A CHRISTMAS TO REMEMBER

Williams

"We always have a very traditional Christmas Eve. One year when our children were very young, some dear family friends arranged as their gift to our family to have Santa arrive during our traditional family dinner. The look of expectation and delight on the faces of the children as we heard Santa's boots moving across the roof and down the stairs from the crow's nest on our home is one of my fondest memories."

Baker's tour faces jet fuel shortages

By Thomas L. Friedman
N.Y. Times News Service

■ Analysis

WASHINGTON — As Secretary of State James A. Baker III prepares to set off for the former Soviet Union, administration officials acknowledge that even their modest plans for helping to prevent disorder there face formidable obstacles — not the least of which could be finding fuel to power Baker's plane on his tour of Soviet republics.

Baker leaves today for Russia, Ukraine, Kirghizia, Byelorussia and Kazakhstan. The State Department spokeswoman, Margaret D. Tutwiler,

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — The decision Friday of the four Central Asian republics and Kazakhstan to join a new political organization boosted its membership to a majority of former Soviet states and 90 percent of its population.

That is the point at which Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, 60, said he would acknowledge the death and transfiguration of one of history's most powerful empires, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

However, Gorbachev said he would not resign at least until after meeting with U.S. Secretary of State James Baker next Monday.

Gorbachev had said he would recognize the Commonwealth of Independent States as the legal heir to the Soviet Union when a majority opted for it. He personally argued for a federal union of the republics, with its capital in Moscow.

Law officers conclude sting operation with arrests

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

As the sun rose over Midland early Friday morning, lawmen began a sting operation that eventually resulted in 31 arrests, 29 of which were for drug-trafficking offenses.

More could be on the way.

"These are major players in the delivery of controlled substances in the city of Midland," said Police Chief Richard Czech. "This will hopefully get some of it off the streets."

Many of those arrested were residents of the city's northwest side, and officers said undercover drug buys were made at several prominent restaurants and nightclubs.

"We had been told for a long time the west side, north side and central part of town had as much (illegal drug traffic) as the southeast. We did some work and found out that's true," Czech said.

After a seven-month investigation, a grand jury returned 68 indictments for 48 defendants on charges of delivery of cocaine, marijuana, heroin, LSD and designer drug Ecstasy, as well as theft.

The investigation and Friday's sting, known as

Morales appoints trustees over nursing homes

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Attorney General Dan Morales announced Friday he has named trustees to take over operations of two nursing homes in Midland and one in Littlefield to bring them into compliance with state law.

Morales said he signed agreements for the temporary takeovers with Courtyard Care Center and Terrace West Nursing Home, both in Midland, and Littlefield Hospitality House in Littlefield.

Administrators at the two Midland nursing homes could not be reached for comment Friday night.

Department of Health records said Courtyard Care used improper restraints on residents, along with improper incontinent care, inadequate help with meals and ineffective skin care. The home also failed to monitor feeding tubes properly and inadequately cared for a seriously ill resident.

"Improper incontinent care" usually means residents are left for long periods of time lying in their own fecus or urine.

Records stated Terrace West had deficiencies in resident assessments, care plans, nursing intervention and direct care. Also, failure to provide an adequate number of staff members posed an immediate threat to the health and safety of residents, health department records stated.

Grand jury investigates drug cache

■ A grand jury is investigating a ton of cocaine found at Presidio County fairgrounds.

PECOS (AP) — Presidio County Sheriff Rick Thompson and Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter did not appear Friday before a federal grand jury believed to be investigating the origin of 2,400 pounds of cocaine found at the Presidio County fairgrounds.

The grand jury meeting in Reeves County called several West Texas lawmen to appear, including U.S. Border Patrolman Wayne Wiemers of Marfa, Presidio County Chief Deputy Steve Bailey, and Captain Clayton McKinney of the Midland County Sheriff's Department, who all appeared.

Thompson's attorney, Hal Upchurch, was in Pecos for the grand jury session Friday.

No indictments were announced at the end of the day's session.

The cocaine was seized Dec. 4 by a Drug Enforcement Administration task force that included officers from the Texas Department of Public Safety narcotics division, U.S. Customs, the DEA and the Border Patrol.

The illegal drugs were found in flour sacks in a horse trailer at the fairgrounds.

Authorities arrested Alpine resident Glyn Robert Chambers, 37, who is being held in the Pecos-Reeves County Detention Center on charges of importing and possessing more than 1,000 pounds of cocaine for distribution.

Thompson said at a news conference earlier this week that the cocaine was a part of a drug sting operation.

But DEA agent Dale Stinson said it was unusual for an agency as small as the Presidio County Sheriff's Department to handle a drug investigation involving such a large volume of narcotics.

"We were not advised in advance that the cocaine was being stored there," he said.

Thompson told his news conference that he was working alone because in the past he has contacted the DEA with information, but had not received results.

Big Spring man, 23, gets death penalty

Staff Report

BIG SPRING — A 23-year-old man received the death penalty Friday for the February stabbing murder of an 18-year-old woman.

Judge Robert H. Moore of the 118th Judicial District Court sentenced Billy Ray Nelson to die by lethal injection shortly after a jury returned a guilty verdict on the charge of capital murder.

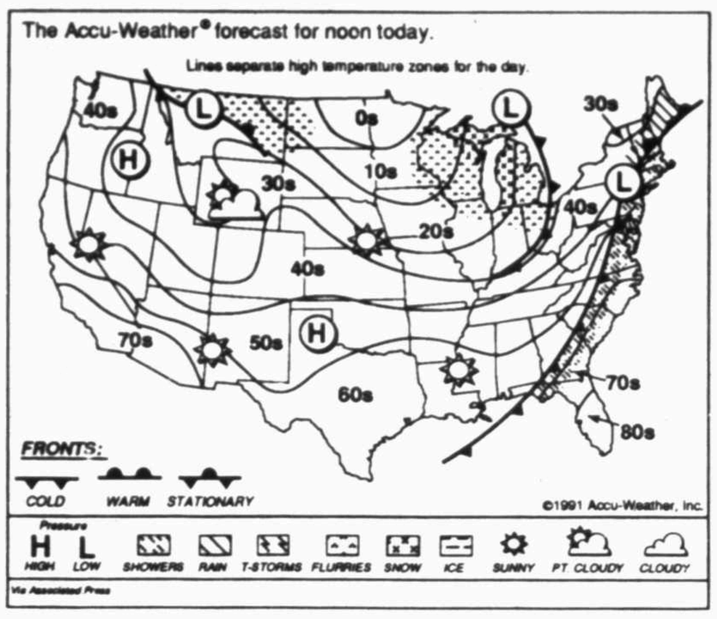

The victim, Charla Wheat, who lived across the street from Nelson at the time, was sexually assaulted and stabbed to death in her home.

"There's no question the jury said that's what he deserved, understanding the facts of this case," said District Attorney Rick Hamby.

The sentence, which followed an emotional week-long trial, is the first death sentence from the 118th district court since 1948.

MORALES: State names two to oversee homes said, personnel abused patients by failing to provide adequate care, such as bathing, incontinent care and treatment of pressure sores. Also, personnel gave drugs such as Valium and Dalmane to residents without a prescription in an effort to control them, reports said.

All the nursing homes deny the charges, a spokesman at the the attorney general's office said.

Courtyard is owned by Courtyard Care Management Co., and Terrace West is owned by Texas Health Enterprises Inc., which is the third largest owner of nursing homes in Texas. Littlefield is owned by Vera Reynolds.

In November, the attorney general sued Westgate Care Center in Amarillo, which also is owned by Texas Health Enterpises, for repeated patient abuse and neglect. A court ordered a trusteeship in the Westgate case.

Morales said Avid Health Care Inc. will serve as trustee for Courtyard Care and Bill Saxton of Midland will be trustee for Terrace West. Helen Anderson will be in charge of Littlefield Hospitality.

Saxton said he sees his role as that of a consultant. He is the chief executive officer of Midland Presbyterian Homes, which owns Trinity Towers and Manor Park — two Midland communities for the elderly.

"I'm to work in conjunction with the State Department of Health to be sure all the deficiencies are OK," Saxton said. Trustees will have complete control of operations and management for 90 days and will be expected to bring the homes into compliance with regulations.

"I'll be assisting in their recertification for Medicaid, and making sure everything is up to standard," Saxton said. His appointment as voluntary trustee was approved by the company that owns Terrace West, he said.

"At this point, I feel good about working with the administration," Saxton said. "I feel like things can be accomplished."

The health department will continue to inspect the homes during the trusteeship.

Morales said the agreement does not provide for civil penalties, and the possibility of penalties will be pursued in separate legal actions.

Wednesday, for the second time in recent weeks, Gov. Ann Richards held an emotionally charged news conference to blast Department of Health nursing home regulators for failing to either correct abuses or close repeated violators.

With her voice breaking on several occasions during her speech, Ms. Richards said the repeated problems must end.

"It makes me so angry to think that people who gave me life and who gave life to the people of Texas are suffering the kind of indignity that is taking place in some of these nursing homes in Texas. And it is going to stop," Ms. Richards said.

"I want bad nursing homes — those who allow their patients to sleep in their own body wastes, those that abuse the infirm and those who are repeatedly cited as bad operators — I want them closed," the governor said.

A 60-page investigative report for the governor by Austin attorney David Bragg called for sweeping regulatory and legislative changes to ensure that bad nursing homes are closed.

Ms. Richards said "greed and indifference" were taking over a system "that is supposed to be caring for our parents and our grandparents and our friends."

"I simply do not understand why we cannot put this chronic and intolerable problem of indecent, inhumane treatment of the ill and the infirm — and sometimes the forgotten — to rest," she said.

"The health, safety, care and treatment of our elderly is especially important to me," Morlaes said in his announcement Friday. "I am committed to ensuring that our senior citizens are treated with the respect and dignity they deserve in nursing homes and by businesses."

Hidden medical waste turns dream house to nightmare

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — When newlyweds Michael and Karen Graham dug up a tree outside their new dream home, they unearthed a dirty secret: a hillside of medical waste and trash. Cleaning it up could cost $1 million.

"We fell in love with this house and now we're living on a landfill," Mrs. Graham said. "I want to stay, but not with all the garbage."

The Grahams bought the house in August from a 77-year-old retired nursing supervisor. She worked at a nursing home where she said she got intravenous tubes, syringes, kidney dialysis bags and other used medical devices.

Irene Pisciotta, who moved to Fresno, said she took home plastic bags full of medical waste from the Casa Serena nursing home in San Jose and used it as fill in her back yard and creek bed to scare gophers and burglars.

"I'm sorry this all happened," Pisciotta told the San Jose Mercury News in what the newspaper described as a rambling and tearful telephone interview. "I certainly didn't do it to hurt anybody."

There was no answer at her house since Wednesday.

Pisciotta told the newspaper she didn't tell real estate agents about her secret landfill because "you couldn't see it." Neighbors said they hadn't seen Pisciotta take out trash in the 29 years she lived there.

The Grahams — who as property owners are liable — discovered the waste in September. Last week, they sued Pisciotta, the nursing home and real estate agents to pay for an estimated $1 million or more cleanup bill.

"Our house is worthless now," said Graham, who borrowed money from his mother to help make the down payment on the $265,000 home. "But here we sit stuck on this mess, paying $2,500 a month in house payments."

Karen Waldrop, administrator of Casa Serena where Pisciotta worked from 1979 to 1988, said nobody was aware the supervisor apparently was taking home medical waste, which legally must be destroyed or burned.

And the three real estate agents who helped close the sale said they didn't find any hidden garbage when they inspected the property.

"From what I understand, nobody knew this was there except the owner," said Bryant McOmber, attorney for the Cornish & Carey real estate agency.

The view from the yellow and white house with brick trim overlooks a lush yard with orange trees, bushes and vines that continue down over a hillside above Los Gatos Creek, which runs into San Francisco Bay.

Upon closer inspection, however, IV tubes, many bloodstained and with needles still attached, are seen entwined in the foliage. Lift a rock and plastic bags, pill containers and specimen trays and syringes appear.

Dig deeper and plastic bags and trash from Styrofoam trays to nylons and food containers are revealed. The Grahams found a 1970 calendar.

"At first we didn't realize the scope of it," Mrs. Graham said of the landfill, about 200 to 300 feet long and some 50 to 60 feet deep. "We pulled out seven bags worth of trash before we gave up."

Mrs. Graham, a 50-year-old legal secretary, and Michael, a 47-year-old machinist, married in February and bought the house with the idea of fixing it up.

"We were just getting it to look like we want and then this," Graham said Thursday. "Every time we come out here, we find something new."

Santa Clara County Environmental Health Department authorities have put up "danger" and "keep out" signs and told the Grahams to build a fence around the trash until it can be removed, but not until after winter rains.

"There's no real immediate danger of infection from the biomedical waste, but you can't have that next to a creek," said Lee Esquibel, director of the county's environmental health department. "I've never seen anything like it. It's going to leave a big hole when it's gone."

DRUGS: Area law officials conduct citywide raids

(From 1A)

Operation Fast Lane, were the result of combined efforts of the Midland Police Department, Permian Basin Drug Task Force and Midland County District Attorney's Office.

Officials of the Texas Alcohol and Beverage Commission said they plan to join the operation with action that could jeopardize the liquor licenses of some local clubs.

"We'll be reviewing each case individually, talking to the undercover officers (who purchased narcotics at local establishments)," said Dyer Lightfoot, TABC senior agent. "If (club management) permitted it, or knew it was going on and didn't stop it, there would be action to revoke the license."

Robin Sams, chief district attorney's office prosecutor for narcotics crimes, said patrons and owners of some Midland establishments had complained about drug sales there.

Undercover officers claimed to have bought cocaine repeatedly from a manager at Wall Street Bar and Grill, police said, resulting in the indictment and arrest of Sharon Beverly Scott, 28, on three counts of delivery of cocaine. Also charged with one count of possession, for drugs allegedly found in her purse during the arrest, Ms. Scott's bond was set at $15,000.

Included in the arrests were Thomas E. Gammage, 45, owner of Rumors II nightclub, and Gary Gammage, 39, for four counts each of stolen merchandise. Ms. Sams said undercover officers, in the course of their narcotics investigation at the club, had several opportunities to sell stolen beer to the Gammages, resulting in the felony indictment and bonds set at $5,000 each.

Most of the indictments and almost all of the resulting arrests, however, involved cocaine.

"Cocaine is very popular in Midland, more so than other drugs," Czech said. "We think it's working its way up over the river from Mexico and into the Midland-Odessa area."

Ms. Sams said many of those involved in both buying and selling were young people, in their middle to late 20s, and nine were repeat offenders.

"These are street dealers," said Czech, adding that lawmen are continuing the investigation to find those behind the drug delivery operations.

Tom Finley, commander of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force, said the successful bust showed drug traffic is not limited to the city's southeast side, where it has been highly publicized.

"It's in all parts of town," he said.

Czech said the dealers were "sophisticated" in their techniques, guarding their secrecy more than those in southeast Midland, where he was once able to buy drugs as part of an investigation.

"In this kind of long-time undercover operation, the officers had to gain the confidence of these dealers," he said. "They won't sell to just anyone. . . . They will only work through their friends or people they know."

Valid addresses were not immediately available for the suspects.

Those arrested Friday on indictments for two counts of delivery of cocaine with bond set at $10,000 were: Kimberly Rene Graham, 26; Tony Lewis Graham, 26; Maria Louisa Ramos, 24; Gildardo Lujan, 19; and Jeffery Lavelle Waugh, 32.

Those arrested on indictments for one count of delivery of cocaine with a $10,000 bond were: Charles Darin Rapp, 25; David Wayne Szuba, 22; Reece Liane Owens, 21; Gilbert Carrasco Villa, 24; Cesar T. Torres, 25; A.E. Dyer III, 27; Mark Miller, 30; David Leon Brown Jr., 24; Reginald Christopher Gilbert, 26; Roger Holloway, 26; Tommy Posteal, 44; William Leroy Chambers, 27; Drake Middleton, 22; Sheila Kay Griffin, 30; Jimmy R. Melton, 32; Gloria Reinhardt, 36; Oscar Joe Stiggers, 37; and Johnny Williams, 32.

Arrested on indictments for two counts of delivery of cocaine with a $15,000 bond were: Lewis Montgomery, 33; James Arthur Moore, 31; and Milburn Sanders Jr., 46.

Kelly Loyd Jordan, 31, was arrested on an indictment for two counts of delivery of a simulated narcotic with bond set at $10,000. Sharron Searcy, 19, was arrested on an indictment for one count of delivery of marijuana with a bond of $10,000.

Police seek two

ODESSA — Police were seeking two suspects in the aggravated robbery of a drug store that occurred shortly before noon Friday.

After the reported robbery of Western Drug, 501 W. Second, two black males, aged 25 to 30, were seen running from the store in a northerly direction, police said.

According to the report, one was about 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighing 180 to 200 pounds and wearing a demin jacket, the other 5 feet nine inches, weighing 140-150 pounds and wearing blue jeans and a blue tobboggan cap.

Customers and employees of the store said the two men held them at gunpoint at about 11:10 a.m. while they robbed the store of cash, escaping on foot.

In an apparently unrelated incident, a 28-year-old Odessa man was in custody late Friday for the aggravated robbery of Clinic Pharmacy, 1511 N. Texas, shortly before noon, police said.

The man reportedly entered the business and demanded narcotics, displaying a shotgun, police said. Owner Jack McElmurry confronted the man with a revolver and detained him until police arrived, reports said.

Mission man faces heroin possession charge

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Sheriff's deputies arrested a 36-year-old Mission man Friday on a charge of aggravated possession of heroin after stopping him and finding $105,000 worth of the drug, authorities said.

Javier Pruneda Martinez was arrested about 1:30 p.m., culminating a nine-month undercover investigation, said Jim DeLesdernier, chief of the criminal investigation division for the Bexar County Sheriff's Department.

Martinez and his wife were stopped in their car on the city's west side. Officers said they found uncut black-tar heroin in the woman's shoe and in an overnight bag.

DeLesdernier said Martinez is known as a drug dealer in the Rio Grande Valley, San Antonio and Houston. He said Martinez makes two runs per week from the Valley to San Antonio with about $100,000 worth of heroin each time.

Martinez was being held in the Bexar County Jail Friday evening in lieu of $10,000, a jail official said. His wife was not charged.

Jones to direct utilities operations

Staff Report

City officials announced Friday Ken Jones has been named director of utilities.

Jones, who currently serves as deputy director of the department, will take the top job effective Jan. 1, when Director John Lowe begins his retirement.

"He was the best candidate," said Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor. Jones, who has worked under Lowe for almost three years, was appointed to the post by city management.

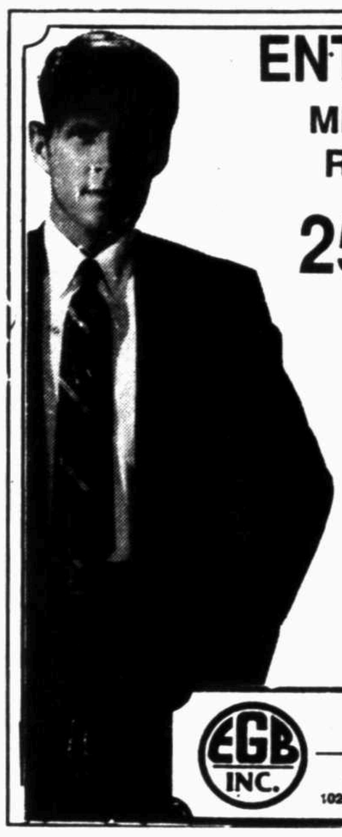

"It will be business as usual," Jones said of his plans for the department. "It's a pleasure to take over a position in a department that has been well run. There are not a lot of problems.

"I've taken over jobs that were just a mess, so I know how that can be. This one's not like that. It's going to be a pleasure."

Lowe had earlier said he expected Jones to be named to the post, and trained his second in command with the idea that he would eventually take over.

The appointment involves a shift in the administration, as Jones' current position will not be filled after he becomes director. McGregor said Jack Burns, assistant director of utilities, will keep his title and major duties.

Jones, hired as deputy director in 1989, had his first experience with Midland's utility system in 1971, when he became resident engineer for the construction of the sewer plant.

PACT: Commonwealth covers most of population

(From 1A)

The commonwealth would be a looser confederation, with its capital in Minsk.

Gorbachev was satisfied with the Central Asians' decision, his spokesman, Andrei Grachev, said Friday.

Gorbachev, whose policies of change led to the end of the Communist state and an end to the Cold War, said Thursday that his work was done.

Another Gorbachev spokesman said Friday the president would make no announcements about his personal future until after seeing Baker on Monday.

"He was asked whether he would remain until Monday for the secretary of state's visit and he said there was no doubt about that," spokesman Alexander Likhotal said.

The Soviet president still might find a place in the commonwealth. "Everything will depend on Gorbachev himself," Kirgizian President Askar Akayev said Friday.

Gorbachev said Thursday he had not been offered a post nor did he envision a role for himself in the new alliance that buried his country and career. He looked exhausted, nervous and rambled so much that his audience was clearly embarrassed.

Gorbachev might choose next Tuesday to deliver a farewell speech as the Soviet parliament meets to dissolve itself, Likhotal said.

Gorbachev was elected president by that parliament and legally his role would also end if the legislative body disappeared.

He would be the first Soviet leader to decide to leave the Kremlin on his own. His predecessors have either been kicked out by the Communist Party or died.

Soviet Defense Minister Yevgeni Shaposhnikov reassured the country that there was no danger of a coup. "I can declare with full authority: in the military all is peaceful and under control."

There could not be a coup without the military and the military wouldn't support one, he said.

The Central Asian states which chose to participate in the commonwealth were Kazakhstan, Kirgizia, Turkmenia, Tadzhikistan and Uzbekistan. These Moslem states join the three Slavic republics of Russia, Ukraine and Byelorussia, which initiated the idea last weekend.

Kazakhstan's decision Friday means that the Soviet nuclear arsenal now belongs entirely to the commonwealth. Russia, Ukraine and Byelorussia had already pledged to the West they would keep it under central control. Kazakhstan is the only other state with nuclear weapons.

The states now left out of the commonwealth are Georgia, Azerbaijan and Moldavia. Moldavian President Mirchea Snegur was in Byelorussia discussing possible membership Friday but had to cut short his stay because of ethnic violence at home.

Tension has long been brewing between the Moldavians and Russians who live there. Several cities that are populated heavily by Russians do not want to live in an independent Moldavia. A clash Friday between Moldavian police and armed Russians left several dead and wounded.

Azerbaijan and Georgia have said they are studying the idea. Georgia's President Zviad Gamsakhurdia Friday expressed interest in it as well as in signing a bilateral agreement with Russia.

However, Russian State Secretary Yegor Gaidar said Russia would not sign any agreements with Georgia until ethnic fighting between Georgians and Ossetians stopped. The Ossetians consider themselves almost Russian and look to Russia for protection. The Ossetian area of Georgia has been under attack for a year.

Already the voluntary membership in the commonwealth, as opposed to forced participation in the Soviet Union, appears to have broken the use of food as a weapon among some of the states. In recent months, this hoarding to extract political gain has left the Russian cities of Moscow and St. Petersburg begging for food this winter.

BAKER: Trip to former Soviet Union carries risks said that despite reports of airport closures throughout the Soviet Union because of shortages of airplane fuel, the five republics that Baker will visit have all assured him that they will have jet fuel on hand for his Air Force 707, as well as gasoline for his motorcade.

If that does not turn out to be the case, Miss Tutwiler said, the State Department has contingency plans.

Speaking to reporters at a White House briefing, Baker said the Russian president, Boris N. Yeltsin, had earlier spoken by telephone with President Bush for 25 minutes. Yeltsin told Bush other republics of the former Soviet Union were joining the new commonwealth.

Bush later telephoned President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to get his assessment of the situation. They spoke for half an hour.

Despite the gathering momentum for the new commonwealth, Baker stressed again that "we cannot and we must not inject ourselves into this purely political process" — meaning that the United States will not recognize this new commonwealth, or drop its support for the rump central government of Gorbachev, until there is a decisive conclusion to the power struggle there.

Officials say Baker will be approaching the Soviets on the nuclear question with plans for best- and worst-case scenarios.

The best-case scenario is that the republics, the army command and whatever new commonwealth emerges will be able to maintain a unified, single command for nuclear weapons and supervise the destruction of whatever nuclear missiles are in republics, which say they eventually want to be nuclear free.

Administration officials say that at the moment, the degree of coordination between the commonwealth republics and the army on the nuclear issue is much higher than appears in public, and that explains why Baker and Bush for the moment say they are not alarmed.

"What we have been hearing from the republics is 'Just tell us what to do, and we'll do it,'" a senior administration official said.

Baker said in his speech Thursday that the administration would offer the Soviets $400 million appropriated by Congress to help them destroy their 27,000 nuclear weapons.

Assuming that the army and republics can work together in a reasonably efficient manner on this effort, much of what Baker will be offering is technical expertise to help transfer missiles to central depots and tag and destroy weapons, as well as advice to each republic on its legal obligations under the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty and conventional arms reduction treaty.

U.S. officials say most of the republic leaders have no idea what their treaty obligations are for missiles and manpower on their soil, because all of this was handled by the central authorities.

The worst-case scenario is that the Soviet army will now disintegrate in tandem with the central government. And if that happens, it is not at all clear that the various republic leaders in Ukraine, Beyelorussia and Kazakhstan, who say they want to be nuclear-free zones one day, will have full control over the nuclear weapons on their soil or coastlines.

Soviet nuclear weapons are distributed among different subgroups in the Soviet military. The navy controls sea-based forces; the Strategic Rocket Force controls intercontinental ballistic missiles, and mobile, short-range missiles, nuclear land-mines and nuclear artillery are distributed among operational commands.

How these subgroups, once under a central army command, will now relate to the respective republic leaders is simply still not clear.

In such a situation, Washington would likely try to carry out a plan that tracks closely with a proposal made to the administration two weeks ago by Ash Carter and other members of the Center for Science and International Affairs at Havard University.

Accord sets stage for first inter-Korea summit

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — For President Roh Tae-woo, the historic accord between North and South Korea on reconciliation signed Friday opens the door to a long-sought dream: the first inter-Korea summit.

Roh met Premier Yon Hyong Muk of Communist North Korea on Friday and reportedly asked him to convey a personal message to Kim Il Sung saying the time was ripe for talks.

Roh suggested the two presidents consult in January or February with hopes of holding a summit as early as mid-year, according to news reports quoting unidentified presidential aides.

It would be the first summit between the Korean states, bitter enemies since the peninsula was partitioned in 1945 and fought a war from 1950-53. The highest-level talks so far have been between prime ministers.

"There are things between the South and North that can be solved only by their top leaders," Roh said in a TV interview this week. "The summit is the shortcut to the covering of confidence between the South and North."

Since taking office in 1988, Roh repeatedly expressed a desire to hold talks with Kim, who has ruled the North since it became a separate state in 1948.

The 79-year-old Kim has refused to recognize the existence of the Seoul government. Friday's accord is the first official document between the two nations, the first time the North has recognized South Korea.

North and South signed a nonaggression agreement, pledged to put a formal end to the Korean War and agreed to work toward a nuclear-free peninsula.

"This is a grand charter for peaceful coexistence and a step closer to the first summit between the South and the North," a statement from the government's National Unification Board declared.

Six Central American leaders sign treaty on peace

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Six Central American presidents concluded a summit Friday with a treaty calling for efforts to work for peace and fight poverty and drug trafficking in the poverty-stricken region.

"What we have signed today is not rhetoric," said President Alfredo Cristiani of El Salvador.

Asked whether the presidents could be counted on to convert their words into action for the 30 million souls living in the region, he responded, "You will be the witnesses."

The leaders, in two days of talks, did not reach agreement on a proposal to reduce their military forces.

"First, Guatemala and El Salvador should achieve peace," Honduran President Rafael Leonardo Callejas said. "While these nations do not have peace, it is difficult to think about military reductions."

El Salvador hopes to end its 12-year civil war by Christmas, but Guatemala's president recently decided to slow talks to end his country's conflict, in which the military has the upper hand.

Honduras emerged from military rule in 1982 and Costa Rica has no army.

The presidents of Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, El Salvador and Costa Rica attended the summit, as did President Guillermo Endara of Panama, which though geographically part of the Central American isthmus is separated by a distinct history.

Sisters of freed Irish hostage wait for him to come home

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Through four nerve-wracking years, Brenda Gillham and Elaine Spence yearned to know the whereabouts of their brother, a hostage in Lebanon.

Sixteen months after Brian Keenan was released, the frustrated sisters still don't know. As quickly as they were reunited, they lost him again.

Except for spending three days at his mother's Belfast home after his release in August 1990, the 41-year-old Keenan has lived the life of a nomad.

"Brian had to get away when he came home. He had to be alone — he explained that to us," Ms. Gillham, his elder sister, said in an interview. "It was a very, very hard thing for us to take . . . when you've dedicated 4½ years of your life and you just want to hold onto him."

Keenan has kept no fixed address. He is believed to have sought solitude in rural western Ireland, working on a book about his experiences.

In a Nov. 20 article he wrote for the Daily Mail of London, Keenan said he is sometimes asked what it's like to be free.

"'I don't know,' I said. 'I've been on the run ever since I was released,'" Keenan wrote.

Keenan surfaces from time to time at charity events and pubs in Dublin and Belfast, but even his family does not know how to contact him directly. They must call his London agent and leave a message, like the rest. He has asked old friends not to talk about him.

Long before he was kidnapped on his way to a lecture at the American University in Beirut, Keenan was drawn to roads rarely traveled.

Brought up as a working-class Protestant in east Belfast, he embraced Irish literature and Gaelic culture, enthusiasms of the Roman Catholic minority.

He traded one bitterly divided community for another in his move to Beirut, where he taught groups of Christian and Muslim students about cultural plurality.

Keenan's suffering in captivity appeared only to steel his principles. Of his kidnappers, he said: "I cannot condemn a man because he is different from me. Such conceit is self-maiming."

His public words have not tempered the rejection felt by his sisters. They have told their story in a recently published book, "For Brian's Sake," by Irish journalist Anne Maguire.

Keenan's family suffered from the peculiarities of Northern Ireland.

He had traveled to Lebanon on an Irish passport. Citizens of Northern Ireland can hold either an Irish or British passport, but Protestants muttered that Keenan's choice was a betrayal.

The sisters lobbied the Irish government relentlessly. Supported by a few friends, they traveled to Paris and Tehran to try to convince his captors that he was Irish, not British.

Interestingly, the book details a rare reunion last June, when the former hostage confronted his preference for friends over family.

"Four and a half years of living with no human warmth imprints on you deeply," he told his sisters. "You can't suddenly turn around and be this person that they (the public) want you to be."

The sisters say they have come to accept, in Elaine Spence's half-joking words, that their brother is "the same stubborn old git" he always was.

Tension mounts, for Haitians awaiting ruling

By Beth Duff-Brown
Associated Press writer

GUANTANAMO BAY, Cuba (AP) — Thousands of Haitian migrants wait in boredom and fear beneath the Army-green tents on a dusty, abandoned airstrip as their fate is being weighed by U.S. courts.

"We do a lot of nothing," says Valicia Deriseau, 23, who has been behind the concertina wire surrounding the camp at the U.S. Navy base since last month. "We just sit and wait for the decision."

The boredom, combined with fears of being forced to return to their volatile homeland, may have set off an outburst of panicked chanting and singing among the more than 5,500 Haitians several days ago, U.S. military officials said Thursday.

A rumor began Tuesday night when several Haitians said they had heard a Cuban radio report that Fidel Castro would issue orders to kill them if they weren't soon off the U.S. base on the southeastern tip of Cuba.

"The rumor went through the camp like wildfire," said Brig. Gen. George Walls, the Marine officer coordinating the joint military operation at the camp. He stressed it was unsubstantiated.

"They became very excited and they started running around the camp singing and chanting," he added. "It's the kind of thing that if it happened on the streets of Miami, somebody would have been gassed or shot."

Walls told reporters during a brief, Pentagon-authorized tour Thursday that no one was injured and the incident was quickly quelled.

But he said that as the camp continues to grow, life becomes more strained, despite the reggae tunes blasted from the civil defense system, the movies, the showers and hot meals three times daily.

"We're hopeful of some decisions that will allow for either repatriation or allow them to go to some other country," Walls said.

On Thursday, the 11th U.S. District Court of Appeals in Atlanta heard arguments on the government's appeal of an injunction blocking the Haitians' deportation to their homeland. The panel has not said when it would rule.

The U.S. government maintains most of the Haitians are fleeing for economic, not political, reasons and therefore do not deserve asylum.

The Haitians said many were allied with President Jean-Bertrand Aristide before he was ousted by the military in September, and would face danger if sent home.

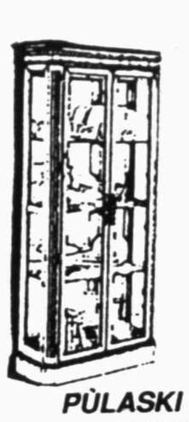

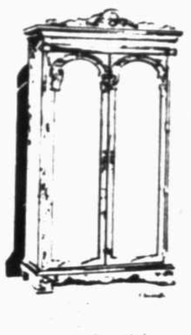

"If they send us back, we will probably be killed," said Lucker Dutyl, 30, who left Haiti on a small boat in mid-November with 112 others.

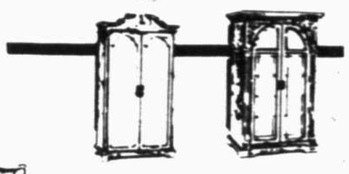

Since Oct. 29, the U.S. Coast Guard has picked up 7,104 Haitians in the Windward Passage between Haiti and Cuba. There were 5,513 Haitians at the camp Thursday, with 122 others en route on cutters.

A Coast Guard airplane on Friday flew to Guantanamo with supplies collected by residents of Miami, including 50,000 pounds of clothing.

The camps has more than 50 pregnant women. One was the first and only casualty at the camp so far when she died Sunday of an ectopic pregnancy.

Chinese premier offers talks with Dalai Lama

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Chinese Premier Li Peng offered on Friday to open a dialogue with the Dalai Lama, the exiled leader of Tibet, on any subject except Tibetan independence.

Li, whose visit has been dogged by protests from Tibetan refugees, reiterated Beijing's position that Tibet is a province of China, and there is no room to discuss independence, United News of India and Press Trust of India reported.

Tibetan officials were not immediately available for comment. But the Chinese condition on talks with the Dalai Lama has prevented such meetings in the past.

Before Li's arrival Wednesday for a six-day visit, a spokesman for the Dalai Lama's government-in-exile said the Chinese were approached with a proposal for a meeting between Li and the Dalai Lama. But they replied that the Dalai Lama first renounce the demand for Tibetan independence.

The 56-year-old Buddhist monk left New Delhi for his home in Dharmsala, 250 miles north, the day before Li arrived.

It was the first time since the Dalai Lama fled Tibet in 1959 that he was in the same country at the same time as China's leader.

In a speech at the Indian Council for Cultural Relations, Li denied China was stifling human rights in Tibet and defended what he described as China's development of the region, the news agencies reported.

"Tibet is an inseparable region of China from ancient times and it will remain so," Press Trust quoted Li as saying.

Tibetan refugees say their country had been an independent nation for centuries, governed spiritually and temporally by incarnations of the Dalai Lama.

China sent its army into Tibet and annexed it in 1950, the year after the Communist takeover of Beijing.

Previously, the Dalai Lama, who won the 1989 Nobel Peace prize, offered to relinquish foreign affairs and defense to the Chinese if Tibet would be free in all other respects. He withdrew that plan this year.

For a third day, police on Friday arrested dozens of Tibetans protesting Li's visit and Chinese annexation of their Himalayan homeland.

But India's Supreme Court intervened and ordered the immediate release of all women and children among roughly 500 Tibetans detained since last Sunday.

The Indian government, which has given a safe haven to the Dalai Lama and 110,000 of his followers, had instructed police to prevent any action that might embarrass Li.

In their talks, Li and Indian Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao agreed to redouble efforts to resolve their 30-year border dispute.

U.N. ends sports, cultural boycott of South Africa

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The General Assembly, citing progress toward ending apartheid, called unanimously on Friday for the restoration of international sporting, cultural, scientific and academic ties with South Africa.

The assembly, in its annual resolution on apartheid, also encouraged countries to review and lift remaining economic sanctions as South Africa creates a new transitional multiracial government and drafts a democratic, non-racial constitution.

The assembly's move ended a decades-long call for a sports and cultural boycott of South Africa because of its racial laws. Friday's resolution was adopted by consensus, without a vote.

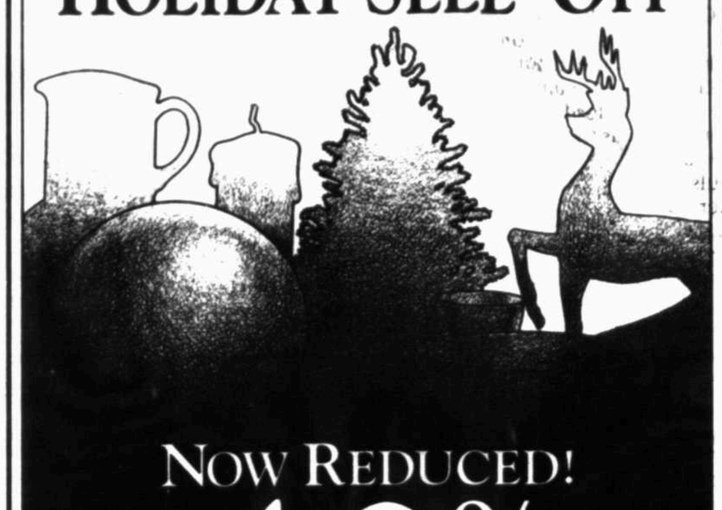

Although the boycott resolution had no enforcement provisions, the U.N. Secretariat annually published lists of athletes, film stars, musicians and other performers who traveled to appear in South Africa, embarrassing some into pledging not to return.

Many organizations and governments already have lifted their sports boycott of South Africa. The country was readmitted by the International Olympic Committee this past summer and the ATP Tour doubles championships were held in South Africa in November.

As a U.N. member, the United States adhered to the U.N. limits on sports and cultural links with South Africa. Congress lifted some U.S. economic sanctions against South Africa earlier this year, but some remain in place, to be eased in line with political progress.

The resolution comes as the the white-minority government, African National Congress and other anti-apartheid groups prepare to begin a constitutional conference Dec. 20.

Honecker remains in Chilean ambassador's home despite deadline

MOSCOW (AP) — Hundreds of pro-communist demonstrators blocked the Chilean Embassy early Saturday to support former East German leader Erich Honecker, who was sheltered inside as a deadline passed for his expulsion.

Germany is seeking Honecker's extradition to stand trial on manslaughter charges for the policy of shooting people who tried to flee communist East Germany.

Russian media carried unconfirmed reports that Honecker had been offered sanctuary in North Korea and that the Russian government had agreed to allow him to stay in the embassy a few more days.

The demonstrators carried about two dozen Soviet flags, sang old communist songs, and shouted "Honecker! Honecker!"

Some also carried signs. "Down with with the Gorbachev-Yeltsin clique," said one. "Keep your hands off Honecker," said another.

They vowed to stay through the night and not let any cars past the iron gate to the embassy, also the home of the ambassador.

"Honecker fought the fascists. To give him up would mean that there are fascists here," said a middle-aged protester, Svetlana Sveridenko.

The 79-year-old Honecker, who spent years in Gestapo jails during the Nazi period, has appealed to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and Russian President Boris Yeltsin to overturn the expulsion order, the Chilean Embassy said Friday.

But the Russian Information Agency said Yeltsin had not received the appeal Friday. The news agency also said North Korea has agreed to allow Honecker to go there for medical treatment, but there was no confirmation.

Honecker has been "a guest" at the home of an old friend, Ambassador Clodomiro Almeyda, since Wednesday night.

"Erich and Margot Honecker are guests in my home, and my wife is taking care of them," Almeyda said Thursday from Santiago, Chile's capital.

In the 1970s, Honecker's East Germany gave asylum to Almeyda, who was the defense minister under Chilean President Salvador Allende and was forced into exile by the bloody 1973 coup.

Chile bans all weapons exports

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The government on Friday suspended all arms exports because of the diversion to war-plagued Croatia of a shipment that had been authorized for Sri Lanka.

Defense Minister Patricio Rojas said an eleven-ton shipment of rocket launchers and automatic weapons intercepted and seized in Budapest apparently corresponds to a Chilean shipment authorized for export to Sri Lanka.

Rojas said the arms were dispatched at the Santiago airport customs by an official of the Chilean army's arms factory.

The man, who was not identified, "is under investigation," the minister said.

The arms were seized last Saturday by Hungarian authorities as they were being loaded on trucks for transportation to Croatia, the government said.

While an investigation is under way, "the suspension of exports of all kind of war material to all countries has been ordered," Rojas said.

The army, still commanded by former military President Gen. Augusto Pinochet, has refused to comment.

Pinochet, who took power in a 1973 coup, surrendered the presidency to an elected civilian, Patricio Aylwin in 1990.

Sudan, Iran friendship worries moderate Arab nations

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Iran's president came to Sudan for a three-day visit Friday, underlining a growing friendship between the two radical Muslim governments that is worrying moderate Arab nations and Western countries.

Iran has promised military aid to this economically strapped and politically isolated north-central African nation of 25 million people.

Sudan's military strongman, Lt. Gen. Omar Hassan el-Bashir, met President Hashemi Rafsanjani at the airport. It was the first visit here by an Iranian head state since Iran's 1979 revolution.

El-Bashir, whose junta seized power in a military coup in 1989, said the visit comes at a time when "the foreign powers are united against the Islamic nation." He expressed hope that Sudanese-Iranian relations will strengthen "to match the aspirations of the Islamic nation."

A story Friday in The New York Times said Iran appears to be "shifting its operations" to Sudan to compensate for a shrinking presence in Lebanon. It quoted unidentified Saudi, Egyptian and U.S. officials as saying Iran has sent up to 2,000 Revolutionary Guards to train Sudanese army and security forces.

Iran's defense minister, Akbar Borkan, began talks in Khartoum on Thursday. The official Sudan News Agency said Borkan discussed military cooperation with el-Bashir.

Egypt, Sudan's northern neighbor, is openly worried.

Cairo newspaper editor Samir Ragab, known to be close to President Hosni Mubarak, wrote last week that el-Bashir was making "a big mistake" by expecting Iran to save Sudan from its political and economic difficulties.

"El-Bashir and his aides will soon discover that Iranian fingers are meddling in their internal affairs. Only the Sudanese people will pay the price," Ragab wrote.

Mubarak has avoided public criticism of Iran but frequently has voiced misgivings about the threat to Egypt and other Arab countries of Sudan's Muslim radicals.

Sudan is fighting an 8½-year-old civil war against rebels in the mainly Christian and animist south, who refuse to accept el-Bashir's restoration of Islamic law.

The civil war, famine and refugees have drained Sudan's economy, saddled by a $17 billion foreign debt. Sudan lost major aid donors for supporting Iraq's invasion of Kuwait last year.

Hurricane hits Western Samoa

APIA, Western Samoa (AP) — New Zealand's foreign minister said Friday that Western Samoa looks like it was hit "by a sand blaster" after five days of pounding by Hurricane Val.

The hurricane weakened rapidly and by Friday had been downgraded to a storm.

At least a dozen people were killed in Western Samoa and one died in American Samoa as the hurricane battered the Pacific islands with winds of 150 mph and gusts even higher.

President Bush on Friday authorized federal disaster assistance for American Samoa, whose governor, Peter Tali Coleman, put damage at $83.2 million. Coleman said the storm left 200 injured and 4,000 people homeless, wiping out nearly all crops. American Samoa is a U.S. territory with a population of 38,000.

Western Samoa, an independent chain of islands with a population of 169,000, "was almost like a nuclear holocaust in parts," said Greg McGlone, an Australian army helicopter navigator.

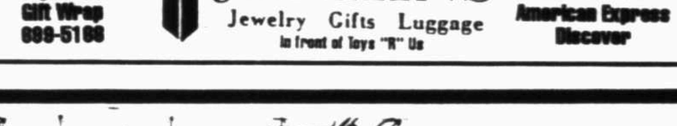

McGlone flew over the island of Savai'i on Thursday and reported houses flattened, roofs ripped off, trees snapped, roads full of debris and areas still flooded.

New Zealand's foreign minister, Don McKinnon, surveyed the devastation and estimated damage in the hundreds of millions. New Zealand acts as Western Samoa's official channel of communications outside the Pacific region.

Thousands are reported homeless. Many are reported sick after spending four days in wet clothes. Officials say shortages of fresh drinking water poses a health risk. Crops, roads, schools and hospitals were destroyed.

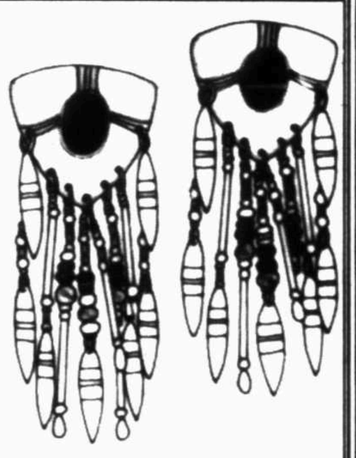

"It's like the country has been hit by a sand blaster and finished off by a water cannon ... every house has been affected in some way," McKinnon said.

New Zealand, France, Britain and Australia were sending relief supplies.

U.S. gives cautious welcome to Korea's non-aggression pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department welcomed on Friday the signing of a non-aggression agreement by the two Koreas but called on North Korea to take the additional step of allowing international inspection of its nuclear activities.

"This agreement is an important step toward reducing tension and the risk of war associated with the 40-year division of the Korean peninsula," the department said.

But it added that North Korean willingness to sign the agreement "does not in the least" absolve that country of its responsibility under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty to sign and implement an agreement that would permit outside experts to inspect its nuclear facilities.

"North Korea must address the critical issue of nuclear proliferation," it said.

Reflecting U.S. concern over the north's nuclear program, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney announced last month that plans to withdraw 6,000 U.S. troops from South Korea starting at the end of 1992 were being delayed.

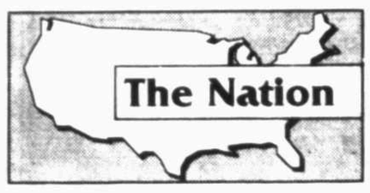

Cheney said he was convinced that North Korea was developing the capability to build nuclear weapons. U.S. alarm over the alleged program has been heightened by Iraq's ability to carry out a weapons program far more ambitious than experts had suspected.

The north's nuclear program is believed to be headquartered at Yongbyon, 60 miles north of Pyongyang, the capital. But North Korea joined the south Friday in a joint statement in which they vowed to work toward a nuclear-free peninsula.

The agreement signed Friday committed the two countries not to attack each other. They also pledged themselves to put a formal end to the Korean War and to help reunite the millions of relatives separated by their division.

If fully implemented, the accord could be a major step toward eventual reunification of the peninsula.

Richard Fisher, a Korea expert at the Heritage Foundation, said he believes that the restrained U.S. response to the agreement was warranted.

Sununu leaves White House with his chair

Sununu, who stepped down under fire, began his last day on the job, as usual, with a staff meeting and his morning briefing with President Bush.

At the staff meeting in the Roosevelt Room, Sununu plopped down in his seat, not realizing the chair was the one he sits in when in the Cabinet room, with a "chief of staff" nameplate on the back.

It was not until Bush stopped by to thank Sununu for his three years of work that Deputy Chief of Staff Andy Card rose to announce that Sununu's departure gift was the brown leather Cabinet chair he was sitting in, aides said.

The staff applauded him and Sununu thanked them for their work over the past three years, said White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

Later, boxes were stacked outside his office as his assistants packed up for the move from that choice location near the Oval Office to the Old Executive Office Building next door.

There, Sununu is to serve until March as a counselor to the president.

Congress calls for ban on truck radar detectors

■ Nation news/ 1,2C

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Congress has told the Transportation Department to write regulations banning radar detectors in interstate trucks and buses.

The provision was included in a $14.3 billion transportation appropriations bill that President Bush plans to sign Wednesday in Dallas.

A spokesman for the Federal Highway Administration's motor carrier division said the agency already is reviewing proposed rules and expects to publish them for public comment by Jan. 15, the congressional deadline.

Radar detectors are now legal in all states except Connecticut, Virginia and the District of Columbia, although New York has banned them in large trucks. An estimated 2 million are sold each year.

In the summer of 1990, a coalition of eight safety and automotive groups, along with the American Trucking Association, petitioned Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner to ban radar detectors in interstate trucks.

Research by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety found that half of all trucks on the highway are using radar detectors, and in some Western states two of every three trucks were equipped with the electronic "bird dogs."

The institute was concerned that detector use was particularly heavy among trucks that were speeding and among those carrying hazardous materials.

"High speed increases the chances of crashing, and when crashes involve tractor-trailers, the results too often are catastrophic," the institute's president, Brian O'Neill, said at the time.

When the Transportation Department appeared slow in drafting a ban on detectors in trucks, Sen Frank Lautenberg of New Jersey, chairman of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on transportation, decided to nudge the agency with legislation requiring a "notice of proposed rule making" by next month.

Strike three

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A man was sentenced to one year in jail for striking an umpire with an aluminum baseball bat while arguing over a suspended Little League game.

Steven Fuller, 46, of La Center, Wash., was convicted in October of second-degree assault with a deadly weapon. At a sentencing hearing Thursday, Superior Court Judge James Ladley allowed Fuller to serve his time on nights and weekends so he could keep operating his trucking business.

Umpire Robert Horal was injured May 16 after a Ridgefield-La Center Little League game. Fuller coached the La Center Giants, who were ahead when the game was called because of darkness.

Bulldogs beat Hanks

■ Midland High overcomes a sluggish first three quarters to defeat El Paso Hanks, 55-53, in a come-from-behind win Friday night.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

For three quarters Friday night, El Paso Hanks ruled Midland High.

Then came quarter No. 4.

MHS rallied from a 16-point third-quarter deficit to defeat the Knights, 55-53, using the fourth quarter to help ease the pain of an ugly first 24 minutes.

In the first game of the Friday night Chaparral Center doubleheader, Danny Gonzales hit a three-pointer at the buzzer to lead El Paso Bel Air (8-2) to a 52-49 win over Snyder (7-2). It was Class 4A Snyder's first loss in three games to a Class 5A team this season.

Against Midland High, Hanks shot 62.9 percent through the first three periods, while MHS plodded along at a rather uninspired 31.4 percent in the same span.

With Hanks holding a 51-39 lead entering the final quarter, however, fortunes changed. Balls turned to bricks for the Knights; shots that had earlier refused to land for the 'Dogs suddenly sounded the soft swish of nothing but net.

In that decisive, turn-around fourth period, Hanks failed to hit from the field until the 2:14 mark. Hanks finished the Midland High's Jeff Chancellor (54) battles Glenn Dickson of El Paso Hanks in Friday night action at the Chaparral Center. The Bulldogs came back from 16 points down for a 55-53 win. MHS next takes on El Paso Bel Air at 2 p.m. today in the Chap Center.

Howard has virtual lock on Heisman

■ The real suspense to this year's Heisman award will be whether Michigan receiver Desmond Howard wins by a record margin.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — After scoring on a 93-yard punt return against Ohio State last month, Michigan's Desmond Howard struck a Heisman Trophy pose in the end zone.

Tonight, Howard should be holding the trophy in his hands.

The Wolverines' wondrous wide receiver is considered a virtual lock to win college football's most prestigious award, which will be announced during a 30-minute NBC show from the Downtown Athletic Club.

Howard, a triple-threat star who was the nation's second-leading scorer, is expected to easily beat a field of contenders that includes three other players who will attend the ceremony — 1990 Heisman winner Ty Detmer of Brigham Young, Florida State quarterback Casey Weldon and Washington defensive tackle Steve Emtman.

There is a chance Howard could win by the most lopsided margin in

Niner playoff hopes tenuous

■ The Bears host the Bucs and the Chiefs visit the 49ers as the NFL's tradition of December Saturday games continues.

Associated Press

At this time of year, the San Francisco 49ers usually are playing to achieve home-field advantage in the NFL playoffs.

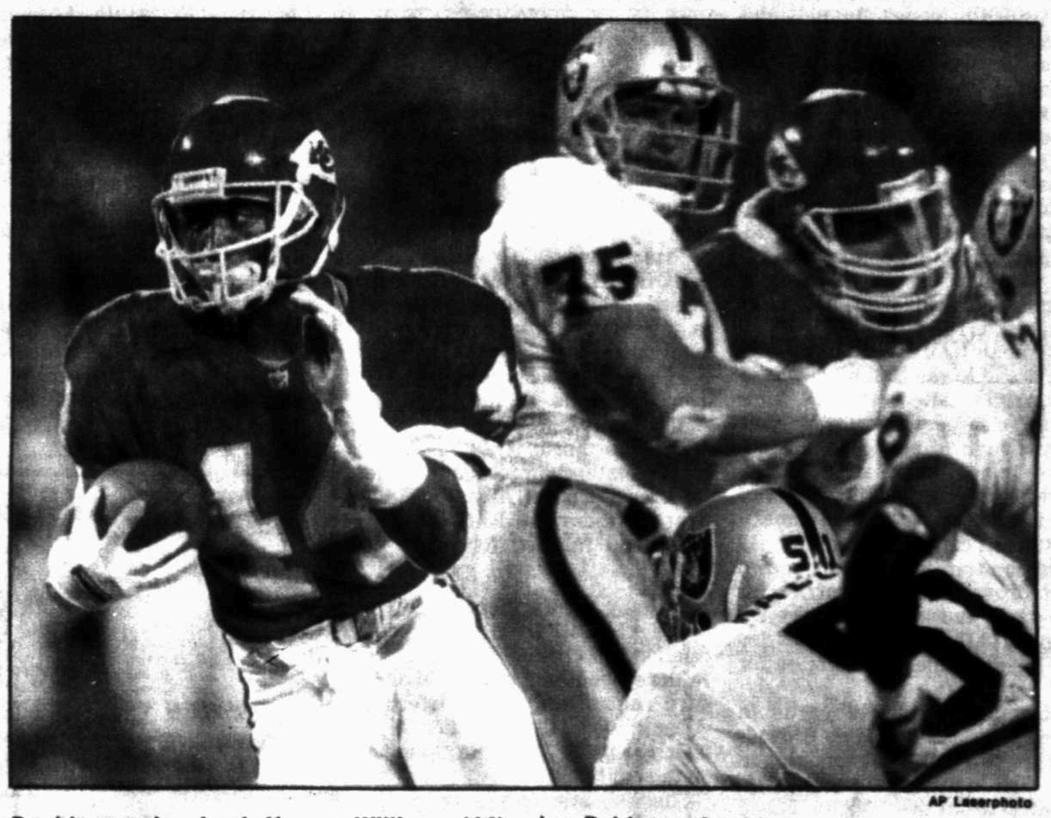

Today, they will be just trying to keep their playoff hopes alive.

Should they lose to the Kansas City Chiefs at home, however, they would be eliminated from the the playoffs for the first time in nine seasons. A victory would keep the 49ers (8-6) alive for a wild-card spot. Two wins plus two losses each by New Orleans and Atlanta (each 9-5) would give San Francisco a sixth consecutive NFC West title.

Steve Bono will be trying to win for the fifth time in six starts at quarterback for the 49ers.

Kansas City (9-5) has clinched a playoff berth and still has a shot at the AFC West title. Mark Vlasic, who had a strong second half in place of Steve DeBerg in a 20-17 overtime

Cambridge waits for injunction ruling

Associated Press

AUSTIN — University of Texas forward Dexter Cambridge was not provided proper legal counsel in a meeting with an NCAA investigator at which he admitted accepting a check from a booster of his junior college, a UT official testified Friday in federal court.

U.S. District Judge Walter Smith said he would rule by noon today on Cambridge's request for an injunction allowing him to play until a trial can be held on the player's lawsuit.

Longhorns coach Tom Penders, who has consistently stood behind his player, said he "absolutely" said he would play Cambridge in Saturday night's game against Connecticut if the injunction is issued.

The 6-7, 225-pound senior from the Bahamas was the team's leading scorer for the first four games, before a judge allowed a 10-day restraining order to lapse.

Butch Worley, associate athletic director, testified Friday that he asked the UT system's associate general counsel to provide a school lawyer to represent Cambridge in a meeting with an NCAA investigator on Nov. 13.

Worley, who oversees University of Texas compliance with NCAA rules, said he never got a reply on the request and that no lawyer was at the meeting, at which Cambridge volunteered that he accepted a $7,000 gift from a booster at Lon Morris Junior College at Jacksonville, Texas.

Cambridge's lawsuit contends he was denied rights of due process guaranteed him by the Texas Constitution.

William Cunningham, president of UT-Austin, said Friday that although the school must follow the NCAA's mandate to suspend Cambridge, it does not have to follow the legislative body's due process laws.

"We simply carry out what the NCAA has told us to do," Cunningham said. He added that he disapproved of the punishment and said the university will continue its appeals because "it's too harsh."

Senior Texas forward Dexter Cambridge (left) is accompanied outside the Federal Courthouse in Austin by teammates Terrance Rancher (center) and Michael Chaplin.

The NCAA told the school to end the player's collegiate eligibility because it considered him a professional.

Cambridge responded by filing his lawsuit to stop the university from doing so. On Nov. 20, he received a 10-day temporary restraining order against the school, and Smith extended the order for three days before allowing it to lapse on Dec. 6.

In the four games in which he played, Cambridge averaged 23.5 points and 12 rebounds, leading the team in both categories.

Cambridge accepted the $7,000 checkfrom Lon Morris supporter Keith Heingartner, who he said gave the money as a graduation gift and reward for being named a junior college All-American.

The NCAA wrote the university a letter directing that Cambridge repay the full amount and give up a year of eligibility. Since he is a senior, that would mean ending his collegiate career.

If Smith allows Cambridge to play until a trial is held, that probably would make the issue moot, said the player's attorney, Phil Maxwell of Austin, since the season likely would be over before a trial could begin.

Rangers sign Phillies' Thon for $700,000

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Dickie Thon, who had wanted to join a team where he could play regularly, left the Philadelphia Phillies on Friday and agreed to a one-year contract with the Texas Rangers for a guaranteed $700,000.

The 33-year-old shortstop hit .252 with nine home runs and 44 RBIs in 146 games with the Phillies in 1991. He led the club in games started with 144, was second in at-bats (539) and third in hits (136), total bases (189) and stolen bases (11).

The Phillies were intent of phasing out Thon, and allowed him to become a free agent by not offering salary arbitration in the five days following the World Series.

Thon also was interested in San Francisco because of his close relationship with Giants general manager Al Rosen, but chose Texas because he felt he could get the most playing time.

"I think he looked at the opportunity here and I think he'll get a lot of at-bats," Texas general manager Tom Grieve said. "We've got several young shortstops who are a year or two or three away, but in the meantime, we're in good shape having a veteran around."

Thon, who made $1.25 million in 1991, will get $600,000 next season and he can earn an additional $375,000 in performance bonuses. The Rangers have an option for 1993 at a base salary ranging from $650,000 to $900,000, depending on how regularly Thon plays in 1992. If the option isn't exercised, Texas must pay a $100,000 buyout.

Thon's agent, Dan Grigsby, said the shortstop was thinking about Texas at the same time the Rangers were thinking about him.

"It actually started when Dickie was in Philadelphia and was being told they projected (Kim) Batiste as a starter and said they'd like him back, but in a diminished role," Grigsby said.

Hoosiers dominate BU

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — It took Alan Henderson a while to get going. When he did, even coach Bob Knight was impressed.

Top 25

The Indiana freshman scored 20 points, all in the second half, as the No. 13 Hoosiers beat cold-shooting Boston University 88-47 Friday night in the first round of the Indiana Classic.

"Henderson was active and moved well," Knight said. "He started slow, just didn't seem to be coordinated. The ball was getting away from him. But as the game moved on, he started picking things up and made a lot of good moves around the basket.

"His being active really created some good things for us," Knight said. "He got himself in position, and then he did something with it."

Central Michigan played Tennessee-Martin in the second game for a berth against the host Hoosiers in Saturday night's championship.

Indiana (4-2), which has never lost a game in the 18-year history of its tournament at Assembly Hall, held Boston (2-2) to 19 percent shooting in the first half and 23 percent for the game.

Pierce misses free throw record

Associated Press

BOSTON — Ricky Pierce finally missed a foul shot and failed to set the NBA record for consecutive free throws and the Seattle SuperSonics faltered Friday night, losing to Boston 117-97.

NBA

Pierce began the game with a streak of 75 foul shots in a row, three short of matching Calvin Murphy's mark. But he missed his first attempt of the night with 3:30 left in the third quarter, shooting off the back of the rim.

Pierce led Seattle with 21 points, but that wasn't enough. Larry Bird, who has the third-longest foul shooting streak at 71, scored 28 points for the Celtics as they won for the ninth time in 10 games.

After Pierce missed his first shot, he made his second, cutting the Celtics' lead to 77-61. Bird then hit a layup, giving Boston its biggest lead to that point.

The Sonics trailed 89-73 before going on an 11-2 spurt. But starting with a layup by Rick Fox and led by Brian Shaw's 12 points, Boston outscored Seattle 26-13 the rest of the way.

Shaw had 16 of his 24 points in the fourth quarter. Seattle, which lost its sixth straight road game, got 19 points from Eddie Johnson and 18 from Derrick McKey.

The Celtics scored the first four points and led 26-23 after one quarter and 38-35 with 5:38 left in the second.

Shaw's layup then launched a 15-5 run that put the Celtics ahead 53-40. They got the last six points in the run on Ed Pinckney's layup after his own offensive rebound, and a jumper and two free throws by Bird.

Boston's Kevin McHale, who missed the previous nine games with ankle problems, had all 11 of his points in the second quarter.

Leading 55-46 at halftime, the Celtics got the first six points of the third quarter on baskets by Kevin Gamble, Bird and Reggie Lewis, boosting the lead to 61-46.

At a halftime ceremony, the Celtics retired guard Dennis Johnson's number "3," raising it to the Boston Garden rafters on a green-and-white banner. Johnson retired before last season after helping the Celtics two two NBA titles in seven years with the team.

Suns 112, Spurs 107

SAN ANTONIO — Jeff Hornacek scored 26 points and Tom Chambers added 24 as the Phoenix Suns won their ninth consecutive game.

Sean Elliott's season-high 32 points led the Spurs. David Robinson had 30 points and 15 rebounds for San Antonio, which lost its second consecutive home game after opening the season with eight straight wins on its own court. Antoine Carr contributed 20 points.

Pacers 124, Mavericks 108

INDIANAPOLIS — Reggie Miller scored 17 of his 21 first-half points in the second period to start Indiana toward a victory over Dallas.

Chuck Person led Indiana with 32 points. Miller added 30 and Rik Smits had 16 points and 13 rebounds.

Derek Harper led Dallas with 18 points. Terry Davis and Rolando Blackmon added 16 each.

Miller scored 17 of Indiana's first 23 points of the second period, including three 3-pointers as the Pacers took the lead for good. He led the Pacers on a 23-11 surge

Heat 112, Hornets 108

CHARLOTTE — Rony Seikaly had game-highs of 28 points and 14 rebounds as the Miami Heat beat the Charlotte Hornets.

After eight lead changes in the fourth quarter, Keith Askins put the Heat ahead 107-106 with a follow shot. Dell Curry missed from the corner for the Hornets and Glen Rice answered with a short jumper to put Miami up 109-106 with 29.3 seconds left.

76ers 104, Timberwolves 95

MINNEAPOLIS — Hersey Hawkins scored 23 points and Charles Barkley 16 with 14 rebounds as the Philadelphia 76ers won at Minnesota for the first time ever.

Charles Shackleford scored a season-high 15 points and grabbed 13 rebounds as the 76ers topped the 100-point mark for just the third time in 11 games.

Bulls 99, Knicks 89

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan, held back from a fight with Greg Anthony, finished with 27 points as the Chicago Bulls won for the 16th time in 17 games.

With 4:44 left in the third quarter, Jordan drove toward the basket and Anthony stepped in the way, trying to draw an offensive foul. The two players collided and Jordan fell to the floor.

Memphis stuns Rotan in Class A semifinals, 17-15

LUBBOCK — Jay Runnels and Brian Brown each ran for more than 100 yards and Lamont Dixon kicked a 38-yard field goal with 4:03 remaining Friday night, boosting Memphis to a 17-15 victory over Rotan in the Class A state semifinals.

Rotan took a 15-14 lead with 10 minutes to go on Eric Smith's 26-yard touchdown pass to Trey Carillo. Landon Alls put the Yellowhammers ahead with a 2-point conversion run.

Memphis took over at its own 30 and drove to the Rotan 21, where the drive stalled. Dixon's kick barely cleared the crossbar, but was enough to help Memphis advance to next week's state championship game against the winner of Friday's Oakwood-Runge game.

Runnels carried 15 times for 119 yards and an 80-yard touchdown and Brown added 15 carries for 125 yards and a score for the Cyclones (13-1). Rotan (13-1) was led by David Daniel's 26 carries for 107 yards.

Memphis drove 49 yards in three plays and scored on Brown's 37-yard run with 8:50 remaining in the first quarter. Dixon's extra-point kick put the Cyclones ahead 7-0.

Rotan then evened the score on a five-play, 83-yard drive that was capped by Smith's 1-yard touchdown run.

The Yellowhammers drove to the Memphis 9 late in the first half, but Tyrone Daniel's pass on a fourth-down halfback option play fell incomplete, leaving the game tied at halftime.

Memphis regained the lead on the first play of the second half, when Runnels kept on an option play and raced 80 yards to put the Cyclones up 14-7.

Groesbeck 21, Edna 13

AUSTIN — Senior Brandon Bennett threw for a career high 246 yards, leading the Groesbeck Goats to a upset over the previously undefeated Edna Cowboys in a Class 3A semifinal game.

Groesbeck (13-2) advances to the championship game against the winner of Saturday's Burnet-Southlake Carroll game. Edna, which crossed midfield on only three plays of the second half, ends the season at 14-1.

Groesbeck led 14-13 at halftime after scoring twice within 1:26 of the first quarter.

The Goats took a 7-0 lead on Dwrain Cooper's 5-yard run, which was set up by Bennett's 44-yard pass to Tyrone Brown.

Edna returned the kickoff to the 43, and two plays later Adrian Robinson threw a 57-yard touchdown pass to Patrick Bitter, tying the game.

But on the second play after the ensuing kickoff, Lenoy Jones went 75 yards, putting Groesbeck ahead for good.

A&M Consolidated 38
Austin Westlake 6

AUSTIN — Jeff Watson passed for 221 yards, including four first-half touchdowns, leading A&M Consolidated to a stunning victory over Austin Westlake in a Class 4A semifinal.

The Tigers (13-2) advanced to the state title game next week against the winner of Saturday's match between Sweetwater and Carthage. Westlake, which beat A&M Consolidated 24-14 in last year's semifinals, ended its season at 13-1-1.

HOUSTON — Marc Tidwell passed 274 and two touchdowns and Kelvin Thompson caught eight passes for 170 yards, leading No. 1 Schulenburg to a victory over Grapeland in the Class 2A state semifinals.

The Shorthorns (15-0) advanced to the state championship game next week against Albany, which beat Farmersville 23-14 Friday. Grapeland finished its season at 12-2-1.

Albany 23, Farmersville 14

WEATHERFORD — Buster Shelton, who rushed for 143 yards in the second half, scored on a 50-yard run to lead the undefeated Albany Lions to a 23-14 victory over Farmersville in the Class 2A state semifinals.

Shelton's scoring run culminated a 57-yard drive with just over six minutes remaining.

Lee boys gain semifinals

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — The Midland Lee Rebels are beginning to find themselves on the basketball floor about the same time that junior Martin Lattibeaudiere is finding his three-point bomb.

Lattibeaudiere scored 30 points, hitting 6-of-7 shots from three-point range, to lead Lee to an 84-55 win over San Antonio Central Catholic in the second round of the Concho City Invitational.

SACC was the defending champion of the Concho City tournament, but now Lee has a chance to make a run at this year's title with the victory. Lee, now 7-4 for the year, will face 9-3 Austin McCallum today at noon in the tournament semifinals. McCallum defeated Abilene Cooper 79-60 and Lubbock Coronado 94-86 in its two wins, leaving Lee as the only District 4-5A team left in the championship hunt.

The other semifinal today pits Lubbock Monterey and El Paso Del Valle against each other. The two semifinal winners meet at 7:30 p.m. while the losers play at 6 p.m. for third place.

Against SACC, Lee got 18 points from Jeramy Skaggs and 12 points from Keenan Henry. Lee held a 24-8 lead after the first quarter.

"We've played two pretty good games down here," said Lee coach Jon House. "I think we were embarrassed against Lubbock Coronado last week and we had some good old Lee workouts this past week."

MHS: 'Dawgs slowed by injury, illness game hitting just 1-for-7 field goals in the fourth period, their only points during the final eight minutes.

(From 1B)

MHS, meanwhile, connected on 5-of-10 from the field in the fourth and hit an additional 5-of-11 from the free throw line in its comeback quarter.

"I kinda thought we couldn't get anything called by the officials in the last quarter," Hanks head coach Danny Lopez said. "It's hard to set screens when you're getting called for fouls all the time.

"It's extremely difficult for our kids to play. Everytime we'd come down the floor, the official's whistle would get blown."

The Bulldogs outscored the Knights 16-2 in the final quarter, reeling off 13 straight points to take the lead, 52-51, at the 2:53 mark. Antwan Goodley's shot from the low post gave the dogs their first lead since the opening ticks of the second quarter.

Hanks' sole bucket of the period put the Knights back in the lead, 53-52, with 2:14 remaining.

MHS recaptured the lead for good when Hanks' Glenn Dickson fouled MHS' Joseph Golding. Golding made both free throws to put the 'Dawgs up, 54-53 at the 2:00 mark.

Scoring was done until the :02 mark when Mike Melzer hit the first of two freebies to give the 'Dawgs their two point lead to end the game. Told to do so by MHS head coach Jack Stephenson, Melzer missed his second free throw, forcing Hanks to put up a length-of-the-court, hail-Mary shot as the game ended.

Needless to say, the Knights' final shot fell short.

Melzer led MHS scorers with 13 points; Antwan Goodley had 11.

Hanks was led by Glenn Dickson, who had 21 points on 9-of-11 shooting from the field.

"This is a crazy game," Stephenson said. "(Assistant) Coach (Craig) Raughton told me somewhere in the third quarter that if we could just get a run going as poorly as we had been playing, it would really help our program.

"Tonight's the best I've seen Antwan play in a long time. And Watu Todd came on and had a good game."

Stephenson was forced to do without the full-time services of a pair of regular starters. Phil Koss saw limited action due to a stress fracture of his foot, while Rob Foster was kept at bay with the flu. In addition, Scott Lunsford was still feeling the effects of a flu that had been with him virtually the entire week.

"I think our pressure in the fourth quarter made a difference. Plus, they played a little conservatively," Stephenson said.

Saturday's games have Odessa Permian meeting Hanks at 12:30 p.m., while Midland High faces Bel Air at 2 p.m.

Lady Tors pummel Monterey

Staff Report

LAMESA — Saresa Butler pumped in 31 points and the unbeaten Class 4A Lamesa Lady Tornadoes defeated Class 5A power Lubbock Monterey 79-56 here Friday night.

But Butler had plenty of help as Keicha Mason hit for 18 points and Emmy DeFee had 10 points.

The Lamesa girls are now 12-0 on the season while Monterey fell to 7-5.

"We're enjoying this start right now," said Lamesa girls coach Terry Simpson. "Monterey is a very good team, but we got out to a big lead early."

The Lady Tors travel to Merkel Monday and will meet Big Spring Friday.

King wins first-round match

PRINCEVILLE, Hawaii (AP) — Defending champion Betsy King defeated Caroline Keggi 4 and 3 during Friday's rain-soaked second round of the $500,000 LPGA World Match Play Championship.

King was 2-up at the turn when rain forced a 40-minute delay at the Princeville Resort's 6,212-yard, par-72 Makai Course.

King and Keggi halved the next four holes before King birdied the par-4, 316-yard 14th and shot par on the par-4, 355-yard 15th to win the match.

"We both struggled a little bit," King said. "I am happy to win. Make a lot of pars today and you win a few holes.

"This is the most rain while playing on this course for us," King said. "Playing the rain, if you carry the ball longer this is an advantage. I am just happy I gave it my best shot."

KC faithful enraged at Royals GM

By Doug Tucker
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — "I'm glad the Boston Red Sox traded Babe Ruth," said one angry Kansas Citian. "That protects us from having made the worst trade in the history of baseball."

Other fans, lighting up the switchboard at Royals Stadium and the town's two sports talk radio shows, wanted to know what time general manager Herk Robinson's plane arrived from baseball's winter meetings.

"I want to be there to punch him in the nose," said one caller. Another said he planned to sue the Royals. He sounded like he meant it.

On Friday, less than 48 hours after shipping two-time Cy Young Award winner Bret Saberhagen to the New York Mets in the biggest and most controversial trade in the 23-year history of the Royals franchise, Robinson admitted he underestimated fan reaction.

"It was probably worse than we expected," Robinson said. "We anticipated it, but not to this degree."

But Robinson remained unwavering. The Royals, he points out, finished in sixth place the past two years in the AL West. And with the addition of Gregg Jefferies, Kevin McReynolds, Keith Miller, Wally Joyner and Chris Gwynn, there should not be any sixth-place finishes next year.

"This time a week ago, I thought we had a team that was going to lose 90 games next year," he said. "Now I think we have a team that can expect to win our division."

Win or lose, the team that takes the field on opening day 1992 is going to be as much as 70 percent different from the one that opened 1991. In all likelihood, there will be new men at first base, second base, shortstop, third base, right field and left field.

The only familiar faces will be George Brett, who has moved over from first base to designated hitter, center fielder Brian McRae and catcher Mike Macfarlane.

In addition, of course, somebody besides Saberhagen will be the opening day pitcher. McReynolds, Jefferies and Miller have left the Mets for the Royals, who also sent utility infielder Bill Pecota to New York in the blockbuster deal of the 1991 winter meetings.

McReynolds, 32, who hit .259 with 16 home runs and 74 RBI last year, probably will be in right field. Gwynn, 27, obtained in a trade with the Los Angeles Dodgers where he hit .252 with 22 RBIs, is a good bet to be in left field. Jefferies, 24, led all Mets regulars with a .272 average and drove in 62 runs. He's a possibility in left field, but is more likely to replace Kevin Seitzer at third base.

Miller, 27, will replace Terry Shumpert at second base. He started at four different positions last season while winding up with a .258 average and 12 RBIs.

Joyner, in a bit of a surprise, signed a one-year, $4.2 million free agent contract after turning down a long-term offer by the California Angels and will step in as the everyday first baseman. At shortstop will be David Howard, who beat out the injury-prone and inconsistent Kurt Stillwell during last season.

Robinson may not be through yet. He's still looking for a left-handed relief pitcher. But despite all the adverse reaction, he is not apologizing for anything.

"We did it because we thought it was in the best interests of our ballclub," Robinson said. "We simply did not feel that we could live with the potential of a sixth- or seventh-place finish. This town will not support that kind of ballclub. We simply couldn't do it. The fans don't want it. We took some action to try to avoid that plight."

One reason for fans' negative reaction may be Robinson's unproven status as a baseball man. After almost two decades in charge of the Royals' business operations, he replaced John Schuerholz last year when Schuerholz took a job with the Atlanta Braves.

Robinson admitted the blockbuster deal might be viewed as a bit of a career roll of the dice on his part.

"I guess I also thought if we didn't do anything and finished in seventh place it would be a career gamble, too," he said. "You're not paid to stand pat. If we didn't do anything, I knew where we were going to finish. I didn't feel good about our ballclub for next year. I didn't feel it was fair, knowing that and knowing that we had options available to us that could improve our ballclub, not to take advantage of them."

Wheaton, Stich reach Grand Slam Cup semis

Associated Press

MUNICH, Germany — Hard-serving David Wheaton of the United States and Wimbledon champion Michael Stich of Germany moved to a semifinal meeting with victories Friday in the Grand Slam Cup tennis tournament.

Wheaton saved four set points in the second set to beat Todd Woodbridge of Australia 6-4, 7-6 (8-6).

Stich, aided by a disputed call in the key game of the second set, beat France's Guy Forget 7-6 (10-8), 6-4.

"Bad calls sometimes are part of the game," Forget said. "You have to deal with it."

With Forget serving at 4-4, after four deuces and two break points, a Stich shot that appeared out was intentionally hit into the net by Forget.

The linesman called the Stich ball good and the decision was upheld by French umpire Bruno Rebeuh, giving Stich the point and the game to go up 5-4.

He then held serve to win the match.

"I had my chances to win. That last point I saw out. Sometimes you have to deal with mistakes," Forget said.

Stich beat Forget in the tie-breaker in the first set after each had only one break point against their serve in each of their six winning service games.

Forget had a chance to win the set, leading 5-4 with two serves left. However, Stich tied it with a backhand passing shot for 5-5.

Irish defensive coach under fire

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Rumors were rampant Friday that Notre Dame defensive coordinator Gary Darnell was under pressure to leave even as the Irish prepared for their Sugar Bowl game against Florida.

Darnell said he was in contact with Northwestern, which is seeking a new coach, and said he is good friends with newly appointed Texas coach John Mackovic, who is looking for assistants.

The Irish defense suffered through one of its worst seasons ever under Darnell, and was very porous in the final three games of a 9-3 regular season.

Notre Dame blew a 24-point lead in a loss to Tennessee, gave up 35 points in losing to Penn State, and surrended 42 points in edging Hawaii.

Reports had Darnell headed at one time for Tulane, interviewing for jobs at Northwestern and Texas, or even fired.

"I hadn't heard that one," Darnell said of the dismissal report. "If that's the case, it's news to me. People get one tidbit of something, and try to make something out of something that's not there."

In addition to the Northwestern contact, Darnell lent credence to reports he may be angling for the defensive assistant's job under Makovic.

"He and I are good friends," Darnell said. "There's a reason something like that gets started. Plans are right now to do what I'm doing."

No. 18 Notre Dame is preparing for its New Year's Day game against third-ranked Florida (10-1), but Darnell was absent from practice Sunday, a fact coach Lou Holtz refused to explain.

"I'm not at liberty to say where he is now," Holtz said at the time. "He has a very, very valid reason not to be here, but it's not my place to say."

Since then, Holtz has run the defense, even when Darnell was present.

"Something like that is just part of the job," Darnell said. "I've always lived by the philosophy of follow when you have to and lead when necessary.

"This has been a tough time, but getting ready for Florida and recruiting at the same time is difficult."

Holtz hired Darnell two years ago from Florida, where he was a defensive coordinator and, for seven games of the 1989 season, was interim head coach.

Cowboys, Oilers travel to hostile environments

Beuerlein tries to forget last Eagle game

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Steve Beuerlein says he's trying to block out the memory of the Philadelphia Eagles sacking Troy Aikman 11 times.

The Eagles, with defensive end Clyde Simmons getting 4½ of those 11 sacks, almost buried Aikman in the turf of Texas Stadium during a 24-0 victory over the Cowboys Sept. 15. They held Dallas to a total offense of 90 yards.

Now, the Eagles host the Cowboys Sunday in a game vital to the playoff hopes of the teams, each 9-5.

This time Beuerlein is at quarterback for Dallas, replacing Aikman, who still is nursing a knee injury that sidelined him the last 2½ games.

The Eagles, too, come into the game with a backup quarterback. Jeff Kemp stands in for Jim McMahon, who suffered four fractured ribs Sunday in a 19-14 victory over the New York Giants.

Beuerlein is more than aware of the Eagles' defense, which leads the league in overall defense and against the rush and pass, a triple accomplished by only four teams in the history of the NFL.

"Obviously they rate the best defensive team in the NFL from a statistical standpoint," Beuerlein said. "And they are even more impressive on film. It's going to be without a doubt the biggest challenge of the year for me."

"They are on a roll," he said of the Eagles, who have won six straight. "Their confidence is high."

Beuerlein admitted that he can't help recalling the sight of Simmons, Reggie White, Jerome Brown and company banging into Aikman like runaway trucks.

"You can't help but think about it. They've been terrors on quarterbacks for the last several years," he said. "And it seems like every year they keep getting better and better and better.

"But the distraction part of it is just something you have to black out. I think that if you get caught up and worried about who's coming after you, that type of mentality, it takes your concentration away away from down field.

"You know when you go in to play the Eagles you're going to get hit and you're probably going to get hit a lot. You just have to block it out as much as you possibly can and try and stands strong in the pocket and make the plays."

Beuerlein noted that if he worries about who is coming and from where they're coming he's not going to make the right decisions, saying, "A lot of bad things are going to happen.

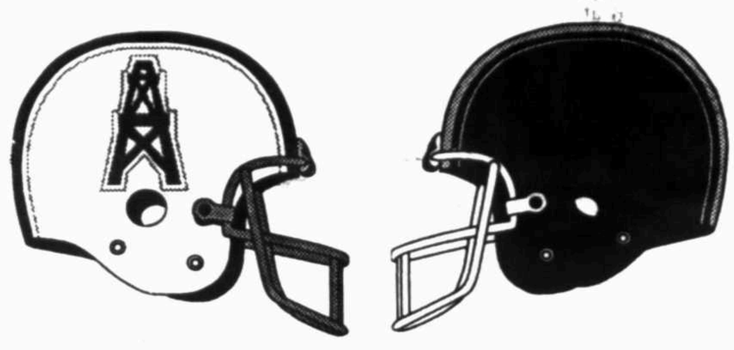

"I have confidence in the offensive line . . . it's going to be a challenge because they were embarrassed last time by the Eagles. The whole organization was embarassed. We really want to do what we can to set the record straight."

Beuerlein, since replacing Aikman, completed the upset of Washington and and started and won the next two games against Pittburgh and New Orleans.

Kemp has rallied the Eagles to their last two victories, over Houston and the Giants.

Run-and-shoot hits frigid Cleveland Stadium

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — The run-and-shoot offense is custom-made for warm, cozy stadiums, such as the Houston Astrodome and the Pontiac Silverdome.

The poor footing and swirling winds in a place like Cleveland Stadium can make it much more difficult. Or so the Cleveland Browns hope.

"December in Cleveland is not going to be Houston, Texas," said Oilers coach Jack Pardee, whose team travels to Cleveland for a game against the Browns on Sunday. "I hope the outcome of the game is not totally in the hands of the weather. I hope it will be in the hands of the players."

The rap on the run-and-shoot has always been its supposed vulnerability to bad weather conditions. Because it is largely dependent on the success of the passing game, winds and precipitation that reduce the accuracy of passes and mud that reduces the mobility of receivers can become the allies of the defense.

It's one reason the Browns have always liked having a big, powerful fullback on their roster, from Marion Motley and Jim Brown in the 1950s and '60s to Kevin Mack and Leroy Hoard today. A big back, they reason, can slog through any conditions.

"Probably the biggest factor in throwing the ball is the wind, more than the footing," Cleveland coach Bill Belichick said. "The footing is pretty much equal — if it's slippery for the offense, it's slippery for the defense.

"But as far as the wind conditions, if you throw the ball into a strong wind or a crosswind or swirling winds, it can affect your accuracy or your ability to make certain throws. If it was extremely cold, that also would affect some of the ball-handling skills."

Pardee's four-receiver offense didn't get much of a chance to test itself in bad conditions last year. The Oilers played at Cleveland in mid-November in decent weather, and Moon destroyed the Browns' defense with five touchdown passes. Two of the Oilers' five December games last year were at home, and one of the others was indoors at Seattle.

Over the years, even before installing the run-and-shoot offense, Houston has had a particularly tough time in cold weather. The Oilers have played five games in temperatures of 22 degrees or less, and they've lost four of them.

The weather forecast for Sunday in Cleveland: breezy, with a high temperature of 37.

Receiver Ernest Givins said Oilers players are well aware of the difficulties posed by taking their offense outdoors late in the year.

"If we let the weather play a big part, we won't win the game," Givins said. "A lot of people say the Oilers can't play outside the dome. It's a matter of us trying to prove to ourselves, not to outsiders, that we can win on the road outdoors."

Houston (10-4) already has clinched the AFC Central title, but the Oilers still are trying to earn a bye during the first week of the playoffs. The Browns (6-8) are mathematically alive for a wild-card berth, but it's a long shot.

NFL: Lions can win 11 games for first time since 1962 victory over San Diego last Sunday, will start at quarterback for the Chiefs.

(From 1B)

The Chicago Bears (10-4) can clinch a wild-card spot and possibly their seventh NFC Central title in eight seasons by beating Tampa Bay (2-12) at home Saturday.

Other clubs who have clinched playoff spots are Buffalo, Houston, Washington, Denver and the Los Angeles Raiders. Buffalo is the AFC East champion, and Houston is the AFC Central winner. Washington is the NFC East champ.

Others still alive for playoff spots are Miami, the New York Jets, Cleveland, Seattle, Dallas, Philadelphia, Detroit, Minnesota, Atlanta and New Orleans.

The Raiders play New Orleans Monday night.

Buccaneers at Bears

Tampa Bay, which has trouble almost any place it plays, will be at Soldier Field, where the Bears have won nine of their past 10 games. Chicago holds a 21-6 lead in the series.

Giants at Redskins

The Redskins (13-1) have a division title and home-field advantage throughout the NFC playoffs, but they would like a second straight win over the Giants, who had won the six previous meetings. New York (7-7) is playing out the string.

Cardinals at Broncos

The Cardinals (4-10) not only would like to beat Denver (10-4) at Mile High Stadium, where the Broncos are 6-1 this season, but they would like to score, something they failed to do in the past two meetings between the teams.

Lions at Packers

The Lions (10-4), sparked by Barry Sanders, the NFC's leading rusher with 1,355 yards, can win 11 games for the first time since 1962. The pass-catching of Sterling Sharpe (61 receptions for 862 yards and four touchdowns) has been a bright spot for Green Bay (3-11).

Seahawks at Falcons

The Falcons (9-5), battling for their first NFC West title since 1980, will be seeking a five-game winning streak for the first time since their division-championship season. Andre Rison needs 133 yards to become then first wide receiver to record consecutive 1,000-yard seasons in Atlanta history. Seattle (6-8) will be trying to stay unbeaten in five meetings with the Falcons.

Dolphins at Chargers

This could be a long game. The Dolphins (8-6) and Chargers (3-11) have gone into overtime three times in their last six meetings. Miami's Dan Marino has passed for 957 yards in three games against the Chargers, but San Diego won two of them.

Patriots at Jets

The Jets (7-7) will be seeking a second straight sweep of New England (5-9). New York won the first meeting this year 28-21 on Ken O'Brien's 3-yard touchdown pass with 57 seconds left.

Rams at Vikings

Minnesota (7-7) will try to keep its playoff hopes alive by beating the Rams (3-11) for the fourth straight time. Los Angeles last beat the Vikings in 1978.

Bengals at Steelers

Maybe Pittsburgh (5-9) should pretend the game against the Bengals (2-12) is at Cincinnati. The Steelers have not beaten the Bengals at home since 1987.

Bills at Colts

The Colts (1-13) should be just what the Bills (12-2) need to secure home-field advantage throughout the AFC playoffs.

Dennis Johnson honored at Boston garden

BOSTON (AP) — The rafters at Boston Garden got more crowded Friday night.

Dennis Johnson's number was retired by the Boston Celtics at a halftime ceremony, and a new green-and-white banner bearing that number "3" was raised to the ceiling.

It settled beside two other banners, each honoring eight Celtics, that were filled to capacity.

All the Celtics, wearing green T-shirts bearing a caricature of Johnson, came out of the locker room for a presentation by Celtics center Robert Parish. Johnson received his old Celtics jersey, inside a frame, from Parish.

"Having you as a teammate made our job a lot easier," Parish said.

He spoke on behalf of himself, Larry Bird and Kevin McHale, three of Johnson's former teammates on two NBA championship teams and future bannermates.

"I had the time of my life and a pleasure playing with each and every one of you," Johnson, who spent seven seasons with the Celtics, said in remarks directed at Parish, Bird and McHale.

He recalled that on his first visit to Boston after being traded by Phoenix for center Rick Robey in 1983, he saw a newspaper article questioning whether he fit in with the Celtics.

"This tells me that you really let me fit in," Johnson said moments before he raised the banner to the rafters.

Former Celtic Tom Heinsohn, who hosted the ceremonies and whose number also has been retired, read a message from Magic Johnson, who Dennis Johnson guarded when the Celtics played the Los Angeles Lakers in three NBA Finals.

In attendance was Dennis Johnson's former coach with Boston, K.C. Jones.

Norris retains title in 12-round decision

By David Crary
Associated Press Writer

PARIS — Terry Norris gave his opponent an A-plus Friday night, raising the question of what grade Norris deserved.

The 24-year-old champion from Campo, Calif., tirelessly pounded out a unanimous 12-round decision over his top-ranked challenger, Argentina's Jorge Castro, to retain his WBC superwelterweight crown.

"He stayed in there," Norris said. "He was a tough opponent. I'd give him an A-plus."

Already a victor this year over Sugar Ray Leonard and Donald Curry, Norris made his fifth defense of the title he won in March 1990 from John Mugabi.

His victory followed two other title fights on the undercard. Panama's Victor Cordoba and France's Anaclet Wamba, in their first defenses, each recorded 11th-round knockouts over Italian challengers: Cordoba over Vincenzo Nardiello for the WBC cruiserweight crown, Wamba over Massimiliano Duran for the WBA supermiddleweight title.

Norris, now 30-3, was the star attraction of the evening and took the ring clad in gaudy white-fringed shorts and red-fringed shoes.

The Californian, weighing 151 pounds, immediately went on the attack, exhaling loudly with each punch. But Castro, ranked as No. 1 contender by the WBA and WBC, wasn't intimidated and rarely backed away.

By the fourth and fifth round, Castro was covering up against the ropes, while Norris hammered at him, looking for an opening.

But the Argentine, who weighed in at 151¾, belied his reputation for lackadaisical training by surging back in the sixth and seventh rounds, in which the 24-year-olds appeared virtually even.

"In the fourth round, I thought I beat him," Norris said. "I think I broke his nose and I started going for his nose. But he came back."

"It was a big surprise for me. "But I think he had a hard time."

In the ninth, Castro went on the attack, but was stung by Norris' counterpunch.

Norris seemed to be thinking knockout in the 11th round, attacking relentlessly. Castro had few replies, but avoided serious damage.

Norris seemed energetic throughout the fight and at no point seemed hurt by any of Castro's punches.

"I thought he was going to be out of shape," Norris said. "I trained for 12 rounds and I could have won two more rounds. I was in the shape of my life. But he came prepared. He was ready."

The judges all gave Norris a comfortable edge. Chuck Giampa of the United States scored it 117-111, Italy's Guissepe Ferrari had it 118-109, and Alfred Asaro of France scored it 120-110.

Castro's record dropped to 68-3-2.

"I proved a lot to myself and to my fans," Norris said.

Looking ahead, he said he hoped for a big payday, but didn't elaborate on plans expressed earlier in the week to move up in weight by the end of next year.

To cap off a good evening for Norris, his younger brother, Orlin, won a unanimous decision over James Pritchard in a 10-round cruiserweight bout.

January holds first-round Seniors lead

Associated Press

DORADO, Puerto Rico — Don January, the oldest player in a field of golfing old folks, ambled into the first round lead Friday in the season-ending event on the Senior PGA Tour.

"All in all, a pretty good round," January said after an eagle-3 helped him to a 5-under-par 67 in the rich Champions tournament.

January, 62, was one of the founding members of the highly successful senior tour but has not won in four seasons.

But the player who started calling himself "Old Folks" more than 20 years ago, said he has no intention of giving way to the younger members of the over-50 set.

"As long as they keep dangling the carrot, I'll keep going around the world chasing it," he said.

In this case, the carrot is a purse that totals $2 million — $1 million for this event and $1 million in season-long bonus money.

The huge payoff will determine the money winning title for the season, but the four players who are involved in the race were not able to match January's bogey-free effort in gusty winds that raked the Dorado Beach resort.

Jim Colbert, No. 4 on the money winning list and holding only an outside chance of making it, was the best of those four at 69.

George Archer, the leader in the money standings with $821,455, could do no better than a 71.

Chi Chi Rodriguez, whose home is on this golf course, virtually took himself out of both the title chase and the money race with a 75.

Mike Hill, the defending champion and second to Archer with $765,657, birdied the last hole for a 70.

"I changed my putting grip on the back nine, took both hands down on the metal, and started putting much better," Hill said.

"I'm three back with two rounds to go. All I'm trying to do is get within one or two going into the last round. I just want to give myself a chance on Sunday."

Walt Zembriski and Orville Moody shared second at 68. Moody had six birdies and two bogeys in his 4-under-par effort.

Colbert, a winner in Hawaii last week, was alone at 69, while Hill was tied at 70 with his older brother Dave, J.C. Snead, Gibby Gilbert, Simon Hobday, Bruce Crampton and Jim Dent.

January, who won the last of his 22 PGA Senior Tour titles in 1987, slipped into the 31-man field on the strength of his 30th-place standing on the season's money rankings.

He made the most of the opportunity with a solid performance that was highlighted by a 3-wood second shot that ran to within about three feet of the cup on the 13th. He made the putt for an eagle-3.

"Things like that happen once in a while," he said. "You hit a good shot and it turns out right, just runs right up there by the cup."

He also had three birdies, the last a wind-aided 7-iron shot to eight feet on the 16th, and made three good saves of par on a course he described as "user friendly."

Judge won't overturn ruling in Syracuse's McRae case

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A federal judge on Friday said he had no authority to consider the lawsuit brought against the NCAA and Syracuse University by suspended basketball player Conrad McRae.

As a result, U.S. District Judge Neal McCurn said he could not grant the university's request to overturn a state court order that is permitting the 6-foot-10 junior center to play while he sues the NCAA and Syracuse to regain his eligibility.

"It is painfully obvious to the court that this is a case devoid of any legitimate federal question," said McCurn, who listened to oral arguments for a half-hour, then issued his ruling from the bench after a 45-minute adjournment.

"The court lacks subject matter jurisdiction to hear this case, let alone act on the defendants' motion to vacate the state's temporary restraining order."

McCurn's decision means McRae can play Saturday night in Syracuse's game against Texas Christian. McRae, a projected starter who averaged 5.0 points and 3.5 rebounds as a sophomore, missed the Orangemen's first three games but has played in the last two.

McCurn sent the case back to state court, where Justice Thomas Murphy has scheduled a Dec. 23 hearing at which the NCAA and university must show cause why the temporary order should not be made permanent.

Syracuse spokesman Robert Hill said the university's attorneys were pressing late Friday to have that hearing held before Saturday's game.

"I don't think this was unexpected," McRae's lawyer, Eric Alderman, said. "We said we believed the question today would be whether the court would take jurisdiction. I can't say I'm surprised."

McRae obtained an injunction last Friday from state Supreme Court Justice Parker Stone blocking the NCAA's ruling barring him from playing for Syracuse because of recruiting violations.

He went to a court of law after the NCAA Eligibility Committee denied an appeal by the university to have his eligibility restored.

Faced with the specter of having to possibly forfeit any games in which McRae plays, the university asked the federal court to review Stone's order so it wouldn't have to wait until Murphy could hold a hearing.

Syracuse attorney John Dee argued the federal court had jurisdiction because McRae had raised the claim that his constitutional right to due process was being denied by the suspension. Dee had no comment about the ruling as he left the courthouse.

However, McCurn said before he could consider the injunction's merits, he had to determine whether the case belonged in federal court.

McCurn explained that for McRae's due process claim to be valid he must be able to prove that he was deprived of a protected interest by "a state actor." He said previous cases have established that neither the NCAA nor Syracuse University is a state actor.

Mackovic's successor vows to keep Illini honest

Associated Press

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Illinois defensive coordinator Lou Tepper was promoted to head coach Friday, one day after John Mackovic resigned to take over the Texas football program.

Tepper, who like Mackovic came to Illinois in 1988 vowed to continue Mackovic's emphasis on honesty and academic success.

"This program is not a win-at-all-costs program,' Tepper said. "We will do it strictly within the rules and we will do it strictly with the care and love of our student-athletes."

Tepper, who will coach the Illini against UCLA in the John Hancock Bowl Dec. 31, said he does not expect to lose any assistant coaches before then. He expects to compete with Mackovic for some of them later.

Tepper, who has held various assistant coaching jobs in the past 25 years, was waiting for the right head coaching opportunity, and Illinois offered it to him.

Tepper learned about a week ago that Mackovic was seriously considering a move to Texas, and felt he would be the prime candidate though "nobody promised me the job."

"This place has for me all that I have sought," Tepper, 46, said. "I have been patient and have declined several excellent opportunities because of my desire to make Champaign-Urbana my long-term home."

The university Athletic Board convened Thursday after Mackovic's departure, interviewed Tepper and recommended him to chancellor Morton Weir. Tepper met with Illinois president Stanley Ikenberry, and was approved by the Board of Trustees.

Weir said Mackovic had changed Illinois' image as a team that cut corners and did not concentrate on academics, and Tepper was the perfect coach to continue that tradition. He said Illinois did not look for any other coaching candidates.

"He is a man of integrity with a strong orientation toward the academic success of student-athletes," Weir said. "I am confident that he will move the program forward, and the philosophy developed over the past four years will flourish under his leadership."

Weir said Tepper would get a three-year contract, but financial details had not been worked out.

Tepper, who improved Colorado's defense from 100th to 11th in the nation while coaching there from 1983-88, said recruiting was another of his strong points.

"I think this is a wonderful state ... our focus is going to be here," Tepper said. "I relish recruiting."

He said his offensive approach will differ little from Mackovic's.

"We will continue to capture the fancy of the great passing quarterbacks of the country," Tepper said. "But, we will attempt to have a stronger running game than we've had."

Despite Mackovic's departure, Tepper said the Illini could be strong emotionally going into the bowl game.

"What it will take away is preparation time," Tepper said. "Instead of preparing for UCLA third-and-short, I'm here talking to you."

Tepper was a defensive back at Rutgers. He told the Athletic Board how much football meant to him.

"It took a corn-cob rough kid and gave him some social graces and a lot better vocabulary," Tepper said.

He began his coaching career at Pittsburgh, moving to New Hampshire, William and Mary and Virginia Tech before becoming defensive coordinator at Colorado.

Players said they were glad Tepper was named quickly to replace Mackovic.

"He's more personal and if you have a problem, he's a guy you can talk to," linebacker Aaron Shelby said. "He's not sitting up there somewhere out of touch."

Tarkanian's attorneys allege NCAA witch hunt

Associated Press

RENO — Lawyers for UNLV basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian claim the NCAA wants to strike down a Nevada due process law so it can proceed with a "star chamber" prosecution of the coach and school.

"Within the state of Nevada, the NCAA has an established record of running roughshod over state institutions, state employees, student athletes and boosters through its investigative and enforcement proceedings," attorney Alton G. Burkhalter said in a federal court motion filed Friday.

The legal pleading charged that the collegiate sports association wants to void the legislation "so that (it) may disregard the state law and complete its 'star chamber' prosecution of UNLV, coach Tarkanian and others on an expedited basis."

A law passed by the 1991 Legislature requires the NCAA to follow due process when investigating Nevada schools for alleged rule violations. Among other things, it requires defendants be given the opportunity to review evidence against them and cross-examine witnesses. It further mandates that an impartial hearings officer — not the NCAA Infractions Committee — judge disputes and issue rulings.

Nebraska, Florida and Illinois have enacted similar NCAA due process laws.

The NCAA, in a lawsuit filed last month, claimed the Nevada statute is unconstitutional and impedes its ability to resolve a case against UNLV that has been pending for four years.

U.S. District Judge Howard McKibben has scheduled oral arguments in the NCAA's request for a preliminary injunction on Dec. 19.

The association's pending case against UNLV involves 29 allegations that focus on the recruitment of Lloyd Daniels, a former New York City prep star who was recruited in 1986, but cut from the team after his arrest at a North Las Vegas crack house in February 1987. He never played for the Runnin' Rebels.

Lawyers for other defendants in the case, Gov. Bob Miller, assistant basketball coach Tim Grgurich, former UNLV academic adviser Shelly Fischer, and former assistant coach Ronald Ganulin filed motions Thursday opposing the injunction or seeking dismissal from the case entirely.

"To set aside the Nevada due process statute prior to trial on the merits would allow the NCAA to continue to blacken the name of UNLV, coach Tarkanian and others through a quasi-judicial system which is so stacked in favor of the NCAA that the accused cannot win," Burkhalter wrote.

If the injunction is granted and the NCAA is allowed to continue its present course, "Thereafter, even if the court upholds the constitutionality of the statute, the entire purpose for enacting it will have been rendered moot," the motion said.

"The defendants would have no practical way to undo the damage to careers and reputation caused by the NCAA's conviction."

Additionally, Burkhalter questioned the federal court's jurisdiction in the matter, saying if anything the law should first be interpreted by the state court.

Tarkanian's troubles with the NCAA date back to his days as coach at Long Beach in the early 1970s. UNLV's NCAA woes began when it was given a two-year probation in 1977 for rules violations and served its time. But Tarkanian, ordered suspended for two years, won injunctive relief in state courts before finally losing in the U.S. Supreme Court 13 years later.

As a settlement in the 1977 case, UNLV agreed last year to a ban on television and postseason appearances during this season.

Blockbuster Bowl proposes alliance

BOSTON (AP) — The Blockbuster Bowl, still in its infancy, is trying to muscle in on football's traditional New Year's games by offering millions of dollars to win commitments from the Big East and Atlantic Coast conferences.

A representative of the bowl said Friday the conferences have been offered major financial payoffs if they sign long-term agreements to play in the Miami-based game.

Such a contract, however, could jeopardize a proposed alliance among the Sugar, Orange, Cotton and Fiesta bowls.

The alliance would commit the Big East champion, the ACC champion and Notre Dame to the four-bowl arrangement, along with the champions of the Southeastern Conference, the Big Eight and Southwest Conference, plus two at-large teams.

Harper Davidson, president of the Orange Bowl Committee, said he was aware of the Blockbuster proposal, but was optimistic that it wouldn't derail the alliance.

"I don't see it as a rivalry," he said. "They are doing what they can do to get a good game."

But while Davidson said he hoped to formally sign the alliance next week, ACC assistant commissioner Tom Mickle said he now doubts his conference will make any commitments before January.

"We are committed to trying to make the coalition work," Mickle said, but added that the Blockbuster offer "certainly gets your attention."

John Paquette, a spokesman for the Big East, said conference officials have been committed to the alliance but also feel obligated to present the offer to the athletic directors of the member schools.

The Boston Globe reported the Blockbuster Bowl was offering $4.3 million per team.

Ken Haines, executive vice president of Raycom Inc., a Charlotte, N.C.-based sports media company that runs the bowl game, said Friday he couldn't confirm the specific amount of the offer.

But he said it was "in that neighborhood."

"It would be a very high paying bowl," he said. "It is the type of financial proposal we feel would be attractive to the two conferences to insure it would be a dominant bowl."

The Big East is a relatively new football conference, but it includes prominent schools such as Miami, Syracuse and Pittsburgh. Other members are West Virginia, Boston College, Temple, Rutgers and Virginia Tech.

The ACC, meanwhile, is being strengthened by the addition of powerhouse Florida State.

Haines said Blockbuster officials approached the Big East and ACC because they are the only two major football conferences not currently tied to an existing bowl. Also, because of their geographic locations, it would be natural for them to play a bowl game in Florida, he said.

Santa's Sad ...

Recently Santa visited all the Angel Trees in the Permian Basin. He was sad to see so many names still on the trees. As much as he wants to visit all the foster kids this Christmas, he can't do it alone. And there isn't much time left. All the names of these children need to be picked by Monday, December 16th.

Santa needs you to help with the Foster Home Program - a Christmas project for the abused and neglected children of West Texas.

Angel ornaments that list a child's name and their desired gift decorate eight Christmas trees in eight Permian Basin towns.

We'rer asking you, the public, to pick an angel and buy the desired gift, which will be given to the child by Children's Protective Services.

Be an angel . . . help us by supporting the Angel Tree Project. Remember, the deadline is Monday, December 16th. Thank You and may you have a very Merry Christmas !

States may no longer raise minority scores on job tests

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration, in a move mandated by the new civil rights law, announced Friday that state employment agencies may no longer increase the scores of black and Hispanic job applicants on a federally sanctioned aptitude test to improve their job prospects.

The change in the policy of raising the test scores, started a decade ago to encourage racial diversity in the work force, is expected to lead to questions over how best to evaluate applicants within state employment agencies and the businesses that had relied on them to screen applicants.

The shift is also likely to generate lawsuits as black and Hispanic job seekers find themselves frozen out of job referrals, experts in the field of employment discrimination law say.

"Employers will get applicant flows that might be heavily non-minority," said Lawrence Z. Lorber, a Washington lawyer who represents large corporations in civil rights suits. "They could end up with lawsuits."

While Friday's action applies directly to only one job-aptitude test administered by state employment agencies to about 600,000 people a year in 30 states, it presages similar bans on scoring of tests used widely by private employers and civil service bureaucracies.

That is because the practice of raising test scores to help black and Hispanic job applicants, a process known as "race norming," was outlawed by the passage last month of a major civil rights bill.

Paradoxically, the same civil rights law makes it easier to sue employers who use tests that appear to favor whites. Under the new law, it is the employer's responsibility to prove that the test accurately predicts how well a person will perform a job.

"The Civil Rights Act of 1991 makes what is known as race norming illegal immediately upon the signing of the act," Marshall Breger, the Labor Department's solicitor, said at a news conference Friday. "So as a matter of necessity, this department has to issue regulations to conform with the act."

In announcing the ban on adjusting test scores by race, Labor Department officials said states were still free to use the job-aptitude test, the General Aptitude Test Battery.

But the officials acknowledged that reliance on the test as the basis of a referral would reduce the number of black and Hispanic job applicants sent on to interviews.

On average, blacks score 16 to 20 percent lower than whites on the test, and Hispanic people tend to have scores that are 5 to 10 percent lower than whites.

Whether agencies who choose not to use the tests may still consider race in making referrals remains an open question. The civil rights bill banned any consideration of race or sex in employment decisions. At the same time, however, the bill allows the use of "lawful affirmative action" programs. Some labor law experts say the two provisions are contradictory and will have to be reconciled by the courts.

The test at issue is generally used to rate a person's aptitude for low-level manufacturing or clerical jobs, measuring skills like math, reading and manual dexterity.

During the Reagan administration, the Labor Department began to allow states to rank individual scores within three groups — black, white and Hispanic — rather than comparing the scores against all applicants' test results. Asian scores were thrown in with white scores.

Thus, when a black and a white job applicant achieved the same raw score, the black could be ranked in the top 20 percent of all black test-takers.

KGB hands over plans to bug U.S. embassy

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In an encounter that U.S. Soviet Ambassador Bob Strauss called "the most amazing thing that's happened to me in my life," the head of the Soviet KGB recently turned over detailed information about the agency's efforts to bug the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

Strauss said he was stunned when KGB chief Vadim Bakatin handed him a thick file of plans for the embassy bugging and some of the eavesdropping devices used in the espionage attempt. The Soviet intelligence officer retrieved the items from an office safe during a recent meeting with Strauss at the agency's headquarters in Moscow.

"I don't know how long I'm going to be here, but I want to deliver something to you," Strauss said Bakatin told him. "I think it's something that will be helpful. It ought to be done."

Strauss, who revealed the KGB disclosure in a luncheon speech at the National Press Club Friday, said the meeting occurred "a few days ago."

The disclosure marks the latest twist in an abortive espionage effort that strained U.S.-Soviet relations and became a major embarrassment for the State Department.

U.S. officials discovered evidence of widespread bugging in the new $95 million Moscow embassy in 1985 but took four years to decide what to do about it. In late 1989, Secretary of State James Baker notified Congress that the bugged building, which was never occupied, would be torn down and replaced by a new embassy costing as much as $500 million.

While Congress and the State Department bickered over plans for the Moscow embassy, the United States retaliated by barring Soviet diplomats from their new embassy in Washington. The modern building, located on a hilltop in Northwest Washington, remains unoccupied.

Strauss said Bakatin told him that he was turning over the KGB's files "in the hope that maybe we can repay you, save you some money."

According to Strauss, the intelligence official said, "Mr. Ambassador, these are the plans that disclose how the bugging of your embassy took place, and these are the instruments that were used. I want to give them to you and I want them turned over to your government."

The two superpowers formally agreed to build new embassies in each other's capitals in 1972. The joint agreement for the new buildings stipulated that the U.S. embassy in Moscow would use prefabricated concrete slabs poured by Soviet workers.

The concrete was later found to be riddled with electronic bugs.

Strauss, a former Dallas lawyer, said he told Bakatin that the United States will probably never be able to use the Moscow building because of the lingering fear of eavesdropping devices.

"If I were to try to use that building," Strauss said he told the KGB chief, "people would believe that you'd given me three-fourths of them and kept a fourth back."

The ambassador, who planned to return to the Soviet Union today, said he rewrote his Press Club speech three times to reflect rapidly changing developments within the crumbling superpower.

Seeming to accept the view that Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev is on his way out, Strauss spoke of Gorbachev in terms usually reserved for former world leaders.

"Whatever happens in the struggle that's going on now, in my book President Gorbachev has left a legacy that will outlive all of us," he said.

Strauss also predicted widespread ethnic violence and civil war in some of the breakaway republics.

Police, legislators grapple with teller-machine crimes

By Greg B. Smith
Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — David Breen used to use automatic teller machines all the time — until a mugger came up behind him last July after he'd removed cash and shot him in the back.

Breen, an assistant district attorney, survived to urge the New York City Council to require tighter security at the city's 1,000-plus ATMs — a law that would be the toughest of its kind in the nation.

"I realize, unfortunately too late for me, that ATMs are not only quick, easy and accessible for customers," he told the council. "They're quick, easy and accessible for criminals as well."

The number of bank machines in the United States has risen from 9,000 in 1979 to 93,000 last year, prompting a parallel increase in ATM-related robberies, experts say. Several police departments, including Chicago, New York City and San Francisco have begun tracking ATM-robberies as a distinct crime.

California and Nevada have enacted laws requiring banks to install lighting at ATMs and nearby parking lots. New Jersey is considering requiring security cameras at "remote" ATMs.

Ronnie Eldridge, a New York City council member who was mugged at an Upper West Side ATM, is co-sponsoring a city ordinance that would prohibit outdoor ATM machines and require security measures at indoor ATMs. The bill is expected to come up for a vote in February.

For indoor ATMs, banks would have to install surveillance cameras, doors that require bank card access code for entry, adequate lighting, exterior walls of untinted glass for an unobstructed view of the machines, and reflective mirrors to provide the patron a rear view while using the machine.

A council survey of 231 ATMs last month found 40 percent contained what they called "potentially dangerous hiding places" which would allow a criminal to hide undetected from customers entering the ATM cubicle.

Investigators described one Manhattan site where customers couldn't see any part of the ATM cubicle's interior until they turned a corner, and another indoor ATM that had no lights whatsoever on two separate visits.

City Councilor Walter McCaffrey, a co-sponsor of the New York ordinance, says ATMs are magnets for criminals.

"Let's say I'm a perpetrator and I'm going to rob someone," McCaffrey says. "I don't know who's got money. I go to an ATM, I'm pretty much assured that my victim has money."

Cinder blocks bury five or six vehicles Friday after a chemical explosion ripped apart an industrial cleaning plant and sent 19 people to the hospital in Plymouth, Mich.

Explosion rips Michigan industrial plant

PLYMOUTH, Mich. (AP) — A chemical explosion ripped apart an industrial cleaning plant Friday, injuring 19 people, one seriously, authorities said.

"All the walls blew right out," said Plymouth Township Supervisor Gerald Law. "All the cars that were parked there were absolutely crushed. A good wind is going to blow it down. The only thing that was untouched was the front office. The rest of it is totally demolished."

One employee of the Cygnet Automated plant was listed in fair condition at St. Joseph Hospital in Ann Arbor after breathing methyl ethyl ketone, a toxic industrial solvent. Eighteen others were treated and released after the blast, officials said.

The cause of the explosion was under investigation.

Cygnet employee Art Hobbs said supplies stacked inside the one-story steel building apparently helped workers escape when a roof collapsed in the explosion.

A fire wall required by the township's new building code prevented the explosion from reaching into the plant's office, Law said.

Judge sentences slumlord to live in own building

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — An alleged slumlord who said he had improved his building so much he wouldn't mind living in it himself found a judge willing to take him at his word.

Superior Court Judge Judith Whitmer Kozloski on Thursday ordered Hee Duk Kang to live in his run-down apartment house for two months. An electronic monitor strapped to Kang's ankle will assure officials that he spends the required 19 hours a day inside the building.

"During a sentencing hearing, he said he'd fixed up the place so well he wouldn't mind living in it himself," said San Mateo County Deputy District Attorney Bob Bishop. "I don't think that's what he had in mind, but we decided to take him up on it."

Kang, 53, pleaded no contest to bribing a housing inspector.

Building inspectors have reported the 100-unit apartment building to be infested with rats and cockroaches, with inadequate heating and ventilation, damaged railings, overcrowded units and other safety problems.

The complex has been cited for more than 1,000 violations of electrical, plumbing, building and fire codes, Bishop said.

"I hope this will make him a little more aware of the shortcomings of the place," Bishop said. "It's a pretty rough place."

Kang told authorities he had spent $400,000 to repair the building during the three years he has owned it, but the prosecutor still calls him a "slumlord."

"I don't know if he did or didn't," Bishop said. "Whatever he spent, it wasn't enough to completely fix it."

Kang and his attorney, George Eshoo, could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

THE MAN WHO BURIED JESUS

JOSEPH OF ARIMATHAEA, A RICH MAN, WAS A SECRET DISCIPLE OF JESUS. MANY WEALTHY JEWS OF THE TIME WERE FINANCING REVOLUTIONARY GROUPS IN THE HOPE OF OVERTHROWING ROMAN RULE IN THEIR LAND—FOR, BESIDES THE HIGH ROMAN TAXES, THEIR ANCIENT RELIGION WAS IN DANGER OF BEING STAMPED OUT! WHETHER JOSEPH SAW IN JESUS, THE PROCLAIMED MESSIAH, A MAN WHO WOULD END ROMAN RULE OR IF HE UNDERSTOOD AT THE OUTSET THAT JESUS WAS CONCERNED WITH MAN'S FUTURE IN ITS SPIRITUAL ASPECT ONLY, IS NOW HARD TO SAY.

AS AN EXTREMELY WEALTHY MAN, JOSEPH WAS A MEMBER OF THE SANHEDRIN, THE HIGHEST RULING COUNCIL IN JERUSALEM. WHEN THE SANHEDRIN LAID PLANS TO DESTROY JESUS, HE MADE NO PROTEST WHATSOEVER, INDEED, IF HE HAD, HIS OWN LIFE WOULD HAVE BEEN ENDANGERED. IT'S QUITE POSSIBLE HE FIGURED HE WAS WORTH MORE TO THE CAUSE ALIVE RATHER THAN DEAD!

IT IS INDICATIVE OF THE MAN'S HIGH POSITION THAT, RIGHT AFTER JESUS' DEATH ON THE CROSS, JOSEPH COULD GAIN AUDIENCE, IN THE DEAD OF NIGHT, WITH PONTIUS PILATE TO OBTAIN PERMISSION TO REMOVE THE BODY FROM THE CROSS AND BURY IT. WHICH HE AND NICODEMUS, ANOTHER RULER OF THE JEWS AND SECRET ADMIRER OF JESUS, DID.

SOME AUTHORITIES ARE AGREED THAT IN THE YEAR 63 THE APOSTLE ST. PHILIP DISPATCHED JOSEPH TO GREAT BRITAIN WHERE HE LIVED OUT HIS REMAINING YEARS IN COMPANY WITH HIS BROTHER DISCIPLES AT GLASTONBURY.

NEXT WEEK: YE SHALT NOT EAT MILK AND YEAT!!

Most churches provide some health services, survey shows

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — More than three-fourths of churches provide at least one health service and half provide three or more health-related programs, a National Council of Churches survey has found.

"Many of the churches are reclaiming their historical role in health and healing," said Dr. Kenyon C. Burke, a council official. But he said churches "cannot supplant and should not take the responsibility" for health care that the private sector and government share.

The national survey, released Thursday, showed that churches are most likely to provide nutrition, substance abuse and mental health services. More than half of the nearly 1,900 churches responding to the survey offered one of those three services.

Churches also participate in a broad range of other health services and, the survey said, often serve as "key intermediaries for people with health needs. Churches function as brokers and referral sources, as educators and financiers, and even as care providers for people in need."

The survey results will be used to inform the religious community, health care providers and advocates about the nature and extent of church-sponsored health activities in order to guide future program and policy development, Collins said.

Fran Burnford, a representative of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, said the national council also hopes to encourage demonstration projects for child health services.

But representatives of the council said churches alone cannot remedy what the group considers a crisis in health care.

Eastern Europe needs the Gospel, leaders report

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Evangelical Christian leaders say help in spreading the Gospel is greatly needed in eastern Europe, "but if not wisely channeled, it can be harmful rather than helpful."

Summing up conclusions of a meeting of evangelicals in Budapest, Hungary, including representatives from all eight eastern European countries, the Lausanne Committee for World Evangelization cited these points:

"There is a very strong 'curiosity' about spiritual matters now in the aftermath of the single-line atheistic propaganda of the communist era. This creates a great opening for preaching of the Gospel."

But "there is an equal openness to any form of spiritual experience, and they are all flooding in. It is like being introduced for the first time to a gigantic spiritual supermarket with no criteria to judge what is good or bad."

Because of insufficient trained pastors and Bible teachers, "outside evangelists are 'invading' the countries by the hundreds, often engaging in what local people are calling 'superficial evangelism,' leaving thousands of new believers" without adequate means of further guidance.

Officials confident redistricting plan will get clearance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas officials, hoping the third time would be the charm, said Friday they were confident the state House redistricting plan would receive Justice Department clearance.

A ruling on the plan, which was submitted earlier this week, had been expected Friday. But a Justice Department attorney said a decision would be delayed because a meeting had been scheduled for Monday between "interested parties" in Texas and department officials.

Attorney Gaye Hume told a three-judge federal panel hearing a redistricting challenge in Austin that the department planned to make a decision within 48 hours of the meeting.

The three-judge panel ended the hearing without immediately ruling on Republicans' request to impose GOP-drawn redistricting maps for next year's legislative and congressional elections.

Ms. Hume would not comment to reporters on the identity of the "interested parties." But John McCamish, lawyer for the Republicans, said they included Republicans and minorities.

This is the third official incarnation of the House redistricting map, which was rejected in its original form on Nov. 12 when the Justice Department ruled the plan discriminated against Hispanics.

The State

A second plan, revised by the House Redistricting Committee and submitted last month to federal officials, fell by the wayside before the Justice Department could rule on it.

That's because a third compromise plan, agreed upon by lawmakers and minority rights groups, was accepted Monday by a state district judge in Edinburg and then forwarded to the Justice Department.

The compromise plan creates 25 Hispanic districts, five more than the original measure did. It also has 18 black districts.

The plaintiffs opposing the plan in state district court settled with House leaders Monday. The agreement was supported by 77 of the 150 House members, including House Speaker Gib Lewis.

Spokesmen for the state and minority plaintiffs expressed confidence Friday that the newest proposal would pass muster, joining the previously approved congressional, state Senate and state Board of Education plans.

"It gave us five more minority seats, so we were real happy with it in that respect," said Jim Harrington, a Texas Civil Rights Project attorney representing minority plaintiffs.

Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, also expressed hope the plan will be approved.

"We made every effort to satisfy their objections," he said.

Both men said they expect if approval is granted, qualifying will close as scheduled on Jan. 2.

In other redistricting developments, Dusek said a Texas Supreme Court ruling on the constitutionality of the state Senate plan could soon be issued. Texas Republicans contend the plan is unconstitutional because the Legislature did not vote on it after changes were made.

Lawyers have said the Supreme Court ruling also would affect the state House plan.

A ruling against the state could force lawmakers back to square one and precipitate a special session, Dusek said.

Groups protest Bush's annual quail hunt during holidays

By Richard Stewart
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Two animal rights groups are threatening to picket President Bush's annual South Texas quail hunt during the Christmas holidays.

"I don't think the country would tolerate a president's engaging in dog fighting or cock fighting. We shouldn't tolerate him engaging in sport hunting," said Wayne Pacelle, executive director of The Fund For Animals Inc. The national organization has about 200,000 members.

Bush traditionally spends a few days between Christmas and New Year's hunting at the Lazy F Ranch between Beeville and Goliad. The Persian Gulf War caused the hunt to be canceled last year.

"We hope that President Bush will decide not to go hunting while he is in Beeville," Pacelle said from his Washington, D.C., office. "If he does, we will organize a large protest with signs and banners."

Members of the two groups are sending letters and facsimile messages to the White House pleading with Bush to call off the hunt.

A White House spokesman said Bush plans to attend a barbecue in Beeville Dec. 27 and to hunt at the ranch on Dec. 28 and 29 as the guest of long-time friend, Houston oilman William Farish III.

Hollrah said 20 or 30 members of his group will probably take part in the protest Dec. 28. He predicted 50 or 60 protesters will probably attend. Pacelle predicted more than 100 protesters will attend.

In 1989, protesters from the groups carried picket signs at the main gate of the 100,000-acre ranch.

In 1988, then-President-elect Bush angered animal rights activists when he told reporters, "These aren't animals. These are wild quail. You've got to eat." Bush added, "I don't think I could shoot a deer."

Fort Worth State School wins accreditation

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Fort Worth State School's accreditation by a national council will help in its appeal of a Texas Health Department ruling which cut off federal Medicaid funds to the school, officials said Friday.

The Accrediting Council on Services for People with Developmental Disabilities, a non-profit organization based in Washington, D.C., has visited the school and accredited it for the second straight year, school officials announced.

"That we are pleased is an understatement. We are elated at the news," said state Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation spokeswoman Sheila Allee.

She said the accreditation will help the school build its case in appealing the Medicaid cutoff. The Fort Worth institution has received no Medicaid money since Dec. 7, because of problems state health inspectors found resulted in one death and 30 injuries since Nov. 13.

Medicaid payments to Fort Worth State School total more than $10 million annually, which is about 64 percent of the institution's budget.

Ms. Allee said the council accredits programs for mental retardation nationwide. She said the four state schools named in a 17-year-old lawsuit over school conditions have all been accredited by the council.

The Fort Worth school has until Dec. 19 to explain to U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders why conditions were so bad that state inspectors terminated Medicaid funding.

Sanders is overseeing the third proposed agreement to settle the lawsuit. The Dallas judge granted an earlier request to extend the date.

"The (council) survey team has been at the school this week, on the heels of the Health Department decertification," Ms. Allee said. "We have asked the Health Department to come back to the school and we expect them to make a return visit next week."

She said Fort Worth school officials disagree with the state Health Department's Medicaid ruling, and she expects the first appeals hearing to take place after Jan. 1.

A committee appointed by Gov. Ann Richards is holding preliminary discussions to recommend the possible closure of two state schools as part of the suit's proposed settlement, which Sanders must approve.

Philadelphia lawyer David Ferleger, who represents about 2,000 of the 7,000 residents in Texas' 13 state schools in the suit, has said the Fort Worth facility should be closed because of safety problems.

'Killer' bees found aboard railroad car

VICTORIA (AP) — Africanized bees once again have hitchhiked northward, this time winding up near Victoria after riding a railroad car some 200 miles, authorities confirmed Friday.

Agriculture officials in the Rio Grande Valley on Friday also recorded the latest attack by the so-called "killer" bees.

Elba Quintero, manager for the USDA's Africanized honeybee program, said the identity of the bees found and destroyed Tuesday in the railroad car that brought them from the Valley had been confirmed as Africanized bees.

The bees have been migrating north since their arrival in South Texas in October 1990, with 18 counties now under a quarantine designed to slow their spread.

The bees are expected to migrate naturally to the Victoria area late next year or early 1993. As migration goes, the hitchhiking incident doesn't count.

"This was not a natural movement; this was a man-assisted movement," Ms. Quintero said. "So the quarantine lines will probably remain the same."

The bees have traveled out of the quarantine areas on vehicles many times before. A colony was found and destroyed in September in a rural area near Robstown in Nueces County. Officials said that colony probably was brought aboard farm equipment or trucks.

Nueces County was added to the quarantine area in October.

The bees have been spreading through the Americas since 1957, when African queens escaped from an experiment in Brazil and began breeding with the more docile European variety.

The Africanized bees, descendants of those early matings, are extremely aggressive, attack in swarms and pursue prey for long distances — hence their reputation as killers.

About 600 deaths have been attributed to the bees, mostly in South America. No Africanized bee-related deaths have been recorded among humans in the United States, although there have been at least 10 attacks in Texas.

Ms. Quintero said she received confirmation Friday that Africanized bees were responsible for an attack Tuesday in Edinburg that left three people injured and a dog dead. The colony was destroyed.

Blacks have more strokes, researchers discover

DALLAS (AP) — Black women over 40 have almost twice as many strokes as white or Hispanic women, and blacks suffer worse physical impairments afterward than whites, according to two studies from the American Heart Association here.

Strokes occur more frequently in blacks than in Hispanics or whites, researchers found in a study of 1,034 patients hospitalized for strokes from 1983 to 1986 in a New York City hospital.

A study on 145 patients admitted to hospitals in North Carolina found that blacks recover almost twice as slowly as whites from strokes which cause a loss of blood flow to the brain.

Blacks also remained more physically impaired than whites after strokes, researchers said Friday.

"African-Americans are at greater risk for stroke, and I think they should be much more aware of some of the stroke risk factors," said Dr. Ralph Sacco, co-author of the New York study.

Risk factors for stroke include smoking, diabetes, high blood pressure, heavy alcohol use and cholesterol.

Dr. Ronnie Horner, co-author of the North Carolina study, said one of the contributing factors to poorer recovery from strokes in blacks is limited access to health care.

Strokes strike about 500,000 Americans each year and kill 150,000, said American Heart Association spokesman Phil Kibak. Stroke is the third leading killer, behind heart attack and cancer.

Black men tend to have strokes at an earlier age than black women, although black women had a higher incidence of stroke than black men, Sacco said.

"The Hispanic group was younger, and high blood pressure was more frequent in blacks and Hispanics. Cardiac disease was much more advanced among whites in the study," Sacco said.

Sacco and two co-authors at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in Manhattan found that black men over 40 had a stroke rate of 567 per 100,000, compared to 351 per 100,000 for white men over 40, and 306 per 100,000 for Hispanic men over 40.

The incidence of strokes in black women over 40 was 716 per 100,000, compared to 361 per 100,000 in Hispanic women over 40, and 326 per 100,000 in white women over 40.

Horner and researchers at Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C., gave stroke patients at three hospitals tests to measure physical and functional impairments on admission, and at five, 30, 90 and 180 days after being admitted.

Initially, blacks needed more help to bathe, eat and walk and improved more slowly than whites after strokes. On another test, blacks had greater lasting physical impairments than whites.

"One problem is that many of the black patients were widowed, so they may not have the support system they need to function well outside a nursing home. Social support is one of the major factors in how well you recover from a stroke," Horner said.

The studies were published in "Stroke," a journal of the American Heart Association.

Sacco called for targeting specific messages toward blacks and Hispanics about stroke risk factors.

"There is some public education going on, but definitely not enough," Sacco said. "We need to expand and improve our education efforts, particularly in Spanish for Hispanic groups."

Kibak said symptoms of an impending stroke include sudden weakness or numbness of arm, legs or face, loss of speech or trouble talking or understanding speech, loss of vision, especially on one side of the body, and unexplained dizziness or falls.

"There's not any data at all about Hispanics, probably the fastest growing population for strokes, so we need to do more," Sacco said.

High blood pressure contributes to stroke, and Kibak said close to 67 percent of the 62 million Americans who have high blood pressure are not being treated for it. Only 11 percent are receiving adequate treatment.

Kibak said treatment for high blood pressure includes diet, exercise and medication.

Gov. Richards writes to court regarding school finance

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards warned the Texas Supreme Court in a Friday letter that dire consequences may result if the new school finance system is ruled unconstitutional.

She told the court that if the new system is wholly or partially struck down, there must be some interim plan so that schools will not close. And she asked the justices to consider the timing of their decision.

"This letter is not intended to affect your decision one way or another. It is to apprise you of the time and monetary impact should the decision negate legislative action," Richards told the court.

The law, approved this year, is being challenged by more than 50 property-rich school districts and some individual taxpayers. It is designed to shift hundreds of millions of local property tax dollars from wealthier to poorer school districts within new education taxing districts, made up of one or several counties.

School districts in each county education district share revenue from a basic local property tax. Local school districts also may tax more, without pooling the revenue, to enrich programs and for construction. The law is meant to meet a Texas Supreme Court order to even out school districts' access to funds.

"If local property taxes assessed by the County Education Districts are not collected on the January 31, 1992 due date, many school districts throughout the state will have to close their doors in February," Richards wrote.

"By pulling more than $4.5 billion ... out of the public school system (the amount of taxes to be collected by the County Education Districts and returned to the school districts), the system of local control and joint state-local funding will collapse," she said.

Richards said she understands that mortgage companies and others, anticipating that the new system may be overturned, are delaying property tax payments to local districts.

"If those tax payments are not made before Dec. 31, 1991, hundreds of thousands of Texas families will be unable to claim property tax deductions for their 1991 federal tax returns," she told the court.

Richards also suggested that a trial judge will be drawing the next school funding plan, rather than lawmakers, if the Supreme Court throws out the current measure. The court has ruled two previous laws unconstitutional.

"It would not be productive to call members (of the Legislature) back to Austin for a special legislative session again to address the issue of public school finance in an atmosphere of crisis and contention," she wrote.

State District Judge F. Scott McCown of Austin, who is overseeing the long-running school funding case, in August upheld the latest property tax system.

But the judge in the past has had a court master draw up a school funding plan, and then had it updated, although it was not implemented.

Richards said that a judge "must be given sufficient time to develop a plan that will not seriously harm our children. Since the judge must develop some system within available revenues, it is an onerous task."

Ms. Littlefield, who has been with the court for 22 years, said she does not recall previously seeing a letter to the Supreme Court from a governor regarding a case in which a ruling is pending.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis also said Friday that chaos will result if the court interferes with the collection of taxes for this school year.

Bullock said that according to Texas Education Agency estimates, invalidating the county education district taxes for this school year would cut the budgets of more than 783 school districts by more than 20 percent.

That would force most of those school districts to shut their doors within days or weeks, he said. There are 1,052 school districts.

Presented by:
Blake Hansen
Attorney At Law

A time may come when you or a member of your family becomes seriously injured or critically ill. In the midst of your shock and grief, you may be asked to make difficult decisions about the intensity of medical care being administered, or about whether to withdraw "life sustaining" treatment and change the goal of treatment from cure to comfort.

Because it is harder to make decisions on these complex issues when you are under stress, it is important for you to know about the levels and types of treatment available and to discuss the kinds of treatment you would want to use before you are called upon to make these decisions.

Mr. Hansen will address patient rights, responsibilities and health care choices. A question and answer session will follow the lecture.

For your convenience, free babysitting is available, so call 334-8297 today for your reservation for this informative no-cost health lecture.

College may drop Swaggart's name

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Jimmy Swaggart Bible College and Seminary is working to shed the shamed evangelist's name.

School officals proposed a new name — World Evangelism Bible College and Seminary — at a meeting last week to discuss accreditation, said James Rogers of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

A new name may be in place by the spring semester, college President Bernard Rossier said Thursday. "We hope to have something done by then. Nothing is final though," he said.

He wouldn't say why the change is being considered, referring all questions to Swaggart's son, Donnie, at the Jimmy Swaggart Ministries Office.

The college has eliminated four programs and laid off a number of faculty members since Swaggart was found with a prostitute Oct. 11 in Indio, Calif.

It was the second such incident in three years for Swaggart, who left the Assemblies of God in 1988 rather than stay out of the pulpit for a year and undergo counseling after he was photographed with New Orleans prostitute Debra Murphree.

Enrollment plummeted after the 1988 incident and several Bible colleges have reported receiving numerous application inquiries from Swaggart Bible college students since October.

Traffic accident leaves Letterman in a lawsuit

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — David Letterman was sued by a man and his young son who claim the talk show host is to blame for injuries they suffered in a traffic accident.

Lawsuits filed Thursday accuse Letterman of negligence in the Sept. 21 collision between Letterman's rented convertible and a truck driven by Raymond Musser. No damage amount was specified.

Eight-year-old Justin Musser's cheek was severely gashed and his jaw crushed in the accident, said the Mussers' attorney, Bennie Lazzara. Musser was knocked out and suffered head, back and neck injuries, Lazzara said.

"We're not trying to sue David Letterman personally to get into his deep pocket. Everybody buys insurance for this. I hope he did, too," the lawyer added.

The wreck occurred at an intersection where the signal light was out from an accident earlier that evening. Investigators were unable to determine who had the right of way.

Letterman's lawyer, Ron Elderber, said he hadn't seen the lawsuit and had no comment.

Letterman, host of NBC's "Late Night With David Letterman," was visiting his sister at the time of the accident. He was treated for a head cut.

TIJUANA, Mexico — Mother Teresa was on the final part of her latest tour, bringing her usual pious message of prayer and peace, and a lightheartedness when asked about her health.

Mother Teresa

"I am very well because everybody is praying for me," she said.

Another time, when again asked about her reported frail health, Mother Teresa said, "I have two hearts, so I am all right."

The 81-year-old Roman Catholic nun, who received the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize for her work among the poor and sick, came to Tijuana on Thursday to visit the five communities of her order, Missionaries of Charity.

Tijuana is home to the order's seminary and four communities, also known as novitiates, making the city home to the largest number of such communities outside her base in Calcutta, India.

Her visit, which is to last several days, coincided with the celebration of the 460th feast day of the Virgin of Guadalupe, Mexico's patroness saint and most revered religious symbol.

LAS VEGAS — A judge has ruled that two former partners of Marilyn Chambers did not defraud the one-time porn star out of royalties.

Despite Wednesday's ruling, Chambers and her manager, Charles Traynor, may be able to collect some residuals if they can produce certain financial documents for Judge Thomas Foley.

Chambers

Chambers and Traynor sued former business associates Martin Greenwald and Stuart Siegel, claiming they deprived them of some $500,000. They claimed the profits came from the resale of video and laser discs of more than a half-dozen movies Chambers made.

The defendants, who owned 50 percent of the distributorship, conducted a series of "insider deals" that allowed them to make money off the assets while dissolving the company, said John Curtas, a lawyer for Chambers and Traynor.

Troy Peyton, the defendants' lawyer, said Chambers and Traynor never complained about how the company was being run as long as they were receiving the dividend checks.

When Chambers decided to quit the adult movie business in 1986, the corporation was left with an aging and devalued product, Peyton said.

Chambers starred in porn movies such as "Behind the Green Door" and "Insatiable." She's now a Las Vegas housewife.

LOS ANGELES — Madonna was honored for her work against AIDS during an all-star benefit auction, but her remarks were tempered by another public denial that she has tested positive for the AIDS virus.

Madonna

"Instead of pointing the finger at people and having witch hunts and ostracizing each other for lifestyles and sexual preferences, we all should be uniting to fight this disease," the pop star said at the recent gala.

"Now I'm not HIV positive, but what if I were? I would be more afraid of how society would treat me for having the disease than the actual disease itself."

The event, sponsored by the American Foundation for AIDS Research, honored Madonna's contributions to fund-raising and public education about AIDS.

One of Poland's remaining steam locomotives sits derelict in the central rail city of Sieldce waiting to be cut up and sold for scrap.

Poland says goodbye to steam locomotives

By John Daniszewski
Associated Press writer

LUKOW, Poland — The steam locomotive growls and huffs, spewing dense clouds of vapor and pungent black smoke from its coal-burning furnace.

But despite its exertions, the chugging black engine goes nowhere. This once-proud lord of the iron road has sunk to providing steam heat for a drafty railroad barn.

So it ends for the steam engine. Poland with its cheap and abundant coal was the last European country to depend heavily on steam railroad power.

Now even Poles are punching the ticket on their beloved "ciuchcia" — or choo-choos.

Engines dating to the early 20th century are being junked — cut up into scrap metal, sold to collectors or sent to a museum.

The locomotives witnessed the calamitous events of recent Polish history: the Depression, World War II, the imposition of Communist rule in the late 1940s. A few may have hauled Jews and other prisoners to death camps in Nazi-ruled Poland.

"Very often they had their own nicknames and their own concrete stories and idiosyncracies around them," said Kazimierz Ziolek, of the railroad's central district headquarters.

The Polish State Railroads counts 301 steam engines on its inventory, down from more than 4,000 in the 1960s. By 1995, the 150th anniversary of regular rail service in Poland, they will be gone, said railroad official Stanislaw Niemaltowski.

As scrap, the 100-ton locomotives are worth $5,000-$6,000 for their high-quality steel and alloy components, said Krzysztof Wiechetek, caretaker of a steam engine graveyard at the locomotive repair station in Sieldce, east of Warsaw.

"Want to buy one?" he asked hopefully.

The product of a family of railroaders, Wiechetek recalled that the steam engineer, often a white-gloved perfectionist, was addressed as "Sir" by the crews before World War II and would tip laborers to polish his locomotive.

"Mothers would tell their daughters: marry an engineer not a sailor" because of high pay and secure jobs on the railroad, he said. "Now it's the other way around."

Except for excursions organized by steam-train lovers, the two engines left in Wiechetek's district rarely haul passengers or cargo now. They heat buildings or make hot water.

Democrats, Bush warm up for first primary

By Robin Toner
N.Y. Times News Service

MANCHESTER, N.H. — New Hampshire is the grim winnower of presidential politics — its first-in-the-nation primary making some candidates and breaking others, slapping down presidents and creating instant stars.

On Feb. 18, 1992, New Hampshire voters will have the chance to exercise that power with a vengeance on a fresh and vulnerable Democratic field, and on a nervous president faced with a "send 'em a message" challenger.

For President Bush, the primary will be the first test against the conservative commentator Patrick J. Buchanan. And it comes in a state where Bush could hardly be more vulnerable on the economy, where the unemployment rate has risen from 2.3 percent in October 1988 to 6.6 percent last October, and where bankruptcies have soared.

As a result, New Hampshire Republicans are warning the White House that Buchanan must be taken seriously.

"The president is going to have to do some vigorous campaigning up here, and I have told him this," said Sen. Warren B. Rudman, R-N.H., at a hastily scheduled opening of the Bush campaign headquarters in Manchester on Thursday night.

And with the Iowa caucuses discounted this campaign season by the presence of Sen. Tom Harkin, a favorite son, New Hampshire becomes the first test of a Democratic field that is still largely unknown and so strapped financially that a poor showing could be lethal for several of these candidates, party strategists say.

And if Gov. Mario M. Cuomo of New York enters the race next week, New Hampshire voters will have the opportunity either to affirm his front-runner's reputation or to leave him a victim of the expectations game.

Analysts in both parties agree that the economy will drive this primary in unpredictable ways.

Raymond Buckley, a Democratic state representative who knocked on 3,000 doors this year in his successful campaign for alderman in Manchester, said: "If there's one word to describe people, it's 'fear.' People are scared to death. They're afraid they can't pay their property taxes. They're afraid they'll lose their homes. They're afraid they'll lose their jobs. This is not the New Hampshire I was born and brought up in."

Gov. Judd Gregg, who is heading Bush's campaign in the state, said: "People are frustrated, upset. I call it the X-factor."

The danger, he said, is that voters may see the Republican primary as a chance to send a message to Bush, even though they plan to vote for him the following November.

There are many X-factors in the Democratic primary. As Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska put it, "It's still a jump ball."

A poll last week in The Boston Globe showed that former Sen. Paul E. Tsongas of Massachusetts was ahead of the pack in New Hampshire. But some Democrats say that is largely a reflection of name recognition stemming from his residence in an adjoining state and his six-month jump in organizing.

"The field is clouded right now, and Tsongas to a certain extent is the only one with definition," said Mitchell Schwartz, the New Hampshire director for Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas.

Still, Tsongas has become something of a wild card for the other campaigns, with no one quite sure how solid voters' support is for a candidate widely considered to be one of the longer shots in the race.

In general, the Democratic race is unformed: the Globe poll, which had a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 5 percentage points, found that half of the likely Democratic primary voters were uncommitted and that many others seemed open to changing their minds.

In terms of organizing, Harkin got an earlier start than most of his rivals, but Kerrey and Clinton have moved quickly this fall, Democrats say.

Kerrey, while still trying to hone his message and performance on the campaign trail, has picked up much of the political network that had formed around former Sen. Gary Hart in 1984, a group that is still considered formidable.

The other declared Democratic presidential contenders are Edmund G. Brown Jr., the former governor of California, and L. Douglas Wilder, the governor of Virginia.

The undeclared candidate is Cuomo, who is finally approaching a deadline: the Dec. 20 filing cutoff for the New Hampshire primary. His advisers have been calling political organizers here for logistical advice, and each day brings a fresh — and to some Democrats, wearisome — round of rumors.

Some Democrats here say that Cuomo has missed a valuable month, that if he had entered the race in November he could have wrapped up an enormous amount of support and stopped some of his rivals in their tracks.

Still, Cuomo's admirers in New Hampshire say his message will resonate in this ailing state. And Joseph Grandmaison, the former state Democratic chairman, said Cuomo has one very large advantage over his rivals.

"The biggest difference between the Cuomo candidacy and any of the others is these other people have had the terrible burden of introducing themselves and their candidacy," Grandmaison said.

Rottweiler pulls paraplegic woman from flaming van

FRANKLIN, Ind. (AP) — A woman paralyzed from the waist down wasn't able to get out of her van after it caught fire, but her 104-pound Rottweiler dragged her out and well away from the flames.

"She saved my life," Kathie Vaughn said Thursday of her dog, Eve. "And she's my best friend."

Vaughn, 41, of Indianapolis, said she was driving to Atlanta for an antiques show Wednesday when she heard a pop and smelled smoke. When she pulled to a stop along Interstate 65 she saw smoke coming from the engine compartment. She had just bought the van that day.

"I tried to put the fire out. I poured Pepsi on it but that didn't work," she said.

She began gathering the parts of her disassembled wheelchair but said the smoke prevented her from finding some pieces.

Then, Eve grabbed Vaughn by the leg and pulled her out. Vaughn said she fell to the ground and the 6-year-old dog dragged her about 20 feet into a ditch.

"Not too long after we got there, the cab poofed," Vaughn said, and flames spread quickly through the passenger and cargo areas, destroying her load of antiques.

A state trooper sped to the scene after hearing a trucker report the fire on citizens band radio.

"When I pulled up, the dog was pulling the lady through the grass, to get her away from the fire," said State Trooper Mike Snider.

Eve continued to protect her owner. The dog "had to help me get to the police car, because she wouldn't let the policeman get to me," Vaughn said.

Vaughn escaped uninjured but Eve suffered burns on the pads of her paws.

She said Eve has had no special training for working with the handicapped.

"That's the true nature of the Rottweiler," she said. "They're very loyal and loving and will take care of their owners at all cost.

"She just loves me. She helps me all the time."

Beauty contest doesn't escape Islamic wrath

By Zina Hemady
Associated Press writer

CAIRO, Egypt — This was the plan: scrap the swimsuit competition, emphasize "inner beauty," and maybe Egypt's new beauty contest wouldn't offend the powerful Islamic scholars who banned its predecessor last year.

It didn't work.

Not only did make-up and thigh-high dresses raise eyebrows in a country where women are expected to be properly covered, but the Dec. 1 contest's title — "Egypt's Ideal Woman" — rankled the powers.

"Ideal in what? Singing and dancing?" said Sheik al-Sayyed Shamseddine, whose clerical committee had last year's "Miss Egypt" contest banned. Egypt's ideal woman should be one that conforms to Islam's dress code and is virtuous, he said.

The dress code of mainstream Sunni Islam, the religion of 90 percent of Egyptians, holds that a woman's body should be covered except for her face and hands.

"The way this contest was organized did great wrong to a society whose official religion is Islam," said Shiek Mansour Ebeid of the government's Ministry of Religious Endowments.

"I tell every girl who participated in this competition to ask for God's forgiveness," he said.

The controversy illustrates a perpetual struggle in Egypt, where people outwardly espouse traditional Islamic values but are largely unwilling to give up the Western habits that have pervaded Egyptian life for decades.

For the "Miss Egypt" pageants, which began in 1985, such a climate proved fatal.

Last year, incensed by swimsuit competitions and the publicizing of contestants' measurements, Shamseddine's committee at Cairo's Al-Azhar Mosque, the Muslim world's most influential religious institution, issued a fatwa — or religious edict — that "Miss Egypt" offended Islam.

Fatwas from Al-Azhar lack the force of law in Egypt, but the government normally follows them in cultural matters. It banned the pageant.

Organizers of this year's "Egypt's Ideal Woman" competition, however, thought they could do better.

Akram Galal, the chief organizer, set no physical requirements for the applicants, although they had to prove they were 18 to 26 years old and single, with Egyptian parents.

At the pageant, a jury of 19 movie stars, journalists, singers and other notables were told to judge contestants on general knowledge, culture, self-confidence, talent and ambition. Physical beauty was a minor consideration, they were told.

Still, by showtime the contestants, who'd been told to wear only simple black dresses, had spruced themselves up with mid-thigh hemlines, jewelry and make-up. Those who professed singing or dancing talent were asked to perform on stage.

"It is not necessary to be veiled to be devout," insisted one contestant, Dalia Ghassan, 21, a dentistry student.

For now, no new fatwa has been issued, although Shamseddine said "there might be."

As she was proclaimed winner, many in the audience stood and shouted "Squash!" — an Egyptian way of saying the contest was fixed. Ms. Shawky's sister was a famous TV announcer, and her family was well-known to the jury.

Motivational board-breaking exercise ends with broken arms

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — At the end of a 16-month motivational course, supervisors at the state Department of Ecology got the satisfaction of smashing a nearly 1-inch-thick board with their hands.

Some wished they hadn't.

Curt Eschels broke his right arm in two places. Gary Hanson broke his wrist.

"It sounded like a neat exercise, but two guys getting hurt is too high a price to pay," said Eschels, special assistant to Ecology Director Christine Gregoire.

After 20 training sessions, participants were given the option of breaking a board 12 inches long, 10 inches wide and ⅞ of an inch thick — to symbolize breaking through an obstacle course, said trainer Terry Schmidt.

The exercise was for those who attended all the sessions, which Eschels had not, or for those who had not previously broken an arm or wrist, Schmidt said. Hanson participated even though he previously broken an arm.

"I certainly regret the injuries, and it hurts me almost as much as it hurts them," said Schmidt, president of Management Concepts International Inc. of Tukwila.

Hundreds of people who took part in the company's programs had done the board-breaking exercise without injury during the past three years, he said.

Those who completed the course showed marked improvement and enthusiasm for their work, agreed Schmidt, Eschels and Melanie Luh, assistant director for public education and information.

Nature doesn't cooperate for ice delivery

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Wintry weather got in the way of preparations for the 1992 Winter Carnival. It was too icy to get the first load of ice into town.

At 37 degrees, the temperature was relatively balmy for Thursday's ceremonial laying of the first block for the ice castle, but plenty of ice was due by truck from Green Lake, near Willmar.

The ice didn't show up when expected, however, because there was too much ice — on the roads.

Freezing rain had made roads treacherous in the Willmar area, causing so many accidents that the State Patrol had to back off plans to escort the truckload of ice to St. Paul.

Not long afterward, the truck arrived with 88 blocks.

Despite Minnesota's reputation of having cold, snowbound winters, the weather doesn't always cooperate for the Winter Carnival. In January 1987, there was hardly any snow and most of that melted, so raw material for snow sculptures had to be trucked in from a ski resort. On the other hand, in 1989 it was so cold marching band musicians couldn't put their instruments to their lips.
