Risky, last-ditch effort saves satellite

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Three space shuttle astronauts reached up with their gloved hands Wednesday and caught a 4½-ton, slowly spinning satellite in a risky but successful effort to save the craft.

"Got it!" shouted one of the spacewalkers, Pierre Thuot.

■ Related story/10A

"Houston, I think we got a satellite," shuttle commander Daniel Brandenstein said from inside Endeavour.

At the last minute, there was a hitch in the long salvage effort. When it came time to release the satellite from the shuttle early today, the electrical latches did not release at first. On the third try, they did.

"I tell you, that old boy didn't want to go, did he?" said Sam Gemar of Mission Control. "I'm not sure what happened. This has been one heck of a day."

The rocket booster on the satellite was to be fired later today, sending the errant craft into its proper orbit. The satellite had been stuck at a uselessly low altitude for more than two years.

Earlier, the spacewalkers had held onto the Intelsat-6 satellite for 1½ hours — one complete circle of Earth — to steady it while they attached a bar that could be used as a handle for the shuttle crane.

It was the first three-man spacewalk ever, and NASA's reputation as a can-do agency had been riding on it. It was a victory that NASA needed in its defense of humans in space.

Success had eluded Endeavour's seven-member crew on two previous days. But the emergency plan, executed by Thuot, Thomas Akers and Richard Hieb, worked beautifully.

The three spacewalkers stood in a triangular formation. Thuot was on a platform held by the shuttle crane, Hieb was on a sill at the edge of the cargo bay, and

Resignation to open 2nd council seat

■ Transfer causes DeVaughn to vacate District 1 slot.

By Debbie Lincecum

Staff writer

City leaders are grappling with the fallout from the news that District 1 Council member Michael DeVaughn will resign.

The Rev. DeVaughn, pastor of the St. Paul Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, said Wednesday he will be leaving Midland June 6.

DeVaughn

"I have received word from the Episcopal office that I will be transferred to the Tyler area," DeVaughn said.

His departure will leave the council with two vacancies in the first part of June, when J.D. Faircloth, at-large member, resigns to become mayor. With Bill Morrow, appointed Feb. 11 to replace John Castro in an at-large seat, that would leave the council with three members who were not elected.

City officials said the situation is unprecedented. It also adds a new angle to a controversy already brewing over the way replacement members are chosen.

"This is very unusual, this number of resignations," said City Manager Fred Poe. "I can't ever remember more than one in a full year's time."

Faircloth said DeVaughn's news makes action toward both appointments critical.

"We need to make sure the residents and groups in District 2 have a strong say in who is nominated," said Faircloth. DeVaughn's seat must be filled first, the mayor-elect said.

"We've got to find that representative, seat him and have that person vote on my replacement," Faircloth said. "We have to move with great care, but we cannot postpone it. We're going to get to a period where we're up against a wall. To delay until after the budget work, I think, would be really wrong."

"I really regret that he's leaving," Morrow said. "He's an excellent person and council member. It means we've got two vacancies to fill." He said the process probably won't be "drawn out" but needs to be open and involve citizens.

In a 4-3 vote Tuesday, the council delayed any discussion about the appointment process until after June 1, when newly elected members are installed.

Little more than a month after the two vacancies occur, the council will be thrust into its budget preparations.

Voters said they want the appointment process changed, but the council has not yet discussed any plans. Voters in a May 2 non-binding referendum chose overwhelmingly to do away with

Economic hard times pinch area food bank

ODESSA — Hard economic times have befallen the Permian Basin Food Bank, which helps to feed thousands of West Texans already too-familiar with hard times.

"It really has hit us right in the gut, so to speak," Dolly Neff, the food bank's executive director, said Wednesday in an appeal for donated dollars to keep the operation going.

L.A. prosecutor to seek retrial of officer

By Seth Mydans

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES— District Attorney Ira Reiner said Wednesday that he would seek a retrial of one of the four police officers acquitted in the videotaped beating of Rodney G. King.

Reiner said he would press for a trial in an urban setting, instead of the mostly white suburban county where the first trial was held.

The district attorney said he would ask a judge on Friday to approve a new trial for the officer, Laurence M. Powell, on the charge of using excessive force as a police officer. It was that charge that deadlocked the jury that acquitted Powell and three co-defendants on April 29 of assault and related charges.

"Generally, the vast majority of the time, when we go into court to seek a retrial, the judge grants it," said Sandi Gibbons, a spokeswoman for Reiner.

The acquittals touched off two days of rioting in which 58 people were killed. No charges have yet been filed in the deaths, but on Monday the police arrested four people who they said were involved in an assault on a truck driver, Reginald Denny, that was videotaped

In the aftermath of the Los Angeles riots, Californians are buying firearms at the highest rate since the state began keeping records 20 years ago, and other states are reporting similar surges in gun sales.

In large part, the rush to buy firearms in California can be attributed to one of the more frightening messages to come out of the three days of burning, looting and violence in South-Central Los Angeles: the fear that the police might not be able to defend people during an outbreak of civil unrest.

While it may be too soon to tell how the image of Angelenos protecting their stores and homes with upraised semiautomatic rifles will alter the gun-control debate in the United States, one thing seems certain: The riots have made gun owners out of people who used to shun guns.

California residents bought 20,578 guns in the first 11 days of May, a 50 percent increase over the same period last year and a pace that will set a record for gun purchases in a one-month period if it

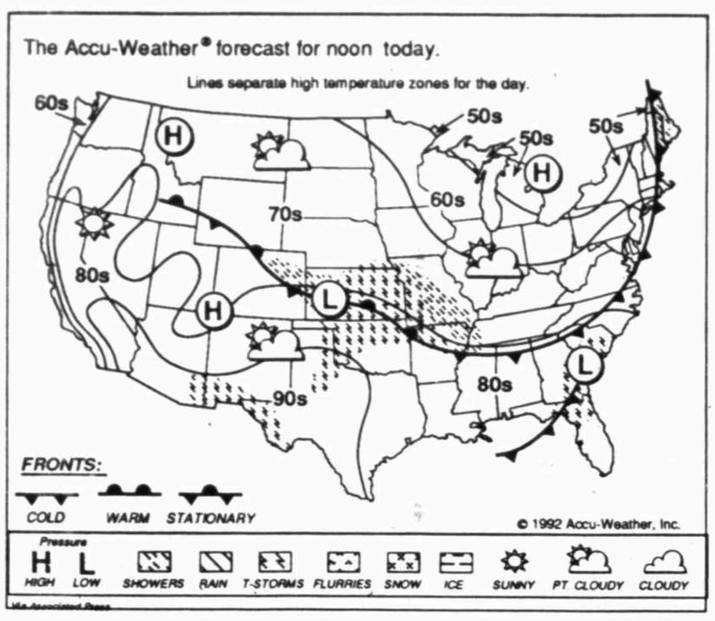
WEATHER SUMMARY



Chance of showers on tap

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of showers, a high near 90 and south winds 10 to 15 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of showers and a low in the lower 60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of showers and a high near 90.

After an overnight low of 58, Wednesday's high reached 91 compared with the record high for that date of 102 set in 1960. The record low for that date is 41 set in 1953.

STATE

It was mostly cloudy, humid and hot across Texas on Wednesday with southerly breezes bringing more Gulf moisture into the state.

Forecasters said a dry line and upper level impulse provided the focus for severe thunderstorm development in the unstable air over North and West Texas.

Afternoon tornadoes were spotted in Upton County and over San Angelo but no damage was reported. However, slow-moving storms have been responsible for heavy rain and large hail, including golfball-sized hailstones near Abilene. Street flooding was reported in parts of western San Angelo.

Temperatures ranged from the 70s in the Panhandle to the 80s and 90s elsewhere. Houston's high of 92 degrees broke the record for this date of 90 degrees set in 1990.

The wind was generally from the east to southeast at 10 to 20 mph throughout west texas.

Forecasters said South Texas would be mostly cloudy with widely scattered thunderstorms possible. Highs were to be in the 80s and 90s with lows from the 60s to 70s.

West Texas was expected to be partly cloudy today and tonight with widely scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms with highs from the middle 80s in the north and mountains to near 100 in the Big Bend lowlands. Lows were to be in the 50s and 60s.

The North Texas forecast was for partly cloudy skies and high temperatures through Friday. Highs were to be 87 to 92 with lows of 65 to 72.

NATION

Thunderstorms rumbled through the South on Wednesday while rain was scattered across much of the rest of the nation. Record high temperatures were recorded in the Northeast.

A severe thunderstorm watch was posted over parts of southeast Oklahoma, southwest Arkansas, northwest Louisiana and far north Texas. A tornado watch was posted over much of central and north Texas.

Rain and occasional thundershowers fell over the southern Atlantic coastal states, the southern Appalachians, southern Alabama, eastern Kentucky, Ohio, the upper Mississippi Valley, the northern Plains, northwest Oklahoma, the Texas Panhandle, northern Colorado and southern Wyoming.

Rain also was scattered over southeast New England and northwest New York state.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at 1 p.m. CDT included 0.85 of an inch at Wilmington, N.C.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

RESCUE: Astronauts use hands to snag satellite

(From 1A)

Akers was balanced on a pole straddling the bay. All three men were anchored to their posts by foot restraints.

Hieb locked the capture bar onto one side of the satellite, and then Thuot clamped on the other end. The handle, called a capture bar, failed to work on the two earlier rescue attempts, on Sunday and Monday.

The capture was accomplished just before 7 p.m. CDT. The Endeavour had just passed to the southwest of Hawaii, 225 miles high and traveling at 17,500 mph.

After waiting for almost a half hour for the satellite to come into the right position, Hieb said, "Let's do it!" Almost as one, the three put their hands on the satellite.

The three astronauts surrounded the satellite like three legs of a tripod. The operation required extraordinary delicacy; any jarring motion could have caused the fuel inside the satellite to start it rocking.

The shuttle was in a tail-to-Earth position, and the mottled blue globe was turning slowly behind the astronauts as they captured the satellite.

There was applause at Mission Control in Houston and also at the Intelsat control room in Washington. The 122-nation consortium paid NASA $93 million for the rescue, and stood to lose it all — plus $1 billion in potential revenue from the satellite — if the rescue failed.

"I think we have seen some incredible work by some awfully brave men at NASA," said Irving Goldstein, chief executive officer of Intelsat. "This means that we are out of the woods."

Thuot, Hieb and Akers began their spacewalk by building a bridge over Endeavour's cargo bay using parts that had been put aboard for another project. That provided a platform for Akers to stand on during the rescue.

Brandenstein held the shuttle steady as he closed in on the Intelsat.

The astronauts were in position long before Brandenstein put the cargo bay within reach of the satellite.

RETRIAL: Prosecutor to press for urban setting

by news crews on the first day of rioting.

If Powell is tried again, it would likely result in parallel trials involving the two videotaped beatings, which have become focal points for racial tensions. The officers who beat King, a black motorist, are white; the men who beat Denny, a white truck driver, are black.

In the first case, city officials expressed concern on Wednesday that another acquittal could result in more violence, and they expressed hope that an urban jury would convict Powell.

In the second case, Reiner said Wednesday that he would file multiple charges against the men who were seen in news broadcasts beating Denny.

Three of the men, arrested in pre-dawn raids, will be charged today with attempted murder, aggravated mayhem, torture and second-degree robbery, with a "special allegation" that the crimes were committed with intent to promote criminal gang activity, he said. Under California laws, a special allegation allows increased penalties for felony convictions.

All three men, Damian Williams, 19, Henry Watson, 27, and Antoine Miller, 20, face life in prison.

Reiner said the fourth man, Gary Williams, 34, would be charged with second-degree robbery and would face a maximum of seven years in prison.

In addition, U.S. Atorney Lourdes Baird said a federal complaint was filed on Wednesday against the first three men for willful interference with interstate commerce, which could bring a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine. She said other federal charges might be added later, most likely involving violations of civil rights and riot-related charges.

A federal grand jury is also reviewing evidence against the four police officers to determine whether they will face civil-rights charges in the beating of King.

PINCH: Hard times befall Permian Basin Food Bank

(From 1A)

tions have just gone zip," Ms. Neff said. "It requires a certain amount of dollars to keep it going. People see us as needing cans of food and not dollars."

As always, the food bank needs and welcomes donated foods.

But money, about $456,000 this year, is needed to keep the food bank in business.

Money is not coming into the food bank as readily as it has in the past because of personal and corporate anxieties about the slowdown in the economy.

The food bank, which was established in 1985, fed 45,455 West Texas families last year across the Permian Basin and Trans-Pecos areas. The food bank distributes food to 194 charities, including churches, which feed the hungry.

"If we don't stay alive, it will cost the community," Ms. Neff said. Desperately hungry people "will be in dumpsters (looking for food). They will be on the street. Desperate people do desperate things."

Her "greatest fear" is that "families are going to go without food if we don't keep struggling."

She plans to struggle.

"Let's all look at our own selves," Ms. Neff said. "Let's pinch tight, help the food bank, and get the food out to those families that are in need."

The food bank's board of directors has made some tough decisions, including cutting its work force from 10 full-time employees to five full-time workers and one part-timer.

The food bank is in "urgent need" now for $10,000 just to pay salaries and wages and past-due operating expenses, said Midlander Donna Johnson, food bank board president.

"Times are hard, but people must be fed, and that's what we want to do," Ms. Johnson said. "The numbers of families which need the services of the food bank are increasing every day due to the difficult economic times in this area."

The food bank's mission to feed the hungry will never change, Ms. Johnson said. "The thing that has changed is the economy of the Permian Basin."

There is a slowdown in donated dollars, said Abel Luna, a Midlander who is on the food bank's board.

"There's a lot of uncertainty in the oil patch right now," Luna said. "And a lot of people are not willing to part with those donation dollars as they were before."

But the biggest problem is the tremendous increase in the demand for food, while income has been "drastically reduced," Luna said.

Food bank board member Gerald Petty of Midland said the food bank needs to raise money and to get the food out to hungry people who have fallen on hard times.

"The biggest majority of all of the churches and the Salvation Army (and other charities) come to the food bank to get their food," Petty said. "The amount of food that comes in is just unbelievable and how fast it goes out" is equally impressive.

Keeping the food bank open and operating, Petty said, "means the difference in people going hungry and people having food on the table."

Donations may be mailed to the Permian Basin Food Bank, P.O. Box 4242, Odessa 79760.

COUNCIL: City leaders grapple with filling 2 slots appointments.

But a charter election — required to effect that change — cannot be held for more than a year because of state law.

DeVaughn's spot must be filled by a resident of the district, but Faircloth's could go to any eligible city resident. In District 2, DeVaughn has said he will suggest restaurateur Julius Brooks and educator Johnny Williams.

"I sure don't want any backroom deals," DeVaughn said. "I want an African-American to take my place and I hope the remaining council will take my advice."

Community leaders reacted with regret to the news of DeVaughn's transfer and called for action.

"We hate to see him go," said Isabel Jimenez, a member of the Midland County League of United Latin American Citizens. "But it's going to be interesting to see what they do with this (vacancy) in light of what's been going on. I hope they contact us to be involved in (filling) it."

"We're probably going to try to submit some names," said Alma Marshall, chair of Federation of Citizens United to Serve (FOCUS). "I think it's really important right now that we institute a process by which we fill these seats. It needs to be a fair process and ... we need to proceed with all expediency."

Members of LULAC, FOCUS, the local National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and other citizens have combined to form a group to become involved in public issues.

Civic leader and airport supporter Ed Vogler said the council should seek the help of some experienced people to guide the city through the budget process.

"This is a critical time," he said, suggesting former members Bill Williams and Jose Cuevas, as well as outgoing Mayor Carroll Thomas, to help the remaining council. "They have some experience and that is what the council needs right now."

In his absence, DeVaughn said his major concern is that the city continue to support youth programs.

"Any city lacks vision if it does not support its future leaders," DeVaughn said.

CAF: A windfall of sideshows awaits families era.

The aura of the war years is just one facet of Saturday and Sunday's Wings-N-Thing at Midland International Airport.

Flying over the CAF Headquarters will be the Lockheed F-117 Stealth fighter, "the most modern equipment in the Air Force arsenal," Wilson said.

The 8:30 a.m.-to-5 p.m. event will feature a mix of classic pre-war, propeller-driven aircraft, and CAF bombers, fighters, trainers and transports with state-of-the art, high-tech aircraft, including the supersonic military Stealth and the futuristic civilian Beechcraft Starship.

Wings-N-Things will take on a county-fair atmosphere, minus the Ferris wheel and livestock.

But there will be a windfall of sideshows: Oops Alley Clowns and jugglers, magicians, Mexican folk dancers, Midland Community Theatre's Summer Mummers, barbershop and Big Band musical groups, face-painting, children's games and more, according to Courtney Clark, who is organizing the Wings-N-Things entertainment.

Other features include a pancake breakfast, hangar dance, silent auction, and the display of motorcycles and exotic automobiles, including a Lamborghini and a Maserati, Clark said.

Bob Rice, CAF acting executive director, said Wings-N-Things will be "truly a family affair."

Rice said he hopes interest in the event would be "in the aviation arena."

However, he said, "not everybody is particularly focused on aviation. So, we have a variety of things." Exotic and antique cars, remote-control model airplanes, general-aviation aircraft and military aircraft are all on the menu, he said.

"We want to provide an opportunity for a family to come out and enjoy a day with the Confederate Air Force."

Military aircraft at the Wings-N-Things are to include the U.S. Air Force's Rockwell International B-1B bomber, the Lockheed C-5A Galaxy transport, and the U.S. Marine Corps' Harrier.

The B-1B and the C-5A are to be on display both days.

The Air Force's F-117 Stealth fighter is scheduled to fly over CAF headquarters at about 10:45 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday, said Norma Webb, the CAF's director of marketing and communications. The Harrier will demonstrate its maneuverability at noon on Saturday and Sunday.

Barbi Woods, CAF operations coordinator, said CAF warplanes on exhibit will include the Boeing B-29 Superfortress, the North American B-25 Mitchell, the Martin B-26 Marauder, the Curtiss C-46 Commando, the Curtiss P-40 Warhawk, the Bell P-63 AirCobra, the North American P-82 Twin Mustang, the Messerschmitt Me.-109 and the Heinkel He.111.

Russian-designed and Chinese-built Yak aircraft are to be flown to Wings-N-Things by Marcus Bates of Odessa and Bill Laws of Coleman. Jon Baumann of Midland will exhibit his 1947 classic Cessna 120.

The Beechcraft Starship will be on exhibit Saturday only.

"We have something planned for everyone," said the CAF's Ms. Webb. "There will be lots of activities, lot of food, lot of planes and lots of fun."

Southern Union opens world's largest natural-gas vehicle conversion center

AUSTIN (AP) — Southern Union Gas opened Wednesday what it says is the world's largest facility for converting gasoline-powered cars and trucks into vehicles that can run on natural gas.

The grand opening of the Natural Gas Vehicle Technology Center was commemorated by Gov. Ann Richards, an NGV owner, who proclaimed Wednesday as "Natural Gas Vehicle Technology Day."

NGV supporters say their alternative fuel idea is the cheapest, most environmentally friendly way to drive.

"Anything that can save money and help the environment at the same time, to me makes it a very easy decision" to convert, Southern Union president Peter Kelley said.

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, a longtime NGV proponent, also praised natural-gas technology for its environmental benefits and financial rewards.

Texas General Services Commission executive director John Pouland said, "Our commission will convert our vehicles and we'll work with every agency in the state to convert their vehicles."

Southwestern Bell has converted seven of its Austin-based trucks, which earned the company the American Lung Association of Texas' Clean Vision Award. The company was recognized at Wednesday's ceremony.

Kelley said his company has performed 1,000 conversions in the last six months. They have been besieged by so many orders, that "if we don't increase our staff ... in the next 30 days we'll have a nine-month backup," he said.

Among those being solicited for conversions are school bus systems, metropolitan transit agencies and state agencies, he said.

The conversion process takes about four hours and costs between $2,500 and $3,500, based on the vehicle's number of cylinders.

Most of the cost is labor, Kelley said, and that is expected to decrease as mechanics become more experienced, especially when dealing with similar vehicles.

A natural-gas tank either can replace a gasoline reserve or can be used alongside it.

By having joint tanks, a vehicle can double its mileage capacity. The natural-gas tanks can be designed to hold as much fuel as gasoline reserves and the mileage per gallon is almost equal, he said.

Kelley said many vehicle owners who have their vehicles converted prefer the dual tanks because of the added capacity. The fuel lines can be alternated by the flip of a switch on the dashboard.

Natural gas also is cheaper, costing roughly 66 cents per gallon. However, there are only about 39 natural-gas stations in Texas, Kelley said.

"You're saving about half the price of gasoline. The number of miles you've driven tells you how many years it takes to pay it back," said Kelley, adding that once a conversion kit is purchased it can be switched to another vehicle for about one-third the original price.

FIREARMS: Some states report a similar rise continues.

Although there is no way to account for gun purchases nationwide, some states in which sales are tracked through registration report a similiar rise since the three days of rioting, which began April 29.

Likewise, the National Rifle Association, the nation's most powerful gun lobby, reports an increase in requests for membership since four white Los Angeles police officers were acquitted in the beating of a black motorist, touching off the civil unrest.

Even before the riots, about 500,000 handguns had been legally sold in Los Angeles County in the last five years. Federal officials estimate there about 200 million guns of all kinds are in circulation nationwide.

During lunch hour one day this week at B&B Sales in North Hollywood, the biggest gun store in Los Angeles, customers took numbers and waited in long lines to buy pistols, shotguns, semiautomatic rifles — anything with a lethal kick.

Throughout Los Angeles, people who had never wanted a gun are now anxious to buy one. David Penso, a 20-year-old janitor at a Thrifty Drug Store in Los Angeles, recalled watching looters pillage a discount store while the police drove by.

"The cops were there," Penso said, "but they didn't do anything. The only way people can be protected in Los Angeles is if they protect themselves with guns."

Penso said he was now taking instruction on how to shoot a pistol.

Compounding the fear among Los Angeles residents was the fact that gun stores were a popular target of looters in the riots. The police say about 2,000 weapons of all sizes were stolen at that time.

Professional gun instructors say they are being overwhelmed with requests for business from people in the wealthier, mostly white sections of West Los Angeles and Beverly Hills, where many homes have long had a security sign posted in the yard reading, "Armed Response."

"I always thought if there was a serial rapist or murderer loose my business would go up, but nothing beats a race riot," said Sean Collinsworth, owner of Deadly Force, a personal gun training service in Los Angeles. "People are really scared."

Members of the National Rifle Association, which has been building membership over the last year, say they will use the riots to continue to press their argument against gun control. The association, with 2.8 million members, says it has added 1,000 members a day since the riots began.

"People are coming to the conclusion that even in the best of times there is not a lot the police can do for you," said Fred Romero, the association's field representative in Southern California. "Nobody's safe. It really is a jungle out there."

Romero's sentiments were echoed by a number of people interviewed in Los Angeles. "Quite honestly, I've lived in a well-to-do neighborhood over the last year and felt that I had no need for a gun," said Don D. Cross, a 41-year-old graphic designer who lives in the city's Westwood section.

"I don't mean to sound pompous, but I don't think society is working anymore. Everything is breaking down."

Advocates of gun control say such arguments border on an acknowledgment of anarchy.

"Having a gun will not keep the peace," said Susan Whitmore, a spokeswoman for Handgun Control Inc., the largest gun-control lobby in Washington. "If more guns were the answer, we would be the safest nation in the world."

Officials who track gun sales nationwide say it is typical for such sales to rise after a particularly prominent random act of violence or in the days leading up to the start of new gun restrictions in a state.

In Florida, for instance, which has a three-day waiting before a person can buy a handgun, sales leveled off this week after a 25 percent rise last week; 4,309 guns were bought in the week after the Los Angeles rioting, as against 3,366 in the week before it.

Illinois officials also reported anecdotal evidence that gun buying had increased in the past couple of weeks, but they said actual figures would not be available until the end of the month.

In New York, which a requires a three- to six-month waiting period before a person can get a license to buy a gun, officials say it is too early to track statewide figures.

But gunshop owners in New York City say they have done a record business in the last 10 days among people who already have licenses to buy firearms.

"I've had frantic calls from people who in a million years would never want a gun — Park Avenue types, for example," said Michael Zirmo, owner of Zirmo Co., the largest gun seller in New York City. "People say these riots have set gun control back 25 years, and I agree with them, based on what I'm hearing. A lot of people realize if you don't look out for yourself, nobody will."

The most likely focus of the gun-control debate this year will continue to be on a bill in Congress that would mandate a waiting period before a person could buy a handgun. A similar bill was passed by both house of Congress last year as part of an anti-crime measure, but the measure withered in a conference committee. A waiting-period bill is expected to be reconsidered this year.

Currently, about half the states have a waiting period of some sort, during which time a background check is done before a person can buy a firearm.

California, for instance, has a 15-day waiting period from the time a person pays for a gun until he or she can take possession of it. In that period, the state checks the buyer for a criminal record, and if one is found, he is barred from picking up his gun and his money is refunded.

Both sides in the gun-control debate see useful arguments in the California gun-buying binge.

Last year in California, nearly 6,000 would-be gun buyers — most of them convicted criminals — were turned down when they tried to buy guns. The figure represents slightly more than 1 percent of the 489,133 gun purchases made in the state that year.

"It's very hard to argue that Los Angeles would have been any safer if 6,000 criminals could have bought guns instead of being denied them by the California law," Ms. Whitmore said. "Once the dust settles, I think people will look at all the facts and conclude that California gun laws probably saved lives."

But opponents of gun control say the California law has only angered law-abiding citizens who were surprised that they could not buy a gun when they believed they most needed it.

"What happened in Los Angeles is a good indication of what people feel when they are subject to a waiting period," said James Baker, the chief lobbyist for the National Rifle Association. "It woke a lot of people up — black, white Korean, whatever — when the police in L.A. told them that they were on their own during the rioting."

Some of the frustration at waiting to buy a gun was evident at gun shops around Los Angeles. At B&B Sales, anxious customers moaned when told about the 15-day waiting period. All the clerks wore sidearms, and people were searched as they entered the store. It was a security precaution, the owners said.

U.N.: Bosnia situation dangerous

■ Mission in Croatia also in jeopardy because of ethnic battles.

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The United Nations said Wednesday that it was too dangerous to maintain a peacekeeping mission in Bosnia-Herzegovina, a day after the European Community withdrew its last monitors to protest Serbian aggression.

The U.N. chief said its peacekeeping operation in Croatia, where about 10,000 troops were to be deployed to separate fighting Serbs and Croats, also was in jeopardy because of ethnic battles.

Guns fell silent in this capital after Serbs imposed a unilateral five-day cease-fire Tuesday, but fighting raged against a coalition of Muslim-Croat forces in northern Bosnia, the Belgrade-based Tanjug news agency reported.

It said fierce clashes between the majority Muslim-Croats and Serbs who oppose Bosnia independence were in progress Wednesday between the towns of Derventa and Doboj. The news agency said in the village of Grabska that Muslim-Croats "suffered a total defeat," but no casualty figures were given.

Tanjug said a 6-mile column of ethnic Serb refugees — up to 10,000 people — was moving from the area around Bosanski Brod on the Croatian border.

It quoted refugees as saying they were forced to flee after Croats and Muslims stepped up attacks when the Serb-dominated federal army decided to pull out from Bosnia.

In Sarajevo, Gen. Lewis Mackenzie of the mission directing the U.N. peacekeeping operation in Croatia, told reporters that 200 of the mission's 300 members would be pulled out in the next few days.

In a report to the Security Council, U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said: "It is not at present feasible to undertake peacekeeping activities" in Bosnia, except for the limited U.N. presence at its headquarters in Sarajevo and in the Mostar region.

He also approved a request from the commander of the U.N. force in Sarajevo, Lt.-Gen. Satish Nambiar, that the headquarters be relocated until the situation calms in the capital.

Boutros-Ghali's report also made clear that the U.N. mission had failed to mediate between Croats and ethnic Serbs in the dispute over extending U.N. Protected Areas in Croatia to include Serb territory now controlled by the federal army.

Serbs have vowed they will resist by force restoration of Croatian authority in their territory, while the Croats are opposed to its inclusion in U.N. Protected Areas.

Bosnian Serbs, in their self-styled parliament in the Serb-held northern town of Banja Luka, on Tuesday defiantly formed their own army but appeared to acknowledge mounting diplomatic pressure on their allies in Serbia with the five-day cease-fire.

The move followed Washington's decision to recall U.S. ambassador Warren Zimmermann from Belgrade.

On Monday, the 12-nation European Community withdrew its ambassadors from Belgrade, capital of Serbia and the new, smaller Yugoslavia.

More than 1,300 people have died and 700,000 fled their homes since Bosnia's Muslims and Croats, about two-thirds of the area's 4.3 million people, voted Feb. 29 for independence from Yugoslavia.

Ethnic Serbs boycotted the vote and are determined not to sever their links with Serbia.

Earlier Wednesday, Bosnia's Muslim President Alija Izetbegovic was reported planning talks with Gen. Zivota Panic, the new chief of staff of the Yugoswlav federal army, and Branko Kostic, the army's civilian commander.

But Tanjug later reported the talks scheduled for Wednesday at Sarajevo airport were postponed for security reasons.

They were to center on withdrawal of the federal army from Bosnia, where it has helped Serb paramilitaries capture over half the state's territory.

President of Mexico orders in-depth Pemex restructuring

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Carlos Salinas de Gortari Wednesday ordered a restructuring of the state oil giant Pemex and gave the monopoly 30 days to present its plans.

The order comes less than a month after a Pemex gasoline leak caused a sewer line explosion in the west-central city of Guadalajara, killing more than 200 people and shattering a working-class neighborhood.

Thousands were injured or left homeless by the explosions, which tore up five miles of city streets.

The order was revealed in a communique from the Ministry of Energy, Mines and State Industry. It said the reorganization was to be "in depth with the aim of strengthening the administration." It gave no other details.

The order specified that Pemex is to remain under ownership and control of the state and that Pemex would retain control of all aspects of production, from drilling to marketing.

Officials of the Guadalajara storage facility where the leak took place are among the nine people jailed on charges that include negligent homicide.

Nobody at the national level has been named as responsible for the blasts.

Since the explosions more leaks have been found in Pemex facilities around the country.

Donna Johnson, center, follows the casket of her husband, Eugene, as she hugs her son after funeral services in Westville, Nova Scotia, on Wednesday. Rescuers found four more bodies, bringing to 15 the death toll in last weekend's mine explosion.

Workers find more bodies; funerals begin for miners

PLYMOUTH, Nova Scotia (AP) — Recovery teams pounding their way through rock and crawling through narrow tunnels found four more bodies in a coal mine Wednesday, raising the death toll an underground explosion to 15.

Hundreds of mourners filled churches for the first funerals as workers continued to search for 11 missing miners. Hope faded that any would be found alive.

"Why this happened we cannot say, anymore than we can answer why a tornado devastates the city, or an airplane is pulled from the sky by gravity," the Rev. Charles McPherson said at the funeral for 22-year-old Robert Doyle.

The ceremony was held in a church whose stained-glass windows depict old-style mine lanterns. Coal miners and uniformed firefighters wiped away tears as they sang hymns.

Five other miners were buried Wednesday. At a church in nearby Westville, one angry mourner flicked a cigarette butt at reporters behind police lines across the street. Families of the victims have repeatedly asked police and mine officials to guard their privacy.

The methane gas explosion Saturday trapped 26 men at the Westray mine, about 75 miles north of Halifax. Rescue efforts began almost immediately, but workers have been hampered by dangerous levels of explosive and poisonous gases.

Workers Wednesday tunneled for hours, wading through knee-deep water, before bursting through a rockfall into open areas and finding the bodies.

The rescue teams did not interrupt their search to bring the bodies out for identification.

"The teams are pressing on to look for the other missing men," said Colin Benner, a spokesman for the mine's owner. "That's the highest priority."

He said the four miners found Wednesday apparently died instantly in the explosion, as did the 11 found Sunday.

The rescue crews had reached the deepest part of the mine, more than a half mile underground.

Don't be the last to find out what's happening.

SEOUL, South Korea — Twelve-year-old Kim Eun-ai could only manage a 73 average on her school tests in April. To atone, she decided to kill herself.

The sixth-grader wrote a suicide note to a friend, went to the 15th floor of an apartment building and piled her books neatly on the fire escape. Then, police said, she leapt 15 floors to her death as classmates watched from the street.

The death of Eun-ai is only one of at least seven in recent days among students terrified of failure and unable to cope with South Korea's highly competitive educational system.

On Wednesday, the 10-year-old son of a Seoul businessman, Kang Shim-deuk, hanged himself using his belt. His mother told police her son had been in anguish since his parents scolded him for poor schoolwork.

Other deaths included a high school freshman who set herself afire after doing poorly on an exam, a 21-year-old studying to retake college exams who hanged herself and three high school students who jumped from roofs of buildings.

"Education authorities and households are shocked," said the Korean-language Hankuk Ilbo newspaper. "Why have they all killed themselves?"

The answer is an uncomfortable one for South Koreans, who until recently have become almost blase about occasional suicides. Dozens of students kill themselves every year and, except for grieving families, they have received little attention. Many educators and parents take the view that only the weak succumb.

But there has been growing concern over the stress on the nation's young, who are judged at every level almost entirely on scores based on what they have learned by rote — including the all-important college entrance exam.

"Students are skeptical of the meaning of life itself because of stress stemming from the current education system in which they only work to enter college," said Yoo Song-hak, a commissioner at the Education Ministry.

Acceptance into college is the only sure ticket to a job, prestige and financial reward. Yet the nation's 200 colleges and universities have room for only one-quarter of the one million high school students who apply each year.

Lines to get into city libraries begin before dawn. Parents and tutors give students pills to keep them awake to study all night, and it is not uncommon for a parent to beat a student who does poorly.

Every year some teachers, parents and students are caught trying to cheat by faking scores. Bribes are common, even in primary school.

South Koreans are among the world's most educated people. The nation's literacy rate is 98 percent, but the extreme emphasis on education is taking a toll.

"Young people are getting fed up," said Park Kyung-hee, a recent college graduate who has younger sisters. "They want to have more fun, like teen-agers in other countries. They don't want to study all the time."

"Students are driven to suicides under pressure from their teachers and parents who always think about good school records," said Kim Kye-hyon, a pedagogy professor at the prestigious Seoul National University.

"The current system must be changed," said Kim.

South Koreans have talked for years about moving the focus on education away from the college entrance exam, and to change the exam itself to include interviews, essays and creativity.

Cubans worried about U.S. military maneuvers

By George Gedda
Associated Press writer

HAVANA, Cuba — An ambitious U.S. military training program in the skies and on the waters of the Caribbean has Cuban officials worried that the United States may be preparing a military strike against the island.

But American officials dismiss the Cuban concerns as nonsense, pointing out that President Bush has stated repeatedly the United States has no such intention.

Those assurances are of little comfort to Cuban authorities, who are wondering why the United States maintains aircraft carriers in the Straits of Florida and why U.S. fighter planes reportedly have been averaging 75 flights a day to within 60 miles of the Cuban coast over the past three years.

A newly published pamphlet contends that "the number of fighter planes available for launching an attack against Cuba is close to 450."

In addition, Cuban officials say that over the same three-year period there have been more than 500 U.S. spy overflights of the island.

State Department officials won't confirm or deny the Cuban figures. But they say it is hardly surprising that the Caribbean is used for training because Florida is the headquarters for a large number of military bases.

The officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Cuba's concerns may be understandable but the Defense Department has refused to give U.S. diplomats permission to reassure the Cubans that the United States has no hostile intent.

The Pentagon sees no harm in making the Cubans nervous, the officials added.

A current source of concern for Cuba is a joint military exercise called Ocean Venture, in which more than 30,000 personnel began participating May 1. Most of the exercises are taking place in North Carolina and the adjacent coast and include infantry, air and amphibious operations.

"Against whom are these exercises directed?" the Communist Party daily Granma asked the other day. "Who is the enemy?"

The commentary went on to raise the possibility that the United States was making contingency plans against potential enemies in the Caribbean, above all Cuba.

Politically, the United States has not softened its stance against Cuba despite the end of the Cold War and the decision of President Fidel Castro to renounce support for leftist movements in Latin America and elsewhere.

Now that the United States has fewer enemies, officials in Havana believe Washington can concentrate its energies on Cuba.

But the Bush administration has been more forceful than previous administrations in ruling out the possibility of using force against Cuba.

Assistant Secretary of State Bernard Aronson said a year ago that the "false threat" of invasion is "just another excuse to deny the Cuban people the right to determine their own destiny."

Cuba is not taking any chances. Among other defensive measures, it has been constructing an elaborate underground tunnel system throughout the country that will be capable of providing shelter to each of Cuba's 10.5 million inhabitants in the event of an invasion.

Officials are increasingly wary about U.S. activities at the Guantanamo naval base at the island's eastern tip. They contend that the U.S. military, using the arrival of Haitian refugees at Guantanamo as a cover, has sent helicopters and other types of weaponry.

A Granma commentary said the dispatch of the 10th Mountain Division to Guantanamo was a sign that the Pentagon may want to use the base as a "possible theater of military operations."

Italians ignore Ms. Mussolini, analysts say

By Mary Beth Sheridan
Associated Press writer

ROME — After nearly 50 years, a Mussolini has returned to Italian politics. Since then, Il Duce's legacy hasn't been quite the same.

Mussolini

First, there was the scene on opening day of Parliament, when newly elected Alessandra Mussolini, the dictator's 29-year-old granddaughter, tried to take his former seat.

It was occupied. Undeterred, Ms. Mussolini, a neo-fascist, paid homage to the dictator by kissing a left-wing TV executive in the chamber. "You remind me of my grandfather," cooed the former actress.

Next, the blonde Ms. Mussolini was splashed on a popular gossip magazine with only a fluffy pink towel covering her — barely.

The two episodes, and the marginal political position of the neo-fascist party, explain the subdued reaction in Italy to another Mussolini in Parliament.

"She's an anachronism," shrugged GianFranco Pasquino, a political science professor at Bologna University.

Ms. Mussolini has, of course, been interviewed by a few newspapers. And she has hit the glossy magazines, usually in photos left over from her acting days, like the towel pose on the magazine "Gente" (People).

But while foreign journalists have besieged her since the April 5-6 elections, the first Mussolini to enter postwar government has largely been ignored at home.

Some observers say the attitude reflects Italians' growing detachment from their Fascist past.

In particular, with the collapse of communism, there has been an easing of the political polarization that consumed Italy since the war, exploding into left- and right-wing terrorism in the 1970s.

Analysts compare Ms. Mussolini to the royal family, the Savoias. Supporters of the dictator, the royals were banished after World War II.

"A few years ago, to speak about the Savoia family coming back was blasphemy," said Pasquale Nonno, editor of the daily Il Mattino of Naples, where Ms. Mussolini was elected. "Now you talk about it normally."

Still, if most Italians have relegated Benito Mussolini to the dust heap of history, his granddaughter hasn't. She joined the Italian Social Movement, or MSI, because it was "closest to the ideas of my grandfather," she told an Italian newspaper.

The party says it preserves the "cultural roots" of Fascism, but supports democracy. It calls for a tougher policy on crime, strict limits on immigration and a stronger presidency.

Ms. Mussolini shrugs off the violence and terror of the Fascist period. Asked by The Associated Press about the dictator's anti-Jewish laws, she declared: "My grandfather was against that."

Told they were in fact his idea, she snapped: "Well, you Americans dropped the atom bomb."

Ms. Mussolini does seem to have a kindler, gentler philosophy than her grandfather.

Her priority, she says, is "caring for people who are the least protected — the elderly, women and children."

That program and the big-eyed good looks she inherited from her mother Maria — Sophia Loren's sister — have helped overcome opposition to her last name.

But more important is the fact that the far-right has remained marginal in Italian politics, even as it has gained in France and Germany.

Despite boasting a Mussolini, the MSI lost ground in the April parliamentary elections. It dropped to 5.4 percent of the vote from 5.9 percent in 1987.

World must halt India arms quest

Russia has now agreed to a welcome "pause" in its lucrative sales of missile technology to India. But a pause is only a temporary solution, and missiles are only part of a deeper problem: India's headlong rush to acquire nuclear arms.

Both India and Pakistan have well-advanced nuclear programs. A standstill agreement between them, policed by mutual inspections, could halt this perilous race. Pakistan says it's amenable if India accepts. India has shown little interest.

An unrelenting international embargo on investment, aid and trade, especially in arms and technology, could force agreement.

After China went nuclear, India exploded a so-called "peaceful nuclear device" in 1974. It now has the means to build many devices. And Pakistan has recently acknowledged what Washington suspected — that it has for three years had the components and skill to assemble a bomb.

Driven by those suspicions, and under pressure from Congress, the administration imposed an aid and arms embargo on Pakistan in 1990.

But it circumvented that embargo by unlawfully issuing licenses for $100 million in commercial arms sales to Pakistan in 1990 and 1991. The embargo needs to be more tightly maintained.

Islamabad seems willing to halt bomb-making. Now it's up to India, which long ago abandoned the pacifism of Mohandas Gandhi. It has built up formidable forces — and used them, starting more wars in the past 40 years than any other country.

But the world around India has been transformed. Once leader of the nonaligned movement, India no longer has anything to be nonaligned against. Instead, it has a special interest in cultivating political and economic relationships with the rest of the world.

That's a source of potential leverage for nations with an interest in a nuclear-free India.

The United States and its allies can condition new ties on India's acceptance of international inspection. Japan has already stepped forward, warning India of an aid cutoff if it doesn't tame its nuclear ambitions. That's a useful example of what others can do.

World demands too much of Germany

Gelb

BONN, Germany — One can imagine Germany's future as a power of the first rank, but it is not now.

Germany is trying to fill a huge power vacuum left by a collapsed Soviet Union and a declining America — and it does not have the means.

After western Germans drag their eastern cousins to near equality, Germany will begin to reach its full potential. But that is 10 or more years away — except in Eastern Europe.

For now, Germany's friends and allies, old and new, ask too much of this newly united country. And Germans ask too much of themselves.

They are expected to produce breakthroughs in the free trade negotiations, unify western Europe, lead the aid effort to the ex-Communist east, stop Balkan fratricide and house millions of immigrants. This is more than the United States or Japan, two bigger countries with much bigger economies, could do. And it is certainly more than Germany, with its huge reunification costs and its fragmented politics, can undertake.

To be the father and the bride at every wedding, to pay and to star, puts too great a load on German society — though worriers should be calmed to see how well uptight Germans dealt with last week's labor strike that left garbage on their virginal streets.

Germany is and will be the pre-eminent power in Europe. It has and will have enormous responsibilities. But the West should take some pressure off Bonn, and Germans need to relax a little themselves.

Hans-Dietrich Genscher, in his last weeks as the German foreign minister, disagrees. "We have to lead — in partnership with our allies," he insisted from his characteristic slouch in an office he has graced for more than 18 years. That is longer than anyone has commanded the foreign policy of modern Germany, save for Otto Bismarck, the 19th century master diplomat whose portrait faces Genscher's desk.

"Germany cannot solve its internal problems," he continued, "without solving its external problems."

Genscher will not rest easy until an "architecture of peace and democracy" are in place from Vladivostok to Vancouver. He wants Germany to be the guarantor of close relations between Europe and America. He wants more binding ties between East and West. He wants Germany to be embedded firmly in a united Europe.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Perot candidacy is relief for outrage groupies

WASHINGTON — H. Ross Perot used to make himself useful around the Nixon White House, in hopes of settling disputes his company was having with the Social Security Administration.

Safire

When we were battling the sinister forces of Vietnam protest in 1970, the short Texan with the Haldeman crewcut came up with an idea to dramatize the vastness of our support.

He ran pro-Nixon, anti-protester ads in various cities, each containing a coupon to get a mail pull and build a mailing list. The Perot plan: to fill trucks with the returned-coupon mail and dump out the contents in front of cameras at the White House, proving that the people were spontaneously identifying with our Silent Majority.

As a certified mind-twister, I attended a meeting with chief of staff H.R. Haldeman, his aide Alex Butterfield and press secretary Ron Ziegler. My contemporaneous notes show Haldeman asking for a report on the Silent Majority reaction to a Nixon speech: Where were the Perot letters?

Butterfield said that Perot had reported he was carefully holding onto all the letters in each of the cities where ads had been run.

"Where exactly are the letters?" asked Haldeman, who liked specifics.

"In banks," replied Butterfield.

"You mean," said Ziegler, smacking his forehead, "when reporters ask me, 'Where is the Silent Majority?', I can say we have them locked up in bank vaults all over the country?"

"Yes," deadpanned Butterfield. "It's all part of 'One Nation Under God' Month."

Now, after all these years, I see the purpose of those letters: They were the seeds at the core of the up-from-the-people, Perot-for-President campaign.

Look, I have nothing personal against the barefoot boy from Easy Street. Anybody who kicked in a reported $200,000 to Nixon's '72 campaign — out of conviction about the war, or gratitude for favors, or the chance to show political insiderhood in board rooms — can't be all bad.

But it's troubling to see good people, tired of watching politicians trying clumsily to manipulate their emotions, throwing themselves into the arms of a master manipulator.

He strikes the pose of an amateur in politics, a surprised object of a grass-roots draft movement; in fact, Ross Perot is an old pro of 30 years' standing in the business-politics complex, and the financier of a candidacy that waters and cultivates its own long-green grass roots.

He sells the notion of being on the side of the "little guy." Yet when he went up against the entrenched and hidebound management of General Motors as a member of its board, instead of battling for the interests of stockholders he took a huge bundle of their money from the board in return for shutting up and tiptoeing away.

He pretends to be ready to balance our budget while solving our social ills — "no sweat" — but the Perot solution to urban violence is to allow a handgun in every pocket, opposing even a waiting period to see if the purchaser is a felon.

P.R. experts have to admire his little touches. The billionaire derides lobbyists "in their alligator shoes," dissociating himself ostentatiously from the trappings of wealth. The candidate with no idea of what to do longer than a soundbite snaps at questioners for dealing in soundbites.

Such an autocratic moratorium should give even believers in the Tooth Fairy pause. What kind of leader needs 60-day wonderment to decide his basic approach to complex issues? Can a two-month cram course in popular positioning prepare anyone for the presidency?

His first evasion has been to offer to bring "the leading authorities together" on the great battles. But authorities disagree; this is not a country that can be run by knocking heads together. Nor can we replace representative government with his "electronic town meetings" — mobocracy by instant referendum.

The Perot candidacy is an amusing diversion for outrage groupies, their coupons destined for bank vaults.

William Safire's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

ART BUCHWALD

Public prefers Perot for newest postage

There are two significant elections this year. One is for President of the United States and the other more important one involves which image of Elvis Presley will appear on a new 29-cent postage stamp. The polls are now closed on the Elvis contest and the results will be announced by the Postmaster General in June. One million, three hundred thousand people voted, which is more than anyone expects will vote in the Presidential election.

Buchwald

The contest was between the Thin Presley of yesteryear, likable and drug free, and the Fat Elvis in the last days of his life — a mess of a man who, according to his opponents, would look as bad on a stamp as he did in real life.

It was a bitter election with both sides claiming that the other played foul. A spokesman for the Thin Elvis maintained that the fat one was involved in all sorts of sexual affairs, took numerous prescription drugs given to him by an inept doctor, and is a terrible role model to grace anybody's Christmas greeting cards.

The Fat Presley campaign manager declared that Elvis' sordid past had nothing to do with his qualifications to appear on a U.S. stamp. "The private life of a person should not affect his suitability to be part of first-class postage. As for the drug charges — all the medicines that Fat Elvis took in his later life were necessary to combat his tennis elbow and queasy stomach."

He continued, "Instead of delving into the personal life of our candidate, people should realize what an older, avuncular person would do for the sagging reputation of the Post Office. The American public is sick of junk mail and they want to put an older person with credibility back on a postage stamp. Once you attach the Fat Elvis stamp you will never have to worry about your letter going to the wrong zip code again."

Supporters of the Thin Elvis ridiculed assertions that a Fat Elvis is what the country needs. One loyalist said, "We're predicting victory. The country doesn't want a burned-out president in the White House or a burned-out rock 'n' roll singer on a postage stamp."

Another told me, "The Fat Elvis people have spent millions of dollars trying to get their man elected.

"Every fat cat in America has been faxed."

As members of the public voted there was a tremendous amount of exit polling at post offices around the country. A lady said, "I voted for the thin one because Elvis was part of my youth. The fat one was part of my daughter's youth and I haven't talked to her in years."

Many people are curious as to how the election will be decided. First, there's the popular vote. If neither side gets a majority, the election will be declared deadlocked and then the House of Representatives will have to decide what picture to put on the stamp. Pundits are predicting that if it is a tie, just one person is worthy of appearing on the stamp and that's Ross Perot. He may not be qualified to be President of the United States but the public believes that Perot, with all his money, is the only one who will stick once you lick him on the back.

Art Buchwald's column is distributed by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

LETTERS

We need to communicate

Besides the historical significance to both Mexico and the U.S., which I will not deal with, there is a greater sociological, cultural, and psychological significance to the celebration of such historical events as Cinco de Mayo. We need to communicate, educate, and interact with one another in order to maintain a civilized society.

I am very grateful for all the school principals, teachers, students, parents, community leaders, and local businessmen who participated in Cinco de Mayo functions. There are still many who believe that these functions are unAmerican. We have had businesses boycotted, teachers' Cinco de Mayo materials destroyed, and anti-Cinco de Mayo petitions circulated in the schools. This kind of maliciousness is the same kind of insensitivity which has polarized people and caused the L.A. riots.

National polls in regard to the non-guilty verdict of the Rodney King trial indicate that the videotape of the beating did not affect the whites as it did the blacks. We should all be outraged with the verdict. The message that this verdict is sending to minorities is simple: "There is no justice for you and the system does not work for you."

Celebrations such as Cinco de Mayo, Martin Luther King's Day, Saint Patrick's Day, and others do not harm anyone. By acknowledging and supporting these events we contribute to racial and ethnic harmony and thus they are constructive and crime preventative activities. Shame on KMID's recent refusal to air the national ABC children's special on prejudice. Midland Independent School District's stand on the Rebel Lee flag and the failure to recognize Martin Luther King's Day as a holiday are also prime examples of this insensitivity. On the other hand, the recent efforts of the Midland Reporter-Telegram with its new monthly bilingual section, "Nueva Vista," the Odessa American's recent article on "Hispanics in West Texas" and KTPX Channel 9's program "De Colores" need to be applauded.

So why not allow and encourage these events? We have to learn that we are indeed a part of one another and thus we have to invest in each other. How difficult can it be to be kind to one another?

Handicapped privileges

Is it wrong for an able-bodied person to drive a car bearing a handicapped person's vehicle license or permit card into a parking space reserved for a handicapped if there is not a handicapped passenger in the vehicle at the time?

A handicapped person may badly need that space at that very moment.

Thanks for your support

The election is over and now I have some acknowledgements to make.

To those who supported me at the polls, and those I have talked to, both before and after the election, thank you. Your opinions and your support of my philosophy are greatly appreciated. You validated my platform, gave me confidence in my position and kept me going when there were many things to do and so few hours to do them. Very special thanks to my husband, Bill, and to my family.

To Mrs. Foster, congratulations. I know that you are willing and able to take your place on the Midland College Board of Trustees. I urge you to remember that Midland College is important to our future and you have a duty to be vigilant and maintain the excellence which the community has come to expect. The mandate is yours.

To the one out of eight voters who participated in the election, pat yourselves on the back, you did your duty. Whether your candidate won or not, you are to be praised for participating in the democratic process which keeps us free.

To the seven out of eight voters who did not participate in the most basic form of our government, the local level which most affects you and which is in your power to direct and influence, is inexcusable. Beware, when you abdicate your rights you endanger your freedoms for dictatorships, revolutions and anarchy are imposed on such as you. You run a risk of being dominated by a government of the 12½ percent, by the 12½ percent and for the 12½ percent.

Finally, to all the candidates, winners and losers, BRAVO! I know what courage it takes to stand up and say, "I am willing to serve, let the people decide." The possibility of having your private lives open to the public scrutiny is not a pleasant thought. You conducted yourselves honorably.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Gorbachev visits executives at stock exchange

NEW YORK (AP) — In a single, extraordinary day Wednesday, Mikhail Gorbachev became a card-carrying capitalist and condemned anti-Semitism as "one of the worst manifestations of national socialism."

The former Soviet president received a gold-colored entry badge to the New York Stock Exchange and schmoozed with movers and shakers as he inched through a wildly cheering, wall-to-wall throng of 2,700 on the exchange floor.

Hours later, he was blessed in Hebrew, stood on a stage with an Israeli flag, and received the Democracy Award from Yeshiva University. He acknowledged the moment saying, "Just a few years ago, such a meeting would hardly have been possible."

Jewish leaders had long sought a denunciation of anti-Semitism from Gorbachev, and he couldn't have been clearer.

"I resolutely reject and condemn anti-Semitism," he said. "It is one of the worst manifestations of national socialism."

Gorbachev was given the Democracy Award for allowing Jews to emigrate freely and for his role in reforming the political and economic structure of his nation. He also received a $100,000 honorarium from a private donor.

Gorbachev's Wednesday schedule, part of a 14-day goodwill tour of the United States, also included a speech at the Economic Club of New York and a meeting with ecumenical leaders.

In his Economic Club speech, he called on business leaders to invest in Russia, saying they could bolster its fledgling democracy and reap large profits in the process.

He said American businesses were lagging behind those in other nations that were plunging into the Russian market.

He also criticized his old political rival, Russian President Boris Yeltsin, saying some of Yeltsin's economic reform tactics were heavy-handed and could become like the methods dictator Josef Stalin used to collectivize Soviet agriculture in the 1920s and 1930s. Millions of Soviets died in that campaign.

Earlier, Stock Exchange Chairman William H. Donaldson and President Richard A. Grasso escorted Gorbachev through the hallowed marble hallways to the ornate NYSE board room, where they showed off an 18th century urn given in 1904 by Czar Nicholas II.

There, Gorbachev hobnobbed with about 50 exchange members and senior executives, putting in a good word for Russia's "vast potential" and priming the pump for future business deals.

He signed two guest books, and got two gifts: a book on the exchange, and brass bull-and-bear bookends.

Authorities have no idea where Exxon executive is

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — It's been two weeks since Exxon executive Sidney Reso vanished from his suburban home, his car still idling, but investigators still don't know where he is.

Reso

"We are reassessing on a day-by-day basis and occasionally an hour-by-hour basis," said W. Michael Murphy Jr., the Morris County prosecutor. "I can't conclude to an absolute certainty what happened.

"I wish I could say otherwise," he said.

Exxon on Wednesday set up a telephone hot line and offered a reward for information resulting in Reso's safe return. The company said the amount was substantial, but wouldn't be specific.

"We're asking anybody who has seen anything or knows anything to come forward," spokesman Jim Morakis said.

Patricia Reso said Wednesday she believes her husband of 37 years is alive.

"He's got a strong faith," she told the New Jersey Network, the state's public television station. "He's a courageous man."

This much is known since Reso, president of Exxon Co. International, disappeared after leaving for work the morning of April 29.

His empty car was found idling at the end of the 200-foot driveway to his $680,000 house; he was about to take the 10-minute drive to his Florham Park office.

After Reso disappeared, a group calling itself "Rainbow Warriors" contacted Exxon and authorities about a ransom. Officials won't discuss the details. Greenpeace, the international environmental group, has a boat named Rainbow Warrior II — replacing the original Rainbow Warrior sunk in 1985 by French security agents. The group has denied any part in the Reso case.

'This is a non-traditional case . . . if indeed this was an abduction.'

— W. Michael Murphy Jr., county prosecutor

Investigators say they have no proof, such as a photograph or tape recording, to prove the bespectacled 57-year-old executive was kidnapped by a terrorist group.

Police have stopped checking around the Reso house on a leafy, dead-end road with its neatly landscaped lawns and tennis courts.

All they can do now is sort out any new leads, Murphy said.

Investigators assume Reso is alive, because there's no sign he isn't. At the same time, the case remains wide open.

"This is a non-traditional case ... if indeed this was an abduction," Murphy said, citing one of many possibilities.

People closest to Reso say they can't imagine why anyone might harm him.

Mrs. Reso issued a plea last weekend. "Our need for him as a husband and father is great. Please, I want him home," she told The Star-Ledger of Newark.

She said Wednesday that if her husband was kidnapped by environmental terrorists, they've got the wrong man because he's not anti-environment.

She has declined interviews with The Associated Press and other news organizations.

The Resos' four grown children came to stay with their mother after their father disappeared. A son, Gregory, died of AIDS five years ago.

The Rev. Peter Schuenzel of Resurrection Parish, the Roman Catholic church in Randolph where the Resos worship, said prayers were offered for the missing executive Sunday.

Exxon officials are as tight-lipped as investigators. They won't even discuss the effect of his absence on the 650 employees at the headquarters, which runs Exxon oil and gas production outside North America.

In Reso's stead, two vice presidents are running the company, Morakis said.

The New Orleans-born Reso received a degree in petroleum engineering from Louisiana State University, joining Dallas-based Exxon in 1957 after college.

He became president of Exxon's international division in January 1988 after assignments in the United States, Australia and England.

Those who have worked with Reso raising money for his alma mater say he was a generous volunteer with his time and an amiable man. They cited, for example, the annual Cajun-style lunch he has given for LSU alumni at the Exxon offices.

"I would say he's a very open person, a caring person," said Ed McLaughlin, dean of engineering at LSU. "He's just a super person. ... We just hope that everything is all right with Sid."

Reso is described as 57 years old, white, 5 feet 10 inches tall, 180 pounds, with blue eyes and gray hair with red highlights.

Information regarding his whereabouts may be given to Exxon personnel by calling 201-538-8237 or 201-538-8345, day or night. Callers' identities will be kept confidential.

Dale Evans has heart attack

APPLE VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Dale Evans, 79-year-old wife and partner to singing cowboy Roy Rogers, was recovering Wednesday from a heart attack, her son said.

Evans

Miss Evans complained of chest pains early Sunday and her 80-year-old husband drove her to St. Mary Desert Valley Hospital, said Roy "Dusty" Rogers Jr. Doctors determined she had suffered a moderate heart attack, he said.

"It was a real shocker to us," he said. "Dad has had heart troubles over the years, but she never has. ... But she's going to be 80 in October and, well, when you get older you have problems."

He said his mother was in intensive care, doing much better and able to sit up in bed. "She's in great spirits," he said.

Nursing supervisor Terri Snyder said only that Miss Evans was improving.

Miss Evans, who composed the couple's theme song, "Happy Trails" and the gospel standard, "The Bible Tells Me So," appeared with her husband in Western movies. They performed together on television in the 1950s and '60s on "The Roy Rogers Show" and "The Roy Rogers and Dale Evans Show."

From 1986-89 the couple were hosts of "Happy Trails Theatre" on cable TV's The Nashville Network, a program of repackaged Rogers' movies and the couple's recollections.

Teen with reattached arms wants to get on with his life

HURDSFIELD, N.D. (AP) — The teen-ager whose arms were reattached after being torn off in a farm accident is graduating from high school Sunday and wants to get on with his life without the world watching.

■ More national news/2D

John Thompson, 18, says he's determined to have fun on graduation weekend.

"I can't live my life in a shell because people are watching me," he said this week.

"I've been so scared to do anything in public. I've been scared that people will write and want their donations back.

"But I'm a teen-ager. I'm not a perfect person," he said.

Thompson, whose arms were reattatched in January, received money and wishes from people all over the world after his story was featured in the national media.

He said he's considering majoring in vocal performance at the University of Mary in Bismarck.

"I definitely want to get into music," he said. "It's been my dream all my life. Now, it's the only thing I can do right now because I can't write and stuff."

He said a Minneapolis recording studio has invited him to cut a demonstration record.

Thompson is scheduled for more surgery May 23, when doctors plan to remove a muscle in his back to create a bicep for his left arm. They also plan to remove bone from his hip to graft to bones in his arms that aren't healing properly, he said.

Astronauts don't walk, they hop or fly

By Harry F. Rosenthal
Associated Press writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Spacewalk is a misnomer. Spacework is better. So is spacehop. Spacefly. Spacesweat. Spacegrunt. Spacecuss. And spaceplay.

One thing is sure. No one has just walked.

Possibly that's why NASA, with its fondness for initials, opted to call such activities EVAs, for extravehicular activity. EVA encompasses the above and more.

Tom Akers' entry Wednesday to the ranks of space travelers who have left the safety of their ships increased their number to 45 Americans, 30 Soviets and one Frenchman. In the shuttle program. Thursday's spacewalk is the 18th.

Spacejoy. A cosmonaut named Alexei Leonov surprised the world when he became the first to leave a spaceship. After popping out of the airlock of the two-man Voshkod-2 in 1965, he extended his arms and floated joyfully for 3,000 miles. Only a tether to the spacecraft averted his becoming a permanent human satellite.

Spacejet. Edward H. White II, who died tragically later in the Apollo 1 fire, carried a small gun-like device that spat jets of oxygen when he became America's first spacejetter, also in 1965. He was reluctant to return to the Gemini spacecraft saying, "This is fun. I don't want to come back in.",

'This (spacejetting) is fun. I don't want to come back in.'
— Edward H. White II

Spaceloquence. The most watched EVA ever was on July 20, 1969, when Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin became the first humans to step onto another world. "That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind," said Armstrong. "Magnificent desolation," said Aldrin, a fitting oxymoron if ever there was one.

Spacehop. The 12 astronauts who were on the moon became expert at taking loping strides in the one-sixth gravity, looking as if they were on pogo sticks. Eugene Cernan and Harrison Schmitt set the modern outspace record in 1972, 7 hours and 37 minutes.

Spacefly. Bruce McCandless, in 1984, set hearts racing by strapping a jet pack on his back and flying untethered from his shuttle, with the world as a spectacular backdrop.

Spacework. Three times previously, astronauts have leaned out of the cargo bay, grabbed satellites and held them until they could be repaired or brought aboard.

Spacebuild. Jerry Ross and Sherwood Spring were the first construction men, assembling a four-story tower and a pyramid in the cargo bay.

Everything about EVAs, starting with the struggle to put on space suits, involves maximum physical effort. That's the reason for the spacegrunt, the spacesweat and the spacecuss.

And there is something heady about being able to cavort about, free of gravity's grip. So astronauts push themselves off one side and zoom to the other. They tumble and leap and some have done somersaults. If it weren't in space, it would be called horseplay.

Planning commission backs airport projects

■ Airport officials are seeking federal funds for runway work, safety and drainage.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff writer

Improvement projects of about $18 million at Midland International Airport have been given the support of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission and the City Council.

The airport is seeking federal grants, known as discretionary funds, for the projects. Discretionary money is left in the Federal Aviation Administration's coffers at the end of the fiscal year and doled out to airports at the agency's discretion.

Planned work is all "airside," that is, related to runways, safety, drainage and other needs of the airplanes using the facility.

"These aren't new projects," said Airports Director Ken Day. "They are all in our five-year plan. We're trying to prepare everything for the possibility of funding."

To be eligible, the airport needs to have the projects designed and ready to go to bid before the money becomes available, officials said.

Midland International's entitlement — its yearly FAA allotment — is already committed this year and next, Day said.

Discretionary funds, are "our money coming back to us," said Ed Vogler, chair of the city's airport advisory board. "It comes from the fees we send to Washington (D.C.)"

Airport funds will be needed to pay for design work up front, but if grants are available they will pay 90 percent.

Mike McGregor told the council Tuesday that the airport fund could issue certificates of obligation to pay the 10 percent match for the grants. A measure expected to go to the council late this month or next would issue $1.5 million in certificates to be used as matching funds.

"We've been matching these grants with our airport reserve and it's gotten to the point that we shouldn't do that anymore," McGregor said. "We need another source."

The airport can pay the certificates because its existing debt is declining rapidly, McGregor said.

Expected to be $1.2 million next year, the debt will drop to $700,000 in 1994. With the added certificate payments, the debt would be $1.3 million next year and $946,000 in 1994.

Without certificates, the airport would be debt-free by 1998. Certificate payments have been estimated at $97,000 the first year and $230,000 annually thereafter.

The planning commission Wednesday endorsed to the grant pre-applications. Council members Tuesday were agreeable to the plans as well.

Work includes the rehabilitation of some runways and taxiways, more signs as required by the FAA, a new firefighting vehicle, drainage work and fencing.

"This work is absolutely necessary," Vogler said. "We cannot sit back and have the facilities deteriorate. . . . Rather than go into the general fund (for tax money), we should obtain grants and keep the airport up to standards.

"The airport does not use tax revenues and I am adamant that it remain that way."

Jury verdict finds Midlander guilty of manslaughter

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

A 32-year-old Midland man was guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the Oct. 19, 1990, fatal stabbing of Timothy Robison, 26, in the parking lot of Bojangles bar, a 12-person jury decided Wednesday.

Punishment for William Allan Ross will be determined today when the jury reconvenes in Judge John Hyde's 238th District Court.

After almost three days of testimony, jurors deliberated about three and a half hours before reaching the verdict, deciding against murder or self-defense.

The majority of testimony came from five eyewitnesses as well as the defendant. All six gave somewhat different versions of what happened that Friday night.

About 11:20 p.m. on Oct. 19, 1990, Robison was in parking lot of Bojangles, 3709 W. Wall Ave., visiting with Justin Holt, 31, Ronald Finnell, 26, and Finnell's girlfriend.

During that time, a car with four occupants stalled while pulling out onto Wall Avenue. In the

UTPB research spending drops

By John Powers

AUSTIN — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin cut spending on research and development by almost 25 percent in fiscal 1991, according to a state report.

UTPB, which was not listed in the top 20 public universities in research spending by the Higher Education Coordinating Board, put $312,365 into research in 1991, down from $415,935 in 1990.

Texas A&M, with $243.9 million, and the University of Texas at Austin, at $208 million, ranked far ahead of the other state universities.

Including medical schools, Texas public universities spent $958.9 million on research for the fiscal year Sept. 1, 1990, through Aug. 31, 1991, an increase of $97.5 million or 11.3 percent.

Federal funds accounted for $467.1 million, or about 48.7 percent, of the total, followed by private and university-controlled sources at $261.3 million, or 27.2 percent, and state funding of $230 million or 24 percent.

Midland-Odessa area gets new teaching grant

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — The Midland-Odessa area is one of five sites in Texas chosen for a "Renaissance Center" that will offer state-of-the-art teaching practices for instructors in science and mathmatics, Gov. Ann Richards announced Wednesday.

The program, part of a $10 million grant to the state from the National Science Foundation, will establish "classrooms of the future" to provide in-service training and demonstrate the most innovative ways of teaching science and math, said Leticia Vasquez, a spokeswoman for the governor.

The program, part of a $10 million grant to the state from the National Science Foundation, will establish "classrooms of the future.'

The centers are still in the idea development stage, and no details have been worked out on their specific locations, cost, size or number of employees, Vasquez said.

However, state officals want to set up the program within existing schools, she said.

Texas Education Agency officials in Austin and TEA education service center directors around the state will spend this summer planning the program, Vasquez said.

Officials hope to have the centers ready for instruction by January.

Other Renaissance Center locations will be in Corpus Christi, San Antonio, Dallas and Houston.

Richards said Texas was among 10 states and one commonwealth to receive the funding as part of a federal initiative to reform math and science education from kindergarten through

'Get a life,' then ask the animals what you should do with it

There's this admonishment going around: "Get a life."

I've heard it in the context of "Get out of my business and go bother somebody else."

Todd

Get a life.

It's a broad statement about going out and doing something backed by purpose and by the worthwhile.

Get a life.

It sounds about as terse as a suggestion I got the other day when I was running about town in my running gear. I was cruising at a pretty comfortable pace when a carload of young folks passed on by and yelled: "Get a job. Get a car."

Well, if you've got a car, you certainly need a job to afford it. And if you've got a job, you need a car to get there.

Get a life.

It has become a cliche, I suppose, because it bears a message that begs repeating. That's why certain phrases survive.

Get a life.

It's something we ought to take to heart. Mostly, it seems, our lives kind of fall into place or out of place. Things just happen. You reflect on your life and wonder how and why you are where you are.

Did you just fall into your job, marriage, home place and avocation?

If your finances are in a mess, did that entanglement "just happen," or did you take wrong turns down Credit Lane?

Get a life.

Occasionally, you may wonder what life is all about and just what you're doing in life. I do. I suspect we all do.

Today's bombardment of "information" is fraught with convoluted messages. To what degree are we influenced by that verbiage? Sales pitches abound person-to-person, on newsprint, on billboards, on television and radio. The money-grubbers are after your greenback dollars, and they'll do just about anything to get them.

Most of us do.

With their glittering and hyperbolic messages often keyed to sensualities; they will offer you just about anything. They offer a mixed fare: chewing gum, automobiles, blue jeans, carbonated soft drinks, beer and booze, credit-cards, hardware, software, hamburgers, fried chicken and get-rich promises. And if you are curious enough to dial certain 900 telephone numbers, you are making yourself prey for sultry voices — for hire — that propose to entertain you with prurient nonsense and pseudo-telephone romance. Back off.

There are lots of choices out there. Most of them tell you more about how to spend your money than how to live your life.

A clue on living life, I'm convinced, is out in nature. Watch the animals, both big and small, in your own backyard or out in the woods, in the pasture, out at a lake, up in the mountains, down in the valley, out in the country. There you will find nature. There you will find spiders, June bugs, ants, wasps, birds of all sorts, slithering things, fish, cattle, goats, sheep, horses, dogs, cats, rats, mice, coyotes, foxes, wolves, deer, antelopes, and, if you're lucky, armadillos and squirrels.

The charm in your life is in observing and studying any of God's creatures. None is without purpose and direction.

They all do what they do with finesse and with a strong will to survive.

They have order. They are not cursed with pride. They are cunning and work hard to survive. Count the ways, even those of the critters in your life. None wants to be what it is not. The blue jay does not desire to be a hummingbird. And the hummingbird gives no thought to being what it cannot be.

Get a life.

Nature tells us how.

TRIAL: Verdict is voluntary manslaughter car were Ross, his girlfriend, Katherine A. Hatfield, who was driving, and Sue Ann Aragones, 31, and Gary Filimon, 40, in the back seat.

(From 1B)

Words were exchanged between the two groups and a fight ensued between Ross and Robison, who died as a result, testimony indicated.

On Wednesday, Ross testified that when he emerged from the car to push start the vehicle, the three men in the parking lot approached and threatened him with physical violence. The men had been yelling profanities moments earlier, he said.

Then "I heard someone say 'Watch out. They got a knife,'" Ross testified.

Ross said he then pulled his knife defensively and almost immediately was struck in the right shoulder from behind and kicked in the ribs from both sides.

Ross testified that he, Robison and Holt fell to the ground, rolled around then got up.

"I don't know why it broke up," Ross said.

The entire incident lasted less than a minute, Ross told jurors.

The group in the car then fled the scene, Ross testified. They went to Ross' uncle's home where Ross gave the relative the weapon to throw away, he said.

Ross said he thought he may have cut someone.

Filimon, who said he never saw anyone with a knife, testified that Ross bragged about the incident after the group fled.

According to Filimon, Ross said in the car that "he cut one guy in the face and stuck the other guy in the chest" and exclaimed "You ought to have seen that guy's face."

Robison died from a stab wound to the heart and Holt sustained a cut over his left eye.

Under questioning, Filimon said he could not recall various incidents of that night because he was intoxicated.

The group in the car had been drinking for several hours, as had Robison and Holt.

Holt testified that Robison was yelling profanities at the car but that Ross was the physical aggressor.

Finnell downplayed Robison's yelling and said Ms. Hatfield told Ross to get out of the car and kill Robison.

During the incident, Ross was the only person with a weapon, Finnell and Holt testified.

Ms. Aragones testified the men in the parking lot were yelling at the car, and Ross and Ms. Hatfield were arguing because the car wouldn't start.

Ms. Hatfield told Ross to get out and beat up Robison and he apparently complied, Ms. Aragones told jurors. Ross was the only person that had a knife, she said.

In the car, Ross bragged about stabbing Robison in the chest, she said.

Later, Ms. Hatfield devised a false story for the group in case police asked any questions, Ms. Aragones said.

When Ms. Hatfield testified, she denied scheming to misinform police.

Her version of the incident was similar to Ross' but that she didn't actually see the fight. Responding to several questions, Ms. Hatfield said she did not recall particulars.

Detective Sgt. B.G. Johnson with the Midland Police Department testified that after the incident, when initially questioning Ms. Hatfield, she said a fight never occurred.

In addition to the voluntary manslaughter finding, jurors also determined Ross was guilty of using a deadly weapon in the commission of the crime and aggravated assault for the injury Holt sustained.

the undergraduate level.

"This award will permit Texas to make some long-needed system-wide changes in the way our students are taught math and science, and give us the long-term edge to compete in a highly technological global market," she said.

Plans call for a "Texas Math and Science Rennaissance" to focus on providing in-service training for teachers and preparation courses for students pursuing careers in science, mathematics and engineering.

Program leaders will use the Renaissance Centers as models for establishing such centers throughout the state.

Richards said 38 states applied for the $100 million in grants. Others receiving the awards besides Texas were California, Georgia, Kentucky, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Mexico, Vermont, Virginia and Puerto Rico.

DROP: UTPB research spending declines

(From 1B)

The research spending helps boost the state's economy because schools receive patents and licenses to commercialize discoveries, said Kenneth H. Ashworth, commissioner of higher education.

Engineering research, which helps develop new technologies, accounted for $173.3 million, or 18 percent of the total.

Medical, biological or other life-science research that generate new ways to prevent, diagnose and treat diseases and injuries accounted for $447 million, or 46.6 percent.

UTPB spent most of its research money in business administration, at $221,791. Other areas included engineering, $37,703; arts and humanities, $25,878; and physical sciences, $24,965.

Within those fields, in areas of special interest to the public, UTPB spent $126,342 on manufacturing technology, $33,953 on energy and $24,965 on environmental science.

Statewide, most of the university research money was spent on medical, engineering and life sciences, while the least went for law and public administration, psychology and arts and humanities.

In spending in areas of special interest to the public, $132.7 million went for cancer research, while Texas schools spent only $7 million on AIDS research and $5.7 million on manufacturing technology.

Lottery sets dates for drawings

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Lottery announced Wednesday that its first million-dollar prize will be awarded June 18 in Dallas. Eleven more $1 million drawings will be held weekly through Sept. 3.

"The 12, $1 million grand prizes make the Texas Lottery the nation's first to award so many large prizes, in cash, during its first" weeks, said Nora Linares, lottery director.

The odds of winning are long.

Lottery officials estimated the chance of a single $1 ticket being a winner are about 1 in 41.6 million. Only 500,000 of the first 300 million tickets sold will even qualify for the big-money drawings.

Ms. Linares said the $1 million prize will be paid in cash, all at once, unlike the 10- or 20-year payouts some other state lotteries offer.

Each of the 12 drawings will begin with a pool of about 80,000 of the eligible tickets that are mailed in by purchasers. From those 80,000, seven finalists will be chosen in a preliminary drawing.

One of the seven finalists will win the $1 million in a second drawing. The other prizes will be $50,000 for second place and $25,000 for third. Two finalists will win $15,000 each, and two will get $10,000 each.

Lee Youth Center sets program

Staff report

Once again, the Lee Youth Center will offer a chance for "happy campers" to do everything from playing tennis to getting a face full of foam.

Aside from foam fights and wading knee-deep in foam, youngsters will have opportunities to make arts and crafts, play pool, ping pong, baseball, soccer, volleyball, football, basketball, silly games or learn cheers and dance routines.

Midland-Lee Youth Center Summer Day Camp is taking registration for students who have finished the first grade but have not yet entered the seventh grade.

Four sessions of day camp will be offered — June 8-12, June 15-19, July 6-10, and July 13-17. All sessions will be offered from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. at the Lee Youth Center, 3500 Neely.

Cost of each one-week session is $30 per child. Campers should bring a sack lunch each day. Drinks and snacks will be provided. Cost for registering for more than one session is $25 for each additional session.

A foam day and Summer Olympics are offered at the end of each session.

Day camp staff includes youth center directors and high school counselors.

Enrollment is limited.

Air Force ends search for missing helicopter

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — U.S. Air Force officials have suspended a search for a Laredo pilot and two Mexican scientists whose helicopter is believed to have crashed in Baja California, Mexico, last month.

However, family members of pilot Lloyd Kolbe vowed to continue their own search.

"We're not stopping. We've depleted our funds at this time, but we are reorganizing to obtain more money to continue. We can't give up," Clay Kolbe, the missing pilot's son, told the San Antonio Express-News Tuesday in a telephone interview from Houston.

Kolbe, 51, was flying a helicopter April 21 for Gonzalo Medina and Rafael Rebollar, biologists for the Mexican government, to count bighorn sheep in the rugged Mexican peninsula.

They had flown out of San Rafael, Mexico, about 90 miles to the south of the California border.

Lt. Col. John Knudsen Jr., mission coordinator for the Air Force Auxiliary Civil Air Patrol in Imperial, Calif., said that although the search was suspended Tuesday, it was not closed.

"As far as the Air Force is concerned, it is suspended. If the Mexican officials find something, they will close out the search," he said.

The search area is about 150 miles long and 50 miles wide south of San Rafael.

The decision to suspend the operation was made by officials at Scott Air Force Base in Illinois, headquarters for the Civil Air Patrol, he said.

MISD offers summer preschool

Staff report

Midland Independent School District is required by state law to offer two programs — prekindergarten and bilingual summer school — for the 1992-93 school year.

To be eligible for the prekindergarten program — which is not Head Start — children must be four years of age by Sept. 1 and have difficulty in speaking or comprehending English, or must be economically disadvantaged.

Economically disadvantaged children are those who are eligible for free lunch or reduced lunch prices. The prekindergarten program will meet half-days at Bunche Early Childhood Center, 700 W. Jackson and at West Early Childhood Center, 2101 W. Missouri.

To qualify for the bilingual program, children must be at least five or older and eligible to enter kindergarten or first grade by Sept. 1. They must also have difficulty in speaking or comprehending English.

The bilingual summer program will meet half-days for eight weeks at Bonham Elementary School, 909 Bonham.

For more information about these programs, which are offered free of charge to qualifying children, call 689-1007.

Latest hatch brings new hope to Attwater's prairie chickens

By Anita Baker
N.Y. Times News Service

The future of a Texas prairie chicken, one of the country's most endangered birds, may rest with 35 fuzzy chicks hatched in recent weeks at Fossil Rim Wildlife Center near Glen Rose, Texas.

"We are hoping this is a turn of events," said Steve Labuda, manager of Attwater's Prairie National Wildlife Refuge in Colorado County, about 50 miles west of Houston.

Once counted in the millions in Texas and southern Louisiana, the prairie chicken — a member of the grouse family — will face extinction by 1998 if current declines are not reversed, warned the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Only about 460 of the birds remain, down from 1,500 in 1980.

Today, all Attwater's prairie chickens in the wild live on remnants of coastal prairies in Texas, its shrinking natural habitat. Hunting of the bird has been banned since 1937, when it became a protected species estimated to number 8,000. It was reclassified as endangered in 1973.

Heavy rains during last month's nesting season has heightened concern of a further decline, although wildlife officials don't count new chicks until July.

In April, 49 eggs were gathered from four nesting areas: one from the national refuge in Colorado County and the other three from Galveston County. Of those incubated at Fossil Rim, 43 hatched and 35 lived.

"This is the first successful hatching on a large scale," said Bob Smith, avian coordinator at Fossil Rim.

The chicks will form part of a captive breeding family that will eventually allow some prairie chickens to be returned to the wild — often in new locations along the coast where they formerly roamed in large numbers.

Once reproductive techniques are developed at Fossil Rim and Texas A&M University, where research is under way, additional breeding programs will be set up at other locations, Labuda said.

Several facilities, including the Fort Worth Zoo, have indicated interest in joining the program, he said.

Ken Seleske, the zoo's education curator, said: "It's something we would like to consider because of our commitment to Texas' endangered species."

The birds have been held in captivity before but have never been successfully bred, Fossil Rim's Smith said.

In the meantime, Smith said, a hurdle is educating the public about the species.

Smith said the current program might not progress unless there is as much public support for saving Attwater's prairie chicken as there has been for the California condor and spotted owl.

Boys & Girls Club sets programs

Staff report

Summer is almost here and the Boys & Girls Club of Midland has already begun registration for summer programs. The club will be closed May 24-31 for summer building maintenance and preparations.

Bentsen, Chilean leaders talk free trade

By Michelle Mittelstadt
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The president of Chile was on Capitol Hill Wednesday to promote the idea of a free trade agreement, discussing the issue in meetings with President Bush, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and the top U.S. trade official.

Bush wants to get free trade talks underway as soon as possible, Assistant Secretary of State Bernard Aronson told reporters in a briefing on the Oval Office session between Bush and President Patricio Aylwin.

"I think both governments want to pursue free-trade negotiations as quickly as that is feasible," Aronson said.

U.S.-Chile free trade talks also drew support from Bentsen, who as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee is one of the most influential voices on trade matters.

"Chile is a country that has made great progress in moving to the free market system, toward democracy, protection of human rights (and) re-establishing a growing and dynamic economy, so I would look forward to our being able to work out an agreement with Chile," Bentsen said in an interview following a half-hour, closed-door meeting with Aylwin.

Aylwin took office two years ago, ending 17 years of military rule under Augusto Pinochet, who remains Chile's military chief.

Aylwin has been credited with turning his country's economy around and bringing inflation rates from 30 percent in 1990 to approximately 18 percent last year. Chile's unemployment stands at a 17-year low of 4.8 percent.

Last year the United States had a $537 million surplus with Chile on total trade of $3.14 billion, making Chile the United States' 35th-largest export market.

The U.S.-Chile pact would be similar to one the United States is negotiating with Mexico and the first with a South American country.

An agreement with Chile could boost Bush's goal of a free trade bloc covering the Americas, known as the Enterprise for Americas Initiative. Chile already has a free trade agreement with Mexico, the first bilateral pact in Latin America. That agreement was signed last September.

"I think Chile is next on the list after Mexico. And I think in time we will have such an agreement with Chile," said Bentsen, D-Texas, who met with Aylwin in Santiago, Chile last summer.

Aronson did not disclose whether the two presidents had discussed a timetable for the talks, but suggested an announcement could come during Aylwin's visit, which ends Friday.

Aylwin, who is on a six-city visit of the United States, was in Dallas Tuesday, where he also spoke in favor of free trade between both countries.

It seems unlikely that the Bush administration would enter formal negotiations in an election year and while the contentious talks with Mexico remain underway.

The Mexican negotiations, which some say could be concluded as early as next month, have been criticized by some Democrats and labor groups who claim it could cost U.S. jobs.

But there may be pressure to negotiate an agreement with Chile as quickly as possible, a congressional source said on condition of anonymity.

The administration's "fast-track" authority to negotiate trade agreements without congressional amendment ends in June, the source noted. Under fast track, Congress must either approve or reject the entire agreement without being able to make any changes.

Extension of fast-track authority could be difficult to obtain, he said.

Man faces murder charge in shooting death, car fire

LONGVIEW (AP) — Gregg County Sheriff's investigators have arrested two men in the death of a White Oak man who was found in the back seat of a burning car.

Marshall McGuyer, 25, of Longview was charged with murder Wednesday in the shooting death of a man authorities identified as Randy Dewayne Nichols, 31, of the White Oak community just north of Longview.

Bond was set at $100,000.

Charles Wayne Kirkland, 18, of Longview also was arrested and charged with felony arson in the incident. Authorities believe Kirkland set the victim's car on fire to dispose of the body. Bond for Kirkland was set for $50,000.

Both men were being held Wednesday in the Gregg County Jail.

The body was burned so badly that Justice of the Peace B.H. Jameson ordered it sent to Lufkin for an autopsy, said sheriff's spokesman Lt. Ken Hartley.

A preliminary autopsy report Wednesday confirmed the identity of the victim, who was found in the back of his 1979 Pontiac shortly before 5 a.m. Tuesday. The cause of death was a gunshot wound to the head, the report said.

Longview fire crews and sheriff's deputies were notified early Tuesday after a passing truck driver spotted the vehicle in a ravine in a rural area north of Longview.

Students want UTSA president out

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Hispanic students at the University of Texas-San Antonio have called on President Sam Kirkpatrick to quit because the school's apparent choice for provost isn't Hispanic.

"We feel we have been betrayed, lied to — and our issues have not been clearly addressed," said Juan Garcia, president of the Bilingual Education Student Organization.

The students said Kirkpatrick has reneged on his promise to provide a multicultural campus environment.

Chris Bustamante, president of Movimiento Estudiantil Chicano de Aztlan, Tuesday criticized the coinciding of a semester break with Scott McNall's appointment.

Albert Ramirez, an associate chancellor at the University of Colorado-Boulder, was one of two finalists for the job of provost, which is a senior academic officer and assistant to the president.

"I felt that given a highly qualified candidate for the position there would be a Hispanic provost," said assistant professor Absael Antelo. "I felt that Dr. Kirkpatrick had used me and my colleagues for such an underhanded action. It simply reflects a level of hypocrisy and deceit in the individual."

The appointment has not been officially announced.

But Kirkpatrick invited Hispanic faculty and a search committee to meet McNall, dean of the University of Toledo's College of Arts and Sciences. Hispanic faculty members boycotted Tuesday's reception.

"The administration is calling him the provost designee," assistant professor Carolyn Fuentes said of the invitation. "I guess he's the provost designee."

Tans are risky, experts advise

AUSTIN (AP) — Experts from the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center have a word of advice for those would seek a deep tan this summer: don't.

Dr. Guy R. Newell, associate vice president for cancer prevention, said tanning destroys skin tissue and increases the chances of skin cancer.

"The perception is having a tan is healthy. It's visible skin damage," Newell said in launching a project to monitor the ultraviolet radiation bearing down on Austinites in the summer.

Newell asked Austin residents to heed the readings of a monitor set up to measure ultraviolet intensity.

The monitor, located atop a downtown building, began issuing readings Tuesday. On the informal scale of 1 to 10, Austinites experienced sunlight in the dangerous 8 to 9 range between noon and 4 p.m. Tuesday, according to the monitor.

American designs Hermes scarves

By Susan Hightower

HOUSTON (AP) — Kermit Oliver is the first American to design scarves for Hermes, the venerable French fashion house known for using colors so vibrant and silk so heavy that the hand aches to caress them.

Oliver spent Tuesday afternoon signing hundreds of his $215 creations at a champagne reception for fans and faithful customers of Hermes' posh boutique-art gallery, where a belt can cost $1,100 and ties start at $110.

He then drove home to Waco, where he works all night at a post office computer sorting mail that shoots past him at a piece per second.

"I couldn't afford one of them (his scarves)," Oliver, 48, said with a laugh.

Although he has been featured in exhibits for more than 25 years, Oliver and others familiar with his work paint him as a shy, reclusive man who shuns the limelight — and wealth — his fame could possibly bring.

"I'm just not driven by the material advantages of art. Matter of fact, I run away from it," Oliver said.

"Kermit is definitely one of the most important African-American artists of his generation in Texas," said Rick Lowe, who is guest curator of an exhibit of emerging black artists at Houston's Museum of Fine Arts.

OLIVER'S WORKS are in the permanent collections of Houston's Museum of Fine Arts and the Art Museum of Southwest Texas in Beaumont, and he has been shown in many other Texas galleries, exhibitions and corporate collections.

The Hooks-Epstein Galleries in Houston, which dedicates a show to Oliver every other year, has represented him since 1985. At a recent show, 19 of his paintings were priced from $1,750 to $15,000.

The works sell well, and gallery owners Geri and Charles Hooks say they wish they could get more.

'I'm trying to find the comparative truths. These universals, they cut across all cultures. This is what art is all about.'

— Kermit Oliver
artist

"Kermit is not at all interested in whether or not he becomes famous," Mrs. Hooks said.

"It's very difficult when I find an artist who is as talented as Kermit who could really sell a lot, but who really doesn't necessarily want to, as opposed to some of these artists who really want to sell a lot and don't have the potential for it," Hooks said.

A native of Refugio, 40 miles north of Corpus Christi, Oliver realized he wanted to paint in seventh grade and began formal training in college.

After graduating from Texas Southern University, he spent two years teaching art, then devoted much of the next eight years to professional art. He began working for the post office in Houston in 1978. In 1984, he moved to Waco with his family. He and Katie, his wife of 30 years, have a 29-year-old daughter and two sons, ages 19 and 14.

ON A TYPICAL day, Oliver rises at 11 p.m. and works until 8:30 a.m. Once home, he might read, work around the house, or paint anywhere from 20 minutes to 12 hours before grabbing an average four hours' sleep.

"I work because I work. That's what I'm supposed to do. I have a family; I'm obligated to be assured that each day they are taken care of. And art is so arbitrary, to depend on someone's whim," he said. "My art does not interfere with my domestic lifestyle. That is secondary, even tertiary."

Oliver began designing scarves for Hermes after some Houston enthusiasts introduced him to Jean-Louis Dumas-Hermes, chairman of the board of Hermes of Paris.

The four intricate works Oliver has designed for the 155-year-old House of Hermes over the past decade include a Pawnee chief, a Christopher Columbus theme to be sold this fall, and an intricate melange of Texas plants and wildlife. Two more scarves have not yet been unveiled.

This year's design, "Kachinas," fills the 36-inch square of silk with dozens of different American Indian Hopi dolls on backgrounds of turquoise, fuchsia, black, white.

While the designs are especially popular in Texas, "they sell, worldwide, very well," said Jacqueline Langelier, managing director of Hermes' Houston store.

VERY DIFFERENT are many of Oliver's realistic acrylics, which frequently feature religious figures and rustic barnyard animals. A 1986 painting shows a brown and white cow confronting an angel sitting on a haystack.

He uses a rich palette of symbolism from his own rural upbringing to key into philosophies, myths and spiritualism from around the world and across the ages.

His theme is transformation: life, birth, death.

"I'm trying to find the comparative truths. These universals, they cut across all cultures," he said. "This is what art is all about."

Oliver sees the Hermes scarves as chance to demonstrate his artistic philosophy to a wider audience, although he acknowledges the scarves' price is "the only undemocratic aspect about it."

"It's luxuriant, it's aesthetically pleasing, it's utilitarian — that's what all great art is all about. It has a function in a person's everyday life," Oliver said. "It's a greater opportunity than my own artwork. People all over the world have access to that, and its meaning goes beyond an elitist idea of fine art."

Neither Oliver nor Hermes officials would discuss his commission or royalties. "It's commensurate," Oliver said with a smile, adding he doesn't do as many scarves as Hermes wants. Materialism isn't what pushes him to create, he said.

"I don't have the drive. And that's one reason I went to the post office: I would've had to contribute too much of myself to promote my work, to have taken it to a higher level."

Women can become models after age 30

Staff report

Women aged 30 and older who are interested in becoming models are invited to enter the 1992 Dove Classic Model Discovery Contest. Winner of the contest will have the opportunity to become a professional model.

The winner will receive $25,000 in cash, a $5,000 designer wardrobe and a one-year modeling contract with Wilhelmina International Limited.

Entry forms will be available 10 a.m.-9 p.m. May 30 at Midland Park Mall, and at P.S. Images, 1105 Pueblo in Midland, until the July 31 contest deadline.

"As advertisers become aware of the growing number and increasing spending power of women over 30, they are recognizing the importance of using mature models to represent their products and services. Women over 30 want to see models they can relate to," said Phyllis Gonzales, owner-director of P.S. Images. "Therefore, the opportunities for mature models are growing steadily."

Women aged at least 30 by July 31 can enter the contest by submitting two snapshots (a head shot and full body shot), two wrappers from Dove Beauty Bar or the following phrase on a 3x5-inch piece of paper: "Dove contains one-quarter moisturizing cream. It won't dry your face like soap"; and in 50 words or less, complete the following statement, "I have camera potential because ..."

Women with prior national modeling experience or national commercial exposure are not elibigle. Women with local modeling or commercial experience are eligible.

Regional winners will receive a four-day, all-expenses paid trip to New York City to participate in the grand prize selection, and $500 toward a day of beauty in their hometowns. Judging will be based on skin and overall appearance, conversational skill and professional modeling potential.

Entry forms are available in the May issue of Ladies Home Journal or by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Dove Discovery, c/o Ogilvy Adams and Rinehart, 708 Third Avenue, Dept. M, New York City 10017.

DEAR ABBY

Couple's love is sweet in ripeness of life

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 62-year-old retired lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Navy (female Navy nurse). The brother of a close friend recently lost his wife, so they invited me to dinner and brought a gentleman along. Al was a widower, and I had never been married. We hit it off right from the start and soon became a steady foursome. This happened in August, and by November Al and I knew we were in love. We were married in December. He is 68.

Van Buren

No sex, as he had prostate surgery and radiation, but I adore the man, and we give each other back rubs. I am kissed, hugged and told that I am loved more times a day than I can count. His hearing is poor — hearing aids don't help his kind of deafness — but Al doesn't need to hear to know that I love him.

For Valentine's Day, he bought me a white orchid corsage and took me to dinner. I will love this man and will care for him happily as long as the good Lord lets me. We love our God and each other, and I just wanted to share my good fortune with you because I consider you a friend. — BLESSED IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR BLESSED: What an "upper" your letter is! You are both blessed to have found each other. May God bless you for many years to come.

DEAR ABBY: I went to the grocery store today and my purchases came to $8.21, so I gave the cashier one $5 bill, three $1 bills, a quarter and a penny.

The cashier looked puzzled. Then she said, "I have to give you something back, don't I? How much should it be?"

Abby, I had to tell her I wanted a nickel back. She said she was new on the job and wasn't used to making change. This is not the first time I've had to tell a cashier how much change to give me.

Some cash registers are so sophisticated nowadays, the cashiers don't have to know how to add 2 and 2. I mentioned this to the manager of a supermarket, and he told me that nobody has to know how to add and subtract anymore — there are machines that do it for you.

I am not against progress, but when a college graduate can't add a column of four figures without running for a calculator, there is something wrong.

I do volunteer work for the American Red Cross, and a fellow who works with me there is a graduate of a college in Iowa, and he asked me how many "j's" there are in "emergency"!

Little kids can't even tell time on an old-fashioned watch with numbers because most watches are digital now. I am 63 years old, but I think American technology has come too far too fast. I'm no old fogey, but I don't want a machine to do all my thinking for me.

What do you say, Abby? — 'DOC' IN FARIBAULT, MINN.

DEAR 'DOC': Amen, brother.

DEAR ABBY: After seeing all those limericks in your column, I decided to send mine. I entered it in a limerick contest last year and won. — KATHRY LEON, SEATTLE

DEAR KATHRY: I begged my readers to stop sending limericks, but yours is irresistible ... so I'm sharing it:

Two elephants — Harry and Faye
Couldn't kiss with their trunks in the way,
So they boarded a plane,
They're now kissing in Maine
'Cause their trunks got sent to L.A.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Credit card anxiety causes loss of balance

By Erma Bombeck

It's a disease no one wants to talk about.

You're fast asleep when suddenly you sit up straight in bed and your mind races. Did the salesperson give you back your credit card and did you put it away?

Bombeck

Credit card anxiety has made all the other forms of mental anguish I used to suffer pale by comparison. There was a time when I had a toilet-tissue-on-the-shoe fetish. I was sure I'd walk out on a stage to give a lecture and get a laugh before I said anything.

Then I went through a period where I was never sure if I had locked my keys in the car. I could be having a nice lunch when suddenly I'd grab my purse and start rummaging through it to reassure myself.

For many years I drove my husband nuts by shaking him out of a sound sleep to ask, "Did you lock the front door?" No matter what he told me, I never believed him until he got out of bed and double-checked it.

Forget the kids. I've never bonded with anything in my life as I have with my credit cards. Frankly, I never thought I'd feel that way about little squares of plastic. The idea of a stranger abusing them makes me crazy. My billfold holds 26 cards. Like a dealer in Las Vegas, I can shuffle and count them by putting my ear to them and listening. When one is missing, I panic.

I imagine it has fallen into the hands of Imelda Marcos, who is running through Nordstrom's shoe department. Or worse, a Third World nation is charging bombers and nuclear materials on it.

My anxiety peaks when it is nearly time for my credit card to expire and a new one to be issued. From year to year I never remember what the envelope looks like — only that it looks like a piece of junk mail, which I sometimes toss before I open it. Two days before the expiration date, I am shuffling through our trash cans in a frenzy.

The thought of losing a credit card isn't the only form of anxiety attached to it. The most severe form is the "max" factor. That's when you charge something and you're awaiting approval, and there's that awkward moment when the entire store knows you are maxed out and you stand there looking like you don't understand English.

A young friend of mine lost her engagement ring recently and was devastated. She still has her credit cards. She has a lot to learn about priorities.

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Leather's reputation evolves into gentler image

By Bernadine Morris
N.Y. Times News Service

Yves Saint Laurent showed a short, skinny smooth leather skirt in Paris a decade ago, and it became a mainstay of women's wardrobes throughout the world all during the 1980s.

Last year Karl Lagerfeld jazzed up his Chanel collection with zippered leather jackets based on the ones motorcyclists wear. He showed them with day and evening clothes, and many women picked up his cue.

That was just the beginning. Now designers on both sides of the Atlantic are heavily into leather. In Paris, Milan and New York, the fall and winter fashion collections were filled with leather styles, and not just motorcycle jackets either.

There are leather jackets tailored as carefully as if they were made of pin-striped woolens. Strapless bodices show bare shoulders for the evening and make suits look new when they are worn under jackets.

Leather pants are paired with colorful wool blazers as well as leather topcoats. There are surprises like a brief leather bolero that bares a sliver of skin at the midriff above a long jersey skirt, part of the trendy collection Marc Jacobs developed for Perry Ellis.

Most new leathers are shiny and black, but they rarely look tough. Sexy and seductive are better words.

DESIGNERS' EXPLANATIONS generally fall into two categories. They first endorse the practical qualities of the material. Leather is durable; it can be wiped clean after many spills; it doesn't crush and it is available in light, flexible skins.

Then they move into its esthetic qualities: it can be cut into interesting patterns, easily embellished with decorative stitching, or shaped in seductive ways.

Leather is paired with luxury materials like cashmere for a sybaritic look or with silk for the drama of the unexpected. It has come a long way from the traditional rugged motorcyclist's garb.

For some Europeans, leather carries the romantic glow of the American Wild West, one of the recurrent ethnic themes that has such appeal for so many. American designers are less concerned with cowboys and all that. Louis Dell'Olio of Anne Klein said the fringe that decorates his skirts was inspired by flappers of the 1920s rather than Davy Crockett. In addition to his fringed skirts, Dell'Olio likes to slip a leather vest under a wool blazer to enliven a classic outfit.

The bottom line is that leather has been readily accepted by retailers in stores all over the country.

"We're selling it by the truckload," said Michael Kors, the designer. "Literally. Store buyers have been reacting to leather as if it were the new gabardine. In 11 years in business, I've never seen anything like it."

When he was working on his new collection he decided to treat leather, both the smooth variety and suede, like fabric and he is delighted that his customers got the point.

Skinny suede pants will turn into the new leggings for fall, he predicts. A leather vest or blouse can make an old outfit look new, he added.

WHY THE sudden success?

"First, there is the inherent sense of luxury that leather imparts," he said. "Second, it is the kind of material that can be worn almost all year."

But most important is the fact that each leather piece is generally assertive enough to stand on its own, he said.

"It is readily apparent that a single leather piece can update the look of a lot of clothes women have in their closets," Kors said. "Store buyers are zeroing in on the idea that women will probably not be shopping for entire new wardrobes. A single piece or two that will enliven everything else is what they will be searching for. And leather fills the bill — suede for the times they are in a softer mood, smooth leather when they feel more aggressive."

Silent movies filmed in Ithaca, N.Y.

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — This city on Cayuga Lake once rivaled Hollywood as a movie-making center.

In the silent film era, Ithaca was a favored location for film crews because of its romantic scenery, steep canyons and gorges, hills and waterfalls. Many episodes of the popular serial "The Perils of Pauline" were shot here.

Green tea found to block bacteria that causes cavities

By Jean Carper

How about green tea as a dental rinse to ward off cavities? There's new evidence the old folk remedy works, as reported in Science News. Here are the details:

"Every time you eat a sweet, drink tea," was common advice from his grandmother, says Isaso Kubo, an organic chemist at the University of California, Berkeley. Now Kubo has uncovered the scientific logic behind that advice. He and colleagues credit the same compounds that give green tea its distinctive floral-scented flavor with also blocking bacterial activity that promotes cavities.

Specifically, their new tests show that flavor compounds in green tea can kill Streptococcus mutans. That's the bacteria that spin out sticky stuff called glucans that cling to teeth and help dig cavities.

If you don't like green tea, you can also find the antibacterial agents in coriander, sage and thyme, says Science News.

However, previous research at Forsyth Dental Center in Boston, has found that different compounds in black tea made from Lipton and Salada tea bags dipped in hot water for three minutes, can also help block the cavity-making bacteria.

A spinach deficiency?

People who eat a lot of leafy green vegetables, like spinach, may be helping their body stave off cancer. And not eating the green stuff may encourage a kind of "vegetable deficiency" that actually could promote cancer.

So suggests new evidence. For example, greens like spinach are chockful of numerous anti-cancer compounds, including the B vitamin folate or folic acid.

New research ties a lack of folate to cancers of the cervix as well as of the lung and oral cavity — so-called smokers' cancers. Smokers have less folate in their blood and in cells of the mouth and lungs. Researchers at the University of Alabama say such cancers may be partly due to a "localized deficiency" of folate.

Many studies also note that people who eat the least green leafy vegetables (spinach, kale, deep-green lettuce, collards) typically have twice the odds of lung cancer. Only an extra half a cup of green stuff a day seems to be protective.

The breakfast diet

Cutting out breakfast if you go on a weight-loss diet may not be the best idea. A new study by Vanderbilt University researchers suggests it's easier to cut fat and calories if you eat three meals a day, including breakfast.

They tested 52 women who were 30 to 60 percent over ideal body weight. For 12 weeks, some ate breakfast, lunch and dinner; others skipped breakfast. Both groups ate about the same number of calories a day.

Women who switched from eating no breakfast to eating breakfast lost more weight during the test.

Why? For one thing, they consumed less total fat in a day. They were less apt to impulsively grab higher-fat, high-calorie snacks between meals to satisfy their hunger. They also engaged in less "depression" eating.

However, they did have to eat smaller meals at lunch and dinner, which was a hardship for some.

Nevertheless, the researchers advise people trying to lose weight to eat a low-fat, high-carbohydrate breakfast. Especially if you now skip breakfast, you may want to start eating a morning meal to curtail impulsive snacking if you go on a weight-loss diet.

New danger to diabetics

If you have diabetes, be extra sure to eat foods high in antioxidants, like vitamins E and C and beta carotene. That's new advice from James Anderson, M.D., University of Kentucky College of Medicine.

The reason: The artery-clogging process appears abnormal and more severe in diabetics. Specifically, diabetics' bad-type LDL cholesterol is more susceptible to oxidation, and thus, more likely to become "toxic." In turn, such oxidized LDL, theoretically, is more apt to clog arteries. This might help explain why the risk of heart disease is two to three times higher in diabetics, says Anderson.

What causes the dangerous oxidized cholesterol? Probably diabetics' sustained high levels of sugar in the blood. As sugar is metabolized, it releases so-called "free radicals," agents that make cholesterol toxic.

You can counteract these hazardous free radicals by zapping them with antioxidants. And a good way to get more antioxidants in your blood is to eat antioxidant-rich foods. That includes fruits and vegetables like broccoli, oranges and carrots high in vitamin C and beta carotene, and grains and nuts, high in vitamin E, says Anderson.

Anti-cancer wonder drugs

Fruits and vegetables, especially green leafy vegetables, are emerging as a wondrous preventive medicine for cancers of all types. So suggests a new analysis of the evidence by John D. Potter, University of Minnesota's School of Public Health.

Potter found that people who ate the most fruits and vegetables were least likely to have stomach, esophageal, pancreatic, lung and colon cancer. So-called cruciferous vegetables (cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, brussels sprouts) emerged as very protective against all cancers. But, surprisingly, green leafy vegetables were even twice as apt as the crucifers to help prevent all cancers.

Potter also pointed out that raw, fresh fruits and vegetables appeared more powerful against cancer than cooked and processed varieties.

Fruits and vegetables contain 14 different classes of anti-cancer compounds, he says. More remarkably, the chemicals may intervene in at least 10 stages of the cancer process — so if they fail to stop cancer at the beginning, during early cell changes, they may still help block its growth later.

High-fiber equals low-disease

"Eat twice as much bread, especially whole grain bread, twice as many vegetables and 50 percent more fruit," urges Alex R.P. Walker, M.D., at the South African Institute of Medical Research. "Then you would be eating more like our forefathers," he says.

The advantage? It cuts your chances dramatically of constipation, diverticular diseases, irritable and inflammatory bowel syndromes, appendicitis, colon cancer and heart disease — all 20th-century disorders. Such maladies were rare at the turn of the century when a high-fiber diet was common, observes Walker, and are still rare among rural Africans who continue to eat the high-fiber diet of our ancestors.

Our bodies were "designed" to eat lots of high-fiber grains, nuts, fruits, berries and vegetables and legumes, he says, instead of the high-fat, high-sugar foods of today. For example, our typical daily diet includes a mere 4 ounces of bread compared with 21 ounces a couple of centuries ago. Indeed, our eating habits have changed more in the last 200 years than in the previous 20,000 years. Just eating twice as much fiber would do much to help bring back a high-fiber, low-disease diet, he says.

Ickey out

CINCINNATI (AP) — Ickey Woods, who led the Cincinnati Bengals to the Super Bowl as a rookie in 1988, was released Wednesday following three years of frustrating injuries, including major repairs to both knees.

"After a considerable amount of deliberation, the Bengals decided to release Ickey," said first-year coach Dave Shula.

"We felt that we wanted to give the other backs currently in camp more of an opportunity. By releasing Ickey at this time, he'll have the chance to hook on with another team at this stage of the preseason."

The Bengals left Woods unprotected but he had no Plan B offers. He said the move, which accompanies the Bengals' loss of James Brooks to Cleveland, surprised him.

"Any person who gets cut is upset," Woods said. "But I can't let emotion get to me. It might be a blessing in disguise."

Tour Du Pont

HOT SPRINGS, Va., (AP) — Australia's Phil Anderson became the first double stage winner and Greg LeMond narrowed his deficit over race leader Stephen Swart of New Zealand in the rainy and quick-paced seventh stage of the Tour Du Pont bicycle race Wednesday.

Anderson, the 1991 Tour of Britain winner who rides for Motorola, edged U.S. national team member Bobby Julich of Glenwood Springs, Colo., in a downhill, blurry pack sprint by a half-bike length in the 86.2-mile Harrisonburg to The Homestead road race in 3 hours, 46 minutes and 58 seconds.

"You don't really have to pedal in a downhill finish like today," said Anderson of the 50 mph descent. "You can't come from too far back like a normal sprint. It's more a matter of good positioning. I have been feeling better and if I can get through tomorrow, then I'll be in a good position for the finish."

Familiar faces dot field

■ Gordon Johncock hopes to join the bevy of veterans who have qualified for the Indy 500.

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Every year the struggle gets tougher, so why does Gordon Johncock keep coming back to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway?

The two-time Indianapolis 500 winner, old enough to know better at 55, is working hard this week trying to find enough speed to make the field for the 24th time.

Eight other former winners are among the 27 drivers already qualified for the tentative field, and two more, Tom Sneva and Johnny Rutherford, are on the speedway grounds with helmets at the ready, hoping for another chance on the 2½-mile track on May 24.

"You just like to come back and run," Johncock said Wednesday. "Hopefully, you can just get comfortable and run with no headaches and problems. Then it's fun."

But it certainly hasn't been fun for the Hastings, Mich., driver so far this month. Going into Wednesday's practice, his fast lap has been just over 214 mph, well short of what last year's sixth-place finisher expects it will take to the make the 33-car field.

Coming here with a 1991 Lola-Buick, Johncock fully expected to have an easier time making the field this year than he has in recent years, making only three of the last seven races, often after finding last-minute rides in obsolete equipment.

"This time, we had a good car and a good engine and plenty of time to get ready," Johncock said. "At least I thought we did. Things just didn't work out right.

"One of the problems is that we bought this car from Pat Patrick and it was made for the Alfa (Romeo) engine," he explained. "The team had to convert it for the Buick and they had convert some of the Alfa parts and change the tunnels (beneath the car).

"Then, when we got out on the track, we had problems with a bad oil leak, a nut that was thrown into the turbocharger and blew it up, then the car just had no power. From the apex (of the corner) out, I was in a constant four-wheel drift. When I came in, my tires had hotter temperatures than cars that had been going 220."

But Johncock remains hopeful he can find the needed speed before the final two rounds of qualifications, Saturday and Sunday.

"We're going to keep running out there (in practice) until we get it right. We're too far off right now. We might be able to go out there and qualify at 218 or 219 right now, but I surely wouldn't be comfortable."

Other former champions already in the field include four-time winners Rick Mears, A.J. Foyt and Al Unser, as well as Mario Andretti, Arie Luyendyk, Danny Sullivan, Emerson Fittipaldi and Bobby Rahal, all with one victory.

Unser ran into a small problem Wednesday, brushing the wall in Turn 4 and damaging the right front of his car.

Pancho Carter, a former pole-winner and veteran of 17 Indy starts, was added Wednesday to the list of drivers hoping to make the field this weekend.

Al Unser, Sr., one of 8 former Indy 500 champs to make the field, waits for practice Wednesday.

Quartet finds way to Austin city limits

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

No Midland girl has ever won a state track title, but four Tall City entrants have a shot at ending that distinction in Austin's Memorial Stadium Saturday at the state track meet.

Midland Lee has three girls who will compete in three separate events while Midland High adds another hopeful.

Lee junior Tanisha Mills will compete in the 400 meters Saturday night, just before Lee senior Traci Logan runs in the 300 intermediate hurdles. Lee junior Tekeira Strambler will be in the long jump at 10 a.m. while Midland High senior Cynthia Redic will compete in the shot put at 5 p.m.

Only Logan has experienced the high profile pressures that the state meet can produce, but Mills may have the best shot at winning that first Midland crown for girls.

Mills enters the meet with the fastest Class 5A time in the state this year with a 54.91, which she produced two weeks ago at the Region I meet in Lubbock where she was a no-contest winner over the field.

"This is what I wanted after missing this opportunity last year," Mills said. "I placed third at the regionals last year and I wanted to step up and move on to new things. I just want to go out and run my hardest."

Mills' closest competition appears to be in the form of Addey Whiteside of Arlington Martin, who comes in with a qualifying time of 55.56. Martin and Mills own the only times under 56 seconds and Mills beat Martin at the Region I meet by a full six yards.

Logan placed fifth in the state meet last year, but admitted she was a little wide-eyed going into the race.

"There were more people there than go to a Lee-Permian football game," Logan said. "That won't bother me this year. I just want to do better than I did last year because I didn't run a good race at all. This is another chance."

But the competition will be stiff for Logan. San Antonio Holmes runner Anjanette Kirkland has the state's best time of 42.04 and is a heavy favorite. Baytown Sterling's Darlene Maico has also broken the 43-second barrier with a 42.29. In fact, four runners have better times than Logan's best of 43.35, so she will have to pull an upset

NBA Playoffs

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Even one of the best front lines in basketball history can have an off game, and they did Wednesday night.

Boston's storied front line of Larry Bird, Kevin McHale and Robert Parish combined for two points in the second half as the Celtics lost to the Cleveland Cavaliers 114-98, putting the Cavs ahead 3-2 in their Eastern Conference semifinal series.

The series moves to Boston for Game 6 on Friday night. A seventh game, if needed, would be played in Richfield on Sunday.

The Cavaliers are trying to make it to the conference finals for only the second time in franchise history. Boston, winner of 16 NBA titles, has eliminated Cleveland from the playoffs twice before.

"I don't know if it's anything we did that threw them off," said Brad Daugherty, who led Cleveland with 28 points. "We played our game, played a good, hard, physical game. Whether it threw them off, I don't know. Those guys usually get big numbers. Everybody has off nights."

Craig Ehlo bounced back from an 0-for-9 performance in Game 4 by making his first eight shots in the game. Outscored by Boston counterpart Reggie Lewis 42-1 in the previous game, Ehlo finished with 20 points, a career-high 13 assists and six rebounds. Lewis scored 27.

"I only went 0 for 9 on Sunday so they'd leave me alone tonight," Ehlo joked. "Sometimes you have to sacrifice yourself.

"It always feels good to hit your first shot, especially when it's a 3-pointer. My second shot felt good too, and after that I was fine."

Cleveland took an 18-point lead by outscoring the Celtics 34-23 in the third quarter, finishing the period with a 16-4 run capped by Mark Price's three long jumpers. Daugherty scored 12 points in the quarter.

Penguins end Ranger season

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Penguins didn't have No. 66, but they had No. 68 — and that meant the New York Rangers were done in again by 1940.

Jaromir Jagr put Pittsburgh ahead with yet another remarkable goal and Shawn McEachern followed with his first NHL goal Wednesday night as the Penguins repeated as Patrick Division champs, eliminating the Rangers 5-1 in Game 6.

The Penguins, who had never won a division title until last year, have now won two straight and will be rematched with the Boston Bruins in the Wales Conference finals beginning Sunday at the Civic Arena.

It was one for the history books — and another in a five-decade history of Ranger disappointments as the NHL regular-season champions again failed to win their first Stanley Cup since 1940.

Pittsburgh's improbable six-game victory was considered all but impossible last week after scoring champion Mario Lemieux broke his hand in Game 2, but the defending Stanley Cuo champions still had more weapons — and more wins.

Horn blows Rangers away with 2-run shot

Associated Press

AL

ARLINGTON — Sam Horn hit a two-run homer as the Baltimore took a four-run lead in the game's first seven pitches, and the Orioles went on to beat the Texas Rangers 4-2 Wednesday night.

Rick Sutcliffe (5-2) improved to 4-1 against Texas, allowing seven hits in seven innings as Baltimore won for the 11th time in 14 games. He took a four-hit shutout into the sixth before Rafael Palmeiro and Ruben Sierra hit consecutive home runs. Greg Olson got five outs for his seventh save.

Brady Anderson and Mike Devereaux led off the game with doubles off Kevin Brown (5-3), Cal Ripken followed with a run-scoring single and Horn hit his second home run of the season.

White Sox 1, Brewers 0

MILWAUKEE — Kirk McCaskill held Milwaukee hitless for 6 2-3 innings and combined with Bobby Thigpen on a two-hitter as the Chicago White Sox beat the Brewers.

McCaskill (2-3) won for the first time since April 9, his first start of the season.

McCaskill lost his no-hit bid with two outs in the seventh when Kevin Seitzer grounded a 3-2 pitch between first and second for a single. Robin Yount, who had walked, moved to second.

Angels 7, Tigers 5

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Gary Gaetti hit a game-tying single and Luis Polonia added a two-run single as the California Angels rallied for four runs in the eighth inning and beat the Detroit Tigers.

With the Angels trailing 4-3, Junior Felix, Hubie Brooks and Gaetti hit consecutive singles off Walt Terrell (0-5). Bobby Rose sacrificed, Rene Gonzales was walked intentionally, loading the bases, and Les Lancaster struck out Mike Fitzgerald. Lancaster then walked Gary DiSarcina on four pitches, forcing home the go-ahead run, and Polonia singled for a 7-4 lead.

Yankees 12, Mariners 4

NEW YORK — Matt Nokes hit his fifth career grand slam and drove in five runs, and Kevin Maas added a three-run homer as the New York Yankees routed the Seattle Mariners.

Nokes hit his fifth homer of the season and the 100th of his career in the second inning, while Mass hit his third of the season in the sixth.

Blue Jays 4, Athletics 3

TORONTO — Jack Morris won for the first time in four starts since April 21, allowing an unearned run in 6 2-3 innings as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Oakland Athletics.

Morris (4-2) gave up seven hits, struck out three and walked five as the Blue Jays won for the eighth time in 10 games. Tom Henke, who allowed Mark McGwire's 16th homer of the season leading off the ninth, finished for his sixth save.

Royals 5, Indians 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Curtis Wilkerson hit a three-run homer and Kevin Appier won his third straight start as the Kansas City Royals beat Cleveland and sent the Indians to their fifth consecutive loss.

Wilkerson, filling in at second base while Keith Miller recovers from a slight shoulder injury, hit a 1-0 pitch from Dennis Cook over the left-field fence in the second for his first homer of the year.

Twins 4, Red Sox 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Shane Mack broke an 0-for-12 slump with a bases-loaded single in the ninth inning as the Minnesota Twins beat the Boston Red Sox for their fifth consecutive victory.

It is the Twins' longest winning streak since Sept. 6-10. Boston has lost five of seven.

Pittsburgh saved by Bell in 11-10 win over Braves

NL

ATLANTA — Jay Bell's ninth-inning homer lifted Pittsburgh to an 11-10 victory over Atlanta after the Pirates had blown an eight-run lead Wednesday night.

Bell had four RBIs and four of Pittsburgh's season-high 21 hits. He drove a 2-1 pitch from Alejandro Pena (0-4) into left for his first homer of the season.

Stan Belinda (2-0) gave up the game-tying homer to Terry Pendleton in the eighth inning, but held the Braves scoreless in the ninth for the victory.

Andy Van Slyke and Don Slaught also had four hits and Steve Buechele had three hits and three RBIs for Pittsburgh.

Cubs 8, Astros 3

HOUSTON — Shawn Boskie gave up six hits in seven innings and the Chicago Cubs won consecutive road games for the first time this season, beating the Houston Astros.

Chicago, 5-11 on the road, also ended rookie Butch Henry's streak of 18 scoreless innings at the Astrodome.

Boskie (4-2) allowed two runs and a walk, while striking out four. Sammy Sosa drove in two runs and scored two more for Chicago.

Giants 5, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Matt Williams hit two nearly identical tape-measure home runs and light-hitting Greg Litton had a two-run shot as San Francisco beat the Philadelphia Phillies, the Giants' sixth win in seven games.

Williams extended his hitting streak to 10 games with his first homer, a 418-foot shot into the upper deck in left leading off the second. He sent one 418-feet to center to start the Giants' three-run sixth. They were his ninth and 10th of the season.

Litton had his two-run homer in the sixth, his first in 93 at bats since June 9, 1991, and third in three years. He has seven home runs in 223 games.

Expos 5, Dodgers 1

MONTREAL — Mark Gardner allowed three hits over 7 2-3 innings and Montreal scored three early runs off Orel Hershiser as the Expos beat the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Gardner, who had nine strikeouts, retired the first 16 batters before Jose Offerman drew a sixth-inning walk.

Pinch-hitter Stan Javier followed with a single to right. Gardner (3-1) then got Brett Butler and Lenny Harris to fly out.

John Wetteland pitch the final 1 1-3 innings for his fifth save.

It was the Dodgers 10th loss in 12 games.

Padres 7, Mets 0

NEW YORK — Bruce Hurst pitched a six-hitter, and Gary Sheffield and Tony Gwynn hit the first home runs of the season off David Cone as the San Diego Padres beat the New York Mets.

Hurst (2-3) improved to 6-1 lifetime against the Mets with his first complete game of the season. He struck out four and walked two en route to his 20th major league shutout and first since September 1990.

Cardinals 4, Reds 2

ST. LOUIS — Bob Tewksbury allowed seven hits over seven innings and Brian Jordan drove in two runs as St. Louis beat the Cincinnati Reds, the Cardinals fifth straight victory.

Tewksbury (4-1) leads the National League with a 1.73 ERA after giving up two runs. He also had four strikeouts.

Kipila's bat leads Angels, 5-3

Staff report

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Jeff Kipila went 4-for-4 with a double and a home run, leading the Midland Angels over the Arkansas Travelers, 5-3 here Wednesday night.

It was the second straight win for Midland, and this one came against the Texas League's leading pitcher, Tom Urbani, who entered the game with an ERA of 0.88. Urbani, whose two previous losses were by scores of 1-0, fell to 4-3 as the Angels used an 11-hit attack to up their record to 13-20.

Kipila's home run was his ninth of the year, and Mark Holzemer pitched 6⅓ innings to pick up his first win and move to 1-1.

NBA: Nance, Williams lead Cavs

(From 1C)

The decisive run began with three consecutive mistakes by Bird, playing for only the second time since April 3 because of a bad back. Boston missed a chance to cut the deficit to four when Bird threw the ball away with 4:35 left in the third quarter, and he then missed badly on a 20-foot shot and fouled Daugherty.

The Celtics got no closer than 12 in the fourth quarter.

"We knew what we had to do to beat Cleveland," Bird said. "We knew we had to play good defense, because they're a great shooting team, and we didn't do it."

The Cavaliers dominated the frontcourt after Parish picked up two fouls within 18 seconds late in the first quarter. Parish was not much of a factor after that, scoring four points and grabbing eight rebounds.

McHale also struggled, scoring two points on 1-for-9 shooting. Bird had 13 points and five rebounds in 20 minutes, and Kevin Gamble scored 18 for Boston.

Larry Nance and John Williams each scored 18 for Cleveland.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, MAY 14, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Curb your natural inclination to force major issues. Both time and public opinion are on your side. Beginning in August, you will make record progress! By late fall, you will have gained your objectives. Show children how to work their differences out peaceably. A financial situation will not improve until you control spending. Put your foot down. Creative ideas are the key to tremendous career success in 1993. Work closely with those who share your vision of the future.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: rock star David Byrne, actress Season Hubley, opera star Patrice Munsel, movie director George Lucas.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Curb your temper when dealing with the younger generation. Persuasion proves more effective than coercion. Sharing a special search with loved one could revitalize your relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone influential gives you inside information, but there could be strings attached. Return a new friend's hospitality. A casual supper can be just as much fun as dining out.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): This could be your lucky day financially. Good fortune develops in ways you least expect. Useful information comes to light. You know exactly what you want to say, especially to family members.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You seem to be on solid ground where romance is concerned; the future looks bright. A job problem could arise later today. Encourage your colleagues to cooperate with each other.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Yesterday's favorable financial trends continue. A partner will think of something you overlook. Show your gratitude. The afternoon is a good time to tie up some loose ends.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Key relationships continue to be rewarding. A constructive decision will have long-lasting results. Pursue a legal matter in a timely fashion. You might have to work overtime.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An early morning about-face may stem from an unexpected business or community development. As things turn out, this new course of action proves lucky for you financially.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): After adjusting to a sudden change in plans this morning, you will find alternative arrangements even more appealing. Be flexible. An encounter with a VIP enhances your standing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may have to mask your real intentions when pursuing a business or career matter today; secrecy gives you a big advantage. A friendly overture will surprise you. Be polite but wary.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You could find yourself marching to a distant drummer today. Confine your creativity to business and career projects. Spreading gossip or revealing secrets could harm your reputation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Short trips or meetings can be more trouble than they are worth today. There are no clear answers to your questions. Thankfully, you and your partner are on the same wavelength tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You have plenty of adrenaline today and tackle your job with zeal. The fast pace produces excellent results. Meanwhile, your loved ones find you very persuasive.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have a lot of self-control and dignity. Their attempts to help out win them praise from their parents and other authority figures. Even their Taurean stubbornness can be a plus. They will not back down when a matter of principle is involved.

Opening lead: Two of ♠

"Take a little time—count ..." wrote Charles Dickens in Mr. F's Aunt. Sound advice for every player. Consider this hand from the Silver Ribbon Pairs at the recent Spring North American Championships, held in Pasadena, Calif.

Sitting East was Fred Hamilton of Las Vegas. His decision to overcall rather than make a takeout double seems somewhat offbeat. South's double was negative and promised a four-card heart suit, and North's three-spade cue-bid requested South to bid three no trump with a spade stopper. West's penalty double showed good spades.

After winning the low spade opening lead with the ace, East paused to take stock. Declarer surely had the king of spades and one of the minor-suit kings. No matter whether the king was in diamonds or clubs, declarer would be able to take at least six club tricks and two diamonds with the help of a well-located king in the other minor. The king of spades would then be declarer's ninth trick.

Therefore, it was imperative that the defenders take four heart tricks, and do so in a hurry. Cashing the high hearts didn't rate to be good enough—the negative double virtually marked declarer with either the jack or five-card length. Hamilton found a way that would certainly work if West held the jack, and might succeed if declarer held the jack and West the ten.

At trick two East shifted to a low heart! Not surprisingly, declarer finessed the eight. West produced the ten and returned a heart. Down one.

Rivers, Carson feuding again

NEW YORK — The feud goes on between Joan Rivers and Johnny Carson.

As a tribute to the retiring Carson, Rivers wanted to show 1965 film clips of them together, but his aides nixed it, the Daily News reported Wednesday.

Rivers

"It's like I'm Stalin," she said Monday during taping of a "Joan Rivers" show that will be a tribute to Carson's 30-year reign. The syndicated show will first air Monday.

"It's like a purge thing. They wouldn't even let me show a clip of my first appearance on the show. They said, 'We'll sue you,'" Rivers said. "It's like I was never even on the show or had any connection with it."

NBC had no comment.

Carson and Rivers have not spoken since 1986, when Rivers quit as permanent guest host of "The Tonight Show" to be host of her own late-night talk show for the Fox network. The show was quickly canceled.

Carson retires May 22, giving the job to Jay Leno, who has been permanent guest host for several years.

Rivers said she owes Carson a lot.

"That show gave me the right to be funny," she said. "It gave me everything."

Grant

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Amy Grant is expecting her third child, in early November.

The pop-gospel singer found out she is pregnant during a recent trip to New Zealand, spokesman Chaz Corzine said Tuesday.

Grant, 31, is known for her hits "Baby Baby," "Every Heartbeat" and "That's What Love Is For."

FORT WORTH — An admiring glance at a Harley-Davidson motorcycle by Gov. Ann Richards was all it took for company officials to make one for her.

State ethics laws prevent Richards from accepting the 883 Hugger worth $5,100. So on Friday, she'll accept it on behalf of the state.

The customized, low-riding cycle will be used by the Texas Department of Public Safety for training.

Richards last month was photographed admiring a Harley. She commented she hoped to ride one on her 60th birthday in September.

Sales representative Janet Coats helped arrange an order with a Harley representative in Milwaukee.

Artist Jim Welch of Bedford painted the black motorcycle and matching helmet with a red, white and blue design. The vehicle and helmet are showcased with bluebonnets, the Texas flag and a Lone Star.

WATERLOO, Iowa — Fans wanted Garth Brooks to play a larger arena in neighboring Cedar Falls after his concert here sold out in 2½ hours.

But booking agent Joe Harris said the country star will keep his promise to perform at a 7,000-seat auditorium during the National Cattle Congress. The concert is Sept. 18.

"He told them he'd play it this year, and he's a man of his word," Harris said. "He was going to play it if it was 100 seats."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Jim Varney, who created the rubbernecked rube Ernest P. Worrell, has a new look: a beehive hairdo and cheap jewelry.

Bunny, a bumbling hairdresser, is in TV commercials airing in Los Angeles, St. Louis, Sacramento, Calif., and Knoxville.

Varney hasn't abandoned the toothy, wide-eyed Ernest, with his unseen friend Vern and trademark phrase, "Ya-know-what-I-mean?"

But Bunny will appear in regional TV ads in every major U.S. market in the next year. In one commercial, she gives a manicure with an electric bench grinder.

"Bunny is bubbly, but she's got a cruel twist," Varney said Tuesday.

Ernest has appeared in more than 2,000 commercial spots and starred in four movies — most recently, "Ernest Scared Stupid."

STAMFORD, Conn. — David Letterman says he doesn't know what to do about a woman who has hounded him for five years and been arrested seven times for doing so.

"The thing is, she's insane," Letterman told The Advocate of Stamford in a story published Wednesday. "And you don't want to do anything to make it worse than it is. It's been five years now, and I've tried a lot of things, and none of them have worked."

Margaret Ray, 40, who has bothered the NBC-TV talk-show host since 1988, was arraigned Tuesday on a charge of first-degree criminal trespass. She was arrested down the street from Letterman's New Canaan home Monday night after two people saw her on the grounds.

Ray, who was ordered to undergo psychiatric evaluation, did not enter a plea and was unable to post a $2,500 bond.

She faces a maximum sentence of one year in prison if convicted of the criminal trespass charge.

Kentucky Derby winner looks to prove doubters wrong in Preakness

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Kentucky Derby winner Lil E. Tee is everyman's horse.

The colt, who has changed owners like a handyman changes jobs, was a sickly youngster. Now he's a real eyeful, standing 16.2 hands and weighing about 1,200 pounds.

"I like to look at him," trainer Lynn Whiting said of the former 97-pound weakling who now has the look of star.

The colt, who Whiting bought for 82-year-old W. Cal Partee for $200,000, was sold for $2,000 as an unraced 2-year-old.

Lil E. Tee has won $1,177,106.

The colt, who won America's most famous race, was foaled in Pennsylvania so he could run in restricted races at Philadelphia Park.

He won the Jim Beam and finished second in the Arkansas Derby before giving jockey Pat Day his first victory in his 10th Kentucky Derby.

The next chapter in Lil E. Tee's surprising story will be written Saturday in this blue-collar city when the colt opposes 13 other 3-year-olds in the Preakness.

At least it's a surpising story to Whiting, who said he didn't hear about the trials and tribulations of Lil E. Tee until after the Derby.

"I couldn't believe it," the 53-year-old Whiting said. "He was a lot of horse when I bought him in October.

"Three things could have happened. One, they switched horses," Whiting joked. "Two, he took a Charles Atlas course. Three, they sent a blind man to evaluate him (as a yearling)."

Lil E. Tee prepped for the 1 3-16-mile Preakness on Wednesday by working a half mile in 48 2-5 seconds with Day up.

"He kind of cruised around there," Day said. "It was only his second day on the grounds, and he was kind of looking around. I'm optimistic that we can expect a big effort out of him."

Three other Preakness contenders worked Wednesday.

Alydeed, ridden by jockey Craig Perret worked five-eighths of a mile in 58 2-5 and galloped out three-quarters in 1:11 2-5. Agincourt went a half in 47 2-5 under exercise rider Stacie Eggleton, and Conte Di Savoya worked a half in 49.

After Conte Di Savoya finished working, he threw jockey Walter Guerra and kicked him in the ribs. Guerra was not hurt seriously.

The Derby winner's story began in March 1989. He is a son of At the Threshold, an undistinguished sire, out of Eileen's Moment, a mare who finished last in five of her six races.

The colt was conceived in Florida, but breeder Larry I. Littman, a Philadelphia native, took Eileen's Moment to Pennsylvania so the foal would be eligible for stakes restricted to Pennsylvania-breds.

"It was awful hard for them to plan on the horse winning the Kentucky Derby," Whiting said with a smile.

The 61-year-old Littman sent Lil E. Tee to Florida to be sold early in his 2-year-old season.

By the way, the Lil in the colt's name stands for Lawrence I. Littman, who has limousine and decorative accessories business in Philadelphia, but now lives at Palm Beach Gardens, Fla.

"We were told that he didn't seem like much of a horse," Littman said in a recent interview. "He had had serious colic surgery earlier. We were told he didn't move well."

Energy bill enters critical phase

■ The finalization of the energy bill has drawn a number of different provisions by committee chairmen.

By Bill Mintz
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The effort to craft an energy bill has entered a critical phase as key committee chairmen try to reconcile vastly differing provisions before a floor debate that could begin as soon as next week.

As the bill worked its way through the complex House committee system, several provisions were added that have provoked veto threats from President Bush.

If those provisions are approved by the House, many observers — including senior Bush administration officials — believe it will be difficult for House and Senate conferees to agree on a bill that Bush will sign.

But others believe that the election year political climate will force Congress to act, even on an unattractive bill. Legislative business has been slowed to a crawl by the House Bank scandal and other distractions. The energy bill appears to be one of the few pieces of major legislation that lawmakers will be able to point to as an accomplishment.

Some members and lobbyists are skeptical of the president's veto threats. They noted that he embraced the Senate's version of the energy bill even though it lacked a provision allowing drilling in Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska that he had said was essential to avoiding a veto.

The legislation still contains provisions to encourage the use of natural gas to fuel vehicles. And it would introduce more competition in the electric power generation industry — a prime market for natural gas.

But the bill has been stripped of most provisions to encourage exploration and production of domestic oil and gas.

The House Interior and Merchant Marine committees added new restrictions on offshore oil and gas development. That followed the Senate's move to drop language allowing drilling in the arctic refuge.

The limits on offshore drilling are among the contentious issues to be addressed in behind-the-scenes talks before the bill reaches the House floor. Others include a fee on crude used by refiners that will be spent to help fill the Strategic Petroleum Reserve and changes in nuclear plant licensing procedures.

House Democratic leaders, including House Speaker Tom Foley, have not yet weighed in on the substance of those amendments, aides said.

The House Energy and Commerce Committee drafted the bill that will form the basis for the House debate.

That panel, headed by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., produced a bill that encourages greater use of natural gas, encourages energy conservation and streamlines nuclear plant licensing.

The committee's bill also included a 1 percent fee on refiners to pay for oil to expand the strategic reserve.

The Interior and Merchant Marine committees then imposed permanent limits on oil and gas development along most of the Pacific and Atlantic coasts. The Interior panel also redrafted the nuclear licensing provisions in a way that provoked a veto threat.

The Ways and Means Committee deleted the refiners' tax. The tax-writing panel also granted some tax relief for beleaguered independent oil and gas producers.

Report gives good news on retail sales, inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government delivered a double dose of better-than-expected economic news Wednesday: A retail sales rebound accompanied by mild inflation in April.

Retail sales jumped 0.9 percent to $158 billion, nearly making up for a sharp 1 percent decline in March, the worst in 15 months, the Commerce Department said.

Consumer prices edged up only 0.2 percent, held back by falling grocery store prices, the Labor Department said. The report eased concern over a price spike in March and, according to analysts, left the Federal Reserve with room to cut interest rates to ensure a sustained economic recovery.

"Retail sales are not quite as favorable as they look on the surface," said economist Lyle Gramley of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America. He is a former Fed board member.

"The Fed has got to be worried that this recovery doesn't have enough steam to carry it through the second half of the year," he said.

Although sales were much stronger than expected, the March decline was more than twice as steep as first estimated a month ago. Taken together, the two months show sales holding steady after strong increases in January and February.

Central bank policymakers last nudged short-term rates lower on April 9 and are meeting again next Tuesday to consider whether the fledgling economic recovery needs more stimulation.

Lower interest rates often raise sales of so-called durable goods such as automobiles and furniture, for which many consumers must borrow to buy.

Much of the strength in retail sales came from a 2.6 percent gain in automotive sales and a 2.8 percent rise in receipts at building supply, hardware and garden equipment stores.

It was the third robust gain in auto sales in four months.

Exchange celebrates anniversary

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Stock Exchange is celebrating its 200th anniversary with a $25,000-a-table party, a stickball tournament and the planting of a buttonwood tree like the one under which its founders met.

But when the weekend hoopla dies down, the institution that symbolizes capitalism around the world will have to contend with its most serious challenges.

The main threat to the Big Board, as the exchange is known, is a notion advanced by many market participants and academics: that a stock exchange floor run by humans is outdated in a computerized world.

Critics say the days of the NYSE's cavernous five-story trading floor are numbered, and point to fully computerized systems in London, Paris, Toronto, Chicago and elsewhere.

"I think it's obsolete," said James Lorie, professor emeritus at the University of Chicago's business school.

The NYSE disagrees. While pledging more automation, Big Board officials say the floor where "specialists" control trading in every stock is the most efficient, cost-effective and regulated market around.

"We're trying to dispel the erroneous image that because we rely on human intelligence at the point of transaction that that somehow is antiquated," said NYSE Chairman William H. Donaldson.

No one questions the NYSE's historical importance. On May 17, 1792, 24 brokers signed an agreement beneath a buttonwood tree on Wall Street that essentially closed trading to outsiders.

Social Security simplifies correcting workers' records

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government agreed Wednesday to make it easier for workers and retirees to correct their Social Security earnings records.

The agreement followed disclosure that some wages of nearly 10 million workers may not have been credited to their Social Security accounts because of errors by employers or the government. Such uncorrected errors would result in a loss of a portion of retirement benefits; in some cases, workers could be denied benefits altogether.

The agreement was part of the settlement of a lawsuit against the government by the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare. The committee, which claims 5 million members, sued to force the Social Security Administration and Internal Revenue Service to resolve a heavy backlog of erroneous records and adopt procedures to prevent a recurrence.

"This settlement is what we thought beneficiaries are entitled to," said Max Richtman, executive vice president of the committee. "We wanted an effective procedure for making sure earnings are posted and a fair and expedited procedure for making corrections if they are not."

In about 10 percent of cases checked, employers' quarterly reports to IRS showed a total of wages paid that is higher than shown on the W-2 forms the employers file once a year with Social Security. It is the W-2 figures that go into each worker's Social Security earnings record.

The suit was filed after the General Accounting Office, an arm of Congress, found that:

■ From 1978 through 1984, $58.5 billion of wages had not been credited to individual records even though Social Security taxes had been withheld.

■ Three of every five people still working whose records were in conflict faced the potential loss of $17 a month. About 1 percent would have been denied benefits altogether because the erroneous records would have deprived them of the number of quarters of earnings necessary to qualify.

While the IRS and Social Security tried to reduce the backlog of conflicting reports, the number of missing and erroneous reports has continued to grow by as many as 600,000 a year.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell sharply near the end of trading Wednesday, after traders, who had waited in vain for a rally, began dumping futures contracts.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in June settled at $20.76 per barrel, down 20 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Many players had expected oil futures to shoot up Wednesday, following the release of an American Petroleum Institute report on Tuesday evening that showed U.S. supplies of distillates, which include home heating oil, had fallen to their lowest level in about two decades.

But traders apparently concluded there was no reason to begin a panicky buying spree because the shortfall was a temporary phenomenon based on the weather, said Peter Beutel, oil analyst at Pegasus Econometric Group Inc., in Hoboken, N.J.

Natural gas prices were mixed, with contracts for delivery in June settling at $1.562 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 1.9 cents.

Airline earnings

HOUSTON — Continental Airlines and its parent company, citing one-time gains from asset sales, reported small earnings for the first quarter.

The airline had net income of $7.1 million for the quarter ending March 31, compared to a net loss of $194.8 million for the same quarter a year ago.

The parent company, Continental Airlines Holdings, Inc., said Wednesday it had earnings of $17.4 million, compared to a loss of $181.3 million a year ago.

Dollar declines

NEW YORK — The dollar staged a broad decline Wednesday as traders weighed whether the latest economic data would prompt the Federal Reserve to lower interest rates.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 130.30 yen, down 2.30 yen from Tuesday's finish.

In London, the British pound was unchanged at $1.8135.

Market gains

NEW YORK — Stock prices were narrowly mixed Wednesday despite two new reports showing favorable trends in inflation and retail sales.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 6.86 points to 3,391.98. Advancing issues narrowly outnumbered declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Nasdaq composite index slipped 1.58, or 0.27 percent to 582.38. The NYSE composite index was down 0.01 to 229.44. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 0.29 at 393.75.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Agent handles transferring of stock shares

By Bill Doyle

Q: My father-in-law bought stock during 1985 and 1986 in his name only. He has died. My mother-in-law bought stock in the same company during those same years, also in her name only. They are both in the company's dividend reinvestment plan.

Doyle

How can she get his shares transferred to her account?

A: Transfer of stock ownership is handled by the stock's transfer agent, whose name and address are printed in the company's annual report to stockholders.

To transfer stock from a dead person's name to the rightful heir, the following must be provided.

■ An assignment by the executor or administrator of the estate. That can be either the form on the back of the stock certificate or a separate stock power. It must be guaranteed by a brokerage firm, commercial bank or trust company.

■ A certified copy of the court document appointing the executor or administrator, dated within the last 60 days.

■ A notarized affidavit of domicile stating where the dead person lived.

Some states also require an inheritance tax waiver.

Your mother-in-law can have the transfer agent take care of everything. Because both she and her husband had the stock in dividend reinvestment plans, chances are no certificates were ever issued. It's likely the transfer agent is also the reinvestment plan agent. That should expedite the transfer of shares from his account to her account.

- Q: A friend who is single and has four adult children is planning to distribute the $120,000 he has in certificates of deposit by naming one of his children as co-owner of each $30,000 CD. He claims this will save taxes and a lot of bother.

His only other assets are a jalopy car and hand-me-down furniture. He feels the $7,000 in his money market checking account will take care of his cremation, etc.

I told him the success of his plan depends on a graceful exit, without hospital or nursing home adventures. What are your comments?

A: Your friend's plan will simplify things when he leaves this vale of tears. The CDs will avoid probate and pass directly to each co-owner. Indeed, that will save bother for his children.

But there will be no tax savings, for the simple reason the amount he will leave is not large enough to be subject to "death taxes." The federal estate tax kicks in at $600,000. Based on your return address, unlimited amounts can be left to children, grandchildren, parents and grandparents, free of state inheritance tax.

Of course, you are correct about him making a graceful and inexpensive exit. An extended hospital or nursing home stay could use up the entire $120,000. But even after the CDs are put in co-ownership form, your friend will be the first-named owner.

Unless he's inclined to give the bulk of what he owns to his children now – which I would advise against – his plan makes good sense.

Q: A relative has put $5,000 worth of stock into my name. Dividends, currently about $28 monthly, are sent to me. In the event of my death, the stock reverts to my relative.

Do I report the $5,000 value of the stock or just the monthly dividends on my income tax return?

A: Just the dividends. At $28 per month, they will total $336 for the year. Come January, the company whose stock is involved will send you a Form 1099-DIV listing that amount. A copy goes to the Internal Revenue Service, so make sure to report the dividend income on your tax return.

The arrangement you describe has all the earmarks of a revisionary trust, a wise tax-planning device for wealthy folks.

Mazda develops stunning new RX-7

By Bob Plunkett

The first of the 1993 models may prove to be one of the best of the bunch.

At the very least, it's a remarkable statement of automotive design, of stunning power and polished pizzazz.

Welcome to 1993, Mazda RX-7.

To appreciate what Mazda has accomplished with the new concept for its subcompact sports hatchback, you must first forget virtually everything you may remember about previous editions, which date back to the 1970s.

True, it's still a two-seater with power directed to the rear axle. You'll still find a two-rotor Wankel engine under the snub-nosed hood and it promises turbo-charged excitement. Also, RX-7 still wears a hatchback shape like all predecessors — but that's the extent of comparisons.

Mazda started over with everything else, beginning with new exterior lines as clean and smooth and sexy as anything on the road today.

The new RX-7 features a wide and squatty stance, not unlike the sobering Dodge Viper, in a statement that implies this machine was designed to scat.

The hatchback roofline has been de-emphasized and tapered, so that from front and side views RX-7 more closely resembles a hardtop coupe.

Spot it head-on from the nose and you may think RX-7 looks like another amazing Mazda, the MX-5 Miata roadster. Both have a wide oval air intake below the integrated bumper and both share similar narrow slits for parking lights set below pop-up headlamps.

From the rear angle, that tail bulges higher in the middle, forming a bowed line reminiscent of Miata's trunk. The interesting difference with RX-7 is that an arc of red taillights follows the trunk line, connecting right and left light clusters.

The package was obviously designed to turn heads, just as that hunky Wankel under the hood will probably pop necks.

Mazda, of course, first attracted attention in this country from the novelty of the Wankel rotary engine.

The 1993 RX-7 builds upon the Wankel's perfected success, utilizing what essentially was last year's 13B Wankel 2-rotor, only with innovative additions.

Think of this 13B Wankel as the little engine that definitely can do.

It's a wee package that offers power elevation with twin tubro chargers. These have been placed in sequential order to pound out an awesome 255-horsepower, which is a boost of 55-hp over the preceding version.

Early independent speed tests indicate world-class times for the new car — well under six seconds for traveling from zero to 60 mph, for instance.

Then there's that stick shifter.

After 20 months logging mile after mile in the RX-7's little brother, Miata, I've become enthralled with the teeny throw distance, the precise push, the ease of shifting which comes from Miata's stick shifter — it ranks among the best in the world today.

The manual stick for the new RX-7 builds upon little Miata's concept.

Mounted on an integrated center console, the lever seems barely larger than the palm's width and it fits snugly for effortless flick-of-the-wrist action.

Combine that small shifter with a sport-diameter steering wheel — which has been padded nicely — and a cockpit obviously designed for an active, hands-on type of driver, and you have the makings for serious sport.

Then, with such a power surge as those turbo-chargers can deliver and RX-7's nearly-perfect weight balance, you begin to discover that life in this car's fast lane becomes an education in action dynamics.

My bottom line: This newest Mazda deserves to be moved to the top of the heap of serious sports cars.

The same certainly could not have been said about the previous RX-7, which experienced a dramatic dip in sales following introduction of the 1990 Miata.

Now, all the right ingredients are in place, beginning with rear-drive power format in the classic sense of a true sports car.

A fully independent suspension employs unequal length control arms in front and a multi-link version in the rear. Wheels feel firmly in place during a turn and they remain on-track even when you drop a wheel off the pavement edge.

Precise and crisp steering stems from the rack and pinion device, while a tight braking system starts with a big disc at each wheel point and interconnects to the computer-controlled anti-lock system.

Then there's that magical balance of up-front engine, in-back transmission coupling to rear axle. The arrangement spreads 48 percent of RX-7's weight to front axle and 52 percent to rear.

You'll feel it when powering through a set of curves, as this baby seems to float on an even keel.

And in an era when some designers insist on tacking on questionable (and weighty) gimmicks like four-wheel steering and all-wheel traction, the newest Mazda opts for the simplicity of proven mechanics.

This saves weight, obviously, which ultimately enhances performance — the name of this car's game.

Simplicity becomes a key to understanding the new RX-7, from simplified mechanical systems down to the limited choice of models.

The base edition is so complete, though, you won't need much more. It provides everything from air conditioning, power for brakes, steering and windows and plush body-hugging bucket seats to a big tachometer front and center on the instrument panel, plus complete gauges.

Mitsubishi Diamante makes splashy entry into new luxury class

By Ann M. Job
Associated Press

Choices, choices, choices. The 1992 Mitsubishi Diamante LS offers buyers plenty of them.

First, there's the decision to shop for a luxury car at a Mitsubishi showroom — not your normal stop. The Diamante is the Japanese carmaker's first entry in the luxury car market.

Then, there are all those buttons and switches inside the top-of-the-line Diamante LS.

Do you want strong acceleration? Make sure the four-speed automatic transmission is shifting in the "power" mode.

Do you prefer a sporty ride? Put the Electronic Control Suspension in "sport" mode so an on-board computer firms up four-way shock absorbers and works on air springs to minimize pitch, roll and dive.

Are you heading onto a rough road? Better make sure the car is riding high enough for good clearance. With a touch of a button, the body will notch up 1.2 inches.

Don't care to have help maintaining a safe speed in cornering? Turn off the Traction Control System-Trace Control, in which four-wheel sensors have the capability to cut excessive engine power to the wheels to keep a driver from drifting toward the outside of a corner.

Want to hear that Vivaldi concerto resonate throughout the car? Change from "studio" sound to "hall" acoustics with the touch of a button on the Visual Audio radio. Push the "classic" button nearby for best tone.

No wonder Car and Driver magazine called the Diamante LS a "four-door for the Sharper Image crowd."

In reality, once you come to understand the features and decide your preferences, given your driving style and tastes, the Diamante LS isn't confusing.

In fact, without any tinkering, you'll find this car has good road manners, is nicely refined and well-suited for luxury car buyers.

The 3-liter, double overhead-cam, 24-valve V6 provides smooth power, fuel economy is comparable for a car in this category (18 miles per gallon in the city and 24 mpg on the highway), and the ride is quiet.

Horsepower is better than some competitors — 202 at 6,000 revolutions per minute compared with 185 at 5,200 rpm in the Lexus ES300 and 189 at 5,900 rpm in the BMW 325i. Torque is 199 pound-feet at 3,000 rpm vs. 195 at 4,000 rpm in the ES300 and 181 at 4,700 rpm in the 325i.

The Diamante interior, with optional luxury decor package that added leather on the test auto, is comfortable and luxurious, one of the prettiest I've seen. About the only distraction is the speedometer that seems cluttered with every 10-mile increment delineated from 0 to 150 mph.

Rear legroom is decent. I tucked my toes under the front seat if it was all the way back on its track, but my knees never touched the front seatback. The rear center armrest was a bit higher than the front seat armrest and seemed better positioned.

Fit and finish throughout the test Diamante was superb, and the outer styling — with a front end that seems very BMW-like — is appealing.

Buyers are the same ones being sought by Lexus, BMW and other luxury car makes. They are expected to be mostly male (60 percent), married (79 percent) with median family income of $79,000, a Mitsubishi spokesman said. Median age is likely to be 42, he added.

In keeping with Mitsubishi's reputation for "affordable technology," the Diamante LS offers more features than many of its competitors but carries a competitive price tag.

GAO proposes simplified system of tax returns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tax simplification should be based on a system under which millions of Americans don't have to file a return at all, congressional auditors said Wednesday.

"A change such as this may appear radical, but only through some such change will we truly reduce taxpayer burden," Hazel E. Edwards, associate director of the General Accounting Office, told a House subcommittee.

"I still see this as having great possibilities," said Rep. Doug Barnard, D-Ga., chairman of the Government Operations subcommittee on consumer affairs, after some members of the panel expressed skepticism. Rep. Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., complained it would shift more of a burden onto employers.

Shirley D. Peterson, the Internal Revenue Service commissioner, said Congress and taxpayers would want to think long and hard before taking such a step.

"To go to a system of that sort would be a sea change," she said. "It goes to the root of our very compliance system." The government should never abandon a system that requires taxpayers to personally affirm the amount of tax they owe, Ms. Peterson said.

The IRS in 1987 studied and recommended against a system under which for many people, returns would have been prepared by the IRS.

GAO said that since IRS is modernizing its computers at a cost exceeding $8 billion, the agency could adapt its technology to use electronically gathered information on wages and other earnings and calculate preliminary returns for many taxpayers.

But that may not be the best way to go, GAO said. Instead, Ms. Edwards said, the United States should consider the "final withholding" system used by about 30 countries, including Germany, Great Britain and Japan.

Under that system, Ms. Edwards said, employees provide employers with information on marital status and number of children, and the employers, using government tables, withhold enough from each paycheck to cover the tax liability.

Periodic adjustments can be made so that at yearend, the workers' accounts are balanced. In that case, no return is filed. In the United States, it is up to the employee to see that enough is withheld.

Some countries withhold a flat amount from interest and dividends; others require a return be filed once such non-wage income exceeds a threshold.

"While there are circumstances that will require a return, and factors, such as having a second employer or both spouses working, that will require some adjustment, experience with this system by some industrial nations has been that millions of taxpayers have been able to meet their tax obligations without filing a return," Ms. Edwards said.

In Great Britain, she said, only 9 percent of the 26 million taxpayers eligible for "final withholding" filed returns in 1991.

GAO estimated that most of the 17 million Americans who file the simplest form, 1040EZ, and many of the 22 million 1040A filers could be eligible for such a system, along with many of the 36 million people who file the long form, 1040, but do not itemize deductions.

About 114 million couples and individuals are expected to file returns this year.

In addition to reducing the paperwork and record-keeping burden on taxpayers, Ms. Edwards said, a no-return system would mean fewer unpaid accounts for the IRS — these accounts receivable now total more than $100 billion — fewer refunds to process and a chance to target audits on big corporations and heavy investors, who still would have to file returns.

Archivist of U.S. to certify amendment on pay raises

WASHINGTON (AP) — The archivist of the United States said Wednesday that he'll quickly certify as part of the Constitution an amendment banning midterm pay raises for Congress. But the issue is still far from settled.

Forty states passed the amendment between 1789 and this week, but congressional leaders said Congress should decide whether a ratification that takes 202½ years counts.

Majority Leader George Mitchell has asked the Senate legal counsel for advice about the issues posed by the unprecedented case, press secretary Diane Dewhirst said Wednesday.

A day earlier — on the same day Illinois became the 40th state — Mitchell and Minority Leader Robert Dole signed a resolution by Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., that would be a vehicle for Senate action.

None of them said whether they think the amendment is valid. Their action asserts Congress' power to have the final say.

"Congress — not the courts and not the executive — has the final say over whether an amendment has received the required votes for ratification in a reasonable time," said Byrd. "It is now our obligation to give the most serious consideration to the significant issues involved."

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley also said hearings are needed to clear up questions about the amendment, which was written by James Madison and sent to the states in 1789 without a ratification deadline.

A 1939 Supreme Court decision said amendments must be ratified within a reasonable time, but left it to Congress to decide how much time the states should have.

Modern-day amendments have had seven-year deadlines. The proposed Equal Rights Amendment had such a limit, which was later stretched to 10 years.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., said his House civil and constitutional law subcommittee will hold hearings with constitutional experts "as soon as we lasso the witnesses and drag them in."

Archivist Don W. Wilson "is doing the clerical work assigned by Congress," and his certification doesn't substitute for a congressional ruling, Edwards said. "He's not anointed to make a substantive constitutional decision. That's up to Congress."

With one exception, however, such certification — and the amendment's attendant publication in the Federal Register — has been considered the official action that made an amendment part of the Constitution. The exception was the 14th Amendment, which guaranteed all citizens equal rights under the law and which Congress in 1868 declared to be part of the Constitution.

But Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, called the archivist's announcement "official recognition that the Madison amendment has met the constitutional requirements for ratification."

"Congress now has the opportunity to affirm the will of the people," said Grassley, the sponsor of a Senate resolution seeking a congressional seal of approval for the ratifications.

Rep. John Boehner, R-Ohio, who helped revive the ratification drive, also wants Congress to agree that the amendment is valid, although he says a vote is "not constitutionally necessary,"

"The archivist's certification of the Madison amendment should put to rest all lingering questions as to the validity of the amendment," Boehner said.

Until Wednesday, Wilson had stayed out of the debate about the unprecedented, two-century ratification process. Wilson had several options, including issuing a "conditional certification" to formally seek Congress' opinion on whether ratification lasted too long.

He chose to forgo that option.

"Upon receipt of formal notification of ratification of the congressional pay amendment by three-fourths of the states, I will . . . certify the adoption of the amendment," Wilson said in statement.

The National Archives said it has the official paperwork from 38 states. Wilson can declare ratification after certifying documents that arrived Wednesday from New Jersey and Alabama.

If the amendment takes effect, lawmakers would have to wait until after the next House elections before collecting any raises they vote themselves.

The House imposed that restriction on its last pay raise, but the Senate didn't. In fact, the Senate's late-night vote to immediately make its pay even with House salaries spurred the final few amendment ratifications.

Members of Congress now make $129,500.

Military prison inmates protest

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (AP) — Disturbances broke out for a second night at a maximum security military prison, and inmates were ordered to remain in their cells Wednesday.

The lock down was ordered when about 700 of the prison's 1,400 inmates returned to their cells on their own after a protest over changes in prison regulations, said Janet Wray, public information officer at the U.S. Disciplinary Barracks.

Five inmates were injured in a Monday night fight that escalated into a seven-hour standoff between prisoners and guards over such matters as parole, clemency, smoking and movie selection. It ended when officials agreed to consider the demands.

The disturbance Monday night in one wing of the prison spread to all five wings Tuesday and early Wednesday, said Lt. Col. John Head, chief of public affairs at the barracks.

"There has been no violence, no hostages," Head said about the latest disturbance, which lasted about 4½ hours.

Clinton outlines his education program for voters in Oregon

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A confident Bill Clinton introduced himself to Oregon on Wednesday and warmed up for a major education speech with a broad critique of President Bush's school policies.

For a time, Clinton aides had worried about the potential for a late-season surprise from rival Jerry Brown in Oregon's primary next week. But that concern was all but gone as Clinton made his first visit to the state, fresh from primary wins Tuesday in Nebraska and West Virginia.

"I have a vision," the Arkansas governor told a college student who asked why voters should choose Clinton over Bush in November. "I wake up in the morning obsessed with the things I just talked about. I think they cross the president's mind at election time."

Clinton spoke outside Portland Community College after giving students at more than 30 Oregon high schools a civics lecture of sorts via an education satellite network.

"When I was your age, I never had any doubt that I would grow up in a country with a strong economy that would be leading the world," Clinton told the students. "That's just not clear to me any more."

Brown, the lone rival left in Clinton's path, never got a mention, a sure sign of the Clinton camp's confidence.

Brown campaigned in Ohio on Wednesday, which votes on June 2. He criticized Bush's proposed urban program as too little, too late and faulted Clinton's record on work and environmental issues.

Clinton spent considerable time outlining his views on education, including a proposed apprenticeship program for high school graduates. He also advocates a universal college access program in which students could repay the costs either through tax-time billings or public service.

"For 11 years, the national government under Presidents Reagan and Bush have tried to restrict access to college aid," Clinton said. "The college dropout rate is more than twice the high school dropout rate and one of the big reasons is money."

Clinton planned to deliver an education speech today in Los Angeles in which he would ask voters to make education — and Bush's promise to be the education president — a central issue of the fall campaign.

Clinton also touched on two state controversies Wednesday: the fight between loggers and environmentalists over logging in old-growth forests where the endangered spotted owl lives, and a state health care plan that would ration some services.

Clinton said he did not support amending the Endangered Species Act to add economic concerns to the classification criteria. He said much of the current firestorm could have been avoided if the federal government had stepped in with a forest restoration plan that included heavy replanting.

He also suggested the state could add timber jobs even if fewer trees were felled by processing the raw logs in state instead of shipping the work to Japan and elsewhere.

"In the end if we destroy our environment we won't have an economy," Clinton said.

The Arkansas governor said that if he were president he would give the state the federal Medicaid waiver it needs for its health care plan, which would cover uninsured working poor people while rationing some costly medical treatments. Clinton said such rationing would not be necessary if a national health care system was implemented.

Actor Robert Reed dies of colon cancer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Robert Reed, a Shakespearean-trained actor who never quite reconciled himself to his role as the model father on TV's "The Brady Bunch," died of colon cancer, his family said Wednesday. He was 59.

Reed died Tuesday night at Huntington Memorial Hospital, said his daughter, Karen Baldwin. "He fought a very tough battle for about six months," she said.

Reed appeared in movies, on Broadway and several television shows, but he was probably best known as the patriarch of "The Brady Bunch."

"I loved him dearly and I'll miss him very much," said Maureen McCormick, who played his oldest daughter, Marcia Brady.

The show debuted Sept. 26, 1969, and was an ABC Friday night fixture until Aug. 30, 1974. It has remained enormously popular since then, spawning several cast reunion shows, a popular satirical play and a recent tell-all book by Barry Williams, who played family member Greg Brady.

Reed played Mike Brady, the widower father of three boys who married a widow (played by Florence Henderson) with three daughters.

Miss Henderson said Reed asked her a few weeks ago to let the other cast members know he was seriously ill.

"We were all devastated. We cried. We are a family and we have lost our father," she said.

"The Brady Bunch" was a vintage American family show, where minor events such as driving tests and jilted dates anchored entire episodes.

By all accounts, Reed didn't care much for such standard fare.

Williams said in his book "Growing Up Brady," that Reed often wrote pages-long memos comparing what he deemed poorly written Brady episodes with "A Midsummer Night's Dream" or "Citizen Kane."

A versatile actor, Reed's other credits included such television miniseries and shows as "Roots," "Rich Man, Poor Man — Book One," "The Defenders," "Mannix" and "Scruples."

On Broadway, he appeared in "Barefoot in the Park," "Death Trap" and "Avanti."

His television movie credits included "Nightmare in Badham County," "Revenge for a Rape," "Boy in the Plastic Bubble," and "The Secret Night Caller." He appeared in such theatrical films as "Hurry Sundown" and "Star."

Born in Highland Park, Ill., Reed studied drama at Northwestern University and attended London's Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts and the University of London.

In addition to his daughter, Reed is survived by his mother, Helen Rietz, and a grandson, William Ryan.

Memorial services, still unscheduled, are to be held in Los Angeles and New York.

Wallace has 20 years of pain

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — George Wallace's voice is weak.

"I've had 20 years of pain," he says. The discomfort is so great, he can't sit at his desk. Aides help him to a daybed, lifting his frail legs as they lay him down.

At 72, he's almost deaf. Any conversation requires writing the words for him in block letters on a pad. He reads the pad, says nothing for a time, then replies in a near-whisper.

Friday marks the 20th anniversary of the attempt on his life in Laurel, Md. In a burst of gunfire, moments after the presidential hopeful had given a speech at a shopping center, Arthur Bremer left the Alabama governor sprawled in a parking lot, paralyzed in the legs.

The shooting changed Wallace. "He embraced religion. He's a born-again," said Stephan Lesher, an author and former Newsweek correspondent who is writing a biography of Wallace.

It also changed Wallace's politics. Once a staunch and shrill segregationist, he disavowed his former stand on race. Before leaving office after four terms in 1987, he had installed several blacks in key state posts.

At the time Wallace was shot, he was considered a close rival to Hubert Humphrey for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Wallace says he would have been at the top of the Democratic ballot had he not been cut down in his prime. "I would have been vice president," he says. "I would have carried the South."

His health was set back earlier this year when he choked while hospitalized for pain from the paralysis and a kidney infection.

These days, Wallace raises money for Troy State University, working out of a modest fourth-floor office in an building that's seen better days in downtown Mongtgomery.

He says his main political interest is the congressional race by his 40-year-old son, State Treasurer George Wallace Jr.

160 Money, Loans Wanted

Before signing a contract or sending money to an "Advance Fee Loan Broker" we recommend that you check with the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin. Be wary of any broker claiming the easy availability of thousands of dollars for loans at reasonable rates or the availability of "foreign" money.
