Hostages could be freed as group

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration has received Syrian assurances that eight American hostages in Lebanon are alive and will be freed in one group, a senior U.S. diplomat said Tuesday following talks on the issue with Syria's foreign minister.

The American diplomat said a message from Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa on the hostages' welfare was the first official reassurance about their condition from reliable sources who are in contact with the pro-Iranian Lebanese groups holding the Americans.

The U.S. official, who agreed to discuss the situation on the condition that he not be named, said Sharaa conveyed the information to him in a meeting in Damascus last week.

The U.S. diplomat said Sharaa told him Syria is coordinating matters with Iran, which is ultimately believed to have the power to order the kidnappers in Lebanon to release the Americans. Syria and Iran have been allies since Iran's Gulf war with Iraq, a Syrian enemy.

The American official also said the hostage issue was raised in talks he had with Syrian leader Hafez al-Assad, whose armed forces control a substant .l amount of Lebanese territory.

"He (Assad) is against hostage-taking," the diplomat said. "He definitely sees the hostages as a liability for the Syrian regime because it introduces 'crisis instability': Syria may have to pay the price if something happens to the hostages."

Therefore, the diplomat said, Assad "wants this resolved."

There still is no actual timetable for a hostage release, however.

For the past several days, reports and rumors of a hostage release have circulated in Washington, Beirut, Damascus and Tehran. The White House has said that while unofficial talks may be going on, there is no official U.S. role in any such discussions.

The hostages, kidnapped in Beirut over the past five years, are widely believed to be held by factions of Hezbollah, or Party of God, an extremist Shiite Moslem group loyal to hardline Iranian officials.

The eight Americans are among 18 Western hostages held in Lebanon.

Most were kidnapped by groups demanding an end to Western involvement in Lebanon and freedom for 17 pro-Iranian Arabs imprisoned in Kuwait for a series of bombings there in December 1983.

The hostage issue also came up in a recent meeting between Sharaa and his Iranian counterpart, Ali Akbar Velayati, the U.S. diplomat said.

The release of hostages, the Syrian official told the American envoy last Friday, will not take place for at least another two weeks — and could take much longer than that.

"My personal guess is that they will not be freed before April or May at the earliest," the official said.

Flag case may be first test of law

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Charges of desecrating the U.S. and Texas flags filed on two Midland men may be the first to fall under a recent state law, Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman said today.

Midland police said the two men connected with the desecration of the flags were still being held in Midland County Jail this morning. Police said they are still searching for a third man.

Timothy Holt, 17, and Steven Pyles, 18, both of whom were already in jail on burglary and other charges, were each charged with two counts of desecration of a venerated object, police said.

The fixed bond was $1,000 apiece for the Class A misdemeanor charges, each carrying a maximum $2,000 fine and/or one year in jail, police said.

The U.S. Supreme Court in June 1989 ruled 5-4 that flag burning was protected by the U.S. Constitution.

The act of desecrating a U.S. or Texas flag became illegal in this state last September after the Texas Legislature passed section 42.14 of the Texas Penal Code.

Dettman said the charges on the Midland men were the first in the state under the new law.

"As far as I'm concerned, it's a constitutional law and we're going forward with that," he said. "Saying how this law would be reviewed by the U.S. Supreme Court would be pure conjecture on my part."

Supreme Soviet will allow some private holdings

MOSCOW (AP) — Beset with a sinking economy and rising discontent, Soviet lawmakers made a drastic break with Communist orthodoxy Tuesday by voting to allow private citizens to own small factories and hire their own workers.

Applause swept through the Kremlin chamber as the Supreme Soviet, by a 350-3 vote with 11 abstentions, passed the Property Law, which the official Tass news agency described as "the main plank" of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's campaign for economic reform.

The law permits Soviets for the first time in nearly seven decades to privately possess "means of production," an approach at odds with classic Marxist thinking, which sees in private ownership the roots of the capitalist exploitation wiped out by the Russian Revolution 72 years ago.

Deputy Premier Leonid I. Abalkin said the law, to go into effect July 1, will enable private citizens to own workshops, garages for automotive repairs, farm enterprises and other small-scale ventures to supplement the notoriously ineffective state-run economy.

Also, subject to restrictions from legislatures in the 15 Soviet republics, the law permits one citizen to hire another for pay, a practice that currently is illegal and was a key target of the Russian revolutionaries.

In the early 1920s, Vladimir I. Lenin and his Bolsheviks temporarily retreated from their drive to implement communism and allowed private ownership of the means of production under the New Economic Policy, or NEP. The policy was ended under Lenin's successor, Josef Stalin.

Tuesday's vote was hailed by supporters not as a tactical move backward but as a great advance toward a more just and prosperous society.

Call for better well testing urged

Greenpeace on 'mission'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Greenpeace has "invaded" Texas and Midland to check out environmental problems.

The controversial worldwide environmental organization is in town this week in the form of environmentalist John Liebman.

His mission is to test underground water allegedly polluted by chemicals and resulting in illnesses and deaths.

"We see Texas as being a state that is running very near last in environmental protection in the United States," Liebman, 37, said Tuesday in explaining why Greenpeace decided to move into Texas.

Texas generates "more hazardous waste than any other state in the United States — far and above," said Liebman. "Its rules and regulations and enforcement policies are archaic compared to some of the more progressive states, including even Louisiana, which has long been known as the polluters' paradise."

Liebman, a Texas-born former political activist who joined Greenpeace seven years ago, is Greenpeace's Mississippi River toxics coordinator stationed in New Orleans.

"We thought it would be a good idea to start spending a lot of time in Texas — not only evaluating the problems but trying to find out what they really are. They are very complex issues."

Greenpeace member Lillian Wallis of Midland invited a Greenpeace investigation of polluted underground water.

"This is a worldwide organization that came into Midland to take care of a problem that should have been taken care by local people, county, state, and the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency)," Ms. Wallis said. "And they have not taken care of it, and that's why our water is polluted."

"We want clean water," Ms. Wallis said. "We want a clean, healthy environment for our kiddos and clean drinking water that doesn't have any chemicals that will cause cancer.

"We have a water problem here, and nobody is paying attention," Ms. Wallis said in explaining why she sought Greenpeace's help. "We needed independent testing, outside testing, so we could get accurate

Expert on toxins stresses involvement

Midland County residents concerned about possible groundwater contamination should pressure state officials for action, a Greenpeace spokesman told a crowd of about 200 Tuesday evening.

John Liebman, toxics coordinator for Greenpeace's New Orleans, La. office, told residents that they should demand more and better well testing by the Texas Water Commission.

"The TWC does admit that naturally occurring elements are in this water, but chemicals that were never put in there by nature are also in this water," Liebman said. "They're not saying anything except, 'Yep, it's in there, but we're not going to tell you how much.'"

TWC District Manager William Lockey reported Tuesday that results from eight of 10 county wells tested last month have arrived at his office.

Lockey said some wells show trace amounts of volatile organic compounds and some elevated chloride and sulfate levels. He said complete test results would not be released to the public until well owners had been notified.

Lockey did not say how many wells were affected, and was not available for comment today.

Bill Colbert, TWC spokesman in Austin, said wells showing organic compounds will be retested.

Colbert said high chloride levels are common in West Texas and are no cause for alarm.

However, he said residents whose wells showed high chloride levels have been advised not to drink their water without first consulting a physician or the Midland County Health Department.

"That is a precautionary instruction we have given the residents," Colbert said. "Generally speaking, I don't think we found anything that was that much surprising."

He said other area well owners should test their water regularly on their own. Colbert said private well owners cannot count on the state to monitor water quality because well owners, not the state, own the groundwater in question.

Liebman said the "onus of economic liability should not be placed on the public" and residents should not have to test their own water if they suspect it has been contaminated through someone else's negligence.

He told residents to apply indirect pressure to the TWC by taking their concerns to local, state and national government agencies, politicians and the media.

"We've worked cases similar to this all over the country, and one thing that we've found is that the more you can make noise...the more people that are concerned as a unit, then the more the politicians, the more the regulatory officials and the more the industry people are going to listen to you," Liebman said.

Liebman said the TWC should test more Midland County wells and dig monitor wells to determine the range and migration of possible water contamination. He said wells also should be test-

Railroad commission seat pursued by four candidates

ELECTION '90

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth in a series of articles examining races in the March 13 primary election.

By MELISSA TARKINGTON
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Two Democrats and two Republicans are vying for the Texas Railroad Commission seat that current commission Chairman Kent Hance is giving up to run for governor.

Amarillo lawyer Beau Boulter, Houston lawyer Clint Hackney, New Braunfels businessman Bob Krueger, and Odessa oil contractor Ted Lawson are vying for the six-year railroad commissioner term.

The three-member commission regulates the oil and gas industry, and oversees the transportation industry, which includes trucks, railroads, and buses. The members serve staggered terms and receive an annual salary of $74,698.

Boulter, a Republican endorsed by Hance and U.S. Senator Phil Gramm, is challenging Lawson for the Republican nomination. Boulter has served two terms as a West Texas congressman and was the Republican nominee for U.S. Senate in 1988. He lost that election in a landslide to Democratic U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

Lawson has never run for public office. He says that he "is not a politician," but "a businessman," and

Investigators seek cause of Colorado bank explosion

CRESTED BUTTE, Colo. (AP) — Authorities today were investigating whether a bomb or a methane gas buildup caused an explosion that flattened a two-story bank building "like an accordion," killing three people and injuring 14.

A 12-member team from the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms was expected to arrive today in this Rocky Mountain ski resort to search for clues in the rubble of Crested Butte State Bank.

The building — except the vault — was leveled by the blast. Firefighters and volunteers dug by hand through the rubble to pull out survivors. Heavy snow hampered rescue efforts and delayed the arrival of ambulances.

Police Chief Hank Smith said two restaurants had received bomb threats in the past week, and one of them was evacuated.

"I'm not ruling out a bomb, and I'm not ruling out an explosion from methane buildup," he said. "We're just now beginning the investigation."

Dick Schussler, an FBI spokesman in Denver, said sabotage was a possibility, but he didn't know of a motive. "It's not like this is a bank that's financing South Africa," he said.

The explosion occurred at 9:15 a.m., shortly after the bank opened.

Two of the injured were in serious condition, including bank President Thom Cox.

"I saw the second-floor windows blown out and the roof going up in the air," said a businessman across the street who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"Then the side walls started to blow out, and the front seemed to come out, breaking in half, with the top coming out and the bottom folding like an accordion."

Bank employee Lucy Zavela was working in her second-floor office when she "thought someone had fallen out of their chair. Then I was just falling. I ended up in a fetal position, and could see some light, and then almost immediately heard voices. Somebody dragged me out, and I thought it was a dream."

"I felt the floor drop beneath me," said teller Joe Sabino, who was treated for scratches and burns on his hands. "Fortunately, nothing came into contact with me. It (the rubble) built a little cave around me."

Killed were bank employees Donna Smith, 33, Jade Woelk and Monica Henning, all of Crested Butte. Authorities hopep to learn more about the blast from autopsies on the victims, said Gunnison County Coroner C.J. Miller.

Dusty Demerson ran over from his photography shop about a block from the bank to help in the rescue. "The president of the bank ... was hanging out the back of the bank by his legs and we got him down," he said.

Fair skies likely in Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair skies are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport, with the low in the upper 30s and winds from the southwest at 5-15 mph.

Thursday is expected to continue fair with the high in the middle 70s and winds from the southwest to west at 10-15 mph.

Tuesday's high of 71 was 19 degrees cooler than the record high of 90 set for that date in 1946. The overnight low of 39 was 23 degrees warmer than the record low of 16 set for this date in 1931.

STATE

Strong thunderstorms roared across portions of North Texas, Central Texas and Northeast Texas during the night and early today.

A tornado warning was issued for Hamilton County early today after a possible tornado was sighted on radar. A thunderstorms produced winds gusting to near 60 mph in the southern portion of Hamilton County during the pre-dawn hours.

A flash flood warning was in effect early today for Parker County and a flash flood watch was in effect for the eastern half of North Texas until 5 p.m. today.

The same storm system produced hail the size of golf balls and softball in Young County late Tuesday. An estimated three inches of rain fell during the storm that produced the hail.

Texas Highway 51 was flooded in portions of Parker County near Springtown early today.

The stormy weather was produced by a low pressure system over Kansas that was pulling moisture from the Gulf of Mexico into the eastern half of Texas.

Skies were mostly cloudy over the eastern half of the state and mostly clear in the Panhandle and South Plains.

Forecasts called for mostly cloudy skies over all of Texas except for the High Plains through Thursday. There will be heavy rainfall across South Texas Thursday, but the rainfall will be diminishing across the rest of the state beginning tonight. Skies will remain cloudy over the eastern half of the state tonight and Thursday.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 40s and 50s, ranging from the 30s Panhandle to the 60s in South Texas.

Democrats face three referendums

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Democratic Party voters in Texas will consider the fate of three nonbinding referendums dealing with workers' compensation, judicial selection and insurance reform when they go to the polls next Tuesday.

The Executive Committee of the Texas Democratic Party in January allowed the referendums to be placed on the ballot for consideration by voters, according to state Democratic Party spokesman Ed Martin.

Martin said the first issue stems from a new workers' compensation package that goes into effect in 1991, and severely limits jury involvement in compensation appeals.

Referendum No. 1 reads as follows: "The Legislature and the Supreme Court should not limit the right of citizens to demand a trial by jury of their peers in either civil or criminal cases."

The workers' compensation law allows informal dispute resolution in pre-hearing conferences, followed by an evidentiary hearing with an administrative law judge and review by a three-member administrative appeals panel.

District court juries could hear appeals of issues not resolved at the agency, but only evidence presented at the administrative hearing would be allowed at the trial.

As he signed the 321-page document into law in January, Gov. Bill Clements called it the most important legislation he had seen in 20 years. The reforms allow businesses to look forward to reductions in insurance rates that have force many businesses out of Texas, he said.

Businesses demanded relief after workers' compensation insurance rates rose 148 percent since 1985, with another 22 percent increase imposed in January.

But Mike Perrin, president of the Texas Trial Lawyers Association, has expressed opposition to the bill and threatened political retaliation against lawmakers who voted for the measure.

Also, Democratic voters will decide a referendum born out of last month's 5th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals ruling that set aside U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton's order requiring non-partisan elections from subdistricts, such as legislative districts, commissioners court precincts or justice of the peace precincts, Martin said.

Referendum No. 2 reads as follows: "The elected Legislature, not an appointed federal judge, should act to maintain Texans' right to nominate and elect judges instead of creating an appointed judiciary. The legislative plan should include the nomination and election of urban district judges from districts with smaller populations (similar to the population of existing judicial districts in rural areas)."

The appeals court action allowed judges in Midland, Ector, Bexar, Dallas, Harris, Jefferson, Lubbock, Tarrant and Travis counties to file for re-election under the old county-wide at-large system that Bunton ruled illegally diluted minority voters.

Martin said the third issue to be decided by Democratic Party voters is whether the Legislature should adopt comprehensive insurance reform legislation.

Referendum No. 3 reads as follows: "The Legislature should adopt comprehensive insurance reform legislation to eliminate price fixing, cause an immediate rollback of insurance rates, and require insurance companies to engage in good faith and fair dealing with policyholders."

That issue, said Martin, is in response to a 2.88 percent rate increase in automobile insurance premiums approved last month by the State Board of Insurance.

The new rate plan, which goes into effect May 1, will generate $113 million to cover a 9.2 percent increase in the cost of medical care and court costs from lawsuits that offset a 6.9 percent decline in property damage costs.

The board also authorized higher rates for insurance against underinsured motorists to compensate for a recent Texas Supreme Court ruling that expanded insurance company liability.

"the only candidate with working experience" in two of the primary areas regulated by the railroad commission — petroleum and trucking.

Boulter, a practicing attorney from Amarillo who is focusing his campaign around energy issues, chaired the House Republican Energy Task Force and co-authored the National Petroleum Security Act of 1987.

In 1985, he was a member of the U.S. Budget Committee and served on the Energy and Natural Resources Subcommittee of the Budget and Government Operations Committee. He also was a member of the U.S. House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families, and the Human Rights and Military Reform caususes.

Boulter says what the nation and oil industry most need is a national energy strategy that involves tax incentives for oil and gas producers.

In 1987 Boulter worked with U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm to introduce a comparitive set of tax incentives. "I wrote those incentives into the energy plank of the Republican party platform," said Boulter. "We want big changes, and those will have to come out of Washington."

Boulter also wants to change transportation regulations, especially in the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex. "The biggest cloud for economic developement is trucking regulations," said Boulter, who wants to bring competition to the system by making Texas rates more in line with those charged nationally.

Lawson, who earned a bachelor's degree from Sul Ross State University in Alpine, began his oil field career as a student at Midland High School.

Democrat Bob Krueger believes he is "uniquely" qualified for his party's nomination because of his experience as congressman and U.S. ambassador.

Krueger, 54, said that trade between Mexico and the U.S. doubled diring his term as ambassador.

The other Democratic contender, Clint Hackney, ran as the Democratic nominee in 1986 against incumbent Republican Hance, receiving 45 percent of the vote.

Krueger also is not a newcomer to state politics. He briefly considered running against John Sharp for the Democratic nomination for railroad commissioner in 1986 and has run for statewide office twice.

He won the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate in 1978 but failed to unseat Republican incumbent John Tower.

In his second senatorial bid, he was stopped short by then-state Sen. Lloyd Doggett, who now serves on the state Supreme Court, and Hance, who was then a Democrat.

Krueger, who also served two terms in the U.S. Congress, chaired the White House Conference on Small Business.

Hackney represented Houston for four terms in the Texas House of Representatives. During that time, he chaired the House Energy committee, and was member of the transportation committee and the Southwest Energy Council.

Born and raised in New Braunfels, Krueger is a member of the Philosophical Society of Texas. He earned a bachelor's degree from Southern Methodist University, a master's from Duke University, and master's and doctoral degrees from Oxford University in England.

Hackney, a Lufkin native, earned a bachelor's degree from Texas A&M University. After a brief stint in the U.S. Army, he attended the University of Houston Law School.

Scientist, attorney win religion prize

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK — An Australian scientist who sees links between science and faith and a Hindu lawyer who started communities for lepers in India were named winners today of the Templeton Prize for progess in religion.

Biologist-geneticist Charles L. Birch and Murlidhar Devidas Amte will share the $560,000 prize, the largest made in any field.

Amte, 75, established five centers for lepers in the area of Nagpur, India, the largest covering 450 acres and accommodating 1,400 lepers. It includes a hospital, library, workshops, a bank, a post office, schools and a theater.

Born into a wealthy Brahmin family, educated at a Christian college and becoming a practicing attorney, Amte rebelled against caste barriers to help the untouchables set up cooperatives and unions. An encounter with a leper so repelled him that he ran off, but he returned and befriended the man.

Birch, 71, the son of Methodist minister and a biologist at the University of Sydney from 1960 until his recent retirement, also has been a research fellow at several universities in this country and England.

He has been a leading figure at conferences of religious thinkers and scientists, and for five years was vice chairman of the department of church and society of the World Council of Churches.

Birch has sought what he calls a "new and constructive way of looking at the natural world, in the light both of science and of Christian insights."

Announcement of the winners was made at the Church Centre for the United Nations. The awards will be given at a ceremony in London May 8.

The TWC sampled 10 wells south of Interstate 20 near South Midkiff and Cotton Flat roads in February in response to allegations of groundwater contamination.

Meanwhile, concern about county cancer and illness rates prompted residents to launch an area health survey.

Dr. Carl Frailey, a Midland College biology professor, said about 20 of his students are receiving lab credit for conducting the survey. With about 250 people surveyed so far, Frailey said, surveyors have recorded about 48 cancer deaths in the area.

"There is a syndrome of disease in this area," Frailey said. "Just to focus on the cancer is just to show the most dramatic part. It doesn't take a Ph.D. in biology or a physician to determine that something is amiss out there."

Liebman concurred.

"I think what is sort of unique here in the Midland area is the concentrations of people who are dying of things we can't pronounce in a very, very small area," he said.

Residents at Tuesday's meeting at West Kentucky Baptist Church expressed concern about the quality of their water and said they wanted the TWC to test more wells.

South County Road 1218 resident Jack Meldrum said he was frustrated because county residents have no one to turn to if the TWC will not test more wells.

"I want to know who is responsible and what the solution is to get the water cleaned up, or let me know whether or not to drink it," Meldrum said.

He said he and his neighbors were upset that the TWC has taken so long to publicize well test results.

TWC officials estimated Feb. 2 that results would be known in two weeks, but Lockey said results for metals and organic compounds did not begin arriving until this week.

Mary Adams, a South County Road 1210 resident, said that without the test results, Tuesday's meeting was premature.

"We should wait until test results are in and then decide if we have a problem," she said. "Most of the people at this meeting were assuming we had a problem and were just wanting the test results to verify their assumption."

County Commissioner Louisa Valencia said that county government cannot do much to help residents concerned about water quality.

"I wish we could do more but I don't know what we could do," she said. "If the water is contaminated, what options do we have?"

Nevertheless, Ms. Valencia said she would talk to the TWC about the problem.

Liebman said he will sample additional area wells himself today for testing at an independent Boston lab. He did not say how many wells he planned to sample, but expected results before the end of the month.

MISSION

analysis. I love it (Greenpeace)," she said. "I am an environmentalist."

Greenpeace, which is the largest environmental group in the world, Liebman said, was founded in 1969 and is supported by approximately 4 million individuals and accepts no funds or grants from companies, corporations, or governments.

Greenpeace's prime mission is "to make everybody aware" of situations that endanger the earth. Those situations include air, water and soil pollution, toxic-related issues, nuclear-disarmament related issues, nuclear-bomb testing, and slaughter of whales and other sea life.

"We feel that apathy on a subject can be overcome if ignorance is destroyed," Liebman said.

Greenpeace, which has offices in 27 countries, operates the only non-government funded scientific base station in Antarctica, and maintains ocean-going vessels, including a successor to the Rainbow Warrior that was sunk by the French government in the South Pacific in 1986 for Greenpeace's stance on anti-nuclear-bomb testing.

Greenpeace's United States regional offices are in Seattle, San Francisco, Boston, Chicago, and Fort Lauderdale, and the organization's headquarters are in Washington, D.C.

The new Rainbow Warrior, commissioned last year, is in the South Pacific "working on nuclear-testing issues," Liebman said.

Larger and more sophisticated than its predecessor, the new Rainbow Warrior is a 160-foot, three-masted converted trawler that is "much more technically advanced" than the sunken ship, and has a laboratory and helicopter aboard.

Greenpeace tries to present its findings in a learned, "scientific manner but yet in a down-to-earth, easy-to-understand manner" so that the public can understand local, regional, state and worldwide environmental problems and then, if they so choose, "do something about it."

"People who work on pollution more often than not know an awful lot more than they are telling," Liebman said. "At the same time, we also find that the public knows an awful lot less than what they are hearing."

Unlike the more radical, sometimes belligerent Earth First! that shares Greenpeace's goals, Greenpeace doesn't "involve any victims in what we do," Liebman said.

While being "generally supportive enough of Earth First! issues," Greenpeace does not "deal" in activities which might endanger the lives of anybody other than Greenpeace activists.

"We separate ourselves from that type of activity" that would create victims, he said. "We do specialise in direct actions, and Earth First! is sort of a spinoff of that. Our actions entail things that would never be construed as potentially ever having any kind of victim other than us."

Even so, Greenpeace does "do things that could be construed as 'illegal.'"

Rather than doing any threatening in its investigations, Greenpeace, by its actions, may "make the company that we are focusing our attention on to threaten us," Liebman said. Should the company take or consider drastic retaliation, "We make them worry about how they are going to explain to their wives at night that they killed four (Greenpeace) people because they were so callous as to drive a semi (truck) over the top of us."

Liebman, who sports long hair and a moustache and mostly wears blue jeans and sweater or T-shirt, said that he, in appearance, is a holdover from earlier times of protest and is a "dying image of Greenpeace" but is a "perception people have of us. I feel very comfortable with it, and the public feels comfortable with it. If I showed up in a three-piece suit, they would wonder where I came from," he said. "T-shirts and blue jeans are my style. They always have been, and they always will be."

However, many Greenpeace environmentalists today are donned in three-piece suits, he said. "It's a new generation. We have really seen the evolution of the environmentalists."

But, Liebman said, "I don't think it (dress) makes much difference if you testify in Congress, wearing a sweater or a three-piece (suit). The message still gets out the same."

FLAG

Warrants on the three men were issued by Midland County Judge Bill Ahders.

Detective Jim Sevey said all three were arrested Feb. 23 when an officer looked through an open doorway at The Junction Apartments, 1902 N. Midland Drive, and saw a collection of city street signs. The officer was investigating a disturbance at the complex, Sevey said.

After obtaining a search warrant, police entered the apartment, where the three men lived together, and found two U.S. and two Texas flags which had been desecrated, Sevey said.

Obscenities and heavy metal rock band symbols had been either painted or written on the flags, one of which was also burned he said. The street signs were found to be stolen, he said.

After their Feb. 23 arrest, two of the men were released on bond, while the other has remained in jail since then, police said. One of the released men was later arrested, police said.

$60 billion tag comes with U.S. health plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Medical Association today proposed revamping the nation's health care system by expanding Medicaid and requiring employers to provide health insurance to fulltime employees.

The AMA's 16-point plan also would create state risk pools to provide group insurance policies for the medically uninsurable, small businesses and others unable to afford coverage under the current system.

The plan would cost about $60 billion, the AMA said, but it did not suggest where the money should come from.

The physicians' group said its proposals are aimed at offering health care coverage to all Americans, regardless of income, and preserving patients' freedom to choose their health-care provider.

"The individual's freedom of choice remains a cornerstone of the American system," said Dr. Alan R. Nelson, AMA president.

Revision in the current system is "badly needed," Nelson said, but "it would be counterproductive to 'fix' aspects of our system that are not broken."

The AMA's proposal is similar to a $66 billion plan recommended last week by the U.S. Bipartisan Commission on Comprehensive Health Care, known as the Pepper Commission for its first chairman, the late Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla.

Both proposals are aimed at closing the gaps in the current health care system.

The nation's health-care bill is expected to reach $600 billion this year, more than 11 percent of the gross national product. Yet more than 33 million Americans lack health insurance.

The highlights of the AMA plan include:

—Expanding Medicaid to all people below the poverty level, and establishing a uniform set of benefits. Medicaid now covers fewer than half of those living below the poverty line, and eligibility and benefits vary from state to state.

—Requiring employers to provide health insurance for all fulltime employees and their families, and eliminating state-mandated benefits. Employers would be allowed tax deductions to help with costs.

—Establishing state risk pools to make coverage available for the medically uninsurable and for others for whom individual health insurance policies are too expensive and group coverage is not available. About 15 states currently have such pools.

—Expanding private sector coverage of long-term care with tax incentives.

Clean air bill debated, amended in House, Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators are scrambling to make changes in a compromise clean air bill, as a House panel considers whether Midwest utilities should get help in paying for sulfur dioxide emission controls.

The Senate approved a number of amendments Tuesday to its version of the measure, which would represent the first revision of federal air pollution laws in 13 years.

The House Energy and Commerce Committee's energy and power subcommittee planned this afternoon to consider a proposal to help Midwest utilities pay for costly sulfur dioxide emission controls required by the House clean air bill.

A cost-sharing fee has been opposed by the Bush administration as well as many lawmakers from areas where utilities already have relatively clean-burning electric power plants. The Senate bill contains no such provision, although some allowances to help the Midwest is included.

The House and Senate clean air measures call for tougher controls on smog-causing pollution from automobiles and industrial sources, curbs on toxic chemical releases by industry and, for the first time, cuts in acid rain pollutants from coal-fired utility plants.

The House bill remains in committee. Last week a Senate compromise with the Bush administration sent that body's measure to the floor for debate.

Despite the lack of floor action, there was considerable activity behind the scenes. Various groups of senators worked on proposed amendments, including one to strengthen auto pollution controls by reinstating automatic enactment of a second round of tailpipe controls.

Drug fight leads IRS to belly up to bar

MIAMI (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service, hoping to expose drug kingpins, has served summonses on criminal defense attorneys across the country demanding the names of clients who paid cash for fees exceeding $10,000.

The first summonses went out Monday. The number issued was not immediately known, but one lawyer served said an IRS agent told him 900 attorneys were to receive summonses demanding their financial records.

"It's very clear what the issue is here. ... It grows out of concerns about drug payments," said David Runkel, spokesman for the U.S. Justice Department, which has taken two New York City law firms to court for refusing to name clients for the IRS.

Lawyers argue that such disclosures would violate attorney-client privilege.

"We cannot allow in this country the war against drugs to become the war against lawyers and the war against the Bill of Rights, and that's what's happening," said Miami lawyer Neal Sonnett, president of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers.

The attorneys were told to bring their financial records to IRS offices, according to Sonnett.

"We have heard from enough lawyers around the country to recognize that it appears to be a nationwide assault upon criminal defense lawyers," he said.

Poaching raid ignites poor Colorado town

SAN LUIS, Colo. (AP) — A huge poaching raid that startled this poor town of 800 a year ago may actually have helped prompt an artistic and economic renaissance, some community leaders say.

A local artist is making a religious shrine. Two bed-and-breakfasts have opened. Empty buildings are being renovated. Plans are being made for cottage industries using the skills of local artisans.

Allen C. Manzanares, director of the state-funded Costilla County Economic Development Council Inc., thinks the raid has had a positive effect on a town where one of every four or five people is unemployed.

"It caught the attention of the rest of the state, and of Gov. (Roy) Romer," who got funding for development council, said Manzanares, whose family has lived here for many generations, as have most San Luis families.

"We want to put it behind us, and I think generally we have," he said. "The community has started to recover from it. ... How do we turn something negative into a positive?"

Last March 6, more than 100 state and federal wildlife officials converged on San Luis and nearby Chama and Fort Garland. They arrested 57 alleged poachers in the culmination of a 2½-year sting.

An undercover officer had posed as a taxidermist and wild game processor, set up shop and bought elk, deer, bear and other game hides and carcasses, many taken out of season, as well as endangered birds of prey.

Of the 57 people arrested, the cases of three are still pending, charges against four were dismissed, and seven were fined and sentenced to prison terms of up to eight months. The others pleaded guilty and were fined.

San Luis, in an arid valley at 7,900 feet, was founded in 1851 by descendants of Spanish colonists. It is Colorado's oldest town, and like neighboring San Pablo, San Pedro and San Francisco, the area's heritage, culture and geography have isolated it.

The community remains nearly 90 percent Hispanic.

"People here take care of each other," said the Rev. Patrick Valdez, the Roman Catholic priest who is one of the chief architects of the town's renaissance.

"There is no hunger but there is poverty. If there is an illness or a death, they do take care of each other."

San Luis' awakening has come from within.

Valdez has renovated a convent left in disarray since the 1950s, turning it into a handicraft gallery and a bed and breakfast, appropriately called El Convento.

The gallery is "the incubator of a whole series of cottage industries," Valdez said.

"What I anticipate is that the artisans will start off here and when they get big enough they will be able to open their own businesses and open their extra rooms into shops or their garages into workshops," he said.

Also planned are the town's first motel and a furniture factory employing local artisans. The town sponsored workshops for artists and artisans last summer and plans more this summer.

At the center of activity is a shrine being built on a hill overlooking the village. The Stations of the Cross — images that depict Christ's final suffering, crucifixion and burial — will be placed along a nearly mile-long path that hairpins to the top of a volcanic, rock-strewn mesa west of town.

The stations, to be dedicated in May, are being rendered in bronze by artist Huberto Maestas, who also plans to open a San Luis foundry that will employ several residents.

Valdez saw the poaching case as a setback to an overdue economic recovery for the region, but said, "I'm very optimistic about the future."

"I think it (the recovery) was going to happen. I think the raid was a stumbling block in our way that we have to jump over. And it would have been better if it hadn't ever happened."

Capitol Hill ready with its claims on peace windfall

By WALTER R. MEARS

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the past few weeks, claims against the peace dividend have been posted by the nation's governors, advocates of U.S. aid to the emerging democracies of eastern Europe and Central America, and 79 U.S. senators.

They'll have to get into line with all the others looking to cash in on defense spending cuts to finance other aims — or to cut taxes.

"One of my colleagues ... sent me a note saying he felt that half of the peace dividend should be applied to education," said Speaker of the House Thomas S. Foley. "And half of it to health. And half of it to deficit reduction. And half of it to tax reduction. And half of it to the infrastructure.

"And half of it to creating a new mathematics to explain how six halves equal one whole."

It's a harmless political pastime right now, because there isn't any peace dividend to pay for other things or cut the deficit this year.

"The peace dividend is peace," says Vice President Dan Quayle.

But nobody doubts that the defense budget is going to be cut, freeing resources to go elsewhere, unless there is an incredible reversal of the already incredible change that has swept eastward to Moscow, easing if not ending the Cold War.

The Pentagon warns that reversal could happen, but CIA Director William H. Webster told Congress last week that it is unlikely, even if hardliners were to take over in Moscow.

The administration isn't forecasting a budget bonus now or soon, resisting pressure in Congress to carve one out of defense spending. There are certain to be cuts in the administration's $296 billion defense budget, an increase in dollars although not enough to match inflation.

But Democrat Foley said that in the early phases, it will be difficult to wring major savings out of defense cuts that close bases, recall troops from abroad or cancel weapons contracts.

"The immediate impact is sometimes to increase costs in the short term," he said. "But there's no question ... we're talking about very significant savings to be realized." Foley said he thinks the eventual savings should be split, half to reduce the federal deficit, half to "the social deficit" of financially strapped domestic programs.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Tex., raised the issue in the Senate last week with an amendment suggesting that any peace dividend be used to cut taxes. He said the only discussion had been about ways to spend the money, when the government shouldn't spend it at all but should give it back to taxpayers.

"I do not believe it is too dramatic to say that the No. 1 issue of the 1990s, if things continue to move in the current direction in eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, will be what to do with the peace dividend," Gramm said.

Before the Senate got to its hypothetical legislation, the National Governors Conference had adopted a resolution urging President Bush "to dedicate the peace dividend in a balanced manner between the federal budget deficit, education and other productivity investments."

There were no numbers attached.

Nor were there any dividend estimates when congressional advocates of aid for the newly elected government of Nicaragua and the fledgling democracies of eastern Europe put in their bids, saying defense savings should finance economic assistance.

There were some figures when the Senate had its mini-debate on the peace dividend, but they varied so widely as to be meaningless. Gramm said he thought defense budget savings might total $50 to $70 billion by the mid-1990s. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said the cuts should add up to $163 billion over the next five years.

Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., chairman of the budget committee, said it was premature to be talking about uses for a peace dividend that isn't there yet. But he said the debate at least produced the first Senate consensus that there will indeed be one.

Sasser and the Democrats proposed their own peace dividend measure, declaring that the savings should go toward balancing the budget, meeting urgent national priorities and reducing taxes for working people.

That was approved, 79 to 19, and Gramm's version was rejected, 50 to 48. Neither commits anybody to do anything, which makes them perfect election-year exhibits for campaigning senators, who can point to them as votes in favor of cutting taxes.

Billions in loans can't save Soviets

There is now increasing speculation about whether Western nations should loan the Soviet Union billions of dollars to offer President Mikhail Gorbachev time to have his reforms work.

Those who argue for such assistance say it would be a good investment because the help would not only aid democracy but could prevent turmoil and even civil war in the Soviet Union.

That's a foolish argument; the Communist state is collapsing because it was based on the faulty premises of communism, which stressed centralization of all goods and services at the expense of the individual, and only recently have Soviet officials begun to break with that flawed system. For the West to make large loans to Moscow — $25 billion is suggested as a start — is unsound financially and would not affect whatever turmoil may occur in the Soviet Union.

Even after Tuesday's historic action by the Soviet legislature, allowing limited forms of private ownership of business and property, the Soviet economy remains in dire straits. There is no commercial law, as the West knows it, or sound currency. There has been only the beginning of movement away from central planning, and price reform has been postponed for at least three years. Moscow has no plans to mix Western economic freedom and Soviet central planning. The meager trappings of capitalism that have been introduced have created nothing but economic chaos.

The Soviets are many years away from financial discipline and efficient production. Gorbachev has completely failed to divert resources to consumer goods. The same shoddy goods continue.

Before his death, Andrei Sakharov underlined most of these shortcomings. He warned Gorbachev that the communists would have to break with their economic past. Gorbachev himself admitted recently that real economic reform has not yet begun.

So why should the West, at this uncertain juncture, pour billions of dollars into the Soviet Union? The Soviets themselves admit that they do not know how far they wish economic reform to go. Many still strongly support socialist planning. Why should Americans underwrite that?

The answer, of course, is that we should not. The Soviets themselves say their reform is beyond the power of outside influence. If they can bring their flawed system of government into the 20th century, the Soviet Union will have a chance to continue to exist. At that time, perhaps, the United States can offer other forms of assistance or encouragement.

But to loan billions of dollars to the Soviet Union at this time would be unsound.

JTPA hasn't delivered on promises

WASHINGTON — Ask Dan Quayle what he is most proud of from his years in the Senate, and he will say the Job Training Partnership Act. It was a good idea — federally subsidized job training for the poor to save money down the road on welfare. But what the bureaucracy has done with that $3 billion a year program is nothing to be proud of. The participants would have been better off if Quayle had simply handed them the cash.

Jack Anderson

The program hasn't put a dent in the welfare rates for poor and uneducated workers. Half of the people trained by private companies using taxpayers' money were never hired permanently by those companies when the subsidy ran out. And 60 percent of them already had high school diplomas when they took advantage of this program for the "uneducated."

The problem, according to our sources at the Labor Department, is accountability. The JTPA doesn't have any.

Each state that gets JTPA money makes its own rules, and in many cases the states can't even tell the federal government where the money went. When federal auditors have found fraud, they have also found contracts so loosely written that there is no way to demand compensation for wasted money.

The JTPA was formed in 1982. Since 1985, auditors from the Inspector General's Office of the Labor Department have been sounding the alarm, but the department simply discounts their reports.

Our associate Tim Warner has seen those internal investigations that the department chooses to gloss over. The auditors have found widespread fraud, abuse and misuse of JTPA funding.

Overall, according to the inspector general's staff, the JTPA has only slightly reduced the number of trainees dependent on welfare. The states and private businesses using JTPA grants are hiring trainees who are not qualified as disadvantaged or uneducated, leaving the truly needy still in the welfare lines.

In Scott County, Ky., the auditors found that the state used $2.58 million in taxpayers' money to train 545 auto workers who did not qualify as needy.

In Houston, $41 million was spent during two years and less than a third of the money went into training programs. The rest was spent on administration.

Another inspector general audit looked at 263 JTPA contracts and found that 83 percent of them — $189 million worth — had no provision in the contracts to protect against fraud and no way for the government to get the money back if it was being misused. More than half of the contracts didn't even give the federal government the right to audit the state agencies assigned to distribute the money.

In Houston, one agency under contract to the JTPA spent $104,085 in one year traveling to conventions and paying dues to a professional organization.

In Mississippi, $1.2 million was spent on a youth job training program and much of the money was spent on computers after the program was over. In that program, only 56 percent of the trainees met the goal of upgrading their reading and math skills.

Labor Department officials and congressional staffers recently drafted some proposals to increase accountability in the JTPA. But some of our sources in the department say the proposals don't go far enough and the JTPA is still a wide open invitation to abuse.

SHORT-TERM GREED: Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady wants to steer the stock market away from dependence on quarterly profit statements. Companies want to impress their stockholders with those profits and are driven to make short-term decisions.

Some analysts blame one of the biggest market players, pension plans, for the short-term thinking that leads to a volatile market. Brady questions whether pension plans have enough incentive to invest large amounts of money for long periods of time. One option Brady is considering is a ban on quarterly profit statements.

MINI-EDITORIAL: President Bush likes to say that the United States spends more money on education than most other nations. Statements like that make it easier for Bush to say that Congress doesn't need to spend more.

But it ain't necessarily so.

The Economic Policy Institute, a liberal think tank, says the United States ranks 14th in the top 16 industrialized nations when it comes to school financing. The Education Department disputes the numbers, but in the long run, it isn't the numbers that matter.

Bush's argument is bogus. It isn't important what other countries spend on education. It's only important that what the United States spends isn't doing the job.

Taylor experience cited

For more than 20 years I have been secretary and administrative assistant to one of the top trial attorneys in the state. In that capacity I have had the opportunity of observing judges and their qualifications.

It is my opinion that the best judge is one who has a broad range of legal experience, one who understands and has a good bit of knowledge of oil and gas law, banking law, business law and business procedures, and has practiced in one or more of these areas. A judge should have more than a procedural knowledge of the court.

Nick Taylor has had a wide variety of legal experience. In addition, Taylor has impeccable character, total integrity and is vitally concerned with the welfare of our community. He has exhibited this concern by being involved in a leadership capacity in Boy Scouts, crime prevention, war on drugs, MADD and other organizations.

Nick Taylor will bring his vast knowledge and superior intellect, fairness, honesty — a fresh approach — to the 238th District Court.

I urge you to compare the two candidates — and I'm sure you will decide to vote for Nick Taylor, as I have.

Willene Smyres
Midland

Hyde has vital experience

In Nick Taylor's letter to the citizens of Midland County, dated Feb. 16, 1990, he stated, "I have always believed that practical experience is just as important as academics."

It is a fact that Taylor's actual courtroom experience in criminal cases consists of plea bargaining three criminals charged with felony offenses.

Taylor's newspaper advertisements tell us that over 80 percent of the cases in the 238th District Court are civil. In his interview with Channel 9, Taylor stated that approximately 90 percent of the cases in the 238th were civil. This is simply not true.

The truth is that at least 40 percent of the cases in the 238th are felony criminal cases. Don't you think that a district judge needs practical courtroom experience in criminal cases in order to rule properly?

Mistakes by judges in criminal cases result in criminals being released. John Hyde has the necessary experience to serve as our 238th district judge.

Darla J. Fisher

Teacher's rights trampled

Since when has the principal of any school had the right to dictate who may or may not park on the public streets? This is a gross violation of civil rights. The fact that the one whose rights are being violated is a teacher under the principal only compounds the offense.

Ironically, the punishment (suspension from work) for disobeying the principal's rules indicates that the teacher is considered to be without class.

Let us hope that others will protest this trampling of civil rights. After all, it is the principle of the thing.

Treasury plays shell game to finance freedom

Ortega's defeat in Nicaragua was a brilliant win for the free enterprise system. I thought that there would be rejoicing at the Treasury Department, but all I saw were grim faces.

Art Buchwald

"Why the sadness?" I asked Hardin Beaver.

"The democratic forces overwhelmed the Communist left, and we now have to deal with another friendly nation in this hemisphere," he wept.

"So what's the problem?"

"Do you know how much it will cost us to get Nicaragua on its feet?"

"A lot. Where are you going to get the aid?"

"Won't El Salvador be upset?"

"Why should they? The funds weren't theirs to start with. It was money we had originally set aside for Poland."

"Financial aid really moves around," I said.

"It's not our fault that everyone is declaring themselves free at the same time. There is just so much orange juice you can squeeze out of a kumquat."

"Yet it has always been the dream of the United States to have a world full of democratic countries."

Hardin told me, "Not all within a few months. Totalitarian regimes don't cost anything. Give people freedom and you get stuck with one helluva bill."

"At least when we gave money to the Contras, we didn't have to worry about financing an entire country," I remarked.

"We're very mad at the CIA," Hardin confided. "They should have let us know what was going to happen at the beginning of the fiscal year."

I tried to defend the agency.

"The CIA can't know everything. All the spook agents were squirreled away in the totalitarian governments. They didn't care what the opposition forces were doing because they were sure that they couldn't overthrow a village post office."

"The dilemma is that nobody expected so many countries to come over to our side in one bite. We're as much for democracy as anyone, but they all expect us to build them Disney World."

"The only reason that happened," I declared, "is because the Voice of America told its listeners that if they threw off their chains, we'd pick up the lunch check."

Hardin said, "Well, we're telling the State Department to cool it. We've established a quota on freedom-loving people. They going to be stuck with despots in Cuba until we can take care of Paraguay and Peru."

"That isn't going to make us look too good."

"It isn't a question of looking good or not. We don't have enough money for park benches in Panama. What do we do when the Bulgarians come to us with a tin cup?"

"Turn them over to the private sector," I suggested. "The government can't do everything."

"What about the loyal friends who have been democratic for a long time? Do we cut them off from foreign aid to take care of the nouveau free?" Hardin asked.

"If we don't — who will?"

Republicans chortle over Jackson's decision

WASHINGTON — Republicans are joyful that Jesse Jackson has chosen to become the black Stassen.

He could have run for and easily won the mayoralty of Washington, a war zone passing for an American city.

William Safire

He could then have made demands on the Congress for enforcement and education, exhorted the drug-imperiled kids in need of a role model, and built a reputation of a politician willing to put his future on the line in a great cause.

In short, he coulda been a contender.

As an elected official who paid his dues in the trenches, he might have earned a spot on the presidential ticket in 1992, perhaps the top spot in '96.

But when his moment came, Jesse Jackson choked.

None of that dreary day-to-day responsibility for a man who has tasted adulation at a national convention.

Instead, last month's prediction by the columnist A.M. Rosenthal that Jesse would demur proved prescient.

Jackson fantasizes about being a "shadow senator" against the day that the District might become a state.

This pitch for representation by geography rather than population subverts the principle of one person, one vote.

Don't hold your breath waiting for that.

First, Staten Island would have to secede from New York City and establish a pattern of electing Republicans.

Then it would have to be paired for admission with Democratic D.C., as Hawaii and Alaska were, so that neither party would gain an advantage.

Then, in a decade or two, we might have four unnecessary new senators, necessitating another new Senate Office Building. All because one star thought that serving as mayor was too demeaning an audition.

Now to why his decision to turn tail and run for president again has caused such GOP elation.

Let's project ahead two years.

Mario Cuomo will be basing his convoluted campaign on Vincentian reasoning (only last week, this iconoclastic pol knocked George Washington as a "lousy soldier.")

Al Gore will be older but greener; Bill Bradley, under Sidney Pollack's Hollywood direction, will be slam-dunking Third-World debt down voters' throats; and Sam Nunn or Chuck Robb will try to sell an economic-defense buildup against the Axis powers.

Against that field, Jackson will do as least as well as last time out in the Iowa caucuses, but probably dip to 10 percent in the New Hampshire primary, getting only the traditional what-the-hell vote, dismissing a Cuomo or Bradley victory as a Northeast "hometowner" win.

Then may come California, on the verge of moving its primary up to March 3.

Democrats there figure on a low Republican primary turnout because Bush will be unopposed in 1992, and a big Democratic turnout in a fight for Sen. Alan Cranston's seat; that's why Democrats want to put a few propositions on the ballot.

California Republicans say no, but national leaders want that primary early because of the Jackson factor.

Jackson won 38 percent of the vote in California in 1988, a state with a black and Hispanic population of 25 percent and a significant gay vote.

He may not do as well as last time, but in a five-man white and nonliberal field, Jackson will probably win the nation's largest state.

Super Tuesday follows right on. Jackson will do poorly in Florida, but almost as well as before in Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, North and South Carolina.

("And to my friends in Virginia, I want to say that I never considered General Washington to be a 'lousy soldier,' as my Yankee friend Mr. Koo-mo does.")

By the end of March, 60 percent of the delegates will have been chosen, with Jackson well out front; in mid-April, he will be the only outsider to challenge Cuomo in the New York primary, and will grab a third of those delegates.

Thus will the Democratic Party be a national laughingstock. Its frontrunner cannot be nominated because he chose the fun of national campaigning over the work of local governing; all he can do is threaten to bolt and accuse the party of racism if he is not given the vice presidency.

Damned if it does not and deluged if it does, the convention must turn to a serious black elected official: Andrew Young if he is elected governor of Georgia, or Gov. Douglas Wilder of Virginia ("and let me say in defense of my fellow Virginian, General Washington ...")

But Democrats already have 90 percent of the black vote. Thanks to Jesse Jackson, the party will spend all 1992 polishing its racial bona fides, while — barring a major recession — the Bush-Quayle ticket breezes in.

That's why Republicans are so delighted Jesse turned down a serious job.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, March 7, the 66th day of 1990. There are 299 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date:

In 1849, horticulturist Luther Burbank was born in Lancaster, Mass.

In 1850, in a three-hour speech before the U.S. Senate, Daniel Webster endorsed the Compromise of 1850 as a means of preserving the Union.

In 1875, composer Maurice Ravel was born in Cibourne, France.

In 1911, the United States sent 20,000 troops to the Mexican border as a precaution in the wake of the Mexican Revolution.

In 1936, Adolf Hitler ordered his troops to march into the Rhineland, breaking the Treaty of Versailles and the Locarno Pact.

In 1945, during World War II, U.S. forces crossed the Rhine River south of Cologne, Germany.

Comic book draws crises

LONDON (AP) — The latest edition of Crisis is a first-class comic book — readable, graphic and vibrant — but it deals in human rights, not jokes or superheroes.

The twice-monthly publication, with a print run of up to 40,000, was launched a year ago and has become one of Britain's most popular comic books, telling stories of animal rights, the environment and racism.

For its latest issue, Crisis joined forces with Amnesty International, the human rights organization based in London, to bring youngsters the grim reality of such as the "Upington 14" in South Africa.

"We are going after a new, younger audience," said Dan Jones, head of campaigns at Amnesty.

Most previous stories in Crisis were fictional, but the Amnesty International edition is presented as straight fact.

The comic book tells readers how to write de Klerk and what points to make about the death penalty. "Although you might feel angry," it suggests, "it is more effective if letters are courteous."

'We don't do Florida,' says Walt Disney Co.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — News flash: Walt Disney doesn't operate in Florida.

That's what Walt Disney Co. lawyers say in response to a lawsuit by Mary Costa, the voice of Sleeping Beauty. She wants a cut of the $29 million she says the entertainment giant has earned on the 1986 videotape version of the tale.

"The Walt Disney Co. is not qualified to do business in Florida and does not do business in Florida," Disney Vice President Doris Smith said in papers filed in state court.

But what about Walt Disney World near Orlando, which has been in operation since 1971 and draws millions of visitors every year?

"Of course (Walt Disney Co.) owns subsidiaries that are present and do business in Florida," Disney lawyer Luis Bustamante said in court papers. But he said, "To uphold this (state court) order would be to declare that (Walt Disney Co.) can be sued in any state where people can buy Disney videocassettes or Mickey Mouse sweatshirts." The company wants the case heard in California.

The argument didn't sway the Palm Beach County Circuit Court, which ruled in favor of Ms. Costa, a Palm Beach opera singer.

Capitol Hill welcomes Italy's prime minister

WASHINGTON (AP) — Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti is urging the United States and Europe to forge "a new solidarity" to fight social and environmental problems around the globe with the same vigor they brought to the Cold War fight against communism.

Andreotti was addressing a joint meeting of Congress today and later receiving an honorary doctorate from Catholic University.

President Bush, at a White House dinner Tuesday night, called Andreotti "one of America's closest friends" and saluted Italy's role in shaping the new democratic Europe.

"I can think of no time in modern history when our strong transatlantic partnership was more crucial," said Bush.

Andreotti said the changes in Eastern Europe have taken place with "astounding speed," but added, "We Italians have always believed that Atlantic solidarity would one day bear fruit."

He called for the United States and Europe to work together to meet the challenges posed by drugs, environmental problems and "backwardness" and debt in developing nations.

What the United States and Europe need is "a new solidarity ... subtler than the one tested so successfully at a time when we were threatened from the exterior," the 71-year-old prime minister said.

Andreotti, who has voiced concerns that Italy and other NATO allies might be overlooked in the "two plus four" approach to German unification, said, "As ideological and military confrontations wane, Europe needs a broader framework for cooperation."

He said the Helsinki formula, an international pact that ratified post-World War II borders, should be strengthened "into a system for comprehensive dialogue" with U.S. and Canadian participation.

"Together with NATO, this is the institutional framework in which we can together tackle issues related to the growth of the budding democracies in the East, the reunification of the two Germanys and the development of the new relationship with the Soviet Union," Andreotti said.

Bush said the United States and Italy agree "on the foundations of a new Europe" and look to the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe "to play a greater role in Europe's future."

The White House said the United States had accepted a West German proposal for a "two plus four" meeting of sub-cabinet officials to discuss procedures for more substantive talks on German unification. It may be held March 14 in Bonn, but the time and location are not yet definite.

The "two plus four" are the two Germanys and the four World War II victors — the United States, Great Britain, France and the Soviet Union.

Andreotti told Italian reporters that established institutions such as NATO should not be replaced by what he called a "directorate." He said he favors convening the 16-nation NATO alliance before its customary meeting in May.

Andreotti was prime minister five times during the 1970s. He became prime minister again last July atop Italy's 49th postwar government.

He departs Thursday for Latin America and stops in the Dominican Republic, Chile, Argentina and Brazil.

President Bush and Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti share the podium at the White House Tuesday during welcoming ceremonies for the prime minister. In a planned address to both houses of Congress today, Andreotti will ask for a 'new solidarity' between Italy and the U.S. to address the 'backwardness' of developing nations and to fight global ills.

Subway derails in Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A subway train derailed during the morning rush today, and transit workers who reached the wreckage reported that three people were dead, 12 others trapped, and a car sheared in half, authorities said.

Sgt. Theresa Young, police spokeswoman, said at least 15 people were hospitalized.

The westbound train derailed just after it left the 30th Street station about 8:30 a.m., a Southeastern Pennsylvania Trans. Authority spokesman said.

As many as six cars of an eight-car train may have derailed. The train's sixth car was sheared in half, Fire Commissioner Roger Ulshafer said.

Blast causes oil spill

LINDEN, N.J. (AP) — Environmental crews early today kept watch on a fuel spill caused when a barge exploded Tuesday in a spectacular column of flame in a channel separating New Jersey from New York City.

For the third time in a week crews laid containment booms around a vessel to prevent further pollution in the busy shipping lane, called the Arthur Kill, which has been plagued by spills in New York Harbor.

Coast Guardsmen and local authorities this morning remained at a command post set up at the Citgo Petroleum Corp. docks in Linden. Guardsmen hoped to measure the amount of fuel still on the vessel today.

The spill left a slick spreading from the smoldering hulk. One person was injured.

Pool to be filled today

WASHINGTON (AP) — A retired Defense Department employee who confused the Watergate scandal with the Iran-Contra affair is now a prospective juror for John Poindexter's trial.

The retiree was among 14 people sent Tuesday into a pool of potential jurors, which now has grown to 35 during jury selection in the former national security adviser's case.

U.S. District Court Judge Harold Greene said he expected to complete a pool by midday today. Opening statements are to be Thursday morning.

Poindexter is under indictment on charges of conspiracy, two counts of obstructing Congress and two counts of making false statements. The charges relate to allegations that Poindexter covered up North's secret resupply network to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua and to allegations that Poindexter lied concerning a November 1985 shipment of Hawk anti-aircraft missiles to Iran.

Baptist races are set

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Three people are seeking offices in the Southern Baptist Convention in an effort to steer the 14.8 million-member group away from its conservative path of the past 11 years.

Steve Tondera, a former president of the Alabama Baptist State Convention, announced on Tuesday his intention to seek office as vice president.

Tondera, a senior engineer at Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, was joined at a press briefing by the Rev. Daniel Vestal of Dunwoody, Ga., and Carolyn Weatherford Crumpler of Birmingham.

Together, the three want to take power away from the conservative fundamentalists who came into force in 1979 and began appointing others with similar views to key posts on the boards of Baptist colleges and agencies.

The conservatives, now led by President Jerry Vines, say they disagree with moderates on theology — mainly the conservatives' insistence on the literal interpretation of the Bible.

JOHN M. CASTRO ENDORSES
NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

I am area manager of a utility. I support Nick Taylor for several reasons.

Nick Taylor cares deeply about victims of crime. I have worked side-by-side with Nick with the Midland Rape Crisis Center.

Another reason I support Nick is his extraordinary range of legal experience. For example, he is head of the tax, as well as other departments at his firm. He is recognized as a leading tax expert in West Texas. 25% of the pending civil cases in the Midland District Courts are tax cases. Also of great value to our community is his expertise in Business and Oil and Gas Law for 26 years. He has broad, well balanced experience.

Please join me in voting for Nick Taylor on March 13 in the Republican Primary

Williams, Hance to pull negative TV ads

AMARILLO (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams said he and primary opponent Kent Hance have decided to end their negative television campaigns.

"This morning, the staff of Kent Hance's campaign approached my staff and said they would withdraw their commercials if we would do the same," Williams said on a campaign stop in Amarillo Tuesday. "We agreed and are in the process of pulling the ads," Williams said.

Hance told Gregg County Republicans Tuesady night that "Williams' people said they would pull down their ad against me and so I agreed to pull down mine against him," The Dallas Morning News reported.

The primary election is next Tuesday.

Hance press secretary Mark Sanders said the Hance campaign wants to end the campaign on a positive note, so planned to begin airing commercials today stressing Hance's opposition to a state income tax and stressing his experience.

Hance's negative commercial criticized a $1,000 donation Williams made to Jim Mattox. Hance has charged Mattox, as state attorney general, then started an investigation into a state contract awarded to a competitor of ClayDesta, Williams' former long distance telephone company. Mattox has denied the charge.

Williams' ad shows two vague figures that the voice-over says can't seem to agree on anything. As the faces come into focus, they are both Kent Hance underscored by a series of his flip-flops on issues.

When Williams placed the ads, he said he would withdraw them if Hance withdrew his.

Williams said Tuesday that Hance had been waging a negative campaign against him and he decided to defend himself. He denied any suggestion he might be stooping to Hance's tactics or that Hance was gaining on him.

"Kent started it and we said we would defend ourselves if necessary. He has been running negative ads for a week. We have done it for two days," Williams said.

In other political developments Tuesday:

■ Judge Fred Biery warned voters of the familiar-name syndrome, but his March 13 Democratic primary opponent for a seat on the Texas Supreme Court — Gene Kelly — said he can't help it if he has a catchy sounding name.

"I am frankly concerned that Mr. Kelly's attempt to hoodwink the Texas voters may succeed," Biery, a judge on the San Antonio-based 4th Court of Appeals, said Tuesday.

Biery said that Kelly, an attorney from Universal City "is better suited to serve as a traffic court judge than a Supreme Court judge."

But Kelly said Biery was "not qualified to say I'm not qualified. I've lived the law almost as long he's been living."

Kelly, 63, said he had been a judge in the Air Force for 28 years before retiring from the military and start-

Candidates say drug question fair one to ask

AUSTIN (AP) — With applicants for some state jobs being asked whether they ever used illegal drugs, it's a fair question of anyone wanting to be governor, Republican and Democratic candidates say.

"It's a legitimate question that all the candidates should answer," said Republican Kent Hance, adding that he's never used an illegal drug.

"Is it fair to ask DPS recruits to answer the same question? Truckers? Airline pilots? A broad range of folks applying for jobs in this state? All of whom answer the same simple question? It's entirely fair to ask the person who wants to become commander-in-chief of all those folks," said Kelly Fero, spokesman for Democratic candidate Jim Mattox.

The "yes-or-no" question has been dogging Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards in recent days, and it's one asked of many Texas job seekers government jobs, officials said Tuesday.

Applicants for such posts as Texas Department of Public Safety officers and state prison guards are asked the drug question, while Texas National Guard recruits must take drug tests.

"If they're going through the trooper cadet school, that's part of the forms they have to fill out," said David Wells, DPS spokesman. He said cadet applicants — numbering 1,200 a year — are asked more detailed questions as well.

"They're asked have you ever taken illegal drugs ... what type of drugs, the number of times in your life that you have used them, the number of times in the last 12 months, and how many months ago. If they used drugs, they're asked at what occasion — a party, with friends, and so forth," Wells said.

Ms. Richards declined to answer "yes or no" when asked during two debates whether she ever used or abused illegal drugs. A recovering alcoholic, the two-term state treasurer says her addiction was alcohol and that "I haven't had a mood-altering chemical for 10 years."

On Monday, she again said the question is irrelevant and chided her election opponents and the news media for pushing it.

"No one has ever raised this question while I have been managing all of the money of the state of Texas. The only time that this question was raised was when I got in the way of these boys who wanted to be governor," she said.

Her leading Democratic foes, former Gov. Mark White and Mattox, have said they never used an illegal drug.

Both of their campaigns, along with those of Republicans Clayton Williams and Hance, said Tuesday that asking the yes-or-no question was fair in a race for governor.

"The voters of Texas are entitled to know whether or not a candidate for the highest office in the state has ever used illegal drugs," said Gary Rasp, spokesman for White.

Williams "thinks it's a fair question to ask. Part of any recovery program is being able to admit you had a problem," said Williams campaign spokesman Scott Bohnenkamp.

David Nunnelee, spokesman for the state prison system in Huntsville, said applicants for the more than 15,000 correctional officer positions are asked "a series of questions about drug use ... If they say yes, they're asked how many times and when was the last time."

Both Nunnelee and the DPS' Wells said an affirmative answer doesn't automatically disqualify an applicant.

"If someone said they tried marijuana back in high school, that wouldn't carry as much weight as if they'd used it the day before," Nunnelee said.

Rob Van Stavern, South Elementary School principal, speaks at a Tuesday reception for former South principals held in conjunction with Texas Public Schools Week. Five former principals, including one who served between 1940 and 1944, attended the ceremony.

Reception honors former principals of South Elementary

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

When Eual Donavan was the principal at South Elementary School, she did double duty as a second-grade teacher.

That was 50 years ago.

"I had a homeroom second grade and I was principal, too," said Ms. Donavan, who will celebrate her 85th birthday in June. "And if the janitor was gone I rang the bell. Principals now would die if they had a homeroom."

Ms. Donavan and four other former South principals attended a reception there Tuesday as part of Texas Public Schools Week activities.

Current South Principal Rob Van Stavern said he hoped the reception would prompt former students and teachers to come forward and share what they know about the school's history.

South's present building, excluding some recent additions, opened in 1946, Midland Independent School District records show. That makes it the oldest elementary in MISD.

But South elementary is older than even its current building.

Ms. Donavan recalls beginning her teaching career in 1924 at South, when it was a two-story red brick structure.

In 1940, she took over as principal of the school, which she said was one of only two elementary schools in the district.

She said South has changed somewhat since she resigned in 1944.

Hightower thinks he'll win primary

Commissioner says farmers need to diversify crops

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, while saying that Texas farmers will diversify their products and expand their markets, is predicting he will win the Democratic Party primary election on March 13 and then prevail in the general election.

Nine candidates, including six alleged Republicans on the Democratic Party ballot and three Republicans on the Republican Party ballot, are seeking Hightower's agricultural job.

"It takes nine of them to come get me," said Hightower, who has been commissioner of the Texas Department of Agriculture (TDA) since 1983 after he defeated TDA Commissioner Reagan Brown in 1982. "But here they come. I'm taking it seriously. We're taking those guys head on."

But, Hightower in Midland on Tuesday, said "the real opponent, of course, is not any of those six or really any of the nine. It is the chemical lobby in this state, the Farm Bureau Insurance brass down in Waco, Texas."

Hightower said research indicated the six other candidates on the Democratic Party ballot have never voted in Democratic Party elections and have pledged to support the Republican nominee in the November general election.

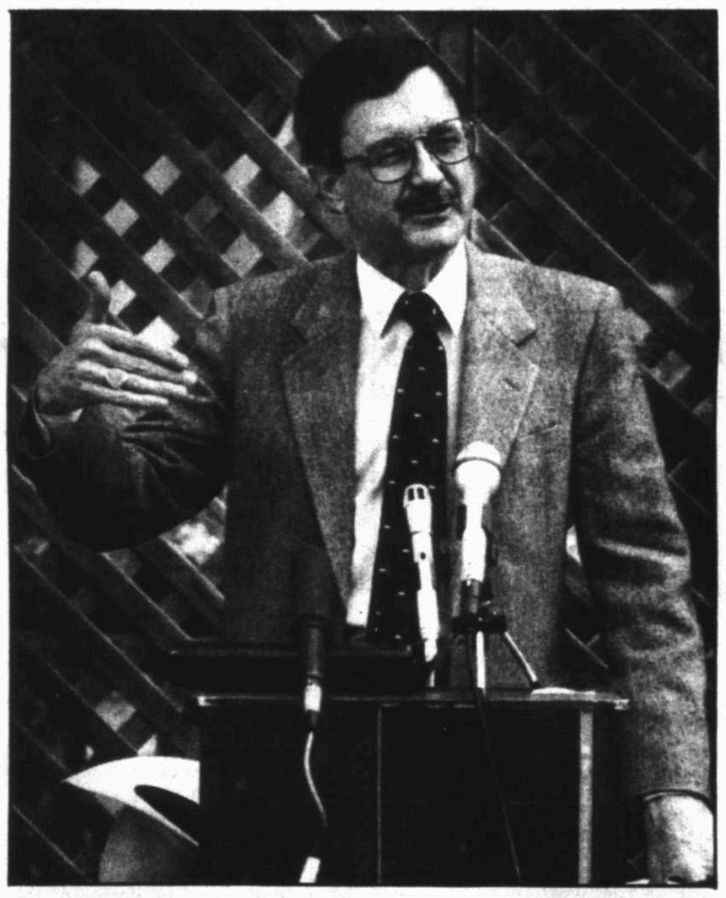
"THE SIX (other candidates) in the (Democratic) primary elections are just part of the general-election strategy of the Republicans," Hightower said.

"All six have admitted that they will vote for the Republican nominee. None of the six ... have ever voted in the Democratic primary."

As millions of dollars are being earmarked to oust him out of office, Hightower, who has been labeled a "liberal" and environmentally conscious, noted that "the price of democracy is getting higher and higher — out of reach."

Hightower's political comments, which were solicited by members of the press corps, followed his spiel on bolstering Texas agricultural economy and comments by farmers in the "mainstream" of agriculture.

"Our (TDA) program is very simply to trust in the people themselves and to seek ways to decentralize our marketing system so farmers can sell as directly as possible," Hightower said Tuesday just outside the Garden View Green House nursery in Midland.



George Wolf/Reporter-Telegram

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, campaigning in Midland, encourages farmers to diversify their crops.

"We've got thousands of cotton farmers (in Texas), hundreds of thousand of U.S. farmers, who are drowning in the present mainstream," Hightower said. And they are "drowning because they cannot get a fair price on their commodity."

"SO, THE role of leadership is not merely to float on top of the mainstream, ... but to try to widen that mainstream, to deepen the mainstream, so that we increase the opportunity for families to farm profitably."

And that stance leads to diversification in crops and innovations in the how established crops are raised.

"We in the Texas Department of Agriculture, no matter how good-looking I am down there," the commissioner jested, "cannot be the ones that generate economic recovery.

"We (at the TDA) don't do any planting," he said. "We don't do any plowing down there in Austin. What we can do, though, is to have a staff all over the state of Texas that can work with the enterprising people" on the farm and ranch.

Diversification, such as in shrimp farming, buffalo raising and vegetable-fruit growing for farmers markets and restaurant and supermarket outlets, can hold the lead "to the economic recovery that we have got to have."

"If we're not making money on cotton and cows," Hightower said, "then we ought to find some commodities that we can produce at a profit that allows us to use our natural resources very wisely."

HIGHTOWER, WHO said he has been subjected to "some criticism ... that I don't represent mainstream agriculture," introduced mainstreamers, including cotton farmers Vernon and Naomi Chandler of Midland, vegetable gardeners Jerome and Betty Hoelscher of Midkiff, shrimp farmers Jack and Pam Parker of Iraan, relish-chow-chow producer K.T. McLeaish of Odessa, and nurserymen George and Silva Hernandez of Midland's Garden View Green House.

Hoelscher is president of the Permian Basin Farmers Market, which has markets in Midland, Odessa and Big Spring.

"We have done pretty good in the farmers market," which is geared to help supplement farmers' income and to offer consumers home-grown produce, Hoelscher said. In the 1989 June-October harvest, 40 farmers had sales of $125,000 in the market.

"Well, these folks right here are mainstream," Hightower said of the farmers. "You don't get a whole lot more mainstream than Vernon and Naomi Chandler, cotton farmers."

Chandler has installed a drip-irrigation system designed by the Israelis and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX).

"And that thing works," the farmer said. "It sure does."

"I'VE RAISED up to three bales per acre of cotton (on the drip-irrigation system) with the same amount of water" that produced "half that much cotton per acre" with the traditional sprinkler system," Chandler said. "It works. It saves water. Might save my financial situation, too."

Hightower talked about Texas-grown shrimp. "And they are tasty."

Jack and Pam Parker, who ran a testing operation last year, expect to produce 24,000 pounds of shrimp in seven acres of salt-water ponds this year.

"Texas farmers can diversify and grow small but highly-profitably crops," Hightower said. "Because of programs developed by the Texas Department of Agriculture, producers now have direct access to markets of all sizes across the state, in other states and even in foreign countries," he said. "TDA employees are ready to roll up their sleeves and help producers who want to take advantage of these opportunities."

Legislators to refine fee, gift reporting law

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A Texas House leader in charge of ethics reform Tuesday said his committee will concentrate on tightening reporting requirements for lobbyists and legislators during the current special legislative session and leave more comprehensive campaign finance reform for the regular session in 1991.

Rep. Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, State Affairs Committee chairman, said he expects to come up with a bill to require lawmakers to report fees they receive for speaking engagements, to clarify what income and expenses legislators and lobbyists are required to report and to prohibit campaign contributions in the Capitol and state offices.

House Speaker Gib Lewis gave Laney no instructions when he put him in charge of ethics reform, Laney said, but the main questions lawmakers have concern what they are required to report.

Sen. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, chairman of a Senate subcommittee studying ethics reform, has drafted a bill Laney expects to co-sponsor that would require lobbyists to detail which lawmakers receive meals, trips, entertainment or other gifts worth more than $250.

Under current law, lobbyists only report the total amounts they spend and legislators are not required to report trips or gifts they receive.

Rep. Lena Guerrero, D-Austin, vice chairman of the committee, has drafted a bill based on Comptroller Bob Bullock's plan that also includes tougher reporting requirements.

Laney said he expects to consider proposals next week and be prepared if the governor allows them to take up the issue.

"I think the will of the Legislature is to fix whatever's wrong with education and the judiciary and if the governor puts this in to get it fixed and go home," Laney said.

Gov. Bill Clements has said he would consider adding ethics reform only after progress is made on school finance and judicial selection.

Pam Fridrich, executive director of Common Cause of Texas, said establishment of an ethics commission with enforcement powers and comprehensive campaign finance reform may be left to a regular session, but she said the Legislature should consider increasing reporting requirements and prohibiting lobbyist-paid trips for legislators.

Ms. Fridrich said voters might be more willing to approve a legislative pay raise if there was substantial ethics reform, but Laney said he doubts there is much of a link between the two topics.

"I don't think there's enough direct correlation to sway an election either way," he said, adding that he does not envision another try for a pay raise this year.

"I think we'd better get the finances of the state in shape to finance the state government before we start talking about pay raises again," he said.

Tom Smith, state director of Public Citizen, noted that a Texas Poll in November showed overwhelming majorities of Texans support limits on gifts and free trips and meals for legislators.

He noted that lobbyists spent at least $1.8 million, an average of $10,000 per legislator, during the regular session, but he also noted that $4.7 million, or an average of $100,000 each, was contributed to the officeholder accounts of the 46 com-

City officials to put limits on outdoor store displays

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

The news in the May 26, 1989, letter from the city of Midland hit Mike Hughes about as hard as a battalion of hungry aphids descending on a flourishing garden of succulent flowers.

Not long after he obeyed the city's order to remove the lawn and garden equipment displayed in front of his business, Hughes said he saw profits wilt by about 25 percent.

Hughes, owner of Ken's Rent It Center, 2900 W. Wall St., said Tuesday that the city's recent proposal to make him put a wall around his outdoor displays will not help his business.

"It was one of the few methods of free advertising," Hughes said of putting out his shiny new tractors and riding lawnmowers for public view. "To me it was extremely beneficial.

"We have been complimented many times that that bright new Snapper tractor looked good there on the grass."

After four years of consideration, city officials this week have proposed allowing certain businesses operating under the strictest of city zoning requirements to display or store their wares outdoors.

Duson

Born Aug. 14, 1923 in Texarkana, she had been a Midland resident since 1953.

Survivors include three sons, Levi Duson Jr., of Houston, Kenneth R. Duson of Fort Worth and Howard G. Doran of Midland; three sisters, Ida V. Ervin, Ella Mae Garner and Josephine Gillam, all of Midland; and one brother, Jessie Fitzpatrick of Oakland, Calif.

Phyllis Bull

ABILENE — Phyllis A. Bull, 62, of Abilene and mother of Eddie U. Bull Jr. of Midland, died Monday in an Abilene hospital.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at the First Baptist Church of Abilene with Dr. Bill Bruster and Sue Rowlett officiating. Private graveside services will follow in the Midway Cemetery directed by Elliott-Hamil Funeral Home.

Mrs. Bull was born in Sioux City, Iowa, and grew up in La Mars, Iowa. She graduated from high school in Omaha, Neb. In January of 1948 she graduated from North West Texas Hospital School of Nursing in Amarillo. She moved to Abilene in 1952 and lived there until 1962. At that time she moved to Amarillo, before returning to Abilene in 1985.

She was a registered nurse with Orthopedic Associates for more than 20 years and with Hendrick Medical Center for five years. From 1987-89 she was with Hospice of Abilene as patient care coordinator.

Since graduation from nursing school she has been an active member of the Texas Nurses Association and the American Nurses Association, serving on various committees and holding offices at the local and state levels.

She was a member of the First Baptist Church.

Survivors include her husband, Eddie Bull of Abilene; a daughter, Shirley Hamilton of Austin; another son, John Bull of Abilene; her mother, Edith Burkett of Abilene; three brothers, Kenneth Burkett of St. Joseph, Mo., John Burkett of Alexandria, Va., and Terry Burkett of Austin; three sisters, Jeanne Olsen of Elkpoint, S.D., Linda Smith of Athens, Ga., and Margery Barnhill of Abilene; and five grandchildren.

Memorials may be made to Hospice of Abilene, P.O. Box 1922, Abilene, Texas, 79604, or to "Touch of Life," Hendrick Medical Center Foundation Office, 1242 N. 19th Street, Abilene, Texas, 79601.

Guy Shelley

Funeral services for Guy D. Shelley Jr., 65, are set for 3 p.m. Thursday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Dr. Ray Riddle officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Tuesday at a local hospital.

Born in Little Rock, Ark., on Oct. 19, 1924, he was raised in Clarendon. He served in the U.S. Marine Corps during World War II at Iwo Jima and throughout the Pacific Theater.

After his discharge, he attended Texas Tech University and the University of Arizona at Flagstaff. He was self-employed in Medford, Ore., before moving to Fort Baird, N.M., where he worked as a family counselor for the state government. He was named outstanding employee for the State of New Mexico in 1982.

He married Sue B. Norris on Jan. 7, 1989, when he moved to Midland. Shelley was an Episcopalian.

Survivors include his wife; three daughters, Roberta Anderson, Margaret Shelley and Elizabeth Shelley, all of San Diego; two step-daughters, Linda Mach and Ciarra Norris, both of Dallas; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Guy D. Shelley of Hobbs, N.M.; four brothers, Ted Shelley of Hobbs, Jack Shelley of Garland, Fred Shelley of Greensboro, N.C., and Ben Shelley of Abilene and one son, Guy Shelley, Jr., of Sparta, Wisc.

Ina Mitchell

Graveside services for Ina L. Mitchell of Midland have been set for 11 a.m. Friday at the Memorial Park Cemetery in Enid, Okla., with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

She died Monday at a local hospital.

She was born Jan. 29, 1905 in Plain Dealing, La., and was reared in Altus, Okla. She and her family moved to Arkansas when she was 13. In 1925 they moved to Enid, Okla. Ms. Mitchell became a school teacher and received her master's degree from Phillips University in Enid. She lived in California for a brief time before returning to Enid. She taught school there and later was a principal. In 1970 she retired and in 1978 she moved to Midland to be near her family. She was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Enid.

Survivors include two brothers, James Edward Mitchell of Enid and John L. Mitchell of Midland; one sister, Joetta Potter of Houston; and numerous nieces and nephews.

DISPLAY

However, the display must be screened from public view by an 8-foot wall and may take up only 10 percent of the business' floor area, the proposal states.

"That's totally unacceptable," Hughes responded. "If I put a wall around my display, it totally defeats the purpose of what I plan to do."

David Thurbon, assistant director of city planning, said the code amendment is needed to not only maintain aesthetic quality within the city but to appease those formerly unable to have any outdoor displays and storage.

Local businessmen an nursery owners in 1985 complained that other businesses were unfairly slipping through holes in the city's outdoor display and storage code.

Department stores such as Wal-Mart, which operated in a less restrictive zone, initially were allowed to open outdoor plant displays in areas where nurseries were not permitted to locate.

Meanwhile, nursery owners were forced to set up shop in more restrictive, sometimes less commercially attractive zones, the businessmen said.

City officials decided to allow department store owners to keep their outside displays, but they had to be screened from public view. City councilmen, on a case-by-case basis, were to review requests for the displays.

But in 1986, councilmen asked planning and zoning officials to revise the display code. The code amendment was unveiled in early February and finalized this week.

Thurbon said it took four years to write the code revision because planners decided to not only address department stores but all businesses which may want outdoor displays.

The code proposal does not apply to stores setting up seasonal outdoor displays, such as Christmas trees and firewood.

"The biggest advantage is for department-type stores wanting to have a garden center," Thurbon said. "I don't think it's going to affect many businesses other than that."

The Midland Planning and Zoning Commission considered restricting outdoor displays by gas stations, which have racks of new tires near the curbs and stacks of oil bottles next to the gas pumps.

Commissioners, though, decided to propose allowing gas stations to display tires, batteries and liquids, such as bottles of oil and antifreeze, outside without having to surround them with a wall.

"The commissioners felt like those displays were traditional," Thurbon said.

Commissioners will review the proposal at least one more time before it goes before City Council for review in late April, Thurbon said.

Big Spring mayor recall election set

Staff Report

BIG SPRING — March 24 is D-Day.

The Big Spring City Council on Tuesday set the fourth Saturday in March as the date for the recall election of Mayor Maxwell Green.

Absentee voting at the city secretary's office in City Hall will begin on March 12, running through March 20, four days before the election.

Usual polling places will be used at six locations throughout the city.

A publication, Citifax, by Citizens Against the Recall Election (CARE) has begun circulating in the city in support of the embattled 10-month mayor.

The two-page, typewritten newsletter calls the recall effort "a railroad job pure and simple."

Neither of the group's co-chairmen Fran Jansch and Roy Thorton were available for comment this morning.

DHS to aid adopted youths

Staff Report

AUSTIN — The Texas Department of Human Services (DHS) is now offering programs to help adopted children who are victims of past abuse or neglect adjust to their new families.

"Finding permanent families for children who were abused by their birth parents isn't enough," said Gwendolyn Gordon, DHS spokesperson, in a news release. "They need to learn how to live in a healthy family environment, and their adoptive families need to understand and learn how to cope with the effects of the past abuse."

Parent education and support groups, 24-hour crisis intervention and counseling for all family members are among the services available to eligible children and families. To qualify, the adopted children must have been in DHS custody or received adoption assistance benefits from DHS. An estimated 1,400 adopted children under age 18 and their families will take advantage of the post-adoption services during the fiscal year ending August 1990.

Supporting children and families after the adoption is complete will help them form solid, permanent relationships, said Gordon. "We believe it will make a real difference in achieving family unity and permanence," she said.

House Bill 1806, passed during the last regular session of the Texas Legislature, authorized DHS to provide the services. State funds totaling $2,249,610 will be spent on the services during fiscal year 1990, and additional funds were appropriated for fiscal year 1991.

Kidnapping being probed

Staff Report

BIG SPRING — Police here are investigating the possible kidnapping Sunday of a woman from a local church, a police department official said today.

Det. Sgt. John Leudner said witnesses reported that Lanette Lister, 27, was abducted at gunpoint by her estranged husband between 9:45 p.m. and 10 p.m. Sunday.

Witnesses said the gunman fired a single shot through the roof of the church before leaving with Ms. Lister in tow.

The name of the church was being withheld.

Leudner said Big Spring police do not know the whereabouts of Ms. Lister or her abductor, but have notified police in surrounding states about the kidnapping.

An FBI agent and a Texas Ranger have been assisting with the investigation, Leudner said.

Big Spring plans art show

Staff Report

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring Art Association will present its annual Area Show on Saturday and Sunday at the Big Spring Mall.

Entries may be submitted between 4 and 9 p.m. on Thursday and Friday.

All media, including photographs and three-dimensional, will be accepted for exhibition.

For additional information, call Jo Weeks at (915) 267-6114 or Jerry Williams at (915) 263-7155.

Governor debates to air

Staff Report

One-hour gubernatorial debates will air locally tonight and Thursday at 8 p.m. on KCRS, 550 AM. This evening, the Republican contenders will face off, while the Democrats will take their turn Thursday.

The League of Women Voters is sponsoring the debates.

"It's changed for the better," she said, looking around the school's new multipurpose building. "They have many things to use, you know. We were very poor back then. We had very little equipment."

Despite harsh conditions, though, at least one of Ms. Donavan's pupils went on to make something of himself.

He also remembers serving as South's principal himself between 1966 and 1968.

Hightower said being principal of a school he had attended was an "interesting" experience.

"A lot of the children that I had were sons and daughters of my classmates, so it was like I was coming home," he said.

Of his own school days, Hightower recalled that "Ms. Donavan taught us how to dance. Back then we did a lot of operettas and stage production. She kept us busy."

Clinton Adams, who was the South principal from 1968 to 1974, said he enjoyed Tuesday's homecoming.

"I appreciated the opportunity to get to come back," said Adams, who now is the Milam elementary principal. "There are a lot of nice memories in this school."

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

As the ad states, "Just do it!" — volunteer. Here are just a few of the opportunities currently available through the Volunteer Center of Midland.

■ Clean up on this volunteer opportunity. You and your group can assist in a massive anti-litter campaign scheduled for Saturday, March 31 from 9:30 a.m. until 1 p.m. Volunteers — individuals, families, groups — are needed to pick up litter at selected sites. Bags, painter's caps, refreshments and prizes will be provided.

■ Ten families are waiting for parent partners. Volunteers make a weekly home visit to teach families communication skills, child development, and positive discipline techniques. Training and curriculum is provided. Scheduling is flexible and satisfaction is considerable.

■ Can you work effectively in a crisis situation? Do you have strong communication skills and are able to handle sensitive situations? Then become a crisis intervention volunteer and assist law enforcement personnel. Training will include both classroom instruction and field work. The next training begins Monday, March 19.

■ An agency that provides a hotline for victims of sexual assault will be training new volunteers on Tuesdays March 27 through May 1. Both male and female volunteers are needed.

■ Help create a new world of opportunities by volunteering as a teacher's aide in an English as a Second Language class that meets Tuesday and Thursday evenings 7-9 p.m. Or assist with an amnesty literacy class on Tuesday and Thursday evenings 6:30-9 p.m. A bilingual volunteer is preferred for the ESL class and you may volunteer for one or two evenings with either program.

■ Have questions or a problem? The only number you need is 697-HELP. Call Information and Referral Midland — 697-HELP.

Tips sought on recent robbery of Dixie's Lounge in Odessa

Staff Report

Odessa Crimestoppers this week is asking for the public's help in solving an aggravated robbery.

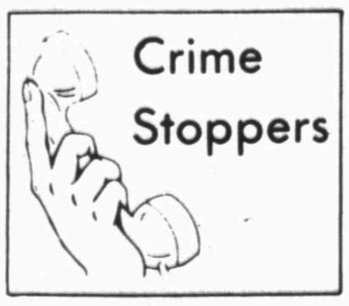
On Feb. 20, two men entered Dixie's Lounge with weapons about 12:55 a.m. and demanded money. Both suspects were wearing ski masks.

One of the men was armed with a sawed off shotgun and fired one round into the west wall of the lounge. He then ordered the customers to lay face down on the floor.

The other suspect ordered a female customer to open the cash register while holding a knife to her neck. When she was unable to open the register, the first suspect struck her across the shoulder with the butt of the shotgun.

At this time, Odessa police detectives have no leads and are asking for help in solving this robbery.

If you have information that leads to the arrest and indictment of those involved in this robbery, it could be worth up to $1,000 cash reward to you this week only.



Crimestoppers pays cash rewards for information leading to the arrest of felony criminals and wanted fugitives.

Cash rewards also are offered for the recovery of stolen propety and seized narcotics worth over $1,000.

Call Det. Cpl. Terry Gettings or Det. Cpl. Dean Johnston with Odessa Crimestoppers at 333-TIPS. In Midland, call 694-TIPS.

Colombian working for Houston firm kidnapped

HOUSTON (AP) — A Colombian terrorist group is demanding $15 million in ransom for the release of a Colombian national working for a Houston-based company in Bogota.

William Cuero, a native Colombian, is believed to have been abducted by the National Liberation Army, officials with Western Geophysical Co. told the Houston Chronicle.

The company said guerrillas told them the group intended to kidnap an American, but could find none and took Cuero.

Western Geophysical suspended work Monday on an oil exploration project in Bogota and laid off 200 Colombian employees after Cuero was abducted. The employees had been hired as part of a seismic project commissioned by Ecopetrol, the Colombian national oil firm, officials said.

Western Geophysical has refused to pay the ransom and is providing little information on the kidnapping in fear for Cuero's safety, the newspaper reported.

"The more they (terrorists) are in the dark, the better," company spokesman Jaen Lawrence said.

The abduction took place in Madgalena Medio, a tropical central region of the country. No other details were given.

The guerrilla group is headed by former Spaniard priest Manuel Perez, who declared a "total war against American interests" in Colombia two weeks ago.

Western Geophysical is a joint venture of Beverly Hills, Calif.-based Litton and Dallas-based Dresser Industries Inc.

Gordon Barrows, owner of the Barrows Co., a New York-based firm that tracks laws and other data affecting oil companies in foreign countries, estimated more than 100 petroleum company employees have been kidnapped in the past decade in Colombia.

"It's been like this for at least 10 years, and it's getting worse," he said.

Last month, the Liberation Army kidnapped and freed three American hostages abducted as part of its "Operation Colombia" campaign, designed to protest U.S. intervention in Latin America.

Houston jewelers learn success begins with the little things

HOUSTON (AP) — Maybe it's a little farfetched to dub them Kings of Earrings, but Tony Armato, Ted Fees and Julian "Coy" Esquivel feel they're closing in on the title.

Their business — Jewellians — began several years ago, almost as a lark, when Esquivel's brother suggested they make one-of-a-kind earrings that he would sell in his gallery in Dallas. "So we had earring awareness, even in '85 and '86," said Armato, "but the earrings never really got to The Red Gallery in Dallas." Instead Esquivel would take a few samples to work with him as he cut and styled hair at J. Christopher's salon on Richmond each day. Esquivel's ladies liked him, and they loved the earrings.

Fashion photographer Armato and graphic designer Fees had known each other since college at the Rochester Institute of Technology in New York state. Fees met hairdresser Esquivel, from an Odessa family of 13 children, when he moved to Texas after graduation. Later, when Armato announced he'd had enough of the Big Apple, Fees convinced him that Houston, not California, was the place to be.

The trio's first earring design looked simple enough, like smudged gold-and-black potato chips. But while the polycarbon resin earrings were nearly as big as Idahos, they were as light as Charles Chips. Because those women who wear big earrings often complain that by mid-afternoon their ears are in agony, less weight meant more sales.

The profits were pretty amazing. What the three could manufacture in their apartment ovens for a few cents sometimes sold for as much as $125 a pair.

Coming up with original designs was no problem. They drew from what they saw in life — the bigger the better. "Once we were at the grocery and we saw a fruit with a really unusual seed. You know, it was the Kiwi of 1989 or something," said Esquivel. "So we said, 'Let's make an earring out of it.'" And they did.

The earring manufacturing, while crazy in the early years, usually came off as ordered. Jewellians rented the apartment below Armato's and put the kitchen to use baking their designs on cookie sheets. Sales were another problem, however.

While the earrings sold successfully in several Houston shops, including the Museum of Fine Arts, they knew a good agent would be the secret to wider distribution. "Finally we met a guy who opened our case and literally fell to his knees," said Armato. "'You're gonna make me rich,' he yelled."

Back then, six orders were a lot. Now, Jewellians handles some 60 orders for the holiday season and grosses $225,000 per year. Whereas they started with six clients, they now have 400.

The men quickly had a line consisting of 500 designs available in 41 different finishes. "It was like insanity," said Fees, "too much trouble to satisfy the customers." They soon learned they would have to limit their designs to 200 or less and a handful of finishes.

Eventually, Jewellians moved to bigger and better ventilated quarters in the warehouse portion of Fees' design studio in the Bellaire area.

'Port-a-cells' will be used to hold rowdy students in town for break

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Law enforcement agencies along the Texas coastline have pulled together a game plan for this weekend, when thousands of vacationing college students are expected to arrive.

Representatives from the Nueces County Sheriff's Department, the Department of Public Safety, the U.S. Coast Guard, and police departments from Port Aransas and Corpus Christi met this week to make plans for Spring Break 1990.

"No one agency can do it all by themselves," said Corpus Christi Police Chief Henry Garrett. "We all work together. With more than 100,000 (students anticipated), we're tremendously outnumbered."

The plan calls for 40 mobile units to be posted on the streets when the rush begins on North Padre and Mustang Islands.

One innovation will be the use of temporary holding cells, which will be set up in Port Aransas to house those arrested on Class C misdemeanors, including public intoxication. Each "cage" can hold eight persons, according to Port Aransas City Manager Gordon Beck.

"We expect crowds to be coming in Friday afternoon," Port Aransas Police Chief Don Perkins said. "We will have all the officers on 12-hour shifts."

Spring break begins Friday for students at Baylor, Texas, Texas A&M, SMU, North Texas and more than 30 other colleges.

Last year's spring break was relatively safe, but nine people were killed in auto accidents on Texas Highway 361 during spring break in 1988.

Six motorcycle officers will patrol the beach area from noon to 8 p.m. daily, beginning Friday, Garret said.

"Our objective is not really to put people in jail," Garrett told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times. "It's to see that they get on and off the island as safely as possible."

THURSDAY, MARCH 8, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Be careful about choosing sides. There is no need to make an associate's enemies your own. Review your investments in June and you could find the business opportunity you have been looking for. A low-key approach will work best with conservative financial backers. Your generous nature may make it difficult for you to say "no" to a friend in November. Put your family's needs first. A valuable item resurfaces.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: composer Carole Bayer Sager, dancer Cyd Charisse, actress Lynn Redgrave, slugger Jim Rice.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your intuition guides you to new success now. Say "yes" to an unusual financial opportunity. It is high time those you have helped help you. Review your investments and insurance policies.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Confidential chats with someone brilliant could lead to a new alliance. Pursue a special dream! Stick to traditional values even if your peers try to persuade you to do otherwise. Principles are vital.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Coordinate everything you are responsible for at work or someone's mistakes could cost you. You must have faith in what you are doing before you can convince others. Give mate your wholehearted support.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will fare best on your own today; make all final decisions personally. Joint financial matters take a turn for the better. Learn to read between the lines when dealing with relatives.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A rush job will challenge your creativity. You can make a terrific impression on an influential person. Try not to be so sensitive. A business or social date could be cancelled. Remain calm.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Being discreet about a business matter will impress a VIP. Stay cool if someone tries to get a rise out of you. Welcoming constructive changes makes you a winner. Your family is supportive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your business life seems to be in the hands of Fate. Investment dividends could increase if you handle things right. Seek experts' advice. A sibling plays a major role in a matter that affects your future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Unconscious anger could be influencing your decisions. Make a special effort to think positive. Something you thought lost forever will turn up. Seek a reconciliation with a loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Staging a lively event will improve the bottom line in business. A visitor offers top dollar for a creative project. A conversation with member of the opposite sex gives you wonderful insights.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Review your investments and consult experts if necessary. Someone whose actions are unreasonable may not feel well. Think twice before committing yourself to a major project.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your partner's success is something to crow about! News from those at a distance should be favorable. Return calls and answer your mail promptly. Spend time with a friend who shares your interests.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Put your anger to constructive use. Check your bank statement for possible mistakes. You enjoy wordless communication with a family member or romantic partner. Show respect. Be on time to all appointments.

Opening lead: King of ♠

When we were learning the game, we were told there are some things you "never" do. As we grew older, we found that what you should do is remove the use of the words "never" and "always" from your bridge vocabulary.

North's double of one spade was "negative," i.e, a takeout for the unbid suits. With interest in one suit, and only one, and eight tricks in hand, the vulnerable game was a reasonable shot and South took it.

West led the king of spades. East overtook with the ace and returned a spade, West cashed a third spade trick to complete the defensive book. On this trick East discarded a low diamond. West shifted to the queen of clubs and, when trumps were no worse than 3-2, declarer had the rest of the tricks.

East would have done better to discard a low club rather than a diamond, to deny any interest in that suit, but West must shoulder the blame for not defeating the hand. Since South had not preempted at his opening turn, and bid strongly later, it was naive of West to think his partner might have the ace of clubs.

With the king of diamonds in front of dummy's ace-queen, West should have realized the defenders had no more tricks coming to them in the plain suits. If the contract could be defeated, the setting trick would have to come from the trump suit.

The only hope was that East held the ten of hearts and it could be used to uppercut declarer. West should have continued with a fourth round of spades and East can complete a winning defense by ruffing with the ten. That forces declarer to overuff with an honor and the jack of trumps is promoted to the setting trick.

Vet portrayed in 'Born on the Fourth of July' won't be running for Congress

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ron Kovic, the disabled Vietnam veteran whose life is depicted in the film "Born on the Fourth of July," has decided against running for Congress against an archconservative Republican.

Kovic

Kovic, whose candidacy local Democratic leaders had sought, gave no explanation Tuesday for his decision not to challenge Rep. Robert Dornan. He released a statement that said only:

"I've decided not to run."

Kovic, 43, was nominated for an Oscar for co-writing the screenplay for the Oliver Stone film. Tom Cruise, who plays Kovic in the movie, had promised to walk the precincts if Kovic ran.

"I'm real disappointed," said Orange County Democratic Chairman Michael Balmages.

Dornan took the Kovic challenge seriously, sending out 20,000 fund-raising letters that portrayed Kovic as an ultraliberal.

"This guy would have made me raise at least $1 million," Dornan said by telephone from Washington. "That's money now I could spend somewhere else."

The film, based on a book by Kovic, traces Kovic's conversion from a strong supporter of the Vietnam war to a disillusioned anti-war activist.

"The movie shows Kovic in a panic and mistakenly shooting his corporal to death in Vietnam, visiting prostitutes, abusing drugs and alcohol and cruelly insulting his parents," Dornan's mailer said. "And this is a person the liberals want in the U.S. Congress. No way."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Party chairman Lee Atwater will undergo treatment for a benign growth on the right side of his brain and his doctor says he should be back at work next week.

"No surgery is planned and we expect no difficulty with followup treatments," Dr. Edward R. Laws said Tuesday.

Mary Matalin, chief of staff at the Republican National Committee, said it was "business as usual at the RNC, except for the fact that what used to be the chairman's office is now a flower shop."

Matalin said Atwater "has stayed on top of political developments across the country and is eager to get back to work."

Laws, chairman of the department of Neurosurgery at George Washington University Medical Center, said Atwater should be able to resume "a reasonable work schedule and normal activities next week."

"I've never led a normal life," an aide quoted Atwater as saying.

He was rushed to a hospital, and doctors performed a needle biopsy Tuesday morning, a procedure in which a thin needle is used to remove cells from the affected area.

Laws did not specify the non-surgical treatment, but radiation is commonly used in such cases.

A native of South Carolina, the 39-year-old Atwater managed President Bush's 1988 campaign and was the president's choice to become chairman of the Republican National Committee.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jim Davis, creator of the comic strip "Garfield," has been honored by the state of Indiana for helping to plant 35,000 seedlings.

Davis, whose mischievous cat appears in thousands of newspapers, won the National Arbor Day Foundation's Good Steward Award.

Working with resources officials, he also has been involved in restoring prairie, forest and wetlands around his office in rural Muncie, and has developed plans to plant millions more tree seedlings on marginal farmland.

"His attitude toward natural resources conservation is one all Hoosiers should share," Natural Resources Director Patrick R. Ralston said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man accused of sending threatening letters to "Remington Steele" TV star Stephanie Zimbalist was denied bail at his own request after he said his mother would be burdened by posting bail.

"It's not often I get to give a defendant exactly what he wants," U.S. Magistrate Joseph Reichmann told Michael Lawrence Shields, 42, of Plymouth, Mich.

Shields was arrested Friday and charged with three counts of mailing threatening letters. Shields allegedly sent 212 letters and cards to the 33-year-old actress, most of them signed, "Your Secret Admirer."

The letters included such phrases as "I have in mind some mischief" and "You can run but you can't hide."

At Tuesday's bail hearing, Shields' lawyer, Morton Boren, started to argue for Shields' release on $25,000 bail.Reichmann interrupted, saying Shields had told probation officers that he did not want to burden his mother.

Miss Zimbalist, the daughter of actor Efrem Zimbalist Jr., played sleuth Laura Holt on NBC's "Remington Steele," which ran from 1982 through 1986. She is appearing in "Baby Dance" at the Pasadena Playhouse.

Philip Minges, the actress's spokesman, said she was "obviously relieved" Shields was in custody.

FBI agents said they found Shields because his last letter told Miss Zimbalist he would be coming to Southern California and gave his flight number and the name of the hotel.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bryant Gumbel, co-host of NBC's "Today" show, will become the latest network news star to be interviewed by another when Barbara Walters puts the microphone to him for ABC's "20-20."

The interview will run March 16, ABC announced Tuesday.

Gumbel

Bob Costas, whose late-night NBC show last month featured his interview with ABC "Nightline" anchorman Ted Koppel, himself recently was interviewed by Dick Cavett for the "The Dick Cavett Show" on cable television's CNBC.

That program was to be shown today.

ATLANTA (AP) — Fresh from a key negotiating role in Nicaragua, former President Jimmy Carter is departing Sunday for Egypt, Syria, Jordan and Israel on a fact-finding trip with his wife, Rosalynn.

Stein will accompany the Carters, who returned last week from Nicaragua, where they led an election observer team and helped in negotiations afterward between the ruling Sandinista party and the victorious opposition.

Cavazos says more money won't solve school funding issue

Hearst News Service

AUSTIN — U.S. Secretary of Education Lauro Cavazos ran into a wall of angry opposition from Hispanic and Democratic lawmakers Tuesday when he told Texas legislators struggling to reform the state's school system that more money is not the answer.

Cavazos

Cavazos, a native of Texas and former president of Texas Tech University, addressed a joint session of the Texas House and Senate. Lawmakers are meeting in special session to address a Texas Supreme Court ruling that huge funding differences between the state's rich and poor school districts is unconstitutional.

The speech hit at the heart of differences between Democratic legislative leaders who believe that increased spending will be necessary to equalize schools, and Republicans, led by Gov. Bill Clements, who believe equity can be reached within the existing budget and by implementing changes in school administration.

Three Democratic lawmakers were so angered by the speech that they left the chamber in the middle of the address. Others said that Cavazos' speech had undermined efforts to deal with the court ruling. But Clements and other Republicans hailed the remarks.

Cavazos used the speech to promote many ideas of President Bush's administration that the nation should restructure its schools to provide more local control and accountability and that parents should be able to choose the schools their children attend.

"Money is not the only answer," Cavazos said. "It is clearly not the answer to the education deficit."

Lawmakers who have been fighting for more funding for schools reacted angrily to Cavazos' comments.

"That wasn't a speech for education. It was an apology for Republican policy," said Senate Education Chairman Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur. "I am sorely disappointed that the secretary of education does not have a better grasp of problems facing education in this state."

Parker, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Senate Finance Committee Chairman Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, have proposed a bill that would increase funding by $800 million beginning the next school year.

Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, and Reps. Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, and Gregory Luna, D-San Antonio, angrily left the House chamber in the middle of the address.

"I am angry at what Cavazos had to say. He has wound up being a mouthpiece for the Bush administration and nothing more," said Uribe.

Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, chairman of the House Mexican American caucus, said: "Today, unfortunately, was a sad and shameful day for all Hispanics in the state of Texas.

"It seems to me before we educate our children, we need to educate the secretary of education on what the problems are in this state where he was born and educated." Rep. Cavazos is not related to the education secretary.

Rep. Dalton Smith, R-Houston, said he thought Cavazos was "absolutely on track."

Drug problem will be studied from street level

AUSTIN (AP) — A 14-member task force will take a look at drug abuse as police and drug counselors see it, says the task force chairman.

"We're going to take you to some crack houses ... we're going to ask you to go on drug raids — we're not going to ask you to kick in the door," state Sen. Ted Lyon told the inaugural meeting of the Texas Task Force on State and Local Drug Control Tuesday.

"I'm going to ask you to spend a lot of time...going around the state talking to people who are involved in this problem on a street-level basis," Lyon, committee chairman and a former police officer, said.

The Rockwall Democrat said the panel would visit prisons to talk to inmates.

After additional hearings — in Austin, as well as McAllen, Laredo, Houston, Tyler, Dallas, El Paso, Amarillo, Lubbock and Beaumont — Lyon said he wanted a report completed by mid-summer.

"I think we have a tremendous opportunity if we get our report done" early enough "then perhaps that will be a focal point of the elections this fall," he said.

"What's cooking in the kitchen? Crack's cooking in the kitchen," said Rep. Carolyn Park, R-Bedford, a committee member.

She said people talk about a "service station on every corner — we're going to see the day when there's a drug treatment center on every corner."

Charles Terrell of Dallas, chairman of the Texas Criminal Justice Board, was critical of federal drug efforts.

"We are up against heavyweights, and (drug czar) William Bennett and his program are lightweights," he said. "We should not call it a 'War on Drugs,' as they do in Washington, unless we are prepared to dedicate a 'wartime budget' to the cause, including the possibility of tax increases."

"I ask you, how can we spend $150 billion on the savings and loan bailout and only $10 billion in a war to save our nation?"

Terrell, citing a "drug problem that is out of control," suggested mandatory drug education in every classroom, beginning with first grade; funding of 24-hour drug courts in large cities; use of former military bases as penal facilities for drug offenders; and front-page newspaper notices identifying users.

"We're going to take you to some crack houses ... we're going to ask you to go on drug raids...(talk) to people who are involved in this problem on a street-level basis."

Surveyor may be state's oldest official

FREDERICKSBURG, Texas (AP) — Felix Itz drives to work every day as Runnels County surveyor, takes field notes and searches courthouse records.

Nothing much special about that except that Itz turned 100 years old Monday. About 170 people gathered Sunday at the American Legion Hall for a birthday party.

"I'm just piddling around," says Itz, a man of few words.

And asked to explain his long life, Itz replies: "I haven't passed on yet."

Friends and family told the Houston Chronicle they believe Itz is the oldest elected official in Texas.

Itz plans to remain on the job until his current four-year term expires on Dec. 31.

"Grandma always complained that he worked too hard," Nancy Simpson, a granddaughter, says. Itz's wife of 67 years, Zelma, died in 1981.

His son, Milford, 73, already has retired. So has his 87-year-old baby sister, Cora Lehne.

He's lived in Ballinger since 1949 although he was born in Fredericksburg, where much of his family still lives. He got his civil engineering degree from Texas A&M University in 1911, making his the school's oldest living alumnus.

He actually retired once — from the state highway department — in 1958 but became tired of that. He ran for the county surveyor's job at the age of 69 and has held it since, without opposition.

STATE IN BRIEF

Couple convicted for making fake licenses, using them to cash checks

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two former directors of Prisoner's Defense Committee of the Civil Rights Center have been convicted of making phony driver's licenses and using them to cash stolen Social Security checks.

John Valdez Martinez, 52, and Paula Fowler Bushon, 45, both of San Antonio were found guilty Tuesday on seven counts, including conspiracy to receive and conceal stolen U.S. Treasury checks, possession of stolen mail, production of counterfeit driver's licenses and aiding and abetting.

Testimony revealed that Martinez and Bushon had stolen Social Security checks in their possession in May 1988, and that Bushon made fake driver's licenses in the name of the people named on the checks.

The phony IDs included photographs of drug addicts the couple paid to use the fake cards to cash the checks. The couple did the same thing in October 1988, testimony showed.

Martinez and Bushon, who are married, were convicted in 1988 of selling phony documents to an undercover agent posing as an illegal alien. Both are currently serving prison sentences in that case, and now face sentencing in the check scheme.

Cadets removed from corps for alleged hazing

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Two Texas A&M students have been removed from the Corps of Cadets following an investigation into an alleged hazing incident, a Corps official said.

Maj. Gerald Betty, the officer in charge of the investigation, said Monday the final decision in the matter was made Corps commandant Gen. Thomas Darling.

Darling would not comment on the matter, citing protection of the privacy of the students involved.

A&M began investigating Feb. 5 after Shannon George, a sophomore biology major from Silsbee, withdrew from the Corps following a visit to the Beutel Health Center.

Dr. Kenneth Dirks, director of the health center, told the campus newspaper The Daily Battalion that George said he was required to run and do push-ups and sit-ups for an hour as part of Corps training. Dirks said George complained of a sore back and abdomen upon visiting the health center.

Hazing is a violation of university regulations and state law.

Ceremonies remember fall of the Alamo

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Traditional ceremonies marked the 154th anniversary of the fall of the Alamo, a battle considered by many historians as a turning point in Texas' fight for independence from Mexico.

Among the events planned Tuesday commemorating the 1836 siege of the mission were a living history demonstration, a Daughters of the Republic of Texas ceremony and a champagne party.

"Every March 6, we set up a table and the six flags of Texas," said Gary Banning of Victoria, one of those who planned the champagne celebration just before the living history program.

Mike Walters, vice president and co-founder of the San Antonio Living History Association, said the purpose of his group's ritual was to emphasize peace and to honor men from both sides of the fight who died in the battle.

The Alamo was under siege 13 days before a final early-morning attack by Mexican forces.

Many historians regard the siege as a key factor in Texas' successful battle for independence because it gave Sam Houston time to bolster forces elsewhere.

U.S., Mexico governors scheduled to meet

AUSTIN (AP) — The Eighth U.S.-Mexico Border Governors' Conference will convene here this month with a focus on creating new jobs and greater opportunities, Gov. Bill Clements announced.

Clements and Gov. Americo Villarreal of the Mexican state of Tamaulipas will co-chair the March 29-30 event, which is sponsored by the Texas Association of Business.

U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher and Jaime Serra Puche, Mexico's secretary of commerce and industrial development, are among those scheduled to address the gathering. Clements initiated the governors' conference during his first term as governor.

Motive undetermined in deaths of racing agency official, family

AUSTIN (AP) — Authorities said they had not determined a motive in the Sunday morning deaths of a Texas Racing Commission official who apparently shot his wife and two children and then himself.

Racing Commission administrator David Joost, 41; his wife, Susan, 35; and the couple's two children — 10-year-old Eric and 5-year-old Lauren — were found dead Monday at their Buda home, about 12 miles south of Austin.

Hays County Justice of the Peace Orlena Hehl said Tuesday that an autopsy report "shows that the father shot the family, then shot himself."

Mrs. Joost and Lauren were found dead in a bed in the master bedroom. Eric was found dead in his room and Joost's body was found lying in a hall bathroom.

Ms. Hehl, who was at the scene Monday, speculated that Mrs. Joost was shot first, then Lauren, then Eric and Joost. Eric was found with his arms over his face.

"It says to me that he was conscious of what was going on and was trying to get away from it," she said.

Mrs. Joost died of a gunshot wound to the back. Lauren and Eric suffered gunshot wounds in the chest, and Eric had an additional wound in his left shoulder.

Hays County sheriff's department spokeswoman Rachel Vasquez said law enforcement authorities could not confirm whether Joost killed all family members or even if the same gun was used.

"At this point, the case is still under investigation, so all we can assume at this point is that we have three homicides and one suicide," she said.

The Hays County Sheriff's Department released the ruling by Travis County Medical Examiner Robert Bayardo showing that Joost died of a single, self-inflicted gunshot wound to the chest. Bayardo said Joost had powder burns on his right hand.

The only ballistic tests that have been performed so far show that the bullet used to kill Mrs. Joost, which lodged in her right arm, came from a .38 caliber weapon, Ms. Vasquez said.

Hays County Sheriff Paul Hastings said there was no sign of forced entry at the home, but he would not say whether a suicide note had been found.

Women arrested for alleged kidnapping

DEL RIO (AP) — Two Houston area women were being held by federal authorities today in connection with the kidnapping of a Mexican infant allegedly snatched from her grandmother in a Piedras Negras grocery store, federal authorities say.

The women, 27 and 23, are from Pasadena and are unemployed and lived in the same apartment complex, officials said.

A U.S. Border Patrol spokesman in Eagle Pass said the 23-year-old allegedly was in a grocery store in Piedras Negras Tuesday afternoon when she began a conversation with Francisca Puente Guardiola, 53, who was holding her granddaughter Claudia Topacio Ortega, 6 months.

"She apparently flattered the grandmother over the child, and asked if she could hold the baby," FBI spokesman Jim Kenney said.

"The grandmother let her hold the baby, and bent down to get something. When she stood up, the woman and the baby were gone."

BEE SMART

dil´ē-dal´ē

dillydally (verb) — If you sometimes take your time walking to school or class, lagging behind even when you know you are late, or if you slowly and deliberately dawdle over an assignment, then you know how to dillydally. It is an alternate form of the word dally, which means to leisurely take your time pursuing some interest, as when you dally at the lake getting a nice tan, fishing a little bit, and otherwise enjoying your vacation.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 30. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

MC to undergo offseason overhaul

Franklin refuses to term moves 'house cleaning'

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland College head basketball coach Reggie Franklin Tuesday would commit to only three names when asked which freshmen players would be welcomed back for the 1990-91 season.

"Actually, I haven't decided totally who I'm bringing back to tell you the truth," Franklin said. "I know there'll be a few that I'm not bringing back."

Freshmen Eugene Witherspoon, Gym Bice, of Andrews, and Eric Walker, brother of assistant coach George Walker, will all be extended invitations to return for the next season, Franklin said.

Although the third-year head coach would not comment on their futures with the team, Franklin said freshmen guards Ron Johnson and Kiki Stanley, and Gerald Woods were "question marks."

Despite all the expected changes, Franklin refused to use the term "house cleaning."

Franklin Interview, Page 2C

"No, I'm not looking at a total house cleaning," Franklin said. "It's more so than I have had in years past, but not more so than since I've been here."

The announcement on what appears to be a limited number of returning players comes at the conclusion of a controversial, disappointing season that saw Midland College finish with an 18-13 overall record, 8-8 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference action. The Chaps finished tied for fourth place with Western Texas College in the conference race and for the first time since 1983-84 missed the Region V tournament.

Expected to join Witherspoon in next year's front court is Carroll Boudroux, a recruit from Louisiana who has been enrolled at Midland College, but was forced to sit out a season after transferring.

Franklin said there was no reason why he shouldn't also be extended an invitation to return as head coach next season, although he admitted there were people who speculate he will be fired (See related column, below).

In other developments Tuesday:

■ Franklin said representatives from the University of Oregon will arrive in Midland Wednesday to visit with and extend a scholarship offer to sophomore forward-Tim Owens. The University of Texas-San Antonio has also extended an offer to Owens, and Baylor has also shown interest. Owens averaged almost 18 points per game during the 1989-90 season.

■ UTSA and Baylor are also interested in sophomore wing man Kethus Hanks, who averaged 15 points per game, including a 40 point performance against New Mexico Junior College.

■ Sophomore Fred Campbell is being looked at

Odessa College to kick off Region V tourney Thursday

Staff Report

SNYDER — The Odessa College Wranglers open the 1990 Region V tournament Thursday in Snyder with a noon game against Hill Junior College. The Wranglers (26-5, 12-4), are the third seed in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference. Hill, the second seed from the North Texas Junior College Athletic Conference, finished the regular season at 15-14.

Howard College (28-3, 13-3), which finished ranked second in the WJCAC, will tip-off at 2 p.m. Thursday against Texas State Technical Institute-Waco (14-16), the No. 3 NTJCAC seed.

In other first round games Thursday, WJCAC No. 4 New Mexico Junior College (18-13, 11-5) meets NTJCAC No. 1 McClennan County 23-8) at 5 p.m., and WJCAC No. 1 South Plains (27-3, 13-3) meets NTCAC No. 4 Grayson at 9 p.m.

The Region V Women's Championship will be 7 p.m. Thursday.

Men's semifinals will be held at 7 and 9 p.m. Friday, and the Region V championship is set for 7 p.m. Saturday.

LAMESA — Now that Corey Hogue is out of the way, the Lamesa Golden Tornadoes hope that Louis Johnson and the rest of the Gonzales Apaches are heading the same route — away from a state championship.

The Tors held Hogue, Slaton's top scorer, to three points in their 62-50 Region I championship wins over the Tigers last Saturday in Lubbock to earn their 11th state tournament berth since 1933. Coach Wayne Roberts' team will face Gonzales in state semifinal action at 2 p.m. Thursday at the Frank Erwin Center in Austin.

Johnson had 31 points in Gonzales' 89-75 region semifinal win over San-

Bulldogs, Plainsmen split double bill

Fourth-ranked Monterey ends six-game losing streak to MHS

By BILL PRICE
Sports Writer

Lubbock Monterey finally shook a two-year-old monkey off its back Tuesday, when it won the second game of a baseball doubleheader to earn a split in a twin bill with Midland High at Angels Stadium.

The 6-3 win for the Plainsmen broke a six-game Bulldog winning streak over Monterey; MHS had also been victorious in eight of their previous nine encounters with Monterey. In addition to MHS' 7-2 win in Tuesday's first game, the 'Dogs had downed Monterey twice in last weekend's Tournament of Champions at Angels Stadium, and were 3-0 in 1989 versus the Lubbock school.

The Plainsmen, now 3-3, had entered the weekend tourney ranked No. 1 in the state, and left with a 2-2 record to drop to a fourth-place ranking this week.

According to Monterey short stop Bryce Cunningham, who hit a home run off Gabriel Salazar in Game 2, the Plainsmen did a fair amount of soul searching before their return to Midland.

"Ever since I was a sophomore, we've lost to them every time we've played them," Cunningham said. "And it's so tough to play them here in Angels Stadium, but we finally started hitting the ball a little. After the tournament, we went back and worked on our hitting Monday, so I think that helped."

In the first inning of Game 1, appearances pointed to a Monterey win even earlier, as 6-2, 205-pound Plainsman third baseman Greg Cushman bounced a James Madrid fastball off the centerfield wall for a two-RBI, inside-the-park home run.

Madrid, however, shut the Monterey offense down the rest of the way, allowing only one other hit in the two-hit outing, and putting his season record at 3-1.

At the plate, the 'Dogs (now 6-4) nickel-and-dimed left-hander Plainsman pitcher Jeff Chase into submission. Chase issued two walks, hit a pair of MHS batters and tossed a wild pitch as the Bulldogs tied the game in the bottom of second inning.

MHS catcher Patrick Mowles slapped a two-RBI single in the fourth and Salazar, who played third base in the opener, tripled to lead a three-run sixth by the 'Dogs.

In the second game, it was MHS that took the early edge, only to wind up losing the game. Bulldog shortstop Jason Stone singled to right field and advanced to third when Monty House missed a diving catch and let the

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Hex or no hex, the Midland High soccer team again turned in a lackluster performance at home — and it may have cost the Bulldogs a chance at the playoffs.

The Bulldogs dropped a 2-0 decision to Abilene Cooper in District 3 action Tuesday at Midland Freshman field to fall further behind in the quest for a repeat playoff appearance.

It now appears that MHS, 4-4-1, needs to win each of its last three regular-season games to have a shot at post-season play. Fortunately, the Bulldogs' one remaining home match is against last-place Odessa High next Tuesday.

That's fortunate because the Bulldogs have an abysmal 1-4 district mark at the Midland Freshman facility. Only Abilene High has fallen victim to the Bulldogs in Midland this season, while Midland Lee, San Angelo, Odessa Permian and now Cooper have scored road wins.

In other District 3 action Tuesday, Midland Lee had its playoff hopes dealt a severe blow with a 2-1 loss to Abilene High, while San Angelo maintained its hold on second place with a 6-0 win over Odessa High.

Cooper maintained its half-game lead over San Angelo with Tuesday's win, while Abilene High solidified its hold on third place.

Midland High coach Tom Esikhati explained his team's loss as well as he could.

"We didn't play well enough to win," Esikhati said. "We had opportunities to put the ball in, but I don't think we tried hard enough to score when we had the wind."

The Bulldogs started out with a gusty wind at their backs, but strong midfield play by Cooper kept the hosts away from backup goalkeeper Ronnie Oliver. MHS shot only five times in the first half.

Even more distressingly, the Cougars scored into the teeth of the wind — albeit on a freak play.

In the 34th minute, Jason Hart lofted a shot on goal that MHS keeper Bryant Mueller tried to punch away from the goal rather than catch. But instead of punching the ball out of harm's way, Mueller lost control of the ball in front of the net and Cooper's Lee Terbush banged in the rebound to give the Cougars the only goal they would need.

"I tried to punch the ball, but I misjudged it," Mueller said.

The Cougars added another goal when Hart headed in a corner kick by Carey McLain in the 49th minute, but they really didn't it.

JIMMY PATTERSON

Unfairly, Franklin the fall guy for Chaps' problems

Sadly, there are people out there who want Midland College head basketball coach Reggie Franklin gone.

Patterson

They want him out the door. Like yesterday.

Franklin knows this. He knows that when the 1989-90 season started getting rough and the discipline problems started mounting, his detractors, too, would grow in numbers.

He knows that there has been a decline in the won-loss record in the three years since he has had control of the team.

And he knows one of the TV sports guys actually said last week that with all MC's problems, he wondered how much longer Franklin could hang on as head coach.

What hogwash.

Fire Franklin? After what he's had to endure this season, it's amazing the team finished with the record it did.

"Why should I get fired?" Franklin wondered Tuesday. "For going 18-13? For having one bad year?"

In three seasons as head coach, Franklin has compiled a 64-30 record. Not the best, not the worst.

In three years, though, he has never had a sophomore fail to graduate, and you can't beat that rate.

As unfair as it is, Franklin has never been able to escape the coaching shadow of Jerry Stone, the troubled, yet ever-popular, never-forgettable former MC coach. Fans are still enamored with Stone, now head coach at Cameron University in Lawton, Okla. Franklin himself admits he will forever consider Stone the best coach he's likely to ever be associated with.

Since Franklin has been at the helm, while seeing the Chaps' season record go from 25-7 two years ago, to 21-10 last year, to 18-13 this season, the pressure has been building.

It snowballed this season, of course, with the numerous suspensions, the Darryl King walkout, the disturbing losses to Howard, South Plains and Frank Phillips.

Strides are being taken to prevent a recurrence of the attitude and discipline problems which haunted the team this season.

Franklin wouldn't be overly specific when asked who would be back next season, although he did say Eugene Witherspoon, Gym Bice and Eric Walker would be extended invitations to return.

Prominent names not mentioned were freshmen Ron Johnson, Kiki Stanley and Gerald Woods. Franklin put question marks by each. Big question marks, he said, for Johnson and Stanley.

Concerning his own future, Franklin said high school players from as far away as Houston have told him they've heard of his impending exit. And in Midland, Franklin said talk of his ouster is "all over the city."

Despite all the problems, Franklin these days is at peace with himself. He knows he did the best with what he had. And he knows there are other things more important than basketball, one of which is education.

"More important than anything else, than even winning a basketball game," Franklin said, "is making sure those kids get a place to go to school. The sophomore players. And they're all going to graduate.

"One of our teachers told me, 'You know, Reggie, you really have done a good job with these kids academically.' I said 'Why do you say that?' and she said, 'You think about it, nobody graduates in eight semesters from a major university. Nobody does that, let alone the athletes. Yet still, they're expecting you to get the job done in four semesters and you're doing it.' "

And there's one other thing. One thing that played a role in the Chap basketball program this season: The illness of Franklin's father.

Several times this season, Franklin was forced to make extended trips to Houston to visit his father, who was diagnosed late in 1989 with cancer. He has been given less than a year to live.

"Anytime something like this happens," Franklin said, "it's like the Hank Gathers thing ... it puts a perspective on life, and on winning or losing a game."

Franklin said before this season, before his father became ill, he had never spent as many as five days away from practice, something he was forced to do when he first learned of his father's condition.

Reggie Franklin should not be wholly faulted for the factors that contributed to MC's demise. The blame should lay with the players who are not welcome back, and the unbeatable opponent his father faces.

It is possible that the powers that be at Midland College — athletic director Delnor Poss, President Jess Parrish and the MC board — would actually consider not renewing Franklin's contract.

But, considering the distractions off the court and out of town, Reggie Franklin should be given, at the very least, one more season.

Franklin never felt comfortable with 1989-90 Chaps

Editor's Note: On Tuesday, assistant sports editor Jimmy Patterson, who followed Midland College basketball during the 1989-90 season, sat down for an extended interview with head coach Reggie Franklin. The following are excerpts from that interview:

MRT: What was the most disappointing thing on the court for you this season?

FRANKLIN: I'm not picking on any sophomore, but it had to be my sophomore leadership. In today's society, like I said before, it's so hard for people to stand up and say what's right and what's wrong. It's getting much tougher than when I was in school. And our sophomores have got to step up and say we've got to do this or that. That's the one thing I was disappointed in on and off the court.

MRT: Were the discipline problems worse this year than in years past?

FRANKLIN: Because I had so many sophomores I thought their would be less disciplinary problems. As it turned out there wasn't. We've always had discipline problems in one form or another, no matter how minute. That's junior college basketball all over the country.

MRT: Do you feel the discipline problems you had led to the team missing the Region V tournament?

FRANKLIN: Indirectly, yeah. Every coach has to get to a point where he feels comfortable with his team. I never got to that point with this team. On or off the court. That probably hurt me worse than the actual playing did.

MRT: What were some of the positives?

FRANKLIN: One person who I was really, really proud of was Gym Bice. Gym started out battling for a spot at point guard with Ron (Johnson) and Kiki (Stanley). I told him to keep fighting and keep fighting, and something good will happen. He kept hustling and something good did happen.

Tim Owens I can't say enough about. Every coach that calls here, I tell them one thing you don't have to worry about Tim is he's going to hustle come game time.

(Eugene Wither)Spoon has come along and has started to develop. He's playing with a little more confidence.

Kethus Hanks should be proud of himself because he's the one kid who started every game for MC the last two years. He's been a terrific player for us.

MRT: You mentioned the team's weaknesses, what were its strengths?

FRANKLIN: That's a tough one. (Pause) At times we played great man, 2-3 zone defense.

MRT: How do you account for the blowouts suffered in December at Howard (102-80 loss) and South Plains (86-48 loss)?

FRANKLIN: I really can't. I take responsibility for the loss at South Plains. After we played Howard, I was so disappointed at how we played: No guts, No hustle at all. I'm not a negative person. But after that game at Howard, I had two real hard, negative workouts. We probably ran about 10 miles the day after that game was over. The next day wasn't much better. I was real negative at the time.

So, we go to the SPC game and start off pretty decent. Then we started tightening up and I started screaming at the kids. Against Howard we didn't have any hustle. Against SPC, we hustled. That was totally, totally my fault.

MRT: What are some of your accomplishments off the court?

FRANKLIN: You look at the things that are in the media right now. Drug things, scandal, grade problems, those things dominate. For the last three years, every sophomore we've had has graduated. I'm not saying to pat us on the back. We know we have some weak students on the team. We also know that some weak students have vastly improved their grade point averages from their first semester to this semester. One player who barely made it his first semester, is making 2.4s this semester. That's nothing to brag about, but it's a lot better than 1.7.

This is the first year ever, ever since I've been here that one of our kids has taken a biology class. First, because of the late hour and it interferes with our practice. Second, because of the hardness of the course. But (Fred Campbell) passed it. Kerwin (Harris) is taking it now.

(Two players, Witherspoon and Charlie Craine, both freshmen, then came into Franklin's office to show Franklin their grades on a recent test.)

MRT: Do the players always come in to show you their grades like that?

FRANKLIN: I always told them I have an open door concept. There's only two times when I'll close the door — if its too noisy in the hallway, and I'm on an important phone call. I never want the door closed physically to them or mentally to them. I've always tried to make it clear that they can come in and talk to me about anything — girlfriend problems, family problems, anything.

MRT: Have you felt added pressure to succeed this season?

FRANKLIN: Whether they're friends, or whether they're boosters, or just arm chair coaches, everybody has their opinion on what you should do. I think what a lot of people expected was for me to come in here and be just like Jerry Stone. Jerry Stone is the best coach I've ever been associated with. I'll say it now and 10 years from now. But I have my own ideas about things I want to do off the court. Speaking engagements, working with kids. I've done a lot of things for the kids in this town and I want to keep doing that.

So I think what the people have to realize is they need to give me time to come in here and be my own coach, winning or losing. I need time to figure out things for myself. What I want to do. What I want to keep doing.

MRT: What do things look like for next season, as far as success?

FRANKLIN: Like Gym Bice said, we've got a good nucleus coming back. Spoon and him and Boudroux. There's a good nucleus. It'll only take a good player here or there. I'm not trying to put pressure on Boudroux or Bice or Spoon, but they're enough to get you started.

MRT: Who do you think will win the Region V tournament?

FRANKLIN: It's so strange — South Plains has always gotten beat early in the regional tournament. I may be wrong, but this year I don't think they're going to lose. Howard has been winning most of their games, but right now I think they're in a slump. I think they peaked out too soon.

TORS

ta Rose, and the 6-2 senior is averaging about 17 points a game for Coach Victor Salazar.

Six-four sophomore John Keck also checks into the state tournament with about 17 points a game, while 6-1 senior Corey Mathis has averaged about 14 points a game.

Lamesa has baffled playoff foes with the ability to both slow down or speed up, depending on which method better fits the Tors' quickness against a particular opponent.

Salazar said the Tors can do whatever they want. The Apache mentor said his team has been able to adjust to whatever its foe tries to do.

"We'll try to do the opposite of what they want to do," Salazar said. "We'll run if it's there, but we'll move the ball around a lot if it isn't."

But Salazar added that it doesn't really matter who the Apaches are playing, because it's the state tournament.

"I don't know anything about Lamesa," he said. "But it doesn't really matter, because you have to play well anyway.

"We're sort of going in blank," Robert said. "We do know they will run some and press some. We just have to be ready when they throw it at us."

The Tors, 29-6, will continue to rely on a balanced attack led by junior off-guard Bert Butler, who averages about 22 points a game.

Forwards Dwight Mason, Dewayne Hall and Lavert Hawkins average about 18, 16 and 12 points a game, respectively. Mason has scored 75 points in the Tors' four playoff games, since spending the last six weeks of the regular season academically ineligible.

All three Tor forwards helped the Tors build a 50-33 rebounding edge over Slaton, though 5-9 point guard Keene Hunter led the Tors with nine boards. Hunter also runs the show from the point.

Sophomores Tyrone Lewis and Brandon Sheppard may be key reserves for the Tors. Both have started at times since the end of the District 3-3A season.

Lamesa last played at the state tourney in 1988, when they were in Class 4A. The Tors won state titles in 1960, 1967 and 1975.

Mason's cousins Chris, Jerry and Cedric Mason were all on the Tors' last state tourney team. Chris eventually played at Angelo State, Jerry just finished his college career at Texas Tech, and Cedric wrapped up his junior college playing days at Western Texas College.

Gonzales last reached the Final Four in 1987, but were drubbed by Sweeny in the semifinal round. Texas was led by current University of Texas reserve Benford Williams.

ECC's Towson State a champion — at least this week

Associated Press

The Tigers earned their first-ever trip to the NCAA tournament with a 73-60 victory Tuesday night over Lehigh in the championship game of the East Coast Conference tournament.

Kurk Lee scored 22 points for the Tigers, who had lost in the tournament's title game two of the previous three seasons.

"I think it has taken this team two years to come together," Towson State coach Terry Truax said. "I think it has taken them this long to learn what it takes to win."

Towson State knows the history of the ECC's tournament representative, which has lost in the first round five years in a row.

"There are 64 teams and I think we're probably going to be (seeded) 59th or so, so we'll be playing one of the top eight seeds," Truax said.

The Tigers (18-12) led 33-32 at the half, then took control with a 9-2 spurt that produced a 64-53 lead midway through the second half.

Southland

Anthony Jones scored 18 of his 26 points from long range in leading regular-season champion Northeast Louisiana over Texas-Arlington 65-50 in semifinal play at Monroe, La. Northeast (21-7) meet Southland Conference doormat North Texas (5-24) for the title tonight.

Bobby Kenyon had 19 points and 15 rebounds for Texas-Arlington (12-15).

Tave Martin's layup with two seconds remaining gave North Texas a 63-61 upset of Northwestern Louisiana. Ronnie Morgan led North Texas with 15 points and 12 rebounds. Northwestern (10-19) was led by Dexter Grimsley with 17 points.

Mid-Continent

Jason Reese converted Dale Turner's full-court pass into a layup with two seconds to play to give Northern Iowa (21-8) a 63-61 semifinal victory over Southwest Missouri State at Cedar Falls, Iowa. Cedrick McCullough scored 12 points to lead Northern Iowa, and Lee Campbell had 17 for Southwest (22-6).

Tony Bennett, playing on an injured leg, scored 17 points to lead Wisconsin-Green Bay (23-6) to a 49-46 victory over Western Illinois. Ron Ateman scored 13 points for Western Illinois (16-13).

North Atlantic

Matt Johnson scored 21 points, including six straight free throws in the final minute, as Vermont defeated Maine 78-75 in first-round play at Hartford, Conn. Kevin Roberson led Vermont (12-16) with 23 points. Derrick Hodge had 26 points and Dean Smith 20 for Maine (11-17).

Devin Hughes hit a three-pointer with 1:58 left in the game to give Colgate (8-20) a 54-53 upset over Hartford. Hughes finished with 18 points as did Hartford's Lamont Middleton. Hartford (17-11) had beaten Colgate by 26 and 16 points during the regular season.

Ewing good for 40, but Knicks fall to Trail Blazers

Associated Press

In the battle of All-Star players, New York beat Portland 40-3. What saved the Trail Blazers was that the other members of the team whipped the rest of the Knicks 109-60.

Despite Patrick Ewing's 40 points and a season-low three from Trail Blazers All-Star Clyde Drexler, Portland's balance was enough to beat the Knicks 112-100 Tuesday night, New York's third loss in four home games after a 22-2 start at Madison Square Garden.

Neither team led by more than seven points until the final minutes, when Kevin Duckworth scored eight of his season-high 28 points during a decisive 13-0 run for the Trail Blazers, who won their 40th game, one more than all of last season.

"We knew Ewing would score his points, so we wanted to hold the rest of the team down," Adelman said. "Kevin's a good offensive player and can score against a lot of people in this league. We wanted Kevin to make Patrick work at both ends of the court."

"I think Patrick finally got a little tired down the stretch," Duckworth said, "and we got stronger. Our strategy worked perfectly."

Drexler's three points were not part of that strategy. Drexler, whose previous season low was 14 points, was 1-for-10 shooting, but had nine assists.

"I've never seen him go 1-for-10," Adelman said. "He can hurt a team so many ways. But he never forced things to get his points."

"I'm the first to admit it when I'm having a horrible game," Drexler said. "The best thing I did all night was set up a bunch of offensive rebounds."

The front line of Duckworth, Buck Williams and Jerome Kersey played well. Duckworth grabbed 11 rebounds, Williams scored 21 points and Kersey had 19 points and 10 rebounds.

NBA Roundup

Rockets 112, Lakers 95

Akeem Olajuwon had 27 points, 14 rebounds and eight blocked shots, and Buck Johnson scored 10 points in the first quarter when Houston took control.

Sleepy Floyd had 17 points and 12 assists for the Rockets, who outrebounded the Lakers 56-37 in their fourth consecutive victory.

Jazz 111, Magic 101

Karl Malone scored 16 of his 31 points in the fourth quarter, which Utah began with an 18-6 surge.

Thurl Bailey had 20 points and John Stockton had 17 points and 12 assists as the Jazz won for the eighth time in nine games.

Orlando, which beat the Jazz by 22 points in the expansion team's only other meeting with Utah, lost its third straight and 10th in 11 games.

Suns 113, Hawks 111

Jeff Hornacek broke a tie with 25 seconds left and recovered a loose ball in the last five seconds as Phoenix won for the 11th time in 13 games.

The Suns won despite a 43-point performance by Dominique Wilkins, who has 123 points in his last three games. Tom Chambers led Phoenix with 31 points, Kevin Johnson had 24 points and 14 assists and Eddie Johnson had 20 points.

Pistons 101, Kings 91

Joe Dumars and Bill Laimbeer scored 25 points apiece to lead Detroit to its 19th victory in 20 games. Wayman Tisdale scored 40 points for Sacramento, including all 14 the Kings managed in the final period.

The Pistons, 28-3 at home, have a six-game winning streak. The defending NBA champions won 16 of 17 games last March.

Bulls 114, Bucks 105

Michael Jordan scored 35 points, including six in a closing 10-0 run, as Chicago won its ninth straight game.

The streak is the Bulls' longest since 1973-74 and was their 11th victory in the last 12 meetings with Milwaukee.

Horace Grant had 21 points and Scottie Pippen 18 for Chicago.

Pacers 113, Bullets 98

Chuck Person scored 36 points as Indiana broke a three-game losing streak with a peaceful victory over Washington.

There was no hint of the ill feelings that spilled over on the court when the teams met on Feb. 18 at Washington. In the Bullets' 116-97 victory last month, Person and Washington's Bernard King were ejected for fighting, and coaches Dick Versace of Indiana and Wes Unseld of Washington had to be kept apart.

Nuggets 122, Hornets 96

Dan Schayes had a perfect shooting game, scoring 23 points and grabbing 12 rebounds for Denver.

Schayes hit all seven shots and all nine free throws for the Nuggets, who won their third straight game. Alex English had 18 points and Fat Lever and Walter Davis 15 apiece for Denver.

SuperSonics 95, Cavaliers 90

Reserve guard Jim Farmer made all four of his shots in the fourth quarter, and Seattle handed Cleveland its fifth straight loss.

Seattle led 75-71 before Farmer scored eight points and Derrick McKey four during a 12-5 run. After Cleveland closed to 89-85 with 32.5 seconds left, Dana Barros, who led Seattle with 23 points, made four free throws and McKey two.

Tuesday, even though the Bulldogs outshot their visitors, 13-6. Shane Barden gave Oliver his closest call on a header early in the second half, but the Cougar keeper gathered it in to foil the opportunity.

Midfielder Joe Dominguez, a veteran of last year's playoff drive, suggested that the 'Dogs miss graduated forwards Shaun Savas and David Allen more than anyone would have admitted to earlier in the year.

"We had more speed up front than we do this year," Dominguez said. "And, we played more aggressively last season instead of standing around."

Mueller said the Bulldogs' talent shouldn't be overlooked despite the string of home losses. "We have the talent to beat any team in this district.

"We're just not converting."

Not converting, indeed. The Bulldogs have scored a whopping nine goals in the eight district games that exclude an 8-0 blowout of Odessa High.

And, the team's corner kick offense will be hampered Saturday at San Angelo because tall fullback Jason Farr will not play due to a red card received Tuesday. Farr moves in front of the opposing net on corner kicks in hopes that his six-foot plus height will help him head the ball into the net. He is the team's third-leading scorer in district play with two goals.

The two players ahead of Farr in the team scoring race may not be much more help Saturday. Neither Shane Barden (six goals in district play) nor James Woolsey (five goals) played much in the second half after aggravating nagging injuries.

Barden has been suffering from a sprained ankle, while Woolsey has been fighting nagging ankle and back injuries this season.

Abilene High 2, Midland Lee 1

All three goals in this pivotal match were scored in the first 10 minutes of the match.

ball roll by. Then Monterey hurler Junior Garza, yet another lefthander, threw a wild pitch that escaped Plainsman catcher Drew Webb, allowing Stone to score and put MHS ahead 1-0. The lead did not last long, though.

In the third, Monterey first baseman Brent Houtchens, who also doubled in the game, hit a two-run homer as Monterey leapt ahead 3-1.

"Our kids played hard, but I think they might have been suffering from a little bit of tournament lag. We have a tired baseball team right now," said MHS coach Tim Whalen, whose squad played six games in the Tournament of Champions, including three Saturday.

MHS' junior varsity also played a twin bill with Monterey, losing 5-4 and 18-8 at Simons Field. The Bulldog j.v. is 2-2 for the season.

Lee 14-7, Coronado 11-13

LUBBOCK — Midland Lee also split a doubleheader with the Lubbock school Tuesday, winning 14-13 in nine innings, then losing 11-7 in the nightcap in Lubbock.

Junior Rebel pitcher Jeff Johnston went to 3-0 for season in the opener, as Lee's answer to Muderers' Row amassed their 14 runs on 19 hits. Rebel centerfielder J.J. Johnson was a one-man wrecking crew, hitting a home run and two singles in the extra-inning game.

In the second game, the Rebs opened a 7-0 lead in the top of the first, but saw Coronado explode for nine runs in the bottom of the second inning. The Mustangs also earned multiple runs in the fifth, when they scored three runners.

by a variety of schools, according to Franklin, including Providence, North Carolina State, Virginia Tech and Clemson.

■ Freshman Gym Bice, after one season as the Chaps' starting point guard, has caught the eye of University of Texas-El Paso officials. It is possible that Bice could forego his second year at MC should the right offer come along, Franklin said.

■ Franklin, who said earlier in the season that discipline problems are common at the JUCO level, acknowledged Tuesday that they were excessive at Midland College this season.

"I don't want to say that this was a terrible year for discipline problems. But it was a bad year," he said.

Talks continue today on lockout issues

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Baseball players and owners spent 6½ hours talking, and there was some movement on issues by the time they adjourned early today. Both sides, however, held their positions on salary arbitration and there's still no agreement in sight.

Negotiations took on added urgency Tuesday as the six-owner Player Relations Committee and about half of the union's 17-player negotiating group came to New York. The sides agree that camps must open by Monday if the season is to start as scheduled on April 2. Owners canceled their quarterly meeting, scheduled for Thursday in Dallas, so that negotiations wouldn't be interrupted.

Talks continue today, the 21st day of the lockout, following another meeting of the PRC.

President Bush said he wouldn't get involved in baseball's problems, and Atlanta pitcher Charlie Leibrandt became the second player to injure himself working out independently while awaiting a contract settlement.

The sides met for the first time since Feb. 24 and narrowed some issues, but made no headway on arbitration eligibility. The union had been demanding that eligibility be given to players with two years of major-league service, but on Tuesday said it would accept a compromise that would allow only some two-plus players to be eligible.

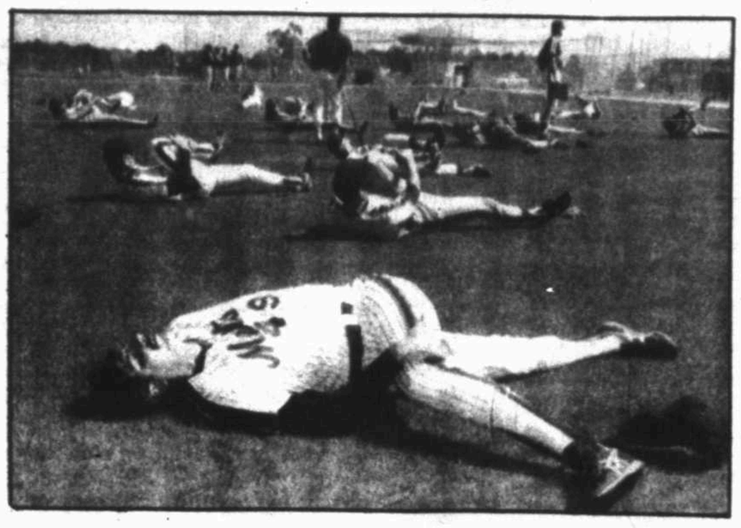
Owners offered to restore rosters to 25 players beginning in 1991, increased their offer on minimum salary by $5,000 to $90,000 and increased their benefit contribution from an average of $44.86 million to $50 million a year.



AP Laserphoto

Minor leaguers in the New York Mets' system, including former major leaguer Bill Laskey, foreground, began workouts at Port St. Lucie, Fla., Tuesday.

But they angered the union by proposing elimination of the 20 percent maximum salary cut rule for players in arbitration, by withdrawing a plan that would have minor leaguers go through reverse waivers before they could return to the majors, and by proposing that the minor-league salary minimum be lowered from its traditional value of one-third of the big-league low.

"The bad news is we have not bridged the gap on the 2-to-3 arbitration issue," management negotiator Chuck O'Connor said. "The good news is we have narrowed the gap on a number of remaining issues."

The union is asking for a $112,500 minimum and a $62 million yearly contribution to the benefit plan, which funds pensions and health care.

Fehr and O'Connor estimated that arbitration would cost owners between $8 million and $10 million a season.

"Only in the last day or two did the 2-to-3 issue become negotiable with us," American League player representative Paul Molitor said.

Fehr said the union had offered four or five alternatives which could be the basis of a compromise on arbitration, but O'Connor said owners will not move off their position that the threshold must remain at three years.

"Once you dip into that class of players, you have an affect on the entire class," O'Connor said.

Players claim they gave up the year of arbitration in 1985 only because owners pleaded financial distress; management says the union gave back the year in a tradeoff for benefit money and other things.

O'Connor said owners were trying to find compromise solutions that would leave arbitration unchanged.

"We think there are ways to cross that stream without building a bridge that says salary arbitration has to return from three to two," he said.

Tuesday's session was the 30th since talks began on Nov. 28 and was the first to go into the evening. The sides say they realize an agreement must be reached this week if the season is to start on time.

"Don't rule it out yet," O'Connor said of opening day. "I think there is a whole group of people in this city right now who are working hard to reach an agreement so you don't have to rule it out."

Bush, speaking in the Oval Office on Tuesday, "was tempted" to answer questions about the baseball dispute.

"He's concerned about the fans and the game of baseball," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. "He would like to see the issue resolved. But he has no intentions to intervene."

MARGARET WILLIAMS ENDORSES NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

For over 30 years I have been involved in education in Midland.

I believe that legal scholarship is important for the position of District Judge. Nick was on the Dean's List at college. Nick won prizes for being the first in his class in Constitutional Law and for Tax Law. Beyond college and law school he spent a year of post graduate legal training at S.M.U. in Oil and Gas Law and Taxation. He also has worked in all levels of trial courts in Texas and several appeals courts.

This is the kind of academic excellence and experience that Midland needs in a judge. I believe Nick is the best qualified candidate for the office of District Judge. He will be a great asset to Midland.

I am voting for Nick Taylor in the Republican Primary and hope that you will too.

Bush names new thrift overseer

By TOM RAUM

Martoche

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush on Tuesday named Assistant Treasury Secretary Salvatore R. Martoche as acting director of the the Office of Thrift Supervision, the agency that regulates the nation's savings and loan institutions.

Martoche immediately promised to "provide stability and leadership" to the government's oversight of the troubled S&L industry.

The interim appointment fills the vacancy created by the resignation last December of M. Danny Wall, who quit under criticism from members of Congress for his handling of the S&L crisis in his 2½-year tenure.

Martoche, a former U.S. attorney from Buffalo, was named by Bush to serve "until a new director is in place."

Administration officials said the search for a permanent successor to Wall is continuing. Sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Treasury Department planned to forward its recommendation within several days.

Congressional Democrats have been pointing to the Bush administration's failure to recruit a permanent successor to Wall as evidence that the S&L bailout was falling into disarray.

Because the Martoche appointment is an interim one, it does not require Senate confirmation.

When speculation surfaced that Jonathan Fiechter, senior deputy in charge of policy at the agency, might be named as interim director, S&L industry officials raised questions over the legality of any actions taken by an acting director who was not confirmed by the Senate.

Martoche's appointment was expected to alleviate that problem because he has already been through the confirmation process in his current Treasury post.

Martoche said in a statement he would "seek to provide stability and leadership to the agency during the transition." He also said he would appoint Fiechter as his principal deputy director.

Martoche takes over the reins of the agency overseeing the restructuring of the troubled S&L industry, and will preside over a growing list of lawsuits against savings industry executives accused of illegal lending practices.

Wall, criticized in Congress for underestimating the S&L crisis and acting slowly against the California-based Lincoln Savings and Loan Association, announced Dec. 4 he would resign as soon as the administration found a replacement.

Greyhound slowly rebuilding

By JOHN A. BOLT

DALLAS (AP) — Greyhound says it is "slowly but surely" restoring service at the strikebound bus company with replacement drivers and breakaway union members.

Greyhound Lines Inc., America's only nationwide bus system, said Tuesday it had 37,321 riders the day before, 34 percent of the number carried on the same day last year, but up from Friday's 30 percent.

"The trend is up. There is no erosion in our service," said George Gravley, a spokesman for GLI Holdings, parent company of Greyhound. "It's getting better slowly but surely."

The company's 6,300 drivers and about 3,000 office and maintenance workers are on strike. The union has asked for new talks, but none are scheduled.

The union issued a bulletin to its members Tuesday, urging them to use their cars to take blood to hospitals where supplies may have been disrupted by the strike.

But Red Cross officials said they were unaware of any serious disrup-

GM may add vehicle at Arlington

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — It's bad news, good news for workers at the General Motors assembly plant in Arlington.

They will be out of work for about two months while the plant is shut down for conversion to build a restyled car, but the expected announcement that an additional vehicle will be built there gives the plant a brighter future.

The plant is scheduled to close April 27 and will reopen in mid-June, officials say.

When it reopens there will be a new $97 million paint shop that will allow it to produce cars with base-coat, clear-coat finishes. The total dollar amount of plant improvements will not be released until the June reopening, GM spokeswoman Sharon Hines said.

Plant sources also expect the retooled plant to begin building pilot cars for the Buick Roadmaster, a 1991 car yet to be announced by GM, but much discussed in the trade press for the past year.

Arlington has been doing preliminary work on the Roadmaster, based on the restyled Caprice, for months, said a source, who asked not to be identified.

GM recently announced base prices of $15,995 for the restyled Caprice and $17,370 for the Caprice Classic. Both cars will have standard anti-lock brakes and driver-side air bags.

"The future (of the plant) is bright with this addition," Ms. Hines said.

Executives at the Arlington facility have told workers that the Roadmaster, Caprice and Cadillac Brougham models would give the plant a healthy model mix, making it more resistant to industry fluctuations than a one-product facility.

Greyhound training replacement workers

By JOE TAYLOR

The course on how to drive a bus is one of four training operations set up by Greyhound a month ago in anticipation of the strike begun Friday by 6,300 drivers and 3,000 maintenance workers at America's only nationwide bus company.

A guard blocked access to visitors Tuesday at the out-of-the-way motel parking lot from which the buses left. A mechanic directed visitors to Room 155. There, a man with a Greyhound ID tag denied any training was going on.

Finally, in the room next door, a man wearing a Greyhound tie pin — who like the others refused to identify himself — acknowledged that this lot 30 miles south of Richmond was the site of one of the training

Perrier returning to U.S. in April

By SKIP WOLLENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — Parched for Perrier? The U.S. importer of the sparkling water that became a status symbol in the '80s and the object of a worldwide contamination recall in the '90s says relief is a month or more away.

Newly-bottled Perrier bearing a special marking to show that it was bottled after the contamination was eliminated is being shipped for the first time since last month's recall, Source Perrier SA said Tuesday.

Meantime, Perrier Group of America is launching a $25 million campaign today with ads in 22 newspapers to keep the brand's name before the public and rebuild sales of what had been the top-selling imported bottled water.

The new bottles are expected to reach shelves in the eastern United States early next month and the rest of the country within three months.

They will carry the mark "Nouvelle Production" on the label to distinguish them from the 160 million bottles pulled off the market last month.

Source Perrier said Tuesday in Paris that shipments to distributors resume today. But Perrier Group officials said it will take until early April for the bottles travel overseas, pass through customs and be distributed to the more than 1 million U.S. outlets from supermarkets to bars where Perrier is sold.

"Perrier. Worth Waiting For" is the theme of ads slated to appear today in USA Today, the Wall Street Journal and 20 major market newspapers.

Perrier also plans a series of humorous radio ads in the 15 largest U.S. markets, featuring actors posing as newscasters for the Perrier News Network reporting on Perrier "sightings."

In one ad, fictional correspondent Jill Purity interviews a man who had spotted a bottle of Perrier. Jill notes the bottle is missing, and the man explains that Elvis Presley came and drank it.

Ronald V. Davis, president and chief executive of Greenwich, Conn.-based Perrier Group, said the humor was appropriate because "no one was hurt" and no health risk was posed by the contamination incident.

Perrier was recalled Feb. 9 in the United States after traces of benzene, a cancer-causing chemical, were found in some Perrier bottles. The recall was broadened five days later to all 160 million bottles in 120 countries when contaminated bottles showed up in several other countries.

Company officials claim the benzene, a naturally occurring gas that dissolves in water, entered Perrier's bottling line when workers failed to replace a filter used to screen impurities from the carbon dioxide gas that is mixed with the water to provide more fizz.

They said new quality control procedures have been instituted at the plant in Vergeze.

Posted price holding steady

The posted price is holding steady at $20.50 for the second week while futures prices for West Texas Intermediate dropped 16 cents to $21.14 in mid-morning trading.

The rally in the energy markets ran out of steam Tuesday with prices of wholesale unleaded gasoline pulling back sharply.

Market analysts said news that a barge loaded with a petroleum product exploded in a New York harbor waterway temporarily spurred buying in the energy futures pits.

The contract for April delivery of unleaded regular gasoline fell 1.51 cents to 57.79 cents a gallon, erasing part of Monday's 2.83 cents surge. Contracts for delivery further in the future also declined, but more moderately.

Among other refined products traded on the New York Merc, No. 2 home heating oil for April delivery fell 0.77 cent to 57.22 cents a gallon after soaring 2.12 cents on Monday. Later contracts ended with similar drops.

The April contract for West Texas Intermediate, the key grade of U.S. crude oil, lost 28 cents to close at $21.30 per 42-gallon barrel, more than erasing Monday's gain of 23 cents. Later contracts finished lower by comparable amounts.

Peter Beutel, an energy specialist at Elders Futures Inc., said there wasn't any obvious fundamental cause for the selling.

Dollar higher, Yen and Mark weak

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was higher in European trading late this morning, buoyed by the weakness of the West German mark and Japanese yen, dealers said. Gold prices were lower.

Foreign exchange dealers said the market was again testing the central banks' resolve to keep the dollar from rising.

"The dollar is well bid, but the market is extremely nervous because it expects to see the central banks any moment now," a trader said.

Central banks refrained from intervening Tuesday, following heavy dollar sales on Monday.

Traders said the weakness of the mark and the yen were the main factors pushing the dollar up at the moment. "We're bullish," said a trader at a large U.S. bank in Frankfurt.

Dealers said there were no new factors in the market, but added investor demand for dollars was sustained and would keep the dollar well supported.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose 1.25 yen to a closing 150.75 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at a higher rate of 150.80 yen.

In London, the dollar rose against the British pound. It cost $1.6415 to buy one pound, cheaper than $1.6495 late Tuesday.

Bullion dealers said gold prices were weaker, reflecting the market's preoccupation with the dollar's movements and the lack of any clear indication of a retreat from its recent advances.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $402.25 a troy ounce, down from $405 bid late Tuesday. At midmorning, the city's major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $402.60.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $1.83 to close at a bid $402.90.

Stock prices on the rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose broadly Tuesday in quiet trading, boosted by several waves of computer-driven buying and strength in dollartrading and the bond market, traders said.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 27.25 to 2,676.80.

Advancing issues outnumbered declining ones by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,028 up, 489 down and 484 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Board volume totaled 143.64 million shares, up from 140.11 million in the previous session.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 175.55 million shares.

The currency and bond markets provided little initial direction for the stock market, and stock prices drifted slightly higher. But in the early afternoon, the dollar strengthened, bond prices rose and the buy programs kicked in.

JACK SHERMAN CHEVROLET has just marked its fifth anniversary.

The dealership began operations March 1, 1985 and since then has added two other automobile lines, Geo and Saab.

Sherman and his wife Dolly came to Midland from California, after his retirement from Chevrolet Motor Division, where he had 31 years experience.

He has served as president of the Midland New Car Dealers Association and on the Chevrolet National Dealer Council in 1987 and 1988.

Sherman has also been involved in community affairs such as Junior Achievement, the Better Business Bureau, Midland Chamber of Commerce, Green Tree Country Club, Permian Basin Petroleum Association, Midland Odessa Health & Retirement Endeavor (MOHRE), Downtown Rotary Club and the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

The corporate headquarters of Mr. Gatti's pizza restaurants will move from Austin to Kerrville, the restaurant chain's parent company announced.

There are two Mr. Gatti's in Midland, one in Tierra Del Sol shopping center on Cuthbert and one in the Midland Plaza shopping center.

Thirty-six jobs with an annual payroll of $1 million will come with the move, according to officials of parent company LDB Corp.

L.D. Brinkman, president of LDB Corp., said Tuesday that the move would be completed in about 60 days. The relocation will allow Kerrville-based LDB Corp. to become more actively involved in Mr. Gatti's, he said.

The Mr. Gatti's training operation will remain in Austin but could also be relocated later, Brinkman said. The training center instructs about 200 people a year.

American Airlines, which flies out of Midland International Airport, reports this week that its passenter traffic in February climbed 13.6 percent, making it the best traffic performance for February in the company's history.

American's cargo traffic rose more than 30 percent in February, with strong gains in both domestic and international markets.

Last month, American flew 5.35 billion revenue passenger miles, compared with the 4.71 billion flown in February 1989. A revenue passenger mile is one paying passenger flown one mile.

American's capacity, measured in available seat miles, jumped 9.0 percent in February to 8.96 billion seat miles from 8.22 billion. The airline's load factor increased 2.5 points to 59.8 percent from 57.3 percent.

Throughout its system, American boarded 5,294,100 passengers in February, up 12.7 percent from the 4,697,337 boarded last February.

Forrest Oil names co-chairs, president

Denver based Forrest Oil Corporation has announced that Clayton G. Dorn, chairman of the board and chief executive officer and David F. Dorn, president, have been appointed co-chairmen of the board of the company. Both will continue to serve as directors and as members of Forrest's executive committee. William L. Dorn was appointed president and chief executive officer to fill the offices previously held by David F. Dorn and Clayton G. Dorn.

William Dorn is a native of San Antonio, Texas and a graduate of Phillips Academy, Andover, Massachusetts and the University of Texas, Austin, Texas where he graduated in 1971 with a B.A. in history.

He has 19 years of service with the company, beginning as a scout in Midland, Texas in 1971.

Drexel, creditors nearer to agreement

NEW YORK (AP) — The lead creditor to Drexel Burnham Lambert Group Inc. withdrew a request for a court-appointed examiner in the firm's bankruptcy case as the two sides neared a deal over who should manage the dissolution of the company.

Drexel and its creditors were negotiating over a proposal to allow a triumvirate of Drexel board members to oversee the firm, with input from creditors, as it liquidates under Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings.

The decision by First City Bancorp. of Texas to withdraw its request for an examiner was a sign the Drexel board members were likely to continue directing the liquidation.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Will charges be added to dividend reinvestments?

By BILL DOYLE

Q. As you recommend, I am participating in dividend reinvestment plans (DRPs) of companies in which I own stock. Now, one of the companies has amended its plan. In the future, participants will pay brokerage commissions and a 5 percent service charge on each transaction — up to a maximum of $2.50, for now.

Do you suppose other companies will follow suit? Given these changes, is it still a good idea to reinvest dividends?

Doyle

A. A fair number of companies already lay on some costs to DRP participants. Evergreen Enterprises, the Laurel, Md., outfit keeping track of such things, reports 990 companies have DRPs and participants in 80 percent of those plans pay brokerage and/or service charges.

Of course that means 70 percent of the companies with DRPs permit stockholders to reinvest dividends free without any charge. Which way the trend will go in the future is anybody's guess. The decision will be made by the board of directors at each company.

DRPs are good deals because they provide easy — and usually inexpensive — ways to accumulate stock. After making an initial purchase through a broker, a shareholder can sign up for the plan and have future dividends used to purchase additional full and fractional shares. As dividends buy more shares, each dividend becomes larger.

The charges in the DRP you mention shouldn't be very high. The brokerage commissions almost certainly will be lower than those you would pay by investing an equal amount through a broker. That's because the reinvestments of all DRP participants are lumped together, thereby getting a lower percentage commission rate. The 5 percent — $2.50 maximum — service charge hardly covers the personnel and computer costs involved.

My advice is to stay with that DRP — unless your total costs are very high, say, 10 percent of each reinvestment.

Q. I sold a stock about two months ago and received payment for my shares. But I was enrolled in the company's dividend reinvestment plan and have yet to receive the proceeds of my DRP balance. I wrote to the company's dividend reinvestment department exactly one month ago and have heard nothing. Do you suppose I am jumping the gun?

A. No. You have waited more than long enough for the proceeds from the sale of shares in your DRP account. However, you might not have followed the procedure necessary to close that account and receive the money.

Those procedures vary from one company to another and are spelled out in the prospectus sent to DRP participants. Check your prospectus. You'll find the information you need in a section headed "Withdrawal From the Plan" or similar words. If you didn't hang on to the prospectus, phone the company dividend reinvestment or shareholder relations department.

When you close out a DRP and request the money, the shares in your account have to be sold by the plan agent. There's a possibility your shares have yet to be sold. In some plans, such sales are done every three months.

Q. I have acquired stock at 85 percent of market value through a company payroll deduction plan. Each year, I have paid tax on the 15 percent discount as ordinary income. Am I correct in assuming my "basis" — cost for tax purposes — is market value on the date of each purchase?

A. Yes. You paid, out of your salary, 85 percent of market value and then paid tax on the 15 percent discount — bringing your basis to 100 percent of market value.

Q. What with all the reinvested dividends, stock dividends, stock splits, rights offerings, etc., on a stock I have been buying through payroll deductions for years, how do I establish a basis acceptable to the Internal Revenue Service?

A. By keeping VERY careful records. If you didn't, go to your company's personnel department or corporate secretary's office for help.

Study warns U.S. could lose software lead

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has 70 percent of the world's computer software market but could lose its lead without better legal protection as other countries develop their software, a congressional study says.

With continued innovation, the United States can keep outshining its foreign competitors, the congressional Office of Technology Assessment said in a study released today.

It said intellectual property protection encourages innovation by providing incentives for creation and security for investors.

Last year, software and related services were a $60 billion industry in the United States. Software refers to sets of instructions for computers, whether they are stored in punched cards, magnetic tape, disks, or on chips. The term can encompass data as well as programs.

Mitchell D. Kapor, the creator of Lotus 1-2-3, told a House subcommittee that over-protection of software "is as pernicious as under-protection in its stifling effects on innovation."

He said his industry has made an "unsteady but stubborn march" to extend copyright protection of computer software. But, he said, it is possible to go too far.

"I honestly believe that this industry isn't mature enough to cope with a barrage of new laws," Kapor said. "Congress could help both the software industry and its customers if, when it passes laws their legislative histories tell the courts that, when they consider a copyright case, they should err on the side of innovation over protection."

The Software Publishers Association, a worldwide trade association representing 575 microcomputer software developers and publishers, said in a statement that patent protection for their product is not universally endorsed, partly because publishers are concerned that the government's Patent and Trademark Office can't adequately review applications.

"Publishers believe that the PTO is understaffed, underfunded, and so is not equipped to evaluate most software patent applications in a timely and effective fashion," the association said.

There is fear of foreign competition, especially from the Japanese, who reportedly plan to spend $125 billion over 10 years for programming research and development — especially in the field of artificial intelligence, where the goal is to make computers think more like humans.

The congressional study said there are basic questions about providing too much, as well as too little, legal protection for software.

New technologies have long challenged existing protections, but usually accommodations are made.

"For instance, the first copyright statute dealt only with maps, charts and books, but copyright has been able to deal with hard questions posed by works like engravings, musical compositions, photographs," the study said.

The company has been operating with about 700 replacement drivers plus what it says are 350 union members who crossed picket lines. Union officials said their own checks show that only 95 union drivers have been behind the wheel.

Gravley said the replacement drivers are being paid under the contract terms the strikers rejected.

The contract does not change base pay but allows drivers to reach higher pay levels sooner by setting up a system based on experience rather than seniority, Gravley said.

The trainees undergo a 21-day program of classroom work and behind-the-wheel experience, the unidentified Greyhound employees said. On Tuesday, the training buses were rolling to Charleston, S.C., a 10-hour trip with stops along the way in 22 small towns.

Liz Hale, a spokeswoman at company headquarters in Dallas, said the trainees have at least one year of experience in driving large trucks or buses.

But some strikers said the regimen was inadequate compared to the 12-week course Greyhound normally provides.

"As much as I hate my ex-wife, I wouldn't let her get on a bus driven by one of these replacements," said a picket wearing a "Scab Watcher" hat outside the Richmond terminal this week. He refused to give his name.

Greyhound estimated 700 replacement drivers are at work and claimed on Tuesday to be running at 34 percent of its normal routes. An additional 300 drivers graduate this week, and some union drivers have crossed picket lines, Hale said.

The company has received 6,500 applications to replace strikers, Greyhound said. But 50 to 60 of the new drivers had quit in the first day or two of the strike because of intimidation by strikers, company officials said.

"We are not surprised by that," said another Greyhound spokesman, George Gravley. "These people were recruited and they were told honestly and forthrightly ... the nature of the work."

Greyhound officials in Dallas would not disclose the training locations, but The Associated Press learned training was going on here and at Indianapolis and Sacramento, Calif. The fourth training location was not immediately known.

Chairman Fred G. Currey said over the weekend that Greyhound Lines Inc. has millions of dollars in reserve.

FREDRICK J. LEWIS ENDORSES NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

We all know that it is much easier to point a finger and identify a problem, than to roll up our sleeves and develop a solution.
Nick Taylor knows that Texas has a crime problem and he has taken it upon himself to be part of the solution. Nick's helping hand has made it possible for an innovative Violent Crime Prevention Program, to expand from teaching in a backroom at the Midland YMCA to a special class now being offered at the University of Texas at Austin.
As a security professional I believe that Nick Taylor understands how to deal with crime. Please join me in supporting Nick Taylor. "Your vote will be part of the solution."
Fredrick J. Lewis

Afghanistan troops fight for air base

AP

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Mutinous Afghan soldiers battled loyalists today for control of Afghanistan's biggest air base, and there were reports the base had fallen to the forces trying to overthrow the Soviet-backed government.

A government spokesman denied the reports but acknowledged fighting at the base at Bagram.

Western diplomats and guerrilla leaders in Pakistan said they had received reports from Afghanistan of fighting between rival factions in the southern city of Kandahar and the northwestern city of Herat.

The diplomats and guerrilla sources, all speaking on condition of anonymity, also told of sporadic street fighting in Kabul, the capital, and said mutinous air force pilots bombed the capital for a second day but were repulsed by troops loyal to President Najib.

Afghanistan's highest-ranking diplomat in Pakistan, Charge d'Affaires Qudratullah Ahmadi, denied there was widespread fighting. "There is only fighting in Bagram. All of Afghanistan is quiet," he told reporters in Islamabad.

Of the Bagram battle, Ahmadi said, "This was a strong challenge. This was their (the mutineers') last chance." He denied the base had fallen.

But a foreign diplomat said, "All indications are that the mutineers are in control of Bagram."

"Beyond that, the situation in Afghanistan is exceedingly unclear," the diplomat said.

Claims made by the Kabul government and the Moslem insurgents are often exaggerated and impossible to verify independently.

The reported fighting countered Najib's claims that his forces had crushed the uprising launched Tuesday by his defense minister, Maj. Gen. Shah Nawaz Tanai, a hard-line Marxist popular with the military rank and file.

In a brief speech today on official Radio Kabul, Najib again claimed victory over the mutineers and said renegade soldiers were surrendering. "Tanai has escaped. His allies are defecting, and those who do not surrender will be punished," he said.

Radio Kabul said troops loyal to Najib controlled Kabul, a city of 2 million, but urged residents to stay indoors.

It also accused another high-ranking party member, Asadullah Sarwari, of involvement in the attempted overthrow. Sarwari was a former interior minister known as "the butcher" for hundreds of killings following the 1978 revolution that installed the Communist government.

The whereabouts of both Tanai and Sarwari was not immediately known, but Radio Kabul said Tanai had been hiding near Bagram, 30 miles north of Kabul.

Najib, who was installed as president by the Soviets in December 1986, said "a number of people," mostly civilians, had been killed and injured since Tuesday. He gave no figures.

The government appealed to supporters to take up arms in defense. Gulbaddin Hekmatyar, leader of one of the most fundamentalist of the guerrilla groups that took up arms against the government 11 years ago, claimed six Soviet warplanes joined the government's fight. A Soviet official denied it.

Western diplomats and U.N. officials in Pakistan backed the report and said the Chinese, Italian and Indian embassies had been slightly damaged.

130 feared dead in ship collision

LIMA, Peru (AP) — A riverboat carrying 209 people, most of them children, smashed into a freighter and sank during the night in the Amazon River. Police said one person died and 134 were missing and feared drowned.

The Andresito sank 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, an hour and and a half after leaving Iquitos, a Peruvian river port 715 miles northeast of Lima, police there said.

The boat's helmsman told police in Iquitos that the Andresito's motor failed and vessel began drifting in the Amazon's fast currents.

In the darkness it smashed into several small boats anchored along the shore. It then careened into a freighter tied to a dock, rolled over and sank in the dark, swirling waters of the Amazon, police said.

Police said 74 people had been rescued by dawn today and that the body of a small girl was found. Heavy rain was hampering rescue boats and divers in their search for survivors and bodies.

Most of the passengers were children, their parents and school teachers who were returning home from Iquitos after school holidays, police said.

They were headed to Puritoyacu, a jungle village on an Amazon tributary three days travel by boat from Iquitos, police said.

The riverboat rolled over quickly and sank because it was overloaded with passengers and lumber for building a new school in Puritoyacu, authorities said.

They said the freighter received minor damage.

Libyan plant now making nerve agents

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — Libya's chemical weapons plant outside Tripoli is at an operational level, turning out limited quantities of mustard gas and nerve agents, U.S. officials say.

The development poses a challenge to the Bush administration's campaign to halt the proliferation of the dangerous weapons and to conclude a treaty this year for an international ban on production.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III was expected to be questioned about the development during his testimony before a House Appropriations subcommittee today. Baker, who attended a White House dinner Tuesday night, declined to discuss the Libyan plant with reporters, saying, "It's classified."

National security adviser Brent Scowcroft said, "I don't know anything about it."

Chemical weapons are considered the poor nations' atom bomb because they are relatively cheap to produce and hard to detect. Libya is one of about two dozen countries considered capable of or actually producing poison gas, which was used by Iran and Iraq in the Persian Gulf war.

Even while seeking a treaty in a joint drive with the Soviet Union, the administration has vowed to retain about 2 percent of the U.S. stockpile as long as any of these countries refuse to comply with the ban.

Libya, a frequent target of U.S. terrorism accusations, was believed to have reached operational capability at Rabta, about 60 miles south of Tripoli, toward the end of last year, the U.S. officials said.

This was a setback for U.S. diplomacy, which in the closing days of the Reagan administration had managed to persuade West German firms and other foreign suppliers to stop their technical assistance to dictator Moammar Gadhafi's program.

U.S. officials announced then that Libya had been halted before achieving full production.

But the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity Tuesday night, said that Libya for months maintained an assembly line until it reached operational capability.

The officials did not disclose the quantity of mustard gas and nerve agents being produced but said Libya also was capable of manufacturing canisters to carry the weapons to their targets.

It was not clear whether Gadhafi is relying on outside sources for help in accelerating the program.

Gadhafi has denied all along that he was producing chemical weapons. He said the plant was designed to produce pharmaceutical drugs.

Mustard gas, used in World War I, is an extremely irritating gas that blisters the skin. Nerve gases, developed by Nazi Germany in World War II but never used, kill by disabling the normal transmission of nerve impulses.

Diana Kennedy teaches art of Mexican cooking

By LINDA SUSAN DUDLEY
Copley News Service

How can such a diminutive, down-to-earth person with that room-brightening smile make people shake in their boots?

That's Diana Kennedy for you.

Kennedy, heavyweight author of international fame, recently brought her expertise to Southern California to teach some master cooking classes for the first time in four years. And she's the boss, make no mistake about that.

Kitchen assistants rush to do her bidding, business owners and executive chefs snap to attention when she speaks, and her students treat her like a guru.

Kennedy recently taught two classes in the private kitchen at John Culbertson Winery in Temecula, Calif. As usual, when Kennedy comes to the United States to teach, the classes were sold out.

The lessons were based on her fifth cookbook, "The Art of Mexican Cooking."

"If these tamales are done you must rush to the table so you can eat them now," Kennedy tells her audience.

Class members lean in close in rapt attention as Kennedy unfolds the banana leaf that cups the open-face tamale.

"Done," she proclaims, and students rush to the table just as Kennedy has instructed. It's always that way in a Kennedy class. Students (or anyone else, for that matter), who talk to each other while Kennedy is talking are quickly admonished in front of others to keep quiet. She is, any student learns, a stickler for details. But the care she takes with her multiflavored dishes is what brings her fans back for more.

A native of England, she was introduced to Mexican cuisine as the wife of New York Times reporter Paul Kennedy, who took her to Mexico City when he was named Times correspondent in Mexico.

"I saw wonderful markets there and just got on with it," says Kennedy, who began a love affair with the cuisine of that country that continues today.

The Kennedy home was an international crossroads where guests were always sure of one of Diana's now-famous meals. The more she cooked, the more she liked it and the more she learned. To ferret out recipes and cooking techniques, she traveled to all corners of Mexico to watch native cooks. She copied old, traditional family recipes that had been not been exposed to the rest of the food world before.

After the death of her husband in 1967, Kennedy busied herself with a Mexican cooking school in New York City. It was now-retired New York Times food editor Craig Claiborne who urged Kennedy to assemble her knowledge of Mexican cuisine into a book. Her first was published in 1972; "The Art of Mexican Cooking," was published by Bantam in the fall of 1989.

"Now I know Mexican cuisine better than anyone," Kennedy says.

It's obvious her students agree. Kennedy's recipes follow.

This sauce comes from the northern part of Michoacan, which borders on Jalisco. It is earthy and delicious served on top of boiled white rice with crumbled cotija cheese. It keeps well and also can be frozen.

MICHOACAN PASILLA SAUCE

3 pasilla chilies
2 tablespoons safflower oil
2 small tomatillos, husks removed, rinsed
2 garlic cloves, unpeeled
¾ cup water
¼ small white onion, finely chopped
¼ teaspoon salt, or to taste

Remove stalks, if any, from dried chilies and discard. Wipe chilies with damp cloth to remove dust, etc. Heat oil in frying pan and gently fry chilies, without burning, turning them around from time to time until they are just firm to touch, about 5 minutes.

Remove chilies with slotted spoon and drain on paper toweling. In same oil, fry tomatillos and garlic until lightly browned and soft inside — about 5 minutes. Put water into blender jar and add tomatillos, peeled garlic and crumbled, fried chilies with their seeds and veins. Blend for a few seconds to a textured puree.

Heat same oil in pan, add onion and fry gently until translucent, without browning; about 1 minute. Add blended ingredients and salt and fry, stirring from time to time and scraping bottom of pan, until sauce has reduced and thickened a little and is well seasoned; about 5 minutes.

This is a simple but surprisingly delicious Yucatecan way of preparing broiled chicken or turkey. As with many other similar dishes, it does add something special to the flavor to have a charcoal or wood grill at hand, but an ordinary broiler will do. Kennedy says it is very good cold.

CHICKEN IN RED SAUCE

6 rounded tablespoons recado rojo (recipe follows)
5 garlic cloves, peeled and crushed
Sea salt to taste
4 tablespoons Seville orange juice, or mild vinegar, approximately 1 (3-pound) chicken, cut into serving pieces
4 whole gueros or fresno chilies or banana peppers, charred
3 small heads of garlic, charred and cloves separated but not peeled
1 tablespoon dried oregano, Yucatecan if possible, lightly toasted
1 cup lightly pickled onions (recipe follows)
3 to 4 tablespoons lard or safflower oil

Blend recado rojo, crushed garlic, salt and bitter orange juice together to a smooth paste. Spread chicken pieces with a thin layer of paste and set rest aside.

Put chicken pieces, fresh chilies, whole garlic cloves and oregano into a pan, barely cover with water, add a little salt and bring to a simmer. Continue simmering chicken until almost tender but still a little underdone — about 20 minutes. Remove from broth. Add onions to broth, bring to simmer, remove from heat and set aside but keep hot.

Mix rest of recado rojo mixture with lard and set aside while you heat grill or broiler. (If you prefer not to use lard, then just spread with paste and brush on oil just before grilling.)

Grill chicken pieces, turning from time to time, for about 5 minutes on each side or until cooked through and well browned. Serve in soup bowls with some of hot broth and onions on top.

RECADO ROJO
(Achiote Paste)

4 rounded tablespoons achiote seeds
1 teaspoon crushed dried oregano, Yucatecan if possible
1 teaspoon cumin seeds
½ teaspoon mild peppercorns
12 whole allspice
Approximately 3 tablespoons water

Mix spices together and grind, one-third of quantity at a time — or as much as your electric grinder can accommodate efficiently — as finely as possible. Sift through fine strainer and grind residue once again. Stir water in gradually and mix well to stiff paste.

LIGHTLY PICKLED ONIONS

1½ teaspoons salt

Put all ingredients in glass or porcelain bowl, mix well, and set aside to macerate for about 2 hours before using. They will keep for several weeks in a refrigerator.

This soup has a close resemblance to tortilla soup.

TARASCAN SOUP

6 ounces (about 1 medium) tomato, roughly chopped, unpeeled
1 small sliced white onion
1 garlic clove, peeled and roughly chopped
1 small ancho chili, cleaned of veins and soaked in hot water for 10 minutes
1 corn tortilla
1 tablespoon safflower oil
5 cups chicken broth
1 large leafy stem of epazote (optional)
⅛ teaspoon dried oregano, Mexican if possible
Salt to taste
6 corn tortillas, cut into narrow strips and fried crisp (about one-third inch by 2 inches)
3 ancho chilies, cleaned of seeds and veins, flattened out, torn into thin strips and fried crisp
6 tablespoons finely grated gueso anejo or Romano cheese

Put water into blender jar and add tomato, onion, garlic, dried ancho chili and tortilla. Blend to fairly smooth puree.

Heat oil in soup pot, add puree and fry over fairly high heat for about 8 minutes. Add chicken broth, optional epazote and oregano, cook over medium heat until well seasoned; about 10 minutes. Salt to taste.

To serve: Put some of fried tortilla pieces into each cup, pour soup over them and top with pieces of fried ancho chili and cheese. Serve immediately.

There's a whole lotta salsa goin' on — everything

CNS Photo

The exciting taste of salsa has expanded to include piquant mixtures made form pineapple, papaya and cucumbers, in addition to the traditional tomatoes, chilies and onion.

Salsas are hot. These coarse-textured, oft spicy relishes are making appearances in trend-setting restaurants across the country. And those old familiar ingredients — tomatoes, chilies and onions — are often being augmented or replaced by such far-out additions as papaya, pineapple, black beans and mangoes.

Experts disagree on salsa definitions, though most concur that a coarse texture and fresh, chopped ingredients set salsas apart from sauces or relishes. But people who make salsas are as opinionated as those who frequent chili cookoffs.

"For me, it's gotta be hot or it's not salsa," said Jacqueline McMahan, author of "The Salsa Book." "It's got to have some form of chilies."

No matter how you dice it, salsa continues to command the attention it earned during the early '80s, when the advent of Southwestern cuisine made salsa the cool thing to be cooking. Now, increasing concern about high-fat sauces and America's interest in unusual foods are keeping salsa on the front burner.

Author McMahan, who recently released a revised version of her 1986 salsa book, offered several explanations for our insatiable lust for salsa.

"I think it's because salsa is an exciting taste," she said in an interview. "With people being as well-traveled as we are and exposed to ethnic flavors, we're looking for more exciting things in our food.

"Also, people say, 'I'm on a diet, but I can still have salsa.' Salsa is a treat."

McMahan figures most salsas contain about 30 calories per large spoonful. They usually contain negligible amounts of fat, because most are prepared from vegetables or fruits, herbs, chilies or spices, vinegar and sometimes a small amount of oil.

Increasingly, salsas are being used as toppings for meats and fish. The hearty, tomato-based salsas, often blended with onions, cilantro and assorted chilies, are best on beef, pork, chicken or egg dishes. With huevos rancheros, a basic tomato and onion salsa flavored with cumin, chili powder, garlic and oregano is particularly good.

Instead of serving salsa with its traditional accompaniment — high-fat, high-sodium tortilla chips — McMahan offers salsa with sliced sourdough bread or baguettes. Raw vegetables are another dipping alternative; jicama and carrots are especially suited to hot, Mexican-style salsas.

Though McMahan loves Mexican salsas, her current favorite is a tropical version prepared with fresh pineapple, jicama, chilies and ginger. She says it's marvelous with anything grilled or barbecued.

The following recipes may be varied according to personal taste, adding a chili here, some citrus juice or rice vinegar there.

CILANTRO SALSA

1 bunch cilantro, minced
¼ cup onion, minced
2 jalapenos, veins and seeds removed, minced
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 tablespoons wine vinegar
3 to 4 tablespoons olive oil

Yields 1½ cups.

Combine all above ingredients and allow to marinate for several hours.

From "The Salsa Book," by Jacqueline Higuera McMahan, The Olive Press; $12.95

GREEN SALSA

2 cloves garlic, peeled
12 tomatillos, peeled and washed
1 bunch cilantro, washed, stems removed
1 onion, sliced and sauteed in butter until translucent
3 cups water

Yields about 3 cups.

Remove cores from tomatillos and cut into quarters. Place garlic, tomatillos, cilantro, onion and water in blender and puree well. Strain into pan and bring to boil. Add salt to taste.

PAPAYA SALSA

2 cups firm papaya (about 1 Hawaiian papaya)
½ cup red bell pepper, diced
1 serrano or jalapeno chili, minced
¼ cup red onion, diced
½ teaspoon dried red pepper, crushed
Juice from 1 lime
2 tablespoons cilantro, snipped

Yields about 3¼ cups.

Once you have diced all fruit and vegetables, very gently stir with spices and lime juice. This salsa goes best with grilled fish and keeps well for a day.

From "The Salsa Book."

PINEAPPLE SALSA

2 cups fresh pineapple, peeled and diced
½ cup fresh jicama, peeled and diced (see note)
½ cup red onion, minced
½ cup red bell pepper, diced
1 serrano or jalapeno chili, seeds removed, minced
2 teaspoons fresh ginger, minced
¼ to ½ teaspoon dried, small chili, crushed (you can use japones or arbol chili)
1 tablespoon rice vinegar (not seasoned)

Yields 3 cups.

Mince chili, leaving in all seeds and veins. Add rest of ingredients and mix lightly. Taste for seasoning to see if you would like a little more crushed red pepper or cilantro. Keeps nicely for 2 days in refrigerator.

RED SALSA

2 serrano chilies, stems removed
5 tomatoes
2 cloves garlic, peeled
1 onion, sliced and sauteed in butter until translucent

Yields about 1½ cups.

Remove cores from tomatoes and cut in quarters. Place onion, tomatoes, garlic and serranos in blender and puree well. Strain into a pan and bring to boil. Add salt to taste.

CUCUMBER SALSA

6 peeled pickling cucumbers or 2 regular cucumbers, peeled and seeded, diced
1 small tomato, seeds removed, diced
⅛ small red onion, diced
2 to 3 diced jalapenos
1½ teaspoons salt
½ cup orange juice
½ cup lime juice
½ cup grapefruit juice

Yields about 2½ cups.

Newest food trend is really old standby

By ROBIN KLEVEN
Copley News Service

One of the newest food trends to sweep America isn't new at all. Olive oil has been a Mediterranean staple for thousands of years.

But recent reports that this monounsaturated fat may help to reduce cholesterol have fueled its sales and raised its profile with consumers, many of whom were once reluctant to sample this flavorful oil.

At the same time, olive oil's distinctive flavor, which ranges from mellow to pungent, has garnered attention from chefs and home cooks across the country.

George Munger, chef/owner of two Southern California gourmet restaurants, Piret's in La Jolla and Piret Bistro/Gallery in Encinitas, uses olive oil for all his cooking needs and says it is the only oil he has in the house.

"There's no safflower oil, no corn oil," said the self-confessed olive oil fanatic. "I never use them. For the last 15 years extra-virgin olive oil is all I've used. Even if olive oil had real high cholesterol, I'd still love it."

According to Arbitron/SAMI, a New York marketing firm, Americans purchased $157.4 million worth of olive oil last year, and sales are expected to grow as consumer awareness increases.

"The sales of olive oil since 1982 have more than doubled and are getting close to being tripled," said Richard Sullivan, executive vice president of the Association of Food Industries in New Jersey. "Last year we sold 150 million pounds of olive oil; this year it could be 180 million pounds. There are indications that the market is increasing (in 1989) by 20 percent."

Sullivan feels there are two reasons for the increase. First, people are reacting to reports on the nutritional benefits of olive oil as our national concern over health grows. And second, the increasing popularity of Mediterranean and Southwest cuisine, with their emphasis on fresh, nutritious ingredients, has led to a heightened interest in healthful olive oil.

All types of olive oils are cholesterol-free. They are monounsaturated, which means they are better for the heart than saturated fats (such as butter and lard) and polyunsaturated fats (such as corn, safflower and sunflower oils and margarine).

Recent medical studies have shown that monunsaturated fats such as olive oil not only keep from raising cholesterol, but are also effective in lowering low-density lipoprotein, or LDL, cholesterol levels in human beings. While it has been shown that polyunsaturated fats can also lower LDL (or "bad") cholesterol levels, they lower high-density lipoproteins (or "good") cholesterol levels as well.

Whether you are choosing olive oil for flavor or health considerations, buying it can be a baffling proposition. Besides the plethora of brands and prices, there is the matter of unstandardized labeling for imported and domestic olive oils.

Not all olive oils are created equal. According to regulations set by the International Olive Oil Council, imported oil labeled "extra virgin" must come from the first pressing of high-quality olives.

Additionally, the oil must have an oleic acidity level of no more than 1 percent. The lower the acidity, the higher the quality and finer the flavor. The words "cold pressed" indicate that the oil has not been refined, another indication of high quality.

Oil labeled "virgin" must not exceed 3 percent acidity. An oil labeled "pure" is generally a blend of refined lower-quality oils and extra-virgin oil; the acidity varies, but the quality is generally the lowest of the three categories.

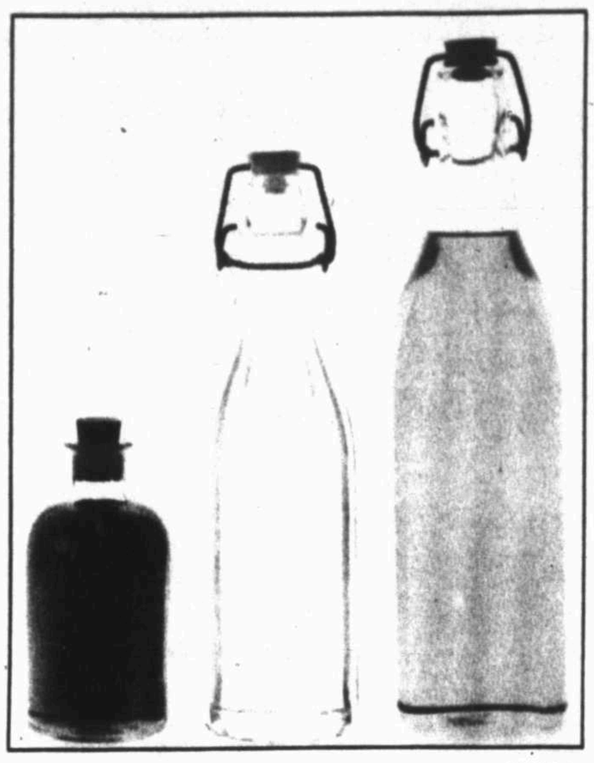
To add to the confusion, olive oil produced in California, not a member of the international council, is not required to conform to the organization's standards. The Olive Oil Association in New Jersey hopes to develop industrywide standards of quality in the future.

Olive oils labeled light, extra light or mild have been added to the lineup to appeal to consumers who dislike the oil's heavy taste. These oils are light only in texture, flavor and color; their calorie count is the same as other olive oils (about 115 calories per tablespoon).

Extra-virgin olive oil, the costliest and highest in quality of all, should be used wherever flavor is important: in salad dressings, for brushing on garlic bread, for marinades, even as a dip for pita or French bread. Virgin and pure oils may be used for sauteing or frying, since the high heat tends to destroy the complex flavors of better quality oils.

Extra-virgin oil comes in a multitude of styles, from light and subtle to strong and spicy. The finest come from Italy, especially the Tuscany region, where the oils are fruity, fragrant and often peppery in flavor.

French oils are also highly regarded, known for their subtle fruit flavor and light texture. Spanish oils are heavier, and usually offer a more pronounced olive taste.



CNS Photo

Ranging in color from pale gold to green, olive oil has flavors that can be fruity, mild or peppery.

Color may range from pale yellow to gold to leaf green, depending on the country of origin and the producer. Generally, a deeper color indicates a stronger oil, but the only way to be sure of a brand's style is to taste it.

According to Munger, you needn't spend a fortune to get decent extra-virgin oil. He recommends less expensive extra-virgin oils from Spain, Greece and Sicily as alternatives to the pricey "designer label" varieties from Tuscany and Provence.

"The oil from Spain and Greece has more of the flavor of the fruit and is greener in color," Munger explained. "I like it that way. I like the taste of the olives."

Munger's favorite olive oil dish consists of diced fresh tomatoes blended with extra-virgin oil, served on bread that has been rubbed with garlic and additional oil. He also likes to mix the oil with chopped tarragon, parsley, chervil and rosemary. "I just slop it on bread," he said, laughing.

To add olive oil to your repertoire, start with salad dressings, substituting extra-virgin oil for other types of oils. Brush olive oil on vegetables before grilling, and use seasoned olive oil as a marinade for meats, perhaps with a splash of red wine vinegar added.

Olive oil, perhaps with a bit of grated Parmesan or crushed fresh herbs stirred in, makes a rich dip for bread. Brush it on garlic bread instead of butter, and splash into pasta sauces as a healthful substitute for other oils. Saute foods with olive oil rather than cholesterol-laden butter.

And join the olive oil bandwagon, the oldest new trend to come around in the last few thousand years.

RED PEPPER PESTO

1 large red pepper, roasted, peeled and seeded or 1 (14-ounce) container of pimiento peppers, drained of liquid, torn in half and rinsed under cold running water
1 small bunch (⅛ ounce) cilantro leaves
Juice of ¼ lemon
1 heaping teaspoon crushed garlic
¼ teaspoon kosher salt
⅛ cup grated Romano Pecorino cheese
⅛ cup toasted pine nuts
Pinch crushed red pepper
¼ cup good quality olive oil

Yields about ⅛ cup.

Put peppers in food processor. Add cilantro, juice from lemon and crushed garlic. Pulse machine, scraping sides until mixture is all of same consistency.

Add salt, cheese, pine nuts and crushed red pepper. Pulse machine, adding olive oil until it is gone. Run machine until mixture is well blended, but still chunky.

Recipe from 8700 Restaurant, Scottsdale, Ariz.

BEEF CARPACCIO

¾ cup olive oil
Juice of 1 lemon
8 large shallots, finely diced
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon cracked black peppercorns
Julienned Parmesan cheese and chopped fresh chives for garnish

Yields 8 servings.

Chill 8 serving plates. Place meat in freezer about 10 minutes. Whisk together olive oil, lemon juice, shallots, salt and pepper in a small bowl and reserve.

Slice cold beef across grain into ⅛-inch slices. Then place each slice, one at a time, between 2 sheets plastic wrap and, using smooth side of meat pounder, flatten by gently pounding and pressing back and forth. Work from center out. Keep turning to flatten it evenly to about 1/16 inch. (You should spend about a minute on each s[illegible].)

Entirely cover each chilled plate with thin slices of beef. (At this stage, you can cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate for several hours.) Spoon reserved dressing over meat to evenly cover. Garnish with Parmesan strips and chives. Serve immediately.

Recipe from City Restaurant, Los Angeles.

CEVICHE

1 pound swordfish
⅔ cup freshly squeezed lime juice
4 tomatoes peeled, seeded and diced
1 red onion, finely diced
⅓ cup olive oil
⅓ cup freshly squeezed orange juice
1 cup tomato juice
⅓ cup fresh oregano leaves, chopped slightly
1 bay leaf
2 teaspoons minced jalapeno peppers
⅓ cup small green olives, unstuffed
Salt and pepper to taste

Yields 6 to 8 servings.

Skin swordfish fillet. Dice fillet in ¼-inch cubes and marinate in lime juice for 30 to 60 minutes. After fish has been marinated, discard juices.

Place fish and all remaining ingredients in bowl and toss them together. Taste for seasoning, add salt, pepper, more peppers or more oregano as your taste requires. Cover and refrigerate 30 to 60 minutes; serve cold on lettuce leaves.

Recipe from Border Grill Restaurant, Los Angeles.

MEDITERRANEAN FISH AND ASPARAGUS SALAD

1½ pounds tile or other firm-fleshed fish, such as halibut, cod, etc.
1 pound medium shrimp, cooked and shelled
⅓ cup extra-virgin olive oil
¾ cup imported small black olives
2 tablespoons capers, drained and chopped
Juice of 1 lemon
1½ teaspoons dried oregano
Salt and pepper to taste
8 cherry tomatoes, halved

Yields 8 servings.

Add shrimp, olive oil, olives, capers, lemon juice, oregano and salt and pepper to taste. Toss lightly, cover and let stand at room temperature for 1 hour. Add tomatoes and asparagus, toss lightly, correct seasoning and serve immediately.

Chicken cooking contest accepts entries

NEW YORK (AP) — The deadline for entering the 39th National Chicken Cooking Contest, sponsored by the National Broiler Council, is Oct. 15, 1990.

The only required ingredient is chicken, whole or in parts. Recipes will be judged on taste, appearance, simplicity and appeal. Your name, address and telephone number must be included on the front of each recipe. Mail recipes to: Chicken Contest, Box 28158, Central Station, Washington, D.C. 20005.

A finalist from each state and the District of Columbia will be selected to receive expense-paid trips to the national cook-off to be held May 16, 1991, in Little Rock, Ark. The top prize is $25,000.

DEAR ABBY

Minister underpaid for services

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I need someone to explain something to me; perhaps your readers could help. The story goes like this:

Van Buren

The bride was beautiful in her $900 gown. The photographer charged $830, and she didn't bat an eye. The florist insisted on his $360 in advance. The organist was only fair, but worth the $50 she was paid. The dinner was said to be delicious and expensive. The minister who gladly gave 13 hours of his time, helping to plan the ceremony, counsel the couple and conduct the two-hour rehearsal to which everybody was late, came to the church an hour and a half early so pictures could be taken beforehand — all in spite of the fact that neither the bride nor groom, nor any members of their families, belonged to his church. He was paid $20.

Abby, if this were the exception, I would chalk it up to one insensitive, ungrateful couple, but this is not the exception — it is the rule. It has happened to me scores of times during my career in the ministry, so it appears to be the accepted way of doing things. It may not be intended as an insult, but it certainly feels like one. Can you understand this? — PUZZLED IN WICHITA

DEAR PUZZLED: I can understand this happening 40 years ago, but today, a minister cannot have his suit cleaned and pressed, get a haircut and pay to gas up his car to get him to the church and back for $20. Today, a $100 bill for his services would seem meager.

DEAR ABBY: My name is Rhiannon Vaughn, and I go to Nicholas Elementary School in Sacramento. I asked my teacher how to spell "humungous" and she told me to look it up in the dictionary. I tried, but I couldn't find it anywhere. Abby, if you don't know how to spell a word, how are you supposed to find it in the dictionary? Please help me. — RHIANNON

DEAR RHIANNON: That is a very good question. Begin by doing some hit-and-miss detective work. Try to find it by looking in the "h's" and guessing how you think it is spelled. If you can't find it, you've guessed wrong, so try spelling it another way. You may have to make four, five or six guesses.

(By this time, you have probably discovered that the word you are looking for is spelled h-u-m-o-n-g-o-u-s.)

DEAR ABBY: "A Student in New Jersey" should lighten up. "Student" states that dogs are trained, and nurses are educated. (You had referred to trained nurses.)

My dictionary defines the word "train" as: subject to discipline and instruction; to make proficient.

That seems to be an appropriate word to use in connection with any profession. I consider myself trained, as are some of my canine patients — only in different skills. — NEBRASKA VETERINARIAN

Wedding bells? Wedding bills! Who pays for what and everything else you need to know if you're planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $2.69 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054 (postage and handling included).

Taken away

Five killed, 500 injured in clash in black homeland

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police today fired on thousands of protesters who attacked and burned government buildings in the black homeland of Bophuthatswana. Five people were reported dead and up to 500 injured.

The clash began after up to 50,000 protesters in the nominally independent homeland — the second to erupt in violence in four days — attempted to stage a march to demand its reintegration into South Africa and the resignation of the territory's president.

Police using rifles and tear gas guns opened fire after protesters set fire to public buildings and vehicles in Garankuwa in the homeland north of Johannesburg, local officials said.

The independent South African Press Association quoted hospital officials as saying five people were killed by gunfire and up to 500 other people suffered various injuries. The sound of gunfire and fighting was heard in several areas, SAPA reported.

The new violence erupted as South African troops restored order in the Ciskei homeland on the southeastern coast after rioting in the wake of a military coup. South African officials said Ciskei was calm and no unrest was reported today in that territory.

The Ciskei military government seized power Sunday in a bloodless coup and, allying itself with the anti-apartheid African National Congress, declared itself in favor of reintegration into South Africa.

Anti-apartheid activists contend the homelands were established in an attempt by the white minority government to restrict blacks to the most isolated and underdeveloped parts of the country and deny them citizenship. About half of South Africa's 28 million blacks live in the 10 homelands, whose "sovereignty" is not recognized abroad.

The Bophuthatswana army staged a coup in 1988, but South African sent in troops and blocked the overthrow of the government. In the past month, unrest has cost six lives and injured dozens of people in the homeland. Protesters today called for the resignation of President Lucas Mangope, who has rejected calls to return the territory to South Africa.

All government offices and many businesses, shops and schools in the area were closed and protesters hijacked buses to take them to the march, officials said. Many people stayed away from work or school to support the protests.

In Ciskei, after widespread rioting and looting broke out, the new junta declared a state of emergency on and asked for assistance from South African troops. At least 27 people were killed and 550 injured in the unrest.

Brig. Gen. Oupa Gqozo, who heads the junta, said ousted President Lennox Sebe would be arrested if he attempted to return. Sebe was on a trade mission in Hong Kong when the military struck.

Ciskei industrialists said looting and arson that followed the coup had shattered the economy and destroyed up to 10,000 jobs.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Masked gunmen kill Turkish writer, driver

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Masked gunmen today shot and killed a prominent journalist who often criticized Moslems fundamentalists in Turkey and blamed Syria for a resurgence of terrorism in his homeland.

Cetin Emec, a board member and columnist of Turkey's largest circulation newspaper, Hurriyet, died after being rushed to the hospital shortly after the 9 a.m. shooting, police said. His driver also was killed in the attack.

Authorities said two masked gunmen fired on Emec and his driver as they were leaving his house in the fashionable Suadiye district to go to work. The driver, Sinan Ercan, was shot in the back as he fled, police said.

The gunmen escaped in a stolen car, the semi-official Anatolia news agency said. No group immediately claimed responsibility for the shooting.

Peace plan vote postponed

JERUSALEM (AP) — Ministers of the right-wing Likud bloc and the left-of-center Labor Party clashed today over U.S. Middle East peace proposals, but a Cabinet vote on the plan was postponed until the weekend.

Also today, a suspected Palestinian collaborator was found hanged near his village in the occupied Gaza Strip, Arab reports said. The army said it demolished the West Bank home of a suspected uprising activist.

Labor leaders said that if Likud rejected the American proposals at Sunday's Cabinet session, they would ask Labor's Central Committee to vote the next day on leaving the government and forming a new coalition with small religious and left-wing parties.

Economics Minister Moshe Shahal, a Labor member, told reporters after the session he doubted the ministers from Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's Likud could accept the compromise proposals.

U.S. official visits Endara

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A State Department official on Tuesday visited President Guillermo Endara during the sixth day of his hunger strike to press for U.S. aid to help rebuild Panama's economy.

Endara spoke with the official, Michael Kozak, "about the economic reality of the country and the necessity that we have for financial help," the president's office said.

Kozak, deputy assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, told reporters only that it was a "regular, diplomatic" visit but would no provide details.

Haitian students stage march

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Thousands of students marched through the northern port city of Gonaives on Tuesday to protest the army's killing of an 11-year-old girl during unrest in another town, radio stations said.

Most schools were closed in Gonaives, 100 miles north of Port-au-Prince, according to independent Radio Haiti Inter.

According to a resident who spoke on condition of anonymity, more than 5,000 students marched to demand the ouster of Haitian ruler Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril, chanting "Avril murderer!" and "We're fed up with Avril!"

PART-TIME JOB$ AVAILABLE APRIL 1

Effective April 2, the Midland Reporter-Telegram will become a morning newspaper instead of an afternoon newspaper. As a result we have several routes which will need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Due to this one-time large number of routes becoming available, now is the best time ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 50% adult and 50% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- adults who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- youths who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $150 to $500 monthly! Some motor routes make even more, although currently none are expected to be available. Depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Some collecting in person will be necessary though.

When do the papers have to be delivered by?

6:00 am Monday - Friday, and 7:00 am Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
