CNN journalist reunited with wife, children

By GEORGE BOEHMER

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Jeremy Levin, the kidnapped American journalist who says he escaped from his chains after 11 months in captivity, arrived here Friday and held an emotional reunion with his wife and children.

"Fantastic, just fantastic!" Levin shouted to reporters who asked how he felt after flying into the U.S. Rhein-Main Air Base at 10:51 p.m. (5:51 CST) on an executive jet chartered by Cable News Network.

Levin, 52, was Beirut bureau chief for CNN when he was kidnapped there last March. He was turned over to U.S. custody in Damascus, Syria, earlier Friday after escaping from his kidnappers in Lebanon.

There was applause when he stepped from the plane on a cold, clear night. Then he embraced and kissed his wife Lucille, daughter Clare and son Clarence, and exchanged hugs with his brother-in-law, Frances Hare.

American officials formed a semicircle around the group, and then the Levins walked past some 40 journalists to four Mercedes sedans for the 20-mile drive to a U.S. Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden.

Levin looked healthy and rested as he got into one of the cars with his wife, waving and smiling broadly.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Robert Heath said Levin would undergo "routine medical checks," and it was not known when he would return to the United States.

"Mr. Levin has gone to the Wiesbaden Regional Medical Center for medical evaluation. When the evaluation is completed, the Levins will be returning to the United States on the same White House-provided C-135 Air Force plane which brought Mrs. Levin and her companions to Frankfurt this morning," Heath said.

"At this time we do not know the date and time of departure. We have nothing further to say at this time."

Heath said the U.S. government was "grateful that Jerry Levin is a free man and we appreciate the assistance of the Syrian government in facilitating his return to his family and to his country. We are very happy that the family is once again reunited."

Lt. Col. Bill Johnson, an Air Force spokesman, said there were no plans for a news conference at the hospital.

"It is strictly up to him and the CNN people whether there will be a press conference. From what we understand, he is not interested in one," said Johnson.

Another Air Force spokesman confirmed later that Levin had been admitted to the hospital. Master Sgt. David McMahon also said Mrs. Levin and the other family members were staying in the Wiesbaden area, but gave no details.

Appeals panel grants woman new trial in murder of judge

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A woman convicted of conspiring to murder U.S. District Judge John Wood was granted a new trial Friday by a federal appeals panel that also upheld the conviction of the gunman hired to kill the judge.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered a new trial for Elizabeth Chagra, found guilty on conspiracy in the 1979 shooting death of Wood in San Antonio. The court upheld Mrs. Chagra's convictions for conspiring to obstruct justice and tax fraud.

"I am so excited right now, I just want to get up and scream," she told the Associated Press in a telephone interview from the Federal Correctional Institution in Alderson W. Va., where she is serving a 30-year sentence.

The three-judge panel upheld the murder conviction of Charles V. Harrelson, who was found guilty of assassinating Wood for $250,000. The court also upheld Harrelson's convictions on charges of conspiracy to murder, conspiracy to obstruct justice and possession of marijuana.

The conviction of Harrelson's wife, Jo Ann, on a charge of conspiracy to obstruct justice was upheld.

Wood was shot in the back while getting into his car to drive to the courthouse. It was the first time this century that a federal judge was slain.

Prosecutors said Mrs. Chagra's husband Jamiel Chagra, a gambler facing trial on narcotics charges, hired Harrelson to kill the judge because of Wood's reputation for imposing severe sentences in drug cases.

Chagra was acquitted of murder and conspiracy to murder but convicted on conspiracy to obstruct justice and possession of marijuana.

Mrs. Chagra's conviction was reversed because U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions gave the jury an erroneous instruction.

Sessions, who had been Wood's colleague in the same district court, told the jury all they had to do was find that Mrs. Chagra "knowingly and willfully" became involved in the conspiracy.

Woman says 'prayers were answered'

DALLAS (AP) — The joy Elizabeth Chagra said she felt Friday when her "prayers were answered" was a lonely emotion.

Her conviction for a murder conspiracy that took the life of a San Antonio federal judge was reversed Thursday by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

"I am so excited right now, I just want to get up and scream," she told the Associated Press in a telephone interview from the Federal Correctional Institution in Alderson W. Va., where she is serving a 30-year sentence.

"But I don't have anybody to share my joy with," she said. "I'm going to call home...I think I'll call home and just cry with my mother because my prayers have been answered."

Mrs. Chagra, 31, said she hoped to be acquitted in the new trial ordered by the appeals court.

"I am hopeful, I really, really am, that this time around, everything will be straightened out," she said.

She said she does not want to be tried again at San Antonio, in the courthouse named after slain U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. Her attorney, Warren Burnet, said Thursday he will ask for a change of venue.

Odessa firefighters dispute arson investigators' claims

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

The fifth day of proceedings Friday in the O'Michael Building arson trial featured two Odessa firefighters who disputed investigators' claims that the fire was set deliberately.

Two captains in the Odessa Fire Department testifying for the defense said the Nov. 25, 1981, fire at the downtown building was not as severe as had been suggested Thursday by inspectors testifying for the federal government.

Ector County Commissioner Willie Hammond and former Odessa City Councilman Keith Weddel are on trial for conspiring to burn down the building to collect the insurance claim and aiding in the actual arson. Hammond has also been charged with lying twice during a civil lawsuit over collection of the claim, which was eventually settled for about $150,000.

Capt. Steve Pollock recounted for jurors in Judge Lucius Bunton's federal court here how he had been the first firefighter into the burning office suite Weddel had been remodeling.

Pollock maintained a fellow firefighter who testified for the government to having been inside with Pollock was actually standing outside on a second-story landing during the time the majority of the fire was quelled.

POLLOCK, WHO since the fire has been promoted, disputed the testimony of Fireman Robert Haynes that efforts to put out the flames in all parts of the room took more than one blast from the firehose.

The fire was put out quickly and was burning only on the upper parts of the walls and in the ceiling, according to Pollock. Odessa Fire Inspector Rick Cates showed jurors a series of photographs Thursday indicating severe damage to the floor and lower walls, as well as the upper walls and ceiling.

Capt. Wayne Wallace, whose testimony nearly duplicated Pollock's, said the fire was accidental. A letter he wrote after the fire stated the cause as an electrical short in wiring in the ceiling.

Both Cates and Rick Womack of the state Fire Marshal's Office testified the fire was deliberately set with some sort of flammable liquid.

Likewise, the government's witnesses and those called by the defense disagreed about whether windows were open when the firefighters arrived. The two men who testified earlier this week to setting the fire claimed the blaze was started by tossing a "molotov cocktail" through an open second-story window.

Neither captain was questioned by either investigator, according to the firemen's testimony.

UNDER questioning by federal prosecutor Tom McHugh, Pollock admitted he did not remember half the fires he had helped put out before or since the O'Michael Building fire.

Wallace admitted he had never looked for the source of the electrical short for which he credited the fire in his report. He noted a fire several weeks before at the building which reportedly was caused by an electrical short and his observations at the scene as his reasons for reporting this as the cause.

Bunton said Friday he expected the defense to finish its case Saturday. The jury will begin deliberations Monday, according to his schedule.

Before resting its case Friday, the federal government brought several more witnesses.

Prosecution: Mattox abused office's power

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox abused the power of his office to force a law firm to stop questioning his sister in a civil lawsuit, the prosecutor in Mattox's commercial bribery trial said Friday.

Mattox threatened to delay or block bond sales by clients of the Fulbright & Jaworski firm unless it dropped efforts to question Janice Maddox in a suit one of the firm's clients, Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle said in his opening statement.

As attorney general, Mattox must approve public bond issues.

"What he used to bribe them was the power of his office," Earle said.

Mattox, indicted in September 1983 on a felony charge of commercial bribery, faces up to 10 years in prison if convicted.

In his statement, Earle said Mattox indicated that he would approve county and municipal bonds handled by another section of the law firm if lawyer Thomas McDade quit seeking a deposition from Miss Mattox in a case involving south Texas rancher Clinton Manges, the state and Mobil Oil Corp., which Fulbright & Jaworski represented.

Manges had contended that the oil company failed to live up to obligations it made when leasing 65,000 acres of his land and demanded that Manges and the state should get more money from Mobil, Earle said. The case was settled last year.

The prosecutor reminded jurors that Manges "is a big contributor to various politicians, including Mr. Mattox."

The threat was made during several June 1983 phone calls between Mattox, his aides and Fulbright & Jaworski lawyers, Earle said. He said the prosecution had tape recordings of some calls.

Falling prices for benchmark crude could signal end of era for Texas

By SUSAN ASCHOFF

DALLAS (AP) — Texas is feeling the crunch from crude.

With the price of West Texas Intermediate slipping, the state's economy is facing a budget shortfall of $1 billion. Legislators are talking of doubling tuition at state colleges and legalizing horse racing.

The decline in the price of the benchmark crude could signal an end to an era when oil was one-fourth of Texas' economy and also fattened the coffers of such oil-producing states as Louisiana and Oklahoma.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock told legislators last week to expect "the most terrible budget situation here in Texas that you could possibly imagine."

"We have a real serious problem — a state too dependent on oil and gas. Even if someone's job is not in the energy industry, their state and local tax bill will reflect the lower price" of oil, said Thomas Plaut, economic forecasting manager for the University of Texas at Austin's Bureau of Business Research.

A glut of oil on world spot markets and continued conservation by consumers has threatened to push the per-barrel price of oil below $25, analysts say.

The spot price for West Texas crude dropped from $29.80 per barrel in September to as low as $25.20 a barrel in early January, analysts said. The current selling price is about $27.50.

A $1 drop in the average price of a barrel of Texas crude equals a $40 million loss in oil severance taxes paid to the state, the Texas comptroller's office estimates. When other sales taxes and franchise taxes paid by the oil industry are included, that single dollar costs state coffers $70 million a year in Texas.

The $1 billion shortfall would occur over a two-year period; the state's proposed biennial budget is $36.1 billion.

In Louisiana, a $1 drop in the price of oil means an estimated loss of $40 million to $45 million; in Oklahoma, each $1 drop causes an estimated $11 million loss.

"Oil has a profound effect on the fortunes of Texas," tax information director John Moore said. "Throughout the '70s, we depended on oil because the price was going up. Warnings that we ought to diversify our tax structure fell on deaf ears."

Only sales tax dollars exceed oil and natural gas taxes as a source of revenue in Texas. The three together make up 60 percent of money collected.

As recently as 1983, the energy industry was also responsible for 30 percent of the sales tax collected. Today, it provides 19 percent.

The state could lose more than $600 million over the next three years as severance tax revenues decline from as much as $1.3 billion in 1982 to $802 million by 1987, according to Legislative Budget Board figures.

In Louisiana, almost 30 percent of the state's revenues are derived from severance taxes, bonuses, rentals and royalties.

MIDLAND CENTENNIAL 1885-1985

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service predicts showers in parts of Washington and Oregon today. Flurries are predicted for parts of Wyoming, Colorado, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Temperatures expected to climb into mid-70s

From Staff and Wire Reports

Sunny skies and warm temperatures will greet Midlanders today, with the thermometer climbing into the mid-70s. Winds will be from the south at 10-20 mph. Tonight will be fair with a low in the upper 20s, and Sunday will be fair but cooler, with a high in the upper 50s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Friday's high of 66 was 15 degrees below the record for the date of 81, set in 1945, while the overnight low of 25 was 8 degrees above the 1936 record of 17.

STATE

Some high cloudiness streaked skies across Texas Friday, but it was thin enough to allow brilliant sunshine to reach all areas of the state.

Afternoon temperatures were in the 50s under a ridge of high pressure in East Texas, according to the National Weather Service.

That high-pressure system produced light north winds in the east, but combined with a trough of low pressure in Northwest Texas to give warm southwest winds to the west.

As a result, West Texas warmed into the middle and upper 60s with readings approaching the 70-degree mark in the Panhandle, the weather service said.

The extremes at 4 p.m. were 49 degrees at Greenville in Northeast Texas and 73 degrees at McAllen in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

NATION

Light snow continued to fall Friday in the Great Lakes region and the upper Ohio Valley, while much of the nation got a break from numbing winter weather earlier in the week.

Many roads in Ohio and Indiana remained clogged with ice and snow, and power had not been restored to about 5,000 homes and businesses in southern Ohio, where ice had snapped power lines.

The Ohio National Guard said 252 troops remained on duty in 19 of the state's 88 counties, to help beleaguered local crews clear rural roads.

LEVIN

Levin told reporters before leaving Damascus that he discovered late Wednesday night that his captors had been "careless with the chains" and he worked himself free, tied three blankets together and lowered himself through a window of the apartment building that had been his prison in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

He said he walked for two hours through the Bekaa, which is occupied by the Syrian army, and ran into a patrol near the ancient city of Baalbek. He said he hid from the soldiers at first, thinking they might be kidnappers trying to recapture him, then revealed himself and pleaded for help.

Levin said he could not identify his captors. The shadowy extremist group Islamic Holy War claimed responsibility for the abduction.

"I've been in solitary confinement for the whole time chained to the wall or a radiator...The faces of the Syrian soldiers were the first faces I saw since March 7 of last year. They were good faces," he said.

In an interview Friday with CNN, Levin said, "I was treated miserably...They could have been 100 percent better to me and I still would have been treated miserably.

"They were rough on me the first six months and then not really rough the second six months. The first six months they didn't beat me, but they would hit me around, swat me around, slap me, pound my back, pound my shoulders..." He said the object was to teach him obedience, "and obedience for them was, don't ever look at our faces or we'll kill you, don't ever look out the window or we'll kill you, don't even stand up or we'll kill you."

The soldiers turned Levin over to Syrian intelligence officers in Baalbek. He was taken to a Syrian army base near the Lebanese-Syrian border, then to Damascus.

He was turned over to Ambassador William Eagleton on Friday morning at the Foreign Ministry and left two hours later for Frankfurt. His wife, Lucille, was flown there on a U.S. government jet for the reunion.

Minister's wife hopes husband will be freed soon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Carol Weir, wife of a Presbyterian minister abducted in west Beirut nine months ago, said Friday the news that kidnapped American reporter Jeremy Levin is free gives her hope.

"I take it as a good sign," she said in an interview. "If he was released, it is a good gesture. If he escaped, it gives me hope that they will free my husband soon." Levin was seized last March 7 on a west Beirut street.

Mrs. Weir's husband, the Rev. Benjamin Weir, was kidnapped as they were walking on a west Beirut street May 8. The 61-year-old minister worked with the National Evangelical Synod of Syria and Lebanon and is fluent in Arabic. The Weirs have spent 30 years in Lebanon and are from Berkeley, Calif.

Levin, 52, made contact with Syrian soldiers in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley early Thursday. Syrian officials turned him over to U.S. Ambassador William Eagleton in Damascus on Friday, and he flew Frankfurt, West Germany, for a reunion with his wife, Lucille.

Exactly who kidnapped the Levin and Weir — as well as three other missing Americans — remains unknown. The Islamic Holy War organization has claimed responsibility, but there has been no independent confirmation of the identities of the captors.

Levin said he didn't know who held him captive, and he never saw any other Americans during his months in solitary confinement, but he thought four other people were being held captive in the building where he was kept prisoner.

Mrs. Weir said that she had been told that intelligence information suggests her husband is held somewhere outside Beirut by the Shiite fundamentalist "Hezbollah" sect, which is reported in alliance with Islamic Holy War.

"I never felt that they were all kept together," she said. "I believe them to be in solitary confinement."

She said that when she first heard of Levin's good fortune, "I was hopeful that the other Americans may be freed soon."

She said she remained in Lebanon teaching at the Near East Theology Center "to follow any clues that may arise...Beirut is not a very safe place, but it is reasonably safe for me."

Mrs. Fowler was born in Valdosta, Ga. She attended school there and graduated from Valdosta State College with a degree in education. She married Edward J. Fowler in 1930, and they lived in several different southeastern states over the next few years. In 1944 they moved to Arlington, Va., where Mrs. Fowler taught elementary school until 1959 when they moved to Knoxville, Tenn. They returned to Arlington in 1963.

After her husband died in 1967, Mrs. Fowler returned to Knoxville, where she lived until moving to Midland eight months ago to be near her son and his family.

Survivors include a son, Jef Fowler of Midland; a brother, John W. Davis of Athens, Ga.; and a grandson.

TRIAL

Odessa civic leader Bill Elms recalled that a part of the downtown area near the building was the preferred location for a proposed civic center in September 1980. Former Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant — who shared ownership with Weddel and attorney Ray Stoker Jr. and is under federal subpoena — was a member of the advisory committee to the task force set up to promote the center.

According to the indictment, Weddel had purchased interest in the building on speculation the center would be built nearby. Elms said he did not learn until later that the mayor and Weddel — at the time a city councilman — owned interest in the building.

AN FBI specialist told jurors that, during the 17-month period running from July 1980 to November 1981, rents collected on the building covered expenses five times.

The agent also said the owners had invested $26,000 in the building to offset this difference in the cash flow for the property. Weddel's attorney, Travis Shelton of Lubbock, noted the cash flow analysis failed to reflect about $15,000 of the $26,000 invested went for capital improvements.

Federal prosecutors have said they will prove the building was losing money at the time of the fire. When the bond issue failed, Weddel and Hammond allegedly conspired to burn it for the insurance claim.

Hammond's bank account was overdrawn on 99 of 222 days before and after the fire, according to the FBI study. Prosecutors are attempting to show Hammond's motive was a need for money.

Warren Burnett defended Hammond by noting the account was overdrawn from Nov. 25 to Dec. 10, during which time the partial payoff for the arson is alleged to have occurred.

Prosecutor Ellen Byers also read for jurors excerpts from the civil suit deposition during which Hammond allegedly lied under oath. According to testimony earlier in the week, the county commissioner acted as an intermediary between those who paid to have the building burned and the arsonists.

BUNTON WOULD not allow Ms. Byers to add other evidence of Hammond's financial condition, which she said included two judgments against Hammond and records of a car repossession in the same time period the building burned.

Burnett's motion for a mistrial following these claims was denied by the judge, who also denied another motion for acquittal by Burnett and Shelton. Shelton also suggested the state had failed to link Weddel sufficiently with the conspiracy, but the judge again ruled against the defense.

Two county prosecutors, one from Ector County and another from Winkler County, testified that John Thomas Peterson and Lawrence Earl Peterson should not be believed by the jury.

John Peterson was the government's first witness of the events leading up to and following the alleged crimes. He linked Hammond and Weddel to the conspiracy and arson.

Lawrence "Cotton" Peterson confessed on the stand to throwing the "molotov coctail" that ignited the fire. Both are in federal custody and agreed to testify for the government in return for immunity from prosecution for the arson, according to their testimony.

Car wash manager reports theft

From Staff Reports

The manager of the Chaparral Car Wash, 2300 N. Big Spring St., reported Friday that $200 in cash was stolen from a locked file cabinet between 7 p.m. Thursday and 8 a.m. Friday. Bill Cornell told police entry was gained by breaking an office window. Damage to the window was estimated at $150 and damage to the cabinet was estimated at $170.

In other complaints to police Friday, Joe Frank Jackson, Route 1, Box 144, A-13, reported the burglary of a $400 cassette stereo from his '79 Chevrolet Silverado. The stereo was taken sometime between 6 a.m. Thursday and 9:30 a.m. Friday while the car was parked in the 3100 block of Bankhead Highway, Jackson said. Damage to the car was estimated at $230.

A 7-Eleven convenience store at 4400 W. Wadley Ave., reported the theft of 35-cigarette cartons worth $455 Thursday. The theft occurred between 3 p.m. and 11 p.m., according to reports.

CRUDE

Legislative Fiscal Office analyst Bill Black said the 1984-85 state budget is predicated upon oil prices averaging $30 per barrel. But, he added, the drop in oil prices does not necessarily mean a shortfall in revenue because a projected 3 percent to 4 percent decline in oil production has not materialized.

In Oklahoma, Gov. George Nigh based his budget in December on an estimated oil price of $28 per barrel. State budget officials conceded last month that the estimate isn't realistic; new forecasts could mean a shortfall of $33 million.

Many economists and industry insiders say the gradual decline in oil prices will not shut down companies and lay off thousands of Texas workers as low prices did in 1982-1983.

In oil-rich areas, however, producers say drilling, investment and morale are all down.

The rig count in the Permian Basin dropped from 400 in November to 332 last week, said Ed Thompson of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Although Texas has diversified its economy with more banking, medicine, computer, high-tech manufacturing and other industries, the effort has not advanced far enough to counteract oil's slump, Plaut said.

"The economy on the (Interstate 35) corridor — Austin, San Antonio, Dallas, Fort Worth — looks all right, but everyplace else in the state is almost totally dependent on oil," he said.

Many experts minimize talk of the 1980s as a watershed decade for Texas oil.

Other problems in the national economy — reflected in Texas by the first-ever drop in sales tax revenue in 1983 — are affecting the state as much as oil prices, some analysts say.

Wheat strain carries name of another East Texas pioneer

By CRAIG ELLIOTT

OVERTON, Texas (AP) — The Daisy Mae Bradford name signifies a pioneering spirit to many Rusk County residents. The county's first producing oil well was known as the Daisy Mae Bradford, and now the name has lent itself to another East Texas innovation.

The scientists and researchers at the Overton station of Texas A&M University's agricultural experiment program have produced a strain of wheat for use in East Texas, and decided to name the line "Bradford Wheat."

"We were looking for a suitable name," said Dr. Lloyd Nelson, a plant breeder at Overton, "and the well is located about three or four miles from here, so we came up with what we think is an appropriate name."

Bradford Wheat is resistant to a common disease in East Texas — Septoria, or "leaf blotch disease."

Scientists in Overton began working on the wheat in 1972, Nelson said. Bradford Wheat was finally made available in 1984 after several generations of the wheat produced the desired results.

The soft red winter wheat is a "good forage wheat," Nelson said, and its flour can also be used for crackers, cookies and biscuits.

Nelsons said Bradford Wheat is currently in use in about 800 acres in the state. He also said the wheat can compete with the best types available in the state. The most popular wheat now in use is being attacked by leafrust, Nelson said, adding he hopes Bradford's leafrust resistance will "hold up for a few years."

Plant breeders develop each line of wheat, Nelson said, with an idea of which types of resistance, as well as other characteristics, would be desired.

The process of providing wheat with desired properties, such as disease and insect resistance, is a "never-ending circle," Nelson said.

"Any disease is very adaptable," Nelson said. "There are a lot of diseases, and it takes a lot of time to develop wheat with good disease resistance.

"East Texas is very humid, and a humid climate can mean a lot of diseases."

"You never reach perfection," Nelson said. "You can develop wheat with resistance to three or four diseases, a couple of insects, make it a short plant, with high yield, or whatever you want.

"But there's a saying that 'you can't get all the raccoons up the same tree.' If you give wheat nine protections, the tenth may be the one that knocks it out."

In order to provide certain traits, researchers "pyramid" genes, Nelson said. Different genes are combined for resistance to certain diseases. Scientists in several areas provide each other with the genetic information of wheat in their areas, as well as information on diseases and insects.

After the traits of the desired wheat are decided, a lengthy process of refining the wheat is started.

"It usually takes 15 generations after the initial cross to get it at a point where it is in the farmer's field," Nelson said. "That would normally take 15 years, but we speed it up a little here."

The Overton facility uses greenhouses, laboratories and fields to test the qualities of wheat. Nelson is currently testing plant resistance to Septoria. He grows the diseases in lab cultures and then sprays the Septoria spores onto plants. Different plants are then rated for their resistance.

Plants with desired characteristics are then crossbred with other plants to reproduce the trait. Nelson said the Overton facility usually performs about 500 crossings between plants each winter.

Recent immigrant would like to 'get into Lincoln's mind'

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — When 16-year-old Gabor Boritt fled his tumultuous native Hungary, he knew little of either his new home's language or history. Abraham Lincoln was nothing more than a name.

Nearly three decades later, the immigrant is a published Lincoln scholar who teaches American history down the road from where the Civil War president made his Gettysburg Address.

Lincoln "deserves a great deal of respect," Boritt, 45, said in an interview at his Gettysburg College office, which is cluttered with books, busts, photos, cartoons and even a crayon drawing of America's 16th president.

"If there is anybody's (mind) I would like to get into...he is the man. I'd have loved to know what he thought when he signed the Emancipation Proclamation," Boritt said.

Boritt, now a naturalized U.S. citizen, left Hungary in the wake of the 1956 anti-Communist uprising that was quickly crushed by the Soviet Union. His father, described as a socialist and democrat, "said we had no opportunities there," the professor recalled.

Boritt first became interested in Lincoln in 1959 while attending a small liberal arts college in South Dakota. At the time America was celebrating the 150th birthday of the president who kept the Union together.

"I was a young immigrant attempting to make myself at home in America," he said. "In many ways...he stood for America and I fell in love with America. Studying Lincoln was part of the process of becoming an American."

STATE

Man held in shootings traveled around state.

TEMPLE (AP) — A 28-year-old man who went on a shooting spree at Temple Junior College had been traveling around the state following a violent fight with his wife, authorities said Friday.

Steven Parsons wounded two instructors and held one hostage inside a building for about three hours Thursday before he fatally shot himself, police said.

Parsons, who listed addresses in Longview and Austin, died about 10:15 p.m. during surgery at Scott & White Hospital for a gunshot wound to his mid-sternum, said Dolores Gautier, assistant director of nursing.

His body was taken to Dallas for an autopsy.

Parsons exhibited wild personality shifts before he shot himself, said Police Chief Thomas Vannoy.

"He'd be just normal and say, 'Well, I'll release her and come out if you promise me this and this,'" said Police Chief Thomas Vannoy after the shootings Thursday.

Moments later, the man would say things like "If I hear a noise, I'm gonna shoot her and kill myself,'" Vannoy said.

Police said the two women discovered the gunman rifling through their purses inside their offices at the campus Fine Arts Building and challenged him. Ms. Foster was shot as she fled from the building, said Sgt. Steve Klempa.

The woman he was holding, management instructor Laurelyn Carlisle, 33, of Salado, was in good condition Friday following surgery for a gunshot wound to her stomach and another to her right side, said hospital spokeswoman Charlene Davis.

Speech instructor Debbie Foster, 30, of Little River, Texas, was treated for a gunshot wound to her hip and released from the same hospital, officials said.

Vannoy said Friday that a background check on Parsons revealed he had left his family about two weeks ago after a violent fight with his wife at their Longview home. Parsons suffered a minor stab wound to his back in the altercation, Vannoy said.

Houston man used oil money on spending sprees, man testifies

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston businessman accused in an oil fraud and tanker sinking scheme went on spending sprees in Geneva and London after receiving $3 million in a secret oil deal, according to testimony from the defendant's former "right hand man."

Frederick Soudan is accused of posing as a wealthy oilman to obtain a supertanker, using the ship to steal a 200,000-ton oil cargo, then selling the stolen oil and sinking the ship off Senegal on Jan. 17, 1980, after secretly unloading the oil cargo at Durban, South Africa.

Prosecutors contend Soudan, 41, convinced the South African government he owned the oil in an under-the-table deal dictated by the country's difficulties in obtaining oil.

John Haddad, now an insurance executive in Saudi Arabia, testified Thursday in Soudan's federal court trial that he went to work for Soudan in early 1979 at Soudan's Houston-based commodities trading company, American Polamax International, to "help him organize deals."

Haddad said Soudan had told him he operated a $3 million company. But after arriving in Houston, Haddad said, he soon learned that American Polamax was a shoestring operation.

"It was extremely embarrassing and painful to know that I had been technically, conned," Haddad said.

He said Soudan became involved in a large-scale transaction late in 1979 to sell oil to South Africa, so he accompanied Soudan and several business associates to Switzerland to await the money transfer.

Haddad said Soudan and several Europeans received a $32 million wire transfer from South Africa in December 1979 after the oil was pumped from the supertanker Salem into Durban pipelines.

Soudan, who prosecutors say received $4.25 million from the transaction, was partially paid Jan. 2, 1980, when $3 million was transferred to Soudan's Geneva bank account, Haddad said.

For the next three days, Haddad said, Soudan and several friends spent time in Geneva "shopping, sightseeing and enjoying dinners and the nightlife."

Haddad said he and Soudan returned to Europe a month after the Salem's sinking and that authorities began investigating Soudan's role in the incident.

Open containers' ban cuts drunken driving

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A study by Sam Houston State University indicates a ban on open containers of alcohol in cars could be the most effective way of cutting the number of drunken drivers on Texas highways.

"At the very least, if they don't have that drink in the car with them, they are not getting increasingly drunk while they are driving," said Frank Williams, a Sam Houston State researcher who wrote the report.

The report said barring open containers would be more effective than increasing penalties for drunken driving or raising the minimum drinking age. All three options are being considered by the Texas Legislature.

Increasing the penalties does not decrease the number of drunken drivers because most of them believe they will not be caught, according to the report, which was delivered this week to the Senate Criminal Justice Committee.

It also says that raising the drinking age to 19 and increased DWI penalties passed by the Legislature in 1983 had little immediate impact on ridding Texas highways of drunken drivers.

"Any deterrent impact will probably be short-lived," Williams said Thursday. "The key thing is rise of public notice usually generated by the media.

"As people hear more about (the dangers of) drunk driving through the media, the more they are inclined to change their behavior," he said.

Once public discussion moves to other subjects, drivers normally return to their familiar habits, Williams said.

The report also said there is little research on whether raising the drinking age reduces the number of drunken drivers.

"We found nothing definitive," Williams said. "If we raise the drinking age limit, there should be no expectation of decreasing traffic fatalities."

The lack of research has not stopped states from passing such laws. Twenty-three states have a minimum drinking age of 21, and 10 of those states have passed the laws since 1982.

One group untouched by the minimum age laws — ages 22 to 25 — are responsible for a disproportionately large share of alcohol-related traffic fatalities, the report said.

The report included a survey of Texans' attitudes towards driving while intoxicated.

Inspectors seek cylinder with radioactive material

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Department of Health inspectors searched Friday near Graham for a missing, thumb-sized cylinder containing a highly radioactive material.

The device was reported missing Wednesday by a North Texas oil and gas well logging company, according to the department. The cylinder is used to detect geological densities.

State inspectors using radiation detectors have found no trace of the cylinder along the 40-mile stretch from the oil well to Graham.

Schlumberger Well Services reported the cylinder was used at a Throckmorton County oil rig last Sunday. It was missing from a company storage container on Wednesday, according to Bob Free of the State Bureau of Radiation Control.

Exposure to the radiation from the cylinder could present a "significant health hazard to someone who might pick it up and carry it around," Free said.

The stainless steel cylinder is three inches long and one inch in diameter. Warnings on it include, "Danger-Radioactive."

"Our inspectors surveyed the Graham municipal landfill and continue to interview people associated with the company's drilling operations with the hopes of finding clues to the device's whereabouts," said Free.

White says Texas will spend $25 million to attract port

AUSTIN (AP) — The state of Texas is willing to pitch in $25 million to help attract a Navy battleship port to a Texas city, Gov. Mark White said Friday.

The governor sent a letter to John F. Lehman, Secretary of the Navy, in which he said the state would commit the additional money for any on-site improvements or construction required for the homeport.

"A bill to appropriate the necessary funds will be introduced in this session of the Legislature or in a subsequent regular session, as necessary, to provide funding required by the Navy," White wrote Lehman. The letter also was signed by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis.

U.S. Rep. Mike Andrews, D-Houston, who made the announcement with White, said unlike other competing states which have one city to offer, Texas has seven. Texas cities seeking the homeport include Houston/Galveston, Corpus Christi, Brownsville, Port Lavaca, Freeport/Brazosport, and the golden triangle — Port Arthur, Orange and Beaumont.

Andrews said the Navy Department would reduce the list to 17 cities in a few days. After that a shorter list will be prepared.

"Hopefully, there will be just one Texas city on the short list. That makes it much easier for all of us to unite behind one city regardless of where it is," Andrews said.

Dallas art museum wants to move into big leagues

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Museum of Art wants to play in the big leagues.

"You can't have too many Cezannes," museum director Harry Parker said Friday after an ambitious plan to start acquiring $10 million worth of art a year by 1990 was announced.

Should the plan succeed, it would give the Dallas museum an acquisition fund ranking behind only the Getty Art Museum in Los Angeles, the Kimbell Museum in Fort Worth and the Cleveland Museum of Art, Parker said.

The museum's current acquisiton endowment fund is now only $2 million, which ranks it 32nd in the nation. Its current collection is valued at about $35 million, more than half of it acquired in the last few years.

"It's a relatively young insitution. It's never had a lot of money to buy with. What we're proposing is to move it into the big leagues," Parker said.

The museum is putting together an all-star shopping list. Parker said Dallas wants to build a major collection of 18th and 19th century American and Eurpean art and of modern American and European art.

"These are still areas where there is enough good art around that you can make a major collection for Dallas," he said. "We'd like to have Picasso and Matisse and Miro and Braque and all the top artists."

Parker said the museum also wants to make a name for itself through exhibitions.

"We've had the big traveling shows. But we've never been known as a exhibtion originator and creator," he said.

The plan calls for raising about $60 million for an acquisition endowment and another $10 million for a program endowment.

Within five years, trustees hope for the museum to be buying about $5 million worth of art a year and to be given about $5 million worth of art a year.

In the last six years, the museum has added $20 million worth of art to its collection.

U.S. has contingency plans to close bases in Greece, officials say

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, stung by Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou's threats to shut down U.S. military bases, has made contingency plans to withdraw American forces from the country, State Department and Pentagon officials said Friday.

"Anytime you have a government that states publicly it's going to kick bases out it seems prudent to plan what you are going to do afterward," said a State Department official in discussing the latest flareup with the Greek leader.

At the Pentagon, meanwhile, an official said that while the United States was not about to close its bases in Greece, which include a major Navy installation in Souda Bay, "we prudently look at all possible eventualities."

Papandreou, who is seeking reelection to another four-year term, has said he would close the bases in 1988 when the current leases expire. In return, Greece receives $500 million a year in U.S. loans to buy weapons. Also, 3,500 Greek workers are employed at the bases.

The dispute is the latest between the Reagan administration and its allies.

New Zealand's closing of its ports to nuclear-capable U.S. ships has strained the ANZUS alliance in the Pacific, which includes Australia.

Canada and Iceland, which are members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, were distressed recently by reports of U.S. contingency plans to store nuclear weapons in the two countries, Bermuda and Puerto Rico.

Also, the administration's decision to hold talks next week with the Soviet Union on the Middle East has raised concerns in Israel, the cloest U.S. friend in the Middle East.

Greece is considered a vital member of the NATO alliance. It and Turkey anchor NATO's eastern flank, closest to the Soviet Union. An airbase at Gournies monitors Soviet activity in the eastern Mediterranean.

Papandreou, who was educated at Harvard and was chairman of the economics faculty at the University of California at Berkeley, has tweaked his onetime homeland many times in the past.

In the three years his Socialist government has held power in Athens, he has desribed the United States as imperialistic, courted Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy and pursued agreements with three communist neighbors, Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.

Papandreou has compared the United States unfavorably to the Soviet Union.

Third artificial heart patient chosen

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Doctors will perform the world's third permanent artificial heart implant Sunday on a retired autoworker who would otherwise die in "a matter of days," the Humana Heart Institute International announced Friday.

The patient, Murray P. Haydon of Louisville, called "M.P." by his family and friends, has suffered from congestive heart failure since 1981, said Bob Irvine, Humana Inc.'s director of public relations.

"He is seriously ill and dying," Irvine said, and could expect to live just "a matter of days" without the implant.

Haydon has not suffered heart attacks or had prior heart surgery. He elected to receive the air-driven plastic and metal pump after being told by doctors that his heart medication was no longer effective.

At 58 he is eight years beyond the point that doctors usually are willing to perform human heart transplants.

Dr. Jerome Lacy, Haydon's cardiologist, described his patient as the "perfect candidate" for an implant.

His mental outlook is good, his family supports the decision and he has no other illnesses besides the weak heart, Lacy said. "He fell within the ideal category on all those counts and he was on death's door, so to speak."

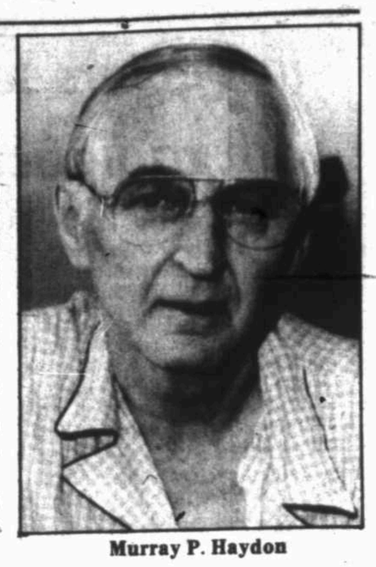

The Jarvik-7 artificial heart, used in both previous implant operations, is his only hope for life, Irvine said.

"He doubles up. He can't breathe very well. He can't walk around," said Irvine, who visited with Haydon on Friday.

Dr. William C. DeVries, the only surgeon authorized by the federal Food and Drug Administration to perform artificial heart operations, will lead the heart institute's team. He and the others began preparing for the operation Friday — conducting check runs in the operating room and checking all equipment — and were unavailable for comment.

DeVries gave Seattle-area dentist Barney Clark an artificial heart in December 1982 and implanted one in William J. Schroeder of Jasper, Ind., last Nov. 25.

Haydon, a Louisville native, spent seven years in the Army and Air Force and saw combat duty in Germany in World War II.

Baker says U.S. has intervened in world currency markets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III disclosed Friday that the United States has intervened on world currency markets since he took office Feb. 3, but he stopped short of saying the rising dollar should be devalued.

Baker also said the government is sticking to its basic policy of intervening in currency markets only to maintain order. But his comments came amid a continued clamor among U.S. farmers and exporters and foreign officials for action to curb the skyrocketing dollar.

When finance officials speak of "intervention," they mean a government buying or selling a currency on foreign exchange markets to try to increase or lower the value of that currency. Baker would not go into specifics on what actions the U.S. government has taken.

John Gummer, chairman of Britain's ruling Conservative Party, said in London Friday that the United States is unfairly weakening its West European allies by depressing their currencies with the strong dollar.

"America is importing the savings of the rest of the world and exporting the inflation," said Gummer, a close aide of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

The dollar fell sharply in early trading Friday in a round of profittaking that followed nine straight days in which the American currency set records. Over the past five years, the value of the dollar has increased about 80 percent.

Before Baker took office, the top finance officials from the United States, Japan, West Germany, France and Britain met in Washington on Jan. 17 and declared they were "willing to undertake coodinated intervention" to maintain order on currency markets.

Baker told reporters that U.S. intervention since the January meeting represents a moderation of the government's attitude toward such action.

"We have intervened and we have in fact done so since I've been here," Baker said, adding that the basic policy remains that such moves should be made only to maintain order on world markets.

Baker said it was his view that intervention is "best done and more properly done only in the case of disorderly markets."

But an administration official who commented on condition that his name not be used said, "There's been some intervention in cases not limited to disorderly markets since that (Jan. 17) meeting."

While disclosing the actions, Baker indicated the marketplace should set the value of currencies. He added that governments and central banks only can have a limited impact on the value of a currency.

Customs agents seize cargo jet used to smuggle cocaine

MIAMI (AP) — A Colombian cargo jet that had been used to smuggle nearly 2½ tons of cocaine amid a shipment of Valentine flowers was seized by customs agents early Friday in the third-largest drug take in U.S. history, authorities said.

Agents confiscated the Avianca 747 cargo plane, valued at $119 million, at 5 a.m. EST, three hours after it landed following a flight from Colombia.

The jet was seized "on the basis of Avianca having the knowledge of (the cocaine) being aboard," said U.S. Customs spokesman Cliff Stallings.

Stallings said it would cost Avianca "a very substantial penalty, well over a million dollars I would guess" to retrieve the jumbo jet.

It was the 34th time cocaine had been found aboard an Avianca jet since April 1980 and brought to 5,576 pounds the amount smuggled into this country on the carrier, customs officials said.

None of the crew was taken into custody, but Robert Battard, regional Customs commissioner, said arrests were pending. The cocaine's destination was Montreal, Canada, according to Jim Dingfelder, a spokesman for the vice president's task force on drugs.

Dingfelder said an innocuous white powder was substituted for the cocaine and the shipment was allowed to continue to Montreal on another commercial carrier. He said the flowers were bound for various destinations, including Canada.

The 2,478 pounds of cocaine, with a street value of up to $600 million and the nation's third largest drug seizure, had been confiscated Wednesday when members of the Customs' Contraband Enforcement Team discovered the powder in 32 flower boxes mingled with flowers bound for the big Valentine's Day holiday market, said Battard.

The cocaine seizure wasn't announced and the Avianca jet was allowed to leave and make a subsequent roundtrip to Miami the following day to give drug task force agents time to investigate.

"We wanted to develop some more information on people that were involved," Battard said.

During past Avianca seizures, 3,669 pounds of cocaine were discovered in unmanifested cargo. "We've been trying to reach agreement with them for them to improve their security," Battard said of Avianca.

Women's Vote Project successful, leaders say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the defeat of the first female ever to run for vice president on a major-party ticket, women's leaders declared Friday they won a big victory in 1984 with millions of women registering and voting for the first time.

Joanne Howes, head of the Women's Vote Project, said the "conventional wisdom" is just wrong in concluding that there was no women's vote in the presidential election and that voter registration efforts failed.

"In terms of our immediate goal, we think we succeeded," Ms. Howes told reporters.

She said the 76 national organizations in the Women's Vote Project helped put 1.8 million women on the voter rolls, part of the 6.4 million surge in women's registration from 1980 through 1984.

Women also turned out to vote at a higher rate than men in 1984, said Sheila High King of the vote project. She cited Census Bureau figures that showed a 5.2 million increase over 1980 in the number of women who voted last year, while the jump in the number of men voting was 3.6 million. Overall, 60.8 percent of the voting-age women turned out, compared with 59 percent of the men.

Ethel Klein, associate professor at Columbia University, added that 1984 and the defeat of Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale and running mate Geraldine Ferraro graphically demonstrated that a woman candidate doesn't guarantee women's votes.

When Ms. Ferraro won the Democratic vice presidential nomination last year, she became the first woman on a major party's national ticket.

"The mistake some made was to assume that women would vote for a woman candidate," Ms. Klein said. "The gender gap is an issue vote...The women's vote is not women voting for women candidates. It's women voting on issues of concern to women."

Ms. Klein said a failure by Mondale and Ms. Ferraro to discuss issues more from women's perspectives contributed to the size of their defeat last year.

Energy zone powers 'Mother Nature's TV'

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A huge energy zone 400,000 miles from Earth has been identified as the power source for the Northern and Southern Lights, which are like shimmering pictures on "Mother Nature's TV set," a physicist says.

Recent analysis of some of the 200,000 photographs of the lights taken by the Dynamics Explorer 1 satellite allowed researchers to calculate the location of the power supply for the first time, said University of Iowa physicist Lou Frank.

The invisible, egg-shaped zone of electrically charged particles is 20 to 30 times the size of Earth and is located about 400,000 miles distant, always on the side of the Earth away from the sun, he said.

Magnetic forces in the zone trap the particles from the solar wind, a hot, particle-laden gas that speeds from the sun at nearly 1 million mph, Frank said.

From the ground, the Northern and Southern Lights — also called the aurora borealis and aurora australis — usually are visible from high latitudes as "a series of (60- to 70-mile-tall) green curtains marching and waving across the sky," although they also may appear as a red glow, Frank said Thursday.

The auroras occur because solar wind pushes the magnetic field around the Earth to create an electric voltage, or power supply, in the planet's magnetic "tail" — the 4 million-mile-long part of Earth's magnetic field blown away from the planet by solar wind, he said. Through complex reactions, the voltage accelerates the particles into Earth's polar regions, where they funnel into the atmosphere and are illuminated to create the lights.

"It's Mother Nature's TV set, and the top of Earth's atmosphere is the screen," said Frank, who presented his findings at Jet Propulsion Laboratory during an international conference on solar wind interaction with Earth's magnetic field.

"There is a high voltage in a TV set, and this voltage accelerates particles into our TV screen" to create a picture, he said. "Mother Nature's power supply is thousands of miles above Earth's atmosphere. What she does rather than run old movies is she runs a display of Northern and Southern Lights."

Teen pulls gun on orthodontist to make him remove braces

GROSSE POINTE WOODS, Mich. (AP) — A 15-year-old boy who was determined to be rid of his braces pulled a gun on an orthodontist and told him he didn't care about going to jail, "as long as I can have my bands off," the doctor said Friday.

Police eventually disarmed the boy after a struggle in which two shots were fired into the floor, Grosse Pointe Woods Public Safety Director Jack Patterson said Friday.

The orthodontist, who was not the boy's own dentist, said he stalled the teen-ager during the Feb. 8 incident by removing a few of the bands and a wire that ringed his teeth.

The boy was not identified because of his age.

The doctor said he had attended a meeting a few days before the incident at which the boy's regular orthodontist warned colleagues to be alert for a young patient seeking removal of a set of braces.

The suburban Detroit orthodontist involved in the incident, who spoke Friday to The Associated Press on the condition his name not be used, said he first told the youth he would have to get his parents' permission and records from the boy's regular dentist because the work on his teeth was not complete.

"He said, 'Well I still want my bands off.' I said, 'You don't realize what kind of legal ramifications you would open me up to if I do this,'" the orthodontist recalled.

"He leaned over and pulled out the .45 and he said, 'Would this make you take my bands off?' I said, 'Yeah, it would,'" the doctor said.

"The next thing I said was, 'Is this gun loaded?' — really loud. The girl at the front desk heard that and kind of leaned over and saw what was happening, but he couldn't see her," he said.

Reputed underworld boss arrested with three others

WANTAGH, N.Y. (AP) — Carmine "The Snake" Persico, the reputed underboss of the Colombo crime family on the FBI's Ten Most Wanted List, was arrested with three other people Friday, federal officials said.

Persico, indicted with 10 other alleged leaders of the Colombo family last fall, was arrested about 4:45 p.m. by FBI agents and New York City police, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Barbara Jones.

Arrested with him in this community on New York's Long Island was Dominic "Donnie Shacks" Montemarano, an alleged leader of the Colombo family, Joseph Russo and Frederick DeChristopher, said FBI spokesman Nick Colicino.

All four were scheduled to be arraigned today before a U.S. magistrate in U.S District Court, Ms. Jones said.

Persico and Montemarano were indicted last October on racketeering charges including extortion and payoffs, mob control of labor unions, embezzlement of union funds, trafficking in heroin and other drugs, multimillion-dollar thefts, illegal gambling, loanshark-ing and bribery.

Students' attitudes polled

NEW YORK (AP) — An overwhelming majority of junior high school students say they never cheat in class, but dishonesty appears more widespread when it comes to homework.

A nationwide poll of 5,000 students in grades 6-8 conducted by Scholastic, Inc., publisher of Junior Scholastic magazine, found 78 percent said they never cheat on a quiz or test, 14 percent said they rarely do, 7 percent responded they do sometimes, and just 1 percent admitted cheating often.

But in response to the question, "Do you ever ask another student for answers to a homework assignment," 33 percent said "never," 45 percent said "rarely," 20 percent said "sometimes," and 2 percent said "often."

Couple crying 'fowl'

SOMERVILLE, N.J. (AP) — A couple is crying "fowl" over Bridgewater Township's order to get rid of its chickens.

Edmund and Elizabeth Rosenburgh sued the township Thursday, saying their chickens are pets — which are allowed — and not poultry or livestock kept for profit — which is forbidden.

The township's zoning board had told the Rosenburghs to remove the more than 30 chickens — including two roosters that crowed at odd hours — and pigeons kept in a coop behind their home.

Former zoning officer David Cortese said the birds were a nuisance in the residential neighborhood.

British may limit embryo experiments

LONDON (AP) — The British Parliament overwhelming approved a bill Friday that would make it a criminal offense for scientists to experiment on human embryos. But the measure lacks government support and is thought unlikely to become law.

By a vote of 238 to 66, legislators approved the so-called Unborn Children Protection Bill when it came up in the House of Commons for a second debate.

Approval cleared the way for the bill to move on to its third and final debate, at which stage it could be voted into law. If enacted, the bill would outlaw all research that involved the use of human embryos. Violators would be subject to a maximum two-year jail term.

But the Conservative government has been unwilling to set aside time in the current parliamentary session for the measure to come up for a final vote — in effect killing it.

Health Minister Kenneth Clarke told Parliament he felt the subject had not been thoroughly researched.

"It has not been adequately debated and thought through," he said. "It is extreme and fundamentalist in its consequences for a great deal of medical and scientific research."

Friday's vote reflected a wide divergence of opinion about artificial reproduction and research into early human development. The world's first test-tube baby, Louise Joy Brown, was born in Britain in 1978.

As the debate got under way, a dozen women opposed to the bill set off firecrackers, blew whistles, shouted and threw leaflets.

Security guards ejected the protesters from the gallery.

Norman St. John-Stevas, a former Conservative Cabinet minister and a prominent lay member of the Roman Catholic Church, presented a petition signed by more than 2 million people supporting the proposed ban.

Fertilization outside the womb by means of the test-tube baby technique could continue, but only if it was meant to result in a birth.

Nurses face hazards to aid starving

By MICHELLE FAUL

JEHOWA, Ethiopia (AP) — Three American nurses and a Canadian colleague, who are here to care for Ethiopian famine victims, sleep in tents, subsist on a diet of baked beans and vegetable soup and make their home in a rustic camp near the majestic highlands of northern Shoa Region.

The four, working about 150 miles from Addis Ababa, face serious health hazards themselves in working to save thousands suffering from starvation. Team leader Edith Wald, 51, of New York City, was evacuated home after contracting an illness which was not immediately diagnosed.

The nurses say they often get discouraged and depressed. But little victories keep them going.

"We had a woman in last week," recalled Geraldine Scott, 42, of New York City. "Her daughter and son were close to death, but we managed to save the boy. We lost one, but the mother didn't lose both her children.

"It's little things like that — like the first smile from a child too weak to eat when it arrived — that make it worthwhile, that make us love our work," Miss Scott said.

Eileen Mullaney, 29, of Cohasset, Mass., walked through the camp supervising workmen and carrying Ali Omar, a boy orphaned by famine and blinded in one eye by trachoma, a disease brought on by vitamin deficiency which afflicts many children here.

"If we only had some vitamin A we would help prevent some of this," she said. "But we just don't have it, so we have to watch these kids go blind."

The four are volunteers. They traded their white uniforms for blue jeans and T-shirts, and sterile hospital wards for dusty earthen floors.

"We're not hurting," said Miss Mullaney. "I don't mind sleeping on the floor and I'm warm at night in my sleeping bag. I don't even mind the mosquitoes and flies. It's only the sand fleas that really bug me."

Aside from Miss Scott and Miss Mullaney, the other nurses roughing it at the Jehowa emergency feeding station are Betty Normandin, 35, of Watertown, Mass., and Canadian Gwen Sali, 29, of Estevan, Saskatchewan.

One recent day Geraldine Scott was found washing an emaciated 7-year-old boy named Omar, a member of Ethiopia's Oromo tribe, under the corrugated-roofed intensive feeding center.

"Omar's mother has died and his father is sick — both because of a lack of food. So his old grandmother, who's also weak, brought him in today. She has to carry him on her back because he's still to weak to walk," Miss Scott said.

The aged grandmother embarrassed the American nurse by taking her hand and gently kissing it to express her gratitude. She then asked for some food to carry back home with her, but Miss Scott said she had to refuse the request.

"We've already given her a week's supply of supplementary food for Omar," the nurse explained. "The problem is we never, ever have enough food.

"Last week there was no skim milk. We have some this week, but we haven't seen sugar for two weeks," Miss Scott added, her voice trembling.

A general shortage of cereals is undermining the nurses' work, which is aimed primarily at children and infants.

The government estimates that 9 million of Ethiopia's 42 million people are affected by the prolonged drought and famine.

"We distribute food here to families from 14 districts — anything from 5,000 to 15,000 people in all. The problem is when we don't have grain, we can only hand out the supplementary foods for children in the families."

Miss Scott went on: "We know, of course, that when we give them no grain, the family has no other food, so the children's food will be shared among them all."

The nurses say they would like to keep the seriously ill in their camp around the clock, instead of feeding them during the day and sending them away at night. But they don't have the facilities.

Reagan is making a comeback

An Analysis

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's a little early to be making judgments about Ronald Reagan's second term as president, but after less than a month he is showing a tendency toward the kind of active diplomacy he shunned in his first term.

First in dealing with Moscow, and now in the Middle East, the Reagan administration is beginning to confront difficult issues in a traditional way.

The president isn't jumping in with both feet, as Jimmy Carter did, for instance, at Camp David in 1978. Nor is he about to hold a summit meeting with Konstantin Chernenko, the ailing Soviet leader. He remains the only president since Herbert Hoover not to meet with the man in charge in Moscow.

But the detachment with which Reagan approached the world while he concentrated on a record U.S. miltary buildup at home is giving way.

U.S.-Soviet negotiations on nuclear weapons are due to resume in Geneva in mid-March. The hierarchy of American decision-making has been straightened out to put Secretary of State George Shultz and Reagan, of course, in ultimate charge.

This means Shultz will be able to make swift assessments about the Kremlin's attitude and adjust relations with the Soviets along a broad range of cultural and business issues accordingly.

On the Middle East, the president this week received King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, the first in a series of scheduled visits by Arab leaders who are trying to engage the United States "more vigorously" in promoting the Palestinian cause.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak will drop in next month, undoubtedly with the same kind of pitch.

Reagan is holding back. He wants to make sure Israel's security interests will be protected. His advisers are telling him the first move to the table should come from Jordan's King Hussein.

In the first Reagan administration there was the embarrassment of having a U.S.-arranged plan to draw Lebanon closer to Israel and the West blow up in Shultz' face. So, naturally, Reagan and Shultz are cautious about putting America's prestige on the line again.

But depending on the merits of the understanding Hussein worked out with Yasser Arafat of the PLO, the president is prepared to renew his 1982 Mideast peace proposals and, he told Fahd at dinner this week, send a U.S. delegation to the bargaining table.

Next Tuesday, meanwhile, the United States will open discussions with the Soviet Union in Vienna about the Arab-Israeli dispute, the war between Iran and Iraq, and the future of Afghanistan, where rebels are trying to oust more than 100,000 Soviet soldiers. Richard W. Murphy, the senior official in the State Department's Near East bureau, will head the U.S. delegation.

If the talks are successful, the administration probably will branch out and ask the Soviets to hold similar talks on other areas of the world. The goal is the "better working relationship" that Reagan told the United Nations last September he was seeking with the Soviet Union.

In Central America, the Reagan administration pursued another sort of diplomacy in the first term: training and arming anti-government rebels in Nicaragua. Congress stopped covert aid to the "contras" last year, but Reagan told The New York Times this week that a new infusion of aid to the insurgents was "necessary" and "desirable."

So unless there is a negotiated settlement, Reagan intends to pursue big-stick diplomacy in the region during his second term. However, it could be the exception rather than the rule.

Reagan takes oath twice, sets new fashion

By W. DALE NELSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maybe President Reagan set a new fashion when he had himself sworn in for his second term twice. Three of his Cabinet officers and his top aide have followed suit.

Reagan decided to take his oath of office two times because Jan. 20, the constitutionally prescribed day, was on Sunday. Not only that, it was on Super Bowl Sunday.

The president, as others have before him, opted for a private swearing in on the Sabbath, with a public ceremony at the Capitol the next day.

Actually, the private inauguration turned out to be less private than expected, as the White House agreed to let it be televised; and the public ceremony was less public than planned because it was forced indoors by the cold.

Deputy White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater says Secretary of the Treasury James A. Baker III, Secretary of the Interior Donald P. Hodel, Secretary of Education William J. Bennett and Donald Regan, the new White House chief of staff, also were sworn in twice, but he doesn't think it was because of the president's example.

Baker and Regan, who switched jobs, had a notary public administer their oaths to them at their homes on a Sunday, so that they could start work the following day. A couple of days later, Attorney General William French Smith swore them in more formally in a private ceremony in the Oval Office.

Phil Armstrong, a spokesman for the Education Department, said Bennett was sworn in by a notary on Feb. 6, just after the Senate confirmed his nomination. He, too, was sworn in again by the attorney general at an Oval Office ceremony the next day.

If you wonder what President Reagan does during those vacations at Santa Barbara, Calif., here's one answer from the pages of Irrigation Journal. He digs ditches.

At least he did on his last trip, over Thanksgiving weekend, and the magazine ran a photograph of him, straddling a muddy trench with a pick in his hand, to prove it.

Robin C. Gray, assistant presidential press secretary who supplied the White House photo, said Reagan turned a hand to digging trenches in which to bury pipes for an underground irrigation system at his Rancho del Cielo, north of Santa Barbara.

"It took him, with the help of two other people, about three days to complete," Gray said. "It covers approximately 1,000 feet in a pasture adjacent to his ranch house. The area is used primarily for grazing by his horses.

"The trench for the system was dug by machine. The president then dug out some sections which needed additional work with pick and shovel."

• • •

Speaking to a group of scientists at a White House luncheon, Reagan told them he had "a secret agenda for bringing you all here today."

"After lunch is over I'm going to ask all of you to turn your attention to the budget problem," he said.

Monterey poses tough task for MHS girls

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LAMESA — Midland High's Lady Bulldogs have a tough assignment here at 2 p.m. today when they take on the Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen in a state Class 5A bi-district girls basketball game at the Middle School gym.

Meeting a team like Monterey in the first round of the playoffs is always a tough task since not many 5A girls teams have the rich playoff tradition that is owned by the Plainsmen.

Monterey coach Tim Tasker is in his sixth year as coach of the Plainsmen girls and over that span has compiled a record of 149-25, winning a state title in 1981 and was state runnerup in 1980.

MONTEREY also won a district championship in 1982 and a bi-district title in 1983. The only time Tasker was out of the playoffs was last year.

"We are certianly glad to be back in the playoffs," noted Tasker. "You kind of get used to being there."

Midland High, on the other hand, is making only its second trip to the playoffs under Coach Jane Young. That came in 1983 when MHS defeated Plainview in bi-district before losing to El Paso Eastwood in an area game. MHS is 1-1 in the playoff experience.

However, MHS' leading scorer Denise Lanz, averaging 16 points per game, and Deidra Knapp, averaging 8.3, were on that 1983 team as sophomores and know playoff pressure.

Monterey is a high scoring team, averaging 74.2 points per game, and have three players averaging in double figures. Tasker's Plainsmen also have a strong bench to call on.

Laura Supak, a 5-8 junior guard, has been the big gun for Monterey in 1985. Supak is averaging 18.1 points per outing, but gets plenty of help in the scoring department with 5-9 junior guard Kira Morgan (11.8) and 5-8 senior forward Allison Taylor (11.4).

Other starters for Monterey are 5-7 senior guard Linda Howard (6.4) and 5-8 senior center Dawndra Meers (6.0). D'Anne Beard, a 5-7 senior forward, is averaging 7.0 per game off the bench in a reserve role.

"We don't know that much about Monterey," said MHS coach Jane Young, "but they always have an excellent team. But our girls have been fighters all year and I expect them to do their best. I know they will. They have all year."

MHS WILL counter with guards Lanz and Knapp, center Tina Knight (7.5), forwards Nadine Hill (5.4) and Charlotte Hines (4.6).

Young will also use extensively Amy Cumings (4.2), Laura Martin (4.1), Terez Robinson (2.6) and Amy Hubbard (1.2) off the bench.

Today's game should be a battle between the offensive-minded team of Monterey against a control-minded and defensive style of Midland High.

"I don't think our scoring average is going to scare Midland High much," said Tasker. "The Bulldogs play good defense and work for their shots. That could be a difficult combination for a team like ours."

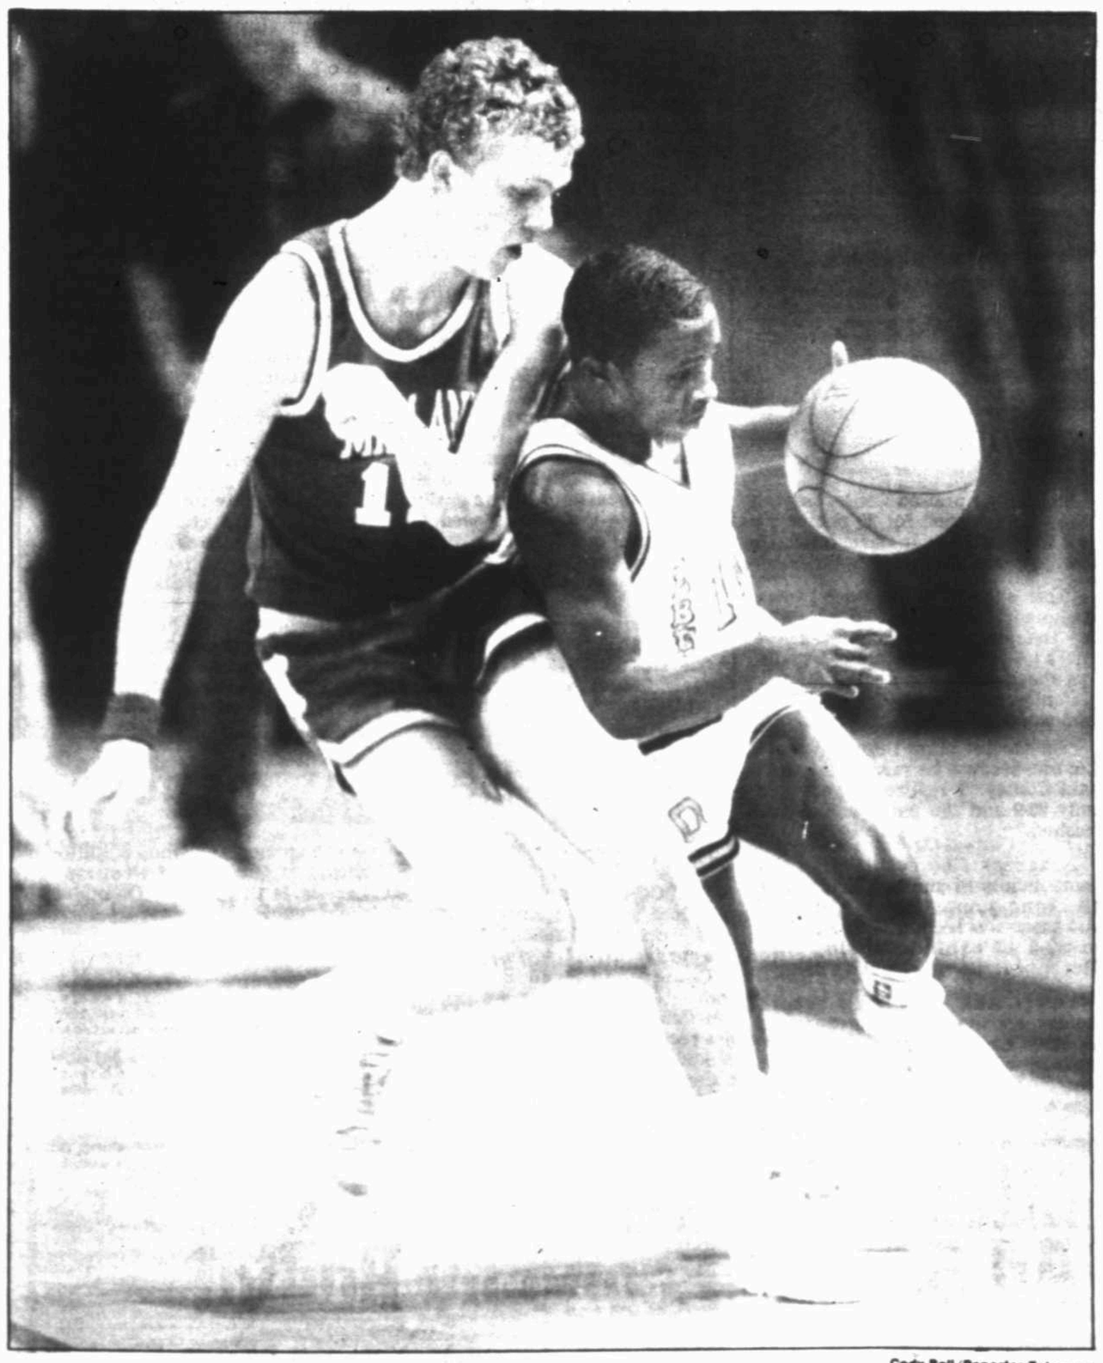

Both teams are coming into the playoffs with hot streaks going.

Monterey owns a fine 23-3 season record and that is outstanding condsidering the fact that the Plainsmen lost two of their first three games of the season. Since then, they have won 22 of their last 23 outings and are currently on a seven-game winning streak since losing to Amarillo High, 74-62. After early season losses to Levelland and Hale Center, Monterey went on a 15-game winning streak before the loss to Amarillo.

The Bulldogs are hot too. MHS has won 12 of its last 13 outings and also have won seven in a row since a narrow 52-51 loss to District 4-5A champion Odessa Permian.

PERMIAN WILL meet Amarillo High at 7:30 p.m. today in the Lubbock Coronado gym. That winner and the winner of the Midland High-Monterey game will advance to the area playoffs early next week against the El Paso schools of Parkland and Coronado. Parkland defeated El Paso Burges, 54-45, Wednesday in a bi-district game while Coronado escaped Eastwood, 55-50, on Thursday.

Tickets for today's game can be purchased at the door in Lamesa. Prices are $3 for adults and $2 for students.

Lee shares 4-5A title

Rebels clip MHS in finale

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee Rebels and Abilene High Eagles extended the 1984-85 District 4-5A basketball season by one game Friday night as each team posted victories over cross-town opponents to reamin in a deadlock for the league title at 11-3.

The Rebels closed out their regular season schedule with a 63-52 victory over the Midland High Bulldogs while the Eagles knocked off Abilene Cooper 55-51. On Tuesday, Lee and AHS will meet in Big Spring at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum at 7:30 p.m. for a one-game district playoff. The Rebs are taking a 24-7 overall record into the game while the Eagles are 22-7. Regardless of the outcome Tuesday, both teams will enter the state playoffs later next week.

The winner of the district playoff game will advance into bi-district as the 4-5A champion and will meet Amarillo Palo Duro, 21-7, while the loser takes on District 3-5A champion Lubbock Monterey, 27-3. Palo Duro was a 70-52 winner over Amarillo Caprock Friday while Monterey eliminated Amarillo High from playoff contention with a 77-66 victory.

THE BULLDOGS made a strong effort toward keeping the Rebels from sharing the 4-5A title, at least until Lee postman Brian Marczynski started putting in his two points worth. Make that eight.

At the start of the third quarter and leading by a 30-28 score, Marczynski canned four straight buckets — three from inside the lane and one from the deep corner — for a 38-30 lead. It started an onslaught of Rebel scoring the Bulldogs couldn't keep up with.

"He's really an amazing player," said Rebel coach Paul Stueckler. "Some of those shots that went in were off-balance. He has such a soft touch and his shots just seemed to float to the basket."

The 4-for-4 run at the start of the third quarter was Marczynski's best four offensive minutes on the court and it helped push him to a 17-point night, second only to Midland High's Darrell Davis with 19.

Midland High coach Jack Stephenson saw that same four minutes as a deciding factor in the game. The 8-2 spurt combined with Lee's stronger squad of experienced players.

"In the third quarter we were awful. It was the death of us," said Stephenson. "I don't know why. Certainly at halftime we weren't supposed to regroup the way we did. We were talking just the opposite of what we did."

Saturday's Games: Bi-District: Midland High vs. Lubbock Monterey at Lamesa Middle School Gym, 2 p.m.; Odessa Permian vs. Amarillo High at Lubbock Coronado Gym, 7:30 p.m.

The experience Stephenson was talking about came from Lee's starting five that featured four returning starters from a year ago: Tyrone Thurman, 15 points; Derek Westbrook, two points, seven rebounds, three steals; Anthony Dickens, eight points, 10 rebounds; and Raymond Morney, 13 points, seven rebounds. Marczynski saw playing time last year but wasn't a Rebel starter.

"I think it showed," said Stephenson. "The only true experienced player we had this year was Darrell Davis."

Stueckler liked the way Dickens played defense inside. "I thought Anthony played one of his better games. His main job isn't points, it's rebounds. We call it 'jump up and grab it.'"

In the fourth quarter Dickens, and the rest of the Rebel squad ganged up on Davis and got him to foul out of the game with only 9-of-20 field goals and 1-of-3 free throws.

"I was blocking him off the boards," said Dickens. "They were all helping me out inside on him, keeping him from the boards."

Davis managed only seven rebounds in the game.

Morney saw a tightened up inside defensive game as a major key to Lee's victory. "I think in the second half our press got a little more steals from them because we started cutting off the middle more. Coach got on me at half because they kept hitting the middle for easy buckets but we cut that off."

In the early going, MHS and Lee exchanged leads nine times before Lee finally gained control. Bulldog Ernest Jordan gave his team its final lead of the game with 1-of-2 free throws with 2:25 left to play for a 26-25 score.

Dickens put Lee on top 25 seconds later with an easy bucket from underneath and the Rebels were never headed. After the third quarter spurt, the Rebels maintained a lead that never dropped below six points.

WITH AHS still hanging over the Rebels' heads, thoughts of bi-district playoffs have to be kept on the shelf until Wednesday. However, nobody seems to be too upset about the situation.

"I'm looking forward to it," said Morney. "I'm ready to play Abilene again. We're 1-1 against them and I'd like to break that tie."

"They like to play a hot press, get up and down the court fast," said Stueckler. "They play a lot like Midland High."

"I feel we'll go into the playoff keeping our heads on straight," said Dickens. "We'll have a good attitude."

Stephenson, who will be watching the playoffs from the sidelines this year, is throwing his support to the Rebels. "I'd like to see Lee beat Abilene and represent Midland and the District as 4-5A champions."

MHS-LEE NOTES: In junior varsity action Friday, Midland High came up with a 63-59 victory over Midland Lee to finish a 21-10 season. Lee's JV wound up at 25-4. Terry St. Peters led the Bullpups with 10 points while Greg Johnson scored 13 and Carl Brackens 10 for the Stonewall Brigade...

Moses found innocent of soliciting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Olympic gold medalist Edwin Moses was found innocent Friday of soliciting an undercover policewoman posing as a prostitute.

Moses, who won gold medals in the hurdles at the 1976 Montreal Olympics and the 1984 Los Angeles Games, broke into a huge smile after the verdict was read in Municipal Court. He hugged his defense attorney, Edward Medvene, as the courtroom filled with applause.

"We couldn't be happier," said Harold Lipton, a member of Moses' defense team.

MOSES, HIS attorneys, his wife Myrella and his mother slipped out the back door of the Los Angeles Criminal Courts building and refused to talk to reporters.

Deputy City Attorney Edward J. Guarino also left the courtroom and refused to comment initially, but later, he said, "We can't deny in this case the tremendous amount of sympathy for Edwin Moses. I'm proud of the effort we put on."

Jury foreman Harvey Adelman, 58, a professor in research and statistics at Peepperdine University in Malibu, said, "We didn't feel the prosecution's case was strong enough. There were a lot of inconsistencies in the report that left reasonable doubt.

"There were doubts about the solicitation, and doubts about the intent," Adelman said. The phrase "beyond a reasonable doubt" was a key in the panel's reaching the innocent verdict, he said.

Juror Craig Welier said he thought "there was a possibility that a solicitation occurred, but it just wasn't proven beyond a reasonable doubt."

ANOTHER JUROR, Albert Moreau, said the first poll of the 12-member jury was 10-1 with one abstention in favor of acquittal. The second ballot was unanimous.

Moses, 29, had denied that he offered Officer Susan Gonzales $100 for two sex acts. He said he spoke to her because he thought she was a fan.

During final arguments, Guarino acknowleged Moses' popularity but told jurors, "If you find him guilty, you have not tarnished anything he has achieved."

"He should not be allowed to finesse his way through because he's a sports hero. He's a decent man who committed a misdemeanor," Guarino said.

Later, Guarino said his office was forced to press on with the case despite public opinion in Moses' favor. "I saw what this man was going through in terms of sympathy, but there was absolutely nothing the city attorney's office could do but go forward with this case," Guarino said.

He denied the officers may have been overzealous in trying to arrest the Olympic star.

Medvene said the prosecution had failed to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Moses solicited the undercover policewoman.

"We want you to treat him like you'd treat yourself. They haven't met their burden. They haven't proved their case," Medvene said. "It's a misdemeanor charge, but this is a felony to Mr. Moses in terms of importance."

MOSES HAD faced a six-month jail sentence and a $1,000 fine if convicted, although first-time offenders usually are given a small fine and placed on probation.

Moses has a major promotional contract with Adidas, maker of sports wear, and Adidas representative Dave Fogelson said the company was "delighted with the verdict," but even if it had gone the other way, it wouldn't have changed their relationship.

"Obviously, we've believed in Edwin's integrity all along and therefore feel it was the correct verdict," Fogelson said. "There would have been no change in our contract or relationship with Edwin, regardless of verdict."

Fogelson acknowledged that there has been speculation the incident "would perhaps affect future endorsements with other companies."

"It's not Adidas' place to speculate on that," Fogelson said, "but there was absolutely no damage done as far as Adidas is concerned. We just feel that this (verdict) further reinforced his integrity."

Moses also had a promotional contract with Kodak during the Los Angeles Games, but Kodak spokesman Henry Kaska said that deal had expired and would not have been renewed in any case.

"We used him in advertising and promotion during and before the Olympics, but had not used him since and had no intention of renewing his contract (which expired at the end of 1984). So from our standpoint, it's academic. We're not going to have any comment on it," Kaska said.

Moses told the jury Thursday that in the early morning hours of Jan. 13, Gonzales approached him and mentioned two sex acts and that, after speaking with her briefly, he drove away.

Moses said he struck up a conversation with Gonzales because he thought she was a fan who had recognized him.

"I left the scene immediately. I had no intention of stopping. When I turned the corner, I started accelerating. I just left," he testified.

Eagles stage comeback over Cougs

From Staff Reports

Abilene High staged a comeback from a four-point deficit late in the third quarter to defeat Abilene Cooper, 55-51, and force a first-place playoff with Midland Lee in the final night of District 4-5A basketball Friday.

The Eagles scored eight straight points, four by Roy Kiser off the bench, to put Abilene ahead for good, 37-33. The Cougars trailed the rest of the way.

Abilene (11-3) and Lee (11-3) will square off Tuesday night at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum in Big Spring at 7:30 p.m. to determine the district winner. The first-place team will face Lubbock Palo Duro, while the loser of Tuesday's playoff will play Lubbock Monterey.

Cliff Johnson led the way for Abilene with 14 points, Greg Lowry scored 13 and Kirt Robinson added 12 while grabbing 16 rebounds. Terriance Bell led all scorers with 18 points for Abilene Cooper (5-9).

IN OTHER District 4-5A action, Odessa Permian (7-7) clipped crosstown rival Odessa High, 82-74, on the strength of 17 points by Terry Williams, 15 from Orlando Ontiveroz and 12 from Larry Nelson.

Odessa High (4-10) had the big scorers in the game — Keith Smith with 33 points and Alan Bailey with 23, but it wasn't enough to lift the Bronchos.

In Big Spring, the Steers failed to pick up their first win of the in district play by dropping a 96-63 decision to San Angelo (9-5).

Brian Ross of San Angelo led all scorers with 25 points and Chris Lowry added 19 for the Bobcats.

Mike Leuschner led Big Spring (0-14) with 22 points and Bernard Williams added 18.

The Bobcats earned sole possession of third place in the 4-5A race with the victory over Big Spring since Midland High lost to Midland Lee in their finale. However, there is no state playoff berth for third place.

Mike Conley of Arkansas wins the SWC Indoor Track long jump title with a leap of 26-1¾.

Hogs dominate again

Olympian wins two field events

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Well-balanced Arkansas dominated the distance races and Olympian Mike Conley starred in the two jumping events on Friday and the Razorbacks earned their fifth consecutive Southwest Conference Men's Indoor Track and Field Championships.

Tara Arnold of Texas established meet records in the 1,000 and 880-yard runs to carry the Lady Longhorns to the women's championship. She won the 1,000 run in 2:29.8 and took the 880 in 2:11.13.

Arkansas finished with 156 points to win the men's division. Baylor was next with 60, followed by Houston with 57, Texas A&M 52, Texas 38½, SMU 33, Texas Tech 28½, TCU 22 and Rice with 18.

Texas finished with 159 points to 149 for the Lady Cougars.

The defending champion Houston Lady Cougars were led by Carol Lewis who won the long jump and the 60-yard hurdles, took their second consecutive women's title.

Conley, the Olympic silver medalist in the triple jump, turned in a best effort of 26-feet, 1 and 34th inches in the long jump and then he won his triple jump specialty in 54-feet, 1-inch.

SWC Track

Doug Consiglio took the 1,000-yard run for the Razorbacks in 2:10.35 with Michael Byrd finishing second in 2:10.90.

In the mile, Paul Donovan and David Swain went 1-2 for Arkansas in times of 4;02.23 and 4:02.87, respectively. Both bettered the old SWC record by Baylor's Todd Harbour of 4:04.0.

Donovan came right back in meet record style by winning the two-mile run in 8:43.79 with Swaim again second.

Roddie Haley of Arkansas took the first place medal in the 440 run in 47.38 seconds. The clocking surpassed the old SWC record of 47.58 by Baylor's Zeke Jeffelson.

Arkansas Coach John McDonnell said "This win is just as good as the first one. Now we can concentrate on defending our national title."

McDonnell praised Conley, saying "He's always good for 20 points. It's just like setting your alarm clock. He always comes through."

"This is the first time since I was a sophomore that I had to win with my last jump," said Conley. "There was a lot of pressure on me. Usually, I'm ahead going into my last jump."

Conley said Poyser definitely had him worried.

"On his last jump I knew it was a big one because he raised his hand," said Conley."'I realized I had gone only 25-9 and the panic button was pushed."

Arkansas also cashed in some more points in another field event, the long jump. Marty Kobza of Arkansas was second with an effort of 62-5 12 behind winning Rick Meyer of Houston who had a 62-10.

Lewis, the American record holder, got the defending champion Houston Lady Cougars off to a good start by winning the long jump in a new SWC meet record of 21-2 12. She also was third in the high jump.

No. 1 St. John's rolls over Pitt

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Mullin scored 21 points and Walter Berry added 17 as No. 1-ranked St. John's registered its 16th consecutive victory, an 84-63 Big East Conference decision over Pittsburgh Friday night.

Center Bill Wennington added 16 points for the Redmen, 21-1 overall and 12-0 in the Big East, in addition to pulling down 11 rebounds and blocking five shots.

Freshman Charles Smith scored a game-high 25 points for the Panthers, 15-8 and 6-6, who saw a five-game winning streak snapped. The St. John's streak is the longest among Division-I teams in the nation.

The Redmen jumped to a 46-33 halftime advantage behind 13 points from Mullin and nine from Berry. Smith converted a three-point play 1:01 into the second half and that 10-point deficit was the closest Pittsburgh could get the rest of the way.

St. John's, which shot 67 percent in the first half (20-30), turned a 14-10 advantage into a 37-14 lead as it held Pitt to just two field goals — both by Andre Williams on follow shots — over a 7:05 span. Berry scored five of the Redmen's points during that burst.

Pittsburgh then ran off a 19-9 spurt to account for the halftime margin as Smith scored eight points, six on offensive rebounds. The Panters shot just 33 percent in the first half on 13 of 42 shooting.

Mark Jackson added 10 points for St. John's while Darryl Shepherd and Charles Thompson each had 10 for the Panthers.

A crowd of 6,511 attended the game, a record for Alumni Hall.

Mayotte gains finals

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Tim Mayotte, a serve-and-volley specialist from Springfield, Mass., downed Sweden's Jan Gunnarsson 7-6, 6-2, 4-6, 6-1 Friday to move into the men's singles title match at the $1.8 million Lipton International Players Championships tennis tournament.

Mayotte will meet the winner of Friday night's second semifinal between 11th-seeded Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia and Scott Davis.

Play in the men's semifinal match between Smid and Davis was delayed because of rain in the seventh game of the first set with Smid ahead 4-2 late Friday night.

The women's final, to be held Saturday on the hardcourts of Laver's International Tennis Resort, will send top-seeded Martina Navratilova against Chris Evert Lloyd, the No. 2 seed. The two have met 62 times in their long, successful careers — the longest rivalry in open tennis history — and each has won 31 matches.

Thursday, Navratilova gained the final with a 6-3, 6-3 victory over Canada's Carling Bassett, while Lloyd rallied to beat West Germany's Steffi Graf 6-4, 6-2.

Both singles finals will be nationally televised by ABC, with the champions earning $112,500 each in this inaugural two-week, Grand Slam-size tournament.

Guaranteeing himself of his largest payday ever — Sunday's loser receives $56,250 — Mayotte captured the opening set by winning the final six points of the tiebreaker.

The two had traded service breaks in the sixth and seventh games. And when Mayotte broke his opponent in the 11th game, he was serving for the set.

But Gunnarsson was equal to the challenge, broke Mayotte's service at 30 and sent the first set into a tiebreaker. The Swede, booming his service and showing adeptness around the net, raced to a 5-1 lead.

Then Mayotte took charge, and the 1981 NCAA champion pulled to 2-5 with a backhand volley. Gunnarsson had three more serves in the tiebreaker, and he double-faulted on two of them. On the other, Mayotte caught his opponent at the baseline with a delicately placed stop volley.

When it was over, Mayotte had won the tiebreaker 7-5.

Flutie sloppy in Generals' debut

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Linebacker John Joyce scored two touchdowns, one a 78-yarder after a fumble recovery, as the New Jersey Generals registered a 24-14 preseason victory over the Orlando Renegades Friday night in the United States Football League debut of Generals quarterback Doug Flutie.

Flutie, the New Jersey's $7 million rookie quarterback, had a sloppy pro debut, completing only 7 of 19 passes for 174 yards. His first two passes went for interceptions, both by linebacker Jeff Gabrielson.

Flutie's counterpart on the Renegades, Jerry Golsteyn, played well, hitting 23 passes of 35 attempts for 199 yards and two touchdowns.

Flutie, the 1984 Heisman Trophy winner from Boston College, was forced to scramble, hurry his passes and throw off balance by the Renegades' pass rush.

Joyce recovered a fumble by Renegade running back Reggie Evans on the 22 and rumbled 78 yards to score his first TD with 2:15 gone in the first period.

In the third quarter, Joyce scored again when Golsteyn slipped and fumbled on a handoff and the ball rolled into the end zone.

The Generalas' other score was by fullback Maurice Carthon on a 1-yard run in the second period. Roger Ruzek added a 28-yard field goal in the middle of the second period.

The Renegades' lone score in the first half came with just eight seconds on the clock when Golsteyn hit wide receiver Joey Walters for 10 yards after an 80-yard drive. Passing on almost every play at the end of the third quarter, he threw 20 yards for his second score to wide receiver Jerry Parrish after a 49-yard drive.

Golsteyn was 14 for 24 and 124 yards in the first half. But the Generals took a quick 17-0 lead.

Phoenix' Nance stings Mavericks to halt skid at 10

Associated Press

Phoenix All-Star forward Larry Nance scored 23 points to lift the Suns to a 126-103 win over the Dallas Mavericks Friday night.

The win broke a 10-game on-the-road losing streak for the Suns, who also got 21 points from James Edwards, and upped the team's record to 26-27.

The Mavericks, trailing by as many as 12 in the third quarter, had cut Phoenix's lead to 89-83 to open the fourth quarter. But Phoenix took control as Maurice Lucas and Kyle Macy combined for 14 points over a four-minute span to improve the Suns' lead to 105-93.

NBA

Dallas, now 28-25, got 25 points from Mark Aguirre in its second straight loss.

Earlier, in the third quarter, the Mavericks pulled to within 66-61 on a 12-footer by Aguirre. But Phoenix scored six straight points to regain control and led 89-81 at the quarter's close.

The Suns scored 10 straight points to take a 45-36 lead early in the second quarter and led at halftime 60-53.

Despite 14 points from Nance, Phoenix trailed after one quarter 32-28.

Denver 129, San Antonio 119

Alex English rattled in 39 points and Bill Hanzlik hit back-to-back jumpers in the middle of the fourth quarter to put Denver ahead for good as the Nuggets downed San Antonio.

The victory was Denver's 11th straight at home, and enabled the Nuggets, now 34-20, to open a 2½-game lead over second-place Houston in the National Basketball Association's Midwest Division.

San Antonio, which had three-game winning streak ended, fell to 27-26 and just 6-20 on the road.

The Spurs led almost the entire game until Denver scored the first eight points of the fourth period to take the lead at 100-99, the first lead of the second half for the Nuggets.

In winning, Denver had to overcome a 39-point performance by San Antonio's George Gervin, who gave the Spurs their last lead at 107-105 with 7:16 to play.

But then Hanzlik connected on two straight shots from the left corner for a 109-107 Denver advantage.

Down the stretch the Nuggets outscored the Spurs 10-2 and English contributed 11 of his points in the game's last five minutes, helping Denver to only its second victory of the season after trailing for three quarters.

OSHA inspectors cite chemical firms for safety violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal inspectors issued six safety violations to two companies using the chemical involved in the accident that killed more than 2,000 people in Bhopal, India, the Labor Department announced Friday.

But the department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration said its inspections of all four major U.S. users of methyl isocyanate, or MIC, and the lone U.S. manufacturing plant have determined that the facilities are safe.

The use of backup safety systems virtually removes the possibility in the United States of a tragedy similar to that which occurred Dec. 3 in Bhopal, the agency said.

"We can say that generally these five facilities are in rigorous compliance with OSHA standards," said Jane A. Matheson, a deputy assistant secretary of labor.

But the agency's inspections of the facilities, which use MIC in the production of pesticides, were immediately criticized as "sloppy" by Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the House health and environment subcommittee.

Peggy Seminario, associate director of safety and health at the AFL-CIO, said that although OSHA did "fairly comprehensive reviews, the only reason they inspected these plants is because of the tragedy in India. The bottom line is that for the last three years these plants have not been inspected on a routine basis for safety hazards."

Under OSHA guidelines, however, the plants are inspected if workers file complaints and agency spokesman Jack McDavitt said there had been recent safety inspections.

OSHA inspected the Union Carbide Corp. plant in Institute, W.Va., where MIC is manufactured. The agency found no violations at Institute because production of MIC was stopped immediately after the Bhopal accident, but it said it will conduct inspections when production resumes.

Bramble title goes on line with Mancini

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini, who wants to be a champion more than a movie star, will try to regain the World Boxing Association lightweight title Saturday night.

Mancini, the subject of an upcoming television movie, will challenge Livingstone Bramble, who is quite a character study himself.

Bramble, 24, lives in Montclair, N.J., with his 2-year-old son, sister, and a menagerie that includes 13 pit bull terriers. He sometimes shadow boxes with a pet python. Other times, his trainer blows bubbles while Bramble tries to punch them.

Bramble won the title by stopping Mancini in the 14th round last June 1 at Buffalo, N.Y. He is a 5-2 favorite to win the scheduled 15-round rematch at the 12,104-seat Lawlor Events Center on the University of Nevada-Reno campus.

WBA Lightweight boxing champion Livingstone Bramble sticks a pin into voodoo doll that represents challenger Ray "Boom Boom" Macini. They meet for the title tonight in Reno.

THE BOUT will be televised live by Home Box Office at approximately 5:15 p.m. CST.

Bramble, 22-1-1 with 14 knockouts, is getting $750,000, while Mancini, 29-2 with 23 knockuts, is getting $500,000, according to co-promoter Dan Duva, the son of Bramble's manager Lou Duva.

After getting the rematch, Mancini considered withdrawing after being offered the lead in a TV movie about him and his father, Lenny "Boom Boom" Mancini, a lightweight contender of the early 1940s who never got a title shot. It will be televised by CBS on Father's Day, June 16.

But Mancini, 23, said he didn't want to have to wonder about what might have happened if he fought Bramble a second time.

Bramble thinks he knows what will happen.

"If he comes straight in like is his style, this will be a quicker fight," said Bramble, who is left-handed. "If he boxes it will be a little tougher fight.

"In the first fight, I didn't use the jab enough or throw enough combinations. Instead of counterpunching with single shots, I will counterpunch with combinations.

"I expect him to be more determined this time, but this fight doesn't ride on determination. It rides on skills and techniques."

Mancini felt he overtrained for the first fight, working seven weeks.

"I'm a physical fighter," said the challenger, whose camp lasted six weeks this time. "I could easily leave it in the gym if I don't watch out."

HE ALSO believes he became too emotional about some of the things Bramble said about him before the first fight.

"This time I learned just to focus on myself, not to listen to this guy," said Mancini. "It's always been my thing ... concentrate on what I'm doing."

While Bramble has had a fight since winning the title — he outpointed Edwin Curet in a 10-round nontitle bout last Oct. 24 — Mancini has not had a fight since losing to Bramble.

Mancini was supposed to fight Kenny Bogner last September in New Orleans, but he was cut over the left eye in training, and the fight was canceled.

Mancini is pleased with his training for the rematch and doesn't think the inactivity will hurt him.

But, he said, "A 10-round fight is a lot better than 20 rounds in the gym. I'd be the first to admit that."

The WBA does not allow immediate rematches, and Bramble was ordered to make his first defense against the highest available contender, with Tyrone Crawley, Orlando Romero and Terrence Alli all ranked ahead of Mancini.

But Romero, who lost a title bid against Mancini in 1983, was knocked out, while Alli chose to make an unsuccessful challenge of Harry Arroyo.

Mets' Orosco loses in arbitration

NEW YORK (AP) — For the second straight day, the New York Mets won a salary arbitration over one of their ace relief pitchers when an arbitrator ruled Friday that left-hander Jesse Orosco would have to play the 1985 season for a salary of $650,000.

Orosco, who had been seeking an $850,000 salary, had a 10-6 record, a 2.59 earned run average and 31 saves in 1984. His save total was the third best in the National League.

Thursday, arbitrator Arvid Anderson ruled in favor of the Mets in their arbitration with Orosco's right-handed bullpen mate, Doug Sisk. Sisk will be paid $275,000 in 1985 rather than the $470,000 for which he had asked.

"We're naturally pleased that the arbitrator again has substantiated our position," said Al Harazin, vice president of baseball administration for the Mets.

Raymond Goetz heard the Orosco case, and his decision evened the score in eight arbitrations this year — four for the players and four for the owners. The largest award was to third baseman Wade Boggs of the Boston Red Sox, who was granted his request for a salary of $1 million this year.

Sixteen arbitrations remain to be decided, with the biggest names involved Tim Raines of the Montreal Expos and Leon Durham of the Chicago Cubs.

"RUN WITH A WINNER"

Rutgers-Newark keep run NCAA skid to 46

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The NCAA record for the longest basketball losing streak remains intact for at least another season, and members of the Rutgers-Newark team hope they can keep it that way by halting their 46-game skid next year.

The small branch of the state university earned a spot in the National Collegiate Athletic Association's record book Wednesday night by dropping a 97-65 decision to Ramapo College.

It was the Raiders' 46th straight loss, tying the NCAA record previously shared by Olivet of Michigan and South West State of Minnesota, both Division II schools. Rutgers-Newark is a Division III school.

"We tried hard. We really tried hard," said junior guard Derrick Moses after the most recent loss. "What can I say? We didn't quit. Right now, I'm pretty despondent. I'm real despondent."

Rutgers-Newark has not won a basketball game in the last two years. It went 0-24 in Matt Shoban's first season as coach and the loss to Ramapo capped an 0-22 campaign that included an 0-18 mark in the New Jersey State Athletic Conference.

The last game the team won was its final contest of the 1982-83 season.

"Hopefully, he'll (Shoban) do some recruiting over the summer and we'll have some new blood to combine with the experience we have now and it will turn things around," said Moses.

Junior guard Joey Di Cesare said the Raiders had too many things going against them this season: they were young and inexperienced, and the team was hurt by the coach's position at the school.

"He's a part-time coach and we had to learn a lot on our own," said Di Cesare. "We improved a lot during the season and we have a lot of promise for next year."

Moses agreed there was improvement, pointing to two losses by less than 10 points in the last week.

"We lost to them by 20 points earlier so we improved over the year, but we didn't get the one we wanted," Moses said.

Defending champ thankful Daytona race 500 miles

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Terry Labonte is hoping to keep the Fords of front-row starters Bill Elliott and Cale Yarborough within sight in the early stages of Sunday's $1.2 million Daytona 500.

"That isn't going to be easy," said the defending Winston Cup champion. "We're starting so far back and those guys are so strong, it's going to be real hard to keep them in sight.

"Thankfully, it's a 500-mile race," Labonte added. "We're probably going to need some time to work our way through the field at the speeds we're going to be running."

LABONTE, WHO started his week in fine fashion, winning the Busch Clash and $65,000 last Sunday, led early in his qualifying race Thursday before a blown engine in his Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS ended his day.

The 28-year-old Labonte wound up in the 31st starting position for Sunday's 40-car field on the basis of the 200.240 mph qualifying lap he turned in time trials.

In the 38th position, Bobby Hillin Jr., 20, Midland, Texas, will be in his Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS. Hillin drove in five Grand National races in 1982 when he was 18 years old and a senior at Midland High. He has two 11th-place finishes in 33 career starts.

"It was real disappointing that we couldn't run longer in the 125 (mile qualifying race)," Labonte said. "We wanted to give the car a real good test. But it'll have that in the 500."

Like the other drivers in Sunday's race, Labonte can only speculate on how strong Elliott and Yarborough, the top two qualifiers on the basis of both lap speeds and by virtue of winning their qualifiers, really are.

"I don't really think anybody is going to run away with it because the competition is so strong," Labonte said. "But I hope the other guys up front don't let them (Elliott and Yarborough) get away from them."

DARRELL WALTRIP and David Pearson, both of whom will be starting their Chevys right behind the two front-row Thunderbirds, don't want that to happen, either.

"Bill has been so strong," Waltrip said. "He just ran off and left us in the qualifying race. I'm not sure we can beat him if he does have trouble. Maybe Cale can stay with him.

"He (Cale) probably didn't show everything he has (in the 125-miler), and there are a couple of other guys, too, who might be able to stay with them.

"But we'll just have to see what kind of pace is set early in the race and see if they try to hook up (in a draft) and run away from the rest of us. Then we'll just have to try to hang onto the draft."

Pearson, who has been running a limited Grand National schedule in recent years, had a surprisingly strong showing Thursday.

"I knew this was going to be a good car and I think we can stay with 'em for 500 miles," Pearson said. "But we can't let those guys (Elliott and Yarborough) get off by themselves.

"But, if they run good all day, it's going to be hard to beat them."

"I think there are some things we have to change to be ready for the race," Elliott said, although he wouldn't elaborate.

Elliott sits on the pole thanks to an all-time stock car record qualifying speed of 205.114 mph. And he further established his credentials with an incredible 37-second victory Thursday in one of two 50-lap qualifying races over a track where a one-second advantage is considered comfortable.

Considerably less impressive than Elliott's romp through the field Thursday in a Ford Thunderbird was a two car-length victory in the other qualifying race by two-time defending champion Cale Yarborough. The 44-year-old driver from Sardis, S.C., occupies the outside of the front row in another Ford after qualifying at 203.814.

"There is no such thing as a man to beat in the Daytona 500," said Yarborough, a four-time winner of the event. "Do you remember '79?"

In 1979, Yarborough and Donnie Allison had the strong cars and battled for the lead until crashing on the final lap. Richard Petty was the beneficiary, driving past the wreck.

Waltrip sneaks to last lap win

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip, saying "the Lord was in the car," survived a last-lap melee Friday to win the opening round of the 1985 Budweiser International Race of Champions at Daytona International Speedway.

Tom Sneva finished second and A.J. Foyt was third.

Foyt was leading Cale Yarborough and Sneva, with Waltrip running a strong fourth, as they came out of the fourth turn on the 40th and final lap around the 2.5-mile, high-banked oval.

It appeared that Sneva's car tagged the rear of Yarborough's car as the latter tried to slip past Foyt on the low side of the track.

Yarborough's car slid sideways and banged off Foyt's, which started spinning as the windshield popped out and flew through the air in one piece. Sneva then spun down the track, as did Bobby Rahal, who was running behind Waltrip in fifth.

Meanwhile, Waltrip, a two-time NASCAR Grand National stock car champion, managed to run right down the middle of the track, missing everyone and taking the checkered flag.

Thurman wants to be traded

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys free safety Dennis Thurman says he wants to be traded.

"The way I see it, I've got to go," said Thurman, who spent an unhappy year as a backup free safety last season after three years starting at right cornerback.

Thurman said he would like to go to a West Coast team.

"I'm not sure if the Cowboys will accommodate me or if anybody would take me," he said. "Somebody might want a small, slow free safety who can think."

Thurman said he plans to meet with Coach Tom Landry before the April 30 draft and ask for a trade.

Landry said he might agree.

"If it's in our best interests and Dennis' best interests, we would trade him," Landry told the Dallas Morning News. "But it would have to be to a team where I felt he had a good chance to be a starter."

Nazis featured in made-for-TV movies

ENTERTAINMENT

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Kojak is back — without his lollipop, without Crocker and without any pizazz in the plot.

And one of television's most depleted plot sources, the Holocaust, returns needlessly this weekend in both Kojak's TV movie and in a three-hour film that purports to take viewers inside Hitler's secret police.

Telly Savalas stars again as the bald crusader, Lt. Theo Kojak, in "Kojak: The Belarus File" on CBS Saturday night. NBC attempts to counterprogram the first part of ABC's "Hollywood Wives" with "Hitler's SS: Portrait in Evil" on Sunday night.

Savalas' character may hold a fascination to some and explain the sequel seven years after the original series left the air, but why NBC would want to do an offshoot of its commendable "Holocaust" miniseries is incomprehensible.

That award-winning effort in the late 1970s featured, in one role, Michael Moriarity as a regular German Joe who let his lust for power get the best of him in Hitler's hierarchy. The new NBC movie picks up on that same theme as two brothers struggle with their consciences inside the Aryan hate machine's bureaucracy.

John Shea stars as Karl Hoffman and Bill Nighy plays his brother, Helmut. The fact that Shea is an American actor and Nighy a British actor is attributable to British union demands that the production have British actors playing key roles in exchange for filming in England.

Their different accents aside, the acting may be the only worthwhile thing about "Hitler's SS." The story is disjointed, ponderous and pointless. The uninteresting plot traces the professional lives of the two brothers starting in 1931 and ending 14 years later amid the ruins of Nazi Germany.

In the beginning, Karl is a naive idealist who thinks the Nazis will bring real socialism to the fatherland. He becomes a brown shirt who spills sensitivity on his sleeve. Before long, he's spending the rest of the movie fighting the system, not too successfuly.

Helmut is more pragmatic, so he thinks. He sees the Nazis as a dangerous threat but believes he can keep the system pure by working on the inside. That's no easy feat since he works for the notorious Gestapo chief, Heinrich Himmler.

Both brothers have flings with a nightclub singer, played by Lucy Gutteridge. Whether the warbling is done by her or a stand-in, it's laughable. Tony Randall manages to look and act silly as a foppish, anti-Nazi comedian named Putzi who entertains the troops at the Russian front, a la Bob Hope.

The inspiration for this misguided production was an earlier documentary, according to NBC.

At the end, when the brothers realize that even their 13-year-old sibling has become a mindless stooge of the war effort, Karl says, "Perhaps this really does last forever."

No, but three hours does seem interminable.

In "The Belarus File," Kojak also finds himself knocking heads with a dead-end bureaucracy, that of his own government.

Someone is killing old Russian emigres on Kojak's turf, New York City. The gruff but cuddly Kojak does some snooping around, with the aid of a State Department functionary played by the sassy Suzanne Pleshette, and learns that the bad-guy feds are impeding his investigation.

Not too believeably and in a very pedestrian way, the plot touches on today's headlines, such as the U.S. government protecting former Nazis and the hot subject of vigilantism. It appears that Kojak's friend from the neighborhood, a concentration camp survivor (Max Von Sydow), may be the one bumping off the Nazis now living under new identities in New York.

The most fun for viewers is watching Kojak, a charmer and a cynic, do his thing. At least he has character. He's not one of TV's factory-stamped, beach-bum detectives.

He gets outraged at the federal hypocrisy. And he commands respect. When a federal bouncer tries to evict him from a government office, he slaps his hand and snarls with style: "Naughty, naughty."

Kojak is still a dapper dresser and suave with the ladies, young and old, but he's dropped his penchant for lollipops. In this film, he also doesn't get to croon his trademark phrase, "Who loves ya, baby?"; Miss Pleshette does.

The old crowd from the precinct is back in brief cameos: Rizzo, Saperstein, Stavros (played by brother George Savalas) and Frank. Only Crocker (Kevin Dobson) is missing. He's starring in "Knots Landing."

He's the lucky one.

While some might consider Claude the dog and Gloria the cat natural foes, they're just good buddies. The two were playing in the front yard of their owners, Steve and Carol Entwistle of Litchfield, N.Y.

Desegregation sets off fierce debate

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — With the arrival of the Southern Hemisphere summer in December, Cape Town's City Council took down the "whites only" signs on the beaches under its control. Whites have been talking about it ever since.

Some like it; some don't.

The City Council's decision ended segregation at about half the beaches in the Cape Town region. The rest are controlled by the Divisional Council.

The result is a patchwork of whites-only beaches and integrated beaches along South Africa's Riviera.

Cape Town is home to most of the nation's 2.8 million coloreds (people of mixed race), who make up most of the region's non-white population. They flocked to city beaches during the Christmas holidays, creating unprecedented scenes of different races at play together.

But that limited move away from the national policy of apartheid set off a fierce debate among whites that still commands several letters a day in newspapers.

Those who oppose the move say the seashore is overcrowded by people who behave badly — swimming in underwear, littering and making too much noise, they claim — and they want some restrictions.

Chris Joubert, a City Council member who opposed the open-beach policy, conceded the time for "whites only" signs at beaches has passed.

"But I do believe there have to be standards. ... There has to be certain socio-economic discrimination," he said. "If you take the opening of the swimming pool, with the thousands of people they put into the pool of all social levels, anti-social behavior was rife there."

Joubert wants beaches to be divided by fences, with hefty fees charged on one side and low fees on the other for the less affluent. Such a change, he contends, would not be based on race.

Supporters of open beaches, however, call that apartheid by another name.

Mrs. A.C. Wolf, writing to the Cape Times, said the notion of a fee system "smacks of intolerance and lack of understanding." She added, "It has been a pleasure to mix with the people since the 'opening' of the pool and I have made many new friendships."

A City Council member, David Bloomberg, said the "teething problems" of the first season would be overcome. He maintained that beach integration is an important precedent for the nation's 5 million whites, who must come to terms with dismantling apartheid.

"Open beaches will be as acceptable as open theaters and hotels," Bloomberg said.

Most stage theaters and top-grade hotels have been granted multiracial status, although movie houses, most restaurants and other amenities remain segregated. Cape Town also was the first major center to integrate its buses, saving money by doing away with duplicate service on the same routes.

In Durban, the Indian Ocean resort, and elsewhere beyond Cape Town's borders, beach apartheid remains intact.

An ant was dragging a piece of straw almost an inch long. He came to a crack in a concrete walk. The obstacle seemed insurmountable. How could he drag the straw across the crack? Finally, after much effort, the ant managed to push the straw across the crack and then he walked across on the straw. Instead of a burden, the straw became a bridge for the ant to continue his journey. Learn to turn your straws to bridges.

THE APPOINTMENT

Sunday Matthew 5:13-16
Monday John 15:5-10
Tuesday Galatians 6:1-5
Wednesday Genesis 9:5-16
Thursday Luke 14:25-33
Friday Jeremiah 3:12-15
Saturday Genesis 22:9-13

An appointment is a privilege and an obligation.

It means that at a given hour all else will be put aside because of the importance of the matter which prompted the appointment.

It means that something of concern to you is of equal concern to someone else.

It means that facts are to be explained, problems studied, goals agreed on, progress made.

And—most of all—an appointment means that the issue involved is urgent and must be dealt with NOW!

The most important appointment in every week is the one at worship. Your appointment with God!

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Psychology expert will conduct seminar at Episcopal church

Dr. M. S. Peck

Dr. M. Scott Peck, a nationally recognized authority on the relationship between religion and science, and psychology in particular, will lead a seminar at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, 1412 W. Illinois Ave., at 9:30 a.m. Feb. 23.

Peck's first book, "The Road Less Traveled," sold nearly 1 million copies when it was published in 1978. Peck is from New Preston, Conn.

His topic Feb. 23 will be "The Taste for Mystery" at 9:30 a.m. and "Science and religion" at 11:30 a.m. There will be time for questions and a break between topics. Following a lunch break, he will resume the question and answer session at 2 p.m. From 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. he will discuss "Spirituality and Psychology of Human Nature." The seminar will close around 4:15 p.m.

He will also speak at the 10 a.m. Sunday adult forum in the church Parish Hall on the topic "Going to Omaha: The Issue of Death and Meaning." At 11 a.m., he will deliver the sermon "The Voice of the Chauffeur."

Peck is a 1958 Harvard graduate. He graduated from Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine in 1963. From then until 1972, he served in the U.S. Army as assistant chief psychiatry and neurology consultant to the surgeon general of the Army. He carried the rank of lieutenant colonel. From 1972-1983, he practiced psychiatry in Litchfield County, Conn.

He speaks widely on the relationship of religion and science and related topics. He also promotes scientific research on the interface between psychiatry and religion. A second book, "People of the Lie: The Hope for Healing Human Evil," has sold over 100,000 copies.

For more information call the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity.

Lutheran Church offers adult study

Our Savior's Lutheran Church, meeting at 5200 W. Illinois Ave., announces it is offering special worship and adult study events during the upcoming weeks.

Beginning Sunday at 9:30 a.m. a new eight-session adult study, "Invitation to Christian Faith and Life," will be conducted by the church's pastor, the Rev. John W. Allen.

The course is designed, says Allen, to explore scriptural teachings and to invite questions and dialogue concerning Christian doctrine and discipleship, addressing themes such as the basis of salvation, the meaning of creation, the reality of sin and evil, the church and its mission in the contemporary world, the significance of sacraments and life beyond the grave.

Beginning Ash Wednesday, a series of six midweek Lenten worship services will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the church. The theme of the series will be "Christ and My Life," focusing on such topics as "Christ and my Family," "Christ and my Enemies" and "Christ and my Death." The Rev. James Otterness and the Rev. John Halvorson, both from Lutheran church of the risen Lord, Odessa, will be worship leaders and preachers for a portion of the series.

Allen invites the public to attend all worship and study opportunities. For more information call 684-8430. The church meets at Grace Daycare Center.

Church to observe Ash Wednesday

Grace Lutheran Church, 3000 W. Golf Course Road, will observe Ash Wednesday services at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday to mark the beginning of Lent.

For the following six Wednesdays special worship services will give all interested parties a chance to prepare in a special way for Holy Week and Easter. A series of sermons "Trivia or Truth" will be presented during this time.

These services will focus on the details of Jesus Christ's passion, with the view of deepening the faith of those there as well as their knowledge, says Patrice Allen, a spokesman for the church said.

"To some people the details of our Lord's suffering may seem like 'trivial pursuit,' but four disciples considered them significant enough to include them in the gospel," says Ms. Allen. "From the accounts, all can learn important facts about our Lord's holy passion and about ourselves as we seek to follow in his footsteps."

The Lenten themes include "The Upper Room," "The Garden of Gethsemane," "The Trial Before the High Priest," "Christ Before Pontius Pilate," "Christ at Calvary" and "The Burial of Christ."

Services will be conducted by the Rev. Jay E. Simonsen. The public is invited to attend.

Seminar on divorce to be held

The Golf Course Road Church of Christ, 3500 Golf Course Road, is conducting a free seminar "Some Answers to the Divorce Dilemma" from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. today in the church's Family Center.

The seminar is designed to help individuals cope with the trauma of divorce. Session titles include "Positive Steps to Recovery," "Emotional Pitfalls of Divorce and Their Solution," "Helping Children Cope with Divorce" and "Help for Family and Friends of the Divorced."

Seminar participants include Ron Ellison, clinical supervisor of MHMR, Abilene, and a counselor in marriage and family therapy; Gary Grady, family minister of Golf Course Road Church of Christ; Waymon Hinson, assistant professor of marriage and family therapy at Abilene Christian College; David Lewis, who has 10 years of experience working with children and adolescents in divorce; and Tom Vermillion, singles minister at Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

Jehovah's Witnesses to meet

Jehovah's Witnesses from Midland will be meeting with members of nine other West Texas congregations at Ector Junior High School, Odessa, at 9:55 a.m. Feb. 23-24.

Frank Davis, spokesman for the local congregations, explained that more than 1,000 delegates are expected to attend this two-day session of Bible instruction and fellowship.

"Our program theme is 'Be Stablized in the Faith,' based on the Bible text at Colossians 2:7," Davis said. "This Scripture encourages Christians to go on walking in union with Christ Jesus and to be unwavering in their faith."

The principal address of the assembly will be delivered by Frank R. Bartell, a representative of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, world headquarters of Jehovah's Witnesses, Brooklyn, N.Y. His subject will be "Basis for Faith in an Unbelieving World."

Ash Wednesday services slated

Midland Lutheran Church, 2711 W. Michigan Ave., will hold Ask Wednesday Service at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday. The sermon will be "The Scandel of Lent" and the Imposition of Ashes and Holy Communion will be celebrated at the special service.

Lenten Services will be 7:30 p.m. at the church each Wednesday and the sermons will be taken from the Gospel of John.

Lent is a period of 40 days, beginning on Ash Wednesday and continuing through the Saturday before Easter. Sundays are not considered a part of Lent, but "little Easters," a commemoration of the resurrection of Christ. Christians throughout the world prepare themselves for the Easter season during Lent, realizing the suffering, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ.

The public is invited to attend.

POSITIVE THINKING

Answers to problems will come if you keep calm

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

"The quiet mind is neither frightened nor perplexed but marches on through fortune and misfortune at its own steady pace, like the ticking of a clock in a thunderstorm." So said a wise man.

Have you ever listened to the ticking of an old clock? Especially in the silence of night? We have such a clock at our farm. It is over 200 years old, purchased in England. How many people have lived and died to the ticking of that clock! It calmly goes on ticking time away. Listening to the measured ticking of a clock, one becomes quiet and peaceful; and in quietness is the time to get answers to problems.

I attended a Quaker meeting. At a Quaker service few words are spoken: quietness prevails and the congregation sits motionless in meditation. I sat with the other "thinking spiritually" as the leader directed. At the time a problem was bothering me considerably. It was quite important and the answer just would not come, so this quiet time was used to drop the problem into the "pool of quietness" which the leader said we should create. Despite having Quaker ancestors, activism has been my way of getting things done; but finally quietness was achieved first in body and then in mind and it was possible to put the problem into the "pool of quietness."

Slowly, like a steady light, came an answer — one which had previously been considered and rejected. But, as this steady light continued, it was evident this was the right answer. It was not exactly as anticipated, and the reason it had not been recognized before was because another outcome was desired. But this particular answer continued to glow in the mind, and it proved finally to be a wise decision.

There are people who have little patience with getting answers this way. But perhaps they are missing an important problem-solving technique. If you keep calm, remain perturbable, right answers have a greater chance of coming through. Answers gained out of hectic and agitated minds should be regarded suspiciously.

Many practical people do practice this technique for getting answers to their problems. I visited a textile manufacturer and as we walked around his plant the deep bond of affection between him and the men was evident. The place was immaculately clean and beautifully lighted. He showed me an old unused machine in a corner, but even so it was polished and oiled. He put his hand lovingly on it.

"You seem to love that machine," I commented wonderingly.

"Yes," he answered, "we all do because it is the one with which we started business. We mortgaged everything to buy it. there are men working here today who joined me in putting money into this machine an they now own an interest in the business. In those days I used to stand here and imagine a long line of such machines — rooms filled with people operating them. And I used to talk with my partners every day about the great plant we would build in this community."

"Partners?" I interrupted. "I though you had only one partner — Bill?"

"I've another," he replied, "and he is the one who really supplies the ideas. We couldn't get along without him. His name isn't on our stationery, but would you like to meet him?" He ushered me into a small room containing two chairs, and a table laid with pencils, memo pad, and Bible. "It was in this room that this factory was born," he said. "Bill and I would come in here whenever we couldn't see our way clear, couldn't meet payrolls or loans at the bank. We would come in here, get quiet and talk to God about our troubles. We would talk to Him as our friend, partner, and adviser. We would ask Him for insights and guidance."

I looked intently at this man. He was a two-fisted individual, 6 feet 2, a big head with abundant shock of hair — tie askew and sleeves rolled to elbows. It was both impressive and convincing to hear him say: "God is our third partner without whom we could never have built this business."

And do you know, there are many like him today? They don't go around talking about this practical faith, but they have it just the same.

If you have a problem get quiet and calm. Remember those Biblical words: "In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength." Out of quietness and strength right answers come.

Chess federation stops championship, causing controversy

MOSCOW (AP) — In an unprecedented action, the International Chess Federation stopped the world championship match Friday and the bitterly disappointed challenger charged he was cheated out of a chance to win the title at the chessboard.

The five-month-long struggle didn't end at the board, but at a raucous news conference. Champion Anatoly Karpov protested the decision and challenger Garri Kasparov indicated he had been pressured to accept the order.

A news conference by Florencio Campomanes, president of the federation, was interrupted by the shouting players and jeering spectators and was broken off.

Campomanes talked for more than an hour with the two players and announced that Karpov had accepted the ruling and that Kasparov "would abide by it."

Kasparov later denounced the Campomanes news conference as a "well-rehearsed spectacle" and said, "The chess world cannot accept such an end to the match."

It was a angry finish to the first world championship played in the Soviet Union since 1969 and a tumultuous event in the outwardly placid world of Soviet chess.

Chess sources said the Soviet and World Chess Federations had been pressing Kasparov to agree to halt the match because Karpov was ill and the match had dragged on for a record 48 games.

When Campomanes, president of the federation, announced he was halting the match Kasparov accused the federation of "trying to deprive me of my chances."

Karpov, a favorite of the Soviet chess establishment, has been champion since 1975 and took a commanding lead of 5-0 in the match, which started Sept. 10. But Kasparov, a 21-year-old Soviet star, won his first game on Nov. 24 and then took two more games to mount a remarkable comeback to 5-3.

Both players showed the strain of the marathon match. But it appeared that Kasparov had gained the psychological edge and Karpov was unable to win the sixth game he needed to retain the title.

There were reports that Karpov was ill and normal rules for world chess say a player forfeits if he's too ill to continue unless the other player agrees to waive the rule.

Amid rumors that the Soviet chess establishment was trying to avoid a Karpov loss due to illness, the 49th game was twice postponed and there were reports that Karpov, 33, had suffered a psychological breakdown brought on by exhaustion.

Campomanes, who is from the Philippines, called the news conference to say the match was being halted because it "has exhausted the physical, if not the psychological, resources, not only of the players, but of all those connected with the match."

Campomanes said he made the decision on his own. However, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported the match had been halted several minutes before Campomanes walked on stage for his news conference.

A Tass report on the affair dryly noted that the news conference was "interrupted sensationally."

Campomanes said a new match would be played starting Sept. 1 and a meeting of the chess federation, known as FIDE, would decide on the number of games.

How many Aggies needed to break kissing record?

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — It took 2,714 sets of lips just three minutes to set a collegiate world record for kissing on Valentine's Day.

Officials at Texas A&M University said 1,357 couples smooched in a mass kiss-in at the school's stadium.

That broke Oregon State's old record of 1,077 couples kissing in the same place at the same time.

Vaughn Bryant, head of A&M's anthropology department and resident kissing expert, coached the team.

He told them to hold the mouth just right, watch the nose, and vary lip locks to keep kissing from getting dull.

Couples paid $10 to take part, with most of the money going to the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

NEW YORK (AP) — Ethel Merman once calmly stopped in the middle of a song, walked off stage and threw a drunk out of the theater, then returned to the show.

Fans and friends of one of Broadway's biggest stars, heard that story Thursday when they packed an auditorium to commemorate the anniversary of Miss Merman's death. She died a year ago Friday at the age of 75.

Among them were Carol Channing, Maureen Stapleton, Joshua Logan and Elaine Stritch, who told the story.

Miss Merman became a star at 21 with her show-stopping rendition of "I Got Rhythm" in George and Ira Gershwin's "Girl Crazy" in 1930. It was the first in a long line of hits including "Anything Goes," "Annie Get Your Gun" and "Gypsy."

BOSTON (AP) — Sarah Caldwell, artistic director of the Opera Company of Boston, has been transferred to Massachusetts General Hospital's Spaulding rehabilitation unit to continue recuperating from pneumonia.

Miss Caldwell, 60, was hospitalized Jan. 3 and had been in the intensive care unit.

Because of her illness, directors of the opera company postponed the entire 1985 season, which was to have opened Feb. 3.

They said they would replan the season and announce the details as soon as Miss Caldwell could resume her duties.

Her condition improved enough for her to be transferred Thursday, said Martin Bander, Massachusetts General Hospital spokesman.

Touring a wing of Churchill Hospital, the 23-year-old wife of Prince Charles displayed a set of chewed nails to manicurist Ros Scott, 65, and asked, "Have you got any miracle cures?"

Mrs. Scott suggested applying bitter aloe, a nasty-tasting laxative. The princess grimaced.

"I think I'm too old to stop now," she replied.

As a child, Miss Withers appeared in "Bright Eyes" with Shirley Temple. Later she also appeared in "Giant" with Elizabeth Taylor and James Dean.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Mayor Bud Clark has put aside his usual high-profile image to decline an appearance on NBC's David Letterman show in part because of concern the show would try to portray him as a buffoon.

"There was some concern about the kind of show it is," Clark aide Jack McGowan said Thursday. "That was part of it, very much so."

"Late Night With David Letterman" has a reputation for unusual guests and outrageous stunts. The show has a dedicated following.

But McGowan added that the main reason for rejecting the offer was because it would have required two days of flying time to and from New York and a day's layover.

Clark, a tavern owner, is known for madcap exploits including posing as a flasher on a popular poster called "Expose Yourself To Art" before he became mayor.

SELMA, Ala. (AP) — The only way to keep light on the subject at the Federal Building here is to whistle while you work, or make some other kind of noise.

The idea, the General Services Administration says, was to save the taxpayer money by having lights turn off automatically after seven minutes of silence.

But the genius who put in the devices set them for seven seconds.

That leaves workers in the basement, where the sensors are installed, keeping up a steady hum. And users of the restrooms — which also have them — must play the drums on the walls.

Ken Stitcher, GSA field office director in Montgomery, said Thursday he will have the lights put right.

Reagan's 1986 budget: Too many cliches?

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's budget time again on Capitol Hill, and that means biting the bullet, fishing or cutting bait and making sure everything is at least on the table if not on the front burner.

Nothing seems to bring out cliches like economic debates, and President Reagan's submission last week of his $974 billion budget for fiscal 1986 set off an avalance of them — so to speak.

"The time has come to bite the bullet," Budget Director David Stockman declared in congressional testimony.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., upped the ante, telling a National Press Club audience that Reagan's proposed budget cuts require "that we bite 25 separate bullets."

When not chewing a mouthful, Domenici is following other pursuits. "It's time to fish or cut bait, and I'm ready to fish," he told members of his committee.

Democrats, meanwhile, are voicing concern that Republicans may try to railroad Reagan's budget plan — which terminates subsidies for Amtrak — through Congress.

Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., says, "The president has shown great courage ... in his commitment to get the federal government back on the track."

But Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., wants to know why Reagan wanted to put deficit reduction and tax revision "on different tracks ... If we could put those two goals on one track, we would have a chance of really solving this deficit dilemma."

And House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., says he has doubts about trying to put tax simplification "on a fast track."

"There may be two tracks, but the first track is deficit reduction," weighs in Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan.

Sometimes Reagan's tax-simplification plan isn't on the tracks at all, but on a stove.

Several members of Congress say the tax plan should await its turn "on the back burner" until deficit reduction is accomplished.

But Dole says he thinks "tax simplification is on the front burner" although he isn't "sure if the burner was turned on."

Then there is the budget table, frequently mentioned but never seen.

When House Budget Committee Chairman William Gray III, D-Pa., mentioned at a news conference that "everything is on the table," including Social Security benefits if necessary, Domenici, his Senate counterpart, proclaimed:

"I'm glad the chairman of the House Budget Committee says all things are on the table. I think that's right. We've been saying that for weeks."

Stockman told lawmakers that if they want defense spending cuts, they should propose specifics and "put some of that stuff on the table with members behind it and maybe you'll get floor debate."

Stockman also noted in the same appearance: "He (Reagan) didn't take Social Security off the table, House Democrats took it off."

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said, "If the president doesn't put it on the table, it's not on the table."

And, said Dole, "If we keep putting stuff off the table, there won't be anything left on the table."

At a recent Capitol Hill ceremony to unveil a portrait of Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., actor Cliff Robertson was designated to introduce the artist — Everett Raymond Kinstler.

Robertson drew a blank. There was a long silence and then someone whispered the name to Roberston so he could announce it.

"That's what happens when you go to actor's school," Robertson said.

As for Udall, he told the large gathering: "I don't appreciate this but I sure do deserve it."

Thousands of Vietnamese close in on Khmer Rouge headquarters

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BANGKOK, Thailand — Thousands of Vietnamese troops were closing in on the Khmer Rouge's Phnom Malai headquarters in western Cambodia, military sources in Bangkok said Friday.

The Vietnamese had partially taken the headquarters and were only a few miles from the base of Phum Thmei, Thai Supreme Commander Arthit Kamlang-Ek said Friday.

Estimates of the number of refugees who had crossed into Thailand ranged from 100,000 to 50,000.

Makeshift refugee camps have been set up in Thai territory south of the border town of Aranyaprathet, reports in Bangkok said.

Maj. Gen. San Sriphen of Thai army's eastern force, which is responsible for monitoring movements along the Cambodian border, said the Vietnamese have deployed about 30,000 soldiers in their attempt to dislodge the Khmer Rouge from the Phnom Malai area.

Fighting in and around Phnom Malai has been described as the heaviest since the Vietnamese marched into Phnom Penh in January 1979.

The assault was viewed by political and military observers as part of Hanoi's effort to destroy the viability of the Cambodian coalition government-in-exile led by Prince Sihanouk, which is recognized by the United Nations.

Having routed the forces of the Khmer Peoples National Liberation Front Vietnam now hopes to crush the Khmer Rouge forces, the only remaining threat from the coalition group.

Polish authorities charge Solidarity activists with inciting public unrest

"We are deeply convinced that, in the case of illegal acts disguised as legal, one must answer with all one's strength so that it is clear that Poles won't accept passively this return of hatred, repression and the violation of human rights."

— Statement released by Lech Walesa and Jacek Kuron

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Authorities brought charges Friday against seven Solidarity activists captured in a police raid on a meeting in Gdansk, and summoned Lech Walesa for questioning on the same charge — inciting public unrest.

Three of the seven charged were placed under arrest. Walesa, who also attended the meeting Wednesday but was released immediately, accused Poland's communist authorities of "hatred, repression and...violation of human rights."

The Solidarity leaders had met to plan a 15-minute nationwide strike on Feb. 28 protesting government plans to raise food prices. Walesa founded the now-outlawed union in Gdansk during the labor unrest of 1980, also set off by price increases, and won the Nobel Peace prize for his work.

A woman who answered the telephone at his apartment Friday said: "Walesa has been summoned to the prosecutor's office in Gdansk on Saturday at 10:00 a.m. as a suspect." She did not give her name.

After getting the summons, Walesa issued a joint statement with Jacek Kuron, founder of the workers' rights group KOR, condemning the raid and the presecutor's decision to place three of the men under arrest. KOR advised Solidarity in the union's formative period, and then disbanded.

"We are deeply convinced that, in the case of illegal acts disguised as legal, one must answer with all one's strength so that it is clear that Poles won't accept passively this return of hatred, repression and the violation of human rights," the statement said.

A copy was made available to The Associated Press by Kuron in Warsaw.

Walesa was told his participation in the meeting could lead to charges of causing public unrest and organizing illegal protests, one of his aides said.

"Walesa faces charges under Article 282a, Paragraphs 1 and 2 of the penal code," said the aide, adding that a uniformed police officer delivered the summons to the Solidarity leader.

The Gdansk prosecutor's office said the seven activists had been charged under the same article. The maximum penalty is three years in prison.

Poland's official PAP news agency said the three men arrested were Adam Michnik of Warsaw, Bogdan Lis of Gdansk and Wladyslaw Frasyniuk of Wroclaw.

Those charged and released Friday afternoon were Stanislaw Handzlik of Krakow, Janusz Palubicki of Poznan, and Mariusz Wilk and Jacek Merkel of Gdansk.

"The four of us were set free," Palubicki said in a telephone interview. "I was presented...the text of the charge in which there was talk about preparing the strike. I said I didn't admit to the charge and refused to testify and that was the end."

PAP said Michnik, Frasyniuk and Lis had "repeatedly" violated the law since their release from prison last year under a govenment amnesty for political prisoners.

Under the amnesty approved last July, the old charges and cases against them could be reopened because they were "resuming opposition activities."

Lis and Frasyniuk are former members of Solidarity's underground. Temporary Coordinating Commission. Michnik is a Solidarity adviser and co-founder with Kuron of KOR.

The crackdown reflects government concern about public reaction to the food price hikes planned for March. Price increases caused widespread worker protests, and brought down governments, in 1970, 1976 and 1980.

Authorities also appear determined to head off any renewal of opposition activity inspired by the conviction of four secret police officers last week in the kidnap-murder of a pro-Solidarity priest, the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko.

Walesa and the banned union's underground leadership issued the Feb. 28 strike call last month, the first by Solidarity leaders in more than two years.

He and Kuron said last year's amnesty was used to "mislead public opinion in Poland and the world" about the authorities' intentions. "After starting an insane campaign against the (Roman Catholic) church, political arrests are now being started again," they said.

Poland's Catholic bishops issued a statement Friday demanding that the regime end an "unprecedented" propaganda campaign against the church.

The bishops, in their first official reaction to the Feb. 7 conviction of the four police officers, expressed "dismay" that the trial had harmed church-state relations.

Outlook for refugees 'encouraging'

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The outlook for refugees in Latin America is "very encouraging" in light of the trend toward democracy in the region, U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees Poul Hartling said Friday.

Hartling said the situation in Argentina had improved considerably since that country elected a democratic government in 1983 and that quite a number of Argentine exiles had returned to their country. He said many Uruguayans were also returning.

Uruguay elected a president last year, and Brazil is to end 21 years of military rule next month. Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador, Honduras, Panama and El Salvador also have replaced military regimes with elected governments in the past few years.

Hartling said he was encouraged that a draft peace plan for Central America, drawn up by the so-called Contadora group, included an agreement to give asylum to refugees.

The largest groups of refugees are in Southeast Asia, Africa and Pakistan, where nearly three million Afghans have fled, said Hartling, who oversees U.N. aid to about 10 million refugees. He said in the last four months, there has been an "explosion" of refugees in parts of Africa, creating problems of overpopulation made critical by the drought there.

The U.N. commissioner spoke at a news conference at the end of a five-day official visit here, during which he met with President Miguel de la Madrid and other officials and visited three southern states where the Mexican government is housing some 46,000 Guatemalan refugees.

Hartling said the refugees were not guerrillas, as Guatemalan officials have charged.

"They are not at all involved in political or armed affairs," he said. He estimated that about 60 percent of the Guatemalan refugees are children.

In 1982, when political violence in their country intensified, large numbers of Guatemalans fled to Mexico from Indian villages in the northwestern highlands near the Mexican border.

The Guatemalan government has denied charges from human rights groups that the military razed villages to wipe out support for leftist guerrillas. Officials said ordinary citizens were in no danger, and charged that the refugee camps in Mexico served as shelters and recruitment centers for guerrillas.

Hartling praised Mexico for granting asylum to all the refugees, and said it was doing an "excellent job" of taking care of them.

He said conditions in the camps on the Yucatan Peninsula — where the government has relocated about a third of the refugees — were especially good. He said the people had houses which they built themselves, as well as schools, clinics and cultural centers.

Last year, Mexico began to transfer the refugees after attacks on the camps along the border by men wearing uniforms and identified by witnesses as Guatemalan soldiers. The Guatemalan government denied the army was involved in the attacks.

"To my best opinion, the refugees will be more safe further away from the border," said Hartling. He said Mexico had a right to relocate the refugees, as long as it did not force them to go back to their country against their will.

Although large settlements for refugees have been established in Campeche and Quintana Roo states on the peninsula, thousands still remain in the border state of Chiapas.

The Mexican government has said the best solution to the refugee problem is for the Guatemalans to go back voluntarily, and Guatemala has said the refugees will be safe if they return.

"If they go of their own free will to a safe and normal life, we think that is a good solution," Hartline said, stressing that repatriation must be voluntary.

He said about 600 or 700 Guatemalans had returned to their country from Mexico, but added that he did not know whether they had encountered problems.

Hartling said his U.N. commission had spent about $10 million in 1984 to help the Guatemalans in Mexico, and estimated the aid would increase slightly for 1985, as start-up programs to make the refugees self-sufficient were expensive.

Mexico's GDP improves in 1984

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The growth rate of Mexico's Gross Domestic Product for 1984 was 3.5 percent, a significant improvement over the drop of the previous two years, according to official figures published Friday.

The Budget and Planning Department figures, published by the government newspaper El Nacional, came as Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog predicted that growth for 1985 would fall between 3 percent and 4 percent as well.

Unlike the previous two years, growth in 1984 was registered in all sectors of the economy, according to the report by the Cabinet department released through the National Institute of Statistics, Geography and Information.

Private investment was also up, 8.8 percent, although public investment grew only 0.6 percent.

The growth rate suffered a drop in 1983 of 5.3 percent as the worst recession in half a century took firm hold here after it started the year before. The GDP dropped by 0.5 percent in 1982, the first negative rate since 1932, according to Bank of Mexico figures.

Some business leaders have cautioned recently that the rebound in the economy last year may be occurring too quickly and fueling inflation as a result.

The government had predicted early in 1984 that growth for the year would be between zero and 1 percent.

Reducing inflation has been the main target of the austerity program put into effect by President Miguel de la Madrid after taking office in December 1982.

Inflation was registered at nearly 60 percent in 1984, down from the 80 percent rate of the previous year but not as low as the government had originally hoped.

The target for 1985 is to reduce inflation to 35 percent.

Britain, Argentina urged to end conflict

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unofficial delegations of Britons and Argentines urged their respective governments Friday night to undertake "confidence-building measures" aimed at ending their conflict over the Falklands/Malvinas Islands.

The continuing impasse resulting from the 1982 South Atlantic war "is in no one's long term interest," the delegations agreed after two days of talks.

The conferees met under the auspices of the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies. Participants also included unofficial U.S. delegates, who concurred in the conclusions.

Among the steps recommended was strengthening official representation in the two nations' capitals, now limited to two Argentine diplomats in London and two British envoys in Buenos Aires.

British delegate Walter Little, a lecturer in Latin American politics at the University of Liverpool, told a news conference some of the mistakes made since the war were due, in part, to limitations on diplomatic dialogue.

A communique issued after the conference said agreement was reached on these other recommendations:

— Improvement of communications between the two sides in order to avoid continued misunderstandings.

— Reciprocal removal of restrictions on the free movement of citizens between Argentina and Great Britain as well as restrictions on the entry of ships to each other's ports.

— Reciprocal measures to assure equal treatment of one another's business interests and the free flow of information and publications.

The communique expressed hope that such measures would eventually lead to a declaration formally ending hostilities as well as the military "protection zone" Britain has established around the islands.

Other goals included resumption of diplomatic and trade relations and eventual discussions on the status of the islands — the central issue in dispute. The recommendations will be forwarded to both governments.

The conflict erupted into war in the spring of 1982, when Argentine forces seized control of the islands but were driven out 10 weeks later by a Britsh counter-attack.

The communique said a majority of the participants expressed regret that an official dialogue on the dispute, held at Berne, Switzerland, was broken off and that it was of "immediate importance" that it be resumed.

Wayne Smith, an American delegate who is director of Argentine studies at Johns Hopkins, said the conferees agreed that the United States should encourage a dialogue but avoid pressuring either side.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Israel military 'regrets' incident with newsmen

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A military spokesman expressed "regret" Friday for an incident in southern Lebanon in which Israeli troops seized news film from Beirut-based correspondents and fired a rifle near a cameraman's face.

The statement followed complaints by the presidents of NBC News and CBS News to Prime Minister Shimon Peres about the Wednesday incident.

It occurred at an Awali River bridge that is the main crossing point between the Israeli-occupied southern part of Lebanon and the rest of the country.

Lawrence K. Grossman, president of NBC News, said in his letter to Peres that an Israeli soldier pointed his rifle at the head of an NBC cameraman, then fired it a few inches from the journalist's face while trying to confiscate a video cassette.

A soldier subsequently fired a bullet that hit the NBC crew's car, Grossman wrote.

Spain expels Americans

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Two Americans with diplomatic passports have been expelled from Spain, Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez said Friday. He did not say why, but used language customary in espionage cases.

The Spanish news agency EFE, citing unidentified intelligence sources, said the action was taken because the Americans were seen photographing "specific parts of a special building," which would have enabled them to determine broadcast frequencies used by the Spanish intelligence services.

Gonzalez told a news conference the Americans' activities were inconsistent with their diplomatic status.

The U.S. Embassy had no comment.

Pepsi to open China plant

PEKING (AP) — Pepsi-Cola will become available to millions of Chinese for the first time when a bottling plant is established in southern China late this year, Pepsi-Cola International announced Friday.

The American soft drink manufacturer will set up the plant in Canton to produce Pepsi, Mirinda Orange and Teem exclusively for the Chinese market and bring Pepsi-Cola's production in China to 10 million cases a year, according to a company release.

Pepsi-Cola established its first bottling plant in the special economic zone of Shenzhen in 1982, but those soft drinks are produced for export, primarily to Hong Kong and other Asian countries.

Rival soft drink maker Coca-Cola Company has two bottling plants, in Peking and Canton, which together have a capacity of about 4.5 million cases a year. The company said it is sold mainly to tourists from abroad who pay in foreign currency, helping China earn foreign exchange, although the drink finds its way to Chinese markets.
