HARDING WATCHES FOR THE REACTION TO 'FEELER' IN MESSAGE

ATTITUDE TOWARD TREATY WILL DEPEND ON DEVELOPMENTS.

VERSAILLES PACT MAY BE SENT BACK TO SENATE

Would Eliminate League Covenant and Protect American Interests Throughout.

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
United Press Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—President Harding is watching today for the reaction to the "feeler" put out in his message to congress before deciding whether to seek ratification of the Versailles treaty minus the league of nations covenant.

Word came today from a well informed quarter that if this reaction is favorable, Harding has in mind sending the Versailles treaty back to the senate to ask ratification with reservations which would eliminate the league covenant so far as the United States is concerned and would protect American interest along the lines laid down in the Lodge reservations.

Harding is said to believe that ratification of the Versailles treaty thus modified offers the only way in which the United States can permanently end its peculiar relationship to the allies and the central powers. He views the resolution declaring a state of peace with Germany as a more or less temporary expedient.

But whatever his own views, Harding is unlikely to take action which does not promise to be supported by the senate. If members of that body show an irreconcilable antagonism in the treaty even with the covenant deleted, Harding probably will abandon further thought of securing ratification.

The sections of his message which indicated the possibility of thus ratifying the treaty were the results of long and earnest discussion with Secretary Hughes who has already experienced first hand the practical difficulties arising out of failure to join in the pact of Versailles.

Hughes, who is understood to have support of Secretary Hoover, opposes complete rejection of the Versailles treaty. Two of the principal reasons said to have been advanced against rejection are:

That the United States must participate actively in the settlement of German reparations, a question which is preventing the world resuming its normal course economically.

That participation in the Versailles treaty is the way to secure complete protection of American rights and interests in questions growing out of the war; that these interests are confirmed by the treaty and that it is unwise to relinquish this confirmation.

University Student Missed From School On Her Way Home

CHICAGO, April 13.—Caryl Pattison, pretty University of Illinois co-ed of Peoria Illinois, was on her way home today after several days of bizarre adventure on the North Shore.

The girl disappeared from her home in Peoria and since then has wandered about the north shore here. She worked for a week as a maid in one home, was picked up unconscious on a road and then was found sleeping on the front porch of a Waukegan resident.

Caryl, who left for Peoria with her father, Harry Pattison, wealthy real estate dealer, and mother, said she had a good time.

She refused to explain why she had left home.

SAYS IN SHORT PERIOD TURMOIL AND INDUSTRIAL WARFARE WILL BE RAGING

By United Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 13.—Warning that "within a short period of time, turmoil and industrial warfare will be rampant," William Dobson, secretary of the Bricklayers', Masons' and Plasterers' International Union of America, today wired Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, a protest against the proposal of employers to force a reduction in wages.

"We regret to say, and it is beyond our understanding, that our employers, universally, are joining wage reduction movements that wantonly and outrageously violate these splendid and peaceable relations of so many years standing," the message said. "Further, such employers are now resorting to forcible measures and take the reduction or leave it, is now their slogan."

In his telegram, Dobson quotes a statement by Secretary Davis in which he declares there should be a law to compel both labor and employers to live up to their agreements and expresses approval of this policy. He points out that arbitrations has always been the policy of his union and that as a result there has not been an official strike in 20 years.

REMOVE DRILLING RESTRICTIONS IN OKLA. AND KANSAS

TULSA, OKLA., April 13.—Drilling restrictions in the oil fields of Oklahoma and Kansas which have been in effect since February 17 were removed yesterday by action of the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Producers' association in accepting the report of its committee on conservation and conciliation in which the committee outlined what has been accomplished and gave its reasons for ceasing to function.

FOUR ARE KILLED AND FOUR INJURED

COVINGTON, KY., April 13.—Four persons were killed, four seriously injured and two others badly hurt in a collision of an automobile and a Chesapeake and Ohio railroad engine at a grade crossing here early today.

CURETON DECLARES DECISION IS ONLY A LEGAL SKIRMISH

AUSTIN, TEXAS, April 13.—The United States supreme court's decision favoring Oklahoma in the Red river Texas-Oklahoma boundary dispute ends only the first legal skirmish in the case, Attorney General Cureton declared here today.

Cureton said the court decided only that the south side of the river is the legal boundary. Should the court hold that the south bank is at the water's edge at low water stage, Texas wins the suit, he continued.

The big battle, he said, will be waged around this issue. He announced he will leave for Washington, taking Assistant Attorney General Taylor along, and remain there indefinitely in connection with the case and others.

LUMBERMEN SEE A BUILDING REVIVAL

Say Business Will Be Hitting on All Four Within Sixty or Ninety Days.

HOUSTON, April 13.—The lumber business will be hitting on all four—by fours—within the next sixty or ninety days.

That is the belief of Texas lumbermen meeting here today. Nearly 1,000 men are attending the annual convention of the Lumbermen's Association of Texas.

Building in cities is already reviving, according to dealers and when the farmer harvests his summer crops, building will increase in farming districts in smaller towns.

Hard times kept the farmer and the small town man from building last year, H. M. Galbraith, Amarillo said.

"Country lumber dealers are looking for increased activity when the farmer has realized on his new crop," Galbraith said.

Mexico has become a vast field for lumber, according to E. V. Folsom, sales manager of the Lutcher & Moore Lumber Company, Orange, Texas.

"We're exporting a great amount of lumber to Mexico now and its on the increase," he said.

DECLARE CONDITIONS IN THE STATE "MIGHT BE WORSE"

HOUSTON, April 13.—The conditions throughout the state are not all that could be wished for, but that "they might be worse" was the concensus of opinion expressed in talks before the thirty-fifth annual convention of the Lumbermen's Association of Texas in convention today. Reports from members from Uvalde, San Angelo, Cameron, Schulenberg and Taylor all indicated that a great building era is pending.

The question of trade-making lumber was favored by a number of speakers who said that a product that a man will put his name on is one he is proud of and will stand back of. Others disagreed with this and said that they did not want such lumber in their yards.

A proposal that the lumbermen's association add a traffic department for the convenience of its members resulted in the passage of a motion to have a committee appointed to look into that feature.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF SUPREME COUNCIL EARLY NEXT MONTH

By Associated Press.

PARIS, April 13.—Decisions of the utmost importance regarding Germany will be sought by the supreme allied council at a conference to be held probably in Paris, early in May. This conference is regarded by France as decisive, it is declared today.

There is much speculation in this city, whether President Harding's policies as outlined before congress yesterday, do not foreshadow the presence of a United States representative.

Marshal Foch, General Weygand and other military authorities have been holding a series of conferences at which they have discussed action which the supreme council may eventually decide upon.

PRISON INVESTIGATION IS RESUMED BY COMMITTEE

HOUSTON, April 13.—The special legislative prison investigation committee continued work here today when one sub-committee visited the Darrington, Ramsey, Retrieve, Jackson and Clements prison farms near here and the other part of the committee conferred with J. Herring, chairman of the prison system.

Food and sanitary conditions were investigated by the committee today. Charges of cruelties on farms have already been inquired into.

Prison Commissioners W. G. Pryor, Sam D. W. Low and W. R. Dulaney, manager of the Richmond State, Oil Mill, were here to confer with the committee.

Sam Low last night announced he had resigned his position effective May 1 because he was "out of accord" with Governor Neff's prison policies.

CONGRESS BUCKLES DOWN TO THE WORK MESSAGE OUTLINES

TARIFF AND TAXATION PROGRAM IS TACKLED IN BOTH BRANCHES.

LUMP EMERGENCY TARIFF AND ANTI-DUMPING BILLS

Senate Finance Committee Organizes for Sales Tax and Tax Reform Hearings.

By CLARENCE DUBOSE
United Press Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Congress buckled down today to the big job cut out for it in President Harding's message.

Tariff and taxation program preliminaries were tackled in both branches.

While the house ways and means committee was putting the enlarged emergency tariff bill in form, for passage tomorow or Friday, the senate finance committee organized for sales tax and tax reform hearings, which Senator Penrose, chairman, said would start soon.

Republican leaders, conferring after Harding's message, decided to lump the emergency tariff and anti-dumping bills into one measure and touch it off with an angle of foreign exchange adjustment.

This made necessary further committee action today and postponed for one or two days the passage of the bill by the house.

"However, time will be saved in the long run," said Representative Young, North Dakota, in charge of the emergency measure.

"Under this plan, we will have both the emergency tariff and anti-dumping measures out of the house and up in the senate by Friday at the latest."

The Young bill, reported today in accordance with the new program is made up of the old Fordney emergency tariff bill with rates unchanged, the anti-dumping bill, and contains an exchange fixing clause.

Italy, Germany, Austria and the Central European and Balkan states will be affected by this new feature. Because of exchange disparities, tariff duties on imports from those countries to the United States would be increased from three to five times by this plan.

It was decided today to allow general debate on the Young bill Thursday and pass it Firday, under a five-minute rule.

Democrats caucused today to discuss their emergency tariff program. It was admitted the opposition will not be strong enough to block the progress of republicans.

The house was in session only a few minutes today.

Blonde Reappears To Care for Body Of Man Murdered

ST. LOUIS, April 13.—The "baby blonde" wanted in the McNamara murder, casually walked into the room in which the coroner's inquest was being held today and ended the three day search by police and newspaper men.

ST. LOUIS, April 13.—The "baby blonde" who shared the apartment of "Micky Mack" McNamara, and who disappeared following the notorious safe blower's murder here Monday, coolly reappeared to the public last night and then as mysteriously disappeared again.

She nonchalantly walked into the city morgue and directed the attendant there to have McNamara's body removed to an undertaking establishment. She stood by and watched her orders being obeyed. Weeping, she accompanied the body to the place, gave directions for its care—and disappeared.

The police were nonplused at her daring. They, with the aid of newspaper men, are combing the city in an effort to locate her. Her capture is predicted hourly.

APPEAL TO THE TREASURY AND RESERVE BOARD FOR RELIEF FOR WEST TEXAS

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Several Texas representatives have appealed to the treasury and federal reserve board for relief for the range owners of their section in the form of federal loans.

Representative Hudspeth, democrat, said today the board had been asked to transfer funds to the Dallas reserve bank to meet demands for loans from its member banks financing livestock producers. Representative Sumners said that while no program had been worked out as yet, he believed that both the treasury and reserve board were desirous of helping.

The range owners require sufficient funds to enable them to carry their livestock until market conditions are more favorable, according to Mr. Hudspeth, who declared that loans to the cattle growers of his state meant the salvation of the industry.

UNLUCKY "THIRTEENTH" FOR TWO BABIES AND TWO MEN SAME NAME

KANSAS CITY, MO., April 13.—April "thirteen" was an unlucky day for two Kansas City babies.

Also unlucky for two men, of the same name, Carpenter.

At the general hospital Charles Carpenter, information clerk, was trying to solve one of the strangest cases of child abandonment ever recorded in his mystery book.

Out in Kansas City's fashionable "South Side" Dr. Mont Carpenter was trying to fathom the latest method of burglarizing a home.

Robbers left a four weeks old baby in Dr. Carpenter's home last night in exchange for several hundred dollars in jewelry and wearing apparel.

The doctor said he would "gladly part with the jewelry if the mother would only call for her baby."

GONZALES WILL JOIN FELIX DIAZ IN REVOLT

EL PASO, April 13.—General Pablo Gonzales, former Carrancista, now at Laredo, Texas, will join General Felix Diaz, who is in exile in New Orleans, in a revolt against President Obregon of Mexico, according to La Patria, a local Spanish newspaper.

WELL AT FAWLK IS REPORTED FLOWING AT 500 BARREL RATE

TEST OF LONG, HINES ET AL ATTRACTS MUCH ATTENTION TO NEW DISTRICT.

IS FIRST DEEP WELL IN MIDST OF SHALLOW FIELD

Texhoma Well in Archer Making Better Than 300 Barrels After Being Cleaned Out.

A report that the well of Hines, Long et al, on the Powell tract near Fowlkes station was flowing at the rate of 500 barrels was received in Wichita Falls Wednesday morning, and caused renewed interest in that section.

The well was reported as showing good when it reached the sand several weeks ago, and was estimated at that time at 200 barrels. A number of Wichitans interested in the test went to the scene Wednesday morning and had not returned at 3 p. m. There is considerable shallow production in that vicinity, but no deep production within a considerable radius.

The Texhoma well on the Gose ranch in Archer county has nearly doubled its production after being cleaned out, and is now making about 300 barrels a day, according to reports at the offices of the company here.

PEACE RESOLUTION OF SENATOR KNOX IS BEFORE THE SENATE

INTRODUCED AND AT ONCE REFERRED TO FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE.

SIMPLE DECLARATION AS SUGGESTED BY PRESIDENT

May Defer Introduction in House Until After Action Is Taken by the Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Senator Knox, Pennsylvania, today introduced a resolution ending the state of war with Germany.

Knox's resolution was referred to the foreign relations committee.

It was in the "simple declaratory form" which President Harding in his message yesterday said he would approve.

The text of the resolution follows:

"That the joint resolution of congress passed April 6, 1917, declaring a state of war to exist between the Imperial German government and the government and people of the United States and making provisions to prosecute the same, be, and the same is hereby repealed, and said state of war is hereby declared at an end, provided, however, that all property of the imperial German government or its successor or successors and of all German nationals which was, on April 6, 1917, in or has since that date come into the possession or under control of the government of the United States or any of its officers, agents or employes, from any source or by any agency whatsoever, shall be retained by the United States, and no disposition thereof made except as shall have been heretofore or specifically hereafter be provided by congress, until such time as the German government has, by treaty with the United States, ratification whereof is to be made and with the advice and consent of the senate, made suitable provisions for the satisfaction of all claims against the German government of all persons, wheresoever dominated, who owe permanent allegiance to the United States, and who have suffered, through the acts of the German governments or its agents since July 31, 1914, loss, damage or injury to their persons or property directly or indirectly, whether through the ownership of shares of stock in German, American or other corporations, or in consequences of hostilities or any operations of war or otherwise, and also provisions granting to persons owing permanent allegiance to the United States, most favorable treatment, whether the same be national or otherwise, in all matters affecting residence, business, profession, trade, navigation, commerce and industrial property rights and confirming to the United States all fines, forfeitures, penalties and seizures imposed or made by the United States during the war, which therein respect to the property of the German government or German nationals and in waiving any and all pecuniary claims based on events which occurred at any time before the coming into force of such treaty, any existing treaty between the United States to the contrary notwithstanding.

Section 2—That until by treaty or act or joint resolution of congress, it shall be determined otherwise the United States, although, it has not ratified the treaty of Versailles, reserves all of the rights, powers, claims, privileges, indemnities, reparations or advantages to which it and its nationals have become entitled including the right to enforce the same under the terms of the armistice signed November 11, 1918, or any extensions or modifications thereof or which under the treaty of Versailles have been stipulated for its benefit or to which it is entitled as one of the principal allied and associated powers.

"Section 3—That the joint resolution of congress approved December 7, 1917, declaring that a state of war exists between the imperial and royal Austro-Hungarian governments and the government and the people of the United States, and making provisions to prosecute the same," be and the same is hereby, repealed, and said state of war is hereby declared at an end."

The foreign relations committee will meet within a few days to take up the resolution, Senator Lodge said. Introduction of the resolution in the house may be deferred until after the senate has acted, it was indicated.

LAUNCH FIGHT AGAINST PROPOSED COLOMBIAN TREATY

WASHINGTON, April 13—Launching the fight against the $25,000,000 Colombian treaty, Senator Kellogg, republican, Minnesota, told the senate today that ratification of the pact would "place a stain upon the name and fame of Theodore Roosevelt and would acknowledge that the United States wronged Colombia, violated her rights and are now willing to make reparations therefor."

Senator Kellogg, declaring that examination of documents involved had convinced him that the United States did not instigate the Panaman revolution, said he was concerned "lest we go on record by the pusillanimous act of this ratification and thereby cast a shadow on the brightest page of the history of American accomplishments." Title of the United States to the Panama canal, he said, is "good in law and morals." Yet, after a lapse of nearly twenty years, he added, "we are asked to make reparation to Colombia for taking Panama. If the treaty now submitted is a good one, Senator Kellogg continued, "it was a good treaty eight years ago when negotiated by the democratic administration."

BORAH STARTS MOVEMENT LOOKING TO DISARMAMENT

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The first move in the present congress looking to disarmament came today with the introduction by Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, of his resolution authorizing the president to open negotiations with Great Britain and Japan looking to a reduction in future naval building by those countries and the United States.

The resolutions are similar to those introduced by Senator Borah at the last session, which failed of action by the senate.

TRIPLE ALLIANCE STRIKE IS CALLED FOR FRIDAY NIGHT

DECISION FOLLOWS INABILITY OF LEADERS TO REACH AGREEMENT.

NEARLY FOUR MILLION WORKERS WILL BE IDLE

Decision of Transport Workers and Railway Men Was Said to Be Unanimous.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, April 13.—The miners, according to the Evening Standard today, have decided there can be no renewal of the negotiations for a strike settlement even if the invitation emanates from the government or the labor leaders.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, April 13.—Great Britain's "triple alliance of labor" will call its members from their posts at 10 o'clock Friday night, it was announced here this morning at 11 o'clock. This decision followed the inability of the national miners' federation to reach an agreement with the mine owners and the government for the settlement of the miners' strike, which began April 1.

The "tripic alliance" is made up of the national miners' federation having a membership of 500,000, the national union of railwaymen, with 200,000 members, and the national federation of transport workers, which numbers as its members a large number of unions which have a membership of close to 500,000. It has been estimated that if the "alliance" should call a strike there would be nearly 4,000,000 persons idle in England as a result.

The decision to strike was reached unanimously by the transport workers and railwaymen, J. H. Thomas, general secretary of the railwaymen's union said after this morning's meeting.

"The walkout, he declared, 'will take place at 10 o'clock Friday night. Many other unions have sent applications to join the strike, and these are being considered."

Other labor organizations may become involved in the controversy between the government and the "triple alliance." The Daily Mail declared today that the executive committee of the electrical trades union resolved last night to support the "triple alliance." An electricians strike would paralyze street car traffic and public lighting companies.

All London newspapers today dwelt on the serious injury done the country by continued uncertainty over the industrial situation. The London Times and the Morning Post pointed out it was not the actual amount of the wages at present in distute, but the question of national control of the profits of industries which was at stake.

The Morning Post emphasized the alleged fact that "hidden and subversive forces were behind the whole movement," and declared:

"The miners demands must be resisted at all costs."

"The situation," says the Daily Telegraph, "is too confused to permit of predictions, and members of the 'triple alliance' themselves probably have no clear idea as to what must be done. • • • It is a desperate situation. All citizens should prepare for the worst." The London Times and other papers believed the national union of railwaymen and the national federation of transport workers "were embarrassed at the obstinacy" of the miners.

The Daily Herald, organ of labor, said the government had "banged and bolted the door upon all hope of an honorable settlement, and fiercely attacked Mr. Lloyd-George for "tricking the miners into delay and definitely casting his lot with the bosses." The newspaper called upon the "triple alliance" to "stand pat."

The government today issued the following statement bearing upon the labor situation:

"In the event of the threatened extension of the stoppage of work the government wishes to make it clear that it will use the fullest powers of the state to protect the workers who remain at work at any services essential to the life of the community.

"In any settlement which may be reached the government will give its support in assuring that the position of such workers shall not be prejudiced as compared with their position before the stoppage."

Though the industrial sky was still dark today, some observers found reassurance in the fact that the days to intervene before the strike becomes effective leaves opportunities for conference.

The postponement of the triple alliance sympathetic strike yesterday created an acute situation within the labor camp. It is understood that the miners with some show of feeling over this seeming indication of weakness made a peremptory demand upon their partners in the alliance this morning that they "lay their cards on the table" and declare finally whether they intend to strike, and if so, when.

SITUATION ONE OF GREAT AND INCREASING GRAVITY

By Associated Press.

LONDON, April 13.—Speaking of the triple alliance strike announcement, Mr. Lloyd George, the prime minister, stated in the house of commons today that the situation thus created was "of great and increasing gravity," but he still hoped that wiser counsel might prevail.

Meanwhile, added the premier, the government was taking all possible steps to meet the emergency.

Mr. Lloyd George said the government deeply deplored the decision of the triple alliance. He emphatically doubted, he continued, whether a discussion of the question in the house today would advance the objective all had in mind.

This last statement was greeted with cheers, and both John R. Clynes, chairman of the parliamentary labor board, and former Premier Asquith concurred in the opinion that debate would be unwise.

MENTIONED FOR INTERNAL REVENUE COMMISSIONER

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Edward Clifford of Chicago and Joseph H. McDermott of Morgantown, W. Va., are understood to be the men most prominently under consideration by President Harding for appointment as commissioner of internal revenue. P. A. Baker, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, conferred today with the president, but he denied that the commissionership was discussed.

SECRETARY OF LABOR SAYS MIDDLEMEN ARE NOW LEVYING A TOLL

AMOUNTS TO 21 PER CENT ON FOODS AND MOST OF NECESSITIES USED IN U. S.

PRICE DATA COLLECTED BY THE DEPARTMENT

Consumer Is Paying at a Level of About 58 Per Cent Above the 1913 Prices.

By RALPH E. COUCH
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Middlemen now are levying a toll of 21 per cent on the value of all foods and most necessities used throughout the entire United States, according to price data in possession of Secretary of Labor Davis today.

Facts collected by Davis' department emphasize the exposure made by President Harding in his message to congress that drops in prices to consumers were slower than drops in prices of basic materials. Davis is ready to lay his information before congress if an investigation is undertaken as requested by the president.

Davis data shows that the consumer is paying at a level of about 58 per cent above the 1913 prices for such things as meats, eggs, butter, coffee, tea, lard, flour, milk and cheese. The wholesale dealer is paying about 50 per cent above the 1913 level for these things. The farmer gets an average but 29 per cent higher than in 1913.

Reconsignments, high freight rates and the open price system of price fixing are responsible for the discrepancy between the prices paid by the consumer and those received by the producer, according to a study of the problem made for Harding by the federal trade commission. Reconsignment is the practice of re-selling food and other commodities in the railroad car before they are unloaded at the point to which billed. In one instance the trade commission found that a car of coal was resold twelve times between the mine and the wholesaler. Each seller boosted the price to make a profit.

Court Invited to Perform Acrobatic Stunt in the Case

NEW YORK, April 13.—Counsel for the defense in W. E. D. Stokes divorce suit today invited the dignified court to straddle from an extension roof on the fourth floor of an apartment house to a window ledge and hang down while trying to peer into the windows of a third floor apartment.

This, according to the defense, is the posture which a person would have to assume to have seen what witnesses for the plaintiff testified to—that they observed Mrs. Stokes in extreme negligee, combing her hair in the apartment of Edgar T. Wallace, one of the co-respondents. Even then the defense contended, it would have been impossible to have seen anyone in the spot designated by the witnesses.

Supreme Justice Finch took the invitation "under advisement" but intimated he would not attempt the acrobatic stunt unless absolutely necessary.

SPLINTERS FROM BONE OF MOTHER TRANSPLANTED TO THE LEG OF INFANT

NEWARK, N. J., April 16.—Splinters from the shin bone of a mother were transplanted yesterday in the leg of an infant born without the fibula in the lower legs, by surgeons of the Newark Memorial hospital. The operation took two hours.

A generation ago, doctors said, such an operation was unheard of and the child probably would have had to go through life without the use of the legs. The child operated on will most likely have the full use of its limbs, it was said.

ABANDON HOPE FOR RESCUE OF 19 MEN OF COLONEL BOWIE

PORT ARTHUR, TEXAS, April 13.—Hope for the rescue of 19 men of the crew of the steamship Colonel Bowie, yesterday reported as unaccounted for, was practically abandoned at the office of the Gulf Export and Transfer company on receipt of a radio message early this morning saying that it was impossible to send rescue ships because no deck officers were rescued who could give the location of the ship when it sank.

The ship when it cleared Port Arthur bound for Tampico on April 6.

The three men of the crew saved by the Norwegian steamer Cisi are D. C. J. Harris, first assistant engineer, Beaumont; C. Newman, fireman, Chicago; and Sam Lorocca, oiler, Beaumont.

GRAHAM EXCURSION SET FOR APRIL 22, PLANS TAKING FORM

ARCHER CITY, OLNEY AND NEWCASTLE TO BE INVITED TO TAKE PART IN TRIP.

CHANGE IN DATE IS MADE OWING TO TEMPLAR MEETING

Committee Going to Graham Thursday to Make Plans for Events at That End.

April 22 will be the date of the Graham excursion over the Wichita Falls & Southern, it was decided Wednesday morning at a meeting of the chamber of commerce committee. The change was made because the Grand Commanders of the Knights Templar will be in session here on April 21, and a threatrical attraction under auspices of the American legion is also set for that date.

The committee discussed details for the event and attended to numerous minor details.

Archer City, Olney and Newcastle will be invited to participate in the excursion, and are expected to add several carloads to the throng that pulls into Graham about noon on April 22.

A committee consisting of R. E. Penick, J. W. Gutzman and J. W. Chatham Jr. will go to Graham Thursday to make arrangements at that end of the line. At Wednesday morning's meeting the advisability of taking the Wichita Falls and Shreveport teams on the trip, and having the scheduled game there instead of in Wichita Falls, was discussed, and it was decided to have this added feature if arrangements can be made. It is believed that the game at Graham would draw excellently, and Graham is said to have a large and well equipped park.

Souvenirs are to be provided for all who go. The leading clubs of the city will be asked to provide cars for their respective memberships, in addition to the cars for the general public.

A round trip rate of $1.25 will apply for the trip, this amount covering all expenses.

R. E. Shepherd was appointed train captain, and he will be allowed to choose his own lieutenants. Special committees were named as follows:

Traffic—J. W. Chatham Jr., C. J. Fontaine, R. J. Sullivan.

Program—R. E. Penick, G. W. Gutzman, J. W. Chatham Jr.

Passenger committee—J. W. Thomas, Guy Rogers, A. H. Britain, A. A. Spencer, L. H. Roberts, W. J. Daugherty, M. W. Hoover, C. O. Fritz.

Finance—John W. Thomas, R. A. Stayton, C. F. Carter, J. W. Chatham Jr.

Famous Blind Ox Still Being Led to Water by Gander

ABILENE, TEXAS, April 13.—A copy of the Greensboro (Ala.) Watchman received here declares the famous blind ox which was led to water daily by a gander is not dead, but still alive and enjoying the friendship of his feathered friend. The newspaper asserts the ox and the gander are still on the job at the logging camp of Mr. Holcroft, on Warrior's river, and reports of the ox's death are erroneous.

NO GENERAL AMNESTY FOR POLITICAL PRISONERS UNTIL PEACE HAS BEEN DECLARED

WASHINGTON, April 13.—President Harding told a delegation which called on him today to urge the release of Eugene V. Debs and all other prisoners convicted under the war-time espionage act that he would take no action looking to general amnesty for such prisoners until a state of peace had been declared.

The Adventure of the Dancing Man

By A. CONAN DOYLE

Copyright, 1921, by Harper & Bros. Published by special arrangement with The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The story thus far:

Holmes shows Watson some drawings of tiny dancing men, like those a child would make, which a Mr. Hilton Cubitt of Riding Thorpe Manor has brought him. Cubitt says they are frightening his wife. He tells his story. He is a member of an old and proud family, whose honor he is anxious to uphold. A year before he had married Elsie Patrick, an American young woman, about whose past he knew nothing, but who asked him not to question her as it was disagreeable, though not dishonorable. They were very happy and he stuck to his promise not to allude to her past. About a month before this she had received a letter from America, which she had burned after she had read it and turned deadly white. A week before he had found a line of dancing men chalked on the window sill. On seeing them his wife had fainted. Mr. Cubitt said he would spend his last copper to shield his wife from any danger threatening her.

Holmes told Cubitt to return home but to bring him any fresh evidence which might come. A few days later Cubitt came to Holmes. He had found a crop of dancing men on the door of the tool house and later under a pebble on a slip of paper on the sun-dial. One night he kept vigil with his pistol by a window which commanded the tool house. His wife came to urge him to go to bed and just then a figure crept up to the tool house door. He tried to rush out but by the time he had thrown off his wife's restraining arms, the man had escaped, leaving more dancing men. Cubitt rubbed them off, but in the morning there were five different ones in another panel of the door. He had brought Holmes copies of them all.

PART THREE.

Sherlock Holmes preserved his calm professional manner until our visitor had left us, although it was easy for me, who knew him so well, to see that he was profoundly excited. The moment that Hilton Cubitt's broad back had disappeared through the door my comrade rushed to the table, laid out all the slips of paper containing dancing men in front of him, and threw himself into an intricate and elaborate calculation. For two hours I watched him as he covered sheet after sheet of paper with figures and letters, so completely absorbed in his task that he had evidently forgotten my presence. Sometimes he was making progress and whistled and sang at his work; sometimes he was puzzled, and would sit for long spells with a furrowed brow and vacant eye. Finally he sprang from his chair with a cry of satisfaction, and walked up and down the room rubbing his hands together. Then he wrote a long telegram upon a cable form. "If my answer to this is as I hope, you will have a pretty case to add to your collection, Watson," said he. "I expect to go down to Norfolk tomorrow, and to take our friend some very definite news as to the secret of his annoyance."

I confess that I was filled with curiosity, but I was aware that Holmes liked to make his disclosures at his own time and in his own way, so I waited until it should suit him to take me into his confidence.

But there was a delay in that answering telegram, and two days of impatience followed, during which Holmes pricked up his ears at every ring of the bell. On the evening of the second there came a letter from Hilton Cubitt. All was quiet with him, save that a long inscription had appeared that morning upon the pedestal of the sun dial. He inclosed a copy of it, which is here reproduced.

Holmes bent over this grotesque frieze for some minutes, and then suddenly sprang to his feet with an exclamation of surprise and dismay. His face was haggard with anxiety.

"We have let this affair go far enough," said he. "Is there a train to North Walsham tonight?"

I turned up the time table. The last had just gone.

"Then we shall have breakfast early and take the very first train in the morning," said Holmes. "Our presence is most urgently needed. Ah! here is our expected cablegram. One moment, Mrs. Hudson, there may be an answer. No, that is quite as I expected. This message makes it even more essential that we should not lose an hour in letting Hilton Cubitt know how matters stand, for it is a singular and dangerous web in which our simple Norfolk squire is entangled."

So, indeed, it proved, and as I come to the dark conclusion of a story which had seemed to me to be only childish and bizarre, I experience once again the dismay and horror with which I was filled. Would that I had some brighter ending to communicate to my readers, but these are the chronicles of fact, and I must follow to their dark crisis the strange chain of events which for some days made Riding Thorpe manor a household word through the length and breadth of England.

We had hardly alighted at North Walsham, and mentioned the name of our destination, when the station-master hurried toward us. "I suppose that you are the detectives from London?" said he.

A look of annoyance passed over Holmes' face.

"What makes you think such a thing?"

"Because Inspector Martin from Norfolk expected detectives on the train which has just passed through. But maybe you are the surgeons. She's not dead or wasn't by last accounts. You may be in time to save her yet—though it be for the gallows."

Holmes' brow was dark with anxiety.

"We are going to Riding Thorpe manor," said he, "but we have heard nothing of what has passed there."

"It's a terrible business," said the station master. "They are shot, both Mr. Hilton Cubitt and his wife. She shot him and then herself—so the servants say. He's dead and her life is despaired of. Dear, dear, one of the oldest families in the county of Norfolk, and one of the most honored."

Without a word Holmes hurried to a carriage, and during the long seven miles drive he never opened his mouth. Seldom have I seen him so utterly despondent. He had been uneasy during all our journey from town, and I had observed that he had turned over the morning papers with anxious attention, but now this sudden realization of his worst fears left him in a blank melancholy. He leaned back in his seat, lost in gloomy speculation. Yet there was much around to interest us, for we were passing through as singular a countryside as any in England, where a few scattered cottages represented the population of today, while on every hand enormous square-towered churches bristled up from the flat, green landscape and told of the glory and prosperity of old East Anglia. At last the violet rim of the German ocean appeared over the green edge of the Norfolk coast, and the driver pointed with his whip to two old brick and timber gables which projected from a grove of trees. "That's Riding Thorpe manor," said he.

As we drove up to the porticoed front door, I observed in front of it, beside the tennis lawn, the black toolhouse and the pedestalled sun dial with which we had such strange associations. A dapper little man, with a quick alert manner and a waxed moustache, has just descended from a high dog cart. He introduced himself as Inspector Martin of the Norfolk constabulary, and he was considerably astonished when he heard the name of my companion.

"Why, Mr. Holmes, the crime was only committed at 3 this morning. How could you hear of it in London and get to the spot as soon as I?"

"I anticipated it. I came in the hope of preventing it."

"Then you must have important evidence, of which we are ignorant, for they were said to be a most united couple."

"I have only the evidence of the dancing men," said Holmes. "I will explain the matter to you later. Meanwhile, since it is too late to prevent this tragedy, I am very anxious that I should use the knowledge which I possess in order to insure that justice be done. Will you associate me in your investigation, or will you prefer that I should act independently?"

"I should be proud to feel that we were acting together, Mr. Holmes," said the inspector, earnestly.

"In that case I should be glad to hear the evidence and to examine the premises without an instant of unnecessary delay."

Inspector Martin had the good sense to allow my friend to do things in his own fashion, and contenteff himself with carefully noting the results. The local surgeon, an old, white-haired man, had just come down from Mrs. Hilton's room, and he reported that her injuries were serious, but not necessarily fatal. The bullet had passed through the front of her brain, and it would probably be some time before she could regain consciousness. On the question of whether she had been shot or had shot herself, he would not venture to express any decided opinion. Certainly the bullet had been discharged at very close quarters. There was only the one pistol found in the room, two barrels of which had been emptied. Mr. Hilton Cubitt had been shot through the heart. It was equally conceivable that he had shot her and then himself, or that she had been the criminal, for the revolver lay upon the floor midway between them.

"Has he been moved?" asked Holmes.

"We have moved nothing except the lady. We could not leave her lying wounded upon the floor."

"How long have you been here, doctor?"

"Since 4 o'clock."

"Anyone else?"

"Yes, the constable here."

"And you have touched nothing?"

"Nothing."

"You have acted with great discretion. Who sent for you?"

"The housemaid, Saunders."

"Was it she who gave the alarm?"

"She and Mrs. King, the cook."

"Where are they now?"

"In the kitchen, I believe."

"Then I think we had better hear their story at once."

The old hall, oak panelled and high-windowed, had been turned into a court of investigation. Holmes sat in a great old-fashioned chair, his inexorable eyes gleaming out of his haggard face. I could read in them a set purpose to devote his life to this quest until the client whom he had failed to save should at last be avenged. The trim Inspector Martin, the old, gray-headed country doctor, myself, and a stolid village policeman made up the rest of that strange company.

NOT ENOUGH OF THE "FIFTIETH BOY" TO GO AROUND, SAYS CRANE

"Do you have this kind of a boy in your house?" says Dr. Frank Crane in the March Physical Culture. "If not, don't complain. There are not enough of them to go around."

According to Dr. Crane—

"About one boy in fifty will remain after the feast and of his own accord offer to help clear the things up or to wash the dishes.

"There are forty-nine boys who are seeking jobs; the job seeks the Fiftieth Boy.

"The Fiftieth Boy makes glad the heart of his parents.

"The Fiftieth Boy smoothes the wrinkles out of his teacher's forehead, and takes the worry out of her mind.

"All the grouches and sour-faces brighten when they see the Fiftieth Boy coming, for he is brave and cheery.

"The forty-nine 'didn't think,' the Fiftieth Boy thinks.

"The Fiftieth Boy makes a confident of his mother and a pal of his father.

"He does not lie, steal nor tattle, because he does not like to.

"When he sees a banana peel on the sidewalk, where it is liable to cause someone to slip and fall, or a piece of glass in the road where it may puncture a tire, he picks it up. The forty-nine think it's none of their business.

"The Fiftieth Boy is a good sport. He does not whine when he loses. He does not sulk when another wins the prize. He does not cry when he is hurt.

"He is respectful to all women and girls.

"He is not afraid to do right nor ashamed to be decent.

"He looks you straight in the eye.

"He tells the truth, whether the consequences to him are unpleasant or not.

"He is no prig nor a sissy, but he stands up straight and honest.

"Forty-seven out of the forty-nine like him.

"He is as pleasant toward his own sister as toward the sister of the other fellows.

"He is not sorry for himself.

"He works as hard as he plays.

"Everybody is glad to see him."

BUSINESS WOMEN GET "INSIDE INFORMATION" ON LAWMAKING

The Business Women's club members enjoyed and profited by one of the best talks they have heard this year when R. Frank Johnson, county representative, informed them on "lawmaking" Tuesday evening at the regular supper meeting in the Y. W. C. A. club room.

Mr. Johnson took up the bill from its inception in the mind of the author, and gave a detailed and thoroughly interesting account of its journty to the statutes of the commonwealth—or the scrap heap. The talk was lightened, with none of its accuracy destroyed, by amusing sidelights on the various processes through which all bills pass, and the special juggling to which some are subjected by the lawmakers. "When the lawyers get to fighting over them," he said in the latter connection, "the rest of us plain citizens just give 'em the floor."

The talk was thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated as was evidenced by the applause.

To "Treat" Girl Reserves.

In a short business session preceding Mr. Johnson's address, the club members spoke most appreciatively of the assistance given by the twenty-two Girl Reserves who acted as waitresses at the recent banquet, and it was decided to "treat" them, as a more concrete evidence of the appreciation. A voluntary contribution was made and the proceeds turned over to Miss Hood, in charge of the Girl Reserves, with the request that she take the girls who assisted to the movies and the cream parlor one day this week. Miss Hood very kindly consented.

Miss Adah Anderson, chairman of the social committee, made several announcements concerning the handkerchief garden party which is to be given early in May. The High School Girl Reserves' five-piece orchestra has consented to furnish music for the party, she said, and a local men's quartet will sing during the evening. A number of kerchiefs have been promised for the handkerchief sale, notably one from Governor Pat Neff.

My shirt was not sticking to me when I woke up, and when I went down after letting Jubilee down nobody was up yet and I milked the cow and strained the milk before they got up. And when I was eating breakfast nobody said anything to me so I knew Missis Deglun did not come last night after me and Jubilee went to bed, and I was glad of it.

When I had et I went out to the barn because I had thought up something to do with my tire, and Banty and Peanuts and the Lost Bag of Tripe clumb in through the manure hole while I was taking the little window out of the front of the barn, and they all wanted to know what I was going to do and I said if they would keep their faces shut they would find out.

I cut my tire in two so that it was just one long piece of rubber, and I got the hammer and nails and nailed the ends to each side of the window, and then I asted them if they knowed where there was a big rock. Banty said he did, and he clumb out the manure hole and went and got a rock as big as Annabell Lee's bean, and then I bet them I could shoot it half as far as our house. They betted that I couldn't, so I put it in the middle of the tire and we all got hold of it and pulled it back half ways cross the barn. Then I counted three and we all let go, and we all run to the window to see how far it would go.

It went across the yard and hit the kitchen window and busted out the glass and everything and mother screamed, and Banty and Peanuts and the Lost Bag of Tripe clumb out of the manure hole and skun out, and I waited a minute and I clumb out and skun out too. It is always better for a fella that has chunked a rock as big as that one through a window to go away till his mother gets over being excited. But I did not get my lessons very good.

I wanted to go out to the back of the poorhouse when school was out, but I thought I had better go home, and Peanuts and Banty and the Lost Bag of Tripe would not go with me so I had to go alone. When me and Jubilee got home my mother took me by the chine and looked at me and asted me if I reelized that I might of killed her, and I said I did not mean to, and then she said that my grandfather had bought another sash and put it in and for me to not say anything to my father about it. My mother is not very brite.

I played with Annabell Lee till it was time to milk the cow and her dotter, and then my mother put a whole apple pie by my plate and said for me not to give anyone else a taste of it. I would of but they all had a piece of their own. I bet my mother made that for me because I got licked. My father let me set up and listen to my unkle and my grandfather tell whoppers till I fell asleep in my chair. I bet my father is afraid I am going to have him arrested. I do not mind getting licked very much, but I do hate to have femail teachers looking at my bare back.

So I put it in the middle of the tire and we all got hold of it and pulled it back half ways across the barn.

By Way of the Transom

By L. M. D.

"He sold papers regularly," says a Newsboys' Journal of Charles M. Schwab, "and saved his money."

"And saved his money." The Journal, like a million other journals and articles since the first successful man was cabbaged into "telling how," or the first hack writer began guessing at reasons, wanted to be informative. It wanted to tell the newsboys how Charles M. Schwab mounted the pinnacle of success. And it made about as good a stab at it as I would if you asked me how much nine times nine is and I should tell you how much nine times four is.

In last week's Saturday Post, Robert Lansing takes a fling at the creators of phrase "truisms" that are not fundamentally sound. He mentioned "self-determination" among others. I wish he could have gone from the dignified oils to water colour a minute and included—"He saved his money." Because it wasn't saving his money that made Charles M. Schwab a successful man—any more than it has been saving money that has made any other man successful since the world opened up for business. It was wanting something that money could help get for him and going after it. The same impulse moved him that moves the little Japanese water flowers to open up in the water—the impulse to growth and progress. Saving his money was simply an incidental along the way; one of the rather necessary incidentals at present, of course, but one that genius has frequently dispensed with and has been just as successful.

The judicious placing of money is one of the finest and most profitable lessons we learn, and it is learned as often as not by eating our cake and then wishing we had kept it, or swapped it for peanuts. Knowing what we want of Life, and moving the chessmen around on our board to that end, is the same lesson. But we don't learn either of them by hoarding money. We learn them by investing money in the things that help get us where we have started. We learn them by keeping the money moving. By never leaving it a single minute where it isn't doing the most good it can for us.

Charles Schwab might have hoarded pennies for a suit of clothes to make a better impression when he struck for a better job. It's a time-honored and honorable beginning, and an indication of the employment of gray matter. But it wasn't saving his money that made him successful; it was investing it at the psychological moment.

It was investing it, right straight down the line to his present position. Even the banks miss a good guess when they advise you to "Save your money." A banker would be the last person in the world to advise you to miss an absolutely sure and safe investment, and if he didn't think his bank represented an opportunity for such an investment, he wouldn't have put his own money in it. What he does advise you to do is to swap your money to him for more money; to invest it with him, or with the United States government in bonds, or with some other company or corporation equally sure.

Everything that progresses keeps moving; not jumping or skipping or gushing, maybe, but moving. And the ability to keep it moving toward the sunrise is what constitutes success in the handling of anything gained or possessed.

SIXTY-FOUR ATTEND MISSION SOCIETY, FLORAL HEIGHTS M. E.

One of the most enthusiastic meetings ever held by the eighteen-months-old mission society of the Floral Heights M. E. church, south, was attended Monday afternoon by thirty-three members of Circle One, twenty-nine members of Circle Two, and two visitors, making a total of sixty-four women.

In the absence of Mrs. W. B. Guthrie, leader, the lesson on the Book of Kings was conducted by Mrs. J. W. Richardson in a very interesting and helpful manner. The Mission Study class, under the able leadership of Mrs. W. B. Chauncey was reported to be gaining in interest and popularity, as was attested by an attendance of between fifty-five and sixty at the last meeting.

GRADUATE NURSES TO SEND DELEGATE TO STATE MEETING

Miss Dixie King will represent the Wichita County Association of Graduate Nurses at the state convention of the associations in Galveston May 3-5, according to an announcement made by the local association Tuesday afternoon.

The nurses met at Kemp library Tuesday at 3:00 o'clock, and plans for the annual spring dance of the association were discussed, together with representation at the state meeting and other business. It was decided that the dance would be held some time in May, the date to be announced later.

An interesting and very much appreciated feature of Tuesday afternoon's meeting was the informal discussion of public health work by Miss Dorothy Dorpat of Chicago. Miss Dorpat has been in the public health service for some time, and expects to return to it as soon as a district is assigned her. She was one of the charter members of the local association, however, before going to Chicago, and is doing case work in the city for a few weeks.

Mrs. Perry Yantis and Miss Louise Custard sent an invitation to the association to hold its social meeting in May with them, which invitation was accepted.

Members and guests present at the meeting Tuesday included Mesdames Maud Brown, Lilian F. Stewart and Hamilton of Texarkana; Misses Vesta Maxwell, Mary Foley, Ada King, Jessie Douglas, Dixie King and Dorothy Dorpat.

HENRIETTA RAILROAD CASE HEARD, TAKEN UNDER ADVISEMENT

JUDGE WILSON TO RENDER DECISION LATER AS TO REMOVAL OF RAILS.

TESTIMONY SHOWS LINE WAS NOT PROFITABLE

Operated at Loss of $7,000 to $8,000 Per Year—State Is Trying to Prevent "Junking."

The federal court case of Henry J. Scott et al vs. the Southwestern Railway company in which the state of Texas is intervenor has been concluded, but Judge Wilson has taken the matter under advisement and the attorneys in the case will submit written briefs on the law in the case. The road, which extends from Henrietta to Archer City, has not been operated for some time.

The plaintiff filed suit for foreclosure of bond liens against the railroad and the state of Texas entered the suit asking for an injunction restraining the receiver from junking the entire road.

The state contends that the farmers who reside along the course of the road purchased lands there on the strength of the railway and that they are entitled to a railroad regardless whether there are operations or not.

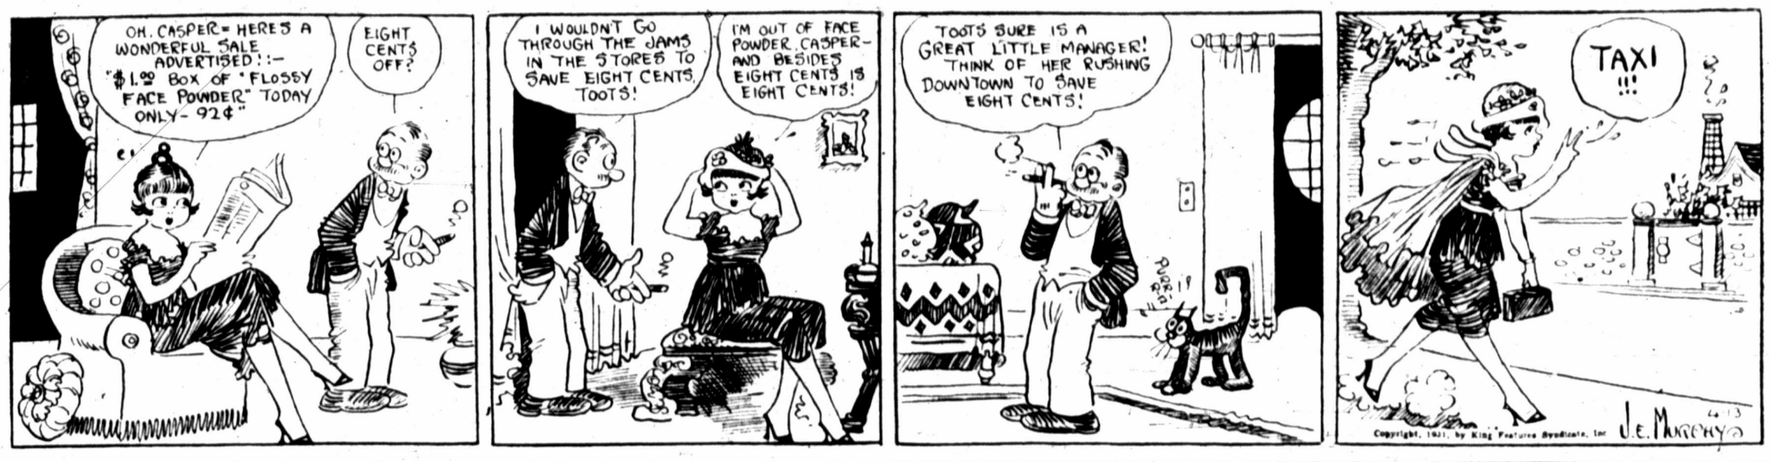

Testimony submitted in the case shows that the railroad, which operated between Henrietta and Archer City, did so at a loss of from $7,000 to $8,000 a year for the ten years that it did operate, and that the stockholders were forced to make up the deficit at the end of each fiscal year.

It is contended that the statutes of the state require that when a company desires to remove its roadbed that legislation is necessary.

The case was called for trial Monday morning and submission of testimony was begun at the beginning of the afternoon session. Tuesday afternoon the case was argued before the court and was continued until nearly noon Wednesday, after which Judge Wilson stated that he would withhold his decision for several days.

MARIE CAHILL HEADLINES WEEK'S VAUDEVILLE BILL AT THE WICHITA THEATER

Another large assortment of nationally known vaudeville stars is promised patrons of the Wichita theater when the curtain goes up on the opening act this evening. Marie Cahill, of musical comedy fame, leads the list, followed by Adler and Dunbar and El Cleve. Miss Cahill starred in such successes as "Marrying Mary," "The Boys and Beatty," "Ninety in the Shade," and other stage productions. Her act at present is a delightful melange of humor and music.

Adler and Dunbar, old-time vaudeville favorites, are back on the stage again with a bigger and better act than ever. Adler returned but recently from Germany where he was with the Army of Occupation, and after working up his act with Miss Dunbar, started on the vaudeville circuits of the country, where he has scored a big hit.

Harry Roys and Dorothy Rudac have a dancing act that is said to be one of the best on the stage at the present time. They have a wide variety of steps that are new and different and they enhance these with some attractive stage settings and scenery.

Combe and Nevin are two syncopating entertainers who offer the usual round of cross fire repartee, while El Cleve, who closes the bill, is xylophonist extraordinary.

Selznick news reel and topics of the day will also be offered in conjunction with the vaudeville attractions.

Pussyfoot Johnson Says "Booze" Cause Of British Trouble

By J. F. BEAMAN
United Press Staff Correspondent.

WESTERVILLE, OHIO, April 13.—"They spent all their money for booze and now they are hollering for something to eat."

William "Pussyfoot" Johnson, American prohibition advocate, gave this explanation today to the cause of the general labor strike called in England.

"The drink question is back of it," he charged. "With but few exceptions leaders of British labor are dry, while spots in the rank and file are wet and beyond control of their officers."

Johnson, whose vision was impaired in a London riot, a year ago, is going to risk his other eye. Undaunted by his physical sufferings and the hostile demonstration in Windsor, Canada, Monday night, he left here today for another campaign to dry up England. He will sail from New York Saturday on the first leg of an eight months' world tour.

"I'm not going to die until the whole world is dry," Johnson confidently smiled as forecast prohibition success during the coming year in England, Ireland, Wales, New Zearland and India. He also expressed pleasure with prohibition conditions in the United States, although admitting bootlegging was a thriving business.

"The coming general elections in England will give the drys a telling victory, he said.

"The drys will go after the individual members of parliament in the coming elections and the chances are favorable for a pretty dry parliament that will give the people the right to vote on the question."

LATEST STYLE

By LENORE

That the bodices of the new mode exhibit no great change is evident in this charming gray Canton frock with graceful sleeves, and long pointed side panels embroidered in the same color with a sprinkling of French blue beads.

While the tendency in skirts has been toward greater width and more elaboration, it cannot be said that the majority of the styles shown differ so greatly from those of last season that last season's clothes would be useless, or conspicuous. On the contrary, last spring's frock of crepe, satin or taffeta is apt to be quite as good looking as anything shown this season. The waistline remains low or normal, and the prediction of the high line of the Directoire mode has up to the present been received coldly.

Pattern No. 136.

A pattern for the above model (No. 136) can be obtained in sizes 34, 36, 38 or 40 by sending to Lenore, 8 West Fortieth street, New York City, your name and address, number of this pattern and the size required, and 25 cents in postage stamps. Be sure to keep this newspaper clipping of the sketch and description of the garment to use as a working model when the pattern reaches you—which will be within two weeks.—The Editor.

JOHNSON SPEAKS ON NEW ADVERTISING LAW

Declares It Will Mean Better Business Ethics—Addresses Ad Club Meeting.

The "honest advertising law" enacted at the last session of the state legislature is a move in the direction of better business ethics, B. Frank Johnson told members of the Wichita Falls Ad club at their luncheon Wednesday.

"Each class of business is given the means for protecting itself," Mr. Johnson said. "It is to the interest of the druggists to see that no druggist advertises dishonestly, it is to the interest of real estate men as a class to see that no real estate man is allowed to misrepresent the property he offers for sale."

Mr. Johnson said that the advertising bill was one of the very few regulatory measures that got through the legislature at the last session. In this connection he said that the public generally displays very little interest in legislation until it is too late.

The talk by Mr. Johnson was the principal feature of the weekly luncheon. Attendance prizes donated by T. A. Bradley for Perkins-Timberlake company were drawn by Miss M. R. Kerr for the women, and by John Gould for the men. E. Bartell of the American legion asked the Ad club's support for the legion's show on April 21. Miss Hauser, advertising agent of the Texas Federation of Women's clubs, asked the support of the club for her proposition, which was referred to the vigilance committee.

Announcement was made of the election of Wiley Brown of the Goodner Grocery company to the board of directors.

BALLOTS TAMPERED WITH, NOW CHARGED

New Accusation Is Made When Formal Notice of Election Contest Is Served.

Filing of the election contest, on behalf of George L. Hodgins, against Police Commissioner Bralley, may be expected shortly, according to information Wednesday, and the matter will be brought to a decision as promptly as possible.

Commissioner Bralley has not filed an answer to the formal notice of contest, and may not do so until the matter is taken into the courts. The contestants have until May 10, under the election law, to file the contest in the courts.

Although the formal notice of contest, which was served upon Mr. Bralley late Tuesday, charges several technical violations of the election law, it also alleges two classes of irregularities of a more serious nature.

One is that the ballot boxes were opened and tampered with after the election, and the other is the previously published charge that persons not holding poll tax receipts were permitted to votee

The other charges set up such violations of the election law as failure to provide voting booths, permitting voters to loiter and converse in and near the polling places, improper making out of returns, and such matters.

The first count alleges that the court house election box officials were not properly qualified and sworn in.

The second count charges that private booths were not furnished and that loitering was permitted.

The third alleges illegal voting by non-holders of poll receipts.

The fourth count alleges failure to properly certify the returns.

The fifth alleges that tally sheets were not properly preserved, and that ballot boxes were opened and tampered with.

The sixth charges various other irregularities sufficient to change the result of the election, and alleges also that unmutilated ballots were destroyed at the court house box, instead of being preserved as the law requires.

THINKS SOUTH BANK CAN'T BE "MOVED"

Judge Carrigan Discusses Red River Boundary Controversy at Wichita Club Lunch.

Speaking by invitation at the weekly luncheon of the Wichita Club Wednesday, Judge A. H. Carrigan declared that the talk that the south bank of Red River was anywhere else than where the river is was common "bunk" and propaganda.

"The south bank of Red River is where the south bank is. It's as plain as that wall yonder," he said, pointing at the wall of the room. "The United States supreme court will decide that the bank of Red river is the bank of Red river. There are some people who are claiming that the south bank as mentioned in the supreme court ruling this week will be where the bank was in 1819. They claim that the stream ran at a different place then than where it is now. Unless there is testimony showing conclusively that it ran somewhere else in 1819, and there is no one now living who can say where it ran in that year, the supreme court will hold that the present south bank of the river is the south bank of Red River." Judge Carrigan cited decisions of the supreme court in the Alabama and Georgia case and others supporting this view.

The effort of the decision this week, he said, was to establish definitely that all the land north of the south bank of the river was beyond the jurisdiction of Texas. He said that there were now four sets of claimants to the land north of the south bank, some claiming it belonged to the Indians, some that it was the public domain of the United States, some that it was public lands of the state of Oklahoma, and a fourth set that it belong to patentees on the north bank of the river. He said he believed there would be long litigation between these claimants.

Judge Carrigan gave an interesting review of the controversy over the boundary. He said it began in 1803 when Jefferson made the Louisiana purchase. Jefferson bought the land for the United States from Napoleon who had gotten it from Spain. He reviewed the negotiations for the purchase and told how there had been opposition to it from the United States senate. Following the purchase there developed a long controversy with Spain as to the boundary. This was compromised in 1819 with a treaty that was ratified in 1821. There was no further controversy until 1888 when the famous Greer county case came to be litigated. This was decided in 1896 when the supreme court, he said, held that Greer county was part of the Oklahoma territory and no part of Texas. Although the court held in this case, that the south bank of Red River was the boundary of Texas, Judge Carrigan pointed out, the question was not referred to by either side. The supreme court in the present controversy had held that the decision in the Greer county case was binding upon both parties.

NOT SATISFIED WITH THE REPLY OF PANAMA

Reiterates Refusal of That Country to Accept the White Award as Basis for Settlement.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The reply of Panama to the last Hughes note on the boundary question between that country and Costa Rica was received at the state department today.

Panama's answer is regarded by this government as "most unsatisfactory," it was learned. The note reiterates Panama's refusal to accept the White award as a basis for settling the boundary controversy. This award was upheld by Secretary of State Hughes. The Panama reply is exceedingly long and goes into the history of the case in an effort to vindicate its position in the boundary question.

CUBA TO GET HUGE LOAN TO FINANCE SUGAR CROP

HAVANA, April 12.—A huge loan, possibly as high as $20,000,000 to tide Cuba over her financial crisis, is expected to be consummated in New York.

The money will be devoted to marketing the sugar crop.

Large shipments of sugar will be sent to the United States as security for the loan, warehouse certificates having lost some of their value because of conditions here.

FAMILY OF 15 HOLLANDERS ADDED TO U. S. POPULATION

When the gates swung wide on Ellis Island, N. Y., recently and let the Feyen family into the United States the population of the country was increased by fifteen. They were from Holland. No nation can beat the Dutch in this wonderful matter of human productivity. But it is well to state that the Feyen family beats even the Dutch record of big families at Ellis island in point of youth. The oldest is only sixteen, while the youngest is eight months. Hendrik Feyen, head of the house, shown at the extreme right, top row, is forty-five. Diana, his wife, just thirty-two, and radiant with health, is shown in the centre holding the baby.

PRESIDENT APPROVES NEW LIST GENERALS

Add Clarence R. Edwards and Omit That of Brigadier General Omar Bundy.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—President Harding approved the list of twelve new major generals and 26 new brigaders as prepared by Secretary Weeks and it will be presented to congress soon. Clarence R. Edwards, who commanded the twenty-sixth (New England) national guard division in France, heads the list of major generals. His name did not appear in the list which was sent to congress by President Wilson, confirmation of which was held up.

The name of Brigadier General Omar Bundy was dropped by Secretary Weeks from the list of major generals as prepared by Secretary Baker and submitted to the last congress.

Besides General Edwards, the brigadiers promoted to be major generals are:

James W. McAndrew, John L. Hines, Henry T. Allen, David C. Shanks, Adelbert Cronkite, George W. Read, William C. Wright, Charles H. Muir, Charles T. Menoher, William G. Haan and George Bell, Jr.

Colonels recommended to promotions to brigadiers were:

Colonels Grote Hutcheson, Jesse McCarter, W. H. Gordon, George D. Duncan, William Weigel, Ernest Hinds, Ulysses G. McAlexander, Mark L. Hersey, E. A. Helmick, Robert L. Howze, William Lassiter, William R. Smith, Fred W. Sladen, Harry H. Bandholtz, Hanson E. Ely, Dwight E. Aultman, Johnson Hagood, Dennis E. Nolan, William D. Conner, Fox Conner, Preston Brown, Malin Craig, Henry D. Todd, Jr., A. J. Bowley, William H. Johnston and Robert Alexander.

Secretary Weeks said he dropped Brigadier General Omar Bundy from the list of major generals because he was convinced the others were entitled to promotion ahead of him.

PRESIDENT PROMISES TO TAKE UP KILPATRICK CASE

WASHINGTON, April 13.—President Harding promised a delegation from Alabama, which called on him today, to take up personally with Secretary Hughes the case of Captain Emmett Kilpatrick of Uniontown, Ala., who is held prisoner by the Russian bolsheviki.

The delegation asked the president to intercede in behalf of Captain Kilpatrick to obtain his release. He was captured by the bolsheviki last October, while serving as a captain of the American Red Cross in south Russia with Wrangel's army and has been sentenced to 20 years hard labor by the soviets on the charge of having taken up arms against the bolsheviki and of acting as a secret agent for the American government.

Captain Kilpatrick is one of a number of Americans held in prison by the bolsheviki and thus far all efforts to obtain his release have been unavailing.

"What's In a Name?"

LORRAINE

WHERE Lorraine originated is difficult to say. That particular form has no etymological history. But it is possible that it is the modern outgrowth of the names arising from the old Roman "lares," the little twin gods who presided over the household and were decorated with wreaths on festival days.

The special feast of the lares was on the 22nd of December, and it was immediately followed by that of a feminine deity called Lara, Larunda, Larentia, Laurentia or Acca Laurentia, who was termed in old Latin "good mother." It was she to whom prayers were made that no good slave might depart. (What a comfort her presence would be to the modern housewife.)

When Greek mythology came in, poor Laurentia was turned into a nymph whose chattering annoyed Jupiter to such an extent that he ordered her tongue cut out and sent her to the lower world in charge of Mercury. But be that as it may, her name was popular among Roman matrons and existed in various forms. Lorraine is generally regarded as the French interpretation of this popular name which slipped over the border from Italy.

Jade is her talismanic gem. It will bring her health, riches, long life, and happiness, according to the extravagant promise of the Chinese. Monday is her lucky day and 1 her lucky number.

[illegible] ENGINEERS REJECT PROPOSED WAGE REDUCTION

NEW YORK, April 13.—The Marine Engineers Benevolent association of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts, claiming a membership of 15,000, today rejected the wage reduction averaging 25 to 30 per cent, proposed by the American Steamship Owners association.

Moonshine Still Explosion Wrecks Chicago Building

CHICAGO, April 13.—Explosion of a moonshine still wrecked a two-story building here today and broke many windows in the vicinity.

Daniel Samuels, saloonkeeper, was in his basement when the still exploded. Firemen rescued him from the debris and he was rushed to a hospital.

His wife and two daughters were thrown out of bed by the violent blast.

Modern Housewife Skeptical of Scientific Discoveries

FINDS VITMAINES TO BE THE GREATEST FOOD NEWS OF THE AGE.

The modern housekeeper is the original "woman from Missouri." She has to be "shown" at every turn of the road, and she is frankly skeptical of so-called discoveries in the realm of kitchendom until she has found for herself that they are realities, and not the vaporings of some special writer's mind.

That was one of the reasons why "vitamines" and the things that the word stands for did not become quickly popular when their discovery was first announced about 18 months ago. Since that time the experiments of many food specialists and the results which they have achieved has removed all doubt that "vitamines" is the answer to the questions that she has often asked why some foods made her children grow and others did not.

"Vitamines" is the name given by scientists to the property which some few foods possess which makes children grow and grown folks feel better. It has been definitely determined that children must be fed foods containing this property in considerable measure if they are to attain normal growth. All other food properties may be present, but if this one property is lacking, growth is not normal.

"Vitamines" are contained in considerable quantities in two foods only, butter and the yellow parts of eggs. Creamery butter provides a delicious source of this life-giving, growth-promoting property. In addition, it contains all of the other food properties in such measure as to make one pound of butter the equal of 40 eggs or four pounds of beef steak.

The housekeeper who uses creamery butter a-plenty in her kitchen, as well as on her table, is giving her family the utmost in good nourishing food at the lowest possible cost.

Oklahoma Woman Wanted to Dispose Of Baby for $500

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 13.—Efforts to find the woman who last Saturday entered the office of a daily newspaper here and asked the boy at a telephone switchboard if she could insert an advertisement to sell her 16-months-old child for $500 have been unavailing, reporters and police officers said last night. The boy refused the advertisement, he said, fearing that it would be against the policy of the paper to accept it.

Authorities were notified when the advertising and editorial department of the paper were informed of the woman's request. She gave her name as "Mary Correy," the boy said, and appeared agitated when he refused her request.

The boy was alone in the office of a lower floor when she entered with her baby. She was neatly dressed, he said.

Her advertisement application, which he saved, reads:

"Wanted—To sell a 16-months-old baby in good health; mother unable to support baby and needing money—$500."

"He's the finest baby in the world, but I can't afford to keep him," the boy says the woman told him. When he refused her advertisement, she went out of the office, taking the baby, he said. She has not been heard from since. The name she gave does not appear in the city or telephone directories.

BUILDING A GOOD ROAD FROM VERNON TO SEYMOUR

VERNON, TEXAS, April 13.—Baylor county will possess an excellent stretch of road from the county line to the new bridge and from there to Seymour. It is laying a road out according to specifications of an engineer. The distance from the Wilbarger county line to the new bridge over Wichita river is about eight miles, and from there to Seymour approximately ten miles more. Thus the magnitude of the Baylor county enterprise can be clearly seen.

The bridge recently completed across the Wichita river is a splendid piece of work, and should eventually prove of immense value to both Seymour and Vernon. At present the travel is light because of the condition of the road, on an average of but two cars crossing daily.

Wilbarger county's share of the highway is being put into passable condition also. The stretch to be worked extends from near the Sigler well to the county line, a distance of about eight miles. At present county workmen are at the far end and have not progressed very far from the line. The rough and high spots in the road are being eliminated by use of slips, and after that a grader will be put into operation. It will be necessary to put in thirteen or fourteen bridges on the road.

KEEP SECRET THE HOUR OF REMOVAL OF BODY OF LATE FORMER EMPRESS

DOORN, HOLLAND, April 13.—Elaborate preparations were taken here today to keep secret the hour when the body of the late former empress of Germany was to be taken from the house of Doorn to the railway station at Maarn. Every effort was also being made to prevent the route over which the train would go to Potsdam from becoming known.

The police this morning received reinforcements of sixteen officers, under the command of a captain, and a number of police inspectors in civilian attire were roaming about the village.

Oklahoma Governor Has Poor Opinion of Some of Lawmakers

McALESTER, OKLA., April 13.—Comparing some members of the republican majority in the lower house of the legislature with "bolshevists, hyenas and wolves" and stating that they were lower personalities than the inmates of the state penitentiary here, Governor J. B. A. Robertson attacked the action of the state legislature in adjourning without signing appropriation bills in speeches here before the annual convention of the Oklahoma Pharmaceutical association and the McAlester Rotary club.

In his address last night before the convention in session in the main dining room of the state penitentiary, Governor Robertson waxed even more bitter in his denunciations than in the short address this afternoon, when he declared that he "reposed more confidence in many men in the state penitentiary than I do several members and 'outside' influences of the house of representatives" and that he would "rather associate with members of the institution than three or four men sent to the capitol as representatives."

"I have more confidence in the burglar who steals into your home at night," the governor said, "than I have in some members who were sent to the legislature. I have no apology to make for my statements. If you had been attacked by a bunch of 'muckrakers' as I have in the last hundred days and had your name dragged through the mire viciously and without provocation you, too, would be bitter.

CHILDRESS OFFERS BONUS FOR FIRST PRODUCING WELL

CHILDRESS, TEXAS, April 13.—As an attraction to the company which will bring in the first oil well in Childress county, the chamber of commerce is raising a bonus to be granted for a well averaging twenty or more barrels per day for a period of thirty days, provided that the offices or headquarters of the company shall be located and maintained in Childress. There are at present several wells being drilled in the county, with two prospects that bid fair to make claim to this bonus.

LUMBER DEALERS HIDING THEIR LIGHT.

Lumber dealers of Wichita Falls and many other communities have been hiding their light under a bushel. Lumber prices have been reduced approximately 50 per cent, but there are comparatively few people who know about it. It appears that lumber dealers might use a little advertising to mighty good effect at this time.

E. P. Hunter, president of the Association of Lumbermen of Texas, in his annual address at the convention of the association at Houston Tuesday, urged upon members the importance of doing a little advertising.

"Other lines of business," he said, "are still talking deflation, but the lumbermen have gone through that period and today building materials come nearer making the dollar do its duty than any commodity offered the public, and if other factors which enter into a building will do their part in reducing prices we face one of the greatest building booms we have ever experienced.

"If we sit around and console one another on the fact that there is no business, then we certainly will not have any. Conditions of business is largely the result of people's mental attitude, and if we think only in terms of optimism the effect will be marvelous. We must first sell ourselves on the idea that we are going to do a good business the balance of this year before we attempt to sell our commodity the idea.

"During the last year the prices of lumber have declined at the saw mills at least 50 per cent, and with prices down to the cost of manufacture, and in some cases less, we can not hope to see further declines for a long time to come.

"The retail lumbermen in most instances have given the public the full benefit of this decline, but we have hidden our light under a bushel, so to speak, and have not given these price declines the publicity we should to the consuming public. The average person has no way of knowing that lumber is off 50 per cent in price unless we tell him about it.

"It is a safe proposition to tell our friends that lumber is a good buy, we think, and encourage building on present prices, with the assurance that the enormous amount of building which will shortly come will have a tendency to raise prices, which are always governed by the laws of supply and demand.

"The consumer has demanded our merchandise during the last few years and it has cost us our greatest efforts to supply that demand. Salesmanship has almost become a lost art, but from now on salesmanship is going to become a very important factor in the growth and prosperity of our business and we are going to have to sell each customer everything he buys. The man who goes after business will get it, but no matter how mighty or powerful a man may be, if he continues to sit and wait for his business to come to him he will eventually become an expert waiter."

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE ABILENE REPORTER.

Within recent months Abilene has secured a new college or two and has built Lake Abilene for its water supply. Along with these splendid public accomplishments the Abilene Reporter has built a handsome new home and has installed a modern 16-page rotary press. This is one of the biggest things that has ever been done in Abilene and something, the importance of which the publishers of the Reporter and the citizens of Abilene can scarcely realize at this time. It means that the Reporter now has the mechanical equipment that will permit it to develop to the fullest degree the opportunity for service and for growth to the people of Abilene and its section. The occupancy of the fine new building and the possession of the modern and efficient plant will constantly spur the publishers of the Reporter to their best efforts in making a splendid newspaper. And a good and true newspaper is as essential to a community as an adequate water supply and it can be a greater influence for good than any college that was ever built.

Editorial Echoes

The Veto Power.
(Dallas News.)

An interesting feature in American government is the development of the use of the veto power. The practice on the part of state legislatures of dumping in the closing days of the session a vast number of bills for the consideration of the governor has resulted in the gubernatorial delivery of vetoes and approvals in batches, as it were, so that the impression of the frequency of the exercise of the veto is doubtless somewhat heightened thereby. But a survey of the history of the veto power in America shows that its use is steadily growing.

Although we derived our veto from Great Britain, where it is supposed to reside in the king, yet it has not been exercised by the throne for two hundred years; and its exercise now might be reckoned as calculated to excite as much disturbance of British aplomb as would the appearance of the queen in green tights at a pink tea. But though the king has abstained from his prerogative since 1707, one of the chief sources of squabbling and bickering between early colonial governors in America and their respective assemblies had to do with the industrious use by the former of their veto power over legislation passed by the latter. The matter grew into a grievance, and the grievance developed into all manner of filibuster practices. Frequently the legislators fell back upon their traditional power over appropriations and taxes and pulled shut the purse strings of the colonial treasury until such time as the royally-appointed governor should be starved into a considerate attitude toward the duly elected servants of the people.

In some colonies these contests went for the governor and in some for the legislative branch, but in all of them there grew up among the people a prejudice against the veto power. So much was this true that after the revolution members of states left the executive with no veto power at all. Subsequent state constitutions included the power as the need for it became more plain; but to this day North Carolina stands her ancient ground, the governor of that state having no veto power.

In the early days of the republic the veto was little used by the president. In fact, Jefferson remarks upon this in one of his papers and says that it had given rise then to the speculation whether the "president's negative," as he calls it, might not cause its decay. He says "The non-user of his negative begins already to excite a belief that no president will ever venture to use it."

The idea which was predominant at that time as to the restricted use of the veto was the natural outgrowth of the colonial struggle with the absolute veto powers of the royal governors. Jefferson outlines his idea of the function of the vote thus: "The negative of the president is the shield provided by the constitution to protect against invasion of the legislature: 1. The right of the executive. 2. Of the judiciary. 3. Of the states and the state legislatures."

Writers have troubled themselves over the matter of whether the veto is a legislative power or an executive power. Not only does it partake of both, but it has something of the judicial also, since our modern executives have construed their oath to support the constitution to include the duty of vetoing legislation which they conceived to be unconstitutional. The growth of the veto has come not so much as a matter of executive aggression upon the domain of the legislature as of necessity born of the haste with which legislatures now do their work.

The disadvantage of the present arrangement is that it throws a heavy legislative responsibility upon the governor, and one which is to be discharged within an exceedingly short time limit. The hurried consideration which the state executive is compelled to give to a mass of legislation as broad in its scope as the interests of a huge commonwealth can not do justice either to the task or to the man upon whom it is imposed. There is the compensatory advantage, of course, that the power of veto tends to afford to the legislation of any given period a continuity and unity of policy which it would not otherwise have. But until means are adopted to lessen the haste with which laws are drafted and adopted, the veto will not be entirely effective to cure slipshod workmanship which mars all too many of our legislative efforts.

WHY?—

Does a Lump Come Into Our Throats When We Cry?

(Copyright, 1920, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

Like the eye and the ear and many other portions of the body, the throat is a most delicate structure, designed with the triple function of a channel connecting the mouth with the stomach, the space through which air is carried down toward the lungs and the holding of the vocal chords which control speech. For this reason, when the brain is not sufficiently developed, or when it is not acting as it should—as in the case of young children or persons who are mentally defective—we usually find a consequent difficulty in speech and a constant swallowing, as if to remove some obstruction in the throat.

Practically the same thing applies when persons are so overwrought that they have to seek refuge in tears. Grief, and sometimes anger, causes an upset condition which may be any one of a number of different phases of hysteria. The person loses control, for the brain is not functioning properly with respect to the different actions of the body, and one of the effects is the feeling which we call "a lump in the throat." This lump is nothing more than a wavelike motion, precisely the reverse of swallowing, caused by a movement in the walls of muscle which form the throat, only the wave moves upward instead of downward, as in the case when we swallow, and we get the impression that there is some obstruction, which leads to persons who are on the verge of tears to "clear their throats" before they speak.

Tomorrow—Why does "&" mean "and?"

Cheerful Service.

This is the path to glory, this is the road to fame,
Clean hands after the toil of day and a record free from shame,
For he who comes home in honor is building a worthy name.

And whether the task be mighty that unto man's lot shall fall,
Or one of the humbler duties, or the prize be great or small,
In the court where all men are tested, shall matter not at all.

The great and the low must answer, at last when life's sands are run,
Not by the gold they gathered and not by the laurels won,
For the road to eternal glory is only by work well done.

And those whom the world will honor, must face it with heads erect,
Must spurn all the crooked byways and keep to the path direct,
For cheerful and manly service is the way to the world's respect.

SOLDIER KILLED IN FRANCE IS BURIED AT MANGUM

MANGUM, OKLA., April 13.—The body of Paul Garrett who was killed on May 1918, and who was the first Greer county boy to lose his life in the world war, arrived from France Friday after being held at Hobart a few days on account of the washouts on the railroads. The funeral was held Sunday, the Paul Garrett Post of the American Legion conducting the services. Quite a number of ex-service men from surrounding towns attended the funeral.

TRIANGLE WELL IS OBJECT OF INTEREST

Drilling in Progress Day and Night at a Depth Around Two Thousand Feet.

VERNON, April 13.—Triangle number 1 drillers in Streit, section 108, are proceeding with extreme caution and there are prospects for picking up the pay sand at every foot encountered. Triangle is the well that has been offering the most absorbing interest here for the past two weeks. Rat tailing has been in progress for the last 100 feet, and the bit is now down about 2,000 feet at what is considered a critical depth. Drilling is being carried on during the day, and the night crew attends to reaming the hole. There has been no machinery trouble during the past week to halt developments.

Utmost care is being taken, according to J. E. Watts, president of the company, to prevent ruining the sand in the event it is struck, and the work is necessarily exceptionally slow. It is pointed out that the Pyramid sand was encountered at 1,972 feet and Sigler No. 1 at 2,041 feet, so the Triangle is expected to be somewhere between these depths. It is located 2,400 feet west of Sigler No. 1 and five-eights of a mile east of the Pyramid. The sand, then indicates plainly a dip to the east.

The Pyramid, upon which work was suspended recently until a new rig might be obtained, has resumed operations and with favorable conditions the drillers expected to gain results in about ten days. The Pyramid is making its third attempt to reach the pay sand. On its second try, after drilling through the casing at an angle, the pay was encountered at 1,974 feet but a displacement of the whip stock ruined the prospects for the hole and it was necessary to commence again twenty feet higher on the pipe. Work on this second side-tracking is in progress now.

The H. & F. down in the neighborhood of 1,900 feet, is fast reaching the stage where developments may be expected. Rat tailing has not been commenced yet but careful tab on the log of their other wells is being kept by the drillers. A break-down Monday caused a temporary suspension of work but operations were resumed today.

TOLBERT WINS DISTRICT DEBATE HELD AT QUANAH

VERNON, TEXAS, April 13.—Tolbert of Wilbarger county, won the district debate Saturday at Quanah in competition with ten other counties and will represent this county in the state meet to be held in Austin. Dawse Brooks and J. C. Swinburn on the affirmative of "Resolved: That the movement for the open shop in Texas subserves the best interest of the state and should be supported by public opinion," smothered effectively all opposition offered them.

The west county school did not confine its laurels merely to the literary world. Will Emerick of Tolbert captured the 220yard dash in good fashion, and Charles Emerick annexed another victory in the 440-yard dash. J. C. Swinburn added a greater total to his school's points by winning the low hurdles. Another first place was won by the mile relay team composed of Charles Emerick, Will Emerick, Hubert Simmonds, and J. C. Swinburn. Fourth place in the 100-yard dash was taken by Will Emerick and Dawse Brooks won the same place in the high jump.

Oklaunion girls, Miss Evelyn Ashley and Miss Ramal Butler added further to Wilbarger county laurels by winning second place in the girls' debate. The subject was the same discussed by the boys. Oklaunion girls, Miss Kate Neal in the singles and Miss Kate Neal and Miss Sally Evens in the doubles won second places in the tennis matches. There was spirited play throughout these matches.

Harrold contributed to Wilbarger winnings through the individual efforts of Bob Vaughn. This versatile athlete won the discus throw, the high jump, and took second in the shot put.

Midway school was another winner in the literary events. Representatives from threre won second place in the Junior boy and Junior girl declamations in the rural division.

Sampson was rescued from a mob which formed at Honey Grove by Deputy Sheriff Leeman, who dashed out of Honey Grove with the negro in an automobile and walked the rest of the way here when heavy rain stalled the machine.

Sampson, who is alleged to have confessed to Sheriff Whitley, was later secreted away and taken to jail in an unnamed town for safe keeping. He was kept under extra guard.

CHILDRESS, TEXAS, April 13.—The residence of M. Fortenberry in the southeast part of Childress was almost destroyed by fire Monday evening, and very little of the furniture was saved. ANOTHER WICHITA FALLS CASE

It Proves That There's a Way Out for Many Suffering Wichita Falls Folks.

Just another report of a case in Wichita Falls. Another typical case. Kidney ailments relieved in Wichita Falls with Doan's Kidney Pills.

A. M. Gross, retired farmer, 306 Lee street, says: "I am always glad to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Some time ago my back and kidneys got in pretty bad shape, caused by a cold settling in my kidneys. My back was sore and lame across the small part and I could hardly do my work. Whenever I stooped over, such pains would catch me in the small of my back I thought it would break. Sometimes I would get so dizzy and weak I would have to sit down to rest. I tried all kinds of kidney remedies but found no relief until I bought Doan's Kidney Pills. I used a few boxes of Doan's and they cured me of this attack. I use Doan's off and on as a kidney regulator now."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Gross had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y. (adv.)

REDUCTION IN STEEL WILL AID MOVEMENT TO ADJUST BUSINESS

CHICAGO, April 13.—Reduction of steel prices is the first big move toward re-establishment of business on a sound, economic basis, Chicago bankers said today.

"The commanding importance of the United States Steel corporation's position will make its action beneficial as an example to industry," declared D. W. Forgan, president of the National City bank.

Forgan believes that a "new basis will be found for prices, wages and profits."

The slash in steel costs means producers of other bash products will follow suit, in Forgan's opinion.

"The steel company's action should have a favorable influence on building," Forgan said. "Other materials must come down and if labor will take its share of the reduction, I believe a large amount of building awaiting normal costs will go on."

Forgan said a vast amount of money for building purposes is available throughout the United States.

Bankers will be more willing than ever to "turn the money loose" if construction costs merely represent intrinsic value, bankers declared.

NORTHWESTERN TO ISSUE RECEIVER'S CERTIFICATES

Schaff, as receiver for the Wichita Falls & Northwestern railway has been granted authority by the interstate commerce commission to issue receiver's certificates in the amount of the road's indebtedness to the United States, growing out of federal control. These certificates are to be pledged as security in connection with the funding of the indebtedness shown.

He is now connected with the valuation work of the interstate commission, with headquarters at San Francisco.

Winnecke's Comet To Come Near the Earth During June

CAMBRIGE, MASS., April 13.—Winnecke's comet, which approaches the earth at intervals of five years and eight months will come "very near" the earth in June, according to the prediction of Dr. Cromelin, the English astronomer.

Astronomers have been watching for Winnecke's comet for several weeks. It was originally discovered in 1858. It moves in an elliptic orbit around the sun and so far it has never come within several million miles of the earth.

How near it will approach this time, astronomers will probably soon be able to compute.

The experiment was to test the relative flying efficiency of the bird and the machine. All conditions were said to be ideal.

MRS. REIFENSTEIN, AGED 67, GAINES 25 POUNDS

Declares She Would Like to Put a Bottle of Tanlac in the Hands of Every Sick Man, Woman and Child in This Country—Never Saw Its Equal.

MRS. EMMA REIFENSTEIN
337 Webster Ave., Syracuse, N. Y.

"I am 67 years of age, but in all my experience I have never known a medicine like Tanlac. Think of it! At my age to gain 25 pounds in weight, but that is just what I have done," said Mrs. Emma Reifenstein, of No. 337 Webster avenue, Syracuse, N. Y.

"If I had it in my power," she continued, "I would put a bottle of Tanlac in the home of every sick man, woman and child in this country, for I know what this wonderful medicine would do for them. For almost two years I was almost a nervous wreck. I did not dare to leave the house or even go up town unless my husband went with me. I was afraid to even cross the street and had a feeling of dread all of the time.

"My stomach was weak and easily upset. For days at a time I would go without solid food. I could not rest at night to do any good and felt tired and worn out all of the time. Some days I could hardly drag myself across the room and was so weak and miserable I was ready to give up.

"My health is fine now and I eat anything I want and never have a touch of indigestion. I have never slept better than I do now. My recovery is the talk of our neighborhood, as it was generally believed I could not last but a few weeks longer. This grand medicine has brought me health and happiness and I just can't say enough in its praise."

Mr. J. Reifenstein, in commenting on his wife's statement, said: "Yes, her recovery has been a happy surprise to us all. A few weeks ago I had no idea she would be able to pull through, but now she is in better health than I have ever seen her and the credit is due to Tanalc. We have been married 52 years today and I don't believe I have ever seen her looking any better."

Tanlac is sold in Wichita Falls by Miller Drug company, in Electra by Tarleton drug store, in Burkburnett by West End Drug company and by druggists everywhere. (adv.)

STEEL CORPORATION REDUCES THE PRICE

Necessary in Order to Revive Trade and Halt a Buyers' Strike.

NEW YORK, April 13.—The decline in prices was given impetus today by announcement by the United States Steel corporation of a reduction in steel prices effective April 13.

It was generally expected the steel corporation would soon announce a reduction in wages to follow the price cut, but there was no confirmation of this, and E. H. Gary, chairman of the corporation, refused to discuss it.

The slash in steel prices was necessary, it is understood, in order to revive trade and halt a buyers' strike. A drop in costs of building materials and a consequent increase in construction work is looked for as a result.

The reductions ranged from $1.50 to $9 a ton for various kinds of steel, up to as much as $15 a ton for tin plate.

BOLSHEVIKI BITTER TOWARD AMERICANS

Are Not Permitting Them to Leave Russia According to Reports Received.

By Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 13.—Russian bolsheviki are bitter toward Americans and are not permitting them to leave Russia, said Anne Keiser of Philadelphia upon arriving here yesterday from Odessa. She declared French, Italian and British citizens were allowed to depart from Odessa.

"I left as a British subject," she said. "The few Americans who were in Odessa having been refused permission to leave. A number of General Wrangel's officers who were taken to Odessa were shot and the remainder were taken before the central soviet and then sent to the army of farm workers. Odessa is still in the hands of the bolsheviki, and there is much hunger there. Many executions are taking place, the city is lifeless, and there is little work or food."

Comment on the Message

PARIS, April 13.—President Harding's message to congress created a most favorable impression in Paris in official as well as other circles. Particularly favorable was the reception of the president's phrases in the message, interpreted by Paris editors as recommending the ratification of the treaty of Versailles, detached from the covenant of the League of Nations and with reservation.

MONTREAL, April 13.—The Montreal Gazette makes the following comment on President Hasding's speech:

"There is not to be acceptance of the League of Nations as formed at Versailles, and indeed it looks very much as though President Harding has given the death blow to that covenant. A league of nations in which the United States does not participate is much like the play Hamlet with the melancholy Dane omitted.

"Taken as a whole, the president has made an admirable address. It will please his party, nd what is more to the point, should please the American people. It is frank, firm, lucid, comprehensive and spoken like a sensible man of affairs."

Liverpool Post: "The program of the American president looks simpler than it really is.

"A mere declaratory resolution of peace will scarcely suffice to adjust matters between the United States and Germany. The resolution will have to be followed by a full blown treaty, and when the treaty comes to be drawn up, international complications arising from the prior existence of European treaties will force themselves upon America. We consider it most inconvenient for America to perpetuate longer the technical fiction that she is still at war with Germany. She has her eyes on German trade and has no intention to let such obstacles bar her way.

"Probably indeed economic pressure, more than political motive, will spur congress to give the presidential counsel speedy effect."

"Pertinax," political editor of the Echo de Paris:

"There is no longer any doubt as to the policy the new American president and his advisers intend to pursue.

"It was not generally expected that Mr. Harding would announce immediately his desire to see the theoretic state of war with Germany ended. France for the past two years has been consistently mistaken about America. Shall we now send men to Washington capable of enlightening and defending us?"

Paris Midi: "Prudence which is a customary quality of American presidents, reigns supreme in Hardings message. There is no occasion for us either to light bonfires in celebration or be alarmed, for if the president is reserved, American public opinion is much less so. In all quarters of the United States the people are showing a sincere desire not to hinder France."

L'Information, Paris: "We miss in the message the great inspiration which sometimes vibrated in President Wilson's public utterances, and which may be found in the speeches with which former Premier Viviani is galvanizing American opinion. We warn the public, however, against accepting any individual as the spokesman of Americans, but urge the most frank and cordial relations with the United States.

"Franco-American friendship is the surest foundation of world peace."

Buenos Aires La Razon: "Mr. Harding's program is the practice of 'shirt sleeve politics,' but we see in it self-interest as the future international policy of the United States.

"The egotistic independent nationalism is proclaimed as the law of international activities by the United States is dominant in Mr. Harding's words.

"Americanism and Monroeism, notions clear and concrete, which have their rise and fall since 1824, reappear with more vigor than ever in the directing thought of the United States.

"Governing men of America aspire to commercial and military hegemony of the world. They are not disposed to sacrifice anything to this aspiration, and appear to care nothing for Europe, nor to intervene in its contentions, but to cultivate their own political interests and enhance their commercial activities.

"The very American countries whose protectorate the United States would appear to assume in the name of the Monroe doctrine no longer interest it greatly. It sacrifices them to interior convenience. We do not criticize, because this proceeding is the criterion which guides all peoples and all governments in their hour of history. Idealism, like universal right and uniform justice for all, great and small, and universal peace without violence and injustice, has not been definitely accepted by the great powers. Idealists like Woodrow Wilson are falling into ostracism under the influence of more positive ideas."

To-Day's Lucky Jewel Color Flower

By MILDRED MARSHALL

JET.

TODAY'S talismanic stone is jet, emblematic of sorrow at other times, but on this date endowed with the power to protect its wearers from grief, and bring them good fortune.

The opal is the natal stone of those born on an anniversary of this date, and brings its wearers great wealth, but is likely to cause extravagance and unwise love of luxury, according to an ancient superstition.

Yellow is today's color, and was believed by the Orientals to bring unexpected wealth to its women wearers.

The purple hyacinth, today's flower, is said to dispel sorrow.

Facts About Your Name; Its History; Its Meaning; Whence It Was Derived; Its Significance; Your Lucky Day and Lucky Jewel.

By MILDRED MARSHALL.

ALEXANDRA.

ALEXANDRA is a famous name. It is a feminine version of the title of the illustrious conqueror, Alexander the Great. It was popular in all the countries through which the peerless Alexander swept, and for years after his triumphant passage, all male children were called after his name. Alexandros was a favorite name in Greece. The Maccabean Jews used it, and a martyred Pope made it a revered name in Italy.

The feminine was brought to Scotland by Margaret Aetheling, who learned it at the Hungarian court where she was born and reared. Alexa, Alexandra, and Alexandrina are several of its forms. Alexia is often found as a woman's name in old records and accounts of the Middle Ages.

Alexandra is widely popular in Germany and Russia, as well as in the other Continental nations. It has seldom had much vogue in England, except as a feminine given to perpetuate the masculine Alexander where there have not been sons to carry on the title. But curiously enough, it is a favorite in this country.

The splendid ruby is Alexandra's talismanic gem. It is fitting that this emblem of courage and accomplishment and bodily vigor should be her stone. Thursday is her lucky day and 6 her lucky number.

LAST NIGHT'S DREAMS; WHAT THEY MEAN

APPLE PIE.

Of the various sorts of pies an apple pie would appear about the best one to dream of eating, especially if the dreamer be of the female sex. But both to men and women the general signification of an apple pie is happiness unless, indeed, the apple pie tasted sour, in which event the dreamer may expect to have a quarrel before long, though this will not intefere with the generally fortunate signification of the dream. Mince pie signifies abundance and an apricot pie means good fortune unless you eat of it, in which case you must be prepared for a disappointment of some sort, though it will not be a very serious one.

Lyrics of Life

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

"HOW THEY FOUGHT THE GOOD NEWS."

(With apologies to Browning, if such be necessary.)

I ran to the neighbors', and Doris, and he;
I gossiped, Dick gossiped, we gossiped all three.
"Good land!" cried the folks, as the closer they drew.
Inside of a minute we gossiping, too.
Outside came the sunset and ended the day,
But into the midnight we gossiped away.

Not a word said in kindness, we kept the sheet pace,
Neck to neck, side by side, never changing our place.
I spoke of the absents; we all started in
And dounced each name and mentioned each sin.
Repeated each rumor, each scandalous lie
Nor gossiped less steadily Neighbor a while.

And all I remember is friends flocking round
As we sat with our heads all together, I found,
Not a voice that was praising one neighbor of mine
But knocking the absent ones all down the line.
You have to be present such things to prevent—
Why, we knocked one another, whenever one went!

THE HOUSEHOLD

Edited by ANNE RITTENHOUSE

PUTTING UP LUNCHES.

MANY a woman who never dreamed that she would some time have to feed with the daily duty of putting up one more lunches for some hungry member of her family now looks upon this as the first duty, to be performed every day save Sunday. For after the fad of the picnic or camping has been rather thin pay the luxurious prices of restaurant meals wore off, there were not a few men who decided that they would adopt the habit permanently. Undoubtedly the good wives who put up the lunches deserve as much credit for this habit of economy as do the men who take them.

Sometimes of course this is a matter of real necessity. A worker constructing engineer engaged on the erection of a gas tank that was from a good hotel is arranged to have a canteen service for his work to provide for him for the workmen, while he himself carries his luncheon in a small basket to his car every day. And of course the whole problem is simplified if a man goes to work in his car, for then the lunch container need not be limited in space and there is the possibility of putting up hot drinks in vacuum bottles.

"Mixed them a week ago," said the detective.

An O. HENRY Story

Humor, Pathos, Romance

"GIRL"

By O. HENRY.

IN gilt letters on the ground glass of the door of room No. 962 were the words: "Robbins & Hartley, Brokers." The clerks had gone. It was past five, and with the solid tramp of a drove of prize Percherons, scrubwomen were invading the cloud-capped twenty-story office building. A puff of red-hot air flavored with lemon peelings, soft-coal smoke and train oil came in through the half-open windows.

Robbins, fifty, something of an over-weight beau, and addicted to first nights and hotel palm-rooms, pretended to be envious of his partner's commuter's joys.

"Going to be something doing in the humidity line tonight," he said. "You out-of-town chaps will be the people, with your katydids and moonlight and long drinks and things out on the front porch."

Hartley, twenty-nine, serious, thin, good looking, nervous, sighed and frowned a little.

"Yes," said he, "we always have cool nights in Floralhurst, especially in the winter."

A man with an air of mystery came in the door and went up to Hartley.

"I've found where she lives," he announced in the portentous half-whisper that makes the detective at work a marked being to his fellow men.

Hartley scowled him into a state of diplomatic silence and quietude. But by that time Robbins had got his cane and set his tie pat to his liking, and with a debonair nod went out to his metropolitan amusements.

"Here is the address," said the detective in a natural voice, being deprived of an audience to foil.

Hartley took the leaf torn out of the sleuth's dingy memorandum book. On it were penciled the words "Vivienne Arlington, No. 341 East — street, care of Mrs. McComas."

Hartley paid the man and dismissed him. Then he left the office and boarded a Broadway car. At the first large crosstown artery of travel he took an eastbound car that deposited him in a decaying avenue, whose ancient structures once sheltered the pride and glory of the town.

Walking a few squares he came to the building that he sought. It was a new flathouse, bearing carved upon its cheap stone portal its sonorous name, "The Vallambrosa." Fire-escapes zigzagged down its front—these laden with household goods, drying clothes, and squalling children evicted by the mid-summer heat.

Hartley pressed the "McComas" button. The door latch clicked spasmodically—now hospitably, now doubtfully, as though in agitation whether it might be admitting friends or duns. Hartley entered and began to climb the stairs.

On the fourth floor he saw Vivienne standing in an open door. She waited him inside, with a nod and a bright, feminine smile. She placed a chair for him near a window, and poised herself gracefully upon the edge of one of those Jekyll-and-Hyde pieces of furniture that are masked and mysteriously hooded, unguessable hulks by day and inquisitorial racks of torture by night.

Hartley cast a quick, critical, appreciative glance at her before speaking, and told himself that his taste in choosing had been flawless.

Vivienne was about twenty-one. She was of the purest Saxon type. Her hair was a ruddy golden, each filament of the neatly gathered mass shining with its own lustre and delicate gradation of color. In perfect harmony were her ivory-clear complexion and deep sea-blue eyes that looked upon the world with the ingenuous calmness of a mermaid or the pixie of an undiscovered mountain stream. Her frame was strong and yet possessed the grace of absolute naturalness. And yet with all her Northern clearness and frankness of line and coloring, there seemed to be something of the tropics in her.

"Vivienne," said Hartley, looking at her pleadingly, "you did not answer my last letter. It was only by nearly a week's search that I found where you had moved to. Why have you kept me in suspense when you knew how anxiously I was waiting to see you and hear from you?"

"Mr. Hartley," she said hesitatingly, "I hardly knew what to say to you. I realize all the advantages of your offer, and sometimes I feel sure that I could be contented with you. But, again, I am doubtful. I was born a city girl, and I am afraid to bind myself to a quiet suburban life."

"My dear girl," said Hartley, ardently, "have I not told you that you shall have everything that your heart can desire that is in my power to give you? You shall come to the city for the theatres, for shopping and to visit your friends as often as you care to. You can trust me, can you not?"

"To the fullest," she said, turning her frank eyes upon him with a smile. "I know you are the kindest of men, and that the girl you get will be a lucky one. I learned all about you when I was at the Montgomerys'."

"Ah!" exclaimed Hartley, with a tender, reminiscent light in his eye, "I remember well the evening I first saw you at the Montgomerys'. Mrs. Montgomery was sounding your praises to me all the evening. And she hardly did you justice. I shall never forget that supper. Come, Vivienne, promise me. I want you. You'll never regret coming with me. No one else will ever give you as pleasant a home."

The girl sighed and looked down at her folded hands.

A sudden jealous suspicion seized Hartley.

"Tell me, Vivienne," he asked, regarding her keenly, "is there another—is there some one else?"

A rosy flush crept slowly over her fair cheeks and neck.

"You shouldn't ask that, Mr. Hartley," she said, in some confusion. "But I will tell you. There is one other—but he has no right—I have promised him nothing."

"His name?" demanded Hartley, sternly.

"Townsend."

"Rafford Townsend!" exclaimed Hartley, with a grim tightening of his jaw.

"How did that man come to know you? After all I've done for him—"

"His auto has just stopped below," said Vivienne, bending over the window-sill. "He's coming for his answer. Oh, I don't know what to do!"

The bell in the flat kitchen whirred. Vivienne hurried to press the latch button.

"Stay here," said Hartley. "I will meet him in the hall."

Townsend, looking like a Spanish grandee in his light tweeds, Panama hat and curling black mustache, came up the stairs three at a time. He stopped at sight of Hartley and looked foolish.

"Go back," said Hartley, firmly, pointing downstairs with his forefinger.

"Hullo!" said Townsend, feigning surprise. "What's up? What are you doing here, old man?"

"Go back," repeated Hartley, inflexibly. "The Law of the Jungle. Do you want the Pack to tear you in pieces? The kill is mine."

Townsend went downstairs, leaving a bitter word to be wafted up the draught of the staircase. Hartley went back to his wooing.

"Vivienne," said he, masterfully, "I have got to have you. I will take no more refusals or dilly dallying."

She stood calmly before him and looked him in the eye.

"Do you think for one moment," she said, "that I would enter your home while Heloise is there?"

Hartley cringed as if from an unexpected blow. He folded his arms and paced the carpet once or twice.

"She shall go," he declared grimly. Drops stood upon his brow. "I have decided. I will turn her from my doors."

"When will you do this?" asked the girl.

Hartley clinched his teeth and bent his brows together.

"Tonight," he said, resolutely. "I will send her away tonight."

"Then," said Vivienne, "my answer is 'yes.' Come for me when you will."

In an hour and forty minutes Hartley stepped off the train at Floralhurst. A brisk walk of ten minutes brought him to the gate of a handsome two-story cottage set upon a wide and well-tended lawn. Halfway to the house he was met by a woman with jet-black braided hair and flowing white summer gown, who half strangled him without apparent cause.

When they stepped into the hall she said:

"Mamma's here. The auto is coming for her in half an hour. She came to dinner, but there's no dinner."

"I've something to tell you," said Hartley. "I thought to break it to you gently, but since your mother is here we may as well out with it."

He stopped and whispered something at her ear.

His wife screamed. Her mother came running into the hall. The dark-haired woman screamed again—the joyful scream of a well-beloved and petted woman.

"Oh, mamma!" she cried, ecstatically, "what do you think? Vivienne is coming to cook for us! She is the one that stayed with the Montgomerys a whole year. And now, Billy, dear," she concluded, "you must go right down into the kitchen and discharge Heloise. She has been drunk again the whole day long."

DOROTHY DIX'S TALKS

By DOROTHY DIX
THE WORLD'S HIGHEST PAID WOMAN WRITER

WHAT QUALITY DO MEN ADMIRE MOST IN WOMAN?

WE were discussing a little woman who had not only made three brilliant marriages, each time getting an adoring husband who worshipped her to the day of his death, but who had been surrounded by a throng of admiring men all of her life.

"She must wear a rabbit's foot around her neck, or have some other secret conjure," said a woman. "For so far as I can see, there is nothing especially attractive about her. She is nice enough, pleasant enough, but not more so than the general mill-run of femininity. Yet she has married three men, each one of whom was a catch, and all of her life she has had a waiting list camping on her parlor chairs and cutting into her dances."

"Heaven knows, she is no beauty," said another woman.

"Not a particle of style. She never did know how to dress. As ways looks like a package that mother tied up," commented a third.

"No wit nor vivacity," said a fourth. "small beer gossip about her personal acquaintances, and her husband and children, and boys comprise her conversational range."

She's just an ordinary woman, just commonplace, so far as other women can perceive. Yet she appears to hypnotize every man she meets and what every woman would like to know is, what is the secret of her charm for men?

"She possesses the quality that men admire most in a woman," says an old bachelor who has been listening to the conversation "and that is womanliness. That is the magnet that draws the hearts of men to a woman as irresistibly as the magnet draws the needle. That is the lure that is more potent than all the spells that the vamp can cast about a man."

Beauty? Of course men admire beauty, of course a pretty face catches a man's fancy, of course a man likes to be seen out with a peach who makes other men rubber and envy him his luck.

But did you ever notice how few beauties make really good matches? Can't you recall a dozen old maids who are reputed to have been great belles in their youth, and haven't you heard your mother wonder why those women, who were once so much admired, never married?

The explanation is, that men's admiration of feminine beauty is personal. They like to look at a beautiful woman, as they like to look at some masterpiece of art, but they don't covet it for themselves. They are perfectly willing for some other man to hang the living picture on his own walls. If you will observe, you will see that while beauty insures a girl a good time it doesn't guarantee her a wedding ring.

As for style and smartness, they cut no figure in a man's estimation of a woman. A man likes to know that the woman he goes out with is well dressed, he likes her to have on something that is soft and pretty, and light colored, but he could care, he knows, nor cares nothing for the details of her toilette. No woman makes a winning with a man by looking like a daily hint from Paris. He gets cold feet when he thinks of the price tag.

Cleverness? The majority of men still like feminine helplessness when they are scrambled. Only a small minority of men are big enough and intelligent enough themselves to like women who are as well educated as they are and who have as much sense as they have. The great mass of males want women different from women. If you are a woman who wants a man to look up to him and adore you, and that is why clever women never get men that suit how clever they are. Very few women are the fools they seem to be.

As for wit in a woman, commits hara kiri with a most man. She says brilliant and satirical things, or shows that she is good at repartee. Men have an instinctive fear of ridicule, and they are afraid of that such a woman is having fun at their expense. I have never known a woman who talked much who was popular with men. You have a hundred times heard that the women who laughs well laugh at them.

No. It is not the showy qualities in women that attract men. It is womanliness, that subtle something that differentiates the sexes and that makes them attractive for each other.

I don't know that one can just define womanliness. It is certainly so far one thing. You cannot imagine the woman who is being rough and rude and coarse. You cannot think of her dressing in a loud clothes or indulging in imitation man or herself, or swearing, or telling off-color stories.

The very essence of her is dependence and refinement, and even man who consciously detests these in his bosom unknown subtleties of chivalry and he wants to take care of her and help her. I have known hopeless women to be able to cash in this quality of womanliness into a fortune as an asset because it made every man give them a hand up.

And another thing, womanliness attracts much because it has in it the quality of tenderness, of motherliness. Men never get over being boys. They are kids at heart when they are eighty, and what a man wants in a woman is not a helper, but a comforter. He wants to go to some woman who will condole his ills, and weep over them and forget them, and love him in spite of them.

Men spend their days with other men. When the want to discuss big topics, they talk about them to men who are experts along these lines. When they come home at night or seek women's society, they want a change. They like to be petted, and cajoled and made much of and fed upon fish dishes, and talk about trifles. That is why this womanly woman, who bores other women stiff, never seems to get on the nerves of men.

Perhaps when you come down to brass tacks it's mock egotism that makes him prefer the womanly women to her more brilliant sisters, but however that may be, the womanly woman who is gentle, and tender, and sweet is the one who wins out with men, and who can marry as often as she likes.

Something To Think About

Who Is Your Hero?

By F. A. WALKER

A FEW days ago the police of a great city picked upon the street a destitute boy of 15. He was ragged and hungry. When they searched him at the station house the only thing they found in his pockets was a bit of rumpled paper upon which had been written as the title "My Heroes" and underneath were listed these names:

Theodore Roosevelt,
General Pershing,
Jesse James,
Tracy the Bandit,
Captain Kidd.

A strange and interesting list and yet there are comprehensible reasons for the presence of every name that filled this youthful individual hall of fame.

We begin to choose our heroes very early in life. The story of "Jack and the Beanstalk" has furnished many a boy with his first ideal of bravery and daring.

"Robinson Crusoe"—the characters of James Fenimore Cooper—even the overdrawn adventures of the old "yellow covers" and "The Nickel Library" and Cap Collier's creations thrilled many of us to ambitions which faded away with boyhood.

One thing is certain: No boy ever worshipped a man as a hero unless in his opinion he had done something extraordinary, something that really entitled him to admiration.

There are heroes in evil as well as in good.

No one could doubt the personal bravery of Jesse James any more than he could question the military daring of General Pershing. One was a hero in evil deeds, the other a hero in good—if we may still call

If we pick our heroes for the purposes of imitation we should be very careful. Not many men would history were desirable examples in all the details of their lives. Every great man has his weakness. An ideal hero would have to be a composite man, a combination of the best qualities of many men.

The most popular hero that ever lived was undoubtedly Napoleon. But of him Ernest Renan said in one of the greatest of his short addresses that he would rather be the humblest of French peasants than the man at whose commands hundreds of thousands had died.

Who is your hero? Why is he your hero?

For Long the Humblest of Colors, Brown Has Come Into Its Own and Is Enjoying a Long Run of Favor

BROWN, for the first time in the history of clothes, seems to be coming out of the shadow that was cast upon it by early prejudices and associations.

To the primitive brown was nothing but mud color, and the very word mud is associated in its derivation with the Greek work for toad. Then, too, it is the color of roads, of feathered wood, of dead leaves in autumn, the color seen in the sky only when violent storms may be expected. On the whole not very pleasant associations.

An all brown evening frock of georgette over satin with a girdle of frayed out satin.

About the only place in nature where brown is associated with an object of real beauty or pleasant association is in eyes, and the earlier poets, you know, often chose to call these black.

The tendency to dye brown hair gold, black or red shows that it has been less admired as a hair shade in spite of its frequency.

The Mourning Hue.

For centuries brown was regarded as the suitable hue for mourning in western Europe. The reason that many of the monastic costumes are brown is because they date from a time when brown was the color of penitence and sorrow just as black is today.

The fact that so many women wear their own brown tresses with considerably more becomingness than they would those rendered black by dye or blonde by chemicals, perhaps gave the hint that brown was in general becoming to a large number of faces. Then, too, women who wore brown furs—sable, mink, and the rest—learned the value of brown, though they might never have chosen it for a gown.

Brown had been worn often as a daytime color, recommended for its servicability, but no other color was so generally avoided as a possible evening shade. And strangely enough there are skins that look badly in brown by daylight—certain sallow, colorless skins—that with the softening effect of artificial light and the animation that usually comes to a woman's face in the evening, appear to great advantage in it.

It came into fashion before the close of the war as a color for the tea hour and the evening. Perhaps it was a direct outcome of the war-time necessity to wear clothes that were durable. It was a pleasing alternative of black. We thought it would go by the boards when, as we thought, the coming of peace would initiate a new demand for bright colors.

Strong in France.

But brown has persisted. It is strongest among well-dressed French women than among Americans, though there are several well-dressed women here who realize the effect that may be produced by wearing a frock of brown or black when other women have rather outdone themselves in colors.

The simplest construction is always the best in brown—just as it is in black.

The very long waistline combined with an indication of a normal waistline is produced in the frock shown in the cut by a placing of the overfrock of brown georgette over a sheath slip of brown satin. The girdle is formed by a rope of frayed-out satin which hangs down at the left side almost to the ground.

ALL THE NEWS OF ALL THE SPORTS ALL THE TIME

Baseball—the National Method of Relaxation

All Over the Once Land of the Spree Thousands Will Slam Perfect Strangers on Back Today.

By H. C. WITWER
Creator of Ed Harmon, the Bush Leaguer; "From Baseball to Boches," "The Leather Pushers."
Written for the United Press.
(Copyright 1921 by the United Press.)

Well, boys and girls, today is the most important day in history since Columbus stepped off the skiff and, raising his well-shaped eyebrows, remarked "So this is America."

Every nation in the world has its own particular method of relaxation. England and Ireland, for example, play the quaint but thrilling game of sinn fein and make each other like it.

In Russia the national pastime is throwing dynamite and wishing they had not been so hasty in hooking the czar.

France gets recreation by making faces at the new German ambassador whilst in Germany the favorite sport is all sitting around in Der Biergarten wishing it was 1913.

However, in the land which joins the Anti-Saloon league, but greeted the League of Nations with a sarcastic smile, baseball is our national way of letting off steam.

Biggest Since Panama Canal.

Today is the opening of the big league season and to us is the biggest opening we have figured in since the Panama Canal. Let us say, which you must admit, that is a considerable opening.

All over the once land of the spree wherever there is a major league baseball town, thousands of otherwise normal Americans will slam perfect strangers on the back, yell their heads of fand go home to dinner hoarse and late, but happy.

Baseball is how we victims of the income tax, drug store gin, the blue law agitator and most of the movies keep from going crazy.

The umpire who makes the raw decision at once becomes a personal enemy. A moment before we regarded him with casual interest. He calls a strike and we honestly and sincerely want to murder him.

The guy who slams out the three-bagger with the bases as full as revenue officers, is to our minds, us. That is what we would have done.

And so for two hours or more we sit and yell and argue over the fortunes of nine men with an interest in what each one does that would flatter Douglas Fairbanks. No matter who wins or loses, it will get us individually nothing, yet as Americans we must take sides.

It is perhaps typically American that we are today more interested in the eighteen men composing two teams we watch cross bats—as the cub reporter writes—than we are in the twenty or more countries who compose the League of Nations.

Maybe that is what's the matter. There are too many in that league.

THE National Spring Panacea

By D W. FRATCHER.

I am a leather-coated pill, a sedative for every ill—for pain to which all flesh is heir I dissipate the trouble there and through the veins in tingling flood I send the scant and sluggish blood. Like mists before the rising sun I banish ailments, every one, and bring a smile to every lip of those who'd profit by my tip. I'm death to "rumatiz" and gout and festive germs that float about—a tonic rich in everything that strikes for health and strength and vim. I banish wrinkles from the face—slow down the mad and staggering pace that has hedged about and fettered man since his mad rush for wealth began. Great Hydra-head and fear and doubt flaunt the white flag when I'm about. I soothe the nerves and aching head and give a touch of youth instead and bring the crimson to the cheek on pallid face of those who seek relief from cough and dreadful "flu" or kindred ails of sombre hue. No druggist sells what I promote, no doctor has an antidote, nor quack who uses every lure to prove his dope will kill or cure has nothing on my well known power to give to each a soothing hour. Why hie away to woods or spring where ague lurks and 'skeeters sting, where flies torment and bullfrogs croak or meals are canned and campfires smoke, when, presto! here on every hand you have the cureall at command—a flawless gem of untold wealth in relaxed nerves and throbbing health! Forget anon the humdrum things which care and ceaseless worry brings, for from all strife of busy street I'm like the balm of music sweet, which lulls and soothes and cancels care in home and shop and everywhere. I pray that all who ail be wise and take to heart my sage advice 'tis tried and true—I'll wager all—

Remember the 5,000.

All the kill joys and crape hangers have been informing us that baseball is due for a slump this year in local circles as well as others, but judging from the amount of enthusiasm that is being displayed in Wichita Falls over the opening game Friday these gloom spreaders have another think coming. The advance sale of seats is just as large at the present time as it was before the opener last year and one and all are doing their own bit of boosting for the attendance cup. Don't forget that it will take at least 5,000 fans to win that cup and every one counts.

Arrangements Completed.

Ben Neal, "Doc" Hoover and their fellow Kiwanians have left no stone unturned to bring the fans out and have practically completed arrangements. The parade will be organized at the city hall at 2 o'clock and in it will be included the police, city officials, a band, members of both teams, the fire department, Kiwanis club, University clubs and other organizations. The fans will bring up in the rear and will undoubtedly march to Athletic park in a body. The game will be called at 4 o'clock.

Darrough May Work.

Though the Skipperr is not giving out any information as to who will work for him Friday in the box, we would not be a bit surprised to see Clarence Darrough receive the assignment. "Midget" has been groomed for the occasion. He will probably be opposed on the hill by Williams. If he is he will have a battle on his hands as Williams is supposed to be one of the Marine aces this year. The rest of the Spudder lineup will be the same as has been working in the exhibition games with the possible exception of a slight shift in the batting order.

Won't Know Marines.

Local fans won't recognize the Marines when they step onto the field as only one vet will start the fray. Palmer is the only man who was with the club last year who is expected to start the game. Falk, Gleich and Tate compose the new outfield while Smith, Galloway, Felix and Palmer will guard the inner works. Wirts, behind the bat, is also a newcomer. The batting order is still in doubt as there is a chance that Feljx, the new first sacker, may not arrive in time.

Day Should Be Fair.

The weather man has been anything but kind to the Spudders during the exhibition period but it looks now as if he had spent his wrath and would slip us a nice warm day Friday without any hurricane. Most of the games to date have been played on damp, cold or windy days and only the most ardent fans turned out. Other leagues seem to have run into a bad piece of weather throughout the country today, but Old Sol should be out in all his glory by Friday.

Umpires Look Good.

Umpires Kane and Daly made a hit with the few fans that were at the park yesterday. Kane worked behind the bat and Daly in the bags. The former has a method all his own when it comes to calling balls and strikes and his voice is bound to make a hit with the fans. He gargles his announcements, but in such a manner that all can hear him distinctly. We might state right here too that he's a man who is going to boss the situation at all times. His word will be law and no player will ride him to any extent and get away with it. There was lots of room for improvement in the umpire staff last year, but Roberts has remedied that fault.

Fines Will Stick.

Numerous fines were slapped on the players last year that did not stick. It will be different this year. When a man is fired from the park or has a fine assessed the fact must be reported to the official scorer by the umpire. The scorer, in return, must report the case to the league secretary and he will see that the fine goes. The players got away with murder last year, but will think twice before they speak this summer.

CARDINAL THIRD SACKER SAID TO HAVE SIGNED

CHICAGO, April 13.—Milton Stock, St. Louis Cardinal third baseman, who had been a holdout all spring, reported to Manager Rickey last night and is said to have signed a contract.

SPUDDERS WALK AWAY WITH EASY VICTORY

Tanner's Clouting Features Salmites' 10 to 2 Win Over Abilene.

The slugging Spudders battered two Abilene pitchers yesterday afternoon to all corners in and out of the lot and emerged victorious over the West Texas leaguers 10 to 2. The whole game was played under a lowering sky and the latter portion in a drizzling rain. About 100 weather-beaten fans gathered for the occasion and were rewarded by lots of clouting on the part of the Salmites.

The assortment of hooks served Buddy Tanner by both Brown and Crowson were made to order and the Spudder midfield guardian had a field day. He cracked out three hard singles and wound up his spree by socking the apple out of the orchard via left field. "Smiler" Bischoff also poled one out of bounds and collected a one-base blow.

Outside of these two excursion bangs the matinee was featureless. Salm sent Darrough, Bowman and Anderson to the mound in the order named and the trip had little difficulty in turning their opponents.

Frequent boots by the visitors helped the Spudders to pile up their ten counters, while the Spudders also kicked in with a few misplays, two of which resulted in a tally.

LINES TO A PUTTER.

That temperamental—that short-sighted putter,
That obstinate putter
That I can't control—
How often with wrath it incites me to sputter,
Profanely to mutter,
When I lose the hole.
—. W. P. H.

The appearance of a large flock of official box scores is to a large number of non-combatants much like the appearance of April blossoms to a naturalist. In type these scores may look to be dull and lifeless, but they tell the most compact story of the year without a wasted word. The non-baseball fan would be a trifle jolted to know how many eager eyes are peering at the base hit column attached to such names as Sisler, Cobb, Speaker, Hornsby, Young, Collins, Ruth, etc., in the grand Conclave of Clout.

THE SURVIVORS.

With the start of a season it may be of impaired interest to know that from the old Cubs of 1906 there are now just two survivors still attached to the pastime.

These two are John J. Evers, who returns to the Cubs as team leader, and Frank Schulte, who still remains in Class AA as an active performer—15 years after Chance's great machine won 116 games in a single year.

When Evers was wearing alien uniforms the old guard still thought of him as a Chicago Cub, and whenever this people finish the year we off a hunch that the Evers-Cub combination of 1921 will be one of the season's features in more ways tha ntwo.

NOW AND AFTER.

The golf links lie so near the mill
That almost every day
The laboring children can look out
And see the men at play.
—Sarah Cleghorn.

But some day when our brains have grown
Ten thousand years or so,
A smarter race will not believe
That things could happen so.

NO ALIBI NOW.

If our amateur golfers can't return on this forthcoming occasion with a handful of British crown laurel there will certainly be no alibi to offer. For with Evans, Ouimet and Jones heading a strong cast we are opening fire with our heaviest artillery and if that isn't sufficient to blast a way through it will be some time before we ever send a stronger team.

A peculiar thing about these invasions is that lone golfers in the past have done better than a well bunched attack.

In 1914 we sent over Evans, Ouimet and Travers, who made no headway. But in 1913 Heinie Shmidt, who had never figured to any extent in any American championship, went through to the sixth round before Hilton finally upset him on the 19th hole. And in 1920, Bob Gardner, who practically no assistance, went to the 37th of the final round. Part of this is due to the 18-hole test where a slow start may bring sudden discomfiture. But without offering an advance chortle, we will be more than mildly surprised if Evans, Jones and Ouimet are all bumped off before the laurel wreath is finally adjusted to the winner's clammy brow.

Once again it is well to remember that one man is very largely responsible for the new atmosphere in which bas-ball is getting its start. This man is Judge Landis, who has made Hercules look like a minor leader when it comes to cleaning out a row of Augean stables that were beginning to offend the normal nostril. And for this work the judge needed but two weapons—Fairness and Fearlessness, which have never taken the count yet in any bout upon the records.

INTERSCHOLASTICS IN CHICAGO BROUGHT OUT MANY COLLEGE STARS

Annual Track Meet of School Boy Athletes Will Be Resumed Next Month.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Many of the athletic stars of the college world began their rise at the University of Chicago's annual interscholastic track meet. Athletic Director A. A. Stagg said today, commenting on the event that will be reopened May 28 after a war intermission.

This, Coach Stagg said, was due in good part to the fact that many of the interscholastics had been chiefly state meets, while the Chicago meet had through its location at the hub of the middle west become practically the national interscholastic track meet of the country.

"Arlie Mucks, the University of Wisconsin star, who holds the world's discus record, started his world famous career at the Chicago interscholastic," Mr. Stagg remarked. "He came from a high school at Oshkosh, Wis., and won the discus that year, 1910. The next year he took the discus and shot put and won the individual championship.

"Larson, who recently made a world's record high jump in the west, had only a local reputation when he put in his entry from St. George, Utah. He proved the best jump in the 1914 meet.

"Ned Merriam, now track coach at Ames, Iowa, hardly knew what a track shoe was when he won the quarter mile in 1905. He ran around the outside of the track and did it in 52 4-5. Merriam later won the western conference quarter for three years and the conference low hurdles for two years.

Johnson Received Start.

"Another high school boy unknown in this section when he came to Chicago was Carl Johnson, who later became the Michigan star and track captain. He came on in 1915 from Lewis and Clark high school in Spokane and took the broad jump with 23 feet 4½ inches, the best ever made in the 16 years the meet has been held.

"Ira Davenport, the Chicago runner, who later set western conference records in the quarter and half mile, one of which still stands, was practically an unknown high school athlete from Oklahoma when he first ran in this interscholastic."

Among other college stars who gained early laurels as high school or academy boys at the Chicago interscholastic meet since it started in 1902, Mr. Stagg mentioned Ingersoll of Dartmouth, Hogenson of Chicago, C. Hoyt, the Grinnell star, Sol Butler, Olympic champion, Sherman Landers, Pennsylvania star, Rose of Dartmouth, W. P. Comstock of Chicago, Craig of Michigan, Smart of Northwestern, Maxwell of Swarthmore, Caughey of the Stanford and Olympic teams, Parry of Chicago, Talbot, for years the most prominent Missouri valley weight man, Gliffen of Illinois, Bird of Illinois and Olivet college, Shiverisk of Cornell, Roy Campbell of Chicago, Osborn of Northwestern, Harvey of Wisconsin, Paul of Pennsylvania, Watson of Minnesota, Tenney and Otis of Chicago, Whitted of Stanford, Packer of Ames, Gilfallon of Notre Dame, Nicholson of Missouri, Wahl of Wisconsin, Schroeder of Iowa, Page of Ames, Schobinger of Illinois, Foss of Cornell and Frank Loomis who did not go to college but won the Olympic 440 low hurdles in world's record time.

JUDGE LANDIS TELLS CUBS AND CARDS TO PLAY GAME SQUARE

Spirit of Fair Play Will Soon Change Fans' Attitude Says High Commissioner.

CHICAGO, April 13.—"Play the game hard and square and take as many chances as before," Judge Landis, high commissioner of baseball, told members of the Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals and a host of their admirers in an address last night.

"It is literally true to say that never before in any field of activity has anything been scrutinized as will our activity be scrutinized this season," Judge Landis told the players. "We must put up with grand stand whispers about little misplays for a while but the characteristic spirit of fair play will soon enough change that attitude."

Judge Landis said he had received invitations from all the clubs but would attend the game here.

One of the largest opening day crowds in history was predicted today for the opening game at Chicago between the St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs.

Grover Cleveland Alexander was Evers' pitching choice with O'Farrell behind the plate as the veteran Killifer has a sprained throwing hand. The signing of Milton Stock, Cardinal third baseman last night, gives the Cardinals a strengthened lineup that is expected to offer the Cubs a real battle.

Gibbons Defeats Williams.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Tommy Gibbons of St. Paul defeated Larry Williams of Bridgeport, Conn., in the fourth round of a 15-round match last night when Williams' seconds acknowledged defeat by throwing a towel into the ring. The Connecticutt boxer took a count of nine on seven occasions, three times in the first round, three times in the second and once in the third.

BASEBALL CLOUDS ARE CLEARING UP—SUNDAY

By REV. W. A. SUNDAY,
Written for the United Press.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, April 13.—The clouds in the baseball and business world are clearing up. The Monroe doctrine is still on the map and Judge Landis as chief umpire will see that the game is played fair. His appointment to that responsible position served notice on the gamblers that they must keep their hands off the game.

The players, managers, the press and the public all seem to have gotten a new stock of enthusiasm and confidence has been restored in the great national pastime. God reigns, Harding is president, the grand stand and the bleachers will be filled with cheering music and we will hit the old stride.

WEATHER MAN OFF DUTY IN WESTERN

Rainy Weather Predicted in All Cities Where Opening Games Are Scheduled.

KANSAS CITY, April 13.—Unsettled weather, with some rain, prevailed at Wichita, Joplin, Tulsa and Oklahoma City today for the opening of the 1921 Western league baseball season. From reports received here doubt was expressed by observers that games could be played in all the cities.

In Wichita, where Sioux City opens the season, the management was finding comfort in the fact that it had taken out rain insurance, the policy calling for a payment of $2,000 if one-tenth of an inch of moisture falls two hours before the game on any of the three opening days.

Ceremonies incident to the opening of the season had been arranged at all the towns. The day was made a holiday with municipal officials and civic organizations participating.

Especially elaborate celebrations had been arranged at Tulsa where St. Joseph opens, and at Oklahoma City where Omaha is the visiting club.

President Al Tearney of the league was one of those who expected to be in the stands at Joplin for the game with Des Moines. President Tearney came here yesterday to confer with his staff of umpires. In a statement he declared the league was facing one of the most promising seasons in its history.

Expect to Reach Semi-Finals Soon In Golf Tourney

The field is narrowing down in the Golf club's match for the Art cup, and is expected to reach the semi-final stage by the end of the week.

In the second round which has just been completed the results, in addition to those already published, were as follows: D. S. Golding beat Britain, one up; J. L. Art beat Ruhsam, Norton beat Altorf, Booer forfeited to G. Rowe, Paskins beat Francis, Hampshire forfeited to H. L. Hunter, Walter Robbins beat Glover.

Two matches in the third round have been played; S. L. McDowell beat Art and W. E. Norton beat Weldon, four up.

In the semi-finals of the second flight of the earlier tournament, L. T. Burns is matched against T. F. Hunter, and Scott Bower against C. O. Davis, these four being the survivors. This flight will probably complete its match this week.

NATIONAL LEAGUE HEAD PREDICTS CLOSE RACE

By JOHN A. HEYDLER,
(President of the National League)
Written for the United Press.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Today the National League gets away on what has the appearance of the closest race of years. Last year's dual battle between Brooklyn and New York will become a three cornered affair with Pittsburgh as the new comer.

Practically every club in the league has been strengthened during the winter season and all seem to have a chance to finish near the top.

Last year was baseball's greatest season and there is no reason to believe that the records of the past season will not be equaled if not eclipsed.

THIS TIME LAST YEAR.

National League.

Boston 6, New York 3; Barnes and Eayres.

Brooklyn 9, Philadelphia 2; Cadore and Rikey.

Cincinnati 7, Chicago 3; Reuther and Alexander.

Pittsburgh 5, St. Louis 5 (10 innings); Adams and Doak.

American League.

Philadelphia 3, New York 1; Perry and Shawkey.

Cleveland 5, St. Louis 0; Coveleskie and Sothoron.

Chicago 3, Detroit 2 (11 innings); Cicotte and Ehmke.

Babe Ruth dropped a fly and lost a game for the Yankees.

Pipp of Yanks, Roush of Cincinnati, Perkins of Athletics, and Heilman, Detroit, knocked home runs.

SPORT BRIEFS

The Washington weather man had up the "fair and warmer" sign today for the opening game against Boston. President Harding was to toss out the first ball. Congress continued to receive some attention, of course, but it looked as though they might have to search the ball park to find a quorum. Among those to be in the boxes were Vice-president Coolidge, Gen. Pershing and many congressional leaders, while President Johnson of the American League also planned to see the season get under way at the Senators' field. General Pershing was scheduled to lead the parade of players to the flag pole when the opening ceremonies began.

George A. Ormiston of the Oakmount club, announced today that he will be unable to accompany the American golfers on their invasion of Great Britain next month.

The board of regents of the University of California have given their approval to a plan of the students body and alumni to finance the construction of a proposed stadium, the cost of which is estimated at between $800,000 and $1,000,000.

The champion Cleveland club and St. Louis were scheduled to start their drive for the American League pennant at St. Louis today, but the weather forecast of "showers and cooler" threatened to put a damper on the opening.

The familiar cry of "Play Ball" will echo in the American Association today when eight clubs swing into action for the opening games of the twentieth annual pennant race. The St. Paul club, winner of the 1920 flag, will start the season at Milwaukee, Minneapolis will take the field at Kansas City, Columbus at Indianapolis, and Toledo at Louisville.

The New York Yankees, boasting the most formidable array of players in the team's history, will open the major league season in New York today with the Philadelphia Athletics as opponents. Carl Mays, the under-handed hurler, will do mound duty for the Yankees, with Wallie Schang at the receiving end. Scott Perry probably will be Mack's choice. Babe Ruth will be there.

A game with Pittsburgh opens the season at Cincinnati. Adams and Schmidt for Pittsburgh and Luque and Wingo for the Reds seemed most probably the batters.

Harvard and Yale are to decline a sport armistice long enough to permit a joint tennis team of Crimson and Blue players to meet a combination from the English universities of Oxford and Cambridge at the Longwood Cricket club, Brooklyn, July 4 and 5. Leon De Turenne of Harvard will captain the American team.

University of Pennsylvania varsity and junior varsity crews left today for New Haven where they will meet the Yale crews on Saturday. Ted, "Kid" Lewis, former welterweight boxing champion, and Augie Rattner of New York, will meet in the Gotham tonight in a 15-round bout. Lewis knocked out Rattner in a bout at Montreal three years ago.

RED HOLDOUTS WILL PLAY IN CINCINNATI OR ELSE—

CINCINNATI, OHIO, April 13.—Eddie Roush, outfielder, and Henry Groh, third baseman, holdouts of the Cincinnati team, will not be disposed of, according to August Herrmann, president of the club. Following a meeting of the club directors yesterday Mr Herrmann gave out this announcement:

"After mature consideration the Cincinnati baseball club has decided that Roush and Groh shall play with Cincinnati or not at all. All offers for trades will be rejected."

Lewis vs. Londos.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Ed Strangler Lewis meets Jim Londos, Greek wrestling wonder, here tonight.

Stanislaus Zbyszko, giant Pole, will take holds with John Pesek, Nebraska farmer.

'TWILIGHT' LEAGUE RE-ARRANGES DATES

Players Want to Take In Spudder Game — Inter-League Contest Suggested for July 4.

In order to show their sporting blood as dyed-in-the-wool Wichita Falls fans, and to help the Spudders "kop the kup" for attendance on opening day, the executive committee of the Twilight league voted last night to rearrange the league schedule as to eliminate playing on Friday, April 15.

The changes made in the schedule will result in the Morgan Seeders playing the Pond Laundry nine Thursday afternoon at the North Side diamond; the Methodists and the North Side Athletic club battling on Thursday at the Pond diamond, while on Sunday the Elks and the University club will stage a hectic struggle on some local diamond to be selected later by the two managers. The last named game is expected to be a "stem-winder" as the Elks are traveling at a wicked clip at the present time, while the former college stars of the University club are just beginning to get their ancient "soupbones" in shape and appear on paper to have an unusually well balanced team.

The league executives voted last night to order last Friday's game between the University club and the Methodists played over at a later date, the action being taken as a result of a protest by Manager Brooks of the Methodists, the protest being based on the ground that the game was not properly scored.

G. C. Raley, Jimmy Maxwell and Sid Stanfield were named as additional umpires for the circuit, and strict orders were issued to the teams by the executive committee regarding the scoring of all future games.

Secretary H. C. English was instructed to take up with the secretary of the City league the question of a game July 4th at Athletic park between the leaders at that time of the two amateur leagues. The Spudders will be on the road on the fourth, which falls on a Monday when neither of the local circuits has games scheduled.

MISTRIAL RESULTS ON MURDER CHARGE WITH EVIDENCE IN CASE OF WILLIE SHELTON SET FOR MAY 16 WHEN ALMOST READY FOR JURY.

CLAIMED DEFENDANT NOT MENTALLY RESPONSIBLE

Accused Denies That He Is Negro, But Claims Half Indian, Half Italian Parentage.

While the court was preparing his charge in the Willie Shelton case late Wednesday afternoon, the state produced another witness, Bob Red, who testified as to a conversation that he had overheard between two negroes with reference to the alleged murder. The defense claimed that the witness was a surprise, which resulted in the court granting a mistrial and resetting the case for May 16.

Picturing the defendant Willie Shelton, half Italian and half Indian, as a man with a mighty mind which also led him to believe that he was the hero in many incidents, was the method of defense employed by his counsel at his trial Wednesday.

The defendant objected to being referred to as a negro, and explained that his mother was a full blooded Indian and that his father was an Italian. He entered a plea of not guilty to the indictment which charged him with the murder of Thomas Absher, the aged night watchman of the Bob Waggoner building who was brutally assaulted on the night of October 2, 1920, receiving injuries from which he died three days later at the hospital. Shelton is represented by Judge Edgar Scurry and Ralph Mathis.

A confession, signed by the defendant, was introduced by the state in which Shelton related that he and two negroes by the name of Shorty and Waymon Fleming had gone into the building the night of the murder and that the other two men had struck the blow that had killed the watchman.

The defense sought to show that this statement was made as the result of a half idiotic mind which led the man to believe that he was the hero of many incidents and of a mind that was susceptible to any suggestion.

The defendant took the stand Wednesday afternoon and told that on the Saturday night of the murder that he had taken a girl to the show and then escorted her home, and that on his way back to the union depot he did not even pass by the Bob Waggoner building.

He said he arrived at the depot at 12:05 o'clock in the morning and that he remained there until 7 the same morning. He told that he did not know anything of the tragedy until Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock when he was arrested.

From that time on until he found himself in the Seymour jail his memory fails him, he said. He did not remember making a statement or signing one, but admitted that the signature to the signed statement was his own.

The case was being argued at a late hour Wednesday afternoon and was expected to go to the jury shortly before 5 o'clock.

The jury is composed of J. W. Snow, E. D. Guthrie, Horace Peay, A. W. High, H. M. Harrison, Walter Denny, C. W. Coffee, W. J. Gresham, J. C. Burks, E. B. Robinson, J. C. Yates, W. G. Miller.

TIMES DAILY MARKETS

New York Stocks—Grain and Provisions—Cotton—Livestock

COTTON MARKET.

New York Cotton.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Less favorable reports of the British labor situation and a sharp break in Liverpool had an unsettling effect in the cotton market here at the opening today. First prices were barely steady at a decline of 11 to 19 points under liquidation and southern and Liverpool selling of near months. Some of the Liverpool houses were buyers of later deliveries, however, while there was also a moderate demand believed to be for Japanese and Wall street accounts which soon steadied the market. May sold up from 11.93 to 12.02 and July from 12.52 to 12.60, and the buying was encouraged by reports of a better tone in the goods market. Liverpool cables advices reported a better spot demand in the English market.

Prices held steady during the morning owing to the absence of any important selling pressure and reports of encouraging trade prospects in Manchester. A price cable predicted that all Manchester mills would go on full time within three weeks should the labor troubles be settled. Toward midday, however, the market turned easier, July down to 12.47 from 12.62, with the general list ruling about 23 to 30 points lower.

After selling off to 12.42 for July or about 30 to 45 points net lower, the market steadied a few points on covering and was very quiet during the middle of the afternoon, with traders waiting for British labor news.

New Orleans Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, April 13.—London strike news again dominated the cotton market today and caused general selling as soon as the market opened. In the first half hour of the session prices lost 25 to 37 points, May dropping to 11.52.

After recovering 10 to 15 points on buying for long account, the market broke to new low levels under cablegrams from London and Liverpool stating that the strike movement appeared to be spreading. Toward 11:00 o'clock prices were down to levels 29 to 37 points under the finals of yesterday with May at 11.52.

The market was quieter and steadier after the noon hour, at its lowest it stood 32 to 37 points down but at 1:30 o'clock it stood at declines of but 19 to 25 points, realizing by shorts furnishing the demand.

Cotton closed steady at a decline of 13 to 16 points.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

CHICAGO, April 13.—With crop, economic and financial conditions all continuing bearish, the wheat market today developed fresh weakness. Selling was led by a house with southwestern connections and it was inferred that considerable of the selling must be against purchases to arrive. Opening prices, which varied from unchanged figures to 1c lower, including May at $1.25½ to $1.26¼ and July $1.09½ to $1.10½, were followed by additional setbacks although transient rallies intervened.

British strike advices counted as a special depressing factor. All deliveries of wheat went to the lowest prices yet this season. The close was heavy, 3c to 4¼c net lower, with May $1.22½ to $1.23 and July $1.07 to $1.07¼.

In corn there was much buying of May and selling of July, but all months tended downward with wheat. After opening ½@¾c off to a shade advance with July 60¼ to 60½c. The market worked irregularly lower.

Corn and oats, as well as wheat, dropped to a new low record for the season. Prices closed weak at 1¼c to 2¼c net decline, with July 58¾ to 59¼c.

Oats started unchanged to ¼c down, July 37¼c to 37½c, and holding close to the initial range.

Higher quotations on hogs helped provisions.

LIVESTOCK.

Fort Worth Market.

FORT WORTH, April 12.—Slow train service prevented an early activity in the livestock market today, most of the cattle and sheep failing to arrive until after 11 o'clock and a large number of hogs also making their appearance at an unseasonable hour. When all were in, receipts were estimated at 1,500 head of cattle, 2,500 hogs and 2,500 sheep.

Sales of cattle were made at steady prices. Good steers brought $7.00 to $7.50. Hogs averaged 10 to 15 cents higher, but there were shots displaying a greater advance. Shippers paid $8.00 for three cars of hogs, packers got two cars at $7.95 and most of the run cleared at $7.75 to $7.85. Figs remained steady, good stockers selling at $7.00 to $7.25.

Steady bids were offered for sheep and the market was active. Choice wethers went at $5.25 and good wethers brought $5.00. Genuine lambs sold at $9 to $10.25. Quotations:

NEW YORK STOCKS.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Today's stock market opened with a renewal of yesterday's pressure against the steel and equipment shares. Overnight announcement of the cut in prices by the United States Steel corporation failed to stabilize those issues. The first few transactions resulted in losses extending from fractions to 1 point in Crucible, Bethlehem, Republic and United States Steels and also American and Baldwin Locomotives. Rails and shippings, especially Canadian Pacific, Union Pacific and Northern Pacific and Mercantile Marine preferred registered similar declines and foreign oils, notably Royal Dutch, were heavy. Firmness was shown by International Paper, Utah Copper and a few specialties. Preliminary exchange rates on London reflected the tense British labor situation.

Dividend paying rails, particularly Northern Pacific, Canadian Pacific and Great Northern, made further price concessions at midday, grangers, coalers and cotton carriers also losing ground. The reaction extended to popular oils, Mexican Petroleum losing 2 points. Specialties became heavy. International Paper canceling its early advance.

Interested in Birds And Neighbors Were Interested in Man

NEW YORK, April 13.—An elderly man in tattered cap and suit sat motionless under a tree at 257th and Broadway when a mounted patrolman, informed that a "queer stranger" had been sleeping there three days, approached.

"I'm interested in birds," the old man said. "Particularly in the domestic affairs of the pair of robins above us. I have enjoyed their acquaintance three seasons."

He launched then into the story of a row that was being waged in the nest, the result, he said, of the laying there of a cuckoo's egg.

"The male bird wanted to throw it out but the female chirped 'No' and has hatched it. I am waiting to see what will happen next. Queer things, birds."

"Yes," said the policeman, "and the folks hereabouts think you're somewhat of a queer bird too."

"How very extraordinary," replied he of the tattered clothing, "here's my card."

The patrolman read:

"Professor Malcolm Ogilvie, New York Ornithological Society," and rode on.

CLYDE PELTZ CASE AFFIRMED BY COURT CRIMINAL APPEALS

AUSTIN, TEXAS, April 13.—The criminal court of appeals today affirmed the case of Clyde Peltz, from Wichita county, convicted of using an automobile belonging to another without the owner's consent. He was sentenced to 90 days in jail. The court also affirmed the case of Guy Zeebold from Parker county, given three years for automobile theft.

The vagrancy statute applies to persons who habitually are idle but not to those whose idleness is temporary and involuntary, according to another opinion of the court. The case of John Harris, from Bowie county, who had been convicted of vagrancy and fined $100, was reversed on grounds evidence did not justify conviction.

HENRY ZWEIFEL OF GRANBURY FEDERAL DISTRICT ATTORNEY

United States District Attorney R. E. Taylor received a telegram Wednesday noon while attending federal court here that Henry Zweifel of Granbury, Texas, has been named as his successor, to take effect at once.

Mr. Taylor, who is waiting upon the grand jury now in session here, tendered his resignation several months ago, but was asked to remain in office until the successor had been appointed by the republican administration. He will remain in this city until his duties are completed at this term of court.

The retiring district attorney has already opened offices at Fort Worth and will take up law practice at that place upon the completion of his duties here.

It was stated that the information regarding the appointment of Mr. Zweifel was unofficial. Local attorneys stated, however, that they had understood for some time that Mr. Zweifel would be named.

OFFICERS PROMISE EARLY SOLUTION OF MYSTIFYING MURDER

Solution of the mystery murder of John Whitman, who met his death when a bullet fired from a speeding Ford roadster entered his head last Friday night, is at hand according to local officers who have been working on the case continuously since that time.

Various clues were followed by the officers, but it finally simmered down to one and this string will lead to the arrest of the two men who occupied the murder car, is the belief of officers.

Officials state that the men will be under arrest before Thursday noon, but would not disclose where the arrests would be made. It was hinted, however, that the men had been trailed to a distant city and that information received was to the effect that their apprehension could be anticipated at any time.

TARRANT COUNTY ORPHANS GO OUT TO SEE THE WORLD FOUND ASLEEP IN STATION

By United Press.

FORT WORTH, April 13.—Seven children ranging from six to eleven years old, who started out from the Tarrant County Orphans home early yesterday to "see the world" on a combined capital of 31 cents, were found asleep in the interurban station at Handley early today.

The children slipped away from the home so quietly that an all day and night search by authorities and citizens failed to locate them. They were discovered huddled in the interurban station by a passerby.

City Briefs

A five-passenger Paige touring car owned by James Sugden, 1203½ Lamar, was stolen from in front of the Perkins-Timberlake store late Tuesday night, according to reports to the police. The machine bore a Texas state license number 569320, seal number 391895, and engine number 102749. This was the only theft reported during th eevening.

The city police court has been presenting a rather forsaken appearance during the last three days, very few cases having been brought up for trial. The inevitable speeders, together with a few vags and an occasional drunk, make up the morning's call. Two jury cases, both on vagrancy charges, were scheduled to be called Wednesday afternoon.

BELIEVE GERMANY MAY BE ENCOURAGED TO EVADE PAYMENT

By LLOYD ALLEN
United Press Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, April 13.—Great Britain was disturbed today by President Harding's recommendation for technical peace with the Central Powers.

Despite the reassurance of high officials, there was a general belief that the message will encourage Germany in evading payment of reparations.

Definite rejection of the League of Nations also caused a belief that America was determined to let the European powers settle with Germany as best they may.

"What's In a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

ENID

PERHAPS the sole example of a name which maintains its original beauty and dignity and is without derivations or diminutives, is Enid, signifying soul. The first and immortal Enid was made so by Tennyson, who rescued from oblivion the charming idyll of Geraint and Enid and placed them among the chivalry of the Round Table. This history was found in the "Maturgeon" and a "Triad" mentioned Enid as one of thethree ladies of King Arthur's court. She is as beautiful as a picture of wifely devotion as the patient Grisell.

The name Enid is a Celtic form of animus, meaning soul. It is not difficult to perceive how the successive changes came about, through differing pronunciations. Enid was probably a connecting link in the transition and for euphony, the word became Enid. All this must remain supposition, however, as there is no accurate history concerning the name, so she is accepted as a poetic fact and as such her vogue long since established in England, France and America.

She appears as Enide in the French verse of Christien de Troyes, but she is better known as the wife of the Prince of Devon of romance, whom Tennyson describes in his "Enid and Elaine":

"The brave Geraint, a knight of Arthur's court,
A tributary prince of Devon, one
Of that great order of the Table
Round,
Had married Enid, Yniol's only child,
And loved her as he loved the light of heaven.
And as the light of heaven varies,
now
At sunrise, now at sunset, now by night
With moon and trembling stars, so loved Geraint
To make her beauty vary day by day,
In crimsons and in purples and in gems,
And Enid, but to please her husband's eye,
Who had first found and loved her in a state
Of broken fortunes, daily fronted him
In some fresh splendor, and the Queen herself,
Grateful to Prince Geraint for the service done
Loved her, and often with her own white hands
Arrayed and decked her, as the loveliest,
Next after her own self, in all the court.

Enid's jewel is the beryl which has the power to reawaken love in married people. It likewise makes the wearer amiable and unconquerable. To dream of it signifies happiness in store. Monday is said to be Enid's lucky day and three her mystic number.

EIGHT STORY BUILDING BEING MOVED WITHOUT DISTURBING TENANTS

PITTSBURGH, April 13.—Engineers directing the work of moving an eight story steel and brick business building in the downtown section expected to have the structure resting forty feet from its former location late today. The work of moving the building started yesterday, and before the close of the day the 4,000-ton structure, including the basement and sidewalks, rested eight feet north of the original foundation.

All service was maintained in the structure during the moving process yesterday. No furniture or stock was removed from the building and employes remained at their desks. The change in the location was made necessary by the formation of a new highway, the Boulevard of the Allies.

NOTIFIES SHERIFF THAT HE SHOT NEGRO

Jesse Rolligan, Negro, Walks to Jail After Killing Man in His Wife's Room.

At a few minutes after 1 o'clock Wednesday moring there was a knock at the door of Sheriff Fred Smith's home. Jesse Rolligan, a negro, notified the sheriff that he had just killed another negro and that he had come to give himself up.

The sheriff, after questioning the man, drove out to the servant's house at the rear of the residence at 2500 Tenth street, where he found the man's story to be true. John Henry, 21 years old, was lying on the floor, dead, with an ugly shotgun wound in his left breast. The wife of Rolligan was in the room and she said that her husband had shot the man.

According to the story told by Rolligan, he and his wife had been separated for several months although he occasionally visited her and sent her money each week. He said that he had been watching the place for some little time, having suspicioned infidelity on the part of his wife.

Late Tuesday night he went to his brother-in-law's place and secured a shotgun and proceeded to his home. Upon opening the door he saw Henry in the place and he walked a few steps farther and fired the shot. After the shooting the negro said he returned the gun to his brother-in-law and then walked to the county jail to report.

NAVY AND ARMY READY FOR PEACE OR FOR WAR SECRETARIES DECLARE

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Declarations that the navy department is ready to accept what congress will appropriate and keep the fleet "ready and fit to fight" and that the war department is pursuing a policy of retrenchment in an effort to get down to "normalcy," were made by Secretaries Denby and Weeks last night before the American legion post of the National Press club at a military-naval night.

Other speakers included Ambassador Jusserand of France, who urged the "gentlemen of pen and sword" to keep in their hearts "the spirit of '76 and the spirit of 1917." Assistant Secretary Roosevelt and a number of army and navy officers, members of congress and of the diplomatic corps were in attendance.

Secretary Denby spoke enthusiastically of the "romance of the navy," declaring that "the fleet is a glorious thing and every American ought to know it; every American ought to know what it is."

"The navy," he added, "is ready for peace, ready for war."

A pressing problem of the war department, Secretary Weeks said, "is to cut the cost of the individual soldier."

Adjutant General Harris said it was not exaggeration to state that "the records of the world today, nearly 30 months after the signing of the armistice, are far more nearly complete than were those of the Civil war 30 years after its close."

CARPENTERS AT WORK RECEIVE $10 A DAY

Organization Leaders State That Practically All Men Are on Jobs.

Union carpenters are still receiving the old wage scale of $10 per day, according to officials of the organization, who further state that only a few of the men are out of work. Several men have left the city for other places where it is claimed they are receiving a bonus over the wage scale.

W. B. McNeeley of the Carpenters' union states that no action has been taken by the members, but that the carpenters are working on jobs where they are receiving $10 a day. If any less than that amount is offered, union members say they will not work.

According to the workmen, only one firm in the city insisted on only paying $8 a day, as proposed by the contractors in their communication to the union several weeks ago. Two carpenters refused the lower scale and immediately left for Duncan, Okla., where it is said contractors are paying bonus in addition to the scale.

DR. DUTTON TO LECTURE AT FIRST M. E. CHURCH ON 'UNCLE SAM FACING WORLD'

"Uncle Sam Facing the World" is the subject of a lecture to be delivered Thursday night at 8 o'clock at the First Methodist church, Seventh and Lamar, by Dr. Dean C. Dutton of Oklahoma.

Dr. Dutton will be in the city for a few days in the interest of the Oklahoma City College campaign for a $1,500,000 fund, of which $400,000 has already been raised; no admission will be charged at the lecture, nor will any collection be taken.

An announcement of the lecture describes Dr. Dutton as an orator of exceptional ability and says that his address is one which all who are interested in good citizenship will thoroughly enjoy. The public is invited to hear him.

FOUR YOUTHS ARRESTED IN CONNECTION WITH BURGLARY

ROBY, FISHER COUNTY, TEXAS, April 13.—The filling station of the Co-operative Oil Products Co., operated by Barlow & Bates, was entered Saturday night and a quantity of tubes and lubricating oils taken. Upon being notified Sunday morning of the burglary, Sheriff Lambert immediately got busy and in a very short time had two young men under arrest, one of which confessed to the crime, and showed him where the stuff that was taken was hidden away. Mr. Lambert allowed the two young men to make bond and then he left town on other business. The deputy sheriff was not satisfied with the number caught so he got busy and in a short time had two more young men in the lock-up, making four in all that shared in the loot of about fifteen dollars worth of merchandise. The young men were all Fisher county boys and have been bound over to await the action of the grand jury. This seems to have been the culmination of a wave of petty auto accessories thefts that has been going on for quite a while.

FORMER COMMANDER OF CALL FIELD RECOVERING FROM AVIATION ACCIDENT

Major J. S. Dorland, one-time commander at Call Field, is recovering slowly from injuries he received some time ago in an aviation accident in Germany, according to a letter received from him by C. W. Snider of this city.

Several months ago Mr. Snider noticed in an Associated Press dispatch where Major Dorland had been injured when his plane fell, and he addressed a letter to the German town where the accident occurred. The letter eventually reached Major Dorland in Southern France, and in his reply he told Mr. Snider he hoped to be on his feet again soon. The major expressed a wish to visit Wichita Falls again when he returns to this country.
