Reagan countering Democratic rhetoric

By MAUREEN SANTINI
AP White House Correspondent

ATLANTA — A combative President Reagan, proclaiming "the election year has begun," accused Walter F. Mondale today of writing off the South and declared: "We won't turn our backs and walk away."

Launching a sharp political counterattack of ridicule and sarcasm, the president complained that the Democrats were casting him as the villain in a monster movie.

"In 1980, they tried to make me 'Reagan the Barbarian.' This year, it looks like the sequel is 'Reagan the Destroyer,' " he said.

"Do you get the feeling — I do — that they don't like me very much?" he asked in remarks prepared for delivery at a rally in a wealthy Republican enclave 12 miles north of Atlanta.

On the second leg of a trip designed to grab the political spotlight away from Democrats, the president also issued a fresh appeal to conservative Democrats to leave a party he contended has become too liberal for mainstream Americans.

"Yours has been a great party," the president declared, "I was a Democrat too, and I supported and campaigned for Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman because they were for a strong America, a fair and decent America that would not shrink from its responsibilities in the world....

"But I think the current leadership of the Democratic party...went all the way to San Francisco and then turned left," he contended. "And they went so far left, they have left the mainstream."

Mindful that he needs the votes of one-quarter of the nation's Democrats and one-half of the independents to win the election, Reagan pressed his strategy of depicting Mondale and his running mate, Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, as out of touch with their party's rank and file.

"I want to put out my hand and let you know that if you're starting to feel that your party has abandoned you, then we're holding out a hand and asking for your continuing help. You've got a home with us," he said.

Taking advantage of what he perceived as Mondale's weakness in the South,the president opened his remarks by complimenting that region for its "greatness and courage."

"The other party apparently thinks the South just isn't important this year, the South just doesn't deserve much attention," he insisted.

"Well, I'll tell you how George Bush and I feel about the South. We wont write it off, kiss it off, or try to buy it off. We won't turn our backs and walk away. As far as I'm concerned, the South is still worth fighting for."

Reagan complained that at the Democratic convention in San Francisco last week there were "big clouds of words," but "a lot of those words contained what Winston Churchill called 'terminological inexactitudes'. That's a nice way of saying that they said a few things that aren't true."

He said the Democrats wanted to spread pessimism at a time when optimism should be reigning because of his stewardship.

Mondale targets voters in South

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

GUNFLINT LAKE, Minn. — Walter F. Mondale is opening his uphill campaign to unseat President Reagan in the South, probably the toughest and most critical battleground his presidential candidacy will face this fall.

Mondale will campaign in Mississippi and Texas next week, and with him will be Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, whose selection as vice presidential running mate remains the most popular decision of Mondale's candidacy.

After a week's secluded fishing vacation in northeastern Minnesota, Mondale appeared refreshed and ready to challenge Reagan despite the president's continuing popularity.

Mondale will leave the isolated lodge where he has been fishing for walleye pike, lake trout and bass on Friday, and spend the weekend at his home in North Oaks, Minn., near Minneapolis.

Then, on Tuesday, Mondale will fly to Queens, N.Y., where Ms. Ferraro lives with her family and where both members of the ticket will appear at a rally.

Then in obligatory remarks emphasizing their Northeastern and Midwestern origins, both will speak at the annual Urban League meeting in Cleveland, Ohio later Tuesday.

But Mondale said the real campaign will begin on the statehouse steps in Jackson, Miss. next Wednesday.

Asked Wednesday why he was going South with Ms. Ferraro next week, Mondale said, "I think it's important. I promised Jackson, Miss. I would kick off the campaign there and I'm gonna."

The presence of Ms. Ferraro on the ticket gives Mondale automatic new hope in the industrial Northeast, including New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Connecticut.

Mondale's own Midwestern roots give him a shot in Illinois, Ohio, Minnesota and Michigan. There is also some new optimism hope for the Democrats in Oregon and Washington.

And there is some discussion with the campaign hierarchy on whether to challenge Reagan seriously in his home state of California.

But even if he and Ms. Ferraro carry all those states, they must also pick up at least 60 electoral college votes in states like Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas to get the necessary 270 votes to deny Reagan a second term.

But Southern states which Reagan carried in the 1980 election are seen as vulnerable this year, especially if the "new realism" theme on which Mondale hopes to build his campaign takes hold among southern Democrats, especially those who voted in the primaries for Sens. John Glenn of Ohio and Gary Hart of Colorado.

Rebels won't participate in Nicaraguan elections

By JUAN MALTES
Associated Press Writer

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The main opposition coalition has decided not to take part in the Nov. 4 presidential election because the leftist Sandinista government refuses to negotiate with anti-Sandinista rebels.

In Panama, meanwhile, leaders of the two largest rebel groups signed an agreement pledging to join forces in their guerrilla war against the Sandinstas.

Leaders of the Honduras-based Nicaraguan Democratic Front and the Costa Rica-based Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, in a statement Wednesday, vowed to install "a transitional government of national conciliation, whose top priority mission will be to begin the democratization of the country" and will "culminate within the end of the year in elections that are truly free."

Arturo Cruz, chosen earlier as the opposition coalition's potential presidential candidate, said in Managua that the decision to boycott the election was made because "the Sandinista Front has not given a positive answer to the demand for a national dialogue that includes the anti-Sandinista rebel groups."

The coalition, called the Democratic Coordinate, is made up of business, labor and political groups. It had until midnight Wednesday to register its individual candidates. Under guidelines set by the government, it then could have registered as a coalition on Aug. 4.

"The decision not to register our candidates can be interpreted as a decision not to participate in the elections," said Agustin Jarquin, head of the Christian Social Party, one of those in the coalition supporting Cruz.

Bayardo Arce, political coordinator of the Sandinista National Liberation Front, said the coalition's "abstention does not have any consequence because there are already seven parties that will take part in the elections."

Although there are ideological differences between the seven parties to which Arce referred, they support the Sandinistas in varying degrees.

Cruz came to Nicaragua on Monday from Washington, where he has been living since he resigned as Nicaragua's ambassador to the United States in November 1982, and said rebel leaders had authorized him to negotiate a cease-fire if the government guarantees a free election Nov. 4. The government candidate for president in the election is junta leader Daniel Ortega.

Cuba celebrates 31st anniversary of Castro's revolution

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

CIENFUEGOS, Cuba — Cuba marks the 31st anniversary of the start of Fidel Castro's revolution with nationwide celebrations today and a speech by Castro tonight that may indicate whether he wants better relations with the United States.

The annual 26th of July holiday commemorates the Castro-led rebel attack on an army barracks. The attack failed and Castro was exiled to Mexico, but it established Castro as leader of the opposition to rightist dictator Fulgencio Batista, who was overthrown 5½ years later.

Castro normally delivers a "state of the union" speech on the holiday. In last year's address, he made one of his sharpest attacks on the United States and called President Reagan "the most brutal and sinister" U.S. leader since he took power in January 1959.

John Ferch, head of the U.S. Interests Section in Havana, walked out during the personal attack on Reagan in last year's speech.

But this year's speech — scheduled for this evening — comes just a month after Castro received the Rev. Jesse Jackson on a visit and freed 26 Cuban political prisoners and 22 jailed Americans to go back to the United States with the presidential candidate.

During Jackson's visit, Castro expressed his desire to exchange ambassadors and have high-level talks with the United States.

Two weeks ago, Cuban and State Department negotiators met for three days in New York in the first round of talks on the thorny issue of resumption of Cuban emigration to the United States and the proposed return to Cuba of some 1,000 hardcore criminals sent in the 1980 boatlift. That exodus added 124,789 Cubans to some 1 million who have left Castro's Cuba.

Cuban officials have used the word "signals" in explaining Castro's apparent conciliatory tone. The rout of 750 Cubans from Grenada last Oct. 25 in a U.S.-led invasion after a coup angered Castro, but also raised new fears in Cuba that Reagan might use military force against Cuba itself.

Although Cuba has close ties to the Soviet Union and there are some 10,000 Soviets here, including a 2,500-strong combat brigade, Moscow has never publicly promised to defend Cuba against U.S. attack.

Blind teen looks hopefully to surgery's success

By JULIA MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — A 17-year-old Pampa boy whose world has been a haze of shadows since birth is hoping to see his family for the first time after doctors performed rare surgery that could restore total sight to his right eye.

"I'm not sure what I want to see first," Jimmy Vinson said in a telephone interview from his hospital bed at Seton Medical Center in Austin. "I have a pretty good idea of what my family looks like. But I hope to have a better idea soon."

Doctors performed nearly three hours of surgery Tuesday to remove scar tissue from Vinson's right eye, which should enable the retina to reattach itself.

When bandages were partially removed Wednesday, Vinson detected light in the room.

"I could see a little light. But not much," he said calmly. "I'm really hoping I can see. All the doctors said the surgery went excellent."

Over the next six months, vision should return gradually to his eye, said Dr. Lyle D. Koen, who performed the surgery.

Koen said the type surgery on the boy was "very uncommon."

Until now, Vinson has seen his family only in shadows out of his left eye, which he has always called "my good eye." And he never expected to see more than that.

Born prematurely, he suffered from a congenital eye disorder in his left eye, which doctors say can't be corrected. The blindness in his right eye was associated with exposure to a high level of oxygen, Koen said.

"If you're born premature and exposed to high levels of oxygen, a membrane is formed over the retina like a scar," Koen explained.

The disease is called retrolental fibroplasia, he said.

United States relaxes restrictions on Soviets fishing American waters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet fishermen will be free to fish in American waters for the first time since President Carter imposed a ban to punish Moscow for its invasion of Afghanistan in 1979, the State Department says.

President Reagan decided to ease the ban even though Soviet troops remain in Afghanistan and fighting continues. The decision, announced by the State Department Wednesday, has the twofold purpose of benefiting American fishermen and encouraging improved relations with Moscow.

But Oleg Sokolov, the second-ranking diplomat at the Soviet Embassy here, told reporters upon leaving the State Department where he was informed of the decison that it was "nothing special."

Soviet fishermen will be able to catch up to 50,000 tons of fish in an area of the Pacific Ocean from central California to the Bering Sea. That amounts to only a fraction of the 400,000 to 500,000 tons that Moscow was harvesting prior to the invasion of Afghanistan.

Easing the fishing ban is the second major Carter-imposed sanction — aimed at punishing Moscow for its invasion of Afghanistan — that Reagan has changed. Soon after taking office in 1981, he lifted a ban on U.S. grain sales to Moscow, citing benefits to American farmers.

Other sanctions, stemming both from the invasion of Afghanistan and the Soviet role in the 1981 imposition of martial law in Poland, remain in effect. They include suspension of all Soviet airline service, suspended talks on a joint maritime agreement, and licensing requirements for certain categories of oil and gas equipment and other technology.

In another move apparently intended to signal a desire for improved relations with Moscow, White House officials disclosed Wednesday that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko will be welcome to travel to the United States in a Soviet aircraft for the U.N. General Assembly in New York this fall and that Secretary of State George P. Shultz hopes to meet with him.

The State Department said easing of the fishing ban "will provide greater employment opportunities and other benefits for U.S. fishermen," including the expansion of joint U.S.-Soviet fishing ventures.

Since 1976, the Soviet Union has jointly operated a Seattle, Wash., fish processing plant, Marine Resources Co., with American commercial interests.

Although Moscow has been prohibited from fishing in U.S. waters, it has been able to buy fish from American fishermen to process in the plant. The easing of the fishing ban means an additional $8 million in earnings for participating U.S. fishermen, the State Department said.

The administration said its decision to ease the ban "is governed by our desire to promote the U.S. fishing industry." In addition to more earnings, it will give American fishermen an opportunity "to benefit from Soviet technology and expertise in fishing."

U.S.-Soviet relations, while still tense, have shown signs of improving in recent weeks, and the announcement said the easing of the ban was partly aimed at "promoting a constructive dialogue with the Soviet Union and facilitating non-strategic trade exchanges."

Soviets mount new Afghan offensive

New York Times News Service

The Soviet Army and Air Force have mounted a new offensive against guerrillas in three sectors of Afghanistan, according to reports reaching the West from official sources in Pakistan and India.

The Soviet attacks, Western analysts said, began last week and are continuing. They said the attacks had been accompanied by heavy bombardment of villages supporting the Afghan guerrillas.

The most recent Soviet attacks have been in three areas; the Logar Valley south of Kabul, the Shomali Valley running north from the capital, and Herat Province, which lies in the extreme west bordering Iran. One of the Soviet Air Force's major bases is near Herat.

While the Logar Valley operation was under way, Western analysts said. Soviet artillery were reported to have shelled targets in the southern Shomali Valley, north of Kabul. The main highway runs north through this valley to the frontier.

Here, too, analysts believe that the Soviet objective was to clear the valley of insurgents and their supporters. The shelling, according to reports reaching Pakistan, was extremely heavy and accurate.

Insurgent bases and ammunition stores were the targets of a strong force of Soviet ground troops who swept into the west of Herat Province last week.

Soviet operations appear to be following a now familiar pattern, the Western analysts said. As in the Panjshir Valley campaign in April, May and June, the Russians are reportedly seeking to clear insurgents from regions that could be used as bases for attack against the major highway that connects their main bases.

This runs from Termez on the Amu Darya River, the frontier between the two countries, south, southwest and finally north, passing through Kabul, Ghazni, Khandahar and Herat until it crosses the Soviet border about 50 miles north of Herat.

All the main Soviet strongholds are on or close to this highway and from a military standpoint, the analysts said, it is essential that traffic move freely if the Soviet forces are to have logistical support for their operations.

Vietnamese woman watched companions starve

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A Vietnamese woman, recounting her 32-day ordeal at sea, said she watched 68 companions die of cold and hunger as their boat drifted in the South China Sea, ignored by dozens of passing ships.

"We threw their bodies into the sea as soon as they died, but later on we were too weak to push them out of the boat and all I could do was cry as their bodies lay beside me," said Dinh Xuan Hoa, 24, one of 16 Vietnamese rescued by Filipino fishermen on July 7.

"We saw about 40 ships and we raised our white blouses on top of our boat and we cried 'SOS! SOS!' but they didn't come near us," Miss Dinh told The Associated Press from her bed in a Manila government hospital, where she was being treated for malnutrition.

Social workers for the U.N. high commissioner for refugees said they had interviewed several of the survivors, who corroborated Miss Dinh's story.

U.N. figures put the number of refugees waiting in Southeast Asia to be resettled at about 260,000. More than 500,000 people have landed in Southeast Asian countries since South Vietman fell to the Communist north in 1975.

Many who survived their sea voyage have told of pirate attacks, including rapes of women.

Miss Dinh gave these details of her ordeal.

Her half-brother, the captain of the 36-foot boat, died on the journey. She identified him as Koan Chau Dat, a pilot in the former South Vietnamese air force. Others who died included two teen-age boys who she said went crazy during the voyage.

Ten of the bodies thrown into the sea were those of children, the eldest 8 and the youngest 21 months, she said.

She said the only food the refugees took with them when they left Ben Tre in southern Vietnam on June 6 were six sacks of sweet potatoes. Like the boat's engine, the potatoes lasted for a week.

After the food ran out, they drank rainwater. They soaked it up in clothes and towels, which they wrung out to drink.

Some drank their own urine, according to a U.N. social worker who interviewed the survivors after they were rescued off the coastal town of Santa Cruz, 105 miles northeast of Manila.

After their 68 companions died, the 16 survivors caught two fish, each shorter than a hand's breadth, which they divided equally, said Miss Dinh, who said she shrank during the voyage from 115 pounds to 80 pounds.

Seven men, seven women and two teen-age boys survived. The oldest was 39. When they reached shore, the survivors were too weak to stand.

The first to die, a week after they ran out of food, were a man and his small son.

"They boy kept on crying and crying," Miss Dinh said. "Suddenly he was not crying anymore...We threw both into the sea at the same time. There were three or four people who died each day...They all died because there was no food and they were cold."

When the boat was out of Vietnamese waters, a storm hit, lashing the boat with rain for 10 days, Miss Dinh said.

Miss Dinh, a university student majoring in English, said she and her half-brother had hoped to reach the Philippines for eventual resettlment in the United States.

Her brother came down with the flu and died two days later. "We threw his body immediately. I felt pity, but what was the use of keeping his body?" she said.

Soviet cosmonaut takes 'giant leap' for womankind with walk in space

Savitskaya

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet cosmonaut Svetlana Savitskaya, the first woman to travel into space twice, became the first woman to walk in space when she left the orbiting Salyut 7 space station to perform experiments, Tass reported.

The official news agency said she was joined on the space walk Wednesday by cosmonaut Vladimir Dzhanibekov, and they "went into open space...in accordance with the flight program" for more than three hours.

Miss Savitskaya's achievements stole some of the potential glamor from an American space shuttle flight scheduled for October. During that flight, Kathy Sullivan plans to take a space walk; it will now be the first by an American woman.

Also, Sally Ride, America's first woman in space, will be on the flight, her second into space.

But Miss Savitskaya has already become the first woman to travel into space twice.

Miss Savitskaya, Dzhanibekov and Igor Volk blasted into space last week aboard a Soyuz T-12 space ship. They joined three other cosmonauts, Leonid Kizim, Vladimir Solovyev and Oleg Atkov, who have been aboard the orbital research station for 168 days today.

Miss Savitskaya had spent nine days aboard the Salyut 7 in August 1982.

In an update on the current flight, Tass said today that Miss Savitskaya's "successful performance of unique experiments in conditions of outer space has vividly shown a possibility of women's effective activity in the performance of complex research work not only aboard manned orbital complexes but in the open space as well."

Miss Savitskaya used an electronic beam and control panel to cut, weld and solder metal plates and spray them with a metal coating while Dzhanibekov filmed her, Tass said.

Tass said the two cosmonauts returned safely to the orbiting capsule after 3 hours and 35 minutes of work outside the spacecraft.

The report on the Tass English-language service said: "The main aim of the walk in open space was to test the new general purpose, hand-operated tool designed to carry out complex technological operations. The woman cosmonaut took an active part in this work."

A Tass correspondent wrote that he watched Miss Savitskaya hover in space "on the huge screen of the main hall of the (mission control) center."

He said the hand-operated tool she used weighs more than 66 pounds on earth but is weightless in space.

"However, it is not easy to work with it (the tool)," the Tass reporter wrote. "The space suit is not elastic enough and for each movement, a person expends much more energy than when back on Earth."

Israelis counting final batch of ballots

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The final batch of ballots was counted today as Israel's two major parties maneuvered to break the election deadlock and find the leverage that could enable them to form a government without the other's help.

Both the opposition Labor Party and Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's Likud bloc were holding secret talks in attempts to lure smaller parties — which together won about one-third of the vote Monday — into a coalition government.

Israel radio quoted Labor Party sources as saying "a surprising development" could be expected Friday, and the Hadashot newspaper said Labor officials believed they were on the verge of completing a coalition. But Likud officials said their talks with small parties indicated nothing had been settled, Hadashot said.

There were widespread doubts that any coalition excluding one of the major parties would be effective. Even former Prime Minister Menachem Begin — a founder of Likud — suggested that a bipartisan unity government led by Shamir might be a good solution.

"If the Likud and the Labor alignment were united it would be easy to form a government. There are very serious problems in the country as such and under the circumstances I think it would be a good idea," Begin said Wednesday in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Even the final allocation of the 120 Knesset seats that were the subject of the voting remained undecided. Projections issued Tuesday gave Labor 45 seats to Likud's 41. But the votes of Israeli soldiers were not expected to be fully counted until late today, and the Central Elections Committee also has to allocate eight to 10 undistributed seats before the final results become known.

The election committee said it would know the final results by late today, but a spokesman said the final figures might not be made public immediately.

British coal board reports loss of $1.1 billion in year

LONDON (AP) — The National Coal Board today reported a loss of more than $1.1 billion in the fiscal year ending March 31, and said a quarter of it was due to the strike that has crippled Britain's state-owned coal industry.

The coal board said a ban on overtime last November, which caused a big slump in output, also contributed to the $1.164 billion loss.

The reporting period covered only about two weeks of the 4½-month-old strike by the National Union of Mineworkers, which began March 12.

The report attributed $282 million of the loss to the labor dispute, now in its 20th week with no chance of an early settlement. The strike was called to protest plans to close unprofitable mines and eliminate about 20,000 of the industry's 183,000 jobs.

Infant subjected to searches

ARMAGH, Northern Ireland (AP) — The two-month-old daughter of an inmate at a top-security women's prison has been subjected to regular body searches, the Northern Ireland Office says.

The child's mother, Jacqueline Moore, 20, is at Armagh prison awaiting trial on murder charges arising from a 1982 bomb attack on a bar in Ballykelly in which 11 off-duty British soldiers and six civilians were killed.

A spokesman for the Northern Ireland Office, who declined to be identified, said Wednesday that the baby is regularly given a "light, run-down search" as a security precaution. "This is a necessary measure carried out with proper sensitivity," he said.

The child will be allowed to stay with her mother until she is nine months old under prison regulations, the government spokesman said.

Police arrest protesters

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Police arrested at least 185 people who rallied outside Government House to demand the release of jailed political leader Wilson Ferreira Aldunate.

Witnesses said Ferreira's wife, Susana, and other officials of the opposition National Party were among those herded into buses Wednesday and taken to a police station. The witnesses estimated 300 people were arrested, but police sources, speaking on condition they not be identified, said the total was 185.

Reagan plays on Texas connection

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — President Reagan says he's given Texas a Texan while the Democrats are offering the state "the back of their hand."

Playing on Vice President George Bush's Texas ties, Reagan delighted a crowd of supporters in a heavily Democratic city by saying "you've made me feel at least like an adopted son."

He told a Wednesday lakeside rally here that Texans had given him "one of your finest."

"Believe me, Texas has no more loyal son that my partner, George Bush," the president said, listing Bush's experience as a congressman, director of the CIA, ambassador to the United Nations and representative to the Republic of China.

Although Reagan never mentioned Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro of New York by name, his reading of Bush's resume was an obvious reminder to Texans that the vice president is a Texan with experience.

"At their convention, the leadership of the Democratic Party gave Texas the back of their hand. Well, we've come to give you a message from our heart. We care about Texas," he told a crowd estimated between 15,000 and 25,000.

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who had been considered as a running mate for Democratic nominee Walter Mondale, said, "That is ridiculous."

"I thought the convention went extremely well and the polls show it did," said Bentsen.

Bush, in his first campaign appearance of the year with Reagan, said, "I'm proud to serve for a president who stands up for our country and doesn't apologize for the United States of America.

"One good term deserves another," Bush told the crowd.

Most in the lunchtime crowd agreed. A few did not.

"They're having a family affair across the street as if we are all one big, happy family," said Isolda Sanchez, an 18-year-old University of Texas student who held a protest sign near the rally. "We're not all one big, happy family."

Protesters distributed rally tickets similar to the officials ones printed by the Republicans. But where the official tickets said "Ticket to the Future," the protesters' tickets said "Ticket to Destruction."

Reagan-Bush supporters waved hand-written campaign signs passed out at the gate. The loudest ovation — other than that given Reagan and Bush — was sparked by the introduction of former Gov. Bill Clements, who was unseated in 1982 by Democrat Mark White.

Threatener to undergo testing

Associated Press

TYLER — A former mental patient who described himself as a "loner who couldn't hold a steady job" was ordered to undergo three months of psychiatric evaluations after threatening to kill Vice President George Bush, officials said.

Mark Van Hall, who was working as a ticket agent at Pounds Field in Tyler where the vice president's plane landed Tuesday, was ordered to the federal prison at Springfield, Mo., by Federal Magistrate Houston Abel.

At the hearing, federal authorities said Hall previously spent time at Terrell State Hospital in 1978. They said he was also treated by psychologists at the University of Houston.

Hall, 24, was arrested without incident at his south Tyler apartment Monday night by Secret Service agents after they had been told by Hall's co-workers that he made threats against the vice president's life, according to the Tyler Morning Telegraph.

Bush was in Tyler Tuesday on a campaign swing through Texas.

"What concerned us was his job allowed him free access at the airport," said Secret Service Agent Thomas Holman.

Holman said Hall "described himself as a loner who can't seem to hold a steady job." At a hearing, Holman said a co-worker of Hall's notified federal authorities after Hall threatened the vice president.

"Hall's co-worker told us he had stated 'I'm going to shoot the vice president when he gets to Tyler,'" Holman said. "Hall also told fellow employees he planned to be on the runway when the vice president arrived."

Co-workers said Hall told them he was going to appear at the vice president's arrival wearing camouflage clothing and that he had access to LAWs, or Light Anti-Tank Weapons, Holman said. The people Hall talked to at work took the threats against Bush "very seriously" Holman said.

Authorities said Hall will be brought back to Tyler after the psychiatric evalutaions and another hearing will be held to determine bond.

Holman said co-workers characterize Hall as a carefree person fearing nothing and they agree he did not get along with his fellow employees.

A different description came from the manager of an apartment complex where Hall has lived since May. Lee Chandler said, "he is one of the nicest people I've ever met. The first thing I thought when they came and arrested him was that they had made a mistake."

She said Hall was "really well liked, helping some of the ladies with groceries and other tasks."

Disgruntled Democrats could make difference

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — A new group of disgruntled Texas Democrats and independent voters who have agreed to work for the Reagan-Bush ticket could make a difference in this year's presidential campaign, says U.S. Sen. John Tower.

"Neither Walter Mondale nor Geraldine Ferraro reflects the political or philosophical views of many Democrats in Texas," Tower told a news conference Wednesday.

About 50 members of the newly-organized Texans for Reagan had a private hour-long visit with President Ronald Reagan and Vice President George Bush, after the GOP candidates appeared at an Austin rally.

State Democratic Party chairman Bob Slagle called the group "a handful of millionaires."

"Basically, most of those folks on Reagan's list haven't supported a Democratic nominee for president since the 1940s," Slagle said.

Not so, said Tower.

"These people reflect the aspirations of a large majority of the people of Texas," said Tower, who is co-chairman of the Reagan-Bush state campaign.

Former Gov. Allan Shivers, who help set up the group of independents and Democrats to work for the GOP ticket, said he thinks the idea can be successful.

"I have seen Democrats for Eisenhower be successful in carrying the state (1956), and I think we can make this a successful Reagan-Bush campaign," Shivers said.

Tower released a list of 84 names for a "steering committee," which included some former Democrat office holders.

Several members of the group said Reagan and Bush spent almost an hour with them in a downtown hotel after the outdoor rally.

"They met everybody and both of them spoke. It was very informal and very nice," said Dick Miller of El Paso.

Tower said the list of Reagan-Bush supporters would be enlarged.

"The purpose of this organization is solely to endorse the president," Tower said.

REBELS

Ortega has said it would be possible to suspend the state-of-emergency law restricting press and other freedoms only "if the American aggression ceases." The United States supports the anti-Sandinista rebels.

Ortega said a week ago that the government was relaxing press censorship to permit campaigning and would censor only stories related to national security. The next day, censors prohibited La Prensa, Nicaragua's only independent newspaper, from publishing two stories not related to defense or national security.

The official Sandinista newspaper Barricada charged Wednesday that Cruz's campaign was financed by the Reagan administration and the CIA.

Barricada said Cruz "brings to Nicaragua the platform of Washington to pardon the ringleaders of the counter-revolution. Cruz presented his candidacy like an intermediary of the mercenaries, financed by (President) Reagan and the CIA and as the aspiring representative of the anti-communists."

Cruz, in a speech Wednesday to 1,000 followers in Managua, said, "A national dialogue including all Nicaraguans must be held for the Democratic Coordinate to participate (in the election)."

The government has rejected talks with the rebels, referring to them as "beasts." Cruz said Tuesday that the anti-Sandinista rebels "are ready to put down their weapons if the government accepts the demands of the opposition for free elections."

He said he was authorized to negotiate by top officials of the Nicaraguan Democratic Front and the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance. Both are fighting the Sandinistas, who overthrew rightist dictator Gen. Anastasio Somoza in July 1979.

Signing the alliance agreement in Pamana City were leaders Alfonso Robelo, Roberto Ferrey and Juan Zavala of the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance (ARDE) and Alfonso Callejas and Indalecio Rodriguez of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force.

Conspicuously absent was the signature of Eden Pastora, the charismatic leader of ARDE's guerrilla forces. Pastora has opposed unification with the Honduras-based group because its military command includes former members of Somoza's national guard.

In a separate development, President Jose Napoleon Duarte returned to El Salvador after a 10-day trip to Western Europe and the United States. He said prospects for additional U.S. aid to El Salvador look promising.

Reagan has been seeking congressional approval for more aid to Central America, including $117 million in military assistance and $134 million in economic aid for El Salvador, which is fighting leftist guerrillas.

BLIND

"As time passes, after a year to 18 months, the scar membrane contracts and pulls the retina completely off. The retina is suspended in the middle of eye and no longer functions," Koen said.

"Once you cut the scar tissue away, the retina reattaches spontaneously. And once the retina reattaches, he should see again," the surgeon said.

Koen said if the retina heals as expected, the teen-ager will regain sight in his right eye.

"Assuming there are no other problems with the retina, like holes, and I didn't see any, the retina should reattach and he should have an improvement in vision," Koen said Wednesday.

But he cautioned that the quality of vision is difficult to predict.

Vinson's sister, Karla Cho, told the Pampa News the family thinks the surgery is a miracle.

"The doctors always thought his blindness resulted from a lack of oxygen at birth, not a detached retina," she said.

"We never dreamed this would happen. We dreamed it but it was just a dream, that was all," she said.

Vinson, a native of Pampa, attends the Austin School for the Blind where he is considered a gifted student. He is an accomplished musician and plays professionally in Austin night clubs. He plays piano, trombone, clarinet and bass and has written his first song.

He said he doesn't know how sight will affect his life.

"I haven't thought about it very much," he said. "I want to go to college. I'm really hoping to see, but if I don't, it was my bad eye anyway."

CASTRO

Castro also would want to improve U.S. relations in hope that the trade embargo imposed by President Kennedy in the early 1960s would be lifted. Cut off from the Western Hemisphere's biggest market, Cuba's floundering economy has become increasingly dependent upon Soviet aid, which totals about $4 billion yearly.

Renewed emigration to the United States also would give Cuba's government a release for pressure building up from unemployed youth and discontented people anxious to join relatives in exile.

Since the 1980 boatlift, in which Cuba sent thousands of people direct from jail and mocked U.S. entreaties to stop the influx, the U.S. Interests Section here has issued visas to fewer than 1,000 people. Only Cubans with children, parents or spouses with American citizenship are considered.

During Jackson's visit, Castro referred to possible establishment of a "quota" for Cuba, which under U.S. law would allow 20,000 Cuban immigrants a year. State Department officials have estimated as many as 500,000 Cubans — out of a total population of 10 million — would emigrate if given the chance.

But while Castro has apparent motive for improving U.S. relations, he hasn't yet offered any concessions. Cuban officials, for example, have insisted on holding "veto power" on a case-by-case basis on boatlift refugees classified by U.S. officials as excludable. U.S. officials say other nations can't veto the return of their citizens who have been declared excludable.

The United States also wants Cuba to remove an estimated 3,000 military advisors from Nicaragua, stop aiding El Salvador's leftist rebels, and pull out all troops from southern Africa.

U.S. officials will be listening carefully to Castro's speech tonight for more signals.

Heat, freeze damages trees in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — In the midst of sweltering summer heat, Fort Worth's evergreen trees, damaged by last winter's record-setting freeze, are dying by the hundreds.

Nearly all of the 400 Italian cypress trees, carefully picked for a 1975 bicentennial planting project, have turned brown and lifeless. Only 16 are still alive, but dying slowly every day, officials said.

"We're still finding stuff dying day to day," said Charles Campbell, Fort Worth Parks and Recreation Department director. "We can't even assess this thing."

The long line of 15-foot trees is but one exhibit of the "enormous" tree damage from both last winter's freeze and this summer's prolonged hot, dry conditions that have claimed weakened trees, Campbell said.

Heat is putting stress on weakened live oaks and crape myrtles, and the result is potentially lethal bark splitting, he said.

"If you'd asked me six weeks ago, I would have said the damage was minimal, no more than some shrubs and grass," Campbell said. "Today, I'd call it kind of semi-catastrophic."

Downtown live oak trees seem to be hit the hardest, officials said. At City Hall, nearly half are beyond saving, Campbell said.

In other parts of the city, trees appear to be affected, but not as severely, he said. Overall, Campbell estimated, 10 percent to 30 percent of Fort Worth's trees have serious damage.

Ruby Jo Halden, a member of the neighborhood association that raised the money for the 400 Bicentennial trees, mourns the "tragedy of the trees."

"My kids tell me I'm going to have a wreck looking at the trees, always looking for spots of green," she said. "They may not remember it, but those kids have grown up with those trees."

County Commissioner Dick Anderson said his Precinct 1 contingency fund has enough money to replace the dead trees with something more suited to cold winters.

"We're going to replant with the hope and faith of the pioneers and start again," he said.

Seven charged in largest arson case in history

BOSTON (AP) — Seven men charged with setting 163 fires, in part to halt fire and police department layoffs following a tax cut, caused $22 million in damage and 282 injuries in "the largest arson case in history," authorities said.

An 83-count federal indictment issued Wednesday alleges that the seven, including two firefighters and two housing policemen, began setting fires in trash cans to frighten residents, but later targeted commercial and residential buildings when the smaller blazes failed to attract enough attention.

By the summer of 1982, suspicious fires were so frequent in Boston and surrounding towns that the city became known as the "arson capital of the world," said U.S. Attorney William Weld. Many of the fires broke out on Fridays, and in one four-day period, firefighters answered 131 alarms.

Firefighters said they were stunned by the indictments.

"These guys were sick puppies," said Boston Fire Capt. Matthew Corbett. "Trying to understand their reason for doing this is impossible. They weren't helping firefighters — they were endangering firefighters' lives."

The indictment said the fires were set mostly to force the city to rehire police and firefighters laid off after the state's Proposition 2½, a wide-ranging tax cut aimed at reducing the public payroll, went into effect in July 1981.

"The Proposition 2½ motive was to dramatize the need for more firefighters," Weld said.

However, some fires were set for profit or revenge, and some of the suspects worked for companies that stood to gain insurance money, he said.

Weld said the fires, set between Feb. 19, 1982, and April 27, 1983, caused $22 million worth of damage and injured 282 people, including 65 firefighters. Four people suffered permanent injuries, he said.

The most costly fire was a $13 million blaze at the Spero Toy Co. in South Boston on June 3, 1982, that injured 31 firefighters.

The buildings burned included homes, restaurants, factories, churches, a Marine Corps barracks and the Massachusetts Fire Academy. The men eventually began setting fires outside the city, in five eastern Massachusetts counties, to confuse investigators and avoid being apprehended, the indictment said.

"This is the largest arson case in history, both state and federally, in terms of the number of fires," Weld said.

The arrests Wednesday culminated a two-year investigation by state, federal and local authorities. The charges, which stem from fires reported between Feb. 19, 1982, and April 27, 1983, include conspiracy, arson of interstate facilities, arson of federal buildings, manufacture and possession of unregistered incendiary devices, obstruction of justice, mailing threatening communicatons and perjury.

Weld identified those arrested as: Sgt. Gregg M. Bemis, 23, and Lt. Wayne S. Sanden, 28, both of the Boston Housing Authority police; Airman 1st Class Leonard A. Kendall Jr., 22, of Acton, a fireman with the U.S. Air Force who was seized in Valdosta, Ga.; and Ray J. Norton Jr., 44, a Boston firefighter.

Also arrested were Joseph Gorman, 27, a rigger at a General Dynamics Co. plant in Quincy; Christopher R. Damon, 27, an employee of Industrial Health of Hamilton, Ohio; and Donald F. Stackpole, 28, a partner in Metro Security Patrol, a South Boston security company.

Murderer predicted own death

Gov. Clinton

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — Four months before he went on a shooting rampage that left four people dead and three wounded, Wayne Lee Crossley had predicted he would "die in a gunfight with police," says a woman who knew him.

Crossley, who died of a self-inflicted wound after his shooting spree Tuesday, also once threatened to kill the owner of a motel across the street from the one in which he gunned down four people.

Margaret Echols, 40, manager of the Quality Inn, said she knew Crossley from his skirmishes with her fellow workers and those at the Grand Central Motor Lodge, where Crossley fled after trading shots with a police officer who had stopped a car in which he was riding.

Mrs. Echols said that in February, Crossley threatened her boss, Max Sandoval. "He showed Max a gun and said, 'I can blow you away,'" she said.

Kelly Meeks, a front desk manager at the Quality Inn, said Crossley had told her in March: "You know, I know how I'm going to die. I will die in a gunfight with police."

Crossley, 31, of Benton, was in a car stopped by police Sgt. Wayne Warwick on Tuesday night, police said. He shot Warwick and, with a wound in his shoulder, went to the Grand Central Motor Lodge, where police say he shot to death four people and wounded two others.

Crossley then shot himself through the heart, police said.

One of three other people in the car was shot in the arm, but police weren't sure whether Crossley or Warwick wounded him.

Police said they were told that Warwick would suffer some paralysis.

In the aftermath of the violence, Gov. Bill Clinton urged judges and prosecutors Wednesday to seek stiffer penalties for people with a reputation for violence. Authorities have said that Crossley had a criminal record spanning 16 years.

"Sometimes people making threats mean what they say," Clinton said. "Sometimes it may be the better part of wisdom, in cases that may seem minor at the time but which have a heavy potential for violence, to throw the book at them."

Clinton added that those who glamorize violence should "make sure people understand there's another side to this shooting people down in the streets like animals."

Movies, television, books and magazines often portray violence as "exciting and attractive, and we need to make sure we don't do anything to further romanticize violence," the governor said.

Clinton visited Warwick's family and praised the wounded police sergeant.

New York officials waging war against black flies

INDIAN LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — Bun ndt, crouching in the grass of a aver marsh, seems oblivious to the warm of hump-backed flies search- g for a tender spot on his leathery eck.

But the black flies, scourge of orthern mountains wherever ooks run cold and fast, have iven lesser men mad.

Unlike their larger cousins, the osquitoes, black flies don't sip ood delicately through a fine straw. The flies chew a hole, drink their fill, and leave scabby, itching welts the size of dimes — quarters, on sensitive folks.

But the 63-year-old Arndt is used to bugs after 50 years of trapping, hunting, fishing and working as a backwoods guide around this Adirondack's engaged in bacteriological warfare against the dreaded gnats — a war that many north country villages are watching closely in hopes that a victory will boost the $370 million tourist trade.

"They're really not bad now," says Arndt, holding a knotted string across the creek to calculate water speed and volume. "Used to be, they'd carry you right off. Couldn't even fish."

The pine tar and pennyroyal aroma of Ole Time Woodsman Fly Dope permeates the air as Arndt and his colleagues check stones for fly larvae and measure out a little foul-smelling brown syrup to be diluted with water and flung into the current.

The syrup is Bti — Bacillus thuringiensis israelensis. The bacteria, which kills the filter-feeding larvae of black flies, mosquitoes and midges, has been used successfully in the tropics for several years. In West Africa, where the black fly carries the parasite which has infected an estimated 40 million people with river blindness, the World Health Organization is treating 50,000 square miles with Bti.

The bacterial insecticide is being used experimentally this year in Minnesota's lake region. It has also been tried out around Harrisburg, Pa., and in parts of Newfoundland.

New York research, supported in part by the World Health Organization and the National Institutes for Health, was completed last year in Onchiota, north of Lake Placid. State biologist Daniel Molloy said Bti killed 98 percent of black fly larvae in that experiment.

"There has never been an insecticide that is so specific against black flies," said Molloy. In streams, where black fly larvae grow like wiggling moss on rocks, Bti kills virtually nothing but the black fly larvae. The Bti dissipates quickly, leaving the water safe to drink within 48 hours.

The only ecological concern is that destroying the black fly population may cut the food supply for fish, Molloy said.

Nil compassion

In the numbing wake of the tragic shooting in San Ysidro, Calif. that left 21 people dead and 19 others injured last week what is not needed is more craziness. We've had enough of that.

But the maniacal slaughter makes good fodder for propagandists with a political ax to grind and, true to form, here come the Soviets, utilizing the tragic shooting as support for their earlier decision to keep Communist athletes out of this summer's Olympic Games.

Pravda, the daily newspaper of the Communist Party, said the 41-year-old gunman, James Oliver Huberty, exemplified widespread feelings in America of hatred for Communism, bitterness left from the Vietnam War and despair over unemployment. It said the shooting showed the "climate of violence" that prevails in Southern California.

Well, yes, it's impossible to counter the claim that the shooting was a violent act, or that Huberty for whatever reason tried to make it appear that the shooting was motivated by experiences in Vietnam although service records indicate he never served in Vietnam or even the Armed Forces.

Yes, he was unemployed and, yes, that may have been an influencing factor in his apparent mental derangement. But to say that it was the sole reason for the killing spree is a little far-fetched.

What is left in Southern California right now is grief and a feeling of incomprehension. Nothing more. How can it happen that in this or any country a person can storm into a public place packed with people, open fire and continue firing until the ground is covered in blood? How can it happen? Why would it happen?

We don't know. Even the coroner who performed the autopsy on Huberty's body says he may never know. It was merely one of those grievous, tragic events that occurs over which every human being with a touch of compassion should join in expressing regret for and, at the same time, sympathy for the families of the victims.

The Soviets decided to turn the tragedy into a propaganda tool. That truly says something of the compassion inside the Kremlin.

Gold-medal effort

No stopwatches time these runners, and there are no gold medals at the end of their runs. Yet the thousands of Americans who have participated in the Olympic torch relay have carried the spirit of the Olympic movement throughout America.

Millions of Americans have watched and cheered as runners young and old, rich and poor, firm and infirm have borne the flame across the United States from New York City to Southern California. The runners have carried their torches through major cities and rural communities, running day and night through the varied terrain and climate found in this vast land. When the relay's final runner enters the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum during Saturday's opening ceremony, the flame will have traveled more than 9,000 miles in an 82-day odyssey that has generated intense feelings of pride and patriotism every step of the way.

Although most of the thousands of participants and millions of spectators who viewed the torch relay will be unable to compete in or attend the games, they have been a very real part of this Olympiad. Moreover, the relay has done more than merely get America in the mood for the Games. The money raised — $3,000 a kilometer — goes to support both the Olympics and local youth sports programs across the nation.

The runners who have carried the torches are amateur athletes in the truest sense of the word, running not for gold or personal glory, but to support the Olympic ideal. They have performed in gold-medal fashion.

Another View:

Mitterrand's move

Walter Mondale isn't the only politician who is edging toward the center. French President Francois Mitterrand is also seeing the light, and cutting ties with his junior partner in government, the communists.

After three years as the French Fifth Republic's first president of the left, the socialist Mitterrand has shed his old-line leftist Premier Pierre Mauroy for centrist technocrat Laurent Fabius. The communists have declined to remain in the coalition, which was to be expected.

With an absolute majority of socialists in parliament, Mitterrand never needed the troublesome communists to govern; the partnership was viewed as a way to keep the communist-led labor unions in check.

But the coalition was not popular with the public, which gave Mitterrand's socialists only 21 percent of the vote in the recent Europarliament elections, and the communists just 11 percent.

Economic realities forced Mitterrand to drop most of his plans for greater government control of the French economy. Opposition from the French middle class also prevented his goal to take over the private French school system. Now there is widespread speculation that Fabius will crack down on labor-union agitation.

Mitterrand always has been clearly pro-Western in foreign policy. He dared criticize the Soviet government's brutal treatment of dissident Andrei Sakharov during a visit to Moscow. He also said French-Soviet summit meetings no longer would be held annually; only when necessary and something could be accomplished. (Are you listening, Fritz?)

Blessed with a seven-year, strong-president term — a legacy of the late Charles de Gaulle — Mitterrand has four more years to get back in touch with economic reality and public opinion.

JACK ANDERSON

Official helped firm get bailout

WASHINGTON — Congressional investigators digging into General Dynamics' billion-dollar bailout by Congress in 1978 are particularly interested in the role played by then-Assistant Navy Secretary Edward Hidalgo.

Jack Anderson

The company's internal documents on a multi-million-dollar submarine contract have been examined by my associate Indy Badhwar. The documents indicate that Hidalgo was instrumental in persuading company executives to drop their claims for cost overruns and, instead, to ask for a congressional bailout on grounds that the company was in danger of financial collapse. The defense contractor took Hidalgo's advice, even though General Dynamics was in sound financial shape and, therefore, not entitled to a bailout.

The result was that General Dynamics was given $1 billion by Congress — roughly twice the amount it had originally claimed it was owed in cost overruns. Hidalgo became a consultant to General Dynamics after he left the Navy; congressional sourses say he earned about $75,000 in fees from the company.

The company's claim for $544 million was disallowed by the Navy's Claims Settlement Board. Its findings so outraged Adm. Hyman Rickover that he asked for a Justice Department investigation. A grand jury was convened but the case was closed by high Justice Department officials. Despite this, Congress approved the $1 billion windfall for General Dynamics.

Now P. Takis Veliotis, a former company vice president and board member, has told congressional investigators for Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., that even the $544 million overrun claim was fraudulent, let alone the $1 billion bailout. He estimates that General Dynamics owes the government about $1.5 billion.

Company documents make clear that Hidalgo and General Dynamics executives considered the "blue suits" — uniformed Navy officers — to be the chief stumbling blocks to the company's multi-million-dollar claim. One inter-office memo referred to two admirals, Donald Hall and Albert Kelln, who were perceived to be hostile to the company's interests, as "the two admiral clowns."

According to another memo by General Dynamics Vice President G.E. MacDonald, Hidalgo thought of another admiral, F.R. Manganaro, as an adversary to be evaded. The memo said the assistant Navy secretary "had withdrawn the (overrun claim) from the Manganaro Claims Board, and that he had established a new review team within the secretary's office."

The memo added significantly: "Hidalgo said he would, without question, be grilled by various congressional committees on what our claim is really worth. ... Hidalgo asked that all of the discussions be kept off the record ...."

The internal documents make one wonder whose side Hidalgo as on — General Dynamics' or the taxpayer's. He seemed determined to press for the bailout of General Dynamics, even though the company's sound financial condition disqualified it for such help under the law.

According to a MacDonald memo, when company executives insisted on pressing their original claim, Hidalgo told them: "Absolutely not. It would blow our main case" — that is, for the bailout.

Company Vice President Max Golden noted in another memo that Hidalgo told him at a private meeting that he had met with aides of several congressman who had General Dynamics contracts in their districts.

According to Golden, Hidalgo stated: "One message that came through loud and clear was: 'There could be no further request of Congress for claim money.' He stated many times that he was laboring on our behalf in the Navy, Department of Defense and the Office of Management and Budget. He suggested that we meet again ... indicating that it probably would be best to continue to meet alone for the time being."

Footnote: A General Dynamics spokesman vehemently denied charges of wrongdoing by the company. He said the Justice Department had vindicated the firm.

ARGENTINE ACCIDENT: As a matter of principle, U.S. officials were worried about Argentina's ambitious nuclear program, fearing that the world would soon have another nuclear power — and one with a dubious record for peace and stability.

Now they're worried on safety grounds. Last Sept. 23, an accident at an Argentine research reactor caused the death of one person and exposed 16 others to dangerous radiation. What made the accident cause for alarm is that it was apparently caused by sheer carelessness.

CHANGE OF HEART: Immigration officials have backed down from their initial refusal to let a legless illegal alien travel to Mexico and return with two of his children, who are needed for a bone marrow transplant for their baby brother in an Oklahoma City hospital. Such transplants work only if they come from siblings.

The immigration service said that since the man was in this country illegally, it could not let him go back home and then enter the United States with official sanction. The man had lost both legs in a farm accident while deportation proceedings were moving slowly along.

After a stern letter from Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., immigration officials relented. They said they just needed some kind of official request before they could bend the law.

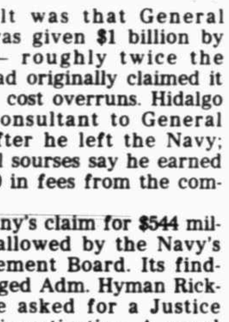
GEORGE F. WILL

World sloshing along fine

WASHINGTON — The trouble with the planet Earth — aside from the designated-hitter rule and other sinfulness by earthlings — is that Earth will not shape up and fly right.



George F. Will

About every year or 18 months this fact must be faced: The planet is erratic. A full second must be added to — or perhaps even subtracted from — the official U.S. time, which is kept by an atomic clock.

Ever since a weary caveperson, eager to be done with that day's saber-tooth tiger hunt, first asked the portentous question, "What time is it?" and the caveperson he asked glanced up at the sun, mankind has kept time the way it does today, by measuring the rotation of the Earth on its axis. If you have a good thing, stick with it.

But the Earth's rotation is not as good a gauge as everyone from those cavepersons almost to the present day assumed. The Earth rotates whimsically, sometimes speeding up, usually slowing down. There are many reasons for this — the sloshing-around of Earth's molten core, friction produced by weather patterns and, most important, tugging and hauling by the moon's tidal forces. Such perturbances are causing the Earth to dawdle.

An atomic clock, accurate to within a billionth of a second a day, shows that the Earth's meandering rotation is uniform only to within one-thousandth of a second per day. Usually every 12 to 18 months Earth falls eight-tenths of a second behind schedule. Then a "leap second" is added by stopping the official clock for one second. (It is easier to stop the clock than to accelerate Earth's rotation just a smidgen.)

Often this is done in June, but was not necessary this year, a fact the Reagan administration attributes to the steadying effect of Reaganomics. The Mondale campaign says Reagan's Central American policy has frightened Earth out of its pleasant spontaneity.

Anyway, the length of a day these days is about two hours longer than a day was 150 million years ago. No wonder we produce so much more wheat and appliances in a day than the trilobites did. If this slowing continues, it will get to be a long time between lunch and dinner.

Just a century ago there were too many official times in this country. Writing in "American Heritage," William Peirce Randel explains that when it was noon in New York it was 11:55 in Philadelphia, 11:47 in Washington, D.C., 11:40 in Buffalo and 11:35 in Pittsburgh. There were 38 different times in Wisconsin.

By the 1880s, many Americans found this intolerable for the most American of reasons: It interfered with business, especially railroading. However, 100 years ago Greenwich was adopted as prime meridian (because most shipping accepted it) and order came to the world's clocks.

But it did not come to American clocks without gallant resistance from conservatives. Randall reports that in Bellaire, Ohio, the city council — heroes known but to God, in whose presence they surely are — passed an edict against the tyranny of uniform time zones. The Council made it "a misdemeanor for anyone to expose a timepiece in public with the hands marking other than the local time." The Board of Education — the intelligentsia is always the seedbed of radicalism — ignored this, and every member was arrested. That was the golden age of American government.

A few days after uniform time zones were announced (by the sovereign authority — the railroads), a man who was required to appear in a Massachusetts courtroom beween 9 a.m. and 10 a.m. appeared at 9:45 a.m. by the new time. But that was 10:01 a.m. by the old time. A magistrate, whose spirit I revere, threw the book at him. The magistrate wanted nothing to do with novelty. (The magistrate was overturned by a judge, a whippersnapper named Oliver Wendell Holmes.)

A "leap second" is comparatively little to worry about. Such seconds are added at the National Observatory in Washington, which is appropriate. This Republic's governmental institutions were designed with an eye on the solar system. The Founders thought that a cleverly designed system of separated powers, checking and balancing one another and given perpetual motion by the self-interested pursuit of power by America's many factions, would produce something like the solar system, as it was then thought to be — a smoothly running clockwork mechanism unchanging, with all forces in equipoise.

But it seems there is more lollygagging and wobbling and even banging around among the stars and things than we knew about before we developed modern telescopes and time-measuring instruments. In that sense, at least, the government is still true to its heavenly model.

ART BUCHWALD

There goes (poof) Miss America!

Two earth-shattering things happened in recent weeks that affected every person in this country. One was that the Democratic National Convention selected a woman as its vice-presidential candidate, and the other was that Miss America of 1984 appeared on the nation's newsstands au naturel in Penthouse magazine.

Art Buchwald

For those Americans who are far more interested in the fate of Miss America than they are in the Democratic ticket, the news that Vanessa Williams lost her crown split the country down the middle. Everywhere you went you found bitter arguments between those who believed Miss Williams was treated unfairly, as opposed to those who claimed abdication was the only honorable way out.

I was so shaken by the whole affair I sought out a bar on Monday night where Washington opinion-makers meet to discuss the latest world crises. Grown men were yelling at each other.

Once again the right wing lined up against the liberals in voicing their moral indignation.

A conservative columnist said, "The pageant people had no choice but to force her to resign. Miss America is the nearest thing this country has to Princess Di, and by posing in the buff Vanessa tarnished this country's tiara."

"She was hoodwinked into posing for the pictures two years before she went for the title," a liberal columnist shouted. "I would be the last one to condone nudity in any magazine, but in this case an exception should have been made, particularly since Vanessa Williams, as Miss America, has always behaved like a queen."

Another conservative columnist piped up, "That's typical double-standard left-wing thinking. Your heart bleeds for everyone who shucks off all her clothes for Penthouse, but you people still will never forgive Nixon for Watergate."

I didn't want to be left out of the conversation. "I don't believe we should allow this to become an ideological question. We have to put the pictures in context. Those of us who respect the family and live by the Judeo-Christian ethic tradition do not buy Penthouse, and therefore will not be exposed to the photos. The only ones who will be affected by them are the people who actually purchase the magazine, and they comprise just a handful of dirty old men in this country."

The conservative columnist retorted, "What about all the kids who pick it up at the newsstand, look at the pictures and then put the magazine back? Don't you think it has an effect on them?"

"Possibly," I admitted, "but why throw out Miss America with the bathwater? There isn't a man in this bar who doesn't wish that Vanessa Williams had not posed for the pictures. But as Jesse Jackson has said many times, 'We must condemn the sin and not the sinner.'"

"Why bring Jesse Jackson into this?"

"For the same reason you brought Nixon into it. What has the country gained by forcing Miss Williams to abdicate? I would rather have an unclad Miss America than no Miss America at all."

"I'll drink to that," one of my liberal supporters said.

"I won't," a conservative columnist ymlled. "She was punished so that generations of future Americans will never have to fear that the person who holds the second highest position in this land will ever pose for a skin magazine again. What kind of message would we be sending to the Soviets if we allowed Miss America to wear her crown on the Bob Hope show, but showed her wearing nothing in Penthouse magazine?"

The bartender, trying to avoid a fistfight, said, "You know what I would have given her?"

We all asked what.

"F-11 at 100th of a second."

TODAY IN HISTORY

On July 26, 1947, President Harry Truman signed the National Security Act, consolidating the Department of Defense and creating the National Security Council.

On this date:

In 1775, Benjamin Franklin became postmaster-general.

In 1856, playwright George Bernard Shaw was born.

In 1894, author Aldous Huxley was born.

In 1945, Great Britain, the United States and China demanded Japan's unconditional surrender as terms for peace during World War II.

Thought for today: "There are two tragedies in life. One is to lose your heart's desire. The other is to gain it." — George Bernard Shaw (1856-1950).

Jackson to receive settlement

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson will receive $10,000 in the $335,000 settlement of a lawsuit by 25 civic groups and individuals who said police violated their rights by spying on them.

The out-of-court settlement, approved Wednesday by U.S. District Judge Susan Getzendanner, ends nearly 10 years of litigation against the city and the Police Department's Red Squad intelligence unit, which kept secret dossiers on scores of religious leaders, politicians and organizations before the unit was abolished in 1975.

Seventeen individuals will receive $10,000 apiece, including Jackson and U.S. Rep. Gus Savage, D-Ill. Jackson's group, Operation PUSH, is among the eight organizations that will receive $20,625 each.

Crusader arrested for drugs

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — An anti-drug crusader who was arrested for investigation of possessing heroin and cocaine with intent to sell may have started her crime-fighting campaign in order to eliminate competitors in drug trafficking, police said.

Michelle Melecio and her husband, Bernabe Flores Melecio, both 30, were arrested Monday after undercover officers bought heroin and cocaine from them six times, police said Tuesday. Mrs. Melecio had led a crusade this year to eliminate drug dealers and prostitutes from her neighborhood and had provided police with information that led to several arrests, police said.

"My guess is she may have been trying to eliminate the competition," said police Lt. Joe McDermott.

City can't afford black officers

DETROIT (AP) — Mayor Coleman Young says the city does not have enough money to rehire 800 laid-off black police officers, as ordered by a judge, and would have to lay off 1,000 city workers to comply.

U.S. District Judge Horace Gilmore said Wednesday that the city must rehire the officers, who were laid off by seniority during budget cutbacks in 1979 and 1980, within 180 days. However, Gilmore said the city does not have to award the officers back pay.

A lawsuit by a group of laid-off officers, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and an organization of black officers said the layoffs violated affirmative action policies.

Navy frogmen search hull of ship

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Navy frogmen examined the hull of the Queen Mary after witnesses said they saw unidentified divers in the water near the popular hotel-tourist attraction in Long Beach harbor.

No explosives were found during Sunday's search by 15 Navy divers "on maneuver" in the area, said Joseph Prevratil, president of the Wrather Port Properties, which owns the Queen Mary.

"With the Olympics in town, everyone is being extra careful," Prevratil said, noting that although no Olympic officials were aboard at the time, some are expected.

Police Sgt. Richard Wood said guests and security officers reported seeing bubbles around the ship's hull. Police were called when the witnesses spotted divers in the water inside the rock breakwater that surrounds the Queen Mary.

The divers may have come from a pleasure craft in the area, Prevratil said.

Teen-ager found murdered

STATE

SPRINGTOWN (AP) — A 16-year-old boy is being held by Parker County authorities in connection with the strangulation murder of Tracy Lee Bagley, 16, whose nude body was found by a motorist Tuesday morning in a ditch northwest of town, Sheriff Billy Cain said.

The Tarrant County medical examiner's office in Fort Worth began tests to determine if Miss Bagley, who would have been a junior in high school this fall, had been raped.

A witness said either a head band or a belt was wrapped around the girl's throat when her body was found about 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

The girl's parents reported her missing at about 2 a.m. Tuesday when she failed to return home after being out with a 16-year-old boy Monday night. Cain said the boy told deputies he took the girl home about 10 p.m. Monday.

Cain said investigators think the girl was killed somewhere else and her body dumped in the ditch. Law enforcement officials were questioning people living near a house on Main Street in the south portion of town.

The house, owned by Ann and Al Hudson, a teacher and counselor respectively at Springtown Middle School, is across the street from the Springtown Cemetery.

According to neighbors, a Springtown High School student had had been coming to the house daily to feed the dogs while the Hudson family was vacationing in Hawaii.

Debbie Holder, who lives two houses down from the Hudson home, said she saw a person who she believed was a teen-age girl in the back yard of the house Monday night.

Friends and others who knew the victim described her as a reserved but intelligent young woman who was popular among her peers and close to her family.

"It's not the type of girl you'd expect this to happen to," Don Hooper, superintendent of the Springtown Independent School District, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Jarrel Tunnell, minister of Springtown Church of Christ, said the slaying victim attended his church regularly with her parents — Jerry, who works for a grocery store in nearby Azle, and Dorothy, a housekeeper for the Springtown school system.

"They're in a state of shock," Tunnell said.

The girl was to have served as a captain of the drill team when she returned to school for her junior year after compiling what Hooper called an A-to-B average during her first two years of high school.

Another drill team member, Sally Ford, who said Miss Bagley "was probably one of the best friends I've ever had," said Tracy wanted to be a fashion designer.

Another close friend, Ramona Stevens, said the girl hoped to become a psychiatrist.

Eleven-year-old car thief sought

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Authorities have issued an arrest warrant for an 11-year-old boy who escaped from a juvenile detention center after he tearfully pleaded guilty last week to car theft charges.

The youth, about 4-feet-5 and weighing about 80 pounds, was awaiting placement in a foster home when he fled from The Crossroads, a minimum security facility late Monday or early Tuesday, said Tom Broussard, juvenile probation director.

The child was arrested last month after he led police on a cross-town chase in a stolen car. It was his third arrest on car theft charges.

He was sentenced to one year's probation, but was awaiting placement in a child care center or foster home at the time of the escape, officials said. During the hearing, he apologized to his mother.

"We don't know exactly when or how he escaped," Broussard said. "I'm very disappointed. Obviously, he has told us something by his actions.

"He has demonstrated that he is not amenable to placement in a less secure facility," Broussard said.

District Judge Roy Barrera, who sentenced the youngster last week, said the boy faces a much stiffer punisment if he is recaptured.

"I'm sending him to the Texas Youth Commission (state juvenile facility) until his 18th birthday," Barrera said.

Bill would halt couple's deportation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pedro and Rosario Narvaez have lived under the threat of deportation for almost 20 years, but they established a successful San Antonio house-painting business and watched their children become legal residents.

On Wednesday, the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration took a first step toward lifting the cloud when it unanimously approved a private bill sponsored by U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, that would grant the Narvaezes permanent status.

Two of the Narvaezes' eight children were born in the United States and are citizens. Five have been granted permanent resident status. Their oldest son is in the process of completing naturalization.

Narvaez' business employs 10 people.

The couple has been the subject of deportation proceedings since 1975. Their lawyer, Robert Shivers, said they were able to remain in the United States through a series of delays by the government and legal appeals.

But the appeals finally ran out in 1983, he said, and congressional action is the only thing that will keep the Narvaezes from having to move back to Mexico, leaving their children, grandchildren and business behind.

"My father worked very hard for us," said daughter Lupe Sosa, 22. "To lose everything like that, it isn't fair."

Mrs. Sosa said her parents do not speak English.

Gonzalez' bill still must be approved by the full committee, the House and the Senate. But Gonzalez said he was encouraged by the subcommittee's quick approval of the measure.

"In my 22 and a half years in Congress, I think I have introduced three (private) immigration bills, so it has to be something unusual, singular, and this case is," said Gonzalez.

The deportation order was stayed when the Senate immigration subcommittee sought a report on the case from the INS at the prompting of Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, who has also introduced legislation on behalf of the Narvaezes, Shivers said.

If the private bill is not approved, the couple will have to move back to Mexico and petition again for entry into the United States in two years when their oldest son completes naturalization procedures, he said.

"It was very hard for us, going to school, in our everyday lives, because we were always thinking about it (deportation)," Mrs. Sosa said.

Guard snakes not recommended

HOUSTON (AP) — A Harris County commissioner's idea to use rattlesnakes to guard county equipment is probably not a good one, a three-month study of security issues has found.

The commissioner asked former Houston Police chief Carroll Lynn, as part of his study into the county's security system, to look into the possibility of using the snakes instead of guard dogs.

Lynn's recent report on his findings suggests much more conventional measures than guard snakes. Among other things, Lynn called for marking the tires on county equipment to make them easy to identify and placing guard dogs on the premises after hours.

Resilient Royals sweep past Blue Jays

Associated Press

The Toronto Blue Jays were lookin' forward to goin' to Kansas City. That's before they knew what was comin.'

Darryl Motley cracked an RBI single with one out in the bottom of the 13th inning Wednesday night, leading the Kansas City Royals to a 5-4 triumph over the Blue Jays and a four-game sweep of their series.

"You've got to feel for a club like that, that comes in here thinking its got a chance to win," said Royals Manager Dick Howser.

The Blue Jays went into Kansas City on Monday to wind up their longest road trip of the season. At that point, Toronto was trailing the Detroit Tigers by nine games — close to striking distance — in the American League East.

But Toronto dropped a twi-night double-header Monday, then lost by 5-4 scores Tuesday and Wednesday to fall 11½ games off the pace. The Blue Jays wound up their road swing with a 7-8 mark.

"We got them at the end of a long road trip, we're the fourth city they've been in," Howser said. "They were dragging."

Greg Pryor led off the 13th by singling off the glove of third baseman Rance Mulliniks. John Wathan then sacrificed and Motley followed with a single down the right-field line to pin the loss on Bryan Clark, 0-1.

Kansas City had tied it 4-4 in the eighth on George Brett's run-scoring double with two out.

Dan Quisenberry, 4-2, pitched the final two innings for the victory.

Dane Iorg homered for Kansas City and George Bell homered for Toronto.

Angels 1, Mariners 0

Gary Pettis dribbled a single up the middle with two out in the bottom of the 10th inning, driving in Juan Beniquez from second base with California's winning run.

Beniquez led off the 10th with a single and took second on Bobby Grich's sacrifice before Pettis came through one out later.

Jim Beattie wne the distance the entire way for Seattle and took the hard-luck loss. Beattie, 9-10, had a one-hitter going through eight innings and allowed a total of five hits while striking out 10.

Ron Romanick blanked the visiting Mariners on six hits through nine innings. Luis Sanchez, 7-2, wiggled out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the 10th for the victory.

Red Sox 3, White Sox 2

Mike Easler ended the 3 hour, 34-minute contest at Fenway Park by leading off the bottom of the 12th inning with his 20th home run of the season.

Easler's blast to right-center came on a 1-2 pitch from Jerry Don Gleaton, 1-1, who had just entered the game.

The triumph was the fifth straight for Boston. Mark Clear, 6-2, went 2 2-3 innings and struck out five fer the victory.

Red Sox starter Al Nipper went 9 1-3 innings and gave up two unearned runs — set up by his own error — and six hits.

Chicago starter Tom Seaver allowed two runs on seven hits through eight innings.

Indians 4, Tigers 1

In Cleveland, rookie Roy Smith and Ernie Camacho teamed on a five-hitter to cool off Detroit, which had won six straight games.

Smith, 4-2, went 7 1-3 innings, yielding five hits. Camacho got the final five outs for his 12th save.

The Tigers had scored in the second on Darrell Evans' 10th homer before Cleveland tied it in the third on Julio Franco's RBI single.

Cubs doff Caps with long ball

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

The Midland Cubs lived by the long ball Wednesday night, but for a while it semmed the home run was going to be the straw that broke the Bruin backs.

Stormin' Danny Norman, third baseman Tony Woods and centerfielder Mike Brumley all had solo homers for the Cubs, who needed all of them in beating the Shreveport Captains 6-4 to take a 2-1 series lead.

But before the red-hot Norman and company could light up the scoreboard, it was Cub pitcher Troy Chestnut who got the dose of home run fever. Chestnut surrendered a two-run homer in the first and a solo lead-off shot in the second.

Quickly, the Cubs were down 3-0. Chestnut had been racked by three hard hits against the first six Cap batsmen. Everett Graham's first-inning double preceded Kelvin Torve's homer for a 2-0 advantage.

But Chestnut settle down, and the Cubs raised their second-half ledger to 14-17. As is becoming the habit, it was Norman who got the ball rolling.

THE CUBS wasted their first good chance in the second. Norman drew a walk, followed by Jeff Jones' single and another pass issued to Gary Varsho. But the rally was ended when Norman was forced at home, Brumley struck out and Chestnut grounded into a fielder's choice.

Norman led off the fourth with a towering homer that bounced off the face of the Marlboro Man. That was all Midland could manage until Woods started the Cub sixth with another homer. Norman followed immediately with a double in the midst of five consecutive Cub hits. Jones singled to score Norman and took second on the throw to the plate. Varsho bunted for a hit, but Jones rounded third to hard and was caught for the first out. Pinch-hitting Don Hyman doubled Varsho home to give the Cubs' their first lead.

Paul Noce singled to start the Cub seventh, then scored when Woods bunt down the third base side was fielded and thrown into right field by reliever Kernan Ronan. Woods wound up at third but didn't score. Brumley's deep homer to the power alley in left-center completed the scoring.

"I KNEW I had pretty good stuff," said Chestnut, a South Carolina native. "Those two home runs weren't bad pitches. I just kept doing what I had been doing. When you get behind early like that you've got to shut them down the rest of the way."

Which is precisely what Chestnut did. He assumed control of the game after the shaky start, and until opening the seventh with successive walks, the game was Chestnut's.

Chestnut fanned nine in earning his first win since coming to Midland from Lodi in the Class A California League. The three early hits were the only ones the Captains were allowed.

Jeff Moscaret took over and finished the job nicely. Moscaret struck out four in two innings of work in earning his second save.

"I wanted to stay in," Chestnut said, "But I'd already thrown over 100 pitches and we had to make the move."

"In the position we're in," said Cub boss George Enright, "We've got to play .600 ball. I don't see Beaumont hitting the skids."

With pitching performances such as the one Wednesday, it is possible the Cubs could at least stay close to the charging Golden Gators. "I was really pleased," said pitching coach Goose Gregson. "Troy threw as well as I've ever seen him. I just told him they couldn't score again."

Enright agreed. "He pitched a good ballgame the night before," said the manager. "He got a little tired after we had the big inning."

THE WIN was a welcome break from the rigors of road travel. Midland endured a 22-of-28 games on the road swing and seem to be more comfortable in Cubs Stadium's "friendly confines". "The thing about it is," said Enright, "We're 25 games under .500 for the whole season. But playing at home, we're two games under .500. We've been just horrendous on the road. This team is built on home runs. In the other parks, the ball doesn't jump like it does here."

Most of the jumping has been done by Norman, who smashed two homers in the series opener in addition to his four-bagger Wednesday. Norman now has 13 dingers for the 1984 campaign. Norman also doubled and scored twice, and made a tough running catch of a John Stevenson drive to the warning track in left in the seventh inning.

Texas stop strengthens USA boxers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ten days on a remote Texas ranch may not have made cowboys out of a mostly urban U.S. Olympic boxing squad, but it did help mold a diverse group of 12 individuals into a team.

"We're always together now. We try to back each other up," said Pernell Whitaker, a gold medal prospect at 132 pounds. "We have a lot of superstars on this team but everybody had to learn to share it together."

Several team members complained publicly about plans to train the team at a Gonzales, Texas, ranch prior to the Olympics, but Coach Pat Nappi said team officials have been vindicated by the results.

"At Gonzales, the kids all pulled together, ate together. They became a team," Nappi said Wednesday at a news conference. "I feel better now simply because of the fact they're close-knitted."

Roosevelt Saunders, the team's assistant coach, said the isolated conditions at Gonzales will help the athletes here because they were forced to rely more on each other.

"We were in close quarters and I think that's a good thing because we're in close quarters here," said Saunders. "It's the same sort of thing."

Team morale was at a low point following the intense Box-Offs competition, which decided the final squad earlier this month in Las Vegas, Nev.

In addition to the grumbling about the choice of the Gonzales training site, a few fighters, including Mark Breland, complained about a lack of coaches, and there were unsuccessful efforts to bring additional coaches onto the team to help Nappi and Saunders.

Then, there was a report that Nappi had resigned. But he did not submit a resignation, and in a statement on July 9 said that "pressure, tension and feelings run high and taut" during team selection, making it easy for misunderstandings to occur.

Nappi said Wednesday that all of the problems cleared up during the training and the team is now in excellent spirits as the Sunday opening of the boxing competition approaches.

"As far as problems are concerned, they're behind us," he said.

With the powerful Cuban team staying home, along with the East Germans and Soviets, some observers feel the U.S. team has a chance to duplicate its success in 1976 at Montreal, where five fighters won gold medals under Nappi.

Led by Breland, the 147-pounder who is considered almost a shoe-in for a gold medal, the team includes three other current world champions and several other highly rated boxers.

Mets, Cubs going into battle for...first?

Associated Press

In the last seven years, the New York Mets have finished either last or next to last in the National League East — except for the second half of the split strike season of 1981, when they came in fourth. In the last five years, the Chicago Cubs have been either last or next to last — without exception.

Turn those standings upside-down. The Mets and Cubs are first and second and about to begin a four-game weekend series in New York on Friday night.

"There's no pressure on us," second baseman Wally Backman said Wednesday after the Mets ran their latest winning streak to six games by pounding the St. Louis Cardinals 9-3. "The pressure's on them. They have to catch us. We don't have to catch them."

The Cubs, meanwhile, whipped the Philadelphia Phillies 9-4 to remain 3½ games out and Ryne Sandberg, Chicago's second baseman, called it "a good win for us. It's good to have momentum going into New York."

Darryl Strawberry continued his hot hitting with a three-run homer, his 16th of the season, and an RBI grounder as the Mets ripped St. Louis. Strawberry's fourth-inning homer off Kurt Kepshire erased a 3-0 deficit.Hubie Brooks and Danny Heep followed with singles and then executed a double steal, setting the stage for Mike Fitzgerald's tie-breaking sacrifice fly.

"Darryl's proving once again that he's a second-half player," said Manager Davey Johnson. "He proved that last year, and it has been his history, even in the minor leagues.

"Strawberry started to come alive before the All-Star break, but I still expect him to get better yet. No doubt that he has been productive, but as far as I'm concerned he's not in a hot streak. However, he's getting there."

As for the series with the Cubs, Johnson said, "This only hints of things to come. We're going to give people some things to think about. I've got a whole lot of stuff in store for the next series."

Cubs 9, Phillies 4

Leon Durham belted a two-run homer, drove in three runs and scored twice while Ryne Sandberg added two RBIs and scored three times.Winner Dennis Eckersley allowed two runs and six hits in seven innings.

The Cubs took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on Durham's 14th homer off Charles Hudson.Juan Samuel's two-run homer in the bottom of the first tied the score before the Cubs went ahead to stay in the third.Sandberg singled, stole second and scored on Gary Matthews' single. Matthews was tagged out in a rundown, but Durham then walked and scored on Keith Moreland's double.

The Cubs made it 5-2 in the fifth when Sandberg singled and scored on a double by Durham and broke it open in the sixth with four runs off Kevin Gross, including Sandberg's two-run triple, his 14th of the season.

"It's been a long time since we had an outburst like that and it came at the right time," Durham said of the Cubs' 15-hit attack. "We're going into New York and we're going to play some good baseball. I'm just going to keep on swinging the bat and only worry about getting wins. If I don't get my hits, somebody else will. That's the type of team we have."

Padres 6, Reds 5

Luis Salazar's bases-loased two-run double with one out in the bottom of the ninth drove in the tying and winning runs. The Reds had taken a 5-4 lead in the top of the ninth on Dave Concepcion's RBI single off Rich Gossage, but with one out in the bottom of the inning Tony Gwynn got his fourth hit, a single, off Bob Owchinko. Steve Garvey singled Gwynn to second and Brad Lesley walked Bruce Bochy to load the bases. Salazar followed with his double for his first game-winning RBI of the year.

With San Diego trailing 4-2, Gwynn opened the Padres' eighth with an infield single. Garvey singled Gwynn to third and he scored on a single by Terry Kennedy, who homered in the sixth inning. Carmelo Martinez's sacrifice fly tied the score.

Dodgers 2, Braves 1

Mike Marshall slammed a two-run homer and Fernando Valenzuela scattered six hits to snap a personal three-game losing streak and beat the Braves for the sixth consecutive time. Marshall belted his 18th home run in the fourth inning off Len Barker following a leadoff walk to Dave Anderson. It marked the only time the Dodgers got a runner past second base.

Valenzuela lost his shutout bid in the seventh on Brad Komminsk's single, Gerald Perry's double and Glenn Hubbard's sacrifice fly.

Valenzuela, who struck out eight and walked three, termed his effort "one of the best games I've pitched this season."

Pirates 3, Expos 1

Marvell Wynne's tie-breaking, two-out single drove in the first of two ninth-inning runs. Johnny Ray opened the ninth with a single, only the fourth hit off Charlie Lea, and took second when shortstop Argenis Salazar dropped third baseman Tim Wallach's throw that appeared to have Ray beaten at second on Benny Distefano's bunt. Dale Berra sacrificed and, after Ray was thrown out at home on pinch-hitter Milt May's grounder, Wynne singled to score Distefano. Lee Mazzilli's ground-rule double produced an insurance run. Winning pitcher Rick Rhoden allowed seven hits in eight innings.

Giants 7, Astros 3

Chili Davis got three hits and drove in two runs, leading a 15-hit San Francisco attack. Winner Jeff Robinson allowed nine hits in eight-plus innings while Houston starter Mike LaCoss yielded six runs in suffering his first loss since last July 28.

The Giants scored three runs in the first inning following Dan Gladden's bunt single. Gladden stole second, Manny Trillo singled and Davis singled home the first run. The other scored on Scot Thompson's single and Bob Brenly's grounder.

January rejoins TPC senior tour

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (AP) — Defending champion Don January pronounced the new Tournament Players Club at Plum Creek course as ready for the 52 senior players who will tee up Thursday in the third annual Denver Post Champions of Golf tournament.

January, the leading money-winner on the Senior Tour this season with $200,965, is rejoining the tour after a European vacation.

"I've been off for a month, and I'm playing like I've been off for a month," he said Wednesday.

The Pete Dye-designed TPC course is one of nine stadium courses either open or under construction, and tournament officials just managed to get it ready for the tournament, with the full 18 holes opening for play only last week.

"My first impression of the course is that it's real new," said January. "But I'm really pleased with the amount of grass and the condition of the course. These people have done a hell of a job to get it ready.

"Distance-wise, I think this course suits the senior players. The greens are a little small, but I've always liked small greens. This course will force the players to use every club in the bag, and there's not a hole that can't jump up and bite you. There'll be some high scores on some of these holes."

Typical of Dye courses, TPC at Plum Creek features an abundance of sand and water bounded by Dye's trademark railroad ties. In accordance with the stadium concept, there are numerous mounds and amphitheaters to facilitate spectator viewing.

January's favorite hole is No. 16, a 427-yard par-4 with water in front of the tee and running along the right side the length of the hole. "It's gorgeous," he said, "just an excellent golf hole."

Also in the field are Miller Barber, second on the money list with nearly $170,000; Arnold Palmer, who won the inaugural Champions of Golf event in 1982; Billy Casper; Bob Goalby; Dow Finsterwald; Gay Brewer, and Lee Elder, who turned 50 earlier this month and will be competing in his first seniors event.

Jones stalks LPGA victory

TORONTO (AP) — The skinny 24-year-old with the auburn hair peeking out from under the white fedora has become the hottest golfer on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

Rosie Jones, a 5-foot-6, 115-pound wisp from Albuquerque, N.M., hasn't just been knocking on the door the last two weeks — she's been pounding.

Two weeks ago she finished second to Hollis Stacy in the United States Open. Last week in Rochester, N.Y., she finished second again after losing a playoff to veteran Kathy Whitworth.

Jones tees it up in the opening round of the $330,000 Du Maurier Classic today in search of what she hopes will be her initial LPGA victory.

Another week like the last two should just about do the trick.

"Yeah, well, I don't know exactly why I've been playing so good the last two weeks," Jones said Wednesday. "Everything's just starting to come around right.

"I'm swinging a lot better and now when I get myself in situations where I'm in the top 10 or the leader, I'm able to control my emotions a bit better and hang in there a little bit tougher than before."

After a so-so year of six top 20s in 15 events, the graduate of Ohio State cut her tournament teeth four weeks ago in the Lady Keystone. She led after the second round but could do no better than a 71 in the final round and fell to fifth. The experience, she says, was a great teacher.

She took a week off following the Lady Keystone, went to a friend's farm and tuned up for the Open in part by milking cows.

Once again the leader going into the final round, Jones bogeyed the final hole to miss tying Hollis Stacy by a single shot.

"I was a little disappointed but not too much because it was my best tournament ever," Jones said. "But in the Open I felt very relaxed and in charge of what I was feeling and how I was playing.

"The experience two weeks before really helped me a lot."

Amy Alcott, a former champion in this tournament, who double-bogeyed the 18th in the U.S. Open to tumble to third, took the following week off to prepare for the Du Maurier. But not Jones.

"Hey, when you're hot you're hot," Jones said. "You've got to keep it going."

Just how long she can keep it going is the item in question.

"I don't know. I have to admit my body is a little tired. I need to relax a little bit more and that's why I took Monday and Tuesday off."

Although Wednesday was her first trip over St. George's 6,131-yard, par-72 layout, Jones is aware it's a long hitter's course.

"I only know it's very long and very pretty," she said. "I'm not a long hitter, just average.

"But I hit it pretty straight and if I can keep it in the fairway I have just as good a chance as anybody. I know I can play my long irons just as well as they can play the short irons."

Jones, who is 15th on the money list with earnings of $70,085 will have her work cut out this weekend as the Du Maurier attracted 48 of the top 50 money winners in its 144-player field, including two time champion JoAnne Carner, Stacy, Jan Stephenson, Patty Sheehan, Pat Bradley and Nancy Lopez.

Strange revisits scene of triumph

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — While Masters champion Ben Crenshaw and U.S. Open winner Fuzzy Zoeller are the top names among the 149 golfers shooting for the $72,000 first prize in the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open that starts today, defending champion Curtis Strange struggles for consistency.

Also competing on the 6,800-yard, par-71 course will be eight past GHO winners including Curtis Strange, who a year ago roared from five strokes down after the first day to edge Jack Renner by two strokes for the victory.

For Strange, now 28, it was the first victory on the Professional Golfers Association Tour in more than three years. And, the victim of erratic putting, he hasn't won since.

The problem has puzzled him for several years now and his only explanation is, "If I knew what was the matter, it wouldn't be a problem, would it?"

He blames his play on the green for an up-and-down 1984 in which he has placed third in the Phoenix Open, U.S. Open and Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic, but 46th in the Masters and 51st in the Memorial. Twice, he's missed the cut.

A year ago, on the short and straight Wethersfield Country Club, he overcame putting problems to shoot a second-round 62 — two strokes shy of the lowest round ever shot there. That gave him the lead and he used a conservative final hole on the last day to save the victory from a struggling Renner.

With two top-3 finishes in his past three outings this year, Strange carries confidence into Thursday's first round of the GHO, which has been moved to the new TPC-Connecticut club designed by architect Pete Dye.

"I've been on the uphill, have been making a few more of my putts," Strange said on the putting green before Wednesday's pro-am GHO event. "At Busch, I certainly made my share of putts, but I also played very well otherwise.

"Putting affects so much of your game. When you're putting well, it gives you confidence in the rest of your game. When you're putting poorly, it destroys everything else."

A victory at Hartford would be the second of the season for either Crenshaw or Zoeller. Crenshaw, the owner of 11 career tournament victories, has placed as high as sixth only once since winning the Masters and has missed the cut in two of his last four PGA events.

Goldie shocks, eliminates Arias

WASHINGTON (AP) — After two straight sub-par performances on the Grand Prix tour, Jimmy Arias says he needs to revise several aspects of his tennis game.

"My backhand didn't feel good and my forehand kind of stunk," the world's fifth-ranked player said Wednesday after he was upset by Stanford University's Dan Goldie in the second round of the $200,000 D.C. National Bank Tennis Classic. Arias, the tournament's top seed, never led in dropping a 6-3, 6-4 decision to the unheralded 20-year-old from McLean, Va.

Arias, of Buffalo, was not the only high seed to be eliminated in the second round. Fourth-seed Juan Aguilera of Spain met a similar fate, falling to Switzerland's Zoltan Kuharszky 6-4, 6-4, and No. 6 Jose-Luis Clerc, the defending champion from Argentina, lost to France's Thierry Tulasne 7-6 (7-1), 6-3.

In other matches involving the top players, second-seeded Andres Gomez of Ecuador easily disposed of Argentina's Roberto Arguello, 6-1, 6-1; Sweden's Henrik Sundstorm, seeded third, beat Spain's Fernando Soler, 7-5, 6-2; and No. 5 Guillermo Vilas of Argentina had to come from behind to top Jimmy Brown 4-6, 6-0, 6-4.

Seventh-seeded Aaron Krickstein had little difficulty in his 6-0, 6-3 rout of Chile's Hans Gildemeister. Krickstein beat Arias en route to the U.S. Pro title last week.

Drillers outslug Dodgers, 10-3

Associated Press

Tulsa got two or more hits from eight different players, and that was more than enough to give the Drillers their fourth consecutive victory in the Texas League.

The Drillers pounded San Antonio 10-3 Wednesday night, with pitcher Steve Kordish, 6-8, getting the victory over Brian Piper, 4-4.

Tulsa scored four runs in the second inning on four singles and three San Antonio errors.

Greg Tabor went 3-for-5 for the night, scored twice and drove in one run; Whitney Harry also went 3-for-5 and scored once; and Dan Murphy went 2-for-5 with 3 RBIs. Randy Asadoor got on base all five times he went to the plate, picking up two hits in three official plate appearances, scoring twice and driving in one run.

Solo home runs by Dan Cataline, his 11th, in the second inning and by Larry See in the ninth inning accounted for two of the San Antonio runs.

In other league action Wednesday, Beaumont beat Arkansas for the eighth straight time on a walk with the bases loaded, and a game between Jackson and El Paso was rained out and will be played as part of a doubleheader tonight in El Paso.

Beaumont took a 2-0 lead after two innings. Steve Johnson walked and scored on Jerry Johnson's double in the first inning. Then catcher Mark Parent knocked a homer into the right field screen in the second inning. Arkansas' Dave Kable followed with a homer in the same place in the bottom of the inning, however.

Mike Harris scored the Travelers' second run. He bunted his way to first, stole second, went to third on a fly ball, and scored on Rod Booker's infield out.

Beaumont moved ahead 3-2 without a hit. Pat Casey walked, went to second on a wild pitch, went to third on an error, and scored on a double play.

Met with applause

New York Met outfielder Darryl Strawberry (18) is greeted with warm regards after slugging a game-tying home run Wednesday against the St. Louis Cardinals. Looking on are Kieth Hernandez (left), Card catcher Tom Niete (center) and Met Wally Backman. Strawberry and the Mets face equally the surprising Chicago Cubs in a critical four-game series this weekend in the Big Apple.

Magic is back for young Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets, awful for years, are Amazin' once again.

Nothing seems to keep this team down — not a mistake by the manager, not blowing a three-run lead in the seventh, certainly not extra innings.

They have three rookie starting pitchers, a rookie catcher and a rookie shortstop, and they all play for rookie manager Davey Johnson. And all they've done is go 20-4 in July to roar 21 games above .500 and out-surprise the Chicago Cubs and take a 3½-game lead in the National League East.

If the 1969 world champions were the Miracle Mets, these are the Magical Mets. They've got the rest of the NL under a spell.

They reeled off an unlikely string of five one-run victories in five days, a streak broken Wednesday by an easy one for a change — 9-3 over St. Louis. Even then they had to rally from a 3-0 deficit.

It's enough to make New York fans forget that two months remain in the season and start comparing this team with the 1969 crew that came from last place to the world championship.

Jerry Koosman, a pitching hero for the old Miracle Mets, now toils for third-place Philadelphia and isn't about to concede the division title. But he nonetheless notices similarities between the current Mets and the 1969 variety.

"I notice there's a different hero every day for them now," Koosman said. "That's what we did. Their starting pitching doesn't throw as hard as ours did, and we had two or three older veterans who had a lot of experience, but that's the only difference I see between our team and the current one."

Wally Backman and Keith Hernandez shared the role of hero last Friday, when the Mets needed 11 innings to beat Cincinnati 3-2. Backman doubled and scored the deciding run on a sacrifice fly by Hernandez. Chicago, meanwhile, lost 3-2 to San Francisco to fall 1½ games back.

On Saturday, the Mets led 2-0 after Darryl Strawberry's single drove in Mookie Wilson in the sixth. But Cincinnati scored once in the seventh and had the tying run at third before reliever Doug Sisk bailed out a 2-1 decision.

While the Giants were beating the Cubs 11-5 on Sunday, New York was having its problems with the Reds. Dan Driessen's two-run homer tied the game 5-5, but Strawberry settled the outcome with a two-run homer in the eighth. Gary Redus cut the margin to one run with a solo homer for Cincinnati in the ninth.

Mike Fitzgerald, who earlier had hit a two-run homer, singled in the 12th and scored on a single by Backman as the Mets shaded St. Louis 4-3 on Monday.

In perhaps the wildest game of the streak, Keith Hernandez singled in the eighth to tie Tuesday's game, and his 10th-inning single accounted for the winning run in a 9-8 squeaker over the Cards, their eighth extra-inning victory in as many games this season. Ironically, the decisive hit came off reliever Neil Allen, the man for whom Hernandez was traded last season.

Olympic Notes

12-year old youngest Olympian

Associated Press

Philippe Ceulenaere, a 12-year-old member of the Belgian rowing team, is thought to be the youngest athlete at the 1984 Summer Olympics.

A spokesman for the International Olympic Committee said the actual designation will have to wait until later in the week when a review is planned of all rosters, but young Ceulenaere's distinction does not appear in jeopardy.

The 5-foot-7 youngster just makes the 110-pound limit for coxswain.

"You can't ask things of him that we may ask of older coxes," said Guy De Fraigne, one of two rowers in Philippe's shell. "But he's learning."

Experienced coxswains are expected to contribute technical knowledge as well as steering ability during competition.

Philippe says the experience is very exciting, but adds, "I'm a little scared."

In synchronized swimming, a new sport at this year's Summer Olympics, comparability is a must.

Americans Tracie Ruiz and Candy Costie, both 21 from Bothell, Wash., are favored to capture the duet competition and their coach Charlotte Davis said Wednesday their success can be attributed to how well Ruiz and Costie work together in and out of the water.

"They are both 5-foot-4, they weigh about the same and both are very creative," Davis said. "It's also convenient to have a blonde (Costie) and a brunette (Ruiz) performing in the water."

Despite the so-called boycott of the Games, a record number of countries will participate in the track and field competition, according to Nebiolo, president of the International Amateur Athletic Federation (IAAF).

Nebiolo announced at a news conference Wednesday that 136 countries will participate in the track and field competition, a total as high as 121, adding a handful of athletes to the starting list when competition opens.

As of now, Nebiolo said, 968 men and 409 women will participate in track and field at Los Angeles.

The mystical kingdom of Bhutan will be represented for the first time in the Olympics by a three-man, three-woman archery team — including two members of the royal family.

Dasho Thinley Dorji, 34, is brother-in-law of the young monarch, His Majesty Jigme Singye Wangchuck. British-educated and a skilled archer himself, Dasho Lhendup Tshering, 37, is married to an aunt of the king.

Other team members are Nawang Pelzang, 32, an agricultural official, and the three women — Sonam Chuki, 21, a housewife, and Karma Chhoden, 18, and Rinzi Lham, 18, both students.

In Bhutan, a Buddhist nation of 1.2 million people where archery is the national sport, women and men have equal rights. It is a country of many dialects, shielded from such neighbors as China, India and Tibet by the awesome peaks of the Himalayas.

Their first participation in these Olympic Games can be credited to America's People-to-People Sports Committee, founded a quarter-century ago by then President Eisenhower for the promotion of good will through sports.

High technology is being used as The 24th sport at the Games and an electronic message system linking 7,000 media personnel can tap into the EMS computer to send and receive messages as well as schedules, results and biographical information on participants.

"I've been having sort of a computer relationship with these two girls," said Vossen, a bachelor. "I haven't met them yet, but I hope to soon."

Traffic officials are worried that Olympic scheduling may create the the worst traffic jam in the city's history on Aug. 3, a day being called Black Friday.

On that date, 18 events are scheduled for 13 sites in three counties, but track and field, boxing and swimming — three of the most popular Olympic events — will be held in the Memorial Coliseum and Exposition Park area.

Earl of Houston

Houston running back Earl Campbell (34) is backed by a stronger supporting cast this season, a fact which has the University of Texas product as eager to play as he has been since the Bum Phillips regime. The Oilers are at the team training camp in San Angelo.

'Tyler Rose' prepares for another go-round

Houston Oilers

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — As the Houston Oilers continue to stack up offensive linemen in front of Earl Campbell, the three-time National Football League rushing champion thinks he can continue to stack up yards.

Campbell, despite offseason arthroscopic knee surgery that has slowed his training camp activity, is delighted with the recycling of the offensive line with first round draft choices the past three years.

"I think I have 5,000 to 6,000 yards left in me," said Campbell, who already is No. 9 on the all time NFL list. "I personally think I could do 5,000 in three years, if I play three years consistently and productive.

Campbell is becoming familiar with the offensive line that helped him rush for 1,301 yards last season despite a 2-14 record.

"I know how they (offensive line) blocked last year," Campbell said. "I know when (Mike) Munchak comes out of his guard position on veer 38 I know he's my lead blocker and I don't have to be stuttering and wondering what's going on.

"I know the linebacker and cornerback are out there and he's going to kick both of them or one of them and one's left for me."

Nebraska's Dean Steinkuhler was the second player chosen in the overall draft and has been plugged in at a tackle position.

"If Steinkuhler can do anything for our offensive line, it's got to help our football team because the guys that played last year are still here, and they did a helluva job," Campbell said.

Campbell's looseness in camp was demonstrated at a recent practice when he broke for a touchdown and then mimicked the end zone dance of teammate Butch Johnson, who does his "California Quake."

Campbell's gyrations were tabbed the "Tyler Quake," after his hometown.

Campbell wasn't as happy several months ago when he was demanding to be traded. After he was removed from one game last season, he remarked that a dog shouldn't be treated as he had been.

"It's amazing that sometimes you get into a little discussion with somebody, and I'm not talking against you guys (media) because you have a job to do," Campbell said. "But before you know it, that's blown out of proportion.

"Everyone would have thought that (Oiler General Manager) Ladd Herzeg and me hated each other. It wasn't that. It's just that we used different languages on a couple of things."

Campbell will enter the 1984 season with 8,296 rushing yards, an average of 1,382 yards for six pro seasons. Campbell would need to average 1,666 yards over the next three seasons to fulfill his 5,000-yard forecast.

Soviets paint poor Games picture

The Boycott

MOSCOW — As the Los Angeles Olympics approach, the Soviet Union has stepped up a press campaign to justify its decision not to take part in the Games. At the same time, the Soviet Union and its allies have begun their own set of athletic competitions that will follow Olympic rules and standards.

Some sports officials here, however, say that the mood among Soviet athletes is one of depression at being deprived of a chance to attain a goal toward which they have worked for years. It is a mood of deep disappointment, one coach said privately.

Articles in the Soviet press, which frequently quote directly from news reports in the West, depict Los Angeles as choking in heat and smog and drowning in commercialism, with an aura of big business overwhelming the ideals of the Olympic movement.

One article in the controlled Soviet press suggested that horses in equestrian events might need to wear gas masks to combat the smog. Another said that some athletes might die from a shortage of oxygen. Hardly any of the athletes will risk venturing outdoors, Tass, the official press agency, reported, saying that the poisonous air tears apart the lungs. It also said runners had to use crowded highways for lack of proper training areas.

There are reports of unbelievably high prices, of problems with transportation and protests from news organizations about inadequate communications facilities.

Los Angeles itself is portrayed by the Soviet press as a dangerous world of gangsters and killers. A Japanese press report was quoted as saying that human life is held cheap in Los Angeles and no one can guarantee the safety of tourists and athletes who venture to come to the Olympics.

A report in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda on the recent mass murder at a McDonald's restaurant in San Ysidro, Calif., pointed out that it happened only 90 minutes from Los Angeles, and called it nightmarish testimony to the climate of violence reigning in the Olympic state of America. It also noted that McDonald's is an official sponsor of the Olympics.

The Soviet Union announced on May 8 that it would not attend the Games, citing worries about the safety and welfare of its athletes. It was followed by 13 of its allies, and the Soviet press has pointed out emphatically that the withdrawal of these nations has significantly lowered the standards expected at the competitions.

The competitions organized by the Soviet Union and its allies, to which all nations were invited, are taking place before and after the Los Angeles Games in order not to violate the Olympic Charter's stricture against any alternative Olympics. Some contests in the competitions have already been held in Bulgaria, East Germany, Hungary and North Korea. After the Los Angeles Games are over, other contests will be held in some of these same countries as well as in the Soviet Union, Poland, Cuba, Czechoslovakia and Mongolia.

The events in Moscow, the centerpiece of the competitions, will begin Aug. 17 in facilities built for the 1980 Olympics, which the United States refused to attend because of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Soviet sports officials have not replied to requests for interviews about the Olympics or their own sports contests. In remarks in the English-language Moscow News, Anatoly Kolesov, the deputy chairman of the Soviet Union's Sports Committee, said the competitions, called Friendship '84, would be held in keeping with the rules and traditions of the Olympic movement and according to the regulations of the Olympics and world championships. He said some 2,500 athletes, coaches and experts were expected to attend the Moscow games.

Kolesov said Soviet participation in the Los Angeles Games was impossible due to the anti-Socialist campaign launched in the United States, the encouragement given to various extremist groups by the Reagan administration and violations of the Olympic Charter.

Under the headline, "We Do Not Play Such Games," the trade union newspaper Trud said last week that it had received 1,016 letters from labor collectives, sports officials, coaches, schoolchildren, doctors, scientists, building workers, etc. Of these, it said, only 12 argued that Soviet athletes should have gone to the Olympics against all odds, even if it was a risky undertaking. One of the 12, it said, wrote a second time to withdraw his first letter, begging to excuse himself for having made a gross mistake.

It said that one letter writer, A. Pelin from the Elektrotyazhmash factory in the Ukrainian city of Kharkov, wrote, "We believe that all the Soviet people sighed with relief on hearing about the national Olympic committee decision not to attend."

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has filed a tariff with the Public Utility Commission of Texas that will allow Centrex customers to control the number of access lines to the exchange network. Customers electing service under this proposed offering will be charged for exchange access based on the number of access lines rather than on the number of Centrex station lines.

The new offering, called Centrex III, is scheduled to become effective on August 10, 1984, unless the Commission suspends the effective date. The Commission has assigned the matter to Docket 5573.

The net effect of the Centrex III tariff will be a decrease in total billing.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Aviso Público

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company pone en conocimiento de los usuarios que ha registrado una nueva tarifa ante la Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas, lo que permitirá a los abonados del servicio Centrex controlar el número de líneas de acceso a la red central. A los clientes que adopten la opción propuesta mediante esta oferta, se les cobrará por el acceso a la red central en base al numero de líneas de acceso y no en base al número de líneas de estaciones Centrex.

La nueva opción, llamada Centrex III, entrará en funcionamiento el día 10 de agosto de 1984. (Esta fecha está sujeta a cambio, dependiendo de la decisión final de la Comisión.) Se ha registrado la tarifa bajo el Docket 5573.

El efecto real de la nueva tarifa Centrex III se verá en la reducción del costo total de las facturas.

Los usuarios de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company que estén interesados en participar en esta reunión, o que requieran mayor información, deben dirigirse por escrito a: Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. New movies to be shot in West Texas

FABENS, Texas (AP) — Amid the desert bluffs east of this tiny West Texas town, where the only sight is seemingly never-ending hills of sand, the only sound the rush of the wind, civilization appears to be hundreds of miles away.

But that desolate feeling, that eerie sensation of being alone in the world has drawn the makers of a new movie to the far western corner of Texas, where "there is a mood ... that really sets the mood for this piece," says Peter Burrell, producer of the film "Death of An Angel."

"It is so desolate, there's nothing growing here and the light and the area makes for interesting shapes and forms. There's a certain eeriness, a certain spiritual feeling," Burrell said recently as the filming of the movie's Texas scenes entered its second week. "It's a spiritual movie so it works for us."

"Angel," a U.S.-directorial debut for Romanian political refugee writer and director Petru Popescu, originally was to be shot entirely in Texas, Burrell said.

But financial considerations forced the filmmakers to alter their plans and, part of the film already has been shot in the Los Angeles area, Burrell said.

"But because the story implies a real contrast between a lush urban city and a very dry, desolate area, this has worked out for the best," he said.

Burrell, who has worked on such movies as "Slapshot" and "The Turning Point," said he and Popescu were looking for an area in Texas with a deteriorating village.

Since the "perfect" site could not be found, a replica of a village in Indian Hot Springs was built near Fabens, which sits off Interstate 10 about 26 miles south of El Paso.

Building crews arrived in late May and within six weeks, a village for the movie was built and filming had begun.

A story peppered with action and adventure, "Angel" is a psychological drama that revolves around three primary characters: a mother, played by Bonnie Bedelia; her daughter, played by Pamela Ludwig; and Angel, a mysterious religious leader who possesses a crucifix that purportedly bleeds.

Nick Mancuso, an Italian-born Canadian actor, portrays Angel, "a man whose faith is so strong he is willing to sacrifice his own life."

The role of Angel "is one of the more difficult ones I've played," said Mancuso, whose American film roles have included "Ticket to Heaven" and the six-hour television mini-series "Scruples."

"But I very much like this guy," Mancuso said of his character, who deals with suffering, courage and faith during the course of the movie.

"I am trying to make the character believable, to show that a man like this can exist in the real world," Mancuso explained. "I am trying to make him as relatable as possible without being untrue to him."

The screenplay of the low-budget "Death of An Angel" was one of less than a dozen scripts selected for presentation at actor-director Robert Redford's Sundance Institute, where nearly 500 screenplays are submitted for consideration each year.

Mancuso contends the story "is one of the best" he's ever read, adding that "it has fable qualities."

The movie unfolds as Ms. Bedelia, who has appeared in, among other films, "They Shoot Horses, Don't They" and "The Big Fix," sets out to find her runaway daughter, who has joined Angel's faith-healing cult in an unspecified desolate southwestern town.

Though the filmmakers would not reveal the story's outcome, they did say it involves a cross-country chase by Ms. Bedelia to find her daughter and a dramatic and deadly confrontation with Angel.

Scheduled for release in the spring of 1985 by 20th Century-Fox, "Death of An Angel" is one of eight movies currently under production in Texas, according to the state's Film Commission.

The activity provides the state with exposure and helps pump money into the coffers of local economies, said Joe Sierra, El Paso city and county film liaison.

More than 150 El Paso-area residents also were selected to work as extras in "Death of An Angel," said Al Ebner, publicity director for the movie.

The film will be shot entirely on locations, with not a single frame being filmed on a sound stage, Ebner said.

Other sites chosen for filming include an area of the Mojave Desert and the border crossing at El Paso and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, he said.

We have tried to impress on our readers the importance of counting their tricks. Often you need no more than a simple exercise in arithmetic to point the way to the winning line.

South had a difficult hand to bid because of the fact he was void in his partner's suit. We think he had just enough to jump shift, and thereafter North-South conducted an intelligent auction to reach their best game.

West led the jack of hearts, and declarer wasted no time in going down. He won the queen of hearts and tried to drop the queen of clubs. When that didn't happen, he conceded a club trick to the lady. Back came a heart and, since declarer had no entry to the table, dummy's high diamonds withered on the vine.

Because of the double, declarer should have taken into consideration the possibility the queen of clubs would not drop. Had he stopped to count his tricks, he would have realized that only eight tricks were available. There were plenty of tricks in dummy if he could get there, and could have used the threat of an entry to the table to his advantage.

At trick two declarer should lead the queen of spades. If a defender wins this trick, declarer can force an entry to dummy before the defenders have set up their hearts. So best defense is for West to allow the queen to win.

But now declarer is a trick ahead of the game. He does not need dummy any more. To preserve entries to his hand, declarer should immediately lead the jack of clubs, conceding a trick to the queen. East wins, but declarer now has enough tricks for his contract.

It did not take much to spot the winning line. Those of you who count on your fingers would have had one to spare.

Networks debating conventions

NEW YORK (AP) — The president of CBS News is going on both offense and defense when he staunchly upholds the importance of political conventions, saying it's too soon to write the obituary on television's coverage.

Ed Joyce sounds like Superman, supporting truth, justice and the American way, when he says: "I'm deeply disturbed about the dismissal of the 1988 conventions four years in advance. You can't sit here and say this is the last convention. You have to view each event with flexibility."

But he's also being competitive, attacking the way his rival networks perceive future convention coverage; and he's being protective, contending that, despite low ratings, CBS News should keep the full convention time from the clutches of an entertainment division that wants every hour it can get.

He's saying no news organization worth its nosey microphones can justify calling current network convention coverage "a dinosaur," as ABC Vice President David Burke did last week.

He's saying that a news organization doesn't deserve its minicams if it believes that "this mode of coverage is finished," as NBC's convention boss Reuven Frank said last week.

THE FACT IS, just like ABC and NBC, CBS cut back coverage from four years ago to the format of last week's convention broadcasts, which began at 9 p.m. EDT — the first time CBS had not done gavel-to-gavel coverage.

Is it really so shocking that Joyce's competitors are predicting more changes in the process? Are further evolutionary cuts impossible or inevitable? Who's really giving us the inside track on the future?

Joyce certainly is staking out the higher ground for CBS News: "My own vision of future coverage is predicated on the model used this time.

"The voices dismissing the convention coverage as dinosaurs were off the mark. I think the Democratic convention was significant."

Burke and Frank never said that it wasn't significant. That was clear this week when each elaborated on earlier remarks made from San Francisco.

"What I said was that the way we cover the convention is pre-historic," said Burke. "There was, once upon a time, a convention system that was determinative ... The political process in America has changed. Major decisions are now made prior to the conventions. Yet we continue to cover the event with (enormous) manpower and resources."

BURKE REJECTS the contention made by CBS' Dan Rather that televised conventions are "civics lessons."

"We don't have an obligation to do civics lessons," he said. "We're a news organization."

ABC came under intense criticism last week when the network bolted from convention coverage one night for a rerun of "Hart to Hart," then abruptly joined a Tip O'Neill speech in progress, leaving the Harts in the middle of an unsolved crime.

ABC's information at 8:45 was that the Democrats were not going to tighten their schedule, so the Rev. Jesse Jackson would not appear until 10:30.

"We had an hour and half-hour shows available, and we decided there was enough time to go for the hour," Burke said.

JACKSON WENT on earlier, embarrassing ABC into returning after 20 minutes. Even so, Burke said he would make the same decision again. "We think that's the way we should do it in the future," he said.

Frank essentially agrees, although he couldn't resist poking at ABC for not finishing "Hart to Hart." It was Frank who put the plot synopsis of the unfinished show on NBC.

Asked how his bosses reacted, Frank said, "They thought it was pretty funny."

Frank believes future convention coverage might be bulletin interruptions and late-night specials. "It has nothing to do with a dinosaur," he said. "I think news conditions no longer justify the extensive effort we traditionally are used to putting into it."

Even if Walter Mondale didn't have the convention locked up, Frank said previous conditions justifying gavel-to-gavel coverage no longer prevailed. In the 1950s and '60s, conventions were very new to the American public. "People bought sets to watch," Frank said.

"But the most important thing," added Frank, "is that the conventions were the arenas for the expression of fundamental conflicts in American society — civil rights (in 1964), the Vietnam War (in 1968).

"If there's a sufficiently dividing issue that seizes the American public again, we can go back and do that kind of coverage. I'm not saying it's an insignificant event or a dinosaur. I'm saying deploying 600 people, which should only be sufficient to cover World War III, is not necessary."

French composer was millionaire

French composer Charles Gounod (1818-93), best remembered for his opera "Faust," became the first millionaire musician. Queen Victoria's last musical request was to have portions of "Faust" sung to her.

Before Gounod's death, "Faust" had been performed over 1,000 times in Paris alone, bringing him sumptuous royalties.

Theatre Midland packages 'Mass Appeal' for audiences

Bill Davis' "Mass Appeal" opens Aug. 3 in Theatre Two at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

When it opened in New York in 1980, the play, staged by the Manhattan Theatre Club, was originally scheduled for a limited run, however, the production had to be extended twice. After a brief hiatus, "Mass Appeal" reopened on Broadway and has been playing somewhere since then. MCT wasn't granted the rights to produce the play until a week before scheduled auditions.

"Mass Appeal" focuses on the relationship between a young fervent seminarian and a popular parish priest. The play deals with friendship, the generation gap, idealism verses pragmatism and love.

MCT's production features Jess Kozman in the roles of Father Tim Farley and Matt Mabe as the young seminarian, Mark Dolson. Kozman has been seen on MCT's stage in "Rue de L'Amour," "The Taming of the Shrew," "Tribute" and "Who's Happy Now?"

A recent graduate of Lee High School, where he won best actor awards for his performance of the title role in "Caligula," Mabe is making his MCT debut.

The production is being directed by Ted Strickland, MCT's assistant director. Set design is by Brett Batterson.

Other staff members include Marge Henry, stage manager; Mike Jordan, assistant stage manager; Ann Seyler and Doug Seyler, set construction; Louise Evans, chairman of the paint crew; Billie Sartain, supervising costumes; Jan Mann, gathering props; Jim Bartlett, running props for the show; Andy Salcedo, lights; Jim Beverley, sound; and Marilym Allen and Edwin Gibbs, publicity.

The production is scheduled for nine performances, closing Aug. 18. For reservations call the theater's box office, 682-4111.

Chilean literature alive, but not well

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Chilean literature, which has produced two Nobel Prize winners and attracted a large readership, is pretty much alive but not too well, experts say, because Chileans are reading less.

Writers and spokesmen for the nation's largest publishing houses and bookstores say sales have decreased by 50 percent to 60 percent in the last 10 years.

Those experts generally attribute the decline to a number of factors, but especially to what they call an unfavorable political climate for culture under the military regime, and the long economic crisis.

The average edition of a book these days is only 3,000 copies, the same as it was in the '30s, when Chile's population was less than half its present 11 million. The national illiteracy rate then was much higher than the present 6 percent.

"Chileans are reading less than ever before," said Hector Velez, a spokesman for the Book Fair, Chile's largest bookstore, in an interview. "Sixty percent of the bookstores that existed in Chile 10 years ago have closed down."

Velez said there are about a dozen bookstores left in downtown Santiago, a city of 4 million.

"We are not selling literature books anymore," said Nena Barros, who works at a small bookstore in downtown Santiago. "People are only buying textbooks that are mandatory at their children's school."

Writers and critics insist that the quality of Chilean literature has nothing to do with the problem, and they point out that the phenomenon also affects foreign authors.

Chilean literature traditionally has been considered one of high quality. Two Chilean poets have won the Nobel Prize for literature: Gabriela Mistral in 1945 and Pablo Neruda in 1971.

"The Chilean literature today is as good as always. It is not better, it is not worse," said Luis Sanchez Latorre, an author and critic who for a decade was president of the Chilean Writers Society.

A book costs between $1.50 and $12 in Chile, where the minimum legal monthly salary is $60 and unemplyement stands well above 20 percent.

"The political situation affects the whole literary and cultural development of the country," said Sanchez Latorre. "Dictatorships are never interested in culture."

Chile has been ruled by a military regime since a 1973 coup which overthrew the government of marxist President Salvador Allende.

The military regime occasionally imposed outright censorship on books. Until last August, a government authorization was needed to publish any book. Some authors said they had to wait for up to eight months before getting the government's authorization.

ENTERTAINMENT

TV producers run from Olympic Games

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Several TV series have decided to film away from the Los Angeles area from July 28 to Aug. 12 during the Olympic Games because of the congestion.

But shooting of theatrical features seems little affected, partly because not many are shot in Hollywood anyway. Last week major studios were filming seven features locally.

"We have three pictures shooting in town," said Fred Brost, production executive at Universal Studios. "'Mask' with Cher finishes on Aug. 31. 'Fletch,' a Chevy Chase picture will be filming around town until Aug. 3, staying away from areas impacted by the Olympics.

"The Richard Pryor movie, 'Brewster's Millions,' had some New York locations, and they'll be gone during the Olympic period. That happened pretty much accidentally, but the games were probably the deciding factor."

For television producers, the problem is more acute. Many series film locations on the streets of Los Angeles and its environs. Three months ago, there were dire predictions that sections of the city would be off-limits to film companies and traffic would make film workers late to their jobs. Now the situation does not seem as bad as expected.

"I know of no problems on any score directly related to the Olympics," said Charles Weisenberg, spokesman for the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers. "'Hill Street Blues' shot some of its locations in advance and will spend the two weeks in the studio. But then the series doesn't exactly shoot in tourist areas, anyway."

"We're planning to do business as usual," said Dirk Bevring, motion picture coordinator for the Los Angeles Public Works Department. "We will try to accommodate any film companies, even in the Olympic impact areas — there are four Games venues within the city — or we will suggest alternatives."

On a normal day 30 film crews of all kinds — big and small movies, commercials, etc. — work on locations within the city. The number will be slightly less during the Olympics, Bevring predicted, because many series have chosen to go on hiatus.

Petroleum museum to host seminar

AUSTIN — The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum is hosting a museum educational seminar for museum professionals and volunteers Aug. 3.

Sponsored by the Texas Historical Commission, the seminar will teach how primary materials, such as letters, photographs and clothing, can enrich the understanding of a period; several interpretive approaches to "reading" three-dimensional artifacts; and relationships between art and history in interpreting material culture in a museum setting.

Participants will take part in several exercises designed to explore these topics. A $5 registration fee will be charged for the workshop.

The Midland workshop is one of four to be held this summer throughout the state. The other seminars will take place July 31 in Denton, Aug. 1 in Canyon and Aug. 4 in Huntsville.

Second art sale for boys ranch set

LAMESA — The 2nd annual Lamesa Western Art Exhibit and Sale to benefit West Texas Boys Ranch will be held Aug. 2 at the First National Bank of Lamesa from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The exhibit and sale are open to the public and there is no admittance charge.

An invitational art preview party will be held at 6 p.m. Aug. 1 at the Dean Indian Canyon Ranch outside Lamesa.

For more information or for an invitation to the preview party call the West Texas Boys Ranch, 1-949-1936.

Metropolitan to show works by Van Gogh

NEW YORK (AP) — "Van Gogh in Arles," the first major exhibition devoted to the 15-month period during which Vincent van Gogh worked in Arles, will be held at the Metropolitan Museum of Art Oct. 18-Dec. 30.

Over 140 works — some 75 paintings and 65 drawings — assembled from public and private collections in the United States and Europe will trace Van Gogh's development from his arrival in Arles in February 1888, to his departure in May 1889.

Midland SPCA will open animal shelter

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A facility that will house unwanted pets until they are adopted will open next week as an alternative to dumping animals in the country or placing them with the city animal control department.

The shelter will open in the wake of the City Council's decision Tuesday to increase adoption fees although the Midland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals opted to open a shelter with a less expensive adoption fee early last February.

"One of the reasons we felt we needed to be in an office handling the animals is we saw the needs from the phone calls we received," said Dalton Byerly, SPCA cruelty investigator. "People were told by the city animal control that they can only hold (the animals) for a little while before they put them to sleep."

Apparently, some don't want to give their animals up if there is the likelihood of euthanasia, a must in crowded animal control departments.

"I think a lot of people won't take them there," said Jeanette Probandt, president of the Midland SPCA. "Part of it is animal controls have always had such a bad reputation. A lot of people will not take them there whereas they will take them to a Humane shelter.

"I've had a lot of people tell me, 'Well, I'd rather just take and dump it out in the country rather than take it to the animal control,'" she said. "This will give them a choice."

Although there will not be a set time limit for holding animals waiting to be adopted, animals still will be put to sleep if a home cannot be found for them and the facility becomes overcrowded, Ms. Probandt said. "We cannot hold them forever because we will be operating solely on donations and the time (period for holding the animals) will depend on our finances."

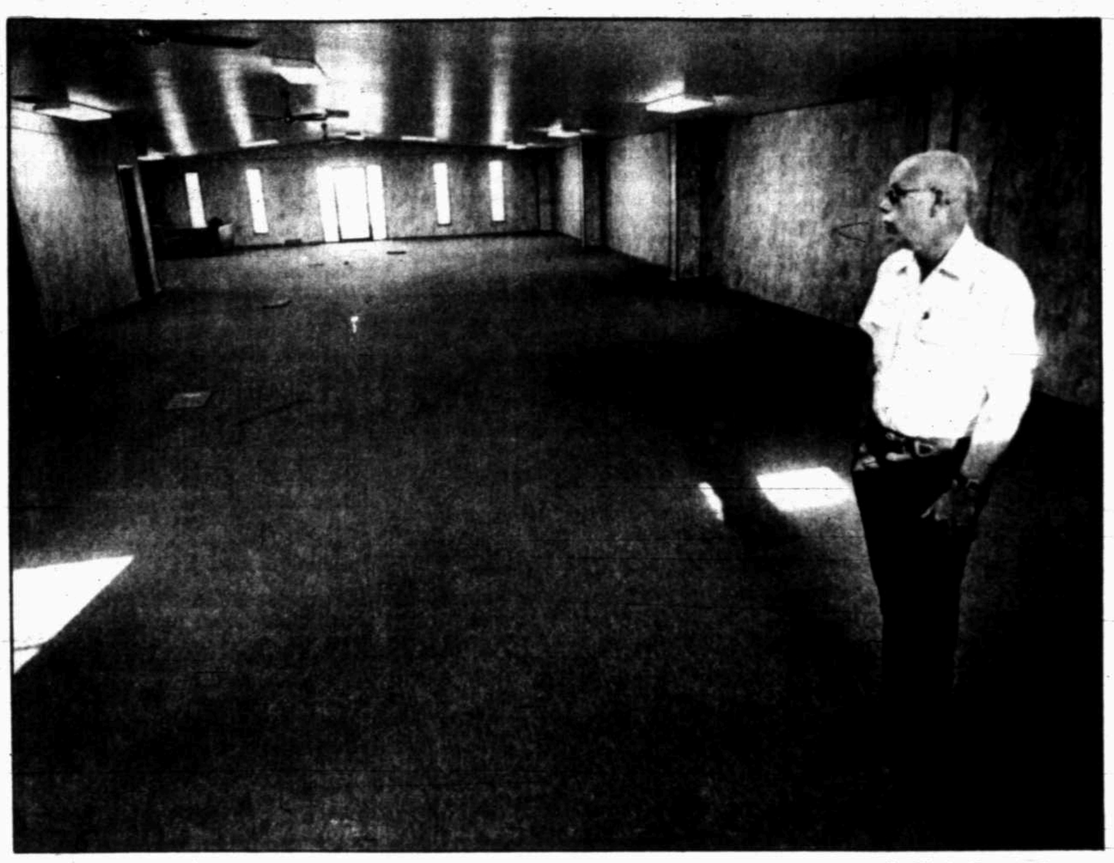
ABOUT $1,500 per month will be needed to operate the shelter, Byerly said. Presently leasing, the SPCA is negotiating to purchase the 2,775-square-foot facility which sits on two-thirds of an acre of land at an industrial park south of Interstate 20.

Byerly, who will head the shelter, emphasized the SPCA's effort is not to compete with the city animal control department. The terms animal control and humane shelter differentiate the two operations fairly well, he said.

"We will do things that they don't do," Byerly said. "Being able to hold animals for any amount of time is one thing. Of course, we can get full here and can't take anymore but we can at least ask people to hold their animals for a few days to give us a chance to move another animal. And we'll be able to do a lot of educational work (in a classroom in the building). We're not bound by city fees so we can do things to our best conscience."

Animal control officers routinely patrol and pick up stray or loose animals but the SPCA prefers that persons wishing to put their pet up for adoption bring them to the facility, Ms. Probandt said.

The idea for an alternate shelter, which also will be open for a few hours on Saturdays and Sundays, came up when the animal control lost its cat shelter to another city department. Cats are now placed in a small building next to the dog shelter, which also houses the offices of Animal Control Director Coy Willis and his secretary.



Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Dalton Byerly, Midland SPCA investigator, surveys a building leased to serve as an alternate shelter for unwanted pets. The shelter will start housing cats next week.

"WE DID RUN into some problems, though," Willis said. "Along with the reduction of space, we had the problem with housing so many pets."

Officials with animal control and the SPCA agree there is a growing trend toward owning small pets — especially cats. Willis cited fewer requirements in caring for cats — which need only a fresh litter box, water and food for short periods of time — without worrying about the expense of a pet sitter or boarding.

"You can go away for a day or a weekend and feel secure that your animal is not being deprived of food or cleanliness," Willis said. "People are traveling more and they like their freedom more so a cat suits their needs."

Ms. Probandt pointed to an increase in apartment dwellers who can keep cats in their rented units as one reason for the trend.

While cats and small dogs will be accepted first, large dogs may be housed if additional space and cages are added to the facility, located at No. 15 Kerry Road. To reach the shelter, one can go south on Midkiff Road and take a left on County Road 113 West, following the road as it curves to the left. The shelter is on the right at the end of Kerry Road and may be contacted by calling 694-7852.

A FOSTER PROGRAM or a card file of dogs for adoption may be kept at the shelter, Ms. Probandt said, adding the shelter also will require the animal to be spayed and neutered when adopted, similar to the animal control's policy.

SPCA adoption fees will be less than those required by the city, which received approval for a $10 increase Tuesday to $25. A $20 neutering fee also will be added for all animals.

Willis told the city council the increase may inhibit some people from adopting animals from the city for awhile. There is a "possibility" that the SPCA shelter could have a larger number of adoptions as a result. "It depends on one's opinion," Willis later told the Reporter-Telegram.

"There are certain times of the year that we get more cats than we can really handle anyway," he said. "Our number one priority is not adopting animals. Of course that's part of our operation — it has a place here."

Inn to reopen as retirement center

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The gutted outer shell that contained The Inn of the Golden West and memorabilia that clutters the building's first floor are all that remain of a hotel that in its time served as an entertainment mecca in West Texas.

Gone is the two-room Golden Rooster Club, which packed in the crowds from its opening in the 1950s through much of the next two decades.

Soon to follow is the open-air pool and cabana area, where visitors lazed in the sun during the hotel's heyday.

Workers were installing cement columns for an atrium ceiling Wednesday, where future residents will be able to repair for relaxation.

Closed since November 1982, the old building is scheduled to reopen in spring 1985 as a retirement center for the well-to-do.

An altered version of the building will remain, but the decision to end its use as a hotel marks the end of an era.

Built in the 1950s by a group of Odessa entrepeneurs, the eight-story hotel set off the Petroplex from the flatness of the Permian Basin. Liquor magnate Pinkie Roden bought the hotel in the 1960s and retained ownership through its boom years.

The Golden Rooster Club had two bands performing nightly in rooms separated by only a few feet on the eighth floor.

The main ballroom for many years was the site of the Odessa Jazz Party, which attracted the biggest names of the time for a week of performances. This event has been moved to the Odessa Country Club.

Also gutted for room space is the seventh-floor private club, which the managing partner of the new project, Ben Kiker, said was set up for gambling.

The ballroom remains, as does the White Buffalo Saloon, with its painting portraying the Albino buffalo which folklore has roaming the Wild West in the 19th Century. The saloon's cherrywood bar, reportedly constructed in 1850 in Chicago and marred by bullet holes from gunfights, has been spared.

But the hotel, sold by Roden in 1980, began to struggle as newer accommodations sprang up in the area. One owner filed for bankruptcy in 1981. It was purchased by a group of Dallas investors, but closed in August 1982 after the failure of a bond issue to finance a downtown civic center.

Wage concessions and staff reductions led to a temporary reopening, but the hotel closed its doors for the final time in late 1982.

Kiker, managing partner of the group planning to turn the building into Odessa's first retirement center, said there were no plans to link the facility, Permian Basin Manor Ltd., to the inn's colorful past.

"We want to get completely away from the look of the old hotel," said Kiker. Bargain hunters and trivia buffs have the run of the first floor, where everything from furniture to chandeliers is for sale.

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Closed since November 1982, what has been known as the Inn of the Golden West will be called Permian Basin Manor Ltd. when renovation of the old building is completed. The retirement center's facilities will stand in the place of attractions such as the Golden Rooster Club and the White Buffalo Saloon.

Ben Kiker

In the interim between its closing and the beginning of the current $2 million renovation project, many of the artifacts inside the hotel disappeared. "Hobos lived in there, on and off, for years," said Kiker.

Different configurations of rooms are to be opened on the second through seventh floors, with six penthouse suites filling the eighth-floor area that had been the Golden Rooster Club.

The 130 units will rent for $675-$1,600 per month. "We found that Ector County has one of the highest median incomes for people over 65 in the state of Texas," said Kiker.

He said the decision to turn the building into a retirement home "came down to economics." The building and grounds, which Kiker valued at $3.5 million, have been vacant since the inn's closing.

Reopening it as a hotel or developing it into office space was dismissed by the owners, said Kiker, because there is already an overabundance of both in Odessa.

"You've got brand-new, first-class buildings standing vacant," said Kiker, adding that using the old structure rather than building a new one figured to save the owners about $1 million.

License tag fees increase Aug. 1

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Texas motorists will be paying more after Aug. 1 for the privilege of driving their cars, trucks and motorcycles on the state's highways.

License tag fees will be hiked by a blanket $12.50 per vehicle beginning next Wednesday. Then, fees will be increased $6.25 in 1986 and another $6.25 in 1987 for a total $25 increase in three years.

For passenger cars, the fees will be based on the model year rather than by weight, which is the current practice.

The $12.50 add-on, authorized by Texas House Bill 122, will bring in an additional $162.5 million annually to build and maintain the state's highway system, according to Dian Neill, assistant director of the Motor Vehicle Division of the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The vehicle count in Texas is pegged at 13 million units, she said. In 1982, the state spent $1.35 billion in highway construction and maintenance.

At the option of each county, an additional $5 surcharge may be added on Jan. 1. That $5 fee, which the Midland County Commissioners' Court elected to take, will bring in more than $500,000 to augment the county's road-and-bridge department budget, which in 1984 is budgeted at $1.7 million. The estimated additional income is based on the 104,655 vehicles registered in Midland County in 1983.

The 2-by-1-inch 1985 registration sticker, which is affixed to the rear license plate, is yellow.

Beginning Aug. 1, vehicle registration fees will be:

— 1978 and older model cars: $28.30. (The $15.80 base fee plus the $12.50 add-on.) By 1987, the fee would be $40.80 plus the $5 county surcharge.

— 1979, 1980 and 1981 model cars: $38.30. (The $25.80 base fee plus the $12.50 add-on.) By 1987, the fee would be $50.80 plus the $5 county surcharge.

— 1982 and newer model cars: $46.30. (The $33.80 base fee plus the $12.50 add-on.) By 1987, the fee would be $58.80 plus the $5 county surcharge.

— Vehicles weighing more than 6,000 pounds will be charged the current 60 cents per hundredweight plus the initial $12.50 charge. In addition, $6.25 will be added to register the vehicle in 1986 and another $6.25 in 1987.

Contest will pick logo for Midland Center

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

The Midland Center Advisory Board has announced a contest to pick a new logo for the center, and a $100 prize is waiting for the person who comes up with the winning entry.

The logo will be used on a new electronic billboard which will be installed at the center's Wall Avenue entrance in the fall.

"Midland Center is four years old, and we feel it's time it had some official representation that people can recognize," said JoAnn Bagwell at an Advisory Board press conference Wednesday announcing the contest. "We're hoping to get all interested Midlanders to send us their ideas."

The board is looking for something that represents the spirit of Midland, Ms. Bagwell said.

"We want to involve the community" in the selection, added Midland Chamber of Commerce Executive Vice President Grant Billingsley.

Midland Center is a meeting and convention facility for the community and the Permian Basin. Billingsley said it has been used more extensively each year and is fulfilling the city's expectations.

'Love is a many splendored thing' — while it lasts

Take away the moonglow, the violins, the poetry and the daydreaming, and "this thing called love" takes on a different complexion.

The song says "love is a many-splendored thing," and it — platonic or sexual — is indeed splendiferous for as long as it lasts. After that, the glow, especially in torrid love, unfortunately often turns to tarnish and is a bit caustic. Sometimes.

Optimum love is "unconditional love," an attitude the Greeks called agape. It is brotherly love at the apex; it is the love of God for man.

But this "thing" called love which often gets bold headlines in tabloids and risque magazines, the jokes on talk shows and the ribald gestures in intimate groups is more lust than love. But to "make love" — such a crude term — may be lurking lust, good old-fashioned whoopee, conjugal relations, just a plain old ordinary affair, casual sex or a hundred other degrees of "making out."

"You're mine...heart and soul."

"You smile, and the angels sing."

"You're my reason to live..."Til rivers flow upstream, 'til lovers cease to dream, I'm yours, be mine."

The Big Band dance music is so lovely in its swing and romance. In the evening hours, love soars and drifts on heavenly clouds. In the morning, after the magic charm of daybreak, all of that romance may dissipate like a mist in sunlight unless that cheek-to-cheek love the night before had a touch of agape to go with the moonglow.

The problem with that daydreamy sort of love characterized in heart-felt songs for lovers and fantasists is that they seem to propose unrealistic expectations: solutions to personal problems and escape from the mundane.

Just remember, no song comes with any guarantees, and listeners can infer whatever pleases them. The traditional appeal of music is in its aesthetic qualities, its pacifying effect, its charm to create mood and rhythm, its power to effect a sentimental attitude.

Love is grand — in and out of songs. And lovers might note that "the other person," like the moonglow, is not the panacea. The lover must first look deeply into himself — or herself — before looking outward.

Ed Todd is a staff writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

Diabetic children have own summer camp

GAINESVILLE (AP) — Nestled in the hills northeast of Gainesville, Camp Sweeney looks much like other summer camps. It has a stable for horseback riding, a lake for fishing and paddle boats and cabins filled with rows of bunk beds.

But this is no ordinary summer camp; it's only for kids with diabetes.

For 35 summers, Camp Sweeney has been a place where children with diabetes can enjoy the pleasures of summer camp, learn more about diabetes and be with other kids who have the disease, said Glenn Wilson, assistant camp director.

Along with the typical camp activities, a medical staff skilled in the knowledge of juvenile diabetes gives campers round-the-clock supervision and attention, Wilson said.

A dietician also gives them recipes, menus and information about balancing their insulin intake and diet, and how to substitute foods when a party or something special is on their schedule.

But there's more to the camp than the activities and the education about diabetes. It's like a big family.

Jim Campbell has been camp director since the beginning. He said he and Dr. J. Shirley Sweeney started the camp in 1949. Although Campbell is not diabetic, he said his mother and daughter had the disease. The camp is owned by the Southwestern Diabetic Association.

Campbell said diabetics who attended camp 20 and 30 years ago will stop by to say hello and meet with other diabetics. "It gets to be like family," he said grinning.

The director has good rapport with the campers. He sometimes sits on the screened porch of the main building under the fans, drinking iced tea. He playfully teases the younger kids and talks with them as if he were their grandfather, rather than the camp director.

Many of the counselors at Camp Sweeney are former campers, Wilson said, and most of them also are diabetic. They give the younger kids a "role model" to look up to.

Andrea Williamson from Azle was a camper for four years and is now working her fifth summer as a counselor. "I like being with other diabetics and working with people," she said.

One of the main things that many young diabetics learn at Camp Sweeney is how to give insulin shots, Wilson said. "Most campers leave here giving themselves their own insulin injections," he said, "We encourage this for self-independence."

Wilson said no one is forced to give themselves the shots, but they do it as a result of peer pressure. Many of the older kids give themselves the daily injections and the younger kids want to learn, too, he said.

Lisa Blundell, a 10-year-old camper from Marlow, Okla., brags that she learned to give herself insulin injections on the third day of the camp session. She said before she went to camp that her mother gave her the shots and she "didn't like to look."

A typical day at Camp Sweeney is much like those at any other summer camp, but there are differences. Since many diabetics aren't as involved in physical activities and they aren't accustomed to lots of exertion, afternoons are reserved for a "cabin time" of rest and relaxation, Wilson said.

Another difference is the constant education about diabetes. But the lessons are sometimes subtle, like the bottles of saccharin on the tables in the dining hall instead of sugar and the "Question of the Day" about diabetes at flag-lowering ceremonies every day, Wilson said. Sugarless treats are rewarded for correct answers.

Attending Camp Sweeney isn't inexpensive. It costs $650 for each three-week session. But Wilson said no one has ever been denied admission because they were unable to pay.

Applicants "pay what they can" and the rest is taken care of by donations, he said. The only real requirement is that the camper has diabetes.

Gay group plans conference

DALLAS (AP) — National gay rights leaders are planning a conference in Dallas the day after the Rev. Jerry Falwell's pre-Republican National Convention "Family Forum."

The gay leaders said they hope to neutralize the climate of "panic and fear" about gays created by Falwell and other conservative leaders.

They said people attending the two-day Family Forum will be invited to hear gay speakers. Both meetings will be at the same hotel.

"This is basically for their enlightenment — or anyone who sympathizes with them," John Eaton, a California gay rights activist, said Wednesday.

Residents evacuated after gas leak

SEAGRAVES (AP) — About a dozen people were evacuated from their homes in this West Texas town early today after a high-pressure natural gas line sprang a leak, officials say.

Residents in the rural area near the New Mexico border were awakened by officers from the Gaines County Sheriff's Department and the Texas Department of Public Safety after a rupture in an 8-inch line at 12:47 a.m.

A low-hanging white cloud of natural gas spread quickly over the area, but Gaines County Sheriff's dispatcher Pat Hubbele said the leak was contained by 9 a.m.

She said the residents had not yet returned to their homes, but added that no one had been injured.

Authorities said no towns were in the gas' path. They said the gas line belongs to Phillips Petroleum Co.

The county's $5 surcharge will be added to those fees in January.

"Each year," Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield told the commissioners in a letter on the new fees, "one year model will drop off and the new model added, so there will be a shifting of the fees as the vehicles grow older."

To be phased out are the fees according to weight: $15.80 for cars weighing up to 3,500 pounds, $25.80 for cars weighing between 3,501 and 4,500 pounds, and $33.80 for cars weighing between 4,501 and 6,000 pounds. Two years ago, the fee was raised by $3.50 for vehicles in those categories.

"I think that people who own the little vehicles are going to say a few words about it," Lorene Kohutek, Ms. Shuffield's chief deputy, said of the fee increases. The fees on token trailers will remain the same — $15.30, she said.

After Aug. 1, fees on subcompact economy cars and "full-size" luxury automobiles of the same model year will be the same.

Ms. Kohutek noted that Texans are "pretty fortunate" that car registration fees haven't gone up as they have in some other states.

Rather than by weight or model year, Oklahoma, for example, bases car fees on value. That system is similar to ad valorem taxation on real and personal property.

In considering the new-car registration fees earlier in the week, Midland County Commissioner Durward Wright noted the $12.50 add-on fees goes to the state.

"We don't get a penny of it," he said. "We need the $5 (for road maintenance). "Five (dollars) stays home."

Of the $5 surcharge, Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig said he was not "as unhappy as I would be if we had to give it up."

Each county has the option of charging the $5 fee or not.

"It is possible," Ms. Shuffield had noted, "that since the fees are already being increased that this $5 fee would not even be 'noticeable' to the public."

Commissioner Win Brown said Texas' car registration fees are "really cheap compared with the rest of the states in the United States. In some states, the fee is upward of $600. We're really nominal."

In 1983, Midland County collected $3.23 million in vehicle registration fees, according to Ms. Neill. Of that amount, the county kept $546,182 in fees and commissions, and forwarded $2.68 million to the state.

White pays surprise visit to prison

TENNESSEE COLONY (AP) — Gov. Mark White, alarmed by stabbings and the discovery of 489 homemade weapons at a prison unit, paid a surprise visit to the state prison system's Coffield Unit and found all quiet.

White spent about two hours talking to guards and inmates at the 60-acre complex Wednesday afternoon as officials began to lift a lockdown of 1,700 inmates that began last Thursday.

"He's been in touch, and he knows we've had problems," warden Jack Garner said. "We talked about what our problems had been and he seemed to think we were going in the right direction."

'Gypsy' gun dealers may be illegal

HOUSTON (AP) — "Gypsy" gun dealers have turned gun shows into clearinghouses for the unregulated trading of weapons, several gun shop owners say.

Professional gun dealers would be breaking the law if they operated in the same manner, says Bill Carter, owner of three Carter's Country gun stores in the Houston area.

"How can these people come to town in their vans, pickups or mobile homes, and sell to the general public without being licensed?" Carter asked.

The "gypsy" dealers tend to be out-of-town business people "who come down here and dump their overstock," says Henry Redding, general manager of Sporting Goods Inc.

Judge will decide if Mattox trial will be postponed

AUSTIN (AP) — State District Judge Mace B. Thurman was expected to decide today if Attorney General Jim Mattox's trial on commercial bribery charges will be postponed from Sept. 17 until Feb. 11.

Attorney Roy Minton, who is representing Mattox, made the request Tuesday so he could represent Travis County in a lawsuit pending in federal court and in another suit set for trial in October in state court.

Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle said he opposes a delay.

Mattox was accused last September of commercial bribery, a felony, by threatening to block state-required approval of public bonds submitted by the Houston law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski.

Thurman has refused to dismiss the indictment.

Officials call off search for fish which bit girls

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (AP) — The search for elusive sharks that apparently mangled the feet of two teen-age girls swimming in chest-deep water was called off after boats and airplanes found no trace of "large fish" in the water.

Meanwhile, city officials were to meet with marine biologist Robert Edwards at 10 a.m. today to determine what type of fish bit an 18-year-old girl from Mexico City and a 13-year-old girl from College Station on Tuesday.

Edwards, an ichthyologist with Pan American University at Edinburg, said Wednesday the "large fish" may have been a type of gar or barracuda and not necessarily a shark.

City officials have downplayed any possible danger after the apparent shark attacks and decided to keep their popular beaches open, hoping publicity would boost tourism, rather than scare it away.

Carmen Castro Gaytan, who was attacked Tuesday by what rescuers descibed as a 4-foot shark, remained in guarded condition Wednesday night in the intensive care unit of Valley Community Hospital in Brownsville after undergoing more than five hours of extensive reconstructive surgery on her legs.

"It's just wait and see," hospital spokeswoman Suzy Payne said of Ms. Castro's chances to recover without an amputation. Ms. Payne said the young woman's leg were badly mangled by "fierce bites."

Gary Kendrick, assistant hospital administrator, said it would be 24 to 48 hours before doctors can determine whether she will regain use of her foot.

A few hours after the attack on Ms. Castro, a 13-year-old from College Station was biten while swimming in front of the Tiki Hotel and required 70 stitches on her legs.

Joe Rubio, a South Padre Island city official, said the beaches were kept under surveillance by land, sea and air Wednesday.

Rubio said there was no evidence the second girl had been attacked by a shark. City officials would not release the girl's name.

"We're not sure what happened," he said. "A girl suffered some lacerations on her foot. We don't even know what it was."

Beaches would be evacuated if "any suspicious activity that can be confirmed as sharks" is spotted, he said.

But the attack — the first in 23 years in the area — didn't keep people away from the border resort he said.

"We haven't noticed people staying out of the water," he said. "We hope we can get some more publicity and get more tourists down here. We don't even consider this a major incident...We see no reason to spoil anyone's vacation."

Ms. Castro was swimming in chest-deep water shortly after noon Tuesday outside the Padre South Hotel when beachgoers heard her cry out for help.

Cidonio Barron Leon, of Reynosa, Mexico, said he saw a shark when he grabbed Miss Castro's arm to pull her out. He had just left his wife on the beach to go for a swim when Ms. Castro cried out.

"Help me please, a fish is killing me," Barron quoted Ms. Castro as saying in Spanish." He said he was about 15 feet from her at the time.

Men shoot out cab windows to arrest alleged bond jumper

HOUSTON (AP) — Four men in a Mercedes forced a cab to stop, then blew its windows out with a shotgun and grabbed a woman passenger, officials said.

Major C.W. Rust of the Harris County sheriff's department said Tuesday the men were employees of South Texas Bail Bonds and were trying to arrest the woman who was accused of jumping bond.

Rust said the four men took the woman, identified as Rebecca Oliver, to the sheriff's department. But, he said, she walked out with a group of people while no one was watching her. Rust said she was recaptured Tuesday.

Soldier dies in tank accident

FORT HOOD (AP) — A 25-year-old soldier was killed during a training exercise when the tank he was driving overturned, officials said.

Staff Sgt. Rodney W. Scarbro Jr. of Glen White, W. Va., was pinned beneath the tank Tuesday, a U.S. Army spokesman said.

Scarbro, of the 2nd Armored Division, was driving an M-1 Abrams tank during a night-training exercise when the accident occurred, said Maj. Tony Geishauser.

Geishauser said Wednesday that the ground gave way under the tank, causing it to overturn. The accident occurred at a field location off West Range Road on the post, he said.

Crosses, star to stand during appeal

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that a Harris County commissioner can let three crosses and a Star of David remain in a park west of Houston until he has exhausted appeals of an order for their removal.

U.S. District Judge Carl O. Bue, who in May ruled that the religious symbols constituted a violation of separation of church and state, said Wednesday that commissioner Bob Eckels could leave them there until the appeals process is completed.

The order to take down the symbols in Bear Creek Park west of Houston came as the result of a lawsuit filed in 1982 by the American Civil Liberties Union, which said they were improper.

Eckels contended the symbols, erected in 1980, were intended as a memorial to war dead and did not constitute promotion of religion, but Bue wrote in his May ruling, "the clear purpose of what commissioner Eckels was doing was to advance religion."

Transsexual tries to kill herself

HOUSTON (AP) — A transsexual sentenced to two life sentences for shooting at policemen tried to kill herself in jail hours after her conviction, sheriff's officers said.

Ana Lucia Gelabert cut her wrists early Wednesday with the blade from a disposable razor and may also have swallowed cleaning fluid, said Sheriff's Lt. A.H. Anderson.

Jurors found Ms. Gelabert, who became a woman in 1979, guilty of two counts of attempted capital murder filed after a Dec. 30 gunfight with police. Her attorneys said the woman was trying to draw police officers' fire because she did not have the courage to kill herself.

Witnesses testified the standoff began after an argument the woman had with her 19-year-old daughter and 13-year-old son. Ms. Gelabert said the two, who she fathered, did not show her proper respect.

Osmonds cancel Dallas concert

DALLAS (AP) — Republican National Convention planners say they will find someone "equally impressive and strong" after the Osmond Family canceled a scheduled appearance here.

The Osmonds, scheduled to perform Aug. 17 at the Cotton Bowl, dropped the Dallas date after deciding they didn't have enough time to promote the concert, said Ron Clark, director of public relations for Osmond Entrprises in Orem, Utah.

Clark said the cancellation "has nothing at all to do with politics. I know they are very much behind Mr. Reagan."

Although the Dallas concert was not directly tied to the GOP convention, local Republican officials had touted it as an appropriate opener for a weekend of pre-convention activities because of the Osmond's family appeal and support of Republican candidates and causes.

Volcker: No tight money supply this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's central bank, which has been spooking the financial markets for months, finally has done something Wall Street could cheer about.

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, making his mid-year trip to Capitol Hill, let it be known Wednesday that the Fed won't tighten up on the money supply for the rest of the year and would only tighten slightly next year.

The news was greeted with sighs of relief on Wall Street, which has been gripped with fears that the Fed would move to restrain an economy that has shown surprising strength all year long.

Such an action on the Fed's part would have sent interest rates, already at high levels, even higher as the central bank clamped down on the supply of money available in the economy.

But Volcker, who was due to return for more congressional questioning today, said the bank planned to hold steady on its current course for the rest of 1984.

Following the announcement, the bond market in New York rallied in active trading, sending yields on 30-year Treasury bonds below 13 percent for the first time in nearly three months.

The good news in the bond market spread to Wall Street where the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials posted its best daily gain in more than two weeks.

Analysts predicted Volcker's announcement could stabilize interest rates, at least for a short time.

David Wyss, chief financial economist at Data Resources Inc., predicted "stable to slightly downward interest rates" in coming months. He said while Volcker revealed a policy of "gradual tightening" it was not "as tight as had been expected."

Kathleen Cooper, economist at Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles, said interest rates were likely to hold steady in the near future, but she predicted they would resume their upward climb as the pressure of the recovery heats up the economy.

Volcker on Wednesday warned against looming federal budget deficits which he said threatened a "relapse into inflationary economic malaise." He said Congress must do more to reduce deficits than the "down payment" made so far.

"The hard fact is, as I am sure the Congress is fully aware, the deficit remains huge ... and absent further action little or no further decline now seems probable for 1985 and beyond, even assuming the economy continues to move to full employment levels," he said.

Volcker denied assertions by critics that the Fed is to blame for high interest rates by its tight-money policies aimed at keeping a check on inflation. He said there was no evidence "the economy has been starved for money and credit."

In its own forecast for economic activity over the next 18 months, the central bank predicted this year's rapid growth for the rest of the year and planned to tighten just a bit next year.

The Fed forecast the gross national product, after adjusting for inflation, would rise by 6.25 percent to 6.75 percent this year, dropping to between 3 percent and 3.25 percent in 1985.

Inflation, the Fed predicted, would rise from about 4 percent this year to perhaps 5.5 percent next year. Even with the economic slowdown, the Fed predicted unemployment would hold steady, averaging between 6.5 percent and 7 percent at the end of next year. Unemployment in June fell to 7.1 percent of the civilian labor force.

For the monetary targets, the Fed said it planned to keep growth in the weekly measure of the money supply in a range of 4 percent to 7 percent next year. That measure, technically called M1, consists of cash and checking accounts. This would represent a 1 percentage point cut from the top of the current range, which Volcker said would be maintained at 4 percent to 8 percent for the rest of the year.

Swearingen rumored as new head of Continental bank

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a new management team selected, federal regulators are set to make official a $4.5 billion rescue package for the troubled Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co., banking sources say.

Terms of the plan — the largest bank rescue ever — were scheduled to be revealed today.

At the end of March, Continental Illinois Corp., the bank's parent, had $41.4 billion in assets, making it the eighth-largest bank holding company in the United States.

Under a complicated arrangement, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. was expected to buy $4.5 billion of the Chicago bank's problem loans for $3.5 billion and inject an additional $1 billion of capital into the institution, according to banking sources who would only speak on condition they not be identified.

The infusion of the extra capital, through the purchase of two series of preferred stock, would give the FDIC an 80 percent stake in Continental, the sources have said.

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker on Tuesday assured the Senate Banking Committee that any lasting solution would set up a "firm base for a healthy but considerably smaller bank."

Volcker refused to reveal terms of the deal but said it should be announced "very soon."

Meanwhile, banking sources said the regulators have picked two new people to head the bank holding company and the bank. David G. Taylor, the current chairman, and president Edward S. Bottum were expected to resign as part of the agreement.

Chicago news media were reporting Wednesday night that John Swearingen, former chairman of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana and a well-known Chicago business leader, will become chairman, and William S. Ogden, former vice chairman of the Chase Manahattan Bank in New York, will become the No. 2 officer succeeding Bottum. Swearingen has an unlisted telephone, and bank spokesman Alastair Davie declined to comment.

Any announcement of a deal would cap a months-long search for a way to handle the 127-year-old bank's problems, which began to surface in 1982 when the Penn Square Bank failed in Oklahoma.

Continental, which had pursued a strategy of aggressive lending to industry, had bought $1 billion in energy-related loans from Penn Square in the late 1970s.

But it wasn't until last spring that the bank's troubles reached the critical point. Rumors circulated in the financial markets of its potential problems, sparking a loss of billions of dollars in deposits.

The federal regulators joined with 28 commercial banks to put up $7.5 billion to keep the bank afloat.

Since then, the regulators have been looking for a more permanent arrangement.

Volcker, in his testimony, said, "The problems of Continental bank essentially reflected serious weaknesses in the domestic loan portfolio of a bank that had engaged in aggressive growth and lending practices for some time, including heavy involvement in participations in energy loans of the Penn Square Bank."

The Fed chief said the bank's circumstances were "unique for a large bank, but the episode may be an object lesson about the importance of looking ahead to anticipate problems."

"In a period of rapid economic and credit expansion, there can be temptations to relax prudent credit standards in an effort to maximize growth," he said.

The expected arrangement hinges on assistance from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which insures deposits up to $100,000 in 14,800 banks.

The agency reportedly would borrow $3.5 billion from the Fed to buy the problem loans from the bank.

AP Laserphoto

WBBM-TV in Chicago has anounced that John Swearingen, former chairman of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, will become chairman of Continental National Bank & Trust Co., the ailing Chicago bank.

But Volcker, without being specific, suggested that technically the FDIC would be assuming loans the central bank had already made to Continental.

He said the agency had done the same thing in the past when it had gone to the aid of other troubled banks, assuming $1.75 billion in Fed loans to Franklin National Bank in New York City; under $500 million for Greenwich Savings Bank of New York City; and about $600 million for the First National Bank of Midland in Texas.

Congress moves to stop payment on synthetic fuels development

WASHINGTON (AP) — A deficit-conscious Congress is moving to stop payment on part of a $20 billion check it wrote four years ago to develop synthetic fuels as a substitute for imported oil.

By nearly a 2-to-1 margin Wednesday, the House of Representatives, over the objections of its Democratic leadership, demanded a chance in this election year to vote on cutting the program in half now that oil prices have dropped 25 percent and oil imports have fallen by one-third.

Through the quasi-government Synthetic Fuels Corp. subsidies are provided to private ventures for converting shale, tar sands and coal into synthetic oil and natural gas.

Under the seven directors that President Reagan appointed to run the corporation, the program has been plagued by charges of mismanagement, cronyism and ethical misconduct.

In the past year alone, two presidents of the corporation have been forced from their $135,000-a-year jobs — a salary ranking second only to the president on the federal payroll — as a result of congressional probes into their outside business dealings.

With its 261-148 tally Wednesday forcing a floor vote to be taken, the House endorsed efforts by the White House and a coalition of fiscal conservatives and energy industry critics to cut the $13.2 billion in unspent money that Congress appropriated for synthetic fuels subsidies in 1980 to between $3 billion and $4 billion.

"The simple fact is that synthetic fuels are just not economically viable now," said Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla. "How can I tell independent oil producers in my state the government is willing to pay $92 a barrel for these projects when they can get only $25 a barrel for their oil?"

Defenders of the program, such as Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., complained that the vote "would, in effect, cut the lights out at the SFC" and weaken the nation's resolve to lessen its dependence on foreign suppliers for one-third of its oil.

"In the Rocky Mountains, we have enough oil in shale deposits to replace all of the oil in the Persian Gulf," said House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas. "Are we foolish enough not to develop it before we run out of oil and gas?"

"We tend to have short memories," said Rep. Joseph McDade, R-Pa., referring to service station gasoline lines in 1973-74 and 1979-80. "I agree we have problems with the Synthetic Fuels Corp.'s management, but the way to solve those problems is by firing the managers, not abolishing the program."

Critics, however, argued that what may have been a good idea in the 1970s — when the nation was held hostage by Arab hands on its oil spigot — has become a scandal-ridden welfare program for oil, chemical and pipeline companies.

"The members of Congress have demonstrated they cannot support wasting billions of dollars on the premature commercialization of ventures plagued with economic, technical and environmental uncertainties," Robert Roach of the Environmental Policy Institute said after the vote.

Rep. James Broyhill, R-N.C., called the synthetic fuels program "pouring money down a rathole" and Rep. Silvio Conte, R-N.Y., likened it to "an unguided missile with too much money landing on poorly conceived projects."

Wednesday's vote sends an $8.5 billion Interior money bill back to the House Rules Committee, which on Tuesday had decreed that critics of the Synthetic Fuels Corp. could not try to attach amendments stripping the agency of most of its funds. The bill and the amendments could come up for another floor vote as early as Friday once the Rules Committee reconsiders it.

In its four years of existence, the Synthetic Fuels Corp. has awarded subsidies to only two projects, $120 million for a coal gasification plant in California and a $620 million for a Dow Chemical Ckj yxy j%% + t before it was shut down in April following the resignations of five of its seven directors, it was on the verge of awarding nearly another $5 billion in subsidies.

The tentative contracts under approval then included one for $2.7 billion guaranteeing a Union Oil Co. project in Colorado a future price of up to $92 a barrel for the synthetic oil it would begin producing in 1989.

Men earning twice as much as women

WASHINGTON (AP) — Average earnings for men are double the figures for women, according to newly released census statistics.

For all workers over age 18, men averaged $16,929 while women earned $8,238, according to the data collected in the 1980 census.

Highest salaries go to white males between the ages of 45 and 54 with postgraduate college degrees. The detailed compilation of salaries paid in 1979 lists annual earnings of $36,520 for white males between 45 and 54 with five years or more of college.

White women of the same age and education averaged $15,637. Peak salaries for white women occur in the 55-to-64 age group, at $16,118.

Peak salaries for blacks, in the same age and educational groups as the highest-paid white males, were $25,801 for men and $17,242 for women.

Average salaries vary considerably in the study, according to edcation, race, gender and age.

Men with less than eight years of schooling averaged $12,028, while women in that category earned $6,159. With a high school diploma, male earnings rose to $15,368 and women's to $7,749. And with a post-graduate college degree men averaged $27,660 and women $13,471.

Work experience also increased income.

Pay for men aged 25 to 34 averaged $15,584, and for women $8,901. But by the peak age of 45 to 54 it was $23,013 for men and $9,356 for women.

White workers averaged $17,609 for men and $8,263 for women aged 18 and over, the highest income category by race.

Grounded Air Florida still holds off creditors

MIAMI (AP) — Grounded Air Florida has temporarily held off its creditors, winning a chance to fly again if it can come up with enough cash to service a shrunken network of 10 cities.

On Wednesday, U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Sidney Weaver allowed the airline to continue using its cash to operate with a skeleton staff, and approved Air Florida's $7 million sale of its London, New York and Washington, D.C., routes to Eastern Airlines.

If Air Florida is to receive that money, the route sale must also be approved soon by the federal government, but attorneys for the Federal Aviation Administration told the judge that could take a minimum of three to six months.

Air Florida Chairman J.R.K. Tinkle said the airline hoped to be flying again as early as Aug. 3, but added "if funds are not available, we just won't fly."

Tinkle said during the hearing that Air Florida could "go into hibernation" to await a decision, if necessary.

Secured creditors, such as the FAA, which holds liens on three of the airline's seven remaining planes, failed to persuade Weaver to commit Air Florida's funds to paying off debts.

Weaver said that so much was owed, and so little cash was available, that it was to all the creditors' benefit to allow the airline a chance to resume operations.

The judge said Air Florida may use up to $300,000, being sought from its own debtors, toward resuming operations.

Under the business plan Air Florida submitted to Weaver on Wednesday, the airline would give up its flights to Central America, the Northeast corridor and London.

Tinkle testified that operating profits could reach $185,000 on about $17 million of business between Aug. 3 and Nov. 15 in what he called an interim plan to get the carrier through bankruptcy proceedings.

The trimmed down plan would use four jets to service Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, and Columbus, Ohio, in the Midwest. Air Florida would fly passengers from there to Orlando, Tampa and Miami, Fla., and the U.S. Virgin Islands of St. Croix and St. Thomas.

At the height of its success, Air Florida served 40 cities in 15 countries.

The FAA on Tuesday said the sale to Eastern of so-called landing "slots" at LaGuardia and National airports was not permitted under current rules.

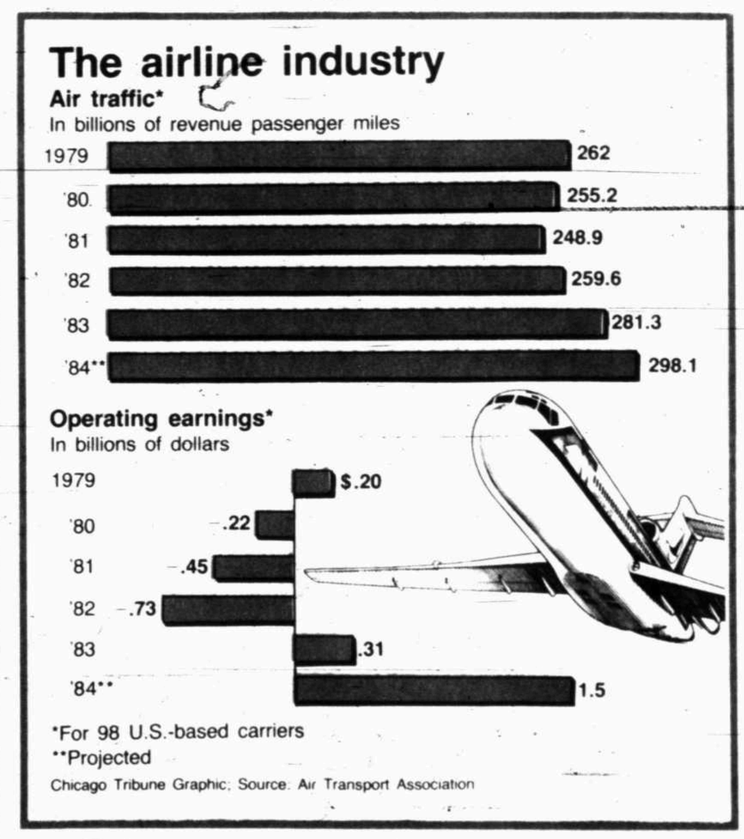
The rules were drawn up after a federal judge blocked Braniff Airways from selling time slots when that carrier went to bankruptcy court. The court ruled that the slots belonged to the government.

Under the proposed route sale, Air Florida would turn over to Eastern 12 daily arrival and departure slots at Washington's National Airport, and four at New York's LaGuardia, in return for $3.5 million. Another $3.5 million would come from sale of the Miami-London route.

The Miami-based airline filed for protection from its creditors July 3 under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Code and abruptly discontinued service, laying off most of its 1,200 employees and stranding hundreds of passengers.

Creditors peppered Tinkle and Air Florida attorney John Olson with questions about liens on its seven jets. Those debts must be settled before the airline can resume service.

The creditors said the carrier owed millions of dollars on the planes, rather than only $951,000.



Midland firm will explore Travis County school land

Austin Bureau

An official with Wiser Oil Co. in Midland and other oil company representatives announced Wednesday that they are leasing about 15,000 acres of Travis County School Land located in Throckmorton County in North Texas.

No wells have been drilled on the land, but one oil company official said at a news conference at the State Capitol, there could be 7.5 million barrels of oil on the property worth about $90 million. Such a supply could provide $40 million in royalty payments to the Travis School permanent fund over the next 25 years.

"Every indication is very positive at this time," said Marvin Cooke, an exploration manager for Wiser Oil, which will oversee drilling and production on the property. Other oil companies involved in the project are TexOil, Inc., Citori Oil Co., Stocker and Sitler, Inc. and geologist Edwin L. Smith.

"We want to be very precise in the location of our wells," said Cooke, who expects the first well to be drilled in September. Between three and five wells will probably be drilled before the end of the year, he said.

Seismic work is being conducted to "pinpoint very precise locations," Cooke said.

"Only the drill bit will yield the final results," said Guy Sitler, president of Stocker and Sitler, Inc.

The announcement was made before a meeting of the Travis County Commissioners Court at the Capitol.

Harry Whitsitt, president of Tex-Oil, Inc., presented Travis County Judge Mike Renfro a check for nearly $749,000 in "bonus money" to exercise an option on the land. Whitsitt said the check was "direct evidence of the optimism which my company and its partners feel about the potential of oil and gas production."

Electronic sales up 13 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — From the familiar telephone and TV set to musical instruments and now greeting cards, America is going electronic. So much so that U.S. factory sales of electronic equipment climbed 13 percent in 1983 to almost $144 billion.

The Electronic Industries Association, the trade group that represents the makers of all things electronic — from microwave ovens to radios, satellite antennas, computers and radar and military communication systems — unveiled those figures and a variety of projections Monday in the 1984 version of its Electronic Market Data Book.

The figures show that each of the four major segments of the electronics industry charted by the EIA — consumer products; communications equipment; computers and industrial products, and component manufacturing — experienced healthy gains last year compared to 1982.

The industry was also employing 1.76 million workers nationwide as of March 31.

Dollar falls again; Gold up

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell against all major European currencies for the second day in a row today.

Gold bullion prices rose at the opening of trading but steadied at only slightly higher levels in later dealings.

The dollar dropped from record-high levels in Europe and New York late Wednesday after Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker said the U.S. Federal Reserve Bank planned no change in monetary policy for the rest of the year.

Volcker's testimony before the Senate Banking Committee dampened fears that the Federal Reserve would tighten credit to keep U.S. economic growth under control. Tighter credit would drive interest rates up further, raising the available yield on dollar-denominated investments.

The dollar came under pressure early today in what was described as active and nervous trading on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange Market.

The dollar closed at 243.40 yen, down from 245.95 yen Wednesday. Market sources said the Bank of Japan intervened to bolster the yen. Later in London, the U.S. currency was quoted at 243.375 yen.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Adobe wildcat tests at 1,512 bopd

"We have been looking for this one since 1970," said Joe Pevehouse, president Adobe Oil & Gas Corp.

He was referring to the firm's No.3-1 Louder, a Fusselman wildcat in Martin County which finaled for 1,512 bopd of 40 API crude and 500 Mcfd gas with no water on a 20/64 in. choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 450 psi.

The well was completed naturally in an open hole section from 11,714 ft., which is the top of the Fusselman to 11,728 ft.

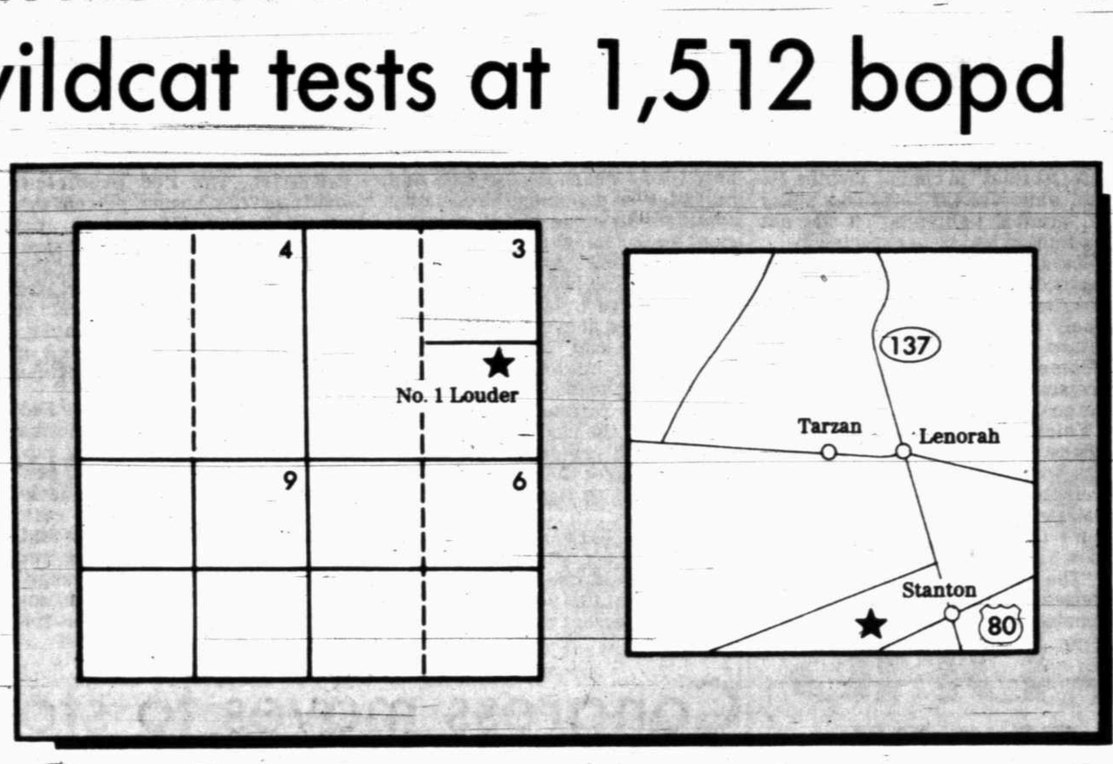
"We swabbed it twice and it came on," said Pevehouse, who indicated that Adobe would be doing further drilling of deep prospects throughout the Spraberry. "There's lots of acreage to deep play on in the trend, and seismic has improved dramatically in the past few years." He also indicated that discoveries such as Adobe's No.1 Louder and Superior's No.1 Strain would probably intensivfy deeper exploration activity in the trend.

The No.1 Louder was drilled on a seismic structure (anticline) consisting of 1,440 gross acres and closest Fusselman production is four miles to the south in the MidMar field. The well is 10 miles southwest of Superior's Fusselman discovery, No.1 Strain, located in Section 24, Block 36, T-1-N, T&P survey.

Adobe owns a 60 percent interest in the No.1 Louder, with LAE Energy of Houston owning 11.25 percent and the remaining 28.75 percent being owned by individuals.

The well is located in Section 3, Block 37, T-1-S, T&P survey, 12 miles northeast of Midland.

Deep prospects have been a standard fare for areas in Martin, Midland, Howard and Glasscock counties, since R-K Petroleum discovered the R-K Devonian field 15 miles north of the Adobe discovery in 1975. To date, the field with about 39 wells has produced 8.5 million barrels of oil.



Adobe completes Louisiana well

It was a good week for Midland's Adobe Oil & Gas as it reported the completion of its forth and best well in the Lake Arthur field, one mile south of Lake Arthur in Vermillion Parrish, Louisiana.

The well flowed 15 Mmcfd gas and 47 bbls condensate per day through a 16/64 in. choke with a tubing pressure of 10,500 psi from its State Lease 7712 No.4, from perforations at 17,423-17,438 ft. from the Miogyp formation.

Gas sales from the three previous wells is now 18 Mmcfd, which is being sold to Colombia Gas.

Since the No.4 showed significant improvement over the other wells, Adobe feels it is now probably higher on the structure, which is located under Lake Arthur.

Adobe owns 22.76 percent working interest in the well. Other parties are: Preston Oil Co. (26.43 %), Jones-O'Brien Operating Co. (26.2 %), Newmont Oil Co. (4.6 %), Rebel Oil Co. (2.93%), Quest Exploration (2.93%), Cotton Petroleum Corp. (7.47%), and various individuals and companies 6.68%.

UNION SEABOARD CORP. of Dallas has completed its No.1-129 McCrary, a wildcat in Garza County which potentialed at 49 bopd, 38.5 API crude, with no water and a gas/oil ratio of 71:1 in an open hole section at 7884-7890. The well is 660 feet from south line and 476 feet from east line of section 129, block 5, H&GN survey, 6 miles northeast of Justiceburg. 5-1/2 inch casing was set at 7884 feet, and formation tops were Top Strawn 7296, Mississippian 7682 and Ellenburger 7884.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Firm sells Iowa oil, gas interests to Texaco

DENVER — Kewa Exploration Inc. of Denver, Co. has announced a sale to Texaco, U.S.A. of an undivided one-half interest of approximately 550,000 acres of oil and gas leases in central and southwest Iowa.

The assigned leases are located in the Midcontinent Rift where Kewa has acquired a total of 1,000,000 acres of leases since 1981. The Rift underlies portions of the states of Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas.

Worldwide crude oil production increased

HOUSTON — Worldwide production of crude oil increased during the first five months of the year, with output in the Free World areas showing the way, according to Petroleum Information. World production of oil increased 7.2 percent during the period to average 54,625,000 barrels a day. This is up from 50,950,000 barrels a day from the first five months of the year of 1983.

UAW wants pay hike, day care, double overtime

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. expects to respond to a list of demands from the United Auto Workers by Monday, the company's chief bargainer says.

The union, negotiating a new contract for its 350,000 workers, presented demands Wednesday that included a new average base wage of $12.67 an hour, double pay for some overtime and company-financed day care centers.

The union also said it wants restoration of the "annual improvement factor" — a guaranteed yearly wage increase established in 1948 and given up in 1982.

In addition, the UAW wants power to veto GM's contracts to buy parts from non-union or foreign manufacturers.

The demands were among hundreds the UAW presented GM on the second day of talks Wednesday, and few of them were expected to survive in their present form.

The union did not say how much of an annual wage increase it will seek on top of the base wage or how the it would want to rewrite the cost-of-living provision, which pays less during times of low inflation.

The present 2½-year contract expires Sept. 14. It granted historic concessions to GM and Ford Motor Co, which were losing money at the time. Both automakers have bounced back to record profits.

The UAW released 56 position papers presented to GM during bargaining sessions which started Monday.

GM chief negotiator Alfred Warren said the company would respond over the next several days and finish "on Monday at the latest." GM has no plans to make its proposals public, he said.

The demands and responses will form the basis for talks between union and company subcommittees. Main-table bargaining probably will cease for several weeks while the subcommittees work on their parts of the contract.

UAW demands also were presented across town at Ford, but copies were not released. Stephen Yokich, head of the union's Ford department, chose to keep them secret, union officials said. Yokich has declined interviews and said he might not hold news conferences during the labor talks.

However, one union official said the Ford demands were similar to those made of GM, keeping in line with the union's goal of contract parity at the major automakers.

The UAW has criticized the companies for what it calls "excessive" overtime in U.S. factories. The union said it wants to "provide for additional financial penalties" against GM by demanding double pay for many overtime hours, including shifts worked on or near holidays.

Day care centers are needed because of the growing number of women and single parents in the workforce, the union said.

The union also demanded "adequate advance notice" of plant closings and decisions about where outside work is done.

Firm faces charges in worker's death

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — General Dynamics Corp. faces charges of involuntary manslaughter and work safety law violations in the death of a worker at its military tank plant, Attorney General Frank Kelley said.

The complaint, filed Tuesday in 37th District Court in Warren, stems from the Nov. 15, 1983, death of Harvey Lee, a mechanic at the tank maker's Center Line plant in suburban Detroit, Kelley said.

An autopsy revealed Lee died after being exposed to Gensolv D, a toxic cleaning compound commonly known as freon, Kelley said. Lee apparently suffered heart problems after trying to drive a tank which had been flushed out with 15 gallons of freon, he said.

The St. Louis-based company is charged with one count of involuntary manslaughter and one count of violating the Michigan Occupational Safety and Health Act by allegedly failing to make sure the air inside the tank was not contaminated with freon after the cleaning.

No hearing date has been set, Kelley spokesman Dan Loepp said.

If convicted of both counts, the company could be fined $17,500, he added.

General Dynamics spokesman Donald Zlotnik said the company has received a copy of the complaint "and we are holding comment until we have a chance to review it."

"It is clear that General Dynamics had substantial advance knowledge of the dangers associated with the use of freon in the cleaning of military tanks being built at their tank plant," Kelley said.

He claimed the company was aware of the danger of exposing employees to freon vapors and was negligent in failing to provide a safe work place.

"It is time that companies like General Dynamics learn that the safety of its employees comes above production or profit," Kelley said.

Marc Stepp, United Auto Workers union vice president and director of its General Dynamics department, said Kelley's actions "confirm what we've been saying all along, that General Dynamics' corporate arrogance has placed its workers lives in jeopardy."

"Repeatedly, after many near tragedies, we tried to get GD to stop the practices that killed Harvey Lee. The company never listened," he said.

"Hopefully, the criminal indictments will cause GD to review its policies and prevent tragedies like Lee's death from ever happening again," the union official concluded.

In addition to the pending charges, General Dynamics was cited for two safety violations and fined $18,000 under the federal Occupational Safety and Health Act, Kelley said. The company also was cited for two safety violations and fined $18,000 under Michigan safety laws, he said.

Job prospects good for college grads

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — The "gloom and doom" that faced college students graduating in 1982 and 1983 faded this year as job offers increased in a trend college officials expect to last into 1985, according to a survey released by the College Placement Council.

The annual survey of 187 placement offices at 162 colleges and universities showed that campus recruiting efforts became "progressively keener" as the economy improved, council spokeswoman Judith O'Flynn Kayser said.

"The class of 1984 is seeing a much brighter outlook than its predecessors," Ms. Kayser said Tuesday.

But the survey also showed that starting salaries changed little from the previous year.

Graduates using the placement offices surveyed received 42,393 job offers in the past academic year, compared with 33,604 in 1982-83. The number of job offers increased in almost every discipline, the survey found.

"The benefits seem to be filtering down to all disciplines, including the forlorned liberal arts graduates," Ms. Kayser said.

She emphasized that the upbeat projections for graduates were being compared with the "gloom and doom" that faced students in 1982 and 1983.

In 1982, she said, a placement officer at Michigan State University returned the survey with the observation that recruiting interest was "the worst since World War II."

She noted that students still remained in less demand than those who graduated after the mid-1970s recession.

"We'll have to wait until next year to see if this is just the beginning or if it's as good as it's going to get," Ms. Kayser said. But she said comments from placement offices and employers suggested the upward turn would continue into 1985.

According to the council, starting salaries generally were not affected. Throughout the recruiting year, employers talked of "holding the line on starting rates," the council said.

Engineering and computer science majors received the most lucrative offers. Petroleum engineers received an average annual salary offer of $29,568, a 4.1 percent drop from last year but still the highest among offers made to bachelor's degree candidates.

Poison gas spews over desert

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo. (AP) — A blowout at a natural gas well in the southwestern Wyoming desert prompted brief evacuation of several ranch families early Tuesday before a cloud of toxic gas dissipated, officials said.

An isolated Champlin Petroleum Co. gas well blew out Monday night, releasing a cloud of poisonous hydrogen sulfide, but it was capped by 7:30 a.m. Tuesday by a crew fromn Texas, officials said.

No one was injured, but Sweetwater County sheriff's officers closed state Highway 430 overnight and evacuated nine people by helicopter as a precaution. They were allowed to return home after about three hours Tuesday morning when winds began blowing the cloud to the east.

"Everything is all secured," Sheriff's Lt. Ron Kudar said afterward. "We were really lucky. The good Lord was really on our side."

The mishap occurred about 8:30 p.m. Monday in the Brady Field, in southwestern Wyoming's Red Desert, about halfway between Rock Springs and the Colorado-Utah-Wyoming border, 50 miles south.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Testers prefer mom bring home (any) bacon

By LINDA ANDERSON

Who would shell out hard-earned money for meat which is mostly fat, full of cholesterol and salt, expensive and slightly tough? Evidently a lot of us do because bacon is one of those breakfast items many of us think we can't start the day without.

But we are also becoming more health-and-nutrition conscious, not to mention more economy-minded, and many of us are aware we can't afford to eat bacon often (in more ways than one).

Some meat producers are marketing "bacon substitutes," made of reassembled pork and/or beef, which are advertised to be healthier ("more protein") and more economical ("less shrinkage") than bacon. We tested two of these products, Oscar Mayer's Lean 'n Tasty and Swift's Sizzlean, against real bacon for taste, texture, price and advertising accuracy.

The taste testers, the usual bunch of adults, teenagers and a preschooler, were eager for this test because I stopped buying bacon years ago and they have felt deprived ever since.

The bacon used in the test was the store's brand and it was on sale for 89-cents per pound. Name-brand bacon often costs $2 or more per pound. The Lean 'n Tasty cost $2.05 for a 12-oz. package; and 12 ounces of Sizzlean cost $2.19. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Lean 'n Tasty and Sizzlean have package advertising which claims "cured, chopped and formed pork (Sizzlean was beef)" and "smoke flavoring added." Both claimed "50 percent leaner than average bacon." Lean 'n Tasty label advertising claimed "50 percent more protein per serving than average bacon" and "cooks faster than bacon."

Sizzlean label advertising specified "Less shrinkage equals more value ... 50 percent leaner means you get more meat after frying than from one pound of bacon."

However, in ingredient lists for both bacon substitutes, salt was listed as a major ingredient, and both products also contained such products as monosodium glutamate, sodium phosphate and sodium nitrite.

The real bacon rendered out about ½ cup fat from four slices of meat and shrank to about ⅓ of its pre-cooked size. Lean 'n Tasty and Sizzlean (four slices of each) shrank to about ½ pre-cooked size, but the Sizzlean rendered out about ¼ cup fat (about twice as much as Lean 'n Tasty).

Although the taste-testers' opinions were divided on which product was the best, all agreed on which was the worst. Real bacon was the loser in this contest, having (1) too much fat; (2) too much salt; and (3) not enough flavor.

The adult male and one teenager preferred Lean 'n Tasty because it had "better flavor and isn't as tough." Sizzlean, thicker than the Lean 'n Tasty, reminded them of beef jerky.

One teenager preferred Sizzlean because it was thicker and had "better flavor." She likes beef jerky.

The 3-year-old liked all three. She thought they were all the same.

All three products can be used in the same ways, for breakfast meat, sandwiches or in recipes. And bacon substitutes are made to resemble bacon's flavor and shape. (I crumbled some in a hamburger-macaroni casserole and everyone raved about it.)

But why spend that much money for that little meat? Although once in a while, for a special occasion, bacon or some similiar meat might be a treat, bacon and bacon substitutes are not economical for most families, and probably are not all that healthy.

Now that we have already eaten the three brands of meat, the taste-testers are after me to buy more. And I probably will — maybe at Christmas.

BETTER BUSINESS

Moral of story: Watch for immoral theme

By LINDA TRUITT

Fairy tales of "too good to be true" prices not only entice individual consumers but businesses as well. With operating expenses steadily rising, businesses are also looking for bargains. As a result, shady out-of-town office supply companies are preying of businesses trying to sell everything from lightbulbs to copier paper.

A company engaged in an office supply scheme will usually make the sales pitch over the telephone. The Better Business Bureau received a call this week from a non-profit organization complaining about a company located in California. According to the organization, the solicitor implied the company was associated with a major office supply corporation. The solicitor said the price of copier paper was going up but if an order for paper was placed immediately the old price would still be effective.

This is a common tactic used by "paper pirates." Other fraudulent tactics used in office supply schemes are:

— The supplier is in distress. He is being forced to liquidate stock, someone made a mistake or the merchandise was shipped to the wrong address and he needs someone to help him out.

— He does not have a sales catalogue which can be mailed to prospective customers.

— He casually states the chairman of the board, corporate treasurer or other officer suggested his prospect be contacted.

BBB experience shows that merchandise received from these telephone deals often turns out to be of sub-standard quality, not brand-name as stated by the solicitor and the price is as high or higher than if ordered from a local supplier. In some cases, the paper ordered degraded the copier's performance and even damaged the machine.

In order for businesses to protect themselves against office supply rackets, they shouldn't buy from a new supplier until they have verified his existence and reliability. They should also call their regular supplier and check to see if the quoted price is actually a good deal.

Businesses should instruct employees to refuse C.O.D. shipments and insist on open account billing. This way, if there is a problem they still have some leverage.

Businesses wanting information concerning a company soliciting orders for office supplies or who have been victimized by an office supply scheme, should contact the BBB, 563-1880.

Doctors question 'Unsuit'

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Is the Unsuit, a California invention that allows sunbathers to tan the skin it covers, unsuitable for the sun?

That is the question raised recently in a letter to the New England Journal of Medicine. Five doctors at the New York University Medical Center reported that their tests suggest that the Unsuit, which is supposed to have a sun-protection factor of 6, actually has a rating of 3.5.

The sun-protection factor refers to the number of hours a person wearing the suit would have to spend in the sun to be exposed to the same amount of sunlight that a person without the suit would be exposed to in one hour.

Tests on two volunteers, one nude and the other in the Unsuit, who were exposed to radiation from a lamp that similates sunlight, produced similar results, the doctors said.

"Therefore," they said, "a considerable amount of solar (and therefore carcinogenic) rays pass through the suit and strike areas of the body that are normally covered."

One of the doctors, Darrell S. Rigel, said in a telephone interview that he and his colleagues tested the Unsuit because of their concern that wearers are exposing normally protected skin areas.

Such areas, Rigel said, are more sensitive to the sun and more likely to develop skin cancer, including malignant melanoma, the most dangerous form. Skin cancers take as long as 20 years to develop, he said.

Other studies have found a relationship between increased rates of melanoma and the trend toward skimpier swimsuits throughout this century, he said.

One study, according to Rigel, said, "The risk of melanoma is related to the type of bathing suit worn by women from the age of 15 to 24. Women wearing bikinis or bathing nude had 52 times the chance of acquiring melanoma as those wearing a traditional one-piece suit, and those wearing a two-piece suit had four times the risk."

Rigel said, "Any tan is bad for you in the long run, not only in terms of skin cancer but also in terms of aging of the skin."

He added that the tests were not conducted to debunk the Unsuit but to stress the dangers of tanning.

"The Unsuit doesn't cause cancer; the sun causes cancer," he said. "It's no more dangerous than if you're going to sunbathe nude, for example."

The Unsuit was introduced earlier this year by its developer, Hans Buhringer, and actress Ann Turkel, both of Los Angeles. It has been sold nationally, featured in media reports and heavily advertised.

Robert Turkel, a partner in the Unsuit business, said that the company has become increasingly aware of public concern about skin cancer.

When it introduces its new line next year, he said, the company probably will include brochures warning of the dangers of overexposure to the sun and advising consumers that a sunscreen can be worn under the suit.

Valuable antiques only rarely found at flea markets

Associated Press

Very rarely will you find a really valuable antique at a flea market. But if you do, seek expert advice on it to avoid lessening or destroying its value.

That's the word from design consultants Gene and Katie Hamilton. As one example of what can happen, they call attention to the case of a woman who was lucky enough to buy an antique piece of furniture and unlucky enough to remove its finish, a milk paint that put the item in a certain time period and gave it authenticity and worth.

The Hamiltons say the first rule of thumb in looking for used furniture at a flea market is to know what you want. They suggest taking along a small notebook, listing the dimensions of the object you want, the dimensions of the room in which it will be placed (including the doorway through which the piece must be passed) and any other pertinent information. Also, bring along a measuring tape and, if you can, some type of instant camera.

"Instant photos," they explain, "are an excellent frame of reference when you're 'hunting' flea markets and garage sales. Take a photo of each piece you're considering, and jot down below or on the back of it the name and phone number of the person and place selling it, the dimensions of the piece, etc.

"If you plan to keep on shopping, this helps you compare and bargain better. Also, carry cash if you can. Most people running flea markets and garage sales won't accept checks or credit cards, and they're more likely to strike a good bargain with you if they see you have the cash in hand and you're seriously ready to buy."

Another "must," they say, is to get up early on the day you plan to shop, and be there before the place opens.

"You often have to compete with antique and used furniture dealers who shop flea markets, auctions and garage sales for a living. They know exactly what they're looking for and are there to get the best of the lot at the crack of dawn."

In any search for furniture, quality is of major importance, whether the piece is used or not.

Copley News Service

Lined jackets have a finished, smooth feel, but lining can create a few problems.

For example, what if the seam where you attach lining to jacket is not quite as neat as you would like, giving your jacket a homemade look?

Why not treat your jacket to a couturier touch that will not only hide the seam, but will also give your garment a very professional finish?

Press this seam to keep the lining flat and away from the seam so it will not bunch up as you work. Now, cover the seam with a pretty narrow braid or embroidery trim.

When buying your trim, be selective. Care is primary: Will it go through dry cleaning (if your jacket must)? Will it wash (if your jacket does)? Will the colors run?

Center trim over seam and pin in place. Neatly (and blindly) hand stitch in place along both edges. Do not pull on trim or it will cause puckering. Allow plenty of "give" in trim around curves and corners.

Wide trim will not make it around curves and corners very well. "Rough" finish trims will be uncomfortable against your body, even through a blouse.

The color you select for your trim should blend or coordinate with the jacket and lining — not clash.

Caution! Do not use stretch lace seam binding! This looks almost rude.

For a true one-of-a-kind trim, haunt garage sales and second-time-around shops for trims. But do watch out — some will be in the last stages of deterioration.

Gemstone collection exhibited

A $4-million collection of unmounted gemstones will be displayed at Corrigans/Kruger Jewelers in San Miguel Square through Saturday. The exhibit is intended to educate the public about gemstones.

Color varies from stone to stone, and the intensity of color affects a gem's value.

The collection includes kunzites from Brazil, sapphires and rubies from Burma and Sri Lanka, Australian opals, Oriental jades, emeralds from Columbia and tanzanites from Africa.

Gaining weight not very easy, according to women in study

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Gaining weight is not as easy as it looks, say two women who stuffed themselves for three weeks in the name of medical research — and gained less than 11 pounds apiece.

"I didn't feel so good right at the end," said Sue Finear, who choked down 4,500 calories a day, including milkshakes, cookies, pound cake, flavored gelatin and colas.

In spite of eating nearly to the point of nausea, three women in a University of Rochester Medical Center experiment — including one who asked not to be identified — failed to gain the 11 pounds or more that doctors had predicted.

The monthlong experiment, designed to explore the relationship between eating and weight gain among women, ended Monday.

Seven more women are being recruited to take part in a similar experiment over the coming year. They get paid $800 each and must agree to spend at least 20 hours a day in the hospital and eat everything on their plates.

"I've learned a lot about how food plays a role in your life," said Ms. Finear, 21. She gained just under 10 pounds and found time on the side to research a paper for Keuka College on the treatment of obesity.

"I'm just glad to be home and not eat. I love milkshakes, and the last week I was so sick of milkshakes I gagged trying to get those things down. It really got gross," she said.

"The milkshakes were enormous. They were heavy (whipped) cream with real ice cream," said Sharon Masseth, 37, who came out 8 pounds heavier and "a little bigger in the face."

"I always thought I was the one that if I eat one little thing, I gain 20 pounds," Ms. Finear said. "Well, I must have really been overdoing it to put weight on before."

Ms. Finear and Ms. Masseth said they could not manage to add more than a few pounds each until the last week and a half of the experiment, when their diet was jacked up to about 4,500 calories a day.

"They would add 600 calories, and the weight would increase a little, then level off," Ms. Masseth said. "Then they would add another 600."

Both women concluded that the human body tends to stabilize its own weight, even if overloaded somewhat.

"People say, 'Oh, I didn't have a thing to eat today.' Well, think back. It's just so easy to stick something in your mouth and forget it," said Ms. Finear, a senior at Keuka College in Keuka Park, N.Y.

In the first week of the experiment, the women ate only healthy foods to establish their weight-maintenance level of calories. Later they added on calorie-filled desserts.

The women said they were surprised that all of them lost weight on the "maintenance" diet even though they felt as though they were eating unusually large portions.

"Most people, when they say they like applesauce, they mean a few tablespoons on the side of their plate. I got almost a whole can," Ms. Finear said. "Also tunafish. I got where I couldn't eat that without a little resentment."

Ms. Masseth, who has worked as a hospital laboratory technician, was more cheerful about her experience. "I wouldn't mind doing it again, after I get skinny," she said. "We're kind of pioneers in this."

Some natural foods found to promote cavities

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Granola, bananas and raisins may be considered natural foods with generous amounts of nutrition, but researchers say they are also at the top of the list of snacks that can cause cavities.

Researchers at the Eastman Dental Center announced their findings after feeding rats snack foods for the past 2½ years, according to today's editions of the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Granola, bananas and raisins placed high on the cavity-causing list, said John Featherstone, chairman of the oral biology department at the center. Corn chips, yogurt, gelatin and peanuts did less damage, and some contain fluoride and appear to actually help prevent cavities.

Featherstone and Sheila Mundorff, a research associate at the center, fed rats 17 different snack foods during the project, paid for by a $250,000 grant from the National Institute for Dental Research.

Fiber unglamorous, but important

Hearst News Service

Fiber, an indigestible nutrient most widely known for its ability to promote regularity, is receiving increased attention from physicians and nutritionists. This most unglamorous of carbohydrates, it turns out, plays some unsuspected and beneficial roles in the diet.

Recent studies have found that:

— Certain types of fiber affect the rate at which glucose is absorbed by the body, slowing the increase in blood-sugar levels.

— Oat bran, a source of dietary fiber rich in water-soluble gums, is effective in lowering serum cholesterol levels.

— There is an apparent correlation between fiber intake and cancer of the colon.

Nutritionists have identified several types of fiber, including pectin, the substance on the inside of fruit skins; cellulose and heimcellulose, found in cereal grains; guar gum; and lignin.

Water soluble fibers, such as pectin and guar gum, have been shown to trap bile salts, which are 90 percent cholesterol, says nutritionist Jean Bigaouette of Albany (N.Y.) Medical College. Once the bile salts are trapped, they are passed out of the body in stool, thereby lowering cholesterol levels. However, Bigaouette noted that fiber is far less efficient at trapping bile salts than the medicines prescribed for people with high cholesterol levels.

By slowing the rate at which food is digested, fibers also work to slow escalation in blood sugar levels. For that reason, nutritionists believe fiber has a role to play in the management of diabetes, a condition characterized by an excess of sugar in the blood.

Nutritionists also believe fiber may protect against colon cancer. According to Bigaouette, most kinds of fiber tend to absorb water in the gut, thereby diluting any irritants there. By easing the passage of stool, fiber also limits the bowel's exposure to possible irritants.

Because of the correlation with colon caner, Bigaouette said, "It's a good idea to have fiber in your diet your whole life." Most people eat about 10 to 15 grams of fiber a day. Dieticians recommend 35-50 grams a day, she said. "That's a whopping amount to get in your diet."

How can you tell whether you're eating enough fiber? Said Bigaouette: "Healthy persons would know if they were not getting enough fiber in their diet by having a problem with constipation."

Diet claims disputed

Copley News Service

Many of us may resort to fad diets. Get-thin-quick schemes like Cambridge, Beverly Hills, Grapefruit or starch blockers.

Each has been labeled nutritionally unsound by health professionals. Low-calorie protein diets have been required by the Food and Drug Administration to display warning labels. Yet for every diet that recedes under the scrutiny of medical experts, another is dangled before us like the proverbial carrot.

Full-page ads promise new discoveries that are sure to liberate us from our lifelong burdens. Among the latest: Metabolite 2050, introduced 18 months ago by Robertson-Taylor Co. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

"Eat as much as you want and still lose weight," proclaims the ad. "No calorie counting. No strenuous exercise. No more willpower. No more dieting."

And a money-back guarantee.

In the case of Metabolite 2050, those marketing the product insist that there are "volumes" of medical research supporting their claims. (A request for verification brought a copy of a study conducted at the Public Health Laboratory in Finland and the University of Kuopio in Kuopio, Finland, which had been published in a Scandinavian medical journal.)

However, nutritionists and medical professionals contacted by this reporter, though unfamiliar with the specific product, cast considerable doubt on the claims in the ads. They challenged the contention that the product can melt away fat and cautioned that the consumer might be misled into thinking he can eat everything he wishes and still lose pounds.

Ads promoting the product have been published in newspapers throughout the country.

The product in question — Metabolite 2050 — is a formulation in pill form consisting of dietary fiber derived from a cluster bean composed of galactose and mannose. It can be ordered in three-week supplies — three to four pills to be taken 15 minutes prior to each meal — for $29.95.

"Naturally, people are a little skeptical, as they would be with almost any product," acknowedged Kay Perry, an administrator in reseach and development for Robertson-Taylor. "We say that if you get the pills and eat normally, you will lose weight.

"Some people get the pills and think they can go hog wild and eat everything in sight. They get no results."

The dietary fiber in the pills, she explained, is designed to reduce post-meal levels of glucose and insulin. The result? A diminished appetite for between-meal snacking and a "likely reduction in the tendency for fat deposition in the adipose (fat storing) tissues," according to Louis P. Rinaldi, Ph.D., the product's medical consultant.

(Rinaldi obtained his Ph.D. in nutrition in 1980 from Donsbach University in California. According to Dr. Harold Loeffler, a representative of the California Council Against Health Fraud, the school's credits are not transferable to other universities.)

The active ingredient in Metabolite 2050 also, explained Perry, blocks absorption in the lower intestine and, because of delayed gastric emptying time, produces a feeling of fullness. In the intestinal track, the food is supposed to move more quickly and prevent some calories from being absorbed.

Another weight-loss program making the rounds — Mannan-Trim — is based on a similar theory. As with Metabolite 2050, you take pills and that gives you a natural feeling of fullness. The ads maintain that the active ingredient in the pills — a natural extract from the Konjac root, which grows in Japan — "surrounds much of the fat, protein and carbohydrate calories you do eat, and then flushes them right out of your body."

In the case of Metabolite 2050, Rinaldi explained that the body will break down fat stores and use them for energy through the process of lipolysis, which "literally involves the melting and destruction of fat molecules as they exist in adipocytes (fat cells). ..."

"My reaction," said Susan Magrann, a registered dietitian, "is that if it is that revolutionary, submit it to scientific literature. And then you'll really sell your product."

DEAR ABBY

Girl questions boyfriend's career choice

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 years old, and for the last four months I've been seeing this guy who is 23. We really care a lot for each other and are getting serious. He is very handsome, treats me well and goes to church regularly. My parents approve of him and think he would make a perfect husband. He doesn't drink or do drugs, and we've never had an argument.

The problem is his job. It doesn't pay much, but he is happy doing it. He never graduated from high school and has no interest in furthering his education.

I plan to go to college, and the career I hope to pursue will pay me many times more than what he makes. Abby, I can't see myself married to a man who makes less than I do. My family isn't rich, but we could always afford what we wanted. I couldn't handle pinching pennies.

Am I making a big deal out of nothing? Sign me ... HAVING SECOND THOUGHTS

DEAR HAVING: If you're having second thoughts, now is the time to air them. Since he's happy in a job that doesn't pay much, and you can't see yourself married to a man who will never make as much as you, you're wise to realize that you need more from a husband materially than this man can give you. Also, by the time you graduate from college, you will be a different person intellectually. He won't.

DEAR ABBY: I've been a faithful reader of your column for many years and now I have a big favor to ask of you.

Will you please send me a copy of a letter you printed many years ago? It was about a wife whose husband had joined the Masonic lodge and she kept nagging him, wanting him to know all the secret goings-on, etc. You told her to quit nagging him or she would lose her husband by degrees. Thank you. — INDIANA MASON

DEAR MASON: I'm glad that you wrote because it gives me an opportunity to tell you and others who request a copy of a specific item that unless you are able to pinpoint the date (the year and the month), I am unable to accommodate you. Also, when requesting a favor, please include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: I realize that taxes are the price we pay for living in a civilized society, but enough is enough already. I've had this poem for years. I don't know who wrote it, but I sure hope you think it's worth printing. — INDIANA READER

DEAR READER: I do. And here it is:

DEATH AND TAXES

Tax his cow, tax his goat; tax his pants, tax his coat.

Tax his crops, tax his work; tax his tie, tax his shirt.

Tax his chew, tax his smoke; teach him taxes are no joke.

Tax his oil, tax his gas; tax his notes, tax his cash.

If he hollers, tax him more; tax him 'til he's good and sore.

Tax his coffin, tax his grave; tax the sod in which he lays;

Put these words upon his tomb: "Taxes drove me to my doom."

After he's gone he can't relax; they'll still go after inheritance tax.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Treating sunburns effective

Pain, swelling and peeling associated with sunburn can be reduced most effectively if treatment is started at the first signs of burning. Family Circle magazine offers these suggestions:

— Take two aspirins every four hours to reduce inflammation and ease pain.

— Soak in a lukewarm bath for 15-20 minutes or apply cool compresses soaked in one part milk to three parts water (proteins in milk soothe skin and draw out heat).

— For swollen or burned eyelids, place cold-water compresses or cold, moist teabags over closed lids and relax for about 20 minutes.

— After the skin cools down, gently smooth on a moisturizer (those containing aloe are especially soothing).

CURIOUS SHOPPER

Non-dairy creamers contain aluminum

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. May I ask what is wrong with milk for coffee, the way people have been drinking it for years? While traveling through Maryland, I stopped with my family to eat at a Pizza Hut. I ordered coffee and was given a packet of non-dairy creamer instead of milk for the coffee.

I then requested the waitress to bring me milk or cream instead, as I don't like fake creamers. They leave a distinct powdery aftertaste and contain aluminum (to keep the powder free-flowing), and it's possible that deposits of aluminum in the brain cause senility. The waitress said she didn't have anything else for coffee, that I would have to buy a glass of milk.

Just because they can make artificial milk doesn't mean they have to force it on the public.

A. Pizza Hut authorizes both dairy and non-dairy coffee creamers for use in its restaurants, and it's up to each store to decide what to use. Michael Jenkins, public relations manager of this company, claims that most stores choose to use the non-dairy creamer because the amount of coffee and tea served in their restaurants is very small.

Nearly 95 percent of their customers order soft drinks, beer, milk or water with their pizza. With non-dairy creamers Jenkins says there is much less waste and spoilage as opposed to the dairy creamers.

Maxwell Abbott, Ph.D., Pizza Hut's director of research and development, made the following statement about the aluminum ingredient in non-dairy creamers: "As you pointed out, there is a growing concern with the role of aluminum in the diet and its relationship to certain types of senility.

"Although many scientific papers have been published on this subject, it is not clear whether aluminum is in fact a causative factor or merely a result or symptom of the condition."

Dr. Abbott further stated that Pizza Hut is reviewing the scientific data on this subject as it is published, and if or when it comes clear that aluminum does have a harmful effect, Pizza Hut will take appropriate action.

Q. I am an older woman and realize that some women after menopause have problems with bone fractures because of a lack of sufficient calcium. A friend of mine says she is taking bone meal in fruit juice every day and recommends that I do the same.

I don't like to take anything I don't know about and was wondering what bone meal comes from, how it is made and if it is safe to take in juice every day. — Mae Murphy, Santa Cruz, Calif.

A. A few words of warning about bone meal:

According to an article in "Consumer Reports" (September 1982), bone meal is commonly made from finely crushed cattle bone. "All bone meal contains some lead," the article states, "which originates mainly from the animal's diet. Generally, the older the animal, the more lead in its bones.

"Concern over the substantial lead content in some samples of bone meal analyzed by the Food and Drug Administration has prompted the FDA to warn doctors and the public about the product," the article continues, "and FDA's warning also extended to dolomite, a form of limestone that's marketed as a calcium supplement for people as well as a product for lawns."

The FDA has said that individuals at special risk of lead toxicity from the consumption of bone meal or dolomite include infants, children, women of childbearing age and possibly the elderly.

Q. I occasionally buy meat at a kosher butcher because the store is convenient, even though it's expensive. An acquaintance said she wouldn't buy kosher meat because of what she called the ritual slaughter process. She didn't know how it was done but she heard it was gruesome.

In attempting to find out more about it, all I could discover is that the animal is killed while still conscious. Aren't all animals conscious when they are killed in slaughterhouses? — P. Leska, Chicago, Ill.

A. The following information was provided by two organizations — the Farm Animal Reform Movement and United Animal Defenders.

In 1958 Congress passed the Humane Slaughter Act, which requires animals to be stunned before slaughter. Therefore, animals in conventional slaughterhouses today are considered to be unconscious when their throats are cut. Jewish ritual slaughter, however, is exempt from this ruling.

Ritual slaughter is based on ancient Hebrew law which forbids the consumption of meat found already dead. Therefore, for any meat to be certified kosher, among other things it has to come from an animal whose throat is cut while still obviously alive.

A government law complicates the ritual slaughter procedure. This law, passed in 1906 as part of the Pure Food & Drug Act, states that a slaughtered animal must not fall into the blood of a previously killed animal.

In conventional procedures a stunned animal is therefore hoisted onto an overhead conveyor belt, unconscious. But in ritual slaughter, in order to comply with this law the animal is hoisted to the conveyor belt, while fully conscious, by a chain which is tied around one hind leg.

Eventually the animal encounters the butcher who most often finds it necessary to insert a clamp in the nostril or on the neck to hold the struggling beast steady so the lethal cut can be made. Draining of the blood results in unconsciousness and death.

The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals developed a casting pen which met U.S. hygiene standards and which at the same time could have done away with the necessity of shackling and hoisting an animal. The pen also complied with kosher requirements. Unfortunately, the initial cost of its installation ($13,000) deterred most from using it.

Maxwell Street's open-air market traditional

New York Times News Service

CHICAGO — At the open-air market on Maxwell Street and its environs you can find almost anything, including kitchen sinks.

It is a century-old Chicago tradition to shop on Sundays at the Maxwell Street Market, as this rundown West Side area was designated in 1912. And though peddlers complain that sales are not what they used to be, few stop coming back.

"It's just like being in the bazaars of Morocco," Kenneth J. Smith said. Smith, a graduate student at Columbia University, purchased leather-covered notebooks for 50 cents each and a magic kit for $1.

Tires and hubcaps are for sale, as well as rusted tools, fake furs, cooking utensils, not-so-fresh produce (much of it discarded the previous Friday by the nearby South Water Market), mops with "miracle" handles and street signs, with the poles attached.

The poor, carrying their shopping bags and searching for household necessities, shop here. And also the affluent, seeking a different kind of weekend experience or hoping to come upon an antique.

All this takes place in the shadow of the downtown skyline. But it seems a world away.

By 9 o'clock on a recent sunny Sunday morning, the area was swarming with people. The aromas of hotdogs and sausages and onions assaulted the nostrils.

Live music assaulted the ears. In an alley behind Maxwell Street, Tat Rush and the Mississippi Blues Band held sway as an emissary circulated with an El Producto cigar box, seeking donations.

On another corner was 62-year-old Ed Balsew, wearing a golden sombrero and playing the accordion.

"You got to follow the people," he said. "Where the people are, you might make a dollar."

And there was Dick Augustine, 72. Atop his car, along with an air conditioner, two saws and some candleholders, was a large Electrovoice Musicmaster loudspeaker attached to a little transistor radio, blasting Mel Torme's rendition of "Little White Lies." He wanted $55 for the speaker.

Like adjoining neighborhoods, this was an area where waves of immigrants established their toeholds in America. Maxwell Street was the center of the Jewish neighborhood, and for years was known as Jewtown. Not far away were Greektown and Chinatown and other ethnic enclaves.

By 1910, it was said that Maxwell Street resembled "a teeming Eastern European ghetto." But by 1930 most Jews, including the merchants who established the market, had moved on. Their place was taken by blacks and, more recently, Mexicans.

Among those who grew up around Maxwell Street were Paul Muni, the actor; Arthur Goldberg, the former Supreme Court justice; Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, known as the father of the nuclear submarine; Benny Goodman, "the King of Swing," and William S. Paley, founder of CBS.

Refrigerator supply in China dwindles

PEKING (AFP) — High summer temperatures in Peking have sent city residents lining up for refrigerators as stocks are disappearing fast, the New China News Agency reported.

The agency cited a manager of one of the Chinese capital's largest department stores as saying that more than 3,000 people had waited in line, many of them overnight, for a supply of refrigerators which sold out in days.

China produced 170,000 refrigerators in the first six months of the year, 130 percent more than the number produced during the same period last year. But it still imported tens of thousands of refrigerators to respond to the demand, according to the Commerce Ministry.

Group contracts food service

From Staff Reports

CHICAGO — Canteen Corporation, the nation's largest food service provider, has contracted with the Lutheran Association of Texas to provide its Supportive Advisory Management to four of the Association's skilled care homes — the Trinity Lutheran Home in Shiner, the Trinity Lutheran Home in Round Rock, the Lutheran Home of West Texas in Lubbock and the Lutheran Home of the Permian Basin in Midland. Resident dietitians of each home provide individualized meals for the residents and operate cafeterias for staff members.

Canteen's Supportive Advisory Management System increases the efficiency of smaller corporations by providing management with greater purchasing power and Canteen expertise at a smaller cost than full service programs, said Dennis Fleming, manager of Canteen's Southern District. Fleming estimated costs have fallen 12 percent to 15 percent in the four Lutheran homes since the system was introduced in February.

A factor in producing these savings is the in-sevice training provided in regular monthly sessions for food service personnel.

Equipment specialists make recommendations on upgrading equipment, which may be puchased through Canteen's corporate pricing at substantial savings. Canteen-style cash control and accounting systems are also installed, and food service managers are helped to develop uniform menus that are flexible enough to satisfy local tastebuds.

To ensure consistent quality, Fleming visits the homes monthly to conduct in-service training and consult with food service managers about any problems and improvements.

Fleming, who acts as consultant, problem-solver and negotiator for the homes, said, "I'm extremely positive about the relationship Canteen has developed with the Lutheran Associaion of Texas and its employees. Everyone has worked well with the Canteen system and I'm confident that we are on our way to accomplishing the mutual goal of cost effective, high quality food service."

New Miss America wants to forget scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Moments after winning cheers of adoration from black women, Suzette Charles stared coldly into a forest of microphones and said "I do not want to say anything more" about the scandal that catapulted her from runner-up Miss America to titleholder.

Miss Charles said she would never pose nude. She said she had no qualms about succeeding Vanessa Williams, and she pleaded with reporters to let her reign go on without continuous questions about her predecessor.

In one of her first outings as the new Miss America, the second black to hold the title, Miss Charles, 21, gave unexpected zest to the 51st biennial meeting of the Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, the nation's oldest and largest organization of black women college graduates.

Shelley Jackson, a spokeswoman for the sorority, said Miss Charles had been invited to the meeting here "nine months ago." The program announcement noted a "special appearance by Miss Suzette Charles, first runner-up to Miss America."

Miss Charles was making a record album Monday when she learned she would be succeeding Miss Williams, who was forced to resign in a brouhaha over a nude photographic layout in Penthouse magazine. She seemed at ease in her brief appearance before more than 2,000 sorority sisters.

The 21-year-old seemed more comfortable on stage than behind the dais. She sashayed onto the stage, just after sorority sisters concluded a musical salute to prominent and successful black women, and talked of the importance of getting a good education.

"There's no way anyone can tell you you're not qualified," she told the more than 2,000 sorority sisters gathered in the ballroom at the Sheraton Washington.

"Nothing is easy," she added. "I waited 10 months to be Miss America."

Cameramen bobbed and weaved at the front of the stage, snapping Ms. Charles' picture as she sang and marched from side to side to acknowledge the cheers.

A short time later, she was parrying the questions of reporters who wanted to know if she thought racial discrimination lay behind Miss Williams' ouster.

"The situation...was not a racial problem," she replied. "The situation that occurred was a direct reflection on the individuals involved, and we all have to be accountable for our actions."

Miss Williams, 21, the first black Miss America, was asked to resign by beauty pageant officials following the publication in Penthouse magazine of sexually explicit photos in which she appeared nude with another woman.

Priest with AIDS found new ministry in last year of life

NEW YORK (AP) — An Episcopal priest who was rejected by his suburban church after learning he had AIDS found a new ministry in the last year of his life — among other victims of the disease.

A funeral was to be held today for the Rev. Mills Omaly, who died Monday at age 44, 13 months after he was diagnosed as suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Although Omaly was hospitalized for his last weeks with the agonizing effects of the disease, which destroys the body's immunity, he had spent the previous few months ministering at the bedside of fellow AIDS sufferers — helping them, talking with them and knowning their fate would one day be his.

"It was hard for him," said Chuck Jones, a coordinator for the Gay Men's Health Crisis and Omaly's friend for six years. "He was somebody who was able to be a real solid rock...while at the same time, he was suffering."

Omaly, respected throughout the church establishment, was a member of numerous church commissions and a tireless worker with youth. He was also gay, and while never hiding his sexual preference, always remained discreet.

"He had 15 years of a fantastic ministry and he never had to say he was gay," said Minka Sprague, a teacher at Omaly's alma mater, General Seminary. "And yet he functioned and lived as a gay man."

In June 1983, the vestry at All Saints Episcopal Church in suburban Briarcliff Manor, where Omaly was minister, learned he had AIDS.

Acclaimed book designer dies

EL PASO (AP) — Funeral services are scheduled Friday for Carl Hertzog, 82, a book designer who won international acclaim for his artistry and perfection in typography. Hertzog died Tuesday night at his El Paso home.

Hertzog, designer of more than 300 books, was "a perfectionist...(who) would not accept anything as an excuse for something that was not perfect," said Bud Newman, director of Special Collections at the University of Texas-El Paso library.

Hertzog's work was catalogued in a book, "Forty Years of Hertzog Printing," by Price Daniel Jr., late son of former Texas Gov. Price Daniel.

Colleagues called Hertzgog the "Printer of the Pass" and the "Texas Gutenberg Dreamer."

Dr. H.D. Garrett, Hertzog's family physician and close friend, is a collector of Hertzog books.

"We've collected everything we could get hold of his. We have 85 to 90 percent of everything he ever designed," Garrett said. "He's the closest thing to a genius I've known."

Transient youths converge on Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Transient youths drawn by the Olympics are converging on Los Angeles where, disillusioned and penniless, they are pressing already overtaxed organizations with pleas for help, officials say.

"We've been certainly seeing an increase," said Joel Schwartz, program coordinator for Travelers' Aid Teen Canteen, a counseling and referral agency that helps many runaways return home and refers others to various service groups.

"Several of them over the last month were saying they were coming here for Olympics jobs, or just for the excitement," Schwartz said Wednesday, three days before the opening of the Games.

"They hear that there are a lot of Olympic jobs out. Most of the time when they come to us they've been mugged and they realize that the only way to keep going is by prostituting themselves," Schwartz said, adding, "We get a lot of girls who are fleeing from pimps."

For young people out of money and shelter, there are a handful of places to go but only a limited number of beds available.

"Our facilities certainly have been full," said Fred White, director of Hollywood Lifeline, which operates a non-denominational Christian shelter called Centrum where 30 people can be housed. "There is an increase of calls and there's really no placement for them...We've had to turn them away to different places."

Barbara Bush 'goosed' by 'obvious Democrat'

Bush

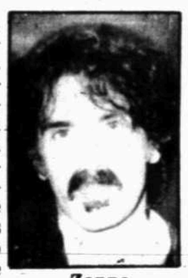
NEW YORK (AP) — Barbara Bush, wife of Vice President George Bush, said cancer "is something to be fought, not something to give in to" as she dedicated a memorial to an 80-year-old tortoise that died of the disease.

Jalopy the tortoise, a longtime fixture at the Staten Island Zoo who died in December, "is a monument to longevity," Mrs. Bush said at a dedication ceremony Wednesday.

"The older I get the more I love animals," Mrs. Bush added. "Sometimes during the campaign I like animals better than people."

Jalopy got around in his last years taped to a dolly. Mrs. Bush dedicated a 4½- by 3½-foot bush trimmed in the shape of a tortoise — complete with dolly — then fed some animals, including a goose that nipped at her hand.

"Obviously a Democrat," she quipped.



Zappa

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Frank Zappa, the self-trained guitarist and singer known for his innovative, sometimes strange songs, says he's about to release five more albums ranging from rock to orchestra to chamber music.

Zappa, 43, says the works will include a double rock album called "Them Or Us" featuring parodies on videos, and a three-record boxed set entitled "Thing-Fish" — an original Broadway show he wrote but never was produced.

Other projects are the first of five seven-record boxed sets of original Mothers of Invention material to be titled "The Old Masters," a single record containing the works of Mozart contemporary Francesco Zappa (no relation) and an LP entitled "The Pefect Stranger" containing works by Varese.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Jerry Lee Lewis will be sidelined for at least a week after suffering a broken leg in a jet water ski accident, a spokesman said.

Lewis was taken to Methodist Memorial Hospital after the accident, said Henrietta Darr-Johnson, a spokeswoman for the entertainer's booking agency, In Concert International.

Ms. Darr-Johnson said Lewis' personal manager, Al Embry, told her doctors have ordered Lewis to stay off the leg for a week.

"Barring complications, he will probably resume his schedule the third or the fourth (of August) and will appear on stage with his leg in a cast," Ms. Darr-Johnson said.

Lewis, best know for his hits "Great Balls of Fire" and "Whole Lotta Shakin' Goin' On," will miss concert dates in Abbyville, La., and Fort Worth, Texas, Whitten said.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Exercises must meet individual needs

Dear Dr. Solomon: Thank you for some very valuable information in your column about the need for people who have arthritis to get both exercise and rest. But I have one question about this. Suppose when I do my exercises, it hurts me. Is it best to stop and wait a few days before trying them again? — Mrs. L.Z., Olympia, Wash.

Dear Mrs. Z.: An exercise program for a person with arthritis has to be tailored to the individual's particular needs. I cannot tell from a letter the extent of the pain a person is experiencing or exactly what causes it.

The fact is that when a patient with arthritis moves an inflamed joint, it is very likely to hurt. On the other hand, failure to move a joint, even when it is painful, can cause it to become stiff. This in turn, leads to loss of motion, increasing weakness, and, eventually, to more pain. This is a cycle that you want to try to avoid.

If you have not already done so, I strongly recommend that you see your physician. Exercise is important, but one program cannot apply to all patients, and it certainly cannot be prescribed from a distance.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I met a man at a bar and, to make a long story short, I had sexual relations with him. Later, he told me that he has herpes. I am not interested in a lecture on the wages of sin, but I would like to know what the chances are of a woman getting a herpes infection after one sexual contact. — Vi, Chicago

Dear Vi: The risk of woman geting herpes after a single contact with a man who has an active lesion is estimated at 25 percent. This compares with a risk of 50 percent for syphillis, and 85 percent for gonorrhea.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can you tell me what it means if a person is hyperthyroid? Specifically, can a woman become pregnant? — Ms. M.V., Pueblo, Colo.

Dear Ms. V.: Hyperthyroidism may be linked to a variety of menstrual irregularities — for example, fewer periods. Nevertheless, these patients usually do not experience any change in their sexual desires and it is possible for them to become pregnant.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can noise be dangerous? Can it really hurt my ears? — Mrs. Y.H., Akron, Ohio.

Dear Mrs. H.: Yes — noise can be dangerous. If it is loud enough and lasts long enough, it can damage your hearing. This type of damage, called "nerve loss" can be caused by several factors other than noise, but it is different in one important way — it can be reduced or prevented altogether.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, the Democratic vice presidential candidate, is flanked by House Speaker Jim Wright of Texas and his wife, Betty, during a reception for civic leaders from Fort Worth, Texas, Tuesday evening on Capitol Hill.

Ferraro calls president's team 'male bastion insensitive to needy'

WASHINGTON (AP) — In her initial vice presidential campaign appearances, Geraldine Ferraro is going after the Reagan administration as a male bastion that is insensitive to the needy and seeks to "paint a white face on all American women."

Ms. Ferraro used her first major appearances since her nomination at the Democratic National Convention last week to sketch themes that are likely to be more fully developed as her campaign picks up steam.

She was doing some work in her congressional office in Washington today and then flying back to her home in New York to relax for the weekend.

Walter F. Mondale, the party's presidential nominee, and Ms. Ferraro plan a joint campaign swing next week, beginning Tuesday at Ms. Ferraro's home and winding through the key electoral states of the industrial Midwest and the South.

She used solo appearances Wednesday to accuse Reagan of pursuing domestic policies that destroy the federal government at the expense of the nation's needy and of the state governments that are left to care for them.

During remarks to about 2,000 members of the National Conference of State Legislatures in Boston she said, "The current administration is embarked on an ill-considered plan to tear down the structure of our system of government."

At the same time, President Reagan was campaigning in Austin, Texas, saying Mondale and Ferraro threaten to "buy the American dream" with "endless tax increases, deeper dependency, planned protectionism, certain sacrifices and veiled quotas."

Ms. Ferraro, though, said Reagan's policies may be out of the mainstream of both major political parties, since many Republicans are committed to welfare, education and child-care programs he has tried to cut.

"Instead of rationally sorting out who can best do the job and which job, the job of responding to society's needs and of paying the bills has been abruptly dropped in the lap of the states," she said.

"We don't need government on any citizen's back in America, but we do need government on every citizen's side," she said.

She hit at Reagan's tax policies, saying they merely place a greater burden on the states.

"It's great in this business to play the hero, to tell the people that you're going to cut their taxes," Ms. Ferraro said.

"In 1981, the federal government played hero, and ever since then you people in state legislatures have been picking up the tab," she said.

In Washington Wednesday evening, she reached out to black women in an address to a gathering of about 8,000 attending the 75th anniversary meeting of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, the largest sorority for black college educated women.

She told the group that her nomination was "not only for myself but for all Americans who have been denied the full measure of opportunity promised by our great country."

Ms. Ferraro also took another swipe at the Reagan administration, saying, "There are those who've tried in the last four years to call our causes special interests. To set set sister against sister, brother against brother. ... You understand that our strength lies in what we can do together.

"To those who would paint a white face on all American women, I say, American women come in all colors, all religions and all national origins."

Officials studying religious bill before president will authorize it

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring President Reagan is "heartened by passage" of legislation allowing student religious meetings in public schools, a White House spokesman says unrelated provisions in the bill must be reviewed before Reagan will sign it.

The religious meeting provisions received final congressional approval Wednesday in a 337-77 House vote, which reversed the chamber's defeat of a similar measure just two months ago.

But the White House review is needed because the measure passed as an amendment to legislation that would provide almost $1 billion over two years to strengthen the teaching of math and science in the schools. The overall bill passed 393-15.

"WE CERTAINLY are heartened by passage of the equal access bill that the president expressed his strong support for (at his news conference) Tuesday night," said deputy White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater. "But because it is attached to another bill we'll have to look at the whole package before making a final judgment.

"Math-science has about a billion dollars attached to it. We've got to consider everything in there."

The Senate had passed the school meetings legislation a month ago by an 88-11 vote. The final version there, sponsored by Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., contained enough modifications to convince dozens of House members to change their votes after opposing the original House version defeated last May.

Denton said he asked supporting groups to lobby House members and "called at least a dozen" himself. The senator added "we really sweated blood" in carefully drafting the bill.

Only 5 Republicans and 72 Democrats voted against the school meetings amendment, compared to 181 Democrats and 156 Republicans who backed it. The House used the same rule, requiring a two-thirds passage, as it did in May when the vote was 270-151 for the bill — 11 votes short of the needed majority.

The advantage of the rule is that it prohibits amendments, which could be used to kill a bill with delays. Opponents had hundreds of amendments ready Wednesday, had they been allowed to offer them.

AFTER LOSING that tactic, the only weapon opponents had left were the same arguments they used against the measure last time — warnings that bizarre cults would be allowed in schools, that the constitutional separation of church and state would be violated, and that school officials would have to decide what is a legitimate religion.

The Denton wording limits meetings to non-school hours, keeps out non-school personnel, allows school officials the right to maintain discipline, prohibits discrimination against small groups, allows individual school employees to refuse to attend as monitors and includes protections for all types of speech, not just religious speech.

But most important to many of those who switched, the new version eliminated the prior bill's penalty of a federal money cutoff to schools disobeying the law.

The bill is a reaction to state and federal court rulings. Judges have decided that schools permitting student religious groups to meet on school grounds violated the required constitutional separation of church and state.

In one of the most recent cases, the Supreme Court in December 1981 left intact a federal appeals court ruling involving Guilderland High School near Albany, N.Y. Students there sought to hold prayer meetings in an unused classroom before school.

The 2nd Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals said the meetings "would create an improper appearance of official support," thereby violating the church and state separation.

'Government liable for defoliant'

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawyers for thousands of Vietnam veterans have launched a $10 billion lawsuit against the federal government, claiming it could have done more to protect and treat servicemen exposed to the defoliant Agent Orange.

The lawyers this spring negotiated a $180 million tentative settlement in a class action against the seven chemical companies that produced Agent Orange.

In that suit, the veterans claimed the companies knew Agent Orange was dangerous but failed to tell the government. The new suit maintains the government nevertheless knew, at least by the late 1960s, that Agent Orange was hazardous, but failed to act on the information.

"We're alleging everything there is to claim against the government," David Dean, an attorney for the veterans, said Wednesday.

He denied the suits were inconsistent. "We have never taken the position that the government didn't know. We have taken the position that the chemical companies knew more than the government," he said.

Whether the veterans, their wives and children — who also claim damages in the class action — have the right to sue the government remains to be decided.

The Justice Department has asked the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to dismiss a related suit filed by the seven chemical companies, arguing the government has absolute immunity from all lawsuits growing out of injuries to servicemen on duty.

The seven companies are seeking reimbursement for the $180 million, arguing the government ordered them to produce Agent Orange and created the specifications for it.

Two earlier efforts by veterans to sue the government were thrown out of court. In 1981, U.S. District Judge George Pratt ruled the government was immune. U.S. District Judge Jack B. Weinstein, who took over the case from Pratt, rejected an effort to revive that suit earlier this year.

But veterans' attorneys are hopeful they can find a formula to allow the suit to persist in some form. Last February, Weinstein encouraged that hope by ruling that while the government is not liable for injuries to the servicemen, it may owe damages to their wives and children.

Weinstein announced Wednesday that he has abandoned hope of bringing the companies' suit against the government to trial in late September. Weinstein said he had expected the appellate court to rule long before now on the government's claim of immunity.

Weinstein noted he had virtually halted pre-trial proceedings in the case to avoid wasting money if, in fact, the suit is thrown out.

He likened the case to a large ship, saying: "It takes a long time to stop it and a long time to start it. Effectively, the Court of Appeals has stopped the ship dead in the water."

Agent Orange, a mixture of the herbicides 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T, was sprayed over large parts of Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War to deprive Communist forces of jungle cover and food crops.

Witness queried in drug case of DeLorean

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — A federal grand jury witness suggested Wednesday that the government is trying to "cook up a case" against John Z. DeLorean in an investigation of an apparent attempt to tamper with jurors in the trial of the automaker on cocaine-trafficking charges.

William Rider, 39, former chief of security for sex magazine publisher Larry Flynt, spoke to newsmen outside the federal courthouse in downtown Los Angeles after testifying before the grand jury.

Rider said that some of the questions asked at the hearing led him to believe that government investigators think DeLorean and a New Orleans-based investigator named Gordon Novel were responsible for prompting the mailing of a congressional report to jurors in June.

The report, sent to jurors by Rep. Don Edward's Washington office in response to a letter, is highly critical of FBI undercover operations such as the one that resulted in DeLorean's arrest in October 1982, on charges of conspiracy to import drugs into the United States.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Drooyan, the government attorney heading the investigation, said that he was unable to comment on any matters before the grand jury because of secrecy rules. In response to a question, he confirmed that witnesses are not bound by the same rules.

Rider showed reporters a subpoena that commanded him to appear before the grand jury at 9:30 a.m. and to bring examples of the printing of any typewriters he has in his home. He said that he did not have any typewriters there.

Rider described himself as a friend of DeLorean's. He said that he and DeLorean had had lunch and discussed the possible publication of a book. He said that he told jurors in response to a question that he had not received any money from DeLorean.

"I think in their eyes that Mr. Novel somehow typed out this (letter) to the congressman," Rider said. I don't believe this is the case .... They'd like to cook up a case against DeLorean.

"They said I was not the focus of an investigation. It befuddles me why I'm here."

Rider said that he is associated with Novel in an investigative organization called Force One Limited.

Novel's name was brought up earlier in the DeLorean case in a pretrial hearing before U.S. District Judge Robert M. Takasugi regarding a so-called "threat" tape in which the government's informer, James Timothy Hoffman, purportedly threatened DeLorean's life.
