2-vehicle collision kills teen

By Kasey Kelly
MRT Correspondent

A 16-year-old Greenwood High School student, who had just gotten her driver's license last month, was killed Tuesday afternoon when the 2001 Ford Escort she was driving collided with a tractor-trailer east of Midland.

Taylor

Kristin Taylor was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident by Justice of the Peace George Zimmerman.

Her 9-year-old sister, Katie Taylor, was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital and was listed in critical condition late Tuesday night.

Officers on the scene said Miss Taylor's vehicle was southbound on County Road 120 and the truck, owned by UTI Drilling, was westbound on Texas Highway 158. Officers said Miss Taylor apparently ran a stop sign, and collided with the truck about 2 1/2 miles east of Interstate 20. The driver of the truck, Hector Aranda of Midland, was not injured. The truck was carrying a load of drill collars.

"The Ford Escort apparently failed to stop and the tractor-trailer was unable to miss it," said Department of Public Safety Trooper John Barton.

"The truck dragged the vehicle for approximately 300 feet before it came to a halt," Barton said.

The Escort was trapped under the front axle of the UTI Drilling truck with both passengers trapped inside for about an hour. The 9-year-old passenger, who was riding in the back seat at the time of impact, was rescued from the vehicle through the back window and transported immediately to the hospital with severe

Bivins declares re-election bid to residents in Howard County

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — State Sen. Teel Bivins (R-Amarillo) made a memorable first impression on the citizens of Howard County by announcing his intention to seek re-election in 2002.

State Sen. Teel Bivins told a packed audience at the Rotary Club in Big Spring they would not be an afterthought in District 31.

Bivins, who represents District 31, which includes Midland County, told a packed Rotary Club audience Tuesday it was not an accident he chose Big Spring as the place for the announcement.

Howard County has been placed in the district by the Legislative Redistricting Board. It was a move many in the county didn't like. One worry was Howard would become an afterthought in a district that includes Amarillo, Midland and Odessa.

Bivins said nothing could be further from the truth. With the new redistricting lines, the northern portion of the district lost its population advantage over the southern area.

"That makes you (Howard County's citizens) the people who can determine who the representative is going to be in the state Senate," Bivins said. "That is why I came to Big Spring today to announce my candidacy."

Bivins also may have settled some edgy nerves. Howard County citizens are familiar with and very supportive of their current senator — Robert Duncan (R-Lubbock). They pleaded to stay in his district, but to dismay of many, the LRB opted to move the county. Bivins' appearance and words may have soothed some of those hard feelings. He received a standing ovation at the end of the meeting.

"I think (the formal announcement coming in Big Spring) is a great sign," Big Spring Mayor Russ McEwen said.

McLaren to re-evaluate 'defensive' strategy, consider plea agreement

By D. Lance Lunsford
Staff Writer

Richard McLaren and his fellow defendants decided to take the night to reconsider strategies for proceeding in trial, after a series of comments by District Judge Royal Furgeson late Tuesday apparently convinced them they might settle on a plea agreement.

In the second day of testimony in the trial of five Republic of Texas members, McLaren said he wanted to reconsider the possibility of accepting a plea agreement. Telling Furgeson he would like to re-evaluate his "political or defensive" strategy, McLaren's comments indicated the slow-moving trial might come to a quick end.

McLaren

Furgeson, upon redefining the charges pending against the group, appeared stunned as McLaren said he would reconsider U.S. Attorney Gerald Carruth's offer for a plea agreement.

McLaren said, "Basically, sir, I want to evaluate these fields and move forward in the morning."

President enjoys freedom from White House

By Scott Lindlaw
Associated Press

CRAWFORD — A vacationing President Bush sought to assure Mideast leaders on Tuesday he is engaged in resolving the Palestinian-Israeli conflict and said he hoped "sanity will prevail" in the troubled region.

Bush insisted the two sides must lay down their arms before the peace process advances.

"Peace in the Middle East is a top foreign policy priority," Bush said after a round of golf on the third full day of his monthlong vacation here. "We need to work together to convince both sides to break the cycle of violence."

Bush spoke with reporters as a poll published in USA Today found that 55 percent of respondents feel the president is spending too much time away from the White House.

"Washington, D.C., is a fine place," Bush said, "and I'm honored to be working in the Oval Office, staying in the compound there. But I'm the kind of person that needs to get outdoors."

Bush said he had written a letter Tuesday to Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak maintaining his strong interest in the region. "I told him we're still very much engaged in the process, obviously, that we take violence very seriously in the Middle East," Bush said.

Study finds college freshmen living in dorms at increased risk of meningitis

By Tammy Webber
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Freshmen living in dormitories are at much greater risk of contracting meningitis than other college students, raising anew the question of whether incoming students should be vaccinated, researchers report.

Dr. Michael Bruce, a medical epidemiologist with the National Center for Infectious Diseases and lead author of the study in today's Journal of the American Medical Association, stopped short of recommending colleges require vaccinations for freshmen.

But he said there could be a "major impact" on meningitis in college students by vaccinating a relatively small number of young adults.

Meningococcal meningitis is a bacterial infection of membranes around the brain and spinal cord that can be spread by kissing or sharing utensils. Symptoms include fever, neck stiffness and headache.

The disease kills in roughly 10 percent of cases and does serious harm, including brain damage, in another 10 percent. A viral form of meningitis exists but is generally less serious.

Previous studies have shown that college students living on campus have a higher risk of developing the disease than those living off campus. Undergraduates overall had a lower risk of developing the disease than nonstudents of the same age for reasons that are unclear.

For the latest study, researchers at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention identified 96 U.S. college students ages 18 to 23 who were diagnosed with meningococcal infection from Sept. 1, 1998, to Aug. 31, 1999.

Of the 79 patients for whom information was available, 68 percent had infections that might have been prevented through vaccination, Bruce said.

The overall incidence for undergraduates was 0.7 per 100,000 students, compared to 5.1 per 100,000 for freshmen in dorms, the study found. Freshman in dorms had a three times greater risk than all other college students of contracting the disease.

Possible explanations could be the crowded conditions. Upperclassmen also may have developed protective immunity to the disease, researchers said.

The current vaccine lasts three to five years. More effective, longer-lasting vaccines are expected within two years.

Colleges increasingly are warning of the bacterial disease on preadmission health forms and holding vaccination clinics. In 1999, Michigan State University spent $1 million giving more than 16,000 students and faculty members free vaccinations after a student contracted the disease.

About 1.6 million college students have been vaccinated against the disease since 1997 at the recommendation of the American College Health Association, said Dr. James Turner, chairman of the group's Vaccine Preventable Disease Task Force.

The "$75 to $85 cost for the vaccine, which lasts four years, is about the same as for a good pair of tennis shoes," he said.

In another study in today's journal, researchers found the incidence of meningococcal infection in Maryland increased substantially among 15- through 24-year-olds in the 1990s and that almost one-fourth of cases in that age group were fatal. The infection rate dropped in 1998 and 1999.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Jay Wenger of the World Health Organization said: "Taken together, these studies demonstrate that meningococcal disease in this age group is severe, and a targeted approach of immunizing college freshmen who live in dormitories may be the most efficient way to make an impact on meningococcal disease."

Bacterial meningitis: Dangerous disease strikes fast

Meningitis, an infection of the brain and spinal cord membranes, can spread rapidly through a group of people in close physical contact, such as students or prison inmates.

Viral meningitis is a relatively mild illness that passes without treatment

Bacterial meningitis however, can be fatal if not treated immediately

Symptoms (both types)
Initial symptoms similar to flu, then these signs may appear:
- Stiff, painful neck
- High fever
- Sensitivity to light
- Vomiting
- Lethargy, confusion

Advanced stage: A purple rash that does not turn white when pressed; take person to a hospital immediately*

Transmission
Some strains of meningitis can be transmitted by kissing or coughing; not as contagious as influenza (flu)

Treatment (bacterial)
Intravenous antibiotics must be started quickly – within 12 hours of onset of symptoms – to prevent hearing loss, brain damage or death

Vaccines for some strains of meningitis are available

What happens: Bacteria attack the dura mater, one of the layers of the meninges (men-INN-geez) membranes covering the brain and spinal cord

Heat wave arrives in East after baking Midwest, Plains

By Rebecca Sinderbrand
Associated Press

A deadly heat wave that sent the mercury soaring in the Midwest and Plains blanketed the eastern half of the country Tuesday, straining power grids and plunging millions of people into a stifling, soggy misery.

"If we worked a horse in this heat, we'd go to jail," construction worker David Stacey said in Harrisburg, Pa., his black T-shirt soaked with sweat. "But we don't really have a choice. We've got to be outside."

The withering heat stretched from South Dakota's Black Hills and Minneapolis to Washington, D.C., and Portland, Maine. Temperatures topped 100 degrees in some places and the humidity made it feel even hotter.

"I'm going straight home and the first thing I'll do when I get there is turn the air conditioner on high," said Joel Reyes, a 22-year-old student clutching a large cup of ice water as he walked in New York.

Relief wasn't forecast in some parts of the East until Friday.

Last week, hot weather was blamed for at least six deaths in the Midwest, including 27-year-old Korey Stringer of pro football's Minnesota Vikings. Other deaths were under investigation, including that of a man whose body temperature was measured at 109 degrees after he was found in his car in a Detroit suburb.

Heat indexes, which measure the combined effects of heat and humidity, soared to between 100 degrees and 110 degrees in many places Tuesday.

Boston declared its first heat alert of the summer. New York officials opened about 400 "cooling centers" — air-conditioned senior centers, schools and other public facilities — and said its 33 swimming pools would stay open an extra hour. The high in Central Park was 99 degrees.

Pennsylvanians were girding for the longest stretch of 90-degree days in at least six years. In Philadelphia, workers from a community group fanned out Tuesday, distributing jugs of water to the homeless.

"We try to encourage people to go to a shelter where it's cool, or to at least stay in the shade or somewhere that's air conditioned," said Alex Otieno, the group's community liaison.

Power companies nationwide urged people to conserve, fearing blackouts or brownouts due to consumer overload. Electricity usage in New York hit an all-time high Tuesday, according to the state's Independent System Operator.

"There's a little bit of extra juice floating around out there, some from our neighbors to the north (Canada). But, boy, it's tight," ISO spokesman Steven Sullivan said.

As many as 6,000 customers lost electricity in Camden, N.J., and authorities said it was partly due to the hot weather. In Newark, where the heat index reached 106 degrees, six firefighters suffered heat exhaustion after battling a house fire.

At the Fairfax Pool in Eau Claire, Wis., manager Tara Edberg said some of her lifeguards had grown dizzy and vomited because of the heat. Elsewhere in the state, high school football coaches canceled outdoor practices.

In Minnesota, Tuesday was the second day in a row without power for many Xcel Energy customers, who have been sweating it out without ice cubes, air conditioning or electric fans. More than 7,000 customers were still without power Tuesday afternoon, down from 16,700.

In St. Cloud, Minn., the heat meant a day off Monday for some workers at the Frigidaire Freezer Plant. Plant officials monitored conditions Tuesday on a shift-by-shift basis.

"It's been pretty trying on everyone and everything," plant supervisor Mike Noll said. "Some people have been around here 33 years, and it's the warmest they can remember."

High temperatures and sticky humidity have persisted for more than a week in Nebraska. Attendance at the Douglas County Fair in Omaha last weekend dropped by about half from last year.

"We have never experienced five consecutive days of that kind of heat, and out here on all this concrete, it was particularly bad," fair manager Sandy Rockwood said.

Jefferson City, Mo., mail carrier Craig Holliday, 51, found no relief inside his postal truck: "It's like driving around in a little oven."

Some managed to take the blistering weather in stride, including a group of senior citizens who took their weekly golf outing to Ramblewood Country Club in Mount Laurel, N.J., on Tuesday.

"My wife was ready to commit me this morning, but after 50 years, I don't pay any attention to her," Al Beich, 74, said after finishing the 14th hole. "We drink a lot of water. I've had two beers, but I'm out of beer so now it's all water."

Bivins' announcement ruins chances for local representative

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — The chances of a state senator coming from Permian Basin took a dramatic turn for the worse Tuesday as State Sen. Teel Bivins (R-Amarillo) announced he would seek another term as the District 31 representative.

Bivins, the popular political figure from the Panhandle, finally quelled rumors he would not seek another term, and in the same breath probably ended any realistic chances of a potential Permian Basin Republican candidate representing the district.

Odessa's Bob Barnes, who previously stated he would run for the state Senate if Bivins opted not to run, said Tuesday he would honor that commitment and not run against Bivins.

"My whole reason for wanting to get into the process and be ready to run is because I am passionate about West Texas," Barnes said. "I think Teel in our new district will be able to justify spending more time in Midland-Odessa and West Texas than he was able to do in the past. I think we will see a good level of representation from Teel. He is a good legislator at a time we need that in the Senate."

Amarillo Mayor Kel Seliger, whose fate also depended on Bivins' decision, said Tuesday he would not challenge Bivins.

"My decision was always dependent on whether Sen. Bivins would run or not," Seliger said.

Bivins has not been opposed in a primary or general election since 1988 when he won his first race for political office.

"It is difficult to run against an incumbent, particularly one that is as well thought of and as effective as Sen. Bivins," said Chad Weaver, the District 31 representative to the State Republican Executive Committee.

When asked if he saw anyone in the area who could threaten Bivins' claim to the seat, Weaver said, "No."

"It was never anyone's intention to run against Teel Bivins," Midland's Jose Cuevas said. "He has represented our communities well. It was the opportunity to get someone from this area elected if Teel chose not to run. It had always been stated we are happy with Teel Bivins, and as long as he wanted the seat he could have the seat."

Bivins, though, wasn't going to take any chances. He recognizes the numbers the southern half of District 31 will pick up should the LRB's plan hold up.

"When you look as the district as it is proposed to be drawn by the LRB, there is a balance between the north part and south of the district in terms of Republican voting strength," Bivins said. "And don't kid anybody, this is a Republican district, a highly Republican district."

And announcing his re-election campaign in Big Spring could be seen as a first step in solidifying his position with the southern end of the district.

Many Howard County citizens had earlier indicated they did not want to be moved from State Sen. Robert Duncan's district, but there was evidence that Bivins may have soothed those concerns at his Tuesday appearance at the Rotary Club meeting.

Second, Big Spring citizens often feel overlooked in the Permian Basin, especially when linked with Midland and Odessa.

By coming to Big Spring, Bivins connected with those who had reservations about the move, and he reached influential Howard County citizens firsthand.

"There are 34,000 people in Howard County, which becomes a key player in who will represent State Senate District 31," Bivins said. "That is why I came here first to announce my candidacy."

BID: Bivins announces intentions to Big Springers

(From 1A)

Bivins' introduction included many things that interested Howard County citizens. Bivins stated his job was to represent Big Spring, and he will put an office in the heart of Howard County.

"It was a good move on his part (to announce in Big Spring)," said Odessa's Bob Barnes, who said Tuesday he will back up his commitment not to run should Bivins decide to seek another term. "The people of Big Spring have never had their voice heard in a big way, and by him going over there and announcing in Big Spring, it says you are part of something, part of my district, an important part of my district. They realize our desire to bring them into West Texas and that being part of the district was good for them."

Bivins, who has represented District 31 since 1989, is considered a leader on education issues. He chairs Senate's Education Committee.

"Education is the most important function for state government," Bivins said. "It occupies the largest single expenditure we have in our budget every two years."

In addition, he serves on the Natural Resources, Criminal Justice and Electric Utility Restructuring Legislative Oversight committees.

"The challenges Texas faces are enormous," Bivins said.

Bivins, a fourth generation West Texan, also called himself an "advocate for":

- the rural areas and rural economic development (28 of the 31 counties he currently represents are rural).
- viable clean drinking water.
- affordable energy.

"We know Bob Duncan. We don't know Teel Bivins," McEwen said. "We know him by reputation, which is a good reputation, but we don't know him."

"What we have now is a personable relationship that we didn't have before. He said things that are very assuring."

STRATEGY: McLaren wants to reserve right to challenge legal rulings made

(From 1A)

McLaren's response to Furgeson's disagreement to the defense's line of strategy came quickly, but for the first time since pretrial hearings in late May, McLaren addressed the alleged illegality of the court.

McLaren told Furgeson he was looking to challenge the government for violating Article Three of the U.S. Constitution, which grants citizens the right to take up arms against the government.

Standby counsel for McLaren and Robert "White Eagle" Otto openly addressed the court after McLaren informed the judge he would reconsider a plea agreement.

"They're willing to plea, while reserving their right to challenge legal rulings made," attorney Jason Leach said.

Another standby counselor, attorney Bob Leahey, attempted to clarify the long-term motives of the defense.

"I think there is some dispute in that they'd like to move to a higher court," Leahey said.

Carruth confirmed his desire to consider offering a plea, but he said he would require a guilty plea on the entire line of indictments as part of the agreement.

"They could plea guilty ... and the government would be willing to accept a plea," Carruth said.

Although the proposal for a plea agreement means no chance for a release from prison for the defendants anywhere in the near future, McLaren still is held on state charges from another case with appeals pending. In the meantime, he is working to get himself and the other defendants heard in higher courts to show they were within their constitutional rights when law enforcement discovered weapons and explosives on the McLaren property in Fort Davis.

Furgeson inadvertently sparked the consideration for the plea from the defense after telling them he did not agree with their strategy considering the actual alleged charges under the National Firearms Act.

"If I'm proceeding without jurisdiction, then that will be determined by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans," Furgeson said in court on Tuesday. "I just wanted the defendants to know here that I disagree with them. I have to alert you to the facts, because you and I are not on the same track."

While many supporters of the Republic of Texas appeared in court for the second day, some agreed Furgeson was handling the case with a high degree of fairness. The day's earlier testimony sparked snickers and comments from some of those same Republic of Texas supporters. That testimony included statements from Texas Rangers and one explosives expert with the Midland Police Department who was in charge of the explosives in Fort Davis.

The layout for the defense's strategy was shown as each defendant and Attorney Scott Johnson, who is representing Gregg Paulson, cross examined the prosecution's witnesses. Not one of the investigators testifying Tuesday could say they ever saw the defendants with any of the weapons or confirm seeing them in possession of any of the explosives.

Texas Rangers Cpt. Barry Caver testified as to never actually seeing the defendants in possession of the weapons or the explosive devices.

"I've seen photographs of (the weapons), not physically."

Part of Carruth's evidence for the jury were pictures of pipe bombs discovered in the heavily wooded area surrounding McLaren's so-called "embassy". Additional video footage shot by the law enforcement officers after the standoff showed bright red gas cans each with two small AA batteries taped atop the handles. Wires appeared to travel from within the taped area of the batteries to within the gas cans, but the wiring did not appear to be connected to the negative position of the battery as would be required for detonation, according to testimony.

Midland Police Sgt. Andy Glasscock said he was requested to the area of Fort Davis on May 2, 1997 as an explosives expert. He also appeared in the video in full protective gear while the evidence of the pipe bombs was gathered, and although much of that evidence appeared to be safe, Glasscock said they could be assembled in a way to impose danger.

"A lot of these things can be used for regular everyday things, but together they can be used to make a bomb," Glasscock said.

Under cross-examination by Otto, Glasscock revealed only one pipe bomb allegedly had explosive powder inside, But Glasscock added, there was no real way to know as he and his team had to detonate each bomb for safety purposes.

"You don't know if any of those devices that you detonate and destroyed actually contained powder?" Otto asked Glasscock, prompting the officer's negative response.

Later questioning regarding the pipe bombs' appearance in defendant Paulson's tent showed there were never fingerprints taken from the pipe bombs.

BUSH: President's aides stress he's on working vacation

(From 1A)

The president also said Daniel Kertzer, the U.S. ambassador to Israel, met Monday with Prime Minister Ariel Sharon.

The president's words and the diplomatic efforts come at a time when leaders in the region are pressing Bush to take a more active role.

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat and his senior negotiator, Nabil Shaath, wrote to Bush and to Secretary of State Colin Powell over the weekend to urge the administration to take new steps toward peace even while trying to end the violence.

Bush held firm Tuesday to his demand that the combatants first stop the violence.

On another matter, Bush left no doubt about his commitment to concrete action in Iraq, where U.S. fighter planes bombed an air defense site Tuesday after taking fire from Iraqi surface-to-air missiles and anti-aircraft artil...y.

Bush said he had been briefed on the confrontation. Iraqi President "Saddam Hussein is a menace and we need to keep him in check and we will," he said. "He's been a menace forever and he needs to open his country for inspection so we can see whether he is making weapons of mass destruction."

Bush made his comments from a golf cart in Waco near his ranch. His back drenched in sweat, he fielded several questions in two sessions with journalists. Toward the end of the second exchange, he appeared eager to return to his vacation, edging the cart away as he spoke. Back at his ranch, he went jogging.

Aides have taken pains to present the month as a working vacation, noting he meets with advisers daily and plans several trips to promote various initiatives. He will also headline at least two fund-raisers on the road, benefiting Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., Sen. Wayne Allard, R-Colo., and Colorado Gov. Bill Owens.

"I'm working a lot of issues, national security matters," Bush said. He also noted he faces some weighty decisions: whether to grant legal residency to some or all of the 3 million undocumented Mexicans living in the United States and whether to allow federal funding for embryonic stem cell research.

TRIAL: Witnesses say teacher hit, shoved student

(From 1A)

Teresa Clingman, an assistant to Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre.

Ms. Beverly's defense attorney in the case being tried before a six-woman, six-man jury in Judge John Hyde's 238th Texas Judicial District Court is Midland attorney Tom S. Morgan.

In her opening statement, Ms. Clingman said Miss Johnson, who suffers from Down's syndrome, was with a group of students at the bowling alley. However, Miss Johnson was denied her bowling privileges because she, against teacher's instructions, earlier had run from the schoolhouse to the bus.

"Ms. Beverly was angry with Brandi," Ms. Clingman said. The student also was to sit up against a bowling-alley wall "as discipline" instead of bowling but wandered around.

The teacher had ordered the student to return to the bus.

"Brandi was taking her time, moseying around," said the prosecution's first witness, Becky Beadle, who works at the bowling alley's front desk.

From her vantage, Ms. Beadle, 26, said she could see the teacher and the student in the bus for a while during the 1:30 p.m. Wednesday class.

She said Ms. Beverly was pounding a bus seat with her open hands well behind Miss Johnson, who seemed to be "ignoring her.

"Seemed like they were arguing," said Ms. Beadle, who noted she could not hear voices from the bus.

Ms. Beverly "got up and ran to the front of the bus" and struck the mentally-retarded student on the head with her "closed fist just one time," Ms. Beadle testified.

"Brandi stood up. They were, like, arguing," Ms. Beadle said. "I don't recall Brandi hitting her (the teacher)."

Afterward, Ms. Beverly "shoved her to the middle part of the bus ... with both hands," Ms. Beadle testified. "She shoved Brandi down into the seat.

"Her (Brandi's) eyes were real big and open like coming up for air when you are swimming," Ms. Beadle said.

Concerned about the behavior, Ms. Beadle said she approached Mike Adams, then a Midland High School coach, and told him about the disturbance in the bus but that he didn't check it out.

Rather, Adams told her "not to worry about it — to mind my own business," noted Ms. Beadle, who said she had considered calling Midland police "but didn't."

Ms. Beadle, who said she has two children, ages 8 and 4, was upset over the teacher's actions because she has a "daughter that goes to school" where students are "entrusted in the teachers' care.

"I was angry that this was going on," Ms. Beadle said.

Ms. Clingman, who noted Miss Johnson was "little in stature (but) heavy in size," said she would testify today in court.

Morgan indicated Ms. Beverly, who joined the Midland Independent School District in 1990, is to testify in her own defense.

Ms. Beverly earned the bachelor's degree in special education with emphasis on the mentally impaired in 1978 from Eastern Michigan University and received her "lifetime" Texas teacher's certificate in 1991, according Midland's ISD sources. Her pay last year was listed at $34,860.

Still employed by MISD, she has been taken out of classroom assignments and last year, according to the MISD 2001-2001 personnel directory, she was a special-education secretary at Midland High School.

Jennifer Campbell, an 18-year-old witness who formerly worked at Cactus Lanes, called Miss Johnson her friend and said she was "extremely bright."

Ms. Campbell said she recalled teacher and student "arguing" in the bus.

"From what I could tell, the teacher was sitting on top of Brandi."

While Ms. Campbell said she had seen outbursts from special-education students, she said she had "never seen anything" like the teacher's behavior.

"There's other ways she could have handled (the situation)," Ms. Campbell said.

Cactus Lanes owner Scott Pope, who said he briefly witnessed the clash between the student and teacher, said from the bowling alley he had noted the teacher "chasing the little girl" and grabbed her hair.

"They were scuffling," said Pope, who said it appeared the teacher was choking the student. "I'd seen her trying to get away from the lady in the school bus" and told his front-desk worker, Ms. Beadle, "to call somebody" for help.

CRASH: Investigators believe both were wearing seat belts head and internal injuries.

"We have only completed a preliminary investigation at this time," said Pat Holt with DPS Communications. "The accident is still under investigation." But investigators do believe both victims were wearing their seat belts.

Miss Taylor would have been a junior at Greenwood High School in the fall where she played bassoon in the band.

"She was a very talented musician," said Greenwood High School Band director David Fortenberry. "She was learning to play saxophone for the marching band."

The news came as a shock to Joe and Sylvia Hernandez, neighbors of the Taylors. Miss Taylor was not only their neighbor, but a babysitter for their sons.

"I wanted to do something for her, something to make her feel good," said Ms. Hernandez. "She had long, straight hair that had not been cut in a while. I was in the process of making a hair appointment for her."

The family has very strong ties to the community.

The parents, Mike and Judy Taylor, are both employed by Midland Independent School District. Taylor is a coach at Alamo Junior High School. Mrs. Taylor, although not currently teaching because of health problems, was a veteran English teacher at Midland High School.

Miss Taylor would have enrolled for her classes at Greenwood High School today. Although she won't be roaming the halls with her fellow students, her memory will live on.

"I grew up with her," said Ryan Reed, a neighbor and friend. "She was one of the nicest people I've ever met."

Poll: Teens want parental involvement in their lives as role models, confidants

By Jennifer Loven
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Teen-agers just want their parents to butt out, right?

It seems not.

In a survey, released Tuesday, of teens across the country, nearly all of them said they can confide in someone in their family. Almost half would pick a family member — not a pop icon or sports star — as a role model.

More than a quarter said school violence is caused by parents spending too little time with their children, second only to bullying of students by others.

"Having a strong relationship with our families is very important to our success," said Michael Hsia, ready to start his senior year at Livermore High School in Livermore, Calif. "Maybe it's time for mothers and fathers across the nation to realize that and provide more support."

The "State of Our Nation's Youth" survey is published annually by the Horatio Alger Association. The Virginia-based nonprofit organization is dedicated to increasing educational opportunities and gives $3 million in need-based college scholarships each year, funded through donations from individual association members, corporations, foundations and other nonprofits.

The gauge of adolescent attitudes and goals is based on a telephone survey of 1,014 high-school students conducted in May by pollster Peter Hart. The results had a margin of error of 3 percentage points.

Hart said the results paint a picture of today's youth as striving and grounded.

"America is in good hands with the next generation," said Robert Gilmore, a rising senior at Trinity High School in Euless, Texas.

For instance:

■ To 84 percent of the teens, future success will be defined by whether they have close family relationships. Also scoring high were having a close group of friends, making a contribution to society and having an active spiritual life, with making money and being famous favored by far fewer as signs of achievement. When asked to choose between being rich, smart or beautiful, two-thirds picked brains.

■ A majority said they do not feel pressure to look a certain way, get along with their parents, have sex, use drugs or drink. In fact, the largest problem cited by those surveyed was the pressure to get good grades.

■ Three-quarters plan to go to either a four- or two-year college, with another 17 percent planning some sort of post-high school education.

■ More than two-thirds said their schools deserve an "A" or "B," an evaluation that remained about the same regardless of whether the school was in an urban, suburban, rural or small-town setting.

Still, cause for concern remains, Hart said.

Nearly two-thirds of those surveyed worry no more than a little bit about being safe at school. But nearly half of minority high-school students and 42 percent of city dwellers worry a great deal about violence.

Only 57 percent reported living with both their parents.

And one-third of high school students said peer pressure to take drugs, drink or have sex is at least a minor problem for them.

"We're looking to you, the adults, to see how you respond to situations," said Laura Williams, a member of the Class of 2002 at Winnetonka High School in Kansas City, "and that's how we're going to make our decisions."

The survey also revealed teens' advice for policy-makers in Washington.

Almost two-thirds see reducing the number of pupils in each class as the best path to better schools, an idea favored by Democrats in Congress and former President Clinton.

Teen opinions

A national survey found that more students feel pressure to get good grades than to do drugs. Almost half of the students surveyed said they would choose a family member as a role model.

Procter & Gamble, Wrigley to develop Crest chewing gum to help clean teeth

CINCINNATI (AP) — Procter & Gamble Co. and William W. Wrigley Jr. Co. will develop a line of chewing gum under the Crest brand that they say will do more than freshen breath — it will also help clean teeth.

Under the agreement, Chicago-based Wrigley will manufacture the gum using oral health care technology developed by researchers at Cincinnati-based P&G.

Terms of the agreement were not released. But The New York Times, citing two sources it did not identify, reported Tuesday that the deal could be worth more than $100 million annually for the two companies.

P&G officials said the chewing gum line could be introduced within a year.

Wrigley's ability to develop good-tasting products combined with P&G's expertise in oral-care science will allow the companies to serve consumers whose needs are not being met by the oral-care gum already on the market, said Wrigley senior vice president Gary McCullough.

Gum must show clinical and laboratory benefits to fighting or preventing cavities or gum disease to receive the association's seal.

Several brands of gum claim dental benefits, but none has been approved by the American Dental Association. Gum must show clinical and laboratory benefits to fighting or preventing cavities or gum disease to receive the association's seal.

Wrigley is the world's leading manufacturer of chewing gum. P&G is best known for Tide detergent, Crest toothpaste and Pampers diapers.

Researchers say they're determined to attempt human cloning

By Paul Recer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With angry words and apparent determination, three researchers told a meeting of scientists Tuesday they are unswayed by stories of medical risk or by ethical objections and will soon try to clone human beings.

"I believe we have enough information to proceed with human cloning," Brigitte Boisselier told a committee of the National Academy of Sciences. "I don't believe working with animal cloning will give us much more information. I think we have enough."

Boisselier, the director of Clonaid, a human cloning company, hinted that such experiments were already under way. When asked for details, she only smiled and said: "I am doing it and hope I can publish that soon and share it with you."

Panayiotis Michael Zavos, director of the Andrology Institute in Lexington, Ky., and Dr. Severino Antinori of the University of Rome, said they were proceeding with human cloning research as a means of allowing infertile men to have children. However, they said they had not yet attempted to clone a human being.

The comments came during a hearing amid angry exchanges from people on both sides of the issue. Opponents met in the stately lobby of the National Academy's building, and under the glare of television lights shouted at each other. One side contended cloning was a human reproductive right; the other said it would be an unethical, perhaps dangerous form of human experimentation.

Earlier, animal cloning researchers said there has been a high level of failure in experiments, with many animals dying before birth and others born with abnormalities.

Asked if these problems might be corrected in human cloning experiments, Alan Colman, director of PPL Therapeutics, made clear his opposition to such research.

"Practice makes perfect, but it is unethical to practice on humans," said Colman, whose Scottish lab cloned Dolly, the famous sheep. He said that attempting human cloning would result in miscarriages, deaths and abnormal births. "I don't see that it is ethical to take on that practice, now or forever."

Zavos got into a shouting match when Dr. Rudolf Jaenisch of the Whitehead Institute in Boston asked if he and other cloning researchers were able to test human embryos for abnormalities.

As Jaenisch elaborated on his question, Zavos snapped, "I am not going to let him lecture me."

The National Academy's panel was hearing testimony from the researchers to gather information for a report. The academy is a private organization of scientists and engineers. It is chartered by Congress and frequently does research at the request of government agencies.

Zavos and Antinori told the panel that they wanted to clone humans because some 70 million males in the world are physically unable to produce children in any other way.

"We want to make this available only to people who have exhausted all other possibilities for reproduction," said Zavos.

But Boisselier said she believed cloning was a human right.

"It is a fundamental right to reproduce in any way you want," she said. "If you want to mix genes with others, then that's your choice. But if you want to reproduce only with your genes, then it is your right."

In cloning, genes from an adult cell are implanted into a human egg from which all the genetic material has been removed. The egg is then cultured into an embryo and implanted in the womb of the mother. The offspring would have only the genes from the adult cell. The result would be a genetic duplicate of the cell donor.

Cloning is opposed by most of the world's scientists, governments and religions. A bill has passed the U.S. House of Representatives that would outlaw human cloning and penalize offenders with prison and heavy fines. No votes have been taken on a companion bill in the Senate.

Dolly, the first mammal cloned from an adult cell, was created in Scotland in 1997. Since then, whole herds of cattle, sheep, pigs and other animals have been cloned.

Researchers said Tuesday that, despite this experience, the success rate of cloning is still very low, only about 3 percent in some labs. Experts told the panel that fundamental flaws appear in cloned animals. Many die in the womb. Even those successfully born often have abnormalities such as obesity, congenital defects, altered muscle structure and changed metabolism.

"We expect half of our cloned animals to die," said Jonathan Hill, a researcher at Cornell University. Many starve in the womb, he said, because of placental failures.

Ryuzo Yanagimachi of the University of Hawaii said that even cloned mice that appear to be normal in his laboratory suffer from faulty gene expression.

He said the defects may not even manifest themselves in the short life of a mouse, but they could become serious and life threatening in humans that live for many decades.

A year after teen-ager's murder, suspect named Jesse James still at large

By Erica Werner
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — By some accounts, 15-year-old Nick Markowitz could have saved his life simply by walking away.

Instead, the boy who was allegedly kidnapped last year because of bad blood between his half-brother and a young drug dealer spent two days partying with his captors. Grand jury witnesses say he drank, smoked pot, swam in a hotel pool and told one girl his abduction would be a story to tell his grandkids.

Markowitz

Instead, according to prosecutors, Markowitz was taken to a forest near Santa Barbara last Aug. 8, made to hike about a mile to where a shallow grave awaited him and was shot nine times. His body was found four days later by hikers.

Four men have been arrested and have pleaded innocent to first-degree murder charges. Still being sought is the alleged ringleader: a 21-year-old, 5-foot-5 marijuana dealer named Jesse James Hollywood who is fond of custom cars, guns and once bought a house for $205,000.

Prosecutors say Markowitz was killed after Hollywood consulted with an attorney, learned the penalty for aggravated kidnapping was life in prison and decided to get rid of the boy.

"How could they do this? Is it real? How can you do this?" said Nick's mother, Susan Markowitz. "I don't feel I've even begun to grieve."

Like Hollywood, co-defendants Ryan Hoyt, Jesse Rugge and William Skidmore are 21. Defendant Graham Pressley is 18.

The four older suspects grew up together and the victim's half-brother, Ben Markowitz, now 23, was in their baseball league. Hollywood's father, Jack, was a coach.

None of the suspects had a lengthy criminal record. Hollywood once was charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol and another time with resisting arrest.

"I can't even believe a bunch of middle-class, decently educated, San Fernando Valley young men would abduct a 15-year-old whose older brother they knew and used to play baseball with ... and then simply because they couldn't figure out what to do with him, they decided, 'We'll kill him,'" said Ron Zonen, the case's lead prosecutor.

Hollywood's friends sold marijuana for him on consignment, according to grand jury testimony. He did not cut a menacing figure, but money, connections and swagger made him a leader.

Ben Markowitz was one of Hollywood's dealers. Prosecutors say he owed Hollywood about $1,200 for drugs and had tried to turn him in for insurance fraud of $35,000. As the bad blood escalated, Hollywood went to the restaurant where Markowitz's girlfriend worked and stiffed her on a bill; Markowitz broke out the windows of Hollywood's house.

Prosecutors said Hollywood and his cohorts were driving to the Markowitz house to return the favor when they saw Nick walking down the street, jumped out of their van and grabbed him.

It was an unpremeditated act, according to prosecutors. Nick Markowitz knew some of his captors, and they later said they liked him.

But none of them tried to save him after an alleged conversation between Hollywood and an attorney sealed his fate.

Hours later, Hoyt told detectives, Hollywood had him go to Santa Barbara to kill Markowitz to erase his own $1,200 drug debt. Investigators said Pressley dug the grave, and Hoyt allegedly shot the boy with a semiautomatic gun.

Hollywood was back in the Valley, celebrating his girlfriend's birthday.

"He had illusions of being a gangster," Ben Markowitz said during an interview in jail, where he is serving time for unrelated armed robberies. "He loves the fact that he didn't have to do anything and now he has the big name. I'm sure he loves that."

After the slaying, investigators traced Hollywood to Colorado Springs, Colo., where he once lived. The last confirmed sighting was Aug. 23, 2000, in the Valley. No one has come forward to claim a $30,000 reward.

Jack Hollywood said he has not seen or heard from his son since before he went to Colorado.

"I don't know where he is, whether he's dead or alive," he said. "I don't think he'll ever be able to get a fair trial here because he's been slammed so hard in the press. And I miss him. I just pray that he's OK."

For the Markowitzes, Jesse James Hollywood's capture would provide some relief.

"I would say that what we both feel is that not a one of those characters has any sympathy in our hearts," Jeff Markowitz said. "Whether they were at some times compassionate to him or talking to him at a normal level, they always knew what was intended."

Teens charged with 'bum stomping' deaths of homeless in Baltimore

BALTIMORE (AP) — Three teen-agers have been charged with murder for a four-month "bum stomping" spree that left three homeless men dead and five others hospitalized, police said Tuesday.

The teens have been charged with two deaths and are suspects in the third, police said. The beatings took place from March to June.

Sgt. Ernest Anderson said what began as robberies of drunk or sleeping homeless men became progressively more violent, and they called the attacks "bum stomping."

"These young men would come upon the victims when they were sleeping and strike," he said. "Literally, they seemed to be doing it for the sport of it."

Harold Waterbury Jr., 17, and Daniel Ennis Jr., 16, who lived in the same foster home, were arrested last month. Michael Farmer, 17, was arrested Tuesday at his new home in Garden City, Kan.

Waterbury faces two counts of first-degree murder, while Ennis and Farmer face one count each. All are charged as adults.

Public defender Bridgett Shepherd said her office would represent at least one of the teens, but she was unfamiliar with specific allegations.

"We're just getting into the case," Shepherd said.

Homicide detectives said the killings took place in a squatter's camp beneath an interstate overpass where 30 to 40 people have been living in cardboard shelters for several years. The victims, all middle-aged, were George D. Williams, Gerald J. Holle and Harry Lawhorn.

The arrests brought peace of mind to the city's estimated 3,000 transients, said Leslie Leitch, director of homeless services for Baltimore.

In Argentina, unemployed pray to patron saint of work for help

By Laurence Norman
Associated Press

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — A month after losing her job, Lidia Landaneta joined tens of thousands of unemployed Argentines in a pilgrimage Tuesday to petition San Cayetano, the patron saint of work.

"I've come to ask for a job for me and my son," said Landaneta, 50, a laid-off office assistant. She waved a wheat sheaf, symbolizing bread and work, while waiting to pay homage to the Roman Catholic saint many here turn to in hard times. "I have come to ask that he help us survive."

Argentina is in the grip of a three-year recession, fighting to avoid a debt default or devaluation, and the economic crisis shows few signs of easing. The national unemployment rate is 16.4 percent, with one of every three Argentines living on the edge of poverty. Hundreds line up daily at factories and businesses for the few advertised jobs.

Thousands waited in lines that stretched up to 35 city blocks to take part in the annual pilgrimage. Church officials estimated nearly a million people would file through San Cayetano Church during services Tuesday, the saint's feast day.

Hundreds of other unemployed workers threw up road blockades across the country for the second time in as many weeks to protest a government austerity plan aimed at helping ease the country's economic crisis.

AP Photo

A Catholic faithful holds wheat stalks, portraits of St. Cayetano and the keys to her home, as she and thousands of others give thanks and pray for help outside a church in a Buenos Aires neighborhood Tuesday. Amid double-digit unemployment and an economic crisis showing few signs of easing, tens of thousands of Argentina's unemployed pay homage to St. Cayetano, a patron saint of work many Argentines call upon during hard times.

Demonstrators were planning to keep up the protests through Thursday in an effort to persuade President Fernando De la Rua's government to reverse plans to cut salaries and pensions of public workers by 13 percent.

"The situation in the country is just awful," said Rene Cejas, a 52-year-old factor worker who was recently laid off and made the trip to touch the statue honoring the 16th-century Italian priest who gave his family fortune to the poor.

The national unemployment rate is 16.4 percent, with one of every three Argentines living on the edge of poverty. Hundreds line up daily at factories and businesses for the few advertised jobs.

"Coming here has helped me in the past. I've asked for help and that help has arrived," he said, adding that he hoped San Cayetano would help him and his two children find jobs.

Upon seeing the statue of San Cayetano, cradling the baby Jesus and surrounded by yellow flowers, many fell to their knees, clutching bouquets of flowers or rosaries.

For weeks, the unemployed have been camping out around the modest church in suburban Buenos Aires. Many traveled from the poorer cities in the Argentine countryside, waiting for days for a solitary moment with the saint.

"I just want to touch him, if even for an instant," said Clide Ourharriet, a 65-year-old retiree clutching flowers.

Ourharriet joined the line early Monday afternoon, undeterred by chilly winter temperatures.

Loudspeakers broadcast a Mass service Tuesday and the familiar hymns inspired many to burst out in song. Street vendors sold plastic statues of San Cayetano and special powders and incense used in petitions to the saint.

The annual pilgrimage was seen by church officials as a massive outpouring of faith in this heavily Roman Catholic country of 37 million. But they also said it underscored the increasing desperation of Argentines suffering through a prolonged economic downturn that has severely scaled back living standards in Latin America's most prosperous nation.

"You can't understand this without taking faith into account, but of course it has to do with the country's economic situation," said the Rev. Marcelo Gallina, dispensing blessings and confessions to the pilgrims waiting in line.

Hoisting an enormous statue of San Cayetano with the baby Jesus at his side, Maria Benitez, a 30-year-old housewife, said she had come to give thanks and praise because her husband had finally found work.

"Last year my husband didn't have work and I came here to ask for help. Now he has a job as a painter," she said. "Everything is bad right now, there's no work and people are without hope. This helps to give people some."

Queen Mother in Scotland for August vacation, one week after being hospitalized for illness

WICK, Scotland (AP) — The 101-year-old Queen Mother Elizabeth flew to her Castle of Mey in northeast Scotland on Tuesday, showing no effects from the illness that hospitalized her last week.

The mother of Queen Elizabeth II made her way unassisted down the steep steps from the aircraft to the tarmac and greeted local dignitaries before being driven out of the airport past about 60 waving well-wishers.

Among them was retired teacher Barbara Weaver, 66, of Indianapolis, who is camping nearby.

"She's an inspiration and we all love her dearly," said Weaver, who has watched the Queen Mother's arrival on three previous years. "She has loads of determination."

The Queen Mother was hospitalized in London for one night last week and had a blood transfusion to treat anemia. She celebrated her 101st birthday on Saturday.

The Queen Mother spends the first part of her August vacation at the Castle of Mey, near the town of John O'Groats at the northern tip of Scotland, then joins her elder daughter and family at Balmoral Castle.

The 16th-century Castle of Mey, built by the 4th Earl of Caithness overlooking the Pentland Firth, was bought by the Queen Mother in 1953.

A&M graduate sworn in as president of Bolivia; faces great expectations

By Vanessa Arrington
Associated Press

SUCRE, Bolivia — Jorge Quiroga became Bolivia's president Tuesday night, taking office amid expectations he can to fix the economy of South America's poorest nation, soothe social discontent and curb political corruption — all in the year left in his predecessor's term.

In his inauguration ceremony, the vice president donned the presidential sash relinquished a day earlier by Hugo Banzer, who stepped down to battle cancer.

Quiroga began by praising Banzer and the work he did for Bolivia.

"With our applause, let's honor the man, the leader, and the statesman who left deep footprints in our history," said Quiroga.

During his speech, Quiroga acknowledged the grave economic situation facing the country, and underlined the effects of the U.S.-funded coca eradication program and Bolivia's fight against contraband.

He called for unity in confronting economic ills, as well as support in fighting corruption.

Quiroga urged the creation of a new constitution to minimize the monopoly of mainstream political parties and open up politics to average Bolivians.

The 41-year-old chief executive also responded to critics that claim he is too young for the job.

"To them I say that what matters is not appearance, but ability, spirit and desire to move forward," Quiroga said, speaking from Sucre's Liberty House, where Simon Bolivar liberated Bolivia from Spain 176 years ago."

Much of his inauguration speech focused on Bolivia's natural gas resources, and he promised that their benefits will reach the country's poorest.

Banzer's term would have ended Aug. 6, 2002, and Quiroga will be ineligible to run again — for either president or vice president — until 2007.

Banzer was honored Tuesday by Bolivia's armed forces in Santa Cruz, where the retired general, who said the soldiers were like "family" to him, gave one more speech as president.

While Banzer returns to Washington, D.C., today to focus on battling his cancer, Quiroga must face a nation where six out of 10 people live in poverty, unemployment is nearing 10 percent and citizens have little faith in politicians.

Creating an emergency plan to stimulate the economy will be one of Quiroga's first steps after forming a new Cabinet. To earn the confidence of his countrymen, analysts say Quiroga must generate jobs and find ways to deal with the effects of neighboring Argentina's economic crisis.

Many Bolivians are hopeful that Quiroga, nicknamed "Tuto," may be just the man to work this magic. A U.S.-educated industrial engineer with experience in the financial sector, the 41-year-old Quiroga is perceived as capable in economic matters.

In contrast, the 75-year-old Banzer was often accused of being out of touch with the world's modern-day economy.

AP Photo

President Jorge Quiroga, center, stands during a ceremony at Casa de la Libertad in Sucre, Bolivia, on Tuesday. Quiroga, the former vice president, took charge of the nation Tuesday, replacing Hugo Banzer, who is suffering from cancer. Banzer's term would have ended Aug. 6, 2002.

Quiroga graduated with honors from Texas A&M University before getting his business degree from St. Edward's University in Austin. The Lone Star state is also where he met his wife, Virginia, who will be Bolivia's first American first lady.

"Quiroga represents a new generation that is beginning to replace the old leaders," said political and economic analyst Carlos Toranzo in La Paz. "We're in a moment of opportunity."

Flawlessly bilingual in Spanish and English, Quiroga graduated with honors from Texas A&M University before getting his business degree from St. Edward's University in Austin, Texas. The Lone Star state is also where he met his wife, Virginia, who will be Bolivia's first American first lady. They have four children.

After working for seven years with IBM in Austin, Quiroga returned to Bolivia and spent more than a decade in the private sector and in government positions.

But Quiroga will need to call on more than business skills to deal with Bolivia's discontented indigenous peasants, whose leader, Felipe Quispe, has threatened to resume road blockades if the new president fails to show he's serious about listening to their needs.

Many say the weakness of Banzer's government led to a lack of respect for the law and state institutions.

Quiroga will need to introduce "authority without authoritarianism," political analyst Horst Grebe told PAT television.

The new president may also face internal challenges within his political party — of which Banzer will remain the head — by older members who are uneasy with the more modern-minded sector led by Quiroga.

Another task on Quiroga's formidable to-do list include ensuring transparent elections next summer.

Quiroga will also continue a $5 billion project to export natural gas to California, which could bring up to a billion dollars a year to Bolivia.

Zulus recognize Mandela for fight against apartheid

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Former President Nelson Mandela was honored Tuesday by Zulu King Goodwill Zwelithini for bravery in leading South Africa's fight against apartheid.

Zwelithini presented Mandela with the inaugural King Shaka Award, a gold medallion bearing a representation of the militant Zulu leader, who reigned in the early 1800s. Zwelithini is Shaka's great grandson.

Mandela, 83, stepped down as president in 1999.

Many of us can take steps to conserve water

Although Midland officials continue to offer reassurances about our city's water supply, many of us can't help but be concerned when we see our supplying lake levels dropping perilously low and rain rarely falling from the sky.

While several West Texas communities, including San Angelo which takes surface water from the same Colorado Municipal Water District from which our city draws its water, have taken steps toward rationing and conservation, we have not done so in Midland.

But as our region's serious drought continues there is no reason that more of us can't take voluntary steps toward conservation.

Daily sprinkling of our lawns is one of the greatest drains on our water supply.

Most of us take pride in our property and want to see our lawns lush, green and trim, even though we may grimace when our costly water bill arrives in the mailbox.

Others grow frustrated at the sight of the abundance of runoff from lawns and sprinkler systems flooding our city's streets.

There are alternatives.

Keep Midland Beautiful offers sound tips on the wise use of water.

According to Keep Midland Beautiful, much of the water applied to lawns and gardens is never absorbed by plants. The greatest waste of water results from applying it too rapidly or too often. Water applied too rapidly is lost as runoff, which may carry polluting fertilizers and pesticides to streams and lakes. Some water evaporates when applied to bare, unmulched soil, or in the hot afternoon.

Therefore, Keep Midland Beautiful advises if you want to keep landscaping alive even in the worst summer heat, you should:

- Water lawns only when needed.
- Use native or adapted plants that do well on little water.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, Aug. 8, the 220th day of 2001. There are 145 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 8, 1974, President Nixon announced he would resign following new damaging revelations in the Watergate scandal.

On this date:

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte set sail for St. Helena to spend the remainder of his days in exile.

In 1876, Thomas A. Edison received a patent for his mimeograph.

In 1942, six convicted Nazi saboteurs who'd landed in the United States were executed in Washington, D.C.; two others received life imprisonment.

In 1945, President Truman signed the United Nations Charter.

In 1945, the Soviet Union declared war against Japan during World War II.

In 1953, the United States and South Korea initialed a mutual security pact.

In 1963, Britain's "Great Train Robbery" took place as thieves made off with 2.6 million pounds in banknotes.

In 1968, Richard M. Nixon was nominated for president at the Republican national convention in Miami Beach.

In 1973, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew branded as "damned lies" reports he had taken kickbacks from government contracts in Maryland, and vowed not to resign — which he eventually did.

In 1978, the United States launched Pioneer Venus 2, which carried scientific probes to study the atmosphere of Venus.

Ten years ago: Lebanese kidnappers freed British TV producer John McCarthy, held hostage for more than five years; however, a rival group abducted Frenchman Jerome Leyraud, threatening to kill him if any more hostages were released (Leyraud was freed three days later). The slain bodies of former Iranian Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar and his chief of staff were found in Bakhtiar's residence outside Paris.

Five years ago: President Clinton belittled Bob Dole's tax plan, vowing to oppose tax cuts that he said the country couldn't afford.

America becoming a nation of loners

WASHINGTON — For all the growth in the non-profit world and the miracles wrought by volunteers, America nonetheless is becoming a nation of loners. So says Robert D. Putnam of Harvard University in his recent book "Bowling Alone" (Simon & Schuster, 2000). From the Roanoke, Va., chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to the Charity League of Dallas to PTA's everywhere, long-standing organizations are losing members. This means a disturbing loss of "social capital."

Anderson

The trend is nowhere more apparent than in politics. In 1960, 62.8 percent of the voters went to the polls in the election that made John F. Kennedy president. By the Clinton-Dole race of 1996, that number had fallen to 48.9 percent. Baby boomers are less well-informed about public issues than their parents, and with members of Generation X, the gap is even greater.

"Daily newspaper readership among people under 35 fell from two-thirds in 1965 to one-third in 1990, at the same time that TV news viewership in this same age group fell from 52 percent to 41 percent." Putnam reported.

Soaring spending by candidates on larger and grander campaigns does not mean an increase in grass-roots participation. It indicates instead the growing professionalization of politics, now commandeered by consultants presiding over hordes of paid workers. The same is true with the proliferation of nongovernmental organizations often designed to influence the political process. These salaried staffs are supported by checks from "members" who do nothing but contribute. Certainly this is the case with the dramatically expanding AARP, which has its headquarters in Washington — the better to influence legislation. It is a protector of interests, but hardly a creator of community.

The disengagement is civic as well as political. Between 1973 and 1974, and 1993 and 1994, the number of individuals who served as an officer of a club or organization declined by 42 percent; individuals who worked for a political party fell by an identical amount; individuals who served on a committee for a local organization plunged by 39 percent; individuals who attended a meeting on town or school affairs dropped by 35 percent; and those who showed up at a political rally or speech declined by 34 percent.

Nor has religion been spared. When baby boomers were in their 20s, they were more distanced from institutions of faith than their parents had been at the same age. As they grew older, the boomers returned to church and temple, but at a lower rate than the middle-aged had a generation before. Citing estimates by sociologist Wade Roof, Putnam writes that two-thirds of all baby boomers reared in a religious tradition dropped out, and less than half have returned. Putnam notes the increasingly obvious result, saying the "country is becoming ever more clearly divided into two groups: 'the devoutly observant' and the 'entirely unchurched.'"

One area that is flourishing is of self-help groups. Alcoholics Anonymous and support programs for those going through divorce, breast cancer or other traumas are drawing a large following. But they confirm a pattern of directing time and energy inward, and not toward the wider community. Participation in sports is falling too. Fewer Americans are playing softball, tennis or volleyball, or going skiing, hunting or fishing. More of them are buying treadmills and workout equipment to use at home. This is especially true among the young. It is older people who are showing up at exercise classes.

As for philanthropy, citizens of this country are donating a smaller share of their personal income than at any time since the 1940s. Putnam puts the blame partly on "business, economic distress and the pressures associated with two-career families." He also points to long commutes that gobble time and fragment life so one is no longer living and working in a single community, compelling loyalty. Even more significant, he said, has been the privatized leisure of television and electronic entertainment. The impact is especially important on the young.

Reform Party becomes a piece of history

WASHINGTON — The last rites were read for the remnants of Ross Perot's Reform Party at its recent skeletal convention in Nashville. It is nothing now but an unmourned piece of history.

Once the bright hope of independent-minded government reformers, the party is dead, flat broke and ideologically mangled beyond recognition. Although no third party has ever managed to overtake either of the two major parties, a decade ago the Reform crowd seemed prepared to shake up the entire political establishment.

Means

In 1992, political novice Perot won 19 percent of the presidential vote, forcing both Democrats and Republicans to embrace such causes as balancing the budget and imposing term limits on political service. But it was all downhill from there. Conservative extremist Patrick Buchanan delivered the fatal blow last year with a weird presidential campaign that was a classic example of how not to seek the White House.

There is a message here for President Bush: Don't swing too far right on those contentious social issues.

Buchanan muscled his way into Reform Party leadership by abandoning the Republican Party and taking over a disorganized convention, stacking it with aggressive supporters who overwhelmed the original Perot forces. He seized control of the $12.6 million the party had earned in federal election money. Then he promptly blew it in an odd, egotistical presidential race in which he won only 0.5 percent of the vote, making the party ineligible for future federal campaign funds. Its treasury, one spokesman estimated, now holds only a few thousand dollars.

At the convention, the marginalized troops were still bamboozled by Buchanan, who delivered a speech but stayed only 30 minutes and took no questions. Only 187 delegates attended out of an authorized 600 participants. But they came determined to transform the platform of their devastated party from a crusade to make government more efficient into a dogmatic voice on the far right fringe.

These people bear no resemblance to the cool-headed crusaders of the old Reform Party who believed that deficit reduction would solve all the nation's ills. Even Minnesota Gov. Jesse Ventura, the party's most famous member, has left the fold in disgust.

The platform that the delegates approved took an ideological hard line endorsing all Buchanan's inflammatory positions. It called for a rejection of international trade alliances — including U.S. withdrawal from the World Trade Organization, the North American Free Trade Agreement, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank. It also called for diplomatic isolation, including withdrawal from NATO and the United Nations.

It demanded that affirmative action be abolished, abortion criminalized, homosexuals kicked out of the military, gay marriages outlawed, military efforts to block immigration stepped up, amnesty for illegal immigrants denied, embryonic stem cell tissue research outlawed, hate crime laws opposed and God returned to the classroom (whatever that means). Whew.

This is, of course, not a serious document from serious people out to seriously influence the national dialogue. It is the sort of radical rant that made Buchanan famous and ultimately destroyed him.

When he announced that he would become a turncoat and seek the Reform Party nomination, Buchanan intoned, "This is our last chance to save our republic before she disappears into a godless new world order ..." He was, however, no savior of American sovereignty.

For a time Buchanan had lived a charmed life, bobbing back and forth from politics to journalism, spouting nutty opinions and promoting his personal ambitions. As a GOP presidential candidate, he threw a scare into President George H. W. Bush in the 1992 Republican primaries and even won the New Hampshire primary in 1996. He claimed enough conservative supporters to make Republicans worry aloud that his defection might harm the GOP.

But his writings and speeches grew increasingly shrill, full of hostility toward women, Jews, racial minorities and practically everyone who is not just like himself — a right-wing, white male Roman Catholic. Even William Buckley Jr., founder of the conservative National Review, condemned Buchanan for being anti-Semitic.

It was Buchanan's 1999 book, "A Republic, Not an Empire," however, that finally cut him off from reality and responsible political leadership. The book is full of pro-Nazi revisionism, arguing that Germany's Adolf Hitler posed no real threat to the United States and was driven to madness by our failure to appease him before World War II.

Sen. John McCain, demonstrating his usual courage and intelligence, publicly denounced Buchanan's views as "unacceptable" and said he should be driven from the Republican Party.

First war Israel loses will be its last, for certain

On a recent visit to Washington, Uzi Landau, Israel's minister for public security, predicted to me that another war would soon come to his country unless it "continues to show resolve and unity." In fact, the war has never stopped since Israel's founding 53 years ago. Between June 2, when Yasser Arafat announced a ceasefire, and Aug. 1, there were 961 attacks against Israelis (not counting rock or firebomb throwing), according to an Israel Defense Forces spokesperson.

There are dividends from Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's decision not to play patsy any longer in the face of Palestinian provocations and to pre-emptively strike known murderers and others committed to Israel's destruction. More people are able to see the folly, not only of the land-for-peace formula, but of any formula based on the notion that only what Israel does or does not do affects peace prospects. A press release announcing a rally of British Muslims outside the U.S. Embassy in London on Aug. 2, included this revealing sentence: "There is no doubt in the minds of any Muslim that there can never be any peace in Palestine until the State of Israel is eradicated." That is an honest statement by Israel's enemies that ought to be clear.

Thomas

The familiar scenario in the Middle East goes like this: Israel's enemies, unable to eradicate the Jewish state after five tries from without and multiple tries from within, use the West to pressure Israel into swallowing the notion that peace is only a few acres of land away. Israel gives up land, but peace remains as distant as a carrot hanging on a stick in front of a donkey. When Israel refuses to give any more land without reciprocal and agreed-upon action by her sworn enemies, rock-throwing and suicide bombings ensue. More land is ceded but it's never enough, and when Israel again asks for reciprocity, it doesn't get it and refuses to give up additional land until it does. Then the cycle of violence resumes.

Even the former American ambassador to Israel, Martin Indyk, grudgingly acknowledged what was clear to anyone with eyes to see and ears to hear when he said last month that the old Oslo accords were a "failure" because Arafat "never really gave up violence." Not only that, the Palestinian Authority was training terrorist bomb-makers as far back as 1995 at the height of the Oslo process, according to Enis Mahmoud Namoura, a top PA terrorist who was serving as one of Arafat's personal bodyguards until his recent arrest by Israel. How credible were Arafat's pronouncements about peace when he was planning and making war all along?

For a change, Israeli public opinion favors Sharon's activist approach against terrorism. Even many leftists have had an awakening to the folly of making peace with those whose idea of peace is killing or expelling every Jew from the land.

If another war comes, Israel's challenge will be to confine it to Arafat and his legions of well-armed "police," who are not police at all but soldiers whose huge numbers violate Oslo. If any or all the Arab states join in (which is unlikely but always possible), it will be more difficult than in any of the previous five wars for Israel to prevail, but prevail she must. The first war Israel loses will be her last, while Israel's enemies always live to fight another day.

If Uzi Landau is right and war comes, the price exacted by Israel should be so high that Arafat (or whoever follows him) will want to make a real peace of accommodation and co-existence, not a false peace that allows him to try again.

Horror of tyranny returns to Nigeria — in new political play called 'King Baabu'

By Glenn McKenzie
Associated Press

LAGOS, Nigeria — Generals vie for power as a megalomanic dictator spends lavishly and tosses enemies into a pit.

The scenes are grimly familiar to Nigerians, two years after the military junta handed over power to elected civilians. In "King Baabu," Nobel Prize-winner Wole Soyinka's first play since returning to his West African homeland, Soyinka is bringing those memories of army atrocities to life — and warning against future ones.

The 67-year-old playwright knows who he'd like in the audience: the former leaders of Nigeria's corrupt military regimes, who forced him into exile and thrive unpunished even today.

"Those who've raped this country think they're covered in a cloak of immunity. Yes, I'd like them to be touched by this play," Soyinka said at the world premiere Monday night in Lagos.

The last time Soyinka tried to bring a play to the stage in Nigeria, in 1994, he was forced to flee the country after receiving word that the then-dictator, Gen. Sani Abacha, was planning his arrest.

Although he has returned regularly to Nigeria to speak about human rights issues since Abacha's death in 1998, Soyinka said "King Baabu" is his real revenge against the dictator and his cohorts.

"From time to time, one must rub the faces of complacent humanity into the blood and muck so they understand this is what other people go through," said Soyinka, who now lives in Atlanta and teaches at Emory University.

President Olusegun Obasanjo's election in 1999 ended 16 years of repressive military rule. The army remains influential, and Soyinka's is the first major work in Nigeria to openly criticize it.

The play's main character, a greedy but dimwitted Gen. Basha Bash, draws loosely on Shakespeare's Macbeth and Alfred Jarry's Ubu Roy, producers say.

Yet the main inspiration for the character, who changes his name to King Baabu after seizing power in a bloodless coup hatched by his wife, is Abacha, also a coup leader who tried to transform himself into a civilian ruler by discarding his military uniform for traditional robes.

"They heap indignity on their victims time and again by denying their atrocities," said Soyinka. "This is a play about the total corruptibility of power."

Soyinka was imprisoned in Nigeria for almost two years for supporting the separatist movement that became the 1960s' Biafra war. Under Abacha in the 1990s, Soyinka says, he suffered harassment, arbitrary searches of his home, false accusations and insults.

"King Baabu" is the 17th play by Soyinka, who is best-known for his 1981 autobiography "Ake: The Years of Childhood." He earned the Nobel Prize in literature in 1986 for his African storytelling.

"My suffering is nothing compared to many others," he said. "Many suffered merely for having my picture."

Lagos' National Theater, where "King Baabu" is being staged, is itself a monument to military excess.

A decrepit monolith surrounded by swamp, the concave-roofed theater was built in 1977 by former junta leader Yakubu Gowon to resemble an army officer's cap. Millions of dollars were allegedly squandered during its construction.

Today, the theater's moldy carpets, drooping lights and peeling wood-panel walls are guarded by surly soldiers and police, whose sign on their office door snarls: "If you dislike the police, next time you're in trouble call a thug."

Soyinka's play is filled with Nigerian gallows humor, including a torturer who claims he treats "prisoners like my own family members" and the king's 7-year-old son, who accidentally kills a wire-bound prisoner with an electric "truth prod."

The production strikes an uneasy chord with the Nigerian audience. A few government officials and businessmen were in the crowd on opening night and some left early. Others cheered and laughed heartily at the actors' caricatures of soldiers and their civilian collaborators.

"It is a good play, but perhaps it comes a little bit too soon. These things are still in our memory and its very difficult to step back and see it played out in front of you," said Sammy Olagbaju, vice chairman of a Nigerian oil firm.

First skate park drawings unveiled

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

If preliminary designs are any indication, the William-Sam Memorial Skate Park will surpass just about every expectation Midland skaters had for it.

If estimates concerning square footage are accurate, the 25,000-square-foot facility — which will be built inside the 116-plus acre Beal Park in southwest Midland — will blow away the $240,000-plus dedicated thus far toward making the skate park a reality.

Tuesday, Midland skaters got a sneak peak at the new park designed by the Arizona-based Site Design Group Inc. They saw a multi-use facility that will accommodate skaters and skateboarders of all levels. It is a park that features some areas where flow is a main concern and other areas that emphasize the street style elements — ledges, rails, etc.

They also saw a park, which if not changed, will be double the size of Abilene's. It will be one of the premier facilities in this part of the country.

"This is a definite competition level skate park," said Mark Leone, a senior designer for the firm located in Tempe, Ariz. "This will be in the skate board magazines that are distributed globally. I don't see why skateboard videos will not be shot here."

Marcus Mitcham, 23, said Site Design has lived up to its reputation to this point. The firm has designed facilities in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Colorado and Utah.

"I have been to a lot of the parks they have designed, so I knew what to expect," Mitcham said. "I am glad they got these people to design it. I have been to parks someone spent a lot of money on but weren't designed well. You can feel it when you skate it. It doesn't work as well."

The obvious problem with what was unveiled Tuesday was cost. Leone said the cost of the park will be $12-15

Effects from 'dating violence' often linger

By Kristine Aleman
MRT Correspondent

A new study shows dating violence can cause more than just physical damage to the young women involved. One episode could have effects intense enough to lure teens into a difficult emotional journey for months, or even years.

"When you talk about dating violence, there is a wide spectrum. It doesn't necessarily have to do with having sexual intercourse, it has to do a lot with the pressure to do anything you're not ready to do," said Christina Hammon, education director for the Midland Rape Crisis Center.

Physical date violence was defined in the study as being shoved, slapped or hit and sexual violence was defined as being forced into any sexual activity. Victims of date violence were found to be:

- eight to nine times more likely to have attempted suicide,
- more likely to engage in unhealthy weight control, such as eating disorders and the use of diet pills or laxatives,
- likely to engage in risky sexual behavior before the age of 15, including having multiple partners and
- four to six times more likely to become pregnant

"Not a huge portion of our clients are a result of date violence, but we do see clients in abusive situations," said Carla Holeva, vice-president of community affairs for Planned Parenthood of West Texas. "Sometimes they don't even know they're in an abusive relationship; that's the scary part. They don't realize that we don't consider theirs a normal relationship."

Judy Dean, therapy director at the Midland Rape Crisis Center, said many survivors of dating violence and date rape will ✔ Approximately one out of every three high school and college students has experienced sexual, physical, verbal or emotional violence in dating relationships.

✔ Female teens cause more minor injuries than male teens, but are also likely to receive more significant physical injuries and are more likely to be sexually victimized.

✔ A study of more than 1,000 high school students found that 45 percent of females and 43 percent of males reported being the recipient of violence from dating partners at least once.

✔ Girls were much more likely to be punched and forced to engage in sexual activity against their will. Boys were significantly more likely to be pinched, slapped, scratched and kicked.

Families in need get free school supplies

By Hillary S. Condon

Thirteen-year-old Gabby Hernandez lives with her grandmother, her cousin and her little brother. She wasn't sure if she would be able to afford school supplies before she got to Abell Junior High this year, and she knew her grandmother couldn't afford it.

Now, she said, she can have a good year, and the first day of school may not be as stressful.

"My grandmother couldn't afford to get us all of this," she said, opening a pink bag filled with the supplies needed for students in her grade level. "Look, there's pencils, pens, paper, notebooks, even erasers. I think it's going to be fun this year."

Her brother, Brandon, who will enter the second grade this year, said he wasn't able to get nice supplies like this last year, and excitedly showed his sister the package of tissues included in his package.

"Look," he said. "I'm ready now."

Volunteers at the St. Vincent de Paul agency worked last week to hand out supplies by appointment to a total of 702 needy families, and through Wednesday, they will give them to walk-ins. The supplies were donated through a partnership between several donors and the West Texas Food Bank.

The Abell-Hanger Foundation donated $11,500 and the Hext Family Foundation donated an additional $500. Volunteers from the West Texas Food Bank secured

Brief showers tease some Midlanders

By Kristine Aleman
MRT Correspondent

Mother Nature felt like playing a little game with Midlanders Tuesday afternoon when clouds hid the familiar clear sky and hints of a cool breeze could be briefly felt in certain parts of town.

In fact, those who spent the afternoon in west and northwest Midland actually experienced something that has become increasingly rare around these parts: a brief downpour of much-needed rain. But it didn't last long. Less than 15 minutes after it started, the rain stopped. But before it did, some minor street flooding resulted, although the water quickly disappeared.

The National Weather Service, located at Midland International Airport, officially recorded the amount of Tuesday's rainfall as a "trace," but forecasters said some Midland locations had up to .03 inches of rain.

Still, for others, including those who were in downtown Midland, there was no rain at all.

Midland has not seen a significant amount of rain since May 31 of this year, when a little more than .10 of an inch was recorded, according to Craig Stewart, senior weather specialist at CBS 7. June brought only .01 of an inch of rain and in July only a trace of rain fell from the Permian Basin sky.

"The rain we've seen the past couple of months has been few and far between," said George Kanuck, meteorologist at NewsWest 9. "It's much needed rain, but you have to be in the right place at the right time."

While rainfall has been spotty at best, Stewart said any amount would be welcomed.

"Any kind of rain will help green up all the grazing lands and grasses before winter time comes," he said. "We need it for water tables underneath the ground and lakes. Plus it will be less of a strain on the water people are using right now."

However, Stewart said any amount of rain received this summer will not be enough to end the Permian Basin's severe drought.

Kanuck agreed.

"This drought has been around for years," he said. "It will take several good days of rainfall to take care of it."

According to the National Weather Service, dry conditions are expected to return today.

The forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-90s and a southerly wind reaching five to 15 miles per hour. Partly cloudy skies will continue throughout tonight and Thursday morning with lows in the lower 70s and highs in the upper 90s.

No rain is in the forecast.

VIOLENCE: Lack of role models plays part in abusive cycle

attempt suicide, get very depressed, physically abuse themselves and turn to an eating disorder to get back control of their life before ever telling anyone. Survivors often will become permiscuous because of low self-worth.

"Some will hold on to it until it affects another relationship. Then they'll realize it and come into counseling," Ms. Dean said. "They'll realize they didn't get the help they needed, and will have to deal with it anyway."

Young individuals involved in abuse are more likely to turn to a friend before telling parents, counselors or anyone at all, Ms. Hammon said. She added sometimes it is up to that friend to tell someone.

"I think if parents see something, then of course the child is going to have to include them, but some of this abuse is not visual," Ms. Holeva said. "There is still unfortunately some women ashamed to associate with anyone. They feel like they shouldn't tell anyone."

Counselors say dating violence occurs on all levels, in all ethnic backgrounds and in all economic backgrounds, and each woman who seeks help usually has reasons to justify the actions of the boyfriend.

"The violence is usually caused by their innocence, their naivity. They feel the person they're around wouldn't hurt anybody," Ms. Dean said. "They have to be raped to find out they can't trust anybody."

Ms. Hammon said a lack of role models play a part in why young people get caught in abusive relationships, and both partners need to be educated by parents and other trusted adults.

"Not only is it important to teach a child and teen when to recognize abuse, but also to train our young people to notice when they need to put the brakes on and to be aware of when the other person may feel pressured," she said.

Parents should take some precautions once their child begins to form his or her own social life. Ms. Hammon added it is important for parents to know what friends their child is going out with and whom he or she is dating. There is also one simple precaution parents can take each time their child goes out.

"If you have a child you know is going out on a date, make sure they have 20 bucks with them," she said. "That way, if they get in an uncomfortable situation, they can take a cab home and won't have to rely on the other person."

However, most important, as in any relationship, counselors say parents must communicate with their children.

"Have open communication with your children," Ms. Dean said. "If they don't talk about it, it doesn't exist."

Parents should talk to their kids about safety issues and trust issues, especially before their teens head off to college, where Ms. Dean says young and innocent women are confronted by men whose hormones are raging.

"Trust has to be earned. You don't just automatically trust someone you meet," she said. "Parents feel their kids know all this, but they're not in their little hometown where they feel protected by friends. It's a whole new setting and they're just not prepared."

SUPPLIES: Many in need rely on agency for support supply lists and bought the goods.

Then the supplies came to Mary Leonard, a volunteer for St. Vincent de Paul, who bagged them according to grade level. She said so far, she has been able to supply all of those in need who came to the agency.

Ms. Leonard said she appreciates the community's efforts on a more personal level. With eight grandchildren to support, she relies on others as well.

"I love it, because it's helping people," she said. "With the family I have, I have to go and ask for help. So I'm willing to donate my help, too."

St. Vincent de Paul Agency Manager Sherry Cox called the collaboration a "Godsend," and said this time of year is one of the hardest for low-income families.

"It's been wonderful," she said. "This is the time of the year that parents have to sell their food stamps, and make miracles happen to get supplies for their kids. We've done this before, but never on this scale ... the donors have been wonderful."

Parent Lisa Valle agreed. She worked three different jobs to support her three children, but had to cut down to just one job recently. As a single mom, she said she just couldn't work so many hours.

Now, she has to rely on groups like St. Vincent de Paul to help her family in times of need.

"I think it's pretty neat," she said. "I like it because it helps our low-income families who can't get all of the supplies. It's a great help for single moms like me."

And like Miss Hernandez, Ms. Valle said she thinks this year will be better for her kids. Of course, they're already excited to go back to school, she said, especially 5-year-old Emilio, who will start kindergarten next week.

"They're all excited," she said. "Especially the little one, he hates to miss out on school days."

PARK: Price tag could go as high as $500,000

a square foot. At $12 a square foot, a 25,000 square foot facility would cost $300,000.

City of Midland Community Services Director Monette Burke said Wednesday she was told a similar park in Abilene cost $20 a square foot. That would result in a total price tag of $500,000.

Additional costs of fencing and lighting are among the differences in cost per square foot.

According to Ms. Burke, approximately $243,000 has been set aside to pay for the skate park. Of that, $190,000 was committed by the City Council. A private group donated nearly $54,000 for the construction of the facility.

"Hopefully we will do our homework prior to construction phase," Ms. Burke said. "We absolutely don't want to start constructing and then run out of money."

Leone said, "In initial stages, you want to not even look in that direction and go for it. A lot of times, you present something tangible and it is like 'Here it is and this is what it will cost.' The money created motivation for fund-raisers. Sometimes the cash shows up."

The park could open as early as next spring.

Those wishing to donate money to the project can call Jack Swallow at the Permian Basin Area Foundation.

Those looking for more information on Site Design Group Inc. can go to its Web site — www.sitedesigngroup.com.

The park could open as early as next spring.

As many as 1,000 evacuated from fire

SAN MARCOS (AP) — Several San Marcos subdivisions were being evacuated Tuesday evening after a brush fire that had been under control caught its second wind, officials said.

"The fire is out of control, and we've got it going toward the subdivisions," said Sgt. Allen Bridges, spokesman for Hays County Sheriff's Department. "We're doing all we can to save these people's homes."

Firefighters from about 10 departments worked to regain control of the blaze as authorities asked an estimated 1,000 residents to leave homes in the fire's path, west of San Marcos, officials said.

High eastern winds replenished the blaze Tuesday evening after authorities had it under control earlier in the day.

Two firefighters from the South Hays and Buda departments were taken to Central Texas Medical Center for heat exhaustion, said Lt. Ryan Jordan, South Hays Fire Department spokesman.

Eminem's mom entitled to only $1,600 of $25,000 settlement

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. — A Macomb County Judge ruled that Eminem's mother is entitled to only about $1,600 of a $25,000 settlement she won against her son.

Debbie Mathers originally brought a $11 million defamation of character lawsuit against the hip-hop star in 1999. In June, Macomb County Circuit Court Judge Mark Switalski ruled in her favor for $25,000.

But on Monday, Switalski ruled that $23,354.25 of that figure belonged to Mathers' attorney, Fred Gibson.

Lawyers on both sides of the case say the ruling is Mathers' fault, because a deal she made with Gibson concerning her ex-husband, John Briggs, entitled the lawyer to more than the standard one-third of the settlement.

Mathers sued her son, whose real name is Marshall Bruce Mathers III, for defamation and intentional infliction of emotional distress over lyrics on his debut CD, "The Slim Shady LP."

Mathers told the Detroit Free Press Monday that she is writing a book about her life raising Eminem.

CANTON, Ohio — Fans in Macy Gray's hometown booed and laughed as she struggled through the national anthem before the Pro Football Hall of Fame exhibition game.

Wearing a Cleveland Browns jersey and a large cap, the Grammy winner sang an offbeat, tentative version of the "Star Spangled Banner" on Monday night as her signature raspy voice grew ever more wobbly.

Boos and laughter started when she stumbled over the words. A low-flying formation of planes drowned her out the end.

Hours earlier in a brief telephone interview with The Repository from her parents' home, Gray, whose real name is Natalie McIntyre, said she only agreed to the performance to please her mother.

Asked if she was nervous about singing the anthem, Gray said, "I don't know, I have no idea what to expect."

Gray also said she worked briefly for the Hall of Fame in summer 1987.

"I was a tour guide and I got fired after, like, a week," she said.

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. — Bobby Dall, bassist for the '80s glam metal group Poison, is recovering from emergency back surgery.

Dall injured his spinal cord while performing last week, the band's agents said.

Poison was to have performed at the South Dakota State Fair in Huron on Sunday. Instead, Dall traveled a few hours away to the University of Nebraska Medical Center for surgery. Dr. Robert Singer, who replaced several discs in the musician's spine, said Dall will need at least six months of recovery.

Poison canceled the rest of its tour dates through Sept. 2.

"On behalf of Poison, I apologize to our fans and the promoters for having to cancel these dates," lead singer Bret Michaels said in a news release. "Bobby Dall is my best friend and at this moment our only concern is for his well-being."

Poison's hits include "Every Rose Has Its Thorn" and "Talk Dirty to Me."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Ossie Davis cited his own mother as an example of productive aging while speaking on the subject to a group of black doctors.

"We look upon aging as a privilege not to be moaned, but as an adventure to be savored," Davis told the National Medical Association on Sunday.

Davis, 83, has appeared in Spike Lee's "Do the Right Thing" and "Malcolm X." His TV acting credits include the '90s sitcom "Evening Shade."

He said his mother is "now 103 years old and still going strong."

"She still tells me what to do," said Davis, who also is a writer, producer and director.

LANSING, Mich. — Former "Survivor" contestant Michael Skupin, who had been mulling a career in politics, says he won't be running for the U.S. Senate in 2002.

Skupin said Monday he can't take the necessary time away from his family and his new company, Michael Skupin Ministries, which fights alcohol and drug addiction. Skupin also co-owns a religious software company.

"I have three children and one on the way and raising a good Christian family where the father is home is more important than any position," he said in a news release. "I want to be certain I'm doing the right thing for them."

In June, he announced that he was considering a run against U.S. Sen. Carl Levin, a popular Democrat from Detroit who has served in the Senate since 1978.

Skupin, from the Detroit suburb of White Lake Township, said Monday that he plans to stay active in the Republican party and possibly consider another race in the future.

"I know that I will have the opportunity again when the timing is better," Skupin told The Associated Press.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, Aug. 8, 2001:
You create your desires through visualization and positive thinking. As a result, you might spend a lot of time alone daydreaming or simply centering. Trust in your own judgment, even though you will have two people you confide in — one definitely will be a woman. If you are single, you won't choose to share much of your private life with others. You might go for a special and unique relationship. If you are attached, the two of you will thrive when you are away from home. Plan a special retreat and mini-trips. ARIES opens your mind.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ You are personality plus. Your sense of humor comes out with family and roommates. Funnel your energy and your unusually high creativity. You succeed through focus. Accept another's caring gesture. Tonight: Whatever makes the Ram smile.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ Step back and you'll find that a lot of what you have been concerned with is not an issue. Use a break or lunchtime to let someone know how much you care. Your intuition points you in the right direction with a work project. Tonight: Get a good night's sleep.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ You flourish as long as you remain in groups. Your verbal skills bring friends, admirers and associates. Discuss a long-term proposition. You find suggestions helpful, and they allow you to tighten up a project. Network to your heart's content. Tonight: Where the crowds are.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Take charge of a difficult situation. You have the ability to understand a partner. Take responsibility for getting a project moving. Others respect your expertise. You attract others — both personally and professionally. Tonight: Just ask.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Give serious thought to a trip, especially if it involves a special person in your life. The closeness you achieve could delight both of you. Legal matters, writing or in-laws could play a substantial role. Avoid all gossip; demand facts. Tonight: Break away and do something totally new.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Associates want to work with you. Knowing full well where you are headed, work as duo. Express your high ideals, and others will excitedly support you. You go a long way with a smile and your willingness. Attend a meeting. Know that your attitude is contagious. Tonight: Invite someone to share a banana split.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ You like what you hear, and you want to hear more. By simply encouraging others but not getting up on the platform, you allow them to express themselves. A boss or parent likes your style. Count on your Libran diplomatic ways. Tonight: Jump on a special invitation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ All work and no play makes the Scorpion dull. Nevertheless, you will put your nose to the grindstone with thoughts of better days to come. Curb daydreaming about that upcoming vacation or weekend. A call will touch another. Start dialing. Tonight: Mow the lawn, or do some errands.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Answers come quickly when you ask for an associate's help. Your understanding of a problem, combined with this person's willingness, creates a determined, unbeatable team. Brainstorm over a leisurely meal, or allow a meeting to carry over into dinner. Tonight: Be spontaneous! Someone thinks you're close to perfect.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ You can count on others' generosity. Someone pays you an enormous compliment. Read between the lines. Could there be more here? Be honest with yourself, as you might want to prevent a potential problem or, on the other hand, greet a new flirtation. It's your call. Tonight: Call home, and ask a loved one out for dinner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ Conversation ends a work problem. You find yourself smiling, no matter what you do. A positive attitude helps make your day work. Others seem to say yes naturally. Schedule an appointment for a haircut. Tonight: Call a buddy you haven't seen for a while.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ You choose to splurge on a special friend. On the way, you decide to treat yourself as well. Understand that there are many ways of having a good time without spending money left and right. Consider what might delight another and do just that. Tonight: Worry little. Just be yourself.

Opening lead: King of ♡

Given the 3-2 club division, South's five diamonds is an excellent contract, providing a simple precaution is taken early in the play. Can you see where declarer went wrong?

Once North raised diamonds freely, South's jump to game is hard to fault, even though three no-trump cannot be defeated as the cards lie. West led the king of hearts. How would you plan the play?

At the table, declarer won with the ace of hearts, drew trumps ending in hand and tried to force West to win a club trick by leading a club, rising with the ace when West followed low. South returned to hand with a heart ruff and reverted to clubs, rising with the king when West again failed to produce the queen. East won the third round of clubs and shifted to a spade. Down one. Can you do better?

As is so often the case, South's mistake came at the very first trick. To keep East off lead while dummy's clubs were being developed, all that was needed was for declarer to allow West's king of hearts to win! The defense cannot do better than continue hearts. Declarer wins with dummy's ace, discarding a club from hand. After drawing trumps, it is routine to set up the clubs with a ruff, return to dummy with a trump and discard two spades on the good clubs. Declarer loses only one trick each in hearts and spades.

Former prisons chief on trial for VitaPro deal

By Kristen Hays
Associated Press

HOUSTON — A federal jury will decide whether a former Texas prisons chief took kickbacks in a scheme to distribute a soy-based meat substitute in state lockups or simply accepted consulting fees on the eve of his post-corrections career.

"You're about to hear the story of a man who worked his way up to be executive director of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice," federal prosecutor Gary Cobe told the jury of James A. "Andy" Collins on the first day of the two- to three-week trial on Tuesday.

"And then, through greed, he threw it all away because he decided to start lining his own pockets," Cobe said.

Collins is on trial for bribery, fraud, conspiracy and money laundering in connection with a contract to feed the meat substitute VitaPro to Texas inmates and earn money for the state by marketing the nutrient elsewhere.

Prosecutors say he took at least $20,000 from Yank Barry, president of Montreal-based VitaPro Foods Inc., in exchange for a five-year, $33.7 million contract in 1995. Barry was indicted with Collins in 1999 and is being tried alongside him on the same charges.

Defense attorney Bill White said Collins, 50, was looking for ways to make the nation's second-largest prison system self-sufficient. VitaPro, a granular substance that can supplement or replace meat in various dishes, offered a chance to save money and generate income through sales to institutions in other states, White said.

"This was his baby," White said.

Both inmates and staff often avoided eating the unpopular meat substitute, however, and the state's VitaPro stockpiles eventually were used to feed hogs at prison farms.

But White said the plan fell apart when Patrick Graham, a private juvenile prison director from Louisiana, offered Collins a chance to head his facility after Collins retired in Texas.

Cobe said Collins accepted the Louisiana offer while still running Texas prisons and was told to back out of the deal or resign. Collins ordered his staff to extend the initial one-year, five-figure VitaPro deal to a five-year multimillion-dollar contract, two days before announcing his retirement in September 1995. The retirement was effective Dec. 31 that year.

Cobe said Collins created a fake company in November 1995 where Barry could wire kickbacks for the VitaPro deal. The money was wired to Collins' company in early December, the prosecutor said.

In February 1996, when Collins was off the Texas state payroll, he transferred money from the company's account into his personal bank account, Cobe said. Collins also had gone to work for VitaPro as a $1,000-a-day consultant.

Michael Ramsey, Barry's attorney, said his client paid Collins in advance for consulting work he actually did while a "lame duck" in the prison system.

Graham, who was sentenced to prison for 10 years for accepting $150,000 to plan a convicted Texas murderer's escape in an unrelated matter, was an informant for the FBI regarding Collins, Barry and the VitaPro deal.

He was a key informant on other federal corruption cases, including the case against former Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards, who was convicted in May 2000 of federal racketeering charges.

Ramsey said Tuesday that Collins didn't seek the VitaPro contract to get kickbacks. Ramsey said he went for the deal because it was good business with moneymaking potential for Texas, and Graham is a convicted felon with no credibility.

"He is the functional equivalent, if you will, of a human cockroach," Ramsey said of Graham.

If convicted, Collins and Barry face up to 70 years in prison and fines of up to $2 million on all charges.

Lawmaker denies hitting schoolmaster

HOUSTON (AP) — A state representative on Tuesday denied he ever hit the president of his children's school during a confrontation.

But Harsh Kumar, the president of the Montessori School of Downtown & Medical Center, maintains Rep. Garnet Coleman hit him several times after the two began arguing on Monday.

Coleman, D-Houston, was arrested after the confrontation and charged with misdemeanor assault.

Coleman, 39, said he and his wife went to the school to discuss the dismissals of three of his children's teachers when he and Kumar got into a heated argument. Coleman's 9-year-old son and 6-year-old daughter go to the school.

"The gentleman disrespected my wife," Coleman said. "I was angry about that. If I could redo (Monday) I certainly would. I can't. As I said, I did not strike anyone."

However, Kumar, 46, said he was pushed and hit by Coleman several times.

"He punched me on the side" of the head, Kumar told reporters on Tuesday.

Kumar said he was frightened when Coleman started yelling at him and he had to run away.

Cause of derailment still under investigation

PINEHURST (AP) — Officials with Burlington Northern Santa Fe are still trying to determine what caused one of their trains to derail, spilling thousands of gallons of hazardous chemicals.

Meanwhile, the 230 residents evacuated after the spill returned to their homes late Monday, said Jerry Jenkins, a spokesman for Burlington Northern Santa Fe.

"The cleanup is wrapping up," Jenkins said.

The 84-car train was en route to Houston when 21 cars making up its midsection derailed early Sunday morning. The cars derailed on a curve in the rural community of Pinehurst, about 34 miles northwest of Houston.

Burlington Northern Santa Fe officials expected to resume running trains back on that stretch of track by Tuesday evening, after the air quality around the accident site was tested to ensure the area was safe, Jenkins said.

Many of the derailed cars were tankers filled with chemicals. About 6,000 gallons of acetic anhydride and 21,000 gallons of ethylhexyl acrylate spilled from several of the tankers.

Both chemicals are used in making plastics.

Former stepfather charged in missing girl's death

CORSICANA (AP) — The former stepfather of a 10-year-old girl found dead in a creek was charged with capital murder on Tuesday.

Michael Paul Zoch, 36, was arraigned in the slaying of April Danielle Bryant, whose body was found late Monday.

The girl was reported missing on Sunday by her mother, Gale Zoch of Mildred, a community about 10 miles southeast of Corsicana.

"He had performed sex on the girl and she'd said she was going to tell her mother and that's when he started choking her," said Navarro County Sheriff Leslie Cotten.

Officials believe the girl was killed Saturday night. An autopsy was under way Tuesday.

Cotten said Michael Zoch failed a polygraph test and then admitted to killing Bryant before dumping her body in a tributary of Richland Creek. He later led authorities to the body, about 10 miles from Bryant's home.

"Something like this to me is probably the hardest part of law enforcement. It's hard to see a child treated this way," Cotten said. "I thought he might have been capable of doing something like this but I didn't think he'd do it to a child."

Navarro County Justice of the Peace, Bob McQuary, left, speaks a Navarro County Sheriff Leslie Cotten looks on during a news conference about the slaying of April Danielle Bryant Tuesday in Corsicana. Michael Paul Zoch, 36 was arraigned Tuesday in the slaying of Bryant, whose body was found late Monday.

Bail for Michael Zoch was set at $500,000 on the capital murder charge. No bond was set on five other charges: one violation of a protective order and four revocations of probation.

Michael Zoch was arrested Monday on an unrelated charge of violating a restraining order and had been questioned by authorities. Court records show Zoch had a drug problem and had been convicted of family violence offenses in the past.

In April 2000, Gale Zoch filed an affidavit for a temporary restraining order, which said Michael Zoch ran into her with the couple's car while she was six months pregnant and threw a glass that hit April. The affidavit also said Michael Zoch had destroyed the inside of her house.

The request, which was granted, also stated that Gale Zoch felt Michael Zoch was a threat to her and her children.

Michael Zoch had been previously charged with driving while intoxicated, harassment and criminal mischief, according to court documents.

Gale Zoch said she last spoke with her daughter by phone about 8:30 p.m. Saturday. The girl was reported missing after she arrived home from her job early Sunday morning.

Residents of Mildred, a small community southeast of Corsicana, about 65 miles southeast of Dallas, helped the FBI and other agencies search for the girl.

Details of Bryant's disappearance were released through the Amber Plan. The plan was developed to help locate missing children after the 1996 abduction and slaying of 9-year-old Amber Hagerman in Arlington.

Family files lawsuit against TDCJ in cop's slaying

FORT WORTH (AP) — The family of a policeman killed during a Christmas Eve robbery filed a lawsuit Tuesday against the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, alleging negligence led to the escape of violent prisoners now charged with his death.

"We think it was foreseeable someone like Aubrey Hawkins would be injured or killed by these desperadoes. That's exactly what happened," said Dick DeGuerin, the family's attorney.

The suit was filed in Tarrant County Probate Court by Hawkins' widow, Lori Hawkins; his ex-wife, Dixie Buchanan; and his parents, Jayne Hawkins and Curtis Hawkins. Buchanan is filing on behalf of the couple's son, Andrew Hawkins.

The officer worked for the Irving Police Department but lived in Fort Worth, in Tarrant County.

"The Hawkins family has lost a son, a husband and a father. Although no monetary award can compensate them for their damages, the Hawkins family respectfully requests compensation in the maximum amount allowed by law," according to the 10-page lawsuit.

State law caps liability damages against state institutions and agencies at $500,000.

"We are not going to discuss lawsuits in the news media, but we'll wait till we arrive in the courtroom," said Larry Todd, spokesman for Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Corner Hawthorne finally feels fresh at camp

By Stephen Hawkins
AP Sports Writer

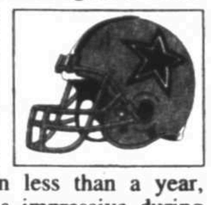
WICHITA FALLS — Even after two-plus weeks in the stifling heat of training camp, Dallas Cowboys cornerback Duane Hawthorne is feeling fresh.

Taking a break during the offseason has made a big difference.

"Oh man, it feels great. I almost feel like I'm a rookie again coming straight out of college," said Hawthorne, walking off the field after another two-hour practice with temperatures in the low 100s. "I've got my legs up under me and I'm feeling pretty good."

At this point last year, Hawthorne said he felt like he was moving in slow motion. He had played nearly a full year without a break.

After being the only rookie free agent to make the Cowboys during training camp in 1999, Hawthorne played 13 NFL games and then a full NFL Europe season before going back to training camp.



Slowed by the wear and tear of two full seasons in less than a year, Hawthorne wasn't nearly as impressive during Cowboys camp last year. He appeared in 14 games last season, but his actual playing time was limited.

"He had some heavy legs last year coming back from NFL Europe and an injury. He never really had a chance to jump out there," said Cowboys coach Dave Campo. "But he really has had a good camp. He's done some nice things and is playing great."

Hawthorne even started at cornerback in the Cowboys preseason opener, and played well in the 21-14 loss at Oakland on Saturday night. He still is expected to be a backup and play primarily in pass situations.

Izell Reese, who is making the conversion from safety to cornerback, is expected to be the starter. But Reese remains day-to-day with a strained right groin suffered during a July 29 workout.

"It was important to me. With Izell out, I wanted to step my game up," Hawthorne said. "The guys playing backup roles, that's what we need to do. You never know when a guy goes down."

Even Campo concedes that it would be unlikely for the 5-foot-10, 175-pound Hawthorne to remain the starter, but the coach likes what he has seen.

"He ran well with the speed of Oakland," Campo said. "His first year, he had some problems with the deep ball, but he really hasn't shown that at all in minicamps and against some tall receivers. I feel good that he's making a lot of progress."

When Campo was the defensive coordinator in 1999, the rookie Hawthorne had three interceptions, 27 tackles and broke up seven passes while play-

Round Rock pounds way past 'Hounds

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Much has been said about Round Rock's pitching, but when the Express offense gets cooking, it's tough to cool it down.

The Midland RockHounds found that out Tuesday as the Express pounded out 12 hits and had a six-run seventh inning en route to an 11-2 victory at Christensen Stadium.

By the way, the Express pitching was pretty good, too. Round Rock starter Greg Miller (3-2) handcuffed the Hounds through five innings, allowing just one earned run on two hits. Miller retired the first 10 of 11 batters he faced before Midland finally got its first hit in the fourth inning.

One of the few Midland bright spots on Tuesday came from Jacques Landry, who hit his 34th home run of the season. It was the first homer for Landry since July 22 and with six more home runs and 10 more stolen bases, he could become the first 40-40 man in Texas League history. Landry reached the 30-30 mark on Monday with two stolen bases.

Miller would then give way to Express relievers Tom Shearn, Jeriome Robertson and James Lira, who continued to frustrate the 'Hounds even more, allowing just three hits and one run combined.

But it was the Round Rock offense that set the tone in this game by scoring three runs in the first inning off Midland starter Juan Peña (9-9) and continued the pounding from there.

"We needed a game like this after coming off the San Antonio series," said Round Rock designated hitter Kevin Burns, who led the Express onslaught with a 3-for-5, three run, three-RBI performance. "We needed to let off some steam."

The Express seemed to take out much of their frustration from the San Antonio series in the seventh inning when they exploded for six runs on just five hits. A throwing error by Peña, which allowed Mike Rosamond to score all the way from first base didn't help the 'Hounds' cause either.

"We just all came and put a bunch of hits together in that inning," Burns said. "That's what we were doing

GREELEY, Colo. — December 1998. Terrell Davis was an MVP-in-waiting, and a guest appearance on "Sesame Street" fortified his mmm-mmm good image touted by Campbell's Soup.

August 2001. Terrell Davis is an MRI waiting to happen, and a post-Super Bowl appearance in an Atlanta strip club has received attention far removed from Tickle Me Elmo.

Blame it on bad luck, poor judgment or just a cruel twist of fate. Davis is facing more questions these days than a "Weakest Link" contestant as he tries to recapture his superstar status with the Denver Broncos.

Through the first two weeks of training camp, Davis has been a part-time running back limited by tightness in his right hamstring and swelling in his surgically repaired right knee. The ailments follow a disappointing 2000 season in which Davis staggered through the onset of a stress fracture in his left leg before missing the last six games.

In the middle of this career spiral, Davis was one of several pro athletes named as patrons of the Gold Club, an Atlanta strip joint at the center of a federal racketeering trial. Campbell's Soup dropped Davis, citing his lack of playing time.

To his credit, Davis remains humble rather than hostile as he answers repeated questions about regaining the form that helped him run for 2,008 yards en route to the 1998 MVP award.

"It takes a while to come back and have the instincts that you've had before you left, because I wasn't thinking before I left," Davis said. "... Before last season ended, I was not thinking about making cuts and now I am."

The knee injury in 1999 was a fluke. Davis was trying to make a tackle after an interception in Denver's fourth game of the season when he was hit awkwardly by teammate Matt Lepsis.

A year of rehabilitation later, Davis returned to the field ready to hop back on the path to the Hall of Fame. Instead, he found a dead end and missed another 12 games because of a stress fracture that was initially undetected by doctors.

Now, it's the hamstring and the degenerative effects from his knee surgery.

"God says he would never give you too much more than you can handle, so obviously he can handle it," said Olandis Gary, who ran for 1,159 yards after stepping in for Davis in 1999. "He had so much good times, he was bound to have some adversity."

NFL players are not exempt from life's yin and yang.

New York Giants quarterback Kerry Collins, who battled alcoholism and accusations of racism, publicly exorcised his demons before last year's Super Bowl — his career pinnacle. Baltimore Ravens linebacker Ray Lewis, involved in a deadly post-Super Bowl brawl in January 2000, gained redemption when he was voted the 2001 Super Bowl MVP.

Will Davis enjoy a similar end?

What happens if he is finally pronounced healthy, but doesn't produce?

"I know what I'm capable of doing, so I don't have anything to prove to anybody," Davis said.

Romania's Szabo claims 1,500 at track Worlds

By Bert Rosenthal
AP Track Writer

EDMONTON, Alberta — Gabrie'a Szabo didn't have to worry about Olga Yegorova on Tuesday night.

The Romanian unleashed her char cteristic powerful kick and won the women's 1,50) meters at the World Championships.

Szabo is also entered in the 5,000, but has said she would not run if Russia's Yegorova was permitted to compete after testing positive for a banned substance on a urine test. Yegorova was suspended from the championships but was then reinstated because IAAF rules require a blood sample and none was taken.

Szabo has not yet indicated her final intentions for the 5,000 since the IAAF gave Yegorova permission to run. She said earlier that it would be unfair to make her run against a competitor whose performance was enhanced by drugs.

"I want to sleep all night and make the decision tomorrow," Szabo said after the 1,500.

■ Track Worlds

Szabo's agent, Jos Hermens, said, "I'd like to see her racing. Why give medals away to admonish people and two weeks later nobody knows she didn't run? But I will respect any decision she makes."

Meanwhile, IAAF anti-doping chief Arne Lgungqvist said drug tests of up to 10 athletes at the championships indicated the possible use of a banned hormone. Lgungqvist said initial tests showed elevated levels of red blood cells — which can signal the use of the endurance-boosting hormone EPO but also can occur naturally.

Those athletes — including Yegorova — will now have urine tests to check for EPO. The 1,500 was just to Szabo's liking, and she wasn't about to give that medal away.

She let Russia's Natalya Gorelova set most of the pace before sweeping into the lead with less than 150 meters remaining. Then, Szabo pulled away from the field and won by about eight meters in 4 minutes, 00.57 seconds, leading a 1-2 Romanian finish.

Violeta Szekely was runner-up in 4:01.70, and Gorelova was third in 4:02.40.

Szabo's victory came as a Canadian sprinter competing at the championships was suspended after testing positive for the drug that cost Ben Johnson his gold medal at the 1998 Olympics. Athletics Canada said that Venolyn Clarke, the Canadian women's 100-meter champion, had traces of the anabolic steroid stanozolol in her system when she was tested during a pre-meet camp session at Calgary last Friday.

Andrade, Faxon team up for Meyer victory

By Landon Hall
AP Sports Writer

ALOHA, Ore. — Brad Faxon and Billy Andrade reeled off nine straight birdies Tuesday, and Faxon added a 30-foot eagle putt on No. 16 as they won the Fred Meyer Challenge.

The team finished the two-day, best-ball charity tournament at 24-under-par 120, two strokes ahead of Fuzzy Zoeller and Jean Van de Velde.

"We thought going into the second round with a 12-under, if we can shoot another 12-under, that'll probably be a hard score to beat," Faxon said.

Zoeller and Van de Velde made it interesting by shooting a 15-under 57 on the 7,037-yard course at The Reserve Vineyards and Golf Club. They made eight straight birdies and also eagled the par-5 16th, but couldn't catch up.

David Duval and his father Bob followed Monday's 60 with a 63 and tied for third with Stewart Cink and David Toms.

For the second time in three years, Faxon and Andrade were presented with denim jackets by tournament host Peter Jacobsen as a satire of the Masters' famous green garb, as well as a testament to the easygoing format of the Challenge, now in its 16th year. Faxon has won five times, Andrade three.

The money they took home is no joke, however, as Faxon and Andrade each earned $90,000.

"I learned from Greg Norman the first time I played with him," Faxon said of the 1995 Challenge, when he and the Shark won the first of three

Augusta will look altered for next year

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

Trees were bulldozed to create new tee boxes. One fairway bunker was extended 15 yards, while another was doubled in size. About the only thing left untouched after sweeping changes to Augusta National Golf Club were the azaleas.

In what is considered the biggest overhaul in the 68-year history of the home of the Masters, the club altered nine holes and added nearly 300 yards in an effort to put a greater premium on accuracy off the tee.

"Our objective is to keep this golf course current," Augusta National chairman Hootie Johnson said Tuesday in a statement that outlined the changes.

The official yardage is now 7,270 yards, up ing mostly in nickel and dime packages. After a league-high four interceptions in NFL Europe in 2000, the worn-out Hawthorne had just one tackle last season for the Cowboys.

Campo believes that a rested Hawthorne is finally picking up where he left off in 1999.

"Duane's a great kid. He works hard at practice," said Cowboys defensive coordinator Mike Zimmer. "Last year, he had a tough year, but he has hung in pretty good."

Notes: Linebacker Darren Hambrick, the team's leading tackler a year ago, is back with the first team and will start Saturday night's game against Denver. Rookie Markus Steele started the preseason opener. Until this week, Hambrick had been working with the second unit, part of Campo's punishment of Hambrick for skipping two voluntary minicamps. "He got a battlefield promotion. The team has seen that Darren is ready to play," said Campo. "He knows I was upset with what he did and that it was wrong." ... Rookie safety Travis Ortega, who signed Monday, pulled a groin in Tuesday's workout and is day to day. ... The Cowboys had their coolest practice at Wichita Falls on Tuesday morning. The temperature was 81 degrees, 15 degrees below the average for the first 21 workouts there. The temperature soared to 95 by the time afternoon workouts began.

MASTERS: Augusta National lengthened

from 6,985 yards. Four of the par 4s are at least 460 yards, all of the par 5s are at least 500 yards and only one hole beside the par 3s is shorter than 400 yards — the 350-yard third hole, still one of most challenging because of the green.

Tiger Woods will be defending his Masters title on a course he might not recognize. When he finished off his two-stroke victory in April to sweep the majors, his drive sailed over the twin bunkers down the left side on No. 18, leaving him a sand wedge 75 yards from the green.

The 18th probably is the most changed of all.

The tee box was moved 60 yards back and 5 yards to the right, and the bunkers — added in 1967 when the club thought the hole needed some teeth — were enlarged by 10 percent. Carrying the bunkers requires a 320-yard drive, and trees have been added left of the bunkers.

A 405-yard cupcake is now a 465-yard hole, a much more demanding finish.

"These young guys hitting it as far as they hit it, it isn't going to make that much difference," Arnold Palmer said from the Fred Meyer Challenge in Oregon.

In fact, Palmer wasn't sure players would even notice the changes.

"You hear talk about them, and of course that calls a lot of attention to it," he said. "But when the tournament is on, it'll look the same as it's always looked."

Six-time champion Jack Nicklaus wanted to see the course before offering his opinion.

"They've obviously made length a factor from what I've heard, but it's pretty hard to comment until you really know it," he said.

The other massive change was at No. 1, which had been 410 yards uphill with a bunker down the right side that didn't pose a problem to the big hitters.

The tees were moved back 25 yards, which required the club to rebuild the putting green. Also, the bunker was extended 15 yards toward the green, so the drive must travel 300 yards to carry it.

Changes are nothing new to Augusta National. Every hole has been altered — some more subtly than others — since the course designed by Bobby Jones and Alister MacKenzie opened in 1933.

Among the more significant changes over the years was moving the 10th green from a valley to an elevated surface, adding the pond on the par-3 16th and changing from Bermuda to bent grass in 1981.

"Beginning in 1934 and throughout their tenure, (former Augusta chairman) Cliff Roberts and Bob Jones made improvements to complement the changing state of the game," Johnson said. "We have continued this philosophy."

Still, the changes overseen by course architect Tom Fazio represent the second overhaul in the three years Johnson has been chairman. Augusta added light rough two years ago, along with moving back the tee boxes 25 yards on the second and 17th holes and adding pine trees down the right side of the 15th fairway.

Johnson attributed the latest changes to better clubs, better golf balls and better players.

"I think any of us probably hate to see people hitting sand wedges to 425-yard par 4s," he said in April.

While most of the attention is on length, the changes will test accuracy. Success at Augusta is being in the best position in the fairway to attack the heavily contoured greens, which remain Augusta's best defense.

Seven of the changed holes were par 4s. Tees were moved back 45 yards on No. 7, which features an elevated green surrounded by steep bunkers. They also were moved back 30 yards on No. 9, another uphill green where Greg Norman spun his ball off the putting surface during his collapse in '96.

Even the longer holes got longer — 10 yards were added to No. 10, making it play 495 yards downhill, while the tee was extended 35 yards on No. 11 so that it plays 490 yards.

One of the most severe holes now could be No. 14, which added 35 yards to the tee box. It's the only hole without bunkers, but huge humps in the green demand precision on the approach.

Two of the par 5s also were changed. The bunker on the right side of No. 8 was doubled in size and, with the tees moved back 20 yards, it now requires a 305-yard drive to carry the bunker. Also, the par-5 13th was moved back 25 yards and now plays at 510 yards.

straight titles. "He didn't come here just to show up. He came here to win. And all the guys that didn't play well here wished they did."

Andrade won in 1992 with Tom Kite. When Andrade was paired with Faxon for the first time in 1998, they shot 13 under and finished tied for fourth. A year later, they surged past Craig Stadler and Steve Elkington by going eagle-birdie-eagle-birdie to finish 22 under.

For the sixth time in seven years, Arnold Palmer and Jacobsen finished in the bottom third of the 12-team field. They shot a 67 Tuesday and finished 11th, 15 strokes off the lead.

Palmer and Jack Nicklaus approached the 18th green together and were greeted with a roaring ovation. Palmer then showed his old dramatic flair by making a 32-foot putt that rolled around the top of the cup before dropping.

"A blind squirrel finds an acorn every once in a while," Palmer joked. "You always want to make it on the last hole; that's where it all ends. Then you get on with your next job."

Colts' tackle Meadows leaves practice due to heat problems

Associated Press

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. — The Indianapolis Colts just can't escape the heat.

A day after two players were helped off the field because of heat-related problems, starting tackle Adam Meadows left practice early Tuesday for the same reason.

"Adam went out early because he had a little bit of a problem," coach Jim Mora said. He did not elaborate.

Meadows returned to practice later Tuesday in the Colts' second workout of the day.

Meadows had a light workout in the morning, when temperatures in Terre Haute hovered in the mid-80s and the heat index hit 93. He stopped practicing a little sooner than his teammates, but did not need any assistance.

"This was a little hotter than normal, but I think we did a good job of pushing through it," quarterback Peyton Manning said. "One player had a problem and we understand that."

At least four players — rookie wide receiver Marcus Williams, rookie offensive lineman Ryan Diem, second-year defensive tackle Josh Williams and Meadows, who has started the last four seasons — have been bothered by heat-related illnesses during the first 11 days of practice.

Diem and Josh Williams were taken off the field on golf carts Monday, shortly before practice ended, and were treated at the training camp facility.

Diem worked out Tuesday morning in place of guard Larry Moore, who has a hyperextended knee. Williams did not practice Tuesday morning, but returned to practice at night.

Raiders' Russell suspended

NAPA, Calif. Raiders defensive tackle Darrell Russell was suspended for the first four regular-season games for violating the NFL's substance abuse policy. Russell can be reinstated on Oct. 1.

Leigh Steinberg, Russell's agent, unsuccessfully appealed the suspension, saying his client does not have a drug problem and the violation was procedural.

"Look, the only abuse that's occurred here is an abuse of power," Steinberg claimed.

"Basically, what I have to say is that I did not test positive. Someone showed up at my house, and I wasn't there," Russell said.

Russell is one of the premier defensive linemen in the league and was the second overall pick in the 1997 draft.

Gastineau won't rebuff Sapp

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — Mark Gastineau offere a meek response to Warren Sapp's criticism of him.

During a visit to the New York Jets' training camp, the former defensive end, who holds the season sacks record of 22, said "God bless him if he gets the record."

Sapp, who plays for Tampa Bay, said last week he would break Gastineau's 1984 mark because, "I don't think a convicted felon should be the all-time leader."

"I don't think a guy sitting on Rikers Island should have his name on top of an NFL record book, and I'm going to take it down," Sapp added.

Gastineau was released from the Rikers Island penitentiary two weeks ago after violating his probation on a 1998 conviction of assaulting his wife. He spent 11 months in the prison.

Packers, Bills make trade

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Green Bay acquired tight end Bobby Collins from Buffalo for defensive end David Bowens. The Packers have been searching for tight ends since Tyrone Davis tore a hamstring two months ago. Last month, they signed free agent Troy Drayton to compete with rookie David Martin for the backup job behind second-year pro Bubba Franks, a Big Spring High graduate.

■ NFL Camps

In two seasons with the Bills, Collins caught 15 passes for 196 yards and two touchdowns. In his two NFL seasons, Bowens has 4 1/2 sacks and 30 tackles.

Morris returns to practice for Bills

PITTSFORD, N.Y. — Running back Sammy Morris practiced with the Bills after almost a week on the sidelines.

Morris was one of five Bills returning to the field after recovering from hamstring injuries. Joining him were starting tight end Jay Riemersma, cornerbacks Antoine Winfield and Ken Irvin, and backup free safety Travares Tillman.

Morris started eight games during an injury-plagued rookie season in 2000.

Redskins' TE will miss game

CARLISLE, Pa. — Redskins Pro Bowl tight end Stephen Alexander, who has missed most of training camp because of a hamstring problem, won't play at Kansas City this weekend.

Coach Marty Schottenheimer ruled out Alexander for Sunday's exhibition game. Defensive end Marco Coleman sat out his second straight practice Tuesday due to a muscle spasm in his back, but might play against the Chiefs.

Heat sidelines several Eagles

BETHLEHEM, Pa. — Six Eagles missed a practice on Tuesday that was shortened by 30 minutes due to excessive heat. The temperature at Lehigh University reached 97 degrees, with a heat index of 106 degrees.

Tight end Jeff Thomason was sidelined by Achilles' tendinitis. Wide receiver Scott Keys has a bruised knee. Offensive lineman John Romero has a strained pectoral muscle. Tackle Tra Thomas suffered from a swollen groin, while defensive lineman Brandon Whiting is still struggling with turf toe.

Titans' rookie tears MCL

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Rookie offensive tackle Adam Haayer partially tore a medial collateral ligament in his right knee near the end the Tennessee Titans' morning practice.

Coach Jeff Fisher said Haayer will undergo arthroscopic surgery and could return within a month.

Tampa Bay rookie leaves hospital

TAMPA, Fla. — Tampa Bay rookie tight end Dauntae' Finger was released from a hospital, one day after leaving practice early because of an irregular heartbeat.

Finger left the practice field Monday after feeling light-headed and experiencing shortness of breath during the team's afternoon workout.

Niners sign defensive end

STOCKTON, Calif. — The San Francisco 49ers signed defensive end Jerome Davis, a University of Minnesota product who last year played for Calgary in the Canadian League.

DAVIS: Bronco has been plagued by injuries

(From 1C)

"Yes, I would like to come out here and do well this year. My goal is to participate in all 16 games and hopefully go to the playoffs. I'm not here to impress anybody or to prove a point to anyone."

Davis can afford to exercise patience. He received a no-trade clause in exchange for taking a pay cut last month, and Denver's running game is still lethal thanks to Gary and Mike Anderson, the 2001 NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year.

Best-case scenario? Two years of relative inactivity give Davis' 28-year-old body a break that helps him play a little longer than expected.

"I hope it really did stack some years onto the back of my career," he says. "I hope so, but only time will tell, huh?"

New IOC president Rogge gets look at Salt Lake City facilities

By Tim Korte
AP Sports Writer

SALT LAKE CITY — IOC president Jacques Rogge plopped onto a twin-sized bed at a college dormitory Tuesday and placed his hands on his lap. His eyes darted around the sparsely decorated room.

"This is all that I need," he said, breaking into a smile.

Rogge brought his informal style to the site of the next games, shunning a tie in favor of a blue, button-down shirt as he toured the athletes village, where he will bed down during the 2002 Winter Olympics.

"I don't want a limousine. I don't want a flag on my car. I don't want a police escort," Rogge told Salt Lake Organizing Committee president Mitt Romney as they walked the village grounds.

Rogge, a 59-year-old Belgian surgeon, proclaimed the end of the crisis from the Salt Lake bribery scandal during an address to hundreds of cheering SLOC employees who packed the organization's downtown headquarters.Later, he made the point again at a news conference.

"The crisis is over. We have changed the IOC," Rogge said. "We have disciplined the members who did not behave well. We put an ethics commission in place. We have changed the rules for voting on candidate cities. We've made a profound reform."

Asked if the pending trial of former bid leaders Tom Welch and Dave Johnson might detract from the Salt Lake Olympics, Rogge said it was a matter for the U.S. Department of Justice. The new president, making his first trip to Utah, said the IOC will have a minor role in producing the games and that SLOC's employees and volunteers will make the Olympics a success next February.

Since taking the helm last month as the IOC's first new president in 21 years, the former Olympic sailor has tried to portray the organization as less tradition-bound and more cooperative. From his casual dress to his request to sleep at the athletes village, Rogge is taking a less formal approach than his predecessor, Juan Antonio Samaranch.

"It's more than a symbolic gesture," said Bob Ctvrtlik, a former American volleyball Olympian who now serves as an IOC athletes representative. "It's part of who he is. It's not an act."

None of the nine male IOC officials who joined Rogge and Romney for the tour wore a tie. It was appropriate dress for a trip to the Park City area, where the group visited the Utah Olympic Park.

The venue will be the site of bobsled, skeleton, luge and ski jumping during the Olympics, which run Feb. 8-24. On Tuesday, the French ski jumpers were trying out the 120-meter jump.

Romney called over French jumper Guillaume Sylvain to meet Rogge. They exchanged pleasantries, and Sylvain returned to his training.

The delegation fell behind schedule and skipped a planned stop at Park City Mountain Resort, site of giant slalom and snowboarding. They got a drive-by look at Deer Valley, where slalom races and freestyle skiing will be held.

Rogge then visited the Olympic village on the University of Utah campus, where he will sleep after eschewing the usual first-class hotel suite offered the IOC president.

"It's not quite five-star, but we do have accommodations for you," Romney told him.

SLOC officials are unsure where they'll place Rogge, saying they need to find appropriate work space to go with a room. One possibility was the modest two-room dormitory suite Rogge saw during the stop.

"It's OK for me," he said. "It's absolutely OK."

A planned trip to the Delta Center, site of figure skating and short-track speedskating, was bypassed. Rogge and other IOC officials viewed the parking lot that will be converted into a medals plaza for the games.

Rogge had never seen Salt Lake. While he was an IOC member, he resisted efforts by former Salt Lake organizers who are accused of offering more than $1 million in cash, gifts and scholarships in return for support of the city's bid.

"We were very pleased by our visit," Rogge said. "I knew about the excellent preparations for the games but I had never seen the facilities or been to Salt Lake City. I'm really impressed."

Is Marion Jones losing edge?

By Bob Baum
AP Sports Writer

EDMONTON, Alberta — She is no longer world champion. Of her eight fastest 100-meter races, none has come in the last two seasons.

Has the world caught up to Marion Jones? Or is she slowing down?

Jones' streak of 42 consecutive victories in 100-meter finals came to a dramatic end Monday evening when she was beaten by Zhanna Pintusevich-Block of Ukraine at the world championships. She also lost to Pintusevich-Block in the semifinals, and bronze medalist Ekaterini Thanou of Greece had noticed that this was not the same Marion Jones who was so dominant in the past.

"She is a different athlete," Thanou said. "All this year, she wasn't having a good performance. She ran times like 11-something, or 10.90. She used to run 10.70 or 10.80."

Pintusevich-Block won in 10.82 seconds. Jones was second in 10.85. It was a career best for the Ukranian. Jones has run faster 21 times.

Still, she brushed aside any suggestion that she is not the runner she used to be.

"A 10.85 is nothing to be disappointed about," she said. "I guess I spoiled a lot of people, including myself, running all the 10.7's and 10.6's."

A bit of burnout would be understandable. Jones makes everything she does look easy, but the pressure is intense. As Jones noted earlier this week, "everytime I step out on the track, I feel like all eyes are on me."

This has been an emotional year for Jones off the track.

She has separated and is seeking a divorce from her husband, shot putter C.J. Hunter, who was her constant companion through her Olympic year in 2000 and helped her in workouts. Hunter was suspended from competition after testing positive four times for the steroid nandrolone.

Although most of her fastest times came in 1998, the incredible season when she won 35 of 36 events — 100, 200 and long jump — she entered, Jones refuses to believe her best could be behind her.After all, she is only 25.

"I'm still learning as a sprinter," Jones said. "I ran extremely fast last year in Stockholm with a bit of a wind (10.68 seconds, wind-aided). I stay positive in the fact that I think my times will still improve. I'm still quite young and I have the world ahead of me."

Jones has broken 10.8 seconds 15 times, more than all other female sprinters combined. Eleven of those times came in that fabulous 1998 season, including her personal best of 10.65.

Last year, Jones broke 10.8 three times, including a 10.75 in winning the Olympic gold medal in Sydney.

Yet in Edmonton, she was a wire-to-wire loser. Pintusevich beat Jones out of the blocks. Jones almost caught her at 70 meters, but didn't quite have enough.

Pintusevich-Block had come close before. At the world championships in Athens in 1997, she thought she had beaten Jones and had begun her victory lap when it was revealed she had lost by two-hundredths of a second.

"Words cannot describe how I feel," Pintusevich-Block said after her long-sought victory.

Jones will be back on the Commonwealth Stadium track on Wednesday for the 200-meter preliminaries, and probably will run in the 400-meter relay this weekend. Friend and Bahamian training partner Chandra Sturrup just smiled and shook her head when asked how motivated Jones will be.

"Oh," Sturrup said, "she's going to be coming back for revenge."

IOC ignores violent criticism from Canadian official Pound

By Paul Foy
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY — IOC officials on Tuesday defended their organization from harsh criticism by a defeated presidential contender and said he was welcome back to Olympic leadership.

Dick Pound, a Canadian who finished third in the July 16 election for International Olympic Committee president, wrote to chief Olympic sponsors questioning the IOC's commitment to reform after the Salt Lake scandal.

In the letter, first reported in Tuesday's Los Angeles Times, Pound said the election results showed "almost complete disregard, even contempt" for IOC sponsors and TV rightsholders.

New IOC president Jacques Rogge also has written sponsors to assure them the IOC will hold fast to the reforms and its marketing policies.

"We need the support of the corporate world," Rogge said during his first visit to Salt Lake City. "We have to give them a proper return, and we'll guarantee them an open, accountable and democratic IOC that will defend the values and the credibility of sport."

Rogge wouldn't comment directly on Pound's letter, a copy of which was shown to the AP. The two-page letter was dated July 24, eight days after the IOC election.

Pound wrote there was "no doubt" Rogge was "the personal choice" of outgoing IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch, "who was at the center of the storm of controversy that dictated the 1999 IOC reforms."

Those reforms were adopted after allegations of vote-buying surfaced in Salt Lake, which will stage the 2002 Winter Games in February, and after an internal investigation led by Pound.

Olympic officials and a spokesman for Xerox Corp. said Pound seemed especially embittered by his finish after South Korea's Kim Un-yong, who was implicated in the Salt Lake scandal and appeared to repudiate some of the IOC's reforms while campaigning. Kim, too, complained about his election loss, blaming a "smear campaign."

"You have in Rogge a leader who appears squeaky clean," said Terry Dillman, Olympic marketing manager for the Xerox Corp. "He will set the tone and we have confidence he will keep the others in line."

Salt Lake Organizing Committee President Mitt Romney also endorsed the new IOC president, who is a Belgian surgeon.

"He's saying and doing the right things," Romney said. "Time will prove he's exactly what the doctor ordered."

Several IOC members said they were stunned by Pound's criticism. Swiss member Marc Hodler, clutching a copy of Pound's letter, summed up his reaction in one word: "Consternation."

Pound did not return a call Tuesday from The Associated Press.

Female coach wins suit in Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — Hazel Park schools discriminated against a woman who says she was denied a high school varsity boys head coaching position because of her gender, a jury found Tuesday.

The eight-member, all-woman U.S. District Court jury found that district officials didn't hire Geraldine Fuhr at least in part because she was a woman. The jury awarded her $455,000 in damages.

"I feel awesome," Fuhr told the Detroit Free Press. "I put it all on the line because it was wrong."

The district's lawyer, Timothy Mullins, said he expects the district will appeal, a move the school board must approve.

When boys coach Charlie Kirkland resigned in March 1999, there were two candidates to replace him: Fuhr and Hazel Park's ninth-grade boys coach John Barnett.

Fuhr assumed she would be selected. She was the assistant to the retiring coach and had 16 years of basketball experience, including 10 as the girls varsity coach, when she applied for the top coaching spot.

Hazel Park School District selected Barnett, sparking Fuhr's sexual discrimination lawsuit.

The district claimed the decision was based on a number of other concerns, including the girls varsity team's lackluster record under Fuhr; potential problems filling other coaching positions if Fuhr left the girls team, and the impression that giving Fuhr the boys position would send to the school's female athletes: the district favors boys sports.

Mullins said district officials thought they had made a decision in the school's best interests.

He said Fuhr has been treated fairly and is well-paid, and "to say that she's been discriminated against is something not readily understood by me."

Maddux stays in control

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Greg Maddux wasn't at his sharpest but had enough control to set the National League record for consecutive innings without a walk.

He was more impressed that his Atlanta teammates rallied for a 6-5 win Tuesday night after the Houston Astros erased the Braves' two-run lead.

"You want to talk about the streak — I'm more proud of the fact that I've only lost, I think, one game since May 30," Maddux said. "I also feel like there's games I've won because I've walked someone. And it's not fair to the other 24 guys on this team if you're out there trying not to walk someone."

Maddux (15-6) pitched six innings to extend his streak without a walk to 70 1/3 innings, surpassing the record of 68 set by Christy Mathewson in 1913 and matched by Randy Jones in 1976. Bill Fischer holds the major league record with 84 1-3 consecutive innings set in 1962.

"The streak's nice, but it's important that it doesn't interfere with what we're trying to do, which is win," Maddux said. "I thought I pitched real good, except for the fourth, when they did a real good job of hitting."

Brian Jordan and Marcus Giles homered as the Braves beat the Astros for the seventh straight time at Turner Field to remain three games ahead of Philadelphia, a 7-3 winner over San Diego, in the NL East. Houston, which had won four straight, dropped 2 1/2 games behind Chicago, which beat Colorado 5-4, in the NL Central.

The record-breaking inning was costly for Maddux. Staked to a 3-1 lead, he fell behind 5-3 after giving up RBI singles to Richard Hidalgo and Craig Biggio and a two-run double to Vinny Castilla.

Maddux allowed five runs — four earned — and 11 hits in six innings. He won without his best stuff, thanks to Giles' third homer, a three-run shot off Nelson Cruz (2-2) that gave the Braves a 6-5 lead in the sixth.

Steve Reed pitched the seventh, and John Smoltz had a 1-2-3 eighth for Atlanta. Steve Karsay worked the ninth for his fifth save.

"I'm settling in," Karsay said. "Being on this club makes it easier on you. That's for sure. It's a lot of fun to just sit and watch guys like Maddux work."

Maddux improved to 11-1 in his last 13 starts and hasn't walked a batter since June 20 against Florida. He allowed more hits in just one start this season, when he gave up 12 in a 7-1 loss at San Diego on May 8.

The four-time Cy Young Award winner had his ERA rise 12 points to 2.68. Maddux has given up 17 hits and eight runs — seven earned — in his last 12 innings.

"That was the third game in a row we got a lot of hits off him but still didn't beat him," Astros manager Larry Dierker said. "He may keep his streak going indefinitely if they keep calling pitches around the ankle strikes."

Astros starter Dave Mlicki allowed four hits, three walks, three runs — all earned — and struck out one in five innings.

"I walked too many guys," Mlicki said. "I was a little erratic. I made some pitches I shouldn't have made to get out of jams. I was inconsistent."

Jordan's 17th homer, a two-run shot in the third, gave Atlanta a 3-1 lead.

■ NL Roundup

Dodgers 2, Pirates 1

PITTSBURGH — Terry Adams beat Pittsburgh for the third consecutive time this season and Eric Karros homered for his second straight game-winning hit to lead the Dodgers over the Pirates.

Adams (8-4) improved to 6-2 since moving into the starting rotation with his second excellent start in three weeks in PNC Park. He allowed six hits in seven innings — only two after the third inning — and has yielded only 11 hits in 17 innings against Pittsburgh this season.

The Dodgers, 11-5 against Pittsburgh the last two seasons, won their third in a row since dropping five straight. Tony McKnight (1-2) pitched effectively in his second start for the Pirates since being traded by Houston but still took his second consecutive loss.

Jeff Shaw earned his league-leading 34th save.

Mets 3, Brewers 0

NEW YORK — Bruce Chen allowed two hits over seven innings in his home debut for the Mets, and Joe McEwing hit a two-run pinch-hit triple in the seventh to lead New York past Milwaukee.

Chen (5-5), acquired July 27 from Philadelphia, allowed both hits in the fourth inning and walked two and struck out seven. John Franco pitched a perfect eighth inning, and Armando Benitez worked the ninth for his 26th save to complete the two-hitter.

The Mets made it 1-0 on Rey Ordonez's RBI single in the second off Jimmy Haynes (7-14). Haynes is tied with San Diego's Bobby Jones for the major league lead in losses.

Cardinals 3, Expos 1

MONTREAL — Darryl Kile pitched a four-hitter for his 28th career complete game, and Albert Pujols and Jim Edmonds homered as St. Louis beat Montreal.

Kile (12-7) didn't allow a hit until pitcher Javier Vazquez doubled with one out in the sixth inning. Jose Vidro added an RBI single that inning for Montreal's only run.

Pujols hit his 27th homer with one out in the second off Vazquez (10-11). The Cardinals scored an unearned run in the third and Edmonds hit his 15th homer leading off the fourth to go up 3-0.

Vazquez struck out 10 in pitching his fourth complete game of the season.

Marlins 10, Diamondbacks 4

MIAMI — Matt Clement took a one-hit shutout into the eighth inning, and Mike Lowell drove in four runs to help Florida beat Arizona.

Clement (7-7) pitched 7 2/3 innings and allowed three runs and three hits, including Damian Miller's three-run homer.

Lowell and Cliff Floyd, both sidelined last weekend by injuries, returned and fueled Florida's 14-hit attack. Lowell had a double, single and sacrifice fly, and Floyd went 3-for-3 and scored three times.

Albie Lopez lost his fourth consecutive start, allowing 10 hits and five runs in five innings. He is 0-3 with the Diamondbacks and 5-15 overall.

Phillies 7, Padres 3

PHILADELPHIA — Brandon Duckworth pitched six solid innings to win his major league debut as Philadelphia defeated San Diego.

Bobby Abreu, Pat Burrell and Scott Rolen homered for Philadelphia. Duckworth, starting in place of the injured Randy Wolf, allowed three runs and four hits.

Giants 9, Reds 3, 11 innings

CINCINNATI — Barry Bonds hit his major league-leading 48th homer to lead off a six-run 11th inning for San Francisco in a victory over Cincinnati.

Cubs 5, Rockies 4

CHICAGO — Ricky Gutierrez scored the winning run on a wild, botched rundown by Colorado in the ninth inning to give the Cubs a win over the Rockies.

Tigers score four runs in 8th to rally for win over Rangers

Associated Press

ARLINGTON— Adam Pettyjohn is still seeking his first big league victory, but the rookie lefthander at least was able to watch his teammates celebrate a win on a night when he started.

Tony Clark hit a tiebreaking RBI single in Detroit's four-run eighth inning as the Tigers snapped a six-game losing streak with a 7-3 win over the Texas Rangers on Tuesday.

Pettyjohn had lost his first four starts before getting a no-decision against Texas. Pettyjohn was able to keep the Rangers' potent lineup in check, allowing three runs and five hits in 6 2/3 innings.

"It feels good that the team battled back for me after I kept them in the game," Pettyjohn said. "We took advantage of it. It's a big win, especially with this long losing streak."

Tigers manager Phil Garner did not want his young starter to get further discouraged by another loss.

"If he keeps pitching that way, good things will happen," Garner said.

With the game tied at 3, Rob Fick led off the eighth with a double off Mike Venafro (4-3), who failed to retire any of the four batters he faced. Fick went to third on Bobby Higginson's infield single and scored the go-ahead run when Clark singled to right.

Randall Simon's sacrifice bunt moved Higginson to third. Higginson scored and the other runners moved to second and third when Venafro threw wildly to first after fielding the bunt. Shane Halter's two-run double off Brandon Villafuerte made it 7-3.

Venafro has been one of the Rangers' best relievers with a 0.98 ERA over his previous 18 1/3 innings, but he struggled against the Tigers.

"Venny's done a good job for us," Rangers manager Jerry Narron said. "Everyone's going to have an outing like that. It just happened to him on the wrong night."

Detroit's run total in the seventh was more than the Tigers had scored in any of their previous six games. Matt Perisho (1-2) pitched 1 1/3 innings for the win as the Tigers improved to 7-0 against the Rangers this season.

"They've done a great job pitching against us," Narron said. "They have just shut us down and we have not swung the bats well."

■ AL Roundup

Damion Easley's solo homer off Aaron Myette in the top of the seventh had given Detroit a 3-2 lead but Gabe Kapler tied it with a solo shot off Pettyjohn in the bottom half. Alex Rodriguez homered in his third straight game, hitting a two-run shot to give the Rangers a 2-1 lead in the first.

Rodriguez also executed a convincing fake at shortstop in the fifth as the Rangers caught Juan Encarnacion on a baserunning blunder that resulted in a double play.

Encarnacion was on first after getting hit by a pitch. Jose Macias followed with a fly to center field, and as Encarnacion ran toward second, Rodriguez faked fielding a grounder.

Encarnacion never caught sight of the ball and slid into second. By the time Kapler caught the ball in center and threw to first, Encarnacion was unable to get back in time.

"I don't think the decoy got him," Garner said. "Sometimes young guys have trouble picking the ball up. The trick is when to take a glance and see what the action is."

Myette, making his ninth big league start, gave up three runs and seven hits in seven innings. He struck out four and walked none.

The Tigers took a 1-0 lead in the first on Simon's RBI single. Detroit tied it at 2 in the fourth when Halter tripled and scored on Myette's wild pitch.

Devil Rays 3, Yankees 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Tanyon Sturtze pitched eight innings, and Jason Tyner knocked in the go-ahead run with a seventh-inning single as the Devil Rays beat the AL East-leading Yankees.

Sturtze (7-9) gave up two runs and seven hits in winning his second straight start for the first time this season. Esteban Yan got the final three outs for his 15th save in 21 opportunities

New York starter Mike Mussina (11-10) went seven innings, giving up three runs and nine hits.

Jared Sandberg, the nephew of former Chicago Cubs second baseman Ryne Sandberg, had an RBI single in his first major league at-bat during Tampa Bay's two-run second inning. He finished 2-for-4.

Orioles 7, Royals 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Calvin Maduro pitched five perfect innings in Baltimore's victory over Kansas City.

Maduro (1-3) retired the first 15 Kansas City batters before the Royals scratched out a run on two hits in the sixth. He left after six innings with two strikeouts and no walks.

The Royals finished with eight hits, all singles, after collecting 35 hits in their previous two games. David Segui and Tony Batista hit RBI triples for the Orioles, who pulled away from a 1-0 lead with a three-run fourth off Jeff Suppan (5-10).

Suppan gave up six hits in seven innings and struck out three but was hurt by five walks, one intentional.

Indians 7, Twins 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Rookie C.C. Sabathia and Cleveland beat Minnesota to forge a tie for first place in the AL Central.

Sabathia (11-4) gave up two runs on four hits and tied a season high by throwing 7 1/3 innings. He retired 11 straight from the fourth through the seventh before Brian Buchanan started the Minnesota eighth with a home run.

Juan Gonzalez hit a three-run homer, and Jim Thome added a two-run shot for the Indians.

Cleveland beat Minnesota for the sixth time in eight meetings this year. The Twins are 8-17 since the All-Star break, when they led the division by five games.

Angels 9, White Sox 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Pat Rapp took a no-hitter into the sixth inning and Troy Glaus hit his 30th homer as the Angels beat the White Sox.

Scott Spiezio went 3-for-4 with a two-run double, and Garret Anderson added a pair of two-out RBI singles, helping Rapp (5-10) win consecutive starts for the first time since joining the Angels in the offseason. The right-hander allowed two runs and five hits in seven innings, striking out three and walking one.

Rapp retired 15 of his first 16 batters before the White Sox loaded the bases with none out in the sixth on singles by Royce Clayton, Mark Johnson and Ray Durham. Clayton scored when Jose Valentin grounded into a double play.

Collector puts up $577,610 for Shoeless Joe's 'Black Betsy'

By Brian Bergstein
Associated Press Writer

SAN JOSE, Calif. — A collector from Pennsylvania has agreed to pay $577,610 for "Shoeless" Joe Jackson's bat, "Black Betsy," one of sports' most fabled artifacts. It's believed to be the highest price ever paid for a bat.

The 10-day auction on eBay attracted only two bidders — one of whom did not enter until the final five minutes. The winning bid was made by Rob Mitchell, the 30-year-old owner of a marketing company in Pottstown, Pa. He plans for now to display the bat in the company offices.

"I was shocked for what the bat went for," he said. "I think the bat's worth somewhere between $1.7 million and $4 million. I think if it's not the best, it's in the top five best buys ever recorded in the memorabilia industry — baseball or any other sport."

A few other people had put down the $25,000 deposit required for making a bid on the bat but never placed an offer, said Kevin Hammond, chief executive of Real Legends Inc., the company consigned to sell the bat.

Before the auction began, Hammond suggested that Black Betsy could challenge the record $3.05 million a collector paid for Mark McGwire's 70th home run ball. But he said he was not disappointed in the final price, $525,100 plus a 10 percent buyer's premium.

The seller was Lester Erwin of Easley, S.C., who kept the bat on a bookcase for decades after inheriting it from Jackson's widow in 1959.

"Obviously with all the hype that's been done in the media, there has to be a little disappointment," he said Tuesday night. "But how can you be real disappointed with a half-million? I think whoever ended up with it got a steal."

Jackson, who holds baseball's third-highest career batting average, used the warped hickory bat throughout his major league career and in semipro leagues after being banished for allegedly joining in the fix of the 1919 World Series by the Chicago White Sox. Jackson still has ardent supporters who say he had nothing to do with the fix and should be allowed into the Hall of Fame.

HOUNDS: Express rolls by Midland

when I first came down from Triple-A. We were doing that a lot."

The Express simply abused the Midland pitching staff in the seventh inning, first chasing off Peña after facing two batters and then pounding reliever Kevin Gregg for four more runs.

"We've got a lot of guys who can pound the ball," said Burns, who also hit his 14th home run of the season — a solo shot in the sixth. Burns also hit a two-run home run in the opening game of this series on Monday night. "When we get hot, it can get real contagious."

On Tuesday, the Round Rock offense proved to be too hot for the RockHounds to handle.

'HOUND BITES: Landry's first home run in 14 games moved him to within two of Texas League home run leader Brandon Berger from Wichita, who hit two home runs against Shreveport on Tuesday... Oscar Salazar extended his hitting streak to 10 games, going 1-for-4 against Round Rock... There are just 13 more professional baseball games left at Christensen Stadium... Big 2, KMID-TV will be broadcasting live Saturday's 7:15 p.m. game against the Express.

Sampras advances out of first round at Masters-Cincinnati

By John Nolan
Associated Press Writer

MASON, Ohio — Pete Sampras, a three-time champion of the Tennis Masters-Cincinnati, advanced in the tournament's first round Tuesday, while defending champion Thomas Enqvist was eliminated.

The return to competitive tennis of Boris Becker after two years was short-lived Tuesday as he and partner Goran Ivanisevic were beaten 6-3, 6-2 by Todd Woodbridge and Jonas Bjorkman. Sampras, who turns 30 on Sunday and has been fending off recent questions about when he might retire, reflected on the strength of challengers in today's world of pro tennis.

"It is tougher. No doubt about it," he said. "Guys aren't quite as fearful of the top guys and go out with nothing to lose and you see upsets."

The ninth-seeded Sampras, who is coming off a disappointing fourth-round loss at Wimbledon after winning the Grand Slam tournament seven of the last eight years, beat Nicolas Lapentti 6-3, 6-2 Tuesday.

Enqvist was upset 6-4, 6-0 by Nicolas Kiefer. It was only the second time since 1969 that the defending champion was eliminated in the first round.

Enqvist was one of three seeded players who lost Tuesday as third-seeded Marat Safin and No. 15 Wayne Ferreira (South Africa) also were upset. Seeded players who won first-round matches in straight sets were No. 5 Lleyton Hewitt, No. 6 Yevgeny Kafelnikov, No. 8 Patrick Rafter and No. 13 Carlos Moya.

Hewitt fell behind 4-3 in the first set Tuesday night, but took over the match after unseeded opponent Magnus Norman double-faulted and went to a 6-4, 6-1 victory.

Enqvist, who was seeded 11th and ranked 13th in the world, lost to the 26th-ranked Kiefer in straight sets for the second consecutive week. Kiefer beat Enqvist, 6-2, 7-5, at the Tennis Masters Series-Canada tournament last week.

"He obviously has a game that doesn't suit my game," said Enqvist, who has lost to Kiefer three times this year while coming off surgery in December on his shoulder and right foot. "I made way too many errors, and I didn't move well. Against Nicolas, you can't make so many mistakes, like I did today."

The only other time a defending champion in Cincinnati lost in the next year's opening round was in 1997, when Andre Agassi was eliminated by Brazil's Gustavo Kuerten, this year's No. 1 seed. Agassi also departed quickly this year — despite his No. 2 seeding and world ranking — losing 6-4, 7-6 to Gaston Gaudio on Monday night.

The 33-year-old Becker won this tournament and Wimbledon when he was 17. He avoided any of the possible excuses for Tuesday's loss, including the hot, humid weather and the fact that he and Ivanisevic didn't have much time to practice together.

"We both have won doubles tournaments in our lives before, so that usually doesn't take that long of an adjustment," Becker said.

Becker is tuning up to play in some senior events. He was lighthearted after the loss, kidding Ivanisevic who had to discard a pair of shoes after one broke.

"Too much pressure going on in the court," Becker quipped.

College gymnastics programs suffering

By Nancy Armour
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Stephen McCain was a promising young gymnast when he decided to go to UCLA, a school with a long, rich tradition in the sport.

Half the U.S. men's team that won the gold medal at the 1984 Olympics were Bruins. The gymnastics competition at the Los Angeles Games was held at UCLA's Pauley Pavilion. And UCLA had produced dozens of other Olympic- and world-champion gymnasts, not to mention national champions.

But two years into McCain's collegiate career, UCLA dropped men's gymnastics in a cost-cutting move.

"I think it's a tragedy. I've talked until I'm breathless about that," said McCain, a 2000 Olympian. "The fact men's collegiate gymnastics is not making it is a tragedy."

And an epidemic. The U.S. Gymnastics Championships begin Wednesday, and the alarming failure rate of men's collegiate programs will be a hot topic.

In 1976, there were 138 men's varsity college programs. Add the programs at Division II schools, and the number was around 200.

Now there are 21 men's varsity programs. Total.

"This is bigger than just gymnastics. All non-revenue- producing Olympic sports should be concerned about it," said Ron Galimore, director of the U.S. men's team.

While schools cite different reasons for cutting men's gymnastics and other non-revenue sports — budget cuts and lack of high school feeder programs are two common ones — Title IX seems to be at the heart of the decline. Or, more specifically, how universities find ways to comply with the 1972 legislation that requires schools to equalize money spent for men's and women's athletics.

With football programs using 85 scholarships, many schools say there's no way to support both the women's teams needed to comply with Title IX and men's sports that don't pay for themselves.

"We've added five women's sports so we don't have to cut any men's sports," said Miles Avery, the head coach at Ohio State, which won the NCAA championship this spring. "Every athletic department can't do that, but that is the way it was intended. To add opportunities for women, not curtail opportunities for men."

If the decline continues, the effect could be catastrophic. While female gymnasts peak in their mid to late teens, most men don't hit their prime until college. Local clubs may be where male gymnasts get their start, but it's usually in college where they make the greatest strides in their development.

Of the hundreds of gymnasts who've represented the United States at the world championships and Olympics, all but a handful competed in college, said Bob Colarossi, president of USA Gymnastics.

"We'll continue to field a team," Galimore said. "But the loss of these programs and these opportunities, it makes our talent pool smaller."

International powerhouses like Russia and China don't have this problem because promising gymnasts are sent to centralized training centers as children. They spend their formative years there, training and going to school, often hundreds of miles from their families.

That approach doesn't work in the United States — nor would USA Gymnastics want it to.

"That's a very difficult life, for kids to move away at a young age," said Ron Brant, coordinator of the U.S. men's team.

Hingis, Serena pull out tough victories

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Martina Hingis, the top-ranked player in the world, and two-time defending champion Serena Williams were both pushed Tuesday in second-round matches of the $565,000 estyle.com Classic.

Hingis beat Lilia Osterloh, ranked 48th in the world by the WTA, 6-2, 7-5 at the Manhattan Beach Country Club, while Williams, appearing rusty in her first match since Wimbledon, beat 69th-ranked Jennifer Hopkins 7-5, 6-3.

In other matches Tuesday, fifth-seeded Nathalie Tauziat beat Tamarine Tanasugarn 6-3, 7-6 (1) and lucky loser Wynne Prakusya beat Rita Grande 7-6 (4), 6-2. Prakusya replaced the injured Anna Kournikova in the main draw.

Osterloh was serving to win the second set, but Hingis rallied to win the last three games of the match, going for the lines with side-to-side winners.

Hingis beat Osterloh 6-1, 6-4 last week in the second round of the Acura Classic.

"We have a little respect for each other," Hingis said. "I was more concentrated in the first set, then we kept breaking each other. We got new balls at 5-4. Then she started missing a few. It was a good match. I really wanted it."

Hingis is spending her 200th week as the world's No. 1 player, a ranking she first achieved in March 1997.

"It's another milestone. There are only four others who have done that. As long as I'm 1,000 points ahead, I'm fine," Hingis said referring to her 5,577-4,519 lead over No. 2 Jennifer Capriati.

Williams hadn't played since losing to Capriati in the quarterfinals at Wimbledon in July.

Williams, who defeated Lindsay Davenport in last year's finals and beat Julie Halard-Decugis for the 1999 title, grew up in Compton, a 15-minute ride from the tournament site.

"I think maybe I was too excited and nervous at the beginning, because I was playing in front of my hometown," she said. "I didn't attack, and I didn't move very good. I was hitting every ball to her. I've been working really, really hard. It feels good to be out there. She's a good player. I won here the last two years, and I'd like to keep it up. It's important to work toward the U. S. Open."

Williams was the 1999 Open champion.

Northwestern's Wheeler fondly recalled at memorial service

By Don Babwin
Associated Press Writer

EVANSTON, Ill. — Rashidi Wheeler was remembered Tuesday as a young man who brightened the lives of everyone he met, and his family promised to find out exactly how that life ended last week on a practice football field.

Several hundred people crowded into a church on Northwestern University's campus to listen as Wheeler's teammates, coaches, family and the Rev. Jesse Jackson paid tribute to the 22-year-old who died last Friday after having an asthma attack during a conditioning drill.

"I've lost one of my heroes," Wildcats coach Randy Walker said. "There's a hole in our lives — a void that will be there forever."

At the same time, Wheeler's family vowed to find out what happened in the last moments of his life so other families wouldn't suffer as they have.

"We feel this could have been prevented," George Wheeler, Rashidi's father, said during brief comments after the service.

Wheeler's death came just two days after Minnesota Vikings tackle Korey Stringer died of heatstroke following an intense practice in stifling heat. A week earlier, University of Florida freshman Eraste Autin died after collapsing of heatstroke.

The service did not include much talk about the circumstances surrounding Wheeler's death, but Jackson said there are questions about it "that perplex us."

Jackson also said later that Wheeler's parents have asked him to be their spokesman as the death is investigated further. Bronchial asthma was the preliminary cause of death: a final report could take more than two months.

"There are many eye witnesses to the last hour of his life who have raised questions about the way this was handled," Jackson said. "There are real questions that at the appropriate time they want pursued."

Neither Jackson nor the family specified who they want to conduct the investigation.

"The university remains cooperative and open and fair and honest," Jackson said. "And I hope there will be no lines drawn that will alter that."

Northwestern has already said it plans a full evaluation of Wheeler's death as well as the team's conditioning policies.

Earlier, Wheeler's mother, Linda Will, voiced her support for the school, although she, too, said she had questions about how it was handled.

The service at Alice Millar Chapel illustrated the tragedy of a man who died long before anyone could possibly expect. There was his No. 30 jersey on display at the front of the church, a reminder of an athlete in the prime of his life. There were his teammates, who despite some beards and goatees, could not disguise the fact that they are not far removed from high school.

And there were the stories of parties, the funny demonstration of a dance Wheeler made up — further reminders that the man being laid to rest hadn't been given the time to raise a family or start a career.

There were even jokes about his dancing ability and poetry, with teammate Chasda Martin, calling Wheeler the only person "I know who could rhyme and stutter at the same time."

"He made sure you always had fun," said running back Kevin Lawrence.

"He made sure everyone got home safe from dancing, hanging out," said Kevin Bentley, the linebacker who will wear his close friend's No. 30 jersey this season.

"We weren't able to bring him home safe this time."

Nebraska suspends kicker Brown after assault charge

By Doug Alden
AP Sports Writer

LINCOLN, Neb. — Nebraska coach Frank Solich suspended kicker Josh Brown for one game on Tuesday for the player's conviction on misdemeanor assault charges from a fight this summer.

Brown, who was left off the 105-man roster that was allowed to report last week, will miss the Pigskin Classic on Aug. 25, against Texas Christian.

"I believe that him not being part of the 105 and missing a game is pretty strong, but certainly appropriate," Solich said.

Solich also ordered Brown and running back Thunder Collins into counseling for anger management.

Collins was arrested for fighting with his girlfriend about a week before Brown's arrest. Collins avoided a trial Monday by agreeing to enter a diversion program for first-time offenders. He had pleaded innocent to two counts of misdemeanor assault.

Solich did not suspend Collins because he said the running back was not convicted and did not admit guilt in his legal case.

"There's no question that this has gotten publicity and that kind of publicity never serves the team or the program well," Solich said. "In my mind it's a situation that's in the past. Both those young men understand what it has meant to this athletic program."

Brown was arrested June 16 for fighting with a man who was on a date with Brown's ex-girlfriend. Police said Brown had been drinking and waited for the couple outside her apartment. The woman tried to get between Brown and the other man, Brown threw her to the ground before tackling the other man and punching him, police said.

Brown pleaded no contest to misdemeanor assault in July.

Brown, a junior from Foyil, Okla., was left off the early roster and can't report until Aug. 24, the day before the season opener.

Brown's suspension leaves the kicking duties to freshman Sandro DeAngelis, who was 3-for-3 in the Red-White spring scrimmage but has yet to play in a game.

Solich said Brown and DeAngelis would compete for the position when Brown returns.

Futures rise

NEW YORK — Crude and refined products futures rose moderately Tuesday at the New York Mercantile Exchange as funds covered short positions at the opening and then sold again near the close ahead of inventory data expected to show supplies remaining above year-ago levels, analysts said.

A short-covering rally overnight and at London's Brent futures market carried the Nymex petroleum complex into a strong open, with nearby crude oil futures hitting their highest level in six weeks.

Light sweet crude for September delivery rose 20 cents to settle at $27.94, and September heating oil rose .87 cent to 73.43 cents a gallon. September natural gas fell 5.6 cents to $2.971 per 1,000 cubic feet.

September gasoline futures rose .31 cent to 77.85 a gallon.

Brent crude from the North Sea rose 25 cents to $26.08 on London's International Petroleum Exchange.

After markets closed, industry data for the week ended Aug. 3 showed dwindling inventories of motor gasoline and U.S. crude oil stocks, but an uptick in the amount of distillate fuels.

The American Petroleum Institute reported that U.S. inventories of crude oil fell by 3.3 million barrels to 308.4 million barrels, down from 311.8 million barrels a week earlier.

Distillate fuel stocks, which include heating oil and diesel fuel, however, posted a slight gain, rising from 121.9 million barrels to 122.7 million barrels for the week ended Aug. 3, a gain of 808,000 barrels.

The U.S. motor gasoline inventory fell by more than 1.8 million barrels to 210.5 million barrels from 212.3 million barrels the previous week.

The British pound was quoted at $1.4164, down from $1.4186.

Based on late European euro rates, the dollar was worth 2.2327 German marks, up from 2.2235; 7.4881 French francs, up from 7.4574; 2.5157 Dutch guilders, up from 2.5054; and 2,210.35 Italian lire, up from 2,201.31.

Microsoft: Court should take case

By D. Ian Hopper
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Microsoft Corp. asked the Supreme Court on Tuesday to overturn rulings that it violated antitrust laws, saying the trial judge should have been thrown off the case because of his derogatory comments about the company.

The software giant argued that U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson should have been dismissed before he ruled that Microsoft acted as an illegal software monopoly.

"The threat that the judge's misconduct poses to the public's perception of judges and the process of judging is palpable," Microsoft wrote.

Microsoft petitioned the nation's highest court two days before an appeals court was due to send the case to a new judge to decide what penalty the Redmond, Wash., company should face.

The company is set to release the newest version of its Windows operating system this fall — a product that several state attorneys general and other critics fear will extend Microsoft's monopoly in the software market.

The Justice Department and the states that brought the original antitrust charges against Microsoft must decide whether to attempt to block the release of Windows XP even as the two sides explore possible settlements in the current case.

The Justice Department said the issues raised by Microsoft's latest appeal were old.

"This was an issue addressed by the Court of Appeals," Justice Department spokeswoman Gina Talamona said. "We will respond promptly to their filing."

"The states will resist Microsoft's appeal to the Supreme Court and its motion to stay," Connecticut Attorney General Richard Blumenthal said Tuesday. "We think the public is best served by moving forward again in the District Court."

Some legal experts questioned whether Microsoft's petition to the high court was designed to buy the company time until its new operating system gets to the market.

"The Supreme Court is not going to reverse the Court of Appeals, Microsoft is not going to walk free, so its a delaying tactic," University of Baltimore law professor Bob Lande said. "They have no realistic chance of getting this overturned."

Windows XP is scheduled to be delivered to computer manufacturers at the end of this month and to be on store shelves in October.

Microsoft simultaneously asked the federal appeals court to delay sending the case to a new lower court judge until the Supreme Court decides whether it will take the appeal.

Company spokesman Vivek Varma said Tuesday's request does not rule out settlement talks, which are in a preliminary stage. Microsoft chairman Bill Gates, who was speaking at a conference on artificial intelligence in Seattle, did not take questions on the case.

Congress and several state attorneys general have asked Microsoft to change Windows XP, saying that it would repeat many of the same business practices already found to be illegal and would force consumers to use more Microsoft products.

Microsoft maintains that it is only providing the features consumers want, and that its customers will benefit from Windows XP.

The federal appeals court earlier this summer threw out Jackson's ruling breaking Microsoft into two companies, removed the judge from the case and harshly criticized his comments to news media in which he compared Gates to Napoleon and the company to a drug-dealing street gang. Through a spokeswoman, Jackson declined comment Tuesday.

The appeals court upheld some of the judge's findings that the company acted as an illegal software monopoly, improperly hurting competition. It is that ruling that Microsoft wants the Supreme Court to review.

Microsoft said in its appeal to the nine justices that Jackson should have been disqualified from the case when he gave his first interview. If that had happened, Jackson's entire final verdict would have been thrown out.

The federal appeals court dismissed that argument in its June ruling.

Microsoft also told the Supreme Court that it may want to overturn a judgment against the company's exclusive licenses with computer manufacturers, a decision that the company sought to protect its operating system monopoly, and other rulings.

Clear Channel earnings fall far short of expectations

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Clear Channel Communications Inc., the largest U.S. radio broadcaster, said Tuesday it posted a wider loss than expected in the second quarter because of increased expenses, and it warned that third-quarter performance would miss targets because of weak advertising demand.

Clear Channel said it suffered a net loss of $237 million, or 40 cents per share, compared to a gain of $31.2 million, or 9 cents per share a year ago. Analysts had expected the company to lose 28 cents per share.

The company said its after-tax cash flow — net income excluding amortizing goodwill from acquisitions such as last year's purchase of AMFM Inc. — was $470 million, or 75 cents per share, compared to $271.8 million, or 73 cents per share a year earlier.

Clear Channel and many analysts who cover it measure the company's performance by this measure, and analysts surveyed by Thomson Financial/First Call had expected cash flow of 74 cents per share.

Revenue more than doubled, bolstered by the AMFM purchase, but expenses grew even more rapidly, to $1.52 billion from $562.7 million a year earlier.

Revenue actually would have declined if AMFM's revenue from last summer were counted as part of Clear Channel's sales — to $2.2 billion from $2.23 billion a year earlier.

Clear Channel said it expected to post a third-quarter net income loss of 37 cents per share and after-tax cash flow of 73 cents per share — both weaker than analysts expected. Analysts surveyed by First Call expected a loss of 19 cents and cash flow of 80 cents.

Chairman and chief executive Lowry Mays said the company was pleased with its results "during what continued to be a difficult advertising environment."

The economic slowdown and collapse of many Internet companies that had been heavy advertisers has hurt radio and TV stations, newspapers and magazines.

"The slide was certainly a little stronger than any of us had seen before," said company president Mark Mays.

Officials predicted improvement in advertising demand in late this year, although they stopped short of offering Wall Street any guidance on fourth-quarter earnings.

The company said its radio division increased its market share during the quarter and continued to integrate the former AMFM into its system.

For the first six months, Clear Channel had after-tax cash flow of $794.8 million, or $1.26 per share, compared to $464 million, or $1.24 per share a year ago.

Results were released after regular trading. Clear Channel shares fell 39 cents to $57.46.

Wall Street trades tentatively; techs act on downgrades

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street traded tentatively Tuesday, with investors bidding blue chips moderately higher but selling technology issues on another string of semiconductor downgrades.

Analysts say caution, evidenced by light volume and a narrow trading range, will continue to rule the stock market until companies can tell investors what they want to hear: Business is getting better.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 57.43 to 10,458.74. The Dow, which traded in a 113-point range, won back more than half of the 111 it lost Monday.

The broader market was mixed. The Nasdaq composite index, which traded in a 30-point range, fell 6.47 to 2,027.79. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 3.92 to 1,204.40.

Tech traders were cautious ahead of Cisco's earnings, which were reported after the session and met analysts' estimates. Cisco, the heaviest-traded Nasdaq stock Tuesday, fell 28 cents to $19.26 in regular trading.

In the extended-hours trading session, Cisco rose 24 cents on bullish comments by chief executive John Chambers, who said: "We are in the very early stages of a major technological revolution and the long-term outlook for this industry and the role that Cisco plays in it has not dramatically changed."

Cisco didn't issue any earnings forecasts for the remainder of 2001.

Investors who have been yearning for word that business is improving, especially from tech bellwethers like Cisco, halfheartedly welcomed a report that American workers' productivity rebounded in the second quarter for its best showing in a year.

"Productivity helped. But can you go the distance? That's what Wall Street is asking," said Larry Wachtel, market analyst at Prudential Securities.

Wachtel noted that recent economic data has been mixed, challenging the market to keep any gains, and that thousands of layoffs in July contributed greatly to the rise in productivity.

As long as the economic outlook is murky, the stock market will continue to narrowly fluctuate, analysts said.

The tech sector came under pressure after Credit Suisse First Boston downgraded a handful of semiconductor stocks, saying that companies will continue to work off excess inventory through next year and that demand will remain low. Novellus Systems dropped $2.47 to $49.81 and Applied Materials fell $1.93 to $46.80.

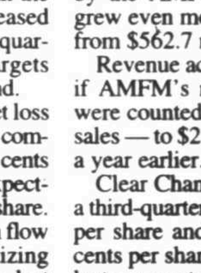
4,000-square-foot bridal store to open here in October

By Mella McEwen

Coming to Midland this fall is BRIDESAVE, which is locating to Midland from Wheeler.

Frank Hunold, chief executive, and Rachel Ambler, president, will relocate the store's Internet operations the first of September, followed by the physical store the first of October. Both operations will be in the former Midland Gallery location in the Courtyard at Midland Park Shopping Center, 4410 N. Midkiff Road.



McEwen

Ms. Ambler said the 4,000-square-foot-store will carry bridal gowns from more than 40 designers, along with bridesmaid and flower girl dresses, mother of the bride dresses, formals and quinceanera dresses. Other items include veils, shoes and other accessories and invitations. She said the store will also include computer stations to allow customers to go online and, for example, locate and order bridesmaid dresses to match their wedding gown.

Hunold said the BrideSave Internet site has been in operation just over two years and, while very successful, "we are moving to Midland to facilitate continued growth."

The two anticipate serving the entire West Texas area because of the size of the store and its selection and Hunold concluded that "We are very excited about coming to Midland and think it will be a huge success. The concept, with a 4,000 to 5,000 square foot store and 40 designers, will be unlike anything else in the area."

Longtime friends Sabrina Smith and Jill Umstead, friends since junior high school, have started BEYOND WALLS.

"We paint interior wall murals for residences and businesses," explained Ms. Smith, who got the idea for the business after painting a mural in her kitchen. Her sister asked her to paint one for her and Ms. Umstead helped.

"We had so much fun we decided to turn it into a business," she said.

They have painted a mural for the BOW MEOW pet bakery in Fairmont Park Shopping Center, Wadley and Midland Drive, and at several residences. Ms. Smith said they can work with the client to design a mural and its motif and coordinate with bedding or furnishing.

Ms. Smith can be reached at 520-5704 and Ms. Umstead at 570-1317.

Settled into its new location at 2800 N. Big Spring St. is THE FLOORING CENTER, owned by the Hillman family.

Brian Hillman, general manager, said the new location is more than three times larger than the previous location on Loop 250 just west of Midkiff and includes a 4,000-square-foot showroom and state-of-the-art carpet selection. The store is also now an exclusive Mohawk Color Center, carrying an exclusive line of Mohawk carpets.

"Displayed on the floor are ceramic tiles, hardwood, laminate and vinyl and carpet, all sampled on our floor for customers to walk on and sample," he said.

The larger location allowed the business to add inventory and begin stocking several thousand square feet of tile and several rolls of carpet.

While there are some pamphlets and brochures available to order from, Hillman said most of the store's inventory is seen in handheld samples.

The business not only does flooring but countertops, wall tile and complete bathroom and kitchen remodeling.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday.

IN YOUR FACE COSMETICS has opened a cart at MIDLAND PARK MALL in front of GAPKIDS. The cosmetic line, strongly appealing to high school and college-age females, includes lip gloss, eye shadows, lotions, mascara, assorted glitter makeup and gels, all of which is mixed with a colored powder of choice.

The mall will host CASA (Court-Appointed Special Advocates) of West Texas on Saturday. The child advocate agency will have a table in Midland Park Mall in an effort to recruit volunteers.

Spanish tortilla makes for fast meal with international flavor

By Sandy Hu
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Thirty minutes to mealtime? Sam Gugino has a suggestion: Make a Spanish tortilla.

Chef and food writer Gugino is a man with a mission.

"I grew up in a family where my mother cooked every meal," he recalls. "Today, in families where both parents are working, hardly anybody is cooking. But I think, deep down, people would really like to make a meal at home if it doesn't take too long."

So Gugino, who currently splits his time between New York and Pennsylvania, is giving home cooks some help with a series of cookbooks. "Low-Fat Cooking to Beat the Clock: Delicious, Inspired Meals in 15 Minutes" was published by Chronicle Books last year. It's a sequel to "Cooking to Beat the Clock" (Chronicle, 1998). Gugino is mapping out more "Beat the Clock" titles as part of a 10-book series.

Anybody can cook quickly, Gugino maintains. The key is to embrace four principles — flavor, organization, focus and creativity — that form a construct.

Here's how it works: Stock your pantry with items that are high in flavor, Gugino advises. "High-quality extra-virgin olive oil may be expensive, but it will impart more flavor than a poor-quality oil."

Ingredients with complex flavors also help. You'll need fewer of them to develop a tasty dish. Some examples: balsamic vinegar, authentic Italian parmigiano-reggiano cheese and dried fruits.

For low-fat cooking, Gugino identifies specific fat fighters that add flavor without fat. Among them are herbs and spices, mustards, lemons and limes, and members of the onion family (onions, garlic, scallions and shallots).

Organization means having the right equipment ready to use, according to Gugino. One essential is a good-quality, nonstick 12-inch skillet. He also uses a food processor for quick chopping and pureeing. And a microwave oven is employed for some specific tasks, such as speed-cooking potatoes or bulgur.

Focus ensures that your cooking time is well-spent, according to Gugino. It's important to have all ingredients prepped and ready — "mise en place," as the French call it. It requires reading the recipe and understanding the preparation steps before you begin.

Staying focused also enables cooks to multitask. For example, when preparing a chowder, Gugino cuts the potatoes, puts them in a pan covered with hot tap water and gets them cooking while he preps the other parts of the meal, such as sauteing the bacon and onion.

Finally, creativity ensures the long-term viability of the quick-cooking effort beyond a single recipe. "Think of my recipes as providing concepts for cooking," Gugino says.

He encourages cooks to learn the techniques from the recipes, then improvise.

With his penchant for beating the clock, challenging Gugino to create a 30-minute recipe is child's play. He answered the challenge with a recipe for Spanish potato tortilla which, when tested, easily clocked in at 20 minutes total time taken — from preparation through cook time.

A tortilla in Spain is an omelet, and a favorite version is made with potatoes. It is served hot or at room temperature and makes a tasty supper dish or picnic fare. While there are many kinds of tortilla combinations, Gugino's uses common household staples.

This is the meal to make when you're on your way home from work with nothing planned for dinner.

Spanish Potato Tortilla can easily be made in 20 minutes total, with a recipe from chef and food writer Sam Gugino. This is an omelet made with potatoes, is served hot or at room temperature and makes a tasty supper dish or picnic fare. While there are many kinds of tortilla combinations, Gugino's uses common household staples.

SPANISH POTATO TORTILLA

(Preparation 5 minutes, cooking time 15 minutes)

2 tablespoons olive oil
1 pound russet potatoes (about 2 medium), scrubbed
1 small to medium onion (4 to 8 ounces)
1/2 teaspoon paprika
1/8 to 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
2 cups frozen peas (about 10 ounces)
2 tablespoons water
6 large eggs

Turn on the broiler and place oven rack 6 inches from heat source.

Put the oil in a 10-inch cast-iron skillet over medium heat. Cut potatoes into 1/2-inch dice. Add to the skillet. Peel and chop the onion. Add to the potatoes. Sprinkle with paprika, cayenne, 1/2 teaspoon of the salt and 1/8 teaspoon of the pepper. Cover and cook, stirring periodically, for about 10 minutes or until potatoes are just tender.

Meanwhile, put the peas and water in microwave-safe container. Cover and microwave on high power for 3 to 5 minutes or until peas are hot. While the peas cook, beat the eggs, remaining 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/8 teaspoon pepper in a mixing bowl. When the peas are done, drain and add to the egg mixture.

As soon as the potatoes are just tender, add egg mixture to them and lower the heat to medium-low. Stir with a wooden spoon to evenly distribute the potatoes and peas.

When the eggs are half set (on the bottom), about 3 minutes, put the pan under the broiler. Cook about 2 minutes, turning the pan to cook evenly, until the tortilla is just set. Be careful not to overcook. Remove the skillet from the broiler and let cool slightly before serving or wait longer and serve at room temperature.

Makes 4 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Teen-ager resists parents' pleas to get out there and play

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am writing because I have no one else who will give me advice. I am a freshman in high school and have never really been interested in playing sports. I am on the speech team, math club and newspaper staff.

My parents feel that I have to play a sport. They have paid for lessons in dance and tennis, but I really have no interest in playing. I even tried to make the dance team to please them, but I didn't make it. They just don't seem to understand that I don't like sports. Today I had my tennis lesson and played really bad. I tried, but I must have had an off day.

When I got in the car, my parents chewed me out. They said I was lazy, and I was going to play a sport whether I liked it or not. I like to play tennis occasionally, but I'm not in love with it.

Can you help me get the message across to them that I don't want to play sports, nor do I like them? Please help! — ELLEN IN FRANKLIN, TENN.

DEAR ELLEN: You have my sympathy. I took tennis lessons for seven months straight. At the end of that time the only person I could rally with was my instructor because no matter where I hit the ball, he could manage to get it back to me. No one else was so generous. So the answer to the question, "Tennis, anyone?" is, "Perhaps. But not EVERYone."

Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

Your parents may be trying to teach you the importance of being physically fit as well as intellectually active. Exercise relieves stress, tones muscles and burns calories, to mention only a few of the plusses. A compromise may be in order. Rather than taking tennis lessons, ask them if you can join a gym and agree to go there three or four times a week for cardiovascular exercise and some weight-training with professional supervision. You'll be learning health habits that will last a lifetime — and it will get you off your rusty-dusty.

DEAR ABBY: Your letters about putting cash or checks in sympathy cards remind me of the one and only time I was the recipient of such a gift. In 1966, my first husband, Barry, committed suicide, leaving me a widow at age 26. We were living in Los Angeles. Barry worked for a mail courier service and got to know an African-American gentleman who was a supervisor at the post office. He and his wife became our friends, and it was they who tucked a few bills in their sympathy card. It made me wonder if they came from a wiser and more generous culture than I did.

I will always remember Ben and Claire Gibson for their precious gift of friendship and the opportunity to get to know their friends and family. Thanks to that beginning, I have been open to and able to form other such precious friendships. I've lost contact with them, but if they are still on this Earth, I hope they will read this. You may print my name. — JOCELYN KEENAN HOWELLS, PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR JOCELYN: You're right. The gift of their friendship was more valuable and long-lasting than the money. I, too, hope they read your letter.

Whipping cream makes biscuits extra light, fluffy

By The Associated Press

Sure, state fairs boast amusement park rides, petting zoos, music and funnel cakes to help lure us there, but the main attraction at many fairs is the cooking contests.

Ohioans seem particularly adept at baking, which makes the blue-ribbon competitions a little intense — and that's part of what draws Sheri Brock and her biscuits. Her recipe uses whipping cream and butter to create very light, fluffy biscuits. And they can be whipped up for just about any meal: They take only 27 minutes to make.

BUTTERY BAKING POWDER BISCUITS

2 cups all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
2 teaspoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 1/3 cups whipping cream
2 tablespoons butter, melted

Combine the flour, baking powder, sugar and salt. Make a well in the center of the flour mixture. Add whipping cream all at once. Using a fork, stir just until moistened. Turn dough out onto a lightly floured surface. Quickly knead by gently folding and pressing dough 10 to 12 strokes. Pat or lightly roll dough to an 8-inch square. Cut into 16 squares. Place biscuits 1 inch apart on a large ungreased cooking sheet. Brush tops with the melted butter. Bake in a 425 F oven about 12 minutes or until golden. Remove from cookie sheet. Serve hot.

Makes 16 biscuits.

'Al Fresco Fusion ...'

Adds blast of flavor to outdoor dining

Summer time allows for the refreshing option of dining on a sunny patio or even under the stars. Bringing meals outdoors blends enjoyment of the season with the fun of dining with friends and family.

The "fusion" trend brings together the flavorful elements of different types of cuisines and ingredients to create something completely new and exciting. Adding an Asian element is what fusion's all about.

Dining amidst nature's beauty is a great way to unwind and celebrate any occasion. These dishes are quick and easy to prepare while combining new flavors in unusual ways. These dishes also travel well if you're going on a picnic or outing.

For example, Mr. Yoshida's Fine Sauces Cracked Pepper & Garlic Sauce brushed on Shrimp Kabobs or added to dressing for spinach salads adds a flavorful touch. For grilling on the go, brush the kabobs with sauce and pop them into a resealable storage bag and refrigerate, turning occasionally to coat. When it's time to head out to the barbecue, just toss the bags in the cooler and pop them onto the hot grill when you're ready. Try adding a touch of sweetness and a spiced sake note to balance the saltiness of your favorite mixed nuts by toasting them with Mr. Yoshida's Original Gourmet Sauce. Even dessert can feature a taste of fusion by simply adding Mr. Yoshida's Hawaiian Sweet & Sour Sauce to a soft cheese (such as Neufchatel or cream cheese). The combination of molasses and pineapple flavors provides a perfect accent to the Hawaiian Summer Peach Pie.

Gourmet Burger

1 pound lean ground beef
1/4 teaspoon black pepper
1/2 cup gourmet sauce, divided
4 pineapple rings
4 slices cheddar or Swiss cheese
4 hamburger buns, lightly toasted on the grill
Lettuce and onions (optional)

To prepare, mix ground beef, pepper and 1/4 cup sauce in a medium bowl. Shape into 4 patties. Grill burgers to desired doneness. Grill pineapple rings. Baste both the burgers and pineapple rings with remaining 1/4 cup sauce during the last 1–2 minutes on the grill. Top burgers with cheese slices and grilled pineapple. Serve on toasted buns.

Serves 4.

Hawaiian Summer Peach Pie

2 8-ounce packages Neufchatel cheese, softened
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 cup sweet & sour sauce
1 prebaked 9-inch pie crust
1 16-ounce can peach slices, drained
1/4 cup red raspberry preserves
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Fresh mint leaves, to garnish

To prepare, blend the cheese, sugar, vanilla and sauce in the bowl of an electric mixer.

Spread the mixture over the bottom of the prebaked pie crust and chill a few hours or overnight.

Just before serving, arrange peach slices decoratively on filling. Mix the preserves with the lemon juice and spoon in between the peach slices. Garnish with fresh mint.

Serves 6 to 8.

Shrimp Kabobs

1 pound (21–25 count) shrimp, peeled and deveined
1 1/2 large green peppers, cut into 1-inch pieces
1 1/2 large yellow peppers, cut into 1-inch pieces
1 large red pepper, cut into 1-inch pieces
1/2 cup cracked pepper & garlic sauce
6 skewers

To prepare, combine cleaned shrimp with the cut vegetables in a shallow bowl and gently toss with the sauce. Marinate in the refrigerator for at least one hour, turning occasionally.

Clean and prep grill or broiler at least 15 minutes before cooking the kabobs. If using wooden skewers, soak them inwater at least one hour before using.

Make kabobs by alternating shrimp and peppers on skewers. Plan on using about 3 or 4 shrimp per skewer.

Grill or broil the kabobs, basting with additional sauce, for several minutes on each side. Serve immediately.

Yields 6 kabobs.

Spiced Mixed Nuts

2 pounds unsalted almonds and pecans
1 cup Original Gourmet Sauce

To prepare, place mixed nuts in a bowl and cover with sauce. Cover bowl and let nuts soak for about 1 hour, stirring occasionally to ensure that nuts are evenly coated. Strain nuts and set aside.

Spray or grease an 8-by-10-inch glass baking dish and evenly spread 1 cup of the soaked nuts in the bottom of the pan. In a microwave oven, cook on high for 4–5 minutes, stirring at 2 minute intervals. Allow to cool then spread on a tray. Repeat the process until all nuts are cooked. Store in an airtight container.

Yields 2 pounds.

Hot Bacon and Spinach Salad

1 cup cracked pepper & garlic sauce
1/2 cup rice vinegar
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup bacon pieces
2 cups thinly sliced mushrooms
1 cup red onion, sliced thin and separated into rings
12 ounces fresh spinach leaves
2 tomatoes, wedged
3 hard-boiled eggs, cut in half
Croutons

In a small saucepan, heat together sauce, vinegar and sugar; set aside.

In a sauté pan, brown bacon, drain grease and add mushrooms and onions. Cook mixture until onions are soft, about 3 minutes. Add 1/2 of the dressing to the pan and set aside.

To assemble salad, toss spinach with remaining dressing, and portion onto salad plates. Spoon bacon mixture over spinach and garnish with tomatoes, eggs and croutons.

Serves 4 to 6.

Easy ways to infuse meals with flavor

Bringing fusion to your table doesn't mean having to shop for exotic ingredients or use difficult cooking methods. In fact, enhancing meals with new tastes can be surprisingly simple. Here are some ways to "diversify" and add interest to your everyday meals:

- Add a touch of wasabi (Japanese horseradish) to mashed potatoes for a spicy accent when served with grilled or roasted meats, poultry or fish.
- Instead of regular or black tea — use green tea for a fresh, intense iced tea to enjoy with lighter fare.
- Fill fresh pasta squares with favorite ingredients, top with a few drops of Mr. Yoshida's Original Gourmet Sauce, pinch firmly shut and brown in hot oil to create toasted ravioli—a great starter for cocktail parties.
- When tossing a salad, make an unusual vinaigrette by using a dark sesame oil instead of olive oil, adding an intense nutty accent to any dish.
- Toss pineapple slices with Mr. Yoshida's Cracked Pepper & Garlic Sauce and grill. Serve the hot caramelized slices with vanilla ice cream and a sprinkling of cracked black pepper for a surprising dessert.

About Mr. Yoshida

In 1968 at the age of 19, Junki Yoshida arrived in Seattle from Kyoto, Japan, bringing with him only $500 and a strong determination to succeed. He wanted to achieve the American dream.

Yoshida also brought martial arts philosophy and skills, which he put to use teaching karate. Along the way, his family was struggling to make ends meet. One year, as the holidays approached, knowing he wouldn't have money for presents to exchange with the many students that would give him gifts, Yoshida cooked up batches of sauce, using his family's secret recipe, to give to students as Christmas gifts. To his surprise and delight, students began begging for refills.

As the word spread and demand grew, the Yoshidas decided to market their unique product. Mr. Yoshida's Fine Sauces are now available throughout the country.

Rave parties: Release for youth, headache for French government

By Jamey Keaten
Associated Press

PAULE, France — To the young, they are free-for-alls of drug-induced revelry and thumping techno beats in the bucolic French countryside. To President Jacques Chirac, they are a growing problem.

Rave parties, Dionysian fests involving abundant marijuana, heroin, cocaine and especially the designer drug Ecstasy, have been around for about a decade in Europe. But now, with five rave-related deaths reported in a year and increasing property damage, they are drawing the attention of France's political establishment.

Some of the secretly organized parties draw tens of thousands from across Europe. Others are small regional affairs. But they all feature drugs, techno music and the open air.

Elsewhere in Europe, there are larger, much more organized and urban rave parties, such as Berlin's Love Parade, which drew at least 800,000 last month, and Zurich's Lake Parade, which drew 750,000. In France, typical raves take place in rural areas. News travels by word of mouth, and authorities are almost never forewarned.

Since July 2000, at least five people have died in connection with rave parties in France — two of drug overdoses, one who fell off a roof, one who fell into frigid water and one in a drug-related shooting. Last month, two women were raped at a rave in eastern France.

The political battle over the raves began in April when conservative lawmaker Thierry Mariani introduced a bill requiring organizers to give notice to authorities. Many ravers protested, saying spontaneity is an essential element.

Socialist Prime Minister Lionel Jospin was unable to convince the leftist majority in the National Assembly to back the bill, which died last month.

But Chirac revived the issue, using his traditional July 14 television interview to say a new law might be needed — although he hoped it wouldn't be necessary.

Chirac cited raves that have caused damage to property, disturbed rural residents and led to injuries "without the least person held responsible."

Mariani estimates that in the first six months of the year, more than 730 rave parties were held across France.

Last month, some 30,000 people, mostly in their 20s, traveled by car, camper, van or hitchhiking to a grass field near this Breton village. Many came from hundreds of miles away, including some from Britain.

The aim, said many, was to reaffirm their freedom, escape a world gone too commercial and flee a nightclub scene that has become stale or too expensive.

"We're young, we just want to party," said Noemie Dubourdieu, 21, of nearby Blougouvelin.

In France, raves are known both as "teknivals" — a fusion of techno and festival — and "free parties," in a reference to liberty and the fact that it costs nothing to attend.

The Paule rave drew people from a large nearby music festival and snowballed into a four-day, round-the-clock affair in a mud-covered pasture.

Attendees, many with pierced noses, dreadlocks and trendy hooded jackets, found out where to go by word of mouth. Many were angry that the government would consider clamping down on them.

"What makes them flip out is that they don't control us," said Fleur Dupleich, 23, a film student in Paris.

Residents were divided about the invasion. One man, who refused to give his name, stomped through the field with tears in his eyes, complaining about the mess and loud music. Others were more tolerant.

"They're not harming anybody," said Jean-Paul Bozec, 50, from the nearby town of Blouray. "Still, we would much rather coordinate with the organizers. We just don't know who they are."

There were no serious injuries. A Red Cross tent treated 670 people for cuts, minor burns, or the effects of partying too hard.

While several ecologically-minded ravers led a nonstop cleanup effort at Paule, trash was spread all over. Regional official Jacques Garau said 200 tons of garbage were cleared — mainly bottles, cans and food wrappers.

The Paule rave "was a real problem, like all raves," he said. "People entered by force, tore up fenceposts and ruined the field. It was a difficult sanitary situation."

But ultimately, it's the drugs that make raves what they are. Some are concerned about the implications.

"It's too bad. Some of these people are starting to use heroin at 17 or 18 years old," said Guillaume 23, who said he was one of the few ravers not to use drugs. "They aren't going to go far in life."
