FIFTY VARIETIES ARE RAISED ON J. F. WILKINSON FARM ON CREEK

Fifty kinds of vegetables, field crops are grown on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Wilkinson, southeast of Perryton on a creek illustrating the possibility of diversification in this section of the Panhandle.

Following is a list of some of the crops grown on the Wilkinson farm: potatoes, cucumbers, gerkins, Spanish sweet potatoes, Bermuda onions, cabage, huckleberries, radishes, carrots, parsnips, turnips, Swiss chard, oyster shell, cantaloupe, worm beans, mangles, squash, strawberries, grapes, apples, cherries, dewberries, mulberries, alfalfa, sweet clover, corn, hygiea, pink kaffir corn, crook-neck melo, straight-necked melo, Egyptian Sudan, barley, wheat, and a number of these kinds.

Mr. Wilkinson is growing a number of different varieties of grass pasture for four head of head sheep, forty head of two hundred chickens in head houses.

Apples and white corn were raised on the Wilkinson farm last year and by County Agent G. R. Allen to be sent to the Wonder exhibit at the Kansas free fair at Topeka.

Wilkinson has also consented to exhibit all his farm products to be sent to the Tri-State fair, if the Chamber of Commerce or some other organization will arrange the exhibit and transportation to Amarillo.

PRACTICAL JOKERS

Quite often some practical joker asks that some article be put in the paper as a joke on someone. Such a request is always refused. It comes only from some individual that does not realize the responsibility a newspaper owes to the community it serves—to tell the truth. He does it to satisfy some selfish motive, not realizing the seriousness of the offense.

Such a "joker" appeared at the Herald office last week and reported a fictitious wedding with Miss Opal Hanna, Perryton, and Harry T. Miller, Waka, as the principals. The Herald is glad to make this correction but we cannot feel anything but contempt toward the "poor sport" that would take such advantage of innocent parties.

GRANDMOTHER DIES

Attorney Jack Allen and Rupert Allen and their nephew, Jack Allen of Stinnett, left Wednesday evening for Henrietta, Texas, to attend the funeral services of their grandmother Allen, who passed away Tuesday night.

AMERICA IS GEARED TO PROHIBITION

Once more we have prohibition viewpoint of the operating industrialist as opposed to the viewpoint of the man like Mr. Raskob, who is concerned exclusively with the financing of industry. Henry Ford, as the foremost individual industrialist, sides with other great operators like Alfred P. Sloan, active head of General Motors; Walter Chrysler, head of the Chrysler company; and Dodge; W. C. Durant head of the Durant company; and the late Judge Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation; in recognizing the benefits of prohibition.

To Mr. Ford the legalized sale of intoxicants is unthinkable. He is aware of the shortcomings of law enforcement, of the operations of bootleggers, especially in his own city of Detroit, on the Canadian border. "Yet," he says, speaking of his great industrial plants, "liquor has ceased to be a problem with us. Leave the law as it is. So long as we have the law on our side, industry can enforce it."

This particular view of prohibition is most interesting. Come to think of it, industry does enforce the law. It does not tolerate the drunkard. Doubtless other industries as well as Mr. Ford's soon "spot" the bootlegger who undertakes to keep "open house" near their gates. General enforcement is the larger problem, and it must be solved. But a great help in its solution will be the fact that industrialists like Henry Ford already know its value and can look only with deep concern upon any radical modification of it. They, too, apart from the moral and social considerations involved, see that "America today is geared too high even to contemplate the return of old conditions."

FARMING A SCIENTIFIC PROFESSION

In a recent address H. M. Atkinson, chairman of the Board of the Georgia Power Company, characterized agriculture as the greatest industry in Our Country today.

He stated that there are over 10,000,000 people engaged in farming, three times more than in any other industry; that there is $57,000,000,000 invested in agriculture, more than twice the investment in any other industry; and the value of farm products is over $17,000,000,000 a year.

"We are now at the threshold of the machine mass production era in agriculture," said Mr. Atkinson. "Farming will become a scientific profession."

Mrs. R. I. Hanna and son, Harold, of Waldron, Kansas, visited a short while Tuesday with old friends around Perryton. They were enroute to Amarillo for a visit.

BREAKS JAIL; IS BACK AGAIN

S. P. MORRIS ESCAPES BUT IS FOUND SAME DAY NEAR DARRAZZETT; IS RETURNED TO JAIL HERE

S. P. "Blackie" Morris, charged with the stealing of a Buick sedan from the Wilson-Daley Buick company, recently, and who was found at Wewoka, Okla., and returned to Perryton, escaped from the county jail here Saturday morning. Morris was found near Darrazett and returned to Perryton.

Morris is thought to have escaped while officers were taking another inmate of the jail for trial before county court but was nearly an hour afterwards before he was missed. The sheriff's office immediately put in calls to nearby towns that resulted in his capture near Darrazett.

"SPOTLIGHT" WILL SOON BE AT AMERICAN

"The Spotlight" will be turned on the American Theatre Friday when Esther Ralston's latest Paramount starring vehicle "The Spotlight" is shown. As the title suggests, Esther's new production is a tale of stage. An unimpressive small time actress suddenly develops into a Broadway sensation, solely through the expedient of a brunette wig and exotic Russian clothes. In doing so, she gains nation-wide admiration but almost succeeds in losing the love of the one man she wants.

Neil Hamilton has the leading masculine role. Arlette Marchal and Arthur Housman head the supporting cast. Frank Tuttle, director of "The American Venus" and "Kid Boots" directed. "The Spotlight" is adapted from Rita Weiman's Saturday Evening Post story "Footlights."

Cecil Dodd has accepted a position in the hardware department of the White House Lumber Company.

Miss Gladys Glasgow left Thursday for Emporia, Kansas to continue her work in the Kansas State Teachers college.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas Jackson and Mrs. B. J. Jackson of the Alfalfa community were Perryton shoppers Wednesday.

Harold J. Stansberry, 1st class seaman on merchants ships, came in Saturday to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stansberry.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Cropper and children were Liberal visitors Saturday.

Mrs. J. B. Cartwright was taken to the Shattuck hospital Monday where she will remain several weeks for medical attention.

The Perryton yard makes the sixth of their chain of retail lumber yards. The head office of the Burrows Lumber company is at Canyon.

CORINNE GRIFFITH TELLS STORY OF REJUVENATION

Corinne Griffith's powerful drama, "Three Hours," a screen version of May Edington's story heads the bill at the American Theatre Monday night.

In some respects Miss Griffith's newest picture resembles her famous success "Black Oxen." As in the previous picture, one of the high lights of the story is the heroine's transition from planness to beauty. In "Black Oxen," the change was due to pathological rejuvenation, but in the new film the transformation is accomplished by a stolen wallet!

A brilliant array of screen talent will support the star in this latest offering, including John Bowers, Hobart Bosworth, Paul Ellis, Ann Schaefer and Mary Louise Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Barker and daughter of Amarillo and Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Sharpe and children of Pollett, were Sunday guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Sharpe.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowman Brock and children, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Brock and children and Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Youngblood.

Adelai Billhart, Las Cruces, New Mexico, is visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Brillhart.

Miss Ruby Keith left Sunday for Plainview, Texas, where she will attend school at Wayland college this winter.

THE COUNTRY NEWSPAPER

J. C. Holton, Mississippi state commissioner of agriculture, recently paid a worthwhile tribute to newspapers that express graphically the general public feeling for the press.

"I have always appreciated the power of the press, more especially the 'country' press," said Mr. Holton. "The home papers carry the home news, and are read from cover to cover by those whose first interest is in home affairs. They reach the people and constitute a powerful influence of public sentiment."

"A wonderful factor for good is the country newspaper; worthy of the pride and support of folks at home, an avenue of commercial entrance to those who would sell their goods to our people. President T. L. Turner in his annual address eloquently described its importance in these words:

"Out yonder stands a locomotive on the railroad track. Everything about it is in order; water in the boiler, coal in the tender, engineer at the throttle; but it can't move. All it lacks is steam. Remove the newspapers from Mississippi take away the 'steam,' and this state would soon be a state of idle people; its credit gone. Weeds would grow in the streets; our farmers would look for pastures newer, manufacturers would depart from us, and our people would seek new fields of labor."

The "home town" paper is an integral part of the lives of the people it serves. It has been a tremendous factor in building up an American spirit and consciousness, and in turning public opinion into wise avenues.

BIG INCREASE IN ENROLLMENT

OVER SEVEN HUNDRED ENTER PERRYTON SCHOOLS IN FIRST WEEK OF ENROLLMENT

Over seven hundred pupils have enrolled in the Perryton schools during the first week of school according to Supt. W. B. Irvin, showing a big increase over last year. The high school enrollment totaled 262 on Wednesday evening, better than a thirty per cent increase over last year. The grade enrollment is approximately 450, which is far over last year's total.

One new teacher has been added to the grades, making two sections in each grade, a total of twenty-eight teachers. Opening exercises were held last Thursday morning at which time the new instructors were introduced to the pupils.

Practically all of the rural schools show a decided increase over the last year total, although there are a number of pupils that have not enrolled as yet. The Plainview school has been discontinued this year and Mrs. W. H. Raynor has been transferred to the Perryton schools.

Coach E. E. Shupe announces that he has thirty football players coming out regularly for the squad, a number of experienced players among them. Several football men have come to Perryton this year from other Panhandle towns in order to get training under Coach Shupe.

Much new football equipment has been added this year. Each of the players will be supplied with athletic blankets.

RECEIVES LETTER FROM T. O. PITTMAN IN OREGON

A letter was received this week from T. O. Pittman, Clackamas, Ore., by the Herald, a part of which follows:

"We had a splendid trip driving through from Perryton to Clackamas, making the drive in ten days with a Chevrolet truck. The total weight of our load over the Equity scales when we left there was 5,710 pounds. We made an average of fourteen and two-tenths miles per gallon of gas which we think is pretty good considering the load and the amount of mountain road covered."

"We found a great country and great people but we are longing for the Ochiltree County Herald to bring us the news from good old Perryton, so please send the Herald to us."

Mrs. H. L. Sharpe returned to her home at Weatherford, Texas Sunday after a weeks visit with Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Sharpe.

THE TIGER TRAIL

by Edison Marshall

Illustrations by PAUL FREHM

I had noticed a curious thing, as evening drew on. It seemed to me that the other occupants of the house were avoiding Vilas. Perhaps it was just a coincidence; yet the thing had happened three or four times. From eight to ten he had spent most of his time roving from one room to another. Whoever was in the room when he came greeted him curiously enough, but soon had business elsewhere. I saw it work out with not only Southley, but his daughter as well. Of course there were reasons; but I couldn't even get a glimpse at them. I imagined that Vilas would not have cared to be alone in the library at that moment, if there had been any other choice. From time to time he summoned the servants, seemingly for the most trivial services.

About eleven I walked out onto the grounds, mostly because the atmosphere of the house had begun to strangle me. I wanted fresh air, the wind blowing off the water, the sight of a friendly moon in the sky. Of course the tragedy of the night before had occurred outside the house, on the very hill on which I stood, but there remained the feeling that the crime had its root and source and causes in the house itself. But the moonlit hillside wasn't much of a relief. What wind there was brought curious smells from the marsh. The moon looked wan and pale and strange.

There was a light in the power-house—a little building at the rear of the manor house that contained the engine that had previously generated electric light for the house. Hoping for a friendly word from some mellow, African voice, I walked around to it. The workmen were busy at the plant, trying to repair the break.

But the workmen weren't colored people, after all. They were bending over the engine when I first approached the door, and I couldn't see their faces. They didn't hear me coming in the soft grass, and they seemed very intent. Then they started up as my foot grated on the threshold.

One of them was the elder Southley. The other was a lean, be-whiskered old man who had brought the boat—Robin, he called himself. I noticed just one impressive thing about him. He wore rubber boots.

He was the only man on the plantation, as far as I knew, that did. They were little, ankle-length, quaint affairs; and I was amazed at my own stupidity that I had not remembered the fact before. I had noticed the boots the minute he had stepped from the motor boat. They had plain rubber heels, such as had made the track we had found on the hillside, beside the white stone. Beyond all doubt or question, he had been the man we had chased just after nightfall.

My eyes leaped over him. He had long legs—the kind that could stride swiftly. He was agile, too. "Howdy, sir," he greeted me. "Would you like a job?"

Southley looked up with a smile. "We're trying to get these lights so they'll work," he explained. "I'm getting tired of candle-light. I don't suppose you know anything about electric generators."

"I knew quite a bit about them when I had the engineering bug—in college," I confessed. "I might be able to help you."

Then I had a curious impression. It seemed to me that a swift expression of apprehension and dismay flashed across my host's face. It wasn't in the least distinct. And it was so senseless a thing I concluded I had been mistaken. Robin looked up, too, somewhat quizzically.

"I can fix the thing," he said hurriedly. "and besides, I need the job." "I guess he can do well enough," Southley agreed.

But I couldn't resist the impulse to make a cursory examination of the generator. Perhaps it was a case of the engine. Perhaps it was that irresistible human impulse to tinker—and more than that, to exhibit knowledge. At first I found it difficult to believe that the plant was really severely damaged. It looked in the most perfect condition. But Southley called me away in a moment, and invited me to walk back with him to the manor-house.

Inspector Freeman would have been dismayed if he had known my thoughts as Southley and I went back to the drawing-room. For before another hour had passed, there was to be further amateur interference in the working out of the Southley mystery. Even while I chatted with my host, I was planning the best means to get back to the power-house. I was going to keep a close watch on that garrulous, long-legged longshoreman, Robin.

In some way that I was yet to find out, he was involved in the problem of Southley Downs. He had washed the blood from the rock on the hillside. He had eluded the inspector and myself in the chase in the darkness. Now I had found him with Southley working upon the engine in the power-house—and yet they had seemed merely to be examining it, rather than at work. I remembered that neither of them had held tools in their hands, or even seemed to have any tools with them.

I was suddenly deeply suspicious of this man Robin. I remembered that he had volunteered his services to the negro Sam, and that looked as if he had business of his own at Southley Downs. His excuse for coming seemed somewhat trumped-up. Besides, he looked his part too well. He was too perfect an example of a certain type of squatter. He had an English accent, and I had been watching all through my visit at Southley Downs for the intrusion of some one with such an accent.

Roderick, of whom Alexander Pierce had told me, who evidently had lived long years in England. The names were somewhat similar, too; and I had heard before of that peculiar trait of human nature that influences a man against giving up his own name altogether. The alias he adopts is usually somewhat similar to his own name.

I made a feint of going back to a book. Southley seemed relieved. He left me in a moment, and joined his daughter in the den. Vilas had gone to his room, and lost as it was among the many, breathless corridors of the great house, I could imagine it was the last place in the world he had really wished to go. I drew my chair up to the great dormer window that overlooked the power-house. And I didn't see one word of the type beneath my eyes.

The bill was swept by moonbeams. There was a silver path across the face of the swamp, leading ever to my eyes. I waited possibly five minutes. And then I saw Robin emerge from the power-house.

For a long minute he waited in the shadows, and my suspicions leaped to a certainty. Then I saw him steal away toward the edge of the marsh.

A minute more and I was out in the darkness too, trying to shadow him. I tried to keep to the less open part of the hillside and yet not lose sight of my quarry. He walked slowly at first, and I shortened the distance between us to one hundred yards. As yet I had no reason for thinking he had seen me. His form was perfectly visible in the moonlight, but I had kept mostly in the shadow. But all at once he increased his pace.

I walked faster, too. My quarry broke into a slow trot. It was impossible that I could run behind him and still keep out of sight. So I made a furious dash toward him at top speed.

For a moment I thought I would overtake him before he saw me; but when I had covered half the distance between us he began really to run. He straightened out his long legs, and fairly seemed to fly—straight for the marsh at the bottom of the hill.

"Stop, Robin!" I shouted at him. "Stop at once!" He only increased his speed. I never saw a man run faster. I was in good condition, and I gave him the best I had. He hadn't the chance to elude me that he had in our previous encounter earlier in the evening. The moon was out now.

He splashed across a pond of shallow water at the base of the hill. Possibly he thought I would not follow him here. But he was to be disappointed. No water was deep enough to throw me of. I was going to find out his connection with the crime if I had to follow him to mainland across the swamp.

But at once he splashed out of the pond and circled back to the hill. I was soaked to the knees, but I gave it no thought. Of course he couldn't run so fast up the steep slope, nor could I. And my breath was coming in great sobs before I approached the house.

He swung about the great structure, and I dipped far enough to one side to watch. I saw him slip into the postern door that led to the library.

Twenty seconds later I entered the same room. Evidently he hoped to elude me in the maze of rooms. But he had forgotten one thing.

His boots—the same boots that had left the telltale track beside the rock—were splashed with mud and water. They were a trail across the rugs and hardwood floor of the library. And they turned into the den.

Once more the drama of Southley Downs had shifted to this little room. Once more I stood at its threshold. And I had a curious sense of portentous developments that would come to pass within its doors.

Southley and Josephine were standing up near the same table that had figured in the drama of the previous night.

"Close the door," Southley told me.

"But where is that man Robin? I saw him rush in here. And I know he has something to do with this mystery."

"Robin? You mean the man who helped me in the power-house?"

A large blue portiere hung at the side of the den, and out of the corner of my eye I saw it waver. No wind blew it. And then, looking straight, I saw the ends of white fingers that clutched its folds.

"Mr. Southley, the man is behind that curtain now!"

Then the man behind the curtain answered me himself. "Oh, old Doc Long!" came a familiar voice. "You're the most persistent devil—"

There is only one person in the world that calls me "old Doc Long." The hope of hearing his voice about this cursed house of the Southleys was dead in my breast. It was the voice of the man I had longed for, whose keen brain and able hands would so quickly bring light where there was shadow.

He pulled the curtain aside, the gray eyes laughed at me. I saw through the disguise at last, and marvelled at my blindness heretofore. Of course it was no one but my old and trusted friend, that world-famous detective and fisherman, Alexander Pierce.

After we had got through pounding one another on the back and roaring out with pleasure it was to meet again I began to put a few questions to the great detective. And all the time I marvelled at his disguise.

"But why didn't you let me in on it?" I demanded just a little hurt.

I saw laughter in his eyes, but his face remained grave.

"You were doing so well without me, doc," he replied. "And the way you chased me through the mud—it was rich, my lad! What a persistent devil you are! Miss

No Oiling Worries With This Outfit—It's All-Enclosed and Oils Itself

When you have a John Deere pumping outfit on your farm you don't have to worry about oil cups or sight-feed oilers—the John Deere has none—just fill the oil reservoir and the fuel tank and this dependable, sturdy outfit will pump a steady stream of water until it runs out of fuel or you stop it yourself. Go about your more important work and turn your pumping job over to the John Deere Pumping Outfit.

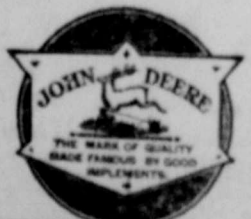

The engine is the famous John Deere Type E. All bearings and other working parts operate in a bath of clean oil and are enclosed in a dust-proof housing—just like the working parts of your automobile engine.

The neat, compact pump jack runs directly from the flywheel of the engine—its enclosed worm drive operates in oil. This jack delivers a steady stream of water without belts or exposed gears for stock to get into. A real outfit for long and satisfactory service.

Come in and see this powerful, compact, enclosed pumping outfit—the pumping outfit that's all enclosed and oils itself—next time you are in town.

"Miss Southley already knows that," I commented. "And look at my trouser legs—my best dinner clothes. You are a trifle wet yourself."

"These beautiful boots protected me." Then he grew serious. "Besides, Long—among your many talents I'm afraid you can't claim to be an actor. Just a look—a word—might have given me away. It was much better that you devote your attention to the excellent work Inspector Freeman has been doing. DID YOU KNOW that—no matter what its make—your car can have a windshield of glass that will not shatter? Good news to thousands of mothers who hesitate to take children on motor trips along crowded highways!

The safety windshield has no wires in its construction, but is a triplex product made of three layers of glass welded together by heat, pressure and a chemical treatment that makes it indistinguishable from ordinary glass.

Under severe impact triplex glass will yield, but does not fly in fragments or present jagged edges that cut and tear. Which is to say—it is good accident insurance against more than half the injuries that occur to motorists, for insurance statistics tell us 65 per cent of all motor accidents are due to broken glass.

Eyesight and one's good looks are precious possessions. It pays to protect them in every reasonable way.

"A LAND OF RURAL COMRADESHIP"

Was your Boy or Girl Among the 619,712?

The United States Department of Agriculture has just announced that last year 619,712 American farm boys and girls were enrolled in 4-H club work. Club work not only teaches methods of doing farm work and house work, but it trains boys and girls in habits of cooperation, organization, friendship, and comradeship.

If your boys and girls were not among the 619,712 enrolled last year, why not at least resolve to enroll them in 1929?—The Progressive Farmer.

WHAT THE MUSCLE SHOALS BILL PROVIDED

The Muscle Shoals resolution in its final form as it went to the President provided for government operation of the power and nitrate plants—

- (1) For the generation, sale and distribution of power;
- (2) For the manufacture of fixed nitrogen;

(3) For the manufacture of complete fertilizer as an experimental proposition only.

As it went to conference between House and Senate, the resolution provided for both the fixation of nitrogen and the manufacture of commercial fertilizer, but the conferees modified the fertilizer proposition. Opponents of the leglation contended that it would destroy the fertilizer industry. Proponents of the modified measure saw benefits to the farmers of the country both through the production of cheaper nitrates for fertilizer manufacture and through the opportunity for farmers and farmers' organization to buy ingredients for their own mixing.

The government operation proposal was opposed by the American Farm Bureau Federation which urged the enactment of the Madden-Willis bill, providing for the leasing of the property to the American Cyanamid Company.—The Progressive Farmer.

FREE GATE AT AMARILLO FAIR

BIG CROWDS EXPECTED AT TRI-STATE FAIR HELD SEPTEMBER 22 TO 29

Amarillo, Tex., Sept. 12.—The Tri-State Fair this fall expects to "pay out" on a novel scheme—"a free gate," the first time such an innovation ever has been attempted in the state of Texas, it is believed.

The 1928 annual Tri-State Fair will be held at the fair grounds here Sept. 22 to 29 inclusive, and in place of the 40,000 who attended last year and paid the usual admission, indications already point to 250,000 visitors and exhibitors next month.

Visitors from this section of the drive to Amarillo, park in twenty-nine acres of free parking space adjacent to the grounds, see every exhibit and take in much of the entertainment and programs without paying a cent.

Twenty farm exhibit spaces already have been reserved.

Some of the entertainment features procured for the eight days and nights are Schooley and Collins' Winter Garden Revue from Chicago, which will perform every night at the grandstand. This is the revue that will be used at the Dallas fair.

Leonard Stroud Rodeo will appear each afternoon before the grandstand. Included in the Rodeo acts are some of the leading cowboys and cowgirls of the country.

Rock Island Into Pringle

New Railroad Expected Into New Town Within the Next Two Weeks Says Jordan

According to John W. Jordan of Pringle, who has charge of the McNabb Land Co. office at that place, they expect the Rock Island rails to be laid to that place by September 20. Mr. Jordan says this report is in accordance with information received from the superintendent of construction the first of the week. The grade is being rapidly completed, and the steel laying gang are following closely on their heels, and under favorable weather conditions Hutchinson county's newest town expects to be a railroad point within a short time. Pringle's first grocery store opened this week with a full line of groceries, and as will be seen from their ad in the Reporter the store will handle the farmers produce in that locality, and have a large amount of twine on hand at the present time, to supply the farmers with this necessity in the harvesting of their row crops. This new establishment for Pringle is owned and operated by K. F. Primrose. The Panhandle Lumber company has a yard at Pringle and the McNabb Land company has a branch office there.—Spearman Reporter.

As an aid in controlling scab in sections where this disease is prevalent the central States and eastward—winter wheat should be sown when the ground is cool, on the latest safe date in the fall.

A simple way to destroy ants on lawns of small area is to spray with kerosene emulsion or with a very strong soap wash, prepared by dissolving any common laundry soap in water at the rate of 1-2 or 1 pound of soap to a gallon of water. If the ants nest can be found, boiling water or a small quantity of kerosene will sometimes kill the insects in the nest. These fluids cannot, however, be applied in quantities with safety to the grass on lawns. In this case the soap wash should prove preferable.

THE SPIRIT OF NEIGHBORLINESS

Another Little Message about that cup of sugar

RECENTLY we suggested that the essentials of the true spirit of neighborliness were exemplified in the borrowing of a cup of sugar.

Over the back-yard fence is a short cut indeed, to neighborliness. Miles so often are the fences that divide the common ground of mutual understanding and good will. The less the distance, the lower the fence.

That's one reason why we've always worked so earnestly and faithfully for better roads. The road that brings you nearer to us is the same broad highway that brings us nearer to you. Literally and figuratively it increases efficiency in the delivery of the goods. Another essential to the true spirit of neighborliness.

You'll find the same spirit at this end of the road—in our stores and places of business. Courtesy, desire to please, eagerness to rectify error, sincerity in quality, fairness in price—these are the elements of neighborly dealing which we are constantly striving to improve.

BROOMCORN MARKET REVIEW

Although the Lindsay broomcorn street market recorded the greatest activity of the season for two days, the movement for the entire week ending September 1, both at Lindsay and practically all shipping points throughout the district, showed a decline under the week previous and the marketing generally closed weak, according to G. I. Algure of the broomcorn market news service, U. S. bureau of agricultural economics. With the bulk of the Lindsay crop now out of the farmers hands there is much less broomcorn available in the district, which consists, for the most part, of the larger crops that is being held for higher prices. There exists, therefore, a somewhat slower selling attitude with producers now controlling the farm stocks. This together with the fact that considerable interest is being diverted to the mid-western Oklahoma dwarf stocks, soon to be available and that the speculative demand for the Lindsay brush has been somewhat lessened due to accumulated stocks already purchased and held by dealers for resale are factors which appear to be partly responsible for the decline in last weeks movement.

Receipts at the various markets for the week were 84 carloads compared to 139 the week previous as against 90 the week before or a total movement to date of 349 carloads. Agricultural loan clearances on broomcorn as reported by representative strict indicates over one-half of the Lindsay broomcorn crop already has moved. Shipments for the district totaled 241 carloads of which Lindsay shipped 161 as against 90 carloads for all other points. Storage stocks showed 108 carloads or an increase of 12 carloads over storage stocks a week ago.

With broomcorn being offered in lesser quantity, more country driving for better quality brought several crops of the best brush to the warehouse while street offerings included considerable of the poor crops. The receipts as a whole covered a slightly wider range of quality which also was indicated in the prices paid.

Prices for the week were generally unchanged on the better quality brush and in line with last weeks quotations. Some weakness was noted on the lower grades, particularly on the smaller markets, while the highest prices of the season were paid for the best corn offered. The extreme range was from $90.00 to $180.00 with two carloads of the corn bringing from $95.00 to $105.00 in comparison to similar corn last week at $100.00 to $110.00 per ton. Top prices paid for three large crops was about nine cents. Samples from one of these crops graded U. S. No. 2. Seven cents was the popular price for the week on the better quality brush while the bulk of sales over the district generally was six to six and one-half cents. This class of broomcorn grades about U. S. No. 3 account of wavy fiber, but of high green color.

NON-SHATTERABLE GLASS FOR CLOSED AUTOMOBILES

Closed automobile bodies, whose introduction was hailed as one of the greatest advances for the comfort of motorists through affording protection from the elements, now universally recognized by safety experts as the source of the greatest hazard to riders. Described as "glass boxes on wheels" the closed body is responsible for the familiar newspaper headline, "cut by flying glass." Statistics show that more injuries, ranging from mere scratches to deplorable disfigurement or worse, are chargeable to glass broken in collisions and other accidents than any other single cause.

However, the closed car will never be abandoned and, it is pointed out, need not be given up, for science and industry have solved the problem by providing non-shatterable glass which is fast coming into general use by automobile manufacturers. Where a car is not equipped with safety glass, the new owner may arrange to have it installed. Many are already doing so.

The reluctance of makers of cars to adopt non-shatterable glass is said to have been due to a feeling of certainty as to just how long the glass would retain its transparency. Besides, the automotive industry desired a glass which was of the standard guage used in glazing automobile body windows and which would not increase the weight of cars. But the objections have been overcome after years of research and experimentation, with the result that the use of safety glass is likely to become standardized practice in the automobile field within a comparatively few years.

Non-shatterable glass which has finally been perfected for use on closed automobiles is not a single sheet of a new kind of glass but rather is a sort of "sandwich" consisting of two plates of glass between which has been inserted a sheet of pyroxylin plastic or sheeting which, basically, is such as is used for the windows of the curtains of touring cars. Simple as that may appear, however, the manufacture of safety glass is an involved proposition, calling for years of research and vast investment of capital. For instance, the du Pont Viscoloid Company was able to perfect a pyroxylin plastic, possessing the required peculiar properties, only after fifteen years of research and countless experiments, only while the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company spent millions of dollars in developing means to manufacture a polished plate glass sufficiently thin for the purpose of safety glass. Additional large sums have been devoted to the construction and equipment of a plant for the Pittsburgh Safety Glass Company, at Creighton, Pennsylvania, a corporation which was organized by the plate glass and the pyroxylin manufacturers.

The process of making non-shatterable glass, or "Duplate," as it is called, is to place a sheet of pyroxylin plastic between two pieces of polished plate glass which have been carefully cleaned and sprayed on the inner sides with a special cement; then to subject the built-up plate to heavy pressure. When finished, this glass cannot shatter under the greatest impact, though of course, it may crack or even bulge. In no case can there be flying splinters when Duplate is struck. Thus has a new safeguard been added to motoring in these days of traffic congestion in cities, and where there is excessive speed on open highways.

THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT

When approaching Washington by train or automobile two of the outstanding sights the travelers first behold are the Capitol Building and Washington Monument.

The Washington Monument is an obelisk. It is 555 feet high and 55 feet square at the base, tapering to 34 feet at the top. It has a pyramid shaped section above, and terminates in a pyramid of pure aluminum. The walls are 15 feet in thickness at the bottom and taper to 18 inches at the top.

The Woolworth Building in New York has 60 stories and is 792 feet high. The Metropolitan Life Building is 700 feet high; the Singer Building is 612 feet high. They are often compared with the Washington Monument because they reach higher to the skies. Those who make these comparisons should stop to consider that the high buildings of New York are structures of steel, cement and stone. But the Washington Monument is wholly a work of masonry—the highest structure in which stone sits upon stone that there is in the world.

Soon after Washington's death John Marshall, afterwards Chief Justice of the United States caused Congress to pass a resolution providing for a marble monument to his memory. It was ninety years later, in 1888, that this monument was opened to the public, though it had been dedicated five years earlier.

The cornerstone was laid July 4, 1884, and in the next few years the sum of $300,000 was raised by public subscription. The shaft obtained a height of 152 feet by 1885; then funds having been exhausted the construction was suspended, and it was not resumed until 1878, a lapse of 22 years. The Government completed the Monument, and its total cost was $1,300,000.

Visitors to Washington usually notice that the stone in the lower 152 feet is of a different quality than that in the upper portion of the Monument. This is due to the fact that the first stone came from the quarries of Quincy, Massachusetts, near Boston. The remaining stone came from quarries near Quantico, Virginia. Quantico is the base for the United States Marines.

The interior of the Monument is lighted by electricity, and visitors ascend to the lookout window near the top by means of a large passenger elevator. They pass the memorial stones which are set in the inner face of the Monument. The inscriptions on the most of these memorial stones can be read, however, only from the platforms. There are over 180 stones, contributed by practically all of the States, many of the large cities, and lodges of Free Masons, Odd Fellows, and Sons of Temperance, besides numerous political organizations, debating societies, and other organizations.

At the time of Washington's death Congress requested the family to place his remains in the Washington Monument in the National Capital. This was not done and Washington was buried at Mount Vernon. His will directed that a permanent tomb should be built to receive his body and that of his wife, Martha Washington. More than a quarter of a million visitors annually stand before this open tomb and view the caskets in which the bodies of George and Martha Washington were buried.

Sunday School Lesson

International Sunday School Lesson for September 16
PAUL WRITES TO HIS FRIENDS IN CORINTH
 Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D., Associate General Secretary of the World's Sunday School Association

What Paul wrote has been of continuing influence, for his letters form part of the Book that is the world's best sellers. Millions of copies of the Bible come from the presses every year.

Some letters of Paul are lost but we have at least thirteen in the New Testament that were written by him. As this is the first lesson in the series that deals especially with Paul's letters you should give special attention to each of the epistles. In your Bible dictionary teachers' helps or others reference books search out all you can about where each was written, to whom, why, and make an analysis of its general content. I and II Thessalonians were written during the second journey, I and II Corinthians, Galatians and Romans on the third journey. During the first Roman imprisonment the world received Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians and Philemon. Then came I Timothy and Titus during the days of freedom and II Timothy was written just before his Release, during the second imprisonment at Rome.

The Bible is always a book of human interest. Paul was at Ephesus. Some member of the household of Chloe, from that city, had spent a while in Corinth and on returning told just how matters concerning the new church were progressing in the Isthmian city. It seems that in general there was marked progress, but old fashioned human nature was also running true to form. Factions were being formed by those who claimed that they were converts through the special work of some individual. Some belonged to the Pauline party, others claimed Cephas or Apollos, while another group was frank in saying that they belonged to Christ and it was not at all vital through whom they learned of Him; the new life was the essential factor. It was to correct the erroneous thinking that Paul prepared this letter to the church at Corinth. Of course he added much that was constructive. Now read the entire letter. You can note that the lessons for September 23 and October 14 are also taken from this most helpful epistle. Then read the first four chapters a second time as that portion is the general content for this lesson study. Every week you should get the full context in Scripture as well as the few verses indicated for particular study.

Because Paul was seeking to build up a Christ-centered Kingdom and not a man-centered party the people in Corinth were urged to think the matter through. Each one who had visited that city had been working for the one great purpose and had not sought to establish an individual following. Each had a real part in this Kingdom-building but always "God gave the increase." Every worker was just a minister-servant of the Christ. Every bit of self interest is ruled out as all are styled "God's fellow workers." This is partnership indeed. The truth is enriched when another term is used—"God's husbandry."

Full credit for foundation is given in verse 11 as Jesus Christ is named. "Other foundation can no man lay." It is the part of each one who will care for his own life and be useful in the lives of others to build personally and directly with reference to this essential foundation. Peace, unity and the true brotherhood of man are acclaimed in the Golden Text "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"

COUNT YOUR BLESSINGS

 When my two girls were getting ready to enter Wellesley they suddenly discovered about two weeks before their entrance examinations that they were to be quizzed upon the subject of trigonometry and knew nothing about it. But they had to pass an examination on it. So I got them a tutor at $20.00 a foot and he prepared them so that they passed and entered the college. While engaged in this study they came to me one day and asked me what a sine and a co-sine were. I told them to look in the dictionary as I had to. The truth was I didn't know what those things were myself.

They looked in the dictionary and then brought the book to me saying they didn't understand the definition. Reading the definition I replied that they had nothing on me, that I didn't understand it myself. Some days afterward I was talking to a very distinguished mathematician and told him this story, and asked him why it was that I who flattered myself on being an intelligent man could not understand what kind of a thing a sine was.

"Why," he replied, "that is very simple. A sine isn't anything at all."

"I know," I answered. "But why put it in the dictionary?" He said: "A sine is not a thing. It is a relation between two things."

The greatest thing anybody can learn as regards their personal happiness is that it is not a thing, but a relation between two things.

We never realize what a blessing good roads are until we come to a detour and have to travel over a mile or so of bumpy dirt road.

I know a woman who is grieving herself to death over a wayward child for who she has done everything possible. She needs to get her mind off of her child and think of what she possesses, of how many sources of happiness still remain to her.

The homely advice, "Count your blessings," is a good one.

We can only be happy in what we possess by contemplating those who have less and not those who have more.

So look about you, and see how many people are worse off than you are, and be thankful things are no worse.

About Your Health

Things You Should Know

by John Joseph Gaines, M. D.
 ABOUT YOUR HEALTH
 Labor's Friend

Little Mary was the belle of her community. A small group of her playmates grew envious to the point of conspiracy. "I'll tell you what let's do," whispered one: "We'll start a tale on her. That'll fetch her down."

That's just what has happened to coffee. American ingenuity, in the promotion of flat beverages, has "started a tale," in the interest of their own products and pocket-books. I may say here, that harmlessness is a mighty happy virtue to claim for any sort of drink; and most substitutes for coffee are absolutely harmless.

But there is no need for slandering one's good friend. We physicians know that caffeine is one of the best heart tonics known, in spite of the advertisements that it is "deadly" and that "coffee toppers" are virtual suicides, by poisoning their own hearts. If people knew how to use caffeine for headaches, fewer would really poison their hearts with coal-tar preparations.

Of course, coffee, like anything else must be temperately used. But I have had over thirty years' experience and close observation—and I have never yet witnessed death as a result of coffee drinking! I have seen excesses committed, yes. In everything. Coffee is, to a very feeble extent, habit-forming. So the use of slang, profane language, and the like; the latter the more dangerous!

When the working man comes home tired, exhausted,—with the heart just as tired as the other muscles, what restores the nerves and general equilibrium better than a good cup of coffee? It is a blessing, a comfort, not a menace. I would not give coffee to children for the very valid reason that they don't need it. Neither would I fill them with patent nostrums, so-called nutrients, when they can get good, wholesome milk.

SHOE STUDIES

Each of us buys, theoretically at least, three pairs of shoes a year. This means some 350,000,000 pairs annually. Half of the hides and skins that go to make leather for these shoes are imported, principally from Asia, South America, and Africa, where people do not wear shoes so much. The United States is not self-supporting in the matter of leather and leather goods, and in case of war the chances are that many of us would have to go without shoes if imports of raw materials were interrupted. The U. S. Department of Agriculture believes that our dependence upon foreign supplies can be very greatly reduced through better practices in the domestic production of leather-making raw materials through more judicious or common-sense selection by the public of leather goods, and finally through proper care of such leather goods, with elimination of their abuse and misuse. The hide, leather, and tanning investigation carried on by the department all aim at conservation along these lines. Each year millions of dollars are lost in this country in hides and skins, much of which can be prevented by the application of correct methods of preparation and marketing, which would result in making available to the tanner not only more hides and skins but better ones, from which in turn would result more and better leather.

Hints for the Home

To remove the grass stain from a white skirt, if the material is washable, use hot water and soap, as in ordinary laundering. You'll have to rub the stain quite vigorously. If traces of the grass stain remain, they may be bleached out with Javex water.

Watch all home canned foods carefully for a week or so after canning, to be sure they are keeping. Mark each batch, and if one jar or can of a lot is found to be leaky or spoiled, examine all others of the same lot extra carefully. Store glass jars away from light to prevent fading, and all canned goods in a cool, dry place.

When a recipe calls for browned bread crumbs on the top of any dish melt the butter in a pan and mix the crumbs with it before spreading them on the food to be cooked. In stuffings, puddings and other recipes calling for buttered crumbs this method gives tastier results than placing dots of butter here and there on the dish.

A meat thermometer may be used in roasting leg of lamb so as to get the meat just the desired stage of doneness. It should be placed in the thickest part of the meat. Some people like lamb cooked to 175 F. Others prefer it well done (182 F.). The time required to reach these temperatures depends on the temperature of the oven to a large extent. High temperatures increase shrinkage. After the meat is browned on the outside it is better to reduce the oven heat and take longer to cook it, removing the meat from the oven when the thermometer registers the desired degree of doneness.

Summer butter on the farm for water use should be made from perfectly sweet Pasturized cream, churned without being ripened or soured. The butter-fat process is practically the same as when sour cream is used. A few points, however, should be kept in mind. It is especially desirable to have the butter come firm enough so that the body will be waxy. When butter comes soft the body is likely to be characterized will increase with age. It is also important that the buttermilk may be washed out easily. When the granules are the size of kernels of wheat the churn should be stopped. A churning period of about 30 minutes is required. It has been found that when the churning period is less than 30 minutes, buttermilk from sweet cream usually contains more butterfat than that from sour cream. The best way to keep sweet-cream butter in storage on the farm is by immersing it in strong brine, and keeping it in the coolest place available.

Shoulder of lamb has long been considered a choice cut, but the shoulder blade running through the center makes it impossible to carve into attractive slices. The shoulder blade and leg bone can easily be removed, however, leaving an excellent pocket for savory stuffing. The stuffed shoulder may then be rolled up or left flat like a pan. The tasty stuffing helps to conserve the juice of the meat and to add seasoning. Carving difficulties are thus overcome. The boned stuffed shoulder can be carved straight through into lovely slices of just the right blend of meat and stuffing.

KNOW TEXAS

Texas is second only to Iowa in total value of the live stock industry. This annual production in Texas is about $300,000,000.

Poultry raising has shown most increase recently in Texas. This industry is now producing annually more than $33,000,000.

The Texas cotton crop is valued ordinarily at more than the annual value of all gold, silver, copper and zinc in the United States.

The total land area of Texas is 167,934,720 acres. Only about 18 percent of this total amount is in cultivation.

The use of a concrete wallow for hogs is an aid in keeping down worm infestations, provided it is properly constructed and used.

It takes fewer eggs from October to January to pay for a given quantity of grain than any other period of the year.

Mineral feeds which calcium and phosphorus should be included in rations for chickens. Although nearly all the common chicken feeds contain minerals, there is usually a deficiency of calcium and phosphorus. Meat scrap and ground steamed bone meal as well as fish meal will supply phosphorus. Calcium, the continued lack of which will cause a noticeable decrease in egg production, can be furnished by keeping a supply of oyster shells or of limestone grit before the hens all of the time.

An important preventive measure in the control of the flag-smut disease on wheat is the sowing of infested fields to other crops the following year unless a resistant wheat is used, as flag-smut spores easily survive in the soil from harvest to seeding time and are present to infest fall-sown wheat. The continuous growing susceptible wheat on infested land may result in an increase of the disease. Since flag-smut affects only wheat other crops may be safely grown in the rotation. Any wheat crop residues or material that may contain flag-smut spores, such as straw manure, or a straw mulch on potatoes, may be a source of infestation if applied to the land. Where such flag-smut infested residues are used, some other crop than wheat should be grown.

The immunization of suckling pigs for cholera has much to recommend it in the way of decreased cost and increased protection, according to animal industry specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. By immunizing early less serum is required and the pigs are protected sooner, and since the successful immunization of suckling pigs does not necessitate the reduction of feed, it is possible that this may enable the farmer to market the pigs somewhat earlier than if the immunization were carried worst fakes that have been the claims that various remedies would kill lice by painting the roosts, hanging a bottle in the chicken house, or putting a few drops in the drinking water.

Now investigators are making the statement that the people who sold fake louse remedies in the past to be painted on the roost were right in principle and wrong only in not having found the right material, the September 15 Oklahoma Farmer-Stockman reports. That hens can now be freed from lice by the simple process of painting the roosts with a small amount of nicotine sulphate just before the birds settle down for the night.

Only a relatively small amount of material is needed. The method generally recommended for applying the new remedy is to take a small can of one of the commercial preparations of nicotine sulphate and by punching a small hole in the top of the can, run a thin stream of the liquid along the top of each roost about one-half hour before roosting time.

AUTO FUEL FROM COAL

Recently developments in the chemical industry indicate that any widespread use of alcohol as a fuel for automobiles is yet a long way off, according to the Oklahoma Farmer-Stockman of September 15. Production of gasoline and lubricating oil from coal will prove the solution when our petroleum supply fails. Already a method has been developed in Germany where by good grades of gasoline and lubricating oil can be made from coal and peat at a cost that will allow competition, even with present prices of petroleum products. It is predicted that 30,000,000 gallons of the synthetic gasoline will be produced in 1928 and at least double that amount in 1929.

BIG MEN FROM SMALL TOWNS

John J. Raskob

One of the biggest, most successful business leaders of the country hails from a small town in New York State. His name is John J. Raskob, and the town is Lockport. His enterprises are varied, his fame world-wide. Now he is very much in the limelight as the Chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

He was born in 1879 and educated in public schools and a business college. In 1900 he was stenographer to the chief engineer of a subsidiary of the Worthington Pump Company, at a salary of $7.50 a week, which helped his widowed mother and family. He asked for a raise, didn't get it, and then moved to Lorain, Ohio, to become the secretary of a man named P. S. du Pont. He asked for the munificent salary of $1,000 a year—and got it!

When Pierre du Pont and his two cousins acquired the great E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co., Raskob came with du Pont to Wilmington, Delaware, as his secretary. When du Pont became president of the gigantic concern, Raskob was elevated to the post of treasurer. Still later the former stenographer was elected vice president in charge of finance.

He began buying stock in General Motors and convinced du Pont to do the same, and soon du Pont and he were surprised to learn that through a peculiar combination of circumstances they held the balance of power in General Motors. The two big stockholders' holdings were so evenly balanced that Raskob and du Pont could tip the scale.

Raskob and du Pont became directors of General Motors. In a later reorganization Raskob became vice-president, and he has chairman of the Finance Committee since 1918. The story of Raskob's rise is one of the most sensational success stories in the history of America. Today he is financial head of a billion dollar corporation and a bigger financier than all but a handful of the country bankers.

He married in 1906, and the crowning glories of his life are his children. There are twelve of them. His optimism, his enthusiasm, and his ability to work hard are the true secrets of his astounding success. He is a great organizer and administrator. His career, like the careers of so many of our national leaders, graphically illustrates the vast opportunities America offers to the small town boy.

WHAT IS GOOD CULTIVATION

Cultivation to be good must not only accomplish the purpose of cultivation, but it must be reasonably cheap. A very slow laborious method may leave the soil in good condition, but such a method is not good cultivation because it is too expensive, says D. J. Burleson, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture Extension Service.

The Arkansas Experiment Station has done some work which shows what the purpose of cultivation is and thus enables one to define good cultivation. During four years corn was cultivated very shallow, medium shallow, medium deep, and deep. The cultivation was continued until tasseling. The results show that it makes little difference, so far as yields are concerned, whether corn is cultivated shallow or deep.

In addition to these four methods of cultivating corn there were included in the experiment two plots which were not cultivated. From one of these plots the weeds and grass were kept scraped off with a hoe. This plot made 90 per cent as much corn as the average of the four cultivated plots. On the other uncultivated plot the weeds and grass were allowed to grow. This plot produced only 4 per cent as much corn as the average of the cultivated plots.

These results clearly show that the chief object of cultivating corn is to kill grass and weeds, and to kill them before they can rob the soil of plant food and water.

It has been claimed that the chief object of cultivation is to keep a dust mulch to conserve moisture. Keeping a dust mulch is important, but its chief value the fact that grass does not come up in a dust mulch. In other words cultivation conserves moisture by keeping down weeds. When corn plants are large enough to need a large quantity of water there is very little loss of water through evaporation from the surface of the ground.

In view of these facts good cultivation can be defined. It is the cultivation which follows rain—The Progressive Farmer.

WHAT CAN I DO FOR TIRED FEET?

This is a very pertinent question, especially during the long hot days of summer, when we have to be on our feet so much. Nothing will put one out of sorts more quickly than a pair of hurting feet.

What can we do about it? A great deal. Here are three things at least:

1. Have perfect fitting shoes—shoes that do not pinch and cramp the foot and that do not slip up and down and rub blisters on the foot.
2. Wear good socks—socks with no seams or rough darns, not too thick, and clean. Socks should be changed daily, and in some cases twice a day.
3. Bathe the feet thoroughly. After a day's walking, give the feet a good hot bath, using plenty of soap. Have a good stiff brush to rub them with, thus removing all dead skin and opening up the pores of the foot's skin. After bathing the feet in hot water and scrubbing them thoroughly, rinse them off in tepid water, dry them thoroughly, and powder them with some kind of good talcum powder.—Dr. F. M. Register, in The Progressive Farmer.

Plaintiff prays that said Abstract of Judgment liens against said land and premises be cancelled and held for naught against the plaintiff's title in and to said land and premises and that the title to said land be in all things quieted in this plaintiff, Walter Darlington, and that he be decreed to have the superior right, title and interest in and to said land premises, for general and special relief, in law and in equity, that he may be justly entitled to.

Have A Good Laugh With The Camera Man

Don't run for a doctor—you're not seeing things,—the camera man did. Calm down. Pretty Lillian Metzger, at the extreme right, seems to have made the camera man go wrong. The first picture is of a slim beauty, Raquel Torres—it's easy to see where the naughty camera man was looking. Johnny Brown, also of the films, is the only male sufferer in this cameraman's spree. His legs are certainly long enough to reach the ground. The second picture is of a young lady who may have got that way eating at board-ing houses. When Tex Rickard sees this, he may try to sign her up—her reach beats anything he ever "seed" before. No, you don't need new eyeglasses—but somebody needs a new camera.

SOCIETY

Mrs. Cecil Dodd Is Given Shower Tuesday

On Tuesday afternoon of this week a host of friends of Mrs. Cecil Dodd very graciously showered her with many nice and valuable presents at the home of Mrs. Dave Shanks, Miss Mary Garrett and Mrs. W. B. LaMaster assisting Mrs. Shanks as hostesses. The house was beautifully decorated with dahlias and numerous autumn flowers.

A miniature representative of both bride and groom standing before an altar was one of the unique attractions of the hour. Many of the gifts were presented in a fancy colorful barrel drawn on a wanonette by little Ruth Neufeld.

Many appropriate toasts were given among which was a toast given by Miss Mary Garrett in disclosing knowledge as to how to catch a beau as told by the bride. Mrs. W. B. LaMaster toasted advice in a style exquisite. Mrs. Shanks toasted in words appropriately describing both sides of wedding day. The cake was cut by the single girls and Miss Frances Ragan received the ring.

Mrs. Dodd, in her unusual gracious manner, made a very pretty speech of thanks and appreciation for the thoughtfulness of her friends after which dainty refreshments were served to the many guests and all departed for their homes.

Laningham-Carter

On August 26, Mrs. Leona Laningham, Hagan, Va. became the bride of C. C. Carter of Perryton, the wedding taking place at Mrs. Carter's home at Hagan.

Following a tour of the southern states, the newly married couple arrived in Perryton, Monday of this week, and will make their home here.

Delicious cake and ice cream was served to the visitors and members.

T. E. L. Social

The members of the T. E. L. Sunday school class were delightfully entertained Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. R. Jarvis with Mrs. Clyde Cofer assisting hostess.

After all business matters were disposed of the evening was spent with games and contests, consisting of biblical phrases. The Jarvis home was beautiful with its decoration of cut flowers and pot plants, touched up with the class colors, white and green.

Forty-Two Party

Mrs. Stanley Key entertained a few of the former school chums of Mrs. R. K. Parker Saturday evening. Several delightful hours were spent playing forty-two and enjoying reminiscences.

At a late hour a dainty two course lunch was served to the guests, Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Parker, Austin, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Whippo, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dodson, Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Allen, Miss Grace Brewer and Mr. Milton.

P. T. A. Social

One of the most beautiful social events of the season was on Monday night, September 3, at the school auditorium when the parents and teachers assembled in a "get acquainted" meeting. A welcome address was given by Mrs. D. D. Shanks and Mrs. W. B. Irvin responded. The following program numbers were especially enjoyed: vocal solo, Miss Mildred Stansberry; reading, Miss Kathryn Shearer; piano solo, Miss Ruby Neufeld; reading, Miss Hazel Henry.

During the hour following the program, dainty refreshments were served to everyone present.

Enjoy Picnic Supper At Jines Springs

As a fitting conclusion to the round of social affairs that have been given recently for Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Tenney, was a fried chicken and watermelon feast at the Jines Springs Saturday evening.

The picnic was instigated by Mrs. Jack Allen and was limited to the most personal friends of the honorees. At six o'clock the party met at the Allen home and went in a body to the Springs where the bounteous supper was spread. Much merriment prevailed during the supper and in the games afterward but each felt and to think that they were losing two of their group.

Those comprising the picnic party were Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Tenney, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Allen and children, Jack Maurice and Mary Kathryn, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Lackey, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Rogers and children, Jane Louise and Gale Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. F. Bray and son, Bob, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lawson and son, Edward Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Van W. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Liel Lewellen and Dr. and Mrs. O. E. Blank and sons, Dean and Junior, and Junior.

Entertain For Mr. and Mrs. Tenney

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Tenney were the inspiration of a bridge dance party at the Ed Lawson home on Thursday evening of last week. The entertaining rooms presented a festive appearance with their shaded lights and the idea was further emphasized by the paper carnival caps worn by the guests and the show-ers of confetti which appeared later.

Bridge and dancing were enjoyed until nearly midnight when the hostess served an appetizing buffet supper after which there was more dancing until the wee small hours. Those who helped the host and hostess to make the evening an enjoyable one for Mr. and Mrs. Tenney were Dr. and Mrs. O. E. Blank, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Allen, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. F. Bray, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Lackey, Mr. and Mrs. Liel Lewellen and Mr. and Mrs. Van W. Stewart.

THE MEXICAN BEAN BEETLE

The Mexican bean beetle, formerly known principally in the Southwestern States, has spread very rapidly during the past ten years through the Eastern States; in many localities it has been abundant for a season and then has subsided, only to reappear in injurious numbers two or three years later. It is the most serious insect enemy of edible beans wherever it appears in the United States and attacks all kinds of common garden beans, tepary beans, Lima beans, and kidney beans. The Mexican bean beetle when fully mature is copper-colored and bears 16 black dots on its wings. It appears in the fields about the time the earliest planted beans show above the ground, and all stages of the pest may be found throughout the entire summer if not controlled. The injury caused by the beetle is easily distinguished from that of other insects. The beetles and larvae feed on the under surface of the leaves, the adult often cutting through to the leaf and giving the foliage a lacelike appearance. While the larva feeds on the under surface of the leaf, it leaves the upper surface intact; the plant tissue is cut away in narrow parallel sections about the length of the insect's body but narrow strips between these sections are left untouched, resulting in a peculiar network. After the foliage is destroyed, the insects may attack the pods and even the stems, and when abundant they have been known to completely destroy a bean crop in about four weeks. Considerable work on control measures has shown that the materials which will give best control without injury to the plants are magnesium arsenate or a good grade of calcium arsenate with lime, applied as either a dust or spray to the undersides of the leaves.

What was probably the first "sire exchange" in the United States was held this year at the State Fair grounds in South Dakota, when livestock owners brought in their bears, rams, and bulls for trade or sale. To cover incidental expenses there was a charge of 25 cents for each bear and ram and 50 cents for each bull. The exchange aroused considerable interest and favorable comment and created an opportunity for comparison and discussion of the merits of the various animals.

WHAT DO TRACTORS COST OPERATE

The cost of operating a tractor in breaking and cultivating as compared with horse labor is another thing worth considering. Certain of our Master Farmers have found the tractor much more economical for this work, while others said the cost was about the same. According to this survey the more numerous the jobs a farmer was able to find for his tractor, the greater the satisfaction he felt in owning it and the lower his tractor costs.

According to the cost figures furnished by several of these men, it costs about $6.50 to $7 a day to operate a 10-20 tractor, the range in cost varying from $4 to $10 a day. Those who gave detailed figures on average costs put gasoline or kerosene at $2.50 to $3 a day; oil at 35 cents to 50 cents; repairs, 10 cents to 50 cents a day; depreciation, $1; and labor, $2.50.

In comparing the cost of horse power and tractor power, the following gives the gist of the statements of six of these farmers:

1. "For breaking and cultivating, the tractor is 50 per cent cheaper."
2. "It costs me $4 an acre to break land with horses and $1.05 an acre with my tractor; to cultivate land with tractor, 25 cents an acre; with horses, 75 cents." (His team costs are too high.)
3. "It costs about 75 cents an acre to break land with the tractor, and with the team, $1.05. In cultivating about the same rates hold but the work in both cases is much better with the tractor."
4. "Horse power is cheaper, since

I raise my own feed."

5. "Very little difference in cost, but there is an advantage in time in favor of the tractor."

6. "I save about 25 per cent by using the tractor to break land."—Eugene Butler, in The Progressive Farmer.

"SUPPOSE IT WERE YOURS"

Suppose you had a piece of property upon which you were dependent for your living, and it was necessary to have other people around to whom you paid salaries and wages to help you run the place. What would you say if some of those people persisted in doing things which kept you on the jump all the time to keep the place from burning up? Suppose you heard one of them say, when asked why he was not more careful about where he tossed his cigarette butt, "Why should I care?" Frankly now, what would you say? After all, isn't that practically what we reply when we are persistently careless not only with fire but with other things, too?

There are hundreds of ways in which we can prevent fires. We can be careful with matches and with cigarette butts. The largest single cause of fires in this country is cigarettes. In 1926 fire losses of $30,160,000 were caused by this one thing alone.

Before you throw away that match or cigarette be sure it is out. Before you throw away your handkerchief, look for the rubbish can. Do unto others as you would have others to do unto you. The one of the best rules life ever gave to man. In your habits, much to ask you to suppose yours?—From Safeguarding Against Fire.
