Smaller drilling fee increase possible

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Despite Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's endorsement of an 800 percent increase in the fee for oil and gas drilling permits, the leader of an oil group says a smaller hike might still be negotiated.

The permit boost from $100 to $900 was proposed by Gov. Mark White as a means of helping trim state government's looming budget deficit.

"We've talked to both Gov. White and Lt. Gov. Hobby, and they're both reasonable people, and we can resolve any differences we have. And we will. Nothing is set in concrete," said Bruce Anderson of Houston, president of the 5,500-member Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

In a speech to that group on Wednesday, Hobby tossed aside a prepared speech text critical of White's proposal and told the oil men he favors the full increase.

"One of the most controversial feature's of Gov. White's program is, of course, the increase from $100 to $900 in the drilling permit. I think his proposal is very reasonable," said Hobby, who presides over the Texas Senate.

Before the speech, a Hobby aide gave an advanced copy of the lieutenant governor's text to Larry Springer, TIPRO's public relations man. Springer distributed copies to news reporters and a copy also was given to TIPRO president Anderson.

Hobby read most of the speech, but skipped the section critical of the fee hike, saying instead he favors the boost.

The portion of the advance text Hobby chose to skip had said:

"Gov. White has proposed an $800 increase in the fee paid for a drilling permit. Most of you no doubt oppose this. I, too, am concerned about the disincentive it offers to the drilling of shallow, low-cost wells.

"If a fee is absolutely necessary, an alternative that should be considered is to impose the fee at the point of completion, not on the front end of a well. Therefore, if a well isn't completed, no fee is owed; the fee would be levied only on the completion of producing wells. Perhaps this would offer less of a disincentive to drilling."

TIPRO's Anderson said the increase unfairly penalizes those who risk money to drill wells that might not produce.

Asked if he was disappointed that Hobby endorsed the permit hike, Anderson said he thinks Hobby might yet favor applying the higher fee only to completed, producing wells.

Shuttle readied for launch

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — A mystery countdown advanced today toward an afternoon launch of "Battlestar Discovery" with a crew of five military officers and a spy satellite to eavesdrop on the Soviet Union and a large area of the globe.

NASA spokesman Hugh Harris reported at midmorning the count was on schedule for America's first military man-in-space mission. But the exact launch time remained a well-kept secret to hamper Soviet efforts to monitor the $300 million satellite, which sources say is capable of tracking Russian missile tests and intercepting military and diplomatic communications in much of Europe, Asia and Africa.

The Defense Department and NASA say only that space shuttle Discovery will lift off between 1:15 p.m. and 4:15 p.m. EST, with a public announcement coming when the count reaches nine minutes before the intended launch.

From then until 10 minutes after the shuttle reaches orbit, normal mission control center announcements will keep the news media informed of shuttle performance. Under Defense Department guidelines, the public will be told only after the fact that the satellite has been released from the shuttle's cargo bay. After that, there will be only brief summaries every eight hours.

The landing time, also a secret, will be announced 16 hours before touchdown. Discovery is expected to stay aloft until at least Tuesday.

The deep freeze that had gripped the launch area for three days and caused a postponement of Discovery's planned Wednesday liftoff is over, and NASA said the outlook for this afternoon was favorable, with the temperature near 60 degrees.

Jail in danger of being closed

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Midland County Jail is in apparent danger of being closed if the sheriff is unable to draft a "viable" plan to rectify jail deficiencies.

The Texas Commission on Jail Standards in Austin Wednesday told Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter, County Attorney Mark Dettman, and three county commissioners that the sheriff is "to provide the commission with a written plan within 30 days addressing both how Midland County expects to bring the jail up to current standards and how officials will provide for the housing of inmates in the event the jail continues to be in non-compliance with (jail) commission rules and regulations," Dettman said this morning in a news conference.

But one member of the jail commission said he would recommend that the jail be closed and that inmates be transferred to other jails if the current jail is not brought up to standards.

Dettman said the jail commission's admonishment apparently was caused by the Midland County Commissioners' Court's cancelling the Feb. 2 certificates-of-obligation election, which called for a $9.9 million new jail east of town.

The county commissioners nixed the election at the request of the Committee of Concerned Voters, which wanted to postpone the election to better inform the voters of the pros and cons of the jail issue.

Dettman said the committee apparently was concerned that financing a new jail would cause a tax increase. However, the county commissioners and the sheriff have been banking on the jail's indebtedness to be paid off by leasing jail space to the federal government for housing federal prisoners.

Teen held in deaths of mother, boyfriend

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A 15-year-old boy was charged in the shooting deaths of his mother and her live-in boyfriend, and authorities say they hope the youth will be certified for trial as an adult.

Gilbert Cuellar, 15, told police he killed his mother and her boyfriend because the woman ordered him to go to the store in cold weather and the man threatened to burn his comic books.

On Wednesday, the youth was charged with two counts of murder in the deaths of his mother, 34-year-old Guadalupe Cuellar, and her boyfriend, 28-year-old Edward Bustin.

The couple were found dead in the living room of their southwest Houston home Monday. Each was shot once in the head with a .38-caliber pistol, police said.

The boy was being held in Harris County juvenile detention center.

He was scheduled to undergo physical and psyhcological tests before the certification hearing, authorities said.

Elizabeth Godwin, chief juvenile prosecutor for Harris County, said authorities hope to have the youth certified as an adult to be tried for murder.

"I don't think that the juvenile system is equipped to rehabilitate a person who has committed such crimes," Ms. Godwin said.

A March 12 hearing date has been set to determine whether the teenager should be tried as an adult.

Meanwhile, a high school football coach said based on previous behavior, he was not surprised that young Cuellar made admissions to officers about the killings.

"The boy had problems," said Leonard Fawcett, a football coach at Elsik High School, where Cuellar is a tenth-grader. "He never did fit in with the program. I don't think the shooting surprised any of his teammates — it didn't surprise me."

Head coach Mike Sciba said Cuellar was kicked off the football team in December for disciplinary reasons.

Jim Mitchell, another tenth-grader, said Cuellar did not get along with Bustin, a building contractor, and was depressed by his mother's frequent fights with her live-in boyfriend.

Ms. Cuellar was a dancer at a southwest Houston nightclub.

"He was a good kid — he just didn't know how to act around people," Mitchell said. "It was the people who didn't understand him who didn't like him."

Cuellar's closest friend, 16-year-old Abiel Espinosa, said Cuellar was close to his mother but resented Bustin. He said Cuellar said he threatened the man with a gun once to make him stop beating his mother.

Judge says 'protect yourself;' Man kills attacker

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Julius Poinsette had come to the judge seeking advice on what to do about a man he said had attacked him with a knife.

"Protect yourself," the judge said.

So Poinsette bought a gun, and on Tuesday night allegedly gunned down that man in an argument over money, police said.

"I tell everybody they have a right to protect themselves," Peace Justice Armando Flores told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times on Wednesday, "but I don't tell them to go out and buy a gun and kill someone."

Poinsette, 52, has been charged with murder in the shooting death of 46-year-old Freddie Major and was held Wednesday in Nueces County Jail in lieu of a $10,000 bond.

Coincidentally, Major was free on a $5,000 bond and had been scheduled to go to trial himself March 25 on murder charges in last year's shooting death of 35-year-old Fernando Leal.

Burn victims hospitalized in Odessa, Lubbock

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 36-year-old Odessa man was listed in stable condition in the burn unit of Lubbock General Hospital this morning following a Wednesday night industrial accident in north Ector County.

Alfred Sanchez, 36, Odessa, was one of five men burned when highly flammable materials ignited inside an industrial oven they were cleaning about 9 p.m. Wednesday.

Sheriff's department reports indicate the men were cleaning an oven, used in plastic coating processes, with acetylene torches when a highly flammable plastic epoxy powder was accidently released into an oven at Spincoat Co., 2400 Stephens Rd..

Enrique Garcia, 31, Odessa, remained in Odessa Medical Center Hospital this morning, listed in critical condition in the intensive care unit.

Sanchez was transported in critical condition to the Lubbock burn unit Wednesday night. He was in stable condition with burns to 34 percent of his body — 19-percent third degree and 15-percent second degree, according to reports from Lubbock.

Rudy Perez, 31, Odessa, was in stable condition this morning at the Odessa hospital, according to reports.

Odessans Joe L. Viscaino, 20, and Jose Garcia, 20, were treated and released later Wednesday night for injuries they sustained in the accident.

More detailed condition reports on the men receiving treatment were not available this morning.

MIDLAND CENTENNIAL 1885 1985

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts snow through Friday from the upper Great Lakes to Tennessee and from the Chesapeake through the Northeast. Rain and snow are forecast for the Southwest.

Fair skies, cooler temperatures likely

From Staff and Wire Reports

Temperatures are expected to cool in the Midland area as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for fair skies tonight with lows in the lower 30s, becoming partly cloudy with highs in the low 50s Friday. Tonight's southwesterly winds will be at five to 15 mph shifting to the north at five to 10 mph Friday.

Thursday's high was 36 degrees below the record of 82 set in 1950. This morning's low of 30 was 21 degrees above the record set in 1963.

STATE

Low-level cloudiness left in the wake of a high-pressure cell caused scattered showers and light rain over parts of South Texas between Laredo and Victoria today, and more precipitation was predicted along the Gulf coast in southeastern sections.

The National Weather Service said cloudiness spread northward into East Texas from the Gulf of Mexico. More light rain and drizzle were detected along the upper Texas coast, extending offshore into the Gulf of Mexico.

Skies elsewhere in the state were partly cloudy to cloudy, except for clear conditions over the Panhandle and northern south plains.

Winds were south to southwesterly at less than 10 mph over most of Texas, and light and northerly over the lower Rio Grande Valley and along the coast.

Lows ranged from the 20s over the Panhandle to the 30s and 40s elsewhere in the state. Extremes were 21 degrees at Amarillo to 45 degrees at Brownsville, Beaumont-Port Arthur, Mcallen and the Naval Air Station in Corpus Christi.

Other readings at 5 a.m. were 37 degrees at Waco and Abilene, 33 at Midland, and 34 at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport and Stephenville.

Also, it was 30 at Lubbock, 41 in San Antonio and 35 at San Angelo.

The weather service said that it should be cloudy with occasional light rain or drizzle along the Gulf coast and Southeast Texas tonight. Partly cloudy conditions were expected in the north and west, with mostly cloudy skies in the south through Friday.

Warmer temperatures were expected, with readings mostly in the 50s and 60s except in the 70s over Big Bend valleys.

NATION

Snow spread from northern New England to the Midwest today and across the Plains, while the East warmed from record-breaking low temperatures of earlier in the week and rain-melted snow prompted flood warnings in New Mexico.

Reagan comments on Nicaragua

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan says the United States must continue supporting anti-government rebels in Nicaragua, but that it would be very difficult to provide money openly because that could be "considered acts of war."

Reagan expressed his views Wednesday amid new warnings that Congress will turn down any request for additional secret aid for the rebels battling Nicaragua's Sandinista government.

"The covert aid situation, I suspect, is not a viable proposition," Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said in a speech at the National Press Club.

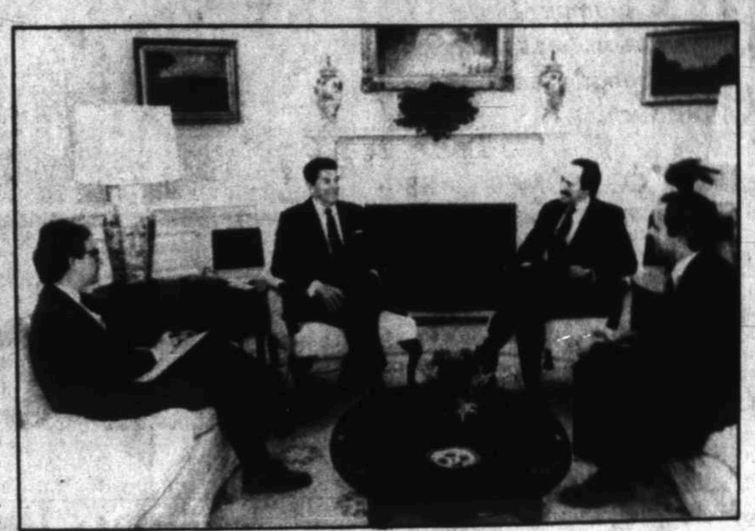

Reagan, who gave the first interview of his second term Wednesday to The Associated Press, also revealed that he has proposed Geneva as the setting for a new round of nuclear arms control talks with the Soviet Union, beginning early in March. He said there has been no reply yet from the Kremlin.

"Obviously, if there is some reason that's not satisfactory to them, we'll continue trying to find a date," the president said.

He noted that Moscow and Washington agreed to try to fix a time and a place for the talks within a month of Secretary of State George P. Shultz' meeting Jan. 7-8 with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. "We're still in that single month," Reagan said, "so I don't think that this is much foot-dragging."

He said "there just is no way of knowing" whether the uncertainty about Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko's health will affect the outcome of the arms talks.

However, he noted there have been as many Soviet presidents since he took office as there were in the preceding 48 years, and said, "The long periods of ill health and so forth obviously had to have an effect" on Kremlin decision-making during his first term.

Chatting with Associated Press representatives in the first private interview of his second term is President Ronald Reagan. Participants, from left, are White House reporter Terence P. Hunt, Reagan, White House correspondent Michael Putzel and Washington bureau chief Charles J. Lewis.

Congress imposed a ban on additional secret aid to Nicaragua last October until Feb. 28. A number of lawmakers, including Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, have said the United States should fund the rebels openly instead of with secret funds.

Asked about that proposal, Reagan said, "I think there are great difficulties in doing that...because in the world of international law, you find that you've changed the situation completely. And you then find yourself having to weigh what are then considered acts of war."

Durenberger, himself, has acknowledged there would be problems with providing overt aid.

The administration has never officially admitted that it is financing a rebel force trying to topple a government with which the United States maintains diplomatic relations. The administration has argued that its efforts have been directed not at overthrowing the Sandinistas but at preventing Nicaragua from exporting revolution to El Salvador and other Central American nations.

Vowing to continue trying to help the anti-government forces, Reagan said, "I believe that it is in our national interest, and security interest, to continue supporting the people of Nicaragua, who are asking nothing more than freedom from totalitarianism and the implementing of the democratic principles for which the revolution was fought, the revolution that those people supported."

During the interview, Reagan sat in a yellow wing chair across from his desk in the Oval Office, logs burning low in the fireplace behind him.

Over a 25-minute period, he also made these points:

— As "titular head of the (Republican) party," he should not encourage Vice President George Bush to run for president in 1988. But he praised Bush, saying no other vice president has been "as involved in the doings of government, policy-making and all this and has been as hard-working."

— He has been "discussing ways of capping" the fees doctors and hospitals charge Medicare patients in an effort to hold down the rising costs of the Medicare program for the elderly and disabled. He said doctors would be free to stop serving Medicare patients if they wish, adding that government social programs have discouraged physicians from providing free medical care to the poor on their own initiative.

— The nation's farmers should return to a free-market system uncontrolled by federal subsidy programs. But he said the administration's plan to phase out farm price supports will be done in increments so as not to "instantly pull that rug out" from under them.

— He intentionally is not publicly discussing the cases of five Americans who have been seized in Lebanon in the last year. "It doesn't mean we're sitting doing nothing," Reagan said. "It just means that it isn't something we should be talking about.

"We are active in doing all we can," the president said, adding emphatically, "I'm just not going to talk."

Lugar calls for strong apartheid stand

By BENJAMIN SHORE
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — New Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Richard G. Lugar said Wednesday the Reagan administration should try harder to persuade South Africa to give up its apartheid racial policy, but he cautioned that economic sanctions might not be effective.

Lugar, R-Ind., speaking at the National Press Club, said South Africa's ruling white government "is making an awesome mistake in failing to move rapidly" to share power with the population's black majority.

He warned against "any ambivalence on the part of our government in failing to say to South Africa that you're going to create a civil war for yourself, a bloody confrontation. You have to get that word through."

Lugar, 52, who previously had not been active on foreign policy issues, joined other House and Senate conservatives last month in urging South Africa to end apartheid.

He said Wednesday he was not sure that economic sanctions, such as barring American businesses from trading with South Africa, would be effective in pressuring Pretoria, "and could even hurt blacks we're trying to help."

"I frankly don't know what is persuasive."

"Maybe sanctions (would) help," Lugar said, "but we're really playing for keeps in this situation, and we have to make sure the actions we take are effective, that the word gets through."

Lugar said the United States must be concerned because of not only the racial injustice of apartheid, but also the "strategic" pro-West position held by South Africa against Soviet pressures in the region. He said open racial unrest in the country would weaken it.

South Africa's leaders, Lugar said, may not believe "they can move (to end apartheid), and if so, an awesome price will be paid."

On other issues, Lugar said:

— The United States should continue aid to El Salvador to fight leftist rebels, and to the contras in Nicaragua while they negotiate with the Sandinista regime for an end to the bloody civil war.

— The amount of U.S. assistance to Afghan rebels fighting Soviet occupation troops is "appropriate."

— The growing American foreign trade debt threatens to undermine traditional alliances as pressures for protectionism rise in the United States.

Lugar also said "the United States has not yet fully recovered from the Vietnam War," which he said caused the nation to become "uncertain about the use of force in the conduct of American foreign policy."

Lugar announced that the Foreign Relations Committee would next week begin a two-month public examination of American foreign policy in a series of hearings featuring present and past policy-makers.

"These hearings will re-establish the committee as a place where the future of American foreign policy will be debated," he said.

"We will seek to find and to strengthen an American consensus for clear and achievable foreign policy."

Rollins, Kirkpatrick may be offered jobs

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — President Reagan will offer Ed Rollins, his 1984 re-election campaign manager, the job of White House Counselor for Political Affairs, a new post, and will ask U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick to head the United States Information Agency (USIA).

This was disclosed today by senior Republican Senate sources who said that Rollins, widely credited with Reagan's massive election victory, would have been offered the cabinet post of Labor Secretary if Raymond Donovan had changed his mind and resigned under the pressure of a grand-jury indictment.

But there are no signs that Donovan is going to do that, the sources said. Reagan told UPI's Helen Thomas in an interview Wednesday that he has discussed with Kirkpatrick a high-level position. But he refused to specify whether it was the USIA or a CIA job, which Kirkpatrick would prefer.

"It's not physically in the White House," Reagan said. "It is a department of the executive branch that I'm not free to talk about yet that I think she would be very good at." Reagan will meet with Kirkpatrick later this month in an effort to persuade her to take the USIA post.

Charles Z. Wick, USIA Director, reportedly will be offered the post of ambassador to France. Neither Kirkpatrick or Rollins returned telephone calls. However a source close to Kirkpatrick said she will not make a decision until she has had a chance to hear the president out.

Reagan, who previously said that unfortunately there was no job opening "worthy of her," is prepared to try to persuade Kirkpatrick that she is not yet suited to become Secretary of State or National Security Adviser, her true aspirations, because she has not shown she could manage a large bureaucracy.

The USIA job, Reagan reportedly will tell her, would provide just such experience. Asked if that is a subtle hint that Kirkpatrick might be offered one of her two favored posts near the 1986 mid-term elections, a White House source said: "I don't think he (Reagan) will rule anything out."

Right now, the Reagan adviser said, he would like Kirkpatrick to take over the information agency because it "perfectly matches her talents. She would be a superb spokeswoman for our country's foreign policy and it would be an extension of the podium that she has right now."

If Wick became ambassador to France, another post presumably would have to be found for Evan Galbraith, the multimillionaire U.S. envoy to Paris. Galbraith has let it be known that he would like Kirkpatrick's U.N. job but there is lots of competition to succeed the outspoken envoy to the world body.

Secretary of State George Shultz is said to favor Ambassador Vernon Walters, a retired four-star general, who has held a variety of behind-the-scenes posts as America's chief trouble-shooter.

Many stillbirths, fetal deaths reported in Bhopal region

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Indian press reports said today there have been more than 150 stillbirths and abortions of dead fetuses recorded among women exposed to last month's deadly gas leak in Bhopal.

The respected Times of India newspaper and the United News of India news agency reported that there also had been at least 500 cases of serious eye damage since the Dec. 3 leak of methyl isocyanate at a Union Carbide pesticide plant killed more than 2,000 people in the city.

There have been conflicting reports on the probable longterm effects of the incident.

JAIL

Two years ago, voters turned down the $12 million courthouse-jail bond election.

County Commissioner Win Brown said of the jail being an on-again, off-again proposition: "I think they (jail commission members) got a little bit provoked and discussed it."

Painter said if the jail is closed and if inmates are transferred to the El Paso County Jail, the cost to Midland County would be almost $1 million a year in housing inmates.

That figure does not include transportation expenses and is calculated on 66 inmates, the current jail population. El Paso, the closest known jail to have the room, has space for 100 guest prisoners.

The jail commission is to reconsider the Midland County Jail plight in Austin March 27.

Painter said the jail commission seemed serious in its order.

"They got our attention," said Painter. "My Right Guard (deodorant) stopped working real quick."

The Midland County Jail was built as the fifth-floor at the Midland County Courthouse in 1974. That was at least a couple of years prior to the creation of the Jail Commission. At that time, Dettman said, the commissioners' court had consulted with jail experts, federal and state officials in building a suitable jail. At that time, the jail population was about 30. In the early 1980s, during the recent boom, the population soared to 125 but has sinced dropped to about 70. The population today was 66, Painter said.

"We had one of the better jails in the state (in the 1970s)," Dettman said. Dettman said the jail commission, which was formed in the late 1970s, first attacked those sub-standard jails built in the 1880s.

"After they got those jails taken care of, Midland County sort of floated to the top," Dettman said.

In recent years, the jail commission has been critical of Midland County Jail's deficiencies, which include lack of an exericise area, restricted sunlight, inadequate facilities for female inmates, lack of proper sight-and-sound separation of inmates and by the failure of the jail to meet fire safety standards.

Painter said "we are going to work awful hard" at complying with the jail commission's mandate.

"Of course, anything we are going to do will require money," Painter said, adding replacing or repairing the malfunctioning plumbing will cost $500,000.

What Painter called the "Band-Aid" approach to bring the jail up to standards would cost $2 million.

"And they (county commissioners) don't have that kind of money in surplus," Dettman said.

"I doubt that they (jail commission members) would approve the Band-Aid approach," Brown said.

Deputies on phones help revive, deliver babies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Deputy sheriffs on the emergency 911 telephone line helped a woman revive her 22-month-old son with artificial respiration and coached a man in the delivery of a baby boy.

Renee Smith said a 103-degree fever Tuesday impaired the breathing of her son, Jason Young, at the family's Canyon Country home, about 30 miles north of downtown in upper Los Angeles County.

"When he turned white and went limp, I got scared," Ms. Smith said.

When she called authorities, Deputy Steve Standley dispatched paramedics, then called Ms. Smith back. Her sister, Debbie Grass, answered.

Ms. Grass said that despite attempts at mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, the infant was still unconscious.

"Have you cleared the throat, pulled out the tongue?" Standley asked.

"Pinch the nose, so the air doesn't escape," he suggested

The women followed the instructions and the baby began wailing.

"It's possible that the deputy saved the baby's life," said Fire Capt. Don Kanallakan. "When you are talking about stopped breathing, every minute counts."

The child was treated at Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital in Valencia and sent home.

In La Crescenta, about 15 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles, Robert Trimm called deputies on the 911 emergency number after his wife, Roberta, went into sudden labor about 8:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Deputy Kraig Petersen dispatched a patrol car to the Trimm's home, then, as the baby was emerging, guided Trimm in how to perform a safe delivery.

Worker: Elder took pay cut to help refugees

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Jack Elder, charged with transporting three Salvadorans to a bus station, was so religiously committed that he took a pay cut to help Central Americans fleeing their war-torn homeland, a worker for a Catholic agency testified in Elder's trial.

Elder, 41, is the director of Casa Oscar Romero in San Benito. He is on trial in U.S. District Court on charges he transported the Salvadorans from the shelter to a Harlingen bus station last March 12.

George Solana, director of volunteers for educational and social services for the Texas Catholic Conference said Elder took a pay cut in late 1983 to direct the halfway house.

Solana, who had testified in a pretrial hearing on defense motions to dismiss the case, was the first defense witness to testify Wednesday, after federal prosecutors rested their case after calling only five witnesses.

Solana said Elder, a former Peace Corps volunteer, was fluent in Spanish and knew about the civil strife in Central America.

"I also felt he had a strong religious commitment," he said, adding that Elder took a pay cut from his public school teacher's job in San Antonio to move to the Rio Grande Valley.

Solana said Elder's job provides for a monthly stipend of about $100 and $85 for food and housing, plus allowances for his wife Diane and four children.

Earlier Wednesday, the three Salvadorans — Valentin Cruz, Transito Fuentes and Epifanio Canales — testified that Elder gave them a ride from the shelter to a bus station.

They said Elder knew they were from El Salvador, but that he did not tell them how to avoid immigration officials.

Elder said nothing when the three, speaking through an interpreter, pointed him out as the man who gave them a ride.

A U.S. Border Patrol agent testified that Elder dropped off the three Salvadorans at the bus station and then sped away.

Agent David Leal said he and agent Javier Galvan were checking bus stations on March 12 when they approached the Continental bus station in Harligen about 9 p.m.

"I observed a vehicle — an old Plymouth, mustard in color — and also observed three persons getting off this vehicle that appeared to me were undocumented aliens."

Clergy claim guilt in 'conspiracy of love'

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Claiming they are guilty only of "a conspiracy of love," five clergy members and eight other people have pleaded innocent to criminal charges of smuggling Central American refugees into the United States.

"The government calls this a criminal conspiracy. We call it a conspiracy of love," said Darlene Nicgorski, one of three Roman Catholic nuns among 16 people named in a 71-count indictment Jan. 10.

Two Catholic priests and a Presbyterian minister also were charged in connection with the nationwide sanctuary movement.

Thirteen of the defendants were released without bond after entering their pleas before U.S. magistrates in Phoenix and Tucson Wednesday. Arraignment of three others was postponed — one until the defendant can retain an attorney and two others because the defendants are residents of Mexico and had not been served legal papers.

Trial for all 13 was set for April 2 before U.S. District Court Judge Earl Carroll in Phoenix.

Before Wednesday's court sessions, a crowd estimated by police at 560 people gathered at St. Mary's Church in Phoenix to hear religious leaders and the defendants denounce the Reagan Administration's policies in Central America and the undercover investigation that led to the indictment.

A man wearing a scarf over his face took the pulpit and said he was a refugee from El Salvador who wanted to repute the U.S. government's claim that the refugees are seeking economic gain.

"We are fleeing the killings, the oppression, the misery and hunger," he said.

The Rev. John Fife, a Tucson presbyterian minister, said he was frightened that the government had sent "spies" into churches to obtain evidence for the indictment.

"I assumed we had constitutional guarantees of freedom of religion and freedom from harassment. I know that is no longer true," Fife said.

Later, after his arraignment in Tucson, Fife vowed that the refugee movement will continue.

James Corbett, a Tucson rancher charged in the case, read from a statement which said the sanctuary movement had been openly discussed and documented since it began and that the Reagan administration moved against it only after the president was elected to a second term.

Most of the defendants filed affidavits saying they could not afford to hire attorneys. Some were accompanied by attorneys who said they would work without charge if the court declined to authorize fees for them.

Arraignment of Katherina Flaherty was continued until Jan. 30 in Phoenix. Officials said they still were making arrangements to serve legal papers to The Rev. Ramon Dagoberto Quinones, a Catholic priest, and Maria del Socorro Pardo de Aguilar. Both live in the Mexican border town of Nogales, Sonora.

Farmers must pressure lawmakers to reduce deficits, farm leader says

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The nation's farmers must launch a full-court press on lawmakers and the president to make sure the federal deficit is reduced, a farm cooperative leader says.

"I urge you to put on the full-court press — all the pressure you can — on your congressman, your senators, and the administration to very significantly reduce the annual deficit and plan for a true balanced budget by 1988," said Roger Baccigaluppi, chairman of the National Conference of Farmer Cooperatives.

Baccigaluppi made the remarks Wednesday in an address at the annual meeting of the NCFC. About 1200 people representing farm cooperatives and cooperative banking interests are attending the meeting this week.

The NCFC is a lobbying arm for farm cooperatives, which include about two million farmers.

Baccigaluppi said if the deficit problem is not solved, it could mean an end to American agriculture "as we have known it."

"We in agriculture have complained a lot over the years," Baccigaluppi said. "Farmer's seldom, very seldom, admit that times are good. So the general public doesn't believe us."

The farm leader said he fears if the deficit problem is not solved by June of this year, politicians will already start thinking of re-election and will put the issue aside.

"It's time to call a halt to all this and to stop our government from charging all of our excesses to our children and grandchildren as if we had a Visa or Mastercharge card," he said.

Baccigaluppi said the best way to handle the $1.5 trillion debt is to create a bipartisan commission.

Such a commission, he said, could come up with solutions to the deficit and Congress could implement them, fixing any blame for the outcome on the commission.

"It's a very tough problem to deal with politically," he said. "We not only have to reduce spending, I believe, but also probably need to increase revenue.

"For every one dollar, one million or one billion dollars someone tries to cut in spending, there is a lobby out there arguing that it's bad social policy — it's bad for the nation — it's bad for whatever," Baccigaluppi said.

Deficits hurt farmers by driving up interest rates and by hurting trade of commodities on the international market, he said.

"We're on the brink of total disaster," Baccigaluppi said. "Once again, though, our biggest problem, the dollar, is much bigger than just agriculture."

Doria Paige Yarbrough, right, and her mother, Velma Herman, address a news conference after the 13-year-old girl was returned to her Lancaster, Calif., family. The girl, who ran away last November, saw her picture on a milk carton a dairy had printed.

Teen goes home after photo on milk carton

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The day after a photograph of a missing teen-ager appeared on thousands of milk cartons, the girl who left home two months ago rejoined her family with "a bunch of hugs and tears," her mother said.

Doria Paige Yarbrough, 13, was watching television with friends in Fresno about 160 miles northwest of her family's home in Lancaster when she saw a report on a dairy's campaign to help find missing children, authorities said.

Miss Yarbrough, who disappeared Nov. 11, was urged by the friends to go home and called her mother on Tuesday.

"I had pretty much given up," her mother, Velma Herman, said Wednesday from the Beverly Hills office of state Assemblyman Gray Davis. "I'm happy, excited."

"I'm happy to be home," was all that Miss Yarbrough would say at an afternoon news conference.

The two did not discuss why the teen-ager left home nor what she has been doing the past two months, Ms. Herman said.

"We haven't really discussed anything yet. First we're going to get settled in. Then we'll discuss the who, what, where and when," Ms. Herman said.

Miss Yarbrough's disappearance was widely publicized after Alta-Dena dairy announced Jan. 17 that it would place her photo and that of another missing girl on their milk cartons.

Television stations and newspapers ran pictures of the cartons, which began appearing on store shelves Monday, and Doria called home Tuesday after watching a television report on the campaign.

"I think what particularly motivated her was the statement that her mother loved her and wanted her home," said Davis, who suggested the campaign with Los Angeles County Sheriff Sherman Block.

Mother and daughter were reunited Tuesday night.

"I said, 'I love you.' There was just a bunch of hugs and tears," Ms. Herman said, adding that she told her daughter, "I'm so glad you're home."

She said Doria initially appeared anxious and hesitant about returning because she feared her mother was angry at her. But Ms. Herman reassured her. "She knew it was all right to come home. I wouldn't be mad."

At Doria's request, her parents picked her up at a bus stop in Lancaster, 45 miles north of Los Angeles.

Canadians want papers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorneys for nine Canadians who unknowingly underwent brainwashing experiments more than 20 years ago are asking a court to order CIA release of documents it has withheld on grounds of protecting national security.

The 21-page motion filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court says the order is necessary "to break the stonewalling roadblocks" the CIA has set up.

Goldwater stalls GOP budget plan

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — A drive by Senate Republicans to craft their own deficit-slashing package is stalling with the refusal of Sen. Barry Goldwater to suggest ways of cutting defense spending.

But Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole insisted Wednesday that opposition from Goldwater, the new chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, won't stop GOP senators from having their own budget plan by late next month.

"We would like to move something to the floor by the end of February," Dole said after meeting with committee chairmen on deficit-reduction plans.

The Kansas Republican did admit, "We're getting mixed results from different committees" to his request to submit recommendations by Friday on where their respective areas of the budget can be cut to reduce the federal deficit.

The deadlines for putting together the GOP package have repeatedly slipped and Dole said "there is nothing magic" about the Friday deadline.

Goldwater, for one, flatly refused to meet the timetable, telling reporters he awaits President Reagan's budget, due out Feb. 6.

"He's the commander-in-chief," Goldwater said of Reagan. "I listen to him."

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said Goldwater is not the only one having difficulty with the idea of suggesting cuts.

"We are biting some very tough bullets" on the budget, Domenici said.

He said several committee chairmen already have submitted budget recomendations and some have suggested alternatives, but "some have indicated that they cannot achieve" reductions.

"We want a $50 billion cut in 1986. We want something larger in 1987 and something larger still in 1988," Dole said, referring to the overall GOP goal.

He predicted that in the end, "Sen. Goldwater will be cooperative...We don't see any effort by any committee chairman to sidetrack what we're doing."

In fact, Goldwater declared defense spending should not be frozen and should increase in real terms — that is, increase even after inflation is taken into consideration.

"I would like to see a higher figure, but 5.7 per cent, 5.8 percent or even 6 percent is a figure we can meet without doing any damage to the economy," Goldwater said.

Goldwater was asked whether he believes attempts to freeze military spending are dead.

"That would be my guess," he replied.

But then he added without explanation that "an across-the-board freeze is something else." And he said that he believes that the budget-cutters are not addressing "the real trouble in our budget: unneeded and wasteful spending."

However, Domenici said the defense spending growth rate that Goldwater — and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger — are talking about would make cutting the deficit very difficult.

"There's very little latitude and it would be very difficult (to trim the deficit) with those kinds of defense figures," Domenici said.

He said he and Dole will meet with Goldwater soon on deficit-cutting, but that "no one is telling Sen. Goldwater what to do. No one is pushing him."

And Dole even praised House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill for what Dole said were "very conciliatory" statements in a meeting with Reagan on Tuesday.

"I was very pleased with Tip O'Neill's statements. He said not once, but twice, that everything is on the table," Dole said.

Renovation of shelter for homeless has begun

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, which pledged to rehabilitate a 1,000-bed shelter for the homeless after shelter operators staged a nationally publicized hunger strike, says it has spent $85,000 so far on the project.

"We've already completed important health, safety and security work to the tune of $85,000," Claire del Real, a spokeswoman for the Department of Health and Human Services, said Wednesday.

She said plumbing and toilets have been fixed, the heating system improved, locks fixed on doors, and a wheelchair ramp added. The architect for the Community for Creative Non-Violence, which operates the shelter, now is drawing up plans for major construction work, she said.

When the work is finished will depend on how much renovation has to be done and whether or not the facility, a former school, is occupied while the work is carried out, Mrs. del Real said.

"We hope to complete it before next winter, but that probably means it needs to be unoccupied next summer," she said.

Mrs. del Real was responding to criticism leveled earlier in the day by Mitch Snyder, head of the CCNV.

"It's still a rathole. Rehabilitation still is not done," Snyder told the Senate District of Columbia Appropriations subcommittee. "There's one toilet facility for every couple hundred people, four showers for 700 or 800 men."

Snyder said the temperature in the women's section of the shelter was 40 degrees several nights ago, when HHS Secretary Margaret Heckler ordered emergency blankets sent in.

The Reagan administration agreed in November to refurbish the shelter after Snyder refused food for 51 days. Snyder estimated it would cost $5 million to renovate the building, but the administration did not commit itself to provide any specific amount.

Snyder also charged that "this Congress is waist-high in blood and shame" because it has not done more to help the homeless..."

PBA chairman 'shocked' to learn of drug use allegations

NAPLES, Fla. (AP) — The chairman of Provincetown-Boston Airline says he was "astonished and shocked" to learn of allegations of drug use by the company's pilots and other employees and has asked federal authorities to investigate.

The announcement by Edwin Putzell Jr. came after the "CBS Evening News" broadcast a report Wednesday in which sources, including one identified as a former PBA employee, said PBA pilots abused drugs and alcohol and that many employees came to work drunk.

"This is the first time any such assertions have come to PBA management," Putzell said. In a brief statement, the company said it has asked the federal Drug Enforcement Administration to help investigate the broadcast allegations, which also included claims that PBA pilots used planes to ship drugs.

In November, the Federal Aviation Administration took away PBA's operating license, citing widespread violations in maintenance, pilot training and flight regulations. The carrier revamped its pilot and ground-crew training manuals, reorganized management and was back in the air after regaining federal approval within weeks.

Less than a month later, a PBA twin-engine turboprop crashed shortly after takeoff in Jacksonville, killing all 13 people aboard. The National Transportation Safety Board determined the Dec. 6 crash was caused by a 21-foot horizontal section of the plane's tail breaking off.

In an unrelated action Wednesday, the FAA recommended that two PBA pilots be suspended for violating flight regulations, saying they endangered themselves and their passengers on Dec. 27.

The pilots were forced to make an emergency landing because a lock was mistakenly left on the DC-9's tail elevator, which controls the craft's up-and-down movement.

Provincetown-Boston Airline Inc., a 35-year-old carrier, is the largest commuter airline in the nation.

In the CBS broadcast, a source identified by the network as a former PBA employee said there was "a problem with pilots abusing, you know, the drugs...There's an alcohol problem as well."

"There's many people there who come into work and they're legally drunk," the source said.

Another source appeared on camera in silhouette and said, "There was a pilot who was on Valium (a tranquilizer)...I think it would slow him down tremendously."

He and other sources said some pilots shipped drugs in PBA planes and made deals on the company's teletype machine, CBS reported. The network said sources told it some PBA maintenance and service workers also use drugs, including smoking marijuana on the job.

"We are astonished and outraged because such conduct is totally unacceptable and intolerable," Putzell said in the statement.

The Naples-based carrier added that it was "totally committed to searching out and correcting immediately any such conduct if it exists."

In the Dec. 27 incident for which suspension was recommended for the two pilots, a DC-3 carrying four passengers from Naples to Tampa was forced to make an unscheduled landing in Fort Myers about 15 minutes after taking off.

The FAA said that before takeoff, two pilots had failed, in violation of regulations, to remove a "gust lock" on the plane's tail elevator used to immobilize it when the plane is parked.

The agency recommended a 30-day suspension for Capt. James C. Perryman and a 15-day uspension for co-pilot Anthony M. Chantre, said Jack Barker, an FAA spokesman in Atlanta.

A "notice of proposed certificate action," or letter of the FAA's intention, was sent to the pilots Jan. 16. If they do not appeal the decision within 15 days of receiving notice, the suspensions will become effective, said FAA spokesman Roger Meyers.

However, PBA President Peter Van Arsdale said two weeks ago, after the FAA said it was considering temporary suspensions, that "the pilot and co-pilot have not been flying for us since that incident" and had been put through retraining.

Indicted lawmaker resigns from state ethics committee

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A legislator indicted for fraud along with U.S. Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan has resigned from the state Senate's Ethics Committee.

State Sen. Joseph Galiber, ranking Democrat on the panel, said Wednesday his indictment raised valid questions about his membership on the panel.

Galiber, 60, is under indictment for one count of grand larceny and 136 counts of falsifying and filing business records.

He was accused of participating in a scheme in 1979 and 1980 to pad reported payments to his subcontracting firm — Jopel Contracting and Trucking Corp. — on a subway construction project run by Schiavone Construction Co. of Secaucus, N.J., when Donovan was one of the company's executives.

Men jailed, not fined

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A magistrate who sentenced five men to six months in jail for disrupting church services said he didn't fine them because he knew they were unemployed and couldn't pay.

Among those sentenced Wednesday by Magistrate Ralph Freedman for defiant trespass Oct. 28 at St. John's Lutheran Church in suburban Pittsburgh was Ron Weisen, 42, president of United Steelworkers Local 1397, a leader of the Network To Save the Mon-Ohio Valley.

Seven protesters were given up to 60 days in jail Jan. 4 after the Network and the Denominational Ministry Strategy seized Clairton's Trinity Lutheran Church to protest the ouster of its activist pastor the Rev. D. Douglas Roth.

Pizza ad brings complaints

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP) — A Pizza Hut commercial portraying a condemned man eating pizza as a last meal was a "classic case of somebody sending the wrong commercial at the wrong time to the wrong market," an official said.

At least four people have complained about the ad since Joseph Carl Shaw chose a last meal of pizza before dying in the state's electric chair on Jan. 11, Pizza Hut spokesman Mike Jenkins said Wednesday.

Jenkins said the commercial never should have run in South Carolina because the regional company that chooses Pizza Hut advertising for area stations did not pick the condemned prisoner spot. He said it was sent to WSPA-TV by mistake.

Cuban deportations likely

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal appeals court judge has barred imprisoned Cuban refugees from seeking further help from U.S. District Judge Marvin Shoob and says their deportations are likely.

Shoob has blocked deportations and ordered the release of some of the 1,500 Cubans held at the Atlanta penitentiary on grounds that they are dangerous or mentally ill.

The Cubans were informed of the prohibition Tuesday by Judge Robert Vance of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, who refused to vacate his court's order that deportations begin.

AT&T plans news system

HONOLULU, Hawaii (AP) — A $600 million undersea cable spanning the Pacific Ocean and capable of handling 37,800 simultaneous conversations is on the drawing board of AT&T and 21 international telecommunications companies.

"Hawaii 4-Transpac 3" will be a new fiber optics communications system, using laser beams to shoot bits of information down hair-thin strands of glass with less chance of noise or distortion than in metal cables.

AT&T officials expect the system to be ready for business by the end of 1988, depending on approval from governments and the Federal Communications Commission for the project to begin.

Please call Energas Company 48 hours before you dig in streets, alleys or easements.

Outlawing crime

In the wake of two publicity-grabbing incidents — one in New York City and one in Chicago — in which would-be victims of crime have shot and severely wounded or killed their attackers, some voices are beginning to warn of the dangers of citizen reprisals against criminals. That response was to be expected.

To an extent those voices warning against aggressive resistance to crime have a valid point. A society in which individual rights share center stage with democratic processes necessitates calm and cool reflection prior to action — in most instances. Besides, history attests to the runaway passions inherent in vigilante justice: Sometimes the innocent are swept up with the guilty in the wave of so-called justice. Tragedy results.

But who's going to tell the New York subway gunman or the Chicago man they didn't have the right to defend themselves? Particularly when in both cases pleas for police protection have fallen on deaf ears? The details of New York's Bernard Goetz subway shootings and the Chicago man who pulled a pistol and killed one of two robbers trying to steal his sack of groceries apparently do not fit the mold of vigilante justice. According to details made available via the wire services, in neither case did the men go out seeking confrontation. They merely were armed to protect themselves and did so when confronted by those who sought to prey on them. What jury will convict them for their actions?

Interestingly, both cases have brought an extremely positive public response. New Yorkers established a defense fund for Goetz and praised him for standing up against the subway muggers. The Chicago man who killed one of the attackers who confronted him has been termed a hero by people in the South Chicago neighborhood where the incident took place.

One can argue that the "wave" of public resistance to crime will only lead to increased violence in criminal activity, that criminals won't take chances with their victims or will kill more often in retaliation to the violence against other criminals. One can argue that responding to criminals must be left to law enforcement officers in the interest of true safety and justice.

For law enforcement to effectively respond to crime, it must have public support for the laws upheld. When public support for law and order breaks down, crime becomes rampant. At that point, law enforcement is battling a tidal wave and is about as effective as a paper dam.

It would be foolish to encourage a continuation of public resistance to criminals, but it would be just as foolish to encourage potential victims of crime to not make any effort to protect themselves or their property. That's a losing proposition.

What is needed is a united front against all kinds of crime to let criminals know the public is not going to stand by helplessly while they have their way with society. That kind of public outrage already is visible in various "neighborhood" groups opposing burglary, drugs and drunk driving.

The New York and Chicago shootings helped to get the attention of criminals focused on the public. Now it's time to follow-through by letting them know in the courtrooms — and on the streets — that crime has been outlawed.

Another View: Negotiating peace

The United States and the Soviet Union are planning to confer on the Middle East, but, President Reagan's national security adviser says, they will only be talking, not negotiating. The main aim of the get-together, according to Robert C. McFarlane, is to allow the two countries to exchange views and define their interests and concerns in the region. Left unaffected, McFarlane emphasizes, will be the basic American position that the most promising route to peace lies in direct negotiations between Israel and the Arab states on its borders.

There's obviously a lot to be said for talks that, free from the propaganda of the public arena, could help clarify national aims and lessen the chances of possibly dangerous miscalculations. As the record shows, even proposing Middle East discussions involving the superpowers can have a salutary effect.

That's what happened in late 1977, when U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko decided that it would be a good idea to revive the multiparty "Geneva peace conference" on the Middle East that had met for just one session at the end of 1973 before going into indefinite recess. This unexpected proposal had an unanticipated early consequence. As the late President Anwar Sadat of Egypt subsequently told many people, it was the possibility — or, as he saw it, the threat — of such a grand gathering with the Soviet Union in a major role that helped decide him on the wisdom of an early trip to Jerusalem. Out of that initiative eventually came the most important positive development in the Middle East in 30 years.

Sadat, who had had a lot of direct experience with the Russians, didn't think much of the idea that they should be accorded a heavy involvement in any Middle East peace process. The Soviet Union's influence in the region depends, after all, on the military aid and political support that it gives to Arab countries that resist acceptance of or peace with Israel. It is not likely that the Russians would commit themselves to replacing tension with peace if that would inevitably result in a diminution of their influence in the area.

The idea that a large conference involving all parties to the conflict offers the best forum for negotiating peace is similarly unrealistic. It is as obvious now as it was in 1977 that Arab leaders are at loggerheads over basic political questions affecting their region, including the question of acceptance of Israel. King Hussein of Jordan has lately taken to calling again for such a multiparty conference. But, as Hussein well knows, the suspicions and hostilities that divide the Arabs assure that at best such a meeting would lead to deadlock and increased frustration. At worst it could allow the radical Arab leaders to bully and blackmail their more moderate colleagues into supporting their intransigent line.

By all means let Washington and Moscow exchange views about the Middle East, so long as it is understood, as McFarlane has made clear, that these discussions are no substitute for the real thing. If Israel and its Arab neighbors make peace, it will be only after they have negotiated directly the terms of agreement.

BLACK MAN'S BURDEN

JACK ANDERSON
U.S. plans tougher line on Chile

WASHINGTON — President Reagan will follow up his public criticism of South Africa's white supremacist policies with a tougher line against another unpopular regime — the military dictatorship of Gen. Augusto Pinochet of Chile.

Jack Anderson

A preliminary step in implementing the new policy will be the replacement of Ambassador James Theberge, who has spent four years in Santiago trying to ingratiate himself with the Pinochet government and who reportedly opposed the get-tough policy.

In fairness to Theberge, his attitude toward Pinochet may be the result less of sympathy than of pragmatism. The strategy behind Theberge's approach is explained in an embassy document, which I quoted in a recent column.

The United States "is critical of the Pinochet government because it has not been moving rapidly enough toward a democratic transition and because of human rights violations in Chile..." stated the document. "The U.S. Embassy in Santiago has and will continue to practice secret diplomacy, and the ambassador will quietly discuss with officials of the Chilean government the importance of political liberalization."

With this as his guideline, Theberge repeatedly demonstrated, in small but significant ways, seeming U.S. support for Pinochet. For example, he was the only ambassador from a Western democratic country who attended a recent ceremony honoring the military regime. On the other hand, he was the only one who failed to attend the 10th anniversary celebration of a Catholic human-rights group.

Apparently, Pinochet hasn't been the least influenced by any secret U.S. pressure to liberalize. On the contrary, he recently called out the troops and truncheons to suppress his political opponents in violent confrontations.

So President Reagan will add a little public pressure. The new policy is being drafted behind closed doors by the State Department's Latin American and human-rights bureaus. It's still closely guarded, but my associate Lucette Lagnado has learned about the proposed changes. For example:

— The embassy will attempt a delicate "tightrope act" between the Pinochet regime and the opposition parties. The new ambassador will try to open lines of communication with both sides, while making it clear that the United States doesn't necessarily embrace either the regime or its critics.

— The White House and State Department will make more frequent, public criticism of Pinochet. The pattern, in fact, has already begun. An inside source said the State Department has made some 15 critical public statements about Chile in recent months. "That's more than we have criticized the Russians," he said.

— Like the first two proposals, an economic "sanction" being suggested by the policy drafters is significant but more symbolic than practical. The proposed policy would have the United States abstain from votes on Chilean loans from the Inter-American Bank and other international institutions. Secretary of State George Shultz opposes the use of loans to pursue political policy. But abstention by the United States from such loans would register U.S. displeasure with Pinochet, without directly blocking the loans or preventing other nations from blocking them.

The purpose of the policy shift hopefully is to increase U.S. influence in Chile. Theberge has "lost the confidence of both sides" there, I'm told. A more evenhanded approach might win the United States at least the grudging respect of both Pinochet and his opponents.

CIA'S POLO CAPER — When Ronald Ray Rewald undertook to join (and eventually buy) the Hawaii Polo Club so he could hobnob with important people for his CIA bosses, it became an expensive proposition for both himself and the company he organized allegedly at the behest of the CIA.

It cost Rewald a bad back, which he suffered in a head-on collision with another polo player. And it cost the company's investors more than half a million bucks, according to Rewald's 59-page indictment for fraud and other charges.

The indictment alleges that Rewald "diverted and used for his own personal benefit approximately $256,000 to pay for expenses he incurred... in the sport of polo."

In addition, the government charges that Rewald forked over $264,000 to buy and care for his polo ponies — an enormous amount for a modest string of ponies and their fodder and stabling, according to one horseflesh expert I consulted.

At least Rewald gave his nags proper CIA airs by assigning them aliases, just like two-legged agents: Jacob, also known as Feather; Barn Fly, a.k.a. Barnie; Caramel, a.k.a. Special, a.k.a. Something Special, and Moon Drifter, a.k.a. Moonie, a.k.a. Moon Daughter.

GEORGE F. WILL
Congress sets slow-draw ritual

WASHINGTON — What we have here is "High Noon" played by the Marx brothers. The gunslingers are warily walking down the dusty street — Pennsylvania Avenue — but they are not eager to sling guns. The winner may be the one who draws last.

George F. Will

The President is going to submit a sort of budget, in a perfunctory sort of way. The House of Representatives, the last redoubt of Democrats, must (the law is picky about this) pass a budget. But it does not want to do that until Senate Republicans write one.

Their leader, Robert Dole, is going to run for President as a Responsible Republican, meaning one who will countenance some Social Security cuts and deeper defense cuts than the President wants. If Dole oversees Senate passage of a budget like that, House Democrats will stand back aghast, entropy will spread through Congress and there will be government by continuing resolution until 1986, which is an election year, so....

So let's kill time by reforming taxes. Rub, rub, rub, rub. There. We have erased every line in the wickedly complicated tax code, because Americans say they crave simplicity. And yet, and yet....

A few months ago the Reagan administration was said to be bent on establishing a theocracy, turning the government over to the nation's parsons. But lo! The administration's tax-simplification plan would erase the provision whereby parsons are not taxed on the value of the compensation they receive in the form of their parsonage or housing allowance. Taxing that will give the government $164 million in 1990. But that is $164 million that congregations will have to make up, or take from charities. So parsons and their flocks will put the fear of God into Congress.

Furthermore, America itself — meaning, of course, baseball — is endangered. Last year, 15 million tickets — one-third of all tickets sold — were deductible as business expense. The government, in one of its sweeter moods, has declared that a major league stadium is an "appropriate business setting." For business entertainment, that is. Change that, and much revenue will be drained from sports, and Dave Winfield will not be able to live in the manner to which he is accustomed. So, sports fans, let's keep a little complexity in the tax code, to protect sports.

Now, about that progressive idea of ending the deductibility of mortgage-interest payments on second homes. That change would persecute the plutocrats, right? Well, it will not amuse Aspen, Colo., Sun Valley, Idaho, and Jackson Hole, Wyo., for starters. And those states have as many senators as California, New York and Texas — where, come to think about it, there live many persons who have second homes.

The end of second-home deductibility would alarm lumbermen — the horny-handed sons of toil who harvest the trees that make the beams and shingles and floors in second homes. And the union members who make the plumbing fixtures may oppose any tax change that would inhibit construction. And so on.

Concerning the three-martini lunch, who will die in the last ditch in defense of current permissive rules on the deductibility of "business" meals? Not fat cats grown fat on too much gin and not nough vermouth. They are too fat to fight. No, the defenders will be the restaurant and hotel workers' unions. And (for starters) the two senators from Louisiana: New Orleans is kept afloat by deductible spending at business conventions and meetings.

Well, at least we can agree about radically restricting the right of state and local governments to issue tax-exempt bonds, right? Such bonds finance construction of public works (schools, highways, airports, hospitals, bridges). There were $83 billion of such bonds issued in 1983. Restrict them and you restrict the wealth-amassing by the wealthy. But you also restrict construction, so you will hear from the construction unions (Democratic) and the contractors (Republican).

So what will happen in this year of budget cutting and tax reforming? This year will be momentous if much happens, or if nothing happens.

If much happens, that will be momentous. If nothing very much happens, we will have established the momentous fact that the modern state has grown weak by growing big — that it is immobilized by the constituencies it has created through the services it has rendered. By January 1986, we will either have no enlarged sense of the possible, or we will have the knowledge that the modern state has so woven itself into the fabric of society that it can not move without ripping the fabric, and thus can not move.

ART BUCHWALD
Huggers make better huggers!

As if we didn't have enough to worry about, there is trouble in America's bedrooms. The information comes from syndicated columnist Ann Landers who, in conducting a reader survey, discovered that 72 percent of her women readers would rather be hugged and treated tenderly by men than have sexual intercourse with them.

Art Buchwald

Although the figure came as a shock to many people, it did not come as a surprise to me. Ever since I reached puberty a few years back, I have been dealing with nothing but the group who would rather be hugged.

In my high school years, the figure was more like 99 percent, and even those girls who only agreed to be hugged and treated tenderly thought that was a very big deal.

When I went from high school to the U.S. Marine Corps, I was hoping the odds would change in my favor. After all, I did have a uniform and was going off to fight for my country. Either I attended the wrong USO clubs, or the wrong Salvation Army canteens, but I could never meet the women who preferred "the act" to the hug. This was very frustrating, because while my buddies came off leave with happy smiles on their faces, I dragged myself in at 4 in the morning, my arms dead from hugging my dates all night long.

You would expect in a wartime situation that you could find some women who enjoyed both being hugged and the ultimate experience as well. I never did.

I would hug and hold them tenderly till the sun came up, but every time I suggested we go one more step they would reply, "I'm not that kind of girl."

"What kind of girl are you?" I would ask.

"I'm the kind of girl who just likes to be held in someone's arms."

If I got angry enough I would reply, "You don't need a boyfriend — you need a nanny."

Okay, the conflict was over, and according to my U.S. Marine discharge papers, I was now a man entitled to all veterans' benefits as well as the adulation of a grateful nation who had been spared the horrors of war.

Surely the University of Southern California coeds would understand that man cannot live by hugs alone. But once again the odds were stacked against me. A survey on campus revealed that 85 percent of the women said they would rather be hugged and held tenderly, while only 15 percent admitted that they would "go further," providing the person was either on the first string football team or his father owned the Bank of America.

In no time I developed a reputation at USC. The word was out on sorority row that if you wanted to have a tender evening, go out with Buchwald. But if you wanted the earth to move date somebody else.

After three years of hugging and frustrating tenderness I decided to go to Paris, where women were noted for pleasing themselves by pleasing their men. They considered hugging just the soup course to a wonderful night.

As with most legends of love this one turned out to be slightly exaggerated.

I hugged under the bridges of Notre Dame, I hugged under the Eiffel Tower, I hugged in the streets of Montmartre, and I treated French women as tenderly as the filet mignon they had ordered in a restaurant I couldn't afford. And all they ever did when I took them home was thank me at the door and say, "You're not like other Americans who only want French girls to make love."

Well, that was some time ago, and I forgot all about such things until the Ann Landers survey was splashed over the front pages. I showed the article to my wife, and thought she would laugh. But all she said when she finished was, "Why don't you ever hug me?"

"Because," I screamed. "I've been doing it all my life and it never got me anywhere!"

TODAY IN HISTORY

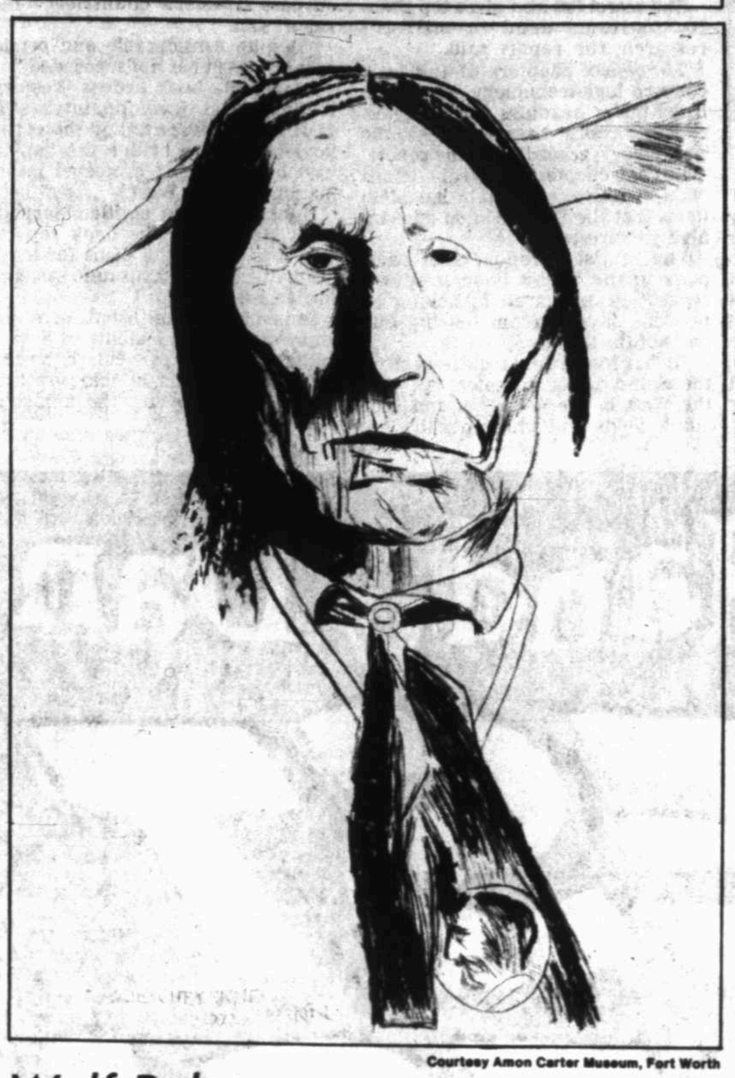

In 1978, a crippled Soviet satellite with a nuclear reactor aboard reentered earth's atmosphere and disintegrated over northern Canada.

Ten years ago: Puerto Rican nationalists exploded a bomb in a building next to the historic Fraunces Tavern in New York City, killing four people.

Five years ago: In response to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the United States announced it was willing to sell military equipment, but not weapons, to China.

Thought for today: "The power to tax involves the power to destroy." — John Marshall, U.S. Chief Justice (1755-1835).

Wolf Robe

Wolf Robe, Cheyenne, by Leonard Baskin is one of 52 works by the artist on display at Midland College's McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building, through Feb. 27. Born in New Brunswick, N.J., in 1922, Baskin studied at the Yale School of Fine Arts, the New School in New York City and independently in Paris. Deriving inspiration from such artistically profound humanists as Goya, Kollwitz and Rouault, he is endowed with an innate capacity as a draftsman and acute perception of the many nuances of man's spiritual and moral world. The exhibit, "Leonard Baskin: Indian Drawings," is free.

Attenborough guide for 'Living Planet'

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — In the very first hour of "The Living Planet," David Attenborough directs our attention, cinematically speaking, to a point on the ocean floor inhabited by huge worms and clams that exist on energy generated by submarine volcanic eruption.

Just when we're sure Attenborough has shown us all there is to see, he takes us someplace new, where no man has ever been.

"It's a great picture," Attenborough promised in an interview, "of underwater lava coming through the plates on the bottom of the sea.

"Great, black clouds!" he exclaimed, and his enthusiasm — as it is when he is on camera — was infectious. "The energy of the heat, plus the bacteria that exist there, combine to support animal life that will never see the light of the sun."

On the screen, it is indeed an awesome sight, but one we have come to expect from Attenborough, whose previous series, "Life on Earth," was widely acclaimed for its extraordinary film and clear, comprehensible narration.

"The Living Planet: A Portrait of the Earth," Attenborough's 12-hour sequel, premieres on public television Sunday, Feb. 3. The newest production is similar in style to "Life on Earth," neither stuffy nor academic, and eminently entertaining.

While the previous series dealt primarily with the development of plant and animal life, "The Living Planet" is a global examination of the environment, a look at how living organisms of all sorts, including humans, adapt to their diverse surroundings.

The series, more than three years in production on all seven continents and at sea, ranges in locale from the ice-covered slopes of the world's tallest mountains (for "The Frozen World" Feb. 10) to the depths of the Atlantic ("The Open Ocean" April 14).

As remarkable as some of the footage may be, Attenborough, who studied zoology and geology at Cambridge University, is the series' unobtrusive star. Much more than a knowiegeable narrator, he is a companion who should be short of breath after a steep Himalayan climb, and is:

"Certainly, when it comes to walking at these high altitudes," he puffs, observing mountain folk at work in their precipitous environment, "they are much better adapted than I am."

"Life on Earth" and now "The Living Planet" might have been superior television without Attenborough, but his presence generates an excitement, an anticipation of imminent discovery, that sets the series apart:

"Around the equator," he proclaims moments into the first episode, "where those two essentials of life, sunshine and moisture, are most abundant, great forests grow and here plants and animals proliferate in such numbers that we still have not even named all the different species."

"The series is a celebration of the natural world," he said, "but in the end, I think I'm within my rights to make a clear lesson."

In the final installment, "New Worlds" on April 21, he demonstrates how humans use their unique intelligence to exploit the adaptive qualities of other species to live in less hospitable surroundings, and how man, over the centuries, has transformed wide areas of land to his own use.

Britain, for instance, was thickly forested before man arrived, and populated by a variety of animal life, including brown bear, wolf and elk, Attenborough explains. Now, he says, vast portions of the island are treeless, and the three animals and others have completely disappeared.

PUBLIC NOTICE

In accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the Rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. (AT&T Communications) gives notice to all of its Texas customers that a new procedure for long distance billing was made effective on an interim basis on August 6, 1984 in Docket No. 5800.

The procedure referred to is "Rate Period Specific Billing" and it applies to all message telephone service (AT&T Long Distance calls) including non-REACH OUT Texas calls within the State of Texas. This new procedure effects all AT&T Long Distance customers. All intraLATA long distance calls and all interstate long distance calls are currently billed using this procedure.

Under this procedure, customers are billed a specific charge for long distance calls according to the rate or rates in effect throughout the time of each call. If a call begins in one rate period and extends into a different rate period, the customer will be charged whatever rate is in effect for each portion of the call.

For example, if a customer places a call at 4:58 p.m. on a weekday and talks for ten minutes, the first two minutes of the call would be charged at the full weekday rate which extends from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. The remaining eight minutes of the call would be billed at the evening rate which extends from 5:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. and includes a 25% discount. If Rate Period Specific Billing were not in effect, the entire call would have been billed at the higher day rate. Calls which extend from the evening rate period (25% discount) to the night and weekend rate period (40% discount) or from the night and weekend rate period (40% discount) to the day rate period (no discount) would also be billed according to the actual minutes of use during each rate period.

AT&T Communications anticipates a minimal increase of approximately .02% in its revenues or approximately $250,000 annually.

A complete copy of the "Rate Period Specific Billing" tariff is on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

U.S.S.R. compiles high-tech 'wish list,' West Germany says

WORLD

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The Soviet Union has compiled a secret 27-chapter "shopping list" identifying high-technology equipment that its spies in the West are instructed to acquire, Interior Ministry sources say.

The book, as thick as a city telephone directory, is part of the Kremlin's campaign "to catch up with Western technology" through espionage, according to a ministry report compiled for internal use.

"It's called the 'Red Book' and it's the wish list — or shopping list — for Soviet secret service officers abroad," the four-page report said. A copy of the report was made available to The Associated Press.

The report said Soviet agents abroad are expected to obtain four items from the book a year, and added that those who acquire high-technology equipment would earn prestige.

Items in the book range from sophisticated equipment used in guiding long-range missiles to technology that could help military vehicles start in cold weather.

A ministry source who spoke on condition of anonymity said the Soviet book "has come to the attention of our secret services," but did not elaborate.

The ministry report said copies of the "Red Book" have been issued to a limited number of Soviet embassies and trade delegations in the West.

According to the report, the book — "as thick as a large city's telephone directory" — was compiled for Moscow's State Committee for Research and Technology and is officially titled "Coordinated Requests for Technological Information."

The committee has established a new department, headed by a Soviet KGB general, "to intensify and accelerate" the acquisition of technology from the West, it said.

The ministry memo did not say when the Red Book was issued, or how many copies existed.

High-priority items listed in it include microelectronic equipment used in guiding inter-continental ballistic missiles or in the defensive systems on submarines and tanks, according to the report. Radar and "super mini-computers" are other important areas of concern.

The secret list also gives top priority to items used in military research, the report said.

Twenty-six chapters of the book concern high-technology equipment listed under headings such as Theoretical Physics, Lasers and Atomic Technology, according to the report.

But one chapter reportedly details "non-secretive, seemingly harmless items that the Soviet Union appears highly interested in."

The ministry report said each page in the Soviet book is sewed separately onto a stiff backing to prevent anyone from tearing out parts of the list.

"It has long been a clear goal of the Soviet Union to catch up with the West in the industrial and economic fields, and where possible, to surpass (Western countries)," the report said.

"Despite considerable and persistent efforts, it has not succeeded."

It said the book proves Western technological development is still far ahead of Moscow's and shows the Soviets want to bridge the gap in part by "acquiring protected information from the West."

Under a section entitled Agricultural Machinery, the book reportedly lists production plans for long-life batteries and hydraulic systems for farm tractors.

Some of the items listed "give the impression that the ability of Soviet military vehicles, particularly trucks and tanks, to start in cold weather should be improved," the ministry report said.

French lift curfew for island nation

NOUMEA, New Caledonia (AP) — French authorities today announced the end of a state of emergency and curfew imposed 12 days ago after rioting in this French island territory in the South Pacific.

The curfew had been in effect from 9 p.m. to 5 a.m. and the emergency decree had banned gatherings of more than five people.

Officials said the regulations expired overnight because legislation enabling the French high commissioner in New Caledonia to extend his Jan. 12 decree beyond 12 days had not passed both chambers of the French Parliament.

French authorities in New Caledonia did not say if they would reimpose the regulations if the extension was approved by the Senate, the parliament's upper chamber.

Premier Laurent Fabius attacked the opposition during the debate, saying it was more interested in "creating difficulties for the government" than in the "interests of France."

Alain Madelin, an opposition deputy, said "ordinary law gives sufficiently wide powers to the high commissioner" to deal with disorder on the island.

The high commissioner, Edgar Pisani, imposed the emergency decree after European immigrants protesting the shooting death of a white youth clashed with riot police for two days in Noumea.

The youth was the first member of the immigrant population, which makes up 57 percent of the island's 150,000 residents, to be killed since the native Melanesians, known as Kanaks, boycotted elections last November and began agitating for independence.

Nineteen Kanaks have died in the turmoil.

The immigrant population, which includes Europeans, Asians and Polynesians, generally opposes independence. The pro-independence Melanesian movement is led by the Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front.

Pisani, who was sent to New Caledonia in December to resolve the crisis, has called for independence in association with France under a plan which would give the French govermnment control of internal security and defense. Both of the island's factions reject the idea.

Publisher's grandson abducted

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — The grandson of a West German publishing tycoon told police he was kidnapped from a Swiss boarding school last weekend and freed three days later at Zurich airport.

Airport police said Sven-Axel Springer, 19, reported to them at 9:40 p.m. Wednesday, saying he had just been released. Police said he was all right but very tired.

Police said the youth vanished late Sunday from his room at the Lyzeum Alpinum, an exclusive school at the Grisons Alps resort of Zuoz in southeastern Switzerland. They said there was no evidence that force had been used in his disappearance and that they had no theory regarding the identities of the alleged abductors.

Munich police sources earlier said that, since Tuesday, tape-recorded messages had been played over the telephone to Springer's widowed mother, Rosemarie. In the messages, the youth had said his kidnappers were demanding $4.75 million, and that police and the press should not be informed because "otherwise I will be killed."

The Springer publishing house in Hamburg said no ransom had been paid.

Spinger's grandfather, Axel Springer, 73, owns Europe's largest-circulation newspaper, Bild, which sells 5 million copies a day. Yearly sales for all his newspapers and magazines total $632 million.

The pro-American, pro-Israeli stance of Bild has made it a frequent target of left-wing critics, and company buildings have been damaged in riots. Ten years ago, a luxurious $275,000 chalet Springer owned in western Switzerland was destroyed in a blaze police blamed on arsonists.

Sven-Axel's father, who worked under the pen name of Sven Simon, committed suicide in January 1980. He was an internationally noted photographer and founder of a successful photo agency. The motive for the suicide were never disclosed.

Arkansas point guard Allie Freeman (11) goes up for two points over Rice center Terrance Cashaw during Southwest Conference action Wednesday night.

SMU, Koncak sting 'Horns

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas basketball coach Bob Weltlich watched Olympian Jon Koncak of No. 2-ranked Southern Methodist score 18 points and grab 10 rebounds in a 54-46 SMU victory, and said if Koncak is "7-feet, I'm 6-11."

Koncak appeared four inches taller than Texas center John Brownlee, who is listed at 6-10, and used whatever height advantage he had to block three Brownlee shots Wednesday night in a Southwest Conference contest.

The game was the first for SMU since it moved into second place in college basketball behind Georgetown this week, the highest basketball ranking the Mustangs have ever enjoyed.

IN OTHER SWC action, Arkansas defeated Rice 67-56 and Texas A&M surprised Texas Tech, 50-47.

SMU overcame a different zone defense, Texas' slowdown offense and a partisan Texas crowd of 11,499 — the largest here since Weltlich became coach three years ago — to extend its record to 16-1.

"This is the first time this year that we've faced the 1-3-1 defense," said SMU Coach Dave Bliss. "They did a great job of playing inside on Koncak, but he hung in there and got some stallion rebounds."

Bliss also said Texas, which would let the 45-second clock run down before shooting, "did a great job of dictating the tempo. Defensive impatience and those turnovers caused us problems and kept the game close."

SMU had 13 turnovers to 10 for Texas, which led only once at 22-20 with 3:04 left in the first half. Koncak sat out a total of over eight minutes because of fouls but returned with 6:05 remaining in the game and scored three straight field goals to pad SMU's margin to 48-38.

After Wednesday night, SMU leads the SWC with a 6-0 record. Texas, rebuilding after winning only 13 games in two previous seasons, is 10-7 for the season and 3-4 in the conference.

In Fayetteville, Ark., center Joe Kleine scored 27 points and freshman Andrew Lang rejected five shots to lead Arkansas over Rice.

Arkansas never trailed in the game and was tied only once early at 2-2.

The victory snapped a two-game losing streak for the Razorbacks and raised their SWC record to 4-3. Arkansas is 13-6 overall.

Rice fell to 8-8 overall and 1-5 in conference play.

GARY LEWIS made two crucial free throws with 10 seconds left to seal Texas A&M's victory over Tech.

The victory lifted A&M's record to 12-5 for the season, while Tech fell to 11-5. Both teams now have 4-2 records in the SWC.

It was a rough defensive struggle from start to finish, and the final five minutes were a virtual battle of free throws.

Center Jimmie Gilbert put the Aggies to stay when he hit two charity tosses for a 46-44 lead with 1:13 left. Moments later, he hit two more to widen the margin to 48-44 with 50 seconds remaining.

"Jimmie Gilbert's free throws at the end were just tremendous," Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf said. "We hit the bottom of the bucket. You just couldn't be in a more crucial situation. It shows an awful lot of what that young man's made of."

Chaparrals put lead on line

Ranked Wranglers set Odessa ambush

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland College leads the Western Junior College Athletic Conference as a result of Howard College's 69-68 upset victory over Odessa College Monday, but the Wranglers have the Chaparrals exactly where they want 'em when the teams meet at 8 p.m. today.

That happens to be in the Odessa College Physical Education Complex where they Chaps have never won. Of course, the Chaps have played only one game in the Complex, just opened last year. And Odessa has a two-game winning streak going against MC in WJCAC play, having swept both games last year.

Midland has won twice over OC in the last two seasons, but neither one came when it counted. Both victories came in the finals of the Midland College pre-conference tournament and Coach Jerry Stone and his Chaps would like to rectify that embarrassment.

UNTIL Monday, Midland had sullied OC's record with its only defeat, 66-61, last November, but the Wranglers didn't let it bother them on the way to a No. 4 national ranking in the weekly Juco poll.

Odessa is 18-2 and 6-1 going into tonight's game. Midland is 16-2 and 7-0.

As if there wasn't enough to whet the appetite for this one, it also is one of those intriguing Teacher vs. Pupil matches. Archie Meyers, a former star at Howard College, once was an assistant coach at Midland for Stone before going to Big Spring High School as coach.

OC'S LOSS to Howard was a surprise, but it couldn't be classified as a shocker. The Hawks almost upset Midland a few days earlier, losing 71-68, after outshooting the Chaps from the field and from the free throw line. They just didn't shoot often enough, a credit to MC's tenacious defense.

Joe Burney sank the winner for Howard Monday with one second left in overtime. Howard hit its first 13 shots of the game to take a big early lead and OC spent the rest of the night trying to catch up.

"It kind of throws you a little bit, especially when you haven't lost since November," said Meyers. "This was one of those games where we didn't get the breaks at the end. The guy just made a hell of a shot."

BUT THAT'S the past and OC will be endeavoring to pull back into a tie for first place. "Everyone has been pointing toward this game for a couple of weeks," said Stone, "In fact, Howard almost pulled out a win over us last week. We had the long trip to Borger Monday, but were able to get out front early and then play everyone. The travel is tough, but we didn't have the emotional strain of a close game."

Even if MC should win tonight and open a two-game lead, Stone still doesn't expect anyone to go through the league unbeaten. For one thing, MC still has to visit Big Spring, as does OC.

In fact, there hasn't been an unbeaten league champion since Nolan Richardson took Western Texas College to a national championship with a 35-0 record and then took four of his starters to Tulsa University the next year and won the NIT.

From that team, Paul Pressey and Alton Listor are now playing for the Bucks and Phil Spradling is currently the coach at WTC.

MC'S 6-9 Teviin Binns goes into tonight's game as the WJCAC's scoring leader with a 24.4 average. Mark Benoit is OC's top scorer with 13.5 a game and Dewayne Chism is averaging 12.5.

Binns, averaging 8.5 a game, is the leading rebounder and Chism is No. 2 at 8.3. In assists, OC's Eric Chinn is second in the conference with 5.7 a game. Binns leads in blocked shots with 62. That's especially impressive when the runner up, Carl Curry of Clarendon, has 29.

OC's Benoit is the steal leader with 55 while MC's Zeak Williams has 51, fourth in the league.

MC's Tony Wright leads the league in field goal percentage with a .637 and Vernon Coleman is third in free throw shooting accuracy with .820.

Staubach gives Landry advice

DALLAS (AP) — Roger Staubach has some advice for his old boss, Coach Tom Landry: Go into training camp with a No. 1 quarterback.

It took Staubach, who was named to the Professional Football Hall of Fame Tuesday, from 1969 to 1971 to outduel Craig Morton for the starting quarterback job with the Dallas Cowboys.

Staubach took the Cowboys to a winning Super Bowl VI the first year he had the starting job.

"I think somebody has to be established as THE quarterback," Staubach said.

Veteran Danny White, who inherited the No. 1 job from Staubach in 1980, and young Gary Hogeboom traded starting assignments in a 9-7 season in 1984.

"It's difficult for both to go to training camp and compete for the job again," said Staubach. "I think the team is starting to respond now but I'd hate to see a quarterback controversy."

Staubach calls himself a "fan" now but closely follows the fortunes of his old National Football League team.

"White at this stage needs some sort of an endorsement or I don't think he would want to be there," said Staubach. "I just think somebody needs to be No. 1 before training camp.

"I guess the whole thing is a chancy proposition."

Staubach, 42, discounted any chance he might try for a comeback.

"I played in a flag football game the other day and got chapped lips from the cold and a sore arm," Staubach said. "I think I made the right decision."

Staubach said "It's amazing. I haven't had a concussion since I left pro football."

Doctors had urged Staubach to get out of the game because of the concussions he suffered during his 11-year career.

"You know I actually threw the ball pretty good the other day," Staubach said with a glint in his eye. "Wouldn't it be a great story to comeback from the Hall of Fame.?"

Staubach also said he had no desire to enter politics at this time.

"I have a growing family to watch and my real estate business keeps me pretty busy," he said. "Eight or 10 years from now I might not be as busy a man and get into politics. It wouldn't be out of the question."

Staubach joked about the fact he will become the second Heisman Trophy winner in the Professional Football Hall of Fame in Canton behind O.J. Simpson.

"O.J. said he will be the first Heisman winner because alphabetically his name will come before mine during the induction ceremonies," Staubach laughed.

John Paul Jr. hopes to race while on bail

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Race car driver John Paul Jr. hopes to compete in 17 races this spring while he is free on bail pending his trial on federal racketeering and conspiracy charges, his attorney says.

Paul, 24, was freed from federal custody Wednesday after the owner of a California company he races for posted $125,000 in bail. He is scheduled to be arraigned Tuesday on the four federal charges was scheduled for today.

Phil Conte, owner of Conte Racing of Paramount, Calif., agreed to post $12,500 in cash and post a bond for the remaining $112,500. Paul Jr., 24, is Conte's driver for International Motor Sports Association events.

Atlanta attorney John Nuckolls, who represented Paul at the hearing, asked Conte if Paul's driving was important to his success.

"Yes, it would be hard to replace him," said Conte, who added that he had entered 17 IMSA races across the country with Paul as his driver.

Nuckolls submitted a list of IMSA races and asked the magistrate to consider allowing Paul to drive. Paul's travel is currently restricted to Florida and Georgia, but the attorney said the first three IMSA races are in Florida.

Paul spent two nights in jail after surrendering to federal authorities Monday. He was forced to remain in custody until Conte could be flown from California to be questioned about his offer to post the bail.

Paul and his father, John L. Paul Sr., 45, both originally from Lawrenceville, Ga., are charged with four others in the marijuana smuggling operation, which allegedly imported some 200,000 pounds from Colombia into the Florida and Louisiana between 1975 and 1981.

Paul Jr. is charged in four counts of the indictment with crimes in 1979 and 1981, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Morris.

If convicted of all four counts, Paul Jr. could face up to 50 years in prison and $80,000 in fines. He also faces an additional marijuana posession charge in Lafayette, La.

Meanwhile, Al Unser's son, Al Jr., has quit the English Lotus team that he signed on with only last fall and has made moved to the team of car owner Doug Shierson.

"Little Al" will replace Paul Jr., who had been signed by Shierson for the 1985 season and who started the 1984 CART season as the driver for Midland's VDS team. Paul's contract with Shierson was canceled after he was arrested in Florida.

Paul Sr. is being held in Geneva, Switzerland while awaiting extradition to the United States. He is charged with operating a continuing criminal enterprise in connection with the alleged smuggling ring. Conviction on that charge carries a life sentence. Prosecutors expect his return in about 60 days.

He also faces state charges of attempted murder in the shooting a federal drug witness.

Utah's Drew fails own drug test

Cocaine party causes another fall

By ROY S. JOHNSON
N.Y. Times News Service

SALT LAKE CITY — Coach Frank Layden of the Utah Jazz says he saw the signs that led to John Drew's relapse into cocaine addiction early last December. He recalled such hints as the player's "lack of responsibility" and "sluggishness" during games.

Drew says he saw the signs, too. He says he stopped attending daily meetings with Alcoholics Anonymous that had helped him fight his cocaine problem. And he says he became too relaxed and overconfident about his ability to stay drug-free. But seeing the signs didn't stop him from what he describes as "taking the test," attending a party in the San Francisco Bay Area last December where some guests were using cocaine.

TUESDAY afternoon, sitting in an empty locker room at the Salt Palace Arena, he said quietly: "I failed it."

He got high again.

"I knew I would, but while I was high, I didn't care," he said while his teammates drilled for Tuesday night's game against the Nets. "I felt good. Reality didn't set in until I had a chance to come down. That showed me something about the stuff and about myself. I can't relax."

Drew returned to his team's hotel just after midnight on Dec. 4, 24 hours after disappearing and missing a practice. He was immediately given a urinalysis, in which drugs were detected. Looking back, he says now that getting caught was the best thing that could have happened to him.

"It could have been worse," he said. "I could have not been caught and could have been in an accident. But I was still hoping. I was thinking maybe the guy with the specimen could have crashed on the way to the hospital, anything. But I didn't try to fight it because if I hadn't failed in Oakland, it would have been somewhere else. It was meant to happen and it was meant for me to get caught."

THIS WAS another part of what has been a long battle against cocaine addiction for Drew, who is 30 years old. Two years ago, he underwent two months of rehabilitation in a Baltimore hospital after being confronted by Layden about his addiction. Last summer, he suffered a relapse in Atlanta, for which he was also hospitalized.

On Dec. 6, the day before he entered a Los Angeles hospital for what would be 34 more days of treatment, Drew was suspended by the Jazz. Two days later, they waived him.

Drew works out daily now, lifting weights in an effort to trim away some of the 10 pounds he gained during his recent rehabilitation. He is attending daily sessions with a support group here as a part of his treatment.

DREW CAN'T work out with the team because he is not under contract. Instead, he sits on the sidelines during practices and games, in part because of the security and protection it provides.

He says he wants to return to basketball, preferably with the Jazz, but he knows his chances are limited. Indeed, under terms stipulated in the recent drug agreement between the league and the National Basketball Players Association, Drew will not be allowed another relapse. After a third relapse during a season, he would be suspended from the league for life.

But he says that isn't his concern right now. "I look at it like someone who has cancer," he says. "I thought I had it licked, but I had a relapse. I know the NBA has its rules, but if I can't play, I know I'm going to live. Life goes on."

Redmen set up shootout

St. John's meets Hoyas Saturday

Associated Press

College Basketball

So much for Syracuse, it's on to Georgetown for the St. John's basketball team.

"I think people who saw this game got their money's worth five times," said St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca after his third-ranked team beat No. 11 Syracuse 82-80 in overtime Wednesday night and set the stage for Saturday's long-awaited summit meeting with top-ranked Georgetown.

A sold-out crowd of 19,591 at Madison Square Garden in New York saw Chris Mullin and Walter Berry carry the Redmen in a second-half rally and offset the shooting of Dwayne "Pearl" Washington.

They also saw Mullin, already the leading scorer in St. John's history, surpass the 2,000-point mark with 29 points as the Redmen improved their record to 14-1, 6-0 in the Big East.

"You saw some big shots from him," said Carnesecca of Mullin, "and not medium-range shots."

Georgetown, meanwhile, rolled to its 29th straight victory over two seasons with a 79-66 win over Connecticut. The Hoyas improved their overall record to 18-0 this year, 7-0 in the Big East.

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 2 SMU defeated Texas 54-46; No. 4 Memphis State tripped Florida State 74-69; No. 5 Duke was beaten by North Carolina State 89-71; No. 6 Illinois stopped Ohio State 84-66; No. 9 Oklahoma whipped Iowa State 81-74; No. 14 Villanova turned back Providence 65-57 and No. 16 Georgia Tech defeated Clemson 64-59.

Top Ten

St. John's, which had led only briefly in the first quarter, put the game into overtime tied at 72 on Berry's jumper with one second left. Mullin then scored five of his points in overtime, including a free throw that gave the Redmen an 81-78 lead and their actual winning point with 14 seconds left.

Washington, who had been listed as a doubtful starter because of a swollen ankle, played 41 minutes and hit 9 of 16 from the field in pacing the Orangemen with 26 points.

"I thought when the game started, Pearl would have come down on a parachute," Carnesecca. "He might as well have — he makes it look so easy."

Bill Martin scored 15 of his game-high 19 points in the pivotal second half and Reggie Williams added 18 points to lead Georgetown over Connecticut.

After fighting to a 33-33 halftime tie, the teams were never more than two points apart for nearly nine minutes of the second half. Then, with 11:35 to play, Williams ignited a 10-2 Hoya scoring spree that enabled Georgetown to turn a 49-47 deficit into a 57-51 lead, and the Huskies never cut the advantage below three points the rest of the way.

Jon Koncak scored 18 points as Southern Methodist celebrated its highest college basketball ranking ever with a Southwest Conference victory over Texas. Koncak scored three consecutive field goals in the last five minutes to give SMU its cushion before 11,499 spectators at Austin, the largest crowd at Texas since Bob Weltlich took over as head coach three years ago.

Koncak also swatted away at least three field goal attempts by Texas' 6-10 John Brownlee, who scored just 10 points — about eight below his SWC average.

Vincent Askew tossed in 16 points and snared seven rebounds as Memphis State held off a Florida State surge to beat the Seminoles.Florida State, led by Alton Lee Gipson's 18 points, fought back from a 10-point deficit with two minutes to play, but sputtered in the last 20 seconds to drop its fifth game in a row.

Lorenzo Charles scored 20 points, while former Midland College star Spud Webb and Ernie Myers scored 18 points apiece to pace North Carolina State over Duke. The Wolfpack's larger front line and man-to-man defense forced Duke to depend on perimeter shooting in the early moments, thus limiting the Blue Devils to one shot on most possessions.

"When we come to play like that, we can play with anybody," Charles said. "It's just a matter of coming out excited and maintaining it for 40 minutes."

Anthony Welch scored 16 points as Illinois beat Ohio State and took sole possession of first place in the Big Ten. Illinois centers Scott Meents and George Montgomery held Ohio State center Brad Sellers to just six points. Sellers had entered the game as Ohio State's leading scorer, averaging nearly 17 points a game.

"Illinois did a very good job against us offensively and defensively," said Ohio State Coach Eldon Miller. "I think they are the strongest team we've faced this year."

Wayman Tisdale, bedridden by the flu for two days earlier in the week, scored eight straight Oklahoma points late in the game to rally the Sooners over Iowa State.

Tisdale, who did not start but played all but four minutes of the game, finished with 20 points as Oklahoma racked up its 16th straight Big Eight victory, leaving the Sooners three short of Kansas State's record for consecutive league wins.

"I really wanted the ball late in the game because we were in a do-or-die situation," Tisdale said. "I knew one player had to take control. The other guys were doing a good job, but it was time for me to do something."

Second Ten

Dwayne McClain scored 18 points in leading Villanova over Providence. McClain's hot shooting in the second half boosted Villanova's lead to 48-38 with 11:49 left, and at one point he scored eight straight points.

"Dwayne McClain responded well," Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino said. "He was much more active than against Drexel (a 63-55 non-conference win Monday night). It was a Big East game and that gets him up."

Georgia Tech guard Mark Price and center Yvon Joseph went to the foul line in the closing 17 seconds to cut short a Clemson rally and boost the Yellow Jackets over the Tigers.

Cedeno resists arrest

HOUSTON (AP) — Cincinnati Reds outfielder Cesar Cedeno crashed his Mercedes into a tree and had to be bound and handcuffed by officers who arrested him on a charge of driving while intoxicated early Wednesday.

Cedeno, 33, was arrested in southwest Houston at 2:25 a.m., police Sgt. J.C. Mosier said. The ballplayer later posted $800 bond.

Cedeno and the woman he was with, whom police did not identify, were not injured in the wreck.

Mosier said when arresting officers placed Cedeno in their back seat, "he attempted to kick the windows out of the police car."

"They had to take him out and handcuff him and tie his feet together," Mosier said.

Cedeno played for the Houston Astros from 1970 through 1981. He was named to the National League all-star team four times.

Cedeno was traded to the Reds after the 1981 season for infielder Ray Knight. He batted .276 for the Reds in 110 games last season, hitting 10 home runs and driving in 47 runs.

Reds President Bob Howsam, in a statement relayed by team spokesman Jon Braude, said, "We just this morning heard the information, and it's just a matter of waiting to see what the situation is."

In an interview Monday, Reds Player-manager Pete Rose, who rejoined the team last August from the Montreal Expos, made it clear he was impressed with Cedeno's play during the final weeks of the 1984 season.

"Cedeno played so well for me last year," Rose said. "He was one of the top players in the league the last three weeks. If the season were to start tomorrow, he'd be in left field. He's earned that."

Cedeno was convicted of involuntary homicide and fined $100 for the December 1973 shooting death of a 21-year-old woman in his native Dominican Republic.

Police said Cedeno had been drinking at the time of the shooting.

But authorities decided the shooting of Altagracia de la Cruz was accidental. Cedeno testified the woman was trying to grab the .38-caliber pistol from him when it went off. She died of a single gunshot wound.

Bucs give Bennett control

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Leeman Bennett, though he tried his hand in business and collected a hefty paycheck from the Atlanta Falcons the past two years, didn't feel very productive away from the National Football League.

He missed coaching. "Every phase of it," Bennett said Wednesday as he stepped back into the game — accepting the challenge of trying to rebuild the Tampa Bay Buccaneers into a championship contender.

"I come here with a goal in mind and that's to put together the very best football team that we can and get to the Super Bowl as soon as possible," Bennett told a news conference. "Those goals are automatic."

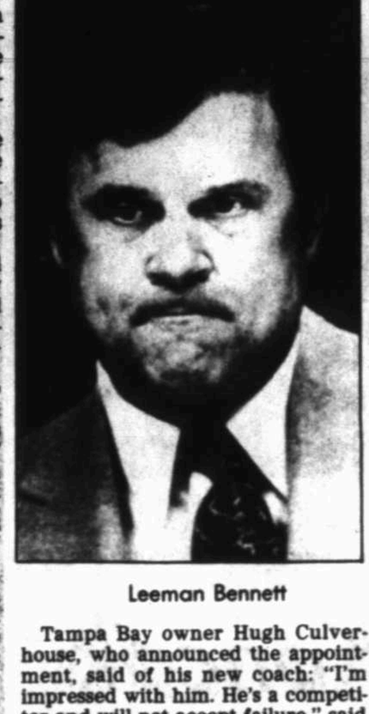

Bennett, 46, is no stranger to reconstruction projects. He took an Atlanta team that had won 11 games in three years and produced a 7-7 record in his first season (1977) with the Falcons. Atlanta earned its first playoff berth ever the following year and by 1980 was 12-4 and NFC Western Division champions.

TAMPA BAY was 8-24 under John McKay the past two seasons, but Bennett said the Bucs have a fine nucleus of talent that he looks forward to working with.

"This team is so much better than the football team I had when I took over in Atlanta in 1977," Bennett said, adding that the Bucs were one of the leage's most improved offensive clubs during a 6-10 finish in 1984.

"I would expect us to contend for the championship ... I'm looking for a team that will play consistently ... up to its ability each and every Sunday," he added.

Bennett, fired after Atlanta compiled a 5-4 record and lost in the first round of the playoffs during the strike-shortened 1982 campaign, replaces McKay who compiled a 44-88-1 record in nine years as Bucs' coach.

Leeman Bennett

Tampa Bay owner Hugh Culverhouse, who announced the appointment, said of his new coach: "I'm impressed with him. He's a competitor and will not accept failure," said Culverhouse, who passed over Wayne Fontes, a long-time McKay assistant who was believed to have the inside track for the job.

In seven seasons with Atlanta, Bennett compiled a 46-41 regular-season record. The Falcons earned playoff berths in 1978, 1980 and 1982 and were 1-3 in post-season play.

While Bennett had not yet signed a contract, Culverhouse said the two had a "five-year understanding" that would afford the new coach time to put together the best available staff and install a new system.

"I hope this is the last time I have to do this for 10 years," Culverhouse said, adding that he won't exert any pressure on Bennett — only the second head coach in Bucs' history — to produce a winner right away.

Bennett spent the past two years operating a recreational vehicle dealership and said he remained on the Falcons payroll until he accepted the job with the Bucs.

He said his dismissal in Atlanta still puzzles him.

"Whenever a coach is fired and has a winning record in professional sports, I think people look for a reason," Bennett said. "I think in all honesty that there probably are some people in Atlanta who are looking back and thinking they made a mistake."

OTHERS interviewed for the Bucs' opening included former New England Patriots Coach Ron Meyer; Seattle defensive coordinator Tom Catlin; Washington Redskins quarterback coach Jerry Rhome; former Michigan Panthers Coach Jim Stanley, and ex-University of Florida Coach Charley Pell.

Culverhouse said he decided early Wednesday that he had found his man. He said breaking the news to Fontes, who carried the title assistant head coach and defensive coordinator, was difficult.

"Wayne was broken-hearted," the Bucs' owner said, citing Bennett's prior head coaching experience as the deciding factor. "Like a true winner, nobody likes to come out No. 2. It's too bad we couldn't hire two head coaches."

Fontes, who came to the Bucs with McKay at the team's inception in 1976, was in Tempe, Ariz., on Wednesday representing Tampa Bay at a scouting combine. McKay, 2-14 in 1983, resigned on Oct. 8 but remained with the team until the season ended.

Eight All-Pro selections are NFL computer rejects

HONOLULU (AP) — Three years ago, all 28 teams ignored Joe Nash in the National Football League draft because, at 6-foot-3 and 250 pounds, he was too small to play defensive tackle in the NFL.

So, Nash mulled over three or four free agent offers and signed with the Seattle Seahawks because they played a four-man line and might carry an extra lineman.

"THAT FIRST year, my only goal was to make the team," says Nash, now an all-Pro, ironically at nose guard in a three-man front. "My second year, I hoped to become a starter."

"But to make All-Pro, to get to the Pro Bowl?" he smiles. "No, I never considered that."

Nash, a third-year man from Boston College, is one of eight pure free agents out of 82 players here here for the Sunday's Pro Bowl. That is, he's one of eight players — a ratio of nearly 10 percent — bypassed in the draft then signed as free agents.

Most are computer rejects — like Nash, they're too short, or too light, or a split second too slow in the 40-yard-dash. Most of their kind are the ones whose names may appear in the small print under "waived," then appear a few weeks later in the same category under the name of another team.

But a few make it and make it big, like Nash and two of his Seattle teammates who are also here, quarterback Dave Krieg and placekicker Norm Johnson. That trio, plus the other Pro Bowl free agents — Deron Cherry of the Kansas City Chiefs, Bill Bates of the Dallas Cowboys, Doug Smith of the Los Angeles Rams, Joe Jacoby of the Washington Redskins and Paul Coffman of the Green Bay Packers, all tributes to the fallibility of NFL scouting.

"I WISH we had a machine that could measure heart," says Gil Brandt, personnel director of the Dallas Cowboys and one of the first NFL executives to use a computer to evaluate players.

"The top 20 percent are easy to spot and so are the bottom 20 percent. But it's awfully tough to rate that 60 percent in the middle. It's desire and the rest of the intangibles that determine if they make it."

Nash is a case in point. Another is Cherry, the free safety for the Chiefs, who made All-Pro for the first time this season and is here for the second-time in his four-year career.

Cherry, originally signed as a punter, and was actually cut once by the Chiefs when he got caught in another of those NFL personnel merry-go-rounds called "the numbers game." Again, 27 other teams had shots at him and didn't take him.

That was as a rookie in 1981, when the Chiefs decided to carry four tight ends and just six defensive backs — two of the tight ends were first and third-round draft choices and to cut them instead of a free agent, the Chiefs would have to admit a mistake.

In this case, Kansas City got lucky.

"The Chiefs told me to stick around after they cut me because they'd probably bring me back," Cherry says. "A couple of guys got hurt and they re-signed me."

THEN, LAST year, the Kansas City's All-Pro free safety, Gary Barbaro, held out and eventually signed with the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League. Cherry got his starting position and was an immediate hit. This year, he was even better, with a team-leading 125 tackles and seven interceptions.

So now it's Cherry who's in control. He becomes a free agent this winter.

"I'd like to go back to the Chiefs because we have a good nucleus, particularly on defense," he says. "But if I don't play with them, I know I'll play somewhere."

Which is something he couldn't have said a few years ago.

Argos trade Barnes for defensive end

TORONTO (AP) — Veteran quarterback Joe Barnes was traded by the Toronto Argonauts to the Calgary Stampeders on Wednesday for defensive end Walter Ballard and future considerations, the Canadian Football League team announced.

Barnes, a product of Texas Tech University and Big Lake's Reagan County High School, is a veteran of nine CFL seasons. Last year, Barnes, whose contract with the Argos was to expire March 1, shared the quarterbacking duties with Condredge Holloway, the former University of Tennessee star.

After the season ended, Barnes intimated he would seek employment this year in the United States Football League. He finished sixth in the CFL in passing last season, completing 231 of 378 attempts for 3,128 yards and 18 touchdowns. He was intercepted 12 times.

The 33-year-old Fort Worth, Texas, native was named the offensive game star of the 1983 Grey Cup contest after he came off the bench to rally Toronto to an 18-17 victory against the B.C. Lions, the Argonauts' first championship in 32 years.

Barnes began his CFL career with the Montreal Alouettes in 1976 and was dealt to the Saskatchewan Roughriders early in the 1980 season. He joined the Argonauts in May 1982.

Barnes was a 13th-round draft choice of the NFL's Chicago Bears in 1974.

Ballard, a 6-foot-2, 235-pound product of the University of Texas-El Paso, established himself as one of the league's quickest and most aggressive linemen in his second full season with the Stampeders, registering 10 sacks and a pair of fumble recoveries. He also had a 31-yard interception, which he returned for a touchdown against the Argonauts.

After his collegiate career with the Miners, Ballard was selected by Kansas City in the National Football League draft and spent most of the season with the Chiefs before joining Calgary for the final game of the 1983 campaign.

Watson wants to prevent disaster

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Although he won the first tournament of the 1984 golf season, an abbreviated appearance in the Match Play Championship, Tom Watson spent a good portion of the year answering a single question:

"What's wrong with Tom Watson?"

The man generally considered the outstanding player in the game missed the cut in three consecutive tournaments. He wasn't really a factor in the first three months. By the time the Masters came around, he still was answering, as patiently as possible, "what's wrong with Tom Watson?"

"It was a disaster," Watson said.

And it was a disaster he's determined to prevent this time around.

"Maybe it was a blessing in disguise," Watson said before teeing off today in the first round of the $400,000 Los Angeles Open, his first start of the new season.

The blessing, he said, is that he learned some things about himself and his game.

"I got too mechanical," he said. "I got into a rut and my confidence waned. When you get too mechanical, rigor mortis sets in. That's what happened to me.

"I got to concentrating on the mechanics of the swing, instead of what I should have been doing, and that's trying to concentrate on my rhythm and the strength of my game, which is scoring."

Watson turned things around at the Masters, finishing second. He went on to win three American titles, was second in the British Open, won the individual title in the U.S. vs. Japan matches, topped the American money-winners and won his sixth Player of the Year award.

"I had some good tournaments, played pretty well, at the end of the year," Watson said.

And, despite a five-week break, Watson said the confidence from that end-of-the-year performance has carried over.

"I'm very enthusiastic about getting started," he said. "There are a few cobwebs I have to clear out. But I feel a lot better about my game right now than I did at this time last year."

LPGA Mazda hopefuls can't see greens for tall trees

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Anything but golf.

That's what some players on the Ladies Professional Golfers Association tour, which opened the 1985 season today with the Mazda Classic, concentrated on since last year's competition wrapped up.

Now the $200,000, four-round event over the Deer Creek course here has some lady pros wondering if they're ready to deal with tees, a course lined with trees and remnants of a Florida freeze.

"I'm not," said Patty Sheehan, who during her time off went skiing in Colorado and redecorated her home.

"You don't know what to expect in the first tournament of the year. you don't know where the ball's going yet. I'm going into it with a funny feeling," Sheehan said.

Ayako Okamoto, last year's No. 3 money winner behind Betsy King and Sheehan, visited Hawaii and admits she needs "more vacation."

"I spent all last week filming shows for a Japanese TV station on golf. I'm not ready," Okamoto said.

JoAnne Carner, whose career earnings are approaching $2 million, opted for fishing lures.

Football glut goes on and on

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Analysis

The Super Bowl ended just in time. We wouldn't want it interfering with this week's opening of United States Football League training camps.

The glut goes on.

This endless stream of football games has left the American public's demand for the sport more than satisfied. Saturated might be a better description.

Instead of more games, what America needs right now is a break. Instead it will get more games.

Make room for the San Antonio Gunslingers and the Portland Breakers, who are settling in their third home in as many USFL seasons. And, the Houston Gamblers and the Jacksonville Bulls, and all the rest.

Even Bill Walsh, a devoted student of the game, confessed that he has had his fill of football. The coach of the champion San Francisco 49ers has packed away his projector and doesn't care if he sees another blitz or bomb until July. He'll do some skiing, play a little tennis and give his fertile mind some well-earned time off from punts and pitchouts.

And this, remember, is his business.

THE PUBLIC, however, gets no break. The USFL is warming up for another springtime season, just in case Walsh gets antsy and needs a football fix in April or May.

The National Football League, of course, is not thrilled.

The overkill football has inflicted on the American public was eloquently demonstrated on Super Sunday.

ABC, celebrating its first Super Bowl, set a record fee of $1 million per advertising minute based on its estimate that it could deliver a 50 rating to its clients.

The best previous Super Bowl rating came in 1982 when San Francisco and Cincinnati produced a 49.1. That, possibly not co-incidentally, was the last Super Bowl before the players' strike.

Surely, after three years though, the game has recovered from that affair. People forget. This was, after all, the Super Bowl, more than just a game but an event. The NFL was celebrating a banner season with record-shattering performances by a half dozen of its biggest names including Walter Payton, Eric Dickerson and Dan Marino. Who wouldn't pay a million bucks for a minute's worth of that product?

What's more, a 50 rating would mean half of the homes having television sets would be tuned in. That potentially translates into the sale of an awful lot of tires, cars, beer and hamburgers.

Even with the hefty pricetag, big business couldn't wait to write out the commercial checks, especially after San Francisco and Miami, the NFL's two best teams, emerged from the playoffs to give the network the perfect pairing.

Then, just to make things even better, much of the country was locked in the grip of an Arctic cold wave, ostensibly trapping millions of people in front of their television sets.

A captive audience. Let the ratings roll. Well, they didn't.

THE NIELSEN figures showed a national rating of 46.4, tying for fifth place on the list of most-watched games. Hardly heavyweight stuff. And that included a 55.1 in San Francisco, where the citizens were somewhat intimately involved in the event.

In some cities, the figures must have been positively depressing to ABC and the NFL. Boston had a 32.9, New York a 38.8, Chicago a 44.4.

What went wrong?

Simple. If you like Chinese food, you might eat it once or even twice a week. But if somebody fed you an endless diet of it, even Peking duck would begin to seem rather ordinary.

When a Super Bowl matching the two best teams in the league triggers nothing more than a mild response from the TV audience, that's trouble.

The cure? It's certainly not more games, but that's what we're about to get.

Top net players shake upset rash

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Three more seeded players have been eliminated from the 1985 U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis Championship, but the two top-ranked players, John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors, waltzed through their opening matches in straight sets.

Upset Wednesday in second-round matches at the Spectrum were No. 3 seed Mats Wilander and No. 6 Joakim Nystrom, teammates on Sweden's victorious Davis Cup team, and Jimmy Arias, ranked seventh in the $300,000 event.

Wilander, the recent winner of the West Australia Open, was beaten by Greg Holmes 6-4, 6-3. Nystrom lost to Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-7 (5-7), 6-1.

Arias, who advanced to the final 16 at Wimbledon last year and is ranked 14th in the world, fell to Mel Purcell 6-7, 6-4, 6-4.

The 15th and 16th seeds, John Sadri and David Pate, were eliminated Tuesday.

McEnroe, in pursuit of his fourth consecutive U.S. Pro Indoor title, dispatched Marty Davis 6-2, 6-3.

Connors, who has already won the tournament four times, whipped Leif Shiras 6-2, 6-4.

McEnroe, who ended the match by serving a love game, said, "I don't think I was as sharp tonight as I was in my last two matches in winning the Masters (earlier this month). The balls on this court seem to fluff and float and skip about."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, January 25, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Scottish poet Robert Burns and English writers Virginia Woolf and W. Somerset Maugham were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actresses Mildred Dunnock and Leigh Taylor-Young, auto racing's Buddy Baker, football's Carl Eller and actor Dean Jones. Be careful not to burn your bridges. One day you might want to return to that former employer or romantic partner. The financial outlook is particularly bright after April 1. A family member makes a significant contribution to your success. Do not try to minimize what this person has done. Others admire your loyalty when you share the applause. Your popularity soars!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Steady effort produces the best results. Your creativity is at an all-time high! Loosen your grip on mate or partner. Acting on impulse can be costly in business or romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel could lead to new prestige and monetary rewards. A Leo gives you excellent advice; follow it to the letter. Do not get involved in a family feud.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A hobby could turn into a real moneymaker. Coddle someone who has special needs. Being more independent at work will win you new respect from higher-ups. Show initiative.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Ignore an amateur's advice regarding savings and investment plans. He/she may not have the latest information. Stick to tradition when around conservative people. Romance holds few surprises.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Consider studying on your own if you lack the funds for evening classes. Research projects and self-improvement activities enjoy highly favorable influences. A platonic relationship intensifies. Have fun!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Research will help you add to your income. Expert advice is worth the cost if you have tax or investment questions. You may need to increase your insurance coverage. Review policies.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Travel proves highly profitable now. Avoid arguments. Emotional upsets can have an adverse effect on your health. Note the tactics of your competitors. Keep abreast of new developments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A compromise will help you move ahead if you encounter a roadblock at work. An edgy mood could affect romance. Keep your professional and personal life strictly separate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Distant associates propose a worthwhile project. Show good judgment when dealing with immature or inexperienced people. Someone could put you on the spot. Do not lose your temper.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Curb a tendency to buy things on impulse. Nothing is a bargain unless you can afford it. A real estate venture looks risky. Let partner take the initiative in romance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your values may be challenged by a hostile individual. Stand up for your beliefs. Emotional involvement with a co-worker could lead to marriage. A Leo plays a key role.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): New responsibilities will lead to higher earnings. Although change means progress, you may be loath to give up old habits or friends. Review your goals. Be careful what you say in public.

At rubber bridge an overtrick usually doesn't matter much. At duplicate, however, it can sometimes make the difference between a top and a bottom score. Here, it earned a top for West Coast star Tony Kasday on this hand from the Mixed Pair Championship at the recent Fall North American Championships in San Diego.

North's jump to four clubs was a splinter bid. It showed a singleton in the bid suit and the equivalent of a game force in opener's suit. Since the king of clubs was now a wasted value, South had no interest beyond game.

West led a trump and declarer drew a second round. The normal line of play is to cash a high diamond and then take the diamond finesse. If it works, or if the suit splits evenly, declarer makes an overtrick—either he loses no diamond trick or he gets a spade discard on the 13th diamond.

That is how declarer started to play the hand. However, when he led a diamond to dummy's ace, West started an echo with the six. Declarer returned the jack of clubs from dummy, covered by the queen and king and won by the ace. West shot back the deuce of diamonds, to complete an echo in the suit.

Now it made no difference at all to East how many diamonds his partner held. But declarer was greatly interested to learn that West had an even number of diamonds, and he elected to play him for a doubleton. He rose with the ace of diamonds, crossed to the ace of spades and ruffed a club. Next came the king of spades and another, and West found himself on lead with nothing but clubs. His forced return of that suit presented Kasday with a ruff-sluff that enabled him to get rid of his losing diamond for the all-important overtrick.

PBS, ABC lead duPont awards

NEW YORK (AP) — Public television and ABC led the field of winners of Alfred I. duPont-Columbia University Awards, with each taking two of the prestigious broadcast-journalism honors.

The awards, announced at a Wednesday night banquet televised live on public television, brought PBS awards for the critically acclaimed "Vietnam: A Television History," and for its weekly documentary series "Frontline."

ABC News scored with "World News Tonight" for its 10-part series on the United States and the Soviet Union, and for its late-night news program "Nightline."

Brian Ross and Ira Silverman of "NBC Nightly News" won for an investigative report on Robert Vesco's alleged drug trafficking in the Caribbean.

And "60 Minutes" took home an award for its piece about Lenell Geter, a man from Greenville, Texas, who was serving a life sentence for a robbery he did not commit.

Other winners:

— In the category of radio, KOSU, the Oklahoma State University radio station in Stillwater, Okla., for a report about two conservative religious broadcasting networks threatening to dominate the limited FM frequencies.

— In the category of major-market local TV, KRON-TV in San Francisco, for an account of nine Americans who were murdered in war-torn El Salvador.

— In the category of medium-market local TV, WJZ-TV in Baltimore, for a humorous documentary on how the 76 million baby boomers born between 1946 and 1964 changed America.

— In the category of small-market local TV, WJXT-TV in Jacksonville, Fla., for a series of reports about odor pollution in Jacksonville.

Beard 'put American kitchen on map'

Beard

NEW YORK (AP) — Genial, plump James Beard, whose work and writings influenced a generation of chefs, food critics, and gourmets, will be remembered as the man who "put the American kitchen on the map," his colleagues said.

Beard, 81, died Wednesday of cardiac arrest following his hospitalization Jan. 8 for a variety of health problems.

"He had an enormous influence inside the food world," said Julia Child. "How helpful and influential he has been to us inside the profession! He was a generous spirit."

Beard, who was 6-foot-3 and weighed 275 pounds most of his adult life "just looked like a lover of food and wine," Mrs. Child said.

He "had an enormous appetite for good living,' said Richard Sax, author of New York's Master Chefs.

"His major contribution is that he put the American kitchen on the map..." Sax said. "He took us from the covered wagon to the Cuisinart. He is the American cuisine of the 20th century."

Beard wrote two dozen books, among them "The James Beard Cookbook," "American Cooking," "Beard on Bread," "How to Eat Better for Less Money," and "Cook It Outdoors," considered the first serious cookbook on American outdoor recipes.

He also lectured, taught, and appeared on television and radio. But most of all, he cooked and he ate, always with great gusto. "The secret of good cooking is, first, having a love of it," he said in 1983.

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — A course on French actress Brigitte Bardot, featuring eight of her films, is packing them in at Middlebury College.

About 175 students of the small, private college are viewing the movies, writing a short analysis of each and discussing "popular culture, eroticism, aesthetics, voyeurism and misogyny," according to the course description.

Claire Schub, the 29-year-old professor of French who is teaching the class, said she thinks most of the students signed up for the four-week course out of curiosity.

"Most of them have heard of Brigitte Bardot, but hardly any have seen her movies," she said. "She was a sex symbol for their parents."

Capra

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Film director Frank Capra was honored on the 50th anniversary — more or less — of his most famous film, "It Happened One Night."

The Clark Gable-Claudet Colbert comedy won five Oscars in 1935 for Columbia Pictures, which sponsored Wednesday's luncheon.

Capra, a sprightly 87, seemed touched as he listened to affectionate tributes from actors James Stewart, Hope Lange, Alexis Smith and a message sent from the White House by former actor Ronald Reagan.

"I'm overwhelmed, overjoyed and over-almost every other thing you know of...," Capra said. "It's hard for me not to be crying. All this love sent my way — I don't know what I will do with it. Maybe I'll find a bank to put it in."

Gleason

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Jackie Gleason and Viacom Enterprises plan to use newly discovered segments of the classic television comedy "The Honeymooners" to create 75 additional half-hour programs.

The new episodes originally aired as part of "The Jackie Gleason Show," from 1952-1957 and have not been seen since their original live broadcast on CBS, Viacom said in a statement.

"The Honeymooners" series now in syndication consisted of only 39 programs for its 1955-56 run on CBS.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producer David L. Wolper has decided against President Reagan's suggestion that he mount a show similar to the opening and closing Olympic ceremonies and "take it on the road."

"I just don't want to do something in that nature that soon after the Olympics," said Wolper, who produced the acclaimed Olympic pageantry.

Wolper said he had looked into the venture and had talked with potential financial backers, but wasn't sure that he wanted to do it in the first place.

"I didn't want to try to top myself," said Wolper, who produced the "Roots" and "The Thorn Birds" television miniseries.

He is about to begin production of "North and South," a 10-hour miniseries for ABC based on the best-selling book by John Jakes.

Parton

CROSS LANES, W.Va. (AP) — You may not think of Dolly Parton as "a fat old girl," but that's the image the singer has of herself, says the woman Ms. Parton has hired to get her in shape.

"I'm just a fat old girl. You think you can get me in shape?" Mary Cox quoted the country-western star as saying.

Ms. Cox, 23, says she met Ms. Parton through a mutual friend while vacationing in Los Angeles and was offered the job.

"I was concerned about fitness being a phase that she was going through," Ms. Cox recalled. "I told her, 'I take my work seriously. I don't want to be just a phase.' She said she was serious about this."

After accepting a one-year contract and departing for Los Angeles Tuesday, Mr. Cox's plans for Ms. Parton seem anything but leisurely.

"That would be aerobic fitness three times a week, walking two days a week, biking two days a week, weight training and conditioning two days, plus relaxation therapy and nutrition," Ms. Cox said.

Laine

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Singer Frankie Laine has canceled three weekend appearances after being hospitalized for chest pains.

"I had a little pain last night and got a little worried about it, because it wasn't like the pain I had felt in the past," Laine told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from his home in nearby Point Loma.

Laine, 71, said he went for an examination after feeling the pain late Tuesday night, and was advised by his physician to return for tests.

Laine has sold between 110 million and 200 million records and has earned 21 gold records in his 36 years in show business. His songs have included "I Believe," "Jezebel," "Mule Train," "Jealousy," "Moonlight Gambler" and "That's My Desire."

Cucumber peels: Useful as roach repellent?

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. Would you please elaborate on a previous column in which you mentioned that cucumber peels were effective in repelling cockroaches? Must the peel be used fresh? What is in the peels that the roaches don't like? Can the peels be dried and used as a powder to sprinkle about the house? B. Jaffe, Stamford, Conn.

A. Cliff Meloan and Rory Scriven of Kansas State University's Department of Chemistry have been conducting experiments with cucumbers and their effect on roaches.

What started out as an old wives' tale — that cucumber skins placed in cupboard drawers repel cockroaches — is proving to have a scientific basis. Of the many chemical compounds in cucumbers, two have been isolated which seem to be the compounds the roaches hate the most and which also cause the strongest cucumber smell.

According to the research, it does not seem to matter whether the skins are used or the cucumbers be sliced or crushed, as this vegetable acts much like an onion. You don't begin to cry when you handle an onion until you cut it because when you cut it you rupture the cells, causing new compounds to form. Therefore, the more you cut or mash the cucumber, the more of the repellent compounds are formed. Mashing the cucumber in a blender is the most effective.

So far a liquid extract has been made of the potent part of the cucumber. A few drops of the liquid is dissolved in a pint of water, and several drops can be placed in suitable places. Some chemical supply houses carry this extract, but as far as I know it is not available yet to the consumer.

Q. Today at the gas station I was complaining to the attendant that my car was rusting. We live along the coast where the air is salty. He said I should do what the other folks around here are doing — put a coat of Johnson floor wax on the car. He said this wax put a protective coat on the paint that kept it from rusting. Before I do this I'd like to check with you. Kay Simmons, Mendocino, Calif.

A. If it rains, Johnson floor wax will wash right off the car just as it washes off your kitchen floor because it's a water-base wax. Lois Alfsen of Johnson Wax's consumer services center says that her company does not recommend using this wax on cars.

Car waxes, explains Alfsen, contain certain ingredients that are essential for car finishes such as fine abrasives to remove road film, tree sap and oxidized paint film. They are also formulated to withstand extreme changes in temperature and humidity. Floor wax doesn't do any of these things.

Q. I buy pop in cartons of 16-ounce, returnable bottles. It seems like every three cartons or so there's a bottle with a chip in the rim. I've always been told not to drink it if the bottle is chipped, but I hate pouring so much down the drain. Can you tell me what it would do to me if I drank it? Also, do they check the bottles before refilling them? Jeanne Stewart, Cerro Gordo, Ill.

A. Robert Longenecker, manager of Coca Cola's customer relations, states that their company sells their syrup to local bottling companies, which are independently operated. These bottlers check for safety and cleanliness, and although chips occur, they are rare.

It would probably be rarer still to find a chip of glass in the bottle, but I wouldn't advise anyone to take the chance of drinking the liquid from a chipped bottle. I would return the bottle to the store for an exchange. Furthermore, if these chips appear every third carton or so, I would call or write the local bottler and even the Department of Health. A chipped bottle can be dangerous.

Q. Where does the term "red herring" come from? I know it is used as a figure of speech, but since I have never seen nor heard of a herring that was red I've always wondered how this expression originated. A.S. Smith, Greenwich, Conn.

A. The term is used figuratively as something that distracts attention from the real issue.

According to "The World Encyclopedia of Food" by L. Patrick Coyle, red herrings are an English specialty in which the whole fish is salted and smoked to a deep, brownish-red color. If one drags a red herring across a fox's trail it destroys the scent, throwing the hounds off the chase.

Q. I have just learned that scallops come out of shells and was wondering why one can't buy them in the shell like oysters and clams. What does the shell look like? Susan Cower, Palo Alto, Calif.

A. The shells of scallops resemble the large yellow symbol you see at Shell service stations. One reason you normally can't buy scallops in their shells, says Robert Robinson in "The Essential Book of Shellfish," is because scallops can't keep their mouths shut, often chattering and clattering like castanets after being brought aboard." This constant opening and closing of their shells causes them to lose their vital juices so that they dry out and die.

Since the scallop boats stay out at sea for weeks, the shuckers find it more expedient to save and refrigerate the eye of the scallop and feed the rest to the fish. This eye of the scallop is really not an eye but an adductor muscle, and for some unknown reason North Americans are the only people who don't eat all of the scallop meat.

Musical memories marred by use in television commercials

By LINDA ANDERSON

Remember the music of the 60s? The Beatles and the Rolling Stones, of course; the Doors, Janis Joplin, Jimi Hendrix, the Byrds, the Kinks, the Animals, Sly and the Family Stone, the Beach Boys and Jan and Dean, all the great Motown groups such as the Supremes, the Four Tops, Smokie Robinson and the Miracles — some of the best music in the world (and some of my best memories) comes from that decade, which is is sometimes called "the Golden Age of Rock."

Now, because people who grew up in the 1960s are in their 30s and 40s — and have control of a large percentage of U.S. consumer dollars — many advertisers are using these songs to sell products.

For example:

— Roberta Flack's "The First Time Ever I Saw Your Face," one of the best, sweetest, most feeling love songs ever written, is being used to sell face cream. I don't know much about the product, but that's one of my favorite songs!

— One of the best-known songs from the rock-musical "Hair" is "Aquarius." The refrain from that song — "Let the sun shine, let the sun shine in" — is a natural for use in advertisements for window cleaner. The philosophy of an entire generation is now used to sell household cleaning products.

— "Dedicated to the One I Love" — how many young couples fell in love to that song? — is used to sell breakfast cereal.

— "Born to be Wild," "Mama Said There'd Be Days Like This" and the Beach Boys' "Wouldn't It Be Nice," are all featured in car commercials. (One rock-music lover was so upset after hearing "Born to be Wild" selling cars, he almost cried — even though he is also a car lover.)

— The list goes on and on, but the most distinct example was during a Beach Boys concert on a cable station. As the group broke into "Good Vibrations," my 4-year-old rock hound (she watches MTV with her big sisters when I'm not looking) said, "They're singing about orange soda!" Maybe I'm wrong, but I really don't believe this great song was written to sell soft drinks.

This advertising phenomenon has raised mixed emotions. While hearing the old "songs of youth" is terrific, using them in commericals often means changes in the words, melodies, meanings and memories.

However, music of the 1960s is not alone in this trend. Michael Jackson's great "Billie Jean" has been rewritten for the Pepsi Generation. And "The 1812 Overture" is forever linked with puffed rice cereal.

Maybe I would appreciate the practice more if the commercials themselves weren't so dumb!

DEAR ABBY

Cat trapped in tree lets loose trouble down below

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 69-year-old grandmother who lives alone and suffers from high blood pressure.

Last week I noticed a strange woman in my backyard; so I went out to see what she was doing there. Well, it seems she lives directly behind me. She said her cat ran out of the house, into my backyard, and climbed to the top of my tallest pine tree. We both tried to coax her down, but the poor thing was too frightened to move.

I won't bore you with the details, but that poor cat was up in my tree crying piteously for three days! It turned bitter cold, so I finally telephoned this neighbor and said, "You must get your cat out of my tree before she freezes or starves to death. Please call a tree man or somebody!"

She said, "You call one; I can't afford it!"

Abby, she lives in a nice house and drives an expensive car, and this is a very affluent neighborhood. So I said, "If you can't afford a pet, you shouldn't have one," whereupon she hung up in my face.

The next morning, the cat somehow managed to scamper down and run home. I later learned that this neighbor telephoned my son's ex-wife and said, "How in the world did you ever stand that dreadful mother-in-law of yours?" (My little grandchild let the cat out of the bag — no pun intended.)

This woman invaded my property, shattered my nerves, then badmouthed me to my ex-daughter-in-law. What do you think of her behavior? — OUTRAGED IN GEORGIA

DEAR OUTRAGED: She was rude, inconsiderate and catty (no pun intended). It's said, "Tall fences make good neighbors." Get one.

DEAR ABBY: This is a second marriage for both of us. I have two grown children by a previous marriage. He has three. We have accumulated a goodly amount of property and money since our marriage.

Under Ohio law, what would happen if one of us were to die without a will? Would the surviving children be entitled to anything? Does the estate have to be probated? And does the person who probated it automatically receive a percentage of the estate?

Your answers to these questions concerning Ohio law will be greatly appreciated. — CONCERNED IN OHIO

DEAR CONCERNED: You say that you and your spouse have accumulated a goodly amount of property and money. Congratulations.

Ohio is teeming with lawyers whose education cost them a lot of money. Please consult one, and be prepared to pay a reasonable fee for receiving authoritative answers to your legal questions.

DEAR ABBY: My son was married recently. His father and I are divorced and his father is remarried.

My question: Should my ex-husband's wife have been in the receiving line? If so, where should she have been standing?

Abby, she stood in the receiving line beside the bride, and I had to stand at the very end.

Please answer in the paper. I want to show it around. — MOTHER OF THE GROOM

DEAR MOTHER: Somebody goofed. She should not have been in the receiving line at all.

Rebels take Washington by storm

Within a 24-hour period, Lee High band members go from tears to cheers. Reacting to the announcement of the Inaugural Parade's cancellation are, in top photo, Tiffany Mace, left, and Kathy McCasland.
But by Monday it was praise and applause from band members, including Amy Grimes, above, as President Reagan, right, greeted the groups in his appearance at the Capitol Centre.

Band members Janna Mauldin and Tommy Bruce share a quiet moment in the Smithsonian Air and Space Museum reading about the exhibits.

Students take learning break

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

It's been said that everyone needs a break now and then.

But Trinity School students are learning that all work and no play doesn't necessarily make Jack a dull boy.

This week, students in grades 7-9 are working as hard as ever — putting aside their reading, writing and arithmetic textbooks.

Instead they're participating in activity-oriented courses during the school's 10th Annual Mini Term.

According to Doris Watson, head assistant, the term offers each student his/her choice of 26 different sessions ranging from the more physical Thai boxing or rappelling courses to the more sedate computer typing or Chinese instruction.

Or, if they wish, students may choose to take part in community service programs such as delivering Meals on Wheels.

The mini term — now considered a school tradition — proposes to "give students a week of activity-oriented learning. It is not to be thought of as a vacation from learning but rather a time to learn something new in a variety of ways," Ms. Watson said.

Scheduled between the fall and spring semesters, each student in grades 7-9 is expected to select courses that will develop interests "he already has or to gain an interest and knowledge in an area totally new to him," Ms. Watson added. "We do not want students to expect to be entertained but, rather, to become totally involved in what they are doing."

For whatever reason, the general consensus of students say the term is a "learnig experience."

Emily Allen, for example, is learning to type on computers because "we're getting a computer (at home) and it will be useful," she said.

And Luke Morrow, who already has mastered Chinese at the first grade reading level, said he decided to sign up for the course "because it sounded like a neat language."

The course, open only to people "who will respect one of the greatest cultures ever developed on earth," is devoted primarily to teaching Chinese calligraphy as well as history and culture, according to instructor Helen Eggleston.

Students enrolled in "Teenagers in Law" participate in mock trials complete with a judge, jury, defense and prosecuting attorneys. In the end, the jurors decide the case and the judge issues a decision after the jury has arrived at theirs.

Still others learn about the excitement of rappelling in the Swiss Alps, to speak Italian, to fill out loan and job applications, or how to play "America's Game" — Bridge.

According to Ms. Watson, the classes vary in length and each student must select three courses in which to participate.

The only prerequisite for the courses, said instructor Margaret Farrell, is " enthusiasm."

LCRA, West Texas lawmakers try again on dam compromise

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

The Lower Colorado River Authority board will try again today to reach a compromise with West Texas legislators on the controversial Stacy Dam project.

At the urging of Gov. Mark White, board members were planning to meet today in Austin to decide whether to drop their opposition to the dam and reservoir project, which was blocked by the Texas Supreme Court in December. Several West Texas legislators have said they would not support the proposed state water package unless the Stacy Dam is approved.

"I've seriously considered not voting for it" said Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, today. Sims thinks the LCRA will compromise on the Stacy Dam despite the Supreme Court ruling because the dam would eventually be built anyway.

"They've received an awful lot of bad publicity, and they're tired of being the bad guy all the time," he said. "I think today we'll receive a favorable reply from the LCRA."

White met Monday with the LCRA board members to urge a compromise, and he and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby delivered the same message Wednesday to Sims, Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, and Owen Ivie, manager of the Colorado River Municipal Water District, which seeks to build the dam.

"Tom Craddick was the impetus behind the whole meeting," Sims said. Craddick, chairman of the House Natural Resources Committee, is sponsoring the water package in the House, and Montford is sponsoring it in the Senate. The package was put together by White, Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis.

"They've received an awful lot of bad publicity, and they're tired of being the bad guy all the time. I think today we'll receive a favorable reply from the LCRA."

— State Sen. Bill Sims

"The governor's purpose is to encourage a compromise" that would avoid delaying the water package, Sims said. A possible compromise would have the LCRA transfer some water rights upstream to the CRMWD, allowing the dam to be constructed.

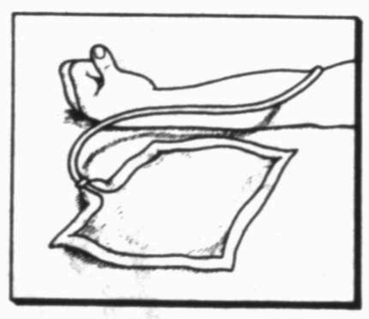

Craddick was unavailable for comment this morning, as his committee was holding public hearings on the water package. The legislators are reportedly waiting for the LCRA's decision before voting on the bill and sending it to the House floor.

The water package would provide $600 million in bonds for state water projects and $250 million bond guarantee program for local water projects, and would encourage conservation, agricultural research and increased local management of ground water resources.

The Stacy Dam, to be built near Ballinger, would provide West Texas cities with water into the 21st century. Midland Director of Public Utilities John Lowe has said the reservoir "would allow added growth far into the next century without overdeveloping the ground water."

KMID-TV will stage Big 2 Blood Drive

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Matt Holton/Reporter-Telegram

Nurses, cots and community leaders will be part of the scene in the studio of KMID television station Saturday as the second annual Big 2 Blood Drive gets under way.

"We came up with the idea last year," said Mike Barker, managing editor of the news department. "We wanted a project that would be as beneficial as possible and something that we could do with the two cities together."

The blood collected will be donated to both Midland and Odessa hospitals.

Barker, an evening anchor newsman, is hopeful of a large turnout.

"Last year we set a moderate goal of 100 units (pints) of blood. We collected 274," he said.

The blood drive will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the KMID studio near Midland Regional Airport Terminal. Also featured is an "on-the-air" minitelethon.

"We will be interviewing community leaders from both cities on the need for blood and stressing the need for the communities to work together," said Barker.

The telethon will be broadcast from 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. Saturday.

While Barker encourages all to come out and give blood, screening of applicants will be conducted.

"There will be staff from the hospitals there to screen people to make sure that they qualify," he said.

Interested donors must meet certain requirements, according to Odessa Medical Center's bloodbank. They must be between the ages of 18 and 65.

"They can be 17 years old, but must have parental permission," said Barker.

Donors must also weigh more than 110 pounds, have had no major surgery within the last six months, no minor surgery withing the last six weeks and must have been over a cold for at least 48 hours.

No one who has had a tattoo, skin grafts, accupuncture or ear piercing within the last six months will be accepted. Also, a potential donor must have not given blood for the last eight weeks.

"They must be off certain medications for the last 12 to 24 hours," continued Barker. "And no one with heart trouble, cancer, hepatitis (yellow jaundice), diabetes or rheumatoid arthritis."

Screening will also be conducted for Acquired Immuno-Deficiency Sydrome (AIDS), according to a spokeswoman at Midland Memorial Hospital.

"They have not finished in licensing a test for AIDS," said the spokeswoman, a medical technologist. "It still must go through governmental processes."

"But we do screen for the disease," she added. "There are questions on the form that the donor must fill out that apply to symptoms of AIDS."

The questions make no reference to sexual preference, she said.

While there are eight categories of blood, some are more in demand than others."It depends upon what you are short of at the time," said the spokeswoman. "But we're usually short on O+, the most common, because of the great demand for it."

"A+ is another common blood type," she said. "But O- is in great demand because anyone can take it. It's known as the universal donor."

Other blood types include A-, AB+ and - and B+ and -.

The blood bank goes through about 300 pints of blood in a month, said the technologist. "But it depends on what we do with the donation, as to how far it goes," she said. "We can make plasma, platelets or red blood cells from it."

Barker, while setting no specific goal, is hopeful of topping last year's contributions. "We're really putting emphasis on Midland and Odessa working together," he said. "After all, we all need blood."

Ex-MetroBank head appears before magistrate

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The defunct MetroBank, besieged by $7 million in loan losses in 1983, also may have been beset by the more than $750,000 which a federal grand jury has charged former MetroBank Bank President John Edward "Eddie" Thomas of embezzling and misapplying in 1981, 1982 and 1983.

Thomas, 42, was indicted Monday in a sealed indictment of 11 counts of embezzlement, misapplying bank funds and making false bank entries. The indictment was opened at noon Wednesday after the Federal Bureau of Investigation arrested Thomas in Arlington late Tuesday.

He was jailed but was released Wednesday under a personal recognizance bond set by a U.S. magistrate in Fort Worth, said the FBI. But U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith of Midland had set a $250,000 bail on Thomas when the indictment was rendered by the grand jury. The amount of bail was recommended by the federal prosecutor and the grand jury. Thomas was to appear before Smith in Midland today for the reaffirmation of his rights, including his rights to a jury trial and to remain silent, and to face the charges.

Thomas, president of MetroBank since its opening in Dec. 1, 1978, at Midland Regional Airport, resigned 4½ years later, on July 14, 1983 — two weeks before the bank was declared insolvent due to loan losses on Friday, July 29, 1983. He offered no reason to the public for his resignation.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. took over the insolvent bank, which then had non-performing loans of between $6.5 million and $7 million and only $1.9 million in equity capital. In mid-1983, the bank had reported $36.3 million in assets in 2,400 accounts and loans of $28.7 million.

The FBI immediately began its probe into the failed bank, which reopened Aug. 1, 1983, as Mid-Cities National Bank. A group of five Texas Panhandle bankers had bought the bank over the weekend after the Texas State Banking Commission closed it due to the $7 million in non-performing loans. The old MetroBank surrendered its charter to the FDIC. Since then, United Bank of Midland has assumed some of the defunct bank's assets and liabilities. Otherwise, there is no connection between MetroBank and United Bank. "There's no commonality," said United Bank President Don Jones. United Bank is in downtown Midland.

Early in the probe, the FBI announced it was ferreting out possible internal banking violations "from the janitor on up to the highest levels."

In October 1983, two former MetroBank stockholders filed suit against the bank's directors and charged malfeasance and misfeasance for the bank's failure.

"The officers and directors either knew, or should have known, that management was bad," charged Odessa lawyer Phil Godwin, who represented stockholders Larry Rackley and Carmelee Boyd, both of Odessa.

At the time, Godwin speculated that "simply bad management" and not energy loans was responsible for the bank's demise.

Most Texans favor repeal of Blue Law

AUSTIN (AP) — Pari-mutuel betting on horse races, a state lottery and Sunday shopping all are favored by the majority of Texans questioned in a new survey, the pollster says.

Pollster George Shipley on Wednesday said his survey showed 66 percent support killing the Blue Law that effectively closes most stores on Sundays. Twenty-six percent of the about 700 people surveyed said they like the law. The rest had no opinion.

A similar survey conducted by the Texas Poll at Texas A&M University in 1984 showed 70 percent of all Texans want the law repealed.

The Shipley survey showed 55 percent of the people questioned favored legalized pari-mutuel betting. Thirty-five percent opposed it, and 10 percent had no opinion. Such polls have a margin of error of about 5 percent, the pollster said.

A state lottery was favored by 57 percent of those surveyed. Twenty-seven percent were against it and 16 percent had no opinion.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, has introduced a bill calling for the repeal of the Blue Law. Several major retailers have organized to push for repeal. The poll was paid for by Texans for Blue Law Repeal Inc., a coalition that includes Joske's, Zale Jewelers and Target, Shipley said.

It's hard not to be fond of money

No, I'm not really in lust. But I am fond of money. I never thought I'd admit that, since the craving for money can be evil and insidious. Certainly, I don't want to be accused of avarice. Who wants that ugliness?

The case today is this: I'm sort of fond of money. I like the glitter of gold and silver, but I am not enchanted by the those folding greenbacks. But what I savor about this elusive cash is its buying power. I feel good when I've got money to spend and sense a queer relief when I spend it. Then, there's that poignant sensation when I wonder where all the money went.

But, I think it's nice to have. It can buy physical comforts and a money-oriented prestige. Success in America often is measured by your bankroll and the clout that it affords.

Otherwise, it's really no fun to have money, though therein lies a certain enjoyment. The thrill is spending it, which I sometimes do like a spendthrift. It's sheer pleasure. I'm fond of buying gifts for self and others. It's a delight. I like gold and silver, the landscape, the texture of fine clothes, the marvels of gadgets and flying machines, quaint houses and elegant women, fine music, and resplendent sunrises and sunsets.

And I love to be loved.

The younger I cease to become, the more I treasure the finer things in life. Money can buy many things. And when you purchase, you automatically take on the responsibility of ownership. That's a burden.

With enough money, you can buy an armada of ships, a fleet of cars and a squadron of airplanes. Then, what do you do with them if you don't make war or generate money? They're too much. Too much money is too much.

Do you want to buy a mountain or a wilderness area or a metropolitan zone or an ocean or even the universe?

They're too much responsibility and are far too great for any mortal to take care of. With what power I have, I think I'll allow God to take care of His own creation. And with His blessings, money or not, I think I'll just enjoy it.

BANK

Thomas, who could be sentenced up to 55 years in prison and fined $55,000 if he is convicted on all 11 counts, was charged with six counts of embezzlement and misapplication of funds and with five counts of making false entries into bank reports and transactions.

In the indictment, Thomas was charged with:

— Embezzling $79,350, which was to be deposited in the account of D&F Equipment Co., and then depositing the money into his personal account.

— Making a false entry by representing that D&F had an overdraft of $79,350.

— Misapplying $63,273.76 and $25,278.65 in bank funds which were to be used for purchasing corporate stock.

— Embezzling $90,000 by misrepresenting that W.C. Castillo owed the bank $90,000.

— Misapplying $60,000 from FTH Inc., a corporation in which Thomas was a stockholder.

— Misapplying $122,662.37 on a noted from FTH Inc.

— Making a false entry by stating that the bank had received a payment of $416,021.01 from FTH Inc. and that FTH's indebtedness was paid in full.

— Embezzling $5,000 on a FTH check.

— Embezzling $140,000 via a cashier's check.

— Making a false entry that a $160,000 note had been paid.

— Making a $175,000 false entry.

Speaker, legislators want panel to study 'sacred cows'

AUSTIN (AP) — A commission charged with tracking down inefficiency in state government could save taxpayers millions, House Speaker Gib Lewis says.

Lewis and several other lawmakers Wednesday proposed the new panel, and Rep. Charles Evans, D-Hurst, agreed to be prime sponsor of a bill to create it.

"Taking on sacred cows? I'm ready to take them on. You point them out to me, and I'll take them on," Evans said.

The bill would establish a 15-member panel, including no more than two legislators, that would submit a final report in 1987.

"It is a landmark proposal in our effort toward greater economy and efficiency, as well as responsiveness, in state government," Lewis said.

The governor, House speaker and lieutenant governor each would appoint five members of the commission. The bill lists several things the commission would look for, including duplicate staffing, wasted space, energy inefficiency and unnecessary paperwork.

"There's inefficiency in all government," said Evans.

North Carolina has used a similar program to save $200 million, he said. That program includes payments to state employees who make money-saving suggestions.

The bill sponsors said the new commission would not duplicate work now done by several state agencies, including the Sunset Commission, Legislative Budget Board and Legislative Council. Evans said the new commission might depend on workers from those three agencies.

The commission would have an executive director and "perhaps some staffing," said Evans. The bill has a blank space in the appropriations section.

Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, said the new panel would offer a "fresh look" at state government.

"The bulk of this commission is public members. They can bring a fresh look that maybe we don't bring to it," he said.

The Sunset Commission reviews state agencies. Every 12 years, an agency undergoes Sunset Commission review to see if it is still needed and whether changes are warranted.

Two lanes on A Street to be closed

From Staff Reports

A Street at Scharbauer Drive will be narrowed down to two lanes of traffic beginning Friday morning, according to the City of Midland Water and Sewer Department. Left turns will be prohibited at Scharbauer Drive for both north and south bound traffic for A Street.

This is a continuation of the sewer project presently being constructed on Scharbaurer Drive. Motorists are advised to use alternate routes, if possible.

LMS should make Texans 'fighting mad'

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans young and old and businesses big and small should be "fighting mad" over a proposal to charge for local telephone calls as if they were long-distance calls, says a consumer advocate.

Carol Barger, director of the Southwest Office of Consumer's Union, joined a state senator at a phone booth news conference Wednesday to dramatize a bill that would outlaw what is known as local measured service, or LMS.

Sen. Chet Edwards, seated in a lighted phone booth outside the House Chamber and Capitol Press Room, said he wanted "to send a clear message to the people of Texas that the telephone companies are trying to put pay phones in our homes."

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. has on several occasions proposed charging customers according to the time of day, duration and distance of their local calls.

In August, however, Southwestern Bell pulled down its latest LMS request to the Public Utility Commission, saying some people had "overall concerns" about it. Bell has claimed it is fair for consumers to pay for the amount of phone time they use.

Ms. Barger said, "The telephone company gave us the hold button, and now how many minutes of our day are spent on hold? And the telephone companies want us to pay for the privilege. People young and old, active and infirmed, businesses big and small, new and old, should be fighting mad about having another clock ticking in one more place in our daily lives, a relentless clock that only costs us money."

Ms. Barger said, "Basic telephone service is part of the social and business fabric of this country. Our parents used the telephone to tell their parents when we were born," Ms. Barger said.

"If the telephone companies have their way," she said, "the insidious meter of long-distance service will be running when our sons and daughters have their first date. The meter will run on the infirmed and disabled whose only contact with family and friends is with the telephone."

Edwards, D-Duncanville, described LMS as a "revolutionary change in telephone service as we know it," and he said, "I don't like it. I don't think the majority of people in Texas like it."

SMART head accepts petitions

AUSTIN (AP) — Petitions with 60,000 names calling for an end to radio and television ads that glamorize beer and wine have been presented to the leader of a national organization opposed to such ads.

Ronald Collins of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, who also is coordinator of Project SMART — Stop Marketing Alcohol on Radio and Television — accepted the petitions at a news conference Wednesday.

"The broadcast and alcohol industries are waging a major lobbying effort in Washington to keep ads on the airwaves that imply to be happy and successful you need to drink. That kind of hokum must be balanced with the hard facts about the dangers of alcohol abuse and alcoholism," Collins said.

The national Project SMART calls for a ban on beer and wine commercials on radio-TV or equal time for messages about the health and safety risks of drinking.

Midland woman injured in mishap

From Staff Reports

A 56-year-old Midland woman who was critically injured in a two-car accident Monday night was listed in stable condition today, according to a spokesman at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital.

Betty Jo Emfinger of Route A, Box 56-EM-51, was injured after her car collided with a vehicle driven by a 29-year-old Kermit woman, Kimberly Ann Crawford, at the intersection of FM 1936 and State Highway 302.

Ms. Crawford was treated for a broken finger and released at the Odessa hospital, according to DPS reports.

Woman's appointment approved

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Senate Nominations Committee unanimously approved Wednesday sending the appointment of Midland businesswoman Lydia Evaro Torres to the State Board of Dental Examiners to the full Senate for consideration.

Ms. Torres' appointment to the board must be confirmed by the 31 members of the Senate.

Ms. Torres, 27, a senior marketing representative for the Xerox Corp., was appointed by Gov. Mark White to the board on Jan. 4.

If approved by the Senate, she will serve a term extending to May 10, 1987.

Ms. Torres, a graduate of the University of Texas at Austin, was appointed to replace Geraldine Tucker, of Austin, whose appointment was not confirmed by the Senate.

Texas Tech regents ask for university system

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech regents have agreed to request legislative permission to establish a Texas Tech University System.

Currently one chief executive officer serves as president of each of two institutions, Texas Tech University and the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center. The TTUHSC has regional academic health centers in four cities — Lubbock, Amarillo, El Paso and Odessa.

Phillips sponsors contest

Phillips Petroleum Company of Bartlesville, Okla. is sponsoring a nationwide contest aimed at encouraging creativity and problem solving among secondary school students.

Entrants in the Student Search for Solutions Contest will propose a solution to a specific problem or present a workable new idea that capitalizes on an opportunity in one of the following areas: Population, environment, automation or space. Entrants also may present solutions of a local, regional, national or international nature. Deadline for entries is March 1.

The competition is open to teams consisting of two students and one teacher-advisor for the junior level grades 7-9 and the senior level in grades 10-12. Five regional winners will be selected in each level. National winners — one from each division — will be announced in May.

National winners will receive cash prizes of $1,000. Regional winning teams will receive $100.

For information or entry forms, call 1-(800)—223-1928.

Scholarships offered

AUSTIN — The Texas Association of Private Schools will award $1 million in scholarships to selected 1985 high school graduates in Texas.

Over 325 scholarships, valued from $295-$13,985, will be offered in 79 separate vocational/career fields.

Scholarship program information has been mailed to public/private high school couselors, principals and superintendents. Scholarship awards will be based on letters of recommendation, academic record and an original 250-word essay.

Applications may be obtained by contacting high school counselors, TAPS at P.O. Box 13481, Austin, Texas, 78711, or by phoning (512) 444-8463. Notification of awards will be made by mid-April.

Texas representative 'ringleader' of increased aid for Afghan rebels

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Each time Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, returned from one of his five trips to the Middle East in recent years he tried to encourage support for the Afghan freedom fighters resisting a brutal invasion by the Soviet Union.

In 1983, after a trip to Afghan resistance camps in Pakistan, Wilson showed photographs of medics patching up fighters. One memorable picture was of a little boy mangled in the war.

"Not many reporters wanted to write about it," Wilson recalled this week in an interview.

If reporters ignored his travelogues and pleadings on behalf of the Afghan freedom fighters, others did not. Aid to the Afghan resistance forces was then approximately $30 million a year, but after that trip, Wilson began lobbying other members of Congress to increase it.

The Central Intelligence Agency, according to informed sources quoted two weeks ago in The Washington Post, now has escalated aid to the Afghan insurgents into the largest covert operation since the Vietnam War era.

Wilson, who comes from Lufkin and is a member of the Appropriations Committee's defense panel, acknowledges he was the "ringleader" for the buildup.

The large increases began in the fall of 1983 with a secret Wilson amendment to the defense apropriations bill rechanneling $40 million of Defense Department money to the CIA for the Afghan operation, sources told the Post.

Congress has appropriated nearly $250 million for the Afghan program in the current fiscal year — 80 percent of the CIA's total yearly expenses for covert operations, the newspaper reported.

Wilson agrees the figure is "about right" and he believes Congress may come up with "a little more money for next year."

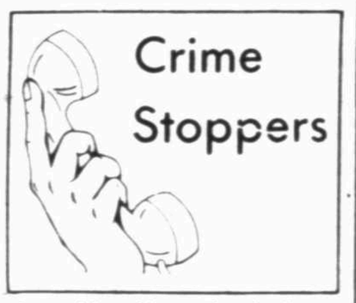

Spending for covert activities is authorized behind closed doors and is not listed as an item in the president's budget or in a printout of congressional appropriations.

"It might show up as a water system for an air base," Wilson laughed.

He is annoyed that someone outlined the program for the Post's writers, Bob Woodward and Charles R. Babcock. He believes it was not the CIA, but a staffer on the Intelligence, Appropriations or Armed Services committees who talked, in violation of the law.

"I was astounded at how much the reporters knew," Wilson said, "but they were responsible. They knew some other things they decided not to print; it could have been a lot worse."

Information wanted on convenience store robbery

Crime Stoppers this week is seeking information on the Nov. 22 aggravated robbery of a Midland convenience store.

A slim, 6-foot-1-inch black male accompanied by a 5-foot-7-inch, stocky, black male with a small mustache entered the Stop & Go, 900 S. Big Spring St.

The taller of the two robbers approached the clerk wielding a small silver-colored automatic pistol and demanded the cash from the register. He then demanded a bag which contained several blank National money orders.

Both men then left the store and ran across Florida Avenue.

Midland Police Department detectives said about 15 of the money orders have been cashed throughout West Texas.

Anyone with information about this robbery that leads to the arrest and indictment of the robbers could earn up to a $1,000. Crime Stoppers pays cash for information about all felonies and callers can remain anonymous.

To call Crime Stoppers in Midland, call 694-TIPS; in Odessa, call 333-TIPS.

Court will consider settlement of TDC suit

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawyers today were scheduled to go to federal court in Houston with a proposal that could lead to settlement of the 12-year-old civil rights lawsuit against Texas prisons.

"It's the first step towards ending 10 years and more of litigation," said Rick Gray, lawyer for the Texas Department of Corrections.

Attorney William Turner of San Francisco, who represents inmates, said Wednesday he signed the agreement because, "We were convinced of the sincerity of the Texas Department of Corrections people that they really want to deal with the overcrowding problem."

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice in 1981 placed TDC under a sweeping reform order, including tight curbs on overcrowding. A Feb. 4 hearing had been scheduled to check on compliance. The proposed agreement calls for at least a one-month postponement of that session.

Under the agreement, the state promised to:

— Give 60 days of "good time" credit to inmates who complete educational or vocational programs. That includes up to 15,000 current prisoners who already have finished such programs.

"That's like a 60-day cut in sentence. People will be released more speedily because of that," Turner said.

— Provide 500 more single-inmate cells within nine months. Those cells would be used for mentally ill and other inmates with special needs. Present cells would be designated as single cells. No construction would be involved.

Turner is pushing for single cells for all inmates.

"They have now agreed to some single celling, very little, but at least it's something," he said in a telephone interview.

— Expedited construction of psychiatric and women's facilities.

Overall, Turner said the agreement gives prison officials time to ask lawmakers to approve plans to meet the court order. The plans will be developed after TDC gets the results of a consultant's study of prison facilities.

TDC officials will "submit to us and the Legislature their proposal for dealing on a long-term basis with the overcrowding problem," said Turner. "If it's good enough and whether the Legislature will buy it is unknown. Both things have to fall in place."

Some state officials fear the cost of meeting the prison reform order. But Turner said "what we'd like to do is save the state a great deal of money" by releasing inmates instead of building prisons.

Dollar lowers

LONDON (AP) — The dollar edged lower against major European currencies early today as investors pondered the prospect of further central bank intervention. Gold prices gained.

Dealers said worries about intervention — where banks sell large blocks of dollars in a bid to flood the market and drive the currency's value down — outweighed the boost the U.S. currency got from this week's gross national product figures, which showed America's economy booming.

One unconfirmed report quoted Japanese sources as saying the Group of Five finance ministers had set specific intervention levels when they met last week in Washington. The meeting of ministers from the United States, West Germany, France, Britain and Japan came as the dollar set records against the British, French and Italian currencies.

Large-scale intervention was reported on Tuesday, dampening a dollar surge.

However, dealers said no attempt was made Wednesday to defend the British pound, which sank to an all-time London closing low of $1.1125. The pound, also under pressure from falling oil prices which cut into Britain's North Sea oilfield income, hit $1.10 during trading in Hong Kong last week.

The pound gained marginally today to $1.1156.

Other currencies also strengthened against the dollar. At midmorning, one dollar bought:

–3.1678 West German marks, down from 3.1785 late Wednesday.

–2.6675 Swiss francs, down from 2.67625.

–9.6915 French francs, down from 9.7115.

–3.5792 Dutch guilders, down from 3.5880.

–1,949.75 Italian lire, down from 1,951.00.

–1.32375 Canadian dollars, up from 1.32585.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar slipped to a closing 254.06 yen from Wednesday's 254.13. Later, in London, it was quoted at 254.00 yen.

Explosion injures workers at Shell refinery

WOOD RIVER, Ill. (AP) — At least six plant employees remain hospitalized with severe burns suffered in an explosion that ripped through a lubricating unit area of a Shell Oil Co. refinery.

Plant spokesman David McKinney said the Wednesday afternoon explosion occurred at the southwest corner of the refinery. Several buildings across the street were shaken, one of them a tavern where plaster was torn from the ceiling.

A fire which followed the explosion was brought under control by a Shell crew and permitted to burn itself out through a period of several hours Wednesday afternoon, Shell spokeswoman Karen Ruger said.

Company officials said cause of the blast was not immediately known. Those injured suffered burns over their faces and arms at a work site where wax and other materials was being removed from oil, McKinney said.

The six employees, all of whom suffered third-degree burns, were identified as Ronald Hettinger, 42; John Sherwin, 28; Harold Hawkins, 52, Donald Schroeder, 33, Mark V. Cain, 27, and Larry Burns, 35.

Cain and Burns, first taken to Alton Memorial Hospital along with Schroeder, were flown by helicopter to St. John's Mercy Medical Center in suburban St. Louis for treatment at a special burns unit, officials said.

Burns was in serious condition with third-degree burns on his face, hands, head and abdomen and with respiratory damage he suffered from smoke, a spokesman said. Cain, who suffered burns on his neck and face and a dislocated left shoulder, was in serious condition.

Sherwin, Hettinger and Hawkins were taken to Wood River Hospital and Sherwin later transferred to DePaul Health Center in suburban St. Louis, where he was in serious condition, officials said.

A seventh worker, William Goetten, 30, suffered cuts on his fingers in the explosion. Shell officials declined to say how injured employees were removed from the fire scene.

Tavern proprietor Dan Rocker said flames from the explosion scene shot 150 feet into the air during the height of the fire.

"I was watching television when I heard the blast. It was just like a bomb went off," said Rocker. "Then it was like an inferno."

Chamber to fight state income tax as part of Legislative Survey

By SUSAN LINDSAY
Business-Oil Writer

Midland's Chamber of Commerce will oppose the implementation of a state income tax in 1985 based on the results of its 1985 Legislative Survey, which was approved at the chamber's Wednesday meeting.

The tax and other issues, including education, water, transportation, economic/consumer affairs, agriculture, energy and criminal justice, were listed on the survey and each was measured of importance to Midland.

Jim Everett said the chamber received a "positive response" of 22 percent. Any item on the survey with a majority of 2/3 or better would be treated as a mandate and the items would be endorsed by the chamber, he said.

Jim Alsup, chamber president, said the chamber will monitor state legislation concerning the endorsements and will take necessary actions to see that the legislation knows of Midland's positions on the issues. "We're just looking out for Midland," he said.

Leading the list of items opposed by the Chamber of Commerce is the the implementation of a state income tax by 98 percent. Eighty percent of those supporting the tax said the issue was of high importance.

Authority of local school districts to formulate and implement discipline policies for drug and alcohol abuse in the public school was supported by 97 percent and 77 percent said the issues was of major importance.

State services being reduced to match anticipated revenues was supported by 89 percent, of which 46 percent said the issues was very important to Midland.

Supporting local control of public schools was 91 percent with 77 percent ranking the issue of high importance.

A state-wide water plan that adequately addresses West Texas water needs was supported by 94 percent. This chamber declared this the most important item to Midland by a total of 90 percent.

The Chamber of Commerce also strongly opposed an increase in oil and gas severance tax rate. The item received high importance standing from 89 percent of the membership.

Also supported was the amending of the Code of Criminal Procedure to authorize the court to inform a criminal jury of the effect of the parole laws on time which may actually be served by a defendent sentenced to prison by 95 percent.

Under current law, a jury deliberating the punishment of a convicted felon is not authroized to know or be advised that an inmate of Texas Department of Corrections is considered eligible for parole when he has served one-third of his sentence, less any good time credits he has earned or 20 years, whichever is less.

Please see CHAMBER, Page 7C

How the Chamber stands

Based on the Midland Chamber of Commerce's 1985 legislative survey, the organization will take the following stands on the issues below.

OPPOSE

- implementation of a state income tax.
- increasing the oil and gas severance tax rate.

SUPPORT

- reducing state services to match anticipated revenues.
- more local control of public schools.
- having State School Board members elected from each congressional district.
- local school districts to formulate and implement discipline policies for drug and alcohol abuse in school.
- allowing local school districts flexibility in accomplishing lower student/teacher ratios in grades kindergarten through second grade.
- adoption of a state-wide water plan that adequately addresses West Texas water needs.
- development of a multi-state water resources planning commission to coordinate water use and allocation.
- requiring that persons appointed the State Highway Commission to be from different geographic regions of the state.
- increasing the speed limit to 65 miles per hour on four-lane divided roadways with low traffic volumes.
- legislation prohibiting the possession of open containers of alcoholic beverages in motor vehicles.
- repeal of the "Blue law".
- branch banking in Texas.
- continuation of the current method of electing a commissioner of agriculture.
- raising the age of legal consumption of alcoholic beverages from 19 to 21.
- re-enactment of the wire-tap statutes.
- amending the Code of Criminal Procedure to provide for less than than unanimous verdicts (10-2 in felony trials and 5-1 in misdemeanor trials) in the punishment phase of non-capital criminal jury trials.
- amending the Code of Criminal Procedure to authorize the Court to inform a criminal jury of the effect of the parole laws on time which may actually be served by a defendant sentenced to prison.
- amending the Code of Criminal Procedure to authorize a "good faith" exception to the exclusionary rule.
- amending the Constitution and statutes to authorize non-partisan election of judges and prosecutors.

Loeffler pledges support to halt proposed tax simplification plan

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

Congressman Tom Loeffler today at the Midland Hilton pledged his support to halt the proposed tax simplification plan that would eliminate percentage depletion and intangible drilling costs to the oil industry.

The eight-term representative was in Midland at the request of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association (PBPA) to address members of the oil industry and community leaders on the status of the tax proposal submitted by the Department of Treasury.

"I don't like what I see in this proposal," said Loeffler. "Not because we have a parochial interest here in Midland, but, because we are setting the oil industry up to be in the same vulnerable position in the 1990s that it was in in the 1970s."

He said that America is a nation dependent on energy from the time we wake until the time we go to bed. He said we could not be totally dependent for energy on foreign exports or we would lay the frame work for a repeat of the 1970s when gasoline was rationed and long lines formed at service stations. He added: "Anyone who says we don't need wildcatters is making one of the most stupid statements ever made in the free world."

He said he had spoken to President Reagan on the proposal, and feels that the President has not had time at this point to comprehensively review it. "Now is the time to develop a concerted, tough approach to the tax proposal," he warned, adding that the approach should not be so hostile that it completely alienates former Treasury Secretary Donald Regan.

Tom Loeffler

Loeffler said that Regan, who had formed his ideas about depletion and intangibles on the basis of a one well profile, had requested valid data that could stand a thoroughscrutiny.

It's going to be up to the industry, working through their associations, to provide that data, he said. "We can't just give them the same old story that they have been hearing for years from the industry." Loeffler says he plans a meeting with the Department of Energy to determine exactly what kind of impact data they would want to see.

"The industry must also get with Rep. Jack Kemp (R-New York), because his tax reform package also calls for the elimination of percentage depletion," he said.

Loeffler also feels that Jim Baker, new secretary of treasury, may review some of the treasury issues of Donald Regan's tour, once he has passed the confirmation process. He also feels that the industry may be able to approach Baker more directly.

"It could be April before any action is taken on this tax proposal," said Loeffler, "but the work needs to be done now. If this proposal comes to the House floor, we are going to be in trouble. He says the mind set behind the proposal is that no business decision should have to be weighed for tax implications.

The congressman did not put too much stock in an oil import fee to prevent OPEC from dumping petroleum products, for fear that it would impact the east coast and result in a backlash against the oil industry. Instead, he put more stock in some form of quota system.

Hughes reports $133 million loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Hughes Tool Co. reported a $133.8 million loss for 1984, but company officials said the firm rebounded slightly in the last three months of the year.

The Houston-based firm, one of the nation's largest oil field service companies and a major manufacturer of drilling equipment, reported Wednesday it made a profit of $11.4 million in the fourth quarter.

The annual loss, whhich amounted to $2.40 for each common share of stock, came despite an increase in drilling in U.S. and international markets. Hughes Chairman James R. Lesch said that industry overcapacity kept profits down.

The firm reported revenues of $1.2 billion in 1984, up 5 percent from the previous year. The fourth quarter sales of $337,803,000 represented an increase of about $50 million from the previous year.

Plant to recycle hazardous wastes

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A Houston company plans to build a $70 million plant in Wichita to recycle and destroy hazardous wastes, officials said Wednesday.

Robert C. Wyatt, executive vice president of Qwixm of Houston, said construction would start sometime this year and be complete within about 30 months after the start date.

He said the company has started to apply for the environmental permits that are required before building can get underway.

The plant would process substances contaiminated with heavy metals or other toxic substances and either recycle or destroy the wastes, Wyatt said.

No Polychlorinated Biphenyl or PCB, dioxins or nuclear waste will be handled at the plant, he said.

Two discoveries have been completed in Lea County, New Mexico.

CASA PETROLEUM, INC. tested the No. 1 Pogo Napa to pump 15 barrels of 35 gravity crude and five barrels of oil. Casa peforated the Penrose zone from 3,931 to 3,946 ft., and acidized the zone with 800 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 40,000 gallons of gelled water, 120,000 lbs. of 10/20 sand and 20/40 sand.

Drilled to 4,005 ft., the well is plugged back to 4,000 ft. Final casing set was 4 1/2 inches at 4,002 ft.

On a ground elevation of 4,197.8 ft., formation tops are the Seven Rivers at 3,020 ft. and the Queen at 3,644 ft.

The well is located 1,980 ft. from south and 330 ft. from west lines of Section 14, T16s, R33e.

GULF OIL CORP. tested the No. 1 Lea "ACF" State to pump 221 barrels of oil, 120 Mcfpd and 54 barrels of water. Gulf perforated the Bone Springs zone from 6,285 to 6,320 ft. No treatment was reported.

The well was drilled to 6,705 ft. and plugged back to 6,385 ft. The final casing set was 5 1/2 inches at 6,698 ft.

The well is located 660 ft. from north and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 35, T18s, R36e. Ground elevation is 3,766 ft.

District 7C gains oil, gas discoveries

Two strikes - an oil and a gas, have been tested in District 7-C.

MARK V. WEST & ASSOCIATES tested the No. 1 Mary L. Bauer, a Jennings gas discovery in Runnels County for a calculated absolute open flow of 1.75 Mmcfpd. Gravity is 61.2. The well is flowing from perforations 4,276 to 4,78 ft., natural production.

Originally drilled to 4,700 ft. by Westwood Energy, Inc., the well is plugged back to 4,530 ft.

On a ground elevation of 1,829 ft., the operator chose the following formation tops: Palo Pinto, 3,744; Capps Lime, 4,050; and the Gardner Lime at 4,750 ft.

The well is located 1,150 ft. from north and 2,300 ft. from east lines of Section 47, Block 63, HT&B survey, eight miles southwest of Winters.

Westwood Energy potentialed the well, then then No. 1 Bauer, to pump seven barrels of 42 gravity crude and 20 barrels through perforatins 3,744 to 3,748 ft.

ARENAS PETROLEU, INC. tested the No. 9 Denis, a possible Harkey Sand find in Tom Green County, to pump 22 barrels of 37.5 gravity crude and 35 barrels of water. The well is producing from perforations 4,092 to 4,095 ft., which were acidized with 500 gallons of acid and fractured with 9,000 gallons.

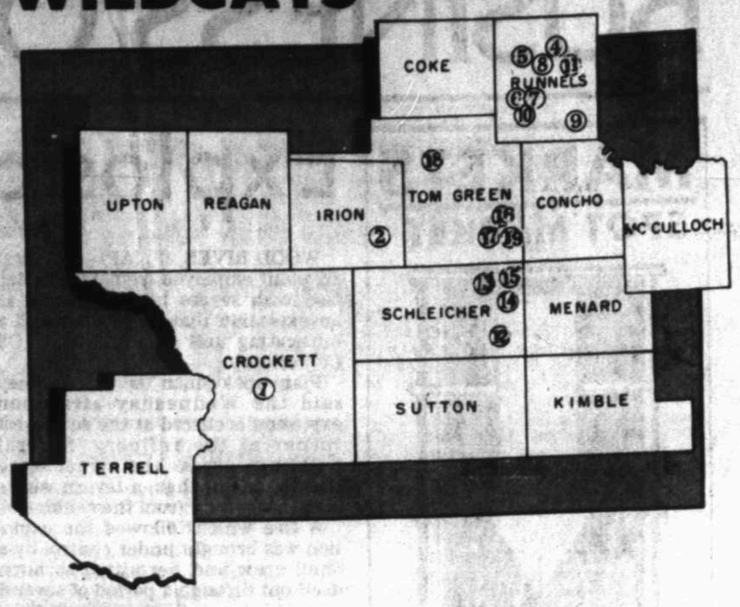

The Denis was drilled to 4,575 ft. and plugged back to 4,280 ft. The final casing set was 4 1/2 inches at 4,560 ft.

On a ground elevatin of 2,100 ft., formation tops chosen were the Palo Pinto at 3,600 ft., the Crosscut Sand at 3,920 ft., the Harkey Sand at 4,055 ft. and the Strawn at 4,305 ft.

Location of the well is 660 ft. from south and 2,310 ft. from west lines of Section 2, J.W. Thomson survey, Abstract 7913, eight miles south of Van Court.

The well is a re-entry of the Amerada-Hess No. 4 Chambers Ranch, which had been abandoned Aug. 2, 1956.

CHAMBER

About 61 percent of the chamber said this was of major importance to Midland.

In other business, the chamber decided to form a committee to study if a new Midland County Jail is necessary.

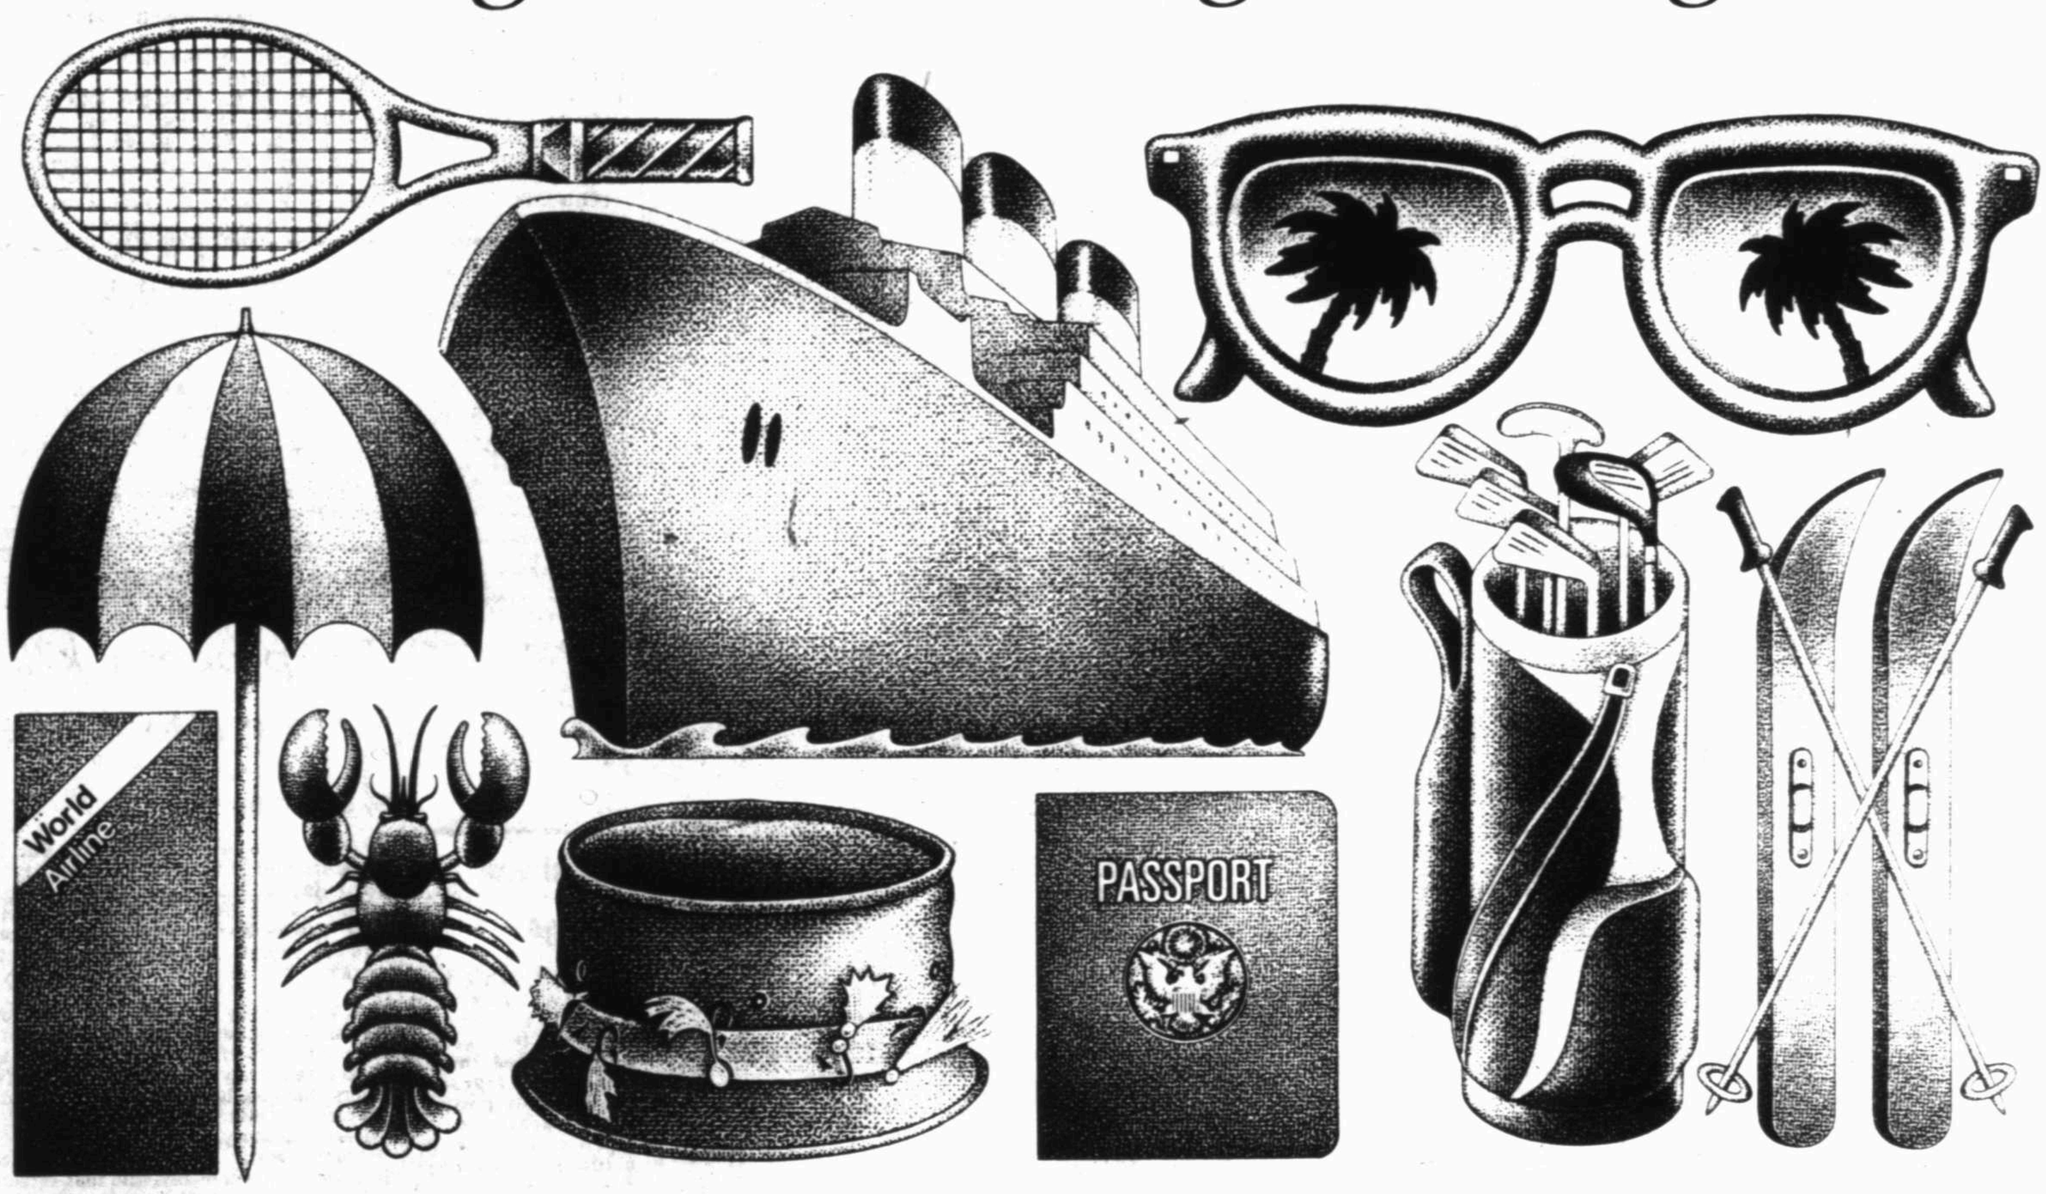

Alsup said both the county government and a citizens committee opposing the facility have contacted him. "At the present time, we have no position at all on the matter," he said.

Also discussed was AT&T's Extended Area Service, which would eliminate a charge for telephone calls between Odessa and Midland. Grant Billingsley, executive vice president, said he has spoken to the Odessa Chamber of Commerce about the issue and is waiting for their response.

He added that the general public has not expressed interest in the service and that their interest should be secured before taking any further action.

You could get a taste of the good life right now.

With the money a RepublicBank IRA can save you on your 1984 taxes.

At tax time, every penny counts. And a RepublicBank IRA can help you save those pennies — even up to hundreds of dollars — right now.

An immediate tax break.

If you open your RepublicBank IRA by April 15, 1985, you can apply your deposit to your 1984 tax return. That could mean a savings of hundreds of dollars for you to enjoy a taste of the good life now.

And a tax break every year.

Every cent you have in your RepublicBank IRA, including the interest you earn, is tax deferred. So you don't pay any taxes until you start to withdraw funds or you retire.

A safe and sound investment for the good life.

When you open your RepublicBank IRA, you begin to save every year.

And since your investment is tax deferred, your money adds up quickly.

You'll also have the assurance of knowing your RepublicBank IRA is secure and insured up to $100,000 by the FDIC.

So get a taste of the good life right now and a plan for the good life later. Come in and see us today about a RepublicBank IRA.
