LIFE AMONG THE FLOWERS — This giant moth uses his extended bill in lifting some of the nectar from flowers in a local yard, either unafraid or oblivious of a human lurking nearby. Most of the insects which share the sweetness the flora has to offer will agree that this is one of the loveliest springs in many years in this area. Spring, however, turns to summer officially next week.

Teen-ager fires blanks at Queen

LONDON (AP) — A British teen-ager, described as a jobless former marine wearing a Prince Charles and Lady Diana souvenir button, ran up and fired six blanks at Queen Elizabeth II from a range of 10 feet Saturday as she rode horseback through London in a pageant watched by millions.

The monarch was startled but unhurt and continued on to the Trooping of the Color, the biggest ceremonial event of the royal calendar marking her official birthday.

Several policemen and a scarlet-coated British army guardsman pounced on the young man, who reportedly had been waiting hours for the monarch to appear. As he was dragged away in handcuffs by agents of Scotland Yard's Special Branch there were shouts in the crowd of "lynch him."

Authorities identified him as 17-year-old Marcus Simon Sarjeant of Folkestone, England, and charged him under the 1842 Treason Act with "willfully discharging at the person of Her Majesty the Queen a blank cartridge pistol with intent to alarm her." The charge carries a maximum penalty of seven years in prison. Sarjeant was to appear Monday in Bow Street magistrates court.

Neighbors of Sarjeant described him as a "quiet, well-behaved youth who never got into trouble." Friends said he joined the Royal Marines last year but left after the three-month trial period because he did not like the "bullying."

The 55-year-old monarch's horse, Burmese, reared at the noise of the blanks, and one witness reported a "look of fear" flashed across the queen's face. Her husband, Prince Philip, and the heir to the throne, Prince Charles, spurred their mounts to shield the queen, seen by thousands in the crowd and millions more on television.

But Elizabeth, dressed in scarlet military tunic and black riding skirt, controlled the horse, and within a minute she was again smiling and waving.

The attack was believed to be the first such assault on a British monarch. Scotland Yard sources, who asked not to be identified, said it was certain to lead to a tightening of security around the royal family — particularly before the wedding of Prince Charles to Lady Diana Spencer on July 29. Throngs of visitors are expected to jam London for the event.

A Scotland Yard spokesman said the gunman, who had been standing in the crowd lining the royal route, fired the blanks from a "good replica" pistol — a realistic copy of a handgun that can be adapted to shoot bullets.

David Wright, 35, watching with his 9-year-old daughter Debrah, said: "I saw plumes of smoke just above ground level and heard the shots."

One man drowns in flood waters

By the Associated Press

At least one person died Saturday as heavy rains and high waters swept wide sections of water-logged Central and South Central Texas, forcing evacuations in San Marcos, isolated by flooded streets and highways.

Police, firefighters and civil defense officials, asked to help move out flood-threatened residents in the Central Texas city, were having difficulty maneuvering through high water, according to a police dispatcher. "We've got vehicles floating down the street," said dispatcher Julie Wallace.

A spokesman for the Texas Disaster Emergency Services in Austin said National Guardsmen were dispatched to San Marcos to help with evacuations.

City streets were impassable because of high water and authorities closed Interstate 35, the city's major highway artery, Ms. Wallace said. No injuries were reported in San Marcos, or in Austin, where another round of flooding in areas bordering creeks forced the evacuation of at least 150 families, authorities said.

High waters washed out Potter Bridge and "some fools" trying to ride the flood in a canoe wound up stranded in trees after their boat overturned, according to Curtis Weeks, public information officer for the Travis County Sheriff's Department.

Police used bullhorns to warn residents of the flooding danger, officials said. However, many residents in areas close to creeks already had moved to higher ground.

A Houston man died after being swept away by flood waters in Madison County, according to the Department of Public Safety.

The body of Billy McFerrin, 45, was found about 4:25 p.m., 16 hours after a pickup truck was washed into Bedias Creek.

McFerrin's body was recovered on a barbed wire fence, about 15 feet from the truck, after the high water dropped about a foot, said Department of Public Safety Trooper Charles DeFord.

DPS officials said McFerrin was one of four people who managed to climb from the pickup after it plunged into the flooded creek.

'Victims' in CC holdup will be royally treated

Plans are under way to re-institute the Great Big Spring Hold-up, according to Mark Sheedy of the Chamber of Commerce.

At 3 p.m. Tuesday, a highway patrolman and Sheedy will be on the look-out for an out-of-state motorist traveling with his family. The patrolman and Sheedy will then pull over the family, and invite them to spend the night in Big Spring. A motel room will be provided free, courtesy of Mid-Continent Inn. The family will be given "Great Big Spring Hold-Up" T-shirts, from Big Spring Athletics, and will also be treated to a meal at the Brandin' Iron.

Later, the family will be given free tickets to "Alice in Wonderland," treated to ice cream at Baskin and Robbins, and on Wednesday, given a free breakfast at Herman's Restaurant. A trip to the Heritage Museum will follow, and then the family will be escorted out of town.

"Any area businesses which want to contribute to the hold-up may contact the Chamber of Commerce," said Sheedy. A box of gifts will be prepared for the family.

Another hold-up is slated June 26. Idea behind the hold-up is to create goodwill ambassadors from the families, Sheedy explained.

Far eastern pilot, marathon runner

Bigony took the long way home

By TOMMY HART

How many people do you know who played football for a 30-point underdog team that held the nation's No. One collegiate rated team to a standoff, worked for the famed founder of the Flying Tigers and logged upward to 30,000 hours as a pilot without ever having been involved in a serious air accident?

Weldon Bigony, a native of Howard County, has done all that and much, much more. Weldon, accompanied by his German-born wife, Amalie, has been visiting his mother, Mrs. D.F. Bigony, and other relatives and friends in this area the past week.

Now residents of the Miami, Fla., area, where Weldon entered into retirement after flying for Air Jamaica for six years, the Bigonys plan a move to the Austin, Tex., area sometime next year. They acquired a building lot on a recent visit there.

Retirement doesn't mean sitting in a rocking chair on the front porch for Weldon. He hopes to take a few college courses necessary to earn him a license to sell real estate and he is keeping all options open. He still loves to fly and undoubtedly will find ways to get into the air from time to time.

The raw-boned West Texan, with an infectious grin as big as all outdoors, was the son of a former Big Spring postal clerk, D.F. Bigony, who relocated his family on a farm north of Big Spring. D.F.'s widow lives there to this day.

Weldon lettered in football three years for Big Spring High School, then enrolled at Baylor University where he played under Morley Jennings and Frank Kimbrough.

Bigony, a defensive back, was a member of the 1941 Baylor team which entered the game against the University of Texas as a 30-point underdog and played the Longhorns to a 7-7 deadlock. At the time, Texas was rated No. One among the collegiate superpowers. The Bears, quarterbacked by Dwight Parks, marched the length of the field in the fourth quarter to tie the score. Life Magazine, which had carried pictures of Texas players on its cover the week prior to the game salvaged a little face by running photos of members of the Baylor team on the inside front cover in a later edition.

War had erupted in Europe and rather than wait to be drafted, Weldon left college after 3½ years to go to work in the Kaiser shipyards in Northern California as a welder. He remained there 1½ years, then entered the Naval Air Corps, returning to Dallas to take his physical before undertaking flying lessons.

He was a natural pilot, it turned out.

WORDS OF FREEDOM

Every Flag Day I do something a lot of people save for November and Thanksgiving Day: I say a quiet prayer of thanks that this Nation is enduring and that there are so many wonderful people, young and old, rich and poor, children of all ages, who haven't yet, won't now, and never intend to give up on America or Americans.

This Flag has the power to take more than 200 million of us, with all our differences, and make us one people.

—Bob Hope

AMALIE, WELDON BIGONY

He graduated from the Corpus Christi (Tex.) Naval Air Station in 1945 and shipped out to the Far East where he started flying military air transports. The war was over by then and Weldon was discharged in Shanghai in October 1946. Once out of uniform, he hired out to the Great China Aviation Corporation for a couple of years at a time Chiang Kai Chek was in power.

The Red Chinese Army had by then started a move to oust Chiang and his followers.

In December, 1946, Bigony accepted employment with Gen. Edward Chennault's Civil Air Transport, flying craft that carried both cargo and passengers. Bigony used Shanghai, Peking and Canton as home bases briefly before the Red Chinese hordes began to move the Nationals out of mainland China.

Weldon had met a pretty girl named Amalie Harpinger, who had left the Bavarian section of Germany at the age of six to join an aunt in the Far East. Ultimately, the two were married June 11, 1949, in Canton, China, by a Protestant minister.

After Chiang's forces had been driven out of mainland China, Bigony's outfit continued to fly out of Taiwan. He was at home in everything from DC 6s to Boeing 727s and Convair 80s.

He remembers well when Gen. Chennault, who had organized the famed Flying Tiger outfit, took leave to return to the states, where he was to die of cancer.

Bigony stayed on to fly with other airlines. He moved his home base from Taiwan to Tokyo in 1961, stayed there a few years and then went back to Taiwan for about 16 years. He was to return briefly to Tokyo, then go to Saigon before the latter city fell to the North Vietnamese.

Bigony flirted with possible disaster on one flight near Shanghai when the weather closed in on him and his instruments went bonkers. East bound at the time, he thought he was going to have to ditch the plane at sea but he broke out of the soup at 500 feet and flew for a while before recognizing any landmark. Ultimately, he landed at the Kiatok Airport in Hong Kong, practically without fuel.

Weldon returned to the states in 1974 and accepted work as a pilot for Air Jamaica. He made his last flight for the airlines in February of this year.

Amalie Bigony speaks the mandarin dialect fluently, occasionally interprets for her husband when the two visit Chinese restaurants. She still has three sisters living in Germany. The Bigonys have visited there and plan to go again before they move permanently from the Miami area.

Three children were born to the Bigony union. The oldest is Mark Wayne D. Bigony, 29, ushered into this world in Tokyo. He is now enrolled in a Marine Carpentry course at the University of Seattle. He attended Texas Tech one year.

Twins were born to the Bigonys in Taiwan in 1954. One is Bruce Allen Bigony, currently studying International Law in UCLA. The other is Vickie, who works for the Department of Defense in Vienna, Austria. She is fluent in both German and Chinese and, like her father, athletically inclined.

Always a stickler for physical training, Weldon competed in the Orange Bowl Marathon the past January, covering the 26.2 miles in 4:38:57.6, although he developed leg cramps after about 20 miles. It was good enough for 1,423rd place among the 1,642 who finished. The total number of entries was 2,306. Benji Durden won the event.

Weldon took up running eight years ago and had covered 18 miles in a previous event. Not many men his age can run a block without caving in.

Weldon has shown "true grit" in almost everything he's tried but he comes by it naturally. His mother, now in her 80s, enrolled in Texas Tech five years ago to study Education. At the time, she expressed hope of becoming a teacher, although the retirement age for teachers in Texas is 65. Two of her fellow students at Tech at the time were grandsons.

There's also a free one you can send for, "Guide to Consumer Product Information" is a 191-page book compiled by and available through Bristol-Myers Company, Department NP, 345 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10154.

It gives tips for using and storing non-prescription drugs, selecting the right drug for a problem, and information on safe use of 50 most common drugs, household products and personal care products.

Hunger bikers launch trip

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The 33 members of the Transamerica Bike Team hope their planned 4,219-mile trip from Fort Lauderdale to San Francisco will promote more than physical fitness.

If all goes according to schedule, the ride — aimed at raising funds for the Fort Lauderdale-based End World Hunger organization — will finish at the Golden Gate Bridge two months from now.

By then, they hope to have raised a million dollars in pledge supports from nightly hunger-awareness films, speeches and seminars in the state capitals, towns and hamlets they'll ride through during the trip, which will begin June 20 and end Aug. 16.

The journey will carry the riders through parts of Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, Utah, Nevada and California at 70 to 100 miles a day.

GATOR ICED — Dallas Zoo director Larry Calvin inspects the carcass of an alligator, shot May 15 in the Trinity River near Hutchins, Texas, at the Dallas Zoo freezer. The 11-foot-9-inch alligator is now the prized possession of the Dallas Museum of Natural History and after a quick trip to a Colorado taxidermist will be placed on public display.

Tornado kills three

CARDINGTON, Ohio (AP) — A tornado smashed through the center of this small town Saturday afternoon, uprooting trees, crushing cars and tearing the roofs off buildings. Three people, including one infant, were killed and at least 20 others injured, officials said.

Every store in the nine-block downtown area sustained damage. Many parked vehicles were crushed by flying bricks and falling trees.

John Harbough, a supervisor at Morrow County Hospital in nearby Mount Gilead, said, "Donald William Carson, 9 months, died during treatment." Harbough said another person also died during treatment, and the third was dead on arrival. Identifications were withheld pending notification of relatives.

Gov. James A. Rhodes called out the Ohio National Guard to secure the area and was on his way to Cardington along with the head of the state disaster services agency, said Rhodes spokesman Chuck Shipley.

"The damage is heavy. Electricity and other services are out," Shipley said. He said one person had died in the storm, and 15 to 20 others were injured.

An amateur radio operator monitored in Columbus, about 50 miles to the south, said the town was extensively damaged.

"The whole town is a shambles," said the operator, a member of the National Weather Service's amateur radio system. "Four to seven families are trapped in a building. People are laid out in streets waiting for ambulances."

"It pretty well tore the town up," said Morrow County Deputy Sheriff Carroll Sears. "We've got buildings down, trees have been uprooted, power lines are down, we've got gas leaks and people are injured."

Israeli plane downed

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syrian jets shot down an Israeli spy plane near Damascus Saturday and Syrian armored units began war maneuvers, the military announced. Israel conceded a pilotless drone was apparently shot down over Syria or Lebanon.

The action rekindled the six-week-old missile crisis between the two Middle East antagonists that had been dormant since Israeli warplanes raided and destroyed Iraq's nuclear reactor near Baghdad last Sunday. U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib flew to Saudi Arabia to continue efforts to defuse the crisis.

Syrian armored forces, backed by air force jets and helicopter gunships, staged war exercises designed to train in rapid intervention to "repulse a surprise enemy attack and then crush enemy defenses," the official Sana news agency reported.

The location of the drills was shown later on Syria's state television was not disclosed. The commanding general of the maneuvers was quoted as telling his troops to "keep up combat readiness for the decisive battle against the enemy."

A military communiqué on the downing of the plane said "air force jet fighters intercepted the intruding aircraft and shot it down northeast of Damascus." It did not indicate what kind of plane was brought down or whether it was piloted, saying only "the wreckage has been collected."

In Tel Aviv, the Israeli military command said an unmanned drone failed to return to base and apparently was downed during a "routine flight" over Syria and Lebanon.

Habib was in Saudi Arabia on his second visit to the oil-rich kingdom since the missile crisis arose. Diplomatic sources could not say how long Habib would stay but said he was to meet Prince Fahd in Riyadh after a briefing by U.S. Ambassador Robert Nuemann in Jidda.

Saudi Arabia sent two emissaries here for talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad after Habib's trip to Riyadh last month.

Habib's efforts to defuse the Mideast tensions have been complicated by Israel's destruction of a nuclear reactor on the outskirts of Baghdad, the Iraqi capital, a week ago.

Arab seeks compromise anti-Israeli proposal

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Arab League Ambassador Clouvis Maksud is trying to win member support for a compromise anti-Israeli proposal to the U.N. "that will not disappoint the Arabs and not draw a veto from the United States," he said Saturday.

The U.N. Security Council adjourned until Monday morning after 1½ hours in the second day of debate over the league's request Israel be punished for destroying an Iraqi nuclear reactor outside Baghdad in an air strike a week ago.

Maksud, permanent U.N. observer for the league, told The Associated Press he was conferring with other representatives of the league's 21 members on his proposal to submit two resolutions instead of one to the 15-nation Security Council.

His purpose would be to separate condemnation of Israel from Arab calls for broad sanctions against Israel in the hope U.S. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick would vote for one, even while vetoing the other.

Rodeo photographs will be on display

Coinciding with the upcoming Big Spring Rodeo, June 24-27, an outstanding exhibit of the famous Stryker Collection of Rodeo Photographs, will be on display at Heritage Museum, June 19 through 30.

The Caylor Art Book got off to a good start at the annual chuck wagon barbecue, at which it was introduced, and is also available.

Mrs. Atwell says that both these books merit a place in any home — and would make wonderful gifts.

The Big Spring Centennial Committee had a few souvenir plates and programs left over which they brought to the museum to sell for any one who would like either or both items. All proceeds go back to the centennial committee.

Clayton thinks he has played game by rules

By JAY ROSSER

Harris-Mann Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — In at least one way, serving as a Texas lawmaker is akin to playing a schoolyard football game: the kid that owns the ball gets to call the rules.

And in the 150-member Texas House, Billy Wayne Clayton not only owns the ball and calls the rules, he also names the players.

Clayton, who has but a special legislative session to deal with before finishing his fourth and final term as Speaker of the House, prides himself on his fair play as the means of achieving a happy home.

"I think I had more cooperation from the members than the previous speakers," Clayton said. "I think the fair play and the openness and them being able to trust you is the important thing."

Some of Clayton's staunchest supporters, including Rep. Pete Laney of Hale Center, said the speaker's strongest point, or maybe his weakest, is his penchant for bending over backwards for his enemies.

"I think the speaker's office is just as powerful as the person in it," said Laney, a Clayton lieutenant. "I think he's been a leader."

Some of the people who have benefited the most, Laney claimed, are those that opposed Clayton.

"I think that probably if you'll go back and look, the people that benefited legislatively and probably benefited the most are people that aren't Clayton supporters," Laney said.

Conservative lawmakers Laud Clayton, himself a conservative politician whose roots lie amidst the West Texas farmland near his current home of Springlake. Moderate to liberal Democrats, what few there are, tend to oppose him.

One lawmaker who opposes Clayton characterized his tenure in office as an "establishmentarianism and lobby kind of leadership."

"There's no question about him being effective. He's very effective," said the lawmaker, who chose to remain unidentified for fear of retribution during the special session.

"But the question is whether our public policy is right," he continued. "Look at public education. People and teachers are fleeing our public schools in droves and we don't do anything about it."

Clayton proponents point to the speaker's choice of committee chairman to illustrate his fairness. There are, they count, six Republican committee chairmen, two women, three blacks and one Mexican-American.

"He's including his allies in the leadership positions, that's all," said the lawmaker. "My objection is the way in which the participation in leadership positions depends solely on your willingness to tow the line."

Above all, Clayton is a politician. And any politician worth his weight in bumper stickers compromises. What Clayton does best, most members agree, is just that: compromise.

"I find Clayton's mind to be, by nature, set to work out deals and to compromise," said Rep. Bob Bush of Sherman. "His instincts as a legislator are excellent. He uses his power in a way that is as subtle as can be under the circumstances. He is shrewd enough where he has a different deal with everybody."

Clayton innows the House members, Bush said.

"He hot-boxes the ones he needs to," Bush added. "Obviously he follows a system of take care of your own, but I don't see that he goes out of his way to step on anyone. He's not that stupid."

Perhaps the greatest opportunity for Clayton to take advantage of his position came this session during the decennial redistricting battle to reapportion the state's 150 House seats.

It was the perfect opportunity for Clayton, who appointed members of the House redistricting committee, to pair non-term members and moderate liberals with other incumbents in a single district.

The final House redistricting plan paired 16 incumbents in eight districts. At least five of those pairs involved those not considered team players.

But conspicuously missing from the list was Dallas Rep. John Bryant who battled Clayton for the speakership.

Discussing his lack of vindictiveness, Clayton said, "If I was going to do it that way, I would have gone after people like Bryant and (Rep. Ted) Lyon of Mesquite, another Clayton dissident, and some of those folks."

"I saw some maps that had them paired and I just told them I wouldn't go for that."

And Laney, asked if that wouldn't have been too obvious a vengeful move, probably summed it up best. "It's all politics," he said pointedly.

Trappers will be discussed

County, state and federal trappers will be among the items discussed by Howard County commissioners Monday.

Bonnie Franklin will discuss the trappers with commissioners. Also slated is a discussion with Bill Mims, county engineer, concerning Chaparral Road. Jimmy Taylor is also set to discuss the upcoming rodeo with commissioners.

Sheriff A.N. Standard will be present Monday to talk about personnel and transportation. An air conditioner, and new employees are also on the agenda, as is a budget workshop. A discussion with Jackie Olson, county auditor, concerning bids on county purchases, is also slated.

SEAFARING GRANNY — Ann Gash, a deeply-tanned 58-year-old grandmother from Australia, sits on her 26-foot sailboat Stella Ilmo in Marina Del Rey boat harbor in Los Angeles recently. Gash arrived in Los Angeles a month ago after completing a solo voyage from her homeland. She departed Friday for the return sail home.

Sailing grandma setting her sights on Australia

MARINA DEL REY, Calif. (AP) — Alone with her flute and the sea, a glass of rum and a sunset, Ann Gash, a grandmother of seven, is returning to Australia in her 26-foot wooden-hulled sailboat.

Ms. Gash, 58, arrived in Los Angeles a month ago after crossing the Pacific from Australia by way of Tahiti, Hawaii and San Francisco. She left Friday and expects to arrive in Honolulu in three to five weeks, stop at several Pacific islands and reach Sydney in October or November.

The 5-foot-5 mother of six is something of a folk hero to others who like to sail alone. She believes she has spent more time sailing the oceans of the world than any other woman.

She spent 2½ years sailing around the world alone (except for a stretch from Ghana to England) from June 1975 to December 1977. She sailed to the United States this time "mainly to sail under the Golden Gate. I wanted that so much. It was fantastic."

"I love the seas. Love it out there alone," she said. "No telephone ringing. No one knocking at my door. The challenge. The adventure. 'I worked all my life,' Ms. Gash said. "My husband and I are divorced. My children are all grown up and on their own. I don't know what I'll do next."

The sailboat, the Stella Ilmo, is well stocked with a three-month supply of food, 35 gallons of water, a flute, 60 books and six bottles of rum.

"I have a lot of rum with lemon and honey at the end of each day as the sun sets and I'm cooking my dinner," she said. "I'm never lonely. I'm in tune with everything — the compass course, the wear and tear on the boat."

"I read an average of a book a day. I love to navigate. Every day I write letters and spend time playing my flute," she said. "Worry? I don't know the meaning of the word."

Ms. Gash said sailing alone is her way of staying young. "I don't want to grow old," she said.

She credits a broken back for her interest in sailing.

"I was a goat breeder for 15 years. Then I smashed my car and broke my back and had to give up the goats. And I took up boats," she said.

Soon she was spending all her free time sailing and reading everything she could get her hands on about sailing. She bought the Stella Ilmo in February 1974 and set out alone on an around-the-world voyage 16 months later.

In Ghana, her boat was wrecked by a tugboat as she was tied up at a pier.

Despite protests, LEAA will be allowed to die

By STEVE SNIDER

States News Service
WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, like the Carter administration before it, has decided the best way to respond to the uncertain record of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration is to let the agency die.

Say goodbye to the nation's first block grant program.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements hated the idea when Jimmy Carter made his move last year to cut off the billions of dollars in federal grants from LEAA to the states in the dozen years of its life.

Clements wrote Carter letters of protest, calling LEAA, which had planned to spend $20.5 million in Texas during 1981, "the lifeblood of the nation's effort to stem the frightening tide of crime." Critics argued there was no way to take the pulse of LEAA; no way to see if states had successfully integrated their law enforcement efforts with the locals with a minimum of federal guidance.

What could be measured appeared troubling. Under state authority, according to the Congressional Budget Office, cities got 52 percent of the block grant money to fight 83 percent of the crimes. Counties, with 17 percent of the money, got 48 percent of the crimes.

Although LEAA died, the block grant approach that made it unique at its inception remains as a key goal for Reagan. The general idea is that categorical grants — those designed for federal agencies to jolt out federal money for a specific purpose agreed upon by Congress — should be abandoned.

The administration plan calls for 44 separate education grants to be consolidated into two block grants; 48 health and social services programs would go into four block grants. Other consolidations would be done in areas like Indian programs and environmental grants.

Under the administration's education proposal, for example, money previously targeted for the handicapped, adult education and school libraries would be consolidated and reduced by 18.5 percent. Freed of federal requirements, local school districts could choose their own formula for spending the money and could even use federal dollars as a substitute for their own funds.

Clements still loves the idea, calling block grants "recognition that the best democracy is the one that is closest to the people. Working with our state legislature and local officials, we will be able to allocate these funds much more effectively."

Some skeptics have been convinced. Dallas Mayor Jack Ivans trooped into the White House the first week of June as an opponent of block grants and emerged a supporter.

But there were still questions. Evans said Clements told him the state has yet to devise a plan for administering the block grants.

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, who attended the same meeting, seemed wary of any state plan. "I like the block grants when the money goes from Washington to the cities, but frankly, the states don't have the staff or capacity to hand it," Cisneros said. "There will be some suffering and it's going to be difficult. We have very little influence over these things."

Apparently confident that Congress will go along, the administration is gearing up for the block grants. San Antonio's Bexar County Hospital District recently had a $1.54 million federal grant application approved for the establishment of a community clinic program. But in a May 27 letter to Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, Health and Human Services Secretary Richard Schweiker said there is no money to fund the plan.

In a statement the day before the mayors went to the White House, Gonzalez accused HHS of freezing funds to await future block grant distribution by the state.

"This is fine, but what he (Schweiker) doesn't say is that there will be 25 percent less money under the block grant program," said Gonzalez. "There won't be in any position to think about starting up community clinics, they'll be cutting out services that already exist."

Gonzalez' House colleagues are thought to be less than satisfied with the block grant idea, which will appear at voting time early next month as the "Federal Assistance Improvement Act of 1981."

The plan has already suffered setbacks in the House where subcommittees dealing with the major proposals have gone along with the 20 percent to 25 percent cuts, but have refused to fold several major categorical grants into the block grant.

Along with the debate have come predictions; educated guesses from the beneficial to the baleful about the future after this massive federal shift.

The president's special assistant for policy development, Robert Carleson, calls it "Reagan Federalism" — one of the tools "involved in getting from where we are today to where we want to be in the future." This future, he said, is one that permits "limited funds to be used more effectively by decision makers at the state and local level."

Former Massachusetts Republican Sen. Edward Brooke sees a return to the "state's rights era" with no guarantee that citizens or state legislatures will have any say in the use of the money.

"Block grants are not a step toward a federal-state partnership to meet specific needs, it's a step toward abandonment of federal responsibility," Brooke said. "It will set older Americans' against poor Americans, those interested in child care against the handicapped in a desperate battle over resources."

Rodeo in need of everyone's support

The Big Spring Rodeo and Cowboy Reunion will be coming along shortly and it deserves your support. After all, what else has been held here annually for 48 years and is so truly and uniquely western as a rodeo?

This wild west show has a colorful past. In the 1920s, a July the Fourth rodeo was held in the community baseball park located on the west side of Lancaster between Second and Third streets.

Everything then was held during daylight hours because the park was not equipped with lights. Later the Big Spring Rodeo Association was formed and land was purchased across the street west of what is now Howard College. Birdwell Lane was little more than a cow trail at the time.

IT WAS WHILE the rodeo was staged in that area that one cowboy shot to death another in front of an estimated 5,000 witnesses, most of whom thought the gun play was an act. The man who pulled the trigger was never brought to trial and later died himself.

The association sold off the property on Birdwell and 11th Place to acquire some acreage in the west part of where it built a bowl that is used to this day.

Such entertainers as Barbara Mandrell, Moe Bandy, Ken Curtis ('Festes' in 'Gun-smoke'), Michael Landon, Jim Ed Brown and others have served as added attractions in local rodeos.

It's no secret that there was some talk among directors of the association that the show might not be held this year. Expenses have gone through the ceiling and show promoters made some demands on the rodeo officials that proved hard to meet. Most of the directors, however, opted to try it again.

Rodeo buffs haven't cooled on the idea of supporting a rodeo that attracts the caliber of performers the one does here. However, there are problems associated with the show that rodeo officials and directors of the Howard County Fair may have to address themselves to before the situation improves dramatically. One concerns parking, the other the routing of traffic in and out of the parking area. There has been some incidences concerning vandalism, too, that haven't helped.

THE PARKING PROBLEM likely will call for some major engineering, since some of the land devoted to it is not level. The entrances to and the exits from the parking areas pose problems at 'rush hours,' too. The rodeo association uses a lot of water on the grounds to hold down the dust but invariably it dries out before a night's show is over.

The vandalism which occurs in the area from time to time can of course, be diminished, if not eliminated altogether, by proper patrolling.

These are problems which can and should be worked out. Rodeo has become one of America's favorite sports, adored by sophisticated city folks as well as those raised in the country.

Much concerning future shows may depend on how well this year's shows are supported. Rodeo clown Quail Dobbs has become a professional very much in demand on the rodeo circuit but he keeps returning here because of his love for the area. Not every rodeo association in the country has a Toots Mansfield, calf roper supreme, as one of its directors, as does the Big Spring show. The rodeo is an institution that deserves your support.

Bailout likely

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — At a time when it is in the process of lopping a million people off the food stamp rolls and cutting back other social programs to save money, the Senate is considering a $50 million bailout for manufacturers of baby clothing that was treated with Tris, a flame retardant that is a proven carcinogen.

When the Consumer Product Safety Commission banned the sale of Tris-treated clothing in this country four years ago, more than 100 manufacturers were left with stocks of the dangerous garments on hand. Some companies solved their problem by exporting the baby clothes; others held onto their inventories in hopes of being compensated by the federal government.

THERE ARE AT least 5 million Tris-treated garments in storage awaiting congressional action. Jimmy Carter vetoed a compensation move, but the bailout is now being pushed by the unlikely combination of Sens. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and Ted Kennedy, D-Mass.

Although the legal rationale behind the bailout is that manufacturers were caught in a bind by the government's ban, the practical politics behind Thurmond's and Kennedy's support is pretty obvious: Among the handful of firms that would benefit most by the compensation plan are the Riegel Textile Corp. and Stone

Manufacturing Co. of Greenville, S.C., and the William Carter Co. of Needham, Mass.

The Carter company took the precaution of retaining Thomas Sussman, former staff director of the Senate Judiciary Committee when Kennedy was chairman, to lobby for its interests. Sussman told his associate Tony Capaccio he has left the active lobbying to a textile industry association and has not spoken to either Kennedy or members of his staff.

A spokesman for Thurmond said his office is in "close contact" with a Riegel Corp. vice president on the legislation.

One puzzling feature of the bailout bill is that it might allow indemnification to be paid to companies that dumped their Tris-contaminated baby clothing on unsuspecting parents in foreign countries, mainly in Latin America.

In May 1978, the product safety commission called 61 manufacturers and determined that 22 at most had exported or tried to export their Tris-treated stocks. Leaving aside the dubious morality of selling baby clothes known to have been treated with a cancer-causing substance, it's obvious that companies that successfully unloaded their inventories should be identified if compensation time eventually arrives. But the commission has not disclosed the identities of the companies to Congress.

Around the rim How many votes?

Some legislators blame the census for their redistricting problems. A Texas politician doesn't care how many people there are — just how many will vote for him.

And occasionally you hear a question like this: "Why do we need juvenile detention homes when we already have the public schools?"

HERALD AD-VISOR, Don Ferguson, who celebrates his birthday Monday, notes the television writers' strike has really had an effect. "On some comedy shows, ad libs have had to be made up on the spot," Don says.

Television will survive as long as the writers of commercials stay on the job. Nothing could jolt the system so much as underarm deodorant have to sell itself.

FLOYD FRANKLIN GREEN, son of Floyd and Sandra Green, observes his second birthday Tuesday. Floyd, former girls softball coach supreme, says if there's a drawn out baseball strike, look for TV to meet the challenge in the only way it knows — with reruns of games already played.

Yes, it would be nice, Guv Clements, but the Legislature HAS to come back.

It's probably a good idea for the legislators to be in recess. Before they left the capitol they were beginning to find new ways to turn normal, bad bills into disasters.

Clements can either run for reelection or settle for a single term. He's been mulling over both of these alternatives — but not necessarily giving them equal time.

FLIPPANT FRED DAVIS, former radio whiz and now a member of the medical profession, hasn't found any test of willpower to equal the struggle between an itch and the determination not to scratch. Fred's birthday is next Sunday.

Former Herald wire editor, Marie Honeyey Canning, now slaving away as a Lubbock Associated-Press-Journal staffer and who celebrates her birthday Saturday, reports in Saudi Arabia the people have learned that money isn't everything. Oil is.

My banking aunt, Leona Daniels, points out couples in Oklahoma tend to stay together longer if they have children or OU football season tickets.

MY WONDERFUL AUNT, Mildred Ladd, discloses you learn a lot after you leave high school. "One of the first lessons is that when a bank asks for identification it doesn't mean your senior class ring," she adds.

AND NOW DEAR READERS, my first "scoop" of the last 10 years. Singer Anita Bryant, an ex-neighbor in Tulsa, is moving from Tulsa to Selma, Ala., this month.

She has bought an interest in a dress shop in Selma which is the headquarters of her "Protect America's Children's" organization.

Friends say a story two weeks ago in a national publication that she might reconcile with her ex-husband "just ain't true." Anita and Bob Green, former Miami, Fla., disc jockey, were divorced last summer.

Anita is still seeing Selma multimillionaire industrialist Larry Striplin, but there are no plans for an immediate wedding.

Selma, about the same size as Big Spring, will provide the small-town atmosphere Anita says she wants for her children, Gloria, 15, and twins Barbara and Billy, 12.

They have been living in a rented house in southeast Tulsa and the children attended Jenks public schools last year. Jenks is a suburb of Tulsa.

A fourth child, Bobby, 17, lives with his father in Florida.

Anita plans to continue singing professionally.

That travelin' man, Kenneth Hart, to the rescue just in case you missed this ad in a Houston newspaper: "For sale — nice $30,000 house. Will sacrifice for $120,000."

Liberals in Congress say they don't mind laughing at President Reagan's jokes, if he'll quit trying to enact them into law.

"Hey! You bankers are supposed to be on my side."

Soviet shadow

Evans, Novak

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — The brutal Soviet campaign to intimidate

Pakistan escalated two weeks ago when a senior Soviet ministry official bluntly told the Pakistan ambassador in Moscow: "Tell your government that it is making undeclared war on the Soviet Union."

This bully-boy game, as the Russians mire themselves more deeply in their war against the brave Afghan resistance, is designed to force Pakistan to accept the Soviet-imposed Babrak Karmal regime in neighboring Afghanistan. If Pakistan wits, other Moslem states might follow and ratify Russia's absorption of Afghanistan.

DESPITE THE INTIMIDATION and the low estate of Pakistan's military forces, President Zia has a different idea. He made that plain to us in an exclusive interview at the presidential mansion in Rawalpindi.

"We feel compromise is not the answer," Zia told us. "The Soviets have got to be made to believe that what they have done in Afghanistan is not right. They must rectify their position" — get out of Afghanistan.

The refusal to knuckle under is certain to intensify Soviet military action against Pakistan, however veiled in the guise of "hot pursuit" of Afghan freedom-fighters seeking respite in Pakistan. Soviet intervention in Pakistan, however, will force President Reagan to lead the West into making a stand at long last with something more than a brief and spineless grain embargo against Moscow's march through South Asia.

But having treated Pakistan as a pariah for 15 years, amidst self-serving cries from liberals who managed to end all military aid, the U.S. finds Pakistan dangerously strapped. An immediate emergency shipment of new weapons is essential for this country to handle any Soviet thrust across the 1,400-mile Afghan border. Such a thrust is predictable as the opening Soviet move, perhaps to destabilize Zia.

Whatever the preliminary objective, Soviet troops on the march in Pakistan would be another humiliation for the U.S. with this implicit dare: What are you going to do about it?

We asked Zia if Soviet pressure on him in the end might force him to back down and make a deal with Moscow. "They have tried their best," he said. "There has been military pressure. They have knocked out some of our border posts. We have suffered some casualties. They know they can teach Pakistan a lesson. It is the freedom fighters in Afghanistan that are keeping the Russians engaged."

NO, ZIA SAID, Pakistan will not yield to the far greater pressures expected from the Soviets in the near future. He sees only two ways to stop the Soviet march: pressure of world opinion or arms. "World Opinion" includes both the will and power of the West, even though both lag behind the Soviets, and the Islamic world, which includes vast areas lying inside Russia itself — Azerbaijan to the West and Uzbekistan, Tajikistan and other Soviet Moslem states along the Soviet-Afghan border.

Deprived of U.S. military aid, Pakistan today is at the bottom of its military barrel. Zia does not want an alliance with the U.S., only credit to buy weapons.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Do you think it is possible for a person to know the exact time (the day and the hour) he was converted? — J.B.T.

DEAR J.B.T.: Certainly there are many Christians who can recall the exact moment when they came to trust Jesus Christ as their personal Lord and Savior. Perhaps they came to Christ during an evangelistic meeting or church service, or perhaps they were led to Christ by another Christian.

Their experiences may be very different, but — like Saul of Tarsus, who met Christ on the road to Damascus — they remember vividly their first experience with Christ. This was true in my own life.

But that is not true for all Christians. My wife, for example, grew up in a Christian home. Her parents were missionaries in China, and almost from birth she was taught the Gospel. She said that she can never remember a time when she did not believe that Jesus Christ was her Savior.

Other people may become Christians later in life and, as they look back, they know that God has been at work in their lives leading them to Christ. They may not, however, know the exact moment when they crossed the line between unbelief and faith.

God deals with each of us as individuals, and we must be careful about trying to make other people have exactly the same experience we have had. Peter's experience was not the same as Paul's, nor was Timothy's experience the same as Thomas's.

The important thing is this: Are we certain that we are truly trusting Jesus Christ alone for our salvation? No matter what our background may be, are we looking to him, and are we seeking to have him as the center of our lives?

If you are unsure of your relationship with Christ and your eternal salvation, don't let another hour go by without taking that definite step of faith and commitment to him.

As someone has said, maybe it will be underlining in ink what we have previously written in pencil. But be sure you trust Christ, because he alone "is able to save completely those who come to God through him" (Hebrews 7:25).

Overload with heavier bat

Dr. Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: You wrote once that the best way to get stronger in a particular sport is through practicing that sport by using weights. I have been swinging a weighted bat. I think this is what you meant. But I think it is throwing my timing off. Is it? — J.F.

Jack, the point I wanted to make is this. Bench pressing 250 pounds does not necessarily mean that you will be able to hit a baseball farther. Muscles get stronger only in the precise movement they are being trained to perform. The motion of bench pressing is not the same motion as the swinging of a bat.

If you want to gain strength in bat swinging, you have to do two things: 1. Imitate the motion of swinging the bat, and 2. Overload your muscles with a weighted bat. To get stronger in that motion you have to constantly challenge the muscles involved with greater loads. Your weighted bat is not, however, the only way to do this. If you can get to a machine with pulleys, ropes and weights, you can imitate many of the bat-swinging motions with that.

Your question about loss of coordination (timing) comes up a lot. If you use a weighted bat exclusively and ignore lots of routine batting practice, that could throw the timing off. But if you use the weighted bat technique for strength only, and follow it up with regular bat control training, you'll find an effective compromise.

One last thought: The force with which you hit a ball depends not just on strength. It is a matter of meeting the ball squarely, of transferring your entire body weight into the swing and hitting the ball at the exactly right split second. These skills come with practice and should not be hindered or helped by strength training.

Let me quote a professional from another sport. Mike Newlin of the New Jersey Nets says: "Athletic talent is perseverance in disguise." Go ahead and train with weights, but don't neglect the routine practice.

Dr. Dr. Donohue: I want to lose some weight for baseball. I am a high school senior. Can you give me some guidelines for this? — B.G.

The best guideline I can offer is that you lose your weight gradually. I don't know how much you intend to lose, but a good guide is to try to lose it at a rate of from two to three pounds a week. So you are wise to start early.

If you are a male athlete, you should be getting no less than 2,200 calories of food a day. If you are a woman athlete, it should be at least 2,000 calories. Daily workouts of an hour and a half should help burn off 400 to 600 calories. No athlete should go on a crash diet. You will lose muscle mass as well as fat if you do.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have jogged daily for some time now. I have even begun to lose it. I think I've made gains. How long do I have to continue to jog, or once into it, is it a perpetual thing? — B.D.

Translating your question for our purposes, I might reward it: "How fast do I lose gains in heart and lung improvement when I abandon a schedule of aerobic exercise, like jogging?"

Many people say that you have to exercise at least three times a week to maintain improvements made. You must find the time to do at least this, if you give up your daily jogging routine. You have to look upon exercise the way you do eating.

Hance better at taxes than giving advice

North-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Out in the oft-parched expanses of West Texas, U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock isn't known for parceling out the best of advice.
Folks in that part of the state still scoff at the time Hance, president of a social fraternity at Texas Tech University, offered some advice to pledge who enjoyed strumming his guitar more than scrutinizing his architecture books.
The pledge, a Fort Worth student named John Deutschendorf, told Hance he wanted to drop out of school and seek his fame and fortune in the music world.
Hance advised against it, so the story goes, telling Deutschendorf a degree was much more important.
Deutschendorf didn't take Hance's advice, dropped out of school and changed his name to John Denver. The rest is history.
Seventeen years and a stint in the Texas Senate later, Hance, a Democrat is now a key figure among those pushing President Reagan's tax cut package.

Hance, along with U.S. Rep. Barbara Conable of New York, is cosponsoring Reagan's three-year, 25 percent income tax cut in the U.S. House of Representatives. It's the largest tax cut proposal ever proffered in the nation's history and is designed to spur savings and investments.
"All I can say," Hance said during an Austin stopover Friday, "is that my knowledge of tax bills is a lot better than my knowledge of music. I just wanted to make sure he (Denver) got a good degree."
The tax cut plan calls for a 5 percent tax break in October, 10 percent in July 1982 and another 10 percent in July 1983.
Unable to force a compromise tax cut plan between the administration and the U.S. House, Hance stood beside the president several weeks ago when Reagan announced his plans to continue the push for the cut. Earlier plans called for a three-year, 30 percent tax break.

Hance has put himself in a delicate, precarious position by bucking the Democratic-dominated House and pushing a Republican plan.
It's a fight not likely to endear himself to many of his fellow party members.
"I think I've made the right decision," Hance said during an interview, after a 30-minute speech to the Texas Association of Secondary School Principals.
"There's some down sides to it with the House Democratic leadership, they're a little upset with me right now. They're not the people that would try to take it out on me, but if I ran for some kind of leadership position, they'd probably support someone else."
Party roles, said Hance, chosen by his colleagues as "Freshman of the Year" two years ago, has nothing to do with the tax cut fight expected to last through September or October.
"Some of the Democrat people feel we have to fight Reagan on everything," said the second-termer. "I just don't see the logic in that. People I talk to don't care if it's a Reagan plan, a Democratic plan or a Republican plan. They just want their taxes cut."
Part of the problem, Hance concedes, is convincing federal lawmakers the plan will work.
"People don't know if it will work," he said. "It's just an economic theory. I can't say for sure it will work, but what we had before sure wasn't working."

'Mild' fertility drug leads to quadruplets

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Joe and Sheila Muench wanted another baby before they were in their 40s. At delivery time, they got four within three minutes.
"The mildest fertility drug the doctors prescribe" gave the Las Cruces, N.M. couple two girls and two boys Friday.
"One of the doctors at the hospital told me that he prescribes that drug like water," Muench said Saturday.
He said the doctors aren't sure if the drug had any effect, but he's convinced.
Muench, 33, and his wife, 31, wanted another child "before we were in our 40s" and the fertility drug seemed to be a good idea.
The couple has one other child, Joseph, 5. Muench said when he told his son of the news in a telephone call, the youngster said, "I guess I have to start being a big brother now."
The babies were born at the University of New Mexico Hospital in Albuquerque after the mother was flown there from the family's home in Las Cruces. Muench originally is from Neenah, Wis., and his wife, Sheila Barry Muench, was raised in Chicopee, Mass.
The quadruplets were born seven weeks premature but Dr. Murray Bruder, Mrs. Muench's physician, said it was normal for quads to be born premature.

Bruder performed the deliveries by Caesarean section. He said the odds for giving birth to quadruplets are approximately one in 729,000.
The hospital's public information officer, Bob Hladky, said, "They are strong, exceptionally strong for premature babies. They have exhibited none of the conditions that are typical in premature babies."
A hospital spokeswoman, Dell Kump, said the first quad, a boy weighing 3 pounds, 15 ounces, was born at 2:37 p.m. Friday. He was followed in quick succession by a girl weighing 2 pounds, 14 ounces, a girl weighing 3 pounds, 3 ounces, and a boy weighing 3 pounds, 5 ounces.
The largest baby measured 17½ inches.
Muench said the doctors told him his wife and children can return home by the middle of the week, but the quadruplets will be admitted to the hospital in Las Cruces for continued observation.
He said each one must weigh at least 4 pounds before they will be able to come home.

Bill, Linda Thrasher moving to San Antonio

Lts. Bill and Linda Thrasher, commander of the Big Spring Salvation Army post, are being transferred to San Antonio. The Thrashers' tenure of duty ends here June 22 and they will be moving to their new post no later than June 23.
A reception in the Thrashers' honor will be held from 9:30 until 11 a.m., Tuesday in the Reddy Room of the Texas Electric Service Company, sponsored by the Salvation Army board.
The Thrashers were assigned here June 10, 1979, coming here from San Antonio.
Thrasher started in Salvation Army work about 1971 in his native Lubbock. He later directed community centers in Santa Ana, Calif., and Atlanta, Ga., before transferring to San Antonio. Thrasher is a 1964 graduate of Lubbock High School and later earned a degree in Business at Texas Tech University. He is the son of Gloria Morris of Lubbock and the late Thomas Thrasher, who was a construction contractor before he died of cancer in 1962.

Bill Thrasher served in the U.S. Marine Corps as a First Lieutenant before joining the Salvation Army. He was assigned to duty in Hawaii by the Marines.
He and his wife have two children, a son, Chris, age 4, and a girl, Monica, age 2.
Thrasher succeeded Robert Ball as commander here. Ball is now in retirement, living in Orlando, Fla.
Thrasher will be succeeded by Lt. Carroll Braun, who is now in Fairmont, W.Va. Braun will begin his duties here June 24.

Writer's strike may delay season again

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The prospect that the fall television season could be seriously delayed for the second straight year by a labor strike increased Saturday after contract talks between producers and striking film and TV writers broke off indefinitely.
Negotiators for major producers and the striking Writers Guild of America called it quits Saturday after more than 14 hours of bargaining when a stalemate was reached in the latest attempt to divide up the lucrative home video entertainment market.
The breakdown in talks in the nine-week writers strike was particularly ominous because of an impending showdown with the powerful Directors Guild of America, whose contract expires July 1.
The directors have said they will strike over the home video issue, a move that would certainly shut down the film-TV industry and delay the fall TV season — as did the actors strike last summer.

DR. V.T. SMITH

Four local doctors on staff at Tech

Four local physicians have been named Assistant Clinical Professors at the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center in Lubbock. The appointments of Drs. V.T. Smith, R.S. Griffin, Douglas Park and R.R. Patel were made recently by Dr. A. W. Holmes, professor and chairman of the internal medicine department at the medical school.

The internal medicine staffs of the Malone and Hogan Clinics and the Texas Tech medical school have been meeting together monthly in the past year, here and in Lubbock. One professor comes to Big Spring each month to participate in educational conferences with the local medicine staff. Members of the local group will be participating in turn, in the teaching program at the health sciences center.

Dr. Smith, Chief of Staff at Malone-Hogan Hospital, is a graduate of the University of Texas Medical School at San Antonio. He did his residency and training at Scott and White Hospital in Temple. He joined the local clinic in July, 1975.

Dr. Griffin is a graduate of Southwestern Medical School in Dallas. He did his residency in internal medicine at the Dallas Veterans Administration Hospital, joining the clinic here in July, 1968.

Dr. Patel graduated from Seth G.S. Medical College in Bombay, India, one of the most prestigious medical colleges in India. He completed internships in the King Edward Memorial Hospital, Bombay, India, the Aga Khan Hospital in Nairobi, Kenya, and did his internal medicine internship at the Catholic Medical Center in Brooklyn and Queens, N.Y. He completed the remaining two years of his training at the Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center, N.Y. He joined the clinic group in November 1979.

Dr. Douglas Park is a graduate of the Catholic Medical School in Seoul, Korea. His residency in internal medicine and fellowship in nephrology was done at the Lemuel Shattuck and Faulkner Hospitals, which are affiliated with Tufts University in Boston, Mass. He joined Malone and Hogan Clinic in December 1979.

EDITOR'S NOTE — Israel's destruction of an Iraqi nuclear plant touched off outrage and uncertainty in the Middle East. Here is a look back at the aftermath of the bold and unprecedented attack.

The ground thundered for three minutes outside Baghdad, Iraq, last week and the flimsy structure of peace in the Mideast is still swaying. The Israeli bombardment of Iraq's nuclear center led the Arabs to demand United Nations sanctions against the Jewish state, the Israelis to call anew for a "nuclear-free zone" in the Middle East, and the Soviets to push once more for an international conference on the troubled region.

Those ideas were expected to go nowhere, but repercussions from Baghdad have drawn Arabs closer together. They could affect the fleeting chances for peace in Lebanon and the future of Egyptian-Israeli relations, have already stirred anguished reassessments in the U.S. and altered the political picture in Israel, and could even change the course of the Iran-Iraq war.

The most urgent question: Will Prime Minister Menachem Begin drop the other shoe and send his spectacularly successful air force against the Syrian surface-to-air missiles in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley?

Here is a review of events that followed last Sunday's Israeli raid and what they may portend:

ARAB REACTION
Representatives of 20 Arab nations meeting Thursday in the Iraqi capital called on the U.N. Security Council to impose sanctions against Israel — they could be an arms embargo or economic boycotts — and calling on the U.S. and other supporters of Israel to "work seriously to put an end to Zionist aggression."

The league resolutions were mild compared with the theoretical alternatives, such as an anti-U.S. oil embargo or even military retaliation against Israel. Analysts said the envoys with Saudi Arabia playing a key role, opted for a moderate position to maintain broad support among the Arabs and internationally.

Even Egypt and Syria, Iraq's longtime rival, lined up beside the aggrieved Baghdad government.

The one fractious voice was Moammar Khadafy's.

The Libyan leader declared that Saudi King Kahled and Jordanian King Hussein should abdicate in shame because the Israeli bombers used their countries' airspace to reach Baghdad.

MISSILE CRISIS
Inter-Arab relations were given an earlier boost when an Arab League delegation achieved a preliminary cease-fire agreement last Monday in the fighting between Lebanese Christians and Syrian peacekeeping troops in Lebanon. The truce held through the week.

But the potentially more explosive confrontation in Lebanon — between Syria and Israel — simmered dangerously.

U.S. diplomat Philip C. Habib has been trying to mediate a peaceful end to the standoff. Israel demands that the Syrians remove anti-aircraft missiles from eastern Lebanon, and Syria demands that Israel end its interference in the tiny war-ravaged land.

EGYPT-ISRAEL
The surprise attack embarrassed Egyptian President Anwar Sadat before the Arab world because it came just three days after a summit meeting with Begin.

Church history study to begin

Faith, it is said, is strengthened through a better understanding of our religious heritage through a study of church history. An opportunity to examine the history of the church is being offered to Big Spring area residents by the 14th and Main Church of Christ.

The importance of studying world and American History has long been recognized in our state, even "Texas History" is a required course. An appreciation of the country is greatly enhanced through such courses.

Kirk Swinney, B.A. in history from Lubbock Christian College, and a student at Texas Tech University, is offering a 10 week course in church history in the library of the church. The study begins this evening at 7:15 and will continue each Sunday night through Aug. 16.

Interested individuals, regardless of their church affiliation, are invited to take this free course.

Students are failed for harassing teacher

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Five students are receiving blank diplomas from Hope High School because school officials say they were among 12 teenagers who intimidated their 61-year-old teacher into giving them passing grades.

The unidentified English teacher was left "on the verge of a nervous breakdown" after being berated by the students and some of their parents last Wednesday, says Acting Superintendent Robert Ricci.

He said that after being told the teacher was giving them failing grades, one of the students smashed his fist through a plaster wall, one pounded on her desk and another had to be restrained from pursuing her down a hallway.

There was no physical contact with the teacher, "but it was a very threatening and intimidating situation," Ricci said.

Ricci said he restored the 12 students' original failing grades after reviewing their records.

"I have decided that her decision to give all 12 a passing grade was just a way of trying to avoid further intimidation and confrontation and not a reasoned and rational decision," he said.

The five students who were to be allowed to go through the motions of graduating Sunday have the option of going to summer school to raise their grades or appealing his ruling to a review board.

He said he was allowing them to attend graduation in an effort to be "as fair as possible."

The other seven don't have enough credits to graduate, even with a passing grade in English, he said.

Ricci noted that one of the 12 was absent without an excuse for 164 days this past year.

After returning the verdict, the seven-woman, five-man jury affirmed that Duran had prior convictions, which earned him habitual criminal status and qualified him for life imprisonment.

The alleged offense was committed against a seven-year-old girl last Feb. 6.

HAIG MEETS GOVERNOR — U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig Jr., second from left, shares a joke with Hong Kong Governor Sir Murray MacLehose during his visit to the governor's residence Friday. Haig arrived Friday morning for two days of rest and preparation for his three day visit to China.

Haig to discuss Soviet military pressure in visit with Chinese

HONG KONG (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. will explore ways to "bolster China's defenses against increasing Soviet military pressure during his visit to Peking, a senior U.S. official said Saturday.

Haig, who is carrying a letter from President Reagan for China's leaders, will leave here Sunday for a four-day visit to Peking, the first by a top official of the Reagan administration.

Officials declined to discuss the contents of the letter, but it was believed to contain an invitation for Premier Zhao Ziyang to visit the U.S. A U.S. official who briefed reporters on the trip Saturday said a main topic in the talks with Chinese leaders, including Defense Minister Geng Biao, will be ways of confronting Soviet military moves in the region. "We plan to listen to his views on how the United States might be helpful in insuring China has an adequate defense against increasing Soviet pressure, direct and indirect — indirect primarily through Vietnamese proxies," the official said.

The official said Haig is willing "to discuss the broad framework" of arms sales to Peking. However, officials have said they don't anticipate much Chinese interest in purchasing large quantities of U.S. arms.

Foreign military experts said China is more interested in upgrading its armed forces with sophisticated technology, rather than in purchasing expensive jets or tanks.

The official briefed reporters with the understanding he not be identified. But he holds a very senior rank in the State Department and in the administration and is in a position to accurately reflect Haig's own thinking.

Haig was in Hong Kong for two days of rest and preparation for his visit to China. Following his visit to Peking, he will travel to the Philippines and New Zealand for high-level conferences before returning to Washington to report to the president.

The official said Haig's trip to China is a clear demonstration of "Reagan's own appreciation for the importance of our relationship with the People's Republic of China, a friendly non-aligned country with which strategic relations are a strategic imperative."

"This trip is, in effect, a continuation of a long-standing, hard-fought and delicately managed process that began almost 14 years ago," the official said. Formal diplomatic relations were established in 1979.

Let us spray to control bagworms

By DAVID G. FOSTER
Extension Agent-Entomology
Martin, Howard, and Midland Counties

Bagworms are one of the major chewing pests of shrubs and trees in the home landscape. The degree of damage caused by bagworms varies greatly from year to year. When heavy populations develop they can strip almost all the foliage from their host plant. The stripped trees usually die.

The winter is passed as eggs enclosed by the pupal skin inside the bag in which the female worm lived during the previous summer. The egg hatches in spring after shrubs and trees have come into full foliage. After hatching, young worms spin silken bags about themselves and begin feeding.

As they feed, they attach to the bag bits of the leaves on which they are feeding. The bag is carried by the worm wherever it goes, the worm merely protruding the front end of the body from the bag.

After pupation, the male bagworm mates with the female while she remains in the bag. After depositing her eggs, the female wiggles out of the bag and dies.

Both male and female bags are left hanging on the tree or shrub during the winter months. A pupa case will be protruding from the end of the male bag and otherwise the bag will be empty.

The female bag will contain the eggs of the next bagworm generation covered by the remains of the female bagworm which remained in the bag.

Control on small trees or shrubs which can be readily reached, a thorough cleanup of the bags during the winter by hand-picking and burning will effectively control bagworms. This method is one of the best to use when infestations are first starting, but for a general infestation of large trees and shrubs, the most effective control is spraying with Sevin, Diazinon, Malathion, Dyllox, Dursban, or Orthene.

Insecticidal control can be easily accomplished when the bagworms are small. Larger bagworms with bags of 1/2 inch or larger are much more difficult to control. Often two applications are required to control the bagworm population.

Where bags are collected during the winter, care should be taken that they are removed from the trees and shrubs and burned. If they are merely thrown to the ground, the eggs will hatch and many worms will find their way to the trees.

Reagan's war on regulations could save up to $18 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's war against federal regulations has produced a potential savings of up to $18 billion for businesses and consumers and will bring even bigger benefits in the future, the administration claimed Saturday.

"It's only really the tip of the iceberg, only the beginning," vowed Vice President George Bush, chairman of a presidential task force on regulatory relief.

However, Bush and other officials cautioned that their estimate was a rough calculation, in part because various departments did not use a uniform system in gauging savings.

Since Reagan took office, 181 regulations have been placed under review for possible change or have been modified or withdrawn. Most of them — 113 in all — originated from the Transportation Department, the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Environmental Protection Agency.

In its first major accounting, the administration calculated that the regulation-cutting campaign has produced a potential one-time savings of $15.5 billion to $18.5 billion, largely from investment costs that industry and local governments would be spared as a result of not having to comply with environmental regulations.

Beyond that, there would be a recurring savings of $5.5 billion to $5.9 billion annually, chiefly from reduced operating costs, the administration estimated in a series of reports.

The administration claimed success by other measures, also.

For example, it said the number of proposed rules published daily in the Federal Register has been cut in half since January, and that the Federal Register itself is about a third smaller than when Reagan took office.

The Energy Department has abolished 20 forms and reduced the paperwork burden it puts on industry by 820,000 hours, the administration calculated, largely as a result of Reagan's decision to decontrol oil prices.

The administration said that for various reasons, its costs estimates involved rough figures.

South Plains Fair books Slim Whitman

LUBBOCK — Slim Whitman, country and western star who has been experiencing a rapid resurgence in popularity for the past two years, has been signed to appear at the 64th annual Panhandle South Plains Fair this year.

Fair general manager Steve L. Lewis said Whitman has been signed for two appearances — 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. — on Oct. 1, which also is senior citizens day.

He will be appearing with Box Car Willie, America's favorite hobo, a native Texan who still resides in Arlington.

It will mark the first appearance on the fair card for both performers, Lewis said. "We feel very fortunate to get them, due to their tremendous popularity now," he added.

Entertainers being booked for six other fair dates will be announced later, Lewis said.

Whitman has been a country and music favorite since 1948. He had his first top 10 hit four years later and has been recording and touring ever since.

In all, he has recorded more than 50 albums, with combined sales of 50 million worldwide. He has garnered 19 gold records, most of them in the United States. His "Rose Marie" held the top spot on the British charts for 11 consecutive weeks, something even the Beatles were unable to achieve in that country. The song also is the all-time best-selling 45-rpm in Australia.

His increased popularity followed the release of a new album on television less than two years ago. The album became an instant hit and has now sold more than two million copies.

The album includes such favorites as "When," "That Silver-Haired Daddy of Mine," "Where Do I Go From Here?" and "Beautiful Dreamer," as well as "Rose Marie."

He is scheduled to appear on several national television programs this year.

Box Car Willie also has been on the C&W scene for many years and, like Whitman, also has been popular throughout Europe and England.

More than a million of his albums were sold in Britain alone. His last album, "King of the Road," won him a Gold Album award.

The son of a railroad man, Willie cracked the all-time attendance record at Gilley's Club near Houston.

Mail order requests for tickets will be accepted by the fair association at P.O. Box 208, Lubbock, Texas 79408. Requests will be filled in the order in which received and orders will be mailed in early August. Mail order requests must be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope. All seats are reserved and tickets are $6, $7 and $8.

The fair is scheduled Sept. 26 through Oct. 3.

IRA guerrilla wins Irish Parliament seat

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Paddy Agnew, an IRA guerrilla serving a 16-year sentence in Northern Ireland's Maze prison, has won a seat in the Irish Parliament in a propaganda coup for the hunger strikers in the Northern Irish jail.

Agnew, 26, an Irish Republican Army activist jailed for bombings, attacking British forces and possessing explosives, won a seat Friday representing his native Louth, a town near the border with Northern Ireland.

Essay contest is scheduled

The Texas CowBelles are planning their annual "King for a Day" essay contest for Father's Day next Sunday.

This year the CowBelles will honor the winning "king" with a steak dinner for two, courtesy of the Brandin' Iron Inn Restaurant and the All Beef Cookbook, a publication authorized by the American National CowBelles.

Since 1953 the CowBelles have been honoring fathers, by promoting beef for Father's Day. And what better day to recognize the importance of nutrition than Father's Day.

Those wishing to enter their fathers must write an essay of 250 words or less on, "Why My Dad Should Be King For A Day." Deadline for the contest entries will be June 15. Entries should be mailed to Mrs. Leland Wallace, Rte. 2, Big Spring, TX 79720. Anyone living in the Big Spring area is eligible except members of the Texas CowBelles.

Four from area awarded degrees

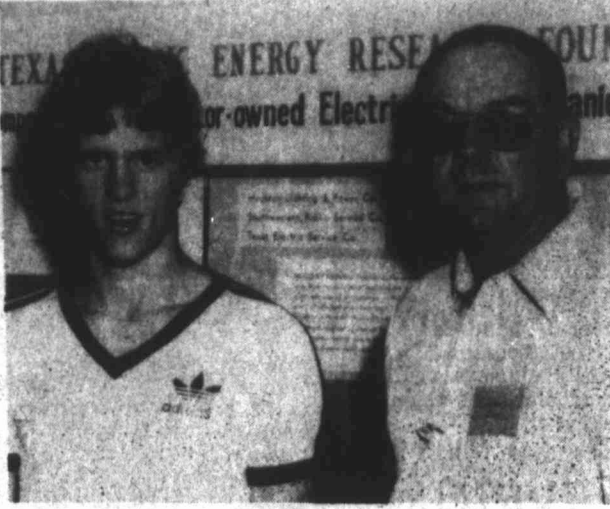

COLLEGE STATION — Four students from Big Spring received their degrees at Texas A&M University's spring commencement exercises.

A total 3,046 degrees were awarded, including 2,676 undergraduates, 283 master's and 87 doctorates.

Receiving undergraduate degrees with honors were Brenda K. Willbanks, Magna Cum Laude, civil engineering and David S. Sullivan, Cum Laude, applied mathematical sciences.

Also receiving undergraduate degrees were Richard K. Pfeiffer, mechanized agriculture and Steven C. Wilder, finance.

Sales tax collections here show big boost

Through the first six months of 1981, the City of Big Spring has received $623,690 as its share of the one-per-cent city sales tax for an increase of 23.55 percent over the $504,808 received for the same period in 1980.

The June sales tax rebate to Big Spring totaled $47,630, compared to $38,328 for June 1980. Coahoma's collections for the first six months ran 10.96 percent ahead of the same period in 1980, increasing from $12,691 to $10,082. In June alone, collections were $1,370 this year, compared to $1,186 for the same month a year ago.

Colorado City was notified its collections for the six-month period ending in June went from $78,536 in 1980 to $88,916 in June this year. Colorado City's rebate check for June alone this year totaled $7,300, compared to $6,527 for the same month in 1980.

Stanton's portion of the tax increased from $18,452 for the six months' period to $22,092, a boost of 19.72 percent. In June alone this year, Stanton received for $840 this year, compared to $688 a year ago.

Rebates in Lamesa have totaled $218,392 for the first six months this year, compared to $207,500 for the same period, an increase of 5.25 percent. In June alone, the rebate totaled $18,600, compared to $16,835 for the same month a year ago.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock said Texas cities collecting the one-per-cent city sales tax have received $310.7 million in rebates during the first six months of 1981.

Bullock said the June sales tax rebates to cities totaled $28.3 million, compared to $24.9 million during a comparable period in 1980.

Sales tax rebates through June of 1980 totaled $266.9 million, according to Bullock.

Houston's sales tax check for June is $5.9 million, bringing that city's year-to-date total to $64.2 million.

Dallas will receive a $3.3 million check, pushing the city's total for this year to $35.2 million.

San Antonio will receive $1.5 million this month, bringing the city's rebates for the first six months to $16.8 million.

The city sales tax is collected along with the state sales tax by merchants and businesses and is returned each month by the Comptroller to the cities which levy the tax.

Crops, range in good shape

Story different this year

AUSTIN — About this time last year, the first signs of the harsh summer ahead were beginning to appear. High temperatures baked North Texas, and cattle raisers in South Texas looked toward the sky for some indication of rain.

It's a different story so far this year for most farmers. Heavy rains have covered most of Texas.

Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has reviewed conditions across the state and reports that although thunderstorms and wet fields are causing concern in some areas, most crops and ranges are in good shape.

Brown cautioned against too much optimism. "We had a lot of rain last year in May, and things looked good until meteorologists told us that was the last for a while."

"One thing we've learned in Texas is that only God and the bullfrogs know what the weather's going to be. There are pockets that have not received any, or have not had adequate rain to make up deficits from the crippling drought of 1980," Brown said.

Although in May ten and a half inches were recorded in the northeast, the cumulative rainfall total is only half of normal. Amounts in the South Central section, the Upper Coast, and the area around Waco have not reached normal levels yet.

The Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service surveys show the contrast of weather in Texas. High winds are continuing to deplete topsoil moisture in the Panhandle while steady rains in the southern part of the State have left standing water in some low-lying fields.

In the High Plains as much as 150,000 acres of cotton may have to be replanted following hail storms there at the end of May. The Blacklands area cotton also had some hail damage. Though 83 percent of the Texas fiber crop has been planted, seeding operations have been slowed by wet field conditions.

A projected record wheat harvest has been interrupted by scattered showers and wet field conditions. Hail has destroyed or damaged some stands in the High Plains, South Central Texas, and North Texas. However, 53 percent of the state crop is assessed to be in good or excellent condition.

"Grain sorghum farmers appear to be luckier this year," Brown said, "with 85 percent of the Texas crop in good to excellent condition at this time." Corn also is responding well to moisture.

Fruit and vegetable production generally has been greatly helped by the rain, though about half of the watermelon and cantaloupe crop in the lower Rio Grande Valley may be lost due to standing water.

"It seems that every spring we have to hold our breath on the peach crop with the history of late freezes, hail, or wind, but this year it looks as though we'll have a bumper crop," Brown said.

"Hay shortages shouldn't be a problem in 1981," Brown said. Hay fields and meadows could prove several cuttings this summer. If the soil moisture is not depleted by extremely high temperatures later, the ranges, pastures, and stock ponds should stay in good shape through the summer.

"If we can get prices and sales up and interest rates down, 1981 could be a good year for Texas agriculture," Brown said.

Fiddling champ ready to defend titles

RICHARDSON, Texas (AP) — James Chancellor has been fiddling around for 26 years, it's what he does best.

In fact, he does it better than anyone else in the world.

But then such a lofty position is not without its responsibilities. When you're the world champion fiddler you can't afford to miss many contests — you never know when a nimble-fingered youngster or cagey old-timer will rise to steal one of your many titles.

So James Chancellor can't miss the World Fiddle Festival at Crockett, Texas, on Saturday or the Grand Masters' competition at Opryland in Nashville, Tenn., on Sunday.

He'll drive to Crockett in East Texas to fiddle against 30 to 35 pretenders to his world crown and then fly to Nashville to defend his Grand Masters' title in a select competition of the nation's 10 best fiddlers.

"I really get into it," Chancellor said. "I play in all the contests. I don't slack up."

When he was growing up, he was called "The Kid" by other fiddlers. They may have called him a few other names too, because Chancellor, now 38, kept winning and winning and winning.

At 16, he won his first world championship at the Crockett festival. He repeated as champ the next two years. The contest sponsors then had to invoke the rule — repeated last year — that said winners of three straight contests couldn't compete anymore.

Chancellor wasn't much easier on the competition anywhere else he played. And he did play — at county fairs, with friends, all alone. You name it.

"Music was it," he said. "Every county fair had a fiddle contest, and I'd drive halfway across the world for a $50 prize."

As he got older, music was still what he liked best. He had a variety of jobs — in construction, insurance, farm equipment, automobile sales — but he kept with the fiddle.

He's now cut 14 singles, one album (he's working on a second) and has played along side the likes of professional musicians Porter Wagoner and Ernest Tubbs. Just recently, he met a man who told him he listened to his music in Japan, where fiddling is growing in popularity.

Oh, but he's modest. Listen to his wife of 15 years, Charlotte.

"We had been dating for six months, and he hadn't even mentioned he played the fiddle," she said. "Then we went to a contest once, and he pulled out his fiddle. I couldn't get within 20 feet of him when he was playing because everybody wanted to hear him. He's the best."

Chancellor blushes a little when the subject of the best comes up — "I don't like to be a braggart," he said — but he is, well, self-assured. "I feel like even if I don't win a contest I am a better fiddler than the guy who did," he said. "In my own mind I know where I stand."

Competition, he admits, is tougher than ever. Fiddling, like country music, has gained new popularity lately — especially among younger people.

"They can sit around and fiddle all day, and I have to work," he said.

But don't think Chancellor is too worried on this, the eve of the two biggest contests of the year. He's got something even the best youngsters don't have: a vast repertoire of songs accumulated over 26 years of playing the fiddle.

In contests such as the ones this weekend where contestants have to play a number of songs from several categories — polka, jig, waltz, breakdown —

Chancellor still has the edge.

"The youngsters may know 10 songs and practice them over and over until they're really good at them."

"But," he said, "I know several hundred songs, maybe a thousand."

His smile says one thing: The defending champ is ready.

South Texas man has flying weapons against mosquitos

MCALLEN, Texas (AP) — Al Shurte, a retired plumber from Flint, Mich., has a natural, non-chemical weapon against the plentiful, blood-sucking mosquitoes of South Texas.

More than two dozen purple martins inhabit the two "apartment houses" he built for them in his back yard.

Even with an irrigation canal nearby and heavy rains, Shurte and his wife say they can stay outside long after their neighbors are chased indoors by the biting insects.

"They say a purple martin can eat 2,000 mosquitoes a day," said Shurte, a handyman who builds and sells martin houses in a range of sizes.

His 12-room model, complete with wire porches and a 20-foot stand runs $45.

The houses are plastic flower pots wired together with plywood fronts mounted on a 4-inch-by-4-inch post. Openings must be at least 2 inches wide, he cautions, or the birds will not use them.

Shurte says once the house is available, it's up to the martins to find it provided sparrows have not beaten them to it.

"The first year I had them, I had to fight off the sparrows with a B-B gun," he said.

Martins migrate to South America during the winter, stop in Texas between late January and mid-summer and then take off for northern states until beginning the cycle again in the fall.

"They send out a scout to check things out. He'll circle around and stay a few hours. Then he'll come back two or three days later with another bird," Shurte said.

Gradually, a colony will move in. Both males and females help build nests with sticks, straws, plant stems and other material. Females generally lay two eggs and both parents help incubate the eggs until they hatch.

"They say the young ones that hatched out here might come back to roost," he said.

The iridescent black males and duller females soar gracefully and catch insects in-flight.

Eighteen adult martins and six young live in Shurte's backyard this year.

NAMED TO BOARD — Bill Quimby, former manager of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, has been appointed to the Texas State Board of Accountancy for a six-year term by Gov. Bill Clements. Quimby is director of administration for the Dallas law firm, Rain Harrell Emery Young and Duke. He was formerly executive director of the Texas Society of CPAs for 12 years.

Cargill moved to county jail

Danny Ray Cargill, 23, Sterling City Route Box 1, was transferred to the county jail Thursday night from the city jail.

Cargill was arrested on misdemeanor and felony warrants issued from Taylor County. Bond was set at $1,000 for the misdemeanor warrant and $2,000 for the felony warrant. He was released via Mary Thomas and Bonnie Bennett, who posted bail to the Taylor County Sheriff's Office.

'Call Your Library' program provides needed information

Texas State Library News — Most people keep emergency telephone numbers handy.

There is another one that they should add — the number of their local library. Most Americans need information more often than they need emergency service.

For Howard County Public Library, that number is 267-5295.

Texas is one of 41 states participating in the "Call Your Library" campaign cosponsored by the American Library Association and the Chief Officers of State Library Agencies. Although libraries answer millions of telephone reference questions every year, a 1978 survey indicated that less than half of the public was aware of the service at that time.

Some telephone reference questions can be answered as quickly as the librarian can reach a convenient volume on the ready reference shelf.

"What's the population of Brazil?"

Other answers come from files of local materials.

"When is the next school board election?" Although the librarian at the end of the line won't do student's homework and can't undertake a research project for you, he or she can help you at home.

When you are planning a vacation, the librarian can give you the address of the National Park Service.

This librarian can tell you how to address a letter to your Senator, and he or she can tell you how to register to vote so you can be sure that the next Senator is "your" Senator.

And telephone reference service provides many quick answers to questions you have on the job.

Addresses of companies, official names of organizations and institutions, and information from many local, state, and federal agencies are all available.

Telephone reference service will also tell you whether the library has a specific book you want to read or has materials on a subject you are interested in.

"Call Your Library" the next time you need information.

FARM FORUM
By RONNIE WOOD

Although many differences exist, swine production in China is on the upswing, says a returning University of Nebraska swine specialist. One marked difference between Chinese and U. S. swine production is Chinese pigs do not grow as fast as their American counterparts, due mainly to less protein intake. Chinese pigs, therefore, go to market at 10 months weighing considerably less than the U. S. swine shipped at six to six and a half months. However, the U. N. scientist said Chinese genetic swine stock may hold the "pig of the future," if world grain supplies become short, because of the ability to feed on grass and forage. Another difference between U. S. and Chinese production attitudes was found when an inquiry was made concerning feeding fat to pigs. "Animal fats are for humans," was the abrupt Chinese reply.

AIMING FOR THE LEAD — Donna Caponi lines up a putt on the seventh hole of the Jack Nicklaus Golf Center during the third round of the LPGA championship being played in Mason, Ohio Saturday. Caponi made the putt for a birdie and finished the round 12 under par with a five shot lead in the tourney.

Birdies on front nine help

Caponi leading LPGA

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Donna Caponi went on a birdie binge on the first nine holes Saturday and held up on the back side to shoot a 2-under-par 70 and expand her lead to 2 shots in the weather-plagued Ladies Professional Golf Association Championship.

The 36-year-old veteran, bidding for her fourth major championship in 17 professional seasons, birdied five of the first nine holes, three of them in a row. That helped her to a front side 5-under 31.

Caponi double-bogeyed the 10th and, after NBC-TV cameras cut away, bogeyed the 13th to slip to a 39 on the backside.

The 1968 and 1970 U.S. Open champion and the 1979 winner of this major, had a 54-hole total of 207, nine under par for three trips around the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center Grizzly Course.

Jerilyn Britz, the 1979 U.S. Open winner, birdied the last two holes, playing in the last threesome with Caponi. That sliced the leader's margin in half and gave Britz a 71 for a 7-under 209.

Pat Meyers, the other member of the final group, matched par of 72 and stood at 210, six under, for three rounds over the 6,258-yard layout just north of Cincinnati.

The players were hampered by weather delays twice, marking the third time in two days that their competition in the first of three 1981 majors had been interrupted. The delays totaled one hour, 51 minutes. Play was suspended for three hours Friday.

Sandra Post, who can earn a $100,000 bonus from McDonald's restaurants by posting back-to-back victories in as many weeks, all but shot herself out of contention for the huge payday with a 76. She was at 217, 10 shots in arrears.

The total purse is $150,000, with $22,500 going to Sunday's champion.

Ex-Hawk Cooper drafted; but must get act together

Former Howard College center JOE COOPER, who toiled for Coach HAROLD WILDER'S Hawk team in the 76-77 and 77-78 seasons, was drafted in the fifth round of the NBA's lottery last Tuesday by the New Jersey Nets.

And as is in the case every year in the NFL and NBA drafts, it's not as high as he expected, but still higher than many had thought the certain individual would go.

In Cooper's case, there is no doubt that the Nets, under new coach LARRY BROWN and with a bevy of early draft picks, were banking on the potential of the former 6'10" Hawks' Cooper, can be brilliant one minute, but lethargic the next.

Cooper had a chance, however, to have already been signed to a $90,000 per year contract with a team in the European Basketball League. Former Hawk assistant LEROY MCLENDON, who now is a coaching aide at the University of Alabama, had helped set up the deal with the European League for Cooper. But Cooper balked at the advice of his agent.

"Coach McLendon had him set up, but Cooper's agent told him he'd either go in the first or second round and get something like a $200,000 bonus, or something ridiculous like that," said Wilder. "But it's too late for him to go there (Europe), now, they've already started over a month ago."

There is no doubt that Cooper has the ability to make the Nets final roster next winter, but whether he'll get his act together remains to be seen.

The Dallas Mavericks are quite happy with their draft picks, especially the first three they got the rights for in the persons of MARK AGUIRRE, ROLANDO BLACKMAN and JAY VINCENT.

Many observers feel that Aguirre will be too much of a troublemaker to make the Mavericks the player he should be, but not Coach DICK MOTTA.

Motta has been somewhat of an outlaw himself at times, as he explained in Dallas earlier this week. "There are some things I've read about myself that are wrong, and some are true. I've always felt if somebody will just give me the damn job, let me do and get out of the way, I could handle it. So I don't have hang-ups with people who want freedom."

Motta finally drew an analogy explaining his organization's decision to draft the DePaul star instead of ISIAH THOMAS, or someone else.

"When you've got a chance to put a saddle on a purebred like Aguirre and ride him, you get the cowboy that wants to win. If the cowboy isn't careful taking him out of the chute, you've got trouble. I don't see any major player-coach problems."

Talented Washington Redskins running back JOHN RIGGINS was back in that NFL club's mini-camp earlier this week after walking out and not playing last season due to a contract dispute.

Explaining his decision, Riggins said: "I'm bored, I'm broke and I'm back."

Riggins had demanded to renegotiate his $300,000 a year contract, but the Redskins balked, so the talented former Kansas U.

star left camp. The salary dispute will be heard next week in Washington by an arbitrator. A finding in Riggins' favor would bring him the money he lost for sitting out last year.

The Redskins runner will play this year, whether he is happy with his contract or not, the way it sounds. "Whatever decision is made next week that's that, we'll let the chips fall where they may."

Of what he missed most about not playing, "Besides the money," said Riggins, "I guess I missed the little kiddie atmosphere."

Speaking of football, Dallas Cowboy Coach TOM LANDRY is pondering the idea of changing from the player-shuttle to hand signals giving DANNY WHITE the plays from the sideline. The Cowboys were in many times penalized last year because it simply took too much time to send in a play via player.

White has mentioned that he would rather call the plays himself, something ROGER STAUDACH also repeatedly asked for. But Landry explains that with the Cowboys complex formations and offensive scheme, it would be difficult for the coaching staff to evaluate each play the way that they would like. But White has a remedy for that situation.

"I did make one suggestion that Coach Landry didn't thought of," White said. "He was explaining why he didn't want the quarterbacks calling the plays, saying it was vital to the coaches to know what play is being called before it is run. I suggested that he keep the shuttle system, send a player in and the one coming out could tell him the play I had called. He said that was something he'd never thought of before."

DAN PASTORINI is back in the mishap column, and this time he says it's a blessing in disguise.

The Oakland Raider quarterback, who had the misfortune of being injured in the club's fifth game last year with a broken leg, only to see JIM PLUNKETT come in and direct the Oakland team to the NFL championship, recently underwent surgery for a dislocated shoulder. Dante had suffered the misfortune of hitting a curb on his motorcycle during a charity Bike-a-Thon in San Francisco, which in turn threw him over the handlebars and into a sidewalk.

Now how is that a blessing? Says Dante: "I've had a pretty sore arm the last couple of years, which Dr. Rosenfield diagnosed as an arthritic condition. He says I'll have more extension on my arm after this, more than I've had the last two years."

Big Spring football fans are probably hoping for a similar recovery from their All-District football-basketball star, BOBBY EARL WILLIAMS. Williams had cartilage damage on one of his knees during a fall on a motorcycle in early May, which forced him into a cast for over three weeks.

The cast was removed the first week in June, and Williams is claiming that the knee feels as good as ever. For the sake of his very promising athletic future, let's hope so.

Hagler keeps crown

BOSTON (AP) — Middleweight Marvin Hagler pounded challenger Vito Antoufermo Saturday night and retained his World championship when the battered former titleist failed to come out for the fifth round.

Antoufermo gushed blood from the deep gash on his forehead within a minute of the first round and by the end of the fourth was bleeding from at least two other cuts.

The challenger's trainer Freddie Brown demanded that referee Davey Pearl immediately call the fight a draw after the first round because he believed Antoufermo was the victim of an illegal butt. Brown refused to let his fighter come out for the second round.

But after a delay of several minutes — with Massachusetts boxing Commissioner Walter Byers shouting, "Get him (Brown) out of the ring!" — the fight resumed and Hagler pounded Antoufermo with left hooks and straight rights that took a devastating toll.

Hagler, from Brockton, Mass., dropped Antoufermo with a left hook in the third round and after the champion opened cuts under Antoufermo's left eye in the fourth, Brown held his fighter in the corner, stopping the fight.

It was Hagler's second successful title defense since winning the championship from Alan Minter in London in September, and avenged the only blot on Hagler's record since 1966, when he last lost a fight. Hagler and Antoufermo fought to a draw when the Brooklyn resident held the title in November 1979.

Antoufermo's manager, Tony Carione, said, "We stopped it." Antoufermo, claiming he wanted to continue, shouted: "I got robbed. He didn't beat me. He outboxed me."

Hagler, however, had struck the challenger

Birdie on 18th moves Stadler in Westchester

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Craig Stadler broke out of a four-way tie for the top with a six-foot birdie putt on the final hole and took a one-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 Westchester Golf Classic.

Stadler, a winner two weeks ago in the Kemper Open, had a steady, no-bogey round of 3-under-par 68. He completed three trips over the hilly, 6,603-yard Westchester Country Club course in 205, 8-under.

Ray Floyd, Tom Kite and J.C. Snead, who shared the top spot until Stadler's closing birdie, were at 206 going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize.

Snead, in a long slump and still fighting an erratic driver, put on a birdie-eagle finish for a 4-under-par 67. Floyd, winner of two tournaments earlier this season, and the steady Kite, who has finished seventh or better in his last six starts, each had a 68.

Kite had an excellent chance to join Stadler at 7-under par, but left a six-foot, downhill birdie putt a quarter-roll short on 18.

"I've always been a streak player," said Stadler, a two-time winner last season. "I haven't had a good year but I've been playing well the last few weeks and that's the difference."

Hall of Famer Joe Sewell still strong in 85th year

By NATHAN POSS

It's not often that a person gets the opportunity of a down-to-earth visit with a member of baseball's Hall of Fame, especially when the diamond great is 85 years old. But that's exactly what happened recently to Big Springer Watson Hammond during his vacation in Tuscaloosa, Alabama.

Hammond's son knows baseball Hall of Famer Joe Sewell, who resides in Tuscaloosa. During his visit there, Sewell invited the elder Hammond to visit with him in his home.

During that time, Sewell recalled many of his past baseball exploits with fondness, sharing them with Hammond.

And with the high priced baseball players of today going on strike over the free-agent compensation question, it was natural that Sewell's salary during his playing days came up. In 1925, Sewell hit .357, and was paid $6,000 per year. Of course, $6,000 per year is enormously more than it is now, but still not in the ballpark of today's major league salaries.

His .357 average in 1925 with the Cleveland Indians was no fluke, either. During his 14-year career with the Indians and the New York Yankees, Sewell hit over .300 in 10 seasons. He ended his career with a .312 average.

Herald Editor Tommy Hart recalls that Sewell was one of the toughest men to strike out in the history of the game. Stats would back up Hart's evaluation. In 14 seasons, Sewell fanned only 114 times, a major league record. He also set a near unbelievable record by fanning four times or less in over 500 at bats in four different seasons. In one span, he went 115 straight games without striking out.

Sewell was also an adept fielder. He led the American League shortstops in fielding on two occasions, and four times he paced the AL in both putouts and assists.

Hammond related that Sewell, who coached some very successful teams at the University of Alabama following his playing days, now works at the age of 85 in public relations for creamery in Tuscaloosa. And to listen to Hammond, Sewell is far more active than most who make it to 85.

Sewell, who played for the infamous Tris Speaker at Cleveland, recalled many of the old-time greats, which he naturally is partial to.

He regards Ty Cobb as the most complete baseball player to ever play the game, including today's stars. And Sewell remembers Babe Ruth, who he played with in the final years of both of their careers, as the most natural performer of all time.

Sewell, Hammond mentioned, has gone to the Hall of Fame induction each year since his induction in Cooperstown, New York, playing in the Old-Timers game during that special occasion.

But it gets tougher for the 85-year-old Hall of Famer each year to play.

"Last year," Hammond related, "Joe Sewell said he went up and got a hit to right field. The only problem was that all the way to first base was uphill, or so it seemed."

BSCC Partnership a tight struggle

The first day of the Big Spring Country Club Partnership produced six teams within one shot of each other, setting the stage for a wide open finish today.

Three teams came in after the 18-hole course to card rounds of 68, while three more duos had rounds of 69 to stay just one shot out of the first day lead.

The teams leading the scratch division with the 68s after the first round included Ed Hopkins of Stanton and Scribner of Dallas, Pat Weaver of Big Spring and Ronnie Broadrick of Austin, and Steve Whiteside and Swartz.

Broadrick is a former Big Springer who was a NAIA All-American at Angelo State.

Coming in with rounds of 69 to stay on the leaders necks included the duos of Jimmy Rogers and Jerry Barron, Jackie Thomas and Dan Wilkins, and Jimmy Welch and Mike Hall. All of those teams tied for second are from Big Spring.

In the handicap division, the team of Nelson Donahue and Kirby Horton fired a 62 for a slim lead over the collegiate duo of Randy Crockett and Donny Knight, who ended with a 63.

Russ Rutledge and Jeff Nieto fired a 64 in the handicap division, as did Tommy Rutledge and Jones and the duo of Belew and Campbell.

The handicappers tee off tomorrow morning at nine o'clock, with the scratch division beginning at 2:00 p.m. Following the day's rounds, there will be an awards ceremony at the Country Club with over 700 dollars in merchandise being presented to the top eight finishing teams in each division.

Yogi: "It feels funny"

MONTCLAIR, N.J. (AP) — Yogi Berra padded around the house Saturday afternoon, not quite knowing what to do with himself.

The coach of the New York Yankees, and former manager of the Yankees and New York Mets, said he and his family were caught off guard by the baseball strike, referring to wife, Carmen, and Dale, the youngest of three sons and an infielder for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"It feels funny being here now," Yogi said after returning from a morning round of golf. "Like I should be wearing a uniform somewhere. Sometimes I think I always have one on. It's the first weekend I've had off during the summertime in I don't know how many years... a long time."

Yogi, caught in the middle as neither owner nor player, said he "can't take sides." He denied the strike put father against son. "I wish they were playing and I'm sure he wishes he was playing."

Baseball players go home

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league players hustled home and elsewhere today in the wake of the first mid-season strike in baseball history. And there appeared to be no relief in sight, particularly over this weekend.

Stalemated with owners over the controversial free agent compensation issue, the 650 big league players went on strike Friday generally without sympathy from America's fans and under thick clouds of pessimism.

Negotiations for a new major league contract bogged down after an unproductive 2½-hour session Friday as mediator Kenneth Moffett described the attitudes of both sides as "lousy." Moffett also characterized negotiations between the players and owners as "pretty deadlocked."

Asked if negotiation sessions should continue over the weekend, Moffett sounded this note of alarm: "They've been talking for two years. It's not going to make any difference."

Moffett said the earliest that he would have both sides back at the bargaining table would be Monday or Tuesday, precluding any weekend play.

A last-minute move to nip the players' walkout evaporated when the National Labor Relations Board in Washington delayed a decision to appeal a federal judge's ruling that eased the way in the first place for the strike by the Major League Players Association.

As ballparks shut their gates around the country and major league teams canceled games for the weekend, this cryptic release was sent from the Player Relations Committee, representing the owners, to Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association:

"Due to the strike called by the Major League Baseball Players Association,

Association, we must regrettably announce that effective as of June 12, 1981, that portion of the Major League Baseball Championship season scheduled from this date forward is canceled until further notice.

"It is our hope that the strike will not be lengthy and that the 1981 Championship Season can be resumed. In the interim, we ask all the fans for their patience and understanding."

But there seem to be few fans with either patience or understanding in this matter. For the most part, baseball lovers have reacted universally against any strike action and predominately against the players for taking their cherished game away from them in the name of economics.

The key issue here is whether teams losing a free agent are entitled to another major league player as compensation.

In essence, owners want to be compensated fully for a player if he becomes a free agent and leaves for another team. The players aren't happy with this stipulation, for it would greatly reduce the value of free agents in the eyes of other teams if they have to give up an equal "quality" player, as the owners insist, for their new acquisition.

In Friday's negotiations, players and owners were no closer than they have ever been over what type of compensation would be suitable for teams losing free agents.

After advancing several ideas on this issue Thursday, all of them rejected by the owners, the players didn't come up with any new proposals Friday, according to Don Fehr, the union's general counsel.

This batting around has been going on for some time. For many years, the only compensation awarded to a team had been a first-round selection in the amateur draft. But last February, the owners unilaterally implemented their own compensation plan into the labor contract. That plan would require that teams losing a "ranking" free agent in the re-entry draft get a roster player from the team signing him.

Under an agreement reached last May, the players were given the right to strike over the free-agent compensation issue but would have to do so by June 1 or lose their right to walk out over compensation for the remainder of the agreement. That deadline was extended by mutual agreement between management and the players' union just before a May 29 strike date set before the season by the players.

The NLRB, at the request of the players, then sought an injunction to delay implementation of the owners' plan for one year. But a federal judge, sitting in Rochester, N.Y., denied the injunction, setting the stage for a strike.

Since the NLRB did not act Friday to appeal the denial by U.S. District Judge Henry Werker, a spokesman for the NLRB said no appeal could be filed with federal courts here until Monday.

While the players have no strike benefits, according to Miller, major league owners have prepared for such an eventuality with $50 million in strike insurance and a mutual assistance fund reportedly worth as much as $15 million more. After 152 games are canceled by a strike, the insurance guarantees each owner $100,000 a game until the $50 million runs out, or until about Aug. 1.

Meanwhile, Pirates players visited Three Rivers Stadium to pick up personal belongings, as many did throughout the country Friday. Among them was infielder Dale Berra, who was mulling whether to return to his parents' home in New Jersey.

"The strike came at an inopportune time for me," Berra said. "I've been getting a chance to play because Tim Lincecum is hurt, and I was going to play again tonight. For me, this is a bad time."

During a management news conference, team officials said the Pirates will lose $1.7 million if the strike wipes out the rest of this season, despite strike insurance.

Berra, meanwhile, and the other major league players will be limited in their baseball activities until the strike is settled. Players will be able to throw the ball around a little, but won't be able to engage in any organized workouts.

"One guy can throw to another," said Baltimore shortstop Mark Belanger, the American League player representative, "(but) they've been told not to take five or six guys to a college field, for instance."

Added Belanger: "There's no telling how long a strike will last. It could be two days, two months, a week. It's our feeling if the players are together working out every day, the owners will never get serious about negotiations."

On Monday at 1 p.m., Waskom and Pottsboro will resume their game in the top of the second inning with Waskom batting. The 3A semifinals games are set for 3 p.m. and 5 p.m. The 4A championship game matching South San Antonio West and Lubbock Estacado is scheduled for 7 p.m., with the 5A title game between Lubbock Monterey and defending champion Pearland to follow.

On Tuesday, Palmer and Bremond will play for the Class A championship at 2 p.m. The 2A and 3A championships will be determined at 4 p.m. and 7 p.m.

Controversy in title bout repeatedly with short blows as Antuoferno sought to pin the champion against the ropes for a brawl at close quarters. He had used the same tactic when the two fought to a draw when Hagler claimed he won.

For Hagler, the victory was his 52nd in 56 bouts, while Antuoferno took his sixth loss in 54 fights.

The stage for the controversial finish was set Saturday afternoon at the weigh-in when the Massachusetts Boxing Commission declared Hagler weighed 160 although the scales read 161 — one pound over the middleweight maximum. Meyers claimed the scales hadn't been balanced in advance.

Antuoferno, 34, is a former world champion and has fought 54 times, winning 39, losing six, and drawing nine. Hagler, 32, is a former world champion and has fought 56 times, winning 52, losing six, and drawing eight.

Shiner wins AA in delayed state tourney

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Shiner charged back with vigor after a four-hour rain delay Saturday to wallop Gladewater Union Grove 13-6 in the Class 2A semifinals at the soggy state schoolboy baseball tournament.

Rain washed out all 10 opening day games Thursday, and only Shiner and Union Grove could finish a game Saturday.

University Interscholastic League officials announced the tournament, which was scheduled to last two days, would be extended through a sixth day on Tuesday.

No games will be played Sunday, but five — including the Class 4A and 5A championships — are scheduled for Monday.

On Tuesday teams in Class A, 2A and 3A will play for titles.

The tournament was canceled for the weekend at 3 p.m. Saturday with defending champion Waskom and Pottsboro tied 0-0 after one hitless inning. Kenneth Jackson, a 1980 all-tournament player, was pitching for Waskom, and Dwayne Williams was on the mound for Pottsboro.

Uncharacteristically talks noise after TKO win

Holmes wins in Round 3

HOLMES POUNDS SPINKS — Heavyweight champion Larry Holmes pounds challenger Leon Spinks against the ropes during the third round of their title fight at Joe Louis Arena in Detroit Friday night. Holmes defeated Spinks by a TKO in the round.

That's why he's backing strike

Rose grateful because free agency helped him

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pete Rose says he waited 18 years and two months for his chance to break Stan Musial's career National League hit record, so he can wait until the major league baseball strike is solved.

"Hit No. 3,631 will have to wait another day or two, or whatever it takes," said the 40-year-old Rose after he learned the players were on strike.

Rose tied Musial's record of 3,630 Wednesday night when he singled in the first inning off Houston's Nolan Ryan.

Rose had hoped to break the record Friday night in the opener of a three-game series against Atlanta's Garryl Perry.

The strike, over the free agent compensation issue, struck him out on that as clubs canceled games until further notice.

Rose said he would just have to go along with the decision by the Major League Baseball Players Association.

"Just because I'm going after a record doesn't make me feel any different. I wish there was baseball, but there's not," he said.

Rose appeared in the Phillies' clubhouse Friday to pick up his personal belongings. The players aren't allowed to take any team property.

Now that the series with Atlanta is wiped out, Rose said he's concentrating on perhaps getting the record Monday night against the Cincinnati Reds.

That would be ironic, since Rose played 16 years for the Reds, playing out his option and taking advantage of the free agent rule to sign a four-year, $800,000-plus per season contract with the Phillies.

He projected even further.

"What if the strike goes the whole homestead? Maybe I'll have to go to Houston Wednesday and try to break it off Ryan," Rose said.

After giving up the single to Rose Wednesday, Ryan struck out the first baseman three times.

"I'll just hang in there and hope they get this resolved quickly," Rose said. "Maybe the owners now know the players are serious."

Rose said that while he was concerned about himself and the other players, he was worried about the affect the strike might have on the fans.

"I don't want the fans to get down on baseball," said Rose, adding that he may go to Cincinnati to work out.

"I'll hang around here a while, and if it drags on I'll go home to Cincinnati where I have better facilities to work out," he said.

Rose said he was disappointed about the strike, but added "if this is what it takes to settle things, it's all right with me."

"I appreciate the job the players association has done the last 10 or 12 years. The free agency system helped me," Rose recalled.

EATING HIS HAT? — Phillies Pete Rose chews the bill of his cap Wednesday night after returning to dugout following his third strike out in game against the Houston Rockets at Philadelphia. Rose tied Stan Musial's career National League hitting record at 3,630 in first inning, but was unable to break the record in the next three times at the plate.

LeMans race marred by death

Le Mans, France (AP) — One of the most exciting Le Mans 24 hours races in many years turned to tragedy in the opening hours Saturday as a driver and a race marshal were killed in separate accidents.

Veteran French sports car racer Jean-Louis Lafosse, 41, died en route to a hospital after his Porsche crashed and disintegrated for unknown reasons. Swiss Grand Prix driver Marc Surer described it as "the worst accident I've ever seen."

Lafosse was a Le Mans regular who placed second overall in 1975 and 1976. He was married and had a son.

A French marshal, whose name was withheld, was killed and another badly injured earlier when the suspension failed on Belgian Thierry Boutsen's WM Peugeot at some 200 miles an hour on the Mulsanne straight.

Boutsen miraculously escaped unhurt although the car was in three pieces.

Another accident had the pace car outslowing the field later. About one hour of the first four hours were run under the yellow accident flag rules.

The accidents cast a pall on the efforts of Belgian ace Jacky Ickx to win a record fifth time in the classic. He got a track record in the works Porsche 936 speedster to take the pole in qualifying.

With Briton Derek Bell, another past winner, Ickx led the race as night drew on, despite early engine problems.

But the racing was close and the Porsche driven by Briton Gordon Spice and France's Francois Migault was on the same lap as the Porsche. Five of the cars built by local driver Jean Rondeau were entered in a bid to repeat Rondeau's 1980 victory, the first ever by a constructor-driver.

Other early leaders were the 1979 winners, Florida brothers Don and Bill Whittington and Chicago's Ted Field in a Porsche 935 K3 coupe, but they slipped down the field with mechanical problems.

The third Whittington brother, Dale, 21, spun his Porsche 908 speedster — the car Ickx placed second in last year — into the guard rails and it required extensive front-end repairs, also dropping off the leader board.

NASCAR star Cale Yarborough of Sardis, S.C., was another driver who crashed early in the race, putting his Chevrolet Camaro out of the event.

DETROIT (AP) — The anger blazed in Larry Holmes' eyes.

He had just defended his World Boxing Council heavyweight championship, destroying Leon Spinks Friday night with a barrage of punches that bordered on awesome. Now he had a message for the world.

"I may sound arrogant or bitter," he began, "but I'm going to tell you what it's really all about. I'm rich already. I don't fight for money. I fight because I have to convince you people that no one can beat me."

Then he wheeled and began a cheering chant with his brother, Jake.

"I'm the champion. I've proved it day in and day out. I'm bad! I know I'm bad! You know I'm bad! Nobody can beat me! You bring 'em in and I'll beat 'em!"

Holmes was basking in the glory of one of his most impressive victories. Trainer Eddie Futch, handling Holmes for only the second time, offered an explanation of why the champion was so high after his 38th professional victory and 28th knockout.

The champion landed close to a dozen straight punches and Spinks finally fell to the canvas. When the ex-champ got his feet, he was clearly in trouble and Holmes closed in, determined to finish the job. He had Spinks trapped on the ropes and was raining carefully measured punches on his man when Leon's cornermen threw in the towel and referee Richard Steele signalled the end of the fight at 2:34.

"Leon almost got hurt tonight because the referee didn't do his job," Holmes said. "He should have stopped the fight after the first knockdown. Leon was taking several punches on the side of his head. There was a gash under his eye. He was groggy in his corner."

During Holmes' final attack, Leon's brother, light heavyweight contender Michael Spinks, jumped up on the apron of the ring, shouting "Stop it! Stop it!" But the fight went on for at least another minute with Leon catching leather.

When it finally ended, Holmes had a message for Michael.

"I told him, 'Take care of Leon. Make these people take care of Leon.' I don't think they've treated him properly."

Jerry Sawyer, Spinks' manager, said he thought the referee had acted properly and that Leon, who was fighting for the heavyweight crown for the third time in 15 professional bouts, would be back.

"He fought the best fighter in the world today," Sawyer said. "He's only 27. He'll fight again."

So will Holmes, 31, and the man in the on deck circle may be Gerry Cooney. Before Friday night's fight, Promoter Don King offered Cooney $5 million to fight the Holmes-Spinks winner. But Cooney apparently already has a fall date set with World Boxing Association champion Mike Weaver and isn't about to climb into the ring with Holmes right now. That fight, though, is tied up in a WBA dispute.

Holmes was bitter when Cooney's name came up and tried to get at the young heavyweight, who was at ringside, taking pictures of the bout.

"I'm not interested in Gerry Cooney, unless he signs," Holmes said. "If he comes in here today, I'll punch him in the mouth for free. He's a deformed kid with only a left hand. He's fought nobody. He's a white hope. If he was black, he'd be nowhere."

"I'm going on vacation with my wife," he said. "I'm gonna drive my Rolls Royce. If I see him on the road, I'll blow the horn at him."

Then Holmes added the final insult for Cooney.

"A few years ago, I began working with mentally retarded kids," he said. "I think he was in one of the camps."

Cooney first on Holmes' list

DETROIT (AP) — Larry Holmes accepted praise Saturday for his devastating performance against Leon Spinks and was plagued by questions about Gerry Cooney.

"That's a fight I'd like to close the books on," the World Boxing Council heavyweight champion said of a bout against top-ranked Cooney. Holmes, 31, has indicated he wants to retire soon.

"It's only a matter of time," Dennis Rappaport, Cooney's co-manager, said of a Holmes-Cooney match.

But first Cooney is going to fight Mike Weaver, the World Boxing Association champion, in October, although the WBA has threatened to withdraw title recognition from Weaver if he does not first defend against James "Quick" Tillis.

"The fight has been signed with or without the WBA's blessing," said Rappaport, who added that Sam Glass of Tiffany Promotions would offer Holmes $5.5 million to fight Cooney within 90 to 120 days of the Weaver fight.

Before Holmes' victory over Spinks, promoter Don King made a $5 million offer to Cooney to fight Holmes next.

"If he has so many problems with the WBA he can get out of it by signing to fight me," said Holmes. "He makes statements that I don't want to fight him. You guys know he don't want to fight me."

"First of all, I would rather fight Larry Holmes," said Cooney. "Larry Holmes is an easier fight than Mike Weaver."

None of the charges made by the two camps will hurt the gate should the fight be arranged as expected.

But Holmes professes a genuine dislike for Cooney.

After the fight Friday night Holmes was being interviewed by ABC sportscaster Howard Cosell, who asked him about fighting Cooney. Holmes saw Cooney, who had attended the fight, and shouted, "Get that guy out of here." He began waving an arm. The arm truck Cosell's microphone, causing Cosell to suffer a cut lower lip.

Unconventional Ballesteros set for US Open, and possibly US tour

By the Associated Press

The young golfing gold prospector from the village of Santander in northern Spain is back in the United States, grubbing for the mother lode.

"I play one tournament in the last four weeks — the French Open, where I finish third," said 24-year-old Severiano Ballesteros, who flew in Sunday for the $400,000 Westchester Classic this weekend.

"That is much money. My mind it is no longer tired. I feel good. Maybe this week I get sharp for the U.S. Open."

It's the Open next week over the historic Merion course in Pennsylvania that is the center of Ballesteros' eye.

He won the British Open in 1979, the youngest player in this century to do so, and came to America the following spring to grab the Masters at age 23, the youngest winner ever.

Then, with two major titles dangling from his golf bag, he flew to Baltusrol in Springfield, N.J., amid great fanfare to take on Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson and other American giants in the U.S. Open.

But oops! The young Spaniard showed up seven minutes late for his second round teeoff and was disqualified.

It was embarrassing for everyone — a rarity which left the blame unplaced. Ballesteros went into immediate seclusion, explaining through friends that he had misread his starting time. Some said he simply overslept. The club and tournament officials were red-faced, feeling that somewhere they may have derelict in not being more alert in getting so important a guest to the tee.

Seve, as the guys call him, burst upon the international golf scene like a lightning flash when he finished second in the British Open in 1976 at the age of 19. Little known in his native Spain, where the passion is soccer, he became the darling of British and European galleries.

They adopted him as their favorite son. He became their rooting interest in the one-sided war against the dominating and filthy rich Yanks from across the Atlantic.

Tall, thin, with boyish good looks and an exciting game which is a throwback to a younger Arnold Palmer — power plus a gambling, scrambling, go-for-broke philosophy — he radiates charm and charisma.

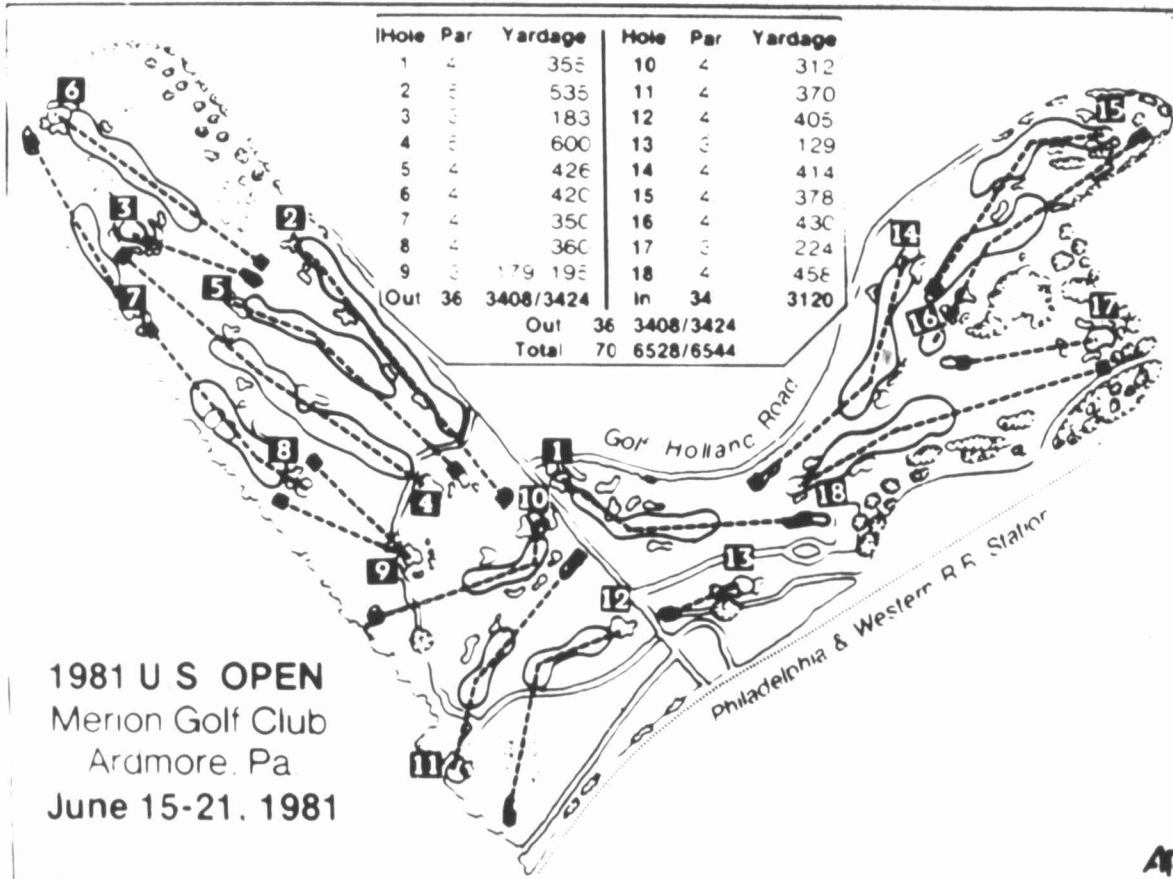

In the 1979 British Open at Royal Lytham, loyal fans had to follow their hero through jungle and sand — he was on only 14 of 72 fairways — before watching him hit off a parking lot for a birdie on the 70th to clinch the crown.

Ballesteros repeated his jungle safari when he won the Masters, exploring pines and flower beds never before visited by man, but he survived, and the fans loved it.

"It doesn't matter where you hit the drive if you sink the putt," he said.

Jealous critics call him "lucky." The top players — Nicklaus, Watson, Ben Crenshaw, Ray Floyd — accord him the highest respect. Nevertheless, there are those who contend he can never achieve true greatness until he goes head-on against the best on the $11 million U.S. tour.

"When I get more experience," he says, "Who knows? maybe next year."

Yugoslavian born Dallasites hoping to make US Youth World Cup team Citizenship affecting young soccer stars

RICHARDSON, Texas (AP) — Yugoslavian immigrants Dejan and Damir Perge are not citizens yet — but already they know the frustrations of being caught in the unyielding web of American bureaucratic red tape.

Now it looks like their story has one of those fabled American happy endings.

The 17-year-old twins, who moved to the United States with their parents in 1974, are believed to be among the best young soccer players in America.

Good enough to have been selected to the 12-member all-district high school team and good enough to compete June 20-25 in Monroe, La., for a spot on the regional team.

The U.S. representatives in the Youth World Cup competition will be selected from the regional team, but the twins had been told they would miss their chance because their parents — who applied for citizenship a year ago — cannot be sworn in as citizens until four days after the deadline for national team selection.

When workers in the Dallas office of U.S. Sen. John Tower heard about the twins' plight, they knew the ball was in their court. Tower aide Dottie De La Garza convinced the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service to send a letter to the soccer federation promising the Perge boys would be sworn in as citizens at the next scheduled ceremony.

Under U.S. law, minors of naturalized citizens automatically become citizens and are not required to take the oral citizenship test.

When their parents applied for citizenship last year, the family were sure the process would be completed by now, said the twins' father, Ivan Perge.

"It seems like something could be done to get them sworn in early, but the government people say no," said Perge earlier. "I'm not talking about this just because they are my sons. They are good at attacking and scoring and things like that. They could make the (national) team."

Dejan and Damir graduated in May from J.J. Pearce High School, where they were star players on the team that won the district championship. Both have won soccer scholarships to attend Southern Methodist University beginning in the fall.

"To bend the soccer rule would affect many, many people," said Damir. "It would be easier if the citizenship rule could be changed."

Dejan and Damir still have to clear the hurdle of making the team. But after all they've been through, that just might seem easy.

Comeback might not help Duran's image

By the Associated Press

All fighters start out chasing tomorrow, but most of them end up cherishing some yesterdays and regretting others.

June 16, 1980. A crowd of about 5,000 people in a downtown shopping-hotel complex sing "Happy Birthday" Roberto Duran acknowledged the salute, a smile creasing the face that in the ring became a mask that put fear in the hearts of countless opponents.

Four days later, the fighter, who was known as "Hands of Stone," who asked no quarter and gave none, beat Sugar Ray Leonard to win the World Boxing Council championship. Duran's performance was one of white-hot intensity, a performance that greatly enhanced the legend of the Panamanian national hero who had dominated the lightweight division in the 1970s.

Wednesday night, six days before his 30th birthday, Duran is scheduled to box a four-round exhibition at the Felt Forum, a small arena adjacent to the main Madison Square Garden arena where he won the lightweight title in 1972.

A Duran appearance in any fight arena, but especially in one where the majority of fans are Latinos, used to bring forth cries of admiration. Wednesday night, he will get some applause. But he also probably will hear, "No mas, No mas."

Those were the words he uttered when he walked away from Leonard in the eighth round, surrendering the title Nov 25 in New Orleans. Duran maintains he had stomach pains.

Whatever the reason for one of the most shocking endings in major-fight history, Duran now wants to wipe out that night by fighting Leonard again.

The scheduled exhibition will be in his first public appearance in the ring since the title loss. His actual return to combat is supposed to be against Fernand Mercotte of Canada early next month at 154 pounds. Duran reportedly now weighs in the mid-160s.

Leonard has said repeatedly he will not fight Duran again. But even if a third fight took place, and even if Duran should win, he will never be able to fully cherish the many yesterdays of greatness because of the yesterday when he said, "No mas."

Roberto Duran works out for a hopeful rematch with Sugar Ray Leonard.

Army Soldier's Medal awarded to Martin

President Ronald Reagan, authorized by an act of Congress July 2, 1926, awarded the U.S. Army Soldier's Medal for Heroism to Specialist Four Walter J. Martin Jr.

A certificate issued shows that Specialist Four Martin distinguished himself on July 10, 1980, while attending the 172nd Infantry Brigade Cold Weather Orientation Course at Fort Richardson, Ala.

During a stream crossing, a fellow student, Private Dela Cruz, missed a catch rope which was the final safety measure at the stream crossing, and was swept downstream.

Specialist Martin raced several hundred meters through thick underbrush, and, without regard for his safety, jumped into the stream.

After repeated attempts, he was able to grasp Private Cruz, and bring her to safety.

Specialist Martin is the son of Walter J. Martin of Clovis, N.M., and Jan Armstrong, Amarillo.

He is married to the former Charlesta Ann Dickens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Dickens, 609 Circle Dr.

Prior to entering the Army, Specialist Martin attended Big Spring High School, graduating in 1978.

Woolley to train agents in Far West District

FORT STOCKTON — Ronald C. Woolley of Sulphur Springs, who has served as a county Extension agent in three Texas counties during his 10-year career as an educator, has been appointed district Extension director in the Far West District, effective July 1.

Woolley will fill the vacancy created when Ray Siegmund retired last year. He will be headquartered at the Texas A&M University Extension Center in Fort Stockton.

In announcing the appointment, Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, Extension Service director, said Woolley will coordinate the activities of all county Extension agents as they plan to carry out educational programs for clientele, including ranchers, farmers, agri-business people, consumers, 4-H and other groups in the 12-county area for which he is responsible.

The counties include Brewster, Culberson, El Paso, Hudspeth, Jeff Davis, Loving, Pecos, Presidio, Reeves, Terrell, Ward and Wilkin.

Woolley, in cooperation with his co-worker, Mrs. Roberta Johnson, will recruit and train agents for the Far West District and cooperate with other Extension administrators in planning and implementing educational programs for area citizens, Pfannstiel added.

The new district director began his Extension career in Hill County in February of 1971 as an assistant county agricultural agent, and in September of the following year, his title was changed to county Extension agent. He transferred to Travis County in June of 1973 and served there as county Extension agent until March of 1976, when he transferred to his present position in Hopkins County.

There is a lot of good in the old girl yet

Settles, landmark hotel, awaits new purchaser

By MICKIE DICKSON

The historic Settles Hotel, showplace of Big Spring for many years, is again for sale. The 15-story structure, the tallest in the city, was described as a "Gem of modernistic architecture" in the Settles Hotel section of the Big Spring Daily Herald Sept. 28, 1930. It opened formally with a gala dinner and ball on Oct. 1 and 2, 1930, the former date the birthday of its builder, E.V. McCright.

One veteran of 28 years in the hotel business and first manager of the Settles, said, "I have no hesitancy of comparing in class, service and beauty the Settles Hotel to the New Yorker in New York City. In fact, I think this hotel is superior in many respects."

The Big Spring Daily Herald published a Settles Hotel section Sept. 28, 1930, devoted to the 15-story building, and the grand opening of the magnificent edifice.

Michael Cool and his 11-piece stage band from Lake Worth Casino filled the 300-person ballroom to capacity both opening nights.

The dreams, aspirations and fortune of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Settles, hardy pioneers of West Texas enriched by oil found on their heretofore poor ranch land, were tied up in the venture. The brilliant opening proved to be ill-timed, for the curtain of the depression was descending throughout the nation. With fewer and fewer guests arriving, the Settles Hotel stood largely vacant, becoming a stark reminder of the futility of too-extravagant hopes.

The Settles had sold off much of their oil royalty and used up most of their lease money. In addition, they mortgaged the land and the building to the American National Life Insurance Company for some $350,000. M.L. Tinsley, a personable West Texas young man was hired by the Settles to take charge of their affairs. Subsequently, the Settles found themselves short of money to complete and furnish the hotel.

To raise additional funds, the Settles mortgaged their entire ranch on June 10, 1930 to Group No. 1 Oil Corporation for $125,000. This was to be paid in six months. Unable to meet the obligation, they obtained a six months extension, then defaulted. The ranch sold at public auction on Dec. 1, Group No. 1 being the highest bidder and bought the property for $75,000 which it applied as a credit on the note. The Settles were forced into bankruptcy, losing the Settles Hotel Corporation, when Mrs. Settles was 68 and he was 73 years of age.

The Settles Hotel entertained civic clubs, women's clubs, conventions, famous visitors, railroad, bus and airline employees and famous bands, serving as the community center of Big Spring from the outset.

Rupert Ricker, the Big Spring resident who assembled the block for the first major oil strike in the Permian Basin, taught a men's Bible class at the Settles several years, often attended by 50 to 100 men.

The Big Spring Athletic Club once rented facilities in the hotel.

Organizations which met regularly at the hotel until a few years ago were Rotary, Downtown Lions, Kiwanis, American Business Club, railroad lodges, an association of insurance agents and the Big Spring Club. The Eagles Lodge Hall was located in the hotel for years.

An average of three dances a week were held. Musicians entertaining during the early years included band leader Wilson Humber and band, pianist "Jelly" Brooks; Blue Steel and his band and Jack Free and his band.

The Settles Coffee Shop was considered one of the city's finest restaurants in the early days.

The 1905 Hyperion Club held their Golden Anniversary there in 1955.

To drivers for Continental Trailways, Kerrville Bus Line and Texas-New Mexico Bus Lines, the Settles was "home away from home," for the companies had contracts with the hotel for lodging them. Texas & Pacific trainmen also stayed there.

During World War II American Airlines contracted for a floor of the Settles for a time, where pilots and stewardesses stayed overnight, since Big Spring was a division point.

The exterior beauty of the hotel rivaled anything the southwest had at the time. It is purely individual in style, an American product, and slightly modernistic. The simplicity of the building, especially the set-back style, produces a monumental effect.

The tower, 15 stories high, is faced with vitrified light-colored buff brick trimmed in cast imitation limestone.

The stone trimmings are molded in heavy relief to produce highlights in the few decorative units. The pier bases and show window bulkheads are faced with polished cast imitation Texas pink granite.

The structural frame of the building is of reinforced concrete, built by the use of the concrete floor joist system of construction.

Interior partitions throughout the first three floors are of hollow clay building tile. Three-inch gypsum tile was used in the remaining subdividing partitions.

All material, with the exception of doors and windows, is strictly fireproof. A large reserve storage tank in the penthouse serves firelines the building. In addition there is a standpipe running the height of the building with provision for the city fire department to connect pumps to the hose lines and pump water direct to the inside or to the house tank.

Six stores occupy the ground floor in addition to the main lobby, coffee shop and dining room. All have plate glass windows and terrazzo floors. All store buildings and the coffee shop open off the main lobby, which has north and west entrances to the street. The coffee shop also has an entrance north to the street.

The north section of the mezzanine contains a banquet hall, ball room and former beauty shop on each side of a women's lounge. Farther toward the west is a wide-arched doorway into another corridor from which opened four rooms of varying sizes for the use of clubs, parties and other functions. floor is 51 by 54 feet.

Three apartments, three rooms each, are located on the twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth floors. The penthouse, originally the men's club, occupies the entire fifteenth floor with accessible porches on each end.

Six large sample rooms are located on the third floor for displaying merchandise. These rooms have baths and are capable of being converted into guest quarters.

Large sample rooms are in the basement as are public washrooms and storage space. The laundry was located in the basement where laundry and trash chutes with openings on each floor terminate. The basement measures 108 by 100 feet.

The American Elevator Company installed the two passenger elevators in the Settles which are geared at 600 feet per minute. They have a landing on each floor from the basement to the fourteenth floor inclusive.

The Settles Hotel's total height is 180 feet from sidewalk to summit. The ground floor covers the entire building site, 100 by 140 feet. The second or mezzanine floor is also 100 by 140 feet. The third floor dimensions are 51 by 140 feet. The guest room floors from the fourth to fourteenth floors inclusive are 51 by 80 feet. The fifteenth floor is 51 by 54 feet.

Cunningham & Phillips No. 4 Drug Store occupied the corner store building in the Settles, owned by C.W. Cunningham and "Shine" Phillips, beloved Big Spring citizens.

G.E. McNew, a pioneer citizen, operated the Settles Hotel Barber Shop. Other barbers working with him were E.P. Darrow, Robert Winn and J.B. Stewart.

The Big Spring Public Service Company which supplied Big Spring with gas service, displayed gas appliances on sale in one of the stores for one week after the Settles opened.

The Chamber of Commerce occupied the suite of three rooms between Cunningham & Phillips Drug and the Settles Restaurant. Settles Package (liquor) Store occupied another commercial space.

The Settles Hotel started out with a staff of 45 employees, 37 of whom were Big Spring residents before the hotel opened. F.W. Crow, a native of Houston, was the first manager, having managed hotels in various cities throughout Texas as well as Ohio.

The Settles Hotel officially died May 21, 1980 when all occupants were moved out of the building. It stands vacant now, but is still architecturally and structurally sound, awaiting a purchaser to revitalize it into a habitable edifice once again.

Anyone interested in obtaining information on the purchase terms for the Settles Hotel should contact Mike Finnegan, C-o of Circle Leasing, Inc., 300 North Dallas Bank Tower, 12900 Preston Rd., Dallas, Texas 75230 or phone him at 214-233-0613.

FOR SALE — The $500,000 Settles Hotel, the pride of Big Spring in the 1930's, is for sale again. The Settles, long the community center of the town of 14,000 residents, was favorably compared to famous hotels in much larger cities such as the New Yorker in New York by many.

Major depression more common in women

Depression is a life-threatening condition

By TINA MILLER

Regardless of your age, race, social class, marital status or where you live, you have a one in 10 chance of becoming seriously depressed at some point in your life. For women, the chances are one in five. Recent figures indicate that depression is the leading cause of psychiatric hospitalization, with well over 250,000 hospitalized in 1970 alone.

Of these figures, six-percent of the depression for women and 3-percent of that for men will be serious enough to require hospitalization.

There are several factors that are involved in explaining the higher rate of depression among women. According to Dr. Wallace Hunter, acting superintendent of the Big Spring State Hospital, part of the explanation lies in the varying amounts of the female hormone, endocrine, during the monthly cycle. "The historical role of women as submissive and non-aggressive has also contributed to the problem," stated Hunter. "Until recently," he continued, "the many talented and creative women in the world have been frustrated in their attempts at rewarding careers."

DR. WALLACE HUNTER — Dr. Hunter, who has practiced psychiatry for 15 years, believes that society and television contribute in part to the high rate of depression.

Other causes for the high rate of depression among women are the "housewife" syndrome and the "empty nest" syndrome. The "housewife" syndrome usually occurs when the husband becomes preoccupied with his career, and most of her conversation is with small children. The "empty nest" syndrome occurs when all the children, to whom the woman has devoted her life, leave home. The number of women suffering from these types of depression is on the decrease with the increased number of working wives and mothers.

Though depression occurs more frequently in women, they are by no means the only ones who suffer. All age groups, from small children to the elderly, can become very seriously depressed. "Symptoms of childhood depression are different from the symptoms displayed by adults," stated Hunter. "The child may have an extreme phobia, (fear) of school, for instance, that will cause him to develop a severe stomachache or headache."

"Adolescents who become depressed, however, may develop destructive or self-destructive tendencies such as vandalism or driving at extremely high rates of speed," he continued. "Middle age is also often a time of depression due to body changes and the already discussed 'empty nest' syndrome. The elderly often suffer from depression because of the deaths of many friends, relatives and a spouse."

The National Association of Mental Health defines depression as "an emotional state of dejection and sadness, ranging from mild discouragement and downheartedness to feelings of utter hopelessness and despair."

Everyone becomes depressed at some time, and normal or mild depression, sometimes referred to as "the blues" should not be cause for alarm. "The blues" are often caused by unmet expectations related to events such as Christmas, moving, and giving birth to a child. These mild depressions usually do not interfere with the family, social life or occupation, and the individual recovers within a few hours or several days.

"However," said Hunter, "when depression does interfere with the occupation, family and social life, and persists for 30 days or longer, this is an indication that some type of treatment is needed."

The "Diagnostic and Statistical Manual", an authoritative book published by the American Psychiatric Society, defines true clinical depression as having at least four of the following eight symptoms: poor appetite and/or weight loss, or substantial weight gain and increased appetite; insomnia (inability to sleep) or hypersomnia (almost constant sleep); constant pacing, weeping, inability to stay still, or complete lack of energy and speaking in monotonous; loss of interest in work and pleasurable activities; loss of energy and recurring fatigue; feelings of worthlessness and excessive guilt; indecisiveness, inability to think or concentrate; and recurring thoughts of death and suicide.

Families and friends of the clinically depressed person should be patient and tolerant, but not overindulgent since this could increase the feelings of worthlessness and guilt. "What people should not do," emphasized Hunter, "is tell the depressed person to 'get busy' or 'cheer up'. The family must understand that he cannot cure himself, just as the person who is suffering from any illness cannot cure himself."

"The best thing that family members and friends can do," continued Hunter, "is to encourage the person to seek help and do it soon. They should point out that the sooner help is received, the sooner the person will feel better." He also stated that the family should understand, and make the depressed person understand that his illness is common and genuine, and absolutely nothing to be ashamed of.

Anyone who is suffering from a major depression is preoccupied with death and suicide, says Hunter, and 66-percent to 75-percent of those who attempt suicide will give some warning to their doctor, family member or friend. "A suicide threat should never be taken lightly," warned Hunter. "The threat is a cry for help, and professional help should be sought quickly."

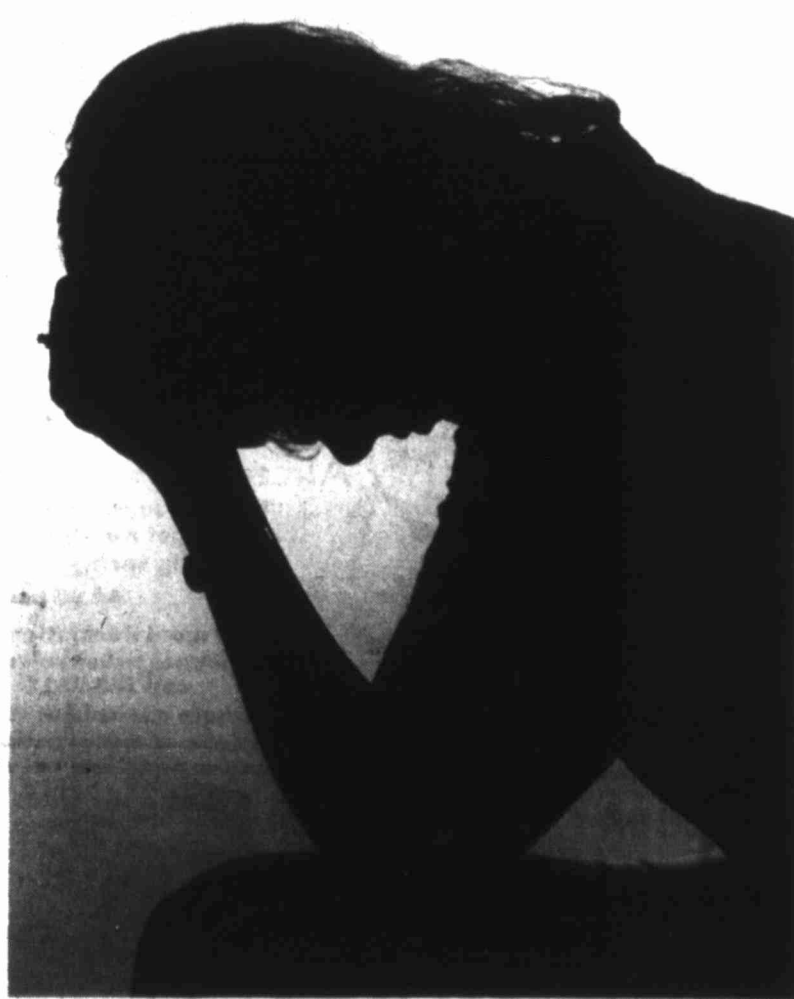

Women attempt suicide about three times as frequently as men, yet men succeed in their attempts about three times as often as women. These seemingly inconsistent figures are explained by the fact that women usually use drugs in their attempts, while men generally use more lethal tools such as guns. Of the individuals who are clinically depressed, one in 200 will successfully commit suicide.

Suicide is particularly prevalent in college students, and, according to Hunter, is the second leading cause of death among that group. "The problem is greatest in large colleges," he stated. "Students who were very dedicated and studious in high school find themselves thrown together with many others with the same amount of dedication. Suddenly, he or she is making B's and C's, which he has never made before, and he perceives that he is a failure."

Depression can be brought on by factors other than loss or disappointment. A chemical imbalance in the brain can create serious mood disorders, and these symptoms differ somewhat from the other types of depression. The victim of a biochemical disorder shows such symptoms as decreased physical activity, early awakening, loss of appetite and weight loss, constipation, and usually feels worse in the morning than during the rest of the day.

In extreme cases, this chemical imbalance can cause a condition formerly known as manic-depressive.

CRISIS — Depression is not an equal-opportunity illness. Twice as many women are troubled by this condition as men. Doctors attribute this imbalance to a combination of biology, psychology, and life experiences.

Now referred to as Bipolar disorder, the victim fluctuates between extreme elation, when he feels extremely self-confident and does everything at a very rapid pace, to total depression. Though the "fall" from elation to depression occurs rapidly, prescribed drugs are now used to make the change more gradual.

Victims of biochemical disorders are successfully treated with medication and psychotherapy.

Dr. Hunter believes that today's society, and specifically television, is partially responsible for the increasing number of depressed people. "Television makes people think that they deserve the 'good life', and that the world owes them a living," he stated. "Everything comes so easily on TV, and problems are solved so quickly that people believe they are cheated when things don't happen that way."

Most depression can be cured with out-patient care and without hospitalization. "The chances for a complete recovery without recurrence is very good," said Hunter. "Once cured, the individual is again the person he was before the depression."

"The most important thing to remember," he again emphasized, "is to seek help as soon as possible. Early treatment can mean the difference between a quick recovery and a lengthy illness."

Couple is united in Berea Baptist

Mr. and Mrs. Cody Dwayne Carroll are on a wedding trip to Possum Kingdom following their marriage Friday evening in the Berea Baptist Church.

The bride, formerly Tammy Burgess, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerald Burgess, 2406 West 16th. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H.D. Carroll, 408 Donley, and Mr. and Mrs. John Hatch, El Paso.

The Rev. Eddie Tingle, pastor of the church, performed the 7:30 ceremony before an archway entwined with greenery. Silk flower arrangements of roses, carnations, daisies and baby's breath in shades of white, blue, yellow and pink stood on each side. Two large pot plants and 15-branch spiral candelabras completed the altar decorations.

Vocal selections were performed by Beverly and Leslie Norman, and Beverly Norman provided accompaniment on the piano.

The bride chose to wear a formal-length gown of white chiffon organza. The fitted bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline and was trimmed with seed pearls. The full, circular skirt was edged in matching lace, and fell to a chapel-length train. The long, Bishop sleeves were gathered into wide lace cuffs, and the fingertip-length veil of bridal net flowed gracefully from a headpiece of lace and pearls.

A cascading bouquet of silk rosebuds, carnations, daisies and baby's breath in blue, white, yellow and pink completed the bridal ensemble.

Charlotte Burgess, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Mindy Claxton and Kathy Carroll, sister of the groom, were bridesmaids.

Best man was Rod Urguidi, Sacramento, Calif. Ray Mayo and Mike Terry were groomsmen. Seating the guests were Gale Pittman, Troy Craft, cousin of the bride, and Robert Burgess, brother of the bride.

Cut clothing costs, stay in fashion with 'update '81'

For summer, update last summer's wardrobe, and with an eye toward fall and winter '81 as you go, you'll be right in style at little cost. Inventory still-wearable items, note the voids, study current trends, and then begin your own "Update '81."

Color is the most visible part of a wardrobe, and often it depends on seasonal trends. Update the season's bright colors with pastels. Fashion-right colors especially important are corals, peaches, apricots, aquas and turquoise.

Update last season's solids with fashionable patterns and prints, particularly madras-like plaids, ethnic prints, folk art and splashy florals. Also jungle prints, camouflage military looks and paisies. Border prints also have returned as a popular patterned look.

Add lace borders or edging to collars, cuffs, belts, and hemlines for feminine detail, or consider a lace applique for a pocket or other focal point. Often lace can be recycled or resued from garments that are no longer wearable and even from other household items such as tablecloths.

Some designers are calling this the year of the ruffle.

Add garments with ruffled detail such as tiered skirts, flounce skirts, dresses or blouses with ruffle collars. A ruffle or lace-trimmed blouse is an excellent update for last year's more tailored, stricter-looking garments.

Tunes are particularly strong for fall and winter '81, and in an all-weather fabric, they can update straight-leg pants or skirts now and continue fashionable into cool-weather seasons.

Dropped or long-waisted designs are big news for dresses. Re-do a straight-line unwaisted garment by cutting it apart along the hipline and adding a fuller, contrasting skirt.

Jewelry is bolder and larger than it has been for a number of seasons. Rummage through your jewelry collection — you may find some ethnic looks or large woods, plastic or ceramic necklaces, bracelets or earrings. Check by garage sales, too.

In wearing bold jewelry, plan carefully to emphasize desirable features and draw attention away from those less desirable.

Shorter heels are very definitely the trend. Some heel heights will shorten easily without changing the arch — ask your shoe repairman about the possibilities and cost.

Skirt hemlines are shorter now — worn right below the knee or midknee. Trends for fall show even shorter lengths — or much longer lengths, such as mid-calf.

In general, think "fun" when you start "Update '81". Updating wardrobes can be fun — and challenging. Many possibilities exist, depending on the garments and personal preference.

You can update your wardrobe with little or no expense and, at the same time, create a flattering, workable wardrobe that looks as fresh as today.

MRS. JOHN ROBERT ANDERSON

Vows are exchanged in Baptist church

The First Baptist Church of La Grange was the setting for the June 13 wedding of Kevva Lynn Tucker and John Robert Anderson.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E.L. Tucker, West Point. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rich Anderson, Borden County.

The Rev. Harlan Birdwell of the St. Andrews Episcopal Church, Roswell N.M., performed the 4 p.m. ceremony. He was assisted by the Rev. James Shugart, pastor.

The couple exchanged vows before an altar decorated with two large standards of pink and white gladioli interspersed with white daisies and baby's breath. Embankments of greenery completed the decorations.

Pre-nuptial music was performed at the harp by Mary Anderson, sister of the groom. Miss Anderson was joined by Ms. Gayle Orsak who played the traditional wedding marches on the organ.

The bride chose to wear a floor length gown of white organza. The bodice of the gown was overlaid in Chantilly lace and lace-edged ruffles encircled the off-the-shoulder neckline. A satin bow and streamers highlighted the skirt and chapel length train.

The gown was completed by a two tier veil of illusion. The longer fingertip-length tier was edged in Chantilly lace with the shorter blusher untrimmed. The veil was held in place by a bandeau headpiece accented by seed pearls. For something borrowed, the bride wore a pearl choker belonging to the groom's mother.

A cascading bouquet of pink sweetheart roses, baby's breath and stephanotis completed the bridal ensemble.

Mrs. Mate Smith, Vealmoor, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Lisa Hensley O'Donnell, and Rebecca Bumpass, Houston. Monte Smith Vealmoor, served as best man. Groomsmen were Dick and Mick O'Brien, Beeville. Ushers were Jeff Anderson, Refugio, and Bruce Barker, O'Donnell.

A reception honoring the couple was held immediately following the family ceremony at the Frisch Auf Country Club. The bride's table was covered with a white lace cloth holding a three tiered white bride's cake, arrangements of pink roses, and silver appointments. The groom's table held a basket of baby gladioli and pink roses. Chocolate cake was served.

Champagne and hors d'oeuvres were served to the guests. Assisting at the reception were Martha Anderson, sister of the groom, and Caryn Flynn, Houston. Mr. Bruce Barker registered the guests.

The bride is a graduate of Borden County High School and attended Southwest Texas State University, San Marcos.

The groom is also a graduate of Borden County High School and received his degree from Texas A&M University. He is currently employed in the family ranching operation in Borden County.

After a wedding trip to the Hawaiian Islands, the couple will be at home in Gail.

17th century music featured in wedding

Carole Ann Barrow became the bride of Dr. Keith D. Graumann, June 6, in the King of Glory Lutheran Church, Dallas.

The bride is the daughter of Lt. Commander David T. Barrow, Hampshire, England. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A.A. Graumann, 1903 Nolan.

The Rev. Don Haven, pastor of the church, performed the 4 p.m. ceremony before an altar decorated with a large arrangement of daisies, iris, bluebells and baby's breath. A single candle completed the altar decorations.

Dennis Doryck, organist, and Rosemary Dorman, flutist, accompanied Mary Jo Heath in the vocal selections. The music was a 17th century song, transcribed by the groom, which had not been performed since that century.

The bride chose to wear a formal-length gown of white satin. The full gown featured spaghetti straps, a sheer lace blouson overlay and a white satin bow in the back. The long sleeves were gathered at the wrists. She wore baby's breath in her hair, and carried a nosegay of white daisies, chrysanthemums and baby's breath.

Jonna Graumann, sister of the groom, was maid of honor, and Dr. William Stevens, Winona, Minn., was best man.

A.A. Graumann, father of the groom, and Richard Rehn, brother-in-law of the groom, were ushers.

Following the ceremony, the couple was honored with a reception in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rehn, brother-in-law and sister of the groom. Champagne punch, fruit punch and hors d'oeuvres were served from a round table covered with a white linen cloth. A three-tiered wedding cake, featuring split layers filled with strawberry jam and rum, was served from a rectangular table covered by a lace cloth. The cake was surrounded by fresh flowers, and flanked by additional arrangements of fresh flowers. Silver and crystal appointments were used.

Out-of-town guests attended from Wichita Falls, Lampasas, Big Spring and Norman, Okla.

The bride is a graduate of St. Anne's School, Sareham, Hampshire, England. She graduated from the Dundee College of Commerce, Dundee, Scotland, with a degree in business and secretarial science. The groom is a graduate of Big Spring High School, and attended Texas Christian University. He is a graduate of Oklahoma University, Norman, Okla., where he also received his master's degree and most recently a Doctorate of Musical Arts.

He has transcribed several music works by Antonio Vivaldi, some of which have been published.

Baptist ceremony unites Spears-Waters in Coahoma

Vows were exchanged in the First Baptist Church, Coahoma, Friday evening between Karen Lynne Spears and Timmy Dean Waters.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy R. Spears, Coahoma, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Waters, also of Coahoma.

Rev. Monroe Teeters, pastor of the church, performed the 8 p.m., double ceremony. The altar was flanked by spiral candelabras and 15-branch candelabra entwined with English ivy. The aisle was marked with hurricane candles, also decorated with English ivy.

Jay Phinney and Lori Phinney performed vocal selections, and were accompanied on the organ by Mrs. Guy White.

The bride chose to wear a traditional, formal-length gown of white silk organza, enhanced with chantilly lace. The A-line silhouette featured a wedding ring neckline and long, full Bishop sleeves. The fitted bodice was enhanced by a sheer yoke, outlined in matching lace and lace ruffles, and highlighted with bridal pearls. The skirt and chapel-length train finished in a deep lace flounce, and were bordered on each side with a band of chantilly lace. The waltz-length veil of silk illusion, edged in matching lace, fell from a lace Juliet cap.

Following tradition, the bride wore a Cameo belonging to her great-grandmother as something old, the gown was new, a sixpence was borrowed, and her garter was blue.

A bouquet of yellow roses and white daisies, accented with baby's breath and ribbon, completed the bridal ensemble.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was Carmen Holman, and Mrs. Kyle Bennett, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Andrea Fowler, Karen Woolverton, Gayla Paige, and Susan Spears and Brenda Darden, cousins of the bride.

Jim R. Waters, father of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were Jimmie, Monty, and Mike Waters, brothers of the groom, Steve Spears, brother of the bride, Ken Henson, and Mike Roberts.

Seating the guests were Kyle Bennett, brother-in-law of the bride, Phillip Ritchey, Mike Rupert and Shane Mayhall. Lighting candles for the ceremony were Darrell Spears, brother of the bride, Melissa McDaniels, cousin of the groom, and Dale Coates, cousin of the bride.

Lori Wyrick, Laynie Souter and Sara McMahan, cousin of the bride, were flower girls, and Jeff Richters, cousin of the bride, was the ring bearer.

Following the ceremony, the couple was feted with a reception in the Fellowship Hall of the church. The bride's table was covered with a gingham checked cloth, trimmed with white lace and yellow ribbon under a white lace cloth. The table featured a traditional wedding cake, brass candelabras, and silver and crystal appointments.

The groom's table, covered with a brown gingham checked cloth and brown skirt, featured a horseshoe-shaped chocolate cake. A copper coffee service and copper oil derrick also adorned the table.

Out-of-town guests attended from Kaufman, Forney, Blanket, Nixon, Hale Center, San Angelo, Decatur, Denton, Dallas, Midland, Odessa, Denver City, Allvold, Fort Worth, Abilene, Clovis, N.M., and Memphis, Tenn.

The bride is a 1981 graduate of Coahoma High School. The groom is also a 1981 Coahoma graduate, and is currently employed by Production Profiles in Odessa.

Following a wedding trip to the Mayan Dude Ranch in Bandera, the couple will make their home in Odessa.

Foreigner Exchanges Vows for Visa

DEAR ABBY: Put yourself in my shoes. Here's the situation: Your husband works with a 21-year-old foreigner who is in this country on some sort of two-year exchange program to learn a profession. His visa will expire in two months, and he is not yet qualified to practice his profession in his home country. In order that he might stay in this country longer to earn his professional ratings, he is marrying an 18-year-old American citizen. This girl works part time with both your husband and the young foreigner, and is head over heels in love with him. She has accepted his proposal of marriage and is planning a big church wedding for the end of June.

Your husband tells you that the young foreigner has told him that he is marrying the girl only so he can stay in this country a while longer, and has no intention of taking her home with him when he returns to his native country. You have only a speaking acquaintance with this girl, yet you are upset to know of her fiance's less-than-honorable intentions toward her. What would you do, if anything?

NAMELESS

DEAR NAMELESS: I would abide by the old caveat: "Let the buyer beware." But first I would find some way to make the "buyer" (namely, the bride) aware.

...

DEAR ABBY: When my granddaughter asked me when she would be 6½, I counted the months and days with her. We celebrated with half a cake and six and a half candles! I gave her half a birthday card and my husband put in a half-dollar. We sang "Happy Half-Birthday."

The next year she reminded me when her half-birthday was due, and her brothers also marked their half-birthdays on my calendar. Now my granddaughter is learning to play "Happy Half-Birthday" on the piano.

My husband says I was foolish to start this celebration. I claim the kids enjoy it and it does no harm. What do you think?

FLORENCE B.

DEAR FLORENCE: I think it's clever and fun. Tell Grandpa if he doesn't want to go along with it, he doesn't half to.

...

A.L. Lamplins' celebrate 40th anniversary Sunday afternoon

The parlor of the First Baptist Church will be the scene of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Lamplin's 40th wedding anniversary reception Sunday afternoon.

The couple's daughter and her husband, Jane and Mike Davis, and grandchildren will host the celebration from 3-5.

Arthur L. Lamplin was born and raised in Big Spring, attending school here and in Ira. Arthur met Ellen Scott at a dance when he was 33 years of age and she was 29. The couple were married six months later March 22, 1941, by Rev. J.O. Haynes, pastor of the First United Methodist Church.

The wedding ceremony was performed in the home of Mrs. Bob Eubanks where Ellen had lived while attending Big Spring High School.

The Lamplins returned from their honeymoon to the new home he had built for them at 1106 Eleventh Pl. where they have lived most of their married life. Ellen was the assistant to the Nurse and In-Service director of Big Spring State Hospital when they married. Arthur worked for Cosden.

Ellen Scott was born at Hartwells and attended BSHS a half day, working the other half, and graduating in 1931. She is a registered nurse, graduating from Hendrich Hospital, Abilene, in 1936 where she was supervisor of the charity unit her last year.

Lamplin worked for Refinery Engineers during World War II and they lived in Centralia, Ill., Detroit, Mich., Hunting, W.V. and Ashland, Ky. Wherever they moved, there was a shortage of nurses, so she would register and start private duty almost the next day.

The couple's one daughter, Jane, is married to Mike Davis, Denver, Colo., an architect and interior designer. They have two grandchildren.

Lamplin was in charge of salvage at Cosden Refinery Company when they retired in 1972. Ellen was In-Service Education Director at BSSH, having developed the program.

Out-of-town relatives will be attending the celebration from San Angelo, Snyder, Houston, Monahans, Lubbock, Midland, Ira, Ft. Worth and Waurika, Okla.

Conserve potato nutrients

Don't cook the nutrients out of potatoes, advises Marilyn Haggard, a foods and nutrition specialist.

In boiling potatoes, use as little water as possible — or steam them — and leave the skin on during cooking. These techniques will conserve nutrients, she adds.

Ms. Haggard is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

The band supplied sacred and classical music for the evening, which was warmly received by the group present. Other members of the band were: Jessie Hernandez, guitar; Gilbert Narbiaz, bass; Rudy Rivera, drums; and Edward Martinez, organ.

Your attendants' gifts represent an ongoing memory of your most important day, so why not make them as special as possible. Today's bride adds a personal touch by selecting gifts which may be engraved with the bridesmaid's name or monogram. Here at The ACCENT SHOPPE, we find many brides selecting silver bells, letter openers, or bookmarks as gifts which will be both useful and have lasting value. These items are then personalized by engraving which may include the names of the bride and groom, or simply the date of the wedding. Whatever the choice, today's bride looks for quality in gifts which express her personal style.
