Kaczynski journals talk of bombs, official says

■ Entries include things like 'I mailed the bomb,' federal prosecutor reveals during pretrial hearing.

N.Y. Times News Service

A federal prosecutor disclosed Friday that Theodore Kaczynski, the hermit-like former math professor accused of being the Unabomber, had kept detailed journals in his Montana cabin with entries like "I mailed that bomb," and "I sent that bomb."

Speaking during a pretrial hearing in Sacramento, Calif., U.S. Attorney Robert Cleary said that the journals, along with a typewriter found in Kaczynski's remote cabin after he was arrested April 3, would constitute "the backbone of the government's case."

The public disclosure in court about the potentially damaging material in the journals startled and disturbed the defense team, which complained that the prosecutor's statement "makes further problems in finding a juror pool that hasn't been tainted by publicity," said Quin Denvir, Kaczynski's lawyer.

Denvir said the defense, which already had access to the journals and knew their contents, would try to challenge their admissibility as evidence because federal agents turned them up in a search of Kaczynski's cabin. "We are certainly going to question the search of the cabin and what did and didn't come out of it," he said in a telephone interview.

Kaczynski is accused of sending a total of 16 bombs that killed three people and injured 23 others in his alleged 17-year career as the anonymous attacker who came to be known as the Unabomber because the first bombs targeted universities and airlines. After the mysterious bomber's 35,000-word manifesto on the ills of modern society was published a year ago by The Washington

Jury finds ex-Midland oilmen innocent

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

After more than four years and two criminal trials, two former Midland oilmen were vindicated in a Midland federal court late Friday.

Following 5 1/2 hours of deliberation on complex evidence of the alleged fraudulent use of computerized oil-field data, an eight-woman, four-man jury found Lee Higgins of Flower Mound and Philip I. Buch of Dallas not guilty on both counts against them.

Following a warning by Judge Royal Furgeson against emotional outbursts in the courtroom, family members of the defendants sat quietly as the not-guilty verdicts were read. Looks of relief and tears of joy were clearly visible, however.

This is the second trial for the defendants; the first trial ended in late January when the jury was unable to reach a unanimous verdict.

Following that trial, the defendants and their families sat through 17 hours of jury deliberation waiting for a verdict that never came.

In the second trial, prosecuting attorney Mark Roomberg attempted to prove that the defendants used proprietary information owned by Mobil Oil Co. in the profitable purchase and sale of portions of the Nollev Wolfcamp oil field in Andrews County.

To do this, Higgins was alleged to have inappropriately taken information from a computer database in New Jersey, sparking the alleged federal offenses.

In his final argument to the jury, Roomberg said that the defendants "exceeded their level of access to Mobil computers to further their fraud."

Limousine tour retraces route of JFK's motorcade on fateful day

By Melissa Williams
Associated Press

DALLAS — The 1960s-era Lincoln limousine convertible glides slowly down the S-curve cleaving the grassy knoll and Dealey Plaza. Suddenly, the crack of rifle shots splits the air. The shiny hulk slows almost to a stop, then roars through the triple underpass toward Parkland Hospital.

"All my daughter had to do was tell me about it on the phone and I said, 'Sign me up,'" says Janice Ritting, 55, a homemaker and former bookkeeper who on a recent visit from Tacoma, Wash., took the JFK Presidential Limo Tour with her husband, Andy.

The brainchild of Paul Crute, the tour retraces the path of the presidential motorcade on Nov. 22, 1963, when John and Jacqueline Kennedy landed at Dallas Love Field and headed into downtown Dallas.

In a 1964 Lincoln restored to look like the 1963 model, Crute recreates the ambience of that brilliant fall morning with the help of piped-in sound effects and radio broadcasts from the day the president was shot.

Crute gave up a career in sales to start the hour-long, $25 tour after seeing tourists wandering the assassination site as if unable to comprehend what happened.

"Being in touch with the fact that it is such an unhealed wound, that's kind of what motivated me to dream this up," says Crute, 34, who admires

Doctors discuss possible complications in Yeltsin's surgery

By Lynn Berry
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Boris Yeltsin has problems with other organs that may complicate upcoming heart surgery, his doctors revealed Friday as what was supposed to be a routine two-day hospital stay stretched into a second week.

Dr. Sergei Mironov, the Kremlin's chief physician, gave few details except to say the Russian president has no major liver or kidney troubles. But he seemed to confirm that Yeltsin's health is worse than previously acknowledged and that surgeons are concerned about how to keep other problems at bay during a planned heart bypass.

Yeltsin, 65, checked in to the Kremlin hospital a week ago for tests in preparation for surgery. Aides said he would be there only a couple days. On Monday it was extended a few more days. He was still there Friday, and his doctors said he would remain for another three or four days.

"To prepare for such an operation we need to consider the condition of all the patient's organs and systems. And of course all of us through life acquire rather a lot of organ problems," Mironov told reporters.

"Unfortunately, Boris Nikolayevich also has them," the doctor said.

Asked about rumors of liver problems, Mironov said that organs are always a consideration with a patient of Yeltsin's age, but there are "no big problems." He said Yeltsin's kidneys were "functioning absolutely normally." There long has been speculation about Yeltsin's alcohol habits.

Although Mironov downplayed talk of complications, Yeltsin's age appeared to be one of the doctor's biggest worries.

"As a rule, this is an operation done at a younger age, which reduces post-operative complications," Mironov said in an interview at his office near the Kremlin. "Of course, there is an element of risk."

Patients over 65 are considered high risk, according to Dr. Ivan Rykunov, head of the cardiac surgery research lab at the Russian Academy of Sciences.

Rumors that Yeltsin has other problems have circulated for years; his political career has been punctuated with sudden, unexplained absences and bouts of unusual behavior.

Yeltsin suffers from restricted blood flow to the heart, doctors say. He was hospitalized twice last year before suffering an apparent relapse in the final days of his presidential campaign in June.

He will remain in the Central Clinical Hospital for three or four more days of testing, Mironov said. The president's chief spokesman previously had said Yeltsin was likely to be released at the end of this week.

Yeltsin's wife, Naina, has been recuperating from kidney surgery at the same hospital. She is staying there "mostly because of the support she gives Boris Nikolayevich," Mironov said.

A date for surgery is expected to be set Wednesday at a doctors' meeting that will include American specialist Dr. Michael DeBakey.

Heart experts have said Yeltsin is likely to face triple bypass surgery. The Kremlin has remained mum on details.

Dr. Rinat Akchurin is likely to be the chief surgeon for Yeltsin's surgery, Mironov said.

Boris Yeltsin, seen here talking to reporters, has doctors concerned about possible organ complications in his upcoming heart surgery.

Libya hands out money to needy

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Libya has started handing out $5,000 in cash to needy Libyans as part of a promise by Col. Moammar Gadhafi to share the country's hefty oil revenues with its citizens.

The Central Bank of Libya deposited the money in 50,000 accounts that will help Libyans with "basic salaries, pensions or large families," Libyan state television said Thursday.

Gadhafi announced the handouts earlier this month, saying the government would monitor recipients to make sure the money was not wasted. "Buying toys for children," he said, was an example of how it should not be used.

WEATHER WATCH

Sunny skies, upper 80s for today

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies and a high in the upper 80s with south winds at 5-15 mph, according to the National Weather Service. Tonight's forecast calls for clear skies and a low near 60. Sunday's forecast calls for sunny skies and a high near 90. The high for Friday was 90, compared to the record high for that date of 107, set in 1953. Friday's low was 60, compared to the record low of 42, set in 1971.

STATE

Severe storms led to tornado watches throughout the state Friday, but sunnier skies could be in store for the weekend. Several tornado warnings were issued, and the public reported a tornado touched down near Smithwick in Burnet County, the National Weather Service said. There were no immediate reports of damage or injuries.

Thunderstorms developed rapidly across North Texas, spawning a tornado watch for the area. Tornado warnings were later issued for parts of the region, which saw afternoon temperatures ranging from 75 degrees in Waco to 90 degrees in Killeen.

Today's forecast called for mostly sunny skies in western and central portions of the region.

In South Texas, several tornado warnings were issued for parts of Nueces and Kleburg counties Friday, along with special marine warnings issued for parts of the coast between Corpus Christi and High Island. Otherwise, skies were partly sunny with widely scattered showers and thunderstorms. Temperatures ranged from the 70s to the 90s.

The South Texas forecast called for decreasing shower and thunderstorm activity today, but the deep south will remain very humid with scattered showers and thunderstorms lasting into late afternoon.

In West Texas, a tornado watch was in effect Friday night for part of the Edwards Plateau. Friday afternoon, showers were developing over parts of West Texas. Elsewhere, skies were mostly sunny.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from 71 degrees at Borger to 89 degrees at Midland.

Fair nights and mostly sunny days are expected through Sunday. Lows tonight could go from the 40s in the Panhandle to the 70s in the Big Bend valleys. Highs today could range from the 70s in the mountains to the upper 90s along the Big Bend portions of the Rio Grande.

NATION

A system that brought severe storms to the northern Plains continued its northeastward trek Friday, bringing more rain and thunder into the Midwest while the East enjoyed another day of sunshine and balmy temperatures.

Showers and thunderstorms soaked the upper Midwest as the low pressure system moved slowly northeast. The southern end of the system was expected to bring hail, fierce winds and hard rain to parts of Texas, Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana.

Behind the storm system, a light shower fell over Kansas and Oklahoma.

Ahead of the system, a strong area of high pressure brought another dry, mild day to the East with sunny skies and morning temperatures in the 50s and 60s.

Light showers fell in the Northwest and northern Rockies, and light snow was possible in the higher elevations.

The midday high was 84 degrees both at Key West, Fla., and Palacios, Texas. The low was 23 at Wildhorse Reservation, Nev.

Government proposes guidelines for animal transplants to humans

Criteria are needed now because of shortage of human donor organs, Food and Drug Administration says.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Responding to concerns about the risk of exposing people to animal-borne diseases, the government proposed guidelines Friday for transplanting animal organs and tissues into people.

The guidelines, which come years after some hospitals began experimenting with animal-to-human transplants, are needed now because of a shortage of human donor organs, the Food and Drug Administration said.

Doctors and other scientists are working to bridge the gap, from transplanting whole animal organs to genetically engineering animal tissue that the human body won't reject.

At the same time, researchers worry about how humans might react to animal-borne viruses and bacteria. Monkeys can spread the Ebola virus to humans, and primates carry simian immunodeficiency virus, closely related to the human AIDS virus. Scientists are exploring possible links between mad cow disease and Creutzfeldt Jakob disease in humans.

The FDA guidelines offer a number of steps from the breeding of animals to the makeup of transplant teams to ensure that cross-species transplants are safe. Patients should be told of the risks to themselves, families and other close contacts, including sexual partners, according to the guidelines.

"There's a very real problem," said Dr. David Kessler, the FDA commissioner, noting that 3,000 people die a year from lack of available transplant organs.

"I think because of this problem we are willing to take some very real risks," he said. "But the watchword is caution. This needs to proceed scientifically and cautiously."

Although the guidelines are voluntary, Kessler emphasized that the agency already regulates animal-based products used in human medicine and will keep doing so.

Some animal-to-human transplants have received widespread attention, such as the transplant of a baboon heart into Baby Fae nearly 12 years ago, transplants of baboon livers at the University of Pittsburgh, and transplant last year of baboon marrow into AIDS patient Jeff Getty of San Francisco.

Getty, 39, said he looks forward to reading the guidelines, wishes they could be more specific, but understands why they aren't — the government still doesn't fully understand the risk and won't assume responsibility.

"How do we live our lives after we receive a transplant?" he said, adding that he received advice from his transplant team this summer.

"I was advised by one of the team doctors that it was OK for me to resume having casual contact and safe sex with my partner," he said. He said doctors found no baboon viruses in him.

A spokesman for People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, an animal rights group based in Norfolk, Va., said the guidelines puts the government's seal on a wasteful and possibly dangerous practice.

Dan Mathews said the practice does not work, is cruel to animals, raises false hope in people, siphons scarce research dollars, and greatly increases the risk of new diseases.

"There's no shortage of available human organs," he said. "They're just being buried."

Research into so-called xenotransplants is widespread. Scientists are transplanting fetal pig cells to treat Parkinson's disease, genetically modified pig liver to counter human liver failure, pancreatic cells from pigs to treat human diabetes and fetal calf adrenal cells to ease the pain for people in the final stages of cancer.

For kidney patients, the need for sources other than humans is especially acute. More than 33,000 patients were awaiting kidney transplants in August.

"I think the viewpoint is that at some point in the next five years people are going to start to use xenotransplants, and I think the FDA wanted to be ahead of the curve," said Dr. Alan R. Hull, a Dallas nephrologist and medical professor and president of the National Kidney Foundation.

Among the guidelines, the FDA says surgical transplant teams should include a veterinarian and a doctor specializing in infectious diseases. The hospital or clinic should be associated with an accredited virology and microbiology laboratory.

Also, the proposals urge that samples of blood, cells and tissue from the animals and human recipients be saved for follow-up investigations. And the animals should be bred and reared in captivity from known stock and with close record-keeping and screening for known causes of infection.

BOMBS: Journals include detailed entries, prosecutor says

(From 1A)

Post, with joint financing from The New York Times, Kaczynski's brother began to suspect him and turned him in.

Federal agents and prosecutors, judging by the tidbits leaked to the press, already had masses of what they could introduce as circumstantial evidence in the trial. But Cleary indicated that the journals would add power to his case because they amounted to handwritten confessions.

He said the journals held Kaczynski's "detailed admissions" of the bombings and expressed the defendant's "desire to kill."

It remained unclear what effect the journals would have on the sharpest issue remaining for prosecutors to decide: whether to seek the death penalty for Kaczynski.

A federal prosecutor said Friday that Cleary would send a memo with his recommendation to the Justice Department within the next 10 days and that Attorney General Janet Reno would make the decision by the end of this year. To more skeptical legal observers, the prosecutors who put out word of the journals seemed to be seeking to paint a public image of Kaczynski as a lucid killer, just five days after a segment of the CBS news magazine program "60 Minutes" featured Kaczynski's mother and brother and their sympathetic descriptions of him as mentally ill.

Blair Bernholz Berk, a Los Angeles criminal defense attorney and expert on evidence, said the Kaczynski family appeared to be trying to show that he was sick and therefore should not be put to death. She said the journals could conceivably work in their favor if they show "a degradation in terms of his ability to carry on a normal life."

Ms. Bernholz Berk said it could not be taken for granted that the journals would be admissible, but "common sense would tell you they would."

Cleary brought up the journals — causing heads in the courtroom audience to jerk up attentively — as the prosecution and the defense wrangled over when Kaczynski's trial should begin. Kaczynski was not present for the proceedings, which had been expected to consist only of legal housekeeping tasks.

The prosecution has proposed the trial begin March 31. Denver and his co-counsel, Judy Clarke, said they needed more time to sift through the mountains of documents connected with the case, saying it was the biggest and most complex ever filed in the district. (There are 1,600 pounds of records accumulated over the course of the Unabomber investigation.)

Cleary, the prosecutor, countered with his view that the crucial documents were only about a foot high, and held up his hands a foot apart to illustrate. "This is not a circumstantial case," he said. "This is not a case that involves 22,000 documents."

Cleary has estimated that the case will take perhaps four months to try, with more time needed if the verdict is guilty for the penalty phase that comes next. By the time court closed Friday, the judge had not yet set a date.

Denver said that the defense deemed it reasonable to schedule Kaczynski's arraignment closer to December of next year, and that Cleary was trying to impose his view of the case on the defense.

"From his viewpoint, it's a simple case, but from our viewpoint it isn't," he said. "And we have a right to prepare our case."

He said he and Ms. Clarke — who is best known as the defense lawyer who helped Susan Smith, the South Carolina woman convicted of drowning her two sons in a lake, avoid the death penalty — had not yet decided which of the items found in Kaczynski's cabin they would try to have ruled inadmissible in court.

Federal agents have let word filter out that they found two live bombs in Kaczynski's cabin that were similar to those used in fatal attacks, as well as bomb parts and tools. The leaks have been so extensive that Kaczynski moved in April to have the government barred from prosecuting him because it tried "to vilify him in the national media with incriminating evidence."

AD: Clinton's campaign to counter with its own spot record fighting illegal drugs, part of a more aggressive Dole campaign. But some questioned whether the tack would be effective.

A national poll published earlier this week found that crime and drugs ranked far below such issues as the economy and health care in importance to prospective voters.

The Clinton camp denounced Dole's ad.

"We view it as a significant turn into much more negative and personal politics," said Clinton-Gore spokesman Joe Lockhart. "It should be seen as a desperate act from a desperate campaign."

Making the case that Dole was weak, White House political adviser Doug Sosnik said the Republican was scaling back his advertising in California. But a Dole official said the campaign planned to place more ads in California next week.

Dole hasn't advertised locally in Illinois in three weeks and is being forced to advertise in traditional Republican strongholds such as Florida and Georgia, Sosnik said.

Clinton aides noted they began airing spots praising the president's record on crime shortly after the August convention, and they argued that viewers would therefore judge Dole's charges against the benchmark they had set.

But they also sent new ads to stations across the country attacking Dole's record on drugs, saying he voted against creating the drug policy director's office and asserting that he "joined with Newt Gingrich to cut vaccines for children." The ads will not air before Monday.

Dole began a $5 million ad push last weekend that criticized Clinton for failing to lead the fight against drugs. As with the soft biographical ads Dole has aired, the campaign scheduled many spots to run during soap operas and talk shows viewed by large numbers of women. Polls show Dole having difficulty winning support from female voters.

Dole officials debated more than a week whether to air the spot showing Clinton on MTV lest it look like a cheap shot.

But when network news shows — prompted by Dole mentioning the comments during a speech — ran the MTV footage, aides pushing for the tougher ad won out.

Clinton has had to overcome allegations of infidelity and trustworthiness since he ran in 1992, and Dole's camp thinks his comments on drugs go directly to questions about character.

"It further emphasizes the four years of silence on this issue," said Gary Koops, a Dole spokesman. "He had that casual, laughing attitude about it in 1992 and now 46 days before the election he's going to go on national TV and say experimentation is wrong."

And while Dole planned to emphasize his economic plan next week, it was clear his campaign would continue to press character issues.

"There's been a moral fog around this administration," said Alex Castellanos, who produced the spot. "When it's our kids and drugs, then weakness of character is an issue that affects everyone."

Dole's handling of the drug issue and the emphasis on his proposed tax cut indicated his campaign was becoming better focused, said Larry Sabato, a political science professor at the University of Virginia.

With the economy on solid ground, Sabato said character attacks were understandable because "that's the only area of vulnerability for Clinton at this point." But he doubted it would work as a sustained strategy.

"It has to be harsh in order to work and you always risk a backlash in doing that kind of advertising for too long," he said.

At the same time, he called Clinton's campaign "the most negative ever." Most of Clinton's ads have contained both information about the president's record and negative comments about Dole's career.

INNOCENT: Jury deliberates 5 hours, returns not-guilty verdict

(From 1A)

Roomberg argued that the evidence showed a profit of $195,000 was made "because Mr. Higgins got Mr. Buch those computer files as he requested."

The jury, however, sided with defense attorneys Woody Leverett and Harris Kerr.

In his final arguments, Kerr pointed out that by Mobil's own written instruction to employees, the information on oil fields is only confidential "until this information becomes generally available to the industry."

Defense attorneys worked to show that the information Mobil officials claimed was proprietary was available from other sources. "This information that's gained from the field is theirs," Kerr said, indicating the defendants.

After considering the complex evidence for hours, the not-guilty verdicts were read about 6 p.m. Friday.

Following the verdict, Roomberg made a motion that "the conditions of bond be removed" from the defendants, making Higgins and Buch free men once again.

Higgins did not comment at length on his vindication, other than to express pleasure at being relieved of the burden of charges he has faced since 1991.

"I don't want to make any comments," Buch said, still visibly moved by the experience. "I'm afraid of what I might say."

JFK: Limousine tour follows president's route in Dallas

(From 1A)

Kennedy died. Kennedy and believes Lee Harvey Oswald did not act alone in killing him.

As the tour begins, Mrs. Ritting slides into the left rear vinyl seat, the place a pink-suited, pillbox-hatted Mrs. Kennedy took that day. Andy Ritting, a 48-year-old accountant, takes the right rear seat, resting his elbow on the door in Kennedy's expansive gesture.

The taped sounds of cheering crowds whistling and clapping ensue as the car proceeds from Love Field along Lemmon Avenue past industrial buildings into downtown, where crowds stood 10 deep to watch the Kennedys pass.

Crute points out the Southland Life building, Mobil's famous red flying horse, Neiman Marcus' flagship store, the Greyhound bus terminal.

"That's where Lee Oswald caught a cab, actually, approximately 20 minutes after the assassination of President Kennedy," he notes.

Mrs. Ritting says she was 23 — "an impressionable age" — when has happened in the motorcade route, stand by ...

By this time, the Rittings' limo is flying down the freeway, the sun still bright but goosebumps prickling Mrs. Ritting's bare arms.

"A shooting in the motorcade in the downtown area. Parkland Hospital has been advised to stand by for a severe gunshot wound," the announcer barks, sirens whining in the background.

"... We see a Secret Service man spread-eagled over the top of the car. ... We can't see who has been hit, if anybody's been hit, but apparently something is wrong here, something is terribly wrong."

Taped sirens scream for two interminable minutes as Crute and the Rittings race toward the medical complex. At the Parkland emergency dock, the car stops and the announcer describes a priest giving Kennedy the last rites and the justice of the peace's arrival.

Then: "The chief executive of the United States has expired. President Kennedy has been assassinated. It's official now: the president is dead."

Somber music plays as the limo heads away from the hospital. Mrs. Ritting admits later that she was holding back tears.

Some call the tour tasteless, morbid, the gross exploitation of a nation's heartbreak.

Sue Swanson, who eats lunch daily in Dealey Plaza and works nearby, described it as "rather macabre."

"It's a free world. If they want to make an extra buck doing that kind of thing, there are people doing much worse," she said.

Added Chuck DiGiovanni, a tourist from Chicago: "It's sick. It's over with. It's done. Let's not relive it again. It was a terrible time."

Mrs. Ritting doesn't see it that way.

"This is really special," she says. "I have mixed feelings about it. I wouldn't miss it for the world, but it's kind of eerie. I relived this because it affected me so much."

Iraqi painter holds position of importance with Saddam

By Hamza Hendawi
Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Yehia Abbas al-Dureji is a proud Iraqi. Many here would also say he is a lucky Iraqi.

Al-Dureji has painted more than 1,000 portraits of President Saddam Hussein, some of which pleased the Iraqi leader so much that he met with the artist on several occasions.

In Iraq, where Saddam is viewed by many as something of a deity, this is a very big deal — the stuff that earns the respect of one's family and neighbors and deters one's enemies.

Dureji is one of the most favored of the artists who make the hundreds of larger-than-life portraits of Saddam and thousands of photographs that adorn virtually every government building in the country, as well as public squares, schools and shops. Many families also display Saddam's image in their homes.

Speaking to The Associated Press on Friday in his studio on Baghdad's al-Mansouri street — a man who asked to be called an "Information Ministry guide" — sitting in on the interview — Dureji said proudly that his only inspiration was his love for Saddam.

"It is testimony for my love for Saddam and the love of all Iraqis for Saddam," he said. "I don't think of money. I only think of offering my work to this great leader."

Adorning the walls of his studio are two photographs of him with Saddam. Another shows him posing beside Qusai Saddam, the younger son of the Iraqi leader who also is in charge of the country's "special" security.

Other photographs and paintings show Saddam on horseback — one wearing a military uniform, another in a traditional Arab robe, and a third in riding boots and trousers.

Dureji is considered among the top portraitists of the Iraqi leader, as the photographs of him with Saddam prove.

He is not employed full-time by the government and was reluctant to talk about how much he gets paid, if at all, for his work. He also would not say whether Saddam had ever posed for him.

There was nothing in his appearance that betrayed affluence, and his studio was rather scruffy and looked in need of a fresh coat of paint.

But despite six years of U.N. sanctions imposed to punish Iraq for Saddam's 1990 invasion of Kuwait, Dureji does not waver in his support for Saddam.

Wayward bishop out of hiding

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — Leaders of Scotland's Roman Catholic Church, angered by a wayward bishop, expressed sympathy Friday for a woman who had a son with the priest and shared his secret for 15 years.

Senior church officials called on Roderick Wright, the 56-year-old former Bishop of Argyll and the Isles, to come out of hiding.

Wright dropped out of sight 11 days ago, apparently with a woman named Kathleen Macphee whom he had counseled after her divorce. He resigned on Monday.

Another woman, 48-year-old Joanna Whibley, told the BBC on Thursday that Wright had fathered her 15-year-old son, Kevin.

The Scottish Catholic Church confirmed that Wright was the boy's father. "This was in fact one of the main reasons given for his resignation," it confirmed in a statement.

"I weep for the mother and child and the way in which they have been treated, but I have been so duped by the events of the last few days that I don't know what to believe any more," Cardinal Thomas Winning, leader of Scotland's Catholics, said in an interview published Friday in The Herald newspaper.

Fellow priests expressed feelings of betrayal at Wright's disappearance, possibly with Ms. Macphee.

The cardinal said he and Archbishop Keith O'Brien had confronted the bishop three years ago over rumors of a liaison.

Image campaigns still foreign idea in traditional Japanese politics

By Peter Landers
Associated Press

TOKYO— Hoping to soften the image of her party's tough-talking leader, a media strategist had Ichiro Ozawa strip to his shirt-sleeves and pose feeding the parakeets in his backyard.

Old-fashioned party allies thought the idea bird-brained, and Ozawa is now back to the tried and true: appearing with the standard-issue grim expression and blue suit at smoky party meetings.

So much for image politics, Japanese-style.

The slick packaging and poll-driven campaigns that dominate U.S. presidential elections are exotic in Japan, where local politicking and personal ties count far more than

Japan is expected to hold an election Oct. 20 for Parliament's more powerful lower house, but you could scour Tokyo high and low and find nary a political consultant.

TV time.

Japan is expected to hold an election Oct. 20 for Parliament's more powerful lower house, but you could scour Tokyo high and low and find nary a political consultant — let alone a focus group or a producer of negative television ads.

To anyone fed up with the way U.S. presidential elections are conducted nowadays, that might make Japan seem like a paradise.

But many Japanese see another side: In the absence of media-oriented campaigns, elections are won by greasing the palms of supporters and offering pork-barrel favors.

Because politicians don't debate issues — even superficially in 30-second TV commercials — many Japanese see elections as irrelevant, and voter apathy has reached epidemic proportions.

Part of it is cultural — Japanese tend to frown on self-promotion and open conflict. Conventional wisdom holds that negative campaigning would backfire here, though it is hard to be sure since no one has really tried it.

But experts say just as important is the simple fact that until now, politicians haven't needed image.

Traditionally, the key to Japanese politics has been organization. For conservative politicians, that meant a solid support group of local businessmen or farmers who could bring in the votes at election time. For leftists, labor unions usually provided the punch.

In any case, most politicians have assumed that a spanking new road through their district was as finely honed a message as they'd ever need.

Two examples: ■ When four politicians announced the formation of a new liberal party last week, they did so in a cramped meeting room with low ceilings, posing for photos in front of a drab window blind.

■ Prime ministers get live national television coverage when they address opening sessions of Parliament, but they usually let bureaucrats write the speech — and read it in a monotone, staring down at the text.

American forces conduct live-fire drills in Kuwait

KUWAIT (AP) — American forces opened fire Friday on green-uniformed troops in the Kuwaiti desert: cutouts posted in the sand for target practice.

The war games held six miles south of the Iraqi border did not name the enemy. But the rounds of artillery and automatic weapons were aimed — symbolically, at least — at Saddam Hussein.

The real confrontation between the United States and Iraq has eased in the past week, but the White House is continuing to bulk up its military presence in the Persian Gulf.

Hundreds of soldiers from the 1st Cavalry Division arrived here Friday, part of an airlift bringing 3,500 soldiers from Fort Hood, Texas, to Kuwait within a few days. President Clinton ordered them to this desert kingdom to augment a force of 1,200 that has been conducting exercises since August.

More than 30,000 U.S. military personnel, most aboard ships, will soon be in the gulf. Before the crisis erupted three weeks ago over Iraqi attacks on Kurds in northern Iraq, fewer than 20,000 were deployed.

The United States says the intent of the military exercises is to show Saddam the Americans are ready to protect their oil-rich allies in the gulf.

"It is a great opportunity to realistically do the same missions we may be called on to do in combat," Army Capt. Shane O'Kelly of New York City said as armored vehicles rumbled past, kicking up plumes of sand.

Simulating a counterattack by enemy forces, a platoon of Americans in a trench triggered a mine and fired live ammunition from M-16s and a machine gun.

A half-dozen Bradley fighting vehicles raced across the desert past a group of camels, which appeared oblivious to the action.

Suddenly, a soldier shouted "Gas!" The troops pulled gas masks from their pouches and pulled them over their heads. One soldier was hauled out of the trench and taken to an ambulance on tracks, one of two who were "wounded" in the mock firefight.

In real life, no threatening Iraqi troop movements were reported Friday, said Lt. Col. Andy Bourland, a U.S. military spokesman in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia.

Iraq has been using radar to track U.S. aircraft patrolling the "no-fly" zones over northern and southern Iraq, but it has not fired on any planes in the past week.

Devil worship enters Kenyan society, reports say

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Investigators have found evidence of devil worship in Kenya, including human sacrifice, cannibalism, Black Mass celebrations and child kidnappings.

A government commission appointed two years ago by President Daniel arap Moi to investigate allegations of devil worship found "ample corroborative evidence of its existence," a two-page statement said Friday.

The commission uncovered "horrible criminal cases," including the kidnapping of children, child abuse, murders and the severing of body parts such as tongues, eyes and limbs, it said.

The statement did not say whether any arrests had been made, or how widespread the devil worship was.

The commission's report was not made public, but the government's statement comes at a time of increased political activity and tensions ahead of presidential and parliamentary elections, which must be held by the end of 1997.

The commission's findings were based on testimony from former and practicing cult members, and were confirmed by independent sources, the statement said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Feds announce $45 million settlement

HONOLULU — The people of Rongelap Atoll, dusted with radioactive fallout from a 1954 hydrogen bomb test, can go home again under a $45 million resettlement agreement with the United States.

U.S. Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt announced the agreement Thursday at a signing ceremony in Washington with officials of Rongelap and the Marshall Islands.

The deal, crafted in three years of negotiations, provides for radiation mitigation, safe water, electrical power, construction of homes and docks, a school and government facilities, Babbitt said.

On March 1, 1954, U.S. nuclear test Bravo detonated on Bikini Atoll with three times the force planned. Within five hours, children on Rongelap, to the southeast, were playing in a fine, white, powdery, "snow."

Chemical weapons incineration stopped

SALT LAKE CITY — The Army's new high-tech chemical weapons incinerator has shut down for the second time since it began operations last month, this time after workers found a leak of decontamination liquid.

Army officials stressed that the liquid found Wednesday had no nerve agent in it, but was rather a sodium hydroxide solution used to decontaminate protective suits workers wear in areas exposed to the nerve agent.

An employee noticed "some seepage through one of our floors," said Tim Thomas, site project manager for the Army. He said fine cracks had developed in the concrete floor of a worker decontamination chamber.

The $400 million plant, located 50 miles southwest of Salt Lake City, began destroying nerve gas-bearing rockets Aug. 22. It shut down two days later when a small leak was discovered.

Old Bridge Collapses Killing Two

ECLECTIC, Ala. — A bridge that had been closed for three years because of safety problems collapsed Friday, killing two state workers who were trying to dismantle the structure.

The Old Kowaliga Bridge was replaced with a new span in 1971 and converted into a fishing pier. The state closed it to fishing three years ago and began taking it apart recently because its pilings had deteriorated, said Ray Bass, chief engineer for the Department of Transportation.

The two workers who were killed — Frank Williams, 41, and Randall Phillips, 30 — were standing on the support pier of the bridge's last span.

"About 500 feet of the bridge that hadn't been removed had a catastrophic failure and collapsed like dominoes toward the pier they were standing on," Bass said.

Divers found the bodies Friday afternoon. It was unclear whether the workers were drowned or crushed.

Phone messages suggest Marceca was well known

WASHINGTON (AP) — Few presidential aides acknowledge knowing much about Anthony Marceca, the central figure in the FBI files controversy.

But Marceca's own calendar and phone messages suggest he rubbed elbows with plenty of big names and remained in contact with the White House long after he left and problems with his own FBI background check prevented him from getting a new job there.

The civilian Army investigator who was detailed to the White House for six months — August 1993 to February 1994 — attended a ceremony with President Clinton last fall and called the White House as he traveled with Defense Secretary William Perry in May 1994 to report "what he observed."

He sought jobs as a presidential advance man, and this past spring, he telephoned the White House to peddle potentially derogatory information about Bob Dole, documents show.

"Have the pics of oil company stealing $30 mil. of oil ... and Bob Dole shut down investigation," Marceca is quoted in one phone message left in March — just as Dole was wrapping up the GOP nomination.

The message was for White House security chief Craig Livingston, Marceca's friend and now fellow FBI files figure. Livingston's lawyer said his client returned the call but wasn't interested in the pictures.

The documents shed little light on the why Marceca improperly gathered hundreds of confidential FBI files on past Republican administration workers.

But they do establish that Marceca stayed plugged in to the White House long after he finished his six-month stint and after his own background check turned up derogatory information that blocked him from getting another tour of duty. That forced him to return to his Army job.

The contacts are to be highlighted in an interim congressional report on the FBI files matter next week.

Marceca initially denied any wrongdoing in the file gathering issue, saying it was an honest mistake based on outdated requests. But two months ago, he suddenly stopped talking to investigators, invoking his Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination.

When Marceca's file gathering came to light this spring, most senior presidential aides drew a blank when asked whether they knew him. "Not until last week," ex-White House counsel Bernard Nussbaum told investigators.

But documents suggest Marceca met several big names and also turned up in some unexpected places.

For example, when Nussbaum's staff couldn't open the safe in his office in January 1994, Marceca was sought to crack it — an event Marceca would note proudly in his calendar planner.

"Call from Nussbaum's office, no one else can open safe," a Marceca notation says. Another adds he "opened safe" and Nussbaum's secretary "gave me candy."

This photograph shows a Bufo marinus, or cane toad, the amphibian troubling some Florida residents and killing pets.

Poisonous toads pose serious threat to Florida families' pets

MIAMI (AP) — In one of those examples of man foolishly messing with nature, a huge kind of South American toad was let loose in Florida and other parts of the world earlier this century to try to control sugar cane pests.

Big mistake. The Bufo marinus, or Cane toad, can grow to 7 inches or more and weigh more than 3 pounds. They are overrunning part of Australia. They're scaring tourists in the Caribbean. And occasionally they're killing dogs in Florida with a poison so potent that the family pets die in a matter of minutes.

"Someone got this wild idea it would increase sugar cane production. It didn't," said University of Miami biologist Jay Savage. "You'd have to have bumper-to-bumper toads to increase a crop."

"Now they've become a pest themselves," Savage said. Bufo marinus resembles Jabba the Hutt of "Star Wars," with deeply pitted swollen glands behind each eye, extending down the back. The glands contain a milky white toxin that the toad secretes when threatened. The animal's call sounds like a tractor in the distance.

Vivian Gil's Dalmation, Jazz, survived a confrontation with one of the toads this month outside her home in western Dade County, on the edge of the Everglades.

"It looked like he was having spasms or something. It felt like his brain was going to explode," she said. "It was very scary."

Some people try to use the poison of the toad and its cousins as an aphrodisiac and a hallucinogen. The substance was sold up until last year in grocery stores and tobacco shops in the United States but is now banned.

"Four New York men purchased it, thinking it was an oral aphrodisiac. They died," said Dr. Rossanne Philen, an epidemiologist at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta. The substance was supposed to be rubbed on the genitals.

"A few years ago there was a fad of licking the toads because people thought they were a hallucinogen," Savage said. "Other people tried to extract and sniff it."

In fact, Maya Indians in Mexico use the toxin as a hallucinogen in their religious ceremonies.

Bomb training could be source of residue, officials say

WASHINGTON (AP) — A month before the crash of TWA Flight 800, the airliner was used to train bomb-sniffing dogs, and the explosives in those exercises could explain the traces of chemical residue found on the plane, government officials said Friday.

"This discovery would definitely hurt any attempt to build a circumstantial case of a bomb destroying the aircraft," a source close to the investigation told The Associated Press. "Now we would definitely need pitting or blast damage to prove there was a bomb placed on board."

Investigators have been stymied for weeks in determining what caused the Boeing 747 jumbo jet to plunge into the Atlantic Ocean July 17, killing all 230 people on board.

So far investigators have speculated they might have to build a circumstantial case around the tiny traces of chemical explosives that were found to support any conclusion that a bomb or terrorist act caused the crash.

A Federal Aviation Administration official said FAA investigators found records late Thursday showing that the plane had been used for testing dogs on their bomb-detection ability. Officials began looking for the match about a month ago.

"It was a long tedious process of matching FAA and TWA records," the official said, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

The TWA plane was used as a testing facility for bomb-sniffing dogs as part of a routine training exercise in June, officials familiar with the investigation said Friday.

"It was this plane, and the test bombs contained explosive material," said one official.

Test packages containing explosive chemicals were placed aboard the Boeing 747 in St. Louis, but they were removed from the aircraft before the plane took off, another source close to the investigation told The Associated Press.

The assortment of high explosives used in the June 10 exercise may have included PETN, nitroglycerine and RDX, although the police department told the FBI that "all of the stuff was removed from the plane," the source said.

Officials said this could explain the trace residues previously identified in the TWA Flight 800 investigation. Tiny traces of PETN and RDX have been found in various areas of the aircraft wreckage that has been recovered.

"We still don't know whether we have a match" between the explosive residue and the bombs used in the training exercise, one official said.

"At this point, there would be no reason to rule out the possibility of a bomb, based only on this development," another federal official cautioned.

The FAA told the FBI about the discovery immediately after learning of it from airport police in St. Louis, officials said.

Jewell's attorney encouraged by report

ATLANTA (AP) — A report that the FBI has traced a battery likely used in the Olympic park bombing to a Florida hardware chain points to a suspect other than Richard Jewell, the security guard's attorneys said Friday.

"We're encouraged that they're doing something besides bothering him, stalking him," said attorney Watson Bryant. "Maybe they're about to get on the trail of whoever did this."

WXIA-TV in Atlanta reported Thursday that FBI agents had used a lot number to trace the 12-volt battery, the type used in lanterns, to a chain of hardware stores based in West Palm Beach, Fla. Worley Sewell told the station the battery was in a shipment of 24 batteries delivered earlier this year to his 11 stores located along Florida's East Coast. An initial computer check did not pinpoint the store.

FBI spokesman Jay Spadafore declined to comment on the report Friday.

The July 27 explosion killed a woman and injured 111 people. Jewell was initially hailed as a hero for spotting the knapsack containing the bomb and trying to direct people away before it blew up. But he was named a suspect three days later.

Perot rethinks campaign strategy after debate snub

DALLAS (AP) — Locked out of the debates and denied prime TV time for his infomercials, Ross Perot is reworking his campaign strategy to take advantage of free air time and reinforce his arguments against the two-party system.

"If I can't get on television, I can't get the message out," the Reform Party nominee said Friday in back-to-back morning TV interviews that signaled the start of his stepped-up free-media push. He also planned to appear on a round of Sunday morning talk shows.

Another element of Perot's strategy is to use the Commission on Presidential Debates' recommendation that he be excluded from the debates to bolster his contention that the two-party system is closed and needs a shakeup.

"We have huge problems we have to deal with, face and solve," Perot said on NBC's "Today" show. "And the two parties can't touch them because they created these problems."

Perot filed a complaint on Friday with the Federal Election Commission alleging that the bipartisan debate commission illegally endorses or contributes to political candidates or parties and should not be allowed to host the debates.

His campaign also plans to file suit Monday seeking an injunction to halt any presidential debates planned by the commission.

Running mate Pat Choate echoed Perot's complaints on Friday in an appearance on CNN's "Talk Back Live," and pointed blame at Bob Dole, who supported the commission's recommendation to exclude third-party candidates.

"We're asking the American people to contact Bob Dole, and just simply say, 'Bob Dole, if you won't play by the rules, if you will not let Ross Perot in the debates, we're not even going to consider voting for you,'" Choate said.

Clinton, for his part, has said he would welcome Perot in the debates.

Jack R. Essenberg, Suffolk County Chairman of the Independence Party of New York submits documents to get Ross Perot on their ballot.

Perot himself challenged Dole to turn up for a debate in St. Louis on Wednesday, where Dole will be campaigning anyway — without any expectation the GOP candidate would accept.

"No way he's going to show up and debate me, because he has been part and parcel of creating the problems that exist," Perot said on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Clinton and Dole campaign officials were scheduled to resume negotiations Saturday on the timing, format and number of debates.

Simpson jury prospects say they can be fair amid media saturation

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Facing O.J. Simpson across the courtroom for the first time Friday, prospective jurors at his civil trial said everyone knows something about the case but insisted they could be fair.

"In my mind the score is zero-to-zero," a black man said. He said that he suspected there was a police cover-up in the Simpson investigation but that he was willing to hear the evidence anew and reach an unbiased verdict.

Superior Court Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki allowed the man to remain despite strong objections from the lawyer for the family of slaying victim Ron Goldman.

The judge dismissed another black man who said he believed something wasn't "kosher" in the investigation. The man also described Fred Goldman, father of the slaying victim, as "vindictive" and said he didn't trust the coroner or the two lead investigators on the case.

The suit by the victims' families seeks to hold Simpson liable for the 1994 killings of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Goldman. Simpson was acquitted last year of murder charges in a criminal trial.

Friday was Simpson's first appearance since jury selection began in the wrongful-death case Wednesday. He missed the opening sessions because he was in Orange County fighting for custody of his two youngest children. That case is recessed until November.

A few demonstrators yelled "DNA! DNA! DNA!" and some counter-demonstrators yelled back as he arrived.

In the courtroom, a middle-aged white woman said she thought Simpson was probably guilty, probably beat his wife and took too long to seek custody of his children. Simpson had a pained expression, and his lawyer challenged the woman on her assumption. She said she only knew what she heard on the news.

The grilling of prospective jurors about publicity in the case began slowly, and the judge acknowledged the pace he had set the first days would not continue.

Lives could be saved by lowering alcohol limits, report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 500 lives could be saved every year if all states lowered their blood alcohol limit for driving to 0.08 percent, according to a report from a Boston University researcher.

"I urge every governor and every legislature to support ... a nationwide 0.08 standard to draw the line against impaired driving — the most frequently committed violent crime in America," said Katherine Prescott, president of Mothers Against Drunk Driving, which released the report Friday.

The study by Ralph Hingson of Boston University's School of Public Health was published in Friday's edition of the American Journal of Public Health.

Currently, 14 states have a 0.08 limit while the remainder define driving while intoxicated as a blood alcohol content of 0.10, Hingson said.

Hingson compared alcohol-related auto fatalities in five states that had lowered the limit with nearby states that had not made the change and found a decline in such deaths in four out of five.

Overall, Hingson calculated that lowering the blood-alcohol limit reduced driver fatalities by 10 percent in the states with reduced limits.

There were 5,681 drivers killed in alcohol-related crashes in 1994 in states with higher alcohol limits, he said, so a 10 percent cut would save between 500 and 600 lives.

Champion astronaut: Bring on baths, books, gooey desserts

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — She hasn't had a shower or bath, or any gooey desserts, or any hot-off-the-press books since she left Earth on March 22. Another few days and astronaut Shannon Lucid will be able to enjoy all those things and more.

"It will be really good to get home," America's space-endurance champion said Friday from the linked shuttle Atlantis and Russian station Mir.

"I'm looking forward to sitting in my big chair and I'm looking forward to having my family around. We're going to sit, we're going to talk. And then I'm looking forward to not having the alarm clock wake me up in the morning and just sort of taking it easy for a little bit."

What has she missed most during her record-breaking six months in orbit?

"Obviously I better say my family, because they would feel really bad if they thought they came in second to some real gooey desserts," the married mother of three said in a TV interview, her first since Atlantis docked with Mir late Wednesday to bring her home.

Her youngest child, Michael, 21, a college student, hasn't felt neglected. He said his mother has quizzed him regularly from orbit about his homework and eating habits.

"Oh, she nags," he said. "She nags."

Atlantis is supposed to undock from Mir on Monday and bring Lucid and the five other shuttle crew members back to Earth on Thursday, her 188th day in space. Astronaut John Blaha, her replacement aboard Mir, will stay behind with two Russian cosmonauts for four months.

Wearing a fresh, striped shirt — she ditched her blue cosmonaut uniform as soon as she became a shuttle crew member Thursday — the 53-year-old Lucid said she feels great, just as she did when she rocketed into orbit. No other woman, or American, has spent so long in space.

She continued her orbital exercises Friday, running on a treadmill. The Russians, experts at long spaceflight, insist on frequent, intense workouts to slow the inevitable muscle and bone deterioration in weightlessness.

When Lucid gets back on Earth, she will be weak and wobbly, and it will be months before her body readapts completely to gravity.

Unlike her predecessor, Dr. Norman Thagard, the first American to live on Mir, Lucid said she did not lose much, if any, weight in orbit. She said that's unfortunate; she's a solid 5-foot-9 and 150 pounds.

While she enjoyed the Russian space food, especially the canned meat and potatoes, there were times she craved candy, potato chips and other junk food.

She has kept clean, so to speak, with sponge baths and gel shampoo that's worked into the hair and then wiped off with a towel. (She started pulling her hair back tight, months ago.) The 10-year-old space station used to have a shower, but cosmonauts converted it into a sauna long ago; it's now used for storage. There is no shower on the shuttle, either.

As for her clothes, she simply threw them away when they got dirty.

Her Mir stay turned out to be 1 1/2 months longer than planned because of booster rocket problems and hurricanes that kept Atlantis grounded. She said she knew she'd get home sooner or later but admitted that after the first launch was scrubbed, "I never did start counting the days down again."

Jury awards $3.5 million to woman who lost leg

FORT WORTH (AP) — Jurors have awarded $3.5 million in damages to a woman who lost part of her left leg because she mistakenly injected saline, not antibiotics, into her body.

By the time the error was discovered, the infection had spread.

Baylor Medical Center at Grapevine was found grossly negligent Thursday in the care it provided Margaret Black, a former Hurst elementary teacher, who also is in danger of losing her right foot.

Ms. Black was awarded $1.5 million in actual damages and $2 million in punitive damages. State District Judge George Crowley will decide in about two weeks whether Baylor may be liable for another $600,000 under the state's Fair Trade and Deceptive Practices Act for charging Ms. Black for drugs she never got.

"There's not any amount of money I'd take for one of my feet," Ms. Black said before the verdict.

Baylor officials said they plan to "vigorously appeal" the 10-2 decision.

Lawyers for Ms. Black, who has been a diabetic since age 9, claimed that Baylor's home health care program failed to train their client adequately and follow up on her treatment.

Ms. Black had been hospitalized at Baylor Medical Center in Dallas in 1991 for a foot infection and began home infusion therapy after she was discharged.

As often as four times a day, Ms. Black hooked herself to an intravenous medicine bag she thought contained pre-mixed medicine for hour-long treatments, she said. She told jurors she didn't know she was supposed to mix the drug with the saline inside the sealed pouch.

Baylor's lawyers described Ms. Black as a noncompliant patient whose desire for a normal life put her "in denial" of her condition.

Mac Stewart, a Baylor attorney, told the jury that Ms. Black told her nurse that she knew how to medicate herself, and that she ignored instructions in red on the bag that said to pull the plastic bag's inner stopper, mixing the drug with the saline.

"We made a mistake. We made an error. We should have insisted on a return demonstration. You will decide if that mistake rises to the level of negligence," Stewart told jurors.

Ms. Black, when asked what she will do with the jury's award, said only that she would buy a new prosthesis.

You are also invited to bring any software you would like to trade for a "swap meet."

Compuserve profits

CompuServe Corp. expects to report a profit in the second half and for the full year as European earnings become "very substantial," said the top international manager of the provider of online services.

"We will make in this financial year very substantial profits in Europe," Steven Stanbrook, president international of CompuServe Corp., said at a press conference in Munich to announce new cooperation with Deutsche Telekom AG. He didn't give figures.

He said that CompuServe as a whole will return to profit for the full year after high investment in equipment and the company's WOW service for consumers led to a loss in the first two quarters. The WOW service is a simplified version of the online service for beginners.

"Our anticipation is that we see strong profits again," Stanbrook said.

CompuServe, struggling to compensate for flat sales in the U.S. with growth in Europe, also said it reached an agreement with Deutsche Telekom that will drastically lower the price of access to its online services for German users. In addition, CompuServe said it is installing new technology that will speed access to the Internet for European customers. Germany is seen as an under-exploited market for online services, which have stopped growing in the U.S.

Printer talk

Apple Computer Inc. said Thursday that it had entered discussions with Hewlett-Packard Co. to collaborate on the development of ink-jet printers.

The printers would be made by Hewlett-Packard to Apple specifications and would be sold under the Apple logo through Apple dealers. Hewlett-Packard is the largest maker of ink-jet printers, with more than 60 percent of the worldwide market.

If an agreement is reached, Apple would discontinue its practice of reselling ink-jet printers made by Canon Ltd. under the Apple logo, although it would continue to sell replacement ink cartridges and laser printers made by Canon.

Although the Apple Stylewriter line of ink-jet machines has essentially consisted of relabeled Canon printers, Apple plans to add more Macintosh technology to the printers made by Hewlett-Packard. The new printers would be available within nine to 12 months, Apple said.

Hewlett-Packard's ink-jet products group is based in San Diego. Apple is based in Cupertino, Calif.

Tiny, yet wired

'Net brings the world to Tunkhannock, Pa.

By Shannon Stevens
N.Y. Times News Service

TUNKHANNOCK, Pa. — Down the road from Mehoopany and Braintrim is my hometown of Tunkhannock, Pennsylvania, where cows outnumber people and the weekly Rocket Courier featured Stefani Smalser and her 36-inch cabbage.

Trips back are like beaming down into an primitive culture where high-tech means a new traffic light on Main Street.

This visit, though, I felt like the country bumpkin: Tunkhannock, population 4,342, is wired.

First, there's my mom, Hildy Stevens-Morgan. It hasn't been a year since I tried to get her to sit at my computer and play the adventure game "Myst."

"I'm too old for that stuff," she'd say. "It's different for you. You were raised with calculators."

This August, Mom was transformed.

"I don't see why people switch to Microsoft's Explorer when Netscape already has 70 percent of the market and Navigator does everything I need," she said.

Mom? On the Internet?

She's not the only one who's ditched her computer-phobia out behind the barn.

There's Country Girls, a business that's hooked up to the World Wide Web to sell crafts made by 162 local women. And Harriet Haire, a 74-year-old knitter who raises goats with prize-winning wool and offers her sweaters to "city folks."

There's even a Webmaster — Endless Mountains Cyber-space — in a town that until recently sported just one stop light.

THE BAD & THE UGLY

By Bill Husted
N.Y. Times News Service

Open almost any popular magazine and you'll hear how the Internet's World Wide Web is changing life as we know it.

It's the best way to get information in a hurry; the best source for finding what the weather will be like during your vacation; and the best place to do the research for your school paper.

But there's plenty that's bad on the Web. And today let's take a look at the worst of the Web.

For veterans of the Internet, Worst of the Web can mean just one thing: a home page called Mirsky's Worst of the Web at <http://mirsky.com/wow/1995/Nov/Nov1395.html>. This is a collection of some of the really awful pages that can be found on the World Wide Web.

You won't have to take Mirsky's word for it either. You'll find links that take you directly to the, uh, honored pages. Whether your taste runs to poorly written text or simply awful graphics, you're sure to find something distasteful here.

But there's still more.

Pictured is IBM's network station, the company's first network computer, which provides customers with an economic platform (under $700) for doing net-based business, or e-business. The device is the first network computer to be formally introduced by any of the leading technology companies — including Oracle, Netscape Sun and Apple — that came together in May to define common standards for such a device. It is expected to result in drastically lower ongoing costs for information access and change the economics of connecting to networks.

Computer warranties: Exactly what is covered?

By Stephan Lazaroff

Computer Warranties: Is it covers Previously I've discussed drives of varying types, monitors, printers and the like. This time out I thought I'd share some warranty information discovered on the Net at the various manufacturers sites.

Interesting and possibly disturbing this column may not be for younger audiences! Most of this information is in tiny, tiny print on the warranty itself, and unless you read those boring, exhaustive legal loophole manifests, you'll miss them entirely.

Dell is one of the largest manufacturers of PCs and laptops. Their products are very good and priced to compete in the upper home market. Computers come with warranties that vary but all have the following in common: Dell does not warranty sound cards or speakers.

Nonstandard components aren't covered by Dell, even if you order them at the same time as the computer. Component manufacturer warranties are used instead and these may be good for 30 days.

Second and third year warranties abound but you have to look carefully at them before buying. Dell and Gateway offer these warranties, but on some systems there is an extra cost for technical service. Parts will be

Be ready to pay big bucks for big monitors

By Bill Husted
N.Y. Times News Service

If you have a craving for a reallllly big computer monitor and have a reallllly big bank account, Panasonic has just the thing for you.

The new $1,699 PanaSync Standard S21 is a 21-inch computer monitor (measured diagonally, just as television screens are measured) that offers impressive video performance.

Two of the specifications that have nothing to do with screen size are especially important. The new monitor has a 0.25-millimeter dot pitch. Dot pitch describes the distance between the tiny dots of color that create the picture on the screen. The closer together the better, and 0.25 millimeters is very good. The monitor also has a 95-hertz refresh rate, which means the color electron guns paint the picture onto the screen very fast — and that adds to the crispness and stability of the picture.

The monitor, which is intended for graphic-intensive jobs such as desktop publishing, also has 17 control functions that display on the screen itself.

If you'd like more information about the monitor, Panasonic can be contacted at 800-742-8086.

Wistle to Worm World for Worlds of Fun

Besides being some of the funniest on-line creatures, worms are underground farmers who have been hip to recycling way before people caught on. Without them, much of what we throw out would still be sitting around in heaps. These wiggly creatures have decided to change the way we think about them—they aren't yucky!—so they've set up a page at <http://www.nl.com/yucky/worm/>. Go see for yourself just how wonderful worms are. Listen to worm interviews and jazzy worm poems. Then play some cool worm games, like Worm Lib. You fill in the blanks, and out comes an outrageous story guaranteed to tickle your funny bone. Give worms a chance—you're sure to have fun at Worm World, and hey, you may even come away with some warm feelings about our earthy friends! Charles Darwin once said about worms, "It may be doubted whether there are any other animals in the world which have played so important a part in the history of the world." Quite a statement, and not the least bit exaggerated!

TINY: Farmers, crafters represent growing segment of 'Net users

(From 1B)

The farmers, crafters and small-business owners in this rural region of northeastern Pennsylvania represent a growing class of Internet users.

Spurred by cheaper personal computers, convenient Internet connections and the desire for more entertainment, information and commerce than their remote communities can provide, people in towns like Tunkhannock are going online.

The local Internet-access provider, for example, has seen its customers more than double since January, said Charlie Miller, a sales manager for EPIX, a division of Commonwealth Telephone.

"Internet access and use are becoming increasingly mainstream," David Harkness, senior vice president of business development for Nielsen Media Research, said in a research report.

Only 11 percent of new Internet users, those who started exploring the World Wide Web less than six months ago, consider themselves computer experts, the Nielsen report found.

Take Mom. Her computer skills are so limited that in a recent phone call she complained that her husband "messed up the computer" so that Microsoft's Excel spreadsheet was only a few inches square. She didn't know it takes a simple click of her mouse to fill the whole screen with the data.

Yet when this same woman says she's reading the papers, she doesn't mean Wyalusing's Rocket Courier.

Instead, 52-year-old Mom's perusing the New York Times, Christian Science Monitor, Los Angeles Times and Jerusalem Post via the Internet. When the Welfare Bill was debated in Congress, she read the real thing, thrilled not to rely on newscasters to tell her what it said.

Mom's moving her country bookstore to the Net with the help of Chon Vo, president of JKoss Technologies and the master behind Smart-Food Co-op (<http://www.foodcoop.com>).

Vo is setting up her Web site and plans to link the bookstore to his Smart-Food site, an Internet grocery-shopping area with delivery service around Boston and soon in Palo Alto, California.

Her goal is to run a friendly, personal bookstore using e-mail as her conversational tool. She looks forward to taking on amazon.com, the California-based Internet book vendor that's grabbed a lot of attention.

"The problem with amazon.com is it isn't personal enough," she said. "They have a great selection, but it's so cold."

The idea of taking the warmth of country living into the cold world of computers is shared by another local business woman. Barb Henricks runs Country Girls, a small shop on Main Street in Tunkhannock that employs local crafters by selling their hand-made items in her store and distributing them at local specialty stores.

Henricks does business by making friends with customers who come into her shop. She sees no trouble transferring her personal skills to e-mail.

"If people are dating via the internet, making a friend can't be that hard," she said.

While her Web site (emcy-ber.com/country/home.htm)

currently is for browsing only, she plans to have it up and running by Christmas as a catalog for shoppers worldwide.

As for Mom, she hopes her virtual bookstore will be successful enough that she'll be able to work from home and spend her days chatting about novels with customers from all over the world.

And why not? She converted space in her old farmhouse to a computer room. One window faces the back yard, about 28 acres of farmland gone wild, with the rolling hills and fields of deep dairy country beyond. The other window looks over her carriage house to miles of grass and forest.

Of course, her business plans could mean the end of my rural escapes.

For this visit, instead of eating fresh corn and tomatoes on the back porch and listening to the soothing hum of crickets in the fields, Mom brought me a sandwich from the computer. She had me typing book titles and prices into a spreadsheet at a pace that felt quite familiar to this wire service reporter.

MIRSKY: From Fabio to sour notes on the bassoon, there's some bad sites

(From 1B)

Some of it is serious. For instance, you'll find a page called Women & Politics: Best & Worst States at <http://www.bbaionramp.net/wlcp082251.htm>. This is where the Center for Policy Alternatives has listed some of the worst and best events when it comes to women and politics. For instance, in the 1992 presidential election, only 46.3 percent of eligible female voters in South Carolina cast a ballot, making it the worst state as far as election turnout for women.

Some of it isn't so serious. For instance, Worst Jobs in the U.S. at <http://www.cbs.com/lateshow/lists/960313.html> where you'll find a top 10 list by David Letterman. For the curious, the very worst job is being Fabio, the male cover model.

And some of it is intended to be taken seriously but shouldn't be. There's the page called The Worst Note on the Bassoon at <http://idrs.colorado.edu/Publications/TWBassoonist/TWB.V3.3/worst.html>. You'll find pages of text by a musician named Frank Schwartz who goes into intricate detail describing why he hates the e-flat in the middle of the bass staff.

Schwartz explains, for instance, that "As generally fingered (first and third fingers of the left hand) it is extremely unstable. Most players add one or more keys in order to stabilize it: some players use the low E-flat key or the low C key; some players add the first or second finger of the right hand plus the thumb B-flat key; but, no matter what, there is no completely satisfactory fingering for this note. I wonder how many perfectly good reeds have been spoiled through the years trying to bring this note into focus."

You can also use your favorite search engine — Altavista at <http://www.altavista.digital.com> will do fine — and key in a word that describes the category you want along with the word "worst."

Almost any "worst" list you can imagine lurks somewhere on the Web. But the worst thing about these lists is that — once you've started reading them — it's awfully hard to stop.

(Bill Husted writes for The Atlanta Journal-Constitution.)

MOTIVATION: 'Maximum Achievement' book is electronic thing, there's a new twist that may interest you.

A book called "Maximum Achievement" makes the usual promises of tips and techniques that improve "personal growth, motivation, sales techniques and business practices," but you won't find those tips on a printed page. Instead, the book is an electronic one.

When you buy the $39.95 electronic book, you get the ability to search it using keywords or to take advantage of special computerized teaching techniques that are incorporated in the InstaView software that comes with the electronic edition.

The software also includes a screen saver that flashes bits of advice from the book on the screen every 30 seconds when the machine is idle.

The electronic book and screen saver work on computers running Windows 3.1, Windows 95 and Windows NT. It's available by contacting the publisher, Steps to Success, at 800-963-2255.

One size fits all

There's nothing that an audio enthusiast likes better than installing new equipment.

But speaker connections make that chore time-consuming. The reason is that not all speakers have the same type connectors, so switching from one speaker system to another can mean changing from, say, a banana plug (it's shaped that way) to a solder lug (shaped like the letter U) or to an entirely different type connection.

Making switching speaker systems easier is the premise behind a new product from MIT. The company, which is not affiliated with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, offers a product which it calls the MITerminator speaker cable. It comes with snap-on connectors for most popular types of speakers.

These high-end cables are rather expensive, since they also use gold-plated connectors and the heavy-duty wire favored by the enthusiast. Prices start at $79 for an 8-foot pair and go up from there. Recording CDs

One of the products that computer analysts believe will be really hot is the recordable CD drive. These drives, called CD-R drives, make it possible to record your own CD.

The earliest of these drives were very expensive and also slow. Most were double-speed at best, and some of them cost $10,000 and more.

Lately the prices for the drives have been coming down. And Pinnacle Micro has just introduced a drive — the RCD 4x4 — that is both relatively inexpensive and relatively fast — with the ability to record and play discs at 4x speed and a selling price of around $1,000.

The uses of the recordable drive include making computer back-ups, creating your own computer programs and recording audio CDs. The drive comes with Adaptec's Easy-CD Pro software for Windows 3.1, Windows 95 or Windows NT. That software, by the way, won the InfoWorld Product of the Year award in 1995.

To use the drive you'll need at least an IBM-compatible PC with a 80486 processor running at 33 megahertz. The drive also is available for the Macintosh, and the processor required there is a 68040 or faster. For either system, you'll need 8 megabytes of RAM and a hard drive that transfers data at 12 megabytes a second or faster and a 12-millisecond access time.

take advantage of a recently opened forum filled with tips on budgeting; cutting expenses; dealing with missed payments on home or car loans; credit repair scams; and many other issues. The area is sponsored by Consumer Credit Counseling of Sacramento, Calif.

In general, however, don't expect extensive information or a lot of worksheets on the Internet before you get into contact with these groups, via e-mail, snail mail or the telephone. The CCCS in Houston sells educational tapes, including school curricula that teaches kids essential money-management concepts.

While CCCS and some other nonprofit groups offer free counseling and free or relatively cheap debt management services, there are groups out there trying to make a good bit of money off your problem.

"Any organization can put up a Web page and that doesn't

"Many people are deceived by promises of quick and easy credit repair," CCCS in Houston writes on the hotline section of its Web site. "Various credit clinics and credit repair services will offer to clear your credit record of any negative information for a fee. In many cases, these businesses take your money, and do little or nothing to improve your credit report. The fact is, no one can erase, fix, repair or change information contained in your credit report if that information is correct."

In Atlanta, CCCS charges nothing for counseling. It asks for voluntary contributions of up to $15 a month from clients who enter debt management plans designed to resolve their outstanding balances over time. Until it sets up its site, CCCS in Atlanta can be reached at 404-527-7630 or 800-251-2227.

Compare those rates with a for-profit business on the Web charging $70 to $450 for consultation work, depending on the scope of your problems. And that's followed by a $10 per "derogatory item charge" as your credit improves with the covered, but you have to put in or pay someone to put in, the replacement part sent to you.

On Micron systems on-site service is solely at their discretion. You call Micron and tell them your problem(s), and they let you know if a technician will be sent to fix it or not. In fact the wording from their warranty is, "...if Micron elects to provide on-site service..."

With almost every PC manufacturer, on-site service depends on where you live and whether or not there is an "authorized repair service center" near you.

Remember the investigation concerning "remanufactured" parts being used in new computer systems? Dell, Compaq, Packard Bell and Acer all owned up to the practice of selling remanufactured hard drives, floppy drives, etc. installed in that new machine you just bought at a premium cost. Most of the companies whose sites I preused reserve the right to replace "original equipment" with remanufactured components. No problem, right?

Wrong! That replaced component is warranted by the component manufacturer rather than the PC company from whom you purchased the computer system. For instance, I found that Gateway covers replacement parts for 30 days, while Micron will warranty these remanufactured components for 90 days. What? Your system was just six months old and you haven't even had to pay for it yet, but the hard drive was replaced in the first month of ownership...and now that drive has died!

Am I picking on Dell, Micron and Gateway? No, but these companies are on the Internet and they allow you to download their warranties at will. On the other hand, I had very poor luck finding anything at all concerning warranties at the AST, Austin and IBM sites.

Am I overly paranoid about warranties? If you think so, consider this:

At one electronics store, you can purchase a computer without paying for it until the following year. A great advantage up front. But, that system is covered by the store for 14 days, and then the manufacturer's warranty "kicks" in. If the warranty doesn't cover replacement parts and labor, you may find yourself searching the yellow pages for a technician to install that replacement hard drive or motherboard you receive in the mail.

Computers are great, but without a monitor they are just large, ungainly clutter that collects more dust than the carpet under your bed!

Research the warranty before purchase. Save headaches and battles later. You are entitled to everything in the warranty, but not everything is covered. Next time out, I'll concern myself with testing that new machine and benchmarking it. Does that new system live up to its hype, or is marketing going over the edge and losing reality in the fall?

Dispute pits patriarch against patriarch, splits Orthodox church

By Alison Smales

Associated Press

SOFIA, Bulgaria — The conflict pits an 80-year-old, white-bearded patriarch against a look-alike 90-year-old rival, and a national institution — Bulgaria's Orthodox church — against itself.

There have been fistfuffs on Sofia streets, tussles over who makes candles in a suburban factory, and squabbles over which clergyman inhabits which church house.

Maxim, the 80-year-old, has taken the ultimate step of declaring 90-year-old Pimen "anathema" for setting himself up as a second patriarch of all Bulgars.

Bulgaria has a Turkish minority and a few Catholics, but the vast majority of its people come from an Orthodox heritage.

When Communists took over Bulgaria and its Orthodox neighbors, the church was strictly limited, but permitted to survive. It was widely thought to be riddled with informers aiming to make sure it posed no threat to the regime.

On July 4, 1971, Maxim was named Patriarch, or head, of Bulgaria's church at a convention that appeared to keep church rules that a patriarch be chosen by clergy and laity.

Two decades later, freed by the fall of communism, his opponents cried fraud.

Like much else the Communists did, they claim, the election was a charade, with two-thirds of ballots written in the same hand.

In 1992, they broke with Maxim. "His activities in the church were all odes to, or apologies for, communism," declared Father Kamen Barakov, a Sofia priest who supports Pimen.

Police are sometimes summoned to the Holy Synod, Maxim's seat near Sofia's worn Alexander Nevsky Cathedral, to halt fist-fights between pro- and anti-Maxim camps.

Last spring, the tussle switched to a factory in the Sofia suburbs which makes the thin, brown candles traditionally lit by visitors to Orthodox churches. Maxim's boys threw Pimen's people out, depriving the rebels of valuable income.

That was when all dialogue with Maxim ended and Pimen's supporters declared him their patriarch, said Barakov.

Book claims pope is in league with devil

By Jan Cieski

Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — Roman Catholics and some Protestants are denouncing a book published by a major Protestant evangelical denomination that claims the pope is in league with the devil.

"God's Answers to Your Questions" likens the papacy to the beast in the book of Revelation, an ally of Satan in the world's final days. The Seventh-day Adventist Church publishes the book and distributes it nationally door to door.

"That the seventh head (of the beast) represents Antichrist, or the papacy, there can be little doubt," the book asserts.

The book's conclusions have no biblical basis, said Catholic clergy and lay officials and a Protestant Bible scholar.

William Donohue, president of the Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights in New York, said he often sees anti-Catholic literature but was surprised to see it coming from a major denomination.

"For this to come from the Seventh-day Adventists and not from a splinter group makes this offense particularly egregious," he said. "This raises the ante and makes it all the more serious."

"It's typical anti-Catholic bigotry," said Sister Mary Ann Walsh, spokeswoman for the United States Catholic Conference.

Sibley Townner, professor of biblical interpretation at Union Theological Seminary, a Presbyterian institution in Richmond, said he was surprised the Adventists published the book. "It's outrageous and inflammatory and untrue biblically in any sense."

George Reid, head of the Biblical Research Institute of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, said the book merely follows the lead of such Protestant Reformers as Martin Luther and John Calvin.

"We still believe that it's the reasonable way to understand these prophecies, arising from the text itself and not political correctness," he said.

The Seventh-day Adventist Church is based in Silver Spring, Md., and traces its origins to William Miller of New Hampton, N.Y., who predicted that the world would end in the 1840s. The Church says it has 9 million members worldwide.

The book is published by the Review and Herald Publishing Association in Hagerstown, Md., one of the denomination's main publishing houses.

Richard Coffin, vice president for editorial services at the publishing house, said he did not know how many copies of the book had been distributed.

Coffin said the book was a critique, not bigotry, and that it attacks the papacy, not specific popes. "Our position is that we are criticizing the system and not individual Catholic Christians."

Donohue said he has heard that argument before.

"It's like saying to children, 'I hate your father and I hate your mother but I don't hate you.'"

The book says those who follow papal teachings are Satan's allies.

"Those who acknowledge the supremacy of the beast by yielding obedience to the law of God as changed and enforced by the papacy ... worship the beast. ... Such will take the side of Satan in his rebellion against God's authority," the book says.

Linking the pope to the Antichrist springs from the days of the Reformation 500 years ago when new Protestant churches were battling Roman Catholics, Townner said.

"In the Reformation, Protestants threw the word Antichrist around a lot," he said. "But that has not been done in mainline Protestant circles for centuries."

Anti-Catholic language these days usually comes from small sectarian groups affiliated with right-wing political causes such as the Ku Klux Klan, Townner said.

The book comes at a time when relations between evangelical Christians and Catholics have been improving. In 1994, Southern Baptists, the country's largest Protestant denomination, and the Catholic Church endorsed a dialogue between the two denominations.

The Christian Coalition also has been trying to build ties to socially conservative Catholics.

"There have been a number of attempts to build political coalitions between Catholics and conservative Protestants," said William Dinges, professor of religious studies at the Catholic University of America in Washington. "Conservative Catholics who would move to the right on cultural issues might be offended by this."

Donohue said he doubts the book will influence anyone, but it concerns him nonetheless.

Seminar seeks religious balance in school format

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Public schools need to teach about religion in an academic format that balances the concerns of spiritual promoters and civil libertarians, a representative from the Freedom Forum says.

Schools must find a fair way to explain religion's influence — on history, economics, literature, music and other subjects — without advocating any particular beliefs, said Oliver Thomas of the forum's First Amendment Center at Vanderbilt University.

Thomas, a lawyer and Baptist minister who has worked with more than 300 school districts on religion issues, said schools must neither evangelize nor ignore religion entirely.

"Our job is to find a better way, not go back to the old way where you just push religion in and force people or proselytize, and not go to the way that some on one extreme would have, that we don't mention religion at all in the public school system," Thomas said.

About 100 leaders from various churches, schools and the community attended the session, which was sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Thomas said compromise and discussion will help schools resolve conflicts over religious holidays, religion in the curriculum and prayer in the classroom.

"To ignore religion is to send a signal to kids not of fairness, but that religion either doesn't matter or is unimportant," he said. "When we censor religious viewpoints ... that is not fair. That is not what America is about."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — For years, the Jesuit-run University of San Francisco suffered through bad jokes because of its telephone prefix "666," the so-called devil's number.

Until now. The Catholic school has worked out a deal with Pacific Bell to transfer its existing prefix to a less sinister "422" prefix.

Between now and the end of the year, callers can use either prefix when calling the university. The "666" number will no longer work next year.

"I'm relieved," said the Rev. Frank Buckley, a theology professor. "As soon as I heard the good news, I went out and ordered new business cards."

No one is quite sure what the telephone company was thinking several decades ago when it issued the number, known as the mark of the beast in the Book of Revelation.

Prince Albert of Monaco says hair loss of Princess Caroline is only skin deep

NEW YORK — The problem is only skin-deep, says Prince Albert of Monaco, trying to allay rumors that his sister Princess Caroline lost her hair because of a serious illness.

"It's a skin problem, a dermatology thing. It's nothing serious, and her hair will grow back. Other than that, she's fine," he said in the latest issue of People magazine. His other sister, Princess Stephanie, filed for divorce recently after European magazines ran photos of her husband frolicking with Miss Nude Belgium.

"This will pass," the prince said, "and we will make it as a family to the anniversary celebrations."

On Jan. 1, 8, the Grimaldi family will mark the 700th anniversary of their rule.

NEW YORK — Folks looking for a Jimi Hendrix experience will have to wait until next year.

A New York City festival next month in memory of the guitarist was postponed until the spring, when it will coincide with the re-release of Hendrix's classic albums, organizers announced Friday.

"I'm really pleased that this rescheduling, in conjunction with the re-release of my son's recordings, will mean an even greater celebration of Jimi's life and music," said the rocker's father, Al Hendrix.

The Jimi Hendrix festival had been scheduled to run Oct. 11-20. It was to be capped off with an all-star concert at Madison Square Garden.

No dates for the rescheduled event were released. Hendrix died of a drug overdose on Sept. 18, 1970, at age 27.

NEW YORK — Brooke Shields suddenly has a hit series in "Suddenly Susan."

Despite the sitcom's troubled gestation and mixed reviews, it still mopped up viewers Thursday as part of NBC's "Must-See TV" night.

"Susan" airs in the coveted post-"Seinfeld" slot, at 8:30 p.m. CDT.

In overnight ratings released Friday, "Susan" scored a 22.9, crushing the competition: the second half of Fox's "New York Undercover," with a 9.3; the second half of CBS' "Moloney," whose premiere got a 7.8; and on ABC, the second half of a Joan Lunden interview special, which got a 7.6.

The overnight ratings measure 33 markets, or about half the nation's viewers. A ratings point represents 531,000 TV homes.

DUBLIN, Ireland — The reviews are in from Northern Ireland's Protestant politicians, and they've given the movie "Michael Collins" a thumbs-down.

They deemed U.S. Ambassador Jean Kennedy Smith a "pseudo-actress" for her walk-on role and said the film is "soaked in Irish Republicanism."

Jean Kennedy Smith gets a thumbs-down for her walk-on role in new movie.

The movie, directed by Neil Jordan, is a biography of the Irish Republican guerrilla leader who was assassinated in 1922 by Irishmen opposed to compromises he made with the British.

Protestant politicians already distrust Kennedy Smith for her role in bringing Sinn Féin leader Gerry Adams to Washington in 1994.

Ken Maginnis, a legislator with the Ulster Unionists, the largest Protestant vote-getter, said: "If you can have a pseudo-diplomat, no doubt you can have a pseudo-actress."

Peter Robinson of the Democratic Unionist Party said Kennedy Smith's blink-and-you-miss-it performance alongside Liam Neeson was "indicative of the political bias of the Clinton regime — soaked in Irish Republicanism."

ANGELES CITY, Philippines — Philander Rodman Jr., who hasn't seen his son Dennis for 26 years, is cashing in on the young man's fame.

"Don't talk to me. Talk to my manager," he said with a firm handshake.

The fast-talking 56-year-old former U.S. Air Force serviceman, who owns a run-down bar, made a recent appearance at an exhibition basketball game sponsored by Nike, for which he received gift vouchers and sneakers.

Then came book offers and a proposal to endorse a cellular telephone operator, according to his manager. On Wednesday, he signed on for a $10,000, one-month exclusive "consultancy" for the syndicated TV show "Extra."

Rodman, who left his first wife and son more than two decades ago, has expressed his pride and support for his cross-dressing son, known for his colorful hair, tattoos and high-energy playing.

Seminar planned

Herb Miller, consultant, author and seminar leader, comes to Midland for a seminar Sunday to benefit area churches.

Although the title is "Go Fishing Without Leaving Town," the subtitle is perhaps more descriptive, "How to Share Your Faith Without Being Obnoxious," said a release from K.C. Blacketter of Bethel United Methodist Church.

The seminar will be from 3 to 8 p.m. Sunday at St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave. Registration begins at 2:30 p.m.

The workshop equips clergy and laity to share their faith with people around them in daily life in common sense, effective ways, the release said.

Topics to be discussed include seven ways to share faith without being offensive, how to listen so people will talk, how to talk so people will listen, how to invite people to church and how to help people make a decision. The workshop uses lecture, cartoons, a movie, small-group interaction and a personal workbook to increase the participants' skill level.

Miller is the author of 11 books including "The Vital Congregation" and "Connecting With God: 14 Ways Your Church Can Help People Grow Spiritually." He also is the editor of "Net Results," a monthly church-vitality and leadership journal with readers in 60 denominations. Miller succeeded Lyle Schaller as parish consultant for the Yokefellow Institute in Richmond, Ind.

The $18 registration fee includes a meal and a 70-page resource workbook. Spouses can register for $5 if they are willing to share a workbook. Child care is provided on a reservation basis for a small fee. Parents need to have a sack lunch for their child. Early registration deadline with St. Luke's UMC is Monday. Late registration is $23.

Yom Kippur services to be Sunday

By Georgia Temple
Staff Writer

Three stars in the evening sky Monday night the close of the 1996 Jewish High Holy Days.

The High Holy Days are comprised of a couple of holidays — Rosh Hashana, the New Year itself, and then 10 days of repentance," said Franklin DeWoskin, student rabbi at Temple Beth El in Odessa for the High Holy Days.

DeWoskin, who is from St. Louis, Mo., is studying at the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion in Cincinnati.

The days of penitence end on the Day of Atonement, Yom Kippur.

"You think about what's going on and reflect on the past year," DeWoskin said of the days between Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur. "And think about how you can improve self and apologize to friends and people you may have hurt" and to yourself.

Yom Kippur is a day of fasting and praying for forgiveness.

"This is the time when you're supposed to be asking for forgiveness for your transgressions, for missing the mark," DeWoskin said. "You try and sort of get back on track."

He used the analogy of a bowman and his arrow. The bowman wants to hit the center of the target.

"Sometimes you go off track and miss the target. You want to redirect yourself so that you can hit the target. The High Holy Days and the days of repentance are the time of year we're trying to reflect in order to redirect."

Yom Kippur services at Temple Beth El begin Sunday evening and continue Monday until sunset. The night service is called Kol Nidre — a special prayer directed toward God.

"Basically, in a nutshell, the focus of the night's service is saying to God that we've realized the mistakes we've made in the past year, and we realize we're going to make mistakes again, but we are going to try our best not to," DeWoskin said. "And we understand that in the next year we are not going to be perfect, and we're asking for forgiveness before we do anything wrong."

The daytime services on Yom Kippur include, DeWoskin said, "Many different prayers, listing different transgressions we may have committed and begging for forgiveness" and readings from the Torah, the five books of Moses.

"Many would consider it to be the most important holiday of the year," DeWoskin said of Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur. "It all depends on your perspective. It's not the High Holiday. It's what would be called the High Holy Days, meaning they are considered more holy than any other days."

Luncheon will be served at 12:30 p.m. with door prizes for fun, a short meeting and AAL Charter presentation following.

Local AAL members, their families and friends are invited to attend and those that are interested in this local AAL Branch.

Gov. Bush sees school property tax relief as hot topic for fall campaign

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush, vowing to continue his push for school property tax relief, Friday predicted that the issue is hot enough to light a fire under legislative candidates this fall.

"The assignment of elected officials is not to duck tough issues but to address them head-on," Bush said.

"I am confident that property tax is an important issue. And I believe that members (of the Legislature) will hear that," he said.

The Republican governor has said he would like to replace the $10 billion a year now collected in local property taxes with a new state levy.

He appointed a blue-ribbon committee to gauge public sentiment on the problem. That panel wrapped up the last of 14 hearings this week and began work Friday on a final report not expected to be finished until early November.

Bush told committee members that their work had put the property tax issue on the front burner.

"You've stimulated discussion. Not only at the hearings, but in newspaper articles and editorials and, as importantly, at the coffee shops around Texas," he said.

"I hear it everywhere when I travel our state. People are discussing the issue. This is what democracy is all about."

Property taxes currently account for about 54 percent of spending on public schools in the state. The average tax rate is $2.30 per $100 in property value, with about 60 percent of that levied by school districts.

Some lawmakers privately say they aren't certain there's enough distress among average Texans to force the Legislature to tackle the sticky tax issue when it convenes in January.

But Bush said rising taxes and the work of his study committee have put the issue at the forefront in the upcoming elections. He predicted that voters will grill legislative candidates about property tax relief.

"There are citizens who are concerned about property tax relief who are now energized ... who will be active in their (legislative) districts asking those very questions," the governor said.

"I look forward to the elections. I look forward to the extent to which this becomes an issue, the extent to which it becomes how elections are decided."

Before the tax study began, a group of experts assembled by the governor suggested three possible alternatives to local school property taxes. They are:

■ Widening or raising the state's 6.25 percent sales tax.

■ Implementing a gross receipts tax, a levy on all the money businesses take in.

■ Creating a business activity tax, a levy on the difference between the sales and costs of a business.

The tax committee's chairman, state Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer, said each option has advantages and disadvantages. He predicted that a final solution likely would involve a combination.

"If anything happens in the next few weeks, I expect it to be a hybrid," Bomer said. "If I was in the Legislature writing a tax bill, I would probably try to establish a mix of taxes."

Bush said he was looking forward to the committee's report. He also said he would be satisfied if property taxes are rolled back with guarantees that local school districts won't immediately start raising them again. He didn't specify how much of a rollback would be enough.

Despite Bush's predictions, a Democratic group complained that no recommendations are being offered now.

"What we saw today wasn't government, it was politics," said Jason Stanford, managing director of 21st Century Democrats.

"By postponing the final committee report until after the election midway through his term, George W. Bush will not have to answer to the voters when they realize that despite all his campaign promises, he still has no plans to solve the property tax crisis," Stanford said.

Morales, Gramm agree to Sept. 29 broadcast with separate interviews

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Victor Morales, who rejected a Sept. 29 televised debate with GOP incumbent Phil Gramm, has agreed with Gramm to do separate, taped interviews for broadcast that night.

Morales said he rejected the live debate because he wanted a date closer to the election and didn't like the format in which reporters would ask the candidates questions.

He said he wanted Gramm "to debate me man-to-man ... as in Lincoln and Douglas."

The taped interviews will be done by a panel of reporters. The scuttled debate, according to KERA executive producer Yolette Garcia, would have allowed the candidates to ask each other questions as well.

The taping is produced by KERA in association with The Dallas Morning News. It is to be carried statewide on public television and radio stations.

"I wasn't wild about doing that (the taping), but I'm going to go ahead and do it, since that's the only way I can get Phil Gramm," Morales, a high school government teacher who took a leave of absence to campaign, told reporters before a University of Texas appearance Friday.

Gramm spokesman Larry Neal said, "Isn't it interesting that he rejects the debate from the Morning News and KERA, but he will show up on a stage where Sen. Gramm won't be there to debate him? It doesn't sound like he's interested in debating anybody."

At Morales' speech, a student was dressed in a duck costume to illustrate the UT College Republicans' charge that Morales was ducking the debate.

In a speech to an almost entirely supportive crowd of about 250, Morales bashed Gramm and drew distinctions between himself and the incumbent in areas including gay rights.

Gramm voted for the Defense of Marriage Act, which defines marriage as a legal union between a man and woman and allows a state to refuse to honor a same-sex marriage performed in any other state.

"I don't think about gay rights. I think about human rights," Morales said. "I've been married 12 years.

—Victor Morales
Senate candidate

My marriage is not going to be threatened ... if we did have same-sex marriage."

Morales said gay people contribute to society, serving the military and paying their taxes.

"I think we need to get off this constant rhetoric and attack," he said. "Either you must be homophobic — or you must be a little angry, because they're looking at you, and you think they're not coming up to you and you're worried about maybe you're not as good looking as you thought."

Neal said, "Mr. Morales is simply out of touch with both reality and the views of most Texans."

On abortion, Morales spoke of his pro-choice beliefs but added, "That doesn't mean that I'm not concerned about the high number of abortions. ... Maybe we need some education. Maybe we need to tie the guys' tubes. I don't know."

Morales also slammed Gramm, saying, "I ran this race to remove a man that's in it for his ego, for the power and for the money."

Neal said, "All Mr. Morales has to do if he's tired of the lies is start speaking the truth."

Morales also said he's undaunted by the latest Texas Poll, which showed Gramm with the support of 50 percent of the 820 likely voters surveyed, and Morales with 34 percent. The poll had a margin of error of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

"Absolutely," Morales said when asked if he thought he could win. "Would I bet my house? No. I wouldn't bet my house, but I almost have. I bet my job, didn't I?"

Businesses leery of mental health-insurance expansion, experts say

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Experts on employee benefits said Friday that Congress' decision to expand health insurance coverage for the mentally ill would prompt tens of thousands of businesses to revise their health plans in ways that go far beyond what is required by Congress.

Employers, including big companies like Xerox and Hewlett-Packard, said they feared that the new requirements would substantially increase their costs. But others said the costs would be manageable.

James Klein, the executive director of the Association of Private Pension and Welfare Plans, a trade group of mostly Fortune 500 companies, said: "Employers are likely to reduce other valuable benefits in order to accommodate the cost of the new mandates. If some specific benefits are required, different benefits valued by other workers will be sacrificed to pay for them."

Martha Priddy Patterson, the director of employee benefits policy at KPMG Peat Marwick, the accounting firm, said: "Some employers will look at these requirements and decide that it's too expensive for them to begin or continue providing health benefits."

Congressional leaders announced on Thursday that they had agreed on legislation to curb disparities in insurance coverage for mental and physical illnesses. Under the proposal, if a group health plan offers any mental health benefits, it may not impose more restrictive annual or lifetime limits on spending for mental illness than on coverage of physical ailments like cancer and heart disease.

All group health plans offering mental health benefits and serving more than 50 employees would be subject to these requirements in January 1998. In later years, a health plan may obtain an exemption if it can prove that its premiums increased by 1 percent or more as a result of the mandate.

Employee-benefits experts said many companies would thoroughly re-evaluate their benefit programs in the light of the legislation. Employers could drop mental health coverage altogether, set higher co-payments or deductibles or make other changes to control or offset the new costs.

'Some employers will look at these requirements and decide that it's too expensive for them to begin or continue providing health benefits.'

— Martha Priddy Patterson, director of employee benefits policy at KPMG Peat Marwick, an accounting firm

The new costs, Bachman said, "will be insignificant," well under 1 percent of premiums.

The Congressional Budget Office estimated that premiums in a typical fee-for-service plan would increase four-tenths of 1 percent. But the agency said employers, overall, would offset more than half of this cost by dropping health insurance coverage altogether, by dropping or reducing coverage for mental health services or by dropping other benefits.

Advocates for the mentally ill said few companies would experience an increase in costs of more than 1 percent. But Susan Moriconi, health benefits manager for Hewlett-Packard, said: "They're absolutely, positively wrong on that. A large number of employers and plans will have an increase of more than 1 percent."

Klein, of the pension trade group, predicted that some employers would increase co-payments and deductibles, for all services or just for mental health services, to offset the new costs.

"The vast majority of employees who have mental health services," he said, "will pay more to help the very few who would otherwise hit the annual limit."

The requirements for mental health coverage were added to an appropriations bill that will probably be approved by Congress next week. President Clinton strongly supports the requirements, so they are expected to become law.

The new requirements will probably increase the demand for health maintenance organizations and other health plans that control costs by managing care, especially ly mental health care. In the past few years, a new industry has sprung up to provide mental health services at predictable costs, by monitoring the work of psychiatrists and psychologists and other mental health professionals.

James Buckley, senior partner in charge of health care consulting at KPMG Peat Marwick, said: "The impact of this legislation will be to encourage employers to make greater use of managed care. It becomes more of an economic necessity. Otherwise, it's difficult to control inpatient mental health expenditures."

Bachman, the Coopers & Lybrand actuary, said: "The market will respond in new and creative ways to provide flexibility in plan design and to meet employees' needs while making sure that mental health costs don't get out of hand."

Employers will still be allowed to set limits on the number of outpatient visits or hospital days for which they will pay. Bachman said employers might revise mental health benefits to create new options for employees, allowing them to have more visits with psychotherapists if they accepted fewer days of hospital care.

Hewlett-Packard now has a lifetime limit of $1 million on health benefits for any employee or dependent, with a separate limit of $300,000 on mental health care.

Ms. Moriconi said she did not know how the company would revise its plan to comply with the federal requirements. But she said: "I can't imagine proposing any reduction in the $1-million lifetime limit. That would send a very negative message to employees." At the same time, she said, it will be difficult to increase monthly premiums or co-payments because employees are "very sensitive" to such costs.

ANDREWS — The Midland High Bulldogs scratched and clawed against an Andrews football team that was ready to run over their District 4-5A neighbors.

But when the bite marks from a ferocious second half were counted, the Bulldogs made dinner over another non-district opponent with a 30-6 win over the Mustangs Friday night in the Mustang Bowl.

"We saved it for later," said Browning.

whose team scored 27 of its 30 points in the MHS dominated second half. "Everyone turned it up a notch. The players have a belief in the system and faith in a what we are doing."

The Bulldogs, down 6-3 at the half, came out in the second half and took the fight to a game Andrews team. The Bulldogs, 3-0 for the season, dominated all aspects of the second 24 minutes, including forcing three turnovers, two of which turned into 14 MHS points. The defense also allowed 39 yards to 1-2 Andrews in the second half.

"We wanted to go out there and go three-and-out," said safety Jerome Eldridge, who had an interception and

Rebels turn Waco wacko

■ Midland Lee jumps on Waco High early and often as Rebels come away with a 56-26 win.

Waco High 26

It's a good thing Midland Lee plays football with two full-backs, otherwise, there would have been one worn out Friday night at Memorial Stadium.

Fullbacks Chad Chandler and Stacy Jones combined for 229 yards rushing in a 56-26 victory over Waco's Lions in a game where Lee roared to a 56-0 lead before settling in for a "Fun Day", play everybody ending.

Jones led all rushers in the game with 115 yards on only five carries, scoring on runs of 57 and 51 yards. Chandler added 114 yards rushing as Lee climbed to a perfect 3-0 for the year and 11-0-1 in regular season play under second year head coach John Parchman.

Lee destroyed the Lions up the middle with a trap play that consistently turned loose Jones and Chandler.

"It was just the line doing a great job," Jones said. "There were big holes to run through all night with the trap."

Chandler added, "The holes were wide open, we ran hard and executed. It was smash-mouth football and that's the Rebel kind of football. We'll continue to come out and play smash mouth football."

Parchman has had very little positive things to say about his young offensive line even though Lee averaged 44 points in their first two outings, except for the fact that he feels the line has been trying to get it all together. He liked what he saw Friday.

"That's a lot better," Parchman said.

Midland Lee defender Stephen Westphal (50) fights off a block while the teammate Daniel Subia (right) put the hit on a Waco High ball carrier in Friday night's non-district contest at Midland Memorial Stadium. The Rebels won the game 56-26.

"The offensive line did a great job. We thought we might be able to run the trap on Waco and no one else had tried it against them. There was some good execution."

Lee center Tony Frezcas was asked if Parchman had been too hard on the line in recent weeks.

"Well, we improved some in this game, but we've still got to get better," Frezcas said. "The trap was working and the guards (Jesus Hernandez and Brad Gibson) were doing their job. We came out and played hard."

Lee could have had three backs over 100 yards, but tailback Josh Norman, who scored four touchdowns, ended the night with 89 yards, retiring in the third quarter.

"We got to play a lot of people," Parch-

Lubbock Estacado survives Steers' rally

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — How does one assess Big Spring's situation after a 20-17 loss to Lubbock Estacado Friday?

Their coach is losing his patience. Their starting quarterback is out for the year. And their backup man under center mistakenly lined up behind his left guard in the game that dropped the team to 1-2.

On the bright side, the team has shown the chutzpah to come back in games it has looked way out of, the sophomore backup signal-caller gets better with every snap, and district is still two games away.

Still, after the Matadors (1-2) won their first game of the year and beat the Steers for the fifth straight season, Big Spring head coach Dwight Butler wasn't seeing much silver lining in his team's cloud.

"I'm getting sick to death of (losing to Estacado)," Butler said. "I'm sick of people telling me your little old boys played hard. There are no excuses. You're out here to win ball games."

"I'm not being negative. I'm tired of everybody dwelling on how little we are and how inexperienced we are."

Steer senior quarterback Jerrod Helms returned to action Friday after getting hurt in the first game of the season. The offense moved the ball without a hitch in its first two possessions with Helms at the helm. But the Steer starter went down with a broken collarbone and Big Spring's offense took almost the whole game to recover. Leading 3-0 at the time it didn't score again until the Matadors had built a 20-3 lead.

"You can't worry about who's in the game and who's not," Butler said. "When (backup Tory Mitchell) comes in the game they (Estacado) know they have to pick up the pace defensively."

Helms was hurt scrambling in the first quarter with Big Spring at the Matador 26 yard line. The Steers missed a field goal on that possession and never threatened to score again until the fourth quarter.

"Even if we had won it's just sickening (to lose Helms)," Butler said. "The kid waited his whole career to get here and he ran the offense well. He was checking off at the line of scrimmage and then he tries to do a little extra getting his team some yardage and he breaks his collarbone."

Mitchell finished with seven completions, two touchdown passes and an interception. But at times he threw wildly.

Meanwhile the Matadors got their best performance yet from quarterback Jair-reus Patterson and tailbacks Warren Boyd and Kamul High combined for 155 yards and three touchdowns.

"If he completed one or two passes that's his best game," Estacado coach Louis Kelley said of Patterson. "He's not a very good thrower. He's just so short he can't look over the defense very well."

Patterson completed his first five passes. Boyd, 5-foot-7, wriggled out of Steer tackles all night for 88 yards and High used his 200 pounds for 67 more steps and two TDs.

Tech game plan? Give it to Hanspard

By Paul Newberry

ATHENS, Ga. — Texas Tech doesn't hide its offensive intentions very well. It doesn't have to.

The Red Raiders spent their first two games simply turning to Byron Hanspard, handing him the ball and daring teams to stop him. So far, no one has.

He ranks third in the country with 193.5 yards per game.

"He can really cut on a dime. He's got good strength. He breaks tackles," said Georgia coach Jim Donnan, whose Bulldogs (0-2) will try to stop Hanspard and their losing streak Saturday at Sanford Stadium (5:30 p.m., ESPN2).

Hanspard's numbers, which include a 272-yard performance against Oklahoma State two weeks ago, are especially impressive considering the Red Raiders (1-1) haven't been able to give him much help.

With 387 yards rushing, he has accounted for nearly half of Tech's total offensive output.

Hanspard's development from a back who simply outran defenders to one who can run over them as well started in the middle of last season, said Texas Tech offensive coordinator Rick Dykes.

"I think he has that combination of learning how to set up a block, read blocks and still having that speed," said Dykes, son of Texas Tech head coach Spike Dykes. "Plus, he's added about 10 pounds so he can run through some blocks he couldn't as a freshman."

Georgia's Robert Edwards rushed for 159 yards last week in a 23-14 loss to South Carolina even though a sore left knee limited him to five carries in the second half. An MRI showed no serious damage and he should be at full strength against Tech.

"The running of Robert Edwards scares you to death because he really is a big-time, great college running back," Spike Dykes said.

The Bulldogs, though, are a team reeling from two straight losses to begin the Donnan era. The new coach has heard complaints about everything from his unproductive offense to the playing of the "Macarena" at the first home game.

Now, the Bulldogs have to face a Texas Tech team that is hardly the usual non-conference pushover, followed by two difficult Southeastern Conference games (Mississippi State on the road, No. 2 Tennessee back at home).

The South Carolina game was a prime example of how a few plays can turn a possible win into a grating loss. Edwards rushed for 135 yards in the first half but fumbled twice. Dax Langley missed a 24-yard field goal. Hines Ward went 45 yards for a touchdown on a screen pass, but a holding penalty wiped it out.

The Bulldogs have made one change, replacing Langley with true freshman Hap Hines at place-kicker. Langley remains the Georgia punter.

Texas Tech, meanwhile, will likely be without tight end Brad Spinks, who sprained a ligament in his right knee against Oklahoma State. Senior P.J. Jasin and redshirt freshman Kyle Allamon will have to step in.

"Hopefully," Dykes said, "those guys can man that position pretty good."

Permian rebounds with victory

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

ODESSA — One week after falling from the near the top of the mountain, it appears as if the Odessa Permian football team didn't take much time licking its wounds.

The Panthers had to concern themselves with a quality opponent Friday night when Amarillo came to Ratliff Stadium, and Permian had to put the previous Friday's loss to No. 1-ranked North Mesquite in the distant past. All was forgotten — at least for now — as the Panthers rolled to a 35-14 non-district victory which put them back on the winning track.

It looked as if a visit from Amarillo — a perennial Panhandle power which defeated Permian when it visited Ratliff two years ago — was just the tonic for Permian, now 2-1 on the season. The Panthers broke open what was a close game in the first half by scoring on their first two possessions of the third quarter behind a ground attack which rolled up 307 yards.

"It's nice to get a win like that against a very well-coached team like Amarillo High," Permian coach Randy Mayes said.

The Sandies (2-1) were in the game with the Panthers early, although they were hurt by fumbles which killed two early drives. Permian recovered the first miscue and drove 52 yards to a 7-0 lead on a 1-yard run by Ja'Quay Wilburn, who scored four touchdowns and picked up 181 yards on 23 carries.

Amarillo squandered another scoring chance when it fumbled at the Permian 9-yard line late in the first quarter, but came back midway through the second quarter on a 12-

Upsets mark day at SWOTT

Friday's action at the Southwest Oilman's Tennis Tournament was notorious for a couple of surprises in which some high seeds went down to defeat.

The biggest upset came in the championship bracket of the mixed doubles competition in which defending champions and top seeds Miles Boldrick and Trish Bostrum were beaten by Sandy Collins and John Seay 7-5, 7-5. In another mixed doubles surprise, Neil McClung and Vicky Oxenreiter beat Karen Farquhar and Danny Weingeist 6-1, 6-1.

Play continues today at the Midland Country Club, featuring semifinal and finals competition in men's doubles, mixed doubles and men's scrambles.

MHS JV football beats Andrews

The Midland High junior varsity football team defeated Andrews 6-0 Thursday night.

MHS, 2-1 for the season, got the lone score of the game when Donald White blocked a punt, picked up the loose ball and ran it in from 20 yards out.

John Newton's interception was one of the key plays of the game for the defense, which recorded the shutout.

MHS will play Lee next Thursday at 7 p.m. in Midland Memorial Stadium.

Midland White takes Bowie

The Midland Freshman White football team defeated Odessa Bowie 16-12 Thursday in Midland-Odessa football action.

White moved to 3-0 for the season after a 20-yard touchdown run from Cavrine Harris and a 35-yard touchdown pass from Laynce Nix to Dajuan Andrews. Justin Smith added two extra points.

Defensively, Charles Callo and Randy Gardner combined for three quarterback sacks while Cotey-Joe Cswaykay and Sergio Diaz led defensively with 10 tackles.

In other action, the Midland Freshman Purple football team lost to Odessa Hood 34-6.

Purple got a one-yard scoring run from quarterback Justin Scott for its only score of the game and Jimmy Smith was the team's leading rusher with 46 yards.

On defense David Chavez recovered a fumble, Corneil Ellis had one sack and line-backer Michael Neu recovered a blocked punt and had four and 1/2 tackles. On special teams, Josh Taylor blocked an extra point and Arisdel Pando had a 50-yard kickoff return.

Purple will play next Thursday at home versus Odessa Bowie.

Tall City leading Freshman v-ball

Three Midland teams are at the top of the freshman volleyball standings after one game played.

Lee Freshman's Gray team and Maroon team and Midland Freshman's Purple team are among the five teams tied for the top spots in the ninth grade Midland-Odessa volleyball standings.

Standings: Lee Gray 1-0; Lee Maroon 1-0; Midland Purple 1-0; Bowie 1-0; Nimitz 1-0; Crockett 0-1; Hood 0-1, Ector 0-1, Bonham 0-1; Midland White 0-1.

Hillander soccer downs St. Ann's

The Hillander coed soccer team defeated St. Ann's 4-3 in a shootout to win the game 2-1.

The combined fifth and sixth grade team from Hillander selected Zack Sledge as its outstanding player while Zack Rader and Adrienne Monroe were chosen for St. Ann's.

some big hits on the night. "We wanted to go out from the first play."

The offense, which had 298 yards of total yards and 300 yards rushing on the night, also exploded for 248 total yards in the second half. They were led again by Sammy Powell and a dominating offensive line. The combo was good for 134 yards and his four touchdowns, which brings Powell's total to 11 for the season, in the second half. His second touchdown, a 55-yard run was made possible thanks to a great downfield pancake block by Chris Lent. Powell didn't do it alone.

"They blocked great," said Powell, who came into the game as the eighth leading rusher in Class 5A. "We came out with confidence in the second half and everything went right."

Camar Jackson also had 83 yards on 14 carries and Ryan Stewart had 45 yards on 10 carries.

For Andrews coach Mike Lebby, it was difficult to stop the slide once it began. Lebby said especially seeing his team play so well in the first half made this loss hard to take.

"We thought we could play with them," said Lebby, whose team out-gained the Bulldogs in terms of yardage 121-50. "MHS got the momentum in the second half and then we turned over the ball on our side of the field. Give them credit. They have a good team."

The first half started slow for both offenses as the two teams combined for 38 yards in total offense and one first down in the first quarter.

On a fourth down on the Andrews 45 in the second quarter,

'We thought we could play with them. MHS got the momentum in the second half and then we turned the ball over on our side of the field...They have a good team.'

— Mike Lebby, Andrews head coach

Mustangs' punter Danny Wheeler fumbled the snap and his attempt to recover the ball met with devastating results. Wheeler was leveled by MHS' Edward Ochoa. The blow knocked Wheeler's helmet off and sent the ball flying. Erik McCright picked up the ball and ran all the way down the Andrews' 11. MHS could only manage a 31-yard field goal from Zach Inman, his second three of the season.

Andrews proceeded to take the ball on an eight minute, 14-play drive where they took the ball right at the Bulldog defense. Leading the way was Williams, who rushed for 62 of his 104 first half yards on the 87-yard drive. The Mustangs kept the ball on the ground, ramming the ball down the throat of the MHS defense. Even, Wheeler, Andrews' starting fullback had 21 yards on four carries on the drive that saw Andrews increase its first down total in the game from one to nine.

"Everything clicked," said Williams, who rushed for 118 yards on 25 carries. "We were coming off the ball strong and everyone was sky high. Nothing was stopping us."

It wasn't until after Williams' touchdown that Midland High got its first first down of the game with under two minutes to go in the first half.

The game is the second that Midland High has come from behind in the second half. Though the score wouldn't dictate, it left some nerves a little bit frailed.

"I would rather them do it in the first half," Browning said. "Half of my hair is turning gray and the other half is getting loose."

The win sets up Midland High's district opener with Midland Lee. The Bulldogs, who join Lee and Abilene High as the only undefeated in 4-5A, know what they have to do even if Browning is not looking ahead.

"Is that who we play?" asked Browning, when asked about next Friday's game with Lee. "We have a long way to go in some areas and we have to step it up another notch."

Stanton holds off Coahoma

COAHOMA — Stanton quarterback Kyle Herm ran for a touchdown with 45 seconds left to cushion a one-point lead while Buffalo defender Leo McCallister intercepted a last-second end zone pass to preserve a 20-13 victory over Coahoma here Friday night.

It was Stanton's second-straight win after opening the season with a loss. The Buffaloes improved to 2-1 for the season and will host Midland Christian (3-0) next Friday in a homecoming contest. Coahoma fell to 1-2.

Stanton jumped out to a 14-0 lead after fullback Mark Carrillo scored on an 80 yard run and McCallister hauled in a 46-yard TD pass from Herm in the first quarter.

But Coahoma came charging back with a touchdown run by Mike McMillan in the third and one by Tim Phillips in the fourth to cut Stanton's lead to 14-13. Coahoma could have tied the score but their point-after-try on the run was stopped by the Stanton defense. After Herm added the final score, Coahoma drove the ball from their own 33 yard line to Stanton's 24 before attempting the last-second pass into the end zone.

Carrillo finished with 128 yards on 15 carries while tailback Chris Carroll finished with 58 yards as Stanton gained 282 yards on the ground.

"Our players know how I stand on it and they made a bad choice," Keith said. "We won't tolerate our football players not setting a positive example in the community. Regardless of what they see on TV."

Because the investigation into the sexual assault was continuing, Keith said, it was unclear if the suspensions would continue indefinitely.

"It may take two to three weeks before we know how it's going to affect our team," he said.

Senior defensive tackle Chris Weedman, one of at least six defensive starters not at practice Thursday, said the incident did not involve rape.

"There was no rape," Weedman told the Arlington Morning News. "The truth will come out."

Police Sgt. Larry Jones said the girl was drunk and defenseless when the incident reportedly occurred. No arrests have been made in the case.

The girl was sexually assaulted by at least three boys while others watched, and as many as 10 others performed obscene acts on her, Jones said. The assaults happened over a lengthy period of time in various locations in the house and in the yard, he said.

"You got 90 others that watched and allowed it to take place," he said, adding that many teen-agers who participated in the acts laughed and bragged to others.

"It's hard for us to believe that there was anyone at that party who was not aware, the way it's been described to us," Jones said.

He said most of those interviewed have denied any knowledge of wrongdoing.

Police said that 75 to 100 teenagers attended the party at the southeast Arlington home of a 17-year-old Colts player after the game against Hurst L.D. Bell. The party was not supervised by adults and many football players were present, police said.

"What we understand at this point is that his parents have divorced and left this young man there to finish out his school year," Jones said of the resident player.

AL Roundup

NEW YORK — Tim Wakefield pitched eight effective innings and the Boston Red Sox beat the AL East-leading New York Yankees 4-2 Friday night, tightening the wild-card race with their fifth straight victory.

Despite the loss, the Yankees' magic number for clinching their first division title since 1981 was cut to six by Baltimore's 5-1 loss to Toronto. The Red Sox closed within three games of the Orioles for the wild-card spot.

Boston, which had lost seven in a row at Yankee Stadium, tied it with two runs in the sixth against Dwight Gooden. The Red Sox scored twice in the seventh, helped by shortstop Derek Jeter's throwing error.

Wakefield (14-12) overcame three walks in the first inning and went on to allow five hits. The knuckleballer finished with five walks and three strikeouts, and sent the Yankees to only their third loss in 11 games.

Heathcliff Slocumb pitched ninth for his 29th save.

Blue Jays 5, Orioles 1
BALTIMORE — Pat Hentgen shut out Baltimore for eight-plus innings as the Toronto Blue Jays slowed the Orioles' push to the playoffs with a 5-1 victory.

The Orioles have lost three of four following an 8-1 streak. Baltimore remained four games behind the New York Yankees in the AL East and 1 1/2 games in front of Seattle in the wild-card race, pending the Mariners' Friday night game with Oakland. Boston won 4-2 at New York.

Baltimore, coming off a critical three-game series with the Yankees, committed three errors, stranded 12 runners, and went 0-for-10 with runners in scoring position.

White Sox 7, Twins 3
CHICAGO — Frank Thomas hit his ninth homer in his last 10 games, a grand slam, to lead Chicago over Minnesota.

Chicago began the night three games behind Baltimore in the battle for the AL wild-card spot and 1 1/2 behind Seattle. The White Sox, who won their second straight fol-

Houston still has an outside chance of overtaking the Cardinals for the division title.

Pirates 6, Cubs 4
PITTSBURGH — Jay Bell hit a two-run home run as the Pittsburgh Pirates won their ninth straight game, 6-4 over the Chicago Cubs.

The Pirates have the longest active winning streak in the majors and the team's best since an 11-game stretch from July 30-Aug. 10, 1992. Pittsburgh matched Florida for the longest winning streak in the majors this season.

Mets 5, Phillies 2
PHILADELPHIA — Paul Wilson's first major league home run broke a tie and gave him his first win since July 20, leading the New York Mets to a 5-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Tigers lose in extra innings 6-5

MILWAUKEE — Melvin Nieves hit a three-run homer and Travis Fryman drove in three runs as the Detroit Tigers snapped a season-high 12-game losing streak with a 10-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

The Tigers, who have won only three games in September, also lost 12 straight earlier in the season. The streak was the longest since they lost 19 straight in 1975.

Notes: Palmer's homer increased his RBIs total to 103, breaking Buddy Bell's 1979 club record of 101 RBIs by a third baseman. Palmer hit only nine home runs in 36 games last season, when he spent more than 3 1/2 months on the disabled list with a ruptured left biceps tendon. The home runs by Hamilton and Palmer were the 37th and 38th allowed by Boskie this season, tying the Angels' club record set by Don Sutton in 1987. Hamilton has led off a game for Texas 139 times and is hitting .349 in those situations with 35 runs scored. Davis needs seven more RBIs in nine games to reach the 100-RBI mark.

California pulled within a run in the bottom half on Chili Davis' run-scoring single and Hudler's RBI groundout. Randy Velarde tied the score one inning later with a two-out RBI single.

Texas went up 4-3 in the sixth when Palmer singled, took third on McLemore double and scored as first baseman J.T. Snow bobbled Hamilton's grounder for an error.

California rookie catcher Todd Greene led off the seventh with his second homer of the season — and of his major league career.

Darren Oliver of the Rangers allowed four runs and eight hits in seven-plus innings. Angels starter Shawn Boskie tied a career high with six walks, giving up four runs and six hits in eight innings.

Eleven Arlington High players suspended

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Eleven Arlington High School students were suspended from Friday night's football game amidst allegations of alcohol-drinking at a party at which a girl allegedly was raped, the coach said.

A 16-year-old Arlington High School student told police that she was sexually assaulted at a party Sept. 13.

Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson said Friday that no warrants had been issued nor arrests made.

Superintendent Lynn Hale told school board members Thursday about the rape allegation and the suspensions ordered by Arlington head coach Bill Keith.

She did not identify which players might have been involved in the attack. Nine football players and two female trainers were suspended. None of the suspended students were identified.

Keith said the suspensions from the game against Irving Nimitz stemmed from allegations of drinking, not because of the report of the sexual assault. He said he has drilled the team about drugs, alcohol, fighting and responsible behavior.

"Our players know how I stand on it and they made a bad choice," Keith said. "We won't tolerate our football players not setting a positive example in the community. Regardless of what they see on TV."

Because the investigation into the sexual assault was continuing, Keith said, it was unclear if the suspensions would continue indefinitely.
