Market Planning 'Common Strategy'

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP)-Prime Minister James Callaghan of Britain announced today that Common Market leaders meeting here have agreed to develop a "common strategy" by mid July to combat the economic sluggishness afflicting non-communist industrialized nations.

Mid-July is when President Carter and leaders of the five other major Western industrial nations and Japan meet in Bonn, West Germany, for an economic summit conference.

Callaghan, speaking with reporters as the two-day Copenhagen meeting neared its end, singled out U.S. action on energy conservation as one factor that would help control world monetary fluctuations. Oil imports are a key reason for the large U.S. trade deficit, which in turn has driven down the value of the dollar.

"If President Carter can reach conclusions and get Congress to reach conclusions, or if he takes action without the U.S. Congress reaching conclusions on energy conservation, this would help to reduce monetary disturbances," the British leader said.

France's President Valery Giscard d'Estaing told reporters the Common Market leaders have set a 4.5 percent economic growth rate as a goal for their nine nations in the 12 months beginning July 1 - considerable higher than last year's level of 1.8 percent but more modest than earlier predictions.

The Frence leader said greater stability in the Common Market's currency system would enable Western Europe to rival the economic growth of the United States and Japan.

One reason the growth rate in Western Europe generally has been less than half the U.S. and Japanese rates, Giscard d'Estaing said, "is that of the three areas Europe alone suffers from internal monetary instability."

He declined to outline specific plans for changes in the European monetary system, but he is known to favor greater unity among the various currencies.

Callaghan said the "common strategy" has been discussed with President Carter and also covers increased public spending to boost economic growth and the easing of world trade through lower tariffs and higher import quotas this year.

Oil Pipe Leaking

MONTEZUMA CREEK, Utah (AP)-A Texaco official says a leaking oil pipe has spilled about 210 gallons at the Aneth oil field in southeastern Utah where 100 Navajo Indians are protesting environmental damage by oil companies on the Navajo Reservation.

Texaco spokesman John Masson said Friday the spill was noticed from a nearby road Thursday afternoon. He said protestors allowed repair crews to fix the leak, but the spill was not cleaned up until Friday morning.

Rangers' Voice Dies

ARLINGTON (AP)-Dick Risenhoover, the 51-year-old radio-television voice of the Texas Rangers baseball team died of cancer this morning in a hospital here.

A hospital spokesman said Risenhoover died of liver cancer at 7 a.m. He had been admitted to the hospital for treatment in mid March.

Ironically, Risenhoover's death came just eight hours before the Rangers opened their 1978 home stand against the New York Yankees.

Marcos Wins Big

MANILA, Philippines (AP)-President Ferdinand E. Marcos' party headed for an overwhelming victory today in elections for an interim National Assembly as the election commission ruled opposition charges of voter intimidation and fraud were unsubstantiated.

Troops At Border

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)-Vietnam has concentrated about 60,000 troops in Tay Ninh Province along its border with Cambodia following an increase in tensions between the two Communist neighbors, but little troop movement has been detected recently, sources said today.

Court To Set Liquor Election

Date for the liquor election in Snyder is expected to be set during Monday's meeting of the Scurry County Commissioners Court.

If petitions presented to the county clerk Wednesday afternoon are certified to have sufficient legal signatures, the court must set the date for citizens to decide the issue of legalization of sale of all alcoholic beverages within the corporate limits of Snyder for off-premises consumption.

An organization of Snyder residents known as "Snyder Upward," have circulated petitions in town during the past several weeks in order to obtain signatures of at least 35 per cent who voted in the last general election for governor.

That number is believed to be 563 signatures to require the commissioners court to call the election. It was believed that the petitions turned into the county clerk last week contained the names of approximately 760 persons.

County Judge Preston Wilson said Friday afternoon that the court must consider the petitions at the first regular meeting of the court following presentation and certification of the signatures.

That action is expected to come Monday morning. The court must set the date for the election in not less than 20 days later nor more than 30 days. Assuming all signatures are in order Monday, the date of the election would fall between May 1 and May 10.

It was first believed that the court could set the election 30 to 60 days after Monday, but Judge Wilson said a further check of the legal requirements revealed that to be in error.

Persons who vote in the election must be residents of the city of Snyder and must have current (yellow) registration cards.

Soviets Denounce Bomb Move

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP)-The Soviet Union today accused President Carter of trying to weaken Soviet "defense capability" by attaching strings to his decision to put off U.S. production of neutron warheads.

The official news agency Tass also said Carter's move was intended to defuse current protest against neutron weapons with the aim of deploying them later in Western Europe.

In announcing the deferral Friday, Carter said his ultimate decision on neutron weaponry would be "influenced by the degree to which the Soviet Union shows restraint in its conventional and nuclear arms programs and force deployments."

Tass wrote today that Carter, "with the clear goal of obtaining concessions from the Soviet Union on other issues unrelated to the matter at hand, tried to tie his final decision to matters involving te strengthening of the Soviet Union's defense capability that have no relation to neutron weaponry."

The commentary did not say the Kremlin would ignore Carter's appeal for military restraint. but it echoed the Soviet line, announced March 11, that Moscow is not ready to trade concessions in one area for U.S. abandonment of the neutron bomb project.

Is it possible to over-consolidate and go too far in efforts to simplify a situation?

We think that happened when the legislature changed the dates for some local elections, scheduling all of them on the first Saturday in April.

Previously, city elections were held on the first Tuesday of April, while school elections were held on the first Saturday of April.

Now, all of them are held on the same date, obviously in an effort to reduce the number of trips to the polls and possibly to reduce the costs of holding elections.

Our observation indicates that the move has had an effect opposite to that which was intended. There were so many elections going on in city hall here on Saturday, April, that it was not only confusing to the voters, but it put a stress on the election officials that should not have been required. Voting for the Snyder School Board, the Scurry County Junior College District Board and the county school board was held in the lobby of the city hall. Down the hall at the west end, the voting was underway simultaneously for mayor and city council positions.

If there had been contested races in more than one of these elections, the situation would have been virtually impossible. As it was, there was enough confusion that many voters did not cast ballots in all elections that day in which they were eligible to vote.

There probably will be enough confusion to last a long time on May 6, the date of the primary election for county, state and federal offices. But there will be more polling places and more people will be involved in conducting the voting than in the city and school elections. Many potential voters apparently are still confused about the registration process. Here again, efforts to simplify the system may have caused some additional problems. In our opinion, the simplest method was in the days when you went to the courthouse once a year and paid your poll tax, got a receipt and knew you were qualified to vote on any issue that came up for 12 months.

They haven't improved on that system and the contentions that the $1.75 poll tax discriminatory have been weakened steadily by inflation. We figure that a voter registration certificate should be worth more than a pound of coffee.

Explosion Near Tomb

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP)-A small explosive device went off early today near the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery, the FBI said. An FBI spokesman said there was no serious damage.

The explosion occurred shortly after 2 a.m., outside the trophy room near the complex's amphitheater and about 5 feet from the tomb itself, the spokesman said.

He said the device apparently was a "training simulator" used by the military in exercises involving boobytrap detection. The spokesman, who declined to be identified, compared the device to "a large firecracker."

Snyder Resident Recalls Fall Of South Vietnam

By JOHN LONG

Although the war is over, Thien Pham still remembers what the last, tumultuous days were like before the fall of South Vietnam.

Not only does Pham still remember the final days, but the 41-year-old Vietnamese refugee also carries a shoulder injury where he had been shot in the early days of the conflict.

Now a Snyder resident, Pham works at the American Magnesium Plant. Things have changed greatly, however, since March and April of 1975 when he was a captain in the South Vietnamese Air Force.

"We didn't fight. We didn't get order to do that. We got order to move," he said in a halting English.

Pham, or Capt. Pham as he was then known, was stationed at an outpost in Pleiku Province, the first province to fall to the invading North Vietnamese.

"My general, Pham van Phu, he cry, you know. He told us that he got order to move," Pham now recalls. So distasteful was the order to move that the general later killed himself.

"General Phu kill himself. I love him very much. He didn't want to move, but he had to do order," said Pham.

The order to move was an order to retreat south to Saigon. Pleiku fell about the middle of March and was followed by a succession of other provinces.

Pham evacuated his wife and six children April 28. He left April 29. South Vietnam fell April 30.

The situation was somewhat ironic for Pham, however. He was running from an ideology his father had once embraced.

Pham was born in North Vietnam. His father was once a member of the Viet Minh. The Viet Minh, however, killed his father's parents. His father, Pham recalls, became disillusioned and moved south in 1955.

Some of that fighting is continuing even to this day, Pham said. His father stayed behind in Saigon and writes him letters describing conditions there now.

It was not necessary for South Vietnam to fall, Pham said.

"We didn't have any support," said Pham of what he called an American abandonment engineered by Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger.

"Nixon and Kissinger are the best politicians in the world, I think, for this country. All the people in my country hate them," he said.

The whole conduct of the war was political in nature. The United States adopted a no-win policy very early in the war, and consequently the war was lost, said Pham.

Toward the final days, he said, the South Vietnamese army had guns, but no ammunition; airplanes, but no replacement parts; and tanks, but no gasoline.

One thing about the conflict, though, is true. The domino theory has proven itself correct. Laos and

Man Receives Life Sentence

LIBERAL, Kan. (AP)-A Great Bend man has been sentenced to life in prison in the January stabbing death of a Liberal waitress.

Judge Keaton Duckworth of Seward County District Court sentenced John J. Edwards, 26, to life in prison on the murder charge and imposed lesser sentences on five other charges. The action came after Edwards changed his plea from innocent to no contest Friday.

Home Workers End Strike

NEW YORK (AP)-Striking nursing home workers approved a pact that ended their four-day-old walkout against 67 nursing homes.

Scores of jubilant nursing home workers gathered at a midtown Manhattan hotel Friday night and stood en masse when union leaders asked them if they approved of the three-year contract with the Metropolitan Nursing Home Association. Workers began returning to their jobs at midnight.

Operators of the homes said some of 10,000 elderly patients removed to hospitals and the homes of relatives in anticipation of the strike would begin returning soon.

Snyder Remains Front Runner For New Plant

Snyder remains a front runner in its effort to make Scurry County the location of a large industrial plant, Bill Henry Chamber of Commerce manager told the Scurry County Board of Development at its regular monthly meeting Friday.

According to Henry, the interested company's agent has narrowed a field of 60 possible locations to four, one of which is Snyder. The consulting firm is now conducting site feasibility studies and company officials will be visiting each location.

No date has been set for the Snyder visit, but it is expected in the near future.

In other action the board discussed a drive to raise money to construct a speculative building and develop an industrial park on East 37th Street. Henry said he is confident that such a building could be leased.

More than $5,000 have already been pledged in the fund drive that will be intensified this week.

Henry also reported to the board that the chamber has authorized the city to sell land across the street from the Chamber building that was donated to the chamber by the Charles Noble family. The title was in the city's name since the chamber is not allowed to own land.

The money will be used to pay off the chamber building and the parking lot behind it; Henry said.

Airlines Has Gear Problems

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)-For the second day in a row, an American Airlines plane has been forced to return to Tucson International Airport with landing gear problems.

Airline spokesmen declined to discuss the latest incident, which ocurred Friday, delaying a morning flight from Tucson to Chicago for about an hour.

In Thursday's incident, a ruptured hydraulic line was discovered shortly after takeoff and the flight, from Tucson to Dallas Fort-Worth, was delayed for five hours.

Airline spokesmen would not say what happened Friday when the plane's landing gear failed to retract after takeoff.

"Look, I'd rather not discuss it," said George Boiko, the airline's service manager.

"I guess we were to frightened to think about what a disaster it could have been," said Zelma Caples of Baltimore, Md., who was on both flights with her husband, George.

"After we took off today, the pilot came on and said there was something wrong with the landing gear. That's all I know about it," she said.

Trio Quizzed Here In Nolan Case

Three Snyder youths were stopped by authorities Friday afternoon following an incident in Nolan County in which one of the boys is alleged to have exposed himself.

Told to be on the lookout for a specific vehicle, officers of the Department of Public Safety stopped a vehicle outside Snyder on U.S. Highway 84 and questioned the youths.

A police report of the incident indicates the boys were not arrested. The highway patrolmen relayed to Sweetwater the information he gained from questioning the three boys.

In other reports, police were told of a reported theft at the 213 26th St. resident of Howard Riggs. Allegedly taken was $50 worth of tools.

The incident was reported to officers Friday.

Plan To Cut Iowa Report Is Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP)-Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, has complained to Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland about plans to drop Iowa from monthly reports on the number of cattle being fed for the slaughter market.

Clark, who is a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, told Bergland in a letter this week that the elimination of Iowa from the list would "significantly weaken the reliability" of the Agriculture Department's monthly cattle-on-feed report.

The monthly reports now cover seven major beef states; Arizona, California, Colorado, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and Texas.

Last month the report showed Texas as the leader with almost 1.8 million head in feedlots, followed by Nebraska with more than 1.6 million and Iowa with about the same number.

Clark said that "the elimination of Iowa from this sample would reduce the size of the sample about 12 percent and leave only one Corn Belt state - Nebraska - represented."

Hayes Criticizes Dixy Lee Ray

He said Miss Ray was elected because she is a woman.

Nations Assist Turtle Project

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (AP)-The turtle lady's efforts to save the mysterious Atlantic Ridleys is getting an assist from two nations.

Ida Loetscher and her friends here have been working since 1964 to save the endangered sea turtles.

At Rancho Nuevo, Mexico - the Ridleys' prime nesting site - the number of nesting females has dropped from 40,000 in 1947 to 200 in 1977.

Mrs. Letscher said the United States-Mexico joint project is aimed at raising the Ridley population and solving some of the mysteries.

One of the puzzles is how and why the turtles always return to their birthplace to nest.

The project, set to start in May, calls for the gathering of 2,000 eggs at the Mexican beach. They will be airlifted north of the border in an effort to start a colony at the national seashore just north of here.

Another 2,000 will be taken to Galveston to be reared in captivity, according to a department of the interior press release.

The captive baby turtles will be "imprinted" at Rancho Nuevo. If done properly, this will insure that they will head back south to reproduce.

However, the eggs will be imprinted in Texas sand from here.

If all goes as planned, Mrs. Letscher said, the turtles should return to Mexico within 10 years. The turtles that grow from the transplanted eggs should return here within the same period.

Scientists are unsure how the Ridleys, which grow to 100 pounds, find their way back to their birthplace. Some believe the turtles can sense the subtle chemical differences in the sand at different locations.

The project will also attempt to trace the mysterious wanderings of the Ridleys. Many will be tagged for identification and others will sport sonic tracking devices.

Mrs. Loetscher said the turtles reared in Galveston will be freed when they are big enough to fend for themselves. She said they should enjoy the coral in the Gulf waters.

"It gives the little fellas a place to hide and eat," she said.

The project will not deter the turtle lady's efforts to care for injured Ridleys.

A Governor Who Knows Agriculture

Other candidates may talk a lot about the problems of farming and ranching. None of them has the background and experience in agriculture gained over his lifetime by the Governor already in office—Dolph Briscoe.

★ Earned award as the state's leading conservation rancher-farmer when during the drought of the 1950's he turned brush-infested, sun-baked range lands into lush grasslands by root-plowing and reseeding.

★ Helped organize and served as president of Southwest Animal Research Foundation, which conducted the successful screwworm eradication program.

★ Past president of Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association and the Mohair Council of America, chairman of National Livestock and Meat Board and director of Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association.

★ Signed into law a requirement that all beef and dairy products purchased by state-supported agencies be produced in the U.S., and has urged President Carter to require federal agencies to do the same.

★ Has urged President and Congress to require imported agricultural products to meet the same inspection standards as domestically-produced goods and favors the Beef Import and Labeling Act of 1978 requiring imported beef to carry an identification label to the ultimate consumer.

★ Backs the Flexible Parity Act of 1978 which would establish new target prices for wheat, upland cotton and feed grain.

★ Backs emergency legislation in Congress directing Secretary of Agriculture to increase acreage setasides for this year's crops of wheat, corn, cotton and soybeans by 31 million acres, thereby stimulating market prices.

★ Has helped mobilize nation's governors to encourage President and Congress to bring about 100% parity in the marketplace for American agricultural products.

Throughout his private and public career Dolph Briscoe has provided strong leadership for agriculture. His actions speak louder than the promises of others. He has earned re-election to a second four-year term.

SERVICE OFFICER — Dan Dever, Scurry County Veterans Service Officer, and his secretary, Mrs. Yolanda Rosas, look over one of many VA publications relating to educational benefits. Dever's office is in the WTC Administration Building and is open each week day to provide information for veterans and their families.

Dever Ready To Aid Veterans

Since the days of the Revolution, congress has passed legislation designed to be of assistance to the men who served their country in time of need.

Benefits for veterans have been broadened since Revolutionary days, and veterans now may be either men or women who served in peace as well as in war. The dependents and survivors of veterans may receive benefits under certain circumstances as well, and there are benefits provided by states in addition to those provided by the federal government.

Veterans are generally aware that some benefits are available to them, but most need help in determining, just what these benefits are. Scurry County veterans had the assistance of Elmer Taylor as their County Veterans Service Officer for many years, and when he retired the county commissioners appointed E.H. (Dan) Dever, Jr., to replace him.

Dever has served as Veterans Outreach Coordinator at Western Texas College since 1973, and will continue to maintain that office as well as that of County Service Officer in the Administration Building at WTC. A native of Scurry County, Dever is a veteran of 24 years service in the U.S. Army and served in Korea and Vietnam. Mrs. Yolanda Rosas will be assisting him with office duties as secretary.

Dever has commended Taylor for the painstaking job he did as County Service Officer, and has spent many hours with Taylor going over the records Taylor kept.

"Mr. Taylor had a real personal interest in the veterans and their families," Dever commented, "and the amount of time he gave to his job was far in excess of what was required by his employer. He has been a great help to me in taking over the office, and I hope we can continue to give the same high quality of service that Mr. Taylor has made available."

Taylor was honored as Senior Citizen of the Year at the Retired Senior Volunteer Program recognition program last spring.

Dever is in his office from 8 a.m. to 12 noon and from 6-9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 8-12 and 1-4 on Fridays. He may be reached by telephone at 573-8511, extension 214, and he invites veterans with questions about benefits to contact him. Veterans who plan to apply for educational benefits are his most frequent callers, and he has information about all types of educational programs for them.

Student Crams For Test In Jail

ROCKY RIVER, Ohio (AP)-A college student convicted of dropping his pants in a Cleveland-area restaurant has been praised by the judge who jailed him for not bottoming out on his grades.

Donald J. Jacquet, 28, a student at Cuyahoga Community College, spent four days in jail cramming for his exams and finished with a 3.2 grade point average - about a B-plus.

"Maybe we made a good student out of you," Rocky River Municipal Judge William McCrone said Thursday as he fined Jacquet for a fight that followed the pants-dropping incident. "Jail is not a bad place to cram after all."

Jacquet was convicted of public indecency charges in March, senteneed to the jail term and fined $100.

UT Student Assembly Disbanded

AUSTIN (AP)-Student government at the University of Texas at Austin - a training ground for future politicians and an object of ridicule for many students - has been eliminated.

Students had voted March 1 to disband the student assembly, student court and student executive branch.

With the president of the UT system and the president of UT-Austin recommending that the students' desires be followed, the University of Texas regents Friday formally abolished the UT student government.

A portion of the Students' Association constitution remain intact that will allow students to hold an election reinstating student government if enough sign a petition to call one.

The regents' action was not unanimous. Three members - Jane Blumberg, Ed Clark and Jess Hay - voted against approving the end of student government.

Lorene Rogers, president of UT-Austin, said she hopes a strong and effective student government will remain to represent students within the university community.

E.D. Walker, president of the UT system, had joined her in recommending that regents accept the results of the student referendum.

Walker was named acting chancellor Friday, effective with the departure of Chancellor Charles LeMaister, who will become president of the UT Cancer Center in Houston.

Regents said they would hire outside consultants to study possible reorganization of the system administration.

In other action, the regents:

—Approved affiliation agreements that will enable students in the UT-Austin School of Social Work to obtain direct experience by working with patients in the Bexar County Hospital District and the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

—Designated a site for a visitors information center near UT's McDonald Observatory near Fort Davis. It will be constructed within the right-of-way of Spur 78 halfway between the road's junction with Texas 118 and the UT property line.

—Accepted operating authority for the Southeast Fisheries Center at Port Aransas from the National Marine Fisheries Service.

MARKETING AND POLICY MEETING

Be sure and attend the meeting on Marketing and Agriculture Policy Monday night, April 10, 1978 at 7:30 p.m. in Room A of the Scurry County Coliseum if your schedule will permit. I believe this will be a very informative meeting.

PECAN TREES NEED ZINC:

As soon as the pecan leaves are approximately 1-3 to ½ grown, you will want to consider applications of zinc and benomyl.

Pecans should receive regular zinc sprays early in the growing season. This will allow maximum shoot elongation and leaf expansion. If no zinc is sprayed onto the leaves, the stems will be short, spindly and deformed. The problem is called "zinc rosette".

Mix two pounds of zinc sulfate in 100 gallons of water or 1¼ pounds of NZN in 100 gallons of water. This should be sprayed onto the foliage at least three times in spring and early summer. In our area where zinc rosette is a severe problem, trees will respond to as many as five applications.

SCAB CONTROL

For the past several years now we have suffered losses from pecan scab. This disease causes dark, water soaked lesions to form on the pecan husk. If severe, and ours has been, this lesion will penetrate the husk, shell and cause dark spots or areas on the pecan meat.

Scab disease control is a preventative spray and must be begun early. In our area the first spray should be made when the leaves are 1-3 to ½ grown (usually about 3-4 weeks after the bud breaks.) Benomyl is the recommended fungicide.

Another application of benomyl should be included with casebearer spray usually in late May or early June. Each application of spray for other pest on pecan trees should include Benomyl.

What we really get down to on pecan spraying is this. At the 1-3 to ½ grown leaves apply benomyl and zinc sulfate. For the casebearer spray in late May or early June use benomyl and zinc sulfate and an insecticide for the casebearer.

For any spray application from June on to harvest for such insects as aphid, pecan weevil, etc. include benomyl in each spray and this will reduce the losses from scab.

Fed Water Regulations Costing Texans Millions

EDITOR'S NOTE-However well-intentioned, the federal government has imposed, and is proposing, water regulations that could cost Texans millions of dollars. The noble goal is safe, high quality drinking water. But there are problems, as in most bureaucratic schemes. A special report, fifth in a series on Texas water.

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP)-With fire in his eye, Charlie Downing invaded a federal water hearing the other day and told 'em what he and Eagle Pass think of the bureaucracy.

Charlie used a "hell" or two, one "dinky," and "inconclusive" and a ringing "ludicrous."

He came in the name of the Eagle Pass Water Works System, but he apparently spoke the language of water officials from all sections of the state.

It was not a pleasant moment for the handful of people from the Environmental Protection Agency. But others in the packed conference room applauded.

"What we need, Charlie, is more people like you getting up there and telling it like it is," said one who agreed with Charlie's comments.

Downing traveled to Dallas from his city on the Texas-Mexico border to protest governmental insensitivity and the costs of such federal indulgence.

His was a $900 complaint, but others at the hearing voiced multi-million dollar concerns.

The controversy involves the Safe Drinking Water Act and proposed new regulations affecting the lives of virtually all Texans, at least indirectly.

But first, Charlie's story: Due to a mechanical failure compounded by human error, the Eagle Pass water system exceeded the EPA's turbidity requirement for two days, its first violation in 20 years.

"We reported ourselves," Downing said ruefully of the discoloration.

"In enforcing the EPA regulations, the State Department of Health required us to notify all customers by mail, which we did as fast as we could.

"Next, we received a letter from EPA requiring us to place advertisments in the local newspaper, a weekly, and on the local radio station."

This, said Charlie, was an "exercise in futility, as it was wasted on the people."

He said the 5,000 notifications produced but 10 inquiries, most demanding to know: "What the hell are you talking about?"

Although the water was bacteriologically pure, he said, "We were required to expend some $900 of the rate-payers' moneys to inform them that a portion of the water was slightly discolored."

The federal government may consider $900 insignificant but, by golly, the Eagle Pass Water System does not.

"It was a blow to our tight budget," Charlie grumbled.

After the hearing, he told a reporter, "It's the impersonality of the whole thing...the truth is, what you're really fighting is the federal bureaucracy."

Whatever, hundreds of Texas water systems fail to meet EPA standards under the Safe Drinking Water Act of 1974. The act directed the EPA to adopt national drinking water regulations applicable to all public water supplies.

More than 500 Texas water systems were found to contain excessive chemical pollutants, predominantly fluoride. They have until 1981 to demineralize or seek alternate sources.

Just how dangerous fluoride might or might not be is debatable, but the cost of upgrading the offensive systems is fixed roughly at $25 million.

Virtually all the suspect water supplies are small systems, many of them in tiny towns without access to federal funds.

"If people can't afford it, you can't put a whole town in jail," said David Cochran, chief of the Texas Department of Health's Bureau of Environmental Health.

The health department is the EPA enforcement agency in Texas.

"Usually, when a city doesn't do something about the problem, it's because it doesn't have the money," Cochran said. "We haven't found answer to that.

"Towns are different than industries, which can be fined. But if you take the towns into court and find 'em, you've kind of compounded the problem. We're not really to that point yet."

But as Charlie Downing pointed out, the EPA customer notification requirement can be a frustrating, time-consuming and relatively expensive chore.

At Goldthwaite, a town of 1,700 in Central Texas, City Manager Dale Allen said the health department "jumped down our throats" last October, contending the city should inform its people that the water there was unsafe.

Allen admits the turbidy level exceeded acceptable EPA levels but added, "The people have been drinking it for 15 years and it hasn't hurt them yet."

Nevertheless, the city was given a year to clean up the water.

"I don't really blame the health department, but I do blame the EPA...Our people feel the federal government, the EPA, is pushing us a little too far," Allen said.

He said 60 percent of the Goldthwaite population is 65 or older and on a fixed income.

"Elderly people can't afford to pay the cost of this," he said.

"I don't know how we're going to solve this yet. We've got to get federal or state money. We're looking at grants and we're looking at the possibility of matching funds.

"It's hard for a small town to operate with all the federal rules and regulations."

Allen said faceless government officials "come up with all these things and they don't figure what it's going to cost the small towns."

Allen and others in similar dilemmas contend the people simply do not know, or care, about the EPA.

"People come in and ask why their water's going up," said one city official. "You explain that you gotta meet EPA standards. And they say, 'What the hell's the EPA?'"

Hildebrandt, who has hitchhiked across the United States, and in Canada, Europe and South America, said that he used his own travel log as a resource for the course.

License Tag Thefts Reported

AUSTIN (AP)-Apparently some Austin motorists would rather steal their new vehicle license stickers than stand in a long line to buy them.

Police said Tuesday that since the April 1 deadline for the new stickers, there have been 50 thefts of license tags reported.

"There's probably a third that many more that owners have not reported," said Police Sgt. Horace Hodges, "plus who knows how many that haven't been discovered."

Bear Series Programmed

LOS ANGELES (AP)-Surely, it is television's most unlikely marriage, this mating between a bear and a computer.

"The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams," a simple and simplistic series, is joined in a strange alliance with the most sophisticated computer technology ever applied to show business. The oddest couple, indeed.

Every idea for this NBC show, in which former animal trainer Dan Haggerty plays a man on the run who is befriended by a bear in the wilderness, is tested. Every scene, every script goes through extensive audience research, and only those that get the best reception make it.

No director treks off to the wilderness to film the show without a bible of computerized readouts tucked into his backpack.

The man behind this is Charles E. Sellier Jr., president of Sunn Classic Pictures of Park City, Utah. Sellier claims 100 percent success at the box office with a string of movies since applying computer technology to filmmaking. Not bad in a business where only one film in seven makes money. "Grizzly Adams," the movie that spawned the series, has taken in more than $24 million.

Sellier's computers have uncovered a treasure trove of fascination - to say nothing of anxiety, fear and superstition - about ancient astronauts, assassinations, unexplained phenomena. As a result, they've come up with such films as "Chariots of the Gods," "The Outer Space Connection," "The Mysterious Monsters," "The Lincoln Conspiracy" and "The Bermuda Triangle."

It also uncovered a bonanza in wilderness movies that delighted people who felt modern life was becoming too complicated.

Sellier, a converted Mormon born a Cajun Catholic in Pascagoula, Miss., limits his output strictly to family films, with "no excessive violence and no blatant sex."

He contends computer testing aids only in the "decision-making process" and does not interfere with creativity. Yet, he says he's a businessman first and has no patience for artistic expression that fails at the box office.

"For the life of me I can't figure out who decided we were artists with pieces of canvass," he says. "I liken what we do to a situation where you give people a piece of putty. One makes something that's interesting and pretty but has no value. The other makes a vase - you can put flowers in that.

SHS Drama Student In UIL Contest Tuesday

Snyder High School drama students will perform in University Interscholastic League competition Tuesday in the high school auditorium. They will be competing against five schools for the District 3-AAA title and the chance to perform at the regional meet in Odessa April 25.

The other schools vying for the honor are Sweetwater, Lamesa, San Angelo Lake View, Lubbock Dunbar, and Lubbock Estacado.

Directing Snyder's production is Jerry Worsham, who in his 11 years at the high school has pushed drama students to state championships seven times.

This year's play is, "The Corn is Green," by Emlyn Williams. Worsham says it is about a schoolteacher struggling to fan into a bright flame the spark of talent in an illiterate Welsh boy who is otherwise destined to a crude life in the coal mines.

Robby Moore plays the part of the underprivileged miner who overcomes many obstacles to justify his teacher's faith in him.

Marca Parham has the role of the resolute and generous schoolteacher.

Laurie Bethel portrays a conniving Cockney girl who tries to seduce the young miner.

John Hopkins plays a short sighted squire representing the local authority and Carol Eiland portrays a reformed shoplifter who got religion.

Other supporting roles are played by Nell Sears, Scott Marlar, Mike Overton, Jeanne McCormick, Bryan Lewallen, Jana Wesson, Donna Browning, David Bigham, Dennis Gary and Baron Land.

Company members include Sherilyn Campbell, Donna Waller, Perry Robertson and David Fleming.

The students will present the play to the public when they complete their competitive matches, probably in May.

WTC Sets Sports Superstars Event

Students and faculty members at Western Texas College will be competing for awards in the college's own Sports Superstars events scheduled Monday through Wednesday afternoons.

"It's strictly an 'all in fun' program," Mickey Baird, Director of Student Acitivities, said. "We had 20 students entered by noon Friday, and hope to have more before competition begins at 3 o'clock Monday."

Contestants will be divided into three divisions: male students, female students, and faculty. To even the odds, scholarship athletes will not be allowed to compete in contests which involve their special talents. Participation by faculty members has not equalled that of the students, but there is still time for faculty members to enter.

Certificates will be awarded the first place winners in each event, with the overall winner in each division to receive a trophy. The awards will be made at the Student Center Wednesday at the close of the last event.

Competition will begin on the driving range at the golf course, with contestants striving for accuracy. The 100-yard dash will follow on the driving range. Tennis competition will get underway at 3 on the campus courts, with winners required to take two out of three games.

Basketball competition begins at 3 Tuesday in the gym, with accuracy again the goal. Simon Says will follow at 4, and swimming begins at 5.

On Wednesday, a bicycle race will get underway at 3 at the main entrance on Round Top Road. Meanwhile, on the driving range at 4 p.m., contestants will vie for mastery in the softball throw. A timed canoe race on the WTC lake is scheduled to begin at 5 p.m.

Harvey Named

AUSTIN (AP)-W.K. Harvey, a veteran of 33 years in state government, was appointed commissioner of the Texas Rehabilitation Commission on Friday.

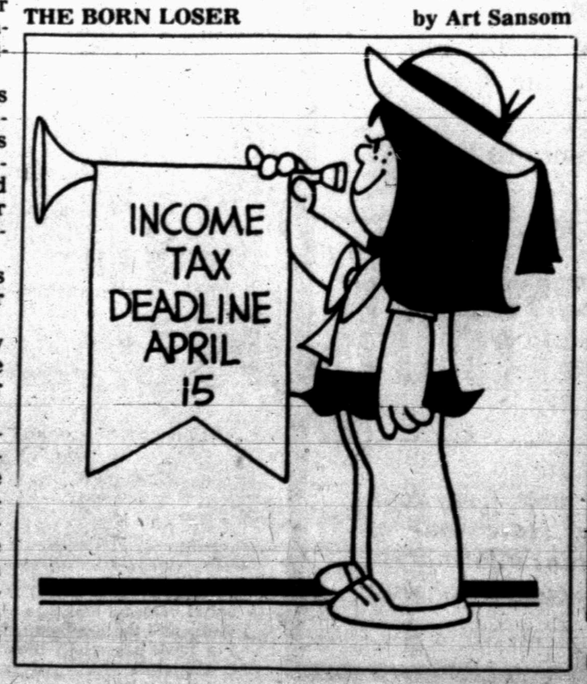

Harvey, 60, currently is senior deputy commissioner. He replaces Jess Irwin, who retired as commissioner last month and is now executive director of the Texas Public Employees Association.

Harvey will assume his duties as commissioner Monday.

Before becoming deputy commissioner, he was the agency's regional director in Houston.

"In making this appointment, the board is confident of continuing the strong leadership and outstanding record of accomplishment for which the Texas Rehabilitation Commission has been nationally known," said John Simpson, chairman of the agency's board.

Miss Brock In Summer Theatre

Junanne Brock of Snyder has been accepted for summer study at the American Conservatory Theatre in San Francisco following auditions held there recently.

Miss Brock, who is completing her sophomore year at Western Texas College, had the title role in "Medea" and the lead female role in "Barefoot in the Park" at WTC this year. She was named to membership in Phi Theta Kappa, the national honor fraternity for junior college students, with a grade point average of 3.9.

An honor graduate of Snyder High School, Miss Brock received Best Actress honors at district, regional and state levels in UIL one-act play competition during her junior and senior years. Recipient of an Achievement Award, she later attended Texas Christian University where she appeared in drama department productions and was in the college honors program.

Jerry Worsham, drama director at Snyder High School, and Jeanne Kobuszewski, WTC director, recommended Miss Brock for the American Conservatory Theatre program, commending her talent and her willingness to work well with her directors and others in the cast and crew.

Miss Brock worked with the semi-professional summer stock production of "Texas" in Palo Duro Canyon last summer. She was cast in a dual role and did the lead female role as an understudy.

Following the summer study in San Francisco, Miss Brock, 19-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ben Brock, plans to continue her studies at San Francisco State University and the University of California at Los Angeles.

Pretty Bird Returns Home

WACO, Neb. (AP)-Pretty Bird, the pet crow who asks for water and likes to untie shoelaces, has finally come home.

Pretty Bird, who has lived in Gale and Carol Gruber's chicken coop for 11 years, had been missing since September. He was found last week at the Edison School playground in York, a few miles from the Gruber's home.

School custodian Glenn Schrader caught Pretty Bird when she landed on his arm.

Pat Owens, a secretary at the school, said the bird talked to the children and added that she heard him say "hello" to a teacher and ask for water.

Variety Show May Turn To Cartoons For Hostess

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP)-CBS is tinkering with a variety show in which the hostess is a cartoon character. NBC is stringing along a puppet.

Now that Carol Burnett is leaving, and Red Skelton, Jackie Gleason and Milton Berle are long since gone, is this what television variety is coming to?

It could be. ABC has "Donny and Marie." CBS has signed Mary Tyler Moore for one stint, and Dick Clark is putting together a [illegible] for NBC. After that, it's anybody's guess. Maybe it'll be cartoons and puppets. At least, says one executive, they won't ask for bigger dressing rooms or fancier limos.

Variety, which once ruled the airwaves and sold more TV sets than RCA, is in a sorry state.

"It's very difficult to come to grips with today," says Bud Grant, head of programming for CBS.

"Other than Mary I can't think of too many performers who can front a variety show today.

"There was a period when we could take a Sonny and Cher, a Captain and Tennille - people who are basically recording artists - and put them in a one-hour series. They'd have to do comedy sketches and other things they hadn't done before."

Dick Ebersol, NBC's vice president for comedy and variety, says, "I think one of the principal problems with variety shows is that they've lost their mystery. They've lost their mystery because of all the magazines like People and Us and the Star and all the talk shows.

"You no longer hear people say, 'Hey, we got to see what Milton Berle's doing this week.' They already know more about Milton than they want to know. The mystery is gone."

Comedian Dick Martin, who starred in "Laugh-In" with Dan Rowan, echoes a similar opinion.

"I think it's pretty hard to get anyone to watch variety if five days a week they can watch it in the afternoon," said Martin. "Mike Douglas, Dinah Shore, Merv Griffin. They're not talk shows. Pure and simple, they're variety shows.

"Just try to get on one of those shows to plug a book. But if you can sing and dance..."

Dick Van Dyke, whose NBC variety show failed, says, 'there are no more Carol Burnetts, Jackie Gleason or Red Skeltons around any more. What variety you have now is mostly music. They're headed by singers. So whatever comedy they do is incidental.

"I think variety has to be headed by a comedian like Carol Burnett, who can do everything. Chevy Chase would have a good chance. Richard Pryor, I think, went too far into left field. He left the public behind. I thought Redd Foxx was exceedingly good handling his show."

Both Foxx and Pryor failed, while Donny and Marie Osmond, two singers not particularly adept at comedy, are a hit. Van Dyke also failed, although his show was well done. He says, "I was kicked around the schedule so much I'm still running into people who didn't even know I had a variety show."

Bell Says Press Biggest Problem

ALBANY, Ga. (AP)-Attorney General Griffin Bell says having to deal with the Washington press corps is a good enough reason for getting away from the capital from time to time.

"The higher you go the worse it gets in dealing with the media," Bell told a group of Albany lawyers.

He said his biggest problems are with columnists, some of whom he said "are not even contaminated with the facts."

BATTERY-DRIVEN MAILMOBILES like 'Goofy" may someday make the office mailboy obsolete. The 700-pound Goofy follows an invisible chemical guidepath to pick up and deliver mail. He and his seven brothers — among them "Mr. Spock," "Blue Eyes" and "Jolly Trolly" — make life easier for workers like Janice Lak at the Springfield headquarters of Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance.

Trash Is Valuable

WASHINGTON (AP)-A trash plant operated by the Bureau of Mines in suburban Maryland consumes five tons of garbage a week and transforms it into reusable aluminum, glass, steel and tin, reports National Geographic.

The bureau's plant, constructed from off-the-shelf mineral processing equipment, was made to show city governments and private industry that trash can be an untapped resource that can be recycled economically.

In most cities, it costs an average of $6 a ton to dispose of a ton of trash, but certain cities have tighter pollution controls and fewer landfill areas, resulting in disposal costs of up to $20 a ton.

If the Bureau of Mines prototype were duplicated by the commercial sector, it could process 1,000 tons of trash a day, says Geographic. It would cost about $8 a ton to operate at that rate, but the sale of its recycled products would bring $12.60 a ton, officials say.

Church Built On Wrong Lot

SORRENTO, Fla. (AP)-Parishioners may find the doors of the New Hope Missionary Baptist Church boarded up Sunday because someone paced off the boundaries of the wrong vacant lot 22 years ago.

A church lawyer says he may have to pray for relief from the Florida courts.

Kenneth Evans, who boarded up the church doors last Friday, says he plans to put up a no-trespassing sign this week in addition to the boarding-up and anyone who tries to attend Sunday services will be prosecuted. Last week, parishioners removed the boards and held their service.

"The church was built on the wrong lot," says Tom R. Champion, attorney for the church.

Champion says a building fund is being collected from the congregation to erect a new and larger church across State Road 437. But they are far from ready to abandon their present church.

Evans says all he has asked of the congregation since buying the property last year was for it to put $100 a month into a building fund. He says it never put the money aside.

"When I found out they weren't putting any money into the bank toward a building fund I told them they had one week to move and to get their stuff out," Evans said.

The church attorney, who insists that a building fund has been kept, says Evans needs a court order to close the church this Sunday. If he closes the church without one, the church will sue, he says.

One of the earliest parishioners of the church says she was involved in the mistake.

"About 20 years ago, Annie Collins owned the property and donated it to the church on the condition that I would build a church for the people out here," says Mae Borders.

Uranium Prosperity Has Complications...

Elliot Lake Is Booming Again

EDITOR'S NOTE — Housing is short, rents are soaring, crime is rising, traffic's snarling and workers worry about cancer. Uranium is being mined once again. And the folks who've been through the ups and downs before prefer boom to bust.

By DAVID GERSOVITZ
Canadian Press Writer

ELLIOT LAKE, Ont. (AP)-A boom town in the 50s, a bust in the 60s, Elliot Lake is once again basking in uranium prosperity. Some citizens worry it won't last. Others worry it'll last too long.

"There's a smell of money in the air," one citizen says happily. But there's also uneasiness, among miners especially, about greater hazards that expanded mining may bring - increased radiation, for one thing.

The three hotels in town are usually booked full, as are all the rental car services. Most of the visitors are consultants, contractors, engineers and skilled tradesmen associated with the boom brought on by expanded uranium mining.

Elliot Lake - with its modern homes, wide, clean streets, hospital, theater, community center and recreation facilities - is an oasis of prosperity in a troubled part of Ontario. Just 100 miles to the east, at Sudbury, 4,000 nickel miners are being laid off and other resource-based industries in the rolling hills north of Lake Huron have fallen on hard times.

But uranium prosperity has its complications.

Radioactive waste from the mines has increased fivefold, and environmentalists warn that things could get worse. Miners worry about radon gas - a radioactive, cancer-causing element - and silica dust in the mines. Housing is short, rents are soaring, crime is going up and traffic's getting worse.

And finally, people worry that the money will dry up again.

Elliot Lake was founded in the 1950s, when the United States discovered it needed $1 billion of Canadian uranium to expand its nuclear arsenal. But affluence lasted barely five years. In 1960, the market for uranium began to sour and the population dropped to 6,000 from 25,000.

In 1973, the Arab oil embargo led to an increasing demand for uranium oxide. In five years, the price of uranium has gone from $6 to $40 a pound, and Rio Algom Ltd. and Denison Mines Ltd., who own the mines here, have contracts stretching into the next century.

About 300 men worked the mines at Denison in 1975. Now there are nearly 1,000. By the time expansion is complete, the figure may be 3,000. Rio Algom will double its 1,200-man work force by 1980 and Preston Mines Ltd., a Rio Algom subsidiary, will create 1,000 jobs by reviving its Stanleigh operation, dormant since the 1960s. Another 1,000 men work on the expansion and housing.

All of which makes Elliot Lake a magnet. The population is 12,000 and government projections say it may reach 30,000 by the 1980s.

"People are coming in every week to set up dental clinics, jeans shops, pizza parlors, taverns, restaurants," says Don McKay, manager of a local real estate office.

The mining firms recruit across Canada for experienced miners, attracting them with subsidized housing. The mines own houses and apartments and are building hundreds more to rent to employees at bargain prices.

But newcomers who don't work for the mines must fight for the few vacant apartments with rents that start at $200 for a basement flat. Single-family houses, which went b[illegible]ng during the black years, now go for three or four times their original value.

Some families live in trailers, hoping the housing supply will catch up with demand, and there are people who say they know of 10 men sharing a basement.

While the companies have built about 700 subsidized units in a new subdivision, the province won't let people move in until each unit passes a special test for radon gas, minute quantities of which were found seeping into basements. The companies are installing special ventilation to reduce the hazard.

With the boom, too, thefts and burglaries have soared. But the town's 13-man police force can't grow fast enough to keep up with the crime rate because Chief Nick Cooke has trouble finding housing for new officers.

"This town is full of transients, some with a criminal past," says Cpl. Ted Hydman of the six-member Ontario Provincial Police detachment. "They get out of stir, they hear there is some work at Elliot Lake, so they come here and rip off some of the contractors and rip off some houses."

But the biggest problems, most agree, are side effects of the uranium. Homer Seguin, staff representative of the United Steelworkers of America, thinks residents will be paying a price for prosperity long after the ore runs out.

Seguin contends that 20 years of mining uranium have already caused serious damage to the environment. He also accuses the companies of ignoring safety and environmental standards to cut costs and boost production. And he says environmental considerations are taking a back seat to mining company needs in government plans.

Company spokesmen say they are doing everything possible to reduce radioactivity and protect the environment and that pollution has been reduced to a minimum. But Seguin wants all pollution eliminated.

"For example, there's radium in my drinking water at home," he says. "Now they say it's within provincial standards, and I guess it is, but it's pollution, it's cumulative.

But Mike Quinn, who heads a group sent by Canada's Atomic Energy Control Board to assess the hazards, puts it this way: "You have to consider what is practical. We know we can't get the radon level down to zero ... every part of this region has radon, some in lower amounts some in higher amounts. So the question is, where is the trade-off point? As far as I'm concerned, we haven't reached the point with the people of Elliot Lake where we are trading off their health."

One Elliot Lake resident who knows the problems first hand is Gus Frobel, who worked in the mines 20 years ago and lost a lung to cancer.

"I was a hidden victim," says Frobel, 53. "When a policeman dies it makes headlines, but when a uranium miner dies nobody cares."

A 1976 report by an Ontario royal commission into mining health and safety found 8.9 percent of Elliot Lake miners surveyed had silicosis or symptoms of it.

The commission estimated the number of lung-cancer cases from 1955 to 1974 at 36, more than twice the average for the country. James Ham, the report's author, said his estimate was conservative.

Is it all worth it? Mayor Roger Taylor worries a little - "It's in the back of my mind" - that the boom could disintegrate as it did before. But overall, he says, the mining is a plus.

"The whole of the country is in a terrible state," he says. "If you say we're not going to get the ore out as long as there is any pollution, you might as well say that Canada as a nation is finished."

Baby Crushed To Death

DETROIT (AP)-A 15-month-old baby was crushed to death when his father set the living room couch down on top of him after lifting it to look for bus money.

Lando Culver, son of Woodward and Dorothy Culver of Detroit, was dead on arrival at St. John Hospital Friday, Detroit police said.

A homicide detective said the parents apparently were blameless in the death and no charges were expected.

Police said the child apparently crawled under the couch after the Culvers had upended it, and when they replaced it, the child was caught under a crossbar, unable to cry out.

The Culvers said they noticed his disappearance within minutes, but looked for about 10 minutes before looking under the couch. He was rushed to the hospital, but it was too late.

The Culvers, both unemployed, were looking for change so Mrs. Culver could go out and look for a job, police said.

Curry Wins NABF Junior Welterweight

LOS ANGELES (AP)- Bruce Curry stopped former roommate and sparring mate Monroe Brooks in the ninth round of what was labeled a "grudge fight."

Curry took the North American Boxing Federation junior welterweight boxing title away from the more experienced Brooks, who should have known better than to engage in a fight-long slugfest with knockout specialist Curry, ranked No. 2 by the World Boxing Council.

The two Los Angeles fighters landed a lot of heavy blows Friday night and Brooks was the only one to go down - twice.

Curry, 139½, scored a knockdown in the second round with a left hook. Brooks, 138½, took an eight count. Another left hook effectively ended it in the ninth, putting Brooks on his back.

The No. 3 ranked fighter in the division got up, but after the eight-count, he toppled back against the ropes. Referee John Thomas then stopped the bout at 2:26 of the round.

The knockout in the nationally televised bout, scheduled for 12 rounds, was the 10th of the Los Angeles fighter's pro career. It also may earn Curry, 22, a title fight against Thailand's Sansaek Muansurin in either June or July, according to Olympic matchmaker Don Chargin.

Curry said before the fight his share of the purse was $22,500. Part of his feud with Brooks stems from a time in 1976 and 1976 when he was just getting started as a pro and came under the guidance of Brooks.

Fellow Taiwanese Hsieh Yung-Yo and second-day co-leader Kuo Chi-Hsiung were tied at 3-under 213. Hsieh had a sizzling 4-under 68 and Kuo a 1-over 73.

Hsieh split the day's best score cash money prize of $500 with Japan's Seiji Ebihara. Hsieh had one bogey and five birdies.

Nevid Sets AAU Record As Austin Meet Continues

AUSTIN (AP)-If 17-year-old Nick Nevid was a boxer they'd call him Rocky.

Nevid happens to be a swimmer but he struck a blow that would inspire the underdog in any sport Friday night when he "knocked out" the champ by setting an American record in the 200 yard breaststroke at the Amateur Athletic Union Short Course Swimming Championships.

Nevid, who never had been under 2:07 and swimming in his first national championship, shocked and delighted the audience at Texas Olympic Swim Center with a record 2:00.53 time, beating the former record holder, John Hencken of the Santa Clara, Calif. Swim Club.

"My coach told me I didn't have much of a chance but I had nothing to lose and everything to gain," said Nevid, still in a near state of shock moments after his race. "I didn't think there was any way I could do it."

There had been little in Nevid's past to indicate such a performance. His best time last year was a 2:14 and he qualified to the AAU meet with a 2:07 two weeks ago.

Hencken, the world record holder in the 100 meter breaststroke, finished second in 2:00.85.

"I thought maybe if they (Hencken and Spann) slipped to 2:01 or 2:02, I might have a chance," Nevid said. "I was just trying to repeat my qualifying time 2:02.70.

Nevid, formerly of Waukesha, Wis., won the national junior Olympics in 1975 but said he had not been swimming well until he moved to Nashville, Tenn. and came under the tuteledge of Nashville Aquatics Coach Paul Bergen.

"I've been doing better ever since," Nevid said. "I'm doing the same distances but with better quality, pushing myself more than before."

Nevid's surprise performance temporarily took the spotlight away from the women swimmers, who have established American records in all 11 women's finals so far in the meet.

The barrage continued Friday night, led, as usual, by Nashville Aquatics Tracy Caulkins, who got her third American record of the meet with a 2:14.07 clocking in the 200 yard breaststroke.

Nancy Hogshead, representing Amberjax, Jacksonville, Fla., set the American record of 1:55.74 in the 200 yard butterfly after serving as bridesmaid in earlier record performances by Caulkins and Diane Johannigman of the Cincinnati Pepsi Marlins.

Linda Jezek of the Santa Clara Swim Club, has set an American record in the 100 yard backstroke and the Nashville Aquatics team set an American record of 7:17.62 in the 800 yard freestyle relay.

Greg Jagenburg, representing Foxcatcher, Newton Square, Pa., won the 200-yard butterfly in an AAU meet record time of 1:45.55, Peter Rocca of Concord Swim Club took the 100 yard backstroke in 49.83 and the Florida Aquatics "A" team won the 800 freestyle relay in American record time of 6:29.81.

Appeals Court Upholds '76 Decision Of Commissioner

CHICAGO (AP)-A federal appeals court has upheld the 1976 decision of baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn to stop Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley from selling three star players for $3.5 million.

The three-judge panel of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Friday that Kuhn "acted in good faith ... in a manner which he determined to be in the best interests of baseball."

Finley had appealed a March 17, 1977 ruling by Judge Frank J. McGarr of U.S. District Court, who said Kuhn had the power to act in the best interests of baseball to nullify the sales.

Finley had announced in 1976 the sales of starting pitcher Vida Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million and outfielder Joe Rudi and relief pitcher Rollie Fingers to the Boston Red Sox for $1 million each.

Kuhn held a hearing, then disallowed the deals, saying they were "inconsistent with the best interests of baseball, the integrity of the game and the maintenance of public confidence in it."

Finley sued Kuhn for $3.5 million, saying he acted beyond the scope of his powers. The Oakland owner argued that the three players had planned to become free agents after the 1976 season and that he would lose their services and receive no compensation at that time.

Fingers signed with the San Diego Padres and Rudi with the California Angels after the season. Blue remained with the A's until being traded last month to the San Francisco Giants.

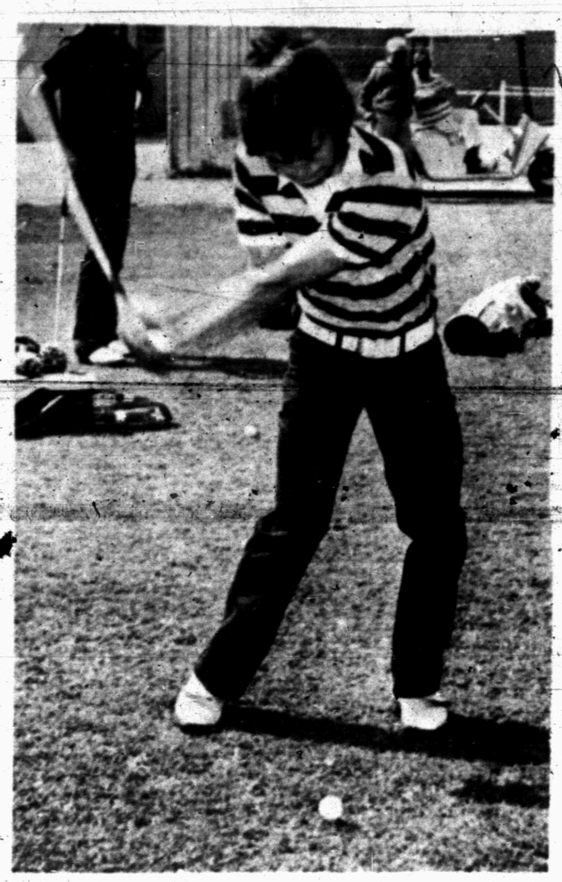

Shortly after the 1977 season ended, Finley attempted to send Blue to the Cincinnati Reds for first baseman Dave Revering and $1.7 million. But Kuhn also disallowed that deal.

In its ruling, the appeals court said the parties to the Major League Agreement were "put on ample notice that the action taken by the commissioner was not only possible but probable." All the major league teams are parties to the agreement.

Jazz Assistant Poses 1-0 Mark

HOUSTON (AP)-New Orleans assistant coach Bill Bertka would like to quit while he's ahead.

"I hope Elgin (Jazz coach) Baylor is back Sunday because I'd like to retire 1-0," Bertka said, after the Jazz overcame a 21 point third quarter deficit to trip the Houston Rockets, 117-114, in a National Basketball Association contest Friday night.

Leonard "Truck" Robinson scored 29 points, including 15 in the final quarter to help New Orleans tie its club record for most wins in a season. The Jazz, now 38-43, end their season tonight at home against San Antonio.

Bertka, who took over the coaching reins while Baylor went to Hawaii on a scouting trip, said his big men made the difference.

"I was especially impressed with the play of our front line. Robinson, Rich Kelley and Joe C. Meriweather were all super."

Gail Goodrich scored 28 points for the Jazz, Kelley added 20 points.

Calvin Murphy notched a game-high total of 42 points for the Rockets, who outscored the Jazz 20-2 during a stretch late in the second quarter to take a 66-53 halftime lead.

Houston built its advantage to 83-62, midway through the third quarter, but New Orleans started chipping away finally took a 109-108 lead with three minutes remaining in the contest. The Rockets took a 112-111 lead with 12 minutes to play, but the Jazz scored the next six points to put the game away.

"It's great anytime you win coming from behind, but it's especially nice to win after trailing by 21 points," said Goodrich. "The key was our board control in the second half and getting our break going."

Houston was to end its season Saturday night at Indiana.

Not As Close A Race As Last Year...

Martin Looks For Yanks Late

ARLINGTON (AP)-Billy Martin figures the American League Eastern Division race won't be as close as the 1977 scrap between the eventual World Champion New York Yankees, the Boston Red Sox, and the Baltimore Orioles.

The Yankees finished two and one-half games ahead of the Red Sox and Orioles, then downed Kansas City in the AL playoffs and knocked off the Los Angeles Dodgers in the World Series.

"For one thing, our pitching is better," said Martin before the Yanks opened defense of their title against the Texas Rangers.

"It took us time to get our pitching straightened out last year," said Martin. "But we've got better pitching than Boston and Baltimore. It will close early but not at the end. We didn't get rolling last year until the latter part of May."

Martin said teams that are not going to win the pennant usually do well early.

"Along about that second month they look up and realize where they are and then they can't handle the pressure...then they say 'here we go again,' said the saucy Yankee skipper. "Actually, we didn't play our best ball until after the All-Star break last year."

Martin said the addition of right-hander Rich Gossage to the Yankee bullpen to bolster lefty Sparky Lyle was the tonic the Yanks needed.

"If we had had Gossage last year we would have blown Boston away," said Martin. Boston is tough on left-handed pitchers in Fenway Park with its friendly leftfield fence.

The Yankees will play the first 10 days or so with slugging catcher Thurmon Munson as a designated hitter. Munson has been bothered with knee problems.

"Cliff Johnson who will replace Munson at catcher has really been hitting the ball," said Martin.

"I think we are much improved over last year," Martin added.

Conner All-Around Gymnastics Champion

EUGENE, Ore. (AP)-Bart Conner of Oklahoma is the all-around champion at the gymnastics championships of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

His team, which trailed only Arizona State going into the second of three days of competition, rose to first place Friday with points based on performances in the optional exercises. Compulsory exercises were held the first day.

After the optional exercises, Oklahoma, with 435.75 points, was followed by Arizona State with 435.35 and Southern Connecticutt State with 431.60. The three top teams were to compete for the team championship in the final day of competition.

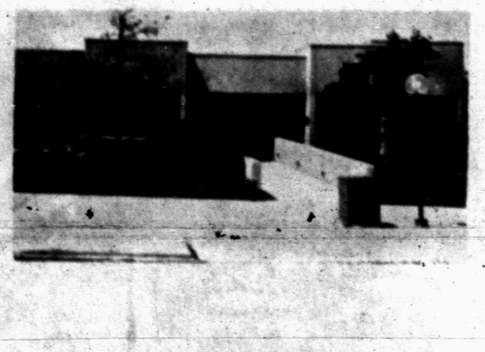

Conner's optional exercises moved him into a tie for first in the horizontal bars from the second place he held after compulsory exercises and to a tie for third in rings from fifth. He remained third in parallel bars.

Mel Cooley of Washington was the other first-place competitor in horizontal bars.

Teammate Mile Wilson was third all-around and third in floor exercises after the optionals. He hyperextended his knee in floor exercises and Coach Paul Ziert said he would miss the floor exercise and vault finals. He was in a tie for fifth after optional exercises in the vault.

Yochi Tomata of Long Beach State, who was tied with John Corritore of Michigan for first in parallel bars, finished second in all-around competition.

South Nips East In Aloha Classic

HONOLULU (AP)-Ron Carter of Virginia Military Institute hit a shot with two seconds left to play as the South edged the East, 97-95, and remained as the only unbeaten team in the Aloha College Basketball Classic Friday night.

In the first game, Marvin Johnson of New Mexico hit 36 points as the underdog West squad outrebounded the Midwest in a 124-108 upset.

Mike Mitchell of Auburn took an inbounds pass with five seconds to play and threw a desperation shot that went over the basket in the second game.

However, Carter was on the other side to follow up with the game-winning bucket.

Ron Brewer of Arkansas and Purvis Short of Jackson State scored 28 and 22 points respectively to lead the South.

The East had a balanced attack led by Bob Miller of Cincinnati who scored 18 points, with George Johnson of St. Johns and Glenn Hagan of St. Bonaventure scoring 14 points each.

Johnson hit 18 of 3 shots from the field and hauled down 10 rebounds to lead the West. He had help from Freeman Williams of Portland State, who added 22 points, and Michael Richardson of Montana and Jeff Judkins of Utah with 20 each.

All-American Butch Lee of Marquette led the Midwest and all scorers with 37 points, but he did not have the supporting cast he had the night before.

The West led 61-56 at halftime and steadily pulled away behind the shooting of Johnson.

Takeover Attempt In Spotlight Last Week

By MARTIN MERZER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP)-Corporate takeovers, the hottest game in town last summer and fall, are heating up again. And one of the new attempted takeovers erupted into bitterness this past week.

"We're going to beat them and we're going to beat them as badly as they deserve," predicted T. Roland Berner, chairman of Curtiss-Wright Corp., which is attempting to gain control of Kennecott Copper Corp., a firm with three times the annual sales volume of Curtiss-Wright.

Last summer and fall saw a variety of takeovers, including J. Ray McDermott & Co.'s acquisition of Babcock & Wilcox Co. and Kennecott's purchase of Carborundum Corp. Winter seemed to cool the passion for takeovers, but the action has returned with the onset of spring.

Why are takeover attempts so attractive that they increased by 30 percent last year? It's simple, said Alfred Rappaport, a merger analyst at Northwestern University.

"If you buy an existing business, there's no lag between the investment and reaping the fruits," he said.

The Curtiss-Wright bid for control of Kennecott is one of the more interesting corporate fights to develop in recent years. Curtiss-Wright, primarily an aircraft components manufacturer based in Wood-Ridge, N.J., owns about 9.9 percent of Kennecott's stock.

Curtiss-Wright is seeking proxies from other stockholders, and promises that if it gains voting rights for at least 50 percent of Kennecott's stock, it will dump the current board of directors and elect its own slate of 17 directors.

Berner, who is orchestrating the proxy fight, claimed that Kennecott's current management is incompetent and has made numerous and costly mistakes - including, ironically, that purchase of Carborundum. Kennecott officials so far have refused direct comment on Berner's charges, but they have mailed to stockholders a letter defending their record and seeking support.

In other business developments this past week:

—The Carter administration, beset by a falling dollar, rising prices and large-scale oil imports, was drafting what was described as a new, get-tough approach to controlling inflation.

And the President told congressional leaders that he would take a larger personal role in lobbying for his energy bill, which he said would help reduce oil imports and ease pressure on the economy.

—Federal Reserve Chairman G. William Miller predicted an inflation rate this year of 6.5 percent to 7 percent, a bit higher than the rate generally predicted by Carter administration officials.

A few days later, the government announced that wholesale prices rose by 0.6 percent in March, slower than the 1.1 percent rate in February but still at a rate of over 7 percent a year.

O'Hair Scared Of Present Court

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)-Atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair, the guiding force behind the Supreme Court's decision banning obligatory prayer in public schools, says she is frightened of the present high court.

"I think the current composition of the court should scare every American like crazy," Mrs. O'Hair said Friday before opening the 8th annual convention of American Atheists.

She charged that because of the presence of four justices appointed by former President Richard Nixon, the court has become less concerned with human rights.

"Atheists have human rights, too," she said. "But you won't hear a peep out of President Carter on that."

LOS ANGELES (AP)-Jane Fonda is wearing a light cast and is confined to her home after fracturing her foot during the filming of her latest movie, "Power," the actress' agent, Eileen Peterson, said.

Ms. Fonda and co-star Michael Douglas, who portray a reporting team in the film, were running down a rocky path Friday when the actress stumbled, Ms. Peterson said.

The picture was in the next-to-last day of production, Ms. Peterson said, and will be completed when Ms. Fonda's right foot is healed.

Briscoe Has Outspent Hill

AUSTIN (AP)-Campaigners for Gov. Dolph Briscoe, helped along by $500,000 in bank loans, already have outspent Attorney General John Hill two-to-one in the governor's race.

Both men have raised $1 million or more for their campaigns.

Also joining the million-dollar campaign expense club was a Republican candidate, Bill Clements.

Campaign finance reports were submitted to Secretary of State Steve Oaks on Friday.

They indicated that Briscoe and his various campaign committees have spent $1,926,300 to Hill's $881,997.

Briscoe, meanwhile, has raised $1,254,653 to Hill's $1,066,050, the reports showed.

Hill's reports reflect no indebtedness, but Briscoe said he has borrowed $500,000 and has additional loan authorizations totaling $400,000 from seven Texas banks.

Briscoe's loans are guaranteed by various supporters.

He said he borrowed in March from Mercantile National Bank and Republican National Bank of Dallas; Texas State Bank, Austin National Bank and Capital National Bank in Austin; Allied Bank of Texas in Houston; and Alamo National Bank of San Antonio.

Also borrowning heavily to finance his campaign is Clements, who reported $1,295,000 in loans - $400,000 of which have been repaid.

Clements personally guaranteed $650,000 in bank loans, and he "lent" his campaign another $400,000.

The former deputy secretary of defense said he has received $263,886 in donations while spending $1,512,829 on his campaign for the GOP gubernatorial nomination. Clements is his campaign's biggest contributor, pouring $65,000 of his own money into it as gifts.

No report had been received as of mid-day Friday from the other Republican candidate for governor, Ray Hutchison.

Former Gov. Preston Smith, the third Democrat in the gubernatorial race, reported spending $54,478, with contributions totaling $62,041, including a $12,500 loan from himself.

The primaries are May 6, and the next deadline for financial reporting is May 1.

Spending was lighter in the races for attorney general and railroad commissioner than in the campaigns for governor.

Mark White, a Democratic candidate for attorney general, said his spending totaled $47,453, against donations of $52,371.

Price Daniel Jr. reported spending $194,736 in the same race, while collecting $186,621 in contributions and borrowing $21,000 - mostly from himself and his mother.

In the railroad comissioner's race, commissioner John Poerner said he has received $70,189 and spent $41,759; Jerry Sadler collected $1,625 and spent $2,664 and Ray Lemmon raised $22,000, borrowed $1,500 and spent $2,825.

Reports in the U.S. Senate race are filed in Washington, D.C.

Screams not dreams

By Karen Blaker, Ph.D.

References to child abuse are everywhere — on bus advertisements, in newspapers and magazines, on radio and television. Many people complain they have heard enough — but it will not be enough until this epidemic is under control.

Some half million cases of child abuse are reported every year and this may be merely the tip of the iceberg. Even more harrowing is the fact that child abuse ranks among the top five killers of children in the United States.

Child abuse is not only destructive for those immediately involved. As this excerpt from a hot-line call illustrates, it can disturb other lives as well.

HOT LINE

JOAN: I know it's three in the morning but I have been having trouble sleeping. It's the nightmares. They are terrible. My parents are away and I have to talk to someone. I get so scared when I can't sleep.

COUNSELOR: Your parents are away?

JOAN: They go away for the weekend about once a month. I am 18 years old so it doesn't bother me much except. . . oh, it is starting again. I can hear the screams. I can't stand it. The sounds come right through the floor. I wish I couldn't hear everything.

COUNSELOR: What do you hear?

JOAN: A child is screaming, "No, please, no. . : don't hit me again, Mommy. . . I'll be good."

COUNSELOR: Where are the screams coming from?

JOAN: We live in the top part of a two-family house. It's the family downstairs and it usually happens when my parents are not here. What shall I do?

COUNSELOR: Do you want to call the police — or give me their name and address so I could call?

JOAN: Oh, I couldn't do that. . . I mean, I would have to ask my parents. I am so frightened.

COUNSELOR: Why don't you turn on some lights and the radio. Turn on some music and then we will talk some more.

JOAN: Okay, I'll be back in a minute. . . That's better. I feel safer now.

COUNSELOR: What do you think is happening downstairs?

JOAN: Sometimes I'm not sure. I wake up suddenly and think I hear screams. But then I'm not sure whether it's just a bad dream. But tonight I am sure about what I heard. Someone is beating up on a child.

COUNSELOR: You say this happens when your parents go away? Maybe that's not just chance.

JOAN: What do you mean?

COUNSELOR: Maybe they are counting on the fact that you would be too young to call the police and too frightened to tell your parents.

JOAN: If that's true, they guessed correctly. I haven't even told my parents. They might think I was just trying to get them to stay home. And besides, I wasn't sure what I was hearing.

COUNSELOR: And after tonight?

JOAN: Now I'm sure and I will tell them when they get home in the morning.

COUNSELOR: I am sure they will want to do something. This is a bad situation for everyone involved.

JOAN: What if they don't know what to do?

COUNSELOR: Parents Anonymous, the hot-line for child abuse, could probably give them the best advice.

JOAN: They would be afraid to call the police but they would call some organization like that. Why do people do that to their children anyway?

The counselor explained to Joan that adults who were abused as children often take out their frustrations on their children in a violent way. Eventually Joan felt more relaxed and decided to try to get back to sleep.

Panama Youths Protest

By TOM FENTON
Associated Press Writer

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP)-Some 300 youths protested the Panama Canal treaties and burned an effigy of President Carter despite warnings from U.S. senators that such demonstrations might shift enough votes to defeat the pacts.

"Down with amendments that guarantee Yankee intervention:" said a banner carried by one of the protesters in a downtown park. Friday. "Panamanians, organize and fight against the treaties:" another proclaimed.

"We've got to tell Gen. Torrijos these treaties are unacceptable to the people," still another protester yelled. "We are against a treaty that guarantees Yankees the right to intervene."

Protest leaders told the crowd the two treaties should be rejected by the people of Panama even if the U.S. Senate makes no more changes.

National guardsmen standing by made no effort to interfere with the protest.

The demonstration was sponsored by two student groups, the Leftist Socialist Revolution League and the Circulo Camilo Torres, and was the first protest against the treaties since Jan. 9 when several hundred persons marched onto the Bridge of the Americas that crosses the canal.

Some Panamanians have objected to a provision in the first treaty passed by the Senate on March 16. That treaty guarantees neutrality of the canal once Panama takes control in the year 2000, but one provision would allow American military intervention if Panama were unable to keep the canal operating. The second treaty, which actually turns the waterway over to Panama at the end of 1999, comes up for a vote in the Senate April 18.

Panama has protested the U.S. position on intervention in a letter to the United Nations.

The Foreign Ministry said Friday it would take no position on the validity of the treaties or on changes made by the Senate until after final ratification. That statement appeared aimed at reports that Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos had decided to reject the amendment guaranteeing the U.S. right of intervention.

Rains Disrupt California Field Work

WASHINGTON (AP)-Heavy rains in California during the winter disrupted planting and harvesting of some important vegetable crops and will continue to affect supplies this spring, says the Agriculture Department.

"Lettuce, celery, carrot and broccoli crops are all smaller than earlier expected, and in some cases their quality is down, too," the department said Friday in a new agricultural outlook report.

In another report this week, the department's Crop Reporting Board said growers of fresh market vegetables plan to have an estimated 247,730 acres of crops for harvest this spring, down 2 percent from April, May and June of last year.

Because of reduced yields, the board said production might decline 3 percent from the spring quarter of 1977.

The report showed that consumers can expect less of these vegetables this spring: broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, sweet corn, cucumbers, lettuce, spinach and tomatoes.

Crops expected to be in greater abundance include: snap beans, carrots, celery, eggplant, escarole and endive, and green peppers.

IMPORTED PIZZA CRITIC — Roberto Facinelli from Italy, an AFS student participating in the AFS Jamboree taking place this weekend, sampled some of the domestic pizza. He reported that it was good, but for really great pizza, he said, there was no place like home.

Uniform Switch Is Jolting

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP)-It was a bit of a jolt for one Billings resident when city police switched from familiar green to traditional blue uniforms.

On the first day for the bright new uniforms, two officers making their rounds found one of their regular customers curled up in a doorway, sleeping off the effects of the previous night.

When the officers nudged the man, Police Chief Gene Kiser reported, he awoke, stared blearily at the unfamiliar uniforms and said he'd be on his way immediately.

"But could you tell me, officers, how far it is to Billings, Mont.?" he asked.

Nimoy Launches Fund Raising

BOSTON (AP)-In 1949, when the television series "Star Trek" was still a couple of decades away, the man who was to play the stolid Mr. Spock was learning about acting at Boston College.

On Friday, Leonard Nimoy returned to the college to help launch a $3 million fund raising drive for a theater arts center.

Suspended Man Forgives Dolph

AUSTIN (AP)-It's taken three months, but Joaquin Rodriguez says he's no longer bitter at Gov. Dolph Briscoe for the job suspension that shattered his comfortable, middle class existence.

Rodriguez, once the $21,000-a-year program director of the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs (GOMA), and now a $2.65-an-hour shoe salesman, even plans to vote for his ex-boss.

He holds a faint hope of returning to his old job if Briscoe is re-elected.

Briscoe suspended Rodriguez and GOMA director Rogelio Perez with pay in early January after they took the Fifth Amendment in a Brownsville court of inquiry into alleged misuse of federal job-training money.

The governor stopped their paychecks a couple of weeks later when both were indicted on charges of "tampering" with a witness in the inquiry.

"I knew at the time he had to take some action. We were public officials. People tend to think of individuals who take the Fifth as having something to hide. Being a political year, with a hard governor's race, I don't think he had any other choice," Rodriguez said in an interview.

He said when Briscoe first cut off his paycheck, he was bitter - "I had payments to make...Now I'm barely making the mortgage. Taxes are killing me."

Yet, he said, "I will vote for Briscoe....I think he has done a lot more for Mexican-Americans than the other guy" - Attorney General John Hill, Briscoe's chief opponent.

He said he expects his trial to result in acquittal, and is angry it was postponed from its original March 27 date.

"If we come out all right in the trial, I think we will be put back on the payroll but not re-instated immediately...I would like to have my job back. I would like to be back in the governor's office. But most of all, I want my record cleared," Rodriguez said.

He directs his bitterness mainly toward State District Judge Darrell Hester of Brownsville, who presided over the court of inquiry.

Like Perez, he professes to see election year politics in the inquiry held by Hester, who worked closely with Hill when the attorney general was investigating alleged corcuption in Duval County.

"My opinion was he was going to find something to charge us with," he said.

The inquiry centered on Don and Clarence Gray, officials of a Harlingen plumbers union's job training program. They have been indicted on several counts of theft.

Of his own case, he said the witness tampering charge was groundless and was based on the fact that he and Perez conversed with other witnesses from their office before testifying.

He said he and Perez' lawyer advised them to take the Fifth because the attorney had heard Hester was going to ask about "personal stuff" other than manpower contracts with the Grays.

"We took the Fifth not because we had something to hide but to spare some ridicule Hester was going to heap on us," he said.

Just before the inquiry, he said, a Lower Rio Grande Valley television station had broadcast a story to the effect Perez had entrenched a woman friend in well-paid manpower jobs.

Hester could not be reached for comment.

Rodriguez defended GOMA's record against accusations of high per trainee costs and sloppy management - the latter coming from State Auditor George McNiel.

He said figures given out by the Texas Department of Community Affairs distort GOMA's costs. TDCA data says GOMA averaged $8,000 per migrant who was trained and placed in a job.

Rodriguez said this overlooks the fact that a large portion of GOMA's money went into programs to keep migrant youngsters in school - programs that don't show a pay off in terms of job placements.

He also defended a practice criticized by McNiel-receiving refund checks from contractors, endorsing them and mailing them to other contractors rather than running them through the treasury.

"The operators were in a money crunch....What we were doing was endorse them and send them to the operators, with our accounting office to keep track...I personally gave instructions to leave an audit trace," Rodriguez said.

Schools Caught In Bind In Many States

EDITOR'S NOTE-Public school children in many states are caught in the bind between property tax relief and higher costs for equal education. One solution is for the state and federal government to assume more of the burden for a bill that will total more than $80 billion this year.

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)-The nation's public schools, saddled with the twin problems of rising costs and declining enrollments, are looking to state governments to pay an increasing share of their bills.

The local property tax, long the bulwark of school finances, pays just under half the bill and is likely to provide even less in the future.

The reason is twofold: Irate homeowners are pressing for property tax relief at the same time the courts and legislatures are requiring more state spending to equalize educational opportunities in rich an poor districts.

Only a handful of states are feeling the school financing pinch as sharply as Ohio, where some city schools had to curtail classes last term for lack of funds.

Dexter Magers, a school finance specialist for the U.S. Office of Education, says, "The national picture is very mixed. Generally, the problems are worse in the Northeast and Midwest Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio in states that are experiencing economic declines and have been tightening up all their spending programs.

"But in the Sunbelt and West, there's no crisis of any proportion. A number of legislatures in these states ended last year with surpluses and are able to improve their contributions to education."

Ohio's situation is exacerbated by the tight hold local voters exert over their school budgets. Local jurisdictions are required by law to provide all services, including schools, from no more than a 1 percent tax on property.

"No local government can provide all the services - schools, police, fire and roads - for 1 percent, so to pay for the schools they have to ask the local voters to override the limit," says Magers.

"When you have that system, you're just going to have angry voters every now and then, particularly when the economic conditions are bad. Most states manage to operate with very few of their school district budgets subject to local election."

Magers says he believes voter rejection of budget and bond issues peaked about two years ago. Nationwide, voters approved 46.3 percent of school bond issues in 1975 and 50.8 percent in 1976, the last year for which figures are available.

Laslo Ecker-Racz, a tax expert who is a consultant to the National Education Association, says, "The answer to the problem of not having sufficient local support for schools is to increase the support from above, from the state and federal governments."

The bill for the nation's 45 million public elementary and secondary school children was $70.8 billion for 1975-76, the last year for which figures are available. That bill is estimated at $74.4 billion in 1976-77, and $82.7 billion for the current school year, with 43.7 million students enrolled.

Ecker-Racz, the NEA consultant and a former school board member in Arlington, Va., believes the nation's school are in for a squeeze.

"The cards are sort of stacked against the public schools, and you can't expect any change until the political climate and the public thinking changes," he says.

"The public's automatic reaction to declining enrollments is, 'Well, now they'll need less money,' he says. "But you can't fire a teacher because a classroom goes from 25 students to 24. It may take seven, eight or nine years before there is enough of a decline to dispense with a teacher.

"The only thing it saves you in the short term is a little bit on stationery and school supplies. A large community can close down one school, but that aggravates your standing with parents."

Also, he says, "the conventional wisdom degrades the schools," with parents concerned that they're paying more while their children learn less.

But Ecker-Racz feels that eventually more money will be found for the schools.

"These things come in cycles. A shortage becomes so acute it becomes politically more attractive to support some tax than to shortchange the schools. When this happens, you get a program," he says. "In some years, it's political poison to associate yourself with a tax increase. In other years, it's political poison to ignore some pressing social need."

Sheriff Fit To Be Tied Over Suit

GADSDEN, Ala. (AP)-Sheriff Felton Yates says he's fit to be tied over a suit filed against him by a former Etowah County Jail inmate who fractured both legs and ankles in an unsuccessful escape attempt last June.

The suit was filed by Glen Holliday, who now is serving a 15-year term in the state prison for a rape conviction.

Yates said Holliday fell from the fourth floor of the jail when a home-made rope, made of bedsheets and mattress covers, broke.

"What does he want me to do, keep stronger material around to make escapes easier?" moaned Yates.

Paraguay's chief exports include beef and other food products, as well as cotton, wood products, hides, tobacco, yerba mate tea and vegetable oils.

Horses Not Out Of Gates Even If Referendum Okayed

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP)-On the first Saturday in May, thousands of Texans will closet themselves in voting booths and decide what to do about their perplexing passion for wagering on horse races.

To some, pari-mutuel wagering is a thrill for the sport, win or lose. To others it's devil riders on dumb animals with the family breadwinners as victims and organized crime the cashier.

Three previous public referenda - 1962, 1968 and 1974 - were defeated in a state that hasn't had pari-mutuel betting since 1937. The referendum is non-binding and would face a bitter fight in the Texas Legislature.

"There's no question in my mind that the referendum will pass but we have a very strong lobby in Austin which doesn't care what the people want," says Tom Russell, secretary-treasurer of the Texas Thoroughbred Breeders Association. "They want to impose their thoughts and wishes on other people.

"I think we'll win by about 67 percent but I'm not overly optimistic about that legislative battle. It's a long hard fight and what we need is an overwhelming vote of the people."

The primary opposition comes from Texas Baptists and one of their more imposing leaders, Rev. W.A. Criswell, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Dallas.

Criswell's congregation has 20,000 members. His sermons on horse-race gambling strike at the heart of family life.

"Racetracks take money that should be spent for baby's shoes. Gambling is like drugs or stealing or prostitution. God says it's wrong."

Says Russell: "The Baptists are just about the only opposition we have but they are plenty tough. Most of us in the horse racing business are Christians. Some people think three-headed monsters are involved. It's a business and a lot of honest Christian individuals feel you're not sinning by going to the horse races." And he says there are Baptists who support horse racing.

There are members of the Texas Legislature, including State Rep. John Bryant of Dallas, who say, "I will vote against it (pari-mutuel wagering) no matter which way the referendum turns out. People know my position. They can get me out of office if they disagree."

Russell says of Bryant: "You've got to respect his conviction."

Bryant says gambling clearly "increases the welfare roles."

Russell counters, "A person who works at a race track is not graded by education. Anyone can get off welfare and work for a living at a race track."

Bryant contends, "It brings suffering to people who can least afford to lose."

Russell claims studies of frequency of attendance show "that lower income groups represent the smallest amounts of the daily handle."

Bryant cites the National Commission on Gambling which says "there is marked increase in track attendance on weekends when welfare checks are delivered."

In the last referendum, large Texas cities like San Antonio, Houston, Dallas, El Paso and Austin voted for pari-mutuel wagering. But a heavy vote from opponents in the "Baptist Belt" towns of Lubbock, Abilene, and Waco knocked it out.

"We don't want to race in those places anyway," says Russell. "It's obvious people in the metropolitan areas want it."

And what about organized gambling?

"Does it tell you anything when you realize that illegal gamblers do not want legalized horse racing in Texas?" says Russell. "The leading bookie in the United States is against legalized horse racing."

The FBI in Dallas says up to $128 million was bet on horse racing in Texas' 16 major metropolitan areas in 1976.

Figures prepared for the Texas Organized Crime Prevention Council showed estimates of betting volume on football as high as $576 million; baseball $101 million; basketball $82 million and others - high school football, dog fights, cock fights, etc-$27 million.

"Football is the big thing in Texas," says an FBI spokesman. "It takes a different type of person to wager on a horse race, somebody who thinks he has some inside information. Everybody in Texas thinks they know their football."

If you want action at any of Texas' so-called "bush" tracks you can get it. The tracks, located anywhere from Laredo to Frisco near the Texas-Oklahoma border, are in various states of repair. The wagering is strictly illegal and unofficial.

The American Quarter Horse Association, headquarted in Amarillo, sanctions races at a dozen Texas tracks with purses totaling $3.2 million. There are more than 211,000 quarter horses registered in Texas, more than any state.

"We have a rule prohibiting gambling at Texas tracks," said Don Essary, director of racing for the AQHA. "But enforcement is difficult. We will close down a track if we find a Calcutta pool auction-type betting, but as far as one-on-one betting, it's impossible to stop."

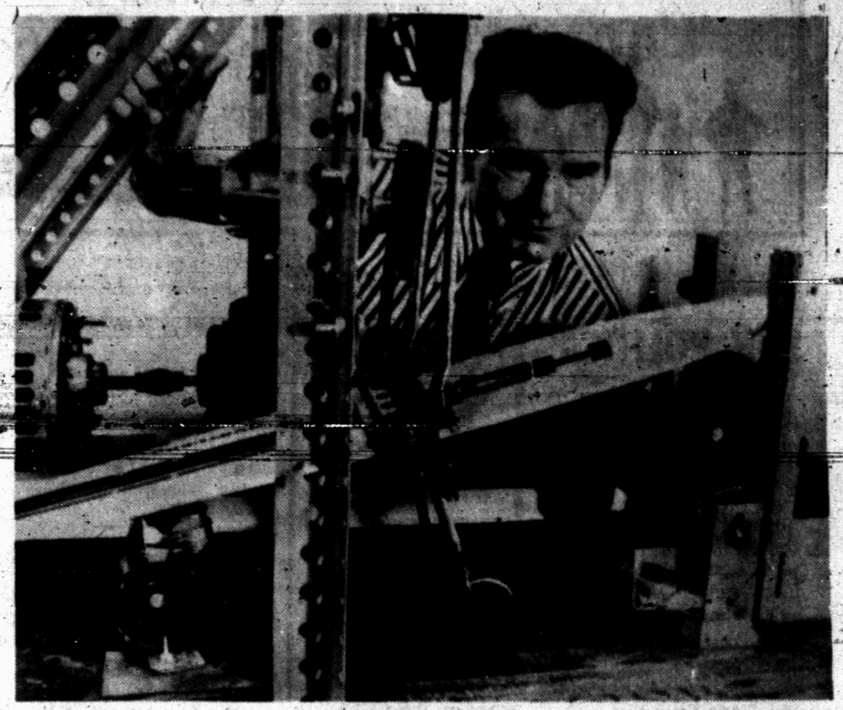

A visit to a horse racing track just outside a small South Texas city uncovered wide open wagering.

One better told the AP: "A lot of people think because in Texas we don't have pari-mutuel betting we don't have horse racing. A lot of people who know there is horse racing just skip it because they don't think there's any gambling...they don't know what they're missing."

Russell says what the state of Texas is missing is some $120 million in taxes each year.

Regardless of the fate of the referendum, a bill would have to be introduced into the legislature in 1979. It's proponents stand to take another drubbing there.

"The people of Texas aren't likely to get too excited about such a bill until we get into a serious tax squeeze," says Sen. Ike Harris of Dallas. "If it comes down to a choice between more taxes and horse racing, then they'll likely pick the track."

THIS CONTRAPTION, powered by a 10-year-old washing machine agitator, tests the durability and safety of skateboards. The boards are anchored to the machine for trial runs of 50 miles at a speed of 12 miles an hour. Performing the test is design engineer Joe Wos, who developed the device for the F. W. Woolworth Co.

Film Urging Betting Is 'Scratched' At Gate

By The Associated Press

A film urging Texans to vote in favor of pari-mutuel horse race betting at the upcoming primary election has been "scratched" at the starting gate by Dallas-Fort Worth area television stations.

Robert Heller, media consultant for the Texas Horseracing Association, said Saturday that four Dallas-Fort Worth Stations refused to sell time for the film.

The 30-minute film features an appearance by former Dallas Cowboys football star Walt Garrison.

Heller said a time buyer was told by the stations that because of a federal fairness doctrine, the stations would have to give the forces opposing pari-mutuel betting access to free and equal time to give their side of the issue.

The Dallas-Fort Worth area is the only one of 18 television markets in the state to turn down requests for time to show the film, he said.

U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said Friday his position in the Republican gubernatorial primary race is one of "complete neutrality."

In a statement issued Friday, Tower said "My position has been and will continue to be one of complete neutrality. I have not taken sides in the race, either in public or private, and I will not take sides, either in public or private. I consider both men to be friends of mine."

The statement from Texas' senior senator came after Ray Hutchison, former GOP state chairman, urged him to clarify his position.

Bill Clements, who opposes Hutchison, told a meeting of the Texas Associated Press Broadcasters in Galveston about a week ago that Tower had authorized him say Clements would be worth 200,000 votes to Tower in the general election if Clements won the nomination.

Tower said he would support the gubernatorial nominee in November, no matter who it is, and would have no further comment "either in public or in private."

Attorney General John Hill said in Odessa that his main opponent in the Democratic gubernatorial race, Gov. Dolph Briscoe, has reversed Texas' historic role of standing up for its oil and gas resources.

"The Carter energy program announced 12 months ago was a flagrant attempt to expand price and allocation control over our Texas oil and gas industry, and that slap has yet to be properly answered by our governor," Hill said.

Speaking at Fort Worth, Briscoe said Friday that pornography was a blight on society and it would be an important part of his anti-crime package for the 1979 Legislature.

"I am especially concerned about the use of children as the subject of pornography and will propose that criminal penalities for this offense be made stronger," Briscoe said.

Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Joe Christie asked his opponent, Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, to explain why he is conducting both his campaign and congressional business out of the same office in New Braunfels.

Krueger personally pays the expenses of his New Braunfels office and that is the reason it is used at times for campaign activities.

MRS. POLLY FOY
...notes 92nd birthday

Receives Card From President

Mrs. G.W. (Polly) Foy of Route 3 will celebrate her 92nd birthday April 13. Mrs. Foy recently received a birthday card signed by President Jimmy Carter and his wife, Rosalynn.

Mrs. Foy came to Snyder at the age of 5 with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. McInturff in an ox drawn wagon. Their first home was a half-dugout given to them by Pete Snyder.

There were only two stores in Snyder at that time. Her family, referred to as squatters by Mrs. Foy, were early ranchers in this area. Later, when she was in her teens, her father operated the way station which was located near what is now Knapp. She recalls many good and bad experiences during her life in Snyder.

Mrs. Foy has seven children. They are Etta Mae Brown of Lubbock, Ethel Stephens of Lamesa, Hazel Forbus of Lamesa, Marie Wagner of Lamesa Bessie Faye Mitchell of Monahans, Nila Bassinger of Big Spring and Nena Mitchell of Snyder.

Mrs. Foy enjoys light housework and maintains her own home.

BLANCHE'S BLABS

By BLANCHE CHISUM
Scurry County Extension Agent

Greetings to all Scurry County residents. This is a small section of your newspaper that will hopefully give you helpful hints to be used by you to help save you some time, money and hopefully help you to enjoy your home and family to its fullest. These news articles will include topics on family health, apparel, nutrition, food preservation and many others your family can benefit from. If you ever need more information or question some of the topics please feel free to call the Scurry County Extension Office and ask for Blanche Chisum.

Today's topic concerns efficient air conditioners for the home. This may be of real importance to the comfort of many families.

A clean, well-maintained air conditioner means more efficient cooling and comfort--for the family.

Regular inspection and cleaning of filters and grills in home air conditioner units keeps the house cooler--and saves fuel.

Filters are traps for the almost invisible impurities in the air and regularly build up an accumulation of dirt.

Air conditioner filters in most units--and those in older buildings--require vacuuming and warm-water washing monthly. Shake off excess water, dry and replace filter.

An alternative to that is the disposable filter--available in various sizes, usually easy to change, and inexpensive.

New homes--or recently remodeled homes--may need more frequent filter changes or cleanings, during the first cooling season, because of extra dust in the system.

For cleaning room grills, use a soft cloth, mild soap and warm water--not waxes or cleaners.

If the system seems sluggish after cleaning, call a service man certified by the manufacturer of the air conditioner--or an electrician.

Since cleaning filters and grills is relatively simple, someone in the family should be responsible for giving them a frequent check.

Remember, you save energy and money by turning down your heat or turning up your air conditioning thermostats at night.

College Has Dante In 29 Languages

SOUTH HADLEY, Mass. (AP)-Most students read Dante's "Divine Comedy" in English or Italian, but Mount Holyoke College can supply the classic in 29 translations.

Gaelic, Chinese, Turkish, Dutch as well as the international Esperanto language are represented in some 200 illustrated editions and translations collected by Valentine Giamatti, retired Mount Holyoke professor of Italian.

The Divine Comedy collection, believed to be the most complete in the United States, includes a 1481 edition illustrated by Botticelli, an illustrated and autographed six-volume edition by surrealist Salvador Dali and a 1920s, ornate, tooled leather version that covers nearly the entire top of a card table. Giamatti donated the valuable collection to Mount Holyoke in 1974. His son, A. Bartlett Giamatti, president-elect of Yale University, serves as honorary curator.

MARRIED 50 YEARS-Mr. and Mrs. Jess Waller will be honored with a reception Saturday, April 15 from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Snyder Country Club. The couple will be married 50 years April 18. Their sons, Rod and J. Edward Waller, their wives and grandchildren will be hostesses for the event. The Wallers met and married in Oklahoma. They moved to Snyder in 1950. Waller is retired from National Supply Co. and Mrs. Waller is retired from the Snyder School System where she worked for 22 years. They are members of Colonial Hill Baptist Church.

Mrs. Hugh Lowry Gives Program To Art Guild

The Art Guild Study Club met April 4 at 7:30 p.m. at the Martha Ann Woman's Club with Mrs. Hugh Lowry as hostess and program leader.

Mrs. Lowry's program entitled "Don't Throw It Away," was highlighted with slides of the interior of her home of the artistic decorations using things most people would discard. Two special articles were a tin flour sifter decorated and made into a flower pot, and an old food grinder which she had made into a vase.

Mrs. Lowry served refreshment to 11 members. A business session concluded the meeting. Mrs. John DeShazo, president, presided over the meeting.

Japanese Add 84 To Treasures

TOKYO (AP)-The Japanese government has added 84 art and craft works to the list of national treasurers, bringing the total to 8,132.

Among the additions are a 9th century wooden Buddba, 17th century paintings by Ogata Korin and an early copy of the medieval novel "Tales of Saigyo in the Seikado Temple in Tokyo."

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Oswald: "Here is an interesting hand that shows what might happen at various contracts."

Alan: "If North is allowed to play for four hearts, East can beat him in two ways. The simple one is to lead a spade and then shift to a diamond. The complicated one is to lead the jack or ten of trumps and eventually collect two hearts and two spades."

Oswald: "Four spades is beaten if the defenders take a club, ruff a club, cash a diamond and wait for their fourth trick."

Alan: "The best defense against five diamonds is a spade opening and a club shift. South can still make the hand, but great care is required."

Oswald: "At the table, West opened his singleton trump. South promptly drew three rounds of trumps and led a heart to dummy's queen. East let the queen hold and South wound up going three down. It was a good defensive play by East, but South should have led hearts before playing a second trump and made the contract irrespective of what East did.

Ask the Experts

A California reader says that the bidding started with pass-pass-pass-pass-one club and an eventual contract of one notrump was reached. Play started and then someone discovered that there had been four passes. What is the rule?

The hand was passed out so the hand is scored as such.

Nepal Has More Festivals Than Days

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP)-Nepal has more festival days than days of the year.

The major festival, Bada Dasain, takes 15 days to celebrate. Others include Gai Jatra, an eight-day Cow Festival; Indra Jatra, also eight days long, featuring three parades with the living Goddess in Katmandu; Tihar, when all homes are illuminated; and Teej, a special festival for women.

The celebration days are different each year, according to the lunar calendar.

For a delicious and nutritious sandwich filling, cook a half pound of chicken livers in a little butter and mash with two hard-cooked eggs plus a little mayonnaise and salt and pepper.

FRIED TROUT — Crispy trout is rich in protein but low in price.

Trout Is Still A Main-Course Bargain

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Since trout, like catfish, is farmed, it is often less expensive than most seafood and ocean fish. And if you're not a fisherman, you can now buy pan-dressed trout, with or without bones, at your supermarket.

Serve this crispy fried trout with your favorite hash brown or stuffed potatoes and a green salad.

CRISPY FRIED TROUT

- 4 whole dressed, fresh or frozen Idaho Rainbow trout
- ½ cup flour
- 1 egg
- 1 tablespoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ¼ teaspoon paprika
- 3 tablespoons sesame seeds
- 4 tablespoons cooking oil
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- ½ cup sour cream
- 1 tablespoon chopped green onion

Chop egg white and yolks separately. Arrange a layer of chopped egg white, then a layer of yolk in a small glass serving dish. Drain caviar and layer over egg yolk. Spoon sour cream over caviar and carefully spread to cover. Sprinkle top with green onion. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate until serving time.

To serve: Spoon through all layers and enjoy with fried trout. Makes about 1 cup.

DILL SAUCE

- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- ¾ teaspoon dill weed
- ⅛ teaspoon tarragon
- ¾ teaspoon dry mustard
- 1- tablespoon grated onion
- 1½ teaspoons prepared horseradish
- Dash hot pepper sauce
- ¼ teaspoon salt

Combine all ingredients; beat to mix. Chill. Serve with fried trout. Makes about 1 cup.

Easy and delicious dessert: crush nut brittle and fold it into softened ice cream; refreeze. Serve with chocolate sauce.

Fried Skunk, Anyone?

By Gaynor Maddox

The great outdoors provides some unusual eating.

How would you enjoy a dish of stuffed raccoon with apple? Or french fried skunk? Both are delicious, according to Berndt Berglund, a well-known wilderness expert. He also recommends smothered porcupine with onions and muskrat meat loaf.

These dishes may sound strange to you. But they are vouched for by Berndt Berglund and his wife, Clare E. Bolsby, in their book, "Wilderness Cooking" (Scribners, paperback $3.95).

A few weeks ago we reviewed "Edible Wild Plants" (Scribners, $9.95) by the same authors. The response was so enthusiastic that we are continuing our review of it today.

Among the recipes included in the couple's latest book are pokeweed and fish soup, bearberry and wild apple butter and dry acorn rusks for bush travel.

Several years ago, Berglund and his wife said goodby to modern city living and created a wilderness homestead. Berglund, who grew up in Sweden as the son of a forester, was right at home.

Let's start off with a glass of blackberry wine, ready to drink after standing for three months.

Rock tripe is the best known of all wild foods in the far North. Although it may be tasteless, rock tripe is very nourishing.

Because rock tripe is naturally rather gritty, it must be washed several times before cooking. After it has been cooked, it tastes a little like tapioca with a slight tinge of licorice. Try rabbit hash with rock tripe.

Few preparations are better than good old sassafras tea for relieving the misery of the common cold. The Berglunds suggest that you hunt for sassafras roots early in the spring. After washing the roots, scrape off the bark and let it dry in the sun.

When dry, crush and store in a tight container.

For a soothing cup of sassafras tea, just pour some of the crushed bark into a teapot, pour boiling water over, and steep for five or 10 minutes.

The Berglunds express much gratitude to the frontier women, who spent long hours cooking under primitive conditions, for their foresight in recording their recipes.

"When you are collecting edible wild plants, you should take into consideration that most people regard these plants as weeds," Berglund warns. "If gathering near farms, along roadsides, or even in some gardens, you have to be sure that the plants have not been sprayed with weed killer."

Hence, he advises foraging for specimens in undisturbed areas where it is less likely they have come in contact with dangerous chemicals.

"Edible Wild Plants" is an exciting book to read — even if you don't prepare any of the recipes. It breathes of the great outdoors.

How much is too much?

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is 1,000 mg of vitamin C too much? Or would you say harmful? Different sources say different things about it. I would appreciate your point of view. Our doctor says 1,000 mg twice a day.

DEAR READER — The Recommended Daily Dietary Allowance (by the National Academy of Science—National Research Council, 1974) for vitamin C is only 45 mg for healthy adults, 60 during pregnancy and 80 for nursing mothers. If you are healthy that should meet all your requirements.

Other studies show that the highest blood level you can obtain with vitamin C is obtained with 100 mg a day and any excess will not increase the blood level further.

Vitamin C is a water-soluble vitamin and excess amounts are eliminated in the urine. In other instances large doses irritate the intestine and cause diarrhea.

Individuals prone to kidney stones should not take large doses of vitamin C. It can raise the uric acid level contributing to uric acid stones. Excess amounts break down into oxalate and help to form calcium oxalate stones. The oxalate is more important than the calcium in your diet in causing these stones.

A mother on a high vitamin C intake will deliver a baby that has an increased capacity to destroy vitamin C. If the baby then gets only a normal amount of vitamin C it may develop rebound scurvy, the disease normally associated with vitamin C deficiency.

There is some evidence that excess vitamin C destroys vitamin B-12 which may contribute to B-12 deficiency. It can also affect the urine tests some diabetics use to evaluate their need for insulin.

While I agree that you can take several times the RDA value of 45 mg without harm, persistent comsumption of large doses should be only for some specific medical indication, and other than a pre-existing vitamin C deficiency such medical indications are few and far between.

To give you more information about vitamin C I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-3, Vitamin C, Ascorbic Acid. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I had to have surgery and had all my thyroid gland removed. I have to take two tablets of thyroid night and morning. My two teenage grandsons accuse me of "popping pills." I've thought of discontinuing this medication because of what it might do to them.

What I want to know is what effect it would have on me if I did stop taking the thyroid pills.

DEAR READER — Your two teenage grandsons need a trip to the wood shed, particularly if their thoughtless remarks cause you to injure your health.

Those thyroid pills replace what your normal thyroid gland does for your body. If you stop them entirely and have no thyroid you will become slow, dull, cold, probably overweight, develop coarse hair and hoarseness and have personality changes. I'm sure the boys do not realize the effects their remarks are having and probably only want to joke with you, but if you stop taking pills because of it, then it is no longer a laughing matter.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Could you give me some information on the nutritional content of buffalo meat? How close is it to being like beef? My husband has gout and was taken off red meat. He claims that buffalo meat is different than beef. I need to know.

DEAR READER — There is no great difference except that buffalo meat is usually less fat — that depends on the feeding of the animal and the cut used for cooking. They are close enough that some people are trying to produce enough animals of a cross between the cow and the buffalo to yield more good and cheaper meat for commercial use. The product is called beefalo.

And I am a bit curious about the directions to eliminate red meat anyhow. It sometimes helps to limit red meat if a person wants to restrict saturated fat to help avoid the complications of fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries that cause heart attacks and strokes. This is a common complication of gout. But the diet changes needed for that purpose are a bit more extensive than that. A low-fat, low-saturated fat, low-cholesterol diet is usually recommended for that along with a weight control program.

Otherwise to lower the uric acid level, which is high in gout, the usual approach is to use medicines. The old-fashioned gout diets are of minimal effectiveness since the excess uric acid is produced by the patient's own cells and not obtained from the food he eats. I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-3, Gout, Uric Acid, to give you a more complete understanding of gout and uric acid. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. After you have read it you may want to talk to your doctor again to find out exactly what he really wants to accomplish for your husband with a diet.

Incidently don't let him go on a severe reducing diet. Rapid weight loss can often cause an acute attack of gout.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently I had a physical examination and was told my hematocrit was a little low. It was 35 and it should have been 40. They gave me some vague explanation which I didn't understand.

The lab technician said in her opinion it was not too low. I would like to know what this means. I'm 63 years old.

DEAR READER — It's really pretty simple. Your blood is a fluid — called plasma — and blood cells are suspended in it. The hematocrit is just an expression of what percentage of the volume of your blood is blood cells and how much is plasma. In your case 35 percent of your blood is made up of cells and the rest is plasma fluid.

The percent of blood cells varies easily because fluid moves into and out of your blood vessels easily. The movement of fluid is associated with swelling of tissues — including swelling of the feet and ankles. The technique including how tight the arm band is and how long it is left in place before drawing the blood sample affects the value.

Your value is a little low. The range for women is often given as between 37 and 47 percent and for men 40 to 54. Such border line results should be retested since there is so much variation in laboratory technique.

Snake Bite No Joke

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)-A mailman who was bitten by a rattlesnake coiled in a U.S. mailbox in Apache Junction says the apparent April's Fool day prank was no joke.

"It's a dumb stunt for anyone to pull," Robert Little of Globe said Wednesday. Little was bitten on the hand Saturday and spent two days in a Phoenix hospital for observation.

"He was in there when I reached in to get the mail," Little said. "He bit me and I jerked my hand back and he was still hung up by one fang."

Little said he "stomped" the snake to death, placed it in his mail truck and drove to Phoenix, where postal officials took him to the hospital.

Stenholm's Wife To Visit Gail

Cincy Stenholm, wife of Democratic candidate for the 17th Congressional District Charles Stenholm, will lead a group of approximately 40 volunteers visiting in Gail Monday, April 10.

The visit was arranged by Mrs. Pat Murphy of Ira, Stenholm's Borden County Campaign Coordinator.

The group of Stenholm volunteers will be in Gail to meet the citizens, answer questions concerning Stenholm and distribute campaign literature. The general public is invited to visit with the volunters.

A farmer and a Stamford native, Stenholm's campaign platform is based upon five major issues and concerns facing the American citizen today: inflation, energy, agriculture, senior citizens and government regulations.

Speaking on these issues, Stenholm stated, "We must eliminate waste and balance the budget. We must deregulate oil and gas and increase domestic production. Farmers must have more stable markets and a fair return on their investments, or every citizen suffers. We must make the social security system secure and keep down hospital costs. We must eliminate government intervention in our daily lives."

Stenholm graduated from Tarleton State Junior College and received a M.S. in agricultural education from Texas Tech University. He has worked as a farmer, a teacher and a businessman. Active in church, civic and political affairs, much of his involvement has included local, state and national issues.

Gas Pumps Checked Here

AUSTIN--The Texas Department of Agriculture can't do anything about the cost of gasoline in Snyder, but it is doing all it can to make sure that drivers are getting the gas they pay for, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown said today.

Recent inspections performed in Snyder showed that out of 209 pumps checked, 184 were sealed as correct by Department field men. Eight were condemned for giving more gasoline than was registering on the meter; four were condemned for giving less. Thirteen were closed down until minor malfunctions were repaired.

Texas Department of Agriculture (TDA) inspectors checked pumps in 74 cities across the state. The survey included 24,385 devices, of which 1,566 were condemned for repairs. Some 730 were delivering a short measure and 548 were dispensing too much gas, he said. Others were rejected for other causes such as broken glass in the display panel, leaking hoses, faulty price computers, or other malfunctions.

TDA is mandated by law to inspect each gasoline pump in the state, plus all other wholesale and retail scales and measuring devices, but motorists must also be observant when buying gasoline, Brown advised.

"Anyone suspecting that a pump is not accurate should call the Department. Weights and Measures inspectors will check the pump at once," Brown said.

"We find some instances of deliberate fraud," Brown stated, "but most violations are the result of careless maintenance. Essentially, our inspection program is not a police action to ferret out criminals, but a service to see that all commercial transactions are carried on an equal basis."

Bible Sells For $2 Million

NEW YORK (AP)-One of the world's rarest books - a 15th century Gutenberg Bible-was sold at auction Friday for $2 million.

The two-volume, leather-bound work - one of the few remaining books printed more than 500 years ago with the world's first movable metal type - was purchased by Martin Breslauer, a New York City bookseller.

Breslauer said he planned to resell the Bible, but added any information about possible clients was "very, very secret, confidential."

Bidding started at $500,000 and progressed rapidly at $100,000 intervals.

"I feel it was a very reasonable purchase," Breslauer said as he pushed his way through a crush of well-wishers and reporters at Christie's Auction House.

Christie's officials said the $2 million was believed to be the highest price ever for a book sold at auction.

The Bible was owned by the Episcopal Church's General Theological Seminary here, which intends to use proceeds from the sale to establish an endowment for its library.

Refiners Oppose Plan On Gas 'Switch' Problem

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP)-Oil refiners frown on the Environmental Protection Agency's proposed solution for its "switching" problem.

The problem involves motorists with cars requiring unleaded gasoline switching to leaded regular gasoline, a less expensive fuel that renders pollution control catalytic converters ineffective.

The EPA has suggested new controls on the retail price differential between leaded and unleaded.

Members of the National Petroleum Refiners Association expressed their objections before the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee through testimony by Urvan R. Sternfels, an attorney for the trade group.

The association represents practically all the domestic refining industry and most of the petrochemical industry.

Sternfels said refiners believe the engine knock problem is at least as much if not a greater incentive for switching than price.

"There are not any reliable statistics on the motivation for switching, just as there are not on the incidence of switching itself," he said.

"It can be persuasively argued that a new car purchaser who has just invested $4,000 to $10,000 has at least as much incentive to 'switch' when he experiences knock each time he accelerates or places a load on his engine as he does when he faces a 3 to 4-cent price differential at most retail gasoline stations."

Sternfels said EPA's success in establishing the requirement for growing quantities of unleaded gasoline each year has necessitated huge capital investments by the refining industry to meet anticipated demand. This, he said, has resulted in greater consumption of crude oil and other energy to produce unleaded fuel.

"EPA is now faced with the difficult problem of justifying its program with the consumer," he said.

"Rather than advertise the reason for the unleaded gasoline program--pollution control--the agency has chosen to ask another agency, and it is here asking Congress, for assistance in the form of continued governmental control on the price of gasoline."

He added that the public should decide if the benefits of clean air outweigh the costs of unleaded gasoline.

"These costs are substantial, not only are they substantial in dollars and cents, but in increased energy consumption as well," he said.

"Specifically, this means that 500,000 to 1,000,000 barrels of additional crude oil be required every day in the 1980s because of the requirement for unleaded gasoline."

He added that such crude oil consumption is contrary to the Carter administration's announced objective to conserve oil.

"Much has been made of the improvement in fuel economy of the recent model cars," he said.

"The EPA uses this information to show that the stringent emissions standards have not adversely affected fuel economy. It must be remembered that much, if not most, of this improvement is due to reductions in vehicle weight and engine size and other changes such as in transmissions, rear axle ratios, etc."

Sternfels said the refining industry, unhappily, is not in a position to provide a switching solution that would be satisfactory to all interested parties.

He said refiners are required to provide unleaded gasoline with a minimum 91 research octane in increasing quantities and that automobile manufacturers are required to meet increasingly higher fuel economy goals.

"A result of the economy criteria has been a significant change in spark timing and some increase in engine compression ratios to achieve greater efficiency," he said.

"These changes have resulted in higher octane requirements."

Environmental problems, he said, have virtually brought large new and improved refining plans to a standstill.

"Refiners are presently in a position where they cannot resolve the growing dissatisfaction of motorists by increasing all or most unleaded gasoline octane, and therefore cannot remove this incentive for fuel switching," he said.

Brezhnev May Have Pacemaker

WASHINGTON (AP)-Administration officials say they believe Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev has received an electronic heart pacemaker.

Brezhnev, 70, dropped out of public view last Dec. 12 and was not seen until mid-January. At the time, it was speculated that he had influenza although the official report said only that he was hospitalized with an undisclosed ailment.

U.S. officials say they believe it was during this period that the pacemaker was implanted. The device, placed just under the skin, regulates the pulse by electronic methods.

Comics Take Place In Library

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)-Comics such as The Hulk and Tom & Jerry have taken their place alongside Tom Sawyer and other literary works at a public library here.

"I want some readers. This is another attempt to snag a couple more readers," says children's librarian Mary Ann Maginnity.

Mrs. Maginnity spends about $40 on a bundle of comics every two months.

"Once the kids see we have the comics, they will come back. Then, maybe we can suggest something else that might catch their fancy. If they never came in, we'd never have that chance," she said.

looking ahead to '80

Speculation involving probable candidates in the next Presidential election begins as soon as the outcome of an election is announced. In the absence of dramatic developments the speculative phase continues through elections midway through the first four years of a new administration.

But that is not the way things are this time. No fewer than eight highly visible campaigns are in progress for the Republican Presidential nomination in 1980. And the mid-term election is still seven months in the future. Explanation for this situation is obvious. To begin with the present occupant of the White House hasn't fired the imagination of the general public.

Where the main fault may be is open to question. Team work between executive and legislative branches of national government has been conspicuous for its absence. The Administration legislative program is in shambles. Discovery that the President's choice for the role of crown adviser was a wheeler-dealer of questionable integrity and had to resign. The revelation set off repercussions that haven't yet run their full course.

No single minus item accounts for low public opinion ratings of the Carter Administration. But as a whole they provide Republican hopefuls with convincing evidence that James Earl Carter Jr. is a prime prospect for the distinction of being a one-term President.

When to that situation is added the willingness of moneymen around the country to bank roll Presidential campaigns, camouflaged as educational or cultural organizations in order to comply with provisions of what passes for pure elections law, the multiplicity of early bird candidates is easily understood.

At the moment there are at least eight active aspirants for the distinction of heading the Republican national ticket in 1980, according to conclusions of experienced observers of the U.S. political scene. The list includes:

Former California Governor Ronald Reagan, who came within inches of displacing an incumbent President in 1976.

Former Texas Governor-Secretary of Navy-Secretary of Treasury-ex-Democrat John Connally.

Former President Gerald Ford.

Senator Robert Dole of Kansas, nominee for Vice President in 1976.

Senators Howard Baker of Tennessee and Lowell Weicker of Connecticutt.

Governor James R. Thompson of Illinois, and Texan George Bush, former Congressman and former ambassador to United Nations.

What better proof could be offered that knowledgeable people, some with access to well-filled exchequers, are convinced the Republican nomination for President in 1980 is worth seeking?

Recent news about the Volkswagen was that West Germany is discontinuing production of the long-familiar Beetle.

Latest news is that Beetles - new models - are continuing to be sold, in West Germany and elsewhere.

An item in the Christian Science Monitor informs that Beetles produced in a Mexican plant, one of the many Volkswagen has scattered around the globe, are being exported for sale in the West German home market.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Stand up and be counted...and someone will grab your seat..."

It's less than 30 days until the primary election. Frankly, we'll be glad when the period is over. Hardly a day passes that we don't have a political hopeful in our office seeking support or publicity.

We like contact with the candidates, because it helps us make up our mind on how to vote. What seems to be lacking so far is a real dialogue on the issues at hand.

With the exception of two races, we have no firm opinion, because we've heard no discussion of issues that would help us form an opinion.

It's extremely hard for us to tell the players from each other. In most cases they all are saying the same thing--nothing.

Therefore in the next 30 or so days we are hopeful that the candidates will put their views on the line. We welcome the opportunity to hear something that will help us be a better informed voter on election day.

In hopes to bring some key issues before local voters, we have mailed a two-page questionnaire to all candidates for the Democratic nomination for the 17th congressional district.

We hope to run these replies in such a format that will help our readers make a choice in this difficult and important race. Watch for it in the next few weeks.

Here's something from the "can't win department:"

The Cincinnati Federation of Teachers warns its members not to use force to break up student fights. The suggestion comes after a teacher was reprimanded for using a paddle to end a scuffle.

A year earlier, however, another teacher was reprimanded for not acting quickly enough to stop a similar student clash.

The latest word on Watergate is reported that ex-President Nixon is about to tell his tale for $20 a copy. The suggestion that anyone should fork over $20 to buy the truth from Nixon is incredible.

We couldn't buy the truth from him when we were paying him $200,000 a year plus fringe benefits.

more nit-picking

His Imperial Majesty, Uncle Sam, with all his power and might, has swooped down on the community of Oak Ridge, Tenn., and decreed that "the girls' basketball team there must play full court rules, the same as the boys' team."

Uncle Sam has, himself, been prompt and persistent in criticizing the dictatorships of the world when they transgress on "human rights."

Meanwhile, here at home, in the name of "equality for everybody," the power of the central government arbitrarily moves in on and dictates the rules for a basketball game. And that's not all:

His Imperial Majesty, Uncle Sam, has sent two special agents from the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms to the Washington, D.C., Museum of the National Rifle Assn. to seize and remove three rifles and two pistols from their display cases.

All of the guns were deactivated and inoperable. They have reposed on public display in this museum for as long as 21 years. All are of historical significance.

If you and I are less than fascinated by guns and with weapons research, some people are.

But the government agents say they violate provisions of the National Firearms Act and so are subject to forefeiture and, presumably, destruction.

Always heretofore deactivated and inoperable firearms have been exempt from registration and taxation, but these government agents say that the Gun Control Act of 1968 changed that.

There is no known connection between this confiscation and the fact that the sponsors of this museum have been criticizing the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, alleging "unconstitutional procedures."

These are but two of many examples familiar to almost anybody revealing the degree to which government nit-pickers are stomping to death more and more of what we used to consider "freedoms."

You and I have considered previously the necessity for increasing government surveillance where individuals fail to discipline themselves.

Whenever we misuse freedom, inevitably we are going to forfeit it.

To whatever degree we step on the toes of others we invite government to tromp on our toes.

But on farms, in factories, in our classrooms and even in our bedrooms, there is an increasing involvement by His Imperial Majesty, Uncle Sam, in personal, individual choices that are none of his business.

All the while we are pontificating to the rest of the world about the "sanctity of human rights."

teaching entrepreneurs

NEW YORK (AP)-They're difficult to teach, those enterprising people who create and manage businesses, assuming worries and often great risks in exchange for self-expression and profit.

They don't read very much, said William McCrea, himself an entrepreneur. They don't write much either. They're impatient. They demand hard facts, and they're wary of those who provide them.

Bill McCrea teaches entrepreneurs, and he teaches others how to teach them too, which is a lot more than most business schools have been able to accomplish. In fact, many colleges don't even make the attempt.

While still a student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, McCrea helped found Tech Films Corp.

The young men understood their technology, but little else. To survive, they sought management information. They didn't find it in schools; they got it from other businessmen. A matter of credibility.

Tech Films was a success, although it long since has become part of other companies, a common fate of successful high technology companies run by people perhaps more eager to innovate than to manage.

Born on an Ohio farm, he returned to that state and headed The Ohio Entrepreneurship Office, designed by businessmen and funded by the state. It taught Ohio colleges how to teach aspiring business people.

McCrea now spends 70 percent of his time running The Entrepreneurship Institute, the other 30 percent as head of Phoenix International Corp., which helps small American companies build businesses abroad.

The institute, which McCrea founded in Columbus two years ago as a nonprofit corporation, now has corporate and individual members throughout the United States and in 20 other countries.

Based in Columbus, its whole focus is in identifying business development resources in communities throughout the world.

"In large measure," he said this week, "we've instituted a modern version of the ancient guild system, whereby established business people share their knowledge and experience."

Here to develop a June 10-11 seminar for the Northeast, McCrea was going through his usual routine, setting up a committee of educators, bankers, investors, entrepreneurs, attorneys, accountants, inventors.

No idle dreamers are wanted. The two-day course, which cost $295 here but less in other cities, deals with reality, and attendees are made to develop planning programs for their businesses.

And survival skills. McCrea observes that entrepreneurs sometimes ask desperate questions, such as "How do you meet the Friday payroll when there's nothing in the till on Thursday afternoon?"

future of cities

Cleveland is a Northern industrial city of declining and heavily black population, suffering from hardening of the economic arteries, its prospects for growth and revitalization limited by a surrounding belt of largely white and determinedly autonomous suburbs.

San Antonio is a boom city of the Sunbelt with a colorful Spanish heritage and a large Hispanic population, a rapidly expanding center of medical research and treatment and a prime location for growth industries based on space-age technology.

Cleveland and San Antonio have something in common-urban problems. Not, however, the same problems.

And not surprisingly. In a country of the continental size and diversity of the United States, no two cities are exactly alike, have precisely the same problems.

So it is highly improbable that a national urban policy could be formulated that would meet equally all the needs of all the cities (160 of more than 100,000 population, according to the Census Bureau's last count). It is a virtue of President Carter's urban program that it makes no pretense of doing so.

Instead, it proposes more effective utilization of the existing channels for aid to the cities and "targeting" of specific problems and problem areas, concentrating effort and resources where most needed immediately to halt deterioration of the urban economy and environment.

This is short term, however, essentially urban first aid. The real hope for the cities is in the long term and of a national rather than specifically urban scope. It may depend to a considerable extent on restudying the role of the cities in our rapidly changing society and redefining their structure to best serve their own needs and that of the society as a whole.

The "city" today is not the more or less precisely delineated geographical and political entity of not so many decades back. Communications, commercial expansion, population mobility have made the city line an increasingly irrelevant technicality-except in some aspects, usually of a fiscal impact, which more often than not now work to a city's disadvantage.

Most of today's cities are centers of metropolitan areas, but without having politically adjusted to the changed status.

There are some notable exceptions.

Today's Toronto was created in 1953 with the federation of 13 municipalities. Common major problems - most notably property assessment and taxation - are dealt with on a metropolitan basis, local matters are handled locally. Greater Toronto has been a leading boom city of the North American continent for the past several decades.

Minnesota offers a less spectacular but no less encouraging example. Minneapolis and St. Paul created the Twin Cities Metropolitan Area in 1967, coordinating 300 municipalities and providing area-wide services beyond the effective management of the localities.

No two cities, to repeat, are exactly alike and comparisons are risky. There is, nevertheless, a striking contrast between these two cities and a Cleveland - or New York, fragmented among three states and a multiplicity of lesser jurisdictions.

If it is in regionalism that the future of the city lies, national urban policies will be most effective in recognizing it and shaping its development. But as Toronto and the Twin Cities demonstrate, there is a great deal the cities can accomplish on their own in furthering the urban evolution.

it's possible

You can succeed in becoming strong self-assured, secure, confident, and relaxed! Here's how: Help others build self-love within themselves.

To really achieve a deep and abiding self-love, start thinking about the people around you who need strong supports built under their faltering or battered self-esteem. You'll find that there are many people who are depressed and discouraged, who have not yet learned, as you have, how to build a strong self-love. They have not learned the basic lessons of how to handle competition — how to deal with their dreams — how to cope with their imperfections.

Help them find the way. Share your success with them. And what a surprising reward will be yours! You'll receive an even more intense awareness that you really are a beautiful person — for sure. You will have practiced and proved the principle: If any person would save his life, he must lose it. And if any person will lose his life, he will find it.

When you go to the dispensers of the emotional potential forces of life, the selections are limited. I talked recently with Dr. Hall, who is involved in the Stone-Brandel Center in Chicago, Ill. He was telling me about an experiment they did at the center about three years ago.

First, they recruited a large number of persons. Then they asked every person to keep a diary of their daily life — to record everything that came as an input into their mind or into their lives. He believed that we are the product of what comes into our life, our minds, our hearts and our emotional experiences. Dr. Hall wanted to find out what percentage of input into a human brain in the course of a day was positive and what percentage was negative.

Everyone was told to record everything that came into their brain in the course of a day for a year and a half. Their diary began with the opening of the day. If they turned on the television set, they had to write down exactly what they watched — whether it was a newscast or a talk show, they had to log it into their diary. Was the input positive or negative? If they worked, every encounter had to be recorded, whether positive or negative. If they listened to a radio station, read a certain newspaper or book, visited with family or friends, participated in any kind of entertainment or went to church — everything had to be documented.

And after a year and a half Dr. Hall said the data was collected, calculated and computerized under controlled research. They came up with this startling summary. They found out that most people experienced 90 percent negative input. Only 10 percent of the thoughts or concepts that came into their lives during the year and a half were positive! There were a few people who had unique relationships in marriage, in the office and at home. And they also had connections with outstanding positive thinking churches.

Dr. Hall's closing comment was, "You see, Dr. Schuller, we are fighting against tremendous odds. The average human being, who is trying to be positive, is fighting a losing battle unless he's tied into something unusual that constantly feeds him positive emotions."

What choices are you making? Are you tied into something or someone who can constantly feed your positive emotions? I have discovered that my relationship with God is the most powerful force in the universe. He feeds my imagination with dreams of what might be. He nourishes my emotions to think the best in every situation. He gives me courage and energy to keep on going when the road gets rough and tough.

God is the source of my drive and enthusiasm for life! You can enjoy the same kind of relationship with God by simply turning your life over to Him, spending time with other positive-thinking believers, and drawing on His resources to feed all the positive qualities He has built into you!

Reverend Schuller, pastor of the Garden Grove, Calif., Community Church, can be seen weekly on his nationally syndicated TV program, "Hour of Power."

A Box Full of Birmingham

The Mini Page asked fourth graders at Fultondale Elementary School to make up a Birmingham Box. In this box they would put several things that would tell people about their city. Below are their ideas.

Airplane— The city's airport has been in the news because many citizens think it needs more flights to more places.

Animals— The city's zoo is the largest in the Southeast.

Stars— School children and visitors often visit the city's Planetarium where they learn about the night sky.

Football— Birmingham is called the "Football Capital of the South." Many high school college teams play there.

Flags— Some parts of the city hang up rows of flags on holidays.

Hockey — The city has a pro hockey team, the Bulls.

Red Mountain Ore— A road through Red Mountain exposes iron ore that made the city grow. Iron and steel are big businesses in the city.

Vulcan— Vulcan is the world's largest cast iron statue. It overlooks the top of Red Mountain. He is a symbol of the iron and steel business.

Austria . . . The Fairy Land of the World

©UPS

Austria is a tiny country. It has a lot of beautiful mountains, fields, streams, rivers and lakes.

It has fairy-tale castles, small villages and pretty cities.

Some people call it the fairy land of the world.

The city of Vienna is the capital. It has been called the music capital of the world because so many composers have worked there.

There are many small factories especially around Vienna.

Vienna is also the home of the famous Lipizzan horses.

The Danube is a river that flows through Austria.

There are many churches in Austria. Most of the people (90 percent) are Catholic.

See the beautiful castle.

Many tourists visit Austria.

Austrians often wear their native costumes on holidays and other special occasions.

The Mini Page would like to thank the Jefferson County Schools, Birmingham, Alabama, and the Birmingham News for their cooperation in preparing this issue.

The Paper Box

Newspapers use datelines when stories come from out of town cities or foreign countries. Datelines are usually in capital letters at the beginning of a story.
Look through your paper. Circle as many datelines as you can find. Find Austria on a map. Find Birmingham, Alabama, too.

Next Week: The Mini Page visits Terraset, a solar-heated school in Reston, Virginia. It's underground, kids! Our story is written by kids who go there.

A Festival in Alabama

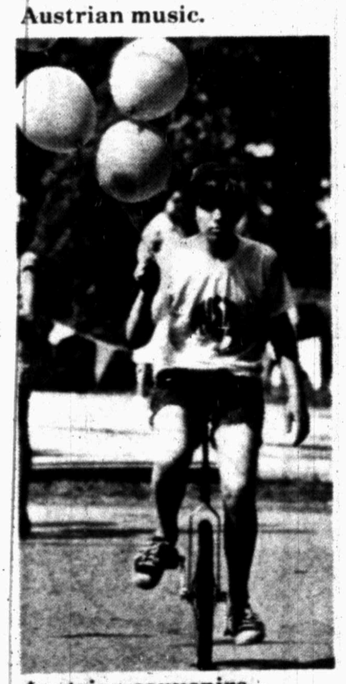

Birmingham, Austria, U.S.A.

Austrian cooking— The kids cooked recipes and brought them to school.

Austrian music— Many musicians learned to play Austrian music.

Austrian souvenirs— Some people bought balloons, hats and T-shirts as souvenirs of the Festival.

Birmingham is the largest city in Alabama.

The Festival of Arts is a celebration Birmingham puts on each spring.

It is the oldest festival of its kind in the world.

Each year the city honors a different foreign country.

They have been doing this for 27 years in a row.

In 1977, the country was Austria.

There were art shows, ballets, concerts and plays by and about Austrians.

There was a fair where countries from all over the world sold things.

Some of the downtown street signs came down. Austrian street signs went up.

The festival lasts for 10 days. The school children study all about the country for several weeks.

Right now the children are studying all about another country in Europe.

Belgium comes to Birmingham this spring.

Dear Abby

Short Is Beautiful

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Since that song "Short People" came out, short people have suffered a big put-down. I'm sending you a letter you had in your column about 20 years ago. I kept it because I happen to be one of the short people. Please run it again. It might help to improve our image. Thanks.

SHORTY B. HICKS
SHORTSVILLE, N.Y.

DEAR SHORTY: I agree. Short people need an occasional buildup, so here's your letter:

"DEAR ABBY:

In answer to TOO TALL, women in the know go for small men. That's why they go wild over Latin Americans and fight over jockeys. The big, tall men fall apart earlier. They get potbellies and double chins and succumb to heart attacks in their mid-40s, while the little wiry men are still going strong.

The next time you go to a dance, notice that the best dancers on the floor are the small men.

Half the women married to tall, dark and handsome men would love to trade them for the little runt they wouldn't go out with before they got married.

VOICE OF EXPERIENCE"

DEAR ABBY: I am a schoolteacher who has been reading your column for years. Often your thoughts are taken to school with me and discussed with my high school students. However, your endorsement of Edith Head's asinine statement, "All women look alike in the bathtub," really hit bottom! Anyone who actually believes that quote must have lived in a segregated, monastic convent all their lives.

Please retract that gross masterpiece of misinformation!

THE EYEBALL FROM ALTADENA

DEAR EYEBALL: How's this? "All women look alike in the bathtub—if they are up to their necks in hot water"—which is where I was after that endorsement!

DEAR ABBY: About 150 senior citizens live here in a lovely place and we enjoy it. However, recently a problem has arisen. A little old lady has joined us, and no matter what is said, she says, "Oh, my God!"

She says it to express surprise, disappointment, joy and disapproval. Her constant "Oh, my Gods" are getting us down.

We don't want to hurt her feelings, but we would like to put a stop to her using that expression all the time.

We are anxiously awaiting your reply.

ANOTHER L.O.L.

DEAR L.O.L.: Tell her in a friendly way that her constant references to "God" are irreverent—unless she's praying. Then pray that she takes it in the proper spirit and overcomes the habit.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WHOMEVER THE SHOE FITS": I doubt the sincerity of a man who constantly refers to his "deep humility," for the moment he mentions it, he negates it. If a man has something to be proud of, let him be justly proud and accept his accolades with pride. "Humility" in the face of ability is hypocrisy.

Sets Benefit Concert Here...

Young Allen Regarded As Fast-Rising Artist

Residents in the Snyder area will have an opportunity to see one of America's fastest rising recording artists when Rex Allen, Jr. stages a special benefit concert for the West Texas Rehabilitation Center Friday, April 14, in Scurry County coliseum.

Billboard Magazine says, "Rex defines a song with feeling and depth many veterans lack." Those who've seen his stage show say he is one of the best entertainers they've seen in years. In the realm of contemporary music it is not enough to be just a singer, one must be an entertainer--and Rex Allen, Jr., is an entertainer. And why shouldn't he be? After all, he comes from excellent stock.

His father, Rex, Sr., is regarded as one of the premier singers of our time, and an entertainer's entertainer, with a score of motion pictures, hit records, National TV commercials and the voice of many Walt Disney feature films to his credit.

Rex Allen, Jr., was surrounded by the show business experience from the age of six, at fairs, rodeos, and on the movie sets of Hollywood. One of the highlights of his career came at the Pike's Peak or Bust Rodeo in Colorado, where, with the Sons of the Pioneers, they set All-Time attendance records.

In the last three years Rex has had 11 National chart records with "Goodbye" and "Can You Hear Those Pioneers"--his best sellers to date. The talented young musical trendsetter currently has out "No, No, No,' a single that has all the earmarks of being another chart buster.

"The Country Travelers," comprised of Denny DeMarco, Bill McCullough, and Joe Holcomb, will back Rex. The Angie Sisters will also be featured.

REX ALLEN JR.

All performers in the April 14 benefit concert have appeared on the Rehab telecasts for the West Texas Rehabilitation Center, with Rex, Jr., having appeared on all eight shows.

Tickets for the show are priced at $3 for adults and $1 for children 12 and under. Tickets will be available at the door.

Tickets for the concert are now available in Snyder at Tape Town, Bar H Bar Western Wear, Western Texas College, West Texas Rehabilitation Center in Snyder, Scurry County Coliseum and any member of the Snyder Noon Kiwanis Club.

Manufacturers ship 57 percent of their products by truck, and in some states, including Massachusetts and Connecticut, this figure approaches 85 percent.
