GOP sketches plan to reform Medicare

■ In politically risky move to squeeze billions from system, Republicans outline incentives for senior citizens to switch to cheaper, private coverage; Democrats attack sharply.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a politically risky move to squeeze billions from Medicare, House Republicans outlined incentives Thursday for senior citizens to switch to cheaper, private coverage. Payments to doctors and hospitals would be curtailed if savings fail to materialize.

Seniors would see no increases in co-payments or deductibles if they keep their current coverage, according to a sketchy, four-page outline of the plan circulated by the GOP. However, premiums would rise faster than under current law.

In a break with longstanding practice, the GOP said wealthier seniors should be required to pay more than the less affluent for the traditional Medicare coverage.

And in a reflection of the political stakes, House and Senate Republicans convened formally for the first time in more than a decade. "Together, we're going to get all this done," Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said of the GOP drive to overhaul Medicare and, more broadly, balance the budget.

Democrats attacked sharply.

"The real plan is to gouge Medicare recipients in order to pay for a huge tax break for the wealth-

Auto hits, kills bicyclist, 42; scene triggers 2 accidents

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A 42-year-old Midland man — while bicycling Thursday morning on the Highway 191 service road — died after being hit by a car. Shortly afterward, two accidents followed on the main highway lanes apparently due to gawking motorists.

Ronald Eugene Goudeau was pronounced dead at the scene, on the east-bound, outside lane of the service road about one-fifth mile east of County Road 1275.

"Early indication is, he died from head injuries," said Texas Highway Patrol Trooper Robyn Wilson at the scene.

Goudeau was accompanied by two other bikers when the accident occurred about 6 a.m. "They did this two, three, four times a week," Ms. Wilson said.

The bicyclists were wearing helmets and the bikes were outfitted with headlights and rear reflectors, officials said.

The accident occurred about one-half hour before sunrise under totally overcast skies. There had been some light drizzle but the pavement was dry, officials said.

The biker was struck by a vehicle driven by Joe Munoz of Midland, officials said. Munoz was given a blood/alcohol test and the accident remained under investigation Thursday.

"We are not sure exactly the factors that contributed to the driver hitting the biker," Ms. Wilson said. "He said he just didn't see them."

As Department of Public Safety officials investigated at the scene Thursday morning, the parked car displayed a smashed windshield on the right side, while the mangled bike remained on the service road and its seat in the grassy median.

Troopers Hector Garcia and John Barton examine the car that hit a bicycle and its rider Thursday.

Following the fatality, two two-vehicle accidents — with no serious injuries — occurred on the adjacent east-bound lanes of the highway.

When a four-door vehicle, driven by Adolfo Pando, slowed either for emergency personnel or to look at the scene, it was rear-ended by a vehicle driven by John Adcock of Midland, according to Trooper John Barton.

And when Midland County sheriff deputy Dale Burns pulled his patrol car — with flashing lights — onto the roadway to investigate, a four-door pickup, driven by George Nieto of Monahans, rear-ended the law- enforcement vehicle.

Housing project makes waves with lakefront-property parcels

By Gary Shanks

Lakefront property in Midland? It's coming — thanks to an ambitious housing project bringing together the city of Midland, Cap Rock Electric and the Montana Cree Indians.

The Montana Cree Tribal Council purchased a large block of land north of Midland about 10 years ago and have been waiting for the right project and the right time to utilize the purchase, said Margaret White, council representative.

Ms. White and Cap Rock officials spoke at a press conference Thursday announcing the new project that eventually will lead to about 1,500 new homes, a lake and amphitheater adjacent to north Midland.

An announcement party is scheduled for next month, said Ms. White, who initially proposed the development to the council.

Federal Judge Wayne Alley rejects a request from both the defense and the prosecution that he step aside.

Okla. bombing judge refuses to step aside, but moves trial

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The judge in the Oklahoma bombing case rejected a request that he step aside Thursday but ordered the trial moved to a smaller town 90 miles away to ensure the jury a place for "detached and dispassionate deliberation."

"Jury selection from a pool in the Oklahoma City area would be chancy," U.S. District Judge Wayne Alley said.

Both the defense and the prosecution had wanted Alley to remove himself in favor of a judge who was farther from the April 19 blast, which ripped apart the federal building and damaged Alley's chambers in the courthouse across the street.

"The allegations of bias and the appearance of lack of impartiality presented by the defendants are lacking," Alley said. "Preparing for and trying this case will be a difficult task in the coming months, and I cannot

Long ride ends for best-seller 'Bridges'

By David Foster
Associated Press

Shamanlike, the slim, hard book appeared as if from nowhere, promising love-starved readers a passion they'd never felt before. By the time it left, like the highway and a peregrine and all the sails that ever went to sea, it had changed their lives forever.

Translation: "The Bridges of Madison County" by Robert James Waller is dropping off The New York Times best-seller list after a near-record 162 weeks.

The waning of "Bridges" mania was observed with wistful sighs by fans and sighs of relief by sophisticates who sneer at the book's, shall we say, lack of literary finesse.

The novel about an Iowa farm wife's affair with a roving National Geographic photographer has sold 10 million copies worldwide since April 1992, according to Warner Books.

"Bridges" turned an unknown writer into a multimillionaire and made Madison County, Iowa, an international tourist attraction. And that was before things really got hot with the June release of the "Bridges" movie, starring Clint Eastwood and Meryl Streep as Robert Kincaid and Francesca Johnson.

"It wasn't just a best seller," says Charles McGrath, the Times' book-review

United Nations announces suspension of airstrikes against Serbs

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The United Nations announced a three-day suspension of NATO airstrikes against Serb targets Thursday after Bosnian Serb leaders agreed to withdraw heavy weapons ringing Sarajevo.

The airstrikes will resume if the Serbs fail to withdraw the weapons, the United Nations said in a statement in New York.

Bosnian Serb military and political leaders signed an agreement in Belgrade "in which they committed themselves to withdraw their heavy weapons from the 20-kilometer (12.5-mile) exclusion zone around Sarajevo," the statement said.

"NATO and United Nations military commanders have judged this to be an appropriate response to the demands by the United Nations," the statement said.

In response, NATO and U.N. military commanders declared the 3-day suspension, the statement said.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic and military commander Gen. Ratko Mladic signed the agreement, a U.N. official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The Bosnian government will be asked to refrain from any military offensives during the suspension, the official said.

During the suspension, humanitarian aid convoys will travel to Sarajevo on two roads through Serb territory that have been closed and it is expected that Sarajevo airport will be re-opened without restrictions, the statement said.

U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke on Thursday raced across the Balkans for meetings with top officials, trying to clinch the agreement.

The agreement significantly advances the beleaguered effort to bring 3 1/2 years of bloodshed in Bosnia to an end and will allow NATO to move back from its openly aggressive stance, which has the Serbs bristling.

It also eases tensions between the United States and Russia, which was enraged by the bombing campaign, and adds impetus to mediators' efforts, which gained momentum last week with an accord among Bosnia's warring parties over a possible future political arrangement.

Muslim-led government forces and Croat allies persisted meanwhile in their ground campaign, easily capturing several key towns. Tens of thousands of Serb civilians were reportedly fleeing the advance.

Earlier this week, Moscow accused NATO of committing genocide against the Serbs. Strobe Talbott, the U.S. deputy secretary of state, was in Moscow on Thursday to try to mend relations.

Before Thursday night's U.N. statement, sources in Washington said the United States had gained a pledge from Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, who is negotiating for the Bosnian Serbs, that the heavy weapons would be pulled out. U.S. State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns said both Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic and military commander Gen. Ratko Mladic had attended part of the meeting and that they supported the plan.

The deal reportedly calls for U.N. inspection of both Bosnian Serb and government weapons. Other sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the plan also called for a cease-fire in the Sarajevo area, and guarantees that the Serbs would be protected from government attack.

A senior Bosnian Serb leader, Momcilo Krajisnik, told Bosnian Serb TV late Thursday that a deal had been struck, under which the Serb weapons would be put under outside control rather than withdrawn.

Holbrooke, the U.S. envoy, shuttled from Belgrade, where he met for 11 hours with Milosevic overnight, to Zagreb for meetings with Croatian President Franjo Tudjman, and on to the western Bosnian city of Mostar on Thursday for talks with Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic.

Holbrooke's plans call for the Muslim-led government and its Croat allies to get 51 percent of Bosnia, and the Serbs, who now have about two-thirds, to get 49 percent. But there still is broad disagreement on who gets what land.

The future of Sarajevo is a key to the negotiations over territory. The government insists it must have all of the capital, while the Serbs, who have surrounded the city and held part of it since April 1992, want a piece.

Government and Croat forces advanced rapidly in western Bosnia this week, capturing a series of towns that likely would be given to them in a peace deal. The key towns of Jajce, Donji Vakuf and Bosanski Petrovac all have fallen. Bosnian radio reported the capture of another town, Kulen Vakuf.

Red Cross officials, meanwhile, said Thursday that about 8,000 Muslims are missing from Srebrenica, the first U.N. "safe area" overrun by Bosnian Serb troops in July.

Among those are 3,000 people, mostly men, who were seen being separated and arrested by Bosnian Serb troops as the city fell.

Srebrenica survivors have accused the Serbs of widespread war crimes, including mass killings of civilians and rapes.

Hurricane Marilyn continues year's destructive trend among islands

FORT-DE-FRANCE, Martinique (AP) — The fourth hurricane to hit the Caribbean in as many weeks — this one named Marilyn — raced westward on Thursday, menacing islands from Barbados to Puerto Rico.

Marilyn threatened to brush past St. Martin, the Dutch-French island devastated by Hurricane Luis last week.

This year's hurricane season is one of the busiest on record, according to the U.S. National Hurricane Center in Miami. There were 14 named tropical storms and hurricanes by Sept. 14 in 1936 and 1993; this year has seen 13.

With 2 1/2 months to go, the season that began June 1 seems set to maintain the frenetic pace set by Hurricane Erin, followed by Hurricane Felix, Tropical Storm Iris and Hurricane Luis. The season runs until Nov. 30.

Heavy seas and rain squalls hit Martinique's north coast on Thursday, and the airport, schools and some businesses were closed as Marilyn passed just northeast of the French island.

Winds up to 80 mph bent coconut trees and ripped off their palm fronds, littering the streets of Fort-de-France, the capital.

Scattered power outages were reported. Some residents in low-lying areas were evacuated to shelters.

Next in line was Dominica, which lost 90 percent of its vital banana crop to Hurricane Luis last week. Schools, businesses and government offices closed as skies darkened and rain pelted the island.

Earlier Thursday, Marilyn damaged 22 homes, downed power lines and uprooted trees in Barbados, about 150 miles southeast of Martinique, said Clive Lord of the Barbados government's Central Emergency Relief Organization. No injuries were immediately reported.

Southern Barbados, where most of the island's tourist resorts are located, was unaffected.

Hurricane warnings were posted as far west as Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands and as far north as the Dutch half of St. Martin. Forecasters urged boaters to secure their vessels by this morning.

Luis sank 200 boats among hundreds that sought safe harbor in St. Martin last week.

In Puerto Rico, Gov. Pedro Rossello announced that banks will be open only until 11 a.m. today and that schools, universities and government offices will be closed. The National Weather Service's San Juan office urged people to take the warning seriously, fearing they might ignore it because of the number of storms.

It was too soon to say whether Marilyn posed a potential danger to the U.S. mainland.

At 8 p.m. EDT, Marilyn's center was near the French island of Guadeloupe, according to the National Hurricane Center in Miami. Marilyn was moving toward the northwest at nearly 15 mph.

Hurricane-force winds extended up to 30 miles from the center, with tropical storm-force winds in a band up to 90 miles beyond that.

The National Hurricane Center said Marilyn was bringing 5 to 8 inches of rain, posing the threat of flash floods and mudslides.

Major quake rocks southern Mexico; 4 deaths reported

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A strong earthquake destroyed scores of buildings in southern Mexico on Thursday and shook the nerves of a region preparing to commemorate the 10th anniversary of a disastrous 1985 quake.

At least one child was killed. But officials said they could not confirm a report of three other deaths because there were no communications with the remote mountain village, 70 miles east of Acapulco and 190 miles southeast of Mexico City.

A 72-year-old man died of a heart attack at the time of the quake in the town of San Juan Colorado, in Oaxaca state, according to the state government.

Well over 200 adobe houses in the southwestern states of Oaxaca and Guerrero suffered shattered walls or collapsed roofs from the force of the quake, the largest in Mexico since an 8.1 quake struck on Sept. 19, 1985.

Tens of thousands of Mexico City residents, some shouting and others weeping with fear, fled into the streets of the capital when the ground began to roll with a sea-like motion at 8:04 a.m. (10:04 a.m. EDT).

The waves of the quake, centered near the Oaxaca-Guerrero state border about 190 miles south-southeast of Mexico City, lasted for nearly a minute.

Earthquake centers in Mexico and the United States measured it at magnitude 7.2 to 7.3. An earthquake of a 7 magnitude is a major quake capable of widespread heavy damage when centered in a heavily populated area.

At least seven small aftershocks of up to 4 magnitude followed within the first hour, according to Mexico's National Seismological Service.

A falling wall killed an 8-year-old boy in the town of San Isidro Ometepec, said town secretary Carlos Pina Arzate.

Airstrikes antagonize Russians toward West

Editor's note: Debbie Seward, Associated Press news editor in Moscow, has covered Russia and the former Soviet Union since 1988.

By Deborah Seward
Associated Press

■ News analysis

MOSCOW — The NATO bombing of Bosnian Serbs has aroused the Russian bear to anger like no other issue since the end of the Cold War and is stirring suspicion and antagonism toward the West.

Russian officials have condemned the bombing campaign as genocide, lawmakers have volunteered to act as "human shields" and the public, largely apathetic about most political issues, opposes the airstrikes.

At the heart of Russia's emotional response to the fate of the Serbs is deep dismay over its perceived loss of great power status and a feeling that NATO is intruding on what Russia historically has considered to be its sphere of influence. Although Russia has no direct strategic interests in the Balkans, cultural and religious ties go back hundreds of years.

Russian leaders also are frustrated by the failure of their diplomatic efforts and complain that the West has ignored their proposals to end the war.

"Russia IS PUSHED TO THE SIDE, is not allowed to FULLY PARTICIPATE in Balkan affairs and that encroaches on its GREAT POWER status," the weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta wrote, using capital letters to emphasize its dismay.

"You can understand that the United States always wants to be number one in the world. They have a lot of money and we're flat broke."

The bombing appears to have pushed Russia — already nervous about NATO plans to expand into former Warsaw Pact countries — closer to the edge.

Some Russian media have suggested the CIA was behind the attack on the Sarajevo marketplace last month that led to the bombings.

The communist newspaper Pravda published a story Thursday about Bosnia with the ominous headline: "Today Serbia, Tomorrow Russia."

President Boris Yeltsin and his unpopular government have tried to capitalize on public outrage over the bombing, which has been widely condemned by parliament, the public and Yeltsin's enemies.

Yet on Thursday, Yeltsin vetoed a bill calling for Russia to unilaterally drop U.N. sanctions against Serb-led Yugoslavia, and another that would have imposed a trade embargo on Croatia as punishment for what the lower house of parliament called its "genocide against the Serbian people."

The presidential press service said only that Yeltsin felt the bills did not "conform to international or Russian law.

But the vetoes came at the same time NATO called a halt to its airstrikes amid word from Clinton administration officials that a deal was close for the Bosnian Serbs to withdraw their heavy weapons from around Sarajevo.

Deputy U.S. Secretary of State Strobe Talbott also was in Moscow on Thursday, where he reportedly conferred with Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev for more than three hours.

50-50 chance of rain on tap today

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for cloudy skies with a 50 percent chance of rain, a high in the upper 70s and east winds at 10-15 mph. Tonight should be cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain and a low in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain and a high in the lower to mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 66, Thursday's high reached 72, compared to the record high for that date of 99 set in 1965. The record low was 51 set in 1993.

STATE

An upper-level disturbance helped trigger widespread rain and thunderstorms across North Texas Wednesday night, with forecasters expecting the precipitation to continue until the weekend.

The National Weather Service had numerous reports of one-inch rainfall, with over three inches reported in Eastland and Rising Star.

Meanwhile, a slow-moving frontal boundary continued moving southward, producing showers and thunderstorms across much of Central and South Texas.

Scattered showers and a few thunderstorms lingered across the Concho Valley and Edwards Plateau, extending to the Davis Mountains of West Texas.

High temperatures ranged from the high 60s in the mountains to 90s in the south. Winds were mostly variable at 5 to 15 mph.

Forecasters expected a chance of showers or thunderstorms to continue through today across most sections of the state.

Overnight lows should range from the 60s to 70s, with daytime highs from the 80s to 90s.

NATION

Thunderstorms drenched the Southeast and the Northeast on Thursday, while the West stayed warm and dry.

Strong thunderstorms extended from Tennessee into eastern Alabama, northern Georgia and across the central Gulf Coast. Some areas reported 1 to 2 inches of rain in a few hours.

In the 24 hours ending at midafternoon, up to 3 inches of rain fell in parts of Alabama and Tennessee, and up to an inch or more fell in Georgia, where wind gusted to 40 mph in Warner Robins.

Farther north, rain was scattered from Maine through New Jersey and Pennsylvania, and thunderstorm winds downed trees and power lines in central New York.

The West remained generally dry. Desert areas warmed to near 100 degrees by noon, and there was dense morning fog along parts of the California coast.

Hurricane Marilyn was menacing islands from Barbados to Puerto Rico, while Hurricane Ismael was churning along the western Mexican coast off the southern tip of Baja California.

Ismael was forecast to bring moisture into eastern Arizona, New Mexico and western Texas.

Rain was possible in the southern Rockies and parts of southern Arizona and southwestern Texas, as well as farther north in southwestern Oregon and northern California.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

BRIDGES: Book leaves best-sellers after 162 weeks

editor. "It became a huge phenomenon."

"Bridges" hit the Times' top-20 list of hardcover fiction in August 1992 and has stayed there longer than any work of fiction since "The Robe," a novel about Jesus' crucifixion, which lasted 178 weeks in the early 1950s.

"Bridges" falls from the Sept. 24 list, which reflects sales in bookstores nationwide during the week ending Sept. 9. (It has yet to fall from lists kept by The Wall Street Journal and Publisher's Weekly.)

"Bridges" won't be missed by critics who skewered it as florid and cliche-ridden.

"Mr. Waller depicts their mating dance in plodding detail, but he fails to develop them as believable characters," Eils Lotozo wrote in the Times in 1993. "Instead, we get a lot of quasi-mystical business about the shamanlike photographer who overwhelms the shy, bookish Francesca with 'his sheer emotional and physical power.'"

The story worked powerful magic on Cyndy and Allen Campbell of Valparaiso, Ind. "It was romantic," says Cyndy, 43, who read the book aloud to Allen, 52, during a road trip last summer. "It was touching."

So touching that two months later, the couple traveled to Winterset, Iowa, to get married on a covered bridge described in the book.

At least 30 couples have wed on Madison County's covered bridges in the past year.

Around Winterset, population 4,200, tourists arrive by the busloads, buying "Bridges" T-shirts, perfume and postcards. In July, more than 10,000 visitors signed in at the Chamber of Commerce office, where they could use restrooms marked "Roberts" and "Francescas."

The message from Winterset: Write no epitaph for "The Bridges of Madison County." One hundred bus tours will hit town next month, and the county's 26th annual covered-bridge festival is coming up Oct. 14-15.

"I think we're just going to blow the doors off this year," Chamber of Commerce director Doug Hawley says. "I think it's going to go bananas."

LAKEFRONT: Project calls for 10,000-seat amphitheater opment is modeled after a very similar and successful project and will be unlike any other housing area in West Texas.

(From 1A)

"This development will be patterned after a successful project in Las Vegas," Ms. White said.

Cap Rock was selected to provide electricity and to assist in the planning of the new project. "The Montana Tribal Council has been waiting for the right project," said Don Tollison, Cap Rock customer service manager.

"They did not want to simply develop the land; they wanted it to be a trophy — something that would reflect positively on the tribe," Tollison said.

The Montana Cree are a wealthy tribe of about 500 in Canada who purchased the land years ago as an investment. There are no natural ties between the tribe and West Texas, Ms. White said.

This trophy project is a 10-year plan that will include a 55-acre, man-made lake and a 10,000-seat amphitheater that will provide recreation and entertainment for the entire Permian Basin.

The lake will spread canal-like through the new housing development, allowing for 980 waterfront homes, Ms. White said.

Project officials already are making arrangements with international promoters to bring performing artists and Broadway shows to the amphitheater, she said.

Ms. White said she is so impressed with the plans that she is considering buying a future retirement home in the Desert Shores development.

"I've been coming to Midland for years — I love the people here ... I heard that per capita, more boats are sold here in Midland — and I couldn't find the water," she said jokingly.

While not large enough for speed boats, the new lake will provide a great area for canoes and other crafts. Paddle boats will be rented near the Desert Shores Center.

The center will include boutiques and upscale restaurants and the lake will be designed using the latest science to ensure that the water remains pure blue and no bad odors occur on the lake shore habitat, she said.

Construction is scheduled to begin in the spring; project officials expect to have the lake completed within one year.

The official announcement gala is set for Oct. 8 at Midland Center. The Midland/Odessa Symphony Orchestra will perform with guest conductor Larry White of Las Vegas.

Rated as one of the top conductors in the world, White has conducted and composed for television and on Broadway, according to Ms. White, wife of the composer.

Among White's credits are appearances at the Academy Awards, "The Tonight Show," "David Letterman" and the "Wide World of Sports." He is one of the few in the field to earn Tony and Emmy nominations, organizers said.

Also at the gala, the long-running Las Vegas show "Legends in Concert" will be performed.

This gala will be attended by 500 invited guests from the Permian Basin, Lubbock, Canada and Mexico, Ms. White said.

TRIAL: Bombing case judge refuses to step aside merely ask another judge to shoulder the burden when the law does not require that."

Alley conceded, however, that the trial should not be held in the Oklahoma City courthouse. He ruled that former GIs Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols will go on trial May 17 in Lawton, an Army town near the Texas state line.

"The United State courthouse in Oklahoma City is too close to the bombing target," he said.

Lawton, he said, "is close enough to be convenient for local witnesses and for affected persons who want to be spectators. It is far enough to provide a trial setting appropriate for detached and dispassionate deliberation."

Lawton, which is home to the Army's Fort Sill, has a population of about 85,000. About 20,000 soldiers are stationed at Fort Sill.

"I have tried cases in Lawton and from those experiences have formed a high regard for the quality of jurors in that area," Alley said. "They have been solid and good people who undertook their juror responsibilities in the spirit of public duty soberly performed."

McVeigh's lawyer, Stephen Jones, said he was "deeply disturbed" by the judge's decision to remain on the case and hold the trial in Oklahoma. He said he may appeal.

Nichols' lawyer, Michael Tigar, said he would appeal Alley's decision to remain on the case and hold the trial in Oklahoma.

"No forum in Oklahoma appears to us to guarantee the kind of trial that the Constitution requires and the American people demand," Tigar said.

U.S. Attorney Patrick Ryan was out of the office and could not immediately reached be for comment.

Alley was not in the courthouse when the federal building was bombed, but his chambers and courtroom were damaged.

Attorneys for McVeigh and Nichols had argued that Alley was too affected by the bombing to remain impartial. Prosecutors disagreed but asked the judge to step aside anyway to avoid repeated court battles over the issue.

The defense had sought to move the case out of Oklahoma and wanted a judge from outside the federal Western District of Oklahoma. Prosecutors wanted to keep the case in Oklahoma but were willing to see it moved out of Oklahoma City.

SKETCHES: GOP outlines proposal to alter Medicare

iest Americans," charged House Democratic leader Dick Gephardt of Missouri. At the White House, President Clinton added, "They want to charge the elderly people of this country more money and put that into the tax cut. Now that is the truth."

House Speaker Newt Gingrich accused Democrats of spreading "lie after lie," and said changes in Medicare were necessary to stave off insolvency for the gigantic program that provides health insurance for 37 million elderly and disabled.

Democrats, he said, are trying to frighten the elderly, a tactic that he said shows how "totally morally bankrupt the modern Democratic Party is."

The Republican plan for a balanced budget calls for $270 billion in savings from Medicare over seven years, along with an additional $180 billion in savings from Medicaid, the program that provides health care to the poor. Leading lawmakers in the House and Senate are laboring separately to prepare legislation for votes in the two houses in the next few weeks.

Despite the fast-paced schedule, the four-page outline released by the House Republicans offered only the skimpiest details. It offered no calculation to demonstrate how the $270 billion in savings would be realized, for example, and offered few details about the increased costs for wealthier recipients choosing to keep the coverage they now have.

The political risks were high for the Republicans, whose predecessors voted against Medicare when it was created under Democratic sponsorship 30 years ago.

Elected to power last fall after 40 years in the minority, Republicans have spent months preparing the ground for their plan, stressing that Medicare's hospital trust fund is projected to go broke by 2002 without changes.

Even so, said Republican pollster William McInturff in an interview, "it's still a very, very dangerous topic that has to be approached with great caution."

Clinton has called for saving $124 billion from Medicare, but he has not submitted a detailed legislative proposal. Republicans claim the White House budget, to hit its spending targets, would actually require $192 billion in savings.

Republican officials said some details of their plan were still being worked out. They added they were awaiting final word from the Congressional Budget Office, the agency charged with making official calculations on the impact of the changes in policy.

The outline recommends several alternatives to the current Medicare coverage.

Seniors could opt for a new plan, dubbed Medicare Plus, under which private companies would offer insurance plans that might feature lower costs than the government program, or greater benefits, possibly including prescription drugs or eyeglasses. All such plans would have to offer a minimum benefit package equal to that of Medicare.

A second alternative would permit seniors to establish a "medical savings account." The government would provide a fixed amount of money to the individual, who would receive health coverage through a policy for catastrophic illness. This would mean a low premium and high deductible. Routine health care costs would be paid from the savings account, and the senior would be permitted to keep some of the money left at the end of the year.

A third alternative would permit doctors and hospitals to offer coverage without the insurance companies or managed-care companies as intermediaries.

To further hold down costs, the Republicans proposed giving the government authority to reward seniors who report incidents of waste, fraud and abuse. Other proposals would ban subsidies for doctor training programs for noncitizens; and curtail payments for training student doctors in highly specialized fields. As with other parts of the proposal, no details were disclosed.

If the changes fail to produce the savings required, the government would cut back on the payments made under the traditional fee-for-service Medicare program to doctors, hospitals and other health care providers. The outline offered no details about how this would work.

Highlights of Republican plan

By The Associated Press

Highlights of the Republican Party's outline of a plan to save money from Medicare:

- Seniors could opt for a new plan, called Medicare Plus, under which private companies would offer insurance plans that might feature lower costs that the government program, or greater benefits, possibly including prescription drugs or eyeglasses. All such plans would have to offer a minimum benefit package equal to that of Medicare.
- Seniors would be able to establish a "medical savings account." The government would provide a fixed amount of money to the individual, who would receive health coverage through a policy for catastrophic illness. This would mean a low premium and high deductible. Routine health care costs would be paid from the savings account, and the senior would be permitted to keep some of the money left at the end of the year.
- Doctors and hospitals could offer coverage without the insurance companies or managed-care companies as intermediaries.
- Average per beneficiary spending would rise from $4,800 in 1996 to $6,700 in 2002; no change in co-payments; no change in deductibles.
- Single seniors with incomes over $75,000 and couples with incomes over $150,000 will begin to pay higher premiums instead of receiving a subsidy from the taxpayers.
- Within the fee-for-service Medicare program, the plan sets spending growth rates for in-patient hospital services, physician services, home health care, durable medical equipment and laboratory services. Each year the secretary of health and human services would determine if the level of services being provided will exceed designated spending growth. If so, the secretary would change the payment updates to guarantee that spending growth is not excessive and that Medicare would remain solvent.

Citations were issued to Nieto and Adcock for failure to control speed, he said.

The only injury suffered was by the deputy, who complained of neck pains, officials said.

Two of the vehicles didn't fare as well. "The damage was extensive on the two vehicles that were rear-ended," Barton said.

Women's conference concludes with plan for partnership between sexes

BEIJING (AP) — The world's biggest women's gathering was ending today as it began: with calls for solidarity, heartfelt hopes for change — and reminders that even a common cause can bring uncommon discord.

The Fourth World Conference on Women — two weeks of official U.N. meetings preceded by a free-wheeling week of seminars and protests in a muddy tent city outside Beijing — was poised to approve an ambitious plan to forge a new partnership between the world's men and women.

But as the 5,000 delegates discovered, agreeing on how to go about that wasn't easy.

Despite unity on the overriding goal — bettering everyone's lives by bettering the lives of women — divisions on specific points sparked passionate, sometimes painful arguments among the 189 member states.

Lesbian rights were debated for the first time at the U.N. level, but were dropped from the final draft early today. More last-minute bargaining took place over whether human rights and sexual freedoms should vary according to religious and cultural traditions.

The full conference was to vote on the document later today and then adjourn.

The final 150-page platform was a sprawling affair, seeking to cut across lines of class and culture to touch lives as diverse as those of an African village dweller and an American working woman.

The language might have been bureaucratic, but for women the world over, the issues were vivid and immediate.

The platform denounced systematic rape as a weapon of war and called for an end to trafficking in women. It spoke out for more women in decision-making roles, and worked to balance the rights of children and their parents. It urged equal inheritance rights and decried on-the-job sexual harassment.

"This is an important document for women, for our daughters, for the next century," said U.S. delegate Linda Tarr-Whelan.

For China, the conference was an object lesson in being careful of what you wish for — lest it come true.

The Beijing government had hungered for the prestige of hosting a high-profile international event. But during the gathering, it reacted angrily to criticism, and at times subjected conference participants to security intrusive by world standards, though not approaching the zeal with which it polices its own citizens.

As the conference was drawing to a close, the government's sigh of relief was almost audible.

"We're delighted we have successfully fulfilled our obligation to the U.N.," Foreign Ministry spokesman Chen Jian told reporters Thursday.

For all the debate and discussion, it appeared few minds were changed in Beijing. Many appeared set to leave with the same opinions as when they arrived.

Throughout the conference, predominantly Catholic countries often teamed up with mostly Muslim nations to fight provisions they believe would encourage immorality, including any mention of homosexuality.

The Sudanese minister for social planning, Mariam Osman, told reporters she was distressed that what she termed "absolute sexual rights" would be in the platform — apparently referring to a provision calling for women's sexual choices to be made free from violence, coercion or discrimination.

About two dozen countries said they would lodge objections in some form to that part of the platform, which is non-binding but intended to serve as a guide for governments.

The Vatican — which kept a low profile but lobbied hard behind the scenes — consistently described the platform as anti-family, and was particularly critical of the platform's section on health.

Former Russian ambassador reveals undiplomatic details in memoirs

By Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — For the KGB bodyguard, keeping watch while the leader of the Kremlin slept in a guest room of the "Western White House," it must have been an awkward moment: Marching up to him was a sleepwalking Pat Nixon, arms outstretched, clad only in a nightgown.

Former Kremlin Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin was Moscow's man in Washington for 24 Cold War years — through the terms of five Soviet leaders and the Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, Ford, Carter and Reagan presidencies. He tells the story of the sleepwalking first lady in newly published memoirs, "In Confidence," in which he spills some undiplomatic beans.

He also reports Ronald Reagan's reaction when told that the ambassador had been recalled by Moscow and promoted to the Communist Party Central Committee.

"Is he really a communist?" the "amazed" Reagan asked, according to Dobrynin.

And the ambassador says that in the election of 1968, Kremlin leaders were so fearful of victory by the stridently anti-communist Nixon that they directed Dobrynin to offer money to Nixon's Democratic rival, Vice President Hubert Humphrey.

Dobrynin resisted this intrusion into the politics of another country, but the Kremlin insisted. Dutifully, he said, he made the offer obliquely over breakfast at Humphrey's home.

Humphrey declined; the matter was never again mentioned.

Dobrynin was a Washington institution. He probably ate as many White House meals as many Cabinet officers. He became the friend — even the confidant — of presidents and a back-channel conduit between the two Cold War capitals. He reported that Nixon and aide Henry Kissinger told Dobrynin things they would not even share with the secretary of state, William P. Rogers.

Former British diplomat Nicholas Henderson calls the book "surely the most revealing account of the 40 years of the Cold War to have come out of Russia."

Historians will take note of Dobrynin's contention that, "sadly for the followers of Reagan," it was not the strain of matching Reagan's huge arms buildup that led to the collapse of the Soviet empire.

"We did not bankrupt ourselves in the arms race as the Caspar Weinbergers (former defense secretary) would like to believe," he wrote. "The troubles in our economy were the result of our own internal contradictions."

Spicier is Dobrynin's account of Pat Nixon's sleepwalking at San Clemente, Calif., during Nixon's first term.

"Around 2 a.m.," the ambassador wrote, Soviet Communist Party chief Leonid Brezhnev's bodyguard, "standing watch near his bedroom in the courtyard just across from Nixon's apartment, saw the door of the president's quarters open. His wife Pat appeared in a long nightgown, her hands stretched forward and her eyes fixed in the distance, apparently in some kind of trance.

"She reached our bodyguard and stopped, saying nothing. The guard attempted to turn Mrs. Nixon around, but she refused to move and stood stiffly. After some hesitation, the Soviet guard, an officer of the KGB, took Mrs. Nixon in his arms and carried her back to the room from which she had just emerged; it was her bedroom.

"He put her back in bed, and at just that moment the Secret Service arrived. They waved, smiled and said to our man, 'OK, OK, thanks.' They did not seem all that surprised."

In an interview, Dr. Jamie Whyte, associate director of the Sleep Disorder Center at New York's Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center, questioned Dobrynin's version.

"It could be a case of sleepwalking but that would not be likely," Whyte said. "Most adult sleepwalkers are considerably younger than Mrs. Nixon would have been. Sleepwalking with arms extended is more fiction than fact, but that's not to say it could not occur."

During the same visit, Dobrynin wrote, Brezhnev "got tight" on Nixon's liquor and started complaining to Nixon about his scheming Kremlin comrades. Dobrynin had to translate. "It was the most bizarre situation in all my years of diplomacy," he said.

The next morning, the boss confronted his envoy: "Anatoly, did I talk too much yesterday?"

"I told him he had talked too much but I had been careful not to translate everything."

War pilot is victim of peacetime balloon-shooting incident

By Evan Perez
Associated Press

MIAMI — John Stuart-Jervis survived the most perilous of assignments as a British Royal Navy pilot.

From the Suez Canal crisis of 1956, when his plane was shot down by Egyptian forces, to jungle warfare in Southeast Asia, "he was always where the trouble was," said his wife, Caroline.

On Tuesday, the retired aviator was killed when his sport balloon was shot down by the Belarussian military during an international race.

"Ever since he was old enough to fly, he did," Mrs. Stuart-Jervis said Thursday in a telephone interview from her home in Naples. "If he had to go, I know in my heart this is the way he would want to go."

Stuart-Jervis, 68, and another pilot, Alan Fraenckel, 55, both of St. Croix, U.S. Virgin Islands, were killed.

Belarussian authorities said the balloonists failed to respond to warning shots and to radio demands for identification. Another balloon landed safely, and its occupants, also Americans, were taken into custody by the Belarussians.

Mrs. Stuart-Jervis said she doesn't believe the Belarussian explanation. "They shot down defenseless people," she said.

"They owe the world an apology. They owe all the balloonists in this world an apology," Fraenckel's cousin Rebecca Dale said in Scotia, N.Y., where Fraenckel's father lives.

Stuart-Jervis and Fraenckel were representing the U.S. Virgin Islands in the annual Gordon Bennett gas-balloon race, a contest to see which balloon can fly the farthest. The balloons took off from Switzerland, drifting across the continent.

Fraenckel, a former Navy pilot, worked for TWA and had flown for the airline for 27 years.

"He flew competitive events whenever he could. He arranged his flight schedule with airplanes so he could be home to go to the events," said balloonist Frank Bowlander, who lived near Fraenckel's second home in Ballston Lake, north of Albany.

Mrs. Stuart-Jervis said her husband took up ballooning six years ago as an extension of his love of flying. Although she didn't share his passion for flying, the fact he was a pilot sealed her love for him.

"Flyboys are always so romantic," she said.

She said her husband fought in Malay and Borneo after World War II and later Vietnam. After his plane was shot down over Egypt in 1956, he ejected from his aircraft and landed in the water, where he was rescued by French forces, his wife said.

The two were married in 1959, and she nervously watched him go off to various dangerous assignments around the world until he retired from the British Navy in 1968. They moved to the United States a year later.

Stuart-Jervis lived at their home in St. Croix so he could represent the islands in the race, while she temporarily moved to Naples to work as a real estate agent.

U.S. WORKERS WITH ON-THE-JOB EXPOSURE TO FUNDAL® MAY BE ELIGIBLE FOR FREE MEDICAL MONITORING AND/OR CASH PAYMENTS UNDER THIS PROPOSED LEGAL SETTLEMENT.

PRICE SETTLEMENT CLASS MEMBERS ARE ALL U.S. WORKERS WITH ON-THE-JOB EXPOSURE TO GALECRON® (INCLUDING GALECRON® AND FUNDAL®) WHO DID NOT EXCLUDE THEMSELVES FROM THE PRICE SETTLEMENT. PRICE SETTLEMENT CLASS MEMBERS MAY BE ELIGIBLE FOR CASH SUPPLEMENTS UNDER THIS PROPOSED LEGAL SETTLEMENT.

PLEASE READ THIS NOTICE CAREFULLY. YOU MAY BELONG TO A CLASS OF PEOPLE COVERED BY A PROPOSED SETTLEMENT OF A LEGAL ACTION ("WOODWARD SETTLEMENT"). THE WOODWARD SETTLEMENT MAY AFFECT YOUR LEGAL RIGHTS. FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 1-800-211-6913

By Order of the Court, a class action has been conditionally certified for settlement purposes. On January 9, 1996, a fairness hearing will be held at the Courthouse, United States District Court, Southern District of Alabama, 113 St. Joseph Street, Mobile, Alabama, 36602, at 9 a.m. Central Time, so the Court can determine if the class action should be finally certified and if the Woodward Settlement, as summarized in this Notice, should be approved as fair, reasonable and adequate. Although participation in this settlement is voluntary, all Woodward Settlement Class Members who do not timely exclude themselves from the lawsuit will be bound by the Woodward Settlement if it is approved.

I. DEFINITION OF CLASS

Under the Woodward Settlement, Fundal® is defined as chlordimeform or any chlordimeform-containing product, either manufactured, formulated, packaged, distributed or sold by or on behalf of NOR-AM Chemical Company ("NOR-AM") or related parties, regardless of the trade name of the product; or any metabolite of Fundal®, including the substances known as 4-COT or 5-CAT. Galecron® has the same meaning as it did in the Price v. Ciba-Geigy Corp., Civ. No. 94-0647-CB-S (S.D. Ala. 1995), Settlement ("Price Settlement"), and is thus defined as chlordimeform or any chlordimeform-containing product, either manufactured, formulated, packaged, distributed or sold by or on behalf of Ciba-Geigy Corporation or related parties, regardless of the trade name of the product; or any metabolite of Galecron®, including the substances known as 4-COT or 5-CAT.

The Woodward Settlement Class is defined as:

(1) All persons who fall into one of the following categories, and who reside in the United States as of the date of filing of the Class Action Complaint, who have been exposed in the United States to Fundal® only, but not to Fundal® and Galecron® or to Galecron® only ("NOR-AM Exposed Persons"):

a. Formulators: An individual (whether or not employed by NOR-AM Chemical Company) who in the course of his or her employment was exposed to Fundal® while at a plant or site which was involved in mixing, blending, packaging, handling or otherwise formulating pesticides which contained, in whole or in part, Fundal®;

b. Applicators: An individual (whether or not employed by NOR-AM Chemical Company) who in the course of his or her employment, was exposed to Fundal® while involved in the application of pesticides which contained, in whole or in part, Fundal®, including, without limitation, aerial and land applicators, flagmen, mixers, blenders, loaders and other individuals who handled such pesticide prior to or during the application process; or

c. Other Covered Workers: (i) An individual employed by NOR-AM Chemical Company who, in the course of his or her employment, was exposed to Fundal®; (ii) an individual who worked at Empak, Inc. in Deer Park, Texas and/or Micro Chemical in Louisiana and who was exposed to Fundal® in the course of his or her employment; (iii) or an individual who worked in a testing or research laboratory and who was exposed to Fundal® in the course of his or her employment; or

(2) The spouses, parents, children, other relatives, or legal representatives of the NOR-AM Exposed Persons described above.

(3) All members of the Price Settlement Class. The Price Settlement Class means all members of the settlement class certified by the court in Price v. Ciba-Geigy Corp., Civ. No. 94-0647-CB-S (S.D. Ala. 1995), excluding persons determined by the court to be opt-outs of that class. That settlement class thus includes persons residing in the United States who in the course of their employment were exposed to Galecron® or to Galecron® and Fundal® ("Ciba Exposed Persons"); and the spouses, parents, children, other relatives, or legal representatives of the Ciba Exposed Persons described above.

(Collectively "Woodward Settlement Class Members"). Note: If you are an NOR-AM Exposed Person or a Ciba Exposed Person, you are a Woodward Settlement Class Member whether or not you have been diagnosed with an illness. Spouses, parents, children, other relatives, and legal representatives are Woodward Settlement Class Members but the claims they are settling are limited to those arising from a NOR-AM Exposed Person or Ciba Exposed Person's exposure.

II. IMPORTANT MEDICAL NOTICE

To NOR-AM Exposed Persons and Ciba Exposed Persons (as defined above):

You may have an increased risk of developing bladder cancer if you had on-the-job exposure to Fundal® and/or Galecron®. Workers exposed to Fundal® and/or Galecron® should participate in a medical monitoring program because early detection of bladder cancer can result in more effective treatment.

If you had on-the-job exposure to Fundal® and/or Galecron®, it is recommended that you or your doctor call 1-800-211-6913 to learn how you can obtain further medical information or enroll in medical monitoring.

III. PROPOSED SETTLEMENT

The Woodward Settlement provides for the establishment by NOR-AM of two funds to provide medical benefits and compensation to eligible Woodward Settlement Class Members or their legal representatives. This settlement is intended, where applicable, to work as a complement to the Price Settlement.

The total package of benefits potentially available to a NOR-AM Exposed Person is the same as the total package of benefits potentially available to a Ciba Exposed Person. Thus, Woodward Settlement Class Members may be eligible for the same benefits whether they were occupationally exposed to Fundal® only, or to Fundal® and Galecron®, or to Galecron® only.

(1) The NOR-AM Medical Monitoring and Treatment Fund ("The NOR-AM MMT Fund"). If the Woodward Settlement is approved, NOR-AM will make an initial deposit of $3,500,000 into the NOR-AM MMT Fund, and will thereafter make additional deposits on an as-needed basis. There is no limit to the amount of money NOR-AM can be required to contribute over the life of the NOR-AM MMT Fund, which will last a minimum of 20 years.

NOR-AM Exposed Persons will be entitled to participate in the NOR-AM medical monitoring and treatment program; Ciba Exposed Persons may receive medical monitoring and treatment benefits only through the Price Settlement. The NOR-AM medical monitoring and treatment program and the medical monitoring and treatment program provided through the Price Settlement are identical. The NOR-AM MMT Fund will pay for a medical monitoring program designed to detect at an early stage the form of bladder cancer alleged to be associated with exposure to Fundal®: specifically, primary urothelial carcinoma of the urinary collecting system, i.e., renal pelvis, ureter, bladder and urethra. The NOR-AM MMT Fund also will pay for all medically necessary treatment for NOR-AM Exposed Persons.

(2) The NOR-AM Disease Compensation and Administration Fund ("The NOR-AM DCA Fund"). If the Woodward Settlement is approved, NOR-AM will also make an initial deposit of $21,000,000 into the NOR- AM DCA Fund, up to a required maximum of $30,000,000. The NOR-AM DCA Fund will make cash payments of up to $626,500 on behalf of a NOR-AM Exposed Person who, after exposure to Fundal® only, has developed or in the future develops the form of bladder cancer alleged to be associated with Fundal®. In addition, the NOR-AM DCA Fund will make cash supplements amounting to 40% of the amounts scheduled for and paid as compensatory payments pursuant to the Price settlement, up to $179,000, on behalf of a Ciba Exposed Person who, after exposure to Fundal® and Galecron® or to Galecron® only, has developed or in the future develops the form of bladder cancer alleged to be associated with Fundal® and Galecron®. The NOR-AM DCA Fund will also pay for administrative costs and class counsel's and administrative class counsel's attorney fees, costs and expenses as determined by the Court. The total attorney fee award to be requested will not exceed 20% of the benefit conferred upon the class. The benefits of the NOR-AM DCA Fund will continue as long as the NOR-AM MMT Fund continues, or until the NOR-AM DCA Fund is exhausted. If the NOR-AM DCA Fund is exhausted, NOR-AM may continue paying for compensable claims. If NOR-AM does not continue to pay for these compensable claims, Woodward Settlement Class Members will be able to opt-out of the NOR-AM DCA Fund and pursue any legal claims they may have, except for claims for medical monitoring, medical treatment, fear of illness or cancer, or increased risk of illness or cancer.

(3) Other Conditions. The Stipulation of Settlement presently provides for medical monitoring, treatment and compensation payments for certain medical conditions set forth in this Notice. In the event, however, that a Court-approved Epidemiology Panel determines to a reasonable medical certainty that any other medical condition is caused by Fundal® or Galecron® exposure, that condition will be deemed a compensable claim, and will be eligible for medical monitoring (if feasible), medical treatment, and cash payments.

(4) Release. Woodward Settlement Class Members who do not exclude themselves from the Woodward Settlement Class release all past, present and future claims (i) relating to the covered medical conditions listed above; and (ii) relating to a Woodward Settlement Class Member's exposure to Fundal® or Galecron®, including all claims alleging that any other cancers, personal injuries or risks are caused by exposure to Fundal® or Galecron®.

IV. CLASS REPRESENTATIVES AND CLASS COUNSEL

The Court has designated the following Woodward Settlement Class Members, Jack H. Woodward, Alta Woodward, Tom Lofton, Cindy Lofton and Rita Snow, as class representatives to represent all Woodward Settlement Class Members. The Court has also designated as Class Counsel the following individuals: Timothy E. Eble, S.C. Middlebrooks III, and David R. Donaldson.

V. RIGHTS AND OPTIONS OF WOODWARD SETTLEMENT CLASS MEMBERS

If you are a Woodward Settlement Class Member, you have the following options:

(1) You may do nothing and remain a Woodward Settlement Class Member. If you choose to take no action, your interests as a member of the Woodward Settlement Class will be represented by the Class Representatives and Class Counsel at no cost to you.

(2) You may remain a Woodward Settlement Class Member and either represent yourself or hire your own attorney to represent you at your own cost.

(3) You may remain a Woodward Settlement Class Member and object to the settlement.

(4) If you choose to remain a Woodward Settlement Class Member (under options 1, 2 or 3 above), you may receive the benefits afforded by this settlement within six months of the Court's Order directing this Notice.

(5) You may request exclusion from this settlement.

DEADLINES FOR ABOVE OPTIONS. The deadline for filing an Entry of Appearance if you choose to represent yourself or retain an attorney; for filing objections to this settlement; for filing a Notice of Intent to Appear at the fairness hearing; or for filing a request to be excluded from the Woodward Settlement Class is DECEMBER 1, 1995. TO LEARN MORE INFORMATION ABOUT HOW TO FILE ANY OF THE ABOVE ITEMS, PLEASE CALL 1-800-211-6913 or WRITE TO: Woodward Class Action, P.O. Box 974, Charleston, SC 29402.

VI. PROOF OF CLAIM PROCEDURE

FBI agent's allegations of evidence tampering could jeapordize many cases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allegations from within that the FBI crime lab cannot be trusted could throw hundreds of cases into question nationwide, given the vast scope of its work and its standing as the nation's preeminent police laboratory.

FBI officials said a review of 250 cases has found no problems so far, but Attorney General Janet Reno said Thursday she had ordered the Justice Department's inspector general to investigate the allegations by Special Agent Frederic Whitehurst.

Whitehurst, a chemist, has alleged that FBI testimony regarding crime lab evidence was rigged or slanted in some cases to help the prosecution.

Some of the biggest cases in recent years are being investigated, including the O.J. Simpson trial, the World Trade Center and Oklahoma City bombings and a Georgia mail bombing case investigated by FBI Director Louis Freeh in his days as a prosecutor. No wrongdoing by Freeh has been alleged.

Whitehurst's allegations, dating back several years, came to public attention because Simpson's defense attorneys want to call him to the stand to undermine damaging testimony by another FBI analyst, Roger Martz. Whitehurst has accused Martz of slanting lab findings in other cases.

Judge Lance Ito, who is presiding over the Simpson trial, granted a defense motion late Thursday declaring Whitehurst a material witness and ordering him to be at the Los Angeles courthouse next Tuesday with his notes and records.

Simpson attorneys Carl Douglas and Robert Blasier filed sworn affidavits saying Whitehurst would accuse Martz of "misconduct and improprieties in the execution of Martz's professional duties in connection with the matter now before this court."

The affidavits gave no specifics on what Martz may have done in the Simpson case. But they said that "Agent Martz is knowingly and intentionally carrying out FBI policy to suppress information which might be helpful to the defense and to produce results that will only help the prosecution."

Ito did not rule whether he would admit any testimony that Whitehurst might have.

But Whitehurst's allegations could have an impact far beyond the Simpson case since the FBI crime lab is involved in thousands of cases each year. FBI analysts often wind up in court, spending 1,470 days testifying in various trials nationwide last year alone.

Attorney Stephen Kohn, right, gestures toward his client, FBI scientist Frederic Whitehurst, during a Washington news conference Thursday.

The Washington-based lab, with a budget of $63.6 million and 557 employees this year, spends about half its time performing studies for state and local law enforcement agencies that lack their own labs or need additional expertise. It has experts in chemistry and toxicology, hair and fiber, explosives, documents, photography, paint, tire tracks, ballistics and even feathers, among other specialties.

One example of its work occurred at the home of 12-year-old Polly Klaas, who was kidnapped and murdered. The FBI crime scene search team discovered a partial palm print that the local police in Petaluma, Calif., had not been able to find with more limited technology, said David Fisher, who wrote the recently published, "Hard Evidence," a close-up look at the FBI crime lab.

A 1994 audit of the FBI laboratory's forensic services by the Justice Department inspector general discovered some sloppy tracking of evidence records, unclear documentation requirements and not enough proficiency training or supervision of reports. But most of the problems were fixed, according to an FBI response and a second analysis by the inspector general.

The only unresolved issue was the tracking of requests and specimens. But the FBI said it has an internal tracking system and is "confident that no specimens have ever been lost."

As a result of Whitehurst's allegations, the FBI has reviewed 250 cases in search of any rigged or slanted testimony.

"To date, no evidence tampering, evidence fabrication or failure to report exculpatory evidence have been found," the FBI said in a statement. "Any findings of such misconduct will result in tough and swift action by the FBI."

John Hicks, who headed the FBI crime lab for five years until his retirement last year, denied that there was any intentional wrongdoing. Asked about Martz, Hicks grouped him with the other lab workers as "people of integrity, who are technically competent and take their responsibility very, very seriously."

Whitehurst's allegations should not spawn distrust of FBI testimony, he said: "You have an individual here who clearly is unhappy, and I think for people to accept that individual's assertions without looking behind them a little bit is a little premature."

Whitehurst's attorney, Stephen Kohn, insisted this is "not a case of a disgruntled employee who did something wrong and is coming back."

"I know Dr. Whitehurst is not happy that it has come to this. I know he would have preferred that the issues be resolved when they first came to a head back in 1989. They weren't," Kohn told a news conference Thursday.

The crime lab often exonerates people, said Hicks, noting that the DNA analyses exclude named suspects in about one-third of the cases submitted.

"I used to get a lot of calls from frustrated prosecutors and investigators who were upset the findings didn't point to the suspects," said Hicks, who is now deputy director of the Alabama Department of Forensic Sciences in Birmingham.

One factor guarding against slanting the findings, he said, is the knowledge that experts from the other side are going to review them, "and you can expect that you're going to be really grilled (in court) on the basis for your conclusions."

"The FBI laboratory has withstood that type of very rigorous scrutiny for many years," he said.

Fisher also disbelieves Whitehurst's allegations.

"I am not someone who is a knee-jerk supporter of the FBI," the author said from his home in New York. "But having spent 170 hours interviewing people in these labs ... I remain totally convinced of the integrity of the people who work there."

But Jim Dempsey, deputy director of the Center for National Security Studies, a civil liberties organization, sees need for more oversight.

"It's well past time for the FBI crime lab to bring itself into the mainstream of forensic science by subjecting itself to the type of accreditation and external proficiency testing that many state and local crime labs have long since agreed to," Dempsey said.

Powell provides readers with own version of events in his new book

WASHINGTON (AP) — In his new book, retired Gen. Colin Powell writes that he wishes Presidents Reagan and Bush had "shown more sensitivity" on race relations. He also sharply disputes Dan Quayle's account of the former vice president's role in halting a coup attempt in the Philippines.

In "My American Journey," which goes on sale today, Powell recounts his rise through the Army to the military's top position, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. And he discusses his interest in a possible presidential run, although he says he has not yet felt the "calling" that he believes is necessary to make a run.

In discussing his job as a senior adviser to Reagan and Bush, Powell condemns an ad used by the 1988 Bush presidential campaign focusing on Willie Horton, a black Massachusetts inmate who raped a white woman while on a prison furlough.

"Was the ad depicting the incident racist? Of course. Had it bothered me? Certainly," Powell writes. "It was a political cheap shot."

To Powell, it was also evidence of the Republican Party's shortcomings when it came to race relations.

"Never in the two years I worked with Ronald Reagan and George Bush did I detect the slightest trace of racial prejudice in their behavior," Powell writes. "They led a party, however, whose principal message to black Americans seemed to be: lift yourself by your bootstraps. All did not have bootstraps; Some did not have boots. I wish that Reagan and Bush had shown more sensitivity on this point."

In previously released excerpts and interviews, Powell said he is considering a presidential bid, is dissatisfied with both political parties and believes the country may be ready for a third major political party. But he has not said whether he would affiliate with a party if he does run.

He also criticized President Clinton's foreign policy, saying he rebuffed Clinton's offer to be secretary of state because of reservations about "the amorphous way the administration handled foreign policy."

Powell recalls being on the job as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff just a few days when American troops were sent in to remove Manuel Noriega as president of Panama. He recounts the difficulties of managing the first military action that, because of improved technology, received virtually instantaneous media coverage.

It's time for Friday night football magic!

It's Friday and as any die-hard West Texan knows that means tonight — and the next several Friday evenings — will be filled with high school football. Is Friday night football in Texas a form of mania or what? Well, perhaps, but if it is, it's a mania that's chock-full of excitement and pigskin magic!

Don't misunderstand, there are plenty of fans who enjoy college and professional football, too. Many of them enjoy all three, but there's simply something about high school football that sharpens the competitive edge and heightens the suspense.

No doubt it stems from early-day Texas when towns took particular pride in their school sports and the townspeople would go en masse with their team to a neighboring community (which in some West Texas instances may have involved a journey of several hundred miles) to wage battle on the gridiron. And the fact that the "heroes" are the same people you walk down the street beside every day makes it special, too.

It's the stuff of which legends are made — and literally thousands of high school football "legends" have been born on Friday nights down through the years. What's more, legends could be started this very football season in the crisp Friday night air.

It's Friday night football and the legends are waiting to "happen" on gridirons around West Texas. Grab some of the excitement yourself this season. You'll enjoy it!

Petroleum Museum deserves our thanks

This is a special week — and Wednesday was a special day — for the Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame, marking the 20th anniversary of its opening.

For two decades the Petroleum Museum has been carrying out its mission statement in stellar fashion — telling "the story of the petroleum industry — technological and geological — with special emphasis on the Permian Basin's culture and history," according to Jane Phares, executive director.

The museum and its supporters have performed that task proudly and effectively through the years, often in the midst of a hostile political climate and generally among people who did not understand the technological processes of the industry that made the industrial society possible.

In fact, when the bywords of politicians were "windfall profits" and advocates for the petroleum industry were virtually nonexistent, the Petroleum Museum unwaveringly kept telling the industry's story to all who would listen. There is no bigger nor better advocate for the industry and, yes, the story deserves to be told and needs to be understood.

We salute the Petroleum Museum and its staff for a job well done for 20 years. Keep up the good work!

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being resubmitted.
- We do not publish "open" letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702, or you may fax to 682-3793.

FBI doctored evidence in 20-year-old case

WASHINGTON — While Congress investigates government abuses in cases ranging from Waco to Randy Weaver, it is also time to reopen the 20-year-old case involving Leonard Peltier.

Anderson

Peltier is an American Indian serving consecutive life sentences for the murder of two FBI agents on a South Dakota reservation in 1975. Over the course of our long investigation into the Peltier case, we have uncovered evidence that the FBI doctored evidence in the case against Peltier.

The same congressional Republicans who have been so zealous in their investigations of the Waco and Weaver cases, haven't said a word about Peltier. Peltier's supporters argue that the only reason his case has not received similar scrutiny is that he is a minority.

Peltier has been denied parole until 2009, leaving him to apply for executive clemency in November 1993. But it's highly unlikely that President Clinton will grant Peltier clemency without political cover from Capitol Hill. Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., who is in the middle of high-profile congressional hearings into the Weaver case, told us last week that Peltier isn't generating much interest.

Our investigation suggests that even if there isn't enough evidence to free Peltier, his case merits congressional scrutiny for many reasons:

-- The FBI doctored evidence in its aggressive attempt to convict Peltier for the death of their two colleagues.

Of the four suspects in the killings, two were tried and acquitted, and charges against a third were dropped. Only Peltier remained as a means of avenging the agents' murders.

Fearing that he was being unfairly targeted, Peltier fled to Canada after the murders. It was the FBI's task to produce sufficient evidence for his extradition. An FBI report on a meeting of federal prosecutors and top FBI officials in August 1976 stated that the decision was made to drop the charges against the third suspect "so that the full prospective weight of the federal government could be directed against Leonard Peltier."

A persuasive part of the FBI's extradition case was affidavits from a woman named Myrtle Poor Bear. She made three sworn statements, but the FBI only sent the second and third up to the proceedings in Canada. It's not hard to see why.

In her first affidavit, Poor Bear claimed to have been Peltier's girlfriend, and she said Peltier told her he had killed the two G-men. Peltier and other witnesses testified at his subsequent trial that they had never heard of Poor Bear.

Poor Bear's second affidavit, obtained by the FBI two days after the first, was identical except for the addition of two significant sentences: "I was present the day the Special Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were killed. I saw Leonard Peltier shoot the FBI agents."

The third affidavit, obtained still later, was a lurid account of the shooting by Poor Bear. The affidavits obviously contained serious contradictions. Was Poor Bear an eyewitness to the shootings, or did Peltier make a confession of the shootings to her?

At Peltier's trial, Poor Bear recanted all of her affidavits.

She claimed the FBI had threatened her, and she said she hadn't even read the statements before signing them. But the trial judge refused to allow Poor Bear's testimony of FBI abuse to be heard by the jury.

Despite lingering questions, the FBI doesn't want a post-mortem on the Peltier case. A 1992 article in the bureau's in-house newsletter was headlined, "Keep the Vigil: Peltier is a Murderer."

It accused Peltier of being guilty of "cold-blooded execution."

Even if Peltier proves to be guilty, the "vigil" against FBI abuses must be maintained in a free society.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Some of today's politicians are just old-fashioned jerks

Let me suggest, gentle reader, how society would have dealt with Bob Packwood back in the good old days. On learning of Packwood's exploits against one of their flesh and blood, the male family members would have foregathered in the parlor. After minimal conversation, they would have saddled up and paid an unannounced call on the senator.

Murchison

"Senator," their spokesman would have said, solemn as a minister on Sunday, "our sister told us about you. Senator, you show your face around her again, you step out of line just the least bit, and ... " There might have occurred at this juncture the eloquent brandishing of a horsewhip or knob-headed cane. Silently, the visitors would have taken their leave. Senatorial depredations against one woman, at all events, would likely have ceased.

I say all this not to commend extracurricular justice but to underline how the moral climate of the country has changed so as to accommodate — more often than to punish — the Bob Packwoods.

Packwood's fieriest accusers make him out to be just a typical man. The heck he is. The senator is a jerk — a cad, in good-old-days parlance. Of course, we don't speak in those quaint terms any more, the old norms concerning caddom having evaporated. In consequence of this, we get Bob Packwood, public servant and pawer of women. And Teddy Kennedy, one might add for the sake of bipartisanship.

No, the senators are not gentlemen. And does anybody care? Seemingly not. You wouldn't exactly call this an age devoted to the maintenance of codes such as gentlemen and ladies used to impose on themselves.

In counterculture America, gentlemen turned into mere men and ladies into mere women. Gentlemen and ladies have moral and spiritual rights as members of a civilized community; men and women have only political rights — a deeply inferior species.

Packwood's repeated offenses against women were political. He violated women's constitutional status as co-equals. Under the older, better dispensation, he would have been seen to insult their station as co-creators of life under the providence of God.

Co-what? The jerk from Oregon didn't spend long on such old-fashioned categories. Even before Roe vs. Wade, as he boasted in his valedictory, he unsuccessfully introduced legislation asserting a federal right to abortion.

The jerk from Oregon was a prize specimen of Liberated Man. He cultivated the pose of sensitivity. Always, his ears were open to women's political claims — as long as those claims remained political and not moral.

Was Packwood the cad a prize hypocrite? It depends on what you mean by hypocrisy. Bless his heart, he did prize women — as soulless political cogs, as voting units. Did that preclude his violating their spiritual dignity, their moral rights? Under the old dispensation, it would have. Which is why the victims' brothers would have come calling on him.

Wouldn't they have trembled at his power and prestige? Hardly. The older dispensation was less impressed than ours is with politics — a largely debased profession useful mainly in keeping the streets repaired and crooks locked up.

Today's politicians consider themselves demi-gods — if yesterday's were more modest, it was because we asked less of the political class than is customary today.

The reason political dignity eclipses spiritual dignity is that we've placed politics, rather than religion, at the center of modern affairs. How are you going to breed Christian gentlemen, please, in an environment where the giver of all good gifts is government? Let's just say it's not easy.

Bob Packwood is a modernist of purest essence: Worse yet, as his recorded "diaries" make plain, he's a modernist politician. His type isn't going to respect anyone's spiritual worth, inasmuch as "spiritual worth" to the Packwood type is rhetorical gas. That's where male relatives used to come in handy — but, of course, we're glad those barbaric days are over. I mean, aren't we?

We don't need new facility at airport

I note that Mayor Bobby Burns states that City Hall knows what's best for its citizens — no referendum needed. I'd like to remind the mayor that some 20 years ago the then-City Council voted to keep Southwest Airlines from coming to Midland since that might make American Airlines decide to abandon Midland. After Southwest said they would take that to court, the City Council relented.

I think we need to again heed Herb Kelleher's (president of Southwest) comment that we don't need a new facility at our airport. By the way, most of the building and jetways (all four) are much newer than 40 years. City Manager Mike McGregor stated recently in the Reporter-Telegram that the airlines simply want a safe place to land and take off, adequate check-in counter space and a means of boarding and deplaning passengers. That's all we frequent flying passengers want. The flying public is not interested in spending an extended period of time in a luxurious "Admiral Club" setting along with a building occupied by overstaffed airport personnel.

This last comment relates to the fact that there have been times when as many as seven or eight security personnel were present at the one entry security gate. Airports with two side-by-side gates generally have six security people at any given time.

High humidity produces milky sky

On the front page of today's (Wednesday, Sept. 6) Reporter-Telegram is a prime example of the type of story that leads to the term "environmental wackos." The headline reads, "Air pollution obscures views of scenic vistas at Big Bend." The story then details how the visibility has dropped in the park particularly during the last few weeks. It goes on to explain that monitoring of the air currents has detected pollutants from as far away as the Midwest. This is all well and good except that no evidence is offered to prove the loss of visibility is due to any particular source.

The spectacular sunsets for which the area is justly famous are, incidentally, due to pollutants from various natural sources. As for the recent milky sky that has so drastically reduced visibility, well, any observant person who has ever spent time on the Gulf Coast can attest that high humidity in the atmosphere produces a washed-out milky sky. The higher the relative humidity, the greater the percent of the water in the atmosphere that exists as microscopic drops of liquid water rather than as a gas.

These drops diffuse the light and limit visibility. If you have been observant for the last few weeks you will have seen the same phenomenon here in this part of Texas. Also you will have observed that the weather bureau has been reporting unusually high humidity for this area. It happens every time we get a strong flow of air from the gulf — sometimes it even brings rain.

It's time to speak out, get involved

This is from a short story by Alyn H. Denham entitled "I Stood Aside."

"I stood aside and silently watched while this 'Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave' was conditioned by traitors to seek peace at any price...even at the price of independence and freedom.

"I stood aside and silently watched as our courts pampered and our media glorified wanton criminals.

"I stood aside and silently watched while our universities were taken over by Marxist professors, and by misguided students with not the slightest understanding of the civilization they have inherited, or the evil forces by which they have been duped.

"I stood aside and silently watched while our religious institutions were transformed into cesspools of liberalism and ungodly teachings.

"I stood aside and silently watched while our once magnificent system of public education was turned into propaganda institutions espousing revolution, atheism, unrestrained sex and perverted lifestyles.

"I stood aside and silently watched while liberal hucksters, using our television media, our motion picture screens and our news stands, brought about a breakdown of morality that is reducing Americans to the level of lower animals.

"And now, I have had enough! I am only one person, but I shall no longer hesitate to speak out or get involved."

How about you?

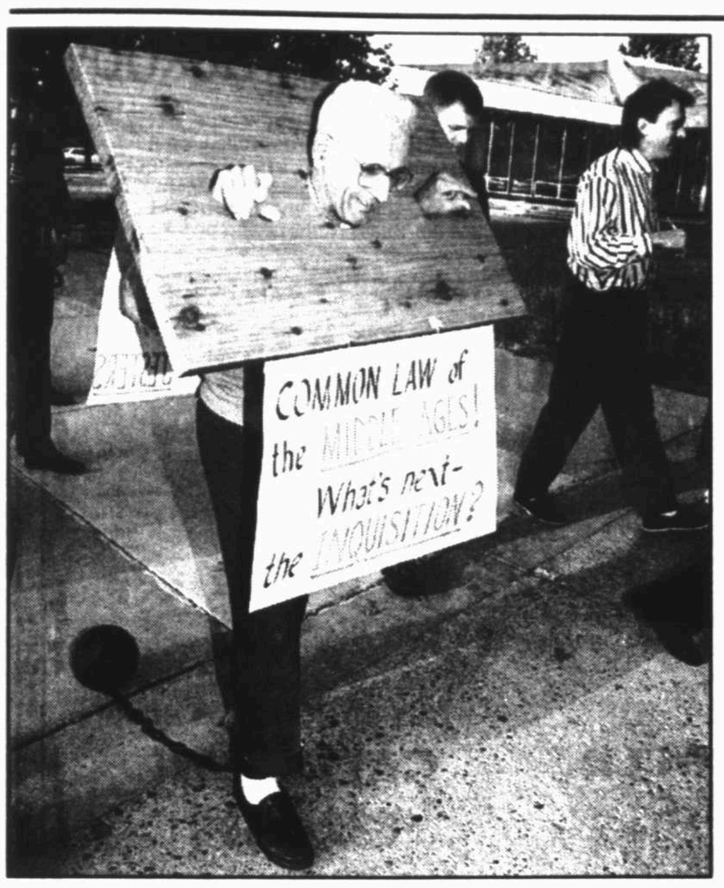
Kevorkian reports to court in stock, ball and chain



AP Laserphoto

Dr. Jack Kevorkian, 67, arrived at the Oakland County, Mich., Court House in Pontiac in a homemade stock and wearing a ball and chain on Thursday for his arraignment on assisted suicide charges.

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Dr. Jack Kevorkian arrived at court in homemade stock and a ball and chain Thursday to ridicule his prosecution on assisted-suicide charges as a throwback to the Middle Ages.

"Nobody with brains should take this seriously," he told reporters at the Oakland County courthouse, where he was arraigned in the 1991 deaths of two seriously ill women. "It's nuts."

"Kevorkian is accepting his medieval punishment," said his lawyer, Geoffrey Fieger.

The retired pathologist wore a cardboard stock, his arms and head stuck through the holes. He also wore a mock ball and chain and signs that read "Common law of Middle Ages. What's next, the Inquisition?" and "Think this is a circus? You're right. But blame the seven Supreme Court jesters."

The Michigan Supreme Court ruled last year that assisted suicide could be prosecuted under common law as an offense carrying five years in prison.

Kevorkian, 67, took off the items before entering the courtroom.

Kevorkian has acknowledged attending 25 suicides since 1990.

The Michigan Supreme Court ruled last year that assisted suicide could be prosecuted under common law as an offense carrying five years in prison.

Fieger said if the government wants to rely on centuries-old common law, it should apply other traditional measures for suicide: "They should exhume the bodies, drive a wooden stake through the heart and bury them under the public highway."

When Kevorkian stood mute, Judge David Breck entered an innocent plea for him and set a trial date of April 1.

"April Fool's Day — I think it's got poetic justice," Fieger said as he and Kevorkian left.

America Online gives government access to private e-mail in porn crackdown

■ FBI agents continue an investigation code-named 'Innocent Images.'

N.Y. Times News Service

Responding to court orders related to a nationwide crackdown on the electronic transmission of child pornography, America Online, the nation's largest information service, gave law enforcement agents access to the private electronic mailboxes of an unknown number of its subscribers, company officials confirmed Thursday.

By reading and tracing the trails of electronic mail messages as they coursed through the America Online system, FBI agents were able to identify several thousand America Online users who viewed digitized images of children in sexual poses.

They were also able to follow the electronic trail of messages beyond the America Online network, identifying many more computer users nationwide who stored and traded pedophilic material, according to a scenario pieced together from persons familiar with the investigation.

At least a dozen people suspected of being among the most active traders of child pornography on the computer network were arrested Wednesday as part of the investigation, code-named "Innocent Images," which is continuing.

The Justice Department indicated Wednesday that many more arrests were planned, but it released no new information Thursday.

At least some of the arrests resulted from "sting" operations conducted on America Online in the past year by undercover law enforcement agents pretending to be young boys and girls, court records revealed.

In one case, an adult investigator posing as a teen-age girl on an America Online "chat" service invited a Las Vegas man to cross state lines to have sex. He was arrested when he arrived at a motel suggested by the "girl."

In other cases, an America Online spokeswoman said Thursday, concerned subscribers contacted either the FBI or network administrators to complain about lewd pictures arriving unsolicited in their electronic mailboxes.

Copies of the objectionable images were then provided to the FBI by America Online, and the agency then obtained court orders to search the mailboxes of the senders, said Pam McGraw, the spokeswoman.

Depending on the volume of mail a person receives, electronic mail messages can remain in an electronic mailbox for days or weeks, until they are deleted or "scroll off" the screen as the mailbox fills with newer messages.

Because of the persistence and traceability of electronic mail, and the fact that it can be copied easily without alerting the owner, reading the mailboxes was particularly effective.

Meanwhile, Ms. McGraw strongly denied Thursday that digital images of child pornography existed in any public areas of the on-line information service, the nation's largest with 3.5 million subscribers.

In its announcement of a series of raids and arrests Wednesday, the FBI said it had concentrated its four-year investigation on America Online, which is based in Vienna, Va., because of complaints from a number the service's subscribers that child pornography was circulating on the system.

Representatives of Compuserve Inc. and Prodigy Services Co., the second- and third-largest on-line services respectively, said they had not been contacted by the FBI or any other other law enforcement agency in regard to the investigation of child pornographers and pedophiles.

Pilot in crash was not licensed, FAA says

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The man whose single-engine airplane crashed on takeoff from Midland Airpark on Sept. 7 apparently was not a licensed pilot. He was a student pilot.

A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration in Oklahoma City said Thursday that the 23-year-old pilot, David Simpson of Magnolia, received his student-pilot medical certificate on July 24, but there is no record of his holding the FAA-approved private pilot's license.

Simpson and a passenger, his 41-year-old stepfather, Scott Arthur Sigman of Spring, were killed in the crash and subsequent fire in a residential neighborhood just northwest of the airport.

The FAA spokesman said that the name "Scott Arthur Sigman" is not listed in the FAA's Airmen Registry, which suggests that Sigman was not a licensed pilot either.

FAA rules state that a "student pilot may not act as pilot in command of an aircraft that is carrying a passenger."

A student pilot may be authorized for solo flights by his or her certified-flight instructor within a specified area near the airport of departure. A student pilot's solo endorsement is effective for 90 days and may be renewed.

A student pilot's cross-country solo flights of specified distances may be approved by the flight instructor.

The FAA spokesman declined to comment on Simpson's flight experience and how many flight hours — with his instructor and solo — he had logged.

The National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB), which declined to release any information on the accident and the pilot's background, said it would be six months before the cause of the crash is determined.

The FAA reported that the aircraft, a low-wing Grumman American AA5A Cheetah, had been registered in the names of Simpson and "Sigmund Scott" — apparently Simpson's stepfather.

Simpson's 1975-model airplane, powered by a 150-horsepower Lycoming engine, failed to

Meeting on MISD judgment draws only few remarks

■ Main concern expressed by some parents is effect on district's honors or gifted programs.

Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

A good number of parents attended Thursday night's public forum on the agreed judgment plan, but few of them had anything to say to MISD trustees.

The main concern expressed by a couple of parents is that the district's honors or gifted program would be changed or would lower standards in order to increase minority participation.

"I just expected more than hearing the agreed judgment legalities described," said parent Carmen Lester. "I think most of us have already heard that from the news. I came to the meeting tonight to find out what's happening with stand-alone schools and which plan might replace the cluster system. We were basically told that we would hear about that later. It's like we are being told: 'Here's the requirements, but we aren't going to tell you what we are going to do with them.'"

A couple of parents, discussing the meeting, said they agreed with Ms. Lester's sentiments.

All Midland Independent School District trustees attended the public forum and accepted comment from the audience.

Two parents asked trustees about the agreed judgment requirement that the district's gifted and talented program be evaluated because it has little minority participation.

"We won't lower standards. There is nothing in this agreed judgment that requires us or asks us to lower academic rigor," said Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. "The plan is to raise other people up toa that standard."

He said the district will work harder to inform parents of the benefits of their students attempting more difficult work.

Trustee Robin Hightower said some students may not do well on standardized tests, yet they may do well in higher-level classes and should have the opportunity to participate in more advanced classes.

Baressi said following the requirements for three years will be worthwhile for the district to achieve dismissal of the federal court-ordered desegregation plan. "It is better for the school board, public servants, to be writing these plans, not a federal judge," the superintendent said.

The next community forum on the agreed judgment plan is set for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Lee Freshman High School, 1400 E. Oak Ave.

Dallas County grand jury to hear latest accusations in Norplant-abuse case

DALLAS (AP) — Police reports paint a grim picture of the 14-year-old girl's life: sexually abusive parents, illicit drugs and a clinic visit at age 11 for birth control.

The girl told police her stepfather raped her for years and her mother had her surgically fitted with Norplant rather than report the abuse.

The teen also says when she was 8 years old, the couple took her into their bedroom to watch them have sex so she could "look and learn," police say.

Now, authorities are accusing the mother of participating in the sexual abuse and believe her husband raped another daughter, then 10.

Today, a Dallas County grand jury is scheduled to hear the latest accusations — two counts of aggravated sexual assault of a child by the father and one count of aggravated sexual assault of a child by the mother, officials said.

The parents say their oldest child was sexually active and had the six matchstick-sized rods implanted in her arm so she wouldn't get pregnant. The stepfather's sister also said the girl recanted her story about the sexual abuse, a move child abuse experts say is not unusual.

According to police reports, the 14-year-old girl said last week that the man gave her half a tablet of the drug Ecstacy, took the other half himself then forced her to participate in a sex act with him and his wife approximately 1 1/2 years ago.

According to the report, the mother eventually rolled over and fell asleep, but later awoke and told her husband, who had continued assaulting the girl, to "let her (the teen) get some sleep."

In another police report, a 12-year-old daughter told police the man raped her when she was 10.

The 39-year-old man and 31-year-old woman, whose names are withheld to protect the girls'

Parents, children's medical providers fear state funding cap

DALLAS (AP) — Children's medical providers and families with seriously ill children are bracing for a proposed funding cap some fear will cost them millions of dollars in services and others fear could mean a medical nightmare.

The Texas Board of Health is scheduled to consider today a proposed rule change that would cap spending at $40,000 per client in the state's Chronically Ill and Disabled Children's Services Program.

Franklin Jones, acting director of CIDC operations, said the cost-saving measure will affect an estimated 300 of the program's 10,000 clients. The move is projected to save $9.5 million to $10 million.

"We've been told we have to come within our allotted budget for fiscal year '96-'97," he said.

"If we go over budget, nobody's going to bail us out like they've been able to do in the past."

'The hospitals and other providers, I think, will continue to serve these people; they can't abandon patients. But it will be a loss to them and ... harder and harder to do all the time.'
— Bryan Sperry, executive director, Children's Hospital Association of Texas

Under the proposed change, half of the cap — $20,000 — will be paid for a qualified child's inpatient and outpatient hospital services, ambulatory surgical center services, inpatient rehabilitation services, physician fees, X-rays and laboratory fees. Another $20,000 would be available for all other services covered by the program.

Michael Fichtel, chief financial officer of Children's Medical Center of Dallas, predicts a battle between physicians and hospitals and other providers "as to who gets their invoices in first."

"But most importantly is services could be cut off by some providers after the money runs out for some of those children," he said.

"We have no intention of denying services to anybody, but there could be other providers who discontinue service once the funding is exhausted for that year for that child," Fichtel said.

Retired racers head to new homes

By Eduardo Montes
Associated Press

EL PASO — Poco Showtime, Best Gal, Fiddler and their other canine cohorts thrust their tapered noses toward the front of the chain-link enclosure, their lean bodies pressing forward every time the gate opened.

But with a practiced air, handlers held the greyhounds back, extracting only one or two dogs at a time from the dozens milling around the pen Thursday and ushered them to the trailer waiting to take the retired racers to new homes.

Some leapt in eagerly, others had to be cajoled. Eventually, however, the last wagging tail disappeared inside and the Juarez Racetrack's new adoption program was formally under way.

"This is so exciting for us," said racetrack general manager Paula Sandel, a one-time dog breeder who helped implement a "no-kill" policy at the Mexican track, which is reorganizing under new management.

Under the policy, trainers and owners are encouraged to turn greyhounds that can no longer race over to the track, which will

NORPLANT: Grand jury to hear latest accusations identities, remained behind bars on Thursday.

The couple's six children, ranging from 2 months to the 14-year-old, are in custody of state Child Protective Services, said Diane Keller, CPS program director in Dallas.

"These children had no safeguards," Detective Arleen Martinez told The Dallas Morning News. "They were so afraid of that man, and the mother never protected them. She's very weak, and she can't go against him. She yelled to him 'Forgive me,' after he beat ... her."

Martinez told The Associated Press she couldn't comment on the details of the cases.

The stepfather — who is being held without bond in the Lew Sterrett Justice Center for allegedly violating the terms of his parole for a conviction on drug charges, officials said — has denied previous allegations of sexual abuse.

The stepfather's attorney Rey Chavez did not return telephone calls to The Associated Press. The mother's attorney, Dalford Todd, also did not return a telephone message left at his office.

The 14-year-old girl had told police her stepfather continued to rape her after she was fitted with Norplant until she ran away in May.

Police said they learned of the allegations after an incident last month when the stepfather tried to forcibly retrieve the girl from his sister's house, where she had been staying.

"The investigation will continue," said Sgt. Fred Rich of Dallas Police Department's child abuse unit. "I really couldn't tell you now if there will be any more charges filed."

Officials with Child Protective Services and other organizations designed to prevent child abuse said the use of Norplant in such cases is unusual.

"I think individuals do a lot of things ... to hide sexual abuse if it's occurring. But to go this far, I think it's unusual. It's an extreme case," Ms. Keller said, adding that she believes the laws are sufficient.

While health professionals say there are no age restrictions on Norplant use and that the devices can be inserted in minors with parental consent, some say an 11-year-old receiving Norplant should raise concerns.

"Why didn't the clinic that she was brought to raise a flag and say this is certainly suspicious? This child requires birth control at 11 years old?" said Joan Duffell, community education director with Seattle-based Committee For Children, a non-profit group that develops programs for the prevention of child abuse and youth violence.

RETIRED: Greyhounds find new adoptive homes

then send the dogs to adoption groups that will find them suitable homes.

In the past, many retired dogs were euthanized, Sandel conceded.

The first 66 dogs to be retired under the program were transported Thursday morning from Ciudad Juarez to an El Paso farm, where they were sorted out and then loaded onto the trailer.

Only one dog, which was nipped in the ear by another greyhound during the trip from Juarez, was kept behind and adopted by a woman in the area.

The rest are bound for St. Louis, Mo., Indianapolis, Cleveland Philadelphia and New York and others are expected to be sent out in the weeks to come. "People are calling from everywhere," said Sandel.

The track's program is not unique.

Greyhound adoption groups have been around nationwide since the early 1980s and more dogs are being placed in homes each year. About 14,000 dogs were placed last year across the nation.

The racing industry, which has often been criticized for its treatment of the dogs, participates in the programs. But humane groups warn against reading too much into that.

"I think a lot of what you see here are the industry people trying to pull off a public relations coup," said Susan Netboy of the Palo Alto, Calif.-based Greyhound Protection League, an adoption group.

She notes that dogs that can no longer race or don't race well are still being killed daily at tracks in both the United States and Mexico.

Although some are saved for breeding, death is often the only reward for dogs when they step off the track for the final time, Netboy said.

"The industry is inherently cruel and irredeemably corrupt," said Netboy. "I think that what needs to be done is the industry needs to go under."

Yet even an admitted cynic like Netboy conceded that Sandel's efforts at the Juarez Racetrack are laudable.

"Paula is an exception in the respect that Paula is sincere," said Netboy. "She's not looking at the public relations end of it. She's looking at it with a sincere desire to help the dogs."

Sandel's own actions as the dogs were moved out would seem to indicate that. After the last dog was loaded up, she climbed aboard the narrow trailer and peered into the mesh cages holding the greyhounds.

"Good-bye boys," Sandel said. "Lie down," she admonished the more enthusiastic dogs.

A few minutes later the truck was moving away and Sandel hid her face as she began to cry.

Behind deportation roundups, children's faces emerge

By Mike Todd and John Bryant
Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN — Sometimes, children board the bus along with parents for the long deportation ride back to Mexico.

More often, friends and relatives pitch in to help families get through the ordeal of Mom or Dad getting picked up and deported for working illegally in the United States.

Those are the human faces behind immigration roundups such as the one in Austin this week, in which federal agents arrested 461 people working in the United States illegally.

"Cousins or relatives come and baby-sit and buy groceries," said Moses Guerrero, an East Austin resident who knows parents who have been deported. "Everybody pitches in."

One of those pitching in this week was Ana Ramos of Austin.

She said her brother and niece, both of whom worked at a Luby's cafeteria, were among those arrested in immigration raids on restaurants, a food processing plant, construction sites and other businesses.

Ramos is taking care of her niece's two children — ages 1 year and 3 months — until their mother either sends for them or returns.

"It's very hard for the family," Ramos said in Spanish.

Ramos, a native of El Salvador who has been in the United States 11 years and is a legal resident, said her relatives needed to work here to take care of their families. Her 28-year-old brother has eight children in El Salvador, Ramos said.

"He has to work here to earn money to support his children," she said.

Ramos said her brother had lived and worked in Austin for four years and her 21-year-old niece for about the same period. For both, this was the first immigration arrest and deportation, Ramos said.

Most of those arrested waived their right to a deportation hearing and were bused to the Mexican border, said Ray Dudley, an agent with the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The roundup was designed to spotlight a growing problem of counterfeit immigration documents, agents said. Most of the people arrested had used fake alien registration cards or other documents to get their jobs.

Although many of the people picked up are single adults working here while their families remain in Mexico, people with spouses and children also got caught in the sweep. The INS gives those people a chance to make arrangements, Dudley said.

"Yesterday a guy we arrested wanted to know if he could take his wife with him," he said. "We accompanied him to his house. He got his wife and baby and a lot of their belongings and they all went together."

Another child, age 5 or 6, also made the trip Tuesday with a deported parent, Dudley said.

Of the approximately 450 people deported by Wednesday, only those two advised authorities that they had children here, said Gary Renick, assistant district director with the INS.

People being deported often are afraid to acknowledge families, even when the children are U.S. citizens, said immigration lawyer Barbara Hines.

"Generally their children stay here," she said. "Then the parent makes the decision whether they come back or whether to send the children home (to Mexico)."

Almost all those arrested this week are citizens of Mexico, immigration agents said.

Deported parents call relatives as soon as possible and ask them to watch over their families, said Guerrero, a self-employed fruit vendor and former taco stand operator who lives legally in the United States. If parents don't have a chance to call until they reach Mexico, relatives or friends often learn of the arrests by going to their job sites when the parents don't return home at the end of the day.

Guerrero said parents who are being deported often waive their right to court proceedings so they can get into Mexico and return to their families in Austin as soon as possible.

The parents protect their children from immigration officers because it is more difficult to make their way back with their families.

Guerrero also said parents don't want to interrupt their children's education. "The primary concern of the parents is for their children to get a good education," he said.

CAP: Parents, providers fear proposal

(From 1B)

The Dallas hospital predicts an annual loss of at least $1.7 million, he said.

"I'm terrified," said Kendria Hendricks of Irving, the mother of a 9-year-old hemophiliac who has received about $600,000 in CIDC-paid services over a five-month period this year.

The cost of medicine alone that the boy takes to help clot his blood runs in the thousands of dollars, the part-time jewelry saleswoman said.

"Until he started this immune tolerance, where he does get this medicine every day, he spent the last four years in a wheelchair," she said. "He hasn't sat in that wheelchair since May. So if he goes back to being treated only when he bleeds, he'll be back in his wheelchair watching his friends play instead of playing with them."

Bryan Sperry, executive director of the Children's Hospital Association of Texas, said the children who will likely be affected will have costly diseases such as leukemia, cystic fibrosis or hemophilia.

"The hospitals and other providers, I think, will continue to serve these people; they can't abandon patients. But it will be a loss to them and those things get harder and harder to do all the time," he said.

CRASH: Pilot didn't have license maintain altitude after its northwesterly takeoff from Airpark's Runway 29. The relatively under-powered aircraft reportedly was carrying a heavy load — the men were en route to Alaska for a hunting trip — and took off with a tailwind instead of heading into the wind for maximum lift. It also took off on a hot afternoon in relatively "thin" air.

The early-afternoon's weather conditions made for a high-density altitude, which further decreased the airplane's performance.

While Midland Airpark is at a 2,803-foot elevation, the hot day's "density altitude," which figures in temperature, air pressure and humidity, at airport elevation would be well in excess of 5,000 feet.

The thinner air causes diminished engine performance because less oxygen reaches the engine and there is less lifting pressure on the wings.

THE FATHER LOSES HIS SON

That's the way Kenneth L. Woodward reported it in Newsweek, September 11, 1995. After Oxford University Press finished their Bible remodeling job, Mark 13:26 read, "Then they will see the Human One coming in clouds with great power and glory." The King James Version reads, "And then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds with great power and glory." In their blasphemous efforts to render the Bible socially and politically correct, God is no longer "Father" and Jesus is no longer "Son!" In fact, the famous prayer taught by Jesus in Luke 11 reads "Father-Mother, hallowed be your name!" The list of literary and divine atrocities goes on and on in Oxford's new "Inclusive Language Version" of the New Testament and Psalms.

Oh, to hear God's focus and voice! All scripture is inspired (God breathed)! 2 Timothy 3:16. Again, "The Law of the Lord is perfect, reviving the soul." Psalms 19:7. Jehovah God declared, "what thing soever I command you, observe to do it: thou shalt not add there unto, nor diminish from it." Don't tamper with the Plan. Don't play games with God!

State in brief

■ Parents plead for their son's release

CONROE — The parents of a 12-year-old boy pleaded Thursday for their son's release after he was believed to have been abducted from his home earlier this week.

"Please let my son go," Paulette Everett begged Thursday after authorities disclosed that Samuel McKay Everett had been taken from the family's home Tuesday evening.

The FBI has joined Montgomery County authorities in the hunt for the boy, who was gone when his parents returned home about 11 p.m. Tuesday after attending a function in Conroe.

FBI spokesman Rolando Moss said the parents had received a ransom demand but he refused to elaborate.

"He's just a young guy," Carl Everett, the missing boy's father and a custom home builder in the Conroe area, said. "He's our only child."

Authorities believe the boy may have been taken in a brown or gold Chrysler seen speeding through the family's neighborhood about 8:30 p.m. Tuesday.

■ Bush backs families' execution viewing

AUSTIN — Gov. George W. Bush supports allowing the families of deceased victims to watch their killers' executions, an idea to be considered today by the Texas Board of Criminal Justice.

The board may move to reverse a ban that has kept victims' relatives from watching the death penalty being carried out.

"I have no problem with that whatsoever, and I read today where the chairman of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice believes that victims' families should be allowed to come if they so choose, and I wholeheartedly agree with him," Bush said Thursday.

Criminal Justice Board Chairman Allan Polunsky has said he supports the change.

State law allows a person sentenced to death to pick five execution witnesses. State officials and media representatives also may attend, but a Criminal Justice Board policy has prohibited victims' family members from being present.

A proposal to allow victims' families to attend executions failed to clear the 1995 Legislature.

Polunsky told The Dallas Morning News he thinks the board has the authority to change the policy, but that he will ask the state attorney general to review new rules that may be adopted.

■ Panel recommends insect program change

HARLINGEN — A state-appointed task force has recommended changes in a controversial boll weevil eradication program that some Rio Grande Valley farmers blame for the worst cotton crop in decades.

With five cotton gins still operating on Thursday, bale count for the four Valley counties stood at 53,745. That's compared with a count of 307,943 in 1994, according to the Valley Co-op Oil Mill of Harlingen.

Many farmers have blamed the disastrous crop on the eradication program. They say the pesticide-spraying effort killed beneficial pests, contributing to an explosion in the number of crop-destroying beet armyworms.

The 11-member task force, appointed by state Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry last month to find ways to improve the program, has recommended several changes. They also include participation by Mexico in an eradication program, including the possible establishment of a buffer zone in northern Mexico to thwart migration of boll weevils into the Valley.

Dem challenger calls for investigation of Gramm

■ Senate Ethics Committee determined no action was needed, senator's spokesman says.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Houston Democrat John Odam, who hopes to challenge Republican U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, asked federal authorities Thursday to investigate whether Gramm sought to funnel extra money to Oregon Sen. Bob Packwood's re-election campaign.

While Gramm denies any wrongdoing, Odam charged that Gramm "may have participated in a conspiracy with Bob Packwood to skirt federal election laws."

Gramm's spokesman, Larry Neal, said the Senate Ethics Committee on Thursday told the senator it had reviewed the issue and determined that no action was needed.

"The Senate Ethics Committee has considered the facts in this matter and, in effect, rejected John Odam's silly complaint," Neal said.

Packwood, who resigned amid charges of sexual misconduct and abuse of power, noted in his diaries a discussion about political funds he had with Gramm in 1992. Packwood and Gramm later said the diary entry was inaccurate.

But Odam, a lawyer who served as an aide to former Gov. Mark White, wrote to U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno and the Federal Election Commission asking them to investigate.

"This is worthy of a serious investigation, and not just by the Senate Ethics Committee, which had to be literally embarrassed into acting on the Packwood case," Odam said.

Gramm last week said, "Nothing wrong was done. ... What Senator Packwood is doing in his diaries I don't know."

In Thursday's letter to Gramm, the Ethics Committee said it had "reviewed this matter and has concluded that no further action will be taken by the committee."

And in a letter to Odam, Neal wrote: "I guess fish gotta swim, birds gotta fly and lawyers gotta whine, John, but isn't it a little early — even for an ambulance chaser like you — to ask the Clinton administration to bail out your campaign?"

A March 6, 1992, taped Packwood diary entry described the meeting with Gramm, who then chaired the GOP's Senate campaign committee. Packwood said Gramm promised to funnel $100,000 in party "soft" money to Packwood's campaign.

Such money can be used only for party-building activities, such as get-out-the-vote drives and phone banks. It cannot legally be used to assist individual candidates.

"What was said in that room would be enough to convict us all of something," Packwood said on tape. "He says, now, of course, you know there can't be any legal connection between this money and Sen. Packwood, but we know that it will be used for his benefit."

Packwood added: "I think that's a felony. I'm not sure. This is an area of the law I don't want to know."

The mention in the original diary disappeared in an altered version Packwood gave the Senate Ethics Committee. The panel later reported that Packwood testified "the conversation in fact reflected nothing that was illegal, that the entry was in jest, and that nobody in Senator X's (Gramm) position would take that kind of a risk."

Gramm wrote the ethics panel to say that Packwood's entry "reflects an obvious misunderstanding of the election law that governs contributions by party committees."

In 1992, the National Republican Senatorial Committee donated the legal maximum of $17,500 to Packwood and the maximum $120,092 in coordinated expenditures on his behalf. It gave an additional $96,500 in "soft money" to the Oregon GOP.

Man accused in bomb plot did not hide dislike of taxes, ex-boss says

TYLER (AP) — The suspect in a plot to blow up an Internal Revenue Service center in Austin was an above-average worker who made his dislike of the federal tax system clear, his former boss said.

Charles Ray Polk, 45, is being held without bond in the Smith County Jail. He was jailed July 28, when authorities arrested him on suspicion of planning to plant explosives throughout the IRS regional service center, a sprawling complex that contains up to 4,200 employees.

Records at the Smith County Courthouse also show Polk renounced his U.S. citizenship and "revoked" his status as a taxpayer in August and September of 1994.

He pleaded innocent to six counts handed down in an indictment Tuesday, ranging from possession of a machine gun to attempting to use a weapon of mass destruction. If convicted, he faces life in prison and a $1 million fine.

"He voiced his objection to the IRS, but he never said anything or did anything to lead us to believe he would be involved in a situation he is involved in now," said Jack King Sr., owner of King Chevrolet in Tyler, Polk's last employer.

Polk quit his job earlier this year despite high performance marks, King said.

"While he was employed here, he was very conscientious and cooperative," King said. "The customers really liked him. He had a good record. There was nothing deceptive on his record."

The tax troubles that authorities think turned Polk's dislike for the IRS into a militant hatred caused Polk to quit the dealership after working there for less than two years, King said.

Polk apparently owed less than $12,000 to the IRS.

He continued to visit former coworkers until the day of his arrest, said King, who added that Polk was "well-liked."

David Houser, a neighbor of Polk's, described him as somewhat of a "loner" and said that the FBI had been seeking him out about a year ago. Houser said he didn't know why.

Cars fuel gains in August retail sales

Source: Department of Commerce AP

By James H. Rubin
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Americans went on a car-buying spree last month, helping to push retail sales to the third increase in four months.

But analysts said Thursday's report — combined with a sharp increase in weekly unemployment claims — does not point to economic strength.

The Commerce Department said sales rose 0.6 percent in August, rebounding from a 0.4 percent decline the previous month.

But the spending was concentrated largely in auto purchasing, as dealers offered discounts to trim inventories. Car sales jumped 2.4 percent in August after falling 1.5 percent in July.

Excluding autos, retail sales were unchanged in August after a 0.3 percent gain in July. Analysts said home computers and software were the only other area in which sales were solid.

"It's certainly not a sign of strength," said economist Charles Renfro of Alphametrics, a forecasting service in Bala Cynwyd, Pa. "The economy is moving ahead with deliberation. It's nothing really to write home about."

What's more, the Labor Department said the number of American workers filing first-time claims for jobless benefits shot up by a surprising 21,000 last week to the highest level in nearly two months.

"The two reports should reduce the fear that growth is about to accelerate excessively," said Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch & Co. "Modest gains in consumer spending will remain a brake on the current U.S. expansion."

On Wall Street, stocks rallied to their third straight record high, with the Dow Jones industrial average gaining 36.27 points to close at 4,801.79. The yield on the Treasury's 30-year bond fell to 6.45 percent — moving in the opposite direction of its price — amid hopes economic weakness will bring further interest rate cuts by the Federal Reserve.

Federal Reserve policy-makers meet Sept. 26 to decide whether the economy's sluggishness warrants another interest rate cut. Analysts said there is room for one but predicted the lack of a definite trend may prompt the panel to sit tight, content the economy is on course for a soft landing combining moderate growth and little inflation.

The Fed, after raising rates seven times over a one-year stretch, reversed course in July and trimmed a key rate for the first time in nearly three years.

The Commerce Department said sales fell more sharply in July than previously estimated — down 0.4 percent instead of 0.1 percent.

The August rebound pushed sales to a seasonally adjusted $197.3 billion, up from $196 billion the month before.

Durable goods — including appliances, autos and other items expected to last more than three years — were up 1.7 percent last month after falling 0.8 percent in July.

Prices climb

Gasoline futures prices shot to their highest level in 2 1/2 months Thursday as Hurricane Marilyn headed toward the islands of the eastern Caribbean, an important gasoline refining region.

The strength in gasoline pulled crude oil and other energy futures higher on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Wholesale unleaded gasoline for October delivery climbed 1.47 cents to 56.81 cents a gallon, the highest daily settlement for near-term deliveries since June 30.

October deliveries of West Texas Intermediate jumped 31 cents to $18.85 a barrel. Local purchasers raised their posted price to $17.25 a barrel.

In addition to the storm, gasoline was bolstered by the possibility of a November supply squeeze.

October natural gas fell 6.9 cents to $1.851 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Airwave auction

WASHINGTON — Federal regulators cleared the way for slices of the airwaves to be auctioned for a variety of mobile services, including phones, paging and messaging.

The Federal Communications Commission adopted rules Thursday that would for the first time allow companies to acquire "specialized mobile radio" licenses by bidding on them. The licenses have previously been awarded by lottery. For years, the companies holding the licenses primarily provided dispatch services to trucking, taxi and other companies.

Dollar retreats

New York – The dollar slipped from a seven-month high against the deutsche mark amid signs of German economic strength, and fell from its 15-month high against the yen.

The dollar closed at 1.4862 marks, down from 1.4925 marks Wednesday in New York.

The dollar reached 103.75 yen, a level it last matched June 13, 1994.

The British pound fell to $1.5488 from $1.5494 Wednesday in New York. The dollar fell to 1.2126 Swiss francs from 1.2181 francs and to 5.1195 French francs from 5.1352 francs. The Canadian dollar fell to 73.15 U.S. cents, down from 73.61 cents.

Markets surge

NEW YORK — Stocks shot to record highs on Thursday, as hopes for an interest-rate cut were heightened by fresh evidence that the economy is slowing.

The Dow Jones industrial average climbed 36.28 to 4,801.80, closing above 4,800 for the first time and setting a new record closing high for the third consecutive session.

Advancing issues had an 11-to-8 lead on decliners on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume was heavy, with a revised 382.87 million shares changing hands.

The Nasdaq composite index dropped 0.44 to 1,066.96, shy of its record high closing of 1,067.40 set on Wednesday. The American Stock Exchange's market value index fell 0.36 to 562.77, below its record high of 563.58 set Tuesday.

But Standard & Poor's 500 composite index closed at a record high for the eighth consecutive session, up 4.84 to 583.61. And the NYSE composite index climbed 2.37 to 312.75, logging its fifth consecutive record high.

Marketing football could change quickly

By Susan Hightower
Associated Press Writer

IRVING, Texas — The National Football League's tight-knit system for marketing more than $3 billion a year in licensed merchandise and dividing profits could fall into anarchy as a result of a challenge from the owner of the Dallas Cowboys.

In recent weeks, Cowboys owner Jerry Jones has defied the NFL — and gloated about it. Jones signed deals with PepsiCo Inc. and Nike Inc., which are competitors with official league soft drink Coca-Cola and NFL licensee Reebok International Ltd. Estimates have put the value of each deal around $2.5 million a year, Pepsi for 10 years, Nike for seven.

Asked whether more deals are in the works, such as a much-rumored alliance with American Express Co., Jones replied: "Stay tuned this week."

Jones apparently can skirt the league rules by making the Nike and Pepsi deals with Texas Stadium, which he also owns, and not with his team. He is one of only three NFL owners in that favorable position, along with Robert Kraft of the New England Patriots and Wayne Huizenga of the Miami Dolphins.

Some team owners have said publicly that Jones is hurting the league by putting his own interests first. The issue is sure to be raised at an owners' meeting Tuesday in Atlanta.

Unless the league regains control, analysts say they expect the marketing of pro football to change — and fast.

"I think right now as we speak there's a lot of NFL teams going to the drawing board and looking to see what they can do," said Brandon Steiner, owner of New York-based Steiner Sports Marketing. "We may see more deals this season, and for sure next season."

Jones wants to change the league's revenue-sharing system, which dates back to the creation of NFL Properties in 1963. All 30 pro football teams run their equipment licensing through NFL Properties and split the royalties evenly — about $3.5 million per team a year.

"The NFL is the most well-oiled, well-run sports marketing machine in America today. It is consistent, it delivers a good product, it is effective and efficient," said Nye Lavalle, chairman and managing director of Dallas-based Sports Marketing Group. "This takes a big chunk out of their armor. It really puts a crack in the foundation of the NFL and what they offer sponsors and marketers."

FCC may relax rules on phone access rates

By N.Y. Times News Service

Washington — Baby Bell telephone companies may soon gain more freedom to cut prices they charge long-distance companies to complete their calls under a plan proposed Thursday by the Federal Communications Commission.

The agency proposed relaxing its rules to let the seven regional Bell companies package their access rates differently, introduce new services, or even lower the prices they charge AT&T Corp., MCI Communications and other long-distance providers.

Lowering rates would let Bells compete with cheap competitors in their markets.

Also discussed at a public FCC meeting today but not voted on were plans to move away from the regulation of those prices altogether.

The commission's plan would take into account the extent to which individual Bell markets and services face competition in determining how much the rules should be relaxed.

"We need to make sure that competition is recognized when it comes," said Kathleen Wallman, head of the FCC's phone bureau. Ultimately, she said, "we want to get to the point where we can say there's no need to regulate (the access fees) any more at all."

Almost a third of the Baby Bells' $74 billion revenues in 1994 came from access fees paid by long-distance carriers. More importantly, the access fees contribute about 20 percent of the average local phone company's profits, according to Natwest Securities.

For the long-distance companies, these charges are equally significant. "Access fees represent 45 percent of our costs," said Len Sawicki, MCI Communications Corp.'s senior manager of regulatory affairs.

Sawicki said that while he supports any rule that promotes lower fees, he characterized today's FCC proposal as being "premature." The Bell markets aren't competitive enough yet to justify a loosening of regulations that would let them price flexibly, he said.

"The commission can't get ahead of the market, because it will make it impossible for new competition to thrive," he said.

The Bells contend that pricing flexibility is crucial to let them compete with a new crop of competitors in urban markets.

"In part because of the pressures of the productivity factor and in part because of (the sharing provision), the Bells have been moving pretty rapidly to improve their cost structures," said Blake Bath of Sanford C. Berstein & Co.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Growth funds good for 10-12 year investment spans

By Bill Doyle

Doyle

Q: My brother is vice president of a savings and loan association. I recently gave him $500 for each of my two sons. He put it in a savings account until Mr. Greenspan and his agency raise interest rates again in January, at which time he will put the money in longer-term certificates of deposit.

My sons are ages 8 and 6 and won't need the money until they turn 18.

This will not be the last money I will invest for my sons' futures. Where do you think I should put the next $1,000 — the same place or in something different?

A: There are many investments available for the 10- and 12-year spans until your boys turn 18. They range from rock-solid safe things such as Series EE U.S. savings bonds and zero-coupon U.S. Treasury bonds on out to various degrees of risk.

For your purpose, my recommendation is to pick a no-load growth mutual fund with a good performance record. That type of fund, which invests in common stocks with records and/or expectation of increasing in value, carries risk — but also greater potential for profit.

Over the long haul, growth funds have done better than fixed-income investments such as bonds.

Assuming the S&L at which your brother is an officer has Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage, the money you placed there is absolutely safe. And the CDs scheduled for purchase in January likely will pay higher interest than savings accounts.

But where did you get the notion that the Federal Reserve Board, of which Alan Greenspan is chairman, has set January as the time to raise interest rates?

Wall Street is full of "Fed watchers" who try to forecast when the Fed will change interest rates. None is right all the time. Most are wrong most of the time.

If you or your brother could accurately predict when and to what degree the Fed will nudge interest rates up or down, you could get awfully rich awfully fast playing the interest rate futures market.

Q: My wife and I are both retired. She's 68; I'm 70. Our annual income is approximately $50,000. We have a 7 7/8 percent, $45,000, 30-year mortgage on our home, with 27 years to go.

We could use the savings we have in a money market fund to pay off the mortgage. Would that be a wise move?

A: Yes.

Here we are back to basics. The interest you are paying on the mortgage is higher than what you are getting on the money market fund. So you would come out ahead by paying off the mortgage.

It's to your financial advantage to stay in debt or take on new debt only when you can put the borrowed money to work earning more than the interest you pay on your debt. Simple as that!

In your case, you're certainly getting less than 7 7/8 percent on your money market fund.

As I write this, the Bank Rate Monitor reports the national average on bank money market deposit accounts as 2.85 percent. Money market mutual funds are yielding 4 to 5 percent.

Q: I deposited a Federal Reserve check into my account at a local bank, only to have the local bank hold the money for 11 days before releasing it.

I don't understand how, in good conscience, they could do that. I received a letter from the bank, saying it was done because the check exceeded $5,000. So? From the Federal Reserve?

A: By "Federal Reserve check," I have to assume you mean a check from the U.S. Treasury Department, drawn on its account at one of the 12 Federal Reserve banks — where our federal government keeps its money.

Under the Expedited Funds Availability Act, your bank generally is required to give you access to money deposited by federal, state or local government check the next business day. The bank can put longer "holds" on new customers' accounts.

However, even if you're a new customer, the bank is supposed to make $5,000 available from government checks that very next business day.

FAMILY MATTERS

Gift-giving should include appropriate presents

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I am having a problem with my husband that's hard for me to describe, but it's driving me crazy. He keeps doing things and getting things for me that I don't want or like. Then when he does it, I can't say I don't want it, but I don't!

May

I have been on a diet since the first of the year. I have lost almost 30 pounds and it's been hard to do. My husband came home from work yesterday (for the third time) and brought me a large box of chocolates "because I deserved a treat." He also buys cookies from the bakery sometimes "for the kids."

I've told him and told him not to bring home sweets, but if I say anything at the time, he gets his feelings hurt. He can't understand how I can complain about him doing something thoughtful for me that most wives would love. Then I feel guilty and thank him profusely and beg him to forgive me. After it's over, I feel guilty, angry and confused.

He also does something that I guess I should be thankful for, but again, I'm not. He will buy me clothes that I don't like but have to wear anyway or hurt his feelings. The clothes he buys me are nice, but they are things he likes — color and style — and are not my colors or styles that I think look better on me. I try to act like I'm happy to get them but I'm really not. I think he knows that I don't really like them and he always offers to take them back. But I've learned that if I take them back and exchange them, he gets his feelings really hurt and pouts for days. It's just easier for me to wear them once or twice and be uncomfortable.

I know all this must sound pretty petty, but it's driving me nuts. I really do appreciate him thinking of me and being so generous, but why can't he listen to me and get me things that I want? I don't want to hurt his feelings anymore, so should I just accept his gifts and try to not let it bother me? I feel like such a nag. CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: You certainly are in a confusing situation. When a spouse spontaneously gives a gift, either physical or emotional, the gesture is truly wonderful — but the gift should be appropriate. Giving chocolates and cookies to someone on a diet is not appropriate. Also, the gift of clothes sounds as if it is for him rather than for you.

I encourage you to politely refuse any such future gifts. Offer him an alternative to that specific gift. For example, you may thank him for the clothes, but tell him that you are going to exchange them for colors that you like better. You can stop playing this game with your husband. Even though you may feel guilty at first, remember the Guilt Rule: Ask yourself, "did I do something wrong?" In his case, returning clothes in the wrong styles and colors, and that you don't want to wear, is not wrong.

Although you may feel guilty — return it anyway. As you apply this rule, you will find yourself feeling less guilty when you have nothing to feel guilty about.

If your husband is really trying to please you, he will change in response to your new position, and without pouting. In your case you must be insistent and consistent with him. If he does not change or refuses to change, he may well have other reasons for his "gift giving." Should this be the case, I encourage you to seek professional help from either your minister or a marriage counselor.

THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES OFFER THE FOLLOWING TIPS ON BUILDING YOUR CHILD'S SELF-ESTEEM:

- Actively listen to your child when he or she speaks.
- Look into your child's eyes.
- React with your facial expressions.
- Display your child's school papers and art work on the refrigerator or on a special bulletin board.
- Praise your child for a job well done, or a funny joke, or an act of kindness.
- Attend special events at school when you can. Your presence says, "I think you are important."
- Make special times to be with each of your children alone, sharing a book, taking a walk, going to the library or just picking up a carton of milk at the store.
- Positive touching like hugs, a pat on the back or a gentle squeeze on the arm can say "I love you. You are special."

Remember, healthy self-esteem can't be taught. It has to be developed through positive action. It's about having self-confidence and the knowledge that one can accomplish things, make decisions and solve problems.

Male bounding: Men stepping up to become aerobics instructors

By June Naylor Rodriguez
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — It's Sunday afternoon at a fitness studio on Fort Worth's west side, and the thumping music can be heard from the scorched sidewalk.

The desk attendant inside warns a late arrival that the step aerobics class beyond the double doors is packed.

Uh-oh ... who's teaching today?

"Jim. Who else?"

That would be Jim Benson, a 32-year-old instructor who trained to lead aerobics classes just 18 months ago but now fills the huge room with 50 or so women and a handful of men who squat, flex, kick, pant and sweat along with him for at least an hour. As is the trend at studios everywhere, more and more men are taking to the once female-dominated job of aerobics instructor.

"Come on. Stay with me. Pull those abs tight. Now challenge that knee lift," he says while grinning almost maniacally.

Some respond with pained groans, but they'll be back the next day and the day after that.

"It's his intensity and power moves," said Chris Jackson, who has been Benson's student for a year.

His classes were among those that motivated her to shed 35 pounds and become an instructor.

ONLY THE SECOND male instructor to lead classes at Aerobics to Go, where about a dozen women teach, Benson is also helping overturn the perception that fitness teachers are just about beauty and brawn.

He has a kind face and ready smile, but Benson, a Texas Christian University graduate in accounting and an active partner in his family's construction business, inspires hard work rather than gawking. That kind of intense style favored by male instructors is winning devotees.

Spokesmen for IDEA, a San Diego fitness professionals' organization, and the American Council on Exercise said they've seen no increase in the number of male instructors, possibly because men aren't quick to become certified instructors.

Nevertheless, local gyms are eager to hire male teachers.

"There's always been a need for male instructors, and there's definitely an increasing interest among men in becoming instructors," said Sue White, a manager in the Metropolitan YMCA offices in Fort Worth. "And anytime I've had a male instructor in places I've worked, the class is packed."

Robert Dyer, owner of Fit For Life Center in Fort Worth, said: "We're always looking for men who teach aerobics; their classes are very popular. But it's really hard to find them."

Kent Tucker at Huguley Fitness Center in Fort Worth, said: "Absolutely, we're on the lookout for good men instructors. We'd love to have more."

SOME WOMEN find male teachers easier to accept.

"Women sometimes compare themselves to female teachers and feel insecure," said Kathy Davis, executive director at IDEA. "And men teach differently."

Davis said men are less "dancey" in their teaching, and lean more toward athletic moves. Some people, often incorrectly, interpret male teachers as tougher or more challenging, she said.

On the other side of Tarrant county, another guy has a room full of exercisers at World Gym in Bedford jamming to an intensely choreographed aerobics class called step-funk. One of two male teachers at the gym, which also employs 13 female teachers, Scotty Esquibel wears a hat backward and keeps the class chuckling with his joking personality.

"Scotty's very funny. His class is better than a good, stiff drink," said Patty Sarason of Bedford. "Every class he has has different music and he breaks down the steps so we can follow him, but he's also obviously educated about health and fitness.

"There are a couple of women (teachers) who are cute and spunky, but they don't get the same energy going that Scotty does. And he has far more personality than some women teachers, who can be like, 'I'm beautiful and I'm skinny so just follow me.' "

A former Reebok aerobics champion, Esquibel has taken his fitness passion from hobby to career. Recently hired as the aerobics coordinator at Dallas' Verandah Club, Esquibel ended a 14-year tenure as speech pathologist in the Hurst-Euless-Bedford school district to pursue full-time fitness work.

THE ENTRANCE of males into what's still a female-dominated world can lead to some "interesting" situations.

To prevent problems, Benson said he and Aerobics To Go owner Deb Hillman agreed that dating class members would be avoided.

"I wouldn't want to compromise anything," said Benson, allowing that once or twice he has made the mistake of accepting what he thought were innocent invitations to play tennis or have a drink.

Davis said that because men are a scarce commodity, they can command higher fees. In North Texas, instructors earn anywhere from $25 to $100 per class.

"Aerobics is no longer that hop-'til-you-drop thing," Esquibel said. "Like a friend told me the other day, 'Aerobics is NOT big hair and thongs.' "

Chef opens own country restaurant

By Beverly Bundy
N.Y. Times News Service

WHEATLAND — You hear it wherever unwinding yuppies congregate on the weekend, drinking fruit-flavor beer and eating goat cheese nachos.

"I'm just going to quit," is how it goes, "move out to the country, and open a restaurant."

The problem is that these folks know nothing about the country, and even less about running restaurants. But by golly, they know food, and they're sure running a restaurant would be the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.

Michele Tezak had the same dream. But the difference between Michele and the rest of us is that Michele knows what she's doing.

After more than five years as the chef for the tony Greenhouse Health and Beauty Spa in Arlington, Tezak decided that city life wasn't for her. She preferred green acres to a greenhouse. After all, cooking for calorie-deprived countesses, Hollywood royalty and garden variety Mommy Warbucks can't be exactly stress-free.

Tezak had her plot picked out. She already stabled her horse in tiny Wheatland (population 200 and 15 miles southwest of Fort Worth) and her church was nearby. So she packed her knives, loaded up her La Varenne "diplome" (1979) and moved out to her newly constructed Cafe 1187, named for the farm road that runs in front of the mesquite-endowed property.

The building is simple, but practical and nostalgic. The overhanging front-porch ceiling is painted traditional Southern blue. A wide front entry hall opens to two dining rooms, each with a fireplace and five tables. Tezak cooks in a glass-enclosed kitchen that rounds out the main building, and when she's finished for the day, she walks next door to her own home.

The food, for the most part, is simple, too, although so well-prepared that that adjective may be misleading. The chicken salad sandwich, for instance ($4.25 at lunch), is served on homemade bread, which is remarkably light and toasted with a buttery crust.

From the daily chalkboard list, we liked Cajun shepherd's pie ($5.95), a bowl of ground beef combined with squash, onions and red bell pepper chunks and topped with a blanket of mashed potatoes. Entrees, at both lunch and dinner, are accompanied by salad.

Dinner choices vary nightly and are just as satisfying as the lunch items. A rib-eye steak ($10.95) appeared too thin when it arrived at the table. But silly me, I forgot there was a pro in the kitchen, so the center was the perfect medium rare I'd requested. Pan-fried potatoes on the side would make any home-cook proud.

For now, Cafe 1187's customers are locals, but I'm willing to bet that will change when city dwellers discover this little slice of heaven. J Tezak and Cafe 1187 are everything that is right about Texas. Both have a pioneering bent and a love for the land that marks the true Lone Star spirit. Best of all, there's not an ounce of artifice about either one of them.

DEAR ABBY

Guide helps Gulf War vets navigate bureacratic seas

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am co-author of "The Viet Vet Survival Guide," a book you mentioned in your column in 1986. The resulting publicity put it into the hands of tens of thousands of veterans and their families in need of information.

Van Buren

Abby, approximately 700,000 U.S. troops served in the Persian Gulf War. Although the fighting was brief, significant numbers of veterans have since suffered a range of unexplained — and often severe — symptoms. The most frequent include: chronic fatigue, joint pain, respiratory ailments, memory loss, rashes, hair loss and gastrointestinal disorders.

There has been no definitive diagnosis to explain the symptoms known as Persian Gulf Syndrome. (In fact, there may be no single disease or syndrome, but rather multiple illnesses with common symptoms and multiple possible causes.) Although no conclusive cause or causes have yet been identified, the needs of these veterans (and in some cases their families) who are apparently suffering as a result of their service in the Persian Gulf are real and extensive. There are approximately 60,000 known cases to date.

As co-founder and joint executive director of the National Veterans Legal Services Program (NVLSP), I need your help to inform the veterans about our new "Self-Help Guide for Veterans of the Gulf War." It is a working tool for Persian Gulf veterans and their families who are suffering from illness as a result of their service in the Persian Gulf. This guide provides easy-to-use information to veterans, veterans service officers and others assisting Persian Gulf veterans and their families.

It analyzes the new laws governing Persian Gulf veterans when filing and appealing claims for compensation and medical care before the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs (the VA) and the Department of Defense. It also provides strategies for the best methods to obtain compensation and medical care from the VA, and it details the unique eligibility requirements for compensation and methods to prove eligibility.

As a non-profit public service organization, NVLSP is not interested in benefiting financially from this guide. Our mission is to help needy veterans and their families. We are offering the only self-help guide for Persian Gulf veterans for $5. We also offer discount rates for bulk orders from organizations that provide free services to veterans.

Abby, we would appreciate your help in getting the word out to veterans who would benefit from the information in this guide. — DAVID ADDLESTONE, WASHINGTON, D.C.

DEAR MR. ADDLESTONE: I'm delighted to help. Readers, to order this self-help guide, send a check or money order for $5 to: NVLSP-Persian Gulf Guide, Drawer 017, Washington, D.C. 20055. Allow two weeks for delivery.

DEAR ABBY: I have enjoyed your column for at least 30 years, and have used it many times as the basis for journal responses with my college sociology students. Ordinarily, I don't take the time to write, but you missed a grand opportunity when you responded to the woman whose husband got out of bed after being awakened at an early hour one Saturday and went to help his neighbor re-roof his house. You suggested that everyone should have neighbors like them. How about "everyone should try to be a neighbor like them"?

If we were all good neighbors, we would all have good neighbors. Idealistic? Yes, but generosity is just as contagious as resentment, and as the Good Book states, we generally reap what we sow.

Please do not print my name. — STATESBORO, GA.

DEAR STATESBORO: Your point is well-taken. Thank you for the reminder that the Golden Rule remains untarnished.

Volunteering better than housework

By Lana Cunningham

Sally Whiteley jokes that she's finally found her niche in life — answering the telephone. That is only one of the special talents she shares as a volunteer in organizations throughout Midland. And it keeps her out of the house and away from the housework.

She takes her telephone answering talent to St. Andrews Presbyterian Mission, Midland Association for Retarded Citizens and the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum. That's not the only talent she shares in her work at the Opportunity Center Auxiliary, First Presbyterian Church and VOICES (a child advocacy program with Center for Children and Families).

Almost 70, her advice is: "Don't stay home. If you stay home, you'll have to work. The kitchen floor stays dirty, but no one is there to see it but me. I like to be out with people."

Her involvement with other people began more than 20 years ago when she and her late husband, Wade, helped organize MARC, and her involvement branched into the Opportunity Center Auxiliary. At St. Andrews Mission, Mrs. Whiteley also helps with the food pantry.

The Santa Rita Club at The Petroleum Museum keeps her out of the house several hours each week and it draws on her early years in Midland. She moved here in 1949 from Lubbock, a young single woman. "This was one of the boom periods. There were all sorts of single people and fun activities."

She met her husband, Wade, a New York transplant brought here by Shell Oil. "He loved it here," she said. Eventually, he left the oil industry to start his own insurance agency.

In 1983, a friend saw The Petroleum Museum was offering docent training. "We came out here and took it, and I've been here ever since," she chuckled. "They can't get rid of me."

Not that they would want to.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Sally Whiteley is a volunteer for several local organizations, including the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, where she helps in the gift shop as shown above.

Mrs. Whiteley gives tours to fourth- and fifth-graders from Midland and Odessa, works in the Gift Shop, assists with the puppet shows, and serves as Exhibits Chairman and as a member of the Hostess Committee. The latter two kept her busy setting up displays for the Museum's 20th anniversary this week and assisting with the special Tom Lovell reception on Thursday evening.

Telling people young and old the story of the petroleum industry gives her enjoyment. The puppet shows go to the schools and prepare the students for what they will be seeing at a museum tour. And the scripts are humorous, she noted. Puppets include a snake, armadillo, Indians, cowboys, rancher, oilman and female geologist, "to be politically correct," she joked.

An outreach program to the schools focuses on Indians, dinosaurs, rocks or minerals, she said. And a special one titled "Hats" is designed for first graders.

Then Mrs. Whiteley works as a docent when the schools come to the Museum for tours. "It's such a treat when a kid who has been here on a school tour comes back with his family."

The Petroleum Museum has provided not only Mrs. Whiteley an outlet for her energy, but many others. "So many people have found their niche out here, and we couldn't do without the men in the (Santa Rita) Club. They work as a docent, in the Gift Shop, in the Archives or with maintenance. I stop and think of the programs we would not have here if it were not for the willingness of people to participate," she said.

And she views the Petroleum Museum as a "golden star in Midland's crown. Everyone enjoys it. I've seen other museums that were just a hodge-podge of things. This is a first-class facility."

Through the years, Mrs. Whiteley said, she has loosened up. "I used to be somebody who wanted things done now and preferably my way. Now, I've decided that if it doesn't get done, there's no earth-shattering thing about it. My husband said one time, 'You know, Sally, things will just go on whether you're here or not.' I found out he was right."

She now relaxes by going to a movie, reading, playing duplicate bridge, doing needlework or working crossword puzzles. "But not mopping the kitchen floor," she laughed.

Sometimes self-indulgence is good for health

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

With apologies to Tiffany's, the following is a description of Breakfast at Duffy's:

Listen here, all ye nostalgic souls longing for the good old days and hear the story of a good old native eatery that perseveres in East Orland, Maine.

It ain't fancy like Bar Harbor, historic like the Jed Prouty in Bucksport, commercial like the old Bangor House or too fishy like nearby Lobster Pounds. One breakfast gives you enough calories and cholesterol to last a month. Lunch and dinner consist of steamed clams from Penobscot Bay, lobsters and crabs that were scavengering the sea bottom yesterday, local lamb, barnyard chicken, new potatoes, fresh greens, pancakes resembling pies, blueberry pies and so on ad infinitum — all served with a smile, weather forcast and apt remarks by Betsy.

All this takes place in an old wooden edifice that is scrumptiously clean with no sign of grease, and populated by local gentry, earthy farmers, fishermen, woodsmen and tourisk ilk of all kinds and descriptions. An air of contentment pervades the atmosphere.

As I comfortably digested my large orange juice, two eggs, two large sausage patties, home-fried potatoes, three slices of buttered homemade bread and two cups of coffee, realization dawned with the philosophical thought that the fundamental values of life's social intercourse still persist in our confusional social world, and that we older folks need not despair, albeit Down Easterners and West Texans may speak with differing acents. The reassuring fact remains that their principles and standards are similar.

If perchance you are stressed by life in general or by maintaining a strict health regimen, indulge in brief respite therapy by enjoying an occasional break as described above, and regain a clearer view of life. Stopping to smell flowers and stopping to smell garlic possess a lot in common in gaining perspective, and can keep you from taking living too seriously.

A near-by restaurant recently advertised "dinner — $3.95 — seven types of meat." Investigation found that they served hash.

By Carolyn Poirot
N.Y. Times News Service

INGRAM — Beverley Sheffield figures he completed the swim from New York to Los Angeles several years ago. Now at 82, he is on his way to Hawaii.

The rumor that Sheffield swims five miles every day is greatly exaggerated, he told me. "I swim at least a mile three or four days a week, but not much more than that," confided the gentleman whom I first met just before he slipped into the cool, clear water of the Guadalupe River on a hot afternoon in July.

His wife of almost 56 years was right behind him, but she says she's not a serious swimmer. Plus, she hardly ever swims laps at Austin's treasured Barton Springs, where her husband does most of his swimming. "Barton Springs is just too cold for me," she said.

But Sheffield, who retired in 1978 as director of Parks and Recreation for the city of Austin, said: "I don't call it exercise. It's physical recreation. I'm re-creating my body. I feel so much better when I swim."

He has a pacemaker and was down but not out of swimming last summer because of some heart rhythm irregularities.

I talked with him at Waltonia Lodges on the Guadalupe River, west of Kerrville.

In 1960, when Barton Springs offered its first lifetime pass to an 85-year-old man who swam there on a regular basis, Sheffield and about a dozen other city officials swam with the elderly honoree about 300 yards, to the dam and back, in celebration. "It was easy for him. He was just dog-paddling, but I wasn't even 50 and I was so exhausted and pooped out," Sheffield said. "I hadn't been taking care of my own body."

Soon after, he started swimming a quarter of a mile a day, and when he had increased to a mile, he started logging his miles through a Red Cross program.

"I was 50 when I really started logging my swimming, and after 100 miles, I thought, my goodness, I've swam all the way from Austin to Waco," he said. "Then a few years ago I picked up a road map to figure how much further I had to go to swim across the country. The map I had said that from New York to Los Angeles was 2,820 miles. I looked at my log and realized I only had about 50 miles to go.

"Now I'm going on and swimming to Hawaii. It gives me such a sense of well-being. I'm swimming for my life ... literally."

An avid leader of the "Save Our Springs" coalition, Sheffield said Barton Springs, located about a mile and a half from his home, gives him a unique opportunity and he takes advantage of it, swimming all winter, often in 35-degree weather, if the sun is shining.

Frogs flattened

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Juma Henley and L.T. Levine each rushed for two touchdowns and more than 100 yards, including a pair of fourth-quarter sprints that halted Texas Christian's comeback, and Kansas rolled past the Horned Frogs 38-20 Thursday night.

Kansas, off to a 3-0 start for the first time since 1992, was led by Henley's 160 yards and Levine's 134.

The Jayhawks rushed for 183 yards in the first half while mounting a 21-7 lead. But they had minus-3 yards on the ground in the third quarter as TCU took control of everything but the score.

After Henley's first touchdown gave the Jayhawks a 21-7 lead with 11:32 left in the first half, Kansas went six straight possessions without a first down.

The crowd, announced at 34,000 but obviously much smaller, put up a sarcastic cheer when Mark Williams hit Isaac Byrd on a 14-yard pass for a first down on the final play of the third quarter.

Henley's second TD, a 59-yard burst, gave Kansas a 31-13 lead with 6:46 left. Then, with 4:04 to go, Levine broke loose for a 43-yard TD run that finally put the game out of reach despite the prodigious passing of Max Knake.

TCU's senior quarterback passed for 383 yards and two touchdowns and erased Sammy Baugh's school record with his 40th TD pass. His 41st went 11 yards to Ryan Tucker with 1:02 left.

TCU (1-1) got field goals of 24 and 19 yards from Michael Reeder to make it 21-13 with 46 seconds remaining in the third quarter.

Globetrotter streak

BRATISLAVA, Slovakia — The Harlem Globetrotters are on a winning streak again — one in a row.

Rebounding from their first loss in 24 years, the Globetrotters on Thursday defeated an all-star team led by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, 92-71.

That avenged Tuesday's 91-85 loss to Abdul-Jabbar's team that snapped their 8,829-game winning streak.

The 48-year-old basketball great had 16 points and 8 rebounds Thursday before a sellout crowd of 4,500.

Offense top concern for MHS

■ Putting points on the board first priority for Bulldogs in tonight's game against El Paso Bel Air.

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

Move the ball and score points. In a nutshell that is what the Midland High football team must do for the rest of the season.

But for now, the Bulldogs must worry about the El Paso Bel Air Highlanders and the 7:30 p.m. non-district match up tonight at Midland Memorial Stadium.

"We need to get in the win column," said Midland High head football coach Ronnie Reeger. "Offense is our biggest concern. We didn't have anything we could hang our hat on last week, running or passing. We have to block better, be more aggressive and make better decisions."

Midland High will move some players into the starting lineup with the hope of getting the spark that was missing in last week's 6-0 loss to Wolfforth Frenship. The Bulldogs had 153 yards in total offense last week, gained 33 yards in the first half, and completed one pass in five attempts for the game.

Senior Jeremy Pinner will start at quarterback though junior Russell Dunlavy, who will start at safety, is supposed to see action. Also, fullback Leighton King is back after missing the Frenship game with an injury. Reeger also expects wide receiver Merlin McAlister to see more time. This week's Boxing promoter Don King sits with TV executives at a news conference in New York Thursday to announce a deal to show Mike Tyson's Nov. 4 fight with Buster Mathis Jr. on "free" TV.

Tyson bout jumps from pay-per-view to FOX

By Larry McShane
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Eight months after his release from jail, boxing fans will see Mike Tyson free.

Tyson's Nov. 4 fight with Buster Mathis Jr. will air on the Fox network — one fight too late for folks who paid $49.95 for the 89-second Peter McNeeley fiasco, but perfectly timed to deplete the pay-per-view audience for the Riddick Bowe-Evander Holyfield fight that same night.

It will be the first major heavyweight fight on free TV since Muhammad Ali-Leon Spinks in 1978.

The announcement Thursday means the fight card for Nov. 4 now includes three bouts: Tyson vs. Mathis on Fox, Bowe vs. Holyfield on cable, and the night's real grudge match — Showtime vs. Time Warner Sports.

Time Warner is airing the Bowe-Holyfield rubber match at $39.95. Showtime, which has exclusive rights to Tyson's fights, abandoned pay-per-view plans for the Mathis fight and approved the Fox deal.

But Tyson promoter Don King said the move to Fox was not aimed at hurting Time Warner, his long-term nemesis. The spiky-haired spin doctor said the idea was a spiritual revelation that came to him and Tyson 35,000 feet up during a Concorde flight.

"We were flying up there ... no telephones ringing, and the spirit just came upon us," said King. He approached media mogul Rupert Murdoch about bringing the fight to Fox about two weeks ago, and the deal was quickly put in place.

Oilers to make 'Dome home at least to 1998

■ City of Houston promises not to interfere if the team moves after the last year of its ten-year lease.

By Michelle Koidin
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — The Houston Oilers are promising to fulfill their lease and play at the Astrodome through the 1997 season. What happens after that still is undecided.

"Right now, our efforts are concentrated on talking to the state of Tennessee and the city of Nashville," Oilers general counsel Steve Underwood said.

His comments came after the team settled its lawsuit against the city of Houston, Harris County and Astrodome USA.

Under the deal, the Oilers agreed to play all regular-season and post-season home games in the county-owned arena through the end of the 1997 season when their 10-year lease expires.

Deion checks ankle, drops in on Cowboys

■ Sanders stops off in Dallas for an MRI at Baylor Hospital.

The Associated Press

IRVING — Dallas' newest Cowboy made a brief appearance at the team's Valley Ranch headquarters on Thursday before going to a local hospital to have his injured left ankle examined.

Deion Sanders, who hurt his ankle earlier this year sliding into a base with the Cincinnati Reds, underwent a magnetic resonance test on the joint at Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas.

Team spokesman Rich Dalrymple said Sanders underwent the procedure "to compare to previous images that have been taken of his ankle."

"We won't have any comment as to the results of the MRI," Dalrymple said.

Sanders had a day off from the San Francisco Giants, his current baseball employer. He was in town to look at a home he may

'Dogs need to have their day against Bel Air

It may not be time to panic, but the Midland High Bulldogs need to show a little growl to go with their bite.

Williamson

It's no secret that the 'Dogs have not looked good the past two weeks in a scrimmage against Big Spring and a opening night loss to Frenship, both Class 4A schools.

Coach Ronnie Reeger has had some injuries and sickness, but he has also had to demote a few players here and there from starting roles for missing a practice or two. It may be time for a few of the MHS seniors to take a leadership role here.

Just about everyone expected the Purple Pack to be a better football team this year, but that outcome will ultimately depend on work, and not preseason hype and talk.

The MHS defense did a good job last week against Frenship in a 6-0 loss, but the offense didn't generate any consistency.

"We didn't block people, we didn't run through the right holes and we didn't get the job done," Reeger said of the Frenship game. "If we had a hole, we didn't run in it, and when we did hit the hole, something else would happen. We ran the ball when we should have thrown it. We didn't do much right.

"And we need a win real quick. We've got to have a better effort all around. Our defense did a pretty good job. We still had a chance to win the game, even as bad as we played on offense, but we couldn't score when we got a chance late at the 10-yard line."

That new beginning must start with El Paso Bel Air. This is a team MHS crushed last year on the road. And now the Bulldogs have them at home. And this has to be a critical outing for the Bulldogs.

With a 6-1 record after one week of the picking game, here is how Week 2 will turn out.

Midland High 24, El Paso Bel Air 13: Roy Coats set a city rushing record against Bel Air last year with over 300 yards rushing in the only meeting between the two schools. Coats isn't back, but Bel Air is the tonic the Bulldogs need right now. MHS is 15-5-1 against El Paso teams.

Odessa Permian 21, A&M Consolidated 14: Only four teams (Midland Lee, San Angelo, Plano and Amarillo High) have ever beaten Permian in Ratliff Stadium. A&M won last year, but this one is in Ratliff where the Panthers stand 86-7-2.

Stephenville 28, Abilene High 17: The Eagles looked good against Monterey last week, but Stephenville will arrive angry after ending its huge winning streak last week in a loss to Saginaw Boswell. Stephenville owns a 4-1 edge in the series.

Abilene Cooper 34, Killeen Ellison 20: The Cooper offense is for real. Now comes the test for its defense, which hurled the shutout last week.

Lubbock Monterey 35, San Angelo 10: This series is tied at 1-1-1, but the Bobcats have problems this year. This will make Monterey 2-0 against 4-5A.

Odessa High 25, Lubbock Coronado 14: OHS leads this series by a 3-0 mark and Coronado is only 1-18 against 4-5A. The only win came against MHS. This is a Saturday afternoon game.

Midland Lee 30, San Antonio Marshall 10: The Rebels stay unbeaten, but have to wait until Saturday night to do it. Lee beat Marshall last year in the only meeting between the schools, but this time Lee has to do it on a long road trip.

Lee JV drops game in rain

Midland Lee junior varsity fell to 0-2 on the season with fumble-plagued 26-15 loss to Odessa High JV in the rain and mud on Thursday night.

The Rebels, while claiming three OHS fumbles on defense, turned the ball over four times on offense, twice within in the 20-yard line in the first half.

Jeremy Deramus threw a 22-yard touchdown pass to Justin Coleman and Leroy Robinson scored on a 22-yard run for the Rebels. Chris Ulmo kicked a 25-yard field goal.

On defense, Cody Busbee, Brad Lofton and Sam Romine recovered fumbles and Chris Bailey blocked an OHS extra-point attempt.

Lee travels to Odessa next Thursday to take on the Permian JV at 7 p.m.

RUIDOSO, N.M. — The national champion Midland College golf team will open the 1995-1996 golf season here this weekend at the High Country Shootout.

The Chaparrals, who have won three straight titles at The Links at Sierra Blanca, will be led by Andrews' Derrick Pursley. Pursley, a first-team all-American and national runner up, and Scotland's Euan Little, a second-team all-Amercian, are the only returners from the National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) national champion team.

Midland High's Jeremiah Luttrell (1994), a transfer from Odessa College, joins former Midland High golfer Josh Jacobs (1995), former Midland Lee golfer K.J. Sanchez (1995) and Scotland's Steven Young.

Luttrell, who recently won the Midland Men's City Championship for the first time in three tries, was an honorable-mention all-American for the Wrangler golf team at the 1995 nationals. Young is the Scottish Boys champion, Irish Boys champion, and United Kingdom Boys champion. Young also placed third at the Junior World Championship.

Alamo 8th rallies

ODESSA — Tremaine Howell returned a Bonham interception 65 yards for a touchdown and Fidel Balderama kicked the go-ahead extra-point as Alamo rallied for a 19-18 eighth grade Midland-Odessa Conference football victory here Thursday afternoon during rainy and muddy conditions.

Alamo, which improved to 2-0 with the win, trailed the entire game by one touchdown and was trailing 18-12 with time running out. But with less than three minutes to play, Howell scored his second touchdown of the night as Will Lee's block cleared the way. Snapper Jared Martin and holder Greg Coleman were credited with good execution on Balderama's winning kick. Howell and T.J. Chandler scored Alamo's first two touchdowns on running plays.

Alamo plays Odessa Nimitz at 4:30 p.m. on Thursday at the Permian field.

Goddard Black defeated Alamo Gray 15-6, 0-15, 15-6 Thursday as eighth-grade volleyball action officially got underway for the 1995 season after the annual preseason tournament last week.

Lyndsey Mills scored 15 points from the serving line for Alamo, all in the second game, while Fulvia Gonzalez was the defensive leader.

In other action, San Jacinto White defeated Abell Blue 15-7, 14-16, 15-2 as White's Rebecca Nobles scored 21 points from the service line.

Also, Alamo Red defeated Goddard White 15-9, 6-15, 15-13. Sarah Dzubinski led Red with seven service points.

Trinity JH beats Grandfalls

Daniel Valles scored two points on a defensive safety as Trinity defeated Grandfalls 2-0 in six-man junior high football action Thursday. Michael Glasscock and Jeesoung were the other Charger standouts in a game dominated by defenses. Trinity improved to 2-0 for the year and will travel Thursday to Ira for its next game.

7th v-ball holds preseason

Abell Blue, Alamo Red, Goddard Red and Alamo Gray were among the first-round winners Thursday in the seventh grade preseason city volleyball Tournament. Also claiming first-round wins were Goddard Black, Abell White, Goddard White and San Jacinto White.

Results Thursday from the first round of the seventh-grade preseason city volleyball tournament:

Abell Blue def. San Jacinto Gold, 15-10, 14-0; Alamo Red def. Goddard White, 15-9, 15-4; Goddard Red def. Abell Maroon, 15-1, 15-12; Alamo Gray def. San Jacinto White 11-14, 16-14, 15-2; Goddard Black def. San Jacinto Green, 15-5, 15-9; Abell White def. Alamo White, 15-11, 11-13, 15-1; Goddard White def. Parcells' insomnia continues as Patriots play at San Francisco

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

Bill Parcells didn't sleep Sunday night after his Patriots were dominated by Miami.

What does he do this week, when the Pats go to San Francisco? Sleep in his bunker, of course.

This ends a brutal stretch for New England, which opened against the Browns, then got the Dolphins. They got their win the first week, so they can't do worse than a 1-2 start before the patsies start showing up.

This is NOT a good time to catch San Francisco.

The 49ers are miffed with people who think Deion Sanders was the ONLY reason they won the Super Bowl. In fact, Deion doing Dallas is probably the best thing that can happen to the 49ers — instead of post-title letdown, they now have motivation.

Pittsburgh (plus 7) at Miami

The Steelers can get away with blitzing 15 games out of 16. This is No. 16 — Dan Marino's release is too quick.

DOLPHINS, 24-7

Oakland (plus 2) at Kansas City

Jeff Hostetler has yet to complete a pass over 20 yards for the former mad bombers.

The Chiefs have beaten the Raiders 10 of 11 times and Marcus Allen and Art Shell give them motivation.

CHIEFS, 20-17 (overtime)

■ NFL Picks

Dallas (minus 7 1/2) at Minnesota

Owner Jerry Jones has pasted a target on the Cowboys' jerseys. Against most teams, including Vikings, it won't matter.

COWBOYS, 27-7

St. Louis (plus 3 1/2) at Carolina

Home opener for the Panthers and one they marked down as a possible win before the season. Now that the Rams are 2-0 ....

RAMS, 22-5

Cleveland (minus 7) at Houston

Not only is Houston's offense awful, the Oilers have now lost two of their best defenders.

BROWNS, 33-3

Chicago (pick 'em) at Tampa Bay

If the Bucs want to prove they're better, this is one they have to win.

They're better.

BUCS, 17-13

Cincinnati (plus 4) at Seattle

The bubble bursts here?

SEAHAWKS, 17-10

Arizona (plus 6 1/2) at Detroit

Even Buddy Ryan knows that Dave Krieg is hot and cold and due to be hot. He was hot most of last year in Detroit but without the Erics, Swann and Hill, it could be tough ...

LIONS, 24-14

San Diego (plus 1 1/2) at Philadelphia.

Randall's back, Rodney's waiting and Ray's ready to make the move again. But Natrone Means should prevail against an Eagles' defense that has trouble with the run.

CHARGERS, 13-7

Giants (plus 5 1/2) at Green Bay

This depends on which team shows up. So far, the Packers have played well for three-quarters of a game, the Giants for a half.

PACKERS, 23-19.

Indianapolis (plus 4) at Buffalo

Jim Kelly is happy the Bills are going back to one back and no huddle. Jim ignores the fact that Buffalo is sliding.

COLTS, 20-19

Washington (plus 9) at Denver

Gus Frerotte may be one of those backups whose game declines with his playing time. John Elway's game is fine.

BRONCOS, 27-10

Atlanta (plus 3) at New Orleans

The Falcons could be truly horrible.

SAINTS, 34-19

Jacksonville (plus 7) at Jets

This probably will be the only time this season that the Jets will be favored by a touchdown (they're AT Carolina later this year).

JETS, 6-2

MHS: Bulldogs look for 'go to guy'

(From 1C)

changes will be worth it if MHS can find someone to be the "go to guy."

"We need to find somebody to step up," said Reeger. "Through this week we don't have anyone that showed us the ability to break away and do something. We do have these people. We just want it demonstrated on Friday night."

Midland, 15-5-1 against schools from El Paso, didn't have the problem when it came to production in last year's game. Roy Coats rushed for a Midland city record, 337 yards. He also had three touchdowns in the Bulldogs 31-14 win in El Paso. Then junior Demitrius Lee had 48 yards and a touchdown. Midland High did have a problem stopping the run last season as Jamie Arrendondo found the end zone twice on runs of 80 yards. He had 186 for the game, but that would not be enough as MHS shut out Bel Air in the second half. For Midland High to repeat, the Bulldogs have to enjoy the same type of success.

"We have to do the same things and have to execute," said Reeger. "We ran the football well and played good defense. When you do those things, you have a chance to win."

Bel Air, a member of District 2-5A, brings a team with 11 returning starters, five on offense and six on defense, back from last year. Last season, the Highlanders ended a streak of five consecutive playoff appearances with a 5-5 record.

Bel Air will travel to the Tall City after a first-week 20-10 win over El Paso Burgess. Leading the way for the Highlanders is all-purpose back Alex Guerra. The senior, who had 742 yards rushing in 1994, touched the ball 14 times for 172 yards last week. That included a 87-yard kick return. Another weapon in the Bel Air wishbone offense is wide receiver John Solis, who caught 28 passes for 685 yards in '94.

Defensively, the Highlanders' strength will be in their linebacking corps. Ruben Gonzalez is the top dog there, leading the team in tackles in '94.

FOX: Tyson's money to drop without pay TV

how much they paid for the bout, but said they expected to break even.

Tyson made $25 million for the McNeeley fight, and will probably make less against Mathis without a contribution from the rich pay-per-view pool. King said the decision was "not a (financial) sacrifice, but an investment" in Tyson's future popularity.

As to his dispute with Time Warner, King replied, "I have no desire to get into a spitting match."

The promoter repeatedly said this was Tyson's attempt to give something back to the public, although he emphatically denied the McNeeley fight was a ripoff.

"That was the best Mike Tyson fight I ever saw," he said.

This is latest blow in a feud that started when Tyson finished serving his three-year rape sentence on March 25.

Despite Time Warner's efforts to sign the ex-champ, Tyson chose King and Showtime. The bad feelings escalated until both sides announced plans for competing cards on Nov. 4.

Reaction toward the announcement was as predictable as the Tyson-McNeeley fight.

"I think it's a huge embarrassment for Showtime," said Holyfield's promoter, Dan Duva. "All the time and money and effort they've invested in Don King and Mike Tyson, and then he shows up on Fox?"

Showtime president Matt Blank said Tyson's appearance on free TV would boost interest in his next pay-per-view bout, set for March 16 against an undetermined opponent.

"That can only build the legend of Mike Tyson, and that's the business we're in for the next couple of years — building the legend of Mike Tyson," Blank said. "That's to everybody's benefit."

Said Seth Abraham, president of Time Warner Sports: "We will respond at the appropriate time."

The fight will air in the middle of sweeps week, ensuring the fourth network a major ratings hit. The Tyson fight will anchor three hours of live prime-time programming, which means fight fans could probably see both bouts. The Tyson program would likely run from 8-11 p.m.; the main events in pay-per-view fights generally begin after 11 p.m.

"That fight will be over before our fight," Duva said. "The free fight doesn't affect our event at all."

DOME: Adams negotiating with Nashville for 1998

(From 1C)

In return, the other parties promised not to interfere if the team moves after that season.

The settlement was signed late Wednesday by U.S. District Judge Lynn N. Hughes.

The talks with Nashville and Tennessee officials began last month after Houston and Harris County officials insisted they could not afford to build a new domed stadium demanded by Oilers owner Bud Adams.

Adams is negotiating with Nashville officials about moving the Oilers to a 76,000-seat, open-air stadium for the 1998 season.

If the Oilers don't reach an agreement with Nashville by Dec. 1, the team will negotiate for the next six months with Houston officials, according to the court agreement. During that time, the franchise would be free to talk to other cities.

Both sides expressed satisfaction with the deal.

"We're very comfortable with it, very pleased that it's been reached," Underwood said. "In the event we don't come to terms with Nashville, there will be an opportunity for us to sit down with city and county officials about the possibility of us staying."

John O'Quinn, an attorney for the city and county, said the arrangement hinges on Adams' promise to remain in Houston for two more seasons.

"If the Oilers do not do what they've promised to do in this consent decree, we have retained all of our rights against the Oilers. We have not given up any of rights to get this consent decree," he said.

Also as part of the settlement, the county will drop a state court lawsuit against the Oilers and Adams.

DEION: Sanders jokes with Smith, Irvin

(From 1C)

buy in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, Dalrymple said.

Sanders, who recently signed a seven-year, $35 million contract with the Cowboys, has said he needs arthroscopic surgery on the ankle following his baseball obligations.

Sanders' ankle has been a persisting question. On Monday, Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said his doctors told him there were 15 players on the team who had worse ankle problems than Sanders.

But he added, "I want Deion to have his physical condition in the best shape. This is not a big deal. The ankle is a non-issue for me. His tolerance for pain is well-known."

Dalrymple declined to say whether Thursday's MRI swayed the team toward or away from the surgery, insisting team officials are "in the decision-making process right now."

During Sanders' brief stay at the facility, he joked around with Emmitt Smith, Michael Irvin and some of his future teammates in the defensive backfield.

Former Super Bowl MVP Dent back with Chicago for one year

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Defensive end Richard Dent, second on the NFL's career sack list and the MVP of the 1986 Super Bowl, agreed to a one-year contract Thursday to rejoin the Chicago Bears.

"It was a tough thing to leave, but it's great to be back," said Dent, who left the Bears after the 1993 season in a contract dispute. "I always wanted to finish my career here, the way it should be, anyway."

The Bears think the 34-year-old Dent can provide leadership to a young defensive line and bolster a below-average pass rush.

"You can never have enough defensive linemen," Bears coach Dave Wannstedt said. "We're just trying to get a little better."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Those in education, the arts and advertising will enjoy tremendous success now. Important agreements will be signed before year's end. Your income rises precipitously as 1996 gets underway. Romantic fireworks are replaced by a deep contentment. Look forward to favorable changes in your living and working conditions as next summer approaches. Longtime pressures disappear.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: director Oliver Stone, actor Tommy Lee Jones, pianist Bobby Short, mystery author Agatha Christie.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid going overboard where spending is concerned. Complete unfinished business before starting a new project. Interesting challenges arise at work. Meet them successfully and you will win a promotion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Weigh the advantages of a new plan against the risks involved. An insurance matter requires close scrutiny. A romantic partner presses for a commitment you are not ready to make. Refuse to be rushed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Appearances can be deceiving. Probe beneath the surface when unusual things happen. Sticking to a schedule is the key to higher productivity at work. Neighbors invite you to a party.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Neighborhood activities give you a positive feeling about yourself and your family. Volunteering to help a children's group proves especially rewarding. Romance deepens.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A daydream points you in the right direction. Consider going back to school or attending business seminars. A co-worker may seek your advice about a personal problem.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your expertise impresses a potential romantic partner. An open, friendly conversation encourages you to suggest a lunch date. A party invitation arrives, spurring you to shop for a special outfit. Try wearing brighter colors.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take your time when dealing with complicated matters. A difficult task will be completed before the deadline. Work hard while on the job, then let go. Discussing mutual aims brings family members closer together.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A message leads you to rethink your priorities. One-on-one encounters are favored. Encourage loved ones to make their needs known. Look for ways to improve your family's financial security. Love blossoms under tough circumstances.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Focus on improving your personal relationships. If you really want to feel connected to others, open your heart. A friend phones with exciting news or a special invitation. Rejoice in this pal's good fortune!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Curb a tendency to worry about everything. A pessimistic attitude can prevent new and wonderful things from happening. Lighten up! Your faith in someone will be rewarded. Dining a deux holds special appeal tonight. Be romantic.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Enlist the aid of your co-workers if faced with a project that is too big for you to handle alone. An old friend offers good advice. Participating in a local event will boost your public profile.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Complete routine tasks first before launching a new project. A systematic search will help you uncover the truth. Keep accurate records. An optimistic attitude helps you win a competition. Romance sweeps you off your feet.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
3♡	Pass	4♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ◇

To pursue a line when all the evidence suggests that it is bound to lose is an unnecessary act of masochism. It is more rewarding to look around for an alternative.

South's hand is classic for a three-level preempt at this vulnerability — six tricks with hearts as trumps. By that definition, North's raise to four hearts was a little pushy, although South needed only a smidgeon in reserve for the game to have reasonable play.

West found the best lead of the nine of diamonds, but even so it is difficult to see how four hearts can be defeated — it seems declarer must get three spades with the help of a finesse, six hearts and the ace of diamonds. Declarer played low from dummy and East's jack won.

The defender took time to consider the situation. The opening lead and South's play to the first trick confirmed possession of the ten of diamonds in the closed hand. Even if West had a trump trick, it seemed that before East could collect another diamond trick declarer would have the trumps drawn and the spade finesse taken. The only hope was to give partner a diamond ruff.

A low diamond return would not be good enough. If West held a doubleton diamond, declarer's ten would win and the spade finesse taken to ensure 10 tricks. East found the answer. At trick two, the king of diamonds hit the table.

Declarer was helpless. After winning the diamond in dummy, there was no quick entry to the closed hand for the spade finesse. Declarer tried a trump to the king, but West won the ace, returned a low club to East's ace and got the diamond ruff to defeat the game. Spectacular!

Even Hillary Clinton gets involved in poll on Miss America swimsuits

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Even Hillary Clinton is getting involved in the Miss America Pageant's swimsuit poll. But don't ask how she'll vote.

"Except voting for my husband, I don't tell anyone how I'm voting," Mrs. Clinton said in a telephone chat with Miss America Heather Whitestone.

Viewers of Saturday night's pageant telecast can call in their votes to determine whether to hold the swimsuit competition.

Whitestone, who is deaf, spoke to Mrs. Clinton on Wednesday at her farewell news conference as Miss America. She used a special telephone system for the deaf.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — The mansion that Eddie Murphy conned his way into in "Beverly Hills Cop II" is on the auction block.

The four-bedroom, Colonial-style house featured in the 1987 film will be auctioned Oct. 5, the Customs Service said Wednesday.

The government seized it in 1992 after owner Ken Mizuno, who bought it for $2.8 million, was arrested in Japan's biggest tax fraud case. His company oversold memberships to a Japanese country club.

Proceeds of the sale will benefit the fraud victims and creditors.

LOS ANGELES — Mark Harmon is glad to back on TV and spending more time in LA.

Mark Harmon, with wife Pam Dawber, is glad to be back on TV.

The veteran of NBC shows "St. Elsewhere" and "Reasonable Doubts" is both star and producer of ABC's new detective drama "Charlie Grace."

Harmon's character is a former LAPD detective who was forced out of the department after helping bust some bad cops.

"I like the people involved in this a lot," Harmon said in a recent interview. "I like the opportunity to play this character on a weekly basis. ... And I like being home, which is a big part of it for me, too."

The show is filmed in Los Angeles, so Harmon can spend more time at home with his wife, actress Pam Dawber. She starred in the TV series "Mork and Mindy" and "My Sister Sam."

NEW YORK — Carol Burnett marched on stage to work the audience when a set malfunctioned during a dress rehearsal of "Moon Over Buffalo" — and Dom DeLuise and Bernadette Peters joined in the fun.

Carol Burnett marched on stage to work the audience.

Burnett, who plays a Broadway actress fallen on hard times, began fielding questions from the audience as stagehands struggled to fix the set Tuesday night.

"How does it feel to be back home?" one fan yelled. Burnett beat her chest and let out her signature Tarzan yell. The crowd went wild.

"Can we get Julie Andrews to join you?" someone asked. Andrews is starring this fall in "Victor/Victoria."

Burnett scanned the house. "Is my old chum here?"

"No, but I'm here," offered Peters, blowing a kiss.

"I'm here, too," chimed in DeLuise, who then let out his Tarzan yell.

After 15 minutes of banter, the Daily News reported Thursday, the regular show went on.

SEATTLE — Wondering where that $89 you spent on Windows 95 went?

Check out the Internet. A public relations company, trying to promote its World Wide Web home page, is offering photos of the mansion that Microsoft chief Bill Gates is building.

MorseMcFadden Communications' Walls 96 page debuted Monday with four color photos of the $50 million, 40,000-square-foot lakefront home, taken from a speed boat. More pictures are promised.

"Since you're paying for it, we thought it cordial to allow you to visit every week or two," the company says.

Gates and a Microsoft spokeswoman declined comment.

With a personal fortune of more than $13 billion, Gates topped Fortune magazine's 1995 list of the nation's richest people.

Rangers improve wild-card spot

The Associated Press

TORONTO — Bobby Witt pitched seven-hit ball and struck out 12 over eight-plus innings as the Texas Rangers improved their wild-card position with a 6-1 decision Thursday night over the Toronto Blue Jays.

The Rangers moved within one game of the AL wild-card leaders, the New York Yankees and Seattle Mariners, with their fifth straight victory. The Blue Jays lost their sixth straight.

Witt (3-2), who struck out 12 in July as a member of the Florida Marlins, set a Rangers season-high with his strikeout total. Witt, who didn't walk a batter, left after giving up the Blue Jays' seventh hit starting the ninth. Dennis Cook finished up.

Juan Guzman (3-13) gave up three runs on 12 hits over eight innings as he suffered his eighth straight loss. Guzman, who struck out three and walked one, has not won in his last nine starts, dating back to July 14, when he beat the Mariners in Seattle, 5-1.

The Rangers scored three times in the second to take a 3-0 lead. Mickey Tettleton led off with a double and Ivan Rodriguez followed with a single, advancing Tettleton to third.

Yankees 5, Orioles 4

BALTIMORE — Andy Pettitte won his fourth straight start as New York moved into a first-place tie in the AL wild-card race by beating Baltimore.

Bernie Williams homered for the Yankees, whose eighth win in 10 games put them even with idle Seattle in the chase for a playoff spot.

Pettitte (10-8) allowed four runs and seven hits in 8 1-3 innings. The rookie left-hander came out after Rafael Palmeiro's two-run homer, and John Wetteland finished for his 25th save.

Brewers 6, Tigers 3

DETROIT — Rookie knuckleballer Steve Sparks struck out a season-high 10 and John Jaha and Fernando Vina homered as Milwaukee defeated Detroit for their first win in six games at Tiger Stadium this season.

The Brewers, still hoping for a wild-card spot in the AL playoffs, have won just three of their last 16 games.

Chris Gomez homered for the Tigers, who had their victory string snapped at five.

Indians 5, Red Sox 3

CLEVELAND — Orel Hershiser won for the seventh time in eight decisions and Manny Ramirez reached 100 RBIs as Cleveland beat Boston.

The Indians, who rested several regulars, won for the 18th time in 22 games and recorded 90 victories in a season for the first time since they won 93 in 1955. They can become just the ninth team to play .700 ball for a season by winning 11 of their remaining 15 games.

■ Major Leagues

Royals 5, Athletics 4

OAKLAND, Calif. — Michael Tucker's two-run double off closer Dennis Eckersley in the ninth inning gave Kansas City a win over Oakland.

Eckersley (4-5), who has seven blown saves in 35 chances this year, walked pinch-hitter David Howard and Keith Lockhart to begin the ninth. It was the first time Eckersley walked consecutive batters this season.

Mets 4, Astros 2

NEW YORK — Houston missed a chance to gain ground in the wild-card race, dropping a decision to New York.

With 16 games left in the regular season, the Astros trail the Dodgers by 2 1/2 games in the chase for the fourth and final playoff spot. Los Angeles, which was idle Thursday, has 15 games remaining.

Rico Brogna broke a 2-all tie with a two-run homer in the fifth inning, his team-leading 19th. The 420-foot line drive to straightaway center field also gave Brogna a team-high 61 RBIs.

Dave Mlicki (8-6) allowed only four hits in seven innings before Paul Byrd worked the eighth and John Franco pitched the ninth for his 23rd save. The right-handed Mlicki walked five, but Astros hitters went just 2-for-15 with runners on base.

Phillies 7, Pirates 2

PITTSBURGH — Charlie Hayes singled in two runs in a three-run fifth, carrying Philadelphia to a win over Pittsburgh.

Paul Wagner (4-15), the National League's loss leader, put seven consecutive runners on base in the fifth with five hits and two walks. Andy Van Slyke singled in the first run and Hayes' two-out hit came with the bases loaded.

Reds 8, Padres 1

CINCINNATI — Eddie Taubensee drove in two runs with his eighth homer, and David Wells scattered four hits as the Cincinnati Reds beat the San Diego Padres 8-1 Thursday.

Thomas Howard's two-run triple capped a five-run fourth inning against Willie Blair (6-4).

The win reduced the Reds' number for clinching the NL Central to five.

PHANTOM: Beatles, Rolling Stones top inductees in non-existent museum

(From 10C)

Voters who participated in this year's selection process represented the area's two rock-oriented radio stations, KBAT, which specializes in adult oriented rock, and KCDQ, the area's classic rock station.

Voters chose The Rolling Stones as the inaugural inductee in the band category and Mick Jagger the male vocalist, yet it was The Beatles who were mentioned most frequently in the survey. The Fab Four was a runner-up in the band category, and garnered most influential musical act of the 1960s. The group's leaders, John Lennon and Paul McCartney, collected top honors in both songwriting categories (lyrics and music).

"They changed the way we listened to popular music," offered Steve Driscoll, Texas 102's midday announcer and likely the on-air music personality with the longest tenure in the market." They influenced hairstyles, fashion, everything. If it wasn't for them, bands like Pearl Jam and Nirvana wouldn't even be here."

In a surprise, Eddie Van Halen squeezed out Jimi Hendrix in the guitarist category, and Elton John nudged out four others in the keyboard category.

Bob Gerhard, program director at KBAT, is a Hendrix fan, and cast his ballot for the late guitarist.

"Nobody has ever pushed the limits nd explored the instrument like Jimi did," Gerhard said.

By a wide margin, Rush's Neil Peart was the favored drummer among the voters.

Led Zeppelin's John Bonham, Charlie Watts, of the Rolling Stones; the late Keith Moon, and Def Leppard's Rick Allen, who still plays with the band despite losing an arm in an automobile accident, garnered runner-up mentions in the drum category.

Aretha Franklin and Bonnie Raitt received top mentions as female vocalists with Jagger edging out Robert Plant in the male vocal category.

Bruce Springsteen shared honors with Lennon/McCartney in the lyrics category.

Alan Freed and Eric Clapton both had an equal number of votes for the Legend Award.

"Without Freed," Gerhard said, "the whole thing would be a moot point. He insisted on playing the black artists who made the music instead of the white performers' cover versions. Besides 'rock and roll' were his words."

Voting in the Most Influential acts of each decade went without many surprises, with Elvis Presley representing the 1950s, The Bealtes named for the '60s, and Led Zeppelin and Pink Floyd chosen from the '70s. U2 was selected as the most influential act of the '80s, with Pearl Jam the recipient from the '90s.

"(Pearl Jam) writes some great music, but first you have to get over the part where you think it's noise," Driscoll said.

Christian Scott, who co-host's 102's morning show, said "Pink Floyd progressive rock to more than just bad jazz-fusion on drugs."

On U2, KBAT's Gerhard said the band "revitlized rock and roll with a new sound when rock and roll's future was beginning to look a little bleak."

'New' Beatles recordings set for November release

By Allan Koznin
N.Y. Times News Service

A collection of more than 40 previously unreleased studio recordings and live performances by the Beatles, as well as a "new" Beatles recording, is to be released by Capitol Records on Nov. 20.

The two-disk set, called "The Beatles Anthology, Vol. 1," is to be the first of three such compilations to be released by the middle of next year. Its release is tied to the three-night broadcast of "The Beatles Anthology" on ABC-TV beginning on Nov. 19.

Like "Live at the BBC," the archival collection of BBC radio recordings released last December, the "Anthology" will bring many recordings previously available on bootleg recordings into the official catalogue. But it will also include several recordings that have never been available, even in bootleg form.

The most notable among these are an early Paul McCartney-George Harrison collaboration, "In Spite of All the Danger," recorded in a Liverpool studio in 1958 when the group was still called the Quarry Men, and a version of "Love Me Do" recorded at the group's EMI audition in June 1962, two months before Ringo Starr replaced Pete Best as the group's drummer.

Also among the more than 40 selections on the set, which covers 1958 to 1964, are recordings from the Beatles' unsuccessful 1962 Decca audition, including two previously unreleased Lennon-McCartney songs, "Hello Little Girl" and "Like Dreamers Do," as well as excerpts from a 1960 rehearsal tape, alternative versions of "A Hard Day's Night," "You Can't Do That" and "Please Please Me," rejected performances of "How Do You Do It" and "Besame Mucho" and live recordings from the BBC, Swedish radio and the "Ed Sullivan Show."

The new recording, "Free as a Bird," is one of three John Lennon working tapes to which McCartney, Harrison and Starr have added new vocal and instrumental lines, and in some cases new lyrics.

ALLEN: Comic's competitive fire still burns thoughtful and highly competitive man, aware of both the power his stardom has brought him, and how fragile that stardom can be.

(From 10C)

"All the energy it took to get here, I don't think I'll have it again. It slides down and that realizaton causes this very subtle but sinister despair."

If he is despairing, it hasn't stopped Allen from endlessly jotting down ideas for comic bits on any available scrap of paper, or staying in constant touch by Powerbook with his "Home Improvement" staff in Hollywood.

Nor does it in any way diminish a competitive fire that burns with the intensity of a big-time college football coach. He has a thing for being No. 1.

"All of business and all of sports wants to be No. 1," he said. "It's a frightening view from there because there's nothing left. It's a gorgeous feeling but if you don't like looking down, which I don't, there is no place to look."

Allen's perspective is colored by a feat he calls the "trifecta." He can cite exactly when it happened: the first week of December 1994. That Tuesday, "Home Improvement" finished in its usual No. 1 position in television, and that weekend his movie for Disney "The Santa Clause" became the top movie at the box office.

It was also the week his book of observations on male life was at the top of the New York Times best-seller list.

"I'm really proud of that," Allen said. "That had never been done before, and it's going to be very difficult to repeat it."

Allen's competitiveness was severely tested this past season by ABC's decision to move "Home Improvement" out of its unassailable position on Wednesdays at 9 to Tuesdays at 9. ABC felt it needed its biggest weapon to stave off the challenge of "Frasier," which NBC had moved against ABC's "Roseanne."

The "Home Improvement" shift allowed ABC to hold on to its winning position on Tuesdays, but it cost Allen's show a second year as television's highest-rated series. It fell to third place.

"I'm a businessman, and I'm loyal to my network," said Allen, who added that he had approved the move beforehand. "I saw what NBC was doing. I didn't think 'Roseanne' could handle it." So he told ABC, "I'm with you."

Nevertheless, Allen feels the sting of losing the top-show title.

"Roseanne told me, 'Tim, you've got to let this stuff go,' " Allen said. "But even though I love Kelsey Grammer and I like his show, I refuse to watch it and be one of those extra viewers." Grammer is the star of "Frasier."

What makes finishing third particularly galling for Allen is that the show on top was NBC's "Seinfeld." Allen's competitive heart clearly beats fastest of all when that show and star are moved to the television line of scrimmage.

"Home Improvement" and "Seinfeld" went head to head in 1991. "They had a very tough time against us," Allen noted. "We buried them, in fact."

Now "Seinfeld" is thriving on Thursdays, though Allen said, "They have a test pattern against them; they haven't been challenged at all."

The extra insult for Allen is the press's fondness for "Seinfeld" and what he feels is a lack of respect for his show. That same inequality, he believes, plays out in the Emmy Awards, in which "Home Improvement" has been notably snubbed.

Allen himself was not recognized this year by a nomination for best actor in a comedy. "It doesn't change my money or anything, but it irritates me," Allen said. "I'm in that group. To say one of those guys is a better actor than the others — well, who's really acting here?"

Increasingly Allen is trying to take personal charge of as much of his work as he can. He fought ABC and Disney, which owns his series, to shoot the season's first episode of "Home Improvement" on location in his home state, Michigan (the show is set in a Detroit suburb).

He even described the effort to design his hammer, with a company called Hart Hammer, as arduous. "I knew exactly what I wanted. It didn't take a rocket scientist to figure out what I wanted." Still, it took a year and a half for Allen to be satisfied.

Similarly, he has started to watch closely how the Disney marketing machine cashes in on his hit show. He noted that Disney distributed "Home Improvement" T-shirts nationally. "And so I get a check — and yes, I'm joking here — for $68. So I say, 'You're writing off somebody's helicopter rides or the maintenance on that Dumbo thing. I'm just guessing here.' "

Allen's relationship with Disney remains solid, however. He may do another book for Disney. He has just agreed to make a new film for Disney called "Indian in the City." He expects "Toy Story," the first completely computer-animated movie, to be a big hit.

And "Home Improvement" rolls on. "We're a battleship," he said, though he still worries, of course. Allen said he was concerned about the reruns of the show playing six days a week and possibly diluting the public taste for his series.

"But I like the term 'well crafted' for our show. We repeat really well. We're like spaghetti, even better the second time."

HILL: Surgery forces singer to relearn speaking

(From 10C)

Faith Hill.

"I didn't set out ... to change somebody's life or to try and make a political point," Hill said.

"My goal was to find the best songs I could possibly find and keep the integrity in my music hopefully and just do something that I was proud of."

The breezy "Let's Go to Vegas," very much in the "Wild One" vein, is the first single now rising in the charts.

More adventurous are "You Will Be Mine," a shouter with screaming guitars worthy of Melissa Etheridge, and a gospel duet with vocal powerhouse Shelby Lynne.

'My goal was to find the best songs I could possibly find and keep the integrity in my music.'

— Faith Hill

"I was scared to death, you know," Hill said of singing with Lynne, an overlooked talent who has been compared with Patsy Cline. Hill sounds more zealous than scared on "Keep Walkin' On," and inviting Lynne on her album at all shows remarkable poise.

"It was not like we were competing vocally," Hill said. "We just got up there and we had a great time and we just sung this fun gospel song."

Hill's initial go-round of fame and fortune had its bumps. A vigorous touring schedule, and the constant interviews demanded of a new star, led to surgery to correct an enlarged blood vessel in her throat. She also developed nodes on her vocal chords.

She's relearned how to speak and sing, though "the speech thing I don't think I've got yet, 'cause ... I'll just talk someone's ears off."

Doctors pronounced her fit for the road, and that's where Hill plans to spend the immediate future. "You just keep clawing, you know, working and not stopping, working as hard as I can work, keeping my head on straight, stayin' focused." Finally a breath, then, "Just because I've had success so far doesn't mean it's time to sit back and relax and take a break.

"It's time to work even harder, I think."

Bochco's 'Murder One' could help make TV's smartest hour

By Niki Kapsambelis
Associated Press Writer

The good news is, the addition of 'Murder One' will likely make Thursdays at 9 p.m. the most celebral hour in television, putting two shows in mortal combat for viewers with demographics that make advertisers salivate.

LOS ANGELES — Producer Steven Bochco's latest legal salvo, "Murder One," is an astute murder mystery with crisp writing, a solid premise and compelling actors.

Most people who have seen the pilot like it, including the executives at ABC, who ponied up for 23 episodes in advance.

So why is the perennial Emmy winner nervous?

Maybe it's the uneasy knowledge that after a three-week honeymoon beginning Tuesday, Sept. 19, at 9 p.m. CDT, a time slot currently owned by Bochco's highly successful drama "NYPD Blue," "Murder One" is diving headlong into what is arguably TV's most daunting niche: Thursday nights at 9 p.m., where NBC's "ER" is entering its sophomore year already a runaway hit.

"Historically, I've never really worried over the stuff I can't control," Bochco said. "I've got my hands full just worrying about what I can control. But I'm feeling uncharacteristically anxious about this one."

"Murder One" is a show that will require a savvy audience with a long attention span. It has a plot that follows a single murder case — from the defense point of view — over an entire season, keeping the audience (and the lead defense lawyer, played by Daniel Benzali) in the dark about the defendant's guilt or innocence.

By contrast, "ER" is an adrenaline-boosting spasm of several plots per episode, few of which spill over into subsequent weeks. The fix is smart, quick and self-contained.

To keep truant viewers abreast of plot developments, Bochco will have a 60-second review at the beginning of each episode, as well as a clever rip-off of Court TV — here known as "Law TV" — in which fictitious reporters covering the trial will recap key plot points.

The good news is, the addition of "Murder One" will likely make Thursdays at 9 p.m. the most cerebral hour in television, putting two shows in mortal combat for viewers with demographics that make advertisers salivate, the kind of viewers Bochco himself says he would love to have.

"I think a lot of people who'd love to see this show, were it anywhere else, will miss it," he said. "So from that point of view, you know, I'm not crazy about the time slot. But someone's got to be there. I'm a team player."

He is already priming "Murder One" cohorts for a strong break in the Tuesday night slot, followed by a struggle when the show moves to Thursdays.

"For three weeks, we're going to feel like we're a success," he said. "And I'm trying to warn everybody to not be disappointed when we move to Thursday night and get kicked."

Bochco is banking on the sophistication of an audience primed by months of real-life O.J. Simpson courtroom drama to keep up with dialogue that outsmarts his previous legal series — also a veteran of Thursdays at 9 p.m. — "L.A. Law."

In fact, it was "L.A. Law" and its limitations that gave Bochco the idea for "Murder One" in the first place.

"I started lobbying around the second year, maybe the third year of 'L.A. Law' to do a storyline that would run all year long, a trial that would run all year long," Bochco said. The idea got only a lukewarm response, which Bochco attributes to the danger of fragmenting a storyline amid a large ensemble cast.

Like its future rival "ER," "Murder One" is a show that will be driven more by the profession than the personal lives of the characters.

'Hackers' a thrilling cyberflick

By Michael Price
N.Y. Times News Service

Iain Softley's "Hackers" is a crackerjack action flick of uncommon intelligence. The film lives up surprisingly well to its own publicity claims — "fast-paced cyberpunk thriller" — and performs the unusual feat of making the viewer feel as if transported into the dreamlike realm of cyberspace.

Johnny Lee Miller stars as Dade, a computer whiz who, as a child, had infiltrated Wall Street via the computer network and earned an FBI record — and banishment from the world of computers. Angelina Jolie plays Kate, Dade's antagonistic soul mate, a pirate sailing the Infobahn on a souped-up laptop unit.

Together, these hard-drive outlaws and a small mob of other computerized troublemakers must battle a REALLY dangerous master hacker known as the Plague, a mysterious creep who intends not only to rip off a fortune but also to frame Dade and Kate for the crime.

Cast with a refreshing lack of celebrity talent, "Hackers" works its ensemble cast of little-knowns especially hard and gets several memorable character portraits in return. Standouts among the underdog renegades include Jesse Bradford, Renoly Santiago (of the current "Dangerous Minds") and Laurence Mason.

Their corporate-establishment opposition is ably represented by Lorraine Bracco, as a harried executive type, and magician-comedian Penn Jillette, as an ace technocrat. As the Plague, Fisher Stevens leaves an impression that is at once menacing and nerdy.

Ultimately, Rafael Moreu's screenplay proves as conventional as anything from Jules Verne or H.G. Wells, but throughout there is a sense of "oneness" with the computer world that such recent cyber-thrillers as "The Net" and "Johnny Mnemonic" have failed to convey. Director Softley, who chronicled the rise of the Beatles in last year's "Backbeat," mingles a sense of desperation with a sharp sense of humor.

Tim Allen: No. 1 and blue

'This is the most creative time I've ever had in my life and yet I feel like I'm half empty, the tank is half empty.'
— Tim Allen, of the ABC sit-com "Home Improvement"

By Bill Carter
N.Y. Times News Service

Tim Allen, who in the past year has rewritten the standard for success in show business by headlining a No. 1 television show, writing the No. 1 best-selling book and starring in the No. 1 movie all at the same time, said he had been thinking a lot about despair lately — and he's not setting up a punch line.

"Time magazine did a cover story on despair a few weeks ago," he said. "This is the most creative time I've ever had in my life and yet I feel like I'm half empty, the tank is half empty."

Others might see a tank that runneth over with high-octane fame, money and celebrity. Allen's career is so full he has missed the past two vacations from his show working on other projects. "My wife says they treat me as if I'm a Federal Express package."

Last week Allen was shipped into New York for a week's promotional tour to talk about his latest projects:

■ The hugely lucrative start this week of the syndicated reruns on Fox Television of his hit ABC comedy, "Home Improvement";

■ The new season of "Home Improvement," which starts on ABC on Tuesday;

■ The forthcoming, and much anticipated, Disney animated movie "Toy Story," which Allen's voice stars in (along with that of Tom Hanks);

■ The release of his best-selling book "Don't Stand Too Close to a Naked Man" in paperback (Hyperion).

In addition to all this, there is the marketing introduction of the sleek, shiny new hammer he helped design and which he hopes will be the start of a "Tim Allen signature series" of tool and gadget products, with profits to go to charity, much like the line of food products put out by Paul Newman.

But Allen has more on his mind than an endless celebration of his successes. Though his comic persona, both from his long years as a stand-up comedian and his role as the Tool Man on "Home Improvement," is that of an amiably goofy male chauvinist, Allen is a

Lee's latest lacks potency, speed

By Bob Fenster
N.Y. Times News Service

Stains on the pavement.

That's how the cops view the victims of the drug wars on the streets of Brooklyn in Spike Lee's "Clockers."

Lee's last film, "Crooklyn," showed us the comic side of Brooklyn life. "Clockers" walks the other side of the same mean streets.

This tale of how crack cocaine and guns are destroying families and hope in a black neighborhood is like Chapter 2 in the saga begun in John Singleton's "Boyz N the Hood' '— but it's not as compelling.

Lee's movie, based on Richard Price's novel, focuses on the dilemma of one small-time dealer, or clocker.

Strike (Mekhi Phifer) runs a park operation but wants to move up the chain and become a big-time pusher. However, Strike feels trapped between a smooth-talking but deadly supplier (Delroy Lindo) and the cops, whose games are just as dangerous.

When another dealer is shot dead, Strike's brother, Victor (Isaiah Washington), confesses to the murder. But homicide detective Rocco Klein (Harvey Keitel) doesn't buy the story because Victor is a family man, working two jobs to support his kids.

To find the truth, Rocco puts enough pressure on Strike to threaten his business and his life.

With the explosive nature of the story, you might expect a movie with a heavy body count. But Lee doesn't want to further glamorize the cult of the gun that threads from movies and music out onto the streets of the inner city, where everyone carries a gun because everyone else carries a gun.

Instead, Lee goes beyond the crime story to show the destruction of kids and families through the seduction of easy drug money.

In this effort, Lee does a convincing job of re-creating street life as most of us do not know it.

But in his patience to document the patterns of everyday ghetto life, Lee sacrifices dramatic impact.

Running over two hours, "Clockers" is draining. Halfway through, you may feel like you've gotten the message and it's time to get out.

Still, "Clockers" has some real strengths, particularly the revelations of attitudes by the juxtaposition of cops and crooks, as delineated through their slang.

In the film's opening sequence, Lee shows us victims of this urban battleground: bodies of young black men, twisted from the bullets that killed them. Those scenes carry the entire message.

Don't expect fast-paced action from "Clockers," although there are some violent scenes. Do expect a grimly realistic urban nightmare.

Faith scales freshman hill, prepares for second effort

Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A second look at Faith Hill reveals something country fans may not have noticed after her million-selling debut album.

This artist is determined — determined not only to succeed as a singer, but determined to succeed in business.

"I want to be around for awhile, I want to headline someday, I want to build an organization — you know, a staff of people to just take care of everything in-house," she says, taking a breath before continuing.

"I just want to grow. I want to be a businesswoman and at the same time make records and tour on the road and I don't know what else."

AP Laserphoto

Faith Hill says it has never been her intention to "change somebody's life or make a political point."

Hill, 28, was unknown two years ago when Warner Bros. released "Take Me As I Am." Brash singles like the title song and "Wild One" were immediately embraced by radio programmers. Her all-American, blond good looks went over spectacularly in videos.

A popish remake of Janis Joplin's "Piece of My Heart" was a hit — and the frank admission that she'd never even heard the classic rock version growing up in Star, Miss., was charming. People surmised that Hill is REALLY country.

On her new album, "It Matters to Me," Hill's music has matured noticeably.

A few songs, one written by Alan Jackson, implore women not to put their lives second to the man in their lives. "A Man's Home Is His Castle" is a sobering look at a battered woman. It's a less fluffy, more confident

Beatles, Stones named to non-existent Hall

By Jimmy Patterson

■ Complete list/7C

There will be no party. No papparazzi. No building dedicated to the preservation of those who are honored.

But just because we don't live in Cleveland, or New York or L.A. doesn't mean opinions here don't count.

That's why we went to announcers at the area's rock-oriented radio stations and asked for some input.

If they had a vote as to who should be inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, who would they select?

Next thing we knew, the Permian Basin Phantom Hall of Fame and Non-Existent Rock Museum was born.

'Courthouse' guilty of being dismal disgrace

If you made it all the way through the season premiere of CBS' new drama "Courthouse" Wednesday evening, I'm not sure you should classify yourself as lucky or hopeful, as in you hoped the show would improve. It didn't.

Patterson

This is just flat-out bad television, and a glimpse at why the medium receives such bad press from conservative groups and the mainstream press alike.

Severely lacking in creativity and originality — but not violence — "Courthouse" is a blatant rip-off of finer versions of courtroom dramas that have long since run their course. Throw in a little "NYPD Blue" for effect and voila, you have TV plagiarism at its finest. Of course it's apparently acceptable of established TV producers, et al, to steal from another program. In today's TV world, it's just called creating new product.

If this is what CBS intends to push off on its viewership as it attempts to change its focus to a younger audience, maybe the network is better off dead.

Obviously, Judge Firestone, who buys the farm in the beginning, is better off. The character actor who made several appearances on "L.A. Law" as a bombastic jurist, resurfaces as a womanizing Bob Packwood-type. Three minutes into the program, a man Firestone is sentencing to death is asked if he has any final words. "Yeah," the dirt ball says, "If I'm going down, you're going with me."

The judge gets it right between the eyes, Hollywood style; a bailiff then pulls out a gun and blows away the "shooter" (one of TV's hippest words nowadays) in two of the bloodiest shootings ever presented in primetime.

Not until after a commercial break does the parental warning come: "Due to violent content and adult situations, parental discretion is advised." Only problem is the program's violent content had already been aired.

"Hey," some genius CBS exec must have said while sitting in a top-level board meeting, "how 'bout we put the disclaimer on after all the violence!"

Dangerous minds.

"Courthouse" then proceeds to sicken us even further by allowing us to listen to a confession by an older man charged with molesting two young schoolchildren. We then watch as an asthmatic petty thief is dragged away by two jailers who refuse to allow her to pick up her inhaler, which she has dropped. We are led to believe that the mother of three will die after suffering a serious asthmatic attack.

Had enough? 'Course not. Viewers are also treated to decorative wallpaper roles by Brad Johnson, Marlboro Man turned district judge (yeah, right), and fortysomething Patricia Wettig, who is capable of much better than this nonsense.

We are also fed some incredibly forgettable dialogue.

"It's a tough job," one sex crimes prosecutor said. "The perps (another popular TV word) are scum. But if you can wait till the end of the week, sometimes it's worth it. ... Sometimes we get to put 'em away." Do real lawyers actually talk this way?

The nausea-inducing storyline made it nearly impossible to yawn through the mundane dialogue.

As the coup de grace, silly, childish references to the male sex organ were virtually unending and entirely unneeded and unwanted. Listening to the cast members and their potty mouths makes you wonder if all people in the legal profession are jerks like this. Then, of course, you realize that this kind of sleazy dialogue is not an indictment of the legal profession, but of the talentless people who pass themselves off — and are accepted as — TV writers, producers, etc.

Through all its many faults, "Courthouse" does stand for something: It is a textbook example of the worthless garbage TV continues to crank out in the 1990s. The program perfectly sums up why the entertainment medium continues to disgrace the memory of the fine product it used to produce.
