Q. I read in the Big Spring paper last week that there were eleven Hispanics on the jury of the Garza trial. Why was this not reported in your stories?

Sixty-eight presently working

Construction on prison progressing smoothly as project ahead of schedule

Some sixty-eight people are presently working at the construction site of the 1000-bed prison just off Rogers Road.

"That figure will increase sharply in July," said Art Chiaverini, Project Superintendent with Bill Harbert Construction Company. "The number of workers will almost double."

Work is almost two weeks ahead of schedule and the estimated completion date is May 11, 1994.

"We would like to keep that two-week cushion if possible," added Chiaverini. "We've been blessed with almost perfect weather so far but you never know."

Chiaverini was also the project superintendent for the Preston Smith Unit in Lamesa and he said they measured 43 inches of rain during the course of that project.

The building site has excellent drainage as indicated by the fact they were able to pour concrete on the Monday following the seven-inch deluge on Saturday, May 22.

Workers are presently busy doing underground work on several of the buildings including the housing units, vocational building, medical, dining and laundry facility. Trinity Contractors of Arlington is the company doing the underground plumbing.

The perimeter fence is also in the process of being erected.

A new concept for Texas prisons will be used in constructing this unit and it entails using modular cell units to construct the four housing units or what is termed the "J-buildings" in the construction phase.

Modular cell-units are presently being constructed in San Antonio by H. B. ` and Associates and they will be trucked to the site with all the furnishings in place.

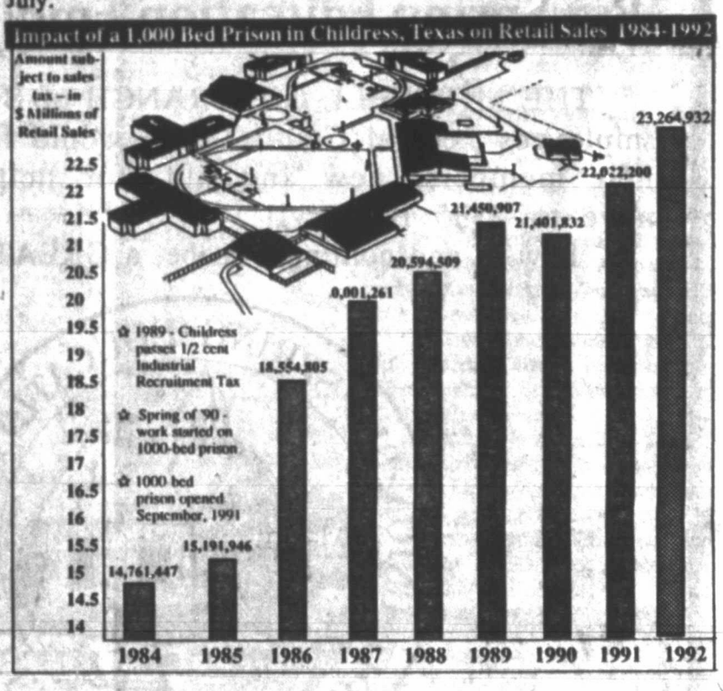

Inside each cell will be a stainless steel chase wall which will provide access to the plumbing and electrical connections. The sink/toilet will also be attached to this wall. The stainless steel fixtures are constructed using inmate labor as are all the other fixtures in the cell which includes two metal bunks, a desk, stool and small shelf. None of the items are movable as they are either welded or bolted down.

There will be 36 modules in each building with some consisting of four cells and others of only one depending upon their location in the building's wing.

Each J-building will be constructed in only five days so observers can expect to see a drastic change at the construction site during the month of July.

Hospital to start security wing

The Mitchell County Hospital Board voted unanimously Wednesday evening to contract with Green Harvey Associates to be the project manager for converting one wing of the hospital to a security wing for use by the Texas Department of Corrections.

The firm will also work with the hospital in meeting mandates dictated by the American Disability Act (ADA).

This agreement with the Lubbock firm does not address the problems the hospital faces in becoming certified by the Joint Commission on Accrediation of Health Care Organizations (JCAHO). The hospital began looking into this certification a little over a year ago when it was thought that the JCAHO certification might be required for the local hospital to work with the TDCJ.

Hospital Administrator Wendell Alford told the board that he felt the Commission would work with the hospital in getting the accreditation as long as they had a plan to make the required changes.

Larry Harvey, architect with Green Harvey, told the board that the Medical Arts Hospital in Lamesa is not presently certified and they have a five-year plan to do so. The Lamesa hospital added a wing in order to serve inmates from the Preston Smith unit. Harvey also served as the project manager for that addition.

Estimated construction cost is $100,000 for renovation of the security wing and for the ADA changes.

The firm's fee is estimated to be no more than $30,398. Their fee for the Lamesa unit was $32,996.

Alford told the board that hospital employees would be utilized whenever possible to lower the estimated costs of the renovation project.

In other matters, the board presented a plaque to out-going director Walter Smith, Jr., for his service on the board, voted to take bids for a new cell-counter for the lab and met in a short executive session to discuss personnel matters.

Money will be awarded through 15th place and additional prizes will be merchandise donated by area merchants.

A free meal will be served to all entrants on Friday, June 25 at the tournament headquarters in downtown Colorado City at Second St. and Elm (the old Truss King building).

Junell to speak to Civic Clubs

A joint meeting of all the Civic Clubs will be held this coming Wednesday, June 9 at noon in the Colorado City Civic Center.

State Representative Rob Junell will speak at the meeting. He will address the issues of the special session of the Legislature that recently concluded.

Loraine's season ends

The Loraine Bulldogs quest for a playoff berth in the Class A state finals fell short Friday night as they fell to Baird, 10-0.

Coach Bob Loy said three games ago that the Bears would be the team to beat and his team knew they had to get by them to get to Austin.

Loraine had dominated their playoff opponents early this year by scoring several runs in the early innings but Baird pulled the trick Friday.

"Those early runs by Baird deflated us," said Loy.

The Bulldogs had customarily been able to get runners on base and pretty well run the bases at will. But winning pitcher Calvin Joy only allowed four hits and three walks to shut down the Bulldogs offensive show.

Hitting for Loraine were David Mitchell, James Lopez, Jesse Rico and Craig Finley.

The winning pitcher for Baird was Joy whose record improved to 8-3 and Chris Phillips lost only his second game of the year against eight victories.

Baird scored three runs in the first and seventh innings while adding one in the second, one in the fifth and two in the sixth to sew up the win and their second straight appearance in Austin. The big hit in the seventh was a two-run triple by Charlie Smalley of Baird.

Loraine threatened in the fourth inning when the Bulldogs loaded the bases with no outs. No harm was done to the Bears however as Phillips bounced into a fielder's choice at the plate, Finley went down swinging and Bear catcher Brad Johnson picked off Corey Wooddell at third to end the inning.

Baird coach Tony Koch said his team would be prepared for the state tourney this year as opposed to 1992 as they were eliminated in the semi-finals in a no-hit game.

Loy agreed by saying "the Bears will be hard to handle in Austin."

THREE INJURED: Three people were injured and treated at the Mitchell County Hospital in this one-vehicle rollover that occurred around 7 p.m. Tuesday evening in the 1000 block of College Ave. Three Snyder residents were in the car and they include the driver Richard Leo Anderson, David Delce and Christopher Wells. The 1990 Toyota was west bound when the driver apparently lost control and struck a tree then rolled over. The incident is still under investigation by the Colorado City Police Department.

Farmers market is a good idea

If you're looking for the freshest fruits and vegetables in town, you may have to do some investigating, but the payoff will be worth it, Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry says.

"Farmers' markets provide consumers with fresh products-products that are grown for superior flavor rather than extended shelf life," Perry said. "Farmers' markets also provide the consumer with a unique chance to visit with the person who grew the food. You can find out what they think is the best way to prepare it, and they might even share a few growing tips with you."

Most farmers' markets are certified by the Texas Department of Agriculture and belong to the Texas Certified Farmers' Market Association. For this reason, lists of markets by area are readily available at local extension offices. Many farmers' markets are already open, with the normal season running from May through November.

Each market can set its own rules in terms of whether the food has to be grown locally or brought in from another area. However, the sign on locally grown produce will say "farmer." Or you can always just ask because farmers will be glad to brag about what they've grown.

Organic products must be certified by TDA to be labeled organic. Some farmers may grown produce organically without going through the TDA certification but the only way to be sure the product is organic is if it's certified.

Farmers' markets provide a major economic impact. There are about 80 markets in 93 sites across Texas. Farmers' markets produce about $9 million in sales in an average year but when fruit crops are bountiful that number can jump to $20 million.

TDA certification allows farmers to buy liability insurance at a reduced rate through the Texas Certified Farmers' Market Association. Also, certified farmers can sell through the WIC and food stamp program. Participants in those programs must get special farmers' market coupons and then can buy fresh produce. Many farmers will set up a stand outside WIC clinics to make the service readily available for the families. About $3 million in sales came through this program last year.

"Texas farmers grow great quality food and much more variety than many people think," Perry said. "Next time you're hungry for the taste of the season, start your shopping day at your local farmers' market."

4-H round-up this week

Mitchell County 4-H members will be among 2,500 outstanding youths from across the state competing in the Texas 4-H Round-up at Texas A&M University, June 7-10.

Round-Up, the largest 4-H event held each year, gives 4-H'ers the opportunity to gain educational experiences in their 4-H projects, demonstrate the skills they have learned and practice leadership at the state level. Outstanding 4-H'ers compete in 4-H contests that showcase their speaking abilities, decision-making skills and talents.

Mitchell County 4-H'ers attending this year will be the 4-H Dairy Judging Team of Justin Dockrey, Lori Dockrey, Lance Dockrey and Justin Goebel.

This judging team will be required to evaluate several classes of dairy animals. They will then place the animals in a ranking order from top to bottom using their knowledge and the observation skills learned in this 4-H project. The final part of this competition is to defend these placings before a panel of judges by giving oral reasons for their ranking order of the animals.

Caasi Smith of Mitchell County 4-H will compete for one of the many 4-H scholarships offered each year by the Texas 4-H Foundation. These scholarships carrying a total value of more than $800,000 and 4-H youth applying for these scholarships are judged on 4-H experiences, leadership skills, high school academic performance, college entrance exam scores and community service.

A new addition to 4-H Round-Up this year is the Texas 4-H Fashion Show. Caasi will also represent Mitchell County and District 7 in the Dressy Division of this contest. Caasi's outfit features cotton fabric and will also be entered in the Cotton Division of the 4-H Natural Fibers Competition at this time.

Method demonstrations and illustrated talks are an important part of this statewide event. "Preserving the environment with American Wool" is the title of an illustrated talk to be presented by Miss Smith.

Jackson gets wish

(Re-printed courtesy of Shirley A. Gorman, Snyder Daily News)

Tuesday was a big day for Toni Jackson, 9, and her family and friends. Thanks to the Make A Wish Foundation, she did not have to wait until Christmas to get the horse she has always dreamed of owning.

The petite youngster suffers from acute lymphoblastic leukemia (ALL), and, though it is currently in remission, the past three years has been anything but easy for her and her family.

Diagnosed with the life-threatening illness nearly three years ago, Toni completed an exhausting and difficult chemotherapy program in December of 1992. At the onset of the illness, Sandra Jackson, Toni's mother, said the pediatric specialist's grim prognosis was that she would not survive the, induction stage of treatment because her white cell count was so high.

But Toni did survive, and was more than eager to embrace Brandy, a full-sized quarter horse which dwarfs her, when it arrived around 5 p.m. The big moment caught Toni by surprise. Though she knew that she would be getting a horse someday, no one had told her when it was to be delivered.

As Toni and Brandy met for the first time, she was surrounded by her parents, Barry and Sandy Jackson, her four-year-old sister K'Leigh, and a host of relatives and friends who couldn't wait to see the look on her face.

Though almost totally deaf from birth and unable to speak verbally, Toni signed her pleasure while her parents translated. Even K'Leigh, who was a little skeptical at first, squealed with delight a few moments later, perched snugly in the saddle behind her sister.

Earlier this summer, Make A Wish volunteers had contacted the Jacksons regarding fulfilling Toni's primary wish. Until a change was made in the by-laws this past February, Make A Wish just fulfilled a special request for a terminally ill child. Now, they also work with children who have been diagnosed with a life-threatening disease.

The foundation obtained the Jacksons' name from Southwest Cancer Center in Lubbock where Toni was hospitalized.

Since the foundation was not sure whether Toni would have the stamina to cope with a horse, her doctor had to sign a release before they could give the animal to her. Her physical and occupational therapists in Abilene also approved.

Toni's second choice was a trip to Disneyworld, but based on Tuesday's reaction, she definitely preferred the horse.

Diagnosed with ALL on June 21, 1990, Toni has undergone intensive chemotherapy which concluded five months ago. If she remains in remission five years, she has an 85 percent chance to be cured, her mother said.

The joy that Toni's family and friends shared Tuesday was all the more precious because the preceeding three years had been fraught with doubt, uncertainty and the ever-present fear that they could lose her at any time. They almost did when a respirator was removed and she couldn't breath; then her heart stopped, too. Toni doesn't remember the incident, but she wasn't too happy to wake up and find she was on the respirator again, Sandra said.

Toni is a survivor who has been battling staggering odds for the past nine years. Besides a profound hearing loss, she has also been very small all of her life. So small in fact, that at the slightest hint of illness, Sandra takes her to the doctor. That's how ALL was discovered.

Hospitalized soon after she started throwing up, the doctor in Sweetwater ordered routine bloodwork which revealed a white cell count of 18,000. Suspecting leukemia, he referred the Jacksons to a doctor in Lubbock.

Within a few days, Toni's white cell count had jumped to 80,000, finally peaking at 120,000. Toni was very sick from the moment ALL invaded her body. Normally this isn't the case, her mother said.

Common symptoms of ALL include easy bruising, tiredness, and sores that won't heal. However, not all children display any symptoms before getting sick.

At Southwest Cancer Center, Toni underwent chemotherapy in three stages. The induction stage lasted eight weeks and included 12 drugs given through IVs, IMs, plus oral medication and a spinal tap. During the consolidation phase, eight drugs were given over 16 weeks. The final stage-maintenance-lasted one year and consisted of five medications. Sandra said boys with ALL stay on maintenance for two years.

Toni did not undergo crainial radiation. Since leukemia cells hide in the brain, Sandra said that, that treatment is sometimes used. No one really knows yet whether it helps or not. Brain damage can be a serious side effect of the radiation, she said.

When Toni's weight dropped to 17 pounds during chemotherapy, she was fitted with a special feeding tube which continually pumped a special formula milk into her body for 16 months.

Toni spent the 12 weeks of chemotherapy in an eight-foot by eight-foot room in intensive care, with her parents constantly at her side.

Sandra said they joined a protocal study group while in Lubbock so that Toni's treatment and progress could be documented.

Due to the severity of the drugs used, all of Toni's cells, including the good ones, were destroyed, Sandra said.

When her white cell count dropped to zero following chemotherapy, Sandra said they had to be extremely careful not to expose her to any kind of germ or infection for several months.

The chemotheraphy which saved Toni's life has also damaged many of her vital organs such as her kidneys and liver. One kidney is now smaller than the other.

Side affects to chemotherapy can be as serious as ALL. Some 24 operations in 2 1/2 years have been necessary to correct some of the problems, including a hiatal hernia caused by severe nausea.

The same team was assembled for every operation so that Toni could be reassured as much as possible. The nurses always left their masks off until she fell asleep so she could read their lips.

Chemotherapy also adversely affected her ability to concentrate. Her strength was so diminished that holding a pencil was very difficult. Now she can write legibly. She has also increased the amount of time she works on her lessons from less than an hour to several hours.

In addition, chemotherapy also dissolved the enamel on Toni's teeth and caused severe blisters to form through-out her body, including her eyes. There has been some eye damage.

Every side effect was life-threatening, Sandra said, but in spite of the risks, they trusted the doctor and agreed to the treatment. At least Toni is alive and has a chance to be cured. However, they have been told that if Toni suffers a relapse it is doubtful she would survive another round of chemotherapy.

Sandra said new drugs and procedures have since been added to help lessen the affect of chemotherapy on children.

One of the earliest and toughest side affects Toni had to deal with was loosing her hair shortly after treatment began.

"She was so miserable that she covered her head with a sheet and just cried and cried," Sandra said.

To get her over this they took her picture every morning after her bath "because she looked so pretty." After a time, she began to believe it also. At one time her hair had been thick, coarse and waist length.

Toni was so sensitive about her baldness, that she would only let her dad rub the top of her head. He started calling her his little "peach fuzz" and the nickname still endures today.

She remained bald for more than a year and though they bought her a wig, Sandra said, Toni would not wear it.

Instead, she preferred to wear a tobaggan or a cap.

They also put bows on Toni's head and applied makeup and nail polish to help her begin to feel better about herself.

Eventually, her hair started to grow back, but it has a thinner texture now.

Toni's parents and the hospital staff tried everything they could think of to keep her entertained. Sandra said they received a box containing donated crayons and other play things which Toni enjoyed.

Besides boredom, the confinement took its toll in other ways. Toni stubbornly pulled her IV out several nights in a row until they finally convinced her to leave it alone. She also learned how to turn her monitors on and off and how to hook them up.

She liked getting hugs from the hospital staff, especially those who had to perform painful procedures such as a spinal tap. A hug at the end always seemed to make it all right, as if she understood they weren't being mean to her, Sandra said.

Lab technicians were especially gentle because Toni hated the frequent blood tests which charted her progress.

Some of the nurses took turns "spoiling" her. At night, one rocked her to sleep while another kissed her goodnight. Toni wouldn't go to sleep unless her pillows and sheets were sprinkled with "Tinker Bell fairy dust." That's a ritual she still clings to today.

While Toni was on the respirator and could not move, nurses would stage water gun fights in her room.

During the more painful aspects of her treatment, Toni often released her feelings by socking her dad in the nose whenever something hurt.

Throughout the ordeal, Sandra said she and her husband would not have managed without the wonderful support of family, friends and the nurses at the hospital.

They stayed in Toni's room at the hospital. Sandra said the nurses were so compassionate that "They did our laundry for us and even brought us homecooked meals. I could also call them at any hour when I needed to talk."

One nurse, who is no longer at the hospital, could also speak in sign. They still correspond, Sandra said.

The hospital chaplain was "wonderful too," Sandra said.

Both sets of grandparents-O.E. and Vera Jackson, who live nearby, and Jessie and Evelyn Wiggins of Colorado City-shared responsibility for taking care of K'Leigh who was 18 months old when Toni became ill.

They also brought K'Leigh to the hospital on weekends. While her parents played and interacted with her, the grandparetns stayed with Toni.

Occasionally, Sandra's sister, who lives in Lubbock, would stay with Toni for a couple of hours so that the Jacksons could get away from the hospital.

"We were very fortunate to have the support that we did," Sandra said, "because it enabled us to remain in Lubbock with Toni. We would not have made it without our parents," she added. "We also prayed alot."

Monetary donations helped ease the financial strain. Snyder and Colorado City banks and mercahnts set up accounts and donation jars. The American Legion chapter in Snyder raised money through an auction. All monies donated helped the Jacksons to pay bills, living expenses and medical costs not covered by their insurance policy, which has paid some $800,000 thus far.

Strangers passing through often placed money in the jars, sometimes accompanied with a brief note telling of their experience with the disease.

The Fifteenth Street residents in Colorado City also took up a collection for them.

While statistics show that 90 percent of marraiges do not survive a child's severe health crisis, Toni's illness has brought Barry and Sandra and their families closer together.

Their belief in God helped Toni's parents and families get through the worst of her illness. Vera Jackson said they believe that God has a reason for Toni's survival. She also said many churches in the area have had Toni on their prayer lists.

Sandra said they were also very fortunate that K'Leigh took everything so well. She seemed to understand that "Sissie was sick. Sissie hurt." K'Leigh is also very protective of her older sister. Once, when a resident was removing staples following surgery, Toni started to cry and K'Leigh promptly ran to him and bit him on the leg.

Now that K'Leigh is older she is also beginning to realize that Toni's trips with their parents aren't for fun activities.

Being able to share experiences with other parents of stricken children has also helped Barry and Sandra cope. Sandra shed tears too, but never in front of Toni.

She sometimes was asked to meet with parents who had just been told that their child was desperately ill.

She told them that they will need support from family and friends and that it is helpful if they can talk to another couple whose situation is similar to theirs. Support is available, but they will have to look for it, she added.

The Jacksons, like most parents with a desperately sick child, experienced a gauntlet of emotions from anger to denial and guilt (a normal reaction) when another child died. Those feelings returned periodically.

Sandra said they experienced a lot of delayed stress reactions which often surfaced when Toni's condition was at a good place. "It was like we didn't have time to react before, so we saved it until we could," Sandra said.

It was also very difficult for Toni to lose one of her friends. But in her own way and in her own time she has learned how to accept their deaths.

For some reason, Sandra said, children with cancer handled it better than their parents.

Sandra will be a volunteer for Make A Wish this fall.

She coped by reading everything she could find in the library on ALL. She also questioned her doctor and nurses throughly so that she knew what they were going to do and why. She even learned how to do several things herself, including reading the charts, because it made her feel better to be a part of everything.

During that first year they managed to be home only 58 days, occasionally taking turns returning for brief periods. They always stayed by a phone when home. They live in a mobile home located between Snyder and Hermcligh on Denson Road.

Barry is a native of Snyder and Sandra grew up in Colorado City.

Barry, who is a welder, worked whenever he could. He said he kept a bag packed in his vehicle so that he would be ready to return to Lubbock at a moment's notice.

Family and friends took care of everyday business so the Jacksons could spend as much time with Toni as they could.

The Jacksons had been living in Lubbock prior to Toni getting ill because at that time the Lubbock school system provided the best resources for deaf education.

Sandra said they had just moved back to Scurry County when Toni was diagnosed with ALL.

Barry and Sandra learned how to administer oral chemotherapy and to do home IVs, so they could take care of Toni after she was released from the hospital.

For some time, Toni received oral drugs plus an IV every 28 days and a spinal tap and bone marrow test every three months.

Every six months, doctors had to use a corkscrew to extract bone marrow. This was especially painful because no pain killers could be used.

Toni, who weighs 30 pounds, is now medicine free. It's taking her a little while to get used to that as well as being able to run and play with other children.

Her last hospital stay was in July of 1992 and she completed chemotherapy in December of that same year.

Now, monthly blood tests chart her progress and physical and occupational therapists the West Texas Rehabilitation Center in Abilene are helping her relearn the motor functions which atrophied during chemotherapy.

Sandra said that during the long time Toni was recuperating from the affects of chemotherapy, they had to keep her inside and be extra careful that she did not fall or cut herself. She could not even brush her teeth for months. They could not chance even the slightest nick, because Toni's blood was not then capable of coagulating.

Sandra said they also had to devise other punishments for Toni when she misbehaved because spanking was out of the question.

During the long months Toni was confined to their home, her parents stocked up on a wide variety of videos. She wears a hearing aid which allows her to hear the TV at high volume.

Toni also lip reads. She prefers live action shows because most cartoons are difficult for her to lip read. However, she has the best luck with Walt Disney features.

Due to her medical problems, Toni has had to miss quite a bit of school. She did some homebound work through Hermleigh Independent School District since enrolling 1 1/2 years ago. She will be a mainstream second grader in the fall.

Sandra said the school has been very cooperative and helpful and will hire a sign interpreter who will work with Toni when school resumes in August. Toni will follow the second grade curriculum with the exception of extra reading and language arts classes.

The school has also purchased special books and a home computer for Toni to use. Sandra said with lip reading, other training and a hearing aid, her daughter is expected to be able to function in the everyday world.

Sandra said they do not know why Toni contracted ALL. Several theories exist but none have been proven. It is not considered hereditary, but Sandra said her sister died of it when she was six years old.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

To the Curriculum Director of CHS '93 who should have been more efficient in her job performance, thank you for "dropping the ball" on your required paperwork for AP Biology so we could receive honors credit. Have you done the necessary paperwork this year for all the "new" courses in plenty of time so students will receive proper credit this year? I hope so!

Since when did you find it your duty to determine the amount of solemnity necessary for a "proper" graduation ceremony? Is this part of your job description or is this just a result of being a concerned citizen? This is not the 1940's-1970's. Times have changed. Look at the different wedding ceremonies of the '90's.

I do not believe for a minute that Justin and Jody waited until graduation afternoon to write their speeches. I do not feel they earned the top two places by waiting until the last minute to complete their school work or study for tests.

I do not remember any rock music being played at graduation. Pardon me!

Love, honor, and respect can not be obtained merely by a title or position. My family has this after years of deserving it. It is very hard to have any respect for an unprofessional and irresponsible School Board, Superintendent, Curriculum Director and High School Principal. As for Mr. Woods, he is a very respected person that earned this respect by being a good teacher, being fair and having a very high set of moral standards.

In my opinion, motivation, honesty, love and having high obtainable goals are equally important facets for success.

I would like to thank all of those individuals that worked so hard to make Project Celebration a big success, especially a big "THANKS" to the people and merchants that donated money, time, equipment and prizes.

Last but not least: Thank you Mrs. Arthur for providing some graduation humor. I could not help but chuckle when you gave the wrong plaque to the wrong person.

Sincerely,
"One of the Handful"
Billy Joe Robinette

Letter to the Editor:

The staff at Kelley Elementary enjoyed a delicious meal on May 27, 1993 which was provided by a group of hard-working parents of Kelley students. Mrs. Patti Savage and Mrs. Barbie Lelek organized and executed a wonderful lunch of Mexican decor in the Kelley cafeteria. They even gave everyone at Kelley door prizes of potted plants, home-made wreaths, even a beautiful stuffed rabbit done by Mrs. Deborah Phariss!

Everyone at Kelley would like to say a big "THANK YOU" to all the parents who helped with the meal and also to the merchants who donated and made the meal so nice: Neff's Nursery, Mayfield Paper Company, Villa Restaurant, Ft. Wood Cafe, Nell's Flowers, McMichael's.

We appreciate being appreciated by all of you.

Thanks again,
Kelley Elementary Staff
