Train derailment in Boston injures 264

■ Amtrak train crashes into rush-hour commuter train; about 1,500 gallons of diesel fuel ignite after impact.

BOSTON (AP) — An Amtrak train operated by a trainee derailed and slammed into a rush-hour commuter train in a tunnel Wednesday, injuring 264 passengers in a crash so violent cars were flung into the tunnel ceiling and buckled the road above.

"All the lights went out, people started screaming, the place was filled with smoke, a few people were trapped under seats," said Chris Good, a passenger on the suburban Stoughton Line train.

About 1,500 gallons of diesel fuel spilled and ignited after the impact, sending dense smoke into the cars that passenger Joe Povoas said "you could grind with your teeth, you could spit it out."

Many passengers, dazed and covered with soot, wandered out of the station, some crying, many assisted by emergency personnel.

One elderly woman, her face black with soot and wearing no shoes, asked police: "Where's my luggage? Where are my shoes?"

Ten people were in critical condition, including the engineer of Amtrak's Night Owl train from Washington, D.C., said Jon Fasana, director of the city's emergency services.

Overall, 264 people, including four rescue workers, were hurt, said Thomas Glynn, general manager of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority. The injured passengers were among 190 aboard the Amtrak train and about 900 on the commuter train. They suffered from cuts and bruises, smoke inhalation, broken bones and head injuries.

An Amtrak trainee was operating the train under the supervision of an engineer with 25 years' experience, said D.J. Beatty, general supervisor for Amtrak. Richard Abramson had three years of training and was qualified to operate the train under the guidance of the engineer, Beatty said. Abramson regularly operated trains as part of his training, Beatty said.

Abramson was listed in stable condition at St. Elizabeth's Hospital with a broken collarbone, an injured back and facial injuries. The engineer, Wil-

Farm aid loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Farmers Home Administration has agreed to move quickly to make emergency low-interest loans available to growers who lost crops this year to bad weather, officials said Wednesday.

Bush extends aid to Soviets, sets summit

N.Y. Times News Service

The president grants temporary trade privileges, loan credits, humanitarian aid to help Soviets through winter.

WASHINGTON — President Bush moved Wednesday to help the Soviet Union meet anticipated winter shortages by approving up to $1 billion in federally guaranteed loans to allow Moscow to buy food and other agricultural goods.

Lifting a 15-year-old ban on such credits, Bush also said he would propose that the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund give Moscow a "special association" that would provide assistance and advice in transforming the Soviet command economy into a market-driven system.

Bush's action was considered by experts to be a first step toward the full membership in those institutions, which has long been denied to Moscow.

The move will increase American farm exports, but is unlikely in the short term to lead to a big surge in two-way trade between the two countries, which will amount to about $3.6 billion worth of goods this year — little more than what the United States exchanges with Haiti.

Appearing in the White House Rose Garden with Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze on an unusually mild December afternoon, Bush announced that he and President Mikhail S. Gorbachev would meet in Moscow on Feb. 11-13 for their next get-together. He said he hoped to sign a treaty limiting long-range strategic nuclear weapons during that meeting.

In addition to the agricultural loans, which came in the form of a six-month waiver of the law barring export credits to Moscow until it permits free emigration, Bush announced that the federal government would provide financial and organizational assistance to private organizations willing to supply emergency medical and pharmaceutical supplies to the Soviet Union.

Bush's actions came in response to a request from the Soviet government for financial assistance in acquiring agricultural and medical products. American officials said the Soviet Union was expected to use the agricultural loans primarily to buy grain.

MISD aid shortfall exceeds projections

By David Morris
Staff Writer

The Midland Independent School District faces an estimated $656,000 shortfall in state aid this fiscal year, MISD officials said Wednesday.

The projected shortfall is approximately $350,000 more than the district projected when preparing the 1990-91 budget, MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi said.

"We had expected a shortfall of $350,000 to $400,000 and we had taken care of that in doing our budget," Baressi said. "The increased deficit is something we had not anticipated."

Approximately 38 percent, or $31.9 million, of MISD's $76.2 million budget was expected to come

Saddam ousts defense chief, orders shelters

Saddam Hussein on Wednesday replaced his aging defense minister with a battle hero and ordered building owners to install bomb shelters. But the Iraqi leader also met with an Arab emissary to discuss ways to avoid war.

Western analysts questioned why Saddam Hussein would change defense ministers now, and speculated that the move indicated opposition within the military to Saddam's refusal to leave Kuwait.

The Iraqi announcement came as the evacuation of Western captives neared completion.

Twenty Irish nationals, three Canadians and two Italians flew from Baghad to Amman, Jordan on Wednesday, and Americans were heading home from London and Frankfurt, Germany, where they flew on Tuesday. A final U.S. evacuation flight from Baghdad was set for Thursday.

At the United Nations, diplomats said the foreign ministers of the United States, Britain, France, and the Soviet Union had agreed to meet in Europe within a month to again demand Iraq's full withdrawal from the emirate it seized Aug. 2.

The chief allies in the anti-Iraq coalition also intend to assure Iraq that it will not face attack if it leaves Kuwait before the Jan. 15 deadline set by the U.N. Security Council, the diplomats said on condition of anonymity.

In Baghdad, state radio said Saddam fired Gen. Abdel-Jaber Khalil Shanshal as defense minister. He was replaced by Maj. Gen. Saadi Toma Abbas, a hero of the 1980-88 war with Iran.

Abbas, who is in his 50s, was credited as the strategist behind the defense of the southern port city of Basra during that war, using formidable defensive lines. The Iraqis, who have an estimated

Texas defends new courts

STATE

Justice Department pre-clearance is necessary to ensure that any changes in voting practices, such as the creation of new courts, do not violate minority rights under the federal Voting Rights Act.

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas violated minority voting rights when it created several district courts without getting federal approval, attorneys for the U.S. Justice Department and minority groups claimed Wednesday.

But the state, arguing before a special three-judge federal panel, said the new courts were legally created.

Judges elected to those courts testified during the four-hour hearing that if those courts now are abolished it will worsen the backlog of cases and crowded jail conditions in their counties.

The federal panel, composed of 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Jerry Smith of Houston and U.S. District Judges Lucius Bunton of Midland and Walter Smith of Waco, said a ruling will be made soon.

The dispute is over whether the state received "pre-clearance" from the Justice Department when the Legislature approved new district courts in 1989 in Dallas, Tarrant, Victoria and Lubbock counties. The minority plaintiffs are also challenging the creation of two Travis County district courts in the 1970s.

Justice Department pre-clearance is necessary to ensure that any changes in voting practices, such as the creation of new courts, do not violate minority rights under the federal Voting Rights Act.

San Antonio attorney Rolando Rios, representing the Mexican American Bar Association, said judges presiding over the courts in dispute should not be allowed to take office.

"The problems here have been created by the state itself," Rios said. He, and Poli Marmolejos, a Justice Department civil rights attorney, said the state created the districts and held elections despite notification from the Justice Department that they did not have approval.

But Renea Hicks, an assistant Texas attorney general, said the state submitted the courts for Justice Department consideration, and then never heard from them until the day before the election.

Because of no-excuse absentee voting prior to the election, Hicks said, "The election was well under way in almost every instance when we got the letter."

He said the Justice Department has 60 days to voice disapproval of the new courts and it missed the deadline. But Marmolejos said the Texas secretary of state had submitted more material on the creation of the courts, which then extended the deadline.

Hicks also said there may be doubt over whether Texas needs to have its courts pre-cleared by the Justice Department in light of the 5th Circuit's ruling in September that the Voting Rights Act doesn't apply to judges. That ruling, in which minority groups challenge the at-large voting system for electing judges in nine urban Texas counties, is now being appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

State district courts that would be affected by the federal panel's decision are the 363rd in Dallas County; 364th in Lubbock County; 371st and 372nd in Tarrant County; 377th in Victoria County; and the 200th and 201st in Travis County.

USDA to make loans available

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Farmers Home Administration has agreed to move quickly to make emergency low-interest loans available to growers who lost crops this year to bad weather, officials said Wednesday.

The agency would begin accepting and processing loan applications immediately, but that it would be at least two weeks before the loans could actually be made, FmHA spokesman Joe O'Neill said.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, had urged Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter to make the loans available as soon as possible because farmers in Texas were in the midst of making their plans for next year's crops.

"Assurances that the secretary is going to implement the law allowing Texas farmers to qualify for emergency disaster loans is welcome but overdue," Bentsen said.

Congress this year, rather than approving a direct disaster aid package for farmers who lost production because of bad weather, voted instead to make $600 million available in low-interest emergency loans.

Commerce chairman to resign

AUSTIN (AP) — Chairman Ed Vetter of the Texas Department of Commerce announced Wednesday he'll relinquish the chairmanship effective Jan. 15, allowing Gov.-elect Ann Richards to choose a replacement.

Vetter said he will continue on the department's six-member board of directors until his term expires Feb. 1, 1993. He said he has notified Richards and Gov. Bill Clements of his decision.

"I had reached the decision to step down last summer," Vetter said. "I will have served as chairman for almost four years, including one of the predecessor agencies, the Economic Development Commission, and have believed for some time that our next governor should select a new chairperson."

"Our national environment for jobs will be especially competitive over the next two years with the suggested slowdown in our economy. We must provide opportunity through continued improvement in the quality of our work force, the availability of expansion capital and a competitive tax and regulatory environment," Vetter said.

Group fingers Texas' utility industry

By James R. Owen
Hearst News Service

■ State in brief/3C

WASHINGTON — Texas, helped along by its electric utilities, leads the nation in emissions of carbon dioxide, one of the "greenhouse gases" often linked with global warming, a consumer group said Wednesday.

"The electric utility industry, as a group, are the largest emitters of CO2 in the nation," said Edwin Rothschild, energy director for Washington-based Citizen Action. "And we have a responsibility to take action."

Carbon dioxide is created when fossil fuels such as oil, coal and natural gas are burned to generate electricity and power. Because most U.S. public utilities rely heavily on such fuels to generate electricity; the industry spewed out 36 percent of the 4.8 billion tons of the pollutant released into the atmosphere in 1988, said Citizen Action.

The transportation, industrial, residential and commercial sectors trailed the utility industry, in that order.

Diane Smiroldo, a spokeswoman for the Edison Electric Institute, the utility industry's trade association, said Wednesday the group had not seen the study and had no immediate comment.

Unless current fuel use patterns are altered, the role of electric utilities in generating carbon dioxide will likely climb significantly by the year 2000, said Citizen Action's report, "The Heat Is On: America's CO2 Polluters." The report is based on the group's analysis of 1988 fuel consumption data collected and published by the Department of Energy.

CO2 emissions in Texas totaled 575.2 million tons in 1988 followed by California with 312 million tons and Pennsylvania with 255.7 million, the group said. Two Texas utilities ranked in the national top 10 for CO2 emissions for 1988, the study's base year: Fort-Worth based Texas Utilities Electric Co. emitted 58.4 million tons and ranked third nationally, and Houston Lighting & Power Co. generated 35.6 million tons, ranking sixth nationwide.

If Texas was an independent nation, it would have ranked seventh internationally, the report added.

At a news conference here to release the 50-state analysis, Rothschild said utilities should begin planning now to convert from oil and coal to cleaner fuels such as solar and wind power, as well as natural gas, which is relatively "clean" compared with oil and coal.

"Without rapidly changing the way we produce and consume energy, we will be facing a grim future," said Rothschild, who conceded that most utilities would be unable to rapidly convert from carbon-based fuels to other sources of power.

Instead, the report urges that utilities work with their customers to reduce electricity demand with more energy-efficient appliances such as refrigerators and long-life light bulbs. Nick Fedoruk, the report's author, praised some utilities, including San Francisco-based Pacific Gas and Electric, for offering rebates and long-term loans to customers who purchase such devices.

Fedoruk also said state and local governments must shift resources away from highway construction to efficient light-rail and mass transit systems "that give utilities financial incentives to invest in energy efficiency rather than costly and polluting power plants."

Cloudy skies forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-60s and 10 to 20 mph northeast winds, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight is expected to be partly cloudy with a low in the upper 30s, NWS said. Friday's forecast calls for partly cloudy with a high in the low 60s, NWS said.

The record high for Wednesday's date was 79 set in 1937. The record low of 14 for today's date was set in 1985. Wednesday's high was 78, after an overnight low of 43.

STATE

A cold front passed through the Panhandle and headed toward North Texas late Wednesday, bringing brisk north winds and dropping temperatures into the upper 40s and low 50s.

The front was expected to significantly lower North Texas' temperatures from the upper 70s and low 80s the region experienced on Wednesday.

Skies were mostly sunny over West Texas on Wednesday, with a few high clouds. Afternoon temperatures ranged from 58 degrees at Dalhart and Amarillo, where the cold front passed, to 81 at Sanderson.

South Texas, which was unaffected by the front on Wednesday, had mostly clear skies and light, southerly winds, with temperatures in the 70s and 80s.

The West Texas forecast for Thursday called for increasing cloudiness and cooler temperatures. Lows should be in the 20s and 30s, with highs in the 40s in the Panhandle to near 70 in the Big Bend valleys.

North Texas should be cloudy and colder, with highs from 51 to 71 and lows from 35 to 49.

South Texas should have patchy morning fog and partly cloudy skies, with increasing clouds Thursday night and a slight chance of showers in the east. Highs should be near 70 north to near 80 south, with lows from the 40s north to 60s south.

NATION

Snow fell over parts of Minnesota and Colorado on Wednesday, but otherwise only light precipitation was scattered over parts of the West.

A weak upper-level weather disturbance produced snow over Colorado's ski resort country, with up to a foot of snow forecast in the mountains of the state's southwestern corner. Some places had 3 inches by midday.

Colorado State Patrol officials said roads were icy and snowpacked in the southern sections of the state, and adequate snow tires or chains were required on Red Mountain and Wolf Creek passes.

The weather change followed on the heels of a heat wave. Earlier this week, the Denver area had unseasonably warm weather with temperatures hitting the high 60s, about 20 degrees above normal, weather officials said.

Another upper-level weather disturbance brought snow to northern Minnesota from late Tuesday into Wednesday morning. North-central sections of the state received 4 to 6 inches of snow.

Elsewhere in the West, a few snow showers were over Wyoming and eastern Montana.

Light showers associated with a cold front also spread along the northern Pacific Coast.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

Study: Anger can lead to early death

■ Chronic anger ranks with, or exceeds, cigarette smoking, obesity and a high-fat diet as a risk factor for early death, data suggests.

N.Y. Times News Service

People who often explode in hostile rages or who sit around fuming over every perceived slight may be doing more than making themselves unpleasant.

They may be killing themselves.

Researchers have gathered a wealth of data lately suggesting that chronic anger is so damaging to the body that it ranks with, or even exceeds, cigarette smoking, obesity and a high-fat diet as a powerful risk factor for early death.

"Our studies indicate that hostile, suspicious anger is right up there with any other health hazard we know about," said Dr. Redford Williams, a researcher in behavioral medicine at the Duke University Medical Center.

In results presented at a recent meeting of the American Heart Association, Williams reported that people who scored high on a hostility scale as teen-agers were much more likely than their more cheerful peers to have elevated cholesterol levels as adults, suggesting a link between unremitting anger and heart disease.

In another recent study, Dr. Mara Julius, an epidemiologist at the University of Michigan, analyzed the effects of chronic anger on women over a period of 18 years.

She found that women who had answered initial test questions with obvious signs of long-term, suppressed anger were three times more likely to have died during the study than those women who did not harbor such hostile feelings.

"For many women, constant suppressed anger seems to be a stronger risk factor for early mortality than smoking," said Dr. Julius, who announced her results at a recent meeting of the Gerontological Society of America.

Other researchers are teasing apart the complex welter of anger's physical effects on the body. They are finding that some people who are prone to hostile anger have an overactive "fight or flight" response, generating excessive amounts of stress hormones when confronted by life's every bump.

At the same time, such people have an underactive cool-down response, lacking sufficient hormones designed to counter the effects of stress.

SHORTFALL: Additional decrease a 'surprise'

from the state this year — taking into account early shortfall predictions.

The greater-than-expected decrease is primarily the result of many school districts raising property tax rates to attract more state dollars, Texas Education Agency spokesman Joey Lozano said.

Senate Bill 1, the school finance reform legislation passed last summer, offered monetary incentives to districts that raised property taxes to at least 91 cents per $100 of valuation.

Baressi said MISD, which this year raised the effective tax rate about 3 percent to $1.10, already was above the 91-cent tax mark when the finance bill passed.

The state expected many districts to raise taxes in response to the bill, but the increases were much larger than anticipated — leaving the state treasury about $109 million short, Lozano said.

As late as August, the state was predicting a shortfall of only $15 million due to decreases in property values statewide, Lozano said. Districts had been warned of the expected decrease in funding.

Baressi said the additional decrease, of which MISD was informed last week, came as a surprise but does not represent "a critical emergency."

"$300,000 or $350,000 is nothing to take lightly," he said, but added that he hoped the shortfall could be made up through careful administration of the MISD budget this year.

"We usually are able to realize a cost savings," Baressi said. "Hopefully we will be able to stay within the budget approved by the board."

Lozano said the amount of state money lost by individual districts is being determined based on a formula that takes into account district wealth and enrollment.

The $109 million shortfall is thus being "prorated" among districts statewide, with wealthier districts such as Dallas and Houston losing proportionally more money than others, Lozano said.

Chuck Hornung, Ector County Independent School District spokesman, said ECISD expects to lose $90,000 more through proration than originally anticipated. The 1990-91 district budget anticipated a shortfall in state revenue of about $690,000, he said.

"The difference here is that we are also at an all-time record high in enrollment, and our enrollment figures may offset some of this" through funding increases for average daily attendance, Hornung said.

Baressi said he did not think MISD's enrollment increases this year would make up for the money lost to the district through proration.

"It's doubtful that the average daily attendance will be up enough to compensate for an additional $350,000," he said.

The funding shortfall, Baressi said, is just another example of the state failing to meet its financial commitment to school districts.

"I think it's unfair when there supposedly is a surplus in state revenue for the state to underfund the school financing formulas," he said. "With a projected surplus, I would hope that there would be some kind of emergency appropriation" to make up for the $109 million shortfall.

The Associated Press reported Wednesday that the state may have collected up to $1.2 billion in surplus taxes this budget cycle.

TEA officials, meanwhile, have pointed out that despite the $109 million shortage, a majority of school districts saw their state aid increase from a year ago. School finance reform provided an extra $528 million, bringing total state aid this year to about $5.8 billion.

State aid to MISD last year totaled $26.8 million.

LAWMEN: Suspect remains in critical condition

(From 1A)

Pecos County sheriff's deputy Don Stockburger and Fort Stockton police officer Joe Pasque were shot by Mock about 8 p.m. Tuesday, said Pecos County chief deputy Cliff Harris.

Pasque, who was wearing a bulletproof vest, was shot three times. He was treated at a local hospital and later released.

Stockburger, who was shot in the chest and right wrist, remained in critical condition Wednesday at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa after undergoing surgery Tuesday night, Harris said.

The incident occurred after Pasque stopped a car fitting the description in a stolen vehicle report. Mock, who was ordered out of the car, reportedly fired several shots from a .38-caliber pistol.

The officers returned the fire, hitting Mock twice in the chest.

Mock is a parolee from Florida and is "wanted in regard to other offenses" of unknown nature elsewhere, said Fort Stockton Police Chief Gary Buchanan.

The vehicle Mock was driving was reported stolen from Louisiana.

Tuesday evening's shooting is a reminder to fellow officers about the reality of their jobs, according to local law enforcement officials.

"I would think most officers are reminded about what their jobs consist of," said Cpl. Jim White of the Midland Police Department.

"It's something most cops live with — knowing it can happen," White said.

Although the news is saddening to officers, it "makes them more thankful to get home in one piece ... especially this time of year," White said.

White said such incidents hopefully make officers more cautious in their line of duty.

And it was a safety measure that is credited with saving the life of the Pasque — a bulletproof vest.

"That's what saved him. He took two rounds to the vest point blank," Buchanan said, adding that wearing a vest in mandatory and provided for all Fort Stockton officers.

In Midland, the majority of officers are outfitted with vests but are not issued by the department, White said.

"The vest is expensive but the alternative is more costly," White added.

Vest or no vest, law enforcement officers are more concerned with doing their job then with the possibility of being hurt.

"Being an officer you always have it in the back of your mind that you might be injured or shot, but you don't dwell on it," said Sgt. Jose Primera, with the Midland County Sheriff's Office.

Primera said when he hears of an officer being injured, many things go through his mind.

"The main concern is for the officers themselves and their families," Primera said, adding that he always wonders if he knew the officer and what the circumstances were.

"You think about what you would have done in this situation. ... Every time you stop a car there is a potential (of being shot)," Primera said.

"You hope it never happens to you," he added.

Primera said he also thinks about the suspect involved. "What happened to him ... if the suspect will file charges. It isn't right but it has happened in the past."

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

AID: Bush's action will increase American farm exports

Although Moscow has gold and diamonds to sell, it prefers to do so in small amounts to avoid driving down prices for those commodities, administration officials said. Because of its chaotic transportation situation, the Soviet Union would also have difficulty delivering enough oil to foreign markets to raise emergency cash.

In explaining his actions, Bush said he wanted to "respond both to the short-term needs of the Soviet Union and to contribute to fundamental economic reform." He said he wanted to recognize the "excellent" progress Moscow has made in permitting emigration. This year, some 150,000 Soviet Jews have moved to Israel and 50,000 to the United States..

But it was also clear that Bush was hoping to bolster the government of Gorbachev, which could be imperiled by severe winter shortages of food and medical supplies.

"The Soviet Union is facing tough times, difficult times," Bush said. "But I believe that this is a good reason to act now, in order to help the Soviet Union stay the course of democratization and to undertake market reforms."

Shevardnadze suggested that beyond seeing the floundering Soviet food system through the winter, the Soviet leadership saw Bush's actions on Wednesday as a more sweeping boost to Gorbachev's political and economic policies.

"The fact is that there is certain instability in the Soviet Union and we are worried about that," he said. Shevardnadze added, "It would be a terrible thing if we were unable to assure the stability of the Soviet Union. It would be a terrible thing for Europe and for the world."

Bush's actions on Wednesday, which won wide and immediate praise from many lawmakers, American Jewish groups and human rights advocates, did not entirely lift all the trading restrictions that have been in place since 1951, when normal trade relations with the Soviet Union were first curbed in the aftermath of Soviet backing for North Korea's invasion of South Korea.

But Bush used his power to grant a temporary waiver, until next June, of parts of the 1974 Jackson-Vanik law.

SADDAM: Iraqi authorities order bomb shelters built

(From 1A)

450,000 troops in and around Kuwait, have built a similar defense around the emirate.

Abbas was the inspector-general of the armed forces and a former deputy chief of staff, the radio said.

The radio, quoting a decree from Saddam, said Shanshal, 70, was retiring because of his age. But military analysts questioned the timing behind the the firing, which came a month after Saddam sacked his military chief of staff.

"This would tend to underline that there is opposition to his strategy of holding onto Kuwait," said Paul Rogers, a defense analyst at England's Bradford University and an expert of Middle East military affairs.

The appointment of Abbas "could mean that Saddam is less than ready to compromise" on Kuwait, Rogers said.

In a related development, Iraq's ruling Baath party newspaper, Al-Thawra, said civil defense authorities have instructed all owners of buildings with two or more floors to convert their basements into shelters. It ordered the owners to post signs informing people where to take cover.

DERAILMENT: Federal officials investigating lis Copeland, was in critical condition.

Amtrak spokeswoman Marci Larson said Copeland was the engineer in a head-on collision on a New York City trestle in July 1984 in which one person was killed and 115 were injured, but that he was "completely exonerated."

That was verified by news reports on the NTSB's investigation of the accident.

Federal officials were investigating Wedneday's accident, which occurred in the same Back Bay station in downtown Boston as an almost identical crash three years ago caused by a faulty signal system.

"We'll be very interested in seeing if there are any connections," said NTSB spokesman Brent Bahler.

The Federal Railroad Administration also sent a team of inspectors and administered mandatory alcohol and drug tests to the crew. The results will not be available for several days.

Glynn would not comment on recorders taken from the cabins of both trains, which have been turned over to NTSB investigators. The speed of the Amtrak train will be determined by analyzing cabin data.

The crash left parts of the two trains twisted "like a coat hanger," said Fire Lt. Mike Walsh, who arrived at the scene two minutes after the first alarm.

"There was an eerie calm," Walsh said. He said he and other firefighters gave their oxygen masks to victims.

The commuter train, which originated in Stoughton, south of Boston, was sitting on an adjacent track running in the same direction as the Night Owl when it was hit toward the rear at around 8:30 a.m., said Nancy Sterling Gleason, a transit authority spokeswoman.

Confession stuns jurors

XAPURI, Brazil (AP) — A 22-year-old rancher's son confessed Wednesday that he killed famed rainforest activist Chico Mendes, bringing a surprising end to the opening session of the murder trial.

Darci Alves Pereira stunned a packed courtroom by admitting he shot Mendes on Dec. 22, 1988, shortly after dark outside his home in this remote Amazon town near Bolivia's border, 2,650 miles northwest of Rio de Janeiro.

Pereira's confession came minutes after he had twice denied shooting Mendes, who was one of Brazil's most outspoken critics of development of the Amazon basin. Mendes' case has reached such proportions that film producers and authors have besieged his widow with competing offers to tell his story.

Pereira, whose father also is charged with plotting the murder of the noted ecologist, faces a 12- to 30-year sentence. Sentencing is expected on Thursday.

The trial had drawn worldwide attention as a test of Brazil's commitment to protecting its rainforests against encroachment and to meting out equal justice for rich and poor.

Mendes, who defended the rainforest from landowners and ranchers who wanted to cut it down to develop the fragile Amazonian basin, has become a symbol of Brazil's impoverished.

Ilzamar Mendes, widow of Chico Mendes, was sitting in the gallery when the confession occurred. She clapped her hands in surprise.

"He confessed?" she asked incredulously. "It's hard to believe."

She added, "He's probably doing it to protect his father."

Pereira's father, rancher Darly Alves da Silva, also is on trial on charges of planning the shooting. He pleaded innocent.

The trial began at 9 a.m. A boy picked the names of seven jurors out of a hat containing 21 slips of paper with local resident's names written on them.

Four state troopers led in the defendants, who sat staring down as the charges were read.

Canada's environmental plan faulted

TORONTO (AP) — The Canadian government's Green Plan, aimed at protecting the environment in the second-largest country on the planet, came under fire Wednesday as nothing but a "Green Sketch" and "eco-babble."

Announced with fanfare by Environment Minister Robert de Cotret, the document pledges $3 billion through 1996 to clean up and protect Canada's air, water, forests, soil, wildlife and fisheries. But, as critics quickly pointed out, not a cent of spending has been approved by the Cabinet.

"It wasn't green and it wasn't a plan," said Dan McDermott of Greenpeace, the environmental organization. "As Kai Millyard (of Friends of the Earth) said, it would have been a revolutionary document if it had been released in 1975. It has no clear goal, no clear vision. There were whole sections of it where issues were dealt with in an extremely cursory fashion or else tangled in incomprehensibility."

Canada, with an area of 6,195,192 square miles and fewer than 27 million people, has a great interest in keeping its vast forests, lakes and Arctic region free of pollution.

As with most nations, and with a little help from its southern neighbor, Canada is beset with acid rain, dying lakes, dwindling forests and mountains of garbage.

Gulf crisis cuts enlistment figures

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Navy's Recruiter of the Year finds his skills being put to the test as he tries to enlist recruits who fear they may be shipped off to the Middle East and to war.

"If you join up, how do you know if you're coming back?" said Daniel Freeman, 17, a junior at Aviation High School, in Long Island City, N.Y., who stood in a knot of students who listened to the recruiter, Petty Officer 1st Class Willie Barnhill.

"I can't speak for the other branches, but you're better off in the Navy," Barnhill replied. "You can take hot showers, watch TV, and we got stuff like toilet tissue and you can go to class."

But what about war?

"Think of the last time a Navy vessel was sunk," he countered during his visit last Friday. "Navy ships are built today not to sink."

Nevertheless, a Navy spokesman said enlistment figures dropped this autumn by as much as 15 percent. The Army has seen an even bigger decline in new recruits, as much as 28 percent in some parts of the country.

Military officials said there was no clear trend nationwide, pointing out that the Marine Corps and Air Force have had no decline in enlistments.

Despite the decline, however, none of the branches has failed to meet its goals for people entering to begin basic training, said Christopher Jehn, an assistant secretary of defense for force management and personel. That is because there is a lag of as much to one year between enlisting and reporting to boot camp.

He said the services have been able to meet current staffing needs by drawing on enlistees who signed up before the Persian Gulf crisis began.

The Army, which is the largest of the military branches, has seen the worst dropoff in new enlistments since the buildup began. It was able to meet 82 per cent of October's goal of 10,039 recruits and only 77 percent of November's goal of 7,128, Jehn said.

Recruiting goals for the Navy have seen a similar but smaller decline, said Petty Officer David Melancon, a Navy spokesman. New enlistments declined to 94 percent of September's goal, 88 percent in October, and an estimated 85 percent for November.

"We have to acknowledge the existence" of the buildup in the gulf, said Jehn. "Kids and their parents are taking a wait-and-see attitude."

The benefits package sounded good to Jason Pugh and two of his friends from Aviation High School when they first visited a Navy recruiting station in Queens County, a part of New York City, last summer — two months before the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. Now he and his friends are concerned.

"In the back of your mind is, Are they going to send you over there if war broke out?" said Pugh, a 17-year-old senior. He said his friends are not very interested in the Navy any more.

Autumn has always been a tough season for recruiters, since many young people have yet to decide whether to attend college, look for work, or join the military. It has become more difficult because of a shrinking pool of 17-to-21-year-olds and spending cutbacks that reduced the recruting budget by 15 percent, Jehn said.

Army recruiters in Atlanta said there has been no shortage of new enlistees and they have exceeded their recruting goals each month.

Education changing outdated image of zoo keepers

"A lot of people have thought of zoo keepers as the maids who clean up after the animals," said Marilyn McBirney, a keeper in Houston's Zoological Garden's Children's Zoo.

But it's an outdated image that has begun to change as the public becomes more educated about conservation in general and animal care and breeding in particular. Zoo keepers are earning increased respect.

Three times a day, Tammy Olsen feeds the Houston zoo's sea lions. A crowd gathers to watch as Ms. Olsen and other keepers coach the animals through a series of tricks and games. The mammals follow their trainers' signals by saluting with flippers, balancing balls on their noses and catching tossed rings. Each accomplishment gets a reward of fish from the keepers' belt pouches.

But there's more than entertainment going on. As the sea lions perform tricks, the keepers check the animals for signs of trouble, from sores or bad teeth to illness or depression.

"We look for everything," Ms. Olsen said. "It's a general physical. It keeps the sea lions conditioned to being handled, in case the veterinarians need to do anything for them. And these are very intelligent animals, so it also helps keep them stimulated."

In a recent re-evaluation of city employees, zoo keepers were reclassified into a more professional category, equivalent to jobs such as legal interns or graphic artists. That's an important recognition to Joanna Blody, senior keeper in the zoo's education department. When Blody applied for her first zoo keeper job 20 years ago, she was told the only other applicant had a criminal record, so they'd give her a try.

At that time, the only requirement was a sixth-grade education, Ms. Blody said.

"Some of what we do is similar to a stable attendant, but it's not just cleaning out a stall.

"We have to know something about a wild animal's physiology and psychology. We need a detailed and comprehensive understanding of the animal and the way it interacts. That's how we keep it healthy. If we're going to create a natural environment, we have to know about plants and how to place them."

The relationship between keeper and animal often becomes personal.

"They have to trust us," Ms. Olsen said. "And it has to go both ways, like when we open the sea lions mouths to stick our hands in and check their teeth. You've got to have a mutual understanding. There's a lot of bonding and training that goes into working with these animals."

Houston Zoo manager John Werler said most zoos, including Houston's, require keepers to have at least a year's experience in an exotic-care facility or college-level animal-care courses. Zoos try to match keepers with specialties and keep them with it, for the good of the animals.

"Someone who works with fish probably wouldn't be qualified to work with birds or reptiles," he said.

The zoo keeper's role changed with the evolution of zoos. A few years ago, many zoos merely were display areas for exotic beasts: rows of cages designed for the viewing convenience of the public, not the health and happiness of the animals.

"We used to consume animals," Werler said. "If we lost one, we'd replace it. Not today. About 85 percent of animals in zoos are born in captivity. We depend on the keepers to maintain them."

As more animals become endangered, zoos provide some hope of saving them from extinction.

"Some of them would have been gone from the face of the Earth already if it were not for the cooperative efforts of zoos," Ms. Blody said. "New animals are added to the Species Survival Plan at such an incredible rate, just keeping up is challenging. Part of what zoo keepers do is educate about the worldwide conservation effort, and in a manner that entertains, because people still come to the zoos primarily to be entertained."

Walesa resigns as solidarity chief

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa stepped down Wednesday as leader of Solidarity, telling the union he led in its 10-year battle against Communism to expect major changes once he becomes Poland's president.

The president-elect also held talks in the Baltic resort of Sopot, his base of operations during the transition, on naming a new government.

Union sources and a report in the daily Gazeta Wyborcza said Walesa's most likely nominee for prime minister is Jan Olszewski, a lawyer known for defending opposition activists.

Meanwhile, the man Walesa defeated in Poland's first popular presidential elections, emigre businessman Stanislaw Tyminski, left the country after posting a $100,000 bond to assure his return by Jan. 5 to answer charges of slandering the prime minister.

Announcing his resignation as Solidarity's chairman, Walesa said: "I want to thank you for our common effort, thanks to which we achieved the greatest honor." He spoke at a Solidarity National Commission meeting.

When he becomes president, he said, there will be "big changes ... an earthquake." But he pledged they will be "peaceful."

Solidarity spearheaded changes that led to the toppling of Poland's Communist government and helped bring about peaceful revolutions elsewhere in Eastern Europe.

Walesa urged the union to be active in free parliamentary elections this spring, and to build a base to support his presidency through the transition to a capitalist economy and a European democracy.

"There will be a great attack of the Tyminskis," Walesa said, referring to his rival, who had won support from members of the former Communist Party. "We should be prepared so there will be no counter-revolution that could topple the president."

Walesa is expected to be sworn in Dec. 21 to a five-year term as president.

Danish premier will attempt new coalition

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — The opposition Social Democrats scored big gains in parliamentary elections Wednesday, but Conservative Prime Minister Poul Schlueter said he would fight to keep his minority government in power.

"I will seek to build the broadest possible foundation for a non-socialist government," he said.

Schlueter said two small centrist parties, the Center Democrats and the Christian People's Party, will be invited to join his minority government of Conservatives, Liberals and Social Liberals in an expanded coalition.

If formed, it would control 89 seats in the 179-seat Folketing, or parliament — one shy of a majority.

Mimi Jakobsen, the Center Democratic Party leader, said, however, "We will try to force the government to cooperate with the Social Democrats."

The existing coalition dropped one seat for a total of 66, according to projections.

With 66 percent of the vote counted, the Social Democrats apparently gained 14 seats for a total of 69.

This was largely at the expense of the allied Socialist People's Party, however, which lost nine seats for a total of 15.

Schlueter has headed successive center-right coalitions since 1982. He said preliminary results indicated a continued non-socialist majority in parliament. Social Democratic leader Svend Auken described his party's gains as "fantastic" and demanded Schlueter's resignation.

"Now is the time for a change of government and a new majority in Danish politics," said Auken.

Schlueter called the election on Nov. 22 when the Social Democrats blocked parliamentary passage of the government's finance bill.

Nineteenth chess game ends in draw

LYON, France (AP) — After 39 moves, defending champion Garry Kasparov and Anatoly Karpov agreed to a draw Wednesday in the 19th game of their world championship series.

Kasparov, who leads the series 10 points to 9, and Karpov played nearly the entire time allotment of five hours before ending the game. Karpov opened the game playing white.

The first player to gain 12.5 points wins the championship and $1.7 million of the $3 million purse. If both players finish the series with 12 points, Kasparov retains his title.

Karpov, who has also held the world title, opened the game by moving his queen's pawn forward two squares. Kasparov responded by moving his knight to square f6 in what is known as an East Indian Defense.

The last time Kasparov used that defense was in game 11 in New York, where the first 12 games of the series were held.

Game 20 is to be played here on Saturday.

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

Connally predicitng gulf war

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Gov. John Connally predicts the United States will go to war in the Persian Gulf and President Bush will be destroyed in a manner that President Johnson was destroyed by Vietnam.

"I hope to hell we don't get in a war, but it looks like we are going to," said Connally.

Connally, who served as President Nixon's Treasury secretary and once sought the Republican presidential nomination, traveled to Iraq this month with Oscar Wyatt, chairman of Coastal Corp. Connally, a member of the board of directors of the Houston energy firm, returned from Baghdad early Sunday aboard a Coastal jet with 21 former hostages.

Connally said Tuesday that Baghdad looked ready for war.

"You look at the city and it's operating in a normal fashion," he said. "You go see the president and you go a very circuitous route with obstacles and guards everywhere at every turn, every intersection. One of them is already wearing a gas mask, so they are expecting trouble."

Asked about the situation's effect on Bush, Connally replied: "I think it'll destroy him. I saw it destroy Johnson and it will destroy Bush. He'll be popular as hell for 60 days."

Navy officer says he saw executions

CARLISLE, Ky. (AP) — Lt. Cmdr. Michael Schwartz was an eyewitness to the invasion of Kuwait and to the looting and executions that followed.

The El Paso, Texas, native was inside the U.S. Embassy last August, watching the artillery and tanks fight it out, with shells whizzing overhead and exploding nearby.

The 22-year Navy veteran told his story after being released in Baghdad and flown to Houston on Sunday for a reunion with his wife Teresa and their two children, Stephen, 10, and Kelly, 6. They will be spending Christmas with family in Carlisle.

Schwartz said those inside the embassy watched Saddam Hussein's troops "loot the city — his troops. It was not other third-country military doing the damage — it was his troops."

"We watched and did see the execution of lots of innocent folks," he said. "These were true executions, too: Not where someone was trying to run away but where people were marched out and executed. The innocent people were executed as a lesson to others," Schwartz told The Carlisle Mercury.

According to Schwartz, the executions, and all other military activity, were common knowledge to Saddam. "Nothing is done by the Iraqi army without the knowledge of Hussein — nothing is done without a direct order from him."

On Aug. 23, Schwartz and others with him were ordered to Baghdad with the understanding that they would remain just the three or four hours necessary to get the paperwork allowing them to drive out of the country.

"When we got to Baghdad we found out that he (Saddam) had lied and officially had changed his mind — nobody was to move," he said.

Schwartz, who lost 51 pounds during the ordeal, was among a group of Americans brought out in a flight originated by former Texas Gov. John Connally and Oscar Wyatt, owner of Coastal Oil Co.

Station won't air Christmas carols

LONDON (AP) — A British forces radio station that started to cheer up troops in the Gulf has barred Christmas carols from its airwaves to avoid offending the Moslems.

The British Forces Broadcasting Service has ruled out religious programs and Christian references — including carols.

Chris Russell, in charge of starting BFBS Middle East on Dec. 17, said: "In deference to the host nation, Saudi Arabia, we are making one or two adjustments to our normal output.

"For instance, there will be no religious broadcasting, and no Christmas carols with overtly Christian words. But there will be plenty of seasonal music and lots of laughs."

Deployment hurting businesses near Army posts

By Suzanne Gamboa
Associated Press

For about 40 years, Paul's Electric in Lampasas has relied on business from Fort Hood. This year, however, the government contracts are non-existent, said the company's part-owner.

But Paula Henderson feels lucky. She has been able to find other contracts in the Rio Grande Valley to make up for the loss caused by the deployment of troops from Fort Hood. Many other businesses in nearby Killeen have been forced to close.

Fort Hood has deployed 20,000 of its 38,500 soldiers to the Persian Gulf for Operation Desert Shield.

"We have deployed more troops from Fort Hood than from any one post in the world," said Killeen Mayor Major Blair. "And because of this decision of (Defense Secretary Dick) Cheney, we have become an economic disaster."

In fact, Killeen's economy is so bad that Blair was in Washington, D.C., Wednesday seeking government aid in the form of public works projects.

Fourteen businesses have closed, including six car dealers, a steakhouse and two gas stations, one of which had been in town 25 years, Blair said. Business is down as much as 60 percent for other merchants.

"I feel the mayors of these cities across the country who are responsible for these people affected should have been briefed on what to expect," Blair said. "After all, we're the ones who pay taxes to support this operation. We provide the infrastructure for these military people. Now that infrastructure is being shattered."

Ms. Henderson said Paul's Electric, also owned by her father and husband, usually has about 100 employees including a permanent crew at Fort Hood. But the reduction in construction projects and other post business has forced her to slash her staff to 26 employees.

"We've moved all our equipment back home after being at Fort Hood for a number of years," she said.

At Scott and White Hospital in nearby Temple, only five of 320 physicians have deployed as reservists. But two of them were anesthesiologists, "and that has hurt us," said Don Nelson, hospital public affairs director.

And the hospital is worried about future call-ups. The physicians staff includes 63 reservists, he said.

In Waco, about 35 miles northeast, the community is hustling to gather toys for the annual "Toys for Tots" program usually handled by U.S. Marines reservists.

The Ordinance Maintenance Co. of the Fourth Maintenance Battalion has shipped out, leaving the company at a quarter of its strength, said Capt. Bob Moore, inspector-instructor.

"We're behind on our collection of toys and our goal and it does appear we're going to fall short," Moore said.

He said the reservists usually collect toys from merchants in their spare time and help promote the program.

The impact from the departure of 10,000 soldiers from Fort Bliss near El Paso has been minimal, but northeast businesses that cater to the post are suffering.

The deployment has had a slightly different effect on the community of Brownwood, about 80 miles northwest of Killeen. Many of Brownwood's residents are grandmothers and parents of deployed soldiers, so the community of about 19,300 started its own support group.

"We've got 100 families that have been affected," said Diana Carter, who founded the group after her son, PFC Craig Carter, deployed from Fort Bliss.

Each Sunday, the local newspaper, the Brownwood Bulletin, publishes names of deployed soldiers with ties to Brownwood. The center uses the list to assemble care packages for those soldiers.

"I feel the mother-in-law and father-in-law and grandparents, they really need support too," Ms. Carter said.

Historic district important to city

For decades the region bounded by Garfield and E streets and Missouri and College avenues has been recognized as a very "special" portion of Midland. The stately homes, shady streets, and lush and expansive lawns create the vision of a Midland that is strikingly different from the Midland of today. The area is bathed in the aura of "old Midland."

It should have been obvious for years that this portion of the city should be preserved for future generations to enjoy and to glimpse the community's past.

Now, Midland City Council is approaching a decision on whether to create a designation for the area as the Midland Historic District, a move supporters say will help preserve the district's historic charm while calling attention to it for the benefit of residents and visitors. Blue, diamond-shaped, reflective signs would be installed at the entrances to the district and would note that it is a "historic district." Blue street buttons also would mark the center of each street in the district, setting them apart from other city streets.

Besides the many homes in the district which reflect a 1930's architectural style, the historic district also encompasses an area of the city that includes such noteworthy institutions as the Museum of the Southwest, the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library and J. Evetts Haley History Center, the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum and the Marian Blakemore Planetarium. Many of those facilities also work diligently to preserve the history and heritage of this community, area and region, making the designation particularly fitting.

Nancy McKinley, who has called for creation of the district and who as chairman of the Midland County Historical Society has supported efforts for years to preserve the county's heritage, succinctly expressed the need for the district when she noted "the homes and people were here first, the cultural center came much later."

Midland is a vibrant, progressive city that all too frequently in the past has forgotten its heritage. The quest for a historic district is important so that our ties to the past will not merely fade into oblivion.

Midland City Council should create the Midland Historic District when it meets Dec. 18th. Then, thanks to the efforts of Mrs. McKinley and the many others who have worked toward this goal for years, the special part of Midland's past reflected by the historic district will not be pushed aside in the rush of modern society.

Lighting ordinance 'shot in the dark'

It's time for the residents of the community to act on their own behalf to prevent additional government controls on our private lives. This time the threat comes at the municipal level. You'll be happy to hear that — soon — you may need both the approval of the city and your neighbors to install outdoor residential lighting.

Yes, folks, it's another case of the tail wagging the dog. One individual in our city has single-handedly decided to protect our collective right to darkness, by asking our city council for an ordinance governing the deplorable act of installing decorative or protective outdoor residential lighting.

Even as you read this, the city attorney is drafting an ordinance for approval of the city council to prevent this outdoor nuisance to burglars, window-peepers and criminals everywhere. Imagine the nerve of a person who would interfere with the night-time activities of these degenerates by installing outdoor lighting around their private residence to curb their activity!

Not to worry, your city council is coming to your rescue! Sit back and do nothing, and this problem will be taken care of for you. If, on the other hand, you like your right to have lighting around your residence, free of government control, it's time to stand up and be counted. How can our neighborhood watches and police agencies do their job in the absence of light? How can a city government dictate the level of decoration or protection an individual should be allowed to have? Next will they tell us what kind of trees we may plant and what color we may paint our houses?

If this is a little beyond your limits of apathy, then best to make tracks to Midland City Hall for the tentatively scheduled Dec. 18 reading of this new improvement to our way of life.

Kevin K. Gafford
Midland

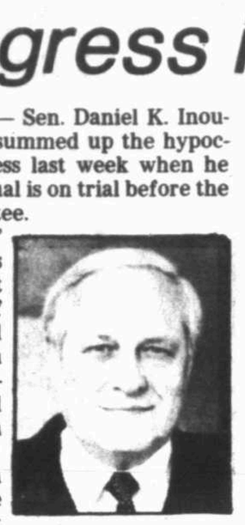
Is Congress in an ethical glass house?

WASHINGTON — Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, summed up the hypocrisy of Congress last week when he said that business-as-usual is on trial before the Senate Ethics Committee.



Anderson

The "Keating Five" are the only senators sitting in the dock. But if every member of Congress who ever did favors for a campaign donor was sitting alongside them, there would be no one left to sit in judgment.

"I believe what is on trial here is not the five colleagues of mine, but the U.S. Senate, and for that matter, the Congress of the United States," Inouye testified before the Ethics Committee. His was less a plea for reform than a call for the committee to come down from its ivory tower.

His words should ring true for one man in that tower, committee member Sen. David H. Pryor, D-Ark.

Pryor is supposed to pass judgment on whether his colleagues erred when they went to bat for the out-of-control savings and loan industry and Charles Keating, a generous campaign contributor. Yet Pryor, too, went to bat for the S&L industry and was so proud of it at the time that he touted his action to the media. What a difference a bailout makes.

Like many other senators, Pryor had S&L problems in his state in the mid-1980s. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its chairman Edwin Gray were trying to pull the thrifts out of the fast lane. In Arkansas, 27 of the state's 37 thrifts were feeling the screws and they didn't like it a bit.

They complained to Pryor and, on Oct. 3, 1986, he wrote a high-pressure letter to Gray accusing the Bank Board of having "a deliberate system of harassment against many institutions in this state."

Then, to make sure Gray knew he meant business, Pryor put a legislative "hold" on a bill that Gray needed to recapitalize the S&L deposit insurance fund. Pryor, with no clue of the financial calamity that was to come, even made his letter public when he wrote it.

Gray was desperate for the recapitalization bill, and Pryor was one of the senators keeping Gray on a tight leash by holding up the bill. Gray has testified that he had to kowtow to senators to assure the passage of the bill.

Apparently Pryor has found the elusive line between himself and the others, because he decided he was still eligible to pass judgment on the Keating Five.

When our associate Tim Warner asked for Pryor's explanation of the facts, he got a quick and well-rehearsed reply. Pryor's defense is that the hold he put on the recapitalization legislation was merely symbolic.

Before the Ethics Committee sat down to judge the Keating Five, Pryor says he showed his 1986 letter to the committee leadership, which said it wasn't a reason for Pryor to step down from the committee.

And Pryor claims his letter did not name any specific thrift, nor was it linked to campaign contributions. That may be Pryor's biggest stroke of luck. In the three years before he wrote the letter, he had received almost $20,000 in campaign contributions from the S&L industry, including at least $10,900 from Arkansas thrifts and their operators. But Pryor's letter to Gray did not mention any particular thrift. In that he differs from the Keating Five, who openly took up Keating's cause.

That difference must be little consolation to one of the Keating Five, Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz. He made mistakes, but at least he never lifted a finger to stop the desperately needed recapitalization.

Here come the czar after the Democrats

It's not easy for a drug czar to become the head of the Republican Party. William Bennett will soon find this out.

"Mr. Bennett, we sold $1 million worth of tickets for the big GOP fund-raiser in Cincinnati."

Buchwald

"What's the street value of that?"

"I beg your pardon!"

"I don't want to hear about the price — I want to know how much it comes to when you cut it up in fried chicken. How many SWAT teams will it take to provide valet parking?"

"It's only a dinner, Mr. Bennett. Vice President Quayle is going to be the speaker."

"Make sure you do a body search of the head table and get the dogs to sniff out the big givers."

"Sir, I think you're getting your last job mixed up with this one. There is nothing illegal about raising money for the Republican Party at a dinner."

"Have you ever tasted the food at a fund-raiser? Making people eat it is a crime."

"Mr. Bennett, as our new chairman you are being asked to make a speech in favor of the party. Do you need a writer?"

"I'll borrow some ideas from my upbeat drug agency talks. What do you think of this: The way to attack the budget deficit is to arrange a bust of the Colombian drug cartel in Medellin and link it to the crack houses run by Democratic political candidates in California?"

"That's good."

"Money-laundering should be the big issue of 1992. We'll make the Keating Five the fall guys as far as the presidential election is concerned."

"Suppose the Democrats attack us for our equal rights stand?"

"Then we'll call up Willie Horton from the Coast Guard reserves."

"Isn't he too old?"

"He's in better shape every time he goes on weekend furlough."

"Mr. Bennett, we could be overstepping the mark if we try to use the narcotics war to beat the Democrats."

"That's how much you know. Do you believe that I could have created a drug-free America if I had played it straight down the line? The secret of a smart political strategy is for your informers to rat on their informers before their informers rat on yours."

"You're the hit man. Should we start rounding up the usual suspects for '92?"

"That's why I'm here. I want the American people to make the connection between the liberals and Noriega. As chairman of the Republican Party, I'm going to run this organization the way I ran the drug agency. If this means setting up sting operations in the Capitol cloakroom, so be it. Do you have faith in me?"

"We certainly do, Mr. Bennett. The Republicans sure lucked out when they got a drug czar to lead the party."

"Let's go to work. I'm sure we can win the Hispanic vote if we carpet-bomb the Mexican border."

New book emancipation for black writers

WASHINGTON — Rutherford Calhoun is one of those rapscallions who have enlivened American literature since Huck Finn decided civilization made him itch, and lit out for the territories. Calhoun is a ne'er-do-well who instead of going down a river on a raft stowed away on a ship to escape the twin horrors of debts and marriage. The ship turned out to be bound for Africa to collect cargo: slaves. And Calhoun is black.

Will

So is his creator, Charles Johnson, who teaches at the University of Washington and has written, without setting out to do so, an emancipation proclamation for black writers. It is his novel "Middle Passage," winner of the National Book Award. It is an example of triumphant individualism, on the part of both Calhoun and Johnson.

Calhoun is a freed slave from southern Illinois whose former master assuaged his guilt by tamping great gobs of learning into Calhoun. Calhoun arrived in New Orleans around 1830 speaking like Spinoza but determined not to be "a credit to his race," a phrase that made him gag. He lived for pleasures, particularly the thrill of theft, until forced to choose either domesticity or punishment by a frightening creditor. Instead, he went to sea, a free black on the crew of a ship bringing slaves to American investors, one of whom was black. Johnson wants you to know that black experiences have been various.

"Middle Passage" reflects Johnson's years of research in the literature of the sea and the hair-raising facts of slavery. The verisimilitude about the smells, sanitation and diseases aboard ship includes details about the captain, who is a "tight packer" (of slaves; Johnson explains how it was done). When a slave died in transit, the Captain would cut off the ears to verify to the investor that the victim had been aboard.

In opaque remarks opaquely reported, a National Book Award juror suggested that the politics of ideology and ethnic entitlements, a poison in the teaching of literature nowadays, had seeped into the NBA process. But in felicitous remarks made when accepting the award, Johnson made clear what his novel itself makes clear: The "message" of the book is the absence of the sort of "message" that stultifies art.

Johnson noted that he is the first black male to win the award since Ralph Ellison won in 1953 for "Invisible Man." Ellison's aim, says Johnson, was creation of "a black American personality as complex, as multi-sided and synthetic as the American society that produced it."

A black literature of protest, stressing victimization, appeared about three decades ago. It was, says Johnson, inevitable and important — and limiting. Literature, he says, should be a form of discovery. A writer should not know in advance what, or at least all of what, he is going to say. Literature that is an extension of an ideology, that is didactic to the point of preachiness, lacks the power to change the reader's perceptions as the writer's perceptions change. A serious writer ought to be not only surprising, but himself surprised.

In "Invisible Man" (perhaps the finest American novel since "The Great Gatsby"), Ellison made vivid how blacks are made "invisible" where racial perceptions obliterate perceptions of individuality. That is what white America did to black Americans.

But there is a form of suffocation that blacks can inflict upon themselves. It is to insist on a literature of orthodoxy, a literature of protest which insists on group consciousness. Against this, Ellison was adamant: "Our task is that of making ourselves individuals."

Calhoun learns from his voyage, and especially from his encounter with the dignified but inaccessible (to him) culture of the slaves. He learns that he is a Yankee sailor.

A white crew member tells Calhoun: The slaves, too, are black, but they are not like you. The crew members calls him Illinois, and by the end of the novel Calhoun knows that somewhere in America, perhaps Illinois, is home. The novel is about — quietly about — patriotism.

"If," Calhoun muses, "this weird, upside-down caricature of a country called America, if this land of refugees and former indentured servants, religious heretics, half-breeds and fugitives — this cauldron of mongrels from all points of the compass — was all I could rightly call home, then aye: I was of it. There, as I lay weakened from bleeding, was where I wanted to be."

Johnson anticipates in the 1990s a black fiction "of increasing intellectual and artistic generosity, one that enables us as a people — as a culture — to move from narrow complaint to broad celebration." I think he means celebration of the possibilities of American individualism. I know that his novel, and the award, are reasons for celebration.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Sweden moves to join bloc

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Parliament gave the government the green light on Wednesday to apply to join the European Community next year, under a timetable that could make Sweden a member by 1995.

The move increased pressure in Norway and Finland to join, too.

"Only as a member can our country fully participate and have an influence on the EC cooperation," the parliamentary majority said in a statement. "A Swedish membership in the EC, while still keeping Sweden's policy of neutrality, is in accordance with our country's national interests."

Present members of the world's biggest trading bloc are Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Britain, Spain and Portugal. Spain and Portugal, the last additions, joined in 1986.

EC Commission president Jacques Delors says the bloc will not expand before 1993. By then, the existing members are to have completed consolidating their economies into a single market.

"Norway has to move together with Sweden in its European policies," Jan. P. Syse, Norway's Conservative leader and former prime minister said in reaction to Wednesday's news.

Little Auks off course

Little auks, relatives of guillemots and puffins, were spotted flying in an almost continuous stream off Whitburn, Tyne and Wear in northeast England near the Scottish border.

"This is one of the greatest movements of these normally scarce visitors to British waters ever recorded," said Peter Collins, the National Trust warden at Whitburn.

Almost 4,000 little auks were spotted in five hours, and birdwatchers manning Whitburn Observatory said they may have missed many more flying low among the waves.

The birding report came as gales swept the North Sea on Wednesday, capsizing a fishing boat with six men aboard, threatening oil rig crews and driving mountainous waves onto Britain's east coast.

The storm followed weekend snowstorms that buffeted Britain and much of Europe, leaving about 20 people dead, stranding hundreds of travelers and downing power lines supplying thousands of homes.

Flood alerts were issued along the east coast on Wednesday.

No clues in kidnaps

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Police and the state-run oil company say they have no clues as to the fate of three American engineers kidnapped by leftists guerrillas last month.

The three were taken from a northern Colombian oil field. The Americans were identified as Gary Sams, 38, John Bagby, 43, both of Tulsa, and Robert Hogan, 44, of Bakersfield, Calif.

Neither police nor Ecopetrol, the state oil company, had information on the engineers of Tulsa, Okla.-based NATCO.

NATCO spokesman Al Smith said Tuesday the company has not received any information regarding the kidnapping. Smith declined further comment.

"We have been advised that it's in the best interest of the families and the hostages themselves not to discuss anything until they've been released," he said.

Two men and a woman belonging to the pro-Cuban National Liberation Army abducted the engineers on Nov. 25 in the town of Tibu in North Santander province, Ecopetrol said.

Fighting leaves 51 dead

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels forced down a government helicopter Wednesday in a series of attacks that left at least 51 dead.

The armed forces said the heaviest combat was in the eastern provinces of San Miguel and Usulutan. Sporadic fighting continued throughout the day.

Honduras said about 200 Salvadoran soldiers, some seriously wounded, crossed its border after a battle with the rebels on Salvadoran territory.

The incident has been reported to the Salvadoran government,

Simple home computers up in marketplace

Associated Press

Ordinary consumers may want, need, and use home computers, but not necessarily with all the complex gizmos that attract dedicated hackers.

So computer marketers aiming at this broad middle range group have begun to concentrate on basic usefulness of the machines, with word processing, school work, household management and entertainment at the top of the list. They also are making them easier to set up and use.

After its initial flop with the PCjr in the home computer marketplace, IBM scrambled to recoup by interviewing consumers across the country about what they really want from a household computer.

The business computer giant reentered the market this summer with its PS/1 line, four compact models ranging in price from $1,000 to $2,000 and dedicated to such prosaic functions as homework, financial records, correspondence, and information gathering and entertainment through software like Prodigy. The computers have built-in modems that allow communication with other PCs or information networks. Each computer, which can be bought at department or computer stores, arrives with all components in one box, ready to set up and go to work.

Approaching from the other end of the market, Smith Corona, with long experience in home-use typewriters, has come up with a line of compact personal word processors.

SCM word processors range from $500 to $900, with printers costing an additional $200 or $300, depending on type. Included in the line is the 6.5-pound PWP 7000LT, which the company says is the first laptop personal word processor in the industry, with ports for printers and modems to latch into on-line information services. SCM also is marketing a line of electronic typewriters range from $230 to $430, some with displays and keyboards similar to word processors.

IBM, looking at a 20 million-unit market that is expected to double in five years, found that their potential consumers wanted something relatively simple to set up and start with but didn't skimp on more serious computing capabilities.

Each IBM model features Microsoft Works and an IBM DOS operating system, with Selectric Touch keyboard, Photo Graphic color or black-and-white high resolution display, and a mouse. Powered by Intel 80286 microprocessors, models offer options of either 512 kilobytes (KB) or 1 megabyte (MB) of memory. If more storage is needed, users can add optional equipment such as a 3.5-inch diskette drive, a 30 MB hard disk, or a 5.25-inch external disk drive.

The IBM machines open with an information quadrant graphic that gets users into any of four capability modes: information for tutorials and on-line help; Microsoft Works for word processing, spreadsheets, databases and communications; storage for the users' own software; and IBM DOS, the operating system with menu-driven commands for functions such as copying and formatting.

Users can pick from an array of on-line services including Prodigy, for shopping, brokerage, banking and travel ticketing; the PS/1 Users' Club, for on-line support, information and a users' electronic bulletin board, operating through Prodigy; and Promenade, an education and entertainment on-line service with classes, tutoring, library and encyclopedia access and card and board games. (Prodigy is IBM's joint venture with Sears.)

SCM's machines are geared primarily to word processing with built-in printing systems, though some of its models have separate printers and are set up with Hayes compatible 1200 baud modems so owners can plug into on-line networks.

Desktop publishing capability is offered through SCM's high-speed, high resolution transfer printer (HRT100), which can print with a variety of characters and typefaces via plug-in cartridges. The company also offers a letter-quality daisy-wheel printer (DWP I).

The portable laptop uses the latter. It also has 50,000 characters of editable internal memory and a built-in disk drive with storage capacity of 100,000 characters per disk. Its display is a 16-line backlit LCD board that flips up, and it can push optional spreadsheet programs.

The line features what SCM calls an entry-level word processor, the PWP 1000. This portable machine comes an 8-line LCD and 32,000 characters of internal memory. It offers additional storage with an optional 32,000 character DataStore Card.

Telephone technology adds variety, new access

Associated Press

The telephone has come a long way since the day in 1876 in Boston when Alexander Graham Bell told his laboratory assistant over a primitive liquid transmitter, "Mr. Watson, come here; I want you."

Today, that liquid transmitter has evolved into cordless phones, tapeless digital answerphones, speakerphones, integrated telephone answering machines, cellular phones, phones with autodialer memory, on-hook dialing and voice dialing.

Voice-dialing phones use voice logic sensor technology to allow a user to dial any of 50 individual numbers by simply saying the name of the person or business being called. The programmable phone stores a voice print of each party's name and number in its memory, so that when a name is announced, it automatically dials that number.

Some models have a built-in answering machine that greets callers with a digitally-synthesized voice which asks them to dial in their number so the call can be returned.

Recently introduced by AT&T are the first answering machines that respond to rotary phones and voice responses. The two-line models also are the first to answer calls on one line while taking a message on the other.

Another recently marketed telephone is a hands-free headset model which allows a person to listen to FM radio programs but to answer calls with the touch of a button when the radio reception is interrupted by an alerting tone.

Digital technology has enabled engineers to do away with bulky telephone answering systems and create compact and tapeless digital answerphones designed for home use.

With the absence of tape cassettes, the phones are approximately the size of a standard telephone and have fewer working parts than conventional answering machines.

And for the traveler who wants to dial up the latest stock prices or call for hotel and plane reservations, the New York Telephone Company is testing new public computer terminals at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport. The company says customers can access some 150 different travel, financial, entertainment and information services available at the terminals, which also are equipped for conference calling.

"Preliminary market studies tell us that many airline travelers — especially business people — would use these types of services frequently," says Robert Beilhouse, general manager-public communications.

Dolls, cuddly stuffed toys take first place for children's gifts

Associated Press

If it weren't for kids, there wouldn't be so many excuses for adults to visit toy departments at holiday time. There are thousands of toys marketed, so parents have plenty of fun ahead of them before letting the youngsters take over. Here is the barest sampling of what's in the stores:

Classic baby dolls and what might be called role model dolls prevail.

— The Magic Nursery Baby has to arrive before its new owner can determine its sex, just like a real baby. Each doll comes with a homecoming garment that dissolves in water, revealing a packet with a card that tells whether it's a boy or girl. Every 36th doll sold will have a card that says it's a twin, and a second doll will be on the way when the card is redeemed with Mattel, the maker.

— If twins aren't enough, how about Quints? Five little dolls, complete with accessories that are color coded (to tell them apart, of course), come from Tyco Toys.

— Then there's a new batch from the patch. Cabbage Patch Kids with different facial features, eye colors, hair styles and skin tones in as many variations as the owners themselves come in Birthday Kids, Babyland Kids, Kids' Kids that pose, and Babies reeking of baby powder. Now marketed by Hasbro, Cabbage Patchers still come with their individual adoption certificates and thousands of outfits to choose from.

— Dolls heading out in the world include the Mommy Doll from Tootsietoy, depicting the working mothers of real life. Briefcases, jogging sweats, granny gowns, car keys, laundry baskets and babies of their own accessorize these model moms. According to Cindy Stern, who created the doll (with toy clothing designer Sue Ogden), most mothers choose versions of the doll that most resemble themselves.

— Artistic aspirations are captured by My Pretty Ballerina by Tyco Toys. This doll, dressed in tights and leg warmers, can dance on point and execute arabesques or pirouettes. She comes with her own practice barre. Separate accessories are performance ensembles with costume pieces and cassette tapes with music from "The Nutcracker Suite" and "Swan Lake."

— What's a model of a model? It could be a doll from the Real Model Collection by Matchbook Toys, fashion plates depicting Christie Brinkley, Cheryl Tiegs or Beverly Johnson. Each doll comes with portfolio, fashion changes, autographed pictures and beauty booklet. The real Brinkley, Tiegs and Johnson are donating part of their doll sales royalties to The Make-A-Wish Foundation.

— Barbie probably is the Grande Dame of all fashion dolls, and new versions from Mattel include the Ice Capades Barbie, Barbie and The Beat, My First Princess, Wedding Fantasy, Air Force Barbie, Barbie's All-Stars, Nigerian Barbie and Brazilian Barbie. Barbie also has her first Bob Mackie gown, which the designer created for the first in a series of collector Barbies.

— Fashion consciousness has hit paper dolls, too. Lookin' Pretty Dolls from Ohio Art come with press-on, peel-off vinyl fashions that can be stored in their own carry-cases.

— Old-world charm characterizes the Canneto Dolls from Hasbro, made by a family in Italy. The dolls recall those grandmother had, with country-print dresses trimmed in lace and flowers, straw or lacy bonnets and floral bouquets. The dolls come with brushable hair and soft bodies in baby dolls, toddlers, and little girls.

In cuddly toys, there's plenty of plush, but personalities are emerging.

— A little fellow called F.R.O.Y.D. is sort of odd looking. He's yellow, has a Cyrano-type nose and wears a button that says "I believe in you!" He was discovered on a drawing pad one day by former jewelry designer Carolyne Greene, who got him ready for his debut in the toy world. F.R.O.Y.D. (for "I'm for the reality of your dreams") says he was there to encourage Columbus, helping him believe there really was something on the other side of the ocean.

— Another comforting character is Snobell, a reindeer in plush from Applause. This pure white reindeer gets his name from the six bells on his antlers that keep him from disappearing in the snow.

— Also from Applause are Tiny Toons plush toys based on characters in the Stephen Spielberg animated feature of that name. These are teen-aged Bugs and Daffy offshoots, including Buster and Babs Bunny, Plucky Duck, Hamton, Dizzy Devil and Montana Max.

— Now five years old and still going strong is Teddy Ruxpin, the talking bear from Worlds of Wonder.

Copley News Service

Sallying forth to find the perfect gift for the woman in your life? This quest can be as befuddling as a maze and as egothreatening as an untried sport. But never fear. You can put those nagging uncertainties aside if you venture forth well-informed.

Clothes-wise, we're in an epoch of anything goes. Navajo-print sweaters, structured jackets made of ruglike fabrics and long woven coats will warm her winter. Also considered must-haves this season are the oversize blazer, called the boyfriend jacket, and leather wrapped skirts.

All-weather women will appreciate this season's winning coat — the anorak. This drawstring-waisted jacket is versatile for city and country activities. Other manifestations of outback suburban chic are chukkas (ankle high boots) or camp mocs. Accompany with a hefty selection of relaxed turtlenecks with matching crew socks.

Accessories are a provident key to revitalizing her closet's contents. Sequined gloves, cashmere gloves, gloves with fringe, buttons and chains are a ladylike addition to any wardrobe. Belts range from simple strips of faux finished leather to brass-emblazoned sashes to extravagant swoops of tassels and beads.

Textured or printed hosiery, a selection of natty knee-highs and unusual print leggings will caress her from the floor up. At eye level, treat her to new spectacle frames or an assortment of pastel silk chiffon scarves.

If there's a statement to be made in vogue this season, it's "ethnic." Frenzied print scarves, bangles, silver cuffs, earrings and necklaces with as many moving parts as wind chimes add up to a gypsylike flavor.

Big glass stones set in multichain necklaces bring the Russian influence home. Byzantine hair accessories have jewels in emerald, sapphire, amethyst and ruby. Museum gift shops often have higher-tech jewelry and accessories.

Hats are back. Don't try to choose from the soft felts, bold berets, leather, suede and fur confections without her. Plan a special hat-buying excursion buffetted by a lunch or cocktail.

Handbag shopping is another personal affair, also best undertaken with the woman in tow. A durable quality wallet can cost more than a purse and is almost a luxury. If you're out on your own handbag hunting, choose a minaudiere. These fanciful little evening bags turn any event into a gala.

New briefcases for women double as totes and constructed handbags. Even mommy-trackers will appreciate posh day-planners, calendars and address books. Styles range from country fresh to Space Age tech.

Silver, leather or china picture frames and prestige fountain pens will be thoughtful additions to her desk activities. Or help her ring in the new year with a new phone — cordless if she doesn't have one yet or one of the innumerable far-fetched shapes available.

Women who cherish their discontinued china and crystal will appreciate the services of Replacements Ltd. Find her the unfindable by writing to 302 Gallimore Dairy Road, Greensboro, NC 27409-9723.

Impassioned cooks will go gaga over kitchen gadgetry. Wives that slap together three meals a day under the duress of keeping the family fed will not. Distinguish the difference. Don't buy mere appliances as gifts. Shiny imported mechanisms that perform amazing feats of food preparation are the ticket. Options range from wall-mounted hand-beater assortments with happily whirring motors to exquisite little stainless pepper mills and vegetable peelers.

Beauty gifts ride the same thin line. You want to help her enhance her already formidable good looks, not change her completely. Look for beauty items she would consider a total indulgence — makeup brushes, ostrich feather powder puffs, scented bath beads, an elegant lipstick case, compact and comb for her purse. If she's mentioned haircuts, facials or massages, find out who performs premier services in your community.

You can avoid the shopping scene entirely by tracking down theater or symphony tickets. Museum memberships, art workshops or painting lessons, magazine or book-of-the-month subscriptions are other ideas. Domestic women will delight in sewing or tailoring lessons or a block of sessions on cooking exotic cuisines.

If she's less demoiselle than daredevil, find out about heliskiing, skydiving, hang gliding, river rafting or deep-sea diving. Give lessons. Or if she's already entrenched in one of these bionic pastimes, chances are she'd love some new equipment.

Talk to your travel agent about romantic weekend getaways. Special fares, arranged in advance, can put you more than a stone's throw from home in a relaxed setting or beneath the dazzling city lights.

Time-deficient businessmen or guys whose extracurricular activites do not include wives or girlfriends should think about committing to some togetherness, perhaps in the form of dance lessons. Learn the lambada with a loved one.

Shopping Strategies

Almost half of us know what to buy before we walk into the store. More than a quarter of shoppers buy their holiday gifts throughout the year; one in five purchase all their gifts in one shopping expedition.

Who Shops When

Women are more likely to pick up holiday gifts all year long. Men, on the other hand, tend to wait until the last minute, according to an American Express survey.

Select toys that leave memories

Metro News Service

During the holidays, parents will make the majority of the nation's toy purchases. It is also the time when they'll become confused consumers. The choices are mind-boggling: The toy market is a multi-billion dollar a year industry with thousands — if not millions — of different products jamming retail store shelves.

"Price is a consideration, but not a parent's number one criterion when shopping for Christmas or Hanukkah gifts," according to Lori Grupp, a spokeswoman for Tiger Toys. "Their biggest concern is the child's desire for a product, then durability, quality, and whether the toy will hold the child's interest over an extended period of time."

Ours is a fad-oriented culture, and the toy industry reflects this with products merchandised in connection with the latest movies, television shows or pastimes. While many of these toys' sales go through the roof when first off the production line, Grupp says fad toys quickly fade only to be replaced by the next trendy offering.

"Toys that most adults remember fondly from childhood were not fad toys," Grupp advised. "They were products that provided companionship and challenged the imagination. Consider dolls that people have for years — some passed down from generation to generation for many to enjoy."

And many parents are considering dolls. Industry experts report doll sales are the best they've been in years — up 25 percent or more. Grupp says tiger Toys' Balica Doll line experienced such a strong consumer response when introduced in 1989, the toy company has distributed a new collection this year and will introduce another in 1991.

Designed by world-famous dollmaker Brigitte Zapf of Germany, Balica is made to encourage "fantasy play," with individual life-like faces, outfits and personalities.

She'll always remember this holiday. Parents should look for holiday gifts that children will cherish and enjoy for years, such as Erin from Balica dolls.

Associated Press

ROOSEVELT, Texas (AP) — The community of Roosevelt lies in a bend of a highway officially designated as Texas Loop 291, 20 miles west of Junction in the far reaches of the Texas Hill Country. In the 1940s, before the highway folks moved the road a mile or so south and bypassed the town, it was known as U.S. 290.

Not much more than a wide spot in the road, Roosevelt is home to about 20 people, give or take one or two, who live on the banks of the North Llano River.

Around the middle of November, Roosevelt starts to turn red as a steady stream of trucks going in and out of town haul poinsettias grown at Marc-Key Company nursery throughout the Southwest.

The first of some 35,000 poinsettias were trucked out of here Nov. 12 in a process that will last until the middle of December.

"I breathe a sigh of relief when the last one is out of here," said Martha Simon. She owns the nursery with with her husband Ilee and sons Marc and Key.

"When I get through with the crop, I call the Senior Citizen's Center in Junction and I call the Eastern Star and I tell them 'Anything we've got left, you can have'," she explained.

Ilee and Martha have been in the nursery business for 11 years or so after an earlier career as schoolteachers.

Martha, tending to the nursery and rounding up loose cows while Ilee rode shotgun on a delivery trip to Midland and on to Silver City, N.M., said things haven't always been rosy.

"We knew nothing when we started," she admitted, letting out a laugh. "I killed 300 poinsettias in one night ... over-fertilized them."

The Simons, who named the nursery after their two sons, got a rather inauspicious start.

"We had one little greenhouse," Martha said, "then we added Nos. 2, 3 and 4 ... then No. 5."

A trip to an auction in Laredo resulted in the addition of three more greenhouses while the Simons have built the last six by hand.

Martha answered the question of how her family got into the poinsettia end of nursery business with a question of her own: "How do you get into anything?

"We started selling to the K marts and Wal-Marts and just kind of went from there," she explained.

Marc-Key's territory stretches from Del Rio and Uvalde on the south, east to Kerrville, north to Wichita Falls and west to Silver City.

"We pretty much have all of the K marts and Wal-Marts in West Texas," Martha said. "We get into Fort Worth occasionally because I had a manager from another store move up there.

"Because we could offer service to the out-of-the-way places, and give them more personalized service at the same time, we have been successful," she continued.

Marc-Key's poinsettia season starts around mid-August when the seeds are planted.

By early September the plants are in full growth and a labor-intensive project shifts into full gear.

To promote faster development, massive sheets of black plastic — oilfield pit liner — are pulled over the plants around 4 p.m. daily.

"We leave the plastic in place until 8 in the morning," Martha said, explaining that the process creates a longer, albeit false, night. "It causes them to grow faster and to turn (color) sooner."

An estimated 12,000 plants are in the final stages of turning now as little hints of brilliant reds and pinks start to show in the green leaves.

Martha said the plants require daily attention.

"They have to be watered every day, we have to watch the light and temperature and we have to pull the plastic on and off every day," she said.

When the plants are ready for delivery, the work continues.

K mart requires that their plants be ready for sale upon delivery, so the Simons and their employees place K mart price tags and UPC code cards on the plants, drop the plastic pot in a red foil wrap and then drop that in a plastic sleeve.

Martha says that despite outward appearances, the procedure doesn't harm the plants.

"These plants are very, very durable," she said. "It's not like people think, that they're easily damaged, at all."

Marc-Key's business is 90 percent seasonal according to Martha, and poinsettias are just part of the overall picture.

"The poinsettias are an interim crop for us between bedding plants," she explained. "The end of December, we'll get in 16,000 cultured geraniums and we'll stay busy from them on."

She said the company's five year-round employees have seeded and potted 16,000 geraniums in one eight-hour work day.

During peak seasons, like now, the Simons employ 10 to 15 people and one, Walter Krustchinsky, runs Ilee's Grocery, one of the two stores in town and the only place between Junction and Sonora that you can get gasoline if you need it in the middle of the night.

"She said it would be busy for a while," Krustchinsky said. "Let me tell you, from now on until spring, all you'll see around here are elbows a'flying."

And trucks pulling out with poinsettias.

New compact disc players on music scene

Associated Press

With compact discs becoming the format of choice for playback of pre-recorded albums and singles, there is a new wave of players ready to catch the eyes and ears of dedicated audiophiles.

Most major electronics manufacturers are now marketing compact disc changers to satisfy the appetites of those who hunger for hours of uninterrupted digital sound.

The two most popular versions of CD changers are the magazine and carousel styles.

Most CD magazines hold up to six discs, which are loaded and stored horizontally. Once loaded, the magazine is inserted into the player and each disc is then pulled from the magazine and individually played.

Carousel changers, on the other hand, hold five discs on one large platter. A merry-go-round-like disc tray rotates to the pickup mechanism to play the CD.

Regardless of the make or style of the compact disc changer, the end result is the same: hours of hassle-free listening.

CD changers incorporate the same laser optics used in single-disc players to read the information stored on the discs.

CD changers cost more than many single-disc players, but don't be frightened by the thought of paying a higher price for the convenience of owning one. Shopping around can pay off, as dealers, on occasion, will offer quality, brand-name changers on sale for around $200.

If you don't want to wait for a sale, then expect to pay $279 to $400 for a changer.

Like single-disc units, changers are also available with varying degrees of "frills."

Some carousel and magazine changers are available without remote control and have to be programmed on the unit's front panel. Eliminating the remote feature can save you a few dollars.

But fully programmable changers packed with options are attractive. Here's what most of them will do:

After loading a changer with discs, it can be programmed to play only the selections you want and in any order. Thanks to the laser pickup and the way the digital recordings are stored, the changer can go from one disc to another to find a song in a matter of seconds. Most changers allow around 30 selections to be programmed.

Some also offer selection memory and title file memory, so favorite programs may be saved.

Changers with a random play function allow the unit to pick and play selections on its own. That feature is nice when listening to group "greatest hits" CDs. It's like having a jukebox in your home.

Magazine-style changers are available from Pioneer, Magnavox, Sanyo, Yamaha, Onkyo, and others.

Some unique changers include the Yamaha CDC-500, which uses a six-disc magazine and also has a tray for single-disc play.

Sanyo's CPM 900 will hold up to 10 discs in its magazine, six 5-inch discs and four 3-inch discs.

Fisher's DAC199 has five individual loading trays and can be programmed to display disc titles on its lighted front panel.

Sharp's MV-D100 is a three-disc CD changer that also plays laser videodiscs.

Consumers also have found it handy to keep discs permanently stored in the CD changer's magazines. You simply buy more magazines to accommodate additional discs and build a library. Some of the magazines also are compatible with auto CD changers.

New editions of treasured books printed for holiday giving

Associated Press

Werner Erhard of San Francisco sent out 62,824 Christmas cards in 1975, believed to be the greatest number ever sent by an individual.

This is the kind of cheering information for the season that can be discovered by people who find the 1991 edition of "The Guinness Book of Records" (Facts on File) under their trees. (Note: the tallest cut Christmas tree was the 221-foot-high Douglas fir put up at the Northgate Shopping Center in Seattle in 1950.)

The Guinness has a record of its own: It has sold 61 million copies in 31 languages, second only to the Bible. This new Americanized version has U.S. records listed along with world records, including baseball stats.

It's been almost 500 years since Columbus sailed into what he thought was the Far East. Two in the first batch of anniversary books are Rand McNally's "Atlas of Columbus and The Great Discoveries" by Kenneth Nebenzahl and "America 1492: Portrait of a Continent 500 Years Ago," by Manuel Lucena Salmoral (Facts on File).

Nebenzahl, a map historian, traces the cartographic history of the Columbus expedition, noting that misrepresentations of the ocean's breadth on the Ptolemaic, mappaemundi (world maps) and portolan sea charts of that era were behind the discoverer's belief that he could sail westward to the East. The book is illustrated with many of these early maps, including a portolan sea chart attributed to Columbus himself.

The book continues with the story of how mapmakers in the ensuing years dealt with the change in their concepts of world geography, and how Europe colonized the New World.

Salmoral's book focuses on the Americans that Columbus mistakenly called Indians. Histories of such tribes as the Inuits in the North to the Mays, Aztecs and Incas of the South are extrapolated back to pre-Columbian times, drawing on eyewitness accounts of contemporary Spanish historians and a few surviving native documents.

Out to prove that vegetarian fare is mainstream cuisine, food writer Baba S. Khalsa spent a year interviewing — and eating vegetables with — America's most noted chefs and food writers. The result is "Great Vegetables from the Great Chefs" (Chronicle Books).

Khalsa blends his interviews with such personalities as Julia Child, Alice Waters, Jasper White and Ferdinand Metz with anecdotes and recipes, describing how they view the role of vegetables in the meals they create. Recipes include meatless meals like risotto with asparagus and brandy, wild mushroom pasta, grilled eggplant and pesto pizza. Holiday and regional cuisine get special attention, too.

Reproduction editions of the originals by F. Scott Fitzgerald, William Faulkner, Ernest Hemingway, John Steinbeck and other American literary giants — complete with the original dust jacket artwork — have been published by First Edition Library.

The jackets are those that the authors negotiated and fretted about. F. Scott Fitzgerald liked the cover art for "The Great Gatsby" so much that he wrote to his editor: "For Christ's sake, don't give anyone that jacket. I've written it into the book." And John Steinbeck, in an effort to confront accusations that "The Grapes of Wrath" was alien propaganda, insisted that the lyrics to "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" (from which his title was taken) be printed on the endpapers. The Gatsby cover for the new series was reproduced from the only known original, in the author's scrapbook now at the Firestone Library in Princeton.

City may regulate outdoor lights

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Midlander Kevin Gafford stands before his backyard lights, which neighbor Ralph Miller has called a nuisance. The city is working on an ordinance to regulate residential lights in the city.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

An apparent feud between two neighbors over yard lights may serve as the fuse for an ordinance regulating residential lighting citywide, City Attorney David Reagan said Wednesday.

The city took interest Nov. 27 after Ralph Miller complained to councilmen that there was no ordinance regulating outdoor lights, as evidenced by his next door neighbor's illumination display.

Miller, 3303 Douglas Ave., claimed that neighbor Kevin Gafford had erected too many outside lights, with the bothersome beams shining across the fence into his yard and home.

Gafford, meanwhile, said he plans to fight any ordinance controlling residential lighting, which, in his case, is used for crime prevention.

Homes in the neighborhood have been the target for burglars six times in the past two years, he said. In addition, his wife once spotted a peeper peering in a back window of their 3305 Douglas Ave. house, he said.

'We're not seeking to overregulate in this area . . . We just want to regulate someone who has gone overboard in lighting up his neighborhood.'

— Midland City Attorney David Reagan

"Now one individual asks for a regulating ordinance and they're going to give him one," Gafford said. "What gets me is that it's a case of the tail wagging the dog."

But Reagan said that if a light-regulating ordinance is approved here, the city simply would be following suit behind other Texas municipalities.

Miller last month presented the city with light-regulating ordinances from seven Texas cities: Plano, Lubbock, Mesquite, Garland, Abilene, Richardson and McKinney.

While some cities like Garland have a general ordinance prohibiting direct light from one residence to another, regulations in other cities such as Plano and Abilene are more stringent, he said.

"In some cities they get into measurements of intensity of the light, watts and distance," Reagan said. "The ordinances vary from city to city. Each has addressed the problem differently."

He said an ordinance for Midland, though, likely would be more like Garland's and may even include a grandfather clause exempting existing lights.

"The instructions I got from the City Council was to simply come up with an ordinance regulating lights in Midland in a manner that would be appropriate for Midland," Reagan said. "They indicated they were not interested in getting into detailed measurements of light."

He said he is consulting with TU Electric officials, crime-prevention groups and the Midland Police Department to determine a middle ground between safety and public nuisance.

A final draft of the ordinance could go before councilmen for review in January, he said.

"We're not seeking to overregulate in this area or needlessly regulate in this area," Reagan said. "We just want to regulate someone who has gone overboard in lighting up his neighborhood."

Gafford, an insurance and investments agent, said no one in his neighborhood but Miller has complained about his outdoor lights. There are two lamp posts in his back yard and one in the front, each post equipped with 100-watt amber bulbs which illuminate virtually all of the property from sundown to sunup.

"Everybody in this neighborhood but him wants this light," he said. "The police want this light. The electric company wants the light, and this one guy wants to protect everybody's right to darkness."

Gafford said he has tried to appease Miller by moving one light and shielding the other two so they do not shine next door.

Miller, meanwhile, claimed that he is only looking out for the best interest of all Midlanders, not just his own.

"I didn't propose for his (Gafford) lights to be taken down," said Miller, a retired Texas Instruments employee. "He can have all the lights he wants.

"This would be a very common and ordinary ordinance. I don't

You better watch out, MPD warns

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The Christmas season is a time of giving.

But unfortunately there are people who take advantage of this sentiment and prey on the kind-hearted through bogus solicitations in the guise of charitable organizations.

Within the last three weeks various agencies' names have been used for such illegitimate collections.

The Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation received reports of a person or persons soliciting funds identifying themselves as with MHMR. The agency is not currently conducting any telephone or door-to-door fund-raising, said Laura Walker, MHMR volunteer coordinator and spokeswoman.

"It's really distasteful ... very unscrupulous," Ms. Walker said, adding that this isn't the first time the organization's name has been used for such purposes.

The Midland Jaycees' name also fell victim to a solicitation scam recently.

"We had a young lady about 20 years old going around with a coffee cup collecting money for the homeless and, claiming to be a Midland Jaycee," said Wayne Hathaway, president of the Midland Jaycees.

The impostor told her potential victims that they could call the Jaycees' office for confirmation, Hathaway said. The agency uses a phone answering machine.

Currently, the Jaycees are raising money by selling tickets to "Kid's Day" by telephone. The sales are not on a cash basis, and tickets are mailed prior to payment.

Some people falsely representing themselves are braver than others.

The Midland Police Department warned Midlanders last week about phony solicitations for the Crime Prevention Unit and the Crime Prevention Commission.

Midland police Sgt. E.M. Camarillo, Community Relations Unit coordinator, said such scams are more prevalent during the holidays because of the giving spirit.

"In the last two weeks we have had quite a few calls about them," Camarillo said.

Camarillo said he advises any-

Food bank 'well set' for holiday

■ Chevron employees donate 13-tons of food to the Permian Basin Food Bank — just in time to help thousands of needy residents.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Mountains of food greeted Permian Basin Food Bank workers when they showed up at the Chevron building Wednesday.

Chevron's 475 employees collected 13 tons of rice, beans, flour and canned goods for their third annual holiday food drive, doubling last year's mammoth haul, said geophysicist Jim Flis, one of the drive's organizers.

"When I got there and saw 26,000 pounds of food waiting for me, I couldn't believe it," said food bank director Dolly Neff. "What Chevron did was excellent.

"This is the biggest single donation ever for us."

Flis attributed the food drive's success to internal competition among groups at Chevron. Each employee donated 50 pounds of food, on average, he said.

The winning team contributed 87 pounds per person, Ms. Neff said.

With cash contributions, the company was able to buy bulk quantities of staples for the food bank, which repackages the foods into household amounts.

"The flour, rice and beans are particularly appreciated," said Ms. Neff. "Otherwise we have to spend FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Agency) funds to get them because they never come in as donations."

Ms. Neff said the food bank's FEMA funds were limited this year because Midland County didn't receive any federal money and Ector County's funds were cut.

She also appreciated the $750 cash donation from the company's employee public relations fund. "That will repair my forklift," she said.

"Coupled with Tuesday's food drive at Midland Memorial Hospital, we're well set for the holidays."

Flis said he got involved with the food drive because of his volunteer work with the St. Vincent

Cavazos' resignation triggers speculation

■ Washington buzzes over the real reason Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos is calling it quits.

By Tamara Henry
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos, the nation's first Hispanic-American Cabinet member, resigned without explanation Wednesday and a White House source said he had been fired.

The source, who insisted on anonymity, said Chief of Staff John H. Sununu personally told Cavazos about the firing Tuesday.

In his two years as Education Secretary, Cavazos was best known for promoting the idea of allowing parents to decide where to send their children to school. He also advocated bilingual education.

But another official, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said Cavazos was seen as lacking dynamism and not making enough progress in education, an area Bush designated as a high priority for his administration.

A White House source said Cavazos was out of town and had let it be known he would not be back, not even for the kind of personal departure appearance that Bush made with the other top officials who have left his administration.

Other administration sources said Cavazos, 63, had tired of criticism from the White House and elsewhere.

Cavazos himself gave neither a reason for his resignation nor details about his future plans, said Education Department spokeswoman Etta Fielek.

The resignation was announced at a Cabinet meeting, which Cavazos didn't attend.

Cavazos

Fielek said Cavazos didn't attend the meeting because "he's not very good at farewells and he thought this is the most comfortable way to do it."

Cavazos is the third major administration official to resign since October. Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole quit to join the American Red Cross and William Bennett, head of the Office of National Drug Control Policy, stepped down and later was named head of the Republican National Committee.

"Basically, it would be hard to tell what would have been different if we hadn't had a secretary of education at all during this period of time," said longtime critic Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers. "I hope they don't keep the posi-

Area educators respect Cavazos

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Local education professionals have mixed feelings about Lauro F. Cavazos depature as education secretary Wednesday.

Robert McCarley, principal of Crockett Junior High School in Odessa, said, "I was surprised to hear Cavazos resigned. In a nutshell, I thought he was a sound education secretary.'

McCarley met Cavazos in September when the education secretary visited CJHS to present the student body with the National Drug Free School Award.

"Cavazos seemed to have the young people at heart," McCarley said. Although the principal said that he was aware Cavazos received criticism on various issues, he allowed that, "Anyone in that kind of position is going to take a lot of criticism."

Regional planning commission approves Odessa request

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

The board of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission wrapped up business for the year by approving a plan to widen Odessa's West University Boulevard and forwarding several applications for state and federal grants during Wednesday's meeting.

Jerry Tschauner, PBRPC's director of planning, said the portion of University Boulevard from U.S. Highway 385 to Golder Avenue will be reconstructed to add a continuous turn lane in September 1991.

Its $380,000 cost will be funded through the Urban System Program of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Fred Nelle, a planning coordinator for the highway department, said the city of Odessa will be responsible for purchasing the additional 18 feet of right-of-way and for building any new curbs and gutters the project requires.

"The city has accepted the proposal and has worked with Odessa College to gain 99 percent of the right-of-way needed," Nelle said.

"The reconstruction was a request from the city of Odessa to add capacity to the street."

Tschauner said Odessa's comprehensive plan designated the street as a secondary thoroughfare, although it functions as a major thoroughfare, because of right-of-way restraints that limited the street's width to 60 feet. When finished the street will be 78 feet wide.

The Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation had its $44,937 grant application to the U.S. Department of Education approved by the board.

The grant, which will be matched with $95,560 in local funds, will expand job opportunities for the mentally ill and mentally retarded, according to planning commission director Harley Reeves.

"This will pay part of the salaries for three people to work with MHMR in Midland and Odessa," Reeves said. "If they can place 50 percent of their 30 or 40 clients a year, it's money well spent."

The board approved the Seabury Center Nursing Care Unit's $26,880 grant proposal to the highway department for a van with a wheelchair lift and ramp.

Mark Belanger of St. John's Episcopal Retirement Corp., which runs the Odessa center, said the nursing home needs the van to transport its infirm residents to doctor's appointments and social activities.

"They suffer a lot of pain, physical discomfort, stress and fatigue when we move them in and out of their chairs," Belanger said. Currently the center transports its residents in private cars.

The agency will provide a local match of $6,720 toward the van's $33,600 cost.

Nelle said the van's cost is high because of the modifications that must be made to a standard van. The wheelchair lift itself costs about $5,000 he said.

The board also approved two requests for continuation funding for Library Literacy programs in Ward and Andrews counties.

The Ward County Library requested $10,000 from the U.S. Department of Education, to be matched with $10,000 in in-kind funds. RESIGN: Sununu fired Cavazos, sources claim tion vacant for another three years."

But Keith Geiger, president of the National Education Association, said Cavazos "proved to be a decent man with the interest of America's children at heart."

The resignation is effective Saturday, with Deputy Education Secretary Ted Sanders serving as acting head of the department.

Sources said that Sanders has been lobbying for Cavazos' position. Also considered to be possible successors are Lynne Cheney, chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities; former New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean; Rep. Patricia Saiki, a former schoolteacher who lost her November bid to unseat Sen. Daniel Akaka, D-Hawaii; and Rep. Lynn Martin, who also has been mentioned as a possible successor to Mrs. Dole.

Cavazos, whose father was a cattle foreman at the King Ranch in Texas, earned a bachelor's degree in zoology and a master's degree in cytology at Texas Technological College, which later became Texas Tech University. He received a doctorate in physiology from Iowa State University in 1954.

Cavazos was president of Texas Tech when he became the first Hispanic Cabinet official in the waning days of the Reagan administration. Bush kept him in the job.

"For more than two years, and under two presidents, you have distinguished yourself through your devotion to improving the education of our nation's children," Bush said in a letter accepting Cavazos' resignation.

Cavazos said in his letter that he was proud of the contributions he made in "expanding choice in education, promoting the executive order on excellence in education for Hispanic Americans, and raising awareness of the growing diversity of America's student population."

Cavazos was a far less controversial secretary of education than Bennett, his predecessor, who warred with teacher unions and was an acerbic critic of America's universities.

Cavazos made peace with the National Education Association and other leading groups in the education establishment.

But Antonio Rigual, president of the Hispanic Association of Colleges and Universities, said it was widely known that the administration wasn't supportive of Cavazos because "he just wasn't fitting the mold that the administration wanted to head the Education Department."

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Education, Arts and Humanities, said Cavazos' "commitment to educational opportunities for minorities and the poor has been without question."

REACTION: Educators called Cavazos 'excellent role model'

(From 1C)

"I'm sorry to hear he has resigned," said Gilberto Garcia, math chairman and teacher at Goddard Junior High School. "I didn't agree with everything he had to say, but he was the first Hispanic member of the Cabinet and served as a role model for Hispanics in that respect."

Although Cavazos resigned, a White House source said President Bush fired him because he did not make enough progress in education.

White House Chief of staff John H. Sununu personally informed Cavazos of the firing a day before the secretary's depature was announced Wednsday, said a White House official who insisted on anonymity.

Garcia, who serves on the state legislation committee of the Texas State Teachers Association (TSTA) and is on a national committee of the National Education Association, said he took exception to Cavazos remark that "too much money is being poured into education."

"I'd like to find out how to pour money into education," Garcia said. He said money hasn't been 'poured' into education since the launching of Sputnik forced America into beefing up education to compete with the Soviet Union's space industry.

"We have plenty of money to stage a war in the desert half way around the world," Garcia said, "but we can't fully fund Head Start."

Garcia said teachers have the capabilities and programs in place to improve education, but not the materials. He said that although he parted ways with Cavazos' opinions on financing education, he was pleased to see that the former education secretary focused national attention on children considered "at-risk."

Kay Walling, TSTA UniServ representative, said, "I have mixed feelings about Cavazos resigning. The overall education budget is still going down, but — at the same time — he was an excellent role model for Hispanics."

Ms. Walling said that Cavazos made tremendous personal strides by starting his life from a humble background "and, later, making it to the top."

"He did not achieve some of the things we (TSTA members) would have liked to see him achieve," she said. "He did not fulfill the great promise."

Garcia said, "Although Cavazos didn't support funding education or public education in the manner that I would have liked, he did a better job in office than William Bennett did. Now that he has resigned, it's a case of knowing where we are running from, but not where we are running to."

want a stringent ordinance. I want a general one that prohibits glare into someone else's property."

Stan Garrison, TU Electric regional customer service manager, said that although officials from his company will not formally oppose light control, they would prefer not to have an ordinance.

"The problem with an ordinance is that it's difficult to enforce," Garrison said. "It's hard to tell whether the lighting is in compliance or not."

TU Electric even encourages residents to install more lighting around their property as a crime-prevention measure, Garrison said. The company even will install outside lights, which can be rented for between $7.45 and $12.67 monthly, depending on the size, he added.

one approached by a solicitor to "get all the information of where to mail a check and before doing that make calls to the agency and ask if they are collecting money and get an address to see if they correspond" with the information provided by the solicitor.

Anyone suspicious of someone collecting donations, they should notify the police department and the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, according to officials from the agencies.

Camarillo said anyone receiving a call to contribute money should make note of the caller's name, phone number, address and other such information. "This information is vital for us to trace the calls," Camarillo said.

John Schmidt, president of the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, offers the following advice to anyone considering making a donation to a charity:

■ For those unfamiliar with the organization, don't hesitate to ask for written information about its programs and finances.

■ Don't succumb to pressure to give money on the spot. A charity that can use your money today will welcome it just as much tomorrow.

■ Watch out for appeals that appeal to your emotions but tell you nothing about how the donation will be used.

■ Make a check or money order out to the charity and never to an individual collecting the donation. Cash is impossible to trace.

■ Inquire if the contribution is deductible as a charitable donation for federal income tax purposes and keep a record of all donations.

■ If merchandise is being sold to benefit a charity, does the appeal state what the charity's share will be? If not, ask.

Businesses discourage handouts

DALLAS (AP) — A coalition of downtown businesses and social service agencies is discouraging Dallas residents from giving money to panhandlers.

The group launched a campaign this week urging workers in Dallas' central business district to give their money instead to social service agencies trained to deal with needy people.

Those wishing to do more should volunteer at the social agencies, say the architects of "Don't Give Handouts ... Give a Hand."

"Panhandlers are a nuisance to everyone," said Bill Thompson, director of the 106-bed Union Gospel Mission. "We're trying to get them into some place where they can get some help."

Businessmen would like to see fewer homeless people and panhandlers downtown because, according to a survey of downtown workers conducted last summer, they foster fear and a negative image.

Larry Fonts, president of the Central Dallas Association, said despite their requests for food or bus fare, studies show most panhandlers asking for handouts use the money for alcohol or drugs.

But Roy Ayars, 46, who stays at the Austin Street Shelter, said most panhandlers use the money to buy "a cup of coffee and something to eat," not to buy drugs or alcohol. "Some people do that, but I'm not one of them," he said.

West Texas observatory to host Geminid star parties

EL PASO — West Texas astronomers say guests at their regular weekend star parties this month may be treated to quite a cosmic fireworks show.

Shooting stars will be zipping across the skies the next few nights during the annual Geminid meteor showers that occur about this time every year.

The flashes of space dust — remnants of an ancient comet that left bits of its tail behind centuries ago — should peak Friday evening, when stargazers could see as many as one flaming meteor a minute.

Although West Texas skies are considered the darkest and best viewing spot, officials at the University of Texas' McDonald Observatory say the celestial show can be seen across the northern hemisphere.

Shooting stars will be zipping across the skies the next few nights during the annual Geminid meteor showers. . . .

This week's shower should be special because it comes when the moon is gone from the sky. The increased darkness means even the faint streaks of tiny meteors will be visible.

The observatory in the Davis Mountains holds regular "star parties" from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday that are free to the public.

But darkness is the key for watching the shower.

"You need to drive as far away from city lights as you can get for the best view," said Marc Wetzel of the McDonald Observatory.

The meteors will appear to be streaking from the constellation Gemini. They'll put on their best performance after midnight when the earth has rotated into the path which the meteors are moving through space, said Mark Bridges, publicist. "It's kind of like bugs hitting a windshield of a car. The meteors have more of a direct angle. It's more head on," Bridge said.

The showers show up every year from about Dec. 7 to Dec. 16

STATE in brief

Wichita Falls deputy shot

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — A 21-year-old man on Wednesday shot a Wichita County deputy and fired at two Archer County deputies, authorities said.

Mark Allen Cassem was taken into custody Wednesday on suspicion of three counts of attempted capital murder, authorities said.

Wichita County Sheriff's Lt. Stan Horton said Cassem emerged from his pickup truck holding a rifle when a Wichita County deputy stopped him at about 3 p.m. Wednesday.

The deputy, whose name was not released, stopped the pickup near the Wichita County Rodeo grounds because the vehicle had no license plates, Horton said.

Cassem pointed the rifle at the deputy's head and told the deputy to drop his gun, which he did, Horton said. Horton said Cassem then began shooting at the deputy's patrol car and the deputy, hitting him once in the right hand.

Horton said Cassem drove his pickup to Archer County, where two deputies tried to pull him over.

Archer County Sheriff P.L. Pippin said Cassem stopped his pickup and opened fire on the deputies. Cassem surrendered after the deputies returned fire, Pippin said.

Pippin said three 9mm pistols, one belonging to the Wichita County deputy, and a 30.06 rifle — all loaded — were found in Cassem's pickup.

Court to hear challenge

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court has agreed to hear an appeal by the Texas Association of Business, which is challenging laws that allow the Texas Air Control Board and Water Commission to levy civil penalties.

Oral arguments in the case were set on Wednesday for Feb. 6.

The Texas Association of Business, saying the laws are unconstitutional, is appealing a trial court's denial of a permanent injunction.

The Legislature in 1985 authorized the state agencies to assess administrative penalties of up to $10,000 per day per violation of environmental law. A fined party may seek review by a judge, after paying into escrow or posting bond in the full amount of the penalty, according the brief filed by attorneys for the business group.

The Texas Association of Business said this procedure violates the right to a jury trial, and the "open courts" guarantee of the Texas Constitution.

Store scanners in error

AUSTIN (AP) — Nearly $20,000 in fines have been levied against 35 stores that incorrectly priced items on their computer-programmed electronic scanner systems, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said.

Hightower said Tuesday that consumers should be on guard for inaccurate scanners at the checkout stand.

Texas Department of Agriculture inspectors recently checked the scanners at 115 stores statewide and found inaccurate scanners that resulted in overcharging at 35 stores, he said.

Clements orders vote

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements ordered a special election for Saturday, Jan. 19 to fill the unexpired term of state Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Waco, who was elected to Congress.

The state senate district includes all of Ellis, Falls, Freestone, Henderson, Hill, Limestone, McLennan, Navarro counties, and part of Dallas County.

The deadline for candidates to file for the election is 5 p.m. Dec. 19. There are two years remaining on Edwards' term in the state senate.

Faux furs flaunted as fashionable fakes

By Susan Phinney
Hearst News Service

Fake furs used to rank with Ford Pintos as status symbols.

There was no way you could pass one off as the real thing. Women who tried were an embarrassment to the fashion-conscious. And nobody would brag that they were wearing a fake. It was assumed that people who wore fakes couldn't afford genuine pelts.

Some fake fur had all the charm of a bathroom rug, most of it stiff and shiny. When manufacturers began covering toilet seats with the stuff, fake fur really went into a social slump.

Time and technology changed all that.

Animal rights activists started picketing fur stores and harassing people who wore animal pelts as clothing. People became more attuned to the treatment of animals.

Fiber companies came up with a more refined fiber – a modacrylic that can be combined with other fibers to make a fur so fine it needs inspecting on the underside to make sure it's fake.

European factories began weaving furs that resembled sheared beaver, mink and other popular looks. American manufacturers followed with both knit and woven furs.

Designers like Norma Kamali, Bill Blass, Adrienne Vittadini and Giorgio Armani found these new fabrics lighter and more versatile than pelts.

And suddenly there were faux (rhymes with row) furs parading down runways in Europe and the United States — fakes so beautiful and believable Women's Wear Daily, that bible of the fashion industry, devoted pages to them.

This year, faux furs are so fashionable chic people flaunt them.

Butch Blum on Seattle's Fifth Avenue this fall featured a fake fur in the window – a long, green simulated beaver with a $1,195 price tag. Blum has almost sold out of short jackets in gold, green and burgundy for $895.

Store manager Linda Campbell says they're being bought as fashion, not necessarily as alternatives to animal furs.

But when animal rights activists are spraying paint on furs and accosting people who wear them, obvious fakes can be a form of self-defense.

Faux furs come in a variety of shapes, colors, textures and prices. You can choose from black mink and lynx coats or a giraffe print jacket at prices ranging from $360 to $450.

J.C. Penney stores have three-quarter-length lynx, leopard, giraffe and mink jackets for $160 to $190. Benetton has a bottle-green sheared beaver car coat for $232. A child's coat is $125.

Helen Larrimore, fashion coordinator for Nordstrom's stores in the state of Washington, calls faux furs a fun, sophisticated alternative to traditional coats and jackets. She says the current crop of coats is more plush and luxurious. "They don't feel fake," Larrimore says.

Faux furs will soon be the only ones available in Nordstrom stores. The company will close its fur salons in area stores Feb. 1.

Coats in red, green and other bright colors – usually foreign to fur -- seem to sell first. They're novel and more easily identifiable as fakes. These are the coats one is more likely to find in a sportswear department, often with a designer label.

Rosalie King, professor of textiles at Western Washington University and a nationally recognized fiber expert, says they've been prevalent in Canadian stores for several seasons – hanging right next to animal furs.

Outfit for holiday parties for under $100

By Trish Barr
Copley News Service

The usual complement of holiday parties is about to begin, and the annual question comes up: what to wear?

You simply can't don that tired outfit that went the rounds last year. Not so much because the women in your social circle would remember but because the men would. This is true. Men are much more likely to whisper "Isn't that the same dress she wore at last year's party?"

The nerve. Men have it easy. They can go out and rent their party wear down to the last cuff link. And they can do so inexpensively.

But wait. The news is that this holiday season, renting is an option for women who want to look like they spent megabucks on their finery — but didn't. Another alternative is to shop stores known for off-price, designer-quality clothing. Finally there are resale stores that feature secondhand designer wear.

The idea is to find a holiday frock for under $100. There are pros and cons to each of the options, but when price is a key, all are worth a closer look.

If your interest is in outright purchase of new clothing, consider looking first at the outlet shops to which major department stores consign merchandise when new shipments come in. Nordstrom and Loehmann's are two that offer quality garments at greatly reduced cost.

For example, Loehmann's offered a multicolored, horizontally pleated silk bustier dress by A.J. Bari for $99.99. Nordstrom provided a black and gold sequined silk top and black rayon pants, each priced at $19.97.

These outfits presented various elements of the latest trends (we'll talk about these later) in holiday wear, without the high price tag that usually accompanies designer wear. Each of these looks fulfills the basic requirement of being less than $100. Also the garment has never belonged to anyone else and it's yours to keep.

Granted, the quality of material or construction may not be as high as you'd find at regular retail or at resale or rental boutiques. And you may have spent considerable time finding it. Typically, you're on your own in department store mark-down areas (no sales assistant will offer to show you things) and clothes are generally a bit jumbled at best.

The other option is to shop at resale and rental boutiques, often one and the same. They also sell used party wear, both on consignment and their own rental stock.

Designer clothing from Oleg Cassini, Bob Mackie, Carolyne Roehm, Oscar de la Renta, Victor Costa and Mary McFadden is the standard of these businesses. Most rent gowns for less than $100 and have resale clothing available for that amount or less.

The advantages of renting include being able to wear a designer gown at a fraction of its retail price, personal service in a small boutique or your own home, and quality goods that reflect the trends of today. The disadvantages: having to give up the outfit the next day and the fact that it's been worn by other women. The latter is also a disadvantage of buying secondhand.

Whatever your choice, keep in mind that holiday dressing should lift simple clothes into the realm of glamour. This season there is a new emphasis on sensuous, close-to-the-body stretch looks. And backing up those sexy statements are more structured and opulent dresses, a trend that reflects a more tailored feel but often results in silhouettes cut close to the body. Both signal a move away from the soft dressing that has characterized the past several seasons.

Skirt lengths for holiday are about an inch shorter than they were for fall and bare backs and off-the-shoulder dresses are part of a grin-and-bare-it holiday attitude.

DEAR ABBY

Sexual abuse of children all too common

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When I married Roy (not his real name), I had two daughters, ages 9 and 5, from a previous marriage. Roy began to sexually molest the older one. It was almost two years before she told me about it. She told because she was afraid that her younger sister was in danger of being molested, too.

Van Buren

Abby, this was a terrible shock to me. I knew things like this happened to children, but I never believed it could happen in my family.

I am now divorced from Roy, and my children are doing well after much counseling. Although Roy was indicted by a grand jury, he jumped bail before going to trial and has been missing for almost a year. It upsets me to know that he is out there somewhere, probably with a new identity, and he may be sexually abusing other unsuspecting children. I am writing this to alert others to this possible danger. It's far more common than most people suspect. — TEXAS MOM

DEAR MOM: Thank you for sharing your experience so that I can once again tell my readers that their best insurance against child molestation is to educate their children early. They should be taught that their bodies are private, and if somebody tries to touch their bodies, they should tell their parents immediately.

Children must be assured that if anyone makes them promise not to tell anyone, that is one promise it is all right to break.

DEAR ABBY: Would it be appropriate to send a Christmas card to an old boyfriend I haven't spoken to in eight years? We are both married, and even though I love my husband, I still have feelings for this man.

I want him to know that I still think of him, and I don't want him to forget me. Even though he never told me he loved me, we were lovers for nearly a year. I would include a recent picture of myself and also an update of what I've been doing since he last saw me. I would send it to his office so as not to arouse any questions from his wife.

Thanks for any advice you can give me. — FOND MEMORIES

DEAR FOND MEMORIES: Do yourself and your old boyfriend a favor and resist the urge to reestablish communication with him. No good can come of rekindling this old flame. Be content with your "fond memories." What was, was.

DEAR ABBY: I just saw an article in the newspaper here and had to write to you. It was about a 49-year-old man who was speeding in his car when he lost control of the vehicle. The car flipped over twice, and his 6-year-old son who was riding with him was killed. Because the child was not wearing a seat belt, the father is being prosecuted and, if found guilty, he could serve a year in prison.

I know that your column reaches so many people, and this could be an important reminder to get across to parents of young children. It could be a lifesaver. — MRS. J.E.F. IN SAN BRUNO, CALIF.

DEAR MRS. J.E.F.: Although it may seem cruel to further punish a parent who has suffered the misfortune of losing a child, perhaps this kind of example will cause other parents to think.

Parents are responsible for the safety of their children, and it is the responsibility of parents to see that their child is seat-belted — no matter how much the child protests. The rule should be: Until the child is secured, the key in the ignition will not be turned on.

Luggage makers market handbags

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Luggage manufacturers have launched successful handbag lines before, so the makers of the new Zero Halliburton handbag for women are sure they've got it, well, in the bag. The downscaled version of the company's camera cases and briefcases features a shoulder strap and a feminine tapestry lining. A woman's handbag made from the trademark aircraft aluminum may seem the perfect accessory for the woman who already owns a Zero Halliburton case. The bag should fulfill another function — fashion, said Cathy Newnan, national marketing manager of the Los Angeles-based firm.

"Because of where fashion has moved — as far as metallic — we thought it was a natural, risky but a natural," Newnan said.

The bags are a San Fernando Valley product: The manufacturing facility is in Pacoima. The two versions of the handbag sell for about $260 to $300 at El Portal stores in California and better luggage stores. For additional store locations, call (818) 897-7777.

Message tags in new clothing

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Advertising long ago moved beyond the billboard and bumper sticker to find unique outlets. Now two Los Angeles-area manufacturers are putting messages on the tags in your clothing.

Drew Bernstein, founder of Lip Service, a fashion boutique on Melrose Avenue in Los Angeles, has created hangtags that support environmental causes. A group of six tags advises shoppers to use rechargeable batteries, take shorter showers, boycott ivory and recycle, for example.

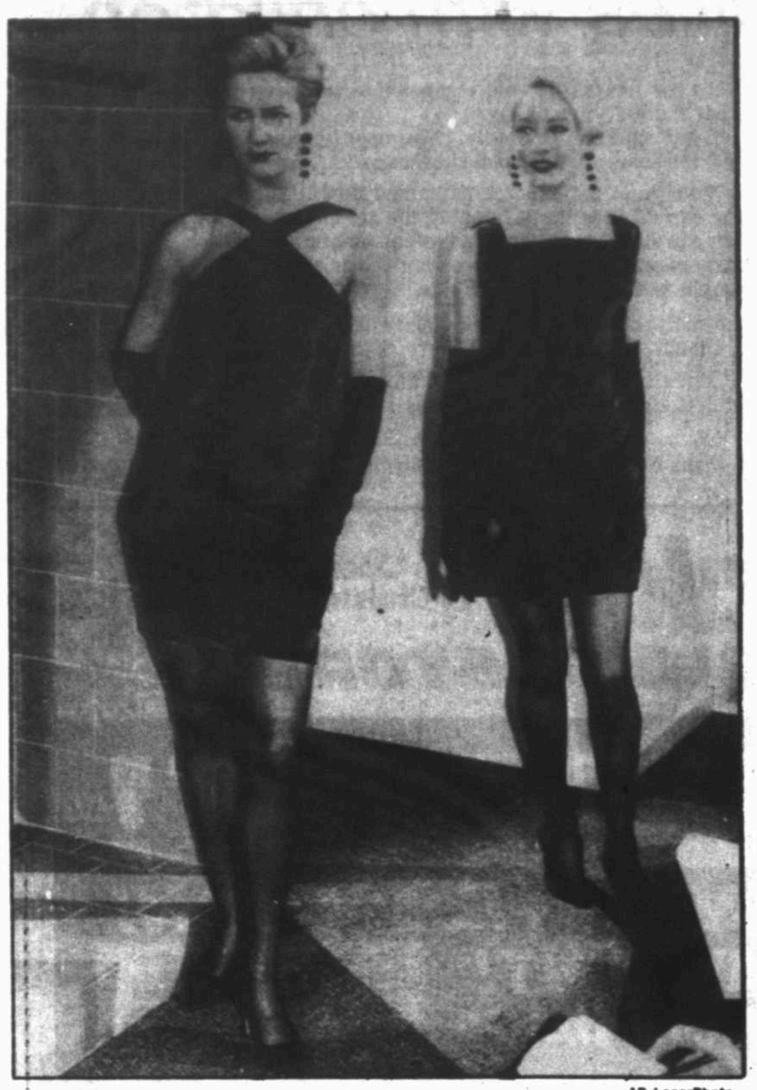
Evening wear can be affordable yet fun, versatile



AP LaserPhoto

By Holly Hanson
N.Y. Times News Service

No matter what you paid for them, the evening clothes in your wardrobe are likely to be the most expensive things you own.

It's not the price tag that makes the difference, however. We're talking about something called Cost Per Wear.

The Cost-Per-Wear factor is what makes a $500 business suit a good investment because you can wear it once a week for several years. It's also what makes a $100 velvet cocktail dress a bad investment because you'll probably wear it only once or twice, period.

Nevertheless, there are ways to put together an evening wardrobe that is interesting and versatile, as well as reasonably priced. The trick is to use the same mix-and-match techniques that work so well for sportswear and casual clothes.

Building an evening wardrobe calls for investing in some good-quality basics and then adding other garments and accessories that can be used to make the basics look different.

The No. 1 basic on virtually everybody's list is a little black dress, a term so ingrained in fashion lingo that insiders commonly refer to it as an LBD. The dress should be knee-length or above and cut in a simple style, such as a chemise or a semi-fitted sheath.

Avoid extravagant beading, huge ruffles or any detail that makes the dress too memorable on its own. Instead, choose a dress with a plain neckline and vary the look of the dress by changing your accessories. Jewel necks and strapless styles work best with necklaces and earrings.

For maximum wearability, choose a year-round fabric such as silk, rayon faille or lightweight wool crepe. If you can afford two dresses, you might choose faille for summer and velvet or beads for winter.

Once you've chosen the perfect LBD (and if you've done it right, you'll be able to wear it to a wide variety of dressy occasions), it's time to branch out into separates.

A pair of slinky black trousers provides a good base. You can't go wrong with classically cut, full trousers in a soft silk or wool crepe. If you're the adventurous type or simply have a few extra bucks this season, you might add a pair of black lace jeans or black velvet leggings.

Another versatile choice is a dressy suit, either in black, winter white or a jewel tone. The skirt should be short and slim, and the jacket should be cut so that it will fit over other things.

For example, a boxy, waist-length jacket will work well with other skirts and trousers; a longer blazer style can be worn over a short, slim dress.

Then, begin to collect blouses, tops and sweaters that can turn these basic bottoms into a series of smashing looks. The possibilities include:

■ A smashing white blouse, preferably of a sexy, feminine fabric, such as organza or lace.

■ A long evening sweater or knit tunic. The choices range from a winter white crocheted pullover to a metallic cardigan to a tunic sweater trimmed with bright sequins.

■ A sequined T-shirt or tank top. As a contrast to all that black, look for a bright, festive color. If you choose a mid-range shade such as turquoise or bright yellow, you'll be able to wear it next summer with white linen trousers.

■ A bare top that can be worn on its own or slipped under a jacket. A metallic tank is a good choice if you're modest, a beaded bustier if you're not.

Accessories also play an important part in a versatile evening wardrobe.

Your first purchase should be a pair of simple, high-heeled pumps in black satin or faille. And your second, for more casual occasions, should be feminine flats in black velvet or suede.

Next, invest in a pretty evening bag. A black silk clutch trimmed with beads will take you to a wide range of dress-up events.

And don't forget the jewelry. Pearls and diamonds are evening classics. If you can't afford the real thing, search out good-looking fakes. Glass beads and crystals, especially worn in multiple strands, are another luminous possibility.

One caveat, however. Shoulder-duster earrings are rapidly going out of style. If you're dying to have some, get the cheapest ones you can find, because it's unlikely you'll want to wear them next year.

The same thing applies to wide black headbands, a throwback to the Age of Aquarius. Though fashion designers are continuing to find plenty of inspiration in the 1960s, this is another look that probably won't be around for long.

Cleanliness doesn't come cheap for families with children

By Erma Bombeck

If you have a child in your family between the ages of 13 and 19, your electric bills are 54 percent higher than anyone else's, your gas is 13 percent higher, and your water bills — you can't count that high.

Bombeck

Teen-agers in the house can boost your clothes dryer use by 11 percent, your washer by 16 percent, freezer by 17 percent, heated waterbed by 17 percent, microwave by 15 percent, swimming pool by 8 percent and VCR by 30 percent.

Why should this be? you ask. There are several theories. First, teen-agers never receive the little bills with the windows in them each month. Second, most of them have never been taught about energy.

My husband used to line the kids up outside in front of the meter and ask, "What do you think this gizmo is?"

"A clock," said one.

"A feeble attempt to install an electric garage door opener that didn't work out," offered another. The third didn't have a clue.

"This is a meter," said their father. "Why do you think those little dials are spinning?"

"It's going to rain," said the third brightly.

"This is a meter to measure the energy you use to run the TV when no one is watching and burn lights in rooms where there are no people. Are you aware that we are a beacon to commercial pilots as a signal to turn for their final approach?"

From there he would explain the hot/cold theory. "This is a thermostat," he explained. "When you wish heat in the house, you set the dial to 72. Got that?"

They all nodded.

"However, this refrigerator is cold. If you open the door and stand there for hours, the cold escapes into the heated room. Do you know what I am trying to say?"

"Yes," said one excitedly. "You open the outside door to the garage and let some of the cold air escape."

With great patience he explained how if you are washing your car you can do so without flooding the garage, and if you start the washer you can have more than one sweatshirt in it at a time. He pointed out that we did not have our own nuclear power plant; we were just a simple western family.

Finally, he explained the capacity of a 40-gallon water heater and how it should be able to serve more than one person taking a shower.

"But cleanliness is next to godliness," said one of the kids. His father smiled and said, "And godliness is two bucks above poverty."

N.Y. Times News Service

This fall, some fake furs come disguised as Persian lamb, rabbit, fox, mink, mouton, beaver, leopard and tiger. Others are dyed in strange hues — pale blue, red, purple, pumpkin, pomegranate, silvery grey, pinky beige — as well as in black, brown and taupe.

In these colors, the coats do not resemble any animals but only what they are — acrylic pile. They come short and long and can be as frivolous as a stole or as useful as a 1920s-style ankle-length coat of navy blue wool and cashmere, edged in dark brown "mouton."

The most amusing fake furs are sporty. Like most designers who work in fake (and real) fur, Louis Dell'Olio, vice president in charge of design at Anne Klein, says he doesn't like fake furs when they are intended to look real.

"I like fake furs when they look like fake furs," Dell'Olio said. "I like them when they're fun."

He says he does not believe that fake furs will replace real furs. "The market for real fur will dwindle to a certain point, but I think it will continue to exist," he said. "Where it will grow is in ranched animals. There's a strong feeling against wild animals."

For those who just want an accessory, Giorgio Armani designed a fake mink stole that can be wrapped around a skimpy black dress or tossed over a suit. The stole is $360 at Emporio Armani, 110 Fifth Avenue at 16th Street.

For a modicum of warmth from the neck to the waist, there are jackets. Two are in fake mink. Armani designed a jacket that is reminiscent of the fur, fake or otherwise, that a teen-ager might wear to a senior prom. It sells for $785.

Charlotte Neuville's bomber jacket has a snug hood, two patch pockets and a zipper.

"You're fooling yourself if you think you're going to be warm in a waist-length fake fur," Ms. Neuville said. "It's for fun, for popping on." The black jacket sells for $650 at Barneys New York, Seventh Avenue at 17th Street.

Yohji Yamamoto took advantage of fake fur's ability to be dyed the most improbable colors. He designed a cocoon jacket in coral. The hip-length jacket is also available in black or brown, and sells for $920 at Charivari, 16-18 West 57th Street.

In a season of perky swing coats, there is Searle Blatt Studio's version with a big collar and wide cuffs.

She calls it a "traveling coat." Edged and cuffed in velvety brown fake fur, the ankle-length navy coat, made of wool, cashmere and polyester, is $760 at Barneys New York.

Pentagon's chief purchaser quits after criticism

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — John A. Betti, the Pentagon's top procurement official who was roundly criticized last week in an internal report on mismanagement in a $50 billion stealth aircraft program, said Wednesday he was resigning.

Betti, a former Ford Motor Co. executive who had been undersecretary of defense for acquisition for 16 months, said in his letter of resignation he would leave effective Dec. 31 so he would not be covered by new ethics laws next year that impose tougher post-employment restrictions on former government officials.

In his letter of resignation, Betti made no mention of the unfolding story of mismanagement in the development of the Navy's A-12 attack plane.

Speaking privately, two Pentagon officials said Betti had intended to leave soon anyway but the timing of his announcement was connected to the recent revelations about the A-12 being developed by McDonnell Douglas Corp. and General Dynamics Corp.

One of the two said Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's plans to slash the responsibilities of the job also led Betti to quit.

A Navy admiral was forced to retire last week and two other officers were reassigned after disclosure that they had failed to pass word up the chain of command about cost increases and schedule delays in the A-12.

The A-12, called the Avenger, is a radar-evading "stealth" plane supposed to replace the elderly A-6 aboard carriers starting in 1995.

Betti's office referred calls to a Defense Department spokeswoman, who said she had no information on whether Betti already had lined up a new job.

In a written statement, Betti said he believed he had considerably improved the Pentagon's oft-criticized purchasing system. But he also said "substantive, lasting improvements in defense acquisition will not occur overnight.

"Rather it will be a long, slow and arduous process requiring patience and constancy of purpose."

Cheney, in a letter accepting the resignation, also made no mention of the A-12 controversy and told Betti "Your dedicated and successful efforts to strengthen the acquisition process ... have been instrumental in maintaining a strong national defense."

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said Betti's resignation "shows how resistant the Pentagon is to change." Aspin said the job was created by Congress "to buy weapons that work on time and at cost," but was soon to be vacant for the third time in four years.

Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., chairman of the Government Operations Committee, said the resignation "would not put an end to the cozy old-boy's network at the Pentagon, where problems are swept under the rug while airplanes crash and contractors reap unearned billions."

The A-12 development program is now a year behind schedule and 20 percent over the planned $4.7 billion cost.

Defense Department Inspector General Susan J. Crawford said in a report last week that word of the problems didn't reach Cheney and other top Pentagon officials in large part because the contractors had control over the work done by government inspectors.

But she also said Betti had been informed of some of the problems by a deputy but "failed to report the conclusions reached by his own staff regarding the A-12."

"Mr. Betti relied on general assurances, which he invited, from the contractor and prior Navy assurances that the A-12 development contract would be completed within ceiling costs." Crawford's report said.

In July, Betti faced hostile questioning from members of a congressional panel who demanded he accept a Justice Department recommendation that Northrop Corp. be barred from Pentagon business for its criminal fraud conviction on charges it faked tests involving nuclear cruise missiles.

Reputed crime boss charged with Castellano murder

John Gotti, reputed to be one of the nation's most powerful crime bosses, is led into a car in New York, after leaving the FBI building in lower Manhatten where he was taken after being arrested at a social club in Little Italy Tuesday night.

NEW YORK (AP) — John Gotti, whose acquittals gained him the reputation of "The Untouchable Don," was charged Wednesday with ordering his Mafia boss slain so he could take over the nation's most powerful mob organization.

Gotti was charged in a federal racketeering indictment with ordering four murders, including that of reputed Gambino crime family head Paul Castellano and with conspiring to kill a fifth person.

The 11-count indictment also accused Gotti of gambling, loansharking, obstruction of justice and tax evasion.

Gotti was arrested Tuesday night, as were three other reputed crime figures, including the son of the late Mafia Boss of Bosses Carlo Gambino.

Prosecutors called Gotti a danger to the community and said they would seek to have him held without bail.

If convicted, the man also known as "the Dapper Don" for his expensive suits, would face life in prison without parole.

Gotti pleaded innocent at his arraignment Wednesday. He was ordered held without bail.

Gotti and his two top associates — underboss Frank "Frankie Loc" Locascio and adviser Salvatore "Sammy Bull" Gravano — were arrested at Gotti's Manhattan hangout, the Ravenite Social Club in Little Italy.

Thomas Gambino, an alleged family "capo" or captain, was picked up about the same time when he left the Garment District office of his trucking company, said James M. Fox, head of the FBI's New York office.

Gambino, Locascio and Gravano also pleaded innocent. Gambino was released Wednesday on a $500,000 personal recognizance bond. Locascio and Gravano were jailed without bail. A hearing on possible bail for Gotti and the two other defendants was set for Monday.

"To my knowledge, this is the first time that we have taken down the entire hierarchy of an organized-crime family — the boss, the underboss, the consigliere (counselor)," said Fox.

Federal officials say Gotti took over the leadership of the Gambino crime family with the Dec. 16, 1985, assassination of Castellano on the street outside a Manhattan steak house. A bodyguard also was killed.

At the time of the killing, Castellano himself was on trial on racketeering charges.

New law requires most pets neutered

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — Faced with too many stray dogs and cats, San Mateo County officials have tentatively approved the nation's first law that requires nearly all pets to be neutered to prevent unplanned litters.

The ordinance approved Tuesday night would impose a moratorium on all breeding by private dog and cat owners for six months beginning in July.

After Jan. 1, 1992, only dogs and cats owned by professional and hobbyist breeders who hold special permits would be allowed to reproduce. All other cats and dogs in unincorporated areas of the county 15 miles south of San Francisco would have to be neutered.

"We're very, very pleased. We definitely made history tonight and we hope (others) will follow suit around the country," said Sherry Richert, spokeswoman for the Peninsula Humane Society.

Supervisor Tom Nolan, who wrote the ordinance, agreed: "We took an historic first step ... toward solving the animal overpopulation problem."

Nolan introduced the measure in October after learning the humane society kills 10,000 strays each year.

If approved on final reading next Tuesday, the ordinance will become law, setting up a committee to set the specific rules and fees for licensing professional and hobby breeders. Violators would be fined $500.

"It's going to be heavily litigated," predicted Mark Rudy, a lawyer representing local dog breeders.

Attacker said guilty of threats

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The obsessed fan whose "divine mission" led him to brutally stab actress Theresa Saldana eight years ago was convicted Wednesday of sending death threats in letters penned from a prison cell.

Arthur Jackson, 55, was found guilty of all five felony counts by a Superior Court jury after three days of deliberations.

Jackson, who will be sentenced Jan. 8, faces up to 14 years in prison under provisions of a previously untested 1986 law barring release of felons who continue threatening victims. The law's passage stemmed from the Saldana case.

Miss Saldana, best known for her role as boxer Jake La Motta's sister-in-law in "Raging Bull," was seated in the front row of the courtroom and let out a small cry as the first verdict was read. She embraced and kissed two friends seated on either side of her.

Jackson, seated at the counsel table in his prison uniform, showed no reaction to the verdicts.

"I'm absolutely thrilled that he's been found guilty," Miss Saldana said outside of court, adding she believes she has sent a message to all victims that they should "fight long and hard and don't back down when people tell you something is impossible."

Pileup toll lowered to 13

CALHOUN, Tenn. (AP) — Federal safety investigators on Wednesday revised the death toll from a fiery highway pileup downward from 15 to 13 and raised the number of vehicles involved to 83.

The confusion over the number of people killed in Tuesday's crash on fogbound Interstate 75 stemmed from problems identifying the victims, some of whom were badly mangled, said Robert Barlett, who is heading the National Transportation Safety Board investigation into the accident.

More than 50 people were injured in the pileup about 40 miles north of Chattanooga. Federal investigators did not expect to find more victims, Barlett told reporters in Cleveland.

The pileup was caused by two separate chain-reaction crashes in the same spot of the interstate. Investigators first estimated 75 vehicles were involved.

The lead vehicle in the accident on the southbound side of the road apparently was a truck that had slowed down and was rear-ended by another truck, said Barlett.

Album sale draws fine

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A record store owner was fined $1,000 plus court costs Wednesday for selling 2 Live Crew rap albums that had been ruled obscene by a federal judge.

Charles Freeman, 32, was spared a possible one year prison term.

Still, he has borne the brunt of the federal obscenity ruling on the Miami rappers' album "As Nasty As They Wanna Be."

Three members of 2 Live Crew were acquitted in October for performing the songs; charges against a record store owner in Texas were dropped earlier this week; and an Alabama man's conviction for selling the album was overturned on appeal in February.

Before sentencing, Freeman cursed the judge and prosecutors.

"Yes, your honor, the prosecutors, you, this whole (expletive) court is out of (expletive) order," Freeman said.

He later apologized to the court and blamed the outburst on frustration. "A man in Texas walked away free, a man in Alabama walked away free. It's just frustrating."

Comatose hearing set

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Nancy Cruzan's parents will find out Friday whether a county judge will allow a halt to their comatose daughter's food and water so she can die.

The U.S. Supreme Court cleared the way in June in its first right-to-die decision by ruling that Missouri could keep a patient on life support in the absence of "clear and convincing" evidence the person would want to die.

Probate Judge Charles Teel announced Wednesday he will hand down his decision in Carthage, in southwest Missouri, on Friday.

Prices fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices dropped about $1 per barrel on the futures market Wednesday, as OPEC ministers wrestled with a potential glut of crude and demand by U.S. refineries tapered off.

West Texas Intermediate settled at $25.35 per barrel, down $1.06, on contracts for delivery in January.

With supply strong and demand weakening, oil traders said prices would likely have fallen below $20 per barrel recently without the lingering threat of a war in the Persian Gulf.

Natural gas dropped 8.1 cents to $2.204 per 1,000 cubic feet on contracts for January delivery.

Chip accord

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Instruments Inc. has reached a new 10-year royalty agreement with Toshiba Corp. of Japan covering a broad class of TI's microchip technology, the company announced.

Terms of the agreement were not disclosed Tuesday. But analysts say the deal — the first of several expected between TI and Japanese chipmakers — could net the Dallas firm hundreds of millions of dollars.

Buying jumps

DALLAS (AP) — Sales activity jumped in several large Texas store chains last weekend, but shoppers were spending their money mostly on lower-cost items, according to a weekly survey.

Sales were helped by promotions and price markdowns, according to the survey by Texas A&M's Center for Retailing Studies and the accounting firm Arthur Andersen.

Dollar lower

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar drifted lower against foreign currencies Wednesday in what traders said was one of the quietest trading days of the year.

Other late dollar rates in New York: 1.4756 German marks; 1.2610 Swiss francs; 5.0120 French francs; 1,112.00 Italian lire; and 1.1606 Canadian dollars.

OPEC head warns of possible oil glut

■ The President of OPEC cautioned that current production levels could bring a glut of oil after the Persian Gulf crisis ends, and blamed consuming nations for causing price fluctuations.

By Sally Jacobsen

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC President Sadek Boussena cautioned Wednesday that current high levels of crude production could leave the world flooded with oil and markets in turmoil once the Persian Gulf crisis ends.

Boussena opened the winter conference of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries by criticizing consuming nations for using the extra oil now on the market to build up their stocks.

"This is clearly an ill-contrived move," he said in a speech to ministers representing the 13 producing nations.

If a peaceful solution is found to the crisis, "then the world will be awash with oil and we shall be faced with another decade of turmoil," said Boussena, who is the Algerian mines minister.

Had the consuming nations dipped into some of their stocks to make up for the loss of embargoed Kuwait and Iraqi oil, he said, the recent wide fluctuations in prices might have been avoided.

"These consumers, however, have remained reluctant to adopt such measures, pushing OPEC to extreme levels of output," he said.

Despite worries about high production, the ministers were unlikely to try to restrain production of OPEC member countries.

Iranian Oil Minister Gholamreza Aqazadeh backed off his demand on Tuesday that the countries cut output immediately to get down to 22.5 million barrels a day. Wednesday, he said the cutback should be made "not at this time ... after the crisis."

Shortly after Iraq invaded fellow OPEC member Kuwait on Aug. 2, the cartel suspended its quota system so that each member could pump as much as possible.

Led by Saudi Arabia, the cartel has boosted output to make up for the loss of 4 million barrels daily of embargoed Iraqi and Kuwaiti crude. The oil was pulled off the market by U.N.-sponsored trade sanctions.

Private analysts say current OPEC output is about 23 million barrels.

Sources demanding anonymity have said Saudi Arabia, the world's largest crude exporter, was close to a supply level of 8.5 million barrels a day.

In late July, it was given a quota of 5.4 million barrels a day. The cartel's overall production ceiling was set then at 22.5 million barrels for all 13 nations, slightly under actual production of 23.2 million barrels.

OPEC's target price was set at $21 a barrel in the July agreement.

Since the Iraqi occupation, oil prices have surged as high as $41 a barrel on worries that war would break out in the oil-rich gulf region. In recent days, they have slipped to about $25 a barrel on prospects of a peaceful settlement and an oil glut.

Purchasing group predicts recession

■ Purchasing executives predicted in a recent survey that the U.S. economy will be in a recession the first half of 1991, with minimal growth seen the second half.

By Jonathan P. Hicks
N.Y. Times News Service

A survey of purchasing executives released Tuesday forecast that the nation's manufacturing economy will be in a recession for the first half of next year, with labor costs rising and capital expenditures increasing slightly.

The annual economic survey by the National Association of Purchasing Management also said that the managers expect the economy to emerge from the recession in the second half of the the year.

Still, they foresee nominal economic growth for the year of about 2.2 percent.

The report followed by one week the association's monthly report that indicated that the nation's manufacturing economy declined in November to its weakest showing since the recession of 1982.

"Purchasers expect a recovery to begin in the later half of the year fueled by continued relatively strong growth in exports and a declining trend in inflation," said Robert J. Bretz, director of purchasing at Pitney Bowes Inc. and chairman of the association's business survey committee.

"However, they predict the best the economy will be able to muster in 1991 is an anemic 2.2 percent nominal growth, before deducting for inflation."

Economists said that the survey's forecasts were largely in line with their own. Some, however, maintained that the economy had already entered a recession earlier this year.

The survey forecasted that capital spending will be higher in 1990 than last year, but only slightly.

Furthermore, the purchasing managers said that they expected capital spending to increase in 1991, with the net average increase predicted to be 2.2 percent.

Despite the crisis in the Middle East and the resulting increases in oil-related raw materials, purchasing managers said that they are paying an average increase of 2.6 percent since the end of 1989. By a margin of six to one, purchasing managers said they expect prices to increase by the middle of next year by another 2 percent. They further forecast that prices would rise by an average 3.2 percent by the end of next year.

Still, the survey indicated that purchasing executives believed that their companies will be paying higher labor costs next year. Indeed, 93 percent of the members predicted higher labor and benefit costs, forecasting an increase of an average 4.5 percent by the end of next year. Only 2 percent of the managers expect their labor costs to decline in that period.

Members of the association predicted that the level of exports will continue to grow next year.

The purchasing managers listed recession or a slowing economy as the No. 1 concern for 1991. By a ratio of four to one, the managers said they expected to see a recession in 1991.

Inflation was second on the list of economic concerns for next year and the crisis in the Middle East was third.

Concerns of Purchasing Managers

The views of purchasing managers are widely followed on Wall Street because they are the people who control business buying, a key factor in the health of the economy. Charted below are the concerns expressed by purchasing managers in the most recent biannual survey conducted by the National Purchasing Managers Association.

Official blasts plan critics

N.Y. Times News Service

CARLSBAD, Calif. — Deputy U.S. Energy Secretary Henson Moore has blasted critics of a national energy strategy and urged oil executives at a conference here to support the plan.

Moore

The proposal, almost two years in the making, offers a list of 65 potential solutions to curb the nation's dependence on imported oil while protecting economic growth over the next 40 years.

The plan, which goes to President Bush for consideration next week, has drawn fire from critics who say it will have little real impact because a Democratic Congress would oppose any options the president chooses.

Some of the options already backed by the administration, such as opening sensitive areas in California and Alaska to oil drilling, have prompted criticism from environmentalists.

Among the other options — which include boosting the use of alternative fuels and cleaner-burning coal, building more electric plants and imposing a $1 a gallon gasoline tax — there is something to please or infuriate just about everyone.

Moore, in a speech to about 100 executives at Platt's Crude Oil Conference Tuesday, said that it is too early to criticize the policy options. "Those who are most critical know the least," he said.

"Special interest groups" opposing the plan are "always trying to be out front by being critical," and "panicking" their members "in order to raise money" to fight the energy policy, Moore charged.

"I'm a bit rankled when I read ... that so-called energy 'gurus' don't think the policy will have a significant impact," he said.

Moore said that the United States must cut its reliance on imported crude oil.

Ways to invest for couples starting out

By Scott Burns

Q. My fiance and I want to start on short term savings by jointly establishing a fund for the purposes of a down payment on a house or to make significant other purchases within a year or two of our marriage in early 1992. We are both 25 and our combined income today is right at $80,000. Neither of us has any debts other than student loans, about $14,000 total, and car payments. We are both currently saving in money market funds and 401k plans. Could you advise us on a relatively safe, tax free investment, given the current and expected economy in the next two years? I have been thinking about a tax free municipal bond fund or a similar product but do not know what yield or load to expect or if the current economy favors this. We have about $1,000 to start and would like to be able to add to it on a monthly basis through automatic bank draft.

Burns

Also, is it still wise to invest in a house these days or does the initial investment, upkeep, changes in tax status, etc. favor renting and investing the savings? We are likely to be in the Dallas, Texas, area at least five years but neither of our current jobs is such that we can guarantee the long term. It seems like paying rent without building equity is like throwing money down the drain... but recently I've heard arguments to the contrary.

A. The first assignment isn't easy. Since you will be making withdrawals from your money market fund in a relatively short time period you are more or less restricted to no-load funds. In addition, the initial deposit must be no more than $1,000.

That narrows the field substantially because most funds have larger minimum initial investments. Vanguard, for instance, requires $3,000 in its municipal money market fund but allows additional investments as small as $100. Dreyfus requires $2,500 with additions of $100. The best yielding tax free money market fund that makes the "Select List" in the Income and Safety newsletter is the UST Master Tax-Exempt (tel 800-233-1136) with a yield of 5.8 percent. Unfortunately, additional investments are a minimum of $500. The Scudder Tax Free fund, yield 5.4 percent (tel 800-225-5163), accepts additional investments of $100.

A reality of all markets is that they over-react. Home ownership had got to be seen as a completely riskless investment where you could only make money, never lose it. Now we are likely to see an over-reaction as many people suffer in a broad home price downturn.

In fact, the cost of interest, the increase in the standard deduction, and the reduction of marginal tax rates have worked to increase the cost of homeownership relative to renting. In addition, transaction costs for buying and selling continue to escalate. This means that you need more appreciation just to cover the cost of buying and selling a home.

The bottom line: unless you are fairly certain that you can own a home for a long period of time, young homemakers should prefer renting over buying.

They should also rest assured that they are not "throwing away" their rent payments. Rental housing has traditionally rented for FAR less than the cost of mortgage, taxes, insurance, and maintenance. This will change, of course, if more people decide to be renters. But right now the best choice in many areas, particularly on the East and West Coast, is to rent and save.

The test to apply is a simple question: am I paying a premium to own over renting? If the answer is yes, your house or condo still has a speculation premium built into its price. In much of the Southwest this speculative premium has been squeezed out in recent years.

Q. I am a 25-year-old single female earning $40,000 a year. Currently, I am investing the maximum 12 percent in my company's 401k plan, 90 percent of which I have allocated to a general

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Book-entry stocks would be optional

By Bill Doyle

Q. I am in complete agreement with the column in which you wrote: "The book-entry system for municipal bonds is one of the most fouled-up arrangements ever foisted on the investing public."

I refuse to buy "muni" bonds in book-entry form. I insist every muni I purchase be available in registered form, so I can receive the certificate and put it in my safe deposit box. As a result, I receive my semiannual interest checks direct.

Doyle

Well, I just read a news story about the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission pushing a plan to extend book-entry to stocks. That makes me screaming mad. I don't want my stocks to be blips on the computer of a broker, who would charge me for that alleged "service." I want my stock certificates tucked away in my lock box.

How can we prevent this abomination?

A. Easy, now! Things are not nearly as bleak as you and other readers who wrote equally unhappy letters seem to believe. The SEC is not "pushing" to make all stocks book-entry. That federal regulatory agency is just considering a proposal to extend book-entry to some stocks. SEC Chairman Richard Breeden has made it clear any such arrangement must be "optional," permitting investors who want to hold stock certificates to continue to do so.

Your sentiments about book-entry are echoed by many folks. Just last month, a survey of 750 investors by Frederick/Schneiders Inc. showed 81 percent oppose eliminating stock certificates.

Even if a book-entry system for stocks becomes a fact, it most certainly will be different than the muni bond arrangement.

When you own a book-entry muni, it must be in an account at a brokerage firm or bank. Typically, brokerages levy fees for book-entry, unless customers do other business — thereby generating commissions.

Interest from a book-entry muni goes to the brokerage or bank, which credits the payment to the customer's account. Over the years, my mailbag has bulged with letters from readers citing how slow some brokerages are passing along interest payments and other money.

Details of the book-entry proposal for stocks are still being worked out. When the arrangement is in final form, one thing will be certain. Investors who choose to use the book-entry system will not be required to have their shares in a brokerage account. Instead, they will deal with some other entity — most likely the transfer agent for each stock.

That will eliminate extra charges and delays in receiving dividends.

Q. It is obvious to me the municipal bond book-entry system lowers costs for brokers, banks and muni bond issuers — states, counties, cities, school districts, etc. I see no savings for investors. Right or wrong?

A. Right as rain. You identified the driving force behind the muni bond book-entry movement — reduced expenses and consequently higher profits for the financial community. But that often results in frustration and extra costs for muni bond investors.

Q. My broker contends municipal bond book-entry is "no different than the Treasury Direct system" for ownership of U.S. Treasury securities and is similar to mutual funds and dividend reinvestment plans (DRPs) on individual stocks. No certificates are issued in those three arrangements.

What do you say?

A. Ask your broker what he has been smoking. There are mighty big differences.

An investor can have his or her personal Treasury Direct account recorded on Federal Reserve computers. Interest payments, discount amounts on the purchase of new securities and face amounts of matured securities go by wire to the investor's account at the bank, savings and loan association or credit union he or she designates.

In the case of a mutual fund, an investor's account is maintained by the fund's custodian bank or transfer agent.

With a DRP, the investor deals with the plan agent — usually the transfer agent for the stock.

None of those three arrangements requires a middleman, such as a brokerage firm, between investors and the securities they own.

Bill Doyle is a syndicated columnist for King Features. He welcomes written questions, but is able to provide answers only through the column.

Former Shell shareholders awarded $110 million

HOUSTON (AP) — A Delaware judge Wednesday awarded approximately $110 million to about 1,000 former Shell Oil Co. stockholders who relinquished 1 million shares in a merger deal five years ago.

The shareholders, most of whom are present or former Shell employees, were awarded $71.20 per share for their stock by Vice Chancellor Maurice Hartnett III in Delaware.

OPEC: Issues warning

(From 8D)

13 oil-producing representatives had been represented at a cartel meeting since the invasion. Iraq and Libya did not show up for the last meeting during which the quota system was suspended.

There were no sparks between Iraq and Kuwait, seated next to each other in the conference room's alphabetical arrangement.

Ramzi Salman Abdul Hussain, director of Iraq's State Oil Marketing Organization, attended the meeting for the Baghdad government.

He said little to reporters, although he did say Iraq could get its crude production back up to strong levels "as soon as we want."

"None of the facilities are damaged," he said.

Iraq is estimated to be producing a mere 400,000 barrels a day, compared to earlier levels of more than 3 million barrels.

OPEC members are: Algeria, Ecuador, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Venezuela.

With Hammer gone Occidental Petroleum may face identity crisis

■ Armand Hammer ruled Occidental with an iron-hand, and now that he is gone the company may suffer an identity crisis, say observors.

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — For better or worse, Armand Hammer controlled Occidental Petroleum Corp. in a way that few corporate heads will ever realize. He was known as an iron-handed ruler who commanded fierce loyalty from his employees and Occidental's board.

And now that he is gone, the Los Angeles-based company faces an immediate identity crisis.

To be sure, Ray R. Irani has automatically succeeded Hammer as Occidental's chairman and chief executive under a resolution adopted in February by the company's board.

Irani was selected president after five other would-be successors were eased out for various reasons.

But given Hammer's uniqueness, Irani would seem to have little choice but to drastically alter the company's emphasis and style, say analysts.

"I was shocked when I heard (about Hammer's death). I was one of those people who believed he was immortal," said Eric Ovsiew, deputy general counsel for Institutional Shareholder Service in Washington, D.C.

"I don't think you'll see an Irani museum going forward," added Ron Londe, an analyst for A.G. Edwards & Sons in St. Louis and referring the Armand Hammer Museum of Art and Cultural Center, which Hammer built with up to $95 million in company funds to house his art collection. "(Irani) is a bottom-line guy."

The flamboyant Hammer, who used the title "Dr." because he had a medical degree but never practiced medicine, already had made his mark in the worlds of philanthropy and international relations when he became involved in Occidental.

In 1956, Hammer and his wife, Frances invested $100,000 in the then-lackluster oil company as a convenient tax shelter, according to one Hammer biography.

But Hammer's casual interest developed into tight control that some say helped make Occidental a major energy conglomerate.

Hammer was a globetrotter who used personal diplomacy to further Occidental's interests. This included flying to Libya to persuade Col. Moammar Gadhafi to release control of Occidental's fields.

Armand Hammer 1898-1990

Hammer at age 82 (1980)

Highlights of a long and busy life

■ Born in New York, son of a doctor and founding member of the American Communist Party.

■ Turned his family's small pharmaceutical company into a million-dollar business while studying medicine at night; graduated but never practiced as a doctor.

■ Travelled to Russia after communist revolution to do relief work; traded U.S. grain for Soviet products; became a Soviet hero for his help easing food shortages.

■ Gained Lenin's trust and became the sole licensee for many U.S. manufacturers in the Soviet Union, setting up trading and manufacturing companies there; sold his interests after Stalin came to power, but kept up contacts with and was trusted by the Kremlin for the rest of his life.

■ Succeeded in various businesses in the U.S., including cattle breeding, art dealing, and whiskey distilling. Bought nearly bankrupt Occidental Petroleum as a tax shelter in 1952 and built it into a huge energy and agribusiness firm.

■ After years of being asked if he was named for the similar-sounding brand of baking soda (or vice versa), bought a stake in the manufacturer and took a seat on the company's board.

Analysts said that it is unlikely such forays — or Hammer's frequent visits to the Soviet Union on diplomatic missions — will be part of Irani's style.

Irani has been instrumental recently in emphasizing domestic ventures, Londe said. The company no longer has its strong ties to oil fields in Libya and Peru and is concentrating more on interests in the U.S.

Occidental is expected to become more conservative under Irani by divesting other operations in favor of its core business.

Some analysts feel that many of the company's peripheral businesses, such as the Iowa Beef Processing Inc. interest, will be sold off.

Other interests, such its Canadian petroleum subsidiary and the Lexington, Ky.-based Island Creek Corp., a coal mining operation, also could be put on the market.

Such changes of direction could greatly change the size and structure of the company Hammer built.

"Hammer had the ego or personal objective to (make Occidental) one of the top 100 companies in America," said James Bellessa, an analyst for D.A. Davidson & Co. "Without Iowa Beef Processing, I don't know that they would make the top 100 list."

Regardless of how the company's business operations change, analysts say the most striking changes will be found in Occidental's image now that its highly visible chairman is gone.

"Occidental did not make a product that consumers knew they were buying — there was no gasoline with the Oxy brand," Gray said. "What they did instead was have Hammer do his thing.

"I can never remember when Hammer spoke as anything else than Armand Hammer, chairman of Occidental. I don't think it is possible to evaluate the value of that representation."

equity fund. The company matches 3 percent of my contributions. I have an additional $10,000 in checking and savings accounts which I am looking to invest. Would you recommend investing this in mutual funds or using it as a down payment for a townhouse purchase? Given the current housing market and the short length of time I expect to be in the Dallas, Texas, Fort Worth area (three to five years) would the tax savings I realize from home ownership be enough to make the investment worthwhile?

A. First, congratulations on saving so much. Let me give you an idea how much this will do for you: with $6,000 a year going into the 401k plan you will have nearly $40,000 by the time you are 30 assuming an 11 percent compound rate of return. If you don't save another DIME, this fund will grow to $1,280,000 by the time you are age 65 if the fund has a long term return of 10 percent — slightly less than that long term compound return on common stocks.

To be sure, a Big Mac will cost a lot more 40 years from now but your $1.2 million will still buy a fair number.

The townhouse question is problematic. Let's suppose you can buy one with little or no down payment and that you assume $60,000 of financing at 10 percent. Your real estate taxes will probably be about $1,200 a year giving you a maximum tax deduction of $7,200 a year, only $4,100 more than the $3,100 standard deduction. Since you are in the 28 percent tax bracket, that means tax savings of only $1,148 while your total expenses will be about $9,000 plus utilities and insurance.

Unless you can buy a unit at a price that makes the total cost of ownership the same or less than what the same unit can be rented for, you would probably be better off renting.

Chevron first to pump Soviet oil

N.Y. Times News Service

The Soviet Republic of Kazakhstan has announced a joint venture with San Francisco-based Chevron Corp. to produce and refine oil starting as early as next month.

Chevron is expected to start production at 65,000 barrels per day, reaching 195,000 barrels per day by 1994, according to Paul Ting, an analyst at Oppenheimer & Co., who follows Chevron closely.

The output ultimately could exceed 500,000 to 600,000 barrels per day, Ting added.

"By January, we believe the issue of setting up a joint venture will be finalized" and production and refining could begin, said the president of the Central Asian republic, Nursultan Nazarbayev, at an official press conference in Moscow on Tuesday.

It was the strongest statement on the subject to date by a high-ranking source on either side of the negotiations, which have been going on for years.

The project would be the largest U.S.-Soviet joint venture in history.

Soviet and Chevron officials had previously hinted that an agreement might be achievable by early 1991 to tap the giant Tengiz field in Kazakhstan, on the northeast shore of the Caspian Sea.

The Tengiz field — the largest in the world discovered in the past decade — is estimated to hold 25 billion barrels of oil, but not all of it is necessarily recoverable.

The recoverable total could amount to about 10 billion barrels, using such advanced methods as gas injection, which forces crude oil to the surface under pressure.

The Soviets already have spent about $1 billion developing Tengiz. Chevron is expected to evenly split any further development costs — estimated at several billions of dollars — with the Soviets.

The development will be spread over an extended period of time, so that early sales of oil in Western Europe can help finance later production.

Chevron is not alone in its desire to tap Soviet oil fields. Texaco Inc., Amoco Corp., Anglo-Suisse, Philbro Energy and Parker Drilling all are exploring joint ventures with the Soviets.

Chevron's agreement should open the door for a Chevron-led group of five American companies — called the American Trade Consortium — to develop several dozen joint ventures with Kazakhstan and other Soviet republics.

Ruth out; Adair vows to stay

■ While Stanton head coach Dale Ruth resigned under pressure recently, McCamey mentor Randy Adair faces problems of his own.

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

STANTON — Former Stanton head football coach Dale Ruth quashed rumors Wednesday that he might replace embattled McCamey mentor Randy Adair.

"I don't have anything to do with that (the rumors)," Ruth said. "I won't go any other place in the district.

"Right now, I'm just keeping my ears open and going on from there."

Adair, who suffered through a 3-7 season in his second year at McCamey after losing 10 varsity players to either academics or injuries, said he isn't going anywhere for the last year of his contract.

"I've made a commitment to McCamey, and they've made a commitment to me," Adair said. "This job is not open, and these rumors are greatly exaggerated."

The coach acknowledged that anti-Adair graffiti was recently painted on a school wall and signs saying "Just Say No to Adair" were posted in public places this fall.

Ruth, who had a 37-44-2 record in eight years as the Buffs' head coach, resigned under pressure at a special school board meeting Dec. 3. The Stanton I.S.D. Board of Trustees voted to accept his resignation at its regular meeting this week.

Ruth is still teaching history and assisting in track, and may do so until his contract expires at the end of the school year.

Board president Mike Hall denied that the Buffs' 1-9 mark during the most recent football season was the major factor in the board's desire to remove Ruth.

"We felt like our athletic program wasn't moving along like it should," Hall said. "We appreciate what Dale's done for us, but we felt like we had to look at the athletic department as a whole."

Ruth, a McMurry College (now University) graduate, came to Stanton in 1979 after several years at Fort Worth-area schools as a football and track assistant. He took over the head football job in 1982 and the Buffs struggled for several seasons before compiling 9-3 and 8-2-1 records in '88 and '89, respectively.

Hall said the new athletic director would not necessarily be the new head football coach.

"We're looking at all avenues and have had several inquiries already," he said.

School still in store for Dean

■ After finishing a stellar golf career at Midland College, Dean Robertson looks for a future that keeps the sport in his life.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Dean Robertson doesn't have to dig deep into his memory banks to come up with the most exciting moment of his life.

On June 3, the 20-year-old Midland College golfer was with the Chaparral team at the national junior college tournament in Scottsdale, Ariz. On that particular Sunday, though, he was just playing a practice round at the Tournament Players Championship Desert Course when he rounded the 18 holes in 62 strokes — that's right, 62.

That 10-under par effort may not have counted for the Chaps in the tournament, but it make Robertson the proud father of a new bouncing baby course record, previously owned by well-known professional tour player Mark Calcavecchia.

"Oh, I was thrilled. I've played a lot of practice rounds, even rounds in tournaments, where I would get to 5-under and kind of ease up. But in that case I just kept going, making more and more birdies," said Robertson, who was born and raised in Scotland, the cradle of the game that has now consumed so many people worldwide.

And even though Robertson has been the No. 1 man for MC coach Delnor Poss' team the past two years, he finished his junior college eligibility at the end of this fall's competition.

However, he will stay at MC for the spring semester to earn his associate's degree. From there, he hopes to gain a scholarship to any one of a number of NCAA Division I schools that have expressed interest in offering him a free ride.

Sherrill deserves second chance

By Billy Watkins
For The Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss. — Jackie Sherrill has been given a second chance. This is America, and I believe in people getting second chances. Those of you who have never screwed up and needed a second chance, raise your hand.

Thought so.

I don't know.

Will he cheat at Mississippi State?

I don't know.

I know what I've heard and I know what I've read. I know A&M was placed on NCAA probation and that Sherrill resigned amid all sorts of allegations. But I don't know for sure that he cheated.

What I do have a problem with, however, is one of his comments at Sunday's news conference to announce his hiring at State.

"(The NCAA) knows more about me and my personality," he said. "(Otherwise) they would never have given me a clean bill of health. They would never have written me a letter (clearing his return to coaching)."

"A clean bill of health" is a poor choice of words. And NCAA officials wish that Sherrill and other coaches would stop using that expression.

"It's misleading," Mark Jones, director of enforcement for the NCAA, said Monday.

As for Sherrill's tainted image, Hallman said things aren't always as they appear to be.

"We put so much stock in what people believe on the outside," Hallman said. "I understand that more now that I'm a head coach. I know I've had to bite my lip and go on about some things that have been said about me. I'm perceived as being thin-skinned. Well, my skin isn't as thin as some people might think. But that's the perception.

"The important thing people ought to ask is how (Sherrill's) players feel about him. I think if you ask guys who have played for him and coached under him, you'll find they think a lot of him.

"I've said it before and I'll say it again. I'd coach for him again in a minute."

One final note: Sherrill's record says plenty about his coaching ability — 105-45-2 in 13 seasons, eight bowl games. He came within an eyelash of winning a national championship at Pittsburgh. He turned A&M's program around and delivered three straight Cotton Bowl appearances.

State, meanwhile, has been to three bowl games in the past 27 years. It has averaged one SEC victory over the past nine seasons.

But so, too, are State's chances of ever having a serious winner. Sherrill is proven. If he can't get it done, it might be the biggest indictment of State's program yet.

Here's why: When a school is considering hiring a coach, normally the person in charge of the search contacts the NCAA to ask if the candidate has any history of rules violations.

"We keep a file, A to Z, on any coach who has been found to be directly involved in infractions," Jones said. "If a coach — either an assistant or head coach — has been involved, his name will be in there. If he hasn't been, then we simply say that we have no record of his involvement."

As for a letter of clearance being written by the NCAA, it is done so only on request. "And it doesn't say what a great guy he is or that he might be a good risk or someone you should hire," Jones said. "It simply says whether that coach is in our files or not."

So let's not read more into this "clean bill of health" thing than there really is, regarding Sherrill or any coach. All it means is that the coach in question has never been caught red-handed handing out cash. That's all it means.

Both personally and football-wise, few people know Sherrill better than Curley Hallman, who left Southern Mississippi recently to become head coach at LSU. Hallman was Sherrill's secondary coach at A&M.

"(State) made a good choice," Hallman said Monday. "I knew he really wanted to get back into coaching. Believe me, there will be a lot happening up there. He'll build a winner."

Rockets break Philly jinx

Associated Press

The Houston Rockets ended 16 years of frustration Wednesday night with their first victory over the Philadelphia 76ers in 23 games at the Spectrum.

But coach Don Chaney said the Rockets tried not to dwell on the losing streak.

"We mentioned it before the game and at halftime. That's past history though. What was important was we needed a win badly," he said.

Led by Akeem Olajuwon, who had 29 points, 15 rebounds and five steals, the Rockets defeated Philadelphia 108-100. Their last previous win at the Spectrum was on Jan. 2, 1974.

Houston led by as many as 21 points in the second quarter and held an 89-73 lead at the end of three periods.

"I thought we were ready to play in the first quarter," Chaney said. "We got a nice lead (33-22) and I think we took advantage of their heavy legs. They played last night in Orlando."

Chaney said Olajuwon was focused.

"Even at the shoot-around today he was all business. He's always the main man," the coach said.

Philadelphia rallied to 99-90 on a layup by Mike Gminski with 2:27 to go, but Larry Smith and Kenny Smith scored 4 points during an 8-2 run to put the game out of reach.

The Rockets scored the first 8 points of the game on their way to the 33-22 first-quarter lead. A 19-8 run and the Rockets built a 51-30 advantage with 2:21 left in the half.

The Rockets, who went 28-for-48 from the field in the first half, led 66-48 at halftime. The Sixers hit only 18-of-41 shots.

Philadelphia coach Jim Lynam said the Rockets started well and the Sixers never recovered.

Sonics 99, Pacers 90

Derrick McKey scored 18 points and Seattle converted eight Indiana turnovers into 13 points in the fourth quarter as the SuperSonics kept the Pacers winless in 11 road games.

Eddie Johnson, who was acquired from Phoenix on Dec. 7 in the Xavier McDaniel trade, added 14 points, including a basket with 1:41 left that gave the Sonics a 90-84 advantage.

Reggie Miller led Indiana with 26 points. Sonics guard Dale Ellis, who missed 17 games with a sore right foot, scored 8 in his first game of the season.

NBA

Spurs 92, Hornets 81

David Robinson had 24 points and 17 rebounds as San Antonio handed Charlotte its fifth straight loss.

The Spurs, who won their third straight game and have a half-game advantage over the Utah Jazz in the Midwest Division, trailed just once in the game despite making only 44 percent of their shots. But the Hornets managed to hit just 40 percent.

Clippers 100, Cavaliers 90

Ken Norman scored 9 of his 30 points during a 21-2 run at the start of the third quarter as the Los Angeles Clippers broke an 11-year losing streak in Cleveland.

The victory was the Clippers' first in the Richfield Coliseum since Jan. 27, 1979. They had lost their previous 11 games at Cleveland.

Celtics 129, Bucks 111

Larry Bird snapped out of a shooting slump with 30 points against Milwaukee, 18 of them in the first period, and Boston rolled to its 13th victory in 15 games.

Bird, 15-for-51 from the field in a three-game weekend trip to Texas, was 11-for-15 from the field, including 4-for-4 from 3-point range.

The Bucks, who won their four previous games and still lead the NBA's Central Division, managed to battle Boston to a 20-20 standoff for nearly eight minutes.

Hawks 118, Heat 93

Dominique Wilkins hit two 3-point shots during a 10-2 run in the third quarter and had 28 points and 14 rebounds, leading Atlanta over Miami.

Syracuse holds off Canisius; others win big

Associated Press

Pity Long Beach State, Syracuse's next opponent.

"It takes a game like that to get you ready for the next game," said Syracuse junior Billy Owens, who scored a season-high 34 points Wednesday night as the third-ranked Orangemen weathered a late rally by a determined Canisius team before escaping with a 92-83 victory.

"We weren't ready to play. We'll be ready the next time. Look out!"

Canisius (4-2) trailed 81-65 with 4:02 remaining, but used a ball-hawking defense to fight back to 87-81 on senior guard Chuck Giscombe's three-point play with 1:07 to go.

"When we didn't jump on them, it gave them confidence," Syracuse forward Dave Johnson said. "They played like they should win the game."

The Golden Griffins knew the score before they walked on the court.

"They've got teams at the beginning of the year that they want to blow out. They thought we were going to be one of them," said Canisius center Ed Book, who finished with 20 points. "Syracuse was shocked."

"They probably took us lightly," said forward Nixon Dyall, who had 21 points. "We're not in the top 100 or whatever. But we're all Division I players and we take pride in that."

The victory was the 1,300th for Syracuse (8-0), making it just the 10th major college program to reach that plateau. North Carolina tops the list with 1,484 victories.

DEAN: Robertson hopes to make tour

From 1E

Among those universities that have contacted Robertson are Arkansas, Houston and New Mexico.

"It's definitely going to be a Division I school, but I don't know where it's going to be yet," he said in his thick Scottish burr. "I've just got to see what's best for me."

THE UNASSUMING Robertson spent his formative years in Paisley, a city of 204,009 near Glasgow. It was there at the age of five that he first picked up a golf club.

"I took up golf under the coaching of my father (David), who has been a great influence. But it's basically only been since I came to Midland College that my golf has started to take off, so to speak," he said.

Upon finishing high school, Robertson was still uncertain of his golf skills, so he spent 1½ years training to be an assistant civil engineer.

"I would go to college one day a week, then work from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. in an office the rest of the week. But the work was good for me because it gave me an insight into the real world," he said.

"I was playing golf about once a week and didn't know what my potential as a golfer was. Now I'd hate to give up golf."

So he decided to try to play at the collegiate level, and it was a fellow Scotsman who put him onto the MC track.

"Andrew Coltart, who played here last year, put me onto Coach Poss. Midland College was the first college that I applied for a scholarship at, and it was the first one to get back to me and accept me.

"From there I just practiced hard and progressed steadily. I'm quite happy with how things have gone."

Even at that, it took him a while to get used to the different style of courses in the United States.

"The courses here require more of an aerial type of golf. In Scotland most courses are links type courses — they're very hard. In the States they play target golf, where you're hitting the ball right on top of the flag all the time. In Scotland you have to land in front of the green and let the ball run up, and there are many more contours than over here."

But continued practice on U.S. courses, and a new swing molded after Nick Faldo's, combined to make him the top JUCO medalist in June.

"Even into last March I was playing lousy and getting pretty bugged about it. But a lot of practice started to pay off and by the end of the spring it started to come together."

Even as his future appears to be mapped out, Robertson still has a big decision to make — declaring a major.

Though he holds the predictable dream of one day being a regular on the PGA tour, he is also pragmatic.

"My degree from here will be general studies. I just don't know what I want to major in. I'll certainly be thinking about that when I go home for Christmas," he said.

"I still have my golf ambitions. My first goal is to make the Walker Cup (where amateurs team up by nationality for international competition), but maybe my all-time ambition is to play in the Ryder Cup (international team play for pros) and go on to make money on the pro tour.

"It's all about dedication, and I certainly like practicing all the time. It's what I want to do."

Big East ponders grid lineup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Athletic directors from the Big East Conference's four Division I-A football schools — Boston College, Miami, Pittsburgh and Syracuse — met Wednesday to discuss plans for a new league that would include Rutgers, Temple, Virginia Tech and West Virginia.

Big East spokesman John Paquette would not disclose the results of Wednesday's meeting, but said he expected a statement to be issued on Thursday.

Reports of the Eastern football league — a topic of conversation and conjecture for years — have been circulating all week.

"I don't know that that's a done deal," Virginia Tech athletic director Dave Braine said. "They told us all along it would be the first part of the year before anything's final. We have been in touch with them ... We are very much interested in it."

"I hope before the week's out, we are presented a proposal as such," West Virginia athletic director Ed Pastilong said.

Miami said it earlier this year it would become the 10th member of the Big East's basketball conference, but wants a league affiliation for its football team, which won three national championships in the 1980s.

Syracuse, Boston College and Pittsburgh have major-college football programs and have considered bolting the Big East, but commissioner Mike Tranghese has promised a solution to the football problem.

The Big East's other members — Connecticut, Georgetown, Providence, St. John's, Seton Hall and Villanova — don't have Division I-A programs.

According to two sources who spoke on the condition they not be identified, one issue remaining is the hope for an automatic bowl bid for the conference champion. A tie-in with the Southwest Conference champion is being examined, one source said, and the Orange Bowl is interested because of Miami, its hometown school.

The new football alignment would not affect the basketball affiliations of the new Big East football schools. West Virginia, Temple and Rutgers would remain in the Atlantic 10 Conference.

If Virginia Tech joins a Big East football conference, the Hokies would likely take their basketball team into either the Atlantic 10 or the Colonial Athletic Association if the faltering Metro Conference cannot be held together, Braine said.

The 15-year-old Metro Conference, dominated by Louisville and Memphis State, has lost Cincinnati, Florida State, Memphis State and South Carolina in recent months and is down to four teams, two short of the minimum for an automatic NCAA tournament bid.

The Atlantic 10 has a vacancy because Penn State is leaving to join the Big Ten.

Gregg, SMU hope to have new coach this week

DALLAS (AP) — Trying to decide on his successor, Southern Methodist University athletic director Forrest Gregg has narrowed his list of candidates. One candidate pulled his name out of the hat Wednesday, but Gregg said he hopes to name a new coach by Friday.

Riley was considered a finalist for the job being vacated by Forrest Gregg, but he decided to remain with the Division I-AA Rattlers.

"I just felt that there are some obligations I have here — the coaches, the players, my family," Riley said. "I don't think the time is right for me or for both parties concerned to pursue this thing any further."

Gregg brought SMU back from a 2-year football ban resulting from the "death penalty" imposed by the NCAA, but he decided to leave his coaching duties to concentrate on being athletic director.

SMU, a member of the Southwest Conference, is looking at Atlanta Falcons quarterbacks coach Tom Rossley as a possible head coach. Several published reports Wednesday also named former Boston College coach Jack Bicknell as a candidate.

Riley said it was "probably true" that he was the front-runner for the job, but he said it wasn't offered, nor was he rejected by an 11-member search committee.

If Riley had gotten the SMU job, he would have become only the third black head coach on the major college level.

SWC lays blame on Sun Belt refs

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — The Sun Belt Conference was informed at least twice that its officials were to work Tuesday's Arkansas-South Alabama game, according to Paul Galvan, head of officials for the Southwest Conference.

No officials showed, and the game was delayed for an hour. An SWC official was called at his home on Tuesday, and he and a high school official who was at Barnhill Arena for the game officiated the contest.

The Sun Belt Conference's head of officials, Charlie Bloodworth of Atlanta, said Wednesday that he saw a list indicating SWC officials were to work the game.

No. 2 Arkansas (8-1) defeated the Jaguars (4-1), 101-91.

"The contract from the University of Arkansas said there should have been Sun Belt officials," Galvan said in a telephone interview Wednesday. He said when he got Arkansas' schedule he called the Sun Belt Conference to inform the league it was to provide officials for the South Alabama-Arkansas game.

"They came back and said it was supposed to be Southwest Conference officials," Galvan said. "I contacted (Arkansas) Coach (Nolan) Richardson and he said, no, it was supposed to be Sun Belt officials."

Galvan said he called the Sun Belt Conference a second time to inform the league that it was to assign officials.

In a telephone interview from his home Wednesday evening, Bloodworth said that a list he received from South Alabama showed that it was a Southwest Conference assignment.

"We work with the schools; they send us what's on their contract," Bloodworth said. "I'm not really sure who's at fault." He said it should be up to the schools, not the conference officials, to resolve the situation.

Travs tab Pettini

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Joe Pettini, considered an up-and-coming manager in the St. Louis Cardinal organization, has been named to head the Class AA Arkansas Travelers next season.

Pettini, 35, replaces Dave Bialas, who will manage the Cardinals' Class A franchise at St. Petersburg, Fla. Pettini managed the St. Petersburg team last season. In his only other year of managing, Pettini was at Hamilton, Ont.

"I've watched him for two years, and as far as understanding of the game and handling young kids he's first rate," Ted Simmons, the Cardinals' director of player development, said of Pettini. "In my judgment he has the type of background and understanding to go some distance as a baseball manager.

"I think the people in Arkansas will be entertained by Joe. He has great energy and love for the game," Simmons said.

Arkansas finished last in the Texas League's Eastern Division last season.

"I've never been to Arkansas, but I've heard a lot of good things about it," Pettini said Tuesday from his home in Windsor Heights, W. Va. "I understand Little Rock really supports its baseball, and any place that likes baseball is all right by me."

Pettini, who played four seasons in the major leagues and nine in the minors, said he is excited about the chance to manage on the AA level.

"The last two years have been a real learning experience for me, and I expect 1991 to be the same for both me and the players," Pettini said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Common sense will help you solve any problems that arise now. Concern for a loved one's welfare leads you to change your lifestyle; you both benefit! Be careful not to do anything next summer that could jeopardize your job. Entertain modestly, choosing your guests with care. September 1991 will bring several exciting new friendships. Singles could find next November the very best month for romance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Although the day may start out slowly, it will soon pick up speed. News from afar leads you to revise your long-range plans. Keep an open mind if addressing a teen-ager's problems.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be wary of letting anyone know your financial standing. You cannot afford to become involved in someone's get-rich-quick scheme. A Christmas card could lead to thoughts of rekindling an old romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Concentrate on creating the kind of home you have always wanted. Shun risky investments. A relationship that is going strong is a source of inspiration to you. Move forward with confidence.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Things may not turn out the way you intended. Postpone travel if a family emergency arises. A relative or neighbor offers to help out; try to return the favor as soon as possible.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Heed that little voice inside of you instead of trying to ignore it. It is usually right on target! Give romance a second chance and you will have something to celebrate next year.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Continue to lie low until someone has calmed down. You will feel much more optimistic by evening. Find a creative way to express your feelings to romantic partner. A poem could work wonders!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stick to what you planned instead of trying to do more than you can safely handle. Your friends can do as they please with their own money. Catch up on phone calls and correspondence.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Obey an urge to tackle an intriguing challenge. You will receive valuable assistance from an unexpected quarter. Forge alliances with people who work behind the scenes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your closet associates are the right people to advise you on financial matters. A conservative approach will work best. Choose your professional allies with greater care.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): As long as your resources are ample, there will be little to hold you back! The cooperative spirit is everywhere. You benefit from taking your mate's advice. Be prudent in everything you do.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid putting all your eggs into one basket. A venture that sounds very promising could fizzle out. Take a conservative approach to new investments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A financial proposition may have too many "ifs" and "buts." Think it over. A letter brings special cheer. Do not put your faith in a secret romance. You deserve much better!

TODAY'S CHILDREN are proud of their physical strength and like to engage in strenuous sports. Count on them to get good grades in school once they put their minds to it. They show a real love for history and geography and will make wonderful travelers. Brilliant but reserved, these Sagittarians have more admirers than close friends. Employers will appreciate their initiative and drive. Their preoccupation with work makes a late marriage likely.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
3 ♠	Pass	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♠

Follow the play of this hand, then decide who, if anyone, blundered and how many errors were made on this hand from a duplicate event. Bear in mind that a player might have committed more than one mistake.

We are not thrilled with West's decision to preempt as dealer. The hand contained too much strength outside the long suit for our tastes. East's pass marked North with a good hand, but South's courage in bidding four hearts was above and beyond the call of duty.

West led the deuce of clubs. East won the queen, cashed the ace and then returned the ten as a suit preference signal for spades. Declarer covered with the jack. Unfortunately, West could not ruff higher than dummy, so declarer overruffed the four and led dummy's remaining trump. When East followed low, declarer inserted the jack and continued with another high trump. As a result, two clubs and two trumps were lost for down one.

Go to the top of the class if you gave East a major charge for faulty defense. West's lead was obviously a singleton, so after winning the queen of clubs, East could have led the ten of clubs to the second trick. West would have ruffed and shifted to a spade, securing a two-trick set because East can remove dummy's trumps to make sure of another club trick. Had East been willing to settle for a one-trick set, there was an even easier way to defeat the contract. When West shows out on the second club, declarer's hand becomes an open book, so ace of hearts and another would have guaranteed the ten of clubs as the fourth defensive trick.

South also committed a capital gaffe. Besides the overly optimistic four-heart bid, when West couldn't overruff dummy, East became marked with the ten of hearts. Therefore, South should have finessed the nine of hearts on the first round of the suit. That would have enabled declarer to draw trumps for the loss of only one trick and the contract would have sailed home.

Robin Williams' star rises on Hollywood Boulevard

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Robins Williams got a star on Hollywood Boulevard on Wednesday.

The unveiling of the walk's 1,926th star preceded a Century City benefit premier of "Awakenings," which co-stars Williams and Robert DeNiro.

Williams, star of the old "Mork and Mindy" television show, has twice been honored with Academy Award nominations for best actor, including roles in "Good Morning, Vietnam" and "Dead Poets Society."

Rigby

"This is like the Olympics of theater," Rigby said in an interview Tuesday. "You have all those same feelings of excitement."

The 36-year-old mother of four has been on the road for a year in the revival of the musical about the boy who refuses to grow up. The show opens on Broadway on Thursday.

"This is not just children's theater," she said. "It's lasted all these years because it has great depth, it's a wonderful story and it touches children of all ages."

NEW YORK (AP) — Two handwritten letters between Albert Einstein and Sigmund Freud discussing the nature of war sold for $165,000, and a Louis Armstrong trumpet drew $16,500 at the same auction.

The exchange of letters was initiated by a League of Nations official for a limited-edition book published in 1933.

The letters, which were sold Tuesday by Sotheby's, were consigned by an educational institution and purchased by a private American buyer, said Matthew Weigman, a Sotheby's spokesman.

Einstein's four-page letter of July 28, 1932, asks, "Is there a way to liberate man from the doom of war?" The 14-page reply from Freud concludes, "There is no prospect of getting rid of this aggressive instinct."

The signed letters were expected to bring from $150,000 to $250,000.

Another private American buyer bought the trumpet and a manuscript essay on the musician's recollections on the development of jazz.

The B-flat trumpet sold for $16,500 and the handwritten essay for $27,500, Weigman said. They were consigned by Armstrong's niece.

TROY, N.Y. (AP) — A free concert featuring violinist Isaac Stern and several other world-class musicians turned into two free concerts when too many people showed up to fit into the auditorium.

Stern, cellist Yo-Yo Ma, violist Jamie Laredo and pianist Emanuel Ax took time out from recording sessions here this week to perform for free.

So many people turned up Tuesday afternoon that scores were left standing in the street when the hall was filled. So the musicians agreed to stage a second performance immediately after the first 45-minute recital.

Stern said they had been recording until 1:30 a.m. Tuesday morning and had just finished up a demanding five-city tour.

"We're here to work," Stern said. "We have the same ahead of us today. I don't mean to be rude, but please listen and go quickly."

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — This isn't the Hollywood that first comes to mind when you talk about movie making. But it suits actors Robert DeNiro and Nick Nolte and director Martin Scorcese just fine.

They gave Hollywood, Fla., rave reviews this week even though some in the city had complained about their presence.

"What Hollywood? This Hollywood?" DeNiro asked as he sauntered toward his trailer Tuesday. "Oh, this is a great town. The people are great here. Great people. They're nice. We feel good here."

On the second day of filming of Scorcese's $30 million remake of the 1962 film "Cape Fear," DeNiro, Nolte and Scorcese dispelled a controversy that erupted in downtown Hollywood earlier this month when merchants complained that closing Hollywood Boulevard for three days of filming would hurt business.

"There have been no problems, everyone has been very cooperative," said Scorcese, director of "The Last Temptation of Christ" and "New York, New York."

HONG KONG (AP) — Chinese actress Joan Chen got an interim court order to halt further distribution of the Hong Kong edition of Penthouse magazine which features her as the cover girl, her lawyer said Wednesday.

Pictures of the 29-year-old actress fully clothed in the latest issue of the magazine were not pornographic but she "just doesn't want to be associated with such a publication," Gordon Oldham said.

Chromium in diet may be an antidote for holiday sweets

Jean Carper

Carper

'Tis the season when visions of sugar plums — and other sweet things — dance in our heads and onto our plates.

On the gloomy side, such sugar contains a little-recognized hidden harm. But, on the bright side, it can be easily neutralized, says researcher Dr. Richard Anderson at the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

His recent tests find that eating sugar robs nearly all of us (90 percent) of the trace mineral chromium. And the more sugar you eat, the greater the losses. Such chromium deficits may be the treacherous route by which sugar helps induce diabetes, he says. His studies suggest that chronic chromium deficits can lead to severe glucose intolerance, often followed by full-fledged adult-onset (Type II) diabetes.

"It may take 10 or 20 years, but chromium losses will catch up with you," he warns.

To help blunt such potential harm from sugar, Dr. Anderson suggest eating foods high in chromium (wheat bran, fruits and vegetables, oysters). Additionally, he advises taking a daily balanced nutritional supplement that contains 25 to 200 micrograms of chromium.

COLDS AND THE MILK MYTH

Should you avoid milk if you have a cold? It's a widespread belief.

The reason: Milk supposedly produces mucus, making you feel more stuffed up. But there's probably nothing to it, according to recent research at the University of Adelaide in Australia.

To test the idea, researchers infected 60 healthy adults with a cold virus. Then they checked their cold symptoms and their milk-drinking habits. Some drank no milk; others drank as much as 11 glasses of milk a day. About one-third of the subjects said they shunned milk when they had a cold, mostly because it produced phlegm or mucus.

But the researchers could find no evidence that drinking milk worsened cold symptoms or increased congestion or nasal secretions.

Nevertheless, believers in the "milk makes mucus" theory said they experienced more coughs and congestion. The researchers suspect that milk's slightly viscous consistency makes the throat feel more stuffed up and filled with mucus, even though no more mucus is actually produced in the lungs and nose.

EAT VEGETABLES

There may be something in vegetables that helps ward off gallstones. So suggest a new Harvard study of about 90,000 middle-aged women.

Those who ate the most vegetable fat and vegetable protein were only 60 percent to 70 percent as likely to develop symptoms of gallstones as those who ate the least of these vegetable components.

Specifically, the women most resistant to gallstones ate the most nuts, beans, lentils, peas, lima beans and oranges. Important: All of these women were of normal weight. A previous look at the same group of women found that being obese is the No. 1 predictor of gallstones.

Surprisingly, the researchers did not detect any higher gallstone risk among normal-weight women who ate more calories in saturated animal-type fat or cholesterol.

The new study is in sync with another large-scale British study that found women vegetarians less likely to develop gallstones than meat-eaters.

Foul-tasting lozenges a big seller

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — His product tastes horrible, the package is all wrong, and the name sounds funny. Still, Greg Blazic has managed to build Fisherman's Friend into one of the leading cough lozenges in America.

"I had commission sales reps who were terrified of the product," Balzic said. "I'd tell them, 'You have to make the buyer taste the product,' and they say, 'You're nuts! I was just getting in the door!'

"But so many of these drugstore chains make decisions by committee, and if a buyer went to committee with these and somebody else tasted it first, he wouldn't have a comeback when they said, 'This tastes lousy!'"

They look like flattened doggie treats, and the powerful taste of menthol, eucalyptus, licorice and pepper can leave you rolling your eyes and gasping for breath.

But people keep buying their Fisherman's Friends.

"The reaction is, it tastes terrible, but it's unique because it's effective," said John Zarbatany, president and CEO of Peter P. Dennis Inc., a wholesale distributor in northwestern New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania.

"People either love it or hate it, and the people who love it swear by it," Zarbatany said. "They've built a nice trade out among the consumer public, and they seem to be coming back from year to year. They've got a niche in the marketplace that they're going to maintain."

In seven years since he started importing them, Blazic has managed to carve out increasing shares of the cough lozenge market, ranking third behind Sucrets and Chloraseptic with a sales volume of more than $6 million.

The 125-year-old formula first was sold to English cod fishermen trying to cope with colds caught in the North Atlantic and hasn't been changed much since pharmacist James Lofthouse developed it.

Lofthouse sold the lozenges, 19 at a time, in little paper envelopes, still the way his family markets them. The family takes an old-fashioned approach to the export market, too, appointing one distributor for each country they target.

Two distributors failed to catch on in the U.S. before him, Blazik said.

"They tried to sell them as candy," he said. In the U.S. market, Blazik thinks the strong taste and the old-fashioned packaging work for him.

"When you were growing up, wasn't it a belief of your grandmother that no medicine works unless it tastes bad? I think there's a psychology about that, for something to really work you have to pay your dues."

Selling at 19 for 99 cents, the lozenges are among the cheapest on the market.

"So it's a good value, and it's got a name that easy to remember. You know, the recall factor is tremendously high, and anybody who's ever tasted one of these just forms an opinion, and they always remember it."

Blazik & Associates was incorporated in January 1983, after the conglomerate he worked for decided to sell off its candy companies. He went into business with his savings and severance and an agreement from his wife.

"She'd support me for two years, and by the third year if the company had a 50-50 chance of making it, she'd give me another year. But she wouldn't have anything to do with the business at all, because it had to survive on its own.

Surviving isn't easy in the world of big drug store chains, Blazik found out. If a product isn't selling, it's taking up valuable space that could be used to stock something that will make money.

He had to convince some very tough buyers for drugstore chains.

"I was thrown out of so many places in the early years, it was incredible," he said. "But the funny thing about this product is that nobody ever forgets.

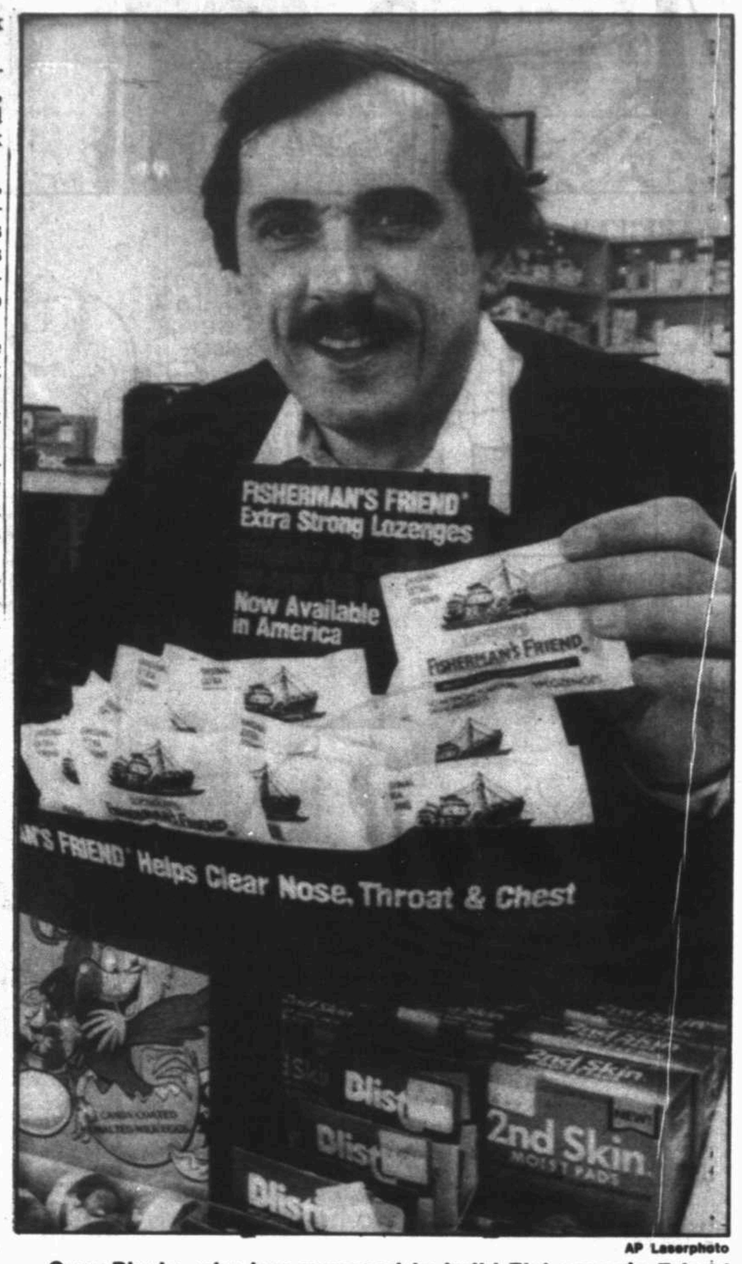
"You call up and you only get one shot a year with a buyer for a chain. So I'd get shot down, and I'd know I can't come back for a year. So I call back a year later, and the guy would say, 'Are you still trying to sell that stuff?'"

Blazik started with a novel marketing idea: Put the packages in a plastic boat on a pedestal on the store's counter. The gimmick worked, although Blazik admits "People bought because of the boat, not because of the product. The boat was cute."

His company now has 14 employees, but Blazik estimates he still works 70 to 80 hours a week.

Someday, Blazik's daughter may join the business — on one condition.

"She told me, 'You know, Daddy, when I get older, I want to sell Fisherman's Friends like you do, but I don't have to eat them, do I?'"



AP Laserphoto

Company issues warning about use of heart valves

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pfizer Inc. will conduct an unprecedented search to warn about 23,000 patients about rare but often fatal fractures of an implanted heart valve, officials said Tuesday.

The Food and Drug Administration said it had accepted Pfizer's plan to locate patients who have the Bjork-Shiley 60-degree convexo-concave heart valve.

Valve fractures have occurred in about seven of every 10,000 patients per year, the FDA said.

The valve was implanted in about 82,000 people worldwide between 1979 and November 1986, when it was removed from the market. About 23,000 of the patients who are still alive are in the United States and Canada.

About 295 fractures of the valve were reported to the FDA, with 178 deaths resulting.

When a valve fractures, a patient's life can be saved if the valve is replaced quickly.

"That's why it is important for C-C valve patients to ask their doctors how to recognize early signs of valve fracture and what to do should it occur," FDA Deputy Commissioner James Benson said.

Public Citizen Health Research Group, a Ralph Nader-founded advocacy group, has been pressing the FDA and Pfizer for years to notify patients about the danger.

The FDA's procedure has been for companies recalling medical devices to contact physicians, who then would speak to their patients. But that policy is being reviewed, said FDA spokeswoman Susan Cruzan.

Also, the agency is developing a plan to work with foreign governments to notify patients overseas, she said. About 59,000 patients with the valve live outside North America.

The company last week sent letters to about 19,000 heart specialists telling them of the program and asking them to contact patients who have the Shiley valve. About 450 hospitals are also being contacted.

On Thursday, the company will announce plans for a patient registry that will include a toll-free telephone number for patients to identify themselves.

The program will be run by Medic Alert, a nonprofit foundation, which will send letters to patients through their doctors, or directly if their doctor can't be located, said Pfizer spokesman Rick Honey.

Those patients will be sent information about their valve implant, as well as an identification card and a bracelet or neck chain identifying them as having a C-C heart valve.

Preventing Fifth disease spread advised, if possible

Associated Press

Fifth disease is the name given to a common and mild childhood illness.

But the virus that causes fifth disease can pose a serious, and even fatal risk to the unborn child of a pregnant woman or to people with some forms of anemia or impaired immune sytems.

"Parvovirus B-19 is probably spread either by airborne droplets that are breathed in or by direct contact with body fluids containing the virus," said Dr. Keith Krasinski, a pediatrician and specialist in childhood infectious disease at New York University Medical Center.

Fish-shocking ray may help fight disease

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists have cloned a gene that helps the electric ray deliver its stunning shocks, an advance that may help in development of drugs to fight cystic fibrosis.

The gene tells cells how to make a protein called the chloride channel, which transports electrically charged particles through the cell membrane.

In the ray, that transport process is used to build up the voltage needed to stun enemies or prey.

Human cells use a similar chloride channel for other purposes, and in cystic fibrosis it fails to work properly. That promotes development of a thick, sticky mucus that sets the stage for fatal lung infections.

Scientists may be able to use the newly cloned gene to isolate and purify a human chloride channel, said Robert Beall, the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation's executive vice president for medical affairs.

The human channel could then be used in research to screen potential drugs for treating cystic fibrosis, he said. Other experiments could illuminate how the channel is regulated by the protein that is defective in cystic fibrosis, yielding new insights that could point to possible therapies, he said.

Study links eating meat, colon cancer

By Daniel Q. Haney

BOSTON (AP) — Meat lovers who eat beef, pork or lamb every day are more than twice as likely to get colon cancer as those who shun red meat, and switching to fish and chicken reduces the risk, according to a major new study.

Experts have long suspected that the fat in red meat contributes to heart disease and cancer. But proving the cancer link has been difficult, in part because there have been few large, carefully controlled studies of the question.

The latest research, conducted on 88,751 women, provides some of the strongest evidence yet that eating lots of red meat does indeed contribute to at least one form of cancer.

"Moderate red meat intake is certainly better than large amounts, but it's quite possible that no red meat intake is even better," said Dr. Walter C. Willett, who directed the study at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

Dr. Peter Greenwald of the National Cancer Institute said the study "adds to the evidence of a risk of dietary fat," but he cautioned against interpreting it to mean people should stop eating red meat entirely.

"Meat has important nutrient value," he said. "I would be careful about a recommendation that takes out from our diet a lot of important nutrients. The message should be to cut down, not to cut out."

Colon cancer is the second leading cancer killer, after lung cancer. An estimated 110,000 new U.S. cases will be diagnosed this year.

THE RESEARCH was based on a follow-up between 1980 and 1986 of the health and eating habits of nurses from across the country. During that time, 150 of the women studied got colon cancer.

Although all the participants were women, the researchers said their conclusions probably apply to men.

Dr. David Hurt, a nutritionist with the National Livestock and Meat Board in Chicago, noted that beef is 27 percent leaner and pork is 31 percent leaner than in 1986, when the statistics were gathered.

"I don't see how these numbers can relate to today's situation," he said. "Meat today is not the same as it was then."

The researchers found that women who ate beef, pork or lamb as a main dish every day were 2½ times more likely to get colon cancer than were those who ate it less than once a month.

For those who consumed meat less frequently, the risk was lower. For instance, women who ate meat between once a month and once a week had about 40 percent higher risk than the abstainers. The risk was about 50 percent higher for those who ate meat two to four times a week and 80 percent higher for those who had it five or six times.

Processed meats and liver also were significantly associated with increased risk. However, women who ate skinless chicken every day had only about half as much risk as those who almost never ate chicken.

DIETS HIGH in vegetable fats were not linked with cancer. Neither were whole milk, cheese and ice cream, which are other sources of animal fat.

Many specialists believe that eating too little fiber also contributes to colon cancer, but the study found no strong link between low fiber and cancer. While women in the study who ate relatively little fiber from fruits did have more cancer, this could be explained by their high consumption of meat.

Although some pork producers promote their product as "the other white meat," Willett's study included it in the red meat category.

Willett said his findings should not change the widely recommended eating guidelines of health organizations that generally urge people to cut down on meat and eat more chicken, fish and vegetables.

"But it adds a lot of strength to them," he said. "It provides some of the most direct evidence that there is likely to be a payoff in cancer risk by reducing our consumption of animal fat."

Until now, most of the evidence implicating red meat in colon cancer came from comparisons of people living in different parts of the world. In Western countries, where meat is plentiful, the disease is up to 10 times more common than in many nations in the Far East and developing world.

Busy Santa Claus makes appointments

SEATTLE (AP) — Santa is such a busy man these days his helpers at one downtown department store have resorted to scheduling appointments to see him.

If the wait to see Kris Kringle at Frederick & Nelson is longer than 20 minutes "the Santa Claus System" kicks in, store spokesman Dave Fisher said.

Parents are given a coupon assigning their children a time to sit on the old man's lap.

"If it's 10:30 a.m., you might welcome the chance to do some shopping," Fisher said. "When you return, you show your coupon and get in the right position in line."

Fisher said appointments aren't necessary most of the time, but the wait can be an hour or two on Friday nights and weekends.

One of Santa's red-suited helpers, who gave her name only as Kathryn, said the appointments appeal to people who would rather shop and eat lunch than stand in the rain.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 65% adult and 35% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $200 to $600 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although no motor routes are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 AM Monday - Friday and 7 AM on Saturday and Sunday

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
