Economy helps thin welfare rolls

White House report claims booming conditions aid recipients

By Laura Meckler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The booming economy is responsible for almost half a dramatic drop in welfare numbers nationwide, a White House report concludes. It poses the obvious question: What happens when the economy inevitably slows?

The report, released Friday by the Council of Economic Advisers, also credits states that experiment most boldly with welfare changes, particularly those that punish recipients who don't participate in work requirements.

"This study is further proof that welfare reform works," said Bruce Reed, President Clinton's chief domestic policy adviser. "It isn't just 'the economy, stupid.' It's welfare reform as well."

But the economy is responsible for 44 percent of caseload drops, according to the analysis of unemployment rates, welfare policies and caseload changes. It concluded that policy changes enacted by states under federal waivers account for 31 percent of the decline.

The report comes as states, freed from all but a few federal restrictions, take responsibility for creating welfare programs.

The other 25 percent was unaccounted for, although administration officials credited policies such as expansion of a tax credit for the working poor.

Low unemployment means more job chances for people leaving welfare, and the current economic expansion is already the third longest in history.

Welfare rolls jumped during the 1990-91 recession and began to fall as the economy strengthened in 1993 and 1994. So what happens if the economy turns down?

"We did not pretend when the president signed the bill that there were enough protections in an economic downturn," said Donna Shalala, the secretary of Health and Human Services.

But she pointed out that federal payments to states are based on caseloads at their peaks, meaning states will have more money per welfare recipient than ever before. Many states are saving that money for an economic rainy day, she said.

The report comes as states, freed from all but a few federal restrictions, take responsibility for creating welfare programs. The six-decade federal guarantee of aid for the poorest Americans disappeared when Clinton signed the welfare law last summer.

States begin the task a step ahead. The number of people on welfare has fallen dramatically since peaking in

Western Day puts students in touch with the pioneers

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Teachers and volunteers rounded up fourth-grade students at Henderson Elementary Friday for the school's fifth annual Western Day.

Volunteers brought horses for the students to ride around the playground; others brought sheep and goats and still others demonstrated roping and helped students try their hand at it. The Dellwood Senior Citizens Line Dancers performed as did Mexican folkloric dancers and a volunteer who helped the students make fresh tortillas. Out in the breezeway, students got to pan for gold in one of two small sand-and-water filled wading pools.

"We have such great people come in from the community" for the day, said Henderson teacher Vicki Brasher. "They essentially come up and spend the day, giving of their time and all they get is lunch. They're really remarkable."

She explained that the day's events conclude a Social Studies unit on Texas for the fourth graders. In the unit, they study Texas history and geography, cowboys and the various Indian tribes.

"These activities allow them to see and touch and participate in western activities," she said. "This really brings the lessons home."

This year, a Latin touch was added with the folkloric dancers and tortilla maker.

The day's activities are limited to the fourth graders and inclusion students who participate with the various fourth grade classes because it's in conjunction with their Social Studies unit, she said.

Not only does Western Day give the fourth graders hands-on experience with western ways, it gives them other experiences, Brasher said.

"This gives them an opportunity to do something they've never done before," she said, citing a girl in her class who had never ridden a horse and was excited about getting to ride a horse during the

Sunny weather follows storms

■ Forecasters expect rains next week with Pacific front moving into Midland area.

By Kes Gilhome
Staff Writer

Midlanders can expect sunny skies and warm weather over the weekend but more rain is in the offing for next week, according to officials with the National Weather Service in Midland.

The cold front that brought rain, thunderstorms and even a tornado to the Permian Basin Thursday has moved south, "Taking with it all the instability and moisture," said Eddie Brite with the NWS.

Today will be mostly sunny with highs in the upper 70s and early light winds intensifying and becoming southeasterly at 5-15 mph. The good weather will continue through Sunday with lows tonight expected to dip only into the lower 50s. Sunday will be slightly warmer with the expected high in the low 80s.

Monday will be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-70s and a slight chance of showers and thunderstorms.

More thunderstorms are expected through next week as a low pressure system from the Pacific enters the Midland area.

The National Weather Service at Midland International Airport reported .06 of an inch of rain Thursday and .09 of an inch Friday, bringing the total precipitation for May to .20 of an inch.

Total precipitation for the year to date is 4.38 inches, a full 1.5 inches above the average figure of 2.87 inches.

According to the NWS, the inclement weather Thursday was caused by a cold front extending from Oklahoma to the Big Bend region. Warm winds from the south collided with cold winds from the north producing high winds, hail and thunderstorms. Some structural damage was reported in West Odessa after large hail damaged homes in outlying areas.

Midland Doppler radar showed a significant storm near Andrews Thursday and spotters in the area reported a tornado touching down approximately 15 miles northwest of Andrews near Frankel City. No damage was reported, according to the Andrews Sheriff's Department.

Friday's high temperature was 68 degrees, as compared to a record high of 101 degrees set in 1967. The low was 51 degrees, compared with 42 set in 1969.

Texas pastor's morning routine upset by rare meteorite strike

By Richard Stewart
Hearst News Service

BEAUMONT — A heavenly visitor arrived at the home of the Rev. Howard Cameron, but it wasn't spiritual — it was a marble-sized rock from outer space that slammed through the roof.

As Cameron was shaving the morning of May 2, he felt more than heard the shock of what since has been dubbed the Beaumont Meteorite. It punched a hole in his roof, crashed through the ceiling of his bedroom closet and embedded itself in a wall.

"At the time, I thought it was a plant explosion," recalled Cameron, pastor of the nondenominational Trinity Church. It took several days and the help of a Lamar University geology professor who studies meteorites for Cameron to find out what shook his house that morning.

His wife, Marilyn, and 7-year-old daughter, Caitlyn, both said the noise woke them up. Thinking it came from an explosion, Cameron turned on the radio to listen for news of an industrial disaster. Nothing.

Seeing no damage around his home, Cameron didn't think much more about it.

But the next day as he was cleaning his gutters, he saw a half-dollar-sized hole in his roof. "It was as neatly cut out as if somebody had used a punch," he said. Looking around inside, he found a hole in the ceiling of his bedroom closet.

JOBS: Strong economy helps welfare

(From 1A)

1994 — 20 percent nationwide and more than 40 percent in states such as Wisconsin and Oregon.

But no one knows how long that will last — or what has happened to people who leave the rolls.

"The key question is, are we pushing more people into poverty? We don't know," Shalala said.

The report notes the relationship between economic conditions and welfare is not perfect. For instance, welfare rolls in Virginia dropped 20 percent although unemployment was above average between 1993 and 1996.

Robert Rector, who analyzes welfare for the conservative Heritage Foundation, argues there is "virtually no relationship" between the economy and caseloads. In the booming 1960s, caseloads rose as welfare was expanded, and in the early 1980s, caseloads remained steady during a recession because eligibility standards were tightened.

"Over the long term, anybody who knows anything about this can see the welfare policies are much more important than the economy in terms of reducing caseloads," Rector said.

The study also credits welfare policies including the effects of state experiments. By 1996, 35 states operated under major statewide waivers.

Analyzing six popular policies, the report concludes only one had a significant effect: punishing people who will not participate in work programs. That often means reducing benefits, or sometimes removing people from rolls. The policy is estimated to reduce caseloads by nearly 10 percent.

But states often began a variety of changes at once, making it difficult to determine the effect of each. Further, severity and frequency of sanctions vary by state.

While administration officials welcome the declines, they acknowledge they don't know how much further they can fall before the most employable people are in jobs, and only people with the toughest problems remain.

"One of the things that we don't know ... is whether the drop continues, or whether you get to a point where it's a much tougher population to move from welfare to work," Shalala said.

Rector counters that many never thought caseloads would decline this far.

"We've been waiting for the bottom of the barrel," he said. "The bottom of the barrel is far, far lower down than anyone imagined."

day.

The students also benefit from meeting different types of people from the community, she said, such as the Dellwood Senior Citizens Line Dancers.

"It's good for them to be around positive role models," she said.

Western Day got its start five years ago with two fourth grade teachers who, after concluding the study unit on Texas, started with just a few simple activities and it has grown from there.

Brasher said she looks forward to the day's activities as much as her students and the way the teachers work together and help each other out make Western Day even more fun.

"The kids remember this," she said. "Each year I have my fourth grade class write notes for the next fourth grade class and this gets mentioned a lot."

ROCK: Rare discovery lands in Beaumont

(From 1A)

"The only thing I could find was plaster dust," he said.

Believing that something had fallen out of the sky, he contacted Lamar University. His inquiry was turned over to geology professor Jim Jordan, who studied meteorites for 6 1/2 years at the Max Planck Institute for Astronomy in Heidelberg, Germany.

Although about 3,000 meteorites strike Earth every day, Jordan said, only a few thousand have ever been found, and only a handful have been observed as they fell.

"It's even rarer," he added, "to be a scientist who studies meteors and have a fall in your hometown."

Jordan visited Cameron's home this week and found fragments of the space rock embedded in the closet wall.

"The meteorite had taken a right-hand turn," Cameron said. "It had ended up behind some picture albums."

Nothing inside the closet was damaged, Cameron said. If the rock had not turned, it might have landed near his wife, who was sleeping six to 10 feet away.

Cameron thinks an angel changed the meteor's path. Jordan said it might have hit a rafter.

Preliminary studies indicate the meteorite is a type called a chondrite, a stony bit of material left over from the formation of the solar system. It probably drifted in the asteroid belt between Mars and Jupiter for 4.5 billion years or so, until something dislodged it from its orbit and sent it on a path toward Cameron's roof.

It may have been part of a much larger rock that broke up as it entered Earth's atmosphere at 40,000 mph. It was probably going much slower when it hit the house, though still faster than a bullet, Jordan said.

On Friday, Jordan contacted Don Bogard, senior planetary scientist at the Johnson Space Center in Houston and former secretary of The Meteoritical Society, to request that the rock officially be named the Beaumont Meteorite.

Bogard said other meteorites might have fallen with the piece that hit Cameron's house, but it is unlikely that more will be found. Most meteorites are found in Antarctica, where they are easy to spot against snow and ice.

Several decades ago, he said, observers saw a meteorite fall in a Kansas wheat field. Hundreds of searchers, however, could not find it. Months later, a farmer plowing his field came across a hole that was 6 feet wide and 6 feet deep.

There have been no recorded cases of anybody being killed or seriously injured by a falling space rock, Bogard said. One woman was known to have been bruised by one.

Instances of them hitting houses also are quite rare, he said. The town of Wetherfield, Conn., for some reason, has had two reports of meteorites hitting homes, he said.

Cameron said he doesn't know if his insurance covers meteorites, but he doesn't intend to file a claim. "There wasn't enough damage to meet my deductible," he said.

Meanwhile, he is using his close encounter as an object lesson in his sermons to show that God protects people from harm.

Hospice of Midland, its proper name, is the not-for-profit organization which was the subject of the column. Home Hospice is a for-profit group which will stage its grand opening and open house on May 15.

Texas Home School Week recognizes movement

From Staff Reports

In recognition of the continued growth of home education, the week of May 4-10 was set aside as Texas Home School Week.

The publication Texas Home School Review reports that home schooling in the United States is growing by 15 percent each year. Currently, approximately 1 million families home school their children; 75,000 of those are in Texas.

Local home school students and members of the Midland Association of Christian Home Educators (MACHE) celebrated with a Spring Open House May 1 at Golf Course Road Church of Christ. Students displayed everything from elaborate exhibits of science projects, to art, to a collection of tools, clothing, beadwork and weapons used in studying U.S. history of the early 1800s. It was one of the final activities of the support group for the 1996-97 school year.

MACHE's group activities throughout the year include numerous elementary and secondary level field trips, geography and spelling bees, a weekly gymnastics class, participation in the nomination of Bluebonnet Award books, mothers' support meetings, and social activity times such as park days and parties for students and their families. Activities vary from year to year. Some years MACHE fields a track team.

Home schooling is primarily a tutorial method of education.

Brian D. Ray, Ph.D. of the National Home Education Research Institute, recently released findings from a study of home educated students. His findings were reported in the Texas Home School Review

"These students scored, on the average, at high percentiles on standardized academic achievement tests: (a) total reading, 87th, (b) total language, 80th, (c) total math, 82nd, (d) total listening, 85th, (e) science, 84th, (f) social studies, 85th, (g) study skills, 81st, (h) basic battery [typically, reading, language, and mathematics], 85th, and (k) complete battery [all subject areas in which student was tested], 87th. [The national average is the 50th percentile.]"

For more information, contact the Home Oriented Private Education for Texas (HOPE) at (214) 358-2221 or refer to the group's Handbook for Texas Home Schoolers.

Home equity lending finds favor in Texas House

AUSTIN (AP) — A constitutional amendment that would allow Texans to use the equity in their homes as collateral for loans was approved Friday night by the Texas House.

Under the House proposal, a homeowner could take a loan on 75 percent of the amount paid on the home without having to use any additional assets as collateral. For example, if an owner has paid $50,000 on a $100,000 home, only $37,500 — or 75 percent of the $50,000 — could be secured with the home.

The measure was approved on a vote of 112-36. The proposed constitutional amendment goes to the Senate, which approved a different home-equity measure that consumer groups consider to be more favorable to lenders.

"The bank doesn't have the hammer in this bill," said Rep. Pete Patterson, D-Brookston, sponsor of the legislation. "This is a people's bill."

If approved by the Legislature, Texans would be required to vote on the proposal because it makes changes to the Texas Constitution. A separate bill that would enact the changes into law was expected to be debated Saturday.

The debate lasted more than five hours and drew passionate arguments on both sides of the issue. Texas is currently the only state that imposes restrictions on home equity lending.

"For years, we have stood firm against the special interests that want this bill," said Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, who voted against the bill. "We have always protected the homestead exemption. We are going to turn the clock back on the people of Texas. People in Texas will lose their homes."

Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, spoke in favor of the bill.

"People are shocked when they learn that only in Texas is a person prevented from controlling their financial destiny," she said.

"This doesn't force anyone to take out a second mortgage. It gives them the right to make a decision, or not, that is right for them."

The proposed constitutional amendment was introduced by Patterson, but was considerably changed — with his consent — on the floor of the House by Rep. Steve Wolens, D-Dallas.

With rain forest backdrop, Clinton urges environmental effort

'We are trying to make preservation of the environment and sustainable development the policy of every nation in the world.'

— President Clinton

BRAULIO CARRILLO NATIONAL PARK, Costa Rica (AP) — Soaked by the tropical downpour of a lush virgin rain forest, President Clinton forged agreements with Costa Rica Friday to share environmental technology. "We destroy these resources at our peril," he said.

Having avoided talk of the environment at stops in smoggy Mexico City earlier this week, the president held up Costa Rica as an example of how Latin America can clean up its act.

"We are trying to make preservation of the environment and sustainable development the policy of every nation in the world," he called to his mountainside audience huddled under umbrellas and rain slickers.

With Costa Rican President Jose Figueres at his side, a hatless and soaked Clinton hurried Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt to seal the U.S.-Costa Rica agreements with his signature "before the paper is too wet."

Figueres heralded the modest accord as another step by Costa Ricans toward hemispheric harmony: "Just as 50 years ago we declared peace to the world by abolishing our army, and now we carry out our commitment by holding to a paradigm of development that combines social, economic and environmental issues in order to offer ... a better life to the new generation of the new millenium."

After meeting with a full cast of Central American leaders Thursday in San Jose, the president broke out of the city Friday morning by helicopter.

"You were very, very emphatic about wanting to visit a rain forest," Figueres kidded Clinton. "We have some thunder and lightning on order in a few minutes."

The 500-square-mile preserve, the second-largest in Costa Rica, features towering mountains and a rain forest that is home to more than 500 species of birds, including the quetzal and black-faced solitaire.

Its Rio Sucio (Dirty River) runs orange, a product of the geological spew from the Irazu volcano.

The park is evidence of Latin America's abundant natural wonders. It also is a somber reminder of resources the region has spoiled by pollution, laid bare by deforestation and suffocated in smog.

"Costa Rica is showing the way," Clinton said before outlining their agreements:

—A U.S. commitment to help Costa Rica devise ways to use electric vehicles to reduce dangerous emissions.

—Electric buses would be sold to Costa Rica by a U.S. company the aides did not disclose.

—Costa Rica will give the United States computer software it uses to chart biodiversity in rain forests. The administration thinks it will be useful at Yellowstone National Park.

—U.S. help to train wildlife preservationists in Latin America.

These are bite-sized initiatives, but the administration said Clinton's visit carried greater symbolic weight: He is holding up Costa Rica as an example of how Latin American can — and should — clean up its act.

He purposely avoided the topic in smoggy Mexico City this week, deciding to stress the positive strides by Costa Rica instead of Mexico's problems.

Costa Rica, which has perhaps the best national park system in the world, has tried to prove that aggressive environmental policies do not undermine economic development; in the long-run they can help.

Figueres, a West Point graduate, is considered an innovator in ecotourism — attracting visitors who spend money to see lush natural beauty. He endorsed a new carbon tax devoted to restoring tropical forests, imposed a new electricity tax to promote energy conservation and blocked business developments that he said posed harm to the environment.

Deforestation is a punishable offense in Costa Rica.

Clinton proposed several poll-tested environmental policies in the 1996 campaign, including a promise to clean up toxic waste dumps.

The forest trip ends Clinton's two-day visit here. He was attending a Caribbean summit in Barbados today, then taking a day or two off on the sunny isle.

Mobutu agrees to elections, says he's too ill to run

'We are not fighting Mobutu. We are fighting a system, and in that parliament there are people who are part of that system.'

— Bizima Karaha
rebel foreign minister

LIBREVILLE, Gabon (AP) — Letting his country wait, Zairian President Mobutu Sese Seko kept his plane on the runway Friday in neighboring Gabon, fueling speculation that he will choose exile rather than fly home as promised.

The ailing dictator, dying of cancer and losing a seven-month civil war, has agreed to long-delayed elections and acknowledged he is too ill to be a candidate.

Despite repeated assurances by his aides that Mobutu would return to Kinshasa on Friday, diplomatic sources said he would remain in neighboring Gabon for another night.

South African Deputy President Thabo Mbeki was expected in Libreville in the evening for talks with Mobutu.

Earlier Friday, Mbeki met with rebel leader Laurent Kabila in the southern Zairian city of Lubumbashi. Mbeki said Kabila had agreed to meet Mobutu next Wednesday aboard a South African ship for a second round of peace talks.

On Thursday, Mobutu met with five other African leaders in Libreville and emerged with a document in which he called on his military to prepare the country for elections. The pledge, signed by all six leaders, said Mobutu, who is suffering from prostate cancer, was too ill to stand for the vote himself.

The statement made no mention of Mobutu resigning or giving power to a transitional authority that would include Kabila, as the rebel chief has demanded.

Mobutu — who seized power in a 1965 military coup — has postponed the country's first multiparty elections since promising a transition to democracy in 1990. But with mounting international pressure and the rebels closing in on the capital, he has in recent weeks repeated his promise.

In Kinshasa, pressure was increasing on Mobutu to cede power. For the first time, political parties within the parliament announced their support for Kabila's Alliance of Democratic Forces for Liberation of Congo-Zaire.

A communique released in the capital Friday said peaceful demands for democratic change had failed to produce results or bring elections.

"Given that the only language understood by those in power is the language of arms," the statement expressed support for armed struggle to put the country on the path toward free and fair elections.

"We proclaim our support for the Alliance's platform and call on the Alliance to use their weapons in a manner that will permit it to achieve the goals" of democracy, it said.

The parties signing the communique — such as the National Federation of Christian Democrats and the Zairian Association of former National Police Officers and Agents — don't hold much power in the transitional parliament. But it is the first time political parties have publicly supported Kabila's use of arms to oust the 66-year-old dictator.

Rebel foreign minister Bizima Karaha in Lubumbashi said Friday that Kabila was only going to meet Mobutu to secure his resignation.

Karaha added that a proposal for Mobutu to turn power over to a transitional figure was unacceptable.

"We are not fighting Mobutu. We are fighting a system, and in that parliament there are people who are part of that system," Karaha said. "It's just a maneuver of giving power to somebody, shifting but in the same cycle."

Rebel forces have been meeting uncommon resistance since Sunday in their drive on the capital. Fighting was reported to be especially heavy around Kenge, 120 miles to the east. The rebels say former Rwandan Hutu soldiers and troops from Jonas Savimbi's National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, or UNITA, from Angola made up the bulk of troops fighting on the government side.

In the capital Friday, several hundred Mobutu supporters gathered in front of the U.S. Embassy in a peaceful rally calling for his return. The Zairian government has accused the United States of joining Uganda and Rwanda in their support of Kabila's movement to unseat Mobutu.

The demonstrators called for peaceful negotiations, waving placards reading, "We don't want a blood bath in our dear capital."

Police arrest 8 for taking over Venice bell tower

■ Separatists take over famed tower for 7½ hours; police round them up in raid that took 10 minutes.

Associated Press

VENICE, Italy — It was a bizarre piece of political theater by any standard, and by the time the tourists were thronging St. Mark's Square on Friday morning, it was all over.

In a lightening raid, police commandos rounded up eight Venetian separatists, ending their 7 1/2-hour takeover of the piazza's famed 324-foot bell tower in just 10 bloodless minutes.

The bell tower that presides over the heart of this city of canals was out of danger — but the political fallout was just beginning.

The drama began just after midnight, when eight men in camouflage boarded a ferry with an armored vehicle and a camper.

Capt. Giovanni Girotto thought they were just another load of military passengers — until one of them pulled out a gun and ordered him to sail to the landing at St. Mark's Square.

Somehow, they managed to get the vehicle off the ferry, park it, break into the tower and take up positions inside without anyone stopping them. It was not until 1:30 a.m. that a passer-by alerted police.

Hundreds of police then sealed off the square and authorities spent most of the night trying to negotiate with the men that chief prosecutor Mario Daniele called "crazies."

"But even crazies must be taken seriously until you're sure it's a bluff," he said.

The separatists unfurled a banner proclaiming that the "government" of a new Venetian republic had taken the tower.

Around dawn, they interrupted a local TV broadcast with a powerful transmitter.

"Attention, the Most Serene Venetian government has occupied the bell tower of St. Mark's," a faint male voice said.

The commando raid came at 8:30 a.m., from three fronts of the tower that dates from the ninth century.

Some police rushed in the front door, others came through a low window and another batch climbed up outside on scaffolding set up for repair work.

Six separatists inside the tower were quickly overpowered; two more inside the homemade armored vehicle surrendered without a fight after the commandos threatened to blow it up.

Police found a single submachine-gun; enough food, water and kerosene for several days; clean, ironed underwear; crackers and some local wine and several flyers signed by the "Serenissima Repubblica" or "The Most Serene Republic."

That is the historical name for Venice during the hundreds of years it was an independent republic and one of Europe's great economic powers. Next Monday is the 200th anniversary of the fall of the Venetian Republic.

It was not the first time that Italy's landmarks have been used as stages for political or criminal messages. In 1993, bombings blamed on the Mafia damaged the Uffizi museum in Florence and two churches in Rome.

In recent years, Venice — for centuries a rich, powerful seafaring republic — has become a symbol for the discontent of Italy's affluent north. But the tower takeover provoked an instant outcry and sharp condemnations of the autonomy-minded Northern League party.

"It's clear that in a climate where one talks of secession ... these things can happen," Venice Mayor Massimo Cacciari said.

Northern League leader Umberto Bossi disavowed any connection to Friday's occupation, which he dismissed as "theater."

"We don't have anything to do with it," said Bossi, whose symbolic declaration of an independent northern republic last year badly damaged his party's image.

The party's growth has been fueled by northern discontent with high taxes and the central government in Rome. The League has fared poorly in Venice itself, but has strong support in the surrounding region.

Venice prosecutor Rita Ugolini said the men, who will undergo formal questioning Saturday, face charges of hijacking, subversion and arms possession.

Italian television said one of them became ill and was hospitalized. It interviewed friends and neighbors, who described them all as ordinary working men from the region around Venice. At least one belongs to the Northern League.

"We're political prisoners," one yelled as the suspects were taken away in a convoy of police boats.

Body shop owner identifies McVeigh as man who rented truck

DENVER (AP) — A body shop owner identified Timothy McVeigh on Friday as the man who rented the 20-foot yellow Ryder truck that authorities say was used in the Oklahoma City bombing.

Eldon Elliott said McVeigh walked into his body shop in Junction City, Kan., two days before the bombing and paid the balance of the $280.32 rental fee in cash. He gave his name as Robert Kling and turned down the insurance, saying: "I'm a good driver."

Asked by prosecutor Scott Mendelsoff to look around the courtroom for the man, Elliott pointed at McVeigh and said, "Right over there. Blue shirt."

McVeigh, sitting at the defense table, was wearing a blue dress shirt. He showed no reaction.

Elliott said he saw McVeigh twice, once when he reserved the truck on April 15, 1995, and when he picked it up on April 17, 1995. The witness emphasized he was sure of his identification.

"I was just inches from him," Elliott said.

Prosecutors say two days after the truck was picked up, on April 19, 1995, McVeigh packed it with explosives and drove it to the downtown Oklahoma City federal building, where the bomb was detonated, killing 168 people.

McVeigh rented the truck for a one-way haul to Omaha, Neb., and the decorated Gulf War veteran was given a 10 percent discount for being in the military, Elliott said.

The papers were signed "Robert D. Kling" and the driver's license listed the birth date as April 19, 1970. McVeigh's real birth date is April 23, 1968.

April 19 is the same day as the bombing and the deadly FBI siege at Waco, Texas, in 1993, that prosecutors say the bombing was plotted to avenge.

Prosecutors built up to Elliott's testimony by meticulously constructing a time line of McVeigh's movements in the critical days before the bombing, using everything from a McDonald's security camera video to a Chinese take-out order.

Jurors saw McDonald's security pictures of McVeigh holding a fruit pie and checking his watch just before he allegedly walked to Elliott's to pick up the truck.

A courtroom monitor flashed the jerky, stop-action black-and-white pictures of the lanky McVeigh walking through the McDonald's straight at the camera, an image that caused some bombing survivors and relatives to flinch.

A cab company official testified one of her cars had transported someone from the Junction City motel where McVeigh was staying to the McDonald's. Prosecutors say McVeigh took a cab because his car was parked near the federal building in Oklahoma City, waiting to serve as his getaway.

David D'Albini, who was manager of the McDonald's at the time, identified still pictures from the tape as McVeigh at the counter buying a fruit pie and later walking through the dining area.

"It's him, isn't it, there's no doubt in your mind?" McVeigh attorney Stephen Jones asked.

"Yes," D'Albini replied.

Prosecutors say McVeigh spent eight minutes in the restaurant and then made a 15-minute walk to Elliott's.

Authorities traced the bomb-carrying truck to Elliott's through a vehicle identification number on a truck axle found in the bombing debris. The truck matching that number was rented April 17, 1995, at Elliott's by a man using the name Robert Kling.

Earlier Friday, prosecutors called a Chinese restaurant owner to link McVeigh to the Kling name.

Stakes high as parties battle over government shutdown ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government shutdowns in the winter of 1995-96 were a watershed political trauma for Republicans. Now it's payback time.

"We've learned the lesson," House Speaker Newt Gingrich said Friday.

But GOP efforts to force Clinton to accept legislation to prevent future shutdowns is generating the same kind of partisan standoff that led to the earlier cutoff of federal funds.

As he did before, Clinton is vowing to stand fast and use his veto powers if necessary.

This time, emergency aid for flood victims, rather than the full federal government, is at risk. But the two parties are once again engaged in a high-stakes game of chicken fraught with political risks for both sides.

On a party-line roll call Thursday, the Senate voted 55-45 to keep in a $8.4 billion emergency-aid bill a GOP amendment to put the government on temporary autopilot in times of fiscal stalemate.

Gingrich, in an interview with The Associated Press, predicted the House would follow the Senate's lead.

"I'm very surprised that the president wants to reserve to himself the right to close the government," he said.

"Given the lessons of the recent past, we should agree mutually that we're not going to close the government. We're trying to cooperate," he added.

The House takes up the disaster-relief bill next week.

The anti-shutdown provision has nothing to do with disaster aid. But Republicans hoped attaching it as a rider would protect it from a veto.

Now they're having to think that one again.

"It will be vetoed" if the anti-shutdown provision remains, Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, whose home state of South Dakota would benefit from the emergency aid, somberly informed the Senate on Thursday.

Since the GOP-controlled Congress probably couldn't muster the two-thirds votes necessary to override a veto, that would mean Congress would have to start again on a new relief bill that Clinton could accept.

Delaying the needed disaster aid wouldn't be popular for either party.

No one argues with the goal of keeping vital government functions from being held hostage to political skirmishes.

But the mechanism would strip from Clinton and congressional Democrats important leverage they're not about to relinquish without a fight.

Under the GOP-sponsored measure, federal programs and departments would continue to operate at present levels if the next fiscal year opens on Oct. 1 without passage of the spending bills necessary to run government.

Democratic critics claimed the process was an indirect way for Republicans to block Democratic initiatives and freeze programs the president wants to enlarge.

"It's a Trojan horse," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., "a government shutdown on the installment plan."

And Sen. Robert Byrd, D-Va., a former Senate majority leader, said, "When the going gets tough ... Congress is likely to just yield to this mindless, automatic mechanism."

In late 1995 and early 1996, parts of the federal government were shut down twice — for a total of 27 days — after Clinton vetoed spending bills with provisions he opposed.

National parks closed, access to national forests was restricted, FHA mortgages and housing vouchers were halted, applications for passports were not processed and veterans benefits were delayed.

Of all the bold moves Republicans made after seizing control of both chambers of Congress in 1994, the shutdown was "the one people found the hardest to understand," Gingrich conceded Friday.

In standing up to Congress, Clinton solidified his presidential-race lead over Republican Bob Dole in public opinion polls and never lost it.

Even though they retained control of Congress in 1996, Republicans are still haunted by the shutdown — and don't want to take the blame for another one.

"They don't want to be twice burned," said pollster Andrew Kohut, director of the Pew Research Center.

"Overwhelming public response to the shutdown was to say the Republicans were more at fault, more responsible for this, than was Clinton. It was instrumental in Clinton's recovery," Kohut said.

Astronauts lament America's waning love for science

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surrounded by the hardware that broke the grip of gravity, three astronauts talked Friday about what the nation has lost: its inspiration and fascination with science. "Space flight is such a neat thing," said Story Musgrave, who's been there six times.

"Without dreams, we wither," said a fourth space buff, movie maker Ron Howard, who directed "Apollo 13."

They testified about "America's Vision for the Future of Space Exploration" at a congressional hearing held not in Congress, but in the Air and Space Museum. The spectacular setting became a noisy one when the doors opened to hordes of young springtime visitors.

It was good, however, for the photographs: Buzz Aldrin, the second man to set foot on the moon, seated in front of a lunar module like the one he piloted; Walter Cunningham, of the Apollo 7 crew, a few steps away from an Apollo command ship; Musgrave, who led the Hubble Telescope repair crew in 1993, seated just below a large model of the telescope suspended from the ceiling.

Howard, best known as Opie on the "Andy Griffith Show," and Richie Cunningham on "Happy Days," pronounced himself awed to be in such company.

"There's an old joke that goes 'Hi, I'm from the government; I'm here to help you,'" is how he began his testimony. "Well, hi, I'm from Hollywood and I'm here to tell you what to do."

Aldrin said his message is a call to action for Americans, especially young ones. "America must again dream," he said, "have the faith to achieve the dream.

> 'Let me say, as I sit here before you today, having walked on the moon, that I am myself still awed by that miracle.'
> — Buzz Aldrin
> Astronaut

"Let me say, as I sit here before you today, having walked on the moon, that I am myself still awed by that miracle," Aldrin said. "That awe, in me and in each of us ... must be the engine of future achievement, not a slow-dimming light from a time once bright."

After six flights — a record he shares with John Young — Musgrave has been told by NASA he won't go into space any more. So now he can say things he might not have otherwise.

"We should evaluate our priorities of how we manage our resources," he said. "I would like to see programs that do not devour our resources on space." To do science, "We don't have to fly humans and we don't need to fly humans."

And Cunningham, who now is a Houston businessman, deplored the fact that "security and a risk-free existence have replaced opportunity and the chance of dangerous adventure" for Americans.

The three men who were to take the first Apollo flight died in a launch pad fire during a countdown rehearsal and Cunningham was on the crew that took their place.

He lauded the risk takers. "It's the Christopher Columbuses and the Neil Armstrongs who move us forward, not the Ralph Naders," Cunningham said. "With a Ralph Nader at the head of a wagon train, we would never have made it across the plains and over the Rockies."

America, he said, has a crisis of will. "Today, we fail not because of our inability to do something; we fail because of our unwillingness to tackle it in the first place."

The best lines of the session came from Howard and Musgrave.

"I come from an industry that dreams for a living," said the movie maker.

"Space is my calling," said Musgrave. "It is what I am and what I do."

Senate's plan adds provision to allow renters to get half of landlords' tax cuts.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas renters would get about half of their landlords' property tax cuts over three years under a change to a Senate plan to lower local school property taxes.

The full Senate began debate on the tax proposal Friday and was expected to give final approval to the bill and an accompanying constitutional amendment before the end of the day.

The average school property tax, currently $1.40 per $100 in property value, would drop 17 cents per $100 under the Senate plan.

A House plan, approved last month, would cut the average by at least 60 cents.

The House plan offers Texans an overall 1.9 percent cut to their state and local taxes. The Senate plan offers Texans a 2.2 percent overall state and local tax cut.

With the renters provision, the Senate plan more evenly distributes the cuts between the richest and poorest Texas. However, under both plans, wealthier Texans would get more cuts than poorer and middle class Texans.

Sen. Ken Armbrister, D-Victoria, said the Senate plan offers Texans more even though its school property tax cuts are smaller than the cuts proposed by the House.

"The Senate plan costs Texans less in proposed new taxes and fees," said Armbrister, chairman of a special Senate committee that built the proposal. "We give greater total tax cuts than the House plan."

The Senate plan would expand the state business tax to all companies except sole proprietorships. That, combined with additional state education funding and other tax changes, would replace the $2.5 billion lost every two years because of the lower local school taxes.

The renters provision would force landlords to give their renters 75 percent of their property tax cuts in 1998, 50 percent of the cuts in 1999 and 25 percent in 2000.

Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, said after the third year, market forces should have forced rents down, making the provision unnecessary.

"Renters pay property taxes, too," he said while arguing for his amendment.

The House plan also contains a renters provision. It also would require landlords to share about half of their tax savings for three years, although through a different process.

In addition, the House plan would expand the business franchise tax, increase state education funding and raise other taxes to pay for the $5 billion in school property taxes that would be lost every two years under its plan.

The House plan contains an expansion of the state sales tax to about 30 goods and services not currently subject to the tax. The Senate plan expands the state sale tax to two additional services.

"We do not have any large-scale expansion of the sales tax," Armbrister said.

Rep. Paul Sadler, D-Henderson, said the Senate plan does not go far enough to make sure that school property taxes would remain lowered in the future. Sadler, chairman of the House committee that wrote that chamber's proposal, said he will fight for the House version.

Differences between any plan approved by the Senate and the House plan would have to be resolved in a conference committee between the chambers. A compromise would have to pass the House and Senate again before the end of the session, June 2.

Voters would have the final say on Aug. 9.

The tax bill is HB4. The constitutional amendment is HJR4.

Brother : Matson believed McLaren wouldn't surrender

DALLAS (AP) — The sole person killed in the wake of the Republic of Texas standoff was a victim of the separatists' leader, who duped him into believing the group would never surrender, the dead man's brother says.

Mike Matson, 48, died Monday in a shootout with authorities. He had fled the faction's encampment outside Fort Davis after self-styled Republic ambassador Richard McLaren agreed to go into state custody Saturday.

"It must have been the nightmare of his life when McLaren told him that he would give up," said Matson' older brother, Ralph Matson. "He left my brother hanging. My brother said, 'I will never again spend a minute in jail. I will fight to the death with anyone who tries to arrest me.'"

The younger Matson had been jailed in Orange County, Calif., for eight months late last year and early this year. He was confined for violating a gag order in a probate case.

Ralph Matson, 54, said his brother had not joined the Texas group before its weeklong standoff in the Davis Mountains, but had committed to protecting McLaren, who maintains Texas remains an independent republic.

'He duped my brother into thinking he was a freedom fighter. He traveled halfway across the country to protect this man. He was willing to give up his life and take bullets for McLaren.'

— Ralph Matson dead separatist's brother

The younger Matson wrote to his brother daily after his overnight watches as McLaren's bodyguard.

"He duped my brother into thinking he was a freedom fighter," said Ralph Matson. "He traveled halfway across the country to protect this man.

"He was willing to give up his life and take bullets for McLaren," Matson said Thursday in a telephone interview from Alpine, near the site of the standoff. "But after he capitulated, he is lucky that my brother didn't beat the hell out of him and head for the desert."

Matson, a resident of Colorado Springs, Colo., said his brother's remains would be cremated and his ashes taken to Chicago, where they have five sisters.

Mike Matson was killed after shooting at the bloodhounds that had been tracking him through the remote area around the Republic's so-called embassy. Richard Frank Keyes III, 21, who fled the same day, remains a fugitive.

Keyes faces several state charges stemming from the April 27 hostage-taking that sparked the standoff between McLaren's group and some 300 law enforcement officers.

McLaren and his wife, Evelyn, are being held in the Presidio County Jail in Marfa along with four of McLaren's followers.

McLaren faces state charges and has been indicted along with his wife on federal charges accusing them of issuing $1.8 billion in phony financial documents.

Book returned to Harvard after 233 years

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A book about the history of England has been returned to Harvard University — 233 years after it was checked out.

No one knows where the thick, leather-covered "Complete History of England with the Lives of All the Kings and Queens Thereof, Volume 3," has been. It was one of only a few books that survived a fire at the university in 1764, thanks to an unknown borrower who failed to return it.

"It's remarkable that it's come back," said Roger Stoddard, curator of rare books in the Harvard College Library.

The book itself is a relatively undistinguished volume of history that was written by Bishop White Kennett, printed in London in 1706 and given to Harvard by Thomas Bannister, a Boston minister, in 1709.

It was one of 404 books that escaped a fire in Harvard Hall when the building burned to the ground during the college's winter vacation on Jan. 25, 1764, destroying the rest of the 5,000-volume collection.

About 250 books that were being kept in storage were spared. Another 144 were out on loan, including one from the original bequest of John Harvard, after whom the university was named.

That book, "The Christian Warfare Against the Devil World and Flesh," by John Downame, was returned by an undergraduate who was profusely thanked and then expelled for having borrowed it without permission.

About 80 of the 144 missing volumes were eventually returned, and the other 10 thought lost.

The university replaced the "History of England" with a later edition. But when a Harvard history professor was shown an ancient copy by a rare book dealer, he immediately recognized the flyleaf stamp that identified the book in Latin as the property of Harvard University.

The professor, Mark Kishlansky, called the calfskin-covered antique "an exquisite old book."

Netscape CEO skips pay, bonus

Netscape Communications chief executive Jim Barksdale will accept only $1 in salary and any bonus this year, counting instead on the company's stock to increase his personal fortune.

In a document filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission, Netscape said that Barksdale will forgo his salary and bonus this year because he "believes that his compensation should be linked to the long-term interests of the company's stockholders."

The unusual move was seen as a gesture aimed at rallying morale at Netscape, the Mountain View Internet company whose shares have fallen on hard times. The stock, which peaked at $85.50 in December of 1995, hit a 52-week low of $25 last week. It closed yesterday at $27.06.

Netscape workers closely follow the stock because they all have stock options, which give them the right to buy shares at a preset price. When the share price drops, the value of the options drops as well. served as CEO of AT&T Wire.

Keyboard verdict

NEW YORK — In a setback for plaintiffs seeking damages from computer keyboard makers, a federal judge has thrown out a $5.3 million verdict against Digital Equipment Corp.

The jury verdict in December was a rare courtroom victory for sufferers of repetitive stress injuries against computer companies — and it was by far the largest award granted. At the time, plaintiffs' lawyers hailed the verdict as a landmark, meaning keyboard makers faced a huge potential liability from the many thousands of computer users afflicted with arm, wrist and hand injuries.

But in a decision announced orally on Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn, Judge Jack Weinstein said new evidence suggested that the crippling wrist injury suffered by the plaintiff, Patricia Geressy, was not necessarily related to her work as an executive secretary.

The new evidence, submitted as part of an appeal by Digital, included the results of a 1993 medical examination of Mrs. Geressy made at the behest of her employer, the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey. The exam found that her wrist injury was most likely caused by a muscular condition in her neck rather than by her working on a computer keyboard.

Year 2000 Division

MCI Communications Corp. said it set up a unit in its MCI Systemhouse consulting division dedicated to providing computer software changes and other services associated with the year 2000.

The No. 2 U.S. long-distance company said it equipped an office in Montreal to develop software fixes and write new programming for computers that aren't equipped to handle dates after 1999, a problem for many older mainframe computers.

MCI said it plans to set up similar offices in Ottowa, Canada, and Colorado Springs, Colorado, in the second quarter and that a London center will be finished in the third quarter.

The moves are designed to help MCI win a larger share of the Year 2000, or "Y2K" as it is also known, business from its telecommunications customers as well as outside clients. MCI bought Systemhouse in 1995 to build the consulting side of its business, which generates higher profit margins than the highly competitive long-distance business.

New Pentium chip brings choices — and confusion

By Dwight Silverman
N.Y. Times News Service

If you're in the market for an IBM-compatible computer, you've never had more choices — or more confusion. And it's about to get a lot worse.

On Wednesday, Intel Corp. will introduce yet another iteration of its Pentium microprocessor. The Pentium II will be the latest in a growing family of chips that serve as the main brain of a PC.

The Pentium II will initially come in two speeds — 233 and 266 megahertz — with friskier models promised down the road. There are two speeds in the Pentium Pro family — 180 and 200 megahertz. The recently launched Pentium with MMX chips also has two speeds — 166 and 200 megahertz, not counting the 150-megahertz version for notebook computers. And then there's the original Pentium, which remains available in 75, 90, 100, 120, 133, 150, 166 and 200 megahertz speeds.

But wait, there's more. Both Advanced Micro Devices and Cyrix either have or are bringing to market competitors to Intel's chips. Theirs will be cheaper, run just as fast and may be 100 percent compatible with Intel's offerings.

What's a motherboard to do? Start by thinking about how you are going to use a computer. Then, consider your budget and give some serious consideration to what you might or might not want to do with the machine in the near future.

Then, compare your needs to these chips' individual strengths and weaknesses: — The original Pentium — Intel just dramatically cut the price of these chips

Has a machine met it's match?

By David Einstein
N.Y. Times News Service

IBM is confident that its powerful computer, Deep Blue, can beat world chess champion Garry Kasparov in the rematch of their history-making man-versus-machine confrontation, which begins Saturday.

The odds, however, still appear to favor Kasparov, who has held the world title for the past 11 years. He made the 6-foot-5, 1.4-ton computer look like a club player in their first meeting last February.

Like the paintings of an artist after his death, the Web site of Texas separatist Richard McLaren has experienced its greatest demand since it was disconnected.

The site for McLaren's faction of the Republic of Texas group was called the Embassy of the Republic of Texas. As the standoff between McLaren and law enforcement dragged on last week, he sometimes used the site to post his account of the government's movements, describing armored personnel carriers and rifle-toting deputies.

The bizarre chronicle boosted the site's traffic from about 100 visitors a day to more than 100 an hour, said Todd Jagger, owner of The Overland Network, which hosted the site.

But after Jagger complied with law enforcement requests Thursday to disconnect McLaren's site, attempts to access it jumped to more than 100,000, he said.

Jagger, a photographer and sometime mandolin player for the Austin Lounge Lizards, has tried to defend McLaren's right to use his Web site as he pleases.

"Everyone deserves a right to air their opinions," Jagger said. But freedom of speech online does have its limits with

Profitability returns to AOL after six months of big losses

By Seth Schiesel
N.Y. Times News Service

America Online said Monday that it had returned to profitability in its third quarter after six months of heavy losses. The results surprised Wall Street analysts, who had predicted another loss for the nation's largest on-line service provider.

America Online's advertising revenue surged while its marketing costs were forced lower as part of a legal settlement with state attorneys general that forced the company to cut back its advertising.

As a result, the company earned $2.6 million, or 2 cents a share, on revenues of $456.2 million, for the quarter, which ended on March 31. Analysts polled by First Call had expected a loss of 7 cents a share.

The modest earnings were a retreat from the $15.1 million profit the company posted in its third quarter

Health & fitness in cyberspace

Editor's Note: This is Part 5 of a 5-part series focusing on women and the Internet.

By Karen L. Miller

This week, I'm especially pleased to share with you some great websites that can help you make better health care decisions. So, let's get on the Web because after all, isn't feeling good what life's all about?

The Merck Manual of Diagnosis and Therapy, the prestigious professional medical reference found on every doctor's bookshelf, can now be on your computer's screen. From head to toe, the Internet version of the Merck Manual (16th edition) covers symptoms, diagnosis and treatment of virtually every medical condition. Click on "first time users" to register for free access to the site. This is a powerful resource generally unavailable to the non-medical community.

I hope last week's Internet glossary has made cyberspace a friendlier place. Today, I'd like to introduce you to the renowned Mayo Clinic's Mayo Health O@sis Glossary of definitions. Because this is an all-around healthfully helpful web site, I encourage you to browse around.

You can also subscribe to "Housecall," the free e-mail bulletin about the Mayo Clinic's new features on the Web.

Wired magazine's famously hip Hotwired site provides a daily dose of alternative medical advice from Andrew T. Weil, MD, author of "Spontaneous Healing". Ask Dr. Weil focuses on a new question and answer each day and has an index of interesting past articles. Some recent subjects that have been treated with Dr. Weil's unique perspective include: snoring, flu shots, silicone implants, abs of steel, water filters and bean curd. While at the site, you can sign-up for Dr. Weil's free e-mail newsletter.

Dear Readers: For our first anniversary issue, I thought I would answer some of the questions that I'm asked the most. It's important to keep asking questions. That's how we find things out. Thanks for your questions!

How did you get this job? When I first learned how to use a computer to get on the Web, I had to ask other people for help. Sometimes, I had to figure out problems for myself. My teacher said not to quit until you find the answer. As I learned more, people started asking me for help. By helping others, I learned even more.

How do I get software to use the Web? All the software you need to use the Web is free. Ask your Internet Service Provider or someone who uses the Web to help you get started. If you don't know who to ask, you can buy books and kits at computer stores.

How can I start my own home page? First, check out Angelfire http://www.angelfire.com/ They give Web space for free. It has graphics and animated gifs that you can use on your page to make it awesome. If your school or your Internet Service Provider gives you server space, you will probably want to learn HTML. It's easy to learn. Go to http://www.smplanet.com/webpage/webpage.html for online instruction. The only software you need to get started is a wordprocessor and a browser.

AOL: Company hopes to reposition itself in marketplace a year ago, but marked a significant improvement from more recent results. Over the previous two quarters, the company had posted a combined loss of $508.5 million.

"I think we have turned the corner as relates to returning to profitability and we anticipate seeing progress in the future quarters," Stephen M. Case, America Online's chairman, said. "The progress we saw this quarter provides greater confidence in the soundness of our strategy."

A cornerstone of that strategy is re-positioning America Online as a media company along the lines of a magazine or newspaper, one that sells its product for about what it costs to make and hopes to make most of its profits from advertising.

In February the company signed up its largest marketing client, Tel-Save Holdings Inc., a long-distance telephone operator. Tel-Save, which buys long-distance time in bulk and resells it at a profit, paid America Online what amounts to a $100 million advance.

America Online booked about $12 million of that fee this past quarter, helping overall advertising and transaction revenue jump more than threefold to $60.7 million.

Following the media-company model and forced to compete against companies that offer low-cost connections directly to the Internet, America Online abolished most per-hour charges in December. In their place, it established an "all-you-can-eat" plan, offering unlimited access to the service for $19.95 per month.

Users flocked to the service, but America Online's infrastructure could not handle the demand.

Prodded by users, attorneys general from 36 states negotiated an agreement with America Online that required the company to offer refunds to many subscribers and to drastically curtail its advertising.

So the company's marketing costs fell by almost 40 percent, from $146.8 million in the quarter that ended in December to $89.5 million in the most recent quarter.

CHESS: Blue can adjust strategies

(From 1B)

Blue), won the first game of the six-game match. But the wily Russian took game two, and after draws in the next two games, he won the finale as well.

In retrospect, it's not hard to see what put Deep Blue into a deep funk. The machine thinks too much like a machine. It can analyze 200 moves a second, but it lacks imagination.

In other words, it was predictable. As soon as Kasparov figured that out, he was able to outmaneuver the bulky box.

This time it's going to be different, say IBMers preparing Deep Blue for the match that begins today in New York. "We have a much better chance this time," says Chung-Jen Tan, senior manager in charge of the challenger. "We learned the weaknesses of our system and have much improved our program."

Tan and his team have reworked Deep Blue's software so that between games they can adjust to counter Kasparov's strategy. In addition, they have engaged chess expert Joel Benjamin to serve as an on-site consultant.

Tan said the improvements have been enough to give Deep Blue the edge, but I don't know. It seems to me that if it really wants to be a chess champion, the computer has to act like a champion.

In other words, it should behave like an erratic genius. Because, let's face it, most of the great players in history have been a little bit off-center. So, drawing from the past, here are some ways Deep Blue could shake up the unflappable Kasparov:

■ Bring a cigar to the table. It's not necessary to smoke it. In a 1927 match, Vidmar derailed Nimzovich by brandishing an unlit cigar. Said Nimzovich: "But he is threatening to smoke, and we all know the threat is stronger than the execution!"

■ Play the theme music to "Jeopardy" while Kaspy is pondering his moves. You know — "Do do do do do do do....do do do do DO, do do do do do."

■ Wear a cap with the logo from the movie "Searching for Bobby Fischer."

■ Flash pictures of Cindy Crawford on its display just as Kasparov reaches for his queen.

■ Refuse to play if the lights are too bright or too dim.

■ Demand playing in total darkness.

■ Pretend it's Alekhine trying to sneak out of Germany after the war and scream at Kasparov: "I am Deep Blue, chess champion of the world. I need no passport!"

■ Claim exhaustion after game three and suggest a timeout — for about 200 years.

ROT: Jagger says he'd draw the line, unlike AOL, which posts a KKK site

Jagger — he says he wouldn't host a site sympathetic to the Ku Klux Klan, referring to a controversial site posted on America Online's server by one of the online service's subscribers.

The Gap has aspirations on more than your children's closets. It wants their keyboards, too. The clothing chain is targeting potential consumers ages 6 to 12 with its new GapKids Web page. The sales pitch is there, but it's tolerable.

Bright and cleanly laid out, GapKids offers three games with animation and sound. Our favorite was Swim in a Sea of Color, a matching game with colorful seashells. Make Your Own Art, in which children create paintings in the abstract style of Piet Mondrian, probably won't impress kids who were coloring online before they were walking. There's also an educational component about Mondrian and his work aimed at preteens. Interactive Paperless Dolls offers a virtual dress-up session, but will wear thin once kids have exhausted all the possible combinations of ensembles — all from the Gap line of children's wear.

— http://www.gapkids.com

America Online has at least two online timers clocking each subscriber, to the apparent confusion of some. Online petitions are circulating against the 46-minute timer, which nudges subscribers when they've been logged on for 45 minutes and drops them if they don't respond within 10 minutes. Others complain they're being logged off while downloading files, using non-AOL Web browsers or playing some games, which is caused by a different, shorter-duration timer.

Some tips to avoid unexpected cutoffs: Don't minimize AOL to use other Internet software — just run the software on top of AOL; and use AOL's built-in file transfer utility (keyword: ftp) for long downloads. A fix for cutoffs that affect certain online gamers is on the way, said Barry Appelman, vice president of system development. Despite the progress AOL claims in improving access since January, there are no plans to discontinue either timer.

INTEL: 200mz Pentium system prices drop, may fall further to computer makers. Although they were state-of-the-art processors last Christmas, they're now on the clearance rack at your local techno-bazaar.

And they may be the best bargain in town. I've seen 200-megahertz Pentium systems selling for as low as $1,600, a price that's likely to drop further. If your computing needs are basic — Internet surfing, basic business applications, a little game-playing on the side — then these computers are an excellent choice. They'll easily run most of the software that's going to be available over the next three years, which is about as long as you can expect any PC technology to avoid obsolescence.

Most of the under-$1,000 PCs now being offered come at speeds under 200 megahertz, and they're fine if your budget is tight and your computing needs are light. But if you can afford just a little more, it may be worth it to shoot for a 166- or 200-megahertz chip.

■ Pentium with MMX — Intel's MMX technology gives a slight boost to performance for most software, but it shines best with multimedia programs written to take advantage of it. Although there are relatively few titles out there now that use it, that will change quickly.

If you're a serious gamer or plan to use your computer for family entertainment and education, this is the chip that offers the best multimedia bang for the buck. You can own a well-equipped, 200-megahertz Pentium MMX system for the low- to mid-$2,000s, a price range that is dropping as well.

■ Pentium Pro — If you use hard-core business applications or are interested in running Windows NT instead of Windows 95, consider the Pentium Pro. It's at its best when using 32-bit operating systems — such as NT, OS/2 or the various flavors of Unix — and applications.

You'll actually get better performance with Windows 95 out of a Pentium MMX chip, particularly if you still run some old Windows 3.1 and MS-DOS applications. Both of those use 16-bit software code, which slows down on the Pentium Pro. Windows 95 is chock full of 16-bit code, too, even though it's billed as a 32-bit operating system.

Pentium Pro systems start in the mid- to upper-$2,000 range. Look for prices to drop with the introduction of the Pentium II.

■ Pentium II — This is essentially a Pentium Pro chip with MMX technology added. It's how Intel plans to get business users to move to MMX. It's also the company's entry for future consumer machines. But don't leap on the first Pentium II PCs that roll off the assembly line, if you are looking for a hot gaming and entertainment computer.

The Pentium II chip comes in a black plastic box with a single-slot edge connector. It looks like a video game cartridge. This design improves the speed at which data moves through the processor. However, this is only an early improvement; more are on the way, including the Advance Graphics Port, which will speed up video dramatically.

Intel is aiming the early versions of this chip at businesses that need multimedia. It also hopes the Pentium II will jumpstart desktop videoconferencing, which has not taken off as quickly as Intel hoped.

These early machines will be expensive — probably over $3,000.

■ The competitors — AMD recently introduced its K6 processor, which has MMX technology. Digital Equipment Corp. says it will build systems using it; so will Hewlett-Packard. Other, smaller vendors are already selling K6 systems. Some tests show them to be speed-competitive with Pentium Pro systems.

Cyrix has yet to launch its M2 chip, which also has MMX capabilities. It plans to do so soon.

Should you consider one of these chips? I have mixed feelings. While it's good to see a challenge to Intel, I'm very wary about compatibility. If there's even the slightest chance they won't work with some hardware or software, I'd stay away from them. A bargain machine isn't worth much, if it won't do what you need it to do.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Celebration set

Asbury United Methodist Church will be celebrating its 50th anniversary Sunday.

Bishop Alfred Norris, who serves the Northwest Texas and New Mexico conferences of the United Methodist Church, will be preaching at the 10:30 a.m. worship service. Norris serves as the Episcopal leader for the conferences. His headquarters are in Albuquerque, N.M.

In addition to the 50th Anniversary Celebration, the church also will honor Mothers this day during the services and with a luncheon to follow in the Fellowship Hall. The men of the congregation will be cooking and serving the lunch. the church also will be selling copies of its cookbook "50 Years and Still Cookin'."

Asbury UMC was organized June 1, 1947. The church was sponsored by First United Methodist Church of Midland and the board of Missions of the Methodist Church. By May 25, 1947, 53 members had joined the church. At that time, the first services were conducted prior to the organizational meeting.

The church was first located at 501 S. Loraine St. before moving to the present location at the corner of Loraine and Dakota streets. The current pastor is the Rev. Jerry Don Cheshire.

All are invited to attend the anniversary celebration. For more information call 684-4061.

Classes held

Exercise classes for older adults are being held from 11 to 11:30 a.m. Monday through Friday at First United Methodist Church, downtown at Main Street and Ohio Avenue.

The exercises are being led by Evelyn Glover of Nurses Unlimited in the Fellowship Hall. Classes are open to the public at no charge.

Mother's Day Out

Preregistration for the Tuesday/Thursday Mother's Day Out Program at St. Paul United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Drive, is set for 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

The registration is for the fall 1997 session. For more information call 694-2544 and ask for Diane Edwards.

Workshop held

A Grief Recovery Workshop is being hosted by First Baptist Church, 2104 W. Louisiana Ave., from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. May 17.

The workshop, which will be held in the parlor, will be led by Ann Page. Ms. Page is the parent of a teenager who died.

The workshop will address the following questions: What is Grief? How Doe Grief Affect Me? What Are the Stages of Grief? What Can Help Me in My Grief? What is Happening to Me Spiritually? and What Does God Expect of Me in Grief?

For more information or to register call the church, 682-1646.

Musical presented

The Junior Choir of First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave., will present "It's Good, A Musical About Creation" during the 10:45 a.m. service Sunday.

The musical is directed by Jeff Fentem, organist and director of music. Pianist is Martha Petraitis. Parent volunteers include Lois Malehom and Pam Young.

Those in the cast include Rachel Malehom as God; Lauren Scherer as Michelle the Angel; Brenda Hafer as Gabrielle the Angel; Teagen Farmer as Diver; Emma Laroche and Elizabeth Morris as Fish; Amanda Williams and Rebecca Williams as Birds; Zach Kilbom and Rebecca Reid as Tigers; John Hicks as Adam: and Sarah Hanauer as Eve.

Additional participating choir members are Chelsie Ayers, Kate Cherry, Bryan Cherry, Jenny Douglas, Elizabeth Harris, Allison Hicks, Astrid Ortiz, Dustin Petraitis, Laura Pittinger, Sarah Richards, Dustin Rucker, Tim Sneed, Melanie Walton, Chandler Williams and Josh Young.

During the 8:30 a.m. service in the Ratliff Chapel, the Rev. James Christensen, retired Disciples of Christ minister, will deliver a Mother's Day message entitled "God's Ideal Woman," based on a text from Proverbs 31:10:31. The Rev. Tommy Potter, senior minister, will be liturgist at both services.

All are invited to attend.

Slide show set

The public is invited to Rosa Clark's slide show and narrative about Egypt set for 9:45 a.m. Sunday at the Unitarian Universalist Church, 3301 Neely at Midkiff.

Children and youth religious education is offered during this time or they are welcome to attend the forum.

Program planned

The United Methodist Women of St. Marks Methodist Church, 1701 N. Main St., will hold its spring program at the church at 10:30 a.m. today.

Sharon Woods of the UMW District will speak on "The Purpose of UMW." A music program will be conducted by Cameron Givan, choir director.

Also, the Cherub and Children's choirs and the Children's Chime Choir will present special music Sunday in honor of Mother's Day.

Concert scheduled

The School of Music at Southern Nazarene University is presenting the SNU Chorale in concert at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at First Church of the Nazarene, 1208 W. Wall Ave.

For more than 60 years, the SNU Chorale has represented the university in churches, schools, and community concerts across the United States and abroad. The Chorale is directed by Neal Wayne Woodruff, assistant professor of music at SNU.

The choir's repertoire includes traditional choral literature, sacred classics, hymn arrangements, spirituals, and gospel songs. For more information on SNU call the Office of Admissions, 1-405-491-6324, or the School of Music, 1-405-491-6343.

The public is invited to the concert.

Speaker planned

Sam Soleyn is speaking at Crossroads Christian Fellowship, 410 S. Pecos St., this weekend.

He is conducting a "Blending Meeting" for all who "belong to the Body of Christ" at 7 p.m. today and will preach again at 10 a.m. Sunday.

Soleyn is from Albuquerque, N.M., and is well known in this area as a teacher and leader in the restoration of the five-fold ministries of Ephesians Chapter 4, said a release from the church.

For more information on either service call the church, 682-2190.

Special services

Special Mother's Day services are planned Sunday at Ranchland Heights Baptist Church.

A bouquet of red and white carnations will be displayed in honor of and in memory of all mothers. At the end of the 11 a.m. worship service, each mother will be presented with a carnation. Also, the children of the Children Department will have a gift for each mother in attendance.

The GA's and RA's meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday at the church. All girls and boys in the first through sixth grades are invited. For more information on the GA's activities call Pattie Merritt, 682-9844, or Benna Telford, 570-4966. For RA's information call Todd Lindenmuth, 570-4784, or Don Walton, 697-5341.

For a ride to any of the activities of the church or to the services, call Don Walton, 697-5341, or his pager, 560-0531. For more information call the church office, 697-4471.

Doctor to speak

ODESSA — Dr. Donald Whitaker will speak at Parker Heights Christian Church here and at Grace Fellowship in Monahans today and Sunday.

Whitaker was dying with acute hemorrhagic necrotic pancreatitis when he became a Christian in 1975.

"Subsequent to this crisis and turning point in his life, Dr. Whitaker changed his medical practice from one dedicated to treating illness to one dedicated to preventing illness," said a release from Grace Fellowship Church of Monahans.

Whitaker, who was a practicing physician in Oklahoma, now lives in Jefferson. His practice is located at the Completely Fit Health Foundation. His television program, "Calling Dr. Whitaker," is seen weekly over the Trinity Broadcasting Network. He markets his FANAFI Vitamins.

Whitaker will speak in a Health Seminar from 2 to 5 p.m. today at Parker Heights Christian Church, 1414 E. University, Odessa. He will be giving his testimony at 7 p.m. today at Parker Heights.

Whitaker will speak in the 10:30 a.m. Mother's Day Service at Grace Fellowship Church, 1200 S. Wilma, Monahans. His talk is sponsored by Grace Fellowship Church and the Rev. William Mark Bristow, the church's pastor, who can be heard at 9:15 a.m. Monday through Friday on KKKK 99.1 FM.

For more information call Grace Fellowship Church, 1-915-943-4447, or Dr. Whitaker's office, 1-800-232-6234.

Public invited

ODESSA — The Rev. Jon and Cindy Harrington invite the public to attend a liturgical evangelical charismatic service to be held at 7 p.m. May 17 at Cumberland Presbyterian Church, 1415 N. Grandview.

The Rev. Ralph Dodds will be the officiating priest. Harrington is representing Bishop Ken Myers of the Charismatic Episcopal Church. The services is for Saint Stephen's Charismatic Episcopal Church. For more information call 1-915-367-9344.

Concert planned

Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas Ave., is hosting the Wayland Baptist University Singing Group SPIRIT during the 6 p.m. service Sunday.

The group is made up of eight singers who perform a variety of music including vocal jazz, show tunes, and contemporary Christian

RELIGION IN BRIEF

(From 3B)

The group has performed around the world.

The concert is free. The church is located by Kingsway Mall.

Broadcast begins

The First Reformed Presbyterian Church has announced the beginning of its new radio broadcast, the "Voice of the Covenantors."

It will be heard on station KKKK, on FM 99.1. The program will be on from 7:15 to 7:30 a.m. Monday through Friday. Pastor Van Camp will begin with a series on the" Person and Character of God." Thee program is on the World Wide Web at http://www.lx.net/rpmid/index.html.

Special service

The Church of the Nazarene will host the Rev. James Rotz, Missionary to Nairobi, Kenya, on May 18.

Rotz will conduct the Faith Promise Service on Sunday morning at 10:30 a.m. Rotz and his wife, Carol, have taught at the Africa Nazarene University in Nairobi, Kenya since November of 1994.

The public is invited to attend this special service for the World Missions ministry of the church.

Mothers honored

Senior mothers will be honored at 11 a.m. today at Greater Ideal Baptist Church, 411 S. Tyler St.

The "Annual Citywide Mother's Day" program is sponsored by Mrs. Nay Drean Mays, who has been organizing the event honoring senior mothers since 1983. Mrs. Mays is a member of Greater Ideal Baptist Church.

Receiving special honors will be Triumph Mothers ages 70 to 79 and Elite Mothers ages 80 and above.

The speaker is the Rev. Terry Walker, pastor of the church. Theme for the program is "Love Lifted Me" from John 3:16.

A free dinner follows the program. The public is invited to attend.

Course offered

ODESSA — Unity Church of West Texas is offering "A Course in Miracles" from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Sundays at the church, 210 E. 12th.

The course will be moderated by Jeannie Raff. The course is free.

Unity was co-founded in 1889 by Charles and Myrtle Fillmore in Kansas City, Mo. Its worldwide headquarters are located in Unity Village, outside Kansas City. Unity is a worldwide ministry and is the home of Silent Unity, a 24-hour prayer center, and publishes the Daily Word in eight languages. It is nondenominational.

Fall Bazaar set

The Holy Cross Lutheran Church Women's Guild is preparing for its Fifth Annual Fall Bazaar.

Booth are still available for the bazaar, set for 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sept. 20 at the Midland County Exhibit Building. The 10 by 10 booths are $30. For more information on renting a booth call 520-3194.

Men's event set

Edwin Louis Cole, author of "Maximized Manhood," is coming to the Permian Basin for a men's event entitled "Top Ten Secrets to Powerful Manhood." The seminar is set for 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. today at the Midland Holiday Inn, 4300 W. Highway 80.

"We minister to men, for women," Cole has said. "When the man changes, the entire family has a chance. We call it 'family survival training.'"

The topics to be covered include how to be an irresistible husband, how to be a hero to your children, and "secrets" to typical problem areas such as career, success and failure, spiritual life, character, leadership, and sex.

The stop is part of a two-year world tour launched by Cole's Christian Men's Network, a 17-year-old ministry to men.

All men are invited to attend. Young men 13-18 are sponsored by CMN Partners. Registration at the door is $30. For more information call the Christian Men's Network, 1-800-225-6263.

Worshippers agree to burn historic church

ALIQUIPPA, Pa. (AP) — Rather than see their old church become a hangout for drug-users and vandals, former members of St. Nicholas Russian Orthodox Church allowed firefighters to burn it down in a training exercise.

Worshipers watched and wept as flames engulfed the abandoned 80-year-old church and an adjacent parish house Sunday.

The Aliquippa church closed six years ago as its membership dwindled from 300 to 15. The remaining members had no money to restore it or tear it down.

The distinctive onion-domed structure stood empty after worshipers transferred to a sister church across the Ohio River in Ambridge. Drug-users, drifters and vandals moved in, stealing anything of value and defacing or destroying the rest.

ATLANTA — The nation's largest black church association has deposited two $100,000 checks in two Atlanta banks, beginning a national campaign to raise money to rebuild burned churches.

The Congress of National Black Churches Inc. presented the checks to Citizens Trust Bank and Capital City Bank.

Bank customers and others will raise money to match the deposits.

In January, the association announced a $12.8 million campaign to rebuild burned churches — using fire-retardant materials. The group received a $6 million grant from the Indianapolis-based Lilly Foundation.

BARNESVILLE, Ga. — A group of Georgia singers is helping preserve old-fashioned Sacred Harp hymn singing, performing in the rhythmic, a cappella style at churches across the state.

"It's kind of strange to 20th-century ears," says Raymond Hamrick, a Sacred Harp singer from Macon. "It's medieval in sound."

The group's members performed recently at the Liberty Hill Primitive Baptist Church. Liberty Hill is unique because its last members died a few years ago.

In Sacred Harp singing, the singers sit in a "hollow square" facing inward. Trebles, altos, tenors and basses each make up a side of the square. The melody is always sung by the tenors, and women and men sing both the alto and treble parts.

Singer takes turns leading, giving the song's pitch and swinging a hand to count time. Singers in the square reflect that movement with their own hands and their softly stomping feet.

His immortal words were "Watson, come here." They were not followed by "And bring a list of family members and I'll only charge you a dime for weekend calls after 6."

Something's wrong with the phone. It's connected to marketing gimmicks. And confusing rate plans. And celebrities named after coins. Frankly, we've had enough. So we're making 12 promises to our customers. Like we'll never bug you with sales calls at dinnertime. Or trick you into signing up for the rate du jour. It's called our pledge. And it's something you'll be hearing a lot about. Because it's time to set things right.

Church 'money ministry' to benefit school uses Internet to serve God

By Estes Thompson
Associated Press

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. — Candy sales, car washes and simply begging for funds weren't enough, so the Abundant Life Church branched out to the World Wide Web.

The result is VisionNet, a year-old Internet service provider that has attracted about 300 customers.

The company is operated by a nonprofit foundation at the church, a nondenominational congregation of 1,450, and benefits Abundant Life's private school.

"The Christian community perceives what we're doing as unorthodox," sales director Jimmy Chalmers says. "We believe our ministry is making money for this little Christian school. We don't have to beg for money. There are needs we can meet if we're willing to be creative, to be unorthodox."

The company's niche is local Internet access in small towns and helping users block adult sites. But it also has 14 commercial customers who maintain Web page domains in the VisionNet computer, including a local sauce manufacturer and a massage equipment distributor.

VisionNet was created to raise money for the church's private school of about 330 students, from kindergarten through 12th grade, says Dennis Haskins, VisionNet's chief executive officer and the administrator of Abundant Life Christian Academy.

"One of my objectives is to make Christian education an affordable alternative" by offering students scholarships to help pay tuition of about $2,500 a year, Haskins says.

Last year, VisionNet gave $30,000 to the school. Its goal is to underwrite 40 percent of the school's $900,000 operating budget, he says.

"Candy sales, popcorn sales and car washes aren't going to cut it for the kind of money that private Christian schools need," says Chalmers, one of two full-time employees housed in a closet-sized office at the school.

VisionNet has bigger dreams, such as larger offices. But not too big.

"We have to restrict our growth because of the level of service we want to give our customers," Chalmers says. That service includes going to a customer's house to solve a problem if necessary.

Another element that distinguishes VisionNet is that it tries to help families find clean, wholesome sites on the Web.

Its goal is to have as many as 2,000 individual dial-in users and 250 corporate accounts, Chalmers says, with a focus on rural areas in central North Carolina and southern Virginia.

VisionNet got its foothold in the towns of Mebane and Hillsborough by providing Internet users a local telephone number for modem access. The service costs consumers a $30 activation fee and $20 a month for Internet access.

Subscribers get Netscape, a commercial Internet access program, and SurfWatch, a program that blocks adult-oriented sites. By the end of the month, the VisionNet server will have blocking software so users can customize access, Chalmers says.

Chalmers says a small amount of the Internet — he estimates 3 percent — is devoted to sexually oriented programming. But it's that small section that gets all the news attention and complaints.

Still, the Internet can be a daunting place for people who don't want to be exposed to smut.

"We have gotten clients because we provide that service," Chalmers says. "There are plenty of pictures out there ... that most pubescent young men would enjoy. Why shouldn't there be an opportunity for families to have a service where we can assist parents or guardians in being able to protect their children from these sites on the Internet?"

Chalmers says VisionNet is trying to sell the service to corporations that want to limit employee access to inappropriate sites.

Chalmers and Adriano Marcuz, the operations director, who worked at IBM for 20 years before coming to VisionNet, both belong to the church. They donated their time for six months to start the company, which now has annual operating costs of about $135,000, including their salaries.

The company was started for less than $100,000, using an interest-free loan from a benefactor.

"Christian schools have distorted their view of the world to 'How can others help us?' " Chalmers says. "We believe that we can do things for ourself."

Dean hits, pitches Keller past Lee

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

HAWLEY — When you ride deep into the Class 5A state softball playoffs, the pitchers start throwing on even terms, making each pitch crucial. Just ask Midland Lee's Chrystal Smith if you don't believe it.

LEE
Keller 1
Midland Lee . . .0

Smith tossed her fourth consecutive playoff two-hitter at the Keller Indians here Friday, and even that wasn't good enough as the Lady Indians took a 1-0 victory in this Region I final, losing it on one nasty "gut pitch."

Keller pitcher Tracey Dean, who limited Lee to just three singles on the day, won here own game, taking Smith deep to left field for a third inning solo home run and the game's only tally of the day.

No matter which way this game ended, one of these teams was going to be disappointed. That's the way it is when the best start meeting the best. And when you throw a two-hitter and lose, it's something you don't forget.

Dean's neck jerker down the left field line was about the only hard-hit ball all day off either pitcher, and even Dean didn't realize the magnitude of the belt until she was around second base.

"I just thought it was going to be another long out," Dean said. "I had no idea that ball was going to get out. Then I heard the fans hollering and I thought it was the Lee fans hollering for a catch in the outfield. Then I realized it was our fans; I looked and there was no ball out there."

For Smith, it was a pitch she wanted back.

"It was just a gut pitch," Smith said. "We've been working on a rise ball when the count is 0-2. This one just went down the gut. It's the only pitch I made all day that I would like to have back. Still, it was a good hit and you have to give (Dean) credit for that."

Actually, Lee had more scoring opportunities than Keller, leaving two runners stranded at third base.

In the second inning, Patricia Carrasco and Smith had back-to-back singles to put runners at the corners with two outs. Gracie Villa almost got one through, but Keller third baseman Callie Cannon threw Villa out at first to end the threat.

"That was a great opportunity for us to score," Carrasco said. "When I got to third, I had faith that we were going to score, but it just didn't come like I thought."

In the third, Lee leadoff hitter Michelle Primeaux reached on an error by Keller shortstop Lynette Luedders. Primeaux then moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Adrian Nobles and took third on a Dean wild pitch with just one out. But Dean rallied again to strike

Tech Trouble

HOUSTON — Texas Tech's baseball team, until last week ranked No. 1 in the nation, exceeded the NCAA's scholarship limit but will not be penalized this year for the error, school officials said.

Red Raiders coach Larry Hays said a mathematical mistake resulted in Tech's awarding two scholarships more than the NCAA-mandated limit of 11.7, a violation of the agency's rules.

"The fact is that we have misfigured some out-of-state academic tuitions," Hays said. "I regret that it happened, and it was an honest mistake. It bothers me that people think we tried to cheat, but it is my program and it is my fault."

Although the violation could lead to sanctions, Hays said NCAA officials told him there will be no forfeitures this year.

Officials assured Hays that Tech, now ranked No. 5 in the country, remained eligible for next week's Big 12 tournament and an NCAA regional.

Also on Friday, Tech athletic officials said that shortstop Jess Olivares has been suspended from the Red Raiders' baseball team because of unspecified violations of school and team rules.

Olivares, a junior, has started in 47 of 50 Texas Tech games this season. He's batting .325 with 59 hits and 40 RBIs and six homers.

Rebs drop game, 6-1, to Socorro

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

CARLSBAD, N.M. — They find themselves on the brink again.

LEE
Midland Lee . . .1
Socorro 6

For the past two weeks of the high school baseball season, the Midland Lee Rebels have seemingly had to climb out of holes just to keep their season going. Each time they have managed to stay alive and the experience seemed to make them stronger. Now, they can only hope they get a chance to keep proving it.

Their biggest test comes today thanks mainly to one fateful inning Friday night, when their ace, Mike Hale, couldn't find the strike zone and El Paso Socorro took advantage, beating Lee 6-1 in the first game of a best-of-three series of the Region I-5A area round of the playoffs. The Rebels (16-13-1) now have to win today at 11 a.m. CDT and force a third game.

"We just hope we can come back and do what we did against Amarillo High last week," Lee coach Jesse Benavidez said.

What the Rebels did was pull off a sweep the second day after losing the first game. The difference this weekend is that Hale isn't in reserve, although he could possibly relieve, and that Socorro might have more pitching in reserve. That's bad news for Lee, especially after their meager offensive output

Midland Christian softball rained out

BELTON — The Midland Christian Lady Mustangs are going to have to wait another day to play their Class 4A TAPPS semifinal game against Concordia Lutheran. Because of the rain that has pelted the state, the game was moved to today at 11 a.m. at Mary-Hardin Baylor University

The other semifinal game, Lutheran versus Fort Worth Christian, is scheduled for 1 p.m., and the championship game at approximately 4 p.m.

MC (16-12) brings Mindi Sheppard (8-7) to the mound against defending Class 2A champion Concordia Lutheran (18-12). MC coach Byron Myers said that from what he knows about the teams in the final four, he really likes his team's chances.

"I the whole final four is pretty even," Myers said. "We just need to put the ball in play and play good defense. We can't have any overthrows or into trouble on the base paths."

Myers said the day off should help his team get over being road-weary from the long trip.

"We're as ready as we're going to be. We're just ready to play," Myers said.

The Lady Mustangs are making their third straight trip to the Final Four as six players on the team have that experience behind them.

Andrews' Lujan gets gold medal in 800-meter run

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

AUSTIN — After a sixth-place performance in the 800 meters at last year's state meet, Andrews' Erik Lujan wanted more.

Friday, he got it — all of it.

The Andrews' senior won the Class 4A state title with a career-best time of 1 minute, 55.54 seconds at Memorial Stadium and turned those dreams of greatness into solid-gold reality.

"I have never had this feeling in my life," Lujan said. "This feels great."

His coach Dirk Wright had the same feeling after seeing his runner come through with a kick in the last 200 meters to seal the win. It was Wright's first state champion in his three years as Andrews' head track coach.

"It is so exciting after last year," Wright said. "He was talking about this on the ride home last year. He was fired up on that bus ride. He said that he will win it."

That is what he did. Lujan took the lead near the 400-meter mark and then lost it to McKinney's Aaron Crockett. Lujan, however, sucked it up and was ready for the challenge.

"My endurance is my strength," Lujan said. "I go out as hard as I can from start to finish. I like doing my best. I love the adrenaline."

That rush was felt, although not to that degree, with a third-place finish later in the night in the 400 with a time of 48.36. He passed four other runners to take the bronze and showed his stuff again. Also, he scored all 16 of Andrews' points in the meet.

"I love the 400 and the 800," Lujan said. "I'm better in the 800 but was sur-

Lady Rebs finish fourth in downpour

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

AUSTIN — If playing against the mighty San Antonio Churchill team was not bad enough, Midland Lee had another opponent Friday — Mother Nature.

In conditions that started out bad and ended as "ridiculous," the second day of the UIL State Golf championships brought rain, rain and at the end, a lot more rain.

Lee, a team not used to rain — certainly not the amount of moisture that cut the round to nine holes at the Roy Kizer course — shot a second round 176 for a total of 490. The Lady Rebs, in their first return to state in three years, just missed duplicating that third place finish of 1994, but left state a little saturated and in fourth.

"We don't do rain," Lee coach Phyllis Sutton said. "They had more inches today than we have had all year. I think yesterday was our real tournament. I don't think this shows the quality of the team. You have to play the elements and they were to their (the other teams') advantage. They play in these elements more. We have to turn on the sprinklers so we can practice in this."

The Lady Rebels were affected by the moisture that delayed Lee's start for six hours and made for nine holes that took anywhere from three-and-a-half to four hours to complete. Ideally, a full round (18 holes) should be played in four hours, but these were not ideal conditions.

"I can't describe it," senior Kelly Feavel said of the weather. "It took four hours to play nine holes. I haven't played in anything like that at the end. I have played in drizzle but not pouring rain."

What was also amazing was that some golfers were left outside to start their backside when there was no way that the whole field could complete the round before sundown, or

Rain delays state tennis tournament

Staff Report

AUSTIN — While some events, including golf and track and field, were able to be staged on Friday, the University Interscholastic League state tennis tournament for Classes 1A through 3A could not escape the rain that drenched the area during the biggest week of competition for Texas high school athletes.

That means Greenwood's duo of Melinda and Melissa Wade had to wait another day to make their return to Austin in 3A girls doubles.

The Wade twins, who are juniors, lost in the first round last year as sophomores — their first trip to the state meet.

The tournament is set to resume today at 8 a.m. The scheduled events are the quarterfinals and semifinals for boys and girls singles and doubles. The UIL, according to the The Associated Press, said it will attempt to complete all three rounds today, including the finals, which are usually held the day following the first two rounds.

Rescheduled Winston 500 ready to go

By Eddie Pells
Associated Press Writer

TALLADEGA, Ala. — One wedding was rescheduled, one surgery postponed. One driver lost a shot at $23,000 while another gained a new perspective on what had been a disappointing 1997.

The circumstances surrounding the rescheduled Winston 500 have changed since the racers left April 28, after sitting through two straight days of rain.

They returned Friday and were greeted by — what else — rain. A good-sized thunderstorm came through in the morning, followed by cloudy skies early in the afternoon. But the skies cleared and the track was dry for the 3 p.m. practice, which began on time.

The raceday forecast Saturday forecast calls for highs in the 70s, unseasonably cool for this time of year, but no rain. If the weather holds, the racers would be able to travel home for Mother's Day, a traditional day off on the Winston Cup circuit.

Regardless of the date, the race is considered among the circuit's most important, and the track, among its most dangerous. The majority of races at Talladega Superspeedway over the last five years has been marred by at least one bad accident.

At the 1993 Winston 500, Rusty Wallace's car was bumped from behind by Dale Earnhardt during a scramble for the finish. Wallace's car flipped 10 times and was airborne when it crossed the finish line in sixth place.

Wallace has come no closer to a win since at Talladega, and says the track makes him and just about everybody else nervous.

"Everybody comes here thinking, 'Man, we're going to keep it straight. We're not going to have any problems,' " Wallace said. "But when you take 42 cars and put them within three and four inches of each other and they stay stuck that way, that's something. That's when you start having problems."

Wallace will start in the fourth spot — his best qualifying position ever Talladega.

All starting positions from the original qualifying date will remain the same. That means John Andretti still has the pole in his Ford even though a win wouldn't be worth as much to him.

He would have received a $30,600 bonus in addition to the $93,000 winner's purse had he won the race when it was originally scheduled. But because Mark Martin won last

Travelers' four-run rally in eighth beats Angels

Staff Report

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — It was not the way the Midland Angels wanted to end their five-game series at Arkansas.

Midland took a 3-2 lead into the bottom of the eighth inning when the Travelers score four runs off Angels' reliever Kurt Knudsen to win 6-3. Arkansas took four out of five games from the Angels including the last three.

To make matters worse for Knudsen (0-1), he got ejected for throwing at Arkansas' Scarborough Green. That makes three Angels ejected in two days. Midland manager Mitch Seoane and Derrick white were ejected Thursday for arguing calls.

Angels' first baseman Danny Buxbaum got it going in the right direction in the first inning with a two-run home run over deep left field. Arkansas' Joe McEwing would tie it at 2-2 with a two-run blast of his own in the third inning.

The game would stay tied until the seventh inning when Jaime Burke scored on a wild pitch to give the Angels a 3-2 lead.

Jarrod Washburn started for Midland and went seven innings with not very good control with five walks and a wild pitch.

The Angels (17-17) travel to Jackson today to face the Generals. Mike Bovee (2-0, 2.97 ERA) gets the nod for the Angels.

GOLF: Churchill sweeps Class 5A

at the pace they were playing, by Saturday morning. Lee junior Amber Meyers, who was well into her second 9 looked as though she had been thrown into a lake.

"I thought it was ridiculous," Meyers said. "After all the delays, they made us play. Then, they make us keep going and we are in the middle of nowhere (when the horn goes off to signal the end of play). If we are waiting for the last people to come (after nine), why make us play those last holes?

"I will say I'm glad the team went to state and that I was a part of it."

The rain was a big part of the day, but so was the dominance of the Churchill boys and girls golf teams. Both teams shot the best scores on this wet day and both came away with titles. The Lady Chargers repeated their 1996 team title by shooting a 152 to finish at 438 and beat the Woodlands by 19 strokes. Sugar Land Clements was third.

The boys victory was of the comeback nature. The Chargers shot a 152 on Day 2 to pass first round leader Rockwall with a score of 449.

"Our biggest worry coming into the round was that we wanted to have guys and girls titles," said Randi Meadows, Churchill's No. 1-seeded player who took second in the tournament's medalist race one-stroke behind teammate Sal Mussani.

Meadows said that the key to the day was being able to keep her concentration.

"They key was to stay focused and make contact with the ball," Meadows said. "You have to realize that you will hit bad shots. You just have to make the best out of all of them."

The day marked the end of two Lady Rebels' careers, Feavel and Sandi Talley. Feavel shot 43 but kept the team lead at 118. Talley, who is still entertaining the possibility of playing in college, shot a team-best 42 on Friday.

"It was just a little weird," said Talley of the last day as a Lee golfer. "I would have liked it a lot more if it was nice. We shouldn't have played. I couldn't keep my hands dry. They are still soaking wet."

Junior Krystal Mehaffey shot a 46 to finish at 124, Meyers had a 47 for a 140, and freshman Amy Roach fired a 45 for a 129.

In a way, the day was so bizarre, that there was indifference over the fact they fell a spot in the team race. The Lady Rebs didn't show what they could do on the second day. All that was left was ringing out their socks, drying off their clubs and readying next year's team to make its sixth appearance at state in 10 years.

SOFTBALL: Keller goes on to state out Jessica Garcia and got Jennifer Aman to ground out to end the inning.

Aman got her first hit of the playoffs in the sixth, but Lee couldn't advance the runner. Smith reached on another Luedders error in the seventh, but Gracie Villa grounded into a double play to end the game.

Keller is now 31-6 on the season and headed for the state tournament for the third consecutive year. Keller is the lone playoff survivor from the Final Four of a year ago as Pearland, Bryan and San Marcos have all fallen.

"We lost in the first game at state last year," Dean said, "but since we're the only one back, we should have an advantage because we've seen the pressure and the other teams haven't.

"But I promise you there won't be much more pressure than this down there. I couldn't remember if Chrystal was the girl I went up against last year, but when I saw her, I knew it was going to be another tight game."

Keller eliminated Lee last year in a 2-1 victory in another Smith-Dean matchup. Dean struck out five Rebels while Smith KOed eight. In fact, one could make a strong case that Smith had the upper hand overall over Dean in this one, but the Dean homer was like hitting an 80-yard touchdown and not getting a first down the rest of the way. Keller just had four other base runners all day, of which only one got as far as third base.

But scores tell the tale in athletics and Keller had one. That's a wrap.

Andrews wins area playoff

SEMINOLE — Not even the rain could stop the Andrews Mutsnags from spanking Lubbock Estacado 10-0 Friday in the area round of the Class 4A playoffs.

The rain also didn't stop Cody Klein from pitching a no-hitter against the Matadors. This despite the game being suspended after two innings on Thursday because of the bad weather. Klein just came right back, completed the no-no and finished with eight strikeouts for his 12the win of the season.

"It was just an excellent outing," said Andrews coach Joe Ray Halsey. "What made it special was that the game was suspended Thursday with us having a 2-0 lead. Cody Klein came right back the next day and completed his no-hitter."

For the Mustangs, Mike Hudson had three-run home run in the fifth inning, Noel Olivas had a double, Elton Emiliano was 2-for-3 and Gabe Falcon was also 2-for-3.

Andrews (26-3) next plays Plainview, a 9-0 winner over El Paso Ysleta, later in the week at a time and place to be determined. Another score from area round action was Canyon Randall 5, San Angelo Lake View 3.

Mustangs land 6 on first-team

The Midland Christian Mustangs landed six players on the first-team and two players on the second-team in the TAPP 4A all-district team. Making the first-team were John Koss (pitcher), Alex Awtry (infield), Seth Denson (infield), Colby Lee (infield), John McKinney (outfield), and Mark Hall (catcher). Making second team were Joey Johnson (infield) and Trent Lee (infield).

Crane no-hits Greenwood

GREENWOOD — Crane's Mike henry pitched a no-hitter Friday to defeat Greenwood, 10-0.

The Rangers closed the season at 3-7 in district and 9-18 overall. Andrew Wootan took the loss for Greenwood.

TRACK: Lujan earns championship

prised with the 400."

Lujan, however, will take the state title with him. It is a remarkable accomplishment, especially considering the 5-foot-10, 130-pound Lujan has never won a regional title. This year, he was beat in a photo finish by last year's state runner-up Valentin Vasquez. The year before, he was barely nipped at the end.

But now the two-time district champ has the big title. And though, he doesn't speak volumes about it now, you can bet he will.

"He is quiet," Wright said. "I was talking to him on the warm-up area (which overlooks the Memorial Stadium track) and I said, 'Do you realize what you have done?' He grinned. I said, 'When you get older, it will sink in.'"

Wright can appreciate it now and he says that the title puts him in elite company.

"On our wall of fame, there are all-state performers and state title winners like Coach (Max) Goldsmith and (former national record holder in the 400) Ted (Nelson). Now we can stick Erik up there."

STEER RE-RUN: Big Spring's Tory Mitchell probably feels like he is suffering from deja vu. For the second-straight year, the sophomore took bronze medals in the 200 and 100.

"This feels like last year," Mitchell said. "I ran better this year. Getting third is not a bad thing and I can't complain. It is just me. I set higher goals and want to achieve more than third."

Mitchell came out in the 100 and ran a 10.66, and like last year, he finished behind 100 champion Lawrence Armstrong from Jasper. Armstrong ran a 10.39 and then completed his 100-200 double, running a 21.21. Mitchell followed two places later with a 21.51.

"All these races were so close," Mitchell said. "In the 100 I had a bad start and in the 200 I had a good start but didn't run the curve to the most of my ability. It was almost like I was running the whole thing on the curve."

LADY STEERS SCORE 6: Big Spring sophomore Jaclyn Owusu highlighted an otherwise mediocre day for Big Spring. Last year, the Lady Steers scored five points, but did one better on a third place performance by Owusu in the triple jump.

The news of her achievement, however, will be the last for Owusu as a Lady Steer as she said that she will leave Big Spring after this season because of her father's transfer to Dallas.

She had mixed feelings about her last Big Spring performance.

"I was disappointed," said Owusu, sister of two-time state triple jump champ Drexel Owusu. "I had my goal of winning. This is mental and you have to be mentally ready to jump in the bad weather."

Owusu, a sophomore, couldn't put her finger on what went wrong as she jumped 37 feet, 7 1/2 inches, considerably shorter than her season's best 38-5.

"I just can't say what went wrong," Owusu said. "I could have won it with my best jump."

All other Big Spring qualifiers — Keesha Lott in the triple jump, the 800 relay and 1600 relay — finished seventh respectively. Lott's mark in the triple jump was 37-5, just two inches shorter but four places behind Owusu.

BUFFALO WOES: Stanton's Tyron Davis ended his career at Stanton painfully. The Buffalo sprained his ankle in his first attempt in the triple jump and battled back to suffer a torn hamstring in his last attempt of the preliminaries and had to be wheeled off. Davis scratched on all three attempts.

TEAM CHAMPIONSHIPS: Dallas Lincoln won the girls race with 50 points while Houston Worthing and Houston Clear Brook rounded out the top three. Jasper won the boys title with 64 points. Bay City was second with 32 points while Greenville was third with 28. Andrews tied for ninth with 16.

WINSTON: Race will finally be run week's Sears Point race from the pole, the bonus, which increases by $7,600 each time the polesitter fails to win, resets to its $7,600 starting point.

(From 1C)

By winning, Martin snapped a 42-race drought dating back to October 1995 and improved his outlook on this race.

"For a while I was afraid the we might not ever win a race," Martin said. "But five races ago, I felt like our race team put our number back on the dice. For a while, you could roll all you wanted and our number wasn't there."

Martin starts from the 18th spot and is going for an odd sweep at Talladega.

Midland College's White signs with Tarleton State

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Mandi White has always been very emotional. So when it came time to make a choice of where she would like to continue her education and basketball career after Midland College, she thought long and hard.

White

In the end that decision came from the heart. And her heart told her to go to Tarleton State University in Stephenville. White made it official as she signed a letter of intent on Friday to play for the Division II Lady Texans.

"I had other choices between U.T.E.P and U.T.S.A. But Tarleton is where if felt I belonged all the time," White said. "It's a pretty town, I liked the people, the coach and the players. I think I'll be very happy.

"It was a tough decision to make. I was going crazy there for a couple of weeks trying to decide. It's sad because I'm leaving Midland College but at the same time I'm happy because I'm moving on to bigger and better things."

White was one of four sophomores to lead the Lady Chaps this past season with a 25-6 record, a conference championship, and a trip to the Region V Tournament. White started in 28 of 30 games while averaging 7.9 points, 2.3 rebounds and 2.0 assists per contest. She was second on the team in 3-point field goals with 43 and led the team in free throw percentage at 78.8 percent.

White became the third Lady Chap this year to sign to play basketball in the next level, after Kellina Bradshaw signed with Arkansas State and Ndiasse Ndiaye with Southern Nazarene.

White said the transition from junior college to Division II should be easy, considering she played for coach Ron Jones at MC.

"They run a lot and they look to be pretty good team for next year. I think it will be an easy transition for me because playing for coach Jones will prepare you for that," White said. "Jones was a disciplined coach. He was just a coach that had high goals for us and took coaching seriously. I'm just going to miss the whole basketball program at Midland College."

At the Midland College banquet more than a week ago, Jones commented how happy he was to see White make the decision to go to Tarleton State and said, "I think she made the right choice."

White expects to start at shooting guard next year for coach Tammy Moorehead, who may be in a rebuilding process since the team only returns two players.

BASEBALL: Socorro takes game 1 against Socorro starter Albert Montes, who limited the Rebels to three hits and an unearned run.

(From 1C)

The Rebels jumped on top first, mounting a two-out rally in the bottom of the first, when David Smith reached on an error, stole second then scored on a single by Raymond Ibarra. That was as good as it got for the Rebels against Montes, though.

Hale, on the other hand, was his own worst enemy. He suffered a bout with wildness in the second, walking four batters to bring home two runs without recording an out. That not only gave Socorro a 2-1 lead, but got Hale pulled from the game.

"You don't want to take (Hale) out that early, but when you load the bases with no outs you have no choice," Benavidez said. "The momentum really changes when that happens."

Things only slid when Aaron Erdwurm relieved Hale and hit Adrian Soto with a pitch to bring home another run. A sacrifice fly by Albert Montes and a single by Nick Alvarez stretched the Socorro lead to 5-1.

Erdwurm did an admirable job of damage control after that, though. Over the next six innings he gave up only four hits and one run, which might have been enough to keep Socorro at bay had the Rebel bats been able to respond.

"He went in there and competed," said Benavidez of Erdwurm. "He kept us in the game, but we just didn't do the job at the plate."

Montes had the Rebels thoroughly baffled with his curveball, striking out nine while walking only one. Through five innings, he had given up only a pair of singles to Ibarra until Smith tripled to center with two outs in the sixth. Ibarra then drew the first walk of the night against Montes, but John Purves grounded to first to end the inning.

"Albert's been throwing so well lately and I've had a lot of confidence in him," said Socorro coach Chris Forbes. "He's the kind of kid who wants the ball in big games."

Benavidez said he will start the left-handed Purves in today's first game. Meanwhile, Forbes still has Nick Alvarez, who posted a 7--1 mark this season, to use at his leisure.

Other scores from area action were Abilene High over El Paso Bel Air 10-1 and Lubbock Monterey winning 10-0 over El Paso Montwood.

Tech clinches Big 12 title

LUBBOCK (AP) — Joe Dillon, Jason Landreth and Brandon Buckley each had two RBIs during a 12-run seventh inning as Texas Tech clinched the first Big 12 Conference title with a 12-9 victory over Texas A&M Friday night.

The Red Raiders (43-8, 23-5 Big 12) trailed 6-0 in the seventh before the 12-run outburst.

Casey Fossum (3-4) started the seventh for Texas A&M and gave up six runson four hits and a walk before he was pulled with only one out in the inning. Jason Stephens was 2-for-5 with a homer and 2 RBIs for the Aggies (36-18, 17-11).

Keith Ginter went 1-for-5 with an RBI to extend his school-record hitting streak to 29 games.

Hardaway lights fire under Heat

MIAMI — The good shooting of Tim Hardaway and the poor shooting of Patrick Ewing helped the Miami Heat beat the New York Knicks.

Hardaway scored a team playoff-record 34 points, including a running jumper in the lane with 50 seconds left to put the Heat ahead for good, and Miami won 88-84 Friday night to even the second-round series 1-1.

Ewing scored 17 points but missed 14 of 20 shots. He also missed 15 minutes because of foul trouble.

The Eastern Conference semifinal series moves to Madison Square Garden for games Sunday and Monday.

Hardaway sank an off-balance shot over the 7-foot-1 Ewing to give Miami an 85-84 lead.

"Everybody looked at me and said, 'Tim, you've got to go to the hole and make something happen,'" Hardaway said. "That's what I did. I made a tough shot."

"He always hits a lot of big shots for them," Ewing said. "I thought I made him shoot it too high and too hard, but it went in."

New York's bid to regain the lead ended when P.J. Brown deflected a driving shot in the lane by Chris Childs. The Knicks then opted not to foul, and Jamal Mashburn was left wide open for a 3-pointer with 2.9 seconds to go that sealed the victory.

"We had timeouts left," New York coach Jeff Van Gundy said. "We wanted to get a stop and get a possession with four or five seconds left. We didn't want to foul."

"We gave them a gift," Childs said. "An early Christmas present, an early Mother's Day present, whatever you want to call it. They didn't beat us."

The victory was the 1,000th of coach Pat Riley's career, including an NBA record 141 in postseason play.

"It was a pressure game for us," Riley said. "We felt the pressure. We played a little close to the vest. We've got to go for it. Tim went for it, Mash went for it, and we got the win."

Hardaway came into the game shooting just 32 percent in the playoffs, but went 11-for-24 and 5-for-8 from 3-point range. His point total was a personal playoff best.

Alonzo Mourning had 24 points and 13 rebounds for Miami before fouling out with 1:29 left.

The Knicks missed their first 14 shots in the fourth quarter, and Ewing was 3-for-15 before scoring on three consecutive possessions to reduce Miami's margin to 83-82. After Mourning fouled out, Allan Houston scored to give the Knicks their first lead of the quarter, 84-83, with 1:13 left.

Ewing failed to score a basket in the second or third periods.

"The ball's not falling for me right now," he said. "I missed a lot of easy shots that normally fall for me. It's going to come."

Houston led the Knicks with 19 points.

Riley complained about the officiating in Game 1, when Mourning had foul problems. This time it was the Knicks with foul trouble.

Each of their three front-line starters went to the bench in the second quarter with three fouls. Larry Johnson sat out a total of 16 minutes.

Hardaway scored Miami's final 13 points in the first half to turn a 37-27 deficit into a 48-42 halftime lead. His barrage included a 28-footer at the buzzer.

Hardaway had 25 points and Mourning 13 at halftime. The Heat's other three starters combined for two points.

Ewing went to the bench early in the third period with four fouls, but without him the Knicks scored 13 consecutive points to regain the lead 57-56.

Notes: Hardaway and Mourning shared the previous Heat playoff record of 30 points. ... Mourning has 31 fouls in six games against the Knicks this season. ... Floridian Jimmy Buffett sang the national anthem, closing with the words, "Go Heat!" ... Other VIPs in the crowd included Rosie O'Donnell, Matt Dillon, Jimmy Johnson, Donald Trump, Glen Rice and John Vanbiesbrouck.

Sabres, Avalanche take overtime wins

Associated Press

EDMONTON, Alberta — Claude Lemieux scored his league-high ninth playoff goal 8:35 into overtime as the Colorado Avalanche beat the Edmonton Oilers 3-2 to take a 3-1 series lead.

Colorado, the defending Stanley Cup champions, can close out the series — and Canada's lone remaining playoff representative — in Game 5 Sunday in Denver.

Lemieux, whose 17 postseason points are second to teammate Joe Sakic's 18, stuffed a loose puck underneath Oilers goalie Curtis Joseph.

Joseph had just swept the puck aside to stop Valery Kamensky but the Oilers couldn't corral the rebound. Lemieux grabbed it behind the net and jammed it past Joseph.

"There were a lot of scoring opportunities, a lot of chances for both clubs," Lemieux said. "I hit two or three posts myself and it just didn't seem like it was going to go in."

Lemieux has scored a goal in eight of Colorado's 10 playoff games.

The line of Lemieux, Kamensky and Sakic, replacing injured star Peter Forsberg, finished with six points and accounted for three of Colorado's goals.

Sakic set up two of the goals while Lemieux and Kamensky each had a goal and an assist.

Ryan Smyth and Todd Marchant had Edmonton's goals.

Mistakes by Edmonton rookies Drew Bannister and Mike Grier resulted in Colorado goals.

NHL Roundup

Bannister played poorly on a goal by Kamensky and Grier took a slashing penalty late in the second period that resulted in a goal by defenseman Sandis Ozolinsh, set up by Sakic and Lemieux.

Both teams had many scoring chances. Near the end of the third period, Roy watched as Edmonton's Steve Kelly rang a backhand shot off the crossbar. Earlier, however, Lemieux hit the goal post after beating Joseph.

Adam Deadmarsh later shot wide of an empty net on a pass from Sakic.

Both Roy and Joseph made key saves late in the game and in overtime as the upstart Oilers battled the champs.

Sabres 5, Flyers 4

PHILADELPHIA — Ed Ronan scored 6:24 into overtime as the Buffalo Sabres avoided a four-game sweep in their playoff series with the Philadelphia Flyers with a 5-4 victory Friday night.

Ronan got the rebound of a shot by Garry Galley and lifted it over falling Flyers goalie Garth Snow. Derek Plante had a goal and three assists for the Sabres.

The Flyers still lead the best-of-7 series 3-1, with Game 5 to be played Sunday in Buffalo.

Buffalo played without MVP candidate Dominik Hasek, who was expected to make his first start since spraining his right knee earlier in the playoffs, and since serving a three-game suspension for attacking a reporter.

Smith tells his players he's considering Kentucky

By Paul Newberry
AP Sports Writer

ATHENS, Ga. — Tubby Smith, still the Georgia coach for now, met with his players Friday and told them he hasn't decided whether to accept an offer from Kentucky.

Kentucky officials, however, scheduled a news conference Monday to introduce a new coach.

Despite all indications that Smith is set to leave, the Georgia players held out scant hope he might turn down the chance to replace Rick Pitino at one of the nation's most prominent basketball programs.

"I really can't get myself to say he's leaving," sophomore guard Ray Harrison said. "He's been like a father to me. I really can't see myself saying he's leaving and a new coach is coming in. I just hope he stays here for a while, hopefully until I leave."

Kentucky announced that its Athletics Association Board will meet at 1:30 p.m. Monday, at which time the school will introduce its new coach.

"The UK athletics department will not issue any statement regarding the coaching situation until the announcement on Monday," the school said.

Several media reports have said a deal already has been reached, but Smith did not share that information with his Georgia players on Friday. Some wondered if he was torn about leaving when the Bulldogs have everyone returning from a team that set a school record with 24 victories last season.

"I think he really enjoys being here," sophomore forward Jon Nordin said. "I think one of the hardest things for him is he is as excited as we are about next year with everybody coming back. We had a (No.) 3 seed in the (NCAA) tournament this year, and there's no telling what could happen next year."

Rangers ride Witt's five-hitter to win over Red Sox

BOSTON (AP) — Bobby Witt has finally learned the difference between being a hard thrower and a pitcher.

Witt pitched a five-hitter for Texas' first complete game of the year and the Rangers ended their season-high three-game losing streak Friday night with a 5-1 win over the Boston Red Sox.

"As recent as early last year, we all knew Bobby as a pitcher who, when he got in trouble, would try to throw the ball harder," said Texas manager Johnny Oates. "Now he'll take something off it."

"The goal is to throw strikes," Oates added. "He's on a good roll now — probably his best."

Witt (6-0) walked one and struck out six. Last Sunday, the Red Sox roughed him for six runs in four innings.

Witt is off to the Rangers' best start since Jeff Russell (1988) and Jim Kern (1979) each opened at 7-0.

"I didn't necessarily want to throw the first pitch as hard as I can, but I wanted my first pitch to be a strike," said Witt, who moved into a second-place tie with Ferguson Jenkins on the Ranger's career victory list with No. 93.

"I'm not one of the guys that came into the league and dominated people my first three or four years," added Witt, now in his 12th season. "I've always had to work and its paid off."

The Rangers had gone 30 games this year without a complete game, the longest drought at the start of a season in team history. They went 24 games without one at the beginning of 1995.

Overall, Texas had gone 36 games since its last complete game, by Ken Hill on Sept. 22. It was the 42nd complete game of Witt's career.

"He took command of the strike zone," said Boston's Mo Vaughn. "We didn't put a lot of pressure on him. He got ahead (in the count) and threw the ball well."

The Red Sox have dropped six of their last seven games.

Dean Palmer's RBI double capped a four-run fifth inning off John Wasdin (0-1). The Red Sox are 0-7 in Wasdin's seven starts.

With two outs in the fifth, Rusty Greer, Juan Gonzalez and Will Clark hit consecutive RBI singles up the middle and Palmer followed with his double. Kerry Lacy relieved and retired Lee Stevens with runners on second and third.

The Red Sox took a 1-0 in the second when John Valentin hit an RBI single on a 3-0 pitch.

Texas made it 5-1 in the seventh on Valentin's two-out error at second base.

Texas had lost five of its last six road games.

Astro errors lead to Marlins' victory in 9th

Associated Press

MIAMI — Two Houston errors helped Florida load the bases in the ninth inning for Gary Sheffield, who hit an RBI single with one out Friday night to give the Marlins a 3-2 win over the Astros.

Leading off the ninth, pinch-hitter Alex Arias hit a routine grounder that went through second baseman Craig Biggio's legs. Ralph Milliard then dropped a bunt toward third baseman Tim Bogar, who dropped the ball and allowed Arias to get to third.

Jim Eisenreich was intentionally walked with one out before Sheffield chopped a single down the third-base line off Jose Lima (0-2).

Robb Nen (2-1) pitched the ninth for the victory.

The Marlins, limited to five hits over seven innings by Houston starter Darryl Kile, tied it 2-2 in the eighth with a run off reliever John Hudek.

Moises Alou drew a one-out walk and Bobby Bonilla followed with an RBI double.

For the second time in less than a week, Kile and Florida starter Kevin Brown matched each other for seven innings.

Kile, who defeated Brown 1-0 last Sunday when both pitchers went the distance, walked five and struck out four.

Brown struck out 10 to match the career-high he set last Sunday against the Astros. The right-hander gave up one run and five hits in seven innings.

Jose Gonzalez drove in both Houston runs.

With the score tied 1-1 in the third, Gonzalez's double brought home Jeff Bagwell with the go-ahead run. Bagwell had reached on a two-out double off the right-field wall barely missing a home run.

Houston took a lead 1-0 in the first. Biggio singled, stole second and advanced to third on catcher Gregg Zaun's throwing error. Gonzalez followed with a grounder up the middle that second baseman Milliard couldn't chase down, allowing Biggio to score.

Florida tied it 1-1 in the second on Brown's bases-loaded infield single.

McLane: Astros move possible if new referendum needed

HOUSTON — Astros owner Drayton McLane Jr. says the team might move if a second vote is required for a downtown baseball stadium. But lawmakers say they will try to exempt Houston from another referendum.

A stadium financing bill passed Thursday by the Texas House requires all cities and counties to hold referendums before using the financing tools provided by the legislation.

An amendment by state Rep. Sylvester Turner, D-Houston, had removed a clause that would have exempted Harris County from a referendum.

"It's simple, the people should have the right to vote again," Turner said. "What we approved (in the stadium bill) is different from what the people voted for in November."

Duval starts with eagle at BellSouth Classic

Associated Press

• DULUTH, Ga. — David Duval eagled his first hole en route to a second consecutive 6-under 66 and held a one-shot lead halfway through the BellSouth Classic on Friday.

• Starting on the 608-yard 10th hole, Duval holed it from 50 yards with a sand wedge, then added five birdies before taking his only bogey on his final hole when he caught a greenside bunker on No. 9 and had his 10-foot par putt lip out.

• Nick Price was second after a 67 gave him an 11-under 133 total for two trips around the 7,259-yard TPC Sugarloaf Country Club north of Atlanta. The round was interrupted for 25 minutes early in the afternoon because of a thundershower.

• First-round lead Don Pooley was another shot back after a 70. Charlie Rymer had an eagle 2 on No. 9 — his last hole of the day — for a 67.

• Greg Norman, who designed the course, moved into contention at 137 with a 67, while Hale Irwin missed the even par cut of 144 after a 77 left him at 151.

• "No matter where you're playing, any course, any conditions, if you're swinging well and hitting it solid, it's going to work," Duval said.

• The former Georgia Tech golfer has had it working two days in a row.

Duval, still seeking his first PGA Tour victory, has been concentrating on conditioning, saying he had lost between 30 and 40 pounds, and he notices a difference.

"I think you notice," he said. "I mean, it would be like walking around the course carrying my golf bag now. That's about what it'd be, and it's kind of unbelievable to think I was doing that."

Alfredsson holds 1-stroke lead

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Helen Alfredsson, who had hip surgery last November, fought through gusting winds Friday and shot a 6-under 66 for a one-stroke lead at the $675,000 Sara Lee Classic.

Alfredsson spent five weeks in bed after doctors operated on her right hip Nov. 1, reattaching a hamstring that was injured 10 years ago when she chipped a pelvic bone in an accident.

■ Golf Roundup

She has struggled in seven events this year, missing three cuts with her best finish a tie for 26th at the Susan G. Komen International last month. She admitted she probably pushed herself too much in trying to return to the tour.

But Alfredsson surprised herself with seven birdies and one bogey in the afternoon despite winds gusting between 20 and 25 mph.

"I actually had a few more chances if I had made some more putts," Alfredsson said. "But I'm not going to be greedy. I'm happy with 6-under."

Palmer posts his best round since cancer surgery

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Arnold Palmer's return from cancer surgery reached another milestone Friday in the first round of the Home Depot Invitational.

"If I keep hitting it the way I am, I was very encouraged," Palmer said after he opened the Senior PGA Tour event with a 3-over-par 75 — easily his best score in tournament play since prostate surgery in January.

By competitive standards, Palmer's round was hardly a gem; it left him nine shots off the lead, which was held by John D. Morgan, who birdied the last three holes at the TPC at Piper Glen for a 66.

But it marked the brightest ray of hope yet in a comeback bid that had failed to produce a round lower than 81 and left a frustrated Palmer questioning his future in the sport.

SATURDAY, MAY 10, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, May 10, 1997:
In this high-energy year, you are inclined to change directions and learn more about a metaphysical course of study. Travel could become an active part of the scenario. You will have the opportunity to make money through your artistic talents. Follow your inspiration and ideas. Your high level of charm draws others. Tune in to your more spiritual side. If you are single, romance will become an important part of your life. A relationship is new and different for you. If attached, your union spirals to a new pinnacle. A trip or vacation adds life to your interactions. CANCER lends warmth.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Key projects and errands occupy you at home. Complete spring cleaning, then invite others over to share the day. Treat an older relative to dinner or theater. Making him feel special is an appropriate gesture for the weekend. Tonight: Enjoy good times.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Take the initiative. Make plans with family or an older friend. It could take you out of town or expose you to another world. A day trip proves to be fun. Explore the various ways of saying thank you with a child. Tonight: Investigate.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Spending is intense, and could be a bit extravagant. A discussion allows you to share what is on your mind with a partner. Be realistic about how much you should indulge yourself. Show another a good time, but not at enormous cost to you. Tonight: It's party time.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ You are grounded. Creativity is high and allows for a better party. A partner absolutely adores you. Go within, to discover the depth of your feelings. Be careful, however, of an attractive member of the opposite sex. Tonight: Just ask.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Take a low-key day to pull back. Find a friend, and vanish on some fun excursion. Relax, and give in to the side of you that enjoys indulging your fantasies. Nothing recharges you like having a good time. Tonight: You don't have to tell.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ You enjoy intense and perky moments with a loved one. Let your imagination go, and share it with someone special. You find that another wants to let you know how much he cares. You're flattered, and feel cared about. Tonight: Get what you want.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Take the lead, and be willing to organize. Bring friends and loved ones together. You feel appreciated. Do not forget someone at a distance whom you care about. Your actions speak for themselves. At home, you feel mellow. Share good news with family. Tonight: Head out.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ You are a sign that does everything completely. Do not leave out anyone; hurt feelings could develop out of nowhere. Sensitive sharing opens doors. Let others know just how important they are to you. Arrange for an exotic gathering. Tonight: Try something different.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ Take time with a special admirer, who obviously adores you. Be clear about what you want. Intimate discussions mark your day. It is an easy, caring day. Use more than a little common sense regarding spending and extravagance. Tonight: Snuggle up.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Sharing is natural to you, and you flow with the day's various situations. You enjoy socializing, making the most of the moment. A co-worker or someone in your day-to-day life appreciates your concern and a gesture you make. Return calls. Tonight: You are popular!
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ You get a lot done because of your determination. You have a great idea that you want to test. Take advantage of the prevailing creative atmosphere. Imagination and ingenuity are high. A friend or loved one wants to join in the fun and games. Tonight: You are focused.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Your loving nature opens doors. Something you have always dreamed of becomes reality. Go with creativity, newness and opportunity. You are very comfortable sharing your vulnerabilities. The tone of a love relationship intensifies. Tonight: Be discreet.

Cindy Crawford has been working on her jogging for upcoming event

LOS ANGELES — The course is tougher this year. So is Cindy Crawford.

"Last year my goal was just to finish," Crawford told The Associated Press on Friday, eve of the 4th Annual Revlon Run/Walk for Women, which has raised more than $3 million over three years for research on women's cancers.

"I never used to run, and I started running to train for it like two months before it. So I just wanted to not embarrass myself and to run the whole way," the supermodel recalled.

The star-studded 5-kilometer event has become a huge draw. This year it has moved from the streets of Century City to the sprawling University of California, Los Angeles, campus. About 35,000 runners and walkers are expected.

Last year's experience got Crawford into running and she's kept at it.

"My goal this year is to beat my time from last year, which I think was around 31 minutes, so I don't think I should have any problem. Although this year it's probably going to be hotter and also the course is tougher this year because it's at UCLA and it's more hilly there."

LOS ANGELES — Harrison Ford is good at playing a movie exec, too.

The makers of his new Columbia Pictures' film, "Air Force One," got a July 25 release date.

Harrison Ford is upset by the release date for his new film.

But Ford has watched with dismay as rival studios eyed the same date for their blockbusters. Among them: "Conspiracy Theory," a Mel Gibson thriller, and "Titanic."

So Ford called some executives, including Jonathan Dolgen, chairman of the Viacom Entertainment Group, which owns Paramount Pictures — maker of "Titanic."

"Harrison was definitely irritated," said Patricia McQueeney, Ford's manager. "It was a friendly phone call. But Harrison did say, 'Jonathan, what the hell are you doing?'"

Dolgen agreed with Ford, but he and the other studio executives haven't made their decision known yet.

McQueeney said she and Ford had a similar conversation with Bob Daly, chairman of Warner Bros., which is making "Conspiracy Theory."

She said Ford gets involved in every aspect of his films, including the business side. "And it's bad business to open two movies on the same date, much less three of them."

LOS ANGELES — Larry King loves to interview the stars — and now he's joining them.

King, host of CNN's "Larry King Live," received a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. He arrived for the unveiling Thursday in a turquoise and white 1957 Chevrolet convertible.

The 40-year-old car was a symbol of his 40 years of broadcasting, King said.

"I am thrilled to be here today, especially to have my star next to Arthur Godfrey, who I revered as a child when I listened to his radio show," King said.

About 100 fans were on hand for the ceremony on Hollywood Boulevard. King's star is No. 2,092 on the famous walk.

Pamela Anderson Lee testified that she did not consider herself bound to a cable movie deal for Showtime.

LOS ANGELES — Former "Baywatch" star Pamela Anderson Lee testified that she doesn't consider a movie deal done until she signs on the dotted line.

"I only worry about my signature," she said on the stand Thursday.

Private Movie Co. sued Lee for backing out of a made-for-cable movie called "Hello, She Lied." The lawsuit, on trial in Superior Court, claims losses of at least $5 million for the Showtime cable television movie.

Lee testified that she never signed a contract for "Hello, She Lied."

Private Movie attorney Adam Miller said, however, several people were present at a November 1994 meeting in which the actress orally committed to the film.

Lee claims the deal was incomplete because Private Movie refused to delete simulated sex scenes and nudity.

"Hello, She Lied" was later made with model Kathy Ireland and was released by Showtime under the title "Miami Hustler."

Car Concerns

by Susan Frissell

What's Vital to Know

There's been a lot of press recently regarding child safety seats. Studies have been conducted on more than one make of child safety seat, and the results haven't always been favorable. Consumer Reports has been testing these safety seats since September of 1995, subjecting them to simulated head-on crashes at thirty miles per hour into a fixed barrier. A twenty pound test dummy is used for the test. Since these tests began, manufacturers of the infant seats have been improving their products, as well as recalling some.

Requirements

State law in all fifty states require infants and small children to ride in a safety seat. Automobile accidents remain the leading cause of death for children under the age of five in the United States. Each year, an estimated 700 children die in crashes each year while another 60,000-70,000 are injured. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has tightened up its criteria to certify the safety of child safety seats. The agency now mandates heavier dummies in the crash tests for some seats. Some of the changes that are being petitioned for include: First, stop the dependence on "over design." (Manufacturers can claim on the packaging that a seat tested with a twenty pound dummy is safe for babies up to twenty two pounds. That's because the Federal Government questionably assumes manufacturers "over design" their products.) Two, test at exactly thirty mph to certify thirty mph. Currently, the Federal Government and manufacturers run crash tests at twenty seven to thirty miles per hour, but the standard says seats must pass at thirty mph. A crash at twenty seven mph is less severe than one at thirty mph.

Guidelines for Parents

Learning how to choose the "best" car seat is important for parents of small children. The best car seat for your baby is one that fits your child's size and weight, fits in your car, and that you will use correctly. Low-and-high cost models generally provide similar protection; higher prices may mean added convenience features. Be sure to try out the seats you like; read the instructions, put your child in the seat, adjust the harness and buckle system. When you buy a new seat, send in the registration form to the manufacturer so that you'll be sure of being notified of any recalls. Make sure it hasn't been in an accident. If it's been recalled, get replacement parts if possible. If the seat has no identification label or fails to meet the other requirements, do not use it. Many hospitals and clinics have car seat rental programs for parents, as an alternative to buying a seat. For small infants or low-birthweight babies, a car seat without a shield is recommended for at least the first few months. Children with special health problems or medical conditions may need restraint systems. Consult with your pediatrician about the proper safety devices for a special-needs child. When choosing a seat, pay attention to the harness system. A seat may come with one of two types of harness systems: A T-Shield or Tray-Shield. The T-Shield is a padded T-shaped or triangular shield attached to shoulder straps; a Tray-Shield is a wide, rounded shield (like an arm rest). It is attached to the sides of the car seat and swings down around the child. Shields must be low to restrain the hips. They are often too high for newborns, and too far from the body to fit correctly. Harnesses without shields provide good protection and can be adjusted to fit snugly. Harnesses with shields aren't any safer, but they keep straps from getting tangled.

Basics of Car Seat Use

Some of the most common and dangerous misuses of infant safety seats include installing rear-facing seats so they face the front of the vehicle; using an automatic safety belt system (door-mounted, motorized or non-locking) with a safety seat without checking the car owner's manual to see if the two are compatible; failing to use the vehicle seatbelt to anchor the seat or not fastening it tight enough; not using locking clips to hold adjustable lap/shoulder belts in place; and/or, using rear-facing infant seats in the front seat of a vehicle equipped with dual air bags. The basics of using an infant car seat are first and foremost: Always use a car seat, from the day you bring the infant home from the hospital to the time they are old enough to be buckled into a conventional seatbelt. Help your child get into a lifelong habit of using seatbelts. Following the manufacturer's instructions and keeping them with the car seat is also important. Check your owner's manual, as well, for special instructions on installing the infant seat if you have automatic seatbelts or a passenger air bag. Remember to always put the harness in place. The harness or shield holds your child in the car seat, and the vehicle seatbelt holds the seat in the car. Unless both are attached, the car seat may not protect against injury. If the lap portion of your vehicle's safety belt does not hold your car seat firmly in place, consult the vehicle's owner's manual and the car seat instruction about using a metal locking clip. Using car seats correctly involves knowing the what-why-and-how for each stage of your child's life; there are advantages and disadvantages for use when a child is a newborn, and when he/she is a toddler. So, it's critical to understand that the proper use of a car seat changes as your child ages and begins to weigh more.

Chrysler Town & Country AWD paces the pack as elite minivan

By BOB PLUNKETT
Special to Midland Reporter-Telegram

CASTLE ROCK, Utah — We're cruising through thin air at high altitude on an interstate slab flowing out of Wyoming, beating a snaky path through Echo Canyon, etched in the Big Piney Mountains of the Wasatch Range, and heading toward the airport in Salt Lake City.

A drizzling mist generated from low-slung clouds coats the pavement ahead of us, setting up potentially dangerous driving conditions with unseen slippery spots which can spin a tire and send a lesser vehicle flying for disaster in an unplanned rendezvous with a ditch.

That's not the way my cushy test vehicle plays it, though, due to the sure-footed grip set automatically in place by a full-time all-wheel-drive system that distributes engine torque to front and rear wheels after sensing which tire set maintains stable traction.

This allows a driver to plow through the uncertainties of a slick roadbed with relative confidence and for one tester means I'll probably make my flight on time after all.

Considering the comforts packed aboard this top model in Chrysler's line, it also signifies that we're traveling with the kind of luxuries usually encountered only in the finest of limousines.

What a smooth ride it delivers: Refined with fancy passenger comforts, liberated with exacting handling mechanisms, enthused with V6 horsepower.

There's irony in that statement, however, because no one expects to feel pampered, much less luxurious and secure, in that proverbial box-on-wheels known as a minivan.

Yet that's what you get with deluxe editions of Town & Country by Chrysler, the company that pioneered the minivan concept in 1984 and set the competitive pace thereafter.

A dramatic remake of Chrysler's minivan in 1995 produced stunning changes with new people-pleasing features, and now a new version appears with all-wheel- drive traction.

Why apply traction to all four wheels?

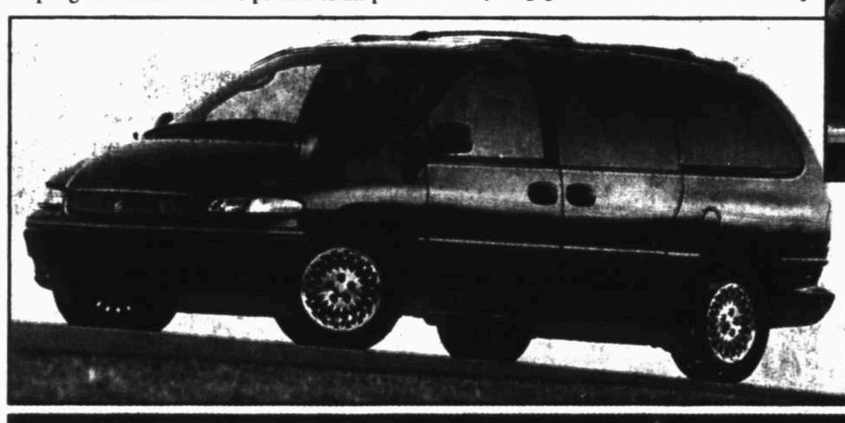
The simple answer comes from a single word: Security.

By channeling power to all wheels, the vehicle moves with superior stability on wet as well as dry pavement. Straight-line acceleration improves, agility increases when tackling a set of road curves, and when maneuvering up an incline like a steep mountain grade all four tires remain rooted to pavement with seemingly more muscle applied.

Chrysler's all-wheel-drive device centers on an inter-axle viscous coupling which automatically channels engine torque to front and rear axles.

Under normal driving conditions, the viscous coupling distributes about 90 percent of the power to front wheels, so the minivan behaves similarly to the front-wheel-drive model. Yet when onboard sensors detect wheel slippage at front wheels, the coupling instantly transfers some of the power — up to 100 percent, depending on amount of slippage detected — to rear wheels.

What's so convenient about the Chrysler all-wheel-drive system is its automation. It's always engaged, so the driver never has to flip a switch or pull a lever or even think about any required action.



Across these diverse routes, Town & Country performed sedan tricks in the quick and easy way it slipped through traffic, thanks to responsive systems like power-assisted rack and pinion steering, plus the malleable suspension which produces a living-room smooth ride quality.

With all seats aboard, Town & Country LX can carry a party of seven; with rear tiers removed, you can haul furniture.

FAST FACTS

'97 CHRYSLER TOWN & COUNTRY AWD

Description	Compact Luxury Minivan.
Model options	LX, LXi
Wheelbase	119.3 inches
Overall length	199.7 inches
Engine size	OHV 3.8-L V6
Transmissions/speeds	Auto/4
Rear/front drive	All-Wheel-Drive
Steering	Power rack and pinion
Braking	Power 4-disc/ABS
Airbag(s)	2
EPA mileage est. city/hwy	16/22 mpg
Price range	$30,000 to $35,000

The new all-wheel-drive feature shows up strictly in the extended-wheelbase version of Town & Country, which is available in the two trim designations of LX and LXi.

This minivan functions like a big car but measures small enough to park in a home garage. It looks smallish, too, although Town & Country seats up to seven and can carry everyone in the family, with space left over in the rear bay for luggage and vacation gear.

It wears smoothly shaped exterior elements that flow from one panel to the next in streamlined fashion so the overall package doesn't seem bulky — or even boxy.

The most striking exterior feature concerns the expanse of glass that rings the cabin. A front cowling dips to enhance driver's forward vision, and side glass sheets extend boldly vertical to bring panoramic views for riders.

Forward visibility, expanding through the massive tinted windshield, encompasses the road scene in an ideal design. The steering wheel feels of fine leather, as does the chair-like driver's seat. A cupholder with ratchet grip keeps the coffee mug within easy reach.

In the cabin, a low platform affords minimal step-up height which compares to a sedan so it's easy to climb aboard. Also, the floor slopes up from front to rear in theater fashion so rear seats rise above front seats to enrich views.

A sliding slab door on each side immediately behind front hinged doors allows easy entry for back-seat riders.

Second and third tiers of bench or bucket seats can be removed for additional storage space. Following the flick of a switch, seats roll on floor tracks for easy removal.

Best of all, this minivan seems so easy to drive.

My tests put me in several of the 1997 Town & Country AWD editions, including the ultimate LXi with leather-wrapped bucket seating for six. Utah driving routes ranged from fast-paced freeway transits and urban arteries of Salt Lake City to 2-lane twisty roads wrapped through the Rocky Mountains east of the capital.

The minivan's wide front track sets up a turning circle that's significantly short. This in turn enables it to navigate paths as tight and narrow as those in a shopping center's parking lot, which always rank as a challenge.

For power, the AWD LXi draws from a 166-hp 3.8-liter V6 that's optionally available with LX trim. As the largest V6 offered for Chrysler's minivan fleet, this plant feels gutsy and lively in all gears of the 4-speed automatic shifter. Standard for LX is a 3.3-liter V6, rated at 158 hp.

Both trims carry safety gear like dual airbags and 4-wheel anti-lock brakes. Twin children's seats, folding out from a second-tier bench, show up on the list of options.

The new AWD equipment loads $2,275 to list prices, which begin at $29,685 for LX and $33,740 for LXi.

Rambling Freedom:

'97 Geo Tracker/Jeep Wrangler

By Kenneth Chester, Jr.

With the current boom in sport utility vehicles (SUVs) in full swing, you would think that a vast sum of money is needed in order to gain the advantages of all wheel drive and an elevated view of the road. Fortunately, the automakers have turned their attention to offering a growing number of entry level vehicles in this market segment for consumers who want the advantages of a SUV, but are unable or unwilling to pay the steep cost of entry. I have driven and compared a couple of these models to see what they offer the budget minded consumer.

Wheelin'&Dealin'

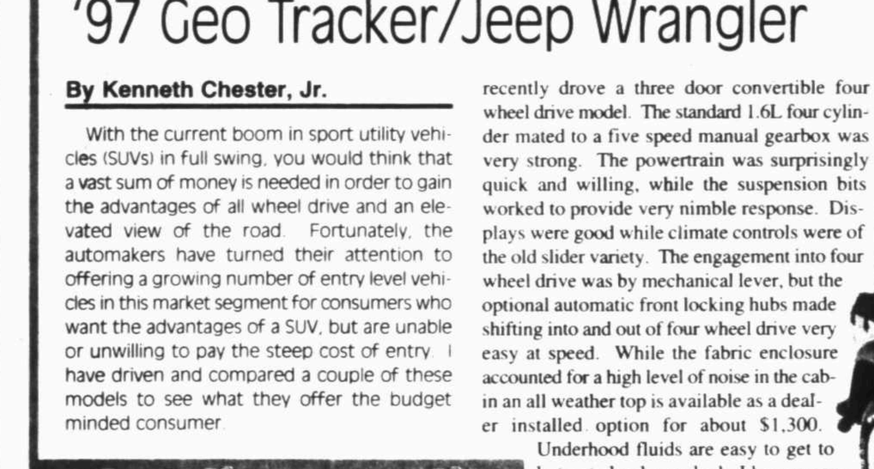
Geo Tracker: Fun in the Sun

As one of the veterans in the market segment, the Tracker first appeared during the 1990 model year. Built by a joint venture of the Japanese automaker Suzuki and General Motors in Ingersoll, Ontario, Canada, this model quickly gained a reputation for providing inexpensive go anywhere fun for the masses. Initially offered in a three door hardtop or convertible, two or four wheel drive, the Tracker is a versatile vehicle in the true sense of the word. The 1996 model year saw the addition of a four-door Tracker to the model lineup to offer young families a low cost entry into the world of four wheel drive. I recently drove a three door convertible four wheel drive model. The standard 1.6L four cylinder mated to a five speed manual gearbox was very strong. The powertrain was surprisingly quick and willing, while the suspension bits worked to provide very nimble response. Displays were good while climate controls were of the old slider variety. The engagement into four wheel drive was by mechanical lever, but the optional automatic front locking hubs made shifting into and out of four wheel drive very easy at speed. While the fabric enclosure accounted for a high level of noise in the cabin an all weather top is available as a dealer installed option for about $1,300.

Underhood fluids are easy to get to but not clearly marked. I have a couple of gripes: the hood release is located inside the glovebox and cannot be seen even with the glovebox open and the molded cupholders are of limited use. When properly equipped, a three door Tracker can tow a trailer with a maximum weight of 1,000 pounds, the four door model, 1,500 pounds. Standard safety equipment includes: dual airbags, side impact door beams, and daytime running lights. Four wheel anti-lock brakes are a $595 option. EPA fuel economy ranges from 24 city/26 highway for the five speed manual to 22 city/ 25 highway for the optional four speed automatic. Retail sticker prices for the Tracker range from $13,415 to $15,710. Destination charge adds $340. Inventories of Tracker models are light.

Jeep Wrangler: A New Authentic

If there is any vehicle that can declare itself the "original", it is the Jeep Wrangler. A successor to the 1941 US Military Willys MB that created the foundation of the current sport utility market, the Wrangler has undergone a $260 million make over for the '97 model year. The Jeep still embodies the raw spirit of the ultimate go-anywhere, do anything vehicle — even the front window can be folded down flat and secured to the body for actual open air motoring. I recently took one out for a spin. Available in three trim levels: SE, Sport, and Sahara, I drove a midline Sport softtop model equipped with the 4.0L Inline six cylinder engine connected to a five speed manual gearbox. This Jeep is smooth, agile and easy to drive. When the going got nasty, this vehicle showed its heritage — 100% Jeep. Engaging the four wheel drive is a mechanical lever affair, very easy and straightforward. Displays and controls were excellent, with a full bank of analog displays. The seats were very comfortable. The all weather hardtop is a $925 option for the Sahara, $755 for the SE and Sport models. The real strength of this Jeep is the dedication to proven technology. The result is a vehicle that can be fixed easily almost anywhere if required. Underhood fluids were easy to get to and clearly marked. Properly equipped, the Wrangler has a payload of up to 800 pounds and can tow a trailer with a weight up to 2,000 pounds. Standard safety equipment includes: dual airbags. Four wheel anti-lock brakes are a $600 option on Sport and Sahara models, a Trac-Loc rear differential is a $285 option. EPA fuel economy ranges from 19 city/ 21 highway for the 2.5L four cylinder engine/five speed manual to 15 city/18 highway for the 4.0L six cylinder engine/three speed automatic. Retail sticker prices start at $13,470 for the Wrangler SE to $19,210 for the Sahara model. Supplies of this model are good and there are no rebates.



TOP: Geo Tracker is currently available in six models — two or four wheel drive, two or four doors, Standard or LSi trim — RIGHT: A revealing look at the inner workings of the new '97 Jeep Wrangler.
