High Court upholds news media barring

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to order a Colorado judge to admit news reporters and the public to a preliminary hearing on a manslaughter charge against entertainer Claudine Longet.

The court acted a few minutes before 10 a.m. CDT, the time set for the hearing to begin in Aspen, Colo.

Lawyers representing 12 Colorado news organizations asked Justice Byron R. White for an emergency order opening the hearing to the media and the public pending a full-scale appeal to the high court.

White referred the matter to the full court, which rejected the application in a brief unsigned order.

Miss Longet, 34, is accused of manslaughter in the fatal shooting of her lover, skier Vladimir "Spider" Sabich in Aspen on March 21. Sabich 31, was found dead in his $250,000 ome, where he had lived with Miss Longet for two years.

She is the ex-wife of singer Andy Williams.

The preliminary hearing, expected to last five days before Pitkin County District Court Judge George E. Lohr, is to determine whether there is sufficient evidence to try the entertainer.

Among witnesses who could be called to testify at the hearing are Noel Williams, Miss Longet's 12-year-old daughter.

Other potential witnesses include Bob Beattie, former U.S. ski team coach and a close friend of Sabich; Sabich's brother, Stephan, and the skier's father.

The order banning news reporters and others from the courtroom was issued by Lohr last week. The judge said he feared news coverage of the case would prejudice potential jurors.

The judge also barred discussion of the case by participants and ordered transcripts sealed until its conclusion.

Bitter California battle hurt party, candidates

By LOU CANNON
The Washington Post

LOS ANGELES — The Republican party and both GOP presidential candidates may have been long-term losers in a bitter California primary battle which left wounds that are not likely to heal before November.

"I will never work for President Ford, never," a young Reagan volunteer vehemently told a reporter hours after the former California governor's victory Tuesday.

Her emotional reaction mirrored the attitude of many other Reagan volunteers who were incensed by the President's portrayal of Reagan as an extremist who would lead the nation into war. This anti-Reagan tactic, pursued in a television and radio advertising blitz for three days before the primary, reminded some Republicans here of the campaign waged against Barry Goldwater in the 1964 California primary.

Goldwater defeated Rockefeller and went on to win the Republican presidential nomination. But Rockefeller's depiction of Goldwater as a dangerous extremist stuck and helped lay the groundwork for the Lyndon Johnson landslide five months later.

Reagan remained very much in the race for the 1976 nomination after winning California's 167 delegates to the GOP national convention. But his campaign blunder over Rhodesia may have cost him dearly if he ever gets the nomination.

By answering a hypothetical question in a way that suggested he might send U.S. troops to Rhodesia, Reagan once more raised questions about his carefulness as a candidate and his judgment as a prospective president.

This carelessness, described by Reagan as an end-of-the-campaign "lapse," was all the more serious because it seemed to be part of a pattern that has dogged the former governor ever since he suggested in Florida that social security funds be

Fountain Smith held in shooting death

Murder charges were filed today against Fountain Smith, 23, former football star at Midland High School and Oklahoma State University, in the shooting death Wednesday of a 21-year-old Midland woman.

Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine set bond for Smith of 600 E. Cuthbert St. at $25,000.

Wilma Parks, 21, of 1706 E. Butternut Lane, was killed at her home about 2:20 p.m. Wednesday when she received a shotgun blast in the neck, police said.

About the same time as the shooting, police reportedly received a call from Smith, who said he had killed a person and was at Edward's Farm and Feed Store, 2205 Garden City Highway.

Miss Parks was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice Pine.

Miss Parks was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Parks of 705 N. Mineola Ave. and was a nurse's aide who did private duty.

Services are pending at Thomas Funeral Home.

Smith was employed at Superior Iron Works, 2110 Garden City Highway. He was an outstanding running back for Midland High School in 1969 and 1970 and for Oklahoma State University in 1971 and 1972.

Carter position almost invulnerable now

By DICK BARNES
Associated Press Writer

It's all over but the counting. Delegates by the dozens are joining the Jimmy Carter juggernaut, making it nearly certain the Georgia peanut farmer will be the Democratic presidential nominee.

Carter saw his delegate totals climb Wednesday to all but assure his first-ballot convention nomination, and a legion of bigname Democrats added their endorsements in a show of party unity.

Many of his primary opponents — George Wallace, Henry Jackson, Frank Church and Morris Udall — proclaimed Carter a certain winner. The scorecard at the Democratic National Committee showed Carter with 1,514 delegates, nine more than needed for a convention victory in July.

A landslide victory in the Ohio primary Tuesday, and second-place finishes in New Jersey and California, catapulted Carter to the fabled tipping point; by today the opposing field had dwindled away.

As dozens of uncommitted delegates pledged support for Carter, he was within grasp of hundreds more now officially committed elsewhere or still uncommitted.

While the delegate roundup continued, Carter's tasks became the selection of a running mate, solidifying party unity, and planning a general election campaign against either Gerald Ford or Ronald Reagan.

According to the Associated Press survey of publicly committed delegates, Carter already can claim a definite 1,206, with enough more to bring him the nomination expected to join the bandwagon in the weeks before the mid-July Democratic national convention in New York.

Chicago Mayor Richard Daley, barred from the 1972 Democratic convention, studied the Ohio results and said he'd vote for Carter. Adlai Stevenson III released the bloc of 86 Illinois delegates committed to him and most were likely to go to the former Georgia governor.

George Wallace, crippled by a gunman while seeking the nomination four years ago and routed in the early Southern primaries by Carter, endorsed Carter and asked his 168 delegates to follow suit. It ended the Alabama governor's fourth and final try for the White House.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, seeker of the presidency since 1960 who hoped the party would come to him this year, refused to authorize a campaign in his behalf, saying

(Related Stories, Page 8A)

Carter was "virtually certain" to be nominated.

Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington, well financed as the campaign began but badly drubbed by Carter in the Pennsylvania primary, told supporters he will endorse Carter and try to deliver his 248 delegates.

Sen. Frank Church of Idaho and Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona, who also challenged Carter, as much as acknowledged the race was over.

Liberal party leaders, such as Sens. George McGovern and Edward Kennedy, also noted Carter's victory and pledged support.

Wallace, cool to previous party nominees, said all he asked of Carter was "to try to make all the people of his country one of the finest presidents we've ever had."

Only California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., who started late but beat Carter in every primary where they met, insisted the race remained open.

The Republican chase was neck-and-neck, and was not likely to end before the party's national convention in August.

Reagan won 167 delegates when he stomped Ford in California's winner-take-all primary. But Ford countered with a 67-delegate sweep in New Jersey and a 94-3 margin in Ohio.

Ford now takes a 965 to 862 lead in total delegates into the climactic series of GOP conventions and delegate-awarding meetings in 13 states where nearly 300 delegates are at stake. At the August convention in Kansas City, 1,130 votes will be required for nomination.

For Carter, the arithmetic was far clearer.

To reach the nomination Carter could pursue Wallace's 168 delegates, 248 committed to Jackson, the 86 pledged to Stevenson as a holding action for the Daley machine, and 67.5 which had collected for Humphrey even as he continually eschewed an active candidacy.

Of the first 73 Wallace delegates contacted by Associated Press reporters after the Alabama governor endorsed Carter, 40 said they would go along with that recommendation. Most of the rest said they were uncommitted; a few declared allegiance to Wallace no matter what.

Jackson delegates, based on early contacts, were tending to go into an uncommitted stance, some awaiting more precise direction from the Washington senator. A few said they'd now support Humphrey despite his position, and Buffalo, N.Y., Democratic leader Joseph Crangle, a leader of the draft Humphrey movement, maintained the contest wasn't over.

A majority of the previously uncommitted Hawaii delegation fell into his column after Wednesday's events.

Brown, by contrast, had 204 of his 226 delegates concentrated in his home state of California. But in New Orleans where he was hunting uncommitted delegates, the young governor maintained: "It's late, it's an uphill battle, it's a longshot, but I am going to give the delegates a choice when they get to New York City."

'Jimmy Who?' greets triumph clad in blue jeans, work boots

By HELEN DEWAR
The Washington Post

PLAINS, Ga. — Wearing blue jeans, a plaid shirt and dust-covered work boots, pausing briefly for a freight train to roar by, Jimmy Carter stood Wednesday on the loading platform of an abandoned train station here, and — for all practical purposes — accepted the Democratic nomination for the presidency.

As flies buzzed around his head and network cameras rolled, the 51-year-old peanut farmer who answered to "Jimmy who?" just months ago, reeled off the names of men who were now coming to him: Daley of Chicago, Jackson of Washington, Wallace of Alabama and maybe even Humphrey of all those presidential races of years gone by.

It was a moment for humility in the face of triumph, for contrasts as stark as his Georgia clay roots and his ambitions of world leadership. Carter made the most of it, just as he did, step by careful step, with every opportunity for votes that came his way.

What, he was asked, could possibly stand now between him and the leadership of the Democratic Party which many of its most powerful men were — and probably still are — reluctant to see him claim?

"Well," he said, smiling that smile that often says more than his words, "the vote has to be taken at the convention." Only "some catastrophe," he added, appeared now able to block the goal that he has been seeking for more than 16 months and in 48 states.

Jimmy Carter was born and raised in this tiny South Georgia farming community of 683 people, as Carter told countless crowds from New Hamphsire to California. Friends, neighbors and relatives danced in the street last night for the favorite son and some of them, including his mother "Miss Lillian," came out again to see all the fuss over their local boy who made good.

But they are not the good ole boys of George Wallace's South, neither were they overwhelmed by the strange rites of the media, nor the stunning success of their neighbor. They did not fit the southern stereotype (or any other stereotype for that matter — reflecting the same capacity for surprising strangers that helped Carter capture the nation's attention for his, sometimes rather gauzy message of reassurance and faith.

"From peanuts to President," read a sign outside the turn-of-the-century train station that now serves as Carter's local campaign headquarters.

Throughout the campaign, Carter stressed simple virtues that had seemed to go out of style in political rhetoric, telling voters he "loved" them and wanted to share an "intimacy" with them, expressing faith in the "basic goodness" of the American people despite their leaders transgressions and vowing never to tell a lie.

(Asked if she would ever tell a lie, 77-year-old "Miss Lillian" laughed and told reporters, "Oh, my Lord, yes, I have to make up for Jimmy.")

But, asked Wednesday how he came "so far, so fast," Carter grimly noted that 16 1-2 months of campaigning didn't seem very fast.

When Carter began campaigning in early 1975 he traveled almost alone around the country, begging, as he tells his audiences now, for just one reporter to ask him a question.

Now he often gives the impression that they are asking too many of them and the loading platform sagged under the weight of the nation's major news media, with some European correspondents thrown in for good measure.

As Carter bouyantly fielded a question about what criticism he has of the nation's patchwork-quilt system of primary elections ("I think it's an absolutely superb system," he exulted), a freight train rumbled into town.

The press conference halted as the whistles, roared and tooted. "This," said Carter, apparently referring to the passage of the train rather than the press conference, "is not a frequent occurence in Plains."

Carter actually has never been far from Plains in his speeches, always referring to the place of his birth, to past and present family members and often to the values of small-town America.

He asks voters to join "my family," meaning the extended family of his campaign supporters. Even in big cities, he talks about the smallness and intimacy of Plains and its people, appearing to evoke in his listeners a nostalgia for the old days and simple ways, in many cases a life they never knew.

The crowds rarely respond with emotional bursts or fervent applause, as they do with many of his less

Rhodes blasts House Speaker

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the House approved subpoenas to delve into the Wayne Hays payroll-sex scandal, Republican leader John Rhodes blasted Speaker Carl Albert's handling of the controversy.

Rhodes said Albert erred badly in dealing with the charges against Hays by naming only three Democrats to study House payroll and staffing procedures. He plans to introduce a proposal to create a bipartisan committee to examine salary and expense account practices.

Rhodes said the three-Democrat panel named by Albert is doomed to failure because even if it can accurately assess the House payroll and expense account system, no one will believe the conclusions.

Earlier Wednesday, the House agreed to turn over to a federal grand jury the subpoenaed payroll records of four House committee staffers, including Hays' former mistress, Elizabeth Ray, and Paul Panzarella, who shared an office with Miss Ray and is a close friend of Hays' niece.

The grand jury is investigating whether Hays misused public funds in hiring Miss Ray, Panzarella, or others.

The House also agreed to comply with the grand jury's subpoena of payroll records of four staff members of former Rep. James Hastings, R-N.Y., covering a period from September 1969 to March 31 of this year.

It was not known why the records were being sought.

A Justice Department source said the Hastings investigation is entirely separate from that of Hays, "and does not involve girls."

Meanwhile, a source said the FBI is investigating an unsubstantiated allegation that Hays used public funds to buy paintings, antiques and oriental rugs during trips abroad. A Hays spokesman said Wednesday that the objects were bought with his own money.

Hays remained under heavy pressure to resign as chairman of the House Administration Committee, which oversees salary and expense allocations. Majority leader Thomas O'Neill continued to demand that Hays step aside until investigations of his conduct are completed.

In an interview, Rhodes said he knew of no instances of payroll padding or falsified travel vouchers, but he said a systemwide investigation of House expenditures is merited anyway.

"We've got to do something because the standing of the Congress in the country is getting so low," Rhodes said. "It's really immaterial whether there is payroll padding in the Congress. It's that people think there is."

An aide to O'Neill predicted that few Democrats would support the proposal for a bipartisan study group.

Alcoholism report drawing fire

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Specialists in treating alcoholism say they strongly object to a Rand Corp. report which suggests that some alcoholics can return to "normal drinking" with no greater chance of relapse into alcoholism than if they had abstained.

The report, which covers an 18-month study of more than a thousand treated alcoholics, said that the relapse rate for alcoholics who returned to "normal" amounts of drinking after treatment was no higher than for those of longer-term abstainers.

Researchers at the Santa Monica "think-tank" cautioned that, "We are by no means advocating that alcoholics should attempt moderate drinking after treatment."

The findings contradict the generally held belief that alcoholism — ranked as one of the four top diseases in the United States — is never cured, and that alcoholics are only reformed and must totally abstain from drinking.

Some researchers in other alcoholic study projects denounced the report, which was prepared by Dr. David J. Armor and released Wednesday.

"I'm sick about this report," said Dr. Mary Pendry, head of the California State Alcoholism Advisory Board.

Dr. Marvin A. Block, an alcoholism specialist who helped persuade the American Medical Association to declare alcoholism a disease, said the Rand study will prompt "people who can't go back to drinking to try it, just because a few have done it.

"You're dealing with a drug here, and an addict trying to use the drug again runs the risk of becoming addicted again," he said.

But Armor defended the study, which also warned that alcoholics who have failed to moderate their drinking, or who suffer "physical complications due to alcohol, should not drink at all."

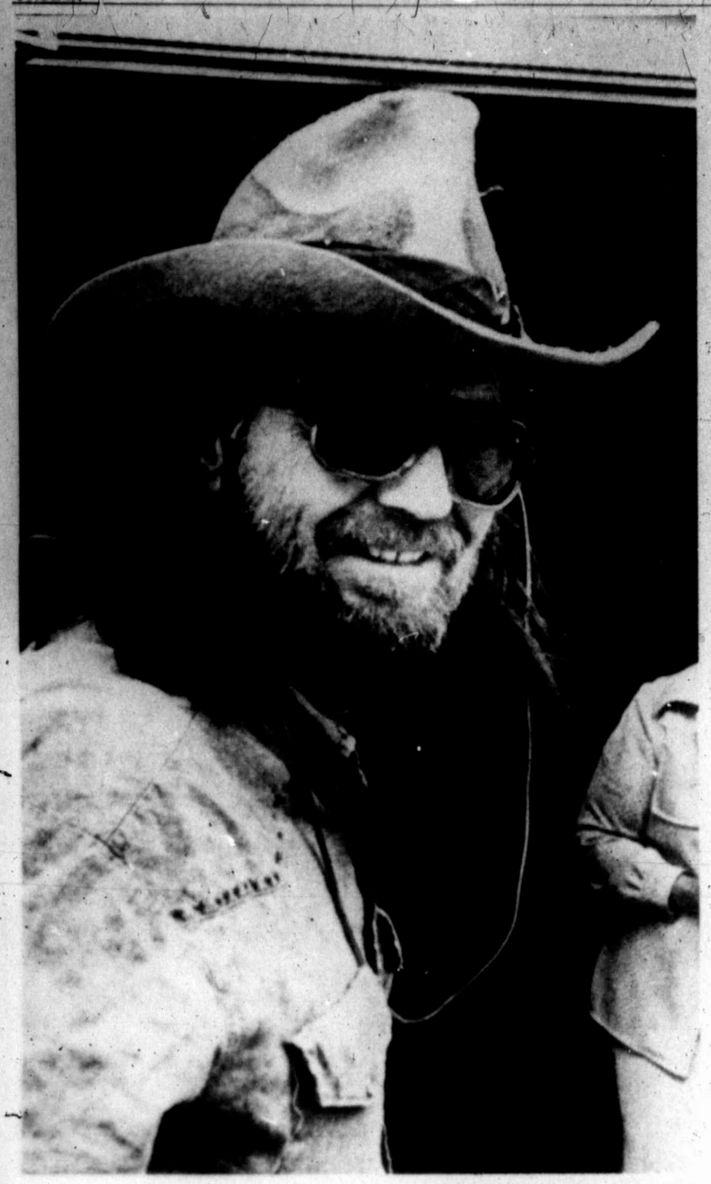

He said that criticism came not from researchers, but mostly from clinicians, to whom "abstention is a tenet that approaches the order of religious belief.

"These people, some of them powerful, have depended on the belief that alcohol is a poison to them. The criticism is quite emotional and not scientific."

The Rand report defines "normal drinking" as drinking in "moderate quantities commonly found in the general nonalcoholic population, provided no serious signs of impairment are present."

The report was based on information collected from the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism-sponsored treatment programs in community centers across the nation, the researchers said.

Nelson arrives for testimony.

Willie Nelson quizzed by federal grand jury

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Progressive country and western singer Willie Nelson and his drummer, Paul English, spent five minutes Wednesay before a federal grand jury probing narcotics traffic in North Texas, but each declined to disclose whether he had answered any questions.

"I don't know what this is all about," Nelson said earlier in the day as he talked briefly with reporters before going into the jury room.

He came to the federal building accompanied by attorneys Jay Goldberg and Tim Herman and wearing his traditional western jeans and cowboy hat with his trademark long hair flowing under it.

Nelson was the second singer to appear before the grand jury which began its investigations earlier this year and subpoenaed him and 20 other persons.

Singer Ray Price of Dallas testified last month before the same grand jury in Dallas.

Nelson spent more than one hour waiting outside the grand jury and talked with newsmen about different subjects, but refused to go into details about the probe or why he was subpoenaed.

When asked whether he would be questioned about narcotics traffic, Nelson began to answer, but his attorney coughed discreetly behind him and the singer shut up.

He was pressed again by newsmen and again refused to comment. His attorney told newsmen: "We cannot talk about it."

Hughes estate to pay actress $70,000 yearly

HOUSTON (AP) — A court document has revealed a contract under which actress Jean Peters, former wife of the late billionaire Howard Hughes, receives at least $70,000 a year from the estate.

A CONTRACT submitted Tuesday to Harris County Probate Judge Pat Gregory indicates Miss Peters agreed to the annual payments while renouncing other support or property rights.

The contract was among documents submitted as the Texas administrators of the estate received approval from Harris County Probate Judge Pat Gregory for payment of bills totaling $168,602.

Included were bills for the April 7 funeral for Hughes and $82,549.92 covering a two-month stay in Acapulco, Mexico, that ended when the billionaire died on an April 5 flight to Houston.

THE ADMINISTRATORS of the estate are an aunt, Annette Gano Lummis, 85, and her son, William R. Lummis, 47, a Houston attorney.

The contract submitted to Gregory was signed by Hughes and dated Feb. 21, 1971. It specifies Hughes agreed to pay Miss Peters $70,000 a year for 20 years or until her death and that the amount was to be adjusted by cost of living averages from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

THE PAYMENTS, in any event, were not to exceed $140,000 or be less than $70,000 a year, the contract specified, adding $20,000 would be paid to the estate of Miss Peters should she die before the end of the 20-year period.

Hughes said in the contract Miss Peters agreed to relinquish "all marital rights of support or otherwise, all property rights (if any) and all other rights which (she) may have in respect of me and the assets which stand in my name or which I have any interest."

GREGORY AUTHORIZED the administrators to make monthly payments of $8,085 to Miss Peters, including past due payments for May and June.

Miss Peters and Hughes were married from 1957 until 1971.

The funeral bills totaled $15,728.

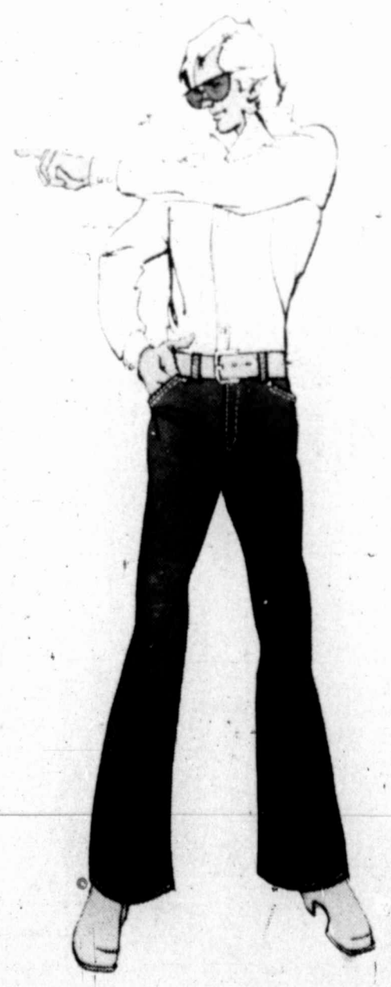

Other bills covered medical expenses, country club fees, legal expenses, severance pay to family servants, and expenses incurred in the search for a valid Hughes will.

Death takes James A. Farley, 88

—AP Laserphoto

James A. Farley

NEW YORK (AP) — James A. "Big Jim" Farley, elder statesman of the Democratic party who engineered Franklin D. Roosevelt's rise to the presidency in the 1930s, then broke with FDR over the issue of a third term, is dead at 88.

Farley, onetime Democratic national chairman and FDR's postmaster general for more than seven years, suffered a heart attack Wednesday night in his suite at the Waldorf Towers, where he lived alone.

Hotel security officers found Farley, who suffered a previous attack in 1972, lying across his bed after a maid notified them she was unable to get into the suite to turn down the bed. He was wearing tuxedo pants and a formal shirt.

Farley's death came just hours after he had learned of the passing of Lawrence W. "Chip" Robert Jr., a long-time Roosevelt friend and supporter, in Atlanta. Farley said he was "shocked and saddened" at Robert's death.

Farley, who stood 6-feet-2½, was a master political organizer who combined dedicated diligence with painstaking attention to detail, a remarkable memory, unfailing geniality and strong party loyalty.

He was a conservative Democrat who said last year that the party stood a very good chance of winning the 1976 presidential election — "if the reformers don't lose it again."

Farley, who entered statewide politics as a successful businessman in building supplies, helped manage Roosevelt's two campaigns for New York governor, in 1928 and 1930.

He campaigned hard for Roosevelt's successful run for the presidency in 1932, serving as his floor manager at the national convention in Chicago that nominated FDR.

For seven years, from the beginning of FDR's administration in 1933, Farley directed Democratic strategy as party chairman and served as postmaster general.

He once called politics "the noblest of careers" and said he felt that politics and business were related.

He bowed out of active politics after the split with Roosevelt in 1940 and became chief promoter of Coca Cola sales abroad. In 1953, he was elected president of the Coca Cola International Corp.

James Aloysius Farley was born May 30, 1888, at Grassy Point on the west bank of the Hudson River. His political career began in 1911 when he was elected town clerk of nearby Stony Point.

Farley was married in 1920 to Elizabeth Finnegan, who died in 1955. They had two daughters, Elizabeth Montgomery and Ann Hickey and one son, James Jr., who arrived at the suite shortly after his father's body was discovered.

Kissinger reports progress in Panama Canal negotiations

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger reported "significant progress" in the negotiations for a new Panama Canal treaty and said the pact will give "full regard to the aspirations of the Panamanian people."

Kissinger told the general assembly of the Organization of American States Wednesday that both the United States and Panama seek a treaty that will reflect "a new era of cooperation in the Americas."

He said the negotiators still have not reached agreement on two major points: the duration of the new treaty and the area that U.S. military bases will occupy in the Canal Zone.

The present canal treaty, signed in 1903, gives the United States nearly complete control in perpetuity over the canal and the Canal Zone.

Kissinger and Panamanian Foreign Minister Aquilino Boyd also submitted a joint declaration to the OAS foreign ministers which said the U.S. and Panamanian governments hope to reach agreement soon on the new treaty. The statement said the negotiations, which began 12 years ago, have been carried out in a spirit of "reciprocal good will."

Republican presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan's opposition to concessions to Panama raised the prospect that the canal would be an issue at the OAS meeting. But the joint declaration headed this off, and the 23 foreign ministers agreed on a resolution saying the statement was a "positive contribution" to hemispheric cooperation.

Kissinger also touched on economic issues in his speech Wednesday, proposing a "regional consultative mechanism" to help the American nations deal with fluctuations in commodity prices.

He said this new agency could function within the OAS and could oversee foreign investments in the region to insure that there was no infringment on the sovereignty of host countries.

"Our prospects of working together are brighter than ever before, more so in this hemisphere than in any other region of the world," said Kissinger.

Negotiators reported nearing accord on new postal subsidy

By WILLIAM H. JONES
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Ford Administration and congressional negotiators were reported close to an agreement Wednesday on $1 billion of new financial aid for the debt-ridden U.S. Postal Service, coupled with a temporary moratorium on cutbacks in service or higher rates.

The amount of money in the compromise, however, is far less than Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar has warned is necessary to prevent insolvency in the next year.

A Postal Service spokesman said Wednesday his agency was not a party to the agreement announced Wednesday by Sen. Gale W. McGee (D-Wyo.), chairman of the Senate Post Office Committee. Bailar was out of town and not available for comment.

McGee said the White House would approve a temporary $1 billion appropriation for the Postal Service and legislation being drawn up late Wednesday would earmark half of that amount in fiscal 1977 with the balance the following year. An administration source hinted that Mr. Ford would approve the money to cover losses but not as an additional operating subsidy.

Bailar has called for new subsidies of about $1 billion a year and House Postal Service subcommittee chairman James M. Hanley (D-N.Y.) is on record in support of $1.5 billion extra in each of three fsical years — 1976, 1977 and 1978 — while a thorough study on future financing is conducted.

The Postal Service is currently operated by a deficit expected to approach $1.4 billion for the year ending June 30 and money will have to be borrowed to meet payroll.

McGee said Wednesday that the proposed legislation would preserve the status quo and establish a 10-member commission to study postal finance problems and report back by next Feb. 15, thereby muting the Postal Service's financial crisis in the upcoming elections.

The Wyoming Democrat said the agreement calls for a "general moratorium" on service reductions and for "no adjustment upward in rates." An aide explained later that rural post offices serving at least 35 families would be kept alive under this compromise but the Postal Service could continue shutting down smaller branches. Moreover, the aide said, the rate moratorium may not apply to increases being phased in under previous decisions.

House vote slated on revenue sharing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A revision of the revenue sharing law, extending massive federal aid to local and state governments for 3¾-years, is headed for final action in the House, where approval is expected.

If the program is extended through Sept. 30, 1980, the end of fiscal 1980, as called for in the bill, it would distribute $24.9 billion with few federal controls on how the money could be spent.

A vote on the measure was expected today. Liberal opponents have little hope of defeating the extention, but they are fighting attempts to water down a series of amendments which include federal controls they say would correct deficiencies in the program.

The House was faced with alternatives offered by Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, and Rep. Frank Horton of New York, the committee's ranking Republican member.

The amendments are designed to impose a new formula for distributing $150 million of the program's $6.65 billion annual outlay, consolidate local government operations, boost wages on construction projects using revenue sharing money, and expand civil rights protections.

They were opposed by a coalition of Democrats and Republicans seeking to renew the revenue sharing program, set to expire Dec. 31, with as few changes as possible.

President Ford has sought a 5¾-year extension, with only minor changes. He reportedly said last week he would consider vetoing a measure containing the four controversial amendments.

The Senate has awaited the House vote before beginning work on renewal legislation. Opposition there is considered less than in the House.

Congressional sources say there is little question that the program will be renewed in some form, but a White House staff member lobbying for a continued program said, "it's a question of how good or bad a bill it is," referring to the amendments.

Begun in 1972 as part of President Richard Nixon's "New Federalism," it has become the nation's largest system of direct aid to local government.

Rodeos prosper

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 11 million persons attended nearly 600 approved professional rodeos in 42 states in the United States and four provinces of Canada in 1975, according to the National Geographic Society.

Contestants vied for $6 million in prize money.

Museum has grant

NEW YORK (AP) — The Whitney Museum of American Art has received a grant of $250,000 for the purchase of works by living American artists.

The gift was made by Frances and Sydney Lewis of Richmond, Va.

It started at Pecos

WASHINGTON (AP) — The word "rodeo" stems from the Spanish word for roundup.

The National Geographic Society says "the first U.S. rodeo in the modern sense supposedly was held in Pecos, Tex., in 1883 to settle rivalries between various ranches. Similar early competitions were held from Miles City, Mont., and Cheyenne, Wyo., to Prescott, Ariz., and Santa Fe, N.M."

Many activities

So many activities go on all the time in a good child care center that it is hard to pinpoint exactly what each child is learning moment by moment, Dorthy Taylor, a family life education specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, says.

Still exists

Lots of "old-time family style" still exists at Texas family reunions or local memorial and decorations days, Dorthy Taylor, family life education specialist with the Texas Agricultral Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, reminds.

Cleaning idea

To clean an electric percolator, fill it with water as if to make coffee and add one tablespoon of liquid detergent. Plug it in and go through the whole cycle. This cleans all the main parts of the percolator.

DEAR ABBY
Husband should tell

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My very good friend and neighbor helped my husband care for our two small children last year while I was hospitalized for two weeks. I thought I would never be able to repay her for her kindness, until three weeks ago when my husband broke down and confessed that during that time, they had had an affair. He said it was all over now and he is terribly ashamed, and he begged my forgiveness. (Yes, I forgave him.)

This "friend" doesn't know that my husband has told me, and now I cannot stand the sight of this two-faced woman. What should I do when she appears at my door with her sweet smile and a chocolate pie—my husband's favorite?

We own our home, and I don't want to move.—HURTING

DEAR HURTING: I presume that your husband knows this woman well enough to speak to her, so ask him to tell her that he has made a full confession. If you can't find it in your heart to forgive her, as you did him, your actions will reveal it, and she'll know whether or not to present her sweet face and chocolate pie at your door again.

DEAR ABBY: A girl I work with is uniform-crazy. When she sees a man in uniform she just flips. She lost her head over policemen, airline pilots, ushers, servicemen and even bellhops. I saw her tip a soorman a dollar once for opening a door for her just because she liked his looks.

She's not a kid. She's a 28-year-old woman and should know better. She has paid dearly for this weakness of hers. How can I talk her out of it?—SANDY

DEAR SANDY: Talking won't do it. She has a fixation— —brass buttons. Introduce her to a Salvation Army man. Maybe he can save her soul.

DEAR ABBY: In the debate over people who wear dark glasses, CINCY READER wrote: "Fish who live in caves and donkeys who work in mines eventually become blind."

As far as mine animals are concerned, this is an old wives' tale. We were taught in the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., public schools that the mules used in the deep anthracite mines became blind.

In the autumn of 1920, the Susquehanna coal subsidiary of the then Pennsylvania Railroad shut down operations temporarily for maintenance work in the mines and brought their 800 mules to the surface. As a young cub reporter on the Wilkes-Barre Record, I was assigned to do a feature story about it.

In my story I scuttled the blind-mule tale when I disclosed that not one of the 800 mules was blind, although many were foaled underground and lived their entire lives there!

One personal-experience fact demolished a textbook fabrication.—ALEX H. WASHBURN, President and Editor, Hope (Arkansas) Star

DEAR ALEX: You may have "scuttled" the blind-mule tale in Wilkes Barre over half a century ago, but I bought the blind donkey argument on the theory that anatomically speaking, if you don't use it, you lose it.

Does not want sister aware of poker chips in planters

By ERMA BOMBECK

My sister is coming for a visit next week.

We have grown up together, shared the same bed, the same parents, and eaten off the same ice cream cone. We're very close.

I do not want her to know that I have poker chips in my planters and winter ironing hidden in a beer cooler.

I've broken my back to make this house look like people have never lived here. For the first time in four years (her last visit) the dining-room table is visible.

I don't know how the White House handles state visits, but I work from a Master Plan. Weeks ago, I made a list of things that needed to be done according to priorities.

1. Get the Christmas candle off the hall table in the entranceway.

2. Throw away junk mail on back of commode.

3. Get the dog laundered.

4. Gather together silverware that matches. Offer rewards.

5. Replace pocketbook of "Valley of the Dolls" on coffee table with new historical hard-cover.

6. Remove light bulb in the oven.

7. Take Colonel Sanders phone number off bulletin board and replace with bread recipes.

8. Buy children new underwear and shoes.

9. Buy size 10 bathrobe and offer to loan it to her while she is here.

10. Harvest houseful of dead plants and replace with new ones three hours before she arrives.

Call it pride. Call it pressure from the Board of Health, but I want things to be perfect.

My husband found me trying to get the ironing board down. "Help me with this," I said.

"What are you trying to do?" he asked.

"Take this thing down. It is collapsible, isn't it?"

"Haven't you ever taken it down before?"

"Never."

"Maybe there's a release here somewhere. Here we go. Now, where do you want it?"

"I don't know. Wherever people put these things. Try under the bed with the electric football and the Easter baskets."

"Now what?"

"Whatever's on the list. Me? I have to work to do.

Lighting up

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Dale Bannister noticed new lights were being put up on the Boulevard Bridge, so she called the people who operate the bridge and asked if they could save her one of the old lights. They did. The old light is now serving as a floor lamp in her living room.

Lasagna party given

Polly Haney, a Lee High School graduate, was honored with a lasagna dinner party in the home of Mrs. Wayne Woodside, No. 2 Bristol Court. Shannon and Cindy Woodside, daughters of the hostess, assisted.

The mother of the honoree, Mrs. Jay Haney, was a special guest.

Miss Haney plans to attend Southwest Texas State University.

Hostesses were Mrs. Herb Stoner of Amarillo, Mrs. Stayner Dugan, Mrs. Ira Reavis, Mrs. Harold Stewart, Mrs. J. Stewart Martin, Mrs. C. C. Hendricks, Mrs. Truman Rhodes and Mrs. N. R. Rousselot.

The rehearsal dinner was held at the Midland Country Club

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency used black market transactions to finance its operations in Vietnam and Chile even while other U.S. agencies worked to stamp out corruption and shore up those economies, according to former officials familiar with CIA funding.

The Vietnam transactions involved millions of dollars traded for piasters on the black market in Hong Kong, according to these sources.

One former CIA official said that at some points during the war nearly all the foreign currency spent by the Saigon station of the CIA was acquired through such transactions.

Charles A. Cooper, who served as an economics adviser to the U.S. Embassy, Saigon, in 1968-69 and minister counselor for economics there in 1970-73,said in response to questions that CIA officials told him they preferred to obtain funds through the black bag" from Hong Kong due to "operational reasons" and because such transactions made their budget go further.

Cooper said he did not know what proportion of Saigon CIA expenditures were financed through black market transactions.

The scale of CIA spending in Saigon during his time was "too small for an overall economic effect" in view of much larger outlays through legal markets by the U.S. military and foreign aid agencies, he said.

During the intensive phase of U.S. military operations in the 1960s the official exchange rate applying to U.S. government transactions was 118 piasters to the dollar. Black market rates were often two to three times higher.

Vietnam devalued the piaster for most purposes to 275 to the dollar in October 1970 under heavy U.S. pressure, and successive adjustments in later years brought legal rates to over 600 piasters per dollar.

While pushing for more realistic rates, U.S. policy opposed black market transactions.

Testimony by a U.S. embassy official before a Senate subcommittee in November 1969 said those dealing in the black market "give aid and comfort to the enemy" and make the "Vietnamese economy more unstable and subvert efforts to establish economic stability in Vietnam." A former CIA official, who asked not to be quoted by name said he believed the agency's resort to the black market in the early 1970s was due at least in part to a heavy budgetary drain caused by the effort to secretly raise a sunken Russian submarine in the Pacific.

The CIA effort to raise the Soviet sub with a specially constructed research ship, the Glomar Explorer began early in 1970 and its cost has been estimated as high as $500 million.

CIA purchases of Chilean currency on the black market were at a time when the U.S. embassy there was purchasing about $30,000 monthly in Chilean escudos outside the country in Argentina.

During this period the U.S. was seeking to shore up the Chilean economy in support of President Eduardo Frei.

After the election of Salvador Allende as president of Chile in November 1970 black market rates, which previously maintained a 25 per cent premium above the legal market, soared as high as 2-to-1.

U.S. policy turned sharply against the new regime. The CIA is said to have increased its black market transactions during the Allende period to include operational funds.

U.S. regulations forbid any American official abroad from dealing in black market currency.

A CIA spokesman said Tuesday that the agency had no comment on the reports of black market transactions.

Rats wreak havoc

The Washington Post

SOUNE WOLOF, Senegal — More than a billion rats have wreaked havoc with Senegal's agriculture in the past year and despite a major international extermination effort still constitute a serious threat.

Rats destroyed 80 per cent of Soune Wolof's crops — peanuts, cassava and millet — last season.

In Senegal alone 40 per cent of the food crops — worth as much as $100 million — was lost, according to generally accepted estimates by foreign specialists. Major, if less cataclysmic, losses were suffered in the other countries of the already sorely tried Sahel.

The Sahel — a string of sub-Saharan former French colonies stretching more than 2,500 miles across Senegal, Mauritania, Mali, Upper Volta, Chad, Niger and Northern Cameroon — only two years ago began to recover from its worst drought in a century.

The rat invasion reached serious proportions last July, and the Senegalese government had alerted the world community by late 1975. Once foreign aid started arriving late last year, the government abruptly played down the rat threat, apparently fearing that further publicity would frighten away tourists from Europe.

Villagers in this area first tried to handle the rats themselves. They bought poison at the nearest store and also started clubbing the rats.

When their efforts failed, they asked help from the government, 35 miles away in Dakar. That was in the fall. An agricultural team arrived in March. They supervised the setting out of bait covered with the anti-coagulant drugs that kill rates. — as well as squirrels and rabbits — in three days by causing massive internal bleeding.

"We knew it was working when we could smell the dead rats," Momar Fall, the village chief, recalled. "Now, we were not really angry at the government. At least I managed to salvage 20 per cent of my casava."

Nonetheless, he had to pay back the $660 he had received against delivery of the crop.

His only disappointment was directed at the government, for failing to make good its promise of a kilogram — 2.2 pounds — of rice for every 10 rat tails collected by the villagers. He produced a child's notebook in which he had recorded the collection of 640 tails.

"That much rice would sure help us now," he said.

Back in Dakar, experts from the United States, Canada, the European Common Market, and the U.N. Food and Agricultural Organization (FAO) can offer the Momar Falls of the Sahel, scant immediate encouragement.

Channing Frederickson, a U.S. Agency for International Development (AID) employee with 35 years experience in pest management, listed the afflictions that have befallen or lie in store for what at the best of times are among the world's poorest nations.

On top of the record drought — from 1968 to 1973 — and the continuing rat menace, the Sahel countries are subject to locusts, grasshoppers, army worms, plant lice, nematodes or microscopic underground worms that stunt roots, and weaverbirds.

And the desert, which encroaches a few feet annually, has been helped in its continual gnawing at the Sahel by herds of goats and sheep. These close-nibbling animals literally uproot the perennial grasses that protect the thin layer of arable topsoil.

Man, too, bears responsibility for the Sahel's distress. Over the years, the Sahel's population swelled and killed off carnivorous wild game, which are field rats' natural enemies.

Wallace gives up fight after decade

By MYRA MACPHERSON
The Washington Post

"There are different ways for a man like George Wallace to die; one is to die physically, and the other is to die politically ..."
Cornelia Wallace in "C'Nelia."

Montgomery, Ala. — George Wallace Wednesday played the last role after more than a decade of being a force in American presidential politics. He turned his 168 delegates over to Jimmy Carter.

After a last feeble attempt in California, Wallace had lost even his remaining hope of being an influence at the Democratic National convention.

It was a final irony that Wallace — who made his way out of the South in 1964 yelling "segregation forever" then broadened his appeal and reached across the country to build a powerful movement — would be so thoroughly whipped by another southerner.

The one-time cocky bantam rooster king of millions of frustrated and angry, "bitter people," who sent big government a message through their Wallace votes, sits in his wheelchair and there is no fight left. "I paved the way for a Jimmy Carter," he said softly in a recent interview.

His head bent, one hand bracing his back against the pain, he is a frail figure. His hand does not brush away the ashes that fall on his unfeeling leg as he flicks his cigar in the vicinity of the spittoon on the floor in his governor's office.

He does not even bristle at the suggestion that the unifying gesture of endorsing Carter is a strange move for the man who stood outside and yelled at the establishment. He was the master rouser of crowds who shouted about "pointy-headed liberals" and "anarchists" and appealed to the darkest fears of racism while articluating converns that worried many — crime, busing, higher taxes, lower servies, bigger government. He now said quietly of his final act in his fourth and last presidentialbid, "well, it's a role, isn't it?"

That was not the way it was supposed to be. Now political analysts are tryingto understand why the Wallace movement collapsed so fast in this year's primary campaign.

He had raised $7 million — more than any other candiate — through direct mail. When Ted Kennedy and Hubert Humphrey were left out of last year's polls, Wallace led them. He was a power.

The explanation of Wallace's vanishing strength is complex. The standard explanation that he became a helpless shadow power in a wheelchair when a bullet shattered his spine in a Laurel, Md., shopping center four years ago, is too simple.

That is the explanation Wallace uses mostly, as if Arthur Bremmer, with his crayed assassin's mission did it all.

To be sure, how Wallace was viewed as a cripple was, indeed, a major factor.

But he was also an old face selling old ware — wares that had been picked up and polished and improved upon by new faces that lent them a new respectability. Busing and law and order became issues for everyone from President Ford and Ronald Reagan to Jimmy Carter and Scoop Jackson. "All of them done stole my water. They're drinking out of my dipper," he conplained.

"We worked for over a year and half to put together a New Majority Coalition," said Richard Viguerie, who conducted Wallace's direct mail operation. "But we woke up one day and discovered that Carter done run off with our coalition and people forget that one major source of Wallace's support was Republicans. He was the only game in town from the conservative standpoint for several years — now Reagan's siphoned them off."

Political analysts for years have categorized Wallace's support as primarily a protest vote. His strength was in being "anti"; it was not in articulating change. Garnering initial sympathy, after he was shot, recent polls show that people again viewed Wallace as extreme. Even those who worked for him never expected him to become president, they said, although Wallace feels he would have had the nomination in 1972 had he not been shot.

Ned McWherter, speaker of the Tennessee House of Representatives, where Wallace got 83 per cent of the vote in the 1972 primary and was trounced by Carter this May, said that, even before Carter, the people of his state had decided that "Wallace was too extreme and would never deliver. Now they feel they've got a southerner who can not not only send a message, but can deliver."

Another factor voiced, even by people on the Wallace campaign, is that it was badly bungled. "You're not allowed too many mistakes in this game," said his wife, Cornelia.

A political savvy who grew up in the governor's mansion when her uncle, Kissin' Jim Folsom, was Alabama's governor, she said of his staff, "George Wallace is like the hen that laid the golden egg — and they are the farmers who don't know how to pick it up.

"He's always used local boys — and he never got elected president. He should have led some heavyweights in advertising and political strategy. And we could have shown him to much better advantage instead of pictures that showed them loading him in and out of airplanes and rolling him up to platforms."

But one view is that the most fatal campaign tactic rested with Wallace in that he was seeking respectability more than votes. There is a New South. Since the voting rights act, there are 90 black mayors — 12 of them in Alabama — and Wallace's battle cry as he stood in the school house door more than a decade ago, to bar entrance by blacks, haunted his recurring quest for lasting fame and respectability.

So this year, Viguerie said, Wallace "gave them nothing to vote for." Over and over he told the press and the people that he had scored a moral victory, that he was happy that other politicians were embracing some of his conservatism, that they were singing his song, that there was unity and that he was helping to keep that unity. "So, if you're saying 'I've already won what I've set out to do,' why should anyone fee like getting out and voting for you?" asked Viguerie.

Wallace himself admitted that he should have gone to Massachusetts "a week earlier and should have talked strong about busing and then I probably would have won there" (He preached peace instead).

Before Massachusetts he confided to his wife that he didn't want people to think "I'd push the button for the bomb. The press has always made me out to be a kind of ranting maniac."

She recalled, "He was trying to round off the rough edges. A person in the field of speech said how much more 'controlled' his voice was," Mrs. Wallace said, rolling her eyes. "They took away the greatest thing he had going for him. He's a hell fire and damnation speaker. He had too much rubbing with a velvet glove. The only way that man is any good is when you put a burr under his saddle. He went with the olive branch and he was defeated."

"We are seeing an end of a Wallace era," said A. Jay Cooper, mayor of Prichard, Ala., and a black man. "That virulent type of articulating anti-black issues is no longer in vogue and the people who listened to him are out of vogue." He added caustically that racism is still everywhere, only in more subtle forms.

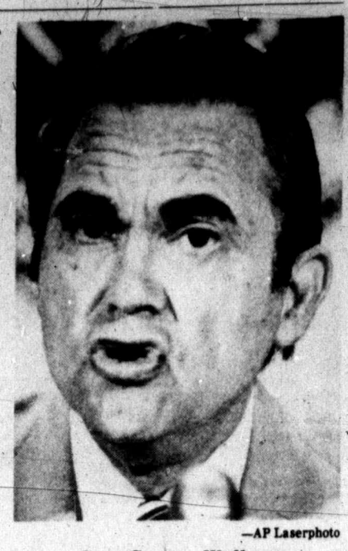

The question now is where can Wallace go in Alabama — not national — politics. At 56, he refers to himself as "old" and looks back. He said he is happy to be alive and able to "look out over yonder at the greenery."

But there is a sense of depression and defeat. A friend once said, "He ain't got but one serious appetite and that's votes." His wife said, "He's just been in politics too long to change."

He has had the trappings of power for a long time, the sycophants and the chauffeured car. His friends, his hangers-on, his wife and even Wallace are laying plans for the U.S. Senate race in 1978.

Wallace never wanted to come to Washington as a senator, his wife said, but that is his only hope for the future now.

As Cornelia Wallace said this week, "He has no other place to go."

Texas fisherman pulls in piranha

BROWNWOOD, Tex. (AP) — If a local fisherman suspected the 12-inch fish he pulled out of the Colorado River Wednesday seemed out of place amid the bass and catfish, he was right.

The fish has been tentatively identified as a piranha, according to Game Warden John Wood. It has been sent to Texas Parks and Wildlife laboratories in Waco for positive identification.

Piranhas are tropical fish which occasionally swarm around live animal or human victims, stripping the victims' flesh clean with a series of razor-sharp teeth.

Humphrey's political dream vanishes in Carter's wake

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hubert Humphrey's presidential dream has all but vanished in the dust left by Jimmy Carter's speeding bandwagon.

As declared candidates and favorite sons were embracing Carter as the peoples' choice, the Happy Warrior conceded Wednesday that the grueling primary race for the Democratic nomination had brought Carter almost certain victory.

But Humphrey couldn't quite bring himself to abandon his quest for the presidency without some qualification.

In a statement Wednesday, Humphrey said Carter "is virtually certain to be our party's nominee. I, therefore, will not authorize any presidential activity on my behalf."

It was not likely to rank with General Sherman's declaration that he would not seek the nomination and if nominated would not run.

For 26 years, Humphrey has dreamed of becoming president. Twice he has been at the brink, as vice president for four years under Lyndon Johnson, and as his party's nominee after Johnson withdrew in 1968, when he lost by a narrow margin to Richard Nixon.

Even this year, when the 65-year-old Minnesota senator chose to sit out the five-month primary campaigns, he left no doubt about his desire to be president.

"I'm available," Humphrey would frequently admit, saying he was prepared to run if the Democratic convention turned to him. Humphrey pointedly omitted that rejoinder from Tuesday's statement.

Rather than bow out Sherman-style, Humphrey simply pointed out the reality of the situation.

"For many months I have said that I would wait the end of the primary election period before deciding whether I would enter the race or be available for the Democratic presidential nomination," Humphrey said.

"I have stated that I would seek the nomination only in the event that there was no clear front runner following the final three primaries in California, New Jersey and Ohio.

"The primaries now are over and Gov. Carter has a commanding lead. He is virtually certain to be our party's nominee."

Shortly before he issued the statement, Humphrey talked by phone with Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., of California who has vowed to stay in the race for the nomination.

A source close to Humphrey said Brown asked the senator not to say that Carter was virtually certain to get the nomination. Brown argued that such a statement would damage his candidacy, but Humphrey refused to delete it.

Long GOP battle remains

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Ford and Ronald Reagan are faced with a summer-long struggle for a handful of Republican delegates that may still leave them short of enough votes to assure either of winning the presidential nomination before the Aug. 16 GOP convention.

An analysis of delegate strength by The Washington Post showed that both candidates may go to the convention tantalizingly close to the 1,130 delegates necessary to capture the nomination, possibly with as few as 10 delegates separating the size of the two rival blocs.

Their fates would then rest in the hands of the uncommitted delegates, who now number about 150 but many of whom are likely to have declared themselves by the time the convention convenes.

Wooing those uncommitted delegates is now one part of a two-pronged strategy ooth sides will be pursuing in the 1 weeks between now and the convention.

The other is to concentrate their resources in the 11 remaining states that are still to choose GOP delegates at state conventions. A series of decisive victories in these states by either candidate could finally settle the matter.

Estimates by both Ford and Reagan strategists Wednesday gave Reagan the edge in the battle for delegates at these state conventions, but there was disagreement on whether Reagan could pick up enough new delegates to close the almost 90-vote lead the President enjoys over him now.

AVN ESTIMATE MADE BY THE Reagan camp showed the former California governor pulling within 10 voters of Mr. Ford as a result of state convention victories, leaving both candidates about 50 delegates short of winning the nomination on the even of a wide-open national convention.

But a Ford estimate showed the President maintaining his lead over Reagan through the state conventions and putting him so close to the magic number of 1,130 that his nomination in Kansas City would be all but assured.

Despite their now four-month-long contest for the Republican nomination, both Wednesday for a continuation of the struggle over the next 10 weeks.

The President met with his political advisers at the Whtie House, emerging later to tell reporters he remains confident of winning the nomination on the first convention ballot.

In California, meanwhile, Reagan strategists Wednesday began a two-day meeting at Lake Tahoe to map their strategy for winning the state-convention showdowns and the allegiance of the uncommitted delegates.

The first of those 11 remaining state GOP conventions is Saturday in Springfield, Mo. In recognition of Missouri's importance, both candidates plan to travel to Springfield Friday to court the convention delegates.

Mr. Ford survived the last three primaries of the year Tuesday in Ohio, New Jersey and California in better shape than he and his advisers had expected before the voting.

Late returns from Ohio showed the President winning 91 of the state's 97 delegates. Reagan, who made a last-minute campaign trip to Ohio, had hoped to win as many as 24 of the state's delegates.

In New Jersey a technically uncommitted but strongly pro-Ford slate swelt the 67 delgate seats at stake in the primary. However, even Ford advisers conceded Wednesday that about 6 of those 67 New Jersey delegates actually favor Reagan.

Nonetheless, the President's victories in Ohio and New Jersey gave him almost enough delegates to offset his long-expected and decisive loss to Reagan of 167 delegates in the winner-take-all primary in Reagan's home state of California.

For the remainder of the campaign, Mr. Ford said Wednesday, he will rely largely on "raising the argument we used in Ohio." That, in effect, is to tell GOP delegates that Reagan is too conservative to win in November, and that his nomination would mean disaster for the Republican party as a whole.

"I am electable, and I can help elect more Republicans to the House and the Senate," Mr. Ford said.

There is little disagreement between the two camps that Reagan will win big in the New Mexico, Utah, Montana and Washington state conventions. In Colorado Reagan aides are hoping for a sweep of the 31 delegates, while Ford strategists say they have a chance to win six or more delegates.

There was also little disagreement that the President should take most of the delegates at the Minnesota, Delaware and Connecticut state conventions.

That leaves as the major battlegrounds Missouri, Iowa and North Dakota, with a total of 89 convention delegates, where both sides say the race is close.

There are, finally, some 150 still technically uncommitted delegates whose leanings and attitudes in many cases remain uncertain.

Stamp out abuse

President Ford was responding to a clear signal from the public when he ordered the Agriculture Department earlier this year to tighten up the eligibility rules for the Food Stamp program and otherwise try to bring its runaway costs under control. Food Stamps, no matter what case can be made for them as an aspect of public welfare, have become a symbol of public assistance being exploited by people whose needy condition is marginal if it exists at all.

Plaintiffs in the law challenging the reforms which had been due to take effect recently are being short-sighted. While representing a large cross-section of interests, they are missing the point that failure to reform the Food Stamp program is a sure way to undermine what support it still has with the American people as a whole.

The Senate Agriculture Committee recently completed work on its own proposals for reform, cutting back the program to a lesser degree than the Administration has in mind. With the House still in the early stages of considering Food Stamp bills, Mr. Ford has decided that the taxpayer has been patient enough waiting for a response from Washington to the abuses which have been brought to light. We agree with him, and hope the Agriculture Department can make its revised regulations stick in spite of the current challenge in the courts.

A spiteful act

The Third World bloc which dominates proceedings of the United Nations General Assembly would be hard put to show what it has gained by its extremist attitudes toward Israel in the world body.

Another example of the extremism surfaced recently when the annual assembly of the U. N. World Health Organization refused to accept, even for general discussion, an expert committee's report. The report from 27 members of the committee concluded that health services offered Palestinians in Israeli-occupied Arab territories had improved slowly but steadily since the 1967 war.

Dr. Paul Erlich Jr., the United States representative to W. H. O., said it was the first time in his experience that the group had failed to consider a document that was submitted — a retributive, not a thoughtful act.

Whether or not the W. H. O. Assembly accepts the expert committee's conclusions will not have any bearing on the health services that Palestinians are receiving in the West Bank, Golan Heights and Gaza Strip.

The W. H. O. act does, however, close another avenue of contact and dialogue between Middle East antagonists and to that extent detracts from efforts to achieve a lasting peace.

Concern justified

Juveniles are protected by law and by custom from exposure to obscenity. But they are exposed daily to television shows and movies containing scenes of violence.

The Chicago City Council reportedly is considering an ordinance to prohibit persons under 18 from seeing films containing scenes of "harmful" violence, defined in the ordinance as "beatings, sluggings, floggings and eye gougings.

Censorship laws, however, are not the answer to the problem.

But the widespread concern over the effects on the young of continual exposure to scenes of violence and aggressive behavior, both on television and in the movies, certainly is justified.

The "family viewing hour" on tv has served to protect children from the impact of ever-increasing, ever more violent crime shows. It should be continued.

The movie rating system, which is voluntary, should put as much emphasis on protecting children from violence as from sex and nudity.

ART BUCHWALD —

And just guess who is coming to dinner

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — Everyone is doing something about the Bicentennial. The Diner's Club is running an informal survey amongst Americans asking them who in history they would like to celebrate the Fourth of July with and why. Where would they take them for dinner and, finally, what would they order in the way of food and drink?

The answers have included such varied people as Thomas Jefferson, Teddy Roosevelt, Al Capone and Richard Nixon — NECESSARILY in that order.

Although I hate questionaires, the survey is rather intriguing and I've been mulling over my answer for days. I've finally decided the only person I want to have dinner with is "Deep Throat," the one of Watergate fame, not the lady from the X-rated film. (I have nothing against her, but on the 200th anniversary of our country I believe an American should abstain from sex in tribute to the founders of our country, because if it hadn't been for them there might not have been any sex in America as we know it today.

In any case I think "Deep Throat" would be fun to have dinner with. I would like to take him to the Sans Souci, but knowing his proclivity for wanting to stay out of the limelight I would select the C level of a garage somewhere on the outskirts of Washington.

First, I would stop off at a Kentucky Fried Chicken place and pick up a bucket of chicken and French fries and a six-pack of beer.

I'd find a nice quiet place in the garage where we wouldn't get run over, and I'd spread out The Washington Post on the floor so we wouldn't get our clothes and food dirty.

The first question I would ask him, which I've always been curious about, would be "What was Bob Woodward really like? Did he look anything like Robert Redford, or was Woodward much better looking?

Once we got over the amenities I'd get down to business. I would question him about his role in the Nixon Administration. Did he blow the White House cover story about Watergate because he had been mistreated by Haldeman, Ehrlichman or Colson, or was he mad at Nixon personally because he had never been invited to Sunday morning church services at the White House?

Then I'd ask him about his personal life. Was he married? If so, how did he explain his absences at night to his wife? Did she believe he was really meeting with a reporter from The Washington Post, or did she accuse him, when he came home at those early hours in the morning, of being up to no-good with some secretary on Capitol Hill?

In the book and the movie, "All the President's Men," "Deep Throat" told Woodward to fly a red flag from the potted plant on his apartment balcony when the reporter wanted to see him, and then "Deep Throat" would mark the hour of appointment on page 20 of Woodward's New York Times. I would ask him if Woodward ever got mad at him for messing up his New York Times before he had a chance to read it?

Finally, I would ask "Deep Throat" after we finished the six-pack of beer, if he ever thought about writing his own book about Watergate. I would point out that there were publishers in this country willing to pay hundreds of thousands of dollars for it and I would offer to collaborate with him on the project. He could keep half the royalties, which is 50 per cent more than he got from Woodward and Bernstein. I would also guarantee him that if we sold it to the movies I would make sure Robert Redford played him, and Hal Holbrook would get the minor role of Bob Woodward.

The thought may have occurred to you, as it has to me, that "Deep Throat" could easily have been a woman — perhaps a disenchanted wife of one of the people involved in Watergate. For my sake I hope it isn't true, because I would have a helluva time explaining to my wife what I was doing in a garage eating fried chicken and drinking beer with another woman on the 200th anniversary of the United States at 3 o'clock in the morning.

WASHINGTON MERRY—GO—ROUND

Modern 'witch-finder general'

By JACK ANDERSON with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — In the 1640s, an Englishman named Matthew Hopkins discovered a foolproof method of detecting witches. It consisted of some original techniques in torture. The King, grateful over the opportunity to rid his realm of witches, conferred upon Hopkins the title of "His Majesty's Witch-Finder General."

Some 330 years later, an American President, Richard Nixon, appointed a modern Witch-Finder General to root out the radicals in our midst. The witch hunter, Guy Goodwin, hurried from place to place indicting radicals.

Justice Department sources say he supervised about 100 grand jury investigations in 36 states. He returned more than 400 indictments. There was one trouble. The indictments didn't stick; only about 10 per cent ended in convictions.

Many of the convictions were also for minor offenses, having nothing to do with the subversive activities Goodwin was investigating. Goodwin sought contempt and perjury indictments when he couldn't make a better case.

Under the American judicial system, grand juries are supposed to protect the people from oppressive government prosecutors. But Goodwin turned his grand juries into a coercive instrument, which he used to investigate and harass his victims. He jailed people who refused to testify.

Goodwin is an improbable Witch-Finder General, an impeccable, subdued, handsome man, with styled gray hair and a soft, almost effeminate voice. But he was relentless in investigating civil disturbances and terrorist activities. He wound up in charge of a special section, which hunted subversives for the Nixon Administration.

The country was disturbed about dissidents in the early 1970s, with good reason. Some had staged violent demonstrations, planted bombs and committed other outrages. Their purpose, they had boasted, was to overthrow the American system.

But many were peaceful, patriotic antiwar activists, who merely opposed the government's Vietnam policies. Goodwin often abused their rights, too. His most serious disservice to the nation, however, was to pervert the grand jury into a tool of government repression.

We have questioned officials at all levels of the Justice Department about Goodwin's tactics. We have also interviewed distinguished lawyers and civil libertarians. Some spoke to us on the record; others preferred to keep their remarks anonymous.

The most common complaint was that Goodwin abuses the grand jury processes, that he uses the grand jury to harass people for their political beliefs, that he brings indictments on thin evidence and then leaves it to someone else to try the cases.

Whitney North Seymour, the staid U.S. attorney in New York City, said Goodwin had "little apparent regard for the rights of witnesses." Prof. Arthur Kinoy, a famed constitutional lawyer who has reviewed Goodwin's record, called it "one of the most serious examples of repression." Some of Goodwin's colleagues refer to him as the "grand inquisitor."

Yet the Justice Department, under fairminded Atty. Gen. Edward Levi, is continuing to use the Witch-Finder General. He was recently dispatched to Richmond, Va., for example, to oversee a grand jury investigation of an FBI coverup.

Goodwin has the kind of faith in the FBI that most people reserve for their church.

Goodwin seemed as eager to protect the FBI men in Richmond as he was to persecute leftists. This brought him into a head-on collision with Rodney Sager, a tough federal attorney who headed the Justice Department office in Richmond.

Sager at first tried to cooperate with Goodwin, but then sought to remove him from the FBI case. The witch hunter, believe it or not, hauled Sager himself before the grand jury for 15 hours. For Sager, this was the last straw. He worked nights to draft a long formal departmental complaint against Goodwin.

Although Justice has refused to release it and Sager won't show us a copy for fear of official reprisals, we have had access to the complaint.

It charges that Goodwin and an aide indulged in "gross professional misconduct and gross abuse of the grand jury system."

The department's ethics watchdog, Michael Shaheen, responded that Sager's charges had been investigated and had been found without merit. Yet we have evidence that only a perfunctory investigation was made. In disgust, Sager quit the Justice Department a few days ago.

NICK THIMMESCH

The thinner, quieter, less haughty Ronald Ziegler

NEW YORK CITY — Ronald Ziegler is not inoperative. He works, he travels, he has a good time now and then. He is thinner, less haughty and quieter than when he served as President Nixon's press secretary. The boy wonder of the scribblers' room is now 37 and has gray in his sideburns.

His ambition had been that after leaving the White House he would slip into one of those $100,000 vice presidencies in the "communications business," as it is called. Alas, Ziegler got caught up in the worst of the Watergate war and stayed on with former President Nixon until July, 1975.

The enjoyments around the San Clemente exile were few, and for Ziegler his motorbike became a blessing. Then, last August, he was signed on by Syska and Hennessey, a consulting engineering firm, to be managing director of international services.

"After Watergate, I felt that the communications business was not the place to go," Ziegler told me, blending candor with restraint. "I didn't even try to get into the communications field.

"I certainly didn't expect to go with an engineering firm, but I must say I like what I'm doing. I'm in the business end, doing administrative and management work. My experience as press secretary fits only in terms of understanding the world and people."

Ziegler was a lad of 23 when he went to work for H.R. (Bob) Haldeman in Nixon's punk run for the California governorship. He spent most of his adult years in the Nixon-Haldeman lists, and now that he is away from them he has become more reflective.

Nick Thimmesch

"I was misled in some stages of the very complex breaking of the Watergate story," Ziegler said. "Facts were withheld from me, but I won't say who withheld them."

Was it Mr. Nixon? "I won't say who withheld them," Ziegler repeated, as though he were back in the briefing room. "I respect Richard Nixon very much. I talk with him on the phone. I consider him a friend and as a President who did many good things for the U.S."

He offers no such praise for Haldeman, though Ziegler says he bears his former boss "no animosity." He says he still can't figure out John Ehrlichman. Henry Kissinger is still a good friend and he talks to him occasionally.

"The Nixon Administration has obvious achievements in foreign policy," Ziegler says, ignoring the thunder from the Ronald Reagan right, "and the President's efforts to reorganize the executive branch would have been very positive had it not been for Watergate. Someday his domestic programs will be given more attention than now.

"But it was all marred by the dark side, the mistakes of Watergate. We can't ignore those. To make a good evaluation of the Nixon Administration is impossible now because of Watergate."

Indeed, the feeling against the Administration was so strong when Ziegler left that he even had to cancel his public speaking schedule. A dim-witted dean of the school of communications at Boston University began screaming First Amendment, and Ziegler was ziegled.

But New York City has been a cure for Ziegler. He travels in interesting company here, even trafficking with folks like Clay Felker, publisher of New York and Village Voice, publications absent in Mr. Nixon's roll of honor. People who meet Ziegler, even in a toney disco like Regine's on Park Avenue, like him. He is affable.

"I took a lot of bad stuff after the resignation," Ziegler says of the public, "but it was the emotion of the time. I learned to accept it. People now realize that I was not implicated in Watergate.

"Someday, I might do some speaking and writing. I didn't want to rush out and write a quick book about my experiences. I was 29 when I took that job and I wouldn't trade that experience for anything.

"No, I never lied, not knowingly. All White House press secretaries will tell you the same thing. There were things I said that didn't turn out to be true, but they weren't conscious lies.

For years, Ziegler saw very little of his wife and two daughters because of the heavy schedule with the President. Now, Ziegler spends four days a week in New York, commutes home to Alexandria, Va., on weekends and claims he sees more of his family now than ever before.

Ziegler declared to me in early 1974 that he would be on the inaugural stand with the President of the United States on Jan. 20, 1977, as the new President takes his oath of office. "I will look out over those stands and see all of the people. And I will know that I have seen a man under vicious attack show the courage and strength to last it out," he told me.

But now, as the 1976 presidential campaign moves into the convention phase, Ziegler shows only small interest. "I'm not even sure who I would vote for," he says, and won't even say that he'll vote Republican.

Whoever that President-elect is in 1977 he won't have Ziegler with him on the stand. Alas, that's the way the world is.

THE BIBLE

CAN YOU QUOTE IT?

By LAVINA ROSS FOWLER

1. All sorts of phrases like "passing away, going home, gone to Abraham's bosom and even promoted" have been coined to take the sharpness from the word "death" and "died." Death is as much a part of life as being born. Complete the following comforting words; "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, ———." Psalm 23

2. How does Gen. 4:8,25:8, or 35:29 describe death?

3. What victory has God given us over death? 1 Cor. 15:57

4. "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart: and lean not ——." Pro. 3:5

5. "Be not afraid of sudden fear, — — For the Lord shall ———." Pro. 3:25, 26

OC gains AA rating for bonds

ODESSA — Odessa College has been notified by two New York City bond-rating firms it has received an AA rating.

The AA bond rating will save the college up to $150,000 on the sale of the $5.3 million bond package approved by Ector County voters May 8.

Both Moody's Investment Service of New York and Standard and Poor's of New York have notified the college that they have raised the college's bond rating from A to AA.

The A rating had been in effect since 1967, when the college sold bonds to finance the construction of the composite technology building and the electronic technology building.

Dr. Philip Speegle, OC president, said the AA rating, as opposed to the previous A rating, will save the college from .3 to .5 per cent on the interest. This means a savings of from $94,000 to more than $150,000 on the $5.3 million tax bond to be sold this month.

The bonds, which will be paid off over a 10-year period, will be sold in a special OC board of trustees meeting Tuesday. Dr. Speegle headed a delegation of OC administrators and board members who recently went to New York to seek the better bond rating. Money from the bonds will finance construction of anew instructional building, expansion of the student union buildi ng, purchase of equipment and other renovations.

GOP suffering wounds invested in the stock market. He may well have cost himself the Tennessee primary by suggesting the sale of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Both the social security and the TVA lapses carried echoes of 1964, when Goldwater made self-damaging statements on both subjects.

But the big loser Tuesday probably was Mr. Ford, and not only because Reagan defeated him in the California primary.

Despite some harsh words in Texas, the President went into the California campaign with the high regard of most Republicans. Various polls have shown that both Mr. Ford and Reagan are relatively popular among Republicans and are regarded as very much alike ideologically.

The absence of ideological hostility such as existed in 1964 had encouraged strategists in both camps to believe that supporters of the losing candidate would help unite the party behind the winner.

This expectation vanished in California. The Ford commercials on Rhodesia inaccurately declared that Reagan had followed up his blooper by proposing that "advisors" be sent to Rhodesia. The ad concluded that these words: " ... remember, Gov. Reagan couldn't start a war. President Reagan could."

The response of Reagan supporters can be measured by a bitter parody that made the rounds the next day at the candidate's headquarters. Suggested by a Reagan strategist, this mythical ad concluded: "as Congressman, Gerald Ford couldn't pardon Richard Nixon. As President, he did."

When Reagan first learned about the Ford committee's Rhodesian ads, he blamed Stuart Spencer, the deputy director of the President's election campaign. Spencer and associate Bill Roberts managed Rockefeller's 1964 campaign in California and Reagan's successful campaign for the governorship in 1966.

However, when the President personally endorsed the commercials, Reagan flew into a rage and declined to say whether he would back Mr. Ford if the President is nominated.

Reagan's national campaign manager, John P. Sears, said Tuesday that Reagan would endorse Mr. Ford. But Sears questioned whether Reagan volunteers would work for the President in any event.

His doubts are shared privately by some Ford supporters in California who regard the anti-Reagan commercials as a serious mistake.

"The issue was working for us but we couldn't let it alone," complained one Ford aide Wednesday. "Instead, we tried overkill and drove away the very people we'll need to win in November."

In both the Reagan and Ford camps this attitude of "overkill" is widely attributed to Spencer and other Californians who once worked for Reagan. Those who prefer a softer line complain that Spencer is doing too much to destroy Reagan and too little to promote the President.

These Republicans are mindful that it is the conservative cadres of the GOP, most of them loyal to Reagan, who do the doorbell ringing and countless other partisan tasks. If these volunteers are alienated, all Republican candidates in November are likely to suffer because of it.

Detective believes POWs still in Laos

By PIET BENNETT

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — A private detective says he was offered the chance to ransom two American prisoners of war from Laos two years ago and was told then that up to 300 others might be held in the Asian country.

Theodore R. Grevers, who runs the Fatman International Detective Agency, said he decided to talk about his secret mission after North Vietnam insisted this week it no longer holds any Americans captive.

Grevers said he agrees the North Vietnamese probably have no American prisoners. "I believe they are in Laos near the Chinese border," he said.

The detective said he met three times in May 1974, with Pathet Lao officials in Vientiane, Laos, before negotiations broke off after the American Embassy there learned about them.

"It just died because I was no longer private," Grevers said about the negotiations he said he conducted with a woman and three men he would not identify. He said the woman was the wife of Pragna Khamsouk Keola, vice chairman of the Pathet Lao party and of the then newly formed National Coalition Political Council in Laos.

Grevers said he was told he could ransom two Americans for $225,000. Later, there were indications others might be freed without ransom.

"They had almost a burning desire to negotiate with someone who had the ability to unburden them from the care of these POWs in an honorable, private, nongovernment manner," Grevers said.

The Pentagon currently lists 816 Americans missing in Indochina.

Besides Americans, Grevers said he heard the Pathet Lao was holding 600 or 700 Thai prisoners, whom he said may have been mercenaries hired to fight in Laos by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

Grevers was in the news last year when his long-standing claim that a Navy plane with 10 men aboard was downed in the Baltic in April 1950 was confirmed by the Pentagon. His agency has offices in Los Angeles, Detroit, Zurich and Hong Kong.

Susan Robnette dies in Crane from gunshot

CRANE — A 26-year-old Midland woman died Wednesday on a ranch south of Crane, apparently of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, authorities said.

The victim was identified as Susan Roch Robnette, a deputy voter registration clerk in the Midland County tax-assessor-collector's office.

Justice of the Peace Clara Cromer refused today to give a reporter results of her inquest into the death. "I don't have anything to tell you," she said. She said it was her policy not to comment on death "of this nature."

More of the same weather in store

Permian Basin area residents can expect "more of the same" weather-wise through Friday, as the National Weather Service says skies will be fair to partly cloudy and temperatures will be warm.

In Andrews, it was clear and warm with calm winds today, while Crane reported mostly sunny skies and a light breeze.

Rankin had bright and sunny skies with a few high clouds, warm temperatures and a light breeze. In Big Lake, it was mostly warm and sunny despite a cool breeze from the south, and the early overcast conditions had cleared by mid-morning.

Lamesa had clear skies, light winds and warm temperatures, and in Stanton, it was windy, clear and warm.

The Weather Service said today's fair skies will become partly cloudy tonight and Friday, but afternoon temperatures will be even warmer. After tonight's expected low in the upper 60s, the mercury should climb to the mid 90s on Friday.

Winds will be from the south decreasing to 10 to 15 mph tonight.

Occasional showers lingered in parts of the Lower Rio Grande Valley today. Except for patchy clouds near the southeast corner of Texas, skies were mostly clear across the rest of the state.

A few showers and thunderstorms which roved extreme West Texas during the night played out before dawn, The Associated Press reported.

Breezes from the south and southeast kept early morning temperatures rather warm — in a range from the upper 50s in the West Texas mountains up to 73 degrees it Brownsville at the mouth of the Rio Grande and in Del Rio on the Mexican border.

Wednesday's top marks climbed as high as a summery 100 at Presidio in the Big Bend of West Texas.

Forecasts promised scattered showers and thunderstorms near the state's south and north extremities, clear skies elswhere and weather throughout the state.

Syrians, opponents agree on cease-fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria and its Palestinian and leftist Lebanese foes agreed on a cease-fire today. But one Lebanese Christian leader, President Suleiman Franjieh, opposed creation of an international Arab force to end the 14-month-old war in his country.

There was a marked reduction in fighting on all fronts. The Palestinian guerrillas said there had been no shelling or shooting since Wednesday.

Beirut radio claimed Syrian tanks in southern Lebanon tried to cut off the Sidon-Beirut highway at midday but were driven off by the guerrillas.

The radio, which is controlled by the alliance of Yasir Arafat's Palestinians and Kamal Jumblatt's leftist Lebanese Moslems, said Syrian President Hafez Assad ordered his estimated 12,000 troops and 300 tanks in northern, eastern and southern Lebanon to observe a cease-fire in place at daybreak.

successful rivals, but they appear to be listening carefully — and frequently returning his smile.

Carter does not show emotion much himself beyond an occasional steely-eyed stare that tends to wilt its target, or the smile that sometimes seems to mask his reactions as much as express them. But he has appeared more relaxed in the last few days seeming almost to sense the outcome of the final test of his campaign strategy.

On Saturday night, at the Best Western Motel in nearby Americus, Ga., the 1941 graduating class of the local high school will have its 35th annual reunion and Jimmy Carter will be there.

When Carter was a youngster, going to Americus 10 miles away was a big event. It is sure to be a bigger event this Saturday night.

Mickey said he closed the office about 5 p.m. Tuesday and upon returning, he found the office area had been entered, possibly through the office window, and the items missing, according to police reports.

There was no evidence of forced entry, police said.

FOUR FIRES REPORTED

A fire in an air-conditioner pump at the residence of G. A. Zambrano of 1510 N. Edwards St. was reported Wednesday night. Cause of the fire was an electrical short in the pump. There was total damage to the pump.

Cable company will offer pay television here

Tall City TV Cable Co. has announced it will launch an optional pay television programming service June 20.

Tom Mixon, general manager, said subscribers to the premium service, called Channel 100, will have the opportunity to view at least six, and often up to 10 "first rate, current motion pictures" each month.

"More than one-half million cable television subscribers across the nation, including subscribers to at least 10 cable television systems in Texas, presently are enjoying optional pay TV service," Mixon said.

"More than 100 extra weekly viewing hours will be presented, which will include first-rate current motion pictures, exclusive children's programming and special features not normally available on commercial television."

He said the Channel 100 presentations will be shown without commercials, and with no editing or other cuts.

Mixon added no X-rated movies will be shown, and the movies to be shown will be selected from what Hollywood produces and makes available to the premium cable industry.

He said the community will be divided into six areas in order to launch the new service. Cable television subscribers in each area will be offered a seven-day preview of the motion pictures at no charge. The previews will be presented on Cable TV Channel 6. If a cable subscriber signs up for the new service before or during the preview in his area, the normal $15 Channel 100 installation charge will be waived. He explained that technical reasons make it necessary to launch the premium service section by section throughout the community. Approximately 2,000 to 2,500 cable subscribers will compose each area. Therefore, by Aug. 1, residents in the entire community will have had an opportunity to watch seven days worth of free movies, and to take advantage of the firm's free installation offer.

Mixon said the normal monthly service charge, following the preview period, will be $9.75.

Cortes legalizes Spanish political parties

The Los Angeles Times

MADRID — In an historic break with the era of the late Francisco Franco, the Spanish Parliament, known here as the Cortes, passed a law Wednesday that legalized political parties in Spain.

The law was approved by a vote of 338 to 91 with 24 deputies abstaining.

Approval had been expected, but the vote still evoked emotion. For the Cortes, largely made up of deputies appointed by Franco, had struck down one of his most cherished shibboleths.

"Political parties," he had said, "are not a constructive solution for opening the way towards a true, orderly and efficient democracy in Spain, and they can not be tolerated."

Despite the law, parties will still not operate as freely in Spain as they do in most of Western Europe. Under the law, the minister of interior must authorize all parties, with his decisions subject to review by the supreme court.

A clause in the law bans all parties that "aim at violent subversion or the destruction of the legal, political, social or economic order, or attack, by any means, sovereignty, the unity or independence of the country, or the integrity of its territory, or its national security." The government is expected to invoke this clause to ban the Communist Party of Spain.

But, despite its limitations, the law does do away with the Franco system under which the only political groups allowed were the Fascist-like national movement and organizations that pledged support to the principles of the movement. In effect, the movement was the single party of Spain.

Since the death of Franco last November, however, the government has tolerated other political parties, allowing them to hold some meetings and news conferences. But these parties were still considered illegal and could not openly campaign on issues, seek members or solicit funds.

It was not yet clear whether these parties would now register under the new law. There have been hints that some politicians would boycott the new procedure, partly because they believe it is not liberal enough, partly because they were not consulted in drafting the law.

Nevertheless, the law was the most dramatic step yet taken by the government of Prime Minister Carlos Arias Navarro on its promised path toward democratic reform. The law also tended to support the promise made by King Juan Carlos to the U.S. Congress last week that he would lead Spain toward "authentic liberty."

In fact, Adolfo Suarez, the general secretary of the national movement, in presenting the government's case for the law, reminded the Cortes of the king's promise in America and said "we have the high honor and grave responsibility of allowing the first step toward this goal."

It was a dramatic touch by the government to send Suarez, who is a member of the cabinet, to the podium to defend the law, for the law, in effect, would do away with the need for his national movement.

In the view of many analysts, the vote underscored the weakness of the group known here as "The Bunker" — who do not want any tampering with the system left Spain by Franco. They could persuade only 115 deputies to either vote against the bill or abstain. That vote was viewed by some as a kind of last gasp by The Bunker.

During the debate, the rightists were both eloquent and acrimonious in their opposition. Raimundo Fernandez-Cuesta, a member of the old Fascist Falange Party, which evolved into the national movement, said that the law "would make futile the death and sacrifices of those who made possible the creation of the (Franco) regime."

In an obvious reference to the political turmoil that brought on the Spanish Civil War 40 years ago, Joaquin Gias, another rightist, said he was against turning Spain topsy-turvy again. "Must we go back and repeat history?" he asked.

Doug Wabner collects mini-bottles of spirits

Copley News Service

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Collections of all sorts, from silver spoons to antique cars, have been popular hobbies for many years.

The person who gets hooked on collecting will go to almost any extreme to get "just one more." No matter what the object of the collecting fad is, the collector usually gets involved to the extent that he learns quite a bit about his subject and is willing to invest time and money to see the collection grow.

The hobby of collecting beer cans, which started a number of years ago, caught on quickly.

Now there is a national association of beer can collectors who meet, sponsor shows and trade some of their treasures.

Doug Wabner, a high school sophomore, has started a different type collection — at least it's not as common as many other collecting hobbies. He gathers up miniature liquor bottles from all over the world.

Less than a year ago Doug was in a local store which stocks a large number (it seemed large to him then) of the tiny bottles. He became fascinated with the variety of shapes and sizes.

Right then his collection began. Now, he has 228 miniature bottles, all full, and not one with a broken seal.

He is not interested in the contents — be it Scotch, rum, brandy or any one of the many varieties of liqueurs that are characteristic of a country or an area.

The different types of bottles are all that matters. He refers casually to "the stuff" that's in them.

Doug's typical, all-boy room has several shelves for books, trophies and knickknacks. Some of these treasures have had to move over to make room for the collection, which now pretty well fills two 40-inch shelves. The bottles are alphabetically arranged and Doug can put his hand on any one of them in a moment. He also keeps an alphabetized list, neatly typed, which serves as a guide when he or someone else searches out new items.

Many of his foreign acquisitions have been obtained by his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Charles I. Wabner.

When the family was on vacation in Jamaica last year, Doug haunted the shops and was rewarded by finding no less than 25 new ones, mostly English products.

One set obtained there includes bottles in the shapes of animals, a kangaroo, a bull and an elephant, which he carried carefully all the way home on the plane.

Doug, of course, cannot purchase the liquor himself since he is under age, but that doesn't keep him from scouting around for new and different bottles.

His collection includes liquors of every type from places such as France, Germany, Spain, Holland, Greece, Turkey, Russia, Ireland, England, Scotland, Norway, as well as Canada, Mexico, Puerto Rico, Trinidad, and many others. One particularly interesting set from Peru has Indian head caps. Most of the miniatures are replicas of standard-size bottles and are identifiable by the shape.

On Jan. 8 Doug turned 16 and recently he passed the test for his driver's license.

Postal Service unveils Clara Maass stamp

The design of the 13-cent U. S. Commemorative stamp honoring Clara Maass, the nurse who gave her life during yellow fever research in Cuba, was unveiled Sunday during a ceremony at the annual convention of the American Nurses' Association in Atlantic City.

Assistant Postmaster General Alfred C. Maevis unveiled the disign at the ceremony. The stamp will be issued on August 18 at Belleville, the site of the Clara Maass Memorial Hospital.

In ceremonies following the unveiling, the American Nurses' Association established a Hall of Fame and inducted Miss Mass as one of the first members.

She was born in East Orange, N.J., June 28, 1876. After graduating from the Newark German Hospital School of Nursing in 1895, she became the head nurse there and, when the Spanish-American War broke out, she volunteered to become a contract nurse with the U.S. Army.

She was discharged after service at Army camps in Florida and Georigia and in Santiago, Cuba. But she volunteered again in 1900 for further duty and was sent to the Philippines to continue her work with yellow fever victims. She then returned to Cuba where experiments were being conducted by a U. S.-Cuban team that included Major Walter Reed and Major William C. Gorgas, the Army sanitation officer who would later control yellow fever and malaria to make possible the construction of the Panama Canal. The team sought to determine the cause and cure for the wildly-spreading disease.

Assigned to Las Animas Hospital in Havana, she volunteered to take part in the experiments which sought to prove that the stegomyia mosquito was the carrier of yellow fever. Bitten initially June 4, 1901, she contracted a slight case of yellow fever from which she quickly recovered. She volunteered to be bitten again on contracting a more sever case, and died 10 days later.

She was the only American and the only woman to die during the experiments, which proved the stegomyia mosquito to be the yellow fever carrier and led to the virtual extinction of the disease.

The Newark German Hospital later became the Lutheran Memorial Hospital and, in 1952, the name was changed to the Clara Maass Memorial Hospital.

The Clara Maass Stamp was designed by Paul Calle of Stamford. Among others, Calle also designed the Robert Frost stamp of 1974 and the First Man on the Moon airmail stamp of 1969. He based the Clara Maass design upon a portrait of the nurse which hangs at the Maass Memorial Mospital.

The modeler was Peter Cocci, of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. The stamps are being printed on the seven-color gravure press and the colors are yellow, magenta, cyan, black, blue line and black line. There will be 40 stamps per pane and 6 plate numbers.

Requests for first day cancellations should be addressed to "Clara Maass Stamp, Postmaster, Belleville, NJ 07109." The cost is 13 cents per stamp to be affixed to the self-addressed envelopes which must accompany orders and remittance should be by check or money order instead of cash. Postage stamps will not be accepted in payment.

Return addresses should be written low and well to the left and a filler of postal cards thickness will help assure clear cancelations and to prevent damage to envelopes.

Orders must be postmarked no later than Aug. 18.

POINTS ON PETS

Don't count on 'lifetime' shots

By H.P. JANS, D.V.M.
Copley News Service

Q. As young animals our dog and cat were given inoculations for distemper and cat fever, as well as others recommended by our veterinarian. Our veterinarian advises that booster shots should be given each year; however, to the contrary I have read that shots as those for distemper and cat fever provide immunity for life. As I want to provide proper protection for my pets, I would appreciate your opinion on the requirements for these types of inoculations. — Mrs. C.L.R., Tustin, Calif.

A. The idea of "lifetime protection" from a shot has proved to be very risky. Years ago this was thought to be true that one shot would give immunity for life.

However, recent studies have shown that annual boosters are necessary and without them you are risking the health of your pets as well as your own.

So take your pets to the veterinarian once a year at least — he will love to see you and he can give your pets a good physical checkup at the same time. Remember... "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Q. I have an 8-year-old springer spaniel who is constantly itching and scratching her skin. She wears a flea collar but that doesn't seem to help her any. She also has a very dry nose and scoots on the ground. We put worm medicine in her food every once in awhile, but she keeps scooting.

IN YOUR SPARE TIME

A. Itching is often caused by several things simultaneously and one must eliminate ALL of these reasons if the animal is to get relief.

Any secondary disease must also be corrected or prevented. It sounds as though your dog may have an anal gland problem that is causing the scooting. If careful examination reveals no worms in the dog's stool then probably she needs anal gland therapy.

If the flea collar is not controlling fleas then you must find another product to do the job. She also could be itching because of a fatty acid deficiency in the diet, fungal infection, allergy, improper bathing practices, chemical irritants, hormonal problems and possibly a lot of other reasons.

If you are sure that your home treatment has taken care of the flea and worm problems, then best let a veterinarian take over the case and dig a little deeper for the right diagnosis and combination of treatments necessary to give the poor dog some relief from its suffering.

BACKYARD GARDNER

Simple steps can assist gardner on vacation

Copley News Service

About this time of the year many of us are beginning to eagerly anticipate the pleasures of a summer vacation trip. For summer vacationers, who also like to keep up their gardens, it might be an idea to pass along some helpful hints on preparing the garden for your holiday absence.

If you plan to be away from your home on vacation for two weeks or more this year, there are several simple steps you can take to maintain the garden in good shape while you are away.

The first essential is watering.

We always try to hire a neighborhood youngster to turn on the sprinklers for us if the weather turns dry. A good idea is to place some sort of stakes where the sprinklers are best located for the most effective coverage of the yard.

Plantings underneath the eaves need to be pointed out for hand-sprinkling if necessary, because, of course, these do not receive any rain. Any outdoor potted plants should be placed in semishade, where they will be hit by the usual sprinkling.

Remove any mats, lawn chairs or any objects from the lawn that will leave a dead patch of grass if left for any length of time, and mow the lawn the day before you leave on holiday.

Don't mow the grass too close, though, because this leaves it open to scorching and weed infestation.

If, when you return, the lawn has grown quite high, cut it back initially only by a third, then correct the height to normal a few days later. Hedges should also be trimmed so they do not become scraggly in your absence.

If you are planning on being away for just a week, cut off the current crop of flowers in the garden, perhaps giving to a friend who lives in an apartment or a senior citizens' residence. But if you'll be away for two weeks or more, cut off the buds as well. Apply a balanced fertilizer, water it in well, and you should have a new crop of blooms upon your return.

Pick any ripe and near-ripe vegetables, fruits and berries and preserve them. Even the smallest peas and beans should be picked, as these grow too fast to be of any use when you return.

Tomatoes should be staked, tied up and pruned and any climbing plants should be checked to see if they need further tying.

Just before you depart, water the whole place deeply, and where you can, apply a mulch to conserve moisture. For this you can solicit the neighbors, scrounging their grass clippings if you haven't enough of your own.

Give your plants a preventive spray or dusting before you leave. Use a systemic on the roses, rotenone dust on vegetables and a suitable spray for ornamentals that by experience you know to be especially subject to insect infestation.

While most of your outdoor plantings will require special attention before you leave, the same is true of our old friends, the houseplants. Houseplants may be kept in plastic bags for up to two weeks.

First you water them thoroughly and then enclose them in a plastic bag, placing the plants out of direct sun in a north window or on a table near a window of another exposure. Some people soak their plants and leave them in the bathtub, banked up with damp peat moss.

When our family goes on vacation, I get everyoody in the car and then take a last stroll around the garden, checking to make sure all the outside taps are off and that none of the tools have been left out. If your lawnmower is stowed in an accessible place, take the spark plug cord off. Secure the gates to keep out dogs which could wreak havoc in your garden.

Not all of these steps are necessary to keep your garden alive while you are away, but they will help to insure that you will return to a pleasant sight and not to a great pile of work or plants dying of neglect.

HOUSTON'S CESAR Cedeno gets back to third base Wednesday night as St. Louis' Hector Cruz has trouble hanging onto the ball: Umpire Harry Wendelstedt has a bird's eye view of the play.

Cubs pound Brewers, 6-1

SAN ANTONIO — Righthander Chuck Rogers, who has been balked at winning his fifth game the last three times out, finally notched it with a seven hitter as the Midland Cubs defeated the San Antonio Brewers, 6-1, here Wednesday night.

Rogers lost a shutout in his sixth route-going effort when Gray lined a seventh inning homer.

The 6-6 University of Michigan product received home run support from catcher Mike Gordon, a belt cleared the scoreboard in right in the seventh inning. Gordon also had two doubles.

DEFENSIVELY, THE Cubs backed Rogers with outstanding support in the outfield with Earl Chew, Jose Ortiz and Steve Verban turning in outstanding catches.

The teams play a doubleheader tonight, 6:30, with lefthanders Dave Geisel, 3-2, and Steve Hamrick, 6-4, scheduled to go for Midland while the Texas Rangers' farmhands will counter with John Poloni, 2-2, and Jim Byrd, 2-1.

Starter Jim Clancey got the first two Midland batters out to start the game then walked Scott Thompson, Wayne Tyrone, Mike Sember and Bill Huisman to force in a run.

Midland struck for three runs in the third inning as Scott Thompson started it with a single.

TYRONE GROUNDED to third, but first baseman Gary Gray, in his haste to go for the double play as Thompson streaked for third, came off the bag too soon. Thomas compounded the error with a wild throw that let Scott score. Tyrone wound up on second and stole third after Sember walked. Sember then stole second. Catcher Jim Thomas bluffed a throw to second and tried to catch Tyrone off third, but the ball wound up in left.

Midland's fifth inning run came as Gordon hit a 150 foot double that Brian Nakomoto in left lost in the lights. Mike scored on Chew's single.

The win gave Midland a 2-1 edge in the series, which concludes Friday. Midland returns home to face Amarillo at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

College World Series has tinge of Arizona

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — There's a definite Arizona tinge to the 1976 College World Series — on and off the field.

The eight-team, double-elimination tournament starts its week-long run Friday with a twilight doubleheader at Rosenblatt Stadium.

Tournament favorite Arizona State, 62-8, won't take the field until Saturday night when it meets arch-rival Arizona, but the Sun Devils have been the focus of plenty of pre-series happenings.

The Sun Devils have the most talked about college player — left-handed junior pitcher Floyd Bannister, the No. 1 selection in this week's free agent summer draft.

And Arizona State and Arizona are at odds with the sponsoring National Collegiate Athletic Association because of a rule that could prevent the two Western Athletic Conference powers from meeting for the series crown.

"It will be a great thing if we win our first game impressively," said Arizona State Coach Jim Brock. "If you do that as a favorite, then the other teams start believing you might be some kind of unbeatable force."

Arizona, 51-16, is a non-believer, even though losing all six meetings with Arizona State during the regular season.

"If we can beat ASU in the first game, we'll be the favorites," said Arizona Coach Jerry Kindall. "We've won seven straight since losing to them late in the season so we've gathered momentum."

A new NCAA rule matches the two powers — ranked No. 1 and 2 in a poll by Collegiate Baseball newspaper — in the first round. They don't object to that, but if three teams remain late in the series, the rule also says the two must meet again.

The schools appealed and the NCAA executive committee will decide the appeal before the series opens.

Auburn, 37-13, tangles with Clemson, 35-13, and Maine, 27-7, battles pitching-rich Eastern Michigan, 43-14, in the opening night doubleheader. Oklahoma, 61-17, faces Washington State, 42-13, in the other openinground game Saturday night.

Off past performances, Arizona, Eastern Michigan and Oklahoma loom as Arizona State's biggest challengers.

Arizona State rides a 19-game winning streak into the series, but its last three series appearances have been disappointing after coming in ranked as the favorite.

"We've had some good offensive ball clubs that haven't hit will in Omaha in the past," admitted Brock. "But I think this team has a chance to hit very well there."

The Sun Devils have a .348 team batting average and eight players are hitting .346 or better, including Ken Landreauz, a .413 hitter with 14 home runs and 87 runs batted in. He was also a first-round draft selection.

Bannister, a 6-foot-1, 190-pound junior who might go directly to the Houston Astros from the series, is 18-1 on the season. Don Hanna, 14-0, and Mitch Dean, 9-1, also have been impressive.

BATTLE SCENE

Paralyzed Mims' stamina improves over the years

BY TED BATTLES

Bill Mims was at Ranchland Hills CC for the farewell reception for retiring Midland Schools Athletic Director Thurman "Tugboat" Jones last week.

Bill has been paralyzed since suffering a spinal injury in a preseason scrimmage against Big Spring 23 years ago.

Despite the injury, Bill never has lost his interest in the game and watches as many as the weather and his condition will permit.

"My stamina has improved over the years. For a long time I didn't seem to have any," he said.

Bill has worked for the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation for six years and is currently taking a post graduate course at UTPB.

"THE INJURY to Bill was something I've never really gotten over, not only because of the seriousness, but because Bill was one of the greatest athletes and is one of the finest individuals I've ever been associated with," Jones says.

"In all the years, I've never heard Bill say, 'If this had never happened...' Sometimes when things aren't going well, I can drop by and visit with Bill and come away with a tremendous lift."

Mims as a junior had made all district at end, stood out in track and was a top student back in the early 1950s.

As a junior Mims had made all district at end.

Jones had decided to build his running attack around Bill as a senior as the Bulldogs switched from the single wing to the T formation. Bill was that kind of leader and athlete.

PROSPECTS WERE bright and expectations high as Tug put his Bulldogs through their preseason paces and then came the injury in the scrimmage. At first the extent was not realized, but when the realization took effect, it had a demoralizing effect. What started out as a season fraught with promise ended in complete disaster...

Jerry Ball, a tackle on that 1953 team, was visiting with Mims at the reception and when asked where he was living now, he said, "I've lived in Odessa since 1958."

He saw the unasked question in the eyes and there was nothing sheepish about his admission, "That's right I'm Permian Black all the way through."

Still, he hadn't forgotten the past and what his associations with Tug And Bill meant.

Six fall from Coaches' game

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — A series of knotted contract talks has eliminated six star players from the Coaches All-America Football Game here June 19, officials said Wednesday.

The players are Leroy and Dewey Selmon, both of Oklahoma; Rik Bonness of Nebraska; Ed Simonini and Pat Thomas, both of Texas A&M; and Richard Todd of Alabama.

Ohio State's Tim Fox also will not play due to a New England Patriot rookie camp injury.

Bill Murray, executive director of the American Football Coaches Association, said the six players were involved in contract negotiations with professional teams.

Minnesota defensive tackle Keith Simons, Hawaii's John Woodcock, Brigham Young center Orrin Olsen, Texas Tech cornerback Tony Green and Oklahoma's Jimbo Elrod will join the West squad to replace the departed players. Boston College's Mike Kruczek and Grambling's James Hunter are the East team replacements.

Andy Messersmith continues million dollar pitching, 2-0

By The Associated Press

Andy Messersmith, of the Atlanta Braves, who dazzled Montreal with a one-hitter last Friday night, continued his million-dollar pitching Wednesday with a three-hit 2-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Messersmith's second straight strong performance spoiled the National League debut of veteran right-hander Joe Coleman, acquired from Detroit, and handed the Cubs their sixth straight loss. Messersmith, 4-5, has won four of his last five starts, three of them with shutouts.

IN OTHER National League action, Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh 6-1, San Francisco defeated Montreal 6-2 and Houston trimmed St. Louis 5-2. In the American league, Kansas City beat Detroit 6-3, Boston beat Baltimore 6-4, Texas downed Baltimore 4-1, Cleveland clipped Minnesota 4-1, New York nipped California and Chicago shaded Milwaukee 4-2.

In late National League games on the West Coast, Burt Hooton hurled a two-hitter for eight innings but needed last-out relief help from Charlie Hough as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 and the San Diego Padres whipped the New York Mets 3-0 behind Randy Jones' seven-hitter.

Jerry Royster scored Atlanta's first run in the sixth off Coleman, 2-6, when he walked, stole second, continued to third on Swisher's throwing error and came in on Rowland Office's single. Royster also scored the Braves' other run in the eighth on Rod Gilbreath's sacrifice fly.

GARY NOLAN pitched a five-hitter and Tony Perez drove in three runs, two with a homer, to lead Cincinnati past the Pirates. Jim Barr pitched 81-3 innings of six-hit ball—including a no-hitter for the first six—and hit a two-run single in the Giants' triumph over Montreal. J.R. Richard scattered seven hits and Enos Cabell's two-run single keyed a three-run first inning that led Houston past the Cardinals.

John Mayberry belted two home runs to spark the Royals over Detroit. Designated hitter Cecil Cooper broke a tie with a two-run homer in the seventh inning of Boston's victory against the A's. Carl Yastremski, Carlton Fisk and Jim Rice also homered for the Red Sox.

GAYLORD PERRY pitched a four-hitter in the Rangers' victory that saddled the Orioles with their ninth loss in 11 games. Pat Dobson's four-hitter and Buddy Bell's two-run double paced Cleveland past Minnesota.

Mickey Rivers drove in one run and scored one and Sparky Lyle bailed out Catfish Hunter to help the Yankees nip California. Pat Kelly hit a two-run triple in the seventh inning, then scored on a single by Ralph Garr that helped the White Sox top Milwaukee.

Investigation asked for cager

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Disciplinary officer Harold Hall reports a full investigation will be made before Mississippi State University decides the case of basketball star Ray White, accused of taking $250 from an Australian bank.

Hall announced plans for the investigation Wednesday and declined to comment on White's status.

"I can't say anything about the case just now," he said. "I have the case under study. I will be talking with him later. After I get all the facts together, a decision on disciplinary action will be made."

Kite, Trevino to battle for World Series berth

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Tom Kite and Lee Trevino have a private little fight going on— with Mark Hayes, Gibby Gilbert and Al Geiberger anxious to get in the act— in this week's $250,000 Kemper Open Golf Tournament.

They have more than the $50,000 first prize at stake in this 72-hole event that got underway today on the 7,160-yard, par-72 Quail Hollow Country Club course.

Kite and Trevino are in a head-to-head struggle—with Hayes, Gilbert and Geiberger outside candidates—for a spot in the elite field for the new World Series of Golf, which will offer $300,000 in total money and $100,000 to the winner at Akron, Ohio Sept. 5.

Kite hadn't even planned on playing in this event. He didn't enter until just before the deadline, moments after his playoff victory in the Bicentennial Classic in Philadelphia last Sunday. He didn't enter until a PGA official pointed out that— with the 100 points for his victory—he trailed Trevino by only two points with the Kemper the last tournament on this segment of the tour.

"I didn't know it until he told me," Kite said. "That meant I had no choice. I had to play here. If you've got a chance like that, you have to take advantage of it. There was nothing else I could do."

With the spring tour ending here and the points being cut off, Hubert Green is a runaway leader with 365.5. But Green already is in the World Series as a three-time winner.

The spot will go to the next eligible man, a position held by Trevino with 175 points. Kite has 173. Hayes is the next man not otherwise eligible at 161.17, followed by Gilbert, 140.96 and Geiberger, 137.5.

There are many possible combinations for each man. Geiberger and Gilbert must finish third or better—and beat the other contenders—to have a chance. Hayes must have a seventh-place finish, and beat the others by a wide margin. Trevino needs only to finish ahead of the rest of them. Kite needs a finish in the top 10 and ahead of Trevino.

A victory, of course, would put any of them in it with the 12 men who already have qualified. They are Tom Watson, Johnny Miller, Ben Crenshaw, Jack Nicklaus, Hale Irwin, J.C. Snead, Hubert Green, Ray Floyd, Don January, Allan Henning of South Africa, Billy Dunk of Australia, Hsu ShengSan of Taiwan and American amateur champion Fred Ridley.

Floyd, who's already secured his spot in the World Series, can concentrate on the Kemper and ranks as the favorite. He started his dramatic comeback with a victory here last year.

Other major contenders include Tom Weiskopf, Arnold Palmer, Gary Player, Roger Maltbie, Gene Littler, Billy Casper, J.C. Snead and Jerry McGee, who has played extremely well in recent weeks.

Nicklaus, Irwin, Green, Crenshaw, Miller and Watson are not competing.

CBS-TV will provide national television coverage of portions of the last two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Eddie Dibbs of Miami, Florida, stretches to return ball to Manuel Orantes of Spain during a quarterfinal match Wednesday in the French Open Tennis Tournament. Dibbs won in four sets.

French net draw slims

PARIS (AP) — Fast Eddie Dibbs, the Brooklyn-to-Miami Beach tennis player, greyhound handicapper and one-time playground hustler, thinks the best longshot action in Paris is himself.

"I'm 110-to-1 to get out of bed in the morning," says Eddie Dibbs, "and if you don't like those odds you can get a beter price on me in the French Open."

Dibbs is right. The odds on him winning here, a kind of hunch bet for a small group of Dibbs admirers until Tuesday, got considerably tighter after he moved into the semifinals with a 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3 win over the Forest Hills champion, Manuel Orantes of Spain.

Dibbs didn't really feel like playing Bjorn Borg in the semis, whom he had never beaten. But Adriano Panatta, whom he has defeated, took care of that for him. Panatta, the Italian champion beat Borg, the winner two years running here who said too much playing had dulled his concentration and reflexes. The scores were 6-3, 6-2, 2-6, 7-6.

Dibbs, who meets Panatta Friday, says, "I'm playing the best tennis of my life. I'm playing with a lot more confidence and that means that on a given day I can beat anybody. I can win one of these major tournaments."

Dibbs was born in Brooklyn and moved to Miami Beach as a boy. He became a public parks tennis rat and hustled older players who thought his small size made easy prey. The Bobby Riggs routine fit into the mentality of a street fighter and gambler who has told people that his tennis winnings will probably let him start buying greyhounds for racing on the Miami dog tracks.

Dibbs' ambition this year was to reach the final eight in the World Championship finals in Dallas and to win a tournament like the French Open or Forest Hills where his abilities on clay give him his best pop. The first is accomplished and the second is at hand.

"I don't feel much pressure here," Dibbs said, "because I had a tough draw. It's been hard all along. When you pull Karl Meiler"—a hard-to-beat West German player—"in the first round and then you have to handle a (Wojtek) Fibak and Orantes, then you know why everybody, the players anyway, say that this is the toughest tournament."

Dibbs' style has been changing as he says his confidence grows. Mostly a baseline player who rarely came to the net, he hit a series of winning volleys against Orantes and scored three aces.

"Even my mother was convinced I couldn't serve and volley," Dibbs said. "She believes when everybody said I couldn't hit."

Oklahoma State earns lead in NCAA golf

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Two All-Americans and an unknown forged to the front of the 186-man field and Oklahoma State grabbed the team lead in Wednesday's opening round of the National Collegiate Athletic Association golf championships.

Wake Forest's Curtis Strange, the 1974 champion, and Southern California's Scott Simpson, both All-Americans, joined New Mexico State golfer Matt Sugerman in posting fourunder-par scores of 68.

STRANGE fashioned his excellent round by firing two eagles, one birdie and one bogie to go along with 14 pars. Simpson, playing steady throughout his round, had four birdies and 14 pars while Sugerman finished with five birdies, one bogie and 12 pars.

Oklahoma State, which finished a distant second to Wake Forest in the 1975 NCAA tourney, claimed a four-shot lead over Sugerman and his equally surprising New Mexico State teammates.

Dave Edwards paced Oklahoma State to a 283 team total by firing a three-under-par 69. Britt Harrison and Lindy Miller each posted 71s while Jaime Gonzalez had a 72.

TAKING THIRD place behind New Mexico State's 287 were Indiana, Brigham Young and Maryland at 290 each. Other top contenders after the first day included Houston and Southern California at 291 each and the University of New Mexico and two-time defending champion and tourney favorite Wake Forest at 292 each.

The four-day championships are being played over the par-72, 7,258-yard University of New Mexico south course. The championships will conclude Saturday.

Strange opened and finished his first round Wednesday by banging in an eagle.

"I played well," said Strange. "I hit a lot of greens and putted well and that's what you have to do on this course.

"I was fortunate to get the two eagles," he said. "It sure doesn't hurt your score."

Simpson, who was the early leader after turning in his 68 during morning play, said: "I really wasn't thinking too much about my score along the way. I tried to concentrate on my game and I'm sure pleased with a 68."

Simpson credited his score to his putting, which he termed "pretty good."

Sugerman, a 21-year-old senior who didn't figure as a pretourney contender, said he wasn't playing well on the front nine but a birdie on 10 got him going.

"That turned things around," Sugerman said. "That built my confidence."

It was the best round of golf ever for Sugerman in collegiate competition, and he said he was surprised.

"The last couple of weeks I have not been hitting the ball very well," he said.

Disosway paces State Amateur

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — San Antonio's John Disosway strung together five birdies and an eagle to capture a twostroke lead in the 67th Texas State Amateur Championship Tournament Wednesday at Woodhaven Country Club here.

The 28-year-old Air Force captain put Wednesday's five-under-par 66 together with his opening 65 for an 11-under 131 and a two-stroke lead over Joe Hager of Dallas.

Hager carved out a 67 for 133 total.

Thirteen players broke or matched par for 36 holes. The 129-man field was cut to 50 for Thursday's third round.

Fort Worth's Eddie Horn shot a 68 for a 138 total and third place. He holed out from 110 yards for an eagle on the last hole.

Walker Cupper John Grace, also of Fort Worth, was alone in fourth at 138 after fashioning a 70. Knotted at 139 were Russell Pulley of Tyler, who shot a 72 Wednesday; Rex Robertson of Lubbock, who carded a 71, and Vince Vines of Odessa, who had a 70.

Highway 80 tourney entries due today

ALPINE—The entry deadline for the first annual Highway 80 golf tournament here has been extended to 5 p.m. Thursday. Interested contestants should call Dr. Paul Pierce of Sul Ross State University at 837-3461, Ext. 281.

Junior events tee off 9 a.m. Friday while play in men's and women's competition takes place Saturday and Sunday.

Hawks sign 'damaged goods'

MONTREAL (AP) — Bobby Orr's on-ice future is in the hands of his doctors once again. His all-but-signed unconditional contract is in the hands of the Chicago Black Hawks.

"Bobby Orr has agreed to terms with the Chicago Black Hawks," said attorney Alan Eagleson Wednesday after completing a irenzied week of negotiations for his client, who became a free agent from the Boston Bruins on June 1. "It's for several years, and there's no deferred compensation. It's cash on the barrelhead."

Eagleson wouldn't say how much cash, though published reports have placed the offer at $3 million for five years of work from the star rearguard whose battered left knee may have to submit to surgery for the sixth time since Aug. 21, 1967.

"We're gambling on his playing," said Chicago General Manager Tommy Ivan. "If he doesn't play, we still pay—and we lose. We are committed all the way as far as I'm concered."

That the Hawks have spent their money on damaged goods is certain; whether Orr ever will play again is not. The 28-year-old defenseman, called by many the greatest ever to play the game, entered Toronto General Hospital Wednesday for tests that will decide if the sixth operation is needed.

Eagleson said he expected a report from Dr. John Palmer "Friday or early next week," and that the contract would be signed within two weeks. But the decision on what compensation the Hawks will have to pay the Bruins may not be certain for some months to come.

"Bobby will be the fellow who ultimately determines if he can play and whether he should play," said Eagleson. "Once that decision is made and the level of his ability is determined, then the Jacobses (Boston owners) and the Wirtzes (Chicago owners) will sit down and determine conpensation."

During the steeplechase of a bidding sweepstakes for the first defenseman ever to lead the NHL in scoring, Eagleson had maintained that Orr's contract with Boston precluded compensation of the Bruins when he signed with a new club.

PRESS-TAB

"Press-Tab" adds a new dimension to the convenience and anti-litter benefits of the all aluminum recyclable can.

The Coors "Press-Tab" eliminates the "ring-pull" litter that is a concern at beaches, in lakes or streams and parks or golf courses. The "ring" of the ring-pull generally has been more damaging to the environment than the entire beverage can, improperly discarded.

Easily opened, if the proper technique is used, this feature will benefit our parks, forests and all outdoors. If you experience difficulty in opening the can, call your nearest Coors Distributor; his expertise and instruction will change frustration into a pleasantly simple function.

1 Press as illustrated to break seal and release pressure.*

*Please hold can near the top.

2 Break the remaining seal by pressing opposite side of opening.

Gently Depress Tab, can now ready for use.

Brevard takes JC golf lead

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP) — Butch Girard of Brevard Junior College in Cocoa, Fla., fired a three-under par 69 Wednesday to pace his team to a sevenstroke lead in the National Junior College Golf Championships at Galveston Country Club.

Brevard fired a three-under 285 Wednesday to take the lead at the halfway point with a twoday total of 583.

Doug Black of Alexander City Junior College in Alabama fired his second straight oneunder-par 71 to capture the medalist lead with a two-day total of 142. He holds a threestroke lead over four other golfers.

Baseball draft is only start

NEW YORK (AP) — The major leagues, the dream of every kid who ever took fantasy swings as a Willie Mays or made pretend pitches as a Sandy Koufax, is not really a realistic goal for the 721 players selected the past two days in baseball's summer free agent draft.

The draft was to end today with 11 teams still picking players.

On the average, 50 per cent of the players selected in the draft sign contracts. Then, as a rule of thumb, only 10-15 per cent of those who sign make it to the major leagues for one game.

THE PERCENTAGE for those who will stick in the majors leagues is less, and much less for those who will reach stardom.

The major leagues are glamorous, full of national exposure, deluxe hotels and first-class airfare, but there is no glory in the long, hard road up to the majors.

That cracked pavement is filled with bus rides, too many meals in hamburger joints and too many games when the players on the field outnumber the fans in the stands.

It's great to be a major leaguer, earn an average salary of $46,000 and play in New York, Los Angeles or Montreal.

Gary Roenicke just beat the odds and made it to the Montreal Expos in his fourth year of professional baseball. He played Tuesday night in his first big-league game, against the Giants in San Francisco. He was hitless in five at bats, but it was an achievement, nevertheless.

IF HE never plays again for the Expos, Roenicke will know he was one of the best baseball players in the world. For one day. Of the 600 active major leaguers Tuesday, he was one of them.

Only Roenicke can decide whether it was worth the threeplus years he spent in the minors.

"Gary told me it was pretty rough in the minors," said his brother, Ron, who was drafted by the Atlanta Braves Wednesday on the second round of the secondary phase of the summer free agent draft.

"I know he didn't like Jamestown (N.Y—his first minor league club), "but then he went to West Palm Beach (Fla.) and he liked the minors a lot more."

IN 1974, Gary Roenicke, an outfielder, was elevated to the club's top farm club, Quebec. He played there in 1975 and even sat on the Montreal bench—but did not play—in the month of September.

"I spoke to him three days ago," said Ron, a switch-hitting center fielder, who batted .356 as a sophomore at Mt. San Antonio Junior College this season. "He was really happy, but he was a little down because he said he wasn't hitting real well."

Ron, who is 19, was drafted three times before—the last time by Detroit last January— but never signed. "I really didn't think they offered me much," he said. "I've thought about going to UCLA" (where he's signed a letter of intent.)

"If I sign, I hope to make it in 2 or 3 years. I really don't know. I just want to make it up there."

Football teams earn welcome

MANNHEIM, West Germany (AP) — Texas A and I and Henderson State, Ark., said to be the first U.S. college football teams to play in Europe, have met with a warm reception in their tour to introduce the sport to the continent, a spokesman for Texas A and I said today.

"They've been very enthusiastic," said Fred Nuesch of the fans who saw the first two games — June 1 in Berlin and June 6 in Vienna. "We're taking along cheerleaders and they usually watch them and yell right along."

New Stones album has faults

NEW YORK — Mick Jagger didn't have much fun at the interview. "He said it was really awful," a source who didn't want to be identified said. "You were supposed to only ask him about the album."

In retrospect, there wouldn't have been that much to talk about. "Black and Blue," the first release of new material from the Rolling Stones in nearly two years, has some fine moments, but more than its share of pedestrian ones that don't stand up under repeated listening. Given the opportunity to deal face-to-face with the performer who had done more to affect the way I felt about both music and myself over the last dozen years than anyone except perhaps Bob Dylan, the possibility of discussing cut 2, side 2, just wasn't as enticing as trying to explore what makes Mick Jagger so effective an artist.

You wouldn't know it from watching him perform in front of 20,000 enthralled rock and roll fans, but Jagger is an accomplished doodler. Throughout the interview he kept his head down, occasionally peering up through bloodshot eyes. All the while, he scribbled on a pad of paper.

At the end of the interview, he showed off the piece of paper. Along with key words or notations about subjects that had been discussed — politics, image, songwriting, acting, Queen and Aerosmith, taxes — there were the words "death again." He wouldn't give up the paper. Maybe he thought somebody would want to sell it. What would you pay for a 4-by-6 sheet of paper with original Mick Jagger doodles? Or would giving up the paper be the literary equivalent of an encore, which the Stones rarely offer.

Since politics is a kind of nirvana for control junkies, it's not surprising that Jagger can become loquacious when he is asked whether the Rolling Stones — who once sustained the counterculture at the barricades with "Street Fighting Man" and obliquely asked for justice for Angela Davis in "Sweet Black Angel" — would consider following the trend of other major rock bands in supporting presidential candidates this year.

"Yeah, if I stood (ran) for President," Jagger said. "Then I would do a lot of support for myself. And I would rally around everybody I could. But as I can't run for President. I don't see myself getting involved in it. I can't vote. Am I entitled to raise money? Am I morally entitled to?" he asked rhetorically.

The fact that Jagger pays enough in U.S. taxes to support a minor war in a place like Panama gave us one of our few shared moments of amusement when he launched into a discussion of taxation without representation.

But Jaggers mockery was not without a bit of substance. Jagger, at this moment, couldn't run for office anywhere in the world that required citizenship, since the native Englishman is one of the many pop stars who have all but abandoned their homeland because of the tax bite there. So while Jagger said that his presidential ambitions reflected junior high school level humor, he seemed quite serious when asked whether he felt like a man without a country.

"Why do you need a country?" Jagger said. "I don't think you need a country. It's not necessary anymore — if it ever was. I suppose it was at one time. I think that people that play music don't need a country at all. Nor do physicists, either. Whatever skills they have, they perform that service anywhere."

Homelessness doesn't keep the Rolling Stones from working. They're touring the European continent this spring, giving their first performances ever in places like Spain and Yugoslavia. They'll be doing a brief tour of the United States this summer.

"Black and Blue" was recorded in Germany, Holland and Switzerland, over a period stretching from December 1974, to April 1975. The time and space stretching may not hurt, but it doesn't help either.

There are some strong cuts on "Black and Blue," but the album as a whole lacks cohesion and direction. The Stones continue to dabble in various sectors of the pop spectrum that intrigue them, but at this point seem committed to none.

The album begins with a catch of fire. "Hot Stuff," on the surface, is merely Rolling Stones riff music simplified for the disco masses. But the band here is an orchestra of percussion, conducted by the lithe, flexible rhythm of drummer Charlie Watts, who continues to sound fresh.

The song also features Jagger's most lubricated vocal improvisations since "Goin' Home." The disco orientation of the first half of the cut becomes a reggae "version." That is, the reggae form in which disc jockeys talk over the rhythm track of a record, as practiced by people like Big Young and U Roy.

The Stones' more formal reggae exercise, Eric Donaldson's "Cherry Oh Baby," is one of too many throwaway numbers on the album. "Cherry" is mere caricature and adds nothing to the form. It is at the same stage of assimilation as the Stones' early version of the Drifters "Under the Boardwalk" was. When Jagger shouts "Ire!" the Rastafarian power chant, it sounds as out of place as the Osmond Brothers shouting "Right on."

Also marginal: Two of the three hard-rock numbers. "Hey Negrita" is just a rhythm track, sounding like an outtake from "Exile On Main Street." And "Crazy Mama" is vacuous. What's missing, perhaps, is the fullness and drive that producer Jimmy Miller gave to albums like "Exile on Main Street." This is the second time the "Glimmer Twins," Mick and Keith Richard, have taken full production responsibility (1974's "It's Only Rock and Roll" was the first). The studio is an instrument Mick and Keith still haven't mastered.

"Hand of Fate," the rocker that works, is in the early Stones traditions of sympathy for the outlaw and is delivered with punch and style. "I killed a man," Jagger sings, but that's not the worst of it: "I watched him die." The Stones aren't an outlaw band anymore, of course. They're jet Set. On the 1972 tour, Truman Capote. Lee Radziwill and others of that crowd found some kind of enhanced stature associating with people they probably once considered (and may still consider) seedy lowlifes. In the interview, Jagger had this to say about it:

"I don't wanna talk about it."

"Why not?"

"No, it's silly. Long time ago. I can't remember what happened four years ago," Jagger said.

There's a point to be made that Jagger's job is not to give revealing interviews as much as it is to be a great rock and roll singer. It is that singing, more confident, less self-imitative than it has been in years, that carries the softer songs that give "Black and Blue" some of its unexpected dignity.

"Melody" is a sleeper here, though the "inspired by Billy Preston" (the keyboard player who frequently sits in with the Stones) designation is almost reason to ignore it.

Students pianists slate Austin trip

A group of Midland young people, students of Midland piano teachers, will travel to Austin this weekend to participate in special recitals and programs at the annual meeting of the Texas Music Teachers Association.

The young people, members of the local Student Affiliate organization of the TMTA, were chosen as representatives of the Midland unit through a series of competitive programs and events held here this spring.

Heading the list of convention-bound students are Suzy Graham, junior division soloist, and Lyn Daniels, senior division soloist. The keyboard students of Mrs. James Finley and Mrs. Wayne Matthews respectively, the pair will compete with other area soloists at the June 13-16 TMTA conclave. They were heard in a recent awards recital sponsored by the Midland Music Teachers Association, a unit of TMTA.

Approximately four dozen other Midland Student Affiliate members will be performing at the Austin meeting in ensemble events. Students in grades 4 through 8 will be participating in programs featuring music of Texas composers.

Fourth through sixth graders representing the Midland chapter will include Melanie Finley, Melody Steward, Laura Shelton, Celia Hobbs, Sharon Van Horn, Shannon Stone, Emily George, Gladden Duff, Susie Lee, Alison Reavis, Gill Estes, Paula Harvard, Gretchen Koch, Perry McIntosh, Toni Anthony, Janelle Strobel, Rachel Jones, Brenda Kysar, Ginny Blakemore, Julie Gallagher.

Seventh and eighth grade-level performers are Kenda Karley, Jannifer Crawford, Jill Shamburger, Paula McIntosh, Lori Womack, Teresa Brown, Phyllis Bryant, Carrie Byrom, Kathleen Teague and Kim Sherman.

A high school ensemble team also will perform at the convention. Members of this include Mary Downs, Caren Sharp, Suzy Graham, Cindy Sikes, Kimberly Culvahouse, Cheryl Erxleben, Celia Hobbs, Don Steele, Sherri Minihan, Katherine George, Paula Bynum, Penny Strah, Teresa Sawyers, Lanie Robb, Becky Murray, Betty Hickman, Elizabeth Motter, Wendy Williams, Suzanne Finley and Dawn Etheredge.

Record companies reviving jazz

By LARRY ROHTER
The Washington Post

The reactivation of the Verve and Savoy labels, two of the most prominent independent record companies of the late '40s and '50s, is clearly the most encouraging jazz event of this year. Back in business under new ownership and management, both labels have embarked on reissue programs that will be tapping a vast catalog of recordings by some of the most honored names in jazz.

These aren't the only jazz reissue projects in existence — Prestige and Blue Note have been doing something similar for some time now — but they promise to develop into two of the strongest. The first six Verve rereleases, which include sessions led by Bud Powell, Charlie Parker, Lester Young, Billie Holiday and Dizzy Gillespie, are an especially impressive package. But the debut of the Savoy reissue series, which counts albums by Parker, Young, Erroll Garner, Cannonball Adderley and Milt Jackson among its first eight releases, has been only slightly less spectacular.

Both revivals have a distinct bop flavor, perhaps because the heyday of the two labels coincided with what is generally regarded as jazz's golden age. For a decade or so after 1944, there was so much talent — and such widespread interest in jazz — that individual entrepeneurs such as Herman Lubinsky, the eccentric, irascribe electronic parts manufacturer who looked to Harlem's Savoy Ballroom for both the name of his label and the artists he recorded, and Norman Granz, the producer and critic who headed Verve, could actually compete with the major labels.

BUT THE '70s ARE AN ERA of giant entertainment conglomerates, a category into which Arista Records, the Columbia Pictures subsidiary which bought the Savoy label from Lubinsky's estate late in 1975, and Polydor GmbH, which picked up rights to the Verve catalog when it purchased MGM Records, fall. Both record companies are already heavily involved in modern jazz — Arista through its Freedom Records, Polydor through distribution of Manfred Eicher's ECM label — and have long sought opportunities to diversify their "portfolio."

The most valuable asset among the first 14 releases, all double-album sets recorded in mono and tagged with a $7.98 list price, is probably Bud Powell's "The Genius of Bud" (Verve VE-2-2506). The album begins with the clasic "Tempus Fugit," a dazzling, lightning-quick display of Powell's piano virtuosity, and continues brilliantly through a variety of trio and solo settings.

Like the other albums in the Verve and Savoy series, which can claim such famous names as Miles Davis, Teddy Wilson, Oscar Peterson, Thelonius Monk, Count Basie and Les Paul as sidemen, "The Genius of Bud" benefits from superb instrumental support. Powell's interplay with bassist Ray Brown and drummer Max Roach on the May 1949 trio sessions is remarkable — but most astonishing of all are his exquisite solo renditions of "Parisian Thoroughfare" and "Hallucination."

THE PAIR OF CHARLIE PARKER ALBUMS, "Bird: The Savoy Recordings (Master Takes)" (Savoy SJL 2201) and "The Verve Years (1948-1950)" (Verve VE-2-2501), also bear the stamp of one man's imagination, though they too feature an all-star cast. The Savoy set contains such curiosities as Parker on tenor (instead of alto) saxophone and Dizzy Gilespie on piano, but also included are recordings of "Now's The Time" and "Ko Ko," Parker originals from 1944 and 1945 which became anthems of the bop era.

By 1949, when Parker recorded the "Charlie Parker With Strings" sessions that make up one side of "The Verve Years," jazz tastes had changed. Parker, however, remained the consummate bop improviser, as his solos on quintet romps such as "Leap Frog," "Mohawk" and "Bloomdido," show. Gillespie, back on trumpet for these dates, halps out on all three songs.

On "The Sonny Rollins-Sonny Stitt Sessions" (Verve VE-2-2505), Gillespie teams up with two of Parker's heirs in one of those "blowing sessions" that jazzmen always seemed to favor during the '50s. Many of these spontaneous groupings produced only inconsequential albums — John Coltrane and Wilbur Harden's "Countdown" (Savoy SJL 2203), for instance, is interesting only in a historical sense — but the Gillespie-Rollins-Stitt album is a classic of its genre.

GILLESPIE DID ONE SIDE EACH with Rollins and Stitt, both of whom played tenor saxophone for the occasion, and then brought the two into head-on competition for four explosive tunes. One of these numbers, "The Eternal Triangle," turns into a 1957 version of an Old West showdown, with Rollins and Stitt trying to "cut" each other as Gillespie looks on. "After Hours," on the other hand, gets a bit monotonous; there are simply not enough ideas here to support 12 minutes-plus of playing the blues.

Lester Young's "Pres and Teddy and Oscar" (Verve VE-2-2502) and "Pres: The Complete Savoy Recordings" (Savoy SJL-2202) aren't as vibrant as the Gillespie-Rollins-Stitt collaboration, but they do document different stages in the career of one of jazz's most influential saxophonists. The mid-1940s Savoy dates, which include five different versions of "Salute To Fats" and four of "Exercise in Swing," are far superior to the Verve sessions Young did with Teddy Wilson and Oscar Peterson in the mid-1950s, by which time he was in physical and musical decline.

Singer blames motel for ruining comeback

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Connie Francis sobbed uncontrollably as she told the court how the man who raped her in a Howard Johnson's motel room covered her mouth, put a knife to her throat, and said, "Kiss me or I'll kill you."

The attack occurred in 1974 while Miss Francis, 37, was appearing at the Westbury Music Fair, in Westbury, N.Y., on Long Island.

That performance was her first in three years, and she is suing Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge for $5 million, saying the attack shattered her entertainment come back.

Miss Francis, of Essex Fells, N.J., testified in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn that she was asleep in her room when, suddenly, she discovered there was a man in her room.

"He said, 'Kiss me or I'll kill you'," she testified.

She said she told the man who she was and offered him a fur coat and all the money she had, $100.

Miss Francis was left bound to a chair and buried beneath a mattress and a suitcase, according to her suit. Eventually, she was able to call for help.

After Miss Francis broke down, court was adjourned until today.

Thomas Kirk, attorney for Howard Johnson's, said a strike by United Parcel had delayed delivery of safety locks for the motel doors.

Officer cleared

HOUSTON (AP) — A Harris County grand jury has cleared a Houston police officer of any wrongdoing in the May 22 shooting death of a 16-year-old boy.

The officer, accident investigator J. E. Willis, said the youth, Patrick Carleton, tried to ram the officer's patrol car twice during an auto chase that ended in the shooting.

Police said Willis fired his pistol after he saw the youth point a pistol at the officer. Carleton died from a bullet wound to the left cheek.

Communist businessman's venture shows success

The Washington Post

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia — Branko Jakopovic is a very unusual Communist businessman. Pragmatic and bubbling with new ideas, he cherishes profits, efficiency and graceful service. Except for his party membership, the 50-year-old manager of the Zagreb Inter-Continental Hotels could well be transplanted to any hostelry in the West.

Jakopovic, in fact, was the man who brought Inter-Continental services to Eastern Europe. First he persuaded Yugoslav Communist authorities to permit him to sign a franchise contract with the New York-based corporation. After the venture became a roaring success, he was called upon to explain to other East Europeans the benefits of such association.

Today, there are Inter-Continental hotels in Budapest, Bucharest, Warsaw and Prague. Two additional hotels are being built in Poland and one in Bulgaria, while three Inter-Continentals are scheduled to be constructed in the Soviet Union.

In a way Jakopovic has tried to reconcile two systems, make money, improve services and expand operations. It was a tough battle, he recalled the other day while nervously pressing buttons on his closed-circuit TV system—and saying "problems, problems," while making stabs through the air.

"People in socialism think they can go anyplace in whatever type of clothes they please. I have them thrown out of here if they are not properly dressed."

A large TV screen first showed the reception desk area, then the lobby. He pressed other buttons to review the kitchen, bar and one of the ground-floor restaurants. "After all, this is the best hotel in Yugoslavia. I don't want beatniks coming here."

Early 1960, Jakopovic said, "we began thinking about the Esplanade getting an Inter-Continental franchise. But how could a hotel in a Socialist country join a capitalist chain? Could we meet the standards? How are we to explain this to our people. It wasn't easy. After the authorities accepted the idea, I had to convince the workers council of the Esplanade. It was a great battle, a little revolution.

"We had to get rid of old Austro-Hungarian ways of doing business. A waiter had to serve napkins on a plate. Why, our workers asked, is the plate necessary.

"I remember one waiter who simply would not accept the idea of bringing the bill on a plate. What's wrong with the old way of pulling the bill out of his pocket? Why all this unnecessary extravagance?" they asked. We had to persuade the staff that they could not smoke on the job, that they could not leave their jobs for any meetings, even party meetings.

"We had to fire some people. I gave everyone a chance. I tried to explain that the times had passed when they could do business the old way. Inter-Continental was introducing a modern organization, new efficiency. The staff had to work more and talk less and also assume responsibility for whatever they were doing.

"On top of everything, Inter-Continental advisers and experts were here and they were recommending personnel changes. These fellows were not burdened by any political or ideological stuff, they were seeking the best and most effective organization. But how do you tell a guy that he is not fit for a job?

"We took administrative measures, fired people who could not adjust. But I always went before the workers council explaining what was going on and seeking their support. I knew that what InterContinental wanted was right, but I had to convince the others, mobilize political forces."

During the first two years roughly 50 per cent of the staff was weeded out annually. "Often I was ready to give up, say to hell with it."

But then something happened, he continued. The people "liked the Esplanade Inter-Continental. It was something that did not exist in Yugoslavia. The people liked better service, efficiency. Soon we were able to increase our prices. The staff was getting higher salaries. Our profits were up and we bought 112 apartments for the staff, which means one of each three employees got an apartment."

After the first two years, "nobody was leaving the staff. Inter-Continental people never got involved in our trade union or self management affairs. They provided suggestions, assistance. What they asked for always the most rational thing and we gained confidence in them."

With improved business Jakapovic persuaded his workers council to authorize the building of another Inter-Continental hotel in Zagreb. The 17-story modern structure with 457 rooms opened for business last year. It provides all the facilities common to Inter-Continental hotels in the United States.

Spain's policy toward the Rock may be changing

By MICHAEL PARKER
The Observer, London

GIBRALTAR — Here where staunch patriots still stand stiffly to attention in movie theaters for "God Save the Queen," has been heartened by conciliatory noises from Spain, which has twice in the past six months — at Christmas and Easter — restored telephone communications.

Ever since General Francisco Franco's death last November the 29,000 Gibraltarians — affectionately known to generations of British seafarers as "Rockscorpions" — have been eyeing Madrid hopefully for signs of a thaw after almost seven years of blockade.

Spain's policy toward the Rock was largely instigated by former Foreign Minister Fernando Castiella — who dreamed of becoming the Duke of Gilbraltar — in pursuit of an obsessive anti-British vendetta.

The Spanish blockade was imposed in stages: stoppage of the Algeciras ferry, severance of communications, a "go-slow" at the frontier, air traffic restrictions, withdrawal of the 6,000 Spanish workers and in 1969 closing of the border.

The sea route remains open, but a Gibraltarian visiting relatives at La Linea — formerly a 10-minute walk — has to spend two days travelling via Tangier and Algercias.

In its Gibraltar policy, Spain has three options: sustained harassment which, far from advancing its cause, has created deep resentment; a military invasion, which seems unthinkable while Spain longs to gain Western acceptance; or simply "wooing" the Gibraltarians over their side.

The effective obsteconomic: few Gibraltarians want to exchange democratic institutions and solid prosperity for Spanish dictatorial rule and Andalusia's poverty.

They are, therefore, keenly observing Spain's hesitant steps towards democracy. Both Gibraltarian political parties have consistently supported the British link. One of them wants full integration with Britain with the Rock having representatives in Parliament.

Although Britain maintains that juridically Gibraltar is no more Spanish than its Iberian neighbors Portugal or Andorra, Spaniards cite geography.

"Would you like a Spanish colony at Land's End?" they counter. All the same, Spain itself retains a colony (in many respects like Gibraltar) — Ceuta in Morocco, and it doesn't appear to be ready to surrender it.

Elsewhere Britain has over-hastily shed colonial responsibilities. Why not here? The 1713 Treaty of Utrecht, confirming the British conquest, provides the clue.

During the War of the Spanish Succession, Admiral Rooke took Gibraltar's fortress that had then fewer than 20 Spanish civilian inhabitants. The treaty ceded the Rock to England "forever." Except in emergencies, the land frontier was to remain closed to deter smugglers.

Undoubtedly, Britain has contravened several provisions, although some — like the ban on "Jews and Moors" — now look archaic. The teratymakers doubtless had Barbary pirates, not Moroccan hotel staff in mind. Utrecht's vital proviso stipulated, however, that if Britain ever withdrew the Rock would automatically revert to Spain. Hence a decolonized Gilbraltar could never form a microState like Malta. The stark choice is Spain or Britain.

In 1964, the UN Committee of 24 urged prompt decolonization. Two years later Spain produced seemingly constructive proposals, guaranteeing Gibraltarian status and privileges and retention of the British base. Distrusting Spanish motives, 12,138 Gibraltarians voted for staying British and 44 for Spain in a 1967 referendum.

The 1969 Constitution guarantees that the Rock will never be ceded against the people's "freely and democratically expressed wishes." In 1973, UN-sponsored talks broke down, when it became evident that Spain was focusing on sovereignty while Britain was interested simply in normalizing relations.

"Spain regards Gibraltar in terms of territory: we regard it in terms of people," remarked Lord Home, then British Foreign Secretary.

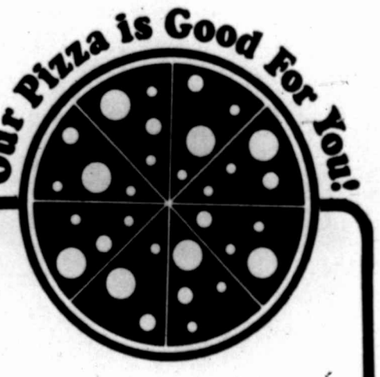

Today NATO still considers the Rock a valuable asset in face of Russia's Mediterranean fleet build-up, especially since the reopening of the Suez Canal. Control of Gibraltar by a non-NATO country could in no sense be welcomed by the alliance.

Anglo-Spanish talks were unobtrusively resumed in Madrid last September, but the Rock's immediate future remains unsettled. It is safe to assert, however, that the long-term trend is for frontiers to melt away; that a prosperous Spanish democracy — a potential member of the EEC and even NATO — would act as a powerful magnet; and that Spain's own best interests would be served by wooing Gibraltar.

Possible closing of abortion clinic sparks confrontation

By SUE MASTERMAN
The London Observer

THE HAGUE — A violent battle between more than a thousand women and an 80-strong riot squad threatened in Holland over the fate of an abortion clinic known as the "Flower Farm," the only Dutch abortion clinic that terminates pregnancies of more than three months.

In a personal crusade to close it, Holland's Minister of Justice Andreas van Agt, has threatened to confiscate its medical equipment with the aid of an armed officers squad.

A court has ruled that confiscation of the clinic's equipment is not legal, but it is now likely that the minister will successfully issue a new order. If he does, there will be a confrontation between the riot squad and the women demonstrators who have set up a 24-hour a day guard at the clinic.

The nonprofit clinic Bloemenhove — its name means flower farm — is the only one in Holland that is equipped to terminate pregnancies of more than three months.

The battle of Flower Farm is a direct conflict between Dutch Minister of Justice Andreas van Agt, an orthodox Roman Catholic, and the Dutch family planning organizations.

Van Agt tried to close Bloemenhove in 1974. The High Court rejected his arguments. This time the local public prosecutor, in close consultation with the minister, ordered the clinic closed after a complaint from a German couple. The health authorities have reported on the case — the incomplete abortion at 12 weeks of twins — and do not consider it serious. The clinic claims that the German couple tried to blackmail them.

The police recently failed to confiscate the clinic's equipment; their way was barred by women demonstrators, and a dawn riot squad raid was canceled at the last minute. The Dutch Cabinet took Van Agt to task. He had refused to comply with a parliamentary resolution requesting him to leave the clinic alone until an independent judge had given a verdict on the closure. The independent judge has ruled that the confiscation of the clinic's equipment is illegal.

Van Agt's most recent move has been to inform the clinic's medical staff that further use of the medical equipment will be considered a criminal offense. Meanwhile he is seeking a new order of confiscation. Despite this the clinic continues to operate. Hundreds of women demonstrators, working in shifts, guard the clinic against an eventual raid. They have said they can rally the support of a thousand or more within minutes, and will stay until guarantees have been given that the clinic can stay open.

The clinic's board of governors fears that the minister will not hesitate to grasp the slightest excuse to let the riot squad loose on both demonstrators and patients.

Indian transplants face problem

By SUNANDA DATTA-RAY
The London Observer

CALCUTTA — While Indian opinion, in Parliament and outside, is exercised about the possible spread of racial violence in Britain, British diplomatic officials here are preoccupied with the other side of the immigration coin: the plight of several hundred elderly people in Britain who once lived in India and are entitled to pensions from this country.

Most of them are either former employes of British firms that have been nationalized or sold to Indians, or the widows and dependants of such people. They were promised pensions that are apparently not being paid — partly because the nationalized agencies have repuidated earlier undertakings, and partly because of India's stringent exchange control regulations and bureaucratic machinery.

High Commission staff complain that it is difficult to fight government-appointed administrators, official receivers and the Reserve Bank of India all at the same time. "Letters arrive from England and are shoved away in files and the files are then lost. You go 'round to see the officer concerned and there's a tremendous noise of the dust of years being shaken off."

It is impossible to measure the magnitude of the problem in terms of either numbers of financial hardship suffered, but there is a certain irony in the contrast between the $51 million said to be sent back every year by Indian settlers in Britain and the pathetic little annuities (usually due from such former employers as insurance or coal mining companies that have been taken over by the government) for which the British High Commission here is battling.

Some claims have dragged on since 1957 or even earlier: In one case, a British woman who worked from 1921 to 1948 for Calcutta's Oriental Gas Co. lost her annual pension of about $187 in 1968, eight years after the firm was acquired by the West Bengal government. Papers are still shuttling between London, New Delhi and Calcutta though the woman died in November 1972.

In another case a man has been trying since 1960 to retrieve the $100 he invested in the Jalpaiguri Electric Supply Corp. in north Bengal, which is now merged with the state electricity board.

The British mission in Bombay and Madras deal with similar requests though the bulk of applications are filed with the High Commissioner in New Delhi.

The individual sums involved are usually quite paltry: $10 in bank interst due to a 60-year-old woman; a former secretary's annual pension of $40. They are affected by devaluation and further eroded because the lawyers engaged by the High Commission have to be paid.

Austin court upholds mixed drinks tax

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Austin Court of Civil Appeals upheld the constitutionality of Texas' 10 per cent mixed drinks tax Wednesday rejecting objections to the tax by numerous club owners.

B.D. Horton, doing business as the Embers Club of Corpus Christi, and others attacked the 1971 tax on the grounds that it was "discriminatory and unconstitutional."

They alleged that it was not fair to require holders of a mixed alcoholic beverage permit to pay a 10 per cent tax on their gross receipts and not to force wine and beer retailers to pay the same tax.

The club owners contended that "wine and beer retail permittees sell the same products (ethanol), are not taxed on the gross receipts for sale of such products and there is, therefore, no uniformity or equality among the members of the same class."

"It is within our scope and not unseemly for the court to notice that the 'mixed beverage' bars and the 'beer and wine' establishments, as devised by legislative mandate, are as different as East and West, and 'never the twain shall meet,'" Associate Justice Trueman O'Quinn wrote.

Midland boys win contest

Stephen Stovall, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Stovall, and Kevin Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Clark, all of Midland, are the winners of the recently held Reader's Digest Association-Boy Scouts of America council level Public Speaking Contest.

Stovall, a member of the First Presbyterian Church Scout Troop 85, competed against three other Scouts from Midland and Odessa, while Clark, a member of the Midland Junior Bar Association Law Post 6, competed against three other Explorers from Midland and Pecos.

The local contest is the first in a series, with the next step to be the area contest scheduled Sept. 18 at Lubbock. The contestants there will compete against winners from nine Scout councils from West Texas and New Mexico.

Winners of the area contest then will compete for regional honors at Dallas in October.

Dorothy Rice, director of the National Center for Health Statistics, and Dr. Peter Hamill, medical adviser to the center, hold a press conference at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in Washington. Dr. Hamill said that whatever the factors that produced the trend of increasing height over the last 200 years have ceased having an effect.

More fathers, sons seeing eye to eye

WASHINGTON (AP) — For years, fathers have felt uneasy about scolding their taller sons. But fathers and sons of the future may see more eye-to-eye because the growth rate for American children appears to have leveled off.

Boys and girls today are no taller than children were 20 years ago, the National Center for Health Statistics said Wednesday, noting the end of a 100-year trend of youths outstripping their elders in size.

The average 18-year-old American boy today stands 5 feet 9.2 inches and weighs over 150 pounds. In 1876 the average 18-year-old boy was 5 feet 5 inches. In 1776, Revolutionary War records indicate the average recruit stood a fraction over 5 feet 5.

The average 18-year-old girl today is 5 feet 4½ inches and weighs 123 pounds. Girls, who mature sooner than boys, generally stop growing by 18. The age at which girls reach puberty also has stabilized at 12 years, 9½ months — about 18 months before boys.

The government has no statistics on the size of girls a century ago. It based the boys' figures primarily on military records.

In the last 100 years, improved diet and the eradication of numerous childhood diseases spurred the upward growth rate, according to Dr. Peter V. Hamill, a medical adviser to the national center.

He speculated that the end to this trend "could be the result of our having reached the limits of our genetic potential regarding growth."

"However, all we can say with certainty is that whatever the factors that produced the trend of increasing size, they ceased having an effect ...by 1955 or 1956," he added.

The statistics are based on studies of more than 20,000 children across the country over the past 15 years.

The government has used the figures to update child growth charts for the first time in more than four decades. Doctors use the charts to gauge whether their patients' growth rate is normal and to detect aberrations that may be caused by illness.

Access to tax returns may be limited

By ROBERT L. JACKSON
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - A congressionally established study commission recommended Wednesday that government investigators no longer be given ready access to federal income tax returns in developing non-tax criminal cases.

Issuing its first report since its formation in 1974, the Privacy Protection Study Commission said the Department of Justice, the Securities and Exchange Commission and other federal law enforcement agencies should only obtain tax returns through court orders or from taxpayers themselves.

The long-established procedure whereby the Internal Revenue Service has routinely furnished tax returns, upon requests, to other agencies is "incompatible with the purposes for which such information is collected," the commission said.

It noted that tax information is collected "under threat of criminal penalties." Thus, use of this data in general criminal investigations "takes inappropriate advantage" of U.S. citizens, the report said.

The Privacy Protection Study Commission was established by Congress in the 1974 Privacy Act. One section of that law directed the Commission to report to the President and Congress on whether the IRA "should be prohibited from transferring individually identifiable data to other agencies and to agencies of state governments."

David F. Linowes, a New York public accountant, is chairman of the commission. The vice chairman is Willis H. Ware of Santa Monica, Calif., a Rand Corp. computer specialist.

Other menbers are Rep. Barry M. Goldwater Jr. (R-Calif.), Rep. Edward I. Koch (D-N.Y.), William O. Bailey, president of Aetna Life and Casualty Co. of Hartford, Conn.; William B. Dickinson, retired executive editor of the Philadelphia Bulletin, and Minnesota State Sen. Robert J. Tennessen.

For some time, IRA Commissioner Donald C. Alexander has advocated restricting the availability of tax returns. He told the commission last March that the Justice Department and its U.S. attorneys last year had inspected 29,163 returns in cases involving crimes other than tax fraud or tax evasion.

Alexander has questioned the extent to which the IRS should cooperate with other law enforcement agencies. Contending that revenue agents should work only on tax investigations, he has reduced IRS participation in Justice Department-controlled "Strike forces."

The Justice Department, on the other hand, has argued that IRS expertise is essential for strike forces to develop white-collar crime or organized crime cases. But it is impossible to tell in the early stages or an investigation whether tax charges will result, the department has said.

The privacy commission did not deal specifically with this controversy. The report did say, however, that IRS data "should not be considered a generalized governmental asset" and that "substantial harm can come to an individual as a consequence of the use of tax information about him for a non-tax law enforcement purpose."

The commission, stopped short of recommending a flat prohibition on the use of IRS returns in general criminal investigations. Rather, it said such data should be obtained from taxpayers themselves or by means of a federal court order directed at the IRS.

Under this proposed court procedure, which would require congressional action, the taxpayer involved would have to be notified and could contest the order.

The commission also recommended congressional action to restrict access to federal tax returns by state governments.

While acknowledging the need for "substantial . . . cooperation" between IRS officials and state and local tax administrators, the report said "The information exchanged for (tax) verification purposes should be strictly limited to the minimum necessary for that purpose."

To reduce the risk of unlawful disclosure of IRS returns by state officials, the commission recommended that only states with stiff penalties for disclosure be permitted to share in such data. Requests for IRS data should also be written, not oral, the commission said.

The report proposed that the maximum fine for unlawful disclosure of tax information be increased to $5,000 from $1,000, keeping imprisonment at a one-year limit.

In addition, the IRS commissioner would be empowered to suspend a state's access to federal tax data if an unauthorized disclosure were made.

Future studies by the commission are expected to focus on record-keeping practices by the insurance industry, by credit-reporting firms and by doctors and hospitals.

Small press books slated

WASHINGTON (AP) - Some 400 books of poetry and fiction will be produced this year with grants from the Small Press Program of the National Endowment for the Arts.

The grants total $345,460 and were made to 112 small independent printing presses in 26 states and the District of Colombia.

Stamp scandal undergoes Justice investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is investigating allegations that Postmaster General Benjamin Bailar got a cut-rate deal on rare stamps in return for awarding $7 million in postal contracts, according to an informed department official.

However, the staff director for a House subcommittee says he already has investigated the same allegations and found no evidence that they are true. The Justice Department official says he has not yet determined whether there is any truth to the allegations.

The investigation involves charges that Bailar purchased rare stamps at a fraction of their real value from Jack Taub, chairman of Scott Publishing Co., a New York-based firm which has sold $7 million worth of philatelic materials to the Postal Service.

In an interview Wednesday night, Taub flatly denied there was any payoff involved and offered to take a lie detector test to support his denial. Bailar was out of town, but a Postal Service spokesman said "this allegation was looked into in 1974 and nothing untoward was found."

Taub said he never sold any stamps to Bailar although he served as an adviser in helping the postal official build up a stamp collection worth an estimated $20,000.

Taub also acknowledged that in 1973, when Bailar was senior assistant postmaster general, he delivered a packet of stamps to Bailar's office. Bailar had bought the stamps from Taub's brother, Bertram.

The tide turns for the Serbs

The Washington Post

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia — People believe, said a Serb youth pointinr at a field of lovely red peonies, that the intensive red of their flowers is due to the blood of Serbian soldiers massacred here long ago by invading Turkish armies.

"Of course these are folk tales," he said, adding somewhat sheepishly, "but isn't it strange that the red peonies grow mostly in that area of the field of Kosovo where the battle was fought."

The tale is told to visitors who stray into this remote area of mountain ranges and rich fields where gentle courtesy and hospitality co-exist with outbursts of cruel violence, deep ethnic and religious hostilities and ancient customs of male domination. Its deeper meaning strikes at the heart of extraordinary complexities that make the province of Kosovo a unique and most difficult problem in this multinational country.

The province, roughly half the size of Maryland, was the site of the medieval Serbian kingdom that was destroyed by the Turks in 1389 in a fierce battle fought on the outskirts of this town. Today Kosovo is the home of a million-strong ethnic Albanian minority that comprises over 74 per cent of its population.

Before the granting of home rule to Kosovo in the late 1960s, ethnic Albanians in Yugoslavia were discriminated against. Since then, ethnic Albanians have replaced Serbs in key political and civil service jobs; Albanians have established a university in Pristina with nearly 30,000 students; the Albanian language has received official recognition, and heavy federal investments have poured into the schools, highways and factories of Kosovo.

The Albanian national affirmation gradually took on exclusivist overtones and in the past two years has even included separatist ideas, especially among young Albanian intellectuals. This, in turn, has created a sense of unease among Kosovo Serbs, who are now privately complaining about discrimination.

For the Serbs, who comprise Yugoslavia's largest national group with roughly 44 per cent of the 22 million population, the notion of losing what they regard as their ancestral lands provokes profound if covert anger. Kosovo was the site of Serbia's medieval power and glory as well as its destruction.

What makes the tangled web of ethnic, religious and linguistic relations even more complicated is the surging growth rate of Kosovo Albanians. Their annual average birth rate for more than a decade stood at more than 29 per 1,000 population. A continued exodus of Serbs from Kosovo also is contributing to the changing demographic picture.

An estimated 1 million Albanians live in Kosovo — almost half the population of Albania itself (some 2 million). Altogether, there are 1.3 million Albanians in Yugoslavia.

Belgrade's relations with Albania have been poor since 1948. One of the most xenophobic nations of Europe, Albania is allied with China and is extremely hostile toward Yugoslav "revisionists."

Despite continued Albanian propaganda attacks on Yugoslavia, the Belgrade government has pursued a conciliatory line toward Tirana, apparently seeking to limit conflict with a neighbor that has potential to aggravate Yugoslavia's internal nationality conflicts.

A special relationship has existed for years between Kosovo and Albania. While Albania borders are generally closed to the outside world, including Yugoslavia, Kosovo's ethnic Albanians can and do travel relatively freely to Albania.

Albania's cooperation with Kosovo is especially intensive in the fields of culture and education with exchange programs of artists, experts and teachers and formal cooperation between the universities of Pristina and Tirana.

Feriz Krasnici, 45, chancellor of the Unviersity of Pristina, sees this cooperation in terms of tapping resources of peoples of the same linguistic and ethnic heritage without political involvements. "Politically, we go our way, they go theirs," he said.

Since it was established six years ago, the university has been the seat not only of learning but also of strong nationalist feeling. Scores of young Albanian intellectuals and students were jailed last year for having organized a "Kosovo national liberation movement" that demanded union with Albania.

The hope of Communist officials is that rapid industrialization of Kosovo and other backward areas will erase the disparity of economic development in different regions and create vested local economic interests in the Yugoslav federation.

This, in essence, is behind Yugoslavia's evolution from the totalitarianism of the post-war years to semi-pluralistic authoritarianism of today — a change from political centralism to local home rule that encourges linguistic and cultural affirmation of all nationalities. Kosovo undoubtedly will be the major test for this policy.

'Captain of ship' doctrine reviewed

-AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—The Texas Supreme Court decided Wednesday to review the "Captain of the Ship" doctrine in two medical malpractice suits.

Both suits — one from Gray County and the other from Taylor County — will be heard July 14.

They involve whether surgeons were responsible as "captains of the ship" for sponges that were left in patients during abdominal operations.

In the Gray County case, Sylvia Caldwell sued Dr. C. F. Sparger and Worley Hospital Inc., alleging that a four-inch square of gauze had been left in her abdomen in 1972.

The Amarillo Court of Civil Appeals awarded $21,644 in damages, holding Sparger and the hospital liable.

Sparger's lawyers contended that the "sponge count" was an administrative or clerical function and the surgeon was not liable.

South Africa may soon be in for rough ride

Observer, London

LONDON — South Africa is in for a rough ride when it grants independence to the Transkei on Oct. 26.

Five months before the flag of independence is due to be raised in the first of the eight black Homelands (or Bantustans) to secede from South Africa, a major row has developed over citizenship rights between the republic and the fledgling state.

The Transkei, which has a population of four million, is the first of five Homelands that have signified their intention of accepting South Africa's offer of independent status (though all are economically dependent on the republic). Three others, led by the strong Zulu Homeland, are still refusing the offer.

South Africa's aim is to promote its apartheid policy of separate development between the country's races in the hope that by allowing black South Africans an opportunity to exercise their political rights in their own Homelands, the present racial crisis in the republic will be gradually eased and thus make co-existence a more reasonable prospect.

The present citizenship row is over a unilateral decision by John Vorster's government that all Xhosas (the linguistic group that makes up the 12 tribes in the Transkei) will lose their citizenship rights in South Africa and automatically become citizens of the transkei on Oct. 26.

But the Transkei's minister of justice, George Matanzima said in an interview here that the South African decision on citizenship was taken without any previous consultation.

"We refuse to accept it because it is in direct conflict with the constitution we ourselves have adopted for our independence, and the South African government fully knows what is in it," he said. "We specifically amended Clause 51 on citizenship to make it clear what group of persons may become citizens if they choose to do so. We have no intention whatsoever, on our part, to force anybody to become citizens, not even if they are Xhosas. The right of citizenship must be entirely voluntary."

The Transkei's position was "irreversible."

Market moves ahead gradually

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market moved ahead gradually today in a modest rally fed by hopes that the rise of interest rates was subsiding.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 4.75 at 962.84, and gainers outpaced losers by better than a 21 spread in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers noted that interest rates had shown signs of stabilizing in recent days after a substantial rise from their lows of earlier in the year. They also reported hopes that weekly Federal Reserve figures due at today's close would show a slackening of upward pressure on money rates.

Walt Disney Productions was the most active NYSE issue, up ⅛ at 50¾. A 120,000-share block of the stock traded early in the session at 50.

The Big Board's composite index of all its listed common stocks climbed .32 to 52.94. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .11 at 101.54.

Volume on the NYSE picked up a bit, with 7.55 million shares changing hands in the first two hours against 5.98 million in the like period Wednesday.

Glamor stocks gaining a point or more included IBM, Digital Equipment and Texas Instruments.

Getty leaves clearcut will

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Unlike Howard Hughes, J. Paul Getty left one clearcut will spelling out how his billions in cash, holdings and art treasures are to be distributed.

Getty's will, a neatly-typed, 23-page document, was filed Tuesday in Los Angeles County Court, leaving various bequests to his four sons and others but giving the bulk of his wealth to the J. Paul Getty Museum in Malibu.

The will placed no value on the estate left by the 83-year-old billionaire who died in his sleep Sunday at his country estate in Guildford, England. But the worth of Getty's global financial empire was estimated at between $2 billion and $4 billion.

At least 20 purported wills have been filed on behalf of Getty's fellow billionaire, Howard Hughes. Novelty companies have even begun marketing "do-it-yourself" Hughes wills.

Getty's will directed that he be buried in a "small marble mausoleum" on a portion of his 65-acre ranch at Pacific Palisades.

The rest of the ranch, along with his entire art collection valued at $200 million and a variety of rugs, tapestries, antique furniture and silverware also were left to the Getty Museum.

The will also specified that anyone later declared to be a wife or child of Getty's be paid "the sum of $10 and no more."

The will named two of Getty's sons, Gordon Peter Getty and Jean Ronald Getty, and the Title Insurance Trust Co. of Los Angeles as executors of the estate.

Two other sons, J. Paul Getty Jr. and George F. Getty II, were named to receive parts of the billionaire's art collection and cash, though George Getty died in 1973.

Getty's will also left varying amounts of stock to eight female friends and directed that annuities be set up for some of them.

William Bell, vice president of Title Insurance Trust, said he was not certain who the women were.

"I'm not too familiar with Mr. Getty's personal history," Bell said. "They probably were just friends of his."

Similar annuities were set up for members of Getty's household staff and several key business executives.

Whisky becomes Scots battle cry

By PIERRE DIETSCH
Agence France-Presse

EDINBURGH — Whisky is becoming more than a $3,000 billion-a-year British industry. It is becoming a Scots battle cry.

Scots nationalists, suspiciously eyeing the British government's move over devolution — limited autonomy for Scotland and Wales — are more than worried over the future of the Scots' national drink, whisky.

The Scots have already made it clear that an autonomous Scotland must be able to count on revenue from North Sea oil, and now they have added whisky.

This has not gone unnoticed by the major distillers, employing 25,000 workers, who have advertised widely here warning Scots nationalists that "separation, pure and simple, from Britain would be disasterous for our whisky. We need English drinkers."

A quarter of the annual whisky production is drunk in Britain itself. Last year whisky was exported to 180 countries earning a revenue for the British government of $732 million.

Whisky is clearly an important revenue earner for Britain, as a whole and London is unlikely to hand over the industry to the Scots alone.

England and Scotland have clashed over whisky for many centuries, ever since monks came from Ireland with its secret before the Middle Ages.

Successive English kings tried to tax Scots whisky but failed dismally, for there were too many clandestine distilleries in the homes of the Highlands.

Scots poet Robert Burns wrote "Whisky and freedom gang (go) together."

Both the English and Welsh tried to make whisky but were never able to do so successfully. These days two-thirds of the barley needed for the whisky is bought from English farmers but Scotland provides one ingredient unavailable anywhere else in the world — clear water from mountain streams and lochs.

Scots distillers jealously guard their right alone in the world to market the product "Scotch," and every year there are up to 60 legal actions throughout the world to prevent imitations being sold as the authentic drink.

Recently some Latin American countries were selling whisky in what appeared to be authentic Scotch bottles with genuine labels. But the contents were far from being Scotch whisky.

In Indonesia, a Japanese firm was marketing whisky which its label said "was made in Buckingham Palace under the personal eye of the sovereign."

Scots nationalists' desire to keep whisky as a major prop of Scotland's industrial wealth is understandable but usually judged as being rather unrealistic.

Tobacco industry thriving in spite of adversaries

By DAVID LAMB
The Los Angeles Times

MINNEAPOLIS — Ever since the Aztecs stuffed tobacco into a hollow reed and lit up the world's first cigaret 450 or so years ago, nonsmokers have been fighting for their right to breathe air untarnished by tar, nicotine, carbon monoxide, ammonia, benzene, formaldehyde and hydrogen sulphide.

The first Romanov czar fought for his right by slitting smokers' noses as punishment, the turkish Sultan Murad IV for his by executing as many as 18 smokers in a single day. The colonial assembly in Connecticut tried to purify its air in 1643 by prohibiting smoking outdoors unless a person was on a journey of 10 miles or more and much later Utah, Kansas and North Dakota banned smoking entirely.

But the trouble was, none of these prohibitions were very effective, not even as effective as Minnesota's tough new antismoking law which one disguntled traveller responsed to recently by grinding his cigar butt on an airport ticket counter and announcing: "Last time I'll ever come into this goddamn state."

History shows that the Russians kept smoking, their noses generally intact. So did the Turks and the North Dakotans. And last year — 11 years after the Surgeon General officially termed smoking a health hazard, five years after tobacco products disappeared from television commercials, three years after the government suggested that second-hand smoke may be harmful to nonsmokers — 60 million Americans puffed their way through a record 610 billion cigarets, thus enabling the tobacco industry to maintain once again its steady 2-3 per cent annual growth.

Although nonsmokers have won some notable victories in the 1970s, the evidence was sufficient to make many realists concede defeat. The National Cancer Institute announced it was sponsoring research to produce less hazardous cigarets after urging Americans for years not to smoke, period. The president of the American Cancer Society admitted any all-out attack on smoking would lack public support and fail. And Minnesota last month issued 16 pages of clarifying regulations to its clean-air legislation, which has caused more controversy than anything in the state since the Sioux Indian uprising of 1862.

Unlike other states where smoking has been banned in specific areas like elevators or theaters, Minnesota says smoking is illegal in all public places and public meetings. The only exception is in specially designated "smoking areas."

Restaurants, accordingly, must provide no-smoking tables, hospitals no-smoking wards, offices no-smoking desks. Only in bars can smokers puff away at will without fear of being liable for a $100 fine.

Predictably, the law has caused some inconveniences.

In the state Health Department, desks have been rearranged so the 500 employes sit in clusters of smokers and nonsmokers, generally separated by file-cabinet barricades. In the state Legislature, the law had to be waived on at least one occasion so the smoking representatives would stay in their seats for a crucial late-night debate, rather than hurrying off the floor for a smoke. And Martin Sabo, the two-pack-a-day Speaker of the House was one of the first to comply with the law: he pasted a "smoking allowed" sign over two of the four chairs in the waiting area outside his office. "Thank goodness my boss is a smoker," said Sabo's secretary, Edith Snell, who has a similar sign near her typewriter.

The police department, understandably, has been reluctant to devote much energy to the law, usually ignoring it, occasionally asking an offender to extinguish his cigaret. "Most of the people are very gracious when you ask them to put out their cigarets," said James Pixley, chief of security at Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport. "Of course, there have been some others who have told us what we can do with the law and the state."

The American Lung Assn., which has played the leading role in pushing for nonsmokers' rights in Minnesota and other states, says its efforts are pro-nonsmoking, not antismoking. Spearheading the association's movement are a number of small, vocal groups flourishing around the country: GASP (Group Against Smokers' Pollution), ASH (Action on Smoking and Health), ANSR (Assn. for Nonsmokers' Rights) and SHAME (Society to Humiliate, Aggravate, Mortify and Embarrass Smokers).

"In a way these adversaries did us a favor," said William Kloepher Jr., senior vice president of the Tobacco Institute in Washington, D.C. "They provided us with the forum, the means of comunicating directly with the public on behalf of the industry and believe me, we've been taking advantage of that." The institute, with a staff of 36, including seven lobbyists, and a budget it will not disclose, speaks for an industry which produces 145 brands of cigarets. It claims that smoking is not a hazard to healthy nonsmokers and any discomfort to nonsmokers should be cured with smokers' courtesy, not laws. To get its message across — and to ensure that smoking speak easies aren't the next step — it has four speakers on its staff who tour the country, holding news conferences, appearing on talk shows, speaking to civic groups.

Kloepher points out that the tobacco industry is perhaps the only one in which the users of a product, rather than the product itself, are the target of an opponent's attack. But to those who ask, he offers an historically safe prediction about the future of the industry: steady growth.

Shark stories plentiful

There are plenty of stories around these days about sharks.

Some of them probably are true, and some of them probably aren't.

There is an equal amount of advice around these days about where to find sharks, how to avoid them once you've found them and what to do if you meet one face-to-face, or even jaw-to-jaw.

One can find just about whatever piece of advice one would like to hear.

For instance, let's say you like to swim in the ocean at night. A published report quoted statistics gathered by the Mote Marine Laboratory in Sarasota, Fla. The report said that few shark attacks occur at night, because sharks' prime feeding hours are 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Dr. Perry Gilbert is the director of the Mote laboratory. Gilbert recommends not swimming at night, because that's dinner time for sharks.

Take your choice.

Suppose you like to enjoy a quiet, relaxing swim by yourself. Don't swim alone, says Mote Director Gilbert. But the Mote statistics report says that solo swimmers are much less likely to be attacked than swimmers in a group.

Take your choice.

But take heart, there are some areas of agreement:

—There are snarks off the Texas Coast—sand sharks, lemons, hammerheads, and even great whites.

—Sharks are more attracted to swimmers who use a thrashing stroke instead of a smooth one.

—Sharks rarely circle their prey. They bear toward it fast and hard.

—Most shark attacks occur in water four to six feet deep.

—Sharks would rather attack men than women. Ninety-three per cent of all recorded attacks are against men.

—There is no such thing as a shark repellant.

Ernest Simmons, directory of the Fisheries Division of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, summed it up: "The one certainty about sharks is their uncertainty."

Record sales tax collected

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — An alltime monthly record of more than $30 million in motor vehicle sales taxes was collected in April, state comptroller Bob Bullock reported Tuesday.

Tax collections in May should be even higher, Bullock said.

"People are playing catch-up and making the car purchases they had previously put off. And they're paying more money for cars than ever before— which means more money for the state," Bullock said in a statement.

The motor vehicle sales tax is a four per cent assessment against the sale of cars, trucks, motorcycles, motor homes and most trailers.

The counties retain 5 per cent of the collections and the state gets 95 per cent.

Bermuda beauteous, bounteous paradise

The Los Angeles Times

BERMUDA — Bless the British. Such a civilized bunch. Even with all those dreadful problems at home, they've bequeathed the American tourist a generous gift — this treasure island of tranquility only a two-martini flight from New York.

So let bygones be bygones. Forget that they burned Washington in 1814 in an attack launched from Bermuda. Forget that they helped divide the States by supplying the Confederate Army through Bermuda in the Civil War. That's ancient stuff. Come. Relax. Enjoy.

Sit on the veranda of the Princess Hotel and watch the ferries slip out of Hamilton Harbor at sunset, bound for the parishes of Sandys and Southhampton. Stroll down Front St. and be reminded of both New Orleans and Sausalito.

Snooze on one of 80 beaches, the bluest water you'll ever see at your feet, and wonder if the British didn't know what they were doing, after all, when they set up their colonial empire.

One would have trouble matching the British graciousness one finds here or topping the charm of a bike ride along narrow, hilly roads that wind past magnificent white mansions.

Charm you'll find plenty. Excitement is in scarcer supply. The 55,000 Bermudians pride themselves on the sedateness and calmness of their island cluster and it will take more than 500,000 visitors a year to alter that atmosphere.

Hotel restaurants generally request gentlemen to wear jackets and ties for dinner — although what they call "elegant informality" is often acceptable.

The speed limit on the bridge-and causeway-connected islands is 20 m.p.h. There are no rental cars — and with gas selling for $1.50 a gallon it's just as well.

Taxis are abundant and moderately priced but the ideal way to see Bermuda is on a motorbike. The first day costs $10 and the price drops thereafter. Your hotel can arrange for delivery.

For the more timid, bicycles are available and for the lazy or the romantic, horse-and-carriage sight-seeing rides are available in Hamilton, the capital (population 3,000).

A word of warning about the motorbikes: they are as easy to ride as a regular bicycle but in the crush of the long tourist season (February through November) police respond to an average of 30 motorbike accidents a day.

You would do well to accept the helmet that is offered free when you rent the bike.

The temperatures are about what you'd find in South Carolina, ranging from an average daily high of 68 in January to 86 in August. Prices, unfortunately, range considerably higher than temperatures.

Round-trip economy air fare from New York is about $200. My hotel — a former private mansion on the harbor with very modest rooms — cost $73 a night for a double, including taxes and a 10 per cent service charge for tips. It was as good a bargain as I could find in a less-than-luxury hotel.

Meals ranged from $4.75 for fish and chips in a downtown English pub to $11 for lamb chops in a seaside hotel.

The overcooked lamb chops looked as if they had been produced in a shoe factory. The maitre d' was sympathetic. "Oh my," he said, "they certainly did get clobbered." When the bill came, the charge for the lamb had been crossed off.

You'll find good shopping, although hardly any bargains, in Hamilton where the elegant shops are well stocked with men's and women's fashions, crystal, leather goods and Scandinavian silver.

Duty-free liquor and cigarets are slightly cheaper than a U.S. traveler would pay at home. Shopping, though, isn't what Bermuda's all about for the vacationer.

Innocent appearance excellent disguise

If you're going to stage a robbery in broad daylight, an innocent look is better disguise than a black silk mask. If you have your doubts about this statement, look at a hand from a recent team championship.

At the first table of the match South took the ace of hearts and immediately (and obviously) cleared the ace of clubs out of the way.

South next cashed the top spades and led a low spade, but West stepped up with the ace of trumps and cashed a heart trick before it got away from him.

East took the setting trick with the king of diamonds, and everybody tossed compliments at West for being so alert. Nobody hurled a cabbage at South for being so transparent.

At the second table South took the ace of hearts and led the top spades when the queen dropped, South saw what would happen if he cleared the ace of clubs out of the way.

CONTINUES SPADES

Instead, South led a low spade. West discarded a club, since there was no apparent danger. After ruffing the spade in dummy, declarer returned with the ace of clubs to lead another low spade.

West still saw no danger and therefore discarded another club.

South ruffed in dummy and cashed the king of clubs to get rid of the losing heart. Then he gave up two trump tricks and made his contract.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one spade, and the next player passes. You hold: S10972 H10954 DK CJ1082 What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two spades. Although you have only 4 points in high cards, the singleton combined with four-card trump support adds enough to make the hand worth a raise.

Railroad Commission studies Lo-Vaca request for delay

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The railroad commission to hold a conference late this morning on a request by Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. to Extend for 30 days the deadline for nautral gas customers to decide what rates they want to pay Lo-Vaca.

The request was made Wednesday.

The company also asked the commission to schedule a public hearing on attempts to settle $1.4 billion in lawsuits against Lo-Vaca, the major gas supplier for Austin, San Antonio, Corpus Christi and the Lower Colorado River Authority.

Friday is the deadline for LoVaca's customers to decide whether they want to demand that the company revert to 1962 contract prices of about 20 cents per thousand cubic feet (mcf) or whether they will pay approximately the rates they are paying now, which are 10 times higher.

Texas Utilities Fuel Co., which supplies gas to several North Texas utilities, and Eagle Pass Natural Gas told the commission Wednesday they were willing to accept the agency's proposal to allow LoVaca to pass on 85 per cent of its gas costs and to earn a two per cent profit.

The proposed rate structure would mean that Lo-Vaca could charge about $1.75 per thousand cubic feet of gas (mcf) instead of the $1.81 it is charging under a 1973 commission order.

In addition to Lo-Vaca and its parent firm, Coastal States Gas Producing Co., several customers also have asked the commission to extend the deadline in hopes of reaching an out-ofcourt settlement.

They include San Antonio, Central Power & Light Co. of Corpus Christi, Brownsville, United Texas Transmission Co., Entex Inc., and Southern Union Gas Co.

A majority of Lo-Vaca's customers must accept one of the two rate choices for it to go into effect.

Physicists beginning to talk about dream

By NIGEL HAWKES
The Observer, London

LONDON — Physicists are beginning to talk, in hushed and reverent tones, about their ultimate dream — an atom-smasher so big that to build it would need international collaboration from the whole world.

TVHEIPROPOSAL, KNOWN AS THE Very Big Accelerator (VBA), or more romantically as the World Machine, was discussed last month at a conference in Serpukhov in the Soviet Union. High-energy physicists from all over the world attended the meeting and decided that a World Machine was a highly desirable project.

The prupose would simply be to advance knowledge of the structure of matter. No practical ends of any sort are envisaged, except in the sense that a better knowledge of atoms and sub-atomic particles may one day be useful.

With uncharacteristic modesty, the physicists at Serpukhov did not recommend an immediate start on the World Machine. The next generation of particle accelerators, it was agreed, could be built by organizations like the European Organization for Nuclear Research (CERN) in Geneva and by the Americans, Russians and Japanese, working alone.

But after that, the world. In about 10 years' time the physicists believe that they will be ready to build an accelerator so massive that it will dwarf the present-day 'big machines' at CERN and at the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory in Batavia, Ill.

To delve deeper and deeper into the structure of the atom and sub-atomic particles requires machines of ever greater energy and hence ever greater size. The purpose of such machines is to accelerate sub-atomic particles like the proton or the electron to high speeds and then allow them to collide with 'targets' or with one another. The debris of such collisions, which may include previously undiscovered particles with lifetimes of only millionths of a second, is then studied with sensitive detectors.

What form the World Machine would take is still undecided; all that is known is that it would be gargantuan. If it were a proton accelerator like the new CERN machine, for example, it would accelerate protons to a staggering 10,000 thousand million electron volts (10,000 Gev or 10 TeV), 25 times as great as the CERN machine.

Physicists see this as a natural next step. The first particle accelerators had energies of only a few hundred million electron volts. An accelerator that size could be accommodated in a large (and genekously financed) university laboratory. Then came accelerators of a few thousand million electron volts, which needed national laboratories to be able to afford them.

The next steps took accelerators to 28 thousand million electron volts (28 GeV) at CERN, to 70 GeV at Serpukhov and now to 500 GeV at Batavia and, due for completion shortly, 400 GeV at Cern. The machines consist of large circular rings of magnets around which the particles travel as they are accelerated. They are immensely expensive and difficult to build, but so far no easier way has been found of achieving the high energies necessary.

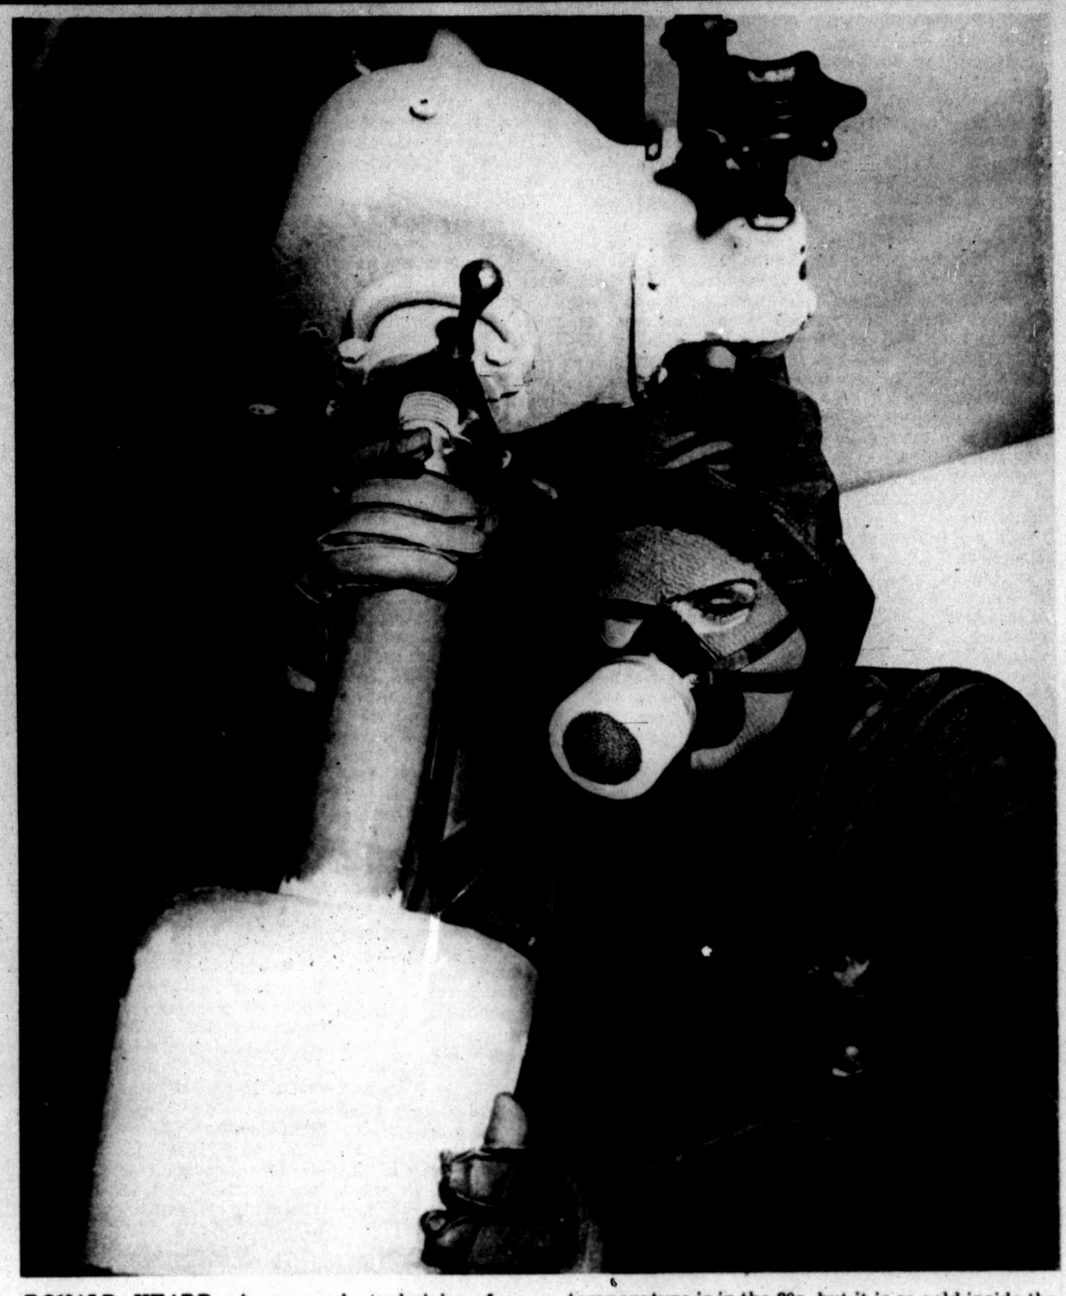

If the World Machine were to be a proton accelerator, it would need a ring 10 miles across and aligned to within fractions of an inch. Even to find a site with sufficiently stable geological characteristics for such a machine would be a major task. Building the machine might cost a billion dollars.

Western European physicists, faced with budget cuts for even their present research programs, are hesitant about promoting the World Machine, even though they believe it would advance their science. Most of the drum-beating is being done by Americans, particularly Dr. Robert Wilson, director of the Fermi Lab, and Professor Victor Weisskopf, one of the earliest enthusiasts for CERN.

"A new opportunity for a world laboratory is in the air," says Dr. Wilson. "We can now see that the multi-hundred GeV level will not be enough, that an accelerator 10 miles in diameter rather than one mile will be required to give a more complete picture of elementary particles. Particle physicists need 10,000 GeV — and a billion dollars."

Whether scientists in other disciplines will agree is doubtful. Many feel that high energy physics has already had more than its fair share of the funds and that high energy physicists are suffering from a "folie de grandeur" which drives them to ever more ambitious schemes.

But the physicists have never seen any harm in asking for more. Though they have no hopes of raising the money in the foreseeable future, they have asked the International Union for Pure and Applied Physics to take the idea under its wing and keep it alive in the hopes of better times ahead.

RONALD HEARD, A research technician for Tenneco's Tennessee Gas Pipeline Co., is finding out how pipe behaves when it is forced through a block of ice at 40 degrees below zero. The outside temperature is in the 80s, but it is so cold inside the company's cold room at Houston that Heard wears a respirator to protect his lungs.

Mitchell, Winkler get tests

Wildcat projects have been staked in Mitchell and Winkler Counties, and operator amended depth destination on a recently staked Pecos project.

Soma Energy, Inc., will drill No. 1 Soma-Spade as a 7,600-foot wildcat 14 miles south of Colorado City in Mitchell County.

Location is 2,800 feet from north and 2,350 feet from west lines of section 14, block 18, R. M. Thompson survey.

Drillsite is 2½ mile east of the Beal's Creek (Wichita-Albany) field by separated by dry holes.

WINKLER PROJECT

HNG Oil Co. No. 1-10 Linebery is to be dug as a 22,000-foot wildcat 10 miles west of Kermit in Winkler County.

Location is 1,320 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 10, block 27, psl survey and 2⅛ miles east of production in the Evetts multipay field.

DEEPENING PROJECT

Marshall R. Young Oil Co. of Fort Worth No. 1 Bruce McKenzie, project in the BMH (Devonian) field of Pecos County, has been rescheduled to 10,600 feet as a wildcat.

Operator has drilled to the original contract depth of 8,600 feet and has not reported results of any testing.

Location is 6 miles southwest of Bakersfield, 1,100 feet from south and 1,100 feet from west lines of section 4, block 603, GC&SF survey.

Operators stake sites in Basin for wildcats

Wildcats were slated in Irion and Upton counties and an outpost has been scheduled in Schleicher County.

Fortune Drilling Corp., San Angelo, has staked No. 1-7 Murphey as a 7,800-foot Strawn lime wildcat. It is also a ¾ mile north outpost to the two-well Baker (Canyon gas) field of Irion County.

It spots ⅝ mile southeast of the marginal Strawn oil opener and lone producer from that pay in the Murphy field.

Drillsite is 826 feet from south and 1,245 feet from east lines of section 7, San Antonio Ditch Co. survey, nine miles southwest of Mertzon.

The Strawn discovery, Great Southwest Oil & Gas Co. No. 1-B Elta Murphey, was potentialed pumping 25 barrels of 43.6 gravity oil, no water, through perforations at 7,700-7,835 feet.

No. 1 A. J. Sabo has been scheduled, by Gulf Oil Corp., as a 12,500-foot Ellenburger wildcat, surrounded by shallow production in the Upton Couty portion of the McElroy multipay field.

It spots 2⅜ miles northeast of the one-well Heluma, North (Ellenburger) field, and is 660 feet from south and west lines of section 178, block E, CCSD&RGNG survey, 15 miles northwest of Upland.

Joseph I O'Neill Jr., Midland, has made plans to drill No. 1 George Barrow Jr. as a ½-mile north outpost to Canyon gas production, on the northwest side of the Cody Bell (Canyon) field of Schleicher County. Proposed depth is 6,850 feet.

Located 10 miles north of Eldorado, it spots 1,366 feet from south and 1,462 feet from west lines of section 49, block TT, TCRR survey.

Extension potentials

Yates Petroleum Co., Artesia, has completed No. 1-FQ Moore, as a ¾-mile southwest extension to Morrow production in the Cemetary (Morrow and Wolfcamp) field of Eddy County, N.M.

Calculated, absolute open flow potential was for 4.53 million cubic feet of gas per day.

Production was through perforations at 9,381-9,404 feet.

Drilled to 9,750 feet, it was plugged back to 9,535 feet, and 5½-inch casing was set at 9,737 feet.

Wellsite is 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 19-20s-25e, 12 miles southwest of Lake Wood.

Tipperary files suit

Tipperary Corp. of Midland has filed an $18 million breach-of-sales contract on anhydrous ammonia against Farmland Industries, Inc., of Kansas City, Mo.

The anhydrous ammonia is produced at Tipperary's plant near Lovington, N.M.

The suit's issue is an amendment to the basic contract which covers Farmland's agreement to purchase the ammonia from the Tipperary plant. The sales contract was dated April 5, 1974 and was amended Sept. 10 of that year.

Deane H. Stoltz, Tipperary's president, said that the ligitation should have no effect on the corporation's projected earnings for 1976. He said that recent increases in Tipperary's oil and gas production will more than offset any expense in the court action.

Soviet Union to give Cuba nuclear reactor

VANCOUVER, Canada (AP) — Cuba will get a nuclear reactor from the Soviet Union for the production of electrical power, the head of Cuba's delegation to the United Nations conference says.

Levi Parah, Cuba's minister of construction, told reporters the Caribbean country endorses the use of nuclear power for peaceful purposes and is opposed to suggestions that it be curtailed.

"The world has to find new sources of energy to substitute for oil," he said, adding this is particularly important to Cuba, which does not have an oil source of its own.

Para, speaking through an interpreter, did not comment further on his country's acquisition of a nuclear reactor.

The spread of nuclear technology was a major subject of discussion at Habitat Forum, the parallel conference of non-governmental organizations, last week.

Shows hit in project

J. C. Williamson and D. W. Underwood of Midland No. 2 Shell-Clark, project ½ mile southeast of the Apple Creek (Fusselman) field in Glasscock County, hit oil shows on a drillstem test from 9,700 to 9,725 feet.

Open 125 minutes, the test recovered 75 feet of drilling mud and 890 feet of gas in drillpipe.

Another test, from 9,720 to 9,760 feet, open 80 minutes, recovered 40 feet of mud. The sample chamber had slight shows of oil.

The project is 1,980 feet from south and 467 feet from west lines of section 8, block 32, T-4-S, T&P survey and seven miles northeast of Garden City.

Alumni meet for reunion

A reunion of Midland area alumni of New Mexico Military Institute will be held from 6:30 to 9 p.m. today at Conner's Delicatessen here.

Attending the function from the Roswell school will be its president, Brig. Gen. C. Robert Kemble; Edward Porter, new alumni secretary, and Charles Rock, development officer.

Hosts at the informal session will be 10 Midland graduates of the institute, with William Monroe Kerr serving as chairman.

A large number of NMMI graduates reside in the Midland area, dating back to 1909.

Wildcat hits slight show

Gulf Oil Corp. No. 57 Mallett Land & Cattle Co., a wildcat being drilled 15 miles northeast of Plains in Yoakum County, has encountered shows of oil and gas, along with water, on a pair of drillstem tests.

A 45-minute test from 5,090 to 5,140 feet recovered three feet of oil, with a trace of gas, and 120 feet of water.

A drillstem test from 5,142 to 5,192 feet, open 1 hour and 15 minutes, recovered 250 feet of water-cut drilling mud and 1,350 feet of water with a trace of gas.

Hole is being made on contract depth of 11,500 feet.

Drillsite is 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 5, block K, psl survey.

Division organized

WPC, Inc., has announced the formation of a new division, WPC Supply, and the appointment of Bill Spruill as division president.

The new division will offer to the oil industry a line of plastic coated fittings, laboratory hardware, reagent grade chemicals and corrosion prevention products.

Spruill formerly was a district sales manager for WPC-Meister. He has been chairman of the Midland Parks and Recreation board the last two years and currently is serving as a state director of the Parks and Recreation Commission of Texas.

Permian Basin Empire gets 70 petroleum tests

Wildcatting in the Permian Basin Empire of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico continued last week with a count of 14, compared to 30 two weeks ago.

Pool development dropped, with only 56 applications made for field projects. Two weeks ago, 82 permits were sought for field tests.

The Texas Railroad Commission recorded five explorator tests applied for in its Midland District 8 office. That 20-county area was in top place for pool development, with 29 permit applications filed.

Two wildcats were staked in RRC District 8-A, while the San Angelo office recorded four.

Mandatory retirement fast becoming major problem in Western societies

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

The sun is just beginning to set in Griffin, Ga. Thelma F. Davis had finished tutoring her last student for the day. She is 69 and has taught school for 35 years.

If she had her way, she'd still be in the classroom.

"Who says everyone is senile at 65?" she said. "And if children don't develop at the same age, then why do we assume all older people to be the same? Why do we retire people just because they're 65?"

HARRY LAPOW, a 67-year-old photographer and retired package designer, of New York's Greenwich Village, agrees.

"That's the end of it," he said. "All the background you have, all the experience you have — it's of no value. I used to be a pretty happy guy. Now my spirit is down, and I'm growing bitter."

Miss Davis and Lapow are among the 22.4 million men and women in the nation a recent U.S. Census Bureau study says are over 65. They are also part of the growing controversy surrounding mandatory retirement and old age itself. These men and women say they must put up with a sea of misconceptions about old people — misconceptions that they are all depressed, inactive and unproductive.

"COMPULSORY retirement seems to be superficially and grossly unfair," said Dr. Robert L. Kahn, an associate professor of psychiatry and behavioral science at the University of Chicago. "All people should continue to contribute as long as they're able.

"But for the great majority of older people, it (retirement) is a positive thing, not a negative thing. They see it as a kind of reward because they've worked all these years. As long as they have enough money, a place to live and good medical care, then retirement can be very good."

POLITICIANS and social scientists, as well as gerontologists and members of the business community continue to argue over the fairness of a system that ignores one's ability and competency to get a job done well, and instead terminates an employe because of age. For most of working America, the fixed age is 65, which was established in the 1930s during formation of Social Security.

Supporters maintain that mandatory retirement helps curtail the high unemployment rate of young people and permits the employer to easily weed out its personnel without having to judge work performance, which can be difficult as well as subjective. In some cases, they say, incompetence of nonproductive workers who could not be fired, can be eliminated from the payroll without contest.

THOSE IN opposition want workers to have a choice in determining their futures. They say 65 is an unfair and unrealistic age since life expectancy has increased since the 1930s. Also, they argue experienced and talented labor is pushed aside.

The Census Bureau study says that the over 65 age group is growing more rapidly than the general population. When today's baby boom children are ready for retirement in the second decade of the next century, the elderly will make up 15 per cent of the population versus about 10.5 per cent today. The study said this will put a tremendous strain on the Social Security system, a strain that could be tempered by allowing people to work past 65.

"THE ISSUE of mandatory retirement is a very major one in Western society," said Dr. Harvey Brenner of Johns Hopkins University's school of hygiene and public health. "It produces a very substantial alteration in the lives of people who undergo it, including those surrounding the individual."

Older people are much better off emotionally and physically than society thinks, adds psychiatrist and gerontologist Dr. Robert N. Butler, the new director of the National Institute on Aging.

"Only 5 per cent of the elderly in this country are in any kind of institution — nursing homes or hospitals," he said. "In the absence of any serious diseases, older people's intellectual abilities are better than previously thought. They learn, they get new information and improve their memory store."

IN FACT, most people past age 65 get a little miffed when others assume them to be incapable.

"A person beyond 65 has a lot to offer," said John L. Dugan, a retired Atlanta, Ga., business administrator. "You don't just atrophy.

"It's a lack of self-esteem and dignity to be told or to think you're no longer producing. We can produce as long as we're physically able to do so."

THREE PROPOSALS are pending in Congress to bring age into the protective categories of the Civil Rights Act, along with sex and race; to prohibit employers and others from asking an applicant's age; and to eliminate 65 as the cutoff age in te Age Discrimination in Employment Act.

An impending decision from the U.S. Supreme Court could strike down many state laws mandating a fixed retirement age for certain employes. The case initially was brought by Robert D. Murgia, a 53-year-old former Massachusetts state police officer. Murgia, who then had the rank of colonel, was retired three years age at 50, the compulsory age for retiring state police in Massachusetts.

A LOWER COURT ruled the state law unconstitional. The state appealed the decision to the Supreme Court.

"There are elaborate medial screening processes the state police use on personnel every two years until age 40. After that the exam is annual," said Robert City, Murgia's attorney. "Murgia passed all tests and met all standards, which meant he was fit."

THELMA DAVIS, the Griffin, Ga., schoolteacher, also is involved in a court proceeding. The mandatory retirement age for teachers in Georgia is 70, but the school board passed a ruling to retire certain teachers over 65. She sued. A district court judge ruled the board's recommendation was unconstitutional.

"I love what I do, and I'm damn good at it," she said. "If they couldn't find out what kind of teacher I was during the 24 years I taught here, then something's wrong with them." Miss Davis is a former president of the National Educational Association Classroom Teachers.

IN A 1974 Harris poll on the elderly sponsored by the National Council on the Aging, 86 per cent of the respondents to a question on mandatory retirement said people should not be forced to retire because of age, if they want to continue working and can do a good job. Only 12 per cent disagreed and 2 per cent were not sure.

Although many older Americans look forward to retirement as a time to accomplish secondary goals or to just take it easy, others view it as the bane of their working lives.

It is a situation that must be faced by almost everyone in the labor force, except those who are self-employed or who work for the federal government.

"WORK IS good," said Alice M. Brophy, the 66-year-old director of the New York City Mayor's Office for the Aging. "So much of one's structure is tied up in one's work and professional activities. Mandatory retirement is mandatory unemployment. So many older people are living at or near poverty levels."

The census study said about 16 per cent of the 22.4 million elderly in this country are below the poverty line.

MANY FIRMS are willing to review an employe's competency and health after age 65, if the person is needed and wants to continue working. But for most companies and institutions this is rare.

To harness the expertise of exceptional workers, a few firms have started retiree "skills banks." These allow former employes to be hired on a contract basis for specific projects and programs or to train younger staffers.

"IT'S DONE fairly frequently here, probably a minimum of 30 or so times a year," said Dan Knowles, director of personnel of the Grumman Aerospace Crop. "It provides you with the means of helping the company and also training younger people."

Most older Americans do not work after retiring. According to a recent Census Bureau study, only 22 per cent of the men over 65 and 8.3 per cent of the women work.

IN 1950, almost half of the men over 65 worked. The proportion of working females over 65 has fluctuated between 8 and 11 per cent over the past few years. Census Bureau statisticians project this percentage to drop to 7.5 per cent by 1990.

Those who cannot make ends meet with Social Security and their pensions, face the leanness of the job market as well as discrimination when seeking work.

"I sent my resume to one company and shortly thereafter was called in for an interview," said Harry Lapow, the Greenwich Village photographer. "I was asked my age, and the interviewer said: 'Damn it, you know better than to call me.'"

Karen Anne Quinlan now in nursing home

MORRIS PLAINS, N.J. (AP) — Karen Anne Quinlan, the comatose woman whose right to die became a celebrated court case, has been moved under tight security from St. Clare's Hospital in Denville to the Morris View Nursing Home here.

Miss Quinlan was moved by ambulance late Wednesday. At least two patrol cars escorted the ambulance in a slow fivemile trip to the nursing home, where about 25 Morris County sheriff's deputies waited to keep away reporters.

The young woman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Quinlan, preceded the ambulance by a few minutes. Lights in the nursing home were put out as the couple arrived by car with their attorney, Paul Armstrong.

The ambulance backed up to the front door and deputies huddled as a stretcher covered by white sheets was carried into the county-run facility.

Miss Quinlan, 22, who has been in a coma for more than a year, was removed from the hospital through a seldom-used exit to a waiting ambulance manned by volunteers from Jefferson Township. The Quinlan family lives in Landing, which is some distance from Jefferson Township.

In a statement to reporters at the nursing home, Armstrong said: "The transfer was decided upon by Mr. Quinlan in the exercise of the authority granted to him by the state Supreme Court in its humane and farsighted judgment rendered on March 31."

In its landmark decision, the high court ruled Miss Quinlan's father could make arrangements to disconnect the hospital respirator that sustained her breathing. The respirator was removed May 22 and Miss Quinlan has been breathing on her own since.

Miss Quinlan entered the coma April 15, 1975, after apparently ingesting a combination of tranquilizers and alcohol. Doctors have said she has irreversible brain damage and is in a chronic vegetative state.

Her parents said they initiated the court action to allow her to "die with dignity."

College to offer four new courses next week

Four courses, ranging from mountaineering to powder-puff mechanics, will be offered next week by Midland College's department of community services.

The course slate also includes cake decorating and the care of house plants.

Mountaineer Richard Galle will teach mountain climbing at 7-9 p.m. Monday through June 17 and June 21 and 22 in room 175 of the science-faculty building. The course will cover rappelling, piton-craft, friction climbing, belaying, care of equipment and conditioning for climbing.

Wrapping up the course will be a weekend trip to the Davis Mountains to practice climbing techniques. The course fee is $13.

Bob Jackson will instruct powder-puff mechanics at 7-9 p.m. Monday through June 17 and June 21 and 22 in room 128 of the occupational-technical building. Fee for this course on the basic operation and maintenance of the automobile is $12.

The class on the selection, culture and care of house plants will be taught by Vannah Kleinbeck at 7-9 p.m. Monday through June 17. Fee for the course is $8, and instruction will be in room 174, science-faculty building.

Wanda Cunningham will show students how to decorate cakes at 7-9 p.m. June 14-17 and 21-22 in room 152, science-faculty building. The course fee is $12.

Those interested in the courses may get additional information by dialing 684-7851, extensions 216 or 147 or by visiting departmental offices in the occupational-technical building on the MC campus.

R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's top economic adviser said today that a midyear review has prompted the administration to stick with its original forecast for 1976, including that of continued high unemployment, despite the nation's "sustained and durable" recovery from recession.

Chairman Alan Greenspan of the President's Council of Economic Advisers said that the nation should not expect the large gains in economic output of the last nine months to continue at such a high level.

Despite substantial improvements in recent weeks, he said the administration still believes the jobless rate may be 7 per cent or more at the end of the year.

"As of midyear ... there did not appear to be compelling reasons to make major changes in the over-all outlook for 1976," Greenspan told the Joint Economic Committee.

However, Greenspan said the rate of inflation probably would be slightly better than the 5.9 per cent increase forecast by the council last January.

And the increase in the nation's Gross National Product likely would be somewhat greater than the council's earlier forecast of a 6.2 per cent gain, he said.

Although he did not mention specific forecasts for the year, he said the nation's underlying rate of inflation probably has been reduced to a range of 5 to 6 per cent.

Greenspan said the gains in employment and the drop in unemployment, from the recession's high of 8.9 per cent to 7.3 per cent last month, have been dramatic. Even so, he offered no change in the earlier official forecast of a jobless rate of from 7 per cent to 7.5 per cent at the end of 1976.

While the economy may not match the gains of past nine months, when over-all economic output increased at an annual rate of 8.4 per cent, Greenspan said most evidence points to a sustained and durable recovery in the year ahead.

He said the low rate of inflation, averaging about 3.5 per cent during the past four months, probably cannot be sustained because food prices should begin increasing slightly again after declining during the first part of this year.

He said the nation needs to exercise restraint in its money and spending policies in order to keep the economic recovery from igniting inflation again.

"Unless we can accomplish this we cannot safely count on a continued deceleration in inflation. Indeed we cannot even count on being able to avoid another serious future recession," he added.

Salvation Army drive reaches 38 per cent

Total donations of $133,575 were reported at the second report meeting of the Salvation Army Development Fund Wednesday at the Hilton Hotel.

New donations of $50,100 were added to previously reported donations of $83,475. The purpose of the drive is to raise $350,000 for expansion and consolidation of physical facilities for the Midland division of the Salvation Army.

Ed Magruder, chairman of the pattern gifts division, reported the group had raised $118,725, 48 per cent of its $245,000 quota. Previously reported for that division was $74,225.

Lloyd McDonald, co-chairman of the special gifts division reported $14,850, 14 per cent of the quota for that division. Of that amount, $9,250 was previously reported.

The overall drive has achieved 38 per cent of the $350,000 goal. The campaign is due to end in two weeks. Another report meeting has been scheduled Wednesday.

Lions to move to new Hilton

The Downtown Lions Club next Wednesday will shift its permanent meeting place to the Civic Room in the new Midland Hilton, President Victor Horn announced at this week's meeting held in the American Legion Hall.

The club held its meetings in Hotel Scharbauer more than 30 years before moving to the American Legion Hall for catered meals when the hotel was demolished.

School offers sewing classes

Sewing classes for adults will be offered free of charge at Austin Freshman School beginning Monday and lasting until June 30. Classes will meet from 1 to 3 p.m.

Classes for students ages 13 through 15 are in progress and will last until June 25. Interested students still may enroll by attending the classes from 8 until 11 a.m.

Carolyn George, homemaking teacher, is instructor for the classes. All classes meet in the Austin homemaking department. Registration will be during classes.

City sponsors entertainment

Free watermelon and live entertainment will be offered to the entire city Friday from 8:30-10:30 p.m. at Wadley-Barron Park, North A and Cuthbert streets.

The feast will be sponsored by the teen activities division of Midland's Parks and Recreation Department.

Mary Hill, a Midland clothing store employe, will sing with guitar accompaniment at the gazebo for the two-hour event.

It says, "This includes nearly half of all workers in commerce and industry in the United States and three quarters of local, state and federal government civilian personnel."
