MOVE anniversary

PHILADELPHIA — The voice crackled with profanities through a loudspeaker outside the row house at 6221 Osage Ave. "All you —— cops — you oughta come down and get this started," it taunted in the predawn darkness of May 13, 1985. Morning broke with Police Commissioner Gregore Sambor announcing arrest warrants for four people inside. "Attention, MOVE! This is America! You have to abide by the laws of the United States!" Page 5A

Cuevas, Brown capture City Council seats

Although the turnout was exceptionally low, Midland voters decided who would hold two seats on the Midland City Council and the District 1 seat for the Midland Independent School District's Board of Trustees.

Only 8.13 percent of registered voters made their way to the polls Saturday or voted early. There were 1,613 early voters and 2,708 on election day, for a total of 4,321 votes cast.

Taking two at-large positions on the City Council were incumbent Jose Cuevas Jr., with 2,210 votes, or 35.23 percent of the vote, and Dale Brown, with 2,198, or 35.04 percent of the vote.

Council member Bill Morrow did not seek re-election to the at-large position.

Cuevas said he anticipated the low voter turnout and its effects on the results. "All our workers knew that every vote counts," Cuevas said.

Only 12 votes separated him and Brown, although both winners were clearly ahead of other candidates.

Of the three other challengers for the seat, professional pilot Tom Dollahite had a good showing with 21.17 percent of the vote. Landman David G. Roberts claimed 6.04 percent of the vote and investor Gary Franklin took 2.36 percent.

Brown's platform suggested making no radical changes in the way Midland is heading, a message voters apparently took to heart.

"Midland is in pretty good shape," Brown said and added that he hopes to

Hail storm pummels Texas

Flash floods sweep motorists away; death toll hits 15

FORT WORTH (AP) — One day after a storm packing 70 mph winds fired softball-sized hail at Mayfest celebrators, then swept motorists away in flash floods in Dallas, the death toll rose to at least 15 Saturday.

Rescuers were searching for at least three people known missing after a storm pummeled North Texas on Friday night, injuring about 100.

By Saturday, 102 people were treated for mostly minor injuries ranging from cuts caused by broken glass to bruises from hailstones after the storm hit the outdoor Mayfest, Harris Methodist Fort Worth hospital nursing supervisor Marie Chilton said.

"I got hit so hard I thought I was going to pass out, and I'm not a fainting type-person," said Kay Carlson, one of about 2,500 people at the festival when the hail grew from pea-size to softball-size. "We saw car windows being smashed everywhere."

Above, a woman shows hailstones she picked up in her yard, Saturday in Fort Worth. At far right, Tom Telsenthal and Rachel Hertel, 10, were treated for head wounds from Friday's storm.

Within an hour, the storm that buried some roads in up to two feet of hailstones was racing on to Dallas, 30 miles away.

At Baylor University Medical Center, patients were rushed to another floor when flood water poured into the emergency room, ruining electrical circuits and contaminating emergency equipment, spokeswoman Jennifer Coleman said.

At the Haggar Pants Service Center warehouse, at least two workers were killed and 12 were injured when the roof collapsed, Dallas Deputy Fire Chief Steve Bass said.

"I thought the devil himself had just broke through," janitor Jimmy Harris said.

Eleven people drowned in the storms, some apparently trying to escape flooded vehicles, and another two apparently killed in lighting strikes, one in Dallas and one in Irving, authorities said.

Five of the drowning victims were from one family. The latest victim found was 2-year-old Jade Frazier. Searchers Saturday night found her body 500 yards downstream, caught in a tree some 20-feet high.

"People have been driving through high water. A lot try to get out and they got swept away from their cars," Dallas Fire Department spokeswoman Carolyn Garcia said.

On Saturday afternoon, workers were still searching for three people feared swept away, Dallas Emergency Management spokesman Mark Flake said.

Insurance industry spokesman Jerry Johns said the damage, coupled with that from a smaller storm in the Dallas area last weekend, could exceed $500 million. Preliminary estimates for Friday night's damage alone is already between $350 million to $400 million dollars, he said.

Last week's insured storm losses are estimated at $250 million, Johns said.

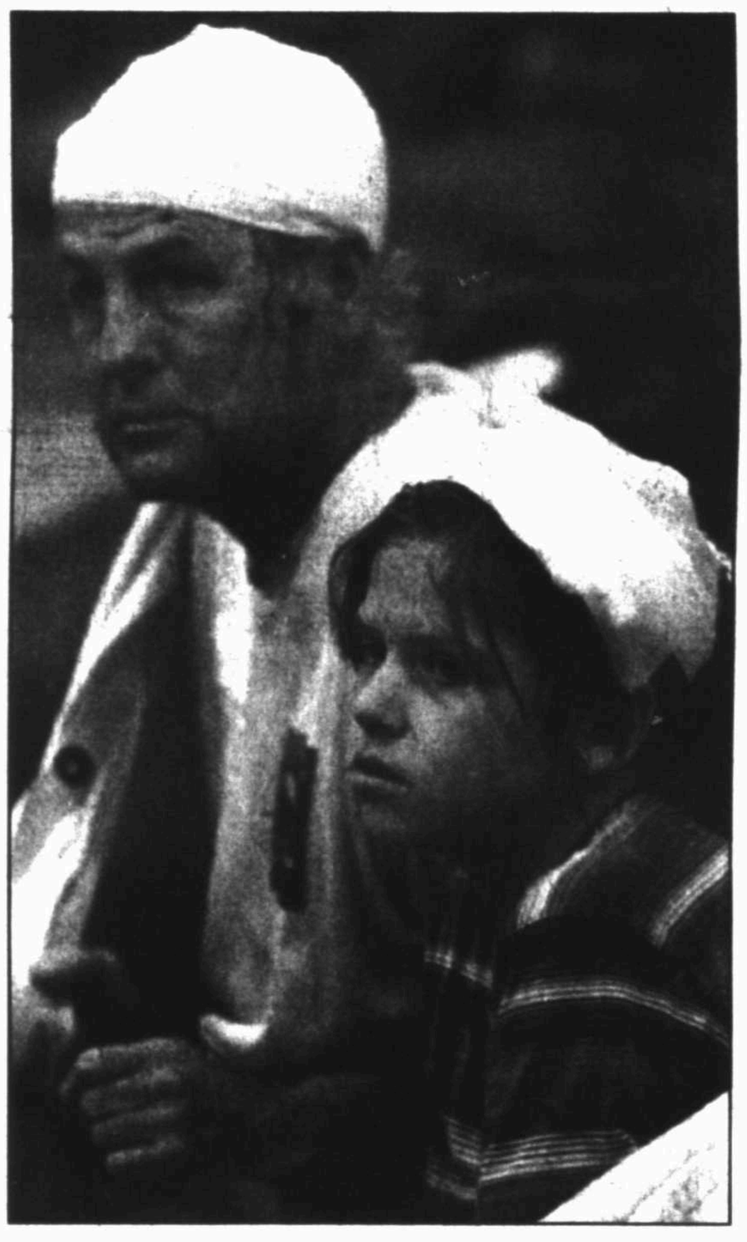

"Dallas and Fort Worth have become the hail capital of Texas if not the hail capital of the nation," he said. "In the past, we've called them natural disasters and we have begun to call them un-natural disasters because they are happening so frequently and with such intensity."

Developers seek to open outdoor theme mall on Loop 250

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Plans are in the works for a theme shopping center — expected to include a multiplex theater, retail stores and eateries — on Loop 250 just west of the Clusters Apartments. Meanwhile, developers — required to have the property rezoned — are meeting with residents to help ensure that nearby neighborhoods are not adversely affected.

Preliminary plans for the 27-acre site consist of an outdoor mall-style shopping center — with an ancient-Roman appearance — and offering the public a combination of retail, restaurant and entertainment businesses.

"It's going to be a real fun project for Midland," said Gary Moore, president of Cinemore theaters. "It's definitely a high-concept center," he said.

At this time, developers are still working out details of business tenants and site plans. Some strong national-name tenants are looking at the location, Moore said.

Plans call for a multiple-screen movie theater to be located in the middle of the shopping center.

Cinemore theaters — with eight theaters and 40 screens in Texas — plans to expand their operations with four new theater locations offering 47 new screens. "We're just about to double in size in the next 12 months," Moore said.

But before Cinemore can build one of those multiplexes at the Loop 250 site, developers must get the proper zoning. The property needs to be rezoned from single-family residential to planned district for a shopping center, city officials said.

The request to rezone will probably be presented to

U.S. team moves quickly to counter breakdown of auto talks with Japan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Determined to respond swiftly to a breakdown in U.S.-Japan trade talks, President Clinton's economic team approved an undisclosed plan Saturday to try to force open the Japanese market.

Meeting just hours after the breakup of talks in British Columbia, the president's National Economic Council approved its proposal unanimously and forwarded it to Clinton.

"The NEC considered all the options available with regard to responding to this situation," said a weary U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor, who flew home overnight to participate in the council's morning consultations. "We would expect an administration announcement will be forthcoming."

He declined to give any timeline for an announcement by Clinton, who in the past has promised "strong action" should Japan refuse to strike a deal. Before leaving Canada, Kantor predicted the government was "ready to make a fairly rapid decision in this regard."

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said he spoke with Clinton in Michigan on Friday and was assured that the president "is prepared to do what no other administration has done for 25 years: Tell Japan that it faces restrictions on its goods if it doesn't open its market to our autos and auto parts."

The Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association countered that the administration was choosing a "dangerous and irresponsible path to a trade crisis."

"Today the protectionists are celebrating, but tomorrow American consumers will suffer," said William Duncan, general director of the group.

The talk coming out of Japan was equally tough.

In Tokyo, Prime Minister Tomiichi Murayama expressed regret over the breakdown of talks but insisted Japan did "all it could do" to settle the issue, Foreign Ministry officials quoted Murayama as saying.

The top official of the Japan Automobile Manufacturers' Association praised Japan's rejection of U.S. calls for so-called "voluntary targets" in the purchase of auto parts.

"It is impossible for us to make further concessions in the talks by formulating voluntary targets," said acting head Yoshifumi Tsuji, according to the Kyodo News Service.

Tsuji, the president of Nissan Motor Co., Japan's second-largest automaker, said Nissan would "continue to support the Japanese government's position that numerical targets should not be set" for purchases of auto parts.

"We hope that the U.S. government will react sensibly to the breakdown of the negotiations and not take any one-sided measures such as imposing punitive sanctions," Tsuji said.

Simpson case prosecutors may be taking 'inoculation' witness strategy too far

By Deborah Hastings
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It could be called inoculating your own witnesses: Give them such a potent dose of the opposition's poison that they can't be further damaged under cross-examination.

O.J. Simpson's prosecutors did it when they confronted Mark Fuhrman with the defense's allegations of racism before asking even one question about his police work. But they may have overdone it with chemist Gregory Matheson.

Legal analysts say prosecutors appeared so eager to beat defense lawyers to the punch with unflattering testimony about evidence collection that they failed to trumpet some of their own strongest evidence against Simpson.

"It doesn't play to their strengths, that's for sure," said professor Myrna Raeder of Southwestern University law school. "The prosecution's direct examination is being dictated by the defense."

Take Deputy District Attorney Hank Goldberg's mind-numbing inquiry into blood evidence collected at Simpson's Brentwood estate and at the home of ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson, where she and her friend, Ronald Goldman, were stabbed to death.

Goldberg spent hours questioning Matheson, the assistant director of the Los Angeles Police Department's crime lab, about genetic markers, polymorphic enzymes and erithrocite acid phosphotase, known as EAP, testing.

He spent so much time on that — apparently to counter defense charges that blood scraped from Ms. Simpson's manicured nails didn't match her blood type or Goldman's or Simpson's — it nearly overshadowed other, stunning evidence.

Namely, that Simpson's rare blood type was found in a drop leading away from the bodies, and that Ms. Simpson's blood type was found on black socks at the foot of her ex-husband's bed.

"It could have been one of the most dramatic moments of the trial," said Loyola Law School professor Stan Goldman. "But instead, it was almost lost."

The prosecutors' strategy is common.

"It's one of the basic lessons you always try to teach lawyers. Don't let the other side pull a major coup on you," Goldman said.

Indeed, prosecutors have used it from the beginning.

Defense lawyer F. Lee Bailey eagerly anticipated questioning Fuhrman, saying he couldn't wait to portray the white LAPD veteran as a racist who planted evidence against the black football star.

Prosecutor Marcia Clark beat him to it. On the witness stand, she had Fuhrman silently read a letter accusing him of racism while jurors stared at a 7-foot blowup of it on a projector.

"Did the conversation Kathleen Bell describes in this letter occur?" Clark asked.

"No, it did not," he replied firmly.

When it comes to inoculating your own witnesses, you have to make sure the serum is strong enough.

Consider the case of criminologist Dennis Fung. Prosecutors had him unwrap a bloody glove found at Simpson's estate and testify that several blood stains were found at the scene, at Simpson's estate and inside Simpson's truck.

But defense lawyer Barry Scheck pounced on mistakes Fung made in collecting and storing evidence, as well as contradictions between Fung's trial testimony and sworn statements he made before a grand jury last year.

WEATHER WATCH

Slight chance of rain today

Staff Report

Conditions for severe storms and tornadoes were right for most of the Permian Basin in the afternoon and evening hours Saturday, but by 9 p.m. had not manifested themselves.

Conditions warranted a tornado watch to be issued by the National Weather Service, but only a few small systems were seen developing in Dawson and Gaines counties.

The forecast for today calls for a 20-percent chance of showers or thundershowers, a high near 80 and south winds at 10-20 mph early, changing to southwest at 20-30 by noon, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low in the upper 40s.

Monday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 57, Saturday's high reached 89, compared to the record high for that date of 103 set in 1947. The record low was 37 set in 1935.

STATE

Texans recovering from violent storms that tore a devastating path through the Dallas-Fort Worth area were preparing for more hail, rain and tornado-producing weather through today.

A tornado watch was posted until early today for large parts of Northwest Texas, with storms expected to move eastward. The watch area was along and 60 miles either side of a line from San Angelo to east of Childress.

Both Dallas and Fort Worth were under a severe thunderstorm watch Saturday.

Skies in North Texas Saturday were generally cloudy, except for the south central portion with sunny conditions. Winds were mostly 10 to 15 mph except near thunderstorms where they were 15 to 25 mph.

Showers and thunderstorms over the eastern South Plains and Panhandle moved east Saturday. Temperatures were mostly in the 50s and 60s with 70s reported in the south and far west.

A strong weather disturbance marching across the Southern Rockies will continue to influence the weather pattern over South Texas. Mostly cloudy skies, high temperatures, wet and breezy conditions will persist through today. Thunderstorms, some of which may be severe, will hit South Texas today.

West Texas' forecast calls for a chance of showers and thunderstorms for all but the far west tonight and may linger into today. Today's highs will be from the upper 60s in the Panhandle to near 90 along the Big Bend portions of the Rio Grande.

NATION

Temperatures dropped in many areas, and snow fell at levels as low as 4,000 feet in the mountains of southern California. Up to 7 inches of snow fell at Pine Cove and Idyllwild in the San Jacinto Mountains and up to 8 inches fell in Sequoia National Park.

Snow also fell in Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Utah. Alta, in the mountains east of Salt Lake City, got up to 18 inches.

Widespread showers and thunderstorms were expected from the Sierras to the Rockies and Montana to Arizona.

A cold snap in New England and the middle Atlantic states was expected to bring freezing temperatures as far south as central and eastern Pennsylvania.

A cold front sagging south from Canada into New England was likely to generate colder, breezy conditions from the lower Great Lakes across New England and Maine, where snow was possible.

Temperature extremes around the Lower 48 ranged from a high of 91 in Tampa, Fla., to a low of 20 in Grand Canyon, Ariz., and Leadville, Colo.

Storm shatters 3 generations of Dallas family

HAIL: Storm kills 15, 3 still missing

Fort Worth International Airport.

Forty flights were diverted, most to San Antonio; Tulsa, Okla.; Oklahoma City; and Houston, spokeswoman Marion Deesisto said.

In Arlington, Six Flags Over Texas was closed for mopping up, and the power was out anyway. The park was expected to reopen Sunday, spokesman Bruce Neal said.

About 600 people attending a Tommy Tune musical and Brooks & Dunn concert at a Dallas park were evacuated Friday night. No injuries were reported, but vehicles in the parking lot were tumbled about by rushing flood water.

In Fort Worth, officials decided the hailstorm wasn't going to stop Mayfest.

Fire Lt. Kent Worley said the injuries ranged from cuts caused by broken glass to bruises from hailstones up to 3 1/2 inches in diameter.

"We've had extensive damage in the park, but the good news is most of it can be cleaned up today," Fort Worth parks director Richard Zavala said Saturday. "Our infrastructures, particularly our electrical systems, are in good shape, and we're going to be able to open up the park tonight."

Probationers doing community service pitched in Saturday to pick the leaves blanketing Trinity Park, and organizers promised the fair would reopen by night.

Sand sculptor Steve Spencer came to the park to see if his 7-foot castle survived. He'd put in 61 hours building it.

"I'm amazed it's still here," he said. "My tent didn't give way. It suffered a lot of damage, but the hail didn't come through."

DALLAS — The raging creek that swept Jimmy Frazier's car off the road during a violent spring storm claimed three generations of the Frazier family.

It also took away the couple many neighbors came to know as "mom and dad."

Jimmy Frazier, 52, and his wife, Jean, 53, had provided their southwest Dallas area with a friendly home for more than 30 years. On Saturday, family and friends gathered there to mourn their tragic death.

"(The Fraziers) were like a modern-day Ozzie and Harriet," said Gretta Shaw, their goddaughter.

The couple, along with grandson Courtney Frazier, 9, and future daughter-in-law Sandy Donahue, 26, drowned in floodwaters resulting from torrential downpours Friday night.

Two-year-old Jade Frazier was found Saturday evening. Her body was 500 yards downstream, caught in a tree some 20-feet high.

At least 15 people were killed by the storms.

Jimmy Frazier was taking his family out to dinner when his Toyota Camry became snared by the river-like current and flipped, slipping off the road.

Rescuers plucked Mike Frazier, who lost his parents, fiancee, nephew and his daughter in the accident, from a nearby tree.

"He was hanging onto the tree, yelling about his family," said Terrence Gore, who arrived at the scene to help. Gore estimated the creek's waters had risen more than 35 feet.

Donahue and Jade Frazier, her daughter with Mike Frazier, were in town from Lonoke, Ark. preparing to move to Dallas. Donahue also was scheduled to record a gospel song Saturday night in a concert at a local church.

"Sandy was sweet. She always had a kind word for anyone," said Dallas Police officer Larry Dyer, a family friend. "In this day in time, she was different. She was a person who always had uplifting things to say."

Carnell Murrell, a gospel band leader, said he had recorded Donahue singing the gospel tune "Taste and See." He said he grew up in the area and, like many of his friends, considered the elder Fraziers to be extended family.

"They were very influential in the spirit of a lot of lives," Murrell said. "They were like a mom and dad to the neighborhood. There were not two people like Jean and Jimmy.

"All you had to do was knock twice and walk in. You could just sit down next to Jean like she was your mom."

Jimmy Frazier was a 25-year veteran paint mixer at the Sherwin-Williams Co. plant, where he also served as chief union steward.

"He was held in very high regard by fellow employees and management," said Sherwin-Williams personnel director Gary McNeil. "I've talked to a lot of people today, and we're all just numbed by it."

Ms. Shaw said Mike Frazier remembered telling his daughter he loved her all day Friday.

"And she kept telling him, 'I love you, daddy,'" Shaw said.

"The children's tent is unbelievable," Carol Wagner said.

"It's going great," said Barbara Sikes, who is in charge of the Children's Pavilion, situated under a tent on the courthouse lawn. "It's been crowded all day. The kids are really having fun making Mad Hatter hats from all recycled items, eatable jewelry and candles."

In five hours, the Children's Pavilion went through 250 pounds of sand for the candles, Ms. Sikes said, adding that they had already made 1,000 candles.

Without 6-year-old Steven Stimmel and his 4-year-old brother Jake, COA would have made only 998 candles by 6 p.m. Saturday. The Stimmel boys agreed making candles was "fun," but their attention was riveted to creating their own specialized Mad Hatter hats. The sons of Carolyn and Harley Stimmel, the boys were almost too occupied to reply when their mother asked them if they were having fun.

"We are," Steven replied, looking up briefly.

"Yeah," Jake replied, never taking his eyes off the hat he was creating.

Sponsored by the Arts Assembly, this year's COA features 65 local and regional artists from the Southwest — including Texas, Louisiana, New Mexico and Oklahoma — who are displaying their work inside Midland Center and at Centennial Plaza. In addition, more than 16 local arts organizations have booths in the entry of Midland Center.

"It's a good show," said Midland artist Charles Pruitt, a former COA Distinguished Artist. "We've had constant traffic."

Pruitt's booth was inside. Midland artist Colleen Meinke, who is known for her Pueblo People, was outside.

"It's been wonderful," Ms. Meinke said. "I've sold quite a bit. The sales are good. The people are enthusiastic. I think people wait for this event. I'm glad the rain quit so people could come out and enjoy it."

"We made the biggest sale we've ever made," said Lynda Dubek, wife of artist Frantisec Dubek, who defected from communist Czechoslovakia in 1984. "This has been wonderful."

The Dubeks live in San Angelo and will be returning to the area next weekend for an art show and sale at Odessa's Ector County Coliseum.

At Friday night's preview party, several awards were presented, including, Best of Show, which went to Midland artist Mary Griffith; a crafts award, which went to Fort Worth artist Nancy Howell; and five honorable mentions. In the Culinary Arts Show, first place went to Wall Street Bar and Grill and second place to the Midland Hilton.

The participants in the Culinary Arts Show, "embellished all of their creations beautifully," Ms. Tirey said. "It was a wonderful show. The crowd flowed nicely."

"Desserts were the best," chimed in COA board member John Nichols.

COA also includes arts and crafts demonstrations, a district-wide student show and art sale, and continuous live performances, including Patrick Ball, who plays the Celtic harp, the Irish drum and tells folk tales for all ages.

"I was already a fan of his four years ago, and I'm especially thrilled to have him back," said Patty Loftis, COA performing arts chairman. "The audiences really, really liked him four years ago, and he's back by popular demand."

In addition, COA features about 15 food concessionaires offering such items as hot dogs, curly fries and cotton candy.

"There's lots of food — all the kind of food you can't get unless you go to Six Flags," said Barbara Whatley, who was attending COA with friends. At this moment, they were taking a break, sitting on the curb. Were they having fun? "Oh, yeah, no doubt about it," said Sally Valle of Odessa. "Just kick back and enjoy the music."

"People are polite here," said Michael Deanda, noting the difference in Midlanders and those he met living in California. "You wave. They wave back. In California, they don't do that."

"It's not very often Midland does something," Ms. Whatley said to nods of agreement around her. "So, when they do have some sort of event, you need to go check it out. Go with your friends."

RESULTS: Cuevas, Brown take council seats ensure the city's continued economic progression while on the council.

Brown said he was unsure how the vote would finally turn out, but had been encouraged by the feedback he was receiving. "I'm very pleased with the way the election went."

"This is a strong message that people are very happy," Cuevas said. "Opportunity is there, we are expanding and they like what is happening," he said.

In the school board race, incumbent James E. Fuller won his place handily with 89.50 percent of the vote. Challenger Bobby Alexander had the remaining 10.49 percent.

Before the election, Alexander announced that he was withdrawing from the race.

The only other contested race was a Greenwood Independent School District race where the incumbent had decided not to run for re-election.

Of the two hopefuls for this race, Donny Thornton won by a large margin, taking 73.82 percent of the votes. Challenger Stephen Wardlaw took 26.17 percent.

"I had no idea it would be by that much," Thornton said following the election.

Thornton said he was pleased with the outcome and credited his win with his longevity in the community. "A lot of people don't know him as well, but he's a real nice guy," Thornton said of Wardlaw.

Winning uncontested races in Midland were City Council incumbents Pat Schneider for District 1 and Juluis Brooks for District 2.

On the MISD board, District 7 incumbent Michael Dobey kept his seat.

Greenwood school board member Johnny Womack won unopposed as well.

the city's Planning and Zoning Commission this month and a recommendation subsequently forwarded to the City Council, which ultimately makes zone-change decisions.

Developers — aware of traffic, appearance and other concerns by nearby residents — plan to meet Monday with those who live nearby in an effort to be "good neighbors," Moore said.

"We just wanted to help keep them informed ... (We're) trying to address all the issues that might be construed as sensitive," Moore said.

When the center might actually open is contingent on the zone change and business variables. "It depends on when all the tenants are inked," Moore said.

10 years later, Philadelphia's MOVE inferno still burns in nation's memory

By Ted Duncombe
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — The voice crackled with profanities through a loudspeaker outside the row house at 6221 Osage Ave.

"All you ------- cops — you oughta come down and get this started," it taunted in the predawn darkness of May 13, 1985.

Morning broke with Police Commissioner Gregore Sambor announcing arrest warrants for four people inside. "Attention, MOVE! This is America! You have to abide by the laws of the United States!"

"Come and get us," the voice replied.

In response, police fired thousands of rounds of ammunition into the house, and firefighters pounded it with water cannons. Finally, a state police helicopter swooped twice over the rooftops and returned to hover. At 5:27 p.m., Philadelphia Police Lt. Frank Powell leaned out and dropped a canvas satchel containing a powerful explosive.

The resulting fire was allowed to burn.

Before the flames were out, 11 people in the MOVE house were dead, five of them children. Sixty-two homes were destroyed, and a gaping hole was left in a densely populated, predominantly black, middle-class neighborhood.

Ten years later, the homes are rebuilt, surviving MOVE members live uneventfully in another part of the city, and a new crew runs City Hall.

Over time, MOVE's deliberate provocations, their neighbors' complaints about the stench and their loud profanities and, most of all, the bomb have proven to be a modern parable of dissent and intolerance, racial antagonisms, bureaucratic blunders and legal complexity.

Taxpayers have paid more than $30 million for the rebuilding, the lost lives, one of the investigations and consultants. The total doesn't include the costs of two grand jury probes, pending legal claims, or a round-the-clock police presence on the block where the battle occurred, necessitated by a legal tussle over the ownership of the rebuilt MOVE house.

"There hasn't been any closure," said Gerald W. Renfrow, block captain for the Osage-Pine Neighborhood Association. "The last 10 years, it's like having an open wound, because it hasn't healed for us."

Consuewella Africa, the daughter of a former Philadelphia police officer, lost two children in the fire, as well as her MOVE comrades.

"Not one person was charged with the murder of my brothers and sisters and my two daughters," she said.

And former Mayor W. Wilson Goode, the city's first black mayor and a rising star in the national Democratic Party before that day, now apologizes for his role and tries to turn questions about MOVE to other aspects of his eight-year mayoralty.

"For me, someone who has respected life so much for so long, to be the mayor of a city where there is a loss of life through actions of the government itself, it's very difficult for me on a personal level to deal with," he said.

The emergence of MOVE, which was founded in the early 1970s, coincided with the era of Frank Rizzo, whose hard-nosed rule as both police commissioner and mayor gave Philadelphia a reputation for police brutality and surveillance of suspected subversives.

MOVE members espoused nonviolence and opposition to technology. They kept their children out of school, ate raw, unprocessed food and sought equal treatment for animals and humans. They all adopted the surname Africa in honor of their leader, the self-named John Africa, and raised money by washing cars.

Wearing their hair in dreadlocks, MOVE members began to make their presence known citywide at televised school board meetings, where they challenged "the system," a catch-all term for anything they considered unnatural.

Neighbors' complaints about MOVE's house in West Philadelphia and the group's refusal to let the city inspect it led to a confrontation Aug. 8, 1978, when Rizzo ordered police to arrest 21 members.

The ensuing battle ended with one officer dead and seven other policemen and firefighters wounded. Police were videotaped dragging a MOVE member by the hair, and hitting and kicking him. That house was bulldozed that day.

Nine MOVE members were convicted of murdering Officer James J. Ramp, but a judge ordered the acquittal of the policemen charged with roughing up the MOVE member, which merely hardened the group's views against city officials and led to the terroristic tirades that helped spark the cataclysmic bombing.

Police said the bomb was designed to destroy only a rooftop bunker and punch a hole in the roof as a conduit for tear gas — but they erred in mixing explosives.

The warrants they were trying to serve were for offenses ranging from disorderly conduct to possession of explosives; still debated to this day is whether the heavily armed MOVE members continued to fire back after the morning passed.

Convict appeals death sentence, turns to Internet

N.Y. Times News Service

Girvies L. Davis is on death row in Illinois. And he is on the Internet everywhere.

A convicted murderer, Davis is scheduled to die on May 17. His supporters say that Davis's confession was coerced, and he continues to assert his innocence. With most of his legal appeals exhausted, attention has turned to Gov. Jim Edgar, who could grant clemency.

As often happens just before an execution, supporters and opponents of the death penalty have begun airing their arguments in the Davis case. Press releases are being issued, and rallies held. But with executions becoming more common, the press tends to pay less attention each time.

Against that backdrop, two lawyers at Jenner & Block, the Chicago firm representing Davis, had a conversation. David A. Schwartz, a first-year associate working on the Davis case, wondered how to get the word out. And Brian K. Murphy, another first-year associate, knew the Internet.

"I know how easy it is for any individual to publish to a worldwide audience," Murphy said in an interview. "Particularly when time is so short, the Internet provides a form and medium that are perfect for the case."

Murphy set up a home page, or location, on the Worldwide Web (http://-www.mcs.net/-bkmurph/-girvies.htm) on April 24. In the ensuing week, the home page recorded more than 30,000 visits, he said. The home page includes a 34-second sound bite from Davis, in which he professes his innocence of murder while acknowledging "wrongs I have done in the past." Large blinking numerals show a countdown to the

Nichols shared hatred of government with bomb suspect

By Matt Trueil
Associated Press

HERINGTON, Kan. — Terry Lynn Nichols dealt in surplus Army goods, worked on his blue pickup, and spent time with his wife and small child in this north-central Kansas town.

He also hated the government, tried to renounce his citizenship and wouldn't use a Social Security number.

That side of the slightly built man with wire-rim glasses began to emerge only after he was detained as a witness in the Oklahoma City bombing.

Two days after a 4,800-pound bomb made of ammonium nitrate and fuel exploded outside the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, Nichols surrendered to Herington police after hearing his name on TV reports.

He has been held ever since and will be transferred this week to Oklahoma City to testify before a grand jury investigating the nation's worst terrorist bombing.

Nichols, 40, and his 41-year-old brother, James, are charged with conspiring with Timothy McVeigh to make illegal explosives on James' farm in Decker, Mich. — charges unconnected to the Oklahoma City bombing.

A search of Nichols' Herington home turned up bags of ammonium nitrate, blasting caps, a firearms arsenal and anti-government literature.

Authorities believe the bomb that destroyed the federal building was built near Nichols' house in a Ryder truck rented by McVeigh and an unidentified man known as John Doe 2.

Nichols' ties to Kansas go back to his Army days. At age 33, he enlisted May 24, 1988, the same day as McVeigh, the only person charged in the April 19 bombing that left 167 dead and more than 400 injured.

The two took basic training at Fort Benning, Ga., and were assigned to the 1st Infantry Division — the famed "Big Red One" — at Fort Riley, Kan.

Nichols got an unspecified hardship discharge as a private in 1989, nine days short of a year, and returned to Michigan to farm with his brother.

That same year, Nichols sought a divorce from his wife of nine years — on the grounds that the state improperly issues marriage licenses.

In 1993, Nichols wrote an angry letter to a Michigan township clerk renouncing his right to vote because "there is total corruption in the entire political system."

Later that year, his 2-year-old son by a second marriage accidentally suffocated in a plastic bag.

In March 1994, Nichols returned to Kansas. He lived alone in a cheap motel for a couple of weeks while looking for work, then answered a want ad for a ranch hand about 40 miles south of Junction City.

His former boss, Jim Donahue, described him as a hard worker, good with farm machinery but not livestock.

One thing that struck Donahue as odd: Nichols did not want income tax or Social Security withheld from his paycheck.

Still, he didn't talk much about politics. He complained about taxes, but no more than anyone else, Donahue said.

But Donahue's son, Timothy, who worked with Nichols, remembered him as a fan of right-wing talk radio shows. "What he heard over the radio he believed," the younger Donahue said.

While at the Donahue ranch, Nichols went to the Marion County clerk's office and tried to renounce his citizenship.

"You knew you didn't mess with him. He did not have a friendly attitude," said County Clerk Marquetta Eilerts.

Soon after he came to the ranch, he was joined by his second wife.

■ Profile

Marife, and their 2-year-old daughter. Occasionally, Nichols' 12-year-old son by his first marriage, Josh, would visit.

"They'd ride in a tractor all day," the younger Donahue said. "In my opinion, he was a good father."

Nichols quit the Donahue ranch after seven months, saying he was going to Arizona to sell weapons at gun shows.

But in February he bought a small, wood-frame house in Herington on a quiet tree-lined street. He told the realtor and neighbors he sold surplus Army goods.

Insurance agent Jeff Hallan said Nichols was pleasant and clean-cut, but said when asked for a Social Security number, "he said he didn't have one."

Several bartenders in watering holes frequented by soldiers recalled Nichols stopping by for two or three beers, always alone, seemingly brooding.

Next-door neighbor Georgia L.F. Robison said the couple wasn't exactly effusive.

"They never did stop and visit like neighbors would," she said. "I never saw his wife."

THIS REALLY HAPPENED!
A darling customer from San Antonio was looking for dresses for a social event in her town. She loved everything we had and told us that if our store were in San Antonio everything would be sold and we could lock the doors and go home!!!
But then what would we do?
We're going to stay right here and keep out of trouble, and you'd better come see us to see for yourself.

Right-wing violence has many parallels with 1960s social turmoil

By Peter Applebome
N.Y. Times News Service

On the surface, few eras would seem to have less in common than the tie-dyed turmoil of the 1960s and the edgy, armed-to-the-teeth anger of the 1990s.

But many historians who track the nation's mood swings say they detect an odd and striking inversion in which the anger, discontent and distrust of authority that erupted among the left in the 60s have become the signatures of the right 30 years later.

The notion is not that the leftist rumblings of the 1960s have been transformed into today's right-wing agenda or that the sporadic and largely inept violence of the 60s is mirrored in the horror of Oklahoma City. Instead, there is a sense that Vietnam War-era turmoil tore a hole in the post-World War II social fabric, and that although it was the left that opened the rift, it is the right that has driven a truck through it.

INDEED, MANY experts say that to understand today's right-wing anger it is necessary first to make sense of the tumult three decades ago.

"What happened in the 1960s was that the government was successfully 'delegitimated,' " said Gerald Marwell, a sociologist at the University of Wisconsin who studies American political movements. "We had a period from World War II through the 1950s where the government was seen as having rescued the nation from the Depression and successfully prosecuted the war, and then we were told in the 1960s that the emperor has no clothes and people shouldn't accept what they're told. And rather than going away, that sensibility has grown over the past 30 years."

Historians acknowledge the limitations of comparing different eras. And many say any understanding of the passions and paranoias of the 90s must begin with the recognition that the nation's history is rife with bitter rifts and conspiratorial vapors.

Indeed many historians find the relative, though hardly universal, degree of national consensus of the 1940s and 1950s to be the exception in American life rather than the norm.

"This is the most anti-state country in the Western world, probably on earth," said Michael Kazin, a historian at the American University in Washington and the author of "The Populist Persuasion: An American History" (Basic Books, 1994). "Throughout American history groups on the right and the left have seen the federal government as an alien force inimical to their interests, so you see this sort of thing over and over again."

WHAT HAPPENED IN the '60s, he wrote, is that the left "only discredited the old order without laying the political foundation for a new one."

Many scholars of American history have long acknowledged what the historian Richard Hofstader called "the paranoid style in American politics," a tendency to view the world in terms of dense conspiracies that in various eras have centered on groups as diverse as Masons, Catholics, Jews, international bankers, Mormons, foreign gold traders, and the Bavarian Illuminati.

To cite more recent examples, Sen. Joseph McCarthy during his campaign against Communist infiltration in 1951 cited "a great conspiracy, a conspiracy on a scale so immense as to dwarf any previous such venture in the history of man" to undermine the U.S. government from within. The Soviet threat is gone, but conspiracy theories spring up with numbing frequency on the right today, exemplified most recently by the claim that the attack on the Federal Building in Oklahoma City was a government plot to discredit the paramilitary groups that call themselves militias.

EVEN THE DETAILS of the supposed conspiracies faxed and E-mailed among right-wing groups from Montana to Michigan these days are eerily similar to those alleged by the John Birch Society and other right-wing groups of the late 50s and early 60s.

Today there are claims that U.N. troops have taken over Yellowstone National Park and that sinister foreign military vehicles identified with an inverted V are prowling rural Michigan. Three decades ago allegations included reports that 35,000 Chinese Communist troops in powder-blue uniforms were poised on the Mexican border ready to invade California, that the Army had been turned over to a Russian colonel in the United Nations and that an Army guerrilla warfare exercise in Georgia called Water Moccasin III was actually a U.N. operation prepared to take over the United States.

STILL, THE SUSPICIONS of today are hardly limited to the right.

Not far from Professor Marwell's office, Karlton Armstrong runs an outdoor juice stand on the University of Wisconsin Library Mall. Twenty-five years ago, Armstrong, then an anti-war activist, was one of the campus radicals who planted a fertilizer and fuel oil bomb at Sterling Hall, home of the university's Physics Department and of the oil bomb's target, the Army Math Research Center. The explosion killed a graduate student, in one of the most infamous episodes of the 1960s.

Mr. Armstrong, now 48, has no sympathy for either the politics or the violence of today's far-right fringe groups. What is more, he now views the Sterling Hall bombing as a betrayal of his own beliefs, even though the bomb was detonated in the predawn hours with the intention that the building would be unoccupied.

But when asked about the sense of frustration and alienation abroad in the land, from worried farmers to those drawn to the fringe politics of the angry paramilitary groups, he said: "These people are rapidly becoming dispossessed, like they are losing what little power they had. I totally empathize with that sense of alienation."

AND JUST AS IS WAS alienated hippies who preceded ring-wing groups in retreating to the woods to rural communes free from the corrupting influences of the government and urban life, the sensibilities of the 60s have led many to the same kind of distrust of government so endemic on the right.

"I don't consider myself a paranoid by any means, but I've been given plenty of reasons to fear my government," said Susan Spangenberg of Madison, who is active with the Wisconsin Alliance for the Medicalization of Cannabis, which seeks to make marijuana more readily available for medical uses. "The militias have the same civil rights as I do, as we all do, and if the government can intrude on civil rights on the right, it could just as easily do it for someone who gets labeled a left-wing liberal."

To many on the left, there is something utterly perverse in any attempt to link their philosophy, born in the civil rights movement of the 1960s, with the armed extremist right of the 1990s. Many say the incessant anti-government rhetoric of the right sheds far more light on the present than the turmoil of the 60s offers.

"Don't insult me," Paul Soglin, the former anti-war activist who is now Mayor of Madison, said of attempts to link the two eras. "That's the thinking of very stupid people who need an elementary education in civics and political science."

1995 COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

The City of Midland encourages all interested persons to participate in development of the City's 1995 Community Development Program. A public hearing will be held by the City Council at the S.E. Community Multi-Purpose Recreation Center, 1803 E. Indiana, Midland, Texas, on Tuesday, May 23, 1995, at 7:00 p.m. to discuss:

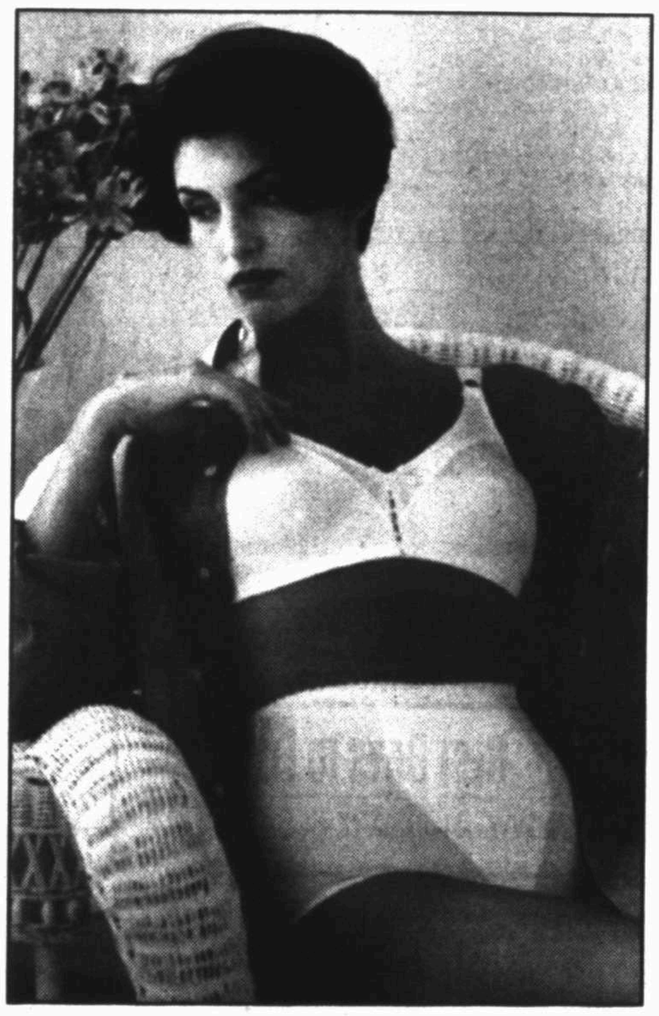

Past Usage of Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) Funds, and Community Development and Housing Needs.

A total of $1,416,000 from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development will be allocated to the City for the 1995 program. Approximately $40,000 in program income is expected during the 1995 program. A minimum 70% of these funds must be allocated to projects which benefit low and moderate income persons. Examples of activities eligible for CDBG funding are: housing rehabilitation, sidewalk and street improvements, park improvements, code enforcement, lot clearance, economic development, and public services.

For further information, call the City's CDBG Office at 685-7402 or 685-7408.

Victims' relatives walk in somber procession to bomb site, offer rosebuds on alter

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Families of those killed in the nation's worst terrorist bombing walked in a somber procession Saturday to the edge of the devastated federal building, offered red rosebuds on a makeshift altar and took away rubble as a remembrance.

"God is good," said Henry Biddy, whose wife's remains were brought out of the ruins late Thursday. "He gives you the strength to do what you have to do."

More than 3,000 people, many in their Sunday best, were expected to make the pilgrimage one at a time to say goodbye to their loved ones. The blast killed 167 people, including 19 children.

Across town, one family that lost three members in the bombing gathered to bury two of them and remember a third — an infant whose remains have not yet been identified.

Twenty-year-old Dana Bradley, whose leg had to be amputated to pull her from the wreckage, attended the church service in a wheelchair. She lost her mother and two children, ages about 4 months and 3.

"I have drawn strength from Dana Bradley," said Dr. Gary Massad, who assisted in the surgery. "I would not have been able to survive the tragedy that Dana Bradley has survived."

The memorial at the skeleton of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building began under gray skies that cleared about an hour after families began arriving from the city's convention center on buses.

Volunteers gave red roses to the somber mourners as they got off the buses and walked toward the wrecked building. Many of the families held children or each other's hands.

Two red-and-white striped tents were set up in front of the building, where the mourners then handed their flowers to rescue workers who tossed them on a makeshift altar of roses, crosses, teddy bears and photographs.

Often, family members hugged the honor guard of rescue workers, drawn from the giant corps of federal, state and local law enforcement and safety agencies who spent more than two weeks scouring the rubble in a futile search for survivors.

From there, the families walked to a blue-and-white striped tent to receive a miniature state flag from Gov. Frank Keating and, if they wanted, a chunk of concrete scavenged from the blast site by the Oklahoma City Fire Department.

Biddy, whose wife, Oleta, worked in the Social Security office, came "to take a picture for my grandsons." He was accompanied by his son, Daniel, and daughter-in-law, Jeannean, who had worked in the same office until she went on maternity leave in March.

Biddy and the couple came with the couple's baby boy. Their older son, 3, wasn't in the America's Kids day-care center when the bomb went off April 19 only because his mother wasn't working.

"It could have been much worse," said Daniel Biddy, who said he didn't know if he was emotionally prepared to see the site. "I kind of want to go down there before it's gone."

As family members paid their respects, onlookers were held back by police lines. Some wiped away tears, others laid bouquets of flowers on the gates cordoning off the site.

Cheryle Harrison traveled from Albuquerque, N.M., for the day just to look at the building.

"I have a day care center in Albuquerque and the kids ...," she said, her voice trailing off. "It's real hard for me."

She said she planned to take pictures to show the children and help answer their questions. She also brought a poster they made to leave at the site.

No decision has been made yet on what to do with the building. Local sentiment is strongly in favor of razing the rubble and erecting a memorial that would include a statue of the firefighter who carried out a limp baby.

Congress buoys for budget wars, battles ahead

By David Espo
Associated Press

■ News analysis

WASHINGTON — The tax and spending decisions that Republicans in Congress make over the next 100 days will go a long way toward determining the size and shape of a dramatically altered government in a balanced-budget era.

And the political debate that accompanies those decisions will shape future elections just as surely.

Speaker Newt Gingrich, just back from a GOP retreat, told reporters Friday that lawmakers want to "balance the budget for our children's future."

Republicans, he added, will spend the next two or three months "developing a Medicare plan that will save Medicare from bankruptcy." Scarcely a sentence went by that didn't stress that spending would rise for the giant health care program for the elderly every year under the GOP fix that's about to be drafted.

Congressional Democrats should join these efforts — with or without President Clinton, he said. Of the president, whom Gingrich occasionally lectures about leadership, the speaker added: "You can't run for president for four years. You've got to actually serve at some point."

House Democrats held a retreat of their own last week, and not surprisingly, came back talking a different line.

"We're committed to fight for the interests of America's working families," said the party's leader, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri. "And in particular, committed to fight Medicare cuts made for the purpose of giving a tax cut for the privileged few."

Speaking of the $189 billion in tax cuts contained in the "Contract With America," Gephardt said, "Once we can get that off the table, if we can, then we're more than happy to sit down with the Republicans" and tackle Medicare's woes.

Republicans didn't spend all the time at their Leesburg, Va., retreat talking about the finer points of the budget. GOP aides said there was discussion about the politics of the budget battle as well, and the communications battle ahead.

Polling data, for example, show that saving Medicare from bankruptcy is favored by the public, while cutting it to balance the budget is decidedly less well-received.

"Our success in the budget debate is going to be determined by whether we frame it or it gets framed for us," said one leadership aide, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Also, success will be measured in terms of the ability of GOP leaders to line up the votes.

Majority Leader Richard Armey of Texas told reporters after the retreat that one big number in the budget debate is 218.

Worst drought in memory — four years' poor rains — dries southern Africa

SELOUS, Zimbabwe (AP) — Roy Fuller pointed his lanky arm toward a parched creek bed and, smiling wryly, described the good old days when water thundered by.

"I used to have sleepless nights," the farmer said almost wistfully. "I'd hear the water come racing and I'd get up and say, 'What happened? Did a dam burst?'"

No dams burst anymore in this sun-grilled region near Harare in northern Zimbabwe. Few reservoirs have enough water for swimming. On Fuller's 3,000-acre spread, tobacco leaves wither and crackle while corn stalks the color of sand break in the wind.

Fuller still can't sleep, tormented now by mounting debts. At 55, he talks with neighbors about raising millions of dollars for a dam that would provide plentiful water for a decade, "if it fills."

Across vast tracts of southern Africa, four years of poor rains — the worst drought in memory — have dried once fertile fields and evaporated reservoirs. Meanwhile, growing and shifting populations increasingly overtax water supplies.

At least seven nations have some degree of drought this year, draining already weak economies and consuming larger shares of shrinking foreign aid money.

Those who study the problem warn that the region has used most of the available water and nature has slowed in providing fresh supplies. In the short term, that means more frequent and widespread drought. In the long term, it means learning to get by with less or facing disaster.

"We seem to work on the premise that water will always be there," said Hugh Bowen Williams, chief engineer in the planning branch of Zimbabwe's department of water development. "It hasn't quite sunk in that we're a semiarid region. Water scarcity is here to stay."

Unlike well-publicized, war-exacerbated drought and famines in Ethiopia, Sudan and Somalia, the southern African drought stems from a combination of more people, more development and less rain. Few people die and stockpiled food, imports and foreign aid generally prevent widespread hunger.

But the recurring crises prompt harmful emergency measures. Governments spend more of their meager funds to build larger dams and link longer pipelines, depriving rivers and aquifers of water flow needed for irrigation, drinking water and other uses. People dig deeper wells and drain ground water faster.

Malawi and Mozambique, two of the world's poorest countries, are seeking more foreign aid. Namibia, a largely desert region on the Atlantic Coast, is considering a $22 million desalination plant that would provide drinking water to cities.

In Botswana, about two-thirds of which is the Kalahari Desert, water is so precious the currency is called the "pula," the tribal word for rain. Consumers pay roughly three times as much for water as in neighboring South Africa, meaning less money for economic development.

A year of living on the edge: Palestinians mark anniversary of self-rule with anger, frustrations

By Karin Laub
Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — Symbols of statehood are plentiful: weekly Cabinet meetings, a 17,000-officer security force, the Voice of Palestine radio, green Palestinian passports, foreign diplomatic offices, postage stamps.

On a recent spring day, Yasser Arafat, who insists on being called "rais" or president in Arabic, played host to a Spanish politician in a ceremony fit for a head of state, complete with red carpet and honor guard.

But Palestinian independence still ends at the first Israeli army roadblock of barbed wire and concrete slabs.

"This is not peace. It's death," said Jamal Abu Namus, a Palestinian truck driver in his fourth day of waiting to pass through the Erez checkpoint into Israel with a load of oranges.

Israeli security checks, aimed at keeping out radical Muslim suicide bombers, had the trucks crawling across at one per hour.

"I barely make enough money to buy cigarettes," complained Abu Namus, 33, a father of eight.

Abu Namus' disappointment and anger are shared by many Palestinians who feel worse off after a year of self-rule that began last May 18 in Gaza and the West Bank town of Jericho with the departure of Israeli troops.

Economic collapse is evident. Idle men hang around Gaza store fronts, sipping tea and playing cards. With security restrictions blocking most Palestinians from working in Israel, unemployment has risen above 50 percent.

The loss of income from jobs in Israel offsets international aid, which totaled $240 million in 1994, or one-third of what was promised.

As a result, little has changed for Gazans. There are still heaps of garbage, pools of sewage, frequent power blackouts, temperamental telephones.

Violence remains part of the landscape. Slogans of destruction are spraypainted in Islamic green or Marxist red on the metal shutters of shops and the whitewashed garden walls of villas belonging to well-off Palestinians.

Many problems in getting self-rule off the ground can be traced to Arafat's failure to make the transition from guerrilla commander to administrator.

Reminiscent of Beirut, Arafat's armored car often careens through Gaza's potholed streets, escorted by jeeploads of guards with rifles pointed in the air.

Arafat still favors military uniforms over business suits and maintains a penchant for all-night meetings, sudden outbursts and fire-and-brimstone sermons about "holy war" for Jerusalem.

More frustrating for his critics, he has maintained a stranglehold on the governing Palestinian authority. Only he makes decisions. Only he handles money.

"Don't believe it when you are called ministers. ... I am the minister of everything and nothing can be done without my approval," Arafat told his Cabinet in December, according to a Palestinian official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Arafat does most hiring himself. The Palestine Liberation Organization boss routinely sends out letters ordering ministers to appoint the bearer to a certain position.

Coveted government jobs go first to loyalists of Arafat's Fatah movement or their relatives. Education Minister Yasser Amr has eight family members working as drivers, bodyguards and advisers, and Housing Minister Zakaria Al-Agha has brought five relatives into his ministry.

Arafat also has created more than one agency to perform the same function. For example, there are eight security branches.

Such murky management methods are one reason foreign donors withheld promised aid. "A major mistake is the overlap ... among official Palestinian institutions, mainly in the coordination of international assistance," said Palestinian economist Samir Abdallah.

Perhaps Arafat's biggest failure has been his inability to crush or win over Muslim militants opposed to the peace accord with Israel.

Rebel Serbs evacuate thousands of civilians from tense front lines

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) — Rebel Serbs have evacuated thousands of civilians from villages along a tense front line close to Croatia's border with archenemy Serbia, U.N. officials reported Saturday.

Croatian Serbs denied the reports, but U.N. officials in the region spoke of a serious situation. Eastern Croatia was the most bitterly contested territory in the Serb-Croat war of 1991, which killed more than 10,000 people and left one-third of Croatia in rebel Serb hands.

The United Nations, meanwhile, reported there were Croatian artillery and sniper attacks on civilians during fighting last Monday and Tuesday. Croatia's defense ministry called the report "a blatant lie." It has restricted U.N. access to much of the area of central Croatia it recaptured last week.

In the east, Croatian army troops who infiltrated a U.N. buffer zone squared off across the Danube River with rebel Serb forces occupying territory along the border with Serbia. In southern Croatia, there were similar standoffs.

U.N. spokeswoman Kirsten Haupt, reached in the Serb-held region known as U.N. Sector East, said rebel Serb authorities began evacuating women and children from villages close to the buffer zone on Friday.

U.N. civilian police reported 2,000 to 3,000 refugees massed in Dalj, one of the easternmost Serb-held towns on the Danube.

Thousands more were thought to have gone to other areas, and U.N. officials saw some cars moving into Serbia, she said.

"It is very serious," she said. Peacekeepers have hunkered down in posts in the buffer zone with orders to stay put, she said.

A Croatian Serb spokesman, Maj. Branko Opacic, said rebel Serb troops had been put on a state of alert, but insisted the region was calm and civilians had not been evacuated, the Bosnian Serb news agency SRNA reported.

He also denied reports that Yugoslav army tanks were massing across the border in Serbia — the dominant state in what remains of Yugoslavia.

U.N. personnel were unable to check the reports because of the difficulty of movement in the area.

The Yugoslav army has a permanent tank base just a few hundred yards from the Batina bridge, and has in the past moved tanks closer when tension rose in Croatia.

The Serb-dominated Yugoslav army backed the Serb rebellion that erupted after Croatia seceded from Yugoslavia in 1991.

On Saturday, an Associated Press reporter in Serbia saw an artillery regiment of 16 trucks, packed with soldiers and pulling 155-mm field guns, heading toward the Croatian border on the Zagreb-Belgrade highway.

But Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, whose nationalist stand fueled the rebellion in Croatia and Bosnia, has increasingly distanced himself from his former proxies, and the troop movements seemed to be more of a show of force rather than a sign of imminent military action.

U.S. diplomat Robert Frasure met with Milosevic Saturday night to express Washington's concern about the protection of Serb civilians in Croatia, the Belgrade-based news agency Tanjug reported.

INTRODUCING BELTONE'S HIDDEN HEARING AID — INVISA.
Better hearing incredibly just got smaller.
Beltone has developed an exciting hearing aid called Invisa (pronounced In-VEE-za). "Now all the joy of better hearing comes in the tiniest aid Beltone makes."
We call Invisa our "hidden hearing aid" because its incredibly small size allows it to hide deeply, yet comfortably, inside your ear canal. This makes it virtually impossible for anyone to see Invisa once it's in place.
Of course, Invisa isn't appropriate for everyone. The benefits of hearing aids vary by type and degree of hearing loss, noise environment, accuracy of hearing evaluation, and proper fit. Visit Beltone today for a FREE 10-step hearing test and find out if the Invisa is right for you.

Dr. Donald Floyd
Keeping up with a typical teenager is hard work...and Kristi Corneleus is no exception. A junior at Midland High School, Kristi is a good student, an exceptional basketball player... and still has time to hang out with her friends. So, when torn cartilage in her knee threatened to knock her off pace, Kristi sought help from Dr. Donald Floyd, one of Memorial Hospital's team of orthopedic specialists. After undergoing outpatient arthroscopy at Memorial Hospital's advanced surgical facility, Kristi was back at the gym the very next day...as a spectator. Thanks to Memorial Hospital's team of orthopedic and rehabilitation experts, Kristi was off the bench and back in the game in record time.

"The day after my arthroscopic surgery, I got up and went to a basketball tournament."

Tens of thousands mark 50th anniversary of V-E Day

'I do hope that all ... will remember with pride and gratitude those men and women, armed and unarmed, whose courage really helpted to bring us victory. God bless them all.'
— England's Queen Mother Elizabeth

LONDON (AP) — Thousands of veterans of World War II joined in commemorations Saturday of the 50th anniversary of V-E Day, each bringing particular memories of triumph, liberation and sorrow.

"I think of so many of my friends who died. So many of them died in horrible, horrible ways," said Suzanne Cherise, a veteran of the French Resistance — and one face in the crowd at Britain's official celebrations in Hyde Park.

Vice President Al Gore told veterans gathered at the American Cemetery in Cambridge that the war against evil did not end on May 8, 1945.

"From their deaths, we have learned enduring lessons," he said. "If we don't heed them now, the 21st century ... could bring us a greater barbarism than the world has ever known."

London was the starting point for a border-hopping pilgrimage by leaders of the World War II combatants, going on to Paris, Berlin and Moscow.

Presidents, prime ministers, kings and other officials of 54 nations were in London for a formal dinner Saturday night, a service of reconciliation at St. Paul's Cathedral Sunday morning and another banquet at Buckingham Palace.

Queen Mother Elizabeth, at 94 a living symbol of the British generation that stood alone against Nazi Germany in 1940-41, formally opened the celebration in Hyde Park.

'It's wonderful to see the town rebuilt and the guns replaced by bottles of beer.'
— U.S. vetera of WWII

"I do hope that all ... will remember with pride and gratitude those men and women, armed and unarmed, whose courage really helped to bring us to victory," she said. "God bless them all."

Derek Waghorn, 76, wearing a chest-full of medals on his crisp navy blazer, served with the British army from the retreat at Dunkirk in 1940 through the D-Day invasion in 1944 and to V-E Day.

"They say miracles don't happen. But it must have been a miracle for those who came through it all," he said with a smile.

John Linzer, 71, checked a database at the veterans' center in Hyde Park for old shipmates from HMS Nadder. He recognized one name, but was informed that his shipmate had just come home from the hospital and was too weak to talk.

"We're survivors, not heroes," said Linzer, who paused as old emotions welled up. "The heroes are still out there — some of them, like my buddies, at the bottom of the Indian Ocean."

Charles Everard, 69, came to Hyde Park with his grandchildren Stella, 10, and Alex, 12.

"I want them to realize that if what happened never happens again, it was worthwhile," said Everard, who served with the British army in Germany.

Alex Everard said he enjoyed his grandfather's war stories. "It sounded pretty drastic. I wouldn't have wanted to go to war," he said.

German Chancellor Helmut Kohl provoked some protests in Britain with a statement remembering not only the victims of Nazi aggression and concentration camps, but also his own country's civilians and war dead.

"The German people have to learn from what happened and never forget that the Nazis were the aggressors," protested Mike Whine, spokesman for the Board of Deputies of British Jews.

A survey published Saturday by the German magazine Der Spiegel found that four out of 10 people over 65 years old believed that the forced deportation of more than 7 million Germans from eastern lands after the war was as great a crime as the Holocaust.

Nearly three in 10 people among respondents ages 18-34 held the same view.

People in the Czech Republic remembered the brief days of liberation from Nazi occupation before the Iron Curtain fell. Pilsen residents re-enacted the defeat of German occupation forces by partisans and American forces led by Gen. George S. Patton on May 6, 1945.

Patton's forces stopped at Pilsen, as the United States had promised Stalin, and withdrew as soon as Russian forces were in position.

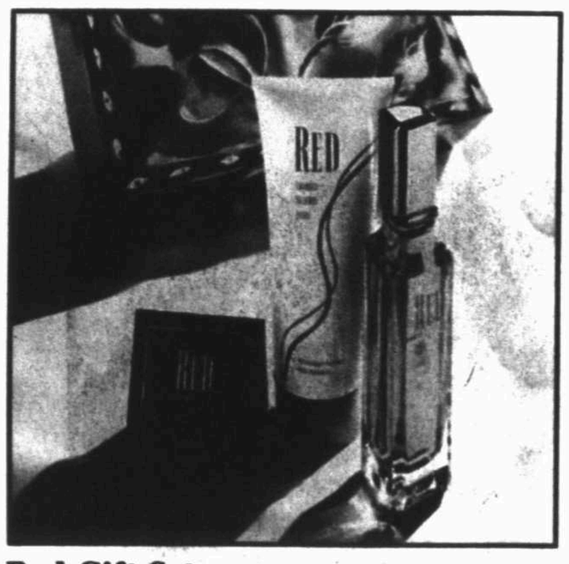

"It would have had a tremendous impact on the history of the world if the United States got into Berlin before the Russians," said George Patton Jr., who was in Pilsen.

Czech Premier Vaclav Klaus did not indulge in recriminations, but thanked the Americans. "They helped us in 1918 to create Czechoslovakia. ... in 1945 to save the country from Nazi genocide ... and recently to defeat communism."

The Stars and Stripes flying from church spires and building fronts spoke of the warm welcome for visiting Yanks. Tens of thousands feasted on beer and sausages, while bands played — what else? — Glenn Miller tunes.

"I remember the sleet and rain when we came here, all the rubble and all the great people," said 73-old Robert Crooker from Danville, Calif., who helped liberate the town with the 97th Infantry Division.

CMA's Female Vocalist of the Year to sing for Roundup '95

By Georgia Temple
Staff Writer

When the reigning Country Music Association Female vocalist of the Year walks in the room May 13 for the American Cancer Society's Roundup '95, the party might well become Pam Tillis' sweetheart's dance.

The daughter of Mel Tillis — a singer and writer of such country classics as "Detroit City" and "Ruby Don't Take Your Love to Town" — Miss Tillis grew up in her father's spotlight. Now, after working on a solo career since she was 19, Miss Tillis has captured her own spotlight.

"I grew up knowing that fame is transient," Miss Tillis said. "At the moment, my fame eclipses my dad's. It's my little time to shine. That's a bittersweet thing, which my dad has handled gracefully and graciously."

Tillis

The 37-year-old artist has platinum albums on Arista — "Homeward Looking Angel" and "Sweetheart's Dance," which has two No. 1 hits on it so far — "Walk in the Room" and "My Vida Loca." The latest single release, "I Was Blown Away," has experienced a different fate.

In response to calls to Oklahoma radio stations requesting they not play "I Was Blown Away," Miss Tillis asked the record company to stop promoting the song. Although the song is a light-hearted love song, the artist felt "it was the only ethical thing to do" in light of the bombing in Oklahoma City.

Fans will have the opportunity to see her perform Wednesday on KWES-TV. She has been nominated for an Academy of Country Music Award as Top Female Vocalist and will perform on the 7 p.m. broadcast.

Not long after she received the CMA nomination, Miss Tillis said, "Just when you think nobody's paying attention to what you're doing, something like this happens."

She's pleased with both award opportunities. "It just feels good to have your work noticed and appreciated. I'm not really used to that."

The artist has taken a somewhat circuitous route to stardom. After spending her teen years as a Stutterette, one of her dad's backup singers, she left country music when she was 19.

"It was hard to grow. Singing for my dad was all the work and headaches with none of the satisfaction of having done it myself."

She moved to California, where she sang jazz and rhythm and blues and recorded an album in 1983 called "Above and Beyond the Doll of Cutie."

Although Miss Tillis returned to Nashville where she focused on her songwriting and became a popular demo singer, she credits her confidence to singing jazz and her attitude to rock.

In the early 1990s, Miss Tillis came to a mutual agreement with Warners to go their separate ways. Paul Worley of Sony/Tree wanted to sign her to a publishing contract; she agreed.

Please see TILLIS/2B

Rabies fight

AUSTIN — At the request of West Texas legislators — including Sens. Bill Sims of San Angelo and John Montford of Lubbock and Reps. Rob Junell of San Angelo and David Counts of Knox City — and the Texas Department of Health, Gov. George W. Bush on Friday mobilized the Texas Army National Guard to assist with efforts to combat the gray fox rabies epidemic in West Central Texas.

The National Guard will work with community officials and local veterinarians to develop mobile teams to offer low-cost rabies vaccinations for domestic animals.

Bush said the state will provide the resources, but pet owners must take responsibility.

"For your own safety and the safety Of all children in Texas, I urge you to be responsible pet owners and have all your pets vaccinated against rabies," he said.

Firemen host open house

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Midland residents will get the chance to learn more about the Midland Fire Department at the department's second Open House on Saturday.

The open house will be held at the department's main station, 1500 W. Wall St., from noon-6 p.m.

Assistant Chief Eddie Klatt said the event will include demonstrations with the jaws of life, fire and rescue equipment and tours of the department and the department's museum.

Residents will also get a chance to see the department's new, advanced heart monitoring equipment aboard the ambulances.

In addition, Blockbuster Video will be on hand to make video identification of children for their parents.

"We encourage those who have done the video before to bring their video, so they can get the most recent picture of their child," Klatt said.

Hot dogs, drinks and cotton candy will be served and KGEE FM 100 will be doing a live broadcast.

Klatt said this year's open house is a result of last year's success.

"We didn't believe an open house would go over as well as it did last year," Klatt said. "But, it was a huge success."

Klatt said the event not only allows residents to get a better idea of how the Fire Department works, but it also puts the firefighters better in touch with the community.

"It gives all of us a chance to get closer to the community and let them know what our capabilities are," he said. "They find out that their tax dollars are not being wasted. We just don't sit around waiting for a fire. We handle any emergency situation, in addition to putting out fires."

Veterans remember V-E Day

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Fifty years ago today, the war in Europe came to an arduous close. That event will be commemorated at 10 a.m. Monday at the Confederate Air Force's Memorial Garden at CAF headquarters at Midland International Airport.

By V-E Day — Victory in Europe — the United States and its Allies were on the threshold of restoring peace to a world ravaged by war since 1939.

Germany unconditionally surrendered on May 7, 1945, only a week after Adolf Hitler committed suicide in his Berlin bunker and the Soviet military surrounded Berlin.

Almost a year earlier, on June 6, 1944, Allied forces commanded by U.S. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower launched the Normandy Invasion from England in a massive drive to free Europe of Axis occupation.

On May 8, 1945, the day after Germany's surrender at Eisenhower's headquarters in Rheims, France, the Allies declared May 8 V-E Day.

Selena family launches anti-handgun campaign

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The family of slain Tejano star Selena is channeling grief into action with the launching of an anti-crime campaign against the illegal use of handguns.

Selena's father, Abraham Quintanilla Jr. said he wants to turn the shock and hurt that followed his daughter's death into a mission to help rid society of violence.

"People are in a state of wonder, asking 'What do we do next? What can we do next?' People were waiting for this message and this is our message the violence in America. No more guns," Quintanilla said.

The family unveiled their campaign Friday which will be featured in announcements in newspapers, radio and television stations and on billboards.

GARY OTT

Gourmet cooks from TV shows are part of the family

I never thought the phrase "get a life" would apply to me. At least I had hoped it wouldn't. But then last Saturday rolled around and right then and there — as I watched Jeff Smith, the Frugal Gourmet, prepare yet another French pastry of some sort — it suddenly dawned on the me that, yes, I, Gary Ott, dashing man about town, did indeed need to get a life.

Ott

I mean, really!

Spending my day off watching cooking shows on PBS? Has it come to that?

I'm afraid so. Kind of pathetic, isn't it?

Then I started examining the situation more closely. I'm not watching this stuff because I'm bored, I said. I actually LIKE it.

Which is worse? Having no life or considering the Frugal Gourmet exciting TV?

Thinking back, I can't really remember when I first acquired this peculiar taste in TV viewing, especially since my idea of gourmet cooking has always consisted of boiling some water and tossing in a bag of macaroni shells. Still, I find myself getting hooked.

The cooks themselves have become a part of my family, though Jeff Smith, who I have always considered something of a bleeding heart liberal because he concludes each show with the phrase, "I bid you peace," is the only one I know by name.

My other two favorites are known simply as ...

— That strange Cajun fellow who wears red suspenders, talks funny and tops off each meal with a hearty glass of wine; and — The little roly-poly guy with a southern accent who looks as though he singlehandedly consumes everything cooked on the program ... and, as a result, is quite happy.

So as any of these three men go about their duties in the kitchen, I find myself feverishly scribbling recipes on the back of envelopes and making mental

TILLIS: Career is not artist's first priority, she says

(From 1B)

"It meant I wouldn't have to go knocking on doors, crawling on my hands and knees," Miss Tillis said. "But I guess you could say I had an ulterior motive, too, because I knew Paul's production work. And he was saying, maybe we could also do some kind of production deal on the side; he'd put some tapes together on me and we'd shop them. So I said OK, but I wasn't in a big rush. I'd be happy to just chill out for a year, write some songs, figure out what I was doing."

Not long afterward, she was in the studio making a demo of one of her songs when Worley called to say he'd made a deal for her with Arista-Nashville, which then existed only on paper.

"You wait all your life for something to happen, and then when you're not even trying, it just all fell into place. And then I suddenly felt like, here I'd been thinking I'll just hang out for a year."

The call made her resolve to "make the most true-to-my roots country album I can make."

It's not surprising that her first No. 1 hit on her debut Arista album, "Put Yourself in My Place," was "Don't Tell Me What To Do."

Her second album included five songs she co-wrote with her husband, guitarist and award-winning songwriter, Bob DiPiero.

Her latest album, which she co-produced, features songs written by outside writers.

"I heard so many great songs that I wanted to do, and I was afraid that if I didn't cut them now, somebody else would. I wanted to paint a landscape and not a self-portrait this time."

Although her career is important and she devotes enormous time and energy to it, it's not her first priority. Her son, Ben, fills that capacity. Whatever career he pursues, his mom's behind him.

"Music was a saving grace for me," said the artist, who likes to spend her leisure time fishing. "Music kept me from really messing up because I was truly a wild child, so I'd be happy if Ben has something he feels passionate about. I think that's what keeps people together — finding their worth in life, what they were meant to do. Ben is still searching. I always felt like I knew what I wanted to do. And I would like that for him — that he finds what he is most interested in. As a parent, that's one of the things I most want for him."

DAY: CAF veterans celebrate anniversary for end of WWII

(From 1B)

Meanwhile, war raged in the Pacific Theater for another three months, until Aug. 14, 1945, when Japan agreed unconditionally to surrender to the United States after the atomic bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

McGrew

By then, 50 million people, mostly civilians, died between 1939 and 1945. Of the 17 million military casualties, more than 405,000 were Americans.

"If you weren't there and if it wasn't your time, it is difficult to image the size of World War II," reflected W.W. "Bill" McGrew, a Midlander who flew a P-47 Thunderbolt fighter-bomber in Europe. "Everybody was behind it. The war was very popular" on the home-front, although "a guy like me wasn't involved in 'why.'"

McGrew will be among World War II veterans who will be recognized at the ceremony that is being sponsored by the CAF and the American Airpower Heritage Museum.

At war's end in Europe, McGrew, then 21, was on a bombing-strafing mission from France into Germany when his Ninth Air Force Squadron was radioed to "turn around and come back; the war's over."

And to McGrew, the P-47 Thunderbolt was "the best plane in the war," for the best aircraft is "the one that got you back" home safely. The warriors' youth is "what kept you going; you were pretty young," he said.

Following victory in Europe, McGrew said, many American servicemen returned to the United States "pretty quick to get retrained to go to the Pacific."

Borchert

Chuck Borchert, who lives in Odessa, already had served a tour of duty in Europe as a waist-gunner on a B-17 Flying Fortress assigned to the U.S. Army Air Forces' Eighth Air Force in England. By 1945, he was in Guam with the Air Transport Command.

"We pretty well knew that it was coming," Borchert said of V-E Day, "but it wasn't quite like when they dropped that bomb over there. That was sudden, and it was over with quick."

And to Borchert, the end of the war in Europe "meant ... the boys could come home, and there was no more dying. That's the thing."

Borchert flew 31 missions in the famed B-17, "Shoo Shoo Shoo Baby."

"We were proud of them (B-17s) because those suckers would bring you home — shot all to hell," Borchert said. "Same way with the P-47. Shoot that airplane ... and it's coming home. You could shoot half a wing off of that B-17, and you can come home," sometimes on the proverbial "wing and a prayer."

Midlander Frank Hawk, who was a B-17 bombardier with the Eighth Air Force in England, shares Borchert's sentiments toward the four-engine Flying Fortress.

Hawk

"That B-17 could return on two engines and land if it didn't have to go much farther than the (English) Channel) and to the base," said Hawk, whose 95th Bombardment Group won three presidential citations for bombing accuracy.

"We came back one day with 200 (bullet-flak) holes, and we were not hit in a vital place in the B-17," Hawk said. "We had the best training of any air force in the world. We were up against the best air force (German Luftwaffe) in the world at one time .... Tail-gunner to pilot, everybody had the best training that there was available."

Of the end of the war in Europe, "we stopped the killing and stopped the destruction of beautiful cities and edifices in those cities," Hawk said. "We stopped all of that so that the people could start rebuilding, and they did — the Germans, especially, and the Italians and the French."

Jack Morgan, who lives in the San Angelo area, piloted the P-47 as a strafer and dive-bomber with the 12th Air Force in Italy.

"We were well aware that it (war's end) was coming up almost daily," reflected Morgan.

By the spring of 1945, German ground troops were "streaming across the Po Valley" in retreat from the Apennines mountain range.

Morgan

Morgan, who is to be emcee of the V-E Day ceremony, said it is "kind of like reliving some of your past.

"You get a chance to talk to a bunch of the guys that you were kind of kindred souls with," he mused. "We didn't know each other at the time, but we were all doing practically the same thing. We would like to keep the memory alive because it could happen again — not in the same manner because everything has transcended what was in those days in the way of aircraft."

During World War II, "the kids took the brunt of that war. Most of them were just out of high school — from 18 to 25 years old. Anybody who was over 25, we called him Pop, Papa or Pops."

Other than the idealism of youth, Morgan cited basic principles that inspired young American warriors to be victorious and to end the war.

"You knew it was a job you were supposed to do," Morgan said. "You didn't want to let your buddies down. You didn't want to let your country down, and, of course, you didn't want to let yourself down."

Prisoners rebel against lack of television by throwing food fight

VICTORIA (AP) — With no television to entertain them, about 48 federal prisoners staged a food-throwing protest at the Victoria County Jail on Friday, Sheriff Mike Ratcliff said.

Most of the inmates, who were housed in two 24-bed dormitory cells, arrived at the jail Thursday, he said.

After spending the night TV-free, the inmates refused to line up for a 7:30 a.m. head count Friday, Ratcliff said. He also said prisoners refused to leave their dormitories to allow a search for weapons or contraband, standard practice when inmates become disobedient.

"Any time that a disturbance occurs, one of the main objectives is to secure the facility and conduct a shake-down. They refused to cooperate," Ratcliff said.

By 9:45 a.m., he said, the disturbance had been "neutralized" without violence. Some of the involved prisoners have been moved into single-person cells.

Ratcliff said "a lack of television" was the principal factor in the uprising.

Unlike federal penitentiaries, where prisoners have round-the-clock television privileges, Victoria County Jail inmates have TV access only as a reward for good behavior.

Portable TVs and videocasette players are brought into the living areas once or twice a week, allowing them to watch taped movies.

The quality of the jail's food also appeared to be an issue, as several inmates threw their breakfast during the protest and later complained about food to the sheriff.

"My response to that was that we offer a wholesome and adequate meal of an appropriate portion," Ratcliff said. "Apparently, it's just not consistent with what the federal prisons serve them."

The prisoners are being housed in Victoria because of space constraints at other facilities.

POLICE REPORTS

Fires

ODESSA — Odessa area firefighters handled two blazes Saturday — one at the Goldsmith petroleum plant and one at a mobile home in the county.

The petroleum plant fire drew firefighters from the city of Odessa as well as numerous volunteer units from the county. It was brought under control within two hours. There were no injuries reported.

A mobile home fire in the county was handled by volunteer units who were called away from the Goldsmith fire. No injuries were reported in that blaze.

Train derailment

STANTON — Fearing a possible chemical spill, officers with the Martin County Sheriff's Office directed traffic away from two railroad cars that jumped the tracks near Stanton shortly before 6 p.m. Saturday.

Traffic was returned to normal shortly when officers determined that the tank cars were empty, an officer reported.

There were no injuries in the incident and Union Pacific crews were notified and responded to replace the cars.

OTT: Creations don't match TV's

notes of what sauce goes with which main dish and whether or not I should increase the amount of onions to be sauteed for a particularly fattening casserole.

I've even purchased entire cookbooks authored by these guys, who heavily promote them at the conclusion of each program. I have my own filing system, complete with an alphbetical listing of all recipes. And, I now spend more time in Albertson's produce department than I do scanning new brands of sugar-coated cereals.

This, I assure myself, will surely impress the women. Maybe I can't change a lightbulb, but, by golly, I can prepare a mean broccoli and cheese casserole.

That ought to account for something.

The only problem is, my creations never quite match those that appear on the TV screen. The camera focuses in on a beautifully prepared souffle, for example, and I immediately think, "I can do that."

An hour and a half later I realize, "No, I can't."

So I clean up the mess, write off the $37.95 I spent for the ingredients and drive to McDonald's for a "real" gourmet meal of two Big Macs and a large order of fries to go.

Local piano students perform in national program

From Staff Reports

Almost 300 Midland piano students are participating in the National Fraternity of Student Musicians, sponsored by the National Guild of Piano Teachers, Teacher Division of The American College of Musicians.

Students will be performing during the 72nd Annual Observance of National Music Week, sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs. National Music Week begins today and continues through May 14. The theme is Music Gives Value to Life.

Auditions, which began April 29, continue until Friday at St. Luke's United Methodist Church.

Celinda Hallbauer is adjudicator. She is director of the Preparatory Music Program at the University of Mary Hardin-Baylor. She teaches music courses for children ages 2 through high school as well as college-level piano and piano pedagogy.

Ms. Hallbauer was an honor graduate of the University of Texas at Austin with a bachelor of music degree and received a master of music degree from Baylor University.

Ms. Hallbauer belongs to several professional organizations including the Music Teachers Association, Texas Music Teachers Association, Temple/Belton Music Teachers Association, American College of Musicians, National Guild of Piano Teachers, National Federation of Music Clubs, Texas Federation of Music Clubs, Temple Music Club, Chorister's Guild, and Sigma Alpha Iota Fraternity.

She holds a professional certification in Piano from the Music Teachers National Association and served as the state chairman for certification for TMTA from 1989-1992. She is a trustee for TMTEF.

Ms. Hallbauer serves as counselor of UMHB's Prepatory Junior Music Club, and while serving as Texas State Junior Counselor for the Texas Federation of Music Clubs, she directed three State Junior Festivals held at the University of Mary Hardin-Baylor. She has been an active member of the Temple/Belton Music Teachers Association since 1975, has served as president and vice-president, and is currently serving as local student affiliate chairman.

Students participating in the guild auditions select pieces chosen from the masters of pianoforte literature written during baroque, classic, romantic and modern periods. Students receive a certificate, a gold, silver or bronze embossed pin and a year's membership in the National Fraternity of Student Musicians.

Teachers whose students are participating include Shelley Crawford, Natalie Eustace, Joy Finley, Lou Nelle George, Ruth Ann Griffin, Nancy L. Hoover, Cynthia Reese, Joan Lucas, Diane Martin, Phyllis Mason, Mickie Matthews, Mrs. Hans Roweck, Shari Weiner Santorelli, Mrs. Donald Thompson, and Betty Wetsel.

Also, Ann Haynes from Monahans, Debby Averitt from Stanton, and Louise Farrah from Iraan.

Comedy runs high in Neil Simon's play 'Rumors'

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

When rumors fly, it makes for great comedy. And when it is assumed a man is killed from a gunshot wound to the head, the comedy escalates as other guests arrive at a townhouse in Neil Simon's play "Rumors."

The comedy will be performed by Lee High School students 8 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday.

"The show opens in the townhouse of a deputy mayor of New York City," said LHS drama teacher Horace Griffin. "The mayor and his wife have invited four couples over to celebrate their 10th wedding anniversary, but the party never begins because it is revealed that the host has shot himself in the head."

Not to worry, it's only a flesh wound. Nonetheless, a lawyer decides to cover up the incident, which gets progressively more difficult to sustain as other guests begin arriving and nobody remembers "what has been told about whom."

"Doors slam and we are off on a roller coaster ride of hilarity as the couples get more and more crazed trying to sort everything out," Griffin said.

The cast includes Katherine Martin as Chris Gorman and Mike Loftis as her husband, Ken Gorman; Kristen Kirby as Claire Ganz and Nathan Lunley as Lenny Ganz. Charlton Taylor performs as Ernie Cusack, Kattie Wasenberg as Cookie Cusack, David Yeates as Glenn Cooper, Vilma Tarvainen as Cassie Cooper, Brent Anderson as Officer Welch, and Sonja Widman as Officer Pudney.

Nichole Guame is stage manager and assistant to the director. Jimmy Severino is operating sound equipment, and Michelle Long and Melanie Martin are operating lights. Kerri Abbey is in charge of props.

Both performances will be in the LHS auditorium. Tickets are $2 for students and $5 for adults. For tickets or more information call 689-1621.

PROPERTY TAX PROTEST AND APPEAL PROCEDURES

The law gives property owners the right to protest actions concerning their property tax appraisals. You may follow these appeal procedures if you have a concern about:

* the value placed on your property
* any exemptions that may apply to you
* the cancellation of an agricultural appraisal
* the taxable status of your property
* the local governments which should be taxing your property
* any action taken by the appraisal district that adversely affected you.

Informal Review: If you have a question concerning your property value, you are welcome to visit informally at 4631 Andrews Highway, Midland, Texas or by telephone at (915) 699-4991. One of our staff appraisers will go over our records with you.

Review by the Appraisal Review Board
If you can't resolve your problem with the appraisal district staff, you may have your case heard by the appraisal review board (ARB).

The ARB is an independent board of citizens that reviews problems with appraisals or other concerns listed above. It has the power to order the appraisal district to make the necessary changes to solve problems.

If you file a written request for an ARB hearing (called a notice of protest) before the deadline, the ARB will set your case for a hearing. You'll receive written notice of the time, date & place of the hearing. The hearing will be informal. You and the appraisal district representative will be asked to present evidence about your case. The ARB will make its decision based on the evidence presented. You can get a copy of a protest form from the appraisal district office at 4631 Andrews Highway.

Note: You shouldn't try to contact ARB members outside of a hearing. The law requires ARB members to sign an affidavit saying that they haven't talked about your case before the ARB hears it.

Review by the District Court
After it decides your case, the ARB must send you a copy of its order by certified mail. If you're not satisfied with the decision, you have the right to appeal to the district court. If you choose to go to court, you must start the process by filing a petition within 45 days of the date you receive the ARB's order. If the appraisal district has appraised your property at $1,000,000 or more, you must file a notice of appeal with the chief appraiser within 15 days of the date you receive the ARB's order.

More Information
You can get more information by contacting your appraisal district at:
Midland Central Appraisal District
4631 Andrews Highway
Midland, Texas 79708
(915) 699-4991
You can also get a pamphlet describing how to prepare a protest from the appraisal district or from the State Comptroller's Property Tax Division at P O Box 13528, Austin, Texas 78711-3528.

Deadline for Filing Protests With the ARB*

Usual Deadline
On or before May 31 (or 30 days after a notice of appraised value was mailed to you, whichever is later).

Late protests are allowed if you miss the usual deadline for a good cause. Good cause is some reason beyond your control, like a medical emergency. The ARB decides whether you have good cause.

Late protests are due the day before the appraisal review board approves records for the year. Contact your appraisal district for more information.

Special Deadlines
For change of use (the appraisal district informed you that you are losing agricultural appraisal because you changed the use of your land), the deadline is before the 30th day after the notice of the determination was mailed to you.

For ARB changes (the ARB has informed you of a change that increases your tax liability and the change didn't result from a protest you filed), the deadline is before the 30th day after the notice of determination was mailed to you.

If you believe the appraisal district or ARB should have sent you a notice and did not, you may file a protest until the day before taxes become delinquent (usually February 1). The ARB decides whether it will hear your case based on evidence about whether a required notice was mailed to you.

The deadline is postponed to the next business day if it falls on a weekend or holiday.

Midland's current rate of growth is far better

If it seems to you that there are more people in Midland nowadays, your thinking is right in line with officials for the City of Midland. And with us, too, for that matter.

In fact, a study conducted by the city's planning department indicates that Midland's population has grown by 3,112 residents since 1990 and on Jan. 1 this year was estimated to be 92,555. And while that may not exactly be record-setting population growth — even for Midland — it still is indicative of a vibrant, growing city that has a bright future.

City officials calculated the population by applying building permit data to the most recent census counts for dwelling units and other sources, and after accounting for vacancy rates, multiplying that figure by the person-to-household count from the last census. While that does not give an exact count of Midland's current population, it should come fairly close.

Of course, most Midlanders have witnessed the same signs of growth over the past few months that we have seen — the construction of new homes and businesses, the seemingly heavier traffic count, the retail business expansion along Loop 250. And while all those factors are due to more reasons than just population growth, it no doubt does play an important role.

We're happy to see the growth. It makes for a stronger, more diversified community and pushes the Permian Basin — slowly — toward a more dynamic future. Besides, we've experienced growth that occurs during "boom" times and of the two, the type that we're undergoing now is far preferable.

Let's grow — slowly — into a terrific city for tomorrow!

Croatia's push violates spirit of U.N.-brokered deal

Croatia's president, Franjo Tudjman, is playing a dangerous game of talk and fight. His brief military offensive across U.N. lines this week quickly achieved its objective, recapturing a narrow slice of territory along a key highway. Serbian forces responded by raining rockets tipped with antipersonnel warheads on central Zagreb, killing six people and injuring hundreds.

Wednesday the United Nations brokered a cease-fire, which may halt the fighting for now. But Croatia still refuses to withdraw its forces from the newly recaptured territory.

Tudjman's military gamesmanship carries big risks. His newly strengthened army might be able to win limited local engagements against isolated Serbian militias. Croatia would suffer grievously if escalating conflict leads to renewed war against regular Serbian troops.

The way to defuse this crisis is for Croatian forces to withdraw from the contested western Slavonia enclave and for remaining Serbian forces there to turn in their heavy weapons, as they were supposed to do three years ago.

Tudjman is trying to show that he has not written off the 30 percent of Croatian territory seized by rebel Serbs when Croatia declared its independence in 1991.

After 10,000 people were killed in fighting that year, former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance arranged a peace that called for U.N. peacekeepers to disarm the Serb-held enclaves while a political settlement was worked out. There is still no political settlement, and the cease-fire lines have taken on the appearance of permanent, U.N.-patrolled borders.

Earlier this year, Tudjman threatened to expel U.N. forces so that he would be free to move against the territories militarily. American diplomats warned him that military adventurism would damage his hopes for improved ties with the West and could lead to a wider war in the Balkans.

In March the Croatian leader agreed to extend the U.N. mandate in exchange for modest changes in its size, name and mission.

By his actions this week, Tudjman has violated the spirit of that deal. He should immediately withdraw his forces from western Slavonia and unambiguously commit himself to resolve the larger issues by diplomatic, not military means.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, May 7, the 127th day of 1995. There are 238 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Fifty years ago, on May 7, 1945, Germany signed an unconditional surrender at Allied headquarters in Rheims, France, to take effect the following day, ending the European conflict of World War II.

On this date:

In 1789, the first inaugural ball was held in New York in honor of President and Mrs. George Washington.

In 1812, poet Robert Browning was born in London.

In 1825, Italian composer Antonio Salieri died in Vienna, Austria.

In 1833, composer Johannes Brahms was born in Hamburg, Germany.

In 1840, composer Peter Ilyich Tchaikovsky was born in the Ural region of Russia.

In 1847, the American Medical Association was founded in Philadelphia.

In 1915, nearly 1,200 people died when a German torpedo sank the British liner Lusitania off the Irish coast.

In 1939, Germany and Italy announced a military and political alliance known as the Rome-Berlin Axis.

In 1945, the 1944 Pulitzer Prizes were awarded; winners included John Hersey for his novel "A Bell for Adano," Mary Chase for her play "Harvey," and Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal for his picture of the Iwo Jima flag-raising.

In 1954, the 55-day Battle of Dien Bien Phu in Vietnam ended with Vietnamese insurgents overrunning French forces.

In 1963, the United States launched the Telstar II communications satellite.

In 1975, President Ford formally declared an end to the Vietnam era.

U.S. is disenchanted with Haitian politics

WASHINGTON — Only months after it began, the honeymoon between the United States and Haiti has come to an end.

Anderson

President Clinton visited Haiti last month to celebrate the return to power of President Jean-Bertrand Aristide. State Department officials claim to be optimistic about the future of democracy in Haiti, noting the strides made by Aristide in the face of great adversity.

But Haiti hands elsewhere in the administration are far less positive in their assessment. These sources worry that Aristide and his followers are more interested in retribution than reconciliation, citing the return of mob justice, hit lists and violent demonstrations. "It's looking like the same thing all over again," one American official told us.

As Washington grows more ambivalent toward Haiti, Aristide appears in no hurry to win over his critics. At the moment, several events are dampening relations:

■ Last month, the Aristide government flatly rejected American calls to renew an immigration treaty which allowed for the automatic repatriation of Haitian refugees interdicted at sea. Mindful of the thousands of refugees who fled Haiti during military rule, the Clinton administration had pressed Aristide to renew the 1981 pact, which expired last October. The United States must now get Haiti's approval on a case-by-case basis before repatriating refugees.

The U.S. Border Patrol reports that 252 Haitians were rescued or assisted at sea in April, compared to zero in March and February. Observers predict that the problem is likely to get worse before it gets better, given Haiti's bitterly poor economy and its soaring crime rate.

■ Sources say FBI investigators are increasingly frustrated by the lack of help from Haitian authorities in their probe of the March 28 assassination of Mireille Durocher-Bertin, a political opponent of Aristide. Her murder, which took place just days before Clinton's visit, proved highly embarrassing to both the United States and Haiti. "They're very much disgusted with the way things are going," a source in regular contact with some of the agents told our associate Dean Boyd.

American officials have implicated Aristide's interior minister, Mondesir Beaubrun, in the murder plot. But calls for Beaubrun's removal have been squarely rebuffed by Aristide (who himself was once photographed socializing with Patrick and Eddy Moise, two of the suspects being held). Beaubrun has maintained his innocence.

■ A recent prison break has intensified American concerns about Haiti's fragile judicial system. College Francois, a Haitian security officer, escaped with 10 other inmates from the Petionville jail two weeks ago. Francois had been jailed for the killing of two U.S. Embassy employees while stealing the embassy payroll. The escape was made possible after prison guards conveniently left the cell doors unlocked.

American and Haitian officials quickly began pointing fingers, with Haitians saying that the FBI and U.N. were to blame, and U.S. Embassy officials stressing that the suspected guards were Haitians. More than 100 Haitian inmates have escaped since Aristide returned to power.

To recapture Francois law enforcement officials may have to rely on a bit of voodoo. Authorities first caught Francois after a voodoo priest divulged that he had been solicited by Francois for a potion believed to make humans invisible. The priest soon set up a meeting with Francois, telling him if he wanted the potion he should bring a dead goat, the stolen money and wear only his underwear. Francois arrived as he was told, and was arrested in his briefs with the cash and a goat.

California homeless law punishes homeless

WASHINGTON — Vague, overbroad, cruel and unusual punishment, a violation of the constitutional guarantee of equal protection of the laws and a violation of the constitutional right to travel. Those, according to the lawyers for several of the more litigious homeless persons in Santa Ana, Calif., were the defects of that city's ordinance that makes it "unlawful for any person to camp, occupy camp facilities or use camp paraphernalia" in any street, public parking lot or public area such as parks, or to "store personal property, including camp facilities and camp paraphernalia" in such areas.

Will

A lower court agreed with that indictment of the ordinance. But now California's Supreme Court has upheld the validity of the ordinance. This small skirmish in the nationwide struggle to maintain minimal public order illustrates how problematic that elemental task has become. It is problematic partly because of lawyers well-described as "gladiators for liberation."

The ordinance was supposedly vague because it did not give an exhaustive list of "paraphernalia" and "facilities." Overbroad? Supposedly the verb "store" could criminalize leaving a beach towel unattended at a public pool, or a wet umbrella in a library foyer. And perhaps picnickers in a park could be arrested as campers. And ...

California's Supreme Court, which must have the patience of Job, said, in effect: Good grief, give public authorities some credit for being able to construe particular terms in reasonable contexts. The purpose of the ordinance was to rid public places of persons sleeping, cooking, drinking, removing trash from bins, destroying vegetation, blocking passageways, urinating and defecating.

The alleged violation of equal protection was, according to lawyers for the people doing those things in public, in the fact that Santa Ana would not arrest non-homeless persons who did those things. Really.

As for the right to travel, neither the U.S. Supreme Court nor California's has ever held that a law is constitutionally flawed if it has an incidental impact on travel but has a purpose other than restriction of the right to travel. With few exceptions, the recognition of a constitutional right does not impose on state or local governments the obligation to provide people with the means of enjoying that right.

The idea that Santa Ana's ordinance constituted cruel and unusual punishment was that it punished a particular status, homelessness. However, California's Supreme Court held that the ordinance proscribed conduct, noting that punishment for the possession or use of narcotics, even by an addict, is not punishment for a status.

The arguments against Santa Ana's ordinance were made, in part, by "public interest" lawyers who specialize in championing this or that right to act against the interest the public has expressed in maintaining at least a minimal amount of order. Karl Zinsmeister, editor of The American Enterprise magazine, says the lawyers he calls "gladiators for liberation" have made it impossible to clean up Lafayette Park across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House, and have persuaded various courts to overturn sanctions against vagrancy, aggressive panhandling and anti-social behavior by residents of public housing. He writes:

"The liberators, however, have no regular experience of actual neighborhood life as it must be endured by lower-income city dwellers, day in and day out. Don't ask a liberator how her city's biggest public school has been affected by ACLU-induced bans on expulsion of troublemakers. Her kids don't go there. Don't inquire how inner-city grocery stores cope with rampant shoplifters. She never gets anywhere near them. Don't ask her how police officers gain control of a man rampaging down a sidewalk on PCP now that civil suits have taken away use of nightsticks and chokeholds. Scarcely a liberator has ever seen such a sight."

Abstract compassion is the business of lawyers who often are young, childless and affluent enough to live in neighborhoods with more Starbucks coffeehouses than drug dealers. These lawyers' professional lives are devoted, as Zinsmeister says, to "cramping cops, loosing the mentally ill, probationing or acquitting criminals, suing teachers who dare to discipline and landlords who try to evict, and generally defending moral relativism and the whole poverty culture's right to reproduce itself without stricture."

Oklahoma is heartland of violence, not innocence

Contrary to what you may have concluded from television coverage of Oklahoma City, violence has always been perfectly at home in the American "heartland."

Baker

There has been a lot of malarkey about the innocence of this "heartland," proving perhaps that a tyrannical two-coast mentality has affected the media brain. Or perhaps showing that our formal news media have been infected by tabloid journalism and talk radio with their exhilarating contempt for fact.

My own hunch is less cosmic in scope. I suspect a lot of the news people were simply seduced out of their wits by the word "heartland," which they have worked half to death since the bombing. I can understand television's doing that. TV news people nowadays have to be faster on the draw than a Hollywood Wyatt Earp.

A moment's hesitation in TV news and you are dead in the worldwide competition to spread the word faster than a speeding bullet. For a reporter without a millisecond to think a word like "heartland" is a godsend.

It instantly suggests goodness. Say it to the camera and the audience is bathed in warm imagery.

"Heartland." It makes you think of cocoa at bedtime and of quilting bees, and never mind that you don't like cocoa and don't know what a quilting bee is and that, given your druthers, you would probably pass up the quilting bee and stay home to watch "Homicide."

TV fellow says "heartland," you think of a calm, dreamy place where folks talk about things like their druthers. Where they actually call each other "folks" and quote folksy poets like Edgar A. Guest to remind you that it takes a heap o' livin' to make a house a home.

Maybe out there in that sweet-smelling, ever-loving heartland, the high school lad still buys his date a chocolate malt on Saturday night and settles for a good-night peck at the door.

Once you say "heartland" the idea of innocence follows with leaden-footed inevitability, and suddenly, in its desperate need to get the story out in a millisecond, television has trapped itself in romantic fiction.

With its repeated suggestions that we should be shocked because this dreadful bombing has violated an innocent "heartland," television adds to the onslaught of ignorance.

Newspapers I read and movies I saw when young always painted the American heartland as the home office of violence. John Dillinger was one of its more famous citizens. Pretty Boy Floyd was another. So were Bonnie and Clyde.

They were American gangsterdom's big news makers in the 1930s. You visualized them armed to the teeth speeding along primitive two-lane highways, pausing in some failing town long enough to knock over a bank and kill indiscriminately, then disappearing back into an endlessly flat, bleak landscape.

One of American literature's crime masterpieces, Truman Capote's "In Cold Blood," is a true story of a Kansas family murdered by two drifters. Its horror rises partly from Capote's power to evoke a menacing loneliness in the prairie landscape and partly from the same elements present in the bombing story: the indiscriminate murder of innocents, including children.

Is it worth noting that Oklahoma is next-door neighbor to Texas, which would surely take offense if its reputation for violence were besmirched by TV poets praising its innocence?

All this territory was once popular with the Comanche Indians, famous in film and bad history for treating the white man cruelly. Ian Frazier's indispensable book, "The Great Plains," says Comanches, in fact, killed relatively few whites, except for Texans — easily identifiable then as now, says Frazier — whom they seemed to despise with a special passion.

Oklahoma itself of course was born in sorrow, its so-called "Indian territory" being where the government herded Indians who obstructed the white man's will. When it was found that a lot of these Indians were sitting on underground lakes of oil, they had to be undone again, though with more subtle violence.

Something awful was done in Oklahoma City. No doubt of that. It's a violent place, that heartland. Always has been. Don't let the television dumb us down on that point.

Students deserve to run, jump, play

Midland

Did you realize that approximately two-thirds of the fifth-graders at Fannin Elementary School have had their recess stolen from them? Instead of playing these students sit on a concrete slab watching other students play. This is not a punishment, but a new on-site policy implemented because it is believed that recess is an earned privilege. Has not a student who completed his or her work and behaved in class earned the right to recess?

The students who partake in recess belong to a self-manager program. Students are allowed into this program by paying $25 (play money that is earned) and obtaining their teacher's signatures. The student is then given a self-manager badge for his or her exemplary behavior. The student must continue to have exemplary behavior and live with an almost constant threat of having the badge taken away. This is one reason the majority of students believe the badge is not worth pursuing.

The students need recess time to release energy, clear their minds and stretch their limbs. Recess promotes deep breathing that supplies more oxygen to the brain enabling the mind to think better. Recess enables the student to be more content to sit for the rest of the day and concentrate on their studies. It has been said that "the students have play time during their physical education (PE) period." Does the PE teacher feel like their class is play time? Fannin students only have PE every other day.

Some of the faculty speculates that the new recess rule was implemented because there are so many behavior problems in this fifth-grade class. Last year these students were at Bonham and they were not subjected to such drastic measures as sitting on a concrete slab after lunch. Is Fannin allowing a handful of students to cause so much chaos that the majority of students are denied a critical part of the elementary school curriculum? The federal government requires an employer to give employees breaks! Those students that are not sent to lunch detention or study hall need and deserve to run, jump and play!

We, not U.N. are to raise our children

On Feb. 10, Hillary Clinton announced that the United States had decided to sign the United National Convention on the Rights of the Child. On Feb. 16, it happened. Madeline Albright, our ambassador to the U.N., signed this anti-family treaty.

This treaty is absolutely deadly to the family — especially Christian families. According to information from Tim Le Hay of Family Life Seminars:

Article 13 gives children the freedom of expression and the right to "seek, receive and impart information and ideas of all kinds...either orally, in writing, or in print, in the form of art, or through any other media of the child's choice." That means you could not take away a pornographic magazine from your child or tell him which TV programs he can and cannot watch. This treaty does not allow parents to express their objections based on family standards of decency!

Article 14 guarantees children freedom of "thought, conscience and religion." Your role will be solely to "provide direction." If you require your child to attend church you could be found guilty of violating your child's rights!

Article 15 forbids you to place any restrictions on your child's freedom of association. You could not legally stop your child from joining a gang or hanging out with the wrong kind of kids!

Article 17 gives the mass media the responsibility for providing and giving your child the information and material for his "social, spiritual and moral well-being, physical and mental health." Yet, isn't it strange how silent the media are about Clinton signing this treaty! There's a total of 54 articles that will dictate moral values for families in America!

First, if Clinton is even allowed to appoint a U.S. representative to serve on this committee, given his and Hillary's penchant for appointing homosexuals, lesbians, and other moral deviates to power — do you really want a "Joycelyn Elders" or a "Henry Foster" imposing their values on your family?

Second, and even worse, this treaty will effectively eliminate our sovereignty and independence as a nation. This committee's responsibility will be to make sure that U.S. laws conform to the U.N. treaty, not the will of the American people!

God's Word tells us that we — not the United Nations — are responsible for raising and disciplining our children.

Unless you and I and every other concerned American speak up — our Senate is going to pass this treaty. And if passed by the Senate, the U.N. will be given the authority to force our country to "socialize" the upbringing of all American children.

After you've finished reading my letter, please call your senators. Every day counts. The Senate must be made aware of how the American people feel about this anti-American treaty.

If we in America don't help out, who will?

My name is Crystelle Miller and I am 12 years old. I believe that when I state my message I'm speaking for every child in Texas. It happened April 19, 1995. A date that will be remembered forever. This is the day when our country, the country where we have choices, where we have freedom, was torn to shreds. It was a day when the whole country was mourning; it was the day, for the very first time I had to sit down and think about my freedom and where I live. It was the day of the Oklahoma City bombing. When I got home that night and watched television I saw so many faces of the victims and their families and I thought to myself, so this must be what America is all about.

The first thought that came to my mind was who would have done such a terrible thing and felt good about it? So much anger was built up inside of me and when Dan Rather said that there was a day-care center that held 30-plus children in it, I cried.

I feel like I should be doing more than writing a letter but I know that writing this letter and letting the whole city know that now is the time to give up our greediness, to stop being selfish, and to pitch in because if we don't help who will? Last night my family and our neighbors went out to dinner together and my 6-year-old neighbor turned to me and said, "Guess what, today me and all my friends washed my dad's car and we got $1.50 and we're going to send it to Oklahoma to help people get medicine." I just looked at her and told her that she was the nicest kid I'd ever met in my life. Please don't take this letter as just another letter; take it is as a reminder of who you are and where you live, and remember that in this country we stick together and nothing can take that away from us.

Small Business Institute is program worth keeping

This letter is in reference to President Clinton's slashing of the Small Business Institute Program from the 1996 budget. In its frantic search to cut the budget, Congress may toss out a "diamond in the rough." Only voters' calls and letters to their senators and representatives will stop the action.

Some federal programs need to feel the ax because they don't add value. But other government programs pay dividends far greater than their costs. These programs deserve to be funded. The Small Business Institute (SBI) is one such program.

Both Clinton and Congress give lip service to programs that foster small business and programs that strengthen education. But in the recently released Clinton budget, SBI, a program that can claim victories for both small business and education, received the ax. The Small Business Institute is a program co-sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) and area universities. UTP-B's SBI has been serving the Ector and Midland County area for more than 18 years.

So why did SBI receive the death blow? SBI is a quiet success. Its $3 million budget represents rounding off dollars in the multi-trillion dollar federal budget. The amount of the SBI budget is so small that SBI doesn't even have its own separate line in the budget. When an agency looks to cut its budget, it is much easier to kill whole small programs rather than trim the fat out of larger programs.

The Small Business Institute program matches teams of senior business students as consultants to small businesses to help them solve problems or take advantage of opportunities. Most of these small businesses could not afford a professional consultant. Without the assistance of SBI, many of these businesses would go out of business. SBI nationally has been credited with saving jobs in communities just like ours. SBI clients grow at 30 times the national growth rate (12.8 percent versus 0.42 percent). SBI clients created more than 10,000 net new jobs in a single year. SBI clients generated $79 million in additional revenues because of changes made on the recommendation of SBI consulting teams. All this activity resulted in $60 million in additional sales, Medicare, Social Security, and federal income tax revenue.

Isn't such a gem worth keeping? Write or call senators and representatives and encourage them to examine the value of the Small Business Institute program before they mistakenly throw out a true gem.

People 'at bottom' shouldn't pay full price for welfare reform

By Don Hellinghausen

Don Hellinghausen, former president of the Midland Housing Finance Corporation, has been active in several housing organizations for years. He also is active with St. Vincent DePaul Society.

Most of us, I feel, are in favor of welfare reform. There are, obviously, some parts of it that are "broken," and need to be "fixed." It would appear that there will be a terrible price to pay for all of the financial savings, as outlined by the pending legislation in Washington, involving welfare reform and balancing the budget. According to the Children's Defense Fund, here is some of the impact on American families "at the bottom."

- 1,992,550 babies, preschoolers, and pregnant women would lose infant formula and other nutritional supplements.
- 4,258,750 children would lose food stamps.
- 7,564,550 children would lose free or subsidized school lunches.
- 6,604,450 children would lose Medicaid health coverage.
- 2,861,550 children would lose welfare benefits (AFDC).
- 209,050 or more children would lose the federal child-care subsidies that enable parents to work or get education and training.
- 231,100 blind and disabled children would lose SSI, Supplemental Security Income.
- 222,150 children would lose Head Start early childhood services.
- 629,250 children in child care and Head Start would lose Child and Adult Care Food Program meals.
- 1,920,900 children would lose remedial education through Title I.

What about Texas and here in Midland? Proportionally, it will be just as bad. The Midland Introspective Study showed 3,000 families with incomes under $10,000 are paying over 30 percent of income for housing, leaving little else for other necessities. Over 5,000 families live in unsafe or substandard housing. Poverty in Midland (and, bear in mind, all of this is before the cuts now being proposed) has exploded so that there are approximately 13,000 people below the poverty line. And folks, guess what? This is largely a problem of the "working poor;" only 1,555 families received public assistance as of 1990. Congress has clearly done some things that needed to be done, but in the hurry to meet pre-set timetables, the perception to many is that the upper class will continue to enjoy many benefits of congressional action, and in large degree, on the backs of the poor.

What are the parents going to do? These programs just help the poor to survive, that is all. Of course, there are abuses of the system, but these can be corrected with a surgical knife, and not a machete.

There is much to be done. We, as a nation, need to ask why there are almost 40 million people in the United States living in poverty, 40 percent of which are children? Why are our legislators seeming to place party above country? Why do politicians (whatever happened to statesmen?) continue to "bash" each other in violent ways? Why can't they travel "the high road" and seek only the common good?

It doesn't take a sociologist to see the connection between the lack of education—lack of jobs — poverty — living in ghettos or shacks — boredom — drugs — crime — guns in school — violent behavior. It would appear that we are building more prisons; the wealthy are building taller fences and adding more security systems; and the poor are building resentment.

We all need to play a part in turning things around — starting with the families striving to get into the mainstream; yes, government too, but also the 157 churches in Midland, agencies, and all of us who carry on about the problems. We still live in the greatest nation in the world, but there is one giant challenge staring us in the face. I remember back in the 60's a reporter asked a black lady (during a "sit-in") "What is it you folks want, anyway?" She said only this, "We just want America to be what it says it is."

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish "open" letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702, or you may fax to 682-3793.

Odessan has freedom to turn his radio off

In response to Roy Elsner, of Odessa, comments in the Sunday, April 30, "Letters" regarding talk show hosts — what happened to Elsner's freedom to turn the switch on his television or radio from the "on" position to "off?"

Louise Logsdon
Midland

Radio brings America's viewpoints together

I wish to take exception to comments made by Roy Elsner of Odessa regarding that "talk radio" is to blame for the tragedy in Oklahoma City.

Given the current media climate — sleazy daytime TV talk shows, elements of liberal bias in the national media, and declining newspaper competition in the nation's major cities — now comes talk radio on a medium experts said should have died 10 years ago. In many cities the talk format revived the dying AM band in the midst of a massive developing informational highway. It's Rush, North, and others that have created an "electronic soapbox." Tens of millions of conservatives and liberals who listen to talk radio have nothing to do with hate or division. This open forum of radio seems to be a tool for bringing Americans, especially those with differing viewpoints, together.

Many of us are angry about a myriad of issues from taxes, crime, government wastes, and gun control. The open forum of talk radio provides needed elements in society — communication, discussion, disagreement, dissent. Where else in the electronic media spectrum are issues more openly discussed?

Elsner should show me where these talk show hosts bear responsibility for inciting people to dangerous acts. And be specific.

I'm reminded of Denver talk show host Alan Berg who was gunned down for his views. A fitting legacy in his analogy of talk radio was that it was "the last neighborhood in town."

I suggest you try listening to the vibrant — not violent — "radio neighborhood."

Talk radio hosts, callers have right to speak

I was greatly amused by Roy Elsner's letter concerning the hate and venom of talk radio. It could have been reduced to one simple thought — "If you don't buy into the ultra-liberal theology, your views are un-American."

I'm no big fan of Limbaugh, or anyone else who has an ego so big he has to buy it its own airline ticket. But he speaks a lot of truth. And that aside, he has a right to speak.

I'm also not a supporter of G. Gordon — obviously a second-rate burglar. And I do believe his hair is growing on the inside of his head. Some of what he says is valid, and he has the right.

As for Ollie, he really tells a lot of truth about what's what in America. Now if he'd just tell some truth about that airport in Mena, Ark. And incidentally, right or wrong, Ollie's perjury conviction was thrown out.

But, I assume ole Rush, G.G. and Ollie can defend themselves. What I want to defend is their right — and the right of their callers — to speak out. That's the American Way. We air our differences. We argue our points of view. And our only intolerance is intolerance.

I realize there are those who use fiery rhetoric and radical proposals to make their point: Bill Clinton, Al Gore, Teddy Kennedy, and a large complement of the far right as well. And I have disagreements with both viewpoints. But along with their right to believe and say so is my right to disagree and to say so. And for anyone to wave the flag and accuse fellow countrymen of creating a political climate that spawned one of the most heinous crimes in world history, is in itself divisive, mean spirited and, of course, incorrect.

The responsibility for the bombing must be placed squarely where it belongs: Upon the criminals who perpetrated the crime.

House votes for focus on abstinence in sex education classes

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House voted overwhelmingly Saturday to require school districts that teach sex education to focus on abstinence and to bar districts from distributing condoms.

"We have to get control of the sexual activity of our kids, or we are going to lose a generation to sexually transmitted disease," said Rep. Warren Chisum, D-Pampa. "Abstinence is a standard that will work."

His sex education proposal was added as an amendment to an education overhaul bill with a vote of 110-30.

The House, in its third day of debate on the bill, also rejected a pilot program for so-called vouchers. The program would allow disadvantaged students to get tax money to attend private schools that agree to abide by some state regulations.

The voucher proposal, whose backers include Gov. George W. Bush, failed despite an emotional plea from Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, on behalf of children he said are "locked in" to public schools in poor and dangerous areas.

"I live in the middle of the black community in Houston. ... I see those kids having to negotiate death and destruction and drugs every day to get to school," he said. "They've got no way out."

But voucher opponents said the education overhaul bill, which is aimed at reducing state control of public schools, would already provide more education options for parents and students.

And Rep. Sylvester Turner, D-Houston, said low-income children shouldn't be used in an educational experiment.

"We are using poor children to open the door for voucher programs ... If you want it, use your own kids," he said. Among other arguments, opponents also said the measure could violate the constitutional separation of church and state.

The Senate has backed a pilot voucher program in its version of education reform. Differences between the Senate bill and the one ultimately passed by the House are expected to be negotiated in a conference committee.

The sex education proposal was among several items added in the House that relate to values.

Late Friday night, lawmakers approved an amendment aimed at ensuring students the right to pray aloud in groups at school, as long as they don't disrupt activities. They also voted to require school districts to provide a period of "quiet reflection."

On Saturday, House members also approved a provision saying the State Board of Education, as allowed by school districts, should allow instruction in basic values in social studies.

Those values include a work ethic and respect for authority, according to the amendment by Rep. John Longoria, D-San Antonio.

Chisum's amendment drew spirited discussion Saturday, with opponents saying that restricting school districts' control over sex education flies in the face of efforts to give local communities more flexibility.

"This is a local decision that should be made locally," said Rep. Paul Sadler, D-Henderson, head of the House Public Education Committee and sponsor of the bill.

Several legislators said that despite efforts to promote abstinence, there are still youths who will have sex and must be given information to protect themselves.

Otherwise, said Rep. Dawnna Dukes, D-Austin, "We have children who will be 6 feet under."

Chisum's amendment would affect instruction related to human sexuality, sexually transmitted diseases and acquired immune deficiency syndrome. It said the local school district would select such instructional material with input from a health education advisory committee.

The local committee is meant to ensure local values and health issues are reflected in the instruction.

Among other requirements, the amendment said if a school district chooses to teach sex education, it must devote more attention to abstinence from sexual activity than to any other behavior.

It said the material must emphasize that abstinence is the only sure way to prevent pregnancy, sexually transmitted disease and "the emotional trauma associated with adolescent sexual activity."

Desperation hits both sides of Rio Grande during drought

By Josh Lemieux
Associated Press

PHARR — Ruben Quintanilla focuses his binoculars on pumps on the opposite edge of the Rio Grande, watching powerlessly as they suck a steady torrent into a Mexican irrigation canal.

He says Mexican farmers, in broad daylight, are taking water that belongs to Texas.

"They are just sticking in 100 of them (pumps) right and left," said Quintanilla, a Texas deputy for the Rio Grande watermaster. "They don't care. They are desperate right now."

If a drought in northern Mexico continues, the seeds of desperation among Mexican farmers likely will blow into Texas ranch country and the rich row crops of the Rio Grande Valley.

Illegal pumping from the Rio Grande is only part of a looming international water crisis. Reservoirs that feed the border river's muddy flow are dangerously low, potentially drying up the key source of water in this semi-arid delta.

Mexican border cities soon could ask to borrow Texas reserves to survive the summer — a prospect that bristles many Texans, including Gov. George W. Bush.

"If Mexico continues to be using water, they will be using our water," said Texas' Rio Grande watermaster, John Hinojosa IV. "Obviously, we will have overnight less than what we think we have."

Mexico continued heavy irrigation despite a drought that began nearly two years ago in Chihuahua, the northern state whose watershed supplies most of the water in Amistad Reservoir and Falcon Lake, Hinojosa said.

Mexico continued heavy irrigation despite a drought that began nearly two years ago in Chihuahua, the northern state whose watershed supplies most of the water in Amistad Reservoir and Falcon Lake, Hinojosa said.

Mexico has used all but 6.4 percent of its reserves in those two crucial reservoirs created by international dams of the Rio Grande. Texas, which shares the reservoirs with Mexico under a 1944 treaty, is expected to drain down to half of its reserves by July.

The forecast is bleak.

Unless major rains hit upstream between bone-dry Chihuahua and West Texas, Mexico could exhaust its reserves this month.

Hinojosa projects that most Texas farmers will have enough water to bring crops to harvest this summer, but they could wind up with nothing for irrigation next year. If Mexico continues to irrigate, his no-rain scenario has Texans running out even sooner.

Texans who use up their Rio Grande water rights must pay roughly 20 times higher prices to private water contractors or rely on iffy dry-land farming.

Jack Nelson of the Rio Grande Valley Sugar Growers said the 136 members of his co-op would lose 10 percent of their crop — or about $6 million in sales — for every missed 14-day irrigation cycle.

Cotton, sugar, sorghum, citrus, vegetables and other crops generate more than $750 million in annual sales in the four counties of deep South Texas alone. Bush said losses from rationing of Texas water rights could reach $1.5 billion.

The population that depends on the Rio Grande for water has nearly doubled in the past 20 years, to an estimated 2 million. Some demographers say it could double again in the next 20 years.

"It's inevitable that the problems will only get worse as we continue to grow," Hinojosa said.

The last drought, in 1986, hit after the heavy irrigation season. This year's crisis is hitting as farmers are headed into the driest and hottest summer months, with temperatures routinely in the 100s. Mexican reservoirs along the Rio Conchos and Rio San Juan were at safe levels in 1986. This time they're nearly depleted.

"Everybody really needs to start thinking about water conservation even if they have an adequate supply of (water) rights," Hinojosa said. "We're all in this together."

Two weeks ago, President Ernesto Zedillo declared emergency measures in the states of Chihuahua, Durango, Nuevo Leon and Tamaulipas. Mexican water officials announced reductions on irrigation to save remaining supplies for border cities.

"All of the sudden it's a full-blown crisis. They've known for a year and a half," complained Hinojosa, who controls Texas' allotment of water. "Only now that they have basically almost exhausted their water supply in the international reservoirs are they addressing this problem."

Krone luckless

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Serena's Song wasn't the only female to run into trouble at the Kentucky Derby. Jockey Julie Krone, riding trainer Nick Zito's Suave Prospect, was never a factor in Saturday's race and finished 11th.

"He broke beautifully," Krone said. "I was behind the speed but he kind of shied away going into the turn."

After the first quarter, Zito's horse was ninth and then drifted back to 11th and 14th. Krone thought she was still in the chase, though.

"Down the backside he was so perfect, but I angled him outside a little bit," she said. "He's a small horse and he gets a little intimidated. When I angled him out, he picked up some horses and when we got right around the turn, I pointed him completely outside and he didn't fire. I didn't have enough left to make up ground."

Suave Prospect made it to eighth at the mile but then settled back. Zito, who won the 1991 Derby with Strike the Gold and finished first again last year with Go for Gin, thought Suave Prospect's problems started early.

"We broke slow, got squeezed on the first turn," he said. "We wish we could have gotten clear early."

Zito said his horse never could get out of the traffic. "He just didn't have anything turning for home. I don't have any excuses. I just came up empty. The Preakness is definitely out."

Spurs rough up Lakers

■ San Antonio's David Robinson took advantage of the rest he and his teammates got after a first-round sweep and opened the second round with a 110-94 win over fatigued Los Angeles.

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson and the San Antonio Spurs knew the Los Angeles Lakers would be tired. They also knew the Lakers wouldn't let that stop them from playing hard.

The Lakers, who upset Seattle Thursday night to make it to the Western Conference semifinals, stayed close until late in the game Saturday before the Spurs pulled out to a 110-94 victory to take a 1-0 lead in the best-of-7 series.

"Since Los Angeles played two days ago against Seattle, I thought they would be more fatigued in the second half," said Robinson, who led the Spurs with 33 points and 11 rebounds. "But the Lakers were able to go up and down the floor pretty well."

The Lakers trailed 58-48 at the half and 80-73 after three quarters, but were within 10 points much of the final period. Two free throws with 2:05 left by Avery Johnson, who had 19 points and 12 assists, put San Antonio ahead 102-90 and the game was out of reach for Los Angeles.

"I was as proud of our players' efforts as I was in Seattle when we won," Lakers coach Del Harris said. "I was encouraged by the whole Laker effort. We have nothing to be discouraged about."

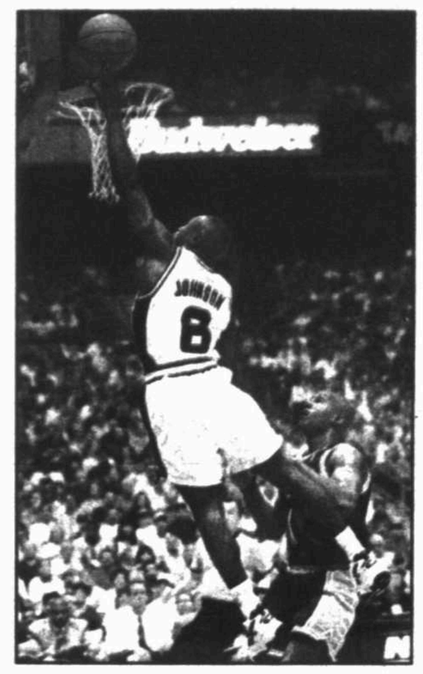

Obviously, Harris said, his team wasn't at its best because of the short turnaround, but said the Lakers weren't using fatigue as an excuse.

The series continues Monday in San Antonio.

Saturday's game was roughly played and was followed by some player apologies.

Elden Campbell was called for a flagrant foul with 4:43 remaining for tangling with Robinson under the Spurs' basket, sending Robinson to the

Angels end homestand with 2-1 loss

■ Christensen Stadium kind to visitors as Missions continue success under Midland skies.

By Bill Petitt
Sports Writer

MIDLAND — San Antonio designated hitter James Martin found out what Missions' starting pitcher David Pyc knew before Friday's game.

Christensen Stadium can be very, very, good to you.

In the ninth inning, Missions second baseman Eddie Rios walked with one out and Martin took a 0-2 pitch from Midland closer Anthony Chavez over the left field fence to give San Antonio a 2-1 win to close the series.

San Antonio, which won four of five games against Midland, increased its lead to 3 1/2 games over El Paso while Midland dropped to 13-17 and seven games behind the Missions.

"He came in with a high fastball away and that's to my power and it happened," said Martin who has hit his only two home runs this season in Midland.

Pyc went eight innings, allowing five hits and two walks on 99 pitches for the win, and is now 3-2 on the year. Reliever Matt Herges picked up his fifth save of the season with a perfect ninth inning.

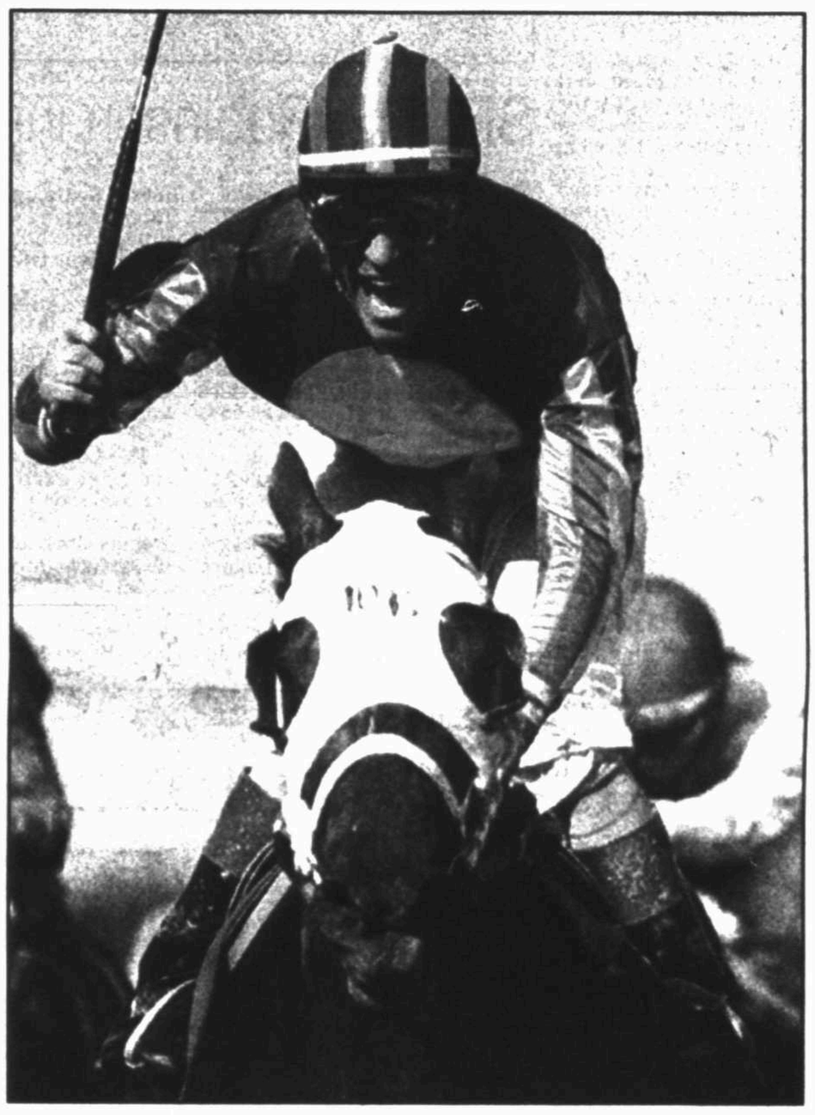

"That was by far my best performance of the year here. There is something about this park," said Pyc, who has three of his seven career Double A victories at Christensen Stadium. "The wind blows nice for me here. It blows to left field and my sinker ball away to right handers makes it tough on their hitters."

Midland spoiled a strong pitching performance from Jeff Schmidt who threw six innings before being relieved by Bryan Harris, former major league reliever Mike Schooler and Chavez.

"It is a tough one to lose," said Midland manager Mario Mendoza. "Offensively, we haven't been hitting the ball lately.

Thunder strikes Serena's Song

Jockey Gary Stevens rides Thunder Gulch to victory in the 121st running of the Kentucky Derby Saturday at Churchill Downs. Thunder Gulch, one of trainer D. Wayne Lukas' entries, started from the auxiliary gate in the 19-horse field and slipped past Serena's Song, which led from the wire, in the final 3/4-mile of the 1 1/4 race.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Trainer D. Wayne Lukas sent sensational filly Serena's Song and champion colt Timber Country after the Kentucky Derby roses.

It was his third-stringer, however, a colt named Thunder Gulch, who wore the roses in the winner's circle Saturday at Churchill Downs.

Thunder Gulch, who spent the week overshadowed by Serena's Song and Timber Country, took charge turning for home and won the 121st Derby by 2 1/4 lengths over Tejano Run.

Serena's Song, who heard the roaring cheers of a crowd of 144,110 as she led for about a mile, faded to finish 16th in the field of 19. The crowd was the second largest in Derby history.

Timber Country came on to finish third, a head behind Tejano Run and three-quarters of a length in front of Jumron.

"He was standing between a ballerina and the 2-year-old champion," Lukas said of Thunder Gulch, who was stabled between Serena's Song and Timber Country in Lukas' barn, "and now he's earned the right to hold his head high."

Thunder Gulch became Lukas' second Derby winner, but it was his first Derby victory with a colt.

While Serena's Song failed to become the fourth filly to win the Derby and the first since Winning Colors won it for Lukas in 1988, Julie Krone failed to become the first woman to ride a Derby winner and Nick Zito failed to win his third Derby in five years.

Suave Prospect, who finished 11th, was ridden by Krone and trained by

Midland Christian heads to state tourney with 25-0 win

By Stewart Doreen

The Midland Christian softball team took its lumps against much larger public schools for most of the season. Saturday, it was the Lady Mustangs turn do dish it out.

The Lady Mustangs defeated Canyon Creek Christian of Dallas 25-0 for the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools Region I-A Championship at Ulmer Park.

"We played at the level we wanted to play," said Byron Myers, Midland Christian softball coach. "We have the distinct advantage of who we play. The scrimmages against the combination Midland High and (West Texas) Heat teams made a difference. We won't see that kind of talent in state, not as a team."

The Lady Mustangs, 9-8, earned a trip to the TAPPS state tournament that will be held in Temple next weekend. Midland

International fans flock to Memorial

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

No doubt about it. Saturday night's game between the Mexico and United States under-17 national teams was not your typical Midland sporting event — or soccer game.

The contest at Memorial Stadium, won by Mexico 1-0, had about the same attendance — an estimated 5,500 — as a district football game. Fans were encouraged to do "la ola" (the wave) by a bilingual public address announcer. Mexican supporters waved their country's flags, beat a drum, and one painted the upper half of his body the red, white and green of the Mexican flag. Reporters used an interpreter to interview the Mexican coach after the game.

The teams put on a skilled exhibition as part of the Cinco de Mayo Futbol Festival tournament, which finishes today. But it could have been better.

"I don't mean this in a negative way towards the people of Midland, who have been great, but soccer is not made to be played on a postage stamp," U.S. coach Glenn Myernick said of Memorial's football field. "It requires size and time ... but we're in football country."

Mexican head man Gustavo Vargas answered questions about the field the way a Texas high school football would.

"Both teams had to play on the same field," Vargas said. "I understand this is an American football field but it's not a disadvantage for either team."

It sure didn't hurt the intensity on either side. Mexico picked up 20 fouls and seven yellow cards were issued by the referee. One player from each squad was disqualified for picking up two yellows.

The U.S. struggled against the wind and a quick-to-cut-off the attack Mexican defense. They managed only two shots on goal in the first half compared to Mexico's six.

The Mexican team, which plays the Canadian under-17 national team today at 10 a.m. at Hogan Park field number three, got the game's only score less than three minutes into the second half. But both teams had few bright moments on offense.

"As skillful a team as they are," Myernick said of Mexico, "they were not creating either."

The U.S. did come back in the second half, using the wind to take five shots on goal and get several chances to score.

"We put them under pressure the whole second half but we couldn't make a break," Myernick said.

The best U.S. change came eight minutes into the second half when Joe! Reddington's throw-in was booted off the cross bar by Paul Martinez.

Mexico's Jesus Mendoza was tossed from the game for two yellows but not before scoring his team's goals on a unassisted play. The Mexican players took a pass in the penalty area after a free kick, turned, beat a couple of U.S. defenders and put the ball in the lower right corner of the goal.

"It was a mistake by our player to give them the free kick and then we allowed it to bounce in the box, which we can't do," Myernick said.

An indication of how the U.S. offense did in the second half was in its four corner kicks and several throw-ins from close range.

"There's very few things that come out of a goal

DERBY: Thunder Gulch comes from auxiliary gate for victory

(From 1C)

Zito, who won the 1991 Derby with Strike the Gold and last year with Go for Gin.

Thunder Gulch, ridden by Gary Stevens, ran as a seperate betting interest and paid $51, $24.20 and $12.20 after covering 1 1/4 miles under 126 pounds on a fast track in 2:01 1-5. Tejano Run, racing for the first time since he had work done on his front feet, returned $10.20 and $6.80.

Timber Country, coupled in the betting with Serena's Song because of common ownership, was $3.80 to show.

Thunder Gulch broke from the 16th post position but Stevens quickly forgot about what is usually considered a bad post.

"I was ecstatic 50 yards out of the gate," Stevens said. "I had a smooth trip to the rail. Then around the turn and down the backstretch he stayed within himself."

Thunder Gulch moved into third place behind Serena's Song and Talking Man just past the half-mile pole.

"Once he got into the turn," Stevens said, "he just absolutely accelerated and the race was over."

When the field turned for home, Thunder Gulch was outside Serena's Song and Talkin Man. But as the filly and the Canadian-bred faded, Thunder Gulch thundered home.

"He's a blue-collar worker," said Lukas. "He just goes out and does it."

Thunder Gulch has now done it five times in 10 career starts. But because he finished fourth in the Blue Grass Stakes in his previous start, his stock plummeted with horsemen and wise guys during Derby week.

"He had the dream trip," Lukas said. "He was laying outside — an absolute perfect position. When you get that scenario with a legitimate finisher, good things happen."

Thunder Gulch, who went off at a little more than 24-1, is owned by Michael Taber, a native of England who lives in Monaco and who is a major stockholder in a string of betting shops in the United Kingdom. It was not known what odds you could get at one of Taber's betting parlors on Thunder Gulch.

Taber bought Thunder Gulch for an undiclosed price after the colt's fourth race last Nov. 11. Since joining Taber and Lukas, the colt has won four of six starts and finished second once. First money of $707,400 boosted Thunder Gulch's career earnings to $1,423,406.

"This is such a difficult race to win, I felt we needed three," Lukas said of his multiple starters.

Lukas had tried three-horse entries twice before, only to fail.

Serena's Song, ridden by Corey Nakjatani, led through the first mile, but then faded in the stretch. She was fourth with an eighth of a mile to go, but ended up 16th, third-worst for any filly in Derby history. She was the 36th to start.

Serena's Song, who had won her five previous stakes, had led all the way in beating seven colts in the Jim Beam Stakes on April 1 at Turfway Park. But while she had her way in that race, the guys wouldn't give her a break in the Derby.

"She never had a chance to get a breather," Nakatani said. "She really got tired."

Of his decision to enter the filly, which wasn't made until eight days ago, Lukas said, "We dared to risk greatness and we have no regrets. We're proud of her and the whole outfit."

While Lukas indicated Thunder Gulch would go to the Preakness, the second race of the Triple Crown, on May 20 at Pimlico, but wasn't sure about Serena's Song and Timber Country.

'I was ecstatic 50 yards out of the gate...Once he got into the turn he just absolutely accelarated and the race was over.'
— Gary Stevens, Thunder Gulch's jockey.

Timber Country, ridden by Pat Day, was 12th with a half-mile to go and still 11th with a quarter-mile left. Then he made a big move to get third. But that had to be disappointing to his owners, because the colt has failed to win in four races since clinching the 2-year-old championship in the Breeders' Cup Juvenile last Nov. 5 at Churchill Downs.

Timber Country finished a little more than 2 1/4 lengths behind his winning stablemate and now has lost his four starts this year by a little more than 6 3/4 length.

Completing the order of finish after Jumron were Meche, Eltish, Knockadoon, Afternoon Deelites, Citadeed, In Character, Suave Prospect, Talkin Man, Dazzling Falls, Ski Captain, Jambalaya Jazz, Serena's Song, Pyramid Peak, Lake George and Wild Syn.

Eltish and Citadeeed, both based in England, didn't arrive in Churchill Downs until Monday. Ski Captain arrived from Japan on Wednesday.

It was the U.S. debuts for Citadeed and Ski Captain, but Eltish had finished second in the Breeders' Cup Juvenile last November. All three were bred in Kentucky.

The latest to arrive was Tejano Run, who made the 80-mile van trip from Keeneland in Lexington, Ky., on Saturday morning, arriving at the Downs at 8 a.m.

"This is going to be a good handicap horse," trainer Ken McPeek said of Tejano Run, who got a big boost from a blacksmith following his third-place finish in the Blue Grass. It seems the colt's front feet were hitting and cutting his back legs when he raced, so the angles of his feet were changed by shortening the toe and lowering the heel.

The procedure almost paid off in a Derby victory.

"Jerry (Bailey, the jockey), said he hung a little at the eighth pole," McPeek said.

But at that point, it didn't look like anybody could catch Wayne Lukas' blue collar dandy.

Mac attack versus Shaq attack

Get ready for a battle of big sponsors as Michael Jordan and Shaquille O'Neal square off in the NBA Playoffs

By Wendy E. Lane
AP Basketball Writer

■ TV: Playoff tripleheader, begins at 11:30 a.m. on NBC.

ORLANDO, Fla. — Get ready for Nike vs. Reebok, Gatorade vs. Pepsi, McDonald's vs. Diesel.

Sure, Michael Jordan and Shaquille O'Neal in the Eastern Conference semifinals is the dream matchup of the marketing whizzes at the NBA. But the Chicago-Orlando series beginning today is still the most compelling playoff matchup since Jordan tock on Magic Johnson and the Los Angeles Lakers in the 1991 Finals and won the first of three straight titles.

"A lot of people have been looking for this all year," Magic guard Dennis Scott said.

Well, not exactly all year, but definitely since Jordan came back to the NBA for the last 17 games of the regular season and re-energized the Eastern Conference. His post-season already made the Bulls' opening series with Charlotte the most-watched first-round playoff series in NBA history.

And with him and O'Neal squaring off, playoffs that already have drawn the highest ratings since 1983 will attract even more attention.

Conveniently, Sunday also will mark the debut of Jordan's first Nike ad since he shucked minor-league baseball and came out of retirement. In it, he pokes fun at his short-lived baseball career, calling himself "a weak-hitting Double-A outfielder with a below-average arm."

Jordan and O'Neal were listed by Forbes magazine last year as the two highest-paid athletes, with Jordan getting an estimated $30 million from endorsements and O'Neal an estimated $12.5 million.

"He gets publicity, I get publicity," said O'Neal, sitting in the vistors' locker room at Boston Garden and wearing futuristic dark glasses, presumably to cut the glare from the television cameras surrounding him.

"There's enough marketing to go around for everyone."

But this series is first and foremost about basketball, and Jordan and O'Neal wouldn't be pulling in millions if they didn't possess skills capable of dominating a game, even a series.

Jordan, the leading scorer in NBA playoff history, powered the Bulls past the Charlotte Hornets three games to one in the first round and had 48 points in a Game 1 overtime victory. His presence on the court will command most of the Magic's attention, although coach Brian Hill wouldn't reveal much about Orlando's plans to stop No. 45.

"Michael Jordan is going to have an impact on every game," Hill said, "but you have to play him as tough and aggressively as you can."

O'Neal doesn't think there's much anyone can do against Jordan anyway.

"You can't neutralize Michael Jordan," he said. "If he's having a great game, he's having a great game."

O'Neal hasn't yet had a really great game in the playoffs. He's averaging 22.5 points, somewhat below the 29.3 average that earned him his first regular-season scoring title.

But he's getting plenty of help. Orlando's four other starters are all averaging at least 13 points.

"We know we have to double-team Shaq, and they have great outside shooters," Bulls guard Steve Kerr said. "They pass the ball into him and he passes off. That's why they have been successful. Almost every possession, they're going to dump it into him and make you rotate, and you have to get to their shooters before they get good looks."

The Magic got a big confidence boost from their 3-1 series win over the Boston Celtics, especially Friday night's 95-92 victory in the last basketball game played at Boston Garden. The Bulls aren't as sure of themselves, having struggled offensively in Game 4.

If Michael vs. Shaq is the main story line of the series, the subplot is Magic forward Horace Grant, who played with Jordan and Pippen on the Bulls' championship teams of 1991, 1992 and 1993. A free agent after last season, he signed with the Magic for below market value, desiring to play with a team he thought could contend for a title.

"Of course, there will always be some personal emotions," said Grant, who left Chicago embittered by his dealings with general manager Jerry Krause.

"We just have to try our best to contain him (Jordan) and keep the ball out of his hands, and not let Scottie get off, either."

Orlando finished the regular season with the best record in the Eastern Conference, winning 57 games. But the tide of Michaelmania that washed over the league has left them playing the role of underdogs. Grant, for one, can't understand that logic.

"So everybody thinks Chicago's favored, huh?" he said. "I guess it's just because of the experience they have — Michael, Scottie, and Toni's coming into his own. They have the three-headed monster at center, and they have Phil Jackson and his philosophy."

What Grant understands well is that Jordan's return has placed a burden on the Bulls that wasn't there when they were a .500 team.

"They're feeling the pressure, believe me," he said. "I was there for seven years."

SPURS: Robinson injury not serious as Admiral scores 33

floor on his back, where he lay for several seconds holding his elbow. He didn't leave the game, however.

"David is fine. I'm glad it was his left elbow and not a wrist or hand that was injured," Spurs coach Bob Hill said. "I don't think Elden meant it. He apologized to David afterwards."

Campbell said Robinson already had lost his balance before the contact, which he said wasn't intentional.

"They're not a bruising team. Neither are we," the Lakers' Cedric Ceballos added. "No one was trying to hurt anyone."

Less than a minute earlier, Dennis Rodman, who had 12 rebounds for the Spurs, received a technical for wrapping his arms tightly around the Lakers' Vlade Divac when Divac tried to argue with an official.

"I was a little frustrated and I tried to run to the referee and Dennis tried to help and got into a bad situation. I apologized because he was just trying to stop me, although it's not his job," Divac said.

The Lakers' George Lynch left the game early in the third quarter and didn't return after going down when struck in the chin by Robinson's hand during a scramble underneath the basket. Lakers officials said Lynch suffered a mild concussion.

Campbell had a playoff career-high 29 points and 10 rebounds, Divac had 25 points and 11 rebounds and Nick Van Exel had 16 points and 12 assists for the Lakers.

"We had a good effort but when you don't get the calls and you don't hit the big shots, you're going to be in trouble," said Van Exel, who scored a playoff career-high 34 points in the Lakers' series-clinching victory over Seattle.

The Spurs' bench outscored the Lakers' reserves 32-11, and the Spurs shot 54 percent from the field to the Lakers' 40. Los Angeles had a 47-40 rebounding advantage.

"We needed to play better defensively," Hill said. "LA is not a good rebounding team. ... We have to make some adjustments for Monday."

Hill said the Spurs tried to be more aggressive on defense after halftime.

The teams were tied 30-30 at the end of the first quarter thanks to an 11-4 run by the Spurs to end the period. The Spurs went ahead for good 41-40 with 7:57 remaining in the second period on a 3-pointer by Doc Rivers, outscoring Los Angeles 17-8 the rest of the quarter.

The victory snapped San Antonio's seven-game losing streak to the Lakers in playoff games. The teams last met in the playoffs in 1988 when Los Angeles knocked out San Antonio in the first round.

The Spurs have never won a seven-game series during Robinson's six seasons.

ANGELS: Missions rob Midland in ninth

(From 1C)

Tonight we score just one run. Our offense is something that is going to have to improve out on the road."

Mendoza played his pitching cards to perfection. He pulled Schmidt in the seventh inning after walking Martin to lead off the inning. Left hander Bryan Harris came in to get left-handed hitting Oreste Marrero to fly out to right field.

Following a walk by Harris, Schooler came in to end the inning with a strikeout of the Texas League's leading home run hitter, Henry Blanco.

Mendoza put Chaves in in the ninth, but he gave up the decisive hit.

Former University of Texas standout Tim Harkrider turned in a stellar defensive effort with 10 assists and three put outs for Midland. "I had a lot of balls coming my way and that keeps you focused out there," said the second year shortstop from Carthage.

Midland's only run of the game came in the fourth when George Arias hit a single to extended his hitting streak to 15 games. Two outs later, Michael Wolff hit a double down the right field line, scoring Arias from first for the 1-0 lead.

ANGEL NOTES: After taking today off, Midland will begin a 10-game road trip to Tulsa and Arkansas ... the Angels will return home May 19.

De La Hoya knocks out opponent and critics to win lightweight titles

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Maybe now they'll start taking Oscar De La Hoya for real.

The Olympic Golden Boy cemented his claim as boxing's fastest rising star in smashing fashion Saturday night by stopping Rafael Ruelas in the second round of their scheduled 12-round fight.

The win against a rugged champion who had only lost once in 44 previous fights not only gave De La Hoya two lightweight titles, it may have answered those who questioned his star potential.

"For all the critics out there who doubted me, this one's for you," the gleeful De La Hoya said.

De La Hoya knocked Ruelas down twice in the second round, then stopped him with a barrage of punches in a shockingly sudden end to a battle of two lightweight champions.

A devastating left hook that put Ruelas on the canvas started the onslaught, which ended with referee Richard Steele wrapping his arms around Ruelas to protect him from further punches at 1:43 of the second round.

The pro-Ruelas crowd of some 13,000 in an outdoor arena at Caesars Palace watched stunned as De La Hoya leaped in the air in glee after winning his biggest fight since capturing an Olympic gold medal in 1992.

"I had him," De La Hoya said. "It was a matter of time. Ruelas is a very strong willpowered fighter. If I didn't KO him early, he was going to beat me."

Ruelas, who lost his IBF lightweight title, was trying to press the fight against De La Hoya early in the second round when the WBO champion crashed a left hook to the side of his face that sent him to the canvas.

Ruelas, a 2-1 underdog, was up on one knee at the count of five and got to his feet to continue, but it wasn't long before he was down again, this time from a left hand followed by a right.

He got up once more, but De La Hoya was all over him when Steele moved in to stop the fight.

"I knew that he was strong and fast," Ruelas said. "I didn't think that it should have been stopped, but what can you do?"

MUSTANGS: MC moves to state tourney

(From 1C)

Christian will open play against the District 2 champs St. Michael's of Dallas 11 a.m. on Saturday, May 13.

"This is what we've been waiting for," said second baseman Kelly Johnson. "Our goal from the beginning has been to make this trip and we're looking forward to it. We're kind of intimidated by Houston (St. Paul, the defending state champ), but we'll still be good because of the heads we have right now."

The District I-1A champs started out like gang busters sending 20 batters to the plate in the 14-run first inning. The Lady Mustangs took advantage of eight walks, seven hits and Canyon Creek mistakes to begin the blowout that saw all nine Midland Christian players score at least once and saw five cross the plate more than once each. It was a 30-minute span that showed true dominance by Midland Christian over its private school foes.

"We're hitting the ball well," Myers said. "That speed is no problem for us. The girls have the confidence, knowing they are going to hit that speed."

That kind of run support was more than enough of a cushion for Midland Christian pitcher April Sheppard. Sheppard, who has gone up against the likes of Andrews, Big Spring and Snyder, gave the girls from Dallas a few lessons by striking out 11 batters in four innings work. Sheppard also walked two and gave up two hits, but was never in danger of giving up a run. It was a stand-out performance from the sophomore.

"I like being dominating," said Sheppard, whose 11 K's tied her own school record. "We've been playing harder teams and I didn't dominate. They got us ready for these games. Each one of us has to remember what we're out here for and play as a team."

Lady Mustang Amy Rydell closed the door on Canyon Creek, the runner-up in District 2-1A. She struck out two in the final inning to seal the win.

But it was the hitting not pitching that stood out on this day. Midland Christian's run production continued throughout the game as they scored in every inning they came to the plate. The last three innings would see Midland Christian score 11 more runs.

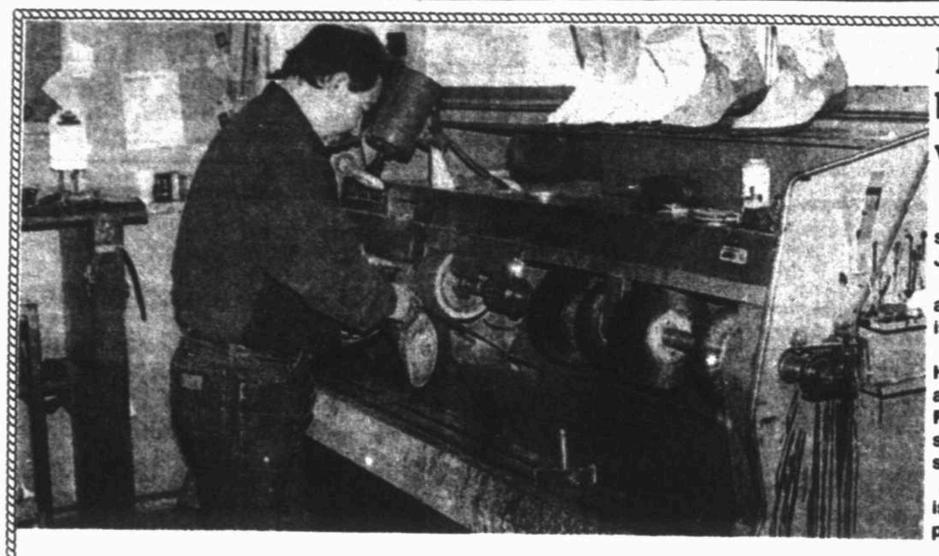

Individually, the Lady Mustangs' statistics make you wish you had them on a fantasy baseball team. The Lady Mustang who had the best day at the plate had to be first baseman Jennifer Peek. Peek went 4-for-5 with two doubles, four runs scored and six RBIs. Sheppard helped her own cause with a 3-for-5 performance with a double, three runs scored and 3 RBIs.

Johnson scored four runs, shortstop Hendi Hutton had two RBIs and two runs scored, and Stephanie Warden had three hits and three runs scored. They were just a few of the many productive Midland Christian hitters, who collectively went 19-for-34 and stole 14 bases for the day.

Fighter collapses; undergoes surgery

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Challenger Jimmy Garcia was in critical condition and underwent surgery Saturday night for a blood clot on the brain after taking a beating in his WBC super featherweight title fight against Gabriel Ruelas.

Garcia was rushed to University Medical Center after collapsing in his corner following the fight at Caesars Palace.

"His condition deteriorated from there," ringside physician Flip Homansky said.

Homansky said Garcia was suffering from a subdural hematoma or blood clot under the lining of his brain. He said it was large enough to warrant surgery.

Homansky said a neurosurgeon was with Garcia from the time he was taken from the ring. He declined to comment on his chances of survival.

Ruelas battered the game but outclassed Garcia seemingly at will for more than 10 rounds before referee Mitch Halpern finally moved in to stop the bout 25 seconds into the 11th round.

Garcia, who never went down during the fight, slumped to the canvas in his corner and was given oxygen and taken from the ring on a stretcher. He was taken by ambulance to a local hospital.

"He's talking, he's OK," Homansky said just after the fight ended.

Garcia's trainer, though, said his fighter did not appear conscious while being taken from the ring.

"The last couple of minutes he didn't open his eyes at all," said Miguel Diaz.

Garcia took a beating from the opening bell against the 130-pound champion, who was a 10-1 favorite in the second defense of the title he won Sept. 17 from James Leija.

The fight topped the undercard of the lightweight title fight between Ruelas' brother, Rafael, and Olympic gold medalist Oscar De La Hoya.

"My head wasn't really in it," Ruelas said. "I was thinking about Rafael's fight too much."

Ruelas hurt Garcia on several occasions, including late in the 10th round when Garcia seemed ready to go down and had to hold onto Ruelas as the champion continued his barrage of punches.

Halpern appeared ready to stop the fight at that time, but allowed it to continue through the final few seconds of the round. He called Homansky in to look at Garcia between rounds and Homansky allowed the fight to continue into the 11th round.

Ruelas swarmed all over Garcia in the final round and Halpern finally moved in to stop it.

Garcia went back to his corner and sat on his stool. When the decision was being announced, he slumped back against the ring post and was helped to the canvas by his handlers.

Ruelas, 130, upped his record to 41-2, while Garcia, 129 1/2, is now 35-5. Ruelas earned $300,000 for the win.

In another undercard fight, Dana Rosenblatt stopped previously unbeaten Chad Parker with a crashing right hand that brought the fight to an end at 1:28 of the first round.

Parker fell to the canvas after being hit with the counterpunch and referee Jay Nady didn't even bother counting him out.

Rosenblatt, 159, of Malden, Mass., improved to 24-0 with 19 knockouts, while Parker, 160, of Biloxi, Miss., dropped to 31-1-1.

Martin takes to dirt of SaveMart 300

SONOMA, Calif. (AP) — Mark Martin learned to drive on the rural roads of his native Arkansas, a skill which should prove useful in Sunday's Save Mart Supermarkets 300.

"You go as fast as you can without ending in a ditch," Martin said about the talent needed to navigate some of those backroads at home, "which is just what you do in a road race."

Martin, coming off a win at Talladega, Ala., called up his past to qualify third for the Save Mart 300, one of only two road races on the NASCAR Winston Cup schedule.

The Winston Select 500 victory last Sunday at Talledega was the 15th of Martin's career. It moved him to third in the Winston Cup standings with 1,305 Points, nine behind co-leaders Dale Earnhardt and Jeff Gordon.

Martin, who has finished in the top 10 in eight of the nine races this season, credited his success in the sport to his father, Julian, who gave him the racing bug at a very early age.

"I was probably 2 or 3 years old, standing in his lap, driving the car," Martin said.

On Friday, Ricky Rudd took the pole position for Sunday's race in a Ford Thunderbird. Rudd lapped at 92.132 mph, besting Earnhardt's 91.838 mph record qualifying average in 1993.

G'wood clinches playoff spot

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood baseball team clinched a playoff spot by defeating Big Like 7-5 Saturday in District 8-3A action.

Greenwood, 15-9-1 for the season and 7-1 in district, put together a six-run bottom of the sixth to come back from a 5-1 hole. Bucky Smith led the Indians' hitting attack going 2-for-4 with a Home run and a RBI. Andy Watzl went 1-for-1 with a double and RBI. Other big hitters included Josh Jones, who went 1-for-3 with a RBI, Andy Smith, who had a RBI, and Michael Otho, who went 2-for-3 with a double for Greenwood who had six hits on the day.

The pitching staff went three deep Saturday with Andy Watzl picking up the win in relief of starter Jones. Watzl raised his record to 7-3. Chad Berry picked up the save. The three pitchers struck out 12 while allowing 9 hits.

Greenwood, who is tied with Kermit for the district lead will travel to Colorado City on Tuesday before ending the regular season with Crane.

Sakic's triple puts Nordiques over defending champion Rangers, 5-4

The Associated Press

■ NHL Playoffs

QUEBEC — Joe Sakic's third goal of the game with 38 seconds left gave the Quebec Nordiques a comeback 5-4 victory over the New York Rangers in the opener of their NHL playoff series Saturday night.

Game 2 of the best-of-7 Eastern Conference quarterfinal series is set for Monday night at the Colisee.

The Nordiques entered the final period down 4-2, but got goals from Sakic, Bob Bassen and Sakic to beat the Rangers, who had been 15-0-1 in games in which they led after two periods.

The Nordiques were 3-0 and finished 18 points ahead of the Rangers during the season.

Sakic and Scott Young had scored in the first period for Quebec, which finished first in the conference this season to make the playoffs for only the second time in seven years.

Capitals 5, Penguins 4

PITTSBURGH — Sergei Gonchar, who scored only twice all season, had two goals and set up another during a four-goal flurry that rallied Washington past Pittsburgh in the Eastern Conference quarterfinals.

Trying to duplicate last season's first-round upset of Pittsburgh, the Capitals overcame three power-play goals — two off the same Peter Bondra penalty — to seize a 1-0 series lead.

Game 2 will be Monday in Pittsburgh.

Dale Hunter also scored twice and assisted on Gonchar's insurance goal as the Capitals beat the Penguins in Game 1 of a playoff series for the fourth time in as many series since 1991.

Bonewitz basketball family takes season honors at 20th TABC ceremony

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — East Central coach Stanley Bonewitz was named Coach of the Year and his son, Stanley Bonewitz Jr., was named Mr. Basketball Saturday at the 20th annual Texas Association of Basketball Coaches awards ceremony.

Bonewitz Jr. led East Central to the University Interscholastic League Class 5A state title this season.

"It's a story book finish to the season," coach Bonewitz said after the presentation. "It's a compliment to our players and the community around East Central. They rallied behind our team and the championship was the culmination. These (the awards) are the icing."

Julie Lake of Duncanville High School was named Miss Basketball and Dickie Faught of Class 2A state champion Ozona was named girls Coach of the Year.

Lake will play college basketball at Stephen F. Austin, while Bonewitz has signed with Texas Tech.

The association also inducted eight people into its hall of fame.

The inductees included former Port Arthur Lincoln coach James Gamble and Earl Evans, one of Gamble's players in the 1970s.

Gamble led his teams to four state titles, including three straight from 1986-88.

Texas Tech swept the college coaches of the year awards with James Dickey claiming the men's title and Marsha Sharp the women's.

Rogers wins for first time since pitching perfect game last year

The Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

OAKLAND, Calif. — Kenny Rogers won for the first time since pitching a perfect game last season and Benji Gil homered for the second straight game, leading the Texas Rangers over the Oakland Athletics 4-2 Saturday.

Rogers (1-2) allowed seven hits, including Mark McGwire's third home run, in seven innings.

Rogers had lost a career-high four straight decisions since pitching the 11th regular-season perfect game of the modern era, last July 28 against California. Matt Whiteside pitched a scoreless eighth. Jeff Russell worked the ninth for his second save.

Twins 5, Indians 2

CLEVELAND — Rookie Brad Radke, making his first career start, limited Cleveland to two runs in 5 2-3 innings as Minnesota beat the Indians.

The Indians' streak of 29 consecutive sellouts at Jacobs Field ended, although the crowd of 37,325 was larger than the 34,087 who saw Cleveland's second home game a year ago. The sellout streak began last June 13.

Pat Meares homered and Scott Leius doubled home two runs for the Twins, who ended their string of six consecutive losses at Jacobs Field. Meares and Kirby Puckett each had three hits.

Red Sox 5, Tigers 3

DETROIT — Lee Tinsley and Tim Naehring each extended their season-long hitting streaks to 10 games and both drove in a run as Boston beat Detroit.

Aaron Sele (2-0) overcame six walks in five innings. Five of the walks came with two outs, including three in the third inning.

Stan Belinda, in his first appearance of the season, struck out the side in the ninth for a save. He was activated earlier from an injury rehabilitation assignment.

Brewers 5, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — Ricky Bones pitched 7 2-3 shutout innings and Greg Vaughn and David Hulse had two RBIs each to lead Milwaukee over New York.

Bones (2-0), making his third start of the season, struck out six and walked one before being relieved by Graeme Lloyd in the eighth. The two combined on a seven-hitter. Jim Leyritz hit a two-run homer in the ninth to ruin Milwaukee's shutout bid.

Blue Jays 7, Orioles 3

BALTIMORE — Danny Darwin got his first victory in nearly a year, benefiting from a six-run second inning that carried Toronto past Baltimore.

Randy Knorr homered and Joe Carter had three hits for the Blue Jays. Rafael Palmeiro had a two-run homer for the Orioles, who stranded 13 runners.

Toronto sent 11 batters to the plate in the second inning, getting three walks and five hits, including a two-run single by Paul Molitor.

White Sox 7, Royals 4

CHICAGO — Tim Raines tripled, doubled twice and drove in three runs and Ron Karkovice and Warren Newson homered Saturday night as the struggling Chicago White Sox beat the Kansas City Royals 7-4.

The White Sox won for just the second time in nine games. Chicago scored six runs with two outs.

Wilson Alvarez (1-1) worked seven innings, allowing five hits and four runs. Roberto Hernandez pitched the ninth for Chicago's first save of the season.

Club pro gains share of BellSouth

■ Golf Roundup

MARIETTA, Ga. — Stephen Keppler, a local club pro, shot a 5-under-par 67 Saturday and gained a share of the lead with Jim Gallagher Jr. after the third round of the BellSouth Classic.

Keppler, 34, a British citizen who played college golf at Florida State and elected to be a club pro when his one year on the European PGA Tour wasn't fruitful, had four birdies in a row on the back side and capped his round with a 35-foot birdie putt on the final hole.

Gallagher, who had shared the first-round lead, posted a 68, leaving the leaders with a 13-under-par 203 for three trips around the hilly 7,018-yard Atlanta Country Club course. Defending champion John Daly, who started the day with a one-shot lead, never got his game untracked, posting a 71 that left him tied for third at 205 with Guy Boros and Mark Calcavecchia. Boros shot 67 and Calcavecchia 69, each scoring birdies on the par-5 18th, which Daly parred.

Scott Verplank shot a 67-206 and was tied with first-round co-leader Bill Porter, who shot 68, and Davis Love III, who had a 70.

PaineWebber Invitational

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Arthritis nearly ended Bob Murphy's career, and television nearly made it too comfortable for him to leave the broadcast booth.

Medication eased his pain after 12 years, and Lee Trevino talked him out of his announcing job. On Saturday, Murphy took the lead at the PaineWebber Invitational with a 6-under-par 66 that gave him a two-round total of 10-under-par 134.

"I had migratory arthritis," said Murphy, who closed the round eagle-birdie-birdie. "Of course, when it hit my hands, I was out of business."

Graham Marsh, who was second after the opening round, and Larry Ziegler, who led with a first-round 66, were at 9-under 135. Marsh had six birdies and two bogeys for a 68, then predicted what it would take to claim the $180,000 first prize.

Sara Lee Clasic

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Laura Davies knew she couldn't keep up the pace she had set in the first round of the $525,000 Sara Lee Classic.

She shot a 3-under-par 69 Saturday for a two-day total of 11-under 133 that kept her one stroke ahead of record-setting Michelle McGann, who was at 134 after a 65. That came a day after Davies' 64 that was a stroke off the course record. Davis opened Saturday with a three-stroke lead. She birdied Nos. 6, 7 and 8 but missed four birdie chances on the back nine. One was on the par-5, 480-yard 11th when the ball made a 180-degree turn around the lip and came out.

Cardinal homers halt Astros' streak

The Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

ST. LOUIS — Darnell Coles hit a three-run homer and Bernard Gilkey also homered as the St. Louis Cardinals beat Houston 6-5 Saturday night, stopping the Astros' five-game winning streak.

The Cardinals gave starter Ken Hill a 6-0 lead in the third inning, but he couldn't get past the fifth after a three-run homer by Phil Plantier and a solo shot by Scooter Tucker.

Vicente Palacios (1-1) pitched 1 1-3 innings for the win. Rene Arocha worked two scoreless innings and Tom Hanke pitched the ninth for his third save.

Phillies 3, Braves 1

ATLANTA — Michael Mimbs limited Atlanta to one hit in six shutout innings and won his official major league debut, leading Philadelphia past the Braves.

The Phillies won their third straight game, and Charlie Hayes homered for the second night in a row against the Braves.

Mimbs walked five and struck out four. Javier Lopez had the only hit against him but was thrown out trying to stretch his second-inning single into a double.

Cubs 13, Pirates 5

PITTSBURGH — Shawon Dunston drove in three runs with a pair of doubles and Jaime Navarro had a career-high eight strikeouts as Chicago beat Pittsburgh.

Rey Sanchez, Rick Wilkins and Jose Hernandez had two RBIs apiece as the Cubs won their fourth consecutive road game for the first time since 1975. Pittsburgh has lost four in a row at home for the first time since 1974.

One of Dunston's doubles highlighted a four-run third inning against Paul Wagner (0-3), who became the second NL pitcher with three losses. Wagner lasted just 2 1-3 innings, allowing six runs and six hits, and got his first career loss to Chicago after four victories.

Navarro (2-0) pitched seven innings and allowed seven hits and one walk.

Chicago led 6-0 after three innings, but Pittsburgh got three runs back in the fourth inning on Jeff King's RBI double and run-scoring hits by Orlando Merced and Mark Parent.

Reds 13, Mets 11

CINCINNATI — Cincinnati, in desperate need of a victory and resorting to desperate measures, rallied for nine runs in the last two innings and beat New York.

Ron Gant's homer started the surge during a six-run eighth inning, and Jerome Walton ended the game with a two-run homer.

The Reds held a team meeting Friday night after opening the season at 1-8, one of the worst starts in franchise history. Before Saturday's game, owner Marge Schott rubbed dog hair from the team's former mascot on her players and coaches for good luck.

Marlins 10, Expos 3

MONTREAL — Greg Colbrunn had four hits and drove in a career-high five runs, leading Florida to a rout of Montreal.

Colbrunn hit a two-run double to highlight a five-run fourth inning, a run-scoring double in the sixth and a two-run single in the seventh. His 4-for-5 day raised his average 71 points to .361.

The Marlins won consecutive games for the first time this season and handed the Expos their third straight loss.

Dodgers 17, Rockies 11

DENVER — Mike Piazza hit his first homer of the season, scored four runs and drove in three as Los Angeles held on to beat Colorado.

Eric Karros added three hits and three RBIs, Mitch Webster hit a two-run homer and Henry Rodriguez had his first career four-hit game.

The Rockies, trailing 14-4 after five innings, rallied on John Vander Wal's three-run, pinch-homer in the sixth and three more homers in the seventh by Dante Bichette, Roberto Mejia and pinch-hitter Mike Kingery to make it 14-11. Los Angeles then scored three more times in the ninth.

Todd Williams (1-0) pitched 3 2-3 innings in relief of Tom Candiotti for his first major league win. The Rockies lost two games in a row for the first time this season.

Rate & Credit Policies
Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classified categories require payment in advance. Credit applications are also required for business accounts. Yearly contract agreements are available. The Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to correctly classify and edit all copy or to reject or cancel any advertisement at any time.

Cancellations
The price of your ad will be based on the number of days published according to our rate structure. Call (915) 682-6222 - ask for your cancellation number. This is your record of cancellation and it is important that you have it in the event of any misunderstanding or adjustment. "Super Seller" and "Real Wheel Deal" ads may be cancelled, but are non-adjustable and non-refundable.

Errors and Adjustments
Please check your ad the first day that it appears to be sure that all of the information is correct. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. Call us the first day if you find an error at 915-682-6222. To report an error in Saturday's edition call Saturday morning between 8a.m. and 10a.m. Errors in Sunday's edition should be reported on Monday morning after 8:00 a.m. We must limit our financial responsiblity, if any, to the charge for the word or space, and cannot be held responsible for incorrect ads after the first day of publication.

Omissions of Ads
The Midland Reporter-Telegram assumes no financial responsiblity in an ad beyond the cost of the ad itself, and no responsiblity for the omission of an ad.

Beneath the hues of the Lexus ES lie some significant advancements in noise suppression. Like an electronically controlled transmission, which quietly talks with the engine about how to provide a smoother ride. Or the liquid-filled engine mounts, which reduce noise and vibration. As a whole, parts like these comprise one of the quietest automobiles on the road. In fact, IntelliChoice named it The Best Overall Value in its Class. To test-drive an ES in any one of eight muted tones, visit your Lexus dealer. LEXUS Your Lexus Dealer. Pursuing Perfection.

STONE IN MEDITERRANEAN

Close to good shopping and a number of schools, this recently renovated family home offers a tremendous amount to the prospective home buyer.

Not only has it been updated to a very high standard with brand new Burber carpets, but the house has also been expanded with the addition of a bright and airy den which was added this year.

Overall, the house offers a number of interesting and attractive features: such as the Mexican tile in the entryway and the stone-flagged fireplace in the formal living room.

Set in large grounds on a corner lot, the house is geared towards fun with plenty of room for a swimming pool. There is obviously more to this house than just space. It has also been very well thought out, with masses of storage space both inside and out. For example, there is a large storage building at the rear of the property and the yard contains a fenced dog run.

The heart of this fashionable house has to the be the unusual, five-sided kitchen. Boasting hard-wood floors and plenty of work space, this all electric kitchen provides the ideal place in which to prepare and eat family meals.

Aspects of the kitchen such as the built-in ironing board and large utility room that has plenty of space for a chest freezer as well as a washer and dryer, add even more practicality to the room.

With three bedrooms and two bathrooms, this family home offers a number of special features such as the two car garage which contains a built-in work bench. It also has a lot of space in which to work on projects.

All in all, this is a lovely property which has great potential as a luxurious family home.

Located at 3804 Douglas in West Midland the house is being listed by Ruth Young of Re/Max for $75,000.

For more information about the property, or to arrange an appointment to view, call 682-7884

Present surroundings often influence sale of home

With a little effort, you can make your home ready to sell more quickly and at a better price.

Anita Noles
Broker/Owner,
ABR, CRS, GRI
RE/MAX of Midland

1. FIRST IMPRESSIONS ARE IMPORTANT! Remember, when a prospect comes to look at your house, the first thing he will see is your home's front door! Be sure that it is fresh, and clean. Be sure your lawn and landscaping is well manicured and trim looking. Be sure your yard is free of refuse and leaves. If it snowed, be certain that you've removed the ice and snow from walk and steps.

2. WHAT YOU SHOW IS WHAT YOU GET! Faded walls and worn woodwork will reduce the appeal of your home. Why try to tell a prospect how your home could look . . . when you can show him a reasonable amount of redecoration? A quicker sale at a higher price will result. Invest in wallpaper in the kitchen or bathroom. It will pay dividends for you.

3. LET THE SUN SHINE IN. Open those drapes and curtains all the way, so the prospect can see how bright and cheerful your home is.

4. FIX THAT LEAKY FAUCET. Dripping water discolors sinks and suggests faulty or worn-out plumbing.

5. LITTLE THINGS MEAN A LOT. Take a few minutes to check to be sure that your doors don't stick or have loose knobs on them. Don't forget your windows and cabinet drawers. Get all those minor flaws fixed since they detract from your home's value.

6. SAFETY FIRST AND ALWAYS! Keep stairways clear and clean since this will avoid injuries around your home, as well as avoid detracting by distraction.

7. FROM TOP TO BOTTOM. Display your attic, basement, and other utility space (including crawl spaces) by removing all unnecessary articles. A coat of paint can do wonders if your basement is dark and dreary.

8. BIG CLOSETS! Make them look bigger by having them neat and well organized to show that your home has ample closet space.

9. BATHROOMS SELL HOMES. Keep these rooms bright and cheerful. Remove any excess furniture and be sure and use attractive and colorful bedspreads, and fresh curtains.

11. SHINE ON! Your home's illumination can be a "welcome" sign to that prospective buyer! Turn on all of your outside and inside lights when showing your home at night and he'll feel a glowing warmth as a result of your lighting.

12. TWO'S A COUPLE & THREE'S A CROWD. Don't have too many people present during a home inspection, since the potential buyers will feel like an intruder and want to hurry through your house.

13. MUSIC SOOTHES THE SAVAGE BEAST . . . but not the potential buyer. When showing your house, turn off that blaring radio or television. Let your agent and buyer talk freely and not be distracted.

14. CURB YOUR DOG! A dog is "man's best friend," but not when showing your home. Keep all pets out of the way and not underfoot.

15. SILENCE IS GOLDEN! Be courteous and friendly, but don't try to "force" conversation with a potential buyer. He's there to inspect your home.

16. BE IT EVER SO HUMBLE . . . there's no place like home. Never apologize for the appearance of your home. If any objections or derogatory comments are offered, let the experienced salesman answer them - that is his job.

17. STAY IN THE BACKGROUND. The agent knows the buyer's needs and desires and can better emphasize the virtues of your home when you're not "tagging along." If there are any questions, he will call you.

18. DON'T PUT THE CART BEFORE THE HORSE! Trying to sell the prospective purchasers any of the furniture or furnishings which you're not taking with you, before they've purchased your home, can often lose the sale . . . so "cool it."

19. A WORD-TO-THE-WISE. Let your agent discuss the selling price, terms, possession and other factors with the customer. He's been trained and has experience, so let him bring your negotiations to a satisfactory conclusion.

20. Follow this guide for a quicker sale.

Children often suffer from stress during relocation

Kay Sutton
Kay Sutton,
Realtors

Whether you are moving within the area, or moving to a totally different location, moving is stressful to everyone in the family. Children are often confused and frightened about the "unknown." Experienced relocation professionals offer the following tips to make the move smoother for the entire family.

• Tell your children about the move early. Don't make the mistake of trying to protect them until the move is about to take place. Children pick up on phrases and stress in the conversation, and may be more upset about the unknown than you realize. Children also are frequently more aware of the parents stress than you expect. Talk with them about the scheduling, the concerns, and the opportunities offered in the new location. It is OK to let then know if you are unhappy about the move, but stress also the good points, and explain why this move is necessary.

• Share with the children the scheduling, what will happen and when. Remember also, a move during the school year, especially for small children, offers some advantages. They will be known as "new" and will receive extra attention to make them feel more comfortable.

• Assign a child special duties, such as packing up their own room. If you are having a garage sale, consider allowing the children to decide which items of theirs will be included and giving them the money from those items.

• Help your children to break ties with their friends and make new friends in the new location. This is often a difficult experience and requires extra time and effort from the adults in the family. If you have a teenager who drives, it might be a good time to get him or her involved with carpooling the younger ones to extra activities, providing both the transportation and the opportunity for everyone to get acquainted with new friends.

• Try to get your children excited about the new location. Every area has something to offer, it only takes time and effort to find the activities which will interest your family.

• Do your homework regarding the school your children will attend. Make sure you have all of the required school records for the transfer. If your children did not go on the househunting trip with you, take pictures of the new school to take back, so they will be able to visualize where they will be going to school.

In short, make the move a "family experience." It can help to make you all closer if you include everyone in the process.

Trees and plants accomplish more than great looks!

Peggy Strong,
CRS, GRI
Chaparral
Realtors

The next time you're out in your yard planting shrubs, flowers, or trees, don't think about how your back is probably going to feel the next day - think about the fact that you're adding value to your home. Professional landscape organizations have estimated that a well-landscaped and beautifully maintained yard can add as much as 15% to the resale value of a home.

In the real estate business, we call it "curb appeal" because prospective buyers often make a decision from "the curb" as to whether they even want to see the inside of the house. But, a beautifully landscaped and well-groomed yard can invite buyers into the home, and even overshadow any negative aspects of the property. Even appraisers are often called upon for corporate "windshield appraisal" and their opinions can be influenced by attractive and meticulously kept landscaping. Face it, an attractive book cover sells more books than plain brown paper! Many buyers feel that if the "cover" shows deferred maintenance, the inside will be the same story . . . one that he prefers not to see.

Trees and shrubs also serve a purpose of protecting and shielding the home from the elements, possibly increasing the heating/cooling efficiency of the home. Proper placement of plants is very important and consideration should be given for growth rate over time. Landscaping should add interest to a home, but not necessarily hours of maintenance. Study and choose appropriate plants that comply with, not deter, from the home. For instance, one would do well not to have "trashy" leafy trees near a pool. A well-planned landscaping project resulting in a pleasing shady patio for backyard entertaining can be just the hot button for that right buyer.

To improve the curb appeal of any house is much easier and less expensive than most people think. A coat of paint, a sweep of the driveway, a trimming of the bushes - all of these simple acts will improve the curb appeal of a home. Home sellers might want to consider hiring a landscape company to do a professional "sprucing up" of the yard, as well as to add a few well-placed bushes or shrubs.

What can you do to get the most from your home sale in the shortest possible time? Start with a call to a Professional Realtor for a list of profitable tips.

Earnest money deposit helps add appeal to offer

Vicki Garrett
Chaparral
Realtors

You've been househunting for several weeks, and have found the perfect property. The home is perfect for your family, and you've decided to take it. Unfortunately, so have two other buyers.

This unexpected development has you in a quandary. The sellers' representative is planning to present all three purchase offers to the sellers later in the day, and you'll be heartbroken if yours isn't accepted. What can you do?

First, understand the "offer and acceptance" process. The sellers' agent is obligated to present any and all written purchase offers to the sellers. In this case there are offers from three different buyers.

Second, the sellers are not obligated to accept any of them, nor are they required to make a counter-offer. They may simply accept the one they deem most valuable to them, or reject all of them. At their option, they may also choose one and make an offer to continue negotiation in hopes of improving the offer.

When several offers are presented at the same time, the sellers' are not required to consider them in any particular order. For example, if all three are for an identical price and on the same terms, the sellers are not required to take the first offer made.

If you really want the home, consider an approach that is certain to get the sellers' attention. Offer a price which is higher than the asking price. All other things being equal, i.e. terms, time until closing, tec., chances are good that the sellers will consider your offer favorably.

You may also want to add some icing to the sellers' cake. Offer a substantial earnest money deposit, several thousand dollars higher than would be expected. This lets the sellers know you are very serious, and firmly committed to make the purchase.

Want that special home? Make your offer too attractive to pass up and remember to protect your investment by contacting a knowledgeable Realtor.

Summer's almost here, to paraphrase Martha and the Vandellas, and the time is right for — well, you don't really want a bunch of kids literally dancing in the streets. It wouldn't be safe. However, school is almost out for the summer and the younger generation will probably want to celebrate. Besides, summer can be the best time for birthday parties, even if you weren't born in the summer.

Children's parties can be lots of fun for the young party-goers — and massive amounts of work for the parents — so throwing a youngsters' bash in your own home might be more than you want to think about. Fortunately, plenty of options are available.

Fast food restaurants, especially some that specialize in burgers or pizza, have children's birthday parties available. For a set price, the restaurant will provide food and drink for up to a certain number of children (say 10), with additional charges for each child above that number. In addition to the food and drink, the restaurant may also provides a birthday cake and party favors, and sometimes games. Of course, if the restaurant has a playground or a video game arcade, the young party-goers pretty much entertain themselves. And best of all, at least as far as the tired parents are concerned, the price of the party also includes clean up.

Skating rinks also have children's birthday party packages available. KC's Nutty Roller in Midland offers three different packages, according to owner Keith Cain. The first package involves bringing in your own cake and refreshments; with the second package, the rink supplies cake, ice cream and soft drinks, along with the required paper goods to serve the already-mentioned cake, ice cream and soft drinks; the third package involves renting the entire establishment for a totally private party for up to 100 party-goers. Parties run from two to three hours, Cain said, or four hours if they are on Saturday night — when the prices are a little bit more too. All parties include skate rentals. (And, he added, adults enjoy skating parties too. Some of the larger groups include those who first learned to skate decades ago. Skating is not just kid stuff anymore.)

Bowling alleys also offer children's birthday parties. Mike White, assistant manager at Midland Park Lanes, said birthday parties at that establishment consist of a hour and 45 minutes of bowling and birthday party, including shoe rentals, plates and napkins, cake, a decorated bowling pin for the birthday child and the services of a hostess. Century of dolls, dresses presented

By Marilyn McKnight-Harrison

Members of the Midland Woman's Club and their guests enjoyed a delightful program, entitled "Dolls and Dresses in Revue" at the club's final fund-raiser of the year.

McKnight-Harrison

Steve Porterfield of The Cat's Meow presented the event. With several club members serving as models, fashions were represented from the decades of the 1850s to the 1950s. They included a Civil War era day dress, a promenade suit that is thought to have belonged to Winston Churchill's mother, two Parisian ballgowns made for the wife of an Idaho statesman and worn to inaugural balls between 1910 and 1916, pioneer dresses, and satin and chiffon cocktail dresses of the '50s.

The models included Florine Anderson, Treva Beckmann, Alathea Blischke, Patsy Gardner, Virginia Gilbert, Lynn James, Dorothy Sanders, Colleen Scury, Ruth Thompson and Dorise Watson.

Members were invited to bring their dolls to lunch, and in between the fashion parade, Steve talked about them and their origins. Among those shown were original Shirley Temple, Scarlett O'Hara and Dionne Quintuplets dolls and a Simon and Holbig bisque doll circa 1900.

A luncheon preceded the show. The menu featured Chicken Crepes with cheese sauce and for dessert, "Sinful" Chocolate Cake.

Tables were decorated with dolls reflecting the different fashion eras. To continue the theme, the stage was set with dolls and doll furniture.

Of special interest were approximately 20 original sketches of costumes by Midland artist Ethel Des Jardins, Mrs. Scury's mother. She was a costume designer in Chicago in the 1930s.

Door prizes for the affair were donated by the Woman's Club and its nine shareholding clubs.

Among those seen in the crowd were Ruth (Mrs. Edwin) Unger, Beverly (Mrs. Bob) Riley, Dorothy (Mrs. Tom) Dollahite, Frances (Mrs. Barney) McCasland, Charlene (Mrs. Larry) Gnagy and Hattie Mae (Mrs. Roy) Jeter.

CONGRATULATIONS TO Dottie and Jack Fox, who celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary last weekend.

To mark the occasion, a brunch was given by their family, Cindy and John Michael Warburton of Bartlesville, Okla., and Cissy Fox and Gene Carlson of Tempe, Ariz., at the Fox residence.

Among those assisting with the event were Retha Dougherty, Renee and Louis Beique, Jan and Jim Moore, Ruth and Bob Price and Leann (Mrs. Hal) Brenner.

Out-of-town guests included former Midlanders Art Cole of Santa Fe, N.M., and Jack's niece, Gail Black Heisler with her grandson, Zachery of Houston. Also here were Pam and Charles Pendleton and their granddaughter, Holly, of New York City.

The couple were married on April 28, 1945, in Brooklyn, N.Y., in a military wedding. After Jack's discharge from the service, they moved to Austin, so that he could attend the University of Texas. They lived in several cities in the Permian Basin, before making the Tall City their permanent home in 1955. They are the parents of twin daughters.

A FULL DAY of celebrating was in store for Ellen Hinson when she recently turned 40. The festivities began at six o'clock that morning with a kidnap breakfast arranged by her sister, Julie (Mrs. Mike) Lemond, at the new Denny's Restaurant. The other guests were DeLayne (Mrs. Mark) Wellen, Pam (Mrs. Dennis) Sledge, Andrea (Mrs. Rusty) Freeman and Leslea (Mrs. Frank) McCabe.

Later in the day, Ellen manned a booth at Trinity School's Fun-Fest, where her friends had placed a sign, "Look Who's 40," overhead.

That evening a surprise party was held at the home of Leslea and Frank McCabe. Co-host couples were Andrea and Rusty Freeman and Kris and Greg Thagard. Friends enjoyed a delicious dinner poolside. Bearing gag gifts, they came dressed in black, which coordinated with the party decor.

Guests included Ellen's husband, Bob Hinson; her father, Bill Beach; her brother and sister-in-law, Sandy and Missy Beach, and a host of friends, including Jan and Steve Goree, Vicki and David Donnell, Paula and Dave Duncan, Ellen and Scott Ramsey and Jenness and Jody Gilles.

The daughter of longtime Midlanders Jeanne and Bill Beach, Ellen is a native of Midland and a Lee High School graduate.

A UNIQUE FASHION SHOW, "The Seven Faces of Eve," was presented by Vicki Bailey DeShaw of Julian Gold at the Midland Country Club Ladies Association's April luncheon meeting.

Taking a basic spring outfit, Vicki showed the many ways to accessorize and update for new and exciting looks. She created fresh approaches for every occasion by simply adding a new jacket, belt, scarf, pair of shoes or piece of jewelry. The new looks in eyewear, now considered important fashion accessories, were presented by Vision Health Center.

Also modeled informally during the lunch hour were fashions from the MCC Golf and Tennis Pro Shops. These sporting outfits are so versatile that they do not have to be worn on just the court or golf course.

Hostesses for the social hour preceding lunch were Susie (Mrs. Gary) Burnett, Linda (Mrs. Rodney) Satterwhite and Shannon (Mrs. Richard) Oldham.

Spotted in the crowd were Penny (Mrs. Jerry) Hudgeons, Marilyn (Mrs. Bill) Hightower, Sara (Mrs. Bill) St. Clair, Ellen (Mrs. Stephen) Helbing and Michelle (Mrs. Bob) Robinson.

PARTY: Businesses offer package deals

ents don't have to do anything," except maybe take pictures, he said. For younger children, the management even puts up gutter guards so the young bowlers' balls will stay in the lanes. Smaller bowlers who haven't yet grown into bowling shoes may bowl in tennis shoes, White added. And the business has bowling balls as small as six pounds, for use by younger bowlers.

Indoor playgrounds, such as Discovery Zone, offer birthday party packages, complete with birthday cake and party favors. Locally, Midland's Discovery Zone offers three packages, said manager Mary Richter: One package provides cake and punch plus two tokens per child for the skill games; one provides cake and punch, four tokens per child, hot dogs and chips or pizza for each child, and a T-shirt for the birthday honoree; the third is a group rate for parties of 10 or more. Parties are conducted on an official two-hour schedule, she said, but "the kids can stay and play as long as they want." Additional party activities are not necessary, since the young guests make a beeline for the playground equipment and don't come up for air until it's time to go home. These indoor playgrounds often have a separate play area for little bitty children, so toddlers and preschoolers won't be out of their league in the bigger people's play area. But both areas have age-appropriate play equipment, including ball pits, climbing nets, swinging ropes, slides and tunnels. Parents should either be prepared for a long wait (maybe bring a book) or plan on joining in the fun.

- After children reach a certain age (too old for playgrounds, too young for cars), planning a party outside the home might be more of a challenge. A cookout in the park might be appropriate, if the weather isn't too wet or too hot. Be sure to bring soccer balls and maybe inline skates or skateboards, if park regulations permit. Or maybe take them swimming at a city pool — which should be open in time for Memorial Day weekend — or at a YMCA before the cookout. If you just can't face the idea of a cookout, fast food places do a bang-up job providing take-out foods for a hungry mob.

Maybe a trip to the mall would be in order. Young teenagers like to run in packs with their peers, so while parents wait in the food court (or wander around with their children, a discreet 20 paces behind, of course), the party-goers could cruise the mall with their friends, and perhaps the honoree could choose his or her own parental birthday present. Then the entire group could adjourn to an ice cream or yogurt shop for a different birthday sweet treat.

Imagination can be a wonderful thing when deciding how to celebrate your child's special events. One adventurous mother honored her twins' birthday by taking her preadolescent daughters and some of their friends to a beauty shop for new hairstyles and manicures.

While that won't work very well for boys, very young men might be interested in attending a sports event — maybe a Midland Angels game — with some of their friends, with pizza afterward.

Children of both sexes may enjoy camping out under the stars with parents and friends. You could even take binoculars and some information about astronomy, and sneak in a little education about the stars and planets. This time of year be sure to take insect repellent and lots of ghost stories.

Young adolescents are notorious for being embarrassed by their parents, so if you really want to do the job right, you could have a birthday lunch or dinner for your child at a restaurant that offers embarrassing birthday serenades by the wait staff. Just inform your server that you are celebrating your child's birthday, and the wait staff will circle the restaurant announcing the event, place a birthday cake in front of the honoree and sing a birthday song very, very loud. Your child might slide under the table, but the celebration will never be forgotten.

One memorable birthday at TGIFriday's Restaurant, the honoree left the dining room after dinner with balloons tied on her wrists and in her hair. Only thing is, we don't have a TGIFriday's in Midland.

Yet.

Baby boomers looking at the 'Big 5-0'

By Dr. Hap LeCrone
N.Y. Times News Service

The first wave of baby boomers is looking at the "Big 5-0."

Our nests are becoming emptier and our waistlines are becoming fuller. On a more positive note, our home mortgages are becoming smaller and our retirement accounts are becoming larger.

Although we seem to sleep more lightly than we did a few years ago, a meal eaten late in the evening seems much heavier and more bothersome than it did a few years ago. We often need more illumination to read but less volume to enjoy music. Most of us are less upset by the outcome of sporting events and more concerned about the stability of the organization we work for.

My, how our perspective changes over the years.

Health-related issues become more important. History and tradition take on new significance, and our beliefs and values define us more clearly after 50 years.

The unprecedented number of individuals passing the half century mark in this country necessitates our government's re-examining of everything from Social Security benefits to leisure and recreational facilities for retirees.

A whole new generation of volunteers, with more free time on their hands after retirement, is soon to become available. Business and industry is looking at hiring retirees as part-time consultants, thus shifting the nature of the work force in some segments of the economy.

Health care providers are beginning to specialize in issues of aging, and higher learning educational facilities are seeing greater potential for continuing education courses as the needs of baby boomers change.

What is ahead for us? What have we learned that we can share with the generation following us?

A person will probably have many different careers in the future. This is a far cry from what we were led to believe — that successful people rose through the ranks and became secure for life. New occupations will appear and old ones will disappear as technology opens new vistas and demands for services and leisure activities increase.

These new more complex jobs will require more education and training. Positions in the field of geriatrics will be more numerous as the elderly will have many needs.

Speaking of the elderly, some of us baby boomers will join the ranks of the ever-growing number of citizens who surpass the 100-year mark. Our younger brothers and sisters may easily reach that century mark as medicine and science reduce diseases and as new discoveries in genetics and immunology are made.

Good news, then, that our children and grandchildren can expect to be healthier and remain productive throughout their lives.

So, here we are counting our blessings and thinking about the good things that lie ahead for future generations. But what have we learned that we can share with them?

We can share with them that each generation has its own time, has made its own contributions. We enjoyed a period of history that is unique. We were not without turmoil in our 50 years, not without sweeping changes. We enjoyed economic progress, learned to have concern for our planet and our precious environment. It has been a great 50 years and most of us expect to be here to get a clearer view of the next few decades.

Dr. Hap LeCrone is a Waco, Texas, clinical psychologist.

Martha Stewart gets simple, sort of

By Diane White
N.Y. Times New Service

Let's get right to the point. De-accession. It's a word we'll be seeing and hearing a lot of soon because it's Martha Stewart's word to describe the direction home decorating is taking.

De-accession. Translation: "It's simplify, simplify," Martha explained during a visit to San Francisco, where she presided over a bridal fair promoting a special issue of her Living magazine devoted to weddings.

Leave it to Martha to find with a fancy way to say "simplify."

"Get that stuff off the bookcases that doesn't belong there and give those books you'll never read to the library for a sale," Martha told a reporter.

Martha herself practices de-accession on a regular basis. This, at least, is what she claimed in San Francisco, saying, "It makes me so happy to be redefining the purpose of those things."

Martha's edict to simplify, simplify, simplify came as a surprise. It didn't affect me personally. If things get any simpler in my house we'll all be down on the floor on our hands and knees eating with the cat. But as one who follows Martha's every move with keen interest — she's a remarkable bellwether of popular tastes — I couldn't believe she was serious when she spoke of de-accession.

Simplicity has never been Martha's middle name. So it wasn't easy to imagine her going through the vast kitchens and storerooms of her fabulous Turkey Hill Federal farmhouse in Westport, Conn. ("The Martha Stewart State"), saying, "Should I de-access these Depression glass artichoke trivets and donate them? And this Victorian silver celery press. ... Can I redefine its purpose? Maybe it could come in handy for crimping crudites."

And yet, uncharacteristic as her call to simplify appeared, she may have been in earnest. That's what I thought when I leafed through the May issue of Martha Stewart Living and saw a good chunk of it devoted to a tag sale. It was the kind of tag sale mere mortals can only dream of attending, let alone throwing. It's a tag sale the Martha Stewart way, with everything clean and shining and in perfect taste, with matched sets of sparkling glassware, heaps of antique patchwork quilts, Hermes scarves and music.

The tag sale isn't actually Martha's, but one given by her daughter Alexis and a friend. Martha confesses in her monthly "Remembering" column that she's had but one tag sale, years ago, and still regrets some of the items she decided needed de-accession. She writes, "To this day I wish I hadn't parted with the pair of mirrored rosewood armoires, the beautiful lace coverlets and the caned settee."

Alexis is different. "She can collect, but she can also sell," Martha writes. "That's probably why I have too many houses and too much stuff, while she constantly pares down and refines."

Too many houses. Too much stuff. De-accession is for others, but not for Martha. It's an interesting word, de-accession. According to the dictionary, it doesn't mean "simplify," but "to remove and sell (a work of art) from a museum's collection, especially to purchase other works of art."

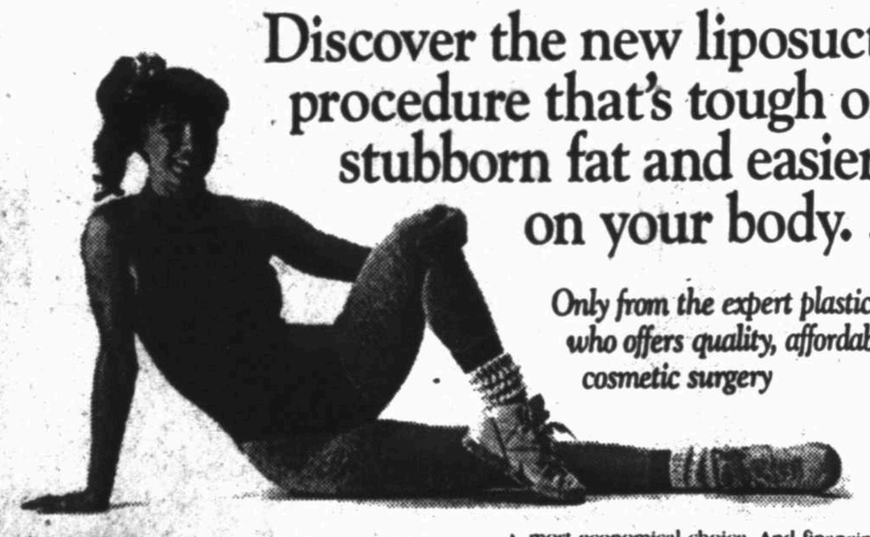

Martha might de-access her many houses, but only to make room for more stuff. "The big joke in our family is that everyone wants to come to my next tag sale," Martha writes. "But the truth is I'm much more of a buyer and a collector than a dealer or a seller. And I'll probably never have another sale."

But if you do a little de-accession, she may turn up at yours.

AT WIT'S END

Your 'permanent record' could haunt you all your life

By Erma Bombeck

My mother spent the first dozen years of my life scaring me to death.

She had a litany of "No's" that would fill a book. "Don't touch the stove, don't play in the traffic, stay away from that dog, don't talk to strangers, keep giggling all night and a monster will get you. If you put your lips on that drinking fountain — you'll die."

Bombeck

When she was sure I was clinically paranoid, she eased up a bit, but I will never forgive her for not warning me of the most feared threat of all time: my permanent record card.

I never heard of it until one day in the third grade, Ray Slocum thought Miss Ruskin was facing the blackboard and couldn't see him, so he got out of his seat, made a face and shimmied, twisting his behind in circles. She twirled around and shouted, "Ray Slocum! That little incident is going on your permanent record card."

We had no idea that a permanent record card even existed, but the importance of it eluded no one.

It meant that Ray Slocum probably couldn't get a job, go into the service, get married, have a family, buy a house or sign up for credit — all because he wriggled his behind when he should have been making a bas-relief map of Brazil. He was lucky they let him use the restroom for the remainder of the year.

It was the ultimate punishment. We could get detention for the rest of the year, erase blackboards every night of our lives, go to the office and get a lecture from the principal, write 5,000 words on Lewis and Clark, but please, God, don't let the misdemeanor be recorded on our permanent record card — in permanent ink.

In my senior year, Dottie Sullivan and I skipped home ec because it was a nice day and we didn't feel like reading about leavening agents.

The incident was duly recorded on our permanent record cards. The nun wrote behind it, "Showed no remorse."

There it was. A lifetime of exemplary behavior down the toilet.

Dottie and I graduated, applied for jobs and got on with our lives. We waited for our past to catch up with us.

It never did. We never had one employer ask to see our permanent record cards.

You know what I think? I think it's the old J. Edgar Hoover bluff. Here he was terrorizing the Kennedys, Jane Fonda and Dr. Martin Luther King with all that wiretapping and spying.

But he didn't have the real goods on them —their permanent record cards.

They are all misfiled in every school basement in the country, waiting to be pitched to make room for the current ones.

They served their purpose.

DEAR ABBY

What's in a name? According to readers, a little bit of everything

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Some time ago, I asked readers to send me names of people whose occupations (or professions) suited their names. Did I get a bushel and a peck! Read on:

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: In high school, our librarian was named Miss Story and my band teacher was Ray Musicker. There is a dentist on Long Island named Scaler, and a pediatrician named Needles. But our favorite was a podiatrist in a Detroit suburb named Dr. Smelsey. — CHUCK AND SADIE SODIKOFF, MERRICK, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: I love telling people that the doctors who delivered my sons were Dr. Miracle and Dr. Blessing. —LOUISE SKYLER, PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR ABBY: I am a Realtor and my name is Sandi Lott. I know another Realtor in Palos Verdes, Calif., named Dusty Rhodes. Also, I used a dentist named Dr. Socket, and my ob-gyn was Dr. Peeke. — S.L., KIMBALL, NEB.

DEAR ABBY: Re people's names fitting their occupations: Three members of my church are named Angel, Harp and Saint. — NORMA WINDSOR, DAYTONA BEACH, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: Sir Russell Brain and Sir Henry Head were two prominent neurologists in Great Britain in the 1930s. —DR. EUGENE KAPLAN, COLUMBIA, S.C.

DEAR ABBY: My dentist in San Francisco is named Les Plack. — BETH KUPER, OAKLAND, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: In Valdosta, Ga., 12 years ago, I bought a car from someone named Swindle and insured it with the Bill Crook Insurance Agency. (Like "Smuckers," I figured with names like those, they HAD to be good!) — VIRGINIA T. LOVE, WINONA, MINN.

DEAR ABBY: When my father was a patient in the hospital in Palm Springs, Calif., his dietitian was Miss Hunger. I give you my word. — JUDGE HENRY LOBIE, SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR ABBY: Add these to your collection: Joe Yawn, manager of a sleep disorder clinic in Jonesboro, Ark.; a Texas psychiatrist named Paul Looney; a fire inspector in Everett, Wash., named Warren Burns; Ralph Watts, a power official in Des Moines, Iowa; L.R. Speedy, of the State Highway Patrol, Canfield, Ohio; and Joe Pigeon, a Key West, Fla., bird dealer. There is also a chiropractor named Bonebreak, a minister named Lord, a dentist named Brush and an undertaker named Dye. — ED MESERVE, STOUGHTON, MASS.

DEAR ABBY: There is a reputable banker in my hometown named Don Crook, and Paul Kradel is a popular obstetrician. P.S. I own a travel agency! — SUZANNE 'B. TRIPP, FORT SMITH, ARK.

DEAR ABBY: Among the people I have known in my lifetime are a bank teller named Mr. Outlaw, a minister named Reverend Paradise, a rabbi named Angel, a hairdresser named Mrs. Brunetti — and let us not forget the coordinator of the People for Perot Campaign in 1992, Orson Swindle. — DAVID L. GARNER, DIX HILLS, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: My all-time favorite is Joe Boozer, of Hereford, Texas, who operates — you guessed it — a liquor store. — BOB BARFIELD, AMARILLO, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: I grew up in a small town in Pennsylvania. My parents befriended a man who owned and operated a chicken farm. His name was Ed Cluck — and he even looked a little like a chicken. I am a veterinarian. — J. KATZ CANEPA, BROOKLYN, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: Sgt. Dick Tracy works for the Police Department in Manchester, N.H. He is also involved in the D.A.R.E. program. If you print this, please don't use my name. — ANONYMOUS

Don't plant grass

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Grass is not recommended as a ground cover for children's backyard swings, according to an expert on the subject.

"Ground cover should be softer to absorb the shock of a child's landing," says Paul Taccini, executive vice president of Hedstrom Corp., which manufactures swing sets. "We recommend ground covers that are made of wood chips, mulch, sand, pea gravel, or a rubberized safety surface."

Once a swing is securely anchored and a recommended ground cover added for safety, shrubbery and plantings can be landscaped into the setting, Taccini noted.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Information for Sunday pages must be in the Lifestyle Department office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographs will be published only of winners, not runners-up or contestants. These announcements will be published on a space available basis.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and with anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required.

A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements.

Portrait photographs of the bride only or photos of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements.

A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements. Anniversaries photos must be relatively current.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted.

The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

Photos can be picked up in the Lifestyle Department after publication, or a self-addressed, stamped envelope can be enclosed for the photo to be returned by mail.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and articles.

After 74 years, ladies of the club call it quits

By June Naylor Rodriguez
N.Y.Times News Service

FORT WORTH, Texas — The Texas Christian University Woman's Club, known for its ladies' teas and faculty dinners, was to celebrate its 75th anniversary this year. Instead, its board has voted to dissolve the group, a casualty of changing times and interests.

The club was formed in 1920 to provide social foundation for wives of TCU faculty members and women faculty, but one past president said the changing world reshaped women's opportunities over the past 20 years.

"With so many women in the work force and more diverse interests for women, there wasn't as much need for socializing as in the past," said Joan Swaim, a third-generation member of the club.

She said club finances were strained by declining membership and no underwriters for larger events. The club also had difficulty finding young members and officer candidates.

"We decided to kill it before it died," Swaim said. "It was a euthanasia thing."

The club hosted the Christmas Faculty Dinner and the prestigious annual Guest Day tea. The club's largest tea was given in 1976, when 425 attended.

"If you didn't receive an invitation, you weren't on Fort Worth's 'A' list," Swaim said chuckling.

After peaking with around 300 members, the club's membership began to decline in the early 1980s. She said it distressed longtime members such as herself to watch the slide; she said member Helen Goldbeck, widow of a math professor, spent a lot of her own money to keep the club alive until its 75th birthday.

Two subgroups will continue to meet unofficially — the hobby group and lunch bunch, which consist primarily of older members.

Swaim's maternal grandmother, Georgia Harris, joined the club in its infancy in about 1922. She was TCU's dietitian for 35 years and helped start the cafeteria-style dining room on the main campus.

Swaim's mother, Elizabeth Hewatt, was a member because of her marriage to Swaim's father, Willis Hewatt, who taught biology at TCU for 41 years. Elizabeth also worked as biology department secretary for several years.

Swaim, who said she's an unofficial TCU historian, is married to former TCU basketball coach Johnny Swaim. She's also a department coordinator at the university's library.

Appropriately, then, the Woman's Club is donating its assets — which Swaim said should be between $3,000 and $4,000 — to the library through the Friends of the TCU Library. This brings the club's relationship to the library full circle, she noted, because the first gift the club gave to the university was the stained glass window still seen on a west wall in the library.

Swaim said she'll miss the school's oldest standing organization.

"It served its usefulness — and well — for 75 years," she said.

Diamonds are a girls best friends, but remember pearls

By Anne-Marie Schiro
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — At a time when fashion seems to be going through a conservative phase, pearls look better than ever.

Remember Audrey Hepburn in "Breakfast at Tiffany's" with her throat swathed in pearls? Her style of understated chic has been inspiring many clothing and jewelry designers.

Angela Cummings designed a special collection for Bergdorf Goodman this spring using cultured, baroque and South Sea pearls in pink, gray and a golden tone in addition to the classic cream color. And Mikimoto, the company that developed the cultured pearl a century ago, just opened a new store at 730 Fifth Avenue, near 57th Street.

There are necklaces of fake pearls for as little as $20, the lowest price in the Carolee collection at Bloomingdale's. The best-selling styles are 15-inch single strands at $24 and 18-inch single strands at $28. That's about as classic as you can get.

Sesame Street Magazine now is in Spanish

NEW YORK (AP) — Children's Television Workshop has launched Padres de Sesame Street, the Spanish-language version of Sesame Street Parents magazine.

Although CTW has published local language versions of Sesame Street magazines in more than 12 countries since 1974, this is the first time two language editions have appeared in the same country, said CTW's June Tauber Golden.

CTW plans to distribute 400,000 copies of Padres de Sesame Street quarterly to medical offices of obstetricians-gynecologists, pediatricians, family and group practitioners. Half of the material in each issue is written exclusively for Hispanic families, with the rest translated from the English-language magazine, Golden said.

Class clowns typically in trouble

Teachers, parents should beware of the serious side of this behavior

By Barbara F. Meltz
N.Y. Times News Service

Louis Kruger was a class clown when he was growing up. You know, the kid who would choose the most serious or most tense or most boring moment of the day to say something clever or outrageous, something that would send classmates into fits of laughter and teachers into just plain fits.

An incident stands out in his mind. It is seventh grade English. A girl is giving a book review. The main character's name is Jerry Boner.

"'Boner' is slang for erection," says Kruger, "so just think about a classroom of puberty-age boys sitting through this serious presentation by a girl who doesn't know what the word means. They were dying. So the next time she mentioned his name, I burst out laughing. Suddenly, all the boys were laughing. I did that: I gave them permission to laugh. The poor girl didn't have the foggiest, but the teacher did. He gave me detention."

From a teacher's perspective, a child like Kruger is deadly.

"A teacher needs to maintain decorum. A class clown is a threat to that," says Kruger.

Which is why class clowns typically find themselves in trouble, being punished or put down for disruptive behavior.

The child, of course, doesn't see it that way. In fact, his goal is often downright altruistic.

"This child is literally sacrificing himself for the good of the group, making himself the butt of a joke in an effort to reduce tension in the classroom," says clinical child psychologist Rhoda Fisher. "He sees his role as taking care of other people, of making them feel better. He actually sees (clowning) as a responsibility." Fisher is co-author of "Pretend the World is Funny and Forever, A Psychological Analysis of Clowns, Comics and Actors" (Erlbaum, 1981).

THE MOTIVATIONS

Although it may feel to a teacher that a child is simply being mean, that's rarely what's going on. "It's not that this child is out to get the teacher," says Fisher, who is in private practice near Syracuse, N.Y. It's more that the child's goals get in the way of classroom management.

For instance, a child who feels socially inept, unpopular, unliked and unnoticed may clown around thinking, 'If I make classmates laugh, they'll like me.' He looks for any openings he can, regardless of what's going on in the classroom, explains psychologist Karen L. Bierman. A professor at Penn State University, she researches children's peer relationships.

For this child, clowning is a vehicle for success. "Any kind of attention is rewarding to him, even if the kids are yelling 'shut up' or 'sit down,'" she says.

Clowning can also be a cover-up for a child who feels academically inadequate. Kruger fell into this category.

"I was afraid of failing in school," he says. "Since I lacked confidence in myself academically, I needed some other way to achieve competency in the classroom. I cracked jokes."

OTHER REASONS why a child might turn to clowning include:

■ Feeling unnurtured. "This could be a child whose parents are very loving but don't get home until 7 at night," says Fisher. "At some level, he doesn't feel nurtured enough."

■ Lacking attention. In large families, it's often hard to get the attention you feel you deserve, says Kruger. Clowning gets it for you, even if it's not always positive attention.

■ Feeling over-burdened. Fisher says children who have inappropriate amounts of responsibility, or responsibility inis disruptive because he's a class clown need to ask themselves some questions, suggests developmental psychologist Steven Asher: Is he doing well in school? Does he have not only acquaintances, but real friends, kids he is nice to, kids who trust him? Does he eat and sleep well? Is he mostly in good spirits?

Often, the answers to those questions are positive. "Many class clowns are very successful in school, very popular, very kind, and very endearing in their humor," says Bierman. "Kids like them. So do teachers."

> 'Being a clown took a lot of effort.'
> — Louis Kruger, former class clown

A MATTER OF TIMING

Their only problem, she says, is that their timing is off: "They get in trouble for their inappropriateness."

With these children, Bierman tells teachers to acknowledge and appreciate a child's humor — "You really are a funny person; sometimes you crack me up" or, "At the right time, your humor helps our class" — but also to set clear expectations: "Breaking the class up during math makes it hard for some kids to concentrate and learn what they need to; it also makes it hard for me to teach. How can you be funny without being disruptive?"

She says it's better to laugh at something funny than stifle a laugh, scold a child, or get into a battle. Asher advises: "Go with a joke, make it work for you. Then move on."

Some suggestions for this child might be a "Comedy Journal," where he writes down his funny ideas, or writing a skit or play the class can produce. Children also can have "contracts" with teachers, where they agree to limit humor to sanctioned times.

For other children, clowning is part of a larger pattern of difficulties. Instead of being endearing, the clowning is goofy, rude, even obnoxious.

'You need to get at the root cause," says Asher. "Punishing, disciplining, rechanneling — that deals with a symptom only." Asher is profesor of educational psychology at the University of Illinois. His area of research is children's peer relationships.

Indeed, Kruger says that the discipline he received — detention hall, principal's office, parental reprimands — only challenged him. "I saw punishment as a game," he says. "How far could I push without getting into so much trouble that my parents would be brought into the picture?"

He credits a high school English teacher with helping him understand and conquer his clowning, and she did it in a very indirect way.

"As disruptive as I was, she would announce to the class, 'Louis is much smarter than he thinks he is.' Over time, I began to believe what she said. It gave me confidence to come out from behind my humor," says Kruger.

Fisher says most class clowns are above average in intelligence, have an excellent sense of humor, leadership qualities and a sense of social responsibility. But many of them don't do well in school because they get so caught up in their role as a funny person and don't have energy left for anything else, like homework and schoolwork. "Teachers often see them as someone who is stubborn and won't do the work. The truth is more likely that doing the work is far down on the kid's list of what needs to be done," Fisher says.

DEFINING MOMENT

Kruger says his grades were bad until high school. "Being a clown took a lot of effort," he says. "I thought about being funny all the time."

Kruger remembers one other defining moment that helped turn him around. It also involved a high school teacher.

"I was on a roll one day. The class was enjoying it immensely, but the teacher left the room in tears. She couldn't regain control. I felt horrible. It made me realize how much I was hurting people with my inappropriate timing," he said.

Kruger claims he is still a funny man. "I like to make people laugh," he says. "But I've improved my timing."

Focus is on sportswear for spring

By Diane Sustendal

NEW YORK (AP) — Inspired by leisure, America's best-known designers have taken to the sporting life for spring and summer.

Shorts, from short-short versions from the '40s to second-skin biking and jogging varieties to baggy boxer looks, turn up in numerous collections. Leotards and leggings take cues from wet suits. Running apparel and '50s Capri and toreador styles show off well-defined gams.

Western looks have an urbane flair. Second-skin variations on jeans are worn with very high-heeled sandals. Cowgirl jackets are embellished with rhinestones and roses to give an ultrafeminine touch. Bright bandana prints and checkered tablecloths, normally reserved for barn dances and picnics, accent bras and ballgowns.

As almost always in spring, there is a strong salute to maritime pursuits. Striped T-shirts recall the uniforms of French sailors and Venetian gondoliers. Jaunty pea jackets and middy blouses are accented with big brass buttons and officers' stripes and hashmarks on the sleeves. Designers team these nautical garments with pants, trousers, shorts, skirts and swimsuits in combinations destined for work or play.

Colors range from serious and utilitartian, black and workout gray, to classic spring hues of red, white, navy, pink and beige, to riotous electric green, acid yellow and shocking strawberry. Fabrics run from the most elegant linens, pinweight gabardines and wool crepe to sturdy cotton knits and twills and futuristic microfibers which breathe, stretch and define with every move. Patent leather, waterproof pearlized nylon and Lycra provide shine along with taffeta, satin and silk.

American fashion has for decades been universally associated with sportswear. Certainly spring-summer 1995 is a season when women around the world will look healthy, wealthy and fashionwise in clothes that take to the road, the beach, the air and the streets with a sense of application and appreciation.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters annual benefit planned

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

The ninth annual Bachelor Auction, benefiting Big Brothers/Big Sisters, will be Saturday at the Petroleum Club in Midland. Preview party and silent auction will be 6-7:30 p.m. The Bachelor Auction will begin at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are available at KGEE, Backstage, The Home Store, Luskey's, Janee's, A Way Out Travel and the Big Brothers/Big Sisters office. For more information call 687-0195.

In other parts of the country, signs of spring might include flowers blooming and birds nesting, but in West Texas the most noticeable signs of the season are sandstorms and the Big Brothers/Big Sisters Benefit Bachelor Auction.

While we can do without the sandstorms, the Bachelor Auction is a welcome sign of spring. Some of Midland's most eligible bachelors volunteer to dress up in tuxedos and parade around on stage while some of Midland's most eligible single women bid on the privilege of accompanying the bachelors on their preplanned date packages.

This year the benefit will be May 13 at the Petroleum Club. The preview party will be 6:15-7:30 p.m., and the auction itself will start at 7:30 p.m. Silent auction items will be on display for bidding beginning at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $15 for general admission and $25 for reserved table seating. Tickets are available at KGEE, Backstage, The Home Store, Luskey's, Janee's, A Way Out Travel and the Big Brothers/Big Sisters office. Call 687-0195.

The purpose of Big Brothers/Big Sisters is "To enhance the quality of life of children from single parent homes of all backgrounds by providing quality volunteers to act as positive role models, mentors and friends in stable, nurturing relationships to help children reach their maximum potential," according to information from Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

CURRENTLY, THE information goes on, the agency has made 148 child/adult volunteer matches, with about 150 children still on the waiting list.

The annual Bachelor Auction is the main fund raiser for Big Brothers/Big Sisters. "Educational and recreational opportunities for both matched and waiting children are a mail focus for 1995-95," the information stated.

A couple of this year's bachelors owe their participation in the auction to a mutual acquaintance who convinced them they needed to volunteer. David Donaway, volunteer bachelor, said, "William Howard is a car salesman for Jack Sherman. He talked me into it because it's for a good cause — and a trip to Vegas," where his date package will take him and the woman who successfully bids on him.

His partner in the auction is Lee Cook, who also knows Howard. "William Howard also discussed the benefits of Big Brothers/Big Sisters (with me). We felt compelled to participate," Cook said. And the trip to Las Vegas didn't hurt.

Bo Zertuche is another of the volunteer bachelors. He said a friend of his also was instrumental in his choice to participate in the auction. John Low, who is a board member, Zertuche said, "gave me a little background on what a good thing Big Brothers/Big Sisters does for the children in the community. I'm pleased to be a part of it." His date package also is a trip to Las Vegas, but not with Donaway and Cook.

Victor Hernandez, a board member with Big Brothers/Big Sisters, said the agency hopes to raise "anywhere from $20,000 to $30,000 from this (auction). It's what we're expecting." The funds raised are used for operating expenses, he said, and to support the existing child/adult volunteer matches and to help set up match for the 150 children still on the waiting list. "Most are boys," Hernandez said. "We have a real need for male volunteers."

DENNIS BLACK has served as auctioneer for the entire nine years of the auction's existence. He volunteers to participate "because it's one of the few charities I know of that all the money stays here locally," he said. The children served by Big Brothers/Big Sisters benefit from the event, and new volunteers may decide to join. "Besides that, it's fun," Black said.

Even though single men (and potential Big Brothers) are highlighted by the benefit auction, Big Sisters are an important part of the event too. Tara Brady, recently named Big Sister of the Year, has been a volunteer with the agency for about two and a half years. "You (as a volunteer) spend two to three hours a week with your Little Brother or Little Sister, minimum," she said. "You try to be a good role model for them."

Her Little Sister is 13 years old now. "We've been together since she was 11," Ms. Brady said. "I've seen her grow up a lot in these couple of years."

Her reasons for volunteering to be a Big Sister are that the child benefits from having someone in her life — "a friend or role model she can confide in, tell me about what's going on in her life," and that "knowing someone else values my opinion and looks up to me and has begun to aspire to do better in school and try to be a better person.

"It's she who matters, and I'm here for her," Ms. Brady said.

The Bachelor Auction itself "is good not only for the single men and women (in the community), it's an opportunity for people to support a worthy cause," she said.

Lamb chops can be low-fat meal

By Marian Burros
N.Y. Times News Service

Lovers of meat and potatoes can have low-fat meals if the meat is used in moderation. This menu of loin lamb chops is filled out by a dish of potatoes, asparagus and peas.

GINGER-GLAZED LOIN LAMB CHOPS

4 loin lamb chops, about ¾ pound total
4 tablespoons ginger marmalade, jalapeno jelly or other hot-sweet preserve

Turn on broiler, if using. Line pan with aluminum foil. Wash and dry chops; trim all excess fat. Prepare stove-top grill, if using.

If grilling, cook chops on one side until brown. Turn over, and spread some of preserves on browned top. Continue cooking to brown chop on second side, about 7 minutes for medium rare. Turn chops once more, spread with remaining preserves and serve. If broiling, brown chops on each side and spread each with preserves when finished cooking.

POTATOES, ASPARAGUS AND PEAS VINAIGRETTE

1 pound tiny new potatoes
2 teaspoons olive oil
2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
Enough dill to yield 2 tablespoons chopped
2 scallions
¾ pound asparagus
1 bunch arugula
1 cup frozen peas
½ teaspoon salt
Freshly ground black pepper to taste

Scrub potatoes; do not peel. In medium-size saucepan with water to cover, boil potatoes, covered, 10 to 20 minutes, depending on their size. In a large bowl mix the oil, vinegar and mustard. Wash, dry and chop dill; wash, trim and chop scallions; add dill and scallions to bowl. Wash and break asparagus stems at point where woody part meets tender part. Cut the asparagus just below the tips; then, cut the rest of the stem into ½-inch pieces. Break off tough stems from arugula; discard, and wash remaining arugula thoroughly to get rid of sand.

About 3 minutes before the potatoes have finished cooking, stir in the asparagus and continue cooking. Arrange arugula in flat serving dish. One minute before potatoes are finished cooking, stir in peas. Drain and spoon into bowl with dressing, and mix gently to coat. Season with salt and pepper, and arrange on arugula.

Herbs easy to grow, useful to have

By Deborah A. Benge-Frost

Some plants can be used to season, decorate, add fragrance, prepare teas and much more. What are these versatile plants? Herbs.

Benge-Frost

This is a time when we hear much about herbs, but don't know much about using them. In fact, you may even be wondering how to pronounce the word, herb. Let's take a look at this diverse group of plants.

Herbs are plants used for their flavor, fragrance, dye, cosmetic or medicinal properties. They are generally soft-stemmed, non-woody plants that die down to the ground during winter. Some are herbaceous perennials, a few biennials, some annuals and an occasional wood plant type.

One of the first thoughts associated with herbs is their use in foods to enhance or spice up various dishes. They are commonly used for their aromatic properties and are found in wreaths, potpourris and sachets. Many possess soothing and restorative effects used in teas and tisanes. In case you aren't familiar with tisane (I wasn't), it is a beverage or drink for medicinal purposes. Herbs range from small to large and from plain to beautiful. Even a small garden can accommodate a wide range of herbs for various uses.

Some of the common herbs are rosemary, chives, basil and spearmint, but the herb world is vast and impelling. If you took only the lemon scented herbs, you would be considering a large and interesting group of plants. Consider the mints. There are chocolate, orange, apple, peppermint, wintergreen, pineapple, curly, spearmint and other types of mints.

Herbs have been used by man since their creation. The early movements of man probably carried herbs from Europe to India and Eastern tribes brought others to Western Europe. The medicinal properties of many herbs lead some groups of people to label them with magical powers. Superstitions and old customs are associated with many herbs because of the potency some contained.

As early people began to settle down, herbs were often planted in gardens. Seeds of coriander have been found in the Egyptian tombs of the 21st dynasty, and caraway among the debris of the Lake Dwellers of Switzerland.

Many herbs have descriptive names that indicate some of the ways they have been used for centuries — aromatic, decorative, medicinal, hallucinogenic. Alecost (costmary), used to flavor beer and ale; catnip, a stimulant relished by those animals; bee balm (bergamot), with bright red flowers attractive to bees and hummingbirds; and herb o'grace (rue), once associated with repentance.

In decades past, door yard gardens were commonly conveniently located at the kitchen door and filled with herbs, some flowers and a few vegetables. This was such as practical custom that it is seeing a comeback among cooks and gardeners.

Many herbs are extremely easy to grow, being rather tenacious and adaptable. Some are so vigorous that they must be contained to keep them from overtaking the garden. Herbs are becoming easier to find these days in garden centers as transplants and seed. Many times you can find them located with the vegetable transplants or in specialty sections.

The world of herbs is vast and varied. Some herbs have different growing, harvesting and usable parts criteria. For example, the seeds of coriander are dried and used for seasoning foods; its leaves are picked fresh and used in salsas and salads, and often called cilantro or Chinese parsley. The flowers of corn poppies are used to color syrups and wines, while the flowers of chamomile are used to make a delicious tea. Ramp, a wild onion, is harvested to be used like green onions. The leaves, flowers and seeds of numerous other plants are often dried to scent potpourris and sachets.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service will host "Gifts from The Herb Garden" 1 p.m. and 6 p.m. May 16 at the Confederate Air Force Museum, 96000 Wright Drive at Midland Air Terminal. Included in the program will be information on growing, harvesting, drying, cooking and decorating with herbs.

Their medicinal qualities also will be discussed. County Extension Agents Debbie Benge Frost and Carol Arndt will conduct the program on growing herbs and cooking with them. Suellis Bryant of The Garden Company, will demonstrate the secrets of a herb garden. Nancy Mitchell of Tyme Will Tell, will discuss medicinal qualities, herb vinegars and lavender products.

Handout recipes, door prizes and lots of information will be available. Preregister by coming by the Midland County Extension Service office at 2445 E. Business Loop 20 (next to Midland County Exhibit building) or Ector County Extension Service office at 1010 E. 8th St. in Odessa.

Preregister by mail by sending $5 check or money order, made payable to Permian Basin Master Gardeners, to Attn: Herbs, Ector County Extension Service, 1010 E. 8th St., Odessa, Texas 79761.

With very little effort you can have fresh herbs at your back door to use in cooking, decorating and many other uses. For more information call 687-1351 or 335-3071.

Deborah Benge-Frost is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector Counties.

Brooklyn architectural landmark is unveiled — again

By Eve M. Kahn
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Last weekend in Brooklyn a 50-year solar eclipse came to an end.

At the former Williamsburgh Savings Bank, a beloved domed landmark at the base of the Williamsburg Bridge, workers stripped away plywood panels that had covered 20 oval etched-glass windows for decades, perhaps since World War II (amazingly, only 2 were too damaged to leave exposed.

Crowds gathered in the huge banking hall to watch the crews maneuver along a sooty catwalk 70 feet off the floor to unbolt wooden disks and let in shafts of white-frosted light.

"It's a very dirty job up here," said Candido Caamamo, a crew member with Arrow Restoration, which is executing the project for Platt Byard Dovell Architects. "And there's no room to move around. But it's a very beautiful building."

It's also a rare case of important architecture's surviving relatively unscathed in New York. The architectural historian and author Andrew Dolkart said in an interview that the great domed bank, now a branch of the Republic Bank for Savings, qualified as "one of the most significant buildings in American architecture." He added that it was "very avant-garde for its day."

George B. Post designed it with Italian Renaissance motifs around 1870, and it turned out to be a harbinger of the turn-of-the-century boom in neo-classical monuments. (Post himself went on to national prominence, designing early skyscrapers and the New York Stock Exchange.)

For its new $540,000 headquarters, the proud Williamsburgh Savings Bank happily splurged on fine finishing touches like adding gold leaf highlights to the dome's painted decorations and having the initials WSB etched into dome windows and even cast into door hinges.

No one seems to remember when or why the bank boarded up the windows and turned the hall's upper reaches into a gloomy cavern. Ken Lustbader, a preservationist with the New York Landmarks Conservancy, says he thinks it was probably done in the 1940's for wartime blackouts or to keep glass shards off the bank floor in case of air raids.

Or it might have been done simply to protect the painted spears, stars and bouquets from sun damage.

The bank added two small wings to the building, including one in 1908 that allowed men and women to do their banking separately (the men were relegated to the more modest space; the women got to enjoy the dome.

But aside from hanging neon signs outside and modernizing the main room's layout and furniture, the bank remodeled little else on the building.

"A great debt is owed to them for that," Dolkart said.

Republic took over Williamsburgh Savings Bank in 1987, and it plans to put its name into new neon signage, but otherwise it will just restore both inside and outside to its Gilded Age glory as a working bank and tourist attraction.

The three-year project is expected to cost about $6 million and is scheduled for completion next year.

Already, diners from the renowned Peter Luger steak house, across the street, often stop by to admire the bank, Ronnie Mitchell, the branch's assistant treasurer, said on Sunday as he craned his neck upward.

"The first thing they always do when they walk in the door is look up," he said. "Now, it will be something to see, with all that sky coming in."

Santa Fe offers history, art and fine dining

By Julie Cooper
N.Y. Times News Service

SANTA FE, N.M. — There are many ways to view the capital city of New Mexico.

You can come here for the skiing and experience the Santa Fe ski basin. As an art lover, you'll find probably more galleries per square block than in New York or Paris.

As for history, the Spaniards established Santa Fe as a capital city in 1610, and the city's churches, adobe homes and businesses reflect a careful attention to historic detail. But even before the Spaniards came, the cliff dwellings in the area had been abandoned.

At pueblos near Santa Fe, American Indians welcome you into their culture with dances and feasts that often are open to the public.

And don't forget the dining. Santa Fe is getting quite a reputation for both new and traditional Southwestern cuisine. One word of advice, though — don't try to pack everything into one long weekend.

The average visitor here makes it a three-day vacation, but many people may need that long just to recover from the change in altitude.

The Inn on the Alameda was a good base from which to explore Santa Fe. It was within walking distance of the plaza, art galleries along Canyon Road and fine restaurants. Small by big-city standards, the 66-room inn is ranked among the best of Santa Fe's luxury hotels.

Rooms, which start at $155/double occupancy, are very comfortable. Although there is no restaurant, there is room service from the breakfast buffet and area restaurants. The complimentary gourmet buffet breakfast contains 25 to 30 items and it's more than enough to get you through to a late lunch.

THE GERALD Peters Gallery, 439 Camino del Monte Sol, was built in 1925 as Casa Querida for writer Mary Austin ("The Land of Journey's Ending"), who lived here until her death in 1934, when the building became an art center.

The gallery, which was established in the 1970s, has an excellent reputation for its collection of classic Western art (Remington and Russell), the Santa Fe art colony (Georgia O'Keeffe) and contemporary painters and sculptors.

Peters handles the art from the estate of O'Keeffe, having sold some 170 of her works. A personal favorite hangs in his office, a front view of Rancho de Taos Church. But for the right price — $1.2 million — Peters says he'd part with it.

Nedra Matteucci's Fenn Galleries, 1075 Paseo de Peralta, is known for its 19th and 20th century American art with an emphasis on early Taos and Santa Fe painters. But it was the sculpture that was the most appealing.

The outdoor sculpture garden was an oasis of green with fountains showcasing the works of Dan Ostermiller and Glenna Goodacre.

Ostermiller's bronze bigger-than-life rabbits put whimsy on a giant scale. Goodacre, famous for her Vietnam Women's Memorial Project in Washington, has some wonderful work here, including bronzes of American Indians and dancing children.

If your taste runs more to Bugs Bunny than bronze bunnies, head over to the Chuck Jones Showroom, 135 W. Palace Ave.

Here the 82-year-old creator of Bugs, Daffy Duck, Elmer Fudd and Pepe Le Pew has established his showroom featuring lithographs, sculpture and oil paintings. If you're not up on Jones' work, there are TV monitors around the showroom that run his cartoons.

THE WORK does not come cheap, but is fun to see. Many years ago, animation studios threw away the handpainted cels, but wise collectors took to Dumpster diving to save what has become a pricey collectible. Jones' only other showroom is in Southern California.

At Santa Fe's central plaza, watch out for teens skateboarding, but be sure to check out the monument that has been made politically correct.

The inscription reads, "To the heroes who have fallen in the various battles with Indians in the territory of New Mexico." It was erected in the early part of this century and the word "savage" recently was chiseled out.

Investigate the side streets off the plaza for unusual shopping, and check out the Indian women who sell silver and turquoise jewelry from the sidewalks.

For real bargains, head to Trader Jack's Flea Market on State Highway 84/285 near the Santa Fe Opera.

On a cold, windy day in early March, about 50 vendors were selling everything from silver and turquoise jewelry and dolls to handmade furniture, Oriental rugs, old saddles and children's swings made from tires. The jewelry was one-half to one-third less expensive than the Plaza prices.

There are a number of walking tours of Santa Fe: Afoot in Santa Fe, (505) 983-3701; and Aboot About Santa Fe Tours, (505) 988-2774. We took a Nambe Pueblo Tour, which is Indian owned and operated, to Puye Cliff Dwellings and the Santa Clara Pueblo.

THE EXCAVATED ruins of Puye Cliff Dwellings are a glimpse into early American history, when some 1,500 people inhabited this city in the cliffs between 1250 and 1577.

Climb ladders to the top for a better view. Look closely to see the faint cave paintings.

The cliff dwellings, 22 miles from Santa Fe on State Road 30, are managed by the Indians. Admission is $5 for adults, $4 for seniors and children.

We were lucky that our visit to the Santa Clara Pueblo fell on a day of feasting and dancing. The members of the pueblo's Winter Clan were doing a cloud dance, and between dances we were invited to their homes to enjoy a feast.

Pueblo etiquette dictates that visitors not applaud or talk during the dancing, which is a prayer, and photography or sketching are not allowed.

The pueblo is the spiritual center for residents, not a tourist attraction. Cemeteries are off-limits to non-Indians.

IF YOU GO:

Other sights/museums: Institute of American Indian Arts Museum, 108 Cathedral Palace, Contemporary American Indian artists from around the nation.

Loretto Chapel, 211 Old Santa Fe Trail, which olds the beautiful "magic staircase."

New Mexico cuisine is a treat

By Julie Cooper
N.Y. Times News Service

SANTA FE, N.M. — If you think the cuisine in this part of the country is only blue corn tortillas and chilies, get out a fork and prepare to eat your words.

"Red or green?" used to be the question for Santa Fe diners; now it's "How do we choose where to eat?" So many choices, so little time. The average out-of-state visitor spends only three days here, hardly enough time to give the taste buds a tryout. But if you plan your Santa Fe visit right, you may be able to sample a fair amount of its cuisine.

The Inn of the Anasazi is less than 5 years old, and the restaurant has been recognized with a 1994 AAA Four Diamond Award, the 1994 Taste of Santa Fe Awards, 1992 Food Arts Magazine Silver Spoon Award and Conde Nast Traveler 1993 Distinguished Restaurant Award.

But enough about awards — how's the food? Wonderful. The brochure touts it as "Foods of the Earth from the Native American, foods of the Soul from the Northern New Mexican and foods of substance from the American Cowboy."

Appetizers include Anasazi Flatbread with Fire Roasted Sweet Peppers and Tomato-Olive Salsa ($9.50) and Achiote and Sage Seared Buffalo Carpaccio with Bitter Greens, Juniper Lime Oil and Roasted Pinon ($9.50). Entrees range pricewise from Seasonal Vegetable Platter with Mixed Aioli and Salsa ($17.50) to Local Natural Lamb Rack with Sun Dried Tomato-Mint Salsa, Roasted Garlic and Seared Chard ($29).

The Inn of the Anasazi is located at 113 Washington Ave., within walking distance of the plaza district. The quietly elegant Southwestern dining room seats 96. There is also a fixed-price dinner for $35.

We discovered that La Choza, 905 Alarid St., was a favorite spot for Saturday lunches with locals and tourists. The posole was a popular menu item ($2 cup/$3.50 bowl). The hominy-based stew was rather bland, but the No. 1 enchilada plate ($6.25) was hot, hot, hot. The portions were huge; the waitresses flew about the room refilling water and tea. New Mexican taste buds tend to favor pork fillings, green chilies, potatoes and lots of cheese.

At Julian's Restaurant, 221 Shelby St., it was back to the elegant side of Santa Fe dining. This delightful Italian restaurant featured so many items it was hard to select one meal.

The seven appetizers included Calamari Ripieno in Umido (squid stuffed with clams, bell pepper and herbs in tomato sauce) for $7; Salmone al Affumicato con Rafano (shrimp sauteed with tomatoes, basil and mascarpone cheese) for $9; and Melanzana Griglia con Peperoni (grilled eggplant with fresh, roasted peppers and balsamic vinegar) for $5.

The six salads offered were in the $5 to $7 range.

Nine pastas are on the menu, ranging from the $12 Spaghettini Con Pomodoro Arrosto (pasta, olive oil, garlic, anchovies and oven-roasted tomatoes) to the $20 Capellini Con Gamberi Alla Marinara (shrimp in marinara sauce served over angel hair pasta).

And if this wasn't enough, there are eight entrees. When it came time to make a decision, it was Insalata di Caprino (radicchio, red oak and Boston lettuces with fresh goat cheese in a walnut vinaigrette, for $7), and the entre Medaglione di Vitello con Zafferano (veal medallions sauteed with fresh mushrooms, saffron, lemon and cream, with asparagus, for $24).

A new entry into the Santa Fe dining experience is the Corn Dance Cafe, 409 W. Water St. The year-old restaurant is owned and operated by Loretta Barret Oden, who bills herself as "a proud member of the Potawatomi Indian tribe of Oklahoma."

The menu is pure American Indian, from the Butternut Squash Soup with Roasted Pumpkin Seeds ($4.95) to the Wood-Grilled Trout stuffed with Apples and Mint, served with Blue Corn Wild Rice Johnny Cakes ($19.95).

And let's not forget the buffalo prepared many ways: Spicy Buffalo Sausage, Black Beans and Corn Chili with Puebla Salsa ($8.95), Barbecued Buffalo Brisket ($8.95) and Wood-Grilled Buffalo Ribeye with Mashed Potatoes & Roasted Garlic ($24.95).

Corn Dance has one of the best presentations of well-prepared, unusual foods. It is a small restaurant, and construction around it has apparently hurt business. Here's hoping it is still there a year from now.

If you want to leave Santa Fe with an understanding of Southwestern cooking, check out the Santa Fe School of Cooking and Market. Located on the plaza at 116 W. San Francisco St., the school's classes are 2 1/2 hours long and you get to eat what the chef demonstrates. And that's a four-course meal.

There are six chefs on staff. Jeff Pufal, chef for a Monday morning class in early March, is the catering director at El Dorado Hotel in Santa Fe. On the menu was Marinated Grilled Salmon with Ginger-Lime Butter and Corn, Tomato and Black Bean Salsa, Green Salad with Orange-Sherry Vinaigrette, Southwestern Scalloped Potatoes with Green Chili and Cheese and Vanilla Flan.

Classes start at 10 a.m.; lunch is at 12:30 p.m. Cost of this class was $43, but prices vary according to the menu. While Pufal was creating, members of the class called out questions and took notes. Then we ate — and it was just as good as (some say better than) the finest Santa Fe restaurants.

Programs to offer educational vacation opportunities this summer

N.Y. Times News Service

Two California-based programs are offering educational variations on the standard vacation this summer. The University Research Expeditions Program of the University of California has more than 20 projects, from surveying the remains of ancient monasteries and churches in Ireland to monitoring pelican behavior in northern California. Most of the two- to three-week expeditions are conducted in the summer. A program studying coyotes and sheep to develop nonlethal predator-control methods in Mendocino, Calif., from June 17-30 and July 2-15 requires a contribution of $745. A project to assess damage caused by nature and tourism to the prehistoric rock art on Easter Island from July 2-14 and July 16-28 costs $1,965. Call (510) 642-6586.

The Lost World Trading Company will offer field schools in archeological techniques in the Caribbean and southern California. Prehistoric sites on the Caribbean island of St. Vincent will be excavated for three weeks between Aug. 3-24; the program costs $827 a week. Working on Native American prehistoric sites from July 30-Aug. 27 entails living in a tented base camp near San Diego and costs $395 a week. More information: (209) 847-5393.

On a cattle drive across the Big Piney, Wyo., family ranch, Tara Miller rides herd on stragglers. Cowboying is hard work, Miller says, but rewarding: "There are some moments on those drives going up the mountains — oh, there are moments!" Miller is featured in Ronnie Farley's book, "Cowgirls: Contemporary Portraits of the American West."

Photographer's new book focuses on lives of American cowgirls

By Joan Brunskill

NEW YORK (AP) — Photographer Ronnie Farley says her first encounter with cowgirls was here in the city, listening to stories about women who ran cattle and rode broncs and bulls.

She was fascinated, she writes, drawn into sharing their story by "learning about the women who had made their mark on the West since the frontier days — and continue to do so today."

The book she has photographed and edited, "Cowgirls: Contemporary Portraits of the American West" (Crown, $24 paperback), updates what she learned: "Hollywood myth and romanticism may have forgotten them, but with or without their husbands and families, women were an integral part of western history."

Farley went out to meet, work with and photograph today's Western women. She uses their own words, their shared thoughts, as accompanying text for the black-and-white photographs that open equally perceptive windows into their world.

"It was never easy being a cowgirl," Farley writes. She found it still isn't, accompanying her subjects on a cattle drive, at a calf birth, feeding livestock on a bitter winter morning, hanging out at rodeos.

Among the women she spent time with are Talli Manning, photographed on a Wyoming cattle drive; Landa Guio, pulling a newborn calf; Mary Owens, moving sheep out to pasture; Gretchen Sammis, checking on her horses.

Readers meet Eleanor Johnston, proud of her descent: her great-grandfather was born a slave in Kentucky, he and his son were pioneer homesteaders in Wyoming. Now she's worried by the effect of industry and man's greed on the environment. "These mountains aren't as clear as they used to be," she says.

The chapter "Rodeo Gals" introduces readers to another subculture and a group of women including a star of rough-stock competition in the Women's Professional Rodeo Circuit named Jan Youren. She's a grandmother from Crouch, Idaho, with eight children and 15 grandchildren, a world-champion bronc rider and a 1993 Cowgirl Hall of Fame honoree.

Tara Miller drives cattle, trains horses, brings up the kids, at the family ranch at Big Piney, Wyo. Sometimes it's just plumb work: "As far as being a cowpuncher, I get real tired of it," she says.

But she also has more than pleasant memories of cowboying, as do so many of the women. A refrain emerges from their reflections on their lives: The hard, hard work is balanced by great, even spiritual rewards.

"There are moments on those drives going up the mountains — oh, there are moments," says Miller.

"God, it's just so beautiful, and because it's just so wonderful, I feel enlightened."

Village boasts of romantic history

GRETNA GREEN, Scotland (AP) — This tiny village on the English-Scottish border has a romantic past. For years it was the destination of eloping British couples seeking hasty marriages.

In the 18th century, under Scots law, couples could merely declare their wish to marry, without prior notice, and be wedded.

At Gretna Green, as many as 200 such ceremonies a year were performed by the village blacksmith in his forge.

Gretna Green's "marital loophole" ended in 1940, when such irregular marriages were prohibited by law.

Red River, N.M.

One hundred years ago a little mountain community nestled in a small valley of the northern Sangre de Cristo Mountains became officially the town of Red River, New Mexico. Over the years Red River has become increasingly popular with tourists looking for a vacation in a unique mountain setting. Nestled in a picturesque valley of an area known as The Enchanted Circle, Red River is such a place. Its location just north of Taos makes it the ideal home base for outdoor adventures, scenic tours and incomparable sightseeing.

Nostalgia abounds within the historic buildings that now house exciting shops, sumptuous dining and cozy lodging. Visitors will also enjoy mountain activities such as hiking, fishing, mountain streams and high lakes, horseback riding, jeep and ATV touring, trail biking and cycling tours, and much more. This year Red River will be celebrating centennial with parades, parties and special events. Square dancing, rodeos, arts and crafts, shows, and outdoor concerts are also available for the whole family. Nearby attractions include river rafting, visits to historical sites, museums, Indian pueblos and artesian shows. A historical train ride through spectacular scenery is just a short drive away.

Take advantage of Red River Resorts' Early Summer Special that is being offered from June 1 through 15. If you book lodging through us for at least 3 nights, you get the third night free! Through this special Bobcat Pass is also offering discounts on their activities that are booked during the offering dates. To obtain more information regarding their discounts, call 505-754-2769.

Nothing beats a vacation in the mountains and nothing beats the service offered by Red River Resorts. We have affordable rates to fit every budget and group rates are also availabe. Red River Resorts can assist you with your vacation plans all year round. Please call us at 800-470-7878.

For A Rio Cool Cowboy Summer Try Boots & Saddles

Costilla, New Mexico- Boots & Saddles, SKI RIOS's spectacular summer program will begin Saturday, June 17. Boots & Saddles capitalizes on entertainment for the whole family. It consists of a week long stay with a full spectrum of activities, including camping, hiking, fly fishing, mountain biking, campfire cookouts and concerts.

Michael Martin Murphey, America's #1` Cowboy Singer will be on hand during specific weeks in July presenting hour-long seminars on Western Music & Art and Cowboy Poetry & Western Storytelling. He will wrap up each week singing and entertaining under the stars with special outdoor concert series called Welcome to the West.

General Manager, Lawrence Smith whose philosophy centers around providing enjoyment and entertainment for the whole family advocates, "Don't send your kids to camp, go to camp with your kids." He sees the week long mountain getaway as a special time for families. "A time when they can get away form the cities and enjoy the beauty and serenity of the mountains together."

Boots & Saddles begins on a Saturday and ends on a Saturday. Food will be served family style. Along with planned activities there will be plenty of time for special local area excursions. Benefits of the program can also be purchased on a daily basis but require advance reservations. The program will conclude on August 19.

For more information and reservations, call 1-800-2 ASK RIO.

La Fonda

It's rich tri-cultural heritage, its reputation as a premier art center and its unique architecture draw visitors from around the world to Santa Fe. And for many of them La Fonda is Santa Fe -- a landmark hotel famous for its timeless charm and its commitment to excellent service.

There has been a fonda, or inn, on the site of the present La Fonda since Santa Fe was founded in 1610. La Fonda's reputation for providing the best in Southwestern hospitality has attracted generations of celebrities.

Each of La Fonda's rooms and suites is unique. Choose from popular features such as mountain views, balconies and fireplaces. Enjoy distinctive old-fashioned touches throughout -- colorful hand-decorated wooden furniture and room accents painted by local Pueblo Indian artists - plus modern services including air conditioning, cable television, room service and covered parking.

Santa Fe is located in the foothills of the Rocky Mountains at an altitude of 7,000 feet, and enjoys a comfortable high desert climate. Remarkable blue skies and warm sunshine give guests ample opportunity to take advantage of La Fonda's year round outdoor swimming pool as well as our patio bar and roof garden restaurant (open seasonally from late spring through early fall).

Don't miss our famous margaritas! Be sure to visit our bar and cantinita for cocktails and enjoy live music and dancing nightly.

For more information, give us a call at 1-800-523-5002 or (505) 982-5511.

Terrace Towers Lodge

Are you dreaming of a vacation in the Swiss Alps but can't quite make it this year? Try Terrace Towers Lodge and Condominium in Red River, New Mexico. The lodge with its brightly painted exterior and cutout bears could just as easily be in Switzerland as in the northern Sangre de Cristo mountains. Guests of the lodge will enjoy the best mountain views available in this quaint mountain community.

The lodge and adjacent condominium buildings have been completely renovated without losing any of their distinctive charm. Full sized apartments and kitchenette units with 1 or 2 bedrooms are available. Picnic areas, a playground, outdoor hot tub, guest laundry facility and barbecue deck are also provided. Pets are allowed in the lodge kitchenette units.

Terrace Towers Lodge is offering an early summer special June 1 through 15. Stay 3 nights or more and receive the 3rd night free. Throughout the summer we offer the 7th night free for each booking of 6 nights.

So why go to Switzerland? Come enjoy the mountains of Red River, New Mexico. For rates and information, call 800-59-LODGE (695-6343).

COME TO ABILENE FOR R & R

Whether you come for RIBS and RELLENOS, RODEOS and RACING or REUNIONS and RENDEZVOUS, you will find a little bit of everything in Abilene, and most of it with a special West Texas twist.

Located in west Central Texas, 152 miles east of Midland, Abilene is the center of a 22 country area some people call the Texas Midwest. Abilene is the hub of a diversified economy that includes manufacturing, retail trade, farming and ranching, medical care and petroleum.

Finding something to do in Abilene is not a challenge (unless, of course, your stay is short and the only challenge is what you CANNOT do)! Entertain and educate the family at the Abilene Zoo and Discovery Center. On display are more than 500 specimens of birds, mammals, reptiles, amphibians and invertebrates. The Discovery Center, a climate controlled facility, gives visitors a year-round chance to compare habitats in the Southwestern United States and Madagascar.

Next, take a trip downtown to the Grace Cultural Center/Museums of Abilene. The restored and Renovated 1909 Grace Hotel serves as home to three museums. The Art Museum displays permanent and special exhibits of folk art, sculpture, contemporary and western art and photography. The Historic Museum uses recreated rooms, memorabilia and photographs to offer you a glance of Abilene's history from 1900 to 1945. The Children's Museum offers hand-on activities that let you experience art, science, technology and more. Fun and excitement await children of ALL ages!

Visit the Paramount Theater, a restored 1930 theater. Created in the Spanish-Moorish revised mission style, the interior of the A Paramount is rich in detail. The auditorium features Moorish towers with domed turrets flanking the stage. Slowly drifting clouds and twinkling stars grace the velvet blue sky.

While downtown, dine at Cypress Street Station, Bogies, McLemore Bass (with an old fashioned soda fountain) or there are tea rooms and mouthwatering desserts.

Head south 14 miles to Buffalo Gap and step back 100 years at the Buffalo Gap Historic Village. Among the 19 buildings at the Village are a log cabin, the original Taylor Country courthouse and jail, a dentist and doctor's office, a schoolhouse and much more!

Don't forget to save time for specialty shopping, live performances, special events or a baseball Game! But if you DO want to come to Abilene for a little R & R,. check into a hotel, put your feet up and RELAX, you can do that, too!

For Abilene information, call 1-800-727-7704 or stop by our visitor center at the newly renovated T & P Depot, located in downtown Abilene.

ANGEL FIRE

Since 1967, Angel Fire Resort has catered to southwestern golf enthusiasts with top quality play on one of New Mexico's great courses. The entire course is surrounded by the beautiful Sangre de Cristo range of the southern Rockies including Mount Wheeler, new Mexico's highest peak. Summer temperatures are right on par with our course at a perfect 72!

The Angel Fire Country Club offers spectacular play on our 18-hole, 6,600 yard PGA rated championship course. The beautiful, yet demanding, course offers links-style play on the front nine, with smaller greens and plenty of bunkers, while the back nine incorporates a longer-playing American design that meanders through two canyons of Aspen, Pine and Spruce. The course has been the sight of numerous pro-ams and several prestigious tournaments, including the Premier Invitational, regarded by many as the finest amateur golf event in the Southwest.

Private and group lessons are available from club pro Chris Stewart or assistant pro Albert Lund. Our well stocked Pro Shop features the finest in equipment and clothing, and our Driving Range is open daily. To schedule tee-times or arrange tournaments call our Pro Shop today at 505/377-3055.

Looking for a little adventure? Our Summer Adventure programs offer white water rafting on the Rio Grande, horseback riding in the Sangre de Cristo Mountains, gold panning in the beautiful Moreno Valley or Ghost busting at the haunted Saint James Hotel? We also offer specially scheduled visits to Taos Pueblo, and Taos galleries. Join us this summer for a musical adventure, as Angel Fire hosts the One World Music Festivals, July 1-4 and September 23-24.

Angel Fire's Summer adventure program offers guided river rafting trips down the famed Rio Grande with Taos outfitters Native Sons Adventures.Trips are offered Tuesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, the cost is $43 per person for all rafting equipment, guides, transportation, lunch and a snack.

For the urban cowboy we offer a beautiful trail ride in the historic Moreno Valley. A two hour ride is offered Sundays and Mondays throughout the season and is $40 per person for horses, guides, lunch and transportation.

Whether you are looking for a family vacation or a summer adventure, our well-trained staff can assist in all of your planning needs. To book the Southwest's best vacation value, call Angel Fire Resort at 1-800-633-7463.

Lubbock, Texas

Offering the vast array of activities and facilities of a large city while maintaining the hospitality and relaxing atmosphere of a small town, Lubbock provides an excellent weekend getaway, just two hours away.

Buddy Holly put Lubbock on the map as an entertainment center and the city is carrying on the rich West Texas entertainment tradition today. On any given weekend, you can see a performance by the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra, a play by a theater company, or one of Lubbock's ballet companies. Live music is an abundant resource at several clubs and other venues. The Depot District, a group of restaurants and night clubs within walking distance of each other, offers everything from country music to blues to a dance club.

If you are interested in learning more about the history of the Llano Estacado region, several sites await your visit. The Lubbock Lake Landmark State Park offers tours of the archeological dig that has unearthed artifacts placing man in the region as far back as 12,000 years. Those interested in the more resent history can visit the Ranching Heritage Center of the Texas Tech Museum. The open air museum is a collection of 33 restored ranch buildings including barns, a train depot, dug-our homes, and luxurious cattle barons' house. On Sundays, docents in period costume man the buildings and provide information about the history of their building.

If science is more appealing to you, the city offers several opportunities to explore. Lubbock is the medical center of the region providing health care second to none. Scientist are conducting research in a wide variety of fields at Texas Tech University. While on campus, you can stop at the Moody Planetarium at the Texas Tech Museum. The Omnimax Theater places you in the action as it features science and nature movies shown on a six-story high domed screen. The adjoining Science Spectrum is a hands-on science museum with exhibits for everyone from preschool age up to senior citizens.

Looking for some wining and dining? Look no further. Lubbock has a variety of restaurants offering food to please any palate. Lubbock is also home to three award-winning wineries, Pheasant Ridge, Cap*Rock, and Texas most award-winning winery, Llano Estacado. Harvest and grape crush begin in July and run through September.

There is no better way to take advantage of the outstanding weather that to spend and afternoon outdoors. You can enjoy fishing at a local lake, or hit the links at one of Lubbock's six public golf courses.

If you would rather be a spectator than a participant, Lubbock has sporting events going on year 'round. Texas Tech offers top notch collegiate athletics as the football team, men's and women's basketball teams qualified for postseason play, and the baseball team is currently ranked in the top ten in the nation. Baseball continues even when school is out as the Lubbock Crickets begin play in the Texas Louisiana League this summer.

Lubbock celebrates its rich cultural heritage through a variety of festivals such as the National Cowboy Symposium and Celebration and the Fiestas del Llano Celebration. Other major events include the 4th on Broadway Celebration on July 4th, the Panhandle South Plains Fair, the Lubbock Arts Festival, and the Farmer Stockman Show. We even take advantage of the West Texas winds with the Buffalo Beano Kite Fly and Frisbee Fling.

Lubbock offers several choice in accommodations, as we have 30 hotels with more under construction, several bed and bedfast, and RV parks.
For more information, call the Convention and Tourism Bureau for Lubbock at 800-692-4035

Reservations By Internet Ready For Business And Private Travelers

Who hasn't spent agonizingly long minutes trying to book reservations for airplane trips, hotels, tours and rental cars by talking endlessly to a travel agent who in turn is consulting a myriad of schedules, books and special offers? Then, the wait grew even longer while the agent consulted with airline representatives, hotel reservation clerks, etc., and promised to call back. Not only was everyone in this loop spending a lot of time waiting, but productive hours were ebbing away, never to return.

Now, Travel Solutions in San Antonio, a revolutionary travel agency to begin with, is jumping ahead to the next century by joining the Internet. As soon as you read this article, you will be able to reach Travel Solutions at their Web site and answer a few simple questions, state your intentions or needs, and in a short time your best available possible routes and prices will come back to you. You will have 24 hours to make up your mind to accept or reject the booking Travel Solutions holds for you.

All of this will happen without your needing to talk directly to anyone. And, by the way, it can be done at any time of day or night, seven days a week. Business persons, who fully realize that time is money, should immediately see that lost time will vastly decrease with this new system. Private travelers will also benefit, because if they have a computer with a modem at home, they can also avoid taking time away from other important activities during the day.

The simplest way to say it is that control and convenience are placed in the hands of the traveler. The client needs to know the answer to questions like this: if an airplane routing saves $100.00 over another one, but requires three more hours than the first, is his/her time worth the $100.00?

Preparing for the Scharbauer Dedication

Eileen Piwetz, director of Institutional Advancement and Effectiveness and Midland College President David Daniel look at the newly installed bricks for the Midland College Court of Honor in Beal Plaza. The Plaza is being readied for the dedication of the Scharbauer Student Center at 11 a.m., Thursday.

The Student Center is being renamed to honor the Scharbauer's $1 million gift to the Chaparral Circle Endowment Fund.

The public is invited to attend the ceremony that will include a keynote address by State House of Representatives member Tom Craddick. The formal dedication will be made by a member of the Midland College Board of Trustees. The public also is invited to attend a reception in the Roadrunner Room following the ceremony.

MC hosts Senior Citizens Day

More than 600 persons are expected Tuesday, May 9, for MC's annual Senior Citizens Day at Chaparral Center.

Coming from numerous senior centers in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico, they'll gather for fellowship, entertainment and a barbecue luncheon.

A number of these folks have attended every one of these gatherings we have hosted," said Donna Hewett, special events coordinator for Midland College. "They look forward to seeing friends from other towns, but they especially enjoy the entertainment."

Following registration and introductions, the entertainment begins at 9 a.m. and continues until at least 2:30 p.m.

The entertainment schedule is: 9-9:20 a.m. "Casa Dancers" from Casa de Amigos, Midland; 9:25-9:45 a.m. "Golden Guild Singers" from Southeast Senior Center, Midland; 9:50-10:10 a.m. "The Golden Oldies" from Ward County Senior Center; 10:15-10:35 a.m., "College Kids" from the Midland College Day Care Center; 10:40-11 a.m. "Kitchenette Symphony" from the Dellwood Senior Center, Midland and 11:05-11:25 a.m. "Dellwood Dancers" from Dellwood Senior Center.

After lunch, the entertainment resumes: 12:30-12:50 p.m. "Kitchen Band" from Scurry County Senior Center; 12:55-1:15 p.m. "Casa Singers" from Casa de Amigos; 1:20-1:40 p.m. "Recycled Teens With Elvis the D.J." from Seminole Senior Citizens Center; 1:45-2:05 p.m. "Singing Swinging Seniors" from Hobbs Senior Center and 2:10-2:30 p.m. "Busy Bees" from McCamey Senior Citizens Services, Inc.

ELISE COOMBES

New graduates important for Texas' economic future

"Community colleges are the spark that lights the fuel to power economic growth in Texas" states a report from the Texas Association of Community Colleges.

The role of the community college has never been more important. The economic focus in Texas has grown to include the state's vast need for human resources in addition to natural resources. Quality education is crucial to economic development and this makes community colleges a "catalyst" for the development of the current and future work-force.

These issues place even more importance on the 22nd annual Commencement Ceremony at Midland College when more than 250 persons are candidates for graduation.

Coombes

The ceremony, is scheduled for 7 p.m., Friday, May 12, in the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center.

Midland College President David E. Daniel, Ed.D., will read from essays "Farewell to June" by Jana Morrison and "The Conquered Victor" by Danny Valenzuela.

Morrison was recognized as one of 20 outstanding community college students in the nation when she was named to the first team 1995 All-USA Two-Year College Academic Team. Valenzuela, was named to the All-USA second-team. The awards are given by USA Today newspaper, the American Association of Community Colleges and Phi Theta Kappa, the national community college academic honorary society.

Also, five members of the graduating class will be announced as winners of two-year scholarships from the Fasken Foundation to attend universities in Texas.

Winners of a new scholarship also will be announced. The scholarship is the Leonardo B. and Eva Carrasco Commitment to Education Scholarship. The scholarship is presented by the A.T. Carrasco Educational Foundation. The winners will be announced by Dr. Arnulfo Carrasco, Midland College graduate and owner and Medical Director of the Texas Pain Institute in San Antonio.

The Midland College Community Band, conducted by Walter Osadchuk, will perform the processional and recessional for the program. Vocalist Beth Dufford will perform "The Star-Spangled Banner," and Dow Jones Average will perform at the reception following the ceremony.

Elise Coombes is Midland College public relations director.

"Saying 'Thank You' adequately isn't always that easy, but we would sure like to try. When I say WE, I mean all of the employees and management of the City of Midland. We wish to express our sincere gratitude to all of our citizens who are or who have been members of the Midland Volunteer Program."

Paul T. Tryson, Coordinator of Volunteer Services
City of Midland Volunteer Program, 685-7425

"CSS' 1200 volunteers are the 'heartbeat' of our agency! They are the driving force in delivering meals, making visits and phone calls, and doing home repairs for the homebound elderly and disabled. They also contribute invaluable time and talents to special projects through RSVP, the CSS Auxiliary, Garage Sale, and Senior Centers."

Connie Glover, Executive Director
Community & Senior Services, 689-5693

"We wouldn't have a D-FY-IT program in Midland without the help of the wonderful volunteers who assist with drug testing and various other duties. As we expand the program to the 7th, 8th and 9th grades we will continue to need the help of those interested in keeping our youth away from alcohol and other drugs."

Joan Johnson, Executive Director
D-FY-IT of Midland, 685-7126

"Our volunteers are the reason we are able to provide quality services to over 900 area youth. Our programs provide educational, athletic, and recreational opportunities for youth. Without our volunteers, the resources and manpower necessary to provide these services would not be available."

Jon Far, Executive Director
Boys & Girls Club of Midland, 683-5297

"Midland Rape Crisis Center volunteers are a lifeline to survivors of rape and incest. Thank you volunteers for shattering the myths in your speeches, for carrying the pager and answering the hotline! It is through your caring embrace of our community that hope abounds. Thank You!"

Lauri Barber, Executive Director
Midland Rape Crisis Center, 682-7273

"Priceless donations at the Midland Senior Center include the 175 volunteers that contribute regularly to the daily activities and special projects occurring within the center."

Kathleen Gilluly, Director
Midland Senior Center, 686-1627

Problem Pregnancy Center volunteers have been a hand extended in time of trouble or need to women and their children in this community. They listen with a tender heart, then, help with practical assistance, resources and referrals. They are awesome in commitment and we are blessed to have them.

Connie Snow, Executive Director
Problem Pregnancy Center, 683-6072

The Housing Authority of the City of Midland salutes and appreciates all our gracious volunteers, from the 'member' volunteer with a specific task, to the nice person who just does what needs doing. Whether a tenant or a member of the wider community, your thoughtfulness and efforts are noticed and appreciated. THANK YOU!

Tina Howard, Executive Director
Housing Authority of the City of Midland, 682-0011

Faye Lehenbuer of Cottonwood Farms displays two of the ostrich chicks she will show during the "Be a Tourist in Your Own Home Town" exhibit from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Wednesday at Centennial Plaza downtown. In addition, she will serve 1,000 escargot, which were grown in Midland.

Juice the Moose and Dr. Petro will be among those greeting area residents 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Wednesday at Centennial Plaza when the Midland Convention and Visitors Bureau Tourism Committee presents "Be a Tourist in Your HomwTown."

"I'm all for it," tourism committee member Jane Phares said of the exhibit. "I think it's exciting. It's amazing. Whatever is in your own backyard you forget about. Being made aware of what's here gives you a sense of pride; let's you know what you can visit and helps you become an ambassador."

The week of May 7-13 is National Tourism Week. In 1994, conventions and tourists brought an estimated $5 million to Midland's economy. The Texas Department of Commerce ranks Midland as 12th highest metropolitan area in the state in "visitor days."

Wednesday was selected for the "Be a Tourist" exhibit because that is the same day the Business Expo Fair will be in progress at Midland Center.

"It was a good idea to join forces," Ms. Phares said. "We will be outside in the plaza and will feature all kinds of area attractions."

Ms. Phares is with the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and Library Hall of Fame, which will bring Dr. Petro to the exhibit.

"Dr. Petro is our cartoon character," Ms. Pharessaid . "When Lyndon Marquez worked here as marketing manager, it was through his efforts and the sponsorship of Harrigan's that Dr. Petro came to life.

"He actually is depicted in our north wing, and is named Dr. Petro because he's in the area which is all about rigs running and healthy."

The event will feature around 20 attractions and accommodations that will have tables, including the Museum of the Southwest, the Permian Basin Fair and Exposition, Sand Hills Hereford and Quarter Horse Show and Rodeo, Texas Best—Summer in the City, Cottonwood Farms, the Midland Angels, Susie's South 40, the Lexington Hotel, Midland College, Midessa KOA, the Petroleum Museum, the Confederate Air Force, Midessa Porcelain Doll Shop, the SPBDA Doll Club, La Quinta, Talk of the Town, Plaza Inn, Kent Kwik, Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, Midland County Library and Pecans International. Those stopping by will have the opportunity to sample Midland-grown escargot and pick up brochures on a number of activities. For more information call 685-5050.

Tourism committee board members include Joe Hathaway, Summer Mummers; Charlotte Pearson, Lexington Hotel; Janice Rogers, Pecans International; Carol Harper, Midessa KOA; Ms. Phares; Teddy Stickney, archaeology; Barbi Woods, CAF; Susie Hitchcock-Hall, Susie's South 40; Elizabeth Horne, SPBDA Doll Club; Enid Davis, Museum of the Southwest; Tom French, La Quinta; Michael Lamberti, Holiday Inn; Brad Swendig, COM Swim Team; Elise Coombes, Midland College; and Monty Hoppel, Midland Angels.

"I think it's great because I think there's a number of people in our area that aren't aware of some of the entertainment options right here at home," Hoppel said. "I've been in some other communities, and it's just amazing that we have the quality of entertainment that we do."

Love makes life wonderful, death makes it precious

Celeste Holm traces her passion for the theater arts to a performance given by the great Russian ballerina Pavlova. At the time, Miss Holm was not quite 3 years old. "The audience had what I call bus faces, kind of what-the-hell-have-you-got-that-I-haven't-got expressions," said the Oscar-winning actress. "I was surprised. If you are going to something which is going to be wonderful, why do you look like that? But, on the other hand, maybe they didn't know it was going to be wonderful."

She remembered having to stand up to see over the edge of the seat in front of her. "The house lights went down, the curtain lights came up, and the curtains parted. Then the magic started. I was thoroughly enraptured by the story (a version of 'Nutcracker'). I identified with the little girl in it.

"They were so strong, so beautiful, so sure of themselves. Anna Pavlova, herself, never touched the ground at all. She was all pink twinkle and shimmer.

"I never saw anything so wonderful in my life. Imagine being thrown into mid-air and being caught by a kind friend with no tripping and no stumbling. Everything graceful and perfect.

"Finally, the curtain came together for the last time. Then I saw the second miracle, which is the change that had taken place in the audience. They were all on some level aware of what a gift it was to be human, to be able to do what we had seen. And if they (the dancers) can do that, surely, I can do something wonderful, can't I?

"So I came home, and announced to a waiting world that that's what I wanted to do. And nobody seemed surprised. My aunt was on the stage. My mother was a portrait painter."

Her father was the only one who "dared to suggest that it might be difficult to be a great dancer," Miss Holm recalled. "Oh, but I said, 'It looks so ....' 'Ah, ha,' he said, 'There lies the artistry. It is only that ease that brings the kind of joy to an audience that you saw today.' "

Despite his words of caution, Miss Holm started ballet school that week. "Of course, my father was right," she said. "There was such an awful lot of detailed work before there was any question of being tossed in mid-air and being caught by a kind friend.

"In fact, that didn't happen until I was in the National Company of 'Mame.' When I came sliding down the bannister and landed on those boys, and they caught me as though I were a feather, I wanted to stop the show right then and there and say, 'This is the fulfillment of a lifelong dream.' But I didn't."

An award-winning actress who has balanced her career with the responsibilities of wife and mother, Miss Holm called love and death the two most important things in life. "Love makes life wonderful, and death makes life precious. And NOW is the only time we ever have. So use it well."

In her May 13 performance with the Midland-Odessa Symphony, which is set for 8 p.m. at Odessa's Bonham Junior High Auditorium, Miss Holm will narrate Britten's "Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra," a work which appeals to adults as well as children and was designed to introduce youth to the symphony orchestra.

Additionally, the MOS will perform, under the baton of Don Th. Jaeger, Copland's "Outdoor Overture" and the Hanson Symphony Number 2, "The Romantic." Also, concertmaster Jeanne Preucil Rose and principal second violin Stephen Rose will perform Lumbye's "Concert Polka" for Two Violins and Orchestra.

The performance is sponsored by Odessa Regional Hospital, Sewell Ford, Lincoln, Mercury, Mazda and Toyota and the Texaco Foundation, Inc. Tickets, priced at $10 for adults, $9 for seniors and $5 for students, will be available at the door or may be purchased in advance through the symphony office, 3100 LaForce Boulevard, Terminal. Music students may sign in at the door and will be admitted free of charge. For more information call the symphony 563-0921.

Although Miss Holm studied ballet for 14 years, she made her professional debut in Leslie Howard's "Hamlet." After attending school in New York, Chicago, Brooklyn and Paris, she made her Broadway debut in 1939 in William Saroyan's Pulitzer Prize winning play, "The Time of Your Life." She became a star with her performance of "Ado Annie" in the original Broadway production of "Oklahoma!" followed by the title role in "Bloomer Girl."

Then came Hollywood with three Academy Award nominations: "Come to the Stable," "All About Eve" and "Gentleman's Agreement," for which she won an Oscar. The experience was, she said, "astonishing."

Miss Holm recalled the evening she won as being filled with surprise. "There was absolutely no doubt in my mind that I would not win. And so I was not prepared in any way. Even the Academy didn't think I would win. I wasn't on the aisle even.

"They had sent me a letter five weeks before saying that you have already won the highest award that is given in our industry, which is, of course, the recognition of your work by your peers.

"If the ultimate happens and you hear your name spoken in that theater, go straight to the stage. Do not stop and talk to friends. Go up the steps and stand on this star painted on the stage and face the audience. Well, this only shows you how many movie people have never been on a stage that they would have to tell anybody that.

"And be sure to have a short speech — I think it was no more than 30 seconds — of appreciation. So I sat there quietly. All of a sudden, my name was called out. I thought I was going to go blind because every light in the theater hits you. My husband said, 'Get up.' I said, 'I can't. I've turned to caramel.'"

Someone sitting by her husband helped her to her feet. She then crunched past people until she reached the aisle.

"All I could think of as I was walking up those steps is don't let me trip on the ruffles on my petticoat. I got on the stage, turned to face the audience, then I realized, I hadn't prepared a speech. It had never occurred to me I would win. Ethel Barrymore was up. People who'd had years of servitude. This was practically my first outing.

"Fortunately, there is an angel who lives on my shoulder. And I said, 'I thought I had already received the highest award an actress can have and that is the opportunity of appearing in a picture which can actually change people's hearts by bringing understanding in a world that seems to need it so much,'" said Miss Holm, adding that "Gentleman's Agreement" was the first serious picture about anti-Semitism. "Then I burst into tears and ran off the stage."

Then came the questions. "What are you going to do next?" "Is this going to give you more money?" She had no idea then what the answers were. Now she can said, "Nothing changed. I just went on doing the best I could."

Her next movie, "The Snake Pit," was the first film about mental health, and it started Miss Holm's life-long involvement with mental health.

Throughout her career, she has appeared in film and on stage and is remembered with Frank Sinatra in "The Tender Trap" and "High Society" and on Broadway in "Affairs of State," which was written for her, and as Anna in Rodgers and Hammerstein's "The King and I."

"I think my favorite, most wonderful play I ever did was 'The King and I,'" Miss Holm said. "I thought that was the most evolved and the most marvelous show about the relationship between that know-it-all king and this know-it-all nanny and how gradually they were able to reach across this vast difference in their cultures and reach an understanding. And I adored the children. It was a wonderful, wonderful experience."

Other Broadway shows to her credit include Eleanor Perry's "Third Best Sport," Arthur Laurents' "Invitation to a March" and most recently, Paul Rudnick's "I Hate Hamlet."

Miss Holm won the Sarah Siddons Award for her irrepressible "Mame" in the National Company. Other highlight of her career include Janet Flanner's "Paris Was Yesterday," Noel Coward's "Hay Fever," the hit film "Three Men and a Baby" and the Philadelphia Theatre Company's production of A.R. Gurney's "The Cocktail Hour" in 1992.

This actress finds "no difference" between being on stage and on film. "One's louder that's all," she said, referring to the fact that live theater requires the actor to project his voice.

It's important for an actor to have performed before a live audience. "You have to get that contact with an audience," Miss Holm said. "Once you have it, you can approximate it on the screen.

"In other words, you have a sense of understanding to some extent how the audience will feel. But if you haven't had that experience in the theater, I don't know how you can do it on the screen."

Miss Holm has starred in numerous television shows including "Trapper John," "Love Boat," "Archie Bunker's Place" and received critical praise for Johnny Cheever's "Shady Hill Kidnapping," which inaugurated the PBS American Playhouse. She was nominated for an Emmy as Mrs. Harding in "Backstairs at the White House" and as a bag lady in "Loving."

She is the fairy godmother in Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Cinderella," which is available on video. She co-starred in "Jessie" with Lindsay Wagner, "Falcon Crest" with Jane Wyman, and, in 1989, in the ABC mystery series, "Christine Cromwell" with Jacqueline Smith. Also in 1989, she starred with Phylicia Rashad and Brock Peters in the Disney special "Polly" and in 1990, she completed the sequel, "Polly, One Mo' Time."

Knighted by King Olav of Norway, Miss Holm was appointed to the National Arts Council by President Reagan. In 1992, she was inducted into the Theatre Hall of Fame as well as being awarded the Ellis Island Medal of Honor. She is president of the Creative Arts Rehabilitation Center, chairman of the Film Commission of the State of New Jersey, active on the board of directors of the Actors' Fund of America and a Research Scholar in Semiotics at Claremont College, California.

"I have seen that people can change themselves and their whole lives by the way they feel," said Miss Holm. "And if you have a vision of something wonderful to achieve, get out and do it."

This past year, Miss Holm appeared in the concert revival of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Allegro" at NYC's City Center, and, as a benefit for The Classic American Theatre in Chicago, she starred in "The Glass Menagerie," marking the 50th anniversary of its opening there.

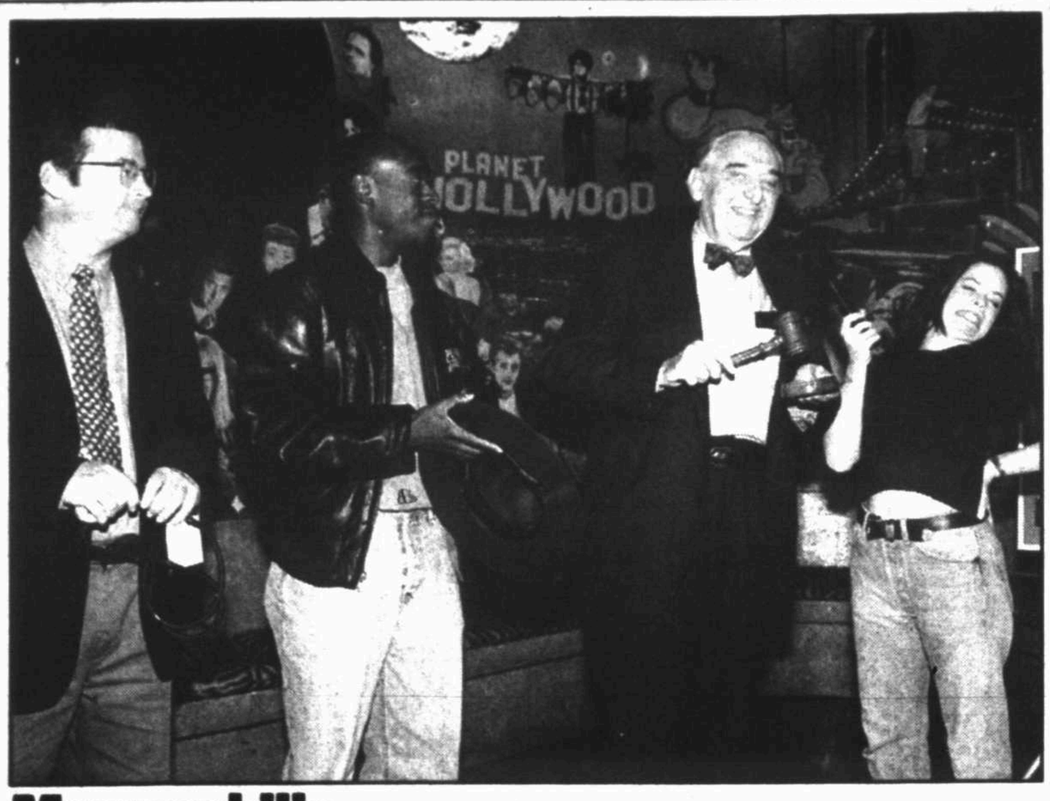

She also starred, with her favorite actor, husband Wesley Addy, in several productions of A.R. Gurney's "Love Letters" and "The Cocktail Hour."

"We work together all the time," Miss Holm said, recalling that when they first acted together, they weren't wed. "He was a good actor and I liked working with him." Did she know they would be married one day? "I thought it would be a nice idea. It didn't happen for a long time."

Most recently, she completed "Talking With" for PBS' Great Performances, directed by Oscar winner Kathy Bates. In December, a tribute was paid to Miss Holm by the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences.

An avid reader, Miss Holm's spare time is spent mending and cooking. "Something always needs a button. It's crazy," she said, laughing. As for cooking? "I adore to cook."

Movie's producers take $200 million gamble on 'Waterworld'

By Russ Britt
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Big-budget pictures have paid off, but is the $200 million gamble on "Waterworld" a fool's bet?

The Universal Pictures action film that stars Kevin Costner and is set entirely on or under water will have to rank among the all-time top five grossing films worldwide in order to break even, analysts said.

"Waterworld" has nearly double the budget of the previous spending champ, "True Lies," which cost $105 million last year. The burden on "Waterworld" already is tremendous, more than two months before its scheduled July 28 release date.

"It's got a big star but I don't see it making more than $150 million," said Christopher Borde, analyst for Paul Kagan Associates in Los Angeles. "They're competing against so many other films."

"Waterworld" will have to gross roughly $500 million worldwide to break even, analysts said. The film's estimated budget thus far is $175 million, well over its original $100 million mark.

With promotions and other costs, the total budget could reach $230 million, Borde said. Theaters generally get 50 percent of ticket sales, meaning the film must exceed a half-billion dollars at the box office to turn a profit.

No film has hit that mark in domestic returns. Five films have reached that level in global receipts, including "Jurassic Park," "ET: The Extra-Terrestrial," "The Lion King," "Forrest Gump" and "Home Alone."

"Waterworld" has been beset by numerous troubles since it started filming.

Last week, director Kevin Reynolds left the film before final editing in an apparent dispute with Costner over what the last cut should look like.

Seagram Co. Ltd. included a clause in its purchase of Universal Pictures' parent MCA Inc. last month, outlining the possibility of a write-off on "Waterworld." It is unclear whether Seagram or MCA's current owner, Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. Ltd. of Japan, will absorb any losses from "Waterworld."

The film's producers defend "Waterworld."

John Davis, who developed the script for five years before delivering it to Universal, said it is too early to tell how the film will do.

"It's tough to shoot on water," he said of the movie's spiraling budget. "Until a movie comes out and does the business it's going to do, how can one tell?"

Dave Fulton, the movie's publicist, said "Waterworld" is buttressed by the fact it lends itself to product merchandising and has the backing of MCA to help accomplish that.

"This is not just a movie. There is elaborate merchandising," Fulton said. "Only a company like MCA that has widespread entry into all entertainment fields can pull off something like that."

Analysts add that if any company can absorb the potential shock of a $200 million loss, MCA can. Although "Waterworld" has been jokingly referred to as "Kevin's Gate" — a reference to the 1980 United Artists flop "Heaven's Gate" — MCA will not be forced into the same financial predicament.

The $36 million "Heaven's Gate" budget crippled United Artists and prompted its sale to Metro Goldwyn Mayer a year later.

Dave Davis, analyst for Houlihan, Lokey, Howard & Zukin, a Los Angeles investment bank, said United Artists was weak to begin with.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, MAY 7, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A lucky career break has you walking on air. A move to another state or country is a distinct possibility. You find a way to get what you want while still being there for others. A number of unresolved issues clamor for attention. Loved ones press you to make tough choices. A special windfall or legacy early in 1996 means greater financial security. Marriage holds fresh appeal.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: quarterback legend Johnny Unitas, movie director Amy Heckerling, actress Robin Strasser, composer Peter Tchaikovsky.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Visitors from afar could add some spice to your usual routine. Invite some neighbors to meet these new friends. What you want will come to you. Be patient.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): This rather slow day gives you a welcome opportunity to sort out a number of things on your mind. Thanks to good friends, you can enjoy yourself at a lavish social bash. Show appreciation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Domestic tensions lessen, thanks to a loved one's unselfish act. Share your aspirations with your romantic partner. You may be able to convince a close friend or relative to help you with a pet project.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The emphasis now is on innovative ideas and creative self-expression. Be diplomatic when describing a newcomer's attributes to a loved one or jealousy may cause some anxious moments.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Answer overdue letters and pay a bill left over from last month. Your mate may suggest new ways to cut household expenses. Put them into practice. A social event is a source of widespread delight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Those in authority look with favor on you and your plans. Do your best to turn in an excellent performance at a community-sponsored event. An impossible dream is best forgotten.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your financial situation improves, thanks to a stroke of good luck or news regarding a legal settlement. Avoid scattering your energies too widely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Romance may be under cloudy skies for a little while. Be patient. Eventually you will see your way clear. Set your sights high where career matters are concerned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone's beliefs may come into direct conflict with your own. Talk things out calmly and rationally. Both romance and finance could give you some concern now. Think and act in a positive manner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Much to your surprise, a casual friendship intensifies. Do not deny your feelings. All signs indicate the presence of love. Keep spending at a reasonable level to prevent any money worries.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You and your mate need to make your relationship a top priority. Romance should take precedence over everything else tonight. A candlelit dinner in a familiar setting will create a feeling of great contentment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A wonderful day to visit with family and friends. When planning a special outing, try to include someone who lives alone. Consider past events as they relate to your plans for the future.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are friendly and outgoing, eager to believe the best of people. However, they also are quick to retaliate against anyone who harms them or their friends. Generous and imaginative, these Taureans make delightful hosts. Count on them to go to great lengths to make newcomers feel at ease. A tendency to embellish and exaggerate means they would make better novelists and scriptwriters than journalists. They are fascinated by the theatrical world and may seek a career in front of the footlights.

Opening lead: Jack of ◇

When an opponent has nasty things in store for you, don't submit meekly. See if you can find a way to recover from a distributional whim.

North-South reached four spades after an orderly auction. The fit for opener's suit made the South hand even better than its point-count suggests.

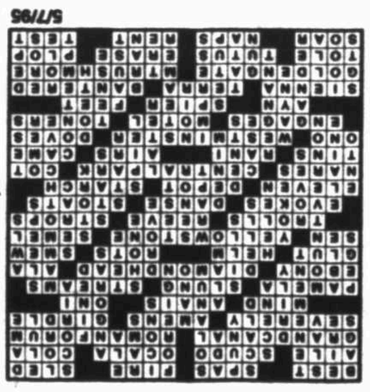

West led the jack of diamonds, and the threat of a diamond ruff was imminent. If declarer took a spade finesse at trick two and it lost, East would give West a diamond ruff and a major-suit exit would leave the fate of the contract to hinge on guessing the location of the club honors, if possible.

It is a little better to lead the queen of spades at trick two and, if West does not cover, rise with the ace and return a spade. However, if East holds the king of spades and West the third trump, West will still get the diamond ruff and exit with a heart, making the success or failure of the contract again dependent on the club suit.

That suggests another improvement. Strip West of all safe exit cards before allowing the ruff. Win the diamond, cash the ace and king of hearts and ruff a heart in the closed hand. Now cash the ace of spades and lead another spade. West can still ruff a diamond, but now is left with only hearts and clubs. A heart allows declarer to ruff in hand while discarding a club from dummy. A club is up to the king and limits declarer's loss in that suit to one. Either way, the contract is safe.

Cliffhangers

When 'Dallas' ' J.R. was shot, the cliffhanger season finale was born

By Andy Meisler
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — It had been a typical day for J.R. Ewing. Only six death threats. That night, as he worked late in his office, two gunshots were fired. J.R. (played by Larry Hagman) fell to the floor. A cleaning woman soon discovered him, and the second full season of CBS's nighttime soap "Dallas" came to a close.

"Who shot J.R.?" asked magazine covers, comedy sketch writers and titillated viewers. The world had to wait months — until the fall season premiere on Nov. 21, 1980 — to learn the answer: Kristin, J.R.'s trampy sister-in-law, played by Mary Crosby.

What the television industry learned was the power of the cliffhanger season finale. An almost unfathomable 76 percent of all television viewers in the country tuned in to "Dallas" that night.

"The network had no problems with a 53.3 rating," recalls Lee Rich, president of Lorimar, the company that produced the series at the time.

Since then, season finales have never been the same. And this year there seems to be an even bigger epidemic than usual of cliffhangers, shocking revelations and dramatic wrap-ups.

THERE ARE weddings. Martin Lawrence, the swashbuckling bachelor of Fox's "Martin," will marry his longtime girlfriend, Gina, in a two-part episode. The notoriously single Murphy Brown, on the CBS sitcom that bears her name, will head for the altar, as will the title characters of "The Fresh Prince of Bel Air" and "Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman."

There are major beginnings and endings. The first new baby will be born into the blended family on ABC's "Step by Step." John Hemingway, the recovering alcoholic protagonist of NBC's "John Larroquette Show" will break up with his steady, Kathryn (Alison LaPlaca).

There are death watches, a kidnapping by aliens and at least one homage. One of the starring detectives of Fox's "New York Undercover" will be shot and gravely wounded, hovering between life and death until fall. Detective Phil Phillips (Karen Sillas) of CBS's "Under Suspicion" has already been lying on the ground bleeding since that marginally rated series ended its season on March 10.

The submarine on NBC's "Seaquest" will be lifted out of the water, and into outer space, by an extraterrestrial mother ship. Even Fox's animated series "The Simpsons" is getting into the act with its finale "Who Shot Mr. Burns?" Suspects include Homer, Bart, Lisa, Principal Skinner, Grampa Simpson, Smithers and Tito Puente.

'We never dreamed of wrapping things up at the end of the season. The networks didn't like us doing that. I think the main reason was that they wanted to run or rerun the show's episodes in any way they wanted to. They couldn't do that if one episode led up to another.'
— Allan Burns producer, writer "The Mary Tyler Moore Show"

"MELROSE PLACE" had a season ender about a bomb set off by a character returning from a military-style camp filmed and ready for May 22. After the recent events in Oklahoma City, the producers announced that "the best way to handle this" was under discussion. Then they decided to keep their decision a secret.

NBC's "Sweet Justice" spent six weeks of episodes leading up to a sensational trial in which a Southern establishment lawyer (Ronny Cox) accused of his daughter's murder, will be defended by his frequent courtroom opponent (Cicely Tyson), a civil rights firebrand.

Such flip-flops are common in this age of anxiety — and of quick cancellations. But as veteran television watchers may remember, it has not always been thus.

"We never dreamed of wrapping things up at the end of the season," says Allan Burns, who produced and wrote for "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" (1970-77) and "Lou Grant" (1977-82), among other series.

"The networks didn't like us doing that. I think the main reason was that they wanted to run or rerun the show's episodes in any way they wanted to. They couldn't do that if one episode led up to another."

THE "DALLAS" phenomenon didn't create the change alone. The trends toward summer series tryouts, reducing the need for reruns and increasing pressure to show quick ratings success in a fragmented market, have also been factors.

Today the main destabilizing agent at work is the search for higher ratings during the crucial May sweeps period; in many cases a show has desperate hopes of being picked up for the 1995-96 season before all final cancellation decisions are made.

This year there seems to be an even bigger epidemic than usual of cliffhangers, shocking revelations and dramatic wrap-ups.

"We're really big on stunts during sweeps month," says Preston Beckman, NBC's senior vice president for program planning and scheduling. "Since most shows conclude during May sweeps, they're a good way to generate interest in the show, to get people to talk about it over the summer."

Why all the transitions? "If it's a successful show, people have bought into the characters," Beckman says. "And people are most interested in the most unique moments of those characters' lives." Weddings and funerals, for instance.

Samm-Art Williams, executive producer of "Martin," agrees: "It's a good way to catapult yourself into the following season. It lets the changes sink in."

Ross Brown, an executive producer of "Step by Step," says: "You could make changes in the middle of the season. But if you don't show them a new baby, for instance, right at the end, it doesn't gives them anything important to tune in for next season."

WITH THE increasing use of multi-episode plot lines in one-hour dramas, producers must resolve many of them over the course of a season — but at the risk of confusing viewers who have missed several episodes.

"That's what you can use the big final episode for," says Dick Wolf, the creator of both "New York Undercover" and NBC's "Law and Order." "If you set the table correctly, you can go out with more of a bang than a whimper. Hopefully, everything converges in some weird way."

On long-running series, season finales can be used to spin off into new creative directions. "How many stories can you do about Murphy Brown as a tough, aggressive single woman?" says John Bowman, a current executive producer of the show. "That's why we gave her a baby after 51 episodes." And that's why, he says, Ms. Brown will possibly marry Peter Hunt (Scott Bakula) on this season's final episode.

Newer series can use season enders to signal changes in direction too. That will happen with "Seaquest," many of whose regular viewers have been unhappy with the second-season shift toward sci-fi and horror.

The executive producer Clifton Campbell says that although the submarine does take an interstellar excursion, the resolution of the story will reassure viewers that "Seaquest" is returning somewhat to its first-season emphasis on science fact.

SO, TOO, will "Sweet Justice" adjust its course. Its executive producer John Romano says the series' final episodes are meant to demonstrate to NBC executives that the first year's early emphasis on social and political issues — which earned it marginal ratings, at best — can be augmented by more conventional story elements. "We wanted to show that the strength of this show lay in the strength of its characters, not just in civil rights matters," he says.

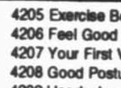

Which leads to an interesting modern predicament. Should a lower-rated show, whose return to the schedule is in doubt, finish the season with a random episode, a cliffhanger or a wrap-up? Don Reo, the creator and executive producer of "The John Larroquette Show," has come up with a quasi-solution.

"It came to me the night before the filming," Reo says. In the last "John Larroquette Show" episode this season (maybe the last ever), Larroquette throws over one girlfriend and rekindles his romance with Carly (Gigi Rice), a former prostitute turned bar owner. The final scene finds John and Carly locked in a passionate embrace.

"In the background of the shot," says Reo, "the audience can see stagehands striking the set."

'Who shot J.R.?' asked magazine covers, comedy sketch writers and titillated viewers. The world had to wait months — until the fall season premiere on Nov. 21, 1980 — to learn the answer: Kristin, J.R.'s trampy sister-in-law, played by Mary Crosby.

All area artists are eligible. Entries will be accepted from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. June 1 at Kendall Art Gallery, 119 W. First, here. Media is limited to oils, watercolors and acrylics with dimensions not to exceed 60 inches including the frame.

For more information write Janice Dempsey, 5005 Green Valley Trail, San Angelo, Texas 76904, or call 1-915-949-7321.

Walker

Loretta Walker of Midland has recently had original poetry published in "Seasons to Come" compiled by the National Library of Poetry.

The poem is entitled "Unfinished Poems."

Ms. Walker has been writing for 25 years. Her favorites subjects are music, the night sky, people and nature.

Annual exhibit set

Pages & Prints Bookstore opens its second annual Lee High School Senior Art Exhibit with an artists' reception from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday.

The students' art will remain on display through May 24.

This year five students — Henrietta Douglas, Sara Drescher, Philip King, Rachel Nicholas and Stephanie Smith — will exhibit. Media include oil and watercolor painting, pen and ink, pencil and colored pencil drawings, pastels, clay pottery and prints.

Most works will be available for purchase at prices from $5 to $85 with 100 percent of the selling price going to the students.

Each student is considering a career in art or in teaching art and has exhibited in regional scholastic competitions and has work in the Midland student exhibit at the Museum of the Southwest.

The 1995 edition of "A Pebble Cast," the annual Lee High School literary magazine, also will be on sale at Pages & Prints, Plaza Oaks Shopping Center at Wadley and Garfield, as soon as copies are available. The magazine, selling for $2, includes poetry, short stories and photography by LHS students.

For more information call Pages & Prints, 570-5173.

Festival planned

The 34th annual Student Art Festival may be viewed through May 18 at the Museum of the Southwest and the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

The annual event is sponsored by the Museum, Las Manos, Midland Independent School District and Midland City Council PTA.

The artwork is from students in elementary through secondary grades in MISD, Greenwood Independent School District, Trinity School, St. Ann's School, Hillcrest School and several area home schooled children. Works were juried at each school and winning entries in each of the art mediums were included in the show. those mediums are color drawings, black and white drawings, sculpture, ceramics, fiber and textiles, commercial art, painting, jewelry and collage.

Elementary students artwork may be viewed in the Children's Museum and secondary students artwork is displayed in the Turner Mansion. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. For more information call the museum, 683-2882.

Art winner

Former Midlander Jean Cappadonna-Nichols of Oxford, Miss., was declared a winner in graduate student art competition at the University of Mississippi. Her artwork, entitled "Camo Helmet," won Best of Show.

Workshop set

Christina Robbins is conducting a two-day workshop at the Midland Palette Club, 907 W. Wadley Ave., beginning at 9:30 a.m. Monday and Tuesday.

Her paintings have been exhibited in juried shows and in galleries throughout the Southwest. For more information call Audrey Larson, 694-0516.

Registration open

Telephone registration has started for a special guest lecture entitled "Asteroid!" to be held at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium, Haley Park at the Museum of the Southwest complex.

Due to limited seating for this event, advance registration is required. The registration fee is $2 per person, payable at the door.

This lecture and demonstration will take place at 7 p.m. May 13 and will be presented by Dr. Jeff Goldstein of the Smithsonian National Air and Space Museum. Goldstein will discuss the impact last year of comet Shoemaker-Levy 9 with the planet Jupiter and the role which asteroid and comet impacts play in the evolution of life on earth. This presentation is intended for educators and general public ages 10 to adult.

The program is sponsored jointly by Zavala Elementary Magnet School, Odessa, and the Midland planetarium. To register call 683-2882 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday or between 2 and 5 p.m. today.

Drawings displayed

BIG SPRING—Drawings by D.D. Parramore are on display through May 30 at the Heritage Museum, 510 Scurry.

His work depicts such common images of the time as plowing, coon hunting, cattle drives and hog killing. with hand lettered comments underneath the pictures, Parramore hoped to teach his grandchildren about ranch life and preserve the history of a vanishing vocation.

His family story is among the work which also includes the trail herd, the stampede, prohibition and the meaning of being a neighbor. His work pieces together a history of West Texas ranch life.

"His drawings express a cultural idea," said Angie Way, curator. "They are a form of storytelling about the history of this area. That's why we wanted to display them."

Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Festival held

The Junior Federated Music Clubs had their Piano Festival recently at First Baptist Church.

The Festival drew 80 entrants. Of this number, 70 received superior ratings.

Judges were Kathryn Beam and Ronald Bennett, both of Odessa.

Resident honored

KERRVILLE—Midland resident Jeramy Keener recently was honored for his participation in theater at Schreiner College here.

Named "Most Improved Actor" for his performance in "Inherit the Wind," Keener received the award for his outstanding performance in that department during the 1994-95 school year. He is a freshman at Schreiner.

Keener is the son of Randy and Vickie Inman of Midland.

At Schreiner, he also is a member of the soccer team. before graduating from lee High School, he was named to the Who's Who of American High School students.

Schreiner College is a small, independent four-year liberal arts college. With an enrollment of around 600, the faculty to student ratio is 1 to 13. Related by choice and by covenant to the Presbyterian Church, USA, Schreiner is known for its "whole person" approach to education.

Name to change

Midland Community Theatre has announced the renaming of its facility, Theatre Midland in honor of the founding director Art Cole.

The announcement that the theater would become the Cole Theatre came at the opening gala for "Harvey," which stars Cole as Elwood P. Dowd.

"Art was always the first to give credit for MCT's success to the work of the volunteers," said a release from MCT. "However, his outstanding vision was the thread that carried the theater through those first 35 years."

Manilow to perform

Barry Manilow performs at Midland College's Chaparral Center at 8 p.m. May 20.

Manilow

Tickets, priced at $25 plus $1.50 service charge or $20 and a $1 service charge,, may be purchased at endless Horizons, Odessa, Dollar Western Wear, Midland and Odessa, Midland Sound, Circuit Electronics, Big Spring, and Dan's Music & Video, Pecos.

Exhibit on display

The exhibit "Invited Artists: 1995," which features the work of Chad Airhart and Linda Fawcett, is on display through June 8 at Gallery 1114, 1114 N. Big Spring St..

Ms. Fawcett uses representation and combination of images in symbolic ways. Airhart's close-focus "portraits" of plants, flowers and insects express abstract qualities in the context of realism. Both artists use the oil medium to look at man's uncertain and contradictory feelings and attitudes about nature.

Linda Fawcett is chair of the art department at Hardin-Simmons University, Abilene. Airhart is a recent art graduate of the University of Dallas and now lives in Lubbock.

Gallery 1114 is a co-operative center for modern and contemporary art. Gallery hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Thursday through Sunday.

Works on display

ODESSA—Works by 46 University of Texas of the Permian Basin students are on display in the university's Third Floor Gallery through May 31.

"We've tried to highlight things that have been done during the year — silk screens, intaglio, watercolor, drawing, ceramics, sculpture," said Pam Price, professor of art. "It's an overview of what our students have learned."

Zoo extends hours

FORT WORTH—The Fort Worth Zoo returned to its regular extension of weekend hours so that visitors can take advantage of the longer hours of daylight in the summer.

Summer hours of operation through October are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Admission is $5.50 for ages 13 through adult, $3 for children 3 through 12, free for those under 3, and $2.50 for those 65 and older. Zoo admission is half price on Wednesdays. Group rates are available.

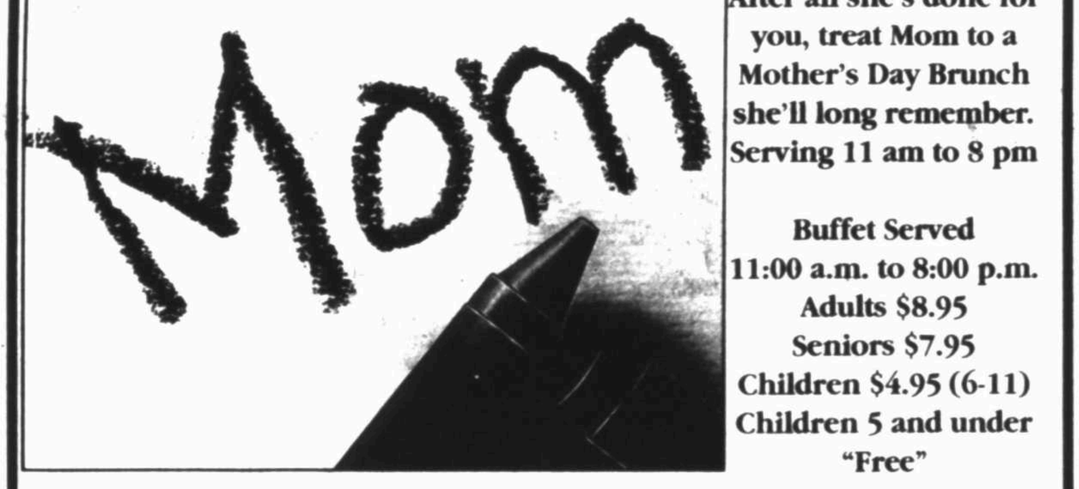

To reach the zoo from I-30, exit at University Drive, go south on University a mile, turn left on Colonial Parkway and follow the signs. For more information call 1-817-871-7050.

Tickets are $7 for adults and $3.50 for students. They may be ordered by calling the choral office, 689-1129. Starting April 25, a box office will be open in the MSHS lobby during lunch from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and in the auditorium after school and evenings.

Film relocates

MARFA—The recent fire in Marfa City Hall, next door to the old Palace Theater, has forced the relocation of the screening of the film "Giant" for the 40th Anniversary Reunion set for May 27 here.

Now, the screening will take place in the Marfa High School Auditorium.

Tickets for the barbecue and 7 p.m. screening are $12 each and available from the Marfa Chamber of Commerce, 1-915-729-4942. The event is sponsored by the chamber, Big Bend Quarterly and Cibolo Creek Ranch. For more information call the chamber.

Outdoor concert set

DENVER,COLO.—A multi-platinum line-up of rock and country music stars — Lynyrd Skynyrd, the Charlie Daniels band, Foreigner, Tanya Tucker, The Smithereens, The Freddy Jones Band, John Berry and Bad Company — is scheduled to appear in "Rock the Rockies," a 12-hour outdoor concert extravaganza set for May 28 at Denver's Stapleton Airport, which is closed to air traffic.

The event, expected to attract tens of thousands of fans, will be hosted by comedian Jeff Foxworthy.

Major sponsors of the event include Skoal Music, Total Petroleum Convenience Stores and King Soopers supermarkets. Producers of "Rock the Rockies" are Pace Concerts, Inc. and Corlew & Associates, both based in Nashville, Tenn.

"Rock the Rockies" will be, said Steve Hauser, president of Pace concerts Southeast, "A milestone in music, an eclectic line-up of platinum-status, Grammy-winning rock and country stars, joined by some exciting new rising stars. Fans will be treated to a rare venue featuring some of the top talent in both country and rock."

Stephen Madrid on the set of "Talents" in Abilene.

Stephen Madrid recently was awarded the Multicultural Initiatives Internship from Texas Nonprofit Theatres (TNT). The internship spans 11 weeks and includes residency at three types of theaters that operate in Texas.

He will have a three-week residency at Theatre Three, Dallas, a professional regional theater directed by Jac Alder; S.T.A.G.E., Bulverde, a volunteer community theater directed by Zada Jahnsen; and Midland Community Theatre, directed by Don Bachmann.

Also, Madrid stars in the short film, "The Question Why." written and produced by Stephen Zimmer, which was filmed on location in Abilene with additional footage shot in Lexington, Ky. The film, released by a new multimedia company based in Lexington, Ky., called Diatheke Eirne, LTD., is about Carl Preston (Madrid), who notices bad things happening to good people and doesn't understand why.

In addition, Madrid, who is represented by Hennie & Co., of Dallas, made his film directorial debut co-directing and co-producing "Talents" with Zimmer. Both short films are for the national home video market.

Madrid, a graduate of Midland High School, spent two years at Midland College including two internships and performances with Midland Community Theatre. He also was seen on the CBS affiliate, KOSA-TV as co-anchor for Musica Tejana and a reporter for Tiempo Tejano.

In Abilene, while obtaining a bachelor of arts from Hardin-Simmons University, Madrid received awards for Best Actor, Best Featured Actor and an Irene Ryan Nomination at the American College Theatre Festival. He was the director of the Moment's Notice Improvisational troupe and was the president of the Zeta Theta cast of Alpha Psi Omega, the national honorary theater fraternity.

He also worked with area youth through Abilene Community Theatre at a summer creative dramatics workshop and worked in public relations for the Van Ellis Theatre at Hardin-Simmons.

He is the son of Midlanders Rudy and Terry Madrid.

Not even Metcalf can save 'My Thing of Love'

By Michael Kuchwara
Associated Press

■ Review

NEW YORK — Whatever charm "My Thing of Love" possesses is due to Laurie Metcalf, a wonderfully quirky actress who is intelligent and funny.

Yet not even Metcalf, best-known as Jackie on the television series "Roseanne," can save the beleaguered play, the last show of the 1994-95 Broadway season. It arrived Wednesday at the Martin Beck Theater with a new leading man, a new supporting cast member and an uncredited new director.

Nothing could help this crude comedy of marital infidelity by Alexandra Gersten. The jokes are dismal and the plot turns highly improbable in the frantic second act.

The evening actually starts promisingly enough in designer John Lee Beatty's suburban kitchen setting. It looks the picture of cozy domestic tranquility: Faux early American furniture. Cheerful little magnets on the awful ocher-colored refrigerator. Finger-painting work by the couple's children on the wall.

Yet all is not right in the world of Elly (Metcalf) and her husband, Jack (Tom Irwin). The wife has learned her husband has been cheating on her. As the play opens, they are arguing about everything — except her painful discovery.

Gersten does have an ear for how couples fight. And in their wary sparring, she reveals the twosome's hopes and fears, their likes and loathings.

Suppressed rage can make for peculiar conversation, and Metcalf and Irwin carry Act 1 expertly. The enthusiastic Metcalf, in particular, can battle with gusto.

Things deteriorate in the second half. There is an unlikely appearance by Jack's new love, Kelly, a flaky younger woman poutily played by Jane Fleiss.

Wife and mistress meet cute. Elly mistakes Kelly (yes, a joke is made of their similiar names) for her daughter's grade-school guidance counselor.

When the misunderstanding is cleared up, the real hostilities begin. Of course, in the middle of their warfare, the real counselor arrives. He is a loony nebbish of a man impersonated with sweet daffiness by Mark Blum.

Except for the calculated use of four-letter words and an occasional glimpse of bare skin in a bedroom scene, most of this is standard sitcom stuff — with a bit of movie-of-the-week thrown in for good measure.

Spring auctions get off to subdued start

By Carol Vogel
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The usual suspects packed Sotheby's salesroom on Tuesday night for the first important art auction of the spring. While the audience looked the same as always, the crowd of dealers and collectors, art experts and auction-house groupies who came to watch and to bid on contemporary art didn't act the same. Hadn't they taken their vitamins?

Bidding was cautious, if not anemic. But the auction still managed to total a respectable $13 million, not far below Sotheby's estimate of $15.7 million to $22 million. Of the 46 works offered for sale, 36 found buyers.

"It was not a high-risk sale, but it was not a high-potential sale, either," said Diana Brooks, Sotheby's chief executive worldwide. "I feel good because American collectors were out in full force. And there were new bidders, too, traditional Wall Street types who are interested in contemporary art."

Stephen Mazoh, a New York dealer, described the sale as modest. "Since there was nothing to write home about, there were no excesses," he said.

EVERYONE AGREED the pickings were slim, and for good reason: times are still tough for contemporary art.

Next week's sales of Impressionist and modern art are full of top-quality estate material, but since contemporary-art collectors tend to be younger, less estate property comes to auction. And even though the contemporary-art market has been improving gradually since its doldrums four years ago, it still hasn't found solid ground. Therefore, people who don't have to sell prefer to hold on until prospects look brighter.

Despite the obstacles, Sotheby's managed to scare up a few impressive works to auction on Tuesday night. Among the evening's stars was David Smith's sculpture "Three Circles and Planes" (1959), sold by an unidentified San Francisco collector who had owned it since 1969.

With an estimate of about $2 million, the monumental stainless-steel sculpture was sold to a Korean dealer bidding by phone for almost that amount. It was a handsome price, indeed, but the sculpture seemed like a bargain in comparison with "Cubi V," a slightly later Smith sculpture from the coveted Cubi series, which Sotheby's sold exactly a year ago for $4 million.

"The Cubi had a mythical value in the market," said Anthony Grant, who heads Sotheby's contemporary art department in New York. "Nothing can quite compare."

Another important work that brought a hefty price was Roy Lichtenstein's "Nurse." The 1964 painting, one of the artist's famous cartoon images of his prototypical blonde, this time a nurse, was sold to an American collector bidding by phone for $1.6 million, just above its low estimate of $1.5 million.

THE CLASSIC Pop picture was sold by Peter Brant, the newsprint manufacturer. A year ago, Brant tried but failed to sell a Jasper Johns painting, "Highway" (1959), at Sotheby's. The auction house declined to discuss Brant's financial arrangements, but word among art experts is that he is selling "The Nurse" to pay back part of a loan Sotheby's made to him when he consigned "Highway."

IBM was another happy seller. The corporation is selling many of its art holdings in a series of Sotheby's sales over the next two months. On Tuesday night, all 10 of its offerings sold.

Topping the list was Willem de Kooning's "Untitled XVII" (1977), a thickly painted abstract work. With an estimate of $500,000 to $700,000, it sold for $717,500 to Ron Pizzuti, a real-estate developer in Columbus, Ohio.

Another winner for IBM was Jack Tworkov's "House in the Sun," a bright 1953 abstract painting that carried an estimate of $35,000 to $45,000. A telephone bidder snapped it up for $88,300. There were many takers for Joan Mitchell's "Rose Cottage," another 1953 abstract work, which sold to an unidentified bidder for $167,500, right in the middle of its $150,000-to-$200,000 estimate.

Throughout the evening, Abstract Expressionist works fared well. The De Cordova Museum and Sculpture Park in Lincoln, Mass., consigned Franz Kline's "Figure" (1956), which sold for $1.04 million, just above its $1 million high estimate. The proceeds are to go to a fund for the acquisition of works by contemporary New England artists.

AN UNTITLED Cy Twombly from 1971, estimated at $120,000 to $180,000, was sold to Thomas Lee for $178,500.

Lee, whose Boston-based investment company, took control of the Snapple soft-drink company three years ago, has been an important player in the contemporary art market for several years. Thea Westreich, a private dealer based in Manhattan, did the bidding while Lee sat next to her in the front row, coaching.

Still, caution seemed contagious. For the most part, works tended to sell for around Sotheby's estimates.

Francis Bacon's "Portrait of Henrietta Moraes on White Ground" (1964), depicting one of the artist's favorite models reclining on a bed, went to an unidentified American buyer in the front row for nearly $1.4 million, right in the middle of Sotheby's estimate of $1.2 million to $1.8 million. The price must have been right. In London last June, Christie's tried to sell a Bacon with an estimate of $3.1 million, but the painting, "Study of a Portrait of Pope Innocent X by Velazquez" (1959), didn't elicit a bid.

THE EVENING was not without its high-end failures. Calder's "Double Gong" (1953), a large hanging mobile with two brass gongs hung on red painted arms, had an estimate of $1 million. But no one was interested, even though Simon du Pury, the evening's auctioneer, valiantly tried to bring the audience to life. Bidding stopped at $880,000.

A few bidders pathetically raised their paddles for an untitled 1961 painting by de Kooning, estimated at $2 million to $3 million. But the colorful abstract work, painted at the time the artist first moved to the East End of Long Island, just missed the low estimate. Gasps were heard in the salesroom when the painting went unsold at $1.9 million.

There were two fleeting moments when the room came alive. Bidders in the room and on the phone battled for Agnes Martin's "Gray Stone," a 1963 Minimalist canvas. A European collector bidding by telephone finally won, paying $431,500, more that twice its high estimate of $200,000.

The same kind of enthusiasm returned when Gerhard Richter's "Corner of the Cathedral" (1987), estimated at $300,000 to $400,000, went to an American telephone bidder for $662,500.

Performers return

Two of the most popular artists to appear at the Kerrville Folk Festival over the years return to the 1995 event after a long absence. Eliza Gilkyson, left, and Texas bluesman Townes Van Zandt, have both been touring separately overseas. The two stars join 120 others for the 18-day event.

Drilling and Completions 1995

PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, MAY 7, 1995 SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

BRIEFING

Drill pipe racked and ready to make hole.

Drilling improves

Drilling activity slumped during the final week of April, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count fell five rigs to 121 for the week, but remains above year-ago counts. A year ago the count was 98.

Lea County, N.M. remains the most active in the Basin with 22 rigs, followed by Eddy County, N.M. with 14 rigs and Terrell and Midland counties with 11 rigs each..

Nationwide, the rig count also fell five to 680 for the week andremains below the year-ago count of 730.

Among major producing states, Oklahoma showed the sharpest decline, six rigs, while the biggest gain was in North Dakota, five rigs.

Alaska wells

HOUSTON — Union Texas Petroleum Holdings Inc. said work has been completed at two exploratory wells in Alaska.

The Houston-based company said the wells are on the Western Colville High on Alaska's North Slope.

Arco Alaska Inc., the operator, drilled two sidetracks on the Alpine No. 1 well and one sidetrack at the Fiord No. 3 well. The wells are located about 20 miles west of the Kuparuk River oil field.

T he company said it believes about 100 million barrels of geologically-recoverable oil reserves have been identified by well penetrations in the area.

Arco participated in the drilling with Union Texas Petroleum Alaska Corporation, a subsidiary of Union Texas, and Anadarko Petroleum Corporation.

Prices rebound

After falling below the $20 at midweek, crude futures rebounded amid signs the recent market rally has not run out of steam.

Late in the week, West Texas Intermediate for June delivery closed at $20.29 a barrel. The posted price closed at $18.50 a barrel.

Prices at closed at $19.89 at midweek due to profit-taking and fears by traders that tight supplies were beginning to loosen up.

Natural gas closed at $1.65 per thousand cubic feet.

Open season

HOUSTON—Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company is holding an open season for pipeline transportation and storage service expansion in the Kansas City metropolitan area.

The open season will determine the level of interest in firm, long-term pipeline transportation and storage service for deliveries into that area. Based on the initial market requests, PEPL will evaluate the feasibility of expanding its capacity in the western Missouri and eastern Kansas area in what it will call the MoKan Expansion.

"Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company, which has had major interstate natural gas transmission pipelines in this area for over 60 years, is focusing more attention on developing this market. We are aggressively pursuing system expansion and additional service opportunities tailored to a customer's individual needs," said Steve Roverud, president.

The open season will begin at 8 a.m. May 10 and end at 5 p.m. June 9. For more information, contact Kathy Long in PEPL's marketing department at 713/627-4433.

Shell gets serious about CO2 market

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Shell Oil Co. has CO2 to market and it is getting serious about the job.

The company feels the time is ripe for independents to get into the tertiary business and has begun an aggressive campaign to expand CO2 in the Basin.

In addition to expanding its own tertiary projects, Shell Western E&P Inc. (SWEPI) is looking to maximize the benefits of having a large supply of CO2 by joining forces with independents in the Permian Basin.

"We have worked out a whole 'cafeteria plan' to meet the needs of independents," says Charles E. Fox, Shell's chief engineer in charge of CO2 marketing. "Full utilization of SWEPI's CO2 resources could result in the production of an additional 800 million barrels of oil and a great deal of profit for the industry."

To date the major hurdles to independents getting into tertiary projects have been technology, cost and financing. Shell says it is prepared to provide assistance on all three accounts.

Among the options included are partnerships, alliances and arrangements where Shell will take a royalty interest, working interest, or workout a production payment. "We are very flexible," said Fox, "and will do what it takes to meet the needs of independents."

He said Shell would even finance the up-front cost of putting in a CO2 project or structure a deal so that an operator could get bank financing.

Other features of the cafeteria plan include: a CO2 pricing structure where the price varies over time and response; oil price hedging; formation of tax partnerships; design and installation of CO2 projects and business and accounting services.

Said Fox: "We see our role as a provider of CO2 as creating wealth for the industry. For the industry to prosper, all the stakeholders in the Permian Basin — operators, working interest owners, royalty owners, CO2 providers, and equipment and service providers must have acceptable rates of return and cash flow."

Fox said that the present relations between suppliers and consumers of CO2 will evolve from the present detached relationship toward partnerships and alliances where the seller and user share the risks and rewards of CO2 floods.

He said Shell, through a survey conducted by ICF-Kaiser Consulting Group, had identified 50 Permian Basin fields that account for approximately 80 percent of the oil in place and would be profitable for CO2 flooding.

> 'Full utilization of SWEPI's CO2 resources could result in the production of an additional 800 million barrels of oil and a great deal of profit for the industry.'
> — Charles E. Fox, Chief engineer for CO2 marketing

The simple economic criteria Shell uses for determining which fields are suitable for flooding is simply identifying those fields which will provide a return greater than 10 percent with $16 oil prices.

Two things that make the Permian Basin ripe for CO2 floods, says Fox, are the decreasing cost of technology and CO2.

"We spent too much money on early tertiary projects. When we installed the Denver Unit, we spent about $1 million per injection pattern. When we installed a tertiary project in the Bennett Ranch,

Please see CO2/2G

Shell will pass on its lessons learned and technology in developing the Denver Unit, above. Chuck Fox, left, is aggressively marketing CO2 for Shell. Shell and CEED are currently presenting a seminar on tertiary recovery for independents. Fox says the time is right in the Permian Basin for independent operators to initiate CO2 projects.

NATURAL GAS PRICES

Substantial improvement seen in 1996

■ Analyst predicts 1996 gas prices will be at 10-year highs.

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

There is a 50 percent probability that natural gas prices in 1996 will be at their highest level in 10 years says David Garcia energy analyst for Principal Financial Securities Inc.

"There is a confluence of events that lead us to this conclusion," said David Garcia, who predicts the average wellhead price of natural gas will be $2.05 per Mcf in 1996.

Garcia, a graduate of Tulane and an analyst for 15 years said he doesn't normally engage in price predictions, but feels there is too many compelling elements now pointing toward higher prices. "In such matters I am most often precisely wrong, but generally right. I can't say that it will be exactly $2.05, but it will be higher. Prices will have to go up to make it an economically viable industry over the long run," said Garcia who accurately predicted the natural gas price downturn last July, but did not foresee it going as deep as it did.

First and foremost, said Garcia, is the fact that the inventory shelf is getting bare, and the difference between deliverability and supply is at a record low. He predicts that the difference between deliverability and demand will be a scant 4.4 percent or an excess cushion of 3.8 billion cubic feet per day.

In his analysis, Garcia points out that natural gas is a highly volatile market because the last Mcf out of the ground

API plans golf tourney

The Permian Basin chapter, American Petroleum Institute has scheduled its annual "Sour Crude" Golf Tournament for June 2-3 at Ratliff Ranch Golf Links.

The tournament funds scholarships presented by the API each year.

A four-man scramble format will be used, with six flights based on 60 teams. Flighting will be done by handicap.

A shotgun start will be at 7:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. each day with players playing one morning and one afternoon.

A change in this year's tournament is entry method. Entry with payment must be mailed, with checks made out to the API Permian Basin Chapter, in order to be accepted in the tournament. No phone-in entries will be accepted.

Prizes and raffles will be offered on several holes each day and a variety of door prizes will be given away at the awards presentation which takes place immediately after the tournament June 3.

Cost of the tournament is $400 per team and includes green fees, cart, API memorabilia, food and drinks.

Enserch hopes to rebound from its negative image

■ Enserch suffered from sinking earnings, was labeled loser by Wall Street.

By Gregg Jones

DALLAS (AP) — When David Biegler took over the top job at Enserch Corp. two years ago, he inherited more than the usual natural gas industry headaches.

It had been a painful decade for Enserch, the Dallas-based parent of the Lone Star Gas utility and Enserch Exploration. Earnings sank. The stock price slid. Debt soared. The dividend was slashed. Investors faulted Enserch management for getting involved in engineering and construction businesses and oilfield services, rather than sticking to its natural gas niche.

Perhaps worst of all, Enserch was labeled a loser. It was "the stock Wall Street loves to hate," declared Forbes magazine.

Biegler, 48, a fast-spoken San Antonio native, doesn't deny his company's unhappy recent past. But rather than pointing fingers, he's attacking problems. He's also mending fences on Wall Street, trying to convince investors and energy stock analysts that he's a man of his word.

So how's he doing at the end of his sophomore year?

"I give Biegler very high marks," said Ron Barone, an energy analyst at PaineWebber Inc.

"There's been improvement," said Stuart Wagner, a Petrie Parkman & Co. analyst, whose assessment reflects the wait-and-see attitude many on Wall Street are taking toward Enserch.

Biegler is delivering on many of the promises he made to restless shareholders two years ago: He said he was going to return Enserch to its roots as a natural gas production, pipeline and utility company, and he has. He said Enserch was going to sell its engineering and construction subsidiary to cut debt, and it did. He said Enserch was going to beef up its exploration and production business, and it is.

Earlier this month, Biegler satisfied his promise to make an exploration and production acquisition this year by announcing an agreement to buy Dallas based Dalen Corp. for $340 million in cash. The deal will increase Enserch's petroleum reserves by about 31 percent, double its production and improve cash flow immediately, Biegler said.

Enserch will reach another milestone if the first of more than 80 million barrels of oil and natural gas equivalents starts flowing from the company's premier Gulf of Mexico project as expected this summer. Even sooner, it could get a psychological lift if Mobil accepts an offer to buy a 40 percent share of the $325 million deepwater project.

Wall Street analysts are still demanding much more from Enserch and its chief executive — and they want results soon.

Biegler understands their impatience.

"They're frustrated and I'm frustrated," he said in an interview. "Now that we've restructured, we're down to the core businesses we need to be in and we're capable of shifting back into a growth mode, it's just a matter of getting it done."

Slowly, as he rebuilds Enserch piece by piece, Biegler seems to be on the verge of turning doubters into disciples, company observers and Wall Street analysts said.

"I'm not certain enough about Enserch to be recommending the stock," said David Fleischer, a longtime Enserch watcher at Goldman Sachs. "But the turnaround seems to be under way."

The turnaround could come to a screeching halt if Enserch doesn't give Wall Street something to cheer about — say, a rising stock price or a string of improved quarterly earnings reports, financial analysts and Enserch executives said. And with natural gas prices expected to remain depressed for the next two years, that won't be easy.

"Because of past performance, we are looking at the company more carefully," said Donato Eassey, a Merril Lynch analyst in Houston.

Enserch, which was formed in 1909 as a natural gas supplier, is what is known in the industry as an "integrated natural gas company." It finds, produces, transports and distributes natural gas, "from the wellhead to the burner tip," people in the industry are fond of saying.

It generated 90 percent of its $1.86 billion in revenue and 62 percent of its $102.3 million in net income last year from the natural gas pipeline and utility business, Lone Star Gas Co.

Lone Star, which heats homes in Dallas-Fort Worth and more than 500 other Texas towns and cities, is Enserch's most recognizable face for consumers.

Fading pipelines threaten Russia

By Allanna Sullivan and Anne Reifenberg
The Wall Street Journal

Russia boasts the largest energy-transportation system in the world. Unfortunately for Western oil companies, it's also one of the most decrepit, a drawback underscored by Thursday's spectacular explosion in a natural-gas pipeline 800 miles northeast of Moscow.

The blast, the cause of which is as yet unknown, ignited a forest fire and produced columns of flames and smoke so huge that the pilot of a Japan Airlines jet flying overhead said the clouds ahead of his plane turned bright red.

For Russians, it was all too routine. The explosion occurred near the town of Ukhta in the Komi republic, the region where a leaky pipeline created a massive oil spill last year. "These events happen fairly frequently," said Eleanora Burina, a spokeswoman for the Ministry of Emergency Situations in Moscow.

That's the trouble. For the Western companies that have invested millions of dollars and spent years wrangling for rights to drill in Siberia and the Arctic, the precarious condition of the 300,000-mile transmission system and the restrictions on export avenues could be deal-breakers if they aren't addressed.

In other countries, investors suffer their biggest headaches figuring out where the oil is, not how to sell it. But in Russia, plotting routes to cash-paying export markets "is the single most important issue" for Westerners, says Rich Hildahl, a consultant who studied Russia's pipelines for the World Bank. "If they can get the transportation system right, everything else will fall into place."

It won't be easy, or cheap. The domestic pipeline network, built by the Communists and neglected since the Soviet Union dissolved, is in such bad repair that the government reports there are more than 700 major leaks a year. Thursday's explosion is an example of a system out of control. "My guess is that the reason was simple lack of maintenance," which plagues the entire system, said Matthew Sagers, director of energy services for the consulting firm PlanEcon Inc. in Washington.

Without the construction of new pipelines and seaport terminals, exports to hard-currency markets can't grow by much, and certainly not by enough to accommodate the formidable quantities of oil Westerners believe they'll ultimately be pumping from the fields they have their eyes on.

In some of the most promising but isolated areas of the country, such as the Timan-Pechora region in the north, there is precious little transport at all. And some Western companies looking to invest there are at loggerheads with Moscow over what to do.

Right now, Russian producers are shipping just about all they can to buyers in Europe and beyond who are willing, and able, to pay the market price.

With the vise tightening, Western companies "need assurances that they'll have access to transportation over the long haul," said Jim Norausky, vice president of transportation for Amoco Corp.'s Amoco Eurasia Petroleum Co. unit, which has stakes in two mammoth development deals in Russia. "That's the concern for the industry."

It's a concern for Russia, too. More than 50 percent of its vital hard-currency revenue, which is used to buy goods abroad and pay off loans, are earned by oil exports. To salvage its economy, experts say, Russia must be able to export more, and soon.

"They have to take care of the pipeline problem," said Eddie Daigle, president of Handlers International Inc. of Lafayette, La., which is working with the Russian pipeline giant Transneft to improve the pipelines' anticorrosive coating. "If they don't, Russia will go down the tubes."

There are problems with Russia's domestic system, too, which makes Western companies leery. They worry that if they ship through the dilapidated pipelines that crisscross so much of the country, they may be asked to clean up spills.

And spills are frequent. About half of the pipelines in Russia are in a deplorable state. The Russians don't inject inhibitors into the oil flow to prevent corrosion. Nor do they screen the systems for corrosion by sending monitoring devices into pipelines.

In most Western oil fields, oil and water pumped from the wells are separated before being put into the pipeline. In Russia, however, the water from the wells, which contains corrosive sulfuric acid, is dumped directly into the pipeline system. "So you end up with acid swilling around in the bottom of the pipelines," says Paul Horsman, a Green Peace environmentalist currently in the Usinsk area of Russia to monitor the effects of the giant oil spill last fall. "Without the separating facilities, even a new pipeline wouldn't last more than 10 years."

Huge chunks of Russia's pipelines lie buried, some of them underneath the frigid Arctic tundra. With temperatures swinging from 40 degrees Celsius below zero to 30 degrees above, the lines are frequently bent like pipe cleaners as the soil contracts and expands with the change in temperature. Mr. Horsman says portions of pipe suspended above the tundra are collapsing as the supports holding them sink into the marshlands.

REBOUND: Firm tries to remake image

(From 1G)

It's also become one of the greatest sources of disappointment for investors.

Enserch's operating income from this business fell to $63.2 million last year from $101.5 million in 1993. A string of mild winters and historically low gas prices have hurt the bottom line. But industry analysts say the problems go deeper.

They point out that because the company has been protected by government regulations, it doesn't operate like a competitive business.

That observation could be applied to any number of natural gas utilities and interstate pipeline companies. But Lone Star has fared worse than many in its peer group in improving its customers-to-employees ratio, the analyst said.

Biegler has targeted Lone Star for improvement by reshaping the company from top to bottom. Lone Star has crunched seven layers of management into three and cut its payroll from 3,300 employees to 2,800 in two years.

Still, the company needs to cut costs even more, several analysts said. And some see Lone Star's performance as the ultimate measure of Biegler.

"He's very sharp, and he could very well turn out to be a big success story when all is said and done," said Eassey. "But he needs some help with the weather and natural gas prices. You can make a company only so lean and mean."

In the meantime, the exploration and production sector could be the scene of Enserch's biggest successes.

Prosperity hinges in large part on a Gulf of Mexico oil project known as Garden Banks 388. A fair amount of risk is involved because the discovery lies beneath 2,200 feet of water, making it more expensive to recover the oil and natural gas. Enserch is saving money by converting a drilling barge into a floating drilling and production unit. It hopes to cut capital costs even more by selling Mobil a 40 percent piece of the prize.

Enserch plans to start production this summer regardless of what Mobil does. But analysts say they would feel a lot more comfortable if a big name gives its blessings to the project.

The company's other potentially lucrative deepwater project in the Gulf of Mexico — Green Canyon 254 — won't go on line before 1998, Biegler said. While those projects promise the biggest payoff, Enserch's stock in trade is getting natural gas out of old and tight underground rock structures in East Texas. But with gas selling for about $1.70 per thousand cubic feet — a poor price by industry standards — Enserch is slowing those efforts.

Under Biegler's direction, Enserch is adding oil holdings while seeking a balance between long-term and short-term prospects — an important move in the eyes of industry experts. New acquisitions must complement the company's Gulf of Mexico and East Texas properties and produce cash flow quickly, Biegler said.

In another effort to grow a business that contributed $25.6 million in income and $179.1 million in revenue last year, Biegler converted Enserch Exploration from a limited partnership to a stand-alone corporation traded on the New York Stock Exchange in January. Following the Dalen acquisition, Bigler aims to increase outside investment in Enserch Exploration by selling stock in a $250 million initial public offering later this year.

"In some manner, he's got to get (the exploration and production company) in the public hands," said Wagner, the Petrie Parkman analyst. "1995 is an important year to follow through with the commitments he made in 1994."

That's because when Biegler took over, the financial community doubted anything Enserch had to say, several analysts said.

Under William McCord — chief executive officer of Enserch from 1971 until 1993 — management was viewed as aloof and arrogant, according to two longtime company observers and four Wall Street analysts.

McCord declined to speak to The Dallas Morning News.

Without question, the 1980s was a difficult decade to oil and natural gas companies. Some companies went out of business, and some got so deeply into debt — betting that natural gas and oil prices were sure to rise — that they're struggling to survive today. Enserch was never in such dire straits. Still, few companies so angered Wall Street, analysts said.

The belief on Wall Street was that the company was heading in the wrong direction, spending millions on questionable ventures like construction and oilfield services while not making the most of its bread-and-butter natural gas businesses, the analysts said. Another prevailing view was that Enserch wasn't doing a good job of developing its prized East Texas natural gas properties or managing its Lone Star gas utility.

"Wall Street generally detests diversification into businesses that seem to have no synergies with your basic business," said Fleischer, the Goldman Sachs analyst.

Biegler, a petroleum engineer who worked his way to the top after joining Enserch full time in 1968, met the festering Wall Street resentment head on in his first big session with financial analysts.

"He did a bang-up job of saying we know we haven't performed, and your criticism of us in the past has been valid. And he laid out what he wanted to do," recalled Fleischer.

"David is more user friendly to the financial community," said Benjamin Bown, Enserch's vice president for financial relations, who took the brunt of the criticism from Wall Street. "He's a good listener. He's patient. He's bright."

If Biegler has charmed Wall Street analysts with his self-effacing style and Texas drawl, he's also disarmed them with his candor and accessibility. One Wall Street analyst recalls thinking when he first met the unassuming Biegler, "They're not going anywhere with this guy." He now believes he was wrong.

"He's down to earth, but he's very sharp," says Eassey, the Merrill Lynch analyst. "He knows his business."

Biegler is also getting good reviews from inside Enserch, where he's set a shirt-sleeves tone while encouraging individual initiative. "He's turning this company around, getting the jackets off," one associate says.

Biegler admits that he underestimated the pressures of his job, particularly the nagging sense of responsibility he feels for making sure he delivers on his promises to shareholders and the financial community.

"It's a degree of personal pressure beyond what you imagine," he said. "But it's always fun when you do what you think you ought to be doing in life."

PRICES: Elements favor higher prices

determines the price. "It it is an orphan, the price will be low. If it is in demand, the price will be higher. As little as 3 percent excess capacity can impact the price."

He explained that the volatile action is created by a mismatch between the time frame of the pricing mechanism (30 day sport market) and the development time frame for the underlying asset (two years or more.) "It's sort of like buying a house with a credit card." He predicted natural gas prices would alway be volatile, as long as the 30 day spot market was the controlling factor and price and not supply was the driving concerns of the market.

Weather will also be a factor in higher gas prices in 1996. The summer of 1994 was unusually cool and not much gas was burned in generators to produce electricity. By the same token, it was an usually warm winter and natural gas send outs was 18-24 percent lower than the previous year.

"This is a statistical occurrence not likely to repeat," Garcia reports. "For instance it was the fifth-warmest December in 100 years in New York City."

He also notes that nuclear and hydro power plants have been performing at optimum deliverability with a very low level of downtime, and could be due for unscheduled maintenance in the future. "Nobody can predict what the nukes and hydro plants will do. Buy they cannot perform at more optimal rates. Conditions will either stay the same or get worse."

He said if they get worse and downtime occurs, natural gas will step in to take up the slack.

"Just to replace the electricity generated by the two nuclear units of South Texas Nuclear Plant can require up to 500 Mmcfd of gas or 1 percent of total U.S. demand," said Garcia.

Also included in the supply-demand picture painted by Garcia is the reduced drilling budgets of 1995 which are further expected to tighten supply. The analyst predicts currently low prices which have caused producers to cut back on drilling budgets will have an impact on excess deliverability. He points out that the number of rigs drilling for natural gas have decreased 18 percent, and will result in less flush production from new wells when the 1995-96 heating season rolls around.

While an excess of near term deliverability of 10 percent may have been in order in the market of five years ago. Garcia points out that the new enhanced system with more efficient storage and transportation can get by with as little as 5 percent. "It is called just in time inventory."

Garcia warned that as efficient as the system is: "It is drilling not storage that creates supply. If excess deliverability cushion falls close to zero, even the most efficient system cannot make up the shortfall. Of course, a $5 per Mcf will help things get corrected rather quickly."

Also, adding to the elements for higher prices, says Garcia, is the fact that reserve replacements are running less than 100 percent and the life of the reserves is coming down. "We have to drill for natural gas if the industry is to remain viable and that will require a price that will permit drilling. It's that simple. If want more gas we will have to drill for it. If we get gas from the Canadians they will have to drill."

Garcia says oil and gas are distinct and separate markets. "I think that was confirmed last January when the price of oil went to $13 and the price of natural gas went to $2.70 per Mcf and there was only a 4 percent crossover."

He said there were so many unknowns that could impact natural gas prices — hot summers, cold winters, hurricanes in the Gulf and downtime on a nuclear generator — but nearly all of them favored higher prices.

CO2: Shell aims seminar at independents recently, we spent about $300,000 per pattern."

He pointed out too, that the cost of CO2 had decreased about 40 percent since the mid-80s when many of the present projects were installed.

"Today independents can take advantage of the lower cost CO2, and the costly lessons learned by the majors. Better reservoir characterization has helped us reduce risk, and experience has allowed to greatly reduce the up front cost of a project."

Fox and others will share some of those lessons learned at a seminar Tuesday at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification. The focus of the dau long seminar will be "CO2 for Independents" and will be over six sessions. The first overview session will deal with a review of existing floods, CO2 sources, technology and innovative financing. Five other technical sessions will be announced at a later date.

Presenters will be Fox and Tim Bradley of Shell, Steve Melzer of CEED and Loren Stiles of UTPB. Reservations may be made by calling CEED.

Texas Activity

The Texas Railroad Commission issued a total of 986 original drilling permits in March, compared to 1,125 in March 1994. The March total included 686 permits to drill new oil and gas tests, 43 to reenter existing well bores and 257 recompletions. There were 188 new oil and gas test permits issued in the Midland district and 88 in the Lubbock district, overseen from the commission's Midland office. To date in 1985, there have been 2,756 permits issued, up 6 percent from 2,588 during the first three months of 1994. Operators reported 432 gas, 360 oil and 28 injection and other completions in March, comipared to 280 gas, 362 oil and 39 injection and service completions in March 1994. There were 92 oil and 30 gas completions in the Midland district, 42 oil and one gas completion in the Lubbock district. For the first three months of 1995, there have been 2,137 completions recorded, up 8 percent from 1,959 for the same period of 1994.

Pennzoil reports lower income for quarter

HOUSTON—Pennzoil Co. reported 1995 first quarter net income of $2.7 million, or $0.06 per share, compared to $5.8 million, or $0.13 per share, for the same period in 1994.

Revenues for the quarter were $635 million versus $622 million for the same period last year.

First quarter net income included pretax nonrecurring income of $27.7 million resulting from a $24.7 million favorable resolution of a franchise tax dispute and a $3.0 million gain on the sale of certain oil and gas properties. Also included in the first quarter earnings were pretax nonrecurring charges totaling $10 million related to the settlement of certain legal disputes. After adjusting to eliminate these nonrecurring items, on an after-tax basis Pennzoil had an adjusted loss for the first quarter of 1995 of ($0.19) per share compared to adjusted earnings of $0.25 per share for the first quarter of 1994.

Looking at the company's results of operations, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer James L. Pate said natural gas prices were down $0.84 per Mcf, or nearly 38 percent below those of a year earlier, costing Pennzoil $48 million in pretax operating income. He also noted that the oil and gas segment reported higher gas and liquids production volumes, higher liquids prices and a 15 percent decrease in operating costs per barrel of oil equivalent.

Pate said the outlook for natural gas for the remainder of the year is improving. "That's important to Pennzoil," he noted, "because every $0.10 per Mcf increase in the average price of natural gas increases our annual earnings by about $0.36 per share." He observed that gas in storage, built up as the result of an extraordinarily warm winter, has been drawn down, and the industrys drilling for natural gas has been sharply reduced. Demand is growing at 2 to 3 percent a year, and the long-term trend in natural gas reserves is downward. "So, with increasing demand for natural gas and declining reserves, the long-term fundamentals for natural gas remain very good."

TransTexas replaces gas reserves

HOUSTON—TransTexas Gas Corp. announced that it replaced 291 percent of its total production at a cost of $0.32 per Mcfe and increased the company's Reserves/ Production ratio from 5.4 to 6.4 years. In the six months ended Feb. 1, 1995, TransTexas' proved reserves increased 32 percent to a record 959 billion cubic feet of natural gas equivalent (Bcfe).

Of the 230 Bcfe increase, 164 Bcfe was attributed to additions from the company's new discoveries in Bob West North and two other south Texas areas. Company President, Arnold Brackenridge said, "In the last six months, we have worked hard to acquire over 80,000 acres in these three discovery areas and believe we have discovered significant, low-cost additional reserves of natural gas."

The company also announced that it has hedged the price of approximately 91.25 Bcf of its production of natural gas from June 1995 through May 1996 at a price of $1.72 per million British thermal units (MMBtu). Under the terms of the swap agreement, the company limited its downside price exposure while preserving upside potential above $2.00 per MMBtu.

Rowan Companies to construct record mobile offshore drilling unit

HOUSTON—Rowan Companies, Inc. has committed for the design and construction of the world's largest bottom supported mobile offshore drilling unit (MODU).

The new rig, to be named Gorilla V, is an enhanced version of the highly successful Gorilla Class, and will be capable of operating in the North Sea in water depths of up to 400 feet.

Gorilla V is estimated to cost $135 million and will be constructed at LeTourneau's Vicksburg, Miss. facility. Delivery is estimated for the second quarter of 1998.

Commenting upon the investment decision, Rowan Chairman C.R. Palmer stated, "Numerous tracts currently under lease are beyond the water depth capability of existing bottom supported MODUs. We believe Gorilla V, an enhanced version of our three existing Gorilla rigs, will provide an extremely cost efficient option for exploration and development drilling, particularly for those customers operating in the North Sea."

Palmer continued, "Rowan is confident of a bright future for technologically superior equipment operating in hostile marine environments."

Rowan Companies, Inc. is a major provider of international offshore contract drilling and aviation services.

MEETINGS

Charles Perry to keynote annual ISA banquet

Charles Perry, chariman of the Midland/Odessa Transportation Alliance, will be the guest speaker at the third annual May banquet of the Permian Basin section, International Society for Measurement and Control. The meeting will be at the Mission Dorado Country Club beginning with social hour at 6:30 p.m.

Perry will present "MOTRAN: I-27 Economic Development for West Texas" and will cover the status of the project as well as the competition and advantages of the proposed route.

Cost is R12.50 per person. Reservations can be made by calling 563-0033.

SPE study group to discuss Round Top field

The Reservoir Study Group of the Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers will meet Thursday at the American Legion Hall beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Clif Bias, geological advisor with Conoco Inc. in Midlnad, will speak on "The Development History of the Round Top Palo Pinto Field, Fisher County, Texas and the Impact of 3-D Seismic Technology on Future Development."

Cost is $8 per person.

MC to present two-day air compliance seminar

Midland College will present an Air Compliance seminar Tuesday and Wednesday in the Roadrunner Room of Midland College's Scharbauer Student Center from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Presenters William F. Priebe, John Haagensen and Nicholas Worontsoff will give an concise overview of air permitting regulations in the Permian Basin. Cost is $250.

PBGC CONTINUING EDUCATION

CARBONATE RESERVOIR GEOLOGY: This course teaches the Archie method of carbonate reservoir geology starting with the relationship between engineering parameters and rock fabric and using these relationships to map the distribution of porosity, permeability and saturation on a reservoir and interwell scale. The course is intended for geologists interested in development of new oil and gas fields as well as those interested in reservoir characterization for improved recovery. Fee $145; F. Jerry Lucia, instructor; May 17, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

BASICS OF OIL AND GAS ACCOUNTING: This course primarily deals with the costs incurred in the exploration and production of oil and natural gas. Account for the incurrance and disposition of these costs is presented for the two major accounting methods: Successful effort and full cost. Eligible for 16 CPE credits. Qualifies for 13 CPL or 13 RLP recertification credits. Fee $275; Patrick W. Fitzgerald, instructor. May 18-19, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

NAMEDROPPING

Management changes and promotions have been announced by Ref-Chem Corp.

B.L. CRENSHAW has been promoted to president and chief operating officer of the company's Permian Basin division. He will be responsible for all its engineering, construction and maintenance activities. With the company 30 years, Crenshaw currently serves as executive vice president and chief operating officer.

HARVEY J. PAGE will relinquish his position as president of Ref-Chem but will retain his position as chairman of the board of directors and chief executive officer as well as president of Ref-Chem Construction, a wholly-owned subsidiary.

A Midland man has been named an officer in the Gas Processors Suppliers Association.

TOM SMITH, founder and president of Mechanical Equipment, has been named a vice president.

Other officers include CHUCK ADAMS of Caterpillar Inc., Mossville, Ill., president; HARVEY L. HENSLEY JR., Pro-Quip Corp., Houston, treasurer; and WAYNE CRANDELL, Perry Equipment Co., Mineral Wells, vice president.

Diamond Shamrock Refining President J.E. "Ed" PRATER has elected to retire from the company, effective June 1. Prater, 57, has been with the company since 1962. He also holds the tiles of senior vice president and group executive of Diamond Shamrock, Inc.

Diamond Shamrock Chairman, CEO, and President Roger Hemminghaus has named PAUL EISMAN to the position of vice president and group executive for refining, replacing Prater, June 1. Eisman will be responsible for the engineering and operation of both Diamond Shamrock refineries, the Mont Belvieu underground hydrocarbon storage facility and the propylene splitter. He will also be a member of the corporation's executive committee.

Crenshaw

Smith

Hemminghaus also named four others to new vice president positions. MIKE MILAM has been named vice president, operations, for the refining department; JOHN EMLEY will become vice president, information systems; LYNN HILLMAN has been named vice president, crude oil supply; and DON THURMOND will be vice president, wholesale marketing. BOB BEADLE will assume the new position of vice president, retail marketing.

In other changes, PEGGY GOWANS has been named assistant to the chairman and MARY HARTMAN becomes manager, government and investor relations, both effective June 1.

Torch Energy Advisors Inc announced that CHUCK GREEN, who has served as president for the past year, will become Torch's vice-chairman and chief investment officer.

DOUG FOSHEE, formerly Torch's executive vice president, acquisitions, will be president and chief operating officer. Green will be in charge of the company's fund raising, funds management, and client relations. Foshee will handle the day-to-day operation of the business.

Crystal Oil to buy First Reserve

SHREVEPORT, La. (Dow Jones News) — Crystal Oil Co. said it will acquire First Reserve Gas Co., a privately held natural-gas storage company, for about $78 million in cash.

Crystal said the proposed purchase represents the company's first acquisition following the sale of its domestic oil and gas producing properties to Apache Corp. last December.

First Reserve, which is headquartered in Dallas and has its storage operations in Hattiesburg, Miss., had operating income of $6.7 million last year on revenue of $11.8 million, Crystal said.

Last year, Crystal earned $2.1 million, which includes a reduction of $2.3 million for the early retirement of debt, on revenue of $43.5 million.

The transaction is expected to close by the end of June.

HAVING TROUBLE PUMPING YOUR WELLS?

IS GAS-LOCK A PROBLEM?

DO YOU WANT TO INCREASE YOUR OIL AND GAS PRODUCTION?

We can do it, and have already proven we can.
There are no high priced gimmicks to buy.

We can solve your pumping problems with technical "know how", and practical application of the equipment you already have.

Let us tell you about the
"GIBCO GAS BUSTER SYSTEM"
recently designed by GIBCO Pump & Supply, Inc., Midland, Texas and Carlsbad, New Mexico.

We have already installed the
"GIBCO GAS BUSTER SYSTEM"
in many wells in the Spraberry and Eastern New Mexico fields.

We have yet to install it without POSITIVE results and INCREASED PRODUCTION.

Numerous operators are allowing us to install the
"GIBCO GAS BUSTER SYSTEM".

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Concho yields Camar Sand gas discovery

Staff Reports

A Camar Sandstone gas discovery has been reported in Concho County, two miles southwest of Millerview.

BOWERMAN OIL & GAS INC. tested the No. 1 R.L. Carter for a calculated absolute open flow of 543 Mcfd from perforations 2,927 to 2,931 ft. The interval was acidized with 350 gallons of 15 percent acid.

Permitted as a 4,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 3,130 ft. and plugged back to 3,037 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,101 ft.

Formation tops, on kelly bushing elevation of 1,703 ft., include the Breckenridge Limestone at 1,682 ft., Palo Pinto Limestone at 2,514, Camar Sandstone at 2,920 and Goen Limestone at 3,076 ft.

Location is 1,000 ft. from north and west lines of Section 97, Block 72, T&NO survey, Abst. 874.

Jennings gas pay opened in McCulloch

A new Jennings Sandstone gas pool has been opened in the Exoc field of McCulloch County, one mile east of Lohn.

B.G. WATSON potentialed the No. 1 Gardner for a calculated absolute open flow of 130 Mcfd. Production was natural from perforations 959 to 965 ft.

Planned as a 1,100 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 1,044 ft. and plugged back to 1,042 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

On kelly bushing elevation of 1,591 ft., formation tops include the Base Adams Branch at 510 ft., Base Palo Pinto Limestone at 712, Base Dog Bend Limestone at 770, Jennings Sandstone at 959, Gardner Sandstone at 978 and Caddo Limestone at 1,031 ft.

Location is 1,450 ft. from east and 150 ft. from northeast lines of Joseph Bleike survey 1055, Abst. 45.

Yoakum producer tested as horizontal producer

ENERGY DEVELOPMENT CORP. has sidetracked an existing wellbore, completing it as a horizontal drainhole in the Kristen (Devonian) field of Yoakum County, 11.5 miles southwest of Plains.

The No. 3 Cleveland "A" was comipleted to pump 100 barrels of crude. Production was natural from open Silurian Dolomite interval 11,802 to 11,870 ft.

Total depth was 11,934 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 11,715 ft. and a 2-7/8 casing liner hung from 11,650 to 11,870 ft. Kick-off point was 11,626 ft.

Surface location is 2,200 ft. from south and 1,400 ft. from east lines of Section 599, Block D, John H. Gibson survey, Abst. 525. Bottom hole location is 228 ft. from north and 162 ft. from west lines of surface location.

Andrews field gets fifth Wolfcamp well

A fifth producer has been added to the Fasken (Wolfcamp 8400) field of Andrews County, 16 miles south of Andrews.

BARBARA FASKEN reentered the No. 2 Fee "ZA", testing it to pump 30 barrels of 40 gravity crude, 16 Mcfd and 32 barrels of water from perforations 8,876 to 8,880 ft.

Originally drilled to 10,650 ft., the well was plugged back to 8,925 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and east lines of Section 39, Block 42, T-1-N, G&MMB&A survey, Abst. 205.

Amerada Hess names new CEO

NEW YORK (AP) — A new generation of the Hess family is taking charge at the energy company that bears its name.

John B. Hess, 40, was elected as chairman and chief executive of Amerada Hess Corp.He replaces his father, Leon Hess, who has been at the helm of the company throughout most of the last 25 years, said spokesman C.T. Tursi.

The elder Hess, who is now 81, founded the company with his father, Mores, in the 1930s. Leon Hess will continue as chairman of the executive committee.

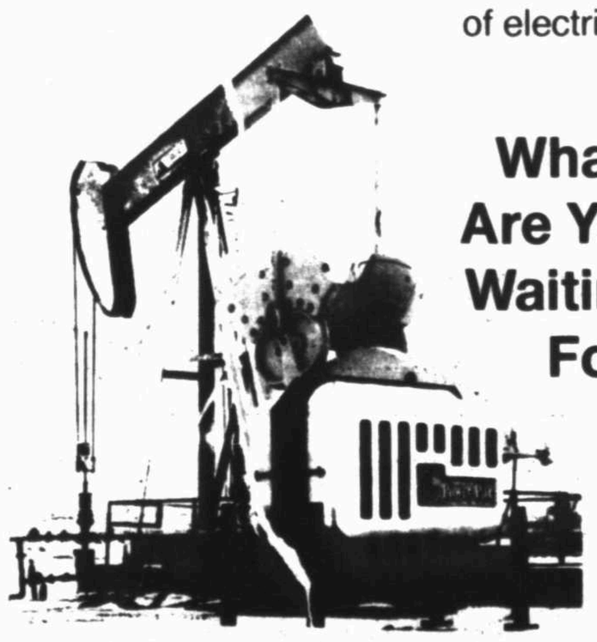

John Hess was formerly senior executive vice president.

The company also announced Sam Laidlaw was elected president and chief operating officer. He replaces Robert F. Wright, who is retiring.

Enron, Chieftain buy offshore stake

HOUSTON—Enron Oil & Gas Co. and Chieftain International (U.S.), Inc. signed a 50/50 joint purchase and sales agreement with Santa Fe International, Inc. and affiliates for the acquisition of all of Santa Fe International's interests in the Gulf of Mexico. The proposed purchase is expected to close this summer and is contingent upon, among other conditions, Hart-Scott-Rodino approvals and concurrence of the Kuwaiti Government which owns Santa Fe International. The purchase price was not disclosed.

The acquisition package includes interests in 43 developed blocks covering 205,173 gross acres (89,526 net to EOG/Chieftain) and 19 undeveloped blocks covering 107,788 gross acres (65,989 net to EOG/Chieftain). The properties are located in the Matagorda Island and High Island areas offshore Texas, the Garden Banks, Eugene Island and West Cameron areas offshore Louisiana, and the Viosca Knoll/Mobile Bay areas of the eastern Gulf of Mexico. Production from these properties in 1995 is projected to be 83 MMcf/d of natural gas (66 MMcf/d net to EOG/Chieftain) and 780 barrels per day of crude and condensate (650 barrels per day net to EOG/Chieftain).

Sonat finals Austin Chalk wildcat

HOUSTON—Sonat Exploration Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of Sonat Inc. has drilled and completed a significant Austin Chalk horizontal well in Vernon Parish, Louisiana. The Temple 28 No. 1 tested at a rate of 7.2 million cubic feet of gas and 1,500 barrels of oil per day. Sonat Exploration owns a 40 percent working interest in the well, which was drilled to a vertical depth of 11,570 feet and has two horizontal wellbores that extend a total of 8,080 feet within the Austin Chalk formation.

"This well is a very important discovery for us as it represents a five-mile extension to the east of the Brookeland Austin Chalk Field," said Don Russell, chairman and chief executive officer of Sonat Exploration.

The Brookeland Field currently covers 800 square miles and has produced 12 million barrels of oil and 85 billion cubic feet of gas from the Austin Chalk since the first horizontal discovery in 1990. Sonat Exploration operates 36 wells in the Brookeland Field, currently produces 48 million cubic feet of gas per day and 6000 barrels of oil per day, which is 40 percent of the current total for the field. Sonat Exploration has participated in eight Austin Chalk wells so far this year and will participate in another 11 Austin Chalk wells before year end.

Halliburton, Global to offer total abandonment

HOUSTON—Halliburton Energy Services and Global Industries, Ltd. announced that they have signed an alliance agreement to offer a total package of abandonment services to oil and gas operators in the Gulf of Mexico.

The alliance, to be known as Total Abandonment Services (TAS), will combine the financial and operational strengths of each company to provide all facets of the abandonment process including engineering, project management, wellbore plug and abandonment, structure removal and site remediation.

At any point in the life of a producing field, oil and gas operating companies will be able to turn the complete well abandonment operation over to the alliance.

This will free them to use the associated engineering and project management resources for revenue generating activities.

Cost efficiencies will be realized as the alliance partners integrate work processes through job coordination and project management, shared use of construction vessels and consolidated administrative services.

Ken LeSuer, president and CEO of Halliburton Energy Services said, "Our customers have expressed a real need for a turnkey solution to well abandonment. Most want to keep their resources focused on projects that generate revenue. Our ability to evaluate the reservoir, identify candidates for production enhancement and manage the wellbore plug and abandonment, combined with Global's derrick barge, liftboat and diving capabilities, give us a unique opportunity to provide the total solution to this need."

Abandonment activity is steadily increasing in the Gulf of Mexico as producing fields mature and wells reach the end of their economic life.

According to Minerals Management Services, there are over 3,800 structures in the federal waters of the Gulf of Mexico. These structures have been in operation an average of 15 years and one-third are over 20 years old.

Once production ceases, federal regulations require that these structures be removed and the sites restored. In 1992 and 1993, the number of removals of offshore structures exceeded the number of new installations in the Gulf of Mexico.

W.J. Dore, chairman, president and CEO of Global said, "We are always seeking to respond to requests from our customers for new and innovative solutions. Recently, they began asking for assistance in dealing with increasing abandonment responsibilities."

He added, "Global's traditional services focused on structure removal and site remediation. By combining forces with Halliburton, we can provide a wider range of services to our customers. Each program can be customized according to each customer's needs."

"These two companies are uniquely positioned with the broad capabilities to offer a total solution," said Tom Slocum, TAS program manager.

"As we incorporate 'best practices' into a seamless organization with a single point of contact, our customers will see opportunities to reduce the costs associated with these procedures," he continued.

Global Industries Ltd. (NASDAQ: GLBL) offers solutions to worldwide offshore needs by providing a wide array of pipeline, derrick, diving and special services. Its fleet of marine vessels is the largest dedicated to marine construction in the Gulf of Mexico.

Halliburton Energy Services, a Halliburton Company (NYSE: HAL) organization, is one of the world's leading suppliers of energy products and services. Founded in 1919, the organization provides a broad range of services and products to the energy industry on a global basis.

Swift announces significant well completion

HOUSTON—Swift Energy Company announced that it has completed and placed on production the LCRA/COA No. 2-H well in the Giddings Field in Fayette County, Texas, recording an initial state potential test of 12.7 million cubic feet of natural gas and 544 barrels of condensate per day with a flowing tubing pressure of 5,230 psi on a 24/64 inch choke. This well is the second prolific well drilled by the company on its 8,800 acre lease in this area. Swift Energy collectively owns 22.8 percent working interest in the well through its direct participation in the well, and as a result of its general partner share in the Swift Drilling Ventures 1994-1 partnership which separately owns a 12.5 percent working interest.

Swift has participated in a total of 15 successful horizontal well completions in the past 2-1/2 years in Fayette County and has plans to drill has many as seven wells both this year and next year in the area. Fayette County is one of four primary exploration and development areas scheduled for drilling activity by the company in 1995. Swift has previously reported successful wells in Arkansas, Oklahoma, Wyoming as well as other parts of onshore Texas during the first four months of the year. Swift began expansion of its exploration and development drilling effort in 1991 and significantly increased its activities in 1994, with the drilling of 44 wells, six of which were exploratory discoveries. During the first four months of 1995, Swift has participated in drilling two exploratory and nine development wells with one exploratory success and nine development successes. For the full year 1995 the company plans to drill a record 24 exploratory and 42 development wells in its focused areas, more than a 50 percent increase in drilling activity over 1994.

Swift Energy Company is an independent oil and gas company engaged primarily in the acquisition, exploration, development and operation of oil and gas properties, with an emphasis on domestic onshore operations. Swift has a record of growth that is founded on an ambitious program of reserves acquisition and enhancement, disciplined exploration, conservative financing and innovative management.

Diamond Shamrock details plans for plant expansion

EL PASO—Diamond Shamrock Chairman, CEO, and President Roger R. Hemminghaus announced plans to double the capacity of the propylene splitter at Mont Belvieu.

The announcement to construct a second 730 million pound per year propylene splitter at the Diamond Shamrock facility in Mont Belvieu came during the corporation's annual meeting this morning in El Paso, Texas.

Hemminghaus noted that the project was approved "minutes ago" by the board of directors. "The propylene business continues to offer significant growth and profit opportunities, and with our existing infrastructure, we can take advantage of the economies of scale to continue to increase profitability," he said.

During the meeting, Hemminghaus also emphasized the importance of El Paso and the company's growth in the western part of its region. A pipeline from the McKee refinery to El Paso is being constructed, and Hemminghaus announced that construction has also begun on a terminal site near Loop 375 and Highway 180 in the city. October is the target date for completion of the project.

When complete, the company will be better able to supply its 50 El Paso Corner Store locations, as well as 11 Corner Stores in Las Cruces, N.M. and numerous jobber locations. In addition, Hemminghaus explained that the 420-mile, 10-inch pipeline, which will have the capacity to deliver 25,000 barrels per day, will also give the company direct access to markets in Arizona and northern Mexico.

Diamond Shamrock has also entered the Mexico market with its convenience store joint venture Corner Store Mexico and now has nine locations, including Corner Store Mexico in Juarez, which opened in February.

"Convenience item sales in our Mexico stores have remained quite strong despite the peso's problems," Hemminghaus commented. "Although extremely high interest rates across the border are impeding expansion right now, longer term, we expect to have a significant Corner Store network in Mexico."

In other business, Diamond Shamrock shareholders re-elected to the board of directors E. Glenn Biggs, president of Biggs & Co. of San Antonio; W.E. "Bill" Bradford, president and chief operating officer of Dresser Industries; and Bob Marbut, chairman and CEO of Argyle Communications, Inc.

Shareholders also approved a long term incentive plan and ratified the appointment of Price Waterhouse as independent auditors.

Diamond Shamrock, Inc., with sales of $2.6 billion, is a regional refiner and marketer of petroleum products headquartered in San Antonio, Texas. Diamond Shamrock has two Texas refineries with a throughput capacity of 205,000 barrels per day.

Union Texas, partners update Argentina drilling

HOUSTON—Union Texas (Argentina) Ltd., a subsidiary of Union Texas Petroleum Holdings, Inc., and its partners YPF Sociedad Anonima and Perez Companc announced the results of the first of two exploration wells planned to be drilled offshore Argentina in 1995.

Union Texas, as operator, said the Corona Austral No. 1 well was unsuccessful and has been plugged and abandoned. Located on the 4.4 million-acre Cuenca Colorado Marina-1 block in the South Atlantic Ocean, the well reached a total depth of 12,218 feet (3,725 meters).

The objective interval which was found in the venture's 1994 Cruz del Sur exploration well was absent in the Corona Austral well. No flow tests were conducted on the Corona Austral well.

Union Texas said the drilling rig currently is preparing to drill the venture's second 1995 exploration well, the Estrella No. 1. The second well is located approximately 56 miles (90 kilometers) west-northwest of the Corona Austral well.

The Estrella well is expected to be drilled to approximately 13,775 feet (4,200 meters).

In mid-1994, Union Texas and its partners drilled the initial exploration well on the Cuenca Colorado Marina-1 block. The Cruz del Sur No. X-1 well, which is located about 6 miles southwest of the Corona Austral well, was drilled to a depth of 14,069 feet (4,288 meters).

The Cruz del Sur well did not find commercial quantities of crude oil, but encountered hydrocarbon shows over a gross interval of 2,460 feet (750 meters). Reservoir formation tests yielded 39 degree API gravity oil.

The block is situated about 155 miles offshore in the South Atlantic Ocean, about 310 miles south of Buenos Aires. Water depths range from 300 to 3,000 feet with most prospects within 600 feet.

Union Texas has a 50 percent working interest in the block. YPF, the former Argentine national oil company, has a 35 percent working interest in the block, with Perez Companc, a large Argentine company with diversified interests, holding the remaining 15 percent working interest.

One of the largest independent producers located in the U.S., Houston-based Union Texas Petroleum Holdings, Inc. (NYSE: UTH) explores for and produces oil and gas overseas primarily in the U.K. North Sea, Indonesia and other strategic areas. The company has petrochemical operations in Louisiana.

Exxon begins exploration effort in Congo

IRVING, Texas—Exxon Corp. announced that its affiliate, Esso Exploration and Production Congo Ltd., has been awarded a prospecting license for the Mer Profonde I area, 80-120 kilometers (50-75 miles) offshore the Republic of Congo. The prospecting license covers an area of approximately 7,400 square kilometers (1.8 million acres) in water depths ranging from 200 to 2,000 meters (660-6,600 feet).

Exxon's affiliate is also in the final stages of concluding an agreement with the Republic of Congo to obtain a 15 percent interest in the approximately 1,100 square kilometer (270,000 acres) Marine IX permit. The Marine IX block, operated by Shell, is 80 kilometers (50 miles) offshore and lies in water depths ranging from 400 to 1,500 meters (1,300-4,900 feet).

With these announcements, Exxon affiliates continue to progress their exploration interests in Africa, which currently include activities in Angola, Chad, Egypt, Niger and Nigeria.

In Angola, a production sharing contract was signed during 1994 with Sonangol, the Angolan state oil company, for the more than one million acre offshore Block 15, which an Exxon affiliate will operate with a 40 percent interest. Other Exxon affiliates in that country own a 20 percent interest in two blocks south of Block 15 totaling nearly two-and-one-half million acres. Exploratory drilling has commenced on two of the blocks.

In Chad, where an Exxon affiliate operates with a 40 percent interest, three wildcats and an appraisal well were drilled in 1994, further evaluating the oil resource potential of a 20.6 million acre permit. In Niger, Exxon's affiliate has a 50 percent interest on a nine million acre permit; three wells were drilled in 1994 and found hydrocarbons. In Nigeria, Exxon affiliates have working interests in seven of the 13 blocks available to industry in that country's prospective deep water areas.
