Compromise expected in state budget debate

AUSTIN (AP) — The next state budget is the one bill everyone is banking on.

Today, budget writers were working out differences between the House and Senate 2002-03 spending proposals.

"We're progressing well," said Senate Finance Chairman Rodney Ellis, D-Houston before the panel met late Thursday. A balanced budget is the only measure legislators are required by law to pass.

Budget writers had said they wanted to get the bill out of committee by today, but have since set weekend deadlines to put the finishing touches on the proposal.

While drafting the tightest budget in a decade against the backdrop of a slowing economy, lawmakers this session have been trying to find funding for several expensive proposals.

But don't expect all of those issues to be solved by the budget conference committee when it sends the bill to the printer.

Because of the tight economy, Comptroller Carole Keeton Rylander has delayed updating the amount of tax revenue lawmakers will be able to spend in the upcoming budget. She'll release a revised estimate May 21, seven days before the end of the 140-day session.

Funding amounts for a statewide teachers health-insurance plan, making it easier for children to enroll in Medicaid, higher education initiatives and state employee pay raises were still not in the budget Thursday night.

Even as talk of a special session grew louder, Ellis remained calm with his trademark humor.

"We have time on our side. The one thing that we have plenty of is time. The thing we don't have enough of is money," Ellis said.

Other members of the conference committee were confident top goals would be met.

"We're sliding to the end on track," said Rep. Garnet Coleman, D-Houston.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Experience is the best method of acquiring knowledge because everyone gets individual instruction."

Last weekend's rain combined with the announcement of additional jobs in Snyder has made this an exceptional week.

The rains fell just right, and don't be surprised to see planters in the field by Monday. Also the mild weather has been appreciated. Last year at this time, the area was already nearing triple-digit temperatures.

And on Tuesday the Patterson-UTI merger was approved. And CEO Cloyce Talbott confirmed his commitment to keep the corporate headquarters in Snyder with the addition of between 20 and 25 employees. With 300 of the company's 7,000 employees working out of Snyder, Patterson-UTI remains an important part of the Scurry County economy.

Snyder has a lot of outstanding students, and to have exceptional kids, you have to have exceptional teachers.

Ronda Haire, choir director, and Becky Johnson, English instructor, were named SHS' outstanding faculty members.

Great job at state!

SHS academic competitors placed second overall in the state meet. The one-act play captured third. Hayli Henderson and Brandon McGraw were named to the all-star cast.

COs reflect on careers

By Joyce May
Staff Writer

Some come for the benefits, others for the stability. Despite their reasons, the fact remains that correctional officers put their lives on the line daily to maintain security in our nation's prisons.

To recognize those services, Congress passed a resolution in 1984 designating the first full week in May as National Correctional Officers week.

May 6-12 has been set aside this year to remember and honor the dedicated service of all correctional officers.

The Price Daniel Unit joined other Texas Department of Criminal Justice facilities this morning in honoring fallen officers at a memorial service.

A visit to the Daniel Unit earlier this week caught just a small glimpse into the lives of three officers and their reason for taking on a job with such potential danger..

Luz Garza

Luz Garza, mother of five, has been a correctional officer with TDCJ for almost seven years. She spent 6½ of those at the Robertson Unit in Abilene before transferring to the Daniel Unit last February.

She said the employee benefits were one of the attractions. "For the benefits, and it was a challenge for me. The more I got into it, the more I liked it. The benefits are real good, and I think we will get more."

James Barner owned a meat locker plant in Clifton, located about 35 miles northwest of Waco, before joining the Daniel Unit seven years ago in March.

"I sold that business and moved back to West Texas because this is home," he said.

Barner has worked the radio picket for the past four years and is also assistant armorer to Lt. Kyle Herrley, armorer.

He calls the Daniel Unit home and admits the benefits were attractive to him also. "The benefits, the pay is decent, and it's a job that needs to be done," Barner responded when asked why he chose to become an officer.

James May entered the system in May 2000 and stayed through August of that year, before being lured back into the oilfield.

He went to work as a roughneck for Washakie Drilling in Baggs, Wyo., until the Wyoming winter shut down work.

James Barner

He worked as a mechanic briefly before returning to work for TDCJ in December. He and his wife, Martha, are both correctional officers at the Daniel Unit.

A desire for stability led May to become a CO. Commenting on oilfield work, he said, "There is no stability. One month you are up and one you are down. This leads to lots of financial problems and bad credit. With the state, once you learn to budget your money on a monthly salary, you become stable and you always know what to expect."

May said leaving the system and then returning taught him some valuable lessons.

"The reason I left was because I came into the system gung- ho and wanting to be 'something yesterday', and it caused a lot of problems with the performance of my job. Once I left, I realized how well my benefits were. The pay was decent, and I was working with some great people.

"I realized that if I slowed down and took my time to learn policy and procedure and watch the experienced COs, then my job would get a lot easier. With the experience I learn from the seasoned COs, I can use this knowledge to train new COs."

James May

Garza, whose daughters range in age from 12 to 30, lives in Hamlin and commutes daily to the Daniel Unit. Three of her daughters work for TDCJ. "I have three daughters in the system. At one time, all four of my older daughters were in. It's like a family thing."

Barner, who served four years in the Air Force, commented on the job, saying above all it takes teamwork.

"This is a job that not everybody can do. If we are not united, we are going to fall like dominoes. You have to be united. You have to feel and work as a family."

"Firm and fair" is the officers' creed. "These people have made mistakes. I'm not her to judge them; I'm here to contain them," Barner said. "If the inmate shows me respect, then I show him respect. Hopefully, we (the officers) can come in and make a positive influence on some of the inmates."

Like any job, the correctional officer's job has its up and downs.

"We always have to be aware of our surroundings. We all work together. We're like one big family. We look after one another."

May said being an officer has "a lot of plusses."

"Being a CO, you learn new things every day. You learn how to manage offenders. You learn how to be firm and fair, yet consistent with the choices you make each day with them."

Former fugitive seeks redemption

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — After 23 years in hiding and six in prison, former Vietnam War radical Katherine Ann Power stood before a church full of friends and strangers and described her quest for redemption.

"I have moved from shame to accountability, and in the process of doing that, I could say that I hurt you, and I was wrong, and I'm sorry, and I will always be sorry," Power said Thursday night after a reading of poems and essays sponsored by Oregon State University.

Power, now 52, was a 21-year-old student at Brandeis University when she and four others robbed a Boston bank in 1970 to finance their fight against the Vietnam War. While Power waited in the getaway car, William Gilday shot police Officer Walter Schroeder, killing him.

Power was the only one to escape.

While on the FBI's Ten Most Wanted List, she made her way to Oregon, where she created a new life around this quiet college town. She took the name Alice Metzinger, taught cooking, married and had a son.

But guilt over her connection to Schroeder's murder gnawed at her, and in the course of therapy for depression, she decided in 1993 to turn herself in.

She was released on parole in 1999 and returned to Corvallis, where she recently completed her thesis for a master's degree combining ethics, philosophy and writing. It is titled "Doing time: Papers from Framingham Prison."

Power opened her reading Thursday with a poem she wrote from prison to her son, Jaime, who sat in the audience of about 125 people with his wife and son.

The poem, "Sestina for Jaime," was included in the collection "Best American Poetry 1996." It describes Power's longing to watch her son play by the river and how she once thought they had forever to buy pizza and cold drinks.

"She dreams she has become the flow of the river; And basking in sun, that she has always been rock; That she once tried to keep house, Baking cookies for a human boy. He dreams it is summer; That he still has a mother holding back from the cold, And watching, watching him."

Power said meditation helped her maintain her humanity in prison, where she organized inmates to tend a garden, made candy out of orange rinds and forced herself to write 500 words a day.

She said she has no idea what she will do now with her master's degree.

Paul Harvey celebrates 25 years of 'The Rest of Story'

CHICAGO (AP) — On the 25th anniversary of his popular radio series, broadcaster Paul Harvey wasn't behind the microphone to tell "The Rest of the Story."

He was in bed.

The man with one of the nation's most familiar voices is recovering from laryngitis, but he hopes to hit the airwaves again Monday.

"He doesn't like to take off work at all," said Harvey's son, Paul Harvey Jr., who writes scripts for the show and does the broadcasts in his father's absence. "He feels completely well otherwise, and yet there's this laryngitis. All you can do is rest."

Resting his voice is an unusual thing for a man who has been broadcasting for more than six decades. Now 82, Harvey is the most listened-to man in the history of the media, said Bruce DuMont, president of the Museum of Broadcast Communications and the Radio Hall of Fame in Chicago.

"The Rest of the Story" is the longest running radio series in history, according to ABC Radio Networks. The five-minute show is broadcast at 3:30 p.m. six days a week from the ABC News studios in Chicago. Harvey gives intricate details about a historic event, person or location, waiting for the end to reveal their identity.

Each show begins with Harvey saying "Hello, Americans. You know what the news is. In a minute, you're going to hear the rest of the story." He ends the show with his trademark, "Good Day" signoff.

Along with the "Rest of the Story," Harvey broadcasts "Paul Harvey News and Comment" every weekday morning and afternoon on 1,200 radio stations throughout the country.

"No one has spoken to more people than Paul Harvey," DuMont said. "He's probably the most recognized voice in the country."

Harvey writes all his own scripts for the "News and Comment" shows. He wakes up every weekday at 3:30 a.m., eats a bowl of oatmeal, reads newswires and talks with editors around the country about the day's events.

Court rules fetus a 'person' in cases of wrongful-death

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The state Supreme Court ruled that a fetus is a person in a wrongful-death lawsuit brought by a man whose wife and unborn child died during birth procedures.

In reversing a lower court on Thursday, the Supreme Court cited a 1999 law that changed the state's criminal code to include a living fetus of 12 weeks gestation in the definition of a person.

The case stemmed from the Dec. 13, 1995, death of Evangeline Aka and her unborn son about 30 hours after she was admitted to the hospital so labor could be induced.

Aka's husband, Philip, claimed the defendants were medically negligent in unnecessarily inducing his wife's labor, failing to discontinue the procedure, failing to perform a caesarean section, failing to resuscitate his wife or the unborn baby and failing to obtain informed consent.

"Given this amended definition of 'person,' the Legislature plainly affords protection to unborn viable fetuses," Chief Justice W.H. "Dub" Arnold wrote for the court.

A circuit judge ruled in early 1999 against Aka's claims, citing a Supreme Court ruling that a fetus was not a person in wrongful-death actions.

Later that year, the Legislature approved a law specifying that an unborn fetus could be considered a person for some purposes in criminal law.

"The relevance of the Legislature's response, by statutorily defining person in the criminal context to include a fetus, cannot be understated," Arnold wrote.

In a dissenting opinion, Justice Robert L. Brown said he agreed with the lower court ruling that viable fetuses are not considered persons for purposes of wrongful-death cases.

"The majority's reasoning is inconsistent and extremely hard to justify," Brown said. "A decision of this magnitude requires clarity and direction, and not a patchwork quilt woven from disparate statutes, constitutional provisions and Supreme Court decisions."

Brown said he believed the public policy shift didn't occur until this year, with the passage of another law specifically amending the wrongful-death statute to include a viable fetus in the definition of a person.

The act was approved April 4 and won't go into effect until Aug. 14.

Teen accused of hacking into NASA's system

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Federal authorities accuse a Central Texas teen-ager of hacking into NASA computers from his home PC.

Ruben Candelario faces three felony charges related to unauthorized use, possession and obtaining of passwords. He appeared Thursday before U.S. Magistrate Nancy Nowak, who set bond at $25,000 on the charges.

Prosecutors contend that Candelario electronically crept into the computers that handle the Web site and e-mail for the Langley Research Center, a Virginia facility operated by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Larry Mathews said no classified information was kept in the system.

Candelario, 18, who lives near New Braunfels in Guadalupe County was accused of breaking into the NASA system and showing others how to follow in his footsteps.

Gayle Martin, Candelario's mother, told the San Antonio Express-News outside the court that her son has denied the charges.

Mathews said space agency officials learned of the breach last summer when its computers were found to be the source of signals that briefly overloaded and disabled computers at a private firm.

Candelario's computer was confiscated. Investigators also found passwords belonging to an Illinois-based company, Site Leader Inc., which provides Web site service.

The suspect is charged with two misdemeanors involving unauthorized access to government computers and trafficking in government passwords. Each has a maximum penalty of one year in prison upon conviction.

Mysterious deaths of foals examined

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — More than 1,000 farm managers, breeders and veterinarians gathered to hear scientists and equine experts offer the latest information on an illness that is killing foals and causing mares to lose fetuses.

They learned that scientists have given the baffling syndrome a name — Mare Reproductive Loss Syndrome — but left the meeting with more questions than answers.

"We're still just taking our best guess here as to what exactly is going on," said Claiborne Farm manager Gus Koch, who over the past week has had one stillborn foal and 10 early-term mare miscarriages on his Paris farm. "But we got some good information, and I'm hopeful that this thing is going to run its course sometime soon."

For the first time, researchers acknowledged the illness may not be limited to Kentucky's horse farms. Participants mentioned similar cases in Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania, though they may be occurring on a smaller scale, said David Powell, equine epidemiologist for the University of Kentucky's Gluck Equine Research Center.

The number of dead foals reported to the university's Livestock Diagnostic Center has decreased in recent days. Since April 28, a total of 382 dead foals or miscarried fetuses have been reported to the center. The numbers dropped from 28 on Tuesday to 15 on Thursday, said Dr. Lenn Harrison, the diagnostic center's director of veterinary pathology.

"Although it's premature to say that things are getting better, it is an encouraging sign," Harrison said.

Researchers theorize that Kentucky's warm, dry spring followed by hard freezes and subsequent drought-like conditions have fostered the growth of a fungus or toxin in grasses eaten by horses.

Several teams of researchers are focusing their efforts in that area, collecting samples of fescue, bluegrass and clover from area farms and testing them for high levels of several mold-based mycotoxins.

Scientists also will continue to collect and analyze blood, tissue, soil and hay samples until a cause can be determined.

"We're not ruling out anything until we build a better, more complete picture," Powell said.

Coyote trio makes run at state titles

AUSTIN — When the two-time defending 3,200-meter champion runs a faster time than he did last year, the rest of the field had better pick up the pace.

That's what happened this morning at the state track meet at Mike Meyers Stadium.

Borden County senior Trent Pepper, the two-time defending champion in the 3,200, finished second in this morning's Class A event, despite shaving 20 seconds off of last year's time.

Pepper is making his fourth consecutive appearance in the meet, having finished fourth in the 1,600 in 1998, first in the 3,200 in '99 and 2000, third in the 1,600 in '99 and 2000.

Coach Bobby Avery took three Coyote athletes to this year's meet. Joining Pepper are juniors T.C. Stipe and Rika Copeland.

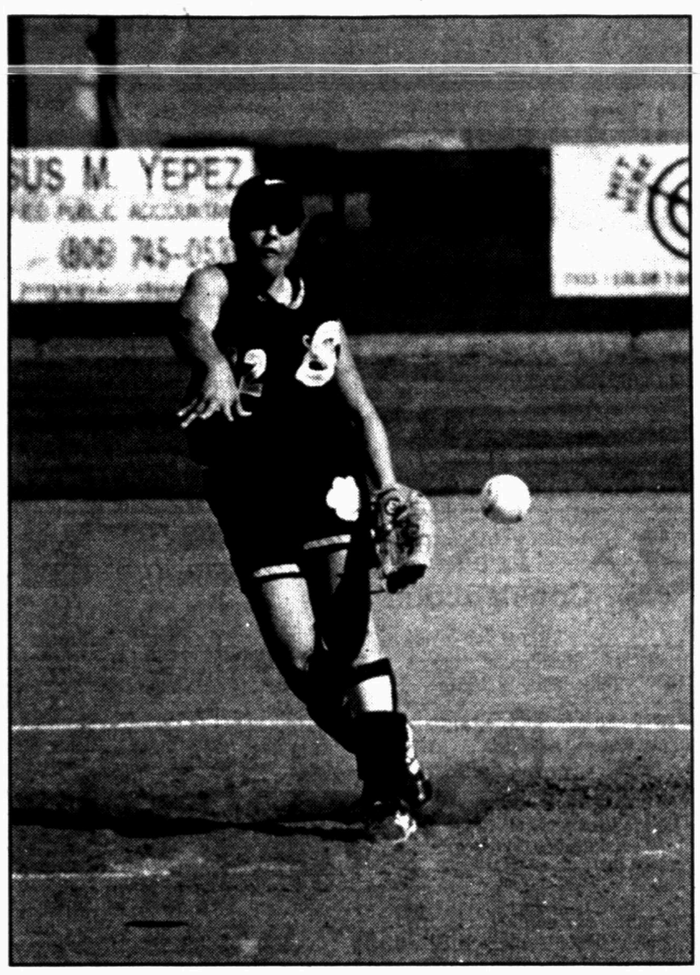

Stipe, Borden High School's middle distance runner, will compete in the 800m run. The smooth-running junior is making his first-ever appearance at the May meet.

Both Pepper and Stipe have competed at the state level in cross-country the past two years; Pepper finishing second this year and Stipe eighth.

Copeland will try for a medal in the girls' shot put competition, having won regional with a personal best of 36' 6 three-quarters inches.

Events began this morning and continue through until late Saturday evening.

Pepper will be back on the track Saturday afternoon in the 1,600. Copeland will try for her state shot put medal Saturday morning, followed by Stipe's attempt in the 800.

Lady Tigers' postseason run ends against Dumas

By Eric Drennan
Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — Strong pitching, solid fielding and powerful hitting carried the Snyder Lady Tigers to the regional quarterfinals.

But three rounds deep in the postseason, it's the little things that decide ballgames, and the Dumas Demonettes did the little things a little better.

Dumas finally took advantage of a golden opportunity in the bottom of the ninth inning to eliminate Snyder, 4-3, Thursday at Westerner Field.

Both teams squandered chances in the final three frames, before the Demonettes finally pushed across the winning run on a sacrifice fly.

"It was a hard fought game by both teams," said SHS coach Shelly Hayes. "It's a shame either team had to lose. I'm extremely proud of our girls' effort and the season they had."

Dumas scored two runs in the fifth to take a 3-2 lead, before Snyder managed to knot the tally in the top of the seventh.

Vanessa Freeman started the rally with a single to left field, then went to second on a wild pitch. One out later, Chaelyn Robinson drew a walk and Leticia Martinez laid down a bunt to load the bases.

Whitney Webb drew another walk to force Freeman home with the tying run, and the Lady Tigers still had the bases loaded and only one out.

Dumas hurler Meghan King buckled down. The senior struck out Cameron Mackey, then got Shelley Fisk on a fly ball to center field to end the threat.

"The girls just wouldn't give up," Hayes said. "To come back and tie the game in the top of the seventh was great. I wish we could have scored more than one run with the bases loaded, but their pitcher did a good job against us all day."

Dumas went quietly in the bottom of the seventh and Snyder did the same in the top of the eight, before the Demonettes threatened in the bottom of the frame.

A single by Veronica Medrano and a Cassie Anderson double put Dumas runners at second and third with no outs.

The Lady Tigers kept their hopes alive when Leticia Martinez snared a line shot in right field for one out, and Fisk gunned down Medrano at the plate for another. Snyder second baseman Valerie Hernandez gloved another line drive to end the inning.

"Our girls knew the situation, and they made the plays they had to make to stay in the game," the Lady Tiger coach said. "That was a tremendous catch in left field."

The Lady Tigers' best chance in extra innings came in the top of the ninth when Hernandez reached on an infield single, and Leticia Martinez bunted her to second.

With two outs, Dumas intentionally walked Webb, before King got Mackey to ground out to halt the Lady Tigers again.

Snyder wouldn't come to the plate again, as Dumas ended the game in the bottom of the ninth.

With one away, SHS pitcher Ashley Martinez issued a pair of walks, and Kendra McClure reached first on a bunt to load the bases. Veronica Medrano's fly ball to left plated Dalila Paredes for the winning run.

"We finally got ourselves in a jam that we couldn't get out of," Hayes stated. "Dumas was extremely patient at the plate and they bunted the ball well. Give them credit they played well."

King surrendered eight hits and four walks to go along with 13 strikeouts.

Snyder starter Kelsi Johnson worked the first two frames, with Ashley Martinez pitching the final seven.

The Lady Tigers ended their season with a record of 20-13. Dumas improves to 23-7 and advances to face Wichita Falls Rider in the regional semifinals.

Cowboys to honor Hayes

IRVING (AP) — Imagine if the world's fastest runner had the hands of an NFL receiver. He'd average 20 yards a catch. Fifty-yard touchdowns would be an annual event. And he'd be great at returning punts.

That was the case with Bob Hayes, who took the speed that won two gold medals at the 1964 Olympics and became a rookie sensation with the Dallas Cowboys in 1965.

Hayes' career lasted 11 years, and his impact is still evident. Zone defenses were created to stop him and NFL offenses all crave a breakaway threat of his caliber.

Problems with drugs and alcohol after his playing days have likely kept Hayes from being in the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Now 58 and fighting a variety of serious ailments, Hayes is getting a chance to have his career celebrated.

The Cowboys announced Wednesday that Hayes will be inducted into their Ring of Honor this season. No date was picked.

Spurs eye sweep of Mavs

DALLAS (AP) — The grind of the NBA playoffs shouldn't be a problem for the young Dallas Mavericks.

So it must the pressure of the playoffs that's gotten into their heads.

The Mavericks got the day off Thursday to refresh themselves mentally and physically following a 104-90 loss to San Antonio on Wednesday night that put the Spurs ahead 3-0 in the best-of-seven series.

"I think the day off will help us and get us a little more hungry," team leader Michael Finley said. "It seems like we've been playing basketball every other day now for a long time."

Coach Don Nelson planned on the break even before the team's second straight 14-point loss. He knew that after five games in nine days in three cities, his team needed a break.

"I think we need to step away from the court for a day and then get back together," Nelson said.

The Spurs also took Thursday off, mostly as a reward.

One year after an injury to Tim Duncan prevented San Antonio from properly defending its title, the Spurs are on the brink of returning to the conference finals. They can wrap up a second-round sweep of the Mavericks on Saturday.

"We're a good team right now and playing good defense, like our championship year," forward David Robinson said. "But it's still real early."

Through three lopsided games, San Antonio has played up to the standard it set by having the NBA's best regular-season record while exploiting the inexperience of a Dallas team coming off its first playoff series win in 13 years.

The Spurs have yet to face any serious pressure in the fourth quarter.

AERATION & FERTILIZE
Power core aeration is one of the most important cultural practices available for your lawn. Aeration helps control thatch, improves the soil structure, helps create growth pockets for new roots, and opens the way for water and fertilizer to get to the roots of your lawn.

THE SNYDER DAILY NEWS

Ashcroft to delay McVeigh's execution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General John Ashcroft decided today to postpone the execution of convicted Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh after the FBI revealed it had failed to turn over documents to the defense team, a government official said.

The execution date will be delayed 30 days, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Ashcroft was announcing his decision at a 1 p.m. EDT news conference.

The decision would halt the dramatic countdown to McVeigh's scheduled Wednesday execution. Victims, friends and family members expressed outrage that the FBI's mistake, revealed Thursday, could force the delay.

"We needed this death penalty," said Aren Almon Kok, whose baby daughter came to symbolize the 1995 blast through a photograph of her in the arms of a firefighter.

"For someone to make this mistake ... to find them less than a week before he dies ... is unbelievably unfair," she said in Oklahoma City.

The Justice Department has the authority to delay the execution date without seeking permission from a court for a formal stay.

Ashcroft also planned to announce an internal investigation into the documents foul-up, officials said.

It was not immediately clear whether McVeigh — who had waived appeals in the past few months and claimed responsibility for the bombing — would himself now seek a delay.

The Justice Department handed McVeigh's lawyers 3,135 documents it said should have been provided during the discovery phase of his 1997 trial in Denver. The existence of the documents was disclosed Thursday by CBS.

One of McVeigh's lawyers, Nathan Chambers, said today, "We have a lot of work to do as quickly as we can. We haven't imposed any deadlines. We have a number of options we're considering."

Meanwhile, Michael Tigar, lawyer for co-defendant Terry Nichols, told CNN he planned to file a new appeal on behalf of his client with the Supreme Court based on the finding of the documents. Nichols was convicted of conspiracy and involuntary manslaughter and sentenced to life in prison.

Kathleen Treanor, who lost her 4-year-old daughter and in-laws in the April 19, 1995, bombing, criticized the FBI as bungling the case.

Retail sales increased sharply in April

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale inflation rose 0.3 percent in April as gasoline prices took the biggest jump in 10 months. But that didn't keep consumers from going on a shopping spree: Retail sales went up sharply.

The modest advance in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index, which measures inflation pressures before they reach store shelves, followed a decline in wholesale prices in March, the Labor Department reported today.

Retail sales increased by a bigger-than-expected 0.8 percent in April; many analysts were expecting an increase of only 0.1 percent. The increase, the biggest in three months, came after retail sales fell by 0.4 percent in March.

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average was down 88 points at midday and the Nasdaq index had dropped 14 points.

The April PPI was better than the 0.4 percent rise many forecasters were expecting. The increase was the largest since wholesale prices shot up by 1.1 percent in January.

Excluding volatile energy and food prices, wholesale inflation rose 0.2 percent in April, up from a 0.1 percent gain in March, and slightly faster than analysts were expecting.

The Federal Reserve slashed interest rates four times this year; totaling 2 percentage points to prevent the struggling economy from tipping into recession. Economists are predicting another rate reduction when policymakers meet Tuesday.

While concerned about inflation creep, economists estimate that higher prices for energy and other items are more likely to squeeze companies' profits than be passed along to consumers in the form of higher prices.

In April, overall energy prices rose a tiny 0.1 percent after falling by 2.6 percent in March.

Gasoline prices jumped 7 percent in April, the largest increase since June 2000, when they rocketed upward by 18.1 percent.

Over the last two weeks, the average retail price for gasoline in the United States increased 8.58 cents to $1.76 a gallon.

Federal judge blocks road ban in all national forests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Expanses of national forest land that would have been spared from logging and road building this weekend won't receive that protection after a federal judge blocked the Clinton administration policy.

The road ban would have prevented logging, road construction and other activities on 58.5 million acres of federal forests, except in rare circumstances. It was one of President Clinton's key environmental legacies.

U.S. District Judge Edward J. Lodge in Boise, Idaho, blocked the rule Thursday, saying it would cause "irreparable harm" to federal forest lands and those that neighbor it.

The four-page ruling came less than a week after the Bush administration said it would implement the rule on Saturday while work continued on revisions to allow more local input.

In issuing a preliminary injunction indefinitely stalling the ban, Lodge called the rule a "Band-Aid approach" that "ignores the reality ... that once something of this magnitude is set in motion, momentum is irresistible, options are closed and agency commitments, if not set in concrete, will be the subject of litigation for years to come."

However, Lodge encouraged the Bush administration to continue moving ahead with its study of possible revisions "because the ultimate responsibility lies with the government and-or its agencies and not with the court."

The ban was praised by environmentalists as a way to protect the nation's most pristine forest lands — a total area more than twice the size of Ohio — from developers. Opponents, including the timber and mining industries, say the rule needlessly places valuable resources off limits and puts forests at risk to wildfire and disease.

The state of Idaho, timber company Boise Cascade and various groups representing farmers, snowmobilers and others had filed a lawsuit asking Lodge to block the rule. They argued the process used to create it was one-sided and didn't consider the long-term consequences for the forests.

Epidemic of foot-and-mouth said under control in Britain

LONDON (AP) — An independent scientific study released today supports the British government's claim that the foot-and-mouth epidemic is under control.

The hurried slaughter of suspect animals faced new questions as the government also revealed that almost a third of cases classified as confirmed produced no indication of the disease in blood tests completed after the affected livestock had been killed.

The Ministry of Agriculture said about 450 of the 1,579 confirmed cases of the livestock virus proved negative when blood was tested at the Institute for Animal Health laboratory in Pirbright, southern England.

Of the 250 cases in which animals were slaughtered on suspicion of having the disease, only 46 tested positive for the virus.

The ministry said negative results did not necessarily mean foot-and-mouth was not present on the farms. It was possible the livestock were at the stage of the disease where it would not show up in blood tests.

More than 2.6 million animals have been slaughtered in a campaign to eradicate the highly infectious livestock disease. Livestock on infected farms were ordered killed within 24 hours of the disease being confirmed at the site. Animals on neighboring farms had to be killed within two days.

"Speed of slaughter is crucial to successful control and eradication of the disease," the ministry said in a written statement. "Waiting for test results to come through before taking action would risk not bringing the outbreak under control."

The government policy was bolstered by a report in the journal Nature by researchers from the Center for Tropical Veterinary Medicine at the University of Edinburgh. The report says the disease was contained by the end of March, when restrictions on the movement of livestock, people and vehicles between farms were in full force.

All in the family reap reward by gardening together for mom

DEAR ABBY: Mother's Day is approaching, and I'm feeling sentimental. I'd like to tell you what our family used to do on Mother's Day. Mom didn't need any more clothes or jewelry. So, for years, all the adult children, grandchildren and in-laws put on our work clothes and showed up at Mom's home on Mother's Day.

We brought the makings for a potluck dinner and plenty of beverages. We would then proceed to till and plant my mother's garden. Mom loved to garden and did so into her 80s, but getting it planted became too much for her. This was not only the perfect time to get the job done for her, but she loved seeing the family working together.

Often what older people enjoy the most is the gift of time and family. They want their independence, but some things can be done much more easily by the children. (Just don't forget to do it the way THEY want it done, and you'll see the joy in their eyes.) — REMEMBERING IN WISCONSIN

DEAR REMEMBERING: How sweet of you to want to share your family's tradition. I'm sure your efforts pleased your mother mightily, and that every time she looked out her window, she was reminded of the happy memories of Mother's Day.

There are usually any number of chores to be done around a house, from painting to washing windows, fixing a fence, clearing out a garage, and miscellaneous household repairs too numerous to list. All it takes to get them done is a willing heart and some elbow grease. Of course, it also takes time — and time is the most precious gift of all.

**

DEAR ABBY: I'm about to be married and am looking forward to my wedding with one exception: the family part.

I was severely abused as a child by my oldest sister. She is seven years older than me. My parents both worked outside the home, and they left her in charge.

When I was 5, I returned from Asia where I had been living with my grandparents. That's when the abuse started. She made up lies about things I supposedly did during the day, and since my parents were very traditional and stressed work, they beat me almost nightly.

I'm an adult now and have gone through therapy, where I learned the best way to deal with my family is to see as little of them as possible.

Although I have forgiven them and moved on, I do not want my sister at my wedding. The rest of the family has faced the truth and tried to make amends; my sister has not, and I want nothing to do with her. My mother, however, wants us to be "one big, happy family" with my sister in attendance. (Our family has never been "one big, happy family.") What should I do? — ABOUT TO BE MARRIED IN L.A.

DEAR ABOUT TO BE MARRIED: I see no reason to invite your abuser to your wedding in order to satisfy your mother's fantasy of a perfect family. Omit your sister from the guest list, and don't allow anyone to browbeat you into changing your mind. Your reasons for excluding her are legitimate.

Please accept my best wishes for a long and happy marriage.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "DESPERATE IN SOUTH FLORIDA": Even though your name doesn't appear on your husband's credit cards, you MUST consult an attorney to determine whether or not you will be held responsible for his irrational spending sprees. Please don't wait. Your future may depend on it.

Police sort evidence in murder case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Homicide detectives were sorting through steamer trunks, suitcases and boxes filled with potential evidence in the slaying of Robert Blake's wife.

The containers, turned over to police Thursday by Blake's attorney, were stuffed with documents, photographs and audio tapes detailing the life of the actor's wife, Bonny Lee Bakley.

Police also planned to interview Blake's bodyguard, Earl Caulfield, who allegedly saw a man watching the actor's house in recent weeks. Blake attorney Harland Braun said the mysterious stranger with the crew cut became such a fixture outside the house that the bodyguard gave him a nickname, "Buzz."

Bakley, whom Blake, 67, married four months ago when it was determined he was the father of her 11-month-old daughter, was shot in Blake's car after the couple ate at a nearby Studio City restaurant.

She was slain after the actor left her to go back to the restaurant to retrieve a gun — which he was carrying because Bakley had told him she was in danger, his lawyer has said.
