Tornado kills 10 people

Tulsa-area twister injures at least 50, officials say

■ Storm blows cars, trucks off the road, damages dozens of homes.

Associated Press

TULSA, Okla. — A tornado blew cars and trucks off a busy interstate and destroyed dozens of homes Saturday evening, killing 10 people, injuring at least 50 and leaving hundreds homeless, authorities said.

"This was not a storm that stayed down and then went back up. It stayed down for several minutes and totaled the area," said Jerry Griffin, an inspector for the Tulsa County Sheriff's Department. That area was about a mile wide and two miles long, he said.

The twister demolished at least 80 mobile homes at a trailer park in suburban Catoosa, according to television reporters at the scene.

Two major truck stops on Interstate 44 were scattered piles of rubble. Warped sheets of metal were wrapped around whatever poles were left standing. Families who escaped from their vehicles at one truck stop walked around dazed, clinging to pillows, blankets and other possessions.

Yeltsin makes final appeal to balloters

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Russians cast ballots today in a nationwide referendum on the leadership of Boris Yeltsin, who told voters a victory for him would mean "a peaceful breakthrough to the future."

In an emotional, televised appeal to the nation Saturday night, Yeltsin asked Russians to resolve his power struggle with the Soviet-era Congress by endorsing early parliamentary elections this fall.

He repeated hints he might take extraordinary measures to speed adoption of a new constitution he has proposed to strengthen the presidency and replace the Congress of People's Deputies with an American-style legislature.

"Your votes for the president will be considered as your desire to adopt a new constitution," Yeltsin said in a 16-minute speech broadcast on both state-owned TV channels.

Minutes after Yeltsin finished speaking, the polls opened in the Far East port of Petropavlovsk Kamchatsky, 4,200 miles east of Moscow. Voters

CIA volunteers put smiles on faces of local homeowners

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Olga Blaylock, 72, smiled as she sat in her home — where she has lived since 1942 — while constant banging sounds could be heard coming from the roof above.

"It's wonderful to sit here, seeing it and knowing it's being done," she said Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Blaylock said she and her husband, Frank, 87, could never have done it themselves.

"Well, you know, you get old and you can't do for yourself, so Mr. Trimble takes over," she said. "And we don't have any income to do it ourselves."

Bobby Trimble — with the help of about 2,000 volunteers — took over fix-up work at about 102 houses Saturday. Trimble, 64, is founder of Christmas in April, a program aimed at renovating substandard houses that owners can't afford to repair themselves.

"The shingles were blowing off, blowing all over the yard," Mrs. Blaylock said.

Kevin Moody, one of 11 Mobil employees working on the home, said four old layers of roofing had to be re-

Cost-estimate of tax is too low, opponents say

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the sixth in a weekly series on energy issues.

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah went straight to Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen with a question about President Clinton's proposed energy tax: Is the government's cost-estimate of the tax too low?

The Treasury Department insists that the Btu tax, to be imposed on all major fuels as a way to help cut the federal budget deficit, will scarcely be felt by most Americans. Treasury officials say it would take an average toll of just $234 a year on a family of four earning $40,000.

But opponents of the Btu tax such as Hatch say the impact could be much higher, perhaps even twice what the ad-

Dissension threatens House GOP caucus

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — The House Republican Caucus, which is chaired by Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland, is negotiating with dissident members in an attempt to avoid a major split in the organization, two lawmakers said last week.

Rep. Jerry Yost, R-Longview, said three people selected by each side in the dispute are negotiating a list of 10 points that would change the current caucus bylaws. Yost said he expected a final decision within the next two weeks.

If negotiations break down, he warned, as many as one-third of the 58 House Republicans are ready to walk out and form their own group.

Rep. Kent Grusendorf, R-Arlington, said the number of Republicans who would break away is closer to half, "although some would have dual memberships" in the old and new organizations.

Grusendorf said he was "cautiously optimistic" about the negotiations. "We only want to make the caucus more democratic and effective," he said.

Yost said the two sides have reached agreement on eight of the 10 points. If the entire caucus approves the changes, he said

Dale Brown outspends other council candidates

The eight candidates for City Council may be talking about similar issues — spending restraints, no new taxes and economic development — but they aren't spending similar amounts of money.

ELECTION '93

In fact, at-large challenger Dale Brown — a 50-year-old independent oil operator — has campaigned with over 12 times as much money as the low spender of the candidates — fellow at-large challenger Bill Rodriguez.

Brown's total of $15,831 is over twice the amount spent by Mayor J.D. Faircloth at this point in his campaign last year.

Grass fires

As winds gusted up to 44 mph and temperatures passed the 90 degree mark, several grass fires were reported in the area Saturday, officials said. A major grassfire — that consumed several thousand acres — continued until about 9 p.m. after being ignited just east of Midland County in the mid-afternoon. The fire — in the vicinity of State Highways 158 and 137 in Glasscock County — was fought by units from Glasscock, Reagan, Howard and Sterling counties, Stanton, Midland, and Greenwood and Northeast Midland Volunteer fire departments. Earlier in the day, fire units from Midland, Greenwood and Northeast Midland volunteers doused a grass fire near Interstate 20 and Loop 250. In Odessa, firefighters responded to three grassfires in town and two in West Odessa. Overnight, the Odessa Fire Department doused a structure fire in the 1400 block of Industrial Ave. Ten units reponded to the fire at an abondoned warehouse about 2 a.m. Cause of the fire remained under investigation Saturday.

LOW: Btu tax will take a higher toll than $234, opponents say ministration says.

"I think your numbers are pretty low," Hatch told Bentsen last week during a Senate Finance Committee hearing, as he brandished a Treasury Department study that estimates energy cost increases by region. In the mountain region, including Utah, the document says energy costs would rise by $104 per person.

This would yield a $416 tax hike for a family of four, Hatch said.

"They've got to be low, Mr. Secretary," Hatch continued, referring to the administration's estimate of $234 for a family of four.

Bentsen defended his department's family-of-four $234 estimate, telling Hatch that "a family's consumption of energy doesn't rise by four, not at all." Bentsen's point assumed that a family of four would use much less energy together than four people living singly.

The secretary explained that the Treasury Department's number crunchers "took behavior response and they tried to take all direct and indirect costs in coming up with that number ($234). Let me say that in no way did we try to influence the number."

The Treasury Department calculated its projections by applying a tax model to Census Bureau data and the Consumer Price Index. Treasury officials concluded that by 1996, when the tax would be fully phased in, it would cost a typical American family of four about an extra $114 a year to light and heat a home and drive a car — and another $120 in higher prices from passed-along energy costs for consumer goods. Total average household impact of the new Btu tax: $234.

The exchange between Bentsen and Hatch illustrates the thorny calculus underlying the administration's effort to slash the federal deficit by imposing a broad-based energy tax. Based on the heat content of fuels, the Btu levy is expected to raise about $72 billion over five years. Most congressional sources believe some kind of energy tax will become part of Clinton's overall economic plan.

Most of the organized opposition to the tax has come so far from specific sectors of the economy, including agriculture, manufacturing and energy representatives, who worry about the tax's impact on their businesses.

But John Shanahan, an analyst with the conservative Heritage Foundation here, says consumers should be worried, too. He says the administration's number is too low and that the actual cost would come to about $450 per household.

The American Petroleum Institute, the oil industry's main trade group here and a fervent opponent of the energy tax, says the household tab could be $471.

Opponents of the tax don't challenge the administration's estimate of the direct increase in energy costs a Btu tax would bring. For example, when fully phased in by 1996, the tax would boost the cost of gasoline 7.5 cents per gallon; the average electric bill would go up by $2.25 a month.

Most of the disagreement centers on the indirect costs that higher energy prices would spread throughout the economy.

Shanahan says the inflationary impact of the tax "will be much higher than Clinton realizes" after businesses pass along their higher energy costs to consumers.

Stephen Entin, an economist with the Institute for Research on the Economics of Taxation, a free-market think tank, said the Btu tax could "easily cost the average American family more than $500 a year" after fully taking effect. His calculation is based on the direct hike in energy costs, and "the contraction of the economy" he says the tax will cause.

"Look, the tax is imposed on the whole country, whether we pay more as customers at the store, or more for utility bills, or whether we're laid off because people don't buy as much because the price went up," Entin said. "No matter how you slice it, people are going to get clobbered, as wage-earners, shareholders or customers."

But Robert McIntyre, director of Citizens for Tax Justice, which opposes the energy levy, says the plan's critics are off base.

"We don't like the tax much, but we have no problems with their math," said McIntyre, speculating that conservative critics are guided perhaps more by ideology than by science in their views.

Weight Loss Mystery Baffles Scientists

WASHINGTON -- Scientists are baffled by a natural food ingredient that caused people to lose weight even though they were instructed not to alter normal eating patterns.

Although other scientists and studies may not agree, a study published in The British Journal of Nutrition found that the ingredient, a natural plant colloid, can cause significant weight loss. Several explanations for the weight loss are suggested, but the most likely according to scientists in a Finnish study, is that colloids seem to decrease the intestinal absorption of calories. However, universal acceptance of this theory will depend on further study.

National Dietary Research, an organization committed to the research and development of nutritional solutions to world-wide health problems, has successfully isolated and incorporated a series of colloids into a unique food tablet called Food Source One. A significant breakthrough in nutritional weight control, Food Source One provides a scientifically designed method for weight loss. When used as directed, Food Source One replaces high calorie fats with lower calorie nutrients, thereby providing optimum nutrition with a minimum number of fat calories. According to a study in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, you do not need to restrict the amount of food you eat to lose weight, just the fat.

Food Source One is unlike any other product on the market and is available immediately because it is not a drug and only contains natural ingredients already known to be safe. Physicians and pharmacists are praising Food Source One as a natural, drug free alternative for confronting obesity.

WHO'S "ROBIN WHO?"

Ann Richards' Claim:
If You Don't Vote Yes on 'ROBIN HOOD", the Schools Will Close...

Reasons Why Ann Richards is WRONG and WHY Texans Should Vote "NO" on "ROBIN HOOD"

I. "Robin Hood" would create a state property tax, raise your property taxes even higher and authorize the Legislature to redistribute your local taxes regionally or statewide.

II. The legislature will have 30 days after the defeat of "Robin Hood" to pass a finance bill that will keep the schools open. (In June of 1987, the Legislature convened at 11:00 AM on a Tuesday, passed 5 major tort reform bills, and adjourned at 11:17 AM on Wednesday.)

III. The courts have not required the anactment of the "Robin Hood plan as a condition for keeping the schools open. Even the Judge who controls the June 1st deadline has siad: "We do not have to have a constitutional amendment to fix this problem...this problem is a creature of statute and can be solved by statutes."

IV. Raising property taxes, and then redistributing them, does nothing to make our public schools more "efficient."

V. "Robin Hood" erodes local control of education.

VI. Passage of the Robin Hood tax does nothing to improve the quality and accountability of poorly performing school districts.

VII. Rather than impose higher property taxes in excess of $1 billion a year to equalize funding for a small minority of districts, the legislature could dedicate all of the net lottery proceeds to poor districts.

VIII. Dedicate a portion of the sales tax revenues at current levels to making the system more equitable.

IX. A "no-lobbyist" formula based on the principle of "equal revenue for equal tax effort" could be adopted, using the tax rates that were in place piror to the adoption of the Robin Hood spending system.

X. Passage of this Constitutional Amendment will not get our schools out of court. Instead, a Constitutional Amendment could be passed in August 1993 defining "efficient" to resolve this legal dispute.

Medical examiners: 2 cultists died of gunshot wounds, 4 from smoke

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Tarrant County medical examiner has revealed that two victims found in the remains of the Branch Davidian compound died of gunshot wounds to the head. He would not further discuss the location of the wounds.

Chief examiner Dr. Nizam Peerwani would not discuss how the bullets entered the victims' heads and refused to theorize on whether they were suicides or homicides. Peerwani's office is handling the autopsies resulting from Monday's blaze that is thought to have killed cult leader David Koresh and 85 of his followers after a 51-day standoff with authorities.

Peerwani said during a news conference Saturday that six autopsies had been performed and no identifications had been made. Forty-four bodies were at the Tarrant County medical examiner's office and four more have been located at the compound and will be retrieved Sunday morning, he said.

Three of the victims died of smoke inhalation and carbon monoxide poisoning and the cause of death of the fourth victim was still undetermined pending a toxicology report, Peerwani said.

"We've autopsied four of those bodies. Two of those bodies had gunshot wounds to the head. We had a white male. We don't know his age yet. He had a single gunshot wound to the head and that was his cause of death.

"Next to this person we had a white female, adult also, she also had a gunshot wound to the head and that was her cause of death," Peerwani said.

Medical examiners began the first batch of autopsies Saturday on bodies pulled from the remains of the Branch Davidian compound as investigators cleared the grim scene.

Most forensic investigators left the crime scene Saturday so thousands of rounds of bullets and other weapons, including grenades and mortar shells could be removed.

Once the site is clear, investigators hope to continue removing bodies, beginning with at least the four more that have been spotted, said Mike Cox, spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety, which is overseeing the cleanup.

Cox said one of the recovered bodies was of a woman who appeared to be clutching a "3- or 4-year-old child."

Cox said at least 13 bodies have been found near a concrete bunker located in the center of what had been a city-block sized complex.

The chamber is where Koresh is believed to have hid most of his $200,000 cache of weapons and where he took shelter from FBI tear gas bombardments used to coax him into surrendering Monday.

As investigators combed through the charred remains Saturday, Cox said they overcame one fear and faced a new one.

Cox said the first injury to an investigator came Friday when a piece of cinder blew into the eye of an FBI employee who had briefly removed his protective goggles. It was safely washed out immediately, Cox said.

Official promises overseas dollars for collider

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary is trying to tantalize Congress with promises of big bucks from overseas for the super collider.

But Congress has heard that before.

For years, the Bush administration pledged to obtain $1.7 billion in foreign money for the giant atom smasher being built under the plains south of Dallas.

Its limited success played a role in the House's vote last June to terminate the $10 billion project. The Senate later reversed the action and construction moved forward for another year.

Critics have always used the lack of funding by other countries in their anti-collider crusade. To date, only $250 million or so of the $1.7 billion pledge has been met.

After that fateful House vote, supporters rarely mentioned the words "super collider" and "foreign participation" in the same sentence.

But with the arrival of a new administration, fresh promises of foreign funding are again cropping up in advance of the pivotal vote expected this June.

In an appearance Thursday before a House appropriations subcommittee, O'Leary told lawmakers that foreign commitments are a priority.

"I see my responsibility and the responsibility of the department and the administration to go forward and identify those (foreign) participants," she said.

"The next step is to go back and put money on the table in meaningful amounts."

Some critics are surprised that O'Leary is dusting off promises the previous regime couldn't meet.

"It's either a Machiavellian plot where they already have the commitment in their pocket and are just ready to announce another victory a couple weeks hence or an unmitigated disaster in terms of timing and strategy," says Rep. Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y., a leading collider opponent.

But, he adds, "I tend to think it probably isn't either."

Authorities gain control of 11-hour riot

GROESBECK (AP) — About 200 inmates at a minimum security prison ended a nearly 11-hour riot early Saturday by surrendering after being bombarded with tear gas.

Some inmates at Limestone County Minimum Security Detention Center reported minor injuries related to the blasts of tear gas, said Sheriff Dennis Walker. Assistant Warden Karen Medik said one inmate was hospitalized for respiratory problems. No guards were injured.

About 200 of the center's 475 inmates began rioting about 5 p.m. Friday. DPS trooper Frank Whaley said the incident began after prisoners were told to clean up their cells. About 100 refused, and their television privileges were revoked, he said.

Inmates then took over the two wings, destroying sinks and lockers and breaking dishes, Whaley said.

"They destroyed anything they could destroy in their cells," said Sheriff Walker, who had no immediate damage estimate.

The prisoners began giving up in groups of five about 3:40 a.m. Saturday, said Walker. No shots were fired before the surrender and the inmates had no weapons or hostages and made no demands.

All of the inmates were evacuated from the building by 6:30 a.m., Ms. Medik said. They were then transported to the Michael Unit of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice near Palestine, said Chuck McDonald, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Walker said the prisoners would remain at various other state prisons while the facility was repaired.

McDonald said the officials needed the inmates to be moved out temporarily so they could repair damage incurred during the uprising.

"We don't have any prisoners here at all," Ms. Medik said.

Groesbeck, a community of about 3,000 people, is about 37 miles east of Waco and 88 miles south of Dallas.

The privately operated facility has 500 beds, officials said. Neil Bond, who runs vocational training at the state-contracted prison, said most of the prisoners were at the facility due to overcrowding at the Harris County Jail.

WEATHER WATCH

Today's high to be in low 80s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the low 80s and north to northeast winds at 10 to 20 mph and gusty, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be cloudy with a low in the upper 40s.

Monday is expected to be sunny with a high in the low 80s.

After an overnight low of 57, Saturday's high was 91, four degrees short of the record high for the date of 95 set in 1943. The record low for today's date was 39 in 1937.

STATE

Brisk winds whipped around North and South Texas Saturday as partly cloudy skies dotted all areas of the state.

Gusty blasts of up to 40 miles per hour whisked across North Texas. The skies over the central part of the area and along the Red River and in East Texas were partly cloudy amid 80 degree temperatures.

Skies were mostly sunny across West Texas as a few high thin clouds continued to move over the area and clear conditions should continue today.

NATION

Rain and thunderstorms were scattered in the Plains, Midwest and Texas coast Saturday, and snow fell in parts of the Rockies.

Severe thunderstorms were possible across sections of Oklahoma, Arkansas and southern Missouri, the National Weather Service said.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended across the Great Lakes, the upper Ohio Valley and the central Appalachians.

Flooding caused by heavy rain and the melting of record snow amounts continued along streams and lakes in central New York state. Hundreds of families have been driven from their homes, including nearly 400 homes damaged along Oneida Lake's southern shore alone.

Flooding also continued along much of the Lake Champlain shoreline in New York state and Vermont, with water nearing the record level set in April 1869, the weather service said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

WACO — From the smoldering ruins on the Central Texas plains, the demonic David Koresh still manages to reach from the depths of the ashes and keep a choke hold on hundreds, if not thousands, of people worldwide.

Immortalized on a dozen variations of T- shirts, gimme caps and even beer koozies, this 33-year-old, long-haired, high school dropout parlayed his mediocre guitar-picking skills into a religious scam that cost nearly 100 people their lives.

What better epitaph could there be for this maniacal megalomaniac than to turn shock into schlock?

For 51 days, this Bible-thumping pedophile sapped the life literally from the 85 followers he brainwashed to the point of self-immolation and figuratively from the hundreds of lawmen and reporters who poured into Waco.

For those of us in the media who have chronicled this unfolding drama, it's been an emotionally draining, physically exhausting and professionally challenging assignment.

We moved from the early days when police hostility toward reporters was obvious. The feeling was instilled initially by the allegation by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms — however misplaced or well-landed that blow turns out to be — that the media blew the ATF's cover, leading to the Branch Davidian ambush that killed four agents and injured 16 others.

■ Analysis

The role the local media may have played in spoiling the element of surprise that ATF said was so essential to their success will be dissected, no doubt, by the congressional inquiries that have already started and the analysis that the Society of Professional Journalists is doing.

Let's not forget, though, that this happened in a community where residents had complained for years — ever since David Koresh, then acting under his given name of Vernon Howell, took over the "Ranch Apocalypse" from former leader George Roden in a gunfight.

They knew they had complained to the local officials and gotten no where. They knew they had told Children's Protective Services about physical and sexual abuse of children being held in Koresh's clutch.

They knew they had written Congressman Chet Edwards to no avail. Is it any wonder, then, that the communities of Elk and Axtell and other pockets close to the Davidian commune were abuzz for several days before the raid, in anticipation that someone, finally, was doing something about the arsenal of weapons everyone seemed to know was being stockpiled?

That initial distrust of the media by police also was fueled by the sheer size of the media contingent, the likes of which many of us in the business had never even seen.
ditches with the discarded wrappers of food provided by the Salvation Army (that was later corrected by some enterprising trash hauler who sold his services to us and began weekly pickups). The county finally hauled in portable toilets and Federal Express began daily deliveries and pickups to this quarter-mile stretch of road that became known as Camp David and Satellite City.

It was a media feeding frenzy. We jammed phone lines, pestered families and scoured the bars at night looking for federal agents who could give us insight into what was going on in the FBI and ATF command centers.

We are a jaded bunch. Accustomed to reporting on death and atrocities, we undoubtedly appeared insensitive to the pain that ATF agents still feel — particularly those who carried their slain colleagues out from Koresh's hail of gunfire in what had to have been an embarrassing and demoralizing retreat. As the siege dragged on, we moaned to FBI agents at night to hurry up and get this ordeal over with so we could go home.

Then we stood in absolute horror and disbelief with the rest of the world and watched more than 85 people die. We wait for the final word on whether they incinerated themselves or whether some were shot trying to surrender to lawmen.

I wait for the moment, when physically I can put all this behind me, pack up and leave Waco and finally let go of the emotions I have choked back now for two months. I've wept privately on occasion for the families of those slain officers — Steve Willis, Conway LeBleu, Robert Williams and Todd McKeehan — people I don't even know. I've wept for a friend, an agent involved in the initial raid whose pain I cannot even begin to imagine.

As a mother, I can only begin to sense what this ordeal has been for those like Balenda Ganem — the mother of David Thibodeau, one of nine survivors. Think what you will of this dumpy woman with dyed-black hair who runs a cafe parttime in Greece. Sit in judgment of the parenting skills, if you want, of this woman who dared tangle with the FBI and sought out the media limelight to try to win her son's release.

Balenda and I are from different worlds, but a four-hour interview with her in the early days of the siege left me in no doubt that her depth of emotion is no less than mine would have been had it been one of my children in Koresh's clutches.

And I've wept for the 25 children who were sacrificed on Koresh's apocalyptic altar. What a sad commentary it is when we think it would have been better had those children been shot or poisoned, rather than imagining their wails as they burned in the hell that appears to have been orchestrated by David Koresh.

In the Branch Davidians' fiery finale last Monday, Koresh achieved precisely what he intended: Holding the ATF and FBI up to worldwide scrutiny and criticism.

What crueler blow could he have landed than to sear his name on the very psyche of his archenemy?

GOP: House members negotiate changes in bylaws

an agreement as "more than marginal."

A major point would be to change the membership of the policy board, which establishes policies used on legislative issues and initiates the issues that will require negotiations between the Republican minority and House Democratic leadership.

The dissident group wants to achieve regional diversity by dividing Republicans into nine regions, with each electing a policy member.

The group also wants to change the makeup of the executive committee, which currently has about the same members as the policy board. The proposal would make the caucus chairman, vice chairman and policy board chairman members of the executive committee.

Another change would limit the number of terms the leadership could hold.

Craddick is founder of the caucus and is the only person ever to serve as chairman. The group elects officers before each session of Legislature every other year. Craddick is serving his third term as chairman.

The Midland Republican described the group as a democratic organization, and said it takes a two-thirds vote for the caucus to take a position on an issue.

Reports of differences among members emerged in late March after Republican solidarity against a school finance constitutional amendment finally crumbled.

While some GOP members said at the time the differences represented only a minor squabble, others viewed it as a battle over the basic philosophy and strategy.

"The caucus has had some differences on a few things, but it always has been together and it is still together. I don't foresee any problems," Craddick said last week.

If all 58 Republicans vote together, they can block any measure that requires a two-thirds majority in the 150-member House, such as constitutional amendments.

During a special session in late 1992 and early in the current regular session, Craddick led the caucus in opposing a school finance amendment that would allow the state to take a limited amount of local property taxes from property-rich school districts to share with poor districts.

Eventually, a dozen Republicans deserted the caucus position, providing enough votes for the measure to pass.

Voters statewide now will have their say on the issue Saturday.

Republicans broke ranks because schools in many of their districts would not be harmed by the so-called "Robin Hood" plan or would gain money, and local school officials were calling for approval.

The disagreement over the amendment escalated into a debate about caucus policies, strategies and leadership.

Grusendorf and Yost said at the time that several House Republicans wanted to form a new more flexible group with a wider ideological base.

Grusendorf said the caucus does not support Republicans with different political views.

Yost said the caucus has not been effective, and members from the Houston and Dallas areas dominate the group.

Rep. Paul Hilbert, R-Spring, said he did not support the "lockstep mentality" of the caucus or the approach of "just say no" on issues. Hilbert also charged the caucus had "ruled by intimidation" to keep members in line.

Craddick denied the charges and said he is always ready to hear the concerns of members.

Recently, Republicans blocked an attempt to allow Texas cities and counties to conduct runoff elections on the same day as a state runoff for the U.S. Senate.

The move would have saved Dallas and Harris counties about $400,000 each and other counties $250,000 in administrative costs.

Craddick opposed the move because he thought it might benefit Democratic Sen. Bob Krueger, who was named to fill the seat vacated by Lloyd Bentsen when he became Treasury Secretary.

To ask cities and counties to bear unnecessary election expenses "is asking the taxpayers to play a political game ..." said Rep. Brian McCall, R-Plano, who voted for the bill.

Grusendorf, who did not vote, said he was concerned about "being against anything that would increase voter turnout."

APRIL: Volunteers repair about 100 local homes moved for new shingles to be laid.

"They ought to call this Christmas in February. It's hot," he said as he smiled then climbed back on the roof.

But Moody didn't really mind. "Oh, it's fun," he said.

If not for the roofing and other work, the house "probably would have fallen down," said Mrs. Blaylock's daughter, Pam Taylor.

"It already started," her mom added.

"You don't know what you'd do without people like Mr. Trimble and Christmas in April," Mrs. Blaylock said. "It makes you feel good to live in a town like Midland."

Similar sentiments came from T. Ray Hollingsworth, whose house also received a new roof and a paint job Saturday.

"I'd had to let it go" if not for Christmas in April, said the 74-year-old who suffers from emphysema. "My little bit of savings I try to keep in case of emergencies," he said.

Hollingsworth then bragged about the program and the approximate 30 volunteers from Unocal.

"It's wonderful. I'm going to give them (Christmas in April) a little contribution," he said.

Compliments abound from recipients of the program.

"I sure am proud of that roof because I sure did need it. I'm proud of everybody," said Mary Gutierrez, whose home was roofed and painted. "It looked awful ... It looks a whole lot better now."

Outside, Texaco employees — about 30 on and off — sweated since about 6:15 a.m. until late afternoon.

"I think we've made a 100 percent improvement in the appearance and the roof," Wade Howard said.

"I'd say the biggest thing is you make the house more livable," added Stan Simon.

Since last May 1, Christmas in April has made 280 homes more livable in Midland, according to Trimble.

Since starting the program 21 years ago, Trimble's dream has spread to 33 states in more than 200 cities with an excess of 100,000 volunteers working this April, he said.

Last year about $203,000 was spent on the Midland projects, with the bill running about the same this year, Trimble said. The operation runs solely on donations.

SPENDS: Brown's campaign costs more than $15,000 and display of television advertisements.

All City Council candidates have filed pre-election affidavits of spending totals with the city secretary's office at City Hall.

Rodriguez, 51, has put $1,330 into his campaign — the majority of which went toward the purchase of yard signs. Rodriquez — a self-employed construction worker — has lived in Midland for 33 years. He is competing against Brown and incumbent council members Jose Cuevas and Bill Morrow for one of two at-large seats.

Cuevas, 36, listed $3,934 in campaign expenses — 40 percent which has gone into television commercials.

He said he plans to spend about $6,000 in the race.

Cuevas, owner of Jumburrito Inc., has lived in Midland for 12½ years. He was appointed to his position last summer to fill the seat vacated by Faircloth.

Morrow, a 57-year-old attorney for Lynch, Chappel & Alsup — has spent $7,238 for his campaign. Half of that money has gone toward newspaper advertising.

In the District 1 race, 57-year-old incumbent James Devenport has doubled the amount spent by challenger Pat Schneider.

Devenport — a 35-year Midland resident — has spent $8,766 on a variety of items, including campaign fliers and newspaper advertisements.

Devenport and Brown lead the race in campaign contributions with $8,490 and $7,575, respectively.

Ms. Schneider — a 29-year Midland resident who served on the airport board for six years — listed campaign expenses of $4,414.

The two candidates vying for the District 2 slot — incumbent Juluis Brooks and challenger Jose Alfredo Zertuche — are running neck-and-neck in the spending race.

Brooks, the 53-year-old owner of Brooks Barbecue, has spent $2,105 — half of which has gone toward yard signs.

Zertuche, the 32-year-old owner of Maverick Horticulture, has spent $2,086 — including $1,319 on yard signs.

The election will be held Saturday.

TWISTER: Tornado kills 10

(From 1A)

Tornado sirens in Tulsa started going off at 6:45 p.m. The tornado hit a few minutes later.

After destroying a church and knocking down power lines in downtown Tulsa, the twister lifted up and touched down again five miles to the east, where it moved along the interstate for two miles before hitting downtown Catoosa, the National Weather Service said.

Tom Feuerborn, the state's director of civil emergency management, confirmed 10 deaths.

Griffin said at least 50 people were injured and hundreds were left homeless.

"I think that's very conservative," he said. "I doubt anybody can tell until the sun comes up what happened."

Mayor Susan Savage said she was concerned about possible looting. At her request, Gov. David Walters mobilized a National Guard unit, and he flew to Tulsa to survey the damage.

Roads in and out of Catoosa were closed because of the tornado damage. A television reporter following the storms said at least 30 to 40 houses were damaged. The roof of a school in Catoosa was torn off, Tulsa Police Chief Ron Palmer said.

Tulsa police Maj. Mark Andrus said: "We're concerned about Catoosa. Apparently they sustained serious damage, but we can't get through to them."

Nightfall hampered search efforts.

Andrus said three to four bodies had been pulled out of wreckage along I-44 east of Tulsa. A seven-mile stretch of the highway was closed for about an hour because of the wreckage.

Linda and Brian Jones, truck drivers from Lebanon, Ind., were in a Catoosa truck stop when the tornado moved in without notice. They huddled against each other in the rig.

"I'm not sure what came through the window and hit me in the head," said Mrs. Jones, wrapped in a blanket in a bus awaiting transfer to a hospital. Her husband was uninjured.

Like other truckers, Larry Stern of Lake Minnesota, Minn., said the tornado came too quickly to hide.

"There was nowhere to go. No way," said Stern as he plucked shards of broken glass from his hair. His rig was blown across the parking lot and leaned up against another tractor-trailer.

The twister was part of a severe thunderstorm system that prompted tornado warnings in parts of Kansas and Arkansas and a tornado watch in parts of Missouri.

APPEAL: Russians to vote today in referendum

trudged through a light snow and 21-degree temperatures to cast ballots, said election official Gennady Matyash by telephone.

Turnout was brisk despite rain in the Pacific port of Vladivostok, where about 70 people voted in the first half-hour at one polling station. Among them was Ivan Molozhenko, who said he voted to support the president.

"Yeltsin promised to improve our life, and I trust him and want him to finish what he has started," said Molozhenko, 70.

Although a recent court decision makes it easier for Yeltsin to win the referendum and polls suggest he might gain a clear victory, the balloting appeared less likely to end the political paralysis than to provide new grounds for maneuvering by the president and his foes in the Congress.

The smaller Supreme Soviet legislature, due to meet Monday to debate the referendum, might exercise its right to convene the full Congress whether or not Yeltsin tries to impose some form of emergency rule.

The 62-year-old president made final campaign rounds Saturday, kissing a baby and reaching out to homeless veterans of the Afghan War. Despite the Western trappings, Yeltsin, a former Communist, seemed awkward at times and relied heavily on an advertising blitz.

Television also broadcast an interview Saturday night with Yeltsin's leading critic, Congress speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov, who raised charges of vote fraud.

In his televised address, Yeltsin struck a moderate tone. He called the vote "a peaceful way out of the current crisis of power. ... Our peaceful breakthrough to the future."

Wearing a dark blue suit and blue-and-white polka-dot tie, Yeltsin stumbled over some words at the opening of the speech, but generally was relaxed and smiling. He closed by appealing to his countrymen: "We are together!"

Addressing his main political weakness — the painful economic polices he launched last year — he urged voters not to heed critics who say the free-market reforms have caused an unnecessary rise in inflation and fall in living standards.

Despite the hardships, recent government data show an improvement in inflation, which hit an annual level of 2,000 percent last year, and in production, which dropped 20 percent in 1992.

Yeltsin made no reference in his speech to the billions of dollars in aid that the West pledged to bolster his chances in the referendum. The president's opponents have called such aid humiliating and accused him of kowtowing to the West.

The referendum is the first since the central Soviet government collapsed in December 1991.

A decision by Russia's Constitutional Court on Wednesday made it difficult for Yeltsin to suffer an outright defeat. Overruling Congress, the court said Yeltsin does not need an absolute majority of Russia's 105.5 million registered voters to survive a vote of confidence — the first of four questions in the referendum. He needs only a majority of those who actually cast ballots.

Karadzic rejects peace plan; military pressure mounts

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Calling a modified plan to carve up Bosnia insufficient, the Bosnian Serb leader rejected a bid Saturday to reach a peace pact and ease increasing pressure for foreign military intervention.

The rebuff by Radovan Karadzic of the U.N.-backed compromise also makes it likely Yugoslavia will come under harsher economic sanctions, scheduled to take effect Monday.

David Owen, the European Community peace envoy, warned of dangerous consequences after Karadzic rejected the offer — which would permit U.N.-supervised corridors linking Bosnian Serb territories with Serbia.

Owen feels that Karadzic "is risking driving his people in Bosnia and possibly all Serbs into a devastating conflict with the international community," said the spokesman, Fred Eckhard.

His comments were the latest of a growing chorus favoring foreign military involvement in Bosnia, where the Muslim-led government says at least 134,000 people have died or are missing in the yearlong ethnic war.

But Serb hard-liners welcomed Karadzic's decision.

"No one can trade Serb lands, so Karadzic reacted as any real Serb would," said Milan Gvero, deputy commander of Bosnian Serb forces.

Vojislav Seselj, an ultra-nationalist whose political party is second strongest in Serbia, said: "I welcome what he did. If the West intervenes in Bosnia, Yugoslavia should immediately join the war."

Karadzic's rejection seemed to doom the peace plan, which has been signed by rival Bosnian Croats and Muslims. The plan calls for 10 semi-autonomous provinces divided along ethnic lines.

President Clinton said last week he was examining military options, including air strikes on Bosnian Serb positions.

European Community foreign ministers were also looking at the possibility of a military role, at a weekend meeting in Denmark.

"We all wish to act together," British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said on arrival.

Somalia still faces rocky road following food emergency

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Operation Restore Hope has completed its mission of ending starvation in Somalia. Now comes the hard part — rebuilding a country nearly from scratch and ending the violence that clouds its future.

When a U.S.-led multinational coalition arrived Dec. 9, hundreds of hungry and diseased people were dying daily in towns like Baidoa and Bardera. Bandits and looters roamed in weapons-mounted vehicles and guns were sold openly.

Today, the streets are considerably safer and virtually no one is starving. Even the arrival of dusk isn't as foreboding as it was only weeks ago. More and more women can be spotted walking alone after dark.

People are still scrawny and suffer from malnutrition-related ailments. But there's enough food being distributed so that aid agencies like the Red Cross are switching their focus to vaccinations and other health needs.

The United Nations starts shouldering most of the cost for the rescue effort on May 1 and will take over control from the United States sometime later that month.

About 4,000 of the 28,000 U.N. troops staying in Somalia will be Americans. Their tasks will include:

■ Directing 15 contentious factions toward enough unity to set up a government. They signed a peace accord March 27, but the generations-old clan hatreds and distrusts will be hard to keep in check.

■ Continuing to maintain safety for aid agencies. A few have halted or suspended parts of their operations because of danger.

■ Weaning Somalia off foreign aid. This may be the hardest part.

U.S. forces have been here a couple of months longer than first envisioned, but they have been heading home by the hundreds. More will fly out Tuesday, the day after Washington turns over control of Mogadishu to Pakistani troops.

Aid workers hold strong reservations about how effective the U.N. force will be. But U.N. officials say they're ready. For one thing, their rules of engagement allow them to shoot when they feel threatened.

Their first test almost certainly will come either in Kismayu, the third largest city, or in the capital, Mogadishu.

Kismayu has remained a flashpoint between supporters of Col. Omar Jess and Mohamed Said Hirsi, known as Gen. Morgan. Morgan's men control the southern port city, but Belgian coalition troops have said Jess may try to attack soon.

In Mogadishu, the Pakistanis' reputation among Somalis suffered when they were given the task of guarding the port but were allowed to shoot only if they came under fire. Looters flourished.

But there are signs Somalia is struggling back onto its feet after a civil war and famine that killed an estimated 350,000 people last year.

Fledgling judicial systems have cropped up in some towns. Criminals have been freed because no charges were filed. There has been talk of a national system based on Islamic law in the predominantly Muslim country.

Some farmers are already back in the fields, and more are returning as security improves in the countryside. A bumper crop of watermelons hit the markets a few days ago.

The rains have started in parts of Somalia and should bring in a decent yield. Engineers have worked on disused reservoir systems and shored up riverbanks to limit flooding.

Education is another top priority. The only lessons some children learn are on the streets.

Mogadishu's former central business district remains little more than a pile of rubble.

The public transport system consists of overloaded buses and pickup trucks that operated during all but the worst of the fighting. They have been joined by a fleet of battered red-and-yellow Fiat taxis.

There's no municipal power — the lines were stripped for copper — and gas-powered generators drone constantly. Work on restoring water supplies has been interrupted at times by bandits who cut lines.

PHYSICALLY FIT

EXECUTIVE PHYSICAL - CAMP PHYSICAL - CUSTOM PHYSICAL

Prevention and early detection are "buzz" words of today's health conscious society and are what physicals are all about. However, as age, weight, height, sex and other factors differ from person to person so does the need for different types of physicals.

At Primary Medical Clinic we offer physicals for work or play – for all of you or part of you. No matter which one you choose, a physical at Primary Medical begins with your medical history and ends with a healthier you.

Call us today to schedule your appointment.

- Medical History – a comprehensive review that provides basic information on which your present and future health is gauged.
- Height & Weight – measurements are compared to standard averages of adults and are useful in helping you reach your optimal health status.
- Blood Pressure & Pulse – provides baseline readings for future comparisons so changes can be detected early, thus decreasing your risk of heart attack, stroke and high blood pressure.
- Super Chem Blood Chemistry – a blood test that checks elements of your blood to assist in early detection of malfunctioning body systems (heart, kidneys, liver, lungs, bones, etc.), electrolyte balance and various metabolic functions. Test components include glucose, LDL and HDL cholesterol, thyroid function tests, triglycerides, blood count and 22 others.
- Doctor Review – interpreting medical examination results, especially if any abnormalities occur, is very individualized and checked against all exam components – history, lab tests and procedures.
- Electrocardiogram (EKG) – a baseline electrocardiograph records the electrical currents of your heart for future comparison which can help doctors detect heart disease and heart attacks before they happen.
- Body Fat Measurement – determines what percentage of your body weight is fat to help determine your overall health.
- Pap Smear – female cervical cells are analyzed under a microscope to aid in detection of cervical cancer.
- Chest X-Ray – allows doctors to see the lungs and heart and help in diagnosis of early heart failure, cancer, tuberculosis and infection.
- Prostate Specific Antigen Test – a blood test when used in conjunction with a physical exam can help detect early prostate cancer.

Foreign observers try to protect Haitians

HINCHE, Haiti (AP) — Armed only with a U.N. mandate, 10 foreign observers have established a human rights foothold on this dirt-poor central plateau, trying to shield Haitians from their own army.

They are working in the territory of an army major who serves as the town mayor and has threatened to crush every bone or cut off the hands, feet and head of anyone who cooperates with the mission.

The army watches the civilian observers, and the observers keep an eye on the army as they track violence in this regional market town by the soldiers and allied thugs known as "chef-batons."

"Sometimes it's cat-and-mouse, but when we follow them, they are not beating people," said the head of the observer mission, Jean-Rene Marcoux.

Soldiers and chef-batons have killed hundreds of people in Haiti and imprisoned thousands without charge since the army overthrew Jean-Bertrand Aristide, Haiti's first democratically elected president, in September 1991.

In the few weeks since coming to Hinche, 80 miles from Port-au-Prince, the observers have visited beating victims in the hospital and talked to political prisoners in jail. They have pointed out abuses to the local army commanders and contacted hundreds of people in hiding.

"By reporting and responding to human rights violations, we are trying to create a space of freedom," said Marcoux, a Canadian. "We hope the people will be able to expand on that space."

He and other team members, from Brazil, Colombia, Chile, St. Lucia and the United States, are among more than 100 observers in the first phase of a joint U.N.-Organization of American States effort to return Haiti to democratic rule. Haiti's rulers have withstood outside pressure to step down, including a hemisphere-wide embargo and a U.S.-backed United Nations diplomatic effort.

Marcoux said the observers will remain for at least a year. But those they contact could be exposed to retaliation if they leave before a political settlement is reached between Aristide and the army.

"We would be crushed," a teacher who had been in hiding for two weeks told a reporter who visited the Hinche area.

"There are no human rights, no laws. The people who have the guns are in charge," said the Rev. Raymond DeCaluwe, a Belgian priest in the nearby village of Los Palis.

The army suppresses all political meetings and any sign of support for Aristide in Hinche and surrounding hamlets. The soldiers squeeze money or land titles from the peasants by threats of arrest and torture.

Blast in London kills 1, injures at least 34

LONDON (AP) — An apparent IRA bomb hidden in a dump truck tore through London's financial district Saturday, killing at least one person and sending a mushroom cloud over the skyline.

At least 34 people were injured in a hail of flying glass and debris.

Rescue workers found a man's body in the street and police feared more people were trapped inside bomb-damaged buildings.

The Irish Republican Army did not immediately claim responsibility for the attack, but two IRA coded telephone warnings of a bomb in the area were received by police before the 10:27 a.m. (4:27 a.m. CDT) blast.

Commandos storm hijacked plane, kill gunman

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — Indian commandos stormed a hijacked Indian Airlines plane early today, shot dead the lone gunman, and freed the 141 passengers and crew, police said.

The raid came 11 hours after the Boeing 737 was seized, said city police chief Hardeep Singh Dhillon. The gunman, who authorities said was a commander of a Muslim secessionist group, had threatened to shoot the passengers if the plane was not flown to Afghanistan.

The raid was the first anti-hijacking operation for the government's elite "Black Cats" unit, usually used as bodyguards for Indian leaders.

The gunman commandeered the plane Saturday shortly after it took off from New Delhi on a flight to Srinagar, the summer capital of Jammu-Kashmir province, where an insurrection is being waged by Muslim separatists.

Authorities said the man, armed with pistols and hand grenades, was a commander of Hezbul Mujahedeen, a fundamentalist group fighting for Kashmir's independence. The group denied responsibility.

The hijacker initially demanded the plane be flown to Pakistan. But when the pilot circled over the Pakistani city of Lahore, airport officials put barricades on the runways and denied permission to land.

Sharpshooters surrounded the plane after it landed in Amritsar, 30 miles from Lahore, to refuel. As the aircraft sat in a baking sun, several passengers reportedly fell ill from the heat.

The hijacker fired a shot in the air to prove he was armed, threatened to shoot passengers and demanded the plane be flown to Afghanistan, police said. But he repeatedly extended a deadline while police negotiated with him by radio.

After midnight, while the hijacker was kept busy on the radio, 10 Black Cats slipped into the plane through its emergency doors, then barged into the cockpit and shot the hijacker, said state police chief K.P.S. Gill.

About 350 of the commandos had been rushed from New Delhi to Amritsar on six helicopters.

It was the fourth hijacking this year and the third in a month. None of the previous hijackers were armed.

The plane was carrying 135 passengers, including nine infants, and six crew members, said airline spokesman A.K. Sivanandan. At least six foreigners were aboard. Their nationalities were not known.

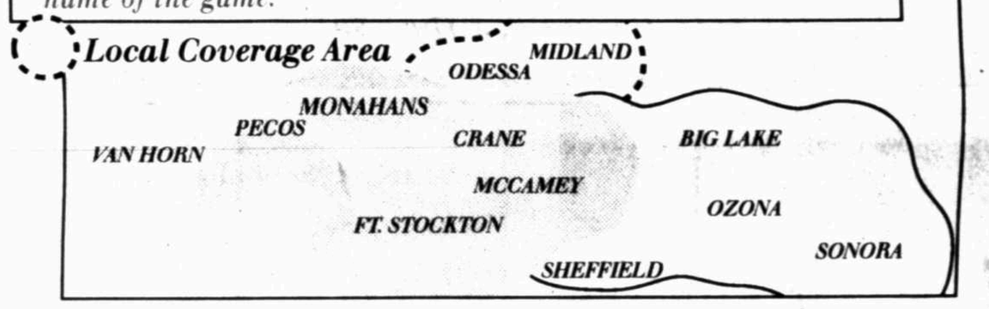

It was unclear how the hijacker smuggled weapons aboard through the gauntlet of security checks that have become routine after years of terrorist attacks by ethnic separatists.

Security is especially tight for flights to and from Srinagar, the center of a three-year Muslim insurrection which has cost more than 6,000 lives.

Clinton wobbles, stays swift in presidency's first 100 days

By Terrance Hunt
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The first 100 days of Bill Clinton's presidency have been a puzzling zigzag of disarray and decisiveness, setbacks and success. It has been a wobbly start that could rob momentum from his drive for change.

Sobered by the embarrassing loss of his jobs bill in the Senate, Clinton no longer boasts about "an explosive 100-day action period" for his presidency. The assessment now is far more modest as Thursday's 100-day benchmark approaches.

"This country went in one direction solid for more than a decade," the president observed last week. "I've been here about 90 days. It's going to take a little while to turn it around."

White House chief of staff Mack McLarty echoed his boss: "You seldom feel you accomplish as much or are as far along in some ways as you would like to be."

■ AP Analysis

Realistically, it is too early to pin an indelible label on Clinton or judge his presidency conclusively.

It is clear, though, that he is a smart, high-energy leader willing to work tirelessly to advance the view that government should be a major catalyst for change, rather than the stand-aside approach advocated by Ronald Reagan and George Bush.

He's a political pragmatist, willing to compromise or walk away from campaign promises — as he did on a host of pledges from tax cuts for the middle class to accepting Haitian refugees.

At times, he is bold. Most presidents merely ask their wives to oversee social functions; he put Hillary Rodham Clinton in charge of developing the health care program that could be the centerpiece — or the debacle — of his administration.

Yet Clinton badly misjudged the power of the Republican minority in the Senate, and that poses real questions about the tests yet to come: his health care reforms, raising taxes, cutting money from popular programs, welfare reform, and campaign finance and lobbying reform. If Clinton and his majority Democrats couldn't get a modest jobs bill past filibustering Republicans, how can he hope to enact more radical legislation?

Analysts reflect the uncertainty and mixed feelings of the American public at large.

"Too many problems are coming home to roost in the White House," said Vanderbilt University political scientist Erwin Hargrove. "I wonder whether the president isn't spreading himself too thin."

On the other hand, George Washington University historian Leo Ribuffo said, "This is the most placid hundred days since Herbert Hoover succeeded Calvin Coolidge."

By statistical measures, Clinton's overall approval rating stands at 52 percent (according to a NBC News-Wall Street Journal poll last week), a slippage of 5 percent in the last month. Disapproval of his job performance has climbed to 34 percent, up eight points, the poll said.

In the microscopic scrutiny of his first days, Clinton stumbled twice: over his choice for attorney general and then in underestimating the uproar over allowing homosexuals in the military.

Yet those mistakes were followed by a well-received address to Congress about the economy and swift passage of Clinton's ambitious plan to slash the deficit through budget cuts and higher taxes.

Then, as the administration branched out into other areas and Clinton's attention wandered from his promised "laser-like focus" on the economy.

"He mixed up the agenda," said James Thurber, director of the Center for Congressional and Presidential Studies at American University. "He wasn't on this perpetual campaign. He held the forest summit and the Yeltsin summit" and lost in the Senate.

7 year-old boy dies in sinkhole

NORTH BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — A 7-year-old boy died Saturday after he was swallowed by a sinkhole while playing outside an apartment complex. Some 100 rescuers worked more than seven hours to dig him out.

Kwame Sharif was dead on arrival at Robert Wood Johnson Hospital, said nursing supervisor Ann Lando.

The boy stuck his foot in a small hole in a courtyard of the North Brunswick Manor Apartments while playing with his twin brother Kwasi, then the ground gave way.

Rescuers eventually found the body underground amid tree and root debris.

"He was located in the cavern," Mayor Paul Matacera. "His body was dry, but there was a couple of inches of water ... He was slumped down in the water."

A neighbor said he and the boy's father tried to pull the child to safety, but couldn't reach him.

"His father and I were the first on the scene, and his hands were in the air. He said, 'Daddy, get me out of here, there's snakes down here,'" said the neighbor, Gary Nelson. "We tried to grab his hand and the ground started giving under him."

Police arrived and they tried again.

"We tried to hold onto the police officer's feet while he reached into the hole, but we couldn't get to him," Nelson said.

Kwasi was apparently the only witness, neighbors said. Nelson was alerted by his wife, who heard Kwasi screaming.

The boy's family watched the operation from their back porch and would not speak to reporters.

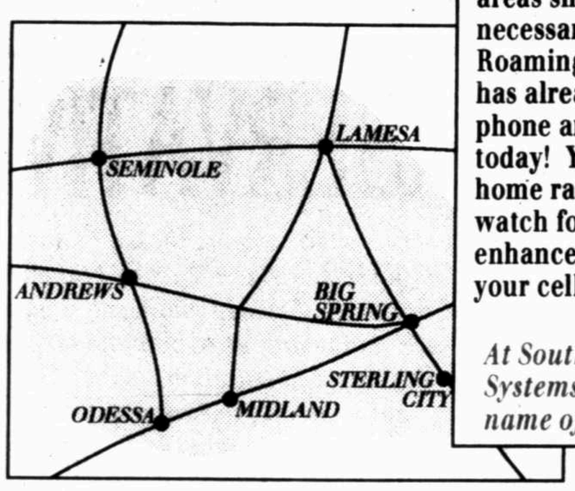

Authorities didn't know what caused the sinkhole. Police Sgt. Donald Conry said the earth may have collapsed because of recent heavy rains. He said police do not know of any construction or utility projects at the site.

Matacera said the area was mostly forest 10 or 15 years ago."We know there may have been an old farmhouse here, and a remote possibility of some wells."

Columbia delays launch, aims for Monday blastoff

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA called off the launch of Columbia just hours before liftoff Saturday because of navigation system trouble, the latest in a series of technical problems plaguing the science mission.

Liftoff was rescheduled for 9:50 a.m. CDT Monday.

NASA's first and only other attempt to launch Columbia on the German-sponsored laboratory research mission ended with an engine shutdown three seconds before liftoff last month.

This time, NASA had not yet fueled Columbia and the seven astronauts had not boarded. They still were asleep, in fact, when the countdown was halted seven hours before the planned late-morning liftoff because of an intermittent power supply problem with one of three navigation units.

German space officials, who have been waiting years for the mission, expressed disappointment over the latest setback but relief that another launch attempt would be made soon.

"It's unfortunate," said Rudolf Teuwsen, a spokesman for Germany's space agency. "But if you look at the reason, it is definitely in our interest to delay for 48 hours. Nothing is damaged by a delay, and we would have been damaged if they had had to cut the mission short."

The last time NASA had trouble with a shuttle navigation unit was during a 1991 military mission by Atlantis. One of the ship's three units failed in orbit, and the astronauts had to return to Edwards Air Force Base in California the next day — three days early.

The units, in essence computerized gyroscopes, are critical for maneuvering throughout the flight. All three units must be working properly before NASA will commit to launch.

Columbia could "limp home" with just one unit, but it would be extremely risky, said NASA spokesman George Diller.

Technicians quickly replaced the bad unit with a spare and, by late morning, had begun hours of testing on the new device.

The unit, called an inertial measurement unit, or IMU, is about the size of a large breadbox. It is located in the nose of Columbia.

If Columbia lifts off Monday, NASA still can set a record for the shortest gap between U.S. human space flights — nine days. The current record of 10 days was set in 1985.

Discovery returned April 17 from the year's second shuttle flight.

Meteorologists expect a 90 percent chance of good launch weather Monday. They had issued a rare launch-day forecast for Saturday — 100 percent favorable.

Each day of delay at this point adds about $157,500 to Germany's mission costs, German space officials said.

NASA came within three seconds of launching Columbia on March 22, but a stuck valve forced the main engines to shut down moments after firing. Valve debris was blamed. All three engines were replaced.

10 years later, nation's schools still at risk

NEW YORK (AP) — Like a scolding from the principal to an underachieving pupil, a report released 10 years ago gave poor marks to the nation's schools and urged tougher courses, longer hours and more homework.

Some things have improved since the White House released the 36-page "A Nation at Risk" on April 26, 1983. But educators say they're still waiting for dramatic turnarounds and top-flight schools.

"Our results have been disappointing. I don't think there's any question we're still at risk," said Terrel H. Bell, the former education secretary who empaneled the National Commission on Excellence in Education to write the report.

"There has been some small progress. But we're still not doing the rigorous course work called for in 'A Nation At Risk.' Our standards and expectations are still not where they should be," said Bell, now an education consultant in Salt Lake City.

The report sounded alarms that shoddy education was undermining America's global leadership in commerce, industry, science and technological innovation. At the time, 35 states required only a single year of mathematics and a single year of science for a high school diploma.

These startling words concluded the report:

"The educational foundations of our society are presently being eroded by a rising tide of mediocrity that threatens our very future as a nation and a people. ... If an unfriendly foreign power had attempted to impose on America the mediocre educational performance that exists today, we might well have viewed it as an act of war."

It was hoped that "A Nation At Risk" would energize school programs the way the Soviet launching of the Sputnik satellite in 1957 boosted the U.S. space effort.

Among its recommendations, the commission urged that high school students take four years of English, three years each of math, science and social science, plus a semester of computer science.

Various state reforms have installed those course loads in 40 percent of the nation's schools, as opposed to 9 percent in 1983. That still means 60 percent are lacking.

But far from proclaiming a nationwide burst of educational energy, a 1989 report by the Center for Policy Research in Education said state reforms have "met with only modest success" and that "doubts still linger about the rigor and challenge of the new academic courses."

Other indicators of how American students are doing:

■ In 1991, a test given to students in 15 industrialized countries ranked U.S. 13-year-olds next to last in the math component. In the science section of the International Assessment of Educational Progress test, U.S. students ranked seventh.

■ Scholastic Aptitude Test scores have flattened out in the last 10 years. With a possible range of 200 to 800, the average verbal score dipped slightly, from 426 to 423, while the math score improved slightly from 467 to 476.

■ High school graduation rates increased slightly, from 81.2 percent to 82.8 percent, from 1983 to 1990, according to the U.S. Census. Among black students, the rate improved from 73.2 percent to 77.6 percent.

Some headway was noted by the Council of Chief State School Officers. It reported the percentage of students studying basic algebra increased from 65 percent in 1982 to 81 percent in 1990; the percentage taking basic biology rose from 75 percent to 90 percent. But only one in 10 students takes calculus and only one in five takes physics.

The decade's "modest but important gains" were noted by David P. Gardner, former president of the University of California at Berkeley and a decade ago the chairman of the National Commission on Excellence in Education.

Gardner added in an interview, however, "We have not stood still, but we have not made progress of the kind and order we have hoped. There needs to be renewed commitment to progress, an invigorated determination to make improvements."

"A Nation at Risk" noted that "part of what is at risk is the promise first made on this continent: All, regardless of race or class or economic status, are entitled to a fair chance and to the tools for developing their individual powers of mind and spirit to the utmost."

But Emeral A. Crosby, principal of Detroit's Pershing High School and the urban school representative on the commission, believes city students are being shortchanged.

"Our children might be better off if they declared sovereignty and then asked for foreign aid," Crosby wrote in the April issue of Phi Delta Kappan magazine.

Some artists voice displeasure at Farm Aid

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Willie Nelson headlined his sixth Farm Aid concert on Saturday, but he heard little harmony from Neil Young, who criticized the Clinton administration even as the president's brother sat just behind him.

Young, who joined Nelson at the first Farm Aid in Champaigne, Ill., in 1985, said he was upset that Farm Aid had deteriorated into a "kind of picnic, a party for everyone."

He was especially critical that Clinton had not sent Vice President Al Gore or U.S. Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy to Ames, where a congressional subcommittee heard suggestions Friday on how the USDA can respond better to family farmers' needs.

"Where is Gore? Where is Espy?" Young wanted to know. "I'm not too happy to be here."

"We're tired of helping. Helping is not what we're about. I thought when we got rid of Bush and Reagan there was going to be a change. Then we wouldn't need any more Farm Aids.

"I don't have respect for the administration."

Roger Clinton, the president's brother who with his band was one of the first acts to entertain the thousands of people at Cyclone Stadium, didn't appear offended. He said he paid more than $6,000 himself to bring his band to Ames as a show of support for farmers.

"It's a damn shameful situation," he said. "I'm here to learn."

Roger Clinton said the president tried to call him twice Saturday but missed him, the second time because he was at the pre-show news conference. Roger Clinton said he thought his brother wanted to talk to the stadium crowd via a phone hookup played over loudspeakers.

"I promise you, I will talk to him today," the president's brother said.

Since the first Farm Aid show, the organization has granted more than $10.8 million to some 100 farm groups, hotlines, churches and social service agencies in 43 states.

Nelson disagreed with Young, saying, "There is a change coming."

"The first thing we have to do is get those seven million farmers who have been forced off the land back on the land," he said.

Miners protest outside coal baron's estate

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Disgruntled mine workers rallied outside the posh estate of a coal baron on Saturday, dramatizing their discontent with contract talks.

The United Mine Workers of America dubbed the protest, "We come for justice, not for brunch."

About 80 demonstrators gathered outside the home of Lord Gordon White, an official of Hanson Industries, parent of coal giant Peabody Holding Co.

"Lord White has the power to prevent calamity in the coal fields," said UMW representative Joe Drexler.

It wasn't known if White was home at the time. No arrests were made during the hourlong protest.

In Evansville, Ind., Peabody Coal Co. President George S. Shiflett said he was optimistic an agreement would be reached by May 3, when a 60-day extension of the current contract expires.

Drexler said he hoped that was true. "We are hoping for the best and preparing for the worst," he said.

The UMW struck Peabody subsidiaries in February after contract negotiations with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association collapsed.

Union officials said the strike was over job security and the proliferation of unionized companies creating non-union subsidiaries.

Work resumed after the extension was brokered March 3.

1992 Soldier of the Year: 'What if they knew I was gay?'

WASHINGTON (AP) — As an Army general decorated him at a 1992 Soldier of the Year award, Persian Gulf War veteran Jose M. Zuniga recalls thinking: What if he knew I was gay?

Now he wants that general and all others to know, even though it likely means the end to a promising career in the military.

"Today, I come out as a gay soldier," the 23-year-old sergeant, wearing his dress blues, said before a crowd of thousands of cheering gays and lesbians. "Today my military career will likely come to an abrupt and unnecessary halt."

While several hundred thousand gays march on Washington this weekend, Zuniga, a Army newspaper editor and former combat medic, arranged to stand alone in uniform and make his statement at a reception for veterans and military personnel who have declared they are gay.

"I am proud to be a soldier and a non-commissioned officer in the United States Army," Zuniga told the reception hosted by the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force Policy Institute in the newly restored marble hall of the former U.S. Post Office next door to Union Station.

"I also am proud to be gay," he said. "I cannot continue to serve my country if I must choose between honor and living a lie."

As one of the Army's most highly decorated junior noncommissioned officers, Zuniga expects to become a symbol in the movement to lift the ban on homosexuals in the military and a foe of the generals and colonels who at one time praised him.

"There is a feeling of sadness, because one minute you're being praised and one minute you're being condemned," Zuniga said. "I'm not only sad, it also makes me angry, because they have no right to condemn me. My being gay doesn't diminish any of my accomplishments, yet they'll try and do it."

Zuniga said he hopes his action will pressure President Clinton to keep his promise to lift the half-century ban on gays in the military by July 15. In the meantime he expects the Army to initiate dismissal proceedings, placing him on temporary standby reserve until the ban issue is resolved.

Under a compromise forged between Clinton and Congress, the Pentagon has temporarily stopped asking recruits if they are gay and has suspended formal discharges.

Many in the military and in Congress favor the ban and say that its end could undermine morale and military readiness.

Zuniga received awards for saving lives and maintaining troop morale as a combat medic and an Army journalist in Saudi Arabia. He was named 1992 Soldier of the Year of the U.S. Sixth Army.

He won the Department of the Army's highest journalism award for his work as editor of one of three Army tabloids in Saudi Arabia during the Persian Gulf War.

Zuniga says his award for helping boost morale refutes the Pentagon's claim that allowing gays in the military would undercut troop morale.

He won the Combat Medical Badge, the highest award given specifically for a combat medic, by aiding Iraqi prisoners of war after a firefight, saving one life.

But Zuniga said as Lt. Gen. Glynn C. Mallory Jr. was pinning a commendation medal to his chest in the Soldier of the Year ceremony in March, he thought, "if he only knew that I was gay, not only would he not pin this medal on me, but he'd also personally sign the discharge papers to get me out of the Army as soon as possible."

Zuniga, who has been stationed at the Presidio in San Francisco, agonized over the decision.

"It's basically suffering to have to hide a part of yourself and to live in agonizing silence," he said. "There's no reason for that."

Parole officer's tie to killings is revealed

NEW YORK (NYT) — It started out as a strict and official relationship: a New York state parole officer and the convict she was supervising in a work-release program.

But then it took a very wrong turn, the authorities said, with lethal consequences.

The Queens-based parole officer developed a personal relationship with the felon, law-enforcement officials say, and soon the officer and a second Parole Division employee were selling confidential information from their agency's files to drug dealers — information that, among other things, led to two murders.

The account of betrayal, which the officials say has not been told publicly before, emerged in part last week in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn, at the murder and racketeering trial of Gerald Miller, who the authorities said was a drug kingpin in Queens.

But according to court records and law-enforcement officials, the full story goes even beyond what was said in court.

Authorities say that the parole officer was supervising one of Miller's subordinates, Ernesto Piniella, and that he and Miller bought the confidential information from the officer and another worker, a clerk.

The role of the two agency employees, who have not been identified, was brought up at the trial when a prosecutor described the events leading to a 1987 drug-related murder that the prosecutor said the parole employees had aided.

Besides the killing described by the prosecutor, Mark P. Ressler, officials said the employees also abetted a second killing in 1987 through their illicitly supplied information.

Gun control group wages ad campaign

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The National Rifle Association is fighting a media battle with a gun control group during the NRA's annual convention, with the armed cult tragedy in Texas taking center stage.

Handgun Control Inc. recently unveiled two "Why, NRA?" television commercials questioning the 3-million-member group's stand against gun control, especially assault weapons like those stockpiled by cultists whose standoff ended last week with a fire that killed up to 86 people.

"It does not surprise me that Handgun Control and some of their political allies in Congress and state legislatures are trying to push their political agenda on the back of the bodies in Waco," said Jim Baker, executive director of the Institute for Legislative Action, the NRA's lobbying arm.

Federal agents say the cult avoided federal firearms restrictions by purchasing gun parts, ammunition and explosives from dealers around the country and assembling the components into illegal weapons.

"The NRA has significant power, so they have accountability," said Richard Ahern, president of Handgun Control Inc. "Why do they continue to insist on blocking gun control legislation?"

"Anyone that's determined enough, and has the requisite knowledge, can create fully automatic firearms, if they have the proper machine shops," Baker said.

Handgun Control and the NRA have been fighting a propaganda war here over the issue through newspaper interviews and the television commercials, which feature former law officers, including Dewey Stokes, a past president of the national Fraternal Order of Police.

The NRA convention ends today. About 16,000 NRA members were expected for the convention, NRA officials said.

Homosexuals ready for largest-ever demonstration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of same-sex couples kissed in a mock wedding while gay veterans donned uniforms in which they are forbidden to serve Saturday as homosexuals prepared for their largest-ever demonstration for equality.

On the eve of a gay rights march that organizers hope will draw 1 million people, the nation's capital bustled with activities from a solemn unrolling of the AIDS quilt to a flamboyant drag show on the National Mall.

But everywhere participants had one thing on their minds — demanding an end to legal barriers that block gays from fighting for their ,country, marrying their loved ones, and working free from discrimination.

"It's time to stand up and look America in the eye and say, 'I demand equality, now and in all aspects,' " said Patrick Gill of Washington, who has launched a court fight seeking to marry his male partner.

The march marks a watershed moment in the gay rights movement — President Clinton last week invited gay leaders to the White House and he is preparing to lift the ban on gays serving in the military.

The marchers also want a federal law guaranteeing civil rights protection for homosexuals and increased spending on AIDS research. More than anything, march organizers say they want to show Americans that gays among their neighbors and co-workers are treated unfairly.

"We're the invisible minority," said Cliff Anchor, 57, a former California National Guard reserve specialist from Monte Rio, Calif. "If we were visible it would be very easy for us to be accepted."

Some gay activists were angered that Clinton will not attend Sunday's march, instead sending a letter to be read by a congresswoman.

But a Newsweek poll appears to show strong support for Clinton from people who identify themselves as gay or lesbian.

Eighty-eight percent of those surveyed said they approved of the way Clinton is handling the presidency. A simultaneous poll of the general public found only a 52 percent approval rating for the president.

The poll, conducted by telephone by Princeton Survey Research Associates, has a margin of error of plus or minus four percentage points.

Pollsters interviewed 460 men and women randomly selected from gay mailing lists late last week. A third of the gays and lesbians surveyed said they plan to march Sunday.

All the main hotels in Washington were full and airports were packed as visitors arrived for the weekend activities culminating in the march.

Thousands of people linked hands to circle the Capitol to demand increased spending for AIDS research and prevention. Meanwhile, about 80 Catholics, Jews and Protestants spent the day learning to use the Bible to counter the religious right's opposition to homosexuals.

Almost 200 people gathered at the Lincoln Memorial to honor homosexuals killed in war and to protest the military's gay ban. Many of them were veterans in uniform.

Tom Norton, a medical helicopter pilot in Vietnam, wore a pink triangle pin next to the Purple Heart and other medals on his Army uniform.

"In Vietnam, sexuality was not the issue," said Norton, 43, who received an honorable discharge after the war and now lives in Portland, Ore. "We were over there to do a job, and some of us died doing it."

Miriam Ben-Shalom, president of the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Veterans of America, said she served as an Army drill sergeant from 1974-1976, then was discharged because she was a lesbian. She has battled the Defense Department in court ever since.

"I wish Abraham Lincoln was here today," Ben-Shalom said from the steps below his statue. "I need a man to stand up, or a woman to stand up, and break my chains so I can come home to my country."

Although organizers of the ceremony complained that they had been denied a permit to gather in Arlington National Cemetery, dozens of the protesters quietly walked across the Memorial Bridge to the cemetery for an impromptu memorial observance.

'Your needs can change in an instant'

■ Free agency puts new twist on today's NFL draft.

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

NEW YORK — The NFL draft is today, something that might have gone unnoticed as the pro football world followed the wanderings of Joe Montana and Reggie White.

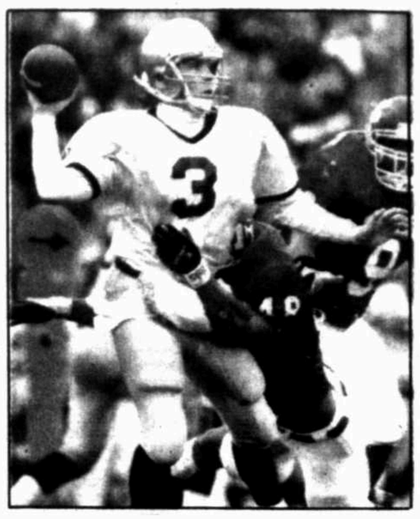

In this first year of NFL free agency, the draft seems almost anticlimactic.

"Free agency has brought a whole new element to player selection," says Jack Faulkner, the administrator of football operations for the Los Angeles Rams.

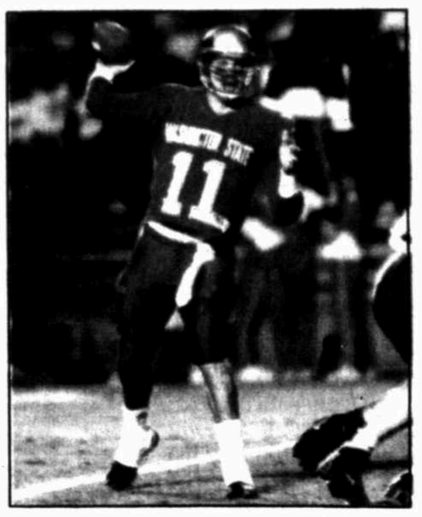

"Your needs can change in an instant."

Indeed, needs were changing instantly even as the draft approached. On Tuesday, for example, Miami filled one need by signing tackle Ron Heller, allowing the Dolphins to pick a player to help elsewhere.

It will start with quarterbacks, expected to be chosen 1-2 for the first time since 1971, when they were 1-2-3. Barring last minute trades, the picks will be made by New England and Seattle and pickees will be Rick Mirer of Notre Dame and Drew Bledsoe of Washington

Mirer

Bledsoe

State, probably in that order, but not necessarily.

It's also a different draft in another way from the last three — when Dallas' Jimmy Johnson used all the extra draft picks he got for Herschel Walker to trade up and down in the first round. That helped him assemble the team that won the Super Bowl last season and dropped him to last in the drafting order, making it a lot harder to deal.

But the key to the uncertainty is free agency.

Some teams have used it to plug holes, only to see others open up; others have needs they didn't anticipate because of defections, which in turn change their draft plans.

Example: The Detroit Lions finished last season desperately in need of offensive linemen. So they went out and signed three — David Lutz, Dave Richards and Bill Fralic — and now can seek to fill another need with a pass rushing defensive end like Eric Curry or John Copeland of Alabama.

Example II: The Atlanta Falcons finished the season looking for defensive backs. Then they lost both starting guards, Fralic and Houston Hoover. They still may pick a defensive back, like Texas A&M's Patrick Bates, but they now need to get big guys to protect their quarterbacks.

Example III: Washington, which lost cornerback Martin Mayhew, desperately needs to replace him. And while general manager Charlie Casserly and new coach Richie Petitbon say they aren't inclined to take a quarterback No. 1, they may turn in that direction, just for need.

The court settlement that led to labor peace and free agency has other effects, too.

For one thing, the draft will be eight rounds instead of 12, probably dropping to seven rounds next year.

For another, there will be 29 picks in the first round — two were added to compensate Philadelphia and Phoenix for the loss of White and Tim McDonald, both designated "franchise players."

In the swing of things

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Midland Lee senior Paula King isn't new to the Region I golf scene, making her third appearance at the event next weekend, but having four companions travel with her is a new experience.

The Rebel girls won the District 4-5A golf title this year, qualifying as a team for the first time since 1987. And they've done it in a style that makes them the favorite to win the Region I title.

King placed second in the medalist race last year while qualifying as an individual, and earned a state berth, finishing ninth overall in the state meet. She would like nothing better than to go back to Austin with a team behind her.

"This is much more exciting than the last two years," King said. "I don't have to worry about placing as a medalist. You just want to go out and help the team. I think it will actually make me focus more. If I have a bad hole now, I know I have to come back and help the team score. I won't be concentrating on the medalist race. I have to think of the team now."

And the team is pretty solid. King was the second place medalist in 4-5A behind Abilene Cooper junior April DeVries, but all five of Lee's

Chaps' aim on region golf crown

Staff report

Shooting for the perfect end of a near perfect regular season, the Midland College golf team seeks the 1993 Region V title for its collection.

Playing at the tough Sugar Tree Country Club course at Dennis, near Weatherford, on Monday and Tuesday, the Chaps are looking for the automatic berth into the national tournament.

The 54-hole event at Sugar Tree, 36 holes on Monday and 18 on Tuesday, includes two spots in the 1993 National Junior College Athletic Association's Division I tournament in Scottsdale, Ariz. First and second place finishers get those slots while others must await at-large bids.

Concurrently with the Region V event is the fifth and final Western Junior College Athletic Conference tournament. With wins at all four of the other WJCAC events, the Chaps already have clinched the conference crown.

Heading the field for the Chaparral team is sophomore Stephen Dundas, the 1992 British Amateur Champion. Dundas edged sophomore teammate Guy Redford at the Texas J.C. event by one stroke for medalist honors. With the Chaps taking six of the top seven individual honors at the tourney, they showed why they've been running from the field in most of the events this season.

Dundas has been medalist in four tournaments this year, Redford and freshman Chad Campbell of Andrews have been medalist twice each. Freshman Shawn Savage also has been a medalist.

Freshman Jason Brooks was medalist in the second tournament of the year, then suffered a severe arm injury which put him on the sidelines for the rest of the season.

Bulls could be toppled

Associated Press

The Chicago Bulls' drive for a third consecutive NBA title will be challenged by all kinds of adversaries — real and intangible.

The real ones are New York and Cleveland from their own half of the league and from Phoenix, Houston, Seattle or Portland in the opposite half. The untouchable enemies potentially are just as formidable — complacency, jealousy, chemistry and injuries.

In the last two years, those adversaries have been either absent, ignored, set aside or too weak to make a difference to the Bulls. This season, there's doubt in some circles that the Bulls can once again rise to the challenges, as they did a year ago when they lost homecourt advantage in three series, yet came back to win on the road each time.

"It's a very professional group," coach Phil Jackson said. "When you get veteran players, for the most part, a lot of ego gratification is gone, and they don't need to pound their chests or brag about their own games. They just want to do the jobs appointed them."

The Bulls, virtually injury free in their two championship seasons, have not been so fortunate this year.

John Paxson, the man who hits the open shot when Michael Jordan is double-teamed, had arthroscopic surgery on his left knee in February and missed 23 games, while Bill Cartwright, who plays an important defensive role, has missed 19 games with nagging back and knee injuries.

■ NBA Roundup/5B

"One thing I now realize is how fortunate you have to be with injuries," Jordan said. "You need good luck. It has been difficult, not just from the physical aspect, but from the mental approach in trying to do something repeatedly. It gets progressively harder. This is harder than the second and that was harder than the first."

"We have a great opportunity to make history and we should live up to those expectations," Cartwright said.

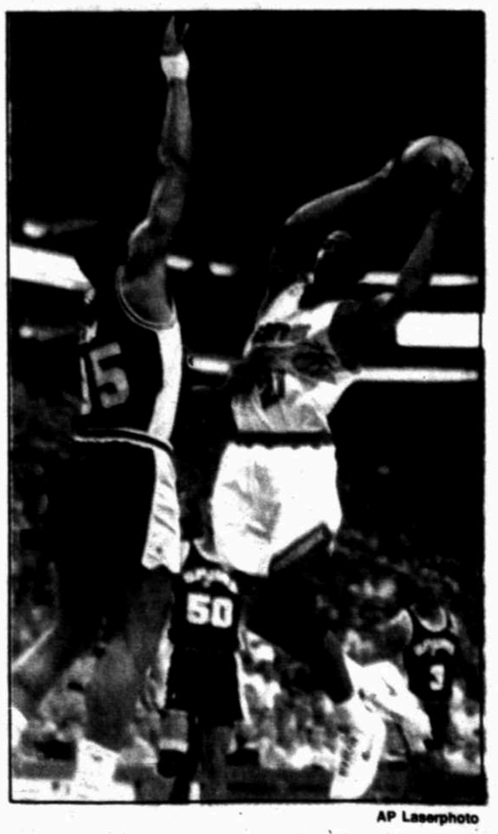

The Bulls and Knicks, easy winners in their division, waged a close battle for homecourt advantage in the Eastern Conference playoffs. The Bulls' loss at Charlotte on Friday night, combined with the Knicks' win at Philadelphia, settled the race in New York's favor, rendering meaningless today's final game between the two teams at Madison Square Garden.

"We make no bones about our desire to have the best record in the East," Knicks coach Pat Riley said before his team clinched. "We know how important the homecourt advantage is, and we want to establish a home base so that when teams come in, they know it's going to be tough."

New York takes a 36-4 home record, best in the NBA, into Sunday's game. All season, the Knicks have been the league's best defensive team.

Their detractors would say it is the NBA's most brutal defensive team, but a 22-1 record when holding opponents under 90 points has been remarkable. New York

San Angelo earns state playoff berth

SAN ANGELO — The San Angelo Bobcats became the third and final team from District 4-5A to earn a state baseball playoff berth here Saturday afternoon with a 4-2 win over the Midland High Bulldogs.

San Angelo's win, coupled with Odessa Permian's 17-7 loss to Abilene Cooper, insure that the Bobcats will finish in third place. San Angelo is 7-4 with one district game left while Permian is 6-6.

The Bobcats scored four runs, three of them unearned, in the first two innings to take the win. San Angelo's Tim Brannan had the big hit in San Angelo's three-run second inning, a two-run triple.

MHS led 2-1 going into the bottom of the fatal inning on RBI doubles by Todd Treadway and Gabe Lawson.

MHS is now 3-8 in league play and 7-14 for the year with one road game left against last place and 1-10 Abilene High Tuesday at 4:30 p.m.

MHS JV ends season at 13-4

The Midland High junior varsity finished its season with a 13-4 record Saturday with a 6-4 win over San Angelo.

Robert Wagner homered while Cade Nobles had three hits. Travis Bird and Vito Ochoa both doubled. Shane Denson picked up the win while Sammy Alvarado got the save.

Three teams tied in Rusty Swing

Green Tree Country Club's Rusty Swing tournament got off to a heated start Saturday with three pairs tied for first place after a best ball round of 67. Today's play will be a team total effort.

Michael Guss and Jeff Moses teamed for 67 as did the pairs of Bob Oimit and Pete Hulder and Dan Pender and Lon Kile. None of the 10 pairs in the championship flight were over 70.

players placed in the top 15 in the district to oust Cooper from its usual championship role.

Kaimi Fuller placed seventh overall and she was followed in order by Jennifer Dickson and Kim Fisher. Heather Albright was 14th overall. All are juniors and will be back next year.

Even though the district race is over, Lee again feels it must beat Cooper once again to grab that Austin ticket as a team.

"Cooper has been to state two years in a row and they placed second last year," said Lee girls golf coach Phyllis Sutton. "You have to feel that you have to contend with them first."

Fisher agreed, "Cooper beat us in the last round of district, so we know we can't take them for granted. But it was nice to beat them in district."

King said, "A lot of people don't understand just how hard it is to just get out of our district. It's the toughest district around and you deserve to go to the region tournament if you can get out of here."

Sutton felt like she might have a monster team this year.

"We finished third in district last year with four sophomores and a junior, and we were beating people by the end of the year," Sutton said. "Then all the girls played in 20 or more tournaments last summer and I could see that they were committed to playing golf. Our team scores this year compare well to the teams that won state last year.

"Also we've had some JV kids who have challenged the varsity to produce. Kelly Thompson is a junior and will be on the team next year. We also have three solid sophomores in Stacey Groce, Betsy Brininstool and Christin Sutton. We could be pretty strong next year."

Dickson said, "I felt we would be a lot better. We all improved over the summer and are dedicated to winning. We want to do it again next year, too."

Fuller said that experience is the key to the team this year.

"I think we understood what was going on last year when most of us were sophomores, but the experience is behind us this year and that has meant a lot. I think our chances are good of winning the region, considering the scores we have shot."

Albright has been tagged as Lee's "spiritual leader" because of her light and whacky ways. She can keep the team loose.

"Well, actually, Paula put that tag (spiritual leader) on me," Albright said. "I guess she called me that because I'm just kind of here — most of the time. The real thing about this team is that we are really good friends."

King jumped in, "Yea, we're good friends. The kind of friends that go to carnivals together and get sick together."

And win together.

Diablos sting M-Angels, 15-8

Staff report

EL PASO — Midland's Kevin Davis hit the Angels first grand slam homer of the year here Saturday night, but it was wasted in a 15-8 loss to the El Paso Diablos.

With the loss, the Angels slipped to 2-4 on the current road trip with four games left to play here. Midland is now 2-4 against El Paso this year.

El Paso jumped to a 10-1 lead early before Midland made a comeback on a two-run triple by Fausto Tejero in the sixth and Kevin Davis' grand slam in the seventh made it 11-8.

There were still no Angel outs, but after a Mark Brakebill single, the Diablos brough in reliever Dave Richards to put out the flames and the Diablos cruised the rest of the way with four more runs in the eighth.

It was a strange game that saw six batters hit by a pitch and six triples. Strangely enough, Davis' slam was the only homer of the night.

Midland starter Erik Bennett allowed 10 earned runs in 3⅓ innings and gave up 11 hits.

Missions scuff Blyleven

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Bert Blyleven is being forced to accept the good with the bad in his rehabilitation assignment with the Midland Angels.

Wednesday night was more of the same. Good results and the feeling of personal satisfaction from a pitcher who is nursing himself back to major league form after rotator cuff surgery, but a fifth-straight loss for the Angels, who fell 5-4 to the San Antonio Missions.

Blyleven threw a curve ball with so much bite even Hannibal Lechter would be envious. Unfortunately, it was a pair of two-run home runs by the Missions that ate the 41-year-old alive.

Forget the long balls Blyleven served up, or the "L" by his name in the pitching line, and consider instead his six strikeouts and no walks. Or the mere two hits he gave up after the Missions' four-run third inning. Or his 79 pitches and his insistence on returning for the seventh inning after Midland manager Don Long had considered sitting him after the sixth.

And listen to a man who knows Blyleven fairly well. San Antonio manager Jerry Royster, in his playing days with the Atlanta Braves faced Blyleven, a former Pittsburgh Pirate, on several occasions.

"Bert pitched a good game," Royster said. "Except for the one inning, he pitched shut out ball against us. The difference between a major leaguer and a minor leaguer is making the adjustments like he did. He did the same thing against us the last game, and just had the one home run."

Last Sunday in San Antonio, Blyleven gave up a solo home run, his only run allowed in six innings. Still, he was tagged with the loss when Midland failed to back him up with any run production.

"Our whole staff (including Burt Hooten and Darrell Evans, two others who also played against Blyleven in the National League) knew what we were going up against and what our kids were going up against him tonight," Royster added.

The one inning that spoiled Blyleven's evening was the third, when Billy Ashley and Mike Busch both tagged the Dutchman for two-run home runs as San Antonio took a 4-1 lead.

"I'm pleased with the way it went," Blyleven said after Wednesday's game. "I threw a lot of curves tonight and got them over, which I wasn't able to do in El Paso.

"I just had that one bad inning where I left a couple of curve balls up. He (Busch) really hit that second one hard. This is a park where you really have to concentrate on your location."

San Antonio added what would prove to be a needed insurance run in the ninth off reliever Brett Merriman. San Antonio's Mike Piazza doubled home Ron Maurer to give the Missions a 5-3 lead.

Midland, which scored single runs in the second, fifth and sixth, threatened in the ninth before ending the game with just a single run in the final frame.

With no outs, Midland had the Raiders rip Texas, 13-6

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Saul Bustos, formerly of Odessa Permian, hit a pair of three-run homers and Clint Bryant went 5-for-5 Saturday as No. 15 Texas Tech trounced No. 2 Texas 13-6 in a Southwest Conference game.

The Red Raiders (38-12 overall and 8-6 in the SWC) got 14 hits, including Bustos' two homers and two triples from Bryant. Junior righthander Travis Driskill (10-3) went the distance.

The Longhorns (43-9, 10-4) used four pitchers with Jay Vaught (6-2) getting knocked out in the first inning, when Tech scored four runs off two Texas pitchers.

Tech's victory, plus losses by Texas Christian and Rice, puts the Raiders in the SWC Post-Season Tournament for the first time since 1980.

No. 1 Texas A&M 12-16, Rice 9-10

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M catcher Robert Lewis hit two homers and knocked in eight runs as the top-ranked Aggies swept Rice.

The Aggies swept the three-game series with the Owls and improved to 44-6 overall and 13-2 in the Southwest Conference. Rice is 35-16 and completed its SWC schedule with a mark of 7-11.

Combined with Texas' loss to Texas Tech Saturday, the Aggies hold a two-game lead in the conference race.

■ SWC Baseball

The Aggies and Longhorns meet next weekend in a three-game series.

Lewis, a junior, hit a grand slam off Rice reliever Marcus Napela, tying the game at 6-all in the third inning of the first game. Stephen Claybrook added a solo shot an inning later for the Aggies.

Texas Christian 6-7, Baylor 3-8

WACO — Jason Marshall hit a homer and drove in four runs as the Baylor Bears salvaged a split with Texas Christian, winning the nightcap 8-7 after dropping the opener 6-3.

Baylor is 32-17 overall and 8-7 in Southwest Conference games. TCU is 33-20 and 4-11.

Aaron Lineweaver scattered 10 hits over nine innings for the victory. He walked four and struck out eight.

Jon Mock was tagged with the loss, giving up two hits and an earned run in 2-3 of an inning.

In the opener, Jeff Zimmerman allowed just one hit in 4 1-3 scoreless innings of relief to earn the victory. Dean Crow took the loss in relief.

Elkington putts into tie for lead

Associated Press

■ Greensboro Open

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Former Greater Greensboro Open champion Steve Elkington sank an 85-foot putt on the 17th hole Saturday to forge a tie with Mike Sullivan heading into the final round of the $1.5 million tournament.

Elkington, who won the tournament in 1990, and Sullivan, who led after each of the first two rounds, were tied at 8-under-par 208 on the Forest Oaks Country Club course.

Gil Morgan was another shot back at 7-under after matching Elkington's 69, while Lennie Clements and Paul Azinger were at 6-under. Azinger recovered to shoot a 70 after swinging and missing on a shot near a tree on his second hole, which he double bogeyed. Clements shot even-par 72.

The golfers have had to battle strong winds for three rounds and the forecast for today's final round was for wind of 25-30 mph and possible thunderstorms. That should make it a wild scramble for the $270,000 top prize.

"You don't know what the weather has in store," said Azinger, who finished third here last year. "You have a bunch of guys who can win. Anybody within five shots of the lead could win."

It appeared Sullivan would hang onto the lead after going 1-under on the front side, continuing his unspectacular but solid play, as the wind continued to blow and no one was able to string birdies together.

But he stumbled down the stretch with bogeys at Nos. 15 and 16 for a 73. He had posted his first consecutive sub-70 rounds of the season with a first-round 67 on Thursday and a 68 Friday.

"I probably was a little conservative a couple of times where I shouldn't have been as conservative," said Sullivan, who has won only twice in 17 seasons on the PGA Tour.

"It's been awhile since I've been in this positive so in the back of my mind I was kind of wondering how I would react."

Henning owns only sub-par total

■ Seniors

FRISCO, Texas (AP) — Harold Henning managed five birdies despite winds gusting to 40 mph Saturday to remain the only golfer with a sub-par total heading into the final round of the Muratec Reunion Pro-Am.

Henning shot a 3-under 69 Saturday for a 1-under-par 143 total through 36 holes, two strokes ahead of Dave Stockton on the 6,737-yard course at Stonebriar Country Club.

"I got lucky," Henning said. "I couldn't shoot that score again in 100 years."

Larry Laoretti, the first-round leader, and Don January were three strokes back at 146 in the $500,000 tournament.

Lee Trevino, last year's Senior Tour player of the year, fired a 73 and was four shots back. George Archer, the defending champion, was at 7-over, eight strokes off the lead.

Henning, 58, made good use of his pitching wedge, knocking approach shots to within three feet on three of Stonebriar's four par-5 holes. He made all three birdie putts.

He added a 15-foot birdie on the par-5 17th hole and a six-footer at No. 1.

"My short irons were working well," said Henning, whose last victory came at the 1991 First of America Classic.

Stockton, captain of the 1991 United States Ryder Cup team, said his two-birdie, two-bogey round of even-par 72 was good, considering course conditions.

Longhorns running conference show

■ SWC Golf

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Stuart Wallace of Texas finished one shot in front of his teammate, two-time defending champion Justin Leonard, to card a 3-under 69 Saturday in the Southwest Conference Championship.

John Paul-Hebert of Texas and Jon Whittemore of Southern Methodist are tied for third at even-par 72.

Third-ranked Texas had a 15-shot lead after shooting a 1-over par 289 for a two-day total of 575.

"I feel good about being in the lead," Longhorns coach Jimmy Clayton said. "We're not ready to claim the championship yet."

Southern Methodist, ranked No. 17, was in second at 590 after shooting 296-294 on the par-72, 6,870-yard course at Pebble Creek Country Club.

"Texas hit more good shots then I cared to look at," SMU coach Barry Rodenhaver said. "We'll play with them again Sunday. I guess I will have to get some orange and white."

The real race could be for second place, as host-school Texas A&M, ranked 14th nationally, fired a 1-over 289 for a 591 total, to stand just one shot behind SMU.

No. 21 Texas Christian shot 297-300--597 for fourth, while Houston is one shot behind in fifth.

DRAFT: Building strategy revised

(From 1C)

For a third, it won't be a financial bonanza for the players chosen.

For the first time, there will be a salary cap, averaging out at about $2 million a team for all rookies, or less than such past No. 1 draft picks as Troy Aikman (1988) and Jeff George (1990) received by themselves. That's part of a general agreement to give most of the money to veterans.

"I'm still a draft guy," says George Young, general manager of the New York Giants, who don't have a first-round pick because they took quarterback Dave Brown in the first round of the supplemental draft a year ago.

"But now it's only part of a three-part strategy to get players. We signed some free agents to fill holes and if we don't fill some others in the draft, we'll probably sign some more free agents."

The two teams with the biggest needs are New England and Seattle, which each finished 2-14 last season, the Seahawks scoring just 13 touchdowns on offense in 16 games.

Both need quarterbacks, meaning Mirer and Bledsoe, who are likely to become the first quarterbacks picked at the top of the draft since Jim Plunkett (New England), Archie Manning (New Orleans) and Dan Pastorini (Houston) went 1-2-3 in 1971. A guy named Joe Theismann was also picked in that draft — in the fourth round by Miami — heading for Canada and eventually ending up in Washington.

Beyond that, the quarterback crop is thin — Brown, taken last June after he graduated from Duke — would have been the only other first-rounder this year.

But it's deep in offensive linemen, led by little-known Willie Roaf of Louisiana Tech and Lincoln Kennedy of Washington, whose stock has risen as his weight has dropped from around 350 pounds to a better-honed 330.

Other plentiful positions: wide receiver, although only USC's Curtis Conway and Californian's Sean Dawkins are sure first-round picks; tight end, led by Notre Dame's Irv Smith, Penn State's Troy Drayton and Tony McGee of Michigan.

Copeland and Curry head a group of defensive linemen who probably will go high along with little-known Dan Williams of Toledo. There is also depth at running back although only. Garrison Hearst of Georgia and Jerome Bettis of Notre Dame are a sure first-rounders.

There also is depth at defensive back, both corners and safeties.

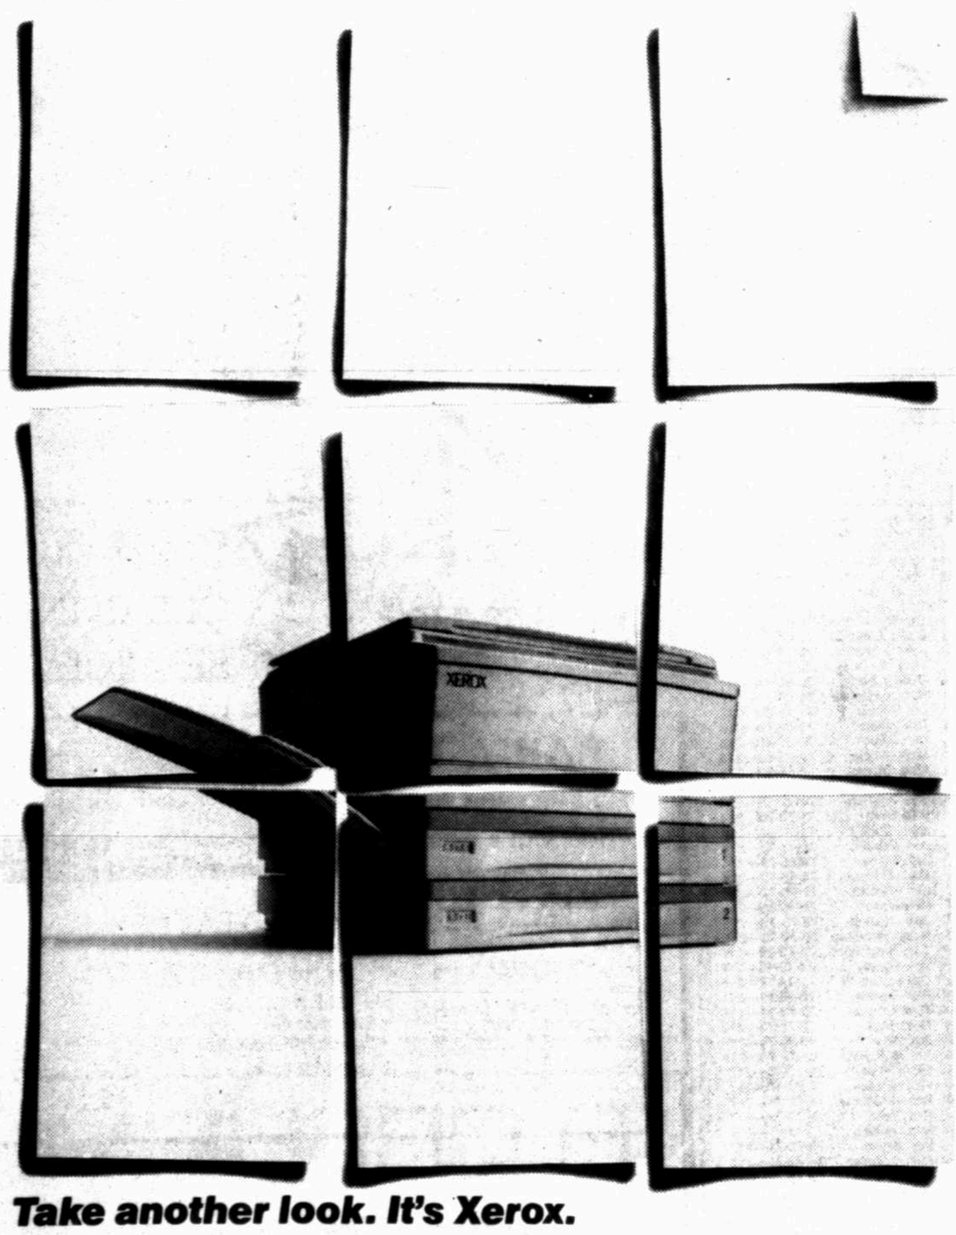

The third player to be taken, however, probably will be Marvin Jones, the Florida State linebacker. He's likely to go to the New York Jets.

After the Jets, come Phoenix; Cincinnati; Tampa Bay; Chicago; Detroit; Atlanta; the Los Angeles Rams; Cleveland, the Los Angeles Raiders and Philadelphia, which the pick they get for White, who signed with Green Bay. That pick is an extra, not from the Packers.

XEROX

What kind of help can you get for $25 a week?

Take another look. It's Xerox.

Now, you can get the kind of help you've always wanted. For about $25 a week, you could lease a reliable Xerox office copier. You'll not only get Xerox copy quality, you'll also get an exclusive Xerox three-year warranty, free. Which means you don't pay a penny extra for warranty service for three whole years. So if you still think good help is hard to come by, give us the job. We work for a lot less than you think.

Kevin McHale (right) embraces Celtic teammate Joe Kleine after coming off the court Friday night.

Boston fans show love for McHale

Associated Press

BOSTON — Little Joey McHale didn't understand why nearly 15,000 people were clapping for the man who had just kissed him tenderly on the forehead.

It was only his father. Great basketball players get applause, not daddies.

"He asked me why they were all cheering," Kevin McHale said. "I said, 'no big deal.'"

The fans knew better.

Certain they were watching McHale leave the last regular-season home game of his brilliant career, they gave him a one-minute standing ovation with 54.4 seconds left in the Celtics' 107-99 win Friday night over Cleveland.

In a season of setbacks, McHale was going out on a high — 17 points and 11 rebounds in a flashback to his wonderful years when basketball was so much easier before injuries beat him down.

The Cavaliers' timeout had just ended. Boston coach Chris Ford let McHale return to the floor. Then, he sent Alaa Abdelnaby in. McHale had his moment as everyone watched him walk slowly from the game.

He raised his arms as the crowd cheered. He hugged teammate Joe Kleine, shed some tears and kissed 6-year-old Joey, a Celtics waterboy who was born halfway through his father's career.

On the other side, Cleveland coach Lenny Wilkens applauded. So did players on the court. Referee Darell Garretson walked to the Boston bench and shook McHale's hand.

"I've given a lot and, boy, to get that back from (the fans) made me feel real good," McHale said.

Above it all, the banners of retired Celtics' numbers waited for it all to end.

His "32" will be up there sooner than he cares to admit.

"We'll see, you know, we'll see," a thoughtful McHale said when asked if he had made up his mind about retiring after 13 NBA seasons, all with Boston.

The chances of him coming back are less than the possibility he will score 56 points again, setting a team record in 1985 that Larry Bird broke nine days later.

He has made no public statements indicating he will return after his first season out of Bird's shadow. With Bird having retired last August, McHale's teammates know only Robert Parish will remain from probably the best frontcourt in NBA history.

"He's kept it quiet about this being his last year because he didn't want it to become a circus with everyone talking about his career," Kleine said.

Suns hold off Spurs, 99-97

Associated Press

PHOENIX — Danny Ainge preserved a two-point Phoenix lead with a basket and a free throw in the final 12.6 seconds Saturday, and the Suns beat San Antonio 99-97 despite the absence of ejected superstar Charles Barkley.

The Spurs, who snapped Phoenix's 14-game winning streak last December, called timeout with 6.9 seconds left after Ainge missed the second foul shot. Willie Anderson got off a jumper, and David Robinson got the rebound, but his last-second shot bounced off the rim.

■ NBA Roundup

Earlier, Dan Majerle erased a three-point San Antonio lead with a 3-pointer with tied it at 94 with 1:10 to play, then gave Phoenix a 96-94 lead with two free throws with 39 seconds left.

Barkley was ejected with 1:00 left in the second quarter when referee Joe Borgia hit him with a technical foul. Barkley applauded and said something, and Borgia immediately whistled the second technical.

Barkley, who was playing his second game since missing five because of a shoulder injury, left with eight points and seven rebounds.

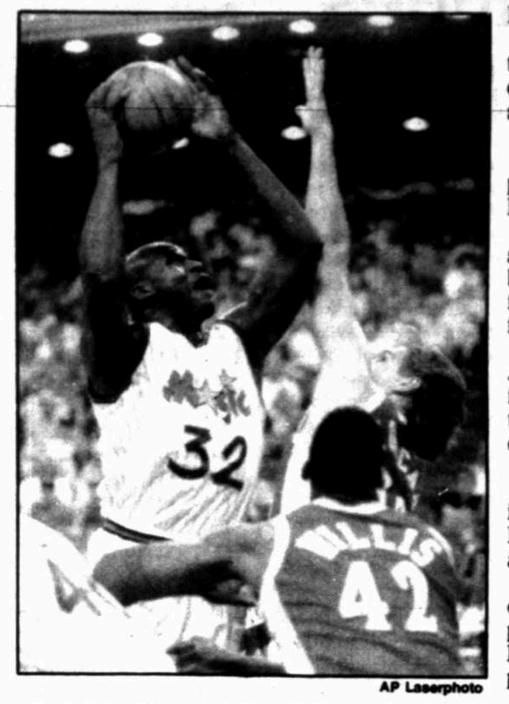

The Suns, who lost only once at home before the All-Star break, snapped a two-game skid in the America West Arena to finish 35-6 at home.

Mavericks 128, Rockets 123

HOUSTON — Jim Jackson scored 23 points to lead seven Dallas players in double figures in a victory over Houston that snapped the Rockets' 11-game winning streak.

The Mavericks (11-71) won their second game in a row for the second time this season, but still ended the year with the worst record in franchise history and two wins away from tying the worst record in NBA history — 9-73 by the 1972-72 Philadelphia 76ers.

Trailing 88-75 with 5:49 left in the third quarter, the Mavericks went on a 31-16 run that ended with 9:04 left in the game and Dallas leading 106-104, its first lead since early in the first quarter.

The Rockets got their final lead at 117-115 on a basket by Hakeem Olajuwon with 4:25 to play, but the Mavericks quickly ran off six straight points and did not trail again.

Kenny Smith scored 23 points to lead the Rockets, and Carl Herrera added 18. Terry Davis scored 20 points and Mike Iuzzolino scored 12 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter for Dallas.

The Rockets played their second straight game without starting guard Vernon Maxwell, who has a broken bone in his left wrist, and Robert Horry, who has tendinitis in his knee.

The Rockets edged ahead 33-31 at the end of the first quarter and used a 41-point second quarter — their most points in one quarter this season — for a 74-64 halftime lead.

Magic 104, Hawks 85

ORLANDO, Fla. — The NBA's most improved record wasn't enough to get the Orlando Magic into the playoffs.

The fourth-year team finished the regular season with a victory over the Atlanta Hawks, but missed out on the first postseason berth in franchise history when the Indiana Pacers defeated the Miami Heat 94-88.

Shaquille O'Neal scored 31 points and Nick Anderson had 27 as the Magic won for the fourth time in five games to finish with 41 victories — 20 more than last season when Orlando had the second-worst record in the league.

Pacers 94, Heat 88

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indiana Pacers qualified for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference with a victory over the Miami Heat.

Vern Fleming, making only his eighth start of the season, matched his career-high with 31 points as Indiana earned a spot against the New York Knicks in the first round of the playoffs.

Hornets 108, Bucks 106

MILWAUKEE — Kendall Gill drove through the middle and hit a layup with 2.9 seconds left as the Charlotte Hornets beat the Milwaukee Bucks to clinch the No. 5 playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

Larry Johnson hit a pair of free throws with 13 seconds to play to put the Hornets up by 3, but Brad Lohaus hit a game-tying 3-pointer with 9.7 seconds remaining.

Lakers 125, Kings 107

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Los Angeles ended its worst regular season in 18 years on a positive note with a victory over Sacramento.

Despite making the playoffs for the 17th year in a row, the Lakers finished fifth in the Pacific Division and eighth in the Western Conference also is holding teams under 43 percent shooting.

Cleveland, which recently made Lenny Wilkens the NBA's second-winningest coach, could challenge the conference front-runners. The Cavs, with All-Stars Mark Price, Brad Daugherty and Larry Nance, quietly took a 10-game winning streak into the final weekend, while most of the attention was focused on the Bulls and Knicks.

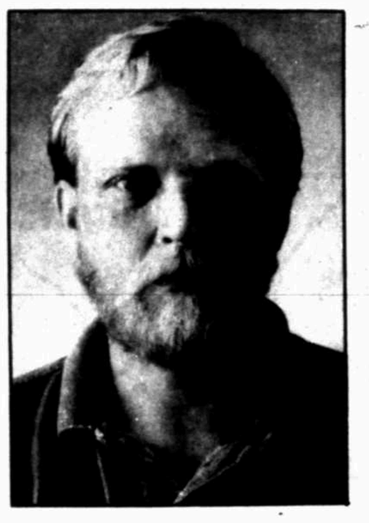

The Suns lost four of five games with Charles Barkley on the injured list, but they already are assured of homecourt advantage as long as they stay in the playoffs.

Houston is the Western Conference's answer to Cleveland. The Rockets were third place, five games behind San Antonio and three behind Utah, at the All-Star break, then won 25 of 29 games to run away from the Midwest Division.

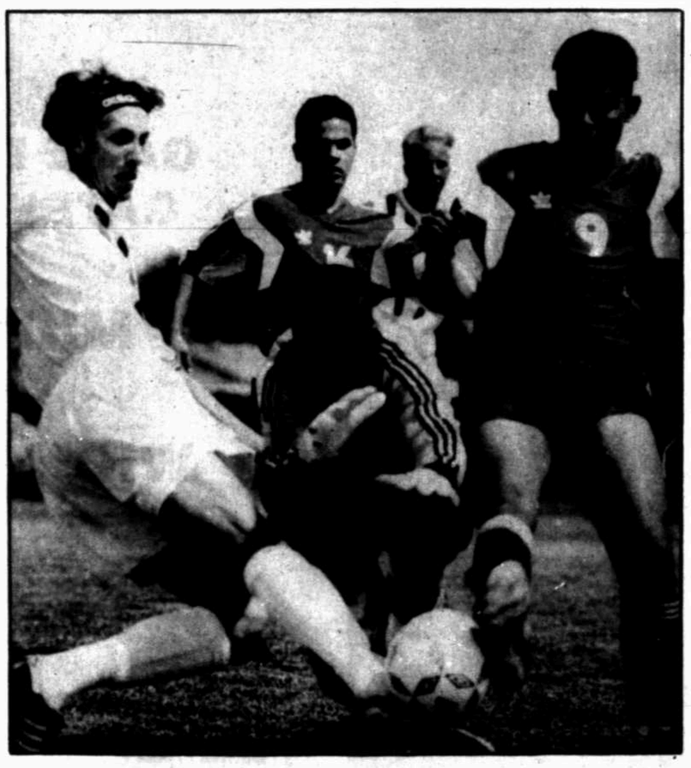

Houston's season included an eight-game winning streak, a 15-game run and an 11-game streak that was still alive with two games left.

Montreal wins 3-2; Buffalo advances

Associated Press

■ NHL Playoffs

MONTREAL — Benoit Brunet scored 67 seconds into the third period to give the Montreal Canadiens a 3-2 victory over the Quebec Nordiques and a tie their Adams Division playoff series at two games apiece.

Brunet lifted in a rebound after goaltender Ron Hextall stopped Gilbert Dionne's close-range shot to send the best-of-7 series back to Quebec for Game 5 on Monday night.

Vincent Damphousse and Gary Leeman also scored for Montreal, which lost the first two games at Quebec and won the next two at home.

Scott Young and Joe Sakic replied for Quebec, which had won all three of its regular season games at the Forum.

Montreal controlled most of the play, but missed open nets several times and was thwarted several times by Hextall, who has been at the top of his game in this series.

Montreal outshot Quebec 37-27 before a wildly cheering, capacity crowd announced at 17,959.

The Canadiens swarmed the Quebec zone in the early moments, picking up a power-play goal at 5:28 when Damphousse slid in the rebound of Kevin Haller's shot from the point.

Quebec coach Pierre Page called a timeout at 8:37 and, 48 seconds later, Young tied the game when he swept around the net and put a wrist shot between Patrick Roy's pads. It was Young's fourth goal of the series.

Rookie Jesse Belanger hooked the puck away from Curtis Leschyshyn from behind and Leeman pounced on it and slid it behind Hextall 9:21 into the second period.

Sakic tied it again at 18:48 with a rebound from the side of the net after Mike Hough had hit the post from the slot.

After Brunet put Montreal ahead, Quebec went on the attack and Montreal coach Jacques Demers called a timeout at 7:38 to settle his team.

Quebec defenseman Craig Wolanin left the game with three minutes remaining in the first period with a knee injury after a heavy check from John LeClair.

Sabres 6, Bruins 5

BUFFALO, N.Y. — The Buffalo Sabres, forced to work overtime for the the third time in four games, beat Boston on Brad May's goal to complete an unlikely and unprecedented sweep of the heavily favored Bruins in an Adams Division playoff series.

The Bruins, who won 18 of their last 21 regular-season games before falling apart, became the first NHL club to win 50 regular-season games and be swept in the playoffs.

Buffalo's turnaround was just as dramatic. The Sabres lost their last seven regular-season games before limping into the playoffs against their traditional antogonists. Boston had won the previous five series against Buffalo, and the Sabres hadn't won a seven-game series in 13 years.

But all that went by the boards when May connected after taking a pass from Pat LaFontaine, who was on his knees when he swept the puck along. May took it at the Boston blue line, evaded Ray Bourque to get in alone against Bruins goalie Andy Moog, then beat him with a forehand after a nice fake.

Islanders 4, Capitals 3

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — Ray Ferraro scored an overtime goal for the second straight game, this time in the second OT, as the New York Islanders rallied for a victory against the stunned Washington Capitals to take a 3-1 lead in the best-of-7 series.

The Islanders have won all three games in overtime, with Ferrero getting an assist on the winning goal in Game 2.

Ferrero scored at 5:40 of OT this time, coming in alone in front of the net to beat Rick Tabaracci through the legs.

The Islanders and Capitals, who have a long history of overtime playoff games, were tied 3-3 after regulation after New York came back from an early three-goal deficit on Patrick Flatley's goal at 14:14 of the third period.

The Islanders won Game 2 of this Patrick Division semifinal series 5-4 in double overtime at the Capital Centre, then won Game 3 on Thursday night at the Nassau Coliseum, 4-3, in overtime on Ferraro's goal.

The Islanders, the most successful team in NHL history in playoff overtime games with a 28-7 record, played six of those against Washington.

Rangers batter Brewers, 15-4

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

MILWAUKEE — Jose Canseco hit a two-run double during an 11-run sixth inning and also hit a two-run homer, powering the Texas Rangers past the Milwaukee Brewers 15-4 Saturday.

The Rangers combined five hits, three walks, three errors and a hit batter for 11 runs in the sixth. Texas came within one run of matching its biggest inning, while it was the biggest burst ever against the Brewers.

Charlie Leibrandt (3-0) won again and is off to his best start since he went 4-0 to begin 1986 with Kansas City. He gave up two runs on five hits in six innings, struck out five and walked none.

Josias Manzanillo (1-1) lost his first major league start. He faced only one batter in the big sixth inning, however, and Texas did the rest of its damage against three relievers.

Texas won by a lopsided score despite outhitting Milwaukee by only 12-11. The 11 runs were one short of the Rangers record. Texas scored 12 runs in the 15th inning at Oakland on July 3, 1983. The 11 runs were one more than the Brewers gave up in an inning to Toronto on June 10, 1990.

Tigers 17, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Lou Whitaker homered, doubled and drove in four runs and Mickey Tettleton had a grand slam as the Detroit Tigers maintained their incredible offensive pace with an 18-hit, five-homer attack to beat the Minnesota Twins.

Almost lost in the onslaught was the pitching performance of John Doherty (2-1). He allowed five hits, no runs and no walks in seven innings.

Rob Deer, Chad Kreuter and Kirk Gibson also homered as Detroit won for the ninth time in 10 games, outscoring its opponents 99-36 in the process. The Tigers, who have had two 20-run games already, lead the majors with 129 runs (an 8.1-run average) and 23 homers. They have outscored the Twins 29-5 in this series' first two games.

Detroit last hit five home runs on May 6, 1990. Minnesota last allowed five on Aug. 3, 1991.

Most of the Tigers' fury was felt by Pat Mahomes (0-3), who allowed 10 runs on 11 hits in 2 2-3 innings. He tied the club record for runs and earned runs allowed as his ERA nearly doubled from 5.79 to 10.26. The Twins entered the series with a 4.21 ERA. It's now 5.25 after their first two-game losing streak of the season.

Blue Jays 10, White Sox 4

TORONTO — John Olerud and Darrin Jackson each got three hits, Paul Molitor homered and the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Chicago White Sox.

Olerud drove in two runs and raised his average to .435, tops in the majors. Joe Carter also drove in two runs.

Juan Guzman (2-0) took a 7-0 lead into the seventh inning. He left after Ozzie Guillen's two-out, two-run single and Lance Johnson's RBI single.

Reliever Mark Eichhorn relieved with the bases loaded and retired George Bell on a grounder back to the mound, preserving the four-run lead.

Rod Bolton (0-3) allowed six runs on eight hits in four innings.

Carter and Jackson each hit RBI singles with two outs in the first inning. The Blue Jays scored two more runs in the third. Carter and John Olerud doubled, Jackson singled and Ed Sprague had a sacrifice fly.

Molitor hit his second home run of the season, a two-run shot in the fourth for a 6-0 lead. Dick Schofield's infield single off Jeff Schwarz, making his major league debut, scored another run in the fifth.

Orioles 6, Royals 5

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Cal Ripken doubled home the tying run and Glenn Davis singled him in as Baltimore came from behind in the eighth inning and went on to defeat Kansas City, breaking a three-game losing streak.

The Orioles rallied against Jeff Montgomery (1-1), who blew his first save opportunity in five chances.

With the Orioles trailing 3-2, Mike Devereaux singled with two out in the eighth and scored when Ripken doubled off the wall in left. After Harold Baines walked, Davis singled to center, making it 4-3.

Baltimore's Mark McLemore led off the ninth with his first home run since Aug. 18, 1988. Then Jeff Tackett walked with one out and scored on singles by Brady Anderson and Ripken, making it 6-3.

The Royals rallied for two runs in the bottom of the ninth. Doubles by Felix Jose and Chris Gwynn finished Mike Mussina (2-1), who was bidding for Baltimore's first complete game of the season. Brent Mayne's single made it 6-5 before Todd Frohwirth got the last two outs for his first save.

Indians 10, Athletics 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Reggie Jefferson homered and drove in four runs, helping the Cleveland Indians break a four-game losing streak with a victory over the struggling Oakland Athletics.

The Indians jumped out to a 5-0 lead after two innings and sent the A's to their seventh loss in eight games. Sandy Alomar Jr. and Paul Sorrento homered for Cleveland, which had 15 hits, nine for extra bases.

Oakland starter Shawn Hillegas (1-2) didn't get out of the second inning and retired only three of the nine batters he faced.

Bob Welch, who missed his scheduled start when Friday night's game was rained out, came on in the fifth but couldn't quiet the Indians, whose first five batters reached base.

Mike Bielecki (2-2) went five innings, allowing two runs on five hits. He walked three and struck out five.

Angels 8, Red Sox 5

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Chili Davis singled in the tying run and Rene Gonzales hit a tie-breaking sacrifice fly in a three-run sixth inning as California beat Boston, sending the Red Sox to their fourth straight loss.

California, surprise leaders of the AL West at 11-4, used a three-run rally in the sixth against John Dopson and reliever Scott Bankhead (1-1).

With Boston leading 3-2, Davis' single scored J.T. Snow, who started the inning with a triple. Following Davis' single off Bankhead, Tim Salmon walked and both runners advanced on a sacrifice before Gonzales' liner to right scored the go-ahead run.

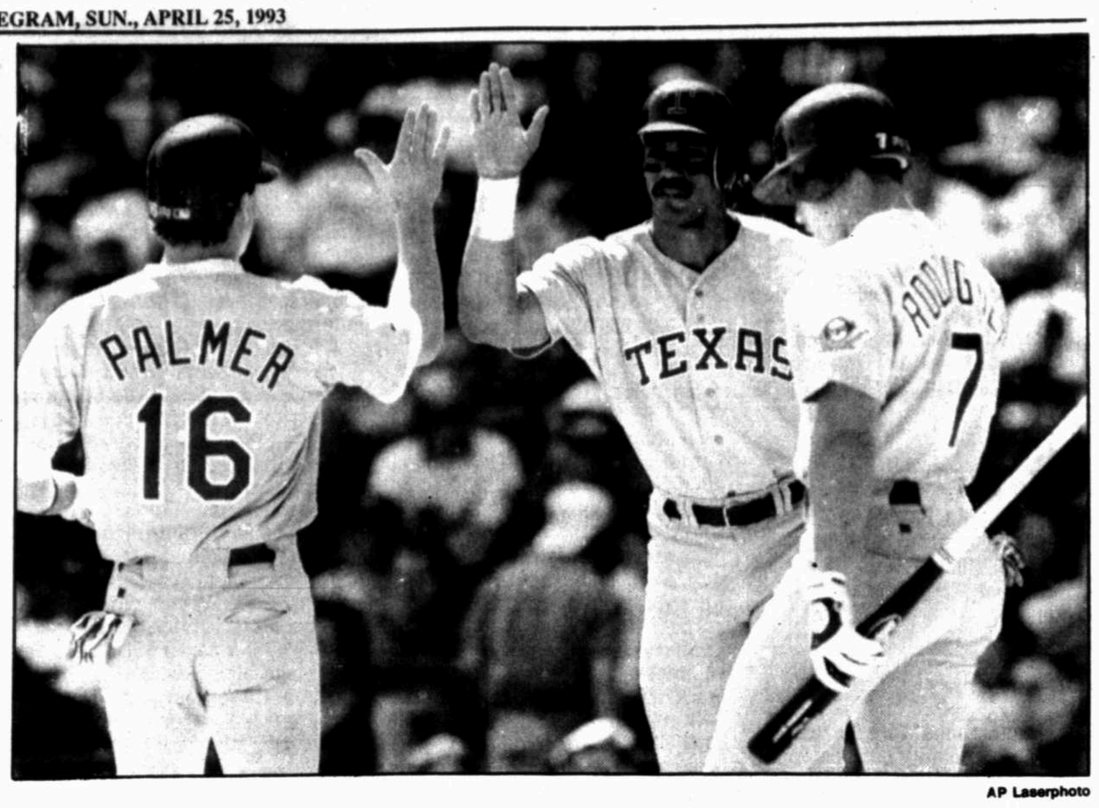

Walks to Torey Lovullo and Gary DiSarcina loaded the bases, and Ken Ryan relieved and allowed an RBI single to Luis Polonia.

Chuck Crim (2-0) replaced starter Scott Lewis at the start of the sixth and retired all four batters he faced for the victory. Ken Patterson came on with one out in the seventh to allow Mo Vaughn's third homer and walk Scott Cooper, but Julio Valera ended the inning. It was Valera's second save.

The Angels scored three runs in the seventh, two on a throwing error by Valentin. Salmom also had an RBI double.

Boston took a 1-0 lead in the second inning on John Valentin's sacrifice fly.

Mike Greenwell's second homer of the season made it 2-0 in the fourth, but the lead didn't survive the bottom of the inning.

Astros send Bucs under .500 mark

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

PITTSBURGH — Eric Anthony's two-run double highlighted a five-run eighth inning as the Houston Astros beat slumping Pittsburgh 8-4 Saturday night, dropping the Pirates under .500 for the first time in more than two years.

The Pirates are 8-9, the first time they've had a losing record since they were 3-4 on April 15, 1991. Their streak of 375 regular-season days had been the longest active stretch in the major leagues.

The Astros are in first place in the NL West and have won eight of their last 11 games. They're 8-3 on the road, part of a 25-12 streak that goes back to last season.

Xavier Hernandez (1-0) won despite giving the Pirates the go-ahead run in the seventh on Andy Van Slyke's double and a single by Orlando Merced. Doug Jones pitched the last two innings.

Padres 5, Mets 3

NEW YORK — Phil Plantier and Derek Bell each hit two-run homers, sending the San Diego Padres past the New York Mets.

Gary Sheffield led off the second inning with the first of his two singles and Plantier followed with his third homer of the season. Bell hit his fourth homer with one out in the ninth against Jeff Innis.

Frank Seminara (1-1) combined with three relievers on a six-hitter. Howard Johnson homered for the Mets.

Bret Saberhagen (2-2), who began the season with two victories over Colorado, lost his second straight decision. He gave up three runs on eight hits in seven innings.

Seminara (1-1) allowed three hits in 5 2-3 innings. Relievers Roger Mason and Rich Rodriguez followed.

Reds 15, Cubs 5

CHICAGO — Chris Sabo and Joe Oliver hit grand slams, the first time since 1955 that Cincinnati hit a pair of them in the same game, leading the Cincinnati Reds to a rout of the Chicago Cubs.

Bip Roberts and Reggie Sanders hit two-run homers, helping Tom Browning (1-2) win his first game since last June 26. Steve Lake homered for Chicago as both teams took advantage of a 26 mph wind blowing out to center field.

Sabo drove in a career-high five runs with his homer, two doubles and a single. His first lifetime slam came in the first inning.

Oliver's homer, his first of the season, came in the seventh inning and was the second slam of his career. He also hit one Oct. 1, 1991, against Atlanta.

Expos 6, Giants 1

MONTREAL — Ken Hill pitched a four-hitter and doubled home a run as the Montreal Expos won their sixth straight game.

Utilityman John Vander Wal drove in three runs with two singles and Larry Walker hit a solo homer for the Expos. Montreal had 12 hits.

Hill (3-0) struck out four and walked three. He pitched hitless ball until Willie McGee singled with one out in the sixth inning and shut out the Giants until Royce Clayton's RBI single in the seventh.

Dave Burba (2-1) gave up five runs on nine hits.

Marlins 2, Rockies 1

DENVER — Luis Aquino and two relievers combined to scatter 10 hits, pacing the Florida Marlins to an expansion-duel victory over the Colorado Rockies.

The start of the game was delayed 1 hour, 11 minutes by rain and a brief period of snow. Florida (6-11) pulled within one-half game of the Rockies (6-10).

Aquino (1-1), acquired from Kansas City on March 27, repeatedly wriggled out of jams. In the seventh inning, the Rockies loaded the bases on a single, error and a walk, but Aquino induced Alex Cole to fly out for the third out.

Phillies 7, Dodgers 3

PHILADELPHIA — Danny Jackson pitched seven strong innings for his first victory with Philadelphia, and the Phillies defeated Los Angeles to send the Dodgers to their fifth straight defeat.

The Phillies have a record of 12-4, tops in the major leagues.

Jackson (1-0) allowed eight hits, three runs, two earned, struck out four and walked two. With two runners on base, Mitch Williams got the last out for his sixth save.

Pete Incaviglia hit a homer and drove in two runs for the Phillies, who have won eight of nine at home.

Braves 11, Cardinals 0

ST. LOUIS — Pete Smith pitched six-hit ball for eight innings as the Atlanta Braves routed the St. Louis Cardinals and struggling Bob Tewksbury.

Jeff Blauser extended his career-high hitting streak to 12 games with a double, and Otis Nixon had two hits and scored twice and David Justice also drove in two runs. Ron Gant had three hits, including a run-scoring double.

Area voters face important issues

Voters will be choosing a U.S. Senator, several local city, school district, and hospital district representatives, and deciding the outcome of three proposed constitutional amendments in Saturday's balloting.

The Reporter-Telegram has already made its recommendations to voters in the contested races for U.S. Senator, positions on the Midland City Council, and on the constitutional amendments. Following is a review of those recommendations:

Elect incumbents

The four races for Midland City Council — District 1, District 2, and two at-large council positions — feature an exceptional number of outstanding candidates, which speaks well for the interest of Midlanders in serving on the council.

City Council
- ✔ Bill Morrow, at-large
- ✔ Jose Cuevas, at-large
- ✔ James Devenport, Dist. 1
- ✔ Juluis Brooks, Dist. 2

U.S. Senate
- ✔ Kay Bailey Hutchison

Propositions
- ✔ No – Proposition 1
- ✔ Yes – Proposition 2
- ✔ No – Proposition 3

While there is a good case to be made for changing the representatives on local boards every so often, in this particular instance the Reporter-Telegram recommends voters cast their ballots for the individuals now serving on the council. Those individuals include:

- District 1: James F. Devenport.
- District 2: Juluis L. Brooks.
- At-Large (two positions): Bill Morrow and Jose Cuevas.

Returning these four individuals to the council is wise because each understands the importance of working to keep Midland a strong, safe, livable community in which parents can rear their children, while working to make a living and enjoy the fruits of their work.

These council members believe in keeping the city a good place in which to do business. At the same time, each is looking at ways to bring new businesses and industries to Midland, planning for orderly growth of the community and keeping taxes as low as possible.

Those all are important goals for the city's future and we encourage voters to cast their ballots for Devenport, Brooks, Morrow and Cuevas.

Hutchison for Senate

Of the 24 candidates hoping to gain the seat vacated by Lloyd Bentsen in the U.S. Senate, our choice is Kay Bailey Hutchison who is now serving as Texas state treasurer.

She has been an outstanding state legislator, served during the Ford and Carter administrations as vice chairman of the National Transportation and Safety Board, and as state treasurer, beginning in 1990, she has cut her budget, identified ways in which the Texas Legislature effect savings for the state, and earned over $1 billion for the taxpayers of the state. She obviously has fiscal management skills the state and nation need.

We urge voters to vote for Hutchison.

Reject 'Robin Hood'

If voters really want higher taxes for spending on education with no real improvement in the way students are taught in the public schools of Texas, they ought to vote for Proposition 1 and Proposition 3. Those two amendments would, in effect, create a statewide property tax which is now unconstitutional in Texas and create the mechanism by which the state tax for school financing would be taken from local school districts, shipped to Austin, and then redistributed to "poor" school districts throughout Texas.

In all honesty, with the increasing concern about the cost of government and higher taxes, we don't think more is needed. So voters should vote against Propositions 1 and 3.

The problems with the so-called "Robin Hood" approach are so numerous that they beg a different approach to public school financing. A bill offered by State Sen. John Leedom (R-Dallas) would make spending on education a priority, meaning it would get the first funds coming into the state each biennium much as highway funding has been handled. Another would approve a "voucher" system for education, which would be less costly. And others are available.

Voters would be wise to reject Proposition 1, which creates the state tax for school financing and provides for recapture, and Proposition 3, which would permit poor school districts in Texas to build facilities on funds guaranteed under the Permanent School Fund up to $750 million statewide — WITHOUT assured repayment.

Proposition 2 — which is confusing in the way it is written — would permit local school districts to avoid compliance with state educational mandates that the Legislature does not provide funding for. That is part of the problem that has created the school financing situation in school districts.

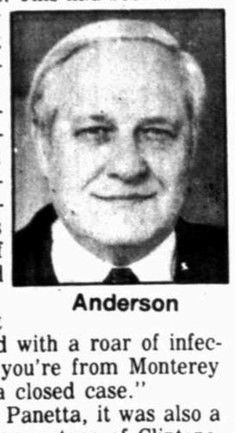

By approving this constitutional amendment, voters would give local school districts a way to avoid costly state educational mandates in the future.

Voters would be wise to:
- Vote AGAINST Propositions 1 and 3.
- Vote FOR Proposition 2.

Panetta speaks out on OMB, Clinton

WASHINGTON — Five days before the first major political setback of the Clinton administration, Leon Panetta was staring down at his lunch — a club sandwich and two diet Cokes. This had been one of the roughest weeks for Panetta since he left Congress for the administration. Still, Panetta took some time to explain to us why he traded a safe congressional seat and powerful chairmanship for the buzzsaw of being Clinton's director of Office of Management and Budget.

Anderson

"My sanity is subject to question," he replied with a roar of infectious laughter. "When you're from Monterey (Calif.), it's probably a closed case."

When we interviewed Panetta, it was also a "closed case" that a cornerstone of Clintonomics — the economic stimulus package — was near defeat, though Democrats were still five days away from unconditional surrender.

Panetta was in a reflective mood as he discussed the two lessons he thought could be drawn from the bloody budget battle: First, pick your fights wisely, and then fight like hell. Second, the transition from campaigning to governing, from Little Rock to Washington, may need some refinement. In both cases, there was some implied criticism of his own administration. Panetta explained:

"The toughest transition for a newly elected president is the transition from the kind of day-to-day campaign when you're running for the office — and the kind of PR operation you have — and then taking the leadership of running the country, and having to make decisions . . . that aren't going to be the most popular in the world because you think they're right. He's (Clinton) in the process right now in that transition."

Panetta believes it boils down to picking priorities, the correct ones and not too many at once. Or as Panetta puts it, a president "can't have everything he wants." Clinton may be guilty of greed in this department — pushing for jobs, deficit reduction and investments simultaneously.

"Probably the president's greatest frustration now — and it may be the transition from governor to president — is that as governor he knew what he wanted and how to get it done," Panetta told us. "Coming here he's got a whole agenda of things he wants to do but it's a different ball game. You've got to work with a Congress that's a much different operation. The Senate is much different because it isn't a majority rule game up there. You've got to confront how you deal with (minority) filibusters. You're dealing with a very constricted budget. You've got to make tough decisions where you're going to concentrate your resources."

Panetta discussed how Clinton fits into a spectrum of presidents he has observed and worked with. He called Clinton not only an amazingly quick study, but said "one of his strong points is his ability to analyze the politics of most issues and most individuals."

But Panetta wasn't as flattering about the other presidents he has known. Jimmy Carter was long on knowledge and short on political savvy; Ronald Reagan was an astute politician hampered by having only a few simple ideas; George Bush was knowledgeable and political, but cowardly when it came to standing up for his program.

"I think it's very important when a president lays out an important policy that he's willing to fight for it," Panetta said. What would he be advising Clinton if he were still House Budget Committee chairman, and not OMB director?

"I really do believe that if I were on Capitol Hill, I'd say, 'Look, Mr. President, you define your agenda and you fight like hell for it. We'll work with you. But I've got to be convinced you're willing to fight. '"

RUSSELL BAKER

Certain names are subject to exploitation

A bunch of the guys and an equal number of women were sitting around the Blackbird Saloon sipping white-wine spritzers and talking about how much they hated cigarette smokers when Butch piped up with, "How come we never talk about Amy Fisher like everybody else?"

Baker

We expected that kind of thing from Butch. He was, well, you know what I'm trying to say — not really out-of-it, you know, but, well — weird.

For instance, suppose there's another new report just out on the evils of sidestream smoke. All of us, including an equal number of women, will be talking about it and somebody — half the time it'll be one of the women — will say, "Anybody who intrudes sidestream smoke into my air space gets creamed."

Except Butch'll say, "Let's talk about all the Hollywood stars having babies out of wedlock for a change, instead of sidestream smoke."

What a weird guy. Of course, what can you expect of a guy named Butch? Nobody's been named Butch in America since — well, I don't know — since way back there when the BMW was just becoming a whole new way of life, like white-wine spritzers.

One of the guys told me BMW won't even sell a car to anybody named Butch. One of the women told me that, too. They were just joking, of course. The shape investment-banker bonuses are in nowadays, they're glad to sell any car on the lot to a guy named anything at all.

Except Buck. Can you imagine a guy being named Buck nowadays? Or a woman being named Buck? Talk about old-hat names! So guess who just fathered a brand new son?

Of course: Butch. Want to guess what Butch named the kid?

Exactly:

Buck.

He named the kid Buck.

All right, it gets better. Not being a sexist, Butch simultaneously fathered a brand-new daughter. His first instinct was to name her Buckess. But he knows the -ess ending is purest pig chauvinism, having just come back from Seattle, you see, where they've even abolished the "waitress" and replaced her with the "waitperson."

So he says: "I've got it. I'll name my little darling Buckperson."

Naturally a lot of his women pals at the Blackbird, as well as an equal number of guy pals, said Buckperson was out of the question. Sounded like he was trying to make fun of women's speech rights.

Butch may be weird, but he's no mossback, so he scratched Buckperson off the birth certificate and named his daughter Sam. Not for Samuel, of course. Nobody's been named Samuel since Granddad assaulted your poor daddy with side-stream smoke in his cradle. It's Sam for Samantha, which is the biggest name in females since everybody got tired of Jennifer.

I tell you all this so you'll see why none of us at the Blackbird was surprised when Butch said he had had it — "had it" were his very words — "had it with sidestream smoke," and why didn't we talk about Amy Fisher. Were we aware there hadn't been a network, made-for-TV, Sunday-night movie about Amy Fisher in more than a month!

Personally my idea of good bar talk is swapping news about how much better we feel since switching from gin and beer to white-wine spritzers, but Butch had created an opening for me to air a favorite theory of mine: to wit, that there's a lot more in a name than Shakespeare knew.

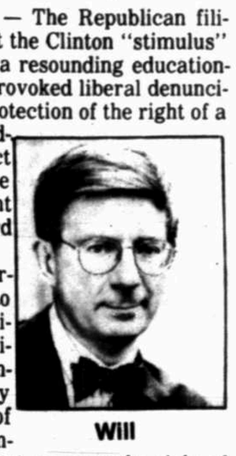

"If the body-shop guy hadn't been named Buttafuoco," I said, "everybody would have forgot Amy Fisher weeks ago. If he'd been Harold Smith, it would have been just another Long Island police-blotter item."

GEORGE WILL

Filibusters prevent passage of unwanted bills

WASHINGTON — The Republican filibuster against the Clinton "stimulus" package was a resounding educational success because it provoked liberal denunciation of the Senate's protection of the right of a minority to use extended debate to obstruct Senate action. At issue are two different stances toward government.

Will

Is efficiency, understood as the ability to implement the majority's will quickly, the primary value in government? Or is the primary value caution born of anxiety about government power, caution that respects the right of an intense minority to put sand in the gears of government?

Lloyd Cutler is a liberal critic of Senate Rule XXII that requires 60 votes to curtail debate by imposing cloture. He is a distinguished Washington lawyer, seasoned by public service (he was President Carter's counsel) that unfortunately did not inoculate him against the temptations of institutional tinkering. The tinkering he favors would facilitate the essence of the liberal agenda — more uninhibited government. For example, a decade ago he recommended various reforms to undermine what he called an "anomaly" and what the Framers considered the essence of the constitutional system — the separation of powers.

Cutler finds Rule XXII not only politically but also constitutionally objectionable.

Politieally it aggravates, he believes, the disjunction between public expectations and institutional functioning. The public expects modern presidents to formulate policies and lead Congress into supporting them. Rule XXII complicates presidents' attempts to fulfill that expectation.

Cutler's argument for the unconstitutionality of Rule XXII is:

"The text of the Constitution plainly implies that each house must take all its decisions by majority vote, except in the five expressly enumerated cases where the text itself requires a two-thirds vote: the Senate's advice and consent to a treaty, the Senate's guilty verdict on impeachments, either house expelling a member, both houses overriding a presidential veto and both houses proposing a constitutional amendment."

But the Constitution "implies" no such thing. Cutler's semantic sleight-of-hand is in the words "must take all its decisions." The Constitution provides only that, other than in the five cases, a simple majority vote shall decide the disposition by each house of business that has consequences beyond each house, such as passing legislation or confirming executive or judicial nominees. Procedural rules internal to each house are another matter. And the generation that wrote and ratified the Constitution — the generation whose actions are considered particularly illuminating concerning the meaning and spirit of the Constitution — set the Senate's permissive tradition regarding extended debate. There was something very like a filibuster in the First Congress.

Although the filibuster was often used by Southerners against civil rights legislation, liberals have repeatedly used it. When in 1957 the Senate selected from its history five outstanding senators whose portraits adorn the Reception Room, one was Wisconsin's liberal Robert La Follette (the others were Webster, Clay, Calhoun and Taft). La Follette, one of the most aggressive filibusterers, led, along with another liberal, Nebraska's George Norris, the 1917 filibuster against the arming of the U.S. merchant fleet, the filibuster that caused the Senate to adopt its first cloture rule.

Democracy is trivialized when reduced to simple majoritarianism — government by adding machine. A mature, nuanced democracy makes provision for respecting not mere numbers but also intensity of feeling. And ask yourself: Is there anything the nation has ever wanted, broadly and deeply, that a filibuster prevented the government from giving? Clinton's "stimulus" package would have passed if the country wanted it.

Cutler approvingly quotes Senator Henry Cabot Lodge saying, in 1893, in opposition to the right to filibuster, that "to vote without debating is perilous, but to debate and never vote is imbecile."

Morrow fits description for City Council at-large

As the May 1st election approaches, I find myself considering the candidates running for City Council at large. The characteristics I would like to see in a person who not only serves our community, but represents us as well are: fairness, reliability, open-mindedness and responsibility. The person who fits that description is Bill Morrow.

I have worked with Bill for more than ten years on various community projects and have found him to have all of these qualifications and more. Since he was first appointed to fill the vacancy on City Council, he has demonstrated a great willingness and put in the hard work that it takes to do what is best for Midland.

I encourage everyone to vote for Bill Morrow for City Council at large on May 1, 1993.

Candy Ebeier
Midland

Cuevas, Morrow prove they deserve support

Jose Cuevas and Bill Morrow HAVE NOT received the endorsement of the "Midland Establishment" in their effort to be re-elected to the at-large position on the Midland City Council. Both Cuevas and Morrow have demonstrated in their voting record that they deserve your support, as they do listen to critical issues that come before the council.

Pat Schneider, when elected to the position as City Council Representative from District 1, will join in supporting Cuevas, Morrow, and Egan in representing all the voters of Midland and not the select few within the establishment. I am confident that these ultra-conservative individuals will not support an increase in the sales tax or the purchase of any real estate at "bargain prices" nor support the continuation of giving free parking to a selected "establishment" group at Midland International Airport.

I urge everyone to consider the above important information when you vote.

Ed A. Vogler
Midland

Morrow uses judgment for benefit of Midland

Over the last year, I have had the opportunity to deal with City Council regarding some community development issues. I have found Midland to be fortunate to have leaders on the council who give their time, experience and sound judgment for the benefit of our city.

Bill Morrow has proven to be such a leader. He is not a part of any special interest group, but is an independent, conservative, thinker who considers the issues and acts in the best interests of Midland. His experience and positive attitude are real assets to the city.

I would urge you to evaluate these characteristics and join me in voting for Bill Morrow for Midland City Council at Large.

Jay Reynolds
Midland

Devenport understands needs, restraints of city

Local elections create problems for both the candidates and voters. Only a small percentage of the voters can know the candidates personally and candidates have difficulty communicating their qualifications to the electorate.

Both candidates for the City Council, District 1, are no doubt qualified, but I must support James Deveneport for a second term. I worked with him for seven years and know him to be a concerned conservative citizen for the 25 years that he has served Midland. His first term on the council has proven his understanding of the needs and restraints for the position. A great deal is learned during a first term in office. It would not be in our best interest to lose that experience.

Please join me in supporting James Devenport for City Council.

We need balance of state, local funding

The League of Women Voters of Midland joins statewide League support for Propositions 1 and 3 on the May 1 ballot.

School funding patterns have changed in Texas. Recently, taxes levied by the state financed the bulk of public school education. Now more than 50 percent of the funding comes from local property taxes. The problem with depending heavily on local property taxes is that inequities result. A wealthy district can raise more money for education than a poor district, even when both levy taxes at the same rate.

To correct this inequity, Proposition 1, if passed, would establish a framework for the legislature to redistribute some of the money raised by wealthy districts to poorer districts. Because the proposition would cap the redistribution at 2.75 percent of the total of state and local money spent on education, the amount of locally-raised revenue to which the state would have access would be limited.

We believe it is essential that there be a balance between state and local funding of our schools because it enables local districts to retain responsibility and local control. But as long as property taxes play a part, there must be a way of equalizing the funding they provide. We believe Proposition 1 provides the answer.

The League also urges support of Proposition 3, which would authorize the legislature to provide financial assistance for school facilities. This would help those districts with fast-growing student populations build new classrooms or renovate old ones. We are all Texans, and it is time that we make sure that all Texas schoolchildren have access to adequate education.

Jayne Krawietz, President
League of Women Voters
Midland

We'll get needed quality dedication from Morrow

I have known Bill Morrow for more than 20 years. He is one of the most dedicated persons to civic responsibilities in the giving of for use in other parts of the state. It gives the state legislature the ability to set our MISD tax rates and according to State Rep. Jerry Madden of Plano, our MISD tax rate would be expected to rise 40 cents per $100 valuation or 35 percent over the next three years.

The "Robin Hood" amendment is simply a plan to increase taxes and remove local control of our schools. It does nothing to improve education: no school improvements, no new math or reading programs, no higher standards, no teacher pay increases, only higher taxes by a state legislature that has allowed their budget to increase $20 billion or 40 percent since 1990.

We are not socialists. We need less state government and more local autonomy. Please vote against Proposition 1.

John W. Nichols

Schneider will vote for betterment of whole city

I support Pat Schneider as she knows Midland and Midlanders. She is one of us and the kind of person we need on our City Council. In these economic times, her campaign slogan is very appropriate, "If we don't have the money, we don't spend it." I urge you to vote for Pat Schneider as she will look at any issue before the City Council, investigate that issue, and vote for the betterment of the city as a whole.

We overlook the fact that a person representing one district on the City Council actually represents the entire city. Their vote affects all taxpayers within the city of Midland. Pat Schneider not only will attend to the needs of her own District 1, she will pay attention to the people and work toward the betterment of the entire city.

Brown will make right decisions for our future

Usually when we go to vote we are at the mercy of the ad men. They all sound pretty good and pretty much all alike. We vote rather blindly, praying that we make the right decisions for our future.

But this time when we go vote, we have an advantage. My household will be casting its votes for a personal friend, Dale Brown. Having known Dale for many years, we know first hand of his sincerity, dedication and fair-mindedness. We may not have anything personally against voting for one that we know, but this time we will be in the knowledge that we are making a wise decision.

If you do not know Dale Brown, we ask you to use the remaining time to get to know him. If you don't have time to do that, you can still mark the ballot by his name and feel confident that you are making a good decision.

Mr. & Mrs. Kerry Mansour
Midland

Brown will make sure Midland is good home

For over two decades, we have been privileged to call Dale Brown our dear friend. We watched Dale and his wife, Rita, raise six wonderful Christian children who exemplify the valued parental qualities of integrity, morality, citizenship and leadership.

Brown has diligently worked to develop fine examples of integrity in his family and in his business here in Midland. For over two decades, we, together with the Brown family, have called Midland "home!" Placing Brown in the position of Midland's city councilman is to insure that Midland will continue to be the outstanding community we all call "home!" Dale will tirelessly work for Midland, utilizing his integrity, his citizenship, his moral standards and his leadership for Midland!

The importance of casting your vote for Dale Brown on May 1 will be realized when he steps into the position as city councilman to serve you with the same qualities he has served his own family. A vote of Dale Brown is indeed a vote for Midland and our future together!

Bill & Cheri Hill
Midland

Pat Schneider can make worthwhile contributions

Pat Schneider's campaign slogan is "If we don't have the money, we don't spend it." I wish that all elected officials would take that position during these difficult economic times.

We have known Pat Schneider for some 33 years and she has always done a fine job in every endeavor; she is a people person and will listen to her consituents.

Her experience on the Midland Airport Advisory Board and many other community responsibilities will be a very worthwhile contribution to the City Council in all areas including the repair and maintenance of the present airport terminal.

Brown loves people, has loyalty to Midland

We would like to voice or support for Dale Brown in the City Council race. We know Dale to be a man of high integrity. He has been a successful leader in family, business and church.

Dale understands the oil and gas business and has successfully worked in it for many years. He understands the need for diversification that is compatible with the oil industry. We have seen him in action as an adept problem solver that will serve as a necessary talent in working with the money groups. Dale Brown loves people and always stops to listen. He has a strong loyalty to Midland and a hardworking personality.

We stand behind Dale all the way.

Brown has leadership abilities, positive effect

Dale Brown can make a difference for Midland! I urge your vote for Dale Brown for City Council at-large on Saturday, May 1.

As a friend, as a neighbor who cares, and as a business associate, Dale has shown me key leadership abilities that can have a positive effect on Midland's future. Dale Brown has the skills to set direction, align constituencies behind that direction, and to motivate others to implement actions that lead to timely results.

Dale has proven that he can think "big picture" and assess complex issues to set innovative direction. Midland needs this. Midland needs bolstering, but the solutions of the '80s will not work in the '90s. We must not get lost in the details that may sidetrack us...Dale Brown knows how to formulate long range plans that can have an impact now on the economy, on jobs, on sound city budget management, on crime, and on the education of our children.

But innovative direction and the best of ideas will not be realized without the ability to align diversified constituencies — citizens of all races, fellow councilmen, the mayor and the city staff. Many leaders fail to take the alignment step early on when tackling key issues. But Dale Brown does...I've seen him do it. He solicits input to understand others' perspectives so that a common solution that is inclusive can be reached. Too often, his time and talents.

As a long-term citizen of Midland, I have been appreciative of the usual dedication and quality of those persons who willingly serve our community in leadership positions. My family's well being has been enriched by their continuing efforts to improve the quality of life for all of Midland's citizens.

We will receive the needed quality and dedication from Bill Morrow by retaining him as a City Councilman at large. His involvement in a multitude of civic and business situations gives him a thorough understanding of the issues that are so important to our community. I know that he will evaluate the needs, take the appropriate action and fairly apportion the resources for the benefit of all Midlanders.

Schneider devotes time, talents to make city great

On May 1st we will be voting for Pat Schneider to represent District 1 on the City Council and urge all others in the district to join us.

It is a rare pleasure to be able to vote for an honest and effective person, who is willing and able to devote her time and talents to making Midland a great place in which to live.

Brown would provide leadership we need

My name is Paula King and I am presently a senior at Lee High School.

This letter is in regards to Dale Brown, who is a candidate for City Council at-large in the upcoming election.

I would like to say that I have known Brown for just about all of my 18 years. He and his family were members of Golf Course Road Church of Christ when our family moved to Midland. He has progressed in the church as a deacon and presently is an elder in the leadership of our church. He and Mrs. Brown have six wonderful children of various ages and have always been deeply involved with the young people of our community and our youth group.

I would like to recommend Brown to the voters of Midland as I believe that he can and will assist in providing leadership and a sense of responsibility to our City Council.

Brown's commitment to family values is asset

It is with great pleasure that I encourage the citizens of Midland to elect Dale A. Brown as City Council member at-large. Having had the opportunity to work with Dale for over eight years, I can personally attest to his integrity, honesty and dedication. His experience in the oil and gas industry along with an accounting and computer background are excellent qualities for any council member.

Dale's friendly personality and commitment to family values will be true assets for our community.

Hutchison will stand up to backroom politicians

The April 12 issue of "Newsweek" (page 5) reports that Bill Clinton's energy-tax proposal now includes a deal made last week with two senators from Eastern coal states. "Not only will coal face lighter taxes than oil, but the coal companies will have fewer burdensome tax-record-keeping responsibilities than oil." "Newsweek" further reports that the deal rewards Eastern coal states who voted for Clinton and "puts the screws to states where Clinton has little chance in 1996" like Texas and Oklahoma.

What happened to the "fairness" we heard so much about during Clinton's presidential campaign? Clinton and Al Gore touted the BTU tax's "fairness" because, they argued, it would affect all energy sources equally. That is until Clinton stacked the deck in favor of the coal interests. Clinton has exposed himself as a business-as-usual backroom politician who has placed a low value on the interests of Texans. Texas deserves better representation than this.

On May 1, we have the opportunity to remind Clinton of the political importance of Texas by electing a senator who will stand up to backroom politicians and special interests. Kay Bailey Hutchison demonstrated her strength and independence as the only statewide official to oppose a Texas state income tax, and she supports real reform in Washington. I hope that all Midlanders will join me in supporting Kay Bailey Hutchison in the May 1 senatorial election.

We should vote against potential tax increases

Just say no! Just vote no on authorization for $6 billion in new taxes for "school funding" on May 1. To vote against the first constitutional amendment offered will be to defend your home, your business, your farm or ranch or your mineral royalties against potential tax increases of 150 percent.

Your vote against the first constitutional amendment will also send a message not only to the governor and the legislature, but also to the courts that we the people will fight to defend our homes and our properties from confiscatory taxation. It will also send them the message that the constitutional amendment that is needed is one that sends all control and funding of local schools back to the localities or independent districts where it belongs, if we are to have quality in education and maintain our independence.

So it should be no on one, on May 1!

To chose amendment isn't violation of Constitution

In today's editorial endorsements for the May 1 election, you have recommended that your readers vote "No" on Proposition 1, the so-called "Robin Hood" amendment.

One of the reasons you gave was truly remarkable: Proposition 1 "violates the Texas Constitution by imposing a statewide property tax."

An amendment to the Texas Constitution, if ratified by the voters of Texas, becomes part of that Constitution. There may be many instances of contradictory provisions within the Texas Constitution, but it cannot logically violate itself.

If Texas voters approve of this amendment, they will have indicated their desire to change their Constitution. It doesn't clarify matters to call one of their legitimate choices a violation.

'Robin Hood' plan will remove local control

I am urging you to educate yourself on Proposition 1, the "Robin Hood" amendment.

The amendment legalizes the taking of our Midland Independent School District (MISD) tax dollars this is missing in government.

Key to follow through on direction is motivation of all the implementers. Dale Brown has the personal values that enable motivation — honesty, integrity, and openness. He is a strong encourager and recognizes good performance. He cares about the worth of the individual...individual like you and I who want a successful future for Midland.

Please consider Dale Brown for your city councilman.

Morrow shares abilities with entire community

We have had the privilege to know Bill Morrow since 1978 when Lynn began working under his supervision at a local law firm. Over the last 15 years we have each had numerous opportunities to work with Bill in our church, the community, and several civic and charitable organizations. We, along with many others who know him, are able to verify that Bill Morrow has exceptional talents as a leader and advisor and that he has shared them quite generously in our community.

He has always exhibited the utmost in integrity, devotion, insight, good humor, and consideration of others that all of us covet in our friends and yearn for in our public servants. Bill has always enjoyed the highest reputation and has deserved nothing less. We know of no one better suited by personality, talent, disposition, knowledge, and experience to serve on our City Council than Bill Morrow.

We believe Midland is especially fortunate to be able to select Bill as one of its council members in an at-large position. If he is elected,

Bill Morrow will continue to work conscientiously and effectively for the benefit of all the citizens of Midland

Two new candidates work to get taxes paid

I am writing to support the ideas of the two new candidates for Stanton City Council. They said that they believe this community needs to pay more attention to the needs of the young children and of the older citizens. Stanton has lots of older people, and it's a good idea to look out for the young as well as the old. We both need it.

Joe Villa and Val Sotelo are fine young men who work and pay taxes in Stanton.

I think it is wrong of any councilmember who says that a Catholic is not a Christian. It is also wrong for anyone to pretend that the organization Knights of Columbus is a "fishy" group. They are no more "fishy" than the Masons or the Lions Club or any other civic group.

Let's not sink so low that we put down a man's religion just because it is different than ours.

I have already voted for Joe and Val, and I urge you to do the same.

Brown wants to make city better place to live

On May 1 the people of this community will make our choice of candidates seeking to fill positions on the City Council.

I urge you to support and vote for Dale Brown. I have known Dale and his family for several years and know him to be a man of integrity and impeccable character. He has resided in Midland for 21 years, owning two successful businesses. He has been actively involved in his church and in numerous community affairs. Dale is the father of six and a grandfather, who will give priority to protecting our youth from the dangers of drugs. He is a certified public accountant, which will be beneficial in managing our tax dollars.

Those are only a few reasons for voting for Dale Brown, a man who desires to serve Midland on the City Council in order to make our city an even better place to live and raise our families.

Please go out and vote on May 1 for Dale Brown, city council, at-large.

Schneider will do best to meet Midland needs

Since 1959 I have known Pat Schneider. She is a very competent person to be seated on the City Council. She is a Christian, she is devoted to her family and friends. She has lived in Midland long enough to know the needs of the north, south, east and west. I firmly believe if she is elected she will do her best to meet the needs of the people of Midland. Her previous accomplishments as a volunteer in Midland will speak for her.

Proposition 2 to end passing buck practice

By Gary Willis

Gary Willis is vice president of the Midland Independent School District Board of Education.

Ever been caught in the middle? Between the rock and the hard place? As a local school trustee and fellow property taxpayer, I have experienced first hand these past two years being caught in the middle by unfunded state mandates and it is not fun. Let me explain.

In Austin and in Midland many people invest considerable talent, energy, and thought into thinking of ways in which we can improve our schools. We all want the best for our youth. When we do agree on means with which to approve public education we invariably confront a cost that must be paid to achieve the improvement. Who will pay the bill for improved schools? Often NOT the State of Texas.

For years, the Legislature has handed down rules to your Midland School Board with the legal mandate — you must do these things. Fine. What rational person would object to our Austin leaders saying do this or do that when doing so will truly benefit the education of our youth? Your Board of Education is continuously committed to improving Midland public schools.

So what is the problem? The Legislature neglects to send the money. Simply put, Austin says, "Do this." We trustees say, "With what money?" Austin replies, "That is not our problem, you figure it out." What's a poor local school board to do?

I think you know the answer. Last school year alone the Texas Association of School Boards estimates that Texas school districts spent at least $1.5 billion local tax dollars on only eight of the hundreds of unfunded state mandates handed down by lawmakers. Many of the unfunded mandates were paid for by increases in the local property tax. School trustees, like me, have been forced to turn to you, the local taxpayer, to foot the cost of rules mandated by Austin but not paid for by Austin.

Even our lawmakers realize what they have been doing — handing down school mandates without the money to pay for them. Forcing the local school board to raise local taxes to pay for state-ordered actions. Constitutional Proposition 2 on the May 1 ballot when approved by the voters will stop this terrible practice of passing the buck.

Proposition 2 prospectively allows lawmakers to tell your local school boards what to do provided the State of Texas sends the money along with the rule. If no money is sent from Austin, then the rule, regulation, or requirement is optional. I think that is the way things should be. When our lawmakers deem an action important enough for all Texas school districts to do then surely it is important enough for those same lawmakers to find the funds to pay for the required action.

Don't misunderstand me. I encourage our lawmakers to continue exploring ways to enhance the quality of Texas public education. And I believe that many legislative mandates are important. All I am asking is that the Legislature give us a way to pay for them without forcing us to raise your local property tax in order to obey the law.

There are some finer points about Proposition 2 you should know. First, it is future in application. The amendment when approved only applies to future unfunded mandates. Your Board of Education has already done all the past unfunded mandates with your local tax dollars (we had no other choice). Passage of Proposition 2 has no effect whatsoever on any past unfunded mandates including your personal favorite should you have one.

Second, future mandates without money are always optional. Unless, a super-majority of two-thirds of the legislature approves. This safeguard preserves the right of our Austin lawmakers to tell us, your local school trustees, what to do without sending money, but only when 2 out of every 3 representatives and senators vote for such a legal unfunded mandate. I think that's a fair safety provision.

As a school trustee and local taxpayer I personally encourage you to vote "yes" for all three constitutional amendments May 1. But in particular I ask as does the entire Midland ISD Board of Education that you vote "yes" on Proposition 2. Stop footing the bill for new state mandates with increases in your local property tax.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Value-added tax is bad medicine

By William Randolph Hearst Jr.
Editor in Chief, Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — My experience has been to watch out when government officials promise that a proposed new tax will be applied in a way that causes the least possible pain.

So I'm skeptical about assurances that the so-called value-added tax, if enacted into law, would be light and wouldn't be imposed on many necessities like food.

Taxes, once on the books, tend not only to stay there but to become wider in scope. I think this would especially turn out to be the case for a "hidden" levy like the value-added tax that people are rarely conscious they are paying.

During the past few months, I've devoted a couple of these columns to the issue of the value-added tax or, as it is called for short, the VAT. I thought I was done with the matter because President Clinton, after due consideration, seemed to agree with me that it was a bad idea and to have dropped it as a possible method of financing the administration's health-care reforms.

But now reports from Washington suggest that he has changed his mind and is giving the VAT another look. This has led me to return to the subject one more time, even at the risk of boring some of my readers. In my view, the issue is just too important for Americans to be ignored.

The value-added tax has existed in Western Europe, first in France and then the rest of the European Community, for the past 40 years. My informants over there tell me that everywhere it has been imposed it has led to an immediate leap in the prices ordinary people pay for practically everything. They say that thereafter it also has been a major contributor to the persistent inflation that most of Europe has suffered from — inflation much more severe than our own.

Those who are advocating a VAT for this country like to describe it as just another form of sales tax. They argue that, since we already have state and city sales taxes, a new one at the federal level would not be all that new or different.

However, Bernard D. Kaplan, who writes on international affairs for our newspapers from Paris, reminded me in a memo last week that the VAT is far more than a simple sales tax. What it really represents, he pointed out, is a wholly new philosophy of taxation, unknown up to now in America.

The VAT taxes goods at every stage of production from raw material to finished product and, then, slaps on the tax one last time to the consumer. In Europe, it has also come to be imposed on most forms of services. Electricians and plumbers are obliged to add a VAT to their bills.

The average VAT rate over there is 15 percent. In some countries and on some items, it's twice that. The first thing that European governments tend to do when they find themselves in financial straits is to hike the VAT rate and extend it to more things. The British government did just that last month.

Kaplan tells me that European bureaucrats think VAT is the greatest tax ever invented. It's virtually evasion-proof. But, more important from the government's point of view, taxpayers are usually unaware of how much value-added tax they're actually paying. Unlike our sales taxes, the amount that the VAT adds to the overall cost of a car or a box of cornflakes is never clearly specified in the final bill.

Western Europe's high production costs have increasingly handicapped its exports. Its share of world markets has been shrinking. Kaplan says a growing number of European economists put at least some of the blame for this on the inflationary pressures caused by the VAT system.

By contrast, America's well-contained inflation and relatively low-cost production have been major factors in the remarkable expansion of our exports in recent years.

A more effective and fairer system of health care for all Americans has to be created and paid for. No argument exists about that.

But it would be self-defeating, to say the least, to finance health-care reform through a form of taxation that would ultimately damage the U.S. economy. A VAT is not the right prescription. It's bad medicine.

Italian leopard doesn't change its spots

ROME — "Non cambia niente," the street vendor answered when asked what would happen now that Italians have overwhelmingly voted to reform their political system. "Nothing will change."

Gelb

His was a doleful, overly harsh and cynical judgment on this week's historic vote to cut down Italy's volatile 14-party system to about four parties and to make government more accountable, more efficient and more honest. But it was understandable among a people long plagued by massive political corruption and instability.

The referendum, coupled with the 1,500 investigations and trials under way on official thievery, will force Italian politicians to clean up their act — but probably not that much. What we have here is lots of courageous judicial theater and profound voter protest, not a revolution. For a revolution, you need revolution.

Many here would like to believe that they have revolutionized Italy's politics. But they have merely discredited the old order with little preparation for a new one. They have chopped off the heads of the old established parties without destroying the parties themselves. And they have charged ahead to reform politics with little concern for reforming policies.

"I would say this to the reformers, who have won a good victory," said Giuliano Amato, the Socialist prime minister, feet up on the coffee table in his baroque office. "Please tell me what you will do now. How will you reform the welfare state? What will be your fiscal policy?"

What bothers the talented Amato — who seems unlikely to keep his office — and other good heads here is that the new parties emerging from the righteous rubble of reform will probably be merely larger versions of the old ones, still trapped by the need to form clumsy coalitions in order to rule, and still lacking a clear sense of how to fix the nation's mounting ills.

When and if the Parliament writes new voting rules, four party coalitions are likely to enter the lists.

First and foremost will be the Christian Democrats, who have run the country for most of the last 50 years. Many of their leaders and supporters are among the more than 100 members of Parliament, bureaucrats and top industrialists now under criminal investigation for bribery. The party is discredited and lacks a policy focus, but still has steady support in the South.

Second comes the Party of the Left, mainly Socialists and moderate ex-Communists. They have a small base of workers, as well as a large share of accused criminals. They seem destined for the devastating electoral fate of their French counterparts.

Third will be the new Northern League, headed by Umberto Bossi, a fiery demagogue who preaches extreme federalism. With the backing of small and medium-sized business owners and yuppies, he wants to separate the rich North from the rest of the country. It's far from clear that he can ever win more than about 15 percent of the national vote, but he's trying to expand his base. He's clever and dangerously unpredictable.

This leaves political space for a fourth party, which its aspiring founders call the Democratic Alliance. Led very loosely by Mario Segni, a former Christian Democrat, it provided the backbone behind this week's vote.

Is it time for an oil industry summit?

Pitts

When Wayne Allen, president of Phillips Petroleum Corp. spoke to the Permian Basin Petroleum Association Thursday, he noted that the industry can no longer count on product price to bail it out, but must now look to a new way to profitability. He said the industry should look to ways to adjust the process.

Allen called it an entirely new way of looking at things. "Instead of saying 'if it ain't broke, don't fix it,' we should say, 'it ain't broke, but let's get our teams together and see what we can do to improve it.'"

In another thought about product prices, James W. Cammack, an Oklahoma geologist turned economist has identified what he calls faulty thinking that is impeding the industry.

Cammack says the U.S. oil industry has been so caught up in the gloom and doom of taxes and the price per barrel of oil that it has failed to realize that the profit level for oil companies is higher today than during the oil boom. "The true economic facts are being masked by erroneous perceptions."

Allen and Cammack were talking about entirely different things but they both were right on target about the underlying problem — there is a desparate need for new thinking in the oil industry.

Allen says: "Bring the teams together and improve it." Perhaps it is time the oil industry as a whole — independents and majors — got its teams together in an organized format to look at new ways of doing business. And to ask some pentrating questions: Why do we keep on failing at the same things decade after decade? Why don't we ever win a political battle? Why are we always swimming upstream?

Good honest open discussion and introspection at a summit level in the oil industry might serve to clear some fuzzy thinking and misconceptions from the ranks and get the industry marching in a more rewarding direction.

The Clinton administration is now talking about putting the collection point for natural gas and crude oil taxes at the wellhead for the producer to pay. On top of that, it is talking about repealing the alternative minimum tax relief granted the industry in the National Energy Policy.

If the industry has clawed its way back to near viability after the crash, these Clinton policies could wipe out all progress made since 1986 and send the industry back to the brink. That makes the need to find new boot straps with which oil producers can pull themselves up even more critical.

The fight will continue on the political front. Senator Pete Dominici of New Mexico has stated he will lead a fight in the Senate to kill the Btu tax, saying it would cost New Mexico hundreds of jobs and hundreds of millions of dollars in revenue.

But in the meantime, the independent and major oil companies of America need to create a brain trust to explore new relationships that can benefit both producer classes. If partnering can work between oil companies and vendors, it ought to work between independents and majors to find new solutions for cost-cutting and coping with government-induced problems.

Mental illness. The words themselves are disturbing, and dealing with the illness personally — or with family members diagnosed with mental disorders — can be frustrating and frightening.

"But there is hope," said Diane Richerson, a family support coordinator and therapist for Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

"There is much to be hopeful about," Ms. Richerson said. "With mental illness as a whole, we don't have all of the answers. But there are treatments and pharmacology is much better than it has been in the past."

And the problem is more common than most people might suspect. In Texas, 2.6 million people — about one in six — were diagnosed with some form of mental illness in 1991, according to the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation (TXMHMR).

However, mental illnesses can be accurately diagnosed and treated.

In honor of Mental Health Month, which begins Saturday, Ms. Richerson, and Julie Slagle, MHMR training coordinator, said they are preparing to offer "hope and education" to family members or loved ones of persons

UTPB author to help write about NASA

A Midland woman will be helping write part of NASA's history over the next three years.

Diana Olien, a senior lecturer at the University of Texas at the Permian Basin, was selected in February to serve on NASA's Historical Advisory Committee.

"NASA publishes quite a lot about what it does," Mrs. Olien said. "It generally has to do with space-related subjects and technology and the history of NASA projects such as Apollo. The historical committee deals with science and technology or the history of business." The committee, made up of eight people nationwide, is in charge of researching and deciding who gets the contracts for the books NASA publishes. Past publications have included "Inside NASA — High Technology and Organizational Change in the U.S. Space Program," and "A Spacefaring People: Perspectives on Early Spaceflight."

The committee will also work on special programs for NASA, including symposiums. With the 25th anniversary of the Apollo space program coming up next year, Mrs. Olien said the committee probably will develop a symposium

Groups celebrate Volunteer Recognition Month

Staff report

The Nonprofit Resource Center (formerly the Volunteer Center of Midland) is joining with Midland area nonprofit agencies in celebrating Volunteer Recognition Month.

The theme for this year's annual recognition celebration is "Volunteer, a Chance to Change Tomorrow," according to Laura Walker, executive director of the Nonprofit Resource Center.

This year, more than 100 community volunteers were nominated by local nonprofit organizations, and 10 volunteers were selected to receive special recognition at the sixth annual Outstanding Volunteers of the Year Awards Luncheon May 14 at the Plaza Club.

Following is a list of the recipients and the nominating agencies:

■ Big Brothers/Big Sisters High School Program; nominated by Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

■ Debbie Cockrell, Permian Basin Community Centers.

■ Michael Conaway, Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale.

■ George Dickens, Citywide Community Services.

■ Kimberlee Duff, Children's Court Appointed Special Advocate Program.

■ Doug and Cindy VanSlambrouk, Unitarian Universalist Church.

School finance may put hitch in Senate election

AUSTIN (AP) — The hurry-up special election for U.S. Senate, with appointed Democratic Sen. Bob Krueger hoping to keep the seat from 23 challengers, is a week away.

Opinion polls suggest that Krueger, a Democrat, and one of the Republican hopefuls may advance to a runoff in the first such special election in 32 years. Candidates are running hard and have raised more than $9 million in the four-month race.

But there's a hitch.

Analysts and political pros aren't quite sure how — or how much — impact the statewide school finance election that same day might have on the Senate outcome.

Ahh, it's getting to be THAT time of the year again. No, we're not talking about baseball games or backyard barbecues or even sunbathing out by the pool. No, dear readers, what we are now approaching is that marvelous American tradition known as THE FAMILY VACATION.

Tell the truth. Don't those three words bring back fond memories? Of course they do. The family vacation is a ritual we have all endured (uh, excuse me, I mean, enjoyed) for years.

This is especially true if you happen to be one of those people who is over the age of 40, or, better yet, can actually remember living in a time when there were — and I know this is difficult for you youngsters to comprehend — NON-AIR-CONDITIONED VEHICLES.

It's true. Many years ago there were members of our population — they were known as middle-class citizens — who were forced to drive their cars with the windows rolled down. As you can imagine, this was not a terribly comfortable way to travel.

As a result, the summer vacation, which was intended to be a delightful diversion from the grueling day-to-day routine, often deteriorated into brutal family wars, pitting the parents (always positioned securely in the front seat where the radio was located) against the children (who were callously relegated to the crude back seat, which, in effect, made them second-class citizens).

Indeed, what often emerged was a classic case of the bourgeoisie vs. the proletariat. And as in most class struggles, despite what Karl Marx predicted would occur, the rich got richer and the poor got poorer, or, in this case, the parents remained up front (with the radio) while the children suffered in the back.

But I digress.

We're talking about old-fashioned summer vacations here, the kind in which the entire family would pile into a car and head cross-country . . . destination, grandma's house.

The key word, of course, is "cross-country." For this to qualify as a true summer vacation, it would be absolutely essential that the trip — the actual driving part — take at least two days, and preferably to occur during the hottest time of the summer.

For those who can't remember, allow me to explain exactly how the "old-fashioned" summer vacation worked.

First, you must "turn back the clock" and think of this as 1958. It was a simple time in America. Dads worked and moms stayed home and raised the kids. Chevrolets and Fords were the most common cars on the road, and when you stopped at a "service station," some spiffy looking attendant would dash out to your vehicle and do strange things like "check the oil" and "clean the windshield."

HOPE: Center gives families support, hope

diagnosed with a mental illness.

TXMHMR's theme for Mental Health Month this year is "A Message of Hope."

"Mental illness disorders can have a terribly stressful effect on family members," Ms. Richerson said. "Education can help family members understand why they (persons with mental illness) act the way they do."

The MHMR coordinators will conduct a six-week "Coping Skills" workshop from 7-9 p.m. Tuesday nights May 4-June 8. The workshop will be offered free of charge at Friendship House, 213 E. Texas.

Workshop topics will include "Feelings: What It's Like to be Mentally Ill," "Creating a Low-Stress Atmosphere: Communication Skills," "Questions and Answers with a Doctor, and Overview of Services," "Defining the Problem: Limit Setting," "Managing Violent, Disruptive, Self-Destructive Behavior, and Stages of Accepting Illness," and "What Will Happen to Him or Her When I am No Longer Here: Separation."

Ms. Richerson said the coping workshop "will help families feel less stigmatized. The mental illness is not their fault or the patient's fault."

She said the workshop will allow participants to "develop a network of support."

Sometimes family members just need questions answered about medication side effects or understanding symptoms, Ms. Slagle said.

"Many times a consumer will say: 'The doctor said I have a chemical imbalance in my brain. He explained it, but can you explain it again,' or 'What does it mean to be clinically depressed?' "

Ms. Richerson said the workshop is intended to keep family members involved with each other, so that the person with the mental illness doesn't become isolated.

Ms. Richerson noted that persons may attend the workshop if they just suspect a family member is mentally ill. "Sometimes a mental illness will just look like bad behavior. This workshop can help people identify the behavior."

While some people with severe disorders can't be cured, she said, with some support they can become independent.

"All parents want to see their children be successful, be happy and have a good income," the family support coordinator said. "It's hard to give up that hope, and being in a support group can help them to not set such high goals."

"However, a consumer may become stable," Ms. Slagle said, "and feel strong enough for independent living or to go back to work, but they may not be confident and need a little support."

Mental illness can strike anyone anytime, according to TXMHMR. According to the state organization, some of the warning signs include:

■ Undue, prolonged anxiety. This is an anxiety out of proportion to any identifiable reason or cause. Everyone experiences problems, but a deep, continuing anxiety — a constant state of tension and fear — is a signal help is needed.

■ Prolonged or severe depression. Depression strongly affects thinking, feelings and behavior. Feelings of inadequacy, helplessness, hopelessness, undue pessimism and loss of confidence are symptoms of depression.

■ Abrupt changes in mood or behavior. These changes do not include deliberate steps a person takes for self-improvement. They refer to changes in mood or behavior that reflect serious alterations in an individual's normal habits or way of thinking. For example, the exceptionally frugal man or woman who suddenly begins gambling away large sums of money may be experiencing emotional problems.

■ Tension-caused physical symptoms. Some bodily ailments and complaints have no physical cause. Only a physician is qualified to determine whether they are caused by distress rather than physical malfunctioning.

To register for the workshop, which is being offered free of charge, call 570-3300.

colors. The paint dries before it gets to the canvas."

Despite having to move inside, Ms. Seay was pleased to be spending a Saturday afternoon demonstrating her technique.

"This is great right before Celebration of the Arts because it gets you inspired," said the watercolorist, referring to the Arts Assembly of Midland's COA the first weekend in May.

The steady stream of Midlanders who went through the museum grounds Saturday during a birthday party celebrating the 25th anniversary in the Turner House had the opportunity to view the 32nd annual Student Art Festival, sponsored by Las Manos, the museum's auxiliary organization, Midland Independent School District and the City Council PTA.

Also on display were the Green Thumb Club Table Show of place settings with a historical flavor as well as those with a party atmosphere; classic cars, ranging in age from a 1954 Oldsmobile to a 1962 Ford and including a white-on-white 1957 Thunderbird — all three convertibles, owned by members of the West Texas Cruisers; and special anniversary exhibitions as "Celebrating in Silver," which featured simple as well as elaborate silver objects and was guest-curated by Ron Huse and I. David Porras and sponsored by Flowers by Ron.

The Turner home and stables became home to the museum in 1968 when the heirs of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Turner deeded the property to Midland County for museum use. At that time, the museum moved from its temporary location in the Village Shopping Center.

The Turners, who built the mansion and stables, were horse racing enthusiasts and owned the 1959 Kentucky Derby winner, Tomy Lee. Their daughter, Dorothy Turner Scharbauer, and granddaughter, Pamela Scharbauer, own Alysheba, the 1987 Kentucky Derby winner. Another exhibit designed to go along with the anniversary theme, "Local Colors: Midland and the Kentucky Derby," includes trophies, silks, photographs and other memorabilia about these derby winners. Videos of the two races are shown in the gallery.

A birthday party isn't complete without cake. Thus, those entering and leaving the museum were invited to have cake, courtesy of Albertsons, and soft drinks, provided by Pepsico.

Kathy Shannon, a past president of Las Manos who was in charge of the day's activities, found the birthday party "windy but wonderful. I think it has brought lots of people here who wouldn't be here otherwise."

with scholars from around the world.

The committee met in March in Washington and will meet again this year at the Johnson Space Center near Houston.

"The committee will meet about twice a year," Mrs. Olien said. "We will talk over projects, make decisions on contracts, things like that."

In addition to her work with the committee, Mrs. Olien will be busy writing a new two-volume book with her husband Roger on American attitudes toward the oil business.

"We will be trying to give a historical explanation of why most Americans have a negative attitude toward the oil business," she said.

The Oliens, who have lived in Midland for 20 years, have written several books together over the past 15 years dealing with the oil business, particularly in the Permian Basin.

"We saw the whole boom-to-bust cycle," Mrs. Olien said. "I have never lived in an oil community before. It was really sad to see what happened in 1983."

The Oliens' most recent book is "Easy Money — Oil Promoters and Investors in the Jazz Age," published in 1990.

Although busy with books and research, Mrs. Olien said she is excited about her work at NASA.

"I have never worked on anything at a national level before," she said. "It should be fun and very interesting. It's a whole other area that I get to learn about."

"It's not a furnace or air conditioner?"

"So how does it heat and cool?"

We understand that a heat pump can be misunderstood. But once you know how it works, it makes good sense the year around.

In summer, the heat pump pumps heat out of your house and replaces it with cool air.

In winter, it uses the solar heat trapped in the earth's atmosphere to keep your house warm and comfortable, even on the coldest days.

Which means you save on energy, natural resources and your monthly bill.

Any more questions? Your heat pump dealer has the answers.

ARCO Jesse Owens Games put kids on the right track

Jesse Owens wasn't always an Olympic hero. He was once like a lot of today's youngsters, filled with dreams and ambition, but often missing a way to fulfill those dreams until something motivates them to achieve their goals.

Today, the ARCO Jesse Owens Games are helping put kids on the right track by giving them a way to achieve and, hopefully, the motivation to accomplish their dreams.

The ARCO Jesse Owens Games are open to boys and girls born in the years 1979 through 1986.

District Meet finalists may advance to the Regional Meet in Houston. National Meet finalists are eligible to apply for a scholarship to be used upon completion of high school. Scholarship awards are not based on athletic ability.

Midland, Texas 79708-1042

Dear Friends:

For the past 20 years, Midge and Woody Erskine have devoted much of their lives to the care of our wildlife neighbors.

Nurturing sick, injured and impaired birds to health and then releasing them in the wild is Midge's passion. Midge and Woody have done this thousands of time over, without praise and without complaint. All told, they have handled over 10,000 birds since the 1970's.

Through their work, Midge and Woody have brought distinction and honor to our community. They have been recognized nationally, regionally and locally by Good Housekeeping, Texas Monthly, The National Audubon Society, The New York Times, The Los Angeles Times and many others. The Environmental Protection Agency has honored Midge as one of 27 people "who made a difference" in preserving wildlife and protecting the environment.

Today, Midge and Woody's work is being threatened by two fellow Midlanders, who in 1991, purchased a house and land adjacent to the Erskine's five-acre Eos Wildlife Refuge at Midkiff and Golf Course Road in Midland. Although they do not occupy the home at this time, they are seeking to shut down the Eos bird rehabilitation center.

Last year in Midland's 142nd District Court, the adversarial couple filed a costly (to the Erskine's) lawsuit stemming from a boundary dispute. That lawsuit has evolved into a nuisance claim alleging that, by maintaining a wildlife preserve to "harbor" birds and other wildlife, the Erskine's are "endangering their health safety and welfare".

It also alleges the Erskine's "negligently and improperly" handle the wildlife and are violating health codes.

The couple has also filed complaints with the City of Midland Animal Control, the United States Department of Interior Fish and Wildlife Service, and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. To date, none of these agencies have found any validity to the complaints.

Midge Erskine is licensed by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service and by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The Erskine's historic windmill, one of the oldest in the city of Midland, located adjacent to their property has been removed without considering the Erskine's claim of ownership of the windmill.

The Erskines are remarkably humble and compassionate people. While both are trained as geologists, she uses her talents to care for birds and other wildlife. He works as an independent inventor for their livelihood.

Aside from donations of food for the birds, the Eos Wildlife Refuge has operated without funding from any source. Currently, they are seeking tax-free status for their refuge.

As friends of the Eos Wildlife Refuge, we are seeking your support and donations to fight this unfortunate and meritless lawsuit. Their life savings has been exhausted on litigation expenses.

We appeal for your sincere and earnest help to protect and preserve Midge and Woody's mission to aid wildlife and the environment, as well as their right to privacy. They provide valuable service and positive recognition to our community.

MC announces multiple winners in annual creative writing contest

Staff report

Marilyn Covington, and Gene Houk were multiple winners in Midland College's 19th Annual Creative Writing Contest.

Ms. Covington won first place in the short story contest for "Garage Sale" and second place in the essay contest for "Mail Call."

Houk received second place in the poetry contest for "Encounters" and third place essay for "Why I Don't Write."

A special award was presented to Midland College English faculty member and creative writing teacher Rebecca Watson. The teacher was honored for her contributions to the MC Creative Writing Program for the 17 years. Creative writing contest coordinator, Pamela Howell, and MC President David Daniel presented Ms. Watson with a commemorative plaque citing that she has "become the symbol" of the creative writing program.

Daniel applauded all of the writers who submitted entries to the contest. "A community college is an inspiring and wonderful place. It is full of philosophers, plumbers and poets," he said, "... we must forever each beyond our grasp, even to the infinite ... keep on reaching."

Other contest winners include: first place poetry, David Bays for "A Woman Was Shot Down in Floriday Today;" third place poetry, and Karen Kay Ellis for "Inside the Lines."

Honorable mentions in poetry were awarded to Nancy Calhoun for "Mirror, Mirror," and "Aggie-Gaggy Heart," to Karen Ellis for "Chain of Light," "Coffee Hour" and "Golden Pennies," to Beth Davidson for "The Unbreakable Bond" and "Life According to Irene," and to Tanya Warnick for "And Edna."

Other short story winners were Pamela Gail, second place for "Monsters;" and Nancy Calhoun, third place for "Home to the Sea."

Honorable mentions in short story were awarded to Randy J. Holmna for "Everything Has Its Place," to Pamela Gail for "Alarms," and to Ricky A. Warnick for "Missed Chances."

Other essay winners were Anne Severson, first place for "Goodbye Station Wagons." Honorable mentions in the essay competition were awarded to Bill Hollinger for "The Pit," to Robin D. Franks for "Daniel Boone" and "Through the Eyes of Six Year Old," and Gene Houk for "The Ancient Connection."

All winners received certificates. In addition, first place winners received a $60 cash prize; second place winners earned $40 and third place winners, $20.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

MC starts final week of spring semester

By H.A. Tuck

This is the final week of instruction for the spring semester, bringing both relief and anxiety as final research papers are due for many classes. Instructors are scrambling to finish their final class presentations . . . with final exams looming for all.

Tuck

The week of May 3 is Finals Week, with the last exams on Thursday, May 6, and commencement on Friday, May 7.

In order to better accommodate high school students and those from other colleges, Midland College has moved the start of its first summer term to June 8, preceded by a three-week interim session May 17-June 3. A second summer session is scheduled July 15-Aug. 19.

For employment periods of five to 20 years, 33 Midland College employees are receiving service awards Friday at Angels Stadium. The awards are being presented during a Midland College picnic at the ballpark. Nineteen persons are to receive five-year awards, nine will get 10-year awards, two will receive recognition for 15 years, and three employees will be honored for 20 years of service to MC.

If you'd like a music scholarship to attend MC, either instrumental or vocal, you must take part in auditions Thursday or Friday between 3-5 p.m. Both current and prospective students must audition, performing one or two prepared pieces and then doing sight-reading. The scholarships are for the 1993 fall semester, but may be renewed for the spring term.

Applications for scholarships must be submitted not later than Tuesday, April 27, to the Fine Arts-Communications Division office in the Allison Fine Arts Building. More information is available by calling 685-4624.

The spring concert of the Midland College Chorale and Chamber Singers is being held in the First Presbyterian Church, "A" and Texas, at 8 p.m. Thursday. Michael Jordan is the conductor and Shari Santorelli is pianist for the groups.

This concert features "minimalist music" by Canadian composer Stephen Chatman. Works by Joseph Haydn, Josquin Des Prez, and Thomas Weelkes also are on the program.

Admission is free and the public is invited.

David Alvirez, University of Texas-San Antonio, is the guest speaker for Monday's 1993 Scholarship/Recognition Banquet of the Midland College Latin American Student Society (MCLASS). The banquet is being held in the Chaparral Hall at 6:30 p.m. Monday. Tickets are $8. If you'd like to attend, call Irma Lopez, 685-4640, or Tommy Ramos, 685-4701, not later than noon. Fajitas Bravo is catering the meal.

"Sand Slam 93" is the first event scheduled in the college's new sand volleyball court near the Physical Education Building. It takes place Thursday and Friday with both recreational and "big dog" brackets. Three-person teams are invited to register for the tune-up bracket, which plays from 9 a.m.-2 p.m. or the "big dog" bracket, which plays from 2:30 p.m. until dark. Entry fee for the latter is $15 per team. There are first, second, and worst place brackets in the double elimination event.

Sign-up is with intramural coordinator Tommy Ramos. Call him at 685-4701 or 685-4544. UNIT, the campus architecture club, is sponsoring the event and was instrumental in getting the sand volleyball court approved. As their event announcement proclaims: "Last day to register is 5 p.m. Monday, 26 April 93. Practically no exceptions will probably be made."

A recent announcement that a local aircraft maintenance firm was expanding, due in part to the presence of the MC Aviation Maintenance School, was great news. College officials have been busy recently promoting the AMS, including a luncheon for regional high school counselors and an upcoming open house and luncheon for high school seniors, teachers and counselors on Friday, April 30. These are just a few of the efforts being made to get the AMS noticed ... and it's beginning to pay off.

Friday's event also features a tour of the nearby Confederate Air Force Air Heritage Museum.

Final cheerleader tryouts are being conducted from 4-6 p.m. Wednesday in the P.E. Building. Applicants have been working out for the past few weeks, learning the routines and cheers they'll be required to perform for the judges as well as a crowd of interested students.

Margaret Dierenger, the "voice of MC" as the college's daytime switchboard operator, is retiring on Friday. She has been the first contact for many persons for the past 12-plus years. We appreciate her service and wish her well in her retirement.

The Spring Student Art Show may be seen this week in the McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building. Featured are paintings, watercolors, ceramics, photography, and mixed media. The show remains on display through May 2. Hours are 1-5 p.m. today, 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday, and 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday. Some of the works may be for sale. This is the final show of the year in the gallery.

Larry Griffin has been covering lots of ground. He was in Waco two weeks ago to read poetry at the House of Poetry's annual gathering at Baylor University on April 15. On April 22 he read poetry and talked on Walt Whitman at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque.

Quinn Carroll was on a site visit team for the Join Review Committee on Education in Radiologic Technology at Pima Community College, Pima, AZ, April 11-13.

Eileen Piwetz spoke at the Texas Organization for Associate Degree Nursing's annual convention in Dallas last month.

Other than the two classes each week on Defensive Driving, only four classes remain on the Continuing Education schedule this spring.

Hunter Education starts April 26 and runs through May 6 with classes on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7-8:30 p.m. Cost is $7.

A Red Cross Nurse Aide Training Class begins May 3 and ends May 27. This class runs from 8 a.m.-1:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday at a cost of $271.

A Real Estate class is being conducted on May 8-9, Saturday and Sunday, from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Cost is $99.

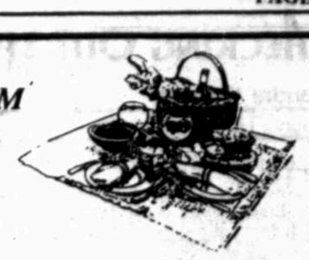

Register in the Continuing Education Office, Administration Building, or call 685-4518.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

—correction notice—

In the Sears preprint dated 4/25/93 there are errors on page 18. The $299.99 regular price of Lawn Mower #38415, promotional price of $199.99 and savings of $100 are incorrect. Regular price for this item is $179.99. Also, We should have included "Lawn Tractor Baggers Sold Separately, $229.99," We regret any inconvenience this may have caused our customers.

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARIES

Sandra Wegner
County Librarian

"Lions, and Tigers, and Books . . . Oh my!" That's the theme of the 1993 Texas Summer Reading Club for youngsters at the County libraries this year.

The downtown library may have construction, refurbishing and moving on schedule during this summer but we wouldn't want anyone to miss out on the reading fun.

Beginning Saturday, May 22, children may sign up and get their reading logs and bookmarks at the library, 301 W. Missouri, or Centennial Branch Library in Midland Park Mall. McDonalds on Andrews Highway is providing a food coupon with each sign up. (Limit one per child, of course.) Registration will continue into June.

Certificates will be awarded for ten books read after June 1. Better yet, McDonalds is giving another coupon to readers of 25 books.

Due to the downtown library being closed for a period, while we move into the new building, no summer programming has been scheduled. Exact dates of the closing have not been set.

Centennial Branch Library at Midland Park Mall will be open for business the entire summer but due to space considerations, no programming is scheduled there, either. More the pity, the downtown library is loosing its Children's Department Head. Mrs. Richards has been responsible for all programming. It may take some time to find a professional children's librarian to replace her.

The downtown library is pleased to have the new Anchor Bible Dictionary on its shelf.

This expensive set, which was a gift from a library patron, is 6 volumes with 6,000 entries written by 1,000 contributors.

A scholarly approach, but still of great value to lay persons, the new Anchor Bible Dictionary is one of the major religious publishing events of 1992.

Other new reference books on the shelves are Sweet's Catalog File for general building and renovation; The Cambridge World History of Human Disease and the 1993 AV Market Place.

The AV Market Place is one-stop shopping place for products and services connected to audio, audiovisual, computer systems, film, video and programming. If you want to create, buy or rent any of these different media, this book has companies or agencies to contact. It also has professional groups, and journals listed as well as festivals and competitions. Look for this in the downtown AV Department.

Thanks go to Pages and Print Bookstore for encouraging folks to give books to our libraries. Between now and the end of the month, you may view a wish list at their store, 40 Plaza Center, and they will arrange to get it for us. As the library has been swiftly running through its book budget for fiscal year 1993, some help would be appreciated.

The downtown library reference staff answers many questions over the telephone. Several books are kept handy at the desk for just this purpose. Among the most used are World Almanac and the two Midland city directories. Every day librarians answer inquiries as to who lives at a certain address, who has a specific telephone number and whose names are listed in the directory. A good many of these calls are local but we estimate most are from out-of-town and, some of these, out-of-state. While it is not the business of librarians to ask why people want information, it is the guess of the staff that the calls are frequently from collection agencies. It has been a long standing reference policy not to gives names and telephones numbers of people living nearby. This information has always been available to the patron in the library using the books.

Building Bulletin: If you've wondered about the building going up on the south side of the library, it will be the new home of the Midland County Historical Museum. The museum, which has endured many years in the library basement, is coming up to ground level.

ON SATURDAY MAY 1st STOP ROBIN HOOD

& STOP RUNAWAY PROPERTY TAXES

The Robin Hood Prop#1 dramaticaly increases property tax rates in more than 85% of the school districts in Texas.

The Robin Hood Prop#1 will allow the Legislature in Austin to set our local school property tax rates.

The Robin Hood Prop#1 sets the new school property tax cap at $2.50 per $100 evaluation compared to the current legal cap of $1.50.

The Robin Hood Prop#1 does nothing to improve the quality of education or to get us out of the courts, it only increases taxes.

OTT: It's time for family vacations

(From 1C)

At some point during the course of the year mom and dad would decide that "we're going to Mama and Papa's for vacation." This would not qualify as an earth-shattering announcement since you had done the exact same thing for the past 10 summers, but still, they — mom and dad — would make a big deal out of it, nonetheless. With great fanfare, dad would schedule two weeks off from his job and both parents would diligently begin saving their "loose change" to add to the "vacation fund."

Finally, following much anticipation, the big day would arrive. Because a non-air-conditioned car would be used, it would be determined — by dad, of course, the ultimate "head of the household" — that you get "an early start," meaning "we're going to be on the road by 4 a.m., whether you like it or not."

So off you would go, but only after everyone had — and I quote — "taken care of business," since there was no way dad would be stopping the car for anything as insignificant as having to — again I quote — "go to the bathroom."

Initially, it would be a pleasant journey. Mom and dad would be in the best of moods and the kids would sleep peacefully until the sun came up. At that point, fun and exciting games — such as counting the number of different license plates spotted along the highway — would be played. That might be followed by the singing of songs or the naming of state capitals.

Finally, though, patiences would wear thin, tempers would flare and insults would fly. This ugly turn of events would be made worse by the stifling heat that would permeate throughout the non-air-conditioned car. (NOTE: It has been scientifically proven that the more a person sweats in tight quarters, the more likely he is to kill a loved one).

As the day would progress, the situation would worsen, not unlike a tense hostage confrontation that could take a tragic turn for the worse at any moment. By the time the afternoon would arrive, everyone would hate everyone. The kids would be "goosing" each other in the back seat and even mom and dad would be getting dangerously close to "snapping" at one another up front.

The tension would build, almost like a volcano about to erupt. The noise would get louder and louder as the nerves became more frazzled. Hatred filled the car.

Then it would happen.

Dad would be able to take it no longer. With the car barreling down the two-lane highway at 75 miles per hour, he would turn to the kids in the back seat, point menacingly and in his best Clint Eastwood voice say: "If I have to stop this car, YOU'RE going to be sorry."

It would work. There would be total silence . . . for, oh, a good 15 minutes.

Then the roar would begin to build again. The anger, the tension, the confrontations. It would all return. Over and over and over and over.

Gee, for the life of me I can't understand why more families don't take summer vacations together.

VOTE: Education may complicate Senate election

which would allow redistribution of some local property tax money from rich to poor school districts, was placed on the ballot by a Legislature anxious to meet a court-ordered June 1 deadline for school funding reform.

The proposition — and Krueger — are endorsed by the State Democratic Executive Committee.

The Texas GOP opposes the amendment and opted to remain neutral as three of its officeholders duke it out in the Senate contest.

"It's a unique situation," said Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party. "I think people have a lot of thoughts on what the amendment's impact is going to be. I don't know that any of them are conclusive."

State Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland, who heads the House Republican Caucus, believes the Democratic-controlled Legislature chose May 1 for the school finance vote to boost turnout for Krueger.

"Polls show there's more interest in the school amendments than in the senatorial race," Craddick said. "They think it's going to help their turnout."

The last Senate special election occurred in 1961, to fill the seat vacated by newly elected Vice President Lyndon Johnson. John Tower's ultimate victory in a 71-candidate field made him Texas' first Republican senator since Reconstruction.

MC to hold Animal Health, Appreciation Day

Staff report

Pets provide companionship, love, even assistance. In recognition of what pets add to the lives of humans, Midland College's Veterinary Technology Program is holding an Animal Health and Appreciation Day on Saturday, May 8, in conjunction with National Pet Week.

The special day of activities is being held at the Midland County Extension Building, 2445 East Highway 80, from 10 a.m.6- p.m. Admission is free for pets and their humans.

"Our goal is to help residents understand animal health issues, as well as the many roles which they animals play," said Steve Betton, DVM, program director.

He noted that pets frequently hide their illnesses, which make annual check-ups vital. Veterinarians can detect illnesses early, then inform owners how to minimize potential health risks throughout the year.

Special features include a "pet and owner look-alike contest," pet trick contest, and ugliest dog contest. Cats also have a photo contest. A special "Picture With Your Pet" service also is being offered for $3.

Hourly drawings offer chances for free veterinary services and animal products.

Veterinary Technology Program students Kathy Parker and Cindy Hardee are coordinating the program as well as the numerous suppliers and demonstrators who will be on hand throughout the day.

Demonstrations include the 4-H Club showing grooming, nutrition and basic health care for both large and small animals; the Permian Basin Obedience Training Club showing dog behavioral training methods; and Aquariums and More explaining proper aquarium care and also showing reptiles. The Abilene Zoo is presenting a slide show.

There will be booths for the following: Midland College Veterinary Technology Program; IAMS Pet Food, Texas Parks & Wildlife Department, Vet Kem Company, Midland Animal Control Shelter, Midland County Sheriff's Department K-9 Unit, Merck Ag Vet Division, Ciba Geigy, Sheep and Goat Raisers Association, Purina Mills, B. Dalton Bookstore, S.P.C.A., plus several local veterinarians.

Art displays include those from elementary students, posters on pets from the Midland College Child Development Center, and Casa de Amigos.

BEALLS IN MIDLAND PARK MALL GETS MAJOR RENOVATION

The excitement is happening now as Bealls makes a major commitment to the Midland area.

Bealls believes in Midland! That's why Bealls in Midland Park Mall is getting a great new look. Warm, sophisticated colors, leading into departments with plush new carpeting. It's been done just for you--to make every trip to Bealls a pleasant and enjoyable experience.

Scott Zetak, store manager, welcomes customers from the service center in the middle of the store.

"Midland is our kind of hometown," says Scott Zetak, Store Manager, "it's a friendly, family-oriented community, and we're making the commitment to give our customers the nicest shopping environment and the best service to be found anywhere."

Come see the difference! Everything is fresh and colorful, and we've created exciting new ways to display the newest fashions...the ones you'll want to have! And, we've put down a center core of rich, plush color-coordinated carpeting. Plus, we've added sparkling new cosmetic and fashion accessory cases, accented with soft pastel porcelain laminate. We haven't forgotten handbags and earrings. There are new racks to display all the new summer handbags. Plus, display towers to hold all the newest earrings. And, of course, many of our fixtures are from Texas display contractors because we like to spend our money where we have our stores--right here in Texas!

It' ready today...just for you! All the excitement and glamour of a new store, with all the friendly faces and warm "Hellos" you've come to expect from Bealls.

LEGAL NOTICE

The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, serving as the Metropolitan Planning Organization for the Midland-Odessa Regional Transportation Study (MORTS), will conduct a public hearing to discuss the 1994-1996 Transportation Improvement Program (TIP).

The 1994-1996 Transportation Improvement Program is a three-year plan that has been developed in cooperation with the Texas Department of Transportation, the Cities of Midland and Odessa, Ector and Midland Counties. The TIP includes the following:

1. A priority list of projects and project segments that will be carried out within the 3-year period in the Midland-Odessa urbanized area, and

2. A financial plan that demonstrates how the TIP can be implemented, indicates resources from public and private (if any) sources that are reasonable expected to be made available to carry out the plan, and recommends any innovative financing techniques to finance needed projects and programs.

The public hearing will be held on Monday, May 10, 1993 at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission offices located at 2910 LaForce Boulevard, Midland International Airport. The hearing will begin at 3:00 p.m.

A ten day comment period will permit interested persons to submit written comments to Mr. Ernie Crawford, Executive Director, Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, P.O. Box 60660, Midland, Texas 79711-0660 (Fax #5631728). All comments must be received in the PBRPC offices no later than 12:00 Noon, May 21, 1993.

The TIP can be reviewed during business hours beginning April 26 through May 10, 1993 at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission 2910 LaForce Boulevard, Midland International Airport or the District Office of the Texas Department of Transportation, 3901 East U.S. Highway 80 (BI 20-E) Odessa.

Custom Designs

by Jerry Young

Text by Sherry Freeman

Cover Design By Mark Stroker

Photography by Brian Adamcik

Building a dream home is a step by step process that requires a lot of time and attention to detail. Jerry Young Builders builds each home from scratch beginning with the original architecture plans.

No two families are alike -- and neither are any two Jerry Young homes. The plan can originate from a magazine picture, a childhood dream or a floorplan idea -- Jerry Young's inhouse architect custom designs original floorplans for every homebuyer.

"It's a lot of fun seeing it come together," said Jerry Young, president of Jerry Young Builders. "We work real hard trying to design our houses so they are completely unique." And Jerry Young Builders makes building a custom home a fun process by allowing the homebuyers to take part in the original floorplans. Then, the builder, architect and homebuyer work together to custom design every detail of the home.

"Jerry Young Builders teams up with the homebuyer and creates a home around their personality and lifestyle," said Marilyn Wier of Remax Realty of Midland. "The cost is minimal compared to going to an architect."

Young, who has been in the building business for 18 years, started building custom homes in 1984. Teaming up with Gary Wilson, an architect of 20 years, Young has built homes in Greentree, Saddle Club East, Preston Oaks and Mission Dorado.

His most recent development in Mission Dorado, the prestigious country club estate with a champion links golf course, has included several pre-designed floorplans to give homebuyers an opportunity to view the quality of construction and innovative designs available through Jerry Young Builders.

The home located at 69 Augustine Ct. features some of the standardized luxury features available in a Jerry Young home.

"I try to design a lot of movement with different ceiling treatments," Young Said.

Seven original ceiling elevations, including the cathedral ceiling in the living room, allow the light from numerous windows to flow evenly throughout the open design.

Wier, who is listing Jerry Young home s in Mission Dorado said, "brick front porches with flowerbeds around the entry give his homes a unique look."

He usually has a jacuzzi tub in the master bath with lots of mirrors," she added. "The appliance garages are a unique feature in the kitchen that I haven't seen another builder use."

Other luxury features include kitchen islands, security systems and two zones of heat.

Wier will hold open house at 69 Augustine Ct. from 2 to 4 p.m. today.

Please call Marilyn Wier at 682-8820 or 570-7653 for information about this and other Jerry Young homes in Mission Dorado.

The quality of a Jerry Young custom home is timeless and can be built anywhere the buyer wants to live. Young said he builds homes "just like we were going to move into them ourselves.

"We don't cut corners," he added, "20 years from now, our homes will still look as good as when they were first built."

Langston Realtors Talk About . . .

New Builders' Showcase a big hit

The formal opening of Langston Realtors Builders' Showcase last weekend was a big hit with both builders and the public. Approximately 100 attended the private preview party Saturday evening, 50 to 60 families dropped by the Grand Opening festivities Sunday afternoon, and the Builders' Showcase Parade of Homes attracted 15 to 35 groups to view each property.

Joanne Langston

"We were thrilled with the support of the builders and of the community", Joanne Langston, President of Langston Realtors said. She explained that the showcase was created to fill several needs. "For home buyers it is a 'one stop shopping center' where they can consider all of the aspects of buying or building a new home! Properties already under construction, lot availability, information on new construction neighborhoods, information on most of the city's finest builders and examples of their homes are available. As one visitor Sunday afternoon remarked 'This is really a clearing house for builders!'"

"For the Builder, the Showcase is a new and unique opportunity to market his qualifications, his properties, and his services not only to buyers but also to our large staff of 45 Realtors. The more we know about each Builder, the more successful we are in assisting him in the sales of his homes and custom building or remodeling services," Langston added.

"An important and necessary benefit of the Showcase for our own agents is that it identifies other options for their customers. Contracts in our office are up 22% over last year while properties for sale through the Multiple Listing Service are down 15% , one of the reasons we created the Showcase was to solve our need for additional inventory to offer to our expanding customer base," Langston said.

"One of the highlights of the Showcase is our publication "So You Want to Build a New Home' presenting information on most aspects of buying or building a new home. We wrote this from our own experiences and hope it will answer a lot of questions for our customers. Free copies are available at the Showcase," Langston said.

The Builders' Showcase is located at Langston Realtors North office in the Colonnade, Loop 250 & Garfield. It is open 8:30 to 5:30 weekdays, 9 to 5 Saturday, and 1 to 5 Sunday. "An additional Showcase will be installed in our Wall Street office soon," Langston said.

"We've spaces for six additional builders and have already had requests from two," Langston stated. "The initial group invited to participate consisted of builders whose homes we had sold or listed within the past year. We were honored that all but three compiled the information necessary to participate," she added.

Your home must sell itself

By Vicky Garrett
Chaparral Realtors

An attractive home, well-maintained and sparkling clean is most appealing to your potential buyers. The following checklist covers those items that influence a buyer most.

First Impression - Outside a pleasing exterior appearance is essential for that critical first impression.

These simple suggestions will help "show off" your property to its best advantage.

*Trim the lawn and keep it green. Shape up the shrubs and weed the flower beds.
* Clear the entry by keeping walks free of toys, bicycles, garden tools, leaves and other hazards.
* Brighten the structure with a fresh coat of paint or just a good cleaning. Replace screens if they are rusted or torn. Remove mildew or moss from walls or sidewalks with bleach and water or a commercial cleaner.
*Add charm with flowers along the entry walk, in a pot by the door or in cheerful window boxes.
*Rid the driveway of grease and stains with kitty litter or a chemical solvent.
*Pick up all pet droppings and debris.
*Tidy up the garage and show off its size. Get rid of everything you don't want to move.

Invitation Inside. Thing of prospective buyers as your guests and prepare the inside of your house accordingly. Here are some points to keep in mid.

*Perk up rooms with fresh paint. A modest investment in time and money can possibly add dollars to your final selling price. Sometimes just a touch up will do. Choose light neutral colors for greatest appeal.
*Clean up clutter for appearance and safety's sake. Pay special attention to stairways, halls and children's rooms.
*Go on a kitchen campaign and keep it especially clean. The sink should always be clean and free of dirty dishes. Counter tops appear more spacious when clean and uncluttered. Freshly mopped floors and baseboards can help "show off" your kitchen area.
*Make bathrooms sparkle by cleaning tile and porcelain. Commercial cleaners or vinegar will remove unsightly hard water stains. Replace any loose caulking or grout and, while you're at it, fix any dripping faucets.
*Wash all windows and keep curtains and drapes crisp and clean. Vacuum blinds and wash window sills.
*Clear out closets to make them appear roomier. Add extra space by pre-packing out-of-season clothing.
*Clean the fireplace and make a cozy, crackling fire. Or, dress it up with green plants or dried flowers.
*Roll out the welcome mat with a rough-textured doormat. It will help keep your floors and carpets cleaner during showings. And it says you care about your home.
*Eliminate odors by preventing them in the first place. Try to avoid cooking with cabbage, onions and garlic. Many people associate strong, spicy odors with uncleanliness. Freshen the entire kitchen by sending a lemon through the garbage disposal. Sweeten the refrigerator with a box of baking soda.
*Add special accents that make your house appear comfortable and inviting. An open cookbook on t he counter, cut flowers in a vase, cookies or bread baking in the oven. Don't overdo, but think about things hoy have seen in attractive model homes that might subconsciously influence potential buyers.

Extra Efforts.
Empty out the attic to display the full value of this much appreciated but often neglected storage space.
*Drain sediment from your water heater to eliminate any rusty water flowing from hot water taps.
*Breeze through the patio and remove unnecessary lawn furniture, hoses, sprinklers and garden tools to make the yard look more expansive. If you have a pool or jacuzzi, give it a thorough scrubbing and place a few pots of blooming plants nearby.
*Hide debris in neatly covered trash cans.
*Treat pets to a stroll while your house if being shown. Many people are afraid or allergic to animals. By removing them, buyers won't feel hurried or nervous.
*Turn off television or radio. Potential buyers can look at your house quietly and without distraction.

Liberty, Justice and Fair Housing for all

April is Fair Housing Month, and the 23rd Anniversary of Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, otherwise known as the Federal Fair Housing Law.

While Title VIII is 23 years old this April, the concept that all persons are entitled to equal protection of the law actually derives from the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution passed after the Civil War. Unfortunately, the guarantees of the Fourteenth Amendment were severely restricted for over 100 years by Supreme Court interpretations that approved of "separate but equal schools and other public accommodations, and that sanctioned racial discrimination by private employers and property owners.

In 1968, Congress made clear once and for all that discrimination in housing based upon national origin is against the law. In 1974, Congress also prohibited discrimination based on sex. The Midland Association of REALTORS, Inc., supports Title VIII and the principles it embodies.

According to Kay Sutton, president of the Midland Association of REALTORS, Inc., "Housing discrimination is an insult to the dignity of all Americans. The time has long since passed when a person's qualifications to own or rent property depend upon the color of their skin, their religion, their sex or their national origin."

Kay Sutton

Recognizing that the enforcement of Title VIII had not been adequate, Congress amended Title VIII in 1988 to prohibit discrimination against handicapped persons and families with children, and to authorize the Federal Government to bring cases against persons accused of discriminatory housing practices. The National Association of Realtors supported enactment of these amendments as part of its continuing commitment to equal housing opportunity.

"We are committed to making the fair housing laws work for all residents of this community," said Sutton. The Midland Association of REALTORS, Inc. is proud to support liberty, jus-

Poisonous outdoor plants -- landscaping liabilities

Spring has sprung! Birds are singing, flowers and trees are blooming, yard work is being done and that could mean danger for homeowners. DANGER!?!?

You may not have ever thought about it, but some of the plants and trees used in landscaping to beautify your home, are poisonous.

Plants add aesthetic and financial value to your investment, so don't run out and pull up all your shrubs, flowers and trees! As you prepare to buy or sell a home use some precautions in beautifying your yard.

About 700 kinds of poisonous plants grow in the United States. Many look or smell disagreeable and so people and animals naturally avoid them. But even such familiar garden plants as oleanders are extremely poisonous. Some people have died from eating meat roasted on an oleander stick.

Many have been killed by eating poisonous mushrooms, which cannot easily be distinguished from the edible species.

Not all poisonous plants do their harm by being eaten. Some, such as poison ivy and poison sumac irritate the skin or eyes, so protect yourself by not getting too close.

Please make not only your family aware of poisonous plants, but friends and neighbors, too, especially small children, for their protection. In case of possible plant poisoning, a physician or a poison control center should be called immediately.

Your home is your most valuable asset so don't feel you have to deprive yourself or your neighbors of the beauty and fragrance of any of these plants and their blossoms. The additional knowledge just informs you that it's okay for your sense of sight and smell to appreciate the blooms, just not your sense of taste!

Information provided by Re/Max of Midland

Some of the poisonous plants you might encounter are:

PLANT	POISONOUS PART
Azalea	Entire Plant
Chinaberry	Berries
Hyacinth	Bulbs
Mistletoe	Berries
Narcissus	Bulbs
Oleander	Entire Plant
Rhododendron	Entire Plant

REAL ESTATE Q&A

Q What home improvements can I make to speed up the sale of my home?

A According to a nationwide survey, improvements that are helpful in cutting sales time include skylight and deck additions, new roofs and upgraded landscaping.

In tight markets, where home sales are sluggish, an improvement that reduces selling time is very often worth the expenditure.

Whether undertaking some or all of a project yourself, it is important to follow safety precautions and building codes and to select outside contractors with care.

When buying or selling a home, for advice on property improvements or other real estate matters, be sure to contact a real estate agent who is a REALTOR®.

DELIVERY

MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subsribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday-Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or a family member to substitute a for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!

BRIEFING

Pipeline bought

USX-Delhi Group Inc. announces that Delhi Gas Pipeline Corp. has acquired the Lockridge Gas Gathering System in West Texas from Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America. The purchase price was not disclosed.

The Lockridge System is located in Pecos, Reeves and Ward counties and consists of 65 miles of 4- to 24-inch diameter pipelines and related compression facilities.

In conjunction with the acquisition, Delhi and NGPL have agreed to establish a new pipeline interconnectio in West Texas.

Falling rigs

Frost forms on a Nowsco nitrogen rig, during a recent completion.

Both the U.S. and Permian Basin rig counts declined during the week ended April 16, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

The company reported that the Permian Basin rig count slipped four to 97, falling below 100 for the first time since mid-October 1992. Still, the count remains above the year-ago lovel of 85.

Nationally, the tally was 603, down 12 from the previous week. A year earlier the count was 639.

Laguna payment

B&E Inc. has announced payment of their $25,000 settlement with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

B&E does not admit any wrongdoing, however, since their salt water discharging facility at Laguna Quatro in Carlsbad, N.M. legally complied with both state and federal permits.

One of tho: › permits was issued by the New Mexico Oil Conservation Division after a study concluded the disposal of produced water would not significantly impact the playas. That permit has never been revoked. In addition, B&E's discharges were authorized by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

Prices yo-yo

Oil prices this week performed like a Rotaflex unit above was prices went up and down.

Contracts for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate on the New York Mercantile Exchange expired on a weak note this past week, falling below the $20 level and ending at $19.84 per barrel.

June contracts, however, opened on a strong note on reports from the American Petroleum Institute that U.S. crude supplies had fallen over 10 million barrels during the previous week.

Natural gas contracts continued to gain strength amid reports of low storage levels of gas. May contracts for natural gas climbed to $2.645 late in the week.

The MI Drilling Fluids cooking team will once again be designated brisket cookers at PBPA Blowout.

Plans for Energy Week set

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

Leading the guest list for the Permian Basin Petroleum Association's seventh annual Energy Appreciation Week is Texas Railroad Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers.

The week is scheduled for May 2-8.

"Energy Appreciation Week was established about seven years ago," said Richard Folger, chairman of this year's celebration. "It has a couple of purposes. One, it gives everybody an opportunity to share with folks in the industry the various events, which include speakers, a golf tournament and the Blow Out. It gives a sense of appreciation for an industry that has been good for the Midland community, and it gives folks in the industry an opportunity to put on something fun for the industry."

He added that "The goal is to get everybody together and allow them an opportunity to have some fun and to associate with each other outside normal business. The fact of the matter is we have an industry that is spread out over West Texas and southeastern New Mexico and has been around a great number of years and there's an enormous amount of people that have contributed so much to the industry that for a lot of them this is an opportunity for them to get together with people in the industry that they've known and just have some fun."

He noted that a lot of people in the industry only see each other maybe once a year or at specific events such as seminars. "This is just to have fun and to let the various communities get together and enjoy each other."

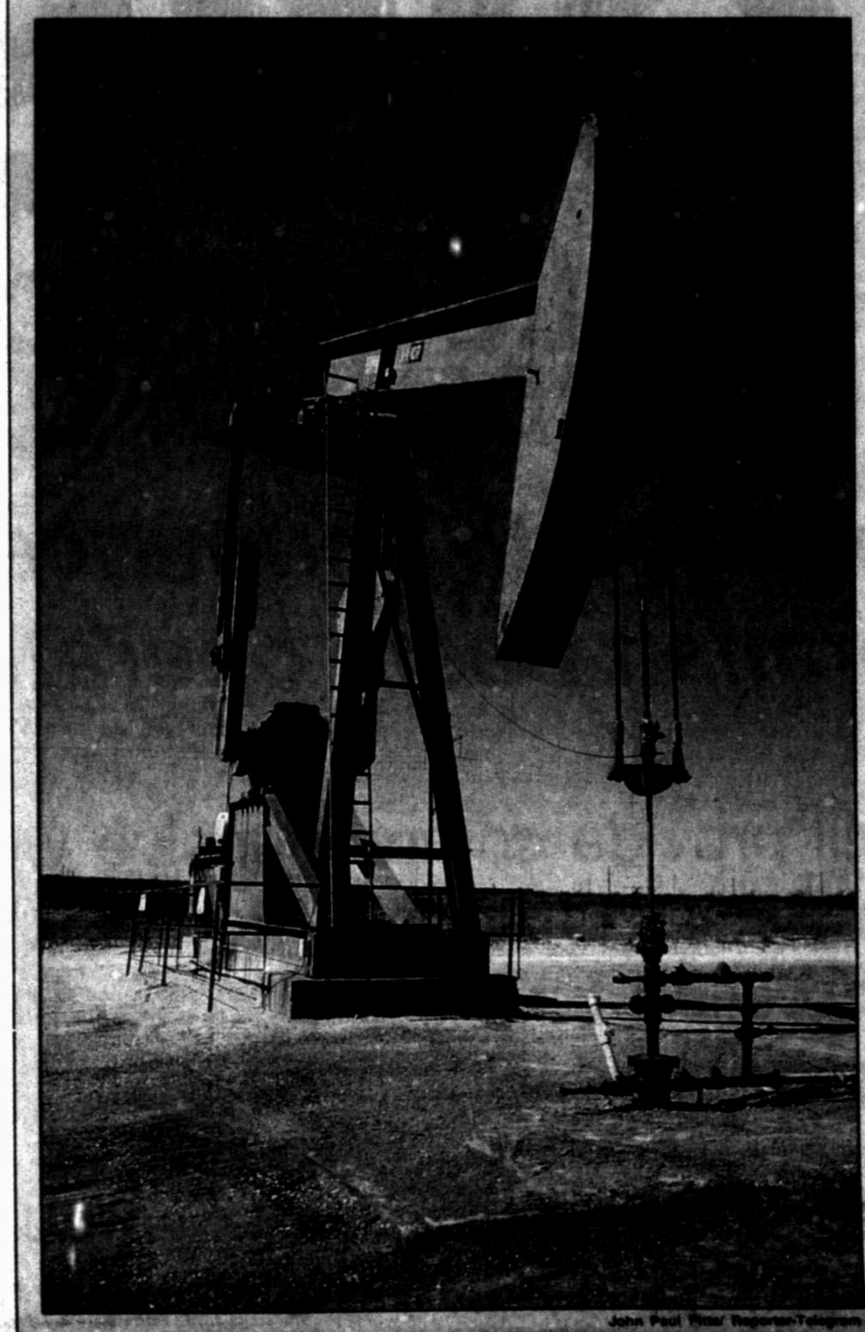

The week gets underway Sunday, May 2 with services at the church of choice. An exhibit on "State of the Art" will also open Sunday at the Petroleum Museum at 2 p.m. It will be open the remainder of the week, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Monday, May 3 brings the sixth annual PBPA Golf Tournament, which is already sold out. This four-man scramble, with shotgun starts at 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. will be held at Mission Dorado Country Club.

Folger noted that the golf tournament started out several years ago as a way "for everyone to get together for an afternoon. It got so big that we had to expand it to morning and afternoon sessions. This is the first year both sessions have been filled; we've had to turn some folks down."

The next day, the PBPA will host an oilfield safety seminar covering OSHA

New lessons about carbonate fields similar to the Mabee San Andres, above, will be learned from DOE research projects.

Projects produce new tools

■ DOE projects will provide majors and independents with new production technology.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

The Permian Basin assumed a major role in energy research this week when the Department of Energy awarded five oil companies grants for $28.6 million to pursue studies in the Grayburg and San Andres formations.

Shallow carbonate reservoirs, of which there are 382 in 14 states, are expected to be a major factor in studies to prevent premature abandonment of wells and Texas and the Permian Basin will be major factors in the studies. Texas has 228 of the reservoirs, with the biggest majority being in the Permian Basin.

The exact number is not know, but it would probably be safe to assume that the Permian Basin of Texas and New Mexico have more shallow carbonate reservoirs than the other 12 states combined.

Such research is critical to the Basin and the domestic oil industry because of the increasing level of well abandonments.

If oil prices continue at the current $20 level until 1995, the percent of the remaining oil in place that will be abandoned will go from near 50 percent to near 60 percent, according to the Department of Energy (DOE).

Basin lands mid-term projects

■ Mid-term carbonate projects will provide bigger reservoir picture.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

The Department of Energy awarded 11 grants this week for studies in shallow carbonate reservoirs and the Permian Basin wound up with five of them, totaling $28.6 million.

While the Permian Basin landed only two of eight near term carbonate projects, it was successful in landing all three of the mid-term projects awarded by the Department of Energy.

The "near-term" projects are designed to demonstrate conventional or improved techniques that can be used within the next five years were in the Permian Basin. While "mid-term" projects are longer term, demonstrate more advanced technologies, and provide a bigger picture of reservoir complexities.

These three higher-priced projects which will be in the public domain, may not provide immediate technology but hopefully they will provide operators of the Permian Basin valuable reservoir information for designing secondary and tertiary projects in the San Andres as fields undergo secondary and tertiary recovery further down the road. Under intense scrutiny will be techniques for achieving better sweep in formations.

The three mid-term projects in the Permian Basin include:

■ A 60-month comprehensive reservoir study project in Gaines County near Seminole.

The $20.25 million project by Fina Oil & Chemical Co. of Midland will combine advanced well logging techniques, special core analysis, geo-statistical analyses, crosswell tomography, and reservoir simulation models to develop a better understanding of the characteristics of the North Robertson Clearfork Unit in the Permian Basin. The company hopes to choose the best sites for up to 18 new infill wells and to recomplete existing wells.

DOE will pay $8.79 million of the cost of the project.

■ A long term, $20.16 million huff-n-puff project by Oxy U.S.A. Inc., Midland, near Welch in Dawson County will get the highest grant of $10 million.

The proposed project will analyze existing log and core data in addition to new information to be obtained from crosswell tomography and 3-D seismic surveys and other techniques to design a carbon dioxide "huff 'n' puff" operation in the San Andres formation in the Texas Permian Basin.

Once this is done, operators plan to inject water under high pressure to create fractures and then inject water and carbon dioxide alternately (WAG) into the reservoir to move oil to producing wells.

■ Phillips Petroleum Co., has an 84-month project, that could provide valuable information about the role of horizontal drilling in San Andres fields.

Clinton should rerun research numbers

Pitts

When DOE announced this week that five local producers would share in $28.6 million grant money for energy research in the Permian Basin, it was a good thing — one of the few good things government has done for the oil industry in a long while.

But as so often is the case with "good" things coming to the oilpatch from the federal government, it is a question of "too little, too late."

Good lessons in how to produce more oil and gas in America will come from these research projects, but they should have come long ago. It has now been nearly four long foot-dragging years since these projects were first proposed during the early years of the Bush administration.

"This is an extremely valuable program to the nation," said Secretary of Energy Hazel O'Leary. "It helps us back away from foreign sources of oil by investing in our own domestic production. It preserves jobs in the United States and contributes to a more favorable trade balance."

O'Leary says the abandonment of wells in the U.S. has become so critical that DOE now plans to open two new reservoir categories per year, instead of just one as originally planned. But accelerating funding is not the same as increasing funding.

The question then is if these programs will work as well as everyone knows they will. And, if they are so valuable, why just a paltry $40 million. As federal budgets go and federal funding goes, that is a drop in the bucket, a pittance, a token, a bone.

Oil and gas now accounts for 40 percent of the trade deficit. So why is coal getting $550 million for research — compared to $40 for oil?

A total of 44 applications, totaling $450 million, were submitted to DOE for shallow carbonate studies, and as one DOE official commented: "They were all good proposals." Then why not designate $450 million for shallow carbonate studies?

If the technology gleened from these shallow carbonate projects is able to result in the addition of 7.5 billion barrels of recoverable crude oil being added to the nation's reserves, as most expect it will, then backing out 7.5 billion barrels of imported oil for $40 million has to be one of the best bargains a federal buck can buy.

In March, for the second consecutive month, there was a major surge in oil imports and a corresponding drop in U.S. production. For the first quarter of the year total imports were 13.4 percent above last year, while domestic production was down 5 percent from last year. The gap between domestic production and foreign imports is reaching crisis level.

Nothing, except for unneeded government spending, is as damaging to the U.S. economy or exports as many American jobs overseas as foreign oil imports. Barrels of crude oil produced elsewhere in the world mean jobs elsewhere and not in America.

The equation is simple: More and better technology equals more U.S.oil production. More oil production equals more American jobs. As oil imports increase, U.S. jobs decline. It

RESEARCH: Creates public technology

(From 1E)

"The purpose of the research," says Jack Siegal, deputy secretary of energy for fossil fuel, "is to prevent premature abandonment of oil wells. Abandonment is more severe than shutting-in a well."

Siegal said the key word was access — to keep the option to produce the well open. To the end that knowledge and technology can help keep wells economical for longer periods of time, the DOE research incentives will work.

The beauty of the program, Siegal says, is that it puts valuable technology into the public domain. Operators who participate in the program will be required to divulge all information about the project though seminars and publications. Expected to play a role in the transfer of knowledge is the Center for Energy and Economic Develolpment (CEED), who will assist with seminars and publications.

Once the knowledge is put into the public domain, it will become a catalyst to help other operators recover more oil.

Two near-term projects that are expected to bring new production technology to Permian Basin operators are Laguna Petroleum Corp.'s 42 month project to characterize shallow carbonate reservoirs using 3-D seismic, and Texaco's huff-n-puff demonstration project in New Mexico.

Laguna's project will be one of the first attempts to use high resolution 3-D in a carbonate reservoir, and if successful, will save operators millions of dollars in dry holes, while putting more oil in the tanks.

"We will try and delineate sweet spots or porosity stringers in the reservoir," said Hoxie Smith, project engineer for Dawson Geophysical, who will participate in the project. "If we can tell an operator where to drill or not to drill a vertical well, we can save him hundreds of thousands of dollars. This information will be in the public domain."

He said the project, which will be conducted in the Grayburg-San Andres formations of the Foster and South Cowden fields, would be especially helpful in helping operators determine the best location for infill wells in a waterflood.

"We hope to be able to delineate permeability barriers that will enable operators to better design their floods. This technology will have widespread application throughout the Permian Basin." He said some operators might choose to drill horizonally to intersect porosity stringers.

In the second near term project selected by DOE, Texaco will launch a 49 month project to demonstrate the feasibility of the huff-n-puff carbon dioxide recovery technique in the carbonate reservoirs of the Permian Basin. It is a technique that could help many small, independent operators recover more oil from small and isolated fields.

The project which will be tried in the Central Vacuum field of Lea County, 22 miles west of Hobbs, will be one of the first huff-n-puff trials in a carbonate reservoir.

"There may have been other projects, but if there were they are not sharing the information. Information from this project, however, will be in the public domain," said Scott Wehner, Texaco project engineer who wrote the proposal for the DOE grant.

He said the project was unique because it was a carbonate in a waterflood.

"This is a technique that is normally applied to pressure depleted reservoirs in sandstone formations," said Wehner. The technique was first tried with steam, and in recent years was used in sandstone reservoirs along the Gulf Coast.

He said Texaco hoped to show that huff-n-puff cold become a viable technique for small independents unable to afford a full tertiary project in small fields and that it could become an up-front investment that would allow immediate cash flow from a declining waterflood.

"We see it as a means to eliminate negative cash flow periods between waterfloods and tertiary projects," Wehner said, noting that the Petroleum Recovery Research Center at New Mexico School of Mines at Socorro would assist the the project by analyzing and desiminating technology to the public domain.

The plans call for Texaco to inject CO_2 at an inefficient manner so that the gas by-passes oil to get to the other side where it will undergo a soak period that will swell the oil, pushing it out of dead end porosity zones and into production channels. Also, by pushing the water back into the reservoir with CO_2, Texaco expects to show that the technique can reduce the amount of produced water and lifting costs.

While the huff-n-puff is a near wellbore technique that does not normally affect more than 150 feet out from the wellbore, Wehner says it is a relatively inexpensive process that could be used by independents and majors in select wells and smaller fields that would not justify a full tertiary project.

He said if the technique gets wide acceptance it could add 400 million barrels of additional recovery of stock tank barrels throughout the Basin.

"That translates to more oil, which translates to job security and a more healthy regional economy," said Wehner.

PITTS: Rerun research

is a simple solution that is getting almost no recognition — probably because it has nothing to do with cultural diversity or political correctness.

As Rep. Larry Combest pointed out in his remarks about the research programs: "The Permian Basin alone has lost over 13,000 jobs from the oil industry since 1983."

That's equivalent to enough roughnecks to man 1,083 rigs or almost twice the 603 working rigs in the U.S. today.

President Clinton has made much about "investing" in America jobs. If he is serious about creating American jobs, he would do well to rerun the numbers on DOE research programs to increase U.S. oil production. That's all he has to do — run the numbers.

John Paul Pitts is business/oil editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

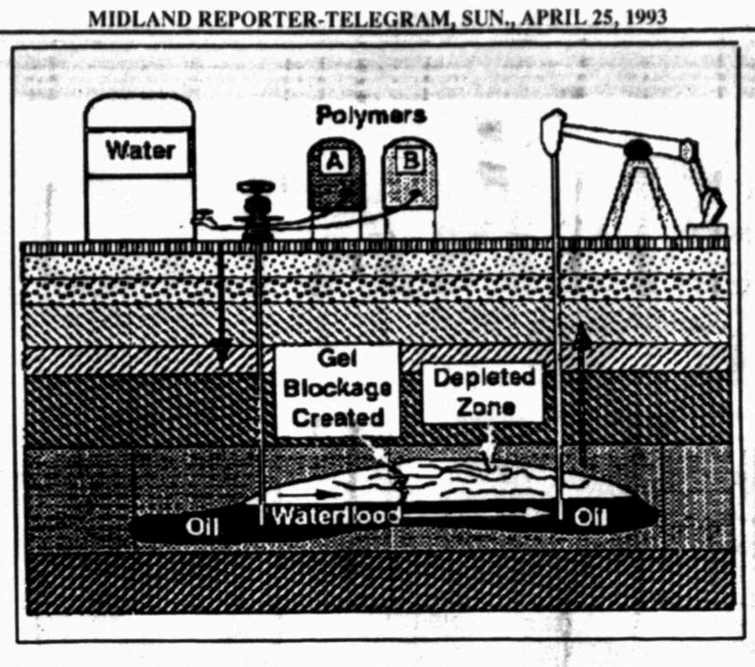

MID-TERM: Projects

(From 1E)

The project will use several advanced techniques for analyzing the characteristics of reservoir rocks in the Permian Basin's San Andres formation in Ector County.

Then, multiple horizontal injection wells will be drilled from a central location to inject carbon dioxide. The horizontal wells will be combined with the use of foams to block areas of the reservoir in which most of the oil has been produced. By "sweeping" the reservoir more effectively, increased oil production is expected.

Phillips will spend $19.9 million on the project and get a grant of $7 million from DOE.

Among the project technology to be demonstrated is the use of gels to block depleted zones.

Other states land innovative projects

■ Unique projects will send new technology back to the Permian Basin.

Staff report

While the Permian Basin took a lion's share of the DOE grants for shallow carbonate studies, other states and reservoirs also had significant projects approved which should prove beneficial to the Basin.

"If it will work in a shallow carbonate reservoir in Kansas, it should work in the Permian Basin," said a DOE official.

Here are the remainder of the near-term grants awarded this week, and which will be managed by DOE reservoir class demonstration program at its Bartlesville, Okla. project office:

■ BEARD OIL CO. (Gemini Division), KcCook, Neb. Project site: Near McCook, Hitchcock County, Neb. Proposed 40-month project.

This project will use fluorescent, ionic and radioactive tracers to determine if high volumes of oil remain in the Paliades Producing Complex. The company will look for fractures or channels in the reservoir that may be diverting the waterlood away from zones that still contain producible quantities of oil. If channels are found, the company will inject "cross-linked polymer" gells to block these areas and redirect the waterflood to oil-bearing areas of the reservoir.

■ MICHIGAN TECHNOLOGY UNIVERSITY, Houghton, Mich. Project site: Near Crystal Lake, Montcalm County, Mich. Proposed 36-month project.

This will be the first systematic reservoir data gathering effort for the Dundee formation, Michigan's top oil and gas producer. Only 10 to 15 poercent of the formation's original oil-in-place has been produced since the 1920s. Data from the Crystal field and 30 other fields will be compiled into a commercial reservoir data base. A vertical well will be drilled to obtain new core data, and a horizontal well will be drilled from the new borehole to determine draining effectiveness.

■ RESEARCH AND ENGINEERING CONSULTANTS INC., Englewood, Colo. Project site: Near Sidney, Richland County, Mont. and Bowman, Bowman County, N.D. Proposed four-year project.

The company plans to define geologic characteristics of two reservoirs in the southern Willison Basin of Montana and North Dakota through the use of 3-D seismic surveys. A high pressure water "jetting lance" will be used to create small openings 10 to 50 feet from the wellbore into the formation. Infill drilling also would be targeted to areas where additional producible oil remains. If successful, a water injection pilot project would follow.

■ SEAGULL MID-SOUTH INC., Shreveport, La. Project site: Near Ardmore, Okla. Proposed 20-month project to be conducted in the North Eastman field in Love County, Okla.

The purpose is to develop ways to repeat a proven horizontal producing well to intersect a limestone formation's fractures at perpendicular angles. The company will carry out 3-D seismic surveys to determine if known fracture zones can be identified with the seismic technique. If this approach is successful, previously undetected fracture zones will be located through 3-D seismic surveys and the general direction determined. A horizontal well will then be drilled to intersect oil-filled fractures, confirm their orientation and improve recovery.

■ UNIVERSITY OF KANSAS CENTER FOR RESEARCH INC., Lawrence, Kan. Project site: Near Jetmore, Kan. Proposed four-year project.

This project applies existing recovery technologies to Petersilie field in Ness County and the Bindley field in Hodgeman County, Kan. Using a reservoir model patterned after one developed for the Bindley field, the university-led teeam will drill and core new wells in the Petersilie field. This is expected to show where existing production wells can be deepened or recompleted. Also, the team will improve the Bindley field model to determine the optimum sites for infill drilling.

■ UTAH GEOLOGICAL SURVEY, Salt Lake City, Utah, Project site: In San Juan County, Utah, Proposed 60-month project.

The project calls for analyzing the geological and reservoir characteristics of five small fields, four of which are located within the Navajo Nation. The best candidate field will be chosen for a pilot waterflood or carbon dioxide flood demonstration.

standards and compliance programs. The seminar will be held at the Midland Hilton from 8 a.m. to noon.

This seminar will address the safety enforcement policy of state and federal government and how the inspection process effects companies now and in the future.

Registration for the seminar begins at 8 a.m., with opening remarks begining at 8:30 a.m.

The first session, from 8:30 to 9:40 a.m. will cover 29 CFR 1910 (General Industry); and 1926 Construction standards.

The next session, from 9:40 to 10:40 a.m. will cover Hazard Communication Progran, Respiratory Protection Program, Lockout/Tagout; Process Safety Management and Lease Inspections.

Following a break, the next session will be from 10:50 to 11:15 a.. and cover Confined Space Entry Program, Emergency Plans, Electrical Safety and Hot Work Permit System. The final session, from 11:15 to 11:30 a.m., will cover Employers Rights in the Work Place. The final half-hour will be devoted to questions and answers.

Presenters will be Pat Vigil, compliance officer, Lubbock area OSHA office, and Phil Graves, president, and James Haning, director of safety, Safety International Inc.

Nabers will be the guest speaker at the Energy Appreciation Week Luncheon, held Thursday May 6 at the Petroleum Club beginning at noon.

Nabers was appointed to the Railroad Commission by Gov. Ann Richards, replacing Robert Kreuger.

The week concludes with the annual PBPA Blow Out, held Saturday, May 8 at American Legion Woods Post 19.

The Blow Out will open to the public at 11 a.m. — admission is free — and a $6 barbecue plate lunch will be offered from noon to 2:30 p.m.

Cook-off categories include ribs (pork), brisket, beef fajitas and chili (CASI rules only). Trophies will be awarded to the first five places in each category and in showmanship.

Folger said that teams consist of media representatives and representatives of service industries, production industries and the major oil companies. To date, he said, 40 teams have registered.

Entertainment gets underway at 2 p.m. and includes dancing groups, bands, singing groups, and clowns.

The Reporter-Telegram-sponsored "World's Ugliest Roughneck" contest will get underway at 3:30 p.m.

Winners and awards will be presented at 4 p.m. Following the awards presentation, there will be a drawing for two round trip tickets to any destination Southwest Airlines flies to.

Information and registration is available by calling the PBPA at 684-6345.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Garza yields San Andres discovery

Staff report

A San Andres Porosity discovery has been recorded in Garza County, 2.5 miles north of Post.

RENAUD OIL CORP. completed the No. 1A Rattlesnake Creek to pump 18 barrels of 36 gravity crude, a trace of gas and 151 barrels of water from perforations 3,078 to 3,120 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,250 gallons of 15 percent NeFeHCL acid.

Permitted as a 3,250 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to that depth and plugged back to 3,189 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,248 ft.

The well topped the Grayburg at 2,298 ft., San Andres at 2,241 and San Andres Porosity at 3,078 ft. on ground elevation of 2,618 ft.

Location is 990 ft. from south and 2,261 ft. from east lines of Section 1218, W.C. Young survey, Abst. 1218.

McCulloch field gets second producer

A second producer has been added to the Needle Creek field of McCulloch County, extending it southeast.

GEOSURVEYS INC. potentialed the No. 2 Speck to flow 105 barrels of 22 gravity crude and 70 Mcfd on a 24/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 245 psi. The well flosed from perforations 1,186 to 1,227 ft., which had been acidized with 750 gallons and fractured with 110 sacks of sand.

Scheduled as an 1,800 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 1,400 ft. and plugged back to 1,370 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

The well topped the Gunsight formation at 520 ft., Canyon at 880, and Strawn at 1,186 ft. on ground elevation of 1,862 ft.

Location is 749 ft. from south and 1,109 ft. from east lines of Section 1391, Peter Behrens survey, Abst. 82, six miles southeast of Melvin.

Enron finals four dual gas producers

Four dual gas producers have been completed in Crockett County by ENRON OIL & GAS CO.

Enron completed the No. 4 Sealy-Hutchins "9" as a dual producer in the Ozona (Strawn) and Ozona (Canyon Sandstone) fields.

From the Canyon, the well tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 2.3 Mmcfd from perforations 6,514 to 7,214 ft. The well was fractured with 72,976 gallons of gel and 282,500 lbs. 20/40 sand.

From the Strawn, the well tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 13.35 Mmcfd from perforations 8,897 to 9,057 ft. This interval was acidized with 13,000 gallons of 209 percent HCL.

Total depth was 9,250 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 9,229 ft. The well was plugged back to 9,216 ft.

Location is 1,800 ft. from south and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 9, Block SL, T&STL survey, Abst. 4189, 13 miles southwest of Ozona.

The No. 2 Sealy Hutchins "9" was completed as a dual producer in the Ozona Southwest (Strawn) and Ozona (Canyon Sandstone) fields.

From the Canyon, the well tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 975 Mcfd through perforations 6,381 to 6,908 ft. The interval was fractured with 36,586 gallons of gel and 122,100 lbs. 20/40 sand.

From the Strawn, the well was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 5.4 Mmcfd from perforations 8,703 to 8,879 ft. The interval was acidized with 12,000 gallons of 20 percent HCL.

The well was drilled to 9,000 ft. and was plugged back to 8,812 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 9,033 ft.

Location is 1,200 ft. from north and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 9, Block SL, T&STL survey, Abst. 4189, 13 miles southwest of Ozona.

The No. 1901ST Henderson Trust "GG" was also tested as a dual producer in the Ozona Southwest (Strawn) and Ozona (Canyon Sandstone) fields.

The well was tested in the Canyon for a calculated absolute open flow of 610 Mcfd from perforations 6,726 to 6,708 ft. The interval was fractured with 42,731 gallons of gel and 160,000 lbs. 20/40 sand.

From the Strawn, the well tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 1.3 Mmcfd from perforations 8,677 to 8,805 ft. The interval was acidized with 10,000 gallons of 20 percent HCL acid.

Total depth was 9,050 ft. and the well was plugged back to 9,002 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 8,970 ft.

Location is 1,200 ft. from north and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 19, Block ST, TCRR survey, Abst. 3479, 14 miles southwest of Ozona.

Enron completed the No. 3 Sealy-Hutchins "9" as a dual completion in the Ozona Southwest (Strawn) and Ozona (Canyon Sandstone) fields.

From the Canyon, the well was finaled for a calculated absolute open flow of 640 Mcfd from perforations 6,313 to 7,019 ft. The interval was fractured with 72,884 gallons of gel and 256,900 lbs. 20/40 sand.

From the Strawn, the well was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 2.15 Mmcfd from perforations 8,690 to 8,894 ft. This interval was acidized with 10,000 gallons of 20 percent HCL acid.

Drilled to 9,050 ft., the well was plugged back to 8,931 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 8,984 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from west and 2,000 ft. from north lines of Section 9, Block SL, T&STL survey, 13 miles southwest of Ozona.

Triton suffers loss in quarter

DALLAS (AP) — Triton Energy Corp. said it lost $47.6 million in its third fiscal quarter due to lower sales volumes and writedowns on assets in France and Indonesia.

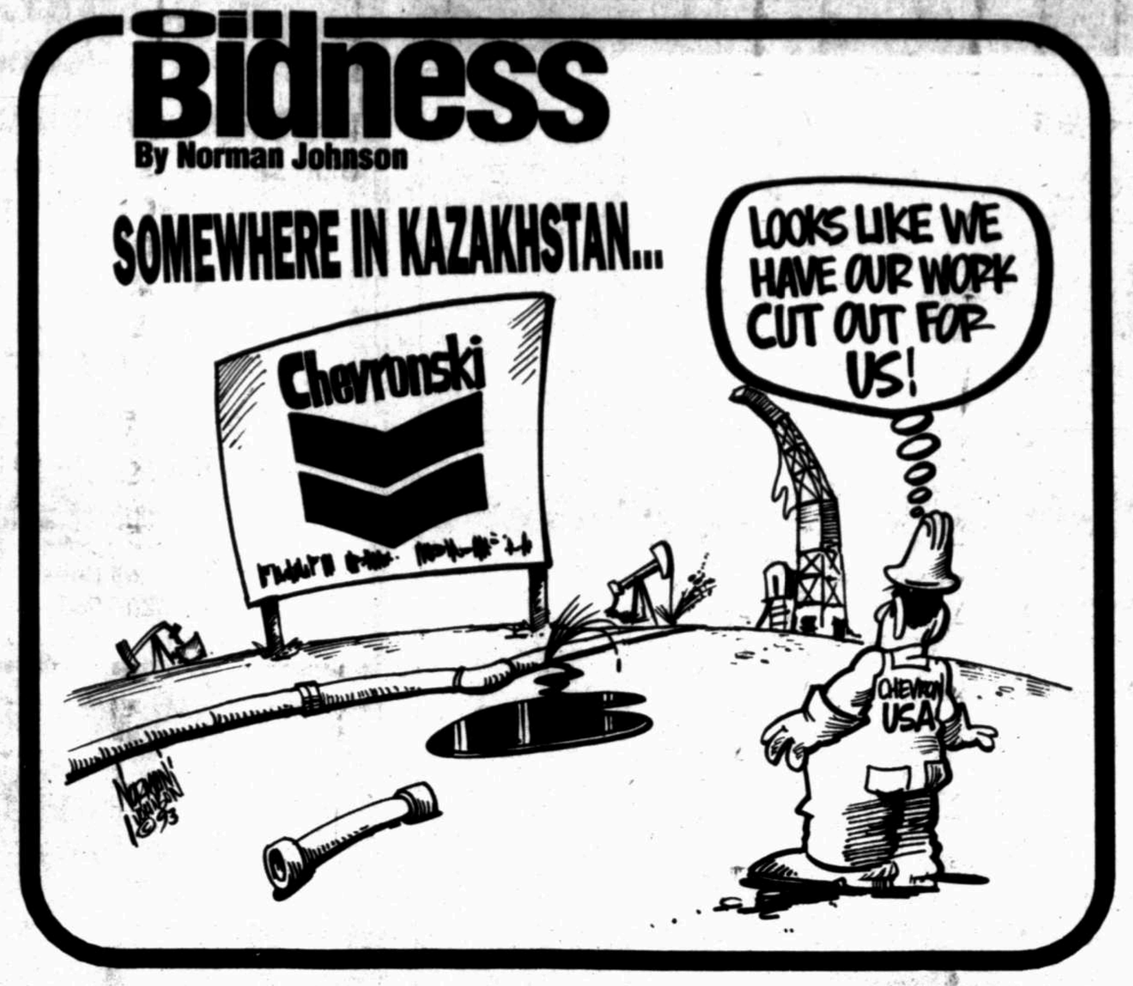

The loss amounted to $1.38 per share for the three months ending Feb. 28. A year earlier, the company lost $26.5 million, or 79 cents per share.

Revenue was $67.2 million, up 14 percent from $58.8 million a year ago.

Triton curtailed some existing and planned exploration for oil and gas in France during the quarter, writing down about $25 million after taxes and minority interest were removed. The company similarly wrote off $6 million worth of assets in Indonesia.

For the first nine months of its fiscal year, Triton lost $53.3 million, or $1.56 per share. The company lost $45.7 million, or $1.60 per share, in the same period a year earlier.

Revenue was $215.7 million, up 27 percent from $169.5 million.

MARY SCOTT NABERS

Commissioner
Railroad Commission of Texas

Mary Scott Nabers was appointed by Governor Richards as a Commissioner of the Railroad Commission of Texas (TRC) and sworn into the position on February 24, 1993. Prior to her TRC appointment, she was appointed to head the Texas Employment Commission (TEC) by Governor Mark White in 1984 and continued on in that position under Governors Bill Clements and Ann Richards until accepting her new position with the TRC.

Through the innovations of Commissioner Nabers, the TEC was transformed into the most valued business serving bodies in state government. She developed communication channels and services such as her publication Texas Business Today: the Texas Business Council program of statewide conferences bringing business owners face-to-face with government leaders and regulators; the Jobs for Texans Today and Tomorrow program providing statewide conferences giving job seekers a competitive advantage by linking them directly to employer prospects; the taxpayers' 1-800-TEC-MARY hotline to eliminate bureaucratic delays and waste by putting the Commissioner in touch with her constituents; and initiating the Classroom to Boardroom - Reaching for Tomorrow Today statewide teleconferences providing high school students special career opportunities with prominent business leaders of Texas.

Mary Scott received her B.A. degree from Howard Payne University and an M.B.A. from the University of Texas at Austin. She is the former president and general manager of a media corporation; serviced as an instructor at Baylor and Howard Payne University and as a host of a daily public affairs program.

Commissioner Nabers comes to the TRC with numerous achievements and awards including the Spirit of Texas Award and Leadership Texas in 1987, and served as a delegate to Emerging Leaders World Conference, in Baltimore, Maryland in 1992. She is a board member of the National Association of Women Executives in State Government, the Board of Trustees at Howard Payne University, a member of the State Advisory Council for the Literacy Volunteers of America and the Joint Task Force on Expanding Career Counseling.

Mary Scott is married to Joseph L. Nabers and they have two sons.

Parker to help develop Tengiz field

Staff report

TULSA — Parker Drilling Co. has announced it has been selected to help develop the huge Tengiz oil field in the former Soviet republic of Kazakhstan.

Tengizchevroil — a joint venture between Chevron Overseas Co. and the government-owned Tengizneftegas — marks the second Commonwealth of Independent STates contract for Parker announced in the past three weeks.

Robert L. Parker Jr., president and chief executive officer, said the contract calls for Tulsa-based Parker to initially provide rig management, supervisory training services and labor to Tengizchevroil.

"This contract marks an important milestone for Parker Drilling," stated Parker. "Our reputation as a drilling pioneer will only be strengthened as a result of working alongside Chevron and Kazakh personnel in one of the world's most difficult drilling environments," he added. Oil reserves in Tengiz are deep, highly pressurized and contain large concentrations of poisonous gases, he explinaed.

Tengiz, thought to be one of the largest oil fields in the world, is located in western Kazakhstan, along the northeastern coast of the Caspian Sea. The $20 billion project is the largest between a western oil company and a former Soviet republic. Chevron and Kazakhstan finalized the agreement April 6.

Terms of the Parker-Tengizchevroil contract were not disclosed.

Parker will provide expatriate and national labor to initially operate Tengizchevroil-owned rigs, said Parker.

This development is the initial stage in what is expected to be a long-term project, said Parker. "This contract will position Parker to respond to additional specialized needs of the joint venture as they develop," he said.

James W. Linn, executive vice president and chief operating officer, said the initial phase will include many responsibilities for the American drilling contractor.

"Parker will draw on its international expertise to provide drilling company management to the venture," Linn said. The components provided by Parker include rig labor, training, inventory control, a comprehensive safety program and rig equipment maintenance procedures.

Gary McCarrell, a 20-year veteran of Parker, has been named operations manager for the Tengiz project. A division office will be established in Kazakhstan.

On April 1, Parker announced a contract with the British Petroleum-Statoil Alliance to provide workover-completion drilling services in the Tarasov field in Western Siberia. In 1991, Parker became the first western drilling contractor to work in the former Soviet Union under a workover-/completion contract in Western Siberia.

Kazakhstan marks the 45th country in which Parker has operated.

Snyder Oil to buy stake in Austalian firm

N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH, Texas — Snyder Oil Corp. said Thursday that it has agreed to acquire a 42.8-percent stake in Command Petroleum Holdings NL, an Australian oil company, for $18.5 million.

Snyder, which is significantly increasing its involvement in international oil exploration, said Command holds interests in more than 20 oil and gas exploration permits and production licenses, primarily in the southwestern Pacific Rim that includes Australia and Papua New Guinea.

Command is based in Sydney and its stock is listed on the Australian Stock Exchange.

Command holds a 28.7-percent interest in Holland Sea Search Holdings NV, an oil firm whose principal asset is an interest in the Markham gas field in the North Sea. Holland Sea Search is based in The Hague, Netherlands, and its stock is traded on the Amsterdam Stock Exchange.

Snyder said its purchase of the interest in Command is subject to approval of Command shareholders at a special meeting expected to be held in mid-May.

Command had assets of $46 million, a market capitalization of $38 million, working capital of $24.4 million and proven oil reserves of 1.2 million barrels as of Dec. 31, Snyder said.

In the past two years, Snyder has announced oil and gas projects in Russia, Tunisia and Mongolia. The Fort Worth-based firm, which employs 300 people, previously had limited itself to domestic exploration and production.

Snyder officials say they plan to keep their principal focus on the domestic front, but will expand their involvement in foreign exploration in search of larger petroleum reserves in countries less heavily drilled than than the United States.

PBGC CONTINUING EDUCATION

LEARNING WORDPERFECT FOR WINDOWS v. 5.2: BEGINNING: This class is for newcomers to WordPerfect who will be running WP for Windows, or those familiar with WP for DOS who are considering upgrading to the brand-new WordPerfect for Windows 5.2. Topics include word processing basics, elements of the WP Windows screen, using the menus, using the ruler, cut, copy and paste operations, the button bar, selecting and changing fonts. Prerequisite: basic mouse and typing skills and familiarity with Windows 3.1. Eligible for 3 CPE credits. Fee $60; Paul Pause', instructor; Wednesday, 1:30-4:30 p.m.

INTRODUCTION TO LOTUS 1-2-3 FOR WINDOWS: This class will cover the new version for Windows. In this class, learn how to set up and print a simple spreadsheet with formulas and dates. Learn how to format the spreadsheet to change the output. Emphasis will be placed on using the mouse for making selections but keyboard entry will also be shown. No experience in 1-2-3 or other spreadsheets is required. Eligible for 3 CPE credits. Fee $60; Ted Windecker, instructor; Thursday, 7-10 p.m.

STRUCTURAL STYLES THAT APPLY TO THE WEST TEXAS PERMIAN BASIN: The tectonic regimes responsible for the structures of the Permian Basin are still not well understood. This course will draw together and examine several examples of structural regimes of undoubted compressional, extentional and strike slip formation. Applications fto the West Texas area will be suggested. Fee $145; Thomas E. Ewing, instructor; May 10, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

For registration or further information call 683-2832.

MEETINGS

WTGS to discuss Dagger Draw field

The West Texas Geological Society will meet Tuesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker will be William E. Hardie of Conoco's Midland Division. His topic will be "Reservoir Characerization and the Use of the Circumferential Borehole Imaging Log (CBIL), Dagger Draw Field, Eddy County, N.M."

For many years, formation evaluation in the Permian Basin has been dependent upon tools and techniques that were primarily designed for clastic reservoirs. Recent advances in carbonate logging tools, and more importantly, advances in understanding of carbonate reservoirs have allowed successful operators to "rediscover" prolific oil and gas fields in "mature" properties.

Perhaps nowhere else is this more evident than in the Dagger Draw field, which was discovered in 1965 and has until recently ranked as one of Conoco Midland's poorest performing properties.

Conoco's extensive use of the CBIL has allowe more accurate reservoir characterization by providing better porosity quantification, more precise completions, determination of in-situ stresses and the determination of detailed reservoir facies distribution. As a result, Conoco's daily production increased four-fold between 1989 and 1991.

Cost is $7 per person and reservations should be made by Monday afternoon by calling 683-1573.

TURNING 40

Text by Linda Anderson and Elizabeth Edwin

The "don't trust anyone over 30" generation, former flower children and war protesters and fans of the second "British Invasion" — those who came of age during the tumultuous '60s — are slowly but surely joining the ranks of the middle-aged. In fact, this generation is now about the same ages as their parents were then, and many of them have children of their own.

What have they learned on their journey to what they used to consider the ancient establishment? Many of them have learned that 40 isn't at all what they expected it would be when they were 20.

"I always felt that when I reached this age, I would have all knowledge," said Mary Lou Cassidy, Midland attorney and volunteer for Midland Community Theatre.

"Hah!

"I thought I would have much wisdom, since people in the middle-age bracket always seemed to know everything. Now I know they were faking it too."

Although the hype about being "Over the Hill" at age 40 fills the birthday cards, party favors and comedy routines, many over-40s people admit to liking their current age better than their younger years. The Rev. Jon Stasney, rector of St. Nicholas Episcopal Church in Midland, said, "I wouldn't want to go back" and be young again.

"Actually," he amended, "I'd like to go back and try it with the wisdom and knowledge I know now. I could do it a lot better if I had the knowledge I know now. But you can't get that knowledge without some hard knocks."

Reaching the big "Four-Oh" had a few hard knocks for Dennis Grubb of Wemus Entertainment. "When I turned 40, my eyes went. I was sitting at a Texas Tech football game with some of my fraternity brothers and couldn't see the score board. I borrowed one of the guy's glasses, then everything became clear."

Many in this generation also are finding that what they thought they knew about being middle-aged when they were 20 is not true now that they actually are in their 40s. "It got here quicker than I thought it was going to," said Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter. "But I'm not as decrepit as I thought I would be when I was 20.

"Just having heart surgery, I got all my ailments corrected for the next 45 years."

The 40s are like "cheese and wine," Painter said. "Things get better with age. When you're 20, you think it's so far off it will never get here. Now that it's here, it's not as bad as I thought it would be."

Sharia Hotchkiss, former executive director of Keep Midland Beautiful, agreed.. Turning 40 "isn't the end of the world," she said. "I wouldn't re-do one year again. Things were good, but I like where I am. It's a good time — a real good time in my life.

"When I was 20, I thought 40 was real old. Now that I'm 48, it isn't old."

The physical manifestations of middle age may be the most difficult to face. Ms. Hotchkiss, who has had gray hair since she was quite young, said, "I've been gray most of my life, but it still surprises me to look in the mirror some days and see all the gray.

"Some of my friends find that getting gray hair and wrinkles at the same time is kind of disconcerting."

Grubb also said the physical changes are tough to deal with.

"When you hit 40, you become more aware of things like your cholesterol count, you look at the fiber content in things and buy a lot more cereal and drink more water," Grubb said.

"You also start paying more attention to hair transplant commercials, at least the men do. And you start looking to join a health club or the YMCA to see if you can find that 20-something body you used to have before it's too far gone."

While some try to reach back for a bit of the past, Stasney said the future is still a goal to strive for. "From the Christian perspective, the best is yet to be. Keep your eyes on the future, which is different from the common idea about avoiding wrinkles and gray hair — or no hair.

"In a way, I feel the same as I did when I was in my 20s, except physically," he said. "I've got more aches and pains. But you still tend to think of yourself as not having aged that much — as still the essential you."

ARE YOU REALLY OVER THE HILL?

By Gary Ott

For years, I had been one of the funny guys. Each time a friend would experience another birthday I would be armed with a new round of jokes and tacky one-liners about gray hair, mid-life crises and receding hairlines.

Ott

Why not? Those things would never happen to me. I was going to be young forever. Let other people turn 40. As for me, I was just going to sit on the sidelines and watch. Father Time would have no impact on me. Like Peter Pan, I would never grow up.

A strange thing happened a year or so go.

You guessed it. I turned 40. Actually, you can now add another year to that and make it a nice uneven 41.

But 41 was no big deal. No indeed. It came and went like a flicker of light in the night. One day I was 40, the next day I was 41. Ho-hum.

Not so with the Big 4 — 0.

Now we're talking traumatic. Big-time trauma. The kind of trauma that makes a person want to stay in bed all day with the sheets pulled over his head.

FORTY. It just sounds so old, as though you are now officially over the hill, or at the very least "middle-aged," one of life's truly horrible phases we are all expected to endure at one time or another.

FORTY. No longer does society consider you a kid. Instead, you are expected to be rational, calm, mature, levelheaded, and all those other words that really translate into B-O-R-I-N-G.

FORTY. It is the age that some people claim "is the beginning of the best years of your life." In reality, though, no one in their right mind really believes that.

FORTY. It is the beginning of the end.

There are certain birthdays that have come to represent — and I quote — "important milestones" along life's journey to wherever it is we are supposed to go during our time on this earth.

Eighteen, for instance, is considered "a biggie," as are 21, 30, 35, 40, 50, 65 and so on and so forth. Each has a certain stigma attached to it, though some carry a more negative connotation than others.

Still, having said that, it is important to note that each of those "milestones" affects individuals in unique and different ways. For example, 18, 21, 30 and 35 had no impact on me at all.

I laughed my way through each of them. Indeed, there was something special about "growing older" that appealed to me. At age 18, a person acquires certain rights and freedoms. Likewise with 21. Turning 30, while traumatic to some, was a piece of cake, providing me with a sense of worldliness. Thirty-five was more of the same. I somehow became wiser and more sophisiticated.

I was on a roll. Nothing could stop me. I was aging with style and grace, not unlike a Gregory Peck or a Sean Connery. Thirty-six, 37, 38, 39. It made no difference. One by one they came and went, causing me little or no pain.

And as always, I laughed at those poor souls who were not capable of coping with the aging process. If only they

Texas A&M hosts Parents' Weekend

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Last weekend, along with thousands of others, we made the trek to College Station, home of Texas A&M University, for that Spring Rite known as Parents' Weekend.

McKnight-Harrison

One of the university's oldest traditions, Parents' Weekend began back when membership in the Corps of Cadets was mandatory, so the Corps Military Review and Awards Ceremony at Kyle Field, its outfits' flower pinning ceremonies and award presentations have long been a part of the event. The weekend also includes many other special activities planned by organizations across campus for the visiting parents, other family members and friends. Midland Aggie students serving on this year's Parents' Weekend Committee were Bill Van Eman and Greg Chandler.

The Federation of Texas A&M Mothers' Clubs sponsored its annual Boutique, a shoppers' delight for die-hard A&M fans, with proceeds from the sale of Aggie treasures being returned to the university for scholarships and donations to various campus organizations. The Midland Club, headed by president Gayle Dodson, was one of the 50 participating clubs.

With two Aggies on campus, we had a busy time going from first-born son Mack's journalism and softball activities to our second son Tim's Corps' events.

Among Midlanders we spotted during the weekend were Shirley and Clark Butts and son, Ragan; Teresa and Darrell Roberts, Jan and Charky Van Eman and son, Murray; Allene and James Mashburn, Dana and Clarence Chandler, Nancy and Dennis Schraer, Gayle and Doc Dodson and Treva and Don Forrester and daughter, Andrea.

A postscript to the weekend: Some memorable sights along the way — the beautiful bluebonnets and other wildflowers, the profusion of trees, the picturesque country churches and the lovely pastoral scenes with cows dotting the landscape on the drive through Central Texas. A bar named "He Ain't Here" caught our attention and tickled our funny bone as we drove home.

While listening to the car radio, we heard former Midland radio and television personality Lisa Barker reporting on events at the Branch Davidian compound at Waco for an Austin radio station.

FIVE-MONTH-OLD Amy Nicole Ryan, the newest grandchild of Ramona and Paul Drickey, was the guest of honor recently at a "Peekaboo" Party at the Drickey home.

Ramona tells us that Amy brings their number of grandchildren to an even dozen and that they also have four great-grandchildren.

The daughter of Luanne and Richard Ryan of Fresno, Calif., Amy was visiting here with her mother and eight-year-old brother, Joe.

The serving table was decorated with adorable white, floppy earred stuffed rabbits and pink silk flowers, while Easter baskets and colorfully decorated eggs adorned the living room.

Pink-iced cookies and pink punch were served to the guests, including Amy's great-great-uncle and aunt, Richard and Mary Anderson. Among others stopping by were Carol (Mrs. Robert) Young, Barbara (Mrs. Jack) Cartwright, Maggie Artley, Ilene DeLong, Goldie (Mrs. A.L.) Glascock and Isabel (Mrs. Bob) Angevine.

The Ryans are former Midlanders. Richard was an engineer with Exxon when the family lived here, but now is an attorney in Fresno.

PRIOR TO THEIR marriage Saturday evening in Glass Memorial Chapel of First United Methodist Church, Midlanders Angela Pepper and Jason Stanaford were honored at a series of festivities.

Parties began with an engagement tea in January at the home of Mary Lou (Mrs. Mark) Wilson and co-hosted by Heather (Mrs. John) Echols.

A kitchen display shower was held at the home of Kelly (Mrs. Todd) Hullender. Also hosting were Ann (Mrs. Bobby) Page, Hallye (Mrs. Kraig) Knight, Gayle (Mrs. Doc) Dodson, Shannon (Mrs. Randy) Bosworth, Joy Swift and Julie Swift.

A "Honey-Do" shower in the home of Mary Emma (Mrs. Rob) Bennett also was hosted by Jennifer (Mrs. Allen) Bennett, Linda (Mrs. Jay) Jerman and best man, Hunter Isbell.

A display shower in the home of Genell Emerson also was given by Dovie (Mrs. Tommy) St. Peters, Quita Johnson, Sandy DeBord, Georgeanne (Mrs. Mike) McCaughahey, Jill (Mrs. John) Arthur, Alice (Mrs. Carl) Williams, Virginia (Mrs. Phil) Earheart and Peggy (Mrs. James, III) Brown.

Angela also was honored by her colleagues at Carver Center in Odessa, where she is a pre-kindergarten teacher, with a surprise lingerie shower. It was held in the home of Odessan Pam Clark.

Wedding week festivities began Friday with the rehearsal dinner at Venezia Restaurant given by the groom's parents, Kathy and Jerry Stanaford.

Friends of the bride hosted a lingerie shower Friday at the home of Julie Swift for a last fun evening of single girls' gab. The other hostesses were Susan (Mrs. Greg) McClenden, Edie McGuire, Sharla Houck, Debi Sport, Sonya Henderson, Cindy Rector and Tamara Johnson.

Ann (Mrs. James) Downing of Austin hosted the bridesmaids' luncheon Saturday at Bellini & Thompson's. The bride's parents, Darla and Mickey Pepper, were hosts for the reception at Green Tree Country Club immediately following the ceremony.

40s: Big '4-0' signals turning point

(From 1F)

Sometimes the now 40s generations' parents are able to get a little revenge of their own. "I remember one thing (about turning 40)," said Joe Dominey, of Dominey and Etheridge Inc. "My dad — who was probably 62 or 63 at the time I turned 40 — said, 'Well, son, how does it feel to know you have lived over half of your life?' A cold chill went down my spine and I gave him a feeble smile in reply."

Since that initial jolt, Dominey said age doesn't bother him much. "Birthdays that end in zeros loom out there, but once you are past them they are not that big a deal."

Just the same, Dr. Charles M. Younger said, in his opinion, "Any birthday ending in a zero is best avoided." And as for his 40th birthday, "I can't remember it," Younger said.

BUT DOMINEY believes 40 isn't as old as it used to be. Many people in their 40s "are still in their prime," he said. "Many, if they are married, have young kids and active lives. When I was about 20 and in college, I had the idea that people of 40 were well over the hill. Now, with our national conscious on nutrition and exercise and diet, people today in their 50s are in as good shape as people in their 40s were two or three decades ago.

"A lot of this aging business is psychological," Dominey said. "You think you can't do certain things, and that's not true. You can be just as active as you want to be, as long as you are willing to put forth the effort."

Jane Wolf, executive director of United Way in Midland, was one of those who was willing to put forth the effort. "At 40, I took up tap dancing and snow skiing," she said.

"For some reason, at 40 I realized that you don't have to do everything perfect, and those were things I had never tried. It was OK just to try something.

"Up until I was 40, I always thought I had to do everything perfectly, right way. Once we had children, I worried about the kids. I always thought, 'I can't do that. What if I broke a leg or something, what would I do?' But by the time I was 40, the kids were pretty much able to take care of themselves, so I thought, 'Why not?'

"Turning 40 just opened up a whole new look at life for me," Ms. Wolf said, "and every year since has been full of new experiences and excitement. It's just been wonderful."

GRUBB SAID HE found himself craving things considered for the young, such as a convertible sports car, more youthful-looking clothing, "and I started wearing colored underwear. It made me feel younger! You just do anything and everything to not let anybody know you're 40.

"When I turned 40, I bought 14 copies of Jerry Lee Lewis' '30 and Holding' and sent them to my best friends, and today I'm still playing it everyday," Grubb said.

Ms. Hotchkiss said her life hasn't slowed down as she's gotten older. "I did think (when I was younger) that as I got older, things would slow down, and I have not found that to be true. I am as busy or busier than I ever was. I thought I would have more time for myself and I do, but I'm not taking it."

She also has discovered a major benefit to aging. "There's a great deal of joy in having adult children. They are my friends now."

While turning 40 is a difficult time for some and not so difficult for others, Grubb said turning 41 was really the clincher. "On my 41st birthday was when it finally hit me I had already turned 40 and that year was gone. I remember thinking to myself, 'What have I done.'"

It was at that point Grubb decided to follow a motto, "The older the violin, the sweeter the music." He changed his career from the oil business to the music business, his true passion.

"At that point, you really have to take a look at what makes you happy and do it. Don't waste your time with the things that don't mean something to you."

Ott: 'Curse of 40' lumes over everyone could be more like me. After all, who cares if you're 40? It's just another number.

Then strange and twisted things began to occur. I would glance at the calander, for example, and for just the briefest of moments a tinge of fear would rush through my body. Out of nowhere, a fleeting image of a fat and balding me would form in my mind. Then, just as quickly, it would go away. Evaporate. Vanish.

At first, I thought nothing of it. Ignored it, in fact. "Out of sight, out of mind," that was my motto.

But the images kept coming back, each time slightly more bizarre than before. Sometimes I would be wearing Bermuda shorts with black socks and sandals. Other times I would be scratching myself and belching loudly at the dinner table. Occasionally I would even discover hair growing out of my ears.

"Good Lord," I screamed to no one in particular, "I'm getting old. Why is this happening to ME?"

"Because you laughed at others." It was an eerie and mysterious voice — with a certain Charlton Heston quality — coming down from the heavens. "Now you will suffer the 'Curse of 40.'"

"No, not that," I screamed.

"You must."

"But I don't want to wear black socks and sandals," I cried.

"Then you have one other option." The Charlton Heston voice was becoming even more spiritual.

"Anything," I whimpered, falling to my knees. "You name it."

"Go forth and buy a sports car," the voice said. "Then unbotton your shirt to your navel, exposing several tacky, yet expensive, gold chains. Finally, my son, you are to latch onto a really empty-headed 23-year-old and make a complete fool of yourself."

"I can do that," I exclaimed.

"I know," the voice responded. "That's why you will be the perfect 40-year-old male."

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Landscape, lawn care featured in seminar

By Deborah A. Benge

We water it, fertilize it, spray it for pests, mow, clip, hedge and prune it and then we do it again. We compare it to our neighbors', discuss it with the county agent and question our nurserymen about it. What is it? The ever-elusive ideal lawn and landscape.

Benge

In all of our efforts to have the greenest grass and lushest landscape, we find ourselves neck deep in work, grass clippings, trimmings, tools and landscape products of every kind. There's got to be an easier way! And there is.

In all your yard and garden endeavors remember there are no magic products that you can buy in a bottle that's going to cure all your landscape woes. You are going to find success in good old-fashioned, time proven horticultural techniques.

Old-fashioned doesn't have to mean slower. Coupled with these practices there are some products and equipment that will help in the management of our landscapes. Mulching mowers, chipper shredders, biological pesticides and safe herbicides for use in the landscape.

We've seen some drastic changes in turf management for home lawns. At one time no one caught their grass clippings; then mowers were featured with catchers and everyone caught their grass clippings. Now we've come full circle to not catching grass clippings once again. The push for not catching the clippings was for environmental reasons, but what a blessing for the home gardener with respect to time and labor savings.

These new grass management practices have made a simple chore out of keeping a good-looking, well-manicured lawn. Mowing time is cut in half and no more bending, stooping and struggling with the grass catcher. Better than that, no more bagging and multiple trips to the dumpster.

Another landscape tip that will keep us out of the dumpster is using the organic matter generated in our own yards. Permian Basin soils are in sore need of organic matter to improve soil structure, water and nutrient holding capacities, and plant performance. Grass clippings, leaves, needles, young green weeds, plant trimmings and kitchen wastes (not meat or fat) all can be used in soil improvement. These can be composted and used in soils to make a tremendous difference in our soils.

Another horticultural practice you can use is backyard composting. This is a great way to use grass clippings, trimmings, young green weeds, leaves, sawdust, animal manure, kitchen peelings, shredded newspaper and other forms of organic matter. These materials composted first can be added directly to the soil for ready use, making a tremendous difference in plant performance.

Probably the second best landscape practice we can follow is the use of mulches. Mulches are like insulating blankets that are laid on top of the soil surface. A four- to six-inch layer of mulch will do great things for your landscape, including slow the evaporative loss of water from the soil, reduce weed growth, insulate soil temperature extremes, reduce salt accumulation and provide an attractive functional surface.

Another big challenge to the home gardener is controlling pests. Pest management is much more than just grabbing the nearest bottle of insecticide every time we see a bug. There are other ways to control insects such as floating row covers, Bt, reflective mulches, cultural practices and more.

Learn more about the time, labor and environmental savings that will result in a great-looking landscape by attending the Landscape Management Seminar and Demonstration 6 p.m. Thursday at Midland College's Chaparral Hall.

Learn how to manage your lawn without back-breaking, time-consuming work and disappointing results. Learn how to take trash and transform it into soil-enriching compost in your own backyard. Find out how to use mulches to not only produce better plants, but to reduce weed problems to an occasional plucking. Learn how plant selection can make a big difference in how landscape and lawns fare. Find out the best ways to manage harmful insect pests without excessive pesticide use. All of this will make your landscape better and stop yard wastes from going into the dumpster and landfill.

In addition to the seminar, there will be outdoor displays provided by the Permian Basin Master Gardeners on different types of compost bins, layering and maintaining a compost bin, using a shipper shredder and use the mulch, and using mulches in the landscape.

This educational program is being brought to you by Keep Midland Beautiful, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, City of Midland and Midland College. Be sure to join us next month for seminar, outdoor displays and door prizes.

For more information call 688-4195 or 687-1351.

DEAR ABBY

Screaming child ruins wedding

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: It happened again. Another church wedding ruined by a screaming, undisciplined 2-year-old (uninvited) child. (The parents could well afford to have hired a baby sitter.)

Van Buren

The wedding was mine. We were married in the Methodist Church. We hired three musicians, and there were two professional photographers videotaping the wedding.

My sister brought "Monica," her 2-year-old spoiled brat, to the wedding. It's not the child's fault. She has never been disciplined. If she doesn't get her own way, she screams! Monica screamed through most of the ceremony. The minister kept glaring at her — and so did everyone else. Meanwhile, her parents did nothing to quiet her.

Now we will have to crop the part of the video showing Monica lying on top of the church altar, facing the camera with her dress up, and her panties showing.

After the ceremony, Monica's parents took her to the reception and let her run loose. Thank God, they took her home early.

Some guests asked me why I didn't stop the ceremony and ask Monica's parents to take her home so others could enjoy the wedding. Well, I didn't think it was my place to do that. How could this have been avoided? — WEDDING RUINED IN MINNESOTA

DEAR WEDDING RUINED: When Monica started to scream during the ceremony, the minister should have stopped the service and asked the parents to please remove her from the church sanctuary. Since he failed to do so, YOU should have done so.

Children act up because they are bored and want attention. To have allowed a 2-year-old to ruin a wedding was unspeakably insensitive on the part of the mother.

DEAR ABBY: This is a second marriage for both of us. I was a 47-year-old widow, and my new husband is a very handsome, twice-divorced, 66-year-old man who looks no older than 50.

We've been married for a year, but there is one problem. When we eat out (which is often), if the waitress is halfway decent-looking, he kids around with her in a flirty manner, then stares at her behind when she walks away. (He is not even subtle about it.) When I tell him to quit leering, he insists there's nothing wrong with "looking." He says, "That's why women wear tight pants and skirts — especially if they have something to show off."

Abby, when I was younger I was a waitress, and I turned a few heads myself, but even though I had a beautiful figure (I still have), I never flaunted it with tight-fitting uniforms.

Today, men still look at me. I look at least 10 years younger than I am and I dress stylishly — but never outlandishly. I have seen attractive men when I'm out with my husband, but never would I show the slightest interest in any of them.

Am I too critical of my husband's obvious interest in other women? Or is his behavior out of line? — A LADYLIKE LADY

DEAR LADY: Your husband's behavior is out of line; furthermore, he shows an appalling lack of respect for you when he leers at other women in your presence.

DEAR READERS: In a recent column, I published a letter from Dick Eney of Hyattsville, Md., in which he stated that pinworms can be transmitted by letting a dog lick a child's face.

Now, a wee sample of my mail since publishing that statement:

DEAR ABBY: Mr. Eney states that human beings can become infected with pinworms from dogs and cats. This is impossible: dogs and cats do not carry pinworms!

Horses, mice and primates (apes and man) can be parasitized by Enterobius and Oxyuris species, commonly known as pinworms. Dogs and cats can be host to several species of roundworm, hookworm, whipworm and tapeworm, as well as other parasites.

Because there is some risk of passing a parasite from pet to person, Mr. Eney is absolutely correct in recommending that parents should not allow their pets to lick the faces of their children. Precautions should be especially taken with toddlers who are constantly putting their fingers in their mouths. But dogs and cats cannot be blamed for pinworm infections. This is a common misconception among pediatricians as well as medical technologists. —DOUGLAS BRYAN, D.V.M., SPRINGFIELD, MO.

DEAR ABBY: Being a medical laboratory technologist does not make Mr. Eney a veterinary parasitologist. All veterinary parasitologists and most veterinarians know that there are no species of pinworms that inhabit the dog or cat. Horses have a species of pinworms that affects them, but even they are unique to the horse. Humans have their own variety.

Humans contract pinworms from other humans due to unsanitary bathroom habits, not from dogs and cats. Dogs and cats never have pinworms as intestinal parasites. He was totally wrong. — F. FOSTER VERNON, D.V.M., DALLAS

DEAR ABBY: I would like to state that pinworms are actually caught from people, and not pets. I guess you could say that it is wisest not to allow dogs, cats AND kids to lick anyone's face. And, since pinworms are most often transmitted by contaminated fingers, maybe you would add touching to the list of no-no's. — ROBERT J. LERER, M.D., FAIRFIELD, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: Please consult your experts regarding pinworms and pets! The pinworm Enterobius vermicularis may be a frequent parasite of humans, but is never found in dogs or cats. In veterinary school, our parasitology professors warned us that parents and even some members of the (human) medical school community might erroneously conclude that the family dog gave the kids pinworms.

While parents may still want to use discretion in allowing pets to lick children's faces, please let the pets off the hook on this one. — JODI BROWN, D.V.M., CINCINNATI

DEAR DRS. BRYAN, VERNON, LERER AND BROWN — and the others who have written: Thank you for sharing your expertise to correct this error. The fur-free face with the crimson blush is mine.

ANNIVERSARIES

Couple renews wedding vows

Mr. and Mrs. Huey Lee Jones of Midland celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a marriage covenant renewal, sponsored by their children and grandchildren, April 10 at Snow Hill Baptist Church in Ore City. The Rev. W.L. Smith officiated and their children were the attendants. A reception followed.

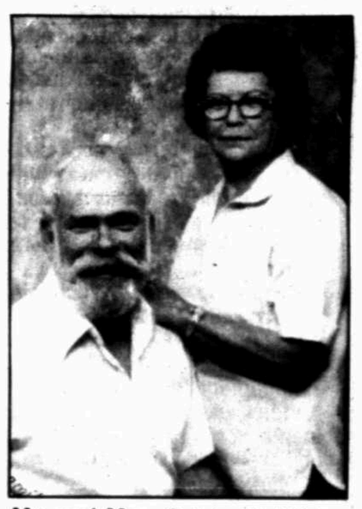

Mr. and Mrs. Huey Lee Jones

The couple were married April 10, 1943 in Ore City, by the same minister who officiated at the renewal of their vows. They are the parents of seven children: Huey G. Jones and Barbra A. Harvey of Houston, Alfred G. Jones and Sharon S. Napier of Dallas, Mack G. Jones of Garland and the late Theorety Jones and the late Learnie Jones. They also have 17 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Jones is retired from Ruthco Inc. His wife is a nurse and a homemaker.

Couple celebrates anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin W. White of Midland were guests of honor at a dinner April 12 at Portofino Ristorante in celebration of their 60th wedding anniversary. Hosts were their children.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin W. White

White and the former Caroline Wolner were married April 12, 1933, in Elmsford, N.Y. They have five children — Philip M. White, David W. White, Nancy L. White and Charles A. White of Midland, and Ellen W. Meyers of Richmond — as well as six grandchildren.

White was a partner in West Texas Flying Service, which later became Mooney Southwest and then Aquila! In 1980 he sold the business and went into semi-retirement. His wife is a housewife and mother, and a volunteer at St. Ann's School.

White is a member of Quiet Birdmen, Masons and Midland Men's Bowling Association. The couple attends St. Ann's Catholic Church.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle section of the Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographs will be published for winners only, not runners-up. These annoucements are published Thursdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after one month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

AT WIT'S END

Takes two to tango or to drive

By Erma Bombeck

A married couple who are friends of ours just bought a new car they vowed would guarantee them a long and happy union. The vehicle is programmed to make allowances in the differences in their size.

Bombeck

For example, when he presses 1, the seat glides back, the side and top mirrors adjust, and the steering wheel recedes. When she presses 2, the seat comes forward, the steering mechanism comes in closer, and the mirrors adjust to accommodate her view.

Call me suspicious, but it's going to take a lot more than that to make a car user-friendly to two people.

I've been a passenger for a lot of years and I want more than a couple of buttons at my disposal. For example, every time my husband starts fiddling with the radio dials at the same time he is clenching a cup containing hot coffee between his lips, I want a hand to reach out of the dashboard, slap him, and say, "Pay attention, Bozo. You're tailgating."

I want a gizmo that, when the air conditioning on my side gets cold enough to store a fur coat, I can push a button and send all the air back in his face.

Comedian Jerry Seinfeld noted the other night that when his mother complained that his father was driving too fast, he always said it was because she was seeing the speedometer from her "angle." I want dials on my side that light up so there can be no doubt about what I am seeing.

I'm perfectly willing to adjust my own seat if I can just have a brake on my side of the car that slows the car down when we are on a vacation tearing along at 60 mph and he says, "Tell me if you see a decent place to stop!"

The automotive industry is so proud of itself for installing microchips that turn your car into a machine that talks. "Your brake is on." "Your door is open." "Fasten your seat belt." I don't need more commands. I get them free every time I close the door. "That little red light is on." "Did you wipe your feet?" "I smell something." "Did you lock the front door?"

They can add all the gimmicks they want, but driving an automobile takes two in the driver's seat. We have driven enough rental cars to know it takes both of us to find where to turn on the lights and how to get the key out of the ignition.

I asked our friends if the new computerized seat adjustment was working out. She said, "Ask him!" Her husband said, "Ask her!" I asked, "What's the problem?" He said, "We're still arguing about why I'm No. 1 one in the computer and she has the No. 2 button."

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Slide into exercising at home

By Joyce M. Stewart
N.Y. Times News Service

Home exercise equipment is not for the unmotivated. It takes a lot of get-up-and-go to hit the treadmill when it's right next to the easy chair. One workout system that won't mean a $3,000 investment is Slide Reebok by Kneedspeed, which will be in sporting-goods stores in June.

This mat, which has bumpers on each end, is designed to be used with a nonimpact side-to-side motion similar to skating. The regular length is six feet, and there is also an eight-foot model. Each is about three feet wide and a half inch thick. Here is how the Slide Reebok rates:

Ease of use: For some people, the side-to-side glide is an unfamiliar motion, and it may take a few training sessions for them to catch on. But the movement is a natural one, and the technique lies in knowing just how hard to push off from one bumper to make it across the mat without crashing into the other bumper or stopping short. The Slide Reebok requires balance and coordination, as opposed to step or aerobic dance moves, which rely on timing and rhythm.

Variety of moves: After mastering the lateral motion you can add kicks and other movements. A deeper bend into the knees and a forward lean (like a speed skater) provide a harder workout. The mat can also be used lengthwise for a cross-country skiing motion. The bumpers provide a stable and smooth base for push-ups: grasp the bumper and let your toes slide as you lower and lift your body.

As a cross-training tool: The lateral movement builds inner and outer thigh muscles, whereas steps, Stair Masters and treadmills mostly build quadriceps and hamstrings.

For specific sports training: Any sport that includes a lot of lateral moves — skiing, tennis, basketball, soccer, hockey — requires strong inner and outer thigh muscles that the Slide Reebok helps develop.

Students feel dissatisfaction

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — In terms of judging high school students' satisfaction with or alienation from school, high school dropouts represent only a fraction of those who are turned off by school, according to the head of the University of Rochester's Graduate School of Education and Human Development.

"A lot of kids find school oppressive, and not all students who dislike school drop out," says Dean Wexler, whose book "Becoming Somebody" describes how students at three high schools experience their education.

"Formally dropping out is the end point of a long continuum in which there are lots of levels of dissatisfaction."

In the attempt to reform schools, there has to be an effort to change the character and quality of the classroom experience, Wexler says, adding that kids themselves have "plenty to say" on that topic.

Celebration of the Arts

Arts Assembly to sponsor events for family

Celebration of the Arts opens Thursday and runs through May 2.

The event begins with a free family concert at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at Midland College's Beal Plaza. Performing will be the Cajun Born Band from Louisiana. The band performs cajun music. Sponsors are Power 106, Bayou Wadley, Tom Brown, Inc., and Dr. Charles Younger.

Sponsored by the Arts Assembly of Midland, COA is in its 10th year. The annual event includes live performances, activities for children, a street dance featuring country and western band Palomino Road and a Cinco de Mayo parade, sponsored by the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, during its two-day festival at Midland Center and Centennial Plaza in downtown Midland.

The Preview Party will be from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Friday at Midland Center. The 1993 Distinguished Artist, Wayne Baize, will be honored.

Khenany, a group of musicians from Sonora, Mexico, will perform as will Cornplanter, a composer and classical pianist.

The food for the Preview Party will be catered by Santa Fe Grill. Guests will have the opportunity to view and purchase art from more than 65 artists.

Admission to the preview party, which is sponsored by Joanie and Bobby Holt, Kay and Charles Bird, Lynn D. Durham, Mary and Henri De Compiegne Jr., Elizabeth Locker, Carolyn J. Roden and Beverly Pevehouse, is $35.

Celebration of the Arts opens Saturday with a "Run for the Arts" 5-K Walk and 5-K Road Race beginning at 8:30 a.m. and a one mile Children's Fun Run at 9:15 a.m, sponsored by First City Center, Aetna/Rubloff, Parker & Parsley and Chevron U.S.A. The entry fee, which includes a T-shirt, before Monday is $10, before Friday is $12 and race day is $15. For more information call 689-0646.

Festival hours are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday and noon to 6 p.m. May 2. Admission at the door is $3 for adults, $2 for seniors, $1 for children 3 to 17 and free to those under 3.

The Cinco de Mayo parade, which features Khenany, begins at Lamesa Road and Nobles Street at 11 a.m. and proceeds down Lamesa and Wall Avenue, past Centennial Plaza, and ends at noon at the Midland County Library.

The street dance, sponsored by KNFM, NewsWest 9 and Permian Distributing-Coors Light, begins at 8 p.m. Saturday. Admission is $5 in advance and $7 at the door. Advance tickets may be purchased at Luskey's.

For more information call the Arts Assembly, 687-1149.

Wayne Baize is the Distinguished Artist for Celebration of the Arts, set for Thursday through May 2. The Preview Party, when Baize will be honored, will be from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Friday at Midland Center and Centennial Plaza.

Artist to be honored at Preview Party

When he was a child, Western artist Wayne Baize could be corralled by his favorite toy. A coloring book.

"I always liked a coloring book and follow the dots," the Fort Davis artist said. "It was one of my favorite pastimes."

He also enjoyed drawing and watching others draw, particularly his older brother Paige, who now makes his living as a cowboy along with his other brother, Arlon.

Even now, after 25 years as a full-time artist, Baize said, "When I see someone else's great piece of work, I get as excited as I used to. It floors me what can be done if you are artist enough to do it."

And, he still loves painting animals.

"I've done some portraits. Most of the portraits have been in a Western setting. The animals are what really got me going. That's still my first love, drawing animals — horses and cattle in particular."

Baize, who is Celebration of the Arts' Distinguished Artist this year, is grateful to be not only an artist, but one who successfully sells his work.

"I feel so fortunate in being able to live the life that I'm able to," he said. "Every painting that I sell I think, 'Well, that may be the last painting that I sell.'

"People can live without it. It (art) does enrich people's lives, but they can live without it."

Baize will be honored at COA's Preview Pary Friday, April 30. This year's COA poster, sponsored by Texas Commerce Bank, features a painting by Baize.

The original oil will be sold at a posted bid auction during the Preview Party, a casual dress affair that features dinner catered by Santa Fe Grill and live entertainment provided by Khenany, musicians from Sonora, Mexico, and Cornplanter, a composer and classical pianist. Tickets, priced at $35, may be purchased through the event's sponsor, the Arts Assembly of Midland, 687-1149, or at the door.

The artist is not a newcomer to Midland. His work has been in such shows here as the annual Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library Art Show and Auction on numerous occasions and he was among the artists who helped illustrate the library's book "Cowboys Who Rode Proudly."

"You used to be able to come to Midland and sell out in one block nearly," Baize said, recalling the early 1980s when the Permian Basin was in a boom. "It's not that way anymore."

Despite the fact that it's more difficult to sell art work in any market today than it was then, Baize said, "In some ways, I think it's a little bit healthier market.

"If a painting is good enough and it's not overpriced, it will still sell. There was a lot of bad art sold back then. Nowadays, the collectors are better educated, and it has to be quality work. If it's not overpriced, you can stay in the business."

In creating a painting today, Baize pays more attention to detail than he did when he first started out.

"When I first started out, most of my work was in pencil vignettes. They didn't have much background. I was mostly interested in cowboys and horses and cattle and such. As I've gone on, I've tried to add more to it. Put more emphasis on the background. Yet, I don't want to take away from the livestock and cowboys.

"It seemed like in the past, when Western art was really going strong, just put a horse in it and it would sell. But nowadays, the painting has to have more thought and design. You have to put a whole lot more work into a painting that you used to."

Some ideas when moved to canvas don't materialize the way an artist wants them to, said Baize, adding that he doesn't throw away as

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Event to have jazz

West Texas Jazz Society presents "Celebration Of The Arts" with Jazz on a Sunday Afternoon featuring Larry Spencer and The Societies Jazz Combo at Bayou Wadley, Plaza Shopping Center - Garfield and Wadley, at 4 p.m. today.

Spencer

Spencer's professional tour was launched when he was invited to tour with Buddy Rich in 1980. Later, he toured with the Woody Herman Orchestra. Since then, he has performed with, among others, Henry Mancini, Bob Hope, Ella Fitzgerald and Mel Torme. His most recent performances include trumpet features with Natalie Cole and Ray Charles.

From 1985-1988, Spencer was first trumpet with the Fairmont Hotel Orchestra, Dallas. He was a featured soloist at the 1987 International Electronic Music Festival, Atlanta, Ga.

He has played and recorded with many local groups, including Pete Peterson's "Collection Jazz Orchestra," with whom he is a featured soloist. In 1992, Spencer recorded with Joe McBride, the Dixie Chicks, Tony Hakim, Maurice Anderson and the Creative Opportunity Orchestra.

He also leads his own 12-piece big band, "Blitzen," as well as a jazz quintet. His newest venture is a brass septet for which he is coproducing an album that will include original compositions.

Spencer moved to Texas in 1977 from Columbus, Ohio, where he attended Capitol University Conservatory of Music. He is a former member of the famed 1 O'Clock Lab Band of North Texas State University. He left North Texas in 1978.

A free clinic for area music students is planned from 1:30-3:00 p.m. West Texas Jazz Society members, high school stage band members, community college band members, and Midland/Odessa Symphony Orchestra members are admitted free. Nonmembers are admitted for $5.00 per person.

For more information call 682-4283 or 563-1701.

■ Fairy tale planned

ODESSA — "Rumpelstilskin," the last show of the Kaleidoscope Company season, will be on stage at 2:30 p.m. May 1, 2, 8 and 9.

This fairy tale about a miller's daughter who spins straw into gold is a favorite among children. Tickets are $3 per person and an adult accompanying a child 6 or younger will be admitted free.

A special performance of the show benefiting the 1993-94 KC Scholarship Fund will be presented at 6:30 p.m. May 7. Ticket price is $10 per person and will include a pizza party, cokes, cookies, a cast picture and other favors.

For reservations or more information call 1-362-2329.

■ Singers present show

The Midland College Chorale and Chamber Singers will present "Due North," five songs of nature by Canadian minimalist composer Stephen Chatman, at 8 p.m. Thursday in the sanctuary of First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

"Minimalism is the art of getting the most out of the least, musically," said Michael Jordan, conductor of the MC Chorale and Chamber Singers. "Minimalist works have been popular across the country for a number of years, but I can't recall hearing a live performance of minimalist compositions in Midland, so these may be the first minimalist pieces to be performed live by a local group."

The concert also will include works of Joseph Haydn, Josquin Des Prez and Thomas Weelkes.

Shari Santirelli is the pianist for the MC Chamber Singers.

No admission will be charged. The public is invited to attend.

■ College plans concert

ODESSA — The Odessa College Concert band will present its spring concert at 8 p.m. Friday in the Permian High School Auditorium.

The band will present a variety of music including a medley of show tunes, "Carmina Burana" by Carl Orff and John Philip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever."

They also will play music from the movie "Home Alone" featuring soloist Adonna Peat, principal trumpet for the Midland-Odessa Symphony, playing "Music of the Night."

Guest conductors will be Cindy Bullock and Virgil Johnson.

OC band members include students as well as professional and amateur musicians from Odessa, Midland and other Permian Basin cities.

Admission is $3 at the door or free with an OC identification card.

■ Oil paintings displayed

Oil paintings of Doris J. Welch are on display through April at Texas Commerce Midland National, the former First City, Marienfeld Street at Texas Avenue.

Welch

Ms. Welch, a 28 year Midland resident, has been painting for nine years as a hobby and has studied with Margaret Kessler, LaWanda Calton and local artists.

She is a member of the Palette Club and the Midland Art Association.

■ Theater plans auditions

Auditions for "Summer Mummers" are set for May 9-11 at the historic Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave., downtown.

Auditions for the melodrama are from 7 to 9 p.m. May 9 and 10.

Auditions for the olio are set for 5 to 7 p.m. May 9 and 7 to 9 p.m. May 11.

Those interested are invited to attend the Summer Mummers Kick-Off Party. For more information on the kick-off party call 686-8136.

This year's production is entitled "Roguery on the River" or "The Great Goober Grab."

■ Group to have seminar

The West Texas Writers will sponsor a writing seminar, "How to Create Magic," Saturday with Wanda Evans of Lubbock as workshop leader.

The focus of "How to Create Magic" will be three-fold: writing and marketing the romance novel, writing personal experience stories for magazines and learning to write from the subconscious.

Ms. Evans calls this an exciting time for the romance novel, which is expanding to include such topics as ESP, paranormal experiences and mysteries.

Included in the seminar is an hour session in which participants will write a 300-word true-experience story they can sell for $50 and recoup the cost of the seminar, said a release from the West Texas Writers.

"An important part of the workshop is the section in which we will discover the magic within us as we learn to use the secrets of the subconscious," Ms. Evans said. "Here, we can learn to turn daydreams into active imagination so we can produce stories, poems and books.

Ms. Evans is an editorial writer and general columnist for the Lubbock Avalanche Journal. She also is a free-lance writer and teacher of creative writing. Her work has been published in "Home Life," "Good Housekeeping," "Reader's Digest," "Southern Living" and other periodicals. She authored the biography of former representative George H. Mahon, "One Honest Man."

"How to Create Magic" will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday at Gili's Restaurant, 4411 W. Illinois Ave.

Cost is $35 for the general public, $25 for members of West Texas Writers and $30 for those who become members of WTW on or before Saturday.

For more information or to register call Deborah Ward, 694-3629, or Ms. Evans, 1-806-762-8844 or 1-806-793-5781.

■ Trumpeter to perform

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale will present trumpeter Bryon Stripling for an evening of the music of legendary performer Louis Armstrong May 8.

The concert, which will be held at Odessa's Holiday Inn Centre, will be at 8 p.m.

The New York Times has described Stripling as "a powerful trumpeter, at ease with the most complicated and derailed bebop lines and open-arm Armstrong swagger."

The performance is sponsored by Texas Commerce Bank of Odessa, Sun Chrysler-Plymouth and Boldrick and Clifton, Attorneys at Law.

In 1987, Stripling's acting, vocal and trumpet-playing abilities won him the role of "Satchmo" in the musical "Satchmo: America's Musical Legend," after an international search for a musician who embodied Armstrong's talent and charisma.

Stripling has earned acclaim for his performances as lead trumpeter and soloist with the Count Basie Orchestra, directed by Thad Jones and Frank Foster. He also has worked with the bands of Dizzy Gillespie, Woody Herman, Lionel Hampton, Clark Terry and the Lincoln Center Classical Jazz Orchestra. His trumpet can be heard on numerous television commercials, movies and soundtracks.

His extensive formal background includes training at the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N.Y., and the Interlochen Arts Academy, Interlochen, Mich.

For ticket information call the symphony office, 563-0921.

■ Band plays weekly

Odessa native Bill Ervin performs Wednesdays through Saturdays at Bayou Wadley, Plaza Shopping Center, Garfield Street at Wadley Avenue.

Ervin

Through the years, Ervin has appeared with, among others, Willie Nelson, B.J. Thomas, Ronnie Millsap, Michael Martin Murphy, Jerry Jeff Walker and Delbert McClinton.

"My life has been characterized by a series of huge ups and downs — storybook success and devastating failures — but the music goes on," Ervin said.

Current members of The Bill Ervin Band, organized in 1987 to promote an album that has just been released, are Steve Smith of Andrews, Midlander Marty Connalley, Midlander Gary Phillips and Odessan Craig Goodson.

Ervin, who graduated from Andrews High School in 1972, received All-District and All South Plains honors in football in 1970. He also went to state in track that year. In addition, he was involved in student government.

For more information and performance times call Bayou Wadley.

■ Horse review planned

SAN ANGELO — The American Horse and Cavalry Review, an event previously known as Sabers, Saddles and Spurs, will be held on the grounds of Fort Concho National Historic Landmark Saturday.

The festivities, which are free to the public, begin Friday with an equestrian art exhibit and the opportunity for bids to be placed on a favorite horse and rider who are scheduled to compete and perform Saturday. Friday's activities will be held from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

Saturday's activities begin with an opening ceremony and parade at 10:30 a.m. followed by polo, jumping, performances by the San Angelo Saddle Club, side-saddle demonstrations, a presentation by the Tom Green County Sheriff's Posse, a historical overview and drills by Fort Concho gavalry and dressage, and more jumping before the closing ceremony at 4:30 p.m.

This year's review is dedicated to the memory of the late Major General Otto Scherz, a stalwart and primary supporter of the restoration of Fort Concho National Historic Landmark.

■ Center holds auction

ALBANY — The Old Jail Art Center, Highway 6 South, is holding its auction and buffet from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. May 1 here.

Reservation deadline is Tuesday. Admission is $15 per person and includes the buffet.

The preview is set for Tuesday through Friday at Jones Pavilion. Bids may be submitted for works in advance for those unable to attend the auction. No admission is charged to the preview.

■ CAF ball scheduled

The Confederate Air Force is holding its Magnolia Ball in May at the CAF International Headquarters, Midland International Airport.

The event will be reminiscent of a traditional Southern ball. The evening will begin at 7 p.m. with a social hour and be followed by a four-course gourmet dinner. Clifford Zirkel's Big band South of Austin, a 16-piece orchestra, will perform.

Dress is formal, but tuxedos are not required. Southern dress is optional. Ticket prices begin at $30 per person or reserved seating is available at an additional cost. Reservations are required and tickets must be purchased before Tuesday. For reservations or more information call 563-1000.

The Magnolia ball is a fund-raising event, sponsored by the CAF, a not-for-profit organization. Proceeds will be used to enhance the CAF's aircraft display facilities.

■ Musical opens Friday

FORT WORTH — The satirical folk musical "Cotton Patch Gospel" opens Friday at Casa's Theatre One the Square.

The production, featuring two members of the Fort Worth band Zen Cafe, will run through June 27 with performances Thursday through Saturday at 8 p.m., Saturday matinees at 4 p.m. and Sunday performances at 3 and 7 p.m.

Tickets range from $16 to $18 and are available by calling 1-817-332-2272.

■ CAF to hold benefit

The 10th annual Round-Up benefiting the American Cancer Society is set for 7 p.m. May 15 at the Confederate Air Force hanger, Midland International Airport.

Lorrie Morgan and Jerry Jeff Walker will be performing for the event

The theme of Round-Up '93 is "In Search of the American Outback," a journey through time and space through unchartered territories in the American West. Guests will arrive at the "End of the Line," the last stop of civilization.

At the last stop is the Bank, where guests receive their life's savings — a money bag filled with Outback currency — and a map guide leading them to the treasure of the American Outback. The main area of the party is divided into territories. The search for the treasure leads guests through the territories and unique games of chance. Gaming events will include a casino managed by an entertainment company from Dallas.

The meal for the event will be catered by the Perini Brothers of Buffalo Gap.

General admission for the event is $125 per couple and reserved seating in a preferred area is $275 per couple. Sponsor tables start at $1,600. For more information call the American Cancer Society, 683-6374.

■ Club has last show

The Green Thumb Garden Club's "Setting Pretty" show closes today at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

The Green Thumb Garden Club was formed in 1941 and held biennial flower shows in members' homes until 1991, when the show "Floral Portrait of a Painting" was held at the museum in conjunction with an exhibit of paintings by early Taos artists.

The show is one of the many festivities being held at the museum this spring to celebrate the museum's 25th year in the Turner Mansion.

■ Gallery features art

A show featuring the work of Midlanders Mary Lambeth Fish and Jack Hickman closes May 6 at Gallery 1114, 1114 N. Big Spring St.

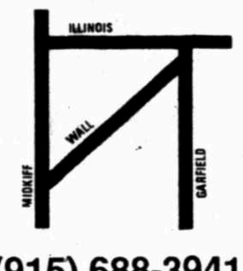

Ms. Fish received her bachelor of fine arts from Arizona State. She has been a member of gallery 1114 for two years.

Hickman received his bachelor of fine arts from the University of Texas, Austin, and a master of arts in education from Texas A&I. He was a founding member of gallery 1114. Hickman teaches art and science at Trinity School. His teaching honors include a Christa McAuliffe National Fellowship.

Gallery 1114 is a co-operative center for modern and contemporary art. Hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Thursday through Sunday.

Producers find fool's gold standard for sitcom humor

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — The man was asked to explain why he frequented a restaurant he didn't like. "I know the food will be bad," he replied — "but I know just HOW bad."

That kind of thinking helps account for the success of Miller-Boyett Productions.

Perhaps the names don't ring a bell, but Thomas L. Miller and Robert L. Boyett should be recognized for what they are: packagers of TV's most reliable mystery meat. Grandly, blandly routine, their "Full House," "Family Matters," "Step by Step" and "Getting By" bring, no, not appetite appeal, but unexcelled comfort to television viewing.

Now in its sixth season, "Full House" anchors ABC's hit Tuesday night schedule at 8 p.m. Eastern time.

The other three Miller-Boyett sitcoms (including the new Cindy Williams showcase "Getting By") air Fridays starting at 8 p.m. Eastern, all part of ABC's self-designated "T.G.I.F." lineup.

In this case, "T.G.I.F." must be shorthand for "thank goodness it's familiar." Perhaps as capably as anyone ever, Miller-Boyett has capitalized on how with TV, familiarity breeds not contempt, but contentedness.

"I know what I like," viewers contentedly tell themselves as they tune in a Miller-Boyett show, little suspecting that what they have conceded is quite the opposite: "I like what I know."

With Miller-Boyett, they do know. Every week, even before the fade-in, they know just what they're gonna get. And how could it be otherwise? Like it or not, they've had the menu and the recipes memorized for years.

What are these series about? It's tempting to say "about 22 minutes." But a television critic, deprived of a raucous Miller-Boyett laughtrack, must skip the comic asides and confront his question head-on:

All four series are about a loving but insult-hurling family. All four feature bright, smart-mouthed kids. All four center on the living room. All four have a fondness for contrived, awwww-inducing finales. All four bear an off-the-rack, all-purpose title (c'mon, what series COULDN'T be called "Step by Step," unless it was maybe about ice hockey?).

Worst of all, with all four shows, an interchangeable, smiley-face theme song is tacked on. One champions "hanging in for the big break, but we must have some of the wedding cake." Another chirps, "All I see is a tower of dreams, real love bursting out of every seam." Can anybody out there match either lyric to its series? Or are you still retching?

To paraphrase George Santayana, "Those who cannot remember the past will be condemned to come up with fresh ideas for TV shows."

Not bloody likely with Miller-Boyett, which last week resorted to the same parental "good cop, bad cop" piece of business on two of its sitcoms ("Family Matters" and "Getting By") the very same night.

Week in, week out, Miller-Boyett knows you like what you know.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, APRIL 25, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Putting down roots will provide a nourishing environment for romance. Show that you mean what you say. This summer, your relationship with a family member could interfere with a business proposal. Declare your independence and do what is best for you personally. Those headed for college in the fall will benefit from exposure to a wide variety of people. Be careful not to neglect old ties while forging new ones. Travel for pleasure early in 1994.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Al Pacino, jazz singer Ella Fitzgerald, actress Talia Shire, basektball star Meadowlark Lemon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Protect yourself from stress by avoiding emotional confrontations with a sibling. Do what you can to help a troubled neighbor or friend. A relationship will mend itself if you give it a chance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A lucky day to travel. A close relationship is your greatest asset now. An inspirational message has a profound effect on your outlook. Open up to good friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Communicating your views to other people draws favorable publicity. Whether the subject is business or money, you and a newcomer speak the same language.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Certain factors may have been overlooked, giving you cause for concern. You may have to seek additional data next week. Getting back together is a real possibility if both sides are still unhappy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Make a long-postponed decision and let the chips fall where they may. Revealing the truth works to your advantage. Your communication skills bring you new career success and a stronger romantic relationship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Let go of negative feelings. New scientific or medical developments can help you. You will have to get behind a community movement if you want it to succeed. Do something special tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you have an influential friend to whom you can turn for assistance, do not hesitate today. Connections can work miracles at times. Listen to your sixth sense regarding a loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): There is nothing like talking things over in a friendly spirit to reconcile differences of opinion. Skip a social event if you prefer relaxing at home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This is a day that could get better and better as the hours flash by. Approach a family get-together with the right attitude and you should have a good time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Ride with the tide; trying to buck it could overturn the boat. This applies to your home life as well as your job. Diplomacy helps you broach a delicate subject with a teen-ager.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Conflicting emotions could hamper progress this morning. By afternoon, you will be in better control of your feelings. Refrain from making hasty business or financial decisions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your generosity to a partner could prove more costly than anticipated. Make certain the bills are paid promptly. When spending time with teen-agers, do more listening than talking.

Jeff Meckstroth and Eric Rodwell have been a partnership for so long that, in bridge circles, they have come to be known by one name—Meckwell. There's hardly a bridge honor in the world that they have not achieved and, if you follow the play on this hand from the recent London Sunday Times Tournament, you will understand why.

East's opening two diamonds was a weak two in either major, and which was clarified soon enough. Meckwell would not have collected enough from defending three spades doubled to compensate for a vulnerable game, so they pushed on to three no trump with Rodwell, South, declaring.

West led the eight of spades and East, Atta-Ullah Munir of Pakistan, encouraged with the six, an excellent play which prevented declarer from holding up. In with the jack of spades, Rodwell made the fine play of a low diamond. Had West, British internationalist Robert Sheehan, followed low, East's only entry would have been removed. Instead, he shot up with the ace of diamonds and continued with spades. Declarer held up one round and then won the ace.

At this point most declarers fell back on the heart finesse and went down two tricks when that lost. Rodwell led another diamond. Had West produced the queen, the contract would have been secure. When West followed low, declarer rose with dummy's king, hoping to drop the lady. No luck.

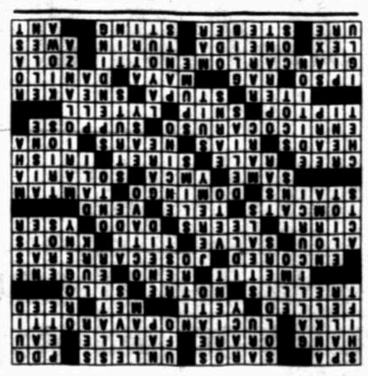

If West held the queen of diamonds, the contract was still safe. But before exercising that option, Rodwell cashed the ace and king of hearts. When the queen dropped, nine tricks were there for the taking—two spades, four hearts, one diamond and two clubs. A bravura display of dummy-play technique.

Nelson is on road to financial freedom

By Mary Campbell
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Willie Nelson, the grizzled country singer who's been working largely for Uncle Sam these last few years, is hoping his new album will help square things with the Internal Revenue Service.

"Johnny Cash says all anybody needs is a hit record," he says. "It cures all the ills, solves all the problems."

Nelson might have that hit with his new album, "Across the Borderline."

Nelson, who had his considerable possessions seized by the IRS and is digging out from under a $9 million tax debt, turned 60 on April 30. But he's not ready to pack it in.

He has worked to stay slim. His mustache and beard are white, but the hair which flows from under a rolled bandana headband to the middle of his back is red-brown. His youngest two children, with his fourth wife, are 3 and 4.

Between May and October last year, Nelson did 144 shows in Branson, Mo., the new country music mecca where some performers wind down their careers. But one such "vacation" season after years of exhausting touring was enough for Willie.

"Personally, I'm not that happy staying in one place so long," he says. "I like to move around."

So, in the words of his song, Willie is "on the road again."

"Across the Borderline" is seen as Nelson's comeback album. After his 1991 album, "The IRS Tapes," in which he was accompanied only by his own guitar, and all the publicity about his tax troubles, many thought Nelson had fired his band and faded into Living Legend Land.

"I read one place that the new album is like hearing about a friend waking up from a coma," he says. "To me it didn't seem that way. I'd still been working."

Nelson now is making sure everybody knows he's awake and kicking. He's doing commercials for Taco Bell, among other things.

His new album contains a lot of songs written by rock stars, Nelson says, "but the music is not that much rock." It sounds more like the timeless folk music of Woody Guthrie.

This month, Nelson will be on "Saturday Night Live" and CBS will air a two-hour special honoring his 60th birthday.

Jose Cuervo Tequila is sponsoring his current tour, but Nelson says he doesn't drink much any more.

"I'm just trying to get my money back, what I've spent over the years," he says.

many paintings as he once did.

"Usually within 10 days I'll know whether I'll be getting close to finishing it or throwing it away. Some just never do work out."

Baize began making a living on his pencil drawings, then moved to colored pencils and mixed media when people wanted color. For the past five years, he has painted mostly in oils.

"It seemed like people, when they think of art, they think of oil painting. They just don't hold the other media in as high esteem as they do oil painting, which I think is foolish. A good pencil drawing to me has a very high appeal ... I think there's more skill in watercolor than there is in oil — to handle it right."

The advantage to working in oils lies in mixing colors, Baize said. "I can get better color than I did with colored pencil and acrylic. It seems there was a limit to the colors, but with oils there's about any color or value that you want."

Baize, who spent his early years on a ranch halfway between Hamlin and Standford, believes the art market is more competitive now than it was when he became a full time artist 25 years ago.

"I'd hate to start out in it now. It's a lot more competitive. Back then there were quite a few Western artists, but Western art hadn't become as popular as it has become. Now, I think there's so many really good artists in the field, it's harder to break into than it was back then."

He credits those who encouraged him along the way with helping make his success possible beginning with his first teacher, Stanford resident Sarah McDonald, whose daughter by the same name is a Midland resident. He began taking private lessons from Miss McDonald, a widow, when he was 12.

"She had known Frank Tenny Johnson (of California). He used to come out to the Swenson SMS Ranch in the '20s or so. Some of my earliest lessons were copying some of the sketches he drew for her."

Because of the drought that swept Texas in the 1950s, Baize's father sold his place and the family moved south of Abilene, where the artist attended and graduated from Wiley High School. The family's next move was to Baird. Then in 1967 or 1968 while Baize was living in Lubbock, he met another artist who has played a pivotal role in his life — Tom Ryan, now of Midland.

"He's always been my idol," Baize said, adding that he met Ryan at the 6666 Ranch.

"He encouraged me and critiqued my work. That first year he invited me to attend the cowboy artist show in Oklahoma City — just go, not to show my work. It was such an inspiration.

"He's critiqued my work ever since. I've gotten more help from him than anyone."

Ryan, who was in charge of the OS Ranch Show at Post, invited Baize to exhibit in the show.

"That's been the most fun show that I've ever been in. It ended 10 or so years ago. People from all over the country came to it, especially when it first started. That gave me exposure. I sold out every year there, when it was out on the ranch. They moved it to town one year, but it never was successful."

In addition to experiencing success in selling his work in art shows around the country, including Cheyenne, Wy., St Louis, Mo., Chicago, Ill., and Sanford, Baize also received encouragement from people associated with such art galleries as the Thompson Gallery, Stephenville, and the Texas Art Gallery, Dallas. Currently his work is handled by Trailside Gallery in Scottsdale, Jackson Hole and Carmel.

He has numerous magazine covers to his name, including those on such publications as Western Horses, Quarterhorse Journal, The Cattleman and Cutting Horse Chatter, and has a selection of limited edition prints with different publishers including Framehouse Gallery, Fenton Press, Texas Press and Guild Hall.

Another person who was instrumental in the artist's life was C.T. McLaughlin, now deceased, of the Diamond M Museum, Snyder.

"People really encouraged me. Of course, I wasn't married and didn't have a lot of responsibilities that I would have if I had married when I was younger. I was living at home with my folks. They certainly were supportive of me."

Today, Baize has more responsibilities than he did back then. He and his wife, Ellen Largent Baize, garden and she home schools three of their four children — Elizabeth, 9, William, 7, Jonathan, 5, and Charles, who will be 2 in July.

The two were brought together through the artist's love for the Davis Mountains, where he often found inspiration for his painting.

"I enjoyed the Davis Mountains so much I was able to buy a small place out there," Baize said. "The first place that I bought happened to belong to Ellen's father, Rust Largent.

"I met the daughter. I rented a house in Fort Davis and moved out there."

The two went together for six years before marrying in 1982.

Today, Baize tries to paint six days a week, but finds "there's a lot more interruptions that there used to be."

These interruptions are due not to his four children, but to the Hereford cattle he runs on 5,000 acres, 1,000 of which he owns.

He hopes to instill in his children the desire to pursue their dreams and talents regardless of the financial rewards.

CELEBRATION OF THE ARTS

There are many reasons for the artistic community in Midland to celebrate. This is the tenth year of the annual Celebration of the Arts and the first year for the Arts Assembly's newest project, CityArt. This mural, which was painted by Midland's children, was CityArt's first undertaking. Photo by Joe D. Williams.

A DECADE OF CELEBRATION

Festival leaps into tenth year

For ten years, Celebration of the Arts has provided a focus for Midland's cultural community. The annual festivities have been at the center of a decade of growth, of broadening scope and involvement.

This year's Celebration of the Arts is a fitting tribute to ten years of artistic activity in Midland. During April and May, the Arts Assembly spotlights the many different cultural organizations and activities in the community. The midpoint of the two-month emphasis on the arts is the April 29-May 2 jubilee which will feature performances, works of art by outstanding artists, fun and artistic activities for children, a free outdoor concert, a street dance and a parade. The two-day festival has grown over its ten years to attendance of more than 15,000 people. This year, Lucy Woodside, Executive Director of the sponsoring organization, the Arts Assembly of Midland, predicts an even greater turn-out at Midland Center and Centennial Plaza in downtown Midland.

One reason for celebration in 1993 is the beginning of Midland's newest artistic project, CityArt. CityArt paints on a larger-than-life palette. Sponsored by the Arts Assembly, it began in response to a recommendation made by the Midland County Grand Jury that a group be formed to remove graffiti. Rather than just remove it, CityArt has taken graffiti to a new artistic high. The pilot project of CityArt was done with "Wake Up," a group of children who are working with the Drug Task Force headed by City Councilwoman Claudia Egan and with children from Casa de Amigo's KidsArts & Company.

The first CityArt project, pictured above, was the painting of two murals to cover graffiti on the Mr. "M" store at the corner of Cuthbert and Big Spring. The design for the mural was created by local artist jo duFo with input from the children participating in the project. "Change the World—One Child at a Time" is the theme of the mural.

Just as CityArt is a graphic realization of cooperation, the annual Celebration of the Arts is an abstract made concrete. The FREE outdoor concert on the lawn at Midland College Thursday, April 29 by "Cajun Born Band" is designed for the whole family. The Friday night preview party will give arts supporters a chance to eat delicious food, listen to a classical pianist and a group of Incan musicians, as well as meet the more than 65 visual artists whose works will be displayed at Midland Center. An early morning "Run for the Arts" Saturday will let Midlanders flex their collective muscle, and a parade will lead right into the Celebration grounds.

At the festival on Saturday and Sunday, there will be live presentations by as many as 40 local performing groups, as well as outstanding entertainers from across the nation. On Saturday night, Midlanders will take to the streets at a street dance.

After ten years of Celebration of the Arts, Midland's artistic community has a lot to say for itself. This year's festivities, beginning Thursday and ending Sunday, will be a fitting anniversary for a decade of celebration.

A DECADE OF CELEBRATION

1984-1993: Years of Growth for Midland's Celebration of the Arts

The Arts Assembly's first Celebration of the Arts was staged in 1984 in response to cultural goals in "Objectives for Midland: The Eighties." The farsighted founders had a dream--but could they have known that ten years later the Celebration of the Arts would attract over 15,000 people, more than 60 artists and about forty performers?

1993's honorary chairs, from left, Kay Bird, Joanie Holt, and Beverly Pevehouse have been hosting the Celebration of the Arts Preview Party since 1988. "Celebration's more fun when you get your friends involved," Kay says. Joanie, who served as Board president twice, says,"When we started Celebration of the Arts we envisioned an event that would bring a lot of people into the Permian Basin. We wanted to earn money to put back into the arts organizations in our community. And we've been able to do that." According to Beverly, Celebration is a special time for families. "This give families something to do together," she says. "Some people ask us why we don't do it every three months!"

Photos by Joe D. Williams

Love and Marriage--that's what Jeff Hewett and Mary Beth Anton, right, found at Celebration of the Arts. In 1990, they met on Saturday at Celebration, started dating on Tuesday, got engaged the next year and married in 1992. This year they're Co-Chairs of Celebration. Not bad for a weekend with the arts...

Patty Loftis, above, stepped onto the Celebration stage in 1987 in a choral group. Since 1990, she's been the head of Performing Arts for the weekend festivities. "I had no idea there were so many talented people in the Permian Basin," she says.

De todas maneras que es el Cinco de Mayo?

Como usted ve, muchas celebraciones toman lugar por todo el Oeste de Tejas, la primer semana de Mayo, usted esta sujeto a obtener un extenso variedad de contestaciones.

Funcionarios Mexicanos están listos para señalar, que como el Cinco de Mayo es una fecha importante para la historia y cultura de su país, lo mismo es el "Día de la Independencia". Este honor se reserva para el Diez Y Seis de Septiembre, acontecido en el año de 1810 cuándo Don Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla emitid la proclamación de la independencia y levanto la bandera de la revolución.

El acontecimiento recordado para la celebración del Cinco de Mayo toma lugar cincuenta años mas tarde. La Independencia Mexicana, que fue ganada después de tener mas de diez años de guerra, estuvo nuevamente en peligro. El gobierno de Benito Juarez, lucha con la enorma carga de la deuda extranjera y la conspiración de ésos quien querían restaurar la monarquía a México, observando la ocupación de Veracruz por el ejército de tres naciones Europeas. negociaciones pronto aplacaron a dos de los invasores, Inglaterra y España, quien se retractaron. Pero Francia tenia otra cosa en mente, no sin la mas mínima idea que la expansión de un imperio

Straight Talk

So what is Cinco de Mayo all about, anyway?

As you visit the many celebrations that will take place throughout West Texas, the first week of May, you're liable to get a wide variety of answers.

Mexican officials are quick to point out that, while Cinco de Mayo is an important date in the history and culture of their country, it is not their 'Independence Day'. That honor is reserved for Diez y Seis de Septiembre, celebrating the day in 1810 when Don Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla issued the proclamation of independence, and raised the banner of revolution.

The event recalled by the Cinco de Mayo celebration takes place more than fifty years later. Mexican independence, which had been won after more than ten years of war, was again in danger. The government of Benito Juarez, struggling with the burden of huge foreign debts, and the plots of those who would restore the monarchy to Mexico, saw the occupation of Veracruz by armies of three European nations.

Negotiations soon placated two of the invaders, England and Spain, who withdrew. But France had other things in mind, not the least of which was the expansion of a colonial empire, under Emperor Napoleon III, and the restoration of the monarchy in Mexico.

El Nuevo Muchacho De La Esquina Celebra Su Primer...

Por Jeffrey McDonald y Amarante Cordova

Hace solamente doce meses que NuevaVista apareció en Midland, con una insercion mensual en el periódico Midland Reporter Telegram. Desde entonces, el periódico se ha expandido en tamaño y frecuencia, ahora apareciendo dos veces al mes. Adicionalmente a la distribución original en Midland, NuevaVista puede ser adquirida en Odessa, Stanton, Monahans, Big Spring, Pecos, Fort Stockton y Alpine. No esta mal para el nuevo muchacho en la esquina!

Claro que, el éxito increíble que a tenido nuestro periódico no a sido posible sin la participación de la comunidad del Oeste de Tejas y sus historias. Prueba de que el periódico se comprometió a buenas noticias, historias sobre educación, negocios, servicios a la comunidad y éxitos, que nunca cerrara a la afluencia de este material.

Amarente Cordova y Jeffrey McDonald, dos de los mas frecuentes contribuyentes de NuevaVista en esta año pasado, han unido para examinar algunas de las historias que hemos anexado de las paginas de nuestro periódico en los pasados doce meses. Ellos también han salido a enterarse que es lo que a pasado desde que esos artículos aparecieron por primera vez.

La primera emisión de Nueva Vista, que apareció en Mayo de 1992 presento en primera plana un articulo con antecedentes históricos y significado cultural de la celebración del Cinco de Mayo. El articulo fue escrito por uno de los mas distinguidos contribuyentes a nuestro periódico, el señor Cónsul Ecce Mendoza, quien dirigía la oficina del consulado Mexicano en esta Ciudad de Midland.

En el pasado año, el Cónsul Mendoza se cambio de lugar, por lo cual a sido reemplazado por el Cónsul José Luis Suárez. En Septiembre de 1992, El Cónsul Suárez contribuyo con un articulo de antecedentes históricos Y culturales, de otra gran celebración que viene a nosotros desde México, esta siendo el Dieciséis de Septiembre "Día de la Independencia".

El Cónsul Suárez hizo la observación que la situación en México, en otoño de 1810, fue muy similar a la atmósfera revolucionaria que fue palpada en Norte América en 1775. México era una Colonia Europea. Sus habitantes resintieron el trato de la corte real de España y fueron objeto de 'impuestos sin representación.'

En el Dieciséis de Septiembre, de ese año, Don Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla encendió la revolución con el "Grito de Dolores", la proclamación de independencia y acaudillo el primer ataque en la guerra que duraría mes de una década, ante que los Españoles finalmente reconocieran la independencia de México.

Adicionalmente a su contribución de este articulo para NuevaVista, el Cónsul Suárez dirigió su patrocinio la noche de la celebración en el Centro Civico de Midland, con música, baile y una nueva representación de lo que se llamo la gloria del Cura Hidalgo.

En Agosto, NuevaVista regreso a la escuela. Ricardo Torres, Director Ejecutivo de Operación Secundaria en el Distrito Independiente escolar en Midland, nos comunico el problema de los estudiantes que abandonan sus estudios sin obtener su diploma y los programas que MISD estaba ofreciendo para preveenir este problema.

Uno de esos programas fue Escuela

The New Kid on the Block Celebrates it's First...

One year behind us, and what a year it has been!

By Amarante Cordova and Jeffrey McDonald

It was just twelve months ago that NuevaVista first appeared in Midland, as a monthly insert in the Midland Reporter Telegram. Since then, the paper has expanded in size and in frequency, now appearing twice a month. And, in addition to the original Midland distribution, NuevaVista is now available in Odessa, Stanton, Monahans, Big Spring, Fort Stockton, Pecos, and Alpine. Not bad for the new kid on the block!

Of course, the incredible success of our paper would not be possible without the people of West Texas, and their stories. Proof that a paper committed to 'good news', stories about education, business, history, community service, and success, will never lack for plenty of material.

Amarante Cordova and Jeffrey McDonald, two of the most frequent contributors to NuevaVista over the past year, have joined together to review just a few of the stories that have filled the pages of the paper in the past twelve months. They have also gone out to learn what has happened since those articles first appeared.

The very first issue of NuevaVista, which appeared in May, 1992, featured an article on the historical background, and cultural significance of the Cinco de Mayo celebration. The article was written by one of the paper's most distinguished contributors, Consul Ecce Mendoza, who directed the Mexican Consulate's Midland Office.

In the past year, Consul Mendoza has moved on to another post, and his position here, in Midland, has been assumed by Consul Jose-Luis Suárez. In September of 1992, Consul Suárez contributed to an article on the historical background, and cultural significance, of another major celebration that has come to us from Mexico, Dieciséis de Septiembre.

Consul Suárez pointed out that the situation in Mexico, in the autumn of 1810, was very similar to the revolutionary atmosphere that was felt in North America in 1775. Mexico was a European colony. It's inhabitants resented their treatment by the royal court of Spain, and objected to 'taxation without representation'.

On the 16th of September, of that year, Don Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla ignited the revolution with the 'Grito de Dolores', a proclomation of independence, and leading the first attack in a war that would rage for more than a decade, before Spain finally recognized Mexican independence.

In addition to his contribution to the article in NuevaVista, Consul Suárez also would direct his office in it's sponsorship of a night of celebration at Midland Center, with music, dancing, and a reenactment of that Padre Hidalgo's call to glory.

In August, NuevaVista went back to school. Ricardo Torres, Executive Director for Secondary Operations at the Midland Independent School District, told us about the problem of students dropping-out of school without a diploma and the programs that MISD was offering to prevent dropouts.

One of those programs was Coleman High School, an alternative education program that was giving students at risk of dropping-out a second chance to stay in school, or get back into school, and get their diploma. The front page of that issue of NuevaVista featured a photograph of the new facilities for Coleman High School, which were under construction at that time.

Since then, construction has been completed, dedication ceremonies have taken

Hispanic Name Seven Worthy Court Candidates

By John Trasviña

Gov. Mario Cuomo's withdrawal from consideration for the U.S. Supreme Court leaves the field, by most accounts, with no established front-runner. It also creates the opportunity for an outstanding Hispanic attorney to come forward for consideration by President Clinton.

The appointment of a qualified Hispanic would not simply make history. It would mean another step toward justice and equality for all U.S. residents, including the nation's 27 million Hispanics.

The Hispanic National Bar Association, in conjunction with other Hispanic organizations, including 14 local and state bar groups, recently sent the President its "short list" of seven Hispanic attorneys, judges and elected officials who would serve the nation well on the Supreme Court.

This list represents seven months of identifying, screening and evaluating top Hispanic attorneys. While there may be others who were not candidates when this began but could be considered now, the attorneys recommended constitute a veritable Hispanic Legal All-Star Team that should not be overlooked when administration officials ponder names to fill the high court vacancy.

The Hispanic National Bar list comprises:

José Cabranes, U.S. District Court judge from Connecticut. A judge with 14 years of federal trial court experience, Cabranes was also Yale University's general counsel and the recipient of National Puerto Rican Coalition's Life Achievement Award. Well known to Clinton administration officials, Cabranes was one of just five federal judges selected in 1988 to serve on the Federal Courts Study Commission on the future of the nation's judicial system.

Cruz Reynoso, former Associate Justice of the California Supreme Court and now Professor of Law at the University of California, Los Angeles. With 11 years, court tenure in addition to a lifetime of advocacy on behalf of Hispanics, Reynoso's appellate court experience is equal to that of Justice Blackmun when he was appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court and surpasses that of 10 of the 12 most recent Supreme Court justices.

Vilma Martínez, president and general counsel of the Mexican American Legal Defense & Educational Fund (MALDEF) from 1973 to 1982, where she was at the forefront of civil rights advocacy in voting, immigration and education for Hispanics. Twice the recipient of Medals of Excellence from her alma mater Columbia University, Martinez for the past decade has been a partner in a top Los Angeles

Los Hispanos Proyectan A Siete Candidatos Valiosos Para El Tribunal Supremo

Por John Trasviña

La retirada del Gobernador Mario Cuomo de la consideración para el Tribunal Supremo de los Estados Unidos deja al terreno, según la mayoría de los conteos, sin un líder establecido. También crea la oportunidad de que un abogado Hispano prominente llegue a ser considerado por el Presidente Clinton. La designación de un Hispano capacitado no sólo haría historia. Significaría otro paso hacia la justicia y la igualdad para todos los residentes de los Estados Unidos, incluyendo a los 27 millones de Hispanos de la nación.

La Asociación Nacional de Abogados Hispanos (HNBA en inglés) junto con otras organizaciones hispanas, incluyendo a 14 grupos de abogados Hispanos locales y estatales, envió hace poco al presidente su "relación breve" de siete abogados, jueces y funcionarios electos Hispanos, que servirían bien a la nación en el Tribunal Supremo. Esta lista representa siete meses de identificar, escrutar y evaluar a los principales abogados Hispanos. Aunque puede haber otros que no fueran candidatos al empezar este trámite, pero que podrían ser considerados ahora, los abogados a quienes se recomienda constituyen un Equipo Legal Hispano de "Todos Estrellas" que no debería ser pasado por alto cuando los funcionarios del gobierno ponderen los nombres para cubrir la vacante del alto tribunal.

José Cabranes, Juez Federal de Distrito en Connecticut. Un juez con 14 años de experiencia en juicios de tribunal federal, Cabranes fue también el Asesor Legal General de la Universidad de Yale y recipiente del Galardón de la Coalición Puertorriqueña Nacional por Logros Vitalicios. Bien conocido para los funcionarios del gobierno de Clinton, Cabranes fue uno de los cinco jueces federales seleccionados en 1988 para prestar servicios en la Comisión de Estudio de los Tribunales Federales sobre el futuro del sistema judicial de la nación.

Cruz Reynoso, ex-Magistrado Asociado del Tribunal Supremo de California y ahora Catedrático de Derecho en la Universidad de California, recinto de Los Angeles. Con 11 años de permanencia en los tribunales, además de toda una vida de militancia a favor de los Hispanos, la experiencia de Reynoso en el tribunal de apelaciones es igual a la del Magistrado Blackmun cuando éste fue designado para el Tribunal

Negocio Hispano... es Buen Negocio

Por Amarante Cordova

Jane Paredes/NuevaVista

Gracie Urias, wife of Roy Urias, owners of Urias Floor Covering in Fort Stockton showing display area of their store

No es una sorpresa que Roy Urias a escogido un buen negocio aconsejado por su familia. Ante todo él es la tercera generación de su familia de hombres y mujeres que han sido exitosas en sus negocios, sirviendo a la comunidad de Fort Stockton

"Mi abuelo, cuando el vino a esta área, el tenia, quizá, quince años de edad. El llego siendo todavía un niño, que no tenia familia, Y el era un ranchero cuando el llego por primera vez," Urias dice, propietario de cubiertas de pisos Urias, de Fort Stockton. "Y el fue introduciéndose en negocios a la edad de veinte años. El tenia su barbería. Y el estuvo en el negocio hasta que cumplió setenta años de edad, fue cuando se retiro. "

"Lo que me sorprendi, es que realizo. Si alguien me enseño algo, fue mi abuelo, tan lejos hasta que triunfe en el negocio. Tan lejos que, si usted hace dos dólares, usted gaste dos dólares. Eso fue lo que nos dijo siempre, a mi padre, tanto como a un servidor."

Umberto Urias padre, fue el primero en el negocio de cubiertas para piso, como instalador por cuarenta años. Urias trabajo primeramente para old Coastal States Gas Corporación y también para Lone Star Gas Compañia, después tomo parte en el negocio de su padre.

"Estaba trabajando con mi padre en ese tiempo." recuerda Urias "Y dije, bueno, estamos instalando alfombras para otros negocios. Porque no probamos entrar en el negoció del menudeó? Y lo hicimos y comenzamos en lo que fue algún tiempo la barbería de mi abuelo. Era solamente un cuarto. Construido de madera en algún tiempo particularmente."

Los edificios han cambiado dramáticamente sobre los años, dado al continuo agrandamiento de la estructura que acomoda el salón y después boutique de la mama Lela Urias. Continuos éxitos de todos tendrían eventualmente cambiar sus negocios a la Calle Principal, del centro de Fort Stockton

Urias admite que hay muchos retos cuando uno trabaja pos si mismo, en siendo dueño y operando su propio negocio.

"Algunas veces quisieras no tener negocios y ser empleado. Especialmente cuando la economía a estado como estos últimos años," dice Urias, que esta acompañado con su esposa, Gracie, manejando el negocio. "Pero siento que el negocio se esta componiendo, usted sabe. Definitivamente pienso que así es. Cada vez esta mejor. Especialmente aquí, en el área de Fort Stockton!"

"Una cosa que deberás tienes que trabajar fuertemente. Toma mucho trabajo, esmero y disciplina. Pienso que tienes que ser muy conservativo cuando tu comienzas. No es nomas cosa de hacer algún dinero y gastarlo. Tienes que visualizarlo a un aspecto futuro de tu negocio. Es un mundo muy competitivo y tienes que tener una planeacion muy segura en tu negoció, para tener el éxito en tu negoció."

También están los retos mas peculiares del negocio de alfombras.

"Bueno, no nomas es simplemente cuestión de comprar alfombras. Cada familia tiene diferente necesidades, requisitos, y claro todo mundo tiene diferente presupuesto," explica Urias. "La industria de las alfombras ofrece diferente tipos y estilos que se amolda a cualquier tipo de presupuesto. Gente biene aquí, naturalmente ellos quieren alfombras. Entonces le buscamos, actualmente, segun sus necesidades, cuantos miembros de la familia, que clase de trafico ellos tienen y claro, cual es su presupuesto. "

"Escogemos lo mejor, le damos a nuestro cliente la mejor alfombra por su dinero. Es como nosotros tratamos y hacemos. "

"Y luego es como vienen los retos de operación en comunidades mas pequeñas."

"En verdad, en un pueblo pequeño y esto es un pueblo pequeño la mejor manera de publicidad para tu negoció, no importa que sea, es 'la palabra de tu boca'" Urias comenta. "Y si hago un trabajo para John Doe, y me encuentro con la Señora Doe en el supermercado, quiero que ella me salude con un !hola!, porque estará satisfecha con el trabajó que le ofrecí. Porque cuando alguien hace algo mal, lo sabrás al instante!"

"Como yo digo, cada vez que pisen en la alfombra, ellos miraran mi trabajo. Y si ellos no están satisfechos, tu serás ignorado, o conversaran con sus vecinos que, uno no hace un buen trabajó!"

"La póliza de la familia Urias a continuado por casi un centenio. Nosotros siempre trataremos en hacer el mejor trabajó posible" Urias dice. "Porque no espero ver a la gente por 10, 15, 20 años tal vez. Pero cuando ellas están listas para reemplazar una alfombra, yo quiero que ellos vengan con nosotros!"

Hispanic Business... is Good Business

By Amarante Cordova.

It's not surprising that Roy Urias has picked up some good business advice from his family. After all, he is the third generation of a family of successful business men and women, to serve the Fort Stockton community.

"My grandfather, when he came down to this area, he was, maybe, like fifteen years old. He came down as a kid, without a family. He was a ranch hand when he first came down here," said Urias, owner of Urias Floor Covering, of Fort Stockton. "He went into business at the age of twenty. He had his barbershop and a pool hall. He was in business until he was about seventy years old, when he retired."

"And it just amazes me, what he accomplished. If anybody taught me anything, it was my grandfather, as far as how to succeed in business. As far as, 'If you made two dollars, you spent two dollars.' That's what he always told us, to my dad, as well as to myself."

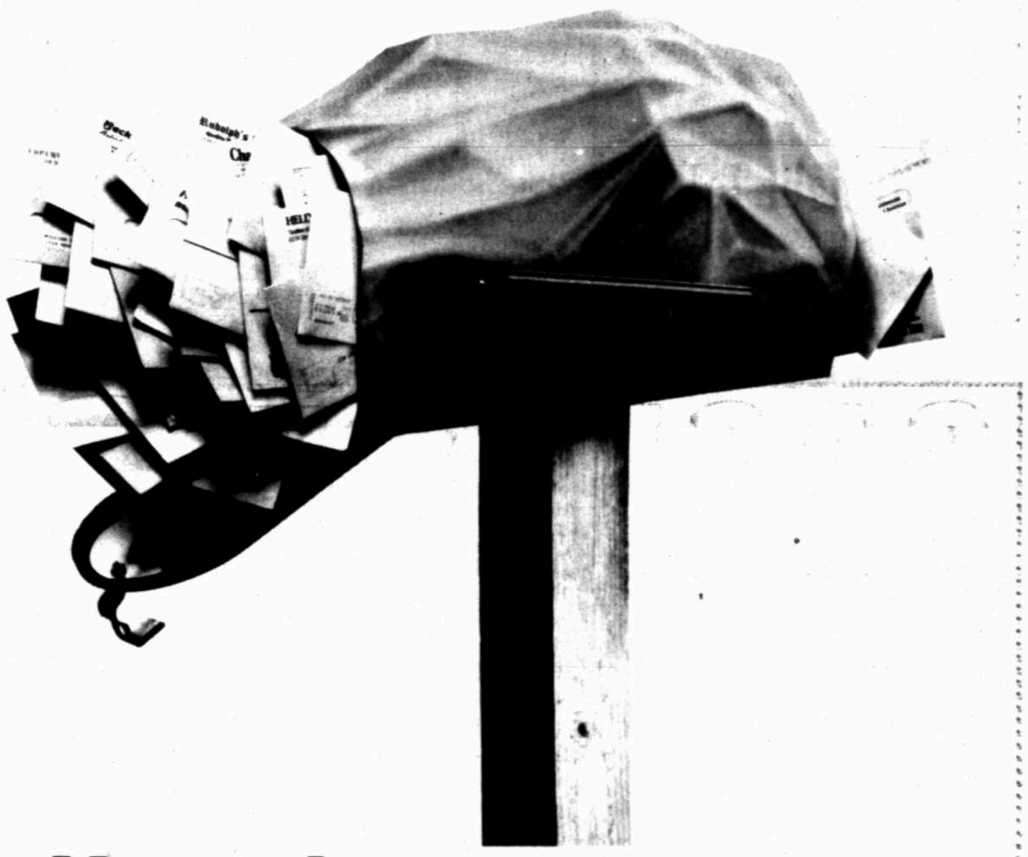

It was Urias' father, who first entered the floor covering business, as an installer, over forty years ago. Urias himself would work for the old Coastal States Gas Corporation, and Lone Star Gas Company, before joining his father in the business.

"So I was working with him at the time," recalled Urias. "And I said, 'Well, we're installing carpet now for other businesses. Why don't we try to get into the retail business?' And we did, and we started out in what was my grandfather's barber shop at one time. It was a one-room, wooden building at one particular time."

The building had changed dramatically over the years, due to Urias' mother, Lela, who had continually enlarged the structure to accommodate her successful salon, and later a boutique. Continued success for all would eventually see their businesses moving to separate locations on Main Street, in downtown Fort Stockton.

Urias admits that there are challenges to being self-employed, to owning and operating one's own business.

Valles, First Hispanic Justice of the Peace in the city of Odessa

By Amarante Cordova.

For many resident of Ector County, their introduction to the legal system may have taken place in the chambers of Judge Manuel Valles, Justice of the Peace, Precinct 4.

"You do the criminal, the civil, you do it all," explained Valles. ""We do the examining trials, for instance. If we find there's probable cause, we bound them over to the grand jury, and the District Attorney takes over, and the District Judge takes it."

"Mostly, we set bonds. We do everything. More generally, you know, we serve the people here." It was this commitment of service to the community, that led Valles to become actively involved in local politics, and ultimately, to run for political office.

"Well, I think it comes from my background. I've been a businessman and political activist for forty years," recalled Valles, who, in 1968, became the first Hispanic elected to the office of Justice of the Peace in Ector County. "I started doing political races many years before I even ran for office, helping some of the people, friends of mine, and so forth. So I've been in the political arena about forty years."

Perhaps it is those years of experience that has taught Valles the value of keeping in touch with, and serving the people of his community.

"It's all challenging, all of it, all aspects of it! That's the reason that I have been here that long, because I always want the challenge," he said. "Not only that, it's what you can do for the people you represent."

"You have to be conscious of the people all the time, and you have to be here and talk to the people. I have an 'open door' policy. You don't have to come down here and have an appointment - I will be here! If there's ten people, I will see everybody, you know, just wait and I will be here. I take all personal calls, I answer all calls."

Fairness, knowledge of the law, mediation skills, and good business sense. These were all cited as important skills for a Justice of the Peace.

"You have to weigh everything here. In other words, you have to be a mediator. You're not a policeman, and all that, just a mediator," explained Valles. "And, I guess, basically, it's people trusting you, that you'll be fair. They don't want you to just let them go, or do something like that. They want you to represent them, to be fair."

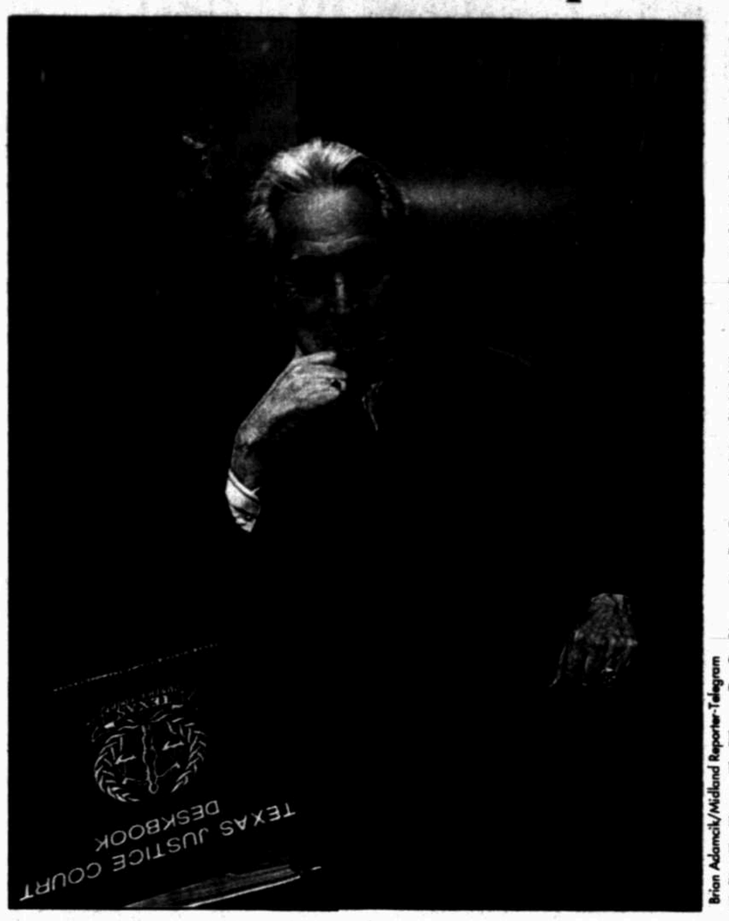

"Sometimes, you have to do something that you don't like to do. But you have to do it, you have to go by the law! It's not something that you just pick out of the blue sky, and do. You go by the law."

"You have to be more of a business-oriented person. You have to because there's a lot of money that goes through here, through the JP's office, in the tune of a million dollars a year." He added "Of course, to have served your community, and to serve your community, because they certainly come to you! You never lose sight of that, you never lose sight of who brought you here. So, you know, that's another aspect of the job."

But if, after twenty-five years, the job has not lost it's challenge, nor has it lost it's rewards.

"Great rewards, great rewards. I've been a businessman nearly all my life. I've had better jobs, but not as rewarding as this. This is something that, you wake up every morning, and there's something different," said Valles, who, in addition to his local duties, has also served as Chairman of the state association of JP's. "And it's a reward when you see that you have helped somebody. It has a tendency to warm your heart. Just kind of look at it and say, 'I can do that! I can help those people!' and 'I did help those people!'"

"I was born in Stanton, Texas, working in the cotton fields. From that early age, I thought there was something better than picking cotton. I always strived to do it.

Brian Adamcik/Midland Reporter-Telegram

"I started doing political races many years before I ever ran for office", Judge Manuel Valles, Justice of the Peace, Precinct 4.

My dad moved to Odessa, following the construction jobs, and we fell into Heaven when we came to Odessa! Everything changed, because there was more opportunity. If you went after it, always, the opportunities are here for everybody. Some of us work a little bit harder for them. But the opportunities are here!"

Valles, El Primer Juez de Paz Hispano de la Ciudad de Odessa

Por Amarante Cordova

Para muchos residentes del Condado de Ector, su introducción al Sistema legal quizás se halla llevado acabo en la cámara judicial del Juez Manuel Valles, Juez de Paz, Precincto #4.

"Usted hace lo criminal, lo civil, usted lo hace todo," explica Valles. "Nosotros examinamos las encausas, por ejemplo. Si encontramos que hay probable causa, la pasamos al gran jurado, y el fiscal lo toma y el Juez del Distrito lo acepta.

En mayorparte, sentamos las fianzas. Hacemos todo. Generalmente, sabe usted, servimos a la gente de aquí."

Fue este compromiso de servir a la comunidad, que hizo a Valles convertirse una persona activa en la política local, y últimamente, correr para una oficina política.

"Bueno, pienso que viene de mis antecedentes. He sido un hombre de negocios y activista político por 40 años," recuerda Valles, que, en 1968, fue el primer Hispano electo a la oficina de Juez de Paz en el Condado de Ector.

"Yo comencé a hacer campanas políticas mucho antes que corriera para un puesto, ayudando a la gente, a amigos míos, y así sucesivamente. Así es que he estado en la Arena Política como cuarenta años."

Quizás son esos cuarenta años de experiencia que a enseñado a Valles el valor de estar en contacto con, y servir a la gente de la comunidad.

Todo es desafíoso, todo, todas sus aspectos! Esa es la razón que he estado aquí tanto tiempo, porque siempre quiero el reto," el dijo.

"No nomas eso, es lo que uno puede hacer para la gente que uno representa."

"Uno debe de estar consiente de toda la gente todo el tiempo, y tiene uno que estar aquí y hablar con la gente. Yo tengo la costumbre de 'puerta abierta'. Usted no tiene que tener una cita para venir aquí, – Yo estaré aquí! Si hay diez gentes yo los veré a todos ellos, nada mas espere y yo estaré aquí. Y tomo todas las llamadas personales, yo las respondo todas."

Imparcialidad, conocimiento de la ley, trabajo experto, y buen sentido en el negocio. Estos son habilidades importantes para un Juez de Paz.

"Uno tiene que pesar todo aquí. En otras palabras, uno tiene que ser un intercesor. Uno no es policía y todo eso, nada mas un intercesor," explico Valles. "Y, pienso yo básicamente, es gente teniéndole confianza a uno que les sea justo e imparcial. Ellos no quieren que uno los suelte nomas así o hacer algo así. Ellos quieren que los represente y ser justo."

"Ay veces que uno tiene que hacer algo que a uno no le gusta. Pero uno tiene que hacerlo, uno tiene que seguir la ley. Uno tiene que ir segun la ley! No es algo que uno nomas toma nomas así, y lo haces. Uno sigue la ley."

"Uno tiene que ser una persona informada en el negocio. Uno tiene que estar informado o bien orientado en los negocios porque por aquí pasa mucho dinero, por la oficina del J.P., al tono de un millón de dólares por año. Así es que uno tiene que tener algo de conocimiento del negocio," el agrego. Por supuesto al ver servido tu comunidad y estará sirviendo. Porque ellos ciertamente vienen a ti! Uno nunca pierde esa observacion, uno nunca pierde eso y toma en cuenta que ellos te pusieron aqui. Asi es que, eso es otro aspecto de el trabajo."

Pero si despues de veintecinco años el trabajo no ha perdido su reto o desafio, ni a perdido sus recompensas.

"Grandes recompensas, grandes recompensas. Yo he sido un negociante casi toda mi vida. Y he tenido mejores trabajos, pero no con tan grandes recompensas como este. Esto es algo de que cuando te levantas por la mañana hay algo diferente," dijo Valles, quien en adicion a sus deveres locales, ha tambien servido como chairman de la asociacion de J.P.'s del Estado. "Y es una recompensa al saber que has ayudado a alguien. Tiene la tendencia de tocar tu corazón. Y nomas verlo y decir a uno mismo 'Yo puedo hacer eso! Yo puedo ayudar a esa gente!' y, 'Yo ayude a esa gente!'"

"Yo naci en Stanton, Tejas trabajando en el campo. Y de una edad temprana, yo pense que habia algo mejor que piscar algodon. Y siempre me esforse a hacerlo.

Mi padre se vino a Odessa, seguiendo los trabajos de construccion, y caimos en la gloria cuando llegamos a Odessa! Todo cambio, porque habia tanta oportunidad, Si lo querias, siempre, las oportunidades estan aqui para todos. Algunos de nosotros trabajamos mas para poderlos obtener. Pero las oportunidades estan aqui!"

Secundaria Coleman, una alternativa en el programa de educación fue dada a los estudiantes con mas riesgo de abandono de estudios dándoles una segunda oportunidad para que siguieran en la escuela, o que regresaran a la escuela y así obtuvieran su diploma. La plana estelar de esa emisión por NuevaVista presento la fotografía de las nuevas instalaciones de la Escuela Secundaria Coleman, las cuales estaban bajo construcción en aquel tiempo.

Desde entonces, la construcción a terminado, han tomado lugar ceremonias dedicadas en estas nuevas instalaciones y nombradas en honor a la Doctora Viola M. Coleman, cuyo impacto se a sentido en muchas partes de la comunidad, especialmente en la educación quien a abierto sus puertas.

"Estos son estudiantes de alto riesgo de abandono escolar, o que a abandonado y le desean regresar para continuar su educación secundaria," explico la Directora de la escuela Coleman Helen Lackey. '' Pero, por alguna razón, no puedo ir a la escuela todo el día. Muchos de ellos tienen familia, o hijos adolescentes, o tienen un trabajo, por ejemplo de ocho a cinco. Y tenemos esos estudiantes en la tarde."

"Los estudiantes que regresan finalizaran su secundaria con diploma, esto les permitirá hacer tanto que si ellos abandonaran sus estudios escolares y nomas toman un empleo, o no tomarlo en algunos casos. Ellos podrán tener un sitio, dentro de la comunidad, esos recursos que ellos han ganado como merecedor de sueldo.

Lackey admitió que el éxito de sus estudiantes han sido de su inspiración y actualmente sirve como un extra, bono emocional por el trabajo que han desarrollado.

"Tenemos un estudiante, el día de hoy, que regreso," Lackey recuerda." El termino sus estudios secundarios con diploma, el año pasado, turno nocturno - el es padre adolescente, el conoció a su esposa aquí. Ellos tienen un bebe."

Ellos viven en Arlington. El es un bombero en esa Ciudad. El regreso a visitarnos y a enseñarnos su bebe. Esto es tu recompensa.

En Septiembre se fabrico una controversia historia que el mundo la preparo con el aniversario numero quinientos de la travesía de Cristóbal Colón, que fue el primer contacto permanente entré el Viejo Mundo y el Nuevo. En los cinco centenarios que han pasado desde su travesía, la imagen de Colón y el mundo que el representa, se ha venido atacando por varias direcciones. Su descubrimiento fue señalado, fue el primer momento de la esa de lo conquisto, cuando muchos noticos de la sociedad Americana fueron destruidos y nueva tierras fueron trabajados por ejército de esclavos importados del Africa. NuevaVista clasifica por medio de debates y de contra-debates, examcinos el estudio de Colón hombre y su época.

En Octubre, Midland fue una de cientos de comunidades en América y Europa que marcaron el aniversario. Jeffrey McDonald, un lancero escritor establecido en Midland, condujo la apertura de una tarde de discursos, música y refrescos en el Midland Centenial Plaza. McDonald distribuyo con Colón y el principal papel que él jugo hace 500 años de historia. Otros conferencistas, representaron al Hispano, al Africaño-Americano y a la comunidad Nativo Americana también hablaron del impacto de la travesía de Colón en sus respectivas culturas.

En Noviembre, NuevaVista visita la punta oeste del Oeste de Tejas, para otra lección de historia. Sheldon Hall, Presidente de El Paso Misión Sendero Asociación, nos retrocedió el tiempo a 1598, cuándo un cansado grupo de viajeros, encabezados por Don Juan de Onate, pausado al margen de el Río Grande para agradecer a Dios por ayudarlos completamente en su jornada y devolverlos con bien a sus nuevos hogares Fue el primer Día de gracias de la celebración de América, pero el peregrino Inglés no llego a la orilla de Massachusetts por otros 23 años!

Un rápido salto atrás a el presente tomo a nuestros lectores por la controversia que levanto los nativos de El Paso tomaron el caso de Plymouth Colonia, en Massachusetts, donde ellos fueron arrestados por una personas locales y consignados por herejía. No hubo fallo final, sólo la decisión que mando la delegación a El Paso, a investigar la demanda de ésos conquistadores locos.

Sheldon Hall, en un entrevista continua que condujo a principios de este mes, nos informo que la delegación de Massachusetts mandaba saludar con el mismo espíritu que los de El Paso los habían saludado, varios mes antes.

"Ellos vinieron aquí. Ellos llegaron y fueron saludados por conquistadores, que cruzaron espada por ellos al venir bajando del aeroplano." dijo Hall. "Mientras merendaban en San Elizario (el sitio de Día de Gracias) de Onate, celebración en 1598, que fue interrumpida y tomados con fusiles, por unos muy malos individuos! Secuestrados entonces y muy cercanos a la hora, antes de que el alguacil del pueblo llegara y acribillara a todos los individuos malos!"

Pero ellos tuvieron juicio allí y decidieron libertar a ellos y dejaron que se regresaran a Plymouth a informar la verdad, en el primer Día de Gracias!"

El año 1993 es aún joven, pero no a estado sin compartir historia inspiradas. En la emisión de Marzo, NuevaVista hablo sobre la historia de Randy Velarde, un joven de Midland con un sueño de que algún día jugaría en las ligas Mayores de beísbol. Nosotros seguimos la trayectoria desde La Pequeña Liga de Campo del Oeste de Tejas, al Yankee Stadium casa de la Liga Mayor de beísbol en Nueva York. Y por el camino, nosotros hicimos una pausa para visitar aquéllos quién conocieron a Randy en sus años de formación y ayudaron de cierto modo para que lograra su sueño.

A sido poco mas de un mes desde que este artículo apareciera, pero a sido un emocionante tiempo para Velarde. A mediado de Febrero, él ganó un arbitraje con los Yankees de Nueva York y le otorgaron un contrato por 1.5 millones de dólares. El jugo una variedad de posiciones durante el entrenamiento de primavera y golpeo un .355 promedio. Para mediados de Abril el obtuvo un 4-3 en la temporada regular. Velarde Juega el campo izquierdo, para golpear .222 e incluso su primer cuadrangular de la temporada.

Y que, muy brevemente, fue un pequeño bocado de el año que a transcurrido. El año que sigue avanzando promete ser tan emocionante, como NuevaVista mira hacia adelante continuando su crecimiento y participación de su singular comunidad como es el Oeste de Tejas.

Dan Morales, the attorney general of Texas. A rising star at the age of 37, Morales is a former state legislator and prosecutor from San Antonio. A Harvard Law School graduate, he is a moderate whose pro-affirmative action, pro-choice and pro-death penalty views mirror those of President Clinton, with whom he was first associated as a member of Democratic Leadership Council.

Ricardo Urbina, former Georgetown and Howard University Law School professor and current Superior Court judge for the District of Columbia. Born of Honduran and Puerto Rican parents, Urbina greatly exemplifies the "Legal scholar/big heart" criteria for the Supreme Court enunciated by President Clinton. The first Hispanic judge in the history of the District of Columbia, Urbina is highly regarded in many communities for his leadership and sensitivity on children's issues and family support.

Joseph Baca, justice of the New Mexico Supreme Court. Justice Baca served as a New Mexico state district court judge for more than 12 years prior to his election to the New Mexico's highest court in 1988.

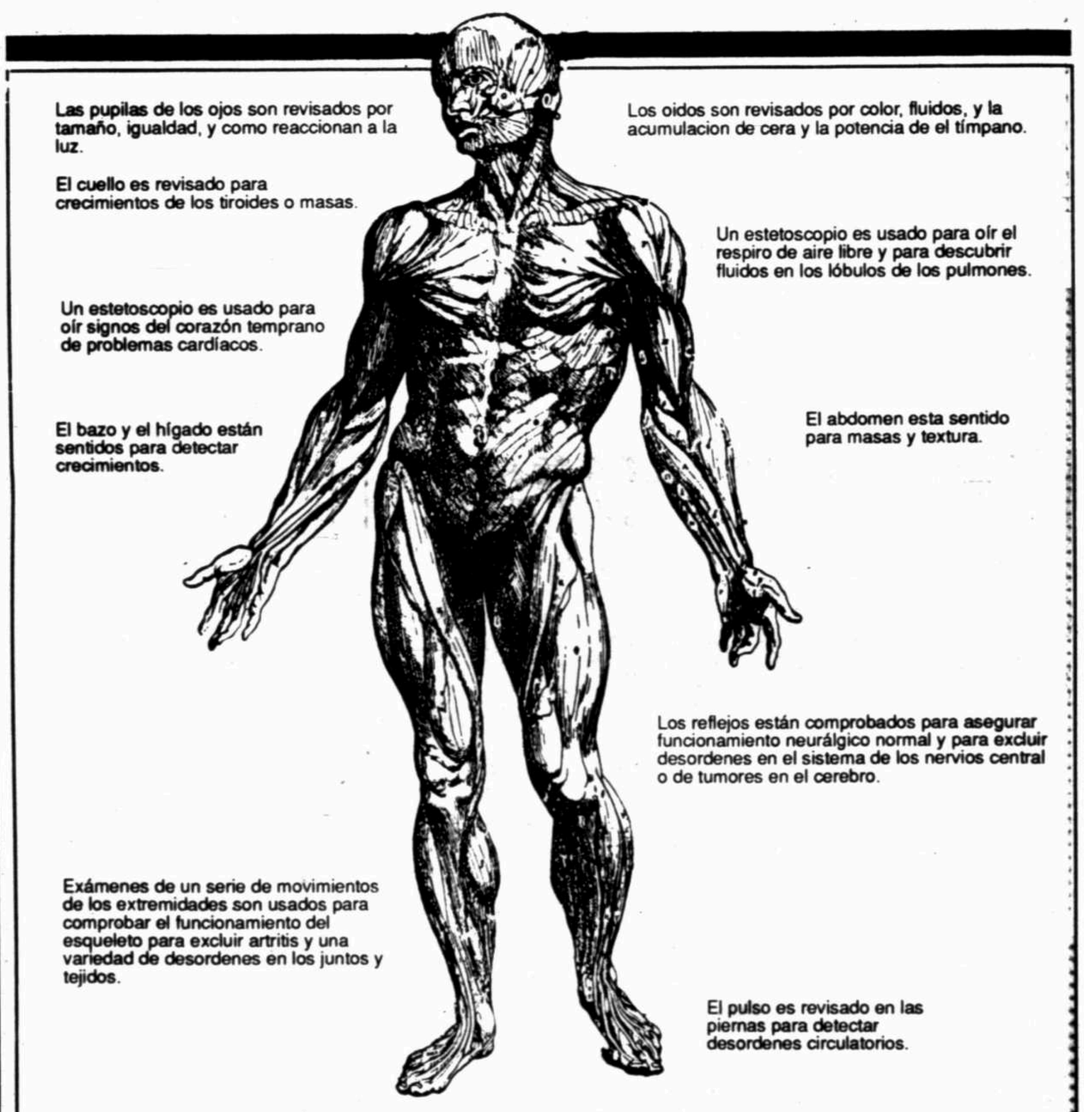

F.P. "Pete" Benavides, judge on the Court of Criminal Appeals for the state of Texas. Benavides, 46, has been a judge since 1981 and has authored more than 500 legal opinions. Throughout his legal career, Benavides has been extensively involved in juvenile justice and education issues.

We now have Hispanic attorneys and judges with the experience, stature, legal acumen, sensitivity and scholarship to serve ably on the nation's highest court. By whatever criteria the President may choose a Supreme Court justice, there are Hispanics who are highly qualified and deserve to be considered. All U.S. residents need a justice who will bring life to the words etched on the front of the Supreme Court building, "Equal Justice Under Law." A Hispanic can and should take on that awesome task.

"Los Tertulianos" devote themselves to study and appreciate our Hispanic Culture.

By Jeffrey McDonald

Through education and celebration, students of Sul Ross State University, in Alpine, Texas, are preserving the Hispanic heritage of west Texas.

"Los Tertulianos," said Dr. Abelardo Baeza, Professor of Languages and Literature at Sul Ross, and the faculty sponsor of the group. "It's a club that devotes itself to the study and appreciation of Hispanic culture."

By the time Baeza took over sponsorship of the group, it already had a long and distinguished history at the University.

"In sponsoring the club, I discovered that Los Tertulianos is the oldest student organization on campus. It was initiated in 1920, and it was set up by a lady named Stather Elliott-Thomas," explained Baeza. "She was a Spanish professor from 1920, when the University opened, until her retirement in 1962."

"In 1980, when I became Chairman of the Spanish Department, one of my responsibilities was to oversee the work of Los Tertulianos."

Those activities include a week-long Cinco de Mayo celebration, on the Sul Ross campus, and in the streets of Alpine.

"Well, we stage Mexican-American Awareness Week during the first week of May, in conjunction with Cinco de Mayo, which is the celebration of the victory of the Mexican forces over the French in the Battle of Puebla," said Baeza. "Starting with a banquet on Monday night, May 3rd. Each night following that will be a different activity. We will have a folkloric group of dancers, that will be on Tuesday night."

"Wednesday, my play, my twelfth play, written in Spanish, will make it's debut on the Sul Ross stage. And we're also having the annual Fiesta Queen Pageant. All of these are part of the celebration of Cinco de Mayo."

In recent years, cooperation from the City of Alpine has allowed the celebration to grow dramatically.

"Now the City of Alpine has picked it up on Saturday and Sunday, with a parade," said Baeza. "They also have what they call a mercado, at which time people can set-up their booths, and sell their wares. They can sell fruit, they can sell candy, they can sell whatever they want."

"And they also, of course, have sponsored the dance. The dance is now their activity, and they don't charge us for using the Civic Center, since they know that this is a worthwhile cause. The money that is raised from all of these activities is used for scholarships."

Baeza points out that Mexican-American Awareness Week is just one of many activities that the group will conduct throughout the year. Others include a monthly speaker series, traditional Mexican celebrations of Christmas and Valentine's Day, and a banquet and re-enactment of the 'Grito', the call that initiated the Revolution in 19th century Mexico on Diez y Seis de Septiembre.

The underlying purpose behind the group and it's activities remains the preservation of the Hispanic heritage of West Texas.

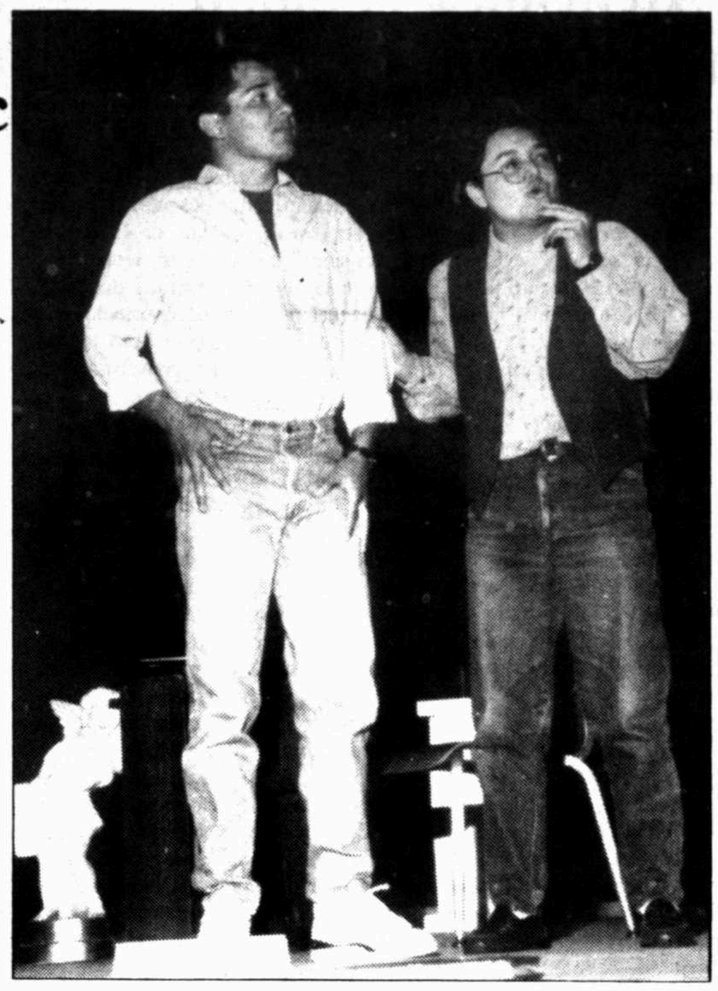

"There are so many people living out here, in the area, who are Hispanic of Mexican descent, who do not know their heritage," explained Baeza, who also serves as Interim Director of Multicultural Affairs at Sul Ross. "So therefore, we try to celebrate the historic events, Cinco de Mayo, Diez y Seis de Septiembre. And try to educate people as to why these are significant celebrations in the Hispanic culture."

Baeza is quick to point out that no restrictions apply to membership in Los Tertulianos, that an appreciation of Mexican culture, the lessons learned from it's history, and it's contributions to the culture of the United States, is something good for all people to share.

"Anyone who wants to join, the organization is open. These organizations are open," said Baeza. "The Black Students Association, the International Students Association, and the Spanish Club, they're open to anyone who wants to join. And we don't have any stipulations or restrictions."

Meetings of Los Tertulianos are announced on bulletin boards throughout Sul Ross campus, and on Alpine-area radio and newspaper. Those wishing more information about the club, or it's activities during this year's Mexican-American Awareness Week, are urged to call Dr. Baeza at his office, phone number 837-8159, on the campus of Sul Ross State University, in Alpine.

Jeffrey McDonald is a free-lance writer for NuevaVista.

Sul Ross State University will stage an original play by Dr. Abelardo Baeza, SRSU professor of languages and literature, during Mexican-American Awareness Week. Gene Chavez (l) and Fabian Marquez starred last May in one of Baeza's production.

"Los Tertulianos" de Dedican a Estudiar y a Comprender Nuestra Cultura Hispana

Por Jeffrey McDonald

Través de educación y celebración, estudiantes de la Universidad Estatal Sul Ross en Alpine, Tejas, están preservando la herencia Hispana del Oeste de Tejas.

"Los Tertulianos," dijo Dr. Abelardo Baeza, Profesor de Idiomas y Literatura en Sul Ross y el promotor de la facultad de el grupo. "Es un Club que se devota al estudio y apreciación de la cultura Hispana."

Ya cuando Baeza se hizo cargo de la promoción de el grupo, ya tenia una historia distinguida en la Universidad.

"Al patrocinal el club, descubrí que Los Tertulianos es la organización mas vieja en los terrenos de la Universidad. Fue iniciada en 1920, y fue compuesta por una dama llamada Stather Elliott-Thomas," explico Baeza. "Ella era profesora de Español desde 1920 cuando se abrió la Universidad, hasta su jubilación en 1962."

"En el año 1980, cuando yo fue presidente del departamento Español, una de mis responsabilidad fue de supervisar el trabajo de Los Tertulianos."

Esas actividades incluyen una celebración del Cinco de Mayo que dura todo un fin de semana, en los terrenos de la Universidad y en las calles de Alpine.

"Bueno, comenzamos con la semana de Conocimiento Mexico-Americano durante la primera semana de Mayo, en conjunción de el Cinco de Mayo, el cual es la celebración de la victoria de las fuerzas Mexicanos sobre las fuerzas Francesas en la Batalla de Puebla," dijo Baeza. "Empezamos con un banquete el Lunes por la noche, el día 3 de Mayo. Cada noche siguiente será una diferente actividad. Tendremos un grupo de bailadores Fokloricos, el Martes por la noche."

"Miércoles, mi obra, mi décima segunda obra, escrita en Español, hará su debut en el escenario de Sul Ross. Además vamos a tener el certamen de la Reina de Fiesta. Todo esto es parte de la celebración del Cinco de Mayo."

En años recientes, la cooperación de la ciudad de Alpine a hecho que la celebración halla crecido dramáticamente.

"Ahora la ciudad de Alpine a seguido con Sábado y Domingo con un desfile," dijo Baeza. "Ellos también tienen lo que llaman el Mercado, en el que la gente puede poner sus puestos y vender sus mercanderia. Pueden vender fruta, dulces, o lo que quieran."

"Y también por supuesto han patrocinado el baile. El baile es ahora

It's more than supplying parts, it's providing excellence.

The kind of excellence that can only be achieved through effort and dedication, and at Chrysler we take that extra step. That's why we have an ongoing commitment with HACR, the Hispanic Association on Corporate Responsibility.

We are determined to excel, so we have established a special supplier program designed to encourage and develop successful partnerships with minority-owned businesses, such as Injectronics, Inc., one of Chrysler's Hispanic suppliers.

This engineering firm manufactures plastic devices used in Chrysler automobile air conditioning and heating systems.

It's Hispanics like Carlos M. Barañano, at the head of multi-million dollar engineering firms such as Injectronics, who help us meet the high demands of today's automotive industry with quality and technology. That's important to us at Chrysler, because we owe part of our success to committed people like Carlos, who supply us with the parts that help us provide you with the excellence you deserve.

La Crisis de la Atención a la Salud Hispana: Tenemos Algunas Respuestas

Por Raúl E. Burciaga

A medida que el debate nacional sobre la atención a la salud se mueve hacia el centro del escenario en Washington, DC., es indispensable que las personas con experiencia en dirigirse a las necesidades de los 27 millones de Hispanos de los Estados Unidos compartan la plataforma.

El gobierno de Clinton ha abierto el fuego con unas cuantas medidas buenas. El presidente nombró al Californiano Fernando Torres-Gil, un experto respetado en materia de gerontología con mucha experiencia en la comunidad Hispana y en Washington, como sub-secretario para los asuntos del envejecimiento en el Departamento Federal de Salud y Servicios Humanos.

Los ayudantes de transición de Clinton alentaron y facilitaron también a la formación de un comité asesor nacional Hispano sobre la salud. Este grupo de base amplia, organizado por la Dra. Elena Ríos, presidenta de la Asociación Médica Chicano-Latina de California, fue a Washington en este mes para informar al Grupo Congresional Hispano sobre los asuntos de salud entre los latinos, antes de la reunión del 2 de Marzo de dicho grupo con Hillary Rodham Clinton, que preside el Grupo de Trabajo de la Casa Blanca sobre la Reforma de la Atención a la Salud.

A continuación de esa sesión, la primera dama fue elogiada por el presidente del Grupo Congresional Hispano, José Serrano y por otros participantes por su conocimiento de las preocupaciones Hispanas en materia de salud y su sensibilidad hacia las mismas.

Algunas gestiones recientes, tanto nacionales como regionales, para hacer acopio de información sobre la salud de los Hispanos, son recomendables. Pero un punto de vista completo sobre las tendencias de morbidez y mortalidad de los diversos sub-grupos Hispanos continúa sin estar disponible para los profesionales Hispanos de la atención a la salud y otros que trabajan en ese campo.

Así, ¿qué puede hacerse para mejorar la salud y el bienestar de los Hispanos y otros grupos de la población que reciben servicios insuficientes?

Bastante.

Debemos proporcionar estímulos y ejemplos para que más Hispanos permanezcan en las escuelas y prosigan carreras en la ciencia y la medicina. Tenemos que mantener a los profesionales Hispanos de la salud en las comunidades donde más se les necesite. Hay una escasez aguda de médicos que presten servicios a las comunidades Hispanas. Por ejemplo, de los 800 médicos de El Paso, sólo 30 (el 4%) tienen consultas en la zona más pobre de la ciudad, una zona que alberga a 170,000 personas (el 32% de su población).

La competencia administrada, que es una iniciativa que tiene apoyo amplio en el debate sobre la reforma, puede suministrar un ambiente en el que el gobierno ayude a reglamentar, pero no administre la industria de la atención sanitaria. Los estímulos deben proporcionarse a los hospitales, los médicos y los aseguradores, a fin de mejorar la calidad y rebajar los costos, no para seleccionar los riesgos médicos y evitar el dar cobertura a personas enfermas (conocido también como clasificación por razón de experiencia).

Mediante una supervisión federal enérgica, los gastos de administración pueden disminuirse. Por ejemplo, los costos de administración del programa Medicare representan solamente el 3% de su presupuesto total, en contraste con el 10% al 40% de los programas de seguros privados.

La investigación de los resultados médicos puede ser una herramienta valiosa para vigilar la calidad de la atención y recompensar a los suministradores y aseguradores por disminuir los costos y mejorar esa calidad. Lugares tales como South El Paso y East Los Angeles se comparen. Estas dos zonas tienen Mexico-Americanos nacidos en los Estados Unidos de muchas generaciones, así como recién llegados.

Los usuarios deben llegar a estar más conscientes sobre la atención sanitaria. Aquéllos de nosotros que tenemos seguros de salud a menudo no vemos la cuenta de un hospital o de un médico. Lo que vemos es una explicación de los beneficios del seguro, y a todo lo que prestamos atención es a la cantidad que hemos de pagar.

Algunas veces ni siquiera vemos el modelo impreso del seguro porque pagamos un co-aseguro pequeño al momento del servicio. Quizás nos imaginemos que, puesto que pagamos las primas del seguro, tenemos derecho a un acceso o a una atención ilimitados a cualquier costo.

La enseñanza a los usuarios - en cualquier idioma que sea necesario - es una necesidad imprescindible. Tiene que empezar a edad temprana. Recuerdo a los dentistas que iban a mi escuela primaria una vez al año para enseñarnos sobre la higiene bucal: Cepíllense los dientes después de cada comida, eviten las meriendas entre comidas y hagan visitas periódicas al dentista.

Eso surtía efecto en nosotros. Ya sea que cuide de mis dientes o no, por lo menos conozco las consecuencias.

No recuerdo que ningún médico fuera alguna vez a nuestra escuela. Imagínense lo que podríamos haber aprendido, en una edad mucho más impresionable, sobre higiene, nutrición, atención primaria y preventiva y los riesgos de descuidar nuestras mentes y nuestros cuerpos.

Hay un anuncio referente a la necesidad de cambiar los filtros de aceite periódicamente porque, como dice el mecánico que aparece en la televisión: "Ud. puede pagarme ahora, o puede pagarme después." La crisis petrolera del decenio de 1970 y la crisis de las asociaciones de ahorros y préstamos del decenio de 1980 deberían habernos enseñado una lección. Si no actuamos, la crisis de la atención sanitaria se convertirá en la crisis del decenio de 1990.

La línea final es: Si las personas no tienen acceso inmediato a la atención sanitaria, cuando por fin lleguen a recibirla, sus complicaciones físicas estarán más adelantadas y serán más costosas y difíciles de tratar.

La atención sanitaria se encuentra hoy en la misma situación. La reforma indispensable será dura y costosa. Pero si esperamos, será peor, mucho peor.

(Segundo de dos artículos sobre los problemas y las soluciones de la atención sanitaria a los Hispanos.)

(Raúl E. Burciaga, de Albuquerque, Nuevo México, es miembro del Comité Asesor Nacional Hispano sobre la Salud, una coalición de profesionales de la atención sanitaria que se reunió en este mes con el grupo de trabajo presidencial sobre la atención a la salud.)

Hispanic Health Care Crisis: We have some answers

By Raul E. Burciaga

As the national health care debate moves to center stage in Washington, D.C., it's essential that individuals with experience in addressing the needs of 27 million U.S. Hispanics share the rostrum.

The Clinton administration has led off with a few good moves. The President appointed Californian Fernando Torres-Gil, a respected expert in gerontology with extensive experience in the Hispanic community and in Washington, as assistant secretary for aging at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Clinton's transition aides also encouraged and facilitated the formation of a national Hispanic advisory committee on health. This broad-based group, organized by Dr. Elena Rios, president of the Chicano/Latino Medical Association of California, went to Washington this month to brief the Congressional Hispanic Caucus on Latino health issues prior to caucus, March 2 meeting with Hillary Rodham Clinton, who chairs the White House Task Force on Health Care Reform.

Following that session, the First Lady was praised by CHC Chairman Jose Serrano and other participants for her awareness of and sensitivity to Hispanic health concerns.

Some recent efforts, both national and regional, to collect data on Hispanic health are commendable. But a comprehensive view of morbidity and mortality trends of different Hispanic subgroups remains unavailable to Hispanic health care professionals and others working in the field.

So what can be done to improve the health and well-being of Hispanics and other underserved populations?

Quite a bit.

We must provide incentives and role models so more Hispanics stay in school and pursue careers in science and medicine. We have to keep Hispanic health professionals in the communities where they're most needed.

There is an acute shortage of physicians serving Hispanic communities. For example, of El Paso's 800 physicians, only 30 (4 percent) have practices in the poorest part of the city, an area that houses 170,000 people (32 percent of its population).

Managed competition, an initiative with wide support in the reform debate, can provide an environment where the government helps to regulate but does not operate the health care industry. Incentives should be provided to hospitals' physicians and insurers for improving quality and cutting costs, not for selecting medical risks and avoiding coverage of sick people (also known as experience rating).

Through strong federal oversight, the administrative expenses can be reduced. For example, administrative costs in the Medicare program account for only 3 percent of its total budget, contrasted to between 10 percent-40 percent in private insurance programs. Medical outcomes research can be a valuable tool for monitoring the quality of care and rewarding providers and insurers for reducing costs and improving that quality. It is important that like demographics in places such as South El Paso and East Los Angeles be compared. Both of these areas have multi-generation, U.S. born Mexican Americans, as well as recent arrivals.

Consumers must become more cost-conscious about health care. Those of us with health insurance often don't see the bill from a hospital or physician. What we see is an insurance explanation of benefits, and all we pay attention to is the amount we have to pay.

Sometimes we don't even see the insurance form because we pay a small co-payment at the time of service. Perhaps we figure that if we paid the insurance premiums, we're entitled to unlimited access or care at any cost.

place, and the new facility - named in honor of Doctor Viola M. Coleman, whose impact has been felt in many areas of the community, especially education - has opened it's doors.

"These are students at high risk of dropping-out, or who had dropped out, and wished to come back in order to continue their high school education," explained Coleman Principal Helen Lackey. "But, for some reason, can't go to school all day. Many of them have families of their own, or they're teen parents. Or they have a job, for example, that's eight-to five. We've got those students at night."

"The students who come back here will end up with a high school diploma, that will allow them to do so much more than if they had dropped out of school and just taken a job, or not taken a job, in some cases. They'll be able to put back, into the community, those resources that they earn as a wage earner."

Lackey admitted that the success of her students is an inspiration for her, and actually serves as an extra, emotional 'bonus' for the work the do.

"We had a student, just today, who came back," Lackey recalled. "He finished here with a high school diploma, last year, at night - he was a teen father, he met his wife here. They had a baby."

They're now living in Arlington. He's a fireman there. And he came back just to visit, and show the baby off. That's your paycheck!"

An historical controversy was brewing in September as the world prepared to mark the 500th anniversary of the voyage of Christopher Columbus, which was the first permanent contact between the Old World and the New. In the five centuries that had passed since that voyage, the image of Columbus, and the world he represented, had come under attack from several directions. His voyage of discovery, it was pointed out, was the first moment of an era of conquest, when many native American societies were destroyed, and new lands were worked by armies of slaves imported from Africa. NuevaVista sorted through the claims and the counter-claims, to try to learn about Columbus the man, and his times.

In October, Midland was one of hundreds of communities in America and Europe, to mark the anniversary. Jeffrey McDonald, a freelance writer based in Midland, delivered the opening address to the hundreds who turned out for an afternoon of speeches, music, and refreshments at Midland's Centennial Plaza. McDonald dealt with Columbus, and the pivotal role he played in shaping the past 500 years of history. Other speakers, representing the Hispanic, the African-American, and the Native American communities, also spoke on the impact of Columbus' voyage on their respective cultures.

In November, NuevaVista visited the west end of West Texas, for another history lesson. Sheldon Hall, President of the El Paso Mission Trail Association, took us back in time to 1598, when a weary group of travelers, led by Don Juan de Onate, paused on the banks of the Rio Grande to give thanks to God for helping them through their journey, and delivering them to their new home. It was America's first Thanksgiving celebration, but the English pilgrims would not arrive on the shore of Massachusetts for another 23 years!

A quick jump back to the present took our readers through the controversy that has arisen since the El Pasoans took their case to Plymouth Colony, in Massachusetts, where they were arrested by the locals, and tried for heresy. There was no final judgment at the trial, just the decision to send a delegation to El Paso, to investigate the claims of those 'crazy conquistadors'.

Sheldon Hall, in a follow-up interview conducted earlier this month, told us that the Massachusetts delegation were greeted in the same spirit with which they had welcomed the El Pasoans, several months earlier.

"They came down here. They arrived and were greeted by conquistadors, with crossed swords for them to come through as they got off the plane," said Hall. "While having dinner in San Elizario (the site of Onate's Thanksgiving celebration in 1598), they were interrupted and taken, with guns drawn, by some very bad characters! Kidnapped them took them, and damn near hung them, before the town marshall came in and shot all the bad men!"

"But they had a trial there, and decided to release them, and allow them to go back to Plymouth to report on the true, first Thanksgiving!"

On Saturday and Sunday, April 24th and 25th, the Mission Trail Association will sponsor an annual Thanksgiving celebration and reunion of descendants of the Onate expedition, at the San Elizario National Memorial, east of El Paso.

The year 1993 is still young, but it has not been without it's share of inspiring stories. In the March issue, NuevaVista told the story of Randy Velarde, a young Midlander with a dream of someday playing major league baseball. We followed him from the Little League fields of West Texas, to Yankee Stadium, home of major league baseball's New York Yankees. And along the way, we paused to visit with those who knew Randy in his formative years, and helped him - each in their own way - to achieve his dream.

It's been little more than a month since that article appeared, but it's been an exciting time for Velarde. In mid-February, he won an arbitration with the New York Yankees, and was awarded a 1.05-million dollar contract. He played at a variety of positions during spring training, and hit a .355 average. By mid-April, the Yankees were 4-3 in the regular season. Velarde was playing left field, hitting .222, including his first home run of the season.

And that, very briefly, was a little bit of the year that was. The year to come promises to be just as exciting, as NuevaVista looks forward to continued growth and participation in the unique community that is West Texas!

General Elections/Eleciónes General

QUESTIONS	1. What one quality is especially important to serve in the office you seek, and how do you embody that quality?	2. What need do you see in the community, that has prompted you to run for office, and how would you address that need after your election?	3. What field of expertise (i.e.: political, financial, business, educational, etc.) is especially important to serve in the office you seek, and how have you developed that expertise?	4. How has the body to which you seek election served/not-served the community to the best of it's ability, and how will you continue/change that?

1. Empathy and communication with the voter. By virtue of my experience in many areas of just plain living, I can communicate and understand people, their problems and their desire. I listen and I like people. Also, my business experience will help in making a budget that will fit Midland's economy. Anyone can balance a budget – but is it the right one for us at this time?
2. There is a general distrust and dis-enchantment with government officials – all over the country. Some of this is because of their apparent lack of unity and purpose. I plan to bring government back to the people, by having town meetings and voting the way my constituents desire. A true representative does not vote her own thoughts – but that of the people she represents.
3. Political: Attending City Council meetings since August 1991, 6 years on the Airport Board, League of Women Voters member, which entails studying BOTH sides of every issue.
Business: Keep husband's books – so know finances.
Educational: Degrees in psychology and counseling, so know how to listen to people, and draw them out as to true feelings and commitments.
Social and Volunteer: As part of the community in many organizations, I know the pulse of the people – because I have experienced it!
4. I will not run a negative campaign – so no criticism. My opponent stands on his record, and I stand on my promises. We all have to live together and work together to make Midland vital and alive. I can be – and will be – and am capable of – being in contact with the voters, which is the feeling of the 90's . . . . . I do not think the phrase "Balance the Budget" has any meaning . . . What I want to do is bring the budget into line with Midland's economy. Also work for economic diversity.

1. The most important quality is the ability to make an intelligent informed decision on the matters that come before the council. In ten years as a corporate officer and in fifteen years advising corporations I have encountered many tough situations and questions and have developed the skills to determine all the facts available and act appropriately on such facts.
2. We in Midland face many challenges due to the ever changing nature of our economy. We must preserve the infrastructure of our City while providing quality essential services to the citizens at the lowest and most reasonable cost. I believe my experience will enable me to make the decisions necessary to assist the City of Midland in meeting these challenges.
3. Business and financial experience is required to make informed business decisions for the City. My experience as a community volunteer, as a business person and as an advisor to business persons has taught me to carefully examine the alternatives and then exercise my judgement while making the decisions required of me.
4. In the fourteen months I have served on the City Council, I have seen and participated in numerous opportunities to cut costs and provide more efficient services to the citizens. I have always attempted to consider the best interest of all citizens of Midland and utilized my experience in setting policy and making decisions for the City. If elected, I will continue this course.

1. Leadership: As a husband, father, business owner, landlord, volunteer, City Councilman and Midland citizen, I have taken on several roles of leadership with great success.
2. Employment: We must encourage small business growth through fewer taxes and less regulations. We must become active participants with the oil and gas industry, protesting the unfair tax burden placed on our industry. We must push to be active in N.A.F.T.A. and the global economy to tap into new markets for our products.
3. Sound business judgement: I have been self-employed for thirteen years, and have had to adjust to changing situations, many times using sound business judgement and good common sense.
4. I believe that at times the Council becomes self-serving and does not act in the best interest of its constituents. I have worked hard to not become part of the "god old boy" system, rather to only work for the interest of the citizens.

Dale A. Brown
City Council Member At Large
Midland, Texas
President, Petroleum Strategies, Inc.
#6 Desta Drive, Suite 5650

1. We need teamwork as part of a leadership group. I have been a team player throughout my career and community activities. I work persuasively among the leadership team and am willing to take my turn in the spokesman's role.
2. We need a genuine concern for the welfare of our young people. The growth of crime and drug use threatens the security and stability of a positive environment for our families. I will push for enforcement of policies that protect our young people from exploitation by those who sell alcohol and drugs. I will encourage everyone in the community, especially parents, to support positive value approaches to these problems.
3. We need sound fiscal decisions in the management of our city's resources. I am a CPA and own my own business. I will see that the budget review process looks at the results we are getting form the money we spend. Sound fiscal responsibility requires that we set goals and measure performance against those goals, holding all levels of government accountable for efficiency in providing the appropriate services to our community.
4. We need to spell out a vision for the future of our community. Should we "hunker down" for hard times, or plan more positively for our place in the destiny of our region and nation? I will encourage growth and expansion of existing businesses and attracting of new ones to our area. Midland has lots of expertise and capital and community services which position us for solid, steady growth. Midland is not destined to be a ghost town, but a place my grandkids will be proud to call home.

1. I believe that my involvement with civic and community organizations has allowed me to develop the leadership quality that is essential to serve effectively. Good leadership requires effective communication, a commitment to be fair and equitable, and the ability to set and achieve goals for the improvement of the city.
2. The preservation of the cities i structure is crucial. There are streets in the of repair, parks in urgent need of attention and the housing condition continues to worsen. I will dedicate my time and efforts to the improvement of these areas by implementing economically sound policies and procedures that help alleviate these problems.
3. As a business man, I understand the need for quality, cost efficient operations. My years of small business experience have allowed me to have the skills necessary in the oversight of city government.
4. I will encourage the council to move in a direction that is more inclusive of all of Midland's residents. I would like to increase tax interaction between city leaders and the community so as to collectively build a strong foundation for the future.

City of Odessa/ Ciudad de Odessa

City Council, District 4

Dr. Bob Slider
City Council Member, District 4
Odessa, Texas

1. One of the most important qualities necessary to serve on the Odessa City Council is the ability to hear all sides of an issue, to be able to study the question at hand and ask the proper question, then make the best decision possible for all of Odessa, not just a single group. For the twenty five years I have lived in Odessa, I have participated actively in numerous church, civic and professional boards and activities. From this background of experience, which covers a broad range of issues and activities, I feel I have developed the ability to hear all sides of an issue and make the proper decision for the good of Odessa.
2. The two major needs that I see in the community involve crime reduction and economic development and diversification. I would work with the police chief to implement his crime reduction strategies to reduce crime. I will continue to support his public awareness programs to make the public aware of ways to reduce crime. I will work to see that the Odessa Police Department keeps an open door and has joint cooperation with the district attorney's office and all other area law enforcement agencies to reduce crime.
The other main issue is economic development. We must continue to retain large employers as we have done with Dynagen. We must provide a stable and pleasant community for the development of new and small businesses. We must continue with the revitalization of the downtown area which has involved over fifty five business start-ups, relocations or expansions that have produced over two hundred new jobs. I will continue to support and work with the economic development section of the Chamber of Commerce to recruit and attract new businesses and tourism to Odessa.
I have chosen to run for re-election because I feel my twenty five years of experience in Odessa has provided me a better grasp of what is happening here over all, than my opponent. I feel my two year "rookie" term was very successful and am looking forward to serving this community for the next two years in an even more effective manner.
3. I think the most important single area of expertise necessary to be on the Odessa City Council is a good business sense. I have run my business for nearly twenty five years, controlled inventory, handled employees and their problems and face the public daily. This has helped me develop a good business sense. To develop a good business sense you must learn about caring for people and being sensitive to their needs. The twenty five years I have lived in Odessa and the successful management of a busy optometric practice has provided me with the many business skills I need to work with the city manager and department heads to set policy for the City of Odessa.
4. Odessa faces tough economic times, high unemployment, and continued decreasing sales tax rebates. However I feel the current council of which I am a member has served the city the best we possibly can. We have maintained a high quality of service for the citizens that include fire and police departments, parks and recreation, water distribution, collection systems and other city services we expect on a daily basis. I feel we have properly managed all of these departments, hired a new city manager and police chief of the highest standards, and managed a total budget of sixty five million dollars in a capable fashion. If re-elected, I will continue to improve on a good record of the past two years. Odessa still is a good place to live and raise a family and I want to help to improve on this however I can.

1. Honesty, I have been very open about who and what I am. I want the people to know where I stand and that I have no hidden agenda. I also believe this entails letting the people of my district know what is going on with their money and listening to their concerns.
2. Greater Involvement of citizens in city government. Hold regular town hall meetings, insuring public is aware of such things as tax increases and bond indentures. :Generally, making the public aware of what is happening in their city government.
3. An ability to listen to and understand the needs of the people. Through community leadership training through home extension services, owning and operating my own small business, and listening to the needs of other sin my neighborhood, my family and knocking on doors.
4. Don't feel business decisions made by city council have necessarily been in the best interests of the people. Spending money on dreams and ambitions while putting existing needs in jeopardy such as undermanned fire and police officers.

1. The one quality that I feel is important in this office is being a good listener and I embody this quality by asking questions, seeking out information, and listening very carefully.
2. The need our community has, is the one of our government not being ruled by the common people anymore and I plan to do everything I can to allow the people of this community to have a say in the way our city is run and getting their ideas for our city.
3. Time, energy, and effort is something I have and I am willing to use my time, energy and effort to work with and for the people of this community.
4. I feel the city council has not served the community to its best, because they have only taken administrator's information and not gone to employees or the people of this city. I am going to go to the people of this city, ask their opinions, get feed back from them and then take what information I get and make decisions for this community.

to have someone who's been tested and proven in areas of leadership and economic diversification. That's exactly what I've been doing the last several years. Improving my leadership skills and helping to create jobs in Odessa.

2. Continued conservative management. Financial matters can best be managed by people that understand them. As a CPA, I believe my talents could help. Moderation and sincerity are also extremely important. These are tough times financially and problems demand effective and affordable solutions.

3. My first degree was in economics with an emphasis on urban economics. I have been in the real estate development business and recently worked in a growing company providing more jobs to Odessans. I am also a CPA. That's four big areas that enable me to help other Odessans.

4. The work begun by the council is a good beginning. I won't be happy until all Odessans have the opportunity to participate in the city's blessings. I hope I can provide the leadership to pull Odessans together as a team so everyone can benefit from the work already begun.

1. As a City Council member I will be called upon to make decisions dealing with many different issues. As a school teacher my training is to find information and to pass that information along. As a decision maker I must be informed and know how to find that information.

2. The school classrooms are the eyes into the community. You see the effects of the life-styles reflected in the children. These observations would direct my decision making towards a safer, more united community for children, families and our senior adults.

3. As a teacher the quality of making a statement and being heard is essential. I intend to use this quality to be a voice, through a steering committee for my neighbors.

4. The city council working along side our mayor is a cohesive decision making group. As a member, my views would more reflect the needs of District 5 through information gathered from a steering committee designed to reflect the needs of the "whole" neighborhood.

1. Total commitment is especially important in serving in the city council position I am seeking and by caring for the future of our community, I have embodied this quality by being a concerned citizen.

2. Odessa has about a 40% population of Hispanics and the newly formed District 5 has a 60% population of Hispanics, I believe Odessa does need minority representation on the City Council for District 5.

I would maintain an "Open Door Policy" for all citizens and employees of the city of Odessa to serve their needs.

3. Good common sense is especially important in serving, during my first year I have gained a considerable amount of experience on city government operations.

4. We were able to keep Dynagen (250 jobs) in our city in part through our ability to show and maintain a sense of unity and co-operation with other local governmental entities. We will continue to provide quality services to assure a safe community and I want to continue to improve the quality of live by spending the DCBG funds wisely.

"That's a tough question! There's times that you wished that you were not in business, being self-employed. Especially with the economy the way it's been over the last few years," said Urias, who is joined by his wife, Gracie, in managing their business. "Although I do feel that it is getting better, you know. I most definitely believe that it is. It is getting better, and it's going to get better. Especially here, in the Fort Stockton area!"

"One thing is that you really have to work hard at it. It takes a lot of work, and effort, and discipline. I think you've got to be very conservative when you start. It's not a matter of just making some money and spending it. You've got to look at the long-term aspect of business. It's a very competitive world, and you've got to have a well-planned-out business plan, to succeed in business."

There are also the challenges unique to the floor covering business.

"Well, it's not a simple matter of just buying a particular carpet. Every family has different needs, requirements. And, of course, everybody has a different budget," explained Urias. "So the carpet industry offers so many different types of carpet to meet everybody's budget. People come in here, naturally they want floor coverings. So we find out, actually, what they need, how many members of the family, what kind of traffic they have, and, of course, what their budget is."

"So we try to match up, and give the customers the best carpet for their money. That's what we try and do."

And then there are the challenges to owning and operating a business in a smaller community.

"Really, in a small town - and this is a small town - the best form of advertising for any business, no matter where, is 'word of mouth'," said Urias. "And if I do a job for John Doe, down the street, and I run into Mrs. Doe at the market, I want her to say 'Hi!' to me, because she's satisfied with the work that I did. Because, when somebody does something wrong, you know it!"

"If I make a seam on a carpet, and I'm unhappy with it, I don't like it, I know that they're not going to like it. So I can't leave it like that. If I do, I'm only asking for problems. Like I say, every time they walk on that floor, they look at your work. And if they're not satisfied, you'll be ignored, or they'll spread the word to your neighbors that, 'He doesn't do good work!'"

It's a policy the Urias family has followed for nearly a century. And one they'll continue to follow, even if it does take a while for repeat customers to come into their shop.

"We always try to do the best that we can," said Urias. "Because I don't expect to see people for 10, 15, 20 years maybe. But when they are ready to replace the carpet, I do want them to come back to us!"

Baeza indica que la semana de Conocimiento Mexico-Americano es solo uno de las muchas actividades que el grupo conduciría a través del año. Otros incluyen una serie de oradores mensualmente, celebraciones tradicionales Mexicanos de Navidad y día de San Valentine y un banquete y representación del el "Grito", el llamado que iniciara la Revolución en el siglo 19 en México en el Diez y Seis de Septiembre.

El propósito fundamental detrás del grupo y sus actividades esta por la preservación de la herencia Hispana del Oeste de Tejas.

"Hay tanta gente que vive aya, en el área, que son Hispanos de descendiente Mexicano que no conocen su herencia," explico Baeza que además serví como Director Provisional de asuntos Multiculturales en Sul Ross. "Así es que tratamos de celebrar eventos históricos, Cinco de Mayo, Diez y Seis de Septiembre. Y tratamos de educar a la gente de el por que de estas celebraciones están en la cultura Hispana."

Baeza indica que no hay restricciones aplicadas a la membrecia de Los Tertulianos, que la apreciación de la cultura Hispana, las lecciones que se aprenden de su historia, y sus contribuciones a la cultura de Los Estados Unidos, es algo muy bueno que toda la gente puede disfrutar.

"Cualquiera que quiera ingresar a la organización esta abierta. Estas organizaciones están abiertas," dijo Baeza.

"La Asociación de Estudiantes Negros, La Asociación Internacional de Estudiantes, y el Club Hispano, están abiertas para todos los que quieran asociarse. Y no tenemos ninguna estipulación ni restricción."

ever language necessary — is a must. It has to start at a young age. I remember dentists coming to my grade school once a year to teach us about oral hygiene: brush after every meal, avoid between-meal snacks, make regular visits to the dentist. It made an impact on me. Whether or not I take better care of my teeth, at least I know the consequences.

I don't recall any physician ever coming to our school. Imagine what we could have learned, at a much more impressionable age, about hygiene, nutrition, primary and preventive care, and the risks of neglecting our minds and bodies.

There's a commercial about the need to change oil filters regularly because, as the mechanic on TV says, "You can pay me now or you can pay me later." The oil crisis of the '70s and the savings and loan crisis of the '80s should have taught us a lesson. If we don't act, health care will become the crisis of the '90s.

The bottom line: if people don't have ready access to health care, when they finally receive it their physical complications will be more advanced, and more difficult and costly to treat.

Health care today is in the same condition. Essential reform will be tough and it will be expensive. But if we wait, it will be worse, much worse.

Javier Galvan, vocalist for FAMA during a performance in Pecos at the Riverside Ballroom.

Por Leonela

Un viaje que se va llevar nueve meses ha permitido ha FAMA traer su música para que el Oeste de Tejas pueda gozar de el. Las admiradoras rodean los escenarios en Odessa, Big Spring, y en Pecos cuando se representan, este grupo de jovenes talentosos gozan de su publico. Con una sistema poderosa, luces en abundancia, efectos especiales llenos de humo, y la voz de Javier cantándole a las jovenes en frente, que mas puede hacer uno pero cantar con él, tronar las manos, y pegar un grito. Le da mas provocación al show cuando la banda baila junto con Javier.

Los miembros de FAMA incluyen Javier Galvan-vocalista, Oscar Galvan-bass guitarrista, Edgar Galvan-saxófono. A propósito, los tres son hermanos. Los otros miembros incluyen Israel Dominguez-teclado, John Baraza-guitarrista, Eddie Gonzales-trompeta, y Ed Dominguez-tamboras. Así como lo han adivinado, Israel y Ed son hermanos también.

Este grupo de músicos talentosos llegaron juntos en un barrio de Houston, en El Dorado, De primero no mas para tener algo que hacer, después tocaban en quinceaneras y cuando menos pesaban, se firmaron con Sony Records que sucedió tres años pasados. Y es cuando lo tomaron en serio. Su manejador es Voltage Entertainment quienes manejan tales grupos como Suave, Los Palominos, Stephani y Alex Montes.

¿Por supuesto, donde viene el nombre FAMA? "Había cinco de nosotros cuando primero comenzamos. Pensamos de nombres como 'Las Cinco Espadas' y nombres así. Después probamos mafia al revés. Aifam se oía como FAMA y así fue como salió," recuerda Javier.

Todos los grupos Tejanos tienen sus efectos distintos. El de FAMA ha sido reconocido y aceptado en México. El sonido que FAMA le da a la gente tiene calidad única. El eco que tiene el voz de Javier junto con el modo que tiene la banda de tocar la música, hace las canciones de FAMA que sean pruebas sin imitaciones. El ritmo de las cumbias y rancheras que tocan esta un poco mas despacio que otra música Tejana, la cual lo hace ser Suavecito.

Siendo aceptados en México, el grupo estará representado en Monterrey con el grupo La Mafia en el mes de Junio.

"Esa es la dirección que tomamos con el nuevo disco. Somos aceptados, así que vamos a entrar en un mercado nuevo que es internacional," afirmo Javier. "Continuando fuera de Tejano. Todavía somos Tejano, siempre vamos ser Tejano pero hemos cruzado la línea que muchos grupos Tejanos quisieran cruzar. Hemos tenido suerte."

¿Como puede estar el grupo en el camino tanto, lejos de sus familias? "No hemos impuesto a esto. Les llamamos mucho, pero casi no pueden venir a vernos," dice Javier. "Este año la banda ha tomado una semana de vacaciones. Es todo lo que podemos tomar ahora porque estamos pegando bien. Nuestras ventas de L.P.s están haciendo bien. Estamos haciendo bien con la música. Nos siguen llamando que sigamos en el camino."

FAMA ahorita tiene tres albums, 'Amor, Amor, Amor', 'Heart and Soul', y 'Como Nunca'. Además de ser el vocalista de FAMA, Javier también tiene el talento de escribir canciones. El escribió todas las canciones de el primer álbum, ocho canciones en el segundo, y una en el tercero.

El álbum que están grabando recientemente incluye cuatro canciones de Javier. FAMA tiene canciones por otros escritores pero mientras que Javier sigue siendo lo que hace mejor, junto con la banda, FAMA siempre tendrá su propio y único sonido.

Unos meses pasados, FAMA se representó en Odessa por la primera vez en esta área. Ellos ya veían tocado en Midland hace un año y han tenido bailes en Lubbock, Amarillo, y Plainview. Pero en lo que respecta al Oeste de Tejas, pues, "QUEREMOS al Oeste de Tejas!" exclama Javier. Sus mas recientes representaciones han tomado lugár en Big Spring, y en Pecos. Así que, Oeste de Tejas, si no han ido a un concierto o baile de FAMA, no se desesperen. Hay viene otra oportunidad.

FAMA estará tocando en el Oeste de Tejas el 4, 5, y 6 de Junio en Big Spring, Odessa, y Fort Stockton.

"Queremos da la gracias al publico por todo el apoyo que nos han dado, que ha sido grande. Salgan y mírenos en vivo!"

FAMA Echos in West Texas

By Leonela

A tour of nine months has allowed FAMA to bring their music for West Texans to enjoy. Crowds of young fans surround the stages in Odessa, Big Spring and Pecos when FAMA performs. And why not, this group of talented young men enjoy their audiences. With a powerful sound system, lights galore, special smoke effects, and the voice of Javier singing to the young girls in front of him, how can anyone help but sing along, clap their hands and give a scream. With the band dancing behind him, it gives the show more excitement than it already has.

The members of FAMA include Javier Galvan-vocalist, Oscar Galvan-bass guitarist, Edgar Galvan-saxophone. Incidentally, the three are brothers. Other members include Israel Dominguez-keyboards, John Baraza-guitarist, Eddie Gonzales-trumpet, and Ed Dominguez-drummer. As you can already tell or might be guessing, Israel and Ed are brothers too.

This talented group of musicians came together in the neighborhood of El Dorado in Houston. In the beginning, just as something to do, then they played at quinceaneras and the next thing happening, they were signing up with Sony Records, which was three years ago. That's when they started taking it seriously. Voltage Entertainment is their current manager. The company manages groups such as Suave, Los Palominos, Stephani and Alex Montes.

So, where did they get the name FAMA? "There were five of us at first. We came up with something like 'Las Cinco Espadas', all kinds of crazy names. Then we tried mafia backwards. Aifam sounded close to FAMA so that's how it came out," recalled Javier.

All Tejano bands have their own distinctive sound. FAMA's has been recognized and accepted in Mexico. The sound FAMA gives the people has a unique quality. The echo of Javier's voice in conjunction with the way the band accompanies him, make FAMA songs imitation proof. The beat of their cumbias and rancheras is slightly slower than other Tejano music which makes it a little Suavesito.

With the group being accepted into Mexico, they will be in Monterrey sometime in June performing with La Mafia.

"That's the direction we took with the band with this new album. We're accepted, so we're into a new market, international that is," stated Javier. "Going beyond Tejano. We're still Tejano, we'll always be Tejano but we've already crossed over that line that a lot of Tejano bands want to cross over. We were lucky."

How does the band cope with being on the road so much, being away from their families? "We just got used to it. We do call them a lot, but they hardly get to come and see us, said Javier. "This year, the band has taken a week of vacation. That's all we can because right now, we're hitting real good. Our record sales are doing great. We're doing real good with our music. They keep calling for us to keep going on the road."

FAMA currently has three albums out, 'Amor, Amor, Amor', 'Heart and Soul', and 'Como Nunca'. Besides being the vocalist of FAMA, Javier is also a talented song writer. He wrote all the songs on the first album, eight songs on the second, and one on the third.

The album they are working on will include four songs he wrote. FAMA does have songs written by other writers, but with Javier doing his thing along with the band, FAMA will always have their own unique sound.

A few months ago, FAMA performed in Odessa for the first time in this area. They played in Midland a year ago and have performed in Lubbock, Amarillo and Plainview, but as for West Texas, well, "We LOVE West Texas!" exclaimed Javier. Their most recent performances in the area have included Big Spring and Pecos. So West Texas, if you haven't been to a concert or dance of FAMA, don't despair. Another opportunity is on the way.

FAMA will be back to West Texas on June 4th, 5th, & 6th. Performing in Big Spring, Odessa, and Fort Stockton.

"We want to thank the public for all the support which they have given us, it's been a lot. Come out and see us live!"

Graduado de la Escuela de Derecho de la Universidad de Harvard, es una persona de tendencia moderada cuyos puntos de vista a favor de la acción afirmativa, de la selección y de la pena de muerte reflejan los del Presidente Clinton, con quien estuvo asociado por primera vez como miembro del Consejo Demócrata de Dirigencia.

Ricardo Urbina, ex-catedrático de derecho de las Universidades de Georgetown y Howard y actualmente Magistrado del Tribunal Superior del Distrito de Columbia. Nacido de padres Hondureños y Puertorriqueños, Urbina ejemplifica en gran medida los criterios del "erudito legal con un gran corazón" para el Tribunal Supremo enunciados por el Presidente Clinton. El primer magistrado Hispano en la historia del Distrito de Columbia, a Urbina se le respeta en alto grado en muchas comunidades por sus cualidades de dirigencia y sensibilidad sobre los asuntos de los niños y el apoyo a la familia.

Joseph Baca, Magistrado del Tribunal Supremo de Nuevo México. El Magistrado Baca prestó servicios como juez del tribunal de distrito estatal durante más de 12 años antes de su elección para el más alto tribunal de Nuevo México en 1988

F.P. ("Pete") Benavides, Magistrado del Tribunal de Apelaciones de lo Penal en el Estado de Tejas. Benavides, de 46 años de edad, ha sido juez desde 1981 y es el autor de más de 500 opiniones jurídicas. Durante su carrera legal, Benavides ha estado involucrado extensamente en la justicia juvenil y los asuntos de la enseñanza.

Tenemos ahora abogados y jueces Hispanos con la experiencia, la estatura, el caudal de conocimientos legales, la sensibilidad y la erudición necesarios para prestar servicios capacitadamente en el más alto tribunal de la nación. Por cualesquiera criterios que el presidente pueda seleccionar a un Magistrado del Tribunal Supremo, hay Hispanos que están altamente calificados y merecen ser considerados. Todos los residentes de los Estados Unidos necesitan de un magistrado que dé vida a las palabras esculpidas en la fachada del edificio del Tribunal Supremo: "Justicia Equitativa Bajo la Ley." Un Hispano puede y debería hacerse cargo de esa tarea impresionante.

(John D. Trasviña es el presidente de la Asociación de Abogados Hispanos en el Distrito de Columbia.)
