CONFERENCE IS URGED IN THE STEEL STRIKE

By United Press
WASHINGTON, June 29.—Chairman Charles Taft of the Federal Steel Mediation Board said today the board had recommended to Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins a conference, face to face, of steel operators and strike leaders.

Miss Perkins refused to divulge what the next federal step might be.

"I am continuing to do everything I think can be useful," she said.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 29.—Two explosions in the mountains near Johnstown cut off the major water supply of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation today and forced the company to suspend operations at its Cambria plant, scene of a strike called by the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Whether full suspension will be necessary was not known as company crews sought to repair the damage. Gov. George Earle at Harrisburg ordered state police to begin an investigation with the idea of "fining the perpetrators."

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, June 29.—Police sought today the CIO chief who called a general industrial strike at Warren, Ohio, last week, on charges that he led a "terrorist" plot to blow up property at strike-bound steel mills.

Europe Marks Time Over War Crisis

LONDON, June 29.—European powers played for time today in a Spanish civil war crisis that threatened to spread into general conflict.

Representatives of nine powers, including Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Russia, met for a showdown which many believed might disclose whether Europe is headed for war.

It was decided to adjourn until Friday.

Texas and Mexico Dicker Over Suspects

AUSTIN, June 29.—Gov. Allred today met Mexico's request for return of a prisoner on a swindling charge with an offer to comply if Mexico will grant his request to return three men who are charged with murder.

The governor's office said in his absence the Texas request had been pending for several months. Governor Allred was enroute to Sweetwater.

Dangers of Fourth Are Pointed Out

AUSTIN.—Taking note of the approach of the great patriotic national holiday, July 4, which this country has celebrated for 141 years, Dr. Geo. W. Cox, state health officer, calls attention of the people of Texas to some of the dangers of careless celebrating. The morning papers of July 5 detail an appalling number of accidents which occurred over the 4th.

It is not alone the wounds received from explosives that increase our death toll. Injuries from automobile accidents, splinters, nails and other penetrating wounds in which dirt may be carried into the skin heighten the hazard of tetanus or lockjaw. Such wounds should be promptly treated by a physician.

If the day's pleasure includes a swim, caution should be used and no attempt made to do more than your strength will permit. If a drowning takes place, artificial respiration should be started at once and continued until a doctor arrives.

Automobile accidents have usually one of three causes—exceeding the speed limit, driving on the wrong side or failing to grant the right of way. It can be seen that the chief factor in auto accidents is the judgment of the "machine" within the machine. Caution should guide the holiday activities so that the day may be remembered with joy instead of with sorrow.

Poison For Use On Grasshoppers is Due Thursday

Beginning Thursday, July 1, grasshopper poison will be available to those farmers in Eastland county who have listed their names at the county agent's office in Eastland, the Cisco Chamber of Commerce or Ranger Chamber of Commerce, according to Agent Cook.

Farmers who are having or who expect to have grasshopper infestations are urged to register at one of these three places at once. Bran and sodium arsenite will be supplied free by the U. S. Government, but each person who receives an allotment will be required to furnish an equal amount of bran of similar material to mix with the free allotment. All bran and poison will be mixed before releasing to the farmer. Those who wish to make a slightly more effective poison may add syrup and banana oil at their own expense, but this is not required.

Irwin Indicted In Triple Slaying

NEW YORK, June 29.—Robert Irwin was indicted for murder three times by the county grand jury today, once for each of the three persons he strangled and stabbed last Easter Sunday.

The indictments charged the former insane asylum inmate with strangling artists model Veronica Gedeon, her mother, Mrs. Mary Gedeon, and stabbing with an ice pick Frank Byrnes, who boarded with them.

Revolt Breaks Out In Refuge Camp

BORDEAUX, France, June 29.—Revolt broke out in two refugee camps for children, evacuated from Spain. Youths from 10 to 12 years of age attacked the nuns and teachers in charge of them with knives and revolvers.

Sixty revolted when a child was slapped for misbehavior. They drew knives and demanded their return to Spain. Police sent 15 to disciplinary camp and four escaped.

Cattle Shipments In State Are Up

AUSTIN.—The May record of shipments of livestock from Texas to the Fort Worth stockyards and interstate points showed an unusually sharp year to year increase, according to the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Texas. Reports of the railroad shipping agents of the state and of the Fort Worth Stock Yards company to the Bureau show that rail and truck shipments to these points totaled 11,154 cars, against 5,913 during May last year, an increase of more than 88 per cent. Aggregate shipments for the year to date were 38,113 cars, an increase of 31 per cent over the corresponding period last year.

The sharpest increase occurred in forwardings of sheep. Shipments of these animals during May totaled 2,133 cars, compared with 778 cars during May last year, an increase of more than 174 per cent. Cattle shipments also increased substantially—7,550 cars against 4,057 cars a year ago or a gain of more than 85 per cent.

The increase in shipments of calves and hogs was more moderate—874 cars against 553 cars last year; and hogs, 617 cars compared with 523 cars a year ago, gains of about 60 per cent and 18 per cent respectively.

May Retail Sales Are Above April

AUSTIN.—Department store sales in Texas during May, as measured in dollars, increased more than the average seasonal amount over April and maintained a substantial margin of improvement over May, 1936, according to the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Texas. Aggregate sales during the first five months of the year also were well above those of the corresponding period last year.

Reports from 99 representative Texas establishments show a gain of 7.5 per cent in sales over April and of 14.7 per cent over May last year, the Bureau's report said. "Year to date sales were 13.9 per cent above those of the first five months a year ago. Cities showing gains in May above the state average for the preceding month, the corresponding month last year, and the year to date were Beaumont, Houston, Lubbock and Port Arthur.

"The percentage of credit sales remained practically unchanged from a year ago and the same was true of collections of outstanding accounts."

FUGITIVE OF GEORGIA IS CAUGHT NEAR EASTLAND

A man known to officers as Joe Murphy, alias Fred Jordan, escaped convict from the penitentiary at Marietta, Georgia, was captured Tuesday morning three miles southeast of Eastland at a dairy where he had been employed recently.

On the banks of the Leon creek the fugitive was surprised by members of Sheriff Loss Woods' department and W. J. Peters, Eastland police chief. He put down a knife when commanded to do so by Sheriff Woods.

Asked to take off a shirt to check with tattooing by which Georgia officials said he could be identified, the man waived the procedure, stating "I'm the man you want, all right."

Sheriff Woods, shortly before the arrest, had from Georgia officials been given a tip the fugitive would be found in the vicinity in which he was caught.

Kerrville Camp Is In Unique Class

KERRVILLE, Texas.—Among Kerrville's six summer camps, one is believed to stand alone in its class. It is neither a welfare camp nor a regular summer school type, but is operated on a system designed for the girl who belongs between the underprivileged child and the one whose parents cannot afford to pay the customary charges at a regular girl's camp. It is Camp Arrowhead, which had its beginning twelve years ago, as a religious summer conference camp at Warren.

The camp is pioneering in a new field of church-sponsored activity. Unusual features are self-government by the campers and the serving of director and staff of counselors without pay.

Mrs. C. E. Gillis has directed the camp for the past four years, since it was moved to Arrowhead Ranch, 16 miles southwest of here. It is sponsored by St. Mark's Episcopal Church of San Antonio, and has a board of trustees with the Rev. A. R. McKinstry, rector of St. Mark's as chairman.

Last year it had an enrollment of 75 girls and 20 counselors. Riding, tennis, archery, water sports, handicraft, nature study, music, dancing, camp fire programs and stunts make up the daily routine.

Lone Star Takes Extra Inning Game From Elks 6 to 5

Lone Star and Elks battled it out for nine full innings in the first game of the second half of the local softball season at Municipal field Monday night in the closest game of the year before Lone Star finally won by a score of 6 to 5 in the last of the ninth.

The Elks started off with a three-run lead in the first inning, the rally starting after Dr. Down-tain had fanned to bring Seymour up with none on. Seymour lofted a long, high fly over the right field wall for a home run, the first of the game. Three more hits and two Lone Star errors accounted for the Elks' three runs.

Lone Star came back to annex one run in the second, but the Elks staged another rally in the

Poetry Gets Names In Autograph Book

HOUSTON.—A flair for poetry led Barney Sterling, 60, to a successful hobby of autograph collecting.

Within six years, he has obtained the autographs of 250 of the world's most prominent persons. He writes his requests in rhyme.

"I always had a pad and pencil near, when thoughts come to me; if I don't get them down, they don't come for another year," he explained in unavailing rhyme.

Sterling writes to kings and queens as freely as to a friend—nine times out of 10, he gets the autograph.

Of the world's rulers, he has these: Franklin D. Roosevelt, Edward Rydy-Smigly of Poland, Pehr Evd Svinhofrud of Finland, Lazaro Cardenas of Mexico, Eusebio Ayala of Paraguay, Rodolfo Minger of Switzerland, Eamon de Valera of Ireland and Joseph A. Lyons of Australia.

Sterling has autographs of Mussolini, Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, and Queen Wilhelmina of Holland. Besides these he has autographs of nine supreme court justices and many senators and congressmen.

One of his prizes is a letter from Dr. Allan R. Dufos, doctor of the Dionne quintuplets.

Heel Fly, this year's Kentucky Derby candidate, was included in the purchase at a reported price of $20,000.

Way to Eliminate Tree Harming Worm Told by Barnhart

Several inquiries have been received by the county agent's office as to how to destroy worms eating the foliage of mesquite trees.

These worms can be controlled very easily by spraying. Hugh F. Barnhart, assistant county agent, stated. A spray mixture consisting of one and one-half pounds of arsenate of lead to fifty gallons of water and sprayed on the mesquite tree thoroughly will kill the worms. The arsenate of lead should be stirred constantly while spraying as it is only a suspension in the water and will settle out easily.

Barnhart cautioned the users of the spray that arsenate of lead is very poisonous and great caution should be taken to see that animals do not graze around trees that have been sprayed, as well as children should not be allowed to play under the sprayed trees.

TWELVE HELD IN STAYING OF THREE GIRLS

INGLEWOOD, Calif., June 29.—Twelve men with asserted records as degenerates were questioned by police today in the kidnap slaying of three little girls, lured from play Saturday on the promise they would be taken on a "live rabbit hunt."

Police Chief Oscar Campbell said that he sought a man known as "Eddie, the Sailor." The 12 men arrested all have the first name of "Eddie."

Madeline, 7, and Melba Everett, 8, and Jeanette Stephens, 8, were taken to the Baldwin Hills, garroted, beaten, outraged and slain.

Police sought a "handsome young man with a black mustache."

The slayer left "definite and clear" fingerprints on the bodies of his three victims, police said.

Sheriff's deputies and state highway police guarded highways leading from Southern California. Two brothers were stopped by deputies at the Santa Clara bridge because their roadster resembled the suspect's car.

They denied all knowledge of the murder but were booked as ex-convicts in possession of a gun. Arrest of three suspects last night, all of whom were soon exonerated, was sufficient to draw a howling crowd of 1,500 persons to the jail prepared for a lynching.

"This jail won't be strong enough to hold him if the officers get him," they yelled.

Eastland Athlete Pair to New York

Merle Everett, the father, was dazed and weary.

"I told the police that if they let me come near him I will kill him," said Everett.

The twins will be unable to attend the National Amateur Athletic Union's track and field championships at Marquette University, Milwaukee, Wis., July 2 and 3.

Elmer and Delmer will be two members of a team to compete in a 1,600-meter relay run opposing a team from the West Coast. Others in the Browns' group will be Jim Herbert of New York University and Denis Shere, South African import of the 1936 Olympics.

Delmer also is to compete in the 400-meter run and Elmer the 200-meter. They will leave Friday, taking a plane from Dallas.

Stay-at-Home
Wave a Salute to Dreams

Corporations may be soulless, as many maintain; but the case of Violet Kathleen Schmidt and the New York Central railroad at least indicates that they do have hearts, if you know how to reach them.

Violet Kathleen Schmidt is 9 years old and she lives in Elkhart, Ind. Her home is down near the New York Central tracks, at a point where the crack passenger trains stop to exchange engines; and Violet, having a keen eye for the romance and grandeur of railroading, is always on hand to wave to the Twentieth Century when it goes through.

She has been doing this for three years now, getting up at 5:30 in the morning to highball the train through on its westbound run, and coming home from play at 5 very evening to wave her hand when it goes east.

The number of passengers who must have glanced casually out of a window and seen this little girl's gesture of greeting is beyond all figuring. But the people who really appreciated her were the men of the train crew; and in the course of time their appreciation spread upward, through the proper channels, and impressed itself on the higher nerve centers of the great corporation itself.

The result was that the New York Central descended on Violet Kathleen Schmidt the other day, put her and her mother aboard the Century, and took them to New York.

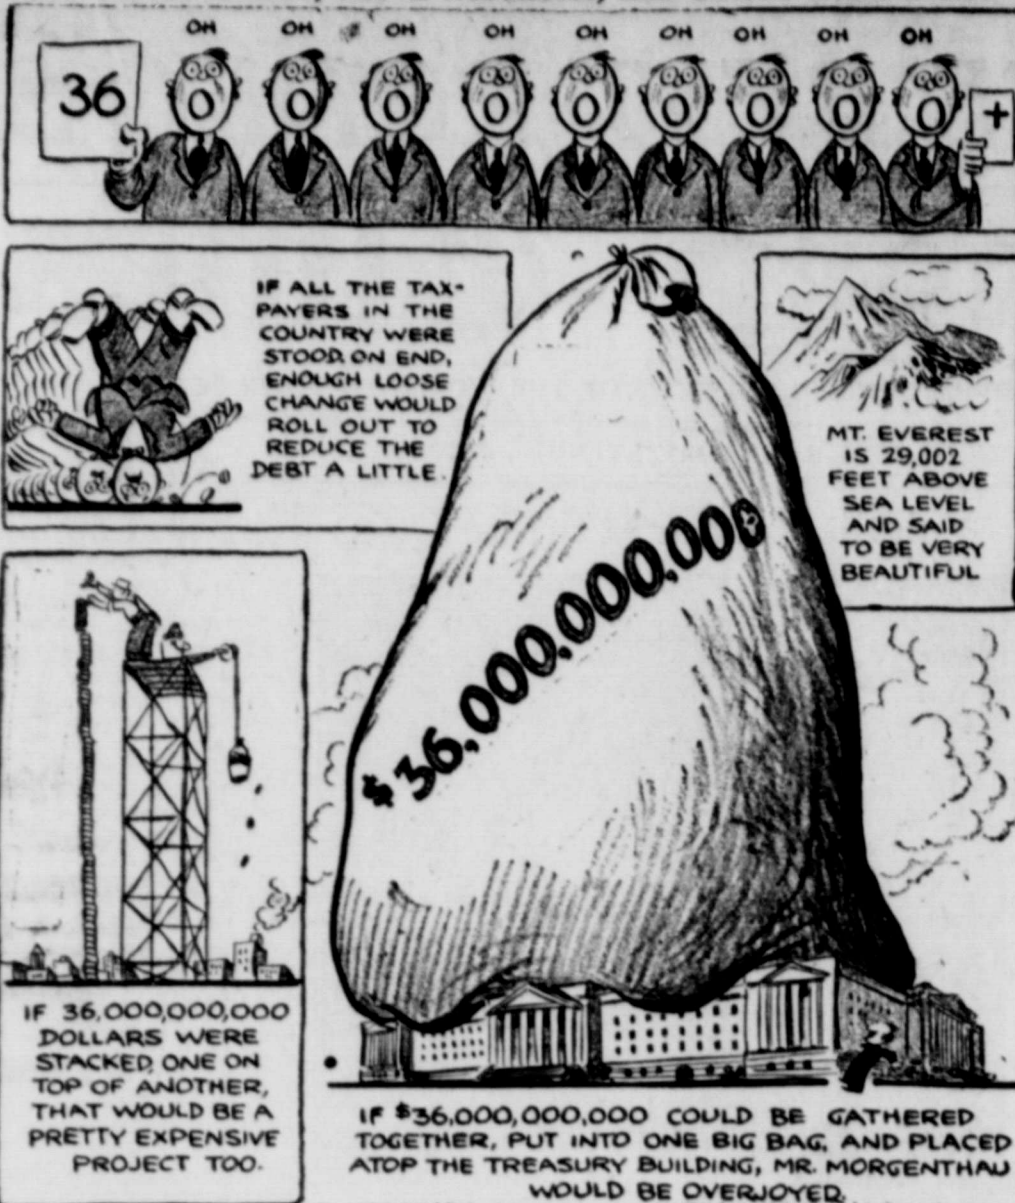

There, as guest of the road, Violet saw the sights of New York, stayed at a top-notch hotel, visited the railroad president, Frederick E. Williams, went on a shopping tour at the railroad's expense, did a bit of radio broadcasting, and at last rode home again on the Century—giving the signal, with her own hand, that started the train out of the Grand Central Station.

All of which probably added up to a swell time for a little girl and a useful bit of publicity for the railroad; but because the tribe of wavers-at-railroad-trains is vast and nation-wide, it is somehow heart-warming to see it, at last, get some official recognition.

Has anyone ever stopped to think how much the railroad train means, in terms of romance and color, in the lives of people who never rode on it? People who are tied down, in crowded cities or on lonely prairies, get their vicarious escape through the speeding trains that pass them by. These trains stand for escape, for freedom, for purposeful movement; they stand for the passing of invisible horizons just as surely as Drake's ships stood for that to the home-bound people of Devon, centuries ago.

So wherever you go, you find people looking up from their work or play to lift a hand at the passing train, as it flies across the landscape with the lonely, haunting echoes of its whistle trailing over its shoulder. Those lift-hands are a salute to dreams, by dreamers who must stay at home.

third to account for two more runs, Peterson relieving Minter on the mound for Lone Star after an error and three straight hits.

Peterson pitched shutout ball, had given the Elks a big lead, with good support in the field, for the remaining six innings.

Lone Star accounted for two more runs in the fourth when Foy got a life on an error and Landers hit to the far corner of left field for a home run.

The score was tied at five-all in the sixth when Pace singled and Foy's single got through Landers' legs in right field and the two circled the bases.

The final run of the game was made in the last of the ninth when Smoot singled and Alexander's single got away from Isbell and Smoot crossed. Alexander crossed the plate a few steps behind Smoot, but the ball game was all sewed up by that time, as the winning run had crossed the plate.

In the second game of the evening, Montgomery Ward got a 4-run lead in the third after Dr. Pepper had scored once in the first.

Both teams went scoreless until the sixth, when Dr. Pepper took on two more runs and then took the game in the last of the seventh by a three-run rally. The final score was the same as in the Lone Star-Elks game, 6 to 5.

Tonight Killingsworth, Cox will play TeePee and the Ranger girls meet the Gorman girls.

SUPERSTITION MOUNTAIN

CAST OF CHARACTERS
 STUART BLAKE, prospector's daughter.
 CAROLEE, Stuart's lover.
 HENRY COLTER, prospector.
 PAUL AND NINA COLTER, Stuart's sister.

Yesterday Stuart and Carolee, after the trail back to camp, arrived there, they arrange to meet again.

CHAPTER VI

STUART BLAKE escorted Carolee back part way up the trail toward her home, after they had begged mid-afternoon lunch from the cook in Superstition Lodge. The danger over, both could laugh at their mountain adventure and enjoy the comradeship that the experience wrought.

Carolee was afraid he would ask formally to call on her at her home on the high mesa. That would never do, she knew, and he ought to realize it; he had discovered her family's hostility to forestall him on signal at the trying place. She would hang out the white sheet when she could ride.

When Stuart returned a second time to Superstition Lodge, the hour was near sundown, and there was a hubbub of conversation on the front porch. One glance told him something had happened. His father was there, obviously excited. But Nina greeted Stuart.

"Dismount, buckaroo, and listen to the old scout's story," she called. "Somebody's been shooting at dad."

"Whoa. What's matter? Who's done what?"

Mr. Blake, Sr., was serious about it, and agitated.

"Somebody shot at me this noon, up in the mountain," he explained.

"Three or four times. I might have been killed. I could hear the bullets, plopping right near me."

Stuart was incredulous for a moment.

"Are you serious, dad? Are you sure?"

"Certainly I'm sure! I was just telling the folks here about it."

"The folks" included Nina Blake and half a dozen other lodge guests and employees who happened to be within hearing; even the old Indian women, who were eternally weaving baskets or molding pottery in the shade nearby, stopped to listen open-mouthed.

"That's about all there was to the story, Mr. Blake re-told it a dozen times. He had simply squatted behind a rock for nearly an hour, badly frightened; then he had gone back to the glen where he had tied his horse, and hastened to return home. He had no idea who could have done the shooting. The bullets came from across a wide canyon, evidently at considerable range.

Stuart decided immediately that the Colter men had done the shooting.

He mentioned that fact to his father, and the latter partially agreed.

Both he and his son had telephoned into Florence, the Pinal county seat, and reported the matter to Sheriff Watson, but the sheriff hadn't been very helpful.

Probably some careless hunter, he had suggested; hardly worth a search. People were always reporting "mysterious" shootings up in old Superstition and he was prone to scoff at such yarns. But even at bedtime the Blake men weren't satisfied.

Soon after breakfast next morning Stuart ordered his horse saddled and—more sensibly than the day before—strapped on a gallon canteen of water and a small package of food. He didn't want to admit being lost the day before with Carolee, and wouldn't even admit to himself that he couldn't ride through the mountain alone.

The horse was tied and waiting when Stuart came out. And when he did appear, he smacked of a movie version of some terrible-tom-from-the-tail-timber. At least Nina told him so.

Stuart wore a cartridge belt, borrowed from the Lodge owner. A business-like revolver hung on one hip, too; and he carried a shiny repeating rifle that he had bought in town.

AS a matter of solemn fact, he did look rather impressive. Nina's admiration was at least partly genuine. Stuart could have been a movie hero, with luck and talent added; and he had the looks. He was masculine enough. Usually he was gay and prankish, full of banter himself, but not this morning.

"Somebody shot at dad," he announced, as if that were sufficient. Come to think of it, it was, Nina told herself.

"Then the maiden is not in distress today, I take it. It's best to let her yearn a bit anyway. Where will you go, then?"

Stuart was stuffing cartridges into his pistol.

"I don't know exactly. For one thing I'll do a little target practice. Dad traced out the route he took yesterday. He was about four miles from here. I'll go there, and learn what I can."

Nina was suddenly concerned.

"Don't be a fool, Stuart. If somebody shot at dad, somebody might shoot at you. And the aim might be better today. Why don't you take a guide?"

"Dad wasn't armed. I am. I don't think the shooting will occur again anyway. I just want to investigate. Besides, I'm getting interested in that Lost Dutchman Mine. If it's important enough to make fools of the Colters and cause dad to be shot at, then some of those other stories about the mountain may be true."

"Undoubtedly some of them are true," Nina declared. "They are on record. The deaths, I mean. But why are you interested?"

He smiled, then, for the first time this morning.

"Come out to adventure, didn't we, while dad rests? So far he's done the adventuring. I want to trace down a few clues myself. But don't go spending the treasure until I find it."

NINA leaned against a front post, a crooked ironwood log, and watched her brother mount. She couldn't help being concerned for his safety, but he did look out of place to her, out of atmosphere. She was accustomed to Stuart in full dress or a tux, or in correct city sport clothes behind the wheel of his roadster. He was strange to cowboy regalia.

"You look grand," she conceded. "If you only had a wagon train to rescue. Or a Pocahontas to woo!"

He glanced at the Indian hand-workers near the porch, already weaving and mixing clay. Not one was under 40 years, nor under 180 pounds. They were just old women, tolerated there because they were picturesque.

"Sorry, sis, but you can't make a square man of me. So long. I may lay out tonight (he was already picking up the speech of the western cowboys), so don't look for me for a day or two."

"And another thing," he flung back as he rode off, "if there's any shooting done this trip, I'm going to do some of it. Tell that to dad."

WASHINGTON

WITH RODNEY BUTCHER

BY RODNEY BUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—It has to be reported that on the latest of at least a dozen conspicuous occasions Secretary Harold L. Ickes, the New Deal's India rubber man, has bounced back up again from what seemed to be a position on the floor.

His PWA, which was supposed to be dead, has been granted two more years of life with funds.

There isn't going to be any new Department of Public Works right away, which means that Ickes won't have to make a choice between being secretary of that and his present post as secretary of Interior.

Also if the government reorganization bill is passed, the name of the Interior Department will be changed to Department of Conservation, as Ickes desires.

These assurances developed at a time when Ickes, who hasn't been well, was in the Naval Hospital here, away from the firing line he loves.

Few things demonstrate the quality of Ickes so well as his ability to stand above and seemingly oblivious to the constant bitter intrigue which goes on within his department and the PWA.

ICKES and others in his domain had been victims of a persistent state of jitters dating back a year or so ago to the time when he and others had pushed out Louis Glavis, chief of the Ickes investigation agency and regarded by many as the ace of American sleuths.

The specter of Glavis still pursued the Ickes crowd, especially when it became known that many items usually supposed to have been in the Glavis files, were mysteriously missing.

Presumably Ickes and his favorite chief assistant, Elbert K. Burlew—who has facetiously been known as the "oversecretary" ever since Congress created the office of undersecretary of the Interior and Roosevelt gave the job to his own friend and liaison man, Charles West of Ohio—knew what certain other insiders know: that Glavis turned results of certain of his inquiries over to Roosevelt.

Not long ago at a White House conference Ickes objected to the proposed—and subsequently accomplished—appointment of John Carson, former secretary to the late Senator Jim Couzens of Michigan, as consumers' counsel to the Bituminous Coal Commission.

Ickes suggested that Carson, who is known to his friends as a pro-Roosevelt partisan, was inimical to Roosevelt. The President asked for particulars and Ickes finally complained that Carson and Glavis were intimate friends—which was true.

"Now listen, Harold," said Roosevelt, "you can't let the ghost of Glavis chase you forever."

THE new hero of government clerks and other minor employees in Washington is Congressman John Coffey of Washington state.

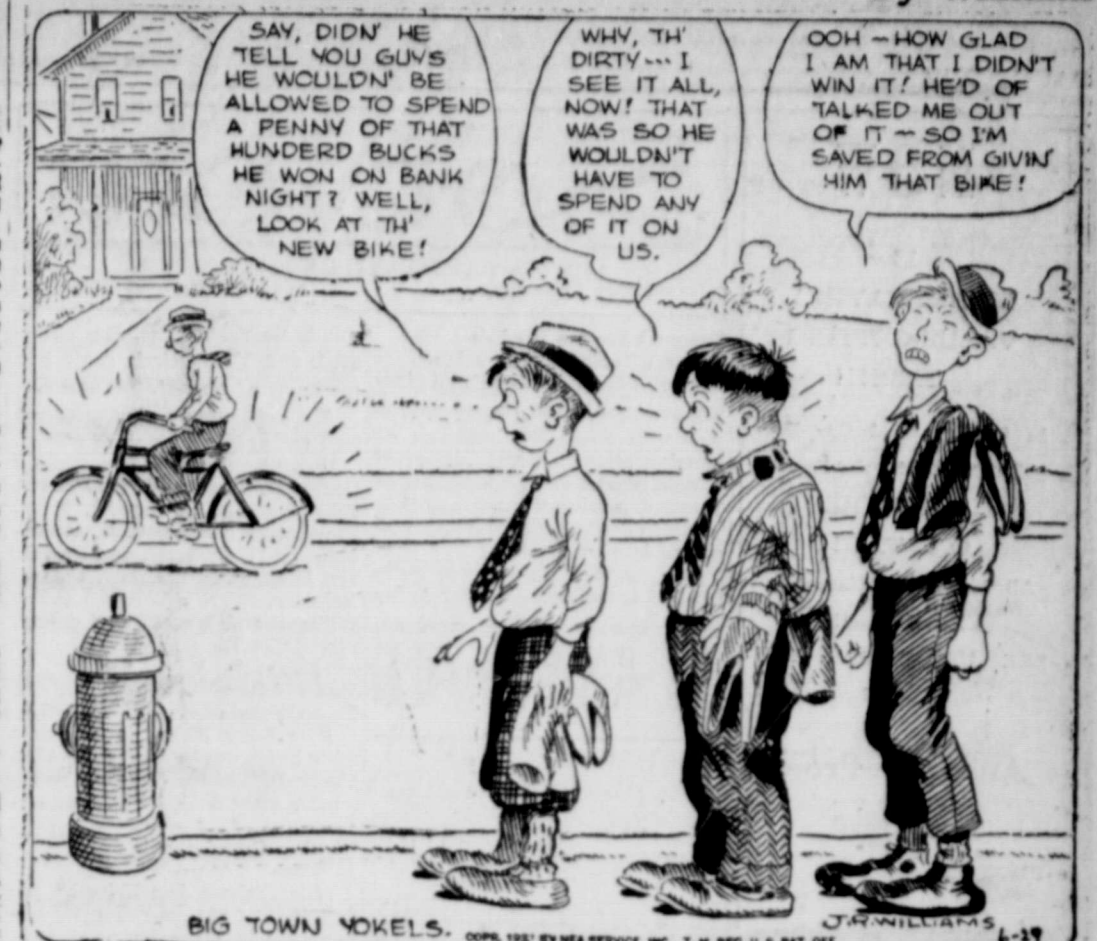

Seven "rebel" lodges, recently suspended from the American Federation of Labor's American Federation of Government Employees, had a mass meeting the other night and proclaimed that they would like to be affiliated with the C. I. O.—an invitation to which John L. Lewis has since announced himself receptive.

The meeting lasted for hours and there were several long-winded speakers. But Coffey held himself down to 90 seconds flat. He said, in extreme brief, that federal economy shouldn't be taken out of the hides of loyal public servants.

Coffey suggested exactly what the boys and girls wanted to hear. But the reason he is being hailed as a champion of champions all over the town is the fact that he became the only congressman ever heard of here who voluntarily confined himself to a speech lasting only a minute and a half.

Debating Club Has Barred Chin Leading

By United Press

JEFFERSON, O.—During the chilly winter days the four members of Jefferson's "gushouse gang" banded together every morning in a local drug store, waiting for their offices to warm up. Various subjects were hotly discussed, and the idea of starting a debating club seemed reasonable.

Each day now, 8:30 to 8:45, the forum debates current topics, baseball and boxing dominating 95 per cent of the group's discussions.

The club, under the more or less dignified title of "The Jones Boys," has received many requests for membership from outsiders. The roster is being held down to the original four, however.

Iron-clad gang rule: "Don't lead with your chin in any argument," and all adhere to it.

The members are John Jones, owner of the drug store-meeting place, Dr. R. B. White, E. J. Snodewer, Sr., and Attorney R. O. Dickson.

Woman Attorney Uses Plane In Work

By United Press

PARKER, Ariz.—Mrs. Nellie Buck, Parker attorney, operates a law practice over a territory approximately 400 miles and accomplishes the task in comparative ease. She uses her own airplane.

On frequent occasions Mrs. Bush has prepared briefs and other legal documents in her office here and filed them 45 minutes later at Yuma, Ariz., the county seat, 140 miles away.

Active in political and legislative affairs for the past 20 years in Arizona, Mr. Bush just completed a term as state senator. Before that she served a number of years as state representative from this county.

Operating on the theory that women can further their interests much better by entering professions usually including only men, Mrs. Bush has extended her law practice to include cattle-theft cases, divorces and probating wills.

LET'S KNOW TEXAS AND TEXANS

WILL H. MAYES, AUSTIN, TEXAS

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

Q. What will be the height of the Neches River bridge, under construction at Port Arthur, and what will it cost?

A. It will be 230 feet high, the sixth highest bridge in the United States, and will cost $2,750,000 when completed.

Q. Where and when did Col. Alexander Horton die and how has the State honored his memory?

A. Col. Horton died at his home at San Augustine, Jan. 11, 1894, and the state in 1929 erected a monument to him and his wife at San Augustine.

Q. Who surveyed the town of Gonzales and who was its first settler?

A. James Kerr, who resigned a state senatorship in Missouri, and six assistants, made the survey in August, 1825, and named the town for Don Rafael Gonzales, provincial governor of Coahuila and Texas. Francis Berry, the first settler, joined them a few weeks later, these then being the only Anglo-Americans west of the Colorado River.

Q. By what name was Market Street, San Antonio, once jokingly known?

A. In the early days when the jail was on Main Plaza, San Antonians often referred to Market street as "Calaboose street."

Q. Will the "ten gallon" hats be as much worn during the Pan-

American Exposition this summer as they were during the Texas Centennial of last year?

A. Manufacturers say that while the Texas Centennial created a large permanent demand for the big hats, the hat novelties this year, for both men and women at the exposition, will be broad-brimmed highly-colored straws, in line with the PanAmerican aspect of the exposition.

This booklet of 32 pages, "Texas Empire Builders of '36" is a brief retelling by Will H. Mayes of the momentous days in Texas history from March 1 to April 21, 1836, told in a way to impress upon readers the main events of the struggle, sacrifice and suffering for Texas independence.

A number of schools are using it because of its clear, brief, instructive presentation of main facts in Texas history. You will find it interesting and helpful.

Mailed postpaid for only 10 cents. Will H. Mayes, 2610 Salado Street, Austin, Texas.

I enclose 10 cents in coin securely wrapped, for a copy of "Texas Empire Builders of '36."

Rats Cost the State $15,000,000 in '36

AUSTIN, Texas—Texas sustained a fifteen million dollar loss last year, on account of rats, declared Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer. The figure is a very low estimate based upon the probable number of rats in the State, two for each person. No doubt many suffer losses that would pay their taxes, and this does not take into consideration the losses from diseases, time, and money, caused by the rat.

Typhus fever is on the increase in Texas, said Dr. Cox, and the rat is the cause of its spread. Old World typhus fever has a high death rate, while the type we have in Texas, sometimes called Brill's Disease, has a low death rate. It occurs among persons who work or live in rat infested buildings. It was the observation of this fact that led to the discovery that rats are carriers or transmitters of the disease. It appears that the rat suffers attacks of this form of typhus fever and that the fleas harbored by the sick rat bite man and thus human infection results.

Although this disease is not commonly fatal, it cannot be considered lightly. The intense headache, the high fever and the great mental depression are its most unpleasant features. Like in sea sickness, the patient's greatest fear is that he is not going to die. The illness lasts about two weeks.

The control of typhus is very difficult and it depends upon the extermination of rats and this is no easy matter. Trapping and poisoning help, but the best results are obtained by starving the rats. This is done by having all buildings where food is stored rat-proofed. The State Department of Agriculture will be glad to assist communities in their program for the extermination of this pest.

OR BELTS

ANSWERING the problems of modern life
for modern women,
Bettes protect safely and efficiently without sanitary napkins or pads. Bettes perform their function invisibly and are so tiny that a day's supply can be carried in a handbag.
They have set new standards of comfort and convenience . . . of personal daintiness . . .
for women everywhere.

Worn internally; approved
