White says special session not answer to financial crunch

HOUSTON (AP) — A special legislative session is not the answer to the state's current financial crunch caused by dwindling oil prices, Gov. Mark White said Friday.

"State revenues are down and the need for carefully measured responses to the state's budgetary concerns have never been greater," White told about 400 people attending the general session of the State Bar of Texas Convention.

"What is not needed is a panicked response. What is not needed is a special session on the budget. Such talk is only inflammatory, " he said. "It does not address real needs. It does not recognize more reasonable, less costly, and more productive ways of dealing with the problems we now face."

The governor said steps have already been taken to reduce state spending. Members of the state Senate and House have met in recent weeks to prepare budget considerations that will dominate the regular session beginning in January, he said.

White said the sagging oil prices are not only hurting oil exploration, drilling and production, but also related industries such as steel fabrication, oilfield services, retail commerce and banking.

"We aren't sitting back waiting for better times," he said. "We are acting rationally in the long-term interests of our state to ensure better times."

White blames the current oil crisis on the manipulation by ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and the refusal of the Reagan administration to respond to both energy and national security threats posed by current oil market conditions.

White said Texas is changing and that Texans are striving to diversify from being a one-note economy that stresses oil.

"The future of our economy is going to be built on the energy of ideas and knowledge and innovation and inventiveness, captured and created in the minds of talented researchers, students and teachers," he said.

Diversifying, he said, can be accomplished by giving education a high priority. White said he is pleased that 97 percent of Texas educators passed a competency test given earlier this year.

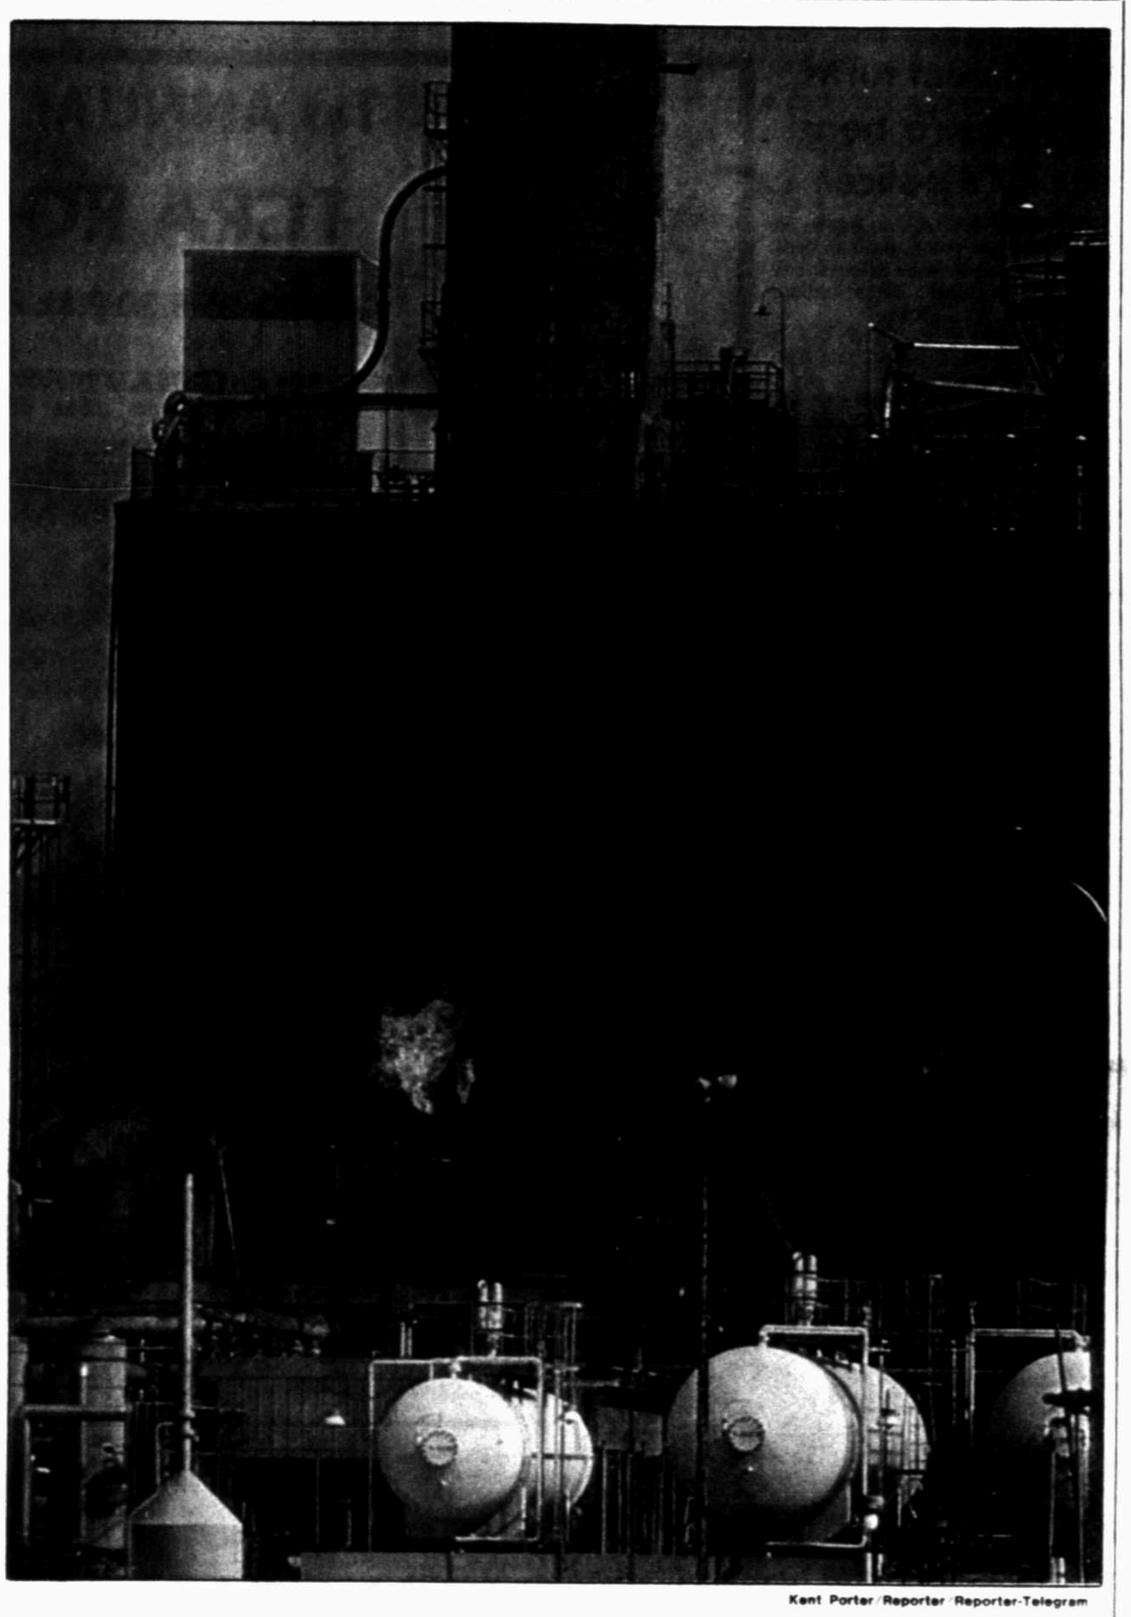

The governor said the national education community is turning to the education reform package passed by the Legislature in 1984 to use as an example of how best to remedy the crisis in American education.

White expects long lines at gas pumps

DALLAS (AP) — Texans should get ready for 1973-style lines at the gas pump unless the federal government wakes up and institutes a national energy policy, Gov. Mark White warned Friday.

"I hope you haven't gotten over (long gas lines), because it's coming," White said at a Texas Energy Forum sponsored by the Texas Women's Political Caucus. "It's coming because this country has no energy policy."

Gas ignites, blows out top of reactor at El Paso Products

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A highly flammable gas was ignited and apparently blew out the top of a petroleum refinery reactor at the El Paso Products plant here Friday afternoon, but no injuries were reported.

Firefighters from the Odessa Fire Department and the Shell Oil Co. Fire Brigade were called to assist the company's on-site firefighting unit after the cylindrical vessel filled with propylene was ignited between 4:20 and 4:30 p.m.

Officials said the cause of the fire was unknown.

J.C. Decker, Odessa Fire Department Batallion chief, was with the first city unit that arrived at the scene, and said later reports of no injuries was a "fantastic" outcome for a fire of that size.

"When I got there we had a terribly large fire in a reactor area. Some part of the top had either blown off or been torn off by some sort of explosion," Decker said. "What we had was just a great big pressurized vessel of propylene."

Flames emanated from the reactor 50 feet above the ground, ascending through the five levels of the plant structure around it mixed with thick black smoke. The scene was visible for miles.

Top-level Soviet spy defects to U.S. embassy

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top-level Soviet spy in North Africa has defected and is in the United States telling U.S. officials about Soviet operations in Arab countries, intelligence community sources said Friday.

Oleg Agraniants, an official of the Soviet KGB spy agency, "basically walked into the U.S. Embassy in Tunis a month ago and defected," said one source.

The sources, who asked not to be identified by name, said Agraniants was assigned to the Soviet Embassy in Tunis, where his cover job was as the No. 3 official in the Soviet delegation.

Agraniants has been brought to the United States for detailed interrogation, the sources said.

Stung last year by the unusual case of Vitaly Yurchenko, the KGB defector who returned to the Soviets, U.S. intelligence officials are disclosing, even privately, little information about Agraniants.

Yurchenko, a general-designate in the KGB and former chief of Soviet Embassy security in Washington, defected in Rome and spent three months here telling U.S. officials about Soviet operations, including two alleged Soviet spies in this country, Edward Howard and Ronald Pelton.

At this early stage in (Oleg) Agraniants' interrogation, he is believed to be a genuine defector and not a double-agent planted by the Soviet Union.

A former CIA agent, Howard is a fugitive last seen in Finland and believed to have fled to the Soviet Union. Pelton, a former National Security Agency expert in spying on Soviet communications, was convicted on espionage charges recently in federal court in Baltimore.

At an extraordinary news conference in the Soviet Embassy here after he redefected, Yurchenko complained that the CIA was filling U.S. newspapers with stories about him. U.S. intelligence sources said these leaks upset him because he had hoped to kept his defection secret so that the family he left behind in the Soviet Union would not be subject to reprisals.

At this early stage in Agraniants' interrogation, he is believed to be a genuine defector and not a double-agent planted by the Soviet Union. "There is no indication that he is anything other than what he appears to be," one source said.

NBC Nightly News, which first reported the defection, said he may have been a U.S. agent inside the KGB for the last three years. The program said he was responsible for all KGB operations in North Africa and worked with Palestinian guerrillas who train in that region.

NBC said Agraniants had supplied names of Soviet agents in Tunisia, Algeria, Morocco and Libya.

Specific details of what Agraniants has told U.S. officials could not be confirmed Friday.

It also could not be learned what if any family Agraniants has and where they might be now. Nor could it be determined immediately where else he had served besides Tunisia.

Kathy Pherson, a spokeswoman for the CIA, declined to comment.

The Soviet spy agency would have to replace agents in northern Africa and possibly the networks to which they belonged, NBC quoted its sources as saying.

The defection would follow those last year by Yurchenko; Oleg Gordievsky, KGB station chief in London, and Sergei Bokhan, a senior military intelligence agent in Greece.

Mattox: Premiums not result of increased suits

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

Mattox

AUSTIN — Filings of personal injury lawsuits in the last five years have increased a mere 3.3 percent, not enough to cause an insurance crisis, Attorney General Jim Mattox contended Friday.

Mattox said a study by the National Association of Attorneys General concluded that soaring premiums do not stem from an explosion in lawsuits. He said the insurance industry has raised rates to convince the public that changes in wrongful-act laws, called tort, need reforms to stabalize insurance costs.

He called the campaign by the insurance industry and tort reformers "one of the most insideous, conspiritorial frauds that I've ever seen conducted in the free world."

Insurance companies have doubled or tripled premiums for liability insurance during the last six months, and many businesses, professionals and cities cannot buy insurance at all. The insurance industry blames the sharp increases in premiums on an explosion in personal injury cases and on huge jury awards.

Mattox, however, said, "It's an insurance crisis that has been caused by the greed and ambitions within the insurance industry itself." The attorney general said insurance companies are making more money than ever before.

Police officer from Crane honored for 'outstanding humanitarianism'

The Bright Side

CRANE, Texas (AP) — A police officer who took time off to drive a befuddled man 1,400 miles home to California has been honored for "outstanding humanitarianism."

Manuel Fierro had responded to a call about a suspicious person when he found 80-year-old Giordana Barbiani at the local Dairy Queen, where the elderly man had just bought a hamburger for his dead wife.

"He told me all he wanted to do was buy something to eat for his wife," Fierro, 40, said Thursday. "But there wasn't anybody else there."

Barbiani, of Riverside, Calif., at first couldn't tell officers where he wanted to go or where he had been. He couldn't remember any of the events of the last two weeks and apparently had driven aimlessly for some time, Fierro said.

Fierro later learned that Barbiani's wife had died four months earlier in California. And after sorting through the situation, the Crane police officer eventually arrived at a solution.

Fierro got behind the wheel of the elderly stranger's Volvo in Crane, 30 miles south of Odessa, and drove Barbiani 1,400 miles to his home in California.

"He was carrying a substantial amount of money. A substantial amount. We weren't sure what to do with him," Fierro recalled of the incident in late April. "He said he had just taken off to go to the store."

Fierro was able to pin down Barbiani's past after the man produced a business card from an Artesia, Calif., city councilman and gave it to Crane police.

They contacted their Artesia counterparts, who learned that Barbiani's wife was dead, that he had no other family in the United States and that he had sold the family home and disappeared.

"We talked to the mayor of Artesia about the problem, and they were very concerned," Fierro said. "The man kept saying, 'All I want to do is get home.'"

In California, Barbiani was met by government officials and now is at a Riverside area nursing home, Artesia City Manager Gene Romig said.

Waco's 'Dr. Joe' still going strong at 84

By LYNN BULMAHN

WACO (AP) — Back in 1926, the newly graduated Dr. Hannibal L. "Joe" Jaworski often got night-time calls to pinch-deliver babies for other, drowsier doctors.

"Many times, the wives of the older doctors would call me to say I was needed to deliver a baby while their husbands were delivering another baby — but really, they were sleeping," Jaworski said. "I'd deliver in the country, in the little side streets. Often, the grandmother was giving the chloroform, and I delivered the baby by the light of a coal oil lamp."

Now, after six decades, it's a pretty solid bet that some of the babies he delivered under the kerosene glow will retire before he does. Still steady of hand at 84, Jaworski keeps his office open for patients half of each day and assists surgeons in their operations. Although he no longer operates on patients himself, other doctors often call him for consultations.

Known as "Dr. Joe" to thousands of patients, Jaworski began his medical career in Waco after graduating from Baylor College of Medicine in Dallas on May 31, 1926.

The following day, he began work as an intern at Central Texas Baptist Hospital, now Hillcrest Baptist Medical Center. With him came a caring attitude and a penchant for innovation.

His philosophy of "be good to my patients, be honest with them and do the best I can" led him to:

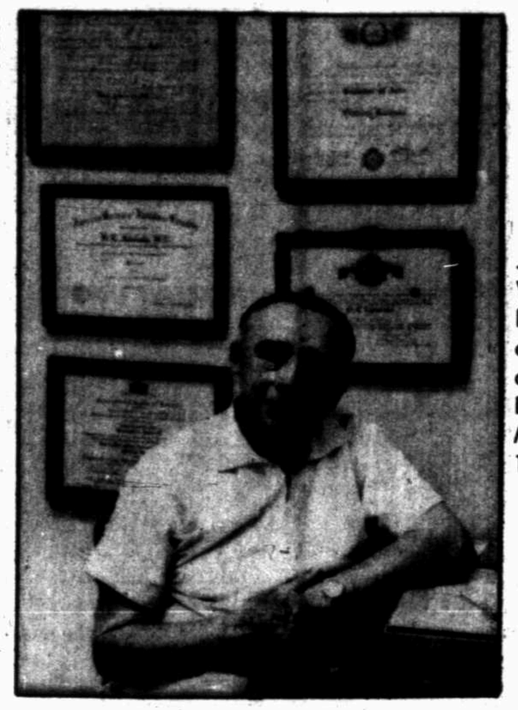

— Help test penicillin on wounded soldiers in World War II. He remembers giving a patient what is now considered a tiny dose of penicillin — and staying up all night worrying, afraid the drug would kill the patient.

— Setting up the construction of surgical instruments to assist doctors in the first "blue baby" operations.

— Becoming the first local doctor to use an electrocardiogram.

— Becoming one of the first physicians to perform a Caesarean section — a procedure frowned upon at the time.

"They told me if I couldn't deliver babies in the 'normal' way, not to do it," Jaworski said. "They said if the baby died at birth that was the way the Lord intended it."

Dr. Hannibal L. Jaworski poses in his Waco office recently. He began his medical career in Waco after graduating from Baylor College of Medicine in Dallas in 1926.

Assignment turns out to be 'a bear' for city's police

JOHNSTON, R.I. (AP) — Police realized it was not going to be an ordinary day when someone called to say there was "a large, black animal near the Baptist Church."

"We sent the dog officer but it turned out to be a bear," said Sgt. Emilio Sabitoni.

The 6-foot-tall black bear who apparently wandered into Rhode Island looking for a mate led 25 police officers on a five-hour chase earlier this week through woods, across highways and into a store.

The cat-and-mouse game ended when he was tranquilized by officials from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and put in the back of a truck to take him to northern New Hampshire.

"With the tranquilizer, he seemed quite friendly. He was conscious and his eyes were open but he couldn't stand. We never once heard him growl," said Sabitoni, who said he developed some affection for the 160-pounder during their hours together.

"The Fish and Wildlife Service said during mating season these bears tend to wander up to 100 miles from their natural habitat," Sabitoni said. "He was a nice-looking bear and he never threatened anyone."

PUC denies basic phone rate increase

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission Friday denied the basic phone service rate increase sought by Southwestern Bell, but customers will get less for their money.

Commissioners approved new charges for operator help and reduced the number of free directory assistance calls.

After the commission approved the changes, PUC Chairwoman Peggy Rosson told company officials they have lost "perspective" on the value of a dollar.

Overall, the commission approved a $35.4 million increase. Southwestern Bell wants $277 million, including hikes of up to $2 a month for basic home phone service.

A final, procedural vote in the case is set for Wednesday. The request was filed by Bell in March 1985. New rates will probably go into effect in July.

There currently is no charge for operator help in checking to see if a number is working or for having an operator interrupt a phone conversation for an emergency.

The commission Friday approved a $1.35 charge to check a line and a $2.20 charge for emergency interruptions. There will be no charge in cases involving phone equipment problems.

Also approved was a decrease to three free directory assistance calls per month. Customers now get five per month. Calls above the limit will continue to cost 30 cents.

Commissioner Dennis Thomas said 73 percent of Bell's customers make three or fewer directory assistance calls per month.

The new and increased charges for operator help will mean $56.5 million a year for Bell.

Also approved was a 2.5 percent late payment charge for business customers. There currently is no late fee.

Fees paid to Bell by long-distance companies were lowered $29.7 million, a move the commission believed will cause lower long distance rates.

Ms. Rosson, who said her colleagues acted in an "unconscionable" manner when they approved the $35.4 million hike last week, had harsh words Friday for Bell.

"It seems to me that by virtue of your enormous size that company-wide you have lost a certain amount of perspective when it comes to money," she said. "That is a perspective that, in my opinion, is critical when you're providing an essential service to captive customers."

She said the company paid one expert witness $500 an hour.

"To him and to you perhaps that is a reasonable hourly rate for a person with his credentials, but to many, many citizens of Texas that is more than they have to exist on for a month or so. That's perspective," Ms. Rosson said.

She urged Bell employees to "be sure they can say 'no' to one simple question" when they spend ratepayers' money.

The question is, she said, "Am I unnecessarily adding to the economic burden of my least advantaged customers?"

Royce Caldwell, Bell vice president for revenues in Texas, said the company works hard to save money.

"We are doing a lot better on that any company I know of," he told reporters.

He said the $35.4 million hike is insufficient and the company will consider taking the case to state court.

Attorneys for consumers said the rate hike was excessive. They also complained about the new charges for operator assistance.

"The company deserved a rate decrease, not a rate increase," said Geoffrey Gay of the state's Office of Public Utility Counsel. "The commission engaged in face-saving for the company by giving them a token increase instead of the $100 million to $200 million rate reduction they deserved."

"This is a company that is gluttonous," Gay added.

Don Butler of Austin, attorney for Bell-served cities that called for a rate cut of greater than $300 million, said the operator charges are "a shifting of rates on to the typical customer in order to give rate decreases to AT&T."

And, he said, he is not confident that AT&T will pass those savings on to its customers.

"Basically, the people are getting less and paying more for it," he said of the rate plan approved Friday.

Officials investigate radiation overdose

TYLER (AP) — The same kind of operator-entry error apparently triggered a computer software malfunction that twice in three weeks resulted in excessive doses of radiation to cancer patients at the East Texas Cancer Center, a state official said Friday.

Officials at the facility said a 66-year-old man, confined to a wheelchair and suffering from emphysema, died in April after receiving an excessive dose of radiation earlier in the month from a Canadian-made machine.

A 33-year-old man received an excessive dose from the same machine on March 25 and has been treated since then at a Dallas hospital, officials at the Tyler center added.

Bob Free, an investigator with the Texas Bureau of Radiation Control in Austin, said Friday that both incidents appear to have been caused by a malfunction that occurred after a command was entered into the machine by error and then corrected.

In the case of the 33-year-old man, the operator began radiation treatment with the equipment, known as the Therac 25 linear accelerator, after correcting the wrong command. The machine shut down immediately and flashed a malfunction message, Free said.

The operator believed the patient had not received the treatment and reset the machine, Free said. But the patient had experienced something like an electrical shock and was rolling off the table when the second dosage caught him in the shoulder and neck, Free said.

"They interviewed the patient and found out this guy must have had some kind of shock. He felt this pain. He felt a warm sensation on his skin like heat," he said.

Free said representatives of the clinic and manufacturer looked at the machine and determined there was no electrical or other hazard. As a result, the machine was put back into use.

Exactly three weeks later, the same error was made on the 66-year-old man, Free said. It was corrected, and again the machine flashed a message that could be intrepreted as no dosage received, he said.

This time, Free said, the operator immediately shut down the machine, recalling the earlier incident.

He said the operator, who was not identified, does not appear to be at fault.

The Texas Bureau of Radiation Control is responsible for checking calibrations of machines and procedures, but is not involved in recalling equipment, Free said.

Use of the Therac 25 linear equipment has been discontinued, said Dick Higginbotham, East Texas Cancer Center administrator.

The manufacturer, Atomic Energy of Canada LTD., a government-owned company, is taking corrective actions, which include a modification of the software, Higginbotham said.

Park ranger envisions 'super' Constitution celebration

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Hobie Cawood, a drawling Kentuckian in a park ranger's uniform, and Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, a legal statesman in jurists' robes, share a sense of history and a dream.

Cawood, superintendent of Independence National Historical Park, envisions a "super, phenomenal" climax next year to the country's yearlong celebration of the 200th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution.

Burger announced this week that he was quitting the U.S. Supreme Court to help make the dream come true.

The Constitution's bicentennial will begin this September, kick into high gear in May 1987 and peak the following September with a re-enactment of the Grand Federal Procession, a parade held on the Fourth of July, 1788, to celebrate ratification.

As Cawood sees it, more than a million people will converge on Independence Mall and nearby streets Sept. 17, 1987, 200 years after drafters agreed on the document and affixed their names, to hear the president, chief justice and members of Congress speak from a platform atop Independence Hall.

"We'd have the three branches of government created 200 years before in that very building: the president, the Supreme Court and the legislature. And we'd have one grand rally for the Constitution of the United States," said Cawood.

There would be room on the platform for Burger in his role as chairman of the federal commission on the Bicentennial. He'll also be celebrating his 80th birthday. But he won't be up there as chief justice; Justice William Rehnquist has been nominated to replace him.

Burger said he gave up his seat to concentrate on organizing a celebration of "one of the great, great stories in American history."

The 1987 version of the Grand Federal Procession "will probably be one of the largest, if not the largest parade ever mounted in the history of the country," said Fred Stein, executive director of We The People 200, the committee in charge of the Bicentennial.

As planned now, three or four processions would wind through the city and funnel into Indepedence Mall for the afternoon spectacle.

"I think this will be the most super, phenomenal thing that can happen," said Cawood, who came to the park in 1972 to help put on the Bicentennial of the Declaration of Independence in 1976. "It's just so exciting, it's hard to imagine."

The Constitution celebration will also include a joint session of Congress on July 16, 1987. All 535 representatives and senators would hold a session, probably in a tent on the mall.

On exhibition will be the four original drafts of the Constitution, James Madison's journal of the convention and a 13th-century copy of the Magna Charta.

Other Bicentennial events include opening ceremonies in May 1987 featuring representatives of other constitutional governments; a musical play about the Constitution; a race featuring representatives of all 50 states; a convention of political humorists; an International Women's Conference; and a riverfront festival.

"If we're going to celebrate this thing in the proper way and have people get an understanding — in this country and elsewhere — of what freedom means, and that (the Constitution) is the instrument that gave that freedom and how it works, there's a lot of work to be done," Burger said.

Judge Francis Hopkinson, who wrote a booklet about the original parade of July 4, 1788, estimated that 5,000 marched and 17,000 gathered on Union Green at the end.

Numerous trades and professions were represented, from sail makers, ship carpenters and cabinet makers to farmers, blacksmiths, hatters and skinners.

Cawood and Stein estimate that as many as 50,000 will participate in the 1987 parade and 1 million to 3 million will watch.

Cawood's dream could create security nightmares. But the city's new police commissioner, Kevin Tucker, is the former head of the Secret Service here, and has protected presidents and a pope.

Tucker would help coordinate a security effort that would include city police, state police, FBI agents, National Park Service police and Capitol police from Washington, Cawood said.

"They all have a can-do attitude. The Secret Service says, 'If you put the president up there, we can put something around him that'll make it safe,' " said Cawood.

Stress tests of the roof of the 236-old Indepedence Hall have been done, and Cawood said it'll hold.

"Of course we want to create a good image for the city and we want to have an economic impact on the city with our celebration," Cawood said.

"But there's this old, maybe kind of corny idea that things that are understood are perpetuated. If we can make that spark, maybe we can cause them to care a little bit about the Constitution.

"And hopefully they'll vote, and they'll sit on juries, and do all the responsibilities as well as accept the rights of being American citizens."

Today Summer Solstice

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's the longest day of the year, a day without night in some places, and one of festivity for many people welcoming the start of summer, or of warding off the evil spirits of Midsummer.

The Summer Solstice — the northernmost point of the sun's apparent annual movement — occurs at 12:30 p.m. EDT today.

This day has been observed as a special event for thousands of years, from the era of the ancient Egyptians, who oriented the Pyramids to the rising sun on this date, to modern times.

Through the centuries, the day of the solstice has been a time of myth and superstition as well as celebration, although it currently is noted mainly as the start of astronomical summer.

In many cultures, the solstice marks Midsummer rather that the beginning of the season, and like Halloween is heaped with superstition.

Bonfires are popular and witches are burned — at least in effigy — in many places in Scandinavia.

The Germans have a midsummer festival and feast the concludes with a bonfire and celebrants jumping over the blaze.

Midsummer festivities were immortalized by William Shakespeare in the play "A Midsummer Night's Dream," in which lovers are caught up in the magic web spun by the moon, the forest and fairy creatures on that special night.

In Iceland, though, far to the north where the sun shines virtually constantly on this date, Midsummer night was celebrated as a time when trolls and other evil spirits remained hidden away — avoiding the constant daylight.

White renewed his call for a variable oil import fee, saying it would form the foundation of a policy to battle fluctuations in oil prices that "are at the whim of some guy in a tent in the middle of the desert."

Without that, the United States is doing more to disarm its defenses than the Soviet Union could ever hope for because it is imperiling the availability of fuel.

"It is unilateral disarmament when you run out of fuel" for military equipment because of a intentional lack of national policy, he said. "We need to guarantee that gas is available for our tanks."

He noted that the United States defeated Germany's forces in North Africa during World War II because "we bombed their oil capacity. They literally had no fuel in their tanks. You lose when you lose your fuel supply."

White said he completely supports the idea of a free market, but that the marketplace should not dictate national security policy. He said an oil import fee that would bolster prices to around $26 per barrel would be the most effective tool.

"But don't be frightened," he told the crowd gathered at the forum. "A time of crisis is a time of opportunity."

Artesia Mayor Robert Jamison said that Fierro's efforts to take care of Barbiani were "truly extraordinary" and that his volunteer efforts to drive the man to California provided a humane solution to a "complex interstate dilemma."

Artesia City Council recently sent a plaque and letter of commendation to Fierro for his efforts, commending him for "outstanding humanitarianism."

Stuntmen to perfrom with 'Joie Chitwood Thrill Show'

From Staff Reports

"Miami Vice" continues to be one of the most highly rated shows on television. A reason for the success is the popularity of high speed automotive chase and crash scenes. Some of the stuntmen who are involved in these action sequences will be performing with the Joie Chitwood Thrill Show at the Twin Cities Speedway, Highway 80 West, at 8:30 p.m. today.

Founded by race car driver Joie Chitwood, Sr., the show is now in its 43rd year. Chitwood's sons, Tim and Joie, Jr. each stars in and manages his own unit. During their 1986 season, the Chitwoods will present their stunt show at fairs and speedways in 40 states.

Featured in the thrill show with the Chitwoods will be Todd Seeley, a motorcycle stuntman whose current work includes scenes in "Miami Vice."

Whenever the public sees motorcycle stunts, on "Miami Vice," they are performed by Seeley. He has performed in numerous episodes this season. In one sequence, he wheelied, or rode on the rear wheel of his motorcycle up two flights of stairs and crashed into a set of double doors. Seeley then flipped over backwards, motorcycle and all. In another episode, he raced one of the show's other motorcycle stuntmen from the top to bottom of a forty story parking garage. This feat looked so good on film, according to a spokesman of the Chitwood show, that the show's producers are submitting it for special television stunt honors.

Joie Chitwood, Jr. also goes to Miami to work on some of the more difficult stunts required for "Miami Vice."

Admission is $6.50 for adults, children 11 and under are free.

Automobile racing is held each Friday night at Twin Cities Speedway through October. In addition, the first in a series of demolition derbies, sponsored by the Midland Suburban Lions Club, is set for 8:30 p.m. July 19.

SUITS

But state Rep. Bill Messer, who is leaving the Legislature to lobby for tort reform, said Mattox' attack on the insurance industry is political. He said Mattox is trying to protect trial lawyers, who represent injured people in tort cases.

"He has been a trial lawyer, he has been supported by trial lawyers every time he's run for office," Messer said. "You can look at his (campaign) financial reports and he is the spokesman for the trial lawyers.

"And there is nobody, there is no group in Texas," Messer said, "that has a more direct, personal, narrow economic interest in maintaining the status quo of the tort system as the Texas Trial Lawyers Association."

Mattox' figures showing a 3.3-percent increase in personal injury cases include automobile coverage and other personal lines of coverage that people on both sides agree is not part of the crisis.

Messer said the 3.3 percent figure would be much higher without personal coverage included, because the ones paying skyrocketing rates are corporations and their directors, cities, day care centers and law and engineering firms.

Mattox also renewed a running fued with State Board of Insurance Chairman Lyndon Olson, who was in Houston Friday and could not be reached for comment.

Mattox said the insurance board's ongoing analysis of tort cases and their effects on insurance payouts — called a closed-claim study — is faulty and will not provide any meaningful data.

Refering to the board's study, Mattox said, "If they're purposely trying to design a study that will not work, they are accomplishing that fact, unfortunately."

Insurance Board member David Thornberry said Mattox is "totally inaccurate" and maintained that the closed-claim study will give the board a good sample of payout trends in the insurance industry.

Thornberry also hinted that Mattox' attack on the board's study may be politically motivated. "General Mattox is running for office this year, and I'm sure he'll run for office again, so politics is always a possibility," he said.

FIRE

Plant spokesman Bill Gruer said the fire was the first major fire the plant has had in "many years" and said the fire was under control an hour after it started.

"No one was injured, thankfully," Gruer said outside the facility which employs 700 workers. "The fire is in what is called a controlled burnout; we're just going to slowly let itself burn out. It should be out by (this)morning."

When he left the scene around 8 p.m. Friday, Decker said officials were injecting nitrogen into the vessel to try and force the remaining propylene from it. He said the concern with a propylene fire is its flammability, not intense heat or toxic fumes.

"What we did with the fire was surround it at three positions, and put water on it. You keep everything you can on it to keep it cool until it burns itself out."

Decker said when firefighters arrived a snorkel truck was deployed at one position. Two other trucks, each with a larger mounted hose pouring 1,200 gallons of water per minute on the fire, were set around the reactor area.

Gruer said there was a shift change at the plant at 3:30 p.m. Friday, but did not know how many workers were in the immediate area when the fire broke out.

He said workers at the plant would begin the clean-up effort as soon as possible. Gruer said the plant would probably be shut down for several days, and said the arrival of Texas Air Control Board and Texas Water Commission employees was routine for this type of incident.

The show will be in two divisions: Open and Invitational.

Open-show events will include roping, breakaway roping and team roping.

Invitational events will include halter, Western pleasure, Western horsemanship, Western riding and speed events, including pole bending, barrel racing and stakes race.

Judging the show will be Charlie Hemphill of Coleman.

Sheriff's Office reports Greenwood school vandalism

From Staff Reports

The Midland County Sheriff's Office reported Friday $4,000 in damage to the Greenwood High School by vandals who spray painted the school's buildings and doors early Friday morning.

Sam Martin, who lives on the school property near the intersection of Farm to Market roads 307 and 1379, told officers his wife had seen several pairs of headlights near the school around 2 a.m.

Items worth $6,700 were reported taken from Triple M Machine Shop, 10000 County Road 129 West, between 6:30 p.m. Thursday and 7 a.m. Friday.

Mike Smith told officers the suspect apparently entered by breaking glass on the south door of the business. The items taken were not specified in the report.

In other reports, $140 was taken from Wallace Grocery, at the corner of U.S. Highway 80 and State Highway 1130, in a burglary. James Wallace told authorities $50, $65 in coins, and $25 in pennies were taken.

Galveston council refuses to hold straw vote concerning gambling

GALVESTON (AP) — City Council members have refused a request by supporters of legalized casinos to hold another straw vote to see if residents have changed their minds about allowing gambling, the mayor said.

During a council meeting Thursday, no council member asked to place the issue on the Aug. 9 ballot without voter petitions.

In a January 1984 straw vote, residents rejected by a nearly 2-to-1 margin legalizing gambling. But members of Businessmen Encouraging Tourism told council members the city's economy has worsened since 1984 and they believe residents of this coastal community may have changed their minds on the issue.

Mayor Jan Coggeshall said that even if the group submitted petitions forcing a straw vote, there is no time under city charter provisions to get the issue on the August ballot.

"I feel that we made that statement (on gambling) in 1984," Ms. Coggeshall said. "This community had an election and it was expensive and the turnout was overwhelmingly against it."

But Sam Clark, a liquor store owner and leader of the group, said lawyers have said the issue could be included on the August ballot and warned the council that his group might initiate court action.

Houston AIDS case diagnosed

HOUSTON (AP) — A third case of heterosexually acquired AIDS was reported this week in Houston involving a 58-year-old woman whose only sexual contact had been with her former husband, officials said.

The ex-husband tested positive for the AIDS virus antibody, but he has shown no symptoms of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, officials said.

In the city Health and Human Services Department's June AIDS Information Update, officials note that it is believed the woman's ex-husband "acquired his infection through heterosexual contact from someone other than his ex-wife."

The case seems to contradict the hypothesis of some researchers who maintain female to male transmission of the disease is impossible.

But public health officials, including those in Houston, have said they think prostitutes are a source for the disease and could spread it into the general population.

In the Houston area, 15 women have been confirmed as victims of AIDS, which attacks the body's immune system. More than 93 percent of AIDS cases in the area have occurred in homosexual men.

Afghanis to get medical treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two dozen Afghanis freedom fighters injured in their struggle against Soviet soldiers will get free medical treatment in Texas hospitals, U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson said Friday.

The 23 adults and one child were to arrive at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport this afternoon and go on to the University of Texas at Arlington Medical Center for diagnosis, the Lufkin Democrat said.

From there, they will be moved to various Dallas-Fort Worth area hospitals "that have graciously agreed to take them for nothing," he said.

Nine Afghani children began treatment in Houston under the program Wilson said his staff developed with the donated aid of the U.S. Air Force, various airlines and Texas hospitals.

"Most of the children's injuries are from booby-trapped toys the Russians brought in," he said. "Most of the adults need orthopedic surgery before they can be fitted with artificial limbs."

Church worried about lifejacket shortage

FORT WORTH (AP) — Church officials said Friday they are concerned that there was a shortage of lifejackets on a paddle boat that snagged on a Trinity River spillway with preschoolers from the church day care center aboard.

The minister of the Overton Park Methodist Church, the Rev. Richard Millsap, has said he will file a complaint over a lack of safety measures on the boat. Operators also failed to put lifejackets on the children before the boat ride.

"We are concerned that if the ride's going to continue that it be made safe. That would be our goal in filing a complaint or anything," said Debby Boma, director of the day care center at the church.

"We're not terribly angry or out to get anybody but we sure would like to prevent it from happening again if we could," she said.

Jerry Charles Starnes, manager of the River Ridge Family Fun Center, which is owned by his family, agreed Friday that the boat was operating in violation of safety regulations.

"We had some jackets on the boat and some cushions," he said. Starnes said there were enough jackets for the 14 children but not enough for the adults. He said the boat had been vandalized and the jackets may have been taken then.

The law requires approved flotation devices for everyone aboard.

Starnes said his family has operated the party boat company for about eight years without incident.

Despite the life jacket law, Capt. Carlos Baca of the state parks department said it is unlikely that citations would be issued in this case because game wardens have to witness violations. Citations carry a possible fine of $200.

Baca's department enforces the Texas Water Safety Act on Texas lakes and rivers.

The excursion boat, a gaily decorated craft called the Luv Boat, will be dry-docked for a least a week for repairs, its skipper said.

No one was injured in the episode, which occurred at about noon Thursday near Forest Park in south Fort Worth.

A firefighter swam to the boat with ropes that were attached to a nearby railroad bridge, keeping the craft from being swept over a 15-foot drop at a Trinity River spillway. Then firefighters in smaller boats took the passengers to safety.

River Ridge, which operates the Luv Boat, also rents paddleboats, canoes and bicycles from a headquarters near the South University Street bridge.

Officials of the water control district that leases the property to the River Ridge operation said they are considering rewriting the center's lease to include more safety requirements.

Heart transplant recipients to exchange wedding vows

NATION

ST. LOUIS (AP) — When Susan Steffy and Gary Welp exchange wedding vows, there will be plenty of love flowing through their hearts — thanks in large part to doctors at The University Hospital.

The marriage Saturday will apparently be the first in the nation for two heart transplant recipients.

"If somebody had told me about this a year ago, I'd have said they were crazy. But we just fell in love," said Welp, 35, who in January 1984 received the heart of a Kansas City teen-ager who died in a car accident.

Ms. Steffy, 36, received a heart donated by the family of a 16-year-old Indiana girl in 1983. She said her wedding at the Logan Street Baptist Church, in her hometown of Mount Vernon, Ill., promises to be an interesting affair.

"We're going to have about 100 guests and we'll need room for all the reporters and television cameras," she said.

"But I'm all for it," she added. "It might help someone who is going to go through a transplant. We hope it shows them that you're not handicapped after the surgery. You shouldn't give up on life."

Among the guests will be the heart transplant team and nurses from the hospital in St. Louis and other heart transplant recipients from a support group.

Ms. Steffy has also invited the mother of 16-year-old Elaine Fisher — whose heart gave her a second chance in life.

Shirley Fisher of Gas City, Ind., said she had accepted the invitation.

"I'm looking forward to the wedding," she said Thursday. "Susan and I have talked quite a bit on the phone, but we've never met each other.

"I wanted to extend to them my congratulations," she said, "but I wanted to do it in person."

Mrs. Fisher said she burst into tears after hearing about the marriage.

"Susan told me Saturday would never have been if it wasn't for the heartfelt gift," she said. "I'm so happy for her, and I know Elaine has given not only life, but new love to someone."

John Schwent, a spokesman for the hospital where the operations were performed, said he had checked with other transplant centers in the country and found no other heart transplant patients who had married each other.

"We're pretty certain that this is the first time this has happened," he said.

The couple met through a heart transplant support group organized by the hospital.

"We were both married to other people at the time," Welp said. "Later on, Susan began having serious marital problems and my own marriage was not working out. We met again at a picnic and really got to talking. She told me she had been divorced and I told her I was about to get one."

Welp said they exchanged phone numbers at the picnic.

"I never thought in my wildest imagination at that time that this would happen," he said.

Welp said the two became very close after he drove the 60-mile trip east to Mount Vernon to visit Ms. Steffy's mother, who was dying of cancer.

"When she saw the two of us together, she kind of rested and said, 'I'm ready now. Everything's going to be OK,'" Welp said. "That was the last time she was fully conscious. She died three days later."

Welp proposed in January.

"I shed a few tears before I accepted. I was so happy," Ms. Steffy said.

Welp, a cab driver in St. Louis, and Ms. Steffy, a reading tutor, live active lives. He played softball on a team of heart transplant recipients who took on the Barnes Hospital medical staff earlier this month in St. Louis. Ms. Steffy rides a bicycle.

The couple spent Thursday moving into their second-floor apartment in south St. Louis, where they will live with Ms. Steffy's daughters, Tiffani, 11, and Jamie, 8.

And Ms. Steffy said she wouldn't trade places with anyone.

"Life has changed for us quite a bit," she said. "I love every minute of it."

When Susan Steffy and Gary Welp exchange wedding vows today they will be the first known heart transplant recipients to marry.

Three patients die of Legionnaire's disease

Associated Press

At least four patients at a Connecticut hospital contracted Legionnaires' disease, and three of them have died, health authorities said Friday.

The deaths occurred in the last two months, while a fourth patient remains in the Hospital of St. Raphael in New Haven, said Dr. Norman Marieb, executive vice president and chief operating officer.

Meanwhile, in Norco, Calif., eight municipal workers underwent treatment for symptoms of Legionnaires' disease after they became ill during repair work on a broken water line.

And in La Plata, Md., health officials said Friday they had exhumed the bodies of two people Thursday as part of an investigation into possible cases of Legionnaires' disease.

At the Connecticut hospital, 25 patients were moved from one wing Thursday, Marieb said. A pipe that feeds hot water probably harbors bacteria that causes the disease, he said.

Health officials suspect that four patients may have caught Legionnaires' disease. Marieb said the three people who died all had serious illnesses before catching Legionnaires' and he did not know if the disease had contributed to their deaths.

Marieb and hospital President Robert Beeman spoke at a news conference on Friday afternoon. They emphasized that they have only been able to make a "tenuous association" between the disease and the hospital as a place to catch it.

In Norco, the eight men treated had worked in or near a water-filled ditch in a sparsely populated area of the Riverside County community, 45 miles east of Los Angeles.

"It's a fairly strong presumption that it is Legionnaires' disease," said Dr. Michael Finney of neighboring Corona.

Dr. David Dassey, chief of Riverside County disease control, said the outbreak does not pose a general health threat.

"It is not a communicable disease," he said. "It's an environmentally acquired disease." Dassey said it was unlikely that the water source at the site was contaminated.

Both Finney and Dassey said results of blood tests — expected in two weeks — could confirm the diagnosis.

In La Plata, Debbie Boswell said her brother, Edward Boswell, had given permission for the exhumation of the body of his wife. Rita Josephine Boswell, 44, was originally identified as a suspected victim of Legionnaires' disease, but tests so far have proved negative.

Legionnaire's disease was confirmed to have stricken Mary Brown, 61, who died last month. Her body also was exhumed.

A rash of pneumonia cases in Charles County last month led health officials to believe that there had been an outbreak of Legionnaires' disease. But state health officials said Monday they were still only able to confirm the presence of the disease in one person.

Rescuers free teen wedged in mine shaft

DURANGO, Colo. (AP) — Rescuers with drills on Friday freed a teenager wedged in an 18-inch mine shaft overnight and a man who became stuck while trying to pull the youth to safety.

"It's nice to see the sunlight," said Thad Scheer, 17, as he emerged at midmorning from the cave where he became trapped 12 hours earlier.

Scheer and Keith Dahl, 25, were treated for exposure and a lack of oxygen from the poor air inside the cavern, said Jane Brown of Mercy Hospital, where both were hospitalized in satisfactory condition.

Dahl suffered a broken neck when he passed out inside the cavern and fell, said Jane Brown of Mercy Hospital. He was under observation in the intensive care unit because of fluid in his lungs, she said.

The rescue ended a 12-hour ordeal in which more than 100 people from 16 agencies and 10 local contractors tried to rescue the pair, said Sgt. Dan Bender of the La Plata County Sheriff's Department.

Scheer became wedged deep in the cave about 9:30 p.m. Thursday when, about 100 yards from the entrance, he slid 10 feet down the shaft.

A mine rescue crew from Silverton arrived at the site about 2 a.m. Friday, and about an hour later one of the rescuer workers slid head-first into the shaft, Bender said.

Former lawmaker from Idaho begins serving prison sentence

PETERSBURG, Va. (AP) — Former Rep. George Hansen surrendered Friday at a minimum-security federal prison camp to begin serving a five-to-15 month sentence for falsifying financial disclosure statements.

Hansen, a conservative Idaho Republican convicted in April 1984, arrived at the Petersburg Federal Prison Camp 26 minutes before the 3 p.m. deadline, said prison spokesman Jack Atherton.

The camp, which holds about 200 inmates in a single building consisting of one- and two-man cubicles, is about 20 miles south of Richmond.

"There are no bars or grills that you would associate with a penitentiary, but they are not free to come and go as they please," Atherton said.

The camp is outside the perimeter fence of the Federal Correctional Institution-Petersburg, a maximum-security prison which holds 700 inmates.

Back in Idaho, some of his Republican supporters were circulating a petition at the state GOP convention in Pocatello, urging President Reagan to free Hansen pending the resolution of his appeals.

The petition, not authorized by party leaders, told Reagan that Hansen was "one of your biggest supporters in the entire House of Representatives, who is now fighting the biggest battle of his life."

Atherton said the camp inmates are assigned to a furniture refinishing workshop or to general maintenance work. He said Hansen would be given an interim assignment, pending completion of classification and medical screening.

George Hansen

Hansen's bid to remain free ended Wednesday, when a federal judge reversed her earlier decision to temporarily stay the prison sentence pending further appeals.

Hansen, 55, the only sitting congressman convicted under the Ethics in Government Act, blasted the judicial system and the timing of U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green's ruling.

"It was stunning, not just to me, but to members of the Senate staff who were there observing, to the media that was there," he told The Idahoan of Moscow, Idaho, from his Washington office.

He also noted that his wife Connie broke her leg Thursday when she tripped near their Arlington home.

"In having to hurry, she stepped off a curb and broke her leg," Hansen said.

Hansen wanted additional time to appeal Green's denial of his request for a new trial. Earlier appeals of Hansen's conviction failed before the U.S. Court of Appeals and the U.S. Supreme Court.

He was convicted of failing to disclose more than $330,000 in loans and profits on commodities transactions, some of them involving Texas billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt.

The former congressman has alleged selective prosecution by the Justice Department in retaliation for his campaign to reign in its power and influence along with that of the Internal Revenue Service and other federal agencies. He claimed other congressmen have acted in the same manner as he has yet have never been prosecuted.

Hansen lost his seat after 14 years in November 1984 to freshman Democrat Richard Stallings by 170 votes out of more than 202,000 cast.

Mrs. Hansen lost a bid earlier this year for the GOP nomination for the seat.

Female guerrilla dies when mortar shell explodes

LIMA, Peru (AP) — A woman guerrilla tried to fire a mortar shell at a building where the Socialist International began its annual meeting Friday but the weapon exploded and killed her, police said.

The attempted attack came a day after police and troops retook three prisons in or near Lima, leaving at least 250 inmates dead following an uprising by guerrilla prisoners.

In another development, the prime ministers of Italy and Norway canceled their plans to attend the Socialist International congress because of security fears.

Police said the attempt to fire a shell from a homemade mortar at the convention center occurred a few minutes before President Alan Garcia arrived to open the four-day Socialist International meeting.

The woman had climbed to the roof of a 10-story building overlooking the convention center, and was killed instantly when the device exploded, according to police.

They said about 30 minutes later, three bombs exploded simultaneously in a cafe across the street from the Crillon Hotel that is on the same block as the convention center, at a restaurant five blocks away and on a streetcorner behind the convention center. No casualties were reported.

Security officials said two more bombs were discovered and defused behind the hotel, which was filled with convention delegates and reporters.

More than 100 uniformed policemen armed with submachine guns and automatic rifles surrounded the convention center block after the explosions and a police helicopter made low sweeps over the area.

A day earlier, police and troops retook control of Lima's Lurigancho prison, the Santa Barbara women's prison in Lima's port of Callao and El Fronton prison on a barren island off Callao. The uprisings began Wednesday, government officials reported the casualty figures.

The prisoners were believed to be members of Shining Path, a Maoist guerrilla group that has been fighting, which has been fighting Peruvian governments since 1980.

More than 400 Socialist International delegates are in Lima to attend the organization's 17th meeting since it was founded in 1951, and the first in Latin America.

Fears of guerrilla violence were took a toll on attendance.

Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland of Norway, who was in Caracas, Venezuela on Friday, and Prime Minister Bettino Craxi of Italy canceled out for security reasons, officials with their governments said.

The Venezuelan Foreign Ministry said Denmark's prime minister, Uffe Elleman-Jensen, would be on the same flight back to Norway with Mrs. Brundtland after a four-day official visit to Caracas.

A spokesman for Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson of Sweden announced two weeks ago that he would be absent for security reasons. Carlsson's predecessor, Olof Palme, was shot to death on a Stockholm street Feb. 28 and the killer has not been found.

Tight security has been clamped on downtown Lima for the last week.

Dozens of police formed cordons around major hotels and cars were diverted away from them onto sidestreets, causing huge traffic jams.

Soldiers patrolled in armored personnel carriers equipped with machine guns. Police with bomb-sniffing dogs were stationed where delegates and their assistants were staying.

Police set up security checks on major Lima streets, stopping vehicles and checking documents.

The Socialist International groups socialist and social democratic parties from 77 countries, mainly in Europe and Latin America. Its president is Willy Brandt, former chancellor of West Germany, who is to address the conference.

Former President Carlos Andres Perez of Venezuela told reporters the meeting would focus on the Third World debt crisis, regional development and disarmament.

Poland accuses U.S. diplomat of espionage

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Polish government on Friday accused a U.S. diplomat of espionage and said he received information from a Pole arrested on charges of passing military intelligence to the United States.

The diplomat was identified by the official PAP news agency as Stephen Donald Mull, a second secretary in the political section of the U.S. Embassy who has been based in Poland for two years.

PAP's report said Mull was a "staffer of U.S. intelligence known for his 'extra-diplomatic' interests and lively contacts with the anti-state opposition in Poland."

Reports by PAP and state television did not say whether Mull would be expelled. Paul Smith, a press officer at the embassy in Warsaw, said he had no comment.

PAP identified the arrested Pole as Bogdan Charyton, and said he was a 44-year-old Warsaw physiotherapist charged with spying for the United States. Charyton passed on political and military intelligence beginning in 1981 while he was abroad, the agency said.

In an interview broadcast on state television, a man identified as Charyton acknowledged meeting Mull in Warsaw. The report showed the man identifying Mull's photograph.

"I recognize this gentleman, this is Steve Mull," the man said while pointing to the photograph. "I have met him twice. The third meeting did not take place."

PAP said Mull had contacts with two advisers to Solidarity founder Lech Walesa — the Rev. Henryk Jankowski and Bronislaw Geremek — and Jacek Leskow, a mathematician and former member of the Solidarity students union.

Since the arrest of Solidarity underground leader Zbigniew Bujak on May 31, the government has leveled several allegations against the United States, claiming Washington received secrets from the leaders of the outlawed union.

Earlier this month, the communist authorities claimed that a senior Polish military official, now in the United States, informed Washington about plans for martial law in late 1981 and that the United States failed to warn Solidarity.

The State Department denied the Reagan administration knew in advance that martial law would be declared.

Martial law was imposed on Dec. 13, 1981, and the independent Solidarity trade union was suspended. The organization was later outlawed and martial law was lifted in 1983.

Friday night's television report broadcast videotape of man it said was Mull meeting in a street with a man it identified as Leskow and receiving a small package. The tape appeared to have been filmed clandestinely.

It also broadcast separate photographs of Mull with Jankowski and Geremek.

PAP said "documents related to the person of S.D. Mull" and illegal publications were found in Leskow's apartment in the southern city of Wroclaw. It said Leskow applied for an emigration visa to the United States and "was already in possession of a U.S. visa promise."

In the broadcast, the man identified as Charyton said, "Mull is interested in all underground movement, resistance, activities of the underground."

The reports did not give a date of Charyton's arrest. The television report said the military prosecutor's office provided the film of purportedly of Charyton and Mull.

Walesa, meanwhile, received a summons to appear for questioning Tuesday at the Gdansk Provincial Interior Ministry office, his wife said.

Doctor says you're never too old to learn music

ENTERTAINMENT

CHICAGO (AP) — There is no such thing as being too young or too old to participate in music, says Dr. Frank R. Wilson, a neurologist and assistant clinical professor of neurology at the University of California School of Medicine, San Francisco.

"Humans are 'born musicians,'" he says, "because we all have the neurological and muscular capability to develop musical skills."

Wilson, who is also a special consultant to the American Music Conference based in Chicago, is a leading authority on the relationship between the brain and an individual's capacity to play a musical instrument.

He first became interested in music and its connection to neuromuscular control when he noticed his daughter's progress on the piano. "I realized that a remarkable physical and mental evolution was taking place in her which I couldn't account for," he says.

After several years of reviewing results of research on the brain's control of skilled movement and concluding that virtually everyone has the potential for developing musical skills, Wilson began taking piano lessons at the age of 40.

"I felt terribly clumsy during the first few months, but knew that I should see results by the end of the first year," he says. "I wasn't disappointed."

Another of Wilson's conclusions, discussed in his recently published book, "Tone Deaf and All Thumbs?: an Invitation to Music-Making for Late Bloomers and Non-Prodigies," is that there is "very little to distinguish the serious musician from the serious athlete."

The only difference between the two from a physical standpoint, he says, is that musicians are developing the smaller muscles of the body — especially those of the hands and mouth — and that they rely on their hearing more than on their vision.

"The one difference that really does count is the effect of age," he says. "Time is on the musicians' side. They can look forward to continued maturation and refinement of their skills well beyond the age at which even the most durable football or basketball player has retired to the sidelines.

"The key to success in musical studies, as in sports, is having the right goals," he explains. "When the music student starts with his or her hopes fixed on immediately sounding like a professional, that attitude will be defeating. If the students are compelled by the knowledge that as they continue practicing they are reaching new limits and can share the experience with others such as in a band or group lessons, they are more likely to succeed.

"If they play a different piece more smoothly than before or move on to something even more challenging, that becomes a very valuable reward for their study.

"Time spent learning a musical instrument is never wasted," Wilson points out. "Musical experience easily transfers to other structured learning situations and can provide a powerful model for self-paced learning, mental concentration, memory skills, muscular development and more."

No matter at what age they start learning, Wilson believes that instrumental students will get the most enjoyment and long-lasting rewards if they remember these three points:

— Slow progress is the way it works. No matter how leisurely you progress in your musical studies, time is on your side.

— You can't fail. You are the only judge of the music you play and whatever you gain, it's the right thing for you.

— The best reason of all for playing music is because it's fun. Becoming a virtuoso shouldn't necessarily be your goal.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Government may take action against monks

RANGOON, Burma (LAT) — Burmese Buddhist monks with a taste for movies, the theater and soccer matches will now risk stern action by the government if they continue in their unpriestly conduct, it was reported Friday.

A decision made by the Central Buddhist Monks Organization, currently meeting in Rangoon, said that moral pressure alone had been found ineffective to stop aberrant monks from going to shows and football matches, or soliciting alms and resorting to violence, and so the temporal power — the state — should step in and take action.

The 300-member organization was set up in 1980 under the auspices of the government to ensure the doctrinal purity of Buddhism, enforce discipline among the monkhood and eliminate from it the aberrant and the fake.

Under what are called Vinayas, a Buddhist monk has to observe 227 strict rules of priestly discipline, which include renouncing mundane pleasures of all sorts.

Despite the rules, monks watching soccer matches or enjoying theatrical or cinema shows have been a common sight in Burma, particularly in big cities like Rangoon and Mandalay.

Cuban helicopters collide

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Two helicopters collided during army maneuvers in Cuba, killing 12 soldiers, the Cuban government news agency reported Friday.

Prensa Latina, in a dispatch monitored in Mexico City, quoted an army communique reprinted in the newspaper Granma as saying the accident occurred during military exercises near Havana. It said the maneuvers were designed to protect against "surprise air-tactical landings of the enemy."

The news agency said combat planes also took part in the exercises, but it did not say when the crash occurred.

Mexico won't be meeting

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government will not take part in the next meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Yugoslavia, the government news agency Notimex said Friday.

It quoted the Energy Department as saying the meeting, scheduled to begin June 25, is only for member countries.

Mexico, the world's fourth largest producer of oil, is not a member of OPEC but regularly attends its meetings to keep abreast of developments in the oil cartel.

Pakistani anti-aircrat gunners hit Afghan jet

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistan anti-aircraft gunners hit but did not down an intruding Afghan MiG-23 jet fighter during two border attacks launched by Afghanistan, the Pakistan government said Friday.

Pakistan's Ministry of Foreign Affairs said in a statement that five Pakistani soldiers were injured in the Afghan attacks Wednesday. A strong protest was made to the Afghan charge d'affaires, it said.

The Afghan Embassy in Islamabad said it had no comment on the Pakistani statement.

It was the second time in a month that Pakistan reported engaging intruding Afghan aircraft. Pakistan said its air force shot down an Afghan jet May 17.

Meanwhile, Moslem guerrillas fighting the Soviet-backed Afghan government said Friday they had captured parts of the west Afghan city of Herat and more than 30 government security posts around the city.

The guerrilla officials have been reliable in the past, but their report could not be independently verified. Afghanistan rarely admits Western journalists.

The Pakistan statement said six Afghan MiG-23 jets flew four miles into Pakistan near Arandu and fired five rockets and dropped 10 bombs. It said two Pakistani civilians and an Afghan refugee were injured and three civilian vehicles were damaged.

Prosecutor says two defendants in Achille hijack trial made threats

GENOA, Italy (AP) — Two Palestinians charged with hijacking the Achille Lauro cruise ship shouted angrily in Arabic from their courtroom cages Friday, causing the prosecutor to pale and rush out. "They have made threats," he told reporters.

Judge Lino Monteverde hastily adjourned the day's trial session of 15 men charged in the two days of terror aboard the Italian liner last October during which 383 people were held hostage and a 69-year-old invalid American was killed. Only five of the defendants are in custody.

Prosecutor Luigi Carli refused to say whether the threats were directed at the court. The Arabic-language reporter appointed by the court, clearly nervous, refused requests for a translation.

Security measures were strictly enforced at the courtroom, a bunker-like chamber built under a courthouse in this northern port city. They include searches with X-ray and metal-detecting devices, and a bomb-sniffing dog was added Friday.

Increased emphasis on security followed a report Thursday by the Italian news agency ANSA that its Beirut office received an anonymous telephone call threatening reprisals if the Achille Lauro defendants are convicted.

Three court police grabbed Youssef Magid al-Molqi and tried to make him sit down in his steel-barred cage when he began screaming at Ahmad Marrouf al-Assadi, who was testifying in front of the judge's bench.

Assadi, who has cooperated with authorities, is accused of being one of four young Palestinians who seized the Achille Lauro near Port Said, Egypt, on Oct. 7.

He stuck by his pre-trial statements to prosecutors, angering Molqi and Ibrahim Fatayer Abdelatif, the third accused hijacker involved in the trial, who have repudiated their pre-trial testimony.

The fourth accused hijacker, Bassam al-Ashker, will be tried separately in juvenile court later because he was only 17 when the Palestinians seized the ship.

Molqi's outburst followed one by Abdelatif, who challenged Assadi's version of the hijacking.

"Carli, you are false! Assadi you are false!" Molqi screamed in Arabic from his cage. Abdelatif then resumed shouting, repeating Molqi's words.

An editor at RAI state television, which taped the courtroom testimony, said a private interpreter provided that translation.

He added, however, that the court microphone was turned off when Molqi and Abdelatif shouted the threats and no reliable translation was available.

Assadi told the court Friday that Molqi, the alleged pirate leader, also wanted to murder Leon Klinghoffer's wife after the American was killed and thrown overboard along with the wheelchair to which he was confined.

Court documents, including Molqi's pre-trial confession, say he shot Klinghoffer in the head and chest, then forced two crew members to dump the body into the sea. It washed ashore in Syria.

Assadi said he wept, embraced Klinghoffer's wife after he learned of the killing and told her "I wasn't involved."

Abdelatif testified earlier that the terrorists took over the ship because they feared a waiter who entered their cabin without knocking had become suspicious and would say something to authorities.

He and Molqi claim their original plan was to get off at Ashdod, Israel, the next port of call, and seize Israeli hostages.

Assadi told the court Friday that the waiter always knocked before entering.

Abdelatif then stood up, thrust his handcuffed hands partway through the bars and demanded that the court summon the waiter to testify. That began the first screaming bout.

Prosecutors say the hijackers planned to kill an American or British passenger every five minutes until Israel released 51 Palestinians jailed there.

Youth endures disease, says there's 'nothing he can't do'

By LINNEA SCHLOBOHM

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) — For every student who receives a high school diploma, graduation is a mark of accomplishment. For some, however, the achievement compares to scaling Mount Everest — to standing atop a mountain peak that at times seemed unreachable.

Kevin Hendon, who graduated last month from Ross S. Sterling High School, is one of those people.

He has cystic fibrosis and at 18 has already outlived many of his fellow sufferers of the inherited disease which clogs the lungs with mucus and ultimately makes breathing impossible.

Kevin Hendon is dying. He is also living — and doing it with determination and grand style.

When Kevin was diagnosed — at 17 months — of having CF, doctors told his parents that he would probably not live to school age.

Rather than accept what seemed like the inevitable, Ann and Jerry Hendon vowed to fight as hard as they could to keep Kevin alive.

In the process, the couple infused Kevin with an inner strength which today enables him to continue fighting and winning against incredible odds.

Every day of Kevin's life includes two or three periods of therapy and extensive doses of medication. He takes approximately 53 pills each day, 371 per week and 19,345 per year. He fights pain and bouts of depression.

During his four years of high school, Kevin was absent for more than one-fourth of the time, not including extended periods of hospitalization when he received homebound instruction.

"Living" has to be sandwiched in between being kept alive.

Yet, Kevin graduated in the top quarter of his class. He has also been a photographer for the student literary magazine, "Piece of Mind," and been named to Who's Who Among High School Students in America.

During his sophomore year, Kevin received the Key of Courage award from the RSS Key Club and this year was named as the school's recipient of the national "I Dare You" leadership award, which recognizes excellence in character, well-balanced personal development and leadership potential.

RSS Principal Ed Wachtel, who presented the award, said, "Kevin has been uplifting and motivating to all of us."

Wachtel said the "I Dare You" award recipient is nominated by faculty members and selected by a committee of teachers, counselors and assistant principals.

Normally, he said, approximately 20 students are nominated for the award. This year, however, Wachtel said Kevin was the almost unanimous choice of the RSS faculty.

Ann Hendon said she felt Kevin deserved some kind of recognition for the courage he has displayed throughout his high school years.

"I knew if there was an award he should get it. When it came true it was wonderful — gravy!" his mother said.

In raising a child with CF, Mrs. Hendon said there is a fine line between preserving life at any cost and maintaining "quality" life.

"When we first learned Kevin had CF we were devastated," she said. "But I guess we have a lot of bulldog tenacity."

Evidence that Kevin was absorbing his parents' determination surfaced early in his life. One day while driving the Baytown tunnel on the way to treatment in Houston, Mrs. Hendon said to her son, who was then in elementary school, "Does it bother you that you can't do what other kids do?"

His instant reply was, "There's not anything they can do that I can't."

Over the years Kevin has proved he can do plenty — and do it well.

His interest in photography began in the eighth grade. Although he photographs a wide range of subjects, sports photography interests him most.

"I'm good at it," he said.

During his sophomore year, a creative writing class was the catalyst for bringing out the poet in Kevin.

At first he was reluctant to share his poetry and once took many of his poems into the backyard and burned them — and act he now regrets.

No longer ashamed to call himself a poet, Kevin said he now has 150 poems stored on computer disks.

In addition to writing poetry, Kevin has developed an intense interest in music.

Forced by his illness to spend much of his life in the company of adults, Kevin said that in music he has found a force which ties him to his peers.

Boy throws classy paper

DENTON, Texas (AP) — In a parking lost filled with Chevys and Fords, pickups and vans, Volkswagon beetles and bicycles, David Stoelker's Cadillac limousine awaited him.

Stoelker, hum, that name doesn't ring a bell.

Stoelker. Is he a big-money businessman? No.

Well, he isn't a rock star or a movie star, either.

So, who is he?

He is a full-time seventh grader at Lake Dallas Middle School and a part-time carrier for The Denton Record-Chronicle.

Since when do seventh-grade paper boys rate 20-foot-long limos?

When they win contests, that's when. Back in March, Texas Independence Day to be exact, Shawn Reneau, the assistant manager of circulation at the Record-Chronicle, decided to do a spur-of-the-moment contest to boost the carriers' subscription sales.

"A note went out in their bundles that day," Reneau said. "We got approximately 80 started from 35 to 40 carriers that one evening. It was done in an hour-and-a-half."

Twelve-year-old Stoelker got the most. He phoned in eight new starts. His payoff was being chauffeured on his route for a day.

"I was going for the radio. I was hoping I would win this, but I didn't think I would. I thought there would be others that turned in more," the youngster said.

This is different, he said, getting ready to hurl a paper through the back window of the car.

"It's bigger. I usually get on my bike.

"I didn't know the papers were going to be prefolded," he said, but then his aunt usually has that done for him, he added.

"I'm not used to being picked up." Picked up by a limo, to boot. Usually he gets on his bike and heads to his home in the Darsco subdivision in Corinth. That housing development is in the last leg of his route that includes two other subdivisions west of Interstate 35.

There have also been few times when he has had a crowd watching him get on his bike. Some of the pupils at the middle school crowded outside one of the school's exits staring at the 1976 Cadillac limousine. They applauded and shouted praise as the chauffeur opened the door to let David in.

"All right, David," some of them yelled.

He doesn't think his celebrity at school will last, though. He said his instant popularity would be short-lived.

"They'll forget about it."

Still, he found the experience exciting.

"It was kinda neat," he said of his first time to ride in a limosine.

PACs more than money, catchy name

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's more to starting a political action committee than raising money. After all, a successful PAC must sound upbeat, have a name that inspires people to write checks.

A name like the Jimmy Carter Committee for a Greater America.

The former president isn't the draw he once was. His PAC, dormant for some time, doesn't rank as one of the big money committees registered with the Federal Election Commission. It began the year with a bank balance of $6.74 and it went $18.47 in the red when the bank hit it with $25.21 in service charges.

The Carter committee broke a cardinal rule of the PAC business — don't name your PAC after yourself.

PACs are fund-raising committees set up by politicians and political activists to channel contributions to candidates. Potential presidential candidates use them to gain favor with other politicians by giving them money collected by their PACs.

There's the Fund for America's Future, the Fund for Future Committee and the Committee for the Future of America.

One of the newest PACs is a classic example of the naming technique. It's called the Fund for All Americans.

It suggests it's for All Americans. Which gives a hint of the all-inclusive message of its sponsor, Gov. Thomas H. Kean of New Jersey.

A Republican, Kean won a landslide re-election victory in 1985 after a campaign in which he succeeded in winning support from many traditionally Democratic groups, including blacks and labor.

El Paso's John Gibbons tries to avoid the tag after Midland catcher David Heath dropped the throw from Raul Tovar in the third inning Friday to help the Diablos mount a three-run rally. The Angels lost, 7-2.

Angels lose first second half game

Merrifield, Walker play final game in Midland

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland fans had very little to cheer about Friday night against El Paso, losing a 7-2 Texas League decision to fall to 1-1 in the second half of the season.

Oh, there were a few hurrahs.

In the bottom of the fifth, the Angels snapped Diablo pitcher Dan Murphy's one-hit shutout with a two-out double by Jeff Schaefer followed by an RBI single from David Heath for a 7-1 score.

In the fifth, Raul Tovar cleared the Little Green Giant in center field for his second homer of the year, a solo shot for a 7-2 score.

In the eighth, when Billie Merrifield came to the plate, P.A. announcer Barry Sykes announced the Angel third baseman - along with outfielder Glen Walker - were following teammate Mark McLemore to the Class AAA Edmonton Trappers of the Pacific Coast League.

Like the McLemore promotion Sunday night, this turn of events isn't surprising. Both are hitting better than .300 and have shown their power capabilities. Walker leaves with 18 home runs and 74 RBI while Merrifield has seven homers and 49 RBI, including a grand slam on Thursday.

"THESE KIDS are doing their job," said Angel manager Joe Maddon. "All these people have good work ethics. As much as you hate to lose them, it's nice to see them go."

And, Midlanders hate to see them go as well.

"I'm not going to miss the Texas League but I will miss the people of Midland," said Merrifield, who is looking forward to flying to and from games in the PCL. "I'm not going to miss those 14-hour bus rides."

About the promotion, Merrifield said, "I guess the Angels felt it's time to make some changes, time to make some moves and that's what they're doing from the majors on down."

And, why the Angel shakeup?

"I don't know why they finished the first half 15 games out," said Merrifield. "They had to make some moves to try to help the ball club."

Merrifield, 24, is from Rocky Mount, N.C., and is in his third full season of professional baseball. He was drafted in 1983 out of Wake Forest. He was converted to a third baseman in the pros after playing his college years at shortstop.

WALKER IS returning to the league he came from last year, only with a different team. Last season the Angel outfielder was in the Seattle farm system before coming to Midland.

"I've played in that league more than any other league," said Walker, who is 28 and in his sixth season out of Washington State.

With his stats, Walker "thought I earned it. This was the best half I've ever had. I've never had one this good before. The extra BP and hard work paid off pretty well."

And, as to his chance at the Bigs when teams expand their rosters, Walker added, "If I do in the next half what I did this half, there shouldn't be much holding me back from the big club. However, it's not in my hands."

AGAINST THE Diablos, the team that kept Midland from the first half West Division title, things started off on shakey ground.

El Paso second baseman Bill Bates opened with a painful free ride to first when hit by a Don Timberlake pitch. After moving to second on a Steve Stanicek ground out, Bates scored on Lavell Freeman's single.

After a three-up, three-down second inning, the Diablos picked all the extra runs they'd need on three hits (two doubles), two walks and two Angel errors for a 4-0 lead.

A walk, triple by Robbie Allen, a single by Bates another walk and an RBI ground out by Jesus Alfaro put the game out of reach for the Angels, especially considering the way Murphy, 5-1, was pitching.

"Murphy always has a lot of stuff," said Maddon. "He has a good arm and is coming off the DL with no apparent side-effects. He's got a good fast ball and enough breaking ball to keep you honest."

A Diablo double play in the second inning wiped out the only base runner the Angels managed the first 4⅔ innings until Schaefer and Heath combined to put an end to Murphy's shutout.

For the Angels, Timberlake was hit solidly in the third inning, but could have escaped with little or no damage had it not been for two errors by Heath behind the plate and Doug Davis at third and a pair of wild pitches.

Heath's error cost a sure run, coming on a perfect Raul Tovar throw from center field to cut down John Gibbons at the plate. However, Heath couldn't hang on to the ball and Gibbons scored.

GAME NOTES — While the Angels were having trouble crossing home plate, it wasn't the fault of Tovar. The centerfielder was 3-for-4 on the night including his second homer of the year. Also at the plate, Heath was 2-for-4 and drove in the other run...For El Paso, Jesus Alfaro, who extended his hitting streak to 24 games with his double in the third, and Allen collected two hits...This was the 18th meeting of the year between the two clubs and the series is tied, 9-9...The loss, dropping Midland to 1-1 in the second half, snapped a three-game winning streak for the Angels and a three-game losing streak for El Paso, also 1-1...Diablo Alan Cartwright extended his hitting streak to 16 games...

White Sox fire Tony LaRussa

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox have fired Manager Tony LaRussa, team vice president Ken "Hawk" Harrelson said Friday, six weeks after management grudgingly gave LaRussa a vote of confidence.

It was "not a personality conflict but a baseball decision," said Harrelson, chief of baseball operations for the White Sox, who are in the midst of a tailspin.

"Nothing was happening," he said. "We have almost a hundred games to play and we feel we still have a chance to contend in our division. We feel we still can make a move."

LaRussa, who had cleared out his office earlier in the day, was not available for comment. He scheduled a Saturday news conference.

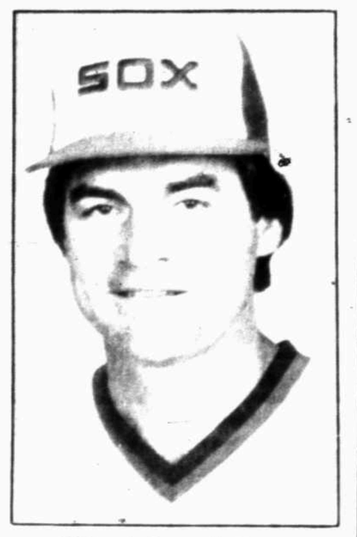

Harrelson named third-base coach Doug Rader interim manager at a Comiskey Park news conference prior to Friday night's game against Seattle. Rader, 41, formerly managed the Texas Rangers and was hired by the White Sox before the start of the season.

Harrelson would not say who was being considered as LaRussa's permanent replacement.

"I'm thinking of two guys," he said, but would not name names, telling reporters, "You guys taught me that."

Harrelson was on the verge of firing LaRussa last month, after the team got off to a bad start. He talked then to former New York Yankee Manager Billy Martin's agent and to Jim Fregosi, a former manager with the California Angels who now manages Louisville, the St. Louis Cardinals' top farm club.

Harrelson favors Fregosi, The Associated Press has learned, but he would finish the season with Rader if Fregosi were to turn down the job.

Chisox' Tony LaRussa
...ax finally falls

Fregosi told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Friday from Louisville that he had not been contacted by White Sox officials.

Harrelson announced he also has fired pitching coach Dave Duncan and replaced him with Dick Bosman, who held that job with the White Sox AAA team in Buffalo, N.Y.

"Nothing specific," Harrelson said of the decision to fire LaRussa. "I couldn't put the tail on the donkey. It was for no one single reason. It was the overall outlay.

He said the players' performance "did not indicate the talent involved."

Harrelson met with the players for about 10 minutes late Friday afternoon in what was called a "routine meeting."

Chicago doubles drama

CHICAGO (AP) — Most cities have to content themselves with one scalp when the local ballclub fails, but when a city has two major league franchises, fans get double the drama — two jobs are on the line.

It's rare, even in Chicago, for both jobs to turn over at almost the same time. But that's what happened Friday, as Chicago White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa joined his cross-town counterpart, former Cubs' Manager Jim Frey, on the unemployment line.

That gave this city the dubious distinction of having accounted for two-thirds of baseball's managerial firings so far this season. Seattle Mariners' skipper Chuck Cottier got axed May 7 and replaced by Dick Williams.

"If anything, I would think the fans in Chicago are more tolerant about their managers than elsewhere," said broadcaster Harry Caray, who formerly worked for the American League White Sox but has jumped leagues to handle the Cubs' National League games.

"I don't think they like the sight of blood. In fact, I'm sure they'd want nothing more than for their teams to win and for life to be beautiful in every other way," Caray said.

"But everybody knows what a manager's future is the day he's hired. The only thing he can look forward to is the day he's fired," he said. "And the way the teams play in Chicago sometimes, those days can run close together."

LaRussa posted a 523-510 record in his eight-year managerial career with the White Sox. His 1983 club won the AL West crown in a runaway — the club's first post-season title since 1959 — and earned him "Manager of the Year" accolades.

But this year's edition was 26-38 heading into Friday night's home game with the fifth-place Mariners. The White Sox were 8½ games behind Texas in the AL West.

Frey's crowning achievement came in 1984, when he guided the Cubs to the National League West title, their first of any kind since 1945.

But memories are for scrapbooks, not managers. Not in Chicago, anyway.

Frey was given his pink slip by General Manager Dallas Green last week on Friday the 13th. He was replaced by Gene Michael, who once managed the New York Yankees.

The Cubs had just come in from a 3-7 road trip and were 16½ games behind the National League East Division-leading New York Mets.

"Owners will never fire the owners, general managers will never fire the general managers, and no one will get rid of 25 ballplayers at once," said Caray. "Guess who that leaves?"

Hockey tickets selling fast as NHL takes look at Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Tickets are selling fast for a National Hockey League exhibition game that has been announced for Sept. 30 in Reunion Arena, and the promoter for the contest said a sellout crowd of almost 17,000 appears likely.

Although the match between the Edmonton Oilers and the Detroit Red Wings is only an exhibition, "The eyes of the hockey world will be on Dallas," said Brad Thomas, a promoter for Events, Inc., who worked for 2½ years to schedule the game.

"We're not doing this for any underlying reason, but you never know what might happen after that," Thomas said Thursday.

Thomas said his promotions group failed the last two years to get the Edmonton management to agree to play in Dallas. However, it was easy selling the city, he said.

Bias' death prompts investigation

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — While a stunned sports world awaited autopsy results on Len Bias, police said today the death of the University of Maryland basketball All-American is being treated as "suspicious" and a criminal investigation is underway.

Bias, 22, was reported to have used cocaine before he collapsed and died of an apparent heart attack in his dormitory room Thursday morning, less than two days after the NBA champion Boston Celtics selected him No. 2 overall in the college draft.

"The death of Len Bias is being treated as a suspicious death and a homicide investigation is under way. No further comments will be made until an autopsy report is complete," said Prince George's County police spokesman Ernest Riess.

County police also said homicide detectives still were interviewing Bias' friends, family and teammates, and campus police were assisting in the investigation.

Dr. John Smialek, chief state medical examiner, said on Thursday it would take several days to complete autopsy tests and that his office would not release a preliminary finding.

Smialek today did not return repeated telephone calls to his office.

Dr. Yale Kaplan, a toxicologist at the Maryland medical examiner's office, said Thursday night there might be more information today, but calls to his office today also were not returned.

Len Bias

The Boston Globe, in today's editions, quoted Celtics President Red Auerbach as saying Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell told him Bias probably used cocaine Thursday morning. The Baltimore Sun quoted medical and legal authorities as saying Bias may have had drugs — perhaps cocaine — in his system when he died.

Driesell answered no questions during an emotional news conference Thursday. Appearing on "Good Morning America" today, Driesell said, "I told him (Auerbach) that ... I understood from the police that there was a trace of cocaine in his urine."

Funeral services for Bias were set for 10:30 a.m. Monday at the University of Maryland Chapel. The service will be open only to family and friends. A tribute service was scheduled Monday night at Cole Field House where Driesell will give the eulogy.

The 6-foot-8 forward was pronounced dead at 8:50 a.m., EDT, at Leland Memorial Hospital in nearby Riverdale, after two hours of unsuccessful attempts to revive him. His body was shipped to the Maryland medical examiner's office in Baltimore for an autopsy.

Kaplan told The Associated Press on Thursday that "cocaine has multiple mechanisms that can cause death, either cardiac (heart) or pulmonary (lung) events, but it would not cause heart tissue damage."

Dr. Edward Wilson, chief of emergency services at Leland, said there was "major damage" to Bias' heart but "we don't know what caused the damage."

The Sun quoted Arthur A. Marshall Jr., the Prince George's County State's Attorney, and Dr. John Rogers, the deputy medical examiner for Prince George's and Montgomery counties, as saying that drugs, possibly cocaine, may have been found in Bias' system during the emergency rescue efforts at the hospital.

Marshall said a drug screen conducted on the body "indicates there may have been drugs," while Rogers was quoted as saying urine tests showed "a trace" of a by-product of a drug that could have been cocaine.

WBAL radio in Baltimore reported that Bias was given a drug called Lidocaine in attempt to revive him after he suffered from an apparent heart attack.

Dr. Brian Brown, a doctor at the University of Maryland hospital, said that the drug, which is often given to heart attack victims, is similar to cocaine and could have mistaken for cocaine during a cursory test.

County police spokesman Robert Law said it could take as long as a week to determine the exact cause of death.

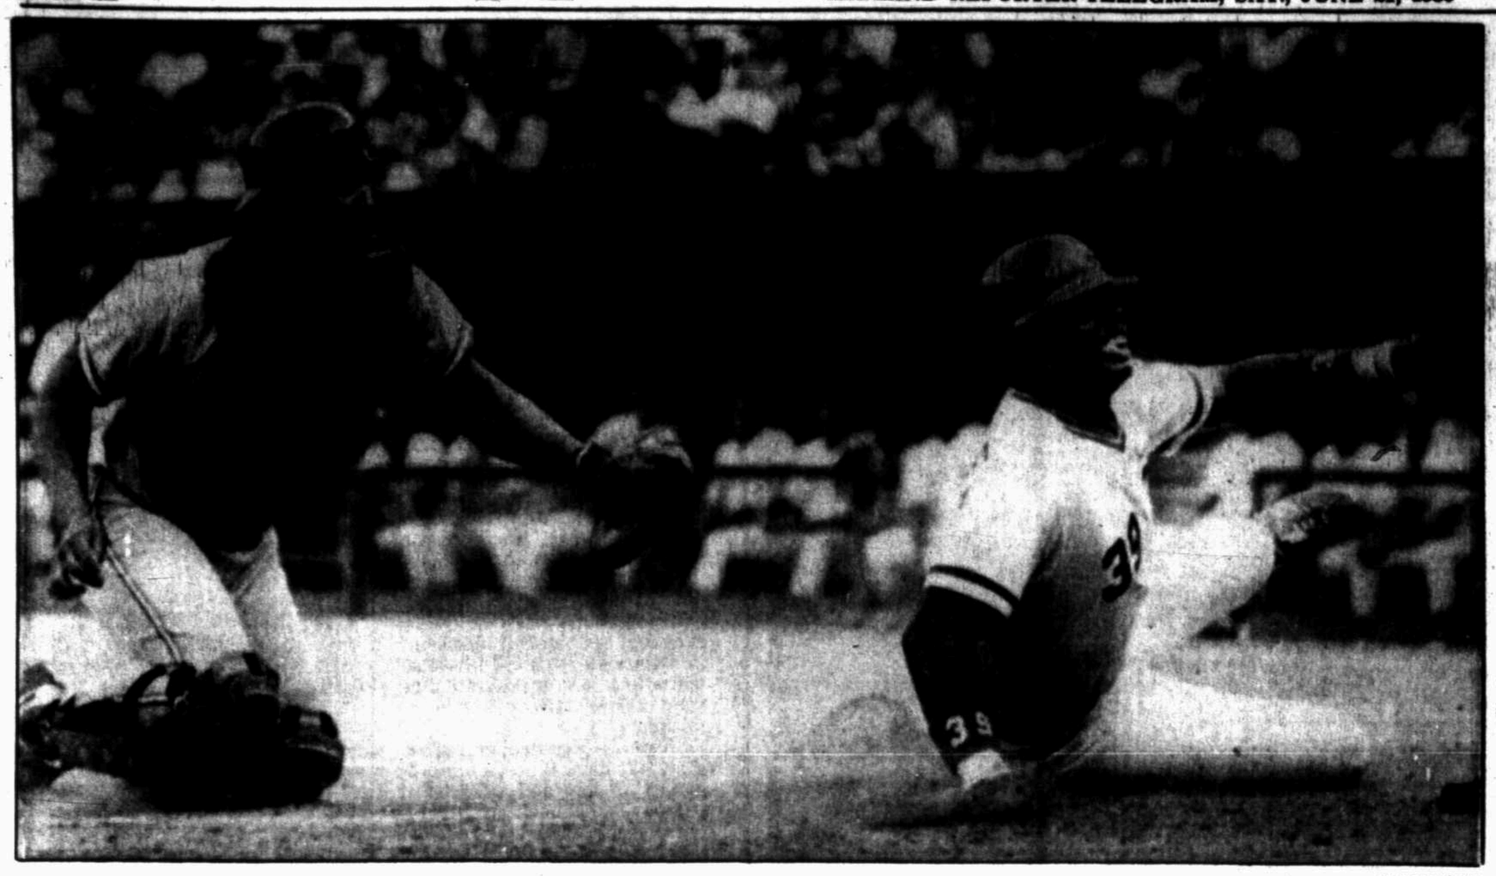

The Globe quoted Auerbach as saying Driesell told him that Bias probably used cocaine, perhaps for the first time, at a party Thursday morning.

Auerbach said Driesell called him Thursday afternoon to say authorities told him there were traces of cocaine in Bias' urine.

"He (Driesell) understood that Bias was out someplace, had a couple of beers with his friends and came back to the dormitory," Auerbach was quoted as saying. "Some guy, another student, joined the party and allegedly said, 'Come on, let's have a real celebration.' "

With that, the Globe said, the student allegedly produced the cocaine.

AL Roundup

Gary Ward hit a two-run, inside-the-park homer and Larry Parrish followed with a homer, capping a nine-run explosion in the second inning Friday night that carried the Texas Rangers over the Oakland A's 10-7.

Oakland lost its team-record 12th straight game on the road. Texas tied a club mark with its ninth consecutive victory at home.

The A's jumped to an early lead on Dave Kingman's two-run double his 16th, in the first inning and an RBI single by Mickey Tettleton in the second. Kingman later hit his 16th homer and Tettleto had a run-scoring double in the ninth.

But the Rangers erased a 3-0 deficit in their half of the second by bunching eight hits and two errors by pitcher Chris Codiroli, 5-8.

Ward led off the second with a double and scored on a single by Parrish. Steve Buechele singled and, one out later, Curtis Wilkerson got an RBI single. With two outs, Scott Fletcher singled home another run. Codiroli's two errors allowed two runs to score before Pete Incaviglia hit a run-scoring single.

Ward then hit a drive off the right-field wall and Jose Canseco crashed into the fence and fell down while the ball rolled back toward the infield. It was Ward's third homer.

Dave Stewart replaced Codiroli and Parrish greeted him with his ninth homer.

Bobby Witt, 4-5, who struck out nine, gave up five runs in 5⅔ innings. Greg Harris pitched the final 1⅓ innings for his 13th save.

Orioles 14, Red Sox 3

Tom O'Malley drove in five runs with two doubles and a single, keying a season-high 20-hit attack against the Eastern Division leaders.

The Orioles, who had lost four consecutive games and seven of their last eight, got three hits apiece from O'Malley, Rick Dempsey, Juan Bonilla and Mike Young. The Red Sox had won three straight.

Boddicker, 10-1, pitched a six-hitter for his sixth straight victory. He became the second 10-game winner in the American League and joined Boston's Roger Clemens, who is 12-0 and was scheduled to face Baltimore on Saturday. Boddicker struck out seven and walked three in his third complete game.

O'Malley doubled and scored in the first inning, had a two-run single in the fifth and hit a three-run double in the eighth.

Baltimore took a 2-0 lead in the first on Jim Dwyer's sacrifice fly and Larry Sheets' RBI groundout against Boston starter Mike Brown, 4-4.

Brown suffered a bruised muscle near his right elbow when struck by Juan Bonilla's sharp ground single in the second and had to leave the game. Brown was replaced by Tim Lollar, who was tagged for two runs on three walks and a single by Young, who drove in three runs.

Cal Ripken had two hits for the Orioles and extended his hitting streak to 16 games.

Mariners 5, White Sox 3

Jim Presley doubled to start a four-run second inning and homered in the third, spoiling Doug Rader's debut as interim manager of the Chicago White Sox.

Rader had been named to replace Tony LaRussa, who was fired earlier in the day.

Mark Langston, 7-5, combined with two relievers on a five-hitter. Langston gave up four hits in 6⅓ innings before Mark Huismann relieved. Matt Young pitched the final 1⅓ innings for his fourth save.

Tom Seaver, 2-6, lost his fourth straight decision, allowing five hits and five runs in seven innings.

Presley and Ken Phelps opened the Seattle second with consecutive doubles. Phelps, who had a groin injury, went to third on a single by Spike Owen, and pinch-runner Gorman Thomas scored when Bob Kearney's ground ball went through third baseman Tim Hulett for an error.

John Moses followed with a sacrifice fly and another run scored on a single by Phil Bradley. Presley led off the third with his 13th homer to give the Mariners a 5-0 lead.

That was the last hit off Seaver who retired the next 15 batters before Gene Nelson took over in the eighth.

Angels 6, Royals 2

Ruppert Jones homered leading off the game and hit a two-run triple in the second inning as California won its fourth straight victory.

Ron Romanick, 4-5, gave up eight hits before leaving after George Brett started the Royals' eighth with a single. Reliever Doug Corbett finished up, allowing a sacrifice fly to Steve Balboni that scored Brett.

Jones hit his seventh home run leading off against Dennis Leonard, 6-6.

With one out in the second, Rick Burleson singled and went to third on a single by Gary Pettis. After Bob Boone popped out, Pettis stole second and both runners scored on Jones' triple.

Leonard hit Brian Downing with a pitch leading off the third. Downing took third on a single by Reggie Jackson and scored on a sacrifice fly by Jack Howell for a 4-0 lead.

The Angels added two runs off Bud Black in the fifth. Downing doubled with one out and scored on a double by Howell. Rob Wilfong singled home Howell.

Yankees 10, Blue Jays 8

Rickey Henderson's two-out double scored Mike Pagliarulo from second base and broke a 10th-inning tie the New York Yankees broke a five-game losing streak.

The Blue Jays sent the game into extra innings by rallying for six runs in the ninth inning, capped by George Bell's two-out grand slam. Reliever Dave Righetti, who gave up Bell's homer, got a new ball from umpire Don Denkinger and threw it from the mound over the right-field fence while Brian Fisher was entering from the bullpen.

With one out in the Yankees' 10th, Pagliarulo doubled into the right-field corner off Don Gordon, 0-1. Henderson hit his double down the left-field line, took third on Gordon's wild pickoff attempt and scored on Willie Randolph's single up the middle.

Fisher got the victory, evening his record at 3-3.

The Blue Jays trailed 8-2 going into the ninth. But Doug Drabek, who was making his second start since being recalled from the minors May 27, was taken out after allowing a leadoff single and walk. Righetti struck out the first batter he faced, but then gave up RBI singles to Damaso Garcia and Tony Fernandez.

Pinch-hitter Garth Iorg walked to load the bases and after another strikeout, Bell hit his 12th homer of the season over the fence in left-center field. It was Bell's third career slam.

New York's Butch Wynegar broke a 1-1 tie in the sixth with his sixth homer. The Yankees scored again in the seventh when Henderson doubled and later scored on a wild pitch by Jim Acker.

Ron Hassey connected for a three-run, pinch-hit homer in the eighth following singles by pinch-hitter Ken Griffey and Mike Easler. Hassey's fourth homer came against Acker.

Brewers 1, Tigers 0

Tim Leary pitched a four-hitter Friday night, snapping Detroits four-game winning streak.

Leary, 6-5, won his third consecutive decision. The 27-year-old right-hander struck out six and walked one in his second complete game of the season.

The Brewers, held hitless for three innings by Walt Terrell, 6-5, scored in the fourth inning on consecutive singles by Ernest Riles, Cecil Cooper and Ben Oglivie.

Terrell allowed four hits and struck out five through eight innings.

Twins 9, Indians 8

Pinch-hitter Randy Bush's tie-breaking, two-run home run keyed a six-run sixth inning, as the Minnesota Twins used a five-homer barrage.

After Greg Gagne's one-out single, Bush hit his fifth homer into the right-field upper deck for a 6-4 Twins lead. Kirby Puckett singled and Steve Lombardozzi walked before Kent Hrbek greeted reliever Scott Bailes with a two-run double off the left-field fence. Gary Gaetti's sacrifice fly capped the inning.

Tim Launder's fifth homer of the season, off Cleveland's Dickie Noles, 0-1, tied the score 4-4 in the sixth.

The Twins also got solo homers from Ron Washington, Hrbek and Tom Brunansky in support of Frank Viola, 7-5, who allowed seven hits and eight runs in 7⅔ innings. Keith Atherton pitched the last inning for his second save.

Joe Carter lifted his 11th homer of the season and first career grand slam over the left-center field fence to give the Indians their short-lived 4-3 lead.

NL Roundup

Keith Hernandez hit a tie-breaking home run in the sixth inning and Gary Carter's three-run homer capped a six-run seventh as the New York Mets defeated the Chicago Cubs 10-3 Friday night.

Hernandez, who entered the game hitless in 14 at-bats, also had a run-scoring single in the fourth inning when the Mets erased a 2-0 Chicago lead. Carter drove in the tying run with a sacrifice fly.

Winning pitcher Sid Fernandez, 8-2, went seven innings and allowed three hits — all in the fourth when the Cubs scored their runs.

Loser Scott Sanderson, 3-5, allowed six hits and three runs in six innings before leaving for a pinch hitter. Four of the six runs against Ray Fontenot and Jay Baller in the seventh were unearned.

Chicago's Ryne Sandberg got the game's first hit, a out-out single in the top of the fourth. Keith Moreland walked and, after the runners advanced on a wild pitch, an intentional walk to Jody Davis loaded the bases.

Leon Durham's sacrfice fly scored Sandberg and Ron Cey's RBI single made it 2-0 but Davis was thrown out at the plate by center fielder Mookie Wilson on Jerry Mumphrey's single.

Wilson then started a rally in the bottom of the fourth with a leadoff single and Wally Backmna beat out a bunt. Hernandez's soft ground single, just out of the reach of second baseman Sandberg, made it 2-1 and Carter's sacrifice fly tied the score.

After the Mets broke the tie on Hernandez's fourth homer of the season with one out in the sixth, they sent 10 batters to the plate in the seventh. Ray Knight greeted Fontenot with a triple and scored on a wild pitch. Kevin Mitchell walked and scored all the way from first when Fontenot threw pinch hitter Ed Hearn's sacrifice bunt down the right-field line.

After pinch hitter Tim Teufel's RBI single scored Hearn, Darryl Strawberry was walked intentionally but Carter hit a 1-1 pitch from Baller for his 13th homer. Hearn remained in the game and hit a solo homer in the eighth and the Cubs got a run off Roger McDowell in the ninth on Shawon Dunston's RBI single.

The crowd of 44,817 boosted the Mets' season attendance to 1,023,894, the earliest they ever have gone over the 1 million mark.

Cardinals 9, Phillies 2

Bob Forsch moved into fifth place on the all-time St. Louis victory list ahead of the late Dizzy Dean with his 135th career victory.

The 36-year-old right-hander, in his 340th start in 13 seasons with the Cardinals, walked five and struck out three in boosting his record to 6-4.

Jack Clark, with a home run, double and two RBIs, and Willie McGee's single, double and RBI, led the St. Louis attack.

The Cardinals snapped a 1-1 tie in the fourth inning and took a 3-1 lead with the help of two walks by loser Charles Hudson, 4-5. Clark broke the tie with his ninth home run of the season with one out. A single by McGee and two walks loaded the bases and Terry Pendleton's grounder accounted for the other.

St. Louis knocked out Hudson and boosted its lead to 6-1 in the fifth. Curt Ford singled and two outs later Clark, McGee and Mike LaValliere hit consecutive doubles for three runs.

The Cards made it 7-1 in the sixth on Ford's single and first major-league steal plus Ozzie Smith' RBI single. Ford had opened the game with his first major-league homer. The Phillies tied it in the bottom of the first when Jeff Stone, in a 4-for-30 slump, hit Forsch's first pitch for his second homer of the season.

The Phillies got their second run in the sixth on a double by Von Hayes, two walks and pitcher Randy Lerch's sacrifice fly. But St. Louis scored twice in the ninth on an RBI single by Forsch and an error by first baseman Hayes.

Reds 6-8, Braves 4-5

Dave Concepcion's bases-loaded double ignited a four-run first inning that started the Cincinnati Reds to an 8-5 victory over the Atlanta Braves and their first double-header sweep in more than two years.

The Reds won the first game 6-4 as Buddy Bell drove in three runs and Tom Browning pitched six innings for the victory.

The sweep was the Reds' first sweep since April 29, 1984, against San Francisco. Cincinnati has won six of its last eight games while Atlanta has dropped four in a row.

Bill Gullickson, 5-6, earned his first victory since May 24 by stopping the Braves on seven hits over eight innings in the second game, including home runs by Andres Thomas and Dale Murphy. Thomas also homered in the ninth off John Franco.

Cincinnati jumped on Joe Johnson, 6-6, in the first inning. Dave Parker singled home the first run and Concepcion doubled home the other three.

Eddie Milner doubled a run across in the fourth inning and scored on Pete Rose's third single of the game, his 1,000th career hit at Riverfront Stadium, for a 6-0 lead.

Thomas accounted for Atlanta's first run with a fifth-inning homer, his third of the season.

Browning, 5-6, survived a pair of homers in the first game. Ron Robinson pitched two innings and Franco pitched the ninth for his 12th save.

Cincinnati took a 3-0 lead in the first inning off David Palmer when Bell doubled home a pair of runs with the first of his three hits and scored on Bo Diaz's single.

Browning served up a two-run homer to Ozzie Virgil in the second inning, his 11th of the season, and a solo homer to Billy Sample an inning later, his fifth, to help Atlanta draw even. Browning has given up 14 homers in 16 starts.

Concepcion singled home a run for a 4-3 lead in the bottom of the third but the Braves tied it again in the sixth when Virgil doubled and scored on Bob Horner's two-out pinch-hit single.

Concepcion singled off reliever Jeff Dedmon, 2-3, to start the Reds' sixth and scored the tie-breaking run on a hit-and-run double by Diaz that rolled to the wall in left-center. Bell doubled home another run off Dedmon in the seventh.

Expos 7, Pirates 2

Hubie Brooks, who began the evening as the National League's second leading hitter, went 4-for-4 and drove in two runs.

Tim Raines also drove in a pair of runs with two hits before he was forced to leave the game in the fifth inning with a sprained left wrist.

Andy McGaffigan, 5-2, pitched six innings for the victory, allowing both Pittsburgh runs. Bob McClure went the final three innings for his first save since coming to the Expos earlier this month from Milwaukee. Loser Bob Walk, 2-4, allowed five runs and eight hits in four innings.

The Expos took a 2-0 lead in the first. Vance Law walked and scored on a double by Raines, who came home on a single by Brooks.

Montreal added two more in the third after Mitch Webster drew a leadoff walk and Law followed with an infield hit. Raines singled to score Webster and send Law to third but was thrown out trying to stretch the hit into a double and injured himslef sliding into second. Brooks then singled to make it 4-0.

Montreal added a run in the fourth when George Wright, making his debut with the Expos, doubled and scored on Mike Fitzgerald's single.

Tony Pena opened the Pittsburgh fifth inning with his fourth homer. One out later Rafael Belliard singled, stole second and scored on Barry Bonds' single.

State Playoffs

AUSTIN — David Crowson tied a Class 4A tournament record with four hits at four trips to the plate Friday night to lead Brenham to a 10-0 victory over Snyder and into the finals of the state high school baseball tournament.

The 10-run rule — a team ahead 10 runs after five complete innings wins — ended the game in the bottom of the sixth inning when Carl Sullivan's towering two-run homer padded the Cubs' 8-0 lead.

Brenham will face Mercedes, a 2-1 winner over Westlake in the other semifinal, in the University Interscholastic League's title game at 7 p.m. CDT Saturday.

Cubs freshman Jon Peters struck out eight and walked none while improving his record to 13-0 and his team's record to 29-3. Snyder finished at 18-9.

Crowson paced the Cubs' 11-hit attack with a triple, three singles, two RBI and two runs scored. Chris Graves hit a two-run homer and a triple, and Matt Fisher added two RBI with a single and a double.

Westlake won approval from the state Supreme Court Wednesday to play in the tournament after Waco Richfield challenged the Chaparrals' victory in a rain-shortened playoff held two weeks ago.

The court action delayed the 4A tournament one week — champions were crowned in the four other classes in the regularly scheduled tournament last weekend.

Mercedes 2, Westlake 1 (8)

Arnold Ramirez' two-out single in the bottom of the extra inning sent Mercedes' Armando Reyes home with the winning run for a 2-1 victory over Westlake in the other semifinal game.

Mercedes, 21-7, advances to Saturday's final match against Brenham, a 10-0 winner over Snyder.

Westlake won approval from the state Supreme Court Wednesday to play in the tournament after Waco Richfield challenged the Chaparrals' victory in a rain-shortened playoff held two weeks ago.

The court action delayed the 4A tournament one week — champions were crowned in the four other classes in the regularly scheduled tournament last weekend.

The Chaps took a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning when Jud Arrington singled home Jeff Schnurr. Westlake starter Brian Dare was throwing a no-hitter until Ramirez smacked a single into right field in the fourth inning.

Mercedes pitcher Carlos Pimentel performed under pressure the entire game as he fanned the final batter with runners on second and third.

Lewis produces 9.91 100

USA Track

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Carl Lewis, the quadrupie 1984 Olympic gold medalist, Friday night won the 100-meter dash in 9.91 seconds, equalling the fourth-fastest clocking in history, during the USA-Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships — but his performance was wind-aided.

The runners were aided by a wind of 4.48 meters per second, over the alowable of 2.0 for record consideration.

So Lewis will have to settle for a tie for fourth place on the all-time list, in 100-meter races under any conditions.

However, he did set a record for most victories, four, in the 100-meter dash in the national championships. Since the meet was inaugurated in 1876, several sprinters had won three national titles, but none had won four until Lewis reached that figure Friday night. His first three championships came from 1981-83.

The other faster clockings, all-winded, are William Snoddy's 9.87, James Sanford's 9.88 and Lewis' 9.90 last year at Walnut, Calif.

Bob Hayes and Calvin Smith also have run wind-aided 9.91s, while Smith holds the world record, with a legal clocking of 9.93.

As usual, Lewis was slow out of the blocks, trailing NCAA champion Lee McRae of Pittsburgh early. But the powerful Lewis, with his usual late burst of speed, caught McRae with about 15-20 meters remaining.

He then passed McRae in the next few strides and won by one meter. McRae finished second in 10.02, with Harvey Glance, a 1976 Olympic relay gold medalist, third in 10.04.

"The race went exactly like I wanted," Lewis said. "I knew McRae would be out fast and I felt very strong at the finish."

This was the ninth time that Lewis had gone under 10 seconds. Five performances have been legal, four wind-aided.

The women's 100 final also was wind-aided, with Pam Marshall rallying to score an upset in 10.80, edging Alice Brown and world record holder Evelyn Ashford. The time was the fourth-fastest ever by an American under any conditions, behind legal clockings of 10.76 and 10.79 by Ashford, and a windy 10.78 by Ashford.

Marshall trailed Brown until the 80-meter mark, then surged ahead. Brown held on for second place in 10.84, just ahead of Ashford, the five-time national champion, who clocked 10.85.

"I'm so excited, I never thought I could do it," Marshall said. "I felt very confident the last 10 meters."

Ashford was upset about losing.

"I just felt when it was time to turn it on, I didn't have it," she said. "I'm happy about the time; two people were just faster than I was.

Bo Jackson finally to end mystery

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — An attorney for Heisman Trophy winner Bo Jackson said Friday that Jackson, coveted by professional football and baseball, will hold a news conference in Birmingham Saturday.

Some signs point to Jackson choosing baseball.

The Auburn star was drafted by the Kansas City Royals of the American League, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers of the National Football League and the Birmingham Stallions of the United States Football League.

"We'll find out then," said his attorney, Tommy Zieman of Mobile, when asked which team will get Jackson.

The Birmingham News quoted an employee of the Tuscaloosa airport as saying that a Kansas City Royals airplane landed in Tuscaloosa Friday and picked up Jackson.

Carla Spruill, office manager at the Dixie Air terminal, said Jackson and two other people boarded the plane and that it apparently was headed for Kansas City.

However, Zieman said that Jackson was "not on a plane to Kansas City. I can guarantee you that."

Dean Vogelaar, vice president for public relations for the Kansas City Royals, said, "I don't know about the plane. If I knew I would tell you. I do know that we have continued to have conversations with his agents."

Jackson reportedly has been offered a 5-year, $5 million contract by the Royals, who chose him in the fourth round of the major league draft.

The Tampa Bay Bucs, who made Jackson the No. 1 over-all pick in the NFL draft, reportedly have offered him $7 million over five years.

Phil Kreuger, assistant to Bucs owner Hugh Culverhouse, said he was not aware of a Saturday news conference and had not talked to Jackson's representatives since Wednesday.

The Stallions named Jackson in their territorial draft, but President Jerry Sklar said, "We've made it clear to the people who represent him that we are not in a position to negotiate the type of contract he's talking about at this time."

NHL draft to have distinct American accent

MONTREAL (AP) — When the National Hockey League holds its annual draft Saturday, it will have a distinct American accent.

As many as half of the 21 first-round draft choices could turn out to be players from the United States, if you listen to the NHL's general managers gathered here for the selection of amateur players at the Montreal Forum .

"It's just a product of the program that's been developing in the United States over the past 20 years," said General Manager Craig Patrick of the New York Rangers. "There are more good American players available than ever before."

Jimmy Carson, a hotshot center from the Detroit area who played the last two years in the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League, has been projected as the No. 2 overall choice in the draft by the Los Angeles Kings, behind Detroit's No. 1, Joe Murphy.

Scott Young, a right wing who played for Boston University last year, was projected in the top four picks, and could be selected by either New Jersey or Pittsburgh.

Among the other bright talents from the United States are defensemen Greg Brown and Brian Leetch, two prep school players from the New England area. Brown played last season for St. Marks High School in Boston and Leetch for Avon Old Farms in Avon, Conn.

These players are part of a growing trend in the NHL that has seen more and more Americans drafted each year by NHL teams.

Last year, a record 48 were chosen. This year, even more are expected.

"The hockey program has just been better in the United States in recent years," Patrick said. "The coaching has gotten better in America and there have been clinics by AHAUS (American Hockey Association of the United States). In the late 70s, they started to recognize that there is a lot of hockey talent in the States."

While Americans are expected to play a more important role than ever, the majority of players still will come from the three major junior leagues in Canada: the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League, the Ontario Hockey League and the Western Hockey League. The rest will come from Europe.

France, Brazil finally toe-up

World Cup

MEXICO CITY (AP) — It is a matchup many felt should have occurred four years ago — in the World Cup final. Neither France nor Brazil made it that far, however.

On Saturday, at Guadalajara, the French and Brazilians, both of whom have been superb in the 1986 world soccer championship, will try to make up for lost time.

"The game we are playing Saturday should have been the final in 1982," Zico, Brazil's midfield star, said in preparation for the quarterfinal game.

"These are two of the strongest teams in the world and it should be a great game," added French Coach Henri Michel. "There is no telling which team is stronger but it will be shown on the field."

Which is the way it should be.

In the 1982 Cup in Spain, the Brazilians were injury depleted when they were eliminated in the second round. France made it to the semifinals, where it was beaten in a penalty-kick shootout by West Germany.

It has not been lost on the French that, should they get by Brazil, the Germans could be their next opponent.

The other quarterfinal game Saturday pits Mexico against West Germany in Monterrey. On Sunday, England plays Argentina at Aztec Stadium here and Belgium takes on Spain at Puebla.

"They are aware West Germany could be the next rival, and this has a special meaning for my players," Michel said. But first, there is Brazil.

The Brazilians, pretournament favorites to run off with an unprecedented fourth title, have been a model of perfection here. They are 4-0 and have not yielded a goal. Their attack has gained strength throughout the four games and the midfield has been steady, often spectacular.

Midfielders Junior, Elzo, Josimar, Socrates and Zico coming off the bench will have to be at its sharpest against France. They know it.

"It'll be a battle for control of the midfield and we'll have to close up the lanes and block the space," Junior said.

Michel said his team has the utmost respect for Brazil, which will have strong crowd support from both the Mexicans and their fans who have journeyed here.

"Brazil has a brilliant team which is very well adjusted to Guadalajara, but we have a lot of experience on our side," Michel said. "Our team has been together for a long time now and experience is very important in the World Cup."

Striker Dominique Rocheteau said simply, "We can beat Brazil. Our midfield can impose itself on any rival."

For Mexico's first game away from Aztec Stadium, scalpers were getting 50,000 pesos, about $60, for the best seats available to the public, about double the original price. Universitario Stadium seats 55,000, about half of Aztec's capacity.

The Mexican team is counting on the fans, heat and humidity and the revenge factor to help them against West Germany, which routed Mexico 6-0 in the 1978 tournament.

"It is nearly unbelievable how the Mexican team gets lifted by those enthusiastic spectators," German Coach Franz Beckenbauer said. "It is like a 12th or even 13th player on the field.

"The player simply have to keep on running. With that crowd behind them, they just cannot stand still, even if they are dead tired."

Joao Havelange, president of FIFA, the international governing body for soccer, said Friday he was certain politics would not intrude on the Argentina-England game. It will be the first time the two nations have met in a major sporting event since their Falkland Islands war in 1982.

"I have full confidence there will not be any incidents," Havelange said. "All the 44 matches so far have illustrated that. The teams and their players have met up as if old friends and extended congratulations to each other. I see no reason for that not to continue."

Diego Maradona, Argentina's star striker who was at a news conference to announce a July 27 all-star game at the Rose Bowl to benefit UNICEF, added:

"We came to play soccer at the World Cup. It has nothing to do with politics. There are far more qualified people to deal with that."

Brewers find own 'Senor Stopper'

Bamberger won't trade Higuera for Valenzuela

MILWAUKEE (AP) — There is another Senor Stopper making his mark in the major leagues, and he isn't wearing Dodger Blue.

This stocky left-hander from Mexico is pitching for the Milwaukee Brewers.

Ted Higuera, the American League's version of Los Angeles pitcher Fernando Valenzuela, is among the league's leading pitchers after his latest effort.

Higuera, whose record went to 9-5 when the Brewers beat the Toronto Blue Jays Wednesday, has eight complete games, tops in the league. He has 98 strikeouts and a 2.21 earned run average.

Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger, who earlier this season said he would not trade Higuera for Valenzuela, now says his second-year stopper is among the best in the majors.

"There's not five better pitchers in baseball, if there's that," declared Bamberger, who as Baltimore's pitching coach handled the likes of Jim Palmer, Mike Cuellar and Dave McNally.

Then he added with a laugh, "Now, I don't want to say he's better than (New York Mets pitcher) Dwight Gooden."

Good enough to be an All-Star?

"I definitely think he should be," Bamberger said. "No question about it. I think he will be."

The 27-year-old Higuera speaks little English. But he says through teammate-interpreter Juan Nieves that it would be an honor to in the Houston Astrodome on July 15.

"I would feel very privileged to go to the All-Star Game for the very first time," Higuera said.

Despite the language barrier, there does not seem to be a communication problem for Brewers coaches and players.

"It seems like he knows what you're talking about. It seems like he understands more than he speaks," said veteran catcher Charlie Moore.

Higuera is picking up where he left off in his rookie season. He finished with a 15-8 record, 3.90 ERA and 127 strikeouts.

The 15 victories led the team and were the most ever by a Brewers rookie.

Higuera had come into the 1985 spring training camp a relative unknown, only two years out of the Mexican League that produced Valenzuela. He came into the Brewers' 1986 camp as the ace of the staff.

The turning point came last season when Bamberger and pitching Coach Herm Starrette convinced Higuera to drop two pitches — the curveball and screwball — from his pitching arsenal. Starrette says Higuera's fastball, slider and straight changeup are better now that he concentrates on them.

And then there is Higuera's will to complete each game he starts.

"There are just some guys made up that way," Moore said. "They don't want anyone to finish up for them."

Adds Toronto Manager Jimy Williams: "He keeps coming at you. He always seems to have something left when he smells a win."

The better control, combined with Higuera's determination on the mound, has made the Brewers think victory every time he starts a game.

"When Higuera is on the mound, I expect him to win, or the team to win," said Moore, who calls Higuera the best young second-year pitcher the Brewers organization has ever seen.

Starrette says he has seen first-year phenoms become shooting stars. But Higuera is different.

"Some come and go," Starrette said. "He just keeps getting better."

OC cage star headed for Texas

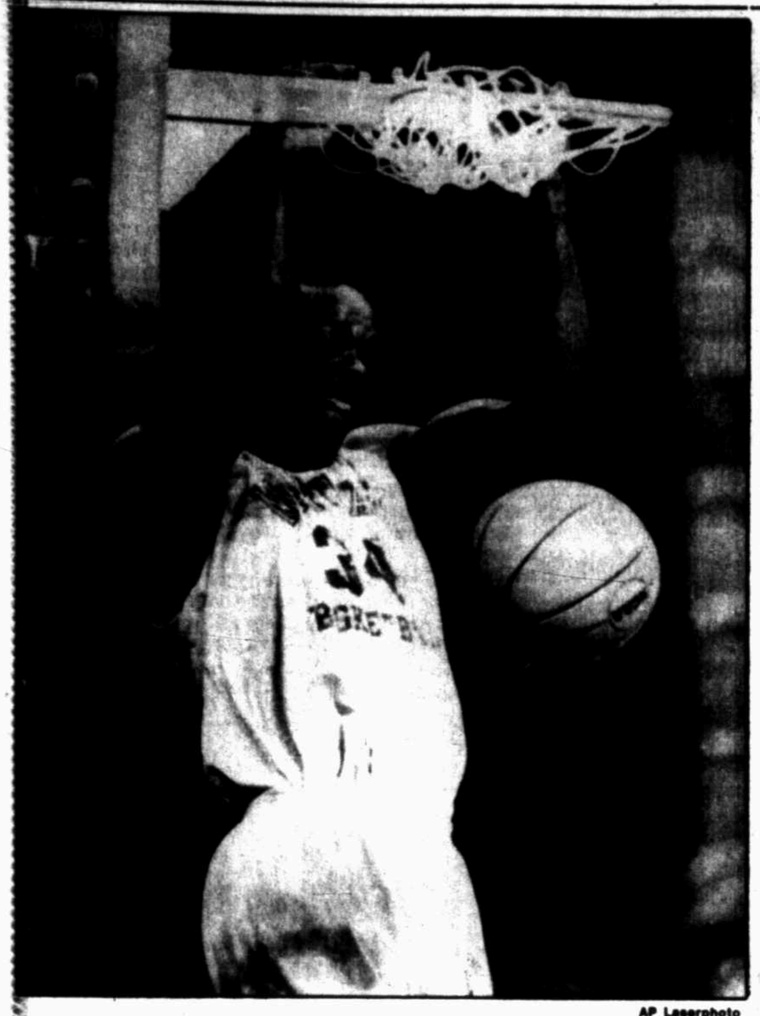

AUSTIN (AP) — Doreatha Conwell, 6-foot-3 center-forward from national basketball champion Odessa Junior College, says she will attend the University of Texas next fall, university officials said.

Conwell must complete 12 hours of summer school and graduate from the junior college before being eligible.

She will not be able to sign a binding letter with the Lady Longhorns because the signing period ended May 15, athletic officials said Thursday.

Conwell averaged 27.4 points a game and finished her Odessa career as the Lady Wranglers' leading scorer, rebounder and shot-blocker.

Texas capped a 34-0 season by winning the NCAA national championship in April with a 97-81 win over

Maryland's Len Bias
...death of star rocks sports world

INVESTIGATION

Driesell, on "Good Morning America," said he told Auerbach that he would be "very very surprised" if drugs were involved because Bias had undergone many pre-draft examanations and because it "would be completely out of character" for Bias. He did confirm passing on the police report, though.

Athletic Director Dick Dull, when asked about the reports of cocaine use by Bias, said Thursday: "I don't believe in unnamed sources. It would be premature to speculate."

Dull said the school had performed routine drug tests on Bias and other members of the team and "we've never had absolutely any kind of indication that there was excess of alcohol or any kind of drug involvement by Lenny Bias."

Chris Patton, one of two Maryland basketball players who died within a month of one another a decade ago — of a rupture of the aorta — was diagnosed as having Marfan syndrome, a congenital disease that weakens the body's connective tissure. That affliction, which also killed U.S. Olympic volleyballball star Flo Hyman earlier this year, is most often found in tall, thin people. The 6-8 Bias weighed 195 pounds.

Frank Grimaldi, head trainer at Maryland, noting Bias was in top physical shape, saying: "I'd be willing to bet he had 30 to 50 physicals in the last month. The NBA is very careful about the players they're drafting. I'm sure all the results came back saying he was the stud of the crop."

Celtics General Manager Jan Volk declined to say if Bias was tested for drugs during his physical examination, but added, "If it (the report of cocaine usage) is true, I would be shocked."

"It's horrible. It's the cruelest thing I ever heard."

Sudden death of Bias rocks basketball world

New York Times News Service

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Outside, the sun shone brightly and the state flag hung at half-staff as members of the University of Maryland athletic department gathered Thursday in the cool darkness of Cole Field House to mourn Len Bias.

"I've been here 10 years, and to say this is the saddest day of my life would be an understatement," said Dick Dull, the athletic director, after announcing that the 22-year-old star athlete had died Thursday morning.

Bias, who on Tuesday had a dream come true when the Boston Celtics made him the second pick in the National Basketball Association draft, was pronounced dead at 8:50 a.m. at Leland Memorial Hospital after suffering cardiac arrest in his dormitory room. His teammates, Dull said, were "beside themselves with grief." Several players accompanied Bias to the hospital and waited there as doctors tried to revive him.

At a late afternoon news conference, Lefty Driesell, the basketball coach, said: "I don't know if I'm up to this, but I guess Leonard would want me to say something. I've known Leonard since he was in sixth grade. He was like a son to me, so I think he'd appreciate the difficulty of the way I feel right now.

"I've had the best basketball player that ever played in the Atlantic Coast Conference. He improve from 7 points a game to 23 points a game. But more than that, he gave his life to the Lord."

Dr. John B. Slaughter, the chancellor of the university, said the campus was "crushed" by Bias's death. "He brought joy to our university, not only by being a superb athlete, but more importantly, by being a fine person who enriched us by his presence. I told Lenny last year that the thing I admired about him most was his selflessness and his support for his teammates. He received his greatest pleasure in seeing them succeed."

Bias was a shy youth who "blossomed" when he began playing for the university, said Mark Stewart, a former Maryland student and free-lance writer who had covered Bias's career for local newspapers since Bias played at Northwestern High School in Hyattsville, Md.

"You could tell he had an incredible amount of talent, even then," Stewart said. "He'd dog it up and down the court, but he could play when he wanted to. Then he came to Maryland and he worked. I can't think of too many people who matured that much. When he got here he couldn't bench-press 200 pounds. Now he could have bench-pressed Cole Field House."

"It's like your best friend passing away," said Richard Shafritz, a Maryland student walking near the field house Thursday afternoon. "I didn't know the guy but I loved him, I cheered him on. He did so much for this campus."

Expressions of shock and grief over Bias's death came from throughout the NBA. David Stern, the league's commissioner, said: "We extend our sincerest sympathies to the family of Len Bias. Len was a poised, good-natured and friendly young man with a wonderful future. We join his family, friends and fans in mourning his tragic death."

Just before he left Boston late Wednesday night, Bias was toasted at a reception in Cambridge, Mass., by Reebok, a sneaker company with which he had just signed an endorsement contract worth more than $1 million. Danny Ainge, a Celtic guard who also represents the company, said he spoke with Bias for about 20 minutes and was impressed with his enthusiasm. "All that stuff about Len Bias really wanting to be a Celtic was all true," he said.

Scotty Stirling, the Knicks' general manager, had met with Bias before the draft. "We're stunned," he said in New York. "He impressed me very much as a person. He was shy and bright. It's a real tragedy. In light of something like this, the business of basketball pales."

HAVE YOU COMPLIMENTED YOUR CHILD TODAY?

A child needs at least one, good solid compliment per day. If "an apple a day keeps the doctor away," a compliment a day will give self-esteem to your child.

Self-esteem is crucial for a person. How does a child build it? Does he come by it himself? Not really. The beginning of self-esteem happens when parents constantly and consistently COMPLIMENT the child.

Children need to hear, "Hey you did a great job." A pat on the back, a "well done," "I appreciate you," "I'm proud of you," are beautiful words to the ears and ego of the child, whether the child is 5 or 50.

Some sons and daughters now grown have never heard their fathers praise them to their faces. Oh, they hear from others how proud Pop is of them, but they may hurt, hoping to hear it with their own ears. And some fathers go to their graves, proud as peaches of their sons, but they never, "Said it."

"A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in baskets of silver." (Proverbs 25:11)

A nun from the Barefoot Carmelite Monastery in Oswiecim, Poland, passes beneath a barbed-wire-topped wall and watch tower at the former Auschwitz Nazi concentration camp.

Convent's location near Aushwitz stirs controversy

RELIGION

By CHARLES J. GANS

OSWIECIM, Poland (AP) — In a freak spring snowfall, a Carmelite nun walked silently past the 14 Stations of the Cross along a path outside the infamous Auschwitz Nazi concentration camp.

Each station, commemorating Christ's Crucifixion, bore a red triangle and blue-and-white stripes symbolizing the uniforms of prisoners at Auschwitz, where 4 million people, including 2.5 million Jews, were killed by the Nazis in World War II.

The nun is from a Roman Catholic convent just outside the outer wall of the concentration camp, now a Polish government museum in Oswiecim, a town in southern Poland.

The convent is embroiled in controversy with international Jewish organizations that say the convent shouldn't be there. They contend it obscures the memory of Auschwitz as a symbol of the Jewish Holocaust.

The Catholics differ.

"For us, Auschwitz is the place of the tortured man — and you cannot make divisions into Jews, Catholics and Protestants, Frenchmen, Poles, Russians and even Germans," said Sister Maria Magiera, speaking through an iron-barred screen separating her from visitors in the convent's reception room.

"We don't mean to cause any kind of conflict or take this place away from the Jews," she said. "We just want to honor all the martyrs of Auschwitz."

The nuns offer special prayers for the beatification of a Carmelite nun, Edith Stein, who was of German-Jewish origin and died at Auschwitz in 1942, Sister Magiera said.

One of three nuns among the 11 in the convent permitted to speak to visitors, Sister Magiera said their daily routine consists of prayer, meditation and work on renovating the convent, which was a ruined warehouse when the nuns received permission from Polish authorities to occupy it in June 1984.

THE RED-BRICK building was built before World War I as a theater and later was converted into a warehouse where, Sister Magiera said, the Nazis stored soap and occasionally zyklon B gas, the type used in the gas chambers, and for disinfecting prisoners' clothes in the camp laundry.

The nun said that on March 26 about 30 Jews from the Belgian branch of the World Jewish Congress pushed their way into the convent and shouted at her in what she described as an aggressive and rude manner, assailing the nuns for "wanting to live in a cemetery."

Sister Magiera said there was a misunderstanding because the convent is near the blocks where thousands of Polish Catholics, including the recently canonized priest, the Rev. Maksymilian Kolbe, died and is several kilometers from the Auschwitz-Birkenau death camp where most Jews died in the gas chambers.

"We don't think the church would order us to leave," said Sister Magiera, adding that the Jewish visitors threatened to demonstrate before Pope John Paul II. "Now we will have to lock the door, as we are afraid of the Jews."

Leaders of Poland's Jewish Religious Union said their organization has not taken a position on the convent but planned to discuss it at an upcoming meeting. Poland's pre-war Jewish population was 3 million; an estimated 90 percent were murdered by the Nazis, and only about 12,000 to 15,000 Jews remain in the country today.

Concerns about the convent were first raised by the Belgian Jewish community last fall following an appeal by a Belgian priest for Catholics to make donations to the convent.

IN MARCH, five leading European rabbis, including Sir Immanuel Jakobovits, Britain's chief rabbi, and Grand Rabbi Rene-Samuel Sirat of France, appealed to the pope to close the convent.

"We cannot but deem it utterly incongruent to sanctify ground which is desecrated and accursed," the rabbis wrote. "The very word 'Auschwitz' has become synonymous with the Holocaust, and to have this place of infinite inhumanity serve as a religious shrine would cause affront and agony."

Theo Klein, president of the Representative Council of Jewish Institutions in France, accused the church of being indifferent in World War II to the Jews' martyrdom and said in a letter to the papal nuncio in Paris that Auschwitz should be a place for private prayer.

"It is too late, excellency, to repent on the scene of the crime," said Klein. "The sky was empty then, it must remain so...Do not let a shadow, be it that of the cross, fall on the immense field of our unquenchable pain."

A Vatican official in Rome said he did not know whether the pope would respond to the Jewish protests and said the dispute should be settled by Polish authorities and the Catholic archbishop of Krakow.

Sister Magiera said that before being elected pope, Cardinal Karol Wojtyla, as archbishop of the Krakow, supported the nuns' efforts to establish the convent.

The Polish government spokesman, Jerzy Urban, said the Communist authorities saw no need to intervene in a dispute between faiths and noted that a Carmelite convent existed for years near the Dachau concentration camp outside Munich in West Germany without protests.

CARDINAL Franciszek Macharski, the current archbishop of Krakow, said in a statement released in March the convent would be "like a signpost pointing that love is possible and stronger than evil."

He added that the convent was part of the Polish church's efforts to keep alive the memory of the crimes committed at Auschwitz, which he described as "a new 'holy place' belonging at the same time to all humanity."

The Rev. Stanislaw Musial, who writes on Polish-Jewish relations for a Krakow-based Catholic weekly publication, expressed fear that closing the convent could evoké anti-Jewish feelings.

Musial said the convent, which when renovated will house 25 nuns and a small public chapel, answers a need for "a spiritual touch" near the Auschwitz museum, which is visited by more than a half million people annually.

"I know that our Jewish brothers are sensitive, they are afraid that during the war they experienced physical extermination and now are threatened with the extermination of the memory, but these worries are not right," Musial added.

He said the Polish church would like Jews and other religious denominations to build houses of worship near Auschwitz.

Sister Magiera recalled that as a teen-ager in the nearby town of Wadowice, which is the pope's birthplace, she smuggled food to Jewish friends in the town's ghetto and could see the smoke rising from Auschwitz's crematoria.

— "The Communication Lifeline," shown July 20, listing workable techniques for open communication;

— "Speaking Frankly About Sex," shown July 27, dealing with sexual problems that plague couples and offers suggestions;

— "Renewing Romance in Marriage," shown Aug. 3, exploring the caring touches that build fun, rewarding relationships.

Witnesses come to Midland

Delegates from West Texas and eastern New Mexico have gathered together for the "Divine Peace" District Convention of Jehovah's Witnesses at the Chaparral Center. The convention, which began on Thursday evening, will have meetings through Sunday afternoon.

Robert Felton, key speaker at the initial session, spoke on "Making All Things New." Felton spoke on the destructiveness of much of the world's modern technology, citing the development of warfare technology and weapons since World War I.

"What a shocking commentary it is on so-called civilization that the world is now spending on war equipment the colossal sum of $800 billion each year," he said.

Felton said that "the kingdom of God by Jesus Christ was the only hope for the human family." He added that this government is the only one that can bring lasting and just peace.

The Witnesses will take to the streets of Midland today to invite residents to the final session of the convention.

The principal address of the assembly is scheduled for 2 p.m. Sunday when John Thaden is scheduled to speak on the subject, "Peace at Last! — When God Speaks."

NEW YORK (AP) — Heads of major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox churches have deplored South Africa's state-of-emergency crackdown on dissent and urged President Reagan to impose mandatory sanctions against that country.

Reorganized LDS temple celebrates 150 years

KIRTLAND, Ohio — Special services commemorating the dedication 150 years ago of the Kirtland Temple in Kirtland will be held Sunday. Wallace B. Smith, President of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be the speaker at the sesquicentennial event.

Smith is the great-grandson of Joseph Smith Jr. and presides over a worldwide membership of more than 234,000 persons in 36 countries.

Built in 1836 at a cost of $60,000 the Kirtland Temple is valued today at $1,600,000.

Construction on the temple began in 1833. Members sold family silver and jewelry to provide money for the building. To beautify the temple, tradition has it that women gave their china and glassware to be pounded up and mixed into the finish coat of stucco applied to the exterior walls. This gave a sparkling effect in the sunlight. With the exception of the glass and hardware all materials used in the construction were of local origin. In just over 2½ years the temple was completed. It was dedicated in a seven hour service held in 1836. The building could not hold all those who came on that Sunday and another dedication service was duplicated later that week.

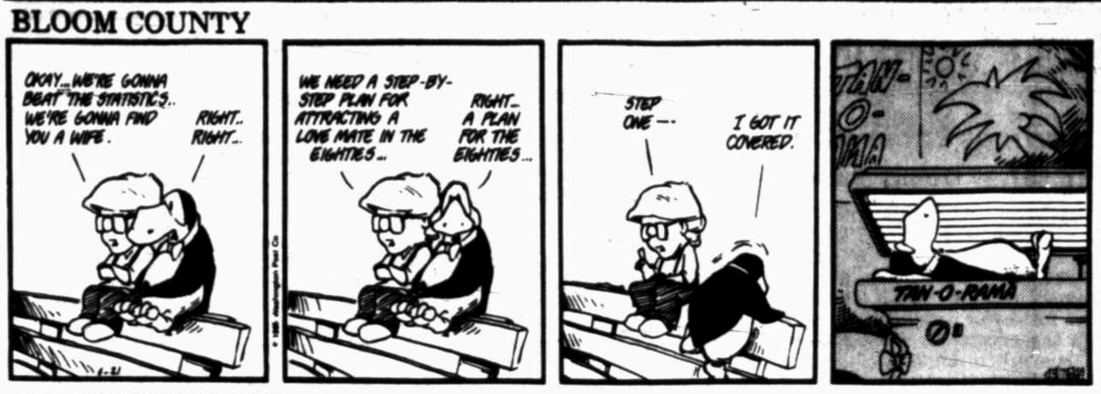

An edifice of wood and stone, the Kirtland Temple, built 150 years ago, proclaims the beliefs of a dynamic faith. The temple is still in use today and stands as a testimony to the church's dedication to the pursuit of world peace.

The local congregation is currently meeting at Central YMCA. The world headquarters is in Independence, Mo.

Dunaway

LONDON (AP) — Faye Dunaway prematurely left the stage of her new play "Circe and Bravo" when a man jumped onto the set to declare his love for her.

Personnel of the Hampstead Theater confirmed a report in Friday's Daily Express that the show was halted 10 minutes into the performance Wednesday when the man told Ms. Dunaway, "I love you, Faye. I've come to take you back with me to Amsterdam."

Ms. Dunaway's co-star, Stephen Jenn, led the actress off-stage, while the man, who has not been identified, helped himself to carbonated water from a whiskey bottle in an on-stage liquor cabinet.

Police arrived to take the intruder away, but he was not formally arrested.

"He hadn't done anything," said publicist Sue Hyman.

After a 10-minute delay, Ms. Dunaway returned to the stage, and the show continued without incident. A bodyguard is now in attendance for all remaining performances of the two-character play, which has sold out its limited run through July 12.

LONDON (AP) — Cyd Charisse and her million dollar legs were well-received Friday in their London stage debut in a revival of the English musical "Charlie Girl."

"Time has not withered those gorgeous, long legs," Milton Shulman of The Standard wrote of Thursday night's opening at the Victoria Palace Theater.

Producer Harold Fielding insured his leading lady's legs for $1.5 million each for the musical, a reporting of the Cinderella legend. Miss Charisse, 63, the high-kicking star of "Singin' In the Rain," "Brigadoon," and "Silk Stockings," plays the aristocratic Lady Hadwell.

Although it was panned in its 1965 premiere, the show ran for 2,201 performances on the West End, London's Broadway. The revival has received poor reviews as well, but "it was and is a piece of theatrical hokum beloved and applauded by the British," said Jack Tinker in The Daily Mail.

CHICAGO (AP) — When a new space center opens next month at the Museum of Science and Industry, visitors will find an unusual piece of space flotsam — a bottle of brandy.

The bottle was among artifacts donated Thursday by James A. Lovell Jr., who flew two Gemini space missions and two Apollo missions. He also donated a flight suit and helmet, among other objects.

"They weren't doing much good to people in the country (while) in my study," said Lovell, 58.

Small bottles of brandy were Christmas presents to astronauts Lovell, Frank Borman and William Anders from ground controllers during the December 1968 Apollo 8 flight, Lovell said.

Lovell now serves as president of Centel Communications Co. and executive vice president of Centel Corp.

DALLAS (AP) — Neighbors who proposed ousting Mark Thatcher from a high-rise condominium have been told that the son of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is free to stay.

The building's board of directors on Thursday sent notices to all units saying that tenants have no legal right to seek Thatcher's departure.

Thatcher had to leave another Dallas apartment last month when its owners refused to add security measures for his protection. He was staying with a friend in a second high-rise when five tenants objected to his stay, saying they feared he could be the target of a terrorist attack because of British cooperation in the U.S. raid on Libya in April.

Thatcher received a threat on his life in London, and federal agents have been assigned to protect him.

AUSTIN (AP) — Farm Aid II, a benefit concert to raise money to help family farmers, won't be held at the University of Texas' Memorial Stadium because organizers couldn't get insurance, officials announced Friday.

Singer Willie Nelson, who heads Farm Aid, said the organization was unable to obtain a liability policy for the 78,000-seat stadium where the UT Longhorns play football.

Farm Aid instead will be held at an outdoor concert site south of Austin, Nelson said.

"Only the location will change," Nelson said, adding that some 75 musical acts still are scheduled to perform during the 14-hour concert.

"Without insurance, neither Farm Aid, the Texas Department of Agriculture nor the University of Texas felt a concert could be held in Memorial Stadium," Nelson said.

Earlier this week, Steve Hauser of Pace concerts, which is helping stage the event, said only 30,000 tickets had been sold and 40,000 more were available.

Nelson made no mention of ticket sales totals in a written statement announcing that the concert would move to Southpark Meadows, a facility six miles south of Austin.

The first Farm Aid concert, held last September, was staged at the University of Illinois stadium in Champaign.

That event raised about $9 million, officials have said. Farm Aid said this week that about $4.3 million of that has been spent or committed to rural relief projects in 37 states, while $2.7 million remains in the fund.

The Texas Department of Agriculture is sponsoring Farm Aid II.

Nelson said Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower and University of Texas officials "all bent over backwards trying to make the Memorial Stadium concert a reality. Unfortunately, it's just not to be this year."

Hightower said his department remains committed to Farm Aid.

Panhandle city jokes, worries of waste

HEREFORD (AP) — They used to use a slogan of "Hustlin' Hereford" for this breadbasket community of 18,000 in the heartland of the Texas Panhandle, but the cattle and agricultural center may well be facing a metamorphosis.

"How 'bout, uh, 'Hereford on the Glow?' " one longtime resident suggested to the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce. "If that won't do...try 'Hereford: Dead Ahead.' "

The sometimes morbid jokes over the area's selection as one of three possible sites for a $10 billion nuclear waste repository pepper idle conversation every day in Hereford.

Residents talk about the city's future as they huddle at the feed lots, at the ornate Deaf Smith County Courthouse, in parking lots, on farms while pitching hay, at local businesses and over coffee at the Ranch House Restaurant.

On the outskirts of town, the smell of the lots where thousands of head of cattle are fattening for the market is pungent except to the home folks, who smell dollars.

Life goes on in the lush, green fields where tractors move on the horizon stretching as far as the eye can see.

At the Ranch House Restaurant, seven men in jeans, boots and hats talk about Hereford's selection as a possible dump site.

Some are convinced the bureaucratic machinery and test procedures are only a formality, and that Hereford will ultimately be selected over other sites in Nevada and Washington.

While Gov. Mark White, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm and other politicians lock horns over who bore the ultimate responsibility to block the Hereford site selection, the gang around the breakfast table simply shrugs.

"Aw, that's just politics. Just politicians," said one. "A few screamed about the selection and they think they've got to respond....

"I'd say not more than 10 percent of the people here are actually opposed to the waste dump being put here," he said. "The politicians are reacting to complaints of only a few."

"All you've been hearing is a lot of scare tactics," said J.L. Rowland, who works in the fertilizer business. "That's all you read. If it's the safest place, put it here."

Jack White, a feedlot worker, nods in agreement.

"If it wasn't safe, I don't think the government would put it here," added cattle buyer Herb Vogel.

"They talk about using up all that farmland for the dump. Just how much farmland? A section? A number of sections? I don't see it as a problem," John Conger, a cattle hauler, told the Lubbock Avalanche Journal.

"As it is now, that same land is being used to produce wheat that can't be sold at a profit anyway," he said. "We better be getting with it."

Conger said he moved to the Hereford area in the early 1970s when agriculture was booming and ranchers and farmers saw nothing ahead but prosperity. Then the farm and ranch decline of the 1980s hit.

Conger contends the local power structure sat on its laurels during the boom years and now is caught in what appears to be a never-ending economic slump, growing more serious by the month, with no plan for diversification.

East Texas couple harvest corn fields into corn meal

By VALERIE CULP WILKERSON

POLLOK, Texas (AP) — If you've got the corn, Mr. and Mrs. H.H. Thompson have the gristmill, and they'll be happy to grind it for you.

The couple has a small gristmill at this community near Lufkin that doubles as a local attraction.

The cycle that culminates in the down-home good taste of the cornbread, Mrs. Thompson says, begins with the planting of an acre of corn in the fields in February. The golden roasting ears will begin getting ready to harvest about June.

What his family doesn't eat, and he doesn't sell, Thompson leaves on the stalks all through the hot East Texas summer. By about August or September, the sun has dried the kernels enough, and he and Mrs. Thompson team up to gather them.

Mrs. Thompson said, "I drive the tractor and pull a trailer and he gathers the ears and throws them in. When we get to the barn, he takes a corn scoop and throws the corn in the barn." They mix a few goat weeds in with the corn to help keep weevils out, she said.

As soon as they have time, then, they shuck the dried ears, clean away the corn silk and shell the ears with a hand-cranked corn sheller that they agree is at least 80 years old. They enjoy demonstrating the antique sheller to visitors, showing how one hand stuffs in a cob, while the other hands keeps turning the crank.

"Those cobs are just going in one after the other and they just burp out of there," Mrs. Thompson said.

Thompson said they can shell about 50 pounds of corn in 20 minutes.

The shelled corn is dried further then, in large wire boxes that the Thompson's support between two chairs outside in the sun and fresh air. The corn must be thoroughly dry to avoid gumming up the gristmill. Even when the corn is dry, it can occasionally pile up just past the plates. Thompson said he learned the hard way not to try to dislodge it when the machine is running.

"I made the mistake of sticking my finger up there," he said. "It like to chewed the end of it off."

When it is grinding time at last, Thompson pours the dried kernels into the metal hopper of the gristmill. A small electric motor causes two plates that are very close together to move and grind the corn. It raises quite a racket.

The fresh meal pours out rapidly, like a pale yellow waterfall. The meal is warm to the touch as it mounds onto a sifting screen placed over the washtub used to catch it.

Lofty house built for son

CROSSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Horace Burgess decided to build a small treehouse for his son three years ago, but his lofty idea soon grew and he now has a four-level, six-room home that towers almost 50 feet above the ground.

"I just wanted it to be different," the 35-year-old handyman said. "I want it so nothing about it is like anybody else's."

The house is supported primarily by two white oaks, with a couple of pine trees to help. Cables keep the treetop home from swaying too much in the wind.

Burgess said he has invested about $3,000 in the house, getting most of the wood from scraps from construction sites where he was working, and from neighbors.

His son, Kevin, now 15, asked him to build the treehouse when Burgess began work on a conventional, down-to-earth house nearby for himself.

"This is Kevin's house," said Burgess. "Kevin asked me to build him a room in the trees here where he could sleep. I never found a place to stop and wound up working on this house more than the other one. I think I can finish it by the end of summer."

English city lures comers

NEWCASTLE, England (AP) — "Newcastle is a spacious, extended, infinitely populous place; 'tis seated upon the River Tyne, which is here a noble, large and deep river, and ships of any reasonable burthen may come safely up to the very town."

The description is by Daniel Defoe (of "Robinson Crusoe" fame) in his book "A Tour Through the Whole Island of Great Britain" — a tour made more than 250 years ago.

It's hardly the average person's mental image of Newcastle, a name more likely to set visions of coal dust dancing in people's heads. And there was indeed coal smoke in Defoe's day. He said it was one reason why "The situation of the town to the landward is exceeding unpleasant."

But today's visitor can forget about coal in Newcastle, except perhaps to note the plaque on a wall on Westgate Street which marks the spot where in 1815 a George Stephenson first demonstrated a safety lamp that was extinguished by mine gases, thereby providing a warning of possible explosion or fire in the mines.

One can concentrate instead on the history of this modern industrial city, famed for shipbuilding, 260 miles north-northwest of London. For it was once a Roman settlement. Then came the Angles, then the Normans. The south face of the Roman emperor Hadrian's Wall stood here, and the city makes a good headquarters for excursions to various parts of the Wall.

St. Nicholas Cathedral, with its lacy Scottish crown spire, dominates the skyline of Newcastle. John Knox, founder of the Scottish Presbyterian Church, preached here in the mid-16th century. The present church is 14th century, but the cathedral's history goes back hundreds of years before that.

Across the Tyne, dominating a hill, are the burned-out ruins of another church that in 1854 fell victim to an explosion and fire at a spinning mill, which sent burning timbers, red hot iron bars and stones onto the church roof.

Another feature of Newcastle's landscape is the bridges across the Tyne, including a bright red pedestrian bridge that makes for a good stroll from the Sunday flea market on the quayside.

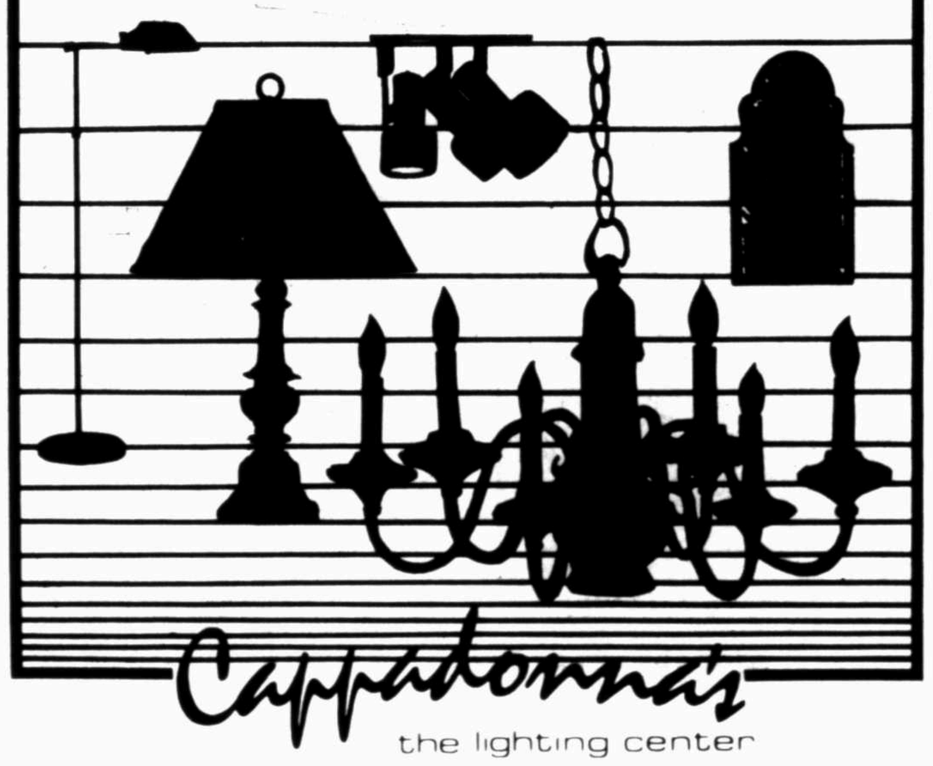

William the Conqueror's son Robert, we're told, built the New Castle from which the city gets its name in 1080. On the site now is the keep of the Castle Garth, built by Henry II in 1170. Its Black Gate, added by Henry III, houses a bagpipe collection.

And then there is the countryside around Newcastle, including Tynemouth, where the river meets the sea. Travelers without a car can get there on one of the most modern subways — the Metro — they're ever likely to use. Its map and push-buttons show how to get to one's destination, specify the fare, issue the ticket and in some cases make change.

On the headland where the sea and river meet are the remains of a castle and priory dating back to William the Conqueror's time. An earlier monastery on the site was sacked by the Danes in the year 800. Northumbrian kings and saints are buried there.

Vet's passion makes long hours easy

By TOM BOONE

CARROLLTON, Texas (AP) — It isn't the diesel pickup that sets him apart. It's the fact that this truck is equipped as a mobile medical unit, and it's that prefix he carries on his name.

Dr. David Carlton is a veterinarian who specializes in horses, and horses still get house calls.

His clients range from individuals who have a horse or two in the yard to the owners of the stables and large farms that line the farm-to-market roads just beyond the concrete fringes of metropolitan Dallas.

His territory forms an arc over Dallas, ranging from Flower Mound on the far northwest to Forney on the east.

"I love it," the 37-year-old vet says, flashing a smile. He is wearing boots, jeans, an enormous Texas A&M belt buckle, a short-sleeved shirt and an Aggie gimme cap.

Like many of the six or seven other horse doctors who operate in the same territory, Carlton earned his doctor of veterinary medicine degree from Texas A&M. He also has two bachelor's degrees and a master's from A&M.

When he occasionally has to work in the clinic, Carlton says he can stand maybe three hours before claustrophobia sets in.

He usually starts his day here at 7 a.m., checking into the Walnut Plaza Veterinary Hospital, which he uses as his base of operations.

On one recent day, however, his day begins when the phone rings in his North Dallas home at 5 a.m.

By 6 a.m. he is on the way north of Dallas to take care of a mare that has had a problem following delivery of a foal.

By 8:30, he is checking in at Walnut Plaza, problem solved.

The first stop in his regular rounds is La Verada, an Arabian horse breeding farm in Flower Mound. Here, a stallion with the proper name Treasure of Egypt, the nickname Spice, is about to become a gelding. Castration is desirable for some show horses, Carlton says, because they can be shown and stabled without concern for nearby mares, which may be in heat.

Spice, a gray Arabian, is led out of the barn by Tara Longnecker, the farm's breeding manager. With help from her, Roxanne Rabun and Barbara Adams, the farm's office manager, Carlton will do the procedure outside.

"You'll notice," Adams says wryly, "that the men are never around at times like this."

With Spice under general anesthetic, the operation is quick and "less painful than you might expect," Carlton says.

"You know, people complain about their vet bills, but they don't understand the pure volume that horses require," he says.

"For instance, if a doctor gives you a penicillin shot, he'll give you maybe 1 cc (cubic centimeter), or maybe a ½ cc of penicillin. I gave Spice 30 cc's."

David Carlton, a veterinarian specializing in horses, checks a new colt at the La Verada ranch in Flower Mound.

AP Laserphoto

When the operation is over, Carlton examines several mares, which are among 30 to 40 that have been shipped from throughout the country to be bred by one of La Verada's half-dozen resident studs.

Carlton's $13,000 portable ultra-sound machine detects the presence of an embryo in a mare named Charisma.

To the owners of the mare and operators of the farm, that's good news. Mares sent to La Verada may be worth $150,000 to $300,000 each, and their foals will bring hefty prices as well.

One of the mares Carlton visits is valued at $1.5 million. She is due for a tetanus vaccination and a dose of worm medicine, which gets rid of intestinal parasites that are a recurring menace.

Carlton runs a plastic tube through the mare's nose and into her stomach and, using a device much like a huge syringe, pumps the medicine directly into her stomach.

Immigrant tailor sews while reaping new life

NEW YORK (AP) — Joseph Francis Talese grew up in Italy three miles from a town whose very name evoked America and its promise: Filadelfia.

When he was old enough, he set off for the New World and the City of Brotherly Love, where he might become wealthy by opening a tailor shop and teaching his son the family's traditional way with needle and thread.

Nothing happened quite the way he expected, but Talese can't complain. He has prospered in America and seen his son Gay become a famous writer.

Gay Talese is at work on a book that explores his family history in Maida, a town of 3,000 impoverished hill people in the toe of Italy's boot.

Talese said about 85 percent of America's Italian immigrants came from the south of Italy, spurred by disarray and destitution caused by the civil wars of the 19th century. The first great wave started in 1880 and crested in the years 1906 to 1915, when 2,025,093 Italians arrived.

For generations, the Taleses were tailors. There were exceptions — Talese's great-grandfather was a money-lender, a tyrannical man who was hated — but mostly, the Taleses were as poor as their fellow villagers.

Joseph Talese was born in 1903. He left Italy in 1919 for Paris, he spent a year there, apprenticing as a tailor under relatives, and as soon as he received a visa he set off, alone, from Cherbourg for the United States.

The boat arrived at Ellis Island, and Talese went directly to Philadelphia, where fellow immigrants from Maida had settled. "They were people who stuck with their own for a while," Talese said.

The next year was difficult. He picked up some work at John Wanamaker's and Strawbridge & Clothier's stores in Philadelphia, but not enough, and the struggling immigrant developed an ulcer.

"He went to a doctor, and the doctor said, 'You should get some rest. Get on a train and go to Ocean City'" on the New Jersey shore, Gay Talese said.

He took his doctor's advice, but upon his arrival at the resort he saw a tailor's shop for sale. The proprietor was 75 and asthmatic, eager to leave the ocean dampness, so "he just gave my father the tailor's shop and told him to give him the money when he could," Talese said.

So he set down roots in Ocean City. He set up shop. He picked up a few dollars each week sending articles to an Italian-language newspaper in Philadelphia. He obtained his citizenship.

And at a wedding in New York, he met Catherine DePaulo, the daughter of two immigrants from Maida. They married in 1928.

His new wife, a former buyer for Abraham & Straus in New York, persuaded Talese to replace the tailor shop with a dress and fur shop. "He was dying as a tailor, anyway," his son said. "Who was going to buy tailor-made suits in Ocean City? This wasn't Newport, remember."

Third world Africa nation feeds self, exports what's left

LILONGWE, Malawi (AP) — "We have no minerals. The soil is our gold mine."

With those words after independence from Britain in 1964, President Hastings Kamuzu Banda sent his people to work the land.

Today Malawi feeds itself and exports what's left over — a rarity in Africa.

It is a success story on a continent where the annual population growth rate of 3 percent outpaces the growth food production, which is around 1 percent annually.

A devastating famine in 1984-85 triggered a flood of relief aid from international donors worth an estimated $2.9 billion, but not a penny was needed by Malawi's 7 million people.

The United Nations Office for Emergency Operations in Africa says a further $881 million is needed this year, but not in Malawi.

"We are not a drain on the world's creditor nations," Malawi's acting ambassador to Zimbabwe, M.S.D. Magalasi, said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"If any African country deserves special consideration when it applies for loans, that country should be Malawi."

Banda, who is president for life, is one of the West's staunchest Third World allies. His is the only African country with diplomatic links with the white government of South Africa and often has been rebuked by fellow members of the Organization of African Unity.

The aging leader, believed to be nearly 90, is also accused by Malawian exiles of waging a ruthless campaign against political opponents, including assassinations and detentions without trial.

While African and Western diplomats and international aid agencies privately express disquiet about such allegations, they uniformly praise Banda's "Malawi Miracle."

An efficient civil service guarantees that peasant farmers get seeds, fertilizers and tools in time for each planting season. Attractive government-fixed prices for food and cash crops ensure bountiful harvests. Water is available in all villages. And a well-maintained road network means crops can get quickly to market.

Banda also is the minister of agriculture.

Actress Stefanie Powers, left, known for her role on television's "Hart to Hart," shares a moment of good sportsmanship with rival polo player Pamela Sue Martin, who used to play Fallon on "Dynasty."

Stefanie Powers, Pamela Sue Martin rivals in polo match

WINDSOR, England (AP) — What was billed as the first U.S.-British women's polo match turned out to be a champagne and jet-set extravaganza pitting TV stars Stefanie Powers and Pamela Sue Martin against each other.

While half the crowd of about 1,000 stood in a VIP enclosure chatting noisily and drinking bubbly, the other half watched England defeat America 6½-3 in an exciting fast-paced game Thursday.

The players — including England's Claire Tomlinson who is the world's top-rated women's competitor — took the game seriously, but there were plenty of distractions for those who didn't know a chukka from a polo stick.

People watchers could view actress Ava Gardner in clinging white, actor John Hurt in casual blue, models Jerry Hall and Marie Helvin, and Viscount Linley, the son of Princess Margaret, who tried desperately not to be photographed with his girlfriend, Susannah Constantine. He failed.

After the hour-long match, divided into four chukkas, or periods of play, there were strawberries and cream, smoked salmon, and a barbecue with roast beef and corn-on-the-cob.

A calypso band wandered from table to table serenading guests, alternating with a string quartet from the Royal College of Music. Clowns and a stilt-walker also were on hand.

Many of the spectators arrived at The Royal County of Berkshire Polo Club from the races at nearby Ascot, the men still in their top hats and tails.

"I thought it was a good match," said Charles Pearson, a polo player who arrived in his private helicopter. "I was very surprised at how high the standard was."

Julian Hipwood, the England polo captain, said he was "most impressed" by the play. "I was pleasantly surprised. I thought all eight of them did exceptionally well. There was a lot of good riding, bumping and teamplay."

The English attack was dominated by two women who together accounted for all the goals — Mrs. Tomlinson, 41, and Lavinia Black, 39.

Miss Powers, 42, a star of television's "Hart To Hart" romantic thriller, played for the British team to balance the talent.

"I was trying my best," she said after the match, "but all the visitors were on strange horses and you need time to get used to the horses."

Nonetheless, she said, "I'd rather play polo than buy a new dress."

Miss Martin, 33, who played Fallon Carrington in the TV show "Dynasty" and is equally enthusiastic about polo, wore a back brace because of a recent fall. "I thought it was a great game but I would have liked to have ridden those horses before we played."

Similar comments about the lack of practice on the polo ponies came from the other members of the U.S. team — Alina Carta, 23, of Palm Beach, Florida; Kim Kelly, 29, of Sun Valley, Idaho; and Rowena Murray, 30, of Nairobi, Kenya, who filled in for Barbara Minty, widow of actor Steve McQueen.

"We could have won but we just lost in the third chukka — we got too confident and didn't push enough," said Miss Carta, who was voted the best U.S. woman polo player in 1985.

"Claire (Tomlinson) is tough but we'll get her back over in the States at a rematch, hopefully in Palm Beach," she said. "Next time, we'll win."

In Britain and the United States, women usually play on mixed polo teams, though there have been women-only competitions in both countries. Mrs. Tomlinson said this was the first international women's match.

Millionaire rock impresario Bryan Morrison, who represents Wham and other groups, dreamed up the women's match to promote the newly opened Berkshire club, which he co-owns. The May Fair Intercontinental Hotel sponsored the event and donated the trophy.

"We're not male chauvinist pigs," he said. "But I would rather be surrounded by a lot of beautiful lady polo players than sweaty men polo players."

Eight eaglets released in hopes they'll mate

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Eight eaglets flew first-class in a corporate jet Friday from their Canadian nests for a final bid to encourage the endangered birds to raise their young in Massachusetts for the first time in decades.

The action brought to 27 the number of eaglets imported in the five-year restoration program, and wildlife biologists will wait until next year and hope that birds released as youngsters in 1982 mate and build nests here.

"It looks like next year has pretty good odds for nesting bald eagles," state wildlife biologist Peter Mirick said.

Biologists don't know the whereabouts of Betsy, one of two eaglets released the first year at the Quabbin Reservoir and wildlife preserve in central Massachusetts, since she flew to Canada shortly after arriving from Michigan. Radio transmitters attached to the birds' tail feathers allow them to be tracked for up to six months.

Ross, the male, was seen at the Quabbin this spring sporting white head feathers, a sign of maturity.

"But his tail feathers are still the dark brown of an immature bird, so it looks like it will be one more year before he is fully mature," Mirick said.

Betsy and Ross, who were taken from Michigan nests, were followed by four birds in 1983, five in 1984 and eight in 1985.

Like their predecessors, the 7- to 9-pound eaglets taken earlier this week from nests in Nova Scotia were flown to Hanscom Air Force Base in Bedford on Friday for U.S. Customs clearance and then to Orange for the last leg of their journey to the secluded Quabbin, Mirick said.

They will live four to six weeks in wooden cages atop 30-foot towers with a lakeside view on a peninsula barred to humans, he said. The state's bald eagle project leader, Jack Swedberg, and his helpers will feed them fish caught in the Quabbin, road-killed deer and other small mammals to bring their weight up to about 11 pounds before their cage doors are opened. Then, another five-year wait will begin to see whether they return to mate and raise their young in Massachusetts.

"Our last nesting eagle was seen in about 1910, although there may have been a few unreported ones up to 1920," Mirick said.

The state's eagle population began decreasing as forests were cleared for farms in colonial times, but began rebounding after the Civil War when farmers moved West and trees grew on abandoned farms.

Pesticides interfered with the birds' ability to manufacture calcium for their eggs and the shells became thin and cracked.

The first national restoration effort began in 1974, when the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service began transplanting eggs from Minnesota to Maine nests, said Paul R. Nickerson, the endangered species specialist at the service's regional office in Newton Corners.

After three years of limited success, biologists began placing eaglets raised in captivity in the nests of adults in the wild. Further imports were deemed unnecessary in the 1970s, and biologists report 85 pairs of nesting eagles in Maine, Nickerson said.

The federal government has imported or transplanted several hundred eagles in 14 states, he said.

Hertz Car Sales
The Reliable #1
© THE HERTZ CORPORATION 1984
More people buy quality used cars from Hertz than from anyone else in the world.

Why monkey around...

with that "old clunker" in your driveway? Your old car may be worthless to you, but it may turn out to be someone else's treasure. Advertise it "for sale" in the classified and promote it as "a handyman's special."
