Italian Bombers Slay 50 In Debra Markos Raid

30 WOMEN AMONG THOSE LISTED AS RAIDER'S VICTIMS

Government Waits on News of American Missionaries

TROOPS MOVE UP

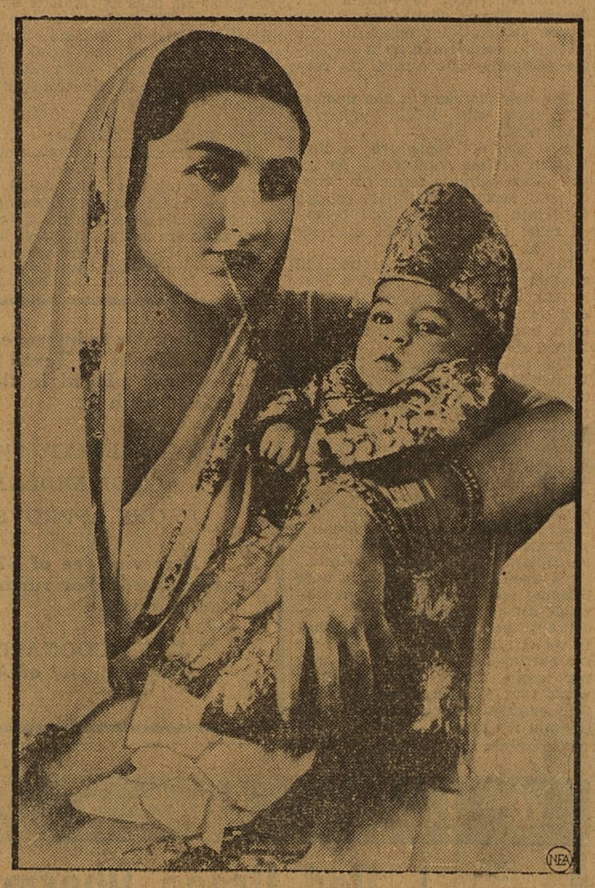

Scattered Bands of Defenders Being Cleaned Out

ADDIS ABABA, March 11. (AP).—The Ethiopian government today reported 50 persons, including 30 women, had been killed and 85 wounded in an Italian bombing raid Tuesday on Debra Markos, capital of the Gojjam province. The statement said that 12 planes participated in the raid.

The populace of the town was panic-stricken by the visit of the planes and most of them fled into the nearby hills. Government officials said they are waiting for news about American missionaries stationed in the bombed town.

Italian troops were moving forward throughout the northern battle section, clearing the Tembien region where scattered bands of Ethiopians still remain and penetrating beyond Amba Alaji, which the Fascists reached in their most recent important advance.

Guard India's $500,000,000 Baby

Fear of possible kidnap attempts led 24 of Europe's crack detectives to Hyderabad, India, to guard this baby—$500,000,000 grandson of the world's riches man—during a trip with his mother to the Rivera, where her exiled Imperial relatives live. Before her marriage to Crown Prince Sahibzada Azam Jab, son of the fabulously wealthy Nizam of Hyderabad, premier prince of India, the mother Crown Princess of Hyderabad, shown with the baby, was Princess Darru Shahvar, a daughter of the last Sultan and Caliph of Turkey.

FRESH INTEREST IS STIMULATED IN YOAKUM WILDCAT

Prospective Opener of Pool Exhausts Water

By FRANK GARDNER

Reports that salt water has been practically exhausted after several days of bailing and swabbing have stimulated fresh interest in the Yoakum county discovery, Honolulu Oil Corp., Ltd., and Cascade Petroleum Corp. No. 1 Bennett. Crew has been recovering about one barrel of oil an hour in addition to the water, and the 1,000 feet of fluid now in the hole is said to be chiefly oil.

The prospective pool opener first encountered the water in drilling an additional 16 feet after five months of inactivity while bottomed at 5,096, two feet into a porous lime section believed to be the source of oil. When opened up and agitated the well flowed and headed 77 barrels of oil. Many are now of the opinion that the water present in the hole is not coming from the bottom formation but rather from behind casing set farther up. In the event that the latter proves to be the case, it is possible that the No. 1 Bennett may be drilled deeper below its present total depth of 5,112.

The No. 1 Bennett is about 11 miles southeast of Plains in the northwest quarter of section 678, block D, John H. Gibson survey.

Drilling Hard Lime

Uniformly hard limestone is being drilled by the W. T. Walsh and Harry Adams Corp. No. 1 Averitt, last reported depth being 4,702 feet. The Gaines wildcat is nearing critical depth and at present holds the interest of most West Texas oilmen. The consensus of opinion of geologists is that for purposes of correlation the top of lime can be safely called at 4,545 feet, although the formation didn't show up entirely solid until just below 4,600. The No. 1 Averitt is located on a geophysical structure three miles northwest of Seminole in section 228, block G, W. T. R. R. survey.

The latest wildcat scheduled to test in Gaines county, Landreth No. 1 Kirk, was spudded yesterday. The new test is located 330 feet out of the southwest corner of section 22, block A-21, public school land, about midway between the Means pool in northern Andrews and the Walsh and Adams Seminole test in Gaines.

Steel line measurement taken on Wahlenmaier, York and Harper No. 1 Dr. E. H. Jones showed the total depth to be 5,224½ feet, and preparations are being made to plug hole and dismantle drilling equipment. The abandoned test encountered no shows of oil, gas or water in the Permian lime, said to be entered at 4,980 feet. Originally scheduled to go to 5,000 feet, it was deepened below that depth for additional geological data. The No. 1 Jones is 17 miles northwest of Seminole in sec-

J. C. PENNEY COMPANY ANNOUNCES NEW STORE WILL BE OPENED HERE

Plans for opening of a J. C. Penney Co. store at Midland in the near future were announced in a letter to The Reporter-Telegram today from the New York office of the company which operates almost 1,500 stores over the United States.

Confirmation of a lease has been made for long time occupancy of the former Grand theatre building, owned by J. Howard Hodge. The building, located at 118 North Main street, is to be remodeled and redecorated, the Penney Co. occupying the entire 40 by 140 foot space. A balcony the full width of the store and 45 feet in depth will be built in order to give "plenty of room for well arranged departments and wide, comfortable aisles," the communication said.

Stock to be carried will include wearing apparel for men, women and children; draperies, piece goods and domestics; notions, toilet articles, shoes and other regular department store lines of merchandise.

Lowell Snyder, of the company's advertising department, said:

"The opening of the new Midland store will be another forward step in the successful career of the J. C. Penney Company. Founded 34 years ago by James C. Penney, in the little mining town of Kemmerer, Wyoming, the Company has grown to be one of the outstanding examples of modern merchandising technique. Mr. Penney opened the original store with $500 in capital and a definite policy of square dealing. The capital investment of the Penney Company now runs into big figures, but the policy of the little dry-goods store in Kemmerer, Wyoming, still remains the policy for the 1483 Penney stores of today.

Expect FDR To Ask Billion Relief

Democrats Defending WPA Program in Senate

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11. (AP)—Intimations that President Roosevelt son would ask congress for between $1,000,000,000 and $1,500,000,000, for continuing his work-relief program were dropped in senate circles Tuesday as democrats entered a twin defense of the WPA and PWA.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader, in a 7,0000-word prepared address, defended "boondoggling" under Harry L. Hopkins' Works Progress Administration, and asserted the republican national committee and "miscalled liberty league" were attempting to make a "political football" out of the unfortunate unemployed."

Soon afterward, Senator Hayden (D-Ariz.) read another prepared speech paying tribute to the Public Works Administration under Secretary Ickes and urging another $700,000,000 appropriation for new non-federal projects, already proposed but for which funds are lacking.

On the present 45-55 grant-loan basis, Hayden said this would enable construction of $1,500,000,000 of state and municipal projects.

Sandwiched in between the two democratic speeches was a fresh demand from Senator Vanderberg (R-Mich.) for a full investigation of charges that WPA is being used for "political exploitation for a partisan purpose."

The double democratic defense reached its height just as President Roosevelt at his press conference said he had not determined upon the exact amount he would ask of congress for relief purposes.

In making known that his special message on the relief question would not go forward this week, Mr Roosevelt intimated he might even delay it until the outset of his annual trip to Florida on March 19. With a twinkle in his eye he told reporters he might leave the message at the capitol on his way to the train.

Persistent reports on the senate side of the capitol during the day were that less than the $2,000,000,000 previously hinted might be asked. Some senators declared privately they had reason to believe he would ask for $1,125,000,000; others contended the exact amount would depend on the carry-over available from the $4,800,000,000 appropriated last year. In his budget message in early January, the president estimated the carry-over then at $1,003,000,000.

Robinson declared that while there may have been "abuses" in certain localities with respect to using relief funds to advance political causes, the president and his national administrators had done all in their power to keep the question out of politics.

Intensify Plans for Walkout of Many More Workers

NEW YORK, Mar. 11. (AP)—Building workers strike leaders today spurned realty interest peace offers and made plans to intensify the walk out by calling out workers throughout the city.

What union leaders called "war to the finish" rolled across New York today as striking building service employes enlarged their theatre of operation and accused owners of importing "Pennsylvania gunmen" to use against them.

"If there is to be war, let it start now," said James J. Bambrick, the strike leader, loosing the bounds which for many days have kept the strike from spreading to the Grand Central area, Brooklyn and Queens.

DEMANDS AID OF BRITAIN IN HER RHINE PROGRAM

Hints Russia, Little Entente Will Follow

WAR ADVOCATED

Flandin Says Ready To Defend Honor With Sword

PARIS, March 11. (AP). A high source here today declared France will quit the League of Nations unless Britain backs France in her demand that Adolf Hitler withdraw his troops from the Rhineland.

France also hinted her allies (Russia and the Little Entente) might follow her in the move.

The Locarno signatories, meeting in London Thursday, may hear a warning from Foreign Minister Pierre-Ettienne Flandin, who, according to an authoritative spokesman, said "we know that war is coming within two years anyhow; we might just as well have it now while we are prepared." He added "there comes a time when a nation refuses to be humiliated in front of the world; French honor is at stake and we are ready to draw the sword if necessary to keep it unsullied."

ROME, Mar. 11. (AP)—Italy declared today that she cannot collaborate with Britain and France under the Locarno treaty as long as sanctions are imposed upon the Fascists by those nations. It was announced Italy would probably be represented at the London conference Thursday.

Significantly, the French League attitude was announced shortly after a conference between Flandin and Russian Ambassador Potemkin.

An official said France demands that Germany remove at least 70 per cent of the troops in the Rhineland. The foreign office emphatically denied France was willing to compromise on a few simple German "gestures", such as the withdrawal of a few troops.

The executive committee of the Chamber of Deputies adopted a bill authorizing the organization of the Nation on an emergency basis in wartime.

OTHER NATIONS COME TO AID OF FRANCE

GENEVA, March 11. (AP).—Representatives of Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey today came to the support of the French in their stand on the German reoccupation of the Rhineland. Swiss army officers have been instructed to remain near their barracks against the possibility of hostilities.

Howard County Petitions Asking Election Vote On A Junior College

BIG SPRING. Mar. 11 (Spl.)—Petitions asking that an election be called for the creation of a junior college district in Howard county and bearing the names of upwards of 1,000 taxpaying citizens are expected to be presented to the county board of trustees in a special meeting scheduled for 2 p. m. Wednesday in the district courtroom.

The meeting, second of the sort arranged by citizens interested in the establishment of a junior college for Howard county, is the outgrowth of one held a month ago when definite action was delayed pending investigations of other junior colleges in the state.

Tuesday morning a party consisting of County Superintendent Anne Martin, City Superintendent W. C. Blankenship, J. A. Bishop, chairman of the county board, and George Boswell, superintendent of the Coahoma schools, left for San Angelo to inspect the junior college there. They were to report at the Wednesday meeting.

A similar trip to Amarillo had to be cancelled when Leland L Martin, Forsan superintendent ,and B. F. Logan, Coahoma trustee, were confined to hospitals for minor surgeries.

Petition in Big Spring alone bore more than 400 names Tuesday morning and it was anticipated that the number would be swelled considerably by circulation during the afternoon.

Elbow, first school district in the county to return its petition, reported that signing was virtually unanimous. Leaders in that area lost no time after the first meeting in getting the petition signed.

Several other common school districts have been collecting signatures of taxpaying voters.

Originating with the county board the junior college proposal has gained wide support. Since its inception rural residents have taken the lead in pushing the move for an election to decide whether a junior college district shall be established over the district.

Discussions will be invited at the meeting Wednesday afternoon and in all probability the petition will be presented to the county board for action.

Ten per cent of the taxpaying voters are required on the petition before the trustees are authorized to call the election.

Members of the board have been outspoken in approval of the junior college idea.

EARNING AND LEARNING

At last we have a practical condemnation of the "work your way through college" theory. Dr. James Bryant Conant, Harvard president, contends that the plan is more destructive than productive. He recommends creation of more scholarships so that youths may acquire college training without "either privation or luxury."

"Trying to earn a living while you are trying to study results only in distraction," Dr. Conant argues. And his point is well taken. Social organizations could do no better than offer scholarships as part of their public activities.

Nevertheless, if there are no scholarships available, the "work your way" plan is highly preferable to no college at all.

THE COMMON TOUCH

Kipling long ago made famous one measure of a man in that line, "if you can walk with kings—nor lose the common touch . . ." And today we have the splendid example of a king himself who has not lost the common touch.

Speaking to the world for the first time since he ascended the throne, young Edward VIII emphasized the sort of monarchy he wants for the British Empire. It stirs a refreshing international and democratic note. Said the new king:

"I am better known to most of you as the Prince of Wales, as the man who during the war and since has had the opportunity of getting to know the people of nearly every country of the world under all conditions and circumstances. And although I now speak to you as the king, I am still the same man who has had the experience, and whose constant effort will be to continue to promote the well-being of his fellow men."

Certainly this attitude promises much for the British Empire and for the world.

Sportsmen's Show Warms New Yorkers to Outdoors

By GEORGE A. WIEDA
NEA Service Staff Writer

New York.—If you want to lure the average New Yorker into the great outdoors, you'd better steam heat it. That's what the promoters of the National Sportsmen's Show have done, and they've attracted more nimrods and anglers than have taken to the trails since the days when you had to hunt and fish if you wanted to eat regularly.

About the only thrill omitted from the big exhibition in Grand Central Palace is that of being mistaken for a deer by some half-shot hunter. The heating plant eliminates the danger of frostbite, and, of course, mosquitoes aren't in season, yet from the momoent you step inside you're conscious of being in the wide-open spaces.

For the nearby Canadian provinces—particularly New Braunswick, and Nova Scotia—the New England States, New York and New Jersey have installed representative collections of game most of it on the hoof, that make the mighty nimrod simply sick with envy. Here are the deer and the bear that he had just missed last fall. And the kind of fish the angler dreams about—fighting trout of all kinds that escaped the lures of thousands of fishermen to grow into huge fellows.

Maine, for instance, demonstrates that its woods are full of things beside Republicans... An ingeniously contrived trout stream has a water fall and a clear pool in which the big fellows laze. Herbert L. Welsh, fly casting champion, proved that they weren't just props when he waded into the stream and hooked a rainbow beauty.

Non-Political Bull Moose

Nova Scotia, however, headlines the program with its family of tame moose—Buddy, a four-year-old bull moose, who unfortunately lost his horns just before the opening; Sally his helpmate and their daughter, Betty, said to be the first mooselet born in captivity in a century.

Interspersed with these sportsmen's menageries and acquariums are all sorts of the most eye-catching gadgets imaginable, from collapsible duck hunting boats and air pistols to bicycles and bait.

Take the cabin in a trunk, for one. Collapsed, it looks like a slightly overgrown luggage trunk, mounted on a one-wheeled trailer that fastents to the rear bumper of any car. Opened up—a five-minute operation according to its sponsors—it provides a two-bunk bedroom, sheltered living space, dinette and kitchenette, with space arranged for storing cooking and dining utensils. One of the really grand surprises is that it costs so little almost anyone who can afford a vacation trip can buy it.

Tricky Gadgets Lacking

The walls of one booth were but a palisades of fishing rods, gleaming with new varnish and metal finishings, gems of a fisherman's horde. And another is filled with gleaming blue steel and walnut guns.

Existence in the north woods is exploited by a woolen company apparently on the theory that its blankets and apparel keep the trappers warm as they battle snow drifts Faithfully reproduced is a fur cache, a tiny, shingled hut mounted head high on posts to keep the pelts out of reach of wild dogs. A dog sled, with a team of snarling huskies and a rather pale-faced Indian driver, lend animation to the scene. But the burial platform with dummy laid out in traditional manner defies explanation, for dead Indians certainly can't be a good market for woolens output.

The dogs, by the way, live in a Park Avenue penthouse while here—it's atop the Grand Central Palace.

Use the Classifieds

Looks like the real thing, doesn't it? The trout struggling on Herbert Welsh's line is authentic enough, and so's the water, but he made his catch in the Maine exhibit at the National Sportsmen's Show in New York. Below Walter Hubley gets a ducking in the big tank at the show when Lawrence Toney bests him in a log rolling contest.

Ford Gives Contract For Immense Project

DEARBORN, Mich.—A $1,000,000 project, involving construction of the world's largest welded steel gas holder of its particular type, was announced today by the Ford Motor Company.

Contract for the gas holder, which will have a capacity of 10,000,000 cubic feet, has been awarded to Stacey Brothers Gas Construction Company, of Cincinnati. The gas holder will be 220 feet in diameter and 344 feet high—equal in height to a 34-story building.

The construction will involve the use of welded rather than riveted plates, an innovation, and will require 3,000 tons of structural steel plates and shapes, 25 tons of weld rod and 200 tons of miscellaneous equipment. Its reinforced concrete foundation will measure 1,360 cubic yards, supported on 260 piles about 100 feet long, driven to bed rock. About one year will be required for completion of the project.

In construction, this gas holder is unusual as it is of the interior piston dry seal type. The piston will weigh 700 tons. The pistol seal will be made up of six layers of special packing, kept gas tight by a series of counter-weights equally spaced around the outer ring of the piston and lubricated by a special grease. A gas tight connection between the piston and the ring holding the packing will be maintained by a continuous special canvas - covered corrugated lead. Elevators will be provided both on the exterior and interior.

The huge gas holder, located west of the boat slip at the Rouge plant, will be used to store gas for use in the Ford industries, produced by the coke ovens now being constructed on the east side of the plant. Gas will be transported from these new coke ovens through an all-welded main, four feet in diameter, which will be carried under the slip through a concrete tunnel 13 feet in diameter. In the same tunnel, water, steam and electrical lines to supply the new Ford steel mills, are placed.

Knowing Prosperity Easy by New System

AUSTIN, Texas. (AP)—Adam R. Johnson, Texas relief director, has a new standard for measuring the return to normal and by it he judges prosperity has turned the corner.

The new standard is the number of persons who refuse preferred state relief.

A couple of years ago a Fort Woman became number one on the list, which Johnson terms his "honor roll." She was fortunate enough to obtain employment and believed relief funds should be used for those in need.

Not until 1936 rolled around did another join the roll, First a Port Arthur man obtained employment and then a man at Kerrville obtained a Works Progress job. Both returned state checks.

The latest is Simeon Bail of Whiteboro, a piano tuner. He not only returned a $2.50 budget check becausse he had found work again in his profession and was looking "on the brighter side," but he also in structed the relief office to cancel his application for aid.

Johnson is pleased at the spirit manifest by the people for all state relief will end April, the close-out program was arranged to "carry unemployables through the winter."

"It wasn't so hard when we were building up an organization, a veritable army," he said recently, "because we had jobs to fill and money to spend for relief. ut now that we are cutting down thestaff, discharging many 'white-collar' workers won't find jobs, and taking destitute employables off the rolls, I'll tell you it's tough."

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything).

Editor Roberts of the Andrews County News pictures his home town as a flirtatious woman, casting inveigling eyes at both Odessa and Midland, and he plays up the alleged Andrews road controversy as a difference which has sprung up between the old boys as result of this flirt's antics. If Andrews is like a flirtatious woman, Midland won't have to worry about the road, because whoever heard of a flirtin' woman taking the shortest path between two points.

Gene Howe tells this one:

The teacher was correcting an old country boy.

"I ain't going there," he stated.

"That is no way to talk," she said. You should say that, I'm not going there; thou are not going there; he is not going there; we are not going there; you are not going there; they are not going there. Now, do you get the idea?"

"Yes, teacher," the old country boy replied. "I understand perfectly. There ain't nobody going there."

Bruno didn't do it! Bruno loves a kid! Maybe Pop-Eye done it; maybe Wimpy did! Hauptmann's too kind-hearted; Hauptmann ain't a louse! Lots of guys have ransom bills lying 'round the house. Forget handwriting experts; forget the sleeping suit; forget the lies upon the stand; Hauptmann ain't a brute. Hauptmann has a heart of gold, on this point I'm emphatic, forget about that ladder-board they found in Hauptmann's attic! Why not turn the poor guy loose? Let the good man go. Say, he'd make a million bucks—in films and radio. Living, he may make a "call" at YOUR home—who can tell? Dead—he'll be unhappy 'cause there are no babes in Hell!

Junior High PTA Closes Trio of Texas Programs

Junior High PTA closed a series of three Texas programs in its meeting at the school building Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Bob Preston, program chairman was in charge.

Mrs. J. Howard Hodge read an inspirational paper, "Women of Texas, Hold Your Line." She stressed the fact that although women of today do not have to face the same problems as did the women of early Texas, they have still to respond to the challenge "Hold Your Line" in economic and political struggles.

Miss Jimmie Martin discussed the cutural trends in Texas.

Mrs. R. Steele Johnston read Starke Young's "Independence."

A nominating committee headed by Mrs. Armstrong and including Mrs. H. N. Stamper and Prin. J. H. Williams was chosen to report on officers for the coming year.

The PTA will sponsor a Centennial program at Warfield school Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

About 40 people attended the meeting.

Mrs. Goldsmith Is Hostess to Enigma

Mrs. Chas. Goldsmith entertained for the Enigma club with three tables of bridge at her home, 201 North B street, Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

A St. Patricks theme was followed in tallies for the games and in the wrappings of the prizes which were awarded to Mrs. Clarence Scharbauer for high score among club members and to Mrs. Fred Turner for high score among guests.

A party plate was served at the close of the games to: Club guests, Mmes. Turner, Rawlins Clark, and John Dublin; club members, Mmes, Harvey Conger, Frank Cowden, Geo. Glass, Geo. McEntire, O. B. Holt, Foy Proctor, Scharbauer, Harry Tolbert, M. C. Ulmer and the hostess.

FEMININE FANCIES

BY KATHLEEN EILAND

We think we'll keep on living simply because every time we get just SO blue, something pops up to set us chuckling again. This time it is a press story from the President of the S. P. M. G. C. P. You don't know what the alphabet stands for? No more did we.

But here is the meaning of the mystic letters—Society for the Protection of More Ground—Cherry Pie.

And the society has an editor, as president, an opera singer as vice president, and a restauranteur as secretary-treasurer, and lord high keeper-of-the-Recipes.

It seems to be on the up and up as it were.

Where but in America could it happen? And the answer is Nowhere.

The ground-cherry, of whose existence this luckless wight had only vaguely heard, is also called husk tomato, yellow strawberry, ground apple, winter cherry, Icta Casha, and pod tomato. (We still maintain we had scarcely heard of it.)

The membership card, be it known, is most appropriately printed in cherry-colored ink on a card of "golden-pie crust yellow" and lists the one named as a "Ground Cherry Pie Pioneer" "A founder member of the Society in good standing, and there fore entitled upon all proper occasions to a Second Helping.".

The whole thing gives us an idea. Why doesn't some one in West Texas, with Midland as headquarters, organize a "More Chocolate Pie" society? There'd be at least one enthusiastic charter member of such a club—the writer of this column.

We would suggest a "More Ice Cream" club for summer, but what with double-dips, ice cream seems to be doing very well for itself without any assistance.

Wrinkles Threaten When Skin Is Dry

BL ALICE HART
NEA Service Staff Writer

Rich creams, oily lotions and special anti-wrinkle preparations should have prominent places in the dry-skinned woman's beauty cabinet. She, unlike the woman with an oily complexion, doesn't have to worry much about large pores or a perpetually shiny nose. Her main difficulties lie in the tendency of dry skin to wrinkle and show premature lines.

Remember, of course, that every dry skin should be cleansed with cream as well as with soap ad water. If your complexion lacks natural oil, wash with soap and water before you go to bed, apply cleansing cream, remove with clean tissues, then pat on rich tissue cream. At least twice a week, remove only part of the tissue cream allowing the rest to remain on while you sleep.

In the morning, clean face and neck with a fairly oily lotion or with cleansing cream. Remove the cream, then splash on plenty of ice water. Use a foundation preparation which contains no drying properties. One of the new films, for instance makes powder stay on for hours, gives the skin a smooth, satiny finish and protects it against the ill effects of cold wind or hot sunshine.

Then, too, there are anti-wrinkle preparations, designed especially for dry complexions. These are to be used around the eyes and across the throat where fine lines and a creepy condition are first likely to appear.

Under eyes, any cream should be patted in gently with one fingertip. Don't use a patter on this area of your face, and don't pat vigorously. Gentle patting with fingertips is best for your throat, too. Begin just above collarbone and work upward.

A LIGHT SMOKE
OF RICH, RIPE-BODIED TOBACCO

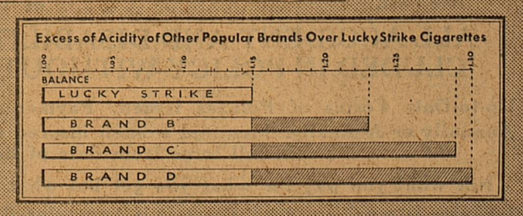

Over a period of years, certain basic advances have been made in the selection and treatment of cigarette tobaccos for Lucky Strike Cigarettes.

They include preliminary analyses of the tobacco selected; use of center leaves; the higher heat treatment of tobacco ("Toasting"); consideration of acid-alkaline balance, with consequent definite improvement in flavor; and controlled uniformity in the finished product.

All these combine to produce a superior cigarette—a modern cigarette, a cigarette made of rich, ripe-bodied tobaccos—A Light Smoke.

SYNOPSIS

Dr. Samuel Mudd, serving a life sentence on "Shark Island," the Devil's Island of America—because he had ministered to the assassinator of President Lincoln—was called upon to give medical aid when the military prison was stricken with yellow fever. "I can't offer you any reward," the Commandant said, "but a better cell. Still I ask you, will you help me?" Dr. Mudd worked night and day for five days, finally stemming the terrible death rate. But the Government ships refused to land provisions and medical supplies. It looked as though, despite his super-human efforts, Mudd's battle against "yellow jack" would be lost.

CHAPTER TWELVE

Coming out of the hospital Dr. Mudd realized his weariness. He had been working at white heat for five days, trying to stem the tide of the yellow fever in its terrific onslaught on the prison. He pressed a hand to his forehead, trying to brush away the darkness before his eyes.

I'm just tired, he thought. He refused to believe it might be more than weariness which dragged down his limbs and drew needle points of pain from his eyeballs.

But, by the time he had reached his own room, he knew the awful grip of "yellow jack" was upon him. With an effort he reached the window.

The black darkness outside was slit every once in a while with lightning.

Dimly he perceived the storm. Walking drunkenly, like a man in a dream, he made his way to the next room and taking down a cartridge belt he buckled it around his waist.

Then, an army pistol in his hand, he staggered outside to the corridor. In another room he rudely shook an orderly awake.

"Get up!"

"But what is it?"

"Come with me."

"Doctor, you're sick."

"Of course, I'm sick. I got yellow jack! Didn't you know doctors could get yellow jack? Come with me!"

Clutching the shoulder of the orderly, Dr. Mudd returned to the corridor.

By the time he had reached the soldiers quarters, the orderly was supporting him. In their bunks the Negroes gazed down at the delirious doctor, their eyes bulging.

"Get up, gun crew!" he ordered, branishing his pistol.

Terrified the darkies scrambled out from between their blankets.

On the wall, outside the prison, Mudd swayed grotesquely, seemingly unaware of the beating rain, thunder and lightning.

"He says its impossible," a signal man faltered, wiping his marine glasses.

"Tell him to put in or I'm going to fire," Mudd ordered. Behind him the gun crew, shivering in the rain, muttered uneasily.

Reluctantly the signal man followed orders.

"He says he won't," he reported finally.

"Give him one," ordered Mudd through clenched teeth.

Came the roar of the cannons.

The signal man shouted, "It hit the mast! He's turning! He's headed in!"

At that moment the commandant rushed up to Dr. Mudd.

"Compliments, sir," said the sick man faintly. "I've just got somebody to take over the work." He slumped unconscious to the ground.

It was a bright sunny day when the quarantine flag was lowered The Commandant, crossing the parade ground, a paper in his hand, looked with relief at the stars and stripes now waving over the fort.

Followed by two aides, he entered the hospital and walked down the narrow room to the cot upon which Dr. Mudd lay.

The Commandant's smile faded. Gazing at Mudd with a thoughtful look, in which pity and concern mingled, he said, "Doctor, this is something I'm preparing to send to Washington by special messenger today."

After a thoughtful pause during which he received no enouragement or interest, he continued,

"I am in no position, of course, to speak for our Government, yours and mine. But because I love the flag I serve, and because I am jealous of its honor, I'm going to ask you to remember that Governments are composed of humans, so they are human, too. We all make mistakes . . . . . all of us . . . Governments, too.

"Some of these mistakes we can't undo, but we can be ashamed of them—and of ourselves—for the injustice we have done. And we can try to make amends. We'll still be in debt. . . . always, but—"

As the sick man continued to stare at him with no expression in his sunken eyes, the Commandant became a little impatient.

"I'll read it to you," he said abruptly. "It's addressed to the President of the United States."

"As Commandant of the Military Prison at Fort Jefferson, Florida, I can testify that the final checking the recent yellow fever epidemic was the direct result of extraordinary and unselfish courage, bravery and skill on the part of Dr. Samuel A. Mudd. On behalf of the personnel of the Post, including officers, enlisted men, civilians, and prisoners, I take this means of urging executive clemency for Dr. Mudd, as a reward for heroism far above and beyond the demands of duty."

Removing his glasses, the Commandant said, "I wrote that this morning and every man on this island will be glad to sign it . . . . I promise you."

"I'd like to be the first one to sign it," came the voice of Sergeant Rankin, Mudd's old enemy, who had appeared at the bedside. Taking the paper almost rudely from the Commandant's hand he quickly scribbled his name. And then turning to the sick man, he extended a hand.

For a moment Mudd hesitated, conflicting emotions racking his countenance. Then he lifted a thin, white hand, and the two men clasped.

"Thank you, Sergeant," said Mudd gravely ,and for the first time he smiled, a slow, happy smile.

****

At the Mudd home in Maryland preparations were being made for the return of the master of the house. Rosabelle was dressing a chicken in the kitchen. In her bedroom, standing before the mirror, Peggy Mudd was fastening a flower in her hair, in a pathetic attempt to make herself look festive. Her dress was old and worn, but carefully mended and clean.

Practicing before the mirror she nodded and smiled, tipping her head archly, trying to give an impression of being gay and carefree. But the result was discouraging.

In the living room she pushed the doctor's rocker forward and pulled down a shade so that the sunlighht could not so pitilessly reveal the barefloor. The rug was gone and many other of the comfortable furnishings that had once made the room such a pleasant place. But, although, the room was homey, with its wide fireplace and beautifully carved archway. It was home, and she vowed, her husband would never know what it had cost her to keep it.

And she stood, looking about her, Peggy Mudd heard the door open.

It was Martha. "Is Daddy here yet?" she asked.

"No, dear. But he'll be here soon. Come here, darling." Dropping into the rocker, Peggy held out her arms.

"Darling," she said tenderly, "when Daddy comes he may not look like he did when you saw him last. But don't say so, sweetheart. Don't look at him like that. Because his face may be thin, and his hair—but don't notice, darling. Just. . . , just kiss him. . . his, his eyes and cheeks, his wrists. . . his poor wrists, where the chains have been . . . ."

She stopped and listened tensely. Her face lighted. Then taking the child by the hand, she jumped up and ran blindly to the door.

"He's come!" she cried. "Daddy here!"

At the gate Dr. Mudd, his hair almost white, his once ruddy face, thin and lined, his once sturdy body, gaunt and stooped of shoulder, was alighting stiffly from a neighbor's buggy.

For a moment he stood by the buggy, speaking to the neighbor. Then he turned and began to walk up the driveway, staring hungrily and anxiously at the home from which he had been taken more than four years ago.

He saw that it was shabbier than before, weeds grown high in the yard, window panes missing from the upstairs rooms, the porch sagging.

But to the prodigal it was home and the ruin into which it had fallen was of small moment. That could easily be remedied.

Like his Peggy, he was chiefly concerned with the change in his own appearance. He counted on the unswerving loyalty and understanding of his wife. She would love him all the more for the evidences of the hardships he had suffered. But Martha—would his little girl, run from him in fright? If his child shrank from him, it would be more than he could bear!

But as he stood hesitating, the front door opened and Martha ran out. Straight into his arms she ran "Daddy!" she cried, "Daddy!"

Behind her, her eyes shining through her tears, came Peggy.

Clasped in her husband's arms, she htanked God that she had so carefully coached her daughter, for if she hadn't the child would never have recognized in this poor broken man, the father she had known and loved.

But the wife knew, with tender care and love, this sore body and spirit would be healed.

In time, Dr. Samuel A. Mudd would return in the place of the prisoner of Shark Island!

AIRWAY TRAFFIC HEAD APPOINTED

Illinois Man Is Placed in Charge of Newest Movement

Appointment of a supervisor for airway traffic control, whose responsibility will be to provide for orderly and safe movement of airplanes along the Federal airways and in and out of major air terminals, was announced today by Eugene L. Vidal, director of air commerce. The man chosen for this task is Earl F. Ward of Berwyn, Ill., who has a record of experience in every phase of air line operation for the past eight years.

Specifically, Ward will be in complete charge of all phases of airway traffic control work of the bureau which will include: The preparation of initial rules and regulations governing airway traffic; subsequent necessary revisions and modifications; supervision of all personnel engaged for the purpose of controlling airway traffic; establishment of a licensing method for control tower operators at airports and general supervision of the personnel engaged in the latter work.

Ward recently was engaged by the air lines operating from Newark airport to supervise traffic movements of airplanes flying in and out of that air terminal.

Technical advances in the design of airplanes and engines, the introduction of new and improved flight instruments, and development of aeronautic radio have made it possible for airplanes to engage extensively in intentional instrument flying through and over fog and clouds. While greatly increasing the scope of the airplane's usefulness, intentional instrument flying if not properly controlled introduces a difficulty in that pilots cannot see other planes operating in the clouds. This makes necessary some form of control that will keep airplanes far enough apart to avoid the possibility of collision. Anticipating the development of this problem, the bureau of air commerce several months ago launched a comprehensive study of air port and airway traffic control, and Ward's appointment is one result. Detailed regulations now are being prepared by the bureau of air commerce.

Ward was born in Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 26, 1895, and during the war he served in Marine Corps aviation. Since 1919 he has served as a test pilot for the Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Co., engaged in airplane sales and exhibition work, and was a pilot in the postoffice department's air mail service and with National Air Transport. Since 1927 he had been associated with American Airlines, Inc., and its predecessor companies, until his recent assignment as air traffic coordinator for the air lines at Newark.

Ward has flown approximately 7,000 hours as a pilot. His headquarters will be in Washington, and he will serve directly under R. W. Schroeder, chief of the bureau's air line inspection service.

American railroads comprise nearly a third of the railway mileage of the world.

Penney Store--

Mr. Penney and Mr. Earl C. Sams, his successor as active head of the Penney Company, have proven that it is good business to give people as much quality, service and satisfaction for their money as possible. The Penney Company sells only for cash, because in that way goods can be sold more cheaply. The other four major points in the Penney policy of dealing with the public are, briefly, as follows: (1) To stock only dependable, serviceable merchandise; (2) To sell at the lowest prices possible; (3) To avoid all extravagance in store-keeping; (4) To deal fairly with both customers and co-workers.

"When the Penney Company first began to branch out, Mr. Penney developed the famous system which has earned for him the title of "the man with a thousand partners". Full merchandise control of each store is vested in the hands of a local manager, who is in a position to study the demands of the people of his community, and who can effect great savings for them by buying in the most economical way through one central buying office. From the very beginning these store managers have been active partners in the business, sharing the profits.

"From the humble beginning in 1902 with one store, the J. C. Penney Company grew with amazing speed. By 1910 Mr. Penney had acquired fourteen stores. At this time he put into operation the system of centralized buying, bookkeeping, accounting, etc., that is the keynote of the present organization. By 1924 the Company had opened 500 stores, store number 500 being opened in Hamilton, Missouri, the birthplace of Mr. Penney. Expansion from this point was much more rapid. In the five years from 1924 to 1928 inclusive, the Company opened more than 500 new stores, and in the year 1929 alone, nearly as many more were added. Today, 34 years after the first store was opened, there are nearly 1500 stores located in towns and cities in every state of the Union.

"The new Midland store will bring to the buying public of this city the benefit of the accumulated knowledge of store-keeping gained by this fast-growing company, and the advantage of low prices and high standards of quality made possible by the tremendous buying power now exercised by the Company. Purchasing in huge quantities direct from manufacturers, and the setting of definite quality specifications in the manufacture of many items; shipping direct from factory to individual store without any expensive middle-man transactions; keeping store in the simplest way, so that the customer pays only for the merchandise he buys, and not for any unnecessary frills and trimmings; these four fundamentals of chain-store operation serve to keep prices low and insure high quality standards. Midland buyers will find this system operating to their distinct advantage when the new Penney store opens."

Sayre Adds Another

A good-sized well was added yesterday to the north end of the Sayre pool by Texas-Pacific Coal & Oil Co. No. 10 Daugherty, which registered flowing production of 1,098 barrels of oil the first 24 hours after a nitro shot of 330 quarts. Located in the northeast quarter of section 2, block 26, public school land, two locations south of the recent Amerada north extension of the pool, it reached a total depth of 2,935 feet.

A mile north of the Amerada extension, Humble No. 1-D Walton last night ran 220 quarts of nitro from 2,772 to 2,930 feet, the total depth, and the shot is scheduled to be set off today. Before suspending drilling, it flowed 40 barrels of oil in six hours from pay streaks at 2,760 to 2,762 and 2,792 to 2,802. The prospective producer is in the southeast corner of section 20, block 74, public school land.

Farther south, in the Brown-Altman area of Winkler, Magnolia No. 1 Colby, direct north offset to Humble No. 4-B Walton, approaches critical depth as it drills below 2,969 feet. It is in the southeast corner of section 38, block 26, public school land.

There are unconfirmed reports that the closely watched Joiner Oil Corp. No. 1 Evans in the northwest quarter of section 46, block 73, public school land, Winkler county, topped the Yates sand at 2,935 feet with a small amount of gas being present. It is in the northeastern part of the county.

Prepare to Acidize

Tubing is being run preparatory to acidizing the latest flush producer to be brought in in the Waddell pool of northeastern Crane county, Magnolia No. 4 Edwards. The last test reported on the well showed natural production of 254 barrels in three hours. It is bottomed at 3,559 feet and logged porous lime pay at 3,542 to 3,544 and 3,550 to 3,552. Location is 1,650 feet from the south and 330 feet from the west line of section 2, block B-23, public school land, and it is a north offset to the No. 4 well, the largest yet completed in the pool.

Drill-pipe lost in the Magnolia No. 1 State-Walton has been recovered and preparations are being made to drill ahead. When held up by the fishing job, it had reached a total depth of 3,363 feet in lime. Located in section 7, block B-3, public school land, between the Sayre and Keystone pools, it is being deepened to the Keystone producing horizon after two shots in the sand zone above 3,279 developed only gas.

In southern Winkler, Gulf No. 1 E. R. Hill, a wildcat east of the Halley pool, is drilling with dry hole in lime below 3,927 feet.

Still Shut In

Gauge will probably not be started until Friday or Saturday in the W. H. Dunning and others No. 1 Scharbauer extension to the Goldsmith pool in Ector. It is now shut in while separator is being moved back to the tanks and other connections are being made. When shut in, it was estimated at 10 to 15 barrels of oil hourly. Total depth in the new well is 4,175.

The east offset to the discovery well in the Foster pool of Ector, Barnsdall No. 1 Frank Foster, is drilling anhydrite at 3,710 feet, while the recently proven south offset, Stanolind No. 1 J. E. Witcher, is still shut in for pipe line connection.

Midland Geologists To Speak at A.P.G.

Two Midland geologists, John E. Adams of the California Company and E. Obering of the Shell Company, will appear on the program of the meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists which will be held at Tulsa, Okla., March 19, 20, 21.

Adams will speak on "The Wheat Pool in Loving County", giving a technical description of the region. "The Deposition of Salt in the Permian Basin" will be the subject of the discussion to be given by Obering on the opening day of the meeting, March 19.

A number of Midland geologists plan to attend the meeting.

State-Owned Jack Will Be Exhibited

Advertisement appears today from the Texas department of agriculture with reference to the state-owned jack now located at the S. O. Golladay place east of Midland.

Golladay, who is building up the mule industry of Midland county, will exhibit this jack, also one which he owns, at Midland on Saturday, March. 21.

J. E. McDonald, state commissioner of agriculture issued the following statement with reference to the state's livestock program:

"One of our foremost ideas when I took the oath of office as Commissioner of Agriculture, was the inauguration of the Livestock Breeding Program by which I might have a part in increasing and improving the horse and mule colts on Texas farms and ranches. This was realized in January 1934, when I made the first purchase of high quality jacks and stallions for the State of Texas and began locating them in different counties. At that time, I found numerous counties over Texas witnout the service of either a jack or a stallion, and thousands of farms on which there was neither horse nor mule colts.

"I am proud to say now, however that through the efforts of this department, the value of livestock was increased more than a half million dollars during 1935 by Texas farmers and ranchmen breeding to the State jack and stallions located near them.

"I was very glad to have the opportunity of helping your county by alloting state animals for the service of your citizens."

New York City first tried traffic control by light signals in 1918. Policemen turned the lights on and off by means of levers.

Raymond L. Hughes was named radio publicity chairman, with Bill Collyns being designated to handle the newspaper end of the publicity.

The program at today's luncheon was in charge of R. C. Conkling who presented Dr. W. L. Sutton who addressed the club members and visitors on, "Optometry As Practiced By The Modern Optometrist." The progress made in optometry during the past 20 years was mentioned by the speaker in the educational address.

Announcement of the zone meeting to be held in Big Spring Friday night was made, and a one hundred per cent attendance from the local club was urged.

The women of the First Christian Church prepared and served the luncheon.
