Deficit Budget Prepared

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is turning over to Congress and his Republican successor a lame-duck, deficit-ridden budget of about $740 billion for 1982 that includes boosts for the military and inflation-swelled increases in social programs.

The farewell budget Carter planned to unveil today is expected to propose a 12 percent rise in spending, a deficit of almost $30 billion and a 10-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax increase.

But Ronald Reagan has vowed to rewrite the budget and propose his own tax policies soon after he becomes president on Tuesday. He is counting on approval from a Republican-controlled Senate and a more conservative House.

Reagan wants immediate reductions in personal taxes and cutbacks in non-defense federal programs. In sharp contrast, Carter will leave office opposed to individual tax cuts this year, contending they would only worsen inflation.

Instead, administration sources said, Carter's proposed budget will call for business tax cuts in 1981. But to minimize the red ink, Carter wants to defer personal tax reductions until 1982 and revive the unpopular gasoline tax increase that Congress rejected last year.

Last summer, Carter proposed a 1981 income tax credit for individuals and businesses to offset higher Social Security taxes. He also proposed to do away with the so-called "marriage penalty," under which a working married couple's income is taxed at a higher rate than if they were single. Both tax changes would be postponed one year under the new budget.

On the spending side, the defense budget is expected to be the only major area to show a significant increase beyond rises caused by inflation. Administration sources said Carter would propose a $6.2 billion increase in the defense budget for 1981 and a 4 percent to 5 percent increase above inflation in 1982.

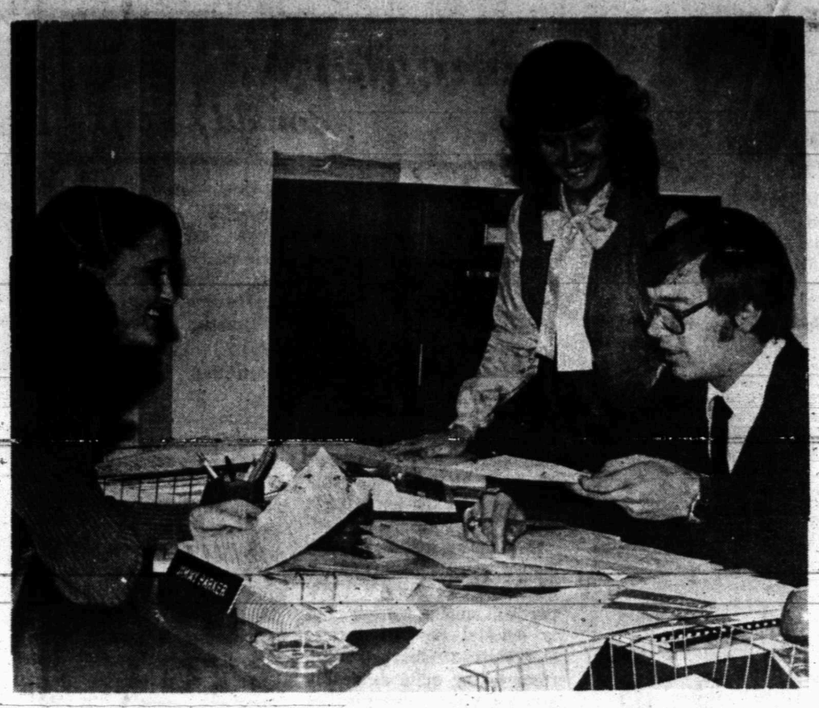

Social welfare programs are expected to show no real growth, although total spending will be up more than 10 percent from 1981 because of inflation.

Reagan may seek even larger increases in military spending. He also wants to cut deeper into social programs by restricting eligibility and benefit levels — changes that Congress has refused to approve in the past.

Carter will return home without fulfilling his 1976 campaign pledge to balance the budget within four years.

The budget for fiscal 1981, which began last fall, is expected to rise to $660 billion and produce a deficit of at least $55 billion.

This is the budget that Carter promised last winter to balance. But the combination of high inflation and sluggish economic growth in the past year is expected to produce a deficit for the 12th straight time — and one of the largest ever.

New Bank Opening At 8 a.m. Here Friday

After more than 19 months of planning and organization, First National Bank will open its doors for business at 8 a.m. Friday.

Lewis Nance, president, said the bank will open in temporary facilities at 37th and College while construction of the bank's permanent quarters is underway at the same location.

"We are delighted to finally reach this milestone and open our doors," Nance said. "Much planning and work has gone on to bring the citizens of Snyder and Scurry County the most modern and convenient banking available."

The bank's main lobby will be open each day from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., and on Friday banking hours will be from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Drive-in banking hours will be from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. each weekday.

Nance said FNB will open with two drive-in windows. When the permanent facility is completed later this spring, there will be five drive-in lanes and a 24-hour automatic teller.

Entrance to the drive-in windows will be on 37th Street and drive-in customers will exit onto College Ave. Parking for bank customers will be on the north side of the temporary modular facility.

Nance said FNB will open with all banking services with the exception of safety deposit boxes which will be available when the new building is complete. Other major services will include the new NOW accounts whereby customers may earn interest on their checking accounts.

Nance said another first for Snyder will be the BanClub checking accounts. For a monthly fee of $5, members will have no service charge checking, free personalized checks and a host of other services.

The bank has purchased the 6,500 square foot building formerly used as an oil company office and the building will be completely renovated and another 7,500 square feet added for the permanent quarters.

"When our new building is finished this spring, we will have a formal open house," Nance said. "The new building will feature a completely new look and give us a very modern and efficient banking facility."

The bank will open with four officers, including Nance. Phil Guerry is vice president and Russell Shannon is cashier. Margaret Lacy was recently named assistant cashier and executive secretary.

Other employees include Linda Sullivan, Judy Rice, Stephanie Miller, Karen Fulfer, Donna Mize and Laurel Woodward.

Sammy Spikes, president of Brownfield State Bank and a native of Snyder, is chairman of the board of directors. Other directors include Nance, Bill McCormick, Buster Anderson, Roy McQueen, Morris Light, Mal Donelson, Milton Ham and E. D. Walton.

The SDN Column

The Texas Legislature has been told that it has about $19.5 billion available to spend during its session which opened this week.

Actually, state income will be nearly $30 billion for the biennium, but only about two-thirds of it will be in reach of this year's lawmakers.

This piece of information came from Bob Bullock, state comptroller of public accounts, who is required to keep the lawmakers posted on how much money they have to play with during their session.

Texas has a pay-as-you-go rule, which means that the legislature cannot pass a spending bill without providing the funds it would require.

Based on Bullock's report this week, if the lawmakers should use up the $19.5 billion and still want to pass some legislation requiring funds, they would have to approve additional tax levies to take care of it.

Spending is the name of the game in Austin and all of the maneuvering for power in the opening days of the session are focused on the money bill, which always is among the last items to be adopted in each session.

Although some would have scoffed if it had been predicted six months ago, Bill Clayton still has the reins in the House of Representatives. His acquittal in the Brilab trial not only got him off the hook with the feds, but also sent his political stock on a tremendous rebound in the state. Now that he has been re-elected as Speaker of the House, there are some state representatives who wish they had kept their mouths shut last spring and summer.

But the opening of a legislative session always gives rise to hopes. The only time we ever chanced to be in Austin when a session began, the hotel lobbies looked like zoos. We had gone to Austin on business unrelated to the legislative session, but hitched a ride down with the late Obie Bristow, who had just been elected state representative at Big Spring. Bristow, a man of material means, having dabbled successfully in the oil business for years as well as coaching high school football teams, was uncertain as to the type of wardrobe he would need while serving in Austin. So, he piled the back seat of his Lincoln up to the gills with business suits, put his golf clubs in the trunk, and then, as if having a second thought, hauled out one necktie.

He soon discovered that most any type of wardrobe would have been in style. The only problem was that few of his colleagues had as much on the ball as Obie did.

Stolen Auto Found Here

The search in a routine gasoline theft turned up a stolen car Wednesday afternoon.

The sheriff's office was notifed that two subjects in a 1974 Pontiac had stopped at the Fina station in Hermleigh about 3 p.m. and left without paying for their gas. The car was stopped a short time later about 12 miles north of town on the Clairemont Highway.

Michael Anthony Kent of Alabama, the driver of the car, was arrested on a car theft charge from that state. Both he and a passenger in the car, Clarence G. White, whom deputies said was a hitchhiker from Georgia, would be filed on for misdemeanor theft for the gasoline.

Spotting the car was game warden Rue Gambol. Participating in the arrest were the highway patrol, sheriff's office, and police department.

Says Dallas Jury...

Bank Stock Not Taxable

A jury decision Wednesday in a Dallas district court is not expected to affect local taxing entities to a significant extent, although reports are it could cost Dallas agencies up to $26 million in tax revenue.

The Dallas case has generally been regarded in the landmark category in the efforts of banks in the state to exempt their federal obligations and bonds in assessing their shareholders for bank taxes.

The Dallas banks were among the first to file a suit challenging the state law which permitted these assesments on bank stock. Banks throughout the state filed similar suits, including the banks in Snyder.

However, all were awaiting the outcome in the Dallas suit.

The jury took less than two hours to reach a decision after a week-long trial.

The U.S. obligations are exempt from taxation under federal law, but a Texas law allows bank shareholders to be taxed because banks are exempt from certain other taxes normally levied on corporations.

Clarence Minton, Scurry county tax collector, who now collects taxes for all entities in the county, said the verdict, if it finally is upheld, is not likely to have much effect on the tax rolls here because it had been anticipated. Local banks deposited their taxes for 1980 with the court after they filed suit, and the payments were held in escrow. The taxing entities are not expected to face any significant problems if they do not ultimately receive these funds.

There was no indication as to whether the case would be appealed.

In Dallas, lawyers for the banks were cautiously optimistic after the verdict, noting that visiting State District Court Judge Jim Noble Thompson would enter the final verdict later, possibly sometime today.

"Until he (Thompson) enters the verdict, we're not sure what that means about taxes," said Fletcher Yarbrough, attorney for 45 of the 49 banks in the suit.

"Our clients have said all along they won't pay the taxes because the are illegal," he said.

The estimated $26 million in taxes from the 49 banks was due Jan. 31 to the city and county, as well as hospital, school and community college districts.

The precedent-setting case probably will be settled in appellate court, lawyers for both sides said following the ruling.

The taxing entities agreed to accept escrow payments in lieu of taxes until a ruling was handed down on the suit. But the county declined to go along with arrangement and the case went to trial.

Ask Us

Q.—Is it true that the "Moonies" now own controlling interest in Proctor & Gamble, and if not, why do they have a moon symbol on their products?

A.—This question has come from several sources and we have been keeping an eye out for the answer, and apparently it has been asked in other places. The Dallas News researched this recently and found that P&G adopted the moon symbol in 1850, long before there were any "Moonies." Also, it was determined that Rev. Moon owns no stock in the company.

United Way Elects Nine Directors

The United Way organization met Wednesday at City Hall to elect nine new directors to three-year terms, and to give the final campaign report for 1980.

New directors are Jo Ann Nunley, Frances Wiman, Elizabeth Potts, Joe Flack, Bob Clifton, Lewis Nance, R.C. Patton, Jean Bullard and Jill Fowler.

Two new advisors were named to serve three-year terms. New advisors are Lyle Deffebach and Rex Robinson.

Local United Way president, Brenda Hedges, announced that Snyder was one of the few towns of its size to reach its goal in 1980.

The next United Way meeting will be in March.

Thursday update

Heating Oil Supply Drops

NEW YORK (AP) — Heating oil costs for shivering Northerners are spiraling upward as foreign oil producers continue their latest round of price boosts and price controls vanish from the crude produced in the United States.

The increases have left retail heating oil prices 15 to 20 cents a gallon above their levels of last fall, resulting in sharply higher fuel bills for the average Northern homeowner, who uses 1,100 to 1,200 gallons of fuel in a typical winter.

Analysts say the increases do not seem to be resulting from shortages, although the loss of 3 million to 4 million barrels of oil exports a day from warring Iraq and Iran has cut off as much as 7 percent of Western oil needs.

The American Petrolum Institute said refiners had 199 million barrels of heating oil and diesel fuel on hand as of Jan. 9. The supply, while down 11 percent from last year's level, was within the range the government considers average for this time of year. The nation's 365-million-barrel crude oil supply, meanwhile, was 5 percent above that of last year.

Soviet Diplomats Expelled

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The Egyptian government has expelled three Soviet diplomats accused of being spies, the semi-official newspaper Al Ahram reported today. It was not immediately known whether the Soviet Embassy would be allowed to replace them.

Two of the diplomats left last week and one on Wednesday, the newspaper said.

A year ago, President Anwar Sadat ordered the Soviets to reduce their diplomatic staff from 40 to seven because of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan. Relations between the two countries, former allies, have been strained since Sadat in July 1972 expelled about 17,000 Soviet military advisers.

Koreans Nominate Chun

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chun Doo-hwan, South Korea's military strongman for the past 13 months, was nominated for president today by the Democratic Justice Party.

National elections may be held late next month, although a date has not yet been set. About a half dozen emerging political parties have indicated they will nominate candidates.

Chun, who will be 50 on Sunday, took control of the ruling military clique in a palace coup in December 1979, two months after the assassination of President Park Chung-hee. At the time he was defense security chief and a lieutenant general.

Khadafy Faces Challenge

LOME, Togo (AP) — Twelve African countries demanded that Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy withdraw his troops from Chad and call off his plans to unite Libya and the former French colony on his southern border.

Two committees of the Organization of African Unity also agreed at a two-day meeting that ended Wednesday to send a four-nation peacekeeping team to Chad. It will try to reinstate a peace plan the OAU sponsored in 1979 to end the long civil war there.

"Any resolution adopted by the Lome conference is nothing more than a piece of paper," Khadafy said in Libya. Libya's delegate at the OAU conference said his government's "technicians" would remain in Chad until France, which opposes the merger plan, pulls its troops out of neighboring Central African Republic.

Just To Be Safe...

Water District Asks Extension Of Permit

Just to play safe, directors of the Colorado City River Municipal Water District have instructed the general manager to file for a two-year extension of the district's permit to build the Stacy reservoir.

Regulations call for the beginning of construction within two years of the granting of a permit in order to keep it intact, but the April 10, 1979 permit for Stacy has been hung up in judicial appeals since that time. Presently, it is before the Court of Appeals in Austin, and there is no indication when this tribunal will rule, or if it is favorable to the district, whether the protesting Lower Colorado River Authority and others will persist in an appeal to the Supreme Court of Texas. If the extension is granted, as expected, this will give CRMWD until April 10, 1983 to begin work on the Stacy dam across the Colorado River 25 miles southeast of Ballinger.

The board also authorized notices of intent to introduce a bill in the 67th Legislature to amend the act by which the 51st Legislature created the district in 1949. Two principal changes will be sought, one to enlarge the boundaries of the district from the January 1, 1950 corporate limits of the member cities of Odessa, Big Spring and Snyder to the corporate limits as of January 1, 1981. This also would carry a proviso that the district could annex territory annexed by cities in the future.

The second change would be to enable the district to be the sponsoring agency for projects under the Clean Air Financing Act and the Regional Disposal Act. Territorial boundaries for this authority would be the counties within the Colorado River Basin above the east county line of Coleman County, and certain other contigious counties.

Sponsoring of such projects would not incur direct financial libility on the district, since these projects stand on their own merits, but it would furnish a vehicle whereby cities and other entities might undertake such projects.

A series of inter-fund transfers totalling $1,302,179 was approved by the board as a year-end bookkeeping measure. Appropriations of $122,371 were made for various special expenses and improvements. Included were $7,371 for pipeline easement payment to the University of Texas system for the next 10 years; $44,000 in water royalties to Duval Corporation for 1981; $10,000 for purchase of materials for remote controls in the McWhorter pump station near the Howard-Martin County lines; $25,000 for materials and equipment for installation of hydraulic accumulators at three pump stations; and $30,000 for operation of the 11th year of a weather modification project.

In the latter instance, O. H. Ivie, general manager, also was given authority to enter into contracts with the U.S. Water and Power Resources Service (former Bureau of Reclamation) and the Texas Department of Water Resources for continuation of the Texas HIPLEX weather modification research project based in Big Spring.

Lee, Wilson, Reynolds & Co. CPA, of Big Spring was engaged to conduct the audit of the district books for 1980-81.

The directors, in effect, took no action to change contracts with American Magnesium, which has shut down its southwest Scurry County plant and the SACROC repressuring unit in Scurry County. Resolutions were adopted memorializing Dr. John Blum, Snyder director, who died Sunday, and commending R. A. (Skeet) Schooling, administrative assistant, who is retiring Feb. 1 after nearly 30 years connection with the district.

new bail-out rules

The City of New York, twice bailed out of financial difficulties by the federal government and facing another massive deficit come 1982, is unlikely to find the Reagan administration as accommodating as its predecessors when it comes to Washington for the next handout. Not only is Reagan committed to major economies, but his advisers are already urging more realism in federal aid to cities.

New York went on the federal dole in 1975, when President Gerald Ford "reluctantly" signed legislation authorizing loans of up to $2.3 billion to keep the nation's largest city from defaulting on its debts. When the city came to the well again in 1978 for another bailout, President Carter responded with enthusiasm, signing the authorization bill on the steps of the city hall in view of 5,000 New Yorkers.

The Big Apple won't need its next federal handout for a time. The city reportedly will show a surplus of $100 million to $300 million when the fiscal books are closed next June. But the 1982 fiscal year's outlook is dismal and the city expects to be back in Washington for help — and for what may be a big test of the Reagan administration's policies on aid to cities.

There are indications the rules will be different then. Reagan's Urban Task Force has aready urged in a report to the president-elect some drastic reductions in extravagant and unproductive federal urban aid programs. One of the task force's recommendations was for a complete withholding of federal grants to cities that practice rent control. Chief among these is New York, and many observers blame rent control for a fair share of New York's urban decay as well as for the disastrous reduction in city tax revenue.

It seems unlikely some subsidy advocates suggest hopefully, that even an economy-minded Reagan administration could allow "Fun City" to default, but at least it can be expected to attach some realistic conditions to any taxpayer-funded assistance it provides.

The Lord, it is said, helps those who help themselves, and that would be a good rule for the federal government to follow also.

"Someday it will all be yours."

commentary

donald f. graff

It pays to have friends around town, as is well known by every practitioner of Washington-style politics with the possible exception of Jimmy Carter.

How well it can pay is currently being demonstrated by Alexander Haig, who is drawing the most critical attention of the incoming administration's first-echelon appointees. His longtime relationship with Joseph A. Califano Jr., an establishment insider in and out of recent Democratic administrations, has been almost as much in the news as the secreatary-designate of state himself.

Califano's assistance during Haig's Senate confirmation hearing is not going to block partisan sniping entirely. But is likely to discourage Democratic sharpshooters from taking quite as deadly aim as might otherwise be their politically natural inclination.

The cross-party friendship of Haig and Califano, both of whom go back some time in the Washington scene, is notable but not at all unusual. Another insider — at least for a brief remaining moment — has, however, turned out to be a surprise pal for Haig.

Zbigniew Brzezinski.

The outgoing national security adviser's deft fielding of the initial request from the Senate Democratic camp for executive documents dealing with Haig's Nixon administration activities may in the long run prove almost as useful as the Califano connection. Some documentation will be forthcoming, as Brzezinski's boss now guarantees. But the rush toward a Watergate witch hunt appears to have been detoured.

Brzezinski, who during the Carter years acquired a reputation for combativeness, might have been expected to perform otherwise toward a figure of Haig's political coloration and importance in Haig's delicate position. That he has not may be in some part because he has been there himself.

Still is, as a matter of fact. Brzezinski has been a focus and not infrequently instigator of controversy throughout his tenure. In the final days of that tenure, he has become the target of surprisingly outspoken attacks by former colleagues.

U.N. ambassador Donald McHenry, going undiplomatically public, has fingered Brzezinski as a disruptive influence who would have been much better advised to have kept his foreign policy views to himself and the president.

By far the sharpest digs, however, have come from Hodding Carter, former State Department press secretary. He has plenty to say about is subject personally in a current magazine article, including a putdown of Brzezinski as a "second-rate thinker." But what is most notable about Hodding's remarks is that responsibility for the confusion in foreign policy making and implementing is placed not on Brzezinski himself but upon Brzezinski's boss.

It was Jimmy Carter's error that two foreign policy centers — the State Department and Brzezinski's White House operation — were allowed to function simultaneously and contradictorily. It was the president's fault that one voice — the State Department's — was not designated to enunciate American policy to the world, consistently and publicly endorsed by the White House.

It is not, of course, the first time this arugment has been heard and this situation existed. Familiarity does not, however, mean inevitability.

Actually, the only comparable situation of separate and equally activist foreign policy establishments occurred during the early Nixon administration with William P. Rogers at State and Henry Kissinger in the White House. That ended when Kissinger took over as secretary. No one was about to upstage him.

Unfortunately for the participants and the country, it never ended in the Carter administration.

There is a reason to hope it will not begin in the Reagan administration. Haig, as a onetime protege of Kissinger (another Washington friendship), has some personal experience in the area. More, he has both the self-confidence and the confidence of the new president that make it unlikely he will be upstaged.

Who knows? If the advent of Haig means the end of confusingly multiple American foreign policies, it could even mean new friends for the United States.

A story recently run by The Associated Press noted the assorted walks of life down which some of the state legislators currently meeting in Austin have trod.

The AP noted, for example, there were a Lufkin grocer, a Wallis exterminator, a retired FBI man from San Angelo, a San Antonio bandleader, four housewives, and a gaggle of lawyers and part time ranchers among the current legislators. It neglected to mention Larry Shaw of Big Spring, the representative of the 63rd District that includes Snyder, who is a former car salesman.

A car salesman? Well, what of it, I say. I think I'd rather buy a used car from Shaw than from a professional politician.

I find it refreshing that many of our legislators come from the grass roots level. It means they have had to work for a living and should know something about such mundane things as balancing the checkbook, buying groceries, and maybe even changing a flat tire.

Professional politicians — men who make a living out of pursuing public office — are masters of making flowery speeches. All politicians learn it, but some make a living out of doing it.

Please, give me a man who is a little tongue-tied than one who can make butter and honey melt in my mouth. I can trust one man because of his human frailty, but I will distrust the other because of his polish and smooth, professional manners.

Even George Washington had to be almost dragged from his Mount Vernon estate to assume the presidency. He would have preferred the life of a gentleman farmer, yet he made a better than middling president.

When government ignores the thoughts of the small, average man, it deprives itself of a certain sanity and stability rarely found in higher quarters.

Hay Stockpile At Low Level

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stockpiles of hay this winter are at their lowest level in four years, the Agriculture Department says.

As of Jan. 1, according to the Crop Reporting Board, hay stocks on farms were estimated at 92 million tons, down 15 percent from the record high of 108.2 million tons a year earlier.

Officials said that was the lowest Jan. 1 inventory of hay stocks since 1977.

NEW YORK (AP) — Hundreds of gurus want to tell you about the stock market's future, but a big problem from your point of view is that they see hundreds of different futures.

That's the main problem, and a big one it is, but it isn't the only one. Gurus also change their mind. They don't give money-back guarantees. They don't accept responsibility for their visions. They often decline to buy the stocks they recommend. Why take the risk?

Ultimately, these seers speak their truest words when confronted with their often poor record: "After all," they are inclined to say, "Nobody's perfect. I'm only human."

Says Mark Tavel, director of research at Value Line: "If someone knew what the market was going to do he wouldn't be in the advisory business. Instead, he'd get a loan and invest and soon be very rich."

Joseph Granville is rich, but he hasn't always been right. Still, he is considered something of a savant by at least 3,000 subscribers after correctly calling a sharp reversal in the Dow Jones average last week.

Others say Granville was lucky, or at best so influential his forecast had a self-fulfilling element. Tavel claims it just isn't possible to consistently call turns in the market or predict future stock prices.

The belief hasn't prevented Value Line from becoming the biggest of all advisory services, even while limiting itself to researching the future possibilities (emphasis) for the market and specific stocks.

Having investigated most of the techniques advertised by the gurus, Tavel has found them wanting in one or another respect — the technical analysts, contrarians, indexers, fundamentalists, modern portfolio theorists, the top-downers, bottom-uppers and dozens more.

No matter. Gurus believe in themselves and others believe in them.

An ad for The Zweig Forecast recently carried the headline, "They used to call me 'smokey' because I was a bear." It described how Martin Zweig had metamorphosed from bear to bull to "lukewarm" bull.

Zweig extoled the virtues of a flexible view of the future. "I might even switch my longer-run outlook to bearish Zweig wrote. Who knows what I'll think a few weeks or months from now?"

Undoubtedly, the ad brought in business. Zweig is successful, or at least popular.

Eliot Janeway believes politics leads economics and Washington leads the stock market. "Eliot Janeway makes sense with savvy," he proclaimed in a recent ad. "Be a gains go-getter," he said, without explaining clearly what he meant. More provocative if not clearer was his question: "What good are stock tips without thinking?"

That isn't the only thing inexplicable about the gurus. why, their subscribers—even at fees of more than a hundred dollars a year—so wlling to forgive the misses and praise the hits.

It's a great business, human nature, and the future being what they are.

rescue contemplated

A new plan to rescue the hostages is presently in the staging process.

At 5 p.m. on February 21, assuming the situation has not been resolved, 52 Americans will take off from Miami, Fla., and will fly via Pan American to Zurich, Switzerland. There application will be made to the officials of Iran to proceed to Tehran.

In Tehran, these 52 Americans propose to surrender themselves in exchange for the interned hostages – allowing those hostages to return to their homes and families.

This rescue mission's organizer and its first volunteer is the respected Dr. Kenneth Wells, co-founder of Freedoms Foundation, a scholar and patriot of incontrovertible credentials.

Dr. Kenneth Wells, with neither authority nor financing from our government, will lead 51 other volunteers in this effort to effect a one-on-one trade for the release of the presently imprisoned Americans.

Wells says he recognizes the percentages and wants other volunteers to recognize them. Possibilities include protracted confinement, torture, death. But this, says Wells, is no more than America has asked of generations of young soldiers.

This, he says, is an opportunity for "us old guys to recover our own fumble."

His expedition will include nobody of military age; all must be older than 50 and younger than 70. And men only.

He seeks volunteers who have no dependents, no military affiliation, no CIA and no FBI affiliation.

Each must be in good health and pay his own way.

Volunteers must agree to remain in Zurich for at least 21 consecutive days ready on a moment's notice to proceed to Tehran.

Dr. Wells, as I say, has no official sanction from our government. He did brief the Carter and Reagan administrations of his intentions. So far, neither has lodged any objection.

If our government should ask that "one-on-one" be scrapped or substantially revised – such instructions will be followed completely and promptly. Ken Wells is that kind of citizen.

Wells says, "The poor, bedeviled hostages deserve our sacrifice and the world needs our example. Maybe in the process we can awaken the conscience of others; even perhaps of the Iranians."

But Ken Wells makes it clear he wants only those volunteers who are willing, if necessary, to pay with their lives.

At this moment 190 letters over his signature are on their way to or have been received by potential volunteers.

I have already recieved mine.

Wrong reason to reconcile

By Karen Blaker, Ph.D.

DEAR DR. BLAKER — I am 27 years old and have been separated from my husband for a year. We have no children.

Last month I went on a trip to Africa with my boyfriend, who is divorced and has a 10-year-old daughter. We had a wonderful time and felt very close.

But after we got home, I suddenly wanted to reconcile with my husband even though my opinion of him has not changed since we separated. I just do not respect him.

The problem is that everyone — especially my parents — thinks I should go back with him.

Even our old friends think I was wrong for breaking up the marriage. They stay in touch with him. I guess I feel very lonely.

DEAR READER — Right now the best course of action is to decide not to decide anything.

True, it has been a year since you separated. But you are still ambivalent.

Take three or four months to explore systematically the pressures that are influencing your decision. A counselor could probably help you do this most effectively in the shortest period of time.

One issue that you will have to face is whether your need to be a "good daughter" is getting in the way of choosing what is best for you.

Imagine your life without your parents' visits and phone calls. How would you feel about the reconciliation under these circumstances?

My hunch is that the closeness you felt with your boyfriend on your vacation frightened you because marrying him would mean exposing yourself even more to the loneliness and stigma of being a "formerly married."

DEAR DR. BLAKER — I want to warn my 11-year-old daughter about child molesters without causing undue alarm.

I need some advice about what to say. My husband doesn't think this is necessary.

DEAR READER — It is necessary!

According to reported cases alone, one girl in four will be a victim of sexual abuse by the time she is 18. Boys face similar risks.

In her new "Silent Children: A Book for Parents About the Prevention of Child Sexual Abuse" (Doubleday, $12.95), Linda Sanford says these statistics are too low. She believes that about two-thirds of all women have experienced some form of sexual abuse by age 18.

Sexual molestation should be discussed by the time a child is 4 or 5 years old and goes outside unsupervised. Ms. Sanford suggests the following approach:

"Tell young children that there are adults, people older than they, who have a hard time making friends. These adults may ask them to do things that aren't right, such as asking them to undress or putting their hands down their pants or blouse.

"Then explain, 'We love you very much and want you to say no and come and tell us if anything like this happens.' It will not help to tell children only that these people are sick in the head."

Write to Dr. Blaker at the above address. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but questions of general interest will be discussed in future columns.

CREATE a mini-study with a space-stretching color scheme, a streamlined curtain treatment and clutter-cutting tricks.

Stitchin' Time

Need a mini-study?

By Joanne Schreiber

Do you have a tiny student room with no space for study?

You can create a mini-study area from practically no space at all using clutter-cutting tricks, a space-stretching color scheme and a streamlined curtain treatment.

Begin with a color scheme of creamy white, pale yellow and bright navy. A white carpet is practical, even for a student, for example, you might select a carpet of Anso IV nylon by Bigelow because it has soil and stain repellent features built right into the fiber.

Select a tailored, quilted bedcover in white; a lightly checked wallcovering in a blueprint blue-on-white. Build in a 24-inch desk, secured to the window sill.

Pinback curtains are a new technique and create a superbly simple window treatment. Since they are not adjustable, they are usually done with an adjustable blind or shade.

To make the curtains, measure from the top of the rod to the sill. Add two inches for hems. Since the material is not gathered or pleated, a single 45-inch strip of fabric will be plenty. You will need two yards of polka-dot fabric and two yards of the solid yellow.

Cut the fabric in half lengthwise. With right sides together, sew around the sides and bottom of the curtain sections. Leave the top open and stop stitching one inch from the top, if you are using a small, flat rod. Leave a longer space from the top for a larger rod.

Turn sections right side out. Press in the top hem and press all seams. Topstitch top hem close to fold. Run a second line of stitching to form a casing. Slip rod through casing. Secure curtain with three pushpins: One at the outer corner of the lower hem, one at the folded-out corner, and the third where the fabrics cross. This is probably the easiest of all curtain treatments.

To complete your mini-study, cover a fabric screen with the same polka-dotted material. Then raid the dime store for inexpensive plastic boxes to mount on the screen. Use these as storage units for pencils, letters and notes; use the rest of the screen as a bulletin board.

The secret of handling a small space is to eliminate clutter. Do it with style and imagination — and your student will have a snug haven for sleep and study.

The student ruffed the heart lead, thought for a longer period than usual and led a low trump. East won, cashed two diamonds and led a second trump whereupon the student drew trumps and claimed the rest of the tricks since dummy's long clubs would take care of his last diamond.

"A tough hand wasn't it?" asked the student. "I wasn't sure how to bid or play it."

"Your play was perfect," replied the Professor. "Your bidding was not. A club lead or diamond lead and a club return would have beaten four spades. Nothing could beat five clubs."

"Should I have doubled one diamond or bid four clubs over three hearts?" asked the student.

"No," was the reply. "But you should have doubled three hearts. This double is for takeout in modern expert practise and shows a strong hand with probably four cards in the unbid suit. One with which you could not double at your first turn because you couldn't stand for a heart bid by your partner. I would have bid four clubs in response to your double, you would raise me to five and against a heart lead I would have made all the tricks. A diamond lead would hold me to my contract, but no defense could defeat me."

Picture perfect

Constance Towers gave Beauty Digest magazine this clothes shopping tip: "Wouldn't it be wonderful if a woman could take a Polaroid picture of herself in an outfit before making her final decision to buy? At least she should inspect herself in a full-length mirror. That's what I do. If what I have on raises the slightest doubt in my mind, I won't take it — even if it's the rage of London and New York."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I think I'm going crazy. I'm 33, married 12 years, have two fine children (6 and 9), a lovely home and financial security, but I'm miserable. My husband (38) gives me everything I want except an honest relationship. He lies constantly. I've caught him in so many lies, I've lost all respect for him. He's a wonderful father and provider, but he has shut me out completely. I've begged him to share his feelings with me but he says his feelings are his business — not mine.

I had an accidental pregnancy 14 months ago. He persuaded me to have an abortion, saying two children were enough. Afterward he told me that he insisted on the abortion because he "knew" the baby wasn't his! I was crushed. I have never been unfaithful nor have I given him any reason to doubt me. That accusation turned me off completely and we haven't slept together since. (He accepts this, saying it's only natural after 12 years.)

Abby, is there any hope for a marriage in which there is no trust, respect or physical intimacy? We are considering divorce, but living in the same house for the sake of the children as well as for economic reasons. Is this a feasible alternative, or are we crazy?

NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: You are not crazy. ("Crazy" people rarely question the feasibility of their alternatives.) Your husband's habitual lying, his unfounded accusations and his refusal to share his feelings with you are all symptoms of some deep emotional problems. He desperately needs professional help, and so do you.

If your husband refuses to get help, get into treatment without him. You need to get your head together to learn how to live with him or without him.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend is very nice to me as a rule, but when he's drinking he gets very mean and abusive and picks a fight with me over some little thing. He's even gotten violent to the point of slapping me around.

When he's sober he is gentle and sweet. Don't get me wrong, Abby. He's not an alcoholic. He sometimes goes for weeks without having anything to drink, but when he's had one too many he is like a different person. Sometimes I wonder which side of him is real.

What do your experts say about a person like him?

LITTLE ROCK

DEAR LITTLE ROCK: Alcohol doesn't change a person's personality, it merely amplifies it. (A mean person gets meaner, and a sweet person gets sweeter.) Drinkers who become violent shouldn't drink at all. And their physically abused victims are unconsciously "asking for it" if they hang around after the first slapping around.

DEAR ABBY: We are retired and living in a nice mobile home in Florida. We have lovely neighbors who present a problem we are reluctant to bring up.

Several in the park have hung those long steel wind chimes on their carports. There are some hanging right outside our bedroom windows. The high-pitched sound is especially annoying at night when the breeze is blowing. The constant clang, clang, clang is driving us up a wall!

Please put a few lines in your column to remind these people to be a little more considerate of their neighbors, Abby. They may see it and take the hint. Sign me . . .

DISENCHANTED WITH CHIMES

DEAR DISENCHANTED: And what if they don't see it? Simply advise your lovely neighbors in a friendly but emphatic way that their wind chimes are annoying you.

Brother No Hero...

Woman Says TV Movie Inaccurate

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A woman portrayed in the television movie "300 Miles for Stephanie" says she disagrees with the way her brother and his mentally retarded child were presented.

"My brother is hardly the hero the movie made him out to be," Lydia Rodriguez said after viewing the film.

The movie NBC aired Monday night was based on a trek former San Antonian Alberto Rodriguez made in 1977 to the Rio Grande Valley to pay a "promesa" at the Shrine of San Juan.

Rodriguez said he promised the Virgin of San Juan he would make the run if his daughter, Stephanie, were allowed to live until her fifth birthday. Doctors had given the child, suffering from birth defects, little hope of living to maturity, according to the movie.

A postscript of the film said Rodriguez would make another run on Stephanie's 10th birthday, March 20, 1982, if she lives until then.

"In October 1977, the same year he completed that run, he left Stephanie in my care. He seldom came to see her, didn't contribute any money for her treatments, and now he is in California and could care less about what she is doing," said his sister, who now is Stephanie's legal guardian.

Ms. Rodriguez said although many viewers were moved to tears by the dramatization, she was not affected in that way. She said she hoped the movie was inspiring to parents of mentally retarded children.

"It's a good movie, and I guess I would have been touched by it if I didn't know the true story behind it," she said.

Ms. Rodriguez said she has cared for Stephanie, played by San Antonian T.J. Olivares in the movie, since soon after her brother was divorced. The aunt said that both of the child's parents signed the release papers.

"It was easier to get Stephanie than I thought it would be. Neither of them wanted to take responsibility for the child," she said.

Alberto Rodriguez married another woman last year and moved to California, she said.

Rodriguez was a campus policeman at the University of Texas at San Antonio, instead of with the city police as portrayed in the movie, and finished the last 25 miles of the trek to San Juan on a bicycle which was not depicted.

Ms. Rodriguez, an office manager at a credit association, said she makes barely enough money to pay for Stephanie's treatments and day care services.

After her interview was printed Tuesday in the San Antonio News, Ms. Rodriguez said she received a telephone call from Tony Orlando, who played her brother in the movie, and his agent. She said they assured her details were being worked out with her attorney, R.A. Swenson, for a $100,000 donation Orlando is making to the child's care.

Orlando told The Associated Press he worked from a script and was not aware that Rodriguez completed the trek on a bicycle.

Orlando he was sticking by his commitment to donate his salary for the movie to Stephanie and hoped nothing that happened subsequent to the 300-mile trek would discourage up to 26 million people who viewed the film from believing in miracles.

In a telephone conversation Tuesday, Orlando said he talked to Ms. Rodriguez and quoted her as saying her remarks were "twisted out of context."

Later, Ms. Rodriguez said she talked to Orlando, but refused to discuss the remarks she made in the newspaper interview about her brother.

Orlando said he did not receive final payment from NBC until Friday and assured that $100,000 would be given for Stephanie's care when details were worked out with Ms. Rodriguez' attorney.

"It's very unfortunate if something so wonderful and beautiful turned out like that," Orlando said of Ms. Rodriguez's remarks. "We potrayed a segment of their lives three years ago. How it is now, I don't know."

Long-Staple Quotas Okayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Growers of extra long-staple cotton have approved for the 28th consecutive year federal marketing quotas for their 1981 crop.

Of 854 ballots cast in a mail referendum last month, 733 were for quotas and 121 against, an approval of 85.8 percent for continuing quotas on ELS cotton, as the department calls it.

Thermostat Rule Given Extension

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans shivering through their second winter with mandatory temperature controls where they work and shop will have to shiver at least a little longer.

President Carter extended the controls, which were scheduled to expire Friday, for another nine months Tuesday.

Whether the controls stay in effect anywhere near that long is far from certain, however. Ronald Reagan can undo Carter's action as soon as he takes office.

Reagan aides refused Tuesday to say what the president-elect will do.

Advanced Photography Course Set At WTC

A new course and classes on an individualized study basis are among the offerings available through the journalism department at Western Texas College during the spring semester.

Advanced photography, listed as JOU 234, is scheduled Tuesday evenings for 6:30 p. m. to 9:20 p. m. Recently approved by the state coordinating board, the course is designed for students who have completed JOU 130, introductory photography, or who have experience in or a working knowledge of photography.

The class will stress the finer points of film processing and printmaking, plus advanced composition, technical data, creative display and special effects picture taking. Creativity in theory and design will be important concepts, as well as the individual interests of class members.

This is the third course in photography available at WTC. Introductory and color photography have been offered for several years.

Two journalism courses available either at a specified class time or on an instructor-approved individual study basis are JOU 132, introduction to mass communication, and JOUR 233, principles of advertising.

JOU 132, also offered from 11:15 a. m. to 12:05 p. m., Monday, Wednesday and Friday, is a survey course of the mass media in America, which includes the study of basic factors affecting human interaction through mass communication.

This is the core course for all communications majors and minors in most colleges and universities, and is highly recommended as an important elective for non-communications majors.

JOU 233, also offered from 10:20 a. m. to 11:10 a. m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, involves study in the fundamentals of advertising in the mass media, as well as advertising appeals, copy writing, layout and media selection. The role of advertising in America is emphasized.

This class is offered in many four-year schools at the freshman-sophomore level and is fully acceptable for transfer. It is a recommended elective, especially for business, marketing-management, economics and psychology majors.

Other classes offered are JOU 231, news editing and copy reading, from 9:55 a. m. to 11:10 a. m. on Tuesday and Thursday; JOU 112, publications (newspaper staff lab credit), from 11:15 a. m. to 11:55 a. m. Tuesday, and JOU 113, publications (yearbook staff lab credit) from 11:15 a. m. to 11:55 a. m. Thursday.

For more information on journalism courses, contact Dr. Michael McBride, associate professor of journalism, in the WTC student center, or call 573-8511, extension 273.

Your Birthday

January 16, 1981

You have always been basically ambitious, yet you are likely to set even larger goals for yourself this coming year. One reason your chances will be enhanced: Good relationships with persons in key postions who can help you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's possible you've been toying with the idea lately to ask the boss for a raise or promotion, but felt it wasn't the right time. Today looks good. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Where others may only have watered-down suggestions, you're likely to have a raft of bright ideas today about how to handle something from which all could benefit.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The tide of events is taking a major turn in your favor today, yet you still may not be able to see or recognize the good of what's occurring.

ARIES (March 21-Apri 19) Circumstances today may place you in the right spot at just the right time where you could serve as a middleperson in putting a profitable arrangement together.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In matters which could contribute to your finances or prestige you are apt to be a bit luckier than usual today. Listen for opportunity's welcome knock.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You have good leadership qualities today and once more you should be very lucky regarding things you personally manage. Be a take-charge person.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Hunches you get today pertaining to the outcome of events could be quite accurate, especially if they are of a positive nature.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 21) Your optimism and enthusiasm can be easily kindled today, but what's more important is that you have the ability to lift the spirits of others in the process.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Priorities should be given today to matters which you feel can add to your resources or enhance your influence. Big things could happen to you in either area.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You can get along well today with just about anybody, but persons born under the signs of Gemini, Libra and Aquarius are especially fortunate for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Something you've been unable to change on your own may be brought about today in a way which might completely surprise you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Sometimes you have a tendency to have too many irons in the fire. Today, the more you have to do the better you perform. Maintain a busy schedule.

73-Year-Old Man Charged In Stabbing

BROWNSBORO, Texas (AP) — A 73-year-old man was in Henderson County jail Tuesday after being charged with the murder of a woman who bled to death after she was stabbed in the chest and her throat was cut.

George Everett Day 73, was arraigned Tuesday by Peace Justice W.C. Richards after being charged with the stabbing death of Maybell Riley, 70. Bond was set at $25,000.

Henderson County investigator Marion Marshall said the suspect was found lying next to the body of the victim Monday in the woman's home after neighbors who heard a quarrel called police.

Marshall said a blood-stained pocketknife was found at the scene of the slaying. He said an autpsy has been ordered and that no motive has been established for the killing.

No Charges In Shooting

HENDERSON, Texas (AP) — A Rusk County District Attorney's investigator said Tuesday no charges would be filed against a deputy who sho. and wounded a man who had barricaded himself in his home as officers were trying to serve commitment papers.

James Burford Douglas, 65, was in good condition Tuesday in Henderson County hospital after being shot once in the leg by Investigator Dennis Webb, said district attorney's investigator William Brown.

The shooting occurred Sunday when Webb, Sheriff Mike Strong and a third deputy went to Douglas' home to serve commitment papers. Brown said the man barricaded himself in his home and fired at Webb after the deputy broke down the door.

Webb returned the fire and shot the man in the leg. A .22-caliber pistol was found at the scene, Brown said. The investigator said the case would not be referred to a grand jury.

Ferdinand Maximilian, emperor of Mexico, was shot by Republican troops in 1867. He was named emperor in 1864 after French intervention in the country. When the French troops that kept him in power were withdrawn in 1866, he was overthrown by Republican forces.

Texas Democrats Agree To Work, Spend More

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Leaders of the Texas Democratic Party, stung by criticism from several top elected officials, agreed Wednesday to work harder and spend more money in 1982.

Plans for a $1 million trust fund to help Democratic candidates in future elections were quickly approved.

Members of the State Democratic Executive Party also approved Wednesday a watchdog committee to monitor and publicize any missteps by Republican Gov. Bill Clements and the Ronald Reagan administration that hurt Texas before the crucial balloting two years from now — when Clements is expected to seek re-election.

"Politics is not a spectator sport," U.S. Majority Leader Jim Wright said. "This is not a thing where you can cheer from the gallery. You have to take part."

Wright, who won a close race for re-election, urged the governing body of the state party to adopt the sophisticated campaign methods used by Republicans, particularly the telephone banks and direct mailings tactics used by Clements in 1978.

"Our state government has lost its sense of balance (with Clements)," said Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, who said he will be seeking some other elective office in 1982. "and it will not be returned until we re-elect a Democratic governor."

Armstrong was a campaign director for the unsuccessful John Hill campaign for governor in 1978 and the President Jimmy Carter campaign in Texas last year.

"No longer should the party depend on candidates to raise money to finance a major portion of the party machinery," said Railroad Commissioner Chairman Jim Nugent. He said in the 1980 campaign that many county and local party officials expected candidates to support their organizations, rather than helping the candidate.

U.S. Congressman Mickey Leland of Houston, a Democratic national committeeman from Texas, said party officials in recent years wanted to know if he would get out the black and Mexican-American vote.

"I think our big question now is to find out what happened to the white folks in the 1980 elections and find out what the trouble is," he said.

The 62-member executive committee also voted for a budget that calls for $9,000 monthly expenditures by the state party, although present income is only $3,000.

Charles Scarbrough, Abilene, chairman of the party finance committee, said the party could become solvent and operational if each of the executive committee members recruited seven contributing members of the party by next June.

Scarbrough's committee reported a Tuesday night $25-a-person fund raiser netted $40,000 to $50,000 for the party.

In other action, the committee approved a resolution asking the Legislature to "deregulate" primary elections by reducing "unwarranted governmental interference in the internal affairs" of political parties. The resolution specific cited the presidential nominating and delegate selection process.

In 1980, Texas Republicans expressed their views on presidential nominees in a presidential primary while Democrats selected their nominating delegates at a state convention.

Infant Body Found At Dump Ground

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — An unidentified baby girl sustained a blow to the head before she was soaked in formaldehyde and placed in a makeshift coffin, according to the Tarrant County Medical Examiner.

Nizan Peerwani said Tuesday that an autopsy showed the one- to three-day-old baby had either been struck or dropped on her head before she was drenched in embalming-fluid, placed in a plastic container and then put in a trash dumpster.

Peerwani he could not say when the infant died because the body had been preserved by the embalming fluid.

The infant's body was found Monday by a private disposal company employee as he began unloading a garbage truck at a landfill. Authorities said the garbage apparently came from a dumpster in Richland Hills, a Fort Worth suburb.

Richland Hills police are refusing to comment on the incident.

Authorities said the baby was wrapped in a shawl before it was placed in the coffin-like container.

Luther Burbank was not trained as a botanist, but he spent his life searching for oddities in his gardens and succeeded in creating better plants and many new varieties. He discovered freaks among Easter lilies that had a perfume and from them developed sweet-scented lilies. He is responsible for better potatoes, shasta daisies and stoneless plums, among other things.

Proposition 13 No Miracle; Pinch Just Beginning

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Almost three years after Californians cut their property taxes in half with Proposition 13, neither the promise of a taxpayers' heaven nor the predictions of shuttered schools and bankrupt city halls has come true.

Californians have indeed saved on taxes — $20 billion since 1978 — but government spending is still growing, the annual $5 billion budget surplus has vanished and the pinch on local agencies is just beginning to be felt.

Proposition 13, a June 1978 ballot initiative which sparked similar measures across the nation, slashed property taxes for California homeowners and businesses an average 57 percent.

A typical homeowner's annual property taxes dropped from $900 to about $400, but the measure's property tax ceiling of 1 percent of market value cut local revenues for cities, counties and schools by $7 billion annually.

The state has eased the immediate impact with $5 billion a year from a treasury swollen with inflation-fed income and sales tax revenues. Skyrocketing property values, prompting greater than anticipated revenue increases under the new limits, have softened the long-term impact of the tax ceiling.

Howard Jarvis, the crusty 77-year-old tax critic who co-authored Proposition 13, says he is disgusted with the way the state has eased the pinch on local governments.

Complaining that Proposition 13 "hasn't done a damn thing" to cut spending because of the surplus, he spearheaded another voter initiative last year to cut the state income tax in half.

Voters rejected the measure as too drastic, but Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. seized on the tax revolt and backed a series of cuts in the state income and business inventory taxes. He also supported new or bigger tax credits for the elderly and for energy conservation and solar energy conversion projects.

Brown claims those additional tax cuts have pared the total tax bill of Californians another $20 billion beyond that saved since 1978. Independent analysts dispute that figure, but it is clearly in excess of $10 billion.

A few cuts in services — shorter library hours, curtailed summer school programs, reduced bus schedules and the like — have been imposed because of Proposition 13 and the other tax cuts.

But instead of forcing cuts in state or local government spending, Proposition 13 has only slowed the rate of increase.

During the 1970s, local government spending increased an average of 10.5 percent a year. In the first year under Proposition 13, local budgets went up an average of just 1.1 percent, but annual increases since have been 13.3 percent, 11.7 percent and, in the coming year, a projected 5.6 percent.

Most government economists say the full impact of Proposition 13 hasn't been felt yet because of the state's budget surplus, which runs out in June, and because of the rapid turnover of real estate in California's mobile society.

To guarantee property taxes stay low, Proposition 13 cut taxes in half then limited increases in assessed valuation to 2 percent annually, so long as the property is not sold.

But upon sale, a new tax rate is set based on the sale price. Since the average California home is re-sold every 5 to 5½ years, property tax revenues have been increasing by nearly 13 percent annually.

But the state surplus is now exhausted. It had ballooned to more than $5 billion three years ago as California's computer, aerospace and agricultural industries enjoyed boom times.

In the three fiscal years since enactment of Proposition 13, the state has been spending $1.5 billion to $2 billion a year more than it has been taking in, to help bail out local governments.

Local schools, for example, got 50 percent of their funds from the state before Proposition 13. This school year, almost 80 percent of the $11.2 billion spent by California's 1,040 local school districts came from the state.

Now, even with state revenues still growing at a 10 to 12 percent annual rate, the end of the surplus has forced at least a one-time cut in the annual growth rate. State expenditures in the coming year are limited to an increase of an estimated 1.7 percent, rising from this fiscal year's $24.3 billion to Brown's proposed spending level of $24.6 billion for the year beginning July 1.

To do this, Brown has proposed that state aid to local governments — which accounts for 75 percent of all state spending — be cut by $258 million, about 1.4 percent of the $17.9 billion the state gave local governments this year.

At both the state and local levels, that pinch is being met by trying to trim program budgets, rather than laying off more workers or cutting programs back any further.

Facing an expected 11 percent inflation rate, Brown has proposed 4.75 percent increases in welfare grants and 5 percent increases in per-pupil state school aid. State employee salaries are yet to be negotiated in collective bargaining, but Brown has set aside enough funds for raises around 5 percent. And state employees appear ready to accept that.

"For the first time, the state isn't really crying wolf when it says there is a shortage of money," Chuck Valdes, president of the 100,000-member California State Employees Association said this week. "The money just isn't there. State workers will be hurt."

Police Seek Pay Increase

BROWNWOOD, Texas (AP) — City police, claiming their pay has not kept up with the cost of living, are asking voters to approve a pay raise that could result in a 16.3-percent tax increase in October, city officials said.

Rules Preserve Clayton Control

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It took a full day of debate and repeated trouncing of a tenacious minority to do it, but Speaker Bill Clayton has won a set of rules preserving his control over the House.

Representatives spent all day fighting over rules Wednesday, finally approving Clayton's version at 5 p.m. by a 113-27 vote.

The lawmakers planned to act today on the election contest filed by former Rep. Al Brown, D-San Antonio, against Alan Schoolcraft, a Republican who defeated him for re-election Nov. 4. A special committee appointed by Clayton worked on its recommendation late Wednesday, after State District Judge Hume Cofer permitted it to conduct closed-door deliberations. Cofer said that despite the Texas Open Meetings Act, a judge can't tell the Legislature what to do.

Rep. Frank Gaston, R-Dallas, with about 40 to 45 votes each time, led unsuccessful efforts to change the rules that enable Clayton and his "team" of lieutenants to maintain control of legislation.

Gaston's efforts were rejected by a solid block of 80 to about 100 representatives who voted with Clayton.

Gaston said his more than 30 amendments were not an attack on Clayton, "even though his stewardship as speaker provides one of the best arguments for the changes" he was offering.

1980 A Bad Bird Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — In terms of the government's animal health activities, 1980 was a bad year for birds. A disease caused thousands of them to be killed and threatened millions more, including the nation's poultry flock.

The Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, a regulatory agency in the Agriculture Department, said an outbreak of exotic Newcastle disease last April eventually led to the destruction of more than 30,000 birds at 550 locations in 45 states before it was curbed.

In all, it cost about $2.8 million to stamp out the the disease, said Pierre A. Chaloux, deputy administrator of the service, as the agency calls itself.

"But it was worth it," he said. "If this foreign disease became established in this country it would cost the poultry industry — and, ultimately, consumers — an estimated $400 million a year."

He concentrated his attack on Clayton's power over committee assignments, even those based on seniority, and on the Calendars Committee, which schedules bills for floor debate.

The Calendars Committee, stacked with chairmen of other committees, killed 200 bills last session by never scheduling them for consideration, Gaston said.

He said 409 of 612 House bills that passed were sponsored by chairmen or vice chairmen of various committees.

"What would that tell you about the team system?" he asked.

"It works!" shouted several representatives.

Gaston's amendment to prohibit chairmen of committees from serving on so-called procedural committees such as Calendars was tabled, 90-47.

Also tabled, 98-42, was his amendment enabling the House to force the Calendars committee to put a bill on a debate calendar.

"The rules of the House are fair. They do give the members an opportunity to present their bills," replied Rep. Bob Davis, R-Irving, who sponsored the speaker's rules package.

An amendment by Gaston and Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, to let members line up by seniority in public session for committee assignments was tabled, 93-41.

"We haven't had problems with the seniority system since it was adopted in 1973," Davis said.

Haig Awaits Formalities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alexander M. Haig, survivor of five days of grilling during which he promised "steely eyed" toughness with the Soviets and no vestige of Watergate abuses, now awaits only the formalities of Senate confirmation as secretary of state.

The first was due today, with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's vote.

After the longest confirmation hearings for a secretary of state-designate in modern times, Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston predicted no filibuster or other delay to prevent full Senate confirmation next Wednesday or Thursday of Haig's nomination by President-elect Ronald Reagan.

Cranston announced Wednesday he was inclined to vote against Haig when the hearings started last Friday but "I am now leaning toward a 'yes' vote."

On the final day of hearings, Cranston told Haig he still had only two concerns: Haig's refusal to denounce Watergate as immoral until committee Democrats pressed him to do so, and whether Haig will respect Congress' constitutional right to help formulate foreign policy. Several other Democrats joined Cranston in the latter concern.

Two Reagan Cabinet nominees already have cleared the first step to confirmation. The Senate Energy Committee on Wednesday recommended approval of Denver lawyer James G. Watt as interior secretary and former South Carolina Gov. James B. Edwards as energy secretary.

The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee had planned to vote today on Reagan's nomination of Raymond L. Donovan as labor secretary, but the vote was postponed, apparently so investigators could look further into dealings of Donovan's New Jersey construction company. No new date for the vote was scheduled.

Hearings were scheduled today on the appointments of Attorney General-designate William French Smith, a lawyer who was expected to face questions about his membership in two all-male private clubs, and Education Secretary-designate Terrel Bell, who is currently Utah education commissioner.

Haig's stand on Watergate produced the only angry confrontation of the hearings on his nomination.

Sen. Paul S. Sarbanes, D-Md., pressed Haig again and again on whether he thought Watergate abuses were wrong and each time Haig replied — in the end angrily — that he had done nothing wrong himself.

Other senators began taking up the question of whether he considered Watergate immoral and finally Haig declared: "I believe it was both illegal and stupid."

Later, he read the committee a prepared statement saying: "Were there abuses of power during Watergate? Of course there were. They were an affront to the fundamental values I cherish and we all share."

On cooperation in foreign policy, Haig promised repeatedly to consult Congress to obtain united support for U.S. foreign policy.

He said Congress must share the responsibility, particularly if the United States must again decide whether to go to war.

"We cannot again expend American blood without a measure of popular support, and the legislative branch provides the best measure," Haig said.

Throughout the hearings, Haig promised tougher dealings with the Soviets.

Preventing varicose veins

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Could you please tell me what causes varicose veins and if one can do anything to prevent them? Most of the doctors I've spoken to say varicose veins are hereditary and that I should sit down and relax off and on during the day with my legs propped up. Incidentally, my mother does have them, and bad. I don't want my legs to look as bad as hers.

I first started to notice them when I was 17. When I got pregnant at 19 they got worse. Now at 27 I just had my second baby. I'm very fashion conscious but I'm ashamed to even wear shorts or any fashions that might expose a little leg. I enjoy looking good for my husband and for jogging and swimming. I have such a bad complex now because of this. Is there anything I can do?

DEAR READER — Varicose veins are caused from overstretching of the veins. They stay dilated. Some women inherit a tendency to have weak-walled veins and they overstretch more easily. That is why they are seen in families such as yours.

The trick is to prevent stretching the veins. When you are standing, the column of blood in your veins creates pressure inside the veins and stretches them if the walls are weak. That is why it is good to get off your feet. But for the best effect you need to lie down and get your feet above your heart level.

That is temporary. A better solution is to use external pressure that keeps the veins from filling up and overstretching. People like you should wear some form of external support when they are standing or even sitting for any period of time. Support stockings should also be used during pregnancy.

Some superficial varicose veins can be corrected surgically, and some by injecting sclerosing agents around the veins. The principles of varicose veins and what to do about them are discussed more fully in The Health Letter number 5-8, Varicose Veins, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

By the way, walking, dancing and jogging are better for your leg veins than just standing still. Exercise helps to milk the blood out of your leg veins and prevents the buildup of pressure inside the veins.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Will you please discuss the harmful effects venison can have on a person who eats it often. My husband is a sportsman and likes to eat quite a lot of this kind of meat.

DEAR READER — As long as it comes from a healthy animal there isn't much to get excited about. Animals differ in how lean they are but the "lean meat only" of venison is commonly only 4 percent fat by weight, which means it is about comparable to the separable lean of round steak. Most wild animals are less fat than domestic animals. That helped our forefathers eat less fat in their diets than we consume today.

Many scientists think our forefathers had fewer circulatory problems — heart attacks were not described in living cases until this century — because they ate a more natural diet. The red meat and poultry came from nature's environment rather than from feed lots where animals are fattened to satisfy our taste for fat, tender meat.

Bills Reported Part Of Bribe

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than a dozen of the $100 bills the wife of former Rep. John Jenrette said she found in Jenrette's closet last week were part of the Abscam bribery money the South Carolina Democrat was convicted of accepting, The Washington Post quoted sources as saying.

Jenrette, who has denied taking money from FBI undercover agents, could not be reached for comment on the Post report.

Carter Pledges To Keep Working For Hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — A somber President Carter, looking ahead to life as a "fellow citizen of the world," is pledging to spend his waning days in office trying to bring the American hostages home from Iran and is vowing to support Ronald Reagan "to the very limits of conscience and conviction."

In a nationally broadcast farewell address Wednesday night, Carter said three critical tasks will outlive his presidency: preventing nuclear holocaust, promoting human rights around the world and protecting the environment.

He never mentioned the economy, one of the key issues that made him a one-term president, and spoke only briefly of the American hostages whose captivity in Iran haunted his last year in the White House.

"I will continue as I have during the past 14 months to work hard and to pray for the lives and the well-being of the American hostages in Iran," Carter said. "I can't predict yet what will happen, but I hope you will join me in my constant prayer for their freedom."

Seated in front of his desk in the Oval Office, Carter did not mention Reagan by name. But he said he understood "as few others can how formidable is the task the president-elect is about to undertake."

"To the very limits of conscience and conviction, I pledge to support him in that task," Carter said. "I wish him success and Godspeed."

Ignoring his landslide defeat last Nov. 4, Carter extended his "deepest thanks" to the American people "because you gave me this extraordinary opportunity to serve."

Then, in the only portion of the 20-minute speech that bordered on emotion, the president closed by saying: "From the bottom of my heart, I want to express to you the gratitude I feel. Thank you, fellow citizens, and farewell."

Carter himself spent a lot of time writing the speech, and most of it was devoted to three themes of his presidency: nuclear proliferation, human rights and the environment.

He said: "I want to lay aside my role as leader of one nation and speak to you as a fellow citizen of the world about three... issues: the threat of nuclear destruction; our stewardship of the physical resources of our planet; and the preeminence of the basic rights of human beings."

In what may have been a special message to the 40th president, the 39th president warned that an "an uneasy era...is likely to endure for the rest of this century....a period of tensions within nations and between nations — of competition for scarse resources, social, political and economic stresses and strains."

"During this period, we may be tempted to abandon some of the time-honored principles and commitments which have been proven during the difficult times of past generations," Carter said.

Robinson Takes Over As SF Giants Manager

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After the Cleveland Indians fired him in 1977, Frank Robinson — major league baseball's first black manager — thought he'd never get another chance. Now that he has, he intends to make the most of it.

"I hope and feel like I can justify the faith the Giants organization has shown in me," Robinson said Wednesday after being named San Francisco manager. "I feel like I can bring leadership to this ball club."

The 45-year-old former star outfielder said at a news conference at Candlestick Park that he had sought another chance to manage in the major leagues since the Indians let him go after 2½ seasons.

But he said that until Giants' owner Bob Lurie contacted him, no other team had offered him even a nibble. For the last two seasons he has been first-base coach with the Baltimore Orioles.

"I felt that I'd never get another chance," said Robinson. "A lot of people asked me why and I said for the simple reason that from the time I left Cleveland until a week ago, no one from any other organization ever contacted me.

Robinson was accused of a lack of communication with his players at Cleveland, but he denied that, saying, "I didn't have communication problems. Some of the players there that I had problems with just didn't like what I had to say."

He promised an "open-door" policy with the Giants, adding that "the door swings both ways. I can go out into the locker room and get them and bring them into my office, and they can walk through the door to my office and feel right at home."

Lurie was lavish in his praise of Robinson, who he said had agreed to a multi-year contract. Details were not disclosed.

Robinson left an impressive record in a 21-year big league playing career which started in 1956 with the Cincinnati Reds and ended in 1976 as player-manager for the Indians. Eleven times he was named to the All-Star Game, and his 586 home runs place him fourth on the all-time list.

He was the only man ever to be named Most Valuable Player in both the National and American leagues, winning the award in 1961 with Cincinnati and 1966 with Baltimore.

Lietzke Shares Early Lead In Hope Event

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Bruce Lietzke exhibited a mastery of the sand shot — which he said may be the weakest part of his game — in taking a share of the first round lead in the five-day, 90-hole Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic.

"I think I finished something like 135th or 136th last year in sand saves," Lietzke said after posting a 7-under-par 65 and a tie for the lead with Bob Gilder.

"I knew I was a very poor to very mediocre sand player and the statistics last year just confirmed it," Lietzke said.

But his work from the bunkers was near-perfect Wednesday. He was in the sand three times and played those holes two under par.

Lietzke, the long-hitting, cross-handed putter who has won at least once in each of the last four seasons, holed a 50-foot bunker shot for a birdie on the 17th hole. On the 18th, a par-5, he reached a greenside bunker in two and got it up and down for a birdie. And he saved par from a bunker on the fourth hole at Tamarisk.

Gilder, the current Canadian Open champion, didn't make a bogey, didn't miss a green and could have had a much better score in his solid effort at Tamarisk. He birdied seven times and missed four other opportunities from eight feet or less.

"I haven't hit the ball this well in a long time," he said.

A single stroke off the pace at 66 were Ray Floyd, Jerry Pate and J.C. Snead.

Lee Trevino headed a group at 67 that included veteran Doug Sanders, Lanny Wadkins, Bob Clampett, David Edwards, Keith Fergus, Gary Hallberg, Lee Elder and Mark Lye.

Floyd, Trevino, Sanders, Elder, Hallberg, Fergus and Clampett all played at La Quinta. Pate, Edwards and Lye were at Bermuda Dunes. Snead and Wadkins were with Gilder at Tamarisk.

Ben Crenshaw's 68 matched the best score at Indian Wells.

Western To Challenge NMJC In Hobbs Tonight

HOBBS, N.M. – Western Texas College returns to Western Athletic Conference play again here tonight as the Westerners meet the New Mexico Junior College Thunderbirds at 8 o'clock.

WTC's Dusters have the night off. They'll join the Westerners in hosting Clarendon College to Scurry County Coliseum at 6 and 8 Saturday.

Tonight's game here pits two teams which are hopeful of making the Region 5 playoffs. Generally, the top five WJCAC teams advance to the playoffs, held in March.

NMJC is 2-3 in conference play, having lost all of its road games. The Thunderbirds defeated Clarendon and Odessa at home.

Western Texas is also winless out of town, holding a 2-2 league record. The Westerners have secured home wins over Odessa and New Mexico Military Institute, and lost on the road to Howard County and South Plains.

Western and New Mexico rank 1-2 in the conference in scoring offense. The Westerners lead the loop with a 95.2 average. NMJC averages 91.3 points a game.

In addition, Western leads the conference in field goal percentage (.566) and free throw percentage (.698).

Top scorers for each team are Ricky Green, a 6-3 sophomore for New Mexico averaging 15.6, and Chuck North, a 6-4 sophomore for Western Texas averaging 19.8. Both teams have four players averaging at better than 11.5 points a game.

Following tonight's game, Western begins a three-contest home stand, which includes Clarendon on Saturday, Amarillo on Monday, and No. 12 ranked Frank Phillips on Jan. 22.

The Westerners finish out the first half of the conference season at No. 1 ranked Midland on Jan. 26, then open the second portion by hosting South Plains on Jan. 29.

Kankakee Community College (Ill.), 15-0, kept its second place position with 142 votes, while Allegheny (Pa.), 13-0, stayed in third with 134.

Tyler Junior College, from Tyler, Tex. is the No. 7 team after holding down the sixth spot last week. Tyler, 16-0, advanced to the NJCAA semi-finals last year.

Two other Lone Star State teams slipped in the poll. Last week's No. 11 team, Frank Phillips, dropped to 12th while Cooke County, 14-2, fell from eighth to the No. 14 spot.

Two Weeks Wait Until J.R. Throws

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors say it will be at least two more weeks before they can determine when Houston Astros pitcher J.R. Richard, recovering from a stroke July 30, can start throwing again.

"Everything looks promising but nobody is making any predictions," said neurologist Dr. William S. Fields, who examined Richard this week.

Richard suffered a stroke July 30 while working out in the Astrodome and underwent surgery to remove a blood clot in his neck.

On Oct. 14, Richard underwent an 18-hour operation at San Francisco's University of California Medical Center to replace a blocked artery in his right shoulder.

Doctors say Richard has resumed running since his October surgery but he has not been able to throw.

The waiting period also left the pitcher-rich Astros uncertain if Richard will be available for the 1981 season.

Astros pitchers and catchers report to the team's training facility at Cocoa, Fla. Feb. 20, including new pitchers Don Sutton and Bob Knepper.

Nipped By A Nose; Cowboys Can Colors

By BILL MCCLELLAN

Two items in yesterday's news were of special appeal to me. There was nothing particularly strange about either, but when your sense of humor is somewhat off-key...

The first was an article which told us Chris Evert Lloyd had been named as The Associated Press Female Athlete of the Year. Tracy Austin was second in the voting.

Third place was what caught my eye - Genuine Risk.

Can you imagine the phone call basketball star Nancy Liberman got congratulating her of her fourth place finish?

"Nancy! Hello, this is Howard Husker of The Associated Press and I am pleased to inform you that you received 38 votes to finish fourth place in our voting for the Female Athlete of the Year Award! Congratulations! ...First? Oh, it went to that darling of the tennis set, Chrissy Lloyd. ...Second? Why it was America's sweetheart, Tracy Austin. Yes. ...Third? Oh, glad you asked. She beat you by just one vote. ...Who? Uh, err, uh. Well, it was a real national hero. Just a wonderful, uh, er, person, and a great competitor, Genuine Risk. ...Uh, Genuine Risk, you know, the filly that won the Kentucky Derby?"

Beaten out of third place for Female Athlete of the Year by a horse. Slam-Dunk!

The other item concerns the Dallas Cowboys and, in particular, president Tex Schramm.

Seems Tex thinks it's time the 'Pokes dumped those old blue and sliver uniforms and got into something "lighter or darker, I don't know," he says.

Wouldn't have anything to do with that so-called jinx would it, Tex?

"I personally, and several others in the organization, have never been happy with the combination of the blue jersey," he pleads. "We've been working on this the last couple of months. It's no secret."

Jinx-evasion or just fashion conscious, it's no secret either that the Cowboys have had bad luck in the uniforms. Dallas was 1-4 in them this year, including a 20-7 loss to Philadelphia last Sunday, and is 10-11 since they started wearing them for the first time.

Just goes to show ya' superstition isn't confined to high school and college athletics. I've known football coaches who absolutely HAD to wear a certain shirt each game and basketball coaches who couldn't get by without their favorite towel.

Who was it who said "It's not really that I'm superstitious, It's just that I don't mess with a good thing."

Just try taking that guy's pink and purple lucky socks before the big game and see what happens.

...But seriously Nancy, I'll bet Genuine Risk could run circles (chuckle, chuckle) around you.

Historic Convention Ends; Women Accepted On Board

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Ed Malan walked up to Donna Lopiano and put his arms around the woman he had been fighting for five days.

"We've got a lot of work to do, Donna," he said. "I think you fought a good fight and I sure hope we can work together."

Malan, the faculty representative from Pomona-Pitzer College in California and a member of the National Collegiate Athletic Association council was putting his best and most conciliatory foot forward at the end of an often bitter and divisive convention that saw the NCAA assimilate the women's athletic movement.

Lopiano, president of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, had led the fight against the NCAA's entry into female athletics. But she and her colleagues suffered close, stinging defeats as the record number of 1,220 delegates adopted by a razor-thin margin plans to put women in the association's governing structure and for Division I schools to sponsor women's championships.

The victors went to great lengths when the convention adjourned Wednesday to show they are not trying to run up the score.

"I would like to compliment the AIAW women," Bill Flynn of Boston College said in his final remarks from the podium. "They are true professionals. They took their defeats like champions. We respect you a great deal."

Then Flynn handed the gavel to Jim Frank, the first black ever elected president of the powerful sports organization.

The convention also elected John Toner, athletic director at the University of Connecticut, as secretary-treasurer.

The word "historic" was being used by practically everyone to describe this 75th NCAA convention. Frank made it historic. Never before has a black, or a university president, been named president. The women made it historic. The controversial moves adopted will break 75 years of male domination of the NCAA.

It was made historic by Laverne Sweatt of Hampton Insititute, Va.; Judie Holland, UCLA; Gwen Norell, Michigan State and Betty Kruczek, Fitchburg State, Miss.; who were all elected to the powerful NCAA Council, the first women ever to hold seats on that body.

It was also historic, said NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers, "in the sense that the leading institutions of higher education surrendered to a national organization certain prerogatives in academic areas they never did in the past."

Byers was referring to a new rule mandating that an athlete must complete one-fifth of a degree program each year to remain eligible.

An expected manuevering to reverse the vote on women's programs of Tuesday never materialized. Instead, immediate past AIAW president Christine Grant of Iowa, made an eloquent, moving speech of protest.

Hockey Team Chosen Male Athletes Of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Twenty American hockey players who banded together to shock the sports world and thrill their countrymen are collectively The Associated Press Male Athlete of the Year for 1980.

The United States Olympic hockey team, which won the gold medal at Lake Placid, N.Y. last February and - for two weeks, at least - made the ice sport a national pastime in this country, easily outdistanced its closest rival, Eric Heiden, another phenomenal performer at the Winter Games. The hockey team collected 139 of 422 votes cast by sports writers and broadcasters nationwide and will receive the Jesse Owens Memorial Award, to be awarded for the first time in memory of the legendary track star who died last March.

Heiden, who won five golds in five speed skating races at the Winter Olympics, was second with 99 votes while baseball star George Brett of the Kansas City Royals, the American League's Most Valuable Player, came in third with 92 votes.

Bill Baker. Jim Craig. Mike Eruzione. Buzz Schneider. Neal Broten. Dave Christian. Steve Christoff. John Harrington. Steve Janaszak. Mark Johnson. Rob McClanahan. Ken Morrow. Jack O'Callahan. Mark Pavelich. Mike Ramsey. Dave Silk. Eric Strobel. Bob Suter. Phil Verchota. Mark Wells. Twenty young men who made an entire nation feel wonderful.

Clint Hartung, the legendary "Hondo Hurricane" of the postWorld War II era, had a 9-7 pitching record and a .309 batting average for the New York Giants in 1947, his first major league season.
