Carter Pledges To Fight Inflation, Trim Spending

President Ends Texas Trip On Campaign Pitch

BEAUMONT (AP) — President Carter, delivering a campaign style speech in sweltering heat, said Saturday his administration is determined to curb inflation, reduce red tape and rewrite regulations so ordinary people can understand them.

Carter vowed that he'll use the veto if necessary to hold down federal spending "even if it means I have to take the political consequences. .

"It is not easy to refuse additional funds for such things as veterans, farmers, water projects, defense and education, for example," the president said, adding:

"Hold The Line"

"But somebody has to hold the line on spending and I am willing to do so even if it means I have to take the political consequences. ... Short-sighted selfishness can only lead to a spiral of inflation that nobody will be able to stop."

At least two women and one man were overcome in the 96-degree weather and had to be helped to the shade as Carter spoke at the dedication of a post office building here.

Carter returned to Washington on Saturday evening aboard Air Force One, arriving at Andrews Air Force Base at 6:06 p.m. CDT.

The president began his day in Houston, where he held a series of private meetings with business representatives, Hispanics, blacks and Texas campaign volunteers from the 1976 campaign.

Dinner In Houston

From Houston, where Carter addressed a $500-a-plate fund-raising dinner on Friday night, the presidential party went to Beaumont, an oil refining town on the Gulf of Mexico.

Carter's last stop on the two-day trip was at Fort Hood, a large Army base, where he watched a demonstration of military firepower. The president stressed familiar themes, but did so with campaign-style rhetoric reminiscent of his 1976 oratory.

Carter has said before that he'll veto inflationary spending bills, but during his Texas visit, the president repeatedly emphasized that he would use the veto even if it means angering special interest groups.

Groups Identified

Carter identified the groups as highway and defense contractors, home builders and dam builders, farmers, educators, veterans, and local and state government officials.

"I am prepared to use the full powers of my office — every resource at my command, including the veto — to hold the line on the federal budget," the president had said the night before at the fundraiser.

Aboard the presidential jet, one Carter adviser, asking not to be identified publicly, said the president probably would veto even a politically popular tax cut if Congress includes in it "the regressive language" of an amendment offered by Rep. William Steiger, R-Wis.

Apparently the official was referring to an amendment that would cut the maximum rate of income tax on capital gains by almost half — from the present maximum of 49 percent to 25 percent. Capital gains are profits earned on the sale of stock and other property.

Carter was applauded warmly by the Beaumont audience when he pledged to reduce the number of government regulations, cut red tape and ensure that the regulations are "written in plain English so a peanut farmer can understand them."

The president came to this East Texas town to help dedicate a refurbished, 44-year-old federal building named for Rep. Jack Brooks. The Texas Democrat heads a committee that has authority over the president's effort to reorganize the federal government.

At Fort Hood, Carter watched a massive display of Army artillery firepower. Initial military estimates placed the cost of the demonstration at $2.1 million. Later, however, the Army reduced the figure to $1 million.

"It was just that it didn't cost as much as we thought," said presidential press secretary Jody Powell.

Later, Carter told reporters that "whatever expenditure was involved, it was well worth it."

The president, impressed by the firing of more than 30,000 rounds of ammunition by the Army and Air Force, said the cost was worthwhile "just for my own education."

Carter said his visit to Fort Hood was "a very important requirement of my job."

Army Capt. Bill Wisenbaker of Fort Hood denied that publicity about the cost of the firepower demonstration at the armor base was a factor in the lowering of the cost estimate.

"It was based on the president's scheduling, which was revised after original plans for the demonstration were made."

Wisenbaker said about $800,000 worth of artillery was to be fired, and another $200,000 was to be spent in ancillary costs like fuel.

City's Storm Siren System Inoperative

By PAT TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

TORNADO sirens, part of the city's defense against killer storms, have been inoperative for some time and aren't expected to be in service again until next year's severe weather season, the city's civil defense director says.

Director Bill Payne confirmed that the sirens have been out of service during the past few weeks following a malfunction May 28, when some of the sirens blew about 11:20 p.m.

The problem, Payne says, lies in the wiring of the sirens and in "switching at the central office."

But, he asserted, the sirens are not a prime component of Lubbock's severe weather alert network, anyway.

"It's a system for an outdoor population," Payne says of the sirens, "and we're an indoor population. If you're outdoors and you hear a siren, it doesn't communicate anything to you — except, perhaps, that something is wrong."

And citizens who hear the sirens (an estimated 25 percent of Lubbock's populace heard them during a 1969 test) normally tune to a radio or television station for more comprehensive information, Payne says.

In recent years, with the city's normal growth and sprawl, a diminishing percentage of Lubbock residents are within earshot of the audible warning, Payne says.

A study in 1969 indicated Lubbock would need an additional 40 sirens at a cost of $5,000 to $10,000 each to ensure total city coverage. Since that time, Payne says, he's recommended no expansion in the system.

"We figured it'd cost between a half and three quarters of a million dollars to have outdoor coverage," he says, and added he considered the cost prohibitive.

Payne says he's personally satisfied that disseminating weather information to radio and television stations is the most efficient way of reaching the most residents. He estimates that as much as 95 percent of the populace views television or listens to a radio during severe weather.

The advent of National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration radio weather reports also will play a major role in alerting citizens, Payne predicts.

Of his own coterie of friends, Payne es-

'New Breed' Worker Asserting Self In Lubbock Industries

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

NEWSPAPER and magazine articles herald its growth, psychologists study it, managers adapt to it and individuals live it. "It" is a new set of job values and expectations from the nation's work force.

New breed workers, as they popularly are called, are making their presence felt in the work world across the nation by demanding more from their jobs than pay, promotions and fringe benefits. They say they want recognition, self-esteem and a sense of achievement from their jobs. They are concerned with the quality of their life.

Their thinking appears to be pervading the Lubbock area, although not to the extent it has in more highly industrialized sections of the nation.

A Texas Tech professor who specializes in management, and managers of three local organizations say they sense the new climate in Lubbock.

But, they agree, Hub City workers retain much of the traditional work values and beliefs.

Dr. Vince Luchsinger of Tech said that Lubbock "lags from the rest of the country because it's isolated and a relatively frontier area."

This area's residents generally are not "industrialized and labor-oriented," Luchsinger said, explaining that people have retained their rural work-ethic attitudes.

Citizens are "just now learning how to live and work in large, formal organizations such as industry," Luchsinger added.

Yet, he said, "We're lucky because these kinds of people are good ones. They have a healthy outlook on life and are blessed with good resources.

"They tend to work a little harder here and they're more imbued with the work ethics," he said, adding in afterthought, "They don't have bad habits like in the North and the East of taking off on Mondays and Fridays."

The managers agreed with Luchsinger. Chuck Nielsen, personnel director for the local Texas Instruments plant, said workers here tend to put in eight hours worth of work for eight hours worth of pay.

And Joe Minkley, personnel director for First National Bank, concurred, saying, "In West Texas, we have people working who want to."

Luchsinger sounded a warning, though. "By and large, it (the scene) will over time change, partly because of outside influences and the Tech influence and partly because people change and evolve as they become more industrialized."

Employees will become more concerned with "more meaningful" leisure time and will want more of a personal stake in their jobs, he predicted.

"I think management will have to be prepared to give consideration. Consideration is what a lot of strikes are over," he said.

And, Luchsinger added, Lubbock has a "pretty good labor-relations climate that

British Missionaries, Families Slain In Rhodesian Massacre

VUMBA, Rhodesia (AP) — Black guerrillas wielding clubs, axes and bayonets massacred a dozen British missionaries and members of their families at a remote school for blacks near the Rhodesian border with Mozambique, the government reported Saturday.

A 3-week-old girl and four other children were among those killed in the attack, the deadliest raid on a white-run mission in Rhodesia's 6-year war with guerrillas.

The Mozambique government said, meanwhile, that fierce fighting continued between its forces and Rhodesian troops who staged a cross-border raid into Mozambican territory. Mozambique said the helicopter-borne invaders killed 19 persons, including two Belgian U.N. workers, in fighting that began Thursday night in southwestern Mozambigue. Rhodesia said the report was "completely without foundation."

Six or eight black gunmen who infiltrated from Mozambique attacked the Emmanuel mission school Friday night and killed 12 of the 14 whites there, Rhodesian authorities said. The dead included members of three families.

The school, in this area of Rhodesia's rugged eastern highlands five miles west of the Mozambique border, was operated by the Elim Pentacostal Church, based in Cheltenham, England.

The missionaries, wives and children had been battered on the head and face and some had been hacked with bayonets or axes. The blanket-shrouded bodies lay beside the school cricket field when reporters arrived at the scene Saturday.

One of the victims, Joyce Lynn, 36, her face battered beyond recognition, lay with her left hand touching the battered head of her 3-week-old daughter, Pamela. The baby was killed by a single blow to the head. A bloodstained log lay nearby.

One badly beaten white woman missionary who survived, identified as Mary Fisher, 28, had staggered 50 yards into the bush from the scene of the massacre on the cricket field. She was found by troops early Saturday.

Miss Fisher was taken to a hospital in Salisbury, 120 miles northwest of the mission. Her condition was described as critical.

Another white, Ian Milton McGarrick, survived unharmed after being alerted by a black member of the mission staff. McGarrick apparently hid in the bush during the attack. He refused to talk to reporters.

None of the 250 blacks at the coed school was hurt in the raid.

They told reporters the guerrillas rousted them from their dormitory beds and told them the school was being closed. They said they were then ordered back to the dorms, some 300 yards from the scene of the massacre, and were unaware of the killings until the bodies were discovered Saturday morning.

The students, who were evacuated to nearby Umtali Saturday, said the guerrillas described themselves as "Freedom Fighters from ZANU," the Mozambique-based Zimbabwe African National Union.

ZANU, headed by Robert Mugabe, is one of two guerrilla ar-

Brown Inks $5 Billion Proposition 13 Bailout

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. Saturday signed a one-year, $5 billion bailout bill for cities, counties and schools, calling it "a sensible but human response to Proposition 13."

Flanked by Democratic leaders of the Senate and Assembly, Brown signed the rescue bill, aimed at easing the $7 billion property tax cut mandated by Proposition 13, before a battery of newspaper and television reporters in the Capitol.

Final legislative approval came Friday on votes of 34-3 in the state Senate and 78-2 in the Assembly, and Brown hailed it as "a solution, at least in the short run."

The aid bill provides grants of $2.2 billion for schools, $1.48 billion for counties, $250 million for cities and $125 million for special districts, plus $900 million in short-term loans for local governments facing cash flow problems.

Brown, who opposed the Jarvis initiative before it was approved in a 2-to-1 landslide June 6, addressed a statewide television audience two hours after the legislative vote.

He promised to make the initiative work to cut government spending and services and said the rescue bill was "a positive beginning" that would "cushion the impact for the first year."

But Brown warned that when the state exhausts the budget surplus which is financing the rescue bill, there will be new "substantial problems" for state and local governments.

A week-long deadlock over the aid bill was broken when the committee writing the bill approved a compromise that kills a 7.65 percent increase in welfare grants for 2.17 million people and that freezes salaries of state and local government employees for a year.

Mrs. Marcos Earns Award

MRS. MARCOS

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos has conferred the country's highest foreign service award on his wife, Imelda, for "her faithful and dedicated services in the field of diplomacy, international relations, and in the cause of world peace."

The award was established in 1974 but was given out for the first time Friday at ceremonies marking the 80th anniversary of the Foreign Ministry. It gives Mrs. Marcos, who recently was appointed minister of human settlements, the title of "Dakilang Kamanong." The title has no official translation.

Mrs. Marcos was cited for "constancy of zeal to duty ... in discharging all the special assignments and tasks given to her by the president of the Philippines ..."

Mrs. Marcos has made official visits to the Soviet Union, China and Libya, where she led a government team in negotiations to end the 5½-year-old southern Philippine Moslem Rebellion in 1976.

Would-Be Opponent Goofs

HARTFORD (AP) — Rep. Ronald Sarasin, who wants to challenge Gov. Ella Grasso when she seeks re-election in November, says he has a call in to the governor to apologize for calling her "the governess."

But Mrs. Grasso, the first woman elected governor without succeeding her husband, said Friday she's delighted that Sarasin used the word during a question-and-answer session following a speech to an insurance group in Washington.

"If he keeps that up, how lucky we will be," Mrs. Grasso said. "Remember the bumper stickers last time around? 'Connecticut Can't Afford a Governess.' And how wrong they were."

"It was not a particularly bright remark," Sarasin said. "It was one of those things you say hoping for a laugh, and then wish you hadn't said it."

Mrs. Grasso, a Democrat, is seeking a second four-year term. Sarasin is among three men seeking the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

Carter Pokes Fun At Self

FORT WORTH (UPI) — President Carter Friday was quick to own up to his falling popularity in Texas.

Just after his introduction by House Majority Leader Jim Wright before a civic group, Carter said: "I feel about like Proposition 13 at a bureaucrats' picnic."

He referred to the budget cutting measure recently passed in California.

Suit Surprises Reagan

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — Ronald Reagan said he was "very much surprised" when he learned of a Federal Elections Commission suit charging his 1976 presidential campaign with failing to file required reports. "I have complete confidence in my campaign committee," Reagan said Friday after being shown a news report of the suit.

The FEC said Reagan's campaign committee still hasn't filed reports on about 40 percent of people who contributed more than $100 each. The complaint, filed in U.S. District Court in Washington on Thursday, said the FEC's attempts to get the information failed, and the court was asked to force the Reagan campaign committee and its treasurer to comply with the law. It also asked for a $5,000 fine.

SOPHIA LOREN and CARLO PONTI

Smuggling Trial Delayed

ROME (AP) — The smuggling trial of movie producer Carlo Ponti and his wife, actress Sophia Loren, has been postponed until October. The pair will be tried in absentia on charges of taking at least $11 million in Italian lire out of the country. Judges granted a request Saturday by defense attorneys for more time to study the case.

Neither Ponti nor Miss Loren have been in Italy since the actress was stopped by customs officials on March 9, 1977, as she passed through Rome airport on her way to Paris. Officials allegedly found $3.5 million worth of paintings in her luggage, and she is charged with attempted illegal export of art objects.

Ponti and Miss Loren became French nationals a decade ago after they ran into problems with Italian divorce laws. They are not expected to return to Italy for trial. Any sentences levied against them would become effective if they returned to the country.

Violations of currency control laws carry penalties of six months imprisonment and hefty fines.

Liz Taylor Hospitalized

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor has been hospitalized for treatment of a mild form of pneumonia, according to a spokeswoman at Cedars-Sinai Hospital.

The 46-year-old star developed the infection while shooting a Hallmark Hall of Fame television special for NBC, a program spokesman said. She was taken to the hospital Friday in fair condition and is expected to be released on Thursday, a spokesman for NBC said.

Ali Wants Presidency

CHICAGO (AP) — Calling himself "the world's most recognized human," heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali wants to be president of the WORLD.

"The unofficial Andy Young" declared his candidacy Friday. "I am 36 years old and I'm not just going to go fishing or make movies," he said. "I've got to do something and what I'm going to do is deal with the world."

He said he is planning to organize something called WORLD — World Organization for Rights, Liberty and Dignity — which will be a charitable human rights organization.

The Soviet Union, he said, will be the "No. 1 place where we're going to start," followed by Romania, Czechoslovakia, the Middle East, Africa and only Ali knows where else.

Ali said six world leaders already have signed to be on WORLD's board of directors, but he did not identify them.

City's 100-Degree Temperatures To Be Around A Little Longer

MORE hot winds and 100-degree temperatures are in store for Lubbock and the rest of the South Plains today, according to National Weather Service forecasters.

Saturday's high temperature of 103 was only a relief relatively speaking from the pair of record-setting 106-degree days Thursday and Friday.

Forecasters see the hot spell which has wilted plants and slowed people with hot winds and century-mark temperatures since Thursday, to be broken with showers possible for Wednesday.

Today and Monday should bring more of the same, the forecast for 100-degree weather and winds 10 to 15 miles per hour and from the southwest.

Lubbock's humidity stayed around the 50 percent mark all morning Saturday as the temperature climbed toward 90, then broke and ended up at 17 at 5 p.m. when the high temperature of 103 was recorded.

Officials at the Micro-Environmental Laboratory, Inc. said the plant life on the South Plains is responding to the hot and humid conditions of the past week and this weekend by curling up shortly after 6 a.m. as if it was the heat of the day already.

Heavy moisture stress is expected to continue for young plants for the next several days, especially during the daylight hours, according to the National Weather Service.

Lubbock's third consecutive above-100-degree day called to mind the record June of 1924 when 10 consecutive 100-degree days were recorded, but the Weather Service was predicting a break long before the record 10 days.

Similar conditions were reported over other parts of the state again Saturday, with El Paso recording 111 for a high, an all-time record for the second consecutive day in that border city.

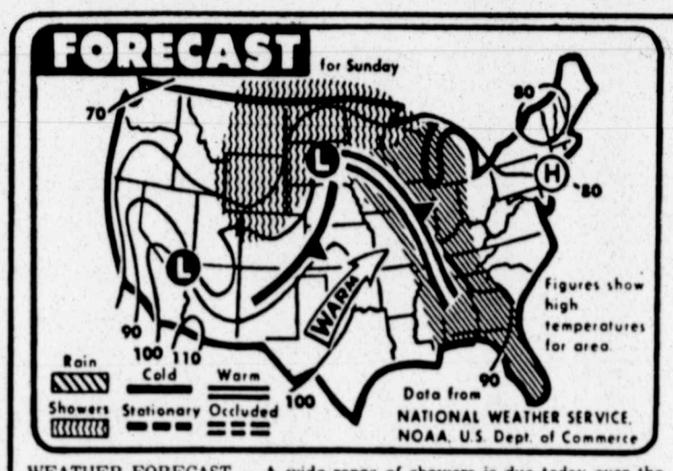

El Paso's Friday high of 110 set a record which was eclipsed by Saturday's 111-degree reading.

Presido recorded 110, Mineral Wells and Wichita Falls 104, Wink 103, Childress and Marfa, 102, Alpine, Cotulla, Dalhart and Stephenville 101, Dallas, Junction, Amarillo, Del Rio, Fort Worth and Waco, 100.

J.R. Devers Named Top Clerk By Group

J.R. Devers, Lubbock County district clerk, was named clerk of the year Friday at the annual conference of County and District Clerks Association of Texas.

Officers of the association were elected at the meeting held in Lubbock. They are Paul Lee of Grayson County, president; Billie Nance Hill of Potter County, first vice president; Joe Rivera of Cameron County, second vice president and Larry Murdoch of Dallas County, secretary-treasurer.

WEATHER FORECAST — A wide range of showers is due today over the North and Central Plains, according to the National Weather Service. More precipitation is expected from the Great Lakes area south through Florida. It will be hot in the Southwest and warm elsewhere in the nation.(AP Laserphoto)

Poisons Killing Locusts

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Almost half of the 50 giant locust swarms in Ethiopia, Djibouti and Somalia have been checked by aerial spraying of insecticides, the Desert Locust Control Organization for Eastern Africa said Saturday.

It warned, however, that more insects may be produced that could devour what crops the first onslaught of insects left behind.

"It is certain that there is going to be a further generation of swarms," the organization said in a statement.

The organization said a large swarm in Gojjam Province in northwest Ethiopia had been brought under control, but several swarms have moved into the Awash area in central Ethiopia.

Dozens of swarms of locusts have been reported ravaging huge areas of the Horn of Africa region. The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization says tens of thousands of people are facing starvation as the hordes devour crops in areas already afflicted by drought and famine.

The United States has donated 5,280 gallons of insecticide to help control the locusts in East Africa, Tanzania's agriculture minister announced last Tuesday. The chemicals are to be used in Somalia, Djibouti and Ethiopia, he said.

The Interior Department's Fish and Wildlife Service estimates there are some 53.9 million Americans who wet a line often enough to be called fishermen.

Crews Seek Fire Victim

AZUSA, Calif. (AP) — Fire crews aided by heavy equipment searched through rubble Saturday for a second worker feared killed in an explosive fire at a chemical plant that one fireman said threw desk-sized concrete chunks a block away.

At least four other workers were injured in the fire Friday night at the Norac Co. plant that witnesses said sent flames 450 feet into the sky. The explosions were heard and the flames seen up to 10 miles away.

The fire caused extensive damage to the large warehouse and several metal quonset huts in the Norac complex. No official damage estimate was available, but Assistant Los Angeles County Fire Chief Ray Shackelford said, "Off the top of my head, I would say the damage would be at least $1 million."

Six men reportedly were working at the plant when the blasts ripped through a room where volatile peroxides were being mixed, authorities said. The plant manufactured chemicals and synthetic materials for the automobile industry.

The concussions from the blast shattered windows and mangled the metal interiors of other firms throughout the mile-square industrial area 20 miles east of Los Angeles. The initial shock waves, Shackelford said, knocked down workers at adjacent plants. There was a series of collisions on the nearby San Gabriel River Freeway.

Authorities sealed off the area immediately after the explosion to keep out sightseers who jammed access roads.

The coroner's office identified a charred body near the location of the first blast as that of plant supervisor James Clinton Miller, 46.

GEM WISE
By Jim Andersor

ARE CULTURED PEARLS FAKES?

No, cultured pearls are not fakes. Only imitation or simulated stones may properly be called fakes, and cultured pearls don't fall under that category. Cultured pearls are not what you'd call synthetic, either, although man does have something to do with the process of formation. Have I lost you yet? Allow me to define my terms.

An imitation or simulated gem resembles an important gemstone but is an entirely different substance. It's usually man-made.

A synthetic gemstone is also man-made, but its chemical, physical and optical properties are essentially identical to the natural stone. The main difference is that it's grown by man in a laboratory instead of by nature in the earth.

Cultured perals are in a category of their own. Man does initiate the growing process, but then nature takes over. Here's how it works.

A small sphere of shell is introduced into a pearl-bearing oyster. Then it's returned to the sea to let nature take its course. The oyster's defense system secretes a substance call nacre to cushion itself against the irritant. Layer upon layer of nacre form around the sphere, producing a fairly uniform, round, luminous body — a pearl. Natural perals undergo the same process, only the irritant enters purely by chance.

No, cultured pearls are not fakes. They're just as much a wonder of nature as are natural pearls. Thanks to man's ingenuity, more people are able to enjoy the pearl's beauty than if we had to rely on the scarce supply of natural pearls.

Briefcase Blast Kills North Yemeni President

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A bomb in the briefcase of a South Yemeni diplomat exploded and killed North Yemeni President Ahmed al Ghashmi and the diplomat Saturday, the Iraqi News Agency reported.

North Yemen blamed the Marxist government of South Yemen for the assassination and immediately severed diplomatic relations.

Ghashmi, 39, was the second North Yemeni president assassinated in the past eight months and the eighth to die since the seven-year civil war that erupted after the overthrow of the monarchy in 1962. Ghashmi's predecessor, Ibrahim al-Hamdi, was slain last October. His assassins were never identified.

The Iraqi agency said Ghashmi was killed as the diplomat from South Yemen opened his briefcase to take out a letter to Ghashmi from South Yemini President Salim Robaye Ali.

Prime Minister Abdul Aziz Abdul Ghani immediately broke off relations with South Yemen, calling the assassination a "clear conspiracy."

The INA report distributed here attributed its account to a broadcast by North Yemen's government-run radio in San'a, the capital. Egypt's Middle East news agency also reported the San'a radio report.

INA said the prime minister summoned foreign diplomats to the presidential palace and told them that South Yemeni President Salim Robaye Ali had told Ghashmi his envoy would be carrying a list of North Yemeni refugees and the diplomat was received on that assumption.

"This is a clear conspiracy, and thus North Yemen's relations with Democratic Yemen are hereby cut off," INA quoted Ghani as saying.

INA's correspondent in London said Qadi Abdul Karim al-Arshi, a little known politician, has been chosen to head a caretaker government. The People's Council, North Yemen's parliament, and the Council of Ministers were meeting in San'a to choose a new president, the correspondent repoorted.

The international airport in San'a was closed and all communications links with the outside world were shut down.

North and South Yemens are strategically located at the southwestern tip of the Saudi Arabian Peninsula and share control of the western side of the mouth of the Red Sea. North Yemen has a background of a conservative monarchy and military rule and South Yemen has a Marxist miliary leadership. They have been at odds over ideology for years.

North Yemen is turning increasingly toward the West for support and is closely allied with the conservative monarchy in Saudi Arabia, its northern neighbor. South Yemen, a former British colony, draws most of its aid from the Soviet-led Communist bloc.

INA quoted the North Yemen broadcast as saying Ghashmi "was killed from a quarter known for its perfidy against the nation and Allah."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Tom Reston issued a statement that said in part:

"We have had a report from our embassy in San'a that a bomb exploded Saturday morning in the Yemen Arab Republic (North Yemen) military headquarters and we are, of course, aware of reports saying that President Ghashmi was killed.

"However, we do not yet have a detailed account of the incident .... As of the last report, San'a was calm and the small American community was safe."

The previous Hamdi government had built a close alignment with oil rich Saudi Arabia and increased cooperation with the United States. Ghashmi, commander of the country's armed forces, was a close associate of Hamdi.

He became president only two months ago after serving as chief of a three-man presidential council that took over following Hamdi's assassination.

Bolivian Imprisonment Takes Toll On U.S. Men

MIAMI (AP) — Two gaunt-looking men arrived in Miami Saturday to begin rebuilding lives shattered by two years of imprisonment in Bolivia on drug-related charges.

Tom McGinnis, 26, of Idaho Falls, Idaho, and Danny Sullivan, 34, of West Haven, Conn., were released by Bolivian authorities Thursday, and flew to Miami International Airport Saturday.

A third man, Tom Duffey, 25, of DeLand, Fla., missed the flight, but his mother, Katherine Duffey, was told by the U.S. Embassy in La Paz, Bolivia, that he was safe and should arrive by Monday.

Mrs. Duffey said, "These last two years have been a long, horrible road. A terrible, terrible injustice has been done. You can't imagine how difficult it has been."

She said her son, 25, was in Bolivia as a schoolteacher. "Many atrocities have been committed against Tom," she said. "Our State Department has a lot to rectify."

McGinnis, 26, reportedly lost 70 pounds during his imprisonment but said, "I feel fine. I haven't really figured out what my reaction is yet."

McGinnis, whose father died shortly after his imprisonment, said he didn't know what he will do now, and added, "I don't want to answer any questions. I don't feel like talking about anything."

Sullivan, 34, said: "I want to get with my wife ... it's been a long time. We've lost absolutely everything. The only thing I own is what I have on my back."

Sullivan said he ran an import-export store in Lancaster County, Pa., but the store was robbed while he was in prison. He said he had to have it closed.

Duffey, McGinnis and Sullivan are the last of nine U.S. citizens to be released after they were arrested in a La Paz hotel room in June 1976. Sullivan said the group was "having a party" when Bolivian police burst into the room with drawn pistols.

He said one member of the group, a stranger to the rest, was carrying illegal drugs that he shoved under McGinnis' bed. The entire group was imprisoned, even though a prosecutor recommended that the charges be dropped.

McGinnis and Sullivan said they were vacationing at the time of their arrests.

The diesel-powered Seville is here.

30 mpg highway/21 mpg city/24 mpg composite. EPA estimates.
Our dealership now has the 5.7 Litre fuel-injected diesel V8 available in limited number for Seville by Cadillac. When you visit us, you'll discover that impressive mileage is only the beginning with the diesel-powered Seville. Because this is an American luxury car that can change your mind about diesel motoring with its impressive acceleration and quietness. Above all, it's a Seville. With Cadillac comfort and convenience.

EPA figures are estimates. Your actual mileage will vary depending on how and where you drive, your car's condition and available equipment.

An estimated 504 miles per tankful.
The diesel-powered Seville has an estimated cruising range of 504 miles. This range estimate is obtained by multiplying the EPA composite estimate of 24 mpg by Seville's standard fuel tank capacity rating of 21 gallons. Your cruising range will vary.

V8 smoothness.
The diesel for Seville is a V8. Its dynamic balance helps assure smooth engine idle. And its eight-cylinder design contributes to impressive acceleration.

Ease of operation.
You'll notice when you turn the ignition key to on, an amber light will ask you to "WAIT." This time will vary depending on the coolant temperature. WAIT START Sometimes there will be no wait. When the green light tells you to "START," just turn the key to the start position. Then, drive off.

Two power sources available.
We offer Seville with a 5.7 Litre electronic-fuel-injected gasoline V8...or an available 5.7 Litre fuel-injected diesel V8. Seville is equipped with GM-built engines supplied by various divisions. See us for details.

Among the elite... of the world's luxury cars–Seville stands alone. Only Seville provides this selection of 5.7 Litre engines. Only Seville brings together international size and design with Cadillac comfort and convenience. We invite you to visit us soon. Experience Seville by yourself...for yourself.

Ruling Clarifies Issue Of Import Taxes

NEW YORK (AP) — The Supreme Court's decision on a trade complaint against Japanese imports may have averted price increases in the United States amounting to billions of dollars.

The reason: according to the Commerce Department's estimates, some $50 billion worth of imports — or about half of the current annual volume — come from countries which exempt their exports from indirect sales or value-added taxes.

Zenith Radio Corp., in a suit it lost this past week, argued that Japanese exporters of radios, televisions and other electronic goods were receiving an unfair subsidy from the Japanese government because the exports were exempt from a Japanese commodity tax.

But the court rejected the U.S. manufacturer's plea that duties equal to the tax break should be imposed by the U.S. Treasury.

The amount at stake in the Zenith case was minor compared to the billions in additional duties which might have been imposed if a precedent meant a new policy on all goods from Canada, Germany, France and other countries with similar tax breaks.

Treasury officials argued successfully that such exemptions from taxes in Japan didn't result in an unfair advantage because the products were still subject to the same state sales tax that U.S. products are. If Japan didn't rebate the commodity tax to exporters, the Treasury argued, the goods would be subject to double taxation.

The court's unanimous decision in the Zenith case was considered significant both for the electronics industry and for steel companies who have similar complaints in litigation.

But it does not spell the end to a long-standing debate over government subsidies to export products and how they affect trade.

The question is a major focus of talks in Geneva aimed at rewriting sections of an international trade law, The General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

Under GATT rules, the definition of what is a subsidy, subject to countervailing duties by the importing country, is "a grey area" said Peter Kenen, a professor of international finance at Princeton.

The result has been a scramble of interpretations and some bitter negotiations on what and how rules should apply.

The process is complicated by the fact that in many countries the ties between government and industry are far closer than in this country.

The United States' trade statute governing the Zenith case, for instance, allows the U.S. Treasury to levy an equal counterveiling duty when any foreign government pays a "bounty or grant" to an exporting manufacturer.

The U.S. steel industry, which has blamed lagging sales on increased imports of foreign steel in the past few years, complains that governments in Japan and Europe don't necessarily pay "bounties." But they argue that foreign governments are so integrally involved in their steel industries that they can afford to produce steel at profit levels which would be impossible for a private U.S. company.

Unique Stock Rise Tapering Off; Interest Up While Prices Down

NEW YORK (AP) — Only a few weeks ago, higher interest rates were being greeted with unusual enthusiasm on Wall Street.

But traditional fears of tight credit are resurfacing as stock prices have begun to slip.

Rising interest rates traditionally have led to falling stock and bond prices as investors attempt to increase yields on their securities. But this spring, stock prices were rising as interest rates climbed.

The higher rates were said to be good news because they would help check inflation. The rising cost of money in the short-run would be outweighed by the slowdown in cost-of-living gains, the optimists said.

"Now you throw the same news out and the market falls apart," commented Larry Wachtel at Bache Halsey Stuart Shields.

The interest-rate rise was attributable partly to Federal Reserve action. The Fed, fearful that the nation's money supply during the past 15 months has grown faster than targeted, has been tightening credit to fight inflation.

According to David Jones at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. Inc., that policy would continue. In the past week, the Fed let the key target rate on "Federal funds," the name for loans among banks, move up one-quarter point to 7¾ percent.

"They might wait a week or two before considering pushing it up to 8 percent. They're going to let the dust settle a bit," he said.

In addition, the spread between the discount rate — the Fed's charge on short-term "emergency" loans to member banks — and the Federal funds rate has widened to ¾ percent.

"At 7 percent, loans at the 'discount window' are mushrooming. The Fed has become a cheap source of funds, and the Fed doesn't like this," said Jones.

A ¾-point spread "has been a trigger point," and the Fed is likely to consider "another firming mode" to boost borrowing costs, he said.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which gained nearly 120 points between February and mid-June, finished this week at 823.02, down 13.95. The drop came after a 22.26-point decline the week before.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index was off .90 at 53.90 and the American Stock Exchange market value index fell 2.89 to 147.27.

Big Board volume averaged 27.64 million shares a day, against 30.89 million the week before.

"We've had a lot of damage done in the past week and a half in the market," said Charles Jensen at Merkin & Co. "Each time the stock market went up in the face of higher interest rates there was an attempt to rationalize the move as an answer to actions against inflation. That rationale in the past hardly ever worked, and now we're back where we should be."

Tight Credit Fears Fuel Market Drop

By J.L. HUTCHESON
Schneider, Bernet & Hickman, Inc.

Fears of a tighter credit policy helped fuel a broad decline in the stock market in the early part of the week, but the market managed to halt it's five session retreat Thursday, and finished the week on a more positive note in slower trading as prices drifted during Friday's trading.

Analysts said the market performed well considering the expected rise in banks' prime lending rate to 9 percent, an apparent increase by the Federal Reserve in the rate on Federal Funds (reserves banks lend to one another) to 7¾ percent from 7½ percent and a possible boost in the discount rate the Fed charges on loans to member banks.

Brokers pointed out that there was concern that the Fed would tighten monetary policy in a great rush, in order to combat a rapidly expanding money supply, sending the federal funds rate skyrocketing.

Some observers feared the Fed would be under additional pressure to tighten credit due to an increase in the weekly money supply figures. After the close Thursday, however, it was announced that the nation's basic money supply, M1, fell $1.1 billion and M2, the broader index, declined $800 million.

One factor that helped support the market late in the week was a firming action by the dollar in Europe.

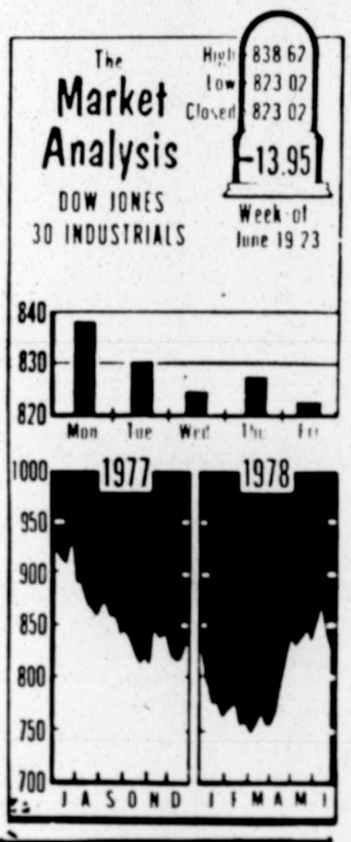

Economists observed that the spread between equity yields and other long-term interest rates is as narrow as it has been at any time since the bottom of the stock market in 1974. They noted that an increase in this spread could continue for a while until it becomes as wide as in 1976, when the market was close to its peak.

The Dow Jones Industrials lost 13.95 points last week, closing at 823.02. Transportations declined to 219.61, down 2.73. Utilities lost .55, closing at 104.63. Volume on the New York Stock Exchange was 138,190,000 shares as trading slowed from the previous week. Issues recording new 12-month highs fell to 126, while issues scoring new lows rose to 233. The American Stock Exchange closed at 147.27, down 2.89. The NASDA Composite Index was off 2.95 points, ending the week at 120.74.

Court Orders Blood Tranfusion

CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — A member of the Jehovah's Witness religious sect was in critical condition Saturday after receiving a court-ordered blood transfusion doctors said she needed to live.

"It was very dramatic," said Kenneth Dale, a hospital spokesman. "There is no question about it. The woman would have died without the transfusion.

Andrea Daniels, 34, of Chester, whose religious beliefs prohibit contact with blood, gave birth Friday to a 6-pound, 5-ounce boy by Caesarean section. The child, her seventh, was in good condition Saturday.

The woman had signed a document asking that no transfusion be performed, even if doctors deemed it necessary.

Mrs. Daniels needed the transfusion to replace blood lost during hemorrhaging after the operation, doctors at Crozer Chester Medical Center said.

James Loucks, president of the hospital, said the court order was sought to safeguard Mrs. Daniels' constitutional rights.

"When the release was signed by Mrs. Daniels, we did not anticipate any problems," Loucks explained. "But problems did develop, and a Caesarean operation was required.

"At that time she was under anesthesia and there was no way to communicate with her," he said. "Out of respect to her rights, we called the court."

Judge Robert A. Wright of the Delaware County Common Pleas Court was summoned, and held a hearing before attorneys representing the hospital, the Daniels family and and the Jehovah's Witness Kingdom Hall in Brookhaven.

After tense debate, Wright ruled doctors could proceed with the transfusion.

The hospital has given blood to Jehovah's Witnesses before, but never in the case of childbirth, Dale said.

"In my opinion my rights were violated and my wife's rights were violated," Daniels, 33, said in a telephone interview Friday night. "Our opinion didn't mean a thing to them."

The operation "is still no guarantee she'll live," he added.

In the eyes of Jehovah's Witnesses, Daniels said, forcing his wife to accept the transfused blood "is the same thing as asking her to put a spoon into a bowl of blood. It's like eating blood."

But Daniels said Wright told him "there was one God for all men, and that he gave (the doctors) the ability to do this type of work."

July 3 Comment Date Set On Christmas Light Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — July 3 is the deadline for sending in your comments and suggestions on new rules aimed at making Christmas tree lights safer.

The standards, proposed by the Consumer Product Safety Commission, are intended to reduce fire and shock hazards to consumers from both indoor and outdoor miniature Christmas tree lights.

Included are specific requirements for proper wiring to minimize overheating, detailed design and performance requirements for plugs and connectors and requirements for cautionary labels.

If you want to comment, write to the Secretary, Consumer Product Safety Commission, Washington, D.C., 20207.

Closet Caviar Lovers' Burden Lightened By U.S. Production

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There at the table, before reporters, photographers and everybody, stood Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina scoffing down generous dollops of genuine California caviar.

How times have changed!

It wasn't so long ago that the roe of sturgeon could be political poison to Southern congressmen.

The folks down home were distressed if the good ol' boys they sent to Congress started putting on airs. And consuming caviar was as much a symptom of "Potomac fever" as a kidney-shaped swimming pool was a symbol of "going Hollywood."

Dixie delegations were mindful of what happened to Sen. Cameron Morrison of North Carolina in the 1932 campaign.

Robert Rice Reynolds, Morrison's opponent in that depression-year election, went about the state telling voters the senator was "up there in Washington having red Rooshian caviar and you can't even afford catfish."

After Reynolds' victory, Southern lawgivers who fancied the delicacy generally became closet caviar connoisseurs.

Senators from certain other parts of the country had to be circumspect, too, but for those from "Bible Belt" areas where prohibition was still in force, caviar could be a double whammy.

Thurmond, chatting with reporters over a shimmering mound of black, BB-sized, $3.75-an-ounce sturgeon roe, explained why.

"A lot of people used to think that caviar was some kind of drink," he said.

Changing cultural attitudes aside, there was another reason Southern senators would feel safe partaking of this caviar in public.

Not only was indulging in salted fish eggs formerly regarded as some kind of foreign debauchery. Worse yet, most of the stuff came from Russia, which automatically made it suspect.

But the fresh roe in question came from the ovaries of 100 percent American sturgeon.

California, the wonderful state that brought you Proposition 13, is now in the early throes of bringing you domestic caviar.

Through a program of aquaculture, popularly known as fish farming, the University of California at Davis is striving to rehabilitate the white sturgeon that once abounded in West Coast rivers, but, like other species elsewhere in the world, has fallen on hard times.

In the process, Sergei Doroshov, a Russian emigre who directs the research, hopes to establish caviar as a major new industry.

The university is seeking a $400,000 federal research grant. And toward that end, California's senators sponsored a champagne-and-caviar reception in the Capitol to introduce their colleagues to the product.

Although some California caviar is available for about $60 a pound, the crunchy little globules that Thurmond and others were scooping up on toast points is not yet produced in commercial quantities.

If and when they are abundant, the worldwide shortage of naturally occurring caviar could make the aquaculture harvest a bonanza.

Not that caviar cornucopia American-style would be anything new. Back in the days before the sturgeon population in U.S. waters was depleted, this country exported more than 100,000 pounds of caviar a year.

Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., who joined Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., in the bipartisan introduction of California caviar to senatorial palates, was asked whether a sturgeon revival might offset the revenue his state loses from the recent adoption of Proposition 13.

"Sure," he beamed. "We'll tax hell out of it."

Montford, Officials Meet

Criminal District Attorney-elect John T. Montford Monday will meet with Lubbock County commissioners to discuss his administration, which begins next Jan. 1.

The office budget and possible reorganization, including the addition of an office administrator are among matters expected to be discussed in the 10 a.m. Monday meeting at the county courthouse.

Montford emphasized during his primary campaign his belief in the need for an administrator to free the district attorney for more prosecutorial work.

Other business for the commissioners court will include an 11 a.m. hearing on federal revenue sharing money use and possible discussion of the automobile tax suits the city plans to begin filing July 1.

The commissioners have said previously that all federal revenue sharing funds for the next two years are committed to the construction of the new county jail.

Lubbock city officials have said they will file 400 tax suits a month in justice of the peace courts for three months and then start filing 700 a month.

Demonstrators Again Rally At Seabrook Site

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — More than 6,000 demonstrators braved the June heat, flies and piles of garbage Saturday to crowd onto an 18-acre former town dump adjacent to the seaside Seabrook nuclear power plant to rally against nuclear energy.

Soon after members of the Clamshell Alliance and their sympathizers entered the site, a colorful tent city had been erected.

There was a stage for concerts and speeches and alternative energy exhibits were set up. Demonstrators baked bread in a solar oven and sold T-shirts displaying a variety of anti-nuclear slogans.

Across a marsh from the camp site, a flotilla of small boats picketed an offshore drilling rig used for construction of cooling tunnels for the nuclear plant.

Clamshell leaders claim the three-day anti-nuclear demonstration will be the largest of its kind in the nation's history.

The demonstration area, once the town dump, is separated from the plant construction area by a chain-link fence, patrolled by about 250 police officers.

About one-third of the demonstration area is swampy, and half bears the vestiges of the dump. The remaining land is densely wooded.

State authorities and the Public Service Co. of New Hampshire, majority shareholder in the plant, agreed to allow the occupation in exchange for an agreement by the Clamshell that demonstrators would remain inside the rally area, be non-violent and leave by Monday afternoon.

The protesters, who came from California, Florida, Tennessee, Oklahoma, New York, New Jersey and Canada as well as New England, made their way to the site Saturday in groups of 200 to 300.

"It really feels great," said Harvey Wasserman, a protest leader. "We've got our peaceful piece of turf here, and we're going to make the most of it ... There is no tension in the air. Everybody is pretty relaxed ... We're all set to have a good solid anti-nuclear weekend."

"They are tremendously dedicated," commented William Shaheen, U.S. attorney for New Hampshire. "I really have a lot of respect for them. I think this demonstration is amazing."

Among those present were several celebrities, including Dr. Benjamin Spock and comedian and civil rights leader Dick Gregory.

New Hampshire State Police, bolstered by contingents from neighboring New England states, kept watch over the marchers.

The protesters, chanting "no nukes, no nukes," marched two abreast along a mile-long dirt road and stepped onto the rally site after organizers cut a white-and-yellow ribbon.

The Clamshell reached agreement a week ago with state and Public Service Co. officials on ground rules for the protest. Demonstration leaders and police officials alike said they hoped to avoid a repeat of last year's Seabrook demonstration, when 1,414 persons were arrested on the site and charged with criminal trespass.

The plant, which would be the largest in the nation, is 10 percent completed and has become a symbol of national debate over nuclear energy.

The protesters, most of them youthful, carried food and jugs of water. Once on the site, they unfurled colorful tents, sleeping bags and banners bearing anti-nuclear messages.

One man hauled a wagon of pine tree seedlings which protesters planned to plant in a symbolic effort to restore the nuclear station site to its natural state.

Observers Hope To Keep Peace

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — They add a new dimension to demonstrations.

They are instruments of the peace among the anti-nuclear demonstrators and the police.

They declare themselves neutral.

Their insignia is the cross, their prayer the prayer of St. Francis: "Lord, make us instruments of your peace. Where there is hatred, let us sow love ..."

They are a group of 75 religious observers who have put up their tent in the middle of a plot set aside for several thousand anti-nuclear demonstrators from the Clamshell Alliance to hold a weekend protest against construction of the Seabrook nuclear plant.

They include clergy, religious and lay members of several communions cooperating through the New Hampshire Council of Churches. They are Jewish, Greek Orthodox, members of the Society of Friends.

Their leader is the Rev. Jim McAlpine, the pipe-smoking pastor of the Christ Church Episcopal in North Conway, N.H. His parishioners call him "Father Jim."

McAlpine made the proposal for religious observers several months ago before the alliance, the State of New Hampshire and the Public Service Co. of New Hampshire agreed on ground rules for a legal protest.

Last year, more than 1,400 Clamshell members were arrested after they occupied the Seabrook site.

McAlpine's idea was quickly accepted by the religious leaders. Members of the Clamshell alliance, state officials and the Public Service Co. agreed it was a good idea.

"Clearly, we decided on this quite a number of months ago when the situation was growing more volatile," said McAlpine. "It seemed the religious community of New Hampshire had a real responsibility to be present in a situation that looked like it could lead to violence.

"We are almost a kind of a buffer. In terms of the clerical collar, we hope it has a sub-conscious effect on the people, to act as a restraint. Some kind of presence is needed to remind people here we are dealing with human beings."

'CAMPAIGN TRAIL'

AUSTIN (AP) — Susan Baker starts out Sunday on a 5,000-mile trip back and forth across Texas in an attempt to get her husband elected state attorney general. Jim Baker, Republican candidate for attorney general, said his wife would begin her campaign travels Sunday from her home town of Danbury, in Brazoria County.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR JUNE 25, 1978

PHYSICAL
Criticals: 9, 20, 32, 43, 55, 66		A your fault day
Highs: 10-19, 33-42, 56-65		Plunge into it, tiger
Lows: 1-8, 21-31, 44-54, 67-75		Moments of unsteadiness
EMOTIONAL
Criticals: 8, 22, 36, 50, 64, 78		Sluggish reaction time
Highs: 1-7, 23-35, 51-63, 79-85		Great day emotionally
Lows: 9-21, 27-49, 65-77		You tend to brood
INTELLECTUAL
Criticals: 1, 18, 34, 51, 67, 84		Can be thoughtless
Highs: 19-33, 52-66, 85-95		Propitious day
Lows: 2-17, 35-50, 68-83		Limit brain work

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Anti-Nuclear Clamshell Alliance Growing With Protest Efforts

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP) — The Clamshell Alliance, which is sponsoring a weekend protest at the Seabrook nuclear power plant construction site, has become a symbol and model for anti-nuclear activism throughout the nation.

The Clamshell acts as an umbrella for 50 anti-nuclear groups from Maine to New York. The number of members fluctuates in almost direct proportion to the threat of nuclear concerns of the moment.

"We don't have cards, dues or the other trappings of a club," says spokeswoman Cathy Wolff. "We're a very fluid organization, rising and falling on the intensity of the efforts of the local groups."

Formation of the Clamshell in July 1976 was a spontaneous reaction to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's issuance of a permit to build a twin 1,500-megawatt nuclear power plant on a sandy marsh at Seabrook. Soon after it was formed, 18 of its members were arrested while walking through the mud of the Seabrook construction site.

Clamshell-sponsored "non-violent disobedience" has since mushroomed, and last summer, state police arrested 1,414 people for occupying the Seabrook site. At this weekend's rally, more than 3,000 demonstrators were crowding the roads leading to Seabrook.

Although the Clamshell is growing, many of its activists say privately they suspect the Seabrook plant will be built despite their efforts.

"I live up the road from the plant and each morning I watch 2,000 men arriving for work," said Shirley Gustavson, town clerk of Hampton Falls. "I can see the equipment cranes covering the horizon and I say to myself, 'My God, We'll never stop it now.'"

When the group decides to move into direct action — such as this weekend's rally — its ranks are bolstered by hundreds of men and women in their late teens and early 20s. But the day-to-day control, organization and administration comes from a group in their 30s operating from a poster-bedecked, fourth-floor office in an old building in downtown Portsmouth.

The fulltime staff — a bookkeeper, legal advisor, education coordinator and three office managers — are paid "$65 or less for each 60-hour week," according to Robin Read, a leader in the organization.

"Working with about a dozen volunteers, the staff handles everything from supplying the 4,000 people on the mailing list to finding portable toilets," Read said.

Most of the staff have parttime jobs to supplement their Clamshell salaries. "There's always an element of suspense when it comes time to pay the salaries or the other bills because we're funded by donations," said Read, who drives a taxi himself.

Donations from anti-nuclear supporters around the country "almost" cover the $3,500 in monthly telephone, printing, rent and other bills generated by the Clamshell, Read said.

The core of Clamshell activists includes teachers, welders, lawyers, students and retired white-and blue-collar workers.

Leftist Radicals Hurt In Italian Gunbattle

BOLOGNA, Italy (AP) — Three armed men trying to steal pistols from night watchmen were caught in a gunbattle with the watchmen and other officers in this central Italian city early Saturday, and two of the attackers were shot and seriously wounded, authorities reported.

Police described the trio as leftist radicals of the Autonomous Movement, which reportedly has been supplying recruits to the Red Brigades, Italy's most-feared terrorist group.

The third would-be gun thief was uninjured but was captured along with his comrades, police said.

They said the gunfire erupted when two watchmen discovered the men loitering, approached them and began asking questions. One grabbed a watchman by the shoulder and tried to steal his pistol, police said.

They said the three travelled in two cars, one of which was stolen. In the cars, police said, they found hundreds of cartridges, some black hoods and a pistol that had been stolen by three hooded men from a watchman shortly before the trio was arrested.

In Turin, meanwhile, Nadia Mantovani, girlfriend of Red Brigades founder Renato Curcio, was released from prison because with time served she has already completed a five-year sentence imposed on her by a jury Friday.

Miss Mantovani, the only woman among the 14 jailed Red Brigades members convicted Friday, was met by a sister as she left the prison. She then headed for her home village of Sustinente in northern Italy.

Curcio and other leaders of the Red Brigades, the group that kidnapped and killed former Premier Aldo Moro, were given up to 15 years in prison on charges of forming an armed band to subvert the state and for two political kidnappings. The charges did not involve the Moro case.

Curcio still faces other trials on more serious charges.

A-J Snapshot Contest Winners

Deadline Fast-Approaching

An Avalanche-Journal panel of five judges selected the photographs shown on this page as winners of last week's snapshot contest, being conducted in conjunction with Kodak's International Newspaper Snapshot Awards program for 1978, now rolling into its final week.

These winners will receive parchment certificates and their photographs will be included in the final local judging. The top four black-and-white and color pictures chosen in the final round will be entered in Kodak's international competition. The top eight winners will receive $50 each from The A-J. Kodak is offering $55,000 in cash-and-travel prizes.

Last week's winners included:

Today marks the beginning of the final week of the contest. Entries postmarked after July 1 will not be accepted. Photos taken by amateurs after July 1, 1977, are eligible. Entries should be addressed to Snapshot Contest, The Avalanche-Journal, Box 491, Lubbock, Tex. 79408. The name and address of the photographer should be clearly marked on the back of the picture.

Entries have been received from virtually every town on the South Plains and from many points in eastern New Mexico.

Warden's Shooting Planned

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — A small band of inmates at a Baja California prison planned the ambush of their tough, new warden for two days before a bloody shootout that ended in eight deaths — one of them the warden's.

"They read his character perfectly," an unidentified Baja, California, state judicial police investigator told the San Diego Tribune. "They laid a trap for him. They knew how he would respond. He did. And they killed him."

Warden Salvador Gonzalez Guiterrez, 37, was shot in the head during the four-minute melee Friday, along with his assistant warden, four guards and two prisoners — one of them the alleged ringleader of the trap. Two more guards were listed in grave condition Saturday at a hospital.

It was believed that Gonzalez' attempts to clean up drug trafficking in the prison led to his death. He took over the overcrowded, 25-year-old prison in April, bringing with him a reputation for honesty and determination to make changes.

State Gov. Roberto de La Madrid called the shooting "a trick, an ambush" by a small group of prisoners. He appointed Miguel Garate Velarde, state corrections director, as temporary warden.

Alejandro Rosas Romandia, attorney general for Baja California and head of the state judicial police, issued a statement saying the assassination plot was believed to have been led by Marcio Enrique Alvarez, who was described as head of a drug smuggling operation in the prison.

Gonzalez entered the prison's main yard accompanied by his assistant, Jose de Jesus Dominguez Cobos, and several guards at the request of an inmate who said another prisoner had a pistol he wished to surrender.

Two days before the shooting, Gonzalez had taken a gun away from Alvarez, Garate said. Another prison official, who asked that his name not be used, said Alvarez was to have entered solitary confinement Friday for violating prison security rules.

Alvarez, 23, was serving a long term for murder and narcotics dealing after the seizure in Tijuana last year of 150 kilos of cocaine, one prison official said.

A witness, Paul Cloyd, 42, of Northridge, Calif., said the shooting occurred when he was in the yard visiting a U.S. inmate.

"I don't understand Spanish," said Cloyd, "but it appeared the warden approached an inmate and asked him for something.

"The inmate whipped out a gun and shot the warden. Before I could duck two other guys with the warden also were shot and the prisoner killed," he said.

Ironically, a few days before his death, Gonzalez said in an interview with The Los Angeles Times that he believed violence in the prison had diminished.

KENNETH N. TOMLINSON

Tech Grad Named Wichita Bank VP

WICHITA FALLS (Special) — Kenneth N. Tomlinson, a graduate of Texas Tech University and Lamesa High School, has been named vice president of First Wichita National Bank here.

Tomlinson was graduated from Tech in 1970 and was hired by National Bank Examiners. He served four years as the company's assistant bank examiner in the Amarillo and Midland regions.

In 1974 he was transferred to Dallas as National's administrative assistant to the regional administrator, and two years later was transferred to Wichita Falls as national bank examiner for the Wichita Falls subregion.

He is married to Sherry Ribble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Ribbe Jr. of Lubbock.

CHEMICAL FIRE PROBED

NASH (AP) — Investigators probed the Northeast Texas scene of a fire Saturday at the Fremar Chemicals Co. to determine the cause of an early morning blaze that forced the evacuation of more than 1,200 area residents because of possible chlorine gas poison. Fire officials said arson was not being discounted.

Briscoe Still Undecided On Special Taxpayer Relief Session

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe has let enthusiastic tax relief advocates know there will be no quickie call of a special session and none at all unless he is convinced it would be successfu

"I would not expect the studies going on will be complete until the latter part of the week," the governor told newsmen Friday night in Houston, after introducing President Carter at a Democratic dinner.

However, Briscoe did not rule out a special 30-day session, which only he can call for a specific purpose.

"I am giving serious consideration to various proposals," Briscoe said Friday in his first official statement on the subject. He added later, in Houston, that "the real advantage of a special session is that they permit pinpointing one or two specific issues and concentrating all the effort on those matters."

Briscoe has had Speaker Bill Clayton and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby in and out of his office almost every day of the past week. He said his staff was working with representatives of Hobby and Clayton to see if "meaningful tax relief could be provided the citizens of Texas and limits placed on future taxes and spending."

"I have made no decision," Briscoe repeated Friday night.

The governor's indecision apparently stems from a lack of agreement that reportedly exists among Briscoe's, Hobby's and Clayton's men.

News Briefs

A fire about 12:30 p.m. Saturday destroyed a second-floor apartment at 2301 7th St. Units responding said the blaze was well under way when they arrived and the bedroom of the dwelling was gutted. The rest of the apartment was heavily damaged, according to reports, and the cause of the fire is under investigation.

Donald Ray Pratt, 28, of 2919 E. Broadway was in critical condition Saturday night in Methodist Hospital with injuries he received in a car-truck accident Wednesday in the 3800-block of E. 50th Street.

Cash, Automobile Stolen From City Residence

Burglars plagued Lubbock residents during the weekend, taking about $200 cash and apparently using the victim's vehicle as a getaway car in one instance.

Lois Trevino said that when she awoke Saturday morning, she discovered an open window in her 2401 Ave. L home. She said the cash and the keys to her 1978 Ford were missing from her purse, which she left on a table near the window.

Mrs. Trevino's car also was gone, and police reports indicate the burglars apparently used the vehicle to leave the scene.

Margie Berryhill told police that when she arrived to open her craft store at 5105 29th St. Saturday morning, she found the back door handle of the business broken and about $700 worth of goods, including a television set, calculator and vacuum cleaner, missing.

Hershel A. Wade said someone jimmied the lock on the door leading from the garage into his 3802 56th St. home Friday evening and, after rummaging through several closets and drawers, finally took a $650 microwave oven and a $150 television.

James McClendon of 3421 22nd Place said during a 15-minute period early Saturday morning someone broke into his residence and took a $400 television and a $300 8-track stereo system.

According to Sharlene Zethellee, burglars took $665 worth of goods, including a television, lamps and an 8-track tape deck, from her home at 2808 Juniper Ave., No. 11.

Clifford E. Johnson said that during the last three weeks, someone broke into a car he had parked under a shed at his 104 E. 81st St. home and took $600 worth of tools from the vehicle.

Burglars Thursday afternoon pried a door at Willie C. Gibson's 2913 Teak Ave. residence and took $500 worth of property, according to reports. Mrs. Gibson listed as missing lamps, clothing and an 8-track tape player.

Walter A. Crout, manager of a service station at 302 19th St., told police that while he was working in the drive of the station, he noticed several black men inside the station.

Crout said that when he went inside the station he discovered that the day's receipts, totaling $372.97, were missing from a desk drawer.

C.K. Hubble of Rt. 9, Box 354 told police that someone took a $500 paint gun from the bed of his pickup truck while the vehicle was parked at 34th Street and Slide Road Friday night.

George H. Barker reported the theft of a $300 rotary tiller to police. Barker said the tiller had been stored in the backyard of his 3802 E. 19th St. residence.

Bank Director Lanotte Services On Monday

Loyd Lanotte, 61, of 3011 Mesa Road, a director of the First National Bank, was dead at 2:45 a.m. Saturday on arrival at Methodist Hospital.

He had been under the care of a doctor.

Services for Lanotte, who had been active in many civic organizations, will be at 3 p.m. Monday at the First Christian Church with the Rev. Jim Southerland, pastor, officiating.

Interment will be in Resthaven Mausoleum under the direction of Sanders Funeral Home.

Lanotte, a Post native, came to Lubbock to study business at Texas Tech University. He worked as a driver for the Dalby Motor Freight Company while attending Tech and became president of the company in 1958 when it became known as T.I.M.E.-DC Inc. While with the company he held many positions of national leadership in the trucking industry, including vice president at large of the American Trucking Association, national vice president representing the trucking industry on the National Defense Transportation Association and a member of the board of trustees of the American Trucking Association Foundation.

In 1970, Lanotte left T.I.M.E.-DC and purchased an interest in Armstrong Moving & Storage and Armstrong Transportation, Inc. He served as chairman of the board of directors. He sold his interests in Armstrong in 1971 and bought Brazos Transport, Inc., a transportation-oriented holding company, of which he was board chairman at the time of his death.

He became a member of the board of directors of the First National Bank of Lubbock in 1963. He also served as a director for Southwestern Public Service, First National Bank of Levelland and the Transport Insurance Company of Dallas.

He was a member of the First Christian Church.

Lanotte had been active in the Red Raider Club of Tech, had served as an officer of the Chamber of Commerce, was a president of the United Way, and had served as a director of the Texas Tech Foundation. He was also on the West Texas Museum Development Board.

Survivors include his wife, Helen; two sons, Nicolas of Lubbock and Dan of San Diego, Calif.; two brothers, Frank of Fresno, Calif. and Clarence of Anson; three sisters, Maggie Childress and Jewel Perkins, both of Abilene and Mrs. Howard Bartley of Quanah; and four grandchildren.

The family suggests memorials be made to the Texas Tech Foundation for the Loyd Lanotte Memorial Scholarship.

Pallbearers will be Bill Barnett, Giles Forbess, Bill Linn, Dr. James G. Morris, Joe Bob Johnston, Kenneth Rafferty, Milton Rampy, Fred Timberlake, Robert J. Walker and George Wilson.

Honorary pallbearers will be officers and directors of the First National Bank.

Missing Man Feared Kidnapped

Lubbock police Saturday were continuing their search for a 29-year-old Lubbock man who has been missing since Friday afternoon and is feared kidnapped.

Darlene Vaughan told police that when she returned to her 2428 22nd St. home about 7 p.m. Friday, she found the house ransacked, blood in the kitchen and her husband, Willard Marshall Vaughan, gone.

Police reports indicate that in addition to the blood smears found near a kitchen door leading to the back yard of the residence, there was evidence of a struggle in the yard.

Investigating officers also found a pair of broken eyeglasses and a pen, which Mrs. Vaughan said belonged to her husband, in the back yard.

Mrs. Vaughan told police that she left the home about 1 p.m. Friday to visit relatives and that her husband remained at home, saying he was expecting two black men.

Vaughan was last seen wearing jeans, brown boots and no shirt. He is described as being 6 feet, 175 pounds, with curly brown hair and blue eyes.

Police could find no sign of forced entry to the home and neighbors reported that they had not heard anything unusual at the residence.

Reports indicate that a $625 stereo system also was taken from the living room of the house.

President Meets With Ex-Shipmate

BEAUMONT (AP) — Fifty-year-old Ray Starnes of Beaumont met his old boss Saturday.

Both are in different jobs now. Starnes is an instrument technician with Mobil Oil Co. and his ex-boss is the President of the United States.

President Carter was in Beaumont as part of a four-stop, two-day swing through Texas.

Starnes served under Carter aboard the USS Wyoming in 1946. It was Carter's first tour of duty after his graduation from the U.S. Naval Academy.

The pair shook hands and Carter said Starnes was "a fine young man who worked under me."

Carter said Starnes was promoted to petty officer some six months after they met.

"I helped him," the president said.

Error In Report Of Puppet Show

Percy Press Jr., internationally known puppeteer, will not perform for the public at 5:30 p.m. Monday, as was previously reported.

The Monday performance is a private one open to invited guests, said Peggy Bright, coordinator for the 39th annual National Festival of the Puppeteers of America. Press is appearing in connection with the festival.

He will perform for the public at 10 p.m. Tuesday in the Tech University Center.

All evening puppetry performances this week will be open to the public. Further information is available at the Tech University Center ticket office.

Carter Given $1 Million Show Of Firepower At Texas Base

President Greets Troops After Ft. Hood Display

FT. HOOD (AP) — President Carter watched Army and Air Force units launch a mock attack on the Central Texas plains Saturday in an impressive array of firepower.

Temperatures hovered in the 90s under clear skies as the president, with rolled-up shirtsleeves, watched the staging at the largest U.S. Army installation.

An estimated 1,660 Army personnel of Gen. George Patton's old 2nd Armored Division and 120 Air Force personnel from Arizona turned the valley into a smoldering and dusty battlefield.

Following the show, Carter greeted troops at the installation 60 miles north of Austin.

Warning To Russia

The $1 million show came during Carter's four-stop, two-day visit to Texas. It followed the president's claim Friday in Houston that the U.S. would never let Russia "push us around."

Accompanying the president at Ft. Hood were Defense Secretary Harold Brown, Army Secretary Clifford Alexander and Ft. Hood commander Lt. Gen. Marvin Fuller.

Before the president's arrival, Army officials denied that adverse publicity foced them to cut in half an originally scheduled one-hour, $2 million show.

"It wasn't a result of publicity," insisted Capt. Bill Wisenbaker of the Public Information Office. "There were changes in the president's itinerary."

Cutbacks Made

Three factors — scheduling changes, maneuver duplications and constant cost concerns — went into the decision to cut back the air strikes and bombardments, Wisenbaker said.

When asked about the cost of the demonstration, Carter said it was "completely justified."

"If nothing else, it was worth the expenditure of funds just for my own education because I'm faced every day with a requirement to approve or disapprove expenditures of funds for these kinds of weapons or others that might replace them," Carter told reporters during a visit at a static display site.

Learn Capability

"I need to know the level of operational capability of them (weapons). It gives me a chance to learn the special attitudes of the secretary of defense, secretary of the Army, generals and the others who command these forces."

Fuller sat next to Carter in a shaded reviewing stand some 200 feet above the mock battleground.

Each piece of equipment involved in different maneuvers was explained during the demonstration.

Tanks, armored personnel carriers, attack helicopters, antiaircraft guns and howitzers blasted targets from several hundred yards to seven miles on the dusty, rolling hillside.

In the mock attack phase of the show, a narrator explained that U.S. troops theoretically had just intercepted enemy radio transmissions. A Russian-sounding voice then boomed over the public address system and was quickly scrambled out by Army interference.

Blasts Echoed

Tanks, then personnel carriers and helicopters punctured the air with loud blasts that echoed off the limestone hill that the troops attempted to capture.

They were supported in the demonstration by Air Force A-10 Thunderbolts and A-7 Corsairs. Soon the entire viewing area was filled with smoke from smoldering targets and powdery dust.

The 25-minute demonstration was meant to show America's readiness for any enemy forces, including Warsaw Pact nations, a narrator said.

Following the demonstration the President met briefly with troops before flying back to Washington.

Carter flew here from Beaumont in Southeast Texas, where he called on 7,000 people to exercise self-discipline in helping overcome the nation's inflation problems.

Carter was in Beaumont to dedicate a 34-year-old federal building here recently renamed for Rep. Jack Brooks.

Carter used the occasion to talk about his government reform program as well as the efforts his administeation is making to combat inflation.

"We're simply spending too much money in the federal govrnent," Carter said. "We hope to cut $7 million from our projected budget deficit. One of the people who has helped save billion of dollars in the federal government is Jack Brooks."

Brooks, a 13-term Democrat from the 9th Cngresional District, is chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, which oversees the General Services Administration. The GSA operates the building which has housed Brooks' offices since he was elected to Congress in 1954.

The 56-year-old Brooks, once a reporter on the Beaumont Enterprise, is highly regarded in his district, which includes Spindletop, the site of Texas's first working oil well. Observers said Carter hoped some of Brooks' popularity would rub off on him.

"One reason I came here was to get Jack Brooks to help me in the future," Carter said. "He is at the center of one of the most important undertakings in government today — reform of the bureaucracy."

Egypt Drafting New Peace Plan, Mulls Talks With Israel

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Foreign Minister Mohamed Ibrahim Kamel announced Saturday that Egypt was drafting a new peace plan and said there was a "possibility" he would meet with Israel's foreign minister in London next month.

The official Middle East News Agency quoted Kamel as saying the plan would be based on President Anwar Sadat's suggestion that the occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank of the Jordan River be returned to the control of Egypt and Jordan as part of a peace settlement.

Sadat proposed the idea last month as an alternative to negotiating with Israel for creation of a Palestinian state, an idea Israel opposes.

The news agency said the draft plan would be ready within two days and would then be delivered to the United States.

Sadat met for two hours Saturday in Alexandria with U.S. Ambassador Hermann Eilts, who delivered a message from President Carter and received a reply, the agency said.

The agency quoted Sadat as saying, "The general situation is developing into a serious attempt from the side of Carter to start the wheel of peace spinning."

An unnamed official source also was quoted by the agency as confirming reports that Vice President Walter F. Mondale would pay an official visit to Egypt July 3 and "would probably carry a message from Carter to Sadat."

Carter administration sources have said Mondale's visit to Israel beginning June 29 is being upgraded from a ceremonial trip to a diplomatic mission focusing on the U.S.-mediated peace talks, and that the vice president was adding a later stop in Egypt to meet with Sadat.

Kamel, asked about reports he might hold talks with Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan in London in July, responded, "It is a possibility," the Egyptian news agency reported.

U.S. officials, who declined to be identified, said in Washington Friday that Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance plans to take part in the projected Kamel-Dayan meeting.

The rapid-fire announcements were the first indications in months of lethargic negotiations that the momentum of the peace process was being revived. Egyptian-Israeli talks stalled in January over Israel's refusal to surrender occupied Arab lands or allow creation of a Palestinian homeland.

Missionaries Massacred In Rhodesia

mies in the Patriotic Front alliance fighting to topple the biracial Rhodesian government headed by white Prime Minister Ian Smith. Smith has signed an internal settlement plan with three black moderates, designed to bring about black majority rule by the end of this year.

The guerrillas have denounced the plan and have stepped up their attacks, focusing recently on white missions.

A black member of the school staff said the attack came two days before the missionaries planned to move to Umtali, a heavily defended border town 10 miles north of here, because of increased guerrilla infiltration into the area.

British Foreign Secretary David Owen, speaking in his "home constituency of Plymouth, England, denounced the attack as "senseless killing."

The Rhodesian military command said other victims included Mrs. Lynn's husband, Robert, 37; Phillips George Evans, 29, his daughters Susan, 8, and Rebecca, 4; Peter McCann, 30, his wife, Sandra, 30, and their children, Phillip, 6, and Joy, 5, and two single women missionaries, Elizabeth Wendy Hamilton, 37, and Catherine Picken, 50.

Bodies of the four pajama-clad children lay in a cluster. One of the girls' bodies had the purple imprint of a boot on her face and neck.

Evans' hands were tied behind his back with a piece of line. One woman, her hair in curlers and clutching a scarf, had an axe embedded in her back. Some of the women were only partly clad.

Thirty-three white missionaries have been killed since the guerrilla war began, five of them in the past three weeks. The last five deaths were in southwestern Rhodesian, in the area infiltrated by Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union, based in Zambia and Botswana.

Siren System

timates "70 percent have the radios (special sets sold commercially which are pre-tuned to the weather service broadcast)."

While that's hardly a random, statistical sample, Payne says he believes the sets eventually will become even more popular with the public.

This year's relatively mild weather, Payne feels, may account for suppressed sales overall. But, he adds, with the passage of each severe storm dealers have reported a "flurry" of sales.

As an index to the public's response to the recent malfunctioning of the sirens, Payne says his office received "maybe a half-dozen calls."

In the near future, if you hear a siren, pull over. It's probably a policeman, an ambulance or a fire truck.

But if you don't see anything, maybe you should turn on your radio — just in case.

ought to continue." But if "unions come, it's because management hasn't done its job," he warned.

How is management responding to the stirrings of worker attitude changes?

Three managers questioned, Minkley, Nielsen and Tom Witt, City of Lubbock personnel director, indicated they recognize a fresh breeze is blowing through worker ranks and that they try to accommodate the new expectations and demands — within reason.

Witt acknowledged that many of the city's employees are younger than in previous years. And because many of them were not raised by Depression-era parents, he said, "You hear increasingly the question, 'why?'"

"'Do this' used to be enough to tell workers," he added.

Management in the city will have to adopt a "facilitative approach" in which the manager stays in control but admits he "doesn't know everything and an employee can contribute information," Witt said.

Such an approach is built into the city's training strategy, but it is "not a reality in all quarters," he acknowledged. An emphasis on job enrichment varies among city supervisors, he said.

Witt stressed that the new approach is not for everyone. Many workers want to be told what to do, when to to it and how, he said.

"There is room in this organization for those who want their jobs enriched and for others who want to just be told what to do," Witt said. "There is nothing here that says we can't accept a blend of people."

Job enrichment and satisfaction are daily and long-range goals at TI, Nielsen said, citing various management efforts. They include emphasis on an informal atmosphere, training and advancement opportunities, a mingling of managers and laborers and encouragement of "recommendagrams" for suggestions.

"In a nutshell, we believe very much that the way you motivate people is by what you give them to do," Nielsen said.

"Insignificant things" such as having all employees eat in the same cafeteria, laying the same floor covering in work areas as in management areas and having everyone from assembly-line workers to the plant manager addressed by their first names are important, he said.

"They're not big, overwhelming things, but little things count," he explained.

"The compatibility thing is extremely important. We try to get away from a situation of the gap between work force and management," Nielsen continued. "We don't want to create artificial gaps."

TI also has a "people and asset effectiveness program" in which employees participate in some policy decisions, Nielsen said.

More can and should be done at TI for worker satisfaction, he conceded. "From a management point of view, you never get as good as you should be," he said.

But, he added, the company "at least understands the need and that's critical."

Minkley said he believes the bank's management approach is "very progressive" and that the bank is the "best employer in town" in terms of overall working conditions, compensations and benefits.

The new breed of worker's values have pervaded some jobs at the bank, he said. "The basic thing I see is that people are interested in being treated fairly with standard fair employment and working conditions. They want consistency," he said.

Job scope and active participation in decision-making at the bank, however, depends on the level of the job, Minkley said. "Professional people have a broader scope. We try to allow as much flexibility as possible," he said.

The "best tool" for job satisfaction, though, is "just good basic open communication," Minkley added.

Job Well Done Offers Sense Of Satisfaction

Job satisfaction versus security; a sense of achievement versus fringe benefits. Have these dilemmas of choice confronted Lubbock employees yet as they have other workers across the country?

Obviously many of the old guard workers with their traditional work values predominate in Lubbock, which generally is a conservative city marked with a deeply entrenched Protestant work ethic.

But The Avalanche-Journal found some younger additions to the city's job force who show leanings toward New Breed Worker values, which emphasize achievement and development of a worker's full potential.

However, the women, who are products of the Vietnam War era and its social changes, have not made a total conversion to the new values. Their attitudes are in transition, as is evident from their descriptions of their desires and jobs.

For example, Cathy Cookson (not her real name) is a nurse in her early 30s, married with two children. She likes her job, overall, and achieves a satisfying sense of accomplishment at it.

But she still longs to quit her job in order to stay home with her children.

"I would rather be at home. But I can't just sit back apd do nothing, though, when my husband is working so hard," Mrs. Cookson explained.

"Today's economy requires that if you're going to get anywhere, it requires two people working," she said, adding that it bothers her that she has to work "to maintain the standard of living we want."

Her desire to stay home does not mean she does not enjoy her work, however, Mrs. Cookson said.

"I'm satisfied with what I do. The pay is not much compared to other professions that are unionized," she said. "But there is a lot of competitiveness in registered nurses here."

She said she receives her most job satisfaction "from knowing I did the best I can do. What you do is a benefit to someone.

"I know within myself I did the best I can and did a job well, and that's what counts," Mrs. Cookson added.

She takes issue with many of her younger coworkers over their work attitudes.

"I can't see just getting a job to put in hours for a paycheck. They pay me for eight hours and I will give them eight hours of work," she said.

But, she said, "I see a lot of younger people that come up here. So many that I see do a job as quickly as they can to just get home.

"I think they're more interested in just getting the money. They have no pride in themselves or pride in doing a job well," Mrs. Cookson continued. "I think it goes back to job satisfaction. You have to put something of yourself into the job if you want to get something back."

Another woman, Jan Cook, expresses the same feelings. Miss Cook is a former television reporter for a Lubbock station.

"The most important part of the job was at the end of the day being able to see something that I've accomplished." And the worst part of the job was "working with people who didn't care a whole lot about quality. They are in control of my product but they didn't have any personal interest in my product invested in it," she said.

Her ego was boosted occasionally when people recognized her on the street, she said. And the "biggest benefit was knowing someone gives you a job and has confidence you can do it and does not tell you all along the way how to do it," she added.

She said she does not believe she would be happy in a job "where I don't have a certain amount of freedom and where a certain amount of decision-making is mine."

"I really am a new breed of worker, I guess. I have to have a feeling of accomplishment," she said.

Like Mrs. Cookson, Miss Cook, who is in her mid-20s, said she would prefer not to work. "I enjoy my role as a wife. I would like to give it a shot full-time," she explained.

The drawback, she said, is that she has to have a " certain amount of money in order to survive like I want to survive."

Nazis Showered With Rocks, Eggs By Angry Crowd In Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Nazi leader Frank Collin and about 15 of his followers were greeted with a shower of rocks and eggs Saturday from thousands of counterdemonstrators at a federal building plaza.

Police kept the crowd and the Nazis separated. Collin, who like his band was dressed in full Nazi regalia, was ringed by his followers carrying quarter-inch thick plywood shields.

A few injuries were reported, and all were believed to be minor.

Police said nine persons were arrested. Eight were identified as members of the militant Jewish Defense League and were charged with disorderly conduct. One man was charged with battery against a police officer.

Shouts of "Death, Death, Death to the Nazis," came from the crowd, which began forming about two hours earlier, as Collin and members of his National Socialist Party of America emerged from the federal building under heavy police guard.

"You will end up as fertilizer. You will fertilize the farms of my people in the future," Collin shouted through a megaphone. But his words were drowned out by the crowd which continued to chant anti-Nazi epithets.

Collin challenged the crowd to meet him July 9 during his scheduled rally in Marquette Field "if they had the guts."

Less than 15 minutes after the Nazis appeared, Collin and his band re-entered the federal building.

No members of the crowd got near Collin or his followers.

The Nazis, scheduled to arrive at the plaza at about 4:30 p.m., were held by police a few blocks away for about two hours.

One woman was handcuffed and led away by police as she came near a barricade shouting, "Kill the Nazis, Kill the Nazis."

Hundreds of riot-equipped policemen were on duty, on foot and on horseback, in the plaza. About 1,000 other officers were on standby alert, within a few blocks from the plaza, officials said.

About half an hour before Collin was to arrive, a plainclothes police officer suffered a cut on his face as he tried to break up a scuffle.

The fight occurred when a small group of angry demonstrators attacked a man who was making pro-Nazi remarks as he walked through the crowd. The unidentified man was pummelled and knocked to the ground, but it was not known if he was injured.

CAN'T KEEP UP WITH DEMAND — Michael Chellel stands on a Sunset Blvd. corner selling maps giving the location of the grave sites of famous movie stars — from Rudolph Valentino to Marylin Monroe — located in the Los Angeles area. Man Rising From Oblivion With Maps Of Stars' Graves

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "This just might be the key that unlocks my future," Michael Chellel said, gravely. Any rising actor needs a break, but, heavens, who would have guessed this?

He calls his brainstorm Michael's Memory Map. He sells it on the streets of Hollywood for $5 a copy, and he can't get copies printed fast enough to keep up with the demand.

It is a map locating movie stars' graves.

Michael's Memory Map, then, is not only more innovative than the usual maps peddled to tourists, which locates celebrities' homes, his is also less likely to become outdated.

"I was as surprised as anyone to find out that people are interested in where movie stars are buried," he said. "When I discovered it, the idea for the map was a natural.

"I did it just to earn money to pay my bills, but as a result, people are noticing me. I've been invited on talk shows. Just a simple map, but it could be the break I've needed."

Well, not so simple. The map is divided into diagrams of six cemeteries. A seventh section rounds up stars in less popular graveyards. Numbers on the diagrams pinpoint the graves, like so: 17. Rudolph Valentino. Enter Cathedral Mausoleum, 22nd left, 3rd right, No.1205."

As with others who deal in the business of death, Michael pretties up the language. Nowhere does the word "grave" appear on the map, but "final resting place."

He also provides hints for happy touring:

"When leaving Hillside, if you wish to visit with Betty Grable, she rests at Inglewood Park Cemetery..."

Michael Challel is an animated man of 28 with soft brown hair and blue eyes full of life. He dropped out of the seminary in Rhode Island and moved to Hollywood when he realized he kept thinking of the altar as a stage.

Nothing seemed to go right. He was scheduled to appear on a late night show and got canceled at the last minute. He got a bit part in a TV show. It went off the air that very night. On his way back to Rhode Island to run a hot dog stand, the plane blew up on the runway. It was Friday the 13th.

"One day a friend of mine from New York was visiting and he happened to remark he knew where Marilyn Monroe was buried.

"Just for fun, we went out to Westwood and found it, and began lookng at other graves. Then groups of us would go to various cemeteries. It was like a treasure hunt. Somebody would shout, 'Hey! I just found Tyrone Power!'

"Then I decided to do it seriously. I went through almanacs to find out when stars died, and went to the Hall of Records to find the death certificate which named the cemetery."

By such diligence and enterprise, Michael found and charted 68 final resting places.

He also includes on his memory nine more names, marked with asterisks, of FRPs he could not find, though he knew the cemetery and searched it.

Perhaps some sharp-eyed tourist can locate these dear departed and experience the adventure and excitement Michael and his friends experienced. A regular treasure hunt.

Bitter Russian Rivals Ready To Meet In Top Chess Contest

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — What flag will Russian defector Viktor Korchnoi's knights, bishops and pawns fly as they march into battle with Anatoly Karpov in next month's world chess championships?

It's one of those little problems that, along with a bitter personal rivalry between the two, will give a psychological dimension to the long-awaited, $550,000 world match in the Philippines.

Reigning world champion Karpov will play under the hammer and sickle of his Russian homeland. But Korchnoi, who exiled himself to Western Europe two years ago, is faced with a dilemma in choosing his colors.

He has made several suggestions, including a white banner with the word "Stateless" written on it, the Swiss national flag, or the flag of Switzerland's northern Aargau canton, where the 47-year-old Korchnoi resides.

He also has suggested the possibility of using a Soviet hammer-and-sickle red flag with "Stateless" inscribed across it.

Chess players in international matches are required to appear with the flags of their countries. Since Korchnoi defected, he has played without one because he can't agree with officials on a mutually acceptable banner.

"This issue of a flag is a ticklish situation," said Florencio Campomanes, deputy president of the International Chess Federation.

Campomanes said Korchnoi's flag, or whether he will have one at all, will be decided in negotiations among the two contestants and Lothar Schmid, a West German and the tournament's chief arbiter.

Korchnoi has defeated three Russians to get the chance to play Karpov, 20 years his junior. Karpov, considered the darling of official Soviet chess circles, defeated Korchnoi in a challenge match in 1974 and became world champion when American Bobby Fischer refused to defend his title.

After the 1974 match, Korchnoi said Karpov had "an extremely poor chess arsenal," a heretical statement for one Soviet player to make about another. When he defected two years later, Korchnoi was just emerging from the bad graces of Soviet officialdom resulting from his comment.

The championship tournament is expected to last at least 2½ months. It starts July 18 at a 1,137-seat convention center in the Philippine mountain resort of Baguio City, about 150 miles northwest of here. The $550,000 purse is the largest ever in chess competition.

During Kochnoi's last match, in which he defeated Russian Boris Spassky, he complained that the KGB, the Soviet secret police, had trained a hypnotic ray on him to disturb his concentration.

Search For Family's Killer Continues

PURCELL, Okla. (AP) — A ground and air search continued Saturday for the pickup truck and camper that carried three members of a San Antonio family who were shot to death Thursday.

Authorities hoped the pickup and camper would give them some clue about the identity of the killer or killers of the family.

A report Saturday of an armed man in a house near here turned out to be false, officials said. The man was a hunter.

The bodies of Air Force Tech. Sgt. Melvin G. Lorenz, 38, and his wife, Air Force Staff Sgt. Linda Lorenz, 31, were found just off Interstate 35 south of this central Oklahoma town Thursday.

The body of Lorenz's son, 12-year-old Richard J. Lorenz, was discovered Friday in tall weeds just off the shoulder of the interstate, about one-half mile from the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Lorenz, authorities said.

Authorities said the youth was identified by description, including scars from open heart surgery.

The woman had been shot three times and her husband and step-son had been shot twice.

Authorities said they were stymied at this point in their investigation, but were checking dozens of possible suspects in several states, including Louisiana and Illinois.

"We're really at a standstill until we can find that pickup," an Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation spokesman said.

The spokesman confirmed that the OSBI had received a report that a pickup truck matching the description of the missing vehicle and carrying two dogs had been seen about 6 a.m. or 6:30 a.m. Thursday heading north near Stillwater in northeastern Oklahoma.

The OSBI issued an appeal for anyone sighting the vehicle, a 1975 dark blue pickup with a white overhead camper, to notify authorities. The pickup bore North Dakota license plate 205-153.

Lorenz was on emergency leave from Kelly Air Force Base near San Antonio where he worked as a training officer. Lorenz' wife was with the school training section at Lackland Air Force Base near San Antonio.

The family reportedly left San Antonio about 10 p.m. Wednesday to attend the funeral of Lorenz's mother, who died in Spiritwood, N.D., on Wednesday of cancer.

Missing Person May Be In Austin

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — George T. Jordan, who disappeared here four years ago, might be living in Austin, his father, V.E. Jordan, disclosed Friday.

The father said he talked with a man who believes he has seen George in Austin. The missing man was 23 at the time he disappeared.

George was last seen here under the overpass immediately east of Big Spring on I-20. He was wearing sandals, pajamas and a housecoat at the time. He had no identification or money with him, as far as is known.

Within two weeks after George disappeared, a brother, Raymond, died here.

V.E. Jordan , who is employed at the local YMCA, hopes to confirm his son's presence in Austin as soon as possible either by going there or having authorities check for him.

BACK ON THE ROAD — Singer Randy Gurley may be back on the road, but she's enjoying it a lot more this time. Having quit the business more than once before because of low pay, unsatisfactory housing and a lack of spirit, she has found a goodly amount of confidence simply in stable management and a home base. Miss Gurley entertained on a recent Friday evening at Cold Water Country in Lubbock and, between sets, met with A-J entertainment editor William Kerns to discuss the turns in her career. When asked her reaction to playing a club where people basically come to dance, for example, she replied, "I love Texas barrooms. I like to watch everybody go around in circles." Meanwhile, more and more people are beginning to like the way this young woman sings. (Staff Photos by Holly Kuper)

Talent Finally Paying Off For Randy Gurley

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Most will agree these days that talent in itself is no insurance policy which guarantees success in the everyday job market. Not to be overlooked are such factors as luck, timing, perseverence and the right sort of breaks — such as hooking up with people who can be beneficial to one's career. And 24-year-old Randy Gurley is a case in point proving the music business really isn't any different. Despite possessing a fascinating voice and an invigorating on-stage charisma, her future for a long while appeared to promise nothing more than low pay in a variety of the country's "dumps and crummy dives."

Twice she quit the business entirely.

But now she's back, and seemingly with an aura of confidence surrounding her persona and shielding her from the hard times. Now backed by solid management and a veteran producer, she has released a debut album, called "Let Me Be The One" on ABC Records, to excellent reviews. And during an interview between sets recently at Cold Water Country in Lubbock, the question arose as to just how things have changed for her musically.

"There's just no comparison, really," she began. "I have a home base now in Nashville, and a manager who handles all my business ends. There's business to be handled, also, and that's a major difference. ... We've just gotten a lot of support from a lot of influential and really great people in Nashville, New York and Los Angeles. I don't feel like I'm all by myself. That's what makes me feel good."

Few would have gone out on a limb and predicted musical stardom for Miss Gurley a few years back. Though she performed with the singing troupe Up With People in 1969 and 1970, she had no formal training in school. Born in Salem, Massachusetts, she explained, "My interest in country music didn't have anything to do with geography because I lived all over the States. But my mother used to listen to music a lot, everything from Harry Belafonte to the Sons Of The Pioneers and Johnny Cash. And where I was living, there were a lot of country folks. So I guess I got interested in bluegrass as an adolescent.

"But I never really took music seriously in high school. I enjoyed it. I sang some with a girlfriend, but that's all."

Nevertheless, she wound up joining a band and hitting the road — and the road hit her back, knocking her clean out of the business. So for a while, she worked at a zoo out in California, taking care of baby Bengal tigers and lion cubs. Luck still wasn't on her side, though, and she had to return East after contracting meningitis from a sick tiger. Much later she found herself in a similar position: giving up on the music business.

She said, "Oh yeah, I was ready to give up again. I'd given it up prior to this and gone back to breaking thoroughbreds. I like working with animals. Anyway, this time I had been on the road with another group. Making maybe $80 a week, sometimes a lot less. Staying in accommodations that were less than desirable."

Holding a pillow on her lap, the singer's initial shyness evaporated and she leaned forward to continue with, "I was tired not so much of not being appreciated, but of where I was going with those bands. I was just a backup singer making a salary. I was without direction. So I quit the group, borrowed a hundred bucks and got on a plane to LA. I was advised there was a person there who would be a good manager, but that didn't work out at all. And I couldn't see myself working as a cocktail waitress in LA, so I just said forget it.

"I wired a friend for $50 and I took a bus to Dallas. My best friend lived there. And I talked with her about it and then stayed with her for six months. ... I had no ideals with the other bands; I was just making a living. So I just left LA and said I'm not coming back again unless I can play a major club and unless it's for a reason."

Pay attention now, folks. Because Dallas was a turning point for Randy Gurley.

"Dallas was where I said the hell with it," she said. "Before that I hadn't really made any plans. I hadn't had that fire, that real live commitment that I was going to do it right." Before Dallas, she also hadn't had David VanCronkhite in her corner. She met him in Dallas, where he offered to manage her career. VanCronkhite then took her to Nashville and sold the influential Harold Bradley on the idea of producing her and Jim Halsey into booking her into major clubs.

And oh yes, it was at this time that ABC Records signed her to a recording contract.

Now Randy Gurley has to face a different sort of daily trial, being forced to cope with reviews which say she "out-Ronstadted Ronstadt" — no doubt a reference to her performance and recording of "Faithless Love." Her response to such reviews is a giggle, though no doubt a thankful one.

But asked if she is confident the predictions will come to pass and she will wind up a true "star," she thinks a moment and then says, "That's an interesting question. I can say I'm confident in where we're going, and I'm confident that I'm supposed to be here.

"I'm confident we'll be successful. There's no doubt in my mind about that. But to be compared to somebody (Linda Ronstadt) is hard because, you know, she's gone a definite route. So we're just going as it takes us. I'm confident we'll be successful. But no, I'm not going to stop this time until we are. We're kind of going in Ronstadt's direction because I like that kind of music. But, well, I hope so. I hope we'll sell as many albums as she does."

But do those comparisons bother her? That is, did she have reservations about recording "Faithless Love" on her debut LP, a song so closely associated with Linda Ronstadt?

"I used to think it was a problem," she answered. "But I don't anymore. My manager David really had to encourage me to record that song. I was pulling my hair out and saying, 'I can't do that. It's Ronstadt's song!' But then I listened to J.D. Souther's version and I realized it's anybody's song. So I thought: that's where I'm going, so why not? Now I can see something to it that's kinda my own. And I appreciate it for that. I enjoy it for that. That's what I get out of it.

"So I think maybe I can bring something to the audience that they haven't felt. Something different from what Ronstadt brought them."

It must be said that, in one particular way, Randy Gurley did not live up to her advance billing when she played out at Cold Water. You see, practically everyone — her record company, the critics, you name it — is billing this woman as the next country music superstar. And she was performing at Cold Water Country, a nightspot where the accent is placed very heavily on the "country." But though her first set was plagued by sound problems, it was not difficult to ascertain that this young woman knows how to rock and roll. She sang strong pop, rocked out on a couple tunes and still managed to instill country sweetness in a few more selections.

But she does not label herself strictly a country artist by any means.

She explained, "I think the country following is a real strong one, a real loyal one. More so than pop. In country, you can build a foundation with a couple of hits and ride on it forever. You can play to your fans and they'll stay your fans, and that's it. In pop, it's a home run or nothing. That's what I want to do — hit the home run.

"I want to do well on a crossover basis, but without losing the country fans. Because there's a lot of good people there and exposure to those people is nice. But the crossover is so important. You double your sales. You (and here she burst into the Doublemint jingle) double your fun! You double everything. Double your income. Double your opportunities to play with other people.

"That's the best part about this business, being able to

Real To Reel

By William D. Kerns

At the age of 11, Howard Smith was already enamored with inventors and inventions. "I was coming up with all sorts of strange things myself, though none of them really worked," he said during the course of a telephone interview from New York City. "I'd come up with a lot of different ideas, put them on a post card, send them in and try to sell them."

And now Smith, a columnist for New York's Village Voice and remembered as producer-director of the Academy Award winning documentary "Marjoe," has made a movie, a semi-documentary, as he calls it — about inventors and inventions. The picture is called "Gizmo" and is currently the first picture to play the new Cinema 4 at South Plains Mall. It's a comedy, a family picture. And, after its initial screening at the 1977 Cannes Film Festival, "Gizmo" earned rave reviews from the Los Angeles Times, Vogue and Playboy.

Rex Reed, the syndicated critic for the New York Daily News who rarely minces words, calls Smith's new movie "a full scale comedy riot."

"Gizmo" cost about $500,000 to make, most of it raised from independent investors. Smith explained, "I've been working on the picture on and off for the past four to five years. It's all about inventors, about how brave a person really has to be to show an invention to someone else. I mean, it takes a lot of courage to stand up for something you believe in. So though the movie footage consists mostly of inventions that didn't pan out, we're sort of laughing with the inventors rather than at them."

Though the film boasts original narration and music ("the lyrics often coincide with the action, making it even funnier"), the 85-minute release is composed for the most part of old film footage, the sort which used to be seen on a regular basis at the end of movie newsreels. But gathering that footage was no easy task.

"I had a big crew, with 32 people working as researchers for me," Smith explained. "And we were looking for inventions from 1917 to the present. We looked in film libraries all across the world. But it was often difficult finding the film in Europe. A great deal of film stock is on nitrate, which disintegrates with age.

"So we might spend months sifting through files looking for the right numbers which would tell us the location of a particular reel — only to find the right film can and open it and find nothing but powder inside. You see, the nitrate first turns to goo, then to powder."

He continued, "Then again, it was also dangerous at times in that some of those old film cans could explode or emit poison gas. It wasn't unusual for the researcher to put on a gas mask before looking for a certain piece of footage. ... In one underground vault in Europe, they first sent in a trained dog. It had been trained to sniff around cans and indicate which ones could potentially explode.

"Then we could go in and look for the film. Once we got past the snakes and the rats, and the old ammunition they had stored in there."

After collecting the footage, Smith edited it a bit at a time, showing the results in a screening room two or three times a week for groups of strangers. He fed off their response. When they laughed, he left the footage in. When they seemed bored, he'd trim. As a result, he's got a tight little picture full of funny scenes, but still with an added message of courage.

Asked if he had a favorite featured invention, Smith retorted, "Well, I kind of like the guy who invented a sort of airplane with propellers. He was supposed to go straight up and hover, not fly anywhere. Then he was just going to wait for the Earth to revolve and come straight down and land in Germany."

That is but one "Gizmo" that didn't — heh, heh — get off the ground.

And please don't let that documentary status steer you away. As Smith explains, "The word 'documentary' scares some people off. But 'Gizmo' is only a semi-documentary. Basically, it is an entertainment. It's funny. The critics have loved it, and the people there who see the film are going to howl. So just tell them that."

Consider yourselves told.

A KSEL representative announced at Thursday's Heart concert that yet another concert is being brought in on short notice. Aerosmith, Mahogany Rush and AC-DC will play the Coliseum on July 4. Call the Coliseum box office for details.

• • • • • • •

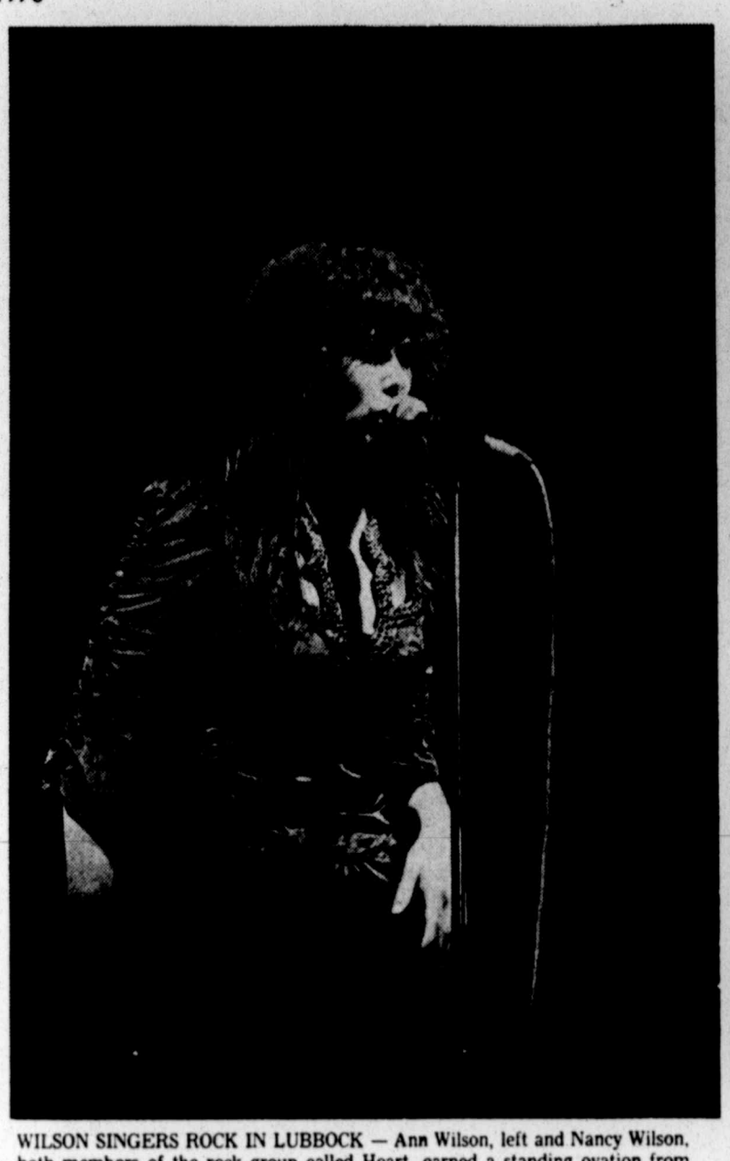

David Krebs, producer of the Texxas World Music Festival in Dallas, called the other day to say that the Willie Nelson Picnic, originally slated for July 3, has been moved up a day to July 2.

The concert will still take place in the Cotton Bowl and will still feature Willie Nelson, Waylon Jennings, Jessi Colter, Emmylou Harris, Kris Kristofferson, Rita Coolidge, The Charlie Daniels Band, Ray Wylie Hubbard and Billy Swan. Tickets, priced at $12.50, are on sale in Lubbock at Flipside Records. Those who bought tickets for the July 3 show, but cannot attend the July 2 date, may return their tickets for a full refund.

WILLIE NELSON
Changes Picnic Date

The primary reason given for the date change is that July 3 is not a holiday for "most of Willie's fans." Only 10,000 out of a possible 80,000 tickets had been sold for the Picnic — as opposed to over 70,000 for the rock show on July 1. As Krebs put it, "It seems Louisiana has July 3 off, but Oklahoma and Texas don't. So, because of all the requests by phone and because Willie also wants to change it, we're moving the show up one day."

WILSON SINGERS ROCK IN LUBBOCK — Ann Wilson, left and Nancy Wilson, both members of the rock group called Heart, earned a standing ovation from more than 8,800 fans in the Lubbock Coliseum Thursday night. The concert was not expected to draw such large numbers, as Lubbock attendance at rock shows is usually shaky when Texas Tech University students are gone on their summer break. But instead, the only problem Thursday night was the heat in the Coliseum. Temperature readings here of 106 degrees that day managed to also lift the readings to sweltering levels inside the Coliseum, but the music seemed to satisfy the warm gathering. 'Panther' Returns Soon

NEW YORK (Special) — Blake Edwards' "Revenge Of The Pink Panther" will blanket the United States and Canada with more than 600 openings on July 19. Starring Peter Sellers as the famed French flic Inspector Jacques Clouseau, the new Pink Panther film will open in Lubbock at the South Plains Cinema.

The coast-to-coast North American openings will follow the Royal World Premiere in London, which will take place on July 13, where the Prince of Wales will be the guest of honor. The London performance will be held at the Odeon Leicester Square for the benefit of the Newspaper Press Fund and the Welsh Environment Foundation.

Shot on locations throughout Europe and the Far East, "Revenge Of The Pink Panther" co-stars Herbert Lom, Robert Webber and Dyan Cannon.

Edwards produced and directed the film from a screenplay by Frank Waldman, Ron Clark and Edwards. The story is by Edwards, the music is by Henry Mancini and the animation is by DePatie-Freleng. Tony Adams is the executive producer.

This is the fifth Pink Panther film made by Edwards for United Artists with Sellers as Clouseau. The previous pictures were "The Pink Panther," "A Shot In The Dark," "The Return Of The Pink Panther" and "The Pink Panther Strikes Again."

Randy Gurley Back In Music Business ... To Stay This Time

play with people you like. I mean, I'd really like to play with people like Jackson Browne, The Eagles or Boz Scaggs."

But wouldn't such an act spark an alienation with the county fans — and the country label?

"I think you have to be very careful," she said. "If you establish yourself, you have to be very careful. ... And as for the ABC people in Nashville, they have been wonderful and if it wasn't for them, you know, I wouldn't be here. So I think it's important to work with them as much as possible. But jumping right into the pop field means jumping right into the LA office. It's as simple as that. It means moving your base of operations to Los Angeles."

Asked if she was satisfied with her first album, Miss Gurley said, "Well, I've never done an album before. So I really don't have anything to compare it to, except the albums by Ronstadt and Emmylou Harris and Nancy Wilson, all the people I like to listen to. It could be better. But for a first endeavor, I think we were all really lucky to get all the material we did.

"David and I hit all the publishing companies together in Nashville for three months listening to material. It took us months to even get in the door. They'd say 'Who are you?' and smash the doors closed. Or they'd pull out their junk drawer material for us. We finally said we'd been sent by Harold Bradley, who owns the first recording studio in Nashville and handles George Jones and Loretta Lynn, and got four or five songs to take into the studio.

"Then Harold hired the best musicians around to record with me. And I was so intimidated. I was just thinking: if I can only get through my part, I'll be fine."

But those exceptional studio musicians probably won't play as big a part on Miss Gurley's next LP. She now has a band, consisting of lead guitarist Brion Bell, steel guitarist Jerry Forney, pretty pianist Donna Kolpen, bassist Charley Anderson and drummer Billy Reynolds. And she said, "These guys are together with me. We've got a feel for each other. There's a magic chemistry involved. So on the next album I do, I'd like to use them."

As for the direction that album might take, she said, "I'd like the music on the new album to be a lot more UP than the last one. It seems like we came off with a lot of ballads (on 'Let Me Be The One'). So I'd like to have it be a bit more energetic. Because that's what we are. Energetic.

"And I'd like it all to be a little looser. I'd like it to have some roots in country. But I'd also like it to have that commercial pop hit. I'd like it to rock, but not too much. I'd like it to be stylish, but not too polished. I don't want it to sound too sweet. I want it to be spontaneous and alive. That's it. Alive!"

With success now apparently just around the next bend, Miss Gurley probably won't be printing any more offbeat statements among her liner notes. Under the list of song titles on the first album was printed: "A special thanks to a lot of people who didn't hire me as a waitress and a select few who gave me the chance when I needed it."

Asked about that statement, Miss Gurley grinned and said, "Oh yeah, I waitressed at several different places and it was really horrible. So I always want to thank the people who didn't hire me after that." No doubt those who have been entertained by Randy Gurley wouldn't mind taking the time to thank the same people. Not just because her singing is so enjoyable, but because, sometimes, it's just nice to see talent earn its just rewards.

Tech Show Tickets On Sale

The Texas Tech University Theater is currently selling tickets for its summer repertory season, scheduled Friday through July 14. Call the theater box office for ticket prices and reservations.

"Ten Nights In A Barroom," one of America's most popular dramas, will be recreated as part of the University Theater's repertory season. The play was adapted by William W. Pratt from a temperence novel "Ten Nights In A Barroom," subtitled "Fifteen Years Of A Drunkard's Life."

Since the 1860s, audiences have been applauding the moral lessons of the play, laughing at its comic characters and sobbing for the drama's child heroine, Mary Morgan. The play's appeal has not diminished through the years, and audiences can expect an evening of theater backed by careful research and feeling for the period.

Director Clifford Ashby delighted audiences with his revival of the Harley Sadler Traveling Tent Show in the summer of '76, and with his production of "Buzzards" at the Lubbock Theatre Centre last spring. Performances on July 11 and 15 have been completely sold out as benefits, but tickets are still available for performances July 2, 5, 8 and 14.

The summer rep season also includes the off-Broadway favorite "The Real Inspector Hound," under the direction of Ronald Schulz. In "The Real Inspector Hound," playwright Tom Stoppard capitalizes on every conceivable comic possibility inherent in Agatha Christie-type thrillers. The play is a spoof of murder mysteries and their bizarre cast of characters, including the critics who observe and comment on the play.

The play begins with a pair of critics who are covering the opening of an old-fashioned mystery-melodrama which takes place in the drawing room of a Gothic mansion. A body lies undiscovered throughout the majority of the play, as the audience and critics meet the rest of the cast.

That cast includes a beautiful widow mourning her mysteriously absent husband, a wheelchair speedster half-brother of her ladyship's husband, a mysterious stranger and an eavesdropping maid. With the addition of a madman on the loose, the plot becomes increasingly complex until even the critics get caught up in the action.

The hilarity increases until at long last the real Inspector Hound is unmasked. The play will be performed July 1, 4, 7, 10 and 13.

This year's repertory season will open with the daffy musical that launched the career of Carol Burnett, "Once Upon A Mattress." This zany confection presents the legend of "The Princess And The Pea," translated into modern terms through bright music and lively dance.

The University Theater is offering a specially priced children's matinee performance of "Once Upon A Mattress" at 2 p.m. July 2. Regular performances will be at 8:15 p.m. Friday, July 3, 6, 9 and 12.

ROYAL BLOOD? — Freda Williams plays the queen in the Texas Tech University production of "Once Upon A Mattress," but though she has royal blood, she's not exactly one of the heroes. Instead, she is an evil queen who will not allow her son, The Prince, to marry the woman he loves. The family production will be staged July 3, 6, 9 and 12 as part of Tech's summer repertory season. (Staff Photo by Gary Davis)

WHO CAN YOU TRUST THESE DAYS? — Just when she thinks everything is going peachy, Michele Whitfield, left, finds her love scene with T.H. Maynor turning sour in this scene from the Texas Tech University Theater production of "The Real Inspector Hound." Minutes later, she threatens murder. The mystery will be performed as part of Tech's repertory season Saturday and again July 4, 7, 10 and 13. (Staff Photo by Gary Davis)

AN ECCENTRIC RETURNS — Matthew Posey plays Magnus in the fun detective story "The Real Inspector Hound," due to be staged Saturday and again July 4, 7, 10 and 13 as part of the Texas Tech University Theater's repertory season. Don't be surprised to find him doing wheelies in his wheelchair during the course of the action. (Staff Photo by Gary Davis)

CONSPIRATORS AT WORK — Matthew Posey and Freda Williams conspire against Prince Dauntless in this scene from the funny family production of "Once Upon A Mattress." It seems neither want Dauntless to marry Princess Freda, so they get together to conjure up a test which they believe will be impossible to pass. The play will be staged at Texas Tech's University Theater July 3, 6, 9 and 12, with a special children's matinee slated for July 2. (Staff Photo by Gary Davis)

Rolling Stones Just Keep Rockin' Along

By DOUG PULLEN
A-J Rock Correspondent

The Rolling Stones are old men by rock and roll standards. Singer Mick Jagger will be 35 on July 26, guitarist Keith Richards is 34 and drummer Charlie Watts turned 37 in June, one day after guitarist Ronnie Wood celebrated his 31st birthday. Bassist Bill Wyman is the granddaddy of them all at 41.

Why is it, then, that the Stones rock with more authority than many of their contemporaries? Probably because as the world's second oldest rock and roll band (they formed in 1962), the Stones know what it means to tear loose and rock without any reservations about what the public wants to hear. This band has spirit, something which has kept it above water through difficult times.

The 1970s have proven generous and cruel to the Stones. Some of the band's best moments came early in the decade with triumphs like "Sticky Fingers," "Exile On Main Street" (considered the quintessential rock album) and the '72 tour of the United States.

But 1973's "Goat's Head Soup" started an experimental period which hurt the band's credibility and meant the loss of its virtuoso guitarist Mick Taylor. Skeptics gained impetus for their belief the band was too old to rock and would be better off dissolving.

"It's Only Rock And Roll" was a breath of fresh air, but many were disappointed by the lack of a strong guitar presence on "Black And Blue" (due in part to Taylor's absence) and the sloppiness of last year's live album "Love You Live." Sideman Billy Preston's growing influence on Jagger unnerved many Stones fans.

"Some Girls" marks the return of the Rolling Stones. They're singing about politics again, they're taking swipes at authority again, they're even ridiculing themselves a little. And they're doing it with that sardonic wit which alarmed so many parents a decade ago.

"Faraway Eyes" captures the ineffable spirit of the Stones. It's the band's first country and western tune since "Sweet Virginia" and "Torn And Frayed" from 1972's "Exile" LP.

Jagger is his usual ebullient self, taking sarcastic aim at packaged religion with one fell swoop of his countrified baritone. That ought to go down well here.

The song is almost without meaning, a subtle hint that the Stones find little reason for being tied down to the music which is expected of them.

"Shattered" and "Miss You" are soul-based numbers which showcase Watts' crackling drumming as much as the guitar accent of the album. "Shattered" is another of Jagger's surprising songs about New York, a city which he uses increasingly as a setting for his material. The rumbling of Wood's bass pattern underlines the chorus of "shayuby, shattered, shattered," which is tucked into the song's inner circle. Richards makes the piece rumble with his warbling rhythm guitar.

The harmony vocals are sung in a haunting chant similar to those in "Sympathy For The Devil" and "Gimme Shelter."

The album's strongest work is "Respectable." Its rhythm and instrumentation reminiscent of "Rip This Joint," the band rips through the song with an authority and vibrance not heard on the last few albums. Particularly good is Richards' searing rhythm and lead guitar playing. Jagger's cocky lyrics not only recongnize the band's "acceptance" by society, but makes light of it. "Now we're respected in society," he sings, "we don't worry 'bout the things we used to be."

Within an instant after he spits out that profound bit of self-appraisal, Jagger counters with a reference to "dropping heroin with the president." Trudeau, perhaps?

Another important song is Richards' tale of his Canadian drug bust of last year — of which a conviction on October 21 could mean life imprisonment. "Before They Make Me Run" opens with a riff similar to that of "Brown Sugar," a possible allusion to the Stones' notorious drug habits (which have been distorted). "Booze and pills and parties," Richards sings, chewing his words, "choose your medicine."

The title track is Jagger's return to a satanic persona, only this time he's an imp. "Give me half your money," he demands to the lilting rhythm, "give me half your gold." The song is performed with tongue in cheek as Jagger reveals the habits and erotic desires of women of different nationalities and colors. The song may well be one of Jagger's best.

Finally, there is "Beast Of Burden." One of the Stones' most touching melodies since "Angie" is blended with Jagger's soul voice.

"Some Girls" contains other, less significant songs as well. "Lies" runs its three-minute course quickly, in the fashion of a "Star Star." And a reworking of the Temptations' hit "Just My Imagination (Running Away With Me)" is given a modern twist by Jagger's added lyrics and the rock and roll treatment of the guitars.

The Rolling Stones have proven their elasticity with 16 years of making music. They don't have to depend on nostalgia to get them through, like their elders, The Beach Boys. Instead, they dabble with new sounds like a kid checks out his new Erector set.

"Some Girls" is an album of perspective and insight. It is like other Stones' flashes of brilliance in that it documents time rather than marking it. A shift back to a solid guitar sound, sarcastic lyricism and the dropping of Preston just goes to show the world that the Stones are not old men — they're just children who refuse to grow up (by society's standards).

Let's hope they stay that way.

ROLLING STONES STILL ROCKIN' — Only the Beach Boys have been recording longer than The Rolling Stones but, according to A-J rock correspondent Doug Pullen, the Beach Boys are relying on nostalgia while the Stones keep coming up with new sounds.

Art Membership Show Slated

The Lubbock Art Association will hold its annual summer membership show soon, at which time interested persons have been invited to join the organization.

Show entries should be brought to the Garden and Arts Center, 4215 University, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Tuesday. Entries may be in any medium of drawing, painting, graphics, sculpture or fine arts crafts. All work must be original; no class work is acceptable.

All entries will remain on display during July.

Texas Tech University art professor Paul Hanna will serve as juror. He will select three artists to be honored with a Merit Invitational Show in 1979, and he will also choose 30 works to be shown in area galleries.

All winners will be announced July 2.

Band Concert Moved To Civic Center

The Municipal Band concert tonight has been moved to the Civic Center. The concert is slated to start at 8:20 p.m.

The program will include "The Star Spangled Banner," Henry Fillmore's "Gifted Leadership," G. Holst's "Second Suite In F," Russ Standefer's "Tuba Solo," "Hill Country," J. P. Sousa's "Black Horse Troop," John Barnes Chance's "Incantation And Dance," selections from Meredith Wilson's "The Music Man" (sung by Tim and Jana King), K. King's "Wanderlust March," Tucci's "La Bamba de Vera Cruz," L. Bernstein's "Overture To Candide" and "America The Beautiful."

New Role For Wilcox

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Larry Wilcox, who stars in "CHiPs," has been signed for a starring role in the NBC miniseries "The Raid on Coffeyville."

Wilcox plays Em Dalton, the only survivor of the Dalton Gang after its raid on Coffeyville. Cliff Potts plays his brother Bob, and Jack Palance plays railroad detective Will Smith.

Producer-director Dan Curtis also signed Sharon Farrell and Julie Hill as the female leads.

There are about 225 species in the Zygophyllacae family of herbs, shrubs and trees.

KOOL Jazz Festival To Feature Maze

FORT WORTH (Special) — Maze, featuring Frankie Beverly, will appear on the Dallas-Ft Worth KOOL Jazz Festival at the Tarrant County Convention Center.

The festival was rescheduled from May 20 to July 16 at 8 p.m. in order to enable the appearance of Maze.

Maze, which has steadily gained a reputation as one of the finest R&B groups in the country, recently came out with the album "Golden Time of Day," which has now gone gold. The album included two hit singles, "While I'm Alone" and "Lady of Magic," which were written and sung by Maze's lead singer, Frankie Beverly.

In fact, Beverly wrote all the songs on the album, and the group has had an extremely favorable response in concerts throughout the country with the new songs. Their newest release, "Golden Time of Day," is already climbing quickly.

Along with Maze will be Gladys Knight & The Pips, who are considered a show business institution; LTD, with recent hit "Never Get Enough of Your Love;" and George Duke, whose single "Dukey Stick" is one of the hottest hits in the country.

George Duke has just released an album, "Don't Let Go," which is already climbing the charts.

Patrons wishing to mail order for tickets may write: Rainbow Tickets, P.O. Box 8024, Dallas, Texas 75205, enclosing 35 cents handling charge per ticket along with a certified check or money order and a self-addressed stamped envelope.

PROFESSIONALS AT WORK — The summer dance concert slated for Saturday night at the Texas Tech University Center theater will feature not only the talents of students, but also professional dance camp faculty members. Mannie Rowe and Karen Steele are seen here, rehearsing Miss Steele's ballet called "Opaque." Rowe is presently artistic director of the Atlanta Ballet Chamber Ensemble. Miss Steele dances with the Lar Lubovitch company in New York City. Tickets for Saturday's concert are on sale at the University Center ticket booth. (Staff Photos by Gary Davis)

Summer Dance Concert Set At University Center

Lubbock Civic Ballet and Texas Tech University dance division are co-sponsoring a summer dance concert at 8 p.m. Saturday in the University Center theater.

This performance by faculty and students is the end product of an intense four-week summer dance workshop held on the Tech campus. Professional guest faculty have traveled to Lubbock from New York, Georgia and California to offer classes in ballet, modern, jazz and centering.

More than 30 students are taking part in the workshop classes.

Faculty member Mannie Rowe, formerly a soloist with Bejart's Ballet Canadien and presently artistic director of the Atlanta Ballet Chamber Ensemble, has choreographed a ballet to Bach's "Goldberg Variations." Elizabeth Gillas, Tamara Slease, Carol Craig, Debbie Knaff and Steve Mann will perform the ballet.

Karen Steele, currently a member of the Lar Lubovitch Dance Company in New York City, has choreographed "Opaque" to be performed by herself, Mannie Rowe and Diana Moore. The music is by Ravel.

Roxanne Bartush, formerly a member of Laura Foreman's company in New York City, has choreographed a modern work for performance by Susan Hopson, Molly MaGee, Elizabeth Gillas, Katie Dowdy, Toya Fikes and Angie Good.

A jazz dance executed by Angie Good, William Rosinbaum, Elizabeth Gillas, Toya Fikes, Katie Dowdy and Molly MaGee was choreographed for Saturday's concert by Susan Hopson, jazz dancer and teacher with the David Kirby Dancers in Dallas.

Kristina Gintautiene will present a modern work performed by Xen Oden, Laurie Strickland, Angie Good and Molly MaGee. And Diana Moore, Lubbock Civic Ballet artistic director and chairman of the Tech dance division, will contribute a number called "Boogie Woogie" for performance by Laurie Strickland, William Rosinbaum, Laurie Ellis, Xen Oden, Robert Auchter and Steve Mann.

Tickets go on sale Monday. Call the University Center ticket booth for further details.

Preparation Can Avert Vacation Problems

By SGT. SIDNEY LILE
Odessa Police Department

There is only one thing that can make a camping trip more miserable than arriving at the camp to find that mildew has eaten the bottom out of your tent, your fishing license expired yesterday, and after opening the nylon case that is supposed to contain the sleeping bag, you discover that it is full of dirty laundry your son brought home from an outing at the boy scout ranch. That all important one thing is theft.

So here are a few suggestions that can save you from a real headache later on. First of all, get organized. Poor organization is the cause of most camping blunders. Make a list of what you will need to survive all weather conditions likely at the chosen campsite. Compare the list with what you already have, then make plans to purchase or borrow the other items.

Go through all your equipment one piece at a time cleaning and adjusting as you go, then carefully repack the items to avoid damage while in route. Each piece of equipment should be marked with your driver's license number allowing an easy and permanent means of identification should it become stolen.

If you will be pulling a camper or utility trailer to the site, you will need to check out that rig as well. Be sure the wheel bearings have sufficient grease and the lug bolts are securely tight (its a good idea to check lugs every 500 miles). Double check holding tanks, butane lines and electrical system. Recheck the lock on your camper door.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: I hear that the newly married Henry Winkler became an "instant father." What's the story—if any —C.R.B., Los Angeles.

A: The Fonz remained a bachelor for 32 years until he married redhead Stacey Wietzman only recently. She was a divorcee with a six-year-old son, Jed, which you could say made him an "instant father." Winkler told interviewer Ivan Waterman that he and Stacy "had been living together for 18 months, but being married is different! To me, marriage is the silver thread that holds society together. When marriage and family goes, so will society. I now have something eternal with Stacy and it's wonderful."

Q: Tell the truth now—isn't Carroll O'Connor personally just as much a bigot as his role in "All in the Family" would have us believe?--Leroy D. Richmond. Va.

A: That's the bunk about Bunker! As witness "Archie's" participation in a benefit dinner-dance-auction in Hollywood to enrich the Watts Community Child Care Center to the tune of $100,000. Also applauding while O'Connor was dancing with L.A. Mayor Tom Bradley's wife Ethel, were "Family" members Sally Struthers and Jean Stapleton. Contributes as a celeb prizes in the auction was a needlepoint by Rosey Grier, an O.J. Simpson football and a T—shirt worn by Robert ("Baretta") Blake. Mrs. Carroll O'Connor was a co-chairwoman of the event along with Ella Fitzgareld.

Q: Nixon is still getting such negative treatment from the press, we wonder if it's a deliberate plot. If not, why is it almost every item you read about his book, "Memoirs of Richard Nixon," is selling, makes it appear it's a flop?--Mr. and Mrs. D.J., (a loyal Republican Family"), Omaha, Neb.

A: Since the bookstores reporting on the sales of the book are named in such items our sensitive noses don't sniff any semblance of an organized "plot" to hurt the book or its author. Perhaps the 1,120 page, four-pound book would sell faster in supermarkets, where customers are used to paying $5 per pound for almost everything they buy!

Q: As members of an Elvis Presley fan club, we were thrilled to hear a convention of his fans will be held. Can you tell us where this will take place?--Susan R., Norfolk, Va.

A: The first Elvis Presley World Wide Fan Convention will be held Sept. 1-10, at the pavilion of the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel. Plans call for conventioneers to attend a Presley film festival and visit display booths and, naturally, shop for souvenirs. (Footnote: The giant Elvis memorial mural in Nashville's Music City Entertainment Center is a series of paintings 85 feet long and 10 feet high. It depicts every step in Presley's life, from birth to death. In a carpeted room 74 people can watch a 30-minute showing of the dramatization, while gospel music provides a fitting background.)

Q: I claim "Babe Ruth" was the password coined for the allied forces D-Day World War II invasion. My husband differs. Say's it was "Betty Grable." Who is right? Incidentallhy, is there any record of what Clark Gable's reaction was when he met Grable?--The Bobbie Holts, Las Vegas.

A: Gable didn't say anything to Grable. "He merely stared at my white teeth," Betty laughingly recalled. About the invasion password—you're both wrong; it was "Mickey Mouse."

Q: Leon Spinks (23), the controversial heavyweight champ, has a younger brother, Micheal (20) who also became a professional boxer (a light heavyweight) after both won gold medals in the '76 Olympics in Montreal. Did they ever fight each other in the ring?--Gerald R., Indianapolis.

A: No. Though they, like most brothers, traded blows when they were teenagers, they both say they love each other. And would really pummel any outsider foolish enough to attack either one of them. "I used to beat up Micheal for my sister all the time," the champ said. "But we never fought when she was around." Their mother is Kay Francis Spinks, described as very religious and youthful.

Q: Joe Namath said, when he retired from footbal, that he planned to start another career in movies and on TV. Anything in the offing?--Emmy Thomas, Beaver Falls, Pa.

A: Yes. Joe is currently joining Lee Marvin, Mike Connors, Linda Evans, Robert Shaw and other stars in an action film titled "Avalanche Express." NBC also announced that Namath will quaterback his own situation comedy series, "The Wavery Wonders," kicking off in September.

Q: Is that the original Onassis yacht seen in the "Greek Tycoon" film?--Mrs. N.D.C., Columbus, Ohio.

A: No more so than Jacqueline Bisset is Jacqueline Onassis, Anthony Quinn is Ari and James Franciscus is the late President Kennedy. The yacht used in the film, La Belle Simone (reportedly the largest and most luxurious private yacht in the world), is owned by U.S. industrialist William Levitt. Designer Micheal Stringer created and executed a new color interior and refurnished the $20,000,000 craft just for the Universal movie. Then he restored it to its origingal state before returning it. (Footnote: This recalls one of Dougie Stevens' favorite Joe E. Lewis gags—about his brother stealing the Queen Mary, but so no one would recognize the ship, he changed the whistle!)

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," P.O. Box 11748, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

INSTANT "FATHER"—Henry (The Fonz) Winkler: he became an instant father.

NOT WHAT IT SEEMS—The "Greek Tycoon's" yacht was not Mr. O's— but the largest, most luxurious in the world: La Bellhe Simone.

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

THE FALLIBLE MACHINE

A reader writes: "I recently wrote to a company that produces a chess computer to point out that the machine made some awful mistakes — for instance, like this (I am White): 1. P-K4, P-K4; 2. N-KB3, N-QB3; 3. B-B4, N-B3; 4. N-N5, P-Q4; 5. PxP, NxP; 6. P-Q4, NxP; 7. P-B3. The machine simply couldn't care less about his Knight being attacked and continued with 7...B-QB4, losing both Knight and game. The company's more advanced system made it 7...P-QB4?? No improvement at all!"

(a) After 13. PxP; Black has the open diagonal QR1-KR8. If now 13...BxN; then 14. PxP, BxPch; 15. KxB, etc.

(b) 18...N-K4 would have been better.

(c) More solid is 22...Q-KN3.

(d) 33. R-K7 decides immediately.

KING SAFETY

The King's Indian Defense is a difficult and dangerous endeavor for both sides. In the classical mainline, White gains excellent chances on the Queenside at the risk of a strong attack against his own King. In the following game, played in March on the West Coast, White completely ignores Black's attack. The result is a brutal, but clear, illustration of the power of that onslaught.

SOUTHWEST AIRLINES — making a quantum leap in service this year with new flights in Lubbock, Midland-Odessa and three other Texas points — is planning to spread its wings even further soon both inside and outside the state.

Southwest plans to file an application in early 1978 to extend its routes to Amarillo and the Beaumont-Orange-Port Arthur area, hopefully in 1979, airline president Lamar Muse says.

And it hopes by 1979 or 1980, he told The Avalanche-Journal, to be operating a subsidiary company, Midway Airway, in the North.

That interstate operation would center on Chicago's close-to-town Midway Airport and serve 14 other markets, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Des Moines, Detroit, Kansas City, St. Louis, Louisville, Ky.; Memphis, Minneapolis-St.Paul, Omaha and Pittsburgh, he said.

An application for such service already has been filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Southwest's expansion plans into Amarillo have nothing really to do with Continental Airlines' pull-out there, Muse said.

"We made that d Continental announc ping Amarillo."

Airport Bomb Kills Worker

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A spring-loaded pipe bomb exploded Saturday in a locker room at National Airport, killing one Federal Aviation Administration employe, but the FAA said there was no threat to air passengers and no disruption of airline opertions.

FAA and FBI officials said initial investigations gave them a good idea about the type of bomb used but no clue about the motive for the blast. They said there was no warning the bomb would go off.

An FAA spokesman, referring to the 1975 locker bomb explosion that killed 11 and injured 70 at New York's LaGuardia Airport, said: "This was to LaGuardia."

The May, 1967 wreck of the supertanker Torey Canyon off southern England dumped more than 29 million gallons into the water — the biggest oil tanker spill on record.

An estimated 2 million gallons flowed into the Santa Barbara Channel from an offshore well near Santa Barbara, Calif., in 1969.

The oil industry says there has been no

'Fight Crime' Reward Fund Leaps Ahead

THE "FIGHT CRIME NOW" reward fund — announced Wednesday by a group of anonymous citizens who want to help stem the mounting crime rate in Lubbock — has now climbed to $2,880.

Robert R. Norris, vice president and general manager of The Avalanche-Journal, announced Saturday that the newspaper would add $500 to the fund.

In addition, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Dregne contributed $25 and three anonymous donors added $355 to help swell the total to $2,880.

Norris had announced earlier that The Avalanche-Journal, along with a local bank, would serve as the recipient for handling the fund, which will be held in trust.

From time to time, specific rewards will be offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons who commit crimes against society, particularly armed robberies and assault cases.

Four citizens who requested anonymity to avoid the possibility of personalities becoming involved contributed $500 each to the fund to originally establish it.

The original $2,000 has been offered for information which leads to the arrest and conviction of one or more of the three persons who, without provocation, attacked, beat and shot 21-year-old Texas Tech student Jim Adair on Dec. 15 at the service station where he worked. The remainder ($880) will remain in reserve.

Adair only recently returned to his home in Richardson from a Dallas rehabilitation center, where he had undergone treatment since Jan. 17. Still partially paralyzed and wearing back and leg braces and using crutches or a wheelchair, he will remain home for about a month, after which a diagnosis will be made on his progress.

Further contributions may be made to the fund by sending them to the "Fight Crime Now Fund" in care of The Avalanche-Journal, Box 491, Lubbock 79408. Persons desiring to remain anonymous should attach a note when making the donation.

Monies received will be turned over to a bank to act as trustee, Norris said. "The newspaper in this instance is not acting or attempting to act as a law enforcement agent, but in the avenue of public service to encourage those who wish to do so to participate as citizens to help make Lubbock a better and safer place in

Dairymen May Feed Herd Tree Fodder

By ARTHUR P. BUSHNELL

BANGOR, Maine (UPI) — Cows eating trees?

"Trees are nothing more than tall grass," says Michael Thomas, pcesident of Timber Resources Inc.

So his firm has developed a process to convert trees into chip feed in hopes that Maine farmers wanting to save money and increase productivity will begin feeding poplar trees to their cattle and some other animals.

Increased pressure and temperature are used to treat the trees so ruminating animals, such as cows, goats and sheep, can extract energy from them.

Thomas' firm, using technology developed by Canadian researchers, has been using a small demonstrator to show farmers how the process works. Full production began this spring with a plant capable of producing feed for as many as 8,000 head of cattle.

The basic cost for the poplar feed is $35 a ton. Thomas says that can be reduced by buying large amounts or by a farmer supplying some of the poplar used. That compares to charges of $50 to $80 a ton, plus transportation, for hay.

"The process breaks down cellulose and hemicellulose so that they're just as nutritious as any form of starch in plants," Thomas says. "Feeding trials have turned out super. One Canadian mixed the product into regular rations and saved 23 cents per head of dairy cattle per day on each of 100 head. Their milk-fat content also went up, so that he was getting 38 cents more per 100 pounds of milk."

He says any farmer can reduce feed costs 10 percent by using the poplar feed. Further, he says, a farmer using his own poplars for feed can save as much as 23 per cent $54.75 per head per year. "That really mounts up when your're talking about some farmers with several hundred head."

"For farmers who have timberland, most of it has a great deal of poplar in this area. It's primarily a weed plant in this state, Vermont, Massachusetts and New Hampshire."

Thomas says the process is an old idea which was used to feed animals in some areas of Europe during World Wur II, freeing crops for human consumption. But he says new technology now makes the idea more feasible.

"Trees have the same structural makeup of any other type of plant. We just alter the structure and chemistry. Grass allows animals to convert cellulose directly into energy. All we've done is reduce the tree to a chemical structure similar to grass or hay."

Timber Resources Inc. is now the nation's only distrubutor and marketing agent for the process developed by Stake Technoloy of Ottawa.

"We started looking into such processes abut nine months ago and were interested in a similar idea in Texas," Thomas says. "But we thought it involved too much chemicals and pollutants. This method appealed to us because it's clean.

"We work with no chemicals, no pollutants, no waste. We convert a complete tree into an energy source for livestock. A pound of tree makes a pound of feed.

"The fact that poplars have some nutritional or metabolic use for ruminant animals isn't too new. It's quite common to go into the woods and see moose chewing on limbs. All we've done is make it bite-size. The state of Alaska is even considering this process to help feed caribou," Thomas says.

"We've had an outstanding response. The idea of feeding trees to livestock initially met with a great deal of scoffing. But as it was explained, it was understood by farmers.

"We've actually created a separate industry for a tree that was otherwise considered absolutely useless," Thomas says.

New K-Mart Store Hikes Permits

Building contractors have received permits for $3,314,100 in future construction activities in Lubbock, according to city records.

Commercial projects accounted for $1,913,350 of that amount, and residential programs made up the balance of $1,400,750.

The M. J. Lang Construction Co. of Tucson, Ariz., will build a retail store facility for K-Mart at 5802 19th St. The structure will contain 68,337 square feet of floor space, and is expected to cost $1,400,000.

Claude Martin & Sons received a permit to build a new Southern Sea restaurant structure at 1624 10th St. The work is expected to cost $213,000, and will involve 5,128 square feet of floor space.

Lloyd Price Construction plans a new fraternity house for Delta Tau Delta at No. 10 Greek Circle for an estimated cost of $157,850. The building will contain 4,800 square feet of space.

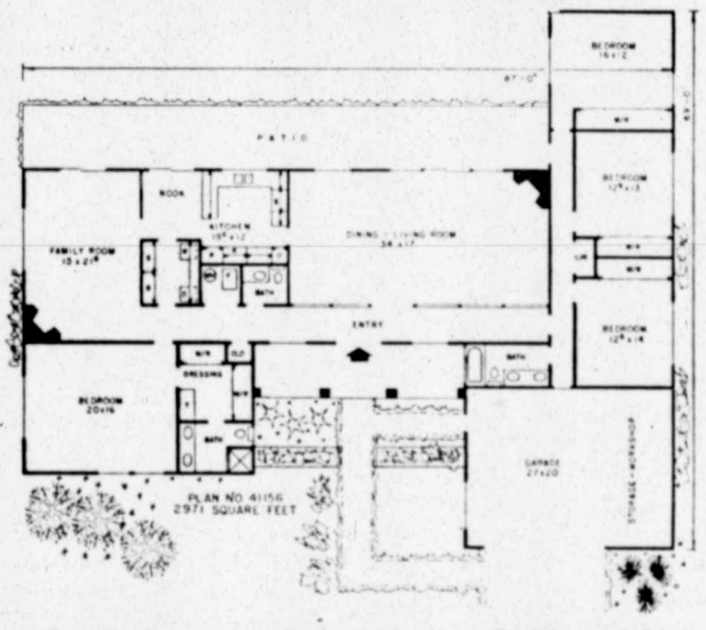

An office facility has been scheduled by Estates Building Co. at 3628 50th St. Expected to cost $116,000, the building will contain 6,076 square feet of space.

In the residential category, two contractors have scheduled duplex units. Buddy Ramsel will construct one of the two-family units at 6115 37th St. for an estimated cost of $48,000, and First Manufactured Homes will build the other at 9202 Elgin for an expected cost of $43,000.

Three single-family projects have been scheduled by Personality Homes. Locations and estimated costs include: 6010 15th St., $39,950; 6008 15th St., $34,650; and 5902 16th St., $37,750.

Four contractors have scheduled two single-family homes each. They include: Jack Givens, 3503 95th St. ($80,000), and 5209 87th St. ($50,000); Harold Long, 8020 Wayne ($60,000), and 4915 63rd St. ($42,000); Don B. Hall Construction, 4903 65th St. ($44,000), and 4911 65th St. ($34,500).

Abundance Of Space Offered In Exceptional Home Design

If you have been looking for a home with an abundance of space, then this plan should meet most of your requirements. It not only offers spacious rooms, but numerous other features which combine to form an exceptional design.

From a roofed porch, double doors open to an entry which provides superb access to all rooms. Only a partial wall separates the dining-living room and entry. This, plus the large amount of glass in the rear wall, visually enlarges this already huge room.

The kitchen is partially open to the family room. There are numerous cabinets including a wide pantry. From the eating nook, doors open to the patio, which is also accessible from the family and living rooms and the rear bedroom.

Laundry facilities, plus extra wide broom and storage closets, are in a room off the kitchen. A furnace and water heater are in an adjoining closet.

The luxurious master bedroom suite is accessible from the entry hall and separated from the other bedrooms. Off the large bedroom is a dressing area and private bath. All the bedrooms can accommodate twin beds, and, for privacy none have a common wall.

There is ample space for both storage and a workshop in the double garage. A door opens from the garage to the bedroom hall.

Note how the stone veneer and planters tie the two front wings of the house together in this handsome, contemporary design.

Complete working drawings for plan 41156 can be purchased for only $27.95 for the first set and $11 for each additional set ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these special prices until October 25, 1978. Please allow at least three weeks for delivery. A large reproduction rendering of the exterior is available for $3. Also available are six home plan books illustrating in excess of 900 plans — a $9.75 value — for only $7.75 plus $1 for postage and handling. Send all orders to: Hiawatha Estes, P.O. Box 404-J, Northridge Calif., 91328.

Reed's Camera Center To Open Store In Mall

in the South Plains Mall on July 1st.

The new Lubbock store will be the first Reed's store outside El Paso, where there are presently four locations.

The company was founded 30 years ago by J. S. Reed, president.

Reed said that Lubbock was selected as the first site in the company's ongoing expansion project after it conducted a marketing survey. He said Lubbock is growing rapidly and has tremendous growth potential.

The university is an asset and the fact that Lubbock is a core area for surrounding cities make it an ideal location, Reed said. He added that the firm is looking forward to becoming actively involved in both civic and professional activities in the community.

Manager of the store will be Eric Fruithandler and assistant manager will be George Guerra. Each has graduated from extensive training programs at Reed's Camera Center. Fruithandler attended the University of Texas at Austin and Guerra attended the University of Texas at El Paso. They will complete their education at Texas Tech.

Mark Reed, vice president who has been with the firm for seven years, will be in Lubbock for several months overseeing the new business. The company is also in the process of hiring two or three employes from Lubbock.

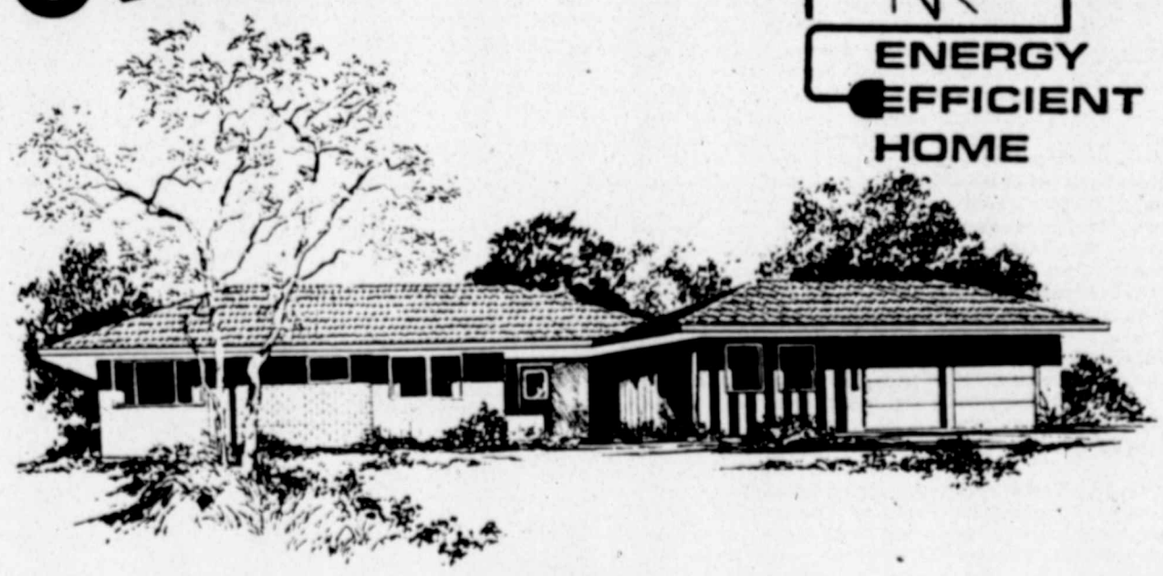

Reed's is a specialty store carrying a complete line of photographic supplies and equipment for beginners, advanced amateurs and professionals. The firm will offer the latest in photo finishing, darkroom equipment and techniques in commercial, industrial and government divisions.

Because of its buying power, importing some items direct, and a new distribution center to be completed by the end of the year, Reed's can offer a large selection, prompt service and competitive prices on major brand items, a spokesman said.

INFLATION HEDGE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Americans can guard against sudden increases in hotel prices abroad because of weakening dollars by purchasing HiltonCheques, which guarantee room rates year round before leaving home. HiltonCheques sell for $45 single, and $55 double, including tax and service charge, and are accepted at all 41 Hilton hotels in Europe, Asia, Israel and Canada. There are surcharges in some cities. The cheques can be bought through travel agents, TWU ticket offices or Hilton International.

Foreign Banks Big Holders Of U.S. Securities

By JOHN F. SIMS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Foreigners are now the largest single factor in the U.S. Treasury bond market. Foreign interests, mostly central banks, collectively now own more Treasury securities than the American commercial banks and even the Federal Reserve itself.

According to experts that situation helps the United States in the short-term, is no real danger in the long-term but nevertheless is a dangerous symptom of problems that have to be solved.

The problems concern the value of the U.S. dollar and its role as an international currency.

Over the last seven years, according to a study conducted by the New York brokerage house Salomon Brothers, foreign holdings of marketable U.S. government obligations — Treasury bills, certificates, notes and bonds — increased from $18.2 billion in 1970 to $107.8 billion in 1977.

During 1977 there was a 40 percent jump in holdings of U.S. government securities by foreign central banks and other non-official foreign investors.

And in the first three months of 1978 alone, foreign holdings in custodial accounts at the New York Federal Reserve Bank increased an unprecedented $12.5 billion to $88.3 billion.

In simple terms this means that the United States owes about $120 billion to foreigners — and interest on the debt that is running at about $7 billion a year.

The foreign-owned bonds make up about one quarter of the $472 billion marketable, interest-bearing public debt outstanding at the end of March, according to Treasury figures.

How did this situation arise and what are the dangers, if any?

Brian Fabbri, an economist who keeps a close eye on U.S. Treasury debt on behalf of Salomon Brothers and their customers, explained the background in an interview.

"The extent to which foreign institutions, notably foreign central banks, have invested in U.S. Treasury bonds is a reflection of the value of the dollar abroad," he said.

"No other currency is so widely held and no other securities are so widely held.

"Foreign companies acquire dollars in payment for what they sell to the United States," he said. "They exchange the dollars for their local currencies at their central banks."

Central banks are reluctant to hold dollars because of the built-in negative interest rate caused by inflation — they lose money by holding dollars because the purchasing power of those dollars is being constantly eroded.

"So they invest in U.S. Treasury bonds, which bear interest, as a way of at least partly keeping up with inflation," Fabbri said. "Ninety to 95 percent of the Treasury securities held by foreigners are in the hands of foreign central banks."

The foreign central banks, and their governments, are not exactly delighted by the situation.

"To buy up the dollars from their nationals, the central banks are forced to create more of their own currencies to sop up the excess," Fabbri explained. "This in turn expands their domestic markets and has the danger of being inflationary.

"In the last nine months the U.S. dollar's value has dropped 20 to 25 percent against the currencies of the major trading nations, i.e. Japan, West Germany and Switzerland," Fabbri said.

"The depreciation on trade-weighted basis is far less, and that's a better way of judging the true value of the dollar, but the strict depreciation of the dollar has been 20 to 25 percent."

The danger for America's trading partners is that U.S. inflation is being exported in the form of the Treasury bonds. Even a swap agreement, when another country agrees to back the dollar with its own currency, creates inflation in the other country.

"In the hard currency areas the trading nations are virtually forced into buying bonds," Fabbri said. Foreigners will accept that as part of the price that must be paid for having the dollar as an international currency.

The United States in recent years has become a powerful magnet for foreign investment, mostly from industrialized countries such as West Germany and Japan but more and more from Arab petroleum-producing countries looking for ways to protect the value of their dollar surpluses.

U.S. Treasury bonds, like those other investments in land and businesses, in the end are backed by a general faith in U.S. earning power.

Is there any danger in the fact that foreigners hold one quarter of America's marketable debt? If they were to demand payment all at once, would America find itself bankrupt?

Not likely, according to Fabbri.

If the foreign institutions did want to liquidate their holdings, they would be paid in dollars.

"The dollars are in the system somewhere — they haven't disappeared," he said. "They could allow the bonds just to mature, in which case the U.S. public would have to take up the slack and the burden of the debt. That might create some hardship in the United States, but equally for the other nations.

"The danger is minimal over the long run," he said.

The interdependency of the major trading nations, as well as the rest of the world, would not allow a foreign government to play "beggar my neighbor" against the United States.

Dr. Henry Kaufman, a senior economist with Salomon Brothers, added: "The danger is minimal because the wealth of the United States is greater than what is owed.

"The situation nevertheless indicates that all is not right with the international financial setup," Kaufman said.

"The role of the dollar abroad is overextended. Another source of world-wide liquidity needs to be found. The real danger is that we are transferring wealth abroad.

"Increases in dollar holdings abroad indicate that we are not running as efficient an economy as we could," he said.

"In 1979, the international dollar problem could well be the most difficult in the postwar period, thus presenting an extraordinary challenge to our central bank," Kaufman said in a speech earlier this year.

"Two challenges confront us today concerning the dollar and, therefore, the international monetary system," he said. "One is the great urgency to arrest both the decline of the dollar and the deterioration of international monetary cooperation. The other is to begin discussions which will hammer out the broad dimensions of the international monetary system which will best suit world needs for the rest of this century."

That new system obviously is not going to be found tomorrow.

"We do need to gain time to hold the present system together a while longer until a new structure is in place," Kaufman said. "Some compromises need to be made by all.

"The United States must institute measures to slow inflation and all major foreign participants must show a front-end willingness to accept new dollars," he said.

One major contribution, according to both Fabbri and Kaufman, would be cuts in U.S. government expenditure.

The whole topic is likely to be aired when President Carter and the leaders of the industrialized world meet at an economic summit conference in Bonn in July.

In the meantime the dollar will continue to be the world's major trading currency, being used for payments between other nations as well as for trading between the United States and the world.

The worldwide role of the dollar is a tacit recognition of America's power, even if foreign governments sometimes appear to forget it.

"We tend to forget that in the United States there is found the combination of broad economic strength, political stability and open money and capital markets which are dimensions unequaled elsewhere in the modern world," Kaufman said.

ARCHITECTURALLY SPEAKING

In the Avalanche Journal of Sunday June 11th was a dramatic picture of the new National Gallery of Art in our nation's capital. The last sentence of the picture's caption read, "Views differ as to wheter the building is ugly or beautiful." Herewith is a thought-provoking article on the subject of:

BEAUTY vs. INTEREST

The definition of Architecture as accepted by the American Institute of Architects is:

Architecture is an Art, a Science, and a Profession that weds: function, the planning and relationships of spaces which meet human needs; structure, the method of enclosing a space; beauty, that quality of Art without which no building can qualify as Architecture.

It is the later part of the definition that I draw particularly to your attention.

Webster's Dictionary defines beauty as:

That quality or aggregate of qualities in a thing which gives pleasure to the senses and exalts the mind.

Architectural examples receiving the most publicity in recent times reflect a trend toward bold forms, heavy and massive in feeling. There is less delicacy, fewer graceful lines, a more ponderous statement in the newer buildings. Functionally they seem to work well inside, and the inner spaces do project a pleasing atmosphere. Yet, in viewing the two aspects, one external and the other internal, one recognizes a reversal of the functionalist concept of "form follows function." At present the form is receiving the primary concern of the designer. The question is, "Are the newer buildings beautiful?"

Functionalism does not preclude beauty. Over the centuries, the two have often been in pleasing union, and yet, functionalism may or may not involve a concept of beauty. Utility and fitness may be regarded as the measure of excellence or perfection of a product, but not necessarily of its beauty.

OF THE THREE analogies relevant to functionalism, organic, moral, and mechanic, the latter is more closely allied to the question at hand. The mechanic analogy is based on the conviction that beauty, or at least a kind of formal perfection, results automatically from the most perfect mechanical efficiency, or that perfectly engineered creations achieve beauty without a conscious search for it.

Beauty is not viewed the same by everyone, and yet there are some things that are recognized as "being beautiful." Such objects receiving that designation usually have endured criticism over a long period of time; the scrutiny and dissection by qualified authorities and the general public. Such evaluations remove the lable of "fad," a temporary fashion or craze.

The economic theory of "planned obsolescence" is a generator of fads. Our daily life is constantly beset by the advertising media espousing that concept; it touches almost everything we encounter and so affects our thinking that it is almost impossible to have established values. Still, people do react subconsciously to what they see and experience.

One of the most influential factors in our Ameican way of life appears to be the need for entertainment and excitement; what better demonstration of this than hundreds of thousands of people standing in line to be scared spitless by such movies as Jaws, Inferno, and Godzilla. I suppose there is some explanation for this related to an affluent society that has much but is restless, often bored and knows little about entertaining itself. Television caters to this need in a variety of programs.

Another reflection of this condition is the great and growing attendance at sporting events of all kinds, which in itself is quite a normal interest, but frenticism is reflected in the vari-form, multi-faceted, acutely angular, ponderous architecture of today? Are architects subconsciously (?) responding to this craving for excitment by attemping to startle the public? Perhaps it's the trend, the "in" thing in design.

THE RENAISSANCE period (15th century) in Europe is recognized as a time of unparalleled artistic expression. It was a widespread intellectal movement seeking to transcend Medieval Art in all its forms, including architecture; it sought a renewed expression of Classical beauty. There is no question about its success, but, as is usually the case, amongst the glitter of the glorious there were some very poor results.

A contributing factor to such splendid works of architecture as the great Gothic cathedrals, the chateaux, palaces, tombs, etc., was that the architects were also artists and sculptors such as Michelangelo, Leonardo da Vinci, Raphael to name a few of the more well known. Such capabilities in the arts was found to produce artistic architecture. It would seem to follow, that if architects are lessartistically talented and more engineer/technologist oriented, those traits are reflected in the product of their efforts.

In architecture the Renaissance influence began to succumb to the technological advances fostered by the Industrial Revolution. The trend continues; great technological achievements in our society having more and more influence on our daily life. As a matter of fact we are drown by the flood of "new things" . . . to the point of our becoming unseeing and indifferent to much of the production.

In this country much of the populace has become insensitive and unseeing, caught in a frenzy of daily activities that it is numbed by constant change at every turn. Little time is taken to ponder the developing scene, to analyze, to wonder, to SEE.

We have, to some extent reviewed circumstances occuring over the centuries as related to some factors involving architecture and those for whom it exists — the people. What can be said about the matter of beauty in arthitecture? Does the public, that unseeing milling mass of humanity, really care about the architecture being erected? Would it affect today's architecture if the people spoke out either praising or questioning the man-built environment around them? What if they began to really look and see!

What do you think Mr./Mrs. Reader, is there beauty in our architecture today, or is it just "interesting" forms? Does it appear as a production line product with interior designer cosmetics, or does it convey a conscious effort to produce a beautiful work of archithecture? How do you see it?

Hams, CBers Seek New Service

By MIKE WENDLAND

A nationwide organization called the American Radio Council has petitioned the FCC to open up a new VHF radio service that would not require Morse Code knowledge as a condition of operating.

What makes the effort unique is the group itself. For the ARC is not strictly a CB organization. It is the first national club made up of both hams and CBers and its philosophy is that the two hobbies are really one hobby.

The ARC's VHF proposal would create a new "hobbists" class of amateur radio operation at either 220 or 900 MHz, far up in the frequency spectrum where sunspots and man-made interference cause a minimum of interference.

Currently, only hams are allowed hobby-type communications on VHF. And to be a ham, you must pass an FCC test in Morse Code and electronic theory. There are five licence classes for hams, the easiest being the novice, which requires only a five-word-a-minute code knowledge and a basic understanding of rules and electronics. Novice tests are administered by higher-class hams, who act as volunteer examiners for the FCC.

Novice amateurs, however, have no VHF privileges and are restricted only to Morse Code communications.

The ARC's move to create a hobbist band would, in effect, add a sixth amateur class. It would also be administered by volunteer ham examiners.

Fred Maia, a ham of 23-years-standing and the executive director of ARC, says such a move would strengthen amateur radio and improve the CB service by giving amateurs thousands of new members and the active CBer a reliable, more effective alternative to the overcrowding and confusion of the existing 27 MHz CB band.

"We really believe it's time that CBers and hams joined together," said Maia. "For too long, they have distrusted each other and stayed to themselves. We think that together they can do a lot, like fighting for more equitable antenna height ordinances and better television filtering."

The idea to form the ARC came last year when Maia got to know his Garland, Texas, neighbor, Harold McCullough. McCullough's background was CB, his handle "Sky King." One day he came over to Maia's house to ask about the impressive amateur radio towers.

Over the weeks, the CBer and the ham became friends. Both realized the hobby also had something to offer. "Sky King," under Maia's tutelage, studied and became a ham. Maia became a CBer. They found others who were into both amateur radio and CB.

Today, the group numbers about 2,000 members across the country and as far away as Australia. Every two weeks, the ARC publishes a radio hobbyist newsletter that addresses itself to common concerns of hams and CBers.

The Voice of Business

By RICHARD LESHER
President of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON — You might think — if you're sufficiently naive — that Congress would jump at an opportunity to save the U.S. taxpayer $1 billion a year and help our small business people, both at the same time and all without any diminution of public services.

You might think so, but it doesn't work that way. At least not when the required action would violate the first rule of the federal government: Save the bureaucrats first and let the public fend for itself.

The issue is "contracting out." Time after time, it has been proven that private businesses can furnish the same or better service for less cost, in comparison to letting government do the job — 20 percent to 30 percent less, in fact. Thus, there is a general policy that the government should seek a private contractor for as much government work as is practical.

There are roughly four exceptions to this policy:

1. No satisfactory source is available outside the government.
2. The agency involved or another federal agency can provide the same product or service at a lesser cost.
3. Contracting out would disrupt or delay an agency's program.
4. Contracting out would jeopardize national security.

As the wily will immediately recognize, these four exceptions are big enough to drive an outrage through. And there's a lot of traffic of that kind.

For example, "national security" would seem to be the least arguable category. And yet, while government guards are deemed necessary at the Central Intelligence Agency's headquarters, the Pentagon, and the State Department, the government's nuclear testing facility in Nevada has somehow managed to survive with a private guard service for the past 13 years.

But exotic exceptions aside, the real field of battle in this game involves comparative cost estimates. When a private contractor submits a bid for government work, he must calculate all of his costs, including federal and local taxes, wages and fringe benefits, and whatever he hopes to make when all the other expenses are paid.

You can see immediately that a private contractor starts with two disadvantages: He has to pay taxes that a government agency would not have to pay, and he hopes to make a profit, whereas the government makes only losses.

Even so, given an honest contest, the private contractor can usually come out the low bidder. That distresses the bureaucrats — especially the public employee unions or "bargaining groups." If too much work goes to the private bidder, then there will be less need for federal employees.

Well, how does the private contractor still wind up as low bidder? Simple: Federal pay and fringe benefits are so far superior to pay in the private sector that even taxes and profit seldom close the gap. Private actuaries, for example, have calculated that the federal pension system is equal to a generaous 42 percent of an employee's salary. That figure compares to 9.2 percent for the private sector.

Obviously, if the true cost of federal fringes is taken into account, then the government cost for doing a given job will seldom be as low as the private bidder's cost. But who establishes the "official" cost figure for these federal fringe benefits? The federal government, of course. Overall, that figure has been pegged at an unrealistic 14.1 percent of federal pay. It is slated to rise soon to a slightly-less-unrealistic 20.4 percent of federal pay.

But, under an amendment passed hurriedly last year, the Department of Defense is required to use a figure of only 8.4 percent. And let me stress here that we are talking about services like laundry and trash collection, not combat infantry. No service relating directly to military preparedness may be contracted out.

On top of that ridiculously fictitious cost estimate, Congress last year passed a one-year moratorium on any contracting out by Defense where existing federal jobs might be jeopardized. It may be extended.

According to a recent study by the Rand Corporation, the Defense Department alone could — if it wanted to — save $1 billion a year by using private firms to perform work now done by 250,000 civil service employees.

It's enough to make you go to war.

CB Break

CB Static: Readers Air Gripes

Dear Mike: Everyone is upset about how overcrowded Channel 19 is. But I wonder, is it really overcrowded or is it simply hogged by inconsiderate operators? Frankly, I think it's the latter. CB is a great way to help others and get help, but only if there is cooperation and respect. People should use the telephone or another channel if they want to chit-chat. Channel 19 should be kept clear for the really important messages.–J.W. Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania.

Dear CB Static: I just returned from a CB trip to Canada and was really shocked. I thought Canadians were supposed to be much more law-abiding on CB than Americans. They aren't, at least according to what I heard. There was profanity, rudeness and channel-hogging, just like back home. And what really got me was how much anti-Americanism I heard. They tossed carriers on me all the way to Toronto and back, cursing me as a Yankee. It was sure nice to get home.–L.I., Detroit.

Dear Mr. Wendland: I wrote to the FCC about some really strong TV interference that disturbs my whole family. The FCC sent me a pamphlet on how to add devices to my TV to block out the interference. No way! I am not an electrician and am not about to go fiddling with wires inside the TV. It seems the FCC could offer something better than that. It's not my fault some CBer wrecks my viewing.–R.A. Lubbock Realtors To Honor J.B. Rhea At Friday Fete

Lubbock realtors will honor J. B. Rhea, retiring executive vice president of the Lubbock Board of Realtors, with an "Appreciation Day" Friday.

Highlighting the day will be a banquet to be held at 7 p.m. in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

Persons who will be traveling to Lubbock to participate in the event, include: Wallace A. Moritz of San Angelo, president of the Texas Association of Realtors, and his wife Ruth; Erve Luedtke of Austin, executive vice president of the association, and his wife Irma; Mo Terrell of Austin, former president of the Lubbock Board of Realtors, and his wife Wanda.

Family members who will share the evening of honor with Rhea include his wife, Kay, a son, Hud of Roswell, N.M., and a daughter, Ryn Bowers of Houston.

Rhea has served the Lubbock area realtors since 1967 and is credited with "consciencious effort and support of programs directed toward public responsibility." In his 12 years of service the Lubbock Board of Realtors has increased its membership to its present size of more than 900.

Phoenix Carrier To Serve City

PHOENIX, Ariz. (Special) -Sundance Transportation (formerly Whitfield Transportation Inc.), based in Phoenix, has announced it has received temporary approval from the Interstate Commerce Commission to begin service to Amarillo and Lubbock, and to the Hobbs, Lovington and Portales, N.M., area.

Sundance has opened operations in those cities with full terminal facilities, and with company personnel located in Hobbs, Amarillo and Lubbock. Each terminal will have its on-line computer system, offering the shipping public advance notice and tracing from any point in the Sundance system.

The company is a general commodity carrier presently operating in Texas and New Mexico, in addition to Arizona, California, Idaho, Montana and Utah.

Braniff Observing 50th Anniversary

DALLAS (Special) -Braniff International recently commemorated its 50th anniversary of airline service with a log book of 90 billion revenue passenger miles flown.

Since its first flight in June, 1928 (a 116-mile route between Oklahoma City and Tulsa), Braniff has become the 14th largest airline in the world with a 35,000-mile route system throughout the United States mainland and to Hawaii, Mexico, South America and Europe.

From one single-engine, propeller-driven Stinson Detroiter which could accommodate the pilot and four passengers, Braniff's aircraft fleet has grown to 100 jets. The original three-member staff has grown to 12,000.

The airline's log book for its first 50 years also shows a total of 1.8 billion aircraft miles flown and 125 million passengers carried. The period of its greatest growth, in which approximately 75 percent of those totals were accomplished, was during the past 13 years.

Braniff's current operations are now at the annual rate of more than 9 billion revenue passenger miles flown and 11 million passengers carried.

The airline was founded in 1928 by Thomas E. Braniff, an Oklahoma City business and insurance man.

TIPS FROM YOUR BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

HIGHWAY ROBBERY! Don't let it happen when you drive this summer. Although most automotive service stations and repair shops run honest businesses, the highway traveler can be easy prey to the occasional disreputable repairman. The Better Business Bureau advises drivers to take some preventive measurers while long distance driving this summer to avoid being "robbed."

Before going on any long trip you should have your car carefully checked by someone you can trust. This check should include oil and grease levels, fluid levels of brakes, power steering, cooling system, battery and transmission. Fan belts should be checked for tension and wear, battery terminals cleaned and tightened. Check to see that all lights work and inspect and adjust tire pressure, including the spare. If your car passes this pre-trip checkup, chances are you may need nothing more than gas and oil on your trip.

If your car does break down on your trip, there are important things you should do: get the car off the road and out of the flow of traffic. Tie a handkerchief to your car's door, and then raise the hood and turn on your warning flashers.

If you find that you are not able to repair the car yourself, remember that most wrecker services provide little more than battery "jumps," tire changes and towing. They may not be able to deliver parts or even a mechanic, especially if you are a great distance away from a service center. Although the problem might be minor, you may have to settle on being towed to the repair facility. Another important note: some service stations across the country are adopting a policy of "exact change or credit card after dark." This means that if you break down at night, the attendant may not be able to make change for any purpose, including phone calls. Make sure you know of the station's policy before you agree to pay for any services, including towing.

Once you have agreed to have the repair shop fix your car, be sure to stay with the car while the mechanic inspects it. Ask questions; be observant. Occasionally, some unscrupulous repair shop workers have been known to slash tires, cut fan belts, pour chemicals on the generator to make the engine smoke, or even squirt oil to simulate leaks. All of these tricks are designed to make you pay for expensive repairs you did not need before you arrived at the repair facility.

If you must have repairs done, always ask for a written cost estimate that itemizes the parts and labor before any work is started. Specify that no additional repairs are to be done without your approval. Then insist on being given a list of all parts including the number and cost of each and cost of labor. Keep this repair receipt as proof of the work done, in case problems develop later.

If the repairs needed are still covered under your manufacturer's warranty, you should have the work done by an authorized dealer of your make of car. If, however, you are traveling in an area where a dealer is not available, make sure you do the following: get a written statement from the place doing the repairs which indicates the circumstances and necessity for the repairs; obtain an itemized list of parts (description, part number and make) with cost of each, including labor. Present this to your own dealer as soon as possible to see if you can be reimbursed for any of the repairs.

Whether you are planning a road trip this summer or any time of year, it pays to be ready for any type of automobile emergency. Remember too, says the Better Business Bureau, that a pre-trip check by the person with whom you deal regularly is your best assurance against unnecessary breakdowns on the road.

An energy-saving tip from your Better Busines Bureau: If you have a gas burning stove, adjust the flame to the pan size. Be sure the burners are properly adjusted.

ROPE YOUR NECK

NEW YORK (UPI) — A lariat this spring is not just something a cowboy uses to rope a steer or tether his horse. Women are wearing costume jewelry lariats as belts, bracelets and necklaces. One manufacturer's illustrations of what he calls "The Ever-Versatile Lariat" shows one design wrapped twice around the neck, then tied in a knot in front; another wrapped several times around a wrist and looped to fasten; and another draped around the neck and tied in a low V in front.

Tips On Money Management

(EDITOR'S NOTE: MONEY MANAGEMENT TIPS is a weekly column on personal finance prepared and distrubited by the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.)

A small business owner looking for business financing should be prepared to give a loan officer the following information: the purpose of the loan, showing precisely how it will benefit the company; a detailed budget; and a cash flow projection that demonstrates the ability of the borrower to repay on schedule. The cash forecast, indicating expected cash receipts and disbursements, should be based on a level of operations consistent with the budget.

As a rule, the cheapest source of financing for a small business is a commercial bank, which is likely to charge interest at about two percentage points above the prime rate. But commercial banks generally rank the safety of their funds above the rate of return. Commercial finance companies often are willng to make somewhat riskier loans and therefore charge a higher rate of interest.

A business that provides cash value life insurance for its executives may find the insurance policies to be a good source of business loan at a favorable interest rate. Insurance companies also often offer long-term business financing by accepting mortgages.

A small business owner who incurs risks that are not easily insured against may want to consider incorporation as a way of limiting liability. Although there are benefits in incorporating, remember that the IRS says a corporation must act like a corporation, naming officers and keeping minutes and other records.

The sole owner of an incorporated business cannot take as salary more than what the IRS might consider reasonable for the chief executive. Amounts in excess of "reasonable" compensation are likely to be considered "dividends," which would not be deductible by the corporation.

The sole owner of an incorporated business might consider leasing property or lending personal funds to the corporation as a means of getting more personal income from the company while reducing corporate tax liability. However, the lease or loan must serve a legitimate business purpose.

BETTER LIVING THROUGH Improved Housing

By DR. CORA McKOWN and MICHELE LANG

HOUSING IS A MAJOR part of the environment of older people because they tend to spend more time at home and be more socially isolated than others (Loether, 1967). They have more leisure time than ever before, yet they are more dependent on family members and friends for social contacts. More of their activities take place in the home because of restrictions on the elderly, such as failing health, low incomes, and inadequate transportation.

Housing provides the primary setting for older people. According to one estimate "...about 80-90 percent of the time of the average retired person is spent in the domestic environment" (Hassen, 1970). Thus, information is needed concerning ways in which housing can facilitate the fulfillment of the elderly's needs and interests.

Housing is affected by circumstances of supply and demand. The percentage of the United States population aged 65 and over has more than doubled since 1900. When the elderly, with their limited incomes, are concentrated in small areas, the housing market tends to become "soft," with a resulting decrease in sale prices for homes.

The elderly, after striving for and achieving home ownership, become locked-in. They cannot afford to sell their houses, yet their limited incomes, declined physical abilities and uncertain future keep housing maintenance and repair work to a bare minimum. Such circumstances may contribute to the high percentage of substandard housing in rural areas.

Another factor to be considered in housing for the elderly is the importance of design criteria to meet the older persons' physical limitations. Using the physical characteristics of the elderly as a guide, the following needs, adapted from Angell (1972) and Loether (1967), can be established.

Physical Characteristic	Design Need
diminishing vision	Adequate sources of sunlight and artifical light; protect from glare; avoid abrupt changes in levels of illumination
heart and circulatory difficulties	heating/cooling system; freedom from drafts; avoid stairs; reduce and simplify house hold tasks requiring bending, stooping, lifting, and climbing hearing difficulties	amplifying systems for door bells, telephones, radios, and television sets; insulate from noise interference inside and outside home
arthritis, rheumatism	avoid use of stairs and door knobs; lessen and simplify household tasks requiring dexterity and movement susceptibility to accidents	provide handrails and grab-bars; minimize exposure to conditions of slipping, tripping, or falling; protect from electrical shocks

IN A RECENT survey of elderly citizens in the Southwest, the respondents were asked if certain housing conditions or problems existed in their homes, and whether these problems were major or minor. The most frequent major problem was peeling of exterior paint.

Each respondent was asked the questions: Do you feel that your present home fully meets your family's needs as it is now? and Would you like to make some changes in your present housing arrangement? Seventy-seven percent answered that their home met their present needs, while 23 percent wanted to make changes. Of those, most wanted to change their present home, and a few wanted to move to a different house.

The change most often mentioned by the respondents who desired a change was an addition to the house. About half felt they would actually make the changes desired in the next two years, and few would consider applying for a loan to make the changes.

The lack of interest shown by the respondents in changing their home could be based partly on their low expectation of achieving any changes. Also, the respondents may have felt their home was good enough for them in its present condition, or they may have felt that the only way to achieve a change was credit beyond their re-payment ability.

C.B. Gililland President-Elect Of Automotive Service Group

AUSTIN (Special) -C. B. Gililland, owner of Plains Body Works, Lubbock, was chosen president-elect of the 3,400-member Automotive Service Association at the organization's annual convention and trade show held in San Antonio.

Gililland previously served as vice president and chairman of the ASA Autobody Council. He was a leader in forming the Lubbock ASA Autobody Council and will become president of ASA for the 1979-80 term.

Dale Brown, Denton, was installed as president for the 1978-79 term. Bill Lavender of Tulia was installed as a member of the ASA Board of Directors.

The Lubbock Chapter of ASA is jointly sponsoring a pilot project with the Better Business Bureau of the South Plains and the city's new car dealers in which consumer complaints not solved at the consumer-repairman level can be referred to an unbiased committee for binding arbitration. BBB President Malcolm Cleland told ASA conventioneers that complaints have dropped 80 percent since the program was initiated.

THE U.S. AND YOU

William Steif

(Federal agencies offer many services to individuals and groups, but sometimes it's hard to learn about these services or how to benefit from them. This weekly column provides such information.)

WE'VE JSUT BROUGHT in our first crop — onions and radishes.

The onions were fine, but the radishes...well, we had a great crop of radish GREENS.

These are the first returns on a 5-by-7 foot plot. Now we're getting smart, thanks to Robert A. Wearne, an Agriculture Department horticulturist.

You can get smart the same way.

Half the nation's 64 million families have home gardens, from pots indoor through our 35-square-foot plot to as much as a half acre. All the gardeners have one thing in common: They're "for food and fun." That, in fact, is the title of the Agriculture Department's current yearbook, "Gardening for Food and Fun."

We would have done well to follow its admonition about radishes: "Thin small ones to eat and let others grow."

Until recently you could have had the yearbook free by writing your congressman and asking for it. No more, alas. Now it costs $6.50 and you get it by writing to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20402. Enclose a money order or check. Or pick up the book at one of the Government Printing Office's bookstores around the nation.

THERE IS ANOTHER way you can get the information. The book is split into four main sections: Introduction to Gardening, Home Garden Vegetables, Fruit and Nuts, and Home Food Preservation. Each part has been made into a pamphlet and the Agriculture Department says these can be had, free, by writing Consumer Products Information Center, Public Documents Distrbution Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. The same address produces dozens of other pamphlets, most of them for under $1.

Another way of drawing on Uncle Sam for home garden help is to consult your "county agent — 40 percent federally paid, 40 percent state paid, 20 percent county paid — serves each. Look in the phone book under county government for your county agent's number.

The Agriculture Department also works with state agriculture divisions to publish an extraordinary variety of how-to pamphlets that can be useful to home gardeners. Some, like the newsprint "tabloids" published by Kentucky, West Virginia and Mississippi, are free. Some of the slicker ones are free, too; just ask for them at your county agents office.

In Texas the pamphlets are published in both English and Spanish. In Mississippi there's a tendency to focus on local crops like greens, okra, squash and lima beans. In Georgia you can learn about growing red raspberries and wild apples, in Nebraska about "pot gardening." in Vermont about "spot control for hard-to-kill weeds." There are hundreds of these pamphlets, localized for your needs.

BOB WEARNE, WHOSE professional life started in Flathead Couny, Mont., is very high on another Agriculture Department program that began in 1972. This is for "master gardeners" -often retired folks -who are given 50 hours of training by county agents or state extension specialists in return for which they conduct free "garden clinics" at shopping centers and in community buildings. Often, they help county agents by fielding phone calls, too.

Thousands of "master gardeners" are at work in Alaska, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota, Montana, New York, Oregon, Utah, Virginia, Washington and the District of Columbia, and the movement is spreading to other states.

Wearne says a 20-by-30 foot garden can produce $3.50 worth of vegetables over and above the cost of seeds, fertilizer and other necessary equipment. That, of course, doesn't figure in the cost of your labor.

But if it's fun it isn't labor. And in these days of high food prices, the economic payoff is worthwhile.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

So, Who Runs The Store?

IF NEWS EVENTS of the past few days are any indication, the American people may be in for more "government by decree."

In two more or less unrelated actions, President Carter has indicated that if Congress does not "go along" with what he thinks should be done, on certain legislation and a tax on oil, then he will act as he sees fit.

And while we agree that Mr. Carter indeed needs to show some leadership, the two "fer instances" he has selected leave him open to criticism.

THE PRESIDENT stirred the ire of many Congressmen with his announcement that he no longer would feel bound by the so-called "legislative veto" which Congress seeks to exert in some instances.

Laying the groundwork for a possible Constitutional confrontation, the President challenged the provision whereby the House or Senate can adopt a resolution disapproving certain administrative edicts.

The legislative veto is a device built into certain laws which enables Congress to block such presidential proposals as the recent three-way warplane deal for Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia. If Congress adopts a resolution disapproving the action within 30 days of its submission, then technically the White House's hands are supposedly tied. In the case of the planes, no action was taken.

In regard to the Mideast jet fighter deal, both the House and Senate would have had to "veto" the transaction under a provision known as the "two house veto."

On other issues, Congress may effectively override a presidential action merely by either the House or Senate voting disapproval.

Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell told newsmen that had Congress voted against the warplane sales, Carter "would not be bound in our view" to accept the rejection as legally binding.

THE WHITE HOUSE stand drew both criticism and qualified support from Congress.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, saw Carter as inviting a tug of war and said, "I hope the curtain is not going up on another imperial presidency."

Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., on the other hand says he feels "Congress is very jealous about maintaining the present balance," but suggested requiring a two-thirds vote to sustain such a veto.

Later, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill sought to defuse the growing conflict between Congress and the White House by arguing that Congress has gone too far in seeking veto rights over executive branch actions.

ON ANOTHER front, the President in effect threw down another gauntlet to Congress by announcing that he is prepared to raise oil prices through increased import fees unless the House and Senate show a willingness to enact his year-old plan for a tax on domestic oil.

The effect would be more or less the same in both instances—higher gasoline and fuel costs to American motorists and homeowners.

The avowed purpose, of course, is to, as Sen. Henry Jackson put it, "dampen the demand" for these products in an effort to cut down on U.S. reliance on foreign oil.

Currently, imports of foreign oil are responsible for a huge chunk of the U.S. growing trade imbalance, which indirectly is helping fuel inflation.

BY AN UNUSUAL bit of timing, at the same time the White House was announcing its intent on the oil issue, the Energy Department was revealing that the administration was prepared to send Congress a standby gasoline plan, claimed to be "more fair and less subject to abuse" than earlier proposals.

What all of this boils down to, in the final analysis, is that this administration, as those before it, feels that a Big Brother approach is still the best one for U.S. citizens.

While we can see some merit in Mr. Carter's argument that some administrative matters may not be proper subjects for legislative veto—in keeping with a separation of powers—the total impact of White House actions by week's end was that "Do it our way, or we will do it anyway!"

IT WAS JUST such a philosophy on the part of his administration on the Panama Canal giveaway which "turned off" millions of Americans and made them question who really is running the government.

And indirectly, despite spurious arguments to the contrary, it is just such a Big Brother knows best philosophy that helped spark Proposition 13 and the tax revolt.

We can sympathize with President Carter in his current dilemma of being "damned if you do and damned if you don't." On the one hand he is criticized for being weak and vacillating. On the other, he is assailed for taking actions with which millions disagree.

However, to have effective leadership, one must have earned it by making the right decisions, acting quickly and responsibly. This Mr. Carter has failed to do on both the foreign and domestic front. If his moves, and motives, are questioned, there is a reason. It is to this basic problem he should address himself, as well as adding to his Big Brother image.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Let's Face It, Folks, We're Not All 'Equal'

WHEN BRITISH writer and social critic Malcolm Muggeridge turned 75 he wrote: "Two contemporary notions, of progress and of equality, have proven particularly disastrous.

"The former elevates change into being in itself desirable, which, as Euclid says, is absurd, and the latter is equally fallacious."

I agree. Change—merely for change's sake—is ridiculous and so is equality.

Webster's dictionary explains discriminate: "To make a distinction; to distinguish accurately; to use discernment."

THE ARGUMENT OF the egalitarian always claims that everybody is exactly like everybody else. But the argument is quite untrue.

Yes, we do discriminate. But this is not necessarily a hostile act. By any logic, heaven knows, this does not mean that the people are inferior. It merely means they are different. The entire process of natural selection works to make different the thousands of groups and the people in them.

Black people are not exactly like white people. The American Indian is not exactly like the Mexican. Spaniards are not precisely like Swedes. Nor are Eskimos exactly like the residents of Indianapolis. Only a moron would fail to note the difference.

WOMEN ARE NOT exactly like men. No matter what their caste or color, men or women of equal quality are approximately equal. But the same argument can be applied to men and women only by those fierce feminists who smoke cigars and insist that girls will be boys.

In simple truth, democracy is a luxury by-product of economic growth. Without growth, and the wealth from it, the luxury would be absent. Democratic trimmings mean nothing to empty bellies.

History has shown repeatedly that mere weight of numbers does not advance us. Certainly it is fantastic to expect that if five men in a laboratory can produce a given result, 10 will produce twice as much, or 15 three times as much.

The conquest of the atom could not have been achieved without group effort on an enormous scale.

But certainly it would not have been accomplished without personal, individual contributions of the very highest order.

THERE IS IN THIS world such a thing as the genius-spark, although in this day we are discouraged from recognizing it.

We are individuals—not a herd. The individual, struggling against the restrictions of environment, has the vigor, imagination and incentive to get up out of the rut. We advance because we are individuals and in no other way.

"The greatest good for the greatest number," like many slogans, sounds appealing—even liberal. But it can be utterly reactionary.

And, although politically popular, the application of "the greatest good for the greatest number" is largely a matter of opinion.

IT IMPOSES THE will of a current majority no matter how damaging to a minority or individual. Moreover, it typifies how the power of slogans often prevents learning some of the most important truths, endowed with specific rights which could not be limited or taken away.

The task in government, business, science, etc., is to create group harmony and, at the same time, encourage high individual performance with all its legitimate rewards.

One thought is one man—Pasteur, Edison, Jefferson, Franklin—may be worth more to humanity than all the gold mines in the world. And, in this, history is prophecy as revealing as the sun.

Malcolm Muggeridge and Euclid alike are dead right.

Southwest City Resident Urges Action On Taxes

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
I am writing this letter in response to the article on taxes in the June 15th paper.

The city officials should fear a tax revolt. There is no way Mr. Brooks or any other city official can justify a 5 percent tax increase much less a 50 percent or 75 percent one.

The "hubbub" in California, Mr. Brooks, as you expressed is anger. People become angry when their governments act as "blood suckers."

Governments that keep coming back for more and more until their people have nothing left. Wake up Southwest Lubbock. Let's bring this thing under control now!

Tech Ex Expresses Concern Over 'Way Things Going'

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
I would like to take this opportunity to tell you how much I appreciate your columns about the "Sad Situation" at Tech. As you know, Tech is near and dear to my heart, and it has been very distressing to me to see the way things have been going since last fall.

I know that it might seem to some that Football and Basketball are the sole interest of avid Tech supporters. However, such is not the case. I guess that it took the departure of Coach Steve Sloan, and the personal Mackey selection of Rex Dockery as head football coach to get people's attention.

The Ex-Students Association confrontation by the President and the subsequent pressures applied through his office tells me that we are traveling down a dangerous road.

An Ex-Students Association that is the puppet of its College President is a worthless organization. To me the Ex-Students Association is the "voice of the people"...the way the average John and Mary Doe can send back input to their University.

I have been told that our new Ex-Students Executive Director is not the personal selection of our College President, but this will have to be proven to me. I will also have to have it proven to me that our new Athletic Director is not a personal selection of Tech's "Longhorn" head of the Athletic Council, and through him, another "Mackey Man."

It is extremely distressing to me that it has apparently become the Modus Operandi of President Mackey to dispose of all personnel of the present and past Tech regimes for outsiders.

One would have to assume that he has decided that he needs no input or help, either monetary or otherwise, from all past Tech supporters, and so cares nothing about how they might feel.

I have been an avid supporter of Texas Tech since my graduation in 1941. Past President of Texas Tech Ex-Students Assn. 55-56, Charter member of Century Club, of Old Red club, and a Scholarship donor to the Red Raider Club.

It will be a cold day in Lubbock when I continue to send money for these causes that may be spent by one man for what suits his fancy. I also wonder if the administration is thinking about seeking to use some of Stadium Option money for women's athletics by casting doubts about the legality of the agreement. If this be the case, would you not think I would be entitled to my money back on 12 seat options and two Press box options? Thanks again for your articles. They just were not strong enough.

She Asks If Busing Is 'Guarantee' Of Education

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
The question has been asked, "If we do not bus children to achieve better education for all children, what is the alternative?"

Let us examine that question more closely. Are we saying that if a black or brown child is placed in a seat next to a white child, that the "minority child" will automatically gain a better education?

Is the white race so superior that they can deliver this final insult?...Just sit by me and you will be better, like I am! Surely, no one is inferring that it is better or superior to sit by a white child.

The busing issue is much like the old question, "Did you stop beating your wife?" You are guilty, whether you say yes or no.

I must answer the original question by saying that a four-wheeled vehicle will not give us equal opportunity or quality education. The "alternative" that all of us seek will be found in our common concern for the welfare and education of all or children.

We, the citizens of Lubbock, must find real answers, not half truths.

Ace Suggests Look Upward For 'A Different View'

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
Whenever you grow tired of looking at the same old scenery every day—the same houses, trees, streets, and the same neighborhood kids—look up for a change, because there's a whole new world up there. A virtual jungle of steel and wire and poles and insulators striking enough to charm the gravest among us.

However, only a few rods distance from my apartment is a sight which depresses me, and it's this telephone pole with three half-ton transformers lashed to it's frail frame.

It seems unfair! Why, thunder, I can just about hear this poor pole groan from sheer weariness having to support such a heavy burden day after day! And a picture flashes before me of the transformers busting their moorings in a high wind some day!

Aye, maybe I should have stood in bed: A dark cloud is taking shape on the horizon, and I do mean dark, which may well set off a third World War, and more immediately but of equal import there is this local animal problem—stray dogs and cats and an occasional bony horse seemingly on it's last leg.

Health Head Poses Query On 'What Citizens Want?'

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
This is in response to your editorial of Monday, June 19, 1978, concerning understaffing of the Lubbock City Health Department.

May I point out that I mentioned the American Public Health Association's recommendations for health department staff at the board of health meeting as a measure of comparison, and remarked, at the time, that I felt their recommendation unrealistically high?

Lubbock population has doubled in size since there have been any additions in staff or services to the health department. Would the citizens of Lubbock like to return to the 1956 level of fire protection, police protection and education?

The Lubbock health department has remained static while the population, business, parks and recreation and other civic attainments have had rapid growth in the last 25 years. It is readily apparent that preservation and protection of health has had the lowest priority of all local public services.

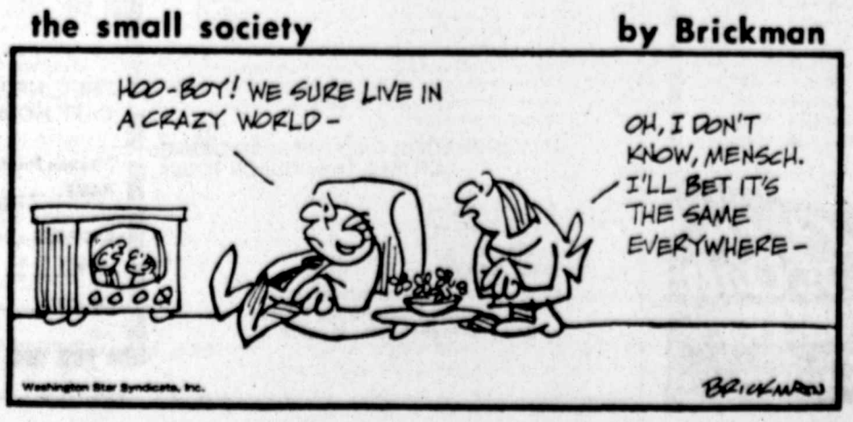

In my short time here, glaring deficiencies in food service sanitation have come to light, as well as lack of other services essential to the health department's goal of protecting and promoting the health of the citizens of Lubbock.

At present there is inadequate staff for enforcement of city health ordinances pertaining to minimum sanitation.

Is this the level of public health service the citizens of Lubbock want?

Director, Lubbock City Health Dept.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Secret's A Flair

NOBODY'S ASKED FOR it, but I have a little advice for international architects: Traveling around the world would be a lot more fun if they'd let their hotels go native.

Not primitive, necessarily. They could still have the luxurious lobbies, rooftop cocktail lounges and modern plumbing most tourists seem to expect. But let them be designed to reflect the local atmosphere.

As a confirmed hotel buff, I find it a letdown to fly 15,000 miles to some exotic city and then wind up in the same glass-and-chrome box I could have stayed in at home. Right down to the identical box of tissues tucked into the bathroom wall.

It all reeks of American know-how. But when I venture into foreign lands I want my reek to have a foreign flair.

In Japan I want to sleep on a "futon" mat in a room with sliding paper walls, a-la-Madame Butterfly. What I got was the same old bed and windows sealed tight to accommodate the near-zero air-conditioning.

TOO LATE I LEARNED about "Ryokans," which are Japanese inns where the maid rolls out your futon on the tatami-covered floor and where the plumbing is strictly native style. (That means the john is a porcelain hole in the floor. This takes a little practice, but once you get over the giggles, you can manage.)

In Hong Kong I want something sinister with a Sidney Greenstreet feeling to it. Wicker furniture, maybe, and old ceiling fans, and an atmosphere of treachery and danger.

The only way you can get that nowadays is to catch an Old Greenstreet movie in Kowloon. I know, because I tried. And I am here to tell you that every big hotel in Hong Kong looks just like every big hotel in Las Vegas or Honolulu. Only maybe newer and shinier.

The rooms are typical, too. Modern everything, including theatrical lighting over the mirror, color TV and nailed-to-the-wall furniture. The only way I could tell I was in a foreign land was to look out the window. If I twisted my neck far enough, I could see a Chinese junk on the river.

EVEN THE FEW HOTELS that have been around a while have been spruced up and "modernized." That means they've torn out the good old stuff and splashed neon and plastic all over the place.

Realists with no romance in their souls say that's what it takes these days to attract the wealthy tourist; that after tramping through temples and cathedrals and museums he wants to relax in surroundings he's used to.

That just shows how much they know. There are hotels around that manage to mix inside plumbing with atmosphere. You have to hunt 'em down, though.

There's the old Coronado del Mar in San Diego, for one. It's just been declared a historical treasure, so maybe they won't tinker with its gingerbread turrets and brass birdcage elevator, rip out the priceless old paneling or jazz up the individuality of the rooms.

THE BOCA RATON HOTEL in Florida is another relic, a pink confection that's managed to hang on to the gold-coast elegance that used to inspire guests to dress for dinner every night. Its dock isn't as busy as it was in the old days, but every now and then a private yacht pulls in with a party of vacationers.

Then there's the Cocoa Palms in Kauai, Hawaii, where you stay in little grass shacks along a lagoon and brush your teeth in a wash basin that's really a giant conch shell with running water. Now that's native.

High on the list of "10 best in the world" is the Grand Hotel in Taipei, Taiwan, which is built like a giant shrine, temple gate and all, and painted a brilliant religious red.

No shopping mall louses up its lobby. Instead, there are massive red pillars, Oriental rugs, carved marble balconies and a double marble staircase that would turn Scarlett O'Hara green.

Upstairs, the halls are as wide as most city streets, and the rooms have real Chinese furniture, private balconies and bathrooms four times the size of mine at home.

NONE OF THIS BUSINESS of an ice machine in the hall "for your convenience," either. The boy who watchdogs your corridor has the cubes at your door before you can hang up the phone.

London is another place where a tourist can have his atmosphere and eat it too. Claridges, the Dorchester, the Brown and the Ritz make you feel, especially at tea time, that the Colonists were out of their minds to cut themselves off from British traditions.

And I hear that "Treetops" in Africa is something pretty special, too. A bamboo hotel on stilts in the jungle strikes me as just right for the "dark continent."

I'll get there one of these days, and if I find they've nailed the bureau to the wall I may just kill myself.

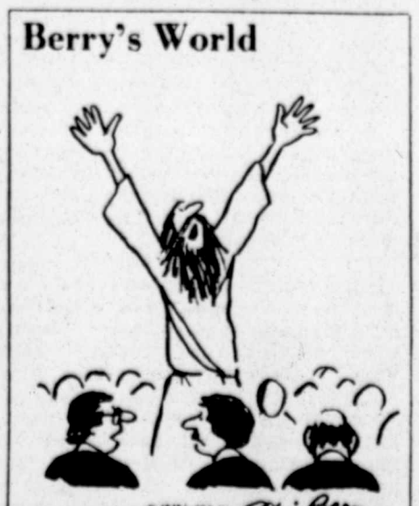

L.M. BOYD:

Q. "IS THERE really such a thing as a white Eskimo?"

A. So it's said. Early in this century, Vilhjalmur Stefansson discovered a group of blond Eskimos on Victoria Island. Descendants of Viking colonists mated to natives, it's thought.

Thrills, Spills Await Skateboard Enthusiasts

THE GANG'S ALL HERE-Left to right, Doug Dixon, 14, son of Mr.and Mrs. Harry Dixon, 2301 55th Street; David Lopez, 14, and Jimmy Lopez, 17, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Lopez of 2836 66th Street.

THERE'S AN ART TO THIS-Rikki Condren, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jackie Condren of 123 Flint, Levelland.

Skilled Skateboarders Place Emphasis On Good Equipment; Wear Safety Gear

IT'S A NOISE THAT sticks with you — rolling steel against concrete — the sound of skateboard wheels clacking against the joints in the track.

Skateboarding has become one of the nation's hottest sports. Kids of all ages can be seen on boards anywhere they can find a stretch of concrete, from drainage ditches, to professional parks, to drained swimming pools.

Lubbock enthusiasts practice at a park on Marshall Avenue, overlooking the new Canyon Lakes project. Owner and manager Manuel Martinez gets as involved with the fun and games as the kids do.

"My son is the youngest out here. He's three," Martinez says, pointing to knee-high Cy. Cy's skateboard is almost as big as he is and he is grinning like a rabbit as he peers from under his helmet.

The equipment is the key to the fancy loops and turns the kids are doing, according to Martinez. "You never saw a kid do a handstand on one of these," he says as he demonstrates an old-model skateboard. Today's equipment is designed specifically for downhill speed or maneuverability on the curves and hills of a park.

"THE STUFF WE USE out here is pretty expensive, but it's made for the hills. All the broken arms I've had out here were on the cheaper equipment," Martinez stresses. Kids aren't allowed on his track unless they wear helmets and he thinks some kind of ordinance should be passed to prevent them from skateboarding anywhere without head protection.

A recent congregation at the park, produced some of the best, according to the manager. The Lopez brothers, Jimmy, 17, and David, 14, receive unabashed admiration from fellow riders.

"That's Jimmy... Yeah, he's the best."

The Lopez boys are "veterans." They have been coming to the park for about nine months and have accumulated an impressive repetoire of jumps, turns and loops. And they are fast enough to make observers step back from the track.

The fast kids — the first string team — spend over $100 apiece on equipment. They don't seem to mind the cost but are very familiar with the care and handling of their equipment.

The riders say it's not a tiring activity, if you're in shape. They don't specify whether being in shape means being as good as they are.

A 14-YEAR-OLD BOY recently wrote to "Dear Abby" saying his father had fallen off his skateboard, broken his nose, and now wouldn't let his son back on the board. "I warned him it wasn't as easy as it looked, but he thought because he once was a good skier he wouldn't have any trouble," the young writer said of his not-so-agile father.

"Hey Manuel...How about a catamaran?" one of the riders yells to Martinez. The man and the young rider sit on their boards with legs locked tightly together and sweep the perimeter of the track as a blurred unit.

"Good one!" "That was great, man!"

The other riders cheer each stunt as if it were the first time they have seen it done. (And it may very well be.) These kids don't seem to have any fear but do have a healthy respect for the pads and helmets that come between them and the unyielding track.

According to the youngest Lopez, you don't think about much while you're on the track. You just do it.

"I like to get radical — just go crazy!"

Good Equipment Can Cost Sizable Sum!

SKATEBOARDS SEEN underfoot these days are a far cry from the original sidewalk surfboards which became so popular in the '60s.

Times were such that you could get away with using discarded skate wheels and scrap lumber to build a passably sturdy board.

But skateboard equipment is a money-making industry, now. Equipment fads come and go as fast as clothing styles change.

As with most hobbies, a person can spend as little or as much as is necessary to fit individual needs. Small-fry and beginners can buy the basics, a board and pads, pretty cheaply at a discount store. But this gear is not suitable to stand up under the wear of track use and the helmets are too small to fit anything but the smallest of children.

The riders at the parks recognize the need for sturdy, well-fitting equipment. This can run into money.

Ready-made skateboards of the type used on the tracks can be purchased for between $45 and $75. This is the route usually taken by beginners.

BUT THE EXPERIENCED riders usually buy a board to suit their needs and buy the wheels and axle units (trucks) separately.

Wheels are precision ball-bearing gizmos which come in and out of style quickly in a fast-paced market. According to one retailer, the kids change their wheels with the fads.

Right now, the wheels to have are "OJs" and the talk around the industry is wooden boards.

A quick survey at an area bicycle shop which stocks a large inventory of skateboard equipment provided the following price list:

Knee pads, a must for any kind of track work, will cost $6.95. Elbow pads sell for $7.95, $8.95 and $9.95 though there is no visible difference between the three.

Wrist guards sell for $12.50 and gloves go for $12.95. Neither of the previously mentioned pieces are used much unless the rider is doing fancy turns which require using hands against concrete for a brace.

Helmets, considered standard by riders, retailers and park owners alike will cost $12.50

THE SKATEBOARD EQUIPMENT business "was real big last summer when the park first opened but has died down since then," according to retailer Jack Edwards. But parents don't want to take their kids all the way across town (the park is off of North University) just to have to turn around and come back, he said.

"If someone would open a park in southwest Lubbock, maybe around Indiana Avenue, they would do very well," Edwards said. Otherwise, the skateboard business will not pick up unless the city builds a park of its own, he added.

"It could be brought up before the parks board," head landscape architect for city parks Walter Heard said on the prospects of a city skateboard park. "I'm not saying we won't have one. But the injuries, even in a controlled situation, do occur," he said. Park officials would probably worry about leaving the city open to lawsuits.

New Concept Used In Church Design

A new concept in church design and construction begins at 5 p.m. today with groundbreaking ceremonies for the new worship center and administration center of St. John Neumann Catholic Church, formerly St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church in Lubbock.

The recently-renamed parish church is moving from its present location at 2305 Main to a site just east of the present St. Elizabeth's School at 22nd Street and Frankford Avenue. The new site is near Twin Lakes Miniature Golf Course.

Bishop Lawrence DeFalco of the Amarillo Diocese will lead the ceremonies along with Rev. Joe James, pastor of the parish.

Local dignitaries planning to attend the ceremony include State Sen. Kent Hance, State Reps. Froy Salinas and Joe Robbins, and Mayor Dirk West or Councilman Alan Henry.

A family picnic will be held following the ceremonies. Games and balloons for children are slated during the picnic.

The new architectural designs for the worship center and administration center of St. John Neumann Catholic Church call for the extensive use of geostructure-earth-covered buildings. The church congregation chose the use of geostructure as an energy-saving device.

Both the worship center and administration center are expected to be completed by the fall of 1979. General contractor is W.G. McMillan, Inc., of Lubbock.

The worship center contains approximately 10,000 square feet and seats 700 persons at a cost of $600,000. The worship center contains a narthex or entrance, nave with pews in a semi-circular pattern, sanctuary or alter and word proclamation area, music ministry area, storage areas, sacristy or vesting area, minister's room for ushers, media loft or projection area, proclamation loft, blessed sacrament chapel, reconciliation rooms, nursery, music minister's room and rest rooms.

The worship center floors are 10 feet below ground level and the wall sections above the ground level have earthen berms pushed up against them to the roofline. There is a 10-foot parapet extension rising out of the earth mound and flowing into a steeple on the southeast corner of the structure.

The administration center contains approximately 4,700 square feet and costs $280,000. It includes a reception area, secretary's office, publications and work room, two priests' offices, counseling room, conference room, kitchen, storage room, fellowship room and restrooms.

It also is slated for completion in the fall of 1979.

The administration center also utilizes geostructure, being totally underground, opening onto a courtyard separating the administration and worship centers.

The administration center will be 10 feet below ground level and features a two-foot earth covering on the roof.

The worship and administration centers form a "U-shaped" structure on three sides of an open courtyard 10 feet below ground level, accessible by either stairs or a shallow ramp.

Construction has already begun on a parish center for the church. The parish center is being built adjacent to the school and contains approximately 12,400 square feet at a cost of $320,000. Construction is expected to be completed this fall.

The parish center contains an auditorium-gymnasium-hall, stage, nursery, snack bar, storage, rest rooms, athletic storage, meeting room, library-office, darkroom, media production area and audio-visual meeting room.

Members of the church chose geostructures for the new parish church not only to reduce rising utility costs, but also to be good stewards of God's natural resources on the earth, according to Leroy Behnke, a staff member at St. Elizabeth's.

The earth-covered church structure in Lubbock is, as far as is known, the only one of its kind in Texas. It is most likely the only one of its size and function in the country, according to Behnke.

Persons contributing their expertise for the church design structure include Steve Baer of Albuquerque, N.M., solar heating and cooling technology; Jay Swayze of Hereford, a pioneer in geostructural design; Richard Boner of Austin, acoustics and a sound system; Ellen Bacigalupa of Santa Fe, N.M., liturgical design; Mel Rimmer of Dallas, lighting; Dr. Dennis Harp of Texas Tech University, television and mass communications; Dr. George Peng of Texas Tech, architectural design; Dr. Ernest Keisling of Texas Tech, energy conservation; Dr. Judson Maynard of Texas Tech, acoustics on pipe organs; Tony Webber of Texas Tech and Dave Glossen of Lubbock, projection technology.

Paul M. Deeley Jr. of Fort Worth is the architect and Drew Bacigalupa of Santa Fe is the liturgical artist.

NEW CHURCH DESIGN—Members of St. John Neumann Catholic Church, formerly St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, are opening a new chapter in the history of church design in Lubbock at 5 p.m. today when they break ground for their new worship and administration centers. The church facilities are utilizing geostructure—the use of earth-coverings—to cut rising utility costs and be good stewards of God's natural resources on the earth. The new parish church is located at 22nd Street and Frankford Avenue, just east of the present St. Elizabeth's School in west Lubbock. (Architect's Model)

Church Tour Slated

A mission tour of four United Methodist institutions for area residents is scheduled Friday and Saturday.

Institutions slated to be toured include McMurry College and Sears Retirement Home, both in Abilene, and the Methodist Children's Home and Boys Ranch, both in Waco.

Area residents will meet on the 14th Street parkbock at 8 a.m. Friday and travel in church vans to Abilene and Waco, where motel reservations have been made.

The group will return to Lubbock about 9 p.m. Saturday after touring the Children's Home and Boys Ranch at Waco.

Teenagers interested in seeing the McMurry College campus are especially invited to participate in the tour, according to the Rev. Billy Wilkinson of Lubbock.

Approximate cost of the tour includes $10 each for transportation, motel and meals. Reservations will be accepted in the Northwest Texas Conference District Superintendent's office, 1415 Ave. M, through Tuesday. A $10 non-refundable deposit is required with each reservation.

Observing 75th Birthday

BOVINA (Special)—The Bovina First Baptist Church will celebrate its 75th anniversary July 1-2 with several activities planned.

A fellowship is planned at 8 p.m. July 1 with some of the former pastors telling about their ministries in Bovina.

July-2 activities include the 11 a.m. morning worship service with guest speaker Rev. Gene Hawkins. He is pastor of the First Southern Baptist Church at Topeka, Kan., and was ordained by the Bovina First Baptist Church.

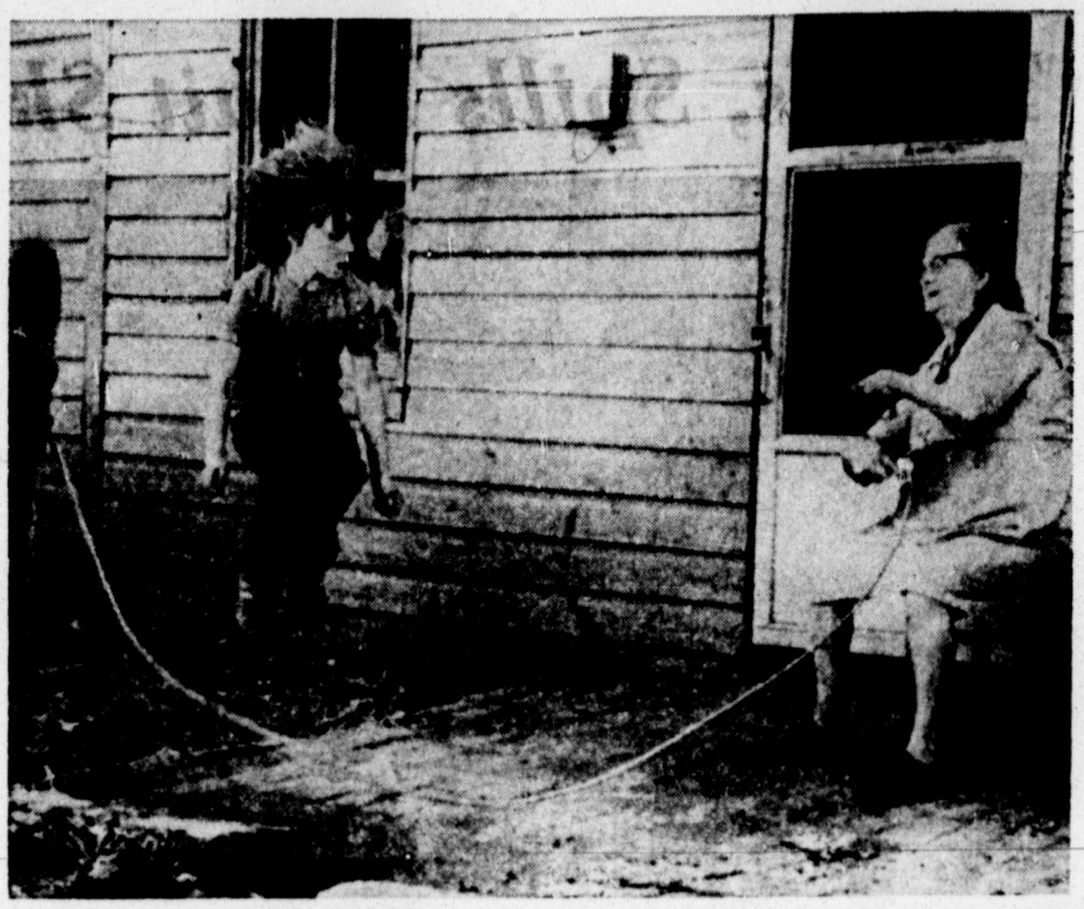

There also will be a noon fellowship meal July 2 followed by a sharing time with former pastors at 2:30 p.m. Grady and Dorothy Sorley, members of the church, will conclude the anniversary observance with a concert at 4:30 p.m. July 2.

Four Bovina residents founded the church in 1903. The present pastor is Rev. Jerry Rockwell.

Youths To Attend Meet

Numerous youths attending Southcrest Baptist Church are planning to attend a Youth Evangelism School and Youth Evangelism Conference at Dallas this week.

The school is being held from Monday through July 1 and the conference is slated Thursday through July 1.

Hong Kong Feng-Shui Experts Called In To Make Crucial Business Decisions

By SUZANNE F. GREEN

HONG KONG (UPI) — Feng-shui is one of those quaint Oriental creeds Westerners often don't take very seriously unless it's translated into that universal language, money.

Feng-shui is a complicated, centuries-old belief in the selection of grave and building sites according to how they face the wind (feng) and water (shui) to harness good spirits.

In this British colony on the fringe of China, multi-million dollar, multinational corporations find it's something to be taken at face value — which could range from a geomancer's fee to the cost of a major project.

Many western businessmen who don't subscribe to its more "superstitious" aspects secretly and sheepishly (and some openly) seek the advise of feng-shui experts in tackling professional and even personal problems.

Choosing a location and auspicious opening date through a feng-shui expert is practically mandatory in Hong Kong. It is a fact Western business managers face realistically with the knowledge they might not find and keep a Chinese staff otherwise.

Chase Asia Ltd., Chase Manhattan's merchant banking arm, recently had a run of bad luck. Having lost four big deals in a row, local employees became concerned with putting the bank's spiritual house in order when a senior executive was killed in an airplane crash.

Executive Director Robert Hurley said they had not consecrated the offices before moving in. But the disaster precipitated enlistment of a feng-shui expert who found two trouble spots: One in Hurley's office and another in the office of one of the managers.

"I don't mind," Hurley said of the solution. "It means I get fresh red flowers every day for my desk to chase away the devils."

The other manager? "He got goldfish. They keep dying, but they're supposed to —keep the devils busy."

The company has not lost a deal since. "It's pruely coincidental as far as I'm concerned," said Hurley.

Hearing Losses No. 1 Disability

CHICAGO (UPI) — What do Art Carney, Nanette Fabray and Johnnie Ray have in common? Besides being celebrities, they've all suffered hearing loss of some kind and they're all active in the Better Hearing Institute's Better Hearing and Speech programs which encourage detection and correction of hearing problems.

"Hearing loss is the nation's number one handicapping disability," says Lawrence M. Posen, BHI advisory board member and president of Beltone Electronics Corp., a leading hearing aid manufacturer. "An estimated 14.5 million Americans suffer from hearing impairments," he said.

In 1941, Josef Stalin succeeded V.M. Molotov as Soviet premier.

Positive Thinking

By Norman Vincent Peale

ARE YOU GETTING fun out of living? Ever hear yourself whistling as you walk down the street? Or are you glum and gloomy? Are you perhaps so full of problems and pressures that you have forgotten how to smile?

A smile costs nothing but gives much. It enriches those who recieve, without making poorer those who give. It takes only a moment, but the memory of it may last forever. No one is so rich or mighty that he can get along without it, and no one is so poor that he can't be made a little richer by it.

So start smiling, for no one needs to lead a life that is meaningless or hopeless. No one needs to settle for being a loser!

An entertainer I know has had a very tough life and has known more real trouble than most folks. But he has also known great success. I'm told that he is a wealthy man. One wonders: Why does he keep on working? Why doesn't he quit and go to some exotic place and relax for the rest of his life? But this man says, "No, I keep on working because I like to work and I like to make people a little happier."

Life is an exciting adventure for a person like that.

I RECEIVE THOUSANDS of letters from people who tell me that for them, life is meaningless, without hope. I tell them about people who have all kinds of difficulties but who are not licked by their troubles. They keep a smile going and so they themselves keep going.

It really isn't all that difficult to enjoy life if you make up your mind to do so. All you have to do is to think right — think in positive terms. Treat your body right by getting plenty of healthful exercise and plenty of rest. And you must also treat your mind right. Use the principles of positive thinking to develop an attitude of joyful expectancy. If you see the future expecting good things, then good things are very likely to come and you will be a happy person. If unhappy things in your life need changing try changing your thinking. You are not going to be free of difficulty but you will be on top of it. Dr. Emmet Fox once urged people to go on a mental diet as well. Resolve that for one week, you will watch every word you speak. You will not say one mean, dishonest, depressing or negative thing for seven days.

ONE OF MY READERS wrote that he was tired of being miserable all the time, and at my suggestion he decided to go on this mental diet. "I tried it one day and failed," he wrote. "I tried again and went two days before I slipped. Again I tried unsuccessfully. But finally I made it. I actually went for seven consecutive days without speaking one mean or negative word."

After sticking to the seven-day mental diet for a full week, this man decided to ease off for a few days. "But, do you know," he wrote, "I found that I just couldn't do it? I found there was a difference inside myself. Not that I was completely changed, but something was different. And since then everything has been different. My mind is at last free of negative thoughts. Now I get real fun out of living and have more energy going for me."

You, too, can enjoy life by relaxing your mind and your body. Just get proper rest and exercise. Rid your mind of negative thoughts. Skip worry and tension; and smile, really smile. You'll find that life can be fun. And don't be surprised if you hear yourself whistling as you walk down the street.

ENJOYING THE SHOW (WAGON) — Not that many people know about the Show Wagon's Sunset Shows, staged free of charge at Maxey Park every Monday and Friday evenings. The Show Wagon offers local entertainment of the family variety, with officials requesting that Lubbockites pack up the kids, pets and a picnic dinner and come on out and enjoy. Sheats Gives Answers To Hard Questions

Pastor Morris Sheats, Senior Minister of Lubbock's Trinity Church, has announced a special evening summer sermon series. "Summer is full-steam ahead at Trinity Church," Sheats commented in announcing the sermon series for the 5:00 p.m. service.

Sheats commented that his recent campaign for Congress had caused him to be more aware of the "real problems" that we are facing in this country. "We are faced with some hard questions that demand hard answers," the minister delcared when asked about what he had learned in the past few months.

The "hard question" to be tackled on Sunday Evening, June 25, will be: "Can our society accept the homosexual lifestyle as normal?" "The proposed Equal Rights Amendment has opened the door for the homosexual and lesbian to receive recognition. This attempted recognition must be faced by the American people," Sheats stated.

"Society must determine what its responsibility is to what the homosexual and lesbian say is their 'right'." Sheats invited the public to examine the question with him. The Trinity Church, an interdenominational church, is located at South Loop 289 and Canton Avenue. The service begins at 5:00 p.m.

'Comedy Of Errors' Kicks Off Dallas Shakespeare Festival

DALLAS (Special) — The Shakespeare Festival of Dallas will open its seventh annual season of Shakespeare at the Fair Park Band Shell on July 5 with a public preview performance of "Comedy of Errors," and July 6 with a public preview performance of "The Tempest," according to Bob Glenn, founder and producer of the Festival.

The official beginning of the Festival will be July 7, when it will present "Comedy of Errors." On July 8, the Festival will present a gala "Salute To Dallas" celebration, including attendance by local governmental and city officials, personalities, and special festivities, and the presentation of "The Tempest."

Rehearsals for both plays are currently underway.

This year's Festival marks the first time in its seven year history that it has offered two comedies in one season. And, according to artistic director Kenneth Frandel, the decision was made for many reasons, but one of them was that "Comedy of Errors" was Shakespeare's first play, and "The Tempest" is believed to be his last play and certainly his last comedy.

"There is great contrast in the two plays," according to Frankel.

Frankel will direct the production of "The Tempest," which he feels is "the essence of theatre, including elements of Shakespeare's former works and containing some of his most stunning imagery and poetry."

Ben Levit, noted New York director, who has served with both the American Shakespeare Theatre in Statford, Connecticut and the McCarter Theatre Company in Princeton, New Jersey, will be directing the Festival production of "Comedy of Errors."

Levit plans to move the setting of the paly to Naples, Italy in the 1930s. Levit finds "Comedy of Errors" has never been a critic's favorite in Shakespeare's repertoire, but feels the very simple plot and well woven comedy to which he plans to add a more sophisticated approach comprise one of Shakespeare's better plays.

"Comedy of Errors" and "The Tempest" will be presented in repertory by the Shakespeare Festival July 5-23, with alternate performances every night except Monday during the three week season.

As in past years, the Festival will be held in the Band Shell at Fair Park, with gates opening at 7 p.m., and the productions beginning each evening at 8:15 p.m. The admission is free, and audiences are encouraged to dress casually and are free to bring their own food and beverages with them.

Last year, the Festival topped all previous attendance records with an estimated attendance of 41,000 people, who attended 16 alternate performances of "Macbeth" and "Much Ado About Nothing."

On Friday and Saturday nights during the Festival, the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts will again prepare inexpensive bag suppers that people may stop by the museum and purchase and eat on the lawn prior to the performance. And this year, something new has been added: The Society For Avantgarde and Neo-impressionist Jazz group will be playing outside of the museum and around the lagoon area for the enjoyment of those who do wish to picnic.

Refreshments, including beer, are sold in the Band Shell.

SUMMER SHAKESPEARE — The Shakespeare Festival of Dallas will once again take over the Band Shell at Fair Park for its seventh annual season of free Shakespeare July 5-23. This year the festival will be presenting two of Shakespeare's comedies, "Comedy Of Errors" and "The Tempest." Admission is free and audiences are encouraged to dress casually and bring their own food and beverages. Gates open at 7 p.m. daily, with productions starting at 8:15 p.m. The two plays are presented in repertory nightly except Mondays.

Welding Rods Used To Create Sculpture

By C.G. McDANIEL
Associated Press Writer

When Orville Hoelscher isn't working in his Godfrey, Ill., body shop, he might be found at home pursuing another career — creating sculpture.

How did an artist end up in the body shop business? For artistic reasons.

"I had a car repaired one time, and it did not suit me," he said in a telephone interview. "I decided it would take someone with artistic talent so that the cars would look like something."

And that's what he has been doing for the past 30 years.

Previously he had worked repairing stained glass church windows and crosses and art glass and as a designer and touchup artist.

All the while, he has been a painter, sculptor and pastel artist.

Hoelscher, 64, is largely self-taught, although he said he first learned to draw from his artistic mother while growing up in Breese, Ill., and has had private tutors. His wife also is an artist.

He says too much formal art instruction can ruin an art student's creativity because the student's expression becomes an extension of the teacher's.

His sculpture involves what Hoelscher says is probably a unique medium. He creates realistic pieces using welding rods.

"This was a medium no one knew anything about as far as realstic sculpture," he said.

The technique is dangerous, he said, because it involves high temperatures formed by acetelyne gas and oxygen and it is sensitive, because the rod has to be touched at just the precise moment to get the desired effect.

Not only is it difficult to control, but it is difficult to see. The artist said that what he sees through the glass of his welding helmet "looks like tapioca boiling on the stove."

Welding rods are made of steel coated with copper, which turns black in the heating process. After the work is finished, Hoelscher burnishes it with a wire brush, then seals it with plastic.

He creates such figures as Mark Twain at the wheel of a river boat, ballet dancers, athletes in action and animals in natural settings. His sculpture sells for $200 to $2,000. He said it is in collections in Germany and Ireland as well as the United States.

This summer, Hoelscher and his wife will take off a couple of months to travel around the country to exhibit and sell their work at art fairs.

Hoelscher laments the amount of material Americans throw away, and uses parts of cars he salvages from his shop to create other sculptures with chrome bumpers and fenders.

Primarily, though, Hoelscher says, "I feel that I have something to say with welded steel. I feel that by getting it out across the United States other people will be able to see what can be done with steel."

More Americans Going Fishing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With more Americans than ever, it's the happy fulfillment of one of mankind's oldest and strongest desires.

It's called "gone fishing."

And this year fishing is where just about one out of four Americans have gone, are going, or hope to go, visiting jillions of fishing holes.

The latest estimate of the Interior Department's Fish and Wildlife Service says that there are some 53.9 million Americans who wet a line often enough to be called fishermen.

Men anglers outnumber women 2.2 to 1. Americans altogether spend 1.3 billion days a year fishing, or at least they did in 1975 when last calculated, says the National Geographic Society.

Ramblin' Rhodes

By Don Rhodes

IN EARLY 1973, I had the good fortune to meet a young man from Houston, Tex., named Jacky Ward who had just started being booked nationally following a hit single called "Big Blue Diamond."

He fell in love with Georgia audiences, and Georgia audiences fell in love with him. He brought to country music a special blend of professionalism, humor and singing talent packaged in a first-rate stage show.

JACKY WARD

Now five years later, Ward is just beginning to realize his full potential. He had setbacks—record companies going bankrupt, band changes and some inferior record releases—which might have discouraged lesser entertainers into leaving the business.

Ward, however, kept his "nice guy" personality, loyality to his fans, faith to himself and a quality stage show. Those ingredients have resulted in national television exposure (including filming the television pilot "Nashville 99"), a fan club organization, appearances in Las Vegas, concert dates with Merle Haggard and Ronnie Milsap and good records being produced by the Mercury Co.

His version of the old rock hit, "A Lover's Question," reached the No. 2 position on national country music chart and also entered some rock charts. A new single, "Three Sheets in the Wind" b/w "I'd Really Love To See You Tonight" with Reba McIntyre already has been well received.

While he still has not become a "household name," Ward has journeyed many miles from the days when he sold and dilevered portable toilets.

Recently he was contacted by telephone in Columbus, Ga., where he was appearing at a club called Al Who's Place.

"GEORGIA WAS THE FIRST state I was booked at out of Nashville, and Savannh and Augusta were the first cities I performed," he said. "I'll always remember you were writing things about me when nobody else would," Ward added.

He continued, "I'm doing more television shows and concerts now and less nightclubs. My latest album is doing well and my single is too, thanks to the backing of Mercury records and my good producer, Jerry Kennedy.

After discussing the days of setbacks and frustrations, he remarked, "You really don't know how good I feel. I just want to be accepted by everybody. I want to be appreciated. I think that's what everybody wants."

His next major step is to move more into being a television actor.

It may take awhile, but knowing the persistence and talent of Ward, he will succeed. When he does, the original Georgia and Texas fans will still be there cheering him on.

WORKING FOR THE LORD: Grand Ole Opry performer Stu Phillips has been studying for a second career—as an Episcopal priest. Friday and Saturday he sings on the Grand Old Opry stage, while on Sunday he is in the pulpet at St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church in the Nashville area.

The 10-year Opry veteran told a reporter," During the week I visit hospitals and do counseling. A lot of my time is spent in the church's outreach programs and working with children."

QUOTED AND NOTED: Another Opry star Loretta Lynn recalls, "I wrote the words to 'Don't Come Home a Drinking' with lovin' on Your Mind' on the back of a shoe box, another of my songs, 'Fist City,' was written on a paper bag."

Berkshire Festival Observing Birthday

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — The Berkshire Theater Festival will celebrate its 50th anniversary this summer with more than 200 performances during its June 28-Aug. season at its three facilities: the Berkshire Playhouse, Unicorn Theater and Proposition Theater.

The Playhouse will have five productions, with emphasis on the theater of 50 years ago: "Let 'em Eat Cake," by George and Ira Gershwin, Sidney Howard's dramatization of the Sinclar Lewis classic "Dodsworth," Lillian Hellman's "The Children's Hour," starring Joanne Woodward and Shirley Knight, a one-man show, "John L. Lewis: Disciple of Discontent," and "Vagabond Stars," by Nahma Sandrow and Allan Albert.

The English botanist John Martyn, born in 1699, wrote several books on systematic botany, the most important being the "Historia Plantarum Rariorum."

Unique Moravian Music Festival Slated

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. (UPI) — The 13th Moravian Music Festival and Seminar, a unique event devoted to the most sophisticated source of early musical development in America, will be held at the Salem College Fine Arts Center through June 25.

Sponsored by the Moravian Church, the earliest Protestant denomination with a current membership of 60,000 in the United States, the festival is organized by the Moravian Music Foundation of Winston-Salem. This year it has more than 300 paying participants from 26 states and six foreign countries and is expected to attract audiences of several thousand to free-of-charge concerts.

The chorus is open to all participants, although some only attend the seminar sessions, but the orchestra and soloists are professional. A comprehensive fee of $125 covers registration, seminars and room and board at Salem College.

The festival was founded by the late Thor Johnson, a Moravian and director of the Cincinnati Symphony. From the beginning the event drew on the rich archives of the Moravian Music Foundation. The archives include 10,000 manuscripts and sheet music of instrumental and sacred choral works written by Moravian composers between 1750 and 1850 or used by Moravian choruses and orchestras. It is considered the world's largest collection of early American music.

The festivals have kindled an interest in early American music around the nation, and the foundation has published 152 modern practical editions of 193 works with over one million copies in circulation, mostly in churches, and issued 12 recordings. Some major symphony orchestras have begun to perform these early works.

"Sacred choral music written by Moravians was the work of amateurs, usually ministers who had music as an avocation," said Mrs. Margaret Kolb, director of development of the foundation. "But the Moravians also performed works of leading 18th century European composers, including Haydn and C.P.E. Bach. However, Moravian musicians such as Jeremiah Dencke, Hann Friedrich Peter and Johannes Herbst were among the finest composers in America at the time."

The Moravian settlement of Salem, now restored, was the major Moravian center in the South and Bethlehem, Pa., was the major Northern settlement. Discovery of a cache of Moravian music in Bethlehem in the 1930s touched off a search that to date has located hundreds of Moravian anthems, duets, solo sacred songs, and occasional instrumental pieces that had been neglected since the church became more secularized in the mid-19th century.

John Nelson, music director of the Indianapolis symphony, is the conductor of this year's festival, whose major choral concerts will be performed in Winston-Salem's Reynolds Auditorium. The schedule includes seven programs of music, lectures, workshops and conferences led by musical authorities, band and trombone choir workshops, and band and orchestral concerts. The Moravians used trombone choirs for outdoor concerts.

ALPINE HIKING

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — Tourists traveling to Austria this summer will be able to choose from 250 different hiking excursions through the Austrian Alps. The routes will be available in book form.

AND SHE'S STILL SINGING TODAY — Songstress Sammi Smith had a hit tune in 1970 when she recorded Kris Kristofferson's "Help Me Make It Through The Night," but she tells A-J staffer Bob Campbell that she never aimed at becoming a star. She only wanted to be a singer. And that's exactly what she has been, from her start at the age of 11 in an Oklahoma bar to a recent appearance at the Red Raider Night Club in Lubbock. In a recent interview, Miss Smith tells Campbell of her hardships, her goals and her likes and dislikes when out on the stage. (Staff Photos by Gary Davis)

Sammi Smith Says Success Result Of 'Accident'

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Sammi Smith never aimed at becoming a star. She only wanted to be a singer.

And from age 11, when she started singing six nights a week in an Oklahoma City bar, she has done nothing else for a living.

"'Help Me Make It Through the Night' was an out-and-out, undisputed accident," she says of her 1970 recording which sold five million copies.

She believed in the then unknown Kris Kristofferson as a songwriter, she explained, and that led her to take his song to Nashville producer Jack Clement.

"I was so mad because everybody was saying, 'He's not commercial,'" she said during a recent Lubbock interview at the Red Raider Night Club. "It really ticked me off.

"We went in to see Clement, and Kris played guitar and I sang."

Of the huge success of the record, she said, "I was happy with the song and happy for Kris. Maybe I was more amazed than anything else. I was a singer. I did it for a living. But I never really imagined myself in that position.

"I don't ever remember starting out to be a star. That really never entered my head. I just always knew I was going to sing."

Her parents divorced when she was a baby, and she grew up a shy child who never had the same interests as her schoolmates.

"I never did zero in on school," she said. "I guess I was always interested in other things. Most of the kids that I went to school with could care less whether Dave Brubeck played the 'Gravy Waltz' or whatever.

"I guess I was an introvert. I didn't care anything about cheerleading or ballgames."

She was a young singer with years of experience and a highly distinctive style when she went to see an Oklahoma City promoter in 1967 and try to get on one of his music tours. At the office when she arrived was Marshall Grant, bass player for Johnny Cash. Promoter Hap Peoples proceeded to tell Grant what a good singer she was.

"Marshall said, 'Give me a tape, and we'll see what we can do,'" she said. "I gave him a tape and forgot about it. Two days later I got a call, and they said John was in Wichita and wanted me to come sing for him. I went and sang for him, and within a week I was in Nashville for Columbia."

Three years and a label change to Mega Records later everyone was as impressed with Sammi Smith as Cash had been when he heard her in Wichita, Kan.

Indeed, that was the Catch 22 of her success. It changed the way most people reacted to her.

"We don't change," she said of entertainers who suddenly become famous. "Everybody else changes.

"Such as people you bummed around with for years when things weren't exactly rosy. You kind of drift apart, and they'll show up at a show somewhere, and if you don't have time to spend every minute with them, then the first remark out of their mouths is, 'Boy, I knew it: too good for your old friends.'

"Which a lot of the time is said half-kiddingly, but it's half-serious."

Sammi long ago rebelled against behaving the way people expected and often apparently wanted her to behave.

"People act really surprised that I would lower myself to pick up a minnow," she said. "They have a preconceived idea of what an entertainer should be, and that's champagne and caviar. But I can't drink, and I hate caviar.

"When I'm not singing, I would rather be out in the desert. I'd rather be digging for rocks, or I'd rather be with my horses, or I would rather be doing a lot of things.

"That's one of my major shortcomings. I don't really have time to do justice to all the things I like to do."

She also makes jewelry, carves, works in ceramics and collects rusty wirecutters.

But her major sideline is working in behalf of Apache Indian children around Globe, Ariz., where she moved this year. She recently staged a benefit, headed by her old friend Cash, for the children in Globe.

"John is a phenomenon," she said. "A hundred years from now, people are going to look back and realize what a tremendous, dynamic, magnetic person he is.

"One of the things about John that stands out more than anything else is that he's real. That sounds like a cliche. It's not. He is. He really cares about Clifton what's-his-name's filling station down in Tennessee."

She moved her home and five children from Albany, Okla., where she raised rodeo bucking bulls.

A hallmark of her career, which has included recordings of "Crazy," "City of New Orleans" and a classic album about the "Class of '45," has been her selection of material.

"I pick songs that I like," she said. "I suppose somebody could come in and hand me a song and say it's a guaranteed stone smash million-seller, but if I didn't like it, I'm damned if I'd want a million of 'em out there."

The opposite of a brassy Las Vegas-type entertainer, she is low-key on stage and likes to banter personably with the audience. The only deceptive thing about her performances, which are marked by her relaxed manner and expert control and timing with the songs, is how important an immediate good response is to her.

"I'm basically a very shy person, and my entire show can be affected if I come out and the crowd is cold at the beginning and they don't react on that first song. Then I'm dead. I'm gone.

"That's the whole idea. Approval. You're doing it for approval. It's always been so easy for me to sing, but to perform — that's another situation."

And even at the dance at the Lubbock nightspot, her two one-hour-sets were shows as much as dances since a third of the people on the floor formed a semi-circle in front of the bandstand to watch her.

"No matter how much anybody talks about how much soul somebody has, how much they get into their music, a truly emotional experience with a song is a rare thing, and when it happens it's a magic thing," she said.

"Sometimes I can sing a song that I sing most every night, and one night it'll just hit me right, and it'll make me cry."

Asked which ones can affect her that way, she said, "Oh, 'You Are So Beautiful' and I guess any of the you done me wrong and left me alone and laying in the gutter flat on my face so I'm gonna kill you blues."

Her unique style of singing, she said, is "probably a subconscious conglomeration of most everybody I've admired."

The Monitor, a prototype armor-clad warship used by the Union Army during the Civil War, almost sank twice while steaming to Chesapeake Bay for its historic encounter with the Merrimack. On its next mission, it sank off Cape Hatteras. Fourteen crewmen were lost.

Art Restorer Fights Ravages Of Time, Man

By DALE SINGER

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The fine hand of Clements L. Robertson is present everywhere at the St. Louis Art Museum, but few visitors realize it — and Robertson likes it that way.

Robertson is the museum's conservator, the man who gives face lifts to works that have fallen victim to time, the elements and man. He is an artist and a scientist, a plastic surgeon and a mind reader, dedicated to making works of art convey what the artist had in mind.

In an attic area he converted into a combination laboratory and studio 15 years ago, Robertson said in an interview his field is an ancient one that has used science to join the modern age.

He fights various enemies — weather and pollution, ultiaviolet light and weapon-wielding vandals, second-rate restorers and clumsy custodians — but the goal is always the same.

"Your greatest contribution to the culture is the prevention of damage before it occurs," he said. "We have a cliche in the field — there's more damage from the hand of man than from the hand of time — and it's a very true statement."

After serving an apprenticeship at the Nelson Gallery of Art in Kansas City, Robertson came to St. Louis in 1963.

He found a museum that burned coal for heat — "Black soot was over everything" — and stored priceless works in a room where the temperature was over 90 and the humidity was under 10 percent. He helped correct some of the worst conditions, then set priorities for what works needed restoration.

To Robertson, there is no routine job, and that's why he won't give advice over the telephone.

"I never give any general tips to people. There are too many things involved to make recommendations. I get calls like that every day, and I tell them if they value it at all, seek professional advice. Tips to people over the phone are taboo."

Typical of the problems presented to Robertson are a hole punched in a canvas, cracking or peeling paint, a buildup of varnish that mutes the true color of a work or the inept attempts of earlier restorers.

"Many times," he said, "you're just astounded at what you've been looking at for all these years, compared with the real beauty underneath."

Robertson's field includes some of what could be considered detective work, but he doesn't like the word. "It isn't a matter of being a detective, just some intelligent observation."

That observation saved the museum embarrassment and money several years ago when tests showed that a painting allegedly done by the Spanish artist Francisco de Zurbaran was actually painted after his death. A similar picture by the real artist sold for $3 million.

Robertson said the still life was painted on top of an older work about 200 years later than Zurbaran's time in the 17th century.

More recently Robertson, who said he has uncovered five major fakes while restoring more than 250 works of art, has worked with statues retrieved after burglaries. Two small bronzes, "Hope" and "Prudence" suffered minor scratches in the thefts.

Robertson said they could be fixed up with a little "wax, spit and polish." Besides, he said, damage to sculpture has never been considered as offensive as damage to paintings.

"With sculpture, you can get by with an arm or a nose knocked off, because it's always been the philosophy that you can exhibit it that way. With pictures, you can't do that, because you destroy the illusion.

"A painting has to be an illusion. If you have even one white speck in the background, your eyes go right to that spot, and it destroys the illusion of color and depth."

Works Of Emporia Newspaper Editor Given To Library

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Tom Mahoney, a New York writer and alumnus, has given the University of Missouri Library a collection of books by or about the late William Allen White, famous Emporia, Kan., newspaper editor.

Oldest of the 50 items, most of them autographed, are 1891 and 1893 prints of White's poetry, the latter a collaboration with Albert Bigelow Paine titled "Rhymes by Two Friends." The newest book is "William Allen White, Maverick on Main Street," a 1975 biography by John DeWitt McKee of New Mexico.

His 1901 novel, "Strategems and Spoils," was dedicated by White "to the Kansas City Star, an honest newspaper," where he wrote editorials before becoming a publisher.

In a copy of his 1909 novel, "A Certain Rich Man," White wrote: "This is my major opus. I worked on it five happy years, rewrote it three times. It has sold about a quarter of a million copies in a dozen editions. It is a picture of the last years of the 19th century and the first decade of the 20th."

In his 1918 book, "In the Heart of a Fool," he wrote: "This was the last novel I wrote. After it was published I turned to history, biography and political easays."

The collection resulted from a 1933 magazine article, "Success and Fame in a Small Town," that Mahoney wrote about White. The Kansas editor termed it "the very nicest piece ever written about me in the same number of words' and sent the writer an inscribed copy of his biography of President Wilson, also some of his later nonfiction works as they appeared.

Mahoney gradually acquired the others, principally at New York book auctions, and until White's death in 1944 sent him any volumes not already signed for his friendly and explanatory inscriptions.

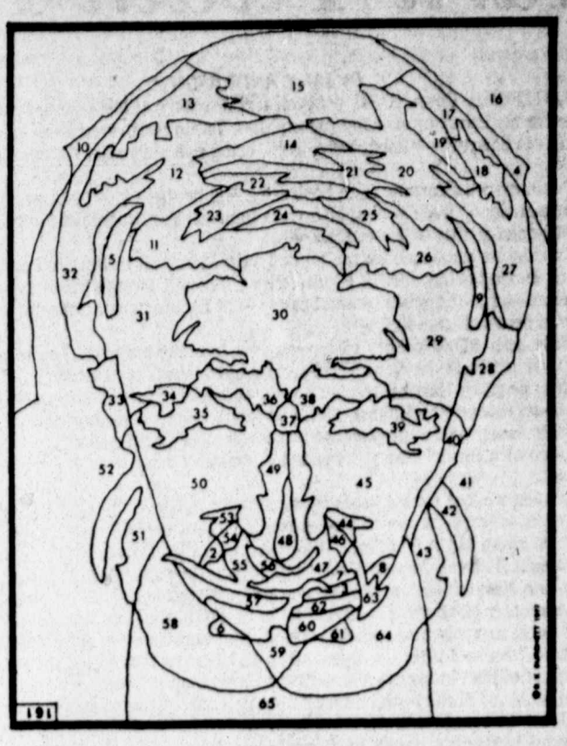

'Name' Stars To Appear In Theater Premiere

EAST HAMPTON, N.Y. (UPI) — Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Dick Cavett, Robert Morse and James Coco are among the stars who will appear at the John Drew Theater of Guild Hall during its July 3-Aug. 26 Straw Hat season.

Fairbanks will appear in the world premiere of "Out on a Limb," a new comedy with music based on the works of James Thurber; Coco in a new Terence McNally comedy, "Bye, Bye Broadway," Morse in Woody Allen's "Play it Again, Sam," and Cavett in Simon Gray's "Otherwise Engaged."

Mark Twain Found Refuge In Hartford Mansion

By JANE ANDERSON

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Seven servants were at his beck and call for 17 years in his Hartford mansion before Mark Twain discovered — as Huck Finn told Tom Sawyer — "Looky here, Tom, being rich ain't what it's cracked up to be."

Twain earned a fortune from book sales. But he spent $100,000 a year in living expenses alone, made several disastrous financial investments and left Hartford debt-ridden in 1891 to live in Europe.

Biographies published by the Mark Twain Memorial in Hartford and by the Mark Twain Society Inc. in Elmira, N.Y., indicate Twain's years in Hartford were among the happiest — and busiest — of his life, which ended in a succession of personal tragedies.

More than 60,000 people each year now tour the mansion Twain built for $120,000 in 1874 in the Nook Farm section of Hartford, then a refuge for writers such as neighbor Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Twain grew up in Hannibal, Mo., and it was there people knew him as yound Sam Clemens, a free spirit whose father died when Sam was 12 and whose encounter with formal education ended at an early age. He was a grade school dropout.

He then worked for his brother's newspaper in the Mississippi River hamlet and later took as his pen name the words, "mark twain," used on local riverboats to make depth soundings. It means "two fathoms deep."

Twain had already been a Mississippi pilot, printer, prospector, private secretary to a Nevada lieutenant governor and a newspaper reporter when he put down roots in Hartford, a thousand miles east of his hometown.

"I never saw any place where morality and huckleberries flourished as they do here," he said after his first visit to Hartford in 1868 to see his publisher, producer of his "Innocents Abroad" and "Roughing It."

He is quoted in the book, "Mark Twain in Hartford," as having written:

"Of all the beautiful towns it has been my fortune to see this is the chief." He admired Hartford's stately mansions, formal lawns and flowerbeds, and the "huge forest trees that cast a shadow like a thundercloud."

"I have had a tip-top time here," he wrote to his future wife, Olivia Langdon of Elmira, N.Y. "Puritans are mighty straight-laced and they won't let me smoke in the parlor, but the Almighty don't make any better people."

Twain and his wife raised their three daughters — Susy, Clara and Jean — in the gabled brick house where Twain fussed and fumed, cracked jokes, socialized extravagantly, played billiards and complained he couldn't work.

Although Twain wrote many of his best known works, including "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," and "A Connecticut Yankee in King James Court" during his years in Hartford, he did most of his writing during summers in Elmira, N.Y.

Twain invited friends, such as Atlantic Monthly editor William Dean Howells, to visit for weeks at a time. Other guests included writer Bret Harte and President Ulysses S. Grant.

He gave frequent dinner parties, serving roast beef or duck, sherry and claret, Nesselrode pudding or ice cream, and creme de menthe. Afterward, the women sipped coffee in the living room while the men stayed at the table for champagne.

Twain loved New England winter storms and had a window built above the dining room fireplace so he could sit at the head of the table and watch the falling snowflakes meet the rising flames.

"The ice storm is an event," he wrote, "a dancing and glancing world of rubies, emeralds, diamonds, sapphires. . . the most intoxicating vision of fire and color, and intolerable and unimaginable splendor that ever any eye has rested upon in this world, or will ever rest upon outside of heaven."

The Hartford Times called the house one of the oddest looking buildings ever designed for a dwelling, if not in the whole country." To Twain, it was the symbol of his self-made success. And he loved the place. Years later, he said:

"To us, our house was not unsentient matter — it had a heart, and a soul, and eyes to see us with; it was of us, and we were in its confidence and lived in its grace and the peace of its benediction... We could not enter it unmoved."

After his daughter, Susy, died in the first floor bedroom of spinal meningitis in 1896 at the age of 24, Twain's wife refused to enter the house again.

"But it made the house dearer to me...it was a holy place and beautiful. The spirits of the dead hallow a house for me," he wrote.

As much as he loved the Hartford house, Twain spent his most productive writing periods in a small secluded hilltop study in Elmira, N.Y., working five hours a day surrounded by roses, ivy and wildflowers. The study is now on the campus of Elmira College.

In "Mark Twain in Elmira," published by the Mark Twain Society Inc. of Elmira, Twain is quoted as having written:

"My study is a snug little octagonal den, with a coalgrate, 6 big windows, one little one and a wide doorway. On hot days I spread the study wide open, anchor my papers down with brickbats and write in the midst of hurricanes."

He wrote between 2,600 and 4,000 words each day, throwing one page after another on the floor. Sometimes the neighborhood children hid in the trees, observing the "quiet zone" around the study, and waited for Twain to call out.

Then they would gather around him as he read aloud the latest adventures of Tom Sawyer, Becky Thatcher, Injun Joe, Aunt Polly, the Widow Douglas and Huckleberry Finn, the rag-tag son of the town drunkard.

"Huckleberry was cordially hated and dreaded by all the mothers of the town, because he was idle and lawless and vulgar and bad — and because all their children admired him so, and delighted in his forbidden society, and wished they dared to be like him," Twain told the mesmerized children.

They loved the stories about Huckleberry — then a slang term in Connecticut for a tramp — and while Twain was writing that famous book, he said, "I shall like it, whether anybody else does or not."

The book was banned in libraries across the nation from Concord, Mass., outside Boston, to as far west as Denver and Omaha. Huck was thought to be a bad example.

But, in Elmira, Twain was revered, easily recognizable smoking a cigar and wearing a white linen suit and Panama hat. All his comings and goings were recorded in the local newspaper, the Elmira Star-Gazette.

The late Frank E. Tripp recalled being assigned as a cub reporter to go to the Elmira train station to meet Twain. When he returned to the paper, he told his editor the author wouldn't talk and wrote a story saying only that Twain was back in town.

After the edition went to press, the editor asked Tripp exactly what he said to Twain.

"I told him that my editor sent me to see him," said Tripp.

"You said 'to see him.' And what did he say?" asked the editor.

"That's nice of your editor. Run along and tell him that you did."

The next edition carried an account of the anecdote with the headline: "Cub sees Twain, but not his joke."

But being famous had its drawbacks, at least in Connecticut.

The Hartford mansion was equipped with a burglar alarm set up so an annunciator in Twain's bathroom would indicate which room the intruder was in. The house was burglarized anyway and the robber, who was caught, made Twain an elaborate carved ship while in jail.

Twain then put up this sign:

"Notice. To the next Burglar.

"There is nothing but plated ware in this house now and henceforth. You will find it in that brass thing in the diningroom over in the corner by the basket of kittens. If you want the basket, put the kittens in the brass thing. Do not make a noise — it disturbs the family. You will find rubbers in the front hall by that thing which has the umbrellas in it, chiffonier, I think they call it, or pergola, or something like that.

"Please close the door when you go away!"

The author was well aware of the disadvantages of wealth. He had Huck Finn tell Tom Sawyer after the boys found the robbers' gold in the cave, being rich is "just worry and worry, and sweat and sweat, and awishing you was dead all the time."

"Tom, I wouldn't ever got into all this trouble if it hadn't 'a' been for that money," Huck said.

The same was true for Twain. He made money. He just didn't know how to spend it wisely.

He lost a fortune investing heavily in a typesetting machine invented by James W. Paige in 1877. It had about 18,000 parts and was the first machine to successfully set, justify and distribute foundry type from a common case manned by a single operator.

But its only commercial appearance was a two-month trial at the Chicago Herald. And during the 10 years it took to perfect, simpler machines were marketed. The investors lost $2 million.

Twain's second financial disaster was the Webster & Co. publishing firm which closed in April 1894, owing more than $200,000. The next year, Twain and his wife embarked on a world lecture tour to pay off their debts.

Of his wife, Twain wrote, "During the nine years we spent in poverty and debt she was always able to reason me out of my despairs and find a bright side to the clouds and make me see it."

After "Livy" died at age 59 in 1903, Twain wrote, "I was richer than any other person in the world and now I am that pauper without peer."

He sold the Hartford mansion only months later and in 1908 built a palatial hilltop house called "Stormfield" for himself and his daughters in Redding, then a rural byway in western Connecticut. The house has since burned down.

On Christmas Eve, 1909, his youngest daughter, Jean, died at Stormfield from an epileptic seizure while taking her morning bath. She was 29.

Twain predicted his own death in 1909 saying, "I came in with Halley's Comet in 1835. It is coming again next year, and I expect to go out with it."

He died at Stormfield of heart disease April 21, 1910, the day after the comet reappeared on its 75-year cycle, and was buried in Woodlawn Cemetery in Elmira, alongside his wife, daughters and a son who died in infancy. His daughter Clara died in 1962 and is buried with the family.

In the book, "Mark Twain in Elmira," a resident recalled a boyhood lark.

He said he watched Twain's burial service from behind a tree and that night he scaled the cemetery fence, plucked several flowers from the grave's blanket of red roses, and then dashed into the darkness with his prize.

Twain would have been pleased.

Mountain Climbing Gains Popularity

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Mountain-climbing is becoming an increasingly popular sport in the Philippines, both for domestic and foreign tourists.

The Department of Tourism has listed a number of mountain peaks in the country's three major island groups of Luzon, Visava and Mindanao where amateur climbers can try their mountaineering skills.

The mountains include the 7,175-foot Mt. Banahaw, about 70 miles east of Manila, also a famous pilgrimage spot during the Lenten holidays, and Mt. Apo, the country's highest peak, towering 10,000 feet, about 500 miles south of Manila.

MIREILLE IN GERMANY

ESSEN, West Germany (UPI) — After a nearly four-year absence from the West German stage scene, French pop singer Mireille Mathieu recently began a concert tour of the republic in Essen. Miss Mathieu, whose tour will carry her to 32 German cities, is accompanied by a band and a dance troupe.

'Last Waltz' Has Something For Moviegoers Who Aren't Rockers

By BRUCE MEYER
United Press International

Rock 'n' roll has been the subject of dozens of movies during the past couple of decades.

A few of them — the Beatles' movies, the Stones' "Gimme Shelter" and the best of the festival movies, "Monterey Pop" and "Woodstock" — have been pretty good. But until this year, all rock movies had been made by and for rock fans.

Now there's one that's for movie fans, too.

It's called "The Last Waltz" and it is director Martin Scorcese's vision of The Band's elaborate farewell appearance with some old friends at San Francisco's Winterland Auditorium on Thanksgiving Day, 1976.

The concert, which included appearances by Bob Dylan, Van Morrison, Eric Clapton, Joni Mitchell, Neil Diamond and a variety of other more or less major rock figures, became an Event. It would have been remembered so even if the only record of it was the superbly recorded and packaged "Last Waltz" LP (Warner Bros.)

But Scorcese's cinematic eye (which has produced films like "Taxi Driver" and "Mean Streets") and all the technological trappings available to the big-budget filmmaker, has translated it ino a very rock 'n' roll-like Instant Legend.

Scorcese has brought the lush clarity and precision of modern American filmmaking into near-perfect mesh with the controlled chaos of rock, particularly in the remarkable sequences filmed separately from the concert, featuring The Band playing "The Weight" with the Staple Singers, "Evangeline" with Emmylou Harris and —in a dreamlike final sequence — the "Last Waltz Theme."

It is — except for a few disturbingly jarring interview segments conducted by Scorcese, who is no interviewer — a truly beautiful film.

But then, having The Band as subject matter surely made it simpler for the director to mine the art from hard rock. Because Rick Danko, Levon Helm, Garth Hudson, Richard Manuel and Robbie Robertson are brimful of musical energy, experience and personal character — and it shows as much in their sculptured faces as it does in their songs.

They have been together for going on 20 years, and though the Waltz was officially their last public appearance together, they have no intention of ending their musical relationship now. They were just tired of the road.

"I was 16 years old when I joined this group," says Robertson, who also produced "The Last Waltz," "and within a few months we had all the guys that are in it now. And over all that time we got our personal rapport together. So as time went on, we weren't dealing with a soap opera, we weren't dealing with personal conflicts, we were all aiming in the same direction.

"We believed in music. We were together for eight years before we ever made a record. We were just interested in learning how to play and — in seasoning ourselves. And I think that —people getting along with one another and being interested in the musical element — that's what has made it work for so long. We got beyond the usual nonsense."

"GREASE" IS THE WORD — And the young movie-goers are flocking to the Fox Theater these days to hear the word ... and the songs. The zany spinoff of the Broadway hit called "Grease," starring John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John, is drawing phenomenal crowds even to the matinee performances. In this scene, Travolta, right, leads the T-Birds through a fantasy dance sequence called "Greased Lightning." Call the theater for show times and ticket prices.

Tips On Preventing Overheating Of Car In Summer Offered

NEW YORK (UPI) — Summer heat and traffic jams can raise your boiling point as well as your cars, but it doesn't have to happen.

Car air-conditioning puts extra stress on daily performance, says an antifreeze-coolant manufacturer.

One preventive measure he recommends: drain the car's cooling system, flush it and refill with fresh anti-freeze-coolant at a 50 percent minimum concentration once a year. This guards against engine boilover by raising the system's boiling point.

The manufacturer also recommends checking the condition of the radiator cap. If it is more than two years old, it should be replaced because it probably has lost its ability to hold pressure securely. If so, the coolant's boiling point is lowered and boilovers on the highway can result.

PRINZE SPECIAL

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — CBS-TV will televise "The Freddie Prinze Story," based on the life of comedian Freddie Prinze, the youthful star of the "Chico and The Man" series who took his own life in Jan. 1977.

COLLECTOR SYSTEM—One of the largest solar energy collector systems in the nation has been installed at Monsanto Co.'s $12 million Environmental Health Laboratory, located near the Washington University Medical School in St. Louis, Mo. The system includes 214 solar panels, covering 2,863 square feet. Approximately one-third of the building's hot water needs will be provided by the system. By using solar energy, Monsanto expects to save an average of $7,500 a year during the next 10 years, compared to the cost of natural gas.

Energy Fight Between Regions Not Expected To Subside Soon

By JOLLY SCHRAM
A-J Correspondent

"The Southwest tends to be the big loser in the national energy sweepstakes," says one observer.

Another says, "Have compassion for the poor Northeast as it will lose fortunes and population in the energy scramble."

Though the outlook varies from the point of view of the speaker, one clear fact emerges: the fight between regions of the U.S. over energy is far from over.

This growing hostility came out clearly in a recent meeting in Austin where energy policies were discussed under the auspices of the Texas Energy Advisory Board.

Saying that the Southwest, especially Texas, is strongly affected by national policies such as the push to convert industrial boilers from natural gas to coal, Dr. Hossein Askari, University of Texas at Austin, stressed, "There is no doubt the Southwest will be the big loser."

In fact, he went further, "The future is not bright if the federal government captures all the 'rent' on the oil and gas" produced in the Southwest in addition to mandating coal for the boilers.

Other viewers also assess damage to the future of the Southwest as a result of: oil and gas from the Southwest selling below world market price; Southwestern industry having to finance the cost of converting to a new fuel; the agriculture of the Southwest using energy intensively; and natural gas will be taken from the Southwest to heat the Northeast.

Another who agreed that the Southwest faces problems in the energy future is Irving Hoch, energy author and Washington, D.C., resident.

With a conversion forced to coal, "The impact will be strongest in the Southwest," agreed Hoch, though the Northeast will receive air pollution as a result of the prevailing wind currents.

The economic damage, however, would be far greater in the Southwest where industry faces a bill of some $20 billion for the conversion, Askari predicted.

Nonetheless, the conversion will be slowed by the legal barriers offered by industry, noted one observer, while another said through environmental protests, conversion to coal-fired boilers will be slowed for the Southwest.

Calling for Southwesteners to understand the plight of the Northeast and asking for action rather than reaction to the Northeastern efforts to obtain fuel supplies, Dr. W. H. Miernyk of West Virginia, said, "There is bitterness in the Northeast now (over energy) like that in the South after the war between the states. The Northeast feels it is being punitively treated" since it's not rich in energy resources.

Add to the stress in the Northeast its current loss in economic status, its deep-seated fears are understandable, said Miernyk. The whole situation will worsen if a recession arrives as the "Northeast will be hardest hit," he predicted.

Another blow the Northeast faces is the reality that the 1980 census will show the net loss of population, so the Northeast will lose some of its present clout in Congress then, Miernyk said.

Thus, the Northeast today is pushing hard to save energy sources through congressional efforts while the Southwest is trying to salvage its energy resources for itself.

Just as the range of feelings show the variance of outlook from one extreme in the Northeast to the other in the Southwest, it seems a certainty that regional conflict over energy can only worsen in upcoming months.

THE ROUSTABOUT

By RAY WESTBROOK

THE INDEPENDENT PETROLEUM Association of America (IPAA) says the entitlements program doesn't entitle anyone to anything.

In recent comments before the Subcommittee on Energy and Power, the association called the Department of Energy (DOE) program "an extraordinarily complex system of direct monetary transfers between the active participants in the program."

The association includes the U.S. government in the active participant category, since the federal government gives itself "entitlements" for production from the Elk Hills (California) reservoir "as if it were a private party producing stripper oil."

The entitlements program, which bears its own form of logic, requires refiners of domestic crude to pay a fee for refining oil in order to equalize conditions for refiners who process higher priced foreign crude.

A new twist which has drawn sharp criticism from IPAA, is a recent proposal by the Economic Regulatory Administration (a DOE bureau) to place entitlements penalties on lower tier crude oil put to certain "non-refining" uses.

IPAA claims this action would cost producers about $6.50 per barrel of lower tier crude used in producing operations, a figure higher than the oil could lawfully be sold for. Price regulations would prevent producers from passing the added costs through.

THE ASSOCIATION said a proposal to regulate crude oil prices through differential entitlements penalties would mean a quantum jump in both regulatory complexity and the concomitant regulatory burden on producers.

Another proposal would use the entitlements program to subsidize the consumption of heavy fuel oil on the East Coast and in Michigan.

IPAA, whose members are largely non-incorporated companies of less than a dozen employes, said that smaller producers who "already have a difficult time understanding the current price control structure, are dumbfounded with this blizzard of proposed changes.

"It is all too evident that ERA (Economic Regulatory Administration) views the production of regulations rather than the production of energy as the solution to our energy problems," IPAA said.

The organization recommends rapid decontrol of oil prices, with total elimination of controls by the May, 1979, date "permitted by law," as well as an interim redesign of the entitlements program "so crude oil supplies are valued properly to refiners."

DEMAND FOR GASOLINE during May was up sharply from the comparable month of 1977, according to an American Petroleum Institute survey.

The organization's Monthly Statistical Report logged a gasoline demand of 7.7 million barrels per day last month, compared to about 7 million barrels daily in the same month of 1977.

API reports gasoline demand for the first five months of this year has averaged 7.2 million barrels per day—3.6 percent higher than the 6.9 million barrels recorded last year from January through May.

The institute found that domestic demand for all petroleum products for May averaged slightly more than 18 million barrels per day. That volume was 6.3 percent highter than the comparable month of 1977.

Total demand for the first five months of the year averaged 19.3 million barrels daily, for an increase of three percent compared to that of 1977.

Imports continued to decline in May, according to API. Foreign oil purchases during the month averaged 7.6 million barrels daily, an 11.4 percent decline from the May, 1977, level of 8.6 million barrels per day.

API said total imports during the first five months of 1978 averaged 7.8 million barrels daily, a 14.2 percent decline from the January-May period last year, when total imports averaged 9.0 million barrels per day.

Company Announces Stock Acquisition

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (Special) -Occidental Petroleum Corp. and Husky Oil Ltd. have announced an agreement for Occidental to acquire 80 percent or more of Husky's common stock.

Occidental plans to make an exchange offer for the Husky common stock under which the Husky shareholders would receive newly issued Occidental preferred shares.

The directors and management of Husky who collectively own approximately 20 percent of Husky common stock have stated their intention to accept the Occidental offer and to recommend its acceptance by the other shareholders.

The offer will be made only by means of a prospectus and will be subject to Canadian and U.S. governmental approvals. It will be contingent upon its acceptance by Husky shareholders tendering at least 80 percent of Husky's common stock.

The two companies stated that they have been exploring ways of combining their resources for some time. Husky owns important reserves of heavy oil in the Lloydminster area of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Offshore Pipeline Begins Production

HOUSTON (Special) -United Gas Pipe Line Co., interstate gas transmission subsidiary of United Energy Resources Inc., has announced it has begun receiving natural gas deliveries into its pipeline system from a newly completed offshore pipeline system in the Gulf of Mexico offshore Louisiana and Texas.

The new 200-mile, $350 million pipeline system is called High Island Offshore System (HIOS), a five-company partnership venture which recently was completed and placed in service, according to John F. Brown, president of United Gas Pipe Line Co.

The HIOS partners include subsidiaries of Michigan Wisconsin Pipe Line Co. of Detroit, Peoples Gas Co. of Chicago, Texas Gas Transmission Corp. of Owensboro, Ky., and Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. of Houston in addition to United Gas Pipe Line Co. Each firm owns a 20 percent interest in HIOS.

United Gas owns and operates an 8,900-mile interstate pipeline system in portions of Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, southern Alabama and northwest Florida. Through sales to other interstate pipeline companies, the firm also helps to serve the eastern half of the United States.

Offshore Rigs In Demand By Gulf Drillers

TULSA, Okla. (Special) -Heavy petroleum exploration and production activity in the Gulf of Mexico has spurred demand for offshore platforms.

But Gulf Coast fabricators are confident they can maintain their brisk pace of platform construction and keep up with demand.

Fabricators' order books are nearly full, according to the Oil & Gas Journal. A spot check of 13 operators showed 35 drilling or production platforms on order or under construction. Three or four times that many operators are active in the outer continental shelf (OCS).

Fabricators don't expect lead times —the period between initial order and platform delivery—to extend to the critical levels of three and four years ago.

Construction yards have been expanded, and new fabricators are entering the market, broadening capacity. The industry is estimated to be able to build 50 to 70 production platforms a year, depending on size.

At present 10 or 12 construction yards are said to be capable of building platforms for the OCS. As recently as four years ago, there were only six.

There's no way to determine exactly how much platform demand is rising. Operators say demand for production platforms is greater than it has been in recent years.

The number of total platforms appears relatively steady. The U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) estimates it approves installation of about 100 structures of all types a year in the gulf, which has been the rate the last five years.

USGS says many of the units are major platforms, defined as those which have space for at least six wells and containing production and separation equipment.

Most orders are for platforms in less than 250 feet of water. But fabricators report demand is increasing for platforms to be used in deeper water.

And orders are increasing for special structures, such as stout, mud-slide platforms for work in unstable areas.

The high demand for platforms stems mainly from a federal leasing program aimed at the gulf.

Operators in 13 OCS sales held since 1973 have leased 1,099 tracts, most of which are off Louisiana and Texas. Two more gulf sales are proposed this year, and two others are planned for 1979.

Thus, platform demand probably will remain strong and may increase.

The USGS estimates 2,251 platforms have been installed on the OCS. Of those, 1,044 are considered major platforms.

Widows currently outnumber widowers in the United States by more than 5 to 1.

Prices Of Gasoline Vary With Dealer

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP) — Customers of Gulf Oil Corp. have been advised there is nothing unusual about several gasoline prices appearing at different service stations at a single traffic intersection.

Besides differences in gasoline cost, Gulf says, a variety of prices may reflect the varying business methods the dealers have adopted to operate their stations.

"The first dealer may opt for low prices and large volume; the second, for higher prices and smaller volume," Gulf reports.

"Another retailer may offer full service, with considerably greater operating costs than a fourth dealer who chooses self service."

Gulf presented its views on gasoline prices in a consumer news digest brochure distributed to its credit card customers and a spokesman said the response was about 100-to-1 favorable.

The brochure said the pump price elected by a dealer will depend to a large extent on how he interprets the needs of his customers and what marketing practices he employes.

"It is interesting to note that, on an average, dealers are setting current gasoline prices 2 to 5 cents below ceiling," Gulf added.

The price of gasoline has been subject to federal price controls since the early 1970s and there also are government-mandated price ceilings establishing the maximum price a dealer may charge.

The ceilings date back to the Arab oil embargo of 1973-74.

Gulf said pump prices also have differed from one retailer to another because of variations in dealer margins which existed in May, 1973.

"If one dealer's margin for a certain grade of gasoline was 8 cents per gallon on that date, he could retain that margin under price controls," Gulf explained.

"If another dealer had a 5-cent per gallon margin on that day for the same grade of gasoline, he could only retain that 5-cent margin. Once controls were in effect, subsequent adjustments were made to the ceiling price to accommodate increased dealer operating costs."

To remain competitive, Gulf said, few dealers have charged the maximum allowable price.

The Gulf brochure also includes an estimated cost breakdown for a typical gallon of regular grade gasoline that carried a national average full service pump price of 63.8 cents last Nov. 1.

The crude oil used in processing the gallon of gasoline cost 28.9 cents or 45.3 percent of the selling price.

The cost of crude just a year earlier, Gulf said, was 24 cents or 40.7 percent of the cost of a gallon of regular grade.

Federal, state, and local taxes represented 19.6 percent of the November gallon. On the national average, the combined taxes total about 12.5 cents a gallon, with Mississippi, Georgia, Hawaii, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and New York also imposing an additional sales tax on gasoline.

In addition to the 4-cent federal tax, state tax rates range from 5 cents in Texas to 11 cents in Connecticut, Delaware, and Washington. Also, 26 states have city, county or transit taxes which range from 0.5 to 4 cents a gallon.

The dealer's margin or markup amounts to 8.5 cents a gallon or 13.3 percent of the selling price. This covers the difference between what the dealer pays for the gasoline and what it sells it for, and, in addition to profit, covers such operating expenses as rent, utilities, and labor.

The combined cost of crude oil transportation, refining, product transportation and product storage accounts for 7.4 cents or 11.6 percent of the selling price.

The final 6.5 cents or 10.2 percent is broken between such marketing costs as credit cards, accounting, advertising, and maintenance at 4.5 cents or 7.1 percent and oil company profits at 2 cents or 3.1 percent of the selling price.

Stamp Display Of Industry Set By Museum

MIDLAND (Special) -"Mini-World of Oil: Petroleum on Postage Stamps" is the theme of a special exhibit at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Midland, which will open July 8 for a two-month vacation time showing.

A noted private collection of almost 100 album pages shows representative postage stamps dealing with many aspects of the petroleum industry. More than 1,800 such stamps have been issued by some 130 member-nations of the Universal Postal Union.

The collection is owned by G. William Schall, St. Louis, Mo., a member of Petroleum Philatelic Society International. It has been loaned to the Midland museum as the society's first member-sponsored exhibition.

PETROPHILL, an organization whose members specialize in collecting oil-related stamps, was organized in 1974 and has some 300 members worldwide. Texas, with 29 members, has more than any other state.

The PETROPHIL stamps will be accompanied by background information on the countries represented and on the stamps themselves.

A special audio-visual presentation, developed by the museum, will point out things to look for on the stamps.

Included in the tiny pieces of stamp art are early oil derricks on the stamps of Brazil, Argentina, Mexico, Venezuela and other South American countries. Many of the modern and colorful stamps issued by nations in Africa, Asia, and the Far East will be shown. The U.S. is represented by several varieties. First-day and other covers from Japan, Ecuador, and Austria will be included.

Frames for the unusual showing will be loaned by the Concho Valley Stamp Club, San Angelo.

New Gas Discovery Gauged By Company

AMARILLO (Special) -A significant discovery of gas from a new zone in the Apple Springs gas field in Trinity County, has been announced by Oil Development Co. of Texas (ODC), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Santa Fe Industries.

ODC and the operator, HNG Oil Co., each own a 50-percent working interest in the discovery.

The new well, in the upper Glen Rose formation, was recently tested to flow 2.66 million cubic feet of gas per day plus 10 barrels of condensate.

A confirmation well has also been completed in the same formation, flowing 2.1 million cubic feet of gas plus 73 barrels of condensate per day.

An earlier well was completed in April, 1977, in the Pettet formation which flowed 1.5 million cubic feet of gas plus four barrels of condensate per day.

While gas and oil represent only 6% of our nation's fossil fuel reserves, they are called upon for 75% of our energy requirements. Competition for this diminishing supply has driven prices higher. Alternate generating fuels can help solve this problem. Your member-owned electric cooperative is cooperating with industry and government leaders to hasten that solution. Meanwhile, the cooperative is exerting its best efforts to insure a dependable supply of power at a value price. It's a 40-year tradition.

Control Of Borers Pays

AMARILLO (Special) -Controlling Southwestern corn borers will pay big dividends, says N.E. Daniels, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station entomologist.

After four years of research at Bushland, the scientist believes the best control involves both cultural and chemical control. Research shows that plowinng corn stubble a month before planting kills most of the larvae and pupae in the field.

Rotating corn with other crops or growing corn on fallow land cuts down on borer damage. Adequate irrigation also greatly reduces borer injury.

The best insecticide treatment that Texas farmers can use in 1978 is two foliar applications of either grandular or liquid Furadan, says Daniels. Treatment should be made about two to three weeks apart starting in late July.

Southwestern corn borers take a big bite out of corn yields. Over a three-year period, Daniels found that girdled and lodged corn yielded 24 bushels per acre less than uninfested corn. Corn that was infested and not lodged yielded 18 bushels per acre less than corn that was not infested with borers.

"These were 27 and 21 percent decreases in yield," Daniels said. "Good corn borer control program will pay big dividends."

The researcher has been determining the effect of tillage and crop rotation on borer development for several years. In 1977 he counted borer larvae, pupae, and adults in a corn field from March through July 15.

Part of the field was sweep plowed on May 12 and the rest left unplowed. On both fields larvae started changing to pupae after May 12 and a few adults emerged on May 27.

By May 31, 70 percent of the pupae developed into adults on the unplowed area. On tilled land only 30 percent of the pupae lived and changed to adults.

Daniels also observed borer infestations on two fields that were side by side. One field was fallow in 1976 and the other had produced corn.

In both fields 80 percent of the corn plants were infested with southwestern corn borers. Forty-three percent of the stalks were girdled on fallow land, while 49 percent were girdled where corn had been grown the year before.

Difference in lodging between fields was greater. On fallow land only five percent of the plants lodged, compared with 17 percent where corn had been grown the year before.

The researcher planted corn for insecticidal research on April 25 at 25,000 plants per acre. The corn was irrigated and watered four times in the growing season.

Grandular formulations of Furadan and Lorsban at one pound per acre active ingredient applied to corn on July 26 and Aug. 16 were compared with untreated areas. Some areas were treated on both dates with a total of two pounds per acre of the insecticides.

At harvest, untreated corn was 67 percent infested, 13 percent lodged, and yielded 93 bushels per acre.

With two applications of grandular Furadan corn was 17 percent infested with borers, did not lodge and yielded 112 bushels per acre.

Most of the control came from the July 26 application. After one application of Furadan on that date, corn yielded 107 bushels per acre. Single applications on Aug. 16 did not have much affect on borers or corn yield.

Spray applications of Furadan, Lorsban and Azodrin made at the same two dates gave control equal to grandular applications. Two applications of Azodrin gave the best control and reduced borer infestation from 83 to 13 percent, said the entomologist.

Daniels pointed out that farmers will have three good insecticides for southwestern corn borer control as soon as the Environmental Protection Agency issues labels for Azodrin and Lorsban.

However, for this season, two applications of either liquid or grandular formulations of Furadan are the most effective insecticidal treatments labeled in Texas, he said.

Outside of Texas only the grandular formulation of Furadan is labeled. The first application should be made at silking in late July and another two to three weeks later.

In another study, Daniels found that the number of egg masses on corn plants is a poor method of timing insecticide application.

On untreated areas in his insecticidal spray studies, the percent of plants infested with eggs varied from six to 22 during the period from July 22 to Aug. 25. At the same time percentage of corn stalks with holds from borers increased from 14 to 52.

Two sprays of Azodrin controlled borers enough so that only 12 percent of the plants had borer holes by Aug. 25.

Daniels believes that the first insecticide treatment should be made when second generation boers start hatching and have invaded no more than one to two percent of the corn plant.

The first step in a good southwestern corn borer control program is rotating corn with other crops, or growing it on fallow land, advises the entomologist.

COUNTY AGENT'S REPORT

BY KEN COOK
Lubbock County Agent

ONE OF THE BEST WAYS TO PROTECT your vegetables from insect injury is to recognize symptoms of early feeding.

The tender, succulent leaves of young vegetables are very attractive to insects. Insect feeding on seedling and transplants can severely stunt early growth.

Recognition of early signs of such feeding will help the gardener determine what insects look for and, once the insect is identified, to take prompt and correct control measures.

Some insects, either through coloration or size, can hide from the keenest eye. The tomato hornworm, for example, may chew one or two leaves from a tomato plant before it is noticed.

Left undetected, it can consume half of a young plant overnight.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE IS THRIPS, which are difficult to see without a magnifying glass. Early feeding by thrips is usually signaled by stunting and distortion of new leaves emerging from the center of the plant. Early detection and control of thrips is vital to assure optimum growth and productivity of the plant.

The ability to diagnose feeding patterns of various vegetable insects is important, especially to new gardners who may not have learned to identify the various insects that will feed on their vegetables. Being able to identify early damage provides clues as to what insects gardeners should be looking for.

When the stem of a newly emerged bean seedling or recently transplanted tomato has been cut off about one-half to one inch above the ground, the gardener knows that a cutworm is lurking on the soil near the base of the plant. Cutworms are chewing insects which hide in the soil near the surface.

Small pinholes in the leaves of young seedlings are usually caused by beetles. Fleabeetles chew small holes in radish foliage and the leaves of newly transplanted tomatoes, peppers, and eggplants. If allowed to go uncontrolled, they can severely sap the strength of these young plants by destroying the leaf area.

THE IMPORTED CABBAGEWORM, the cabbage looper and other worms signal their activity by chewing small to large single holes in the outer leaves of the cabbage, broccoil and related crops.

It is advisable to initiate control measures when this injury is first seen. These worms will move toward the center growth of the developing cabbage head where they will be protected from insecticides by the cupped head leaves.

Abnormal dwarfing of tomato plants and stunting of the terminal growth, accompanied by curling of the leaves and purple coloration of leaf veins indicate the presence of curly top virus disease. This virus is transmitted to young tomato plants by a leafhopper.

It is always a good idea in this area to plant more tomatoes than are needed so that the few that are lost early from virus will not wipe out the entire production. Insecticide controls for this leafhopper which transmits viruses are not usually effective because the leafhopper inject the virus into the plants before they are killed by the insecticide.

Boost In Minimum Farm Wage Eyed

DALLAS (AP) — The U.S. Department of Labor, contending that employment of non-migrant foreign nationals in Texas has an adverse effect on the wages and employment of U.S. workers, has proposed that employers be required to pay the aliens a minimum wage of $2.97 an hour.

U.S. farm workers working for an employer who also uses temporary aliens would also receive the "adverse effect wage rate," according to the proposed regulation. The present federal minimum wage is $2.65 an hour.

The proposed rule was published in the Federal Register on May 30.

It indicates that without an adverse effect wage rate, the wages of U.S. workers in Texas will continue to be adversely affected.

The adverse effect rate is the wage an employer must first offer U.S. workers, then foreign workers as well, to become eligible for a labor certification to temporarily hire foreign workers.

Labor Department officials in Dallas explained that U.S. citizens have priority if they apply for the affected jobs. They not only receive the higher wage, but housing and other benefits are provided during their period of employment.

In issuing the proposed regulation, the Labor Department referred to a number of compliance reviews conducted in the Presidio Valley last year by the department's wage and hour office in El Paso.

Those reviews indicated that a number of agricultural employers covered by the Fair Labor Standads Act had paid some employees less than the minimum wage. The Labor Department has suits pending against five of the employers.

Additionally, witnesses at a public hearing held in San Antonio in May 1977 testified that some agricultural employers in southern Texas hired illegal alien workers at rates less than the minimum wage.

The Labor Department sets adverse wage rates annually for agricultural employment in the six New England states, for New York, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia and for employment in the sugar cane industry in Florida.

The fifth longest river system in North America is the Yukon River, which is 1,979 miles long.

STORAGE CRUNCH EASED -Wheat harvested in Kansas this summer is unlikely to face the storage crunch of past harvests. Increased exports, a smaller crop and unprecedented construction of on-farm storage bins have eased the situation. But some country elevators, including the one in Barber where this wheat is being harvested, could experience storage problems because of lack of railroad hopper cars. (AP Laserphoto)

Texas Crop Outlook Brightens

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Except for a drougth east-west strip through Central Texas, the state's agricultural picture remains fairly stable.

The dry corridor starts in the far west and extends to East and Northeast Texas, said Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Grazing conditions are deteriorating fast, hay cuttings are skimpier than usual and field crop growth is slowing. However, livestock are holding up well, and marketing is steady.

Almost all peach crop reports describe bountiful production and favorable prices. Reports also are good for pecans, although some areas are suffering insect damage. Small grain yields in northern areas are down because of earlier dry weather.

District Extension agents report the following specific conditions:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture is adequate. Wheat is reaching maturity, corn is progressing, but cotton and sorghum are behind schedule due to late rains and replanting. Sugar beets are doing well, and a second hay cutting is underway. Ranges and pastures are improving rapidly and cattle are in good shape. Markets softened on all classes last week.

SOUTH PLAINS: Ranges and cattle are in good condition, thanks to recent rains. Some old cotton has been damaged by hail and rain, but later cotton is up to a good stand. Sorghum, corn, sugar beets and vegetables are progressing.

ROLLING PLAINS: Soil moisture is adequate. Earlier dry weather is now causing puny, small grain yields. Much has been grazed out or plowed under. Second hay cuttings continue. Cotton is being planted or replanted for the first to third times. Early sorghum is growing well, and more planting is under way. Pecan and fruit trees show promise, although case bearers are causing problems in pecans. Pastures and cattle are in average to above average condition.

COTTON OFFICIALS ARE OPTIMISTIC about prospects for full registration of Dimilin.

The insect growth regulator is considered a promising new weapon against the boll weevil, cotton leaf perforator, and several other insects.

A positive step toward Dimilin's full registration came earlier this month when the Environmental Protection Agency approved a cotton experimental use permit with a temporary tolerance of 0.2 parts per million on cottonseed.

Establishment of a seed tolerance had been held up since 1976 to reexamine safety features.

THE EPA'S LATEST ACTION WILL ALLOW further testing this year on up to 2,590 acres in 12 states — including Texas — without interfering with regular disposition of the seed.

EPA officials have assured representatives of the National Cotton Council, the USDA, and Thompson-Hayward Chemical Co., producers of the product, that procedures on Dimilin's full registration are now receiving top priority.

Target date for a final EPA decision has been moved up to Aug. 15, several months earlier than previously scheduled.

DIMILIN'S AVAILABILITY WOULD FURTHER assure success of the boll weevil eradication trial now underway in Virgina and North Carolina, says Lon Mann, president of the Cotton Council.

If the trial is successful, the eradication effort eventually would be expanded into a beltwide undertaking.

Mann pointed out that the new chemical fits well into pest management programs, is easy on beneficial insects, and is non-persistent in the environment.

"We are greatly encouraged by EPA's actions in speeding the registration process for this highly promising product for cotton producers," Mann said. "All the test results I've seen indicate that Dimilin is extremely effective with very low application rates.

HOW MUCH IS 0.2 MILLIGRAMS OF COTTON dust per cubic meter of air?

This is the permissible level in yarn production under a standard promulgated by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

Cotton Inc. officials say it is roughly equivalent to about two grains of salt per cubic meter. This level, they add, is frequently surpassed in outside air, or is brought into the plant in workers' clothes.

Stringent regulation would only make sense if workers could be assured that their health would be protected more effectively. This, Cotton Inc. officials say, has not yet been esfablished by research scientists.

Moreover, they add, it is not clear at this point that existing air handling equipment is capable of lowering dust content to the proposed level.

Soviet Farm Trouble: More Than Just Weather

By CHARLES M. MADIGAN

KIEV, The Ukraine, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — Boris Alexandrovich Runov waved his hands as he lectured the Western reporters riding with him on the Aeroflot plane far above the wheatfields of the Ukraine.

"You want to criticize farmers here, then let me tell you this," he said. "You aren't down there trying to grow the food you are putting in your mouth. Before you criticize farmers, think about the food in your mouth."

Runov is deputy minister of agriculture for the Soviet Union, and he knows all about Western press criticism of Soviet agriculture. Ask him what the Soviet Union wants from the United States to improve its farming.

"I'll tell you what the Soviet Union needs. I'll tell you what we need." There is a pregnant pause as he focuses a set of steel blue eyes on you.

"We need your weather."

To be sure, weather is one of the big headaches plaguing Soviet agriculture. It doesn't rain when it should, and it rains when it shouldn't. It's too cold, too hot, too dry and too wet all in the same season.

But it is far from the only problem the Soviet Union faces, and will continue to face as it battles to improve the average diet and decrease dependence on foreign imports of grains.

Financially, soviet agriculture had five boom years between 1970 and 1975 during which annual capital investment climbed by 9.6 per cent a year. The increase has been smaller recently.

In 1977, capital investment in farming totaled $45.4 billion. That is $1.1 billion over the 1976 figure.

Much of the money went toward constructing and rebuilding livestock facilities. Another huge chunk went into a plan to make poultry the most available meat in the Soviet marketplace.

The results are evident in food consumption figures. Per capita meat consumption reached 142.5 pounds in 1977, up 5 pounds from 1976.

As impressive as the figures may seem, they are overshadowed by thoughts of what could have been during 1978.

The graim crop flopped last year, forcing the Soviet Union to import wheat, corn and soybeans from Australia, Canada and the United States to meet its projections.

The vegetable crop also was down last year, 23 million tons — 8 per cent below the good crop of 1976 and four million tons below the plan.

And for the fourth year in a row, the potato crop was disappointing. It totaled 83 million tons, almost 18 million tons below the plan for an item that is a staple of the Soviet diet.

In many cases, the setbacks could be directly traced to weather. In other cases, the problem can be traced to a central planning system that is so rigid it cannot cope with the fluidity demanded of modern agriculture.

And the system has gremlins that are unique to Soviet agriculture, the kinds of inefficiency that would infuriate an American crop grower.

Fletcher Pope Jr., a specialist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, outlined some of the difficulties in a "Review of 1977 and Outlook for 1978" updated in April.

"Every year, the Soviets scrap 12 to 13 percent of their tractor fleet, suggesting an average life expectancy for a Soviet tractor of around eight years," Pope wrote.

"The agricultural sector receives more than 350,000 new tractors annually, but around 300,000 tractors are discarded, sharply reducing the possible increases in the size of the tractor park."

Pope said fertilizers are not of the proper mix, which means the crop is not as large as it could be. In addition, "the Soviets estimate that losses amount to 10 to 12 per cent of production between the producing plant and the field.

"This would be around twice as high as eutimates of losses in U.S. agriculture." Soviet planners are trying to cope with that problem by investing $3.02 billion in storage facilities over the next five years.

For the time being, the Soviet Union appears to be mounting a scattergun-type approach to solving the problems.

Runov outlined some of the plans, which included:

— The rapid development of poultry production. Poultry is considered much more economical because it takes less grain, and less time, to grow a chicken than it does a bull.

— Intensive research on new varieties of grain. Western specialists have said the Soviet Union has had success in adapting various grains to fit difficult weather conditions.

— Heavy capital investment in opening new lands to agriculture, including the nonblack soil zones in the European parts of Russia. Much of the investment will be used for drainage.

San Jose Mission Founded in 1720

your National Parks Right Around Home

by Ben Moffett

THE SPANISH MISSIONS were frontier institutions that helped Spain spread its influence over two American continents.

The chief function of the mission was to convert the natives, but these outposts on the frontier were much more than churches. Located an ocean away from Spain, the missions were virtually self-sufficient communities that included granaries, workshop and dwellings for Indian and soldier, all often surrounded by a fortified wall. Outside the compounds were farms and ranches.

Nowhere can there be seen a better example of the early Spanish mission in America than in San Antonio, Texas, where San Jose Mission, founded more than 250 years ago by Fray Antonio Margil de Jesus, continues to function as an active church.

In 1941, Congress designated Mission San Jose as a National Historic Site, although unlike most such sites, it is not administered by the National Park Service. NPS does serve in an advisory capacity but administration is a cooperative endeavour of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept., the Archdiocese of San Antonio, the San Antonio Conservation Society and Bexar County.

ACTUALLY SAN JOSE is one of four missions within a few miles of each other that are open to the public and all can be toured by the public. For the four mission tour, the price of a ticket is $1 for adults, 25 cents for children. For those who have time to see only San Jose, the price is 50 cents and 25 cents.

The four missions — San Jose, Concepcion, San Juan and Espada — and have outstanding historical and architectural value. San Jose and Concepcion are among the finest example of Mexican Baroque architecture in the United States.

Missions San Juan and Espada have simpler structural designs and are less ornate. Yet they have beautiful facades, each of which is topped by unusual double-tiered belfries.

There is a self-conducted tour trail through the San Jose complex, which contains some 25 points of interest. One of the most popular for visitors is Rosa's Window, considered to be one of the finest pieces of Spanish colonial ornamentation sculptured in this country.

OTHER ATTRACTIONS on the tour include an old grist mill with a turbine style horizontal water wheel and a winding stairway made of hand-hewn logs leading to the belfry and choir loft.

Masses are held daily at 7 p.m. in the chapel, Saturday evening at 5:30 and Sunday at 9 and 10a:30 a.m., noon and 5:30 p.m. in the church.

As facinating as the missions is the Espada Ditch and Aqueduct which carries water from the San Antonio River downstream and over the river. Now an historic landmark, the aqueduct, about a mile north of Espada Mission, was a means of irrigating the mission farm.

There is a fifth mission in the city, San Antonio de Valero, that is also open to visitors. Most Americans know it by another name, The Alamo, and it is under the care of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas.

Visitors to San Antonio who hope to take a close look at the missions should plan to spend a full day.

IF YOU ARE planning to visit a National Park Service area on you vacation, write the agency at P.O. Box 728, Room P-4, Santa Fe, N.M. 87501. You'll be sent a free brochure that lists NPS areas within an easy drive of your home and charts the facilities and services available at each.

Wizard Of Ivories Turns To Vocalizing

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER
United Press International

Occasionally an artist will start his career as an instrumentalist and then switch successfully to singing.

An outstanding example was Nat Cole. He started out as a pianist with a jazz group, the Nat King Cole Trio. One night he was compelled to fill in as a soloist and became an overnight sensation with his velvety voice.

Don Drumm could be another example of pianist turned singer.

Drumm is a wizard on the keyboard. A few years ago he drew appreciative crowds to cocktail bars in various New York hotels and probably could have found a permanent niche in this type of entertainment.

He also learned to pick a guitar and that perhaps urged him to accompany himself as vocalist.

Not so long ago Drumm had a hit in "Bedroom Eyes," which appeared on the Top 20 charts of Billboard, Cash Box and Record World.

Drumm since has put together 10 tunes on an album appropriately labeled "Bedroom Eyes" (Churchill CR67241).

Half of the songs were composed by Ray Hillburn, including "Bedroom Eyes." Two other numbers in this grouping are breaking out as a single, "Just Another Rhinestone," backed by "If Her Love Was A Window."

Although Drumm is something of a city boy, his vocals are pure country. He has good nasal sonority that is needed to embellish the rural rhythms.

"Just Another Rhinestone" seems on first hearing to be a potential hit. It's a catchy tune that is ideally suited to Drumm's vocal style.

Drumm concludes this album with one of his own compositions, "You'd Be Beautiful (in a Children's Book)."

"Fantasy" by Mac Davis (Columbia 35284) is a fine album of country singing with a big band sound.

Davis has a good change of pace on rhythms, moving an upbeat song with infectious vitality and softly handling the lyrics on ballad-type tunes.

In addition to the title tune, the album includes "Music In My Life," "Shee Moe Foe," "For No Reason at All," "Melting in the Moonlight" and "If There Were Only Time for Love."

Davis is backed by an excellent rhythm section.

And for those who demand the very best in country music there is "Bold and New" by The Earl Scruggs Review (Columbia 35319).

This country quintet, which defies description, has come forth with 10 songs, most of them pitched on love and its side-effects.

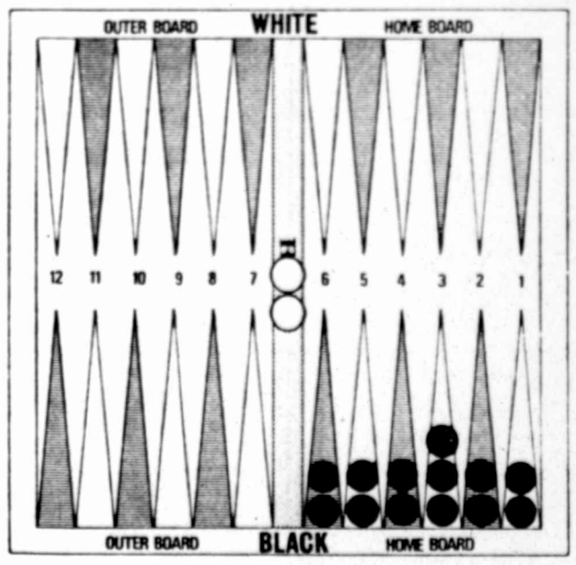

The Scruggs — Earl, Randy, Gary and Steve — and Taylor Rhodes are joined by Waylon Jennings, Toni Wine, Bobby Emmons, Eddie Anderson and Jody Maphis.

Although Gary Scruggs is up front most of the time on vocals, this is a team effort with Earl Scruggs sometimes enhancing the scene with his fancy banjo picking.

Among the numbers are "Games People Play," "Louisiana Lady," "That's Alright Mama," "Our Love Is Home Grown," "Found Myself a New Love" and "Someone Like You."

Backgammon

Black rolls 5-1. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

If you think this is the same problem you saw last week, you are almost right —there is only one subtle difference. Instead of having three men on his 4-point, Black now has three men on his 3-point. The problem is the same: If Black can avoid leaving a blot, he should win the game. Therefore, should he use 5-1 to clear his 5-point or his 6-point?

If Black clears his 5-point by bearing off a man and moving the other to the 4-point, he will have to leave a blot at his next turn if he rolls 6-6, 5-5, 4-4, 6-1, or 5-1, or a total of seven combinations out of 36.

If Black clears his 6-point by bringing a man to his 1-point and one to his 5-point, he will have to leave a blot at his next turn if he rolls 6-6, 5-5, 4-4, 6-5, 6-4, or 5-4, for a total of nine combinations out of 36.

This time, clearing the 6-point is two combinations worse than clearing the 5-point.

TIP: When bearing off in a position where the opponent might have the opportunity to get a shot if you leave a blot, try to avoid having an odd number of men on your back point. That is why clearing the 6-point is this position would be inferior to clearing the 5-point.

Final Competition Preparations Keep 'Miss Lubbock' On Toes

By DALE RAYMAN
Family News Staff

The enthusiastic smile hid any trace of lurking stomach butterflies as Leslie Thurman described her current schedule.

"I've been swimming and jogging and practicing walking..."

Practicing walking?

"Oh, yes. You see, your posture is not correct in the usual way of walking," she said, and although the traditional remedy of walking with a book perched atop the head is no longer recommended, "I practice walking by watching myself in the mirror."

Why would a composed, articulate, sun-kissed Texas Tech University coed who appears taller than her 5-feet, 7-inch height spend hours practicing getting from one spot to another on foot?

Because Leslie Thurman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Thurman of Brownfield, will be walking and talking and representing Lubbock before a select panel of juedges at the Miss Texas pageant which begins July 2 in Fort Worth.

"The actual competition begins Wednesday (July 5), but we'll be going down next weekend," Miss Thurman said.

The trip requires a bit of logistical planning, said Mrs. Jack (Janis) Geddes, Miss Lubbock's official chaperone and local pageant coordinator.

"There's usually a huge suitcase, plus a big makeup kit and lots of shoe boxes," she said. "Then we spread most of the clothes (all in bags) out flat across the trunk, and Jack usually packs our things in a second car!"

Planning Miss Lubbock's wardrobe is no easy matter, for between 30 and 35 changes of clothes are needed at the week-long pageant, as well as the gowns required during competition.

"And no jeans are allowed, at least not outside the individuals' rooms!" Miss Thurman added.

Her competition ensembles, some of which are shown here, are built around the $1,000 wardrobe from Maxine's Accent given the winner of the Miss Lubbock contest.

"And all the people here in Lubbock — Brownfield too — have been so eager to help us (get ready for the Fort Worth trip)," she said.

Miss Thurman, a music major with a minor in drama, has selected "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" as her talent offering, which will be the first phase of official competition for her.

"We heard this particular arrangement and decided it was just right for the competition," she said.

Her pageant schedule includes the talent competition Wednesday, official interviews Thursday afternoon, swimsuit competition Thursday night and evening gown competition Friday night.

With more than 50 other young women vying strongly for the state crown and a trip to the Miss America pageant in Atlantic City, N.J., this fall, is she concerned about her competitors?

"You cannot worry about anyone else," she said confidently. "You have to think about yourself and just do your best in every aspect of the competition."

Adding their support from the audience when she is on stage will be her personal fan club: her parents, a brother and his family from Memphis, a sister from Hereford and a brother from Irving.

"I can feel how proud they are," she said.

In addition to the support from her family and friends in Brownfield and Lubbock, pageant-bound Miss Lubbock has a little plan for giving herself a bit of last-minute self-support before she appears on stage:

"I'm going to make sure my body is really relaxed...and take a deep breath!"

THE FUN BEGINS — Puppets of St. Blaise, patron saint of Dubrovnik, left, and the devil star in a farce for adults performed by Yugoslav puppeteers who will be among those attending the 39th National Festival of the Puppeteers of America in Lubbock this week. The puppet show, performed by members of the 'Teatar &td' ('Theater Etc.') group of Zagreb, completed an engagement at La Mama Experimental Theater Club in New York before coming to the Lubbock festivities.

Puppet Festival Week Begins Here Monday

Fantasy becomes reality Monday when the 39th National Festival of the Puppeteers of America begins on the campus of Texas Tech University.

Nationally known puppeteers, including Jim Henson of 'Muppet' fame, will join puppet people from Canada, England, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Mexico during festival week.

The workshops, seminars and other programs exclusively for the puppeteers will not be open to the public, but evening activities are planned for the enlightenment and amusement of South Plains audiences.

During festival week, 300 tickets will be available for the performance each night. The tickets ($2.50 for adults, 1.75 for children who must be at least six years old) may be purchased at Hemphill-Wells at South Plains Mall and Furr's Family Center.

For more information about the schedule of events for festival week, call the art department at Tech.

Successful Teachers Have Qualities In Common

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Distinguished teachers are enthusiastic, businesslike, clear and precise. They use various teaching methods, create a warm classroom climate and ask questions involving judgment.

Even though such teachers crack jokes, their students know they have to study to get on in those courses.

These are among findings in a dissertation, "Instructional Behavior Patterns of Distinguished University Teachers," by Lea L. Ebro, who completed her Ph.D. at Ohio State University.

"Such teachers are in command of their classes," she said. "They get their students to interact with them and they respond immediately when students ask questions or give answers."

Dr. Ebro did the research to improve her proficiencies as a teacher. Now an associate professor at Oklahoma State University here, she hopes to continue similar research to find if teachers selected as distinguished at one university behave the same as those at another.

Besides working with graduate students and with curriculum in food, nutrition and institution administration, she directs the OSU administrative dietetic internship program.

To gather data for her research, Dr. Ebro sat in on classes of 17 Ohio State University faculty members who had been awarded the Alumni Award for Distinguished Teaching from 1972 to 1976.

She discovered their working patterns by coding their teaching behavior at five-second intervals.

Some common characteristics she found were initiating, seeking clarification, explaining, responding to student questions, using media and non-verbal actions.

She found all the teachers initiated the information but students were free to interrupt at any time. Those classes had much laughter because the teachers introduced humor spontaneously and students were encouraged to do the same.

Following the giving of information, teachers asked questions. After a student responded, these teachers immediately responded, either with a judgment of correctness, a request for clarification or additional supplementary information.

The teachers lectured or did outright giving of facts only 4 percent of the time. The rest of the time, they interpreted, translated or expanded on something.

Besides walking around as they talked, most of the teachers used gestures often.

EQUAL TIME
ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (WNS) — Audrey Benjamins, 30, suffered a nervous breakdown seven years after marrying and giving up her career to take care of home and children. Her husband Leo suffered a breakdown at the same time because of office tensions and overwork. "Leo takes care of the house and children one year while I go to work, and then we switch positions so that I stay home one year while he goes to work." According to the Benjamins, the plan has worked perfectly for seven years, "and our youngsters love it, too."

Extension Update

If you are a homemaker, have you ever stopped to think about how much you are worth in your role as a homemaker? Take a few minutes and find out. You may be amazed.

Placing an economic value today on a woman's contributions to her family in the future can help protect families financially in the event of her death or disability. This may not be a happy thought — but one you should pursue anyway.

In placing these values, the family needs to look at the possible economic loss they face if the homamaker dies or is disabled, and the family needs to look at information on the value of a woman's contribution to the family.

The value of her contribution is needed so couples can realistically decide how much it would cost to hire someone to do that work, in case the need arose.

In addition to more financial responsibilities in the marketplace, homemakers continue to assume major responsibility for household work, which includes managerial and physical activities in the household by and for family members for no pay.

Although household work generally is not valued in monetary terms unless it goes through the market system, its value is getting greater emphasis in legal settlements — and the housewife's social role is being considered.

Cornell University research used "time" spent on household work as an effective measure of a study on the subject.

They identified workers in the marketplace to perform services similar to household tasks normally engaged in by family members.

They obtained hourly wage rates for each of these job categories: cooks, dishwashers, cleaning women, "handymen," washing machine operators, laundry workers, clothes maintenance specialists, child care workers, homemaker aides and accounting clerks.

In addition, they concluded that three major factors determine the amount of time spent on household work: number of children, age of youngest child and whether or not the housewife is employed.

Using these three variables, the researchers estimated the economic value of household work for a wide range of family compositions, educational backgrounds and job skills. For example, based on the calculations, a 1972 judgment of $235,000 was awarded to a family as compensation for the loss of the homemaker's economic contribution for the next 19 years, when the youngest of three children would have reached age 21.

In planning for the future, you should also remember that insurance companies keep up-to-date estimates of the monetary value of women's contributions to families — to encourage families to insure the wife for disability and death and to assist in fair insurance claim settlements.

Prudential Life Insurance Company estimates that in 1977, the full-time homemaker with a husband and two children contributed 99.6 hours of work per week, valued at $283.49, or more than $15,000 per year.

Among possible planning areas you might investigate are life insurance, health insurance, disability income, retirement planning, emergency or contingency savings, savings and investments and employment securities.

Clip 'n' Cook

GERMAN CABBAGE

3 tbsp. butter
1 small onion, finely diced (¼ to ⅓ cup)
1 qt. packed, shredded (medium-fine) green cabbage (about 1 lb.)
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. sugar
½ tsp. caraway seeds
1 tbsp. cider vinegar
¼ cup water

In a 10-inch skillet, melt 1 tablespoon of the butter; add the onion and cook gently until browned; remove. Melt remaining 2 tablespoons butter in the skillet and add the remaining ingredients; over low heat mix well until cabbage wilts; cover and simmer until tender-crisp — about 10 minutes. (Watch carefully and add a little more water if needed.) Stir in onion. Makes 4 small servings.

Daytime Television Programming Provides 'Escape' For Viewers

By JON-MICHAEL REED

ALL MY CHILDREN: Phil investigated a car fire that Sammy set and found Charlie's watch near the car. Erica criticized Paul for seeing Ellen in public and said she was concerned for Mark, her half-brother. Edna recognized Kelly as a one-time restaurant co-worker when Kelly made a plea for her mother's whereabouts on television. Donna set up a blind date between Benny and Estelle. Devon considered going to St. Louis with Wally in order to visit her father. Myrtle decided to remain in Pine Valley much to the disappointment of Phoebe and Claudette. Tom showed an interest in hiring Kelly to sing at the Goal Post.

ANOTHER WORLD: Nora forced Eileen to quit working with Mike after Greg told her that Mike lied to Eileen about being divorced. Greg then hid Mike's divorce papers and denied knowledge of them. Willis and Gwen ran into Vince and Angie in a restaurant and Angie, visibly upset, insisted upon leaving. Iris took a postcard with Dennis' address on it from Elena's desk. John returned from his vacation and told Pat he realizes it's over between them. Liz warned Olive that she'd be in for a fight if she tried to take Brian from Iris.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Grant and Valerie panicked when Lisa disappeared along with a bottle of Alma's sleeping pills. John was shocked when the hospital board refused to reinstate him. Sandy told Kevin she would return home with him upon her release from the hospital. Jay broke off all ties with Dee after a run-in with Ellen. Annie felt guilty when Beau confessed he took the hotel job only to help her through med school. Dan mixed Devan's suggestion to get professional help.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Janice went into shock after Joann tainted in their Florida hotel room. Mary resigned from Anderson Manufacturing and went to work for Chris. David learned that Valerie was coming home for the summer. Margo refused to marry Mike. Marlena made a professional appointment with Neil. Bob encouraged Linda to accept Neil's offer of the lake house. Maggie blamed Mickey for Janice's disappearance.

THE DOCTORS: Sara confessed to Mike that she had sexual relationships recently with Colin. Greta felt her baby move for the first time and considered Dr. Speer's suggestion that she go to a home for unwed mothers. Doreen gave Billy and his friend George jobs at The Medicine Man.

EDGE OF NIGHT: Raney called the police when Chip took Deborah hostage after realizing she knew he threw the liquid in Mike's face. Deborah told police that Raney saved her life when he shot Chip. April told Miles and Denise that she was pregnant. Tree confided to April that she didn't believe Denise was terminally ill.

FOR RICHER, FOR POORER: Jason resigned from Cushing and Sons. Lee encouraged Tessa to tell her parents they were dating. Megan discouraged Stan's romantic interest in her while Jason told Laurie his interest in Megan was other than romantic. Ellie feared Connie wasn't ready to care for Billy on her own.

THE GUIDING LIGHT: Peter remembered working for Dr. Waterman in Santa Domingo and getting involved with his two sheltered daughters Maya and Linette. Holly confessed to an understanding Peter that Roger was Christina's father. Mike is confident that Jerry will receive a suspended sentence in the deli robbery. Ed met with Blake-Carney specialists and Eve still wants to go along with the experiments.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Laura arrived at Barbara Vining's while Lt. Ramsey suggested Laura be questioned about David's death. Diana didn't feel her mother, Mrs. Maynard, was qualified to care for P.J. Mark got Katy's New York address after learning Lamont had already gotten her to leave Port Charles. Dan prepared to leave for an assignment in Germany. Scotty confessed Lee's drinking problem to Bobbi who admitted her father was also an alcoholic. Susan set her sights on Peter.

LOVE OF LIFE: Arlene decided she would take over the managerial duties of Beaver Ridge. Bruce made plans to move out of the house in order to force Van to turn to Andrew. Mia learned that Betsy and her new husband, Elliot Lang, were returning to Rosehill. Tom assured Kirsten that he and Dory were just friends after Kirsten refused to let him be her doctor.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: The terrorist's hit-man failed to eliminate Paul. Landlord, Roy Wilson, recognized Harmer and Cantrell from a police photo and led Ed to their apartment. Melinda and Peter set a June wedding date. Karen pleaded with Marco to let her alone before she lost her mind. Tony took Samantha to dinner but told her to stop playing up to him.

RYAN'S HOPE: Frank, Rae, Dave Feldman and his daughter Nancy were involved in an auto accident on the way to the airport. Mary refused Jack's request that she quit working for Frank's campaign. Roger refused Dee's offer to share her bed. Faith told Jill that she can't love Tom the way he wants her to and also that she can't forget Pat.

SEARCH FOR TOMORROW: Steve went to Gary for a checkup and learned that he is no longer in remission. Chance was only too happy when Janet invited Kylie to spend the weekend at the Collins' house. Scott discouraged Kathy from taking Doug to work with her and admitted it was because he didn't want David around the baby.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Laurie packed her things and moved out telling Vanessa she was going to divorce Lance. Vanessa broke the news to Lance and Leslie. Greg fired Linda after Snapper indicated the job could ruin Linda's marriage. Casey scolded Nikki after finding Nikki's boyfriend Paul in the apartment. Leslie told her doctor that abortion was out of the question but refused to tell Lance that he was the baby's father.

Commercial Methods Save Cities Waste

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's cities are spared an additional 10 million tons of solid waste each year because of the commercial processing of fruits and vegetables, says the National Food Processors Association.

More than 8 million tons of raw skins, peels, cores and cobs removed before canning and freezing are utilized as animal feed. The remainder is returned to the soil as fertilizer or recycled, as in the case of certain fruit pits which are burned to make charcoal.

SPARKLE UP

Sparkle up copper and brass pots with a mixture of salt and vinegar. Rub gently with the mixture, then dunk in hot, soapy water. Rinse well and dry immediately with a soft cloth. They'll shine like new.

'LET ME CALL YOU SWEETHEART CAKE'

Early Planning, Extra Effort Can Trim Wedding's Expenses

By MARCIA O. BURG
Women's News Service

You've always dreamed of your daughter's wedding day. But lest the dream become a nightmare of extravagant expense, self-cater some aspects of the nuptial doings.

If you're a cook who must go by the book, look for ideas in the following cookbooks at the public library or bookshops: "Cooking for Crowds" by Merry White (Basic Books); "Omelets and Crepes" by Bob and Coleen Simmons (Nitty Gritty); "Entertaining Menus" by Anne Willan (Coward, McCann and Geoghegan); and "Elegant Desserts" by June Roth (Dodd, Mead).

You can also write to Heublein Inc., Hartford, Conn., for a recipe booklet of really lush appetizers, entrees and desserts made with mead. And everyone has a personal file of time-tested recipes that can be successfully sextupled and frozen in advance.

A specific way to save is by lavishing a little time on a homemade wedding cake. Here's one easy, economical sweetheart of a cake guaranteed to be eaten — not slept on and tossed aside.

LET ME CALL YOU SWEETHEART CAKE

4 heart-shaped cake layers (nine-inch), from scratch or a mix
3 cups butter or margarine, softened
2 cans (14 oz. each) sweetened condensed milk (not evaporated)
1 tbsp. vanilla, rum, brandy, orange or lemon extract
2 tsps. grated orange rind
1 tsp. grated lemon rind
¼ cup finely chopped pecans

In a large electric mixer bowl, beat butter (which must be very soft) till very smooth. Gradually beat in sweetened condensed milk and extract. If mixture separates, continue beating till smooth and very thick. Remove two cups frosting and combine with rind. Fill cake with rind-flavored frosting, sprinkling one-quarter cup finely chopped nuts between each layer. Frost top and sides with plain frosting, reserving enough for decorating with pastry bag and star or rosette tip. Refrigerate decorated cake to firm up frosting and refrigerate any leftovers. Top and surround with fresh flowers. Yields about 20 servings.

To trumpet the proliferation of daffodils a reader submitted a recipe color-keyed to these yellow spring flowers. The cake would be perfect for a bridal or baby shower. And for graduation it could symbolize golden opportunity waiting to be seized out there in the real world.

DAFFODIL CAKE: Beat one cup egg whites till foamy, then add one-half teaspoon salt and one teaspoon cream of tartar, beating till stiff. Fold in one cup plus two tablespoons sugar. Divide mixture in two equal parts.

To one part, fold in one-half cup flour which has been sifted five times. Add one teaspoon vanilla. To second part, add six beaten egg yolks, two-thirds cup flour (sifted five times) and one-half teaspoon orange extract.

Put alternating cupfuls of yellow and white batter in an ungreased angel cake pan. Bake one hour at 325 degrees. Invert pan and allow to cool before removing.

For orange filling (optional), combine and cook the following ingredients in double boiler, stirring constantly till thick: one-third cup sugar, two tablespoons softened butter or margarine; one tablespoon each, flour and grated orange rind, one cup orange juice, one-eighth teaspoon salt, and two eggs, slightly beaten.

For orange frosting, cook the following ingredients in a double boiler for 10 minutes: two cups confectioner's sugar, sifted; one-quarter cup orange juice, and one tablespoon each melted butter or margarine and grated orange rind. Beat till cool and of good spreading consistency.

Surround cake stand or adorn top of cake with sunny fresh daffodils.

Add punch to the festivities, but subtract from the beverage bill with a tangy blend of juices, wine and sparkling water. Best of all, you can adjust its strength to suit the taste of your guests. For a wedding, serve it in rose-colored glasses.

ROSE FRUIT PUNCH:

Combine two cups sugar and one cup water in a saucepan. Bring to a boiling point and simmer five minutes, then cool. Combine two bottles (four-fifths of a quart) of New York State rose wine, two cups each, orange juice and cranberry juice, and cooled sugar syrup. Add one quart fresh strawberries (washed and hulled). Pour over a decorative ice mold in a large bowl and add two quarts club soda. Garnish with lime slices. Yields about 30 servings.

Self-catering can be a colorful affair. You save the green, so you're in the black instead of the red. This keeps you from being blue. And when you're complimented by guests for doing up brown, you'll be tickled pink.

Vegetarian Ranks Growing In U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — Both young people and the elderly have been swelling the number of vegetarians from 3 million to 10 million in the last five years, but for different reasons, says the author of a vegetarian cookbook.

"Peer pressure as well as moral considerations are turning young people to vegetarianism," says William Manners, author with his sister-in-law, Ruth Ann Manners, of "The Quick and Easy Vegetarian Cookbook." "Environmental concerns, increased interest in Eastern religions and natural living are also factors.

"The principal reasons for older people going vegetarian are health and economics," he adds. "Protein that costs $2.50 as beef, or $1.25 as fish, costs only 50 cents in vegetable form."

Tech Medical School Selected To Test New Non-Healing Fracture Treatment

By JANICE JARVIS
Family News Staff

A mild electrical shock applied continuously for six months might offer a solution to the problem of nonunion fractures — breaks in bones, which, for unknown reasons, refuse to heal on their own — according to Dr. Ted Hartman, chairman of orthopedic surgery at Texas Tech University School of Medicine.

TTUSM was selected as one of 16 centers to test direct current electrical stimulation of boney nonunion, a treatment developed by Carl Brighton, M.D., chairman of orthopedic surgery at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, and Jonathan Black, Ph.D., physicist and electronics engineer.

The treatment involves drilling into the bone and inserting a Teflon-coated cathode rod, according to Dr. Hartman, and an anode pad placed on the skin completes the electrical curcuit. To avoid irritation, the pads are moved to different locations on the body every three days. Current is provided by a battery pack, which is embedded in the cast.

Dr. Hartman said the operation is done using a local anesthesia, since the patient must remain conscious so that he can indicate if a nerve is hit. The skin is 'frozen,' and the patient experiences only a minimum of pain.

The new treatment could offer relief to an estimated 100,000 persons who suffer with painful nonunion fractures. Approximately five per cent of the fractures which occur nationwide are nonunion fractures, Dr. Hartman added.

Traditional treatment for nonunion fractures involved spending months to years in a cast. Infection can develop, and in extreme cases, amputation is necessary.

Doctors from the orthopedic surgery and biomedical engineering departments at TTUSM were trained in the new technology in Philadelphia last year, and the program at TTUSM began in February.

The treatment is being used in eight different cases, over a three-month period, explained Dr. Hartman. During this time, patients are not allowed to use the bone in any way. All the participants have injuries affecting the extremities and are confined to wheel chairs.

Although the TTUSM participants have not been in the program long enough for results to be reported, preliminary tests indicate the treatment is effective.

In previous tests, treatment was proven effective in cases in which patients had suffered nonunion fractures for as long as nine years. Usually patients are not accepted into the program unless the nonunion fracture has existed for at least six months, said Dr. Hartman.

The reason for the effectiveness of this treatment is not known, but Dr. Hartman said experts suspect the electrical current causes a change in the acidity in the area of the bone fracture, making the environment conducive to bone-forming cells.

Research indicates small amounts of electrical current are involved in the natural repair of bones. Nonunions occur when these electrical signals stop before healing is complete, according to Dr. Hartman.

Testing of the treatment is being conducted under Federal Food and Drug Administration guidelines. If proven effective, the treatment might be used to aid the healing of crushed bones which have not healed properly and to speed up the healing process in simple fractures.

According to tests made by Dr. Brighton's team in Philadelphia, the therapy has been effective in 80 per cent of nonunion fractures. Statistical information will be compiled at TTUSM at the end of the six-month program and sent to Dr. Brighton.

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE

Stock, broth or bouillon — don't fret about which is which. Essentially, they're all the same. Bouillon is the French word, now anglicized, for stock or broth.

Douglass Attends National Meeting

Jim Douglass, executive director of Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Lubbock, will be in Washington, D.C., through Saturday to participate in the first national convention of the organization since it became a merged national agency.

The convention will feature seminars, training sessions and discussion groups to help educate and train local board members and staff or volunteers to serve their agencies better. Also included will be major addresses by national political figures who are involved with legislation affecting youth-serving agencies.

Douglass also serves on the executive committee of the Region X Professional Staff Council, and in this position represents the local agencies in Texas.

BINGO REPLACES BULLS

Anyone who has read his Hemingway — especially Hemingway on the bull-running fiesta at Pamplona, Spain — will remember the Cafe Iruna on the main square. But, thanks to feminine influence, they might not be able to recognize it if they visit the Iruna now. Gone are the waiters in their white coats. Instead there's the droning voice of an announcer calling out numbers to a packed audience of women. Yes, the one-time haunt of aficionados who visited Pamplona from all over the world has gone over to bingo, recently legalized in Spain and sweeping the country. Government officials say Spanish women will gamble so much on bingo this year, they will rake in some $300 million dollars. Tax revenue from bingo in January alone was $16 million.

SLEEK CHIC — The uncluttered charm of the tailored cloche shape in feather-weight white felt with multi-colored banding is a summer favorite.

RAKISH RAFFIA — This little raffia low-crown cushion brim hat has long ribbon streamers which tie in a bow for a flirtatious and flippant look.

FLOWER ACCENT — A giant flower accent at the brim gives an eye-catching flair to this ripple brim of natural beige pliable summer straw.

Fashion's Favorite Hats Enliven Summer Scene

There's no doubt about it: hats are back!

For the long-time chapeau devotee or the fashion novice, the selection of styles for summer ranges wide enough to offer the most elegant looks, the most casual moods and the most comfortable wear.

For the daytime venturer, a hat is an absolute 'must,' for the sake of beauty as well as fashionability.

Physicians have long noted that continued exposure to the sun's rays can speed the aging process, and despite the quest for the perfect suntan, no one really looks forward to the premature onset of facial wrinkles.

If the primary consideration is eye appeal, however, you're in luck: head-hugging cloches, gracefully bowed wide-brimmed Leghorns, berib-boned Bretons and sassy sailor shapes are proportioned to flatter almost every face shape.

The material of choice for summer is, of course, straw, but the most popular styles are adorned with organza flowers and grosgrain bands.

Colors offer an opportunity to complete your ensemble as well as to accent your skin tone, be it porcelain pale or golden goddess tan.

There's still time to get into the fashion swim with a collection of summer hats in styles and colors to suit your whims and your wardrobe.

FACIAL FLATTERY — The face-framing shape gives added lustre to a special occasion. Here the look is interpreted in a small shape with lilies of the valley.

Saving Energy Eases Pain Of Bills

Summer may mean a vacation from winter heating bills, but your utility bills — electricity, water and gas — continue. There are lots of ways to cut down on them, says the current issue of a national magazine and offers 50 suggestions. Here's a sampling:

Since about 20 percent of all energy used in the home goes to heat water, save on hot water by:

— lowering the thermostat setting. For each 10 degrees' reduction, you'll cut energy consumption by about 5 percent; — limiting the use of hot water to a certain time each day and turning the heater off the rest of the time.

— encouraging the family to take short showers instead of full tub baths. You can also install a water-saving shower head to reduce the amount of hot water used.

The kitchen is also a place to save energy, says the magazine.

— cook as many meals outdoors as possible. This not only saves energy used to operate the range, it also keeps the house cooler and helps reduce air-conditioning costs.

— use small specialized appliances whenever possible instead of the range.

— bake and roast early in the morning so you won't add more heat to the house during the hot part of the day.

— keep the refrigerator freezer compartment full so it can't take in warm house air each time the door is opened.

— cover liquids before placing in the refrigerator. Uncovered liquids produce moisture that adds work for the compressor.

— vacuum the condenser coils every three months — more often if you have long-hair pets.

Around the house:

— use fluorescent lamps in areas where you need a lot of light for many hours of the day. They give off at least twice as much light as incandescent bulbs at half the cost.

— if the outside of your room air conditioner unit is exposed to direct sunlight, shade it with a wood, metal or canvas awning.

— instant-on color television sets use energy even when the set is off.

FOR SIGHT

Always wear eye cream out on the tennis courts so you don't get crinkles after squinting at the ball. Or wear sunglasses instead.

Ultraviolet Lamps Tan Too Fast

NEW YORK (UPI) — One minute of ultraviolet radiation under some sunlamps, even at the distance specified by the manufacturer, can be equal to one hour under the sun.

About 12,000 skin burns and eye injuries caused annually by overexposure to such lamps are severe enough to require hospital treatment, says Hada de Slosser of Cornell University's Cooperative Extension Service.

Mrs. De Slosser said the Food and Drug Administration has proposed a new rule that would limit shorter wave length radiation emissions from such lamps and provide for more adequate label warnings and safety instructions. She said about one million non-prescription sunlamps are sold in the U.S. annually.

WET SHOES

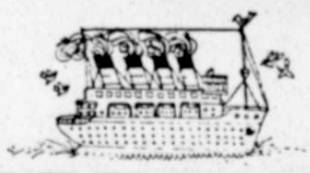

Try not to get espadrilles wet. If you do, be sure to dry them out thoroughly in open air or a closet before wearing them again.

Redwood Planters Accent Green Plants

By "Mr. Do-It-Yourself" Steve Ellingson

The rich redwood luster of these six handsome planters is sure to add warmth and beauty to any yard, garden, patio or apartment balcony. And with simple step-by-step instructions and a detailed plan, you can make one or make them all. Some are tub-shaped for larger plants, while the tiered boxes and planter group are ideal for smaller plants.

Even if you've never worked with wood before, this project is a cinch. A complete materials list calls out the exact sizes of the lumber parts. Actually you don't even have to own a saw. Just take the plan to your nearest lumber dealer and have the parts milled to size. Then just assemble the planters with a hammer and nails in no time at all.

To obtain six redwood planters (plan 562), via first class mail, send $2.00. To obtain the new 100-page Patterns for Better Living Book, picturing hundreds of simple woodworking and handicraft projects, send $1.50. Mail check or money order to Steve Ellingson, c/o the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

New Cookie Recipe Yields Even Better 'Kisses'

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

DEAR CECILY: I'm writing to you about a lost recipe. I cut it out of the paper about six years ago. I know this is a long way back, but I'm hoping you have it because I really want to find it. It was for a cookie made from shortbread dough that you shaped into small balls and molded around chocolate kisses. — DETERMINED

DEAR DETERMINED: I've sent you a copy of the recipe you want. However, I've found a new rule for kiss cookies that I want to share with you and other cookie bakers. In this latest recipe, the shortbread dough is flavored with cocoa and in my opinion these kiss cookies are even better than the original ones. — C.B.

COCOA KISS COOKIES

1 cup butter or margarine, softened
2/3 cup granulated sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
1 2/3 cups all-purpose flour
1/3 cup cocoa
1 cup finely chopped pecans or walnuts
9 oz. pkg. milk-chocolate kisses (about 54)
Confectioners' sugar, if desired

In the large bowl of an electric mixer, cream the butter, granulated sugar and vanilla; gradually beat in the flour and cocoa. Add the nuts; beat on low speed until well distributed. Chill.

Meanwhile, unwrap the kisses. Shape a scant tablespoon of dough around each kiss, covering it completely. Roll each between your palms to form a ball; place a few inches apart on ungreased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 375 degree oven until set — 10 to 12 minutes. Cool slightly; with a wide spatula remove to wire racks. Cool completely. Just before serving, dust with confectioners' sugar if you like.

Makes about 4 1/2 dozen.

QUICK DELIVERY

ANTWERP, Belgium (WNS) — Michele Nassen, 14, had no trouble besting a dozen teen-age boys in a quick-delivery contest organized by several stores here. "It was easy," she said. "I made the rounds on a skateboard, and they were stuck with bicycles that had to be parked all over the place, then get tied up in traffic. Men are just not as bright and quick as women."

'Naughty Child' Favors Clothes Loose, Sassy

By DOLORES BARCLAY

NEW YORK (AP) — Carol Horn clothes have a definite attitude. Sassy and brassy. Loose and kooky.

The naughty child of Seventh Avenue was doing Annie Hall vines long before Diane Keaton unbuttoned her first vest, so it came as no surprise that her recent show of fall designs had a heavy hint of what we find in grandpa's chiffonier.

She layers tunics and vests and jackets and shirts. She also layers socks, trousers and skirts — skirts over trousers; skirts over other skirts. Her designs rarely are fitted or tapered, with the exception of the popular straight pant.

Different plaids for different prints. Like the A-line wrap skirt over a full skirt with hemline ruffles. Or the patterned cotton skirt with ducks and hunters over tapered plaid pant.

Lengths for the most part were the standard mid-calf. But surprise, surprise. Miss Horn, not to be outclassed by Paris, snuck in a short cutie in a soft silk. The mid-thigh dress with a deep flounce had a slight dip in the back.

It also remained loyal to her baggy, big cuts. This deliberate looseness allows skirts to billow and swirl and tops to envelop the wearer in the fabric of fashionable ease.

Miss Horn chose her colors well. The range went from earthtones to chilly weather brights.

"Now that all silhouettes are accepted, it's time to play with color," the designer said. "Color really creates your mood."

In a light wheat color, she showed a thigh-length tunic and skirt in the longer length. The sleeves were long and full, the bodice discreet. In flirty purple silk, she designed a matching sleeveless wrap top and skinny pant. It was worn with a rose colored smock jacket.

Miss Horn is a designer who enjoys herself. She plays with lines and teases visions. For example, she did a sweater with thick, pronounced padded shoulders in true quarterback tradition. It was in just the right bright red color to insure instant arrogance.

She also had fun with accessories and the show itself, which was staged with a four-piece live combo at the Fashion Institute of Technology. The ubiquitous Horn ragdoll surveyed the proceedings from above. But Miss Horn has the right idea. Why stuff 600 people in a showroom made for 50 people as so many on Seventh Avenue insist on doing? And why use recorded bland, middle-of-the-road tunes from last year when a live band can pace itself with the mannequins?

SOUP ARTISTS

Turn the whole family into "soup artists." Whether it's hot or cold soup, serve bowls of garnishes on the side. Soups can be topped with grated cheese, lemon slices, cheese cubes, popcorn, toasted almonds, pretzels, chives, bacon curls and a host of other ingredients.

LUBBOCK COUPLE MARKS MILESTONE — Mr. and Mrs. J.E. Hancock will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary with a luncheon at the Lubbock Country Club and a reception from 3 to 5 p.m. today in the Betty Hancock Center of Lubbock Christian College. The former Eileen Carruth and Hancock were married June 24, 1928, in Lubbock, and have lived in Lubbock since 1930. Hosts for the celebration will be their children, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Hancock of Dallas.

Domed Home Cuts Energy Costs

By RON RUTTI

MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Three miles down the road from Malabar Farm, a home has sprung up that would make conservationist Louis Bromfield proud.

It is a geodesic dome house and the smiles on the faces of its owners, Wendell and Joan Sayer, broadened each day this past winter as they realized savings in heating costs.

"It is our retirement house," Mrs. Sayer said. The couple has lived in a number of houses in several states. Thus far they say they enjoy this one, inspired by architect Buckminster Fuller, more than they thought they would.

The house is a mathematician's dream. It is made from a combination of isosceles triangles.

"The whole structure is on the outside. It is free standing, which allows for the spaciousness inside," Sayer said.

Sayer got professional help and put the house up in 60 days.

Mrs. Sayer admits to some anxious moments during construction. "I envisioned them starting on one side and having it not meet on the other," she said.

The house is on 51 acres Sayer bought, and cost $20 per square foot. He said conventional houses start at $35 per square foot. He said he is certain they save on fuel costs.

"We have an electric furnace for a backup, but we only use that when we go away," Sayer said. A wood-burning fireplace generates the heat inside and Sayer says it is more comfortable than any place he has lived.

The fireplace circulates the warm air, which rises to the top of the house. As the colder air drops, it filters to the basement through vents. Cold air from the basement is returned to the upstairs through a grate at the bottom of the fireplace where it is warmed and recycled.

The dome cannot be seen from the road but many visitors have found their way up the drive.

"A lot of young people have been here to look at it," Sayer said. "I think some will build them. It is perfect for a young couple. It is stronger, cheaper and takes less space."

Family Members Follow Church

TULAROSA, N.M. (AP) — Five sisters — all nuns — recently visited their brother, the Rev. Jerry Ahles of St. Francis de Paula Catholic Church here. A sixth sister, also a nun, was unable to make the trip.

The visitors included Sisters Assumpta, Lucina, Dolores, Theophane and Antoinette, all of the Franciscan Order of Little Falls, Minn.

Area Children's Shelter Begins Operation Monday

By SALLY LOGUE
Family News Staff

The Monday opening of the South Plains Children's Shelter will culminate more than two years of work and planning for a temporary emergency facility by concerned local citizens.

The shelter was established to provide a non-permanent and/or emergency home for homeless, neglected, dependent and abused children up to age 18.

The idea of the regional shelter came from a survey conducted by the Child Advocacy Committee of the Junior League of Lubbock, said Deann Sanders, chairman of that committee.

Results of the survey, conducted two-and-one-half years ago, indicated an emergency shelter to be the greatest need in the child advocacy area, she said.

John Gentry, shelter administrator, illustrated this need: "in 1977 there were about 100 cases a month of child abuse reported to the Texas Department of Human Resources." Documented records show there were four deaths as a result of child abuse last year, he said.

Mrs. Sanders said a board of directors was formed in April 1977.

"We were ready to open the project at that time," she said. "Our only problem was the location of a facility."

Recently the First Christian Church and the board of directors of the shelter worked out a lease agreement for a fully furnished facility at the cost of $1 per year to the shelter.

The shelter, a non-profit organization, is funded by private donations and Title 4B (federal) monies.

The shelter, said Gentry, will be staffed by a full time houseparent, cook/housekeeper and child care counselors.

Through counseling the children will receive in the shelter, Gentry hopes to "open up new and profitable relationships during the child's short term placement and provide a smooth transition into long term foster placement, if that is necessary."

Joe McKay, chairman of the board of directors, said "This is a community and regional shelter, and it requires the support of the community. Without that community suppport, we (the shelter) cannot function."

The shelter will act as an intermediate stop for the child and will enable DHR case workers more time to evaluate the situation, acquire medical help for the child and counsel the parents.

"Ideally the case workers hope to return a child to his home after the evaluation period," Mrs. Sanders said.

The maximum stay for children is 96 hours for those under 12 months of age, five days for those from one to five years of age and 30 days for those six to 18 years old.

As the shelter is set up now, it can accept only children referred to it through the children's protective services department of the DHR.

"The children's protective services department has the authority to legally remove a child from his home if that is necessary," said Mrs. Sanders.

She pointed out it is important for citizens to know that they can report suspected cases of abuse and neglect to the children's protective services department anonymously.

Mrs. Sanders said a major problem in combating child abuse and neglect is that "the average citizen doesn't understand that this is really happening to children in Lubbock.

"The community must recognize that this tragedy is occuring in Lubbock and occuring frequently. They must support the shelter and the children and parents in this tragedy."

The South Plains Children's Shelter needs donations of many items. Interested persons should call 806-747-4936 or write to the shelter at Box 802, Lubbock, Texas, 79408.

LIFE WITH ANDY

"My life has changed totally since I met Andy. I'm here really as part of his Christmas present to me. Yes, we sing in the bath together, especially when Andy is looking for a harmony. Sometimes I've come up with it." — 23-year-old Laurie Wright, for two years the close friend of Andy Williams, who recently toured Europe with him.

Outdoor Furniture Provides Indoor Versatility

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The idea of moving outdoor furniture indoors at the end of a season has a lot going for it, something to think about when you purchase the pieces.

You don't need to store the bulky things, and you can get some good decorating mileage out of it if it is wisely chosen.

It was an idea really begun by young people who couldn't afford the high cost of furniture. With lots of plants and posters and area rugs they could maintain an outdoor look all the year 'round.

Now the long-time-married crowd are planning to move bamboo, wicker and rattan from the patio and the redwood and wrought iron from the lawn to the living room and dining room after the season.

Does one need a $1,000 sofa and a $500 chair to decorate a beautiful home? Or isn't the idea to achieve beauty, comfort and sturdiness at a price you can afford?

One well-known millionaire and his wife did an entire home in painted wicker. A student with limited funds uses a painted wire spool as a table in the corner of a living room, with four director's chairs. In good weather he moves them out the sliding glass doors to his covered terrace.

Another student has a handsome apartment furnished with do-it-yourself plastic and plywood furniture. Do your own thing.

Last summer one family from abroad decided to live in their unfurnished home in the States for three months during a vacation. They bought redwood furniture for their big family room and used it for all-purpose dining, entertaining and so on. It could be used outdoors for their next tenants and have a good long life. Some day the family hoped to return permanently.

Some newer redwood pieces, such as a folding deck chair and ottoman combination with handsome bright cushions to provide comfort and good looks, and newer tables and chairs of redwood, can fit indoors nicely. In fact, some dining chairs have seats and backs of a special saddle-like leather especially for indoor use.

Many rattan and wicker styles provide a light, airy look, and the material is available in everything from tea carts to sofas with trundle beds. Bamboo, too, has caught on everywhere.

ENERGY ISSUES
By Jeanette Hodges

Just the other night I caught my husband heating a little pot of water on the big burner — like he was trying to heat all of West Texas! Little things like this are wasting energy. Here are some tips for saving energy:

Raising nighttime air conditioning temperatures can cut summer energy use. For every degree below 78 that you set your thermostat, energy consumption is increased 6 to 10 percent. Better yet, open your windows some evenings and let the natural breeze do the cooling!

To help prevent air infiltration at the floor level, place a bed of caulk or insulation beneath the sill plate around the entire perimeter of the house. This can be done most easily in new constructions. If you have an existing house, it can be done when the floor covering is changed or such time when baseboards are removed so as to expose the plate.

Speaking of floor coverings, carpet with a fibrous pad has an approximate "R value" of 2 to 2.08! ("R value" is the resistance to heat transfer.)

Fluorescent lighting is more economical than incandescent lighting, because it gives more light per watt hour. The most flattering colors of fluorescent light are deluxe warm white and deluxe cool white.

EER (Energy Efficiency Ratio) indicates how efficiently an appliance uses energy. An EER of eight or above should be sought when purchasing new appliances.

Other energy tips can be obtained at no charge in a booklet, "Tips," available from me, Jeanette Hodges, Home Energy Conservation Project, 4232 Boston Ave., Lubbock, 79413, phone 792-4780.

Calling All Homemakers

By SYD MOORE, A.S.I.D.

Because a family room has so many uses, by so many people, it needs some extra planning and thought. Here are a few ideas.

To give a family room the mood you want: you might consider a furniture piece that has shelves which can be used to display hobbies or a collection, or something special you'd like to show.

Many family rooms are decorated with furniture that is light and airy, so it can be easily moved for the changing functions of the room — yet you should also consider getting furniture that is durable enough to withstand the hard use it gets in a family room.

Since you probably want to leave as much space as possible for easy movement in the room, and still have enough storage, why not invest in some chests that can double as table tops with storage units below.

The right sofa can be the making of a family room, and how about a real lounge chair and good reading lamp?

For a table in the room, you might want to think about getting one that can be used for both dining and cards or games.

ALL DRESSED UP — The youngest ladies enjoy dressing up for parties too, and here's a charming way for her to look. The pastel chambray is styled in an ever-so-pretty sundress that ties at either shoulder with a plaid bow.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I read that there is a growing problem of male impotence in America, and no one seems to have the answer. I'm a male, and a fellow I work with may have put his finger on the reason. He says he is turned off by women in slacks, boots and mannish haircuts.

I agree with him. Nothing turns me on like a woman with long, soft, fragrant hair and a frilly, feminine dress.

Clothes make the woman too. If more men are becoming impotent, it just might be that the mannish look of some women is the cause.

LOVES LAVENDER AND LACE

Dear Loves: If male impotence seems to be on the rise, it could be because (a) it has never before been as thoroughly recorded or (b) male sexuality suffers from the revved up pace and intensified pressures of modern life.

Plenty of men are panting over women in long pants and short haircuts.

DEAR ABBY: I am 24, single and have been dating the same man for two years. Neither of us has dated anyone else since we met.

About a year ago, friends and relatives (especially aunts) began asking us (separately, of course), "When are you two getting married?"

I must admit that when the questions first started I felt as if I had to come up with some kind of answer in order to satisfy people's curiosity. I think we'll eventually marry, but I want to live on my own awhile and not go directly from my parents' home to living with another person. My boyfriend feels the same way, and we're both happy with things as they are, but we can't seem to get this across to some people.

Some friends of mine recently broke up because of repeated questioning from her parents. He wasn't ready for marriage, and she started to pressure him to set a date.

I wish well-meaning friends would leave the decision and timing up to the people involved. Thanks for letting me air my gripe. Is there anything I can say to stop these questions and still be polite?

NOT YET

Deat Not: You can't stop insensitive and nosy people from asking questions that are none of their business unless you put it just that way. An appropriate reply would be, "When we decide, we'll let you know."

DEAR ABBY: Through a very reliable source, we found out that our son has been peeping into various neighbors' windows. He is an average teen-age boy, brought up in a respectable home. We have no idea why he does this.

Because of the humiliation that would be brought upon the family, we do not wish to consult a doctor. Can you help us?

VERY SMALL TOWN

Dear Very: Yes. I can "help" you by assuring you that you would suffer no "humiliation" whatsoever by consulting a doctor.

If your son had a "kink" in his back, you'd seek medical advice in order to correct it, wouldn't you? So why, when he has an obvious "kink" in his thinking, do you choose to ignore it?

Window peeping is usually a symptom of a deeper emotional problem and should be neither hushed up nor ignored. You owe it to your son (and to society) to get him to a doctor.

IN WORLD CUP FINALE TODAY

Latin Rhythm Faces European Slickness

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Holland's disciplined goal-making machine pits itself against the Latin rhythm of Argentina today in a historic finale to the 1978 World Cup soccer tournament.

Neither team has ever won the championship, an event which draws hundreds of millions to their television sets around the world.

In U.S. sports terms, the World Cup combines all the excitement of the World Series and the Super Bowl rolled into one.

Although soccer still is just catching on in the United States, it is estimated that up to one billion people around the globe may be watching today's final match.

It will be a traditional contest between the the two strains which dominate world soccer — the virtuoso and effervescent South American style, and the well-oiled, slick passing and tackling of the European school.

No European team ever has won the World Cup in South America, and 77,000 wildly cheering spectators at River Plate Stadium never will let their opponents forget that.

Thousands are ready to pour into the streets as soon as the game ends, waving blue and white flags and chanting victory songs to paralyze Buenos Aires with celebrations, as they heve done twice earlier this month.

Holland is in the final for the second straight time. The Dutch lost 2-1 to West Germany in the 1974 final at Munich.

Most of that great Dutch team still are playing — except for the legenday Johann Cruyff, who has retired.

Argentina, less polished but riding the crest of nationalistic frenzy, also fell short of a world title in 1930. It crossed the La Plata River and was beaten by neighbor Uruguay 4-2.

The orange-shirted Dutch, who have scored more goals than any other team in the World Cup, enjoy the nickname "clockwork orange."

They make a specialty of a midfield whirlpool-spinning passes among each other that have dizzied opponents, then they dart into defensive gaps to convert.

Virtually no Dutchman plays in a fixed position. Fullbacks like Ernie Brandts guard their goal with tackles so fierce that they sometimes score against themselves. But they come back with great long-range shots from as far as 40 yards to win games.

Attackers like Robbie Rensenbrink usually line up as midfielders, but combine remarkable dribbling and formidabel shooting. Rensenbrink is the scoring star of the team, having tallied a total of five goals during the month-long tournament, more than any other player in the Cup.

On their way to the finals, the Dutch beat lackluster Iran 3-0, tied 0-0 with Peru and were defeated once by Scotland 3-2.

LA Rallies Past Reds In 4-3 Win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One week ago Bob Welch was in Albuquerque, N.M., charting pitchers for the Los Angeles Dodgers' top minor league club.

The next day he was in Los Angeles, and in just three appearances in the major leagues he has one victory and one save.

(See Baseball Roundups, Pages 6-7, Sec. B)

Saturday, the lanky 21-year-old righthander stopped the Cincinnati Reds, preserving a 4-3 Los Angeles victory before a national televison audience.

"This is all pretty exciting," said Welch. "But it's great to win no matter who you're playing.

"I was surprised when I was called to the big leagues this early ... I would have been happy just coming up in September. But this is hard to believe."

Welch had pitched 51-3 innings, has given up three hits and struck out seven. In the ninth inning Saturday, the Reds' leadoff batter, Dave Collins, sent a long drive to right that Lee Lacy caught on the warning track.

"I thought it was a home run," said Welch. "I thought the game was tied."

The Dodgers broke a tie with two runs in the sixth inning, one on a bases-loaded walk to Jerry Grote and the other on a grounder by Davey Lopes.

Don Sutton, 7-6, with relief help from Charlie Hough and Bob Welch, earned the victory, the 11th in the last 14 games for Los Angeles. The loss was only the third in the last 10 games for the Reds, but it dropped them three games behind frontrunning San Francisco in the National League West.

Lietzke Tops Canadian; Crenshaw Holds Chance

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Bruce Lietzke's dramatic pitch-in from the rough for an eagle on the final hole staked him to a 2-shot lead Saturday but his good friend Ben Crenshaw remained in a challenging position after three rounds of the Canadian Open Golf Championship.

"There's so many good players bunched up at the top, anybody could win," said Crenshaw, 3 strokes back of Lietzke's lead going into today's final round of the chase for the Canadian national title and a $50,000 first prize.

"It's the kind of golf course anything can happen on," Crenshaw said, and added, straight-faced as could be, "Why, hell, somebody might make a '9' on a hole."

Crenshaw made that score, a 9, on the 18th hole in Friday's round. Given a par on that hole, he'd be leading the tournament.

Lietzke's pitch in from the rough produced an eagle 3 on that same hole Saturday and a second consecutive 4-under-par 67.

"It gives me a lot of confidence going into Sunday's round," he said. "I'll assess my position after the first nine holes and then adjust, change my game as I have to.

"If the players close to me are experienced men like Crenshaw and (Lee) Trevino, then I may have to do one thing. If the players close are rookies, inexperienced players, I may have to do something else.

"I m not concerned about winning by 5 or 6 shots. All I want to do is win the golf tournament. I'll do everything I can, both mentally and physically, to do that, to win the golf tournament."

Lietzke, who started the warm, sunny day 3 shots off the pace, finished 54 holes with a 210 total, 3 under par on the difficult, 7,050-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course.

"That's a very good way to end the round," Lietzke said of his 45-yard shot with a sand wedge that found the cup on the 18th hole. "It makes up for a couple of shots I threw away."

Lietzke, winner of two tournaments last year but in a slump most of this season, was trailed by John Schroeder, skinny Jeff Hewes and rookie Pat McGowan at 212, the only other men under par after three trips over this course Jack Nicklaus designed as a permanent home for the Canadian National Championship.

McGowan also eagled the final hole for a 72. Hewes, who shared the second round lead with McGowan, also shot 72. Schroeder, who held a 3-shot lead at the turn, played his back nine in 39 and finished with a par 71.

Australian Bob Shearer, with a 71, and Ben Crenshaw were 3 shots back at par 213. Crenshaw birdied three holes in a row at one stretch and also birdied the par 5 18th hole, where he made that horrendous "9" in Friday's round.

Nicklaus had a 72 and was at 217. Masters champ Gary Player shot 73-218. Arnold Palmer had six birdies in an erratic round of 73 and was at 219. U.S. Open champ Andy North shot 72-221.

Lietzke's cross-handed putting was the key to his round. He had nine one-putts, one no-putt and holed five times from the 10-15 foot range.

Bradley, Blalock Tie; Lopez Falters Badly

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Pat Bradley fired a 3-under-par 69 Saturday to scramble into a tie with veteran Jane Blalock after 36 holes of play in the $50,000 Lady Keystone Open at the Hershey Country Club.

Eight strokes back was rookie senation Nancy Lopez, who was faltering badly in her bid to become the first professional woman golfer ever to win six straight Ladies Professional Golf Association tournaments.

Miss Lopez, still being dogged by writers and photographers and still wearing her Jimmy Carter grin, turned in a 38-36-74 to put her three strokes over par after two days of play. She fired a 1-over-par 73 Friday on the 6,398-yard course.

"I'm not giving up. I have tomorrow," she said after turning in her scorecard. "I may be out of it now, but I could come close tomorrow.

"I'm not playing as well as I was a couple of weeks ago, but I'm not going to let it bother me because I know the reason — I'm tired."

Miss Bradley, looking for her first win in 1978, and the third of her career, picked up birdies on 9, 14 and 15.

Miss Blalock, who fired a sizzling 5-under-par 67 Friday, shot a par 34-38-72 Saturday for a two-day total of 139.

Trailing the leaders by three strokes was Jane Renner with a 70-72-142 total, while Betsy King and Gerilyn Britz ended the day with scores of 145 each.

Peggy Conley, who fired a 3-under-par 69 Friday for second place, shot an 80 Saturday, leaving her well back in the pack.

Miss Bradley turned pro in 1974 and won her first tournament in 1976, finishing second six times and capturing "Most Improved Player" honors. She won the Bankers Trust Classic in 1977.

The pig-tailed Miss Blalock, who last year became only the fourth woman ever to win more than $100,000 in a single season, is looking for her 20th win since turning pro 10 years ago.

Tech's 'Good Old Boy' Still Chases Goal

By CARTER CROMWELL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

With his red face indicating the effects of playing 18 holes of golf in the blistering West Texas sun, Bob Patterson ambled up the office hallway toward the mailboxes, dispensing hellos and several full-throated laughs.

"How'd it go?" someone asked.

"Ahhhh. Shot a big 88 and lost 50 cents to Brock," Patterson replied in mock disgust, as Texas Tech equipment manager Harold Brock poked his head around the corner and grinned wickedly. Then Patterson laughed again.

Patterson, Tech's defensive line coach since 1975, is the archetypal good old boy, despite 12 years of residence in New Jersey. His trademarks are the laugh, the rich drawl and the easygoing manner.

His good-old-boyism is not phony. The Tennessee-born Patterson is a product of the South's customs and mores. Nevertheless, there is more to him than that. There is an intense Patterson, too. Like the saying goes: "On the surface, be calm and cheerful. Underneath, paddle like hell."

But it wasn't always that way.

"I haven't always been outwardly calm," said Patterson, who has labored 21 seasons in the coaching profession. "I used to say whatever I thought and didn't care who I hurt.

"But I've learned a lot the past 10 years. Experience helps—being around different situations and people."

At one time, football meant everything to Patterson, and he felt that others should feel the same way.

"I thought football was the only thing anybody should be interested in," he admitted. "The turning point for me was when I realized that football is just an integral part of a university. Watching my own children grow made me start realizing that football wasn't everything."

Still, it continues to consume a large portion of Patterson's life. At 46, an age when many coaches have long since turned to other professions, he's still coaching.

"I've had a lot of opportunities to do other things," he explained, "but I've never really wanted to do anything but coach."

Security—or the lack of it—in coaching is a constant concern for coaches, particularly as the years go by. Jess Stiles, who recently resigned from the Tech staff to go into private business, capsuled the feeling by saying, "Coaching has no respect for age."

The grind has intensified over the years, as interest in collegiate athletics has grown substantially, with a corresponding increase in the pressure to win. One sometimes wonders why coaches stay in the business.

"I guess a lot of us don't have better sense," Patterson said with a hollow laugh. "The time and effort spent and the mental strain all crowd in on you.

"And the tough years, like we had last year with all the injuries, really drain you mentally. I know that a lot of things that happened last year had a lot to do with (former Tech assistant) Gary Wyant getting out of coaching, not just a good opportunity in another business.

"For the younger guys, ego might have something to do with it—the idea of being down on the field every Saturday in front of a big crowd—but when you pass 35 years of age, coaching becomes a year-to-year proposition."

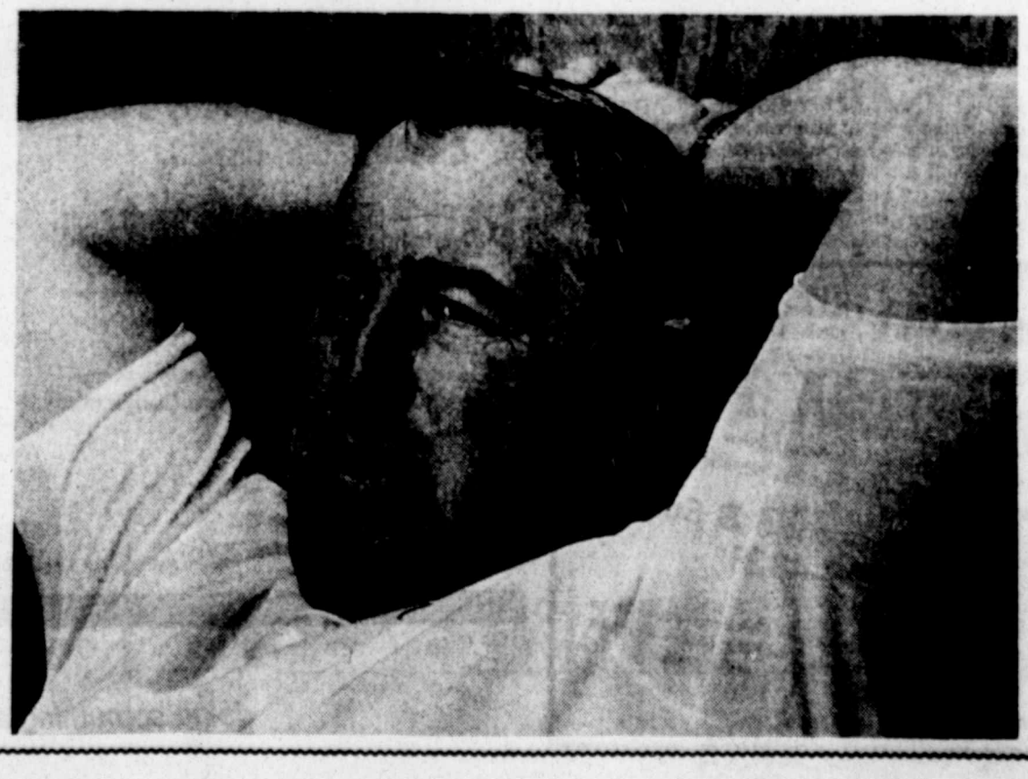

Patterson is still striving to become a collegiate head coach, and he knows that decision time is nearing. Nowadays, first-time head coaches are hired at a fairly young age, usually in their late 30s, sometimes their early 40s.

Patterson has gone after head coaching jobs four times—twice at Memphis State, his alma mater; at Texas-El Paso in 1976 and at Murray (Ky.) State in 1977. The failures to get the Memphis State job were the biggest disappointments for him.

"I felt that my credentials were as good as the others at the time, and I thought being a graduate of the school would help."

Patterson realizes that his age may be against him, but he hasn't given up on becoming a head coach.

"When an assistant is 44 or 45, he should have the necessary experience to be a good coach, but they would rather hire a younger guy to be head coach. Actually, the older guy should know how to handle people better because of his added experience.

"But I don't feel that the time has passed for me to be a head coach. The aspiration hasn't died. Something will have to happen within the next year or so. Possibly, it will."

Patterson's only previous head-coaching experience came in his first year of coaching in 1957, and it was a smashing beginning. Following a two-year hitch in the Air Force after graduation from Memphis State, he was hired at Dobyns-Bennett High School in Kingsport, Tenn., and directed the team to the state championship in his only season there.

He the moved to Southwestern Louisiana for three years, Memphis State for two and Vanderbilt for a dozen before coming to Tech with Steve Sloan in January 1975.

The 12-year stay at Vanderbilt—under three head coaches—is an unusually long one for an assistant. Patterson indicated more than one reason for it.

Of course, there were the two failed attempts to get the Memphis State job, but he had "a lot of chances to get out," the best of which he considers to be the chance to join Doug Dickey's staff at Tennessee.

"But I feel like that you have an obligation to your players when you're a coach," he said. "and I felt that Nashville was a good place to live.

"Also, I felt all along that we were close to winning at Vanderbilt, although that's a tough place when you consider that you're fighting people like Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee and the others. Records like 6-5 and 7-4 are real good there."

When Sloan resigned at Vandy to take the Tech job, Patterson finally made his move, and it was an easy decision to make. He had, he admits, been in one spot too long.

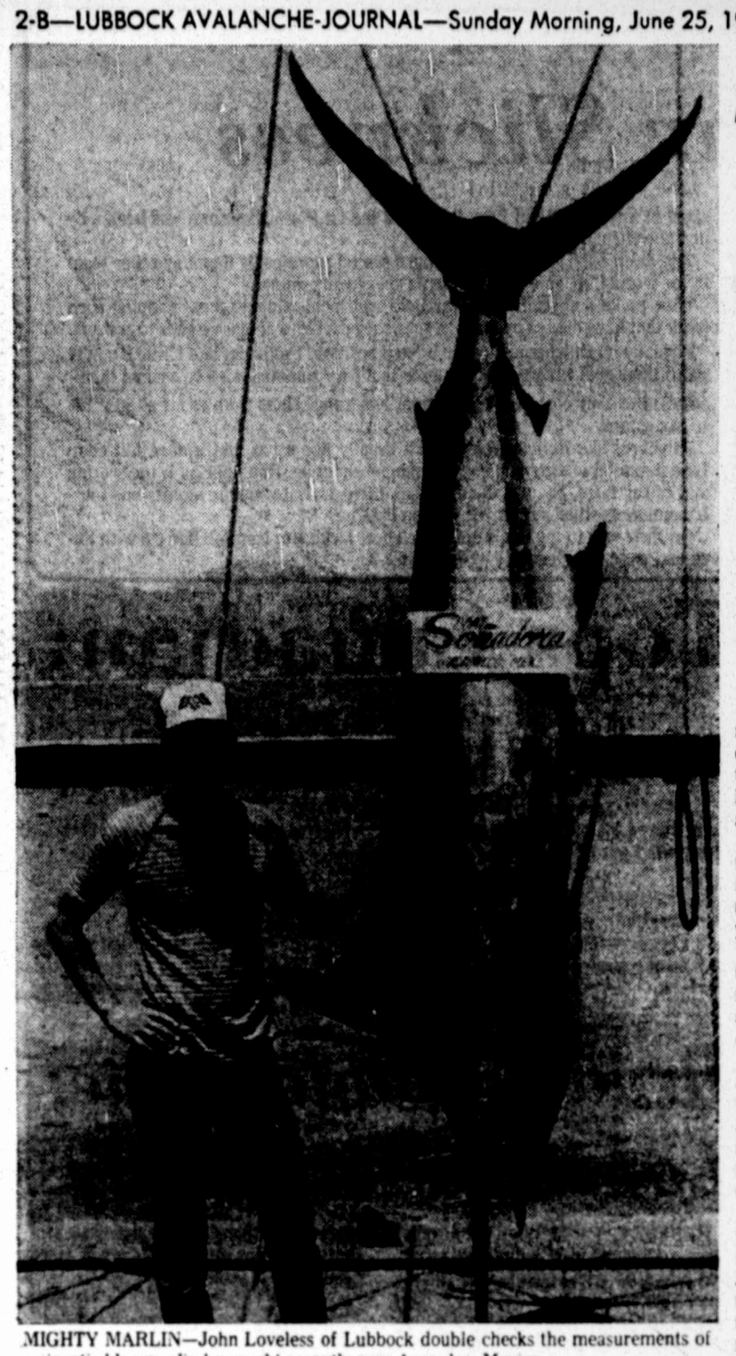

"I had an opportunity to stay there, but I didn't want to for my career's sake. And I left there knowing that we had just turned out a winner and a bowl team. The program was 1000 per cent better then than when I came to Vanderbilt."

When Sloan went to Mississippi following the 1977 season, Patterson again had an opportunity to move, but he decided against going with Sloan, and the Murray State situation didn't work out.

"I really wanted to go to Mississippi. I went down there for a couple of weeks but decided that you have some obligations to your family, too. I felt it would be harmful to my kids to leave now. And we like living here, and I like working in this situation."

Expect Bob Patterson, his drawl and his laugh to be around Lubbock for a while longer.

MIGHTY MARLIN—John Loveless of Lubbock double checks the measurements of a gigantic blue marlin he caught recently near Acapulco, Mexico.

Swordfish Magnifies Marlin Story

By TED J. SIMON
Avalanche-Journal Outdoor Editor

Hooking a 400-pound blue marlin may be considered luck, but bringing the monster to the boat demands a lot of ability and plenty of hard work.

Include a thrashing sailfish tangled in the line between the angler and the leaping marlin —and that adds up to a humdinger of a fish story!

John Loveless of Lubbock and Roswell, N.M., discovered he had his hands full when he hooked a blue marlin in the waters near Acapulco, Mexico.

"I went deep-sea fishing last year at Port Aransas," noted Loveless, "but this marlin experience was more than I ever expected."

The 35-foot fishing boat "Sonadora" had been out for approximately an hour when Loveless' 80 pound-test fishing line became taut and immediately started singing as the line turned the reel faster and faster.

Loveless felt an incredible weight as he braced in the fishing chair to pull back on the heavy duty fishing rod. The angler began the task of reeling in line and then paying it out for what was expected to be 30 or 40 minutes of fishing fun.

After about half an hour the ocean surface a hundred yards away exploded as a flash of bright blue was accented by glistening spray. It was a marlin, and it was big. When the fish crashed down on the surface and dived for deep water, the boat captain and his first mate knew the Lubbockite had a fight on his hands to bring the marlin to the boat.

"My wife Judy offered encouragement and the boat crew kept the craft positioned in regard to the fish," recalled Loveless.

Every so often the blue marlin surfaced; it came up once approximately 10 feet from the boat. There was no doubt —the fish looked close to being a 12 footer.

An hour passed and then two hours were clocked by the crew. The captain and first mate were wondering if the marlin would get away when suddenly there was a tharashing movement near the marlin.

A swordfish had tangled itself in the line. Down went the marlin; down went the sailfish. For 20 minutes the fishing line took a beating for which it wasn't designed. More than once Lovless payed out the 200-yard line to its limit. Suddenly the sailfish worked itself free of the line, and Loveless went back to concentrating on the marlin.

Slowly the Lubbock angler pulled back on the rod and could reel in some line. When about half of the line was back on the reel, the line showed a frayed condition; the sailfish had done plenty of damage and the line was thin enough to easily break.

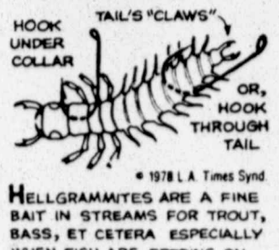

Three hours after the strike, Loveless brought the big fish alongside the boat where the marlin was quickly gaffed.

A measurement of the marlin's length showed it to be 11 feet 9 inches. The boat captain was impressed as only five or six blue marlins in that class are successfully landed each year.

John Loveless passed up an opportunity to have the blue marlin mounted and shipped home, however. "We just don't have room for a trophy that big." Loveless hopes his next deep-sea fishing experience includes another marlin or a sailfish. But, not both at the same time.

BAIT FISHING WITH HELLGRAMMITES

© 1978 L.A. Times Synd.

HELLGRAMMITES ARE A FINE BAIT IN STREAMS FOR TROUT, BASS, ET CETERA ESPECIALLY WHEN FISH ARE FEEDING ON THE BOTTOM.

HOOK THIS NYMPH UNDER COLLAR OR THROUGH ITS TAIL. USE A FINE LEADER WITH AS LITTLE WEIGHT AS POSSIBLE, IF USING FLY-TACKLE, TO DRIFT, BUMPING ON BOTTOM. KEEP LINE TAUT TO FEEL BUMPS. IF DRIFT HALTS, TWITCH LINE TO KEEP BAIT MOVING SO IT WON'T SCRAMBLE UNDER A ROCK AND CLING THERE. IF SO TROUBLED, CLIP TAIL'S "CLAWS" TO MINIMIZE THIS HAZARD.

Rains Revive Lake For Outdoors Usage

UMBARGER (Special)—Recent heavy rains in the Panhandle have solved the dry lake problems at Buffalo Lake National Wildlife Refuge near Umbarger in Randall County, and water sports are again available to area residents.

"The lake now has 17 feet of water at the dam which is more than we have had in 17 years," said Larry Wynn, refuge manager of the lake southwest of Canyon.

"We just received 5,000 largemouth bass from the Parks and Wildlife Department, and it is hoped that we can get some catfish from the Tishomingo hatchery in Oklahoma soon."

The 7,664-acre refuge now has 1,200 acres of surface water and all but one of the picnic tables are available to campers and picnickers. Overnight camping is permitted at the designated campsites and there is no permit required by the public upon entering the refuge.

Boating and water skiing are permitted, provided all state and federal water safety regulations are observed. Skiers are required to wear life preservers at all times, and there must be two persons in the boat pulling a skier—one to operate the boat and one to observe the skier.

Both boaters and skiers must use only those areas designated by buoy lines. Boaters are asked to avoid disturbance of fishermen or swimmers in the lake.

Buffalo lake is considered by mant to be one of the best areas to pbserve waterfowl and other water birds with over 275 species spotted on the refuge since the Department of Interior started managing the area in 1958.

Sightseeing, nature observation, photography, and hiking are permitted except where restricted by appropriate signs. The south end of the refuge is closed to vehicular traffic, and the same area is closed to all activity during waterfowl use from November through February.

More information is available by writing Buffalo Lake Refuge, Box 228, Umbarger, 79091 or by calling 499-3382.

Landowners Need Records For Leasing

AUSTIN (Special) — Midsummer is a good time for hunters to start planning for leases for the fall hunting season, and landowners who plan to lease their land should plan to obtain a hunting preserve license from the Parks & Wildlife Department.

These licenses are required of any owner or manager of a shooting preserve accommodating hunters for pay. The cost is graduated by acreage: less than 500 acres is $10 per year; 500-1,000 acres is $25; 1,000 acres or more is $40.

The landowner also is required to maintain a shooting preserve record book to keep tabs on the number of hunters and their harvest during the hunting season. These books are provided by the department to shooting preserve license holders.

For more information, contact ur local game warden or the department at 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, 78744.

Where They're Biting

Buffalo Springs Lake—The catfish are jumping, and Lubbock anglers are getting them. Fishing in 10 feet of water near the bridge, Philip Parker used a worm to haul in an 11-pound channel cat. Nancy Owens used a worm for bait at a 6-foot depth in the upper lake to land a 6¼-pound channel cat. Barney Greenfield at the concession says the cats are being found on the bottom. Several nice bass weighing 1½-3 pounds were brought in last week. There's plenty of carp action; the bigger ones, 10 to 15 pounds, are going for yellow corn and dough bait. The perch are still biting, but the crappie action is spotty. One angler hooked a pike, but the fighting fish broke the line. It may take a steel leader to bring in the pike. The lake is in good condition.

Lake Baylor— The lake caught over 5 feet of water from recent rains, and boats ramp is now usable. Many bass in the 1-6-pound class have been caught. The largest this year has been an 8 pounder. Channel catfish have been biting fair and crappie fishing is good. The water is clear.

Lake Marvin— The water is overflowing the spillway and the lake is clear. Fishing has been good for spawning sunfish and small bass. Catfish are biting slow.

Lake McClellan—The lake is near spillway level and muddy. Channel catfish are biting good with some weighing 6-9 pounds. Fishing for largemouth bass is improving; bass to 3½ pounds were caught last week. Several striped bass hybrids were also caught. Crappie fishing has slowed since the rains. Both boat ramps can now be used.

Oak Creek Lake—There were some nice channel cats caught on trotlines as well as rod and reel. Wayne Mancell of Littlefield had the largest which weighed 4 pounds 4 ounces. Johnny Houser Jr. of Odessa took home a great string of bass; total weight for nine fish was just over 38 pounds. The lake has adequate water for the launching of boats.

Lake Pauline—The lake is only one foot from the spillway level and in good condition. Fishing for channel catfish has been very good with many catches in the 2-4-pound class with some hitting 8 pounds. Bass fishing has been good for lunkers up to 5 pounds.

Lake Rita Blanca—The lake is up 3½ feet and is muddy. Fishing for bass is very good. Most bass weigh near 3 pounds with a few at the 5-pound mark. Channel catfish are biting fair, but bullheads are biting good.

Lake Theo—The lake has caught more water, and plenty of anglers have been giving the lake a try. Fishing is fair for largemouth bass and catfish.

White River Lake— Michael Shea, the new manager at the marina, reports that all species are biting with most of the action being produced by black bass. Most bass are hitting the scales between 2½ and 5½ pounds. One woman hooked a bass so big in the crappie house that it broke her line; she admitted that the big fish surprised her. The lake is in good condition, and the surface generaly calm.

Lake Whitney— Orville McDaniel of Lubbock had some super fishing, bring in a 3-pound catfish, 4-pound striper and 2-pound black bass. The Lubbockite used a plastic worm while bank fishing in Little Rocky. All species were active last week. The lake is nearly 11 feet below normal and the water temperature is 70 degrees.

Fatalities In Water Increase

By J.D. PEER
Parks & Wildlife Department

A total of 11 water fatalities have been filed by the Parks & Wildlife Department in the Panhandle-South Plains area since the middle of April.

Swimming and fishing accounted for six of the victims with the high flood waters near Canyon accounting for three more victims. All of the persons except one were either under 25 years of age or over 60 years of age.

According to records, drowning is a mjaor cause of accidental death in the United States. It occurs in swimming, diving, boating, and other water related activities. Drowning can also occur in the home—in pools, bathtubs, and washtubs —and in water that is only a few inches deep.

Drowning may occur under a number of circumstances. In some cases, people die in the water from a heart attack, a stroke, or overexertion. Fainting and epileptic attacks occur in water, just as they do on land, and loss of consciousness itself may result in accidental death.

Cramps in the muscles of the hand, foot, calf, thigh, or abdominal wall may incapacitate a swimmer completely because of pain and fright. Many swimmers drown because of inability to judge the distance to shore and their swimming limitations.

The P&WD reminds everyone enjoying summer activities that accidents can happen anywhere at anytime, and close attention should be paid to youngsters wading, swimming or boating while on a picnic or vacation.

The use of a life preserver is required of all persons 12 years of age and younger while the boat is underway in Texas. The best safety tip is to require your young passenger to wear the preserver at all times.

Low Lakes Dangerous For Boaters

AUSTIN (Special)—The Parks & Wildlife Department is receiving reports on hazardous conditions in reservoirs all over the state as a result of drought.

Some lakes are depleted that boat ramps are left high and dry. Where it is possible to launch a boat, many boaters are running into sand bars and islands, but the biggest danger is from hidden tree stumps just at or below the surface and tops of trees on lake beds. Snaky tree limbs are apt to tangle in props or catch the legs of water skiers.

Boat dealers are reporting an increase in damaged props from boats running aground or from props hitting a stump that the boat is able to clear.

The P&WD suggests that boaters on low-level lakes reduce their speed and keep a sharp lookout. Before pulling a water skier, a boat operator—even when traveling in familiar waters—should go over the course to make sure there are no obstructions.

Except in extreme necessity, boaters should stay off lakes after dark, but if caught on them at that time, they should reduce speed and use a spotlight to make sure the wa teris clear ahead.

Also, everyone aboard should have on a life preserver, because if the boat runs aground or into a stump, passengers can be thrown overboard.

For information on boat-ramp etiquette and boat-traffic laws, write the Parks & Wildlife Department, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, 78744, for leaflets "Boating Safety Tips" and "Rules Of The Road."

Rono Wins Easily

LONDON (AP) — Henry Rono, the Kenyan who studies at Washington State University, easily won a disappointing 5,000-meter event in the Amateur Athletics Association Championships at Crystal Palace Saturday.

World record holder Rono never was threatened and won in 13 minutes, 20.78 seconds, 12 seconds slower than the world record he set in California in April.

SCHEDULE RELEASED

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — A three-day trip to Alaska and a home contest with Notre Dame are on North Carolina State's 1978-79 basketball schedule released by Athletic Director Willis Casey. N. C. State will open its season in the Alaska Shootout, which will run Nov. 24-26 in Anchorage. Others in the field will be Indiana and Louisville, perennial powers, plus Pepperdine, Texas AM, Auburn and host Alaska-Anchorage.

Kids—Perfect In Every Way—Lead The Pack

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

"... why can't they be like we were, perfect in every way; oh, what's the matter with kids today?"
—from "Bye-Bye, Birdie."

There's nothing wrong with kids today — and in some cases they are, indeed, perfect in every way.

Consider, if you will, Nancy Lopez or Steve Cauthen or any of half a dozen young whippersnappers who have the audacity (not to mention the talent) to outshine their elders.

radiant 21-year-old rookie who has won a record five consecutive women's pro golf tournaments, and Cauthen, the 18-year-old kid from Kentucky who has won more money (more than a million in purses and a Triple Crown in the process) than any other jockey at a comparable age.

Tracy Austin, at 15, is throwing scares into tennis players twice her age and has matured so rapidly on the courts that she's seeded a highly respectable ninth for the upcoming Wimbledon tournament. Her male counterpart, although not quite so young, is John McEnroe. He burst on the scene at Wimbledon as an 18-year-old a year ago and is back as the No. 11 seed this year.

Then there's Mike Morgan, a high school kid in Las Vegas, Nev., one week and a starting pitcher for the Oakland A's the next, and 21-year-old infielder Paul Molitor, the Milwaukee Brewers' success story.

And there's Wayne Gretzky, a skating prodigy at 5 years old who, 12 years later, became a teenage millionaire with the World Hockey Association's Indianapolis Racers.

And do you remember Nadia Comaneci?

Right now, Miss Lopez has the sports world swooning. The lady from Roswell, N.M., is golf's hottest attraction since Arnold Palmer, so much so that the legendary "Arnie's Army" which trailed its hero from fairway to fairway has been supplanted by "Nancy's Navy."

Only Byron Nelson's 11 straight victories on the men's pro tour is better than her five in a row among the women. And no rookie — male or female — has approached the more than $153,000 she has won since turning pro less than a year ago.

"The privacy is gone but it's exciting. I don't think I'd trade places with anybody else," Miss Lopez said. And she places golf in its proper perspective. "It's only a game. You can't win all the time. As long as you're doing the best you can, that's important."

There's no one on the men's tour even approaching Miss Lopez's heroics — but there is Severiano Ballesteros of Spain, also 21 and also an established winner.

He won the Greensboro Open in his first start in a regular tour event in the United States. In five U.S. appearances he has won $61,758. He was the runnerup in the Britith Open as a 19-year-old two years ago, has been the leading player in Europe the past two years and has played on Spain's last two winning World Cup teams. Last year he won the French and Swiss opens and won other tournaments in England, Japan and Australia.

Quite unlike the ebullient Miss Lopez and Ballesteros is the almost enigmatic Cauthen, hardly more talkative than the mounts he guides to victory.

Since he silently stole out of Walton,

STEVE CAUTHEN

JOHN McENROE

Ky., less than three years ago, he has methodically demolished almost every riding record within reach. Most recently he rode Affirmed to breathtaking victories over Alydar in the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes. People who may have only vaguely heard of Willie Shoemaker, Bill Hartack, Johnny Longden and Eddie Arcaro know all about Cauthen.

deadly serves and volleys. And unlike many of her elders, she seems to genuinely enjoy just about every minute on the court. "She is so young she hasn't learned guile and gamesmanship," Arthur Ashe said. "To her it's still just a game — a fun game like jacks."

She won a few matches at Wimbledon a year ago before losing to Chris Evert, but she wowed 'em at Forest Hills, reaching the quarter-finals before big Betty Stove defeated her. Conversely, McEnroe, from New York, was only so-so at Forest Hills in 1977 — but was the Wimbledon sensation, reaching the semifinals before running into Jimmy Connors.

Morgan, an 18-year-old right-hander at Oakland, was respectable in his major league debut a few weeks back, going the route against Baltimore and losing 3-0. A week later he lost again to the Orioles — but the A's were in the throes of an 11-game losing streak — and the Orioles were winning 17 of 18.

Molitor is a legitimate success story. Last year, his first in pro ball, he won the Midwest League batting title with a .346 average at Burlington, was named Most Valuable Player, a member of the league's all-star team and rated its top major league prospect.

He's living up to the advance billing with a batting average well over .300, up among the American League leaders. "He's really an amazing kid," says Brewers Manager George Bamberger. "He's gifted with great instincts ... A kid like him comes along once every 10 years. He not only has the physical ability; he has his head screwed on the right way, too."

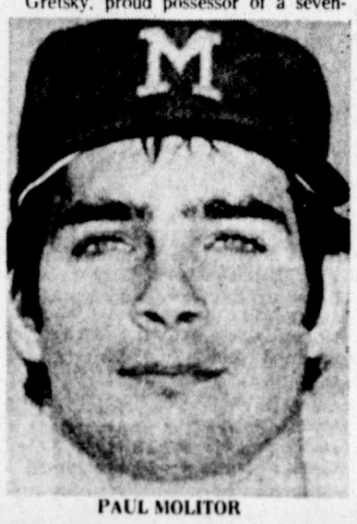

Gretsky, proud possessor of a seven-year, $1.75-million contract, has yet to prove himself in the WHA — but if his numbers there are anything like the ones he racked up last year as a junior (70 goals, 112 assists with Sault Ste. Marie), then the numbers being paid out by the Racers will be worth it. "Gretsky's talent is all in his head," said Sault Ste. Marie's head scout, Fred Litzen. "He's the smartest kid I've ever seen."

Cauthen Opens Up In Talk To Peers

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) — Jockey Steve Cauthen, often a youth of few words, opened up for young questioners here in a way that would turn some sports writers green with envy.

After a day of racing at Belmont in New York, Cauthen hopped a plane for a brief appearance Friday night at a gathering of super-achievers his own age.

The 18-year-old jockey, known for his short answers to the probing questions of sports journalists, talked with the student leaders about horses, riding, his future and even girls.

Gathered for a warm summer evening picnic in a tent near the Ohio river were about 350 of the nation's most honored student orators, journalists, farmers and others.

The American Academy of Achievement's weekend "Salute of Excellence" gave them an opportunity to meet government officials, scientists, show business bignames and other notables.

At first, Cauthen was ill at ease. He mounted a special stand put behind the podium for him, and began haltingly: "All you people my age, you must be very special because you've got an awful lot of nice people setting this up for you."

He said he admired the scholarship of the group and added, "I was no great student.

"Luckily, I found something I could do, which was ride horses — and could make a living at it," he said.

Cauthen's remarks trailed off. Then he kicked the special platform away, resuming his normal short stature, and began answering questions.

The students had plenty.

—What does he say to the horses? Cauthen didn't go into detail, but said, "The only one I've been talking to lately is Affirmed."

—What made him persevere to become the youngest Triple Crown-winning jockey in history? "It's hard to say what drives you. I happened to find this thing I never got bored with."

—What are his plans for the future? "Hopefully, I will last for a while (as a jockey). I'd consider maybe becoming a trainer ... I could go to college and maybe become a vet."

—Does constant attention bother him and make him want to get away by himself? "Yes."

—What is his next goal, having won the Triple Crown? "I don't set any (specific) goals. I only set one goal, to do the best I can."

—How does he psych himself up for a race? "I don't psych myself up. I psych myself down. I think clearer when I'm not psyched up."

—What does he think of female jockeys? "They're nice to talk to," he said.

'Flying Swede' Tries For Three At Wimbledon

LONDON (AP) — Not since the great Fred Perry did it in 1936 has any man managed to win three consecutive singles tennis titles at Wimbledon. On Monday, Bjorn Borg of Sweden starts the long road toward what he hopes will be his third straight.

Emerson and Lew Hoad all won it twice but faltered. There is nothing to suggest it will be any easier for the flying Swede.

Wimbledon, despite the introduction of a plethora of other championships and titles, remains the big one, the world's leading lawn tennis tournament. It is an institution. And for that reason, every top player in the world wants to win a Wimbledon title.

But it is an ambition only few manage to fulfill.

Borg's greatest challenger will almost certainly be the No. 2 seed, enigmatic American Jimmy Connors. He has hit his peak at just the right time. Last week he won the John Player tournament in emphatic style, dropping just six games in a five-set final against Mexico's Raul Ramirez, seeded No.7 at Wimbledon.

"I'm playing better and better," Connors said afterward. "I'm not afraid of anyone the way things are going."

Last year he was beaten in the final at Wimbledon — by Borg.

The value of Wimbledon seeding is that players like Borg and Connors are supposedly protected from their more dangerous rivals until the later stages.

But while Connors has what looks like an easy first-round match against New Zealander Russell Simpson, Borg might well have hoped for an easy opponent initially than 6-foot-7 American Victor Amaya.

Big-serving players like Amaya are always a danger at Wimbledon — but Borg hasn't lost a match here since 1975 when he fell in the quarter-finals to eventual champion Arthur Ashe.

The major challengers to Borg and Connors, the 1974 champion, are mainly Americans.

Vitas Gerulaitis, only 23, is seeded third. Fifth seed Brian Gottfried, who defeated Borg once last year, and Roscoe Tanner, seeded sixth, cannot be overlooked. Tanner was a semifinalist in 1975 and 1976 before going out to Britain's John Lloyd last year in the first round. His powerful game is well-suited to Wimbledon.

It would be foolish, too, to write off such men as fourth-seeded Argentinian Guillermo Vilas, Ilie Nastase, Sandy Mayer, and even the out-of-form Ramirez.

Wimbledon has a habit of bringing out the best in players. It would be no surprise to see a giant-killer emerge from the unknowns.

In the women's singles, however, that is less likely. The women's game is ruled for the most part by Chris Evert, Evonne Goolagong, Martina Navratilova and defending champion Virginia Wade.

There is always a chance that a youngster, perhaps South African Marise Kruger, might surprise everyone. But if the winner is not to come from the top four seeds it might well be the veteran American Billie Jean King, looking a record 20th Wimbledon title.

Navratilova Stops Evert

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Martina Navratilova overcame a 4-1 deficit in the final set, survived a match point and then reeled off three straight games to beat Chris Evert 6-4, 4-6, 9-7 in the final of the Eastbourne International Tennis Championship Saturday.

The match could well have been a preview of the Wimbledon final in two weeks time.

In swirling wind, both women struggled for nearly 2¼ hours in a bitter and enthralling battle. It was not until the two final games that Miss Navratilova looked like she would come out on top.

She won in the end because she seemed to gather strength in the nick of time — just as Miss Evert began to wilt.

Miss Evert called it "a match full of surprises" and she was right. It was a see-saw struggle with first Miss Navratilova, then Miss Evert, and then Miss Navratilova again, on top.

Miss Navratilova started with a 6-4 first-set victory, mainly because Miss Evert, always a slow starter, couldn't gauge the pace of the court at first.

Miss Navratilova, whose game seems tailor-made for grass, would dart toward the net and Miss Evert initially was totally incapable of passing her. Despite trying a few tentative lobs, Miss Evert was netting too frequently.

In the second set, Miss Evert got into a groove, pointing directly into the angle of the base sidelines on Miss Navratilova's backhand. It took her a few games to get this organized by which time she had dropped a service and was trailing 0-3. But once she got that passing forehand working she was very firmly in command.

She got a couple of breaks to go up 5-4 — the ninth game to love — then passed Miss Navratilova twice to take the set at 6-4.

By now, it looked like clear sailing for Miss Evert. When she won two service breaks from Miss Navratilova to take a 4-1 lead in the third set, the match seemed hers.

Miss Navratilova broke Miss Evert and held for 3-4 and 4-5. With Miss Evert serving for the match, it looked liked it was all over for Martina.

Then suddenly disaster loomed for Miss Evert. In the 10th game, Miss Evert double-faulted for the fourth time in the match and Miss Navratilova broke her serve to tie at 5-5, and then went ahead 6-5.

Even then, Miss Evert still was in command and she again looked a like winner. After the advantage went against her three times, she lobbed herself to a break in service to lead 7-6 with her own service to come.

That 14th game was the crucial one of the whole match and the one in which Miss Navratilova suddenly found a fresh supply of energy. On Miss Evert's service Miss Navratilova ran up a 40-15 lead, then squandered it when Miss Evert passed her twice.

Then Miss Evert, at the net, punched away a volley and was at match point. Miss Navratilova extricated herself from that with a volley on her own account — did exactly the same for the next point and won the game with a passing forehand from the baseline.

That put the Czech expatriate, now living in the United States, even at 7-7. Four times in the next game she streaked to the net. Twice she overpowered Miss Evert and twice she forced the American into passing errors for an 8-7 lead.

Although Miss Evert's service still was to come, Miss Navratilova refused to go on the defensive. Miss Evert, badly rattled by now, netted three times after baseline rallies. Then, on the final point, she tried once more unsuccessfully to pass Miss Navratilova at the net.

Afterward, Miss Navratilova explained the course of the match by saying, "I chickened out in the second set and I wasn't hitting my shots decisively. Then in the third I started to go once more for shots and after saving that match point I was confident."

Miss Evert is seeded first for Wimbledon and Miss Navratilova second — as they were here, which means that if the matches go according to form they should meet in the final.

Hughes, Zahn Share Mains At Speedway

J.D. Hughes added to his pile of points at Lubbock Speedway Friday night, winning both the semi and main events for late model stock cars.

The race marked the last pavement race until Monday, July 3, when an intermission fireworks display of appropriate holiday proportions will augment the racing program.

Don Zahn won the feature as well as the heat race as an abbreviated field of winged sprint cars turned out for their once-monthly appearance. The sprint semi went to Charles Bolton and the trophy to Johnny Mount.

Don Suter was a surprise winner of the street stock main event and Jerry Parker took the marbles in the Volkswagen division, winning the semi, main and trophy dash.

John Bain was the only other winner in the late model division, piloting his '77 Trans-Am to a win in the heat ahead of Jay Turner and Hughes. In the semi it was Hughes besting Loyd Blackerby and Bain in that order, while in the main Turner came in second, followed by Dick Wood. The summary:

Hub City Duo To Defend Title

Steve Locke and Rex Robertson figured last year's Gano Tubb Memorial Partnership was more than just another area tournament, and they played that way, too.

"Gano Tubb had been a great man in Levelland," Locke said. "Last year was the first time the tournament had been played in his honor. They had a real big plaque, and we wanted to be the first ones to get our names on it."

Locke and Robertson would also like to be the second winners, too. The Hub City duo defends its title in the 36-hole event this weekend at the Levelland Country Club.

Action will be Saturday and Sunday while two other events, the Lubbock Country Club's members tourney and the Knox City partnership, will also be held next weekend. The 54-hole LCC event begins Friday.

A full schedule of local and area tournaments floods this week, beginning with the West Texas PGA's pro-amateur event at the Treasure Island golf course on Monday.

Then the city junior golf championship tees off Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at Meadowbrook.

For holiday golfers, the Cancer Benefit golf tournament will be held June 3-4 at the Brownfield Country Club. Proceeds go to the American Cancer Society.

San Francisco Squeaks Past Lowly Atlanta 2-1

By The Associated Press

Roger Metzger's two-run double with two out in the sixth inning lifted the San Francisco Giants and Jim Barr to a 2-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves Saturday.

The triumph was the 12th in the past 15 games for the Giants, leaders of the National League West.

Barr, 3-4, blanked the Braves for five innings before Atlanta broke a scoreless tie with a run in the sixth. Barr, winning his first game since May 3, scattered nine hits.

Rookie Bob Horner opened the Atlanta sixth with a double, reached third on Gary Matthews' single and scored on Roland Office's single.

The Giants bounced back with their two runs in the bottom of the inning off loser Phil Niekro, 8-8.

PIRATES 7, METS 4

Pittsburgh scored five runs in the 12th inning to defeat the New York Mets 7-4.

Kent Tekulve, 4-4, the third Pirates' pitcher, was the winner, going 2 2-3 innings before leaving in the 12th for a pinch hitter. Dave Hamilton, the second Pirates pitcher in the 12th after the Mets scored twice, got his first save. Paul Siebert, 0-1, the fourth Mets pitcher, was the loser.

After the Mets scored twice in the 12th, they had the winning run at the plate with the bases loaded and two out before Hamilton got Lenny Randle on a foul pop, ending the game. The first run scored on Tim Foli's double and the second on shortstop Frank Taveras error.

The Mets had tied the score 2-2 in the bottom of the ninth on Randle's sacrifice fly, driving in Willie Montanez, who had homered in the fourth for the Mets' first run.

Montanez led off the ninth with a single, went to second one out later on John Stearns' single and took third when left fielder Bill Robinson overran the ball for an error. Randle's fly ball delivered the run.

The Pirates scored off New York starter Craig Swan in the first on Dave Parker's 12th homer of the season and in the fourth on consecutive two-out singles by Milner, Rennie Stennett and Ed Ott.

Pittsbugh starter Jim Bibby had a four-hitter going into the ninth. But he was relieved by Grant Jackson after Montanez' single. One out later, Tekulve came in.

PHILLIES 6, CUBS 2

Mike Schmidt's two-run first-inning homer started the Philadelphia Phillies toward their fourth consecutive victory, a triumph over the Chicago Cubs and a one-game lead over the second-place Cubs in the National League East.

Larry Bowa singled with one out and Schmidt poled Ken Holtzman's first pitch over the right-field fence for his 11th homer run of the season but his first in two weeks and first at home since May 14.

The Phillies knocked out Holtzman, 0-2, in the second inning when they tallied three runs on three hits, an error, two walks and a wild pitch. It wrapped up the Phillies' third straight victory over the slumping Cubs, losers of five in a row and nine of their last 12.

Garry Maddox started the inning with a triple but was out at the plate one out later on Ted Sizemore's grounder. However, Sizemore took second on a wild pitch and winning pitcher Jim Kaat singled him home to make it 3-0.

Jerry Martin reached on first baseman Larry Biittner's error, Kaat scoring. Bowa's second single sent Martin to third and he scored on a wild pitch by reliever Paul Reuschel for a 5-0 lead.

Chicago picked up a run in the fourth on a single by Manny Trillo, an infield out and Larry Cox' single and added another in the fifth when Ivan DeJesus tripled and scored on Gene Clines' single.

Kaat, 4-1, pitched six innings before giving way to Ron Reed, who was credited with his fourth save.

EXPOS 2, CARDS 0

Recently aquired veteran Woodie Fryman teamed up with Darold Knowles and Mike Garman on a six-hitter and Ellis Valentine singled home the only run Montreal needed as the Expos downed the St. Louis Cardinals.

Fryman, 3-5, a 38-year-old left-hander making only his second start for the Expos, pitched out of first-and sixth-inning jams.

Montreal scored in the third inning off rookie Silvio Martinez, 2-3. Warren Cromartie slashed a two-out single, moved to second when Tony Perez walked and scored on Valentine' single.

In the first inning, the Cardinals had runners on first and third with none out on Garry Templeton's leadoff walk and Jerry Morales' hit-and-run single. Fryman then got Keith Hernandez to hit into a double play with Templeton holding third. Ted Simmons walked but George Hendrick hit into an inning-ending forceout.

Following a two-out single by Mike Tyson in the second, Fryman set down the next 11 batters until Morales smacked a one-out double in the sixth. Morales went to third on a wild pitch but, after a walk to Hernadez, Fryman got Simmons and Hendrick to pop out. Knowles and Garman both came on the eighth inning.

The Expos added a run off Mark Littell in the ninth on Larry Parrish's triple and a single by Dave Cash.

SAN DIEGO 6, HOUSTON 5

Tucker Ashford singled Bill Almon home with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning to give San Diego a 6-5 victory over Houston and move the Padres into fourth place in the National League West, two percentage points ahead of the Astros.

The Padres jumped on reliever Ken Forsch, 2-3, for the winning run when Jerry Turner singled to open the 10th and moved to second on a single by Almon. Winning pitcher Rollie Fingers, 3-7, forced Turner at third attempting to sacrifice but Ashford followed with his game-winning hit.

Houston tied the game 5-5 in the ninth when Enos Cabell led off with a single, went to third on a single by Dave Bergman and scored on Art Howe's double.

The Padres had taken a 5-4 lead with two runs in the eighth.

Boston, Tiant Manage To Hold Down O's 8-3

By The Associated Press

Veteran Luis Tiant of the Boston Red Sox didn't have his best stuff. He faced an early exit. But, in typical El Tiante fashion, he hung tough.

Tiant bailed out of a bases-loaded situation in the fourth inning and allowed just three hits the rest of the way Saturday in pitching the red-hot Boston Red Sox to an 8-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles before a crowd of 32,213 at Fenway Park.

"I thought about taking Luis out two or three times," said Boston manager Don Zimmer, who had relievers warmed up before Tiant settled down. "This type of game shows what your pitching staff is made of. The man didn't have his real good stuff, yet he won the game. It's the sign of a professional."

Tiant allowed only six hits, including three solo homers, but he didn't mind the long ball.

"I don't worry about them getting the homers," Tiant said. "You make a mistake and you pay for it. It's part of the game. I really didn't feel that good, and I didn't figure to go nine today. But in the sixth inning I was throwing okay, and the seventh was okay. I did it from there. I only care about winning."

Butch Hobson drove in two runs with a homer and a single and Carlton Fisk contributed a home run as the Red Sox supported Tiant with a 10-hit attack.

Posting his sixth victory in his last seven starts — he also had one no-decision in that stretch — Tiant allowed seven hits, including solo homers by Rick Dempsey, Eddie Murray and Doug DeCinces in boosting his record to 7-0 for the season.

Dempsey gave Baltimore a 1-0 lead with his fourth homer of the year in the third inning. However, Hobson got that run back with his 15th homer in the Boston third.

Murray drilled his 15th homer, some 15 rows deep into the bleachers beyond the Boston bullpen in right center in the fourth. But Fisk came right back to tie the score with his eighth homer over the left field screen.

TIGERS 4, YANKEES 3

Jason Thompson and Steve Kemp drove in two runs each to help Jim Slaton to his seventh victory as the Detroit Tigers edged the visiting New York Yankees 4-3.

The Tigers jumped on Yankee starter Ken Clay for three runs in the opening inning, one on a single by Thompson following a walk to Lou Whitaker and a single by Rusty Staub, then two on a single by Kemp.

After the Yankees tied it 3-3 with two runs in the second inning, Whitaker doubled in the third off Dick Tidrow, 3-5, and scored the winning run on a single by Thompson.

Mitchell Cops Solid Lead At Seminole

SEMINOLE (Special)—Lubbockite Jeff Mitchell, taking a break from the PGA tour, went out and grabbed a solid lead in the Gaines County Open Golf Tournament Saturday.

After two rounds, Mitchell, the former Texas Tech golfer who played last weekend in the Buick Open, is the leader in the annual Gaines County pro-am tournament.

Playing in the professional flight, Mitchell has a two-round total of 132 on the par-72 course. Standing second in the division is George Clark of Midland at 140.

Today's action will wind up the tournament, and first golfers tee off at 9 a.m.

New York scored its opening run in the first inning on singles by Graig Nettles and Thurman Munson and Reggie Jackson's grounder.

CHISOX 7, TWINS 4

Claudell Washington drove in four runs with a homer and triple and Wayne Nordhagen hit a solo homer to pace the Chicago White Sox to a 7-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Washington blasted his second homer of the season after Alan Bannister walked to trigger a four-run sixth, which also included Nordhagen's third homer and a run-scoring triple by Eric Soderholm.

Washington tripled in the seventh after Don Kessinger's double and a bunt single by Bannister and then scored on a sacrifice fly by Nordhagen.

The victory snapped a four-game Chicago losing streak and went to Wilbur Wood, 7-5, although he needed help from Jim Willoughby in the seventh and Lerrin LaGrow in the ninth. Rookie Darrell Jackson, 1-1, was the loser and yielded the two home runs.

The Twins scored an unearned run in the first inning when José Morales reached on a wild pitch third strike, went to second on another wild pitch and scored when Dan Ford's grounder went through second baseman Jorge Orta for an error.

RANGERS 3, ANGELS 0

Jon Matlack tossed a two-hitter for his first American League shutout and Richie Zisk, Bobby Bonds and Bobby Thompson drove in the runs as the Texas Rangers stopped the visiting California Angels 3-0 for their fifth consecutive triumph.

Matlack, who has only a 6-8 record but a 2.57 earned run average, allowed only infield singles to Dave Machemer and Dave Chalk and only one California runner reached second. He walked one and struck out five.

Texas scored its first two runs off loser Dave Frost, 0-1, just back from the minors. The first one came in the third inning when Bump Wills singled with two out, stole second and came home on a single by Zisk.

Texas scored in the fifth without a hit.

The Indians took the lead for good after Tom Veryzer led off the third with the first of his three hits and went to second when center fielder Bob Bailor bobbled the ball for an error. Jim Norris followed with a run-scoring single to tie the game, Rick Manning's single moved Norris to third and Bell tripled down the right field line for a 3-1 lead. Johnny Grubb added a run-scoring single, chasing Clancy.

BREWERS 5, M's 0

Jerry Augustine pitched a three-hitter and Gorman Thomas and Larry Hisle belted two-run homers, leading the Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-0 victory over Seattle that snapped the Mariners' winning streak at a club record five games.

Augustine, 8-8, gave up a two-out single to Bob Stinson in the third inning and retired 17 of the first 18 batters until Larry Milbourne singled with two out in the sixth.

ROYALS 7, A's 5

Pete LaCock homered and doubled to drive in four runs and Andy Hassler recorded his first victory of the season as the Kansas City Royals downed the Oakland A's.

LaCock, a reserve first baseman, unloaded a three-run homer to cap a five-run first inning off Steve Renko, 2-3. In the third, he tagged reliever Steve McCatty with an opposite-field double to left that scored Al Cowens.

Hassler, who cut his hand in a spring training accident and didn't pitch until May 14, turned over a bases-loaded jam to Doug Bird with none out in the sixth.

Schoendienst, Finley 'Get Along'

NEW YORK (AP) — Red Schoendienst has an unusual relationship with Charlie Finley. He gets along with him.

"Mr. Finley and I have have a fine working relationship," says Schoendienst, 55, who coaches for the Oakland A's and their unpredictable owner. "We have an understanding that I won't manage here, that I am here just to coach, to get out on the field and work with the players."

Since Schoendienst was one of the best managers in baseball with the St. Louis Cardinals, it wouldn't surprise anybody if Finley asked him to take over the A's. But considering how often Finley fires or loses managers, it is no wonder Schoendienst is satisfied just being a third base coach.

"I wasn't approached by Charlie to take over the club when Bobby Winkles left," says Shoendienst. "Charlie knows I came here to coach and work with the players on a close besis, something you can't always do as a manager. I feel fortunate to have this position right now.

"At the end of the season I'll re-evaluate things and probably look to get back into managing. I expect I will manage again in the major leagues sometime.

"I would like a good club, of course. I haven't solicited anything yet but I think my track record will warrant someone being interested in me."

As manager of the Cardinals during 1965-1976, his teams won two pennants and one World Series and finished second three times. He was fired by the Cardinals after a 72-90 record and a fifth-place finish.

Considering the problems the Cards have experienced since Red's departure, one wonders if team president August Busch regrets having fired him.

changes when I was there," says Schoendienst, a former All-Star second baseman. "Apparently he did when Vern Rapp took over. The whole business with no facial hair or long hair was Mr. Busch's idea but he had been vetoed before.

"I really don't know Vern Rapp that well so I can't say what problems he might have caused over there. But I think Kenny (Boyer, who starred at third base under Schoendienst) will get it straight."

Schoendienst sees quite a change in the game since he retired after the 1963 season. "Players get to the majors much quicker now," he says. "There were 32 or 34 minor league clubs in the St. Louis organization when I started and now there are four.

"I don't think attitudes of players change. They play hard no matter who it's for. In fact, sometimes they play too hard. Look at a kid like Lyman Bostock. He signs (with California) for all that money and he tries so hard to earn it. He presses trying to show he's worth the money and he has trouble."

Hesaru Grabs Upset Win At Ruidoso

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (Special) —Hesaru, owned by Ruth Sanders of El Paso, easily overtook heavily favored Jimmylin to win Saturday's feature duel at Ruidoso Downs.

Hesaru settled in third place during the backstretch run of the 5½-furlong sprint while the 5-1 shot, Un and Crafty, took up the lead postition. The 3-5 choice, Jimmylin, was snug against the rail, not far behind.

At the turn for home, Jimmylin stalled while trying to slip through tight quarters against the rail. When he finally did get througm he was unable to hold off Hesaru's strong late charge.

Hesaru hit the finish line with a 2¼-length lead and covered the distance in 1:07 4/5, paying $7.20, $2.60, and $2.20. Jimmylin refunded $2.40 and $2.20. Nu and Crafty held on for third paying $2.20.

Track, Field Groups Merge

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — The removal of a longtime rival sanctioning body could pave the way for the betterment of track and field competition in the United States, the head of the Amateur Athletic Union's track program said Saturday.

"It's very possible something great will come out of this," said James Carnes, AAU track and field director, referring to a merger of the U.S. Track Coaches Association (USTCA) and the U.S. Track and Field Federation, (USTFF).

The plan to combine both organizations was announced before the start of Saturday's AAU national junior track and field championships at Indiana University.

The USTFF, long a rival of the AAU —which claims sole governing powers over amateur track and field in America —is actually dissolving, according to Louisiana State University track Coach Bill McClure, president of the USTFF.

While the other half of the merger will remain a functioning body, it will be part of a larger, new organization encompassing all aspects of track and field in America, known as Track and Field Association of the USA (TFAUSA), said Auburn track coach Mel Rosen, the newly elected president of USTCA.

"All organizations with an interest in track, and that means college organizations, junior college organizations, high school, will all have a say in this new association (TFAUSA)," Rosen said.

Rosen emphasized that the new organization would be primarily a line of communication between the various track and field organizations around the country.

He said the idea for the new unified organization came out of a recent vote by college coaches requesting an organization of that type.

"It's not an organization fighting the AAU. It's another organization trying to do the same work of fostering track and field at a grass roots level. International competition will still be run by the AAU," Rosen said.

While welcoming the formation of the new organization, Carnes ephasized the sanctioning authority of the AAU. "We're still the governing body of track and field. We're the only ones recognized by the International Amateur Athletic Federation (IAAF)."

Everyone involved in the new organization is hoping it will act as a type of clearing house for new ideas, development and information.

Rosen said the new organization has set up an ad hoc committee to look for a director. Future plans also include the appointment of a 55-person governing board made up of anyone with a national track program, on the collegiate, high school or private amateur level.

"I hope the AAU realizes we're forming this organization to get some things done in track. There are a lot of places for improvement. Maybe it will take some of the pressure off the AAU," Rosen said.

"It's very exciting to see this taking place," Carnes said. "I hope it will provide communication and an improvement to all facets of track and field. We're all pulling together for the betterment of the sport."

Foyt Doubts Chances For Schaefer Victory

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) — Despite his lofty starting position, A.J. Foyt, the only two-time winner of the event, says he doubts he'll be much of a factor in today's eighth annual Schaefer 500 Indianapolis car race.

"My car is not handling good and it's not running good," Foyt said resignedly. "That's a pretty hard combination to overcome."

Foyt qualified fourth in his Coyote, with an average speed of 188.206 mph, which was not that far behind the pole position winning speed posted by Danny Ongais of 190.335 mph.

"That was just qualifying," Foyt noted. "I can't run that speed in the race itself."

The six-time national champion said he'd be more inclined to put his money on Ongais' chances than his own.

"He's a good race driver, a good contestant. He's worked hard, and so has his crew, to get the advantage he has," Foyt said of the three-time winner this season.

"We've got some catching up to do."

Foyt's teammate, George Snider, didn't seem any better off, although he had his Coyote running well enough to qualify before Foyt did. Snider's mount spent most of Friday being torn down for repairs.

"We didn't even decide we were going to run the car until Thursday morning before I qualified," said Snider, who works for Foyt at his ranch in Hockley, Texas when not driving.

Foyt and Snider almost had to sit out this race, second leg in U.S. Auto Club racing's triple crown and the so-called "Indianapolis 500 of the East."

On the way to the track, a restraint holding Foyt's car in place over Snider's in their semi-trailer transporter broke, plunging Foyt's car down on top of Snider's.

Crew members didn't discover what had happened until they arrived at the track, opened the transporter's doors, and found the interior in a shambles.

Fortunately, there was only minor damage, which was quickly repaired.

Foyt was able to get his car out on the track in time to get a few practice laps before qualifying. But it was obvious several other cars had an advantage, including Ongais, defending champion Tom Sneva, Johnny Rutherford, Mario Andretti and Gordon Johncock.

SPC Adds Recruits

LEVELLAND (Special)—South Plains College added three more athletes to the list of track recruits for the 78-79 season including an All-American distance runner from Brownsville.

Anthony Villalon, from James Pace High School in Brownsville, will participate in the cross-country and track teams at SPC. During high school, Villalon specialized in the mile and two-mile run.

Gary Gilmore of Henrietta also has joined SPC, and another sprinter, Danny Wilson, from Lockney, will add needed depth to the sprinting squad.

Racing Dream Takes Upswing

By Dick Alwan
Ruidoso Downs Publicist

RUIDOSO, N.M.—In 1976, Gerald Blue of Amarillo happened by the All-American sale at Ruidoso Downs and was beset by an itchy trigger finger.

checkbook. The total damage came out to $161,500. "I was convinced if we were going to get into the horse business, we had to pay good money to get good runners."

So when all the shouting was over, Blue had forked over $87,000 for Hanks Azure Doll, $29,000 for Indi Goes, $30,000 for Holy Helen, and $15,000 for Air Male.

All of which is a fairly steep climb for a retired restaurant executive who was merely trying to get his feet wet in the racing game and help while away his golden years.

In 1969, a California restaurant chain decided to expand its horizons and dispatched Blue to Amarillo to open its first Texas eatery. Later, Blue also did his missionary work in Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana.

In 1975, Blue was ready to retire, and by that time, he and his wife (everyone calls her "Pete," a derivative of her maiden name, Peterson) had decided Amarillo was too good to leave. During those years there, they became interested in Quarter Horses, but it was just a casual dabbling. "At first, we didn't have any real running horses," he says.

But racing was always close to Blue's heart. As a young man of 14, he took his first job as a messenger for his uncle, Hugh Blue, who ran the turf club at Santa Anita. So the yen to race horses was always there. In 1976, Blue needed a wedding anniversary present for Pete and paid $9,000 for the two-year-old Quarter Horse, Saynomer. The colt raced at Ruidoso but was no world-beater and was finally sold to trainer Bubba Werner for $2,000.

With this episode under his belt, Blue reached that conclusion about having to invest heavier cash to get winning stock, departed for the All-American sale, and shortly separated himself from $161,500.

But things never panned out. Hanks Azure Doll has been sore since she started racing and has earned practically nothing. Indi Goes fractured a leg in the All-American Futurity trials. He had all the guts in the world, Blue says, but had to be sold at a loss. Holy Helen is presently racing in South Texas and hasn't made much dough. In fact, she's still a maiden. ("But she's well-bred, and we still have hopes for her. We'll be breeding her in the fall.")

Air Male showed some speed at Del Rio where he tied the 350-yard record, but he's since dropped $10,000 claiming races at Ruidoso and doesn't appear to be going anywhere too fast.

So far, these details reflect a nosedive for Blue's racing dreams. But the story took a sharp upswing a few weeks ago when a newer member of the Blue team, a filly called Gentlemens Feature, electrified the Quarter Horse world with a heart-thumping nose win in Ruidoso's $499,000 Kansas Futurity.

The filly literally came up from left field, sticking her nose in front on the last wrenching jump. The fact she carried odds of nearly 21-1 made the turnabout even more impressive. Oddest of all, perhaps, was the fact Pete—not Blue—sorted the filly out of last year's All-American sale for a modest $16,500.

Blue explains: "Before the sale, Pete spotted the filly, liked her looks. She said the filly looked to her like she could run. But I supposed the main reason she liked the filly was because she knew her breeder."

Blue's trainer, H.C. Werner, (the same fellow who bought Saynomer) decided the filly might be a good buy. They planned on a ceiling of $16,000.

In the heat of the bidding, though, Pete didn't stop at $16,000. "Bubba and I were shaking our heads," Blue now smiles. "The fellow she was bidding against dropped out at $16,000, because the way Pete was going, it didn't look like she was going to quit."

So when Gentlemens Feature took that photo decision in the Kansas Futurity, she bagged $162,502. Since then, the Blues have been getting congratulatory letters and phone calls, and, "we found out we have a lot of friends we didn't know we had."

Winning the Kansas Futurity, Blue admits, was a great emotional drama. "I can't think of anything to compare with it. It shows it can happen to anyone. We now feel those earlier investments have been justified. If Gentlemens Feature provides us with the wherewithal, we'll spend some of it at this year's All-American sale."

But Blue is no longer a racing neophyte. "I've learned you can't buy everything you want," he says. So when he visits the All-American sale, he'll do so with "the intent to spend less."

Still, he likes to go first class, and he's no piker. "We haven't set any lids on anything we might want to buy."

Boys Ranch To Celebrate Anniversary

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

West Texas Boys Ranch near San Angelo celebrates its 39th birthday July 8 with a rodeo and barbecue highlighting the day's events.

Public open house at the ranch, 17 miles west of San Angelo, begins at 3 p.m. with boys now at the ranch conducting tours for visitors including ex-residents, former staff members and past directors.

At 5 p.m. an old-fashioned barbecue gets underway along the banks of Spring Creek. There is no price tag for the barbecue, but donations may be made to help defray the cost.

A flag ceremony at 6:45 p.m. by the Boy Scouts of America Troop 302 will lead into the highlight of the day — the 16th annual All-Boy Rodeo at 7 p.m. The event is free entertainment for all comers.

WTBR, with a concept for not branding a boy but building a man of a disadvantaged youngster, was founded by business and civic leaders from throughout West Texas, working mainly through the San Angelo Optimists Club and other local organizations.

Licensed as a private boy-care home by the state, WTBR meets all the requirements and standards of the Texas Department of Human Resources. It is governed by a 50-member board of directors and is a charter member of the National Association of Homes for Boys.

WTBR operates entirely on public donations and has no government funding. It's philosopy is to provide a planned program of boy care within a working ranch environment.

The ranch program is designed to develop human potentials during the formative years and increase the probability of these youths becoming good and productive citizens.

Residents at the ranch are boys who have been left homeless, neglected or dependent through circumstances beyond their control.

The ranch began in 1947 with enough pledges to purchase the Sam Kistler Ranch on Spring Creek, starting out with one house, one set of house parents and one boy.

Today the 963-acre ranch is divided into three geographical areas — a community living area, a cultivated crop area and a pasture rangeland area.

In the living area, which covers about 20 acres, there are living quarters for 72 boys, a non-denominational chapel, food service center, gymnasium auditorium, student center, vocational center, auto shop, livestock training center, vehicle storage sheds, lawn and garden shop plus administration building.

Other facilities include staff housing, recreation areas, rodeo arena, landing strip, swimming pool which also is a fire protection reservoir and a water treatment plant.

More than 800 former residents testify to the success of the ranch philosophy by their own lives after leaving the ranch home.

LAYING HIS LOOP — Bill Price, 1977 roundup chairman for West Texas Boys Ranch, demonstrates his roping skill during competition at the OS Ranch Steer Roping and Art Exhibit, which is WTBR's largest fundraising event. The ranch home for boys will celebrate its 30th birthday with open house and reunion July 8.

Annual fund drives, termed roundups by volunteers, occur in 40 West Texas counties with county roundup chairmen volunteering to take on the task of coordinating efforts in their individual counties.

The annual OS Ranch Steer Roping and Art Exhibit near Post, which is the largest fund-rasing endeavor and funnels about $40,000 into WTBR coffers each year, is an outgrowth of one county chairman's idea to give donors something for their donations.

Enthusiasm for the unique event catapulted the roping-art show into a major Texas happening the first weekend of each October.

The nation's top steer ropers and the latest thing in top western art draw thousands to the show founded by OS boss Jim Prather.

Since the dramatic success of the OS benefit, a number of additional ropings around West Texas have added their efforts to WTBR.

Bill Price of Lubbock, who began as a county roundup chairman, served as the 1977 chairman for the entire WTBR roundup. Price also is a member of the WTBR board of directors.

Plains Fair Slates Statler Brothers

The Statler Brothers, who have racked up more than three dozen major awards since breaking into the country music field in 1964, will be entertaining at the 61st annual Panhandle South Plains Fair here Sept. 23-30.

Fair general manager Steve L. Lewis said the popular group will be on stage in Fair Park Coliseum for two performances — 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. — on Sept. 25.

They join the Johnny Rodriquez show, also featuring Linda Hargrove, which has been signed for one show on Sept. 26, and the Jim Ed Brown show, featuring Helen Cornelius and Wendy Holcombe, for a single show on Sept. 27.

Three other shows will be announced later, Lewis said.

The Statlers are four young men from Virginia, including Harold Reid and Don Reid (the only two brothers), Lew DeWitt and Phil Balsley. All were reared in the Shenandoah Valley.

Discovered by Johnny Cash while making an appearance in Roanoke, Va., in 1964, they later joined his road show and were signed to a Columbia Records contract by Cash.

Shortly thereafter, the group made its first million-seller, "Flowers on the Wall." In 1965, the Statler Brothers were nominated for four Grammy awards and won two of them. Since then, they've scored consistently, winning many major awards — some more than once.

Appearances have taken them to England, Ireland, Scotland, Italy, Germany, Australia, New Zealand, Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Canada and Hawaii. They've played in the London Palladium, Carnegie Hall, The Astrodome and Hollywood Bowl, to name a few, plus countless television programs and recording dates.

Currently, the group records for Mercury.

Tickets for all of the shows on tap for the 1978 fair are priced at $4, $5 and $6. All seats are reserved.

City Rebate More Than $1 Million

Lubbock will receive more than $1 million for its June city sales tax rebate, according to the state comptroller's office.

This month's net payment will be $1,088,405, which is about $407,565 or 19 percent more than for the same period last year. The June check will bring the city's 1978 payments to date to $3,621,581, the comptroller's office said.

Lubbock's hefty check and healthy increase are part of a statewide trend of higher tax allocations for the first half of 1978. Comptroller Bob Bullock said rebates this year are running 17.5 percent ahead of last year.

Checks totaling $60.9 million have been sent to 900 Texas cities as their June share in the local option one percent sales tax.

The latest checks raise the cities' share to date this year to $196.5 million, compared to $167.2 million for the first half of 1977.

Houston received the largest check, for $12.3 million. That brings its total for the year to $40.8 million, a 20 percent increase over the same period last year.

City sales tax allocations for the year are up 11 percent in Dallas, 15 percent in Fort Worth, 10 percent in San Antonio and 17 percent in Austin.

The tax is collected by local merchants along with the state sales tax and is rebated to the cities monthly.

South Plains towns that will receive June rebates include Abernathy, $4,943; Andrews, $41,525; Aspermont, $4,454; Big Spring, $143,111; Bovina, $2,081;

Politicians Eye 'Little Texas'

By CARROL W. CAGLE
A-J Correspondent

SANTA FE — The southeastern area of New Mexico known in political circles as "Little Texas" because of its proximity to that state and because of its conservatism will be courted strongly by both parties in the general election campaign.

That's the consensus of several key observers from both parties who noted that Bruce King's intra-party challenger, Bob Ferguson, ran strongly in the area and stressed conservative themes.

Some conservative Democrats are "showing signs of interest in (Pete) Domenici and (Joe) Skeen," said one Democratic tactician, referring to the GOP candidates for U.S. Senate and governor.

Ferguson, the lieutenant governor, showed strength in Chaves County, 2,747 to 1,954 for King, and in Lea County, 2,930 to 1,741.

However, the GOP's Skeen will have to proceed cautiously in pushing too strongly with purely conservative political positions. Ferguson barely carried his home county of Eddy (Carlsbad and Artesia), 4,763 to 4,502.

Part of this slim victory in his home area can be attributed to his strong emphasis on the need for New Mexico to adopt a "right-to-work" law which would ban the union shop. Labor unions vigorously opposed the notion, and the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education (COPE) endorsed King.

One Democratic legislator from "Little Texas" predicted that Skeen would emphasize conservative views in his race against King but added: "However, Ferguson tried to do that, too, and it didn't come across."

It should be noted that King ran strongly in one conservative southeastern county where Ferguson might have have expected to do better, Curry County. King carried it handsomely, 2,950 to 1,851.

Another aspect of the primaries that might have bearing on any philosophical themes enuciated during the general campaign is that young State Sen. Tom Rutherford, a liberal on most issues, showed good strength in his second-place showing in the Democratic lieutenant governor's race.

Rutherford carried Chaves County (1,564 to second-running Odis Echols, 1,141), Otero County (1,586 to second-running Bob Mondragon, 1,347) and McKinley County (1,238 to 1,194 for Mondragon). All are in the generally conservative Second Congressional District.

Meanwhile, 29-year-old Chis Brown, a veteran political organizer whose experience includes Jerry Apodaca's gubernatorial campaign in 1974 and Jimmy Carter's national campaign in 1976, will be working on both Toney Anaya's race for the U.S. Senate and doing some nominal work for Harold Runnels' unopposed congressional re-election.

Brown was involved in Ferguson's unsuccessful intra-party race for the gubernatorial nomination as well, of which he says: "I guess I blew my chance to work for a front-runner. But of the two, I felt Bob had somewhat more of chance in the general election."

Of that race against King, Brown says much emphasis was placed on a media advertising plan to try to overcome King's better name identification among rank-and-file Democrats.

"We always figured a media campaign was the way to go," he said. "Maybe we made a mistake. But I think the media did contribute to our victories (in some counties)."

Brown says, though, that King should do well among all Democratic voters in November, adding: "I for one intend to do what I can to see that happens."

Tech Photo Course Studies 35mm Work

By popular demand, the longest-running shortcourse series in the history of Texas Tech University will continue this summer with a 35mm camera offering open to anyone residing in the South Plains area.

To be activated from Tech's repertoire of photo shortcourses, beginning photography will meet on Thursdays from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. for six weeks starting July 20.

The course will be taught by John McKinney, a former cover photographer and now a member of the Mass Communications faculty. "If past patterns repeat," the teacher noted, "a second class will be set up for Tuesday nights, to accommodate the applicant overflow."

The photo series comprised of beginning photography, intermediate photography and agricultural photography, began in April, 1977.

Beginning photography teaches simple skill of how to operate the 35mm camera before major interest is placed on how to shoot good pictures. While special attention will be given to the 35mm camera, unnecessary technicalities that tend to discourage the beginner will be bypassed.

Emphasis, it was reported, will be on how to recognize and shoot better pictures. No darkroom will be involved. Course assumes that students will use their own cameras and have their films processed commercially.

The sessions will treat in depth how to find and shoot worthy subjects. Among picture subjects that students will see "critiqued" on the projection screen are landscapes, national parks, children, sunsets, farm and ranch scenes, sports, travelogues, adult portraits, silhouettes, animals, closeup photography, and night effects.

Common mistakes to avoid in composing, lighting, focusing, and timing will be covered throughout the course.

For 20 years McKinney served as photographic editor and cover photographer with Progressive Farmer and Southern Living magazines. Teaching photo groups intermittently over a span of some 25 years carried him to Malaysia in 1973, where as a Peace Corps volunteer he organized and taught beginning photography at the Universiti Pertanian Malaysia. From the Orient he came to the Tech campus in 1977, bringing with him the concept that is now beginning photography.

McKinney was graduated from Cornell University and later studied at the New York Institute of Photography. The veteran teacher has visited most of the national parks and traveled 40 countries on five continents. Pictures from his camera run the gamut from sunsets on the South China sea to aerials over Lubbock.

Tuition for beginning photography is $30 per person. At the end of the course a certificate will be awarded to each student qualifying. Information is available in the Mass Communications Building, Room 102. To receive an application form for enrollment by mail, phone 742-3385.

APARTMENTS SOUGHT

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Mayor Ernest N. Morial has asked that anyone with an apartment to rent offer it to a tenant of a problem-plagued complex owned by a New Mexico man. Gas was cut off in the 52 units of the Crescent Arms Apartments earlier this week and the city Sewerage and Water Board has threatened to cut off the water because the complex owner has not paid the bill. Tenants complain that the complex is rat-infested and that sewer lines are backing up due to poor repairs.

Artifacts Suggest Dig Site Was Outlaw Stopover

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

EARTH — Stacked rocks emerging from Lamb County sand dunes west of Earth could be a lot of things — a cibolero or Comanchero stopover, a sheep shelter, a mustanger camp or a few other things.

But, current conjecture from researchers headed by Eddie Guffee of the Llano Estacado Museum of Plainview make the famous Soda Lake Ruins out to be a possible outlaw hideout.

Today's thinking could change with the next rock moved or the next shovelful of sand sifted, but finds so far set thoughts on the outlaw trail.

Guffee, curator of archaeology and assistant director for the Plainview museum, is investigating three sand dunes under a grant from the Texas Historical Foundation.

The ruins, obviously stacked for some use by man, have intrigued passersby since the first settler stopped to wonder who could have been the architect in prepioneer times.

Summer research was begun in hopes of finding that answer, but proof may lie with artifacts removed long ago by the curious probing of the sands or picking up what was revealed by fickle sands shifting here and there around the rock formations.

In the century since recovered artifacts first rolled on the dirt floor of a small room, the area has changed, leaving crumbling rock ruins atop dunes in a sand blowout.

Sage, cactus and the bewildering presence of exotic-looking flowers dot the rolling sandhills, and loose sand moves constantly to the northeast ahead of a prevailing wind.

A small rectangular room, with a fireplace and no known door, and a circular area with a nearby pile of rocks in a square arrangement have been unearthed since investigation began the last of May.

By mid-July, Guffee hopes also to investigate a fourth sand dune showing rock in a manner to tempt the archaeologist.

A few poker chips, a multitude of cartridge shells, a guitar string and two matched spur rowels "small enough for a woman" set Guffee's thoughts toward a hangout for passing outlaws.

All the discoveries have been of 1870s vintage, a time that saw the end of the Comanchero, the arrival and departure of the Anglo buffalo hunter and the beginning of Anglo travelers in increasing numbers.

If they — or the New Mexico ciboleros or pastores — used the shelters, the evidence has been carted away or still lies somewhere in the sand.

The 1870s also were times when any area just west of civilization was dubbed Robbers Roost, where those evading the law camped, then moved on when the settler arrived with the law close behind.

Buffalo hunter J. Wright Mooar, who settled near Snyder where he killed his rare white buffalo, often said he could find many men who would help him with his hunting in West Texas, but could find no one to haul the hides and meat back to settled areas.

Also, there is the story of an early-day ranch "somewhere out in the sandhills" that was a stopover for outlaws.

"This would bring in the Billy the Kid, and all that," Guffee noted.

It would bring in, also, the massive exodus of the lawless from Indian Territory to the open spaces of New Mexico when the territory became Oklahoma.

On the other hand, the rocks could have sheltered mustangers who were after the many wild horses roaming nearby New Mexico.

The circular area, believed by Guffee to be a small corral and the adjacent area a tack shed, is large enough for about 100 sheep, too few for a wandering pastore to tend. It would hold several horses for a passing outlaw or the ritual of one being broken to ride by a wild horse hunter or early cowboy.

The dune area is hidden from view, discoverable only from prior knowledge or accident.

Three small circular rock formations suggest plenty of water for whatever activity, an idea to be investigated by Guffee if time permits this summer.

With luck, soon all the wondering will find at least one occupant who played poker, strummed a guitar, chewed at least two brands of tobacco, tossed his empty tin cans just outside, and emptied his .45 shells on the floor, and soothed his ills with "Davis Vegetable Painkiller."

EMERGING PAST — The Soda Lake Ruins, which met the first Lamb County pioneers and have intrigued all viewers since, are under investigation by the Llano Estacado Museum of Plainview. At left, the circular formation believed to be a corral emerges from a sand dune west of Earth, and, at right, museum assistant director Eddie Guffee, foreground, works with a trowel while Eddie Jr., center, and Doug Boyd of Tulia sift dirt removed from the floor of a stone room. (Staff Photos)

RELIC COMING UP — Eddie Guffee, curator of archaeology and assistant director of the Llano Estacado Museum of Plainview, examines a length of chain uncovered in a dump area just outside a dwelling area with the floor showing to the upper left in the Soda Lake Ruins near Earth. (Staff Photo)

CLUES TO THE PAST — A large bottle, believed to contain strychnine, and a small one labeled, in the glass, "Davis Vegetable Painkiller" are among items excavated at the Soda Lake Ruins in Lamb County. Shells, 44.40 and 45 caliber, make up 25 percent of discoveries by researchers from the Plainview museum. (Staff Photo)

Earthquake Registered Near Yugoslav Border

TRIESTE, Italy (AP) — An earthquake registering 5.5 on the Richter scale struck an area around the Yugoslav-Albanian border Saturday night, the Trieste seismological institute reported.

There were no reports of injuries or damage.

The area of the tremor is about 150 miles west of Salonika, Greece, where a powerful quake registering 6.5 on the Richter scale rocked the city on Tuesday, killing at least 45 persons.

Light aftershocks continued to shake parts of the Balkan region Thursday and Friday, including a series of tremors Thursday in northwest Romania near the town of Oradea on the Hungarian border. No injuries or damage were reported there.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area, 4 moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 severe damage. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage; 8 is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 7.9 on the Richter scale.

Footprints made 15,000 years ago are preserved by a natural film of calcite in the cave of Pech-Merle in southern France, and primitive paintings equally old have been found on cave walls there and elsewhere.

JAIL EVACUATED

FORT PAYNE, Ala. (AP) — Prisoners were evacuated from the DeKalb County Jail in northeast Alabama early Saturday when fire broke out in some mattresses in the drunk tank, Sheriff Bill Ables said. The jail's 24 prisoners were taken to the Fort Payne City Jail across the street.

Big Spring Chamber Gets Budget

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — The board of directors of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce approved a budget of $51,125 for the last six months of the year.

Adding this figure with that of the first six months, the budget for the year totaled $113,000, approximately $13,000 more than last year's budget.

"The major increase came in the areas of salaries and general operating costs. And, of course, inflation had something to do with it," said Bill Albright, executive vice-president of the chamber.

"But the important thing is that our new members increased the income by $14,000, which covers the difference."

Albright said the size of the budget is deceiving.

"For both this year and last year, about $23,000 has been provided by the city for industrial growth and development work by the chamber. This means that actual expenditures for 1977 came to $77,000, and $90,000 for this year," said Albright.

The board also approved a staff realignment proposed by Albright. Although the realignment will entail no new staff members or extra expenditures, job definitions for four fulltime and two part-time employees will be clarified.

WATER REQUEST APPROVED

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Public Utility Commission has approved an application by the City of Littlefield to amend its certificates of convenience and necessity for water service within Lamb County. The request was one of 48 uncontested matters, and a total of 77 requests, acted on at a PUC voting session.

Surveillance Easier With New Technology 1984

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of three articles prepared in cooperation with Purdue University.)

NEWS ITEM: A two-way TV system is proposed for Baltimore. Besides carrying regular programming, the system would automatically read utility meters and, in case of fire, summon firefighters even if the set is turned off. A proponent notes that the system would also speed up tax collection, police investigations and "identity searches."

NEWS ITEM: L. Patrick Gray III, former acting director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and two former aides are indicted by a federal grand jury. They are charged with authorizing illegal break-ins during an FBI search for radical fugitives in the early 1970s.

In George Orwell's "1984," the symbolic figure of Big Brother, head of the Party, appears everywhere. The slogan, "Big Brother is watching you," reminds citizens that they are never safe from the dreaded thoughtpolice.

The Gestapo-like thoughtpolice know everything about everybody. While America has no thoughtpolice yet, modern technolgy is bringing closer the day when it will be easy to know a great deal about almost everyone.

Richard P. Paul, associate professor of electrical engineering at Purdue, observes that existing technology makes it easy for government to spy on citizens but developments to come in the near future may propel America "right into '1984.'"

Television may become a two-way medium in a few years. When that happens, it may be possible to eavesdrop on anyone within range of a set. It might even be possible for a snooper to see what is happening in front of the TV set. That is exactly what the citizens of George Orwell's fictional Oceania had to endure.

In the future, newspapers may be transmitted to homes electronically. Subscribers will be able to order individual articles from a central information bank.

The arrangement should be convenient and efficient. But Paul believes it has risks.

Anyone who can get the information-bank records can compile a political profile of subscribers, he says. It would be possible for the government to compile a list of everyone who requested an article about an opposition party, for example.

Some time ago it was proposed that parolees be tagged with miniature transponders similar to the tiny radio transmitter-receivers naturalists use to trace the movements of wild animals.

Although no one ever actually fastened a transponder on a parolee, Paul observes that widespread violations of human rights have occurred in the past in the United States.

He cites the abuses of the McCarthy era and the internment of Japanese-Americans during World War II as examples.

"A precedent has been set in this country for 'inadvertently' doing the wrong thing with regard to civil rights, and only later owning up to it after the damage has been done," Paul observes.

"If some major upset happened, we could be right in the middle of '1984,'" he says.

Professor Clare McGillem of Purdue is an authority on communications engineering. He doubts that America will ever descend into "1984," but he notes that current trends would make things easy for any future thoughtpolice.

Most people, says McGillem, do business on credit and with checks. They use "paper" to pay for everything from airline tickets to utitity bills.

"If that material were ever coordinated, your whole background could be restructured," he says.

"Already, a huge number of places collect data about you — insurance companies, travel agencies. If there's an inclination to make a more comprehensive record of people's behavior — where they are going and what they are doing — it wouldn't be too difficult," McGillem says.

However, he doubts that the inclination will ever arise in this country.

NEWS ITEM: In his memoirs, Richard M. Nixon contends that illegal wiretaps are justified because a president should not be bound by the precise letter of the law.

NEWS ITEM: It is reported that the FBI has far more spies assigned to snooping on suspected American terrorists and subversives than it originally acknowledged.

McGillem adds that the records of the Internal Revenue Service "are rather incredible. It's a history of all your jobs, a work record as well as a financial record."

The technology exists to record every telephone call made by every person in the country, according to McGillem.

• • •

NEWS ITEM: A new Hawaiian law makes it easier for police to tap telephones. "Criminals make extensive use of wire and oral communications in their activities," explains a Honolulu police captain. He adds that intercepting such communications is an "indispensable aid to law enforcement and the administration of justice."

Family Holds Large Gathering

BALTIMORE (AP) — Almost 500 descendants of While Bonds, who was brought as a slave to South Carolina in the early 1800s, held their eighth annual reunion at a downtown hotel this weekend.

Mary Truesdale, 62, coordinator of the Maryland branch of the family, said relatives started arriving Friday from Nigeria, the land of Bonds' birth, and from 14 states.

Among the estimated 2,000 descendants of Bonds, a slave in Lancaster, S.C., are doctors, lawyers and teachers in 16 states, including California, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Connecticut and Florida, family members said Saturday.

The reunion took up about half of the hotel's 500 rooms, and its schedule read like a convention: a dinner-dance Friday night, a boat ride in the city harbor Saturday, parties in the hotel Saturday night and departure Sunday.

While Bonds, a namesake of the first member of the family in the United States, decided in 1965 at a family funeral in Pittsburgh to chart the family's lines, Mrs. Truesdale said. The first reunion was held in Washington six years later.

The family traditionally gathers on June 23 after schools have closed. The gatherings, held in hotels around the country, draw relatives from the four main family groups of Bonds, Truesdales, McGriffs and Peays.

"We were ahead of 'Roots,'" said Mrs. Truesdale, referring to Alex Haley's bestseller.

Unleaded Fuel Disappoints Motorists

NEW YORK (AP) — Are you spending extra money on premium unleaded gasoline for your new car because it just doesn't seem to run properly on regular unleaded? You're not alone.

Consumers around the country are complaining about engine knock in cars requiring unleaded gasoline, and automakers, oil companies and government officials are responding in expected ways:

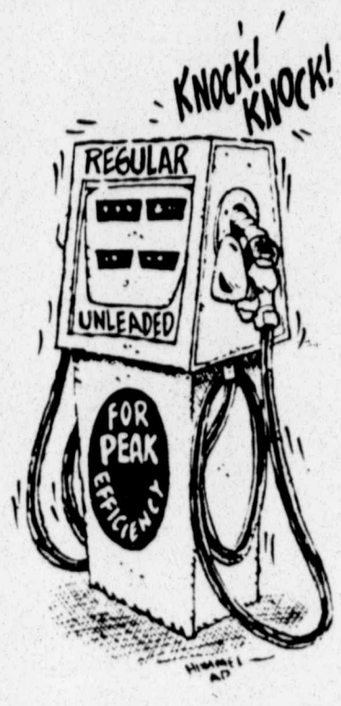

•The auto companies say nothing is wrong. In fact, they say, that knocking sound proves that the engine is at peak efficiency.

•Two oil companies — Amoco and Shell — are finding a new market: Motorists who are so annoyed by the engine knock that they are spending as much as four-cents-per-gallon extra for higher-octane "premium" grades of unleaded fuel. Other firms are quietly upgrading their regular, unleaded fuel in an attempt to maintain sales.

"We had a number of complaints, not just at Gulf but industry-wide," said Tom Walker, spokesman for Gulf Oil Co., which raised its unleaded octane rating about 18 months ago. "You recognize it's a problem and you make the decision for good customer relations."

•Government officials are holding hearings and studying the problem.

Sharon Gist, Chicago's acting commissioner of consumer affairs, conducted a hearing on the problem earlier this month after her office received several complaints.

"What we would like is for the auto manufacturers to design their engines so that 95-to-97 percent of them run well on unleaded regular," she said. "Either that, or they should say in their manuals that you are likely to be in the percentage of owners who can't use unleaded regular and must use unleaded premium."

Consumer groups, auto makers and government agencies estimate that the percentage of motorists who encounter disappointing performance with unleaded regular gasoline range from 10 to 40 percent.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, which in its anti-pollution role monitors octane ratings, is just becoming aware of the problem.

"We can't tell exactly how many people are spending how much more, but there is data that 91-octane unleaded gasoline (which is recommended by all U.S. automakers) will not satisfy new cars," said Ben Jackson, an EPA gasoline expert.

The EPA said that although automakers have maintained their 91 octane recommendation since 1975, the actual requirement of the cars has been increasing, due in part to imprecise production-line standards.

To reduce air pollution, virtually every new car made in the United States now requires use of unleaded gasoline. In the past 18 months, sales of unleaded gasoline have increased from 19.5 percent of the total to more than 26 percent, according to market studies.

And oil-industry officials expect almost every car on the road to require use of unleaded fuel within 10 years.

The major problem is engine knock, heard most often when the car is accelerating or under other strain. For years, oil firms have pushed their "special no-knock formulas" — gasoline with lead as an additive — as a way to avoid the noise.

Now, oil firms whose unleaded fuels are rated at or near the minimum standard of 91 Research Octane Number (RON) are hearing complaints. Without the lead additive, some critics say, gasoline must have higher octane than a 91 rating to eliminate knocking.

Automakers acknowledge that they, too, have heard of discontent, but they say they've received only a small number of formal complaints.

General Motors spokesmen said about 10 percent of GM owners experience occasional light engine knock; Chrysler said 35-40 percent of its cars have engine knock using 91 RON unleaded fuel; Ford said it had received complaints from one out of every 100 owners of a 1978 car. All the firms say the knock cannot damage auto engines.

"We should try to sell trace knock as the sound of fuel economy, not the sound of trouble," GM President Elliott M. Estes told the American Petroleum Institute last month.

But the EPA's Jackson said, "You can get engine damage," when the knock is loud enough to be perceived by the average motorist.

And some oil companies, primarily Amoco and Shell, still are selling engine knock as an annoyance that their unleaded fuels can cure. The cure costs consumers extra money.

Amoco and Shell are marketing an unleaded fuel with much higher octane than the 91 RON minimum. Amoco's premium unleaded (the firm also sells a regular-grade unleaded) has a 98-octane rating and costs about four-cents-per-gallon more than other unleaded fuels; Shell's "Super-Regular" unleaded comes in at 96 RON and costs two-cents extra.

Amoco spokesman Mike Thompson said premium unleaded now accounts for one-quarter of his firm's gasoline sales.

The oil firms take no stand on whether the engine knock can damage your car, but most have taken steps to improve the octane rating of their unleaded fuels.

Industry sources say Mobil already has improved the octane of its unleaded regular and is preparing to introduce a premium unleaded fuel. Mobil refuses comment, citing competitive reasons.

Exxon already sells a premium unleaded in Canada, but denies trade rumors that it will sell it in this country. Exxon's unleaded regular has an average octane of 94.5, recently raised from 92.

Although Gulf raised its octane rating of unleaded fuel in 1976 from 91 to 92.2, "we're considering going to a higher grade unleaded gasoline," Walker said.

Consumer Official Raps Federal Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission is ending a stormy tenure by asserting that the government imposes too many regulations on the marketplace.

"All health and safety regulation increases cost, reduces competition, lowers productivity and diminishes consumer choice," said S. John Byington in an interview.

Byington's resignation will become effective Friday. The commission is responsible for protecting consumers from hazardous products.

"We're supposed to get a benefit for every regulation but the benefit has to outweigh these negatives before it can be appropriate. That is the biggest problem," he said.

President Carter has yet to name a successor to Byington, one of the last Republicans to head a federal agency. Byington is planning to enter private law practice here after his government service ends.

The chairman said bans and mandatory safety standards on products are "only fallback situations" that he hopes the product safety agency will use infrequently in the future.

Byington cited a safety standard on chain saws now being developed by the commission together with an industry group as the type of voluntary standard that the commission is turning toward.

Alluding to Proposition 13 in California, Byington said this and other tax-cutting actions reflect the fact that the public "wants to recapture its government from a sometimes insensitive bureaucracy."

Byington's views run counter to those of many critics of the agency he heads. These critics in Congress, the Carter administration and consumer organizations say the commission frequently has failed to act promptly to protect consumers from hazardous products.

Byington has been controversial since he was nominated for the post by former President Gerald R. Ford. Byington, from the same hometown as Ford, Grand Rapids, Mich., was denied confirmation to a seven-year term by the Senate. Ford renominated him for a shorter term over heavy protest from consumer groups, and Byington was narrowly confirmed.

Throughout his two years at the commission, critics have said the agency moved too slowly to issue business regulations aimed at protecting consumers. The criticism mounted until Byington announced his resignation in February, effective June 30. Because of "political harassment", Byington said, he could not continue in office.

Agency critics most often note that since the commission was established in 1973, it has set only four mandatory safety standards — on matchbooks, architectural glazing, pacifiers and baby rattles.

But, Byington said, "This is not and should not be a federal mandatory standards factory. I don't think the public wants that sort of a situation."

He said the law requires lengthy procedures getting a great deal of information from interested parties.

"You can't have it both ways. You can't follow laws that require active public participation in regulation, which I support, and then ask why you didn't get the regulation out in 30 days," Byington said.

He stressed that writing mandatory safety standards requires lengthy deliberations.

"You can't just go into a phone booth and write on the back of a matchbook the engineering standards that will eliminate all chance of a product being unsafe," Byington said.

He recommended that in the future the commission should emphasize "innovative approaches, many of them voluntary or presenting some sort of incentive.

"The commission should continue to carry the big stick for when that is absolutely necessary. But I think it will be much more of the Teddy Roosevelt type of big stick than the baseball bat that is brought out every time anyone goes to the plate."

Bill Would Give Handicapped Equal Educational Opportunity

AUSTIN (AP) — State public school leaders completed work Saturday on policies and procedures that would give every handicapped child in Texas a maximum opportunity to finish high school.

The third and final reading of the "Texas State Planning Design for Education for Handicapped Children" came before the State Board of Education in a special called meeting.

The plan was approved tentatively in February and May board meetings. Twenty regional workshops have been held throughout the state to gather public and professional comment plus five formal public hearings.

"This is our attempt to develop the very best document possible so our public schools can begin serving our handicapped children," said Don Weston, director of special education for the Texas Education Agency.

Don Patridge, TEA associate commissioner, said the new policies pinpoint four major changes in public schooling of handicapped children:

— The education of the handicapped child is basically the responsibility of the local school district.

— The full range of educational services for handicapped children is consolidated within a single program for the first time.

— The program of instruction for handicapped children must be part of the regular general education program whenever possible.

— The new policy defines state responsibility for special education, at the same time blending federal requirements into the state and local program.

"Within this framework, every handicapped child will be given maximum opportunity to graduate from high school," Patridge said.

Th policy and procedures document calls for state appropriations of $237.9 million in the 1978-79 school year. A separate program for the deaf will get $12.2 million and another $2.9 million goes to the visually handicapped.

Texas will receive about $30 million in federal funds to help support special education during the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, 1978.

Savings, Loan Board Mulls New Standards

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — New regulations, including one to extend the time for interim construction loans from 24 to 36 months, are being considered by the Savings and Loan Section of the State Finance Commission.

At a recent meeting, the section approved regulations on supervisory mergers, which had been adopted earlier as emergency rules, S&L Commissioner Alvis Vandygriff reports.

The section also is looking at two other possible new regulations, one to make it clear that payment of dividends is part of the operating expense of a savings and loan association, and a second to assure that an association applying for a branch office is in compliance with net loss reserves requirements of the Savings and Loan Department.

Also discussed — but not acted on — by the section was removing the requirement for "equal payments on amortization of loans, to allow greater flexibility in lending."

But Vandygriff says that such an action "might encourage 'balloon' payments for loans... and that's one of the things we've tried to discourage."

Vandygriff was elected president of the National Association of State Savings and Loan Supervisors at the group's 39th annual convention in Scottsdale, Ariz., earlier this month.

State Board of Insurance members and their staff are to meet at 10 a.m., July 6, to discuss rate rules changes proposed in February at the annual fire and allied lines rate hearing.

Chairman Hugh Yantis says he had hoped to have a meeting earlier, but said problems with vacation schedules had resulted in delays in getting key personnel together all at once.

Yantis reports insurance industry representatives want another opportunity to convince him he is "wrong" on his position that no increase in homeowners rates is needed.

As yet, it appears undecided as to wheater additional testimony will be taken at the July 6 session.

The Texas Insurance Advisory Association has asked for an average increase of 14.1 percent for homeowners.

SBI staff members have proposed 11.4 and 13.1 per cent, respectively.

Texas Bankers Association has issued a second call to its members for funds to support its lawsuit against Government Employees Credit Union of San Antonio, over share drafts.

TBA reports that out of its membership of 1,348 commercial banks, all but 483 have responded, with some 70 percent of its goal reached.

That goal, TBA says, is around $100,000.

Member banks are being urged to give "immediate attention" to contributing to the fund for the lawsuit on that "important banking industry quesion."

TBA, University National Bank and Central Park Bank (both of San Antonio) filed suit against the credit union in 131st District Court this spring, alleging the use of share drafts constitutes engaging in banking and that the credit union is doing so at more than one location, in violation of the Texas Constitution.

That suit also alleges that the share draft program amounts to a deceptive trade practice and constitutes unfair and illegal competition with "duly authorized banks."

No date apparently has been set to hear the case.

The number of assigned risks in the Texas Auto Insurance Plan dropped during the first five months of 1978 compared to the first five months of last year, 73,500 compared to 77,032, plan manager H.L. Begeman reports.

Premiums continued up, however, coming to $23,433,972 for the period compared to $21,549,640 in 1977.

City Consumer Panel Aids Researchers

By DEBBIE MITCHELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Liberal males are the most frequent blood donors, and grocery shoppers often buy name brands out of habit, show the findings of a consumer panel sponsored by the Texas Tech University School of Business Administration.

The consumer panel formed by the Marketing Area at Tech consists of 400 Lubbock families.

These families have been responding to questionnaires since September. The answers they have supplied are being used for research purposes by the marketing faculty.

"The panel allows us to keep track of information not available from other sources," said James B. Wilcox, associate professor of marketing.

While most of the information from the surveys is used for doctoral work, Wilcox said a possibility also exists to use the panel to aid local businesses.

"We would consider opening the panel to local businesses on a nonprofit basis," he said. "The panel could provide information concerning the consumer's shopping intentions in general and his preferences for certain products in particular."

Data obtained from the panel has already been used to help the blood services in the search to find donors.

"We will use the results of the survey to help the Blood Services design a more effective campaign," said John Burnett, associate professor of marketing.

The most important knowledge gained from the survey, Burnett said, is that there are three definite groups of donors.

"We have found that there is the active donor, the one-time donor and the guy who never gives blood," Burnett said.

"Our findings may sound elementary, but previously, the blood services grouped all donors together. Now we know that certain individuals are more likely to give than are others," he said.

The one-time donor usually only gives for a friend or relative, Burnett said. He is not much more likely to give again than is the non-donor.

The three percent of the American population which gives blood, then, is primarily comprised of the active donor. Advertising campaigns, Burnett said, should be made to attract him.

"The active donor takes giving blood seriously. Funny advertisements designed to eliminate fear, for example, sometimes turn him off," Burnett said.

Responses to statements such as, "I usually wait to see how other people like something before I try it," were used by researchers to diagram the typical donor, Burnett said.

"We inferred that the active donor is male, liberal and conscientious," Burnett said. "He gives because he thinks it's his duty as a good citizen to do so.

"He's usually single, but if he's married, he has more than two children. He's also a blue-collar worker or a student and doesn't believe in traditional religion."

Direct questions and a purchase diary were used, Wilcox said, to determine why consumers profess brand loyality.

By analyzing the record of purchases, Wilcox said, researchers determined that most people buy brand labels either from habit or because they like a certain attribute of the product.

Researchers have not been able to uitilize yet all the information they have gained from the surveys which cost $2 or $3 per person, Wilcox said.

"The panel has been under-utilized in that we could have more mailings, every six weeks instead of every eight or Wilcox said, "but it takes a long time to assimilate the data we do get."

Wilcox and Robert E. Wilkes, coordinator of the Area of Marketing, began developing the panel more than a year ago. With the help of other faculty members they sent 1,000 questionnaires to families chosen randomly from the city directory.

A mailing list was then made of the names of the 400 families that responded to the initial query, Wilcox said.

"We tried to make the survey as representative as possible," he said, "but neither the extreme lower nor upper socio-economic groups responded to our survey."

Wilcox said that the continuing response rate for the survey is 90 percent, 75 percent better than the average response rate for randomly sent forms.

Once people have answered the initial form they seem to feel a commitment to continue," said Wilcox.

Families that do continue to answer the questionnaire receive trading stamps for their efforts.

White House Official Sees Price Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of consumer goods will increase from one-half to 1 percent because the dollar has fallen against other currencies in world money markets, a White House official says.

William D. Nordhaus, of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, said about one-half of 1 percent will be directly attributed to the reduction of the dollar's value and another half percent will result from other inflationary factors such as wage and price boosts resulting from higher import prices.

Nordhaus testified Thursday before a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee.

GASOHOL STATION CLOSES

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The only service station in Lincoln selling gasohol — a mixture of gasoline and alcohol — has closed. But its operators said a poor location far from residential areas was responsible rather than lack of demand for the fuel. The station began selling gasohol four months ago at 69.9 cents per gallon. It is about 90 percent unleaded gasoline and 10 percent grain alcohol. Station owners said they hope to reopen in a better location.

DOCTOR OFFERS ADVICE ON 'ART OF JOGGERY'

Proper Equipment, Style Important For Joggers

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Assured that running will benefit your mental and physical well-being, now you might ask how does one take the first step on the road to physical fitness? Marathoner Dr. Art Mollen believes there is a simple method to start and continue an effective running program. Relying on his experience in marathons and with patients, Dr. Art Mollen offers sensible tips on how to obtain the best running shoes for you, how to perform warm-up exercises, and how to approach running your first mile, in this second of a three-part series from his book,"Run For Your Life.")

By DR. ART MOLLEN

Excerpted from the book "Run For Your Life"
(c) 1978 by Arthur Mollen Steven Englund
Published by Doubleday & Company, Inc.

I would now like to bring you back to the practical aspects of running: selection of attire, and a few steps you should learn about the art of joggery, or, as my friends and patients humorously put it, the "joggery of art."

First, make sure your running clothes feel comfortable and loose. In normal weather (spring, summer, and early fall), a cotton T-shirt and a pair of lightweight nylon or cotton trunks will do nicely. Obviously, something warmer, perhaps a sweat suit, is required in cold climates and during the winter. Trunks should not be too tight — you are not going to the beach in them. You do not want them to chafe against your inner thighs and irritate the skin.

Some people do not wear socks. Most world-class runners, for example, are highly conscious of the additional effort required to lift those few ounces of material again and again over the course of a long race. You, however, are not running against a pack of runners. On the other hand, if your shoe fits really well, and you like the feel of skin against nylon or leather, you can probably get away sockless. But most people prefer socks. As your running distance and time gradually increases, socks will be an insurance policy against blisters. Just make sure that they are smoothly fitted to your skin before you put your shoes on. Wrinkles in socks equal blisters and raw spots on feet. Wool socks stay drier longer than cotton socks and thus chafe less in the course of a run.

Shoe selection is also of decisive importance. The key components of a successful jogging shoe are: 1) adequate heel support, 2) flexible sole, 3) good arch support both inside and out, 4) light weight (between 9 and 12 ounces). The average runner needs a shoe that offers protection, support, and guaranteed shock-absorbing qualities. Consequently, a heavier shoe will more often fit the needs of my patients than it will the requirements of professional runners. There are several good brands of jogging footwear, out of the literally dozens on the market, that provide the required snugness, comfort and support, although the price of some of them cause you to inhale sharply.

The second step for an aspiring runner is to set up a running course so you know exactly where you're going to run and how far. I would suggest that you map out a fairly level one-mile distance that will start and end at your house. You may want to make it only a half-mile course in the beginning, or you may wish to run the mile "out" and walk the mile "in."

You should pick the least-traveled roads. If it is necessary for you to run on or near main throughfares, slow down and yield for crossing traffic. If you run at dawn or dusk wear whites so that you are visible to drivers. Runners and bicyclers face the same problem on our city streets — drivers are not looking for them.

Hard-packed dirt (such as on most high school or college running tracks or municipal park bridle paths) is the best surface. It is smooth and the dirt allows a certain "slide" effect which cuts down on blisters and friction. Pavement and asphalt is equally smooth but, during the summer especially, can be very hot and wearing on the soles of the feet. Grass is cooler and springier than dirt or asphalt, but it hides uneven terrain, potholds, etc., which can cause strains and sprains.

Unless you live in a desert climate — as I do in Phoenix — where early morning running is a practical necessity, the best time for you to run is anytime. Find the time of day that best suits your metabolism and life-style. However, through long experience with beginning runners, I have learned that jogging in the morning is the best way to insure that you get your daily running in. The beginner is especially prone to a search for excuses, and the course of a normal working day will provide the diligent seeker with all manner of pretexts to avoid running. The events and stimuli of a long day can be exhausting and distracting. Don't risk not running. Do it early.

Practically everyone who has begun to run has been tempted to stop running, and the excuses come in all sizes and categories and shapes: physical, mental, spiritual, temporal, climatic, etc.

I have said it before, and I will surely say it again — running isn't easy. In the beginning, especially, it may hurt — and I don't mean the physical stress so much (though this is not irrelevant) as the discombobulation that daily jogging causes in our usual agendas. The decision to overcome excuses, like the decision to begin a running program, is yours alone. I could not have "talked" you into jogging, nor can I win an argument with someone who is bound and determined to excuse himself from running.

Muscles need to be conditioned for a few minutes before you start your run. "Stretchies," as I call them, take almost no time, but they protect you from a lot of aches and a lot of risks. Do not neglect them; do them every time you run.

Begin by bending at the waist and allowing your trunk to hang roughly parllel with the ground. Do this until you feel a bit of tension in your lower back and legs. That means the muscles are stretching. Above all, don't bounce up and down, as you may be tempted to do because you see athletes doing it. Bouncing could strain or pull a muscle. Simply hang over and count slowly to 20.

Then stand on your tiptoes and reach your arms into the air as high as you can for another 20-count.

Next, stand up straight and turn your torso, twisting at the waist in both directions several times.

Then stretch your hands out in front of you pressing against a wall with your heels and feet flat on the ground. Do 10 push-ups into the wall, thus stretching the tendons in the back of your legs (calves and heels).

Next, standing balanced on your toes on the edge of a step (as if you were going to do a back somersault dive) move up and down on your toes with the arches and heels of your feet hanging in space. That, too, will stretch the all important heel tendons.

Now you need a rest, so sit down on the floor. Place your right leg out in front of you with the sole of your left foot touching the inside of your right upper leg. Then reach all the way forward and grab your right foot with yur hands and hold on for a 20-count. Repeat the procedure with the right foot placed inside the outstretched left leg.

Finally, with the soles of your feet together in front of you, push gently down on both knees and hold this position for 20 seconds. Staying in the same position, lower your head as far toward your feet as you can for 10 seconds.

Now you're finished, and it didn't take more than 4 or 5 minutes, but the time was well spent because it has dramatically reduced the likelihood of your incurring pain and injury during your run. By the way, you needn't do all these stretch exercises each time you run, but make sure you do most of them.

As you open the front door and step outside, you will probably begin to wonder about pace. Do not worry about speed — at least not until you have been running regularly for several months. Concern for improvement in running time is one of the best ways I know to put a stitch in the side of your running program before you've actually gotten it going. The physical and mental goals you are looking for in daily jogging do not mesh well with any kind of compulsiveness, least of all one that focuses on the running itself.

A good rule of thumb about speed: Don't run faster than you can comfortably hold a conservation with a fellow runner (or with an imaginary fellow runner). To run too fast at an early stage is to court certain breathlessness because your cardiopulmonary (heart/lung) system has not yet been conditioned to sudden, greatly increased demands of oxygen. Getting winded is very uncomfortable and proves to be a major reason why beginners quickly become discouraged and want to quit after the first quarter mile.

Don't calculate your form to impress anyone; don't see yourself as Jesse Owens streaking down the track. In the early stages of developing an addiction to running, you almost have to look bad to look (and feel) good. Keep your arms loose and relaxed at your sides. It doesn't matter if they flail out a bit. Bend them if you like, but not in tense acute angles with clenched fists pumping to shoulder level.

Let your foot strike the ground heel-toe, not vice versa. This last point is important. Many beginners will want to copy the sprinters they have watched on TV or at track meets by running on the balls of their feet, knees raised high. Admittedly, this running posture is impressive — a kind of lightning prance — but it's useless for our purposes. Bio-mechanically the heel-toe step is best for long-term jogging, because the leg muscles do not contract as much as in the ball-of-the-foot landing and because there is a natural "rocking" motion in heel-toe which provides more rhythm and less strain.

Finally, either slow your pace for the last 300 yards, or if you like to spring the last lap to show yourself how much you have left, walk around until your breathing has returned to normal. Biologically, the slackened pace is necessary to give the cardiovascular system time to redistribute the blood supply from the legs, where most of it has gone during the run, back to the rest of the body.

By all means, keep a chart of your progress. It is highly motivating. The goals you want to achieve through jogging should be written down, including a program of how much you intend to increase your mileage, how many pounds (and inches) you want to lose, and much less importantly, how your running times are improving. I know many experieced long-distance runners who keep such records year in and year out and derive great satisfaction from them.

Easier Time Predicted For Revised Labor Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd predicted Saturday that there will be enough support to stop a new filibuster on labor law changes when a revised bill comes to the Senate floor.

He rejected suggestions that the bill may die in committee.

"I think it's premature to write the obituary for labor law legislation in this session," he told reporters at a weekly news conference.

After 19 days of debate and six unsuccessful attempts to end a filibuster, the Senate agreed Thursday to return the labor law bill to committee for redrafting.

The Senate Human Resources Committee has announced that it will hold new hearings on the bill Wednesday and Thursday.

DR. ANTHONY DAVIS

MICHAEL WAYNE WALKER

Seminar Features Speakers

Three speakers will highlight the Black Consumer and Business Seminar next Wednesday at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center, including a past member of former President Gerald Ford's administration.

The seminar will be sponsored by Lubbock Digest and the local chapter of the National Business League.

One of the speakers, Brenda Hamer, is an attorney for the Dallas Independent School District and a candidate for Dallas County Clerk. She was formerly special assistant to the assistant secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development in the Ford administration.

She is president of the Black Republican Council of Dallas and an ex-officio member of the State Republican Executive Committee.

Dr. Anthony Davis, a black publisher in Dallas, will speak at the seminar. Among his publications are The Dallas Weekly, Fort Worth Weekly, Great Cirle News-East and Great Circle News-West.

Davis is president of Davis & Associates public relations and advertising firm in Dallas.

The other speaker, Michael Wayne Walker, is a 21-year-old junior at Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Maine, who has won numerous oratory awards and has filmed several inspirational television programs.

He was the first place winner in competition at Southern Methodist University's National Forensic Institute in Oratory and was a delegate to the National Sunday School and Baptist Training Union Congress in 1971-73.

The seminar will begin at 9:30 a.m., and will end with a cocktail party from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Registration for the whole seminar will cost $15 advance and $17.50 at the door. There will be a $7.50 admission fee for individual sessions and lunch will cost $10 for those who do not desire to register for the entire seminar.

Auto Service Group Picks Chief

AUSTIN (Special) — C. B. Gililland, owner of Plains Body Works, Lubbock, was chosen president-elect of the 3,400-member Automotive Service Association at the organization's annual convention and trade show held in San Antonio.

Gililland previously served as vice president and chairman of the ASA Autobody Council. He was a leader in forming the Lubbock ASA Autobody Council and will become president of ASA for the 1979-80 term.

Dale Brown, Denton, was installed as president for the 1978-79 term. Bill Lavender of Tulia was installed as a member of the ASA Board of Directors.

Other officers elected at the convention included: Clayton Shinn, Albuquerque, vice president; Dean Coley, San Antonio, vice president; and Bill Dye, Austin, secretary.

The association has members in Texas, New Mexico, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Missouri. Membership in ASA is primarily limited to independently-owned automotive repair shops which subscribe to the organization's code of ethics.

The Lubbock Chapter of ASA is jointly sponsoring a pilot project with the Better Business Bureau of the South Plains and the city's new car dealers in which consumer complaints not solved at the consumer-repairman level can be referred to an unbiased committee for binding arbitration. BBB President Malcolm Cleland told ASA conventioneers that complaints have dropped 80 percent since the program was initiated.

Nevada Shield Law Noted By Newsman

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Nevada law protects newspapers in this state against police searches of their newsrooms despite the recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling allowing searches in some cases, a newspaper executive here says.

"I believe we are protected at the state level against newsroom searches," Robert W. Ritter, executive editor of the Nevada State Journal and Reno Evening Gazette told a meeting of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi here Thursday.

"The Nevada Shield Law, unlike California, protects us from being forced to disclose any information — published or unpublished — or the source of such information," Ritter told the society.

He added that while the shield law is "all the protection we need on the state level," it "still affords no protection against federal investigations.

Ritter noted that media reaction to the Supreme Court decision had been self-serving, "as well it might be. It effectively sabotages the Fourth Amendment which has stood for nearly 200 years as a barrier between the massive powers of the state and the individual citizen.

"Decisions such as the one made May 31 simply cannot be tolerated in a democratic society," Ritter said.

Texas Politicos Among Latest Converts To Tax 'Revolution'

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Back on what must have been a hot (Texas summers being what they are) June day in 1865, a group of about 40 citizens, perhaps distressed over rising prices and the decreasing value of the dollar, broke into the State Treasury office.

Apparently the group was under the impression that since Gov. Pendleton Murrah was out of town, and the Legislature wasn't in session, they would find no particular opposition to their plans for a direct-action wealth distribution program.

However, some Austinites objected, and a fracas resulted, with the result being that one of 40 was killed, several wounded, and only $1,700 of the $300,000 was carried away.

Some historians see this incident as merely one of a number of examples of raids on the treasury by various special interest groups which have continued on down, more or less unbroken, to the present.

But it also provides an opening to talk — again — about tax reform, or taxpayers' revolt.

Proposition 13 has resulted, after politicians recovered from their initial shock, in a movement among many Texas politicos similar to, and perhaps as superficial as, the radical chic which swept college campuses in the 1960s.

Suddenly, everyone is interested in helping the taxpayer — and even Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who has viewed special sessions in the past with as much enthusiasm as the Montagues showed for the Capulets, began talking about having a pre-1979 fiesta of tax reform.

Briscoe was criticized in the last session for not taking an active enough role in tax-reform efforts — particularly for not exerting pressure to get the Senate to approve the tax reform measure by Rep. Wayne Peveto of Orange.

That shouldn't be interpreted as meaning Briscoe was anti-tax-reform in 1977, however, since gubernatorial pressure appeared absent except on increasing spending for highways and public school finance.

Biscoe did, in fact, have a modest proposal on tax reform — knocking off the State's sales tax on utility bills.

That failed to pass — and the Senate killed Peveto's measure, proving that while the Southwest Texas apostle had made believers in the House, the Senate remained more or less pagan territory for the gospel of tax reform.

But since it begins to appear that those pagans are being offered the choice of converting or having their political heads metaphorically chopped off, Peveto may be lucky to squeeze in for services when the Senate convenes.

Obviously — undeniably — the property tax system, and other taxes as well, need overhaul.

Peveto's measure, drawn up and refined through the legislative furnances, may have been no panacea — but it does have the benefits of not having been drafted in haste, to be later litigated at leisure.

Republican gubernatorial candidate Bil Clements, in his recent debate with Democratic nominee Attorney General John Hill, argues that he is for "tax relief" while Hill is for "tax reform."

While that semantic distinction may make for good speeches and arguments, it tends to cloud the fact that both phrases mean more or less the same thing, and that the real argument is over how to bring about reform and relief — which is long overdue to many taxpayers.

Almost everyone is willing to pay his fair share of taxes — and almost everyone feels he or she is already exceeding that burden.

Some half a million colonists kept their allegiance to the British crown during the American Revolution.

DEALER OPPORTUNITY IN RECREATION VEHICLES

Vesely Company, maker of Apache Camping Trailers, Travel Trailers and Mini-Motor Homes, plus Empire Travel Trailers and Mini-Motor Homes, is looking for a dealer in the Lubbock, Texas area.
Please contact Mick McGuire, Dealer Development Manager, Vesely Company, Box 370, Lapeer, MI 48446. Our telephone is 313-664-9961.

VESELY COMPANY

??? WE TAKE THE GUESSWORK ??? out of choosing the right business!

We put people in business for themselves ... that's our business! People just like you: ready to own and run a business, but unsure how to begin. WE SHOW THEM HOW!

First we show them our high-impulse hardware & variety products that are proven sellers. Then we tell them about our national network of HHC Dealers, servicing their Handy Hardware Center displays in busy retail locations—and earning a 50% mark-up on every product sold!

We show them how they DO NO SELLING! ... and need little business experience to begin. We show them how they can begin earning profits their very first day. We tell them how flexible our opportunity is: how THEY choose the size business that's right for them, beginning at $7950. Of course we tell them we secure all stores, train all Dealers, provide continuous promotional support and protect our Dealers with a Buy-Back Agreement. Then we show them our busy Home Office and say this: INVESTIGATE BEFORE YOU BUY!

And their choice is always easy. Because WE TOOK THE GUESSWORK OUT! Let us take the guesswork out of YOUR decision and help you choose the right business! Call or write Mr. Weston today for our FREE brochure, which spells out full details.

LILLISTON ROLLING CULTIVATOR
- cultivates at speeds up to 10 mph — pre-emerge to tool bar height.
- mulches tough crusts and aerates the soil — also helps to retain moisture.
- incorporates pre-emerge or post-emerge chemicals — well into the soil.
- builds beds, bars off, lays by — won't harm tender crop root systems.

ADVERTISEMENTS FOR BIDS
NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals addressed to the Honorable Mayor and City Council of Lubbock, Texas, will be received at the office of Floyd P. Nesbitt, Purchasing Agent, until 2:00 P.M., July 18, 1978, for furnishing all necessary materials, machinery, equipment, superintendence, and labor for constructing certain improvements at the Lubbock International Airport, Lubbock, Texas.

Immediately following the closing time for receipt of bids, proposals will be publicly opened and read aloud in the Council Room. Any bid received after closing time will be returned unopened.

This project consists principally of the construction of approximately 8,700 square yards of flexible pavement on entrance and service roads to the terminal building, construction of approximately 6,850 square yards of flexible pavement in the terminal parking area and access roads, construction of approximately 5,800 square yards of flexible pavement in the employee parking area, construction of approximately 9,000 linear feet of curb and gutter on the entrance roads and terminal parking area, relocation of existing and, construction of new area lighting on the entrance roads, and parking areas, relocation of existing and construction of new security fencing, relocation of existing and, installation of new parking control equipment, construction of an irrigation system, construction of drainage structures and concrete slabs, removal of existing pavement and curb and gutter, painting of roads and parking areas, and other related items of work. Additive alternate number one to the contract consists of installing a parking lot counter system to monitor available parking spaces and automatically control lot full indicators and entrance gate operation. Additive alternate number two to the project consists of the construction of approximately 5,200 square yards of flexible pavement in the terminal parking area, construction of approximately 1,150 linear feet of curb and gutter, construction of area lighting, construction of concrete slabs, painting of parking areas and miscellaneous items of construction.

A bid or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Lubbock, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is hereby expressly understood and agreed that the City of Lubbock is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid or, if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance bond and payment bond. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Lubbock.

The successful Bidder will be required to furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond each in the amount of the contract, written by a responsible Surety Company authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and satisfactory to the Owner, as required by Article 5160, V.A.T.C.S., as amended by H.B. 344, passed by the 56th Legislature, Regular Session, 1959.

All lump sum and unit prices must be stated in both script and figures. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating the prices in the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous construction thereof, or to reject the bid. Unreasonable (or "unbalanced") unit prices will authorize the Owner to reject the bid.

Bidders are expected to inspect the site of the work and to inform themselves regarding all local conditions.

The proposed contract is under and subject to Executive Order 11246 of September 24, 1965, and to the equal opportunity clause, and the Bidder must supply all the information required by the proposal form.

The successful bidder will be required to submit a Certification of Nonsegregated Facilities prior to award of the contract, and to notify prospective subcontractors of the requirement for such a Certification where the subcontract exceeds $10,000. Samples of the Certification and the Notice to Subcontractors appear in the specifications.

Women will be afforded equal opportunity in all areas of employment. However, the employment of women shall not diminish the standards or requirements for the employment of minorities.

For bids relating to contracts of $50,000 or more, a contractor having 50 or more employees and his subcontractors having 50 or more employees and who may be awarded a subcontract of $50,000 or more will be required to maintain an affirmative action program.

Minimum wages and labor rates for the construction of the proposed work have been established by the Secretary of Labor, and a schedule of labor classifications and wage rates to be paid are included in the specifications and will be made a part of the contract. The bid form shall contain a statement that the prices bid are based on such wage rates.

Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the Director of Aviation, Lubbock International Airport, Lubbock, Texas, and at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock, Texas 79412.

Copies of the Plans and Specifications may be secured from Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock, Texas 79412, upon a deposit of FIFTY DOLLARS ($50.00) as a guarantee of the safe return of the plans and specifications. The full amount of the deposit will be returned to the Contractor on submission of a bona fide bid on the work, with such plans and specifications; or upon returning the plans and specifications, immediately after examination of same, and advising the Engineer that bid will not be submitted; otherwise, the deposit shall be forfeited.

Oil Tanker Standards Proposed By Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee has approved legislation setting new construction and safety standards for oil tankers, sending the bill to the House floor.

The measure would require new tankers and some existing ones to be equipped with separate tanks for taking on water as ballast after the tankers have unloaded their oil. Backers of the bill say the common practice of emptying oily ballast water into the ocean is one of the major sources of tanker pollution.

Similar legislation, prompted by a series of tanker accidents in 1977 that resulted in oil spills, has already passed the Senate. President Carter initially proposed an even stronger bill — including a requirement that tankers have double hulls — but House aides said the administration now appears willing to accept the House version.

We want YOU

TO ACCUMULATE A FORTUNE

Accumulating large sums of money is well within the reach of nearly everyone. All it takes is a little know-how and discipline. How much money you make is not nearly so important as what you do with your money.

The secret of accumulating large sums of money is to make regular deposits and utilize the magic of continuous compounding. If you leave the interest to earn interest, your money grows at an amazing rate. From the chart below you can see that if you can deposit $100 each month in a regular savings account, you will have $62,200 in 25 years. By leaving the accumulated principal on deposit, you can receive a handsome sum of money each month for the rest of your life.
