trouble. Says Ms. Newman, "If you start working on a child very young, you can teach him basics. My little boy is 20 months old and he already knows his full name and that he lives in New Jersey.

As soon as possible, he or she should also know the route home from school and that they're to tell you where they are at all times. On the other hand, she says, "Always tell your children where you plan to go. This sets a family pattern that can be invaluable."

And when, for one reason or another, the child has to play alone, she says, "Come up with an activity for him in the house or another safe area. You don't want him out idling in empty lots where he's more susceptible to being picked up."

Just as crucial as any of this is to listen when your child wants to tell you about the man who said funny things in the playground. And to believe him. "No matter how hard a day you've had at work or how busy you are with dinner, don't ever put down or dismiss what your children tell you. You want them to have confidence in you, to know they can tell you everything, so that they will come forward when something dangerous occurs."

All of Ms. Newman's concern with child safety dates back to 1971 when she was living in Stamford, Conn. "I have four stepchildren and one day the police caught a man who'd been driving by the elementary school trying to pick up children, she says. "I was horrified at the idea that he might have taken one of my kids, so I wrote a booklet called 'Ice Cream Isn't Always Good' to alert children, without terrifying them, to the danger of talking to strangers, and I began distributing it to schools."

In 1981, spurred by the mass murders of children in Atlanta and Houston, Ms. Newman began making her booklet available to the general public and, so far, she says, "I've sold 60,000 copies." And she'll keep on printing and selling it because, she says, "child abduction is a very major problem in this country." One estimate, by Sen. Arlen Specter who co-sponsored the Missing Children's Act last year, is that 1.8 million children disappear a year. "The numbers are just staggering," she says.

CHILI EGGS

Our latest version of Oven Eggs.

2 tablespoons butter
6 large eggs
1-3rd cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon white pepper
¼ cup grated extra-sharp cheddar (about 1 ounce)
2 to 4 ounces chopped canned green chilies

In an 8 by 8 by 2-inch baking pan, in a preheated 350-degree oven, melt butter; shake pan to distribute butter evenly; leave oven control at 350 degrees. Beat together eggs, milk, salt and pepper until foamy; pour over butter in pan. Bake in the 350-degree oven until mixture begins to set — about 7 minutes; sprinkle with cheddar and chilies; draw a wide metal spatula across bottom of pan several times to break up egg mixture. Bake, breaking up with spatula a few times, until thickened throughout but still moist — about 5 minutes longer. Makes 3 servings.

Does anyone else remember the looney bin doctor who tried to convince Elwood P. Dowd he really wasn't seeing a 6 ft. tall rabbit named Harvey?

We're of course refering to the stage play and movie of the same name.

The doctor starts out trying to convince Elwood that Harvey the "pooka" is a figment of his imagination.

Then Elwood explains that one of Harvey's powers as a spirit is that if he likes someone he'll grant them whatever they wish.

"What would you wish for doc?" Elwood asks.

Of all the twists and turns that pass for plot, the idea of "wishes" has gotten a lot of mileage.

As kids we heard about King Midas' touch and Alladin's lamp, and now ABC passes the same old premise off as prime time TV every Saturday night.

So it's not an original idea, but we liked the psychiatrist's reply anyway.

With his eyes focused on something far distant, he recalled a particular park and a particular shade tree from his past. And he wished that he could return there — accompanied by a beautiful blonde woman and an iced-down chest of cold beer.

"I wouldn't say a word," the doctor said, "But just lay with my head in her lap. And she would stroke my forehead and say to me over and over again, 'Poor baby. Poor baby."

A relative is fond of saying "If wishes were horses, beggars would ride."

"Wishing don't make it so," that same relative will say.

But we wonder why this particular wish sticks in our head.

The old guy didn't want wealth, fame, power or perversity. Just a little sympathy without having to deserve it.

It contradicts the general theme of wish stories, which follows that the "fact" of having a wish come true is sure to produce only disappointment.

Like the kid who wanted every day to be Halloween. Eventually you have to realize that walking around night after night in a rubber mask and begging for candy can get to be a pretty deep rut.

Another plot line of wish stories is that they always limit the number of wishes. This is generally set up so the hero will be forced to use his last wish to restore the whole mess back to normal.

Wishing for more wishes, of course, doesn't count, and the kind of daydreaming without action has become associated in our mind with "wishing for wishes."

But a return to some memory park for a spring afternoon and a comforting touch seems a reasonable request.

And it occurs to us a plan is nothing more than a dressed up wish; a plot nothing more than a devious one; and a contract nothing more than a legal one.

The hope that begins any worthwhile project begins with a wish. Making it happen is where the work comes in.

Some of you soreheads will argue, but I maintain that there is no subject that two West Texans will agree on completely.

The exception may be nuclear waste. I don't want it. You don't want it. We don't want it. Not in Scurry County, not in Borden County.

Everytime we think the possibility has passed over us and has become somebody else's problem another headline appears alerting us that the spector still looms. If we do get a nuke graveyard in our neighborhood, so what? We'll probably hardly even know its there. Are we making much ado about nothing?

The government boys say our geology fits the problem. They can ALMOST guarantee that no radiation wll seep out to be blown around by the West Texas winds. They can ALMOST guarantee none will penetrate to contaminate our precious ground water. And they emphasize that this is only low-level, stuff, such as gloves from hospitals. Somebody has to take it.

What is our counter-argument? We don't want it. That should be good enough. But for those who are more comfortable with tangible, arguable reasons, consider this — it's dangerous. There are no positive benfits to be derived for the area. Not even qualified guarantees are offered for getting it in the ground everytime without those annoying inevitabilities to mankind commonly called "accidents." What about getting it here, by truck I presume, without mishaps?

Perhaps we're just being stubborn. Besides being a regional birthright, muleheadedness is a right I claim under the parts of the Constitution that pertain to free expression and pursuit of happiness. To my way of thinking, the thought of a nuclear dump in the backyard is not a happy one.

What do I know about radiation? I suspect about as much as the average West Texan, which is almost nothing. I do know that you can't see it, feel it or even taste it. So when they say I'm being scared for nothing, they've hit the nail square on the head.

I also know that those invisible particles that I can't even feel are deadly in direct proportion to exposure, ingestion or whatever, and make for odd-shaped babies.

Would you want a school over a dump? A house? Those contaminated souvenirs are the price we pay for the miracles we take for granted from our high tech society, and they are forever. From 50 million to 250 million years are the estimates I've seen on how long the waste remains active. That is forever folks. How long has this area been settled, 100 years, 150 years? Think about it.

Two things besides geology are necessary for the selection of a site: a seller of land and apathy. If they find someone willing to sell, will they find the other?

You and I have no control over the first, but caring is up to only me and you.

Let's do something, even if it's wrong. This is an election year and if the hired help get enough threats they may find clout they never knew they had. A few hundred letters to the editor would help too. At least enough to push this column and everything else off the page. Perhaps Kidstuff should be squeezed in, since if the worst happens it will be the children who suffer the most, or at least the longest.

Then on the other hand, we could just forget it. After all, we are only barely being considered. And If we are chosen, so what? When handled right, the stuff is totally safe ... almost.

Ballots totaling 2,799 were cast by Scurry County voters Saturday — March 14. The ballot approved the issuance of bonds totaling more than $1.25 million for the construction of the Scurry County Coliseum. The vote "for" the measure passed by nearly a two-to-one margin.

Letter to the editor

To the editor,

The members of Girl Scout Troop Number 266 would like to take this opportunity during Girl Scout Week to thank all the citizens of Snyder and Scurry County for their support all during the year of our activities and projects. We appreciate the donations to our but fund, the calendar and cookie purchases and support for our other fund raising activities. Without the help of the concerned adults in the community, our program would be impossible. Troop Number 266 would like to say a special thanks to our ski sponsors, Jack and Sue Womack, Roy and Debbie Magness and Betty Wilcox. The First United Methodist Church and the Circle In Grocery. We had a wonderful time during spring break on our ski trip. Thanks to the Snyder Daily News for your support in our activities.

Thank you,
Cadette Troop 266

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
March 11

Snyder's unemployment began 1984 with a sharp increase upward, although officials with the Texas Employment Commission suggest it is mainly a seasonal trend.

The percentage rose from December's 3.5 percent to 4.8 percent in January, it was reported Sunday.

MONDAY
March 12

The possibility of an expanded physical education building at Western Texas College was discussed by board members Monday.

"Total use" of the present facility is pointed to as the reason.

But the proposal included at least one aspect which would be scaled down — the Olympic-sized swimming pool adjacent to the WTC gymnasium and weight room.

Covering the current pool and constructing a second smaller swimming facility was discussed.

TUESDAY
March 13

A memento dating from the first Snyder High School band — organized during the 1927-28 school year — was recently presented to current members of the SHS "Pride of the West" Black and Gold Band, it was reported Tuesday.

Band alumnis Emmett Askins has contributed a framed Tiger Band emblem, cut from the back of his uniform from the 1927-31 era.

The Snyder High School production of "The Crucible" was chosen to advance to district competition at the conclusion of the zone contest in Worsham Auditorium Tuesday.

In addition, two SHS players were named the Best Actor and Best Actress — David Etheredge and Dana Parham. Also, Kelly Farquhar was named to the All-Star cast while Kathy Norris received an honorable mention.

Snyder School Superintendent Bill J. Hood revealed Tuesday night he plans to retire after this school year.

A motion to accept his resignation was then offered by trustees, who noted it was accepted "with regret."

Estimates ranging from $150,000 to in excess of $200,000 were offered here Tuesday night for the resurfacing of the Snyder High School track.

In addition, the indication Tuesday was that a complete re-working of the track's sub-surface area may also be required.

WEDNESDAY
March 14

A legal motion has been filed seeking a rehearing before the Texas 11th Court of Appeals in Eastland by attorneys for a Scurry County royalty owner attempting to retain the use of gas from SACROC field residual lines.

The latest development in the six month legal battle between royalty owners and Chevron U.S.A. as operator of the SACROC field was reported Wednesday.

Attorneys in the case say the motion is an attempt to get the Feburary ruling by the appeals court overturned by the Texas Supreme Court.

At the annual meeting Wednesday, shareholders of First National Bank elected a new director and authorized an increase in the number of shares of common stock.

Billy Calley, president of Calley and Fowler Production Co., was elected to the board of directors of the bank.

In a called meeting Wednesday, chamber of commerce directors unanimously approved Gene Thomas to fill the unexpired term of ex-director Phil Guerry.

Thomas is the superintendent for SACROC operations in Scurry County.

FRIDAY
March 16

Ira fourth grader Jay Martin won the 9th Annual Scurry County Spelling Bee Friday. He now advances to regional competition in Lubbock.

The top five spellers Friday were Christi Christinson, second, a fifth grader at North Elementary; Janna Burrow, third, an eighth grader at Ira; Kristi Carter, fourth, a seventh grader at Ira; and Robert Neblett, fifth, a seventh grader at Snyder Junior High.

Dear Abby

A Pecan Pie That's As Good as Gold

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I was born in England, wed an American, and came to the United States in 1919. I've been a widow for 39 years. I'm nearly 92, and I still take my daily walks and feed the pigeons, who know me and come in a bunch to meet me.

I'll get to the point, Abby. About 15 years ago you sent me your recipe for pecan pie. At the bottom of the recipe it says, "Please let me know how yours came out." I have a guilty conscience because I have made literally dozens of your pecan pies and not once have I written to let you know that I now have the reputation for being the world's best pecan pie maker. It's easy to make, and all who taste it say it's the best pecan pie they've ever had.

I sent the recipe to my niece in Sussex, and she has had as much success with it as I. The only problem is that pecans are available in England only around Christmastime, so she used walnuts and said they are just as good as pecans! Her neighbors (all very well-to-do) think the pie is tip-top. So I'm writing to thank you, and let you know that soon Dear Abby's pecan (or walnut) pie will be the rage of Sussex!

ELIZABETH IN N.Y.

DEAR ELIZABETH: Your letter made my day. And if anyone out there wants the recipe, here it is:

ABBY'S PECAN (OR WALNUT) PIE
1 cup white corn syrup
1 cup dark brown sugar
1/3 teaspoon salt
1/3 cup melted butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 whole eggs
1 heaping cup shelled pecans (or walnuts)
Mix syrup, sugar, salt, butter, vanilla. Add slightly beaten eggs. Pour into a 9-inch unbaked pie shell. Sprinkle pecans over filling. Bake in 350-degree oven for approximately 45 minutes.
You can top it with a bit of whipped cream or ice cream, but even plain, nothing tops this! And please let me know how yours turns out.

DEAR ABBY: This letter has taken a long time to write. I need to know if I will get excommunicated from the Roman Catholic Church for something I did over a year ago. I'm scared to talk to my priest for fear of what he might tell me.

I'm married and have three children. My husband and I weren't getting along very well and I started to have an affair with a co-worker. Well, I found out I was pregnant, so in order to save my marriage I had an abortion. (My husband had had a vasectomy after our last child was born.)

It's been over a year now, and I am fine. I no longer have a boyfriend, and my husband and I went to counseling and are doing super. I go to church regularly and I want to go to confession and get this off my chest, but I am afraid I will be excommunicated because of the abortion.

Please tell me what to do. I am truly sorry and want to receive communion again.

NEEDS HELP IN WISCONSIN

DEAR NEEDS: Confess to your priest. If you are truly penitent you will not be excommunicated.

Troop leaders develop scouts for 'new age'

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Don and Diane Weiner initiated their "new age scouting organization" two years ago and now Star Blazer troops are set to blast off in at least three more states in the next few months.

Star Blazers is an unusual variation of traditional scouting and a humanistic approach to child development, Weiner said.

In addition to camping, hiking and other classic scouting activities, Star Blazers learn about holistic health, meditation, and space, special interests of the Weiners.

"We place more emphasis on developing creativity, sensory awareness, assertiveness and an understanding of the emotions," said Weiner, 34, a psychologist.

"Regular scouting emphasizes leadership skills, skills related to nature and cooperation which are very positive things as well.

"We're not trying to compete with scouting, we're just offering a different approach."

The idea for Star Blazers "started as an inspiration my wife, Diane, got during a meditation — a new program for kids. She teaches special education. We sat down and brainstormed about it for a long time and finally put the original group together, two years ago," he said.

The organization is not associated with the Boy Scouts or Girl Scouts of America.

The first two Star Blazers were the Weiner's sons, Orion and David. Now two troops of 10 children each are meeting and another 10 children are on a waiting list.

Star Blazers pay no fees except $1 per weekly meeting to cover the costs of materials. They do have uniforms and badges, similar to other scouts, but mother ship numbers replace troop numbers on patches.

Inquiries have come from parents in Oklahoma, New York and Wisconsin wanting to start Star Blazer troops and asking the Weiners to send copies of a program guidebook they compiled at the end of the first year.

Scurry's first courthouse built in 1886

Scurry County was less than two years old when the first courthouse was completed in 1886. It was a beautiful two story building of red brick with high windows for light.

This picture shows a group of the leaders in the new town of Snyder in 1891. They are left to right: Jim Nunn, Old Man Grant, (Unknown), Houston Patterson, Granpa Byrd, Frank Wylks, Ira Kutch, Walter Grantham, (Unknown), William Bell, Az Woody, Oz Smith.

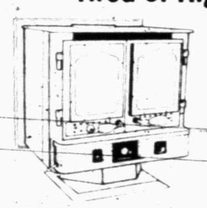

Most of these men were part of the first Commissioner's Court for Scurry County or served in some other elected position. Houston Patterson was the first district clerk. Jim Nunn had come to Scurry as early as 1877 and he and his brothers had become successful ranchers throughout this area.

Records were moved from Mitchell County to this courthouse when it was completed in 1886. Mitchell County and the Commissioner's Court there had helped with the business and records for Scurry County until it could officially organize and begin operation. Although Scurry became a county through the state legislature on August 21, 1876, it did not become official until June 28, 1884 when the citizens voted to elect a sheriff, (W. W. Nelson) and other officials.

From a modest beginning in this courthouse, Scurry County was to see a great growth and eventually many others came into this newly organized county. Some planned to make it their home when they left other countries or states. Some, however, just got stranded here on their way to California or other places out West. Grow your own garden transplants

Get your spring garden off to a good start by growing your own transplants indoors.

The key to growing transplants successfully is to plant seed at the proper time so the young plants will be ready to set out when your garden is ready and weather conditions are favorable.

For the best survival and quick recovery after planting in the garden, transplants should be young, sturdy and in good nutritional condition.

Usually four to six weeks is sufficient time to grow most transplants. Vine crops take two to three weeks to develop two to three true leaves while lettuce takes three to four weeks. Tomatoes need five to seven weeks to reach transplanting stage.

Some transplants such as cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, lettuce and onions can be set in the garden four to six weeks before the last frost date.

When starting plants indoors, use a soilless or synthetic soil mix available at garden centers or nurseries.

Seed can be started in almost any type container such as flower pots, milk cartons or cake pans. Be sure the container has holes for adequate drainage. Other popular containers are seed flats, peat pots and peat cubes or pellets.

Once you've got the needed materials and planting time is at hand, fill the container with the synthetic mix, firm it in well and then water thoroughly. Space the seed evenly, cover lightly and water again.

To improve germination, slip the container into a plastic bag and place it in an area at room temperature but out of direct sunlight. Remove the bag when the seeds first emerge and place the container in sunlight.

Once the container has been removed from the plastic bag, add water to maintain good moisture. Frequent watering will be necessary but use care to avoid saturation.

When plants are of adequate size and outside conditions are suitable for growth, transplant them into the garden area and you've got a jump on the planting season.

Surgeon proud of his own scars

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Famed heart surgeon Dr. Denton Cooley carries his own scars — a "UT" brand that he says was a source of pride while he was a student at the University of Texas.

The initials were branded onto Cooley's chest in the late 1930s when he was initiated into the Texas Cowboys, a men's service group.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Lower back pain gone

DEAR DR. LAMB — I've had constant pain in the lower back and spine. But a few weeks ago I received your health letter on backaches. I started exercising, as you suggested, and after three days I could get out of bed and walk with much greater ease.

When I began reaching for my toes, my fingertips only reached just below the knees. Now I can gently reach within an inch of my toes.

I'm astonished at how good the results are after only one week. I hope exercising will become as much a part of my life as eating and sleeping.

I'd been taking Motrin for my back pain four times a day, but since I've been exercising I haven't had to take it.

I'm now constantly aware of keeping my stomach sucked in to strengthen my stomach muscles. I'm hoping it will become second nature.

DEAR READER — I'm delighted you feel so much better. Many people with lower back pain can benefit by exercises to strengthen the abdomen and back muscles.

You probably benefit a lot from the stretching exercises. Shortened muscles in spasms are often a major part of back discomfort. If everyone exercised to maintain strong abdominal muscles and used stretching exercises, there'd be fewer back problems. As you've discovered, taking care of your muscles is better than taking medicine.

Others who want the Health Letter 13-30, Backache and What to Do About It, can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Despite your success, I must add there's a right way and a right time to exercise. During acute back pain, it's unwise to start an exercise program until the acute condition subsides. And all such cases should be seen by a physician.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My 17-year-old granddaughter has "mono." She has swelling around her eyes and is extremely tired even after hours and hours of sleep. She's not attending school and had to quit her part-time job. The doctor said there wasn't a lot to be done, except drink plenty of fluids and get plenty of sleep. Somehow I feel there must be more to it than that.

How serious is this illness and will it be long before she recovers? Is it contagious?

DEAR READER — Mononucleosis is a common illness caused by a virus. It's contagious and easily spread by kissing, which is why it's often called the "kissing disease." Young adults often have a sore throat, headache and enlarged lymphnodes, particularly in the neck. Fatigue is common.

Because it's a virus illness, antibiotics don't help unless it's complicated by a bacterial infection. In most cases the illness only lasts a few weeks and the person gradually regains his previous energy level.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm confused about the danger of high cholesterol and triglyceride levels in the blood and blood pressure. I'm 70 and in the last 20 years I've had high cholesterol levels. In the last 10 years I've had high triglyceride levels.

All this time my blood pressure has been excellent. This seems at odds with the idea that these other two high levels greatly increase the risk of strokes and heart attacks due to clogging of the blood vessels.

I'd appreciate your explanation of these contradictions. Why do I need to be concerned about these high levels if my blood pressure is so low?

DEAR READER — You're confused about how risk factors are determined. If everything else was normal and all you had was high cholesterol levels, and if they were high enough, that would increase your risk of heart attacks or strokes three times what it would have been if you had low optimal cholesterol values.

If your blood pressure is high and everything else is normal that will increase your risk of heart attacks and strokes. Let's say it's high enough to increase your risk three times what it should be with a good reading of 115 over 75.

If you had both a high cholesterol level and the same high blood pressure, your risk would be six times the risk of a person exactly like you who had a low or normal blood pressure and low or normal cholesterol. So your low blood pressure means that your risk is not as great as it would be if it were high. But your high cholesterol readings, despite your blood pressure, increases your risk.

I've explained the risk factors in more detail in the Health Letter 13-12, How To Measure Your Risk of Heart Disease, which I'm sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

The three big risk factors that you can do something about are high blood pressure, high cholesterol and cigarette smoking. If all of these are controlled, the risk of heart attack and stroke can be greatly diminished.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm a 45-year-old marathon runner and have been running for about 15 years. For the past two years I've been experiencing cramping of my bowels after long runs, accompanied by diarrhea and blood in the stool for as long as four hours after the run. Then my system returns to normal.

My family doctor tested my digestive system and everything was negative. I feel in top shape otherwise. I also eliminated milk and ice cream from my diet, but the cramping still occurs.

DEAR READER — Many long-distance runners have trouble with diarrhea after running. I'm glad you tried cutting out the milk, but you should have eliminated all milk products, including any foods containing milk.

Nervous tension or some form of food intolerance other than milk may be the cause. Experiment a bit to find out what foods you should avoid before running. Some of the antispasmodics such as Pro-Banthine, used before running also may be helpful.

Robert Young stricken on move set

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Veteran actor Robert Young says he doesn't know how much rest he'll need now that he's returned home after being stricken on the set of a television film sequel to his "Marcus Welby, M.D." series.

"He's going to be OK" the actor's wife, Betty, told reporters at St. Joseph's Medical Center in Burbank, where the 77-year-old Young was taken Wednesday.

"I guess I just came back to work too soon" after a bout with the flu, said Young, his face still covered with pancake makeup used on the set.

NEA

Your Birthday

Bernice Bede Osol

March 18, 1984

Lady Luck will be playing a hand in your material affairs over the coming months. Just when it looks like you have nothing to gain, she might suddenly dump a windfall in your lap.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Financial gains can be derived from a second source today owing to unusual circumstances which may put you in the right place at the right time. The Matchmaker set tells you your compatibility to all signs as well as shows you to which signs you are best suited romantically. Get yours by mailing $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. For your year-ahead predictions send an additional $1 and your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Something quite unexpected but of a pleasant nature could develop today in an important relationship. It will benefit you as well as the other party.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Early in the day you may get ingenious financial hunches. Test them out promptly. Later your practicality may veto these impulses.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Variety is the spice of life, and today you'll be very clever at selecting novel activities to get you and your companions out of the doldrums.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Even though you have a tendency today to let things go until the last minute, it's amazing but you'll still manage to squeeze them in under the wire.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have the innate ability today to size up situations quickly and accurately. This will enable you to establish order out of chaos.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Financial conditions could suddenly shift in a positive direction today. However, to reap gains you'll have to move swiftly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If matters which affect your self-interest appear to be getting out of control today, step in and take charge. You'll know how to make corrections.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be alert in your material dealings. You might be able to pick up something of value that others think has little worth.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Fortunately, you have friends in the right places. Today, someone fond of you may take measures to help bring one of your hopes into being.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Important objectives are achievable today because your reserve drive will serve as a booster rocket to give you a push when needed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your best opportunities to advance your present plans will come through your more progressive contacts. Confer with persons who think "can do."

March 19, 1984

More opportunities than you've been exposed to for a long time are apt to come your way in the year ahead. However, if you fail to take full advantage of them, you'll regret it later.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your judgment in business matters is good today, yet there is a possibility you might whittle down your advantage just to appease another. Major changes are in store for Pisces in the coming year. Send for your year-ahead predictions today. Mail $1 and your zodiac sign to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Send an additional $2 for your Astro-Graph Matchmaker set, which tells to whom you are best suited romantically.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Commercial dealings should work out to your advantage today, provided you don't take small details for granted. The entire picture must be considered.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Give credence to your mate's input when discussing important matters today. He or she might grasp important facts you overlook.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Subdue tendencies to slack off at work today. You're in a good cycle to perform effectively. It would be a shame to waste momentum.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you are managing something for another today, don't treat your responsibility with indifference. Act as if the situation were your own.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) This can be a productive day, provided you are consistent. Don't fumble the ball when you are about to cross the goal line.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Before putting your plans into action today, sound off your ideas on someone whose judgment you trust. If something is lacking, he or she will spot it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today, don't price your goods or services too low. If you do, a smooth chiseler could grind you down to where you'll have no profit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Allot some time for recreational pursuits today, but don't arrange your schedule so that it will cause you to neglect essential duties.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In a social involvement with friends today, don't feel you have to fund the entire event. Make arrangements where each pays their share.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Normally you're a good listener who gives others a chance to speak their mind. Today, uncharacteristically, you may try to dominate the entire conversation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Conditions look promising today where your career and finances are concerned, but you must keep your expectations within realistic limits.

Adult's troubled past indicates need for shelter

By Majorie Mathis

Editor's Note: The following article about Johnny Doe is based on a true case involving a Scurry County family. The information is presented to inform readers of ever-present conditions of need and deprivation. A fund has been established at Snyder National Bank to help abused and neglected girls. Make checks payable to Friendship House.)

When I was thirteen years old, I was sent from Snyder to life in an orphanage in Oklahoma. Did I want to go? No, I didn't. You see, I had a choice. The judge asked me if I wanted to go or if I wanted to go back and live with my Dad.

I was a kid, a tough kid, and I choked back the tears and lied to that big man who was in charge. I didn't look straight into his eyes, just below, I think at his nose or maybe his mouth. Not that I hadn't lied plenty in my lifetime. I could look nearly anybody in the eye and tell them a tale.

When the lady from the welfare asked me about my Mom, I lied to her. I said she was a wonderful mother, just sick and away staying with relatives. When the nurse at school asked what we ate for supper, I lied to her. I told her about the good meals I cooked for my kid brother and sisters. The principal asked me if my daddy had a job, and I lied to him, too. I didn't tell him that dad just worked from one bottle of whiskey to another.

But I couldn't lie to the top man in the law. Or at least not look him right in the eye and do it. So, I looked somewhere else in his face and told him I didn't want to go back home. I said yes I did want to go live in that orphanage.

It was the best lie I ever told in my life — and the hardest. I didn't know it at the time, but maybe God was on my side when I lied that day down at the courthouse. So they sent me.

You asked why they sent me up to Okieland? Well, I'll tell you. I understand it now. I didn't know what was wrong then, but just before I was eighteen years old and ready to graduate from high school in Oklahoma City, the Old Man at our home called me in, and he let me read the first report that was sent when I went to the home.

It seems I had been declared a "dependent and neglected" child by the ones in charge. The report told all about my mother and my dad, it listed my brother and two little sisters. I didn't even remember but here is what has stuck with me from that report, and today I'm twenty-five years old and making a pretty good living.

On December 3, it was called to my attention that Johnny Doe and his brother and two small sisters had not been in school for three days. I called the telephone number listed, but it had been disconnected. I knew well where the family lived. I had been there many times. I decided to make another house call.

When I drove to the house out on the edge of town, there was no sign of life in the yard or in the neighborhood. An old pickup with two flat tires was parked near the side of the house.

I knocked on the door repeatedly and got no answer. Then I called to Johnny. Still no answer. I tried the door. it was not locked, and I pushed my way into the house.

A noise came from the dim room beyond the door. I called again.

Johnny answered. "Is that you, Mr. Smith?"

"Yes, Johnny, where are you?"

The child poked his head out from under some ragged quilts. No light entered the room except from the partly closed front door where I came in. My eyes were becoming used to the darkness. I was stunned by what I saw.

On the floor of the house were three old mattresses. Down in between the dirty bed covers under one mattresses were the four children, huddled together for warmth in the icy house. They each had on most of the clothes they owned. There was no electricity, no gas. The water was frozen.

The outside temperature on this winter day was ten degrees above zero. The wind was fierce.

"Where is your dad?" I asked.

Johnny looked at me with his head up and replied, "Our Daddy is out looking for work, Mr. Smith. He'll be home soon with some food for us."

I took the children back to their school where they were cleaned up, fed, and clothed. At present each child is staying on a temporary basis with the families listed in the attached form.

I submit this report, begging for help for these children who desperately need a continuing foster home or institutional care in order to survive.

Yes, I'll always be grateful to Mr. Smith. Because of him I went to Oklahoma. I didn't want to, but I knew I had to go. Later, my brother and the two little ones were sent also. I had written them if the chance ever came again that they must say they wanted to come be with me.

Do I hate my parents? No. I'm just sorry I never had a home and that my mother didn't want us. It's been hard knowing all my life that she left us. I still love her. I'd put my arms around her today if she came to my house. My daddy is dead. I don't hate him either. He just couldn't fight liquor.

How do I feel about leaving Snyder? I need to [illegible] somebody. I think it is Mr. Smith who cared enough to keep coming to our old shack of a house and who kept seeing that we ate at school and had shoes. I don't know what would have happened to the four of us if it hadn't been for that Mr. Smith.

Beef feeds the hungry is the title of the American National CowBelles promotion as part of National Ag Week March 16-22, according to Sarah Childs, ANCB Ag Day Chairman.

Funds will be presented in the form of Beef Gift Certificates to the Salvation Army for distribution to needy persons. In 1983, the first year of this project a total of $11,400 in Beef Gift Certificates was presented to Col. Murray of the Salvation Army in Washington, D. C.

The 1984 goal is a $3 contribution from each Cowbelle or any other person wishing to support the program and all monies are to be channeled through state CowBelle organizations and then to ANCB headquarters in Denver by March 31.

Mayor says fame burdensome

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Mayor Henry Cisneros has found fame a burdensome bonus after deciding to personally answer hundreds of letters that poured in after his appearance on "60 Minutes."

"It's a lot of work, but it's worth it," said Cisneros, with pen in hand and a stack on mail on his desk.

The mayor was profiled by the popular CBS News show three Sundays ago, prompting 300 notes, cards and letters from across the nation.

Mayoral assistant Shirl Thomas said "Henry got perhaps the most touching letter" from a man in a small town in Washington.

A town's city manager wrote that he was "burned out and ready to quit" until viewing the mayor's approach to government, she said.

The mayor said Tuesday night he had not yet been able to wade through the entire stack of mail.

The U.S., the Soviet Union and 10 other nations set up an agency in Vienna in 1972 to study environmental problems.

WTC Westerners: keeping

After a brief struggle for identity, Western Texas College is back at the NJCAA National Basketball Tournament again, looking to extend the tradition that has led the Westerners down the road to Hutchinson five times previously.

Coach Barry Davis and the 1983-84 Westerners have put together the kind of team that Western Texas and Snyder fans have been accustomed to supporting. It is the sixth trip to the national tournament in the school's 13-year history of men's basketball. The Westerners won two national championships, in 1975 and 1980, finished fourth in 1979, sixth in '77 and 11th in '78.

Despite two sub-500 seasons, Western Texas men's teams have won 73.7 percent of their games since the program began in 1971. The won-loss record is 317-113.

The 1984 team is unique. It started slowly. 7-5 early in the season. But this group has never stopped improving. It's a complete team now, clearly one of the best defensive units the school has produced. And it is a well-rounded squad: good height; strong muscle inside; quick, heady guard play; and fine outside shooting.

Despite a 10-21 record last year, and 15-14 and 14-17 seasons before that, this team is built solidly on tradition.

It is tradition held over from the 1970s and tradition brought in by Coach Davis. Its coaches - Davis and assistant Phil Spradling - are symbols of success. And many of the players on the team are high school playoff experienced; all-state, all-city, all-region.

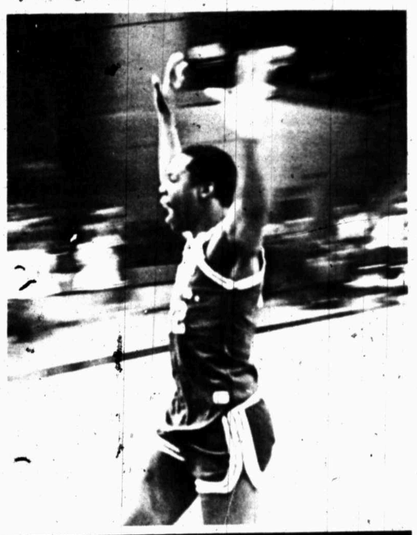

"It was like an omen," says 6-7 sophomore Frec Johnson. "All this success and all this tradition coming together. Something was bound to happen."

It did. No one, except possibly the coaches and players, expected WTC to get into the finals of the Region V Tournament. Just make it to regionals - that was what the fans asked. Everything else was extra.

Western came into the tournament as the fourth seeded team in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference. It defeated top seeds from each conference, showing depth and solid defense. The Westerners allowed an average of just 56.0 points in regionals.

Despite the college's tradition, the Westerners will go into the tournament an underdog in probably every game they play. Phil Spradling, assistant coach, said that being an underdog can be an asset.

"A lot of times it helps you out to be an underdog. When you are number one, everybody knows it and everybody goes after you. On the other hand, when you are a top-rated team, you sometimes tend to overlook teams that aren't," said Spradling, who has handled both roles. He was with the No. 1 ranked 1979-80 WTC team and later played for Tulsa, which shocked everyone by winning the NIT.

Western Texas College's Westerners: keeping up the tradition.

tradition alive in 1984

DUSTERS

Joe Cushing just completed his sixth season as women's basketball coach at Western Texas with a record-setting 27-8 record. His six-year coaching record at WTC is 150 wins, 51 losses (74.6 percent). The Dusters have never finished lower than second in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference and have won or tied for the championship five times in 10 seasons. Under Cushing, the Dusters have never won fewer than 23 games in a season.

Women's All-Americans for Western have been Marilyn Payton (1974-75), Cindy Luttrull (81-82) and Nodia Vaughn (78-79).

GOLF

Western Texas College Athletic Director Dave Foster is in his third year as golf coach. Last season, the Westerners won third in the WJCAC, second in the region and 17th at nationals. Foster is a former captain of the 1976-77 golf team which won the conference, took second at regionals and was ninth in the nation.

In 11 years, the WTC golf team has won four conference titles, four region championships and finished fifth (1975-75), ninth (76-77), sixth (77-78), eighth (79-80), seventh (80-81), sixth (81-82) and 17th (82-83) in the NJCAA National Tournament.

JUDO

Western Texas College judo coach Dr. Shell Hillis is well known around the country for his skills, both as a player and teacher of the sport. The 1982-83 team won 36 individual first place awards, 30 second place awards and 20 third place awards. The squad won the Texas State Collegiate Judo Team Championship trophy six of the past seven years, including the current, 1983-84 season.

Last year at the national meet, Western won four gold medals, five silver and three bronze. WTC is hosting the 1983-84 National Collegiate Judo Championships at the University of Texas Permian Basin in Odessa on March 24 of this year.

Dr. Hillis, chairman of the science division at WTC, initiated the judo program in 1977.

RODEO

Bob Doty is in his fifth year as coach of the Western Texas College's rodeo teams. WTC's men have been second in the region the past three years, trailing only Sul Ross State University - a four year school - in total points. The squad finished second in the nation in 1982 as has also placed 11th and 14th in its history. Western has been the top junior college in the conference all four years.

Davis, Spradling...

Returning as coaches

Western Texas College coach Barry Davis and his assistant, Phil Spradling, have been to national tournaments as players. Now both are going back as coaches, and there's no question in their minds which is easier.

BARRY DAVIS

"So far this week I'd have to say I had more fun as a player than I'm having as a coach," laughed Davis, who takes his Westerners against No. 2 ranked Miami Dade North in the first-round of the NJCAA National Tournament on March 21. Davis played in the NAIA, NJCAA and NCAA national tournaments for Sam Houston State, Hill Junior College and Texas A&M University. "I'm enjoying it but I definitely had more fun as a player. Maybe I'll have more fun next week (during the tournament) whereas it'll be more work for the players," he grinned.

Spradling, who was on the 1979-80 WTC championship team and later played in the NIT and NCAA tournaments at Tulsa, agreed with Davis.

"You'd rather be a player. You just want to get out there and do some things, be out there with all those people watching you. Coach Davis was all-tournament at Hutchinson (in 1974) and I know that was really something special for him. I was given the sportsmanship award (in 1980) and that was a big thrill for me. It's amazing. You see all these people coming in and bringing their lunches and they stay all day - never leave. And all the little kids are always around you asking for your autograph. It makes you really feel important. They really love basketball there.

"It's a feeling that will

PHIL SPRADLING

stay in the players' minds the rest of their lives. I was looking through some clippings of when we were down there last time and it gives me chill-bumps to think about going back. I'm just really happy Coach Davis gave me the opportunity to come back and coach here. It's a dream come true and this (going to the national tournament) makes it even more special," said Spradling.

One of the advantages of having coaches who have been to the NJCAA Tournament is that they can give the players some insight. Davis and Spradling have tried to do that.

"We talked about some of the things that might occur so that maybe they won't be so awed when they get there," explained Davis. "We don't want to be walking around in circles with our heads pointed up like the tourists. I talked to Nolan Richardson, Coach Spradling and my old junior college coach, and they all stressed to take it one game at a time. We don't want to get too high about winning, or if we're unfortunate and lose the first game, not to get too low. We tell the team you are one of the best 16 teams in the country and whatever happens from here is gravy. Certainly we'd like to win the championship but if we don't we're not going to let it spoil everything we've done to get here.

"The main thing we want them to do is enjoy the experience, play hard and do the best they can," Davis added.

Though the Westerners are going into the tournament unranked, Spradling believes they are a good, solid team.

"We've got a lot of heart, a lot of intensity. A lot of teams rely on just their talent, but these guys work hard and they use all of their ability. It reminds me of the team we had (in 1980). We were so close. Like on this team, everybody pulls together. There's no really big scorer or rebounder or someone who hands out a lot of assists. I'm real proud of the way the team is handling it (success). And they know they've got a lot more they want to accomplish," he said.
